Wheelies in the sand

Richard Steadman of Houston maneuvers a landsail on the beach at R.A. Apffel Park in Galveston last week. Until Steadman got the hang of it, he spent much of his time sailing on two wheels. The landsail operates much like a normal sail boat except turns are made with your feet instead of with a rudder.

Thatcher orders elections

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today called a general election for June 9, 11 months before the end of her Conservative government's five-year term.

The announcement from her residence at 10 Downing St. came after Mrs. Thatcher visited Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace to request that she formally dissolve Parliament this Friday as required to call an election.

The queen has the constitutional power to dissolve Parliament at the prime minister's request.

After two months of speculation about whether Mrs. Thatcher would order an early vote, a Downing Street spokesman said the prime minister decided it was in the "national interest" to end the uncertainty.

Mrs. Thatcher had been under pressure from her closest advisers to name a day for elections after an eight-hour strategy session with the advisers Sunday.

The Times of London's political editor, Julian Haviland, said that senior members of the government and the Conservative Party agreed unanimously that Mrs. Thatcher should declare June 9 as election day. An election must be held before May 1984, when the prime minister's first term ends.

In calling an early vote, Mrs. Thatcher clearly hopes to cash in on the Conservatives' current popularity.

The oddsmaker firm William Hill made Mrs. Thatcher a 4-1 favorite to win the June poll, and opinion polls for the last year have given the Conservatives a 12-point lead over opposition parties.

June might be a good time for an election for Mrs. Thatcher. Some economists expect inflation to drop to 3.8 percent by the end of June from the current 15-year low of 4.6 percent, although the inflation rate is expected to climb again in fall.

The London financial firm James Chapel has predicted a summertime drop in unemployment, now running at 13.6 percent, lower interest rates and a continued surplus in foreign trade.

In municipal elections around the country last week, the Conservatives retained key marginal districts, but made few gains in 369 local councils where the party had hoped to win more seats.

Minimal support from Midland has hurt UTPB

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a two-part series looking at the battle between Midland and Odessa over The University of Texas of the Permian Basin. While it's not exactly the McCoys vs. the Hatfields, the UTPB fight is only another round in the longtime feud between the two cities. And it appears neither city is ready to put down its guns.

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

At a Senate subcommittee hearing in Austin last month, Sen. John Montford of Lubbock questioned Midland College administrators about opposition to The University of Texas of the Permian Basin from the beginning.

"That's ridiculous," said MC Trustee Reagan Legg. "It was Midland's idea in the first place."

According to Legg, the idea of an upper-level university, placed at Midland-Odessa Regional Air Terminal between the two communities, was conceived by two Midlanders.

Some sources said plans for the upper-level university to be built on land given by a Midlander were going to be expanded with the donation from another Midlander. That man was planning on locating the Petroleum Museum Hall of Fame adjacent to the college.

It would have been a source of pride for both cities.

INSTEAD, UTPB was placed in Odessa and today suffers from little Midland support and a small enrollment.

Back when Midland did not have a nationally ranked junior college basketball team — or even a college — Odessa and Big Spring each were serving freshman and sophomore students.

In the middle 1960s, area citizens decided there was a need to provide a four-year college education in the Permian Basin. At that time, the area was one of few with a sizeable population and no four-year school.

Legislation to make Odessa College four years was drawn up and defeated. Gov. John Connally vetoed the proposal in 1967, stating no new colleges would be created until the newly developed Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System had completed studies and was ready to make recommendations.

Two years later, the coordinating board said it opposed the creation of new four-year schools. The board had studied a new concept, one in effect in Florida: the upper-level university for junior, senior and graduate students.

In fall 1968, the coordinating board decided to experiment in the Permian Basin.

In December 1968, following an intensive two-month study, an agreement was presented by the Midland and Odessa chamber of commerce presidents to jointly establish an upper-level university between the two cities.

IN ADDITION, because Midland students made up one-fourth of the Odessa College enrollment, it was recommended that Midland Independent School District join the Odessa junior college taxing district and a Midland campus of OC be established. Tax rolls of the combined college district would be one-third MISD and two-thirds Ector County.

Midlander Tom Sealy who, along with chamber of commerce presidents Martin Allday of Midland and W.G. Leggett of Odessa, presented the proposal, was quoted as saying: "Standing alone, neither Midland, Odessa nor Big Spring can justify the need for an upper level college — combined, the need and justification is obvious."

The agreement, presented at a news conference attended by top-level business, industry and civic leaders from both cities, stated: "We recognize that the educational needs of the entire area must be served, and complete cooperation and support of Ector and Midland County residents are an absolute 'must' to assure success."

"The upper-level college would be given an appropriate name to denote its entire area of service, such as Permian State College, and would be a state supported facility," the proposal stated.

"The site shall not be designated until after the Midland ISD has held its election. The exact site shall be donated to the state and all utilities and roads furnished to the boundary without cost to the state."

ANNEXATION OF the site by Midland or Odessa was suggested to provide necessary water and sewer.

"To best serve the needs of the expanded junior college district, which includes the proposed campuses in both cities ... it is agreed that the land offered by Clarence Scharbauer of approximately 640 acres south of Interstate 20 and west of Farm-to-Market Road 1788, approximately half-way between the cities of Odessa and Midland would be the most suitable location, and we would recommend this site," the proposal stated.

"The basic tenets of these recommendations are founded in mutual trust and confidence among the people of our two great cities ... We enter the project as trusted partners with our ultimate goal the improvement and enhancement of educational facilities and opportunities for our young people," the agreement stated.

Workers will take home extra pay starting July 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average married worker with two children will take home an extra $2.40 a week when the final share of President Reagan's tax cut begins showing up in paychecks July 1.

The federal income tax withheld from that worker's paycheck will drop to $25.70 a week — down $7.30, or 22 percent, from the level immediately before the first stage of the tax cut took effect on Oct. 1, 1981.

The figures, from new tables prepared by the Internal Revenue Service, are for a married person making what the Labor Department defines as the median wage — $319 a week. That means half the people make more than $319 and half make less.

For a single person at the same pay level, withholding in checks received July 1 and later will drop $4.40 a week, to $44.40. That is 23.6 percent less than before the three-stage cut in withholding began 19 months ago.

A married worker claiming four withholding allowances (one each for self, spouse and two children) and making $400 a week will see a $4.20-bigger paycheck. At a $500 weekly wage, the withholding cut would be $6.80; at $600, $8.80; at $700, $12.20, and at $900 a week, $18.40.

A single person claiming only one allowance and earning $200 would take home an extra $2.20; at $400, an extra $7.20; at $500, $11.10; at $600, $14.60; and at $1,000, an extra $16.20.

This year's reduction in withholding will range from zero — for a married person making $150 a week — to nearly 14 percent, for one earning $200 weekly. But when the 1981, 1982 and 1983 cuts in withholding are viewed as a package, most workers are receiving a cut of about 22 percent or 23 percent.

For most people, the reduction in withholding will approximate the actual reduction in taxes owed. But not always.

For example, the $319-a-week married worker with two children and average deductions will owe only $54 less in federal tax this year — about $1 a week less — than in 1982. But withholding will drop by $2.40 a week. That means when he files a tax return early next year, the refund could be less than otherwise or he might owe a bit more.

If the withholding system worked perfectly, withholding would match tax liabilities. There would be no refund and no check to pay when the annual tax return is filed.

That doesn't happen for several reasons. Not all income is subject to withholding. People have different deductions and different size families. Also, there are 13 different tax rates used to determine taxes owed, but only seven withholding tax rates.

The IRS is sending employers new tables for calculating the July 1 reduced withholding rates. The new "Employer's Tax Guide" also will urge employers to explain to workers how they can change their withholding if too much or too little is taken from their checks.

Nearly eight of every 10 taxpayers have too much withheld, although many of them want it that way because they like a larger refund each year.

Uncle marries niece after 45-year courtship

AP Laserphoto

After a 45-year courtship, Harold Forbes, 86, and his niece Ramona, 65, of Vermont were married in Quebec.

NORTH HATLEY, Quebec (AP) — The bride waited until the very last minute before buying the gown for her wedding to her 86-year-old beau after 45 years of courting.

No one was told of the event until just a few days before.

Superstitious, yes, but Harold and Ramona Forbes of Middlebury, Vt., had reason to keep their hopes in check.

Vermont law prohibited Harold, 86, from marrying his 65-year-old niece, Ramona. Also, family members initially didn't accept the news that Ramona was in love with her older uncle.

But after four decades of frustration, the two were married Saturday at a lakeside ceremony in Canada.

Their marriage in this small Quebec town just across the Vermont border came less than two months after the Vermont Legislature rejected their bid to be exempted from the law, which is aimed at preventing genetic defects in children that can occur when relatives marry.

Quebec's law is less stringent.

A bill exempting them from the law was approved by the Vermont House by six votes, but failed to emerge from the Senate General Affairs Committee. Committee members said the measure could set a dangerous precedent and trigger identical requests.

The couple had been forced to obtain medical proof for House lawmakers that they were incapable of having children.

Finally, Benoit Blais, a state representative from Derby, a town at the Vermont-Canadian border, inquired about marriage laws across the border. He found that relatives such as the Forbeses could be legally married in Quebec.

Blais helped the couple complete the paperwork and make arrangements with the minister of a Universalist church.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts rain for northern New England and parts of Florida and Texas for Tuesday. Snow is forecast for the Rocky Mountains into Montana.

Thunderstorms forecast for Midland

Midlanders might ought to keep the umbrellas handy tonight although today's chance of isolated thunderstorms should decrease slightly.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, less than a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms exists tonight; still, skies will be cloudy tonight and partly cloudy Tuesday.

Temperatures will drop to near 60 tonight with the high reaching into the upper 80s Tuesday.

Tonight's southeasterly winds, gusting at 15-25 mph, should shift southerly at 15-20 mph and gusty Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 84 was almost 20 degrees below the record high of 103, set for that date in 1947. The overnight low of 62 was 20 degrees warmer than the record low of 42, set in 1969.

Minimal support has hurt UTPB

MISD joined the Odessa college district by a vote of 4 to 1.

Meanwhile, although agreement for establishing the upper-level facility on the Scharbauer site was on paper in Midland and Odessa, it wasn't in Austin.

On May 27, 1969, a bill written by Ace Pickens of Odessa and Dick Slack of Pecos, was passed by the 61st Legislature authorizing creation of the upper-level school.

THE BILL REQUIRED a site be selected by Dec. 31, 1969, and stated the college should be located within 12 miles of Odessa College in Ector County, on a site determined by the University of Texas System Board of Regents.

Gov. Preston Smith signed the bill June 10.

On June 14, the Midland City Council voted to pay all costs for utility service extensions to the Scharbauer site and to provide land at Midland Air Park for a permanent Midland campus of Odessa College.

On June 17, four Midlanders were appointed to the Odessa College district board.

That same day, a meeting in Odessa ripped apart the joint project which was to blanket the Permian Basin, severing the delicate thread finally weaving Midland and Odessa together.

"We run a terrible risk of seeing UTPB located outside of Ector County," said the late Herb Atkins, chairman of the Ector County committee appointed to study the project. "Since we've come this far, it is time to get overly selfish ... We should just forget the bill says the college could be located at Terminal or anywhere outside of Ector County ... We can best serve our community by ignoring those terms of the bill."

Allday, chairman of the Midland group, expressed disappointment at that time: "Midland has lived up to its end of the bargain and intends to continue doing so. It appears that some Odessa people would like to forget the original agreement but it is in black and white and it is difficult for me to believe that any group of people who know all of the facts would take it upon themselves to go against the agreement which was paid for by our willingness to join the Odessa junior college district ....

"The bill passed by the Legislature provides that the senior level college may be located within 12 miles of Odessa College in an adjoining county, which will include the Scharbauer site agreed upon by the two chambers of commerces."

A wall of controversy has always surrounded The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, blocking most signs of cooperation between the cities of Midland and Odessa.

"I DON'T BLAME Odessa," said Midlander Murray Fasken, one of the original board members of the Odessa junior college district and later of Midland College. Fasken recently explained that while Midland had Odessa's word, they should have done more at the time — such as make sure the Scharbauer site was mentioned in the bill's wording.

"We were very narrow," Fasken said. "We just didn't get a lot of things done that we should have. Unless the Legislature approved (the agreed upon site), we didn't have any grounds to stand on."

While several sites were offered by Odessans, mostly within or to the west of the city, Fasken said there was another option.

A tract of land located on the Midland-Odessa county boundary, four miles northeast of Odessa city limits and eight miles from Odessa College was offered by Midlander Bill Faudree. The 300-acre tract was located north of 42nd Street, a proposed future highway to connect Midland and Odessa.

"Odessa agreed to it," Fasken said. "Midland foolishly, I think, wouldn't agree to it. Our committee said they wouldn't do a damn thing about it."

However, because Midlanders had asked voters to join the Odessa College district based on building UTPB at the Scharbauer site, some say the Faudree land and tracts offered by others were unacceptable.

On Aug. 1, 1969, the UT-System regents voted to place UTPB on its present location in Odessa.

Allday was quoted a few days later as saying: "The Permian Basin now has access to something we didn't have. Midland has a piece of the action in the form of a junior college which will start in September. In retrospect, four years ago, Midland had nothing in the way of higher education and now we have attained such.

"The fact that the site is 10 minutes further away than we hoped for and that a closer relationship between the two cities has been damaged, grieves me. But overall, perhaps we are ahead."

SINCE THEN, however, Midland support for UTPB has been minimal.

J.E. Perkins, an Odessa Chamber of Commerce member at the time, was quoted as saying he regretted Odessa's reputation of "a community that always has a quarrel going."

He recently said, "It is unfortunate that Midland has not supported the four-year university. Students are the ones that decide where they go, not the cities."

"In a way, it's the same old story," Legg said of the Odessa-backed bill calling for four-year status for UTPB, now being considered by the Legislature. While Midlanders who are fighting the bill cite decreased enrollment at community colleges and an unnecessary duplication of courses as the reasons, some cite money.

"IT WILL BE just another, not even mediocre, university," Legg said. "We have enough of those already and to add another university will draw from the appropriations for all schools."

"I think a lot of Midlanders have come to support UTPB," said Dan Hemphill, Odessa Chamber of Commerce president during the site controversy. "I think now they are coming to recognize the pool of students from the community college is just not there."

Of the proposed cooperative plan to educate freshmen and sophomores at area community colleges with the junior and senior years provided at UTPB, Hemphill said: "That was designed, I think, out of some kind of protectionism for junior colleges. And it's really not needed.

"Maybe that element of student (campus) life is more important than anyone realized," he said.

Whether the cooperative plan prevails or UTPB is turned into a four-year school, controversy will continue to cover the area.

"I don't feel that (the UTPB conflict) was the main thing that split (the communities) apart," Perkins said. "It seems like there is always something coming up. I guess the county line is always in the wrong place."

"I'm opposed to having a four-year college there," Fasken maintained. "I'm opposed to splitting our educational money up between second-rate schools.

"I think they ought to shut it down and make a museum out of it or something."

Had UTPB been placed on the Scharbauer site, the area might have had both.

Some moms spend day in protest

By The Associated Press

Mothers protested nuclear war and fought for better child support laws on their special day, but also celebrated personal moments ranging from an ordination to the priesthood to a new baby's smile.

Children meanwhile showered mothers with bouquets and dinners-out on Mother's Day, clogging phone lines with their long distance calls home Sunday.

Thousands of demonstrators decried nuclear weapons in protests from Boston and Washington, D.C. to New Orleans and Oroville, Wash., near the Canadian border, where six Canadian mothers "returned" a symbolic cardboard model of a nuclear cruise missile to six mothers from the United States.

The border demonstration was a protest against U.S. attempts to gain permission to test the air-launched cruise missile in Canada, said protest leader Jack Burchard.

About 9,000 people participated in a Mother's Day Peace Walk and Festival in Chicago, and in Coalinga, Calif., the Red Cross fixed a roast beef dinner and gave flowers to the 6,500 residents of the earthquake-ravaged town in honor of the day. Two sharp aftershocks jolted the northern California town after the celebration ended.

In Boston, several hundred people at a Mother's Day peace demonstration heard speeches urging a nuclear weapons freeze.

"The dynamic that's driving this (the arms race) along is a primitive hatred and superstition of the Russians," said Dr. Helen Caldicott, a pediatrician who founded Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament. "There aren't communist babies. There aren't capitalist babies. A baby is a baby is a baby."

One mother marked the day not with protests but with prayer as she was ordained an Episcopal priest.

Rev. Barbara Mudge, a 52-year-old mother of three from Laguna Beach, Calif., thanked her "wonderfully supportive husband" for helping her through her religious quest.

A New Jersey mom got a special gift from her tiny baby daughter, born 17 weeks prematurely on Feb. 23.

"It looked as if she actually smiled at me today," said Rose Mary Materowski of Bergenfield, N.J. "That she's all right and improving, that to me, was my Mother's Day present."

But for Maria Bitting's terminally ill baby, Mother's Day was another day of battling a rare form of muscular dystrophy. Mrs. Bitting said it was a happy day nevertheless for her and her husband Barry, when they learned 5-month-old Suzanne may soon be able to be treated at home instead of at a Paterson, N.J., hospital.

The Bittings waged a campaign to convince state and federal agencies to grant Medicaid coverage for home treatment for Suzanne and approval was granted April 29. Doctors have said the baby may go home as early as next Sunday.

"This is the best Mother's Day ever," said Mrs. Bitting, 37, who lost another daughter two years ago. "I have my very own little girl."

In Los Angeles, about 40 mothers — and a handful of fathers and children — marched outside the state Franchise Tax Board office, demanding passage of state and federal laws to allow single mothers to intercept fathers' state and federal tax refunds if the father fall behind in child support payments.

The group chanted "Hey, hey, whaddya say? Pay your child support today," and distributed bumper stickers.

Feminist attorney Gloria Allred, who led the protest, said Mother's Day is a sad reminder of financial hardships for single mothers.

A Mother's Day memorial service for the 29 youths killed in Atlanta between 1979 and 1981 drew only 45 people, and the mothers of most victims stayed away, organizers said.

In New York City, actress Patricia Neal was named Mother of the Year in ceremonies at the Hebrew Home for the Aged in the Bronx.

In Alden, Ill., Ralph and Doris Wagner were flooded with hundreds of Mother's Day cards and bombarded with constant phone calls from the 978 foster children who have spent time in their home over the past 33 years.

Silvia Martin, a high school math teacher from Victoria, Texas, gave birth Sunday to quadruplets, three girls and a boy. The infants were born between 7:47 a.m. and 7:50 a.m.

Nuclear freeze advocates fear measure may be headed for graveyard

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a bruising, two-month battle in the House, nuclear-freeze advocates are taking their campaign for an arms moratorium to the Senate. But the measure may be headed for the graveyard.

Backers of the freeze already appear to have lost their first battle in the Senate, where the measure is being delivered to an unsympathetic Foreign Relations Committee.

Despite an appeal by freeze sponsors Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., for a direct Senate vote on the proposal, Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., apparently intends to have the measure sent to the committee this week — where it could languish for months.

"Our concern is to have the Senate vote as soon as possible. If it goes into committee, it could get stuck there a long time," said Rubin McCormack, Washington representative for the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign.

Still, Baker himself has predicted that the issue will find its way to the floor one way or the other — and that a lively debate before the full Senate will occur.

"I'm sure there'll be a floor fight," Baker said late last week.

The House, after one of the longest floor debates in history, approved by a 278-149 vote last Wednesday the call for a U.S.-Soviet "mutual and verifiable freeze and reductions in nuclear weapons."

But passage came only after freeze opponents won approval of a key modification — in effect making the freeze contingent on a reduction of arms "within a reasonable, specified period of time."

Opponents of the freeze contend any freeze should be closely linked to arms reductions.

Backers of the freeze were unable to get the measure through the Democrat-controlled House intact. By the time it finally was approved, its length had grown to twice its original size, laden with qualifying amendments pressed by Reagan administration forces.

In light of the difficulty sponsors had in the House, the chance of approval of a strong freeze resolution in the Republican-run Senate seems scant, freeze opponents say.

And even Kennedy, one of the most optimistic of Senate freeze advocates, conceded last week that winning Senate approval would be "an uphill battle."

