Colombian Guerrillas To Free Women, Children

BOGOTÁ, Colombia (AP)—Leftist guerrillas holding the U.S. ambassador to Colombia and some 60 other hostages at the Dominican Republic Embassy said today they would release all women and two wounded hostages. But they warned they were ready for a long siege.

Earlier, a Colombian Cabinet minister said the guerrilla band lifted a 10 p.m. EST deadline it had set for the government to meet its demands - $50 million, the release of 311 political prisoners, publication of an anti-government manifesto in major foreign newspapers, and safe passage out of the country.

The guerrillas have threatened to kill their hostages, who include U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio, the papal nuncio to Colombia and at least 14 other ambassadors or acting ambassadors, and several Colombian diplomats.

Approximately 25 women and 35 men were taken captive when the 30 raiders stormed into the Dominican mission during a noon diplomatic reception Wednesday.

A guerrilla spokesman contacted by telephone by The Associated Press late this morning, said two wounded hostages were being freed at that moment and the women would follow. The guerrillas had said Wednesday the acting Paraguayan ambassador and another unidentified civilian were wounded.

The guerrillas, members of the M-19 guerrilla organization, also said one of their men was killed, and the government said three policemen were wounded.

The guerrilla gang's leader, "Commander No. 1," told The Associated Press by telephone, "We are prepared to remain here one or two months if necessary. It all depends on whether the government wants to negotiate or not."

The Cabinet minister, who asked not to be identified, also said the mediation efforts of Rafael Vasquez, a former foreign minister and head of the Colombian Human Rights Defense Commission, had ended, but he did not explain why.

The official did not say what the next steps would be in negotiations with the 30 guerrillas.

The hostages included U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio, the papal nuncio to Colombia and at least 14 other ambassadors or acting ambassadors, and several Colombian diplomats.

Khomeini said would decide the fate of the hostages, to get organized and come to a decision.

"It would be a grave concern if the process dragged on that long," said a high-level U.S. official.

The 270-member Majlis, or Parliament, is to be elected in balloting March 14 and April 3. Beheshti indicated that the approximately 50 Americans would be freed before mid-May only if Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolutionary regime, changed his mind.

Hostages May See Commission

By The Associated Press
A former Iranian official said a meeting had been arranged today between an international commission and the American hostages being held by militants in Tehran, but the captors said they had not decided whether to permit it. The hostages, in their 117th day of captivity, are threatened with at least 10 more weeks of confinement.

The official news agency Pars reported that former Iranian interior minister Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani said members of the U.N. commission studying allegations against the deposed shah would meet with the hostages. It quoted him as saying they would be accompanied by a representative of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

One of the militants at the Embassy, reached by telephone from Cyprus, said, "We are thinking about it but we haven't made up our minds yet."

Ayatollah Mohammed Besheshti, first secretary of the ruling Revolutionary Council, told reporters Wednesday it would take at least that long for the new Iranian Parliament, which Ayatollah Ruhollah

Board To Get Test Results

Snyder School Trustees have scheduled a special meeting tonight to receive reports on achievement test results and to see a computer-assisted instruction demonstration.

Also on the agenda is a proposal to appoint a new clerk for absentee voting for the upcoming school board election. Ray Pevler, who had been named absentee clerk, has been named chief appraiser for the county appraisal district and is moving his office from the school administration building to the courthouse.

Ask Us

Q—Why doesn't the TV cable system in Snyder carry Channel 17—in Atlanta like some of the others do?

A—It does. Channel 17, however, is on the premium service and shares the premium slot on Channel 3 with HBO. It is available to all who subscribe to the premium channel service, which is over and above the regular cable fee.

Thursday update

Cult Killing Feared

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP)—Al and Jeannie Mills knew they might be considered traitors for their defection from the Peoples Temple. They warned of "hit squads" and changed their names in a vain effort to escape the harassment of cult members.

On Tuesday, their bodies were found in their home here, and other former followers of the man who led a mass suicide in a South American jungle feared more death may spring from the ruins of the once-applauded church.

Police declined Wednesday to speculate why the couple and their teen-age daughter were shot, but downplayed conjecture that an hit squad may have been involved. Last year investigators concluded such a squad did not exist. Authorities also did not rule out suicide as a possibility.

Dolphins Slaughtered

TOKYO (AP)—Japanese fishermen, insisting they were protecting their livelihood against "gangsters of the sea," killed hundreds of dolphins today despite the outraged objections of conservationists. It was the second dolphin massacre in Japan in two years.

Greenpeace Foundation, the environmentalist group, lodged a formal protest with the Japanese government as the dolphin toll on western Japan's Iki Island reportedly rose past the 1,000 mark.

"They've been methodically slaughtering them," Susan Cate, a Greenpeace official, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview, adding that she had obtained the figure from the fishermen themselves.

The SDN Column

Some of our federal agencies continue to amaze us with their disclosures and warnings.

The latest is an item from the Food and Drug Administration cautioning that caffeine "may cause damage to the human body."

Our grandmother could have told them that 50 or 60 years ago. One of our earliest memories is watching grandmother drink her coffee at breakfast time, and noting our apparent interest, she repeatedly warned that "coffee is full of caffeine and caffeine will stunt your growth." If we appeared to be skeptical of this, there were other dire consequences that were cited.

Of course the implication was that once a person attained his or her "growth," he or she could make up his or her own mind whether to dabble in caffeine.

But grandmother also knew many years ago that other hazards lurked around the home. Living on a farm, she knew that wet manure around the barnyard was slippery, which OSHA, another federal agency, revealed to the contemporary populace several months ago. But grandmother didn't see any need to caution children about this particular peril because most of them already were aware of it by the time they were old enough to come in contact with it.

She also knew, and never failed to grasp an opportunity to warn, that smoking was a menace to your health. It could cause "consumption" and lip cancer. This was decades before the dangers of nicotine and tobacco tar were discovered by federal agencies.

Snuff was another matter, of course. But few children were attracted to this form of tobacco use in those days, and grandmothers saw no need to warn children of anything that didn't tempt them.

We only have a couple of weeks to go to reach the six-week mark since groundhog day, which, according to legend, should end the winter season. Also, we haven't heard any thunder in February, which, according to legend, should mean that we are not likely to have a freeze in April.

But winters are treacherous. Take the case of the oilfield worker spending his first winter on a rig in Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's North Slope. "How long does winter last up here, anyway?" he asked one of his colleagues. "It's hard to say," replied the veteran. "The first year I was up here, it lasted 14 months."

Scurry Votes Against...

Beef referendum Proposal Rejected By Cattlemen

Scurry County Cattlemen joined colleagues throughout the country in sending the "Beef referendum" proposal down to defeat.

The national referendum aimed at collecting $40 million to promote beef apparently has failed, the National Cattlemen's Association says.

In Scurry County, the vote was 85 to 41 against the program. Votes in the referendum were counted Wednesday in the ASCS offices over the country.

Cattlemen in all 50 states voted, beginning Feb. 19. The proposal was for a check-off of 20 cents per $100 worth of beef sold to go into a fund for beef research, promotion and foreign market development program. The U.S. Department of Agriculture had estimated that it would raise about $40 million.

Play Tickets May Be Taken By Telephone

Tickets for the Western Texas College dinner theatre production of "See How They Run" can be reserved by telephone, Jim Rambo, director, said.

Persons wishing to make reservations are to call 573-8511 and ask for extension 234. Reservations are to be made by noon on the day preceding the performance selected.

