A portion of approximately fifty students from Sardis, Ala., High School gather to pray and chant "we want prayer" Tuesday. The students claimed that they had walked out of class to protest a ruling by U.S. District Judge Ira DeMent last week that defined allowable religious behavior in DeKalb County and state schools.

'We want prayer'

VALLEY HEAD, Ala. — Students wearing their Christian bracelets don't have much to say to assistant principal Michael Chandler anymore. Once-friendly adults turn away when he passes or mutter his name in disgust. The 47-year-old educator has become a target of scorn for filing the lawsuit that resulted in last week's federal court order restricting prayer in Alabama's public schools, where many youngsters wear cloth bracelets with the letters "WWJD" — for "What Would Jesus Do?"

BLOOMFIELD, Iowa — Two young men who admitted breaking into an animal shelter and beating 16 cats to death with baseball bats were convicted of only misdemeanors Friday after the jury concluded the strays were worth no more than $31.25 each. Chad Lamansky and Daniel Myers could get up to five years in prison and $750 in fines at sentencing Dec. 12.

New discipline plan pays off for teachers, MISD officials say

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District administrators and teachers already are reaping the benefits from a new classroom discipline plan, according to school officials.

Earlier this year the district adopted "Positive Classroom Discipline," a methodology based on a teacher's body language and positive reinforcement. The concepts were devised by Fred Jones, an educational consultant from California.

Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education, said the program emphasizes positive approaches to dealing with student misbehavior in the classroom. It focuses on organizing a classroom, establishing limits for student misbehavior and stresses that students can learn proper behavior.

"The program capitalizes on the assumption that kids know how to behave," Torres said. "The challenge for the teacher is how do you treat misbehavior?"

In the spring, about 100 MISD administrators and teachers were trained in the program's principles with the help of eight instructional videos. Then in August, all teachers attended a three-day training session.

Yvonne Black, MISD staff development director, said that discipline is a vexing issue for most educators.

"If you don't have discipline you do not have instruction," Ms. Black said. "To me, if you don't have good management techniques, you won't last long because you'll be worn out."

Torres said common MISD discipline problems include not paying attention, tardiness, disrespect to peers or teachers, and wandering around the classroom without permission.

"That's handled in the classroom," Torres said. "I've always told the teachers they're responsible for 95 percent of the stuff in the classroom."

Torres said that, percentage-wise, students who create problems are a minority of MISD's enrollment of 22,000.

But for those students who do create problems, Torres said, the new discipline system comes in handy. It's based on the idea that children can correct their behavior with a minimum of effort from an adult.

"The kid knows what the rules are," he said. "It's a very dynamic and fluid system — it can fit any teacher's style."

Ms. Black said it's dynamic because the system allows a teacher to prevent a disruptive situation without saying anything. Jones' program stresses that even

U.S. considers military options should Iraq fire

■ Senior Pentagon official says if Iraq were to shoot at U.N. surveillance plane, it would be considered an act of war and met with military response.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a rising war of words, the Clinton administration warned on Friday it was considering military options, including a cruise missile strike, if Iraq carries out its threat to shoot down U.N. surveillance planes.

At the White House, President Clinton declared that the United States and its allies must be "resolute and firm" and that U.N. inspections of Saddam Hussein's weapon arsenals must resume.

Clinton said a decision on military action would wait until after a U.N. diplomatic delegation returns Monday from Baghdad and the United States consults with its allies. The diplomats have been unable to persuade Iraq to back down on an order expelling U.S. members of U.N. weapons inspection teams.

"I think it is important to be resolute, and I think it would be a mistake to rule in or out any particular course of action at this moment," the president told reporters gathered in the Roosevelt Room.

Clinton said he expects agreement among the allies. "I have seen no indication that any of our allies are weakening on this," he said. "Everyone seems to be united in their determination."

In Baghdad, Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz claimed Friday that the the United States has used the U.N. spy planes to gather information for attacks against Iraq, and declared: "I simply cannot accept that."

"When a strange plane enters the Iraqi airspace, it might be shot by the Iraqi anti-aircraft facilities," he said.

"I think it is important to be resolute, and I think it would be a mistake to rule in or out any particular course of action at this moment."

—President Clinton

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said that even though the United States has already gone "the extra mile with diplomacy," Aziz would be given a visa to hold meetings at the United Nations.

Rubin said additional U.N. sanctions that could heighten pressure on Baghdad may be considered next week.

Clinton, however, said he saw no reason to believe that Saddam was bowing to threats of sanctions or military action.

Asked if he saw any reason to hope that Saddam would comply with demands that U.N. weapons inspections resume, he said: "No. I don't."

A senior Pentagon official told reporters that if Iraq shot at a U-

Unemployment drops to 24-year low; stock market falls into fresh turmoil

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment dropped to 4.7 percent, the lowest level in nearly a quarter-century and a sign the economy will end the year with a roar.

But the stock market fell into fresh turmoil on Friday. The Labor Department report rekindled inflation fears among investors already worried Southeast Asia's financial crisis will crimp growth and corporate profits in the United States next year.

For now, though, the American economy seems once again to be defying analysts' gloomy predictions.

October's seasonally adjusted jobless rate reported by the Labor Department, down from 4.9 percent in September, was the lowest since October 1973. The rate for adult women — 4 percent — was the smallest in nearly 28 years.

"Our economy is the strongest it's been in a generation," President Clinton declared at the White House.

Employers expanded their payrolls by 284,000 jobs, with a broad range of industries registering robust gains. In manufacturing alone, employers added 54,000 jobs — the largest gain in 7 1/2 years.

Meanwhile, average hourly wages for nonsupervisory workers jumped a strong 6 cents to a seasonally adjusted $12.41. That's up 4.2 percent from a year earlier, the largest 12-month advance in eight years.

The stronger-than-expected report didn't do anything to calm an already-jittery stock market focused on Asia. And it blunted a bond-market rally fueled by money managers fleeing seesawing Asian markets for safer investments.

The strength raised the question of whether the Federal Reserve will need to

Stores in Midland, around nation having trouble finding holiday help

NEW YORK (AP) — Brace yourself this Christmas for longer lines at the cash registers and fewer salespeople on the selling floor.

With the economy strong and unemployment low, stores around the country are having trouble finding holiday help.

Midland stores are bracing for a possible shortage of help during the Christmas shopping season as well.

James Mitchell, assistant manager at Target, said, "Christmas hiring has been a little more problematic than we wanted it to be. We're not getting the interest in working at Christmas, for whatever reason. But we remain confident that we'll get the Christmas help we need. It might be at the last minute but I'm confident we'll get enough workers."

An assistant manager at Wal-Mart said her store also anticipates having trouble getting Christmas help.

A spokesman at the Midland Kmart store said that his store gets enough interest in Christmas employment but the problem is finding good help with the right education, skills and work ethic.

"There just aren't a lot of people coming in for jobs," said Larry Friend, a Kmart store manager in Omaha, Neb. "We're not desperate yet, but the competition is fierce and we still need workers."

It's the second straight year that stores are hard-pressed to find people to do such things as stock shelves and greet customers.

The reason: Fewer Americans are looking to earn a little extra cash around the holidays.

The Labor Department reported Friday that the nation's unemployment rate sank to 4.7 percent in October, a 24-year low. Meanwhile, consumer confidence in the economy is at a 28-year high.

Over the last five years, retailers increased their holiday staffs 3.8 percent on average, according to the National Retail Federation.

Stores are doing more than just hanging "Help Wanted" signs in the window. Some are offering charities money to recommend workers; others ask their own employees to refer friends and family.

The Target discount store in Kansas City, Mo., has gone beyond the city limits to find employees. To help them get to work, it has hired private buses and asked the transit agency to alter city bus routes.

"We've had to make some very big strategy efforts to get workers," said Steve Kenady, regional personnel director at Target. "The competition for service workers is incredible. You can't just depend that they will want to come to your stores."

Lands' End, the mail-order clothing company, depends on its regular staff to find many of its 2,600 seasonal employees. This year, it gave away 34 Green Bay Packers tickets to employees who recommended friends and family.

The company also is busing in students from a University of Wisconsin campus 50 miles away from its Dodgeville, Wis., headquarters and hired workers from a cheese factory nearby that closes during the winter.

On a national level, Kmart advertises Christmas job openings on pamphlets stuffed into its credit card bills. It also posts job opportunities on its Internet home page.

LOW: Economists believe Fed will vote for no change raise interest rates to prevent accelerating wage gains from spiraling into increased consumer price inflation.

"Business is terrific, the economy's doing great and workers are in demand and earning more money. That's the good news," said economist Allen Sinai of Primark Decision Economics. "But there's a side effect. Does the Federal Reserve raise interest rates? Indeed it may."

Most economists believe Fed policy-makers meeting next Wednesday will vote for no change in rates, opting to wait for markets to settle down. But analysts are divided over whether the Fed will need to act in December or early next year.

"We're in a tug of war between the strong economic numbers, which suggest the economy will end the year robustly, and the Asian financial crisis, which has the potential for dampening growth next year," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York.

The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks snapped a rare three-day streak of quiet trading, plummeting 130 points to 7,553 by late afternoon.

Investors fleeing Asia had briefly driven down the yield on the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond, which moves opposite prices, to a near 21-month low of 6.09 percent, from 6.18 percent Thursday. But by late afternoon, inflation fears had pushed it up to 6.15 percent.

In a separate report Friday, the Federal Reserve said consumer borrowing advanced in September at the slowest pace in three months — at a 1.9 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate vs. 4.2 percent in August.

In October, service businesses added 213,000 jobs, including an unusually large 18,000 gain in financial industries. Computer services added 15,000 jobs and engineering and management services gained 19,000.

"Taken together, these two small industries, which comprise only 4 percent of payroll employment, have accounted for one in nine of the jobs added in the past year," said Katharine G. Abraham, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Half the 54,000 manufacturing gain occurred in industrial machinery and transportation equipment. Construction added 20,000 jobs, the most since May.

The unemployment rate for adult women declined to 4 percent from 4.4 percent, while the rate for adult men was unchanged at 4.1 percent. Teen-age unemployment fell to 15.3 percent from 16.7 percent.

Among whites, the rate decreased from 4.3 percent to 4.1 percent, and among blacks from 9.6 percent to 9.5 percent. Hispanic unemployment increased to 8 percent from 7.6 percent.

The average workweek for all private workers was unchanged at 34.5 hours in October while the average manufacturing workweek rose to 42 hours from 41.8.

WARN: U.S. threatens possible military action

AP Photo

Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz holding a map showing areas he claimed were photographed by U-2 surveillance aircraft during a news conference in Baghdad, Iraq on Friday. Aziz accused the United States of dominating the U.N. inspection teams and said that the U.S. is using U.N. surveillance flights to plan attacks against his country.

(From 1A)

2 — the high-altitude U.S. reconnaissance plane used for U.N. inspection missions — it would be considered an act of war and met with a military response.

The flights, suspended amid Iraq's threats to expel Americans weapons inspectors, are expected to resume next week, Rubin said.

"We have made it clear that any attempt to shoot them down would be a serious mistake," the State Department spokesman said, adding: "Iraq is responsible for the personnel and equipment that are doing the international community's business in Iraq. And it would be a serious mistake to put those lives and equipment in jeopardy."

Neither Clinton nor the Pentagon official indicated U.S. military action was imminent. However, the official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a range of military options has already been discussed.

Asked if United States would consider it an act of war if Iraq fired on the spy plane, the official said: "Yes, in my opinion."

The official would not rule out a unilateral U.S. response. But he noted the mission is a U.N. operation and said officials there have worked with the White House and Pentagon to expedite talks that are expected before any military action.

Clinton said the international community must focus on resuming weapons inspections. "That is the issue, and whether (Saddam) is firm or weak in the end the international community has to be firm to make sure that his regime does not resume its capacity to develop weapons of mass destruction," he said.

DISRUPT: Body language plays key role in new method

where a teacher stands in the classroom or places his or her desk is a factor in student behavior.

The education consultant also introduces the idea of "Preferred Activity Time" for students. If the students as a group behave, they'll be credited for time for educational games and activities.

By the same token, if some students act up then the class will lose minutes of their precious time. That's an incentive for the student group to enforce proper behavior.

Jones' videos demonstrate how to deal with a situation by making eye contact with the students, or even slowly approaching them to make it known their behavior is not acceptable. Sometimes just a teacher's "look" is all that's needed.

"You're not smiling, but you're not angry," Ms. Black said. "The students respond to that. You use these lower, less aggressive methods with the students."

Too often, teachers will escalate a situation by lecturing the student, she said. The student then may respond with back talk and the rest of the class will be distracted by the confrontation.

"He (Jones) talks about the talking back, about trying to avoid it before it gets there," Ms. Black said. "(It's) 'open your mouth and you slit your throat.' If you're talking to the student, you're both out of control."

By silently addressing a discipline problem, teachers can head off confrontations, she said.

Some principals in the district voiced their support for the new program, including Mary Smith, Emerson Elementary's principal.

"It has a lot of common sense to it," Ms. Smith said. "You train the children to be responsible for their behavior."

Body language plays a key role in the method, as well as the concept of students policing themselves, she said.

"When the kids see that look on your face, they'll kind of giggle and they look down because they don't want to be singled out," she said. "They want to be cute, but they don't want to be embarrassed and cute."

Larry Winget, San Jacinto Junior High's principal, said his school has seen a drop in student referrals to the principal office since the program's inception.

The teachers have even shared ideas with each other, he said. The program's concepts have paid off.

"A lot of times if you'll just wait a few seconds and don't say anything, the student will correct themselves because you're just standing there staring at them," he said. "Just the way it allows the students to correct themselves."

Ms. Smith believes effective discipline cannot be stressed enough.

"A teacher who does not have control of the classroom is not going to be able to teach," she said. "Discipline is just not in a classroom, discipline must permeate throughout the building.

"You consider other people's feelings, or you can't learn."

Medical examiner rules former Midlander's death homicide

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — Autopsy reports from an Oklahoma City medical examiner indicate that the death of Cathryn Ellen Jackson, a former Midlander, was a homicide.

Ms. Jackson, who was 29, died a "...unusual and unnatural death," according to the report prepared by Medical Examiner John T. Cooper.

Detective Paul Kinman said that as of Friday no one has been arrested in connection with Ms. Jackson's death.

Her body was found fully clothed and badly decomposed in a ditch in Village, Okla., according to police reports.

Ms. Jackson was abducted from a Wal-Mart parking lot on Sept. 1. Police said Ms. Jackson had borrowed her roommate's jeep to go to the store, but did not return that night. He reported her missing three days later.

On Sept. 9, a farmer discovered Ms. Jackson's body 23 miles away.

"There are very few leads," Kinman said. But the autopsy report has "given us a direction to go with."

Reports show that Ms. Jackson's body was found in a blue blanket, which was also found at the scene. It was soiled, but like her clothing, did not have any blood. Her clothing was fastened and untorn — except for her panties, which were partially torn along the waistband on the right side, the report states.

The autopsy report does not indicate a suspicion of sexual assault.

"No bullet holes or stab wounds can be found," the report reads. "The facial bones are intact ... internal organs show no signs or trauma ... and X-rays show no foreign bodies. The ribs and upper extremity bones are intact without fracture or dislocation."

Her liver did not show signs of drug use, but contained a 0.04 alcohol level, the report states.

"It was nothing we didn't expect," Kinman said. "We'd been in contact with the medical board. We were waiting for them to rule on her cause of death."

However, police are still waiting for a blood analysis report and evaluation of other evidence recovered at the scene, Kinman said.

Ms. Jackson was former executive director of the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition.

Autopsy finds inmate died of heart attack

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

Autopsy reports from a Lubbock medical examiner indicate that a Midland County Detention Center inmate who was found dead inside his own cell on Thursday died from a heart attack, according to reports released Friday.

Senimal Johnson, 48, is the second inmate to die in the Midland jail within the last two weeks.

The medical examiner stated in his report that Johnson had a history of heart problems and said the death was ruled as "natural causes."

Sheriff's Office authorities said that Johnson did not respond to officers who called him to pick up his medications close to 10 p.m. Thursday night.

Officers entered the cell and found that Johnson did not have a pulse and was not breathing. They performed CPR and called for assistance. Paramedics arrived and also tried to revive Johnson. He was taken to the Midland Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, where he died, authorities said.

Justice of the Peace Joe Matlock pronounced the man dead at 10:47 p.m.

Johnson was arrested June 11 for violating his parole by allegedly committing theft, according to jail reports. He was arrested at 516 Air Park Road. It was unknown Friday what charges Johnson was convicted of.

The Texas Rangers are investigating the incident, because the man's death was unattended. Rangers are also probing the death of Enos Ray Howle Jr., 38, who died inside the jail on Oct. 26.

Howle was arrested the day before his death on felony charges of aggravated sexual assault and indecency with a child. Sheriff Gary Painter had said the man hanged himself inside his cell.

Howle was scheduled to go on trial Nov. 3 on other molestation charges stemming from sexual attacks on three young girls.

Agreement reached in French trucker strike

PARIS (AP) — French truckers climbed into their rigs and drove away from their massive roadblocks Friday after their largest union signed an agreement ending a strike that blocked commerce and fuel supplies for nearly a week.

But a smaller union denounced what it called an "accord of mischief-makers and thieves," telling its members to "keep up the barricades more than ever."

And while Transport Minister Jean-Claude Gayssot praised the new contract raising driver salaries, he admitted that it "does not resolve all the problems of the profession."

By Friday evening, only 30 roadblocks remained of the 150 that had cut off gas depots, clogged traffic and froze commercial shipments for five days.

At least 40 percent of gas stations around France had run dry, and tons of food and produce were left to rot. Many foreign truckers trying to travel through France were stranded.

Joel Lecoq, an official at the French Democratic Labor Confederation (CFDT), predicted all the barricades would be down by Saturday night.

The union's leader, Nicole Notat, said the 6 percent salary increase by 2000 — granting $1,700 for 200 hours of work a month — was the best deal drivers could get.

"Frankly, we have gone as far as possible," Notat said before her union signed the accord. "To continue the strike today would be to risk losing everything."

The CFDT, which represents 80 percent of French truck drivers, made the deal with the syndicate that represents 80 percent of truck company owners, the Union of Transport Federations.

That angered two smaller labor groups. The General Labor Confederation and Workers Force refused to sign the accord, and Workers Force official Roger Poletti denounced the agreement as an "accord of mischief-makers and thieves."

Prime Minister Lionel Jospin's leftist coalition, meanwhile, promised to make the owners live up to the agreement — something the unions say their bosses did not do after a similar 12-day strike a year ago.

The owners say deregulation mandated by the European Union and increasing competition have narrowed their profit margins. They insisted they could not grant more concessions to France's 300,000 truckers.

It was too early to estimate the strike's economic toll, but some industries were able to survive by stocking up before the threatened protests began.

Many hospitals and pharmacies ordered extra drugs and medical supplies last week and most supermarket chains said they had been able to store enough to keep their shelves full through this weekend.

France's apple industry, though, saw its weekly revenues cut in half. France is the world's largest apple exporter, and much of the week's harvest could not get out.

Neighboring European countries had criticized France for being unable to head off the second private sector transport strike in as many years. The strike threatened to slow Europe's frail economies, which are still struggling out of recession.

Yves Montand exhumation shocks French

PARIS (AP) — A court order to exhume the body of Yves Montand for a paternity test has outraged his family, shocked the French public and raised questions about unearthing intimate secrets from the grave.

Thursday's decision is aimed at resolving an eight-year paternity suit pitting Montand's heirs against Aurore Drossard, 22, and her mother, Anne — who says Aurore is the fruit of her two-year affair with the singer.

"It's horrible," Montand's adopted daughter, Catherine Allegret, said Friday on French radio. "This poor old man ... they're going to take him out of his box and slice him up."

Allegret is the daughter of Simone Signoret, Montand's wife of 36 years who died in 1985. The couple had no children. Montand had a child in 1988 with his companion, Carole Amiel.

Montand died in 1991 of a massive heart attack — three days before he was to testify about the suit. He had repeatedly refused to undergo genetic testing.

The results of the posthumous tests, a first in France, are to be published before June 30, 1998.

If they are positive, Aurore could inherit a portion of Montand's estate. French law requires that half a person's assets after death be divided equally among surviving children.

"What convinces me I'm his daughter is that my mother always said Montand was my father," Aurore told the daily Le Parisien. "A mother can't lie to her child about something so important. Besides, I look so much like him."

Health Minister Bernard Kouchner accused the Drossards of being more interested in money than scientific truth. "I share the indignation of the Montand family," he said.

American Jews ask Netanyahu to block Orthodox legislation

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu assured American Jewish leaders Friday that their religious identity was not in doubt in Israel, despite a showdown with Orthodox rabbis over their more liberal beliefs.

"All Jews for me are legitimate, all are part of the same people," Netanyahu told 400 members of the Los Angeles Jewish Federation in a meeting at a Jerusalem hotel.

