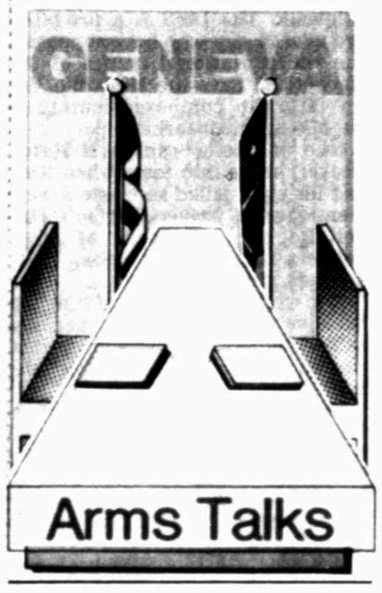
Shultz, Gromyko end first session of talks



GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko today ended an extended first session of their talks aimed at reviving nuclear arms negotiations.

A spokesman at the U.S. mission said the first Shultz-Gromyko session, in the Soviet mission, ran from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., an hour longer than scheduled. The second meeting, this time in the U.S. mission, was to begin later in the day.

The American spokesman said he could give no details of the first meeting.

Both sides have made it clear that the two-day meeting is likely to set the foreign policy tone for President Reagan's second term, and the outcome of the talks could affect the entire range of U.S.-Soviet relations.

The morning meeting took place around a dark wooden table, with six chairs on each side and three bottles of mineral water in the center. "How do you feel? Are you tired?" Gromyko asked Shultz. "No, I got some sleep on the plane," Shultz replied.

In their statements Sunday, on arriving in Geneva, both Shultz and Gromyko appeared to go out of their way to avoid pressuring the other in public.

"We will meet the Soviet delegation with a constructive and positive attitude," Shultz said.

Similarly, Gromyko said his government was prepared to start down "the path of radical reductions of nuclear arms and in the long run the complete elimination of nuclear weapons."

Yet they ventured no predictions of success. At best, Shultz hopes to reach agreement with Gromyko on a schedule for the two sides to negotiate after their discussions end Tuesday.

"These are not talks to negotiate substantive agreements," Shultz told reporters on his flight from Washington.

Schultz Gromyko

Gromyko, meanwhile, hinted at a potential roadblock. He said one goal should be to prevent "an arms race in outer space."

The reference clearly was to blunting U.S. anti-satellite and anti-missile programs, which Shultz is bound to resist.

Gromyko reminded his American bargaining partner that they had to deal with a "complex of interrelated questions."

Senior U.S. officials have declared the space weapons research program is not a bargaining chip.

For his part, Shultz wants to put the emphasis on reducing U.S. and Soviet offensive weapons. Negotiations on both medium-range and long-range missiles broke down in Geneva in late 1983 when the United States went ahead with its scheduled deployment of new nuclear missiles for NATO in Western Europe.

Top Soviet officials, including Mikahil S. Gorbachev, a potential successor to President Konstantin U. Chernenko, have said there was little hope for an agreement unless space was put off limits to the arms competition.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, today called U.S. research into space weaponry the "most dangerous" American military program in the post-war period. Pravda, the Soviet Communist Party daily, said the United States holds a "short-sighted course toward nuclear confrontation in space."

But Gromyko, while linking offensive and defensive weapon curbs, carefully avoided setting pre-conditions for progress in his meeting with Shultz.

"We would like to hope that the United States, too, will take a responsible and constructive approach toward questions to be discussed at the meeting," Gromyko said.

The 75-year-old foreign minister, who began dealing with American leaders four decades go, spoke in English. He was bundled against the chill in a heavy overcoat and wore a dark hat.

Salvadoran investigator assassinated

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte's special investigator for government corruption was assassinated and three bystanders killed by a gunman identified as a member of a far-right opposition party.

The assailant opened fire on Pedro Rene Yanes, one of Duarte's top political troubleshooters, as Yanes stepped into a street in a northeastern village late Saturday night to buy a soft drink, according to an official of Duarte's Christian Democrat Party who was with Yanes.

The official, Amilcar Velasquez, said the gunman then was shot by one of Yanes' bodyguards. Velasquez said he recognized the gunman as Francisco Alfaro and identified him as a member of the Republican Nationalist Alliance, known as ARENA.

ARENA's leader, cashiered army major Roberto d'Aubuisson, lost to Duarte in the presidential runoff election in May 1984. D'Aubuisson's critics have accused him of having links with right-wing death squads; he has repeatedly denied those allegations.

Yanes was visiting Concepcion de Oriente, 130 miles northeast of San Salvador, to participate in a festival on the eve of the Epiphany holiday.

He was appointed by Duarte last year to investigate possible corruption in the government and political parties.

Velasquez, who accompanied Yanes to the festival, said it appeared that the assailant was mortally wounded by the bodyguard's gunfire. However, Velasquez said he left the village without confirming that the man had died, and local authorities could not be reached because the village has no telephones.

A member of ARENA's executive committee, who asked not to be identified for security reasons, said he had heard of the shooting but could not confirm Velasquez's account. He said he did not know if Alfaro was a member of the party.

In a sermon Sunday in San Salvador, the leader of the country's Roman Catholic Church spoke of "the return to the scene of political threats and assassinations."

Congressional ceremony to make Reagan re-election official

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's re-election was to become official today following a joint session of the House and Senate to open and count the Electoral College's ballots.

It will fall to Vice President George Bush to preside and call out the official results, which, barring the unforeseen, will show that Reagan amassed a record 525 electoral votes to Walter F. Mondale's 13.

The constitutional ritual was expected to attract only a token number of lawmakers.

Four "tellers" — Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., and Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., and Reps. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., and Bill Frenzel, R-Minn. — will open the manila envelopes containing each state's official vote certificate and call out the results to Bush.

At the end of the 30-minute ceremony, if all goes according to script, Bush will declare, "this announcement shall be deemed a sufficient declaration of the persons elected president and vice president of the United States."

The 538 electors cast their ballots in their state capitals on Dec. 17, almost six weeks after 92.6 million Americans went to the polls to choose a president.

Few electors in U.S. history have defied the voters' will and voted for someone other than the candidate who carried their state. But that did not appear to happen this time, although one teen-age Utah elector had talked beforehand of marking a ballot for a minor candidate to protest the system that puts the election one step removed from the electorate.

The founding fathers in 1787 created the Electoral College as a compromise between those who wanted the president elected directly by the people and those who favored election by Congress.

The Federal Election Commission said Friday that Reagan received 54,451,521 votes, or 58.77 percent of the popular vote, to Mondale's 37,565,334, or 40.54 percent.

Some 634,187 votes — less than seven-tenths of 1 percent — were scattered among 15 minor party candidates or write-ins, the FEC said. Some 92,651,042 people voted, or 53.27 percent of the voting age population.

The turnout was up from 52.6 percent in 1980, ending two decades of decline from the record 62.8 percent turnout in 1960.

Reagan got more popular and electoral votes than any presidential candidate in U.S. history.

Illinois townspeople stand by their guns

GOREVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Residents of this southern Illinois village are standing by their guns, two years after protesting another town's handgun ban by requiring everyone in Goreville to keep a firearm at home.

"Most of us were raised with guns," said Mike Walker, a gun trader and hardware store owner. "Dad's got a gun. Mom's got a gun. They hunt; they want it for protection, a security blanket...And they know how to use them."

The Goreville village board adopted its mandatory firearms law in December 1982 to protest a ban on handguns approved a year earlier in the Chicago suburb of Morton Grove.

"We feel very strongly about our constitutional rights," said Mayor Gary Vaughn. "We did it to support the Second Amendment, and I feel sure we'd do it again."

The decision was condemned by some gun-control advocates, but Vaughn said the village of 1,200 people was standing by its law as a matter of principle.

Under the ordinance, any Goreville resident who does not keep a gun in the house can be fined. No such arrests have been made, but the mayor said the ordinance did prompt a few townspeople to purchase firearms.

Zaccaro indicted for scheming to defraud, prosecutors announce

NEW YORK (AP) — John Zaccaro, husband of Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, has been indicted on a charge of scheming to defraud in connection with the purchase and financing of five apartment buildings, prosecutors announced today.

Manhattan District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau alleged that fraud occurred when Zaccaro tried to obtain financing for the purchase of the five Queens buildings for John DeLorenzo, a Manhattan real estate investor.

Zaccaro submitted a falsely inflated contract of sale for the apartment buildings to a New Jersey mortgage broker, altered a copy of an appraisal of the buildings which was submitted to a securities firm and issued a false financial statement which overstated his net worth by more than $17 million, Morgenthau said.

Zaccaro, 51, was booked this morning on the one count and was expected to be arraigned on the indictment later in the day.

The charge is a misdemeanor, punishable by up to a year in prison.

Questions about Zaccaro's finances had dogged his wife's campaign. She complained that her own campaign themes did not reach the people because of the attention paid to her husband's alleged improprieties and to what part she had in family finances.

Indicted along with Zaccaro was Harold Farrell, 63, of Queens, on a charge of scheming to defraud and practice of law by an attorney who has been disbarred.

Farrell was accused of participating in the allegedly fraudulent financing scheme for DeLorenzo in connection with the purchase of a building in Manhattan as well as for the Queens buildings.

The indictment said that in September 1983, Farrell paid Thomas J. Albanese, then a director of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey's credit union, $25,000 in exchange for Albanese's assistance in getting a $550,000 loan for DeLorenzo's purchase of the Manhattan building.

The loan was improper because DeLorenzo was not a member of the credit union, as required by federal regulations, officials said.

Neither Albanese nor DeLorenzo has been charged, according to Morgenthau.

Treausure hunter says there's more booty

BOSTON (AP) — A treasure hunter who has retrieved more than $1 million worth of gold, jewelry and old French and Spanish coins from a wreck believed to be that of the pirate ship Whidah says his work has just begun.

The booty aboard the Whidah was estimated to be worth $4 million when it sank in a storm in April 1717 and could be worth $400 million now, according to Robert Cahill, a member of the state Board of Underwater Archaeological Resources.

Barry Clifford, the Vineyard Haven, Mass., man leading the excavation of the wreck 700 yards off Cape Cod, says he thinks there's enough there to keep him busy for six to 10 more years.

"All I can say is we haven't even started," said Clifford, 40, who began excavating the wreck this summer.

"I can't put a value on what was found thus far, but with at least 600 silver and gold coins, and the gold dust, what he's found is worth well over $1 million already," said Cahill, who as a member of the board examines the treasure Clifford retrieves.

One member of the salvage team, who spoke on condition he not be identified, estimated the loot pulled up so far is worth $10 million.

The Whidah, captained by Samuel "Black" Bellamy, was carrying booty from 22 vessels it had attacked in the Caribbean when it sank. Contemporary accounts told of great treasures aboard, including 180 canvas bags that each held 50 pounds of jewelry.

"Cotton Mather of the Salem witch trials wrote a book on the episode, and, piecing that all together, we can find out what was on the ship," said Cahill.

Clifford, who has dreamed of finding the Whidah's treasure since he first heard the pirate tale as a boy, announced his find in November 1982.

"This is the most famous pirate ship in the world, and we've hit it," he said.

Using historical records, and a powerful device resembling a metal detector to search 20 feet under the ocean floor, Clifford's salvagers found 15 to 20 likely spots for the treasure.

"At about the fourth or fifth hole, they made this fantastic discovery," Cahill said, enumerating the items he has seen so far:

—A chest full of Spanish and French coins in mint condition dating before 1717; —pieces of gold bars and jewelry carefully cut, probably by pirates dividing up their share;

—tiny nuggets of gold;

—more than 20 Spanish cannons, as well as cannon balls, and cannon and musket shot;

—a swivel gun, a pirate's broadsword and a flintlock pistol;

—and a mortar jar with the letter "W" scratched on its base.

Salvage laws require the state archeological board to examine the booty and to make sure what's brought up is preserved and charted.

"We also do it to make sure people don't start pocketing things and walking away," Cahill said.

The state has gone to court to claim 25 percent of what is salvaged. After all the treasure is brought up, state museums have six months to bid on everything, Cahill said. Clifford may sell what's left to the highest bidder.

Clifford's salvage operation, Maritime Underwater Surveys, has been granted temporary custody of the treasure, and claims it should keep it all, said attorney Alan H. Tufankjian.

An appeal to a federal court is likely, but "we're waiting to see what happens," Tufankjian said.

Jailed minister: Evil working harder than ever

"The state is physically in control of this church...But God has strange and powerful ways to reveal the corruption of our power structure..."

— Statement by Rev. Roth

CLAIRTON, Pa. (AP) — A jailed Lutheran minister whose supporters were arrested during the occupation of his embattled church, says "evil is working harder than ever" in the unemployement-plagued Monongahela Valley.

About 100 supporters of the Rev. D. Douglas Roth gathered Sunday outside Trinity Lutheran Church for weekly services after sheriff's deputies inside the church denied them entrance.

"The state is physically in control of this church...But God has strange and powerful ways to reveal the corruption of our power structure, our bishop, the judge and sheriff who suppress our American constitutional rights," actor David Soul said in a sermon written by Roth.

Soul, of television's "Starsky and Hutch," also played a tape from Roth, who said "evil is working harder than ever" to keep them from serving God and the economically troubled Monongahela Valley's unemployed workers.

"To silence the gospel is a scandal," Roth said. "This is heresy on the theological level and unconstitutional on the state level."

Soul, the brother of a Pittsburgh-area Lutheran minister who supports Roth, aid Allegheny County Common Pleas Judge Emil Narick "selectively" applied the law last week when deputies ousted and arrested the occupiers.

Deputies broke into the stone church Friday and arrested seven people, including Roth's wife, Nadine, and another Lutheran pastor, the Rev. William Rex, who were barricaded inside for several weeks in defiance of a court order.

Three of the protesters, in addition to Wayne Cochran, the church council's president who turned himself in, were sentenced to 60 days in jail for civil contempt of court. The other four were to be sentenced today.

Narick also sentenced Roth to another 30 days in jail, to be served concurrently with the 38 days remaining on his original sentence, for encouraging the others to defy the court order.

Roth, 33, was jailed Nov. 13 after refusing to obey western Pennsylvania Lutheran Bishop Kenneth May's orders to relinquish the Trinity pulpit.

The church will remain closed and under observation indefinitely, May said late last week. "It is hoped that this will enable all concerned with unemployment to get on with the issues at hand to help people."

The Rev. Beth Siefert, like Roth a member of the Denominational Ministry Strategy, conducted the hour-long service from behind a draped card table on the church's front sidewalk. The DMS is a pro-labor group of clergy who have supported the confrontational tactics of the Network to Save the Mon-Ohio Valley, a group composed mainly of out-of-work steelworkers.

One of the worshipers, Helen Becker, broke into tears when Roth and his eight jailed supporters were mentioned in prayer. Her son, Darrell Becker, president of Shipbuilders Local 61, was among those arrested inside the church.

"I'm exteremely proud of him, not because he's my son but because he's a human being who has principles and believes in humanity," she said.

The Network to Save the Mon-Ohio Valley has used controversial tactics such as spraying synthetic skunk oil at local banks and protesting at various churches to draw attention to the struggle of the unemployed.

The groups blame Pittsburgh corporations for the area's high blue-collar unemployment by their overseas investing.

Security was tight at the Geneva, Switzerland, airport Sunday after U.S. Security of State George Schultz arrived for talks with his Soviet counterpart, Andrei Gromyko.

TALKS

"The Soviet Union is in favor of working out basic guidelines to orient the negotiations toward reaching mutually acceptable accords," Gromyko said.

These should include preventing an arms race in outer space and sharply reducing nuclear arms, he said.

Shultz, speaking to reporters aboard his flight to Geneva, called his Soviet counterpart "a key decision-maker."

Assisting Gromyko at the talks are Victor P. Karpov, the senior Soviet arms control negotiator; Anatoly F. Dobrynin, the ambassador to Washington; and Georgi Kornienko, the first deputy foreign minister.

Shultz had with him Paul H. Nitze, a chief U.S. negotiator whose own career exceeds four decades; Arthur A. Hartman, the U.S. ambassador to Moscow; and Jack Matlock, a Russian-speaking member of the National Security Council staff.

"We are prepared to react, to discuss anything that comes along," Shultz said.

But Shultz all but ruled out extending his Geneva visit or stopping elsewhere in Europe before flying home Wednesday to report to Reagan.

Security at the airport and at hotels was tight. Guests were required to submit to electronic searches.

Hostage-taker may have had breakdown

CLEVELAND (AP) — A woman who police say held four hostages at gunpoint aboard an airliner until a SWAT team stormed the plane and shot her had suffered a nervous breakdown and "does not know what she has done," her sister says.

Cleveland Police spokesman Robert Bolton said officers planned to interview Oranetta Mays, 42, of Cleveland, today about the six-hour standoff Friday.

She was in stable condition in Cleveland Metropolitan General Hospital, where she is under guard, authorities said.

"She does not know how she got there (in the hospital) or why she is there," said her sister, who would only identify herself by her first name, Barbara. "She does not know what she has done."

Barbara said she last saw her sister on Wednesday when Ms. Mays invited relatives to her eastside apartment for dinner.

"She seemed all right," Barbara said. "She was quiet, but that was normal for her. She was always quiet. She was always to herself. She never opened up to anyone."

Barbara said her sister had suffered a nervous breakdown, but family members were unable to get her psychiatric treatment.

"I hope they put her away somewhere," she said. "Not lock her up forever or anything, but put her someplace where she can get help."

Ms. Mays was accused in May 1975 of shooting her husband, Charles, during an argument, according to police in Shaker Heights, a Cleveland suburb. Charges were dropped when Mays failed to pursue the case. He then moved to Alabama, a former neighbor said.

Authorities say Ms. Mays went around security metal detectors at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport, waved a handgun at guards who tried to stop her, and pulled an airline boarding agent aboard Flight 558.

Most of the passengers managed to get off the aircraft, but an elderly couple, a woman and her 8-month-old daughter were held hostage throughout the 6½-hour ordeal. Police decided to rush the plane because the gun-toting woman appeared tired and seemed more likely to harm the passengers.

Before rushing the plan, SWAT team members had rehearsed their assault on an identical Boeing 727.

"We planned this, we rehearsed this," said SWAT Patrolman Robert Patton. "We weren't rolling the dice."

While five SWAT team members noisily broke into the craft's rear door to distract the woman, officers James Gnew, 38, and Robert Patton, 36, led the assault on the front of the plane.

Gnew was unarmed because his mission was to rush the woman and get control of her gun. As the officers pulled back the curtain into the plane's coach section, the woman was crouched down and had the gun pointing at them, instead of at the commotion in the back of the plane.

"She apparently knew what was going on," Patton said.

GUNS

Vaughn, who is also the superintendent of schools and was chief of Goreville's six-member volunteer police force until September, is unsure if the mandatory gun law deters crime.

He is sure, though, that it has kept prison escapees out of town.

Goreville is almost midway between Marion, home of the maximum-security federal penitentiary housing the nation's most troublesome and escape-prone inmates, and the state's minimum-security Vienna Correctional Center.

Prisoners on the run have passed near and even through Goreville in the past. But Vaughn said the fact that two prisoners who escaped from Vienna last summer stayed clear of his town showed that the ordinance is a deterrent.

"I think most of the convicts in these prisons have a pretty good idea what's going on," he said. "The word's gone out, and they realize we're ready if they come through."

Walker said, "It's something that's pretty well taken for granted: Everyone owns a gun."