The show opens tonight and will continue Friday and Saturday nights, then be repeated Thursday through Saturday next week. Tickets are $9 each, which includes dinner served starting at 7 p.m. and the show starting at 8 p.m.

Weekend calls may also be made to 573-8511, extension 234.

The county SCS offices were forwarding their local results to state offices today, and the state totals are scheduled to go to the USDA tomorrow. The USDA is to announce the official results Monday.

Roger Berglund, vice president of communications for the National Cattlemen's Association based in Denver, said a poll of "scattered ASCS county offices indicated that the so-called 'Beef referendum' will lose. Berglund said the preliminary poll indicated approval of only about 40 percent in such states as Oklahoma, Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri, with slightly higher percentages in Arkansas and Colorado. However, the acceptance in Texas was showing only about 30 percent. He said Montana and Mississippi appeared to be strongest in favor of the program with nearly 60 percent.

Based on the over-all sampling, Berglund said it appeared that the proposal would not receive the required majority.

Afghan Capital Back To Normal

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP)—The Afghan capital returned to normal today for the first time since bloody anti-Soviet rioting exploded here last week, killing more than 300 civilian and an unknown number of Soviet and Afghan soldiers.

Sporadic bursts of machinegun fire still rattled through the streets of the mile-high capital, and tanks remained on guard at the headquarters of the pro-Soviet Afghan government as well as at the Soviet Embassy and several housing compounds used by Russians and East Europeans.

But many of the Soviet and Afghan army tanks and armored cars that lumbered into the streets after the fighting broke out last Friday were withdrawn and the streets in front of government offices were reopened to traffic.

Kabul's merchants shut their shops last Thursday and kept them shut for six days to protest the Soviet occupation.

Warton Withdraws From School Race

Ben Warton has announced that he is withdrawing as a candidate for Place 5 on the Snyder School Board.

In a letter to E.D. Flynn, secretary of the board, Warton, who is on the ministerial staff at First Baptist Church, said that due to the fact that the church is without a pastor at this time, he felt that he would be unable to devote the necessary time to the position. At the time he announced early this month, he said he had done so on the assumption that the pastor's position would be filled soon. Now, it appears that it may be some time before the church calls a new pastor and in the interim his position on the church staff will require more of his time.

Warton's withdrawal leaves Jan McCathern and G.A. Parks Jr. in the race for Place 5 on the school board. Jerry Rice, an incumbent, and Larry Bills are candidate for Place 4 and Mike Reed is unopposed for Place 3.

The election is set for April 5 and March 5 is the deadline for candidates to file.

ever-present danger

In the American war against the regulators, one sometimes feels some ground is being won on the battlefield. But then one takes a look beyond the bureaucratic smokecreens and sees the furtive shadows of the enemy.

It is then one gets the feeling that when we advance one year, we slip back two. And that's no way to win. Dr. Peter Rose, a Texas A&M University business professor, warned the other day that lurking behind a wave of social responsibility in the laws that regulate the banking industry is a danger of mandatory allocations of bank credit.

He pointed out that this means the judgment of bank managers regarding who is to receive credit, how much and under what terms, may be replaced by the judgment of legislators and regulators.

No matter where one lives and does business, such a situation would be bad. And no matter where one lives or does business, one can see the regulators are making gains toward such an end throughout the state, across the nation.

Dr. Rose said such action may be one of the eventual ripple effects of the growing list of new banking laws in the United States bearing on civil rights and discrimination.

In effect, it would be one of the eventual ripple effects of the government's butting in on private business.

The professor was referring to the new laws passed in the last 12 years which include the 1974 Equal Credit Opportunity act and 1976 amendments, the 1968 Fair Housing Act, the 1975 Home Mortgage Disclosure Act, and most recently, the 1977 Community Reinvestment Act.

He said the winds of social change and social innovation rarely blow without causing turmoil and loss to some.

He added that the new social legislation which has been changing the way bankers do business promises both gains and losses, sacrifices and benefits.

The finance professor said the gain may be a more open and responsive banking system which considers the quality as well as the quantity of human life. He added, "We may be on the verge of a financial system open on equal terms to all who need credit and are willing to pay for it."

But, Dr. Rose said, for everything that is gained, something important is lost. He pointed out then that the new banking rules may reduce the incentives of bankers to respond positively with new services, new facilities and competitive prices.

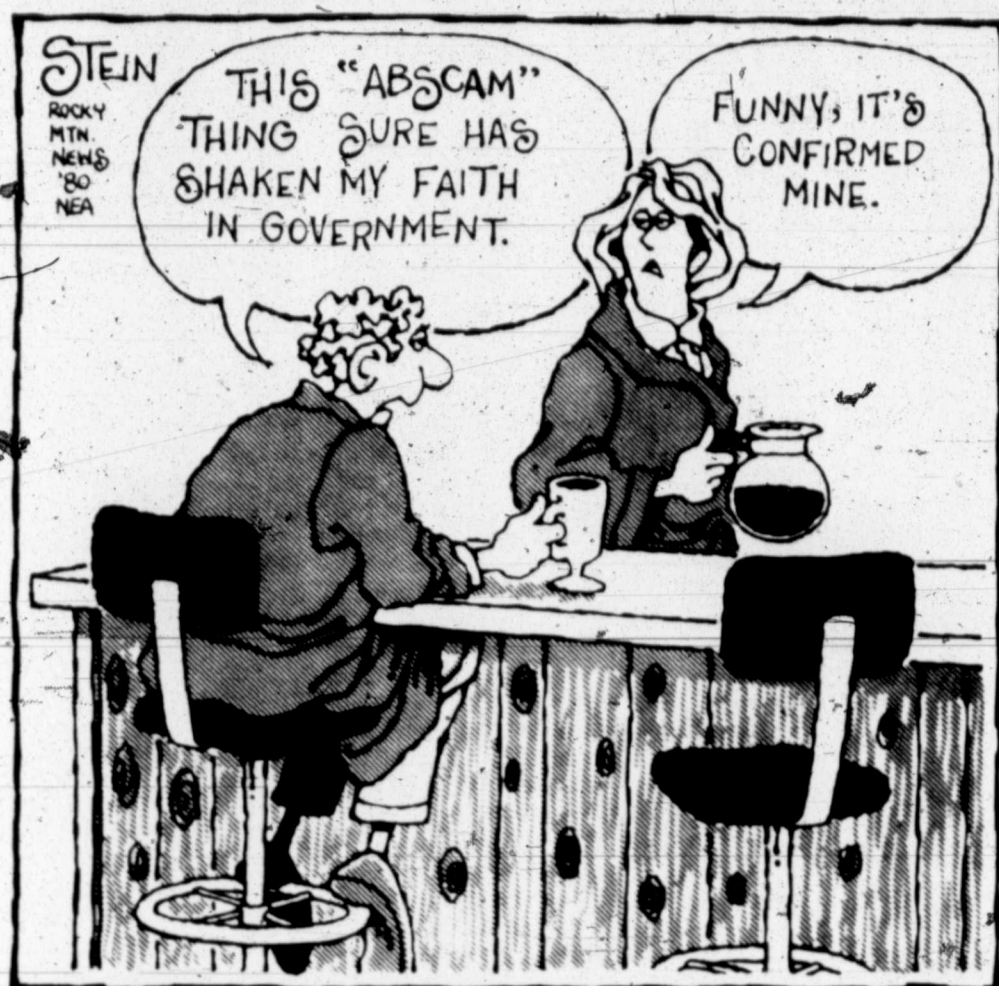

At this point, Dr. Rose mentioned the bad news: "There is some danger to the survival of the banking business as we know it today. The decision of the marketplace may be supplanted by the dictates of government."