Many in the audience, however, said Netanyahu's message of unity was not enough.

The group's president, Herb Gelfand, received an outburst of applause when he turned to Netanyahu and said: "We ask Israel to oppose the law on conversion."

The question of who has the right to perform conversions in Israel has been at the core of the dispute between Orthodox rabbis and the Reform and Conservative streams of Judaism.

Reform and Conservative Jews are predominant in the United States, but religious affairs in Israel are controlled by the Orthodox.

Netanyahu has been under pressure from three Orthodox parties in his coalition to fend off efforts by the Reform and Conservative movements to win recognition in Israel. They have sued over the right to carry out conversions.

In response, the Orthodox parties have threatened to push through parliament a bill that would formalize the practice of allowing only Orthodox rabbis to do so.

A crisis was averted earlier this month when the two sides agreed to suspend both the lawsuits and the legislation for three months in hopes of reaching a compromise.

Netanyahu asked the Jewish leaders to support his efforts to reach an agreement, saying, "We are trying to achieve an historic reconciliation."

He said the country's religious status quo could be changed, "but it will take time and requires delicate treatment."

Israelis, Swiss bicker over Onassis heiress

JERUSALEM (AP) — As part of a battle over a young girl's $2.4 billion trust fund, former Israeli secret service agents tracked her father's movements using paragliders and cameras hidden in trees.

Athena Roussel

At least, that's the Israeli version of what happened to Athena Roussel, the granddaughter of Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

Swiss authorities, however, suspect the Israelis may have been involved in a plot to kidnap the 12-year-old girl and want them arrested.

Much of the story, hushed up for months, remains shrouded in mystery, though bits and pieces have emerged in the Israeli media.

The daily newspaper Maariv ran a banner headline Friday about "An operation to save the Onassis fortune." Next to it was a picture of an angelic-looking Athena wearing a white dress and a garland of white flowers in her honey-colored hair.

Athena is the only child of Christina Onassis, the shipping magnate's daughter, and her fourth husband, Thierry. The couple divorced 1987 and Christina Onassis died a year later. Roussel has remarried and has three children with his new wife. Athena lives with her father and his new family in Switzerland and France.

Athena stands to inherit some $2.4 billion when she turns 18, and in the meantime her father and the Greek executors of her mother's will have been fighting over control of the money.

Roussel receives $5 million a year for personal expenses, under his ex-wife's will. Expenses for Athena are confidential.

Roussel recently sued the charitable Alexander S. Onassis Public Benefit Foundation, accusing it of having mismanaged and embezzled millions of dollars. A Greek court acquitted the foundation earlier this year.

Israeli police said that at some point, Greek trustees turned to Israeli private investigators and asked them to find evidence that Athena's father was involved in "immoral acts."

The seven Israelis — among them former top agents in Israel's Shin Bet security service — began by preparing surveillance on the Roussel mansion near Geneva, according to Maariv and the Yediot Ahronot daily newspaper.

This was a complicated task, the newspapers said, since intruders could easily be spotted near the heavily guarded, isolated compound. One solution the agents came up with, said Yediot, was to use paragliders to fly over the Roussel home and take pictures from the air.

Another scheme to avoid drawing attention was to have agents masquerade as environmentalists driving around in a van with plastered with "green" stickers.

The Israeli team also proposed to hide surveillance cameras in the trees of the compound and use state-of-the-art laser technology to wiretap Roussel's home and office, Maariv said.

In a second stage, the surveillance team hired another Israeli investigator to check out Roussel's Paris apartment, the newspaper said. The agent learned, said Maariv, that Roussel was running a modeling agency there, and at one point hired a British model to try and infiltrate Roussel's business.

The surveillance efforts came to light when an Israeli businessman and a friend of the Paris agent found out about it and tried to sell the information for profit. The businessman was questioned by Swiss police who began an investigation.

It was at this stage, said Maariv and Yediot, that the Greek trustees ordered the Israeli team to drop its efforts.

Communists march on Revolution Day

MOSCOW (AP) — Nostalgic for the ideals and traditions of Communism, tens of thousands of people rallied Friday throughout the former Soviet Union to commemorate the 80th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

President Boris Yeltsin, who rose to prominence on the ashes of the Communist structure, struck a conciliatory note with a pledge to build a monument honoring people who died on both sides of the 1917 revolt.

The mostly elderly demonstrators, many impoverished by Russia's harsh transition to a market economy, marked the former Revolution Day with old slogans and newfound bitterness at the course of post-Soviet society.

"Overthrow the hated regime — the sooner the better," urged retired Gen. Lev Rokhlin, a lawmaker who heads a pro-military movement.

He was speaking to a crowd that had marched through the slushy streets of central Moscow on a bleak and rainy day to pay homage to the 1917 revolution. In Soviet times, the streets would have trembled beneath the wheels of tanks, artillery launchers and goose-stepping soldiers.

Crowd estimates for the Moscow rally varied wildly. Communists said 300,000 attended, but the Interior Ministry said the crowd was no bigger than 13,000. Associated Press Television estimated that 100,000 hardliners attended.

Gennady Zyuganov, leader of the Russian Communist Party, promised the cheering, flag-waving throng that "the great ideals of Lenin and the October revolution" would live again.

But to most Russians and others in former Soviet republics, Friday was simply a day off from work or school. A nationwide poll released Friday by the All-Russian Public Opinion Center found that only 15 percent of respondents said they would support a neo-Bolshevik coup.

"This shows rising revulsion in society to violence, no matter what aims it pursues," poll manager Yuri Levada said, according to the ITAR-Tass news agency.

Earlier in the week, the Moscow Times newspaper interviewed schoolchildren who could not identify Bolshevik leader Vladimir Lenin and knew little or nothing about the revolution that overthrew Czar Nicholas II.

In a nationwide television address, President Boris Yeltsin called for understanding among Russians of all political stripes and acknowledged the revolution's place in history.

AP Photo

A hard line supporter raises his clenched fist as he shouts pro-communist slogans during a rally in St. Petersburg, Russia, Friday to mark the 80th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution. A Communist demonstration attracted some 50,000 people in St. Petersburg, called Leningrad and "the cradle of the revolution" in Soviet times.

Karpov to play against Indonesia's Adianto

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Anatoly Karpov of Russia, who holds the World Chess Federation title, will face Indonesia's top chess player Utut Adianto in a six-game dual later this month in Jakarta.

The Nov. 21-25 "Clash of the Titans" matches will offer a prize of $50,000, the official Antara news agency said.

Karpov has been in Indonesia before in October 1993, when he defeated Jan Timman of the Netherlands.

Adianto, 32, now Indonesia's top player, gained his Grand Master title in 1986, seven years after becoming a runner-up in the under-14 world championship.

His other achievements include the New York Open and Biel Master Swiss champions, both in 1994.

Thieves steal food, supplies for hungry Afghans

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Thieves have wiped out the World Food Program's emergency wheat supplies in northern Afghanistan, guaranteeing a hungry winter for hundreds of thousands of people.

More than 2,000 tons of wheat has been looted since an alliance opposed to the ruling Taliban religious army regained control of Hairatan, a desert town on the border with Uzbekistan, said Tarek Elguindi, the WFP's deputy director in Pakistan.

Several months ago, the WFP packed its sprawling warehouses in Hairatan with 2,261 tons of wheat and 63 tons of cooking oil ferried across the Oxus River from Uzbekistan. Today, the warehouse is nearly empty.

The food and oil was to be used to feed orphans in northern Mazar-e-Sharif, 60 miles south of Hairatan, and to supply the WFP's subsidized bread program, which feeds as many as 200,000 people.

"Nobody is in control of Mazar or Hairatan ... so this is the problem," he said. "There is no way to guarantee that they can stop the looting."

Even more troublesome, he said, are the hungry people of central Bamyan province, who rely heavily on the WFP wheat.

"The need there will be dramatic in 45 to 60 days," he said of Bamyan, which is controlled by minority Shiite Muslims.

The Shiites are part of a northern-based alliance battling the hard-line religious Taliban army that rules about 90 percent of the country, including the capital of Kabul.

The anti-Taliban alliance controls part of the north, including Mazar-e-Sharif, as well as pockets in central Afghanistan, like Bamyan.

Bamyan, which is west of the Hindu Kush mountain range and impossible to reach during the winter, has about 600,000 people. Elguindi said many of them will be badly malnourished if the WFP doesn't get food in before winter.

So far, the leaders of the anti-Taliban alliance have been unable to guarantee security for the WFP, said Elguindi.

"February is the worst month ... Bamyan that will be a real problem if we don't get food there," he said.

Notorious storm names retired

GENEVA (AP) — Andrew, Mike, Alibera. Troublemakers all, but never again.

The United Nations weather experts who name storms have decided there won't be any second chances for the most notorious squalls.

"I regret to say that if your name is Andrew, Mike or Alibera ... hurricanes that have caused so much devastation and loss of life, these names have been retired and will never be used again," said Eirah Gorre-Dale of the World Meteorological Organization.

In the western hemisphere alone, 44 names have been retired.

Hurricane Andrew caused $15 billion of damage in the United States in 1992. In 1990, Cyclone Alibera wrecked almost all the buildings in Manajary, Madagascar, and Typhoon Mike swept through the Philippines, killing hundreds and causing more than $350 million in damage.

Those names are finished. But there's hope for Wendy, Gordon, Lisa, Irene and Owen, among many others still available, Gorre-Dale said.

Mexican bishop's sister attacked in his cathedral

BENITO JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The sister of a Roman Catholic bishop mediating peace efforts in southern Mexico was in stable condition in a hospital Friday after being attacked with a hammer in his cathedral.

The attack came just three days after shots were fired at a caravan carrying the bishop.

The diocese of San Cristobal de las Casas told Mexican newspapers that Maria de la Luz Ruiz Garcia was beaten Thursday afternoon. The alleged attacker has been arrested, the Mexico City dailies La Jornada and Reforma reported.

There was no immediate word on a motive for the attack.

On Tuesday, gunmen fired on a motorcade carrying Ruiz and fellow Bishop Raul Vera as they traveled through a rural southern village. Three other people in the caravan were wounded.

Church officials blamed members of a radical, armed group associated with the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI. The ruling party is engaged in peace talks with rebels, who launched a rebellion in early 1994

On Thursday, Ruiz accused the government of promoting violence while claiming to support peace talks. Some 300 people have died in clashes since a cease-fire was struck just days after the uprising.

"The moment arrives when the words are hollow. ... Those who should promote the path of peace are those who instead block it," Ruiz said during a visit to this isolated Chol Indian village to celebrate Mass and meet with lay teachers.

On Wednesday, Chiapas Gov. Julio Cesar Ruiz Ferro declared his support for Ruiz's work as a mediator in stalled peace talks between the government and rebels of the Zapatista National Liberation Army.

Ruiz Ferro also ordered an investigation into Tuesday's attack. But the bishop, a strong supporter of Indian rights, was unimpressed.

"There is a growing impunity and there are things that are distorted, disguised and promoted," he said. "We can't reach peace with an attempt on my life."

Ruiz has received repeated threats from people who blame him for fomenting the Indian rebellion with his social teachings.

Photographers, driver who followed Diana lose suit against author

PARIS (AP) — A court rejected a lawsuit against an author Friday by the motorcycle driver and the photographers under investigation for their role in the crash that killed Princess Diana.

The seven photographers and a driver argued that author Madeline Chapsal violated their presumption of innocence in her book, "They Killed Her," published shortly after Diana's death on Aug. 31.

A Paris judge said the book only referred to photographers in general, and refused their request to censor several passages in the book. The judge also turned down a demand for $17,500 in damages.

In the book, Chapsal compares photographers' automatic cameras to machine guns and shotguns pointed at the princess. She also depicts photographers as a pack of hounds during a hunt.

The seven photographers who sued Chapsal were Romuald Rat, Christian Martinez, Serge Arnal, Nicolas Arsov, Jacques Langevin, Lazlo Veres and Serge Benamou. Stephane Darmon, a motorcycle driver employed by a photo agency, also joined the suit.

Two other photographers, David Ker and Fabrice Chassery, are under formal investigation for their role in the crash but did not join the lawsuit against Chapsal.

The 10 were among the photographers at the scene of the car crash that mortally wounded Diana in a Paris traffic tunnel. Her companion, Dodi Fayed, and the driver, Henri Paul, were killed instantly.

The photographers and driver were placed under investigation after the crash to determine what role they may have played in the accident and whether they violated France's "Good Samaritan" law.

Lawyers for the photographers have expressed confidence that their clients will be cleared of any responsibility.

Tests showed that Paul, Diana's driver, was drunk and had taken prescription drugs at the time of the crash. Investigators also say the car may have been traveling at a very high rate of speed.

President Kim bolts the South Korean ruling party

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Kim Young-sam left South Korea's ruling party Friday, a move that could further split the party's ranks before a presidential election in December.

Kim said he was quitting to oversee the Dec. 18 polls as a strictly neutral manager.

Since Kim had earlier claimed he could supervise the election impartially without leaving the party, Friday's announcement was seen as a public rebuff to the party's presidential candidate, Lee Hoi-chang.

The two have been at odds since Lee's popularity plummeted shortly after he won the ruling New Korea Party's presidential nomination in July.

The dispute came to a head this week when Lee accused the president and his aides of persuading party members to rally behind another candidate, former Kyonggi Gov. Rhee In-je.

The president's supporters have demanded that Lee, who is running a distant third in the polls, resign as a candidate, saying he will lose the election. Lee refused and demanded that the president leave the party.

Six legislators loyal to the president have bolted the party since October to join a new political group leaded by Rhee. Rhee lost the ruling party's presidential nomination race to Lee, but later quit the party.

Gore university chair entangled in fund-raising investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A university professorship, named for Al Gore's late sister and focused on the study of wild grasses, has become entangled in the political fund-raising controversy because of the role of a vice presidential confidant.

A handful of donations arranged by lobbyist Peter Knight came from clients or contractors who were in line for new federal business at the time they wrote checks for the University of Tennessee environmental studies chair, documents show.

Knight, whose lobbying and fund-raising activities are a subject of the congressional hearings that continued Friday, said there was no connection between the donations and the contracts. Donors agreed. And Lorraine Voles, the vice president's spokeswoman, said the professorship "has absolutely nothing to do with political donations."

Indeed, the $1 million endowed professorship, named for Gore's older sister, Nancy, who died of lung cancer in 1984, appears more likely to excite environmental interest than provide grist for political controversy.

Its focal points for study are biological invaders — wild grasses that engulf Tennessee forests or Sri Lankan water plants that smother fish in Florida.

To get the ball rolling in 1992, the vice president gave the university $50,000 from royalties on his book, "Earth in the Balance."

Gore also turned to Knight, a Washington lobbyist who was a key fund-raiser for the 1992 Clinton-Gore campaign and served as its campaign manager in 1996. Knight helped the university raise $500,000 in private money that was required to get matching state funds.

University officials said they need to raise an additional $2 million for the professorship but probably won't use Knight this time.

Corporations, Democratic patrons and foundations donated $10,000 to $100,000 each. By 1995, 14 donors had pledged a total of $400,000, with most going through Knight's office. The university made up the difference.

In one case, Gore himself directed a donation. Cisco Systems Inc., a California computer firm, presented the vice president with a technology award in June 1993 that came with a $10,000 check to the university of his choice. The check went through Knight.

A Democratic party fund-raiser helped arrange a face-to-face meeting between company officials and Gore — and a photograph — said Randall Sutherland, a Cisco spokesman.

"We were generally appreciative of Al Gore's support for the Internet and we knew that a photograph of the president of Cisco standing with Al Gore would be good publicity," Sutherland said.

That year Cisco had nearly $5 million in government contracts, double the amount it received the previous year and every year since, according to federal procurement records.

Lockheed Martin Corp., a Knight client, made its first $25,000 contribution toward a $50,000 pledge on March 28, 1995, at a time that it was in line to win a two-year extension on its contract to run Oak Ridge National Laboratory. Two days later, the company won the extension, a decision months in the making.

Lockheed and its predecessor, Martin Marietta, have been managing the Department of Energy's nuclear and research facilities in nearby Oak Ridge, Tenn., since 1984. Lockheed and Knight said the donation had nothing to do with the contract.

"There is absolutely no linkage," said Lockheed spokesman Charles Manor. "There were no other players in this."

University officials said they contacted Lockheed about making a donation and then brought in the lobbyist.

"Call Peter Knight and tell him," wrote university chancellor William T. Snyder to another school official after a meeting with a Martin Marietta manager who promised a $50,000 to $100,000 pledge. "Peter is a ... lobbyist for Martin Marietta."

The chief executive of Molten Metal Technology, another lobbying client of Knight, gave the Gore chair $50,000. The Massachusetts company, a large Democratic donor, received several extensions of Energy Department funding between 1993 and 1996.

Those contract extensions were a focus of the hearings Friday by the House Commerce Committee's investigative subcommittee.

Knight says he never tried to get clients contracts in exchange for donations.

"Any suggestion that I helped arrange a government contract or grant in exchange for any type of contribution is patently false," Knight said.

Au pair case played part in defeating death penalty vote

BOSTON (AP) — The headlines pushed Massachusetts to the brink of reinstating the death penalty. And it was the headlines that led the state to step back.

A capital punishment bill spurred by a series of grisly slayings fell one vote short Thursday night because of the English au pair case. A Democrat switched his vote, in part because he felt a jury erred in convicting Louise Woodward.

"If I can't be certain that I'm getting the right guy, I have a very big problem with the death penalty," said Rep. John Slattery, adding that his decision came after long talks with people in his district, respected judges, fellow lawyers and even a neighbor.

"What happens to these people that we're not sure?" he asked. "What happens to the Louise Woodwards of the world?"

Slattery, a second-term representative who previously supported the death penalty, turned an 81-79 vote into an 80-80 tie — blocking one of America's most liberal states from joining 38 others that endorse capital punishment for murder.

Conservative talk show hosts immediately took to the airwaves to rip his flip flop. Howie Carr, a columnist at the Boston Herald and a radio host, gave listeners Slattery's home phone number Thursday night.

The Herald, a tabloid that supports capital punishment, said a weekend editorial would attack Slattery's last-minute move.

The change of heart prompted police officers to stand guard outside Slattery's Peabody house in case of a backlash.

In Peabody, a community 13 miles north of Boston, it wasn't hard to tell where people stood at The Railroad Cafe, which was draped with a bright yellow banner proclaiming "Louise Must Be Free."

Like Ms. Woodward, owner Marianne Cox, 58, came to the United States from Europe as a young au pair. "The death penalty, I think it's wrong," she said in her German accent. "When I think that could have happened to Louise, I want to cry."

Repair shop owner Carl Monks said Slattery was wrong to compare hard-core murderers with the au pair.

"These are two different issues we're talking about," he said. "I think Slattery should have realized that people with murder on their minds can't be cured. But everyone's thinking about this nanny trial."

A wave of public outrage over particularly horrific crimes had fueled the latest push for the death penalty bill.

The most prominent case was that of a 10-year-old Cambridge boy who was lured into a car with the promise of a new bike. He was smothered with a gasoline-soaked rag, and his body was stuffed in a concrete-filled container and dumped in a river.

Jury convicts teens accused in cat killings

BLOOMFIELD, Iowa (AP) — Two young men who admitted breaking into an animal shelter and beating 16 cats to death with baseball bats were convicted of only misdemeanors Friday after the jury concluded the strays were worth no more than $31.25 each.

Chad Lamansky and Daniel Myers could get up to five years in prison and $750 in fines at sentencing Dec. 12.

The jury took two hours to find the 18-year-olds guilty of offenses against an animal shelter and criminal trespass.

But the jury found that the value of the dead cats did not exceed $500, thus ruling out felony convictions that would have carried up to 10 years behind bars and a $15,000 fine.

"I'm very disappointed," said David Sykes, owner of the shelter, Noah's Ark. "For a jury to see the magnitude of injuries and death and destruction, and to say these cats are not worth $500, it's hard to swallow."

The defendants had no comment.

The attack, which took place in Fairfield on March 8, caused outrage in the community of 10,000 people, and the case was moved because of pretrial publicity.

The case took a surprise twist during jury selection when defense attorneys admitted that Myers and Lamansky slipped into the shelter late at night and bludgeoned the cats. One defense lawyer called it "a stupid teen-age mistake."

But the defense argued that the cats weren't worth $500, the threshold for a felony. The jury agreed, finding that the cats were worth more than $100 but less than $500.

"I understand it was a stupid, childish mistake," said juror Jeremie McCoy, 19. "I don't think the state had a solid, concrete case. They seemed disorganized. I don't think the 16 lives of the cats were worth $500, personally."

Seven cats were injured in addition to those killed.

Sykes had testified about the cats' value based on initial health tests, neutering or spaying procedures, transportation costs, a $50 required donation for pet adoptions, as well as thousands of dollars in medical costs required to treat the cats after the attack.