But he said the ordinance still had to be explained occasionally to ease the fears of the wary, like the visiting salesman from New York who "expected everybody to be packing a gun on their hip.

"After we got talking to him, he began to understand. We didn't like the idea that some small town in Illinois could pass an ordinance to ban guns that violates the constitution.

"We wanted to tell Morton Grove that's not going to happen in southern Illinois. We ain't that way."

ZACCARO

Zaccaro inherited his family's commercial real estate business in Lower Manhattan. Zaccaro now owns or manages about 25 commercial and residential buildings in Manhattan.

He said that when his wife was elected to a seat in Congress in 1978 — the seat she gave up to run for vice president — he stopped making sales in her Queens district because "otherwise she may be criticized."

Documents the couple filed in August 1984 said Zaccaro was worth about $3 million, mostly in real estate, while Ms. Ferraro was worth $760,000.

Throughout his wife's campaign for the vice presidency, however, Zaccaro's finances were subjected to intense public scrutiny. Even after the election, the House Ethics Committee ruled that Ms. Ferraro had erred in not reporting Zaccaro's holdings while she was a congresswoman.

The controversy began soon after Ms. Ferraro was tapped as running mate for Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale. Zaccaro balked at releasing his income tax returns, but did so under pressure. Ms. Ferraro revealed that she and her husband owed more than $70,000 in federal, state and local taxes due to a 1978 accounting error.

At the same time, Ms. Ferraro pledged to give up her share in her husband's business and to quit as an officer of the company.

SALVADORAN

Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas said the church's legal aid office reported that in the past week eight civilians killed, including five beleived to be victims of right-wing death squads.

He also said that following two holiday truces in the civil war, leftist guerrillas renewed their sabotage of public facilities, particularly the nation's power grid.

The two three-day cease-fires for the Christmas and New Year's holidays "with some few complaints of passing violations, are positive and we believe that these signs should be taken in account and encouraged," he said.

"Pitifully, the continuation of the war continues to hinder the path to peace," he added. "There are those who believe that the route to follow is to impose peace through war and unfortunately there are ill-omened signs of this current."

Representatives of the government and guerrillas have held two rounds of talks — Oct. 15 and Nov. 30 — and may meet again this month. The church is serving as mediator in the negotiations.

Headlights should cue voters on gay rights

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Members of a group opposed to two proposed gay rights ordinances say they've found a way to remind voters to show up for the Jan. 19 referendum that will decide the issue.

Councilman John Goodner, head of the Committee for Public Awareness, says the group will urge motorists to drive with their headlights on during daylight hours the week of Jan. 13.

"We hope the headlights will give people a reminder to get out and vote," Goodner said. "We've got to do something to get a good turnout."

Last summer, Goodner advertised in local newspapers, asking citizens to call council members and lobby against the ordinances.

But the council adopted the ordinances anyway by a narrow margin, blocking the city from discriminating against homosexuals in its hiring practices. Since then, 61,000 residents have signed petitions demanding the issue be put to a vote.

On Saturday, one group of black Baptist ministers opposed to the proposals said the amendments are the start of a movement to promote nationwide acceptance of the homosexual life style.

"Don't be fooled," said the Rev. C. Anderson Davis, of the Concerned Pastors and Ministers of Houston. "This is only a first step in a nationwide movement to gain acceptance and approval of homosexuality as a lifestyle, and to gain political power."

Davis refused to let Mayor Kathy Whitmire speak to the audience of about 70 ministers and said the meeting was only for opponents.

Wild horses ready for adoption are corraled at Collinsville.

Government trying to place more wild horses, burros

Associated Press

COLLINSVILLE — Like a clothing store trying to shed the past season's inventory, the federal government is going all out to get more people to adopt wild horses and burros.

The effort comes complete with the usual advertising gimmicks — slashed prices, two-for-one sales, new outlets and even a cash-prize chili cook-off at the Texas outlet in Collinsville.

"It worked good," Albert Hite, the 70-year-old horseman who runs the Collinville center, said of the cook-off. "We got shed of 47 horses that day."

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management is under orders to round up more than 17,000 of the animals in fiscal 1985, three times as many as in recent years.

But the big roundup comes at a time when fewer and fewer people seem interested in adopting — thus the sales gimmicks and other incentives.

Since October, the government has dropped its transportation charge from the adoption fees. For the Collinsville center, that means the adoption fee for a mustang dropped from $185 to $125 and for a burro, from $125 to $75.

In 1971, when the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act was passed, the herds had dwindled to about 17,000 horses and 10,000 burros.

Now the government estimates the total wild herd on federal lands is nearly 64,000 horses, most of them in Wyoming and Nevada, and more than 12,000 burros, most of them in California and Arizona.

Hite thinks the promotional effort will be a success.

"It's just like a sale at a grocery store," he said. "Naturally people are going to commence buying."

It is unlikely that the government will pursue its other option: destroying the animals.

"We're just as soft-hearted as anybody else," said bureau spokeswoman Murray Dale Norbeck.

Texans feel Aspin will be 'fair' to state bases, contractors

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Texas military bases and defense contractors have nothing to fear from Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the new chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, according to Texans on the committee.

Aspin, seventh in seniority, was backed by a cross-section of House Democrats in deposing veteran 80-year-old committee chairman Mel Price of Illinois.

"Les Aspin will be fair and he also is very intelligent," said Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, who serves under Aspin on the military pay and compensation committee. "He always has sided with the military on compensation." Ortiz wouldn't say how he voted in the balloting behind closed doors.

Aspin, 46, has been interested in reforming the militay pension system and he has looked with some favor on reviving the draft.

He was a leading supporter of the Scowcroft Commission recommendations on the MX missile and is credited with "saving" the missile system last year.

Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., 34, a junior member of the committee, helped engineer the coup that toppled Price. A conservative Democrat representing the district that is home to three military bases, McCurdy said Aspin's ideas on defense matters "are pretty well in tune with our area."

McCurdy worked for two years attempting to set the stage for the overthrow, not because he disliked Price or saw him as incompetent but because he wanted more assertive leadership.

In recent years Price has leaned heavily on Rep. Bill Dickinson, D-Ala., the ranking Republican. "Dickinson pretty much ran the committee," several members said.

Price depended heavily also on the non-partisan professional staff. Aspin is expected to retain the staff, but will "take control," according to some committee members who asked not to be quoted by name.

Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Marlin, the home of Ft. Hood, supported Price. "Texas is going to be all right," he said. "The major adverse impact on Texas is the loss of John Tower as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee."

Texas also lost Laredo Rep. Abraham Kazen, who ranked 10th on the committee. The man who defeated him, Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, is working to win a place on the committee. Rep. Ronald Coleman, D-El Paso, a sophomore, is the only other Texan on the House military panel.

Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, a newly-elected Republican, also has expressed interest in serving on the military committee.

McCurdy pointed out that the House Armed Services Committee is the only place Democrats can have a say in national defense policy. Republicans control the White House and the Senate.

Price and to a lesser extent the five men directly below him in seniority were considered by many Democrats to be rubber stamps for Pentagon defense policies.

Rep. Charles E. Bennett of Florida, next in line for the post, is 70 years old; Rep. Samuel Stratton of New York, 68, is a combative man who supported Bennett; Rep. Bill Nichols of Alabama is a strong supporter of the Pentagon, and Rep. Dan Daniel of Virginia, a soft-spoken conservative, also is 70 and viewed by the aggressive younger members as not able to stand up to the president in any dispute over policy.

Man wants father's death certificate to say 'homicide,' not 'suicide'

DALLAS (AP) — Saying he wants "to set the record straight," the son of a federal official with whose death Lyndon B. Johnson was linked wants his father's death certificate to read "homicide" instead of "suicide."

It has been 10 months since Donald Marshall and the nation first heard that con man Billie Sol Estes had linked the former president to a 1961 plot to kill Henry Harvey Marshall, a federal agriculture department official.

After hearing Estes' testimony, the Robertson County grand jury said in March that Marshall hadn't committed suicide, as a 1962 grand jury said. He had been murdered.

At first there was a flurry of excitement. Investigators tried to verify Estes' grand jury testimony while the case captured nationwide attention.

But no one came forward to either confirm or deny Estes' story. And the other two men he implicated — longtime Johnson aide Clifton C. Carter and Malcolm Everett, a convicted murderer who held sensitive jobs with some of the nation's largest military contractors — were dead.

People began losing interest in the mystery. The grand jury quit meeting.

But Marshall's son, Donald, was not content to let the case simply fade away.

Shortly before Christmas, he sued the Texas Bureau of Vital Statistics in an attempt to change his father's death certificate from suicide to homicide.

"I just want to set the record straight," he told The Dallas Morning News. "I've got two sons, and a lot of it has to do with them. The truth needs to be made clear."

Donald Marshall said he accepts Estes' story that Johnson masterminded his father's murder because he feared Marshall could link him to Estes' shady business dealings.

Others find it unbelievable.

The mystery began on a farm in Robertson County on June 3, 1961.

When friends found his body, Marshall was lying in an open field a few feet from his pickup. He had been shot five times in the abdomen with a bolt-action rifle.

If Marshall committed suicide, as a 1962 grand jury said, he would have had to shoot himself, turn the gun around, throw back the bolt and then repeat the process four more times.

Even FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who took a personal interest in the case, found that scenario hard to believe.

"I just can't understand how one can fire five shots at himself," Hoover scribbled at the bottom of a memo written in May 1962.

But local officials ruled the death a suicide and did not order an autopsy.

Marshall's widow, Sybil Marshall, refused to believe it was suicide. She hired a lawyer and a private detective to prove it was murder, but the ruling remained unchanged.

Then, nine months after Marshall died, Estes' made national headlines when he was arrested for a land swindle involving millions of dollars worth of cotton allotments.

Until his death, Marshall headed the cotton allotment program in Texas and had final say over who got the valuable planting rights from the government.

STATE IN BRIEF

New telescopes in use

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Officials at Stephen F. Austin State University are keeping their eyes trained on the heavens these days, thanks to two telescopes engineered and built by the physics department.

A grant from the National Science Foundation has financed the first major astronomy project for the university's 41-inch telescope, now the largest such research-grade instrument located between those at The University of Texas' McDonald Observatory in West Texas and Harvard University.

"This is a very smooth driving telescope," said astronomer Norm Markworth, who directed its engineering and construction. "I estimate we can move anywhere in the sky and easily find what we're looking for."

The telescope, the largest such instrument in the Central Time Zone, was built at a cost of $31,000 but is valued at $750,000. The device and an 18-inch telescope, housed in two domed observatories, were the result of a decade of plans and work.

University officials said the 13th-largest observatory in the United States is available to faculty, upper-level undergraduates and graduate students for research.

Anahuac families return

ANAHUAC (AP) — About 350 families evacuated from their homes returned Sunday after firefighters smothered a fire at a sulphur plant that released toxic fumes.

Authorities said that no injuries occurred as a result of the fire, which broke out about midnight Saturday at the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. plant in Anahuac, located 47 miles east of Houston.

A brush fire apparently triggered the blaze in stockpiles of sulphur at the facility, said a Chambers County sheriff's dispatcher.

Fumes spread more than a mile from the plant and kept firefighters and emergency personnel from getting close to the fire for several hours, said dispatcher Dawn Rayner.

Sheriff's officers said about 350 families were evacuated from a subdivision north of Anahuac off Farm to Market Road 563.

The residents were allowed to return to their homes at about 9:30 a.m. after firefighters brought the blaze under control, said dispatcher Mary Batiste.

Church building burns

ARLINGTON (AP) — A two-alarm fire destroyed a church storage building that contained more than $250,000 worth of goods collected for charity, fire officials said.

Officials said the Benevolent Building of the North Davis Church of Christ was destroyed by the fire early Saturday. Church officials said the building was worth an estimated $300,000.

A church elder, Ernest Coker, said the 3-year-old building was "pretty full" of food and clothing for the church's benevolent program, which serves about 130 Arlington families each week.

Fire officials said the back of a church bus parked next to the storage building also was badly burned.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Prison inmate hanged

TENNESSEE COLONY (AP) — A 33-year-old Texas prison inmate was found hanged from a twisted mattress cover in his solitary confinement cell, a Texas Department of Corrections spokesman said.

Authorities discovered Reinerio Musterio, serving 17 years for a Harris County conviction of aggravated robbery, shortly before 3 p.m. Saturday, Assistant Warden Jimmy Alford said.

Smuggling charges filed

HOUSTON (AP) — A Colombian lawyer was charged with smuggling about three-quarters of a pound of cocaine into the United States by hiding it in 68 condoms and swallowing them, authorities said.

Gerardo Antonio Urrego, 28, of Bogota, Colombia, was charged in state district court Saturday with possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute.

He was being held in lieu of $250,000 bond pending arraignment today.

Legislator unhappy about use of hot check fund for bonuses

DALLAS (AP) — Christmas bonuses that came from a "hot check fund" might have done wonders for 256 Dallas County employees' morale, but they haven't made one Texas legislator too happy.

District Attorney Henry Wade says the special fund, consisting of fees collected from bad check writers, went to attorneys, investigators and clerical staff members to let them know their work during 1984 was appreciated.

"You'd be amazed how it raised morale around here," Wade said.

But no other county workers received bonuses, and a legislator who sponsored the 1979 law that established the hot-check funds for district and county attorneys said last week that Christmas bonuses exceeded the use he had intended.

"I would say that when funds are used outside the purposes of processing hot checks or criminal prosecution, that raises questions," said Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. "The idea was to put it (bad-check collections) on a user-fee basis, not a bonus system."

Wade said he paid the $75,500 in extra compensation to his staff, in amounts ranging from $50 to $600.

Farabee and state Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, who wrote the bill, said the Legislature may need to consider modifying the law to place restrictions on how money drawn from hot-check funds can be used.

The law now says the hot check fund "shall be at the sole discretion of the attorney and may be used only to defray the salaries and expenses of the prosecutor's office."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A ♡74 ◇KQJ1065 ♣J843

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — Sometimes discretion is, indeed, the better part of valor. You are surely going to get a spade lead, which will knock out the only entry to your long suit. If partner does not have the ace of diamonds, your long suit may wither on the vine. Bid three diamonds. This does not preclude partner from continuing on to three no trump, but it does warn him that you need help to set up your suit.

Q.2 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK6 ♡K8 ◇A9 ♣AKJ983

What is your opening bid?

A. — A very awkward hand. You are not quite strong enough to open two clubs. However, there is a distinct danger that a one club bid might get passed out. The solution is to open two no trump. Despite your six-card suit, your hand is really balanced, and the king of hearts should be protected from a lead through.

Q.3 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♡QJ98762 ◇A8752 ♣6

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
Dble	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — We are as keen as anyone to punish the opponents at this vulnerability, but your hand hardly qualifies to play for penalties. You have one defensive trick and do not even possess a trump to lead through declarer. On offense, however, your hand has great potential. Even though partner's double of one spade usually denies a heart fit, a singleton in his hand could be enough. We opt for four hearts.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠J54 ♡K93 ◇K2 ♣A7654

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — You have a useful hand, but you have already told partner that when you responded two clubs. Now you need do no more than bid four spades. If your fit improves partner's hand, he can make a move toward slam.

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠95 ♡1065 ◇AQ83 ♣K1054

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — Partner has a powerhouse and you have a maximum no trump response. Nevertheless, some of your values are wasted. For the moment we would bid three no trump, to tell partner that we have the minor suits well stopped. Let's see what he does next — if he passes, you are probably in the right spot.

Q.6 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q76 ♡952 ◇K92 ♣K874

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠

What action do you take?

A. — It is a close decision. Our defensive prospects are somewhat dimmed by the fact that our kings are in front of the opening bidder, and the auction has marked partner with a singleton heart so, at this vulnerability, we are inclined to bid four spades — as a sacrifice. Even a four-trick set could be profitable in the long run.

Texas teen-ager 'proud' of her pose in Playboy

ALLEN, Texas (AP) — Julie McCullough offers no apologies to her shocked neighbors for her scantily clad appearance in the February edition of Playboy magazine.

"I didn't expect the townspeople to pat me on the back," she says. "But I was one of these starving models, you could say, and I'm proud of it."

Playboy isn't sold in any Allen stores, but reaction was swift after it appeared on newsstands in area cities less than a week ago with pictures of the 19-year-old model.

"Right now, we're all in shock. Maybe next week we'll have an opinion about this," a former high school classmate of Miss McCullough, who asked not to be identified, told the Dallas Times Herald.

Fans to fund construction of fountain

Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Elvis Presley fans from around the world will build a memorial fountain across the street from the entertainer's mansion, officials of Graceland Enterprises have announced.

"We have decided that the fountain will be a continuing legacy of the public's love of Elvis, since it will be constructed with their donations and will offer them the opportunity to be a part of this living memorial," Jack Soden, Graceland's executive director told about 400 Presley fans Saturday night.

The announcement came during a 50th birthday celebration for Presley, who died Aug. 16, 1977, of a heart attack.

During his lifetime, his fans by the thousands made trips to Memphis to leave birthday cards, cakes and teddy bears at the gates of his mansion, Graceland.

Since his death, the fans have continued to come, although the celebrations have become more organized in the past two years since Graceland was turned over to a professional management group. And the observance of the 50th anniversary of Presley's birth, Jan. 8, began three days early.

At Saturday night's party, fans paid $10 apiece to swap Elvis stories, listen to some of Presley's close associates and watch films of Presley concerts and interviews.

The party was followed by a spectacular fireworks display.

Despite almost a foot of snow that snarled traffic in Memphis late last week, the fans began arriving from as far away as Japan and Germany on Friday to tour Graceland.

Saturday night's party at the complex drew dozens of Elvis look-alikes who posed for photographers before a huge photograph of Presley.

Gordon Stoker, Neal Matthews Jr. and Hoyt Hawkins — the Jordanaires who sang behind Presley for years — performed a medley of his favorite songs.

Soden, executive director of Graceland Enterprises, said the fountain will be constructed in what is now a small shopping center across the street from the mansion.

He said the fountain will be the focal point of a park adjacent to Graceland offices and a restaurant.

Ron says Nancy has 'clout'

Nancy Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan has "great instincts" when it comes to dealing with large groups of people, but on a more personal level, the first lady has all the moves, says their son Ron.

Nancy Reagan, 63, also has become a forceful figure within the administration, wielding substantial clout and serving as a link between the president and top White House aides, Time magazine reported in this week's cover story.

"She has always had more influence than people generally realize," said departing White House Deputy Chief of Staff Michael Deaver.

"I pick up on something that (the president is) unhappy with... He may make some comments that I think would be helpful for Mike (Deaver) to know, and might facilitate a situation, and I might call Mike and tell him," Mrs. Reagan said.

Ron Reagan said the president "has great instincts on a whole-country kind of level, the big picture," but that his mother has "great instincts when it comes to individuals and small groups."

Sting

NEW YORK (AP) — Sting, the rock singer turned movie actor, will star as Dr. Charles von Frankenstein in "The Bride," the latest film version of the classic monster story, says People magazine.

"Dr. Frankenstein makes the wrong decisions in the end, goes mad and is pure evil. He's like us all, a victim of circumstances, but the architect of his own doom," Sting, the 35-year-old member of the rock band Police, said in an interview in this week's issue of People.

Sting, who won favorable reviews for his first movie role as a villain in the science-fiction epic "Dune," also has a part in "Plenty," which stars Meryl Streep and Sir John Geilgud.