"We may not win on the first vote. But this is an issue which we will bring back again and again and one on which ultimately we will prevail," Kennedy predicted.

However, freeze opponents have time on their side: it's hard to get anything controversial through the filibuster-prone Senate, even when it enjoys majority support.

Senate leaders said they expected the Foreign Relations Committee, when it gets around to dealing with the issue, is likely to make further major modifications in the proposal.

So freeze advocates, claiming 34 Senate sponsors, may try to bypass the committee by amending the proposal to another piece of legislation.

If the resolution should wind up on the floor in form of a pure freeze such as that sought by advocates, it stands "no chance of passage" in the Senate, Baker has declared.

Looming in the background is the threat of an almost certain veto. President Reagan opposes the measure — even in the modified form that passed the House — on grounds that it would undermine the position of U.S. negotiators in arms talks now under way with the Soviet Union in Geneva.

Those on both sides of the issue agree that the freeze debate is mostly one of symbolism — a vote of no-confidence in Reagan's arms policy — because the measure was never intended to be binding on U.S. negotiators, even in its original, strongest form.

Instead, it recommends that a freeze and arms reductions should be one of the objectives in Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) between the superpowers.

13 inches of rain fall on Louisiana

By The Associated Press

Southern Louisiana residents were sloshing through the aftermath of a three-hour downpour that sent 13 inches of rain, while temperatures dipped below freezing in the Midwest and snow fell in the Northeast.

The Louisiana storm, which hit early Sunday, flooded highways, homes and businesses in the southern towns of Boothville, Venice, Buras and Triumph, but most highways were reopened by mid-morning Sunday.

Stern magazine wants reporter charged with fraud

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Stern magazine asked the state prosecutor today to charge reporter Gerd Heidemann with fraud, alleging that the person Heidemann said sold him the so-called Hitler diaries "probably does not exist."

Stern publisher Henri Nannen said in a statement that Heidemann "apparently fell into the hands of a swindler and in the end possibly enriched himself."

Heidemann could not be reached for comment. His wife told The Associated Press by telephone that her husband was innocent of fraud and did not have the money from the publication of the "diaries."

The West German weekly reportedly paid $4.1 million for the 62 volumes of writings that Heidemann claimed to have tracked down in East Germany and which he said were the journals of Adolf Hitler.

The government last Friday said the documents were forgeries plagiarized from a 1962 history book and made with material manufactured after World War II. Stern today apologized to its readers for printing excerpts of the documents, saying the publication put it in the unwanted position of "Nazi justification."

Nannen said he filed the complaint with the state prosecutor of the district court in Hamburg, where Stern is based and where Heidemann lives.

The publisher said Stern's complaint "is based on the fact that Heidemann named as a supplier of the purported Hitler diaries a man who most probably does not exist." Heidemann had declared earlier that he received the diaries from an informer whom he could not identify because human lives would be endangered.

"After it was established that the diaries were forged, Heidemann was given an ultimatum to disclose his informant because the right to protect sources does not apply to a supplier of falsified material," Nannen's statement said.

He said without elaboration that statements Heidemann and his wife had given unspecified foreign newspapers "contradict each other."

This was an apparent reference to a Sunday Times of London report quoting Gina Heidemann as implying that the diaries came from an unnamed East German official.

Asked if Heidemann kept any of the diary money, Gina replied, "Unfortunately not. Then we might have been able to hire a good attorney. No, my husband has none of that money."

Mrs. Heidemann said she does not know where the money went.

"That is something for my husband to say," she said."I don't know who wrote the diaries. My husband thought Hitler wrote them."

Earlier, Stern spokesman Gunther Schoenfeld released a four-paragraph statement signed "the editors of Stern," which said the West German government's exposure of the diaries as obvious fakes "is a severe blow against 35 years of Stern credibility."

The Necker family feeds Miracle, one of their several pets, in Huffman. Winnie Necker, second from left, says her adopted children, Elizabeth, 14, and Matthew, 5, both retarded, make Mother's Day especially important to her. Her husband, Louis, offers the horse a handful of grain.

Mother 'didn't expect anything but got everything' from children

HUFFMAN (AP) — Matthew is 5 years old and probably won't live past adolescence, but the woman who has raised him from a newborn refuses to be discouraged.

"Even if he were to pass away tonight, I would know that for five years, he had the best I could give him," said Winnie Necker.

Matthew, who suffers from Downs' Syndrome, is one of three mentally retarded children adopted in 1979 by Mrs. Necker and her husband, Louis.

The Neckers originally intended to adopt a "perfect newborn," Mrs. Necker said, but were discouraged by the cost and the prospect of a long wait.

Their hope was reborn when they discovered an agency that handled hard-to-place children. It required no fee and could send them the youngsters in six weeks.

"I didn't expect anything, but I got everything," she said.

"Each Mother's Day is a special time for me, even more than most because of the special children I have," she said in an interview last week.

The agency was a treasure chest for the Neckers.

"They have books full of children's pictures for you to look at," Mrs. Necker said. They chose Matthew first, then took 14-year-old Charles. Later that year they adopted Elizabeth, then 10.

Matthew defied doctors' predictions that a heart defect would kill him before he reached his sixth month. Although he was not expected to walk or talk, he scampers around the Neckers' 4½ acres 30 miles northeast of Houston, feeding the chickens and babbling the few words he knows.

The optimism with which Mrs. Necker views Matthew bore her through Charles' suicide last year. Then 17, the boy had learned to talk after being able only to bark like a dog following a childhood of abuse. He shot himself after his real mother refused to see him.

"He wanted to go home to visit his real mother for Easter and then come back to us," Mrs. Necker recalls. "But his real mother didn't want to have anything to do with him."

Charles was upset for three days afterward, then took a gun from his parents' bedroom and killed himself.

Another tragedy ended happily last week. Motorcycle gang members broke down a fence and chased Elizabeth's two pet calves into a road, where they were struck by a pickup and had to be destroyed.

The episode caused the child to retreat into an alternate personality, a near-perfect girl named Tiffen, which had appeared before when Elizabeth was very upset. Mrs. Necker said Elizabeth apparently uses the personality when she feels unpleasant things happen because she is bad.

Daughter says father was always bad news

DALLAS (AP) — Vernon Morales was never anything but bad news for his daughter Lana — a woman who'd had more than enough bad news.

Ms. Morales told The Dallas Morning News that last year she accidentally backed her car over her 3-year-old daughter, killing the child. Her husband was arrested for burglary and imprisoned in Little Rock, Ark. Her mother is in a West Virginia prison, she said.

But Lana Morales, 21, was doing all right in spite of it, living in the lush hills five miles south of Little Rock.

Then her father came to town.

Morales' trail of blood ended in her small frame home early Saturday when the man suspected of killing a Dallas police officer turned his gun on himself and his girlfriend, Rosemary Concilio.

An Arkansas medical examiner said Saturday that Morales, 44, shot Ms. Concilio, 38, and then shot himself after authorities had closed in and ordered the pair to surrender. The shootings ended an intensive six-day manhunt for the pair, who had been wanted for the slaying of Dallas officer Ronald Baker, 24.

"He shot the woman on the left side of the head behind the left ear, and then shot himself on the right side of the head in the right temple just above the right ear," said Dr. Fahmy Malak.

Morales and Ms. Concilio were named in capital murder warrants issued late Thursday for the slaying of Baker, who was shot five times and run over twice by a van on Monday.

U.S. Marshal Charles Gray said he learned about 1 a.m. Saturday that Morales had been hiding at his daughter's home about five miles south of Little Rock since late Friday night.

Gray, his deputies, FBI agents and Arkansas State Police officers surrounded the house about 3 a.m. Saturday.

"When we got in place," Gray said, "everybody turned on their spotlights, their car headlights and their blue lights, and I came over the bullhorn and I told them...'Morales, this is the U.S. marshal. We've got deputy marshals, FBI agents and state troopers surrounding the house.'"

Gray said he told the people in the house that no harm would come to anyone who surrendered within five minutes. He said Ms. Morales, Timothy Bradley and Don Countrymen, who shared the house with the woman, came out of the house.

The three were questioned and released, said Gray, adding that the information will be turned over to the U.S. attorney for presentation to a federal grand jury.

Lana Morales' friend, Cicely Brown, told The News that during cocktails Friday night, Morales casually told the group in the farmhouse that he killed a Dallas policemen.

"I wasn't listening too close at first," Mrs. Brown said. "He was in a fight with the cop and somehow got the gun and shot him. That was about all."

Mrs. Brown said she and Ms. Morales "both went into shock."

Ms. Morales said she considered calling the police until, at some point in the evening, Morales threatened to "hurt someone I love if I called the police,"

Gray said that after the three people came out of the house, he called out to Morales to surrender with his hands up.

"The people had just gotten to the road," Gray said, "and about that time we heard two shots, and the daughter said, 'Oh, I think daddy shot himself.' She said she thought daddy was crazy and might kill himself."

Officers waited about 20 minutes, then called a volunteer fire department.

Couple 'flying high'

ABILENE (AP) — Except for one detail, Albert Woody and Janet Ann Miller had a typical wedding, complete with a judge, an exchange of rings, vows of love and honor and champagne afterwards.

The difference was the couple tied the knot while cruising above West Texas at 13,000 feet aboard a Chaparral Airlines flight to Dallas.

By Woody's reckoning, he and Miss Miller became husband and wife somewhere southeast of Moran.

An aviator since 1973 and a Chaparral pilot for three years, the 35-year-old Woody said the flight just "seemed an appropriate way to celebrate" the marriage.

With Justice of the Peace Clarence Collins officiating, Woody and his bride, also 35, exchanged rings in the front of the cabin and pledged to love, honor and forsake all others.

Their fellow passengers, most of whom hadn't expected to witness a wedding, broke into applause when the couple kissed.

Collins, who conducted more than 500 weddings last year, said he had previously married couples in parks, bars, his office and even a creek bed, but "not in an airliner."

The in-flight wedding also was a first for Chaparral, according to public relations manager Julie Fredrick.

The bride walked up the aisle of the 37-passenger Gulfstream turboprop as a recorded version of the wedding march was piped across the public address system.

Pink champagne was served in lieu of the usual coffee and soft drinks, and rice greeted the couple as they stepped off the plane at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport. They planned a short honeymoon in Dallas.

"They say variety is the spice of life," Mrs. Woody said.

Woman begins Mother's Day by giving birth to quadruplets

VICTORIA (AP) — A high school math teacher launched her Mother's Day by giving birth to quadruplets — three girls and one boy ranging in weight from 4 pounds, 6½ ounces, to 3 pounds, 8½ ounces.

The infants, born Sunday, are all doing well and could be released from the De Tar Hospital within 10 days, doctors said.

The mother, Silvia Martin, and her husband Kenneth said they had expected triplets. The infants were born between 7:47 a.m. and 7:50 a.m., and were about six weeks premature.

The Martins also have a 3-year-old daughter, Leslie.

"That is all. No more kids," said Martin, an industrial worker at an Alcoa plant here.

Search for money continues

ORANGE GROVE (AP) — Authorities have arrested four people in connection with the $438,000 kidnapping and robbery of a Laredo bank, but they still haven't found any of the money.

Deputies searched five acres of South Texas farmland this weekend after the latest arrests.

Jim Wells County sheriff's deputies arrested Nathan Lum Elliott, 42, and his son, Nathan Lum Elliott Jr., 19, Saturday about a mile from their mobile home near this town about 30 miles west of Corpus Christi.

They were arrested in connection with the April 21 robbery of the Union National Bank in Laredo. Gunmen took $438,000 from the bank after two men forced their way into the home of bank President Ray Keck and held his family hostage.

Man killed in ultralight crash

MANVEL (AP) — A Pasadena man was killed when the ultralight aircraft he was flying crashed Sunday in a Brazoria County field.

The victim was was identified as William Garner, 30.

Everette Applegate, Manvel emergency medical services director, said a witness reported seeing the craft flying level when it suddenly plunged straight into the ground about 12:50 p.m.

Garner was pronounced dead about 15 minutes after a LifeFlight Helicopter from Houston reached the scene.

Marines give blood to baby awaiting transplant

ABILENE (AP) — Most of them don't have much money to spare, but they wanted to do something to help Ashley Bailey, who clings to life in a Minnesota hospital awaiting a liver transplant.

So seven U.S. Marine reservists from Abilene and the Big Country rolled up their sleeves Saturday and donated pints of blood the 8-month-old Clyde baby.

The child's grandfather, Leo Bailey of Clyde, said the contributions were appreciated. "It touches us deep," he said, "with deep emotion."

The blood donors said they wanted to help one of their own — Ashley's mother, Annette, is a corporal in the Marine Corps Reserves in Abilene.

The reservists went to Meek Community Blood Bank to begin building up replacement credits for Ashley's blood. A blood bank spokesman said blood credits are worth at least $100 a pint and will help defray the child's huge medical expenses.

"Most of the guys don't really make that much money...so this is one way of the guys helping," said Sgt. Steve Price.

"We have more volunteers but most of the unit is away at summer camp. More will be coming in as we can bring them down," said Price, an Abilene police officer.

Price said the reserve unit is also putting out a call for former Marines, other Marines and their families and any other organization in the area to come give to the blood bank in Ashley's name.

Beverly Wyatt, a blood bank technician, said the blood bank will correspond with the Minnesota hospital to ensure the donations are credited to the baby.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, May 10, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Connecticut's first woman Governor Ella Grasso, "Gone With The Wind" producer David O. Selznick and composer-conductor Dimitri Tiomkin were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Fred Astaire, golf's Jimmy Demaret and comic actress Nancy Walker. Bear down at work and you will soon have the financial security you want for your family. A new job or residence is part of the picture as the year draws to a close. Too many questions will anger higher-ups. Discretion is the key to happy romance. Show more initiative at work. Those who need constant supervision will not get ahead.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You reach a settlement with someone and everything looks rosier. Use imagination to make a project more valuable to your employer. Strive for the results you know you are capable of achieving.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friends will be of great help in an employment matter. Travel increases business profits and opens a new romantic avenue. Do not try to push someone influential.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An unpredictable approach provides you with the answers you need to succeed. You feel more in control. Do not chase after a romantic partner who is obviously cool to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Exercise makes you feel and look better. Keep up the good work. Do not put off a youngster who has questions. A great day for introducing a new project or sales campaign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel plays a major role in your success. People at a distance are helpful. Give someone a special treat by taking him to lunch. Profits can be increased if everyone cooperates.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Working on speculation brings future career gains. Good will is easier to obtain than in the past. Do not become extravagant just to impress member of opposite sex.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Expertise shows in higher profits. Be on the lookout for a new business or romantic partner. Private conversations bring good news. Resist the urge to splurge on lavish entertainment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The time is right for mixing business with pleasure. You get wonderful results. Leave work problems at the office. Family members are unlikely to sympathize today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A stubborn individual could turn this into a tension-filled day. Tackle as many projects on your own as possible. Subtlety helps you get things done.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day to contact influential people and make practical financial decisions. The prospects are bright for joint ventures. Romance and speculation require restraint.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Meet your deadlines on time. An older male or authority figure makes tough demands. You pass a test with flying colors! A raise or promotion is in the works.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A meeting or lecture gives you a fresh perspective. You find yourself distracted by a romantic encounter. Take your time when making up your mind about a commitment.

Actress minister's daughter

By ALAN L. GANSBERG
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The film, "The Night They Raided Minsky's" is, in part, the story of a young woman from an intensely religious home who wants to be on stage and accidentally creates the striptease. In fact, throughout film history there have been other lesser epics about minister's daughters who have gone into show business and gone bad.

Crystak Bernard, who plays Marion Cunningham's niece on ABC's "Happy Days," is the daughter of an evangelist and is no stranger to the gospel stage. Yet, this is one actress-singer who is remaining true to her principles while forging ahead with an acting career that can only be described as booming.

"I do have strong religious principles," she said. "I won't do anything with nudity, strong language or sex.

"I was supposed to do a 'Fantasy Island' last year with a love-making montage and they had to change it.

"I could never put myself in that position. It would be like condoning fornication. I'm not saying it's wrong; it's just not for me."

Despite the restrictions and rules she has imposed on herself, Crystal is much in demand in Hollywood, and all after being in town only a little over a year.

The 19-year-old, who got her first taste of performing as a singer at her father's crusades, says she always wanted to be an entertainer. But it took some convincing to get her father to let her stay in California to act and model.

She lives alone — or, rather, with a bird and a rabbit named Chewy — and is a very selective dater. She went to college for one year, and began before her 16th birthday, so dating is not a pastime she has had much experience with.

Performing is. Crystal is trying to get a record deal, and has already performed with Bobbie Gentry in Las Vegas. She's especially excited that the producers of "Happy Days" have decided to let her character sing a bit next season..

"I think K.C. is a little too naive right now," Crystal said. "I'd like to see them expand her, to make her more intelligent. She's got to be her own person."

And that's something Crystal knows firsthand.

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Your trump support is adequate by even the most exacting standards, but that does not mean that you have to raise clubs now. More important is to explore for a possible 4-4 heart fit, which will almost surely be lost if you raise clubs, even by jumping. Bid one heart.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠86 ♡A93 ◇AKQ107 ♣AQ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ◇	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Your side might not have the values for an 11-trick contract, but you could make three no trump if partner has a spade stopper. To probe for the proper contract, you must bring partner into the picture by showing where your stoppers are. Start by bidding three clubs, intending to bid hearts if partner returns to three diamonds. Should partner show a spade stopper or bid no trump somewhere along the line, settle for three no trump. Otherwise, you will have to take your chances at five diamonds.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠875 ♡AK7652 ◇KQ6 ♣3
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—The more partner bid, the less appetizing your hand became. Since you have already rebid your hearts, and the quality of the suit is not good enough to warrant another bid in the suit, you have only one reasonable option—a bid of two no trump.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10752 ♡5 ◇A973 ♣Q874
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—I know many players who would have rebid one spade with your hand, rather than two clubs, but I don't blame you for not wanting to introduce such an anemic suit when you have a weak hand. However, that does not mean that you should now pass. Partner is showing a strong hand with his bidding, and your double fit, two key cards and singleton are enough for one more bid. Raise to three spades.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A873 ♡AQ652 ◇954 ♣4
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Since partner has announced that he is prepared to play in game in your suit opposite what may be as few as 6 points and four low hearts, he must have a very strong hand—at least 19-20 points. Because of that, your hand revalues to 14 points, so a small slam should be certain. Indeed, a grand slam is not out of the question if partner has the right cards. Start with a cue-bid of four spades.

Harvard Pac Man

No less a bastion of culture and scholarship than Harvard University will be host late this month to a conference aimed at determining if video arcade and computer games are really enlightening or just expensive time killers. That Harvard's Graduate School of Education would consent to sponsor such a symposium seems to signify an acceptance, or even embrace, of "Pac Man" as a reputable member of modern society. This thought may even have occurred to the organization funding the project, which just happens to be Atari Inc., the largest manufacturer of video games in the world.

The trouble with this projected three-day meeting seems to be the short range of its goals. A certain number of the participants can be counted on to assert that players of computer games are sharpening their hand-eye coordination and decision-making. Others will contend that the tads who flock to the arcades are only throwing away their quarters and picking up aggressiveness from the militaristic nature of some games. It will be a no-win situation.

It would appear that the psychologists, teachers and others invited to the conference might better occupy themselves in finding the way to bridge a serious division that has occurred in American life. On one side of this chasm stand the computer-lovers. On the other, the computer loathers.

Lovers of computers would like to see a computer in every home to facilitate communication, help the kids with their homework and provide short-cuts to making serious decisions. But, as syndicated columnist Erma Bombeck indicated recently, so many of the computer short-cuts are directed toward decisions that the average person never will have to make anyway.

Some of the enemies of computers who have attempted to use, for example, word processors, have discovered that while the things are unquestionably efficient they get the feeling that control has been wrested from them and that the computer is running THEM.

At the core of this feeling, of course, is the computer's calm logic. It solves problems quickly and with cold reasoning, canceling out such human flaws as prejudice and emotionalism. That, to computer haters, is the real horror.

So it is to be hoped that the Harvard conferees can put aside Pac Man and Donkey Kong long enough to give this cultural gap some attention.