Educator at heart of Alabama school prayer case feels scorn

VALLEY HEAD, Ala. (AP) — Students wearing their Christian bracelets don't have much to say to assistant principal Michael Chandler anymore. Once-friendly adults turn away when he passes or mutter his name in disgust.

And he has quit driving his Corvette to school.

"I'm afraid somebody will put keys down the side of it," said Chandler.

The 47-year-old educator has become a target of scorn for filing the lawsuit that resulted in last week's federal court order restricting prayer in Alabama's public schools, where many youngsters wear cloth bracelets with the letters "WWJD" — for "What Would Jesus Do?"

Chandler, who has worked for the DeKalb County school system for 25 years, said he has received support privately from many county educators and some parents. And the town's Baptist preacher, Charles Jenkins, has said the ruling may help by spelling out what is and isn't allowed.

But Chandler has virtually no public backing, and newspapers all over the state have been filled with letters from readers who quote the Bible in criticizing him.

AP Photo

Rhonda Weathers, left, holds her 8-month-old daughter Samantha as she waits with friend Cindy Grider, holding daughter Paige, 1 1/2, outside Valley Head High School in Valley Head, Ala., Wednesday. Both women were waiting to pick up their other children from school. The mothers disagree with a federal court ruling restricting religious practices in Alabama public schools.

"I have been demonized," he said.

Rhonda Weathers said the ruling "stinks," and she doesn't even like Chandler being around her first-grade daughter Jessica at Valley Head School.

"He doesn't believe there's a God," she said, echoing the feelings of many of the 629 people of this mountain town in Alabama's northeastern corner.

Chandler — who lives with his Methodist wife and 14-year-old son in Fyffe, about 30 miles away — denies he is an atheist. He was raised Baptist and occasionally goes to church.

It was his belief in the separation of church and state that led him to file the suit in 1996 after years of complaining about coercive Christian practices in DeKalb County's public schools.

Chandler sought an end to the pregame prayers at athletic events and wanted Gideon International barred from distributing Bibles at school.

The American Civil Liberties Union backed him, as did Americans United for Separation of Church and State, which presented him with its religious freedom award this week in Washington.

U.S. District Judge Ira DeMent sided with Chandler, too, and threatened to hold school officials in contempt if they allow the distribution of Bibles or permit any organized religious practices such as morning prayers over the intercom or pre-game benedictions.

Gov. Fob James and Attorney General Bill Pryor, both conservative Republicans gearing up for the 1998 election, said they will appeal, with James declaring that DeMent's order "cuts at the heart of all that is good in America and brings shame on our nation."

The governor even offered to defy DeMent's order by leading prayers at any public school that invited him.

DeKalb County school officials plan an appeal also, a decision made as hundreds of students walked out of classes this week in northeastern Alabama schools to protest the judge's decision. More than 60 were suspended at two schools.

In Valley Head, there was quiet complaining when members of the girls' basketball team were told they could no longer hold their traditional pre-game prayers.

"I don't like the thing about not being able to pray with my coach. I'm a senior, and it just breaks my heart," said Teri Campbell, 17.

The Supreme Court ruled against state-sanctioned prayer in public schools three decades ago.

Trade issue becomes entangled with abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Short on votes, President Clinton lobbied into overtime Friday in a struggle for House passage of trade legislation. Republicans demanded concessions on issues that touched on abortion, the census and other subjects.

"At the request of the Clinton administration, we are going to postpone the vote until tomorrow or Sunday," Speaker Newt Gingrich told reporters a few hours before the contentious issue had been slated to come to the House floor.

"This is a vote of national importance," said the Georgia Republican. "We need about 15 more votes, and we are going to do everything we can to get them."

At the White House, where Clinton has been lobbying a nonstop stream of lawmakers on "fast-track" legislation, the president made no mention of the delay. Instead, he said a vote in favor of the bill was a "no brainer" on the merits.

"The vote by the House of Representatives on fast track will determine whether we continue to move ahead confidently with the strategy that has brought us 13 1/2 million new jobs and the lowest unemployment rate in nearly 25 years," he said.

But Democratic support for the legislation was meager — in the range of 40 lawmakers or so — and that increased pressure on Clinton to entertain Republican demands on a variety of issues. That, in turn, sparked the anger of Democrats who feared he would be too eager to compromise with the GOP.

"This fast track is bad enough," protested Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, the party's leader. "The president should publicly stand up and say that he won't trade away core Democratic values for Republican votes."

Even Democratic supporters of the trade bill said they would abandon the bill if Clinton gave away too much to the anti-abortion Republicans.

The trade legislation would give Clinton authority to negotiate international trade accords and present them to Congress for straightforward yes-or-no votes without possibility of amendment — a process known as "fast track." The president told reporters that otherwise, no other nation would be willing to sit down with the United States and bargain over trade.

Opponents, including organized labor and most Democrats in the House, contend the measure would result in the loss of thousands of American jobs overseas to nations where pay and labor standards are poor and environmental safeguards weak. The result, they argue, would be downward pressure on wages in this country.

"We should use our leverage as the world's largest trading nation to ensure that trade agreements include enforceable standards to protect workers and the environment, just as business interests are protected in the current proposals," AFL-CIO President John Sweeney said in a statement.

On the other side are Clinton and most Republicans — backed by corporate America, which deployed an army of lobbyists and has spent an estimated $5 million on behalf of the bill.

Whatever the outcome, the debate over fast track had become part of a larger, complex struggle being waged on several levels as lawmakers struggled to wrap up their work for the year.

While Gingrich and most Republicans favored the trade legislation, they also were demanding concessions on some of the four spending bills that have yet to clear Congress this year. It marked the first time since the two government shutdowns two years ago that the GOP had gained the upper hand in a battle over spending bills, and they were pressing their advantage aggressively.

The biggest area of controversy revolved around proposed abortion restrictions on private organizations that receive federal funds. Under a proposal being pressed by abortion foes, according to Senate GOP aides, the organizations would be barred from promoting abortions overseas, although under some circumstances, Clinton could issue a waiver that would negate this restriction.

In addition, though, these organizations would be barred from lobbying foreign governments to relax their own restrictions on abortions, a provision that Clinton would have no authority to waive.

Abortion aside, Republicans were seeking to place restrictions of the proposed use of statistical sampling in the next census. Democrats, whatever their position on the trade bill, are nearly unanimous in their desire for sampling, which is designed to correct for an anticipated undercount among inner-city and minority residents in the 2000 census.

Gingrich has been taking personal charge of these talks with the White House, and by midafternoon, Democrats were only just beginning to analyze the specifics of the proposed deal.

Earlier negotiations over education testing had been linked to fast-track legislation, and lawmakers, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there had been horse-trading on the subject of projects that Clinton deleted from previous spending bills through his line-item veto.

Some of the negotiations also related to trade. Clinton agreed to a series of promises to protect the peanut industry, for example, as he had done previously for wine and cattle.

From the front porch in the 1930s, they sing again

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1933, John Lomax, a pioneer folklorist, loaded 315 pounds of recording machines into his Model A Ford and set out on a back-roads journey in search of the sounds of America.

Before they were done, Lomax and his teen-age son, Alan, gathered more than 10,000 performances — songs and stories, sermons and prayers, along with the occasional tick of a kitchen clock.

From that collection emerged 3,000 78-rpm Library of Congress folk music recordings, housed in jackets of bureaucratic gray with maroon lettering, too voluminous for anybody's casual listening.

The Lomax mother lode served as a resource for students of American folk music. It has influenced musicians from Aaron Copland to Jefferson Airplane and helped launch the folk song revival of the 1960s.

Now banjo player Stephen Wade, 44, who entertained Washington with an eight-year run of his own banjo show, has followed the Lomax trail.

He visited the families of the musicians the Lomaxes recorded, seeking the lives behind the songs. He sat on porches on which the Lomaxes perched their microphones more than half a century earlier.

Wade interviewed Sunshine Sunny Payne of Helena, Ark., who since 1942 has been a disc jockey conducting "The King Biscuit Flour Hour" on the radio. And, like Lomax, he visited a 20,000-acre prison farm in Mississippi where inmates had sung a spiritual, "Lead Me to the Rock" into the folklorist's recording machine.

The result of Wade's travels and his research has been issued by Rounder Records as a compact disc, "A Treasury of Library of Congress Field Recordings," 30 performances recorded between 1933 and 1946.

AP Photo

Banjo player Stephen Wade holds an aluminium 1933 music disk in the archives of the Library of Congress' folk music recordings Thursday in Washington. Wade is following the trail of John Lomax, a pioneer folklorist, who in 1933 loaded 315 pounds of recording machines into his Model A Ford and set out on a back roads journey in search of the genuine sounds of America.

The performers are farmers and miners and prisoners and schoolchildren — most now dead.

In Indiana, Wade attended a reunion of the descendants of the late fiddler W.H. Stepp, whose music lives on in a celebrated work by Aaron Copland.

In 1942, Copland needed some traditional music for the hoedown section of his ballet "Rodeo." He found a transcription of Stepp's performance of "Bonaparte's Retreat" in a book and borrowed it, almost note for note.

So, says Wade, "whenever Copland's hoedown is heard — and 40 concert violins and a xylophone swell in unison — a Kentucky mountain fiddler named W.H. Stepp continues to play for millions."

When Wade played a recording of "Rodeo" for Stepp's only living daughter, she recognized her father's tune with a big smile of real pleasure.

The performers on the recording aren't all from the hills and hollers.

In 1942, Learned Hand, a Harvard-educated judge, was invited to drop by the Library of Congress to sing a Civil War ballad he learned as a child in upstate New York.

Stone's rendition of "Iron Merrimac," celebrating the 1862 battle between two ironclad ships, is on Wade's CD, too. So is "Soldier's Joy," a square dance tune performed by street corner musicians, two blind men and three day laborers who called themselves the Nashville Washboard Band and played washboards and washtubs for nickels and dimes.

When the Lomaxes issued their records, they worked hard to eliminate background noises picked up by their recorder. Wade worked just as hard to keep them.

So on this CD a truck is heard driving by and kids tittering. And halfway through singing "The Gypsy Davy" in 1941, Woody Guthrie interrupts himself to greet his daughter walking by.

"How ya, Sue?" asks Woody.

This isn't musical, but it's life and that's what this recording captures.

The Library of Congress recording is available from Rounder Records at 1-800-443-4727.

House votes to delay Clinton nationwide reading, math tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's plan to test students nationwide on their reading and math skills "is dead for a year" under a major concession by the White House to House Republicans.

On a 352-65 vote Friday night, the House passed an $80.2 billion spending bill for the Education, Health and Human Services and Labor departments with language that will delay until 2000 at the earliest the tests that Clinton wanted to give to fourth and eighth graders in 1999.

The bill goes to the Senate, where a vote was expected as early as Saturday. It includes spending increases this year and in most of 1998 for student financial aid, medical research and Head Start. Senate approval was expected.

"President Clinton's plan for new national tests is dead for a year," said Rep. William Goodling, chairman of the House Education and Workforce Committee and a leading opponent of the testing plan.

A dispute between the House and the administration over the voluntary tests had delayed passage of the bill, which covers the budget year that started Oct. 1. The agreement lets work continue on developing the tests and calls for an independent study of whether an array of existing state and commercial tests may do the work of a federally sponsored version.

The deal practically guarantees that the issue will be before Congress again next year.

"By this time next year the case for voluntary national tests will be even clearer, opposition to them will seem even more shortsighted and the call from parents and communities for a rigorous, comparable measure of educational achievement will be even louder," said Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M.

Clinton has argued that the tests of fourth-grade reading and eighth-grade math skills are needed because there is no uniform measure, based on uniform standards, that let parents know how their individual children and schools are performing.

Many opponents argued that the tests were duplicating state efforts to impose standards and test students on them. Others argued that the tests would lead to federal control of what is taught.

"This is an important victory in our fight to save local control of our schools from a Washington takeover," said Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo., who had threatened a filibuster if testing were to go forward.

Blacks and Hispanics argued that the tests could be used to discriminate against students from poor families and schools or pupils with limited English.

Under the agreement, the independent National Academy of Sciences, in consultation with the National Governors' Association and National Conference of State Legislatures, would determine whether widely used commercial tests and state tests are tough enough and can be compared using a single, national benchmark.

Another independent body, the National Assessment Governing Board, would be in charge of the tests.

That all means that debates over future money for tests will be put off until next year. Congress also is due to reauthorize the governing board next year.

Supporters of national tests predict the academy will find that the existing tests are inadequate and recommend in favor of the national tests.

Clinton and Goodling, R-Pa., had negotiated the basic deal Wednesday. But it took until Friday to work out the details.

The bill promises that the academy will look into issues of bias and English proficiency. It also will recommend how to keep the tests from being used to hold back or segregate students.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Vietnamese woman who was photographed as a 9-year-old fleeing a 1972 napalm attack that seared her body is launching a foundation to help innocent young victims of war.

"I want to give back all the love and care that I have received over the years from so many people. So this can be a way for me to help people," 34-year-old Phan Thi Kim Phuc said Friday.

'I really think this picture stopped the war and changed the war.'
— Phan Thi Kim Phuc, who was photographed in 1972 naked and screaming after U.S. air attack on her village

The Kim Foundation was created to help children around the world. The foundation is still in the beginning stages, and it has not yet been determined exactly what it will do.

On June 8, 1972, a fleeing Ms. Phuc was photographed, naked and screaming, after a U.S. air strike turned her village north of Saigon into a cauldron of flames. Two of her brothers and two cousins were killed. The flames had burned her clothing off.

Associated Press photographer Nick Ut won a Pulitzer Prize for the photo, one of the widely known images of the war.

"I really think this picture stopped the war and changed the war," Ms. Phuc she said.

Ms. Phuc was in and out of hospitals for years, underwent 17 operations and still feels pain from the wounds.

She is now married, with two sons, and lives in Toronto.

This Vietnam War photo shows South Vietnamese forces following after terrified children, including Kim Phuc, center, as they run down Route 1 near Trang Bang after an aerial napalm attack on suspected Viet Cong hiding places on June 8, 1972. The terrified girl had ripped off her burning clothes while fleeing.

Kim Phuc stands next to the Pulitzer Prize photo of her after a 1972 napalm attack in Vietnam following a news conference at the Chicago Culture Center on Friday. Twenty-five years and 17 operations later, Phuc announced the launching of the "The Kim Foundation," a not-for-profit organization to help children that are the victims of war.

Special Needs youth ministry in place at First Baptist

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Almost six years after First Baptist Church's special education ministry dissolved from a lack of special needs members, Midland's largest Southern Baptist congregation is making strides to re-establish the program, thanks in part to the ongoing renovations at the church that provide for additional classroom space.

The desire to reinstitute the ministry began in 1993 as a committee considered the church's needs. Adequate space for the ministry was needed and as the church and its committees planned for expansion, the needs of children with special needs were foremost in the minds of the planners.

The special education Sunday School department meets in the newly remodeled building "B", and is easily accessible from N Street on the church's east side. The room is also equipped with a handicapped accessible restroom.

Carol Kleckner, First Baptist's Minister of Childhood education, said enlisting workers who specialize in training and teaching those with special needs is often difficult.

"In this situation," Ms. Kleckner said, "we had three very qualified people volunteer very quickly. All three of them teach in the public school system and have special education training."

So far, only one student has attended the classroom setting available since the church reinstituted the program last month. Ms. Kleckner feels promoting the program might attract others in need of the special ed setting.

"Our intent is to make this class available to the entire community," she said, adding the curriculum would adhere to the Southern Baptist doctrine. Kleckner said, though, that anyone who attends Sunday School classroom instruction at First Baptist does not have to be a member of the church.

When necessary or requested, many children who have minimal special needs are "mainstreamed," or placed in Sunday School class settings along with children who do not require special need instruction.

Mainstream curriculum differs from special needs curriculum mainly in that the students' needs are more personalized.

"It's more a matter of taking the individual needs of the child in mind and customizing (the instruction) to their needs," she said, although a curriculum written especially for teaching and meeting the needs of handicapped students is used.

Additionally, a six-part plan of action is already in place to supplement the written curriculum:

-- Pray for the children.
-- Seek to help meet spiritual, emotional, physical and social needs.
-- Work with family members and care givers to ensure they feel comfortable with and secure in what can be provided for the children.
-- Provide a facility that is attractive but uncluttered, to help say to the children "We're so happy you are here. God loves you."
-- Use a variety of teaching methods, including art, music, books, pictures, puzzles, games, storytelling, conversation and listening.
-- Build a lasting relationship with the child that will help the child know and accept God's love.

Ms. Kleckner has been at First Baptist for almost eight years, coming to Midland from Houston.

"Basically, (growing the program) is a matter of getting the word out and helping the community know that we are ready to help these families," Ms. Kleckner said.

You can learn more about the special needs children's ministry at First Baptist Church by calling Ms. Kleckner at 683-0607. Additional First Baptist information can be obtained by accessing the church's home page on the World Wide Web at http://www.fbc-midland.org.

Hope,

There's Plenty To Go Around.

Wouldn't it be great if we went through life without any problems? Well, that's not the way things are. We all struggle. But there is a way to face whatever comes along with peace, and with confidence.

We're your neighbors, the people of The Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod, and we invite you to celebrate with us that special hope and peace that Christ alone can bring.

Macy's Santa goes high tech

NEW YORK (AP) — Santa will be sledding into a high-tech new world this year at Macy's, home of "Miracle on 34th Street" and the world's most famous department-store Kris Kringle.

The man with the white beard will still be there, but Macy's is scrapping the quaint villages and woods of "Santaland" in favor of a fantasy forest with chattering trees, piped-in smells, interactive sweets and a talking robot.

'We've had a longstanding relationship with Santa for many years, but we felt it was time to catch up with the state-of-the-art entertainment experience.'
— Tim Ray, Macy's spokesman

"We've had a longstanding relationship with Santa for many years, but we felt it was time to catch up with the state-of-the-art entertainment experience," said Macy's spokesman Tim Ray.

The 6,000-square-foot "Santa Claus Adventure," which opens Nov. 28, features a train with bells, whistles, steam and a rumbling floor. Kids wander through an animated forest with a chattering tree and an "interactive patisserie," where they can pull levers and watch artificial sweets being made.

The children will be greeted by RH34, a blue robot. They will also see Tastey Town, where artificial food aromas are emitted, along with inedible munchies. Elves finally lead them to the human Santa.

For many, plain old Saint Nick will do just fine.

Santa is still so sacred that when the New York Post reported Thursday that Bloomingdale's was getting rid of its flesh-and-blood Santa this year — something the department store denies — there were cries of protest.

Bloomingdale's quickly sent out a communique of solidarity with Santa.

Most big department stores around the country are carrying on with their traditional Christmas displays and Santas.

So are small towns, like Winchester, Ill. — pop. 5,400.

"He rides in on the fire truck, and then sits in a little wooden house in the middle of the town square," said Anita Newman, who runs the local music store with her husband. "The kids go to the square and sit on Santa's lap and just tell him what they want for Christmas."

"Robotic Humanoid Number 34" sits at the entrance to Macy's "Santa Claus Adventure" at the store in New York Friday. Macy's is scrapping the quaint villages and woods of its 20-year-old "Santaland," a tradition that drew 300,000 visitors last year, in favor of a high tech world coming alive with computer chips, virtual smells and high-tech talk for today's all-too-savvy kids.

Parrots may be smart as chimps and dolphins

CHICAGO (AP) — Calling someone "birdbrain" is not as insulting as you might think.

New research suggests that parrots, like chimps and dolphins, are capable of mastering complex intellectual concepts that children cannot handle until age 5.

Irene Pepperberg, an ecologist and evolutionary biologist at the University of Arizona who studies the intelligence of parrots, has focused her studies on a bird she bought at a Chicago pet store in 1977.

The parrot, Alex, can name 50 objects when shown them, knows colors and numbers up to eight and even understands the concepts of same and different.

"All of the tests we've done with dolphins and great apes to investigate their intelligence, we've done with Alex," Pepperberg said. "He scored as well as they did in many of them, better in some."

Intelligence doesn't always equal a good pet, however. Experts said parrots can be domineering.

"I have seen entire families, their German shepherd included, buffaloed by a bird," said Chris Davis, a parrot psychology expert. "They are never subservient."

But Liz Wilson, a parrot-behavior consultant from Philadelphia, said she has heard of cases in which people come home feeling blue and their parrot asks: "Is something wrong?"

"You have to earn their love. I like that," she said.

Lower coffee prices trickling down from grocers to consumers

CINCINNATI (AP) — Grocers across the country began cutting their coffee prices this week in response to a drop in wholesale prices announced earlier by manufacturers.

Prices have been falling on the world market due to improved supplies and the prospect of a bumper Brazilian harvest next year.