Sting said he enjoys acting because "you get to express all those pent-up emotions. You can kill, run over people, shoot, behave like a monster and work them all out of your system."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC Entertainment President Lewis Erlicht says his third-place network's new show about a black family is not a rip-off of NBC's hit series, "The Cosby Show," which he had turned down.

"Is 'Full House' a rip-off?" Erlicht said at a conference of newspaper writers specializing in television. "My answer is just because you do a show about a black family does not make it a rip-off. That's a racist remark to even suggest it."

Erlicht, whose network is in third place in the Nielsen ratings, said he made a big mistake when he rejected "The Cosby Show," which stars Bill Cosby as the father in a black family.

"If I had it to do all over again, I'd take the show," he said Saturday.

Erlicht took a major share of the blame for ABC's fall to third place, but predicted that the network would turn its ratings fortunes around during the first half of 1985.

Margaret

LONDON (AP) — Doctors removed a small portion of the left lung of Princess Margaret, Queen Elizabeth II's younger sister, but it proved "innocent," the princess' office announced today.

At Buckingham Palace, a spokesman said other members of the royal family "will be very relieved at the news." No one would say specifically what was meant by the word "innocent."

"Her condition is satisfactory, and it's expected she will leave hospital within the week," the statement said without elaboration.

The princess was admitted to Brompton Hospital in West London on Saturday and doctors had said she was undergoing tests. A statement said the surgery was performed there on Sunday.

The spokeswoman who read the statement to The Associated Press refused to say what prompted the surgery or whether the tests on the removed lung section were made because of a growth.

Published reports said Margaret, 54, a heavy smoker, had been suffering from chest pains.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar-winning actor Broderick Crawford, who starred in the 1950s television series "Highway Patrol," was in UCLA Medical Center this weekend after reportedly suffering a mild stroke.

Crawford's family is "requesting that we not discuss his condition," staffing coordinator Victor Mitry said Sunday night.

An unidentified spokesman for the 73-year-old actor was quoted in Saturday's Los Angeles Herald Examiner as saying Crawford suffered the stroke and was admitted to the hospital New Year's Eve.

Right to respond

To acknowledge that the 37-year-old New Yorker who methodically shot four teenagers on a subway Dec. 22 was wrong to do so is to cover up a problem facing society that should be addressed quickly and forcefully.

Of course the shooting of the four teenagers who reportedly tried to get money from Bernard Goetz was not the appropriate response. By his actions, Goetz totally circumvented law enforcement personnel and the courts, and took the law into his own hands. That isn't right anytime there is an alternative.

To stop there, though, would be to completely ignore why the self-employed electronics specialist chose to shoot the teenagers. According to news accounts, Goetz shot the four one at a time after they had asked him for a match, then the time, then for $5.

We don't ride the New York subways but, according to reports we've read and accounts of those who have, criminal activity is rampant, particularly by gangs of young people — teenagers — who rough-up and extort money from passengers.

One can also judge from the public response to Goetz's actions that there is sympathy for a New Yorker willing to take up for his own rights and the rights of those around him. Shortly after Goetz surrendered to authorities a legal defense fund was established in his name and the Guardian Angels citizens patrol group, in addition to others, was assisting in soliciting money for his defense.

What the support for Goetz illustrates is that the crime problem in New York City has not been properly addressed and New Yorkers do not want to see one of their own prosecuted for his willingness to stand up for his rights and self-protection.

There is a responsibility inherent in a society such as this one for authorities to respond to public needs. When that response is not forthcoming in areas such as crime prevention and the court sentencing, individuals take the law into their own hands. It's faster and often more effective.

Officials in New York — and elsewhere — should be mindful of that reality.

Goodbye to CAB

In its heyday, the Civil Aeronautics Board had about 850 employes engaged in the various ramifications of supervising the airline industry. In 1978, its wings were clipped when Congress adopted the Airline Deregulation Act. It has been pretty much downhill for the agency ever since.

Last week the CAB, its responsibilities greatly diminished, went out of existence after 46 years' service and its remaining 300 employees moved to the U.S. Transportation Department where they will continue to administer what is left of airline regulations.

The only regret that can be expressed over the demise of the CAB is that the same realistic action is not being taken with other agencies of government that appear to be withering on the vine. People are still drawing salaries in a number of departments whose functions may be out-dated, and all over the country there are county governments whose tasks are overlapped by federal and state organizations but remain firmly rooted because politicians want to keep the courthouses populated with party stalwarts.

The phasing out of CAB is, however, at least a hopeful sign. It is the very first major federal regulatory agency to close its doors forever. As such, it also has proved to be the first exception to Parkinson's Law, which, as wryly defined and applied to public offices by C. Northcote Parkinson, states:

"... Subordinates multiply at a fixed rate regardless of the amount of work produced."

Another View:

Speedier healing

The public and particularly medical patients will be the main beneficiaries of "the most extensive change" in federal drug laws in 22 years, designed to speed the review of new drugs.

On average, as much as six months will be cut from the two years or more now needed to get a new drug on the market, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler said.

She said the new rules would slash paperwork by up to 70 percent, allow approval of drugs on the basis of verifiable foreign clinical studies and permit simultaneous reviews by various Food and Drug Administration offices.

The speedup could backfire, according to Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of the Ralph Nader-founded Health Research Group. He said he believed the quality of some reviews would go down and the drug review process would be slowed where FDA medical officers request additional data.

Although maximum caution is essential in the marketing of new drugs, delays caused by red tape alone are a pure waste of time. That alone can be life threatening for many patients.

The changes, which include many safeguards, appear to be in the public interest. Patients' safety can only be enhanced by awareness that the new procedures will be more carefully monitored.

Young spacemen may join forces

WASHINGTON — Despite all the controversy and consternation about "Space Wars," the key to peace on earth may be found in space. America's Young Astronauts and Russia's Young Cosmonauts may join forces to promote the peaceful exploration of the universe.

Jack Anderson

The Soviets are years ahead of the United States in establishing a Young Cosmonaut program, which is intended to stimulate the study of "cosmonautics." This covers the basic elements of space exploration, from astronomy to rocketry.

The Soviet program, open to youngsters from 10 to 17, operates through the school system and Young Cosmonaut clubs. As part of the program, national competitions are held in designing and modeling space rockets. One of the goals, according to Soviet documents, is "understanding the great role of scientists in different countries working with the aim of strengthening peace."

In an October ceremony on the White House lawn, meanwhile, President Reagan established a Young Astronaut program open to children from 6 to 16. His purpose, he said, was to "develop a cadre of young people who will be better prepared to meet the challenges of the 21st century." He also wants the Young Astronauts to develop a camaraderie with the future space explorers of other nations.

As chairman of the Young Astronaut Council, I have sent my daughter Tanya to Moscow with a letter for Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko. The letter makes this urgent appeal:

"The purpose of this letter is to establish a bond between the Young Astronauts and the Young Cosmonauts, who one day will explore space together. Our Young Astronauts want to be friends with your Young Cosmonauts. They would like to exchange visits, to learn from one another, to share dreams.

"The Young Astronauts are developing a sense of the great immensity of space and, in comparison, the infinitesimal size of the Earth. They view this planet as merely an oversized spaceship hurtling through the universe. Whatever might damage any part of the spaceship would endanger us all. Certainly, the Earth cannot be broken into pieces, with the Soviet Union and the United States assigned separate orbits.

"We cannot order other people out of existence simply because we don't always agree with them. So we had better learn to live with the people who are in the world with us. The best way to begin, we believe, is to get to know one another. Somehow we must cross the chasms that keep us from understanding one another.

"May peace be in your hearts, in your homes, in your fields, in your factories. Yet peace on earth is no longer enough; we also wish you peace in the vast cosmos that surrounds us."

The first educational materials have already gone out, meanwhile, to the Young Astronaut chapters that have signed up. We will also set up a nationwide "Space Watch" to observe what scientists are calling "The Year of the Comet." Young Astronauts will track Halley's Comet, view other celestial events and follow space launchings.

Before each launching, NASA has agreed to permit Young Astronaut backup crews to accompany the senior crews as they go through their final paces at the Kennedy Space Center. Eventually, a Young Astronaut is expected to fly as an observer aboard a space shuttle.

President Reagan has called on the private sector to support the Young Astronaut program, and more than a dozen corporate sponsors have already signed up.

Omni Publications will publish a monthly magazine for Young Astronauts beginning in September. Marvel Comics is developing a comic-book series and a TV cartoon show featuring the Young Astronauts. Safeway Stores will promote the program on Safeway bags, cereal boxes and milk cartons beginning next month.

Adidas is developing a line of quality apparel for Young Astronauts. Pepsi Cola, Burger King, M&M-Mars, Martin Marietta, Rockwell International and the Eaton Corp. are sponsors.

Intersat has developed a Young Astronaut satellite dish for schools; Commodore is producing Young Astronaut software for its computers; and Tymnet has granted space on its satellite communications to the Young Astronaut program.

In addition, art and science contests are planned for Young Astronauts, and the winners will be the guests of Disney World at its resort.

Footnote: At the rate that youngsters are signing up as Young Astronauts, the program should have at least 2 million members by September. Applicants should write to the Young Astronaut Council, 1015 15th St., N.W., Washington, D.C., 20005.

AN EXPERT COMPLAINS: The official whose job is to see that Energy Department employees are treated fairly has filed a complaint against the department — for not treating him fairly.

Nathan Pearson, the agency's equal-opportunity officer, is reported to be upset by the fact that he has been passed over for an annual bonus despite his official performance rating of "outstanding."

Pearson obviously can't handle his own complaint, so Energy Secretary Donald Hodel will have to appoint a special equal-employment officer to deal with the matter.

Pearson's boss, Director of Administration William Heffelfinger, said he put Pearson's name on the list for bonuses and hasn't been named in the complaint. Heffelfinger is an old hand at bonuses, having received several merit awards over the years.

The annual bonuses can pay government workers as much as several thousand dollars. Complaints have been fairly widespread among less-favored DOE employees that the bonuses go to the same few every year.

Insiders say Deaver blundered

WASHINGTON — White House insiders are convinced Michael K. Deaver blundered in quitting as deputy chief of staff, the same day as the Wall Street Journal expose on his finances.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Deaver is described by associates as working himself into a state of anxiety the past few weeks while awaiting the product of Journal investigative reporter Edward Pound. Although presidential aides felt the story was much milder than they had expected, Deaver was determined to hasten his long-planned resignation.

A footnote: Superficially, Deaver was jaunty on the morning the long-awaited expose ran. Commenting on another newspaper story describing his long-running feud with retiring Interior Secretary William P. Clark, Deaver snapped: "How could there be a feud? He hasn't talked to me for a year."

KEMP BEATS BUSH

Rep. Jack Kemp beat Vice President George Bush in an early sprint prior to their possible marathon for the 1988 Republican presidential campaign by hiring John Buckley, the highly-regarded deputy public relations officer at the Reagan-Bush campaign, as his new press secretary.

Bush was about to interview Buckley as a possible replacement for his retiring press aide, Pete Teeley. But Kemp beat him to the gun as part of beefing up his staff. Buckley, a nephew of columnist William F. Buckley and ex-senator James Buckley, handled press relations for Lewis Lehrman in his 1982 campaign for governor of New York.

A footnote: Another new Kemp staffer, political operative John Maxwell, has presidential campaign value. Although he most recently was executive director of the Texas Republican Party, Maxwell is from Iowa — the state where the presidential nomination begins. He ran successful Senate campaigns there in 1978 and 1980.

NATIONAL CHAIRMAN FIASCO

Gov. Charles Robb of Virginia did not help his chances to land on the 1988 Democratic presidential ticket with his unsuccessful effort to mobilize fellow Democratic governors behind the selection of a new Democratic national chairman.

When both ex-governor Scott Matheson of Utah and ex-transportation secretary Neil Goldschmidt turned down Robb's bid, the governor ended up pointlessly alienating backers of other possibilities. Gov Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, who also entertains national ambitions, suffered less than Robb only because he was less intimately involved.

Bob Squier, Washington-based campaign consultant who ran Robb's 1981 election for governor and later boosted him as a 1984 vice-presidential prospect, cannot be blamed for the national chairman fiasco. Squier was not consulted by Robb and would have advised against the effort if he had been.

HOLDING DOWN SHULTZ

The backstage effort by Secretary of State George Shultz to change policy by changing personnel may have failed in Chile, where efforts were underway to switch from quiet diplomacy to public destabilization of Gen. Augusto Pinochet's military regime.

Conservative forces in the White House could not save James Theberge, a Reaganite political apppointee, as ambassador in Santiago. But they did slow down Shultz by getting Ambassador Harry Barnes switched from India to Chile.

Barnes is a career Foreign Servce officer, not a Reaganite. But he is considered enough of a hard anti-communist to get the seal of approval from Jeane Kirkpatrick, seeking to hold the line on Shultz's selections in her closing weeks as ambassador to the United Nations.

CHARLEY REESE

Optimism comes from 'forces'

One of the most impressive men I've ever met is Libor Brom, a professor at a western university. Libor was born in Czechoslovakia and has a long string of degrees from prestigious schools.

Charley Reese

We met in Houston at a seminar where we were both speakers. One night before dinner, Libor confronted me with this question: "Are you optimistic or pessimistic?"

I thought a moment and said, "Well, pessimistic." (This was during the Carter Administration and believe me, I was.)

"I am optimistic," Libor said.

I asked him then to explain to me the basis of his optimism and his answer was very brief: "Because I believe in miracles."

As I learned more about the life of this remarkable man, I understood why. As a youth, Libor fought in the underground against the Nazis, but toward the end of the war, he was caught and confined in a basement of a bombed out building.

A Nazi officer told two soldiers to take Libor outside and prepare him for execution. He said he would be out in a minute to give the final orders.

Libor was taken out and stood against a wall, his hands bound behind his back. He said that as he stood there his whole life flashed before his eyes, just as all the stories say. He thought about his family, his girl, his school. But, he said, none of it seemed to have any meaning. Then, he said, the thought came upon him that what made his life worthwhile was the fact that he was dying for a good cause. He said he felt instantly at peace and calmly awaited the German officer.

When the officer came, however, he looked at Libor and said to the two soldiers, "Let him go." To this day, Libor has no idea why this German officer, in the midst of a brutal war, spared the life of a resistance fighter that he didn't know and would never see again. It was Libor's first miracle.

The second came after the tragic takeover of Czechoslovakia by the Communists. Once more, Libor became part of an underground resistance and once more he and several others were captured and brutally interrogated. Libor alone refused to talk. He was told repeatedly that unless he informed on the others he would never again see the light of day. Still, he refused.

One evening he was taken out of his cell and into a courtyard where a prison van awaited. "You have one more chance," a security officer told him. Libor shook his head. The security officer looked at him for a long moment and then said, "Go on home. You're free. Get the hell out of here."

Libor eventually made his way to the United States and everyday he has been here he has labored tirelessly not only to teach his students liberature but to inspire them with his own faith in God and in freedom.

Libor is one of those human beings who makes a difference. He changes lives. He certainly altered mine. I've never seen him since that seminar, although I have followed him through his published writings.

We do not live in a purely mechanistic universe and human beings are not merely animals with opposeable thumbs. Unlike animals, human beings have the power of choice. There is good and there is evil in the world. And over it all there are powers and forces that can be neither seen nor measured, but nevertheless play a role in the affairs of mankind.

I am optimistic. I do believe in miracles. I believe a bitter British lord was correct when he snarled one day, "God looks out for fools, drunks, and United States of America."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Jan. 7, the seventh day of 1985. There are 358 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 7, 1789, the first presidential election in the United States was held. Americans voted for electors who, a month later, voted to make George Washington the nation's first President.

On this date:

In 1536, Catherine of Aragon, the first wife of England's King Henry VIII, died.

In 1610, the astronomer Galileo sighted four of Jupiter's moons.

In 1782, the first commercial bank in the United States, the Bank of North America, opened in Philadelphia.

In 1800, the 13th President of the United States, Millard Fillmore, was born in Summerhill, N.Y.

In 1927, commercial transatlantic telephone service was inaugurated between New York and London.

Multiple slayings across nation leave at least 22 people dead

Associated Press

NATION

A violence-plagued first weekend of 1985 left at least 22 people dead in multiple slayings in six states, including a man who killed his estranged wife, their child and two other people in Michigan and a California family of four was killed in a hail of shots heard by a friend on the telephone.

Barry W. McNamara, 36, walked into his parents' Santa Barbara, Calif., home about 25 miles west of President Reagan's ranch and killed the couple, his sister and her 4-year-old daughter, said Sheriff's Deputy Don Glasgow.

"A friend of the residents was talking on the phone...when there were screams and gunshots and the line went dead," Glasgow said.

McNamara was booked for investigation of murder and held without bail, said Deputy Jim Drinkwater.

A 7-year-old girl who had been playing outside her Grand Rapids, Mich., home on Sunday returned to find the bodies of her mother and four other people, including her uncle, aunt and infant cousin and a friend of her mother's.

"The cause of death of four of the victims is apparently the shooting by another person in the home, who in turn killed himself directly after committing the act of murder," said police Chief William Hegarty.

Hegarty refused to identify the victims, but John Dykhouse, the father of the two women, said the gunman was his estranged son-in-law, Lee C. Baumann, 37, with whom he had spoken Saturday night.

"The last time I talked with Lee, he said, 'I made a mistake, I made a big mistake, I made a lot of mistakes,'" Dykhouse said. "I still don't know what he means by that."

Joann Baumann, 27, had left her husband a month ago to live with her sister, Marilyn Dykhouse, 35, and Ms. Dykhouse's live-in boyfriend, Dykhouse said. They and Mrs. Baumann's 6-month-old son were slain, he said.

The infant was found clutched in his mother's arms, Hegarty said.

A retired Duluth, Minn., police lieutenant was found dead Saturday in the basement of his home after he shot and killed his neighbor, the city personnel director, and wounded the man's wife, said Deputy Chief Eugene Sisto.

An autopsy on Nicholas Radulovich, 68, revealed "a quantity of pills" in his stomach, although the pills were not identified and Radulovich's death had not been classified a suicide, Sisto said.

A Loveland, Colo., woman who had told police two months earlier that she had been threatened by her boyfriend was found shot to death along with her son and stepson late Friday in their home.

Roberto Sanchez, 21, was arrested on charges of first-degree murder, police said.

In Kansas City, Mo., a restaurant owner argued with his partner over her purchase of a couch, then shot the woman to death and wounded a bystander, said police detective Sgt. Jerry Fortney. The man was disarmed by his homosexual lover, who shot him and committed suicide, Fortney said.

An unidentified killer remained at large today after the slayings of two women and wounding of a woman and a man in a Bellevue, Wash., home, King County police said.

St. Louis police said a man with a large-caliber handgun barged into a crowded bar Saturday and opened fire, killing three men and wounding two others, after an argument with one of the victims.

New trial scheduled for von Bulow on charges he killed wife

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — An April re-trial is set for Claus von Bulow, the Danish-born socialite, whose conviction on charges of trying to murder his heiress wife was overturned last year.

Rhode Island Attorney General Arlene Violet said Saturday that a review of the original trial and new evidence led her to the conclusion that "there is sufficient probable evidence which, if believed by a jury, would result in a conviction."

The new trial is scheduled to begin April 2 in Newport.

Von Bulow, 58, a New York City financier, was convicted in March 1982 of trying to kill his wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, so he could marry his then-mistress, former soap opera star Alexandra Isles. The conviction was overturned last year by the Rhode Island Supreme Court.

Mrs. von Bulow, 53, heiress to a Pittsburgh utilities fortune worth more than $34 million, fell into what doctors call an irreversible coma during the 1980 Christmas holiday at Clarendon Court, the couple's Newport mansion. She remains in a New York hospital.