Another View:

Bridging income gap

Is the industrial heartland of the country, from the steel towns of Pennsylvania across the Great Lakes states, now becoming the nation's poorhouse? Are the big cities of the Northeast now the places most in need of federal help and assistance? Not quite, in either case, and probably not ever.

Per capita incomes in the major industrial states, according to the Commerce Department's recently released figures for 1982, cluster around the national average. And increases in incomes in the northeastern states in 1981-82 were well above average. Nationally, per capita income rose 5.3 percent, just under the inflation rate, but in 14 states it rose more than inflation, and nine of these states were in the Northeast.

To understand why people and politicians in the industrial and northeastern states feel they've fallen behind, you have to take a longer historical view. The industrial states' income levels cluster around the national average now because wages there, for people who have jobs, tend to be well above the national average, but fewer people have jobs than had them last year or the year before.

Back in 1940 Illinois' income level was 27 percent above the national average, Michigan's 14 percent above, Ohio's 11 percent. In 1982 Illinois was only 10 percent above the national average, Michigan even with that figure and Ohio 2 percent below it. Texas, in contrast, had an income level 27 percent below the national average in 1940, but it was 3 percent above in 1982. Back in 1940 Mississippi's income levels were one-fourth those in New York. In 1982 Mississippi still ranked last among states, but its incomes were five-eighths those in New York.

That change in relative position stands for a vast change in standard of living. The United States in the New Deal years was almost two countries: a large part of the nation was a kind of underdeveloped country, where subsistence farming and trade by barter were important. Now Mississippi and New York are recognizably part of the same nation.

There are, naturally, consequences here for public policy. The large northeastern and industrial states are having a hard time supporting the public spending programs they initiated when they were far richer than the rest of the nation.

There may be less reason now than there once was for federal programs that, in effect, distribute revenues from rich states like New York to poor states like Mississippi. In practice, the strife over distribution formulas gets more intense: historically rich states suddenly feel needy, while historically poor states are in no mood to relinquish what they're used to.

What we need to keep in mind, as we listen to these acrimonious debates, is that they signal not the failure of those federal programs, but their success. The industrial and northeastern states have some real problems. But their relative decline is exactly that. It's one result of a benign trend: the nationalization of affluence.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Demo names deleted from report

WASHINGTON — Let some obstructionist withhold information from Congress and there will be a great bellyaching from outraged members. But all is quiet on Capitol Hill when information is suppressed by Congress's own functionaries.

Jack Anderson

The House Intelligence Committee, for example, recently raised a huge hullabaloo over alleged Soviet influence in the U.S. peace movement. But the documents the committee released left out some key passages.

The deleted portions mentioned 13 House Democrats who were involved, one way or another, in conferences the FBI thought were manipulated from afar by the Kremlin.

No one would seriously suggest that they would willingly do the Soviets' dirty work. The reason for suppressing the material obviously was to spare the House members possible embarrassment.

The withheld material should have appeared last December in the committee's report, "Soviet Active Measures." The report has been used repeatedly as evidence of President Reagan's claim that the Russians have been manipulating the nuclear freeze movement.

The censored documents fall short of making the president's case. One of them, prepared by the World Peace Council, reviewed a "Dialogue on Disarmament and Detente" that it held in Washington. The council is described by the FBI as "the largest and most active Soviet front organization ... one of the major Soviet instruments for political action in the peace movement."

The committee excised 14 of the document's 47 pages.

The other material was a report, prepared by a coalition of groups that sponsored an anti-apartheid conference at Riverside Church in New York City. The G-men cited the conference as another example of Soviet machinations.

The Intelligence Committee lopped 60 pages out of that report before making it public.

In both cases, the deleted material contained references to the participation or sponsorship in the events by one or more of the 13 House members.

My associates Tony Capaccio and Jack Mitchell obtained copies of the two complete documents. The controversial material was brought to their attention by John Barron, a senior editor of Reader's Digest, who is working on a new book about the Soviet KGB.

For the record, here are the baker's dozen: Reps. Ronald Dellums, Calif.; Ted Weiss, N.Y.; John Conyers, Mich.; Don Edwards, Calif.; Charles Rangel, N.Y.; George Crockett, Mich.; Parren Mitchell, Md.; Gus Savage, Ill.; Mervyn Dymally, Calif.; Walter Fauntroy, D.C.; and ex-Reps. John Burton, Calif.; Shirley Chisholm, N.Y.; and Harold Washington, Ill.(now mayor of Chicago).

A member of the Intelligence Committee said the decision to withhold the material was made by the chairman, Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., but added that "no one on the committee was very upset about not naming members."

Footnote: Those of the 13 who returned our calls said they hadn't known about the deletion of their names. Edwards speculated that Intelligence Committee members "were afraid to call me because I would have said they had been acting like the old House Un-American Activities Committee."

BETTER LATE: The Securities and Exchange Commission is no Sleeping Beauty, but my April 14 report on energy stock fraud seems to have awakened the agency from an 18-month slumber.

The gist of my report was that unwary investors had lost thousands of dollars in oil company stocks, not because of the ups and downs of the market but because of fraudulent claims by company officials that artificially inflated the prices of stocks. I documented the suspicious manipulations of one company in particular — New Frontier Petroleum, formed two years ago by the merger of four Canadian-based petroleum development companies. Insiders made a bundle, while ordinary investors lost their shirts.

Since the column appeared, my sources tell me, SEC investigators have been reviewing the evidence I presented. The SEC, which had known about the controversial transactions for 18 months, had no official comment on the sudden interest in the case.

UNDER THE DOME: Hungarian-born Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., is an old-fashioned family man with four grandchildren living in Colorado. He has worked out a way to make sure they get a proper share of grandparental coddling. With split-second timing, his daughter brings one of her children to the airport, where Grandpa picks him or her up for the trip to Washington. After a few weeks' spoiling by Lantos and his wife, the child is delivered back home on the congressman's next trip West.

WHO INVITED HIM?: Seated in the same row as White House officials at President Reagan's recent speech to Congress was a once-familiar Washington figure: Roy Cohn, chief counsel for the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy. Cohn wouldn't say how he got the coveted ticket. On the White House seating chart, his place said simply, "Speaker's Guest." House Speaker Tip O'Neill's office denied that he was the "Speaker" referred to.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan listening to security chief

WASHINGTON — National security adviser William P. Clark scored an important but subtle point against his White House detractors when President Reagan overruled them by visiting the Vietnam Memorial May 1.

Rowland Evans

That reversed the president's earlier decision, at the time the black granite memorial was dedicated, not to make a personal appearance. His domestic aides, headed by chief of staff James Baker and deputy chief Michael Deaver, thought associating Reagan with Vietnam could hurt him politically.

Robert Novak

Clark, who did not go to the mat with Baker and Deaver on that occasion, was privately appalled. When he recently suggested that the president should pay his respects, Reagan immediately agreed. Reagan's switch was an intentional signal that he is now listening to Clark on such matters more than his other advisers (even though the ubiquitous Baker was at Reagan's side at the memorial).

WHITHER WATT?

Senior presidential aides who never have given up hope that James Watt will be gone from the Interior Department by the time of the 1984 campaign still hope he will be eased out — by his own conscience.

Secretary Watt has said many times he would leave whenever he feels he has become a political liability to the president. Reagan aides believe polling evidence is so strong that Watt may come to that decision within the next three months. Nevertheless, the secretary says he as yet sees no evidence that he is a net liability.

A footnote: Secretary of Labor Ray Donovan, on the other hand, seems a fixture through the four-year Reagan term. The attacks on him have eased, and he shows no desire to go home to New Jersey.

AN MX SWITCH

Liberal Democrats are counting on an unlikely ally against the MX missile: retired admiral Stansfield Turner, the former CIA director.

Turner was among former Carter administration officials who on May 3 briefed a select group of Democratic senators on the MX. But Turner, clearly pleasing Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and other anti-MX senators present, argued forcefully and emotionally against the Reagan plan.

When he served as Jimmy Carter's CIA director, Turner backed the MX deployment scheme. Pro-defense and pro-MX Democrats trying to bolster Reagan's chances to get the 10-warhead missile approved are surprised at Turner's vehemence in opposing the missile now, even though its deployment is very different from the Carter plan.

CAP AND THE PRINCE

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has scheduled a hush-hush session in Paris with Saudi Arabian Prince Sultan, the political leader in Riyadh closest to King Fahd.

News of the meeting is sure to produce a new wave of attacks on Weinberger by pro-Israeli Americans who claim the secretary spends too much time scratching Arab backs.

Weinberger and Sultan have important subjects to discuss, including Saudi support in the U.S. effort to get Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon. The meeting was scheduled for Paris because Prince Sultan, Saudi Arabia's defense minister, will be there for talks with French president Francois Mitterrand and Weinberger for discussions with NATO allies.

A CHANGED DOLE?

The reason the special Senate Republican task force on the budget finally came up with a budget calling for no new taxes was help from an unexpected source: Sen. Robert Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Dole, architect of last year's massive $100 billion tax increase, usually cannot contain himself from sarcastic cracks about tax-cutting supply-siders. But on the task force, he allied himself with beleaguered supply-siders William Roth of Delaware and Mack Mattingly of Georgia. The result was acceptance by Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici of a two-year budget with virtually no tax boosts.

Dole also has flashed a red light on House Democratic plans to increase estate taxes. He has made clear any such boost will be a waste of time because it will die in the Senate.

CHARLEY REESE

It's sure bet U.S. will die

If I had to bet on the outcome of the contest between the Soviet Union and the United States, I'd have to bet against my heart and put my money on the Soviet dogs.

Charley Reese

The Soviet Union is a lousy country, run by thugs, which cannot feed its own people and which practices, out of necessity, the most cruel and total repression of human rights. For all that, it has some critical advantages over the United States.

First, the Soviet Union recognizes that it is in a war with the United States. It knows exactly what it wants to accomplish. Many Americans choose not to recognize the intensity of the contest because it makes them uncomfortable and the government hasn't the foggiest plan of action.

That, more than almost anything else, gives the Soviet Union a decisive edge. Too many Americans want to stay free on the cheap with no discomfort and inconvenience and, God knows, no personal sacrifice. For that reason, we invariably fail to take advantage of Soviet mistakes.

The Soviet Union made a mistake when it sent troops into Afghanistan, but all we've done to make them pay a price for it is boycott the Olympic Games. The Soviets make no bones about openly supporting and arming guerrilla movements wherever it suits their purposes. We are afraid to publicly arm the Afghan resistance fighters and to the best of my knowledge, are not arming them clandestinely.

In case after case, beginning with the Berlin blockade which we should have knocked down with tanks instead of evading the issue by flying over it, we have demonstrated to the Soviets that even when we have overwhelming power advantages, we lack the will to use them.

That's why there are more communist dictatorships in the world today and fewer democracies, and, so far as I can see, that trend will continue until we ourselves join the list of once-free nations.

Gross national product, inflated by lipsticks, beer and underarm deodorants, doesn't mean doodley-squat in terms of national power. What counts is heavy industry and the percentage of GNP devoted to armaments. We're spending about 5 percent of our GNP on defense, and even at that rate the Congress and the liberals are complaining like a bunch of spoiled teenagers.

We don't have a military draft because it is politically unpopular. So we hire slum kids to man the defense. To cover the inflated cost of a mercenary army, we chisel the same army on spare parts, ammunition and training. So far the only combat mission the all-volunteer forces have been given was the rescue of the Iranian hostages. I think that gives you a good indication of how well it works.

The Congress spends a lot of time attacking our defense department, our intelligence agencies, our FBI, and our allies. The Congress betrayed South Vietnam by declining to enforce the peace treaty we had signed; when the Soviets intervened on the side of the Marxist faction in Angola, the Congress hastily cut off support to the non-Marxist faction. Incidentally, the same liberals in Congress who are demanding that El Salvador share power with Marxist guerrillas have never demanded that the Marxist government in Angola share power with Dr. Jonas Savimba's forces, who control nearly half of the country.

Now we have the White House timidly trying to cover up Soviet violations of Salt II, a bad treaty we never ratified but one which is now being studiously observed by the same politician who called it "fatally flawed."

If we stand for anything, other than greater profits for some multinational corporations, I don't know what it is. We get in bed with any regime where there's bucks to be made and we callously turn our backs on little countries whch are free, but not especially profitable.

The image we present is of a rich enfeebled man, fearfully clutching his possessions and trying to bribe the barbarian to leave him alone. The fate of such creatures is always the same — death.

Unconsious person not guilty under state law

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A person unconscious during the commission of a crime cannot be considered guilty under state law, a judge has instructed the jury in the murder trial of four Everett policemen charged in a motel brawl.

Superior Court Judge Robert Barton told the jurors to consider the physical and mental state of defendant Sgt. John McLeod, who is charged with murder and assault in the melee that left seven people injured in a room over the bar at King Arthur's Motel and Lounge on July 23, 1982. One of the injured men, Vincent J. Bordonaro, 54, died a week later of head wounds.

McLeod has testified he has no recollection of his actions at the time of the melee.

Also facing charges of murder and assault are officers John Macauda, Richard Aiello and William McClusky.

Chelsea Patrolman Michael Nadworny is charged with assault and violations of civil rights.

The jury, which was to reconvene at 10 a.m. EDT today, must decide whether the officers were bent on revenge or were performing their duty when they battered down a motel door to subdue the men who had allegedly attacked McLeod.

The seven-man, five-woman jury recessed for the day Sunday after deliberating for nearly five hours Friday and six hours Saturday.

Assistant District Attorney Daniel Mullane said in closing arguments that police officers were handing out "street justice" for the beating of McLeod, who was off-duty at the time and had been drinking after hours at the motel bar.

Bill makes tampering with consumer products a crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation making it a federal crime to tamper with consumer products, prompted by last year's Tylenol-cyanide deaths, is headed toward expected easy House passage.

The bill, the major item on today's House agenda, calls for up to life imprisonment for anyone convicted of "maliciously tampering with consumer products" in a manner that could result in injury or death.

Sponsored by the crime subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee, the legislation would apply to all foods and drugs. Seven people died last year in the Chicago area when they swallowed Tylenol that had been laced with cyanide.

Approval by the House would send the proposal to the Senate.

Meanwhile, a Senate vote could come as early as today on President Reagan's nomination of William D. Ruckelshaus to become the next chief of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Senate confirmation is a virtual certainty.

Ruckelshaus, who won the approval of the Senate Environment Committee in a 16-0 vote last week, will replace former Administrator Anne M. Burford, who resigned in the midst of a half dozen congressional investigations into the agency.

The Senate will probably have to interrupt its consideration of the fiscal 1984 budget to handle the Ruckelshaus nomination.

The budget itself is expected to dominate Senate debate for most of the week. Republican leaders are hunting for the votes they need to pass a low-tax, high-deficit budget plan for 1984 and beyond.

"We don't have sufficient votes to pass it yet," Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, conceded late last week as he formally introduced the proposal, which has the support of Reagan and most Senate GOP conservatives but is opposed by a handful of party moderates.

Democrats nominally are backing a plan that provides more than $120 billion in tax increases over three years and has lower deficits than the Republican plan. But Democratic budget leaders have invited Republicans to begin talks on a bipartisan budget.

In other congressional action, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, continuing work on the foreign aid bill, is scheduled to consider the Reagan administration's request for a $50 million supplemental appropriation for military assistance to El Salvador in the current fiscal year. This would be on top of $26.3 million already approved.

Sens. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., are expected to offer an amendment reducing the amount to $23.7 million, with an additional $50 million in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The amendment calls for the United States to seek a political settlement of the civil war in the Central American country.

In the House, a vote is expected midweek on a bill to provide $769 million to help people facing mortgage foreclosures hold onto their homes. The controversial bill has been before the House for several weeks, with opponents claiming it is not needed in an economy that is rebounding. The administration actively opposes the measure.

Council refuses mayor's compromise

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Harold Washington's latest proposal to negotiate an agreement in a power stuggle with 29 dissident aldermen is illegal, a member of the opposition in City Council says.

The mayor sent telegrams Sunday to all 50 aldermen suggesting that two negotiating teams — each with seven members — meet and reach an agreement before the next official council meeting Wednesday.

"I hope we can resolve this for the good of the city," Washington said in the messages.

"He better go back to the (law) books," Alderman Edward Burke responded. The proposed negotiating session would be a "violation of the Illinois Open Meetings Act" if the caucus consisted of more than 13 aldermen, Burke said.

Burke added, however, that he was pleased Washington has "now chosen Western Union to deliver his messages in the daylight hours."

The remark referred to Washington's sending police officers to the homes of all the aldermen at midnight Thursday to deliver letters and legal opinions asserting that the council's May 2 meeting assigning committee chairmanships had been illegal.

The verbal brawl between the mayor and the dissident aldermen — who had opposed Washington's election as the city's first black chief executive — could enter a third round Wednesday, when both sides agree the Municipal Code calls for a lawful meeting.

The new mayor was outscored in the first two rounds after trying unsuccessfully to adjourn what he considered to be illegal council meetings.

Alderman Edward Vrdolyak used his rebel majority of 29 against Washington's 21 to assign key committee chairmanships at the May 2 meeting. Then, in a raucous council session Saturday, Vrdolyak's forces voted to officially approve the minutes of Monday's meeting, which amounted to ratification of the committee slates and council rules they had passed.

In effect, that gave them control of the council.

Vrdolyak brushed aside talk this weekend of compromise on committee assignments, noting that just as the president does not "organize" Congress nor the governor the Illinois General Assembly, the mayor does not "organize" the council.

"I'd like to know what (Washington) objects to," Burke said Sunday. He said he had spoken with some other members of the "Vrdolyak 29" and found "they're strong and they're resolved, (but) they're not obstructionists."

Reagan pays tribute to Ashbrook

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — After a quiet weekend at his ranch, President Reagan is flying to Ashland, Ohio, to pay tribute to the late Rep. John Ashbrook and the conservative philosophy he embodied.

Although there is no sign that Reagan intends to announce re-election plans anytime soon, the president was ending his five-day journey as it began: spending his time with special interest groups whose support he would need in 1984.

Reagan, who left the White House on Thursday for politicking with Hispanics in San Antonio, Texas, was returning to Washington late tonight after a 3½-hour stop in Ashland. He was to speak at a memorial dinner honoring Ashbrook, a Republican member of the House from Ohio from 1960 until his death.

Ashbrook, a staunch conservative and Reagan supporter, died in April 1982 during his campaign for the U.S. Senate.

The president and his wife, Nancy, were attending closed receptions for major donors to the Ashbrook Center for Public Affairs and for Ohio Republican leaders, followed by the formal dinner.

The public affairs center that bears his name at Ashland College in rural Ohio is designed to expose students to conservative philosophy, economics and politics. In addition, the school's library was renamed in Ashbrook's honor.

The library will house 700 crates of personal documents Ashbrook left to the college, which has about 1,600 full-time students.

Reagan arrived at his ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains, overlooking the Pacific Ocean, last Friday night after reiterating his opposition to gun control in a speech to the National Rifle Association in Phoenix.

Although some of the events on this trip have had the trappings of campaign appearances, the president told a Texas radio station that he and his wife had not discussed whether he would run for a second term.

Nearly all of Reagan's aides say they believe he will, however. Presidential counsellor Edwin Meese said in London on Thursday that "I would anticipate that he probably will run again." Vice President George Bush echoed that this weekend. Meese said he expects Reagan to decide by early fall.

Reagan visited his 688-acre ranch in March and again in April, and he plans to return in July and August.

Reforms, prestige face tough test

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Prime Minister P.W. Botha puts his fledgling racial reforms and political prestige on the line Tuesday in special parliamentary elections against ultra-rightists.

The voting comes less than a week after Botha's ruling National Party introduced legislation to replace the country's whites-only national Parliament with a tri-cameral assembly including Indians and people of mixed race.

But the power would rest with a president's council in which whites would have a controlling majority because their population outnumbers Asian and mixed-race groups.

The reforms also provide no political role for the country's black majority, but they nonetheless have drawn intense opposition from white supremacist parties. The three by-elections Tuesday, in which only whites can vote, are viewed as a test of public opinion on the proposed legislation.