I am pleased to announce that I will be back in my office on Nov. 3, 1997 seeing a limited number of patients per day. Helping me out for awhile will be Elizabeth Loudon, M.D., a dermatologist from San Antonio, Texas.

I wish to thank all of my friends and patients for their kindness and consideration during my convalescence.

SATURDAY, NOV. 8, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 8, 1997:
You accomplish a lot at home, by building security and understanding. Loved ones and family feel more comfortable with you than they have for years. You might decide to change some of your long-term goals. If you are single, romance is very likely after January. Expect to encounter what could be a major relationship. You might have two perfect choices to contend with as well! If attached, romance takes a new twist; you bond on a deeper level. PISCES harmonizes with you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

Mary and Rhoda may team up again for new version of 1970s hit comedy

NEW YORK — Mary and Rhoda. Together again?

Mary Tyler Moore may try to turn the world on with her smile again by starring in a new version of her hit 1970s comedy, together with Valerie Harper. Both actresses said they are talking with television network executives about a new comedy.

Mary Tyler Moore and Valerie Harper are talking to network executives about a new comedy.

"Is it Mary Richards and Rhoda Morgenstern?" talk show host Rosie O'Donnell asked Moore on "Rosie" Friday.

"Possibly," Moore answered, smiling.

"The Mary Tyler Moore Show" ran on CBS from 1970 to 1977. Moore portrayed Richards, a single woman who was an associate producer of the evening news on WJM-TV in Minneapolis. Harper played Morgenstern, her upstairs neighbor, a role she spun off into her own hit series.

TV Guide this summer named a 1975 episode of "The Mary Tyler Moore" show in which the gang mourns the death of Chuckles the Clown as the best television show ever.

Moore and Harper both subsequently tried their hands at other TV series with little luck. Now they're teaming up.

"For years, people would say, 'Oh, God, why can't you and Mary get together?'" Harper told the New York Post. "So now we are. We're doing this equally together."

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands — The Spice Girls scooped up the coveted best group award at the MTV Europe Music Awards.

The British all-girl band dedicated the award Thursday to fans, friends, families and each other. They beat out an all-guy challenge from Oasis, Prodigy, Radiohead and U2.

But Prodigy was the night's biggest winner, taking three awards: best video for "Breathe," best dance group and best alternative group.

Jon Bon Jovi won the best male vocalist award and Janet Jackson was named best female vocalist. Hanson won best song for the hit "MMMBop" and best breakthrough act.

Adding a reminder of the late Princess Diana, Dennis Hopper presented the "Free Your Mind Award" to the Land Mine Survivors Network, a cause she supported. Bosnian mine survivor Plamenko Priganica accepted the award.

MTV viewers voted for a majority of the awards.

NEW YORK — Rikki Lake has to give up her best friend in favor of her baby.

Lake's cockapoo, Dudley, got aggressive with her 7-month-old son Milo, twice growling at the baby, the talk show host told react magazine, a weekly newspaper supplement aimed at young people.

She has to give the dog away and hopes to find a home that will allow her to visit. Lake got the dog eight years ago.

"He was around long before my husband, long before my child, so we've been through a lot together," Lake said in next week's issue.

PORTLAND, Ore. — An Oregon religious music publisher has settled a copyright infringement lawsuit against the producers of the Princess Diana funeral album.

Decca Records Ltd. agreed to put stickers with a copyright notice and proper acknowledgments on its stock of CDs and cassettes, said Leonard DuBoff, a lawyer for Oregon Catholic Press.

He would not disclose any money terms of the settlement reached Wednesday.

The publisher sought $10 million when it sued last week, accusing Decca of using Diana's favorite hymn, "Prayer of St. Francis," on the album without reference to the composer, publisher or OCP, the nonprofit holder of the copyright.

In addition to including stickers on CDs and cassettes not yet distributed, Decca agreed to ship retailers stickers and request they place them on 500,000 recordings already distributed around the world, DuBoff said.

The song, also known as "Make Me a Channel of Your Peace," was written by Sebastian Temple. The album is the BBC recording of Diana's funeral service.

LOS ANGELES — The husband of "Party of Five" actress Neve Campbell has filed for divorce.

Jeffrey Colt, who separated from Campbell in July, cited irreconcilable differences in papers filed Thursday in Superior Court. Colt's attorney, Franklin Garfield, refused to discuss the couple.

Colt, an actor in Toronto theater, and Campbell, 24, also from Canada, were married 2 1/2 years ago. They have no children.

Campbell plays Julia Salinger in the Fox drama.

Star Trek: Starfleet Academy PC and Macintosh CD-ROM Interplay, $59.95

Even non-Trekkers will enjoy this look at starship combat, shouting "Klingons on the starboard bow!" and talking ... like ... this. Yes, James T. Kirk (William Shatner) guest-stars in Starfleet Academy, as do Captain Sulu (George Takei) and Chekhov (Walter Koenig).

The player is Cadet Forrest, a Command School candidate who must organize a crew and successfully complete some of Starfleet's greatest challenges. Don't worry about dying — it's all a simulator. Of course, you'll flunk out if you fail.

Between missions, the player gets to know the crew through interactive movies (just like Origin's later Wing Commander games). Be careful: The choices made during these movies determine your grade just as much as the simulator.

Riven driven

How could anyone possibly top Myst, the bestselling computer game of all time, a work that set new standards for storytelling, puzzle-solving and graphic detailing that most other games still can't match?

After four years and an investment of $10 million, we finally have an answer: Riven.

Rumors about the long-awaited sequel have been circulating on the Internet for years. Would it be a "Godfather II" or a "Weekend at Bernie's II?" When the game reaches retail outlets, you'll be able to answer that for yourself, but here's a clue. Riven blows Myst away. Riven blows everything away.

Like Myst, Riven isn't one of those games where you shoot up the bad guys, then quit after 15 minutes. Instead, you immerse yourself for hours in a surrealistic world full of strange creatures, haunting vistas, otherworldly sounds, odd machines, unsolved mysteries and, of course, a shadowy villain. You don't die or lose; you simply unravel the often maddening puzzles that lead you to your goal.

You needn't have played Myst to enjoy Riven, the same way you didn't have to read "The Hobbit" to savor the far richer worlds of "The Lord of the Rings." Both games are part of the same universe, and though Riven is a continuation of the story begun in Myst, it stands on its own.

As in Myst, magical books penned by the character Atrus whisk you off to fantastic new worlds. As Myst ends, Atrus begs for help finding his wife, Catherine, trapped on one of those worlds. In the new game, it is to this world, Riven, a string of five islands, that Atrus dispatches you, with only a few clues to guide you on your quest.

You'll explore the islands, learn to use the curious machinery, master the language of the D'ni people and delve deep into the dark mythology of the islanders. You'll pursue the demented genius Gehn, father of Atrus, whose godlike aspirations may bring this world to ruin. As you seek Catherine, you'll learn that even Atrus is not quite what he appears to be.

The world of Riven is remarkable, consisting of more than 4,000 computer-generated images, three hours of animations and two hours of multitrack stereo music and sound effects. The graphics were created with the same software and hardware used in "Jurassic Park" and are roughly 10 times as complex as those in Myst. The detail and realism are unprecedented; you'll have trouble believing that some images aren't really photos.

The live actors blend seamlessly with computer-rendered backgrounds, and it's hard to imagine that the scenes weren't shot on a Hollywood set. But it takes more than pretty pictures to make a compelling game. Riven's intense plot and eerie atmosphere will draw you in and take hold of you.

AOL email goes AWOL once again

By Elizabeth Lee
N.Y. Times News Service

America Online's e-mail system was out of commission for several hours Monday, marking the second outage in less than a week.

Subscribers were unable to send e-mail for up to five hours, and were blocked from reading their mail for three hours, said AOL spokesman Rich D'Amato. On Wednesday, AOL subscribers were unable to log onto the service for nearly two hours, and were unable to send or receive e-mail for several hours afterwards.

Monday's outage, blamed on a hardware problem unrelated to Wednesday's difficulties, happened as the system was being brought back online at 7 a.m. after upgrades to increase its capacity. D'Amato attributed the problems to a router, which directs messages across the network. Service was restored by 12:15 p.m., he said.

"This is the world's largest dial-up network and there are going to be times when we encounter these hardware problems," D'Amato said.

Because AOL handles such a large portion of e-mail (18 million pieces daily, to 50 million recipients), an e-mail problem on the service reverberates across the Internet. Even after an outage is cleared up, it can still cause delays for AOL's 9 million members as the service works to clear the backlog.

Judge Hiller Zobel, above, looks on during the recent au pair trial in Boston, while, at top, two Louise Woodward supporters in Britain look for information on the defendant's home page. Zobel announced this week his decision on whether to alter the outcome of the verdict in Woodward's trial would be released only on the World Wide Web, perhaps as soon as Monday.

Judge looks to technology to deliver nanny ruling

By David Armstrong
N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON — In the face of extraordinary worldwide interest in whether the verdict against English au pair Louise Woodward will be altered, Judge Hiller Zobel Tuesday said he plans to take the unusual step of releasing his decision via the Internet.

Anticipating a crush of requests for the ruling and prompted by a suggestion from his computer-savvy son, Zobel decided the Internet offered a quick and fair method to distribute his Woodward decision. The judge said his decision could be released as early as Monday.

Ordinarily, Zobel would file his decision on paper in the first floor clerk's office at the Cambridge courthouse. The decision would then be placed in the case folder and copied, at $1.50 a page, for interested parties.

"Normally, we just put it in the folder and if someone wants to look at it, we photocopy it," said Whitney Brown, the first assistant clerk magistrate at the courthouse. "That will not suffice in a case like this."

Superior Court decisions have been available via the Internet on World Wide Web sites in the past, but only after a paper copy was first filed with the clerk and usually several days after the decision

Online libraries make for great research tools

By John C. Dvorak
N.Y. Times News Service

The proliferation of library Web sites is a lesser-known story of the Internet. Most colleges and universities now have at least their card catalogues online. Most major metropolitan libraries are also on the World Wide Web.

The New York Public Library and the Berkeley Public Library in California are prime examples of these sites, with the latter even offering free e-mail accounts.

There are even numerous sites that specialize in listing public libraries with online services. These include the site of the St. Joseph Public Library of South Bend, Ind., which was the first American library to set up a Web server.

People new to the Web often complain about the difficulty they have finding pertinent information from the estimated 300 million Web pages available. The various search engines see only a piece of the Web and tend to be useful only as a starting point for research. Experienced Web surfers doing research usually seek what could be called a "nutball" site, on which someone has listed every link imaginable concerning a specific topic. These links, in turn, go right to the site that is being sought.

Unfortunately, this process tends to fail when the topic becomes more obscure or more historical. Most of the documents on the Web are contem-

Dear Amy: Is there a Web site about computer animation?—Keri, Torrance, CA

Dear Keri: Creating animations on the computer is a huge topic involving software and hardware. The things that computers do range from simple animations on programs like HyperStudio to special effects and even feature-length movies. A great place to start learning about it is The Kid's Cool Animation site. Go to http://www.kaleidospace.com/ and click on "COOL KIDS ANIMATION GALLERY." You can try your hand with animations.

Dear Amy: I'm not very happy with my Internet service provider, but what can I do about it?—Bob, Seattle

Dear Bob: I hear about different problems people have with Internet Service Providers (ISPs). If your complaints to the company don't help, it sounds as if it's time for you to do some comparison shopping. Check out Ascend's ISP online listing service at http://www.currents.net/resources/netprov/netprov.html. Select the region you live in and fill out the multiple-choice form to get back a list of ISPs with their fees and phone numbers. The list may not have everyone in your area, so check with some computers stores, your library and local advertising for the best value for you.

LIBRARIES: Online research easier than ever with features porary, and most of the nutball sites tend to be about nutball topics like "Babylon 5," the Kennedy assassination or model railroading. Finding a nutball site specializing in, say, links about farming in the 1870s, is another story. As was the case 20 years ago, the best bet is to go to the library. Well, now the library is online.

While open card catalogues combined with interlibrary borrowing make research easier than ever, library sites have other features that make them a useful alternative to the search engines like Yahoo. Many library sites contain large sets of research links to full texts, in essence creating a virtual research library reading room.

Library Webmasters have the same addiction to posting favorite links as everyone else. Since these people are professional librarians, their links tend to be quite impressive. As a result, many library sites are better jumping-off points for broad research than common search engines. The New York Public Library's site, for example, has an "Internet Resources" page of links to subjects from AIDS to business to genealogy. In most cases, the library has designed subpages under these topics that link to more links.

These library sites also contain a lot of local information not found elsewhere. Going to Britain? Take a look at the listings of the libraries there on the U.K. Public Libraries Page to see what information local libraries offer about their regions. You will be pleasantly surprised.

Not to be overlooked in the library hunt are the great research and academic libraries. They range from the huge collection of 8 million books at the University of California at Berkeley to that of the most obscure small college in Alberta. Besides the card catalogues, there is plenty of local information, as well as links to other links, for researchers.

Unfortunately, there are some disappointments. The University of California at Berkeley went online too early and saddled itself with an old-fashioned, teletype-oriented system. This system is vastly outdated, as is the similar Orion system at the University of California at Los Angeles.

A more modern example of a university Web library system can be found at the University of California at Santa Cruz. Called the CRUZ Cat, this catalogue to the library's 1 million volumes is easily accessible with a simple search process.

Most of the newer online sites are designed with the Web and the modern user in mind, providing plenty of links to other sites. One complete list of American university Web sites is maintained at the University of Florida. A list of Canadian universities can be found at the site of the University of Waterloo in Ontario.

Many libraries listed on these links have links to more obscure libraries. A full international list of college and university libraries can be found at the site of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology library, although it appears to need updating. These are also good links if you just want to find out about a college and its courses and faculty.

The site of the Navy Department Library in Washington, has proved itself especially valuable: a search for information about the Civil War yielded some documents that had been quite elusive. Moreover, the library's online system was complete and easy to use. The software was developed in conjunction with the Navy by the Library Corporation, which has set up an elaborate network of specialty libraries. An example is the Law Library of St. Louis.

Finally, the Library of Congress has a remarkable site that not only provides a peek inside its huge card catalogue but highlights special collections. The Web design work is some of the best, and the site should be on everyone's bookmark list.

JUDGE: Mirror sites linking to Woodward case made available was filed.

Court officials said this is the first time a Massachusetts judge plans to use the Internet as the primary source for releasing a decision.

The Internet plan was hatched out of necessity.

The clerk's office at the courthouse is small and lacks the technology to release the decision in an orderly way to the scores of media members stationed there for the trial.

"This is an antiquated office with limited computer access," said Brown. In fact, the Massachusetts court system is notorious for its slow embrace of new technology.

Sources said Zobel became interested in the Internet possibility after talking with his son David, a 1984 graduate of the California Institute of Technology.

Judges write their decisions on court-issued laptop computers, so transferring the decision to the operators of World Wide Web sites does not involve any complicated technological issues.

Brown, at the request of Zobel, contacted officials at Lawyers Weekly, a legal publication that operates a World Wide Web site. The site regularly offers electronic access to Massachusetts court decisions.

By early afternoon Tuesday, however, the Lawyers Weekly World Wide Web site was overwhelmed with inquiries from computer users alerted to the fact the site would be a source for the Zobel decision. Several popular World Wide Web sites, including CNN Interactive, further increased traffic by offering its users a link to the Lawyers Weekly site.

By mid-afternoon, most computer users could not access the Lawyers Weekly site. A spokesman said technicians were working feverishly Tuesday to add more capacity to the site.

By early evening, court officials decided to add 11 other World Wide Web sites as distribution points for the decision. Those sites include those operated by the Boston Globe, the major television networks, the Associated Press, the Press Association of Great Britain, and Court TV.

The addition of these web sites, which have the ability to handle hundreds of thousands of users simultaneously, should provide the kind of quick and easy access to the decision that Zobel envisioned.

The judge has also indicated he will send electronic mail to some news organizations and the parties in the case, alerting them that his decision is ready to be announced.

Superior Court Chief Justice Robert Mulligan said Tuesday that Zobel had discussed with him the idea of using the Internet to broadcast his decision and that he was in agreement with the novel idea.

"I think that's a good idea based upon the demand for the decision and the great public interest," Mulligan said. "It seems like a fair way to get it out. Otherwise, there would be a tremendous demand for services on the (Middlesex) clerk's office."

He also said that he expects Zobel will file a paper copy with the clerk's office as required.

Big PC makers score low in technical support rating

N.Y. Times News Service

Some of the biggest personal computer makers provide some of the poorest technical support, a new survey has found.

In fact, the largest PC maker of all, Compaq Computer, finished last among a dozen companies in Home PC magazine's annual reader survey. Another top seller, Packard Bell, was next to last.

At the top of the list were Micron, Gateway 2000 and Dell — all companies that sell to consumers directly over the phone.

The survey found that PC owners spent an average of 17 minutes on hold, up from 13 minutes last year. Hewlett-Packard had the best response time — under 10 minutes on average, while Toshiba was worst, keeping callers waiting an average of nearly 30 minutes.

It took an average of nine days to get a hardware problem fixed, with Compaq owners waiting the longest — almost 12 days.

The rankings for Micron, Gateway and Dell were not surprising. Those companies have touted service as a key selling point to entice shoppers to buy directly from them rather than going to a store.

The poor showing of Compaq and Packard Bell is harder to explain, said John Eckhouse, who reported on the survey in the November edition of Home PC.

"You would think that they couldn't keep being top sellers if they had trouble supporting their computers," he said.

Packard Bell, which has a long-standing reputation for shoddy support, claims to have invested $100 million in improving its service over the past 10 months. "But it hasn't shown up in the survey yet," said Eckhouse.

He said Compaq shot itself in the foot earlier this year by demanding that callers to its support lines give their credit card numbers up front — so they could be charged if their problems turned out not to be the company's fault. As a result, many callers would hang up rather than explain their problem.

Rebels fight back into playoffs

■ Lee rips San Angelo, 28-19, in regular-season finale, earning another playoff berth.

By Terry Williamson

The back-to-the-wall Midland Lee Rebels climbed into the Class 5A state football playoffs for the 14th time in the last 15 years at Memorial Stadium Friday night without any help from their league friends.

SA Central	19
Midland Lee	28

Lee pounded San Angelo Central, 28-19, to tie Odessa High for second place in the District 4-5A football race with a 4-2 mark, earning the league's third and final playoff berth.

The win also gave Lee a winning record in regular season play at 5-4. San Angelo, needing a 10-point win over Lee after Abilene High's victory over Odessa Permian to get into the playoffs, fell to the hands of elimination, finishing at 4-6 for the season and 2-4 in league play.

After falling behind 7-0 on the first play of the game when Bobcat cornerback Casey Franklin returned a Jeremy Deramus interception 39 yards for a touchdown, Lee came roaring back with four unanswered touchdowns for a 28-7 lead and the Bobcats couldn't recover despite two fourth quarter touchdowns.

And again the once-ailing Josh Norman turned in a career night in a game that counted most. He had 274 yards rushing (a career high) on 40 carries (a career high) and four touchdowns for the second week in a row.

"I just give praise and thanks to God that I'm able to do something like this," Norman said. "We're still making some

Cooper claims undisputed 4-5A crown

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ODESSA — There hasn't been a whole lot you can definitely count on in District 4-5A football this season, what with Odessa High breaking a 32-year stranglehold by dreaded crosstown rival Odessa Permian and the annual grudge match between Permian and Midland Lee reduced to a third-place game.

But Friday night at Ratliff Stadium, the one constant of the district season held steady, unfazed by the opposing crowd and the upstart home team.

Spurred by two big pass plays and a little gadgetry thrown in for good measure, Abilene Cooper laid undisputed claim to the district crown, finishing an undefeated district campaign by ending the Cinderella quest of Odessa High, 24-14.

In the wild and wacky world of 4-5A, Cooper and OHS were the only two teams heading into the final two weeks of the regular season who had a shot of even sharing the district title. Had Odessa (7-3 overall, 4-2 in 4-5A) beaten No. 4 Cooper (9-1, 6-0), the two teams would have shared the district crown, ending a seemingly improbable rise to the top of the district.

"We got a valiant effort, but the truth is the better team won," said a candid Odessa High coach Randy Quisenberry after the game. "At a point in time, we'd like to get to where (Cooper's) program is now."

That would be at the top of 4-5A, where the Cougars sit two games ahead of both the Bronchos and Midland Lee, which defeated San Angelo Central to claim the third playoff spot. Cooper will play Amarillo Tascosa next Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Lubbock's Jones Stadium. Odessa High will host Lubbock Coronado at Ratliff at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Statistically, it might appear as if the Cougars dominated OHS, using a balanced offensive attack which rolled up 406 yards. Yet, had it not been for three key plays, the Cougars might not have claimed district superiority.

"What separated us was 10 points," Cooper coach Randy Allen said. "It's very difficult to go unbeaten in district. We had to kick two field goals in the last season to win two games (against Midland High and Permian). It's very tough."

