San Antonio voters reject spending cap

By DOUG CRICHTON
Associated Press Writer

Plans to clamp a cap on San Antonio's city spending suffered a stinging defeat Saturday night behind the last-hour, big-money attack waged by Mayor Henry Cisneros.

With all precincts counted, the vote was 75,576 to 38,135 — or 66.5 percent to 33.5 percent — against C.A. Stubbs' spending-cap proposal that would have tied increases in city spending to population and inflation growth.

In two other elections, meanwhile, the District 1 Texas Senate seat went into a runoff between Edd Hargett and Richardson Anderson, while Republican Robert Hunter scored a narrow victory in his Texas House race in Abilene.

"All I know is the people of our city are very smart and they can read between all of that craziness," said Cisneros, who raised $300,000 and put in 14-hour days to defeat the plan he said would scare off new businesses and residents and damage the city's bond rating.

"And those charges that the city is the armpit of the world and their mayor is corrupt and all of that stupidity they've been putting out all those weeks...the people could read between all of that and did so in every district," he added.

Arch-rival Stubbs, however, groused that "eight weeks ago, a scientific survey showed 46 percent of the voters wanted the cap, 39 percent did not and 15 percent were undecided. That was before the big money interests launched their campaign.

"You see, what is happening here is a little bitty old taxpayer is taking after the millionaires, the special interests, bankers and politicos who stand to gain from public spending," he said.

Stubbs, an outspoken conservative, clashed with Cisneros when he founded the Homeowner-Taxpayer Association last year in his successful war against fluoridating San Antonio's water.

Senate defense bill sharply reduces funds for 'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 86-3 Saturday to approve a huge bill that sharply reduces President Reagan's plans to increase defense spending, particularly for key projects such as "Star Wars."

Passage capped a long week of work and came late Saturday evening as the Republican-controlled chamber met in an unusual weekend session to plow through more than a dozen amendments, most of them minor.

The only opposition votes were cast by Sens. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, John Melcher, D-Mont., and William Proxmire, D-Wis.

The Senate bill eventually will have to be reconciled with the Pentagon spending plan that the Democratic-controlled House will work through this week.

For the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, Reagan sought $320 billion in defense spending, compared with the current budget of about $286 billion. The Senate measure authorizes $295 billion while the House version permits $292 billion.

White takes big gamble of career with call for tax hike

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

White

AUSTIN — All good gamblers know the odds they face when placing a bet, especially a big one. And politicians can play for no higher stakes than defeat in the voting booth.

Gov. Mark White, already down in the polls by as much as 20 points against former Republican Gov. Bill Clements, took the biggest gamble of his political career this week when he proposed a temporary tax increase to help solve the state's deficit.

Some say the move was equivalent to turning up a second ace — for the other guy.

White already had developed a reputation for working poorly with the Legislature. Then he called for raising taxes, a desperation move that Democrats know helped doom Walter Mondale's campaign in 1984.

No one knew the odds better than White himself.

"Some say this may cost us our jobs," he told the Legislature convening in special session Wednesday. "And it might.

"We must do our job for the people of Texas — regardless of the consequences."

An Analysis

The governor's aides say White agonized over taxes, and the severity of the budget cuts necessary to avoid them, finally making the decision just 17 hours before he delivered the noon speech to the lawmakers.

"It was a war-room atmosphere," says Matt Lyon, White's speechwriter.

Observers split along partisan lines when asked whether White committed political suicide Wednesday.

Clements proudly reminded voters of the similarity between White and Mondale.

Conservative Democrats in Senate back taxes

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In the Texas Legislature, conservative usually means "no new taxes."

But conservative Democrats in the Senate have come out fully behind new taxes — "revenue enhancement" is the preferred term — and have lined up against their fellow conservative Democrats in the House.

These senators say their support of a tax bill is not a sign that they are growing more moderate. But the state must bring in more money, they say, or state government will be dismantled.

"It's not ideological. I voted against the tax bill last time," says Sen. John Montford, a conservative Democrat from Lubbock.

"My position on taxes is: when it's essential to the economic survival of our state, then my conservative philosophy tells me it would be the wrong thing to do to oppose new taxes," Montford says.

State Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle says, "I don't think it (supporting taxes) has to do with moderation, it has to do with reality.

"We could go over here and demagogue if we want," Slagle says, "but we need to solve the problem."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby started the trend. He comes from a wealth Houston family, long part of the downtown "establishment." To many, he embodies the business-oriented conservative Democrat.

Proposed policy would let children with AIDS attend classes

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland school children — diagnosed as having Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — would not be barred from the classroom under a policy to be considered Tuesday by the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

The policy implies that there is no medical proof persons with AIDS, AIDS-related conditions or Human T-Lymphotropic Virus Type III infection pose a health risk to others.

And, as a general rule, children diagnosed as having AIDS would be allowed to attend school in a regular classroom with the approval of the superintendent.

The meeting will be held in the school administration building at 702 N. N St. It begins at 1:30 p.m.

MISD Board President Bill Jackson said the policy — adopted under the guidelines of the Texas Education Agency — was not created to alarm the public, but rather to prepare for the "inevitable."

"We're planning ahead just in case we're confronted with this problem," he said.

Jackson said there have been no reported cases of AIDS or AIDS-related conditions among Midland school children.

The policy also specifies the school district would respect the child's right of privacy and "knowledge that a child has AIDS/ARC or HTLV-III infection would be confined" to the school principal, nurse and child's teacher.

Those persons would be instructed on what precautions may be necessary and would be aware of confidentiality requirements, Jackson said.

Jackson said local health authorities would serve as the intermediary between the parents, child, attending physician, school officials and staff.

However, the child may be placed in a special education program when "circumstances" warrant individualized instruction, Jackson said.

Jackson said a child may be temporarily removed from the classroom if officials determine he or she "might pose a risk of transmission to others."

"We do not want for any child, whether he has AIDS or chicken pox, to contaminate other kids," Jackson said.

Jackson said officials could request a student be temporarily removed from the classroom in cases where he or she lacks toilet training, has open sores that cannot be covered, or demonstrates behavior which could result in direct innoculation of potentially infected body fluids to the bloodstream.

A child would be removed from the classroom only until an appropriate alternative education program could be established, or a medical advisor determined that the risk to others has been abated, Jackson said.

A student removed from the classroom for biting or lack of toilet training would immediately be referred to the MISD Admission, Retention and Discharge Committee for assessment of whether an alternative education program should be established.

A child temporarily removed from the classroom for open sores or skin eruptions which cannot be covered would be placed on homebound instruction and readmitted only with medical documentation that the risk no longer exists.

Jackson said the school district would be flexible in its response and attempt to use the least restrictive means to accommodate the child's needs.

In any case of temporary removal of the student from the school setting, state regulations and school policy regarding homebound instruction would apply, said Jackson.

PBS station changeover sparks complaints

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

John McCarroll knows that West Texans take their TV seriously.

Flipping through a thick stack of telephone memos from angry and confused viewers, McCarroll — general manager of the Permian Basin's new public television station — said he has spent much of the past two months talking with people upset with his station.

The complaints come after McCarroll's KOCV-Channel 36 replaced the Dallas-based public television station, KERA-Channel 13, on the Basin airwaves.

The changeover took place June 1 in Odessa, and July 1 in Midland.

Most of the calls have been about programs being shown at different times than their listings in television guides, McCarroll said.

Other angry callers have criticized the loss of programs such as British comedies and operas.

"It's frustrating to me. The channel we watch the most...all of a sudden it's gone," said George Pauling, a Midland viewer.

"I think it's horrid. There's no way they can furnish us the programming we get out of the Dallas channel," he said.

McCarroll defends his station against such comments, saying it is a way to keep public television in the Midland-Odessa area.

"The really regrettable thing about this is people think we have knocked KERA off the air," said McCarroll, "when in effect we're trying to ensure there will be public television out here."

Times-Mirror Cable replaced KERA because the microwave signal transmitting programs was not dependable, said Greg Holmes, regional vice president of Times-Mirror Cable.

The company also decided to offer subscribers a local public television station, Holmes said.

"We feel like the introduction of KOCV gives our residents a unique opportunity to have a PBS station in their own area," Holmes said.

Holmes said Times-Mirror could pick up both stations, but the company would have to pay a copyright fee for KERA, and viewers would receive duplicate programs.

"We can, but we've got to be realistic about it. Both would have to be supported by funds and donations from the community. Given the economic situation we're in today that's really not practical," Holmes said.

By picking up the local station, Times-Mirror is encouraging and supporting a local business, Holmes said.

"I think there is tremendous need for a PBS station in this market. It's a local product — a local business," Holmes said. "We've got a great opportunity to help it succeed by putting it on our service and encouraging the residents of our community to contribute to it.

"I just hope folks are patient enough to allow it to grow and become as attractive and lucrative as KERA."

But some viewers said they fear KOCV will never be able to afford programs offered by the Dallas station.

Negotiations continue between SW Bell, union

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Negotiators for Southwestern Bell Corp. and the union representing 48,000 workers continued to meet in downtown St. Louis Saturday night in an 11th-hour effort to avert a strike.

The old contracts between Southwestern Bell and the Communications Workers of America were scheduled to expire at midnight Saturday. At 10 p.m., spokesmen for both sides said the talks were continuing but there had been no settlement.

"They're meeting right now and they're making some progress but they're still far apart on some issues," said W.R. Harwell, a spokesman for District 6 of the CWA.

A Southwestern Bell spokesman, Jim Epperson, said the company was encouraged that the negotiations were continuing at the company's downtown headquarters. "But there's been no settlement," he said.

"We're no closer, but we're no further apart," said another union official, Doyle Niemann.

Niemann said a settlement that would avoid a strike was possible, but that the union could not accept the company's wage proposals.

"We remain convinced that the framework is there," Niemann said. "It's up to the company to come forward with acceptable proposals."

DEFENSE

The Senate measure proposes $3.95 billion for spending on Star Wars anti-missile research, far below Reagan's request of $5.3 billion but still an increase from the current $3.1 billion budget.

The House bill would permit $3.8 billion for Star Wars, although there are at least a half-dozen amendments proposing spending levels that range from $1 billion to Reagan's total request.

One major proposal, killed on a 72-24 vote, would have banned trade with communist nations if that trade was in any way subsidized by the U.S. government.

The proposal was offered by Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who said America should not help Soviet expansion plans. But opponents contended it would halt virtually all U.S. trade, including farm shipments, with a large number of nations.

While both bills scale back Reagan's defense plan, they also permit the Pentagon to buy thousands of fighters, bombers, tanks, ships and missiles.

In addition to the total figures and Star Wars spending, there are dozens of other differences between the two bills.

The Senate bill permits chemical weapons production for the first time in 17 years, proposes a 4 percent pay increase for America's 2.1 million uniformed personnel, drops a ban on testing of anti-satellite weapons, and urges — but does not require — continued U.S. compliance with the SALT II nuclear arms pact that Reagan says will no longer be used to guide his decisions.

The House is likely to take differing positions on all those issues.

One key difference is an amendment approved Friday by the House to ban all U.S. nuclear weapons tests for a year, a proposal that is not part of the Senate measure.

The ban is opposed by the Reagan administration but was pushed by arms control advocates who say it could eventually lead to a new U.S.-Soviet treaty outlawing all nuclear tests. A 1963 treaty bans open-air tests but both superpowers have exploded hundreds of underground blasts in the past 23 years.

Reagan's checkup reveals no abnormalities, doctor says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan underwent a two-hour urological examination at Bethesda Naval Hospital on Saturday and his doctor said the checkup "revealed no abnormalities or evidence of tumor or any other disease."

"No further urological examinations or other medical procedures are planned," Dr. T. Burton Smith, the president's physician, said in a written statement issued by the White House.

As the president left the hospital, he said, "Everything's normal, everything's fine."

Smith said the president received a local anesthetic during the two procedures performed by doctors.

"It looks like very good news," said Dr. John Graham, professor of urology at Northwestern University Medical School, when asked to comment on the White House description of the checkup.

Mark Weinberg, assistant White House press secretary, said Reagan would go ahead with his plans for a trip to Springfield, Ill., and Chicago for a speech and news conference on Tuesday.

Reagan, who is 75, appeared to move more slowly than usual as he and his wife, Nancy, walked to a helicopter for the 15-minute return flight to the White House.

Touching down on the White House lawn, Reagan stepped off the helicopter smiling and said he had no plans to return to the hospital. He said he was not on any medication.

"Everything's unchanged since 1982," when he had his last urological examination and doctors said no treatment was needed, the president said.

Experts described the examination as a routine procedure to look for growths or other problems in the prostate or bladder.

Smith said the president participated before the examination in a voluntary drug testing program for senior White House personnel. He was advised to do this, rather than waiting until Monday as planned, because the anesthetic could affect the drug test results.

That was a fight that Cisneros lost, and one he said give added fervor to his battle against the spending-cap plan.

"We people in San Antonio love our city," said Cliff Morton, chairman of Taxpayers Against the Cap. "I don't recall an election where as many people got involved in so many different ways...We're a city that works together and we don't expect a free lunch."

Stubbs' proposal would have allowed city spending to grow only in step with population and inflation. For example, if the city's population grew 3 percent and inflation were 3 percent, the city budget could expand by 6 percent.

Stubbs, however, said the plan was needed to keep city spending in line with population and inflation growth. It met a roar of approval from San Antonio's conservative community of civilian and military retirees.

In Northeast Texas' District 1, meanwhile, Hargett and Anderson came out on top of a four-way race to fill the seat that Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, left in mid-April to become a lobbyist in Austin.

Hargett, a Republican engineer and farmer from Linden who made an unsuccessful bid for Congress last year, won 22,736 votes, or 40.3 percent, to 18,223 votes, or 32.3 percent, from Anderson, a Democratic Harrison County judge.

L.P. "Pete" Patterson, a Democratic state representative from Brookston, won 9,960 votes, and Thomas Ramsay, a Mount Vernon businessman, got 5,450.

In the House District 79 race in Taylor County, Republican Robert Hunter narrowly won with 5,032 votes, or 50.8 percent, to Democrat Larry Holmes' 4,870 votes, or 49.2 percent with all the precincts counted.

Both candidates are from Abilene. Hunter, 58, is an administrator at Abilene Christian University, and Holmes, 29 is a real estate agent.

The election was to fill the seat vacated by Gary Thompson, who recently switched to the Republican Party and resigned to go to work for a state agency.

GAMBLE

"Mark White thinks leadership really means taxership," he says.

Texas Republican Party Chairman George Strake says White's announcement came as good news at GOP headquarters.

"Saddling us with $680 million in new taxes is not economically sound and, from his point of view, not politically sound," Strake says.

Democrats, however, say White "made points" with "a very bold step."

"He's illustrating to people that he's trying to be a statesman, not a politician," says House Majority Leader Steve Carriker, D-Roby.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan and a frequent White critic, says the governor "probably helped himself" by pointing out that cuts would hurt too much.

"He honestly confronted the issue, while I think the Republican candidate is simply parroting a hackneyed phrase (no new taxes)," Caperton says.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, says White probably already has lost the anti-taxers vote anyway.

"Anybody who doesn't have any more insight and knowledge than to believe we can have a viable and progressive state without additional revenues would vote for somebody like Clements," Parker says.

Even one former Republican House member says White's "stock went up." "He probably couldn't go down in the polls much further," he says.

But on a larger scale, the whole special session is a poor-odds gamble for White. Like former Texas Longhorns football coach Darrell Royal used to say, "Three things can happen when you throw a forward pass, and two of them are bad."

Since White first decided to call a special session, House and Senate leaders have been setting themselves up for a stalemate.

Arming himself with the Constitution, House Speaker Gib Lewis vowed the House would raise no taxes during the session. He proposed $1.2 billion in budget cuts and a variety of bookkeeping maneuvers to keep the state solvent until the Legislature can address the entire deficit during the January regular session.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, president of the Senate, says those cuts would "save state government by dismantling it."

Hobby called for $650 million in cuts and says the Legislature should make up the rest of the deficit by raising taxes.

Four days into the special session, the deadlock remains. And if it continues, that's bad news for White. If lawmakers stay in town for one — or two — 30-day special sessions and accomplish nothing, he comes out as a powerless leader.

Another option bodes no better for the governor.

If Hobby and the Senate give in and go along with deep House cuts, then White's warnings that those cuts will hurt too much come across as empty rhetoric.

For GOP Chairman Strake, no plan leaves White a winner.

"I don't see it right now," he says. "I'm just delighted it's not our guy in that same role, because he's in a tough place right now."

Democrats and some Republicans, however, see one rosy scenario for the governor. Each starts with the House passing an appropriations bill with heavy cuts.

"If White then responds and rescues those things that are essential to decent state government, then he's a hero," says Parker.

"He comes out a winner if we solve this problem," says Caperton, "if we solve it through a combination of cuts and taxes."

But they warn that White has to "roll up his sleeves" and work directly with lawmakers and the public, pointing out the damage that specific cuts would bring.

"If he can personally interject himself in the process, not depend on his aides, he can have some real input," says one former Republican representative.

Meanwhile, more cards will be dealt almost daily. White needs to react carefully, call all the bets and wait for the right time to raise — or bluff.

"It's a long time 'till November," says House Majority Leader Carriker.

TAXES

Hobby spent the first part of the month meeting with business leaders — most of them conservative corporate types — and convinced them for the most part that the state must have new taxes.

Hobby quickly gained the support of Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, the conservative chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. When Jones publicly came out for new taxes, most of the other conservative Democratic senators followed him and Hobby.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, however, says Hobby never pushed him or any other senator into supporting new taxes.

Blake said he thinks senators, even the conservatives, realize that cutting roughly $3 billion dollars from the budget is too drastic.

And conservative Democratic Sen. Bill Sims of San Angelo also favors new taxes.

"We just cannot afford to jeopardize the programs we've built up over the years."

Even retiring Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguins, who is supporting a Republican to replace him in the Senate because the Democratic nominee "is too liberal," thinks the Legislature must raise taxes.

Shortly after Comptroller Bob Bullock revised his revenue estimate and predicted in February the state would fall $1.3 billion in the red, the Senate met for one day in early March for a briefing session.

During that session, Traeger, one of the Senate's most outspoken members, rose to declare, "Whistling in the wind is what we're doing if we don't deal with this thing right now."

He added the Legislature should meet to immediately raise the sales tax from 4.125 to 5 percent, a plan he called "painless and fair."

Many senators point to politics in House as the root of their conflict with representatives.

Speaker Gib Lewis faces a Republican, K. Wayne Lee, to hold on to his House seat.

Lewis' Republican district in Fort Worth might boot him out of office if Lee can portray the speaker as a free-spending liberal.

Conservative Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, puts it this way: "House members are looking at Gib's election and their own election and they'd rather have a Band Aid simply because of elections."

Lewis and House Ways and Means Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, prefer the so-called Band Aid approach — making enough cuts to keep the state solvent until next year, when lawmakers will meet in their regular legislative session.

Party Chairman Slagle gives Hobby the credit for enlisting support from conservative Democrats for a tax bill, but says Lewis has a tougher problem in the House.

"For one thing, you have to explain each individual program to Gib to get him to understand the damage these cuts will do," Slagle says, noting that Hobby understands the intricacies of state government as well as anyone.

Another problem for Lewis, Slagle says, is the 54 Republicans in the House who probably would oppose any tax bill in the special session.

To have a new plan take effect immediately, two-thirds of the members in both chambers must approve. Otherwise, the tax takes effect in 90 days.

"Gib has looked at it and says, 'Do I really want blood all over the floor to get a tax bill that won't take effect until January,'" Slagle says.

Sen. Montford acknowledges that that the House is in the drivers seat and has the Constitution on its side. "We're in a pretty good tug of war," he says, "and they got more rope and more people."

Said Midlander Marion Lowery: "For quality programming, you've got to have the money. West Texas isn't going to be able to handle that."

Other viewers say they are more patient, explaining the channel just needs some more time.

"I just think there's no substitute for being around a while. Even given their current level of programming, I think it's made a big difference in the quality of programming in West Texas," said Christopher Hall, a Midland physician who says he watches KOCV.

Hall said he wasn't able to get public TV before KOCV went on the air because he lives out of town where cable was not available.

Another KOCV viewer, Roger Olien of Midland, said, "I think it's a very valuable cultural asset to have locally. There will be the possibility of local things. It's more worthwhile to have it in the Permian Basin, than to pick up programs in Dallas."

Alice White, a KOCV viewer, said she liked having a local public television station.

"We feel like maybe our input would mean something, which is nice," she said.

McCarroll agrees the Odessa station won't be able to completely copy the programming of KERA.

The quality of the station's programming will depend on the support it gets from West Texans, McCarroll said.

"Right now we feel we need to offer the PBS programs and eventually emulate KERA. But it depends on the kind of support we get out here," McCarroll said.

During their membership drives in August, December and March, the station hopes to raise $100,000 to begin buying other programs such as British comedies, McCarroll said.

"Just because KERA did," said McCarroll, "doesn't mean that a public station's responsibility is to buy British comedy.

"Not to say we won't do it. We just want to establish ourselves as being a legitimate public TV station first.

"We want to be a public station for West Texas, which may mean we do things differently from KERA," he said.

Local programming is one thing KOCV will be able to offer, such as its one-hour program "Newsmakers," McCarroll said.

Also, Permian Basin residents can have input in the station's programming, he said.

"People from the Permian Basin, when they call or write, they'll have a big say in what we're going to be doing.

"KERA's main support was from the Dallas-Fort Worth area. They didn't have to be responsible to a particular area."

Despite some hurt feelings and confusion about the changeover, McCarroll said he is confident the station can weather the storm.

"We think we can generate the $100,000 per year based on market areas our size.

"There's no doubt the money's here. It's just whether people will support a new venture."

Pickens: Oil has to go to $35 before rigs bounce back

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — James Kilpatrick, an oil industry executive, claims takeover wizard T. Boone Pickens was wrong when he predicted that oil prices must rise sharply before drilling revives.

Pickens, president of Mesa Petroleum, told a panel of the National Conference of State Legislatures on Wednesday that oil prices would have to rise to at least $35 a barrel, with expectations of going to $45 a barrel, before rig startups bounce back.

Oil prices should hit $20 a barrel by January, but that won't help this country, Pickens said.

Kilpatrick, executive vice president of New Orleans-based Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co., said he sees the sitution differently.

As evidence, he cites the days of $28-a-barrel prices when a number of rigs were still drilling, just before an unprecedented drop in the price of crude.

"The drilling rig is the center of all activity in the oil business, and the price of crude will have to be in excess of $20 dollars before it will be feasible for the oil companies to drill and explore for oil any time in the near future," Kilpatrick said.

"I don't see drilling turning around before the end of 1987," said Kilpatrick, who predicts that prices could drift into the $20 dollar range in the next 12 months.

Kilpatrick said he thinks the latest OPEC agreement would be good for at least the next 60 days as certain countries struggle to squeeze production.

"I can't help but believe it will be of some permanent nature because the OPEC countries are suffering through the low prices and it just makes more sense for them to get the same amount of revenue out of lesser volumes," he said.

"As far as it relates to Louisiana, certainly we've seen the price of crude jump from $11 to $15 dollars, which is a nice increase and certainly the oil industry needs it," Kilpatrick said.

However the oil industry is divided between oil and oil service companies, he said, adding that the oil service companies are the ones that are "really suffering and going into Chapter 11 bankruptcy at this time."

"The big problem here is stability. We have to get the price stabilized because to exploit the oil and gas in the oceans, it requires some three to six years before you get the first drop produced," Kilpatrick said.

STATE

Discrimination of female executives less in northeastern, western U.S.

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Female executives face less sex discrimination in the northeastern and western United States than they do in the South and Midwest, a new study shows.

"Our study indicates that attitudes, in general, tend to be more conservative in the southern and midwestern regions of the U.S. and more liberal in the eastern and western regions," Baylor and Texas A&M university researchers wrote in a report published recently in "Personnel Administrator."

Those attitudes have "a very real effect on women's performance appraisals, job assignments and promotions," said Charlotte D. Sutton, who is completing a Ph.D. in management at A&M. She co-authored the study with Dr. Kris K. Moore, a Baylor business school professor.

Sutton and Moore surveyed 782 executives, 44.5 percent of whom were men and 55.5 percent women. The executives were selected randomly from Standard & Poor's and Dun & Bradstreet references.

Almost 24 percent of the respondents came from the South; 33 percent from the East; 23 percent from the Midwest and more than 20 percent from the West.

In the survey, executives were asked to respond to the statement, "Women rarely want positions of authority." More than eight out of 10 disagreed, but executives from the West and East rejected the statement strongly.

"It may be that executives in the Midwest and South are less supportive of women in business because more of those executives believe women are not serious about moving up the corporate ladder," the researchers wrote.

"They may view female employees as women simply trying to make ends meet or working for 'pin money' rather than as women desiring positions of responsibility," they said.

Sutton and Moore said that response is particularly interesting because three-fourths of the respondents from the West were women, by far the largest percentage.

Of those respondents from the East, 57 percent were women; 50 percent of the respondents in the South were women and 44 percent of those from the Midwest were women.

The researchers found a definite pattern in attitudes among regions. Executives in the West were most accepting of women in management positions. Those in the Midwest, while harboring positive attitudes about female executives, generally were the least positive, the study found.

One of the biggest differences was in the area of personal attitudes.

While the vast majority of executives from each region had generally favorable attitudes toward women in management, differences were reported in expressing "strongly favorable" attitudes about corporate women.

Almost 65 percent of the western executives indicated "strongly favorable" attitudes; 57 percent of the eastern executives; 48 percent of the southern executives and only 40 percent of the midwestern executives.

The executives surveyed also felt women can and do make valuable contributions to management, but the strength of the opinions differed again.

Although 52 percent of the respondents in the West strongly agreed with the statement, only 31 percent of them in the Midwest strongly agreed; 40 percent in the East and 43 percent in the South strongly agreed.