Patronage and the Nationals' political machine appear to give them an edge, but there have been few reliable polls and observers say the elections are too close to call.

Botha, campaigning aggressively against the white supremacists, ended his party's campaign in perhaps the most conservative town in the country, Ellisras.

There Botha stressed his theme that South Africa faced a coordinated, Communist-led drive to destroy the white-minority government.

He asked, "Is this a time to drive other groups to anger? Is this a time to accuse people such as the coloreds (the mixed-race group) that they are a fifth column and not to be trusted ... If you do this what will you be doing? You will be chasing them into the hands of the enemy."

Andries Treurnicht, a former Cabinet minister who split from the Nationalists to form the white supremacist Conservative Party, ended his campaign in the Waterberg district mining town of Thabazimbi. He warned voters that sharing power with coloreds and Indians — whom he calls "aliens" — would turn South Africa into a second Lebanon as rival factions fought for power.

Besides Waterberg, the elections are being held in two other Transvaal Province districts — Soutspanberg and Waterkloof.

In the Zimbabwe frontier district of Soutspanberg, Botha's senior Cabinet minister, Fanie Botha — no relation to the prime minister — offered to resign his seat and seek re-election if Treurnicht dared to do the same.

The challenge was accepted and Fanie Botha, architect of labor reforms that have given trade union rights to the black majority, faces Conservative M.P. Tom Langley.

In Waterberg, Treurnicht faces a two-way challenge from Nationalist Eben Cuyler and Jaap Marais, leader of the ultra-rightist Herstigte National Party.

In the Pretoria suburb of Waterkloof, Nationalist candidate Org Marais faces his main challenge from the opposite direction, the Progressive Federal Party and its candidate Tertius Spies. The PFP is the main white party opposed to apartheid.

The Nationalists now hold 123 of the 166 seats in Parliament, more than the two-thirds needed to rewrite the constitution. But political insiders say party leaders fear a flood of defections to the right, threatening the Nationalists 35-year grip on power, if they should lose Waterberg and Soutspanberg.

Plan outlined for 21st century

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone today outlined a plan for increased cooperation between Japan and its non-Communist neighbors in Southeast Asia.

Naksone called the plan a "friendship program for the 21st century" and said it would be "a step toward realizing my long-cherished dream: Asia in the forefront of the future."

A major part of the plan calls for Japan to share its scientific and technological expertise with the members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

Nakasone visited all of the ASEAN countries — Thailand, Indonesia, Singapore, the Philippines and Malaysia — during his nearly comlpeted 10-day visit to the region.

Iran acquires shah's property

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Iranian government says it has acquired millions of dollars in foreign property owned by the family of the late shah, including luxury cars, a villa in the Alps, and an English stable.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said Iran obtained the property through court orders against the shah's family in the United States and Europe.

Relatives of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi sued by Iran include his three sisters, his wife, a son, and his late mother. Iran's lawyers are suing the sisters for $45 billion and suing the U.S. government for $10 billion, the agency said.

The shah, a U.S. ally, was ousted by Islamic militant followers of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in 1979. He died of cancer in his exile home in Egypt in 1980.

Runway placed on racetrack

MALLOW, Ireland (AP) — A construction crew is laying a 3,000-foot runway on an racetrack in County Cork so a Mexican jet that made an emergency landing there last month can take off.

The executive jet landed on Mallow racetrack three weeks ago carrying eight Mexican businessmen from New Jersey to West Germany. It was unable to land at Shannon international airport because of fog and did not have enough fuel to reach the nearest alternative at Cork city.

The pilot touched down within feet of the track railings, but the plane suffered only minor damage and none of the passengers was hurt.The jet has been stranded since then because the turf track is too soft for take-off.

Racetrack officials said it was not yet known when the runway will be completed.The $221,000 bill for the strip will be paid by Lloyds of London, which insured the jet.

Militant rightist group arrested

PARIS (AP) — Fifty-four people described by police as militant rightists were arrested after several were found carrying tear gas, brass knuckles and toy guns during an armistice ceremony attended by President Francois Mitterrand.

Officials said police would file charges against 12 of those arrested and that they were questioning the others.Police said they believed those arrested were members of the right-wing extremist National Front or the monarchist National Restoration group.

The arrests were made Sunday near the Arc de Triomphe during a ceremony marking the 38th anniversary of the 1945 World War II armistice.

The Socialist president and several high-ranking government officials were under the monument's marble portals when the arrests were made.None of those arrested came in contact with the officials, and the ceremony was not interrupted.

Police find gold, silver bars

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Police using radar today found 12 bars of gold and silver in a concealed cellar in the home of a man currently jailed for robbing the Perth mint.

Sgt. Don Hancock, who led the search, said he did not think the bullion was part of the $546,550 haul for which Ray Mickelberg and his two brothers are serving long prison terms..

Police continued their radar search over the concrete floor of the cellar but would not say whether they expected to find the haul from the mint.

Pope to meet conventioneers

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Three and a half centuries after an Inquisition court tried Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei, a delegation of scientists has been invited to the Vatican to exchange views on the case with Pope John Paul II.

A Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Pierfranco Pastore, announced Sunday that the pope will meet in an audience today with representatives from the international "Science for Peace" group which has organized an academic convention in Rome this week on the theme "Galileo and his Science Today."

MC shoots for net gold

OCALA, Fla. — Midland College begins its assault on the National Junior College Women's Athletic Association tennis title here Tuesday, storming into the four-day tournament with a record of 48-0.

"We should be competitive," says Dr. Leon Dulin, who hopes to corral a big one in his final days as Chaparrals' coach. "Three of our players were in the nationals last year and know what it takes to win. And our three freshmen have shown then can play at this level."

MC finished fifth last year, but won NJCAA titles in 1975, 1976 and 1981 and were runnersup in 1977 and 1978.

Leading MC is Liz Alvarado, Odessa sophomore, who is WJCC and Region V singles champion. She teams with Lynda Bryant, LaPorte, in doubles. The pair reached the Region V semifinals before losing.

Kym Somerville, Toronto, reached the No. 2 singles regional semis, but was hampered by a sprained ankle. Jodi Wertenberger, Macon, Ga., won the No. 3 WJCC and Region V singles and teamed up with sister Jill, No. 3 ranked singles player in Georgia, to win the No. 2 WJCC and Region V doubles. Jill joined the team at mid-term. She has been taking one class at Midland Lee to complete her requirements.

Therese Devine, Toronto, won Region V No. 4 singles after joining the Chaps at midterm as a transfer from North Texas State. She is the No. 1 ranked women's player in Toronto.

For good reason, Dulin comments, "We have the quality and experience to do well in nationals." He cautions, however, "There are a lot of good teams in the nation this year. Tyler and Kilgore are strong and the Florida schools are always strong."

Alvarado will be seeking national tennis honors to go with the national professional racquetball titles she has one.

San Antonio's Artis Gilmore (53) goes up to block a shot by Los Angeles' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in NBA playoff action Sunday. Gilmore committed his sixth foul in the process and the Lakers beat the Spurs 119-107. Jabbar had 30 points to Gilmore's seven points.

Jabbar wins battle with Gilmore

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Even though he stands 7-foot-2 and weighs 260 pounds, Artis Gilmore was all never a factor in the opener of the National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series.

And mainly because he was, the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers got the jump on the San Antonio Spurs.

Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar easily won the battle of the big men Sunday, scoring 30 points, grabbing eight rebounds and blocking three shots as the Lakers whipped the Spurs 119-107.

GAME TWO in the best-of-seven series will be played at the Forum Tuesday night before the action switches to San Antonio for the third and fourth games next Friday night and Sunday afternoon, respectively.

"Kareem had his way today and obviously it was a little frustrating for me," said Gilmore, who scored seven points, pulled down six rebounds and blocked four shots before fouling out with 5:18 to play. "We're just gonna have to play harder, that's all."

The Spurs, who were swept in four games by the Lakers in last spring's Western Conference championship series, acquired Gilmore during the off-season to keep the Lakers from dominating them in the middle.

It worked well for the Spurs during the regular season as San Antonio won four of its five games against Los Angeles. But it was no contest Sunday.

"He's proved in the past, and in the playoffs, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is the greatest center ever to play the game," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley. "It was an exceptional basketball game. We had spurts on defense in the second half and that really turned the game around."

THE LAKERS took command by outscoring the Spurs 22-6 over a span of 6:24 late in the third quarter and early in the fourth. That turned an 81-78 San Antonio advantage into a 100-87 Los Angeles lead with 7:40 remaining and the margin was at least seven points the rest of the way.

"In recent memory, this was one of my more successful games against Artis," said Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers' 36-year-old team captain. "But it was only one game and I'm sure he will be heard from before this series is over."

Because of his foul problems, Gilmore was limited to 32 minutes of action while Abdul-Jabbar played all but four minutes.

"Kareem was sensational, there is no question he won the duel (against Gilmore) today," said San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck. "Our inability to do a good job on (Norm) Nixon, (Jamaal) Wilkes and Kareem hurt us.

"You will see a better team on Tuesday. We are confident we can win one here. It is going to be a physical and aggressive series and they won round one."

Albeck wasn't around to see the end of it. He was hit by a pair of technical fouls, which means automatic ejection. The second technical was called with 3:53 remaining and the Spurs trailing 106-99.

NIXON HAD 30 points and eight assists while Wilkes added 20 points and grabbed eight rebounds for the Lakers. Earvin "Magic" Johnson contributed 15 points and 12 assists for Los Angeles.

"I feel good for everyone on the team that we won this one," said Wilkes. "The first one is always the big one. They not only beat us during the regular season, but they beat us darn good."

Mike Mitchell led San Antonio with 26 points and seven rebounds. Johnny Moore added 25 points and was credited with a game-high 18 assists and George Gervin had 24 points and a game-high nine rebounds for the Spurs.

Bob McAdoo, who has the fourth-highest playoff scoring average in NBA history behind Gervin, Abdul-Jabbar and Jerry West, the Lakers' general manager, made his first appearance for Los Angeles since dislocating the fourth toe on his right foot in practice last Feb. 16.

Rutherford escapes crash

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Johnny Rutherford, a three-time winner here, severely damaged his race car Sunday but escaped serious injury when he smashed his new Wildcat racer into the wall of the first turn at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway during practice for the May 29 Indianapolis 500.

Rutherford was first taken to the track hospital and then transported to Indianapolis Methodist Hospital where he was treated and released. Track officials reported Rutherford had a bruised left ankle and heel and a puncture wound to his leg.

HE RETURNED to the Speedway less than three hours after the accident and said he received five stitches in his right leg.

"I hit the wall a ... ton," said Rutherford, adding that he didn't know what caused the accident.

Rutherford said he thought he could resume driving as soon as the team could prepare another car. However, track officials said he was not immediately released to drive.

Meanwhile, the Roger Penske team showed it is once again the team to catch in the race for speed at the 2½-mile oval. Rick Mears, the holder of the official and unofficial track marks was clocked at 202.565 with his teammate Al Unser the second quickest at 198.063 with his son Al Junior taking third place honors at 197.411.

RUTHERFORD, seeking his 20th start here, had taken only a few laps when he lost control of his car and got high on the bank going into the first turn. He was able to free himself from the wreckage of the Pat Patrick car, which had been spread along the more than 1,500 feet the car traveled before coming to a stop.

Rutherford slid 660 feet and did a half spin before hitting the wall. His car slid along the wall for 460 feet and then slid away another 420 feet before coming to a halt in the infield grass.

The accident came during a busy second day of practice in which 35 cars went out. Mears recorded the quick lap in his new Penske PC-11 shortly after the track reopened following the cleanup of the many pieces of Rutherford's car left on the track. Mears, 31, had been consistently topping 190 mph all day in both his primary and backup cars.

Rick's brother, 37-year-old Roger, also was among the day's speedy drivers in his 1982 Penske. Roger was timed at 197.281.

More than a dozen other drivers topped 190. Al Sr., who like Rutherford has three victories here, moved into the runner-up spot with his final lap of the day just before the 6 p.m. closing.

"We're going in the right direction," said the elder Unser, who earlier in the day was able to congratulate his son for passing his rookie test at the Speedway. "We're not ready to qualify yet. At least I'm not ready," said Al, who will be 44 on the day of this year's race.

Bench sitter beats Bucks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Clint Richardson shook his head in disbelief.

"Never in my life have I scored all the points in an overtime period," the three-year pro from Seattle said.

The 6-foot-3 Richardson scored all seven of Philadelphia's points Sunday in overtime as the 76ers beat the Milwaukee Bucks 111-109 in the first of their best-of-seven series for the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference championship.

The second game will be played Wednesday, then the action shifts to Milwaukee for the weekend.

The winner will face the Western Conference champions for the NBA title. The Los Angeles Lakers beat the San Antonio Spurs 119-107 Sunday in the first game of that series.

Guard Maurice Cheeks led the 76ers' scoring with 26 points, and gimpy Andrew Toney scored 22. But Richardson was the star of the game and even overshadowed Marques Johnson, who topped all scorers with 30 for the Bucks.

The 76ers led in the second period by 16 points, but Milwaukee rallied to trail by just two at halftime, 59-57, with Johnson scoring the last 12 points in the comeback.

The Bucks got ahead for the first time at 90-89 when Johnson completed a 7-0 fourth-period spurt. The 76ers went ahead again on a driving shot by Toney, but the score was tied four times, ending in regulation at 104-104 after a short hook by Milwaukee's Junior Bridgeman.

In the overtime, Richardson tied the score at 106, and after Milwaukee went ahead 109-106 with 2:14 left, he made two free throws and the winning basket.

Richardson gave Bobby Jones credit for the game winner.

"I got a good pass from Bobby, and I said to myself, 'Nobody is going to block this shot.'"

The play began with Jones stealing the inbounds pass by Milwaukee's Alan Lister after Richardson's two free throws. Jones flipped the ball to Richardson, who leaped and dunked it to give the 76ers a 110-109 lead.

Richardson scored the final point on a free throw with nine seconds left.

Richardson said he wasn't looking to score during the overtime.

"My philosophy in a situation like that is play good defense and keep the other team from scoring," he said.

Milwaukee still had another chance. With two seconds left, Brian Winters launched a three-point shot that bounced off the front of the rim, after Johnson had missed two free throws with 26 seconds to go.

"I was worried on that last shot (by Winters)," Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said.

"It looked straight as an arrow to me."

Midland's Zachry faces dilemma

After making all-Southwest Conference for the third year, Midland's Jimmy Zachry is faced with a dilemma.

Does he turn pro or does he return for his final year at Texas Tech?

It all depends on next month's free agent draft. If Jimmy goes high and gets a good offer, baseball may be a temptation, although he really wants to get his degree in mechanical engineering.

Although Tech didn't reach the SWC tournament Four, Zachry batted .325 and set three Tech career records for home runs...most in SWC, 9; most in a season, 13; and most in a career, 24. He also tied the Tech career mark for rbi, 129...

I'M NOT sure how I managed it, but I think I gave Fred Turner the Kentucky Derby winner that Willie Shoemaker failed to give him, by swapping Tomy Lee to Ralph Lowe for Gallant Man in a column last Friday.

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Tomy Lee, who finished second in the Kentucky Derby when Shoemaker mistook the 16th pole for the finish, was owned by Fred.

Tomy Lee went on to win the Belmont two weeks later. Then, two years later in 1959, Gallant Man won the Derby for Ralph Lowe.

As for last week's Derby, Midland-owned Marfa's finishing kick came up short, and it's little wonder. Marfa had an outside position and when the horses broke, it looked like the start of the Boston Marathon, where it sometimes takes eight minutes for some of the runners to reach the starting line. And all that flying mud.

All the race lacked was Kipling to put it to verse...

Anthony "Spud" Webb, Midland College's 5-6 All-America, will be just another guard in the Atlantic Coast Conference next season for defending NCAA champion North Carolina State. Wake Forest, it seems, has signed a 5-3 guard. He's gotta be good, but I'll bet he can't dunk...

THINGS WERE so bad for El Paso Manager Tony Muser after that deluge of runs last week that left his pitching staff a shambles, he was on the verge of asking pitching coach Wayne Garland to volunteer. Garland, of course, had retired after last season following several seasons of arm miseries...

During that 20-19 game Thursday night, 11 straight El Paso batters had reached first in the second inning, 10 of them on base hits, when Diablos catcher Kurt Kingolver was called out on strikes. He immediately launched a tirade on plate umpire Kip Arnold's eyesight.

On a night when the wind was carrying fly balls out of the park and grounders were bouncing through the infield for hits, Kurt's anger was probably a cover up in hopes that Muser wouldn't fine him for not taking the bat off his shoulder...

Shortstop Bruce Chaney, whose two-run homer in the 10th gave Midland an 8-7 win over El Paso Friday, and Bill Hinrichs, who served up the pitch, probably aren't speaking, anymore. That's too bad, because they were once such good friends. In fact, Hinrichs was the best man and Chaney's wedding...

Texas Ranger Bucky Dent scores as Milwaukee catcher Ned Yost (5) has trouble coming up with the ball Sunday, but Texas lost the game 6-3 in the bottom of the ninth on a homer by Robin Yount.

Yount calls on memory

By The Associated Press

Odell Jones remembered the pitch he used to strike out Robin Yount. The trouble was, Yount remembered it, too.

"Jones struck me out on a fastball on the outside part of the plate the other night," Yount said, recalling an embarrassing, bases-loaded strikeout Friday night against the Texas Rangers.

The Milwaukee shortstop didn't let it happen again, though. Faced with another crucial situation, Yount belted a three-run homer this time against the Texas reliever with one out in the ninth inning Sunday to give the Brewers a 6-3 victory.

"You've got to look for his fastball because that's his strength," Yount said. "This time he threw me a fastball inside. I was fortunate to get the bat around quick enough to hit it."

Jones, of course, was looking to duplicate Friday night's result — or at least keep the ball in the park.

"I wanted the pitch more inside, hoping for a ground ball," said Jones. "I didn't make the pitch where I wanted. I got him Friday, but today he was lucky."

Jones relieved Ranger starter Mike Smithson to start the inning and gave up a leadoff single to Jim Gantner. Ned Yost singled and one out later, Yount belted a 1-1 pitch into the left field bleachers at Milwaukee's County Stadium.

The winning pitcher was Jim Slaton, 4-0, who relieved Brewer starter Don Sutton to start the ninth.

American League

Royals 6, Blue Jays 1

George Brett hit his eighth home run of the season, a two-run blast in the fifth, and Steve Renko scattered six hits in 7⅓ innings to lead Kansas City over Toronto.

Brett's homer, which extended his hitting streak to 19 games and raised his RBI total to 26, keyed a three-run Kansas City fifth.

"I've never had as good a start as this year," said Brett, who went into the game with the league lead in slugging percentage and on-base percentage.

Tigers 5, Angels 1

Howard Johnson and Lance Parrish hit home runs and Jack Morris pitched a five-hitter to lead Detroit over California. Morris, 3-4, struck out eight and did not walk a batter, giving up the Angels' only run in the eighth on Daryl Sconiers' RBI triple.

Mariners 4, Red Sox 2

Matt Young pitched a shutout for five innings before retiring with a bruised shoulder and Seattle hung on to snap Boston's five-game winning streak.

Young, 3-3, was struck behind the left shoulder by a line drive hit back to the mound by Jeff Newman in the fifth. The ball caromed high in the air to shortstop Todd Cruz for the putout. Young remained in the game but was forced to leave when the arm stiffened while warming up the next inning.

Twins 6, Yankees 5

Gary Ward hit a three-run double in a five-run fifth inning and Gary Gaetti decided the game with a sacrifice fly in the seventh as Minnesota beat New York and ended a six-game losing streak.

Reliever Len Whitehouse, 3-1, gained the victory after taking over for starter Bobby Castillo in the seventh and pitching hitless relief. New York reliever Dale Murray, 0-1, took the loss.

Indians 13, White Sox 6

Julio Franco's three-run homer capped a wild, six-run sixth inning, leading Cleveland over Chicago. The White Sox made three of their six errors in the sixth, which also included two wild pitches by reliever Steve Mura.

Franco also singled in a run in the fifth when the Indians scored four times.

