Knoxville: 'Scruffy little city' no longer true of fair home

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Organizers shut the gates and turned off the lights at the 1982 World's Fair, but not before praising the six-month exposition as a financial success that will leave this "scruffy little city" richer for years to come.

"I won't cry," an elderly man told his wife as they watched a fireworks display signal the end of the fair Sunday, "but I certainly hate to see it leave."

Thousands of tourists and dignitaries gathered in the outdoor Court of Flags to officially close the $115 million extravaganza that drew 22 nations and millions of people to this southern Appalachian city of 183,000.

Many people laughed in 1975 when several civic leaders said they wanted to put on a world's fair in Knoxville to boost the local economy and clean up a run-down section of downtown.

But on Sunday, gate turnstiles clicked nearly 86,000 times, bringing total attendance to 11,127,786. Officials said that amounted to about 10.2 million paid admissions by 6 million to 8 million people.

The attendance exceeded the 11 million visits originally predicted and World's Fair President S.H. "Bo" Roberts Jr. has said the fair will make enough money to pay all its bills — something few world's fairs have done.

During the next two weeks, workmen will begin dismantling temporary buildings, and equipment and leftover souvenirs will be auctioned. Officials hope most of the fair's assets will be bought by organizers of the 1984 World's Fair in New Orleans.

"We have seen the 1982 World's Fair serve as a catalyst to build a strong economy for our community," Mayor Randy Tyree, the Democratic nominee for governor, told the amphitheater crowd. "And we have been able to say, 'Don't ever doubt us again.' "

"You've made us proud...making a scruffy little city here in East Tennessee known all over the world," state Tourism Commissioner Etherage Parker told about 1,500 guests who toasted the fair with 400 bottles of champagne at a private ceremony afterward.

The fair pumped millions of tourist and investment dollars into Knoxville and helped keep the area's unemployment rate at about 7 percent, well below the state average. However, the fair's closing means the end to paychecks for 6,750 fair employees, and the state is braced for an increase in applications for unemployment benefits.

Among the fair's legacies to the city are three large hotels and a $220 million interstate highway renovation.

The fairgrounds developed on a 72-acre railroad yard and industrial slum separating downtown Knoxville from the 30,000-student University of Tennessee campus. Now the site is slated to become a $100 million development of businesses, restaurants and condominiums.

But the city still must pay off bonds for its new convention center.

Papal greetings

Pope John Paul II shakes hands with Spain's King Juan Carlos upon his arrival Sunday at Madrid's Barajas airport. Spain's Queen Sophia is at right. The pope made a 55-mile journey from Madrid to Avila by helicopter to pray to the Spanish mystic St. Teresa and her mentor, whom he called "the spiritual teachers of my life."

State race highlighted by parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Big campaign budgets and heavy political advertising are turning a national spotlight on tight governors' races in Texas, California and New York, but close battles also are coming to a climax in New Hampshire, Nebraska, New Mexico, Idaho and a few other states.

Republican National Committee Chairman Richard Richards, in his gloomiest assessment yet, says the GOP might lose as many as five seats, compared with his earlier estimate of two or three. However, Texas Gov. Bill Clements' post is not among those the Republicans think they'll be losing.

Democratic National Committee Chairman Charles Manatt predicts a gain for his party of four or five, particularly with victories in the economically depressed Midwest.

Of 36 governorships up for grabs this year, 20 are held by Democrats and 16 by Republicans. Democrats now control 27 statehouses, compared with 23 by the GOP.

Republican and Democratic party professionals agree that governors' races in Alaska, Iowa, Nebraska, Idaho, New Hampshire and New Mexico, as well as California, are winding up as tossups.

The GOP also puts Kansas and Arkansas in the tossup category, but Democrats disagree. They say Democratic Gov. John Carlin has an eight-point lead in Kansas, and that former Democratic Gov. William Clinton is ahead in Arkansas in a rematch with Republican Gov. Frank White.

Democrats include Texas and Oregon in the tossup category, but Republicans dispute that. GOP strategists say Texas Gov. William Clements' $10-million re-election campaign has given him a clear advantage over state Attorney General Mark White, and that Gov. Victor Atiyeh of Oregon is safely ahead of Democrat Ted Kulongoski.

Democrats say they have excellent chances to win GOP governorships in Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin — all states where Republican incumbents are not seeking another term — and in Nevada.

Republicans think they have a chance of dumping Democrats in Alabama and Wyoming.

In New York, Democratic Gov. Mario Cuomo appears to be pulling ahead of Republican Lew Lehrman.

GOP officials consider Lehrman a longshot hope, and Lerhman, himself, says he fell further behind in the polls once unemployment climbed above 10 percent in October.

In California, a late survey by pollster Mervin Field showed Republican George Deukmejian six points behind Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, but gaining ground. A Field poll several weeks earlier showed Bradley with a 14-point edge.

Pope journeys to pay homage to saint

AVILA, Spain (AP) — Three-thousand nuns gathered in this medieval walled city's Monastery of the Incarnation today to join Pope John Paul II in marking the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Teresa, one of Catholicism's most revered saints.

Thousands of faithful turned out to greet the pontiff, who flew 55 miles from Madrid by helicopter to make a pilgrimage delayed a year by an attempt on his life.

Following a ceremony at the monastery, John Paul, the first reigning pope to visit Spain, was to fly to Alba de Tormes, the western Spanish city where St. Teresa's casket lies in a baroque cathedral.

St. Teresa is widely revered throughout predominantly Roman Catholic Spain. Her remains were the object of a rivalry between the two cities and of a bloody battle during the 1936-39 civil war.

The pilgrimage was the religious highlight of the 62-year-old pontiff's 16-city tour, which began in Madrid on Sunday with a 21-gun salute and a welcome from King Juan Carlos.

With television cameras relaying the scene across Spain, the pontiff kissed the ground on his arrival and then drove through the city in a motorcade. Tens of thousands crowded the route to cheer, sing and throw confetti in the Vatican colors of white and yellow.

John Paul said his visit was of "a purely religious nature, above all political matters." A few hours later, he addressed a meeting of Spanish bishops and urged them to fight efforts to legalize divorce and abortion and to cut state subsidies to parochial schools.

The Socialist Party, which won a sweeping victory in last week's elections, wants to allow abortions when the mother's life is in danger and to reduce parochial-school subsidies.

John Paul originally planned the trip for last year to open the fourth centennial of St. Teresa, Spain's "restless and wandering mystic" who founded 17 monasteries in the 16th century. But it was postponed after the pontiff was wounded March 13, 1981, in St. Peter's Square by Turkish gunman Mehmet Ali Agca.

Before leaving for Madrid, John Paul canonized two women in a ceremony in St. Peter's Square: Marguerite Bourgeoys, an early French settler who taught both Indian and French children; and Jean Delanoue, 17th-century founder of schools and homes for the poor.

Both Pope John XXIII and Pope Paul VI prayed in Avila before they became pontiff.

While studying for the priesthood in his native Poland, John Paul wrote his doctoral thesis on the writings of St. John of the Cross, St. Teresa's spiritual adviser. As he flew here from Rome, the pontiff skimmed through some of St. John's writings, according to aides.

Nine years after she died, St. Teresa's body was discovered intact inside the casket now enshrined above the Holy Sacrament in the baroque cathedral of Alba de Tormes. Avila and Alba have argued, and sometimes fought, over the remains ever since.

Halloween apparently safe in Midland

Ector County reports tainted candy

Halloween was quiet and apparently safe in Midland this year, but law enforcement personnel in neighboring Odessa and Ector County reported receiving four complaints about candy containing pins, needles and screws.

A woman who bit into a candy orange slice Sunday felt a sharp pain in her dentures and discovered a pin inside the candy slice. The woman investigated other pieces of candy acquired at the Austin Elementary School carnival Friday night and found a pin in another piece of candy also.

The woman told police she had served on the committee that helped prepare the bags of candy for the carnival.

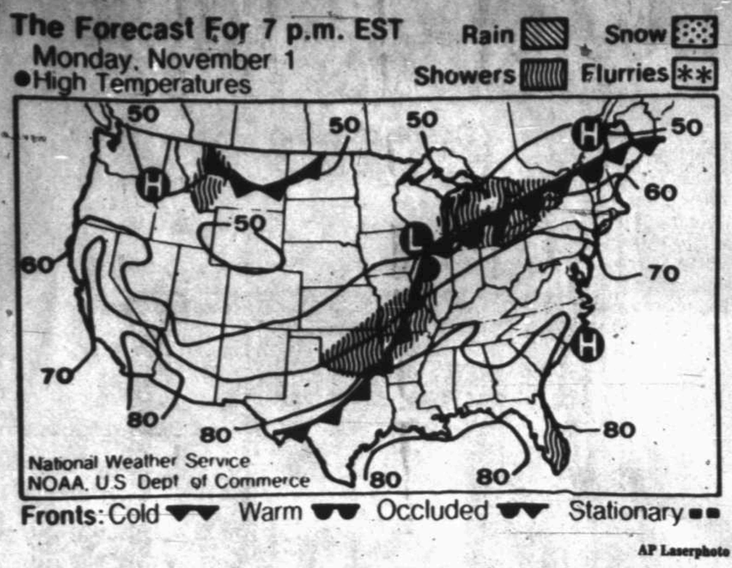

A spokesman for the Odessa Police Department said a woman who had taken her children trick or treating on the city's northeast side reported finding a copper-colored screw inside the clear wrapper of a piece of "banana candy."

Ector County Sheriff's Department personnel reported receiving two other complaints of tainted candy — one from children trick or treating in the 1800 block of Tripp and one from a carnival at San Jacinto Elementary School.

One of the complaints involved a pin found in a piece of candy and the other involved a needle in a piece of candy.

Police officials in Midland reported a very quiet Halloween with no reports of tainted candy or other forms of Halloween violence.

Other clouds were noted ahead of a cold front that was moving across the western third of the state. Skies were fair over the rest of Texas.

Autumn-like weather should return

Mother Nature, after a weekend of playing witch with her little tricks, will begin the new month by once again restoring autumn-like temperatures to the Permian Basin. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it will be fair and mild through Tuesday.

Following today's upper 70-degree weather, temperatures are expected to drop into the lower 40s tonight, climbing only into the middle 60s on Tuesday.

Winds should be northwesterly at 10-15 mph tonight, shifting to northerly at 15-20 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's summertime high of 85 just barely missed reaching the blistering high of 89, set for that date in 1934. The overnight low of 55 was off the record low 31, set for that date in 1972, by over 20 degrees.

With no precipitation recorded overnight, or, logically, for the new month, the yearly rainfall total stands at 12.63 inches.

'Poltergeist' actress remains in coma

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dominique Dunne, who played the older daughter in the horror film "Poltergeist," was in a coma today after being choked by an ex-boyfriend who wanted to live with her, authorities said.

Doctors feared that Ms. Dunne, 22, may have suffered brain damage in the attack late Saturday. The dark-haired actress clung to life in the intensive care unit at Cedars Sinai Medical Center, breathing with the aid of a respirator, spokeswoman Tess Griffin said.

Tests for brain damage were not complete, said Ms. Griffin.

John Sweeney, the actress's former boyfriend, was behind bars at the Los Angeles County jail for investigation of attempted murder, sheriff's Deputy Ralph Martin said.

He was arrested and ordered held without bail after questioning by deputies who responded to reports of a domestic dispute outside Ms. Dunne's West Hollywood home about 9:45 p.m. Saturday.

When officers arrived, they found the young woman lying in the driveway with Sweeney standing nearby. "I killed my girlfriend," Martin quoted Sweeney as saying.

Sweeney and Ms. Dunne had lived together but then separated, Sweeney said.

The attack "apparently resulted from the victim wanting to end the relationship and him wanting to move back in," Martin said. "I don't know if he'd moved out the night before or the week before."

Ms. Dunne is the niece of author-screenwriter John Gregory Dunne, husband of writer Joan Didion.

"Poltergeist" was Ms. Dunne's movie debut, said Al Newman, vice president of publicity for MGM-United Artists, distributor of the Steven Spielberg film about a family haunted by ghosts.

The actress had studied acting at Milton Katselis' Los Angeles workshop, was a cast member on the short-lived TV series "Breaking Away" and had guest appearances on the TV shows "Lou Grant," "Family" and "Fame."

She also was in the public television special, "Righteous Apples."

Halloween more tricks than treats

By The Associated Press

The annual celebration of childrens' fears turned into fear of a childrens' celebration as many Texas youngsters were forbidden from going door-to-door because of several incidents of Halloween candy tampering.

In Friendswood, a woman found two chocolate bars she had planned to give to trick-or-treaters contained needles. In Iowa Park, the brother of a Saturday trick-or-treater bit into a caramel square that contained a straight pin.

And in San Antonio, police Sunday found a pin in a candy bar sold by a Woolco store, and planned to X-ray other packages today to determine the extent of the tampering.

Parents in many towns planned Halloween parties as a safety precaution, and police departments planned extra patrols.

Publicity surrounding the poisoning of over-the-counter products prompted many Texans to devise new ways for their children to celebrate Halloween. Officials say the poisoning of Tylenol capsules in Chicago has caused a wave of "copycat" tamperings across the nation, including a container of acid-tainted nose spray in Dallas.

A carnival at Leslie Stemmons Elementary School in Dallas turned into a Halloween party at the request of parents.

Eight-year-old Erica Celedon, dressed as a cheerleader for the school carnival, said she didn't mind abandoning trick-or-treating.

"I like it because I won't be dead," she said, smiling.

Principal Talmadge Upchurch said the event was planned "as our annual funfest. But the parents then said this was going to be the main thing for their children this year with all the things going on."

In Houston, three hospitals offered to X-ray candy brought in by parents.

Everett Snyder, manager of a south Houston Woolworth department store, was among area store officials who said their candy sales had dipped this year.

Sales clerks at other stores have been instructed to scrutinize candy before distribution.

All Target Stores cashiers "are instructed to check every bag of candy to see if it's been tampered with," said Jane Wilkstrom, director of public relations at Target's Minneapolis headquarters.

Leonard Watts, manager of Gerland's Food Fair in the Houston suburb of Deer Park, said he is having his managers check candy bags.

It was in Deer Park eight years ago that 8-year-old Timothy O'Bryan died from eating cyanide-laced candy. His father, Ronald Clark O'Bryan, was convicted of the 1974 poisoning and scheduled to die on Sunday. An appeals court stayed the execution, however.

A 10-year-old San Antonio boy discovered a pin in a miniature Peter Paul Mounds candy bar that had been purchased at a Woolco store near Lackland Air Force Base Saturday, police said.

Officers said the boy was not injured because he found the pin while examining the candy as his parents had instructed him to. Police who inspected other candy in the store said that there was evidence other bags of the same type had been tampered with.

Pinholes were discovered on the bags, all inside the letter "u" in the word "Mounds," leading police to believe the tampering occurred at the factory.

Shoppers at the store were urged to return the candy purchased there, and several people complied with the request, police said.

In Friendswood, near Houston, Dorothy Cunningham said she had planned to give money to trick-or-treaters but decided Saturday night to give candy. She said she went to the store and bought several packages of minature chocolate bars.

Mrs. Cunningham said she decided to one of the candy bars Saturday night. When she bit into it, she found a needle. She and her husband went through the bag and found another bar which contained two needles.

"I'm just glad I'm the one that caught it before any of the kids did. I would have felt very, very bad if I had given something to one of the kids and they would have gotten hurt," she said.

built as the fair's corporate exhibit hall. And officials are looking for buyers of several fair structures, including the $13 million wedge-shaped U.S. Pavilion.

At Sunday night's closing ceremonies, the University of Tennessee band played music from Beethoven's 9th Symphony during a 10-minute fireworks display over the fairgrounds. Marchers brought 184 torches — one for each day of the fair — to the stage as the crowd sang "America the Beautiful."

During the exposition, which opened May 1, Egypt and Peru brought antiquities, China displayed art and bricks from the Great Wall, and such European nations as France, Italy, Great Britain and Hungary showed examples of energy-industry gadgets.

The 10-nation European Economic Community sponsored an exhibit, as did six states and more than 60 corporations and organizations.

The fair also brought many cultural riches to Knoxville, on the edge of the Great Smoky Mountains. The London Symphony, the Warsaw Philharmonic, Japan's Kabuki Theater, ballet star Rudolf Nureyev and violinist Isaac Stern were among the performers who graced Knoxville's stages during the past 184 days.

"I don't think this area is ever going to be the same," Roberts said.

Dean: 'Deep Throat' has to be Haig

NEW YORK (AP) — Former White House Counsel John Dean says Alexander M. Haig Jr. has to be the "Deep Throat" of Watergate fame, but the former secretary of state dismisses the notion as "absurd."

Haig on Sunday denied being the mysterious source of many explosive Washington Post stories about the scandal that toppled President Nixon.

But Dean, in his new book, alleges that Haig was among the few people who knew enough about the inner machinations of the Nixon administration to provide reliable information, according to a story in the Nov. 9 issue of Time magazine.

Even Time questioned Dean's claim, in part because of "the inherent implausibility of the ultra-dignified and instantly recognizable Haig skulking around Washington garages undetected at 2 a.m."

"Deep Throat" is the name Post reporter Bob Woodward gave to a source he met at odd hours in unorthodox places in 1972 to receive or have confirmed information for stories about the Watergate scandal which eventually led to the resignation of former President Richard Nixon.

Woodward, now an assistant managing editor at The Post, has never revealed the identity of the source.

Dean's latest claim appears in his latest book, "Lost Honor," to be published this month by Harper & Row.

"This is the first I've heard about it," said Haig at his home in Bethesda, Md. "It's absurd and probably commercially motivated."

Woodward, who with fellow Post reporter Carl Bernstein wrote "All The President's Men," the story of their coverage of Watergate, declined to comment on Dean's supposition when reached at his Washington home Sunday.

"I just don't have anything to say about it," Woodward said, chuckling. "Thanks for calling."

Grocery prices drop for third month

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

October brought the third straight monthly decline in supermarket prices, according to an Associated Press survey which shows a drop of just under one-tenth of 1 percent.

Last month's decline meant that prices at the start of November were 3.9 percent higher than they were at the start of the year.

The drop was due mainly to lower prices for sugar, along with some decreases in the cost of meat and eggs. Overall, about half the items priced by the AP were unchanged last month, and increases and decreases among remaining items just about balanced each other out.

The AP survey is based on a randomly selected list of 14 commonly purchased food and non-food items. The items were priced at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and have been repriced on or about the start of each succeeding month.

Among the highlights of the latest survey:

—THE MARKETBASKET bill increased last month at the survey store in four cities, rising an average of 3 percent. The bill declined in nine cities, down an average of 1.4 percent. Overall, there was an average decrease of 0.07 percent in the marketbasket bills at the checklist stores.

During September, the marketbasket bill went up at the checklist store in six cities and down in seven cities, for an overall drop of 0.6 percent. Prices dropped by 0.01 percent in August.

—Comparing today's prices with those 10 months earlier, the AP found that the marketbasket bill was up at the checklist store in 10 cities, rising an average of 5.6 percent. The bill was down in three cities, dropping an average of 1.7 percent. The overall increase since Jan. 1 has been 3.9 percent.

—Sugar declined in more cities during October than any other item. The price of a five-pound sack of sugar decreased in seven cities, increased in two and was unchanged in four.

—Special promotions meant lower meat prices for some shoppers. The price of a pound of chopped chuck, for example, was down at the checklist store in five cities. Weak consumer demand caused by the recession has kept meat prices relatively low, despite smaller supplies of livestock, and stores have been using sales on meat as a way to lure shoppers.

—THE PRICE OF a dozen eggs dropped at the checklist store last month in six cities, rose in four cities and was unchanged in three cities. The decreases ranged from 4 percent in Albuquerque, N.M., to 17 percent in Seattle.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed about an equal number of increases and decreases. The AP also found slightly fewer increases in October than in September. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

	Sep.	Oct.
Up	26.4	25.8
Down	26.9	24.7
Unchanged	41.8	46.7
Unavailable	4.9	2.8

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes or comparable substitutes were used for the survey. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the over-all total.

THE AP DID NOT try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list when the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

ALBUQUERQUE: The marketbasket total dropped two-tenths of 1 percent, going from $21.97 to $21.93. Chopped chuck, orange juice and milk went up; eggs, frankfurters and sugar declined; everything else was unchanged.

ATLANTA: The bill rose 1.7 percent, from $21.03 to $21.39. Sugar, pork chops, coffee, milk and frankfurters went up; chopped chuck, butter and tomato sauce declined; the remaining six items stayed the same.

BOSTON: The total went from $19.66 to $19.97, up 1.6 percent. Coffee, frankfurters, butter, eggs and peanut butter went up; tomato sauce, milk and sugar went down. There was no change in the remaining items.

CHICAGO: The bill for 12 available items dropped 5.5 percent, from $17.35 to $16.40. There were special sales on frankfurters, chopped chuck, eggs and sugar. Orange juice also declined, while only pork chops went up. The brand and size of coffee and fabric softener specified in the AP survey was unavailable at the checklist store. Other items were unchanged.

DALLAS: The bill went from $20.91 to $21.56, up 3.1 percent, largely because of an increase in the price of frankfurters, which rose from $1.79 a pound to $2.29. Chopped chuck, pork chops, paper towels, butter and peanut butter also went up; sugar went down. The remaining seven items were unchanged.

DETROIT: The total went from $22.09 to $21.80, down 1.3 percent. Slight increases in the price of orange juice, paper towels, eggs, detergent and tomato sauce were offset by a big drop in the price of pork chops. Everything else stayed the same.

U.S. sponsoring covert operation against Nicaraguan government, Newsweek claims

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States is sponsoring a Honduras-based covert military operation to harass and undercut Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, Newsweek magazine reports in this week's editions.

But the operation has grown out of control with the recruitment of former troops of deposed Nicaraguan leader Anastasio Somoza, and now threatens to provoke war between Nicaragua and Honduras, according to the magazine.

"This is the big fiasco of this administration," Newsweek quoted an unidentified U.S. government official as saying. "This is our Bay of Pigs."

According to Newsweek, the operation was originally intended only to restrict the flow of Cuban arms into El Salvador. But under the direction of U.S. Ambassador to Honduras John Negroponte, it has another objective: to undermine the Sandinistas, said the magazine.

Asked about U.S. support for former Somoza forces in Honduras, Negroponte told the magazine: "No comment, no comment and a big fat no comment."

THE REAGAN administration has denied Nicaraguan claims that it is trying to destabilize that nation's government.

On Sunday, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said that since she had not seen the Newsweek article, she could not comment directly on it. And she said it was the department's "general policy not to comment on alleged intelligence" reports.

According to Newsweek, the covert operation began under President Carter and broadened in December when President Reagan authorized the CIA to contact dissident Nicaraguans in exile and also to conduct political and paramilitary operations to stop weapon shipments to Salvadoran rebels.

Plans also were drawn up for the possible creation of a 500-man, American-trained paramilitary force, Newsweek says.

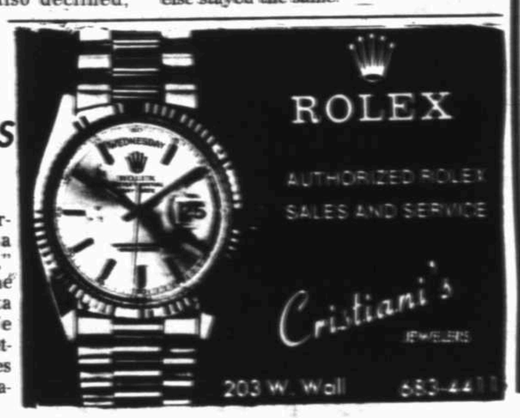

THE MAGAZINE reports that 10 training camps have been set up in Honduras and Nicaragua to harass the Sandinistas with hit-and-run attacks on bridges, construction sites and military patrols.