Problems over 'vigilante-like' group prompts convention cancellation

McALLEN (AP) — A member of a paramilitary group that allegedly held a group of illegal aliens at gunpoint was invited to speak to a Hispanic political group, but controversy surrounding the "vigilante-like" group has forced cancellation of his appearance.

J.R. Hagan, 37, a member of Civilian Materiel Assistance, was invited to speak to the 10th annual Mexican American Democrats of Texas convention on Saturday.

But the CMA's negative image and Hagan's drug convictions caused MAD officials to cancel a planned speech to the entire convention, said Ruben Bonilla, chairman of the 11,000-member state organization.

Instead, Hagan will speak to the MAD executive committee about CMA and American Border Watch, of which Hagan is director, said Bonilla.

"Some of the delegates felt that we should not offer a forum for someone to endanger our community and have the potential of harming our relationship with our neighbor, Mexico."

White adept at using press to float 'trial balloons'

AUSTIN — I'm sure many of you out there know what it's like to be used.

Like the time the prettiest girl in town accepted your offer for a date just because she really wanted to go to that fancy restaurant, though not necessarily with you. Or the time you worked like crazy to finish that project and the boss took all the credit — and the raise — and the promotion.

You know what it's like.

Well, many of the newspapers in this state have been used extensively by Austin politicians the last few weeks. The horror stories have screamed across the headlines:

Budget cuts would destroy universities. School taxes may soar. Deficit threatens health care for the poor.

As the governor and lawmakers prepare to take some action to deal with the state's $3.5 billion cash shortfall, they've used the press to float numerous trial balloons. Gov. Mark White's staff has been particularly adept at it.

White last week met with top officials from most major state agencies. As each group left the governor's private office, White's press staff toured the press room to make sure we knew they were coming out. And out they came, with press releases detailing the terrible prospects of 34 percent budget cuts.

Dutifully, we covered it. Sometimes the bad news took second billing to some other budgetary nuance. Sometimes it ran as the top story of the day.

The purposes of all that fancy press manipulation depended on the agenda of the user. For the agency heads, who have turf and services to protect, it came as a way to encourage public outrage at the possible cuts and therefore sway lawmakers.

Some legislators followed the same tack, offering the prospect of unacceptable cuts as justification for their desire to raise taxes. For others, the press attention came as proof that they were tough-minded conservatives bent on wiping out slothful waste in state government.

In one sense, it's no fun being used — particularly when you know that's what's going on. There's a tendancy to resist, a tendancy to say, "There's no way they'll come anywhere near cuts that deep, it's all just propaganda."

On the other hand, long-time observers of the Texas Legislature know some members would relish such cuts. So we've got some obligation to warn our readers what some folks are thinking about.

That brings us to the ancient question of objectivity. Do we accept being used just to scare enough people to build public outrage and protect some programs? Does it matter what we think of the need for the programs? Do we dismiss the horror stories as fantasy and not report them? Or bury them? Does our knowing that we're being used make a difference?

Tough questions for a reporter to answer. But with at least a decent chance that some important state services might disappear by the time lawmakers leave town, we have a duty to play some role in the process.

Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker, a man whose relationships with the press have been stormier than most, says the media might have THE most important role. "I think we're in a position where the (horror story) tactic can turn into a reality," Parker told me last week when I asked him how much stock he would put in the deep-cut rumors.

"If we say, 'OK, we're going to cut out all of the campuses of the University of Houston except one,' and nobody gets up in arms about it, chances are that may be a real deal," Parker says. "I think that's really the scenario that will be the program for the special session."

Parker says the press must transmit that message to the public, give them a chance to "get up in arms." Unless you scream, he says, the tax-increase folks in the Senate will have no ammunition to stand up to the budget-cutting House.

"If there's no hue and cry from the public, I think the Senate will ultimately yield, in spite of (Lt. Gov. Bill) Hobby's preference, and we'll come home and we'll have cut severely all state agencies."

So that's the game plan. Watch these pages for the next several weeks. If you read about a cut that might take your job or the nursing home payments for your mother or the welfare money that pays your rent, get up in arms. Write your senator or representative. Gather your neighbors and come to Austin.

We'll keep doing our job. Help your elected representatives do theirs.

Steve Levine is the Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau chief.

STATE IN BRIEF

Man breaks record in hammock, wins $6,300

BRYAN (AP) — A 19-year-old Central Texas man who got into the swing of fundraising with a record-setting hammock stay of 240 hours roped in $6,300 worth of contributions by the time he put his feet on the ground Friday night.

J.D. Joyce rolled out of his hammock that was set up on a street in Bryan at 6 p.m. An audience of about 175 people gathered to help him celebrate, and Joyce also had received a congratulatory telegram from Gov. Mark White.

"I feel pretty good," Joyce said. "I may sound dead, but I feel good."

Joyce had put his feet up to set a world record and raise money to combat multiple sclerosis, a crippling disease that strikes young people. He had hoped to net $10,000, but said he was happy with the results.

"I was disappointed that we didn't raise the money," he said. "I was hoping, but it was a success in helping people to learn about muscular sclerosis."

Joyce unofficially passed the 196-hour record listed in the Guinness Book of World Records Wednesday night.

Impostor gets caught

PECOS (AP) — Authorities say a man masquerading as a federal immigration agent tried to sell counterfeit papers to a real agent posing as an illegal alien in West Texas.

Armand De Luna-Mèndez of Wickett has been charged with claiming to be an employee of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and with allegedly selling counterfeit documents to a special agent.

According to court records filed in federal district court this month, Luna, a resident of the United States, told Special Agent Tomas Silvia in March that he could help him get immigration papers for $300.

Luna allegedly promised to get two copies of a U.S. birth certificate, baptismal certificates and a social security card. Silvia arrested Mendez after meeting with him four times.

Patrolman suspended

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A patrolman accused of injuring a city jail prisoner in an incident recorded by a surveillance camera was suspended indefinitely Friday, authorities said.

Terry Strickland, 29, a San Angelo patrolman for two years, was relieved from duty following an internal investigation, police Chief Travis Johnson said.

The investigation stemmed from an assault on a 40-year-old man who was booked into jail July 31 on misdemeanor charges of resisting arrest and failure to identify himself as a witness, Johnson said.

Strickland said he had no comment on the suspension or whether he would appeal to the Civil Service Commission.

Johnson said he decided to suspend Strickland after the investigation showed the officer had violated at least three regulations requiring humane treatment of prisoners.

Although 52 percent of the respondents in the West strongly agreed with the statement, only 31 percent of them in the Midwest strongly agreed; 40 percent in the East and 43 percent in the South strongly agreed.

Problems over 'vigilante-like' group prompts convention cancellation

McALLEN (AP) — A member of a paramilitary group that allegedly held a group of illegal aliens at gunpoint was invited to speak to a Hispanic political group, but controversy surrounding the "vigilante-like" group has forced cancellation of his appearance.

J.R. Hagan, 37, a member of Civilian Materiel Assistance, was invited to speak to the 10th annual Mexican American Democrats of Texas convention on Saturday.

But the CMA's negative image and Hagan's drug convictions caused MAD officials to cancel a planned speech to the entire convention, said Ruben Bonilla, chairman of the 11,000-member state organization.

Instead, Hagan will speak to the MAD executive committee about CMA and American Border Watch, of which Hagan is director, said Bonilla.

"Some of the delegates felt that we should not offer a forum for someone to endanger our community and have the potential of harming our relationship with our neighbor, Mexico."

White adept at using press to float 'trial balloons'

AUSTIN — I'm sure many of you out there know what it's like to be used.

Like the time the prettiest girl in town accepted your offer for a date just because she really wanted to go to that fancy restaurant, though not necessarily with you. Or the time you worked like crazy to finish that project and the boss took all the credit — and the raise — and the promotion.

You know what it's like.

Well, many of the newspapers in this state have been used extensively by Austin politicians the last few weeks. The horror stories have screamed across the headlines:

Budget cuts would destroy universities. School taxes may soar. Deficit threatens health care for the poor.

As the governor and lawmakers prepare to take some action to deal with the state's $3.5 billion cash shortfall, they've used the press to float numerous trial balloons. Gov. Mark White's staff has been particularly adept at it.

White last week met with top officials from most major state agencies. As each group left the governor's private office, White's press staff toured the press room to make sure we knew they were coming out. And out they came, with press releases detailing the terrible prospects of 34-percent budget cuts.

Dutifully, we covered it. Sometimes the bad news took second billing to some other budgetary nuance. Sometimes it ran as the top story of the day.

The purposes of all that fancy press manipulation depended on the agenda of the user. For the agency heads, who have turf and services to protect, it came as a way to encourage public outrage at the possible cuts and therefore sway lawmakers.

Some legislators followed the same tack, offering the prospect of unacceptable cuts as justification for their desire to raise taxes. For others, the press attention came as proof that they were tough-minded conservatives bent on wiping out slothful waste in state government.

In one sense, it's no fun being used — particularly when you know that's what's going on. There's a tendancy to resist, a tendancy to say, "There's no way they'll come anywhere near cuts that deep, it's all just propaganda."

On the other hand, long-time observers of the Texas Legislature know some members would relish such cuts. So we've got some obligation to warn our readers what some folks are thinking about.

That brings us to the ancient question of objectivity. Do we accept being used just to scare enough people to build public outrage and protect some programs? Does it matter what we think of the need for the programs? Do we dismiss the horror stories as fantasy and not report them? Or bury them? Does our knowing that we're being used make a difference?

Tough questions for a reporter to answer. But with at least a decent chance that some important state services might disappear by the time lawmakers leave town, we have a duty to play some role in the process.

Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker, a man whose relationships with the press have been stormier than most, says the media might have THE most important role. "I think we're in a position where the (horror story) tactic can turn into a reality," Parker told me last week when I asked him how much stock he would put in the deep-cut rumors.

"If we say, 'OK, we're going to cut out all of the campuses of the University of Houston except one,' and nobody gets up in arms about it, chances are that may be a real deal," Parker says. "I think that's really the scenario that will be the program for the special session."

Parker says the press must transmit that message to the public, give them a chance to "get up in arms." Unless you scream, he says, the tax-increase folks in the Senate will have no ammunition to stand up to the budget-cutting House.

"If there's no hue and cry from the public, I think the Senate will ultimately yield, in spite of (Lt. Gov. Bill) Hobby's preference, and we'll come home and we'll have cut severely all state agencies."

So that's the game plan. Watch these pages for the next several weeks. If you read about a cut that might take your job or the nursing home payments for your mother or the welfare money that pays your rent, get up in arms. Write your senator or representative. Gather your neighbors and come to Austin.

We'll keep doing our job. Help your elected representatives do theirs.

Steve Levine is the Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau chief.

Man breaks record in hammock, wins $6,300

BRYAN (AP) — A 19-year-old Central Texas man who got into the swing of fundraising with a record-setting hammock stay of 240 hours roped in $6,300 worth of contributions by the time he put his feet on the ground Friday night.

J.D. Joyce rolled out of his hammock that was set up on a street in Bryan at 6 p.m. An audience of about 175 people gathered to help him celebrate, and Joyce also had received a congratulatory telegram from Gov. Mark White.

"I feel pretty good," Joyce said. "I may sound dead, but I feel good."

Joyce had put his feet up to set a world record and raise money to combat multiple sclerosis, a crippling disease that strikes young people. He had hoped to net $10,000, but said he was happy with the results.

"I was disappointed that we didn't raise the money," he said. "I was hoping, but it was a success in helping people to learn about muscular sclerosis."

Joyce unofficially passed the 196-hour record listed in the Guinness Book of World Records Wednesday night.

Impostor gets caught

PECOS (AP) — Authorities say a man masquerading as a federal immigration agent tried to sell counterfeit papers to a real agent posing as an illegal alien in West Texas.

Armand De Luna-Mendez of Wickett has been charged with claiming to be an employee of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and with allegedly selling counterfeit documents to a special agent.

According to court records filed in federal district court this month, Luna, a resident of the United States, told Special Agent Tomas Silvia in March that he could help him get immigration papers for $300.

Luna allegedly promised to get two copies of a U.S. birth certificate, baptismal certificates and a social security card. Silvia arrested Mendez after meeting with him four times.

Patrolman suspended

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A patrolman accused of injuring a city jail prisoner in an incident recorded by a surveillance camera was suspended indefinitely Friday, authorities said.

Terry Strickland, 29, a San Angelo patrolman for two years, was relieved from duty following an internal investigation, police Chief Travis Johnson said.

The investigation stemmed from an assault on a 40-year-old man who was booked into jail July 31 on misdemeanor charges of resisting arrest and failure to identify himself as a witness, Johnson said.

Strickland said he had no comment on the suspension or whether he would appeal to the Civil Service Commission.

Johnson said he decided to suspend Strickland after the investigation showed the officer had violated at least three regulations requiring humane treatment of prisoners.

Agreement closer on big tax issues affecting individuals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate and House negotiators, who are spending most of their time debating how much of the tax burden should be shifted to corporations, are close to agreement on most of the big tax overhaul issues directly affecting individuals.

These include Individual Retirement Accounts, raising the personal exemption, boosting the standard deductions for people who don't itemize and repealing or reducing some deductions.

A big exception is the deduction allowed for state and local sales taxes. House negotiators are insisting that the full deduction be retained. Senators want to allow a deduction for only 60 percent of the sales taxes that exceed state and local income taxes.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the 22-member conference committee that is writing a compromise overhaul bill, and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who heads the Senate delegation, are hoping to resolve the sales tax deduction and most other major questions before Congress adjourns Friday for a three-week recess.

Rostenkowski and Packwood had set a target of finishing the bill and submitting it to the House and Senate for final action in time for President Reagan to sign it into law on Labor Day. There is no chance that self-imposed deadline will be met and little chance the negotiators can finish their work before the recess.

However, a delay of a few weeks will cause no problem, since most parts of the bill would not take effect until next Jan. 1 at the earliest.

Perhaps the most sensitive issue — individual and corporate tax rates — will be the last one decided. Although the conferees are using the Senate-passed rates as a starting point, there will be efforts to raise those rates if necessary to finance some of the deductions that the lawmakers want to retain.

Here is how the latest offers from the two sides would affect some big individual issues:

— IRAs: Both bills would keep current law for workers not eligible for company pensions; they could make a fully deductible IRA deposit of up to $2,000 a year. The two sides agree that workers covered by company pensions and earning up to $25,000 ($40,000 for a couple) should retain fully deductible IRAs; the deduction would decline as earnings rose, and would end at $35,000 income ($50,000 for a couple).

The big difference: the latest Senate offer would permit those not eligible for a deductible IRA to make non-deductible deposits of up to $2,000 a year. Interest earned on all IRAs would remain tax-free until withdrawn.

— Personal exemption: Now $1,080 for a taxpayer, spouse and each dependent, this would be raised under either proposal. The Senate wants $2,000 per person. The latest House offer is $2,000 for those who do not itemize deductions; for itemizers, the exemption would be $1,650 each for taxpayer and spouse and $2,000 for each dependent.

— Standard deductions: Now $3,670 for joint returns and $2,480 for single people, the House has agreed to accept the Senate plan for $5,000 and $3,000, respectively. The House wants an extra $750 for single people who are elderly or blind and $600 for married elderly or blind; the Senate proposes $600 additional for all elderly or blind.

— Consumer interest: No deduction would be allowed under either plan for credit cards, education loans and other consumer interest. Mortgage interest on one or two homes would be fully deductible.

— Medical expenses: Present law allows a deduction for expenses exceeding 5 percent of adjusted gross income; either plan would restrict the deduction to expenses over 7.5 percent of income.

— Marriage penalty: The two sides agree on repeal of a special deduction of up to $3,000 a year for two-earner couples.

— Income averaging: The House insists on total repeal of this provision, which helps farmers, artists and others whose income fluctuates sharply from year to year. The Senate wants to save it for farmers.

— Charitable deduction: Both plans preserve full deduction of contributions by itemizers but wipe out the special writeoff for those who don't itemize.

— Indexing: Automatic annual tax cuts were enacted in 1981 to stop "bracket creep" — workers being squeezed into higher tax brackets because they receive cost-of-living pay raises. The tax brackets, standard deductions and exemptions are adjusted each year to offset inflation of the previous year.

Missing Polish sloop safe, sound

CHICAGO (AP) — A Polish sloop that arrived four days late for New York's Liberty Weekend turned up safe, sound and a day late here Saturday, the Coast Guard said.

The search for the 42-foot Stomil began after it was reported overdue Friday afternoon, said Lt. Jim Meador of the Coast Guard operations center in Cleveland.

"Our main goal was to find them and make sure they were safe," he said.

The search was hindered because of a faulty radio aboard the sailboat, he said. It was called off when a pleasure boat reported the Stomil tying up at Navy Pier, on Lake Michigan, about 7 a.m.

Coast Guard representatives greeted the crew to determine the sailboat's itinerary, but did not detain them, Meador said.

An Eastern bloc vessel is required to adhere to strict reporting requirements, he said, but the sloop strayed from its itinerary. It never made it to Cleveland and made unscheduled stops in Detroit and Cheboygan, Mich., apparently trying to get the radio fixed, Meador said.

The 42-foot, single-masted Stomil, which means "100 miles" in Polish, left its home port of Szczecin on April 20. It stopped in West Germany and France before sailing across the Atlantic Ocean from the Madeira islands, off Morocco.

The crossing took 33 days because there wasn't enough wind and the boat's engine broke down. The Stomil's eight-person crew said they entertained themselves during the long voyage by playing guitar and drinking wine and Polish beer.

The problems prevented the boat from taking part in the international flotilla of 260 boats that paraded through New York Harbor on the Fourth of July.

Infant patient undergoes liver transplant surgery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 3½-week-old boy believed to be the youngest liver transplant patient ever underwent surgery Saturday at Children's Hospital to receive a new organ.

Michael Boggs, son of Mark and Joann Boggs of Osage, Wyo., entered surgery about 4 p.m. and was expected to remain in the operating room until at least midnight, said hospital spokeswoman Lynn McMahon.

"As far as we are able to tell at this point, he is the youngest liver transplant patient ever. He's the youngest we've done at Children's," she said.

Michael was born with liver failure July 15, Ms. McMahon said. Doctors have not been able to pinpoint the cause of the failure, she said.

He has been in stable condition since being transferred to the intensive care unit Children's Hospital on Thursday from a Denver hospital, Ms. McMahon said.

The donor organ was provided through the Pittsburgh Transplant Foundation, she said, adding that the surgery can take from eight to 23 hours.

Ms. McMahon would not comment on the infant's chances for survival, but said the 72 hours after the surgery are the most critical. The hospital's transplant survival rate for children up to age 18 is 80 percent, she said.

The youngest transplant patient at Children's previously was 4-month-old Andread Lynn Shimer of Hainesport, N.J., who received a new liver Dec. 28 and has been released, Ms. McMahon said.

Coors heir wills millions

DENVER (AP) — A granddaughter of beer empire founder Adolph Coors has bequeathed $5 million each to an animal protection society and a college that went bankrupt in 1977.

Margaret Collbran died Feb. 17 at the age of 75. Her will divided her $20 million fortune equally among St. John's Episcopal Cathedral in Denver, the Metropolitan Opera Guild in New York, Bennett College in New York and the Denver Dumb Friends League, similar to a humane society.

Because of a debilitating illness the last 10 years of her life, Collbran did not know that Bennett, which she attended in the 1930s, had gone bankrupt in 1977.

If no other school can show in an Oct. 20 probate hearing that they are carrying on in Bennett's stead, the money will be divided among the three other beneficiaries, said Charles Ennis, Collbran's attorney.

Conspiritors convicted

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — A jury Saturday convicted three of nine defendants accused of conspiring to storm a courtroom to free an Indiana Reformatory inmate during a manslaughter trial.

The Madison Superior Court jury convicted Roger A. Jaske, Richard D. Alery and Paul A. Buffington of conspiracy.

Three other defendants were acquitted of conspiracy, but found guilty of carrying handguns without permits. Three others were acquitted of all charges.

Jaske, who had been charged in the manslaughter case, devised a plan calling for heavily armed men to burst into Madison County Circuit Court during his trial, handcuff a police guard and take women hostages.

Defense lawyers argued the men came to Anderson because of the promise of high pay and adventure, not realizing they were being drawn into an escape plot.

The jury deliberated about 18 hours over three days before returning the verdicts. It spent several hours listening to the testimony of Alery, 28, of Anoka, Minn.

Alery admitted helping Jaske recruit the others through an advertisement in Soldier of Fortune magazine after answering an ad placed by Jaske. He backed out of the plot the day the men began gathering at a local motel, leaving plans for the escape at the motel's front desk, he said.

Police arrested the eight men at the motel March 2-3, the weekend before Jaske's trial was to begin. Jaske already was serving a prison sentence for murder and was subsequently convicted in the manslaughter case.

Acquitted of conspiracy were Anthony S. Karen, 20, of Great Neck, N.Y.; Mark A. Waite, 21, of Newburgh, N.Y.; Arthur E. Littler, 22, of Bailey, Colo.; James M. Riggs, 27, of Enterprise, Ala.; Robert E. Underwood, 25, of Greenville, Texas; and Robert D. Crump, 23, of Abilene, Texas.

Riggs, Underwood and Crump were convicted on the weapons charge.

A Sept. 2 sentencing date was set for all defendants. Those convicted of conspiracy face possible sentences ranging from two to eight years.

Littler, who brought two BB guns for what he thought was a mercenary mission, said he was considering suing the state.

"I lost six months of my life," he said. "When they found out there was no case, they should have let us go free."

"We knew it was a difficult trial going in," said Madison County prosecutor William Lawler after the verdicts were read.

Businesswoman hopes to be first in gender on Everest top

PORTOLA VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Battling 100 mph wind and snow on Mount Everest might be a bit more perilous than starting up a high-tech company, but a Silicon Valley businesswoman sees plenty of similarities.

"There are a lot of people in the business world who climb mental mountains every day," says Ellen Lapham, 42, who has spent most of her career in marketing and public relations.

She's had few flops, and her successes include 1976-78 association with Tandem Computers Inc., which hit No. 409 on the Fortune 500 with sales of $614 million, this year.

She's leaving for Tibet on Aug. 22 with a team of professional climbers that hopes to put the first American woman on the 29,028-foot summit of the world's tallest mountain and send hang gliders soaring over the peak with movie cameras.

Lapham marches up and down the steps of her home on the edge of Silicon Valley, the computer industry center 35 miles south of San Francisco, with weights on her ankles, dumbbells in each hand and a 25-pound sack of flour in her backpack.

While the rest of the "Americans to China" expedition have considerable experience, including the two other women, this is Lapham's first major climb.

HOW THEY VOTED

Congress: Speed limit hike rejected, bomb production backed

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Votes of area members of Congress on key issues during the week ending August 9, 1986.

KEY HOUSE VOTES

HOUSE FAILS TO OVERRIDE PRESIDENT'S VETO OF TEXTILE BILL.

In a major policy victory for President Reagan, the House Aug. 6 came up short in its attempt to override the president's veto of a measure that would sharply restrict textile imports into the United States. The 276-149 tally was eight votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed to override the veto.

Intense lobbying by the administration and a series of recently-negotiated textile trade agreements helped the White Houe stave off the attempted override. Both the Senate and House passed the bill by wide margins late last year, only to have Reagan veto the bill Dec. 17, 1985.

The bill would have imposed import restrictions on 12 countries. The stiffest limits would have required an approximate 30 percent reduction in textile and apparel imports from Taiwan, Hong Kong and South Korea. Also included in the legislation were Senate-added sections offering import relief to the domestic shoe and copper industries.

Supporters of the override attempt charged that the Reagan administration had failed to enforce trade agreements designed to open up foreign markets to U.S. goods and reduce a bloated trade deficit. Some members blamed increasing foreign competition for the loss of nearly 400,000 domestic textile jobs since 1980.

Opponents of the override attempt, which was equally concerned with a rising U.S. trade deficit, criticized the legislation for failing to address the long-term economic impact of stiff import restrictions. They claimed that the bill would lead instead to increased consumer prices and would encourage foreign retaliation.

Voting to override the president's veto of the textile bill: Reps. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, and Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford.

Voting against: Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo.

HOUSE REJECTS HIGHWAY SPEED LIMIT INCREASE.

The House Aug. 6 rejected 198-218 an amendment to allow the speed limit on some rural highways to be raised to 65 miles per hour. The amendment was offered to the omnibus highway bill.

The 55 mph speed limit was established to promote fuel conservation during the gasoline shortages of the 1970s. Currently, if a state does not enforce the 55 mph limit, the U.S. Department of Transportation can withhold part of that state's federal highway funds.

The amendment to raise the speed limit to 65 mph would affect some rural Interstate highways, mainly in the western United States. The Department of Transportation and state officials would be responsible for determining which roads would qualify for the increased speed limit. The decision to raise the speed limit would be left up to the state; the increase would not be mandatory.

Likening the 55 mph speed limit to the prohibition law of the 1920s, supporters of the amendment said it is outdated, unreasonable and deeply resented and, as a result, is rarely obeyed.

"If we want carnage on the highways, we can do away with this 55 mph speed limit," countered Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth. Critics of the amendment said that the 55 mph speed limit is responsible for 2,000 to 4,000 fewer highway fatalities each year. Rejecting the argument that the 55 mph speed limit infringes upon states' rights, opponents said that a nationwide speed limit is justified because the federal government provides most of the funds for the Interstate Highway System.

Voting to increase the speed limit to 65 mph: Loeffler, Combest, Stenholm and Boulter.

Voting against: Gonzalez.

KEY SENATE VOTES

SENATE REJECTS AMENDMENT TO CUT FUNDS FOR "STAR WARS" DEFENSE PROGRAM.

After long hours of heated debate,the Senate defeated an amendment 49-50 Aug. 5 to cut spending on the strategic defense initiative (SDI) anti-missile weapons system — better known as "star wars." The amendment was attached to the fiscal 1987 defense authorization bill.