As a battle for the district championship might indicate, the game was tightly contested and the big plays made the difference. Odessa High concluded an 81-yard scoring drive with four minutes and nine seconds left

Big Spring Steers way into playoffs

By Tom Ruiz
MRT Correspondent

BIG SPRING —When the stadium clock showed :00 to end the game, the Big Spring Steers had qualified for the State Class 4A playoffs, by virtue of their 28-25 District 4-4A win over Andrews.

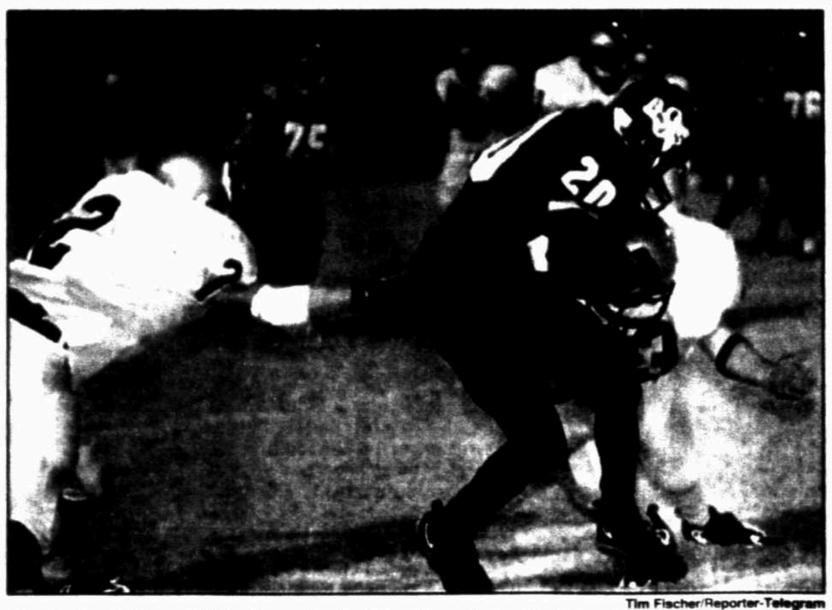
But there was high drama in the Spring City prior to the final gun. The Steers and their loyal supporters held their breaths as Andrews kicker Chris Timmons missed a game-tying 43-yard kick as time expired.

What made the game's last play interesting was that Andrews actually got one extra down to try the field goal. With the clock at 10 seconds and running down, Andrews scurried to the line to get set, and spiked the ball to stop the clock on fourth down.

The officials, however, did not turn the ball over on downs and instead, gave the Mustangs one last shot. But justice triumphed in this case, as Andrews was penalized for illegal motion on the ensuing play backing the Mustangs up five yards before the missed kick.

"I do believe they got five downs," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler, who had the look of a man whose team had been in a dogfight.

The Steers actually held a 10-point lead, 28-18 with 9:05 left in the game, when Brock Gee scored on a one-yard run. But three minutes later Andrews answered with a 3-yard TD run from Shaud Williams to trail 28-25.



Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Big Spring's Tory Mitchell avoids tackle attempts by Andrews' Cody Chesshire, left, and Oscar Bueno on the way to a big gain during the Steers' 28-25 win Friday in Big Spring. The Steers earned a playoff berth with the victory.

The loss spoiled a 251-yard game by Williams who also scored all of the Mustangs touchdown runs of 74, 21 yards and three yards.

"They are such an explosive running team, but tonight they passed better than we thoughtt," Butler said.

Andrews wound up with 138 yards passing. Fifty eight of them came on a pass to Cody Chesshire from quarterback Jeremy Pitkin in the third quarter when Andrews was trailing 21-10. Three plays later Williams romped 21 yards for the score to trim the lead to 21-18.

But it was Big Spring which rose to the occasion on Andrews' last offensive drive.

First a Big Spring punt by John Lawdermilk pinned the Mustangs at their own one-yard line with less than three minutes to play. The Mustangs then went to work.

With two runs totaling 22 yards, and a 34-yard pass, the Mustangs were nearing Timmons' field goal range. Then came the big defensive play from Big Spring's Jeff Denton.

Denton, a defensive end, grabbed Williams around the ankles as he was preparing to turn it upfield at the 28-yard line for a would-be touchdown.

"I knew I had to make the play and our season rode on it. But our defense sucked it up. If we don't stop them (Andrews) we kiss the playoffs goodbye," said Denton.

Rangers rip up Reagan County

By Michael Gunn
MRT Correspondent

GREENWOOD — Coming into the game, the Greenwood Rangers had the playoffs on their minds against the Reagan County Owls. They needed a win against the Owls and a Crane victory over Kermit. Everything went the Rangers way with a 42-26 win over the Owls.

The Rangers got what they needed in Crane, wheRE the Golden Cranes defeated Kermit 26-10, giving the Rangers the second playoff spot from District 4-3A. This comes after Greenwood (5-5 overall, 3-2 in 4-3A) had lost its first two district games.

"Our guys have come a long way since the start of district," said Greenwood assistant coach Scott Knippa. "Our first thing was we needed to get our heads up from the disappointing district start and our kids did just that."

The Owls, who finished the season winless in 10 games couldn't find any offense in the first half. Greenwood's defense, led by senior Michael Glasscock, held the Owls to just 16 yards in the first quarter.

With the defense in full force, the Ranger offense marched the ball down on its first possession, scoring on a two-yard run by Steven McFarden with 6:30 left in the first quarter. The drive was set up by Phil Morrrison's 21-yard run to the Owls 19-yard line.

The Rangers scored their second touchdown on a 55-yard punt return by Adam Dorner to make the score 14-0 in the first quarter.

As the defense was in full sync only letting the Owls offense stay on the field for just four plays, the Owls once again were forced to punt. Jason Brooks found a way through and blocked Jeremy Ramirez punt and recovered in Owl territory. Two plays later Michael Otho scored on a 10-yard run.

On the first play of the second quarter, Reagan County's A.J. Goodloe went 55 yards to the Ranger 15. Two plays later Jeremy Ramirez found Doug Everett in the end zone for a nine-yard score to cut the lead to 21-7.

With a 28-7 halftime lead, Greenwood would have some trouble handling the ball in the second half which would kill to Ranger drives. Early in the fourth quarter the Owls were faced with a fourth and long and decided to go for it. That's when Joe David Werst found T.J. Hill from 21 yards out all the way

Lady Chaps sleepwalk through loss to Tyler

Staff Report

It certainly wasn't what the Midland College Lady Chaparrals expected after their 121-30 blowout of the Wayland Baptist junior varsity on Monday night. And it certainly wasn't what MC coach Ron Jones expected after a 70-51 loss to Tyler Friday night in the Midland College Classic.

"I though we were listless and weren't ready to play," Jones said after the game. "I haven't had a team play like that in the four years that I've been here."

The Lady Chaps (1-1) fell behind 38-11 at the half and had a little too much catching up to do the rest of the game.

"Tyler shot the ball well but a lot of those were open shots. We just weren't defending the ball very well. We just played with very little emotion and it's disappointing," Jones said.

The Lady Chaps ended up only shooting 24 percent for the game, and it didn't help that they shot a horrifying 14 percent in the first half. They improved to 30 percent shooting from the field in the second half.

Midland College was led by Brooke Bowman with 12 points, all of which were scored on 3-pointers.

"I'm proud of the way they came out and played in the second half. It does show that we still have a lot of growing up to do as a team," Jones said. "I do know that the loss bothered them, so hopefully they'll want to correct things and get better."

The Lady Chaps hope to bounce back at 6 p.m. today when they face the Lubbock Christian junior varsity, a team which beat Odessa College 86-68 on Friday.

In another Classic score from Friday, the South Plains College men defeated Central Arizona 67-63. The Midland College

Rangerettes want to get past area round

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Make no doubt about it, this Greenwood volleyball team wants a chance to get past the area round.

Like any team ready to prove itself, it does, but like a mature team, the Rangerettes know what they have to do first.

At 7 tonight in Pecos, Greenwood must get by Fabens in the Region I-3A bi-district round to get to all-so-important area round and possible rematch with Seminole — the team that eliminated them in 1996.

"We will not overlook them," Greenwood senior middle hitter Karen Gasch said of the first-round matchup with Fabens.

"We have to go out, play hard and take care of business on Saturday. Then, we can worry about other teams."

Greenwood (26-9 overall) is riding an impressive 17-game winning streak, one that goes back to Sept. 9. Along the way, Greenwood swept through district without a district loss for the second straight year. For the senior class, that is 12 straight district wins in two years. However with the talent on this team and their expectations, two straight District 4-3A titles are not enough.

"Winning district is a big deal, but we are focused on bi-district and area," Gasch said. "We have worked hard from the beginning. We know we can play but not mess around. We have confidence in ourselves, but not too much."

Confidence comes from having one of the region's top group of hitters. Gasch, junior Mandy Choat and sophomore Stephanie Willis are just three of the weapons that the Rangerettes' 5-1 offense can depend on.

"I have faith in all of them," senior setter Shiloh O'Donnell said. "We had good hitters last year, but they don't compare to how Karen, Mandy, Stephanie hit."

That strong hitting attack will test Fabens (25-9 overall). The second-place team from District 3 is a strong defensive team, and its strength will be tested. Greenwood coach Patti Purser, whose team will go to its fourth straight playoffs, says taking the fight to Fabens is critical.

"(Fabens is) new to the playoffs and anxious to play," Purser said. "I hate seeing good teams playing down to another team's level. We will play at our level. They can't slough off. They know anyone can be beat on any day."

Also important — not only tonight, but during any playoff match — is the passing. Tracy Womack, Katie Walker and Gasch are three players with whom that part of the offense starts.

The winner of this match will play the winner of Seminole-Amarillo River Road. That match is likely to take place on Monday or Tuesday. Purser, whose team defeated Alpine in last year's bi-district round, says that she focuses on the present rather than a potential rematch with Seminole. Purser has long thought that this Rangerette team was a special one, but wants to take this playoff run one step at a time.

"I focus on the moment. It is hard to see who is down the line, Purser said. "There will be a place to play and a team to play.

"Ever since the third week of the season, I told them they were good and had state material."

Saturday, Greenwood will move one step closer to that state goal.

Astros' new park clears another hurdle

HOUSTON (AP) — Another hurdle has been removed between the Houston Astros and a new ballpark.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said Friday that the Harris County-Houston Sports Authority may proceed to build the stadium without conducting another referendum on its financing.

The county's referendum last November, in which voters authorized construction of a ballpark and a football stadium, satisfies legal requirements, Morales said.

The authority has been waiting on such steps as borrowing money until Morales answered questions raised by state Reps. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, and Senfronia Thompson and Harold Dutton, D-Houston.

The authority also may proceed with borrowing $35 million, Morales said. The short-term borrowing is necessary until the sports authority completes construction plans for a $250 million downtown ballpark and sells long-term bonds.

Authority Chairman Jack Rains said the sports authority will proceed with work to complete the ballpark in time for the Astros to open their 2000 season.

"This was not a realistic stumbling block," Rains said. "I really view this as harassment and delaying tactics, a last-gasp effort to once again overturn the will of the people."

Wolens, Dutton and Thompson sought their first of three opinions earlier this fall, asking if the sports authority should have to conduct the same type of referendum other cities and counties must conduct to take advantage of a new state law.

The law, which took effect last summer, lets cities and counties tax car rentals and hotel rooms to build sports and other facilities if voters approve ballots stating how much will be spent and the source of the money.

Morales said the legislation has a grandfather clause that validated the 1996 referendum in Harris County. He also said no constitutional law requires an election before a city or county can impose a hotel or rental car tax.

He used similar reasoning in ruling for the sports authority on the other two requests for opinions.

Nine weightlifters suspended

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Nine weightlifters kicked out of the U.S. Olympic Committee's main training center were suspended Friday from competition for alleged drug violations.

The nine were suspended last month from the national programs of USA Weightlifting but remained eligible to compete. All but had entered the American Open in St. Joseph, which started Friday and continues through Sunday.

But they were suspended from competition at a disciplinary hearing Friday in St. Joseph, where they met with sports officials to discuss charges that they used steroids, cocaine and other drugs.

Three of the athletes involved declined to comment, but one said, "There's going to be some suing."

'Bugs shut out Jacks

Staff Report

SHREVEPORT, La. — The Odessa Jackalopes were shut out for the first time in the franchise's history Friday night when they lost 5-0 to the Shreveport Mudbugs. It was also the first shutout of the Western Professional Hockey League season.

The Jacks (2-8-2) didn't have much offense to answer one of the best teams in the league, especially with Sami Laine out of the lineup with the flu. The Mudbugs (9-2) possess a very experienced group with 12 players who played in the WPHL last year. Kevin St. Pierre, who's 6-3 and weighs 220 pounds, got the shutout in goal for Shreveport.

The Mudbugs only had a 1-0 lead after the first period with a Billy Wright goal but broke it open in the second with three goals, two of them netted by Brady Blaine. The Jacks were outshot 39-25 in the game.

Odessa plays at 7 p.m. today against the Monroe Moccasins to conclude the current road trip.

Stars tie with Rangers

DALLAS (AP) — Wayne Gretzky's goal with 7:08 remaining lifted the New York Rangers to a 2-2 tie with the Dallas Stars on Friday night.

The Stars' defense had limited the Rangers to 12 shots on goal and Dallas seemed headed for its second victory over New York in 11 days before Gretzky jumped on a loose puck in front of the Dallas net that goaltender Ed Belfour had failed to control.

Gretzky sent a backhander past Belfour for his sixth goal of the season and 868th of his career.

The Stars, returning to Reunion Arena following a 3-1-1 road trip, got first-period goals from Benoit Hogue and Jamie Langenbrunner. Former Rangers defenseman Sergei Zubov assisted on both Dallas goals.

Dallas dominated the first period, outshooting New York 10-1 and grabbing a 1-0 lead on Hogue's power-play goal at 16:25. Hogue slid the rebound of Derian Hatcher's shot under goaltender Mike Richter for Hogue's second goal.

LEE: Rebels take care of San Angelo mistakes, but we're coming around as a team. This gives us a chance to play some more."

(From 1D)

Asked if he was looking at the playoffs at a chance to rack up more career yardage for Lee to become the all-time Rebel rushing leader, Norman said, "Let's just say I'm still in the hunt to set my goal (which was stated as 2,500 yards before the season started)."

Norman now has 1,296 yards rushing this season.

"Josh is the real deal," Lee coach John Parchman said. "I now pronounce him well."

Lee produced awesome scoring drives of 96 and 90 yards in the game, and almost staged another 90-yard drive, stalling at the San Angelo three-yard line by penalties in the fourth quarter.

"I take the blame for stopping that one drive," Parchman said. "I was trying to get some kids into the game and we had some delay penalties. But I have to say that our offensive line mashed on some people tonight and that was a key factor in the game since we were able to keep San Angelo's explosive offense off the field a lot."

Lee ended up with 414 rushing yards as sophomore running back Autry Pryor added a 94-yard night, his personal high on just 10 carries.

Leading 21-7 in the third quarter, San Angelo's Chris Rodgers looked to break free of the Lee defense but was caught by Lee cornerback J.R. Norman after a 53-yard gain. The Bobcats failed to score on that drive, running out of downs at the Lee 10-yard line. It was the second week in a row that J.R. has caught a breakaway runner and both halted potential scores.

"It's my job to run to the ball and not let them get by," Norman said. "It's nice to feel like you are coming through with big plays. It can pay off when you catch a runner in the open and it was proved tonight since they didn't score. It happened last week against Permian, too."

San Angelo quarterback Julio Guerrero gave a brave performance despite suffering from a shoulder injury much like the one that cost Midland High quarterback Camar Jackson a game this season. Guerrero threw for 160 yards and two touchdowns.

San Angelo coach Gary Gaines, who is now 1-8 when coaching a team against Lee, said, "Giving the ball to Norman was their game plan all along. We did what we had to do, we just came up short."

District 4-5A Notes: The state playoffs are set. Lee will travel to Amarillo High next Friday at 7:30 p.m. to begin the playoffs in the bi-district round. Abilene Cooper will travel to Jones Stadium in Lubbock to face Amarillo Tascosa Friday and Odessa High will host Lubbock Coronado at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa Friday with both games at 7:30 p.m.... Odessa Permian's loss to Abilene High gives the Panthers a 3-6 season and the first time in history they've lost four games in a row... Permian ties Midland High at 1-5 for last place, making MHS' key upset over Odessa High last week a huge win for the Bulldogs.

COOPER: Cougars finish 6-0 in district

in the second quarter on a 23-yard scoring pass from Rick Leach to Jason Waters which gave the Bronchos a 7-3 lead.

Three plays later, Cooper took back the lead for good. Cooper quarterback Dowell Loggains lobbed a pass deep down the middle to an astonishingly wide open running back Richard Rodriguez for a 77-yard touchdown which made it 10-7 before halftime. It was a sign of bad things to come for Odessa High, which also committed four turnovers.

"Those were huge," said Quisenberry of the big plays the Cougars pulled off. "(On the touchdown pass to Rodriguez) they came up with a great call and their back split the middle."

Cooper's trickery continued after halftime. The Cougars took the second half kickoff and drove down to the OHS 36-yard-line where they faced a fourth-and-three. They lined up in punt formation, but upback Kyle Wiskow took the snap and ran for 17 yards to the OHS 19. Three plays later, Robbie Johnson scored on an eight-yard run to stretch Cooper's lead to 17-7.

The Bronchos eventually cut the margin to 17-14 late in the third quarter on a two-yard touchdown run by Freddy Espinoza, who led all runners with 153 yards on 23 carries. Then Cooper threw a Riddle at the Bronchos which they couldn't answer.

The answer to that Riddle was Adam, the Cooper receiver who made three catches for 53 yards on the ensuing drive, including a diving 37-yard reception down the right sideline which put the ball at the OHS 31. Five plays later, Riddle caught a six-yard pass in the back corner of the end zone to give Cooper a 24-14 margin and a comfort zone.

"When you win a game like this it's a great confidence booster for your football team," Allen said.

On Odessa High's next possession after Riddle's score, Peter Abrigg picked off Leach for his third interception of the game and ended all realistic hopes the Bronchos had of sharing a district crown.

Quisenberry would like his team to avoid such mistakes when the postseason starts. In last week's 42-14 loss to Midland High, his team gave up the ball five times.

"To be a quality playoff team, we've got to get rid of the turnovers," Quisenberry said. "That's what's killed us the last two games."

down to the Ranger three-yard line. Goodloe scores on the next play to cut the Ranger lead to 28-13.

On the next possession the Rangers moved the ball at will and Jason Davila scored from a yard out to bring the score to 35-13. With some spunk left in them, the Owls wouldn't give up. Noel Ramirez blasted up the middle on a 61-yard run for a touchdown to narrow the Ranger lead to 35-19 with 4:48 left in the game.

As the game got closer, the Rangers had the answer in the air when Otho hit Frankie Keller on a eight-yard pass to put the icing the cake.

"With the playoffs ahead for us we will do everything to prepare for the road ahead and our kids will do anything to make themselves a better team," said Knippa.

Sneezy Beltran ran for 108 yards and caught a 32-yard TD pass from quarterback Ahmad Brooks. Brooks scored two touchdowns. Big 12 Games Today

DALLAS (AP) — Here are Big 12 football game previews for this weekend:

Texas Tech at Texas

TEXAS TECH (4-4, 3-2 Big 12 Conference) at TEXAS (3-5, 1-4 Big 12 Conference), 6 p.m., Darrell K. Royal Memorial Stadium, Austin.

Television: Fox Sports Net (FSS) national cablecast.

The series: Texas has a 34-11 advantage in a 45-contest series, which never has been burdened by a tie game. Texas won the initial game with the Red Raiders in 1928 at Austin 12-0, and Tech nabbed its first win over the Longhorns 20-14 in 1955 at then-Memorial Stadium under coach DeWitt Weaver. Texas has taken the last two contests after Tech won in both 1993 and '94. The Longhorns prevailed 38-32 at Jones Stadium in Nov., 1996, after the Red Raiders scored a 33-9 win in Lubbock in 1994.

The coaches: Tech's Spike Dykes is 67-56-1 (12th season, all with the Raiders) overall, 4-6 against the Longhorns, 8-5 in Big 12 tilts, and 2-4 in bowls. The Longhorns' John Mackovic is 84-62-3 (13th year) overall, 40-26-2 (sixth season) at Texas, 3-2 vs. the Red Raiders, 7-6 in Big 12 games, and 2-4 in bowls. Dykes has equalled (plus one bowl game in 1986) Pete Cawthon's longest term as a Tech head football coach in 11 complete seasons (1930-40). Mackovic took the Longhorns to the first Big 12 football title in 1996 after the Longhorns upended Nebraska 37-27 in the Dr Pepper Championship Game and earned an invitation to the Tostitos Fiesta Bowl against Big Ten Conference power Penn State.