The goal, according to Newsweek, is to provoke the Sandinistas into repressive measures that will anger moderates in Nicaragua and thus jeopardize the lefists' position.

The recruitment of former members of Somoza's National Guard has alienated disillusioned Sandinistas, moderates who might have been willing to cooperate with destabilization efforts, according to the magazine.

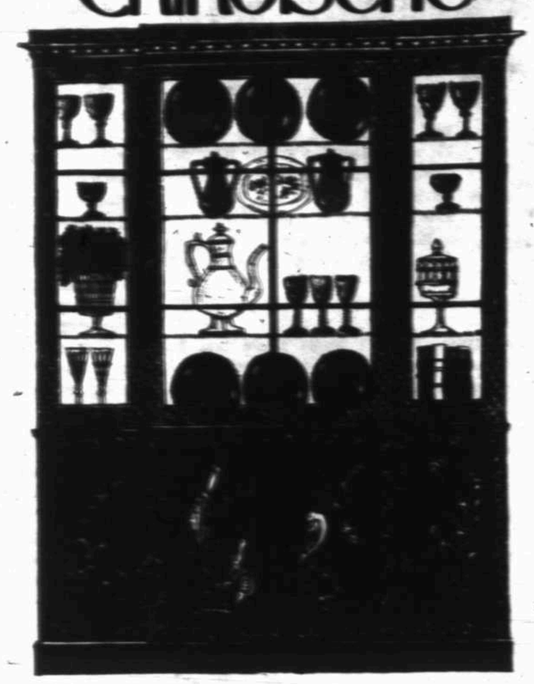

Newsweek also cited sources who warn that the inclusion of the pro-Somoza elements, called Somocistas, could result in a war or a massacre.

"COME THE counter-revolution, there will be a massacre in Nicaragua," the magazine quoted one unidentified Somocista officer as saying. "We have a lot of scores to settle. There will be bodies from the border to Managua."

Prison warden thwarts escape attempt by ramming truck into gate

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — A prison warden who drove his pickup truck into a gatepost to foil an escape attempt and save his 63-year-old mother described the ordeal as just part of his job.

Angola State Penitentiary Warden Ross Maggio was abducted at knifepoint along with his mother and was forced to drive for the two inmates late Saturday.

Ross Maggio

But he coolly crashed the truck at the prison gate, grabbed a gun from a guard, and joined another guard in firing on the would-be escapers.

Inmate Charles Ranker, 30, was killed, and George Gibson, 17, was wounded in the gunfire, Corrections Department officials said. Both inmates were from New Orleans.

Maggio's mother, Doris, suffered only minor injuries from flying glass.

Later, Maggio said the incident was a part of his job.

"Well, you know, I don't really know how to explain it to you," he said. "In this business — operating a penitentiary — I've come to expect almost anything."

Maggio said he had been advised by the district attorney's office not to discuss the case in detail.

"I regret that the situation involved my family," he said.

The 43-year-old warden, while driving for the two inmates, surreptitiously keyed the microphone on his truck radio as he drove toward the main gate, said department spokeswoman Ede Day.

"It would just open up to everybody who had their radios on that something was going on with someone," Miss Day said. "I'm sure they'd recognize his (Maggio's) voice and that he was calm and trying to talk them out of it."

Maggio was driving about 40 mph when he deliberately rammed an iron post near the main gate, Miss Day said.

Ranker, who held Mrs. Maggio to the floorboard with a knife to her throat, was killed instantly. A bullet shattered Gibson's upper arm bone as he ran away, authorities said.

Gibson, listed in fair to poor condition at Earl K. Long hospital in Baton Rouge, was to undergo surgery today to insert a steel pin in his arm.

Miss Day said the break apparently began during the evening recreation period at minimum-security Camp F when Ranker and Gibson walked off and made their way 2½ miles across the 18,000-acre compound to the warden's residence.

An unidentified guard at Camp F was suspended after the abortive breakout.

"He's been recommended for firing," Miss Day said. His identity would not be released until the completion of a grand jury investigation, scheduled to begin Tuesday.

"Apparently he was responsible for the nightly count, when they would have been missed if the count had been taken properly," she said.

Ranker had been in Angola since 1968, serving a life term for murder. He was a dormitory orderly at Camp F, Miss Day said.

She said Gibson arrived at Angola Oct. 4 to serve a 7½-year term for armed robbery. He was assigned to a field crew on the prison farm.

Miss Day said Maggio's parents came from their country home north of Baton Rouge to watch Sunday's finals of the annual Angola Rodeo.

The warden, his wife, Mary Jane, and his parents were watching television when the elder Mrs. Maggio left the house to get a suitcase from the car, Miss Day said.

"The warden heard her scream and he ran toward the door," Miss Day said. "Just about that time, through the sliding glass doors leading from the den, he saw the two inmates holding a knife on his mother.

"They came in and said that if everybody didn't cooperate then everybody was going to be killed.

"At that point, the warden's wife came from the back of the house with a pistol. The inmates demanded she turn the pistol over to him.

Four retired officials call for nuclear freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four retired high government officials, seeking to influence the outcome of referendums Tuesday in nine states, are arguing that a verifiable halt to the stockpiling of nuclear weapons must be negotiated soon or it will forever be beyond mankind's grasp.

Former diplomat W. Averell Harriman, former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford, former CIA Director William E. Colby and former arms negotiator Paul C. Warnke sought to disarm opponents who say that the Soviets could cheat in a nuclear weapons freeze.

A freeze is verifiable now, they said, but may not be subject to checking by American intelligence means in a few years, when technology will make it possible for thousands of nuclear-armed missiles to be stationed on trucks hidden in the forests of the Soviet Union and on Soviet trawlers.

At that point, "verifiable limits on the number of nuclear weapons could be forever beyond the reach of humanity," Harriman, Clifford, Colby and Warnke said in a letter Sunday to The New York Times.

The newspaper, arguing that the freeze proposal amounts to "a simplistic, sloganeering response to a complex issue," had called in an editorial for defeat of the freeze proposals in the 30 places where they are on the ballot.

The issue will be voted upon in nine states — California, Oregon, Arizona, Montana, North Dakota, Michigan, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Massachusetts; the cities of Chicago, Philadelphia, Denver, Miami, Milwaukee, Washington, D.C., Olympia, Wash., and New Haven, Conn.; the wealthy New York suburb of Suffolk County, and 13 other places.

All told, one American voter in four will have a chance to express an opinion in Tuesday's voting: The first time America has conducted anything so close to a national referendum on a political issue.

"We expect it to pass in most places where it is on the ballot, if not every place," says Randall Kehler, coordinator of the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign, a clearinghouse headquartered in St. Louis.

Adds Russell Hemenway, director of the National Committee for an Effective Congress, which also supports the freeze idea, "I don't see one place where they are going to lose it."

Even an opponent, John Fisher, president of the American Security Council, which recently spent $300,000 on an anti-freeze film for television, agreed with those assessments.

"It has been a one-sided debate so far," Fisher said.

The State Department is among those arguing that the Soviets could cheat in a freeze. Last spring, in a position paper, the department said, "The United States would live up to a freeze in all its aspects, while there would be considerable doubt that the Soviets would also live up to it. We simply cannot afford to base our national security on trust of the Soviets."

To counter that argument, freeze supporters went to court to get a copy of a "Stop Where We Are" arms control plan championed in the Nixon administration by arms control negotiator Gerard Smith.

On Friday, the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, in a freedom of information suit, handed a copy of Smith's proposal to the Federation of American Scientist, a pro-freeze group.

"We had to sue the government to get this study because they knew, and we knew, that it would reveal and document that the freeze is not an unverifiable pipe dream," said Jeremy J. Stone, federation president.

Smith's paper called for "a quantitative and qualitative freeze on all aspects of strategic offensive and defensive forces that are subject to adequate verification by national means."

He labeled his idea "Stop Where We Are."

Tent leads rescuers to stranded hiker

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A bright orange tent flap draped over a tree led rescuers to a hiker who sought shelter in a cave after an autumn storm blanketed Yosemite National Park trails with a foot of snow.

"She had given up hope for rescue but physically was in good shape," park spokeswoman Linda Abbott said of Mariane Paulsen, 24, of Griffin, Ga. Ms. Paulsen had been in the cave five days.

A helicopter crew picked up Ms. Paulsen, her shoes frozen, at 10:30 a.m. Sunday in a cave in the Cloud's Rest area of the park, a 9,500-foot elevation.

Ms. Paulsen did not require medical attention, Ms. Abbott said. She had enough food but was out of fuel and her matches were wet.

"She was losing hope," Ms. Abbott said. "She had a last-ditch plan to take ...food she had left and put it in a knapsack and try her best to reach the valley."

Once, Ms. Paulsen followed tracks of what she thought was a horse, only to learn she had been trailing a bear.

Professors rate graduate schools' humanities classes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A two-year study of the nation's universities gives Harvard, Yale, Princeton and the University of California at Berkeley top ratings for their graduate programs in the humanities.

Based on a survey of more than 1,000 professors who were asked to rate the universities' reputations, Harvard led the pack in three fields, classics, philosophy and Spanish literature. Yale was No. 1 in English and French and was tied for first in German with Princeton and the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Princeton also shared a No. 1 ranking in music with the University of Chicago and the University of California at Berkeley, according to the survey released Sunday. Overall, Berkeley and Yale were in the top five seven times, Princeton six times and Harvard five times.

The ratings were the result of a two-year, $500,000 study of the nation's graduate schools by the National Research Council, a branch of the National Academy of Sciences; the American Council of Learned Societies; the American Council on Education and the Social Services Research Council.

The report rates graduate schools in nine fields — art history, classics, English, French, German, linguistics, music, philosophy and Spanish — on a dozen different scales, including faculty, the size of their libraries, the percentage of graduates with national fellowships and their reputation.

SOME 1,689 professors in those fields, or 20 percent of the entire 8,600 humanities professors nationwide, were asked to rate the universities on "the scholarly quality of their faculty."

The academic groups got responses from 1,064 faculty members. Here are the ratings on a scale where 5 meant the faculty was "distinguished," 4 "strong" and 3 "good." For each of the nine fields, all universities that scored above 4 are listed; at least five are listed in each field. Also shown are the colleges' scores transformed to a scale of 1 to 99, where 50 is the mean and about two-thirds of the ratings will fall between 40 and 60.

Art history (41 universities rated): New York University 4.9, 70; Harvard 4.9, 69; Columbia and Yale, both 4.7, 68; Princeton 4.5, 66; University of California-Berkeley 4.3, 64.

Civil rights violation case finally goes to jury after 15 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The legal odyssey of two civil rights workers, wrongfully charged 15 years ago with trying to overthrow the U.S. and Kentucky governments, enters its final stages this week when a federal jury begins considering their request for $8 million in damages.

The civil case filed by Alan and Margaret McSurely has outlived three of the five government officials they sued.

The McSurelys claim their constitutional rights were violated by the late Sen. John L. McClellan, three Senate staff members working for him and a Kentucky prosecutor.

In 1967, four months after the McSurelys arrived in Pikeville, Ky., to explain the militant black power movement to poor whites, their home was ransacked by armed sheriff's deputies who seized hundreds of documents. Some of the papers were later turned over to McClellan's Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, which was probing race riots.

From the day of the search, Aug. 11, 1967, the McSurelys' lives changed dramatically. They were charged with sedition and contempt of Congress. Their bedroom was dynamited. And from a diary seized from their home, McSurely — and the public — learned that his wife had been having an affair.

BUT THE McSurelys won every legal battle they faced.

The search was ruled unconstitutional, as was the Kentucky sedition law used to charge them. The contempt convictions were thrown out because they were based on the McSurelys' refusal to produce documents that were products of an illegal search.

"The conclusion is inescapable that the criminal prosecutions were instituted, at least in part, in order to stop plaintiffs' organizing activities in Pike County," a federal court said two months later in striking down the Kentucky sedition law.

M. McSurely

The McSurelys responded by filing the civil suit in 1969, charging that their constitutional rights of free speech, due process and protection against unwarranted search and seizure had been violated. They also are charging infringement of their Fifth Amendment rights.

The suit says their personal and business documents were seized illegally and turned over to the subcommittee; the panel issued subpoenas based on the illegally obtained information; and the couple suffered humiliation, mental pain, loss of employment and disruption of personal privacy and safety.

Senior Judge William B. Bryant of U.S. District Court will preside over the jury trial, which begins Wednesday.

THE DEFENDANTS are the estates of McClellan and two men who worked for his subcommittee, general counsel Jerome Adlerman and investigator John Brick. Also named as defendants are Donald F. O'Donnell, former chief counsel of the subcommittee, and Thomas Ratliff, the former Commonwealth attorney for Pike County assigned to prosecute the McSurelys.

Ratliff is represented by a private attorney. The Justice Department is representing the four Senate defendants.

The defendants are expected to contend they were carrying out their official duties.

Court records indicate that Ratliff will say he voluntarily joined the search party. A local judge signed a search warrant.

Further, Ratliff has said a federal judge gave him permission to give the Senate investigator copies of the seized documents that he had been told to hold in safekeeping.

At the time, Ratliff was running for lieutenant governor. He lost in the general election.

THE JUSTICE Department reportedly will attempt to show that the committee had a legitimate interest in some of the documents, including minutes of a meeting the McSurelys attended in Nashville, Tenn., in April 1967, just days before a racial disturbance broke out there.

McSurely, a 46-year-old softspoken man with a master's degree in psychology, is a mailman in Washington. He says he has been unable to find work in his field and believes that he has been blackballed from certain government jobs. Mrs. McSurely, also 46, is a secretary at a Washington hospital.

The couple is no longer married.

In court documents, the McSurelys said they drove to the homes of poor whites in Pike County, trying to convince the residents that they had the same economic interests as blacks. They suggested that the local residents "throw out the courthouse gang," impose a heavy tax on coal and use the money to improve conditions for the poor.

The night of the search, Mrs. McSurely looked out her kitchen window and spotted armed deputies approaching. Seconds later, they burst through the front door, read the sedition charge and began rummaging through the house, according to court documents.

When the search ended, the deputies had carted away 564 loose books, 22 boxes of books, 26 posters, pamphlets, a suitcase full of clothes and love letters sent to Mrs. McSurely.

The officers took a Bible, a Washington, D.C. telephone directory, the McSurelys' marriage certificate and a book entitled, "Tricks and Training for Cats."

SIXTEEN MONTHS after the search, on Dec. 13, 1968, eight sticks of dynamite exploded outside the McSurelys' bedroom window, showering them and their baby with glass. They left town in the middle of the night.

Three months later, they sat in front of McClellan, refusing to produce some of the documents that had been in their home. On May 5, 1969, the Senate held them in contempt.

They were found guilty June 26, 1970, but two years later, the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington overturned the conviction.

Meanwhile, the civil suit was stalled over a constitutional issue: whether a U.S. senator and his aides were immune from damages when performing their official duties.

That question went to the Supreme Court, which on June 26, 1978, refused to disturb an appeals court ruling that said the Senate defendants did not enjoy complete immunity.

Pershing II missile to be tested at White Sands

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Pershing II missile, the heart of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's nuclear modernization program but a failure in its first 1,000-mile flight test in July at Cape Canaveral, Fla., is to be fired for the second time this week.

This time, however, the beleaguered missile will be shot 200 miles almost straight up and less than 100 miles down White Sands Missile Test Range, N.M., according to Pentagon officials.

The unusual test of the missile's terminal guidance system was to take place after two long-range firings down the Florida range. But in an attempt to get the weapon back on its accelerated test program, the Army is going ahead with the short White Sands shot and will not attempt the next 1,000-mile firing until January.

The sophisticated guidance of the Pershing II is based on a radar correlator that compares an image of the target put into the warhead with the actual radar image received by the missile as it plunges toward the ground.

The warhead has the ability to change direction until the two images coincide.

Although the Army had some problems with initial tests of the guidance system four years ago, officials say those problems have been solved during simulator tests.

The White Sands shot will also test the newly designed motors in the missile's first and second stages. The original ones failed and caused the missile to explode 71 seconds after launch in July.

Only a test firing at the missile's full range will provide the maximum heat stress and pressure on the new motors, and such tests are necessary before the missile can be deployed with confidence.

Despite its problems, the Pershing II remains the Soviets' major aggravation about the U.S. nuclear arms buildup.

Moscow's concern stems from the missile's planned ability to deliver a nuclear warhead on Soviet soil in less than eight minutes from bases in West Germany.

The Pershing II and planned deployment of ground-launched cruise missiles to Western Europe led the Soviets to agree to talks in Geneva aimed at eliminating or reducing the number of intermediate-range nuclear missiles maintained by both superpowers in Europe.

Under a NATO plan approved in December, 1979, the United States was to deploy 108 Pershings in West Germany beginning in December.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Most transvestites lead normal heterosexual lives

Dear Dr. Solomon: A few years ago I worked with a man who told me he liked to wear a dress around the house because it was more comfortable than wearing men's clothing. I'm not sure whether he also dressed like a woman outside the house. Are all men who dress up like women homosexuals? — Roger, Milwaukee, Wis.

Dear Roger: Many transvestites (men who dress in women's clothing) are married, have children and are exclusively hetereosexual throughout their lives.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have just learned that my 13-year-old daughter has a tumor on the ovary. The doctor tells me that it probably isn't serious. I'd like to believe this is true, but I think he may just be trying to make me feel better. Isn't the fact that someone has a tumor on the ovary a serious condition? — Mrs. F.C, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. C.: I would not minimize the seriousness of an ovarian tumor, but the fact is that such tumors are usually benign in young girls. In fact, in the patients I see, about 80 percent of ovarian tumors are benign in girls under 15 years of age.

This may be the basis for the physician's statement that the condition is not very serious.

For Q.A.: I originally published a letter from Dr. Richad Sherman regarding phantom pain which appeared to come from amputated limbs. He was conducting a study of amputation not related to the military. I have received a great number of letters asking how one could help with the study. For that reason I am publishing the following:

Dr. Richard Sherman of the U.S. Army Medical Department is doing research on the feelings amputees notice which appear to come from the amputated limbs. Virtually all amputees have these feelings but little is known about them. The sensations frequently become so intense that they are exceedingly painful. The investigation is attempting to compare reports from amputees whose "phantom limbs" are pain free with those which are painful, so it is vital that those with and without phantom pain participate in the study. Dr. Sherman is already surveying veterans whose amputations are directly related to military service and now needs to hear from people whose amputations were not related to the military. This will permit evaluations of the effect of military service (as well as combat) on phantom feelings. If you are an amputee whose amputation was not related to the military, and you would like to participate please send your name and address to: Dr. Richard Sherman, Department of Clinical Investigation, D.D. Eisenhower Amry Medical Center, Fort Gordon, Ga. 30905.

He will send you a two-page survey to fill out and return in an enclosed stamped envelope. If interested, please respond regardless of whether or not you have problems with your amputation.

For Mary, Nashville, Tenn.: Not only may sleeping pills not be effective, they may actually interfere with regular sleeping patterns if taken over an extended period of time.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Reagan tries out one-liners

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — President Reagan couldn't wait until he got to this show business town before trying out a routine of comedy "one-liners" during an earlier campaign stop.

From the stage set up in the gymnasium of the Charles M. Russell High School in Great Falls, Mont., last week, Reagan began a political speech with a patter of jokes.

"Some of my hard-working aides recommended against leaving the capital and coming all the way out here. I said 'OK, we'll flip a coin to decide whether to visit your beautiful state or stay in Washington,'" the president said. "I had to flip 14 times before it came out right."

"I said 'boys, we're going where the people think big and the sky's the limit.' They all headed for Tip O'Neill's office."

"Besides getting to come to Montana, there are some other advantages to being president," Reagan said. "On the way out here I told Air Force One's pilot to fly low over Mt. Rushmore. I just wanted to see if they were adding any new faces."

"Seriously, though, it really is refreshing to see the Rockies again," he said. "You know, we don't have anything like that in Washington. We have one mountain. The big spenders have been working on it for 40 years. It's called the national debt."

"It's also wonderful again to see the incredible beauty of this state and of the wilderness and I don't feel so bad now about where we're sending Tip and the Democrats next Tuesday," Reagan said in a reference to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, the Democratic leader and the midterm congressional election on Tuesday.

Each of the president's punchlines got the intended round of laughter and applause.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
©1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ72 ♡73 ◇AKQ1065 ♣8
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	?

What action do you take?

A.—Don't risk losing the spade suit! If you timidly bid three diamonds, that could easily happen. Make a takeout double. Should partner bid clubs, you certainly are strong enough to correct to diamonds, thus making it clear that your double was based on diamonds and spades.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ10764 ♡7 ◇J105 ♣985
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	2 ♠*	3 ♡	3 ♠

*preemptive
What action do you take?

A.—There is an old adage that applies here: "Once you have described your hand with a limit bid, don't bid again!" Your preemptive leap to two spades described your hand exactly. For all you know, partner's bid of three spades might have been a tactical ploy to jockey the opponents into four hearts, which he intends doubling. Leave matters to him—pass.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♡J10 ◇AJ9842 ♣J1062
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—The hand was developed awkwardly. The one bid you can't make is three diamonds—that shows a sub-minimum two over one response with little outside the diamond suit. That limits your choice of responses to three clubs or a raise to three hearts. We prefer the latter despite our short trumps, because we have two honors in the suit. Three clubs virtually commits the hand to game and we do not have enough strength to do that. Of course, should partner try three no trump over three hearts, we would be happy to let him play there.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J9 ♡AJ4 ◇J1076 ♣KQ98
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Don't persist with no trump. Partner has shown a minimum opening bid with six spades and four hearts, so you may be unable to make nine tricks before the opponents have five. All you can do now is take a preference to three spades—the suit in which you have a known eight-card fit. If partner wishes to push on to game, that's his decision.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ10 ♡K762 ◇Q3 ♣A987
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—First, if you believe that partner's one diamond response to your one club opening bid denies a four-card major, you are playing a system that is alien to us. If you agree that partner could have a major suit, then your rebid is clear—one heart must be superior to one no trump, since the latter runs the risk of missing a 4-4 heart fit.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ983 ♡AQ5 ◇83 ♣A102
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—While we would not fault you greatly if you simply bid four spades, we feel that your three aces justify one slam try. Bid four clubs. If partner doesn't cooperate by bidding four diamonds but simply signs off with four spades, pass. If partner does make a diamond cue-bid, try once more with four hearts.

If you're concerned about rising grocery costs, here's something you can do about it.

On November 2, you can make a positive step toward helping hold the line on rising grocery costs.

Proposition 3, one of six proposed Constitutional Amendments which will be offered on the ballot, would correct the tax exemption for agricultural machinery and equipment. The effect of passage of this amendment will be to lower production costs for food and fiber. In the long run, this will be a positive step we can take to help hold the line on grocery price increases.

For you and for your family, both now and especially in the future, this may be one of the most important votes you'll ever cast.

An important election

The political teapot in Texas has been violently bubbling for weeks and, if predictions on the part of a number of nationally-syndicated columnists and astute political observers prove correct, Tuesday's general election will be significant not only to the Lone Star State but also to the future political fabric of the nation.

Texas, long a stronghold of conservative Democratic ideology, officially became recognized as a two-party state when William P. Clements Jr. won election as governor in 1978. He is — notably — the state's first Republican governor since Reconstruction.

Along came Ronald Reagan in 1980 and carried Texas in what has been described as a major political shift toward fiscal conservatism. Two years after taking office, however, it remains to be seen how voters will react at the polls to the president's political performance.