In a March 1983 speech, President Reagan introduced the concept of a space-based missile defense system as a "peace shield" that would render nuclear weapons "impotent and obsolete." Since then, congressional leaders have clashed over the potential technological and financial complexities of the system.

Reagan's fiscal 1987 request for SDI research suffered a 25 percent cut at the hands of Senate Armed Services Committee members in mid-July. This week's floor debate allowed senators an additional opportunity to chop away even more from the committee's $3.9 billion proposal. A vote earlier in the day to reduce SDI funds by an even greater amount failed to gain approval.

Many senators, disillusioned by what they perceived as vague promises of future SDI capabilities, supported the amendment to reduce funding by approximately $390 million. They charged that conventional weapons development was being undercut by extravagant SDI funding levels. "Funding for SDI has tripled since 1984...while all total defense budget expenditures by Congress have increased only 8 percent. I think that dramatically shows how out of line we are on this program," said Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill.

Opponents of the amendment rejected calls to reduce SDI funding, claiming that the program has served as a decisive factor in bringing the Soviets back to the negotiating table for nuclear arms reduction talks.

Voting to cut funds for "star wars" defense program: Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Voting against: Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

SENATE BACKS PRODUCTION OF "BIGEYE" CHEMICAL BOMB.

On a 50-51 vote, the Senate Aug. 7 rejected an amendment to cut funds for th eproduction of the "Bigeye" bomb, a new type of lethal cemical weapon. Vice President George Bush voted to reak the 50-50 tie on the amendment to he fiscal 1987 defense authorization bill.

The amendment would have deleted all of th emoney tha the Senate Armed Services Committee recommended for Bigeye productionn in 1987, as well as prohibit the use of funds appropriated last year. The amendment would have allowed research, development and testing of the bomb to continue.

Voting to cut Bigeye production funds: Bentsen.

Voting against: Gramm.

Twenty-seven-year steel veteran says strike may be longer than record breaker of '59

CLAIRTON, Pa. (AP) — The last time Tony Alfonsi carried a picket sign was 27 years ago during a nationwide steel strike that lasted 116 days. This time, he and his buddies say, it may be longer.

"I never dreamed I'd be back on a picket line," the 57-year-old steelworker said last week as he stood outside the gates of USX Corp.'s Clairton Works.

"It's a shame it's come to this. I figured the company and the union would have got together on something, especially the way it is today," he said.

The work stoppage involving 22,000 active workers at USX, formerly U.S. Steel, began Aug. 1. The company calls it a strike; the United Steelworkers union has labeled it a lockout. No new talks are scheduled.

Union officials say about 10 percent of those off the job at USX are veterans of the 1959 strike, the longest in steel history. The walkout was against 11 companies that produced 90 percent of the nation's steel, and it took a Supreme Court injunction to get the 500,000 strikers back to work.

"Everything was booming back then," said Alfonsi, a millwright and 37-year employee at Clairton.

"In '59, you knew someplace down the line, they were going to settle. There was no doubt about you coming back to work. This time, you don't know where you're at. The company may decide to shut her down. They're holding you hostage," he said.

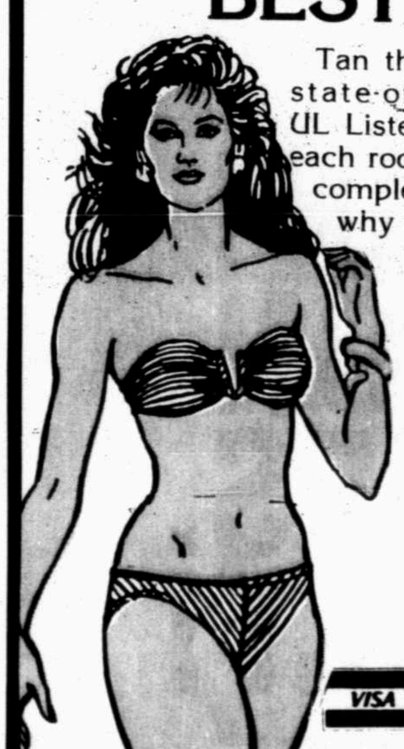

USX wants reductions in labor costs of about $3 an hour, including a $1.25 wage cut, plus changes in work rules.

Berlin Wall, 25, opened a bit but 'not going to come down'

BERLIN (AP) — Stark and gray in cold concrete, it courses 28 miles through the heart of Berlin, across once-busy intersections, city squares and old trolley-car tracks and past the front doors of apartment houses.

It is the Berlin Wall, erected 25 years ago — on Aug. 13, 1961, — by a handful of East German soldiers with coils of barbed wire and barricades.

Today it is a bulwark nearly 15 feet high in most places, separating family from family, old friend from old friend, Berliner from Berliner, communism from capitalism — a monument that symbolizes the differences that divide East and West.

The Communist East German government calls it an "anti-imperialist protective wall."

But among the grafitti scrawled on its western side over the years is another description.

"This is madness."

This past winter, an East German electrician named Andreas Bratke dashed through a checkpoint opening and became one of the 4,902 Easterners registered by West Berlin police to have made it safely through, over or under the wall in the quarter century it has been up.

Others didn't make it; 73 people are known to have died trying to escape, according to Western statistics. Some were shot down by East German guards; a few made it but died of gunshot wounds later.

East German guards have orders to shoot to kill.

No one on the Western side knows how many people were caught or killed on the Eastern side trying to escape.

"Of course it was dangerous and dumb," the 23-year-old Bratke said recently, recalling that he was repairing alarm systems near the wall Jan. 17 and simply dashed 70 yards through the checkpoint, half-expecting a bullet in the back.

"But I knew if I did not take my chance when I had it, I would spend the rest of my entire life kicking myself," he said in an interview.

"The wall is not going to come down."

In recent years, however, it has opened a bit.

Selective Easterners can pass through for visits to West Berlin — pensioners and people with extraordinary family circumstances, such as funerals or weddings.

West Berliners can go into East Berlin if they apply two or three days ahead of time, but they can stay only a day. Other West Germans can get passes on the spot at checkpoints for day-long visits and can stay longer if they apply as East Berliners do.

Non-German tourists also are allowed back and forth and so are military personnel of the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union, so long as they are in uniform.

A subway built before World War II runs under the wall and rapid-transit surface trains pass over, moving from West Berlin, through the Eastern sector and back to the West again.

The East Germans plan a military parade to mark the wall's 25th anniversary this coming Wednesday in East Berlin; in West Berlin, the August 13 Working Group plans a 12-mile human chain of protest along the wall.

A more violent form of protest occurred July 28. A bomb blew a hole in the wall near Checkpoint Charlie, the wall's best-known crossing point.

The West German newspaper Bild said a group identifying itself as the Democratic Pro-German Action claimed responsibility in a letter to its Duesseldorf office.

It quoted the letter as saying: "Every day a part of the wall must fall, but you can be sure that we will never endanger human lives. We know we cannot blast away the wall, but we want the people to wake up from a 40-year-long sleep."

The East German government called the bombing a "grave and provocative attack."

Queen Elizabeth underwent 'routine' heart monitoring

LONDON (AP) — A Sunday newspaper said 60-year-old Queen Elizabeth II underwent tests at the National Heart Hospital last week, and that Buckingham Palace called the tests routine.

No spokesman was available Saturday night at Buckingham Palace, the queen's residence, to comment on the report.

The Sunday Mirror quoted unidentified doctors at the hospital as saying the queen's heartbeat was monitored on an electrocardiograph machine Tuesday.

It also said basic heart tests can be made on an electrocardiograph machine at the palace, and surmised that meant Tuesday's test required more sophisticated equipment.

The newspaper quoted palace spokesman Victor Chapman as saying, "The queen underwent routine tests earlier in the week. I cannot tell you what the tests were for."

Soviets, Afghans negotiate

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet and Afghan foreign ministers met Saturday to discuss the latest round of peace negotiations between Pakistan and Afghanistan, the official Tass news agency reported.

It said Eduard Shevardnadze and Shah Mohammad Dost noted Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's statement last month that six Soviet regiments would be withdrawn from Afghanistan by the end of the year.

That measure is "creating a good basis" for a resolution of the conflict in Afghanistan, Tass said.

The United Nations-sponsored peace talks in Switzerland went into recess Friday with Pakistan saying a wide gap remained over a timetable for the withdrawal of all Soviet military personnel from Afghanistan, estimated to number about 115,000.

Gorbachev announced the planned withdrawal of six regiments in a July 28 speech in Vladivostok. He gave no indication how many soldiers would be involved, but Western diplomats said the number could range from 6,000 to 10,000.

Diego Cordovez, the U.N. mediator in the Afghan-Pakistani talks, said Friday that "very tough political decisions" remain before a peace treaty can be drafted.

The Soviet Union sent troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 to help the Marxist government battle anti-communist, Moslem rebels.

Soviet leaders have said there will not be a complete withdrawal of the troops until the United States and Pakistan stop supporting the rebels.

Tass said Dost, who was en route home from Geneva, stopped in Moscow to brief Shevardnadze on the talks.

Order: remove mailboxes

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Authorities ordered all mailboxes removed along a six-mile route that is used frequently by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, so bombs cannot be planted inside them, the Times of India newspaper reported Saturday.

The daily said the route runs from Gandhi's official residence to his farmhouse in a New Delhi suburb.

Gandhi drives almost every weekend to his farmhouse with his wife, Sonia, and two children.

The paper quoted official sources as saying the mailboxes posed "a potential threat, especially in view of the increase in terrorist activity, as anyone can easily deposit powerful explosives in them in the form of packets."

It quoted security officials as saying it was impossible to search each mailbox every time Gandhi plans to drive the route.

Food poisons 60 Britons

PRIVAS, France (AP) — Sixty British youths fell ill with food poisoning on a canoe trip and were evacuated from their campsite Saturday and taken to hospitals by fire department rescue workers, police said.

Six of the victims taken from the Ardeche Gorge of southern France were in serious condition, police said.

Local health authorities began an investigation to determine the cause of the food poisoning.

The victims were among 120 young people, from 12 to 18 years old, making a canoe trip down the gorge which had been organized by a tour group.

The group began its trip Friday at Vallon Pont d'Arc and had camped near the village of St. Remeze. About 1 a.m., their situation became urgent and the fire department was called to evacuate victims, police said.

Peres adviser voices concern over relations

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

JERUSALEM — In the course of his recent Middle East tour, Vice President George Bush was clearly taken aback when an adviser to Prime Minister Shimon Peres voiced concern about what he saw as a troubling shift in Israeli-American relations.

The adviser, Avraham Burg, spoke out at a meeting Bush held with young Israeli leaders. He said that traditionally, Israeli-American relations have been seen to have a moral foundation — mutual Judeo-Christian values, a shared commitment to political freedom and democracy, a common historical experience as pioneering nations.

But it seems now, he said, that the emphasis is on Israel as a "political and strategic asset," with the idea of a moral partnership pushed aside.

Indicative of the erosion in that moral bond, Burg went on, were President Reagan's controversial 1985 visit to the Bitburg cemetery in West Germany, which contains the graves of men who served in the Waffen SS, the elite military corps of Nazi Germany, and the U.S. failure to bar visits by President Kurt Waldheim of Austria because of allegations that he knew of and perhaps took part in Nazi atrocities during World War II.

Burg's comments — an agitated Bush said they were "unfair, unfounded, and untrue" — were not typical. Officials on both sides described the Bush visit as a demonstration of solidarity. Burg's comments seemed all the more out of context given what most analysts agree is an unprecedented closeness in the bilateral relationship that has evolved during President Reagan's years in office.

However, according to U.S. and Israeli experts on the subject, Burg's comments are symptomatic of real if not always logical Israeli feelings of insecurity about its ties to the United States — insecurity that typically worsens in the period leading up to and immediately following an American presidential election.

Samuel Lewis, a former U.S. ambassador to Israel, said in an interview: "I think there is a widespread conviction among Israelis of all political stripes...that we are a long way away, that we have a political system that produces rather wide swings in foreign policy, and that we have a lot of other fish to fry in the region and in Europe."

On top of that, Lewis said, is "a historical memory, deep in their genes, of betrayal by non-Jews."

While Reagan is viewed here as perhaps the best American president that Israel has ever had to work with, the visits last month of three leading 1988 campaign contenders underlined the fact that Reagan's term is running out. Besides Bush, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., were in Israel in July.

An Israeli official who asked not to be quoted by name said: "It is right that Reagan, on an emotional and maybe even on an ideological level, is very good to us. I have a feeling of love. The question is, what will it be with the next one?"

There is no doubt that after a rocky start, attributed among other things to Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon and the extension of Israeli law to the occupied Golan Heights, Israeli-American relations have undergone an extraordinary transformation since Reagan took office.

U.S. aid to Israel in the current fiscal year will total nearly $4 billion, a record.

As Bush noted during his visit, a 1983 agreement on strategic cooperation means that "our two countries ...now engage in regular discussions about how to defend shared interests, for example in the eastern Mediterranean. We have held joint military exercises. We have made preparations for use of Israeli hospitals to treat American combat casualties. We are discussing pre-positioning of equipment. We help each other design, build and test weapons."

But perhaps more than all the rest, Israel's agreement to have a giant Voice of America radio transmitter based on its territory stands as a symbol of the change in the relationship. The transmitter will beam what Soviet authorities consider to be hostile propaganda into the Soviet Union, and the United States was hesitant about approaching Israel on the subject, given sensitivities here over the vulnerable status of about 2 million Soviet Jews.

"A decade ago," former Ambassador Lewis said, "the overriding sense that this was getting Israel over-involved in the Cold War...would have outweighed the desire to be friendly to the United States."

But no longer. It is this broader, strategic cooperation that forms the backdrop for concerns such as those expressed to Bush by Avraham Burg.

According to Wolf Blitzer, longtime Jerusalem Post correspondent in Washington and author of a new book on Israeli-American relations, Burg's comments are "reflective of a growing trend, particularly among the more liberal left-of-center types in Israel, as well as in the American Jewish community, that it's dangerous for Israel because, while Israel may be a strategic asset today, tomorrow Egypt or Saudi Arabia may be a greater strategic asset."

Kuwait supports peace offer to end Gulf War

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post
News Service

KUWAIT (DPA) — Kuwait, the Persian Gulf country closest to the war front between Iran and Iraq, announced Saturday that it supports Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's five-point peace offer to Iran to end the almost six-year-old Gulf war.

In a statement to the Kuwait news agency, Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Sheilk Sabah al-Ahmed al-Sabah said that his country supported the plan's points "since in their implementaion, and after all parties accept them, peace and stability will prevail in the region."

In an "open message" last week to Iran's rulers, Saddam offered a five-point peace plan in which he called for the signing of an agreeement for a full troop withdrawal to the international borders and non-interference in each country's internal affairs.

The proposal, which has since been rejected by Iran, also called on both sides to take positive steps toward peace and security in the region.

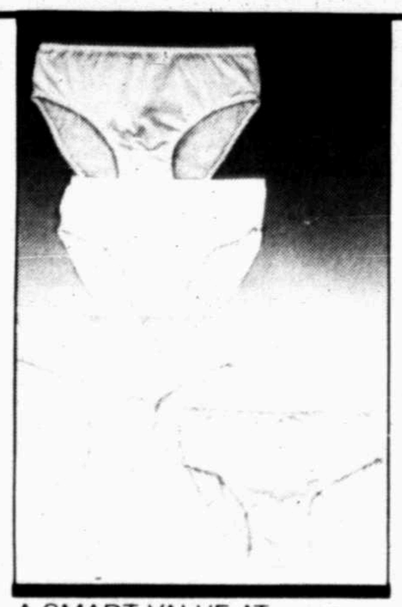

In fighting Saturday, Iran said that its warplanes raided Iraq's northern city of Akra, with Tehran saying that oil installations were hit while Baghdad accused the Iranians of raiding residential areas. Neither side's claims could be verified independently since journalists are not permitted in the war zone.

In a communique issued by the army's joint command, Iran said that its fighter bombers raided oil installations in Akra, 50 miles from the border, inflicting "heavy damage." The Iranians said that all their jets returned safely to base.

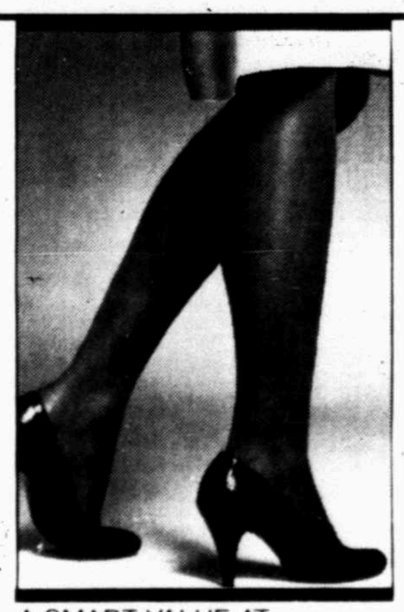

Iraq, accusing Iran of continuing "its crimes" against residential areas, said two Iranian F5 jet fighters had penetrated its air space and attacked "civilian targets" in Akra.

Iran reported Saturday that Iraqi planes had raided the Iranian township of Armardeh in Kurdistan on Friday, killing two civilians and injuring 12, as well as destroying 11 houses.

Partly cloudy skies in forecast for Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

A few changes in the weather pattern are in store for the Permian Basin through Monday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal calls for partly cloudy skies today with a chance of isolated afternoon thunderstorms.

The chance of rain for the area is less than 20 percent.

Today's high will be in the mid-90s, forecasters say. Winds will be from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The low will be in the upper 60s. Winds will be from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph.

Monday will be partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of isolated thunderstorms. The high will be in the mid-90s.

Saturday's high of 96 was 8 degrees cooler than the record of 104 set in 1947. The low Saturday of 71 was 11 degrees warmer than the record of 60 set in 1931.

STATE

High winds and hail hit the Texas Panhandle Saturday, while other thunderstorms buffeted parts Southeast Texas and the lower Pecos Valley to the Davis Mountains.

In the Panhandle town of Borger, marble-sized hail and winds up to 70 mph accompanied a storm that dumped up to 1.5 inches of rain in about two hours, said Hutchinson County Civil Defense Director Larry Baltzer.

The storm caused only minor damage, however, blowing down an oil company shed and downing some power lines that cut electricity to the south part of the city, he said.

The National Weather Service said some isolated showers also dampened the area near Guadalupe Pass. But otherwise, skies were partly cloudy over most of the state.

NATION

Powerful thunderstorms developed Saturday over the northern Plains and tornado watches were issued for parts of the area, as showers and thunderstorms were scattered over large parts of the East.

Small hail, very heavy rain and strong wind were reported near Fergus Falls, Minn.

A tornado watch was posted for a small part of north-central Nebraska, much of central and eastern South Dakota and a large part of central and southwestern Minnesota.

Thunderstorms poured heavy rain across Kansas, with an inch of rain in only 30 minutes at Runnymeade, southwest of Wichita.

Carl Stewart has volunteered to help rid Texas' highways of litter through the "Adopt-A-Highway" program sponsored by the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. Stewart has "adopted" a two-mile segment of U.S. Highway 80 bordering his Airline Mobile Home Park between Midland and Odessa.

State cleans up with 'Adopt-A-Highway'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Texas highways are now up for adoption.

The state has launched an "Adopt-A-Highway", a cleanup program set up by Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The department's scheme is to adopt out two-mile segments of state highways on a year-to-year contract to service clubs, organizations, and commercial businesses.

The contract calls for organizations to clean up two-mile stretches of highways at least twice a year.

But so far, only 16 miles of the 2,800 miles of state highways within a 12-county Midland area have been adopted since the program began last spring.

The first business in the Midland area to adopt a highway was Carl Stewart's Airline Mobile Home Park.

"I think it is an interesting concept," said Stewart, whose group adopted a two-mile stretch of U.S. Highway 80 in front of his park.

"My role in this thing is I agree to go out at least twice a year and pick up all the litter" between the blue "Adopt-A-Highway signs which mark Stewart's territory.

Volunteer crews are expected to clear debris off sides of the main highways and the service roads.

The "Adopt-A-Highway" anti-litter program was conceived two years ago by Bill Black, the department's public affairs officer in Tyler.

"It was very successful," said Richard Phillips, the highway department's public affairs officer.

"The last I heard, they had 102 contracts. And it (the program) was opened up statewide."

The highway department advises Adopt-A-Highway participants on how to safely pick up litter along the highways.

Clean Midland is supporting the highway department's efforts by asking civic clubs, businesses and other groups to adopt highways; said Sherre Parker, Clean Midland's executive director.

"I think will be be wonderful," she said of the program.

In the 12-county area served by the highway department's District 6, eight groups have adopted road segments.

They are Stewart's Airline Mobile Home Park, the McCamey Lions Club, the McCamey Chamber of Commerce, the Senior 4-H Club of Andrews, the Telephone Pioneers of America's Far West Club of Midland, the Midland Restitution Center, the Big Bend Road Riders Motorcycle Club of McCamey, and the Monahans Social Riders Motorcycle Club.

"Their group is very interested in changing the image of motorcycle riders," Phillips said. "They are very active."

Groups wanting to join in the cleanup effort may have their choice of state-maintained highways to adopt.

Federal interstate highways and expressways cannot be adopted.

The Adopt-A-Highway program is another effort by the department to keep litter off of state-maintained roads.

Another effort is the "Don't Mess With Texas" slogan.

In 1985, Texas spent $24-million to pick up litter off of Texas' 72,000 miles of highways.

The highway department's prime target in its anti-litter advertising campaign is men between the ages of 18 and 34.

"He's the deliberate litterer," Phillips said.

"The biggest gain (in the Adopt-A-Highway) is in public awareness," Phillips said. "It's making more people aware that Texas has a serious litter problem."

Raul Mosqueda, an 85-year-old Odessan, puts the finishing touches on the front page of his newspaper, The El Reportero Chicano. The weekly paper has a circulation of 5,000.

'Born newspaperman' keeps his ears open

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It's Thursday and 85-year-old Raul Mosqueda is past deadline.

His newspaper should be completed, but Mosqueda is rushing around pasting up advertisements and typesetting stories.

"I'm late," Mosqueda says as he pauses to explain what he calls the "Chicano Hearst" of the Permian Basin.

Mosqueda is the publisher, editor, reporter and advertising salesman of the weekly "El Reportero Chicano."

The weekly paper, with a circulation of 5,000, is distributed at various Midland and Odessa businesses.

Many plaster statues of Jesus and Buddha stand in the one-room south Odessa office that serves as Mosqueda's newspaper office, studio and home.

And when he's not making plaster statue molds, the veteran of the Mexican Revolution has spent the last eight years translating local stories into Spanish.

Mosqueda also ventures out into Odessa streets once a week to do his own investigations for articles.

"To be a good reporter, you keep your ears open. That's how I do it. I get ideas from street talk," Mosqueda says.

"People complain. They come to me. They see me as a leader," he says.

Mosqueda says he chooses local newspaper stories that Hispanics are interested in.

Recent "Reportero" issues have carried stories about a local sting sending illegal aliens back to Mexico, a bridge blockade on the border at El Paso and a paramilitary group's plans to patrol the border.

Mosqueda says the Permian Basin's Hispanic community is upset about plans by a paramilitary group to patrol the border and about recent attacks on aliens at the border.

"These people are not trained to distinguish between a wetback and a Chicano. There's going to be trouble.

"We're not going to stand for it. We've got people that are organized too — to protect the Spanish interest," Mosqueda says.

Unrest in the Mexican states along the border also has concerned his readers, Mosqueda says.

Vera Powers honored with Trimble award

From Staff Reports

Midlander Vera Powers has been named the July recipient of the Trimble Service Award.

The award, co-sponsored by Leadership Midland Alumni Association and the Midland Reporter-Telegram, was established to recognize citizens who best represent the spirit of volunteerism in Midland, and who have contributed to the community.

Mrs. Powers was nominated by the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, where she began volunteering in October 1975, a month after the museum opened.

She was the first volunteer to reach 1,000 hours of service and has now worked more than 4,400 hours in her 10 years of service.

In 1980, she was the recipient of the museum's "For Service" award.

Mrs. Powers, her husband Dick and their three children moved from Fort Worth to Midland in 1956.

During her children's school years, she volunteered with the Parent Teacher Association, Scouts and other school activities with son Gray and daughters Pat and George Ann.

In addition, Mrs. Powers also was a member of the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary for seven years.

Ed Rowland, director of the Petroleum Museum, said: "The gift shop and admissions desk workers are the museum's representatives to the public. As such they must be friendly, courteous and helpful. Vera's 10 years of service are certainly proof that she exhibits exactly the qualities we need in our volunteers."

He also said Mrs. Powers became almost as good as an employee as far as running the gift shop is concerned.

She takes care of inventory recording, stocking and pricing. She has acted for the deputy director of the museum as buyer at the Dallas Market and a manager of the gift shop at times.

Vera Powers

In addition to her gift shop duties, Mrs. Powers is a docent, or lecturer.

She has taken hundreds of children through the museum over the years and continues to serve as one of the few docents who give adult tours.

She also acts in the museum's puppet show, now in its fifth year. Mrs. Powers has held roles in the Santa Rita Club, the museum's service organization.

When asked how she felt about the fact that her time at the museum equaled more than two years of full-time employment, Mrs. Powers said, "I started out just working two hours a month, and figured I might earn a 100 hours — if I lived long enough.

Appropriations panel cuts deeper into budget

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Educational quality, abused children, nursing home residents and services to the mentally ill may suffer under the $155 million budget cuts the House Appropriations Committee approved Saturday.

After four days of cutting in the special legislative session that started Wednesday, the committee has sliced about $225 million from the state's fiscal 1987, $18.5 billion budget.

Much of the remaining $395 million the 29-member panel must cut to hit its $620 million goal will come from higher education, some committee members said after Saturday's meeting.