The state contended that von Bulow induced the coma by giving his wife insulin injections. She suffers from hypoglycemia, a condition that would be aggravated by insulin.

Von Bulow declined comment Saturday on the attorney general's announcement.

In announcing that von Bulow would be retried, Ms. Violet criticized Alan Dershowitz, a Harvard University law professor and a von Bulow defense attorney, for comments he made Friday about the case. She also threatened to have him barred from the case if he persisted in making out-of-court comments that she said violate the state's ethics laws.

"Obviously, Mr. Dershowitz is also Mr. Showman," said Ms. Violet, a former nun and the nation's first woman elected attorney general. "If he persists in these types of comments, we feel that for the integrity of the system, we'll have to move to have him removed as counsel for the defense until he learns our rules."

But Dershowitz, reached on vacation in Florida, said he "completely complied with all the ethical rules."

"I stated my argument in the court...and repeated it out of court," he said. "That is specifically permitted both by the First Amendment and by the rules of ethics."

Dershowitz told reporters Friday that notes by Richard H. Kuh, a New York attorney hired by Mrs. von Bulow's children whose investigation led to von Bulow's indictment, would "blow the prosecution's argument completely out of the water."

He said notes from a Kuh interview with the von Bulow's maid, Maria Schrallhammer, show that she mentioned nothing about seeing insulin, syringes or hypodermic needles in a black bag found in von Bulow's closet. That would conflict with key testimony she gave during the first trial.

Fuel to be loaded at Arizona nuclear power station

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The last steps leading up to fuel loading at the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station were being taken Sunday night, Arizona Public Service officials said.

Loading was expected to be under way sometime early today, APS said.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission issued a fuel loading and low-power operating license for Unit 1 of the $5.9 billion three-reactor Palo Verde plant under construction 50 miles west of downtown Phoenix.

When completed, Palo Verde is expected to be the nation's largest atomic power plant and will generate electricity for parts of Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and California.

The NRC license allows APS, which jointly owns the nation's 90th atomic power station with several other Southwest utilities, to load the 1,270-megawatt reactor with 56,876 uranium fuel rods and operate the unit at up to 5 percent of its power capacity.

Gas leak blamed for Juarez blast

A police officer in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, inspects a building damaged in Saturday's suspected gas line explosion.

By JUDY GIANNETTINO
Associated Press Writer

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — The deadly combination of a gas leak and a heater's pilot flame is probably to blame for a gas explosion that ripped through this border city's downtown and injured 27 people, officials say.

City officials say their investigation was continuing today, but that they're "fairly certain" leaking gas was the culprit of Sunday afternoon's blast that razed one building and damaged at least 13 nearby shops.

Hospital and police spokesmen reported no deaths, but 10 of the injured people remained hospitalized early today, three of them in serious condition, said Juarez General Hospital nursing supervisor Rosa Gines.

Among those three are a woman whose right leg was blown off at mid-calf and a man whose skull was fractured in the blast, Ms. Gines said.

The explosion occurred at noon in a two-story building that housed a garage and several shops, said Capt. David Trejo of the Juarez Fire Department.

The building, obliterated by the blast, was in a business area one block west of the city's main plaza and principal tourist strip. Juarez is a city of 1 million across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas.

Witnesses at the scene said there was only one explosion and no fire afterward.

Nicholas Montes, owner of a clothing store near the garage, said he smelled gas shortly before noon and was calling the fire department when the blast occurred.

"I had just started to dial the fire department when I heard the explosion," Montes said. "It was a loud boom and the building shook. I ran outside, everybody was yelling and running and one woman had lost her leg."

The windows of Montes' shop were blown out by the blast and shattered glass covered much of his merchandise.

Trejo said the force of the explosion put out what little fire may have occurred after the blast.

He said windows were broken in a three-square-block radius, and he attributed most of the injuries to flying glass.

Debris from the explosion broke windows along a 150- to 200-foot long strip of stores and damaged cars parked in the area, said fire Sgt. Rafael Carillo.

At least 30 hotel room windows across the street from the garage also were shattered, officials said.

A nearby movie theater had not yet opened.

Documents seem to support Sharon

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — Secret papers contain no evidence to show former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon discussed the need for revenge with Christian Phalangists who were blamed for the 1982 massacre of Palestinians in Beirut, an Israeli ex-chief justice said in material released today.

A Justice Ministry statement distributed by the government press office said a secret annex and other documents were reviewed by Yitzhak Kahan, the former Supreme Court president who headed an inquiry commission into the massacre, and by Sharon's lawyer, Dov Weisglass, and Chaim Zadok, an attorney for Time Magazine.

The secret documents are expected to play a role in determining the outcome of Sharon's $50-million libel suit against Time Magazine.

Time reported that in a conversation with the family of Lebanese Christian President Amin Gemayel on Sept. 15, 1982, Sharon reportedly discussed the need to avenge the killing of former Lebanese President Bashir Gemayel, who was Amin's brother.

According to Time, the conversation took place the day before Israeli-allied Christian Phalange militiamen carried out the massacre in the Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps, and it said information on the conversation was in the secret parts of the report issued by the Kahan Commission.

Sharon, who is trade and industry minister in Prime Minister Shimon Peres' Cabinet, left for New York today after a two-week visit to Israel during the court's Christmas break. He told reporters that he hoped the secret protocols "will help me prove, as I've always claimed, that Time lied. I hope this will teach them never again to dare libel me, the state of Israel or the Jewish people."

Kahan's testimony has been forwarded to the New York federal court hearing the case.

The government allowed Kahan to give limited answers to three questions submitted by the court pertaining to the appendix and to four other related documents, after cautioning him and the two lawyers not to divulge the contents of the papers out of concern for national security.

In a letter to Israel's Attorney General Yitzhak Zamir, distributed by the Justice Ministry, Kahan listed the questions and the answers he had made:

"Q: Does the document contain any evidence or suggestion that Minister Sharon had a discussion with the Gemayel family or with any other Phalangists at Bikfaya or elsewhere in which Minister Sharon discussed the need to avenge the death of Bashir Gemayel?

"A: In none of the documents or testimony is there any evidence or a suggestion that Minister Sharon had a discussion with the Gemayel family or with any other Phalangist at Bikfaya or elsewhere in which Minister Sharon discussed the need to avenge the death of Bashir Gemayel.

Lebanese-Israeli withdrawal talks resume

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal talks resumed today after a holiday recess with both sides holding to the positions that have stalled the negotiations for two months.

Military negotiators of the two nations met for the 12th time since Nov. 8 at the heavily guarded headquarters of the United Nations peacekeeping force in this Lebanese border town.

Lebanon's chief negotiator, Maj. Gen. Mohammed Hajj, was asked before the start of the meeting whether he was bringing any new proposals to the talks, which recessed on Dec. 20.

In reply, Hajj referred to a speech Sunday by Lebanese President Amin Gemayel reiterating his rejection of Israeli demands to deploy U.N. troops deeper inside Lebanese territory once Israel's 20,000 troops are withdrawn from south Lebanon.

Israeli chief negotiator Brig. Amos Gilboa, asked whether the Israeli delegation would walk out of the talks if the Lebanese position did not change, said: "We will be obliged to consider whether there is any purpose to continue the talks."

The Israeli newspaper Haaretz quoted unnamed Israeli sources as saying that if no progress is made at the talks today, Israel will refuse to set a date for the next meeting.

Haaretz quoted the same sources as saying Israel would then consider the talks "frozen" pending some sign of progress without formally stopping the negotiations.

During the last negotiating session, Israel threatened to walk out of the U.N.-sponsored talks if Lebanon did not change its position. Gemayel's statement, made to a group of foreign diplomats and carried on state radio, appeared to dispel earlier reports that the Lebanese might propose a compromise.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Kennedy, Botha confer

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy met today with Foreign Minister R.F. Botha, who said later he defended his white-ruled nation's policies and didn't agree with Kennedy about anything.

"It would be naive ever to expect me and Senator Kennedy to reach common ground. He cannot even reach common ground with the Republicans in the United States, and the Republicans are to the left of us," Botha told reporters.

Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat who arrived Saturday on a fact-finding mission about the status of the black majority in South Africa, did not talk to reporters after meeting Botha in a government guest house in suburban Pretoria.

He left with his entourage for an impoverished black village whose inhabitants are to be forcibly moved under South Africa's policy of dividing the country into "white," "black" and "brown" areas according to the color of one's skin.

Bodies may not be found

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — A U.S. Embassy spokesman says the bodies of the 29 people aboard the Eastern Airlines plane which crashed on a 21,000-foot mountain might not be recovered because of severe weather.

Embassy spokesman William Walker said Sunday that Eastern and the embassy were considering suspending rescue operations until the weather improved and food supplies could safely be flown in to rescue workers on Illimani Mountain.

Eastern flight 980 was heading from Asuncion, Paraguay to La Paz when it crashed in the Andes last Tuesday night. All aboard, including eight Americans, now are presumed to have died.

Walker said two feet of snow had fallen on the crash site over the weekend, meaning the bodies of those aboard might never be found.

American slain in Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An American official of a tourism development company was clubbed to death and his apartment burned, police said today.

A sergeant at Manila's police homicide division, who asked not to be identified, said the body of Jan David Rakoff was found by firemen at his apartment early today.

Efren Pascual, marketing director of the Century Resorts company, said Rakoff was the company's vice president for international tourism development.

Pascual said Rakoff was from Philadephia and come to the Philippines to work for the company four years ago.

Police said a suspect has been identified but remained at large. No motives have been found for the killing, they said.

Iraq reports naval raid

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes raided a "large naval target" today near the Iranian Kharg Island oil terminal in the Persian Gulf.

There was no immediate independent confirmation of the attack from gulf shipping circles. It was the first air strike reported by Iraq against a ship using Iranian ports this year.

In Iraqi military parlance, "large naval target" usually refers to an oil tanker.

An Iraqi military spokesman in Baghdad, capital of Iraq, said the attack took place at 1:20 p.m. (5:20 a.m. EST) and that the target was "accurately and effectively hit." But he did not disclose the exact location. He said in a communique read over Baghdad Radio that all Iraqi jet fighters returned safely. The last raid on gulf shipping announced by Iraq was on New Year's Eve, but was not confirmed.

Sentences commuted

BANGKOK, Thailand (NYT) — Two of five men condemned to death in a highly publicized subversion trial in Vietnam have had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment, Vietnam's official press agency reported.

The death sentences were handed down Dec. 18 at the end of the trial in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. A total of 21 men were tried on charges of seeking to overthrow the Vietnamese government with Chinese backing. Apart from the five men sentenced to death, three were sentenced to life imprisonment and the rest got terms ranging from eight to 20 years. The trial was reported to be the biggest espionage and treason trial since the capture of South Vietnam in 1975.

Chicago Bears quarterback Steve Fuller is dragged down by 49ers' Gary Johnson. It was a long afternoon for Fuller in NFC championship playoff game.

49ers defense Bears

Chicago chokes on own medicine

NFC Championship

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers put themselves in Super Bowl by giving the Chicago Bears a taste of the defensive medicine the Bears had been feeding to everyone else.

With Gary Johnson and Michael Carter leading a nine-sack defensive onslaught, the 49ers won the NFC championship Sunday with a 23-0 victory over the team that itself had set a regular-season National Football League record for sacks.

The outcome earned San Francisco a trip 30 miles down Route 101 from Candlestick Park to Stanford Stadium, for a meeting with the Miami Dolphins in two weeks in a Super Bowl XIX. The matchup answered the NFL's dreams, the two teams with the best regular season records — the 49ers were 15-1 and the Dolphins 14-2 — and the NFL's two most glamorous quarterbacks, San Franicsco's Joe Montana and Miami's Dan Marino.

But it wasn't Montana who earned the laurels Sunday, although he had a 10-yard touchdown pass to Freddie Solomon that combined with a 9-yard scamper by Wendell Tyler and field goals of 21, 22 and 34 yards by Ray Wersching to give the 49ers their points.

IT WAS a San Francisco defense, that limited Chicago to 186 total yards, just 37 in the air, and whose effectiveness was ruefully conceded by Chicago Coach Mike Ditka.

"We got a lesson today," Ditka said. "They came out attacking and when you attack the other guy and keep him off balance, you usually make something happen."

Happen it did, particularly for Chicago, which went backward as much as forward for much of the game — particularly in the second period, when it gained no net yardage.

Some of the defensive statistics were awesome.

Chicago quarterback Steve Fuller, for example, completed 13 of 22 passes for 86 yards, paltry enough but made even more paltry by the nine sacks that took away 50 of those yards from the net passing yardage. Carter, a rookie from Southern Methodist who won a silver medal in the shotput in last summer's Olympics was credited with two sacks as was Johnson, a 10-year veteran and San Diego castoff.

The Bears, held without a first down for four straight series in the second and third quarters, threatened only twice — on the opening series of the game, which ended with Bob Thomas missing a 41-yard field goal try, and late in the third quarter, when they reached the San Francisco 21 but were thwarted by consecutive sacks by Johnson and Dwaine Board that pushed them back to the 40.

"Whenever you shut someone out, it's a task. I think we had one of our best games," Board said of a defense that went 12 quarters earlier this season without surrendering a touchdown. "If we could keep giving the offense the opportunities, we knew we could get it in."

"When you've played as long as I have, you have to rely on wisdom as well as ability," said Johnson.

The line was also helped by the blanket coverage of the San Francisco secondary, rated as one of the best in the NFL.

"We had good coverage," said safety Dwight Hicks. "We made Fuller hold the ball longer than anticipated. The defensive line said 'hold your coverage and we can get to them.'"

MEANWHILE, the San Francisco offensive line contained the Chicago defense that had an NFL record 72 sacks in the regular season and seven more in last week's 23-19 victory over Washington. This time, the Bears had three sacks, but none had a signifigant impact on the game.

The victory was the 17th of the campaign for the 49ers, who lost only once in the regular season, tying a record set by the undefeated Super Bowl champion Dolphins of 1972.

San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh was already savoring the Super Bowl matchup with Miami.

"Without a doubt, the best two teams are in the Super Bowl," he said. "It's a great matchup and we look forward to it."

San Francisco, which hadn't scored a touchdown in the second half in its last two games after jumping off to early, did things the opposite way this time — it could convert three drives inside the Chicago 5 to only six points in the first half.

But midway through the third quarter Dana McLemore returned a Max Runager punt 15 yards to the San Francisco 35. Four plays later, Tyler took a pitchout from Montana and cut off-tackle, shrugging off four Bears and into the end zone to make it 13-0.

After the sacks by Board and Johnson thwarted the next Chicago drive, San Francisco put the game away, going 88 yards in eight plays climaxed by Montana's toss to Solomon. Roger Craig's 39-yard burst to the Chicago 14 set up the score 3. Wersching's 34-yard field goal with 1:57 left closed out the scoring.

Except for the start, the San Francisco defense dominated the game.

It was at its best in the second quarter, when it held Chicago to zero yardage and no first downs and the Bears went through the first half with no net yards passing — Fuller completed 4 of 7 for 16 yards, but that yardage was negated by four 49er sacks.

But the 49ers, who had 224 yards of their own, went off at halftime with only a 6-0 lead.

Fifty-four of Chicago's yards came on a drive that followed the opening kickoff and carried to the San Francisco 23, from where Thomas missed his first field goal in 13 tries.

Steelers Sub-Marino-ed

Dolphins leave no survivors

By CHRIS JENKINS
Copley News Service

AFC Championship

MIAMI — Pittsburgh fired muskets, pellets of Steel. The Miami Dolphins answered with ICBMs.

All season Miami's might has been its quick-strike capability, well-aimed missiles delivered from a Florida launching pad named Dan Marino, each directed at Super Bowl XIX. Sunday, with Don Shula pushing all the right buttons, the Dolphins won the AFC championship.

Pittsburgh was leveled, 45-28. There were no survivors.

The only team that can — or at least is in position to — stop the Dolphins now is San Francisco. The Dolphins and 49ers play for the NLF title Jan. 20 at Stanford Stadium in Palo Alto, Calif.

"We're there," said Dolphins wide receiver Mark Clayton. "Next question. Next defense."

PITTSBURGH'S defense is among the conference's most aggressive — conservative just doesn't cut it against Marino — and the phenomenal 23-year-old still threw for four touchdowns. That gives him 55 for the season.

Marino completed 21 of 31 passes for 421 yards, a total surpassed in league playoff history only by the San Diego Chargers' Dan Fouts, who had 433 yards in a classic overtime defeat of the Dolphins in 1982.

This game was decided by retaliatory response. Pittsburgh went ahead 14-10 in the second quarter and, 1:22 later, Miami led 17-14 on a 41-yard Marino pass to Mark Duper. Less than a minute later, Miami had another TD, that just seconds after a Dolphins score had been nullified by penalty.

Third quarter: Miami expanded its lead to 31-14 on another Marino-to-Duper pass of 26 yards, but the Steelers climbed back into the game with quarterback Mark Malone's second TD throw to John Stallworth.

Three Marino passes later, it was 38-21. In other words, over.

"They scored more and they scored faster," said Malone. "With them, it's like zip, zap, zap. Amazing."

Not to the Dolphins. They've grown accustomed to a pace more suited to the NBA.

"Most teams gear their two-minute offense to scoring seven points," said Miami wide receiver Joe Rose. "When we go into our two-minute drill, we're looking for 14 points."

Miami did just that in the second quarter, which was how a close game started getting out of hand. Until then, the Steelers were doing to Miami what they'd done to Denver in last week's playoff round.

Hit and run. Hit on defense. Run on offense.

PITTSBURGH came to Miami with the idea of keeping the ball on the ground and out of Marino's mitts, and the strategy was great when applied. As soon as Malone started dropping back to pass, though, things got funky.

The Steelers' game-opening series, so promising, ended because: a) John Stallworth was called for offensive pass interference, b) running back Rich Erenberg was called for holding on the same play and c) Malone's next attempt was intercepted in the end zone by cornerback William Judson. And Woody Hayes thought only two things could go wrong on a pass.

Hayes likely never met the mystical, magical Marino. For his first trick, Marino produced a 7-0 lead with his 40-yard pass to Clayton, who was miles ahead of Pittsburgh's Sam Washington. Clayton essentially had left Washington behind with no more than a half-juke.

Pittsburgh might have been written off moments later, too, when Frank Pollard fumbled to Doug Betters of Miami at the Pittsburgh 31. For once, though, Miami's offense sputtered and Uwe von Schamann was wide with a 52-yard field-goal attempt.

Pittsburgh came to Miami with the idea of running the ball to keep Marino off the field, and one touchdown wasn't going to change Noll's mind. He matched Miami's score with a 56-yard march and Erenberg's 7-yard TD burst up the middle.

Indeed, Pittsburgh was controlling the game through much of the first half, and should have had more points to show for it. But a 23-yard gain to the Miami 9 was nullified by holding and Gary Anderson missed a 54-yard field-goal try. Von Schamann got the next attempt and hit from 27 yards out to make it 10-7.

Barry fretted over wrong team

One thing and another while wondering where the Chicago Cubs Class AA farm club will wind up in 1985...the Eastern League?...

Perhaps if Barry Switzer had worried as much about Washington's Huskies instead of trying to influence the votes of the pollsters, Oklahoma might be No. 1 instead of BYU...