In a way, Tuesday's election will be a test for not only the continuation of the trend toward a true two-party state in Texas, but also as a political thermometer for the Reagan administration. The recession settled into Texas in the summer this year and now, in some parts of the state, inflation and unemployment are not just distant problems occurring in other parts of the nation and witnessed by Texans only in daily newspapers and on the television evening news.

In a recent column, nationally-syndicated columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak noted that "no Democrat has been elected president in this century without carrying Texas." That's merely more substantiation to the importance of Texas in the electoral process.

On a national level there's no doubt of the importance of Tuesday's election. The political makeup of the Congress and of high-level state offices across the nation will be changed and with it, the direction of the nation could be altered. That could have an impact on how the Congress and the states will work with Reagan on future initiatives.

The election certainly will bear watching.

Nuclear negligence

The United States likes to think of itself as one of the most progressive, inventive and imaginative nations in the world. We have reason to take pride in our many achievements, but in some areas we have not measured up with the rest of the world.

Development of atomic energy for peaceful purposes is one of our shortcomings. While other nations have been pushing ahead, the United States has been dragging its feet.

John Chamberlain of The Hearst Newspapers wrote in a recent column: "Ronald Reagan has spoken up for nuclear-powered generation of electricity, but the movement to invest in new atomic plants in the United States languishes. Such is not the case with the development of the peaceful atom in the rest of the world."

Chamberlain went on to point out that "The French, for example, have 30 reactors hard at work generating 34.3 percent of the country's electricity." One of the reasons is that the leaders of France do not pay any attention to those who demonstrate against the development of atomic power.

Other nations Chamberlain cited as alert to the potential of nuclear energy were Belgium, Sweden, Finland and Switzerland. All have practical plans to get a high percentage of their electrical power from the atom in the next few years.

Why should the United States lag behind? One of the reasons is that so many Americans equate atomic power with the atomic bomb. The Three Mile Island accident prompted outcries against production of nuclear energy and caused some people to forget that the atom can be a powerful and constructive force if channeled in peaceful directions.

Secretary of State George Shultz put it well the other day when he said, "It is in our interest to see peaceful nuclear power used.

"It is cheap, it is efficient and it is safe."

It is time to put an end to our nation's nuclear negligence.

Another View:

A Lebanese solution?

The administration is right to set itself a tight deadline, the end of the year, for getting all the troops of the PLO, Israel and Syria out of Lebanon. Abused for years, Lebanon deserves no less. The momentum gotten up at such tragic cost last summer should not be dissipated carelessly. But it's not going to be easy.

The difficulty lies in squaring the formal American commitment to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Lebanon with a visible and regrettable American tendency to go along with foreign occupation and intervention. Not alone, the United States has acquiesced in Syria's occupation of Lebanon's Bekaa Valley for the last eight years, to the point that the Syrians may wonder how serious Washington is about getting them out now. The United States has accepted, moreover, that Israel has a special security interest in southern Lebanon. Do the Israelis wonder, too?

If Washington is serious, then it will find itself in some hard bargaining not just with Israel but also with Syria and, indirectly, the PLO. Israel's special concern is to trade off its Lebanon presence for as thick a residual political tie with a reluctant Lebanon as the traffic will bear. Syria's concern, presumably, is to ensure that its interest in reclaiming the Israeli-annexed Golan Heights is not lost in the shuffle. The PLO's concern is to engage the United States' attention for its West Bank ambitions.

The question of withdrawal may seem narrow and military, but actually it is broad and political. That all the parties want something from the United States gives the administration its considerable leverage in the Lebanese context. It also puts on the administration the considerable burden of arranging to fill the dangerous vacuum that surely will be left if the foreign troops depart soon.

The Lebanese will fill part of the vacuum — and here the Americans can quietly help President Amin Gemayel. Another part of it should be filled by United Nations peacekeeping forces, who, being the instrument of the Security Council, are better fit for their difficult duty than the Israelis are given to acknowledge. A third part will have to be filled by the Italian, French and American participants (and perhaps others?) in the multinational force now policing Beirut. France, in particular, should be encouraged to develop a major presence.

In Washington President Reagan must resolve the tug of war between the State Department, which sees the diplomatic value of a further deployment, and the Pentagon, which thinks mainly of the risks.

Lebanon is not the center ring in the Middle East; the Israeli-Palestinian question is. Ultimately, a Lebanese solution depends on a prior Palestinian solution. The other Arab states, traditionally disdainful of Lebanon, have always felt this way. Some things are possible in Lebanon, however, right now, and they must be done.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Mob is chief suspect in video-game fakery

WASHINGTON — Counterfeit versions of the popular video games Pac Man, Donkey Kong and Centipede are popping up in arcades across the nation faster than federal agents can gobble them up.

Jack Anderson

Though no definite link to the Mob has been established, officials of the Justice Department's Organized Crime Division suspect that underworld bosses — long involved in the vending-machine and jukebox business — are up to their shoulder holsters in the illicit business of cloning the ubiquitous quarter-eaters. Wherever there's a fast buck to be made, the Mob muscles in sooner or later — and the market in video-game machines and cartridges appears to be limitless.

Significantly, it was FBI agents and attorneys from an Organized Crime Task Force who raided a large New Jersey-based manufacturer and distributor of video games last July. The G-men lugged off dozens of machines that bore striking resemblances to the popular Pac Man, Donkey Kong and Centipede games.

No one suggested that the New Jersey company, U.S. Amusements, has underworld ties. The federal raiders were operating under a revised federal law that makes unauthorized copying of video games a crime. The big boys of the video-game industry — Atari, Midway and Williams Electronics — complain that their copyrights have been infringed.

According to a sworn statement, an FBI undercover agent visited U.S. Amusements last January and spoke with a salesman named David Gorfman.

"Prior to giving Gorfman $1,200 as a down payment on six games, Gorfman gave me a tour of the entire facilities of U.S. Amusements, where illegal video games were manufactured and stored," the agent's affidavit stated.

"Gorfman stated that the president of the Philippines had recently 'expelled' all video games from that country and that U.S. Amusements was in possession of a large number of illegal video games that had been shipped into this country from the Philippines through JFK International (Airport)," the statement continues.

The day after his first visit, the FBI agent returned and paid Gorfman $4,150 more, according to the affidavit; he "received two illegal 'Puck Man' video games infringing on the 'Pac Man' copyright, one illegal 'Galaxian' game and one illegal 'Caterpillar' video game which infringes on the copyright of the 'Centipede' video game."

The four machines were examined by the makers of Pac Man and Centipede, and they "determined that the games unquestionably infringed on their copyrights."

In February, U.S. customs agents opened two large cartons at JFK Airport. Consigned to U.S. Amusements from the Philippines, the cartons contained 44 illegal Pac Man and Galaxian circuit boards. As part of the undercover investigation, the shipment was turned over to a driver sent by the company.

In March, the FBI agent returned to U.S. Amusements and bought 10 additional illegal video games, according to the affidavit; in July, he bought 30 more counterfeit machines: six Miss Pac Mans, six Kong Gorillas, five Dig Dugs, six Kangaroos, two Bull Frogs and five Zaxxons.

Footnote: U.S. Amusements' attorney, Barry Slotnik, told my associate Tony Capaccio that the FBI man's affidavit was "very misleading." He said, "We all know what hype is." Slotnik also said the company's games were "absolutely not counterfeit." He added that an engineer checked out U.S. Amusements' Puck Man game and pronounced it "a little better play than Pac Man."

MUTUAL ADMIRATION SOCIETY: The bigshots at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have elevated bureaucratic backscratching to a fine art. They give each other cash bonuses for outstanding performance.

Topping the list of 37 senior executives who got a total of $268,000 in cash bonuses last month was William J. Dircks, the agency's executive director for operations. Dircks, who, with the NRC chairman, makes the final decision on bonus babies, approved an $11,000 cash award to himself.

The initial selection of bonus recipients is made by a "Performance Review Board" of 14 members. Seven of the panelists were awarded cash payments: two got $9,500, one got $8,500 and four got $7,000 apiece.

An agency spokesman insisted that the awards were all made at arm's length. Dircks' bonus was recommended by NRC Chairman Nunzio J. Palladino, for example, and when individual members of the performance panel were being considered for the cash awards, they excused themselves from passing judgment.

WATCH ON WASTE: A "temporary fix" for the Air National Guard will cost the taxpayers $60 million, while doing little for the Guard. It involves the purchases of some JT-3D jet engines for installation on a fleet of aging KC-135 cargo planes.

There are a number of problems. For one, to get the used engines, the Pentagon is buying an entire fleet of used 707 jets. The planes' engines are 20 years old and only slightly more efficient than the ones they'll be replacing. They'll also need major overhauls to make them safe enough to operate.

There's also a mystery to the $60 million deal. The Pentagon didn't want the venerable engines; it would prefer newer, quieter, safer and more efficient engines. Members of the House didn't want them, either.

Sources tell me the reason for the peculiar purchase was to please several senators who want the Guard to be ready to fly, and the House didn't think it was worth putting up a fight.

INSIDE REPORT:

Unemployment a major factor in election

BENSALEM, Pa. — The enormity of unemployment as the cutting issue in Tuesday's election was vividly portrayed in this blue-collar, middle-to-lower-middle-income Bucks County suburb of Philadelphia where even registered Republicans now narrowly favor the Democrats as the best party to "reduce unemployment."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Calling the president's success in cutting inflation and interest rates "transitory," a tax accountant's 44-year-old wife who is a registered Democrat but switched to Ronald Reagan in 1980, summed up the bipartisan sentiment: "This unemployment is dangerous. We know that many types of work around here like the steel industry will probably never recover."

She personified Reagan's vulnerability in a mid-term election that could shatter his control over Congress. On Nov. 2 she will desert the Republicans and vote for former Democratic Rep. Peter Kostmayer, running to recapture the seat he lost to incumbent Republican Jim Coyne two years ago.

The accountant's wife was one of 48 registered voters questioned by us and interviewers for Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research in this snug bedroom suburb where unemployment tops 15 percent. That high rate is partly explained by massive layoffs at U.S. Steel's Fairless works. Our political scouting expedition was targeted on Precinct E 5, which swung from 57 percent for Jimmy Carter in 1976 to 64 percent for Reagan four years later.

The voters we questioned conformed to the precinct. They voted for Reagan over Carter by 2-to-1. A principal factor at work was the 1980 blue-collar phenomenon — Democratic defections to Reagan at a time of soaring inflation and interest rates.

But Reagan's success in radically reducing inflation and the cost of borrowing money cuts little ice here today, denying the president any offset to rampant unemployment. Asked whether "the Democrats or the Republicans in Congress would do better in reducing unemployment," the 17 registered Republicans answering the question split 9-to-8 in choosing the Democrats. Among Democrats and independents, the choice went to the Democratic Party by a better than 10-to-1 ratio.

A 65-year-old housewife who is a registered Republican captured the mood of the anti-Republican tide sweeping Bensalem. Asked whether continued Republican control of the federal government "will force even more Americans out of work," a question answered affirmatively 2-to-1 by the voters we interviewed, she unloosed a tirade: "From way back, as long as I can remember, whenever I vote Republican they have always brought more unemployment and more hard times. I should learn better." She plans to support Kostmayer.

Our interviews showed that the unemployment issue has taken on an intensity that obliterates other political factors. Reagan's favorable rating, for example, is only a shade under 50 percent: his overall job rating is positive; his handling of inflation gets strong 2-to-1 support; and on the seminal question of which party could "best handle the economy in general," the result is a 50-50 tie.

That points to deep voter disillusion with both parties. When we asked whether voters agreed or disagreed that the Democrats "just criticize the Republican programs without suggesting alternatives of their own," almost 50 percent agreed.

The voters in Precinct E 5, in short, expect no miracles from a Republican bloodbath, even though their fixation on unemployment strongly points in the direction of just such a bloodbath for next Tuesday.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 1, the 305th day of 1982. There are 60 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 1, 1952, the United States exploded the first hydrogen bomb in a test at Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands.

On this date:

In 1509, Michelangelo's paintings on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel were first exhibited.

In 1755, an earthquake struck Lisbon, Portugal, killing 60,000 people.

In 1765, the Stamp Act went into effect in the British colonies, prompting stiff resistance from American colonials.

In 1963, South Vietnam's president, Ngo Dinh Diem, was assassinated during an army coup.

Ten years ago: Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern accused President Nixon of making "undercover deals" with big business to assure his re-election.

Five years ago: Amsterdam police announced that abducted Dutch millionaire Marcus Caranza had been released.

CHARLEY REESE

Put elections back in hands of the people

I propose an election reform. It is simple and it impinges on no one's freedom. Yet, I think if adopted, it would go a long way toward returning control of American government to the American people.

Charley Reese

My proposed reform is simply this: No candidate for any office shall be allowed to spend any money in an election campaign except those funds contributed by individuals or firms which permanently reside within the legal boundaries of his district.

In other words, let us finance our own politicians. Let the people in Texas fund Texas candidates and the people in Florida fund Florida candidates. Let's stop this business of nation-wide fund-raising which has taken control of politics away from the people in the districts.

In 1975, the Federal Election Commission upheld the right of Sun Co., Inc., to form a political action committee (PAC) to solicit money from employees and funnel it to favored candidates. This was a correct decision. The AFL-CIO, as well as several political organizations, had been doing it for years.

The problem is that these PACs have proliferated and now dominate the American election process. In eight years, corporate PACs increased from 89 to 1,415. Heaven only knows how many poitical PACs of both left and right persuasion now exist. Computerized fund-raising has become a major industry. In the 1979-80 Congressional election, corporate PACs raised $33.9 million and labor $25.7 million. I couldn't find a figure for the other PACs built around single issues.

My point is that the people who best know a candidate are the people in his district. There is an axoim in the political campaign consulting business: If the candidate can't raise the money, he can't be elected. Obviously, people unwilling to finance a man's campaign are not likely to vote for him.

But the PACs provide an outside source of funds. Even if the people of means in a district think a man is a scoundrel, it is possible, theoretically at least, to raise enough PAC money from outside the district to run a media campaign that would overwhelm an able, but less well-heeled candidate.

I know I'm raising this issue just when conservatives are beginning to utilize PACs effectively, but I think the principle is more important than any tactical advantage which will only be temporary. People in one state should not meddle in the congressional races of another state. In the long run, making all candidates more accountable to the people in their districts will produce better public officials than a system of mailing bucks across the nation on an ideological basis.

I think Sen. Edward Kennedy is a disgrace in more ways than one but I don't live in Massachusetts and I have no right to interfere in their election process even though his votes affect the nation as a whole. Kennedy is Massachusetts' problem or blessing, however the people there perceive him, and we should stop this business of interfering in other states' political races.

There has been talk of limiting the amount of money candidates can accept from PACs but that's only begging the question and avoids completely the problem of wealthy people in one area funding a candidate in another. Simply limit all funds to those contributed by people or firms permanently residing within the boundaries of the district. That will eliminate the outside influence, but more importantly, it will bind the political hand and foot to the people he represents and who know him best instead of to special interest groups with fat bank accounts.

As it is now, special interests play too big a role in the political process. About 30,000 lawyers are members of the Washington, D.C., bar association, most of them members so they can lobby the federal government. Not a one, of course, is on retainer to the American people.

Banking industry PACs contribute to incumbents on banking committees; labor PACs contribute to pro-labor candidates; feminist PACs contribute to pro-feminist candidates; etc. The people in a given district are too often manipulated by expensive media campaigns financed by people in other states.

Accountability ought to be the guiding principle in politics and making candidates dependent on their constituents for funds will darn sure make them more accountable. If we apply this principle down the line, then we can cut off state legislators from the lobbyists' purses in the state capitals, too.

American, Japanese officials agree on rules for high technology trade

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

TOKYO — American and Japanese officials have agreed on ground rules for trade in the most significant potential area of conflict between the two nations: high technology.

Although requiring approval by the leadership of both countries, it is the first economic agreement reached by American and Japanese working-level officials since June and came on the heels of a collapse of negotiations over Japanese barriers to imports of beef, citrus fruit, and cigarettes, all within the last two weeks.

Clyde Prestowitz, deputy assistant secretary of commerce, said the agreement, announced here Saturday, represents an expression of "some political will on both sides to attempt to keep the high technology area from becoming a sore point of trade frictions" between the United States and Japan.

If approved by both governments "it (would be) a limited step forward but not the end of the road," Prestowitz added.

The agreement calls for both governments to accept a set of principles covering trade in such high-technology fields as semiconductors, computers, and telecommunications equipment.

Subsidiaries of U.S. companies incorporated in Japan and Japanese companies incorporated in the United States would receive the same treatment as national companies in each country from each host government, he said.

Both governments also would agree not to create "distortions in trade" as a result of domestic policies they adopt to stimulate particular industries, Prestowitz said. Whatever incentives or economic benefits each government provides to its own national companies would be made available to resident foreign subsidiaries in each country, as well, he explained.

Prestowitz indicated that the "equal treatment" principle would allow U.S. companies incorporated in Japan to join Japanese government-supported research and development of a "fifth-generation computer" and other government-backed research projects here. In return, Japanese companies incorporated in the United States would not be denied contracts on the grounds that sales of high-technology goods involve U.S. national defense items.

Referring to an incident last year in which Fujitsu, a Japanese electronics company, was denied a contract to sell optical fiber communications equipment to American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Prestowitz noted that AT&T had announced that it rejected Fujitsu's low bid for reasons of national security.

"I don't know why AT&T said that," he commented. "AT&T has no responsibility for the national security of the United States. I suspect it was an excuse to give the contract to someone else."

Under the new agreement, a U.S.-Japan working group would be established to allow Japanese companies like Fujitsu to protest decisions of American companies like that of AT&T, Prestowitz said. The bilateral working group, he added, would attempt to resolve "this kind of problem."

The agreement also contains provisions, which Prestowitz refused to spell out, to ensure greater access of American high-technology goods to the Japanese market and guarantee the opportunity of companies in each country to license or obtain technology developed in the other country.

Data on trade and specific high-technology items also would be gathered to pinpoint potential areas of trade friction, he said.

First on the list for data collection is semiconductors, an area in which the United States suffered a deficit of between $100 million and $150 million with Japan last year, Prestowitz said.

Prestowitz said equal opportunity in high-technology trade was especially crucial because the industries involved are enjoying faster growth and more rapid increases in productivity than other industries in Japan and the United States.

British Labor legislator demands report from Thatcher on intelligence service's state

LONDON (AP) — An opposition Labor Party legislator is pressing his demand that Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher make a public statement on the state of Britain's reportedly leaky intelligence service.

Laborite lawmaker Edward Leadbitter began campaigning for a public disclosure last week after The New York Times quoted U.S. intelligence sources as saying a Briton arrested for spying at the sensitive electronic espionage center at Cheltenham had been sending key secrets to the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Thatcher made only one public comment on the case following the arrest last July of Geoffrey Arthur Prime, telling the House of Commons that the incident was serious.

Pressed to make another statement after the newspaper disclosures last week, Mrs. Thatcher declined, noting that Prime was awaiting trial. The law prohibits detailed public discussion in Britain of a particular case when a trial is pending.

Given the law, it appeared unlikely she would alter her stand despite Leadbitter's renewed appeal this weekend.

In asking for a public statement, the Laborite claimed the law was being used to cover up security problems.

"It does seem to me that there is an extensive amount of presumed privilege at the higher levels of our service for which the establishment is hellbent on covering up," he said.

Leadbitter was the first lawmaker to raise in Parliament in 1979 the case of Anthony Blunt, the former royal art adviser later stripped of his knighthood when his 1964 confession of spying for the Soviet Union in World War II was finally made public.

He said his concern about British security services arose from U.S. press reports that leaks from Britain included the location of British and American nuclear warheads and the names of intelligence agents.

The New York Times account said a scandal was about to break.

Opponents deserve protection

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight arrested Salvadoran opposition leaders deserve at least the legal protections given to soldiers accused of killing six Americans in El Salvador, the ACLU and a human rights group say.

The ACLU and Americas Watch noted Sunday that Salvadoran national guardsmen implicated in the killings of four American churchwomen in 1980 and two U.S. labor advisers in 1981 were handled through civilian courts and none has yet to be convicted of a crime.

But the Salvadoran opposition leaders are being held by the army and are slated for trial before a military tribunal on terrorism charges, according to El Salvador's Defense Ministry.

In a letter released Sunday, the ACLU and Americas Watch urged Secretary of State George P. Shultz to move forcefully to assure that the eight leftists and labor leaders are tried in civilian courts and the whereabouts of seven others who have disappeared are revealed.

Huskies, USC tumble

By Associated Press

It should have been a warning to the Washington Huskies when, after six weeks at the top, they dropped from No. 1 to No. 2 in last week's Associated Press college football poll despite a 10-3 triumph over Texas Tech. Before the week was over, things got a whole lot worse.

Where the Huskies will be ranked this week following Saturday's 43-31 trouncing by Stanford is anybody's guess, but it certainly won't be No. 1 or No. 2.

"If you told me that we'd score 31 points and lose, I would be quite honest and say that would be a mistake," said Coach Don James. "It just wasn't our day. We started out in good shape (a 17-7 lead in the second period), but somehow we lost momentum. We just weren't able to stop Elway."

Stanford quarterback John Elway completed 20 of 30 passes for 265 yards and two touchdowns, but it was Mike Dotterer's 46-yard touchdown run that triggered a run of four touchdowns and a field goal for a 37-17 advantage. Vincent White, who scored the last of those four TDs on a 3-yard run, added Stanford's final score on a brilliant 76-yard punt return.

Dotterer carried 20 times for 106 of Stanford's 185 rushing yards. "When we throw the football successfully, we can blend the running game into that," said Coach Paul Wiggin. "Don't think the influence of John Elway didn't help our running game today. And our offensive line played very well against a great Washington defense."

Washington's demise reduced the list of undefeated-untied teams to five as top-rated Pitt swamped Louisville 63-14, third-ranked Georgia trimmed winless Memphis State 34-3 and extended the nation's longest losing streak to 15 games, No. 4 Southern Methodist flattened Texas A&M 47-9, fifth-ranked Arkansas downed Rice 24-6 and seventh-ranked Arizona State defeated No. 12 Southern California 17-10.

Two unbeaten-but-tied teams also prevailed, No. 11 UCLA routing Oregon 40-12 and No. 13 LSU crushing Mississippi 45-8.

Elsewhere, sixth-ranked Nebraska hammered Kansas 52-0, No. 8 Penn State buried Boston College 52-17, ninth-ranked Alabama turned back Mississippi State 20-12 and Maryland upset No. 10 North Carolina 31-24.

4-5A wonders, Who's No. 2?

Nobody in District 4-5A is asking "Who's No. 1?" That's a question that has already been settled. Odessa Permian again reigns supreme, but some suspicious minds fear the unbeaten Panthers may not have their heart in Friday's final with Odessa High.

After all, what do they have to prove, the reasoning goes. It's a matter of concern in Midland, since if Odessa High should upset the Panthers, both the Black Cats and Bronchos would represent 4-5A in the playoffs.

"YOU DON'T need to worry about Permian going all out against Odessa," says Midland Schools Athletic Director Gil Bartosh. "You know I coached over at Permian and, competitively, there's no love lost between those two schools."

Bartosh, as a matter of fact, took the Panthers to one of their state titles.

There's about as much chance of Permian playing dead for Odessa as there is of Midland rolling over for Lee this Friday night in Memorial Stadium.

AS A MATTER of fact, the way the Bulldogs have it figured, if Permian beats Odessa, the Dawgs can share second place with the Rebels and Bronchos, and San Angelo, if the Bobcats beat Big Spring.

The only teams that don't have a playoff prayer Friday night are Abilene and Abilene Cooper, who will be playing in the Key City, another game where bragging rights for the next 12 months go to the winner.