Liberal committee members, pleased that much of the $149 million in health and human services savings came from unique financing plans rather than cuts in direct services, reacted angrily to a $1.7 million reduction in a program that helps school districts meet the requirements of the 1984 public school reforms.

Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, called that cut in the Texas Education Agency's accreditation and monitoring program "a gratuitous slap" at the agency.

Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, accused the committee of acting on "innuendo and heresay" rather than facts.

Lynn Moak, deputy education commissioner for research and information, said the cut — if it holds up through the legislative process — would make it "absolutely impossible" for the agency to follow the law that requires it to make accreditation visits to each school district every three years.

Moak said the cut would "particularly harm" the agencies efforts to help districts improve educational quality.

Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, led the forces pushing for the reduction, saying the agency has not done its job in enforcing the new law.

Toomey said later he expects the Senate will force the House to undo the cuts.

"This is a vote for TEA to get their act together," he said.

Relying on about $104 million in innovative bookkeeping maneuvers suggested by the agencies and Gov. Mark White, the committee cut just $45 million from direct health and human services programs.

GARY OTT

Columnist suffers through 'unkindest cut of all'

One of the bad things about getting only three or four haircuts a year is that when you finally get around to having it done, everyone notices.

And, they can be brutal with their comments. They show no mercy. Among their favorites are:

— "Well, well, well. Look who's decided to join civilization."

— "Who's the stranger sitting at Gary's desk?"

— "So, you finally sold out to the establishment, eh?"

— "Don't tell me. Your mommy and daddy made you do it, right?"

— "My goodness, it sure makes you look young."

— "So, that's what you really look like."

— "You shouldn't have done it."

— "Don't listen to them. I think it looks cute."

It is that last one — the part about looking cute — that makes me cringe the most. Grown men do not want to look cute.

Cute is a word you use to describe high school cheerleaders. Squeaky clean members of the youth choir at church are cute. The Jackson Five were cute. And, maybe Michael Jackson still is. Even small babies throwing up food can be cute.

But, 34-year-old men who work for a living, even if it is a sissy job in an air-conditioned office, definitely are not cute.

Maybe we did sell out to the establishment. Maybe we did, indeed, do what our mommies and daddies told us. And, yes, maybe we did re-join civilization.

But, we did not, by gosh, become cute overnight. And, don't you forget it.

Still, there is something about a haircut that drastically changes a person's appearance, probably more so than anything else he can do to himself, short of shaving his beard or dying his hair a bizarre color.

A haircut is simply very noticeable. This is especially true for the person who just got the trim. Others may make jokes about it, but to the victim it can be a devastating experience.

Suddenly he feels naked. He can't walk past a mirror without doing a double-take. He finds himself absentmindedly pulling on his few remaining strands, subconsciously attempting to make them longer.

He feels the whole world is staring at him, which is terribly egotistical, of course.

It is also incredibly foolish.

That's the irony of haircuts. While the person who just got one considers it terribly traumatic, others, even his closest friends, couldn't care less. They may make a few sarcastic remarks, but that's the extent of their interest. They have far more important things to concern themselves with than the length of another person's hair.

And, if the truth were known, after a week or two the victim himself gets used to change and the shock slowly begins to wear off.

It is just those first few days that hurt.

I was bemoaning all of this the other day when someone, I think it was my boss, said, "You know, if you'd get a haircut on a regular basis you wouldn't have to go through all this trauma."

I had to agree, but then added, "It's just that I hate the idea of actually getting one."

"Why?"

"I don't know. I just do."

"Isn't there anything about a haircut you enjoy?"

I gave it serious thought. "Not really," I concluded.

"Think," he insisted.

"Well, getting shampooed by an attractive woman ain't bad."

"That's not what I had in mind."

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Local restaurateur named Texas' Hispanic Businessman of the Year

From Staff Reports

Midlander Jose Cuevas has been named Hispanic Businessman of the Year for the state of Texas.

He received the award at the 11th Annual Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce state convention in Waco.

Nine delegates from the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce attended the event.

Cuevas, the owner of two Jumburrito restaurants in Midland, said he was "shocked" when they called his name. "I thought wow! They called my name."

Cuevas has been in Midland for seven years and has been with the Hispanic Chamber since it originated two years ago.

Roger Robles, president of the Midland chapter, said Cuevas was nominated because of his achievements as a small businessman and his activities in the community.

"He is a role model for all small businesses," Robles said.

Robles said 500 delegates from 27 Texas chapters attended the convention.

Pete Martinez from San Antonio was elected Texas association president.

Robles said the Midland chapter has 107 members and will be two years old in October.

At last year's convention, it was named Hispanic Chamber of the Year.

Magazine files suit against McAllen mayor

McALLEN (AP) — A magazine has filed suit against the mayor of this South Texas city, charging that he "maliciously" sued for libel in 1982 in an effort to squelch the publication's right to free speech.

The Nation filed last week in Edinburg's State District Court, alleging that Othal Brand launched his suit to "wrongfully penalize, punish, intimidate and harass plaintiff (The Nation) for the exercise of its constitutionally protected and fundamental right of free speech."

Brand had sued over a September 1981 Nation article about his mayoral campaign that year that was entitled, "Patron Politics in McAllen, Texas; Chicano Votes Don't Count."

District Judge Mario Ramirez dismissed Brand's libel action in a summary judgment and the mayor did not appeal.

"It's one more of these frivolous suits that are being filed," the mayor said of the countersuit. "I'm not greatly concerned about it...It's more harassment."

But Jim Harrington, Texas Civil Liberties Union director and The Nation's attorney in both suits, said Brand's libel suit was filed to punish the magazine for presenting the mayor in an unflattering light.

As a result, the magazine suffered a libel insurance cost increase and damage to its reputation, the countersuit claims.

The magazine also was forced to bear legal expenses in the "groundless lawsuit," the suit claims. "Brand maliciously filed his lawsuit, knowing that his charges against plaintiff were false and that, in any event, the article was constitutionally-protected speech."

Survey: Almost third of inmates committed crimes for cocaine

DALLAS (AP) — Almost one-third of nearly 800 jail and prison inmates who responded to a survey said they committed crimes in order to obtain money to buy cocaine, the Dallas Times Herald reported in its Sunday editions.

In a copyright story, the newspaper said the number of prisoners who blamed their crimes on cocaine was at least four to six times greater than the number who acknowledged robbing or stealing for other drugs, such as heroin or marijuana.

Cocaine-related crimes identified in the survey outnumbered those attributed to all other illicit drugs combined, the Times Herald said.

The inmates used in the survey had been arrested or convicted of crimes in Dallas, which experienced a 1,900 percent increase in cocaine arrests between 1980 and 1985 and a 200 percent hike in cocaine seizures by federal agents from 1982 to 1985.

During the same time, the Dallas area has experienced sharp increases in property crimes.

"The figures you cite are characteristic of the new, increasing role cocaine is playing in the drug abusing criminal population," said Jan Chaiken, a Cambridge, Mass. scientist who conducted a major crime study for the Rand Corp. in 1982.

Law enforcement officials said cocaine — long considered a cause of white-collar crimes such as fraud and embezzlement — is now cropping up as a factor in such crimes as robbery, theft and burglary.

"In the past, it's been pretty much an upper-middle class phenomenon. Those people might do a lot of things, but they generally were not committing street crimes," said Oliver Revell, executive assistant director of the FBI.

"That has now changed, and I think the survey is indicative of what we're experiencing around the country," he said.

Dallas Police Chief Billy Prince said increased police resources have not kept pace with spreading cocaine use and there are limits to what law enforcement agencies can do.

"The public is going to have to take a real hard position on this and get involved as part of the solution with the police," Prince said.

About 35 percent of the 11,000 to 12,000 prisoners processed over the last month at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center, Dallas County's main jail, said they are drug dependent and required medical attention, said Maj. Bob Knowles of the Dallas County Sheriff's Department.

Knowles estimated the actual number at 55 percent to 60 percent because many are naturally reluctant to make such admissions.

Knowles said that drugs have changed the face of Dallas crime from one dominated by "professionals" to one controlled by the drug dependent.

Mechanics teacher loses job after failing state test

HOUSTON (AP) — Eddie Maxwell taught mechanics to neighborhood children for many years before he sold his auto repair shop and began teaching his trade in school.

After eight years of teaching auto mechanics at Smiley High School and helping students obtain jobs in the field, Maxwell now faces unemployment because he twice failed the state-mandated teacher competency test.

"I'm a good mechanic and a good teacher," Maxwell said. "If I didn't know how to do my job, it would have showed up every day."

Maxwell, along with other non-degreed vocational teachers in Texas, was required to take the state's first teacher competency test in order to retain his certification. Educators were given two chances to pass the test, and those who didn't are no longer eligible to teach in Texas public schools.

Maxwell has asked the North Forest Independent School District to request a waiver from the state on his behalf.

Non-degreed vocational teachers must have a high school diploma or general equivalency degree and five years of recent work in their fields. After teaching successfully for three years, they are eligible to receive a statement of qualification by the Texas Education Agency and may then be certified to teach their skill.

Before the state ordered teachers to take the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, the non-degreed professionals were given the same lifetime certification that classroom teachers and administrators receive.

PANEL

Oliveira, who fought to save those programs, said he was concerned that the financing plans — which includes spending money saved to offset expected federal budget cuts — could fall apart.

But Oliveira said the final committee product was a big improvement over the "devastating impact" of some earlier proposals.

Toomey called the financing changes the budgetary "the committee was hoping to find.

"That's all money the agencies keep in their back pocket," he said.

The heaviest debate came over an $825,000 cut that would prevent the Department of Human Services from hiring 31 new child abuse counselors.

A top DHS official said those counselors could work with about 900 clients and that without them, the children are more likely to be abused again.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, said that because of the state's deteriorating economy and high unemployment rates "it seems that through no fault of the children, child abuse has gone up."

He opposed the cut, saying the department currently handles only about half of the child abuse cases in the state.

Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, called the program "a bottomless pit."

"You can't put enough money there unless you put a guard in every bedroom," Whaley said.

The committee rejected a move to cut extra nursing home payments for extremely sick patients but approved eliminating a planned $9.5 million cost-of-living increase in those payments, a cut which "could have some impact on the quality of care."

Cuts in mental health and mental retardation included a $6 million slice from reduced operating costs at state schools, hospitals and centers.

For the Big Spring State Hospital, a proportionate share of that reduction would cut $86,000 from the hospital's $14.9 million 1987 budget.

Other MHMR cuts include the delayed opening of two new psychiatric hospitals and elimination of half of the state-paid barbers and chaplains at state schools and hospitals.

The panel also adopted White's proposal to try to bill the federal Medicare program for some services at state hospitals.

"The community is scared about a revolution in Mexico. They've got relatives over there. It concerns me because I have many friends over there."

Although Mosqueda says he has done "everything," including making bootleg whiskey during Prohibition, his first job was at a Spanish newspaper in Laredo.

Running away from his family home in Dallas, Mosqueda said he was 13 when he fought in the Mexican Revolution for two years. Afraid to go home and face his father, Mosqueda, then 15, got a job sweeping out the office of the "La Boz De Laredo."

The newspaper editor taught Mosqueda how to read and saw in him a budding newpaperman, Mosqueda says.

"He said, 'It takes a good reporter to see the facts and rewrite them. You know, you're a born newspaperman.'

"I developed my own way of speed reading. I have a photographic mind. There isn't a thing I didn't learn," Mosqueda says.

Hoping others will learn from his newspaper, Mosqueda continues putting out weekly issues at an age when others are enjoying the leisure of retirement.

"I was raised working for the rights of the people. I'm a humanist," Mosqueda says.

Midland man arrested for burglary

From Staff Reports

An 18-year-old Midland man was arrested for burglary Saturday after he was nabbed by police during a foot chase, authorities said.

The man, whose name was withheld pending the filing of formal charges, was being held Saturday in city jail on burglary warrants.

The man apparently led police on a foot chase after being spotted about 5:30 p.m. in the 400 block of Lee Street, reports said.

In other weekend reports, a Midland Freshman High School student received minor injuries after an assault about 1:30 a.m. Saturday in the 4400 block of N. Midkiff Road, police said.

There are no suspects, police said.

Doug W. Dubois, 810 Elk St., reported two stereo speakers were stolen Friday during a burglary of his residence.

Police reports said the burglary occurred about 6 a.m. The property is valued at $320.

Annetta Lintzen, 2307 Culpepper, reported her 1985 Chevrolet Suburban was stolen Friday while it was parked at 511 W. Ohio Ave.

Reports said the theft occurred between 2:15 and 2:30 p.m. The car is valued at $12,000.

Ms. Lintzen described the suspect as a white man, about 40 years old, wearing brown slacks and a short-sleeved shirt.

A 1986 Lincoln Mark VII was stolen about 2 p.m. Friday while it was parked in the parking lot of Village Lincoln-Mercury, 4534 W. Wall St., police reported.

A representative of the business told police that the suspect was a white man, between 40 and 45 years old and "well dressed." He was driving a 1985 Chevrolet Suburban. The car is valued at $22,150, reports said.

A 1980 Suzuki motorcycle was stolen Saturday from the Robert Lopez Luna residence, 405 W. Humble, police reported.

The theft occurred between 12:15 and 12:45 a.m., reports said. The motorcycle is valued at $1,800.

Fire department investigators said an electrical short probably caused a fire that destroyed a storage building Friday at Loop 250 and East Highway 80.

Reports said the fire broke out about 11:43 a.m.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Child Development Center succeeds in big way

By H.A. TUCK

One of the small successes at Midland College during the past year was the Child Development Center. During its first year of operation, it served children of more than 100 families, with children ranging in age from 18 months to 9 years participating.

Those who are interested in utilizing the services of the Midland College Child Development Center during this school year should make applications this month.

The center is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. for pre-school age children and from 5:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. for children ages 2 to 9. During the daytime hours the center provides a comprehensive child development program, with trained staff plus students enrolled in child care and development courses at the college. The evening program is a baby-sitter plan for children of students taking night courses.

Fees comparable to other child care centers are charged for the service, which is provided for children of college employees and students, with the general public being served as space is available.

For more information, you may call 685-4574.

This is the second week of pre-registration for the fall semester, and response was very good the first week.

Pre-registration is handled in the Student Services Office, which is located in the Administration Building. Hours this week are 7 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Final week of pre-registration is August 18-21 with hours from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Registration is scheduled August 26 and 27 with classes starting Tuesday, Sept. 2.

Pre-registering students receive time permits assigning them specific times to come for registration. Those who don't pre-register aren't processed until everyone has finished. That means they have to wait longer and may not get in the courses they want.

Volunteer tutors are being sought to assist students in the college's Adult Basic Education programs. This is ideal for homemakers, retired people, even those currently unemployed. You'll be working on a one-to-one basis with persons seeking to earn their high school equivalency diplomas.

No special training is needed for the tutors. If you're interested, give a call to new program director Cindy Turland at 685-4567 and she'll provide all the details. Not so incidentally, Cindy first began herself as a tutor in the program.

In preparation for fall programs, the maintenance department has been restriping all the parking lots around the campus. Maintenance director John Hohenberger reported that the Al G. Chaparral Center parking lot alone contains 8.5 miles of stripes...some of which are observed during events at the building.

MC art instructor Warren Taylor has works in three major shows this summer around the nation. Known for his large, representational watercolors, Taylor exhibits regularly. He's now in Watercolor USA 1986. The Monumental Image, a 25th anniversary special show of large-scale watercolor works at the Springfield, Mo., Art Museum. He's also in the 50th National Annual Midyear Show at the Butler Institute of American Art in Youngstown, Ohio, and the Mid-America Biennial at the Owensboro, Ky., Museum of Fine Art. Next month he'll be showing in the Museum of Visual Art, Alexandria, La.

A local chapter of SCORE, which stands for Service Corps of Retired Executives, is being formed through the joint sponsorship of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and Midland College. Dr. Jerry Jones, chairman of the college's business studies division, is serving as chairman. SCORE provides voluntary assistance for businesses, either new or troubled, in areas of management, finance, accounting, sales, advertising, and other aspects.

"With the number of well-qualified persons in the Midland area who have retired, taken early retirement, or even been forced out of a company, we feel there's a lot of expertise available and we'd like to encourage these people to share their knowledge with others," Jones said.

If you'd like to volunteer or obtain more information, just give Jones a call at 685-4657.

For an exciting evening of dance performance, we recommend Ballet Midland's Summer Workshop Presentation at 8 p.m. Friday in the college's Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. The performance is free. MC dance instructor Tony Ferro is in charge of the workshop. Students in the college's Dance Rehearsal/Performance credit course are helping with some of the backstage procedures.

If you'd like more information about Ferro's courses, phone him at 685-4642.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

Schedules must be changed by Sept. 2

From Staff Reports

High school students in the Midland Independent School District who need to change their class schedules must do so before the first day of school Sept. 2.

Absolutely no student-initiated schedule changes will be made after school starts.

Students may make changes by visiting their school counselors between 8 a.m. and noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. weekdays at their high schools.

This is the first year to limit schedule changing to summer months. The change was made to ensure students begin learning on the first day of class.

Center offering TECAT reviews

From Staff Reports

Region 18 Education Service Center will offer review sessions for persons who wish to take Oct. 4 Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers.

The sessions will be at 8:45 p.m. Sept. 16, 18, 23 and 25 at the Center, located on La Force Boulevard at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The sessions will cover such topics as capitalization, punctuation, sentence formation, verbs, pronouns, modifiers and word problems.

Also included will be study sessions to help persons prepare for the writing samples included on the exam.

A $25 fee will be assessed to cover the cost of the review and workbook.

To register, call Dr. Vernon Stokes at 563-2380 or write P.O. Box 6020, Midland, Texas 79711.

'No' to terrorists

When the hated British "Black and Tans" brutalized Ireland, the United States was a refuge for millions of Irish. From our shores came the message of freedom — and the freedom to work for Irish independence.

The Republic of Ireland, a proud and sovereign nation, has passed from militancy to maturity. As equals, Ireland and Britain negotiated the Hillsborough agreement, opening a path to a democratic settlement to the "troubles" in Northern Ireland. Ireland now recognizes that terrorism — the cowardly killing of innocent victims in pubs, and others in their homes — is an impediment to peace, pluralism and, ultimately, to the hallowed goal of Irish reunification.

So the Irish government signed an extradition treaty with Britain and has extradited suspects accused of terrorism to Northern Ireland.

Yet America long balked at signing such a terrorist extradition treaty with Britain, fearing that it would compromise Irish refugees. While that was a realistic concern, the increase in terroristic attacks necessitated action. It came recently when the Senate ratified the treaty with Britain by an 87-10 margin.

This treaty is not a blow to Irish reunification — it is a blow against terrorists who have tried to disrupt the peace process, terrorists who would hurl Ireland into trauma of more violence. It is not a betrayal, as some would claim, of America's principle of political refuge, a singling out of the Irish people. It is, rather, a model for future extradition treaties that would deny avowed terrorists a refuge from justice. America should not be a refuge from justice but an iron-clad doorway to justice. It should not harbor terrorists.

Terrorism had a place in Irish history. But that time is now over. People accused of terrorist murders should face those charges in court, and not, as happened in New York City, be feted in the St. Patrick's Day parade. When the leader of a band that sends arms to the IRA led the parade, the Irish government refused to march with an Irish terrorist. Ireland supported the extradition treaty. It's a matter of pride that the Senate, led by Irish-Americans such as Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., stood up against Irish terrorism.

America musn't be a refuge for those who kill for sectarian causes. It should be an example that Irish people of two traditions — Protestant and Catholic — can live together in peace.

Imelda vs. Cory: The CIA Reports

MANILA — The dramatic developments in the Philippines, as chronicled by the CIA and recounted by some of the principal participants, have revolved around two disparate women, Imelda Marcos and Corazon Aquino.

Jack Anderson

The former, a woman of uncommon beauty and ruthless ambition, is described in secret CIA reports as the "steel butterfly," the "flaming Imelda," the "Evita Peron of the Philippines." She conspired behind the scenes to rule the Philippines.

The latter, a woman of quiet dignity and modest tastes, would have been content to remain "just a housewife." She is described by associates as "too honest" and "too idealistic" for the dirty game of politics. Yet she has been catapulted into the presidency that Imelda Marcos coveted.

The behind-the-scenes story can now be told how these two women have dominated events in the Philippines, a macho country where men are accustomed to running things. The story has all the qualities of a TV soap opera.

In the words of the CIA, Imelda Romualdez was "born a poor cousin of landed aristocracy," with a terrible "thirst for wealth, power and public acclaim." She first managed to attract the public spotlight as a beauty queen. "Although she has had little formal education," says the CIA, "she is cunning."

Corazon Cojuangco, in contrast, was born into wealth, brought up on a sugar-cane plantation and educated at an elite college in New York. She was a shy, delicate, well-bred young woman skilled in languages. But beneath the silken exterior was a character of steel.

The two women married political rivals, Ferdinand Marcos and Benigno Aquino. In the fullness of time, Ferdinand was elected president, and the Marcoses moved into Malacanang. Reported the CIA: "The Marcos marriage is essentially a business and political partnership, but no one is sure just how close this working relationship is. At times, the two clearly compete with one another. At others, the president will give in to her."

Ninoy and Cory, as the Aquinos were called by everyone, settled in the Boston suburbs. She continued to keep in Ninoy's shadow, content to be a housewife, raising their five children and pouring coffee while the men talked politics.

Back in Manila, Imelda was tossing money around like confetti at a New Year's Eve party. A secret psychological profile, prepared by the CIA, cited her "free-wheeling life style, featuring world junkets and jet-set friends."

She also became engrossed in political manipulations. The CIA reported that she had her sights on the presidency. "In the event of President Marcos' death," predicted the CIA, "his wife would doubtless make a bid to replace him."

In 1983, whispers reached Ninoy Aquino that his ailing rival might not survive much longer. The time had come, he decided, for him to return to the Philippines and make his bid for the presidency. He had no plan to overthrow Marcos but wanted to be available to succeed him.

From the Defense Intelligence Agency came word that Imelda Marcos arranged a secret meeting with Ninoy in May 1983. She reportedly warned him "that assassins might await him" if he returned to the Philippines.

He disregarded the warning and, shortly thereafter, flew back to the Philippines. He was gunned down as he stepped off the plane.

Cory Aquino returned to the Philippines to arrange her husband's funeral. She had nothing else in mind, family members told me. She had such an electrifying effect upon the people, however, that opposition leaders persuaded her to step into her slain husband's shoes.

To appease an angry public, Marcos called an election, which he rigged. Protesters began pouring into Manila until they clogged the streets. Two army commands joined this astonishing, spontaneous demonstration. Cory Aquino was literally lifted to power on the shoulders of the populace.

Another View:

Old age alternatives

The obituary page, that daily testament to the grim reality of our collective fate, isn't the place you'd expect to find a tribute to love and life. But one recent morning, to the left of the paid death notices and just above a short news item about a man found lying on a city sidewalk with a bullet in his head, was the poignant tale of Don and Betty Morris's bittersweet farewell to this world.

They had shared a loving, 50-year marriage and, one day in July, they shared some sherry and a feast of their favorite foods — ice cream, corn chips, bacon and scrambled eggs with cheese, all of which had been forbidden by their doctors. Then they took a fatal dose of a depressant and lay down in each other's arms to die.

One surviving son described his parents, both 76, as a "geriatric Romeo and Juliet" who couldn't bear the prospect of living without each other. If Don Morris were to suffer another heart attack, the son said, Betty would certainly have gone to a nursing home. The couple couldn't bear the thought of that, either.

And so police found the two in the bedroom of their home in Highland Park, Texas, a wealthy suburb of Dallas, along with a menu of their last meal and some poems about death.

The police also found a pair of suicide notes that say as much about the plight of the elderly in our society — the way in which they are being victimized by the waning quality and waxing duration of old age — as they do about why Don and Betty Morris killed themselves.

"The problem of many deteriorating old people is obviously a new one — everybody used to die too soon," Don Morris, a semi-retired psychiatrist, wrote. "Therefore, as a society, we have not learned to deal with it in a decent and respectable manner."

Morris added that he regretted ending his life "surreptitiously ... under cover of darkness."

The Morrises are part of an alarming upward trend in the suicide rate among the elderly in this country. The Wall Street Journal reported last week that after dropping from 28.1 per 100,000 people in 1948 to 17.1 in 1981, the rate rose to 18.3 in 1982. In 1983, it jumped to 19.2, which is the most recent figure. The overall suicide rate among the aged is far higher than among adolescents, and more than 50 percent above that of the general population.

Health officials aren't exactly sure why this is happening, but the reasons are believed to be manifold.

Cutbacks in Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps, pensions and benefits that have made poverty an increasingly common feature of old age are thought to play a major part. Some experts say forced retirements are contributing to a particularly high rate of suicide among white men.

Many older people also are frightened by the prospect of entering a nursing home, because of the extreme financial burden it would place on their spouses or children.

Medicare doesn't cover the annual $45,000 to $64,000 cost of a nursing home, nor do private insurance policies. The only thing that does is the federal and state Medicaid program, which is available only if almost all family savings, pensions and other retirement income have been drained or are turned over to the government.

(In New York City, thousands of elderly women whose husbands are in nursing homes have been forced to live on as little as $400 a month and food stamps in order for their spouses to obtain Medicaid coverage. In a desperate attempt to boost their paltry incomes, dozens of these women have resorted to suing their infirm spouses for support — a strictly legal device by which they can regain access to the family's assets. Some women have even filed for divorce to achieve this.)

Underlying all this is the fact that medical advances are enabling people to live longer, but often with failing minds or bodies brought on by degenerative diseases such as Alzheimer's and cancer. Increasing numbers of older people are choosing suicide over years of pain and suffering or, for their physically healthy spouses, poverty and loneliness.

It is tragic that Don and Betty Morris, and so many others like them, chose suicide. But it is soothing, too, that two old people found a way — albeit "under cover of darkness" — to finish their lives with dignity, self-determination, celebration and, finally, love. If only we, as a society, could have offered them those things in life.