Winner Bert Blyleven, 3-3, gave up six hits in seven innings. The White Sox scored five runs off reliever Dan Spillner, including a two-run homer by Jerry Hairston in a four-run ninth.

A's 1, Orioles 0

Wayne Gross hit a leadoff home run in the eighth, powering Oakland over Baltimore in a rain-delayed game. The game was delayed a half-hour in starting by rain, was held up for one hour in the first inning, halted for 48 more minutes in the eighth, and then delayed a fourth time for 23 minutes.

Mets find formula

By The Associated Press

The New York Mets are beginning to put things together, with Jesse Orosco and George Foster leading the way. And Cincinnati Manager Russ Nixon is about to take something apart, namely his pitching staff.

The Mets rallied on Sunday from a 5-0 deficit and beat the Reds 10-5 — thanks to some perfect relief by Orosco and Foster's three-run homer. On Friday night, New York rallied from a 3-0 deficit and beat the Reds 7-4 in 13 innings thanks to some perfect relief by Orosco and Foster's three-run homer.

"I'm beginning to get superstitious," said Mets Manager George Bamberger. "Maybe there's something to that Orosco-Foster business. I'll have to look out for that."

The Reds pitchers, meanwhile, will be looking out for Nixon — and trying to stay out of his way. Nixon, frustrated by their inability to protect a lead, has promised a shakeup of the roster.

"We seem to come up short all the time," he fumed. "I dont know what's up with our pitching staff. We let another one get away. We're going to make some moves the next couple of days."

Moments later, he made his first one, sending reliever Ben Hayes down to the Reds' Indianapolis farm team in the International League.

Hayes took the mound Sunday following Foster's homer that had put the Mets on top 6-5, gave up Mookie Wilson's two-run double that capped the six-run seventh inning, then allowed two more runs in the eighth.

Scott Holman threw only 22 pitches for the Mets, the last of them a gopher ball to Ron Oester, who sent it over the wall for a three-run homer in the Reds' five-run first inning.

For the remaining 8⅔ innings, Carlos Diaz, Neil Allen, Orosco and Doug Sisk blanked the Reds on three singles.

Orosco is unscored upon in his last eight outings — 15⅓ innings — and in 10 appearances this year he has a 0.55 earned-run average. "Strikes, confidence, concentration," he said. "I've got it all right now. I'm skyhigh!"

National League

Braves 4, Astros 3

Run-scoring singles by Bob Horner and Rafael Ramirez helped the Braves open a two-run lead over Houston, then southpaw Terry Forster served-up a game-ending double-play ball to pinch-hitter Tim Tolman with the bases loaded in the ninth inning.

"You normally wouldn't let a left-handed pitcher face a right-handed batter in a situation like we had, but all their experience and power is left-handed," Atlanta Manager Joe Torre said of the Astros. "So it worked out just as I hoped it would."

"I went in to strike him out," Forster said of Tolman, batting for only the eighth time this season. "But when I got behind, I decided to sink the ball and hope he'd hit into a double play."

Dodgers 6, Cards 4

Dusty Baker and Greg Brock hit solo home runs and St. Louis third baseman Ken Oberkfell's error opened the door to three runs in the fifth inning as the Dodgers won their fifth in a row and handed pitcher Joaquin Andujar of the Cardinals his fifth consecutive loss.

The victory was LA's 18th in 23 games and kept the Dodgers first in the West, one-half game ahead of Atlanta.

Padres 5, Cubs 3

Luis Salazar hit a two-run homer and Juan Bonilla a two-run double, both in the sixth inning, as the Padres halted their three-game skid. Dave Dravecky pitched his fourth complete game of the season, allowing nine hits.

One of them was Larry Bowa's first home run since 1980 and the 14th of his 14-year major-league career. The ball just did curl around the left field foul pole.

Giants 12, Pirates 1

Darrell Evans and the Giants are on a tear. His two home runs Sunday — five RBI — and homer on Saturday have helped San Francisco win five in a row."These kind of things come in streaks," said Evans. "I'd been waiting a long time."

"I was hoping we'd put a streak like this together," added Giants Manager Frank Robinson. "I can't say I knew it could or would happen, but I was sure hoping. Now we're close to .500, and I know the fans consider that a kind of magic number."

The Giants scored five runs in the first inning, partly on Jack Clark's two-run homer and a two-run triple by Duane Kuiper, then the first of Evans' homers chased the Pirates' Jim Bibby in the second. Evans also had a three-run shot off Randy Niemann in San Francisco's four-run eighth.

"A game like this couldn't come at a much better time," said Robinson. "We had a chance to relax, have some fun."

Riggs' partner beats women

HOUSTON (AP) — Only about 600 people turned out for Bobby Riggs' return to Houston, where he lost in straight sets to Billie Jean King 10 years ago, and Riggs could almost have been absent himself.

The 65-year-old tennis hustler made no secret of the strategy he used to defeat the defending women's U.S. Open doubles champions Sunday night — run from the ball and invite partner Mal Anderson to poach.

RIGGS AND Anderson, 48, fought off two match points to defeat Rosie Casals and Wendy Turnbull 6-7 (8-6), 3-6, 6-1, 7-6 (7-4), 8-6.

"I gave my shots to him from the first point," Riggs said of his Australian partner. "He took everything he could possibly get."

The victory continued Riggs' Mother's Day dominance of women tennis players. He beat Margaret Court a decade ago Sunday to set up the match with King.

Wearing a Sugar Daddy T-shirt, Riggs presented his opponents — "the girls," as he called them repeatedly — with roses before the match. Casals reciprocated with a fifth of Old Granddad bourbon.

Anderson ended the match with the shot he used to dominate play, a forehand winner down the middle of the court between his opponents.

"It cuts out their angles and gives me a chance to poach on Bobby's side," he said.

Anderson has been competing on the Grand Masters tour. He won the U.S. Open in 1957 and was runner-up the next year.

Riggs, the U.S. singles champion in 1939 and 1941 and the Wimbledon singles champion in 1939, admitted the victory was not entirely due to skill.

"We were incredibly lucky," Riggs said after the match. "It was like a guy making eight straight passes at the craps table."

Riggs and Anderson battled back from a 5-1 deficit in the fourth set. Anderson hit two service winners and a beautiful drop shot yards in front of Casals to win the 10th game and even the score at 5-5.

HE AND Riggs eventually won the tie breaker 7-4.

Riggs lobbed continuously, sometimes catching Casals charging the net but more often setting up his team for devastating overhead slams from the two women.

"Mal played well and Bobby came up with the shots when he had to," said Casals after the match. "They lobbed us. They took us out of position."

Anderson said he intentionally moved toward the center of the court and hammered forehands between his two opponents.

USFL cream on the rise

By The Associated Press

The powerhouse teams of the United States Football League lived up to their billing over the weekend, headed by Chicago's 31-3 romp over the hapless Washington Federals.

In Sunday games, the victory by the Blitz, 7-3, kept them in a tie for the Central Division lead with the Tampa Bey Bandits, who survived a furious Oakland rally for a 17-10 victory over the Invaders.

Elsewhere Sunday, the Philadelphia Stars, topping the new league with a 9-1 record, had to rely on David Trout's strong right foot to squeeze out a 6-3 triumph over the Denver Gold.

On Saturday, the Michigan Panthers, 6-4, remained one game behind Chicago and Tampa Bay in the competitive Central Division with their fifth straight triumph, a 21-10 victory over the Arizona Wranglers at Tempe, Ariz., and the Los Angeles Express, 5-5, held onto a one-game lead in the Pacific Division by tipping the Boston Breakers 23-20.

Philadelphia's Kelvin Bryant ran for 94 yards against the Gold, moving at least briefly into a tie with Herschel Walker of the New Jersey Generals for the league rushing lead with a total of 1,023 yards. However, Walker, who has had five straight rushing performances over 100 yards, and his teammates play tonight against the Birmingham Stallions.

USFL Roundup

Jimmy Jordan, who later left the game with a separated shoulder, fired touchdown passes to Eric Truvillion and Danny Buggs to lead the Bandits.Jordan became a starter when John Reeves broke his wrist three weeks ago.

About 10,000 of the 26,989 ticketholders were no-shows for the nationally televised game at Oakland, where the Invaders trailed 17-0 after three quarters. The Oakland rally fell short despite a 3-yard touchdown run by quarterback Fred Besana and a 30-yard field goal by Kevin Shea.

At Chicago, Tim Spencer and Kevin Long each scored two touchdowns for the Blitz. The Federals, 1-9, have now lost six straight, but they averted a shutout when Dale Castro booted a 21-yard field goal in the third period following a 55-yard pass from Kim McQuilken to Billy Taylor. That was the longest play by the Federals this season and the longest play allowed by Chicago's league-leading defense.

McQuilken started in place of Mike Hohensee, who was hospitalized moments before the game with what doctors diagnosed as an appendicitis attack. The hard-luck Hohensee missed several games early in the season due to an injury.

Trout converted field goals of 53 — the longest of his career — and 18 yards for the Stars, sending Denver to its sixth defeat in 10 games.The Gold had an opportunity to tie the game with 2:07 remaining after driving to the Stars' 6-yard line. However, Brian Speelman, who hit on a 23-yarder in the second quarter, never got the 23-yard field goal attempt off because the ball was snapped wide to the right of holder Ken Johnson and Philadelphia recovered the ball.

Michigan's Whit Taylor, a rookie from Vanderbilt, replaced starter Bobby Hebert, out after complaining of dizziness following a hard hit, in the second half and directed a pair of third-quarter scoring drives. Two of the Michigan touchdowns were set up by long pass plays to wide receiver Anthony Carter and the other came on Taylor's 51-yard bomb to wide receiver Derek Holloway.

Coles coasts to LPGA title

ROSWELL, Ga. (AP) — Janet Coles held at least a five-shot lead over the final seven holes Sunday in coasting to the second victory of her pro golf career but said, "I never really played it safe."

Coles fired a final round 3-under-par 69 to win the $150,000 Lady Michelob golf tournament she had led after each of the first two rounds.

"I didn't really feel relaxed until after 15," she said.

It was on the 15th that she sank her second birdie putt of the round from off the green, a 20-footer that built the lead to her ultimate six-shot triumph over Sandra Post.

Coles, who gained her only other pro victory in this event in 1978, said, "This means more than the first one.

"The last six tournaments I've been in contention every week, then finally I won," she said. "It is good for my confidence."

Her other birdie from off the green came on the 11th, a 35-foot downhill putt she called "the turning point of the day."

The 69 in swirling winds left her with a 10-under-par 206 total on the 6,123-yard Brookfield West Golf and Country Club course.

"I was thinking I'd have to shoot 68 today to make a good run at it," said Post, who got within two shots only once, after birdies on the first two holes. "She had the momentum."

Graham turns trauma into win

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — David Graham's biggest mistake of the tournament turned out to be the biggest comeback of the 1983 pro golf tour.

Graham, winless since making a dramatic comeback to win the 1981 U.S. Open, ignored the trauma of a quadruple bogey on the par-5 first hole in Saturday's third round and rallied for a five-stroke victory Sunday in the final round of the $400,000 Houston Coca Cola Open.

Graham got his revenge on the No. 1 hole with the first of seven birdies to start Sunday's round and finished with a seven-under-par 64 for a 275 total, nine under par for the tournament.

It was the biggest comeback on the tour this season, but it was made possible, Graham said, by overcoming his mistake in playing the No. 1 hole on Saturday.

"I kept telling my caddy it would be a hard pill to swallow if I got beat by one or two shots," Graham said.

As he walked through the first hole on Saturday, Graham said he realized he should have taken a penalty stroke and started over.

"That was my fault, I could maybe have turned it into a six instead of the nine," Graham said.

But Graham played almost flawlessly Sunday. The third-day leader, Doug Tewell, blew to a final-round 78 and gallery favorite Lee Trevino ended his bid for victory with a 73 to finish in a three-way tie for second with Lee Elder and Jim Thorpe with at 280.

Derby gives answers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Marfa, the mugger, ran straight though slow and finished fifth.

Slew O' Gold did not match the feat of his sire, 1977 Triple Crown champion Seattle Slew, with a Derby victory and finished fourth.

And there was no stampede or jostling even though the field was at its 20-horse limit.

The running of the Kentucky Derby last Saturday provided those answers to the most frequently asked pre-race questions.

YET, THE most significant answer was to a question overlooked in the debates over Marfa's propensity to veer, Slew O' Gold's potential to be a chip off the block and the crowded field.

It was whether Eddie Delahoussaye, who rode Gato Del Sol to a longshot victory last year, could become only the fourth jockey in the Derby's 109-year history to win two in a row.

He did, guiding Sunny's Halo to a two-length victory over Desert Wine in the rain and lightning at Churchill Downs.

"The Cajuns did it," Delahoussaye, who was raised on a southwest Louisiana farm, shouted into the winner's circle microphone.

Even in the moments after the race, Delahoussaye's historic feat was virtually unnoticed. It didn't occur to Bill Hartack, who rode five Derby winners but never in successive years, in a postrace television interview.

"Even Hartack forgot," Delahoussaye said later.

It didn't escape the man who did it, though.

"I told a bunch of other jockeys last Sunday that it was the dream of my life to win two Kentucky Derbies," he said.

"To win two straight — that's unbelievable. God, it's a great feeling!"

Only Isaac Murphy in 1890-91, Jimmy Winkfield in 1901-02 and Ron Turcotte in 1972-73 had ridden successive Derby winners before Delahoussaye.

And Delahoussaye almost had three in row, losing by three-quarters of a length aboard Woodchopper in 1981. That makes two firsts and a second in only four Derby rides, the first aboard outrun Honey Mark in 1975.

In the past three years, riding mainly in California, his mounts have earned $18.2 million. The past two years, he was fourth in the North American riding standings.

But just as many overlooked the two-in-a-row angle, the 31-year-old Delahoussaye's accomplishments have failed to bring him the star status he thinks he deserves.

"I'm not much of a talker. I'm kind of low-keyed," he said. "But if any owners want to ride me, they ought to know I have the ability ... Maybe they'll pick up their heads a little bit after today."

Delahoussaye's Derby mount this year wasn't supposed to be Sunny's Halo. He was due to ride Roving Boy, the 2-year-old champion in 1982, but that colt was knocked out with a broken cannon bone in a leg.

The ride on Sunny's Halo didn't come along until last month, a couple of weeks after the chestnut colt won his 3-year-old debut under Larry Snyder in the March 26 Rebel Handicap.

"Snyder's an excellent rider, but the owner wanted a name rider and one from California," Cross said. "Delahoussaye has worked for us out there."

DELAHOUSSAYE took the mount and brought Sunny's Halo home to a front-running, four-length victory in the Arkansas Derby April 16.

It was the most impressive Kentucky Derby prep of the year, and it brought Delahoussaye to Kentucky confident and secure.

There were no special instructions for the jockey from trainer David Cross, a man given to worry so much that he would get up in the middle of the night to check on his prize horse.

"I said hello to him and asked him how the weather was in California," Cross said.

Select Soccer tryouts to be held May 21

Tryouts for the Select Soccer League will be held May 21 at the Hogan Park complex. Players born between 1970 and 1973 are welcome to tryout, but must have birth certificates and written authorization from their 1983 spring season coach.

Robert Font, Select League commissioner, said tryouts will be held from 8 a.m. until noon.

San Angelo to host Sun run

SAN ANGELO — The 11th annual Run in the Sun is expected to attract runners from throughout West Texas Saturday, June 4, with over 300 entries expected for the 8,000 meter run along the banks of the Concho River.

Running will begin and end at the San Angelo Convention Center at 8 a.m. Entry fee is $5 before June 4 and $10 on race day. Registrations should be mailed to Run in the Sun, 2301 West Ave. J, San Angelo, 76901.

Ruidoso man turns $8 into $27,000 day

RUIDOSO DOWNS (AP) — Ruidoso businessman and part-time racehorse owner Billy D. Thomas had one of those days that in sports jargon might be described as one filled with peaks and valleys.

Thomas started out Saturday with a dead horse and wound up with a $27,000 payday at the races.

Thomas is president of the Ruidoso-based United Energy Corp., and also owns a modest four-horse stable at Ruidoso Downs racetrack.

On Saturday, Thomas visited his stable and found it had been reduced to three horses.

"One of my horses, Savannah Clabber, woke up dead," said Thomas.

Undaunted, Thomas went to the races later in the day, starting out with a $200 bankroll. Eleven races later, the bankroll was down to $8.

That's when the valley disappeared and the peak showed up.

Thomas played the $8 he had left in the 12th race trifecta, which requires the bettor to pick the exact order of finish of the top three horses.

Ford eats breakfast with Boy Scouts

Gerald Ford

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford chatted about summer camp and the Kentucky Derby and ate bacon with his fingers at a down-home breakfast with 23 Boy Scouts who inaugurated a hiking trail named for the 38th president.

The Scouts, members of Grandville Troop 292, were the first to hike the nine-mile trail, which begins with a canoe trip in the Grand River, winds through Grand Rapids city streets and ends with a tour of the Gerald R. Ford Museum.

Ford represented Grand Rapids in Congress for 25 years.

"A lot of people who are famous are snobs," said one Scout, 12-year-old Greg Weykamp. "He's not. He's nice."

"He was eating his bacon with his fingers," said 12-year-old Steve Becker.

Weykamp said that after the breakfast Friday the former president talked to the youngsters about the Kentucky Derby, memories of summer camp, and the upcoming Tulip Time Festival in nearby Holland.

The Scouts hiked the trail Oct. 16.

F.S. Musgrave

MARIETTA, Ohio (AP) — Just because he walked in space doesn't make F. Story Musgrave anything special, the shuttle astronaut says.

"Trying to explain the feeling of walking in space would be awfully disappointing," he told well-wishers Saturday, which was proclaimed Story Musgrave Day here. He said the space walk "rehearsals were so realistic" that the actual walk didn't feel that different.

"There are a million people like me out there," he said. "All I am is a good technician."

Musgrave, 47, graduated from Marietta College in 1960 with a bachelor's degree in chemistry. The astronaut was awarded an honorary doctor of science degree Sunday at commencement. He was aboard space shuttle Challenger for its April flight and walked in space then.

Although he didn't speak at commencement exercises, Musgrave was given a standing ovation.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The son and namesake of Gov. George Wallace says he may follow his father's path into politics, but said his wife's pregnancy will postpone his political ambitions for several years.

George Wallace Jr., an administrative employee of Troy State University here, had said last month that he was considering running for mayor of Montgomery against incumbent Emory Folmar, whom his father defeated last year in the governor's race.

But in Saturday's Alabama Journal and Advertiser, the younger Wallace said, "I'm going to wait and don't plan to run for mayor. We'll possibly be in politics some day, but I want to develop a family first."

Last month, the younger Wallace said he considered running against Folmar at the request of Montgomery politicans and citizens.

Helen Reddy

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Helen Reddy says she plans to marry her live-in boyfriend next month despite the objections of her 10-year-old son, who claims the boyfriend used physical force against him.

Ms. Reddy, 41, divorced her first husband, Jeff Wald, 39, in January. The couple is now waging a bitter custody fight over their son, Jordan, the May 16 issue of People magazine said.

Citing court documents, the magazine quoted Jordan as saying he disliked his mother's boyfriend, Milton Ruth, 30, adding that Ruth "has several times used physical force on me."

But Ruth told the magazine he never hit the boy and said Jordan sometimes looks on him as a "big brother."

"We get along pretty well," Ruth said. "I help him with homework and we watch movies."

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Elli van Wijk-Voskuyl, who helped hide a group of Jews — among them Anne Frank — from Nazis during World War II, has died at age 63, the Anne Frank Foundation said Sunday. No further details were available, the foundation said.

Club's aim to improve race relations

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The rules proposed for the Friendly Supper Club were simple: Members were required to bring a guest of another race.

But the club's founder remains a secret, even to the membership.

About 35 people attended the first meeting Thursday at a downtown cafeteria, all summoned by a letter signed by "Jack Smith."

At the dinner, attended by black and white clergymen, lawyers, reporters and others, no one admitted to being Jack Smith.

The letter, dated May 1, said the purpose of the supper club is to improve Montgomery's race relations.

"Dear Friend," the letter began.