However, even before the Orange Bowl game Houston Coach Bill Yeoman may have expressed the sentiments of many, "BYU finished undefeated and is 13-0. They may have not played as difficult a schedule as some other teams, they still did everything they had to do. I think they deserve to be No. 1."

As for a national playoff to settle such disputes, Yeoman prefers the disputes, "I am violently opposed to playoffs. We are not professionals. We should be trying to provide an experience in college ball. College football is a great thing in that it provides as good a laboratory for living as there is. The only reason for a playoff is for money.

"If you set up a playoff, all the alumni hit their hip pocket and we've got more of that than we can handle. Besides, I haven't seen any plan for a playoff that isn't arbitrary."...

Aurora, Colo., is investigating the possibility of a domed stadium in a bid for major league baseball and, presumably, the Denver Broncos. That means no more football in snow storms at Mile High Stadium and there go your TV ratings....

Most sought after team for TV in the NFL? Would you believe the Los Angeles Raiders?...

Did you notice that the little publicized Cherry Bowl between Army and Michigan State at Pontiac, Mich., drew more than 70,000 fans. Not bad for a first time venture in foul weather country. The Freedom and a lot of other bowls are envious...

Big Spring's Steers seem to be in over their heads in District 4-5A if Thursday's opener against Midland High is any indication. The Steers simply couldn't handle the Bulldogs' unrelenting pressure and Darrell Davis around the post and under the basket. Of course, any team starting a freshman and sophomore in this league can expect trouble...

One of the threats in this year's race could be Abilene High, which only lost to Hobbs, N.M., 98-91, in a preseason tournament. Ralph Tasker recorded his 800th victory in that one. However, word is that the Enchanted Eagles aren't as formidable as is their custom...

With the Cowboys and hatable Raiders on the outside looking in, it's not easy to get excited about this year's NFL playoffs. Still, ever since the Houston-Notre Dame Cotton Bowl game, I've been a Joe Montana fan and you've got to marvel at the exploits of Dan Marino, another Cotton Bowl ex. It shouldn't have come as any surprise that both advanced Sunday. After all, that's what 15-1 (49ers) and 13-2 (Dolphins) are supposed to do to teams that are 10-6 (Chicago) and 9-7 (Pittsburgh)...

Shawon Dunston, Midland Cubs' shortstop for part of last season, reportedly has been having problems with the glove in the Venezuelan Winter League. "He's got the tools," according to one scout, "but he really looks crude in the field, a little bit like Juan Samuel of the Phillies. He might wind up in the outfield."

As Shawon pointed out when he was in Midland, he had less than a year of experience at shortstop. When drafted, he was a third baseman...

New Jersey goalie Glenn Resch kicks away a point blank shot by Montreal's Pierre Mondou

Horrors! Devils robbed

Mystery goal decried by coach

NEW YORK (AP) — "We won it and we got robbed."

That was the reaction from New Jersey Devils Coach Doug Carpenter after his team was beaten 5-4 in overtime Sunday night by the New York Rangers. The Devils held a 4-3 lead when New York's Robbie Ftorek scored a controversial goal at 4:49 of the third period to tie it. Rookie Tomas Sandstrom won the contest with the first overtime goal of his life, at 1:14 on a short wrist shot.

Carpenter was so incensed by referee Bryan Lewis' decision to allow Ftorek's goal that he confronted Lewis on the ice following the game. Linesmen Bob Hodges and Will Norris restrained Carpenter, who followed Lewis off the ice, all the while trying to get at the referee.

"I'll get fined and so should you," Carpenter shouted at Lewis, who was escorted to the officials' dressing room by security guards.

"I'll get fined for his mistake," Carpenter added moments later. "I know I'm a rookie coach and will get picked on by officials but don't make it so obvious."

The arguing began when Ftorek took a backhanded shot that hit goalie Glenn Resch, then deflected off the crossbar and fell to the ice outside the red goal line. Lewis, who was trailing the play, ruled it was a goal even though the goal judge never put on the red light to signify a score.

NHL

Television replays showed the puck never entered the net.

"I viewed it from the players' bench side," said Lewis, who was expected to file a report with his superiors. "It hit under Resch's arm, hit the padding that runs out from the back of the net and dropped down. That's when I blew the whistle."

The padding Lewis mentioned is inside the net.

"From his viewpoint, he felt it was a goal," said Ftorek. "I thought it was in the net, so I raised my hands. The final decision is his and that's what counts."

Resch, normally one of hockey's mildest players, stormed after Lewis following the referee's decision.

"I let in enough goals on my own," he said. "I don't need a ref letting one in for me.

"I don't go like that unless I know it's not in. I heard it hit the bar — there's snow on the crossbar and there always is snow on the bar when the puck hits it."

In the other NHL games Sunday, it was St. Louis 3, Chicago 2, and Edmonton 7, Winnipeg 2.

Ftorek's goal came only 40 seconds after Paul Gagne's second goal of the night had given New Jersey a 4-3 lead. Gagne scored on a quick wrist shot off a perfect feed by Jan Ludvig.

Blues 3, Black Hawks 2

There were more histrionics in Chicago, where Hawks Coach Orval Tessier broke a stick and threw a towel onto the ice to protest a penalty to defenseman Jack O'Callahan with 6:36 remaining. Tessier was ejected by referee Kerry Fraser and he left immediately following the game to be with his ill father.

Mark Reeds' goal 35 seconds into the third period was the winner as the Blues pulled within one point of first-place Chicago in the Norris Division.

"We knew something was up when Coach Tessier asked that we win the game for someone special," said Chicago defenseman Doug Wilson.

Oilers 7, Jets 2

Glenn Anderson scored two goals and collected his 400th career point as the visiting Oilers continued their mastery over Winnipeg, which has lost 20 straight games — including six in the playoffs — to Edmonton. Mark Messier and Charlie Huddy had three assists each against the Jets, who have lost six in a row.

"There's a lot of teams in this league that have trouble playing against different teams," said Oilers Coach Glen Sather.

Third-ranked Memphis State is the latest college basketball team to fall from the ranks of the unbeaten.

Tigers coach Dana Kirk said the loss to South Carolina "proved anyone can win any game in this day and age because there is so much parity."

So far, no team has been able to knock off top-ranked Georgetown and No. 2 Duke, who stand as the nation's only undefeated teams in Division I.

But had close calls Saturday.

"We're lucky to get out of here without a win," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said after his Blue Devils beat Virginia 63-58 at Charlottesville, Va.

An 82-80 overtime win over Boston College kept Georgetown's record unblemished.

Memphis State, a 60-58 loser, had plenty of company from the nation's Top Twenty on the losing side.

Also suffering setbacks were No. 6 Illinois, No. 8 Georgia Tech, No. 10 DePaul, No. 12 Indiana, No. 14 Louisiana State, No. 15 Washington, No. 17 North Carolina State and No. 19 Maryland.

No. 4 St. John's downed Seton Hall 73-57; Iowa upended Illinois 64-60; No. 7 Southern Methodist nipped Arkansas 63-60 in overtime; Wake Forest dumped Georgia Tech 68-54; No. 9 North Carolina beat Florida State 78-69; Alabama-Birmingham topped DePaul 66-57;

No. 11 Kansas defeated Wichita State 90-83; Michigan State socked Indiana 68-61; No. 13 Oklahoma outscored Northeast Louisiana 101-95; Mississippi State ripped LSU 83-69; Oregon State beat Washington 52-45; No. 16 Michigan got by Ohio State 87-82; Kentucky slapped N.C. State 78-62; No. 18 Louisiana Tech routed Northwest Louisiana 92-63; Dayton dumped Maryland 67-63, and No. 20 Virginia Commonwealth withstood Jacksonville 67-65 in overtime.

College Basketball

Georgetown, the defending NCAA champion, is now 13-0 with a 24-game winning streak over two seasons heading into Big East Conference games this week with Seton Hall and Villanova.

"We did everthing we could," said Michael Adams, Boston College's pesky guard after the overtime conference loss to Georgetown at Landover, Md.

Adams missed a driving jumper with 12 seconds left as B.C. went down to its the first defeat in 11 games but still is off to its best start in 27 years.

In rallying from a 31-28 halftime deficit, Duke raised its record to 10-0 with its Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Virginia.

"We played our best 20 minutes of basketball in the second half of this game," said Krzyzewski. David Henderson paced the Blue Devils with 21 points, while freshman Mel Kennedy had 23 points for Virginia.

AT COLUMBIA, S.C., South Carolina, 7-2, surprised Memphis State, 9-1, behind 14 points apiece from Linwood Moye, Keith James and Mike Brittain, while Keith Lee topped the Tigers with 22.

"They just beat us in every department of the game," said Kirk after the Metro Conference opener for both teams.

With Chris Mullin in a slump, Bill Wennington, 20 points, and Walter Berry, 16, picked up the slack for St. John's, 10-1, in a Big East triumph over Seton Hall, which got 24 points from Andre McCloud. Mullin made only 3 of 13 from the field and scored 10 points.

Unranked Iowa, with Coach George Raveling missing the game because of the flu, handed visiting Illinois, 11-4, its third straight loss and its second Big Ten loss in a row. In the closing minutes, Jeff Moe made four free throws and Greg Stokes came up with a key steal and rebounds for the 13-2 Hawkeyes. Stokes scored 24 points.

Steve Mitchell's 18 points paced Alabama-Birmingham, 11-4, past visiting DePaul for its first triumph in seven meeting with the Blue Demons, which got 25 points from Tyrone Corbin and fell to 9-3.

In a Big Ten contest at East Lansing, Mich., Michigan State, 11-1, was tied at 54 before going on a 10-2 spree after intermission to put away Indiana, 9-3. Larry Polec hit a career-high 22 points, while Uwe Blab led the Hoosiers with 23.

At Starkville, Miss., Jeff Norwood scored 12 of his 17 points in the last 3½ minutes to lead Mississippi State past LSU. Nikita Wilson topped the Tigers with 17 points.

SMU fights for life; Texas stuns Houston

Associated Press

It didn't take long for the SWC race to heat up.

Seventh-ranked Southern Methodist is having to fight for its life, Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton is furious at the officials, and the Houston Cougars have discovered they are only human without Akeem Olajuwon..

After a tough road victory over Rice, SMU needed overtime to subdue Arkansas 63-60 Saturday in Dallas.

"We were dead and buried but we had the moxy not to quit and came back," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss.

SWC

SMU, 2-0, snapped an eight-game Arkansas winning streak over the Mustangs. It was only the second time in the last 19 games SMU had defeated the Razorbacks, 1-1.

In other games, Texas A&M's new-found run-and-gun offense buried Baylor 102-78 behind junior college transfer Don Marbury's 41 points; Rice nipped Texas Christian 63-62; and Texas rallied to beat Houston 61-58.

Texas had lost its last nine games to Houston. The defending SWC champion Cougars had a 15-1 record last year.

The game was only 59 seconds old before Sutton got his first of two technical fouls before a sellout crowd of 9,007 fans in Moody Coliseum. Sutton got another in the second half.

"It was the worst officiated game I've ever seen," Sutton said. "SMU has a heckuva a team and probably deserved to win but we got hosed. That last technical called on the bench was from 70 feet away."

Sutton said he hoped the SWC officials looked at the game films "to see how sorry they are. (William) Mills almost got his arm ripped off on the final shot. SMU has a Top 10 team but we got some ridiculous calls."

Bliss laughed about Sutton's ire at the officials.

"If Eddie thinks he got homered he ought to go to Hawaii and play Chaminade," Bliss said. "They don't ever start the clock over there."

MIAMI

FAILING TO capitalize on the one interception of Marino — actually, the ball was tipped from Miami receiver Nat Moore to Pittsburgh's Donnie Shell — the Steelers handed it right back when Malone was drilled while throwing the ball and intercepted by Glen Blackwood.

Tony Nathan cleared 30 yards with a Marino pass but fumbled when brought down by Shell, whereupon Malone found Stallworth for a 65-yard TD. It was the 11th playoff TD catch of Stallworth's career, thus beating a record he had shared with former Raider Fred Biletnikoff.

In the next series, Clayton got dinged up and left for the rest of the game. So it was Duper and double coverage. Neither defensive back was close enough to keep him from catching a 41-yard TD from Marino. Duper was backpedaling into the end zone when he caught the ball.

That was with 1:30 remaining in the first half. With 1:03 left, Marino hit Jimmy Cefalo for a 24-yard TD that was called back due to a motion penalty on Cefalo. No big deal. Marino connected with Rose for 28 yards to the Pittsburgh 1-yard line. Miami lost a yard before Nathan scored on the ground.

Again, the Miami score was set up by a Pittsburgh passing error, Malone's third interception of the half. He was looking for Stallworth when Lyle Blackwood came seemingly out of nowhere for the theft.

"That one surprised me," said Miami cornerback Don McNeal. "I've never seen Lyle jump on a ball like that before."

MALONE said he saw Blackwood coming up on Stallworth, "but I thought I could get enough steam on the ball and I was wrong." Malone, who only became Pittsburgh's undisputed starter at midseason, completed 20 of 36 passes for 312 yards and three TDs. The good was undone by the three picks, though.

"I think he got a little upset with us," McNeal said. "Three interceptions. That says something."

Still, Malone said, there was no need to panic at halftime. The third interception he termed "an unfortunate thing, but it didn't take us out of the ballgame."

Marino took Pittsburgh out of the game in the third quarter, opening with a 26-yard score to Duper, who was 15 yards ahead of the nearest Steeler. Pittsburgh had blitzed and, as often happened Sunday, got burned by the gamble.

Marino, sacked only 14 times in the regular season, hasn't been caught since. But, oh, how Pittsburgh kept trying.

49ERS

THE 49ERS came right back to take a 3-0 lead, driving all the way to the Chicago 2, then settling for a 21-yard Wersching field goal after Montana fumbled the snap and fell on the ball on a third down play at the 2. All but one of the yards came through the air as Montana's offensive line gave him all the time he needed.

San Francisco missed another chance just two minutes later, after Hicks intercepted a Fuller pass that deflected off intended receiver Willie Gault at the Chicago 39. A 12-yard pass to Russ Francis and a 25-yard burst by Tyler but the ball at the 2. But on first down, Montana's floater towards Solomon in the end zone was intercepted by Gary Fencik.

The 49ers drove inside the Chicago 5 for the third time midway through the second quarter but had to settle for a 22-yard field goal by Wersching. Again, Montana was under little pressure from the Chicago pass rush, but the Bears defense made two key plays near the goal line — end Richard Dent dumped Craig for a two-yard loss on second down from the 3 and tackle Dan Hampton deflected a third-down pass toward an open Dwight Clark in the end zone.

Marino product of phone booth

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

When Art Rooney, George Halas and their pals invented the National Football League, they never could have imagined a quarterback quite like Miami's Dan Marino.

Blitz him and he burns you. Flood the secondary with defenders and he'll sit back there in the pocket, cooly waiting for the opening to develop.

He is like the creation of some super computer, programmed to produce the perfect quarterback, the quintessential offensive weapon.

CONSIDER the surgical job he did on the Pittsburgh Steelers as the Dolphins nailed down the American Football Conference championship.

He threw for 421 yards and four touchdowns, completing 21 of 32 attempts. The yardage and the TDs were both AFC playoff records and he came within 12 slim yards, a screen pass away, of the alltime NFL postseason passing record.

Now it's not as if Marino was pitching for that mark and just came up short. He never threw a pass in the final 11 minutes of the game, obviously under orders from Coach Don Shula, who insists he didn't know of the record, but implies that he wasn't as interested in running up the score as he was in just running out the clock on the Steelers and his old friend Chuck Noll. It was a decent, classy decision by a decent, classy coach.

The single game postseason passing record is 433 yards set by Dan Fouts in the memorable 41-38 shootout between San Diego and Miami a couple of seasons back. But that playoff game stretched into overtime, giving Fouts five periods in which to churn out the yards.

With Shula putting him under wraps after he had built a 24-point lead, Marino's yardage was assembled in barely over three periods.

THAT'S remarkable or, as Noll chose to express it in his postgame handshake with Shula, "Wow!"

Perhaps the best example of Marino's magic came with just under three minutes left in the first half. The Steelers had moved into a 14-10 lead on a 65-yard Mark Malone-John Stallworth pass play and things weren't looking half-bad for Noll's team.

Marino struck right back in a drive that consumed just 82 seconds and was climaxed with a 41-yard pass to Mark Duper, making it 17-14.

Instead of taking a low profile until halftime, Malone tried a pass. Lyle Blackwood picked it off at the Steeler 39 and 33 seconds later — after a TD pass had been wiped out by a penalty — Marino had the Dolphins in the end zone again.

From 14-10 Pittsburgh with 2:58 to play in the half, the score had gone to 24-14 Miami. And the Dolphins weren't done. They took the second half kickoff and needed just four plays to travel 78 yards for another TD, the last 36 coming on a Marino-Duper pass. That drive took 1:48.

Count the 2:09 Marino needed for Miami's first TD and he used a total of 5 minutes, 42 seconds to score four touchdowns.

Wow, indeed.

MARINO'S fireworks were in stark contrast to the sputtering air game Chicago presented against San Francisco in the National Conference title game.

Kareem is Magic

Associated Press

NBA

Earvin Johnson was out with a sprained finger, so Kareem Abdul-Jabbar put on a magic show of his own.

Abdul-Jabbar hit a 12-foot jumper as time expired Sunday night to lift the Los Angeles Lakers to a 99-98 victory over San Antonio, who had taken a one-point lead with three seconds left on two free throws by Artis Gilmore.

"Tonight we had to make our own breaks," said Abdul-Jabbar, who led all scorers in the game with 28 points and all rebounders with 11. "It seems that things were going against us. It was a nice game to win, and not having Magic in there caused things not to flow smoothly, but we played hard like we always do and things worked out for the best."

The Spurs were expecting Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer, to take the final shot, but Michael Cooper, who 13 points and 14 assists for the Lakers, managed to get the ball in to him. He decided against taking his famous sky hook in favor of a jump shot from the baseline.

"There were four guys surrounding me waiting for the hook, but I used my baseline jumper," Abdul-Jabbar said. "We practiced that over the last week and the only time I use it is when I don't have the hook."

"We played some good defense down the stretch and we made things happen," Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "But give the Lakers credit for getting down inside to Kareem. He is a great player. I have no complaints on the last play. You can't determine if it's going to go in or not. We did all we wanted to do. He made a fabulous shot."

Gilmore, who defended against the shot, said, "He did the unexpected. I expected him to come back into the lane for the hook shot, and he went the other way and just made an incredible shot."

Jazz 121, Rockets 92

Utah outscored Houston 35-14 in the fourth quarter to turn a competitive game into a rout. Adrian Dantley scored 28 points and Darrell Griffith added 23 for the Jazz, who are in fourth place in the Midwest Division, but trail the first-place Rockets by only 3½ games.

Utah, which also got 11 points, 16 rebounds and seven blocked shots from center Mark Eaton, led 55-44 at halftime, but Akeem Olajuwon scored 16 of his 29 points in the third period to pull the Rockets within five points.

But a 13-1 streak at the start of the fourth quarter turned the game into a runaway.

Trail Blazers 118, Pacers 101

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 12 of his game-high 26 points in the third quarter as Portland turned a 62-52 halftime margin over Indiana into a comfortable 96-72 advantage.