—The Hartford Courant

GEORGE F. WILL

The immortal written humor of Red Smith

WASHINGTON — Newspapers drop by our homes every day, generally at breakfast, when anything other than a velvety voice is jarring. Newspapers are, however, by their natures, brusque and businesslike and, given the nature of the world they report, bruising to our spirits. But newspapers should not be severely free of ornaments that improve the scenery of life. One such was Red Smith, the subject of a new biography by Ira Berkow.

George F. Will

What are we missing, we who miss that sports columnist whenever we open a newspaper? This, for example:

"Society Kid Hogan was hurrying through the Illinois Central pedestrian tunnel under Michigan Avenue on June 9, 1930, when a man in the crowd put a gun to the head of Jake Lingle, a grafting crime reporter, and it went blooie.

"The Kid kept right on walking.

"'Why?' the Law asked him later.

"'The last train was leaving for the racetrack,' he said reasonably.

"'Did you see the killers,' they asked.

"'Sure.'

"'Could you identify him?'

"The Kid drew a hand across the knot in his flashy necktie.

"'Only up to here,' he said."

That could have been written by Damon Runyon, or Mark Twain. It could only have been written by an American, marinated in this nation's distinctive broad-brush drollery. Smith heard Americanisms spoken on the adult playgrounds where he worked, as when he asked Pepper Martin how he learned to run so well: "Well, sir, I grew up in Oklahoma and once you start runnin' out there, there ain't nothing to stop you." When Smith asked Early Wynn, a roughneck pitcher, if he ever deliberately threw at a batter's head, Wynn mentioned a .230 hitter who cut open Wynn's chin with a line drive: "The pitcher's mound is my office and I don't like my office messed up with a lot of blood."

Listen to such talk long enough and the dry tang will seep into your style as it did into Smith's. He explained that Paul Waner's eyesight was so bad when he was hitting about .350 for the Pirates, he could not read from the bench the advertisements on the outfield fences. Smith said Waner gave the matter no thought, "for in his philosophy fences were targets, not literature."

On a throne at the center of a sense of humor sits a capacity for irony. All wit rests on a cheerful awareness of life's incongruities. It is a gentling awareness, and no politician without it should be allowed near power. Smith had it but was interested in laughter, not power. He was an American P.G. Wodehouse. Wodehouse, like Smith, was a souffle chef of light literature. His prose was flawless and he had an almost pristine absence of solemnity in the employment of it. Smith, unlike Wodehouse, was capable of seriousness, even anger. But not for long.

Berkow's book is a study of craftsmanship, always a commodity in short supply. A biography of a writer succeeds if it sends readers scurrying off to the writer's books. Even people utterly uninterested in sports should sample Smith. Do you care about rodeos? Neither do I. But I believe that any good use of the English language is good for the soul, and that this opening sentence of a Smith column should be put in front of all fledgling writers:

"C.E. Feeke Tooke, born in Redfield, South Dakota, fifty-nine years ago but dragged up on a homestead outside Ekalaka, Montana, was having the very hell of a time with the showy palomino between his knees, but he wore a grin that lit up the corners of Oklahoma City's Fairgrounds Arena."

Smith, says Berkow, suited America's mood in the late 1940s, when the nation wanted to catch up on missed fun. Smith's syndicated column prospered then. Smith, says Berkow, wrote the way Smith said Pete Rose plays baseball, with "an almost lascivious enthusiasm." The columns about Society Kid Hogan and C.E. Feeke Tooke were obituaries and were included in a book ("To Absent Friends") composed entirely of farewells. Melancholy reading? Hardly.

"Bill Alexander (coach at Georgia Tech) was a gallant gentleman and an intractable fighter for the football player's inalienable right to sign checks with an X. If a good defensive tackle wished to carry a book under his arm when he strolled the campus, Bill did not offer serious objections, although he disliked ostentation. He was, however, unalterably opposed to eyestrain."

Journalism is generally perishable stuff, but your local library will have some of Smith's books, in which you will constantly bump into sentences that begin like this: "Three winters ago when purity, like a worm in the bud, was making inroads into college football...." I never met Smith, who died in 1982, but I imagine he laughed in 1962 when he wrote that sentence about purity, just as I laughed when I read it 24 years later. To live on, as Smith does, in transmitted laughter is a tolerable approximation of immortality.

RUSSELL BAKER

Misguided morals of Mother Goose minor?

Some people in Tennessee want Goldilocks out of the classroom. They say she undermines standards of Christian morality.

Hers is the story of a young girl entering a strange house while the tenants, who happen to be bears, are out for a stroll. She takes advantage of their absence to test their furniture for comfort and eat some of their porridge.

Russell Baker

Inexplicably fatigued by these small exertions, she falls asleep in one of their beds where she is found snoozing when the bears return. Goldilocks jumps up and runs away.

This limp anticlimax ends the story. The Tennesseans object that since Goldilocks isn't punished for invading private property, children may conclude that poking around in other people's houses is morally OK.

In the library I find another version which ends with Goldilocks being scolded by her mother and instructed that it's wrong to enter other people's houses uninvited.

I suspect this is of recent vintage, concocted to satisfy the modern demand for textbooks with milksop morality. Whether it might satisfy the objections of Tennessee Christians to Goldilocks I don't know, but it certainly doesn't satisfy mine.

Before plunging into the sticky issue of morality, let's look at the artistic problems in Goldilocks. These are considerable.

Are we really to believe, as the author obviously wants us to, that Goldilocks left home not knowing there was a house in the vicinity occupied by bears? Nonsense. When bears move into a neighborhood, everybody for miles around knows it.

Goldilocks has surely heard groans of despair from the grown-ups. If too innocent to know about bears, her playmates would have been happy to tell her. Can we doubt that a rogue like Tom the piper's son, capable of stealing a pig, would hesitate to poison a little girl's ears with nasty talk about how bears ruin a neighborhood?

And these are not ordinary bears lumbering off to fish with their paws or steal the bees' honey, are they? These are porridge-eating bears. These are bears that have chairs and beds custom built so each bear can enjoy perfect chair and bed fit.

In short, these are bears that bear watching.

The author's story ignores their extraordinary behavior. He wants us all, Christian and infidel alike, to believe Goldilocks entered that house utterly ignorant of a situation so amazing that everyone else in the country could talk of nothing else.

Consider those bears. Porridge eaters. Custom-built furniture. Ostensibly a family composed of father, mother and child bear. But are they?

In a neighborhood like Goldilocks's, where people don't normally see bears that eat porridge and buy custom-built furniture, it would be easy for three very cunning, very tough male bears to fool everybody. Suppose one bear wore father clothes, another went around in drag and the runt bear wore short pants with a slingshot sticking out of the hip pocket.

But, you ask, why would three cunning, tough male bears want to do something that weird?

That, I submit, is the same question that was asked by a mysterious man for whom Goldilocks was secretly working inside that ursine household. I do not know who her mysterious boss was. Suppose, however, that it was G. Gordon Liddy.

Liddy doubtless feared the security of the free world was endangered by whatever those housekeeping bears were up to. He needed somebody to get in there while the bears were out and have a look-see.

Liddy didn't dare. Though a brave man, he knew that if caught, he might be sealed in a diplomatic pouch and shipped to Bearland where, imprisoned in deepest Sibearia, he would be powerless to foil whatever the plot might be.

Who was the one person sure not to arouse the bears' suspicions if caught poking through their house? A sweet, innocent, golden-haired tyke. Of course Liddy didn't dare tell her his suspicions. He didn't know her well enough. She might be a weakling who broke down under torture. But there was no need to tell her. It was enough to say, "Honey, did you know the three bears all take a long walk just before breakfast every day and leave the house wide open?"

Adding, "While you're in there, keep an eye peeled for anything funny."

Oh yes, there's an exciting story here, but it is buried by the author's clumsiness. Goldilocks' sudden slumber obviously resulted from a sleeping potion the bears put in the porridge. Her escape, possible only because the bears couldn't believe such a lovable little dear capable of working for Liddy, creates a happy ending, not an immoral lesson on invading privacy and getting away with it.

Morality demands that Goldilocks escape uneaten by the bears and unscolded by her mother. However unwittingly, she has risked her life in the struggle against hanky-panky. Possibly even bear-panky. And they call that immoral! Shame!

Demonstration against crime slated nationwide

"National Night Out" has been proclaimed nationally and statewide for the night of August 12 as a means of participating in and becoming aware of crime prevention activities.

Our neighborhood watch members and potential members are urged to turn on their outside lights at 8:30 p.m. this coming Tuesday night and be on their porches or lawns as a nationwide demonstration against crime. Be sure to lock your back door!

Even more important than this symbolic act is the side effect of neighbor getting to know neighbor for this is the backbone of the whole program, to watch out for each other. This would be a good time to plan for an old-fashioned neighborhood social to be held later (an ice cream party, barbeque, cool drinks or whatever) to welcome your new neighbors and become reacquainted with the other.

It is a good idea for the co-captains to contact their side of the block and the co-captain of their alley neighbors contact those neighbors to be included in the gathering as the alley is an important area for your neighborhood watch to cover. Neighbors should keep neighbors informed of their work schedules, help, plans for being away or unusual happenings.

The emphasis on crime prevention should come from each of us. If something seems amiss in your neighborhood, phone 911 immediately to get the police to come. Then phone your neighborhood watch chairman or your co-chairman to contact the pertinent neighbors to be alert to the crisis.

It is never too late to get a neighborhood watch started in your neighborhood. Phone the Police Crime Prevention Department at 683-4281. They will be glad to come and address your group and to give your home a free crime security check if you request it.

To be effective it is up to each group to get together at least once a year to become reacquainted, to update the chairman and co-chairmen and to update the neighborhood lists.

Let's all get together for our neighborhood parties and have a good time.

Letters Policy

The Reporter-Telegram welcomes letters on various topics. We prefer typed or printed letters. Typewritten letters should be double-spaced and should not exceed two pages. Shorter letters are preferred. Handwritten letters must be legible. They should be signed and contain writer's address and telephone numbers, home and work, for possible verification. However, only the writer's name will be published.

Libelous letters or letters deemed in bad taste will not be published. We do not publish anonymous letters, letters addressed to particular groups or the general public ("open" letters) or copies of letters sent to others. We reserve the right to condense and correct spelling, grammar and punctuation. Letter writers ordinarily are limited to one publication per month. No particular day of publication can be promised, but to appear in a Sunday or Monday newspaper, letters must be received by 8 a.m. Friday. Otherwise, letters must be received two full days prior to publication. Letters may appear any day of publication.

Address to: Letters, Editorial Department, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

Appreciation expressed to reunion committee

We wish to express our appreciation to the reunion committee of the '66 M.H.S. and L.H.S. classes. We know many served to make it a successful event. Some we know who worked are Kay Nance Linn, Denna Marcum McGuire, Linda Melton Taylor, Nancy West Greer, Sue Bliss, Bro Seltzer, Keith Jobe, Linda Baxter Messer, Billy Campbell, Mike Rhoden, Jack Hightower, Belinda Truex Merriman, Al White, Sandy Ledbetter DeMent, Beverly Baker Thompson, Lee Hobbs, Trey Grafa, and Melinda Sands Richardson.

The activities were well-organized. The name tags, decorations, menus, plaques, letters, memorials, and prgram were great. We are glad to be a graduate and a teacher in M.I.S.D. in 1966 and to be able to attend the gala in 1986.

'The Song of the River'

The snow melts on the mountain
And the water runs down to the spring,
And the spring in a turbulent fountain,
With a song of youth to sing,
Runs down to the riotous river,
And the river flows to the sea,
And the water again
Goes back in rain
To the hills where it used to be.

And I wonder if life's deep mystery
Isn't much like the rain and the snow
Returning through all eternity
To the places it used to know.
For life was born on the lofty heights
And flows in a laughing stream,
To the river below
Whose onward flow
Ends in a peaceful dream.

And so at last,
When our life has passed
And the river has run its course,
It again goes back,
O'er the selfsame track,
To the mountain which was its source.

So why prize life
Or why fear death,
Or dread what is to be?
The river ran
Its allotted span
Till it reached the silent sea.

Then the water harked back
To the mountain-top
To begin its course once more.
So we shall run
The course begun
Till we reach the silent shore.

Then revisit earth
In a pure rebirth
From the heart of the virgin snow.
So don't ask why
We live or die,
Or wither, or when we go
Or wonder about the mysteries
That only God may know.

Pop — 1863-1951

SAN SIMEON — My father — always Pop to his five kids — died 35 years ago this Thursday — August 14, 1951.

Pop was a wonderful father and a great newspaperman, editor and writer of prose and poetry.

His epic poem "The Song of the River" appears here for you to enjoy. I am sure Pop did not believe in reincarnation as part of his religious faith, but as he says "....And I wonder if life's deep mystery isn't much like the rain and the snow returning through all eternity to the places it used to know."

The poem, written at his summer place in the foothills of Mt. Shasta, has given solace to thousands of people who have written me since I started printing it some 20 years ago.

Pop was a kind, considerate and generous father and I miss him constantly and always will.

BILL MODISETT

Founding Fathers didn't look for bunch of 'yes-men'

Bill Modisett

Conservatives have a problem.

So do liberals.

The problem is that once a person espouses a view shared generally by one of those general descriptions, everybody else begins to think they embrace only "conservative" or "liberal" philosophy. That's true only in instances in which an individual is so dogmatic and narrow-minded that he cannot accept any other view as reasonable. Such a person is thought to be an "old fogey."

That's a tough label to accept, especially if one is only 36-years-old and still remembers what life was like at 20.

But life is a battle against the temptation to fall into the dogmatism trap, to accept the party line that there is only "one way" and that all those who dare embrace a heretical counterview are doomed to the Netherworld of Proven Falsehoods.

It's easy to begin kowtowing to the party line when the party in question is in power and all is going well. At such times there's little reason to question the sanctity of the party dogma or to even consider, except with jaundiced eye, the words of one spouting any view counter to the accepted norm.

Regrettably for the dogmatists, Proven Falsehoods have a way of being unproven every few years.

Ronald Reagan's view of the scope and purpose of government currently is considered to be the conservative "bible" of the land. But is it? Hardly. Certainly no more than Jimmy Carter's or Fritz Mondale's or even Teddy Kennedy's philosophical views are the views of all liberals.

Political parties merely are the umbrellas under which a large segment of the American population can gather to thrash out their differences and find a suitable candidate to support for a particular office. They are not straightjackets for political beliefs and when they become that they are changed by the people who see in such dogmatism the death of a workable system of politics.

Conservative thought and liberal thought are dangerous when they become dogmatic because dogmatism kills reason. And reason — not dogmatism — is the power source that brought this nation into being.

The Founding Fathers, I believe, were not looking for a bunch of "yes-men" in like-colored and styled garments who could repeat the same words, hopefully in harmony. They were looking for a nation of independent thinkers who did not accept any line of reasoning without question and who were unafraid to question the status quo — even occasionally when the status quo obviously was not in need of repair.

A little honest skepticism is not dangerous. Rather, it's a safety valve that protects free people from falling into the trap of swallowing any party line too quickly.

RUSSELL BAKER

'Readers' incensed by columnist's remarks about Rehnquist

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — There was bound to be fireworks when Selma Scold, the flamboyant and always tiresome kneejerk liberal, took over this space as guest columnist two weeks ago.

That's why I chose her, and sure enough, the strategy worked. I now have enough letters from incensed readers to fill this space for a week, which enables me to extend my Perth Amboy vacation long enough to get a fresh coat of mosquito bites.

From Dion O'Bannion of one of the Upper Sides:

"Scold's snide sneer at Justice Rehnquist as a man 'superbly qualified to be Chief of Police but unfit to be Chief Justice' is to be expected from people of her ilk.

"Were you unaware when appointing her to a highly sensitive guest columnistship that this was the same Selma Scold who over the years has belittled Whittaker Chambers, defended Dean Acheson and to this day still refuses to say a bad word about Lillian Hellman? What's more, although she has never criticized Stalin's Moscow purge trials, she constantly goes out of her way to smear former President Nixon.

"It is shameful that professional anti-Communist haters like Selma Scold can occupy the nation's most sensitive guest columnistships while those who love America, like Pat Buchanan, are relegated to writing the president's speeches."

From Sam Quentin of Cicero, Ill.:

"Next time you hire a guest columnist, make it a man. So Rehnquist doesn't go for women's liberation hooey. So what? That's no reason to make him Chief of Police instead of Chief Justice.

"In my work in the private trash disposal industry, we take pity on women who ask for a job on grounds the Constitution says they're capable of dumping ten tons of toxic chemicals at the dark of the moon and no questions from the cops about where they put it.

"Woman's place is not in the dump truck when there is night driving to be done without headlights. No lady wants to drive a truckload of mashed trash that might include a man who accidentally fell in just as the compactors started up.

"Anyhow, if Rehnquist wants to put everybody in jail, he's unfit to be Chief of Police. Doesn't he know about our country's terrible problem with overcrowded prisons?"

From Stump Quigley IV of Pawling, N.Y.:

"I suppose it is too much to expect a mind like Miss Scold's, marinated these 40 years past in the cliches of liberalism, to stir in its slumber while pondering the fitness of William Rehnquist to be Chief Justice of the United States.

"Thus, the best she gives us is a feeble and unfunny wheeze about his making a better Chief of Police than Chief Justice. What, dear Lord, is our nation coming to when our leading guest columnists can adduce no objection more compelling than this to such a plainly unsuitable appointment?

"Surely it is a matter of small consequence that Rehnquist's views happen, by liberal criteria, to be benighted. If this were the crux of the matter I should find him eminently suitable since — let us be candid — the pronounced moral and social breakdown of American society has proceeded apace with the lifting of ancient restraints on black persons and women of all colors.

"When Miss Scold says Rehnquist would have no patience with this incessant caterwauling in the streets about rights and oppression, I say, 'Hear, hear!' One gets d—ed tired of being constantly badgered simply because one prefers not to have to cope with the full variety of the human race every time one enters his club.

"No matter how sensible I find his antiquarian legal views, however, Rehnquist is entirely unsuitable for reasons that the rabidly liberal Miss Scold ignores. Leave us abandon liberal cant about Rehnquist's politics and consider the defect that makes him unfit for this great symbolic position:

"He is from Arizona. Arizona is a nice state. It is an excellent locale for cowboy movies; it provides narcotic Sunday newspaper reading about growth in the Sun Belt and imminent water shortages. But a Chief Justice of the Supreme Court from Arizona? Grant us mercy!

"The country has already been strained by an excess of Californians in what used to be positions of dignity. The unspeakable Chief Justice Warren, the brilliant but vulgar Nixon, the telegenic Reagan. Hardly people one would choose to dine with except for the most mercenary purposes, what?

"Surely the nation's civilized communities can produce a Chief Justice just as reactionary as Rehnquist. Why, pictures of the fellow show he once wore sideburns down below his ear lobes, for heaven's sake!"

LTV officials meet, discuss troubled company with steelworkers union

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gov. Richard Celeste invited officials of the LTV Steel Co., to a private meeting Saturday so they could discuss plans for the troubled company with local elected officials and the United Steelworkers union.

Bruce Smith, assistant deputy director for Ohio Department of Development, said his department and various other state agencies were sending staff members to the meeting at the State Office Building in downtown Cleveland.

The state officials were to brief local officials on the possible consequences if LTV Steel went out of business, Smith said.

"The governor has already had conversations with them (LTV)," Smith said. "It's not so much to brief the governor. He knows what's going on."

Richard Valenta, director of Steelworkers District 28, praised Celeste for organizing the gathering.

"I have to say thank goodness for public officeholders like Dick Celeste," Valenta said. "Here's a man that wants to get involved. It's too bad we don't have this on the federal level."

Debra Phillips, a spokeswoman for the governor, said Celeste called the meeting because of his concern for LTV's retirees and workers.

LTV Corp., the Dallas-headquartered parent firm of the Cleveland-based steel company, filed for reorganization last month under the federal bankruptcy code. Since then, questions have been raised about the job security of its work force and the status of its retiree benefit program.

By late Friday afternoon, state officials said at least 40 people would be in attendance.

LTV Steel spokesman Mark Tomasch said the meeting was requested by Celeste.

"I think the purpose of the meeting is to inform the governor and various public officials and share information with them concerning the company's filing for bankruptcy," he said.

Investment association files for Chapter 11 bankruptcy

BEAUMONT (AP) — First Mortgage Investment Association Inc. has filed for protection from its creditors, and some investors say they are worried about their savings.

The association filed for Chapter 11 reorganization Friday in Houston's U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Texas.

Association chairman Vincent Salvagio posted a four-page letter of explanation on the locked doors of the association's office in Nederland.

Salvagio wrote that the association had been forced to suspend interest payments on its deposits and seek reorganization because of unsympathetic banks.

The savings plan company closed with at least $12 million in collateral note certificates outstanding to Texas investors. The notes offered interest rates higher than those paid on federally insured time deposits at government-supervised banks, credit unions or savings and loans.

FMIA deposits were collaterally insured by the company's investments in real estate, certificates of deposit issued by financial institutions and State of Texas bonds.

Salvagio said in a telephone interview from Houston Friday that he will propose a plan early next week that he believes could turn the situation around for depositors.

"There's a singleness of purpose here," Salvagio said. "We could get back not 10 cents on the dollar, or 20 cents or 50 cents but 100 or maybe more than 100."

Midlander to head TSTA panel

Midland Independent School District educator Gilbert Garcia has been appointed chairman to one of the six standing committees of the Texas State Teachers Association.

Garcia will chair the TSTA Public and Professional Relations Committee, responsible for promoting membership, economic services for members and understanding and communication between the teaching profession and the public.

"Cinderella," produced by World of Fantasy Players

Lions Club sponsors 'Cinderella'

The Midland Westside Lions Club is bringing a professional touring production of "Cinderella" to town on Saturday, August 23. The show will be presented live on stage at Midland High School Auditorium with a performance scheduled for 3 p.m.

The production is a musical version of the age-old fairy tale of Cinderella. This production "is enriched with a bright new musical score, sparkling costumes and elaborate special scenery," according to a spokesman for the World of Fantasy Players, who are presenting the play.

In addition to Cinderella, the Handsome Prince, the Wicked Stepmother, and the Ugly Stepsisters, the play will feature animal characters.

Phillip Morris, illusionist and costumer, is producing the play and employs the use of illusions and special effects such as a pumpkin in a box expanding to become Cinderella's coach and Cinderella's rags turning into a ball gown before the audience's eyes.

Tickets will be available through members of the Midland Westside Lions Club or may be purchased at door. Admission is $3 for children and $4 for adults.

Trivial Pursuit tournament set

From Staff Reports

The Midland County Young Democrats will sponsor a double elimination Trivial Pursuit tournament on August 23.

The tournament will be held at Democratic Party Headquarters, 2305 North Big Spring St. It will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m.

There will be a $25 registration fee per team. Teams may consist of one to five members.

There will be registration at the door, but pre-registration is encouraged. For pre-registration and more information, contact David Mandell at 684-5548 (days) or 682-5462 (nights).

Man charged in slayings of U.T. senior, boyfriend

AUSTIN (AP) — A 27-year-old Burnet man was charged with capital murder in the slayings last month of a University of Texas senior and her boyfriend, a homicide investigator said.

Senior Sgt. Juan Gonzales said David Dinscore was charged Friday with killing Jeanine Linn Balas, 22, and Peter Melvin DeKoch, 31, on July 6.

Their skulls were fractured and their throats had been slashed, police said. The bodies were found July 7 at DeKoch's residence near the University of Texas area.

Midland senior citizens find happy trails at a new walking path dedicated to them on Tuesday at Golden Park.

Senior citizens tread new path

From Staff Reports

Senior citizens wishing to take a leisurely walk sometimes can be reluctant to try it for fear of being accosted or perhaps knocked off the jogging path by a runner.

Golden Park, a 102-unit retirement community at 3100 W. Kansas, solved that problem Tuesday with the dedication of its new jogging path devoted to the elderly citizens of Midland.

Nestled in between the two-block area Golden Park covers, the quarter-mile path provides a tree-lined, fenced in and security patroled place for senior citizens walking for exercise, fun or both.

"Senior citizens just don't feel safe walking around alone today.

"They need a secure environment and that's what we've provided here," Sonia Duffin, Golden Park public relations and investments director said.

Special areas have been designated along the path for gardens and Ms. Duffin said she hoped other community groups would like to get involved in the planting of flowers or shrubbery.

"We thought it would be a great idea if the garden clubs, sororities, Boy Scout troops, churches — any organization — would decorate a little space in the garden area and then dedicate it to the senior citizens of Midland," Ms. Duffin said.

"We have tried to do the community a service. This path is for all senior citizens, not just the ones who live at Golden Park.

"This path will help its users have happier and longer lives. We hope more of the community will get involved."

Lubbock neurosurgeon faces drug charges

LUBBOCK (AP) — A West Texas neurosurgeon will face a federal magistrate Monday on charges he sold and manufactured methamphetamine.

Authorities said an estimated $450,000 worth of methamphetamines was seized in connection with the Friday arrest of Dr. William Garner Evans.

Evans, 61, was arrested by federal investigators in the parking lot of a Lubbock motel. He allegedly had tried to sell four ounces of methamphetamine to undercover agents, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Baker.

Evans, who was booked into the Lubbock County Jail on charges of distribution of methamphetamine and manufacture of methamphetamine, is scheduled to appear before federal magistrate J.Q. Warnick Jr. on Monday.

Baker said the arrest followed an eight-month investigation by officers from the Departament of Public Safety, the Internal Revenue Service, the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Lubbock Police Department.

He said agents searched Evans' car, house, offices and three mini-warehouse storage rooms as well as a hotel room rented by Evans during the sting operation.

DPS investigators said lawmen recovered 39 ounces of methamphetamine, an estimated $10,000 worth of chemicals and glassware of the type used in drug labs.