"I am writing to you today because of the concern I share with you and hundreds of other Montgomerians about the state of race relations in our city. Events of the last several weeks make it clear there is still a great deal of misunderstanding and mistrust between the white and black communities."

The letter mentioned a February incident in which two Montgomery police officers were beaten up and one of them shot. Eleven blacks from Ohio and Michigan were arrested and charged with attempted murder.

A district court judge dismissed the charges against seven of them, but evidence against all 11 is being considered by a state grand jury.

The letter announced the first meeting of the Friendly Supper Club of Montgomery. "Membership in the club is open to all; the only rule is that each participant bring a member of the opposite race. Dinner is dutch treat."

"Who is behind the club?" the letter continued. "The answer is no one person or group...I think it is important that the Friendly Supper Club not be associated with any individual, group, political faction or sect in order that the particpants' motives be above suspicion."

Toward the end of the dinner, Bill Stephens, an attorney for the Alabama Retirement Systems, stood up and read a second letter and a statement from Jack Smith.

"I am not Jack Smith," Stephens began. He said he got the letter asking him to read the statement. A $50 money order was enclosed for his trouble.

The statement urged members to bring a different guest of another race to each meeting. The dinners are scheduled for the first Monday of every month. As yet, there was no word from Jack Smith on where the next meeting will be.

Show host asks furs not be prize

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Game show host Bob Barker, who says he's an animal rights activist, has asked officials of the Miss USA pageant to stop giving away fur coats to the contest's winners.

Barker, who will be host of the nationally telecast pageant Thursday, told reporters Sunday he has difficulty reconciling the giveaways with his advocacy of humane treatment of animals.

Barker arrived in Knoxville on Friday for rehearsals. Today he was to be named national chairman of the Fund for Animals, which opposes animal abuse.

As host of the CBS game show, "The Price Is Right," Barker said he talked his producers and the network into halting the show's fur coat giveaways.

He said Miss USA officials told him they would consider eliminating fur coats as prizes next year.

Miller's business slowly griding down

SECOND CREEK, W.Va. (AP) — Like the ancient grist mill he has tended for the past 57 years, Aubrey Reed is slowly grinding down.

Things were a lot different, though, when Reed first took over the old three-story mill that teeters above the shallow, bubbling waters of Second Creek. The year was 1926 and a grist mill was an essential element of this West Virginia farming community.

Aubrey Reed

"That was long before sliced bread, of course," observed the laconic, 78-year-old miller. "The farmers hereabouts would haul their corn and wheat in their horse and ox-drawn wagons, unload, and then load up the stone-ground flour and corn meal for the trip back home. They kept me plenty busy back then."

Today, Reed's mill is still active, but each year brings fewer farmers and ever less corn and wheat.

"I still grind some corn for the people up and down the creek," he said. "But there ain't much wheat grown anymore. These days, I guess, it's easier just to go to the store and buy a loaf of bread."

The old man stuck his thumbs in the straps of his overalls and squinted into the cavernous interior of the mill, where a fine patina of flour and corn meal covered the awkward-looking 19th century machinery.

"I've got two water-turned burrs that I use to grind corn and buckwheat, except I haven't ground much buckwheat for the past 10 years," he said. "The water is trapped in the mill race and fed beneath the mill where it catches the flutter wheel, and that turns the belt-driven turbines."

Reed estimates that the foot-thick, 60-inch-wide stones have been converting corn to grist for almost 200 years. His huge, steel-rollered flour mill, however, is only about a century old.

"I've got it hooked up to a gasoline motor now," he said, "in case the creek gets low."

Second Creek, fed by a spring on Peter's Mountain some 14 miles away, meanders along the border of Greenbrier and Monroe counties on the southeastern edge of the state. Reed said he can remember when there were seven mills such as his on the creek.

"They're all gone now, except me," the old man said. "In fact, they tell me that this is the last, old-fashioned water mill in West Virginia and one of the last in the country."

These days, the majority of Reed's customers are tourists. He said he never imagined that his mill would someday become a tourist attraction.

"Shucks," he said, stepping outside into the sunshine of his 79th spring, "there wasn't no such thing as a tourist back when I took over this mill. Now, they come from everywhere."

Grandma has nudist hotline

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Advice about nudity is only a phone call away for Southern Californians since Jan Davis started the Nudist Information Center hotline.

"People are so hungry for this information," Davis said. "The phone hasn't stopped ringing since the word got out that I'm here."

Ms. Davis, a grandmother, said she started the hotline last month to clear up some of the misipformation on nudism.

"I have found that long-time nudists are just as desperate for information as non-nudists," she said in a recent interview. "Most people just join one nudist club without having any exposure to alternatives. They don't realize what variety there is."

There are at least 246 nudist clubs in North America and the International Nudists Guide lists 13 countries as having nudist colonies, Ms. Davis noted.

"Once you are a nudist, when you travel, you can find friends anyplace in the world," she said. "Nudists are such friendly people."

Ms. Davis said she stayed with her parents at a nudist camp until she was 3 years old.

"That's when they divorced. Not until I was 38 years old did I go to a club again. And I went again with my father. That's how I met my present husband."

She said the camps are a good way for women to meet Prince Charming.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Transplant used to re-establish hairline

Dear Dr.Solomon: My father is going to have a hair transplant. Exactly what does this mean? — Mrs. T.R., Chicago

Dear Mr. R.: Small hair-bearing segments of the scalp can be transferred as free grafts to other areas of the scalp where they will usually continue to grow hair similar to the area from which they were taken. In baldness, hair-bearing skin from the back and sides of the scalp is used to re-establish a hairline at the forehead. There must of course be enough hair to cover the area where hair is needed. Strips of hair-bearing skin are occasionally used to reconstruct an absent eyebrow. In extensive loss or destruction of a portion of the scalp, part of the remaining scalp can be used to reconstruct the defect.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What are crabs (and I don't mean the kind you eat)? My son just had an experience with them. The doctor prescribed some kind of soap and he got rid of them, but I'd like to know what they are and where they come from. — Mr. K.L., Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Mr. L.: Crabs (actually pubic lice) get their name from the way they appear when examined under a magnifying glass. They are usually found in the pubic areas of the body but may also occur under the arms.

Pubic lice are spread through direct physical contact with an infected person. They may also be spread through use of clothing, towels, and bedding that has become infested. The primary symptom is an intense itching in the genital and rectal area.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Last night I got up to feed my new baby, my first child, and I'm so tired now I think I could sleep for a week. It just got me to thinking about women who have twins. How do these women ever survive it? — Mrs. B.U., New Orleans, La.

Dear Mrs. U.: Most mothers who give birth to more than one child manage quite well as shown by the way their children turn out. But there is no doubt that raising twins is more stressful than is raising a single child. This has been reflected in the results of studies of the incidence of child abuse.

In one such study, Dr. Jessie R. Groothuis found that nine of 48 families with twins showed evidence of child abuse or child neglect. This compared with only three similar instances in 124 families with single children.

Even these figures indicate that most families of twins appear to manage well, but it seems only logical that the rearing of twins would be associated with added stress. In some respects, the conditions in the families of twins are similar to those in large families and in families with short time periods between births. In these families, studies have also shown an increased incidence of child abuse.

For Louise, Sacramento, Calif.: I imagine you are referring to a drug called chymopapain. It comes from the papaya plant and was recently approved by the Food and Drug Administration as an alternative to surgery in the treatment of some back problems.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Groups request ban on contraceptive rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two family planning groups are asking an appellate court to permanently ban a regulation that says parents must be told when their adolescent girls receive prescription contraceptives.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia was hearing arguments today over the Reagan administration's attempt to include parents in teen-agers' decisions about contraceptives.

Backers of the regulation argue that parents have a right to be informed if their children are being given drugs and that it will help improve family communication.

But detractors say the rule would drive many sexually-active adolescents away from family planning clinics without discouraging their sexual activity. They say more pregnancies could be the result.

According to their argument, the regulation would also breach adolescents' right to confidentiality.

The court fight against the rule was sponsored principally by the Planned Parenthood Federation of America and the National Family Planning and Reproductive Health Association. The regulation's chief supporters are anti-abortion groups.

The Reagan administration lost on two fronts when the regulation was challenged in federal district court and judges in New York and in Washington, D.C., ruled it invalid. Their action prevented the regulation from ever taking effect.

The appeals court has consolidated those cases.

At issue is a plan outlined on Feb. 22, 1982, which would have required all family planning clinics that received federal money to notify parents within 10 days if a girl under 18 was given birth control pills, an intrauterine device or a diaphragm.

The administration issued the requirement to carry out a directive from Congress that parents be encouraged to take part in their adolescents' decisions about birth control.

But even some members of Congress who helped draft that directive say the regulation went too far.

Comet can be viewed

ATLANTA (AP) — People throughout the Northern Hemisphere will get their best look at the recently discovered comet IRAS-Araki-Alcock on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, an astronomer says.

The best viewing time will be just after dark, and urban dwellers should use binoculars to find the speck near the Big Dipper constellation, said Dr. Richard Williamon, an astronomer with the Fernbank Science Center.

Times Beach, Mo., Acting Mayor Marilyn Leistner poses near the only remaining entrance to the dioxin-tainted flood-damaged town. Residents, who are still waiting for word from the government about a promised but-out, were chased from their homes last week by floodwaters of the Meramec River.

Times Beach buy-out in limbo as town mops up after flooding

TIMES BEACH, Mo. (AP) — A promised federal buy-out of Times Beach — the first of an entire town because of hazardous waste — remains in limbo months after officials assured anxious residents that they could soon reconstruct their disrupted lives.

"The people here are tired," said Marilyn Leistner, acting mayor in this town of 2,800 residents southwest of St. Louis. "Most look as though they've aged 10 years. They walk stoop-shouldered and have circles under their eyes.

"If we don't get a buy-out soon, I question how many will be strong enough to rebuild their lives and their homes."

Anne Burford, former head of the Environmental Protection Agency, journeyed to the edge of Times Beach on Feb. 22 to announce the purchase of homes owned by the community's 800 families.

BUT THE process has been stymied as state and federal officials grapple over who will take title to the dioxin-tainted, flood-devastated town.

As a result, the confused residents, many living in government-sponsored temporary housing, are paying mortgages on homes they cannot live in with no idea when, or if, they'll be able to buy another.

EPA officials argue that although 90 percent of the buy-out cost — about $33 million — will be paid for by the federal "superfund" for hazardous waste cleanup, they cannot take title for fear of setting a precedent that could lead to federal ownership of contaminated land across the country.

State legislators, meanwhile, have declined to take title to the land until all the homes are purchased to protect the state from potential legal liability for any health problems of people who continue to live in the community.

There had been some holdouts, but floodwaters from the Meramec River swept through the litter-strewn town again last week and changed their thinking.

"WE DIDN'T want to leave and we still don't," said Gerald Johnson, as he stuffed his family's remaining possessions into a rented truck while floodwaters breached the Meramec's banks 50 yards away.

"We never even finished cleaning up from the last flood," added his wife, Willow. "But this time we're not coming back."

"The state set us up," said the 51-year-old Johnson, who has lived in "The Beach" for 11 years. "I don't think they want a buy-out. They set it up so it's impossible to achieve."

Gov. Christopher S. Bond traveled to Washington last month and urged presidential adviser Edwin Meese to convince Lee Thomas, an assistant EPA administrator, to compromise on the title question.

There has been no response from the federal government, which has rejected similar proposals.

RESIDENTS OF the nearby Meramec Heights area of Imperial, where some of the highest levels of dioxin in the state have been found, aren't satisfied with the progress of the EPA buy-out in their area either.

Several people who live near the so-called Minker site in Jefferson County say they can't understand why the EPA has refused to buy their homes when they live closer to dioxin than some of the residents of Times Beach.

"How in the world can they buy those homes and not our homes?" asked Murray Abrahamson, who lives almost directly across the street from where the EPA found dioxin at up to 300 times levels considered safe.

The source of contamination in the Meramec Heights area and Times Beach has been traced to former waste hauler Russell Bliss. Bliss sprayed dioxin-contaminated waste oil on roads and horse arenas to control dust in the early 1970s. Dioxin is a known carcinogen in laboratory animals, but its toxicity in humans is not known for certain.

The problem was discovered in November when the results of preliminary EPA dioxin tests in both areas were announced. State and federal officials had been aware of the chemical byproduct's presence in the areas since the mid-1970s, but little was done because scientists thought dioxin decomposed quickly.

"WE'RE GOING to be left sitting here with this stuff (dioxin) from here to eternity," Abrahamson said.

Abrahamson, and his two neighbors, Dave Davis and Larry Webb, say they have been invited to visit the EPA's regional office in Kansas City this week to discuss their fears.

Boy charged with raping twins

SOMERVILLE, Mass. (AP) — Police say angry residents have threatened to kill a teen-ager charged with raping 3½-year-old twin girls, and the department has suggested he and his family leave the housing project where they live.

Although police said there were no reports of threats Sunday, officers earlier said there had been several against the 15-year-old boy, not identified because of his age. Police said they would investigate any such threats.

The youth pleaded innocent Friday to charges of rape and indecent assault in Somerville District Court, and was released on $1,000 bail. The youth was babysitting for the twins April 30 when the attacks allegedly took place.

Police said the youth frequently babysat for the girls in their home.

Authorities learned of the rape when the girls were taken to the project's health center, then to Massachusetts General Hospital, for tests to determine if they had contacted the venereal disease gonorrhea during an indecent assault.

The tests for gonorrhea were negative, police said, but they showed the twins had been raped.

Police said they did not know why the rapes were not reported for five days. They said they believed the twins' mother was apparently "trying to take care of the situation herself," but ran into some difficulty and called police.

Informer's son fears mobsters

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The 13-year-old son of an organized crime informer has testified he does not want to leave the Federal Witness Protection Program to live with his mother because he fears mobsters would kill him to "get back at my dad."

The boy, Michael Ruffalo Jr., entered the program with his father more than 4½ years ago.

"I might get killed so they could get back at my dad," Michael Ruffalo Jr. testified Saturday, his face concealed by a ski mask. "I know how they are, I know how they operate."

Michael Ruffalo Sr. is a former associate of underworld figures in Kansas City and became an FBI informant in the early 1970s. He entered the program after learning the mob was after him.

Mrs. Ruffalo filed the suit against the federal government in an attempt to be reunited with her son. She and her husband were divorced in 1972.

Man injured leaving bakery

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — The stray bullet that injured a man leaving a supermarket was fired during an argument outside a bakery nearly half a mile away, according to police.

Michael Vaisman was hit in the left temple Saturday as he and his family left the supermarket and were walking toward their car, said police Sgt. Bob Simoneau.

Vaisman was taken to Santa Monica Hospital where he was listed in critical condition Sunday after undergoing surgery.

Police in nearby Venice confirmed that a dispute occurred in front of a bakery about a half-mile away at the same time Vaisman was hit. In that incident, a bakery clerk was wounded in the abdomen while arguing with a baker, police said.

Two survive boating incident

STONINGTON, Maine (AP) — Two survivors who clung to a capsized 14-foot boat overnight were rescued, but one woman was found dead lashed to the vessel and two others remained missing, authorities said.

Daniel MacDonald, 21, and Ron Sailer, 32, were treated for exposure after being rescued shortly after dawn Sunday.

Their boat capsized Saturday night in the frigid Atlantic waters southwest of Acadia National Park, rescuers said.

The survivors told authorities that two women died Saturday night, and the bodies of one of them had floated away. A search Sunday failed to locate the fifth passenger, a man last seen swimming toward an island, said marine patrol Sgt. George Openshaw.

Some landslide debris cleared

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — About half the debris from a weekend landslide has been cleared from a 300-foot stretch of the Pacific Coast Highway, the state Department of Transportation says.

All motorists, including residents, were barred from an eight-mile segment of the highway Sunday as workers labored to remove about 400 cubic yards of dirt and rock that spread across all four lanes. The highway was expected to reopen today.

Lee Morgan, a superintendent with the department, said the landslide Saturday was caused by mudslides from last month's heavy rains.

"When the mudslides dry, the soil shrinks, causing residual slides," he said.

Extortionist holds no grudges

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A man charged with trying to extort $32 million from Kellogg Co. by threatening to poison boxes of cereal says he holds no grudge toward the company.

Wendell L. Prowse, now in the Kent County Jail on an extortion charge, said the poisoning threat started out as a plot for a novel.

Hawaii congressmen admitted to hospital after automobile accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Cecil Heftel, D-Hawaii, was injured in an automobile accident after he swerved on a rain-slicked street to avoid hitting another car and crashed into a tree, an aide said.

Heftel was admitted to Walter Reed Army Medical Center at about 4:30 p.m. Sunday suffering from multiple fractures, according to hospital spokesman Peter Esker. Esker said Heftel was in stable condition Sunday night but that he had no other information about the congressman's injuries or the accident.

Telephone calls to Esker's home early this morning for an update on Heftel's condition were met with constant busy signals.

Aftershocks damage quake-ravaged town

COALINGA, Calif. (AP) — Two powerful aftershocks caused more damage to buildings in this earthquake-ravaged town, but did not faze residents who might have to endure rumbling and rattling for months to come.

"It's just part of living here now. It's something we've gotten used to," Red Cross spokesman Bill O'Callahan said Sunday after two serious jolts registering 5.5 and 5.0 on the Richter scale of ground motion ripped through the area. No injuries were reported.

The temblors came a week after a quake measuring 6.5 ripped through the area, causing $31 million in damage and injuring 47 people, a few seriously.

Farm worker Walter Fratti, 38, the initial quake's worst casualty, remained in a coma Sunday at a Visalia hospital. He was buried under rubble in the earthquake, one of the most serious to shake California in years.

Sunday's powerful jolts hit at 7:49 p.m. and 8:27 p.m., Cal Tech spokesman Dennis Meredith said.

The first was "the largest aftershock yet of the Coalinga quake," said Meredith, adding that the tremors were likely to continue for months. "There have been hundreds of aftershocks, 25 above magnitude 4."

The California Institute of Technology at Pasadena reported readings of 5.5 and 5.0. on the two shocks. The U.S. Geological Survey at Golden, Colo., measured the first of the shudders at 5.1 on the scale and the second at 4.5, geophysicist John Minsch said.

The Fresno County Office of Emergency Services noted some new damage to buildings in the quake area, where downtown sits in ruins and virtually every home already has been affected.

O'Callahan said the shakes didn't faze people waiting in line and enjoying a magic show at the Army "big top" style tent where the National Guard served 2,000 Mother's Day dinners.

"Nobody even left the tent. They just stayed on line," he said of the residents, hundreds of whom attended Mother's Day services at the town's damaged churches.

The Red Cross is spending $60,000 to serve 5,000 meals a day, as well as distributing 5,000 sleeping bags and 60 donated tent-trailers, agency spokesman Ralph Wright said. Another 200 federally owned mobile homes will be trucked in from Ogden Utah.

Damage to homes and the fear that another quake that might catch them sleeping has forced many Coalingans to move into tents.

Meri Moore of the federal and state relief effort said residents may be eligible for up to one year of free housing in the 12-feet-by-60-feet mobile homes, but he wasn't sure when they would arrive.

By the time the federal and state aid center closed Sunday, 370 people had applied for various kinds of assistance, according to center spokesman Paul Mullane.

Cindy Gilliland readies her Basset hound Katy for some lessons that will come in handy when she "graduates" from the informal Schutzhund training classes held Sundays in Cole Park.

Robert Chaney rewards his dog Vandal for a job well done. Letting dogs know when they've pleased the owner is an important aspect of their training.

Canine classes

Zack, foreground, waits for the next command from Debbie O'Briant during the obedience phase of his Schutzhund training.

Rick Lowe, left, and Pat Bostick provide Argus with some basics in protection training.

"They're strictly very informal sessions for people who want more than just a backyard dog," Robert Chaney said in describing the Sunday afternoon Schutzhund training classes at Cole Park.

Schutzhund is a German word meaning protection dog. But protection dog does not mean a potential killer that wantonly attacks strangers or people its master tells it to "get."

While the dogs learn to react to intruders, they're taught to stop on command. They're also taught to "hold" by circling and barking — if the person "freezes" and doesn't make any sudden movements.