Dr. Rose pointed out that so far, the law merely "encourages" rather than "requires" a bank to make loans in certain areas. But, he continued, many business and banking experts believe it is but a short step from "encouragement" and "affirmative action" to command.

Command. Governmental command. The professor said many bankers still are unaware that certain people of government including some of those in Congress and state legislatures see banks as a vehicle of social change, as a way of bringing about positive force toward curing social ills.

Dr. Rose said, "Bankers do affect the community in many ways, both economically and socially. If the bank does well, usually the community will do well also."

He left unsaid the obvious truth. The bank will not do well, nor any other business, if the government dictates its activity. That is an ever-lurking danger to the American free enterprise system.

a cinch for ford

Former President Gerry Ford—assuming nothing changes dramatically between now and convention time—does not have to run. He can "walk" to the nomination.

But then what? The politics of adversity goes like this: On pocket-book issues unhappy voters will turn on their elected leader with vengeance.

If the adversity comes "from outside" — if the challenge to a politician comes across a state line or across a national boundary, voters will rally to his support.

There are few more dramatic demonstrations of this formula than the recent history of the Carter Administration.

When the adversity was represented by high prices and high taxes and broken promises, President Carter trailed in every voter survey, appeared un-electable.

When the adversity came from outside — from renegade kidnapers in Iran — Americans rallied to the support of the President so promptly and so overwhelmingly that he now appears certain of re-nomination.

The politics of adversity is nothing one can count on from month to month. Axiomatically, voters do not ask, "What have you done for me?" They ask, "What will you do for me?"

President Carter cannot be accused of prolonging the hostage situation for political advantage.

His critics may lean on him for ordering draft registration when his own Selective Service director said it was not necessary. Selective Service Director Rostker advised that registration could be handled at the time of mobilization with no wasted time, but the President wanted registration NOW.

To impress the Soviets with our resolve? Or to impress voters with his own "firm hand in a crisis?"

Also, to anticipate his critics, the hotheads of the world have now learned that they can focus world attention on themselves and their cause, and can get at least a portion of whatever they choose to demand, merely by seizing and holding American hostages.

Serenely aloof from all this, confrontation, negotiation and compromise is Gerry Ford.

When reports interrupt him at golf to insist on a comment he has "declined to be critical of our President during an international crisis."

By election time, hopefully, Americans will again be concerned mostly with the chronic problems of the home front.

Then former President Ford will be able to remind voters that the inflation rate his last year in office was 4.8 percent.

Last year it was 13.3 percent; the worst shrinkage of American currency in 33 years.

With international crises subsiding, mobilization will appear less patriotic, more onerous.

Ford, at present, appears to be a cinch for his party's nomination and to have amassed some substantial ammunition for re-election.

robert walters

DOVER, N.H. (NEA) — For Sen. Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., the handwriting on the wall becomes apparent when an interviewer, at a radio station on the outskirts of this community asks if he is willing to settle for the vice presidency.

"Absolutely not," retorts the 54-year-old senator, flatly rebuffing any suggestion that his quest for the Republican presidential nomination has become a futile exercise. The interviewer persists, asking where Baker believes he must finish among the seven contenders in forthcoming primaries if he is to remain a viable candidate. "I have to do well enough," replies the senator.

Under what conditions would he drop out of the contest? "If I did poorly enough," he says.

What's the difference between "well enough" and "poorly enough"? The senator terminates the questioning with a boyish smile and another evasive reply: "I'll let you know afterward."

If Baker is elusive, so is the prize he seeks. Barring unforeseen developments, the Senate's Republican leader eventually will return to Capitol Hill without the prize he has sought.

That apparent failure bespeaks a great deal about both the system for selecting presidential candidates that has evolved in recent years and the character of Baker himself.

For better or worse — probably the latter — no politician today can mount a successful campaign for the presidency without first meeting one of two basic requirements:

— He must be an instantly recognizable celebrity whose name and reputation are nationally known to tens of millions of Americans. The contestants in this year's race who are in that category include President Carter, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and former California Gov. Ronald W. Reagan.

— He must commit two to three years of his life to traveling across the country, speaking at meetings of the party faithful, attracting individual supporters to his cause and assembling a grass-roots organizations piece by piece. Richard M. Nixon won the presidency in 1968 after making that long, arduous journey in 1965. He did it in 1973 and George Bush did the same in 1977-78.

Baker wrongly assumed that he had acquired national-celebrity status as a result of his widely televised and highly acclaimed performance as the senior Republican assigned to the Senate committee that investigated the Watergate scandal.

He indeed was famous then, but the committee's hearings were held in 1973. Despite Baker's best efforts to revive the fading memory of his moment in the sun, more than six years have passed and the crowd clamors for new thrills and new faces.

Unlike Nixon, Carter and Bush, Baker held a full-time, demanding job in the years preceding the election, precluding him from spending intermin-able amounts of time on the road.

But forces beyond Baker's control are not entirely responsible for his disappointing performances. Although almost universally described as affable, gracious and charming, he seldom has been characterized as dynamic, charismatic or inspiring.

Eternal verities, truisms and clichés are the rhetorical coin of the realm in presidential campaigns — yet Baker somehow manages to sound even more dreary than his competitors when offering platitudes about "conquering the ravages of inflation" or "eliminating poverty, disease and suffering from the face of the earth."

He is very facile but not especially profound. He notes with considerable pride that he has sought to seriously discuss issues in the campaign — but those speeches often are crammed with pointless anecdotes and tedious homilies.

When he offered the Exeter, N.H., Rotary Club his six-point "program to revitalize small business in America," for example, the speech was so larded with barely relevant personal reminiscences that it provoked little more than glazed looks from the audience.

Baker was introduced at that event as "the highest-ranking elected Republican in America." He'll probably have to settle for that title in the future — unless another GOP candidate wins the presidency in November.

few sound investments

NEW YORK (AP) — As inflation devours assets, and high interest rates make it impossible to replace them, fewer sound investments can be found. Many people, in fact, say they can find none.

Eliminated from consideration are most savings instruments. Relatively riskless, to be sure, they also are very unprofitable, providing returns ranging downward from under 15 percent to 5.25 percent.

If inflation were 2 percent a year, an investor could eke out a tiny reward before taxes. But the annualized inflation rate in January was 18 percent, a rate that could grow appreciably in the next few months.

Housing prices may have peaked for the time being, frustrating the hopes of thousands of investors. Simultaneously, fuel bills on rental properties have put pressure on operating profits.

Seeking returns greater than the inflation rate, millions of people have returned to the stock market, theorizing that stocks — often selling below book value — have the potential to move up sharply.

Some have, Low-priced over-the-counter stocks — those not listed on major exchanges — have sometimes risen 50 percent in a single day. And some oil stocks have doubled in the past year or so.

In turning to such investments, however, individuals usually incur greater risk than in savings. Some low-priced stocks have fallen almost as spectacularly as they rose, stranding those who rode them.

The same quest has forced people who ordinarily dealt only with banks to buy metals, diamonds and commodities. Again, the risk-reward ratio prevails, what floated like air sometimes falls like lead.

Depending upon the investment, certain expenses must be subtracted from the gains: brokerage fees, storage fees, insurance, and inevitably, taxes. As a result, net profit may barely resemble gross.