Panel opposes 'no-tax approach'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Select Committee on Higher Education has gone on record against the "no new taxes" approach favored by some legislators attempting to solve the state's budget crisis. The Midland representative, however, voted against the measure.

A resolution, proposed by Amarillo member Wales Madden and adopted Friday, said trying to eliminate the state's revenue shortage with budget cuts alone would be "shortsighted."

The resolution urged lawmakers to deal with the crisis by approving new taxes and making "judicious cuts" in agency budgets.

Panel member Bill Blakemore, of Midland, and Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, joined Peter O'Donnell in voting against the resolution.

O'Donnell, a committee member from Dallas and former state Republican Party chairman, opposed the resolution, saying it would "politicize" the higher education study committee.

Doctors Say:

New Grapefruit Super Pill 'II' Gives Faster Weight Loss

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.
No Dieting — Eat Normally

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special) — Good news for people who want to lose weight. According to the results of a recent medical study, you can easily lose up to "14 pounds in 14 days" with an amazing, vastly improved "new version" of the world famous grapefruit 'super pill' diet called Super Pill II.

Best of all, the pills allow you to "continue to eat all of your favorite foods without changing your normal eating or exercising habits and still lose weight, starting immediately, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire. "It's guaranteed!"

The new diet pills have been successfully clinically tested on groups of overweight people by a panel of doctors in Beverly Hills.

All Lost up to 14 lbs. in 14 Days

"Remarkably, ALL people in the Super Pill II test group showed dramatic weight loss over 14 days," stated Dr. Steve Sachs, who compiled and analyzed the data in the study. It also proved conclusively that the powerful new ingredients combined with the placebo effect will enable you to lose weight "over 3 times faster" with this new version compared to the previously popular and successful original version.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the clinical study, "Super Pill II itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO special exercise, NO hunger pangs, and NO messy fresh half grapefruit to eat at every meal." You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

Pills Contain ALL Daily Vitamins

No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy because Super Pill II is fortified with all (100%) of the U.S. Government USRDA recommended daily vitamin requirements.

Super Pill II is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these new highly successful Grapefruit Super Pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $14 for a 15-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check or money order to: Super Pill II, 279 S. Marines 'tote that bale' for drought-stricken farmers

HONDO (AP) — About 270 Marines sweated and sang under the hot South Texas sun Saturday as they loaded thousands of bales of donated hay bound for the drought-stricken Southeast.

As with the scores of Future Farmers of America who gathered Friday in the East Texas town of Atlanta to load donated hay, the Marines were responding to the plight of Southern farmers whose crops have failed under a relentless summer sun.

In Hondo, Marine Pvt. Greg Marcantel recruited about 270 friends to help load 8,000 bales of hay donated by farmer-rancher Carl Lazzell and another 4,700 from other area farmers.

The Marines, stationed briefly at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio for training, were joined by 30 Air Force officer candidates from Lackland and 15 airmen from Brooks AFB.

The members of the military made their task easier by singing as they worked. The hay was carried by Texas National Guard trucks to 40 boxcars run by Southern Pacific, which is transporting the hay to Georgia and South Carolina for free.

On Friday, 5,000 bales of hay were donated from Atlanta to its sister city of Atlanta, Ga. That project got started when Grady Blizzard overheard his 16-year-old son praying for the farmers in the Southeast.

"I said it's time for us older people to do something," said Blizzard, a farmer who oversaw the project.

At the recent Future Farmers of America state convention, Blizzard's son Matt was touched by a presentation detailing the plight of Southeastern farmers and ranchers.

H&R BLOCK TAX COURSE COULD BE TICKET TO EXTRA INCOME

Thousands of people are finding that learning income tax preparation is the perfect way to supplement their incomes.

Many people use the tax preparation skills they learn in H&R Block's Income Tax Course to add to their incomes. H&R Block is now offering its basic income tax course starting September 8th and 9th. Morning, afternoon, and evening classes are available. No prerequisites are required to enroll.

During the 13 week course, students will study various phases of income tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block instructors will teach tax law, theory and application, on each tax subject and many practice problems. Courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students will find the course both interesting and challenging.

Because tax preparation is needed during the months of January through April, you can put your skills to use immediately during the winter months and may be able to make enough extra money to pay off Christmas bills or make money for that summer vacation.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many accept employment with Block because of the flexible hours available. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the course. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon successful completion of the course. The course also meets the continuing education requirements of the Texas State Board of Public Accounta cy.

Registration forms and a brochure for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H&R Block office at 1101 N. Midkiff, 561-8689. (ADV.)

Softball mishap leaves Tom Brokaw with one free hand for NBC news

Tom Brokaw

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Brokaw won't be talking with his hands when he anchors "NBC Nightly News" Monday.

He's got a cast running halfway up his right arm, the result of an Aug. 2 softball accident. He shattered his knuckle and another joint on his right ring finger, necessitating a 2½-hour operation and forcing him to cancel his August mountain-climbing and fishing vacation in Montana.

Brokaw, 46, was supposed to be away from the broadcast this week, but without the Western trip he decided to return to work.

Bill Wheatley, executive producer of "Nightly News," said camera angles won't be changed to hide Brokaw's cast.

"We don't plan to do the show differently," Wheatley said. "If you see the cast on a wide shot, so be it."

LONDON (AP) — Pop singer Boy George, battling a heroin habit, flew to the Caribbean on Saturday to begin work on some new songs.

"I feel miserable," the pale, drawn and unshaven singer told reporters as he puffed nervously on a cigarette, his hands shaking.

Boy George, 25, said he would be working at the Air Recording Studios on the Caribbean island of Montserrat with American songwriter Lamont Dozier, the man behind many of the classic Motown pop songs of the 1960s.

"I'll be out there as long as I can. I just want to get away and start working again," he said.

He refused to comment on the drug death last week of his friend and musical colleague, American composer Michael Rudetski, who died in Boy George's fashionable north London mansion.

Boy George, whose real name is George O'Dowd, underwent medical treatment for his drug problem last month. He was fined $370 for possessing heroin.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — After 20 years together, members of the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band feel they have lasted so long because they never were a supergroup.

"We haven't had huge, great success and the very, very successful groups are the ones who break up," says Jeff Hanna, guitarist and vocalist and a founding member of the country-rock quintet. "Our peaks and valleys have been easier to deal with."

The group is celebrating its 20th birthday by releasing its first greatest hits album, "20 Years of Dirt."

The group is best known for its 1970 hit "Mr. Bojangles," about a man's love for his dog. "I cried the first time I heard it," Hanna recalls.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years after assuming the challenge of creating an American national theater in Washington, Peter Sellars will take a year-long sabbatical from his position as director.

The American National Theater's operation will stop while Sellars is gone and its staff of six will be let go, Roger Stevens, chairman of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, announced Friday.

"I definitely want to carry on here," said Sellars, 28. "But I don't know what form ANT would take. We're going to have to wait and see how it will resurface."

Sellars plans to direct a screenplay for an independent film company and pursue personal writing projects.

ANT was launched in July 1984 with expectations that it would become the nation's resident theater company, similiar to France's Comedie Francaise. But most of its productions have generated critical controversy and indifference at the box office.

Van thieves take NASA moon dust samples, computer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Thieves who stole a NASA van carried off moon dust samples, a small computer and a laser-activated video recorder and destroyed a space suit when they torched the van, police said.

There was no way to put a cash value on the moon dust, said police spokesman Ness Smith. "They're not replaceable," he said.

Marshall said a 1971 NASA space suit, which cost $125,000 when it was new, was destroyed when the van was burned.

The 1982 Ford van was stolen near the residence of Louis Marshall, who conducts educational programs for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. It was found burned on the outskirts of town, police said Friday.

Public Works: $246,000
Construction of a bridge at Scharbauer and Hemlock; Street improvements in the target area emphasising census tracts 1, 7, 8, and 11.

Contingency: $10,000

Total Funds for FY 1986/87 $893,700

Prior Funding and Relation to Objectives:

Funds received in the past have been targeted toward meeting the objectives established in Objectives for Midland - The Eighties. Projects have included housing rehabilitation, demolition, paving, drainage, park improvements, and economic development of East Midland. These projects are tied directly with improving services and amenities for the target area. In addition to improving services and housing conditions, the elimination of slum and blight is being addressed by demolition and clean up activities. Other activities have addressed specific needs of the community.

Displacement:

The projects stated above are not intended to cause any displacement. In the event displacement should occur, assistance will be provided through the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Act of 1970.

The proposed statement is available for examination in the Office of Planning and Development, Room 220, City Hall. Citizen comments are encouraged. The final statement will be approved August 12, 1986, by the City Council. For additional information call 683-4281, extension 406.

BEFORE YOU REJECT OFFER

Suppose you receive an excellent offer to buy your home just one week after it has been placed on the market. Because you know an underpriced house sells quickly, you may be skeptical of a good offer which comes in promptly. It is human nature to argue that "if I received such a good offer after only one week, what would I get by waiting a while longer?" Maybe never an offer as good.

A true bargain, however, is usually snapped up within a day or two. After a week, you can assume that the market is operating normally. Experience has shown that the first offer is often the best one. This is because a new home on the market is exposed to a large group of potential buyers. Your best offer is likely to come from that group.

Be cautious, then, about rejecting a first offer out of hand. Agents find little comfort is saying, "I told you so," if you are waiting vainly three months later to equal that first proposal. Excellent, non-conditional offers come from serious buyers. Don't expect them to be around for long.

Man stabs woman to death, injures maid

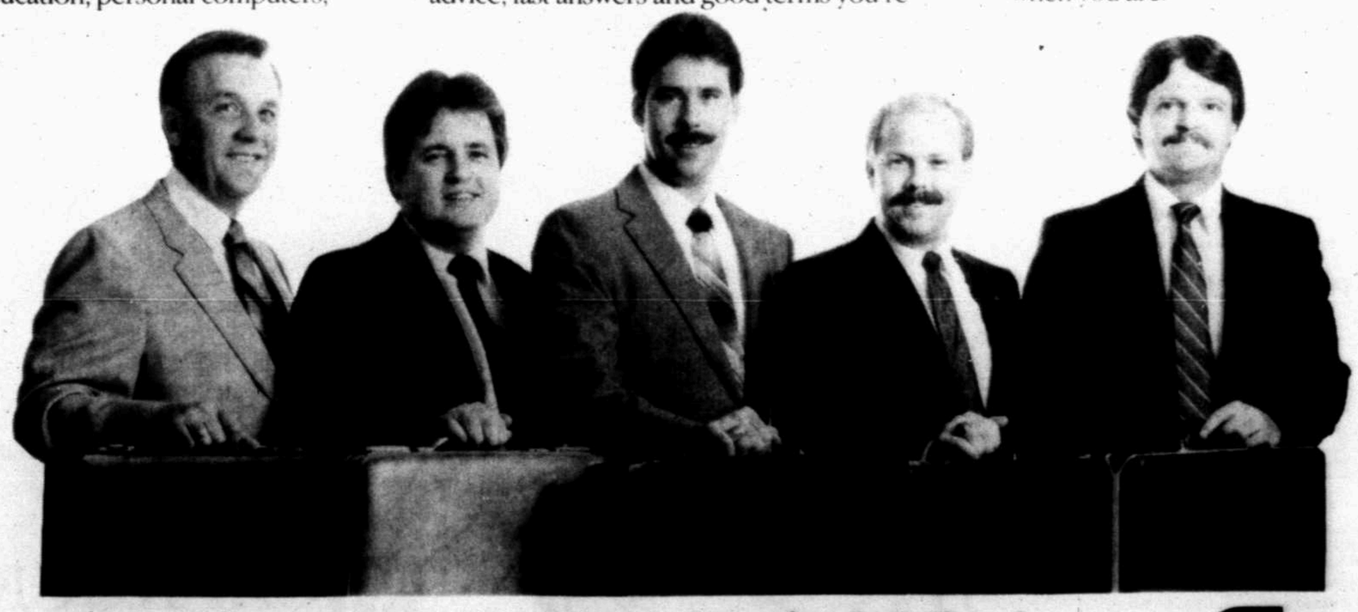

HOUSTON (AP) — One woman was stabbed to death and another critically injured in an early-morning attack Saturday at a southwest Houston residence, police said.

Homicide Sgt. Johnny Moore said the stabbings occurred between 6:30 a.m. and 7 a.m. at the home of 44-year-old Barbara Livitz. A man who went to the home that morning to visit Ms. Livitz's maid, Adelfa Fajardo, allegedly attacked the maid with a knife and stabbed her several times, Moore said.

The man then reportedly kicked in the door of Ms. Livitz's bedroom and stabbed her to death, Moore said. Ms. Fajardo was listed in critical condition at a Houston hospital Saturday afternoon, he said.

Cadets attend camps, complete various courses

Cadet Joseph B. Birdwell, son of Joe V. and Josie Birdwell of Midland, received practical work in military leadership at the U.S. Army ROTC advanced camp, Fort Riley, Kan.

The six-week camp, usually attended by cadets between their third and fourth year of college, includes instruction in communications, management and survival training.

Successful completion of the advanced camp and graduation from college results in a commission as a second lieutenant in either the U.S. Army, Army Reserve or National Guard for the cadet.

Birdwell is an ROTC cadet and a student at Texas Tech University, Lubbock.

Army Spec. 4 William J. Snell, son of William A. and Modesta I. Snell of Midland, has completed a tracked vehicle mechanic course at the U.S. Army Armor School, Fort Knox, Ky.

During the course, students were trained to repair engines, transmissions, and the fuel, electrical and air hydraulic systems of the Army's tracked vehicles. They also learned to perform recovery operations for abandoned, damaged, disabled or mired vehicles.

His wife, Pamela, is the daughter of Hazel Lawhorn of Burke, Pa.

Army National Guard Private Raymond S. Parker, son of Gladys Parker and Robert L. Parker, both of Midland, has completed a wheeled-vehicle mechanic course at the U.S. Army Training Center, Fort Jackson, SC.

During the course, students were trained to perform maintenance and assist in the repair of automotive vehicles and associated equipment.

His wife, Wilma, is the daughter of Wilma G. Parker and Jewel Harris, both of Midland.

Army Private Samuel A. Cessna, son of Lowell S. Cessna and stepson of Carolyn J. Cessna of Midland, has completed basic training at Fort Dix, N.J.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

Marine Pvt. Jackie A. Armstrong, son of W.J. Armstrong and Oveda J. Clements, both of Andrews, has completed the Infantry Combat Training Course at Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

During the six week course, Armstrong received classroom instruction and participated in field exercises involving infantry tactics; the construction and camouflage of fighting positions; and the use of mines, demolitions and intra-company communications equipment.

A 1983 graduate of Andrews High School, he joined the Marine Corps in Jan. 1986.

Capt. Keith A. Howell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Howell of Midland, has assumed command of the 12th Services Squadron, Randolph Air Force Base.

His wife, Brenda, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bourke of Midland.

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class John A. Shyrock, son of Betty F. Awbrey of Andrews, recently reported aboard the amphibious landing dock ship USS Dubuque, homeported in Sasebo, Japan.

While serving on the U.S. front line of defense, the Dubuque will visit the ports of Yokohama, Fukuoka, and Shimoda, Japan; Subic Bay, Republic of the Philippines; Pohang and Pusan, Republic of Korea; and Hong Kong.

A 1976 graduate of Andrews High School, he joined the Navy in Sept. 1982. His wife, Cornelia, is the daughter of Willie and Anebell Rodriguez of Andrews.

Navy Fireman Apprentice Damon R. Caraway, son of Bob and Gayle Caraway of Midland, is currently deployed to the Western Pacific.

While deployed, Caraway will participate in training operations and host dignitaries from the U.S. and foreign governments.

Port calls are scheduled for the Republic of the Philippines, Thailand, Singapore, Hong Kong, Australia, Korea and Hawaii.

Caraway is currently stationed aboard the tank landing ship USS Tuscaloosa, homeported in San Diego.

A 1985 graduate of Decatur High School, Decatur, he joined the Navy in June 1985.

Airman 1st Class Valerie A. Hillger, daughter of William A. and Doris M. Delker of Pasadena, Md., has graduated from the U.S. Air Force legal services course at Keesler Air Force Base, Miss.

Graduates of the six-week course learned court reporting, preparation of legal documents, and legal office administration procedures. They also earned credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

Her husband, Air Force Staff Sgt. Billy J. Hillger, is the son of George and Mary Hillger of Midland.

Navy Midshipman Walter B. Glenn, son of Jackd. and Elizabeth C. Glenn of Midland, recently reported for duty aboard the submarine USS Bremerton, homeported in Pearl Harbor, HI.

He is a 1982 graduate of Midland High School.

Marine Pfc. Mark J. Miller, son of David I. and JoAnn Miller of Midland, recently reported for duty with 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Ca.

A 1984 graduate of Robert E. Lee High School, he joined the Marine Corps in Dec. 1985.

Staff Sgt. Juan G. Alvarez, son of Francisco R. and Alicia G. Alvarez of Midland, has participated in Global Shield 86, an exercise involving U.S. Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps units, and elements of the Canadian forces.

The exercise, coordinated by the Air Force Strategic Air Command, was designed to enhance readiness and the ability of SAC to carry out orders should deterrence fail.

Alvarez is an electronic warfare systems technician with the 7th Bombardment Wing at Carswell Air Force Base.

Scharbauer Cattle Co. to compete in roundup

From Staff Reports

Employees of Scharbauer Cattle Co. will compete against ranch hands from 12 of the largest, most legendary ranches in Texas this weekend during the sixth annual Texas Ranching Roundup in Wichita Falls.

Roundup competition begins at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Wichita County Mounted Patrol Arena.

Co-sponosored by Budweiser and the North Texas Rehabilitation Center, the event will feature special roundup competition between ranch cowboys, a ranch foods cook off, ranch first lady contest, talent competition, plus county music entertainment.

Proceeds from the roundup will go to the North Texas Rehabilitation Center in Wichita Falls, West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Abilene and West Texas Boys Ranch in San Angelo.

The Scharbauer ranching operation, headquartered in Midland, is a family partnership consisting of eight cattle ranches in West Texas, the Panhandle and southeastern New Mexico, and a sheep ranch in southeastern New Mexico. Chris Scharbauer serves as general manager.

Besides Scharbauer, other company participants include Lex Crawford, Ken Albus, Bill Huff and Dale Nelson, all of Midland; Dennis Harmon, Tommy Tutt and Mike Harmon, all of Andrews; and Ken May and Brent May, both of Vega.

Also competing are ranch owners and ranch hands from the R.A. Brown Ranch of Throckmorton, Burnett/Four Sixes Ranches Inc. of Guthrie, Cowan & Son Circle Bar Ranch of Seymour, Double U Hereford Ranch of Levelland, J.A. Cattle Co. of Paloduro, King Ranch Inc. of Kingsville, Lewis Ranches of Clarendon, Moorhouse Ranch Co. of Benjamin, Pitchfork Land & Cattle Co. of Colorado City, Tongue River Ranch Corp. of Dumont and the W.T. Waggoner Estate of Vernon.

Repeal of money-order law sought

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton says he favors repealing a state law that regulates money order companies and the enactment of a law allowing only banks and savings and loans to sell money orders.

Sexton made the comment in an interview in the wake of the bankruptcy of a money order company in Arkansas that recently left thousands in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas with worthless money orders.

Many of those left with the worthless money orders had used them to pay utility and rent bills and most are poor people who cannot afford checking account service charges.

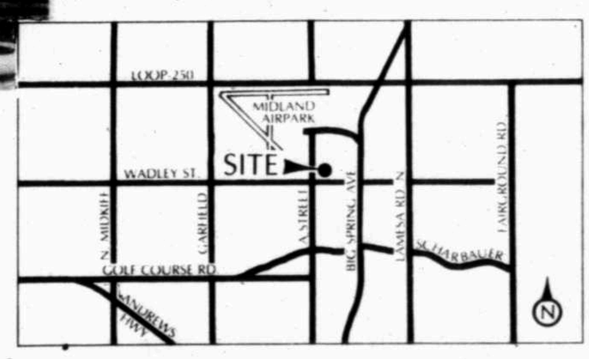

"Rather than patch it, I'd rather see it disappear," Sexton said of the statute known as the Sale of Checks law.

Gators nip Angels with two-run third

From Staff Reports

BEAUMONT — Midland's Mike Romanovski and Beaumont's Mike Mills locked up in a pitching gem here Saturday night in Texas League action, but as has been the case lately, the Angels dropped a 2-1 decision to the Gators.

The Angels have now lost three games in a row to the Gators after taking the opener of this short five-game road trip.

Mills improved his record to 4-9 on the year with the victory, going nine innings, giving up no walks and striking out five Angels.

Romanovski went the distance for the Angels, giving up 10 hits (the same as Mills), but lost it in the third inning when Beaumont scored both of its runs to erase a 1-0 Midland lead.

Shane Mack led off the inning with a single, moving to second on a Romanovski balk and scoring on a Frank Castro double. Castro then scored on a single by Scott Parsons, which proved to be the game winning hit.

The Angels took a 1-0 lead in the second when Kevin King scored from third base on a grounder by Brian Brady that was booted by Beaumont's Bill Wrona. The run was earned and Brady was credited with an RBI since Wrona had no chance to make a play at the plate.

The two pitchers gave up a total of 20 hits, but they were both hard nuts to crack after the early innings. Both pitchers are former All-State high school baseball players from New York.

Mack led the Beaumont attack with four hits, all singles. Castro's double in the third was the only extra base hit of the night.

Pat Keedy, Pete Coachman, James Randle and Steve Liddle all had two hits each for Midland, all singles.

The Angels end the five-game set with Beaumont tonight and will return to Angels Stadium Monday for the start of a 10-game homestand against El Paso and Beaumont.

Houston Oiler quarterback Warren Moon takes a snap during drills in San Angelo behind an offensive line that he hopes will keep him off his back in 1986.

Oilers' QB not feeling pressure

It's hard for Moon to pass under massive defenders

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

SAN ANGELO — If the pressure is getting to Houston Oiler quarterback Warren Moon, he isn't showing it.

After signing a $6 million contract with the Oilers two years ago, Moon's talents were supposed to lead the team from mediocrity to the playoffs.

But after two struggling seasons under Moon's leadership, the Oilers used the third pick in the draft to select a quarterback, 6-6 Jim Everett — a pass-happy All-America from Purdue.

That selection apparently set the stage for a training camp showdown between Moon and the rookie, but Everett hasn't reported to camp.

Moon said he is not worried — even if Everett does happen to find his way to San Angelo.

"I don't feel any pressure," said Moon, who threw for a touchdown earlier this week in the Oilers' 17-14 preseason victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

"I just want to take more advantage of my strengths this year. I want to do what I do best."

MOON'S STRENGTHS, scouts say, are his strong passing arm and his ability to scramble.

However, for the past two seasons, his talents often have been smothered under mammoth defensive linemen. He has been sacked 93 times in the 30 games he has played as an Oiler.

He has thrown 27 touchdowns, but defenders have picked off 33 passes.

His numbers — and a broken-down offense — have contributed to an 8-24 record since he arrived with the team.

Last year the Oilers finished 5-11, last in the AFC Central Division.

"My main goal is to be more consistent this year," said Moon, who twice passed for more than 5,000 yards in a single season in the Canadian Football League.

High schools kickoff '86

Smaller classes start practice Monday

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The grind of two-a-days is still a week away for the big boys of Midland High and Midland Lee, but the smaller classifications — Classes A through 4A — will cut the tape on the 1986 season on Monday.

From Class A Garden City to Class 4A's newest addition, Big Spring, the playoff road begins with every one in the hunt for a playoff spot. And with all the district shuffling going on last spring, Permian Basin area schools are scattered throughout West Texas.

One of the big shakeups in the area was the movement of Greenwood into Class 3A, putting the Rangers in District 4-3A with superpowers Crane and Kermit, both ranked highly in many preseason polls.

New Rangers' coach Maurice Hodges hopes to keep Greenwood at the same competitive level they achieved in two years at Class 2A. To help Hodges along, 12 starters return, including second team All District running back Steve Popham.

But Hodges is unfamiliar with most of his team.

"I've seen most of them when we were giving out shoes, that's it really," Hodges said. "I'm really excited about the opportunity here at Greenwood. The attitude of the young men has been very impressive, now we just have to out and work on the field.

"It's going to tough competition in Class 3A, but we came out of a tough district. Sometimes the 'As' don't mean it's tougher, it's just a different class. I know they've improved right along as enrollment has increased. The program hasn't suffered, it's been very competitive... we're going to continue that improvement and get better."

But the Rangers will step into some steep competition in 4-3A as Crane and Kermit look like the teams to beat. Also in the new district is Fabens, Clint and Alpine.

Crane, co-district 7-3A champion in 1985 with an 8-1-1 record, is one school which is likely to make a repeat playoff appearance. The Golden Cranes return one of the most highly-touted tailbacks in the state in Gerald Mitchell. Mitchell has gained more than 2,000 yards in two seasons at Crane and coach Rickey White can expect another 1,000-yard plus this season.

In Class 2A, area football watchers will have a pair of districts to keep an eye on this fall. The old District 8-2A has broken up, sending its members in all directions.

McCamey, champion of 8-2A last year, has been banished west into District 5-2A with Iraan, Marfa, Van Horn and Presidio. Iraan, undefeated champion of 6-A in 1985, is making its first appearance in the larger classification.

Many observers feel that the Badgers and Braves will battle it out for the district title on the last weekend of the season. McCamey coach Buster Leaf and Iraan coach Steve Maurer are both hoping the "experts" are right.

Chargers roll to easy win over Dallas, 20-0

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Reserve quarterback Mark Herrmann directed three second-quarter scoring drives and San Diego's defense did the rest as the Chargers beat the Dallas Cowboys 20-0 Saturday night.

Herrmann, the understudy of All-Pro Dan Fouts, completed all four of his passes for 78 yards in his first two drives. Both ended with two-yard touchdown runs, the first by fullback Tim Spencer to climax a 58-yard march and the second by reserve fullback Buford McGee to end a 54-yard drive.