"The dog will protect its owner — or someone with whom it is friends — either on its own or by command, depending on the circumstances," said Chaney, a 25-year-old Midland insurance man who was raised on a ranch in Oklahoma and who has been training dogs for the past seven years.

"One thing about Schutzhund training is that you can't send the dog in on someone unless some form of aggression is shown. But on command or at the first sign of aggressive behavior, the dog will protect. It's protection training, not attack training."

Chaney is a member of several national dog clubs, including the United Schutzhund Association of America. He's also a past president of the Permian Basin Schutzhund Club.

But the two-hour Sunday get-togethers at Cole Park are not affiliated with any organization. Anyone can go out and strive for the ultimate goal of Schutzhund training: total control of their dog.

Dogs ranging from Bassett hounds to dobermans, poodles to German shepherds spend the first hour in obedience training. The second hour is spent doing tracking and protection work.

"Tracking is useful if your child wanders away," said Chaney. "It also further improves control over the dog.

"The 'bite work' in protection training is a game to the dog. It's like a football player who seems to be getting his brains knocked out, but he's actually having fun."

There are three levels of Schutzhund training, with the third level being the top. The dogs can advance into much more specialized training, such as the bomb and narcotics detection work some police dogs are taught.

However, the work done at Cole Park can be likened to "very advanced obedience training," said Chaney. "Police dog training and Schutzhund training are basically not synonymous."

A dog that achieves level-three is able to track articles and people on trails up to three hours old and protect its owner "to whatever degree is necessary," he added.

A good candidate for Schutzhund training possesses certain characteristics that include playfulness and inquisitiveness; the dog should not be overly aggressive without good reason and not be afraid of strangers or loud noises.

"With those traits in pups or adults," said Chaney, "you can train the dog to most anything you want it to do."

The Cole Park sessions start at 1 p.m. and end about 3 p.m.

"Different levels of training are usually going on and anybody is welcome," said Chaney. "It doesn't matter how old the dog is or if it's had any previous training."

DEATHS

George Loranc

George Loranc

Services for George Loranc, 59, of 727 Dormard, will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Henderson of Lubbock officiating.

Loranc died Sunday morning at his residence following an apparent heart attack.

He was born Feb. 1, 1924, in Mexico City, Mexico, and moved to El Paso at age 2 with his parents. He was graduated from El Paso High School in 1941. He entered the U.S. Navy in 1942, and received the Purple Heart after his ship was sunk at Pearl Harbor. He was discharged in 1946.

Loranc attended the University of Houston for two years and then began working for the Civil Service as an electrician. He worked for Maxwell Coffee Company in Houston for 10 years prior to moving to El Paso where he was married to Frances Pearl Harvey July 16, 1971.

They moved to Midland eight years ago where he was employed by Mid West Electric Company until the time of his death. He was a member of the Methodist church, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the IBEW Lodge No. 460.

Survivors include his wife of Midland; two sons, George Scot Loranc and Richard Baumann, both of Midland; four daughters, Landa Loranc, Cindy Cook, Rose Marie Baumann, and Berna Deen Edwards, all of Midland; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Loranc of El Paso; three brothers, Arthur Loranc Jr., of Wyoming, Rudy Loranc of El Paso, and Charles Loranc of Houston; four sisters, Willie Hemmingway of Huntington, Conn., Stella McCallick of San Francisco, Calif., Anna Kochnen of Dallas, and Mercie Sejba of Scottsdale, Ariz.; and four grandchildren.

Robert Boothe

MISSION — Memorial services for Robert E. Boothe, 88, of Mission and formerly of Midland, were Saturday at First United Methodist Church in Mission under direction of Virgil-Wilson Funeral Home.

Boothe died Thursday.

He was born Jan. 5, 1895, in Ennis. He attended the University of Oklahoma where he was a member of Sigma Nu fraternity and received the fraternity's 50-year membership pin in 1976. He served in World War I and World War II, attaining the rank of major.

Following World War II, he moved to Midland as an employee of the Federal Petroleum Board, retiring in 1956. While in Midland, he was active in the Masonic Lodge, receiving the 50-year pin in 1975. He was a life-long member of the Methodist church and was a Shriner. He moved to Mission where he farmed until 1973.

Survivors include his wife, Smith Boothe of Mission; a son, Robert L. Boothe of Midland; a daughter, Nanci Brown of Odessa; a sister; three grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Ada Richardson

Services for Ada Pearl Richardson, 65, of 1504 S. Main St., will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in North A & West Tennessee Avenue Church of Christ with burial in Resthaven Memorial Park under direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Richardson died Saturday in a Midland hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was born Feb. 3, 1918, in Tulia and attended school in Stephenville. She was married to Carl Richardson April 18, 1937, in Glen Rose. They lived in Jal, N.M., and moved to Midland in 1948. She was a member of North A & West Tennessee Avenue Church of Christ.

Survivors include her husband of Midland; a son, Don W. Richardson of Pine Bluff, Ark.; two brothers, Robert C. Thompson of Midland and Earl Thompson of Stephenville; and a grandson.

Marian Weist

KILGORE — Services for Marian C. Weist, 90, of Kilgore, mother of Mrs. Duane (Anne) Grissett of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at First Presbyterian Church in Kilgore with Dr. Dan Goodwin officiating. Burial will be in Kilgore Cemetery under direction of Radar Funeral Home.

Mrs. Weist died Saturday in a Kilgore nursing home following a lengthy illness.

She was born Aug. 17, 1892, in Chicago, Ill. She was married to Robert C. Weist Dec. 24, 1919, in Tulsa, Okla. She had lived in Kilgore since 1931. In 1942, she began the first kindergarten in Kilgore and retired as director of First Presbyterian Day School after 35 years of teaching. She was a member of First Presbyterian Church.

Other survivors include her husband, a son, three grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Edna Crockett

Graveside services for Edna K. Crockett, 88, of 2800 N. Midland Dr., will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at Greenwood Cemetery in Fort Worth with the Rebekah Lodge No. 166 100F of Fort Worth and the Rev. Henry Radde of the Arlington Heights United Methodist Church officiating. Services are under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home of Midland.

Kate Heard, 87, sits in front of a piano in her Kerrville home where she teaches about 25 piano lessons weekly. Her students range in age from seven to "those so old they can't put their fingers on the piano."

Woman shares little bit of herself with students

KERRVILLE (AP) — There's a little bit of Kate Heard in the more than 300 students who've shared a piano keyboard with her during the past half-century.

Her students — some of whom she believes are third generation — have learned music, the piano, theory and the exhilaration of accomplishment from this active, articulate woman of 87.

Her thoughts about the music that's been entwined in her life are presented as clearly as the varied melodies her fingers produce on the ivories.

This enthusiasm has left its mark on her pupils, who began learning from her soon after she and her family came to Kerrville in 1933.

Her childhood and early years in South Carolina were spent in a music-oriented household. At 13, she was playing in a music group started by her father that played area towns and introduced her to a wide range of instruments.

"We just had music all the time," Mrs. Heard recalls.

Those early years included a stint teaching piano to high school students and learning at a conservatory.

Perhaps the greatest joy to her then was seeing the Russian court ballet — shortly after it fled following the fall of the czar.

"It was the most wonderful thing I ever remembered hearing," she said.

Time for frequent body checks — for ticks

AUSTIN (AP) — Campers, hikers and trail riders should make frequent body checks to feel for ticks, which are expected to be especially abundant this summer, a health department expert warns.

A mild winter has greatly increased the state's tick population, said the Texas Department of Health.

The main danger, said state entomologist Bobby L. Davis, is Rocky Mountain spotted fever, a disease carried by some of the tiny, blood-sucking insects.

Health department studies last year showed that only about three ticks out of every 100 carried the disease, but Davis said for safety's sake — "I'd just assume that any tick that might bite me has Rocky Mountain spotted fever."

The health department said two Texans have died so far this year from the disease — equal to last year's grand total. The symptoms are fever, headaches, chills and usually a rash. If diagnosed early, the disease is easily treated, Davis said.

Ticks are so small their victim usually doesn't notice it when the parasite uses tiny mouth-hooks to pierce his host's skin.

"People on outdoor activities should do frequent body checks — at least once every four hours," Davis said. "A tick has to remain attached for two to for hours in order to transmit the disease — it doesn't just run up and bite you like a mosquito."

But don't use a lighted cigarette to get a tick off your body, Davis said.

"Use tweezers or cooking oil. The problem with the cigarette method is you may kill the tick before it lets go" and end up with a dead tick imbedded in your skin, Davis said.

Besides that, you might burn yourself, he said.

Garage heavily damaged by fire

A fire caused by burning trash heavily damaged a garage at 415 E Pine Ave. about 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

Five Midland Fire Department units responded to the blaze and firemen spent almost an hour at the scene.

Owner of the garage was listed as Domingo Lopez of 105 W. Spruce Ave.

Legislature scrambles for effective strategies

AUSTIN (AP) — With just three weeks to go in the session, Texas legislators — and Gov. Mark White — are scrambling for strategies to push through their pet programs.

For White it's a matter of squeezing a teacher pay raise and probable tax hike through a House that has shown no interest in reaching deeper into Texans' pockets.

For Rep. Hugo Berlanga, it's a question of finding one more vote on the House Urban Affairs Committee in order to get his pari-mutuel gambling bill to the House floor.

White wants a 24 percent pay hike for teachers, but tax-shy House members last week approved a $30.8 billion budget that includes only the modest raises required by law. The House twice voted against major pay raise proposals.

The pay raise debate will be renewed today when the House considers a public education finance bill.

White met with lawmakers during last week's budget debate and talked about teacher pay and other expensive programs. After meeting with White, several lawmakers said the governor planned to look at tax packages over the weekend.

Rep. Gerald Hill, D-Austin, said White asked the lawmakers to figure out how much could be raised by certain tax increases.

Odessa man flying loops when he lost control of plane

From Staff and Wire Reports

IRAAN — An Odessa man was practicing trick maneuvers in his single-engine plane when he lost control and crashed, a Department of Public Safety investigation has revealed.

Investigators initially speculated 26-year-old John K. Klassen was killed while trying to land his plane in a field. Klassen died in the Friday night crash.

But DPS Trooper Jess Malone of Pecos said Saturday that investigators determined Klassen had just completed an in-flight circle and loop when the plane went out of control, nose-dived and burst into flames on impact.

"He wasn't trying to land," Malone said. "He was making acrobatic maneuvers and lost control."

Malone said a witness told investigators that Klassen, a self-employed welder and former employee of Midland's OIME oil field equipment firm, had just completed the maneuvers when the plane went out of control.

Klassen was pronounced dead at the scene by Crockett County Peace Justice A.O. Fields. He was not carrying passengers.

His plane crashed into a Crockett County field 11 miles north of Iraan near Texas Highway 349 about 6:40 p.m. Friday. According to a spokesman for the DPS Saturday night, there were 30 mph crosswinds at the time of the accident.

Odessa man stabbed to death

ODESSA — One man is dead and another was taken into custody following a stabbing here early Sunday night.

Dead is John Thomas Slaughter, 27, of 3506 N. Golder. He was stabbed in the right side and died while undergoing surgery at Medical Center Hospital, according to police.

Police said Slaughter was stabbed about 8:30 p.m. during an argument over a woman being pushed off a bicycle. A 40-year-old man was arrested and formal murder charges were to be filed today.

Odessa woman killed by her car

ODESSA — An elderly Odessa woman died of injuries suffered when she was run over by her own car early Sunday afternoon.

Pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital by Ector County Justice of the Peace R.G. Hungerford was 82-year-old Faye Morgan Lambeth of 2735 E. 8th St.

According to police, she was attempting to get out of her 1978-model automobile at the intersection of Oakwood and Westbrook about 12:35 p.m. Sunday when she slipped and the car ran over her, causing severe head and internal injuries.

The car's transmission was in reverse and the vehicle hit a nearby tree and a brick flower bed before coming to rest.

Police probe robbery of grocery

ODESSA — Police here are investigating the robbery of Albertson's Super Market at 1350 E. 8th St. early Sunday morning.

The store's night manager, Cathy Elliott, told officers a white man with sandy-colored hair entered at 3 a.m. Sunday and "wandered around" about an hour before approaching the checkout counter with his hand in his pocket.

No weapon was displayed, but the man demanded money and escaped with an undetermined amount of cash in a brown paper sack. He was further described as 5-feet, 8-inches tall and having hazel eyes. He wore a blue print shirt, blue jeans and a green jacket.

BUFFET SUPPERS, AN EASY WAY TO ENTERTAIN

Serving buffet style is fast growing in popularity. It's an easy way to entertain and with a little planning, a nice balance between elegance and simplicity can be achieved. The polished sideboard with its gleaming silver, stacks of pretty plates and bouquet of flowers form an elegant background for the food which should be simple enough for guests to serve themselves easily. Even the simplest menu can satisfy today's requirements for light nourishing food, as shown in this buffet suggestion. For starters, a tureen of Avgolemono, a hearty and popular Greek soup. This recipe adds an exotic touch of curry which gives it a lively, spirited flavor. This is followed by a Zucchini Provencal in puff pastry.

One of Pepperidge Farm's new frozen Vegetables In Pastry, Zucchini Provencal and the other varieties bring a whole new dimension to serving vegetables. Fresh, crisp vegetables are blended with a delicious sauce and wrapped in a delicate pastry crust, then baked up to a light golden brown puff. There are six irresistable combinations to choose from--Asparagus Mornay, Cauliflower and Cheese Sauce, Mushrooms Dijon, Broccoli with Cheese, Spinach Almondine and Zucchini Provencal. The menu is rounded off with a light cucumber salad and for dessert a classic selection of strong cheeses and fresh fruit.

Dining buffet style, not only affords the hostess an opportunity to entertain easily and elegantly at the same time, but allows her time to enjoy her guests as well.

A simple yet delicious buffet menu makes it easy for the hostess to enjoy her guests. The hearty soup is of Greek derivation, sparked with curry. It's followed by Asparagus Mornay, a light repast of vegetables in pastry and a salad of cucumbers and onion rings garnished with tomato slices. The dessert tops off the menu with fresh fruits and strong cheeses.

Vitamin A derivative touted 'great breakthrough' for acne

HEARST FEATURE SERVICE

Cystic acne is the most severe, stubborn and painful form of acne — not the ordinary, occasional rash of blackheads or whiteheads that afflicts most teen-agers when they hit puberty.

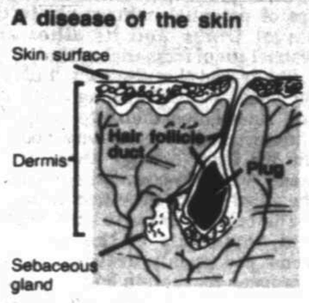
For approximately 2 million Americans, the serious zits — painful, red mounds that can covered the face, back and chest — responded to neither antibiotics nor topical creams. But today, Accutane — a new drug developed by Hoffman-LaRoche of Nutley, N.J. — is being touted as the greatest breakthrough in dermatological care since antibiotics.

Accutane, a vitamin A derivative that belongs to a class of compounds known as rhetinoids, was put on the market last September. Clinical tests of the drug on humans began in 1976 at the National Institutes of Health, State University of New York's Downstate Medical Center, the University of Pennsylvania, Stanford University, Boston University Medical Center School of Medicine, the University of Iowa College of Medicine and other research institutions across the country. The tests found that Accutane temporarily reduces the size of the oil glands and inhibits the secretion of the oily substance, or sebum. And in 98 percent of the cases, the skin remained clear years after treatment was stopped.

Dermatologists, ready and waiting for the drug to go on the market, also were prepared for the side-effects — chapped lips, dry skin and mouth, and, sometimes, nosebleeds, loss of hair, muscular stifness and conjuctivitis.

"You can't give it to the kids who get two zits a month," says Dr. Judith Mysliborski, an Albany dermatologist. "It is four to six months of misery because of the dryness, itching, cracked lips and occasional nosebleeds." There is also the danger of elevated fats in the blood, and blood lipid tests are required to check triglycerides, lipoproteins and cholesterol levels.

Beyond that, tests with animals show Accutane can cause severe birth defects. Women who are pregnant should not take the drug, and Hoffman-LaRoche recommends they continue using a contraceptive for a month after treatment ends. Nursing mothers also should not take Accutane.



Acne begins when the sebaceous gland overproduces the oily fluid that keeps skin and hair moist. Cells shed by the lining of the hair follicle duct combine with the excess fluid to block the duct. When more cells and fluid pile up behind this blockage, a plug is formed, called a whitehead. An enlarged plug that pops out of the duct is a blackhead. Pimples form when a whitehead becomes inflamed.

The therapy does not come cheaply. Hoffman-LaRoche's suggested wholesale cost to pharmacists is $149.40 for a bottle of 100 40-milligram capsules, which would last seven weeks of a 15-to 20-week course of treatment if taken twice a day. Carolyn R. Glynn, director of public relations for Hoffmann-LaRoche, estimates the cost to consumers at between $400 and $500 for a single course of therapy. About 20 percent of the patients, however, continue on a second course, which can double the price.

But the price tag is considerably less than the cost of years of dermatological care, of antibiotics, lotions, ultraviolet rays and other treatments that didn't work, some victims say. And for some, the emotional strain is worse than the physical effects, resulting in severe social, emotional and psychological problems.

Many dermatologists, while prescribing Accutane for persistent cases of cystic acne, have taken a cautious stance in endorsing the product. And, as recommended by Hoffman-LaRoche, the ones contacted say they are limiting the drug's use to cases of cystic acne that are unresponsive to all other forms of therapy.

"Whether it's a wonder drug is yet to be seen," says Dr. Joel Spiro, chief of dermatology at St. Peter's Hospital in Albany. "There have been great claims for drugs in the past that have not proven out. The question is, 'Will the drug be as good as the claims?' "

According to Mysliborski, the public has been given the impression "taking Accutane is as safe and easy as eating candy." That impression, she emphasizes, is wrong. "We have seen no serious or permanent side effects to the medications," she says, "but that doesn't mean they can't occur."

Spiro and other dermatologists say six months is not enough time to evaluate long-term benefits. In the meantime, though, many say they are impressed with the drug's performance.

"It's an excellent and very effective agent," acknowledges Spiro, who says he's seen good results with all of his 15 patients taking Accutane.

But some researchers warn there may be more to be concerned about than parched lips and stiffness in the joints. Dr. Frank Yoder, a dermatologist at Ohio State University Medical School, co-authored the original protocol for Accutane in 1975 and has used the drug with eight patients who have ichthyosis, a skin disorder commonly known as "fishscale disease."

After three years, using one and one-half times the daily dosage an acne patient would, five patients developed bony growths around the neck vertebrae.

"I think there's a potential danger that no one knows about yet," says Yoder, who says the drug was tested on only about 200 acne patients prior to release.

'Gifted' definition not established

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost every child is a genius — at least in the eyes of his parents. Determining whether a child is truly gifted from a professional standpoint is not so easy, say two professors at The Catholic University of America.

One of the reasons for this difficulty, according to Nancy Taylor, an associate professor in the university's School of Education, is that "there is no general agreement among professionals in the field as to whether giftedness should be based upon intellect, special talents, IQ or creativity."

Despite the lack of consensus on a definition for "gifted," there are some signs that parents can look for if they suspect their child is exceptionally gifted, say Ms. Taylor and Tom Long, also an associate professor of education.

Some of the characteristics commonly found among gifted children, say the two professors, are:

— an early curiosity about the world and an interest in how and why things work;
— a quality of thinking that is different than that of their peers;
— accelerated language growth;
— ability to learn easily and rapidly and to transfer what is learned in one situation to another circumstance;
— unusual creativity at an early age;
— a superior ability to deal with facts, ideas and relationships in a way that stands out among peers;
— a wide variety of interests.

Parents should look for a lot of these signs being exhibited by their child, rather than just one, says Long. For example, a child may have a very good memory, he explains, but this might not indicate above average ability.

If parents have a number of good reasons to believe their child is gifted, the next step that should be taken is to have the child tested professionally.

"Parents should seek the evaluation of a professional who is experienced in dealing with gifted and talented children," says Ms. Taylor.

The younger a child is, the greater the variability there will be in the results of an evaluation, Long points out. This is because the child's development occurs in spurts, especially in the early years, he explains. At one point, a child may test way above the norm, while at another time his or her skills may fall within the norm.