In speaking with people you quickly detect that hope is mixed with desperation, and that desperation shades into despair. Helplessness, an un-American trait, is conceded by President Carter.

Speaking to editors this week, Carter said, "It would be misleading for me to tell any of you there is a solution to it." We are caught, he said, "in circumstances over which we have very little control."

Many people dispute that view, noting that even with energy prices eliminated from the consumer price index the nation still has double-digit inflation. Inflation, they maintain, is restrainable.

But, with the President confirming their own feelings of inadequacy, investors don't feel so good these days. They search for ways to preserve their assets, but instead of security they find greater risks.

With inflation and interest rates stalking investors like an invading army, there are few places to hide. It is pervasive, relentless and indiscriminate, and it is rushing ahead almost unchecked.

Newspapers the recipients of all manner of mailings. These mailings range from the strange to the very. At the SDN we have received mailings from left-wing groups, right-wing groups, California vegetarians, and, occasionally, from legitimate publishing companies.

Recently, a book on fitness crossed my desk. The book, entitled "The Fitness Fact Book: A Guide to Diet, Exercise, and Sport," struck me as being one of the more practical things I have seen lately. It lists activities, and discusses their value, both pro and con.

The book lists the usual things such as running, swimming, tennis, volleyball, and so forth. But from there the book goes on to briefly mention some other things. Take dancing, for example.

Dancing a waltz will burn up 5.7 calories per minute. Dancing to the foxtrot, however, burns up only 5.5 calories per minute. Dancing to a rumba, disco, or square dance, however, will burn up a whopping seven calories per minute.

Playing a game of billiards (commonly known as pool in this part of the country) will cost you 3.9 calories per minute of involvement. Golf is good, for 3.7. Bowling burns up only 2.5 calories per minute, but even at that rate it is better than driving, standing, lying down, or sleeping.

The book claims driving a car burns up two calories minute. Mere standing accounts for an expenditure of 1.5 calories a minute. Lying down burns up 1.3 calories a minute, and in being completely asleep you'll burn 1.1 calories a minute. Beyond that the book does not go.

While not coming out and condemning any particular activity, the authors of the book do seem to frown on hang gliding. Of that activity they write: "Most people injured in hang gliding die, usually from a broken spine or neck. The more experienced the pilot, the more likely he or she is to be killed. This is because experienced pilots fly higher and farther, taking greater risks. Many of those injured or killed while hang gliding had been drinking before take-off."

Yes, I get the impression the authors of that book don't think too highly of hang gliding as a form of exercise.

NEW YORK (AP)—Two tapings shy of the season's end, Mackenzie Phillips is leaving "One Day at a Time," the Daily News reports.

She had asked for, and received, release from her role as the brash Julie Cooper in the hit CBS show.

"It's an amicable parting. Everybody likes her and we don't want to hold her to her contract against her will," a spokesman for Norman Lear's T A T Communications said.

The 19-year-old actress, "feels that she has outgrown the role, that she has stagnated in the part of the teen-age daughter. We may bring in a new character next season to replace her," the spokesman said.

Miss Phillips had returned to the program last month after several weeks off to recuperate from an illness.

Sorority Members Review First Ladies

Mrs. Carolyn Limmer entertained Beta Sigma Phi members recently with a program entitled "Social Behavior." She developed her program around the social behavior of 11 First Ladies.

Mrs. Limmer began with Martha Washington whom she described as a matronly grandmother, but yet possessed a queenly aloofness. She was very much used to entertaining guests at Mount Vernon and her social graces found her well prepared to entertain at the capital which was in New York City at that time, Mrs. Limmer said. "During Abigail Adams' time, the East Room was used as a drying room for the laundry because there was no yard. Mrs. Adams left behind the influence of a First Lady who had championed causes far in advance of her time. These causes were the vote for women, the abolition of slavery, and extended education for young people.

"Dolly Madison inaugurated a staggering social schedule that has never been excelled. Julia Tyler loved to be called 'Mrs. President' and is credited with having started 'Hail To The Chief' being played when the President entered a gathering.

"On the other hand, Sarah Polk did away with wine and dancing at the White House. Receptions were held twice each year but guests did not linger long; no refreshments were served.

"Mary Todd Lincoln was least suited for the demands of First Lady. Lucy Hayes was dubbed 'Lemonade Lucy' when she banned liquor from the White House. She is remembered as the first president's wife to please most of the people most of the time.

"To someday be First Lady was Helen Taft's wife of William Howard Taft, lifelong ambition. She was well informed, interested and discerning and saw no reason why she should not walk in unannounced at her husband's meetings.

"Jacqueline Kennedy brought a style all her own to the White House. Her greatest contribution was the restoration of the White House, now designated as a national museum.

"Then the most politically experienced First Lady with a folksy, western brand of hospitality prevailing was Lady Bird Johnson. A politician's wife of 30 years, Mrs. Johnson took Texas to Washington. She brought dignitaries to the Texas ranch and served them Pedernales River Chili, pickled okra and wheaties cookies," said Mrs. Limmer.

Professor wound up with five hearts, two spades, two diamonds and a club and one over-trick.

"How did you know that diamonds wouldn't break?" asked the student.

"I didn't," was the reply. "But I was in three notrump and would only be sure of my contract if diamonds were 3-2 and I would have to clear the suit while I still had a spade entry."

The Professor was probably feeling so happy about his success that he didn't bother to suggest to the student that six diamonds would make and that the student might well have tried four diamonds over the Prof's three notrump.

At six diamonds the Prof would lead a heart to the ace, ruff a heart, lead a trump to the queen, ruff another heart to clear the suit, play ace-king and another diamond and eventually discard a club and a spade on good hearts.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The Professor won the first trick with the queen of spades and gave the hand an unusually long period of study before making the surprising lead of the ace of diamonds. He continued with the king.

East showed out and the next play was a heart to dummy's 10. East took his king and cleared the spades, but since hearts broke, the

DAR Observes History Month

Presenting the American History Month program for Anne Pettus Shelburne Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution of Rotan was Bob McMathren of Abilene. Because of the interest and quality of the program, it was given at the high school with students from junior high also attending.

Mrs. Whit Clark, chapter program chairman, introduced McMathren who is currently manager for advertising and public relations for Citizens National Bank in Abilene, a position he has held since 1973. He represents the bank in such organizations as the State School Advisory Committee, the Advertising Club, Abilene Apartment Association, Restaurant Association, Rotary Club, Cub Scouts, Little League and Texas Bankers Association.

The program, "Freedom's Colors," was researched and prepared by McMathren as a bicentennial project. The presentation began with a story of a great nation from its colonial beginnings, its rise to great heights, and continued through its concentration on material things, ignoring all warning signs, and final corruption and fall. The country, he was referring to, was the Roman Empire whose history, he said, is being paralleled in the United States.

The program consisted of a slide presentation with history and significance of the development of the flag of the United States of America.

Following the program, DAR members, the speaker and high school principal, Neil Wright, met in the school library for refreshments and a social hour.

Discussions On Conservation Programs Set

Dr. Rex Johnston of College Station will preside over a public meeting in Lubbock on March 4 to discuss the direction future soil and water conservation programs of the U.S. Department of Agriculture will take.

The meeting, which will be held at the Lubbock Convention Center, will start at 9:30 a.m. and should end by noon.

Dr. Johnston is area director of the USDA Science and Education Administration - Agricultural Research.

Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, College Station, will preside over a similar meeting at San Antonio at the Marriott Hotel on March 6.