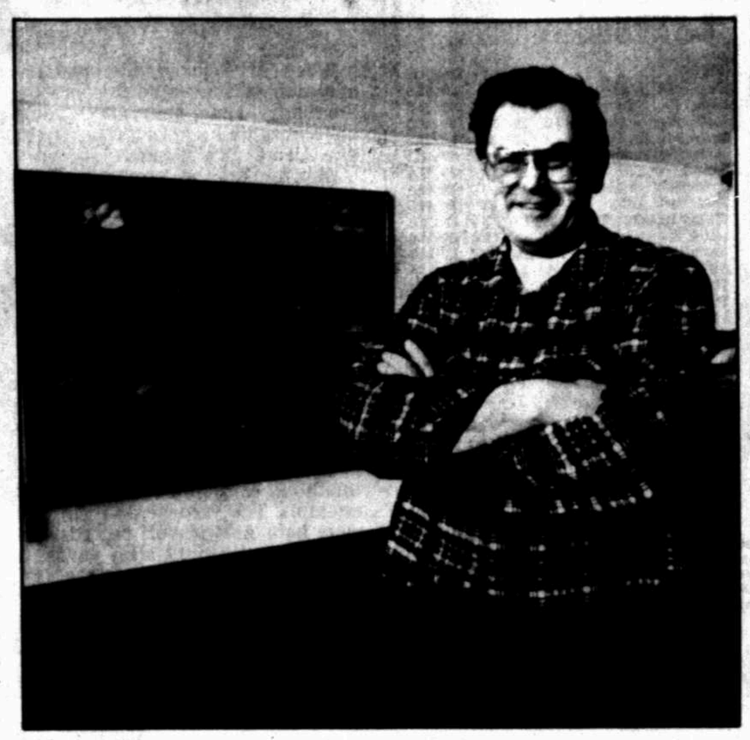
Longshoreman becomes successful in art world



LAT Photos

Artist Max Benjamin lives with his family on a farm on a Guemes Island, off the coast of Washington, financed by his increasingly prosperous status in the world of art and steady employment as a longshoreman.

ANACORTES, Wash. — It was very simple, Max Benjamin said.

When he was 30 years old, he told himself:

"You're going to do this or you're going to be sitting around like a million other guys."

What "this" amounted to, in short, was painting and what the ultimatum that Benjamin gave himself produced, in his words, is "the best of all possible worlds."

And that, in the minds of most painters of conviction, is certainly no exaggeration.

It's an odyssey to light the dreams of hundreds of less-fortunate talents.

It began when Benjamin went from a secure but conventional job as an illustrator for Boeing in Seattle to a subsistence farm on Guemes Island, in the San Juan archipelago, just across the water from Anacortes. There, Benjamin, his wife Thresa and three children lived at first in a tent. Then they moved into the 100-year-old log cabin that constituted the most substantial shelter on the premises. They had another child. Eventually, they endured five years without running water or electricity.

But that seems like ancient history now.

These days, the Benjamins preside comfortably over a grassy, heavily-wooded 60-acre estate from within the warm confines of a spacious, uncluttered home that grew out of Benjamin's increasingly prosperous status in the world of art and his steady employment as a longshoreman. The surrounding landscape is dotted with wildflowers and 30 head of cattle bred to a Scottish cross between the angus and highland strains — a cross that yields a tooth somely marbled cut of beef.

In the greenhouse out back, Thresa nurtures an aromatic array of herbs and spices and, down toward the feedlot, Max colors his abstract canvases in the shut-away privacy of his barn.

In the meantime, the Benjamin children have grown to adulthood and scattered, "from Georgia to Burlington."

In November, the Bellevue Art Museum mounted a retrospective exhibition of Benjamin's work from the past 20 years and the Greg Kucera gallery in Seattle presented a show of more recent (1983 and '84) works.

This is a sweet period for the 55-year-old Benjamin — a time for summing up and of acceptance.

His paintings (often categorized as "Northwest modernist" or "late luminist") have been displayed in museums and galleries from Los Angeles to Vancouver, British Columbia.

For Benjamin, who came to prominence after many hard years, all that remains of the log cabin he retreated to 25 years ago is the shell of it that forms the center of his modern home.

However, his satisfaction is tempered by an acute awareness of the process that brought him to this point and by an almost fanatical commitment to the self-reliant attitude that saw him through.

Over the years, he has encountered his share of adversity, both physical and philosophical. He has gone his own way artistically and he has been relentlessly outspoken in regard to what sort of painting he admires and what sort he does not.

He was briefly (and memorably) an art critic for the Seattle Times in the mid-1960s.

"I followed (soon-to-be-famous pop author) Tom Robbins," Benjamin said, "and between us I think we alientated almost everyone."

Nevertheless, his determination to realize his own aims constitutes an uncommon dedication to integrity.

From his own vantage point, he said:

"I'm more visually literate now. As my work matures, it becomes more and more internalized, less responsive to outside stimuli. I know many other artists, but I'm pulling more and more inside myself.

"I'm an art history kook," he went on. And that translates into a desire to have what he paints relate significantly to the era in which he lives.

"I want to put together a piece that's going to function, that's going to be challenging."

For his own purposes, he said, he refers to the aesthetically balanced geometry of forms and designs that fill his canvases as "visual structure."

"Therefore, they're built," he said.

Looking around at a huge red-and-yellow creation that hangs on one wall of his living room, he said, "I look at this as a visual language. It's like music. Music makes sense to the ear. Painting must make sense to the eye."

Born in San Diego, Benjamin was discharged from the Navy in the Puget Sound area in 1949 after "four years traveling around Europe selling the Marshall Plan" as a flutist in a Navy band.

He had developed an interest in photography in the service and "wanted to go into cinematography."

Instead, he enrolled at the University of Washington and studied under the renowened (but controversial) Walter Isaacs. He finally quit in disgust in 1955 after one too many encounters with starry-eyed types who "were drawing elves in the woods."

Next came his stint at Boeing, an association that ended in 1959.

Soon after that, he began picking up "casual work on the docks" and, at last, he had found a paying occupation that suited his ambitions as a painter.

DEAR ABBY

Letters split on parent charging rent

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A reader asked you how much room and board per week should parents expect of grown children who are employed and living at home. Your reply: "There is no flat fee; much would depend upon the parents' finances."

Abby, I think it stinks that any parents would expect their children to pay room and board for living at home. Children don't ask to be born — their parents brought them into the world, and those parents are responsible for feeding, clothing and housing their children until they decide to leave home.

If parents are really that hard up, I can see asking their children to help out once in a while, but as for charging them room and board, like I say, Abby, I think that stinks. — FURIOUS IN DALLAS

DEAR FURIOUS: Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Concerning how much grown, employed children should pay for living at home: Regardless of whether the parents need the money or not, their children need to learn responsibility. Furthermore, parents who allow their children to live at home for free are teaching their children to be irresponsible.

I've seen grown children live at home for years, spending their earned money only on things to pamper themselves. Consequently they never learn how to deal with responsibility in the real world.

How can parents not see this? — CONCERNED IN ARIZONA

DEAR CONCERNED: Many parents (consciously or unconsciously) provide their grown children with all the comforts of home indefinitely for free as a way to keep them from trying their wings and leaving the nest.

So what may appear to be generosity is in reality a holding action.

DEAR ABBY: I am the secretary of a very successful business executive. For several years now, my boss has been giving me a Christmas present "for another year of faithful service." He takes me to lunch — just the two of us.

My boss is a fine man and we get along well in the office, but whatever gave him the idea that lunching with him is some sort of "gift" is beyond me. Rather than a gift, it is actually a tense hour during which I must pretend to be totally engrossed in what he has to say (always about himself) and thank him yet for the privilege of being a one-woman audience for his boring monologue.

I make a good salary, and lunching out is no big deal for me. (I do it every day.) His company is nothing special either. I see him eight hours a day, five days a week.

I can think of no way to decline his invitation without causing hard feelings. Perhaps a word in your column would wise up my egomaniacal boss — and others like him. — NOT HUNGRY (SKIP THE CITY)

DEAR NOT HUNGRY: An egomaniacal boss would never see himself in this letter, but it may be worth a shot.

English decor now popular

Associated Press

Tea and scones by an open fire on a wet winter's day, the sweet aroma of roses at a cottage door, jolly outdoorsy weekends in the country: to any reader of novels these scenes say England.

The ready appeal of these symbols of English homes is one of the reasons why English-style decorating is currently popular in the United States, says Suzanne Slesin, co-author of "English Style," a new book which documents the design elements in English homes.

"Americans feel comfortable with English decor. It offers a certain grandness but on a more modest scale. It's personal, a little sloppy, not too rigid and it makes room for collections that you add to over the years," she said. Furthermore, English style is easy to live with, doesn't take lots of money, great antiques or large spaces to reproduce, she added.

The pre-eminent (but not the only) example of English style is the country house. Another style currently being emulated in this country is a more pared-down version which she calls simplified plainness. A third strand — the stately mansion — is "wonderful to visit but impossible to reproduce unless you have endless amounts of money, time and space."

Some design details that are typical of English country homes include comfortable sofas and easy chairs covered in floral patterned chintz or unpolished cotton, faded oriental rugs on the floor, painted walls or walls papered with a small flowered print or stripes.

There is a warm and cozy feeling engendered by the presence of many family pictures, pillows and throws on the sofa and easy chairs.

Bill Vossler of Cheyenne, Wyo., tightens a strap on his boot prior to getting on a bull for the bull-riding competition.

Holding tightly to the rope with one hand while the other waves in the air, a bronc rider hangs onto his bucking ride.

Rodeo riders

ODESSA — Once a year it comes here — the familiar sights and sounds of the Sand Hills Hereford and Quarter Horse Show and Rodeo.

The smell of manure mingles with the mouth-watering delights of popcorn, sausages, hot dogs and cotton candy as spectators enter the Ector County Coliseum where the rodeo is held each year. Once past the ticket gate, the audience is assaulted with bright displays of souvenirs to buy, and parents patiently pull their children past these tables.

And it's cold. It's always cold when the rodeo is in town. The arena — its center packed with dirt for the events — feels like a refrigerator.

At the back of the coliseum where the contestants, family and friends, stock and horses gather, the air is the same Arctic temperature as that outside — 25 degrees. The horses snort, their breaths captured momentarily on the icy air before disappearing.

Like backstage before a performance, these contestants are quiet, mentally going through their motions.

The arena contains a down-home, comfortable atmosphere with these cowboys and their audience of cowboys. The slightly faded blue jeans, cowboy boots, Stetson hats and down-filled jackets reflect the everyday outfit of the true cowboy who works at ranching and rodeoing for a living — unlike the image portrayed by the pretend cowboy in the movie "Urban Cowboy."

But soon the competition begins.

The saddle bronc riders feel their muscles jerked in every direction for eight seconds.

In team roping, the two cowboys charge after the steer, twirling their ropes to snare the fleeing animal. In some cases, the animal is lucky and dodges the rope heading for its horns and feet. Roping the charging steer is a skill developed after many years of practice where the cowboy must combine speed, a quick eye and deftness of hand to send the looped rope in a perfect circle around the horns. Some succeed. Others fail, and the grim look on the cowboys' faces reflect their emotions.

After colorful displays by performers Leon Adams with his two brahmas and Vicki Adams on her precision perfect horse, the final event comes — bullriding.

One chance, and it's all over for the bullriders. Assembled at one end of the arena near the bulls, the tension mounts among the contestants as the time nears for their try.

Their concentration is intense. They stretch their legs; roll their shoulders forward and backward; toss their head to each side; do deep knee bends. They wrap the leather gloves onto their hands and nervously sit astride the bull, clamped into its chute.

The gate swings open and the bull rushes out, snorting, kicking its back feet into the air. A few riders make it to the time limit. Many don't.

Once released into the arena, a bull often refuses to head back into the stalls and prefers to charge at the cowboys and clowns lining the walls.

The clowns cajole and entice the angry animal until he charges back into the stall. But the last bull of the night — his rider tossed off the back — heads for a clown. The two spar before the crowd. And in a crowning ending for the night, the clown tosses his funny-looking pink hat toward the bull; it lands squarely between the two horns.

Almost as if it had been planned and rehearsed, a quiet, composed bull stares at the audience, tosses the hat off to the side and trots into a stall.

The rodeo is over for one more year.

Leon Coffee cajoles the bull's attention away from the rider he has just thrown into the air, giving the rider time to get away from the horns and hooves.

State alters day-care monitoring

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Nationwide concern spawned by repeated reports of child abuse has prompted at least four legislative proposals to change the way the state monitors Texas' 28,000 day-care centers.

But while those law-strengthening bids are bandied about, legislators say they must also keep in mind that the state is facing a projected $1 billion shortfall over the next two-year budget period.

At issue are four proposed amendments to the Child Care Licensing Act of 1975, the law that first required private day-care facilities to be licensed and meet standards set by the Texas Department of Human Resources.

The amendments include two proposals to levy licensing and registration fees on day-care facilities. They also would require local district attorneys to prosecute substandard centers and force potential day-care employees to undergo criminal background checks.

Affected would be both day-care centers, which are licensed and regularly inspected by state officials, and registered family homes. They are smaller, not licensed and never inspected unless a complaint is lodged.

But the money crunch must also be dealt with, and state human resource officials say they can't even cover existing requirements on current funding levels.

They're seeking a $6 million budget increase for 1986 and $7 million more in 1987, specifically for the day-care licensing division to increase their ranks of inspectors from 310 to 447.

The annual budget for day-care licensing is now $8.24 million, and officials say the chance of getting that money looks slim.

The department always has "a real problem because ... (it's) not self-sustaining, and, because of the declining revenue picture, we just have a real unstable revenue picture this year," said Sen. Chet Brooks. "But the public attention and the demand from the public for better protection of the children I think will make the Legislature act on this favorably."

"I think that the only legislation you can pass this time around are ones that will not cost any money," said Mary Polk, a former state representative who is now executive assistant to human resources Commissioner Marlin Johnston.

"Anything with a big fiscal note attached will be very difficult to pass. It will be difficult for any agency to start new programs or add staff," she said.

Brooks and Rep. Erwin Barton, both Democrats from Pasadena, are proposing day-care legislation this session, including a bill that would enable the Department of Human Resources to raise money by charging licensing and registration fees to day-care facilities.

Barton and Brooks are proposing different fee scales, and they have different ideas about how the money would be spent. Both estimate their plans would bring in $1 million annually.

A $25 annual fee on registered family homes and $50 on day-care centers and 24-hour care centers has been proposed by Brooks.

According to Brooks' measure, the funds would be used to hire additional human resources staff members to conduct more frequent inspections, including unprecedented visits to registered family homes. Additional staff members would also advise and train day-care operators and parents.

Barton's proposal calls for a $15 annual fee on registered family homes and an annual $40 base fee on day-care centers. The fees would be supplemented by a $1 charge for every child the center is licensed to keep.

The fees would be used to develop a public awareness program that would provide detailed literature to parents about the quality of care they should expect from a facility.

Two more bills dealing with day care proposed by Barton would require that either the Department of Human Resources or the day-care providers conduct criminal background checks on all day-care employees.

The proposals would make Department of Public Safety records available for such checks.

Police investigating several weekend theft reports

From Staff Reports

Telephone equipment and tools belonging to Southwestern Bell Telephone Company were reported stolen between Friday and Sunday from a vehicle parked at 305 N. Midland Drive, police reported.

Al Nichols told police that someone entered the 1981 Ford Fairmont by throwing a rock through a passenger window. The time of the burglary is unknown. The property is valued at $1,000.

In other complaints, a skill saw, transit instrument and leather tool belt were stolen Saturday or Sunday from a vehicle parked at 1107 Pecan, according to police reports.

Israel Rodriquez Guevara, 1706 Gordon Lane, told police the theft occurred between 9:30 p.m. and 9:30 a.m. The property is estimated to be worth $900, according to the report.

Rudy Baldspino of 3200 Delano reported property, valued at $1,050, was stolen from his residence between Dec. 20 and Sunday, according to police reports.

Police said someone entered the residence by breaking a north bedroom window. Taken were a portable stereo system and jewelry. The exact time of the theft is unknown.

Arlington opens charity pediatric clinic

ARLINGTON (AP) — This city's first pediatric clinic for the needy has opened it doors with more than 30 doctors volunteering their time, officials say.

Welfare and charity workers said the suburban poor in this city of 205,000 residents often have a harder time getting social services than their counterparts in the inner city, where most assistance agencies are based.

Efforts to reverse the trend in Arlington and other Dallas area suburbs will be made by the clinic, housed in the Southeast Tarrant County Sub-Courthouse.

John Peter Smith Hospital in neighboring Fort Worth, is providing nurses, office staff and equipment for the facility, officials said.

"In fast-growing areas, there is a general impression that there's a certain amount of affluence and that there's no need for social services," said Ann Rice, coordinator of the Arlington Human Services Project. "We found that not to be the case."

The clinic opened Thursday as a public-private partnership. Officials said the regular fee for a clinic visit is $25, but fees will be lower if a family can demonstrate limited ability to pay.

The U.S. Census in 1980 showed that 5.9 percent of Arlington's population was below the poverty level, compared with 8.7 percent in Grand Prairie, 6 percent in Irving, 5.1 percent in Garland and 3.8 percent in Plano.

By comparison, the rate in Dallas is 14.2 percent and 13.9 percent in Fort Worth.

Offices of social service agencies have been opened in Arlington, Grand Prairie and Garland in recent years, offering state and county welfare, food stamps, housing assistance, emergency food and shelter, and counseling.

Social workers say indigent health care and public transportation remain the biggest gaps in suburban social services.

"I'd say it's slightly more difficult in the suburbs than in Dallas," said John Milligan, who oversees state and federal programs for the city of Garland. "Some of the central services you can't get here, you have to go to Dallas to get. The distances pose something of a problem."

Man's arraignment anticipated

From Staff Reports

A 25-year-old Midland man is expected to be arraigned today in Midland County Court following his arrest Friday on felony charges of possession of marijuana, according to Midland Police Department Lt. Jim Colburn.

The man, who gave an East Front Street address, was arrested after police allegedly saw him showing a plastic bag to three other men on Midland's south-side.

A report filed by Officer Elias Hernandez said he and Officer Kevin Wolf were patroling the 1300 block of East Illinois when they saw the man on the sidewak between the Green Inn and M&M Liquors.

The man allegedly was holding a plastic bag in one hand and reaching for a smaller bag with the other, according to Hernandez.

The officers approached the subject and arrested him for felony possession of marijuana. The other three men fled the scene, according to the report.

If you picture him in space, include camera

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — If Dick Underwood ever boarded a space shuttle, he says he'd be too busy taking pictures even to eat or sleep.

Underwood, 57, is a photo nut — a space photo nut, to be more specific. He's so caught up with his passion that he developed a complex system for taking pictures in space for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A NASA employee, he now teaches astronauts how to take pictures and then helps them identify earthly spots they've shot.

"I've had a love affair with space photography from the very beginning," Underwood said in a recent interview.

He adds that if he ever gets a chance to fly in space, he would leave his food behind to take more film and go without sleep to take more pictures.

Underwood says his interest in aerial photography began developing while he was a geology student at the University of Connecticut.

He used infrared film — then new on the market — for research he was doing on railroad accidents, and with that film, he found cracks and fault lines that were difficult to find otherwise.

After college, he joined the Corps of Engineers, where he worked several years as a map maker and interpreter of aerial photographs. In 1964, he joined NASA.

Today, Underwood identifies spots in space pictures by examining the color of the land or water, the air or the foliage. Sometimes, astronauts hand him pictures of tiny islands in hopes of stumping him, but Underwood said he's never failed to identify the spot.

Underwood said astronauts have the opportunity to get a special look at the Earth's beauty.