The teams: This great rivalry has had its share of thrills, chills, heavily-passminded games and contests where neither team passed unless down and distance forced the issue. It's a battle of Ricky Williams of Texas vs. Ricky Williams of Texas Tech, with the Longhorns' RW holding a three-inch and 30-35-pound weight advantage in a battle of standout running backs. There's also intrigue about the final meeting of quarterbacks James Brown of UT and Tech's Zebbie Lethridge-combined, eight-year starters.

Key individuals: The Williamses own 1,982 yards of rushing offense between them (UT's Ricky sports 1,419 on 199 carries for 19 TDs and a nation's best average of 177.4 yards per game. Tech's Ricky has 563 net yards and two TDs as the Raiders' budding freshman star). Brown (72-of-166 passing for 916 yards and two TDs in spite of some nagging injuries this year) and Lethridge (113-of-213 aerially for 1,283 yards and six TDs while facing two of the nation's best defenses in Nebraska and Kansas State) own most of Texas and Tech's career passing records. Raiders' CB Tony Darden also has seen action as a quarterback and wideout against Texas and seeks an impact game Saturday. Lubbock resident LB Aaron Humphrey (three interceptions) of the Longhorns seeks to return after recent ailments.

Incidentally: Tech's senior DB Dane Johnson (two punt returns for scores in 1997, four for his career) has 68 career punt runbacks for 843 yards and 95 combination punt-kickoff returns for 1,368 yards. Texas' Phil Dawson missed a potential game-winning field goal from 54 yards by less than three feet (wide right) in the final moments of UT's 23-21 loss at Baylor. He has nine career field goals of 50-plus yards.

Baylor at Texas A&M

BAYLOR (2-6, 1-4 Big 12 Conference) at TEXAS A&M (6-2, 3-2 Big 12 Conference), 1 p.m., Kyle Field, College Station.

The series: The Aggies lead this nearly-century-old series 54-30-9 after the teams began competing in 1899 with a 33-0 triumph by Texas A&M. Baylor has not defeated A&M since a 20-15 verdict at Waco in 1985 under Grant Teaff while the Aggies are 10-0-1 since that outing with only a 20-20 tie in 1990 at College Station to mar that streak. The Ags were 24-7 victors last year in Waco.

The coaches: BU's Dave Roberts is 66-55-3 (11th season) overall, 2-6 (first year) with the Bears, 0-0 against the Aggies, 1-4 in Big 12 blasts, and 0-0 in bowls as a head coach. A&M's R.C. Slocum is 80-23-2 (ninth season, all with the Maroon and White warriors) overall, 8-0 vs. the Bears, 7-6 in Big 12 matches, and 2-4 in bowls. Roberts is noted among administrators as a program builder at both Western Kentucky and Northeast Louisiana where he took the schools to six playoff games from 1988-93. Slocum reached the 80-victory mark at the earliest date in Texas A&M grid annals and needs three triumphs to pass Homer Norton (82-53-9 with the Aggies from 1934-47) as the school's winningest coach.

The teams: The Brazos River compatriots are noted for their physical bouts and have the size in both lines to make the 1997 game another head-knocker. With the plethora of Texas residents (the teams' rosters are 90 percent Texans on both crews, this is a familiar setting. The Aggies' quick-striking offense tallies 36.4 points per game while Baylor refuses to give up the ball regularly (11 turnovers in eight games).

Key individuals: Bears freshman RB Darrell Bush (50 carries, 378 yards rushing, 7.6 average) has been a strong spoke in the rushing wheel lately. FS Nikia Codie (88 tackles) is a defensive leader while senior DT Sheldon Mallory helps a rising Baylor pass rush. Aggies kicker Kyle Bryant (making 37 of his last 47 FG tries) needs two points to become A&M's all-time scoring leader. Punter Shane Lechler (second nationally) tops all Big 12 punters with a 48.5 average while OLB Phillip Meyers (10 tackles for loss) is approaching Ed Jasper's A&M school season mark of 14 TFL.

Incidentally: Wide receiver Derrius Thompson of BU has a trio of career-high games with six catches each against Fresno State, Texas Tech and Texas. Baylor running back Jerod Douglas is second on the school's career rushing list with 2,684 yards. A&M's 72-19-2 record and .785 winning percentage in the 1990s rank eighth among all Division I-A football squads. The Ags are second in Big 12 in defensive points allowed at 15.0 per skirmish.

Oklahoma State at Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA STATE (6-2, 3-2 Big 12 Conference) at OKLAHOMA (3-6, 1-4 Big 12 Conference), 1 p.m., Memorial Stadium, Norman, Okla.

The series: Another rivalry (referred to as the "Bedlam Series") extending from a 75-0 Sooners' win in 1904, the OU-OSU matchup finds Oklahoma with a 72-11-7 advantage as they play for the 91st time. After a 15-game winning streak by the Sooners from 1977-91, the teams played to a 15-15 tie in 1992, and the Cowboys scored a breakthrough victory 12-0 at Norman in 1995. OU grabbed a 27-17 decision last fall in Stillwater.

The coaches: OSU's Bob Simmons is 15-16 (third campaign, all with the Cowboys) overall, 1-1 against the Sooners, 5-8 in Big 12 activity, and 0-0 in bowls as a head coach. OU's John Blake is 6-14 (second season, both with the Sooners), 1-0 vs. the Cowboys, 4-9 in Big 12 games, and 0-0 in bowls. Actually, both Simmons and Blake are accomplished postseason coaches, though they are seeking their first NCAA bowl berths in the head positions. Simmons has qualified OSU for its first bowl trek since 1988 and has been associated with 12 bowl squads. Blake has been an assistant on Dallas Cowboys' Super Bowl title teams and played or coached in nine college bowl contests from 1979-92.

The teams: Saturday's tilt looms big for the rest of both squads' seasons. OSU has been among the nation's scoring leaders (currently 18th at 34.4 points per game) while the Sooners have been able to play slightly better run defense as the season has progressed. Team health also is of utmost importance to each entry as both OSU and Oklahoma have lost some strength in the running game due to ailments.

Key individuals: Cowboys' tight end Alonzo Mayes (29 catches, 474 yards, seven TDs) was headed toward an All-America season before injuring his shoulder. RB Jamaal Fobbs (11 grabs, 130 yards) is next on the team receiving list. Five different defenders each sport one pass interception behind Big 12 pilfer leader (five) Kevin Williams for OSU. Sooners' FB Jermaine Fazande (80 rushes, 415 yards, five TDs) has been a steady blocker for the option series behind QB Eric Moore (62 carries, 281 yards, five TDs). WR Jarrail Jackson (27 punt returns, 262 yards) is one of the conference's most potent return men.

Incidentally: Oklahoma State has the most overtime games (four) in early Big 12 history. OSU and Missouri have played in back-to-back OT skirmishes. The Sooners remain fourth in NCAA Division I-A history in all-time winning percentage at .706 (676-265-53 over 102 seasons). OU's longest winning skein in its series with the Cowboys was 19 victories from 1946-64.

Colorado at Iowa State

COLORADO (4-4, 2-3 Big 12 Conference) at IOWA STATE (1-7, 1-4 Big 12 Conference), 11:30 a.m., Jack Trice Stadium, Ames, Iowa.

Television: Big 12 regional syndicated telecast (FOX).

The series: Colorado controls the series 39-11-1 as the teams tangle for the 52nd time since 1946. Actually, this is one of the Big 12's longest uninterrupted series since its post-World War II origin. The Buffaloes bring a 13-game winning streak into the fray, but the Cyclones won three successive games from 1981-83 before that skein started. Colorado prevailed 49-42 last fall while ISU's last win was 22-10 in '83.

The coaches: The Buffs' Rick Neuheisel is 24-8 (third year, all with CU) overall, 2-0 against the Cyclones, 9-4 in Big 12 contests, and 2-0 in bowls battles. ISU's Dan McCarney is 6-24 (third year, all with the Cyclones) overall, 0-2 vs. the Buffaloes, 2-11 in the Big 12, and 0-0 in bowl berths as head coach. Neuheisel hopes to take Colorado to its 10th consecutive bowl appearance and fourth under his guidance as assistant or head coach. McCarney, whose football expertise dates back to a star-studded playing career at Iowa, has watched his 1997 team gain ground defensively and in the running game.

The teams: These squads battled in a 91-point, 49-42 win by the Buffaloes in 1996 at Boulder, but their defensive improvement probably precludes another such scoring display. The Cyclones and Buffs are 1-2 in Big 12 team passing, though, with 240.5 and 210.9 aerial yards per game, respectively. ISU has increased its rushing output behind Darren Davis while Colorado allows 197.5 infantry yards per contest.

Key individuals: QB John Hessler of the Buffaloes has been on target more often recently with 121-of-225 passing numbers for 1,609 yards and eight TDs. His counterpart at ISU, Todd Bandhauer, leads the league with 16 TD tosses while completing 138-of-268 throws for 1,887 yards. CB Marcus Washington (three interceptions) of the Buffs is second in Big 12 pilfers while WR Phil Savoy (29 catches, 451 yards) ranks fourth in conference reception yards per game. Iowa State's LB Michael Cooper and DB Dustin Avey have combined for 83 total stops in their first eight battles.

Incidentally: Colorado owns a 110-38-4 mark since 1985 under coaches Bill McCartney and Rick Neuheisel for the most productive 13-year span in school history. The Cyclones have played one of the nation's most challenging schedules against Big Ten stalwarts Iowa and Minnesota along with WAC contender Wyoming outside the equally-rugged Big 12 realm.

Kansas at Kansas State

KANSAS (5-4, 3-3 Big 12 Conference) at KANSAS STATE (7-1, 4-1 Big 12 Conference), 1:10 p.m., Wagner Field, Manhattan, Kan.

The series: Kansas enters the teams' 95th meeting with 61 victories. The Wildcats have been closing the 61-28-5 gap in recent seasons, however, with four consecutive triumphs and five wins in their last six tries against the Jayhawks. KSU emerged 38-12 at Lawrence in 1996 while the Jayhawks' last win came 31-7 in 1992 at KU's Memorial Stadium. K-State was a 41-7 winner in the 1995 match at Manhattan.

The coaches: Kansas' Terry Allen is 80-30 (ninth season), overall, 5-4 (first year) with the Jayhawks, 1-4 against the Wildcats while he was head coach at Northern Iowa, 3-3 in the Big 12, and 0-0 in bowls. K-State's Bill Snyder is 62-37-1 (ninth year, all with the Wildcats) overall, 5-3 vs. Kansas, 10-3 in Big 12 tilts, and 2-2 in bowls. Allen's Panthers decisioned the Wildcats 10-8 in 1989 at Manhattan before UNI's made seven consecutive appearances (1990-96) in NCAA Division I-AA postseason play. Snyder, CNN National Coach of the Year for his 10-2 mark in 1994, is two wins away from guiding the Wildcats to a school-record fifth straight season with nine or more victories.

The teams: Bowl hopes are at stake for the Jayhawks while K-State already has clinched the possibility of a school-record fifth consecutive bowl bid. Kansas has blocked five punts this year and presents problems in the kicking game for foes. The Wildcats are fifth nationally in total defense with 231.1 yards per game and have held five opponents to one touchdown or less. KU has surrendered only 109 points to seven opponents other than Colorado and Nebraska.

Key individuals: Jayhawks' freshman kicker Joe Garcia (9-of-11 on field goals, .818 kicking percentage) matches legs with K-State's junior Lou Groza National Kicking Award semifinalist Martin Gramatica (14-of-15, .933 percentage, fourth nationally with 1.75 FG per game). Kansas soph Zac Wegner (44-of-94 passing for 576 yards) is the first non-junior or senior to draw the starting nod since 1991. DB Jason Harris (three blocked punts overall, two resulting in TDs vs. Iowa State) is a defensive and specialty standout. DB Gerald Neasman (seven kickoff returns, 28.9 average, 13 tackles) and FS Lamar Chapman (17 tackles against Ohio and returning to full strength after injury) are defenders with speed and skill.

Incidentally: Six Kansas teams, including the 1997 edition, now have achieved five home wins in 76 campaigns at Memorial Stadium-which will undergo renovations in the 1997-98 offseason. K-State faces its second straight team that defends the run well after rushing for 129 net yards against Texas Tech in a 13-2 triumph. The Jayhawks' last win at Manhattan was a 31-16 verdict in 1989. The game has been played for the Kansas Governor's Trophy since 1969.

Nebraska at Missouri

NEBRASKA (8-0, 5-0 Big 12 Conference) at MISSOURI (6-3, 4-2 Big 12 Conference), 2:30 p.m., Faurot Field, Columbia, Mo.

Television: ABC regional telecast.

The series: Nebraska leads the 105-year-old, 90-game series 55-32-3 and brings in a 18-game skein over the Tigers since Mizzou's latest victory 35-31 at Lincoln in 1978. Missouri seeks its first triumph in Columbia since a 13-12 win over coach Tom Osborne's 1974 Huskers. The Tigers mounted a Mizzou-long streak of six wins over the Huskers from 1957-62 and trailed by just four games until 1979.

The coaches: The Huskers' Osborne is 250-49-3 (25th season, all with Nebraska) overall, 20-4 against the Tigers, 13-0 in the Big 12, and 11-13 in bowls. Missouri's Larry Smith is 127-105-7 (21st season) overall, 17-25-1 (fourth year) with the Tigers, 0-3 against the Huskers, 7-7 in Big 12 activity, and 2-5-1 in bowls. This event matches the two Big 12 coaches with the most bowl appearances (32) between them and almost certainty that their 1997 editions will play in the postseason. Osborne seeks his ninth win in a season for the NCAA-record 25th consecutive year by a Division I-A head coach. Smith already has led the Tigers to more triumphs (six) than any coach since Warren Powers with eight in 1984.

The teams: There's a remarkable similarity in what the teams try to accomplish offensively through seasoned quarterbacks who can operate the option. Nebraska is tops nationally with 400 rushing yards per game. Missouri is sixth in the country (second in the Big 12) with 267.2 infantry yards per outing. And, almost amazingly, the teams combine for 266.3 yards per game passing, so pity the defenses.

Key individuals: RB Ahman Green (170 carries, 1,098 yards, 6.5 average, 13 TDs) of the Huskers is one of the first eight backs in Division I-A to break the 1,000-yard rushing barrier in '97. Teammates QB Scott Frost (116 tries, 711 yards, 6.1 average, 10 TDs) and FB Joel Makovicka (new to Big 12 rushing ladder in 12th place this week with 74 carries for 571 yards, 7.7 average, eight TDs) make the Huskers relentless on offense. Tigers' QB Corby Jones (Big 12 total offense leader with 2,061 yards-701 rushing and 1,360 passing) is also one of the nation's top field generals. WR Kent Layman (18 catches, 477 yards, four grabs for a career-high 119 yards vs. Colorado) is a scoring threat while FS Harold Piersey (three interceptions) paces a smothering secondary.

Incidentally: Since 1978 the only teams to defeat Nebraska in conference play have been Colorado, Oklahoma and Iowa State (once) in 1992. The Huskers are almost invincible at home but can be equally-rugged on the road with a 28-8-1 mark away from Lincoln in the 1990s (including bowls). The Tigers have played five previous teams when they were ranked first nationally (last: Miami, Fla., 1988).

Michigan defense worries Paterno

By Michael Raphael
Associated Press Writer

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Just how intimidating is Michigan's defense?

So intimidating that Penn State coach Joe Paterno is worried about making "a few first downs."

So intimidating that Curtis Enis, who is averaging 118 yards rushing and has scored 12 touchdowns, is worried about the Nittany Lions scoring against the Wolverines.

The game Saturday between No. 2 Penn State (7-0) and No. 4 Michigan (8-0) could decide the Big Ten representative for the Rose Bowl and could determine who finishes No. 1.

Not in 24 years have two undefeated Big Ten teams played this late in the season, and two Top 5 teams haven't played in Beaver Stadium since 1980, when No. 4 Pitt beat the No. 5 Nittany Lions 14-9.

Excitement has infected even Paterno, who has participated in numerous big games while winning 297 as coach at Penn State.

"I think this is a fun week for everybody connected with college football," Paterno said. "I am excited about playing a club like Michigan at this time of the year when we are having a good year and they are having a good year."

On paper, the matchup looks like a battle of superior offense (Penn State) against superior defense (Michigan). The Nittany Lions, led by Enis' 830 yards and 12 touchdowns, have the eighth-best offense in the nation and are averaging 464 yards.

"Penn State gives us a challenge nobody else has given us because they have great balance," Michigan coach Lloyd Carr said. "They've got a very good offensive team."

The Wolverines' defense is stifling, allowing less than half as many yards (202) per game as Penn State has accumulated. Against Minnesota last week, Michigan yielded only 102 yards — 71 on the Gophers' opening drive. No team has scored against Michigan in the fourth quarter.

Embattled 'Horns, Red Raiders try to concentrate on football

By Chip Brown
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Football, it seems, has been the last thing on the minds of Texas Tech and Texas lately.

Out of Lubbock on Thursday came Tech's decision to abstain from any postseason football this season, either the Big 12 Championship game or a bowl.

This followed the NCAA's wide-ranging allegations against Tech (4-4, 3-2 Big 12), including that a Red Raider football player in 1992 received 12 hours of unearned academic credit and a player in 1991 was funneled $1,010 in cash by coaches.

NCAA sanctions aren't expected to be announced until June.

When asked if players would be distracted heading into Saturday night's game in Austin, Tech linebacker Keith Cockrum said, "It's going to be hard not to."

In Austin, the focus shifted from the field to John Mackovic's chances of surviving as coach of the Longhorns (3-5, 1-4), who have lost three straight for the first time since 1988, when Texas lost four in a row and finished 4-7.

"We can't get caught up in all the talk off the field about Coach Mackovic," said center Ryan Fiebiger. "We've still got games to play. No one has given up on this season."

The withdrawal from the Big 12 title chase will be hard for Tech to swallow, since the Red Raiders currently are tied with Oklahoma State and Texas A&M for the Big 12 South lead.

As for the Longhorns, last year's Big 12 champions, they have been relegated to the role of spoiler.

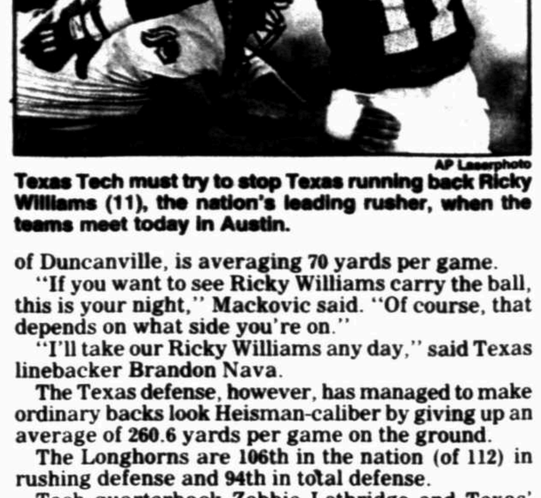
"You're going to see Texas play better than they have all season," Cockrum said. "They've had their troubles this season, but they play us great every year."

Tech has won two of the last four meetings.

Saturday's game will feature one of the most intriguing running back matchups of the season: Ricky Williams of Texas versus Ricky Williams of Texas Tech.

Texas' Williams, a 6-foot, 220-pound junior, is the nation's leading rusher (177.4 yards per game).

Tech's Williams, a 5-7, 182-pound true freshman out of Duncanville, is averaging 70 yards per game.



AP Laserphoto

Texas Tech must try to stop Texas running back Ricky Williams (11), the nation's leading rusher, when the teams meet today in Austin.

"If you want to see Ricky Williams carry the ball, this is your night," Mackovic said. "Of course, that depends on what side you're on."

"I'll take our Ricky Williams any day," said Texas linebacker Brandon Nava.

The Texas defense, however, has managed to make ordinary backs look Heisman-caliber by giving up an average of 260.6 yards per game on the ground.

The Longhorns are 106th in the nation (of 112) in rushing defense and 94th in total defense.

Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge and Texas' James Brown are mirror images of each other — scramblers who can throw on the run.

Lethridge has the better numbers this year, running for six scores and completing 53 percent of his passes, including six TD tosses against three interceptions.

Brown has struggled with nagging injuries while completing just 43 percent of his passes and throwing nine interceptions compared to four TD passes. He has also run for a score.

Stewart finally enjoying success at A&M

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — Brandon Stewart came to Texas A&M as highly touted as a quarterback can be.

The former schoolboy all-stater out of Stephenville had a highly publicized duel with Peyton Manning at Tennessee before losing the starting job.

After transferring to A&M and sitting out a season, Stewart was supposed to cure all of A&M's quarterbacking woes. Last year he didn't play well.

This year he was in another duel with sophomore Randy McCown. It wasn't until last Saturday when Stewart rallied the Aggies to an improbable comeback against Oklahoma State that the junior lived up to his billing.