Learning that their child is gifted is sometimes frightening, because parents may not know how to deal with the child.

Long suggests that a gifted child's parents should "find as many ways as possible to expand opportunities for stimulating activities, such as taking the child to museums or to the zoo." But he cautions parents to avoid pressuring the child to achieve, or to grow up too fast.

"When a gifted child is pushed too much, he will often fade very fast and become burnt out," says Long. "Parents should allow for normal development. Kids need to play; it's creative and it exercises their muscles."

Formal education of the gifted child is an important consideration for the parents, notes Long, who believes parents should get children into the most stimulating school environment possible.

Texas native cuts brick wall murals

ATLANTA (AP) — Mara Smith is a sculptor whose art takes an unusual form. She cuts architectural murals in brick.

The Texas native, 37, is one of only a handful of artisans in the country practicing the ancient art of sculpting brick, a process that dates back to Mesopotamian and Babylonian times.

Ms. Smith's most recent project is a pair of brick murals which flank the entrance to a new luxury hotel in northwest Atlanta.

The artist submitted sketches, inspired by mythology and history, in May 1982. Eight months, many broken fingernails and a few worn-out pairs of blue jeans later, the last brick of the two selected murals was set into place early this year at The Waverly, a Stouffer Hotel, at Atlanta's Galleria office and shopping complex.

Sculpting the two 11-by-24-foot murals was no easy task, Ms. Smith acknowledges. She had to move from her studio in Chicago to a warehouse in Endicott, Neb., where the bricks she preferred are made, to work on the sculptures.

These oversize bricks are made from a native high-firing iron spot clay, much like that used in fine stoneware dishes. This type of clay contains specks of iron, and the mineral creates a shiny look in the finished, fired clay product.

DEAR ABBY

Battered husband comes forth

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: God bless "Frightened in Manhattan" for writing to admit that he is a battered husband. You are correct in saying that very few men have the courage to come forward and admit that their wives beat them. I know. I was a badly battered husband for years and had cuts, bruises, burns and broken bones – all attributed to "accidents." How could I tell people that I, a 6-2, 185-pound man, was beaten by a 5-4, 135-pound woman?

My wife showed a very bad temper before we were married, but I thought I could change her. I couldn't. I've been hit with lamps, ashtrays, books, ice buckets, furniture, shoes, you name it. Once while I was asleep she tied me up and beat me with a golf club!

I finally had to choose between my wife and my life. We're divorced now. No names, please. I wouldn't want my mother to know. – BATTERED IN NEW YORK STATE

DEAR BATTERED: National support groups for the battered woman are all over the place, but I know of no equally effective national support group for the battered man as yet. In this regard, women are "beating" the menfolk to smithereens.

DEAR ABBY: We had three teen-age sons. The eldest (I'll call him Sam) was 18. About six months ago I sent for your booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know." All three boys read it, and although we've always answered their questions frankly and openly, there is always something to be learned.

One evening while my husband and I and Sam were watching TV, I asked Sam what he thought of your booklet. He said it was OK, but he didn't agree with your statement that masturbation was normal. (I think he just wanted our reaction.) Sam had not dated yet, but we were aware that he had masturbated because his brother told us that he had seen him. We weren't shocked or upset because we've always felt that it was normal. My husband and I both assured him that it was perfectly normal and nothing to be ashamed of. I hope we succeeded.

He died two weeks later of juvenile diabetes. Thank you, Abby, for helping us to ease his guilty conscience. – HIS PARENTS IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR PARENTS: Please accept my heartfelt sympathy. The most painful of all human experiences is for a parent to bury a child. How kind of you to write and offer thanks to a stranger while your hearts still ache from your tragic loss.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my father suffered a severe heart attack and was hospitalized for a month. Because my mom was alone, I moved back home to be with her for the duration.

I realize that many friends and relatives were truly concerned about my father, but the phone calls we got every night for a month nearly drove us crazy! First it was one uncle, then an aunt, then the cousins, then a former business associate, then a neighbor, then a friend, and so on. They all wanted to assure my mother that they were "thinking" of her and also to get the daily reports on Dad's condition, which brought my poor mother to tears until I finally started taking all the calls.

Many called very late at night. ("I hope you haven't gone to sleep.") And some called very early in the morning. ("I didn't wake you, did I?") I didn't dare to take the phone off the hook for fear the hospital might be calling to give us some news about my father.

Abby, I don't mean to sound ungrateful, but where is it written that during a family crisis people outside the immediate family should bombard them with phone calls?

Please tell your readers that during the first few weeks of a situation like this, no one should call except the immediate family to inquire about the patient. A card or letter would be so much more appreciated. Thanks for letting me get this off my chest. – BEEN THROUGH THE "RINGER" IN L.A.

DEAR BEEN: Will this do? Telephone, NO! Letters, SI!

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Alta Energy reports significant completions

Alta Energy Corporation's president, R. F. Bailey, reports three significant oil and gas completions, two in Mesa County, Colo. and one in Logan County, Okla.

In Mesa County, the firm's Federal 32-2, completed in the Dakota formation at 7,000 feet, had an initial test rate of 2,200,000 cubic feet per day of dry gas and recently went on production at a rate of 600,000 cubic feet per day. Alta is receiving approximately $4.50 per thousand cubic feet for the gas.

In addition, the Federal 32-2 discovered deeper Morrison gas, which tested at 1,500,000 cubic feet per day, and offset wells produce gas from the shallower Mesaverde formation.

Also in Mesa County, the firm's Alta 23-1, completed in the Dakota formation at 7,400 feet, had an initial test rate of 1,500,000 cubic feet per day of dry gas and recently went on production at a rate of 500,000 cubic feet per day. The gas is being sold for approximately $4.50 per thousand cubic feet.

The Alta 23-1 also tested gas at 870,000 cubic feet per day from the Morrison formation at 7,800 feet and, based on log analyses, should produce gas from the Mesaverde formation at 3,200 feet.

In Logan County, Oklahoma, Alta's Morgan No. 1 was recently completed in the Mississippian formation at 5,100 feet. During testing, the well flowed at the rate of 550 barrels of oil per day with a flowing tubing pressure of 380 pounds per square inch. The Morgan No. 1 potential tested 307 barrels of oil and 595,000 cubic feet of gas per day, flowing through a 16/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 500 pounds per square inch. The well is flowing at a restricted rate of approximately 125 barrels of oil and 270,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

The three completions are a part of Alta's 15-well year-end drilling program that resulted in 13 completions and two dry holes. Alta owns, directly and through its 1982-A and 1982-B limited partnerships, approximately 25 percent of each of the three wells and surrounding acreage.

Each of the three prospects on which the wells are located has sufficient acreage for additional development drilling. Alta Energy Corporation, a Midland oil and gas exploration and production company, is traded on the over-the-counter market (NASDAQ symbol: ALTE).

Deck clearing agreement wanted

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Foreign Affairs Editor

PARIS — Secretary of State George Shultz hopes Western Europe and Japan will reach final agreement here on a set of new rules for strategic trade with the communist bloc that will "clear the decks" of the divisive dispute at the May 28-30 Williamsburg summit.

Shultz made the comment in a short interview prior to the opening of the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) meeting that will conclude here on Tuesday. "It's a good list," Shultz said of the new strategic consensus.

The OECD nations have been working on a series of studies to avoid a repitition of last summer's bitter dispute over the natural gas pipeline being built by the Soviet Union with considerable European supplies of advanced energy technologies.

The Reagan administration tried unsuccessfully for more than a year to embargo the transfer of U.S.-manufactured components to the European companies, finally agreeing to lift the embargo with the fig leaf of a European promise to cooperate in the future.

The attempt has been to draw up a new list of COCOM (Coordinating Committee for the Control of Export of Strategic Commodities) items that are of potential military use to the Soviet Union and its allies and restrict them from the market.

Shultz said that the second part of the study — that dealing with how any such allied embargo would be administered — is as important as the list itself because there are so many ways Moscow can circumvent the allied ability to restrict trade.

The current list is so outdated, he said, that many of the restricted items are openly available on the European market. In addition, many such technologies are sold to other socialist countries such as Romania or Hungary which presumably supply them to Moscow.

One reason the dispute flared last summer is the fact that the health of Western European economies, which are suffering high inflation and widespread unemployment, are heavily dependent on the jobs created by sales to the Soviet bloc.

Consequently, the European allies, particularly France, extended below-market interest rates of 6 and 7 per cent to the Soviets for loans to purchase French-made pipelayers. The OECD is expected to set a new rate of 12 per cent for any future credit.

"That's one of the things being reviewed in the OECD — trade with the Eastern countries, or more generally, with state-controlled trading companies," Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs W. Allen Wallis said here.

"Those studies throw some light on how much employment is actually generated by trade with the East, how secure it is and how stable and so forth," he said. Wallis added Reagan would like to clear the slate of these issues before Williamsburg.

Many of the studies launched after last June's Versailles economic summit "are coming to a conclusion now, in fact, in a day or two we will probably know how almost all of them stand," he said.

Geophysical Society annual meeting Friday

The Permian Basin Geophysical Society will hold its 29th annual meeting Friday. The theme is "1983 — Turning Point?"

Registration will be Thursday, May 12, 1:00-5 p.m. at Midland Center, to be followed by an icebreaker cocktail party from 6:30-9:00 p.m. in Midland Center, Room 5.

The technical program starts Friday at 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. at the Midland Center. Guest speaker will be Gene Brumbaugh, president, Society of Exploration Geophysicists.

Other technical speakers include: Gary Whittle, Birdwill Division, SSC; Ken Hargrove, Strata Seis, Inc.; David B. Hayes, Golden Geophysical Corporation; Ken Morgan, Texas Christian University; G.R. Keller, University of Texas at El Paso; J.W. Ehlers, Amoco Production Company; Michael McCormack, ARCO Oil & Gas Company; Joong H. Chun, Seismograph Service Corp.

Cost is $25 which includes cocktail party, registration and lunch.

LAST CHANCE
LET'S DANCE

I would like to thank the many people who responded to our invitation to form the Road Runner II Singles Dances Club. The response, although encouraging was not sufficient to form the club. Therefore, we are re-running this for those people that either did not see the first letter or who procrastinated and did not take advantage of the opportunity. There is no maximum limit on membership, but we feel that a minimum of 300 mixed members are necessary to ensure a good turnout at the dances. If you are interested please let us hear from you after reading the following letter.

If you like to dance, but are tired of the bar scene, we would like to extend to you an invitation to join and help form a country and western singles dance club. The club will be very similar to the current Road Runner C & W Dance Club and will be strictly a non-profit organization. Other than a nominal door charge, there will be no hidden cost.

The club will sponsor at least six dances with a live band at a location large enough to accomodate the membership. Beer and set-ups will be furnished. On alternate months the club membership will meet at a public facility such as the Stardust. The membership will be kept informed via a newsletter. To fund the club we are seeking 150 ladies membership at $15.00 and 150 men's memberships at $25.00. If you are interested in joining please send a check or money order for the appropriate amount to: P.O. Box B-9-C, Midland Reporter Telegram Midland, Texas 79702 and include your name, age, address, home and work telephone number along with a self addressed stamped envelope. Any monies raised above the amount needed to fund the club will either be refunded proportionately to members or be refunded proportionately to members or applied to the benefit

Yours Truly,
Susie Hitchcock

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell today, retreating from record heights as traders cashed in on the market's broad rally.

Four stocks fell in price for every three that rose in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 3.97 points to 1,228.62 at noon and had been down more than 8 points in the first 30 minutes of trading.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrials rose 12.87 points to a record 1,232.59, finishing the week with a net gain of 6.39 points and extending its gains to 455.67 points since last Aug. 12. The previous closing high of 1,226.20 was reached April 29.

The NYSE's composite index fell .38 to 95.09. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.63 at 440.99.

Big Board volume was 40.56 million shares a third of the way through the session, down from 48.83 million in the same period Friday.

American Motors topped the active list on the NYSE, up ⅛ at 10¾, in trading that included a block of 275,000 shares changing hands at 10⅛ each.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Fixed rate mortgage refuses to die

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — It is rare that something pronounced dead a few years ago should arrive back among the living, quietly step into its old role, and go about its business as if nothing had happened.

But the rarity has occurred: The fixed-rate, long-term home mortgage is back among us. Just ask your local banker, or look in his newspaper ads.

That this should occur seems to amount to a considerable mystery, especially when you recall that many a lender said good riddance to the critter as if it were a despicable criminal of the most dastardly kind.

There was a reason for that. The long-term, fixed-rate mortgage got a lot of lenders in serious trouble. Here they were with 8 percent loans on their books when they, themselves, were paying more for money to keep alive.

As interest rates rose the situation worsened. Lenders were losing on those mortgages every day, and yet they couldn't get rid of them. No sane borrower would pay off such a mortgage in advance. No, not even the president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, who held a 6 percent home mortgage and who reacted in horror to the suggestion that he retire it early.

MANY SAVINGS institutions went under or were forced to merge with others. It was understandable: They were paying 15 percent for their money and earning only 8 percent on their mortgages. Never again, they said.

Never didn't last, and among others, Saul Klaman, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, is deeply concerned. Some institutions, he says, have dangerously short memories.

To make such loans, and then hold them in the bank's own investment portfolio rather than reselling them, said Klaman, "amounts to playing Russian roulette with interest rates and the future of the institution."

An economist with a memory, a memory of savings institutions begging the federal government for help, Klaman told the annual meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Cincinnati a week or so ago that bank managers have "an overriding fiduciary responsibility not to 'bet the bank' in this way."

The penalty for being wrong on interest rates, he said, "is death." And the interest rate cycle, he reminded them, was far from dead.

IT ALMOST GOES without saying that nobody can foresee where interest rates will be 30 years from now. Or in 20 or 10 or five or in one year. But some lenders are out there with 30-year commitments.

Why?

For a combination of reasons. One reason becomes obvious when you consider what would happen if interest rates fell to 8 percent or less. It would be the reverse of the situation that earlier had caused so much trouble.

A second reason is that fixed-rate, long-term mortgages are probably the easiest of all to sell. Customers are accustomed to them. They like them.

The third factor in the decision is revealed by any mortgage rate book.

One example will do. On a $24,500 loan at 13.75 percent for 30 years the monthly payment amounts to $285.46. How much of that do you think goes to build up equity, or ownership? About $5 a month, or $60 in the first year.

The rest, about $280 a month, is interest, because interest is concentrated "up front," particularly so as the term becomes longer.

Now consider this: Most people who take out a 30-year mortgage never keep it that long. Many of them will sell the house or remortgage — after having paid all that interest up front, or in advance.

And when they do that, the effective interest rate rises enormously.

What you don't know can hurt you

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

What you don't know about your credit rating can hurt you when you're trying to borrow money, get a job or even buy life insurance.

Information about your spending habits is collected by credit bureaus and is used by lenders, employers and insurers. A mistake on your record could mean your rejection.

The Fair Credit Reporting Act of 1971 gives consumers the right to see their credit records and a growing number of people apparently are taking advantage of that right.

TRW Information Services Division, one of the country's biggest credit bureaus with files on 90 million people, says 700,000 consumers a year ask for their records — up from 500,000 two years ago.

Some credit bureaus — like TRW — will give you a copy of your record; others will simply let you see it. There is generally a small fee — $8 most places for a TRW report, for example.

There is no charge, however, if you have been turned down for credit, employment or insurance within the past 30 days because of information contained in the report.

Note: Credit bureaus do not make value judgments about individuals. They simply gather facts about your past payment practices — whether you habitually are late paying your bills, etc. — and forward that information to their clients.

You probably provided much of the information in your record yourself. When you fill in a credit application, for example, the creditor will forward the details to the credit bureau along with a request for information on your past relationship with other creditors.

If you have never used credit, you may not have a credit rating at all. And that can be almost as much of a problem as a bad record. A New Jersey man who won more than $1.5 million in the New York State lottery was turned down by two banks when he tried to get a credit card. The man had always used cash — not credit. And one banker said lenders are "suspicious of people who have no credit rating; it's unusual."

You can find out who has a credit file on you by looking in the yellow pages of your telephone directory under credit bureaus. Call the burcaus listed and ask if you are included in their records. If you can't locate the nearest credit bureau by using the phone book, check local merchants or creditors to see which company they get their reports from.

If there is an error in your file, notify the credit bureau immediately. Give the bureau any pertinent data you have concerning the error. The law requires the bureau to reinvestigate the situation and modify or remove inaccurate information. It may be a simple matter: The erroneous material may refer to someone with a similar name, for example.

The problem may be more complicated, however. It may, for example, involve an ongoing dispute you have with a creditor. If you are not satisfied with the results of the reinvestigation, you may enter a statement in your file of 100 words or less explaining why you think the record is wrong. You also may enter a statement showing a special reason, like illness or loss of a job, for a late or delayed payment.

The credit bureau must include your statement — or a coded version of it — with any reports it issues about you. And, at your request, the bureau must send a correction to anyone who received a report for credit purposes within the past six months or for employment purposes within the past two years.

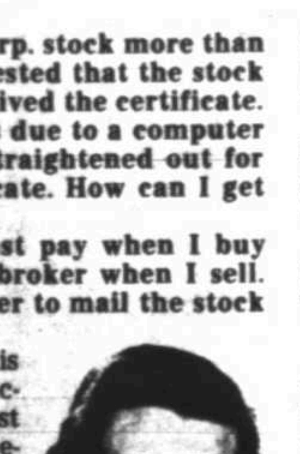
INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Delivery of stock certificate takes time

BY BILL DOYLE

Q. I purchased 300 shares of Exxon Corp. stock more than four months ago. I paid for it and requested that the stock certificate be sent to me. I have not received the certificate. According to the brokerage firm, this is due to a computer error. They claim the error has been straightened out for two months, but I still have no certificate. How can I get this cleared up?

There is a set period in which I must pay when I buy stock or deliver the certificate to the broker when I sell. Isn't there a specified time for the broker to mail the stock certificate to me?



Doyle

A. No. The "set period" you mention is for "settlement." A "regular way transaction" — the method through which most stock trades are handled — calls for five-day settlement. When you buy you must pay the broker within five business days. When you sell you must deliver the certificate to the broker within five business days. Assuming there's no holiday involved, that works out to a calendar week.

But after you buy stock and ask for the certificate, delivery doesn't come nearly as fast. A number of details have to be taken care of first.

If the person who sold the shares you bought had the certificate registered in his name, that certificate has to go from the seller's broker to your broker and to the stock's transfer agent, where it is canceled. If the seller had the stock in "street name" at a brokerage firm this is handled by computer.

Then the transfer agent issues a new certificate, registered in your name for delivery to you. All this takes time. Lately, three or four weeks is about normal. Four months is ridiculous.

Since you're getting nowhere with your broker, take your story to the Office of Consumer Affairs, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, Judiciary Plaza, 450 Fifth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20549.

* * *

Q. I bought 100 shares of Tenneco, Inc., common stock before its latest "ex-dividend" date. I received the stock certificate, dated after the ex-dividend date, several weeks later.

Tenneco paid the dividend in March, but I haven't received it. Who did?

A. The person who sold the stock you bought and who was the registered owner of those 100 shares on the "record date." As a result, the dividend was paid to him.

But because you bought the 100 shares before the ex-dividend date, you're entitled to that dividend. It's up to your broker to get it for you. Most likely, the dividend has been credited to your account at your brokerage firm.

Since you evidently want that money and don't intend to leave it in the brokerage account, tell your broker to send you a check. If you get no results from the broker, complain to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The mailbag has been bulging lately with all kinds of complaints about brokers. My standard advice is to contact the SEC.

* * *

Q. After I purchased a commodity futures contract in silver, the price of silver tumbled sharply. That triggered a margin call and I had to put up more money. I mailed my check and, a few days later, decided to sell and close my account.

I have a credit coming to me for what is left in my account. I telephoned the commodity dealer several times, but I have not received my money. I seem to be getting the runaround. Should I complain to the SEC?

A. Nope. The SEC regulates the securities trading business. You should contact the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, 2033 K Street, N.W, Washington, D.C. 20581. The CFTC has the chore of overseeing the often wild and woolly world of commodity trading.