"Those guys stand back like you and I do in the Louvre and see this magnificent work," he said. "They're the lucky ones."

Underwood said the first astronaut who took good pictures in space was Walter Schirra.

Musicians to seek renewed talks

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Striking San Antonio Symphony musicians say they will ask a federal mediator to push for new talks in an attempt to end the 2-day-old strike that threatens performances by big-name guest stars.

The 83-member orchestra walked off the job Saturday night, less than an hour before a near-sellout performance. The strike could force the cancellation of performances tonight and Tuesday.

The strikers say they are seeking salary parity with other major orchestras in the United States. Symphony officials say the orchestra is just coming out of a financial crisis and can't afford a more generous contract.

Union spokeswoman Ellen McGlone said late Sunday the musicians would ask a federal mediator today to arrange talks.

Nevertheless, symphony Managing Director Carlos Wilson expressed little hope tonight's concert, featuring flutist Jean-Pierre Rampal, could go on as scheduled.

"It's doubtful we can resolve it in one day," Wilson said. "Everything happening Monday and Tuesday and in the immediate future is in jeopardy."

Worker's condition 'satisfactory'

From Staff Reports

A 36-year-old employee of BJM Drilling Co., injured early Friday morning when he fell 20 feet from an oil rig, was listed in satisfactory condition today at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

Billy Gilbreath of Odessa was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital following the 3 a.m. accident on a rig located about 18 miles south of Midland near State Highway 349. He later was transferred to the Odessa hospital.

Suspects still sought in robbery

From Staff Reports

Midland police were still searching Monday morning for two men suspected of robbing a south-side liquor store Saturday.

Police dispatchers said two men, believed to be in their late 20s, robbed McLoyd's Spirits, 1801 S. Rankin Highway. The amount of money taken is undetermined.

The men, armed with a .22-caliber pistol and a knife, were last seen on foot heading east from the store on Montgomery.

One of the men was described as a 6-feet, two-inches tall and weighing 175 pounds. He was wearing a purple scarf, purple shirt, black pant and coat. The other man was said to be about 5-feet, 8-inches tall and 150 pounds. He was dressed in a khaki-colored jacket and pants, according to descriptions obtained by police.

Houston hunger plane diverted to Sudan

HOUSTON (AP) — A plane carrying emergency food supplies from Houston is scheduled to land Tuesday in Sudan, where some 120,000 Ethiopians have immigrated, a U.S. State Department official said.

The Boeing 707, loaded with 53,000 pounds of food, was forbidden this weekend to land in Ethiopia by that country's government.

"I'm calling this the Houston miracle because there is an absolute crisis in eastern Sudan," F.A. Harris, director of the State Department's Office of Emergency Operations, said Sunday. "There's not enough food to feed this massive wave of Ethiopians that have come across."

Harris said Sudan has a worse food shortage than Ethiopia.

The plane and relief workers are staying in Athens, Greece, until final arrangements are made for the plane's flight, said John Harris, a flight controller for Houston's Universal Aviation.

NORML: Record pot crop harvested

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. marijuana growers, for the first time filling more than half the nation's demand, harvested a record $16.6 billion worth of pot in 1984, according to the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

The estimated domestic harvest was worth 20 percent more than the 1983 crop and continued to make marijuana America's second most valuable agricultural product, NORML said in its annual cultivation report.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that the nation's corn crop last year was worth $19.5 billion, followed by hay at $11.5 billion and soybeans at $11.3 billion. Last year, the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control estimated marijuana could be worth from $10 billion to $50 billion a year in the United States.

Illegal domestic pot farmers raised about 11 million pounds in 1984, or 55 percent of the 20-million-pound total amount available to the 30 million or more Americans using marijuana on a regular basis, according to NORML.

The group, which advocates legalization of marijuana, said that in 1983, U.S.-grown marijuana accounted for about half the pot available in this country.

The organization said it based its figures on published reports, news articles, personal interviews and law enforcement estimates and reports.

NORML said about three-quarters of the 1984 domestic crop was sinsemilla — specially cultivated seedless plants that have a higher potency and bring growers about $1,850 a pound, compared to $500 a pound for regular plants.

"The two most notable trends emerging in 1984 are an increase in indoor marijuana growing and personal-use growing," the report said. "Marijuana consumers are smoking less, consuming better quality marijuana than in the past and paying higher prices for domestically grown marijuana."

NORML said U.S. growers are benefiting from reduced pot imports, especially from Colombia, where cocaine is a more profitable drug.

The report estimated that 25 percent of all U.S. marijuana is produced indoors under plant lights by some 200,000 commercial growers and an estimated 4 million people who cultivate it for personal use in basements and closets.

"Indoor growing has become highly sophisticated and technological," said the NORML report, prepared by Joanne C. Gampel, director of the Council on Marijuana and Health.

While the number of indoor commercial growers remained stable in 1984, the personal-use growers grew by one-third last year as a response to law enforcement efforts and the rising street price of pot, according to the report.

NORML said threats by law enforcement agencies to spray outdoor crops with herbicides such as paraquat helped foster so-called personal "victory gardens" that produce from four ounces to two pounds of pot a year.

The growing trend toward indoor pot farming is making detection far more difficult for local police and federal drug agents, NORML said.

"Even though the 1984 marijuana crop was subjected to the most aggressive marijuana eradication program in United States history, the most successful states claimed that 25 percent of the marijuana plants were eradicated," the report said.

NORML said its findings "indicate the futility of marijuana enforcement. It is virtually impossible to control this market, just as it was impossible to control moonshining during alcohol Prohibition."

The West continued to be the leading marijuana growing area, producing $6.7 billion worth last year, NORML said. But the South, using sophisticated growing techniques and getting better weather, was close behind with $6.6 billion, followed by North Central states with $2.2 billion and the Northeast with $1.1 billion.

Cocaine use among high school seniors stabalizes, marijuana, alcohol use decreases, study shows

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The percentage of high school seniors using cocaine has not changed since 1979, despite a growing aversion to marijuana, alcohol and cigarettes, according to a government-sponsored study released today.

"We observed a sharp increase in cocaine use between 1976 and 1979, but since, the rates of use in this age group have been relatively stable," said Lloyd D. Johnson, one of three University of Michigan social psychologists who conducted the nationwide study of 17,000 high school seniors for the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

"Still, usage levels are troublesomely high," Johnson said. Sixteen percent of the seniors surveyed last spring had used cocaine at least once, 12 percent had used it some time in the previous year and 6 percent were monthly users, he said.

Johnson, of the university's Institute of Social Research, said more seniors view cocaine as dangerous and disapprove of its use, but there is an indication of increasing use, especially in the Northeast.

Meanwhile, 85 percent of the seniors disapproved of regular marijuana use in 1984, compared with 65 percent in 1977, the study said.

"Concern about both the psychological and physical effects of regular marijuana use has shifted dramatically over the last seven years," resulting in "an increasing number of young people terminating or reducing their use after some initial period of involvement," Johnson said.

"While most seniors do not view experimental or occasional use of marijuana as partiularly risky, between one-half and two-thirds of all seniors personally disapprove of these behaviors," he said.

Five percent of the seniors had used marijuana at least 20 times in the previous month, down from 5.5 percent in 1983 and from the peak of 11 percent in 1978. Twenty-five percent said they used marijuana occasionally, vs. 37 percent in 1978.

"This substantial downturn in use of marijuana in the face of continuing widespread availability illustrates the critically important fact that drug abuse can be dealt with effectively through reducing the demand for drugs, not just the supply," Johnson said.

"Young people must be convinced that using abusable substances is not in their best interest, and they must be given the social skills and social support necessary to act accordingly.

The study also showed that 67 percent of seniors had used alcohol in the previous month, with 5 percent drinking daily. In 1979, those figures were 72 percent and 7 percent, respectively.

Reports of occasional heavy drinking fell to 39 percent in 1984 from 41 percent the previous year — the first decline since the study began 10 years ago.

Cigarette smoking, which had fallen by nearly one-third between 1977 and 1980 and leveled off for several years, dropped from 41 percent in 1983 to 39 percent last year, Johnson said.

Crewmen simulate countdown, liftoff

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A practice countdown was completed successfully today for America's first classified man-in-space mission, a Jan. 23 deployment of an advanced spy satellite within listening range of the Soviet Union.

The rehearsal, which began at 1:40 p.m. Sunday, was concluded at 8:03 a.m. with a simulated liftoff. The five-man astronaut crew was in the cockpit of the shuttle Discovery for the final 2½ hours of the test. Discovery was moved to the launch pad Saturday.

"It appears the countdown demonstration test has been completed successfully with only a few minor problems," reported Hugh Harris, spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The purpose of the practice is to make certain all spacecraft and rocket systems are ready for flight and to familiarize the astronauts with the final hours of the countdown.

The Defense Department labeled much of the mission secret, including the nature of the payload. For security reasons, the Pentagon will say only that the launch will occur some time between 1:15 p.m. and 4:15 p.m. on Jan. 23.

Reporters will be allowed to observe the launch from a Kennedy Space Center press site, but will be given no countdown details. They also will not be allowed to listen in on live conversations from Discovery during flight, as has been the custom on 45 earlier U.S. man-in-space missions.

Instead, written progress statements will be issued every eight hours.

After the countdown test before each of the previous 14 shuttle flights, the astronauts held a news conference. The Pentagon said the crew would only pose for pictures at the pad today, but would not answer questions.

Sources familiar with the project have told the Associated Press the satellite is an advanced model of earlier satellites that intercept radio, telephone and satellite communications and relay them to American intelligence agency receivers.

The sources, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, said the satellite is capable of gathering radio data from Soviet missile tests. They said the payload, named SigInt, for signal intelligence, will be positioned in stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the equator, south of the Soviet Union.

The commander of the all-military crew is Navy Capt. Thomas Mattingly. The others are Air Force Majs. Loren Shriver, Elison Onizuka and Gary Payton and Marine Maj. James Buchli.

PBS-SEPM to host luncheon

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogist (PBS-SEPM) will host a luncheon speaker on Tuesday and a dinner lecturer on Wednesday.

Rick Sarg of Exxon Production Research Co. of Houston will address the Society's noon luncheon. His presentation, co-authored by Lloyd C. Pray of the University of Wisconsin in Madison, is entitled "Unconformities and depositional sequences of seismic stratigraphic scale (permian) of Western Guadalupe Mountains, Texas — New Mexico." This presentation is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. at the Midland Center.

Dr. Robert H. Dott, Jr. will speak at the dinner lecture. He is a past president of the SEPM. He will talk on "Episodic Sedimentation of Ancient Shelf Sandstones." Dinner is scheduled for 7-7:30 p.m. with the talk following from 7:30-8:30 p.m. Cost is $12.

For information, phone the SEPM office at 83-1573 prior to Tuesday.

Ginsburg to speak at WTGS meeting

Robert N. Ginsburg, an AAPG distinguished lecturer from the University of Miami, will be the speaker at the luncheon meeting of the West Texas Geological Society on Tuesday.

The title of his talk is "Sedimentary Models of Pattern Process and Succession Derived from Bahamian Carbonate."

The meeting will begin at 11:30 a.m. at the Midland Center, 105 N. Main. The cost is $7 and reservations should be made by calling the Society at 683-1573 before 4 p.m. today.

According to Grinsburg three decades of research on the Cenozoic carbonate platforms of the Bahamas have produced several models of deposition and diagenesis. The models are sufficiently varied and numerous that they can be categorized and their interactions evaluated.

PBGC to offer five courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer five courses in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois.

Phillips employees begin voting on wage hike

BORGER, Texas (AP) — Union employees at Phillips Petroleum Co. were scheduled to begin voting today on whether to defer a negotiated wage hike until the company can finish reconstructing after Mesa Partners' aborted takeover bid.

Phillips officials had asked the union to delay raises, which were to be effective Tuesday. Local 351 of the International Union of Operating Engineers called general membership meetings through Tuesday on the request.

The move could postpone indefinitely wage increases averaging $730 per employee per year in Borger that were negotiated last spring. B.J. Grove, president of Local 351, said Phillips employees in at least five other cities have also been asked to defer the raises.

The company made the request Thursday during an executive meeting of union officials and Phillips personnel at the Borger Phillips Petroleum Building.

The wage freeze proposal, affecting both salaried and hourly employees, is part of Phillips' effort to pay for a proposed Employee Incentive Stock Ownership Plan, said company spokesman Bill Adams.

The plan calls for the sale of 32 million Phillips shares to employees.

Union meetings at 7:30 p.m. today and 9 a.m. Tuesday will cover all shifts at the Borger plant, allowing 1,100 union members to cast ballots.

The "talk around town" seemed to indicate Phillips employees understand the need for the wage freeze, Adams said Sunday.

Grove said a vote will be taken only on whether to defer the wage increase until more information is made available on the new employee incentive stock ownership plan.

Formation of the stock plan — which if successful would put employees in control of about 40 percent of the company, Grove said — was announced as part of an agreement with Mesa Partners that ended that group's efforts to gain control of Phillips last year.

Phillips Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Bill Douce said that the equity interest to be held by Phillips employees through the stock plan should provide an important economic incentive for employees to ensure the company's economic health.

Employees learned of the wage and salary freeze Friday, when a notice was posted on bulletin boards at the company headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla., Adams said.

Adams said the stock plan must first be approved by the company's stockholders, who have tentatively been scheduled to meet in late February or early March. He said explanations of the plan and proxy material may be distributed to stockholders by the end of the month.

Mouser claims threats made against workers

DALLAS (AP) — One mistake would be enough for Comanche Peak nuclear power plant managers to fire their employees, prompting fear that affected workers' judgment, a former supervisor has testified.

"If you screwed up, they'd walk you to the gate," Evert Mouser, a supervisor of paint inspectors at the plant between August and October 1983, testified Saturday before a safety panel in Bethesda, Md.

"It applied to everyone at the site" and was "a daily occurrence," he said of harrassment by plant officials.

Mouser was testifying before a panel of attorneys and a judge of the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board, which is conducting hearings on safety issues at the plant.

"If I were told several times, 'I'll walk you to the gate,' that would indeed affect my work judgment," Mouser testified.

Mouser said he left Comanche Peak for a job at the Midland, Mich., nuclear power plant in October 1983. The Midland plant was canceled in July.

Mouser was asked to testify about his role in the public release of a highly damaging consultant's memo regarding the quality of safety-related paint coatings at Comanche Peak.

Joseph Lipinsky, quality assurance director of the Oliver B. Cannon & Son Inc. paint company of Philadelphia, wrote the memo Aug. 8, 1983.

In his memo, Lipinsky, a friend of Mouser's, said work at the plant was of poor quality and would need to be redone. He also said construction managers at the plant were not interested in criticism and wanted to "buy the right answer."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Production at weakest since 1982 recession

NEW YORK (AP) — Production last month was the weakest since the recession ended in December 1982, the National Association of Purchasing Management says.

Other indicators also point to further deterioration in coming months, the industry association said Sunday.

The rate of new orders and the level of employment both hit their lowest levels since December 1982, it said. Only prices showed improvement over the month. The group's monthly survey found that more members reported declining prices than reported price increases.

Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the association's business survey committee, said the further slowing of the economy in December resumed several months of decline that were interrupted by a pause in November.

Bretz, also director of corporate purchasing for Pitney Bowes Inc., said the economy "shows no immediate signs of improving."

The association said its composite index for the economy inched down to 51.3 percent during December from 52.1 percent in November. A reading below 50 percent indicates the economy is contracting; a reading above that level indicates growth.

Proposed merger to be 7th largest oil firm

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Diamond Shamrock Corp. proceed with the merger they say they are considering, they will form the nation's seventh largest oil company.

In a joint statement Friday, the companies said they "are engaged in discussions looking toward a possible business combination."

One source close to the parties, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said it was "an accomplished fact that Occidental would either acquire or merge with Diamond Shamrock."

The companies said directors would meet today to consider the proposal and that "a further announcement is expected to be made shortly thereafter."

Money supply increase leaves M1 in range

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest increase in the basic money supply was a bit larger than analysts had expected but it still left M1 in the middle of the Federal Reserve Board's annual target range.

The Fed reported Friday that M1 rose $6.7 billion in mid-December.

"The money supply was up more than people expected," said Maury Harris, an economist with PaineWebber Inc. He added that analysts had been predicting an increase of $4 billion to $5 billion.

David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said, "The increase was only slightly above market expectations. There were a number of forecasts that were in the range."

The Fed said M1 rose to a seasonally adjusted $557.6 billion in the week ended Dec. 24 from $550.9 billion the previous week. M1 includes cash in circulation, deposits in checking accounts and non-bank travelers checks.

The latest increase leaves the money supply $11.3 billion above the lower end of the Fed's target range and $11.6 billion below the upper end. The money supply has grown at an annual rate of 6 percent so far this year.

The Fed has said it would like to see M1 grow between 4 percent and 8 percent from the fourth quarter of 1983 through the fourth quarter of 1984.

Walcher guest speaker at Desk and Derrick meeting

Jack Walcher, president and chairman of the board of directors of Eddins-Walcher Co., will speak Thursday at the Midland Desk and Derrick Club's regular monthly meeting at the Petroleum Club, 501 W. Wall.

His topic will be "The Downstream Side of the Oil Business." In his speech, Walcher will touch on such topics as downstream vs. upstream, his experiences in the downstream side, a history of petroleum marketing, when the Arabs turned off the valves, hazardous materials and the Department of Transportation, the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Department of Transportation, the Environmental Protection Agency and underground tanks and the future of petroleum marketing.

Walcher began his career with what is now Eddins-Walcher on July 4, 1937. The company, headquartered in Midland, operates 18 bulk plants, including two in New Mexico. The company also markets gasoline, diesel, propane and lubricants.

Although the company has 10 service stations and approximately 2,500 farm accounts, the company's main concentration is the sale of fuel and lubricants to drilling rigs and other commercial accounts.

Walcher holds a bachelors degree in business administration from the University of Texas. He presently serves as a member of the board of directors of the Midland-based Geo-Search Corp. He is a past president of the Texas LP Gas Association and is currently serving the association's Long-Range Planning Committee.

Jack Walcher

He has served on the Midland City Council and as Mayor Pro-Tem. He has been a member of the board of directors of the Petroleum Club, and vice president on the board of the Midland Country Club.

Walcher has also been a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the United Way campaign, Family Counseling Service and the board of directors of Western State Bank.

Desk and Derrick is an organization of women employed by companies or organizations within the petroleum and allied industries. The association is composed of 10,000 members in more than 120 clubs throughout North America, including the United States and Canada.

Investigation into bank failure launched

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A multistate investigation was launched into the failure of a small western Kansas bank once it became known that dozens of farmers had been bilked out of thousands of dollars each, according to a published report.

The investigation began after the Rexford State Bank in Rexford was declared insolvent and closed by bank regulators Oct. 10, The Kansas City Times reported in Saturday's editions.

Those close to the situation said the bank, which was financially sound a year ago, grew quickly with large deposits from a money broker, lent that money mainly to troubled farmers and then collapsed when the money was not repaid, according to The Times.

The newspaper said the main figure in the collapse is Nasib Ed Kalliel, a Houston, Texas, businessman. Investigators told the paper and lawsuit documents allege that Kalliel and his companies steered troubled farmers to the Rexford bank, took control of the loans obtained by those farmers and promised to repay the loans.

In return, Kalliel received an 80 percent interest in the farms and fees for obtaining the loans and was to receive half the annual profits from the farms, the newspaper reported.

However, investigators told the paper that Kalliel did not repay the loans and as a result the bank failed and farmers apparently are out thousands of dollars they paid Kalliel.