In fact, he played so well he got a game ball.

Coach R.C. Slocum praised his development.

"Branndon has gone through a lot but handled his ups and downs with class," Slocum said. "The way he brought us back against Oklahoma State shows what kind of potential he has. It will be interesting to see how he progresses."

Stewart starts again for A&M on Saturday against Baylor.

Both teams spent the week celebrating wild and crazy wins.

The No. 21 ranked Aggies (6-2, 3-2) rallied from 15 points down in the fourth period to tie Oklahoma State, then won 28-25 in overtime.

Baylor (2-6, 1-4) upset Texas 23-21 in Waco to trigger a celebration that cost the school $10,000 to replace the south goal posts which were torn down by the students.

Both teams needed to spend a good deal of time during the week working on their rushing defense. Baylor let Ricky Williams run for 226 yards in the win over Texas while the normally stingy Wrecking Crew defense of A&M allowed Oklahoma State to rush for 267 yards, highest since 1990.

Jeff Watson helped beat Texas with a second-half touchdown pass and the senior from College Station will start against the Aggies with freshman Odell James ready to come off the bench.

James directed Baylor on three possessions against Texas for his first extended playing time and will see action against the Aggies.

Roberts has another freshman who could give A&M trouble in Darrell Bush, who rushed 17 times for 129 yards, including a 65-yard run, against the Longhorns' porous defense.

However, Jerod Douglas, a senior, has been cleared to play after nursing a knee injury. He carried six times for 13 yards against Texas.

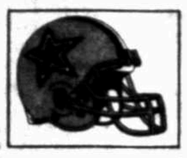
'Boys look for production from Miller

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are looking for five-time Pro Bowl wide receiver Anthony Miller to produce, despite his shortage of big plays and other frustrations since being signed in June.



"I'm not trying to put pressure on him because we're all under pressure, but he's got to produce," said receivers coach Hubbard Alexander.

So far this season, Miller hasn't been the big play threat he was expected to be. He has 21 catches for 287 yards this season.

Miller also has four touchdowns, but only two of those were longer than 30 yards.

"I don't think he's done anything exceptional, but he hasn't hurt us," Alexander said. "He's expressed to me disappointment."

The Cowboys offense has struggled with or without Miller's help during a season that has been plagued with high and low points.

Miller turned down an interview citing time constraints, but other players and coaches have said the wide receiver is stung by criticism.

Larry Lacewell, Cowboys' scouting director, defended Miller by pointing out he is on track to catch more passes than Alvin Harper. In Harper's best season with the Cowboys he pulled in 37 passes.

"We've still got seven games to go in the season. I'm sure he'll step up and have some big games," Cowboys coach Barry Switzer said. "We took a lot of shots at him the other day and really got one."

In fact, two of Miller's biggest plays of the season came in the game against San Francisco last week.

Miller caught a 54-yard reception that put the Cowboys inside the 10-yard line. It was Miller's biggest game of the season with four catches for 85 yards.

Quarterback Troy Aikman looked to Miller eight times during the game, but coverage and drops kept Miller from making plays.

Alexander, however, thinks a breakout game is in the free agent's future.

"I think he's just getting into the groove," he said.

Cardinals' Williams seeks sweep of Dallas

PHOENIX (AP) — A sweep of Dallas? The prospect is especially sweet for Kevin Williams, a Cowboys castoff who is now one of the NFC's leading kick returners with the Arizona Cardinals.

Williams was born in Dallas and his family is there. He was elated when he was drafted by his hometown team four years ago and even happier to win two Super Bowl rings with the Cowboys.

So it hurt deeply when the Cowboys told Williams after last season that salary cap space was more important than keeping him.

He signed with the Cardinals during training camp and has been looking forward to Sunday's visit to Texas Stadium ever since, perhaps even more so after the Cardinals beat Dallas in overtime 25-22 Sept. 8. It was the Cardinals' first win against the Cowboys since 1990.

That win is just about the only thing that's gone right for the Cardinals, who are 2-7 but have been in a position to win all but two of their games.

But now a hamstring strain suffered last Sunday might keep Williams from his moment in front of family and friends and against the team that didn't want him. A final decision hasn't been reached on his status, and Williams refused to accept that he might miss the biggest game of the year for him.

"Sit out the game in Texas Stadium? No, I can't do that," Williams said. "It's not just playing my former team, but playing at home. People who watched me growing up will be there."

Williams was signed primarily as the third receiver to give the Cardinals more outside speed, but his greatest contribution has been on returns. He's is the only returner in the NFC who is in the top five in both kickoff returns (fourth, 25.7-yard average) and punt returns (fifth, 11.1-yard average).

Three games ago, he caught his first touchdown pass for the Cardinals. He hoped it was the start of something good.

"I was ready to roll. I'd been ready to roll," said Williams, who has 11 catches for 149 yards. "I'm trying to get to the Pro Bowl at least one year out of my career."

Then came the hamstring injury, suffered in a victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"It was strange," Williams said. "It wasn't like I was running and did it. I got tackled in an awkward position. They twisted me up in a pile."

One of Williams' best friends will be on the other side of the field Sunday in receiver Michael Irvin. He says Williams is a good person for the struggling Cardinals to have right now.

"Kevin is not a quitter. He is not the type of guy to say, 'Man, we're 2-7, what am I doing here?' I'm sure he's saying, 'I've got to go do something to make the difference,'" Irvin said. "It's just a matter of time before he breaks one all the way. As much as I love him, just not this week, Kevin."

Jets remain wary of hobbling Marino

By Steve Popper
N.Y. Times News Service

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — When the Jets and Dolphins meet on Sunday, Dan Marino may be limping to his position with a sprained right ankle. But the Jets were careful Friday not to provide him with any added inspiration by taking potshots at him or his team. They were preparing for him as if he is still the superman he has been almost every time he takes the field and sees green.

A slip of the tongue by defensive end Ernie Logan had the rest of the Jets tight-lipped, under orders from an undisclosed source. It may be easy to figure who was closing the ranks, not to mention the mouths, at Hofstra University. Coach Bill Parcells, who calls the shots, has seen enough of Marino to know that he is dangerous even in a hobbled condition.

So Marino drew nothing but praise from the Jets Friday. Hugh Douglas was backing away from reporters, insisting he was not going to break the gag order. Logan was talking about being in the doghouse and not wanting to stay there. The questions did not matter. The answer to each one was, "He's a great quarterback."

Loose lips turned into wired jaws around the Jets after Logan's comment earlier in the week that the team planned to go after Marino and his injured right ankle. Still, as long as Marino can take the field Sunday, the Jets are counting on a tough day.

They are fully aware of what Marino has done to them in the past. He has taken the Jets apart for years, beating them 16 times and putting up staggering numbers. In 25 games against the Jets, Marino has thrown for 7,513 yards and 66 touchdowns. And the Jets have not been able to disrupt him, sacking him just 31 times over all, three times in the last six meetings, all victories for Marino and the Dolphins.

"He's a great quarterback," Douglas said. "It's frustrating against anybody that throws the ball that fast. He's a great quarterback. I mean, you can't say enough about the guy. I've heard reports that say he is not going to play. I don't believe that at all. He's a great quarterback. This is a big game and he's going to be there."

Parcells said he could envision a Dolphins game plan that would put Marino in a shotgun formation and let him fire away with the quick release that makes him so tough to sack.

"I've never really sacked Marino, so I really don't know what it's like," Douglas said. "It would be nice to get him before he leaves. He's a great quarterback."

Logan was also cautious Friday. "He's hard to get to," he said. "You might beat your man, but Marino gets rid of the ball."

Even if they can't get to him, the Jets still believe that they can defend against him.

"You can get pressure on him but not sack him, and still be effective," said Logan, who strained to recall the last time he touched Marino. "You can alter his throws, bat down a couple of balls. We're really just looking to close the pocket in on him. It'd be nice to finish it off with a sack, but that doesn't necessarily have to happen.

"I'm not going to say you don't worry about it. This is a production business and you want to get sacks. But you don't have to get a sack on Marino to be effective."

Holyfield may have saved best for last

By Tim Dahlberg
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — In the twilight of his career, Evander Holyfield may have saved his best fights for last.

With two wins over Mike Tyson, only some unfinished business with Michael Moorer and one last chance to unify the heavyweight title remain for Holyfield's late rush toward greatness.

Thought of as washed up only three years ago and given little chance in his first fight against Tyson, Holyfield now is only two victories away from his cherished goal of being declared the best heavyweight of his era.

He goes after the first of those victories Saturday night when he tries for revenge against Moorer — who beat him in April 1994 — in a scheduled 12-round fight to unify the WBA and IBF versions of the heavyweight title.

"You realize my best days are these last days," Holyfield said. "People will say, 'Why did this man end up fighting so well at the end?'"

At the age of 35, with many battles in the ring taking their toll, it is near the end for Holyfield. But he wants to be the one who writes the ending, which could come in a possible fight against WBC champion Lennox Lewis next spring to unify all three portions of the title.

"It will be this fight and maybe another fight," Holyfield said. "Then I have a press conference after I beat Lennox Lewis and tell you guys what I'm going to do."

If there are only two fights left, Holyfield will go grudgingly from a sport that has captivated him since he began as an Atlanta teenager many years ago.

Though he has amassed riches beyond his wildest dreams — the $20 million he gets for Moorer will bring his earnings in his last three fights to about $65 million — Holyfield's love of boxing will make it hard for him to leave.

It showed all this week as Holyfield appeasred to be everywhere, talking to the press, showing off his new line of clothes at a local mall and holding a spirtual rally only two nights before the fight that drew thousands of people.

"This is more than money," he said. "I still enjoy it. It's a lot of fun. This is what I love to do."

Holyfield (34-3) gets a chance to avenge one of the few losses on his record when he meets Moorer (39-1), who gained a narrow majority decision over him when they first met April 22, 1994, with Holyfield then holding both the IBF and WBA titles.

If he's successful — he's a 12-5 favorite — then a fight with Lewis to unify the heavyweight title for the first time in more than five years is about all there is to motivate him.

Holyfield weighed in at 214 pounds, four less than he did for his last fight against Tyson. Moorer, showing some flab around the midsection, weighed 223, nine pounds more than his last fight against Vaughn Bean.

"He (Lewis) is the only guy I can honestly say I haven't fought in my era," Holyfield said. "If I don't get the opportunity to fight Lennox Lewis, I don't have the motivation to fight anybody else."

That's ruling out Tyson, of course, who can't return to boxing until at least July. Holyfield has ruled out a third fight with Tyson, but fighters have been known to change their minds.

First, though, Holyfield must take care of Moorer, the IBF champion whose awkward left-handed style and punishing right jab helped him come back from a second-round knockdown to win the first time they met.

Two days later, Holyfield was in an Atlanta hospital being diagnosed with a heart problem that would cause his premature retirement. Holyfield later blamed a bad left shoulder and his own attitude for his defeat.

"I came in there with some problems I couldn't erase," Holyfield said. "I beat myself the last fight. He didn't do much of anything and if he wasn't doing anything, I did nothing."

Moorer would go on to lose the titles in his next fight when George Foreman knocked him out with a right hand in the 10th round of a fight Moorer was dominating. He came back to win the IBF title with a decision over Germany's Axel Schulz but looked terrible in barely escaping with a decision March 29 over the lightly regarded Bean.

Moorer still chafes at Holyfield's excuses and believes he was never given him the proper due for winning the heavyweight titles.

"It took away from my victory," Moorer said. "People who know boxing know I've been cheated out of it. But I got the victory and I got some titles so I'm not worried about it."

Moorer has vowed to be more aggressive for this fight, but that may work in Holyfield's favor.

Holyfield likes to fight boxers who come right at him and fights best on the inside, as he demonstrated against a more than willing Tyson. Moorer, meanwhile, is more effective with his cautious style of using his right jab and staying a good distance away.

Rays name skipper; Yanks deal Rogers

Associated Press

NEW YORK — It was a day for new starts for both Kenny Rogers and Larry Rothschild.

Rogers, a big bust with the New York Yankees, was traded Friday to the Oakland Athletics along with $5 million in a deal that eventually will bring third baseman Scott Brosius to New York.

Rothschild

Rothschild, the pitching coach who helped the Florida Marlins to the World Series title, jumped across the Everglades and became the first manager for the expansion Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

"I don't expect to hit the first month and win 90 percent of the games," Rothschild said. "But what I do expect is that the effort and preparation to win games will be there."

As teams finalized their rosters prior to the Nov. 18 expansion draft, right-hander Ken Hill declined his $4.6 million option with the Anaheim Angels and chose to receive a $400,000 buyout; Cleveland exercised its $3.35 million option on right-hander Charles Nagy; Seattle declined its $2.9 million option on reliever Norm Charlton and gave the left-hander a $125,000 buyout; and St. Louis declined a $650,000 option on Scott Livingstone, choosing to pay a $100,000 buyout.

Also, right-hander Francisco Cordova and the Pittsburgh Pirates agreed to a $4.1 million, three-year contract with a team option for 2001. And the Atlanta Braves said right-hander Mike Bielecki had refused to accept an outright assignment to the minors and elected to become a free agent.

Five players filed for free agency — Hill, Charlton, Livingston, Pat Borders, Pat Kelly and — raising the total to 138. Anaheim's Tony Phillips is the only other player eligible to file before Monday's deadline and he won't, forcing the Angels to release him, which will cost the team two draft picks.

Rogers, signed to a $20 million, four-year contract as a free agent before the 1996 season, never adjusted to the turmoil of the Yankees. He nearly was demoted to the bullpen during his first spring training with New York, and his confidence never appeared to recover.

New York had traded him to San Diego July 4 in a deal centered around Greg Vaughn, but the trade was voided the following day when the outfielder flunked his physical and Rogers returned a week later.

"He did not live up to our expectations or his," Yankees general manager Bob Watson said. "I don't know exactly what the problem was."

New York, which agreed to pay half of Rogers' $5 million salary in each of the next two seasons, said it will get a player to be named. A baseball executive, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said the player will be Brosius, who hit .203 with 11 homers and 41 RBIs, becoming only the fourth player ever whose average dropped 100 points in one season.

Brosius hit .304 in 1996 with 22 homers and 71 RBIs despite missing 47 games with a broken right arm after Mark Gubicza hit him with a pitch. Oakland will protect Brosius during the Nov. 18 expansion draft, then send him to the Yankees, the executive said.

Oakland is looking to rebuild after finishing last in the AL West with a 65-95 record, 25 games behind division-leading Seattle. The A's began the process by trading Mark McGwire to St. Louis on July 31.

"He won 12 games, which is more than most of our starting pitchers probably won combined," Oakland general manager Billy Beane said, referring to a rotation that won 29 games last season.

Astros extend contracts for Hunsicker, Dierker

HOUSTON — General manager Gerry Hunsicker and manager Larry Dierker, who combined to lead the Houston Astros to the NL Central Division title last season, received contract extensions through the 1999 season Friday.

In two years as general manager, Hunsicker put together the 1997 divisional champions, the Astros first title since 1986. As a rookie manager, Dierker finished third in the voting for the manager of the year.

"This franchise has had a lot of changes in all areas over the last 5-6 years, and I believe it really needs stability right now," Hunsicker said. "As we move into the new stadium (planned for 2000), it's really going to be the most exciting time in the history of baseball in this city."

Rider's winning shot for Blazers sets off arguing among Rockets

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Isaiah Rider's game-winning jumper set off joy in the Portland locker room and fireworks among the Houston Rockets' Big Three.

Rider's 14-foot side jumper with 6.6 seconds left ended a roughly played game and gave the Portland Trail Blazers an 86-85 victory Friday night, and moments later Houston center Hakeem Olajuwon reacted to the game's final minutes.

"I don't understand why I was not an option at the end," Olajuwon said. "When you have a big man it is not justified when I am not an option. It's a violation of the textbook of the game. In the last four or five minutes I was not an option and that is a fact."

The Rockets' final play was for Charles Barkley, who missed twice for the Rockets after Rider's basket. Arvydas Sabonis rebounded the second shot and held the ball as time expired.

Then, Barkley responded to Olajuwon's comments.

"That's called selfishness," Barkley said after hearing Olajuwon's comments. "Everybody on this team is just as important as everybody else. There's going to be nights all of us don't get the ball. He shouldn't be complaining about not getting the ball.

"That's selfish when you've just lost a game. We win together. We lose together. There can't be no baby out there."

Rockets guard Clyde Drexler also thought Olajuwon should have had more opportunities.

"I agree with what Hakeem said completely," Drexler said. "We have to get him the ball and he should be our first option. He's won two championships. He has a valid point. We should be getting him the ball more."

"It's like a family," coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "You have a relationship with the whole family and sometimes in families someone might think you made mistakes. We played a good ball game and didn't execute down the stretch. If we want to let this snowball, we're foolish to let it go beyond this point."

Barkley, who hit 4-for-19 from the field compared with Olajuwon's 10-for-15, didn't minimize his final miss.

"The guy stripped me in the lane and that messed up the timing," Barkley said. "It was a tough shot but I missed it. It was a really bad night."

The Rockets led 77-69 with 9:22 to go, but didn't get another field goal until Barkley's tip-in with 52 seconds left. But the Rockets were only 3-for-14 from the field in the fourth quarter, shooting 21 percent.

"This is hard to take especially with four days off," Tomjanovich said. "We did everything we could to give it away."

The Rockets had two lane violations and two 24-second violations in the fourth quarter.

Rider made a free throw with 33 seconds to play for a one-point margin. After Clyde Drexler missed a shot for Houston, Portland whipped the ball down court and Rider's jumper won it.

Then, he got the game winner.

"I didn't think about it I just let it go," Rider said of his game-winner. "I was glad we didn't call timeout because I could see we had the 3-on-2 and fortunately I've been shooting the ball pretty good lately."

Kenny Anderson led the Trail Blazers with 24 points, including seven points in the final 4:01. Rider added 23 points.

"Our team played great tonight," Anderson said. "This was what we needed. When they got the lead (77-69) we didn't lose it (composure). In the NBA that's a lifetime. We knew that we could come back if we kept our heads."

Breeders' Cup again is interesting mixed bag

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Racing Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Some of the cream has been skimmed off by injuries and illness, but the 14th Breeders' Cup still is a rich mixture of equine talent and human story lines.

Sonny Hine and his wife Carolyn have put up $480,000 for Skip Away, the 4-year-old colt-pet they call Skippy, to run in the $4.4 million Breeders' Cup Classic Saturday at Hollywood Park and maybe become Horse of the Year.

Trainer Pat Byrne, a 41-year-old native of London living in Louisville, Ky., is at his first Breeders' Cup with three starters — Favorite Trick, unbeaten in seven starts, in the Juvenile; Countess Diana in the Juvenile Fillies, and Richter Scale in the Sprint.

All three are early favorites..

Only one trainer ever has won three Breeders' Cup races on a single day. That was D. Wayne Lukas, who did it in 1988 when he had a total of 12 starters.

Lukas leads this year's Breeders' Cup trainers with eight starters in five races.

Lukas, whose horses have won 13 Breeders' Cups and earned $12,456,000, will go up against Byrne with Grand Slam, Double Honor and Time Limit in the Juvenile; Bay Harbor and Love Lock in the Juvenile Fillies, and Trafalger in the Sprint.

There will be one defending Breeders' Cup champion in action — Jewel Princess in the Distaff. Because of common ownership, the 5-year-old mare trained by Wally Dollase, will race as an entry with the Lukas-trained Sharp Cat, one of her main rivals. Another top contender is Hidden Lake.

Besides Dollase, the only trainers in these races who won last year in the Breeders' Cup at Woodbine are Lukas, who took the Juvenile with Boston Harbor, and David Hofmans, who won the Classic when Alphabet Soup, a 19-1 shot, beat Louis Quatorze and Horse of the Year Cigar.

Saturday, Hofmans will be represented in the Classic by 3-year-old Touch Gold, the Belmont Stakes winner. Two other tough 3-year-olds in the nine-horse field are Deputy Commander, winner of the Travers at Saratoga and Super Derby at Louisiana Downs, and Behrens, winner of the Pegasus at the Meadowlands.

Skip Away, the 1996 champion 3-year-old and winner of two races this year at the Classic distance of 1 1/4 miles, including the Jockey Club Gold Cup Oct. 18 at Belmont Park, is the 2-1 early favorite. Touch Gold is 5-2, and Deputy Commander and Behrens each are 4-1.

A big part of this year's Breeders' Cup story, however, is the horses who won't start.

Singspiel, the early favorite in the Turf, broke a cannon bone in his right front leg during a workout Thursday. The England-based 5-year-old horse, owned by Sheik Mohammed al Maktoum of Dubai, United Arab Emirates, has won stakes in England, the Canadian International, the Dubai World Cup and the Japan Cup and was second to Pilsudski in the 1996 Breeders' Cup Turf.