Odessa, which upset San Angelo, 17-14, last week to stay tied for second, actually has the inside track, so the Hosses won't lack for incentive. By virtue of Odessa's 10-7 win over Lee in the district opener, a tie for second with the Rebels would send OHS into bidistrict play, if they finished alone in second with the Rebs.

The good news, bad news aspect is that Odessa hasn't beaten Permian in 18 years. The bad—the Hosses have the law of averages on their side.

FOR COACH Spike Dykes, there's no time to waste pondering what might happen 20 miles west Friday. The crosstown rival Bulldogs are coming off a 21-0 victory over Abilene, a game in which the Purple found an offense to go with its defense. The Bulldogs have run the ball with some success before, but quarterback Mark Page added a new demension to the attack with an 11-for-18 passing night which accounted for 178 yards.

Midland Lee, which struggled to an 8-7 win over Big Spring the week before, a win that came in the fading moments, rediscovered its offense in manhandling physically-impressive-but-artistically-a-disaster Abilene Cooper, 28-3.

Lee piled up 306 yards offensively and quarterbacks Paul Cox and Mike Mercurio passed for three TDs. Cox hit Mike Barton on a five-yarder and Damon Polk on a 35-yarder while Mercurio's payoff pitch was a 27-yarder to Luther Johnson.

It shapes up as quite possibly one of the best Midland-Lee games in a decade. —TED BATTLES

SMU, Arkansas all alone at top

By Associated Press

Southern Methodist and Arkansas — unbeaten, high flying and nationally ranked — hit the road Saturday for games they will be overwhelmingly expected to win.

SMU, ranked No. 4 in The Associated Press poll and a good bet to climb higher after Stanford's upset of Washington, takes its 8-0 credentials to Houston to joust the 0-8 Rice Owls.

Rice gave Arkansas a scare Saturday, leading 6-0 at halftime before succumbing 24-6.

Arkansas, No. 5 ranked and expected to soar higher, takes its 7-0 ledger to Waco to play the Baylor Bears, who have fallen on hard times with a 2-5-1 record.

Baylor was bounced 30-15 by Tulane Saturday.

SMU ripped Texas A&M 47-9 on regional television as Eric Dickerson ran wild with 200 yards on 14 carries for touchdown runs of 9, 80 and 79 yards.

From the moment quarterback Gary Kubiak went down with a leg injury in the first period, little went right for A&M in SMU's 47-9 romp.

The No. 4-ranked Mustangs own a 5-0 ledger, a half game ahead of Arkansas, and are 8-0 overall.

TEXAS FULLBACK Carl Robinson says the Longhorns were at the crossroads this weekend and apparently turned the right direction with a 27-0 thrashing of Texas Tech.

"It was a big crossroads for everybody, especially the backs," he said after the Steers bounced back from consecutive losses to Oklahoma and Southern Methodist.

"We took it upon ourselves to go out and prove some people wrong. Folks were saying we were slow, and we didn't have quality backs. We have a lot of quality backs."

With Darryl Clark's 85 yards leading the way, Texas rolled up 279 yards on the ground while the defense was treating the Raiders like sandlot patsies.

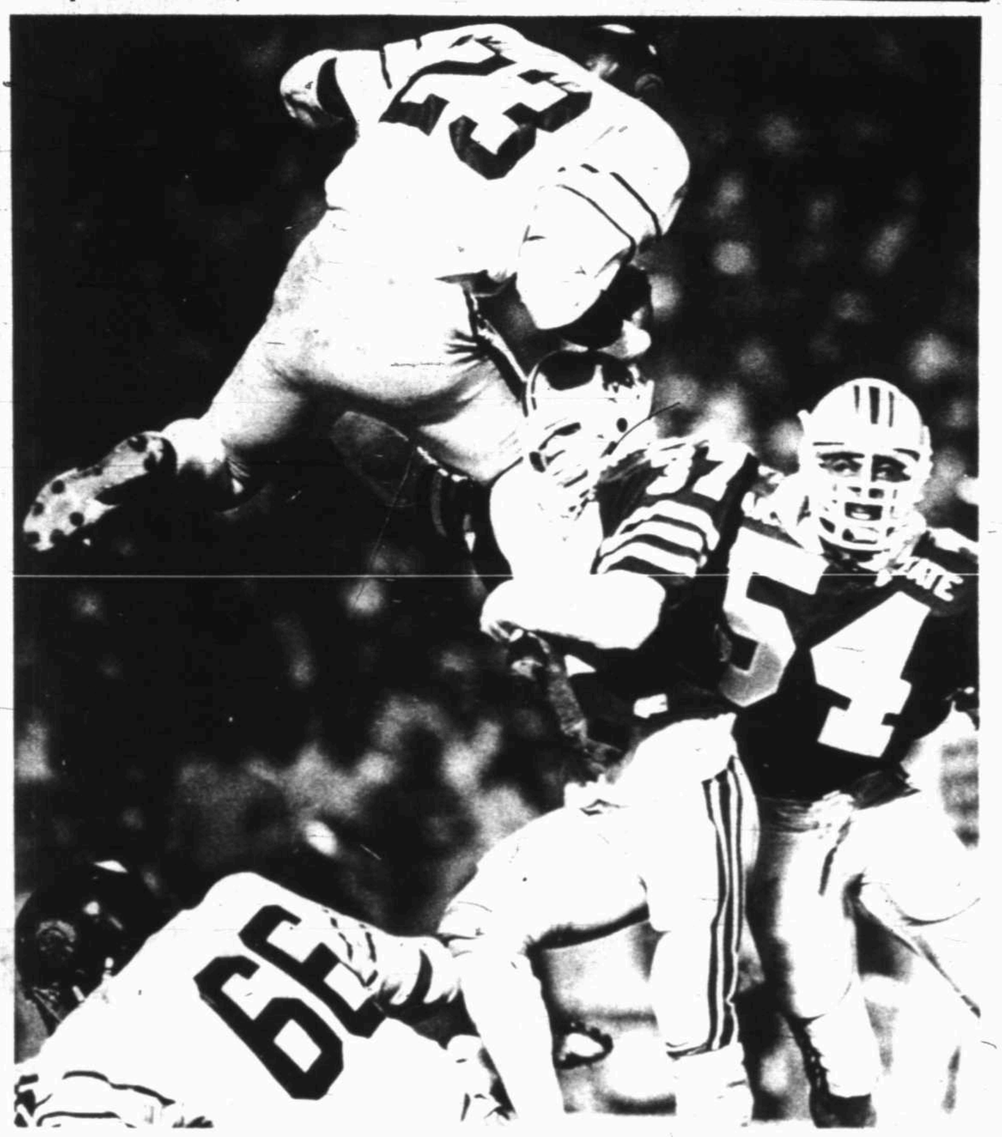

"We just can't seemed to get turned around," said Baylor coach Grant Teaff.

Indeed, the Bears have fallen on hard times as their 30-15 loss to Tulane would indicate.

"Tulane was in the same situation going into the game (playing poorly) and they did a good job of getting back on the right track," Teaff said. "We stopped ourselves ... It seems that's the way it's been going this year."

The Bears had four turnovers and yielded over 400 yards.

HEAD COACH Bill Yeoman says one thing had better improve before his Cougars go to Austin — their pass defense.

Owners, players haggle over loot

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Specfal Correspondent

We all should have the problems of the National Football League club owners and players — how to divide the $2.1 billion lying there on the table just for the grabbing.

That's $2.1 billion, spelled with a "b."

A lot of us who endured World War II can recall when that was more than the national budget.

But after 41-day-old strike, the parties were still haggling well past the deadline when most Monday newspapers went to press. Before that, nobody made a move for a week or more.

The loot, guarantees from major television network contracts, just lies there, thousands dripping away with each turn of the clock.

What a waste.

THE ISSUE should have been settled weeks ago, even before the scheduled season opening. But no. Both sides had to test their muscle.

Ed Garvey, who directs the Players Association, came out swinging a wagon tongue, demanding 55 percent of all proceeds and a salary scale and fund operated by the players themselves. The shocked owners went on the defense quickly to challenge the union's strength.

It became a power struggle. On a smaller scale, it was the Yanks and Russians glaring at each other across the ocean with their nuclear triggers cocked.

It's all been pretty silly and useless with invectives and stalling on both sides. Over the weekend, negotiator Sam Kagel returned from San Francisco and discovered a few faint heartbeats of optimism.

We'll give up $1.2 billion of the pot and let you control 37 percent of it, the owners said. Make it 80 percent, countered the players, and throw in some protection for the old guys.

Well into the night, they were squabbling over pocket change and trivialities, while the big bills sat on the table untouched.

SUCH IS the law of labor-management negotiations, and this is a big one like Chrysler, General Motors and U.S. Steel.

The human and common sense factors are sacrificial lambs. Egos, greed and traditions take over. Reputations of the negotiators are at stake. Each must come out a winner. Losing is unconscionable.

It's reasonable to believe that, after a six weeks' loss, a compromise probably will be reached and NFL games will be on the screens next Sunday.

Were all those silent Sundays and Monday nights worth it?

Garvey is not going to get his scale. He may get a fraction of it but not the operating pool he wanted. The owners are going to have to make up the inequities in the players' salaries, but they won't break the union.

The agreement, if adopted, is one that could have been hammered out in a week if saner heads had prevailed. It's a normal union contract with base minimums, protection for the old guys and opportunity to bargain for the superstars.

Who could have envisioned that those who run the NFL, richest and best administered of all sports governing bodies, could have allowed its house to turn into such shambles.

THIS IS the league that had Pete Rozelle, the consummate administrator and public relations genius, as commissioner. The owners, unlike baseball, are a tightly knit group with few internal animosities.

Its $2.1 billion TV contract, plus regular sellout gates give owners great security. They don't have the expense of minor-league training. Their players come ready-made from the college campus. Plus that, big companies are itching to pay $200,000 a minute to sell their products on the arm of a quarterback. Fans are willing to pawn their eyes and ears in front of a television set from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. and 9 to midnight Monday evenings.

They have it made. So where's the hitch? Half a season has been lost — all for the want of a tenpenny nail.

Chaps face Cisco Tuesday

Midland College, which usually opens against the Jayvees of one of West Texas four-year colleges and comes away leaving everyone wondering if they are really that good, takes on its toughest opening game foe ever when it faces Cisco Junior College at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Langford Chaparral Center.

It is only fitting that the defending National Junior College Athletic Association should begin against an opponent of this caliber. It was Cisco that Midland had to beat in the Region V finals to earn the trip to Hutchinson, Kan., where they completed their Cindarella season.

Reserved season tickets for the Chaparral home games is $40. It was incorrectly listed in Sunday's edition.

It took a final minute surge for MC to preserve the win, closer than the 88-81 final margin might indicate.

"Cisco has a lot of players back from last year," says MC Coach Jerry Stone, "And I'm sure they are going to show up remembering the Region V final. We'll have to play well to beat them."

THE CHAPS lose only two players from the NJCAA champs, Puntus Wilson and Lance McCain, but there are a lot of new faces on this year's team. Last year, the Chaps played the final three months of the season without enough noses to hold an intra-squad scrimmage.

But that situation has been rectified this year.

Six return from the 1981-82, including starters Anthony "Spud" Webb, the 5-6 point guard from Dallas Wilmer-Hutchins; 6-7 Chester Smith, also Wilmer Hutchins; 6-5 Jerome Crowe, South Garland. Justin Morett and Chuck Robinson, lettermen sophomores, return as does Rodney McChriston, the Memphis magician who will miss the early part of the season due to knee surgery.

Newcomers include a pair of sophomore transfers, 6-9 Ernest Harris and 6-2 Nate Bufford. Harris transfers from the University of Arizona while Bufford is an outside sharpshooter from Columbus College, Ga.

ALVIN DUNSON, 6-0 from Lee, a walkon, and 6-4 Preston Robertson, who like Morett is from Midland High, give the squad a Tall City touch.

Other freshmen are 6-5 Brian Essary, North Mesquite; 6-5 Jackie Phinnessee, Bolivar, Tenn., via Fort Hood; Robbie Swegler, 6-4 El Paso Cathedral; 6-2 Ervin Williams, Dallas Carter; and 5-8 Earl Wimbush, Houston Yates.

STONE WILL be assisted this year by Reggie Franklin, who once was a dreaded visitor to Midland as a member of the NMMI team that caused the Chaps some grief. Reggie was all-conference and all-region before going to SMU, where he averaged 13 points and nine rebounds to earn all-SWC honors in 1979.

Franklin, since graduation, has toured two years with the Harlem Globetrotters.

MC will play at home again next Tuesday against Lon Morris, before taking to the road for three weeks during which they will play in two classics at Great Bend, Kan., Amarillo and then open the defense of their WJCC title against Clarendon Nov. 29.

Progress in NFL strike talks?

Owners study demand

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League Management Council's executive committee was studying the striking union's latest contract demand, a three-year, $1.1-billion package. Even without seeing it, though, one of the owners already hates it.

"They're not going to get three years," the owners' executive committee member said of the union plan. "If they think they're going to get it, they're crazy!"

The Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, formally offered its $1.28-billion package Sunday afternoon. On Sunday night, the union countered with its plan — and a council executive committee member countered with his comments. "They'd better take this, or something close to it," he said of the owners' offer, "or we can all go home."

THE OWNERS' negotiators spent 45 minutes discussing the proposal with union bargainers, then talks were recessed for the night.

The 42-day-old strike has claimed six regular-season weekends.

One of the player representatives assembled here at the union's behest said it could be the last weekend to bite the dust. "The settlement is reality by Wednesday, and possibly we're playing by Sunday."

If they're back on the field Nov. 7, they'll meet the NFL's unofficial deadline for saving the season.

Under the union plan, which would cover 1982-84, 80 percent of the $1.1 billion would be, in effect, placed into a central fund, administered by the union and used for salaries, incentive bonuses, pension benefits and other player-related expenses. The remaining 20 percent would go into an owners' discretionary fund, to be used for signing bonuses, free-agent acquisitions, etc.

THE UNION package would be worth $320 million this year, with $93 million going for immediate across-the-board wage increases; $380 million in 1983 and $400 million in 1984.

The management proposal leaves this year open because the owners have yet to add up their losses. It would be worth $240 million in 1983, $260 million in 1984, $280 million in 1985 and $500 million in 1986.

Ferraro awaits call from Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — New York Yankees Coach Mike Ferraro is sitting at home in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., awaiting a call that could make him the next manager of the Cleveland Indians.

"I do have a good feeling about the whole thing," Ferraro said. "My conversations with the Indians have gone well. But I don't want to say too much. Sometimes you can be too smart for your own good."

Ferraro emerged as the leading candidate for the Indians' managing job last week, after Cleveland was unable to come to terms with fired Oakland A's Manager Billy Martin.

Dave Garcia is not returning after 3½ years as manager.

Indians President Gabe Paul has said Ferraro, 38, is one of several candidates for the job.

"But nothing has been finalized," Paul said. "We haven't signed anyone and there are other candidates."

"I know I am young, but I have quite a bit of experience," Ferraro said. "I made the majors as a player at 21. I was a minor league manager at 28. I got back to the big leagues as a coach with the Yankees at 34."

Georgia's Herschel Walker (34) scores against Memphis State to beat Rex Robinson's SEC all-time scoring record of 269 points. Walker's dive from the two gave him a total of 272 points. Georgia won 34-3.

How far will Huskies fall after Stanford upset?

ida State trimmed No. 16 Miami 24-7, No. 17 Oklahoma thumped Colorado 45-10, No. 18 West Virginia beat East Carolina 30-3, Florida nipped No. 19 Auburn 19-17 and No. 20 Michigan flogged Minnesota 52-14.

Dan Marino threw for two touchdowns and Joe McCall ran for a pair as Pitt's inconsistent offense came to life and buried Louisville.

Georgia's Herschel Walker rushed for 219 yards on 33 carries and scored on runs of 21 and 2 yards as the Bulldogs whipped Memphis State. Walker's TDs gave him 272 career points, erasing the Southeastern Conference standard of 269 by former Georgia place-kicker Rex Robinson. Walker also boosted his career yardage to 4,071, sixth on the all-time NCAA list.

Arizona State and Southern Cal were locked in a 10-10 standoff until Alvin Moore's 6-yard run midway through the third period lifted the Sun Devils to their eighth victory of the year. ASU's defense, ranked second nationally a week ago, stopped two potential game-tying drives late in the game and limited the Trojans' heralded ground game to 20 yards on 43 carries, while recording six quarterback sacks.

"I feel very proud and happy and relieved right now," said Coach Darryl Rogers. "I'm pleased as heck. We just played well. I was just hoping our defense would stop them, and they did."

Penn State's Curt Warner rushed for 183 yards and three touchdowns and Todd Blackledge threw three scoring passes as the Nittany Lions withstood a 520-yard passing assault by Boston College's Doug Flutie.

Backup fullback Craig Turner scored twice on 1-yard dives and Walter Lewis fired a 28-yard touchdown pass to Joey Jones to help Alabama hold off Mississippi State. The game ended with the Bulldogs on the Bama 6.

Unheralded Maryland posted the weekend's biggest shocker, beating North Carolina as Willie Joyner galloped for a school record 240 yards on 16 carries, against what had been the nation's No. 1-ranked defense with a yield of only 43 yards a game on the ground. Joyner's 49-yard run with 13:11 left to play tied the score and an 84-yard dash with 7:31 remaining settled matters.

"They've got a great defense, but our offensive line opened up the holes and it's my job to run through them," Joyner said. "I heard a lot of people saying Maryland's got a good passing game, but their running game is so-so. We should have a good running game."

UCLA freshman John Lee tied a school record by kicking four field goals.

Cloutier extends Buffalo's streak

By Associated Press

Things didn't figure to be like this for Jacques Cloutier.

The rookie goaltender of the Buffalo Sabres expected to do a lot of sitting this season as the backup to Bob Sauve, a five-year veteran who rejoined the Sabres as a free agent in the spring after being traded last season. Sauve started six of the first eight Buffalo games.

But something odd has happened recently to Cloutier: he's been in the nets four straight times and the Sabres haven't lost in that span with him guarding their goal.

Cloutier stopped 23 shots as the Sabres beat Montreal 3-1 Sunday night. Except for surrendering seven goals in a wild 7-7 deadlock at Montreal last week, Cloutier has acquitted himself well.

"This was a confidence builder for Cloutier," said Sabres Coach Scotty Bowman. "He needed a good game behind him and he got it tonight."

The 22-year-old goalie agreed with his coach.

"Tonight is going to help my confidence," he said. "Last year from Dec. 2 until the end of the season, I played only seven games, which is pretty rough. This was my best game."

Flyers 3, Jets 2

Philadelphia scored three times within a span of 6:11 in the second period to hand Jets goalie Doug Soetaert his first loss at Winnipeg Arena since Jan. 10. Brian Propp got two of those tallies and Tim Kerr the other.

Defensemen Dave Babych and Craig Levie scored for Winnipeg, which had a five-game unbeaten streak snapped.

"The Jets do a lot of the European stuff in center ice," said Flyers Coach Bob McCammon. "They go for the fast breaks and, when you're aware of it, it's a little easier to shut a team like that down."

Rangers 6, Penguins 2

Don Maloney's second two-goal game in a week and a couple of quick scoring bursts paced the Rangers. Maloney and

NHL

Nick Fotiu scored 32 seconds apart in the first period, then Barry Beck and Mark Pavelich connected against Pittsburgh goalie Denis Herron only 21 seconds apart to give New York a 4-0 edge after one period. The loss dropped the Penguins to 0-5-1 on the road.

"It's frustrating to have so poor a road record," said Pittsburgh Coach Ed Johnston. "We were running all over the ice and smart players like the Rangers have will burn you."

Mike Allison added a goal and two assists for the Rangers. Pat Boutette registered his 13th goal in 13 games this season for the Penguins.

Canucks 3, Oilers 2

Darcy Rota scored with 1:09 remaining to lift the Canucks over the Oilers. Rota beat Edmonton goalie Andy Moog with a 10-foot wrist shot two minutes after Mark Messier had pulled the Oilers even. Richard Brodeur sparkled in the Canucks' net, making 30 saves, as the Canucks collected their first road win after an 0-5-1 start away from Vancouver.

When docs tinker with the ol ticker

The Washington Post
and Los Angeles Times

When Lefty Gomez was going in for open heart surgery, the old Yankee pitcher was worried. He wanted to know which way to bet, as usual. "What are my chances?" he asked. "Aw, don't sweat it, Lefty," the doctor told him. "A piece of cake. We have a 98 percent success rate."

Relieved, Lefty went home. Almost immeidatley, his phone began to ring. His cousin from Visalia called. Her brother had the operation, and he was out climbing mountains. A neighbor called. Same thing. His father had the operation and he was years younger. An old friend called from New York. He had come through with flying colors. An ex-teammate called. He had it and was OK.

Suddenly, Lefty broke into a cold sweat anyway. "I suddenly realized I was up to 68 percent. Two more phone calls and I was an underdog. I shut off the phone."

I BRING THIS up because, I, too, recently had heart surgery, but it wasn't well-meaning friends who gave me sleepless nights. It was the medics. For openers, the surgeon, Dr. Jack Matloff, the old Yale football player, comes in the night before and tells you all the things that could go wrong. He made it sound as if I should get points in this game. "First of all," he said, "you could die," and that was the good news.

Part of the bad news was, they were going to replace my worn-out valve with a pig's valve. My doctor, Gary Sugarman, was quick to see the obstacles in this. "That means you're 'trafe,'" he said. "That means you can never go in a Beverly Hills delicatessen again as long as you live."

"In that case," I told him, "this will be the first operation in history to save a heart and a gallbladder at the same time. Irving Caesar used to say that pastrami killed more Jews than the Pharaohs."

Another doctor on the case, Jeffrey Heifenstein, was even more helpful. "Look at it this way: When your readers write in that you're a pig, they'll be part right."

BUT MY problems were more metaphysical than medical. What I was worried about was the big picture, the effect all this would have on my career. I reasoned this way: The heart is the seat of the emtions, right? Now that I had a new set of emotions, how would this affect my whole approach to life? I mean, would I now become Mr. Nice Guy? No more Mr. McNasty? Would I now start seeing two sides to every story? Would I start to admit it when I was wrong? Would I stop being an opinionated jerk? Would I get that fatal columnists' disease, fairness? Would I start to like Cincinnati?

THE THOUGHT was too appalling to contemplate. Would they scalpel malice right out of my system, and leave me a journalistic eunuch? One of those guys who says, "On the other hand..."?

You know, when I went in for the operation, a lot of the wags were ready: "Jim Murray had a six-hour heart surgery. Took 'em one hour to fix it and five hours to find it." And so on.

You know when I first came to California way back in '43 and '44, I realized I would have to guard against the local diseases – cheerfulness, optimism, tolerance, sympathy, orange juice poisoning of the brain, kind of like you watch out for malaria in the tropics. I guarded against the symptoms night and day when I covered the movies, for instance. I didn't like any of them. I even ripped Academy Award performances. Especially Academy Award performances. I only liked pictures nobody went to see. If Spencer Tracy wasn't in it, I knocked it.

Then, when I got into sports, I was horrified at the attitude of the fans out here. They were, if you can believe it, well – "understanding," is the word. Patient. Sympathetic. Terrible flaws in a sports fan.

I USED TO sit behind them and heard them implore, "Please, Steve, don't strike out!" Good Lord! This is no way to spectate. Brought up in the Polo Grounds and Ebbets fields, I knew the real procedure. "Hey, Steve, strike out so they'll know you! I hear you're writing a book 'My Greatest Days In Baseball.' It'll be thinner than the Texas social register. Hey, Steve, is your nickname 'Popeye' or 'Pop Fly?' Hey, Steve, one more strikeout, and that school they named after you is 'George Washington High' once again. Can they carry out decimals in that school far enough to find your batting average? Hey, Steve, does your Rolls-Royce have stained-glass windows -- or just the choir in the back and incense? Do they call you 'Goody, Goody' because you're bucking for saint or because that's what the pitchers say when you come up? The next time you go to Lourdes, bring your bats."