Calls to Kalliel's home and office in Houston by The Associated Press went unanswered Saturday.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in the last two weeks has filed 11 lawsuits in U.S. District Court in Kansas City, Kan., seeking repayment of loans to the Rexford bank from Kalliel, his companies and several farmers.

The FBI in Kansas City told The Times that it has begun an investigation involving Kalliel.

In November, the Kansas attorney general obtained a temporary court order barring Kalliel's company, First Financial Guaranty Mortgage Co. of Houston, from operating in the state.

Last month, the attorney general's office in Iowa filed a consumer lawsuit against Kalliel and his company.

The attorney general's office in Des Moines said Kalliel has claimed diplomatic immunity from prosecution because he claims he is a trade counselor for foreign nations and because his wife Fran is the sister of King Hussein of Jordan.

A State Department spokesman in Washington declined to confirm whether Kalliel has diplomatic immunity, but said King Hussein has one sister named Maqbula, not Fran.

Employers project 6 to 6.5 percent increase in salaries

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Would you consider a 6 percent to 6.5 percent salary increase this year to be extravagant, good, merely sufficient, or poor?

Regardless of your opinion, that is what employers of white collar workers are projecting for their salaried workers in 1985, according to a highly regarded survey by a consulting firm.

The Wyatt Company, which calls itself the largest actuarial, compensation, and employee benefits consultant, maintains that its 6 percent to 6.5 percent range is "conservative." But others might disagree.

Such increases exceed productivity growth by about double, for example, and if you believe the economic seers it is all but impossible to give raises in excess of productivity increases without risking inflation.

By that measure therefore the raises — for management, supervisory, professional-scientific, sales and clerical personnel — hardly seem conservative.

In addition, they are generally higher than what blue-collar workers expect this year from large labor-management agreements. And they are higher also than most government workers — municipal, state and federal — will be getting.

The biggest increases of all, according to Wyatt's Executive Compensation Services subsidiary, are budgeted for top management positions, which probably surprises nobody, least of all the executive recipients.

However, the 6.5 percent projection for top management represents a decline from actual increases of 6.7 percent in 1984. The survey suggests middle management might get an even bigger shock, a decline to 6 percent in 1985 from 6.4 percent in 1984 and 6.6 percent in 1983.

Beneath the executives, however, there should be a lot of smiles, with raises for all other categories projected at significantly higher levels than in 1984 and 1983.

The projected increases: supervisory, 6.2 percent from 5.7 percent in 1984; professional-scientific, 6.4 percent from 5.6 percent; sales, 6.4 percent from 5.8 percent; and clerical, 6.4 percent from 5.3 percent in 1983.

While the Wyatt survey, based on projections for 600,000 workers, shows "most companies still taking a conservative approach to compensation," high technology is a notable exception, as it was also in other years.

Raises at high technology companies, whose productivity generally exceeds that of the economy as a whole, are projected at 7 percent. Still, that figure still represents a decline from actual increases of 7.3 percent in 1984.

The smallest increase for any industry group is the 5 percent projected for healthcare workers, a decline from 5.6 percent in 1984. Energy workers may fare much better, with 6 percent raises versus 4.5 percent last year.

Precise as these figures appear to be, they are merely averages. And as those experienced in statistics know, averages, trends and broad measures of any sort often hide very important exceptions and differences.

The United States, for example, is so large that regional differences appear in almost any set of numbers, including unemployment, growth rates, living standards and, of course, in projected salary increases.

A study by Wyatt of one small geographical area revealed projected salary increases averaging 8.7 percent, or far beyond any national figures for job or industry categories.

As some readers might already have surmised, those big raises are expected to be handed out in the Silicon Valley, that high-tech concentration between San Francisco's southern suburbs and the San Jose metropolitan area.

John Cunniff is business analyst for the Associated Press.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Stockbrokers must report sales, proceeds of transactions to IRS

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Many people buy and sell stocks on a day-to-day basis. There are days when more than 100 million shares are traded on the New York Stock Exchange. Are brokers required to keep track of each customer's transactions and report all purchases and sales to the Internal Revenue Service?

I feel there must be some such rule. But my husband says that would be too much work for brokers.

A. Your husband is wrong. You are half right.

Doyle

Brokers are required to report to the IRS every sale and the proceeds from that sale by every customer. However, there is no requirement that brokers report customers' purchases.

Those brokerage house "information returns" go to the IRS as Forms 1099-B in "machine readable form" — computer tapes, disks and such. Each brokerage customer gets his or her paper copy of Form 1099-B, which is supposed to arrive from the broker no later than January 31.

That annual Form 1099-B lists all sales the customer made during the previous year. This is one of the compliance features of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, but it didn't go into effect until July 1, 1983.

The IRS feeds that information into its computers. If you sell stock and don't report it on your federal income tax return, you can expect to hear from the revenooers. Letters are just beginning to come in from readers who "forgot" to report stock sales during the second half of 1983 and who express great surprise at being nabbed by the IRS program of "matching" brokerage house Forms 1099-B against individual tax returns.

Because Form 1099-B reports only sales and sales prices, it's up to each taxpayer to list purchase prices accurately when reporting capital gains and-or capital losses on Schedule D of his or her federal income tax return.

Q. I want to pay the college costs for both my grandson and granddaughter. Those expenses will be approximately $3,000 for each of them each fall and spring semester. Will my grandchildren have to file income tax returns?

A. Not because of the money you plan to provide. You'll be making gifts to those young people. Gifts are not taxable income. Even if they have other income that results in them having to file income tax returns, they won't have to report your generous gifts.

And you won't have to file a federal gift tax return, because your gifts will be under the annual $10,000 "exclusion" you are allowed in gifts to each of as many people as you please — $20,000 for a married couple making joint gifts.

As a matter of fact, the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 allows an unlimited gift tax exclusion for school tuition costs.

Just don't make the mistake some grandparents do and try to take the money you give to your grandchildren as deductions on your income tax return. That's a no-no and would get you in hot water with the IRS.

* * *

Q. I was wounded in World War II and am receiving Veteran Administration compensation for service-connected disability. Will I have to include that compensation in calculating whether or not I have to pay federal income tax on part of my Social Security benefits?

A. No. You are not required to report disability retirement payments and other benefits from the Veterans Administration as income on your federal income tax return. So, it's not included in your adjusted gross income.

In figuring out if any income tax is due on some of your SS benefits, you add up your adjusted gross income, any otherwise tax-free interest from municipal bonds and half of your SS benefits.

If the total — your "threshold" — exceeds $25,000 for an individual, $32,000 for a married couple filing a joint return or zero for married people filing separate returns, then there will be a tax bite on part of the SS benefits.

You don't have to include your veteran's benefits in any part of this ridiculously complicated calculation, which went into effect for 1984 tax returns.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Exercise stress testing can help heart patients

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband had a heart attack and his doctor is now scheduling him for exercise testing. What is the purpose of this for a person who has already had a heart attack? My husband was never much of an athlete anyway, even before the attack. — Mrs. K.R., Trenton, N.J.

Dear Mrs. R.: Most patients who are hospitalized with a myocardial infarction survive, but they remain at some risk for future cardiac difficulties. The purpose of exercise stress testing is to determine which patients are likely to experience a second event so that appropriate treatment might be instituted. The test also provides information about the patient's capacity for physical exertion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would you please explain what is meant by actinic keratoses? My brother is a farmer, and he wrote to tell me that that is what the doctor told him he has. He says it is something like cancer but it is not cancer. Do you have more information? — Mr. D.W., Providence, R.I.

Dear Mr. W.: Actinic keratoses are premalignant lesions of the outermost surface of the skin, and they are caused by chronic exposure to the sun. People who work outdoors, such as farmers and laborers, show an increased incidence of the condition. Other factors include the person's skin color (redheads and blondes are particularly susceptible to the development of actinic keratoses), tanning ability and genetic considerations.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was interested to read in the paper that a person who has asthma may be helped by drinking coffee. Does this mean that doctors are now recommending coffee instead of medicine for these patients? The article wasn't very clear about this. — Ms. S.K., St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Ms. K.: Caffeine appears to be of value in improving lung function in young patients, but coffee drinking is not being recommended as a substitute for antiasthmatic medication. Investigators from the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg, Canada, have suggested that caffeine may serve as a temporary bronchodilator when prescription medication is not readily available, but it is not recommended for regular use.

For Bertram, Youngstown, Ohio: The nausea and vomiting that are associated with chemotherapy are extremely serious complications. Some patients choose to drop out of treatment because they are unable to tolerate the medication.

A woman carries a water jar past her new house in My Lai, Vietnam. The hamlet, now an agricultural cooperative formed by recent settlers, is the heart of the new My Lai. Life goes on in the central Vietnam village 16 years after civilian women and children were slaughtered by American troops.

My Lai: Victims remember massacre

Pham Thi Trinh, a survivor of the 1968 My Lai massacre, stands next to a marker commemorating the victims of American frustration with the war in Vietnam. She said 11 members of her family were killed near the marker.

A Vietnamese child smiles in the village of My Lai. Just as the rice comes up every spring, life goes on in this hamlet in central Vietnam.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Like the Vietnam War itself, the My Lai massacre is fading in American memory. But in My Lai it remains an ever-present nightmare.

MY LAI, Vietnam — The rice and vegetables grow in the lush green fields, the flowers are in bloom and the trees are tall.

A new generation of children walks laughing through the hamlet of My Lai 4. Cows graze, dogs bark, chickens cackle.

Just as the rice harvest comes up every spring, life goes on in the hamlet in central Vietnam 16 years after a previous generation of children and their parents were killed by American troops in what the world called the My Lai massacre.

The bodies of the victims lie in the cemeteries and fields in and around My Lai.

Although atrocities occurred on both sides during the war, My Lai stunned America, a nation that took pride in abiding by the rules of war.

Visiting My Lai today, in a trip arranged at his request by officials of Vietnam's Communist government, an Associated Press reporter finds a hamlet rebuilt since 1975, when the Communists took over all Vietnam with the fall of the Saigon government. An agricultural cooperative, formed by recent settlers, is the heart of the new My Lai.

A PLAQUE IS inscribed with the names of 504 men, women and children Vietnamese officials say were killed on March 16, 1968.

A marker designates each spot where groups of Vietnamese were killed, including 97 people the government says were slain in a neighboring hamlet.

"Tai Doan Muong Nay 16-3-1968 Da Tan Sat 170 Nguoi," reads one marker — "On This Water Canal on March 16, 1968, American Imperialists Massacred 170 People."

The canal was a dry ditch then. It was built in 1978 and irrigates the rice paddies nearby.

Grassy knolls surrounding the canal were once the foundations of homes burned down by the Americans, says Pham Thi Trinh, 26, a massacre survivor who now lives and works in the little museum in My Lai, which during the war years was among hundreds of South Vietnamese hamlets regarded as pro-Viet Cong by U.S. forces.

Pham Thi Trinh weeps while recalling the horrors of the 1968 massacre of villagers by American troops at My Lai.

The museum exhibition includes photographs of massacred women and children made by a U.S. Army combat photographer and photos of American soldiers from U.S. publications.

THESE INCLUDE William L. Calley, the lieutenant who served as a platoon commander for Charlie Company, 1st Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, 11th Brigade, Americal Division — the company involved in the massacre.

In the center of the hamlet, a large statue memorializes the victims. A woman stands with right hand raised, fist clenched. She holds a child in her left arm. At her feet are other massacre victims, comforting each other.

A second marker lies near an old French guardhouse, possibly the spot where an American soldier testified he helped round up about 35 or 40 Vietnamese men, women and children who were then herded at rifle point into a clearing.

The soldier, rifleman Paul Meadlo, testified at Calley's court-martial that the lieutenant said, "You know what to do with them, Meadlo."

"I assumed he meant guard them, and I said, 'Yes,'" Meadlo testified.

He said Calley then returned and asked, "How come they're not dead?"

"I said I didn't know we were supposed to kill them," Meadlo testified. He said Calley replied, "I want them dead."

"HE TOLD me to help shoot them," Meadlo testified. He said he and Calley stood side by side and fired into the victims with M-16 automatic rifles from a distance of about 20 feet.

Still another marker lies in a spot covered by heavy brush where survivor Pham Thi Trinh says the houses in her family compound once stood.

"My parents, six brothers and sisters, grandmother and aunt and uncle were killed," she says through a Vietnamese guide and interpreter, a Foreign Ministry official accompanying the reporter.

"I remember that morning well," she says. "I was 10 years old...We were preparing breakfast just before going into the fields.

"Suddenly the shelling came. We took cover in a shelter in front of our home. After the shelling we heard the sound of American soldiers. People hiding in the shelter got out as they usually did when Americans entered the village."

Pham Thi Trinh, weeping throughout the two-hour interview, says the U.S. troops ordered her family and four neighbors to the front of the house.

"THEY SHOT to death three cows first, then they knelt and shot my family. People tried to run away."

She says she escaped by hiding in a bedroom.

American troops shot her mother and then placed straw on her and lighted it, she says. Her 14-year-old sister ran from the burning kitchen of their home, but the laughing soldiers forced her back into the fire, she says.

As her mother was dying of her wounds, she damned the Americans, Pham Thi Trinh says.

"I heard her say, 'You are criminals! You killed all of my family!' Then she cried out, 'I will die! Anybody, any children of mine, if you're still alive, try to live.'"

Pham Thi Trinh says she ran to her 76-year-old grandmother's house and found her body partly inside a dresser where she had tried to hide.

"Her hand was still clutching the door she was trying to close. My heart hurt very much and I embraced her and cried."

Pham Thi Trinh was the only survivor in her family, she says.

THE MASSACRE at My Lai is well documented through the testimony of 91 witnesses and hundreds of depositions, documents, maps and photographs placed in evidence during Calley's court-martial in November 1969. But the exact number of Vietnamese who died is not. Official U.S. Army sources initially estimated the number at 200, and Calley was charged with the murder of 102 Vietnamese civilians.

For a year after it happened, the story of My Lai remained untold, until Vietnam veteran Ron Ridenhour learned of it from several men in Charlie Company.

He mailed letters to 30 military and congressional leaders documenting his charges that "something rather dark and bloody did occur sometime in March 1968" in a village the Americans code-named "Pinkville."

In his defense, Calley testified:

"When my troops were getting massacred and mauled by an enemy I couldn't see, I couldn't feel and I couldn't touch, that nobody in the military ever described as anything other than communism.

"They didn't give it a race, they didn't give it a sex, they didn't give it an age. They never let me believe it was just a philosophy in a man's mind.

"THAT WAS my enemy out there and when it came between me and that enemy, I had to value the lives of my troops, and I feel that is the only crime I have committed."

A jury of six senior officers convicted Calley in 1971 of first-degree murder of at least 22 villagers. He was sentenced to life imprisonment but President Richard M. Nixon reduced that to 20 years. Calley served three years under house arrest at Fort Benning, Ga.

Pham Thi Trinh says Calley's testimony was "nonsense."

"I was young. I just saw people in my village working, farming, plowing and planting. The children went to school. That's all. No forces.

"My family and I suffered much from the American soldiers here and I witnessed it. In my heart I still hate very much the American soldiers because the picture is still in my mind. I cannot forget."

Airlift may resume soon

By MASHA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — The airlift of thousands of Jews from drought-stricken Ethiopia has been halted, a relief agency official says, but efforts were under way today to resume evacuation of the estimated 10,000 Jews remaining there.

A spokesman for the independent Jewish Agency, which was helping the Israeli government resettle the Ethiopian Jews, said Sunday that a refugee flight scheduled for the weekend had been canceled.

Shafer Stollman, the spokesman, said the Ethiopian government, which is Marxist and which broke relations with Israel after the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, was upset over premature publicity about the airlift and ordered the flights halted.

But another Jewish Agency spokesman, Zvi Eyal, said Sunday that European airline companies, which he declined to name, offered to help bring the remaining Ethiopian Jews to Israel. He estimated that in addition to 10,000 Jews left in the northeast African nation about 4,000 more were in refugee camps in Sudan.

The Times of London today reported diplomatic speculation in Israel that "some military style operation" may be mounted to rescue at least those Jews stuck in refugee camps in the Sudan.

London's Daily Mirror reported today that Israel had begun to fly transport planes to makeshift dirt airstrips in northern Ethiopia to take out the remaining Jews. That report was unconfirmed.

A Belgian charter company, Trans European Airways, said Saturday it was terminating its flights to pick up the Jews. Belgium's transport minister said about 7,000 Ethiopians had been flown to Israel from Sudan on a total of 35 flights since November.

Sudan's government has said it was not involved in the airlift in any way.

Refugees in Israel and political leaders from both the left and the right said premature publication of news of the mission had led to its cancellation, and angry Ethiopian Jews called the publicity a "conspiracy" to halt the sudden influx of immigrants.

The immigrants have been sent to more than a dozen Israeli cities and downs. Israeli newspapers have said some communities resisted the immigrants' arrival, considering them backward.

The mission was well known among journalists in Israel for more than a month, but the Israeli military censor banned its publication.

Opposition legislators said that when the parliament meets on Wednesday they will seek no-confidence motions to try to tumble the government for its part in revealing the mission.

Reporting in Tel Aviv on the controversy over the publicity, the Maariv newspaper said too many people knew about Operation Moses, as the airlifts have been called, before word of it was leaked to the public.

The news leak began abroad when Jewish Agency chairman Aryeh Dulzin asked American Jews in New York state on Nov. 20 to help raise $100 million for a special operation to settle the Jews in Israel.

"Although I am not free to discuss this subject in public, I am free to tell you that the Jewish Agency is prepared for a sudden jump in immigration. One of the oldest of Jewish tribes is about to return to its homeland," Maariv quoted Dulzin as saying in New York last November.

Articles began appearing in Israel about absorption of Ethiopian Jews. But the censor prevented release of any news of Operation Moses until Jewish Agency immigration official, Yehuda Dominitz, told Nekuda, a weekly newspaper published by the Gush Emunim settlers in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, that most of the Ethiopian Jews had already been brought to Israel.

Dominitz, who criticized the weekly for failing to submit its report to the censor, was suspended from his job because of the interview.

The government press office then called a news conference Thursday to disclose the mission. Jewish Agency officials said this publicity is what caused the halt in the operation.

Vietnameses forces raid resistance camp

BAN SANGAE, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese forces drove their way into the headquarters of a Cambodian resistance group today, pounding the camp with artillery and breaching its defenses with tanks and infantrymen, resistance officers said.

Hand-to-hand combat was reported continuing inside Ampil camp as the Vietnamese sought to overrun the base of the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front. Front officers interviewed in the Thai village of Ban Sangae, directly across the border from the battlefield, said about half the camp has been seized.

The assault coincided with sixth anniversary celebrations of the Vietnamese invasion force's entry into Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, to install a pro-Hanoi government and end the brutal reign of the communist Khmer Rouge.

Thai army troops, tanks and armored personnel carriers were dispatched to the frontier opposite Ampil, and 4,800 residents of five Thai border villages were evacuated as some shells from the battle landed inside Thai territory.

The sounds of battle could be clearly heard from Ban Sangae and columns of smoke rose into the sky.

The International Committee of the Red Cross reported that 22 wounded Cambodians from Ampil had been evacuated into Thailand and rushed to the Red Cross border hospital at Khao-i-Dang.

Ampil is close to the Thai border and about 175 miles east of Bangkok. Until today, it had been the only major Khmer Liberation Front camp spared attack thus far in Vietnam's current dry season offensive.