The meetings are being held as a result of the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 (RCA). Under the Act, Congress directed USDA to appraise the condition of the nation's renewable natural resources and to propose programs to guide future conservation activities of USDA.

As a result of RCA, three documents have been published that can be reviewed at USDA offices. These include Parts I and II of the appraisal and a summary of the appraisal, national conservation objectives for selected resource areas, and seven alternative strategies.

The purpose of the alternative strategies is to provide a selection of the best and most acceptable method of achieving national conservation objectives set by USDA.

Anyone interested in reviewing the documents before, or after, the meetings in Lubbock and San Antonio should contact local USDA Soil Conservation Service or Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service offices.

Written comments will be accepted at the meeting or they can be sent to the Response Analysis Center, P.O. Box 888, Athens, GA 30603.

Theft, Drug Bust Keep Police Busy

A major theft and a drug bust topped police reports of activities for Wednesday.

Reporting the theft was Lloyd Hatcher, owner of White's Auto. He told Sgt. Jerry Parker that $1,395 had disappeared from a desk drawer at the store.

Approximately $829 was in cash, Hatcher told police, and the rest was in checks and credit card invoices. The theft is alleged to have occurred Tuesday.

What police believe to be marijuana and hashish were recovered when a 27-year-old man and a 31-year-old woman were arrested yesterday in the 2400 block of 28th St.

The pair was taken into custody about 5:35 p.m., but the woman was later released with no charges being filed against her. Officers indicated the case against the male would be filed either as felony possession of marijuana or as felony possession of a controlled substance.

Two minor traffic accidents were also investigated.

The first was reported at 1:35 p.m. at Wild Country. Involved in it were a parked 1973 Ford owned by Mark Muller and a vehicle which left the scene. It was worked by Don Cheek.

The second was reported at 5:35 p.m., but occurred Feb. 24. It involved a parked 1976 Ford owned by Rudy England and a vehicle which fled the scene. The accident was worked by Buddy Kinney and occurred at the Englund Apartments.

Doobie Brothers Take Honors

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP)—

The Doobie Brothers, who 10 years ago were playing in bars to the motorcycle crowd, were presented record of the year and song of the year honors at the 22nd annual Grammy ceremonies - the first time they had been nominated.

The six members of the rock 'n' roll band took home victrola-shaped trophies Wednesday for record of the year, "What a Fool Believes," and best pop vocal performance by a group, "Minute By Minute."

Two Grammys for "What a Fool Believes" - in the song of the year and best arrangement accompanying vocalists categories - were personal triumphs for Michael McDonald, who joined the group five years ago and was given much credit for the band's six nominations this year.

"It's a form of acceptance we never got before, and we enjoy it," said McDonald, who shared the song of the year award with co-writer Kenny Loggins.

The Doobie Brothers won more awards than any other artists honored in 58 categories and were the only major first-time winners.

Repeat winners included Billy Joel, whose "52nd Street" won album of the year and best male pop performance. Earth, Wind & Fire raised its career Grammy total from three to five, winning rhythm and blues honors for group vocal, "After the Love Has Gone," and instrumental, "Boogie Wonderland."

But Dionne Warwick and Herb Alpert provided the two major comeback stories of the night. Alpert, whose "Rise" was named best pop instrumental, won the last of his five previous Grammys in 1966.

"Oh my dears, my dears," Miss Warwick said, wiping tears away after winning the best female pop performance for "I'll Never Love This Way Again." Earlier, her "Deja Vu" had been named best female rhythm and blues performance.

Bob Dylan, one of pop music's best known born-again Christians, won the best male rock performance award for "Gotta Serve Somebody."

Rickie Lee Jones, who wore tight leather pants, gave thanks to a more worldly bunch after being named best new artist.

Donna Summer, nominated in five categories, won only best female rock performance for "Hot Stuff." The rock-group vocal award went to the Eagles for "Heartache Tonight." Michael Jackson won best male rhythm and blues honors for "Don't Stop Till You Get Enough."

Gloria Gaynor's "I Will Survive" was named best disco recording, and Emmylou Harris won female country vocal honors with "Blue Kentucky Girl," written by a Missouri school janitor.

Kenny Rogers won best male country performance for "The Gambler."

Beefalo Herd Thriving On New Jersey Ranch

CLARKSVILLE, N.J. (AP)—They graze in a pasture alongside a shopping center parking lot. Shoppers stop and stare.

A cattle ranch in the nation's most densely populated state is an unlikely sight to begin with, so what are those critters doing here, and, in fact, what on earth are they?

They are beefalo. They are a strange cross between a wild buffalo and a tame cow. They belong to Joe Russo.

Joe Russo is a strange cross between a cattleman and a cheerleader on behalf of the beefalo. To hear him tell it, the shaggy-haired beefalo will revolutionize the meat industry.

"Beefalo don't require much grain. They thrive on grass, hay, roughage. They grow fast, so they're ready for market quicker. The calves are smaller at birth, so live births are more likely. They are harder, like buffalo, and can endure severe weather."

"What it adds up to is cheaper and better meat, besides freeing tons of grain for human consumption. To me, that makes beefalo a good idea. Good ideas usually win out."

Russo isn't the only one with a big stake in beefalo steak. Six years ago a Canadian consortium paid $2.5 million for a purebred beefalo bull. According to its seller, that was more than five times the highest amount ever paid for a farm animal.

The beefalo is the result of 16 years of breeding experiments by a Californian named D.C. Basalo, who sold that expensive bull.

Cattlemen had tried for a century to combine the best rugged traits of the wild American bison with the best traits of the pampered domestic breeds of cattle. They met with great success—scrappy, weird looking offspring, usually sterile—until, in 1967,

State Won't Renew 54's Liquor License

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York State Liquor Authority, citing the activities of two of Studio 54's owners, has refused to renew the liquor license of the trendy Manhattan nightclub.

The ruling Wednesday means the disco will be prohibited from selling alcoholic beverages as of March 1, although it can remain open.

Attorneys for Studio 54 could not be reached for comment, and employees at the club said they were unaware of the ruling.

Lawrence J. Gedda, spokesman for the five-member authority, said the action was taken following the imprisonment of owners Steven Rubel and Ian Schrager.

The two reported to federal authorities earlier this month to begin serving 3½-year prison sentences. They were sentenced and fined $20,000 each after pleading guilty to charges of evading corporate and personal income taxes.

Gedda said that because of their conduct, including their conviction on income-tax evasion charges and other violations of law which we had charged them with, they were not fit and proper persons to hold a liquor license."

Basalo found the right combination in a creature that is only three-eighths bison.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, recognizing the hybrid as a new breed, gave it a formal name that sounds like something Christopher Robin found at the zoo: a Basalo Beefalo.

Joe Russo knew nothing of those experiments. At the time, he was a young college graduate, a bank teller, a former 4-H Club member, dating a young woman named Phyllis Vaccaro.

He took up with Phyllis partly because she lived on a farm and he enjoyed hanging around.

"My grandfather," he said, "learned farming in Italy. He could produce more on one acre than most farmers could on ten. He had chickens, pigs, rabbits, grapes, a big garden, everything except a cow. All my life, I wanted a cow."

"One day, in 1976, Phyllis's mother saw a story in a magazine about a beefalo. She said, 'If a beefalo is all they say it is, maybe that's what you ought to buy.'"

Joe threw in with his wife's father and uncle, Tony and John Vaccaro, and got into the beefalo business. Their herd now numbers about 210 head, and they are constantly selling to new beefalo enthusiasts as the breed expands nationwide.