Rolf Benirschke's second field goal, a 32-yarder with 1:08 remaining in the second quarter, gave San Diego a 20-0 halftime lead.

Dallas, 0-2 in exhibition play, has yet to score a touchdown. The Cowboys had two field goals in a 17-6 loss to the Chicago Bears in London last week.

The victory in the Chargers' preseason opener ended a five-game preseason losing streak to Dallas dating back to 1970. Dallas holds a 2-1 advantage in the regular season series.

The game also marked the debut of San Diego's new defensive scheme emphasizing stunts and blitzes. Cowboys starting quarterback Danny White, who played through the first period, felt the change as he was sacked three times for 35 yards in losses.

Midland team among eight Class C unbeaten

From Staff Reports

Midland's W.R. Rental Tools and Big Spring's L.G. Nix, last year's runnerup, were among the final eight teams left in the winner's bracket of the Class C State Slow Pitch tournament Saturday, which is being held at the Bill Williams Complex in Hogan Park.

All eight teams were scheduled for games late Saturday with the four winners to meet at 10 a.m. today and the losers at 9 a.m. in the double elimination tournament.

W.R. Rental defeated Insta-Rent of Copperas Cove by a 12-4 margin to gain the final eight distinction while L.G. Nix won a 26-5 decision over the Hearne Merchants.

Reynolds Construction of Midland fell into the loser's bracket with a 10-1 loss to the El Paso Spurs.

Other games that decided the final eight in the winner's bracket were Big Johns of Buchanan Dam 8, El Paso Kings 3; San Marcos Stones 12, Brady Miller Lite 3; Henry's Auto of Alice 12, San Angelo;s Jones-Hay 8; Gar Farms of Rio Grande City 13, San Angelo Jams 8; Tri-State of Bryan 7, Belton Silver Bullets 3.

W.R. Rental was scheduled to meet Henry's Auto in a late game while the Big Spring team was to face Big John's. Tri-State was due to face the Stones while the Spurs were placed against Gar Farms.

Bill Reynolds Construction of Midland lost its first game to the Miller Lite Spurs of El Paso by a 10-1 margin, but were still alive in the tournament, having a late Saturday night game in the loser's bracket.

Also alive in the loser's bracket were the Big Spring Silver Bullets and Lightfoot of Andrews and they were to meet late Saturday. The Silver Bullets defeated Bryan's Flashers, 13-9, to stay alive while Lightfoot won a 9-8 game over Superior Cable of Brownwood.

Starting play at 8 a.m. today, 12 of the original 102 teams will be left in the tournament, four of which will be undefeated and eight in the loser's bracket.

Play will end this afternoon with the championship finals at 3 p.m. A second championship game will follow if the loser's bracket team should win the 3 p.m. contest.

W.R. Rental had other tournament victories of 5-4 over DeSoto, 7-5 over Martels of Odessa and 17-2 over Fiber Flex of Big Spring.

L.G. Nix had other victories of 7-6 over Rockport Marine, 6-5 over Taylor's of Groves and 10-9 over the Odessa Cubs.

Packers pound on Jets, 38-14

Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Former Wisconsin Badger running back Gary Ellerson ran for two first-half touchdowns Saturday to lead the Green Bay Packers to a 38-14 exhibition victory over the New York Jets in the first professional football game at Camp Randall Stadium.

Ellerson, in his second NFL season, scored on touchdown runs of 6 yards and 35 yards to help Green Bay to a 21-0 halftime lead. For the day, he gained 71 yards on 12 carries at his old college stadium.

The Packers usually play their home games at Green Bay's Lambeau Field and Milwaukee County Stadium. Saturday's paid attendance of 73,959 in 77,280-seat Camp Randall is the largest home crowd in Packers history, surpassing the 56,895 total reached at Lambeau Field on Nov. 3, 1985.

Vince Ferragamo, one of four Green Bay quarterbacks, started the second half and tossed a 3-yard touchdown pass to tight end Mark Lewis with 5:49 left in the third quarter as the Packers took a 28-0 lead.

Browns 19, Bills 17

CLEVELAND — Greg Allen scored a 2-yard touchdown with 50 seconds to play, giving Cleveland its first lead of the game as the Browns defeated the Buffalo Bills.

The Bills led 17-6 after fifth-round draft choice Carl Byrum ran two yards for a touchdown less than a minute into the fourth quarter.

But Pagel, who followed Bernie Kosar and Jeff Christensen at quarterback for Cleveland, pulled the Browns within 17-12 when he ran one yard around the right side for a score with just over eight minutes to play. Pagel, obtained in an offseason trade with Indianapolis, completed four of five passes for 39 yards on the drive.

He then drove the Browns 57 yards in 12 plays after a Buffalo punt for the winning score.

Pagel finished with 12 completions in 16 attempts for 114 yards.

Buffalo, which has not won a preseason game since 1984, led 7-0 at the half after running back Greg Bell plunged one yard for a score on the game's opening drive.

Bears 33, Steelers 13

PITTSBURGH — Mike Tomczak threw three touchdown passes, including a 61-yard fourth-quarter throw to Thomas Sanders, as the Chicago Bears overpowered the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The victory was the second in six days for the defending Super Bowl champions, who handed the Steelers their first loss in their last 16 preseason openers.

Tomczak, the Bears' third-string quarterback, completed 17 of 23 passes for 238 yards and hit on his final nine passes of the first half as the Bears took a 16-6 halftime lead.

Tomczak threw first-half scoring shots of 24 yards to Ken Margerum and four yards to Brian Baschnagel. The latter touchdown capped a 72-yard, six-play drive in the final 1:43 of the first half. Tomczak, who replaced second-stringer Steve Fuller early in the second period, completed four consecutive passes during the drive.

Tomczak completed nine of his 10 first-half passes.

Vikings 30, Dolphins 16

MINNEAPOLIS — Third-quarter interceptions by Chris Doleman and Neal Guggemos helped Minnesota break open a close game and the Vikings went on to an exhibition victory over the Miami Dolphins, who played without quarterback Dan Marino.

NFL Pre-Season

With Marino, Miami's two-time All-Pro quarterback, sitting out the game, Don Strock started and passed for 31 yards in the first half. Jim Jenson, Strock's replacement, fared better statistically, but was the victim of the two key interceptions.

Thanks mostly to Tommy Kramer's 56-yard touchdown pass to Mike Jones, the Vikings led 10-6 at halftime. On the Dolphins' fourth play after intermission, Jensen's pass to the right side was intercepted by Doleman, who returned the ball to Miami's 37. The play set up Wade Wilson's 6-yard scoring pass to Carl Hilton.

On Miami's next offensive play, Jensen threw the football directly to Guggemos and the rookie safety returned the ball 20 yards for a touchdown that put the Vikes ahead 23-6.

The Dolphins pulled within 23-16 on Jensen's 23-yard scoring pass to Lawrence Sampleton and Fuad Reveiz's 42-yard field goal before Wilson's 4-yard touchdown pass to Sammy White closed out the scoring.

Chiefs 20, Bengals 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Todd Blackledge threw a 22-yard touchdown pass and Nick Lowery kicked two field goals as Kansas City capitalized on two Cincinnati turnovers in the second quarter to beat the Bengals in the preseason opener for both teams.

Blackledge connected with Anthony Hancock with 12:47 left in the second quarter to end a 64-yard drive that began when Art Still recovered a fumble by Bengals fullback Larry Kinnebrew.

Lowery kicked a 32-yard field goal with 2:55 left in the second period and added a 52-yard kick with 15 seconds remaining in the first half. Jack Epps intercepted Bengals quarterback Sandy Osiecki to set up Lowery's second kick.

Ethan Horton scored on a 2-yard plunge with 4:50 left in the third quarter for the Chiefs' final points.

Horton's touchdown ended an 80-yard drive that ate up 9:26 of the third quarter.

Cardinals 26, Bucs 10

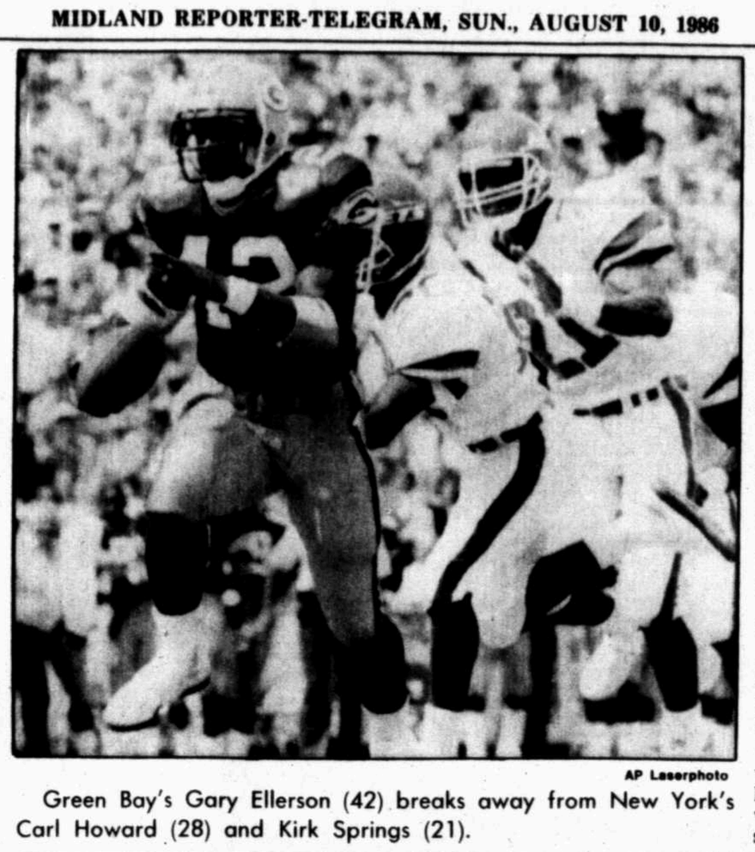

In a game delayed 50 minutes by an intense thunderstorm that temporarily rendered the scoreboard clock inoperable, Niko Noga and Lionel Washington returned interceptions for touchdowns and John Lee booted three field goals for St. Louis.

Tampa Bay quarterback Steve Young had a rough night, completing only six of 18 passes for 54 yards. He was intercepted twice and lost a fumble, then suffered a mild concussion while scrambling.

Saints 10, Broncos 7

Morten Andersen kicked a 51-yard field goal with 6:01 left. Wayne Wilson scored the Saints' touchdown on a 1-yard run after an interception of a tipped pass.

Denver's John Elway, on a flea-flicker play in which he handed off to running back Sammy Winder, who in turn pitched back to Elway, fired a 56-yard pass to Vance Johnson to set up an 11-yard scoring strike to Gene Lang.

MOON

"We want to dictate what our offense does," he said, adding that meant a juiced-up running attack.

"Last year, we would get behind and teams would know I'd have to throw. We don't want to get in that situation."

MOON'S RUNNING game will likely consist of former Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier, ex-New York Giant Butch Woolfolk and fullback Larry Moriarty.

Rozier rushed for eight touchdowns and 462 yards after coming from the USFL. Morarity gained 381 yards. Both missed games due to injuries.

Woolfolk, a fleet-footed running back from the University of Michigan, gained 392 yards last year.

Moon said the Oiler offense may resemble the Los Angeles Raiders.

"We want to stay out of the third-and-long," he said. "The nickel defense is tough to defeat when you have six or seven defenders going after the ball."

The likely targets of Moon's spirals will be Tim Smith, Drew Hill and a host of other receivers such as Louisville rookie Ernest Givens — who scouts say resembles Miami's Mark Clayton — and John Jefferson, a former NFL star trying to make a comeback.

Jefferson, who has been a primary target for such quarterbacks as San Diego's Dan Fouts and Green Bay's Lynn Dickey, said Moon is the best pure passer he has played with.

"Dan had the ability to read a defense while he was backing up," Jefferson said, "but Warren throws a better pass than either one of them (Fouts or Dickey).

THE FORMER University of Washington quarterback is looking forward to the Oilers' first game Sept. 7 against the Green Bay Packers.

"I feel a lot more comfortable," he said, noting he worked extensively with weights in the off-season.

"Physically, I'm a lot stronger than I have been in the past... I missed a couple of games last year, and I wanted to be in better shape."

As for the Oilers' chances against a schedule which includes the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Raiders, Moon said his team will be competitive.

"Our team has as much talent as anyone in the league. We're young but we can play with anybody."

Texas scores Oil Bowl shutout over Oklahoma

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Bill Mercer of Wichita Falls High ran 11 yards for one touchdown and set up another with a 31-yard run to lead the Texas high school all-stars to a 17-0 win over Oklahoma Saturday night in the 49th annual Oil Bowl.

Mercer, who was the game's leading rusher with 68 yards in nine carries, was named the game's offensive most valuable player. Greg Owen of Sulphur Springs was named the defensive MVP.

The shutout was the ninth for Texas in the series and the first since a 15-0 win in 1971.

Tommy Fambrough got Texas on the board early in the first quarter with a 23-yard field goal. The Texans made it 10-0 later in the half after Mercer's 31-yard run set up a 16-yard touchdown dash by James Polk of Wichita Falls-Hirschi.

Mercer's 11-yard run in the fourth quarter ended the scoring.

Oklahoma, which now trails the overall series 31-9-1, was held to 25 yards rushing by the Texas defense.

The game is sponsored by Maskat Shrine Temple and benefits crippled children's charities in Texas and Oklahoma.

Brewers recall Sveum

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Infielder Dale Sveum was recalled from the disabled list and Steve Kiefer was optioned to the Vancouver team of the Pacific Coast League, the Milwaukee Brewers announced Saturday.

Sveum was placed on the disabled list Aug. 2, retroactive to July 3 because of a split index finger on his right hand. He was hitting .280 with 4 home runs and 27 runs batted in in 60 games before his injury.

Kiefer was called up from Vancouver on Aug. 2. He appeared in two games with the Brewers and was hitless in six at-bats, striking out four times. At Vancouver, batted .267 with 10 home runs and 53 RBIs.

American cyclist Greg LeMond, winner of the Tour de France, takes this embarrassing fall on a 22 percent grade on Telegraph Hill in San Francisco Saturday.

Kiefel leads CIBC; LeMond takes spill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — American Ron Kiefel of the 7-Eleven team pedaled to the top of fog-covered Telegraph Hill on Saturday to win the first event of the Coors International Bicycle Classic for the fourth straight year.

Kiefel, 26, of Wheatridge, Colo., posted an official time of 3 minutes, 12.59 seconds in the 1.05-mile, 280-foot climb to Coit Tower in the Fisherman's Wharf Prologue Time-Trial.

Petr Urgrumov of the Soviet Union was second with an official time of 3:18:39, and Raul Alcala, also of the 7-Eleven team was third with an official time of 3:18:52.

Kiefel, who has won the time-trial every year since 1983, downplayed its overall importance in the 17-stage, 15-day race that takes riders across 1,065 miles in California, Nevada and Colorado.

"In this race, it's really close. There's no greater difference of 30 seconds (between riders). I don't know if 30 seconds is going to make that much of a difference," he said.

Kiefel said he uses a definite strategy in the time-trial, including the constant shifting of gears. He also said he finished more than seven seconds slower than last year because of the cold weather and humidity.

"Getting to the finish line — the last 100 meters — that hurt," he admitted. "During the last 50 meters, my whole body was filled with lactic acid."

Defending champion Greg LeMond, who won the prestigious Tour de France two weeks ago, fell while attacking the hill's 22 percent grade when his bicycle chain got caught in his wheel. He finished with an official time of 3:37:43.

"On the steep part of the hill I downshifted and the chain came off and went into my wheel," he said. "I had to get off the bike and walk up and then climb back on. There was no problem with my derailleur, I don't know what happened."

Davis Phinney of the 7-Eleven team finished 3:20:65, and Jean-Francois Bernard of Red Zinger came in at 3:21:51.

The race continues Sunday with the 39.6-mile San Francisco Fisherman's Wharf Criterium.

MHS, Lee tickets available to public

From Staff Reports

The ticket windows at Memorial Stadium will open at 8 a.m. Monday to the general public for the sale of season football tickets for both Midland High and Midland Lee.

Option holders had until last Friday to renew options and when that sale ended, there were tickets left for both schools come Monday.

Lee, which sold a record 2,696 season tickets last year (all that were available), passed the 2,400 mark Friday, leaving around 200 season tickets available to the general public.

The renewed option holders make certain that Lee will have its second best season ticket sale ever. In 1984, the Rebels sold 2,101 for the previous second best mark.

Midland High season tickets approached the 700 mark Friday and sold 1,035 a year ago. Plenty of tickets are expected to be available for MHS.

The general public will have until Friday, Aug. 29, to purchase season tickets. After that, all tickets will be sold on a game-to-game basis the week of the game for $5.

The season ticket package is $20 for the five home games of Midland High and $16 for the four home games of Lee. Lee season ticket buyers are also being given the option of purchasing a $5 ticket for the MHS contest, running the entire package, if wanted, to $21.

The season ticket package is especially attractive this year since Lee will host Odessa Permian again in an expected sellout. Also, the MHS-Lee game is the first district game of the season instead of the final game, and it too, could be a sellout come game week.

Season tickets insure that fans will have a seat for the two biggest home games of the season.

Glen has makings of classic tough battle

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — The first NASCAR stock car race at Watkins Glen in 21 years has all the ingredients to mix up a classic battle Sunday.

The Budweiser at the Glen will feature one of the most closely matched fields of the season, some talented visitors to the NASCAR stock car series and the historic 2.4-mile, seven-turn race course itself.

Tim Richmond, trailing Winston Cup leader Dale Earnhardt by 185 points and second-place Darrell Waltrip, the defending champion, by just 24, will start from the pole in the 90-lap, 218.5-mile event.

Waltrip will be on the outside of the front row, with Earnhardt, the least experienced road racer of the trio, 10th in the 36-car lineup.

The race, the first here for the stockers since 1965, is scheduled to start at 12:30 p.m. EDT and will be televised live on ESPN.

"I don't think anybody is going to be able to run away with it," said Richmond, who established a stock car qualifying mark of 117.563 mph in winning the pole. "You don't want to take off and abuse the car and have it go away on you.

"I've done that at Riverside," he added, referring to the circuit at Riverside, Calif., the only other road course on which the NASCAR drivers compete. "You just can't afford to thrash the car on every lap or the tires and the brakes will be gone real quick."

Waltrip also was expecting a tough race. He said, "This is a very fast course and you've got guardrail all the way around it. That is a dangerous mix. You really can't afford to make a mistake here like you can at Riverside.

"There, if you mess up, you drive through the grass and get going again. Here, you mess up and you're gonna hit the guardrail."

Three-time Indy-car champion Al Unser and veteran road racer George Follmer are both making rare guest appearances in NASCAR's top series this weekend.

Unser, driving in place of Buddy Baker, who does not consider himself a good road racer, said, "These stock car guys adapt pretty quickly. There are some pretty good road racers out there already.

"The biggest problem in this race is probably going to be brakes."

Follmer agreed with that, but added, "Another thing is engines and transmissions because guys who don't do much driving on courses like this tend to abuse them by over revving and make careless gear changes."

Bobby Allison, who will start 11th Sunday and is fourth in the standings, 73 points behind Richmond, said, "I don't do much road racing but actually I kind of enjoy it. It's been a real nice change of pace from our normal activities.

"It's more interesting than sitting at Talladega holding it wide open and hoping you've got an ounce more power than the other guy," Allison added.

Diving titles stay with '85 champs

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Defending champions Greg Louganis and Michele Mitchell survived tough challenges to keep their U.S. platform titles in the Phillips 66-U.S. Diving Championships Saturday.

Louganis, 26, of Boca Raton, didn't grab the lead until the eighth round of the 10-round final. He then hit his best dive of the competition in the ninth round and held on for his third national title of the week and the 41st of his storied career.

The sweep of the 1-meter and 3-meter springboard and the platform events marked the fifth straight time Louganis has won all three in a national meet.

The scores were closer than normal this time, however, as four of his competitors got perfect scores of 10 during the event. Louganis didn't get any 10s.

Louganis, who won two gold medals in the 1984 Olympics, finished Saturday with 655.20 points, while Dan Watson of Ashland, Ky., was second with 640.62 and Mike Wantuck of Columbus, Ohio, third with 633.87.

Mitchell, the Olympic silver medalist in women's platform, fought off newcomer Cokey Smith to win her fifth consecutive U.S. platform title. The winner, who like Louganis competes for the Mission Bay Makos of Boca Raton, amassed 439.26 points, while Smith, of Ann Arbor, Mich., had 408.21. Karen LaFace of Pittsburgh was third with 407.31.

In the men's event, Pat Evans of Cincinnati took the lead early with 9.5s in the first round and remained in the lead for seven rounds. Evans, who qualified second to Louganis, scored a 10 on his fourth dive, an armstand somersault pike.

But Evans faltered in the eighth round when he got only 32.67 points on a reverse 2½ somersault pike. Louganis got 90 points with that same dive in the next round to take control.

Dan Watson of Ashland, Ky., improved upon the two 10s he received in the fourth round with five 10s and two 9.5s on his eighth dive, also a reverse 2½ somersault pike. But he couldn't catch Louganis in the final two rounds.

Olympic silver medalist Bruce Kimball scored two 10s on his sixth dive, an armstand reverse 1½ somersault tuck. The six time U.S. platform champion finished fourth at 613.87.

Scott Donie, although never a threat for the title, drew roaring applause after earning six 10s and a 9.5 on his ninth dive, a reverse 2½ somersault tuck. His score of 81 is the highest possible total for the dive. He finished in sixth place with 576.42 points.

Central State joins Lone Star Conference

DALLAS (AP) — Central State University of Edmond, Okla., was accepted Saturday as the eighth member of the Lone Star Conference.

The unanimous vote came during a meeting of the league's Council of Presidents. Central State will officially become an LSC member on July 1, 1987, and begin competition for league championships during the 1987-88 school year.

"The Lone Star Conference is now as strong as any time in its history, and Central State will immediately contribute to the overall athletic excellence of the conference," said Dr. Lloyd D. Vincent, chairman of the LSC Council of Presidents and president of Angelo State.

The other seven LSC members are Abilene Christian in Abilene, Angelo State in San Angelo, East Texas State in Commerce, Eastern New Mexico in Portales, Howard Payne in Brownwood, Texas A&I in Kingsville and West Texas State in Canyon.

CSU officials said they expect to add women's volleyball to the Bronco athletic program by 1987-88 to meet the LSC regulations of four mandatory sports — football, volleyball and men's and women's basketball.

Central State, with a 1985 fall enrollment of 13,217, is the largest member of the NAIA. The Bronchos won NAIA Division I national football championships in 1962 and 1982, and they have won six of the last eight NAIA wrestling championships.

Central State is on a 200-acre campus in Edmond, a northern suburb of Oklahoma City. It's the oldest institution of higher education in Oklahoma.

Saturday's vote gives CSU membership in a conference for the first time since 1976 when it withdrew from the Oklahoma Intercollegiate Conference.

Central State was a dual member of NAIA and NCAA Division II in 1975-79, but CSU officials said they will apply for NCAA membership and resign from the NAIA after the upcoming 1986-87 school year.

Also, in 1987-88 the LSC will have eight members for the first time since 1983-84. Eastern New Mexico began LSC competition in 1985 and West Texas State in 1986 after Sam Houston State, Stephen F. Austin State and Southwest Texas State resigned in 1984.

Walton pulls out two-shot Henredon lead

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Robin Walton held off several challengers Saturday in search of her first LPGA victory, shooting a 4-under-par 68 for an 11-under 205 total and a two-shot lead after three rounds of the $230,000 Henredon Classic golf tournament.

The 30-year-old Washington state resident took the lead over Betsy King, who was tied with Walton after two rounds and briefly held the lead in the third round until a bogey at the ninth hole stopped her momentum.

LPGA

King rallied for birdies on two of her last four holes at Willow Creek Golf Course and finished at 2-under-par 70 for a three-day total of 9-under-par 207.

Walton has been on the tour since 1979, but has done no better than a tie for fourth. In approaching Sunday's final round, she said there would be little cautious play on her part.

"I play best when I play aggressive," Walton said. "I feel good about the way I'm hitting the ball and if I've got the shot I want to hit, I'm going to go right after that flag. This is not the kind of lead you can sit on, either."

After falling into a tie with King toward the end of the front nine, Walton birdied the ninth hole, bogeyed the 10th but got that shot back on the 11th hole. Good iron play and clutch putting produced birdies at 12, 14 and 15, staking Walton to the lead and leaving her 18 holes away from the $34,500 first prize money. In the way of that achievement are some of the LPGA's greats, all of whom closed the gap on Walton.

"I'm not in their league. Not yet," Walton said. "They're super-duper players. If I can go out and beat those ladies tomorrow, that would make it so much sweeter because they're the best."

King overtook Walton when she sank a 20-foot birdie putt at the sixth hole to go to 8-under. But Walton made up the deficit on the seventh hole when she knocked in a 15-foot putt.

After the pair made par on the par-3 eighth hole, King lost a shot when her approach to the ninth green landed in the gallery behind the green. Walton's approach set up a birdie putt and her runaway to sole possession of first.