YOU CAN'T sit there, as fans do here, and murmur encouragements like "We're with you, Fernando, baby!" You have to go for the jugular, shake him up. "Hey, Fernando, show us how to throw a home run. Hey, Fernando, who takes care of your pet gopher when you're on the mound? Hey, Fernando, two more pounds and they have to tether you. They'll put a propeller on you and take pictures over the Rose Bowl next New Year's. Hey, Fernando, the movies want you! They're doing a remake of the Hindenburg disaster. You're gonna play the Hindenburg. Hey, Fernando, how do you say 'Ball four' in Spanish? Better learn, you're gonna be saying it a lot."

In horse racing, the accepted form of cheering in the stretch here is "Come on, sweetheart, stay there! Only an eighth of a mile, you can do it, baby!" The universal hate form on the other hand is, "Don't die now, you damn dog, you got all my money ridin' on ya! Hold on you bucket o'glue! Jockey, hit that snivelling quitter – or are you in on the fix, too?!"

Soft-heartedness is the graveyard of sportswriting, too. The minute you think, let alone, write, "Well, the poor fellow was doing his best," you are through. The instant you lead off with "Steve Garvey gave it his all yesterday, but took a called third strike to write finis to the Dodgers' pennant race," you are ready for the copy desk and the condo in Chula Vista. You have lost the hop on your hard one.

IN LIFE, they say "No news is good news." In journalism, they say "Good news is no news." You have to put a stone in your heart and a sneer on your lips and write, "Steve Garvey liked the pitch so much, he couldn't bear to bruise it. So he stood there like a guy getting his first look at the Mona Lisa, overcome with awe and admiration. He looked as if he had come to paint it, not hit it. Of course, the Philistines were screaming 'Swing, ya dummy! It's a strike, not a work of art!' but what do they know of works of art?"

I took up the problem with Dr. Sugarman, when he found fluid around the heart. "You don't think it's the milk of human kindness, do you?" I wondered anxiously. Gary shook his head. "No," he said. "You can tell that from the stethoscope?" I pressed. "No," he said, "from the column you wrote about the St. Louis Cardinals."

Cleveland Cavs retain that touch

By The Associated Press

The Cleveland Cavaliers have started this National Basketball Association season the way they ended last season — losing.

The Cavaliers were beaten Sunday night by the Milwaukee Bucks 119-95, their 21st straight loss, tying an unofficial NBA record for consecutive losses over two seasons. The Detroit Pistons lost 14 games ending the 1979-80 season and seven more starting the 1980-81 campaign.

NBA ROUNDUP

SuperSonics 127, Clippers 109

Seattle pulled away in the opening half by hitting 68.2 percent from the field, with David Thompson scoring 17 of his team-leading 25 points. Gus Williams added 13 of his 23 points in the first half.

Jerome Whitehead, subbing for Bill Walton — who is limited to playing one game a week because of recurring foot problems and did not appear against Seattle — scored 29 points and added 13 rebounds. Tom Chambers had 27 points and 11 rebounds.

Pistons 118, Pacers 115

Kelly Tripucka scored 12 of his 37 points in the fourth quarter to help Detroit hold off Indiana in the closing minutes.

The Pistons trailed 89-84 going into the final period, but six points by Tripucka and three by John Long, who scored 27 in the game, at the beginning of the fourth quarter put Detroit on top to stay.

The Pacers trailed 114-106 with 3:50 to go, but rallied to cut the deficit to 115-114 and had the ball with 10 seconds left. But a desperation shot by George Johnson missed and the Pistons' Bill Laimbeer hit two free throws with one second remaining to provide the final margin.

Nuggets 114, Suns 110

Alex English scored eight points in the final six minutes and Denver outscored Phoenix 20-7 down the stretch. Phoenix led 94-91 with nine minutes to play but then English rallied Denver with four critical baskets which helped give the Nuggets the lead they never lost. English led Denver with 25 points, Kiki Vandeweghe added 24 and Dan Issel 23.

Maurice Lucas paced Phoenix with 19.

New League no longer a dream

USFL has the numbers

By ANGUS PHILLIPS
The Washington Post
and Los Angeles Times

If you still think the United States Football League is 12 teams in search of a player, try out these numbers:

Philadelphia Stars — 119 players signed.

New Jersey Generals — 36 under contract and 47 more "we're together on the numbers with," according to General Manager Jim Valek.

Los Angeles Express — 65 signed, 110 offered contracts.

Boston Breakers — About 75 signed and "more than 110 we've come to terms with," said Tom Marino, player personnel director.

Washington Federals — 30 signed, about 70 who have agreed to terms.

With more than two months to go before the USFL college draft and longer still before the first practice, most teams have reached accord with more than half the 100 or so players they'll need to take to camp.

Where do they come from?

Three places, said Federals General Manager Dick Myers. "Right out of college, guys that have been out of school one to three years with a crack here and there with the NFL but who never made it and NFL-experienced players, who for whatever reason aren't there any longer."

"We have a big board with 500 names on it," said New Jersey's Valek, "of which about 350 are available. They're all football players, which proves there are plenty to go around. The biggest job is locating the players you have negotiating rights to."

USFL executives have maintained from the start there was no shortage of talent available. That assessment got an unexpected boost recently when NFL players struck and Kansas City Chiefs President Jack Steadman said he was ready to sign 110 free agents to fill the void. "There are thousands of players out there," said Steadman.

"THERE'S A LOT more talent turned out by the colleges than the NFL can use, no question," said Chuck Hutchinson, director of player personnel for the Bay Area Invaders. "When I went to Ohio State in 1970 the major conferences produced the pro players. Now Alabama A&M, McNeese State, everybody has a good program.

"These are borderline NFL guys," he added. "They may be 10 pounds lighter or they play the wrong position for the club that drafts them. Maybe they pulled a muscle (in NFL camp), got behind mentally and got cut."

But borderline players can move into the mainstream. USFL officials like to point to Redskins kick returner Mike Nelms, cut by the Bills, who went to Canada and returned to be the best at his position in the NFC.

"You say you don't want to be a leftovers team," said Myers, "but the way the system is set up that's exactly how it will be. We have access to (players released by) the Colts, Redskins and Winnipeg (of the Canadian Football League)."

That access comes through the USFL's complicated player distribution system, designed to short-circuit the bidding wars that destroyed its predecessor, the World Football League.

EACH USFL team is assigned

— Three pro teams from which to select current castoffs.

— Five colleges called "territorial schools." Rights to players from these schools belong exclusively to the parent USFL team, no matter how long ago the player left school.

Players from all other schools will be drafted by USFL teams Jan. 4.

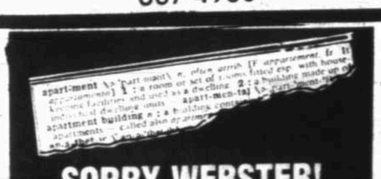

In addition, players from nonterritorial schools who were drafted by the NFL over the last 12 years have been randomly assigned to the various teams, so each team has rights to a long list of veterans who may or may not still be with NFL squads.

Then there are free agents — players from nonterritorial schools who never were drafted and who did not have a 1982 contract with an NFL club.

It's complicated, but that's to keep teams from waging money wars (George Allen notwithstanding) for talent, since almost all good players fall under one or another of the dictums and are the property of a parent club.

That should help keep budgets intact, with the league paying an average of $30,000 for middle-level players.

Re-Elect James E. (Jim) ★★★ Nugent

A RAILROAD COMMISSIONER FOR TEXANS!
Pol. ad., paid for by Jim Nugent Committee, Shannon Ratliff Treas., Box 1512, Austin, Texas 78767.

Ernest Angelo is the best choice for State Senate.

Unemployment.
"The key to solving unemployment is restoring economic growth. To do that, state government must keep taxes and regulation to a minimum. But with more and more liberals in Austin, taxpayers aren't safe."
"I support a constitutional amendment to prohibit a state personal or corporate income tax. I also think we need a constitutional amendment to guarantee our right-to-work."

Water.
"A steady and reliable source of water is critical to the economic well-being of our district. Yet, the politicians are treating this issue like a political football, instead of the serious business it is."
"With such a complex issue as water, it will take a State Senator with experience and a good background to examine the proposals, balance the competing interests, hammer out a program, and build the consensus needed to get the program passed."
"Most important, our State Senator must protect our regional interests, as well as individual property rights."

Crime.
"I don't agree with the liberals that spend all their time worrying about the rights of criminals. It's the innocent victims of crime that need protection."
"I support the death penalty. Also, I want to increase the prison terms of repeat offenders by automatically increasing their sentences."
"We need to tighten the pardons and paroles process. When a criminal is sentenced to 30 years, that's what he should serve."

Education.
"There is a lack of accountability in our public schools. We need to focus on getting more for the money we're spending on education. The classroom teacher is the cornerstone of the education system."
"I support increased emphasis on teaching basic skills, with more competency testing to monitor students' progress. I support legislation providing more freedom for teachers to discipline unruly students."

THE WONDERFUL world of football polls. The best way to get ahead in the polls, apparently, is to get beat. Hal Sutton...happy winner.

Sutton's wildest dream comes true

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Hal Sutton achieved a goal and fulfilled a dream with his playoff victory in the Walt Disney World Classic, the final event on the 10-month PGA Tour schedule.

"It's a dream come true for me," Sutton said after he'd closed out his record-setting rookie season Sunday with a win.

"I'd never even dreamed of anything like this," said Bill Britton, the third-year pro who was the victim of Sutton's winning 15-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole of sudden death. Britton, who gained his playoff berth with a closing round of 64 — 8-under-par — had never come close to winning a tournament.

"I'd like to have won, but I'm tickled to death to do what I did. I played well. I didn't give anything away."

John Fought, Tony Cerda and Larry Mize achieved some goals, too. They had held positions 127, 132 and 152 on the money-winning list coming into this final event of the year.

And they played well enough to move into the top 125, the cutoff figure for inclusion in next year's all-exempt tour.

Dailey's debut brings protests from women

CHICAGO (AP) — The first hometown appearance of Chicago Bulls' rookie Quintin Dailey ignited protests by two women's groups who demanded that Dailey undergo counseling for his assault on a California nursing student.

The National Organization for Women mounted more than 100 pickets in front of the National Basketball Association team's downtown offices Saturday. Later, 24 pickets from the Take Back the Night Coalition, an anti-rape group, marched outside the Chicago Stadium before the start of the Bulls' home opener against the Washington Bullets.

Liz Nicholson, an official of both the Chicago and Illinois NOW organizations, said the groups object to Dailey's presence on the team "for as long as he continues to deny the seriousness of his crime."

Dailey was accused of sexually assaulting the woman student in her dormitory room while both were students at the University of San Francisco last year. He later pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of felony aggravated assault and was sentenced to three years' probation.

Dailey was chosen by the Bulls in the annual NBA draft three days after his sentencing.

NOW wants Dailey to agree to rehabilitative counseling, for Bulls management to state publicly that it considers crimes against women to be a serious matter, and for the club to give "tangible support" to the victims of such crimes, Nicholson said.

Take Back the Night has similar demands, but also wants a public apology from Dailey and an arrangement whereby he would be barred from playing in the NBA

A NOTE FROM MADGE WALLIS.....

November 1, 1982

Dear Friends:

My job working for you as your District Clerk is the most important thing in the world to me. I love doing it, and I enjoy working with the courts, with you, with the judges and lawyers, and with other officials. It isn't an easy job, and I don't expect it to be. It is very demanding and requires long hours, but I've always worked hard and wouldn't feel right if I didn't.

The nicest thing about this job, the most rewarding part, is when so many of you come to the courts as jurors, or come to us for passports, or have friends or family members who are in court for some reason, and I have the opportunity to say hello and visit with you and often to be of help. That makes me feel good, feel useful, and I thank you so much for that.

Five years as a deputy, eight years as your District Clerk, have given me the understanding and the experience which the duties of this office urgently require if it is to function properly. I can only promise the renewed dedication to serving you which I have always tried to show.

Thank you so much for all your courtesies, for the many thousands of expressions of confidence and support which you have given me in this campaign. With a heart full of gratitude, I sincerely ask your vote tomorrow. I'll work hard and deligetnly to do the very best job any District Clerk in Texas can do.

Sincerely,

MADGE B. WALLIS

Economist worried disinflation may cuase bankruptcies

By PATRICK BOYLE
Los Angeles Times—Washington Post
News Service

Albert M. Wojnilower has a knack for being among the first of his Wall Street colleagues to start worrying about the economic pitfalls that lie ahead.

The chief economist of First Boston Corp. foresaw the frightening increases in interest rates in 1979 and 1980. He said the modest economic recovery of 1980 was a fluke that would be followed by an even deeper recession. And he predicted that the Federal Reserve's tight monetary policies would squeeze the economy almost to death in 1982.

So what is he concerned with now? That the rapid slowdown in price inflation could undercut any improvement in other economic conditions and force a number of companies into bankruptcy.

Most of the economic policies of both the Federal Reserve Board and the Reagan administration in the last year have been aimed at slowing inflation, but Wojnilower said in an interview last week that little attention has been paid to wage costs.

In this period of disinflation, companies have been forced to accept less than they want for the products they sell. But with only a few exceptions, the firms have not been able to exercise comparable restraint over their costs of production, particularly wages. And this has squeezed profits and sapped any incentive on the part of business to expand, he said.

"We have a very odd arrangement in which a government that was supported by and (was) really so much in favor of the entrepreneurial spirit has wound up pursuing a set of policies which are crushing that spirit," Wojnilower said.

Wojnilower defines the nation's current economic condition as "a depression with a small 'd,' " that is only now beginning to bottom out.

He generally agrees with other economists that a slow recovery will begin in the next few months as interest rates continue to decline. But, he said, unemployment will remain high throughout 1983 and probably will rise above the current postwar record of 10.1 percent. He expects the current 9.5 percent discount rate (the rate commercial banks pay for overnight loans from the Fed) to fall to about 8 percent but does not predict when. And he thinks that mortgage lending rates will drop to the 12 percent-to-12.5 percent range, sparking a rise in housing starts to an annual rate of about 1.5 million by next fall.

"That's critical, because without an improvement in housing, there is no recovery," he said.

Much of the spark for the gradual upturn will come from the Fed's recent easing of its grip on the money supply, a move that Wojnilower, other economists and the Reagan administration had been urging for more than a year.

"You have to give the Fed credit for making a judgment that, in fact, the basic underpinnings of the economy were melting away," he said.

Wojnilower, who in his career spent 12 years at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, said he does not think the Fed will be able to return to its tight money policies, mainly because measurement of monetary growth has become too inexact with the proliferation of new kinds of bank accounts.

"It's very difficult to see the Fed embarking on policies that would materially raise interest rates," he said.

"And monetary actions that would tend to further appreciate the dollar against other currencies would be like hammering more nails in the coffin of that large segment of our manufacturing industry engaged in international competition." Wojnilower has blamed the deregulation of interest rates and financial markets in recent years as part of the cause of the economy's recent instability. And he believes that the policies of deregulation may be short-lived.

The development of new types of stock and commodity products, options markets and other investment alternatives have contributed to the type of instability characterized by recent wild swings in stock prices, Wojnilower believes. As a result, securities markets have become "very dubious indicators of fundamental economic conditions," he said.

As long as prices fall or hold steady while wages increase, businesses will not expand and "traumatic business disasters are unavoidable," he said. One solution he sees is wage guidelines set by the federal government — something he believes the Reagan administration would never attempt.

"Wage guidelines would not solve everything by any means," he acknowledges. "But it would distribute the trouble much more evenly, and the more evenly distributed it is, the less likely it is that we'll drive over the cliff some large company or financial institution in such a way that everybody else gets dragged down."

Commerce reports income rising faster than inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Total nonfarm income rose faster than inflation in the second quarter of the year in all but three states, the Commerce Department says.

The department reported Sunday that personal income rose 1.7 percent in the April-June quarter, almost twice the rise of 0.9 percent in the previous quarter.

Inflation in the spring quarter increased 0.9 percent, as measured by Commerce's implicit price deflator for personal consumption spending. The price deflator is an alternative to the Consumer Price Index for measuring inflation.

The exceptions were in Montana, Kentucky and West Virginia, where income decreased partly because of declines in mining in those states, the report said.

Delaware led in second-quarter gains, with a 3.4 percent rise. The increase in North Carolina was 3.3 percent; in Michigan 3.1 percent; in Alabama 2.7 percent; and in Georgia 2.6 percent, the report said.

"Reflecting increases in the production of motor vehicles, lumber, furniture and textiles, these states had large increases in both durables and nondurables manufacturing wage and salary disbursements," it said.

The report said that "because farm income is subject to erratic changes, it is often preferable to use non-farm personal income to track current economic developments in regions and states."

The state-by-state figures lag behind national statistics. The Commerce Department reported in October that total personal income in September had risen to an annual rate of $2.6 trillion.

Fed embroiled in debate about reasons for interest rate cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's most potent economic instrument — the Federal Reserve Board — is embroiled in a fierce public debate over whether it is forcing down interest rates to spark a recovery in a blatant, pre-election act of political largesse for Ronald Reagan.

There is no doubt the central bank of the United States has taken steps in the last few months to allow a recovery to unfold by encouraging a decline in interest rates. It has done this by easing its tight hold on the growth of money and credit in the economy.

The tough question being asked repeatedly here is whether the ostensibly independent and non-partisan "Fed" has gone further. Has it abandoned its three-year-old policy of fighting inflation and embarked on a major new policy course — conveniently just before the congressional elections to help President Reagan and his fellow Republicans?

There is no certain answer. Even for the reigning experts in the arcane world of money and credit policies, trying to figure out the mysterious and complex workings of the bank is like trying to solve an Agatha Christie mystery before coming to the end of the book.

What the Fed is doing now won't become clear until months after Election Day, when the leading monetary sleuths have had a chance to analyze the course on which the Fed has taken the economy.

In the meantime, the experts are sharply divided. Some declare without qualification that the bank has turned away from its anti-inflation policy of limiting the growth of money and credit. They say it is returning to its former policy of manipulating interest rates directly, to spark an economic expansion with lower rates during recessions and to slow down the economy with higher rates during inflationary times.

Others insist, with equal conviction, that the Fed is sticking with its anti-inflationary tight monetary policy, as Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker maintains.

But a lot of Fed watchers refuse to take Volcker at his word because of a long-standing credibility problem within the austere, marble halls of the Federal Reserve headquarters. Fed chairmen in the past have said one thing publicly and done the opposite privately, concede bank officials. And suspicions die hard.

Volcker contends the Fed is temporarily allowing its primary measure of money to grow faster than its previously stated policy would dictate only because of technical reasons that will make it impossible to control money growth precisely over the next few months.

He says that doesn't mean the central bank is declaring victory in the war against inflation and is now trying to engineer the long-awaited recovery by furiously pumping money into the economy to lower interest rates and put money in consumers' pockets.

So then why, ask the cynics, has the Fed in the last three months lowered its key lending rate to banks from 12 percent to 9.5 percent, the lowest level in four years?

The disbelievers would answer that the Fed, convinced inflation is under control, is aggressively bringing rates down, fearful of the depressed state of the economy.

Airline chief optimistic

HOUSTON (AP) — The chairman of Continental Airlines says he's optimistic about the future of the carrier, which ushered in its merger with Texas International Airlines with champagne, balloons and high hopes.

"I'm very optimistic about 1983," Chairman Frank Lorenzo said Sunday at a celebration marking the Continental Airlines merger, making it the nation's sixth-largest carrier.

"I think we'll see the economy strengthening in the second quarter (of 1983) and we're in the position to take advantage of it," he said.

Passengers at Intercontinental Airport north of here were served champagned, and balloons in the Continental colors of orange and gold festooned Terminal C.

The merger was periodically announced over the terminal's public address system.

Officials said Texas International jets would be repainted in Continental colors and first-class seats installed on them as they were taken out of service for routine maintenance.

Most operating offices of the new Continental Airlines remain in Los Angeles. The company's executive offices have moved to Houston.

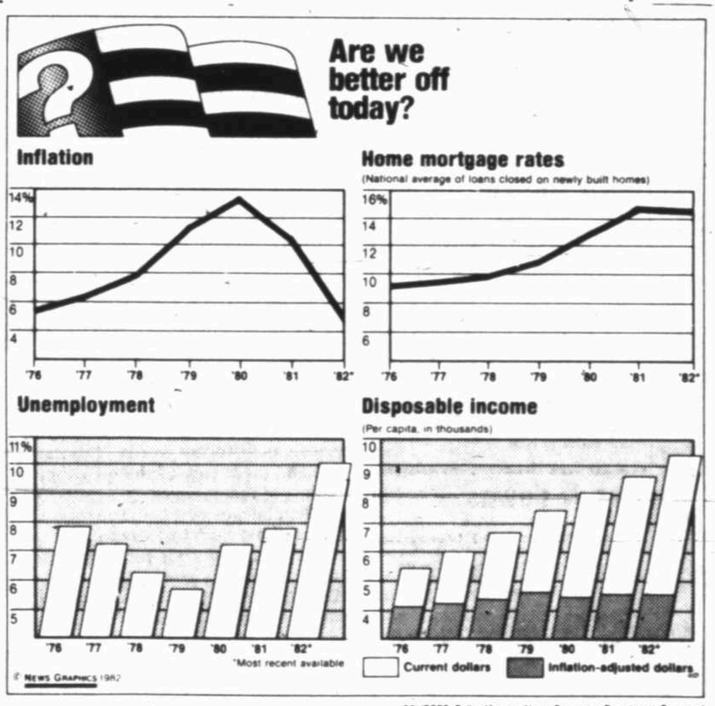

Texas Air Corp., the Houston-based holding company that owned Texas International, acquired Continental after a bitter takeover battle during which Continental's former president, Al Feldman, committed suicide. At the time, company officials said Feldman was depressed and under a lot of pressure.

Continental employees failed in an effort to purchase control of their employer, and stockholders of both companies approved the merger July 13 at separate meetings.

The merger followed agreements by the pilots and clerical workers and realignment of bank loans.

The pilots agreed to changes that would cut the company's labor costs by $45 million in 1983, Lorenzo said. He also said Texas International agents and clerical workers had agreed to disband their union. Continental workers are not represented by a union.

Agreements also were signed to realign loans, which include a four-year revolving credit agreement, into a seven-year loan.

Charles hopes for 'enlightened elite'

VICTORIA, British Columbia (AP) — Prince Charles says he hopes the United World College movement will produce an "enlightened elite" to lead the way to freedom and world peace.

Prince Charles

The movement is a system of six two-year colleges around the world dedicated to international understanding and peace. Charles, heir to the British throne, is chairman of the system's International Council.

This "enlightened elite" must be "intelligent and committed enough to realize that it will be by individual example that others will be inspired and possibly lead along a road that could bring us all a little more of what we need so badly, and that is hope," Charles said Saturday.

The Prince of Wales was here for a private visit at the system's Canadian college, the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific at nearby Pedder Bay.

Last week, he attending opening ceremonies for the sixth college in the system, the Armand Hammer United World College in Montezuma, N.M.

NEW YORK (AP) — Priscilla Beaulieu Presley, once known as Mrs. Elvis, is starting a career of her own and says she is "willing to challenge the world now."

P. Presley

The ex-wife of the late rock'n'roll star is making her film debut as a scuba diver in "Comeback," starring actor Michael Landon.