Last Friday, Formal Gold, who was the likely favorite for the Classic, broke a bone in his right front foot.

Three others missing because of injury or illness are unbeaten Silver Maiden (virus), Juvenile Fillies; Twice the Vice (stress fracture left front cannon bone), Distaff, and Gentlemen (throat infection), Classic.

Contenders in other Breeders' Cup races include Spinning World of England in the Mile on the grass, and Chief Bearhart, a Canadian-bred and based 4-year-old colt, and Borgia, a German-bred and based 3-year-old filly, in the Turf.

Lady Vols draw top preseason ranking

By Chuck Schoffner
AP Sports Writer

Picking a team that's relying heavily on freshmen and has no seniors as No. 1 in the country would seem to defy logic.

Not however when the sport is women's basketball and the team is Tennessee.

Tennessee, winner of the last two national championships, was an overwhelming choice Friday for No. 1 in The Associated Press preseason poll.

There are some losses from last season, but Tennessee returns national player of the year candidate Chamique Holdsclaw and point guard Kellie Jolly and has a recruiting class that ranks among the best ever.

Plus, coach Pat Summitt, who has produced five national titles, is back to make sure no one's ego gets in the way.

"If I am trying to decide who's No. 1, I'd put Tennessee first," said Louisiana Tech coach Leon Barmore, whose team was ranked second.

"One, they're the national champion, and two, they have the best player ... in Holdsclaw. And evidently, all those freshmen can play."

Take it from Summitt, they can. Still, the No. 1 team in the country?

"That surprised me," Summitt said. "But we'll take it. It's publicity."

Tennessee received 35 of 40 first-place votes from a national media panel. The five other votes for first went to Louisiana Tech, which had 950 points to Tennessee's 994.

This is the seventh time in the past 11 seasons and the ninth time overall that Tennessee has started No. 1. In three of those seasons, Tennessee went on to win the national title.

Old Dominion, which lost to Tennessee 68-59 in the championship game last March, was third in the poll with 881 points. Stanford, coming off three straight Final Four appearances, was fourth with 857.

North Carolina got the No. 5 spot with 844 points and was followed by Connecticut, Illinois, Texas Tech, Florida and Vanderbilt.

Alabama headed the Second Ten. Then it was Iowa, Virginia, Georgia, Arizona, Western Kentucky, Stephen F. Austin, Colorado, Duke and Auburn. Tulane was 21st, George Washington 22nd, Texas 23rd and Kansas 24th. LSU and Wisconsin tied at No. 25.

Tennessee was only 10th in the final poll last season and lost 10 games, then put together a strong March run to became only the second school to win consecutive NCAA titles. Now, the Lady Vols have a chance to become the first to win three in a row.

They'll rely on Holdsclaw, a first-team All-America as a sophomore last season, Jolly and four talented freshmen — Tamika Catchings, Kristen Clement, Semeka Randall and Teresa Geter.

"Skillwise, athletically, I'm pleased," Summitt said of her newcomers. "I think I would say they're as good as I thought they would be. They're still freshmen, they're still making and repeating the same mistakes. So we're trying to break some habits and install some new ones."

Last season, Louisiana Tech had five new starters and went 31-4. All those starters and the top three reserves are back.

Barmore and Summitt will get an early measure on their teams because they meet Nov. 21 at Tennessee. Tennessee opens Nov. 18 against Mississippi.

The poll is heavily laden with Southeastern Conference teams. There are seven in the preseason list: Tennessee, Florida, Vanderbilt, Alabama, Georgia, Auburn and LSU. The Big 12 is next with four teams: Texas Tech, Colorado, Texas and Kansas.

The only team from last season's Final Four not ranked is Notre Dame.

Abell Blue was led by Jacoby Hartley with 18.

Abell Maroon beat Abell White 39-27. For Abell Maroon, Edward Maybaerry and Ryan Snell each had seven points. Kevin Jumper had eight points for White.

Jordan angry with Rodman

ATLANTA (AP) — With Dennis Rodman once again questioning his own desire to play for the Chicago Bulls, Michael Jordan said maybe it's time for the multi-haired player to "go home."

"I just haven't been playing," Rodman said. "The interest level just isn't there. It's a mental thing, not a physical thing. It's just one of those deals, you know."

Rodman, a Dallas native, missed the entire exhibition season as he waited to sign a one-year contract. He has been replaced in the lineup by Jason Caffey, and is averaging 10.8 rebounds.

Duval ties for lead at Senior Championship

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — It was Bob Duval's PGA Tour son who got him to rejoin the competitive game, and now Duval is following in his son's footsteps, shooting a 66 Friday to tie Hale Irwin and Gil Morgan for the halfway lead of the Senior Tour Championship.

If Duval, a club pro two years ago, can keep it up through the weekend at the Dunes Golf & Beach Club, he will join son David with a win in his tour's season-ending event.

"I don't know, but I've played with David, a top 10 money winner, the last two years and beaten him a couple of times, so that makes me feel pretty good," said Duval, who had a first-hole bogey, then seven birdies for a 9-under 135.

Irwin shot a 67 and Morgan a 66.

Irwin came here with more than $2.1 million won this year and Morgan with five victories. But Duval was as popular as the favorites because of his son, who has won almost $1.3 million with three PGA Tour victories the past month, including the Tour Championship last week.

Players, fans, officials and caddies all stopped to chat with Duval about his son's play, "and then they would congratulate me about getting into the championships," he said.

Duval, whose best this year has been a second at Pittsburgh, showed off a power game and an accurate putter as strong as any PGA pro. He drove continually near 300 yards and fired in wedges. His three front-side birdies all came off 15-foot putts, while on the back he made birdie putts of 3, 60, 4 and 6 feet.

Duval said he spoke with his son, who is playing in the Sarazen World Open in Braselton, Ga., Thursday night, and David urged him to slow down and swing smooth.

"We don't talk a lot of golf, but he told me I had a tendency to go fast," he said. "Everything felt comfortable today."

Two eagles draw Love into midway tie

KAPALUA, Hawaii — Davis Love III wants to put his stamp on the final Kapalua International.

This year's PGA Championship winner moved in that direction Friday by making his second eagle of the afternoon, a 10-footer, on the final hole to pull into a tie with David Toms at the midway mark of the $1.2 million tournament.

Love started the day four strokes behind Toms, who at one point in the second round was three strokes clear of the field.

But Toms, the first-round leader with a 63, bogeyed his 17th hole of the par-73 Plantation Course, longer of the two courses being used in the tournament on the island of Maui, to drop back to 11-under and pave the way for Love's tying eagle.

Love finished with a 66 and Toms had a 70 as both reached the 36-hole mark at 11-under 133.

Kirk Triplett's 6-under 65, the day's best score, at the par-71 Bay Course put him alone at 9-under 135.

Calcavecchia holds big second-round lead

BRASELTON, Ga. — Mark Calcavecchia could have played all day. And, he almost did.

Calcavecchia, who managed to get in only eight holes in Thursday's rain-delayed first round, played 28 on Friday.

He wound up with a tournament-record 62 in the opening round. After a 20-minute break, he played the second round and shot a 67 for a 129 total, 15-under-par and a commanding 7-stroke lead at the halfway mark of the $2 million Sarazen World Open golf tournament.

Novotna beats jet lag, Frazier in Ameritech

Associated Press

■ Tennis Roundup

CHICAGO — Defending champion Jana Novotna dropped the first set, then won 11 of 14 games Thursday to beat Amy Frazier 5-7, 6-2, 6-3 and advance to the Ameritech Cup quarterfinals.

Serena Williams upset fifth-seeded Mary Pierce of France, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) in their second-round match.

Pierce, sidelined with a kidney infection for two weeks, had not played in a tournament since the Fed Cup early last month.

"I'm healthy, but not 100 percent match fit," she said. "After only three games in the first set I started feeling a little bit tired."

Wild card Williams, the 16-year-old sister of Venus Williams, runner-up in this year's U.S. Open, twice broke Pierce's serves in the first set to win the games. Williams held her four serves after losing the opening one.

Neither player held a two-game advantage in the second set.

After the tiebreaker was even at 2-all, Williams won the next three points. Pierce cut the lead to 5-3, but Williams ended it with two straight points, the final coming on a service winner at 107 mph.

That put Williams in Friday night's quarterfinals against Monica Seles.

Rafter, Rusedski, Bjorkman, Siemerink in semifinals

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Top-seeded Pat Rafter beat Tim Henman 6-3, 6-3 in Friday's quarterfinals for his third consecutive straight-set victory in the Stockholm Open.

The U.S. Open champion struggled with his serve early, facing break points in his first three service games against the eighth-seeded Briton.

Rafter is trying to become the first Australian to win the tournament, one of the oldest on the tour.

Greg Rusedski of Britain, whom Rafter beat in the U.S. Open final, advanced to the semifinals without hitting a shot, as Magnus Larsson of Sweden withdrew because of illness.

Kafelnikov, Nestor advance to semifinals in Kremlin Cup

MOSCOW — Top-seeded Yevgeny Kafelnikov defeated his former teammate on the Soviet junior team, Sargis Sargsian of Armenia, 6-1, 6-2 Friday to reach the semifinals of the $1,125,000 Kremlin Cup.

Kafelnikov, the loser in last year's Kremlin Cup final, needs to win the tournament to clinch a berth at the ATP Tour World Championship in Hanover, Germany, next week.

In Saturday's semifinals, he will face qualifier Daniel Nestor of Canada, ranked 148th in the world. Nestor defeated Martin Damm of the Czech Republic 6-3, 6-4 Friday.

Katy Taylor, Westwood make team tennis final

AUSTIN (AP) — Two blowouts and two nail-biters emerged from Friday matchups of the cream of Texas' high-school tennis crop at the University Interscholastic League State Team Tennis Tournament.

The matches were held at the University of Texas intramural courts in Austin.

Katy Taylor (23-2), the Region III 5A champion and last year's runner-up, edged past a game El Paso Franklin squad making its first state appearance by a narrow count of 10-8.

"When you're playing top competition like you do at state, there is no such thing as an easy match," said Taylor head coach Jim Mavity. "The skill levels are so close between teams here, it just comes down to that crucial time, and we were lucky enough to get the breaks today."

The strong play of the Taylor boys' team helped erase a 7-1 deficit from the doubles and a couple of earlier girls' singles victories by Franklin (14-2). However, Taylor swept the six remaining singles matches for the necessary points to put them in Saturday's finals.

"It was a tough loss. Give Taylor credit for coming back," said Franklin head coach Robert Macias. "It was our first time here, and we've got some young players on our team. I'll think we'll be back. This will only make us that much stronger.

Taylor next will face Round Rock Westwood (16-0), the Region II champ who cruised past San Antonio Churchill 10-8 in a deceptive rout. Round Rock clinched after 12 matches, leading 10-2, and conceded the leftover matches to prevent injury.

Westwood's boys won all the matches except one, taking four singles matches and two of the doubles before the match was called. The Westwood girls won two singles and two doubles as well. It was Churchill's third loss of the season, the other two coming to San Antonio Alamo Heights earlier this year.

In the 4A tournament, perennial powerhouse Highland Park (22-0), making its tenth straight trip to state, shut out Friendswood 18-0 in handy fashion. Highland Park lost only one set to Friendswood all match, that in the No. 3 doubles, and notched 14 love sets with only three as close as 6-4.

Highland Park will square off against San Antonio Alamo Heights (14-2) in Saturday's finals. Alamo Heights, the four-time defending 4A champion, squeaked by Wichita Falls. The match was decided on sets, 22-21, for Alamo Heights after the match was deadlocked at nine all.

Mazda 626 Sedan expands to mid-size dimension with makeover

By Bob Plunkett
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

SANTA CRUZ, Calif.—Catch a breath and cinch that seatbelt tighter as we rip through the gears and run the apexes of all those curves on Skyline Boulevard, Route 35 that wiggles down the spine of California's Coastal Range to separate southern reaches of San Francisco Bay from the Pacific Ocean.

Through breaks in tall stands of redwoods from time to time you can catch a glimpse of either bay or sea, but who can look when zipping at speed on a test drive where eyes must focus on the next in a never-ending series of bends and swoops and dips and serpentine kinks of this tricky road?

Of course, we're pushing our test car -- Mazda's revamped 626 sedan—to the limit of all laws of physics in order to sample its promised agile character and the improved capability of a rigid platform.

And, quite frankly, we're flying down the course.

Yet 626 begs for more: More throttle, tighter turns, quicker dips, steeper grades.

By the time we wind down the mountains to reach the coast at Santa Cruz, the driver seems out of breath, out of gas and out of twisty roads to race. But what we gain in this drive is a new respect for an impressive sedan that in the past has often been overlooked in a quest to stake out more popular entries in the mid-size sedan segment.

In expanded form, Mazda's sedan commands attention.

Previous editions ranked at the head of a line which includes performance labels like the Miata roadster, but 626 never scored the kind of volume sales as several Japanese rivals, despite precise manners and better prices.

The car traces back to 1979. A 1983 edition, first front-wheel-drive vehicle for Mazda, won "Import of the Years awards from motor magazines, while in 1986 the First 626 produced in the United States rolled off an assembly line at the Mazda-Ford plant in Flat Rock, Mich.

A generational upgrade in 1993 produced the first V6 engine option, and improvements in successive years elevated 626 to contemporary status in terms of its mechanical and safety systems.

Now, a classy face-lift for 1998 editions also finds new and improved hardware aboard to make a performance statement which sets 626 apart.

Revised exterior styling applies cues which hint at lines of the larger Millenia7 Mazda's elegant Euro-styled sedan. Based on the new sculptured front end and exacting new handling attributes, perhaps 626 should be called the Mini-Millenia.

This isn't a small car, however.

It actually provides one of the largest volumes of interior space in class, thanks to a wheelbase stretch of more than two inches and a similar gain in overall length.

The extension of 626's platform, strengthened with more steel bracing at flex points to set up a rigid foundation, planes the ride quality to simulate a luxury car.

Then Mazda's designers made certain that 626 carries the kind of mechanical systems to tilt it toward the sporty side of performance, which is why the car showed me how it could dance across that California ridge route on recent tests in 626 prototypes.

Key elements for the 1998 editions include an independent suspension system at each wheel and a link to responsive rack and pinion steering with power assistance.

As a bonus for those who appreciate sporty performance in a sedan, 626 offers optional V6 horsepower and a nice 5-speed manual transmission.

The new face of 626 looks handsome and even elegant.

Noteworthy changes occur at the front, where a Millenia-styled grille accents the tapered nose in a ring of bright chrome. Enlarged halogen headlamps flank the front grille and cast wider and longer beams for better illumination.

From the top of the grille, slick curves notched in the raised hood expand upward and outward to the base of a broad windshield. Then fluid indentions flow along cunning side panels to a high tail, where a revised rear valence repeats prow highlights in chrome trim around the license plate.

Overall, the new look of 626 appears subdued and sophisticated, definitely European in tone like Millenia—and different than the typical Asian import's design.

Inside, twin front buckets and a 3-person split-folding rear bench accommodate five people in a package that feels rather plush even in base trim. Spatial measurements for passenger heads and legs in front and back seats seem generous in the expansive cabin.

Four levels of trim signify that a 626 shopper may choose as many comfort and convenience items as the budget will bear, yet all versions contain a high level of the important gear, beginning with safety systems such as dual airbags, side-impact steel beams in doors, adjustable front seat shoulder belt anchors and child-proof rear door locks.

Trims divide into two segments by size of engine.

Entry level DX and the more luxurious LX editions contain Mazda's lively 2.0-liter 4-cylinder engine with twin-cam configuration and four valves in each cylinder. Output climbs to 125 horsepower, a boost of 11 points over the previous version, thanks to new refinements.

Upgraded LX-V6 and top-flight ES models draw from an aluminum V6 displacing 2.5 liters and installing dual cams on top. It zips to 170 hp -- 10 more than last year's engine -- due to higher compression ratios and a new air-flow sensor for quicker throttle response. ■

The price leader DX brings a tachometer, tilting steering column, manual window controls, intermittent wipers, dual remote mirrors and cloth velour seat upholstery. The LX adds air conditioning, power windows and door locks, power mirrors and a sound system with AM FM stereo and CD deck, plus options such as power moonroof and a keyless entry.

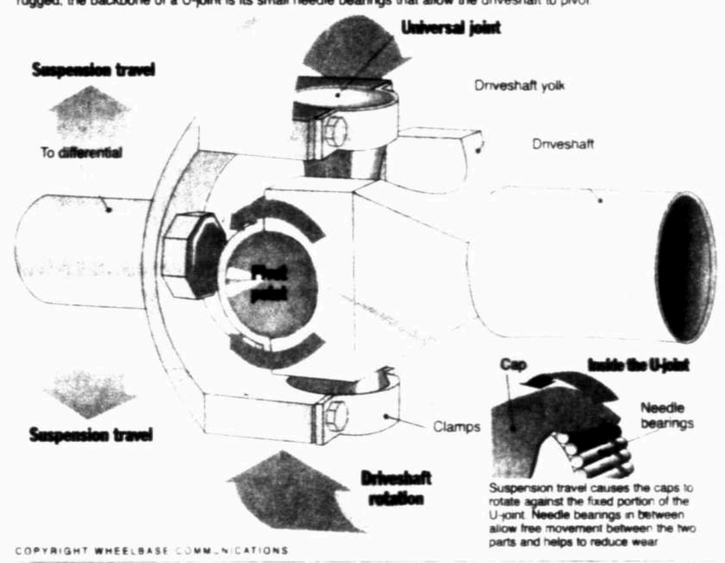
AUTOGRAPH

How a universal joint works

The connection between an axle that travels up and down with the bumps of the road, and an engine that's fixed to a stationary mount under the hood, requires a flexible intermediary coupling called a universal joint. Although rugged, the backbone of a U-joint is its small needle bearings that allow the driveshaft to pivot.



Suspension travel causes the caps to rotate against the fixed portion of the U-joint. Needle bearings in between allow free movement between the two parts and helps to reduce wear.

Like a Rock:'98 Chevrolet Blazer LT SUV

By Kenneth Chester, Jr.

Originally launched in the 1983 model year, the Chevrolet Blazer was at the forefront of the current trend toward rugged, go-anywhere, sport utility vehicles. While Chevrolet wandered aimlessly during the late 1980's, the compact sport utility fell behind the times as competitors like the Ford Explorer muscled into the turf that the Blazer had largely to itself. A complete redesign in 1995 placed the Blazer firmly back into contention for the hearts and pocketbooks of American consumers. Since Chevrolet has freshened the Blazer for the '98 model year, I decided it was time to take one for a spin.

RoadWorthy!

Better and Better

The '95 redesign made the Chevrolet Blazer one of the best values in the compact segment. Built in Chevrolet truck plants in Moraine, Ohio and Linden, New Jersey, the new Blazer now boasts freshened sheetmetal that bears a family resemblance to its full-size brethren. Available in two or four doors; two or four wheel drive; six suspension packages; and base, LS, or LT trim packages, the Blazer is easily tailored to individual tastes. At the heart of this value is a wonderful powerplant: the L35 4.3L V-6. This engine generates 190 horsepower @ 4,400 rpm, and 250 foot/pounds of torque @ 2,800 rpm. Bolted to either the NVG 3500 five speed manual or the 4L60-E four speed automatic transmission, it is an engine well suited to almost any task. There is always plenty of power on tap when needed and the engine is very refined — not all "brawn" and no brains. Whether driving on the highway or off road, the engine is willing and responsive, always delivering the right amount of power. Inside, a new dashboard complete with a new center console greets the driver. Displays and controls are excellent, as well as the driver's view of the road. A feature called Retained Accessory Power allows certain accessories like the radio, power windows and other power features to remain operable for up to twenty minutes after the ignition has been turned off. A novel armrest next to the driver has cubbyholes and storage areas for lots of personal items. The 50/50 split rear seat is designed to fold flat with the cargo floor — the rear seat head restraints automatically flip back when the seat is folded flat, making removal unnecessary. Four hooks are built into the cargo floor to tie down a load when necessary. The dual action window/door lever on the back hatch is a nice touch. Properly equipped, a Blazer can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 5,500 pounds. Underhood fluids are clearly marked and easy to reach. I have a couple of gripes: Access to the rear seat is hampered by snug door openings, the molded cupholders built into the rear doors are of limited use and you still need a prop road to hold open the engine hood.

By the Numbers

Standard safety/security equipment for the Chevrolet Blazer includes: dual airbags, four wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, steel side door beams, daytime running lights, and Passlock theft deterrent system. EPA fuel economy for the Chevrolet ranges from 18 city/25 highway for the five speed, two wheel drive to 14 city/18 highway for the four speed automatic, four wheel drive model. Retail prices start at $21,663 for the base two-door to $25,176 for the four wheel drive, four door model. Destination charge adds $515. Dealers are just now beginning to take delivery of the '98 Blazer, so supplies are improving. There are no rebates. ■