Questions about cancer

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: It is my understanding that every cancer more or less follows a certain pattern. For example, breast cancer many times moves to bone cancer. Could you please tell me what is the cause of cancer of the colon?

DEAR READER: We really don't know all the factors that cause cancers. Certain conditions are associated with an increased likelihood of having cancer. Some environmental factors increase the likelihood a person will have cancer if he's susceptible to it to begin with. Viruses have been involved in producing some animal cancers but we don't have positive proof of this in humans. We know that certain chemicals, and even the radiation from sunshine is capable of inducing cancer.

It follows that I can't answer your question about what causes cancer of the colon. Cancers of the colon and rectum are the second most common cause for cancer deaths in the United States. Not nearly enough has been done to educate the public on this problem and that's one of the reasons these are the second most common cause of cancer deaths.

There is some reason to believe that individuals who eat a very bland diet that doesn't contain adequate bulk in it may be more susceptible to cancer of the colon. There's also some evidence that eating a high fat diet may contribute to cancer of the colon. Also there are some new studies that suggest that chlorophyll as found in leafy green vegetables may help to protect against cancer of the colon.

There is enough circumstantial evidence for the prudent person to eat a diet that contains an adequate amount of bulk, particularly cereal fiber as in bran. The diet should also include an adequate amount of leafy vegetables and be moderately restricted in fat content.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 14-8, Cancer: A Fact Of Life. It will update you on a lot of the common current knowledge about cancer. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

The Health Letter I'm sending you will also explain cancer spread. A cancer literally drops off cells that are circulated to the rest of the body. Cancer of the colon, for example, may drop off cells that are carried and lodged in the liver. Breast cancer may have cancer cells that are shed into the lymphatic circulation and carried to lymph nodes under the arm. Circulation of blood and lymph explains most of the ways that cancer spreads throughout the body.

Pose Has Sailor In Rough Water

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Lisa Ann Woolf, in hot water with the Navy for posing nude in Playboy magazine, prefers to think of herself as "a good sailor" who spruced up the swabby image.

"Before I joined up I thought all women sailors were big, ugly and had hair on their chests," said the 5-foot-2, 110-pound Miss Woolf, a machinist aboard the San Diego-based Samuel Gompers, a destroyer tender.

"Maybe this will show the men that there are some pretty women in the Navy," said Miss Woolf, who last year was among the first women stationed aboard a Navy ship.

Because she and a friend, Susan Gage, are among six military women featured in next month's Playboy, the Navy has launched an investigation that could cost them their jobs.

The controversy erupted last week, forcing Bambi Lynn Finney, 22, out of the Marine Corps on an early discharge.

A total of six women representing the Navy, Army, Air Force and Coast Guard appear in Playboy's April edition.

The fate of Miss Woolf and Miss Gage, a 22-year-old interior communications technician, will be determined by their respective commanding officers, a Navy spokesman said.

Both are scheduled to be promoted, but, because of the investigation, Miss Woolf said she has been advised that her promotion has been held up.

"They have to decide whether it's degrading to the service," she said. She accepted the magazine's offer to be in the pictorial layout after answering a newspaper ad. "I called my mom and dad before I posed and they said go ahead. We were not raised to be ashamed of our bodies," she said.

"Why do people automatically think you are some floozy or something?" asked Miss Woolf. "I didn't do it for dates. I have a steady boyfriend and I love him very much. It was an exciting thing to do, an opportunity I would never have again."

"My boyfriend's not too happy about it," she added.

In the magazine, the two women appear bottomless aboard a sailboat against a backdrop of Naval ships. Another photograph shows

Miss Gage of Lancaster, Calif., on roller skates on the Broadway Pier.

As a machinist, Miss Woolf has two years left on a four-year hitch. She said the men in her command "are proud of me. They know I'm a good person and a good sailor."

Margaret To Help Pierre

LONDON (AP)—She told all in her autobiography and was going to make a movie about it, but now that Pierre Elliott Trudeau's back in power she's going to cool it.

She won't move back with him, but Margaret Trudeau, estranged wife of Canada's prime minister-designate, "is very keen to help Pierre," a friend says in Nigel Dempster's gossip column for the Daily Mail.

SIGNING CONTRACTS—County Judge Preston Wilson signs a contract for the city to provide data processing services for the county tax office as Mayor John Fagin looks on. The contract was approved Monday by county commissioners. The Scurry County Appraisal District also has authorized a contract with the city for data processing service. (SDN Staff Photo)

11,000 Mile Trek...

Plans Horse Ride To Alaska

By SUSAN STOLER, Associated Press Writer
PORT ISABEL (AP)—After a 550-mile warm up, Dallas businessman Thomas Gaddie is ready for his 11,000-mile horseback ride to Alaska and into the record books.

Gaddie closed his fire-place repair shop to realize a 20-year dream of riding cross country.

He planned to set out today from the surf of South Padre Island, taking with him a jar of water from the Gulf of Mexico. By June or July, he expects to be looking at the Arctic Ocean and Prudhoe Bay.

"There are few countries left in the world where a person could realize a goal like this," he said Wednesday.

Gaddie, 56, rode to the southernmost tip of Texas to claim the Gulf as his starting point and to assure that his feat — if completed — is the longest horseback ride on record.

A Spaniard reportedly traveled 10,000 miles from Buenos Aires to Washington, D.C., in the 1920s.

Gaddie arrived in Port Isabel Tuesday and is camping out on land to be used as a future city park.

Although he looks the part of a weathered cowboy riding the range, his trip combines the comforts of home with some slick public relations.

Twelve others are traveling with him in motor homes and trailers, including one designated the "bunkhouse" for single hands. The "chuckwagon" is a trailer outfitted with a large booth, grill and appliances.

Gaddie's son, Rockie, hired a Dallas public relations firm to put together a sophisticated four-color press kit of the world's greatest horseback ride.

Rockie Gaddie estimates the trip will cost $250,000, so he formed the Texas Big'Un Inc. to finance the trek with savings, loans and hopefully, sponsors.

He and his father have asked Chrysler Corp. to sponsor the troupe and its Chrysler fleet of vehicles. So far, they've had no answer back.

"I'm not looking to make a profit on this thing," the younger Gaddie said, adding that product endorsements would help defray costs.

Gaddie hopes to average 50 miles a day, changing horses every hour.

In his band are two escort vehicles with flashing lights to warn motorists of the mounted man.

The group has a two-way radio system to coordinate movement. They'll head up the Texas Panhandle, across Oklahoma up to South Dakota, across Wyoming and Montana and into Canada.

The Royal Canadian

Mounted Police were skeptical when Rockie Gaddie told them of his father's planned excursion. But the son thinks things will go smoothly, as they did on the trail between Dallas and Port Isabel.

At the last minute Wednesday, it appeared a local ordinance might revise sendoff plans.

No animals are permitted on the South Padre Island beach. But an official at the Port Isabel Chamber of Commerce cleared Gaddie's overnight stay with local law enforcement agencies and gave the rider an all-clear.

Mileage Not So Good In Good Old Days

DETROIT (AP)—Remember hearing about the "good old days" before emission controls, when cars got great mileage?

Well, it ain't necessarily so, say three Canadian researchers.