She stole some scenes during filming when she went underwater with real sharks while Landon used a double, according to the Nov. 8 issue of People magazine.

Emerging from waters off New Providence Island opposite Nassau, she said she didn't get the role because of her last name.

"The name can be a hindrance and a help," Mrs. Presley, 37, said. "But it's been more of a detriment. It's not the name that gets you work."

"Comeback" is to be broadcast on NBC in February and shown in theaters overseas.

Presley died five years ago of heart failure.

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace is denying a report by a sensationalist London newspaper that soft-porn actress Koo Stark spent a night at the palace with Prince Andrew while the queen was out of town.

"It's an absurd story," palace spokesman John Haslam said. "That's all I'm going to say about it."

Prince Andrew

The weekly News of the World reported Sunday that Miss Stark, whose roles include a topless scene in "Emily," spent Friday night at the palace while Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, Prince Philip, were away.

The queen is in the Fiji Islands, while Philip is in Tokyo for a four-day visit as president of the World Wildlife Fund.

The newspaper said Andrew, 22, the queen's second son, arrived at the palace Friday from the Royal Navy air base at Culdrose, Cornwall, where he is a helicopter pilot.

Koo Stark

Andrew and Miss Stark, 25, have not been seen together in public since they returned separately from a vacation on the Caribbean island of Mustique two weeks ago.

The News of the World said their alleged palace meeting "dispels reports that the romance is over."

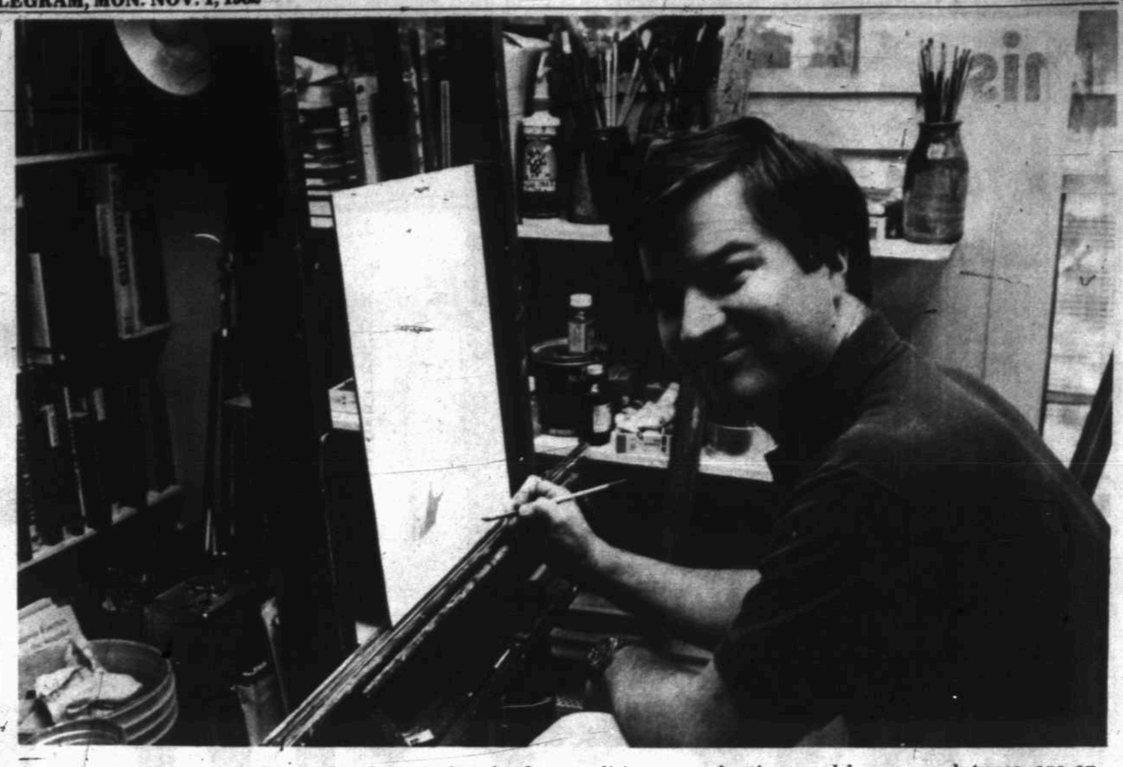

Other London newspapers also reported Miss Stark spent a mystery night out, without saying where she was.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Lawrence Welk's ABC Productions has given more than $500,000 in stage property to San Diego State University, the school's drama department head says.

"We got everything but the bubble machine," Merrill Lessley announced over the weekend.

The items from television's long-running "The Lawrence Welk Show," now in syndication, will be used in student productions, Lessley said.

A snowy owl comes to life under the paintbrush of James Harvey Johnson, DVM, Texas Artist of the Year for 1982-83. Johnson is a former Midlander. A sampling of his works, including originals, limited edition reproductions and bronze sculptures, are on display and for sale at J.E. Borron, 103 N. Colorado Ave., through Nov. 15.

'Fantasia:' Music appreciation for all

When Walt Disney's "Fantasia" was released more than 30 years ago, it was hailed as a new form of visualized music. With no dialogue except for the scant narrative that introduces each of the eight selections of classical music, "Fantasia" received special academy awards in 1941 for Disney and associates.

"Fantasia" has been re-released since the '40s but the version that is now being shown is dedicated to the memory of Leopold Stokowski, who conducted the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra on the original soundtrack. And though he still appears in the film, the soundtrack has been re-recorded in digital stereo with Irwin Kostal conducting.

"Fantasia" is illustrated music — a sort of stream of consciousness, Disney-style, set to music — and done in a way that is sure to free you from any inhibitions that you might have toward classical music.

Take, for example, the opera "La Giaconda," and try to imagine a ballet sequence danced by ostriches, their feathers flying, hippopotamuses in pink tutus, and elephants blowing bubbles. Inventive too, is Peter Ilich Tchaikovsky's the "Nutcracker," in which fairies anoint the world with dewdrops, mushrooms dance and fish perform synchronized underwater ballet.

A bold experiment, "Fantasia" dares to take on the music greats — Bach, Beethoven, Stravinsky, Tchaikovsky — and interpret their music. And though it does produce some dramatically effective images, as in Johann Sebastian Bach's "Toccata and Fugue in D minor," and Modest Petrovich Mussorgsky's "A Night on the Bald Mountain," it also runs amuck in its own imaginings with Ludwig van Beethoven's sixth symphony, known as the "Pastoral."

In it, centaurs frolic on Mount Olympus surrounded by pastel-colored winged horses and match-making winged cherubs. The colors are grade-school primary and the overall effect is too sweet to swallow.

But "Fantasia" is a film not to be missed. It is a "teaching" film in the best sense of the word. In fact, the audience of adults and children whispered their way through the images and music and it wasn't even distracting — in part because there is no dialogue over the music and the quality of the sound is improved in this version.

A Review

So when a little boy behind me asked the pertinent question, "When does Mickey Mouse come on?" it started me to wondering too. Mickey does appear in pre-modernized form (with exaggerated widow's peak and ears in a straight line down the middle of his head) in one of the most famous sequences, "The Sorcerer's Apprentice." In it Mickey lets things get out of control when he dons the sorcerer's magic hat to make magic of his own. And though he gets taught a lesson, he teaches us one as well — that classical music is approachable the first time out; it is not necessarily an acquired taste.

Residents making sure elephants stay away

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — There aren't many elephants around this east Alabama city, so residents won't have a hard time complying with the road signs that prohibit them.

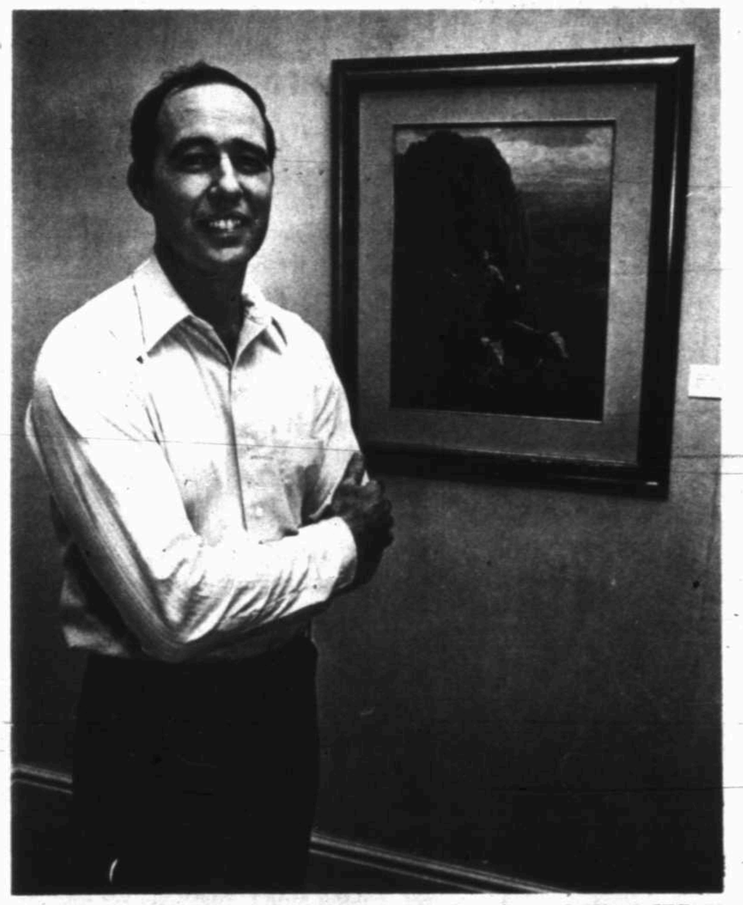

No one has claimed responsibility or given an explanation for the signs, which appeared two weeks ago on the outskirts of town.

City and Auburn University officials speculate the signs may refer to the symbol of the University of Alabama football team — archrival of the Auburn Tigers — or the Republican Party.

The gray elephant symbols, marked by a red diagonal slashes, are on 7-foot-tall, dark green signposts along Alabama 29 and Alabama 147.

"We don't know how they got there," said a spokesman for the state Highway Department, who asked to remain anonymous. "Someone should have gone through our department before putting them up, but we won't come down on them for not doing it. Things like this happen all the time during football season."

A Lee County campaign worker for Republican gubernatorial candidate Emory Folmar discounted the political theory, although election day is Tuesday.

Artist Wayne Blaize has recently donated one of his works, "Working the Ridge," to the permanent collection of the Museum of the Southwest. The Western Writers of America, Inc., awarded the Golden Spur Award for the best Western Cover Art of 1981 to Blaize for his piece, "A Touch of Winter." Blaize's gift has been complemented by the acquisition of two other pieces of his art. The Collections Committee of the museum's board of trustees purchased "Scouting for Strays," and Mr. and Mrs. O.H. Berry donated the drawing "Mare and Foal."

Rare instrument taken during owner's dinner

BOSTON (AP) — A rare cello, insured for $125,000 but considered priceless by its owner, was stolen from a restaurant while he was eating dinner.

Luis Leguia, a cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said the instrument was made in 1703 by the Cremona master Giuseppe Guarneri.

He said he took the cello to Maitre Jacques to play a few solos Friday at an anniversary party for the restaurant's co-owners, who are his friends.

After playing, Leguia sat down to eat, leaving the cello in its case in the cloakroom. The attendant said she left the room briefly, and when she returned, the cello had disappeared.

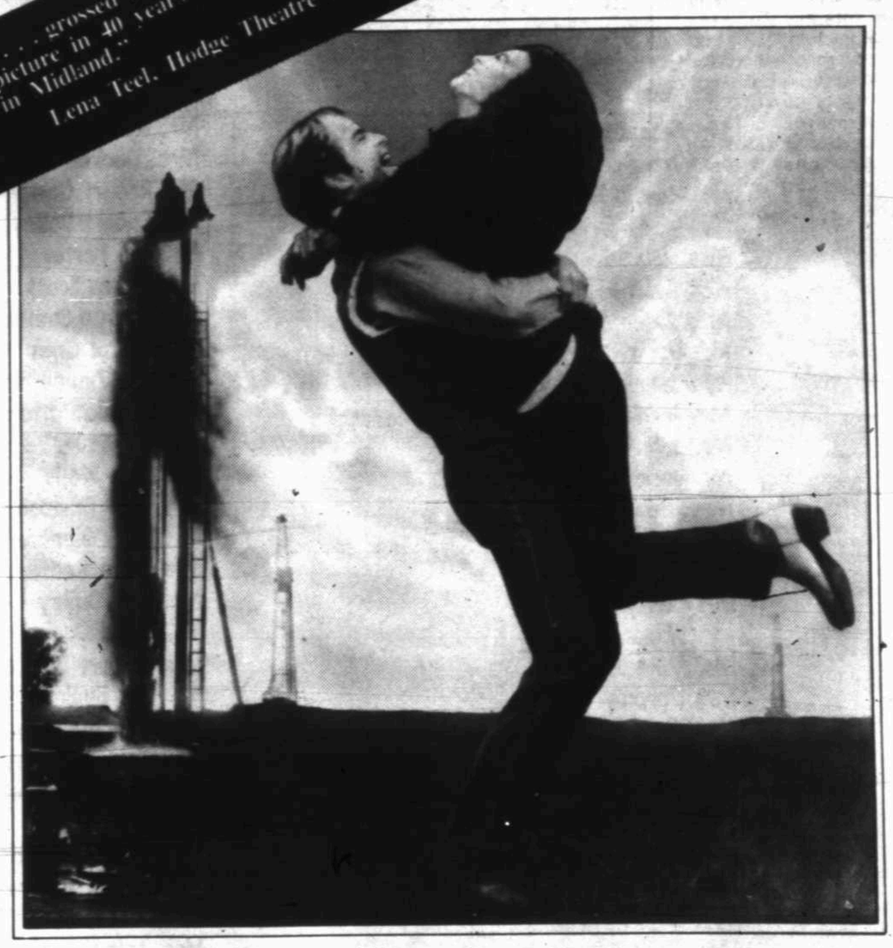

"I usually keep it by my table when I have to take it to a restaurant with me," said Leguia, who said he didn't believe his insurance policy would pay enough to buy another Guarneri.

This papier-mache skeleton, an example of the Mexican death imagery prevalant in the Dia de los Muertos holiday, is among the artifacts on display at the Museum of the Southwest's Day of the Dead exhibit.

These sugar candy skulls, called calaveras, are representative of the candies made throughout Mexico in honor of the Dia de los Muertos celebration. In the background is a loaf of pan de los muertos (bread of the dead).

This papier-mache skull mask is representative of the masks made in Mexico for the Dia de los Muertos annual celebration held every Nov. 1 in Mexico.

A traditional Dia de los Muertos altar is included in the Museum of the Southwest's Day of the Dead exhibit. The exhibit will be on display through Dec. 5.

Dia de los Muertos

The holiday honors the dead as well as the living. To trace its origin, it is necessary to look back to the beginning of recorded human life in Mexico.

Graves which indicate that the deceased were buried with objects to make them comfortable during their journey to the afterworld exist in Mexico dating back to 1500 B.C. In pre-Hispanic cultures, such as the Aztecs who were at their cultural height at the time of the Spanish conquest, death was perceived as a further step in life itself.

"The Mixtecs of Mexico believed that the souls of the dead came back in the 12th month of the every year, which corresponded to our November. On this day...the houses were decked out to welcome the spirits. Jars of food and drink were set on a table in the principal room, and the family went forth with torches to meet the ghosts and invite them to enter," recorded Sir James Frazer in "The Golden Bough."

WITH THE SPANISH conquest in the 16th century, also came Roman Catholicism. Although vast differences existed between the two religions, there were also similarities. This holiday, which was celebrated by both cultures at the same time of the year, provided one such bridge between the two cultures.

The Day of the Dead, celebrated in Mexico on Nov. 1, closely paralleled the Catholic celebration of All Saints' Day.

At the time of the conquest, northern Spain celebrated a mass to the dead on Nov. 2. On this occasion, offerings of wheat, bread and wine were taken to the graves of dead relatives.

The practice dated back to the 9th century, when the feast of Allhallows or All Saints Day was established by Pope Gregory IV to be celebrated on Nov. 1. The evening before became known as Allhallows Eve (later Halloween), and by the 13th century, Nov. 2 was known as All Souls' Day.

In Europe, canonized saints were remembered on All Saints' Day, while All Souls' Day commemorated the dead who atoned for their sins in purgatory.

These similarities between the two cultures caused the Mexican people to accept the Catholic rituals and today the annual celebration in Mexico is referred to as Dia de los Muertos (Day of the Dead).

AN EXHIBIT documenting this festive occasion — Dia de los Muertos — in Mexico is currently on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The exhibit closes Dec. 5.

In order to appreciate Dia de los Muertos, it is necessary to understand the Mexican attitude toward death.

The 20th century Mexican, just as his ancestors before him, does not fear death but rather accepts it as a natural and logical end to life. The Mexicans joke and tease about death, and it is this attitude which pervades all rituals and art forms associated with the Dia de los Muertos.

"The dead are believed to provide the necessary connection between the living and God and the saints. By honoring the dead during this annual celebration the continuity of life is guaranteed," states the museum's docent notes.

"Day of the Dead is a celebration honoring people who have died," said Anne Sherburn, the museum's development and public relations officer.

"At the same time, it honors the living," said Hector Garza, exhibit consultant from Austin.

"THE ONLY similarity between Halloween and Day of the Dead is that they fall at the same time of the year and are connected through All Saints' Day. Halloween is celebrated to ward off evil spirits before the saints come to earth," Ms. Sherburn said. Laughing she added, "Evil spirits come out on Oct. 31 and the good guys on Nov. 1."

Death imagery, such as the skulls and human skeletons (of papier-mache), used in the Dia de los Muertos exhibit, has a long history in Mexico. These images were painted on walls and ceramic pots, cast in gold as ornaments, carved on seals and temple walls, and woven as designs into clothing.

A traditional altar found in businesses and homes in Mexico during this celebration has been set up in the breakfast room at the museum.

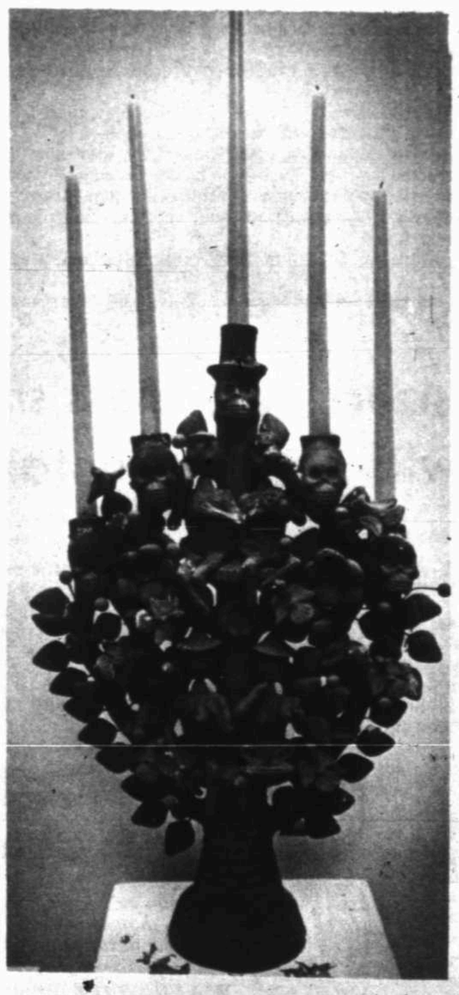

In conjunction with the Dia de los Muertos exhibit, the museum is also displaying original Jose Guadalupe Posada prints from Garza's collection. A Mexican artist during the mid-1800s, Posada popularized the calavera/skeletal image and breathed new life into this celebration. The museum is also exhibiting other works by Posada, which are representative of his diversity and skill.

ANOTHER FEATURE of Dia de los Muertos is the learning center which accompanies it. This center has been designed to provide additional information about the celebration. Also the award winning film, "Day of the Dead," by Charles Eame, will be shown every hour in the learning center which is adjacent to the exhibit. Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

"Every (public school) fifth-grader in the city of Midland is coming through the exhibit," Ms. Sherburn said. "Even some of the private schools have made arrangements to see the exhibit."

Other special events planned around the exhibit include guided tours every Sunday at 3 p.m., a slide program Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m. presented by Dr. Merle Wachter, and the museum's monthly children's workshop Nov. 20, which will include a tour of the exhibit as well as a studio project on the subject. Group tours may be organized by calling the museum at 683-2882.

In Mexico, people travel long distances to be with their relatives, both living and dead, for Dia de los Muertos. It is, after all, a family celebration; one which celebrates life by honoring the dead.

For the Dia de los Muertos holiday, candle holders such as this may be placed on the traditional Mexican altars or at other strategic places in homes and business in Mexico.

MC staff studies possibility of additional facilities

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The significant increase in enrollment at Midland College, reported to trustees during their regular meeting Thursday, has prompted the staff to study the possibility of constructing another academic building, according to MC president Dr. Jess H. Parrish.

Midland College showed 3,254 students had enrolled on the last day of registration this fall, an increase of 470 students over the 2,784 who enrolled by the same date last year. The figure reflects about a 16.8 percent increase. But, according to Parrish, that increase is not as significant as the increase in contact hours.

Contact hours are how many hours a college is producing, Parrish explained. Compared to last year, Midland College's vocational contact hours increased 34 percent while academic contact hours increased 21 percent, for a 25 percent total increase.

"This is more significant than the 16.8 percent increase," Parrish said. "When you're figuring the bottom line, this is the one that counts. The increase is significant, especially in a funding year," he added, noting that funding is based on contact hours.

Parrish pointed out that enrollment is up at all community colleges, although he said as far as he knows none have reported as large an increase as Midland College. Because of the increase statewide, there will be "tremendous burden" on state funding of community colleges.

While in the past funding has been based on estimates of the summer, fall and spring enrollments, Parrish said that this year the state asked for the actual summer and fall enrollments and an estimate of the spring enrollment on which to base its decision pertaining to funding.

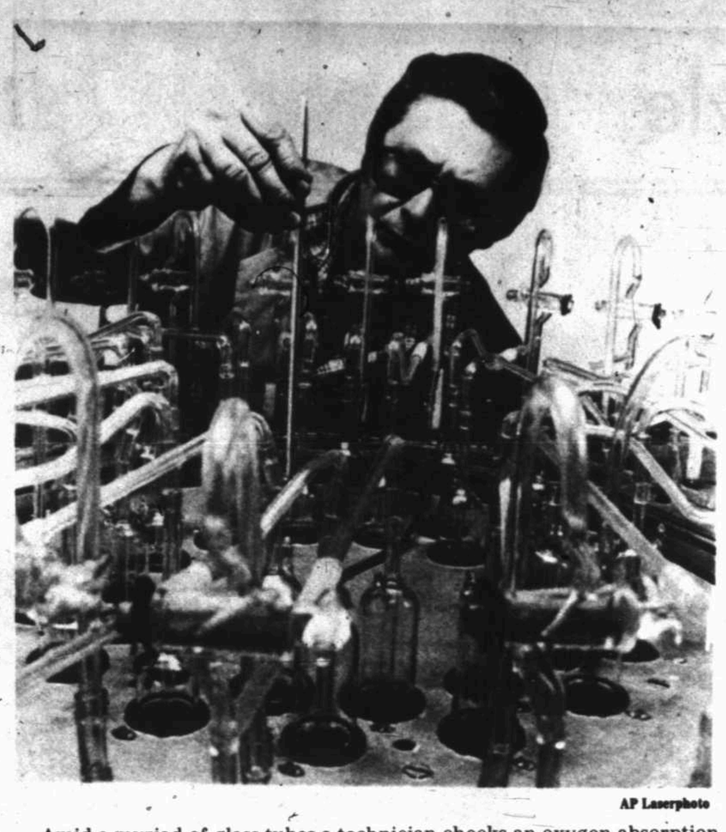

Originally, Midland College had projected a 9 percent increase. Since the actual increase was 16.8 percent in enrollment and 25 percent in contact hours, "this will help us," he said. "If we're cut back in the legislative session, at least we'll be cut back in actual enrollments and not (those) projected."

According to Parrish, the significant increase has made the possibility of a need for another academic building more feasible. "The staff is doing an analysis for another academic building," he pointed out to trustees. "Hopefully by January, we'll be in a position to make a good, solid recommendation to this board."

Compared to last year, Texas students from in-district increased from 2,312 to 2,695; out-of-district students increased from 374 to 400; out-of-state students increased from 81 to 137; and alien students increased from 17 to 22.

Fall 1982 students represent 67 counties in Texas and 35 other states. Eighteen foreign countries are represented.

While the majority of students enrolled are from Midland County, with Pecos, Reagan, Ector and Martin following, enrollments from key counties such as Dallas and Harris (Houston) also have increased. According to athletic director Delnor Poss, the increase in students from Dallas and Houston largely is due to the increase in the reputation of the college through the national title won by the Chaparral basketball team. "A big percentage of the Harris and Dallas county enrollees are in athletics," Poss pointed out.

Hopefuls bid feverishly for last-minute support

By The Associated Press

Candidates for various statewide offices made feverish bids for last-minute support during the weekend, spending long days on the road hitting town after town in hopes of luring undecided voters who could tip the election scales their way Tuesday.

Gov. Bill Clements rested Sunday, making telephone calls to potential backers and saving his strength for a three-city swing today.

Vice President George Bush was scheduled to join Clements during appearances in Dallas, Houston and San Antonio. Clements planned to finish out the campaign season Tuesday by shaking hands in downtown Dallas and Houston, urging voters to go to the polls.

Clements' Democratic challenger, Mark White, will be working telephones in Houston, San Antonio and Austin with the same message.

White spent much of Sunday looking for minority support. In Brownsville, he predicted a minimum turnout of 2.8 million voters and said the issue of high utility rates would propel him to victory, The Dallas Morning News reported.

"Bill Clements's defending the utility companies will prove to be the Republican incumbent's fatal mistake," White told reporters aboard his campaign airplane traveling from Houston to Brownsville.

White said he was encouraged by the enthusiasm he has seen on the campaign trail and by reports of heavy absentee voting in traditionally Democratic districts.

Clements re-election effort also peaked early, White said.

"A vote for me is a good way to say that utility companies aren't going to run Texas," White said. "His inability to do anything about the fuel adjustment clause is an outrage."

White, who also campaigned Sunday in McAllen and Corpus Christi, leveled a blast at President Reagan.

"We can tell Mr. Reagan that all of those people he has asked to 'stay the course,' that we are telling him we need a midcourse correction," White said.

White was scheduled to campaign today in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio and Corpus Christi.

Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe also scheduled last-minute campaign appearances for White in West Texas.

Meanwhile, Clements predicted he would win with "at least" 52 percent of the vote.

Clements said White "is dead in the water and has been since June."

The incumbent predicted he would carry all the major geographical areas of the state, with the possible exceptions of South Texas and Austin.

Clements also criticized White's campaign promises to reduce utility rates by eliminating the automatic fuel adjustment clause.

"This is a classic example of a lack of integrity, a lack of truthfulness, on the part of my opponent," Clements said.

Jim Hightower, the Democratic candidate for agriculture commissioner, also campaigned with White in South Texas.

In Brownsville, Hightower said, "If we're on the road to recovery like the president says, we sure must be going the wrong direction on it."

Hightower, who faces Republican Fred Thornberry, also said, "I understand Bill Clements has started studying Spanish, so he can become bi-ignorant."

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen told the same crowd that his Republican opponent, U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas, "is not worried about unemployment" and has "turned his back on the unemployed."

Collins' campaign director, State Sen. Dee Travis, R-Garland, predicted a close race Tuesday.

"We think it's going right down to the wire," Travis said. "It's going to be one or two points either way."

U.S. Marine wounded 'superficially' in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded today about 30 yards from a U.S. Marine encampment at Beirut's Ouzai Beach. A Marine was "superficially" wounded on the hand by a piece of shrapnel and two Lebanese civilians were injured, said Marine Capt. Stuart Wagner.

A Lebanese army officer at the scene, who would not give his name, said one Lebanese was killed.

Lebanon's state radio reported a second explosion shortly after the first, this one at a nearby Lebanese army beach club. The blast set three cars afire, but caused no injuries, the radio said.

Wagner said one of the Lebanese wounded near the Marine camp was seriously hurt and was taken to American University Hospital in Beirut, while the other was hurt only slightly in the blast. Wagner did not name the wounded Marine.

Lance Cpl. Jack MacDonald, on duty about 75 yards from the explosion, described the blast as "a bright flash, black smoke and pieces of metal flying everywhere. It scared the hell out of me. I hit the deck."

WITNESSES SAID the explosives-laden car blew up about 30 yards from a cluster of tents where an American flag fluttered under the clear blue Mediterranean sky.

Edmond Shedid, a Lebanese news photographer at the scene, said Lebanese army units rushed to the scene and cordoned off the area, near the airport about six miles from downtown Beirut on the southern edge of the capital.

Shedid said he saw the smoldering wreckage of the devastated car but could see no ambulances or medical teams about five minutes after the blast occurred near Beirut airport.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the bombing.

A dozen vessels of the U.S. Sixth Fleet lay off the beach area where the bomb exploded. Israeli jets, apparently on a reconnaissance mission, roared over Beirut as the blast was heard.

THE EXPLOSION occurred close to the spot where a fresh contingent of Marines landed Saturday to replace the Americans who returned to Beirut in September after a massacre by Christian militiamen at two Palestinian refugee camps.

The Marines, initially sent to Beirut to oversee the late summer evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas from the Lebanese capital, are members of a 4,000-man multinational peacekeeping force including troops from Italy and France.

Earlier, Israel threatened to prolong its stay in Lebanon because of cease-fire violations by Syrian forces such as the weekend missile attack on Israeli reconnaissance planes over eastern Lebanon.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel left for a one-day trip to Morocco today amid reports that he would try to get Moroccan troops to augment the foreign already deployed in Beirut.

THE ISRAELI COMMAND in Tel Aviv said two missiles were fired from Syrian territory Sunday and narrowly missed the reconnaissance jets.

The command called it a "grave violation" of the cease-fire that went into effect at the end of July.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir accused the Syrians of trying to escalate an "already tense situation," and told Israel Radio that incidents like the missile attack may delay Israel's departure from Lebanon.

The United States is spearheading negotiations to rid Lebanon of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces.

Associated Press reporter Louis Fares, who was in the village of Barr Elias near the Syrian-Lebanese border Sunday, said he saw the Syrian missiles fired and heard two explosions as they streaked through the skies toward the jets.

HE SAID the missiles appeared to have been fired from the Syrian side of the border, not far from eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. Missiles fired from Syria downed an Israeli Phantom jet July 24 — before the cease-fire.

Israel stepped up its reconnaissance flights over eastern Lebanon following reports that Syria had rolled new missile launchers into the area. Israel has reported destroying more than 20 missile batteries in the Bekaa, but has not acted yet against missiles based just inside Syria's border.

Sheriff's investigators puzzled

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Sheriff's investigators still are puzzled by a bizarre series of shootouts that left a gunman and a small South Texas town's police chief dead, officials said.

The bullet-riddled body of the gunman, found with $10,000 in the pocket of his designer jeans, was identified Sunday as Mario Romero, 27, of the Mexican border town Reynosa, said a dispatcher in the Hidalgo County sheriff's office.

The dispatcher, who asked not to be identified, said sheriff's investigators will resume their investigation Monday to find a motive for the shooting spree.

Elsa Police Chief Jesse Rosales died Saturday after he was shot in the left side and an off-duty sheriff's deputy, Lee Perez, was hospitalized in good condition after being wounded in the leg.

Rosales and Romero both died during a gunbattle as each man emptied the ammunition in his gun into the other.

Hidalgo County Sheriff Greg Marmolejo said Romero had been shot "all over."

"He had a bullet hole on his right side, two on the left, two on his left arm, and one or two on the right," the sheriff said Saturday night.

Greg Marmolejo said Perez was flagged down by a farmer who thought a man standing in front of a roadside orchard was acting peculiar. The man was asking for a helicopter, Marmolejo said.

One man killed in pickup accident

GAIL — An oilfield construction worker was killed and another was severely injured early Sunday when the pickup in which they were riding overturned in a ditch two miles west of here.

Department of Public Safety investigators said Bill Flint, 50, of Gail was killed when the pickup in which he was a passenger overturned on U.S. 180. Driver of the pickup, which was eastbound at the time, was 22-year-old Tom Gwinn of Gail, also an oilfield construction worker.

Gwinn was listed in fair condition this morning in Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring where he was being treated for a broken leg and severe lacerations.

Flint's body was taken to Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home in Big Spring where services are pending.

The accident was investigated by DPS trooper Wayne Whiteaker of Lamesa.

'Texas-sized,' high-class shopping mall opens with crowds, fanfare in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — When merchants opened a Texas-sized, high-class shopping mall here, it was like Christmas in October.

More than 15,000 shoppers jammed the Dallas Galleria Saturday for the grand opening of the 43-acre plaza that includes many of New York's finest stores.

"Business is better than any Christmas I've ever seen. We're swamped," said Cliff Bueche, divisional vice president of Tiffany & Co. while shoppers lined up to ogle J.R. Ewing-priced jewelry in the New York store's Galleria venture.

"This is the first store we have opened in 13 years," Bueche said, noting that the shoppers "are not all lookers, either. We've seen high sales."

Eighty-five stores and restaurants opened Saturday with another 45 stores, a 440-room hotel and a 25-story office tower to be opened within 90 days.

The upscale glitter of the mall attracted stores from Chicago, Boston and New York that are new to the Dallas market.

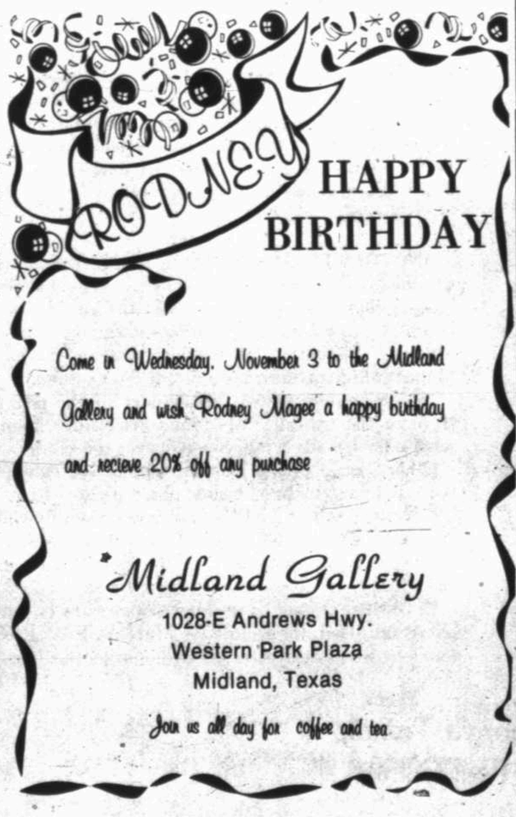

Many shoppers said they just came to look, pick up a free shopping bag, sample the gloss and sip the free champagne.

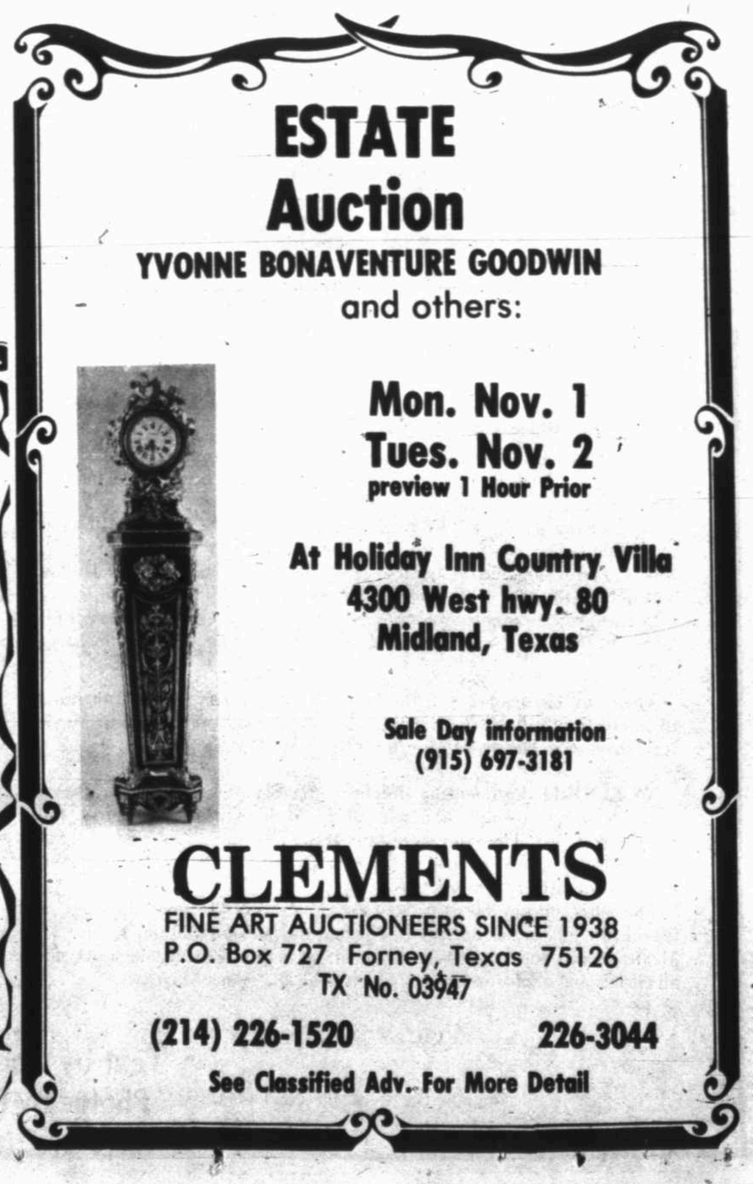

Traffic outside the new mall resembled rush-hour congestion, despite an army of people hired to direct the flow of cars.

At the F.A.O. Schwarz toy store, clerks had rung up 350 sales by 2 p.m.

Developer Gerald Hines, who made Galleria a household word in Houston when he opened the Houston Galleria in 1964, said he hopes the North Dallas venture will be an even greater success.

Volunteerism spirit growing in Florida

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — When Orlando Police Chief William Koleszar wanted to outfit his new six-member horse patrol, he raised $40,000 from local businessmen and neighborhood groups.

And when officials of Altamonte Springs, an Orlando suburb, decided to finance an $8,000 lift for the handicapped at a recreation center swimming pool, they persuaded the local owner of several fast-food franchises to pick up the tab.

An aggressive volunteer spirit is growing in many areas. The reasons are varied — a response to President Reagan's call for such private efforts, the administration's cuts in social programs, the economic hard times — but the effort in fast-growing central Florida has been particularly strong.

Gifts of time and money from individuals, corporations and private organizations to city and county governments in the area are providing police horse patrols, police vehicles, public swimming pools, free labor at city parks and thousands of school aides.

Elsewhere in the state, local charities and church groups are stepping up efforts to provide groceries, clothing, housing, nursery services, money and even dental care to those unable to manage under Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps and other assistance programs.

"Personally, I would love to see churches more involved with this kind of work," said the Rev. Ron Greiser of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in West Palm Beach. "For years, we allowed the federal government to take over work that we once did."

The Charter Co. in Jacksonville has "adopted" a senior citizen housing complex.

Many of the corporation's employees volunteer workdays to clean yards, wash windows, paint and do other chores to help out the residents of Hogan's Creek Towers. The company donates the materials; the workers their labor.

"We've become a model for Southern Bell and (others), which are also adopting senior-citizen developments," says Ann Knight, a Charter Co. records analyst who helped get the project started.

In Fort Lauderdale, Allstate Insurance Co. provided financing to rehabilitate a housing project for the handicapped and elderly in a slum section of the city.

Business donations to local governments of parks, fountains, statues and land for new fire stations or roadways is part of an American tradition.

Donations and financial support that were once graciously accepted, but unsolicited, are being actively sought.

"We've got to get away from tapping the traditional revenue generators," says Jeff Etchberger, Altamonte Springs city manager."We're going to the people and saying, 'Hey, if you think enough of this project to give a little extra, we'd appreciate it.'

"It's a spin-off of the economic times and is particularly good for Florida," he said, "because we have such a large population of retirees who have some very valuable skills that can be a benefit to local government."

Some Florida church leaders are not sure they can take up the slack left by federal budget cuts, but they are trying.

Baptist churches in southern Florida's Palm Beach County enlist 15 to 20 dentists to work with a mobile clinic which travels the state, treating migrant farm workers and the poor and handing out dental kits.

Ministers in the Boynton Beach area, between Palm Beach and Boca Raton, have formed the Metropolitan Ministerial Alliance Inc., an organization they hope can fill a need the government has missed. Their concern is housing.

Dr. R.M. Lee of St. John Missionary Baptist Church says he has little faith in the worth of housing projects run under government guidelines.

"Even when the money for those things were flowing freely, you practically had to be a crook to get the money," Lee said. "If you didn't know the right source who could get you the right contacts, your proposal was put in the stack and probably lost."

While realizing the many problems involved, Lee and the others hope to tap private foundations, which he says don't impose so many guidelines.

Florida's congressional delegation has become the first to establish a program under the administration's Private Sector Initiatives Task Force, a special two-year effort to stimulate such projects throughout the country.

"Florida is taking a very active role in solving community problems," said the task force chairman, Armco Steel Corp. executive William Verity.

Some community leaders say private help for public projects has always been a way of getting around bureaucracies or of providing help where government doesn't.

Dr. Bruce Quint, director of planning and development for Fort Lauderdale's Housing Authority, said the state saved almost $30 million when a portion of the authority's "slum busting" rehabilitation project was financed by $2 million worth of bonds bought by Allstate.

"This was a great example of how the private sector can work and finance projects in the inner city," said Quint of the 1977 project.

Manny Garcia, whose Dagvar Enterprises manages 18 Burger King restaurants in four central Florida counties, says his corporation has orders dictating community involvement.

"We've been doing this for 12 years. There's no strings attached," he said.

'Big Brother' keeps eyes on downtown Miami

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The gray-bearded Hasidic Jew shuffled down the street in the hot sun, paused to rest, mopped his brow with his sleeve, looked up in the air — then smiled and waved his wizened fingers.

Thanks to a controversial space-age bid to stop rising street crime, the patriarch was on TV — just like the other strollers, shoppers, children and bench-sitters on the corner around him.

Five months ago, Miami Beach put a one-mile stretch of its decayed downtown on television in a controversial experiment, and police are pleased with the result.

"We're trying to create an omnipresence of police and a sense of total paranoia for the criminal," says police Officer Thomas Hoolahan. "We want to increase the criminal's sense of risk as much as possible when he walks down a Miami Beach street."

But Sylvia Thompson, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Florida, says the whole notion smacks of George Orwell's novel "1984" and its theme, "Big Brother is watching you."

In Orwell's inhumane future crammed with all-seeing video eyes, "you had to live — did live, from habit that became instinct — in the assumption that every sound you made was overheard, and, except in darkness, every movement scrutinized."

Hoolahan, however, defends the surveillance by saying it's no secret. "We want people to know the cameras are there. That's half the point of it — we're not spying," he says.

The cameras were turned on in June, after city officials figured they would have to double Miami Beach's 282-member police force to properly patrol the dilapidated South Beach neighborhood.

Peering with 50mm eyes, the cameras beam their pictures to a monitoring room where screens display what's happening at street corners along Washington Avenue and Lincoln Road.

It's the same technology once used by Israelis to watch the uneasy frontier that divided Jewish from Arab Jerusalem. But what do the TV screens depict in Miami Beach?

"Golly, it's boring, like watching an abandoned car," admits 76-year-old Harold Birch, a retired stereotyper who has spent more than 150 hours before the monitors as a volunteer.

In fact, police have never seen a televised crime in progress. "Not yet," says Sgt. Richard Izzo, in charge of the video technology.

But police call the cameras a knockout weapon in their psychological war against crime in South Beach. Crime is down in Miami Beach in 1982, and although Hoolahan has no specific statistics, he gives much of the credit to the five months of video surveillance.

Police have mounted on light and traffic poles 112 metal camera cowlings marked "POLICE." There are only 20 TV cameras inside those cowlings, but, "We can move them (cameras) from housing to housing," says Hoolahan. Only an expert can tell where the eyes are.

Along the two streets, frequent large yellow signs declare: "Television Police Protection."

"One woman, her purse was being robbed, and she pointed up to the camera and said to the guy: 'You're crazy; don't you know they're watching you.' He stopped and took off," Izzo said.

But there are problems. The crown jewel in the $600,000 surveillance system is supposed to be a rotating camera with zoom lens atop the 14-story Financial Federal Building that can zero in on action anywhere in a three-block radius. It's broken, Izzo says.

Also, not enough people have volunteered to staff the video command post 24 hours a day. From midnight to 8 a.m., no one is monitoring.

Even so, many residents like the system. "Even when they weren't working, they had a deterrent effect," says bank manager Jorge Juver. "I mean, how could you be sure if you were a criminal?"

Even the ACLU could learn to live with the video eyes, says Ms. Thompson. "The technology is neutral, and we've determined that although they may have a chilling effect, they don't raise any constitutional issues" she says.

Husband, wife recruiting team sign up son

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Larry and Vie Lee Walter, one of the Navy's top recruiting teams, have persuaded a host of young men to don sailor's uniforms. But none pleased them more than one recent enlistee — their 18-year-old son.

David Kent Walter joined the Navy this fall, continuing his family's long tradition of military service and filling his parents with red-white-and-Navy-blue pride.

"I was tickled to death," his mother, daughter of a World War II Army flyer, said Sunday. "It was probably our best recruiting effort."

"I was shocked," said his stepfather, Larry, chief recruiter for the San Diego recruiting office, the Navy's No. 1 recruiting district in the nation for 1980 and 1981.

Mrs. Walter joined the Army reserve in Utah eight years ago at age 31 "as a part-time job to some get extra money for my son's braces." After two years as an Army recruiter, which included the recruitment of her younger brother, several cousins and a sister-in-law, she switched to the Navy.

In 1979, she was named "Recruiter of the Year" for Alameda Air Station near San Francisco.

Her other younger brother also did a hitch in the Navy.

"My mother is the only adult member of our family who wasn't in the military — and she said that was because she had to work as Rosie the Riveter during the war," said Mrs. Walter, a supervisor at the San Diego recruiting office.

Her husband's military family tree has even longer branches.

"My brother and all my uncles were in the service, and I've both sets of my great-great-grandfathers' discharge papers from the Civil War. They were in Ohio Volunteer Infantry," said Walter, who grew up on a farm near Lithopolis, Ohio.

He and his wife were married two years ago after working together in the recruiting office. Walter, 44, a 28-year Navy veteran, legally adopted her son from a previous marriage.

"Kent always told me he wouldn't go in. I had him set up to be an air traffic controller, but he surprised us," said his mother, a native of Ogden, Utah.

"I was shocked because he had just been talking about buying a car. I thought he might have to run the usual gamut that a lot of kids do — run around a couple years before getting serious," said Walter, master chief in command of the San Diego district.