"In spite of the remarkable progress made in fuel economy in the last five model years, the general public persists in the belief that emission controls have a substantial adverse effect on fuel economy and that cars delivered much better fuel economy in the 'good old days,'" according to a paper by three staffers of Environment Canada presented Wednesday at the convention of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Environment Canada is the counterpart to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The researchers put 18 cars belonging to members of the Antique Automobile Club of Ottawa through the EPA's fuel economy and emission tests.

Only five — a 1938 Dodge, a 1941 Oldsmobile, a 1953 Chevrolet, a 1955 Citroen and a 1956 Packard — got better mileage on the city test than the average of today's counterparts in the same weight class.

The average mileage of all 18 was 9 percent worse.

"In short, it is probably the light-traffic conditions of the 'good old days' which make 'good old cars' shine in our memory," the paper says.

Nigeria plans to use a recent loan of $100 million from the World Bank, a United Nations' financial agency, to increase electrical supplies for its capital city, Lagos. The project, which calls for new generating stations, substations and distribution lines, is scheduled for completion in 1984.

College Teams Play Final Home Games Tonight

Westerners Heavily Favored Over South Plains Texans

Coach Nolan Richardson admitted the whole thing. It's no secret, nobody is expecting South Plains to upset the nation's No. 1

Three Named To Cage Team

San Angelo Lake View and Snyder led the polling of this year's 3-AAA All-District Girls' Basketball Team, announced this morning.

Despite carrying the title of district champions however, Snyder only placed one player on the first team, 5-2 senior guard Jamie Hataway. Hataway had been all district as a sophomore and junior also.

Other selections from Snyder -- both named to the second team -- were 5-8 Tracey O'Day and 5-7 Brenda Anderson, both sophomores. Anderson was a second-teamer last year.

The other second-team selection was Lake View's Linda Rogers, a 5-10 junior.

Cindy Goltz, 5-6, and Layonne Cauley, 5-5, were named to the first team from Lake View. Seniors, both were second team selections last year.

Named to the first team from Sweetwater were a pair of 5-8 girls, senior Leticia Garrett and junior junior college team to night.

"I realize we're supposed to be the team that wins, but even though the Teresa West. Both were all-district in 1978-79. The other first-teamer was 5-11 sophomore Marcy Holladay of Brownfield.

FIRST TEAM: Brownfield, Marcy Holladay, 5-11 soph; Lake View, Cindy Goltz, 5-6 senior and Layonne Cauley, 5-5 senior; Snyder, Jamie Hataway, 5-2 senior; Sweetwater, Leticia Garrett, 5-8 senior, and Teresa West, 5-8 junior.

game might not be one of our most exciting, I'd like to urge our fans to come out and watch," he said. "This will be the last home game for our sophomores and I know they would appreciate it if a big crowd was out there yelling for them."

South Plains and Western Texas have met three times already this season and Richardson's Westerners have won them all, by scores of 117-74, 107-92 and 102-84. Tonight's 8 o'clock meeting at Scurry County Coliseum doesn't appear to have any hidden tricks in store.

"We need the crowd support," Richardson continued. "It has been great all year, and we'd like to keep it up, even though the game is not supposed to be what you'd call a classic. But a crowd helps so much, especially when you have a tendency to be complacent, and we need the momentum to help us into the regional tournament next week."

But Richardson is also quick to point out the Westerners can't afford to overlook the Texans.

"As soon as a team starts overlooking another team, the time is right for that team to get in trouble. We don't want that. We're going to have to play good basketball to win. I'm not certain just how we'll play. It's the fourth time these two teams have played each other. Hopefully some of our kids that maybe haven't been getting as much playing time will be eager to do some playing if our regulars are off their game."

South Plains is sparked by 6-8 Jackie Vaughn and 6-4 Walter Sydnor, both of whom will probably be selected for the Region V Tournament all-star game. Another top Texan -- and a native Snyderite -- is Randy Courtney, who was all district for Snyder High School during the 1977-78 season.

LEAP AGAINST SOUTH PLAINS--Western Texas College basketball teams hold their final home games of the season here tonight at 6 and 8 o'clock. Tickets are $2 and $1 for the twin-bill held at Scurry County Coliseum. Above, Duster Shari Teal starts to cradle a rebound. Behind her is Katie Fisher (30). Both coaches have urged fan support for the games which will send their teams into the regional tournaments next week. (SDN STAFF PHOTO)

Regional Bash Friday; Confident, Says Coach

PLAINVIEW -- Coach George Byerly doesn't expect Friday's game with Borger to be another Kangaroo court by any means, but his Tigers are going to be searching hard for a region crown here. That much is for sure.

"Our kids are real confident," he said. "We're not taking Borger lightly. We just hope we play well and give it our best shot. We think we can win the game."

The contest, which sends its victor to the class AAA State Tournament in Austin, will be held at 8 p.m. in Wayland Baptist College Gym. Tickets are $3 adults and $2 students.

Borger, 31-3 on the season, made it to regionals by edging Andrews earlier this week 73-70 here.

Snyder earned a trip by smashing Weatherford's Kangaroos 86-54.

The Bulldogs are led by 6-5 Brett Smith, who averages 21 points a game. Chester Williams, 5-10 guard, is the other stand-out. Snyder defeated Borger in the teams' only meeting of the season, 68-61 in round one of the Canyon Reef Tournament, held Dec. 6, 1979. Borger eventually won consolation. Snyder took the tourney crown.

"Smith is one of the better post men we've played against all year," stressed Byerly, who said the Bulldogs like to try to get the ball inside to the big man. He characterized Williams as "an outstanding guard who can drive to the bucket or hit the jump shot well."

But the Tigers won't be able to concentrate on those two alone. "We'll play the way we've been playing all year," said the coach. "We're not going to change anything for Borger and I doubt they'll change anything for us." With 6-6 Greg Befton on the unit as well, Snyder can expect to be the shorter of the two teams, but the Tigers stand well across the floor themselves, in the 6-3 to 5-11 range.

If Snyder has an advantage, it may be in quickness. "We'll have to run them up and down the floor. Williams has got good quickness, but overall I believe we're a little quicker than they are."

Texanettes Expected Tougher This Time

Coach Joe Cushing's Dusters belted South Plains 88-51 earlier in the year, but he doesn't figure his team can expect such an easy time of it tonight.

"We're expecting a very different ballgame than what we played last time," he mused. "South Plains defeated Amarillo by six points, 64-58, and I have a feeling that since they've got a shot they are going to be in an entirely different frame of mind."

What the Texanettes have a shot at is the Region V Tournament, held March 5-8 in Big Spring. But they need a win over the Dusters, at 6 o'clock in Scurry County Coliseum, to do it.

The top five conference teams make the annual tournament, and four of those places have already been stitched up by Howard County, Odessa, Western Texas and Amarillo. South Plains, Clarendon and Frank Phillips are fighting for the other one.

"We'll have to be ready which we are," said Cushing, whose Dusters are looking for their 26th victory of the season.

South Plains is 3-8 in conference play and 10-13 for the season. Led by 6-0 Linda Vaughn, the Texanettes average 41.4 from the floor and .662 from the line in shooting percentage, both respectable figures.

Vaughn, who plays forward or post, averages 11.9 points and 6.2 rebounds a game. Other keys are Lynette Joiner and Luann Davis. Joiner puts in 11.3 points a game and leads the team in rebounding with a 7.3 average. Davis is the conference's most consistent free throw shooter, hitting at a .838 pace.

Tonight's game will be the final regular season contest for the Dusters -- and the final chance many Snyder fans will have to see them in action.

"I think our players are ready. They are up to the challenge. I'd like to point out that again we'll have several prospects (possible recruits for the '81 team) in the crowd. We'd like to urge the fans to come out and back us. It would be a big help."

A men's game will follow at 8 o'clock. Tickets for the double-header are $2 adults and $1 students.

Notre Dame Upsets Top Rated DePaul

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—Top-ranked college basketball teams which venture into Notre Dame's Athletic and Convocation Center indeed are invading treacherous ground.

Five times in the 12-year history of the ACC -- as the school's "Sixth man" student body affectionately calls it -- the Irish have stopped the nation's No. 1 team in its tracks.

Wednesday night was DePaul's turn. It took two overtime sessions, but the Irish got the job done again with a pulsating 76-74 victory which snapped the Blue Demons' 26-game winning streak.

Orlando Wooleridge canned two free throws with 19 seconds left in the second overtime to give the Irish, 21-5, the victory. The winning shots capped a steady uphill climb which began after DePaul, 25-1, scored the first eight points of the second half to take a commanding lead.

But Notre Dame roared back and wiped out a nine point deficit by scoring 11 straight points to set up a see-saw battle which saw the game tied at 64 after regulation, and 70 after the first overtime.

Both teams wasted opportunities to win the game in regulation. Two free throws by Tracy Jackson tied the game at 64 with 1:08 left. DePaul went into a delay game and held the ball until Teddy Grubbs threw it away with 13 seconds left.

Youthful Felines Begin '80 Track Slate Saturday

Snyder's Felines take to the oval this weekend as the girls' 1980 track and field season begins.

The Felines, a young team this year, open their campaign Saturday at San Angelo Stadium. Field events begin at 9:30 a.m. Preliminaries in the running events start at 10. Finals will begin at 2.

The meet will have both boys' and girls' divisions and events will be alternated.

Snyder returns only three members from the 1979 team, all sophomores. Headlining the group is Pam Brown, who qualified for the state track meet in the 100 meters last year. She'll compete in the 400, and 800 meter relays also, and will be joined by Pauline Taylor and Brenda Anderson.

Taylor will compete in the shot, while Anderson competes in the 100 dash, the 400 and 800 relays, and the shot and triple jump.

Suzanne Fisher, out for the first time, is the only senior on the team. Fisher will run the 800 and 1,600 meters. Lisa Cobb, another sophomore, will compete in the 400 and 800 meter relays and in the long jump.

Coach Patty Grimmett, in her first year as track coach at Snyder High School, indicated that it

"My old tax service didn't double-check everything. I should have come here last year."

We make sure we thoroughly understand your tax situation before we prepare your return. And then we double-check every return for accuracy.

Caught In Lush Hour

DEAR ABBY: A woman I work with comes to work drunk periodically. She's nice when she's sober, but when she's drunk she's rude to clients, uses foul language and is very obnoxious to the rest of us. We have covered up for her so far, but it's really getting to much to handle.

I realize that alcoholism is an illness and that this woman needs help, but I'm afraid if I suggest it, she will tell me to mind my own business.

She gets a good salary, but on those days when she's drunk she isn't able to do her job. What should I do?

VOTE FOR SOBRIETY

DEAR VOTE: Risk being told to mind your own business, and tell her anyway. Anyone who needs a drink to face the day is in serious trouble. You and your co-workers do her no favor by covering up for her. The poor woman needs to come to grips with her problem now. Alcoholism never gets better, nor does it go away without treatment. It just gets worse. Let her know that you care by urging her to seek help through Alcoholics Anonymous. They're in your directory.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 62-year-old woman who recently decided on an early retirement, although I'm in good health.

I have a friend my age who is still working. She began calling me several times a week to come and have dinner with her. Just as I am about to leave after dinner she loads me down with half a dozen boxes, several books, etc. She says, "You have more time than I have now, so I hope you won't mind taking these shoes to the shoe repair, dropping these books at the library, and returning this blouse for credit."

At first I accommodated her with a smile, then I realized that every time she asked me over she had a list of errands for me to run. Abby, she has a car, and even though I no longer have an 8-to-5 job, I have plenty to keep me busy and don't appreciate running other people's errands.

The last time this happened, I said, "I would like to be invited over here just once and not be asked to run any errands!"

Well, I haven't heard from her since. I miss her. Should I call and apologize?

MINNIE

DEAR MINNIE: Not unless you miss being her errand girl.

DEAR ABBY: You wrote that if a person is invited to a wedding reception, a gift is in order.

Well, I disagree. I received an invitation to the wedding and reception for a girl whose name didn't mean a thing to me. I later learned that she was the daughter of my car insurance agent. I am not a good (or even casual) friend of this man. In fact, I didn't even know he had a daughter!

I did not feel obligated to send a gift. Do you still think I was wrong?

CHUTZPAH IN OMAHA

DEAR CHUTZPAH: No, I was. I didn't consider those with so much chutzpah that they'd send invitations to virtual strangers.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How To Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Draft Plan Off To Rocky Start

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter's draft registration plan is off to a rocky start in Congress and could be in serious trouble after a House committee refused to approve money needed for the program.

In the first congressional vote on the issue, a House Appropriations subcommittee deadlocked 6-6 Wednesday on whether to approve money for registration of young men, beginning this summer. The tie vote blocks the funds, at least temporarily.

Instead, the panel approved only enough money to set up a standby system in which registration would not start until the president ordered military mobilization in an emergency.

Such a plan was proposed by Selective Service officials last month but was rejected by Carter in favor of actual registration of men and women ages 19 and 20.

But the fact that Selective Service said it could do the job without advance registration was used as ammunition by Carter's opponents to block the administration's program.

They also cited the administration's acknowledgement that advance registration might save only seven days in mobilizing recruits.

The subcommittee never considered approving money to register women, and deleted funds for that even before opening discussion of the bill.

Barry Lynn, head of a coalition called Committee Against Registration and the Draft, called the subcommittee's vote "a serious setback for the administration."

But White House officials predicted the full Appropriations Committee will be more sympathetic to Carter's request and will go along with registration of men when it considers the issue later.

100 More Sought In El Paso Sting

EL PASO (AP)—With 32 persons in custody, El Paso police today continued a roundup of about 100 more suspects in a "sting" operation officers say netted more than $2.1 million in stolen property. Late Wednesday night, police said they had arrested 32 of the 139 persons sought in the second phase of the operation, which began 18 months ago. The persons in custody all listed addresses in the El Paso area and ranged in age from 18 to 56, police said.

The first phase of the operation, dubbed "Alpha," resulted in 84 arrests last year, and of that number, all but one suspect has been convicted, according to Police Lt. Ed Agan.

Most of those arrested Wednesday were charged with theft over $200 and under $10,000, although one was charged with possession of heroin and two counts of theft over $10,000.

Authorities declined to specify what type stolen items were recovered.

Police Chief William Rodriguez said millions of dollars worth of stolen property was recovered when officers set up "stores" in various locations and posed as buyers of stolen goods, or "fences."

Thieves, armed robbers, shoplifters, muggers and burglars who were trying to sell stolen cars, silverware, furniture, and other goods at a discount for quick cash were snared in "Alpha," Agan said.

The operation was funded by the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, and Rodriguez said his officers were assisted by agents of the U.S. Customs Service.

About $144,000 in "buy money" was used by undercover agents to buy the stolen goods. The transactions were secretly videotaped, and Agan said the evidence of the tapes accounted for the high conviction rate of those arrested by noon Wednesday, Agan said.