They believe their son is part of a trend recruiters have noticed in the past year.

"With the economy the way it is, kids today are looking at the military as a job they can count on," Mrs. Walter said.

Her son, who plans to follow his stepfather's footsteps and become a submarine crew member, agrees.

"A lot of my friends are taking a second look at the military because of things like a free education and special training," he said.

"The nicest thing right now is that we're all together and everyone's got a paycheck coming in," Mrs. Walter said. "But by next spring we could be scattered all over the world."

But Kent, who started boot camp three weeks ago, already has found the military life has its drawbacks.

"He said the boot camp food was terrible," said Mrs. Walter. "And he begged me to bring him a pizza."

COLLINS VS. BENTSEN

WHO WILL BE THE BEST SENATOR FOR OIL AND GAS?

"The Bentsen Tax" — The Wall Street Journal on December 18, 1979, ran an editorial naming the Windfall Profits Tax after the Senator who switched over to vote with the Northeastern liberals and assure its passage. That Senator was Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.
JIM COLLINS fought and voted against the Windfall Profits Tax.

Although the Senate passed a $178 Billion tax, Lloyd Bentsen voted in Conference Committee to add an additional $49 Billion to the tax. The additional tax passed on a 5–4 vote. The deciding vote to raise the tax was Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.
JIM COLLINS opposed this additional tax and voted no.

Bentsen voted to authorize $20 Billion in subsidies for synthetic fuel development. This synthetic fuel would result in gasoline at $2.50 per gallon to consumers when our domestic producers can provide it at half that price.
JIM COLLINS opposed this wasteful expenditure and voted no.

Bentsen led the fight to have natural gas produced and sold in Texas to be under federal regulation for the first time ever. Bentsen also voted for gasoline rationing.
JIM COLLINS opposed both of these measures.

For their records on oil and gas and other issues, leading conservative and moderate groups rank Jim Collins near the top in Congress and Lloyd Bentsen near the bottom. These groups are the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, American Security Council, Americans for Constitutional Action, American Conservative Union and the National Alliance of Senior Citizens.

White House under fire to name women to top jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, worried that a backlash from women dissatisfied with the Reagan administration may show up in Tuesday's election, has formed a task force to locate women for top administration jobs.

"We feel the heat directly," said Helene von Damm, the recently appointed assistant for presidential personnel. "There's a lot of pressure."

The White House has been criticized repeatedly by women's political groups for not appointing more women to top administration posts.

Some Republicans have insisted the administration has knocked many women out of the runnning by judging them by stricter political standards than they use for men.

And for the last two years, polls have been turnin up what they call the "gender gap," evidence that women have a more negative view than men of President Reagan and Republicans.

"The gender gap is important," Mrs. von Damm said in a recent interview. "If it prevails, it will be very damaging to us."

Although the White House had not made a point of publicizing the task force previously, one member of the group sought out a reporter a few days before the election to talk about it.

The gender gap was cited in an October Gallup poll when men and women were asked which party they would like to see win in their congressional district. Women preferred the Democrats over Republicans 58 percent to 42 percent, while men preferred Democrats over Republicans by a narrower 53 percent to 47 percent.

Another poll taken two weeks earlier by The Washington Post and ABC queried men and women on whether they approved or disapproved of the way Reagan was handling his job. In that poll, 45 percent of the women approved of Reagan's record and 47 percent said they disapproved. Of the men, 54 percent said they had a favorable opinion of the president, while only 40 percent said they did not.

Republicans are worried about the gap in elections because it played a major role in the 1980 elections. According to Associated Press-NBC News polls of voters in 1980, women split evenly between Carter and Reagan, but men favored by Reagan by 20 percentage points.

And polls have found a gender gap working against GOP candidates this year in many Senate and governor's races. Thus, in close races, a Republican's poor showing among women voters could cost the GOP a victory.

Mrs. von Damm, who served as Reagan's personal secretary before joining the personnel office last year, said the new task force consists of 13 women who work for the administration. Weekly they review a list of job openings and their requirements for suggestions of women to appoint to top positions.

Mrs. von Damm acknowledged that since Reagan was elected two years ago, various groups have supplied the White House with scores of names of women for positions within the administration.

"We had lots of names but they hadn't been checked out," she said, adding that the job of the new task force will be to identify qualified women for specific jobs.

"When a vacancy comes, you automatically have four or five white males," she said. "They have such a network. I need to be ahead of the curve. We look ahead to vacancies that will occur."

Women on the task force include: Ann Gorsuch, administrator at the Environmental Prtotection Agency; Phyllis Kaminsky, director of public information at the International Communications Agency; Ann Dore McLaughlin, director of public affairs at the Treasury Department; and Lee Ann Elliott, commissioner at the Federal Election Commission.

Mrs. Von Damm said that as of last September, the Reagan administration counted 86 women presidential appointees.

Bobbie Kilberg, a Republican attorney who worked in the White House in the Nixon and Ford administrations, said that during the first round of Reagan appointments, administration officials judged women by different standards than men.

"There was a litmus test for women that didn't exist for men," said Mrs. Kilberg, who served as vice chairwoman of Reagan's 1980 advisory board on women.

Man punches priest preparing to celebrate Mass

BOSTON (AP) — A man ran up the aisle of a church and punched a priest who was about to celebrate Mass, police said.

The priest, the Rev. Mark Carr of the Most Precious Blood Church in the Hyde Park section of Boston, was not injured and he continued the 7 a.m. service Sunday, police said.

"The guy jumped the alter rail and punched the priest," said city Police Lt. Robert Faherty. "When we talked to him, he was rambling and incoherent. He said it was something about his duty to God."

Another priest at the church, who was not identified, said, "It was harmless. The poor man was sick."

The man, a 50-year-old Hyde Park resident whose name was not disclosed, told police he had been treated in the Veterans Administration Hospital in the Jamaica Plain section. He then was taken to the hospital by ambulance at about 9 a.m. and admitted, according to hospital officials.

No charges were filed. Faherty said.

Six incumbents to lose seats to incumbents

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter which way the wind blows Tuesday, six members of Congress are destined to lose their seats in the kind of races that can happen only once a decade.

The races are among the most hotly contested in the nation. Each one involves two incumbents — Republican locking horns with Democrat — in new districts drawn because of population shifts discovered by the 1980 census.

Four states — South Dakota, Missouri, New York and Massachusetts — lost House seats. California gained two.

South Dakota's congressional representation was halved to one seat, leaving freshman Republican Clint Roberts, 45, in a close race against second-term Democrat Tom Daschle, 35.

The most widely publicized race has been in Massachussetts where senior congresswoman Margaret Heckler, 51, a Republican supporter of Reaganomics, faces freshman Barney Frank, 42, a Democrat who has called the contest a referendum on the president's budget cutting program.

Mrs. Heckler, an eight-term congresswoman, previously represented 70 percent of the voters in the redrawn district, but her campaign manager Joe Rayball called the race a "dead heat" the week before the election.

In South Dakota, Roberts announced his candidacy by saying, "I stand tall and proud for our president." A rancher who has emphasized his background in agriculture, Roberts tried to portray Daschle as a liberal who does not represent the views of South Dakota.

Daschle is fighting to maintain Democratic party presence in a state where all but one top state official is a Republican. He claims Roberts is blindly following Reagan despite the interests of South Dakota.

In Missouri, the race between first-term Republican Wendell Bailey, 42, and third-term Democrat Ike Skelton, 50, is a contest in which the candidates differ more in style than political philosophy. An analysis of their 1981 voting records found them almost always agreeing on substantive issues.

"Bailey is a car dealer, the kind of guy who says, 'Hi, I'm in town, let's have a party," said a Bailey staffer. "Skelton is quiet, reserved, courteous, polite, attentive."

In New York, incumbents face incumbents in two districts.

Fifth-term Republican Benjamin Gilman, 59, is up against Democrat Peter Peyser, 61, also a five-termer. The two often have worked closely in Congress and, like Bailey and Skelton of Missouri, are considered to differ more in style than voting records.

Peyser, solidly Democratic since he switched from the Republican Party in 1978, has been described as brash and combative, speaking often and at length on the floor of the House. Gilman is quieter and tends to limit his speeches more to issues of particular concern to his constituents.

In the lower Hudson River valley, freshman Republican Guy Molinari, 53, and fourth-term Democrat Leo Zeferetti, 55, are battling to represent a district so conservative the third candidate, Carl Grillo of the Liberal Party, is scarcely mentioned.

Zeferetti is a former New York City prison guard who took Hugh Carey's congressional seat when Carey became governor in 1974. He has chaired a special committee on narcotics and has supported organized labor, the shipping industry and the House Democratic leadership. When his district was wiped out, part of it was placed in Molinari's old district.

Molinari, a Staten Island native and lawyer, has treated Zeferetti as an outsider. Observers say the race hinges on whether Staten Island voters, who make up 70 percent of the district, will favor Molinari for his experience and record on local issues or whether Zeferetti can succeed in turning the race into a referendum on Reagan's political policies.

California's seven-term Republican, John Rousselot, 54, created an incumbent vs. incumbent race when he moved to Los Angeles County to avoid running in the primary against a fellow Republican congressman in his redrawn district.

Rousselot's opponent is Democrat Matthew Martinez, 53, who won a special election in July to get to Congress. The district is largely Hispanic and Democratic.

Rousselot, a former John Birch Society member, has been the California congressional delegation's most powerful Republican.

Dog attacks candidate

DESERT HOT SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Mayoral candidate Charles Parker was looking for votes over the weekend, but ran into trouble — an angry pit bull dog.

The dog charged from a vacant lot about 5 p.m. Saturday and attacked Parker, 34, who was stumping door-to-door.

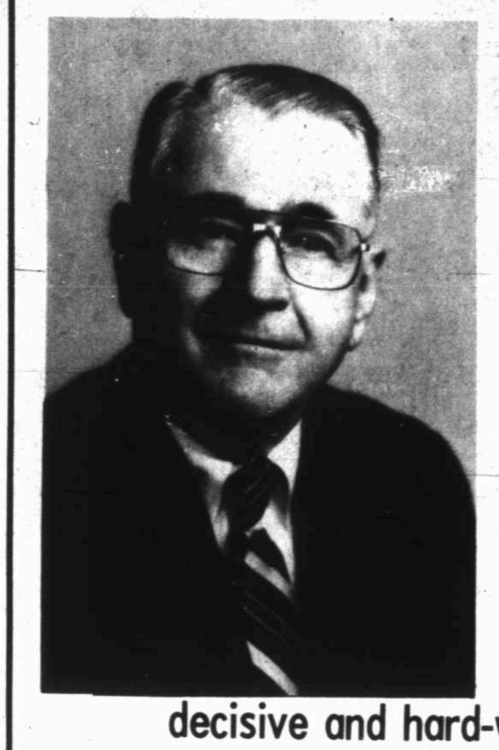

The candidate escaped without injury to a neighboring house, but the dog had to be shot to death by city police, dispatcher Lisa Atkins said.

Ms. Atkins noted the animal's owner, whom she wouldn't identify, previously had been cited after neighbors complained the dog was allowed to run loose.

Parker is one of four candidates in the non-partisan race.

Glamour seen in spring fashions

By EILEEN PUTMAN
AP Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Movie star glamour took a bow in lush silk organza, rich damask and iridescent taffeta Friday as some of the more theatrical designers unveiled their spring looks.

There was high drama from Shamask, the house which dresses women in folds of overlapping material cut in diamond shapes, and luxurious frills for evening from Bob Mackie, noted for costuming the stars.

Bill Haire turned richly stamped damask into drop-dead suits that were the prize of his collection. Geoffrey Beene offered unabashedly feminine looks of organza and lace.

Happily, these designers are into the ebullience of spring and the romance of spring nights, and not the gloomy looks that have emerged for next year as some designers pay obligatory homage to dreary black.

Shamask is always mysterious, sculpting his fabric around a model in odd shapes that defy the normal rules of perspective and cut.

His strapless evening gown was the most successful of these ventures, and it appeared in fiery red as well as a luminous teal. The bodice consisted solely of a wide swath of material wrapped twice around the body and finishing with a saucy upturn.

Daywear by Shamask was in coolest handkerchief linen or cotton gabardine. Long straight skirts were presented with deep back slits or multiple asymmetrical slits.

The tops were in the signature Shamask shaping — rounded shoulders, double lapels and diamond-cut folds, sleeves ending in angular criss-cross wrapping.

New surgical treatment helps sufferers of pancreatitis

By JOANN RODGERS, Science Writer
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — A new operation that relocates part of the pancreas to a new site in the body could stop the intense pain suffered by thousands of alcoholics without making them diabetic.

The surgery, called an "autotransplant," has been performed worldwide on at least nine patients with chronic pancreatitis, a condition marked by painful, disabling inflammation and scarring.

Dr. Richardo L. Rossi of the Lahey Clinic in Burlington, Mass., described his experience with four patients at a meeting of the American College of Gastroenterology. After one month to a year and a half, the two men and two women have "significantly less" pain, while the transplanted pancreas continues to produce enough insulin to prevent diabetes, he said.

Although chronic pancreatitis, or CP, is uncommon and its precise cause unknown, a substantial number of alcoholics are victims, Rossi said. Two of his four patients are alcoholics.

CP presents a catch-22 situation for doctors and patients, Rossi noted. Patients who stop drinking experience some relief, but prescription and most other treatments eventually fail. Thus the pain — likened by one patient to a "blowtorch" in the stomach — often requires removing all or part of the offending organ to sever the nerves and bring relief. But the more pancreatic tissue removed, the greater the risk of diabetes, and prescribed insulin injections — particularly in the alcoholic population — have often proved ineffective, with patients developing massive complications from diabetes.

The idea of the autotransplant is to cut away the pancreas from its pain-carrying nerve connections in the abdomen. Then, instead of throwing it away, it is moved to the groin, where it can painlessly continue to grow insulin-making cells. The transplanted pancreas has no nerve connections, so that even if the disease continues, there is no pain. Rossi and his team remove up to 90 percent of the organ and link it to blood vessels in the groin, which provide nourishment.

The Massachusetts surgeon emphasized that autotransplants are still experimental and performed only when operations to remove small pieces of the pancreas or medical treatments fail to provide pain relief. Among his four patients, one still requires some narcotic drugs; all need antacids and digestive enzyme tablets. The operation takes six to eight hours and a month-long hospital stay.

If further study proves the value and safety of the autotransplant, however, Rossi says "hundreds and perhaps thousands" of alcoholics and other CP victims could benefit. He already recommends the procedure whenever a large part of the pancreas is removed, as a "backstop" in the event the rest of it must later come out as well.

Many agoraphobics being helped by Phobia Program

By JOANN RODGERS, Science Writer
Hearst Feature Service

By the time Ollie Hunter approached the voting booth on election day, 1972, she was hyperventilating and shaking with chills and nausea. She felt dizzy, terrified and out of control. "I really thought I was going insane," she recalls. "It was a horror."

It was not the prospect of choosing between Nixon and McGovern or some mysterious bug that victimized the 32-year-old housewife. She was struck, instead, by an acute attack of agoraphobia, or "fear of open places." As one of the estimated 10 to 15 million agoraphobics in the United States, she literally panicked from the trip to the polls, the crowds and the enclosed space of the curtained booth.

Most agoraphobics are at times afraid to leave their homes for any activity, from voting to eating. That, too, happened to Hunter, a Columbia, Md., resident. After uncounted psychiatrist visits, and a bad time with Valium and alcohol, her phobia overwhelmed her altogether.

'Two years ago this month I was unable to leave my bedroom. I couldn't even eat with my husband and two teenage sons.'

Chance reading of an article in a local newspaper has made a voter — and a fully functioning wife, mother and working woman — out of Ollie Hunter. The article described the Phobia Program of Baltimore, a branch of a private mental health clinic in Rockville, Md., where licensed psychologists and recovered phobics take people like Hunter through an intensive, 16-week training program that teaches the phobic to prevent and abort panic attacks.

Joan Edwards, Hunter's therapist, came to her house and "step by step got me walking downstairs. I drove with her, met her in town and eventually mastered the skills to meet all the demands of normal living," she says.

DEAR ABBY

'Successful' man not real man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I read your column for chuckles every morning in the Chicago Tribune and can't believe that there are so many people out there leading such dull, unrewarding lives. So, I'm writing to tell you about myself just to brighten your day with the knowledge that we are not all such miserable wretches.

At the age of 17, I enlisted in the U.S. Army's Special Forces and received an awesome collection of combat decorations for my work against the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese army.

A week after my discharge, just before my 21st birthday, I founded my own company. It became hugely successful and allows me to spend my summers in Europe, while my hirelings look after my growing interests.

Most people who meet me find me ruggedly handsome and incredibly manly. I have more girlfriends than I can handle, and I've slept with the wives of most of my acquaintances, and they all tell me I am the best lover they've ever had.

I have more money than I will ever need, and I enjoy the universal respect of my colleagues in a highly competitive industry.

In short, I am what everybody would like to be: successful, wealthy, influential and admired. And most important ... ADORED IN CHICAGO

DEAR ADORED: I congratulate you on your outstanding service record on behalf of your country. And if the rest of your letter is to be believed, you also rate high marks for your performance in both business and bedroom. You may be "ruggedly handsome," but manly? No way! One who boasts that he has slept with the wives of most of his acquaintances is not a man. He's a boy. And at your age, that is NOT what every man would like to be!

DEAR ABBY: My son-in-law is "John Q. Blue Jr." His wife (my daughter) is having a baby soon. It will be our first grandchild. She says if it is a boy, they will name him "John Q. Blue III."

Since the baby's father is "John Q. Blue Jr.," won't the baby be "John Q. Blue II"?

We have a big bet on this.

What I want to know is this: If they go from "John Q. Blue Jr." to "John Q. Blue III," what in the world happened to "John Q. Blue II"? My daughter and son-in-law say, "Junior is the second."

I say that Junior is the first, since he is the first child to take the name of an ancestor. Please straighten this out. — BIG BET IN OKLAHOMA CITY

DEAR BET: When a boy is named for his FATHER, who is a "Junior," he is called "the 3rd."

A man with "II" after his name is not named for his FATHER, but for someone else in the family — perhaps an uncle or grandfather with the same name.

So if your grandchild is a boy, he will be "John Q. Blue III."

DEAR ABBY: May I comment regarding "Heartbroken Father," who gave his spoiled 19-year-old daughter everything and received nothing in return?

As an attorney, I've seen a lot of people in a lot of situations, and I am convinced that parents should give their children what they NEED but make them earn what they WANT.

I recently drafted a will for a woman whose son told her, "You can't take that trip. Don't spend MY money!"

He may not realize it, but it's not his money until his mother dies. And when she does, he will learn that "his" money has been left to a children's hospital where it will do far more good than it ever would in his hands. — CONCERNED FATHER IN FLORIDA

NEWS For Homeowners

Landscaping: An Investment That Grows

There's one on every block: a homeowner whose yard is the eyesore of the neighborhood. The next time the block committee elects you to ask him to improve his surroundings, go armed with some valuable information: landscaping is an investment that grows.

Recent studies have shown that there is a definite dollar difference between the value of a healthy, beautiful, plant-filled yard and a bare, patchy one. Real estate agents, for example, were asked to assess the value a well-kept yard added to the selling price of a home. Their estimate? About six percent, or nearly $6,000 on a $100,000 property.

A lone cable car climbs the hill from Fisherman's Wharf on San Francisco's Hyde Street. The city's legendary transportation system in undergoing a $58.1 million renovation. In the background is Alcatraz Island.

Two cable cars make their way on the hilly streets in San Francisco. The cranky cars that have climbed 69 blocks of hills since 1873 will not be ready to roll again until the renovation is complete, targeted for a June 1984.

Cable car face lift

SAN FRANCISCO — Every year, millions of determined tourists spend millions of dollars to come to San Francisco with one goal in mind: a $1, 10-minute ride halfway to the stars.

The creaking, century-old cable cars are the city's No. 1 attraction, outstripping Fisherman's Wharf and the Golden Gate Bridge. But last September the last car pulled into the ancient brick cable car barn, and the cable will fall silent, for a 20-month, $58.2 million rehabilitation program.

"I think what we're seeing here is the end of an era," says Jim Olson, who has spent the last decade as a conductor and gripman — the person who operates the device which grips the underground cable.

Of the 158 operators, five are taking two-year leaves of absence, and the rest are driving other Municipal Railway vehicles, buses or electric street cars. When the cable cars are running again — June 1984 is the projected date — some will stay with more traditional transportation. Others will return to their places behind the grip, where every operator is a showman and every passenger an appreciative audience.

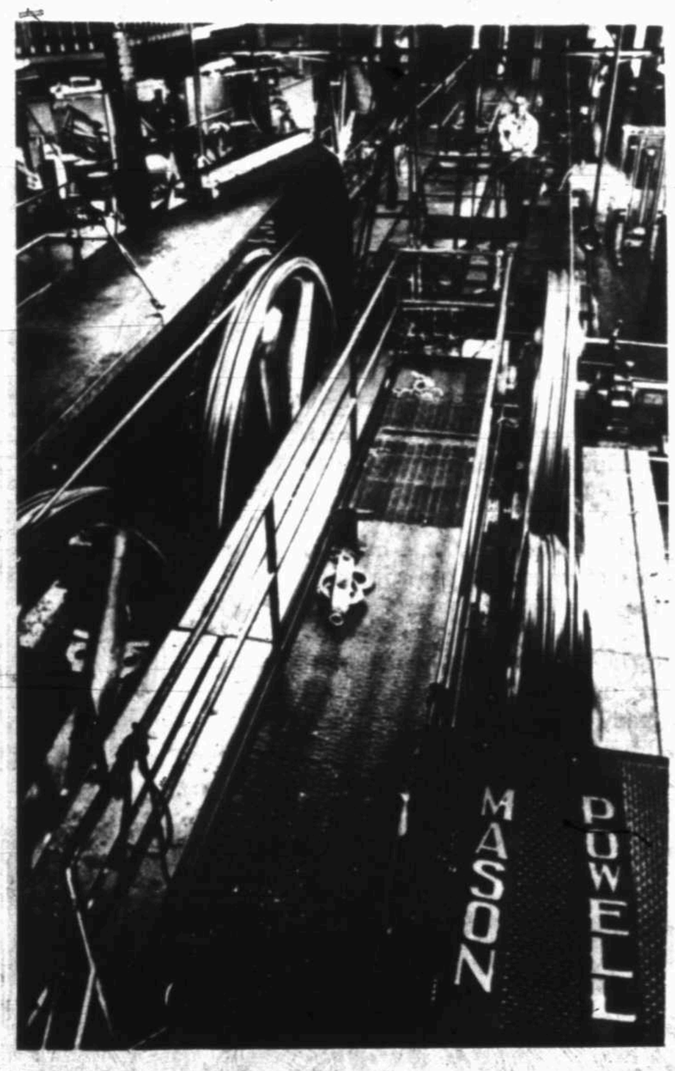

The operators agree the renovation is needed: Last year, 388 accidents were reported, and the system shut down 460 times.

So on Oct. 1, 200 workers began tearing up the 5 miles of track covering 69 city blocks through the heart of the city. Residential streets will be turned into trenches 24 feet wide and 14 feet deep, a source of dirt, noise and parking problems for city dwellers.

"The cable car restoration project will be like open-heart surgery on the city of San Francisco," said Fred Kreitzberg, the project's primary construction manager. "It's going to involve a little pain now so that the city will suffer less later."

People wait in line at the turnabout near San Francisco's Fisherman's Wharf for a ride on the famed cable car.

Inside the cable car barn, an operator keeps careful watch on the huge wheels that pull the cables, powering the cars.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 14% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7.5% maximum increase can be more if the original loan-to-value exceed. -5%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 15.75%