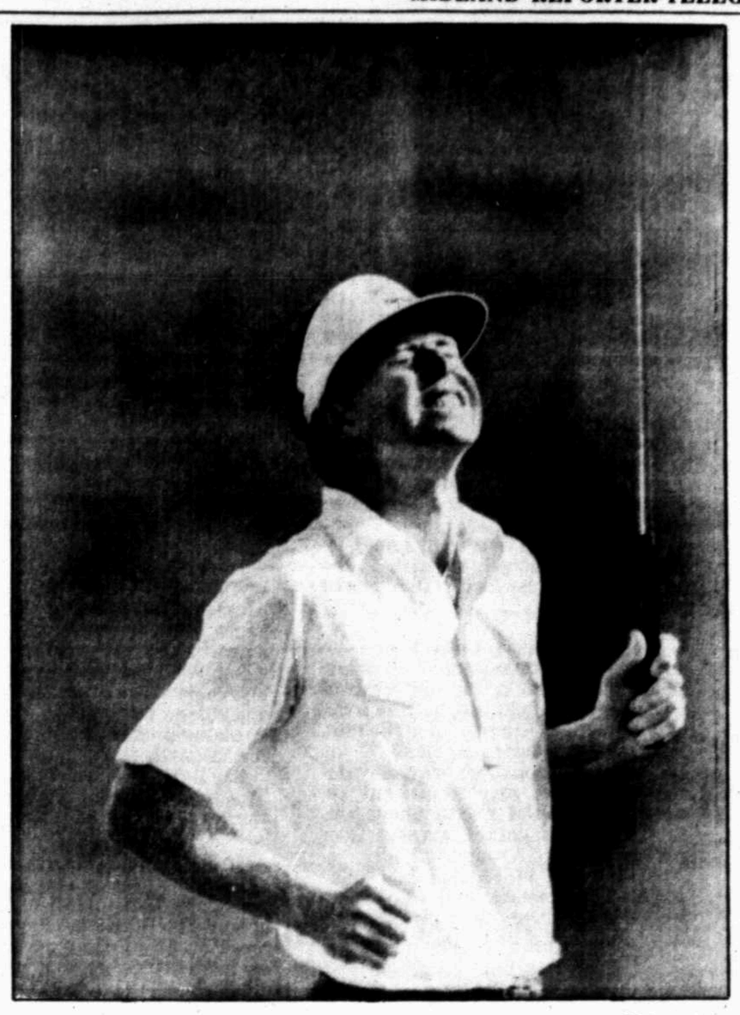

"The birdie at 18 brought me back a little bit closer. I just really was trying to hang in there and trying to get it to double figures if I could," King said. "I didn't quite make that, but I think two shots on this golf course are not that difficult to make up. It's just gonna come down to who happens to putt the best tomorrow."

As opposed to Walton, King is a five-time winner on the LPGA Tour. But she said seeing Walton win would be good, too.

"If I don't win, I hope Robin does win. I know when I hadn't won, everybody likes to see someone who hasn't won come in and win because it gives everybody else hope," King said.

At 208 are Debbie Massey, who fired a 5-under 67, and Hall of Famer JoAnne Carner, who had a 70.

Defending champion Nancy Lopez came in with a 70 — her ninth consecutive sub-par round at Willow Creek — and is alone at 6-under 210.

Bob Tway reacts to a birdie putt on the 17th green on his way to a 64 and a new Inverness course record in the PGA Championship Saturday. Tway is four strokes behind leader Greg Norman.

Norman batters Inverness

Tway needs record 64 to pull close

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Front-running Greg Norman chipped in twice, including once for par, during a round of 69 that left him with a four-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the 68th PGA National Championship.

The rampaging Norman, the season's money leader and on top all the way in this event, completed 54 holes over the Inverness course in 202, 11-under-par on the course that didn't yield a subpar 72-hole score in the four times it hosted the U.S. Open.

Norman now has led going into the final round of all four of golf's major championships this year.

He led the Masters by a single stroke and finished second, one back of Jack Nicklaus. He led the U.S. Open by one, "came out flat" by his own admission, and drifted back into the field. He led the British Open by one, and won by five.

Now, with 18 holes to go in the last of the season's Big Four tournaments, only one man is within six strokes of Norman, and it took a course-record 7-under-par 64 for Bob Tway to get there.

Tway, winner of three titles on the PGA Tour this year and second to Norman in earnings, scored eight birdies in the round that was only one stroke off the PGA Tournament record.

That effort put the Tour sophomore alone in second at 206.

"I got myself back in the golf tournament," he said.

Peter Jacobsen was next at 208 after a hard-won 70.

PGA Championship

THE OTHER contenders, including Nicklaus, fired and fell back on the course that is rapidly drying from mid-week rains and is becoming very fast and firm.

Payne Stewart, four back when the day's play started, slipped to a 1-over-par 72 and was tied at 209 with Donnie Hammond. Hammond, not yet a winner in four years of Tour activity, came from well back with a 68.

Nicklaus, 46, holder of a record 18 major professional titles, had it in position to shoot in the 60s, but received no cooperation from his oversized putter and finished with a 72.

That left him at 210, eight shots back in his quest of a record sixth PGA championship. He was tied with Bruce Lietzke, who had a 70.

Tom Watson, needing this title to become only the fifth man to make a career sweep of the game's majors, could do no better than a 72 that left him at par 213, 11 strokes back.

While such potential contenders as Nicklaus and Watson were, figuratively, shooting themselves in the foot, Ben Crenshaw was, literally, hitting himself in the head.

Crenshaw flipped his club into the air after making his approach shot on the 18th. The club came down, hit him in the head and gashed his scalp. Despite bleeding from the head, Crenshaw completed the hole, making a par putt for a 72 and a 217. He went to a hospital where three stitches were taken.

Norman, who led by two shots after 18 holes and by four strokes going into the third round, wasn't seriously challenged at any time. His lead ranged up to six shots and never was less than three.

He didn't make a bogey, but that's only due to a magic wedge.

On the fourth, he was in a wiry tangle of rough around the green, looking at a bogey. But he made birdie, chipping in from about 25 feet.

On the 13th, he was looking at double bogey, but made a minor-miracle par, the kind of par with which championships are won.

NORMAN DROVE to the right and into the rough on the edge of a bunker, a position that forced him to take an awkward stance for his second shot. He lashed it across the fairway into a near-impossible position under a small tree.

He couldn't get at it right-handed, and so played his third shot left-handed. He moved it only a few feet. He left his fourth shot short and on a slope leading up to the green on the par-5 hole.

At that point, the loss of his lead was a possibility and a double bogey was a probable.

"I was so mad, I just said to myself 'OK, let's just chip the son of a gun in the hole, take our five and get the hell out of here,' " Norman said.

Becker nips McEnroe, to meet Lendl in finals

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — West Germany's Boris Becker staved off four match points before finally winning a thrilling third-set tiebreak 10-8 Saturday to defeat defending champion John McEnroe and advance to the final of the Volvo International tennis tournament.

Becker, the reigning Wimbledon champion, will face Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia in Sunday's title match of the $315,000 Nabisco Grand Prix event.

Lendl, top-seeded in the 64-player tournament, moved into the final earlier Saturday with a 6-4, 3-6, 6-2 victory over Jimmy Connors.

But it was the Becker-McEnroe confrontation the capacity crowd of 10,300 had come to see. And they were not disappointed as Becker won the rain-delayed contest 3-6, 7-5, 7-6, his first career victory over the veteran left-hander from New York.

Between them, Becker and McEnroe have won the last four Wimbledon singles titles, McEnroe in 1983 and 1984 and Becker the last two. But until Saturday, they had only met once, and that before Becker ascended to the grass court throne in 1985.

And on Saturday, it was almost a classic confrontation between the old king, playing in his first tournament in nearly seven months, and the new Wimbledon champion, testing his power game against the touch and placement of McEnroe.

"It's always a special meaning to beat McEnroe, whether it's in a first round somewhere or in the final of a Grand Slam," Becker said. "To me, he's the greatest player."

It was McEnroe who drew first blood in a contest filled with posturing by both players. But when it was over, it was Becker giving a thumbs-up sign to his coach while McEnroe's bride of one week, actress Tatum O'Neal, wept.

Becker won the toss and elected to receive, a surprise considering the West German teenager's big serve. Then, as McEnroe started to serve to begin the match, Becker turned his back on the court.

McEnroe waited until Becker was ready, then prepared again to serve. And again, Becker turned around and walked away, causing McEnroe to just shake his head and wait some more.

Charles sets 36-hole mark to lead Seniors Classic

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Bob Charles of New Zealand shot a 3-under-par 69 on Saturday, giving him a 36-hole tournament record of 134 and a two-stroke lead over surging Bruce Crampton and Gary Player in the $200,000 Digital PGA Seniors Golf Classic.

Charles, a Seniors Tour rookie who won several titles, including national Open crowns in five countries, as a member of the regular tour, birdied two of his last three holes for the lead in the 54-hole tournament at Nashawtuc Country Club.

Crampton, teeing off first in the field of 54 pros aged 50 and over, charged into contention for the $30,000 winner's prize with an 8-under-par 64, breaking the record of 65 equalled by Charles and Gay Brewer in the opening round.

Player, the South African great who is approaching his 61st birthday, matched the old course record with sides of 32 and 33 over the 6,453-yard course.

Charles made up for a bogey at 15 with a 20-foot birdie putt on 16 and, after parring the 17th, chipped within two feet for a birdie on the 18th to go 10 under for the tournament.

Surgery could cost Ryan one year's play

HOUSTON (AP) — Astros pitcher Nolan Ryan said he would consider surgery if his elbow continues to bother him, even if it means sitting out one season.

During the Astros' trip to Los Angeles earlier this week, Ryan, 39, said he was examined by Dr. Frank Jobe, the Dodgers' team physician and one of the country's leading sports surgeons.

"He told me if I decided to have surgery, it would take a year to come back," Ryan said Friday night after the Astros beat the San Diego Padres 5-0. "I don't think it's necessary at this time, but if my elbow continued to bother me, oh, yeah, I'd consider it."

Walling helps Astros to 6-2 win

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Denny Walling continued his success against San Diego pitcher Andy Hawkins with a three-run homer and an RBI double, leading the Houston Astros to a 6-2 victory over the Padres Saturday night.

The home run was Walling's ninth of the season and his fourth this season off Hawkins. Walling has five hits in eight at bats against Hawkins, driving in 10 runs.

Jim Deshaies and Charlie Kerfeld combined on a three-hitter. Deshaies, 7-3, pitched five innings and giving up two runs on three hits. The win is Deshaies' sixth in his last seven decisions.

Kerfeld pitched four hitless innings, gaining his fourth save.

Glenn Davis hit his 24th home run of the season for Houston's last run, tying him with Mike Schmidt for the league lead.

Hawkins, 8-8, was the loser, going two innings, giving up five runs on five hits.

Houston took a 3-0 lead in the first. After a walk to Bill Doran and a single by Billy Hatcher, Walling belted a Hawkins' pitch over the right field wall.

The Astros added a pair of runs in the second when Doran led off with a walk, stole second and scored on Walling's double. Jose Cruz singled in Walling.

The Padres cut Houston's lead to 5-2 in the fourth on Steve Garvey's 16th homer of the season. Kevin McReynolds walked and scored ahead of Garvey.

Houston's Kevin Bass extended his hitting streak to 16 games. Tony Gwynn's hitting streak ended at 15 games.

Reds 6, Dodgers 2

CINCINNATI — Buddy Bell's two-run homer off Fernando Valenzuela broke open a pitching duel with John Denny and sent the Cincinnati Reds to a victory over Los Angeles.

Bell lined his ninth homer of the season over the left-field wall in the fifth inning with the score 1-1, snapping Valenzuela's five-game winning streak and giving Cincinnati its third consecutive triumph over the Dodgers.

Valenzuela, 15-7, the National League's top winner, allowed eight hits and five runs over six innings. He hasn't won at Riverfront Stadium since June 13, 1983.

Denny, 9-10, gave up both runs and seven hits over six innings, and John Franco worked the final 1 1-3 innings for his 18th save.

Cincinnati's Bo Diaz went 3-for-3, including a solo homer, his sixth, in the eighth off Joe Beckwith. Diaz scored three runs.

Pot of Gold!

At the end of the rainbow

By GIGI MCKINNEY
Advertising Feature Writer

They say there's always a pot of gold at the end of every rainbow. If that's the case, then the end of one very beautiful rainbow is located at 3103 Golf Course in a most luxurious townhome boasting a prominent modern decor.

Throughout the 1,875 square feet of workable living space, a sense of continuity in style and design prevails. Grey Italian marble sets the tone, complimented by grey walls and recessed lighting. Clarence House wallpaper is used in several of the rooms, resulting in a more vibrant appeal.

Inlaid bevelled glass at the entry prepares guests for a treat within.

Just beyond, stand the formal living, dining and a guest bedroom, now used for a study, (top left photo on the cover). Burgundy wool upholstered walls accented by white vertical blinds and grey wool carpeting can accommodate any style furnishings. A three-quarter bath featuring wallpaper in a chic abstract pattern about the white vanity completes the look.

Formal living and dining areas (top right and center left photos on the cover), luxury is at its best. A beautiful view through glass doors on each side of the brick fireplace of a U-shaped patio about the back of the home provides a haven for summer entertainment. For more formal dining entertainment, a mirrored wall beautifully reflects a bronze Italian candlelight chandelier, illuminated beneath a deeply angled skylight.

A more lighthearted approach in decor was planned for the kitchen, (bottom right photo on the cover) with black and white tile, cranberry counters, a second skylight and sleek black patterned wallcovering. Appliances in this all-electric cooking expanse include a cooktop, oven, dishwasher, refrigerator and a full-size washer and dryer in an adjoining utility area with access to the double garage.

But the real "pot of gold" at the end of this rainbow is in the master bedroom (bottom left photo on the cover). Matching grey silk upholstered walls, full length shades and a king size comforter set an Oriental tone in decor. Highlighting the mood are Coromandel screens and a mirrored wall. An immense walk-in closet with many shoe and sweater shelves easily acccommodates off season storage.

Just down a hallway, mirrored on one side, stands a bath exuding funtionability and style. Cranberry patterned wallpaper adds a sparkling vitality to anyone's day. A lighted shower, tub and vanity provide ample convenience.

Without a doubt, this is the "end of the rainbow." This home is listed by Langston-Monarch Realtors for $109,000 or can be leased for $795 per month with an option to purchase.

Fuzzy on your carpet selection?

By The Associated Press

Some interior decorators think of each room in a house as having five walls — with the fifth "wall" being the floor.

For many homeowners, the floor acts as a background for a room's textures, colors and furnishings.

Carpeting is one of the most versatile and dramatic ways to cover a floor, according to the Du Pont "Antron" Home Decorating Guide, which says carpets can pull together and unify all of a room's decorating components.

A major household investment, carpeting requires care in matching its selection to each room's function with the carpet's fiber, performance features, texture and color.

Once the fiber has been determined, the next step is to select the carpet texture. Varying textures and patterns adds spice to a room and can help to define its style,the guide says.

Textures can be rough to the touch, as in tweed, Berber or level-loop, or it can be smooth, (like plush velvet or Saxony). Patterns can range from a tiny pin-dot print to a bold, abstract geometric.

Mixing a rough Berber carpet with soft suede furniture and the polished look of glass results in a sophisticated, contemporary look. Another option is blending a patterned carpet with another pattern used in the drapes or upholstery. Patterns blend together well when they are color and design related.

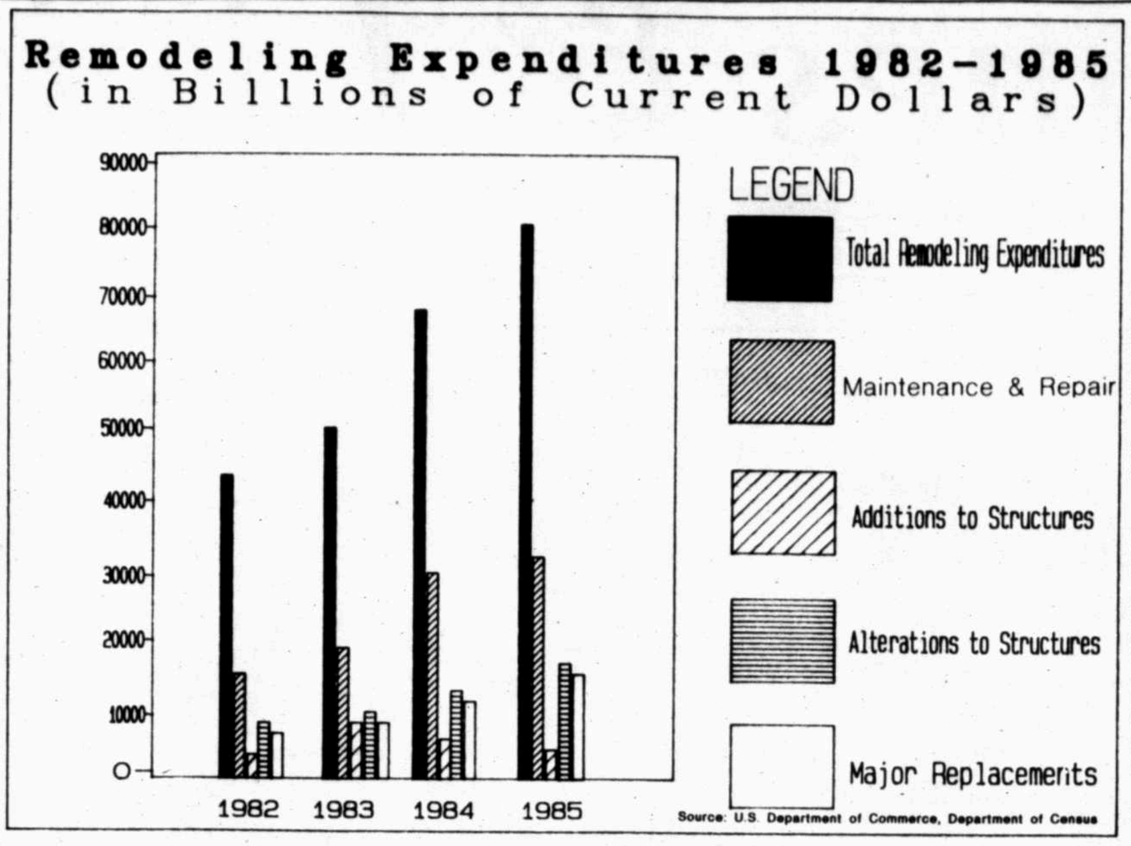

An elegant velvet plush or Saxony carpet with a cut-pile pattern helps give a formal dining room or living room a rich, luxurious look.

A family room, children's bedroom or multipurpose room that takes a lot of wear-and-tear should be carpeted with a densely constructed carpet like a loop-pile or low cut-pile.

Choosing a color scheme includes decisions on color groups — warm colors, such as reds, yellow, browns and oranges, or cool colors like blues, greens or grays — and on color intensities.

Furniture should be selected with room size and function in mind. Whether it's early American, post-modern or traditional, the proportions of the furnishings should be compatible with the room size.

In decorating a living room, choose comfortable furnishings and arrange them in groups that encourage conversation. If it's a bedroom, consider creating an office in a corner or an entertainment center along a wall to extend the room's livability.

Residential remodeling at record level

Americans spending $80.3 billion annually

WASHINGTON—Residential remodeling reached record levels last year as Americans spent $80.3 billion to improve and repair their homes, according to the National Association of Home Builders.

The $80.3 billion represents a 15 percent increase over total 1984 remodeling expenditures," said David C. Smith, president of the 142,000-member trade association. "And we expect an increase in 1986 as well."

Remodeling activity has soared 78 percent – from $45 billion to $80.3 billion – in the past four years, Smith said, at least in part because sales of new and existing homes have been so strong. "Typically, when a family buys a home, they make a number of improvements or alterations," he added.

Smith noted that total remodeling expenditures reached the highest quarterly figure ever recorded – $90.6 billion on an annual basis – in the last quarter of 1985.

The 1985 figures, which were compiled by the U.S. Bureau of the Census, showed a 22 percent increase in maintenance and repairs, a 23.5 percent increase in major replacements such as a roof or new furnace and a 34 percent decrease in additions, Smith said.

The figures also revealed a marked increase in multi-family remodeling projects, Smith said. "Multi-family remodeling increased from $23.2 billion in 1984 to $29.5 billion in 1985. That's a 27 percent increase."

Single-family remodeling, however, shoed a more modest increase. It grew nine percent between 1984 and 1985 with an increase from $46.6 billion to $50.8 billion.

Tone comes first

By The Associated Press

If you decide to use a premium grade hardwood veneer plywood for a home improvement project such as cabinetry, you may run into the problem of which side of the plywood will be the exterior.

Only the premium grades of hardwood veneer plywood — AA, A, and A1 — pose a problem in selecting the right face. These grades have veneers on both sides that may at first glance look nearly identical. However, subtle differences exist, says Wood magazine.

Expert cabinet makers select the "showing" side of panels first, grain second, and splices last.

According to Wood magazine, color is the overall tone of the wood. In most cases, you'll want a uniform veneer coloring all across the stock, or across each of several panels. In some species — where industry grading standards accept sapwood as well as heartwood for the veneer — there will be a color variation. Here, you'll want to make sure that the color variation occurs regularly enough to form a recognizable pattern.

Grain should also be consistent across the face of the panel.

According to Wood, the selection of matching flitches, or strips of veneer that make up the panel face, was made by the manufacturer, but it's up to you to choose the most pleasing effect.

Splices, the faintly visible joints between flitches, should be your last consideration after color and grain. Only when these butted-up flitch edges interfere with appearance will this choice change priority. When both sides look to be the same, the best face will usually have the fewest number of splices. To find them, scan the panel from left to right across the grain.

Fascinating Facts
By Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers
The Seven Wonders of the World include the Egyptian pyramids, the hanging gardens of Babylon, the temple of Diana at Ephesus, the statue of Zeus by Phidias at Olympia, the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, the Colossus of Rhodes and the lighthouse at Alexandria. These were the ancient Seven Wonders of antiquity but times change. In the Middle Ages, the Seven Wonders included the Coliseum at Rome, the Catacombs at Alexandria, the Great Wall of China, the Druidical Temple at Stonehedge, England, the Leaning Tower of Pisa, the porcelain tower of Nanking and the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople.

GOOD ADS

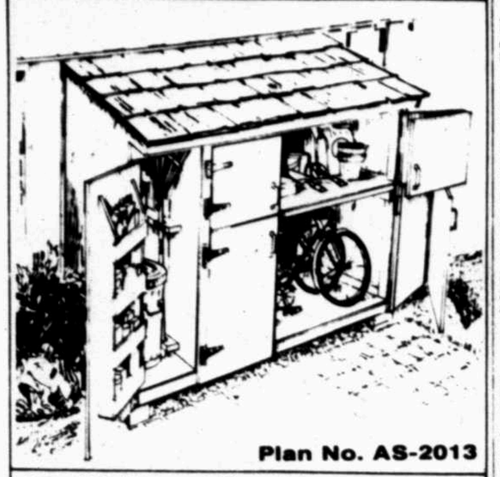

Homebuyers need information. Don't miss a sale by not giving them the facts. Tell them where the home is located, how many bedrooms it has, how it is constructed, what the architectural style is, how big the lot is, how old it is and what condition it is in. They'll also want to know about the bathroom(s), kitchen and energy features such as insulation, heating and air conditioning. Remember to tell them the reason for the sale and when and how you can be reached. Above all, don't leave out the price!

Let talk about RELO...

Joanne Langston

The worlds largest network of independent Realtors, who specialize is assisting families move from one community to another. While our services are priceless they don't cost a dime extra.

We are prepared to:

Sell your present home through accurate confidential market analysis, effective marketing strategy, and guidance through the myriad of details of contract negotiation and closing.

Help you relocate in your new community through Referral to a carefully selected RELO member in your destination city. This member will forward information on your new locality to you, make hotel reservations, meet your plane on arrival, acquaint you with your new city, then assist you through every detail of finding a home to rent or purchase, including professional counseling, securing financing, arranging for inspection or estimates and closing.

From home to home, RELO members are prepared to provide a total package real estate service, personally and professionally helping to make your move as smooth as possible. Therefore if a move is in your future, then make your "first move" a call to our RELOcation coordinator - Pat Stewart. Within hours we promise to help you on your way.

P.S. Our services are not limited to persons that list homes with us. We're happy to help in every case.

LIFESTYLE

If summer fun has become ho-hum, some new and interesting inflatable water toys can come floating to the rescue.

Although most novelty pool accessories cost a little more than average inflatable toys, their ability to perk up the pool may make them worth the price.

For example, how many children can romp on the back of a whale in their imaginary ocean or fight a wild alligator just like Tarzan in an African river?

Well, these childhood fantasies can become a close-to-life reality. The Wet Set has created inflatable plastic Whale Ride-ons and Alligator Ride-ons complete with handles, which sometimes help in mounting these critters.

"They've been real good sellers this year," said Elizabeth Lujan, Peyton's Toys store manager, while standing at the store register with an inflated whale hanging from the ceiling above her.

The whale and the alligator are not the only water life to be recreated in plastic. "Jaws" takes over the aquatic activities in the shape of a 72-inch by 31-inch shark boat. (All sizes are deflated measurerments.) This blue water wonder has a "ferocious-looking" face featuring the fangs that made "Jaws" so famous.

ANOTHER JAWS replica is found in the form of a swim ring in which the child rests inside the mouth as if being swallowed by the feared shark. But never fear — Jonah was swallowed by a big fish and lived to tell the tale.

With these creatures circling the pool, an inflatable boat for two may be just the perfect getaway, but give yourself a good head start from the shark, because at 78 inches by 46 inches, as one onlooker said, "That boat would sure take a lot of hot air to blow up!"

On the lighter side, many inflatable toys now bear the imprints of some of the latest childhood friends. Beach balls feature scenes of Care Bears and Cabbage Patch people in addition to the traditional brightly-colored panels. Swim rings are shaking with caricatures of frogs and clowns with movable eyes.

However, not all of the innovative inflatable toys are designed for children. Adults can enjoy a new array of designs for a popular sunbathing tool — the raft. Rafts are sporting views of the Texas state flag, rainbows and much more.

SOME RAFTS found in local stores were made of a nylon, canvas-like material.

"I think these (the nylon inflatable toys) are much more durable," Jane Berggren, manager of Toys Plus. "Of course they cost more than the little plastic ones."

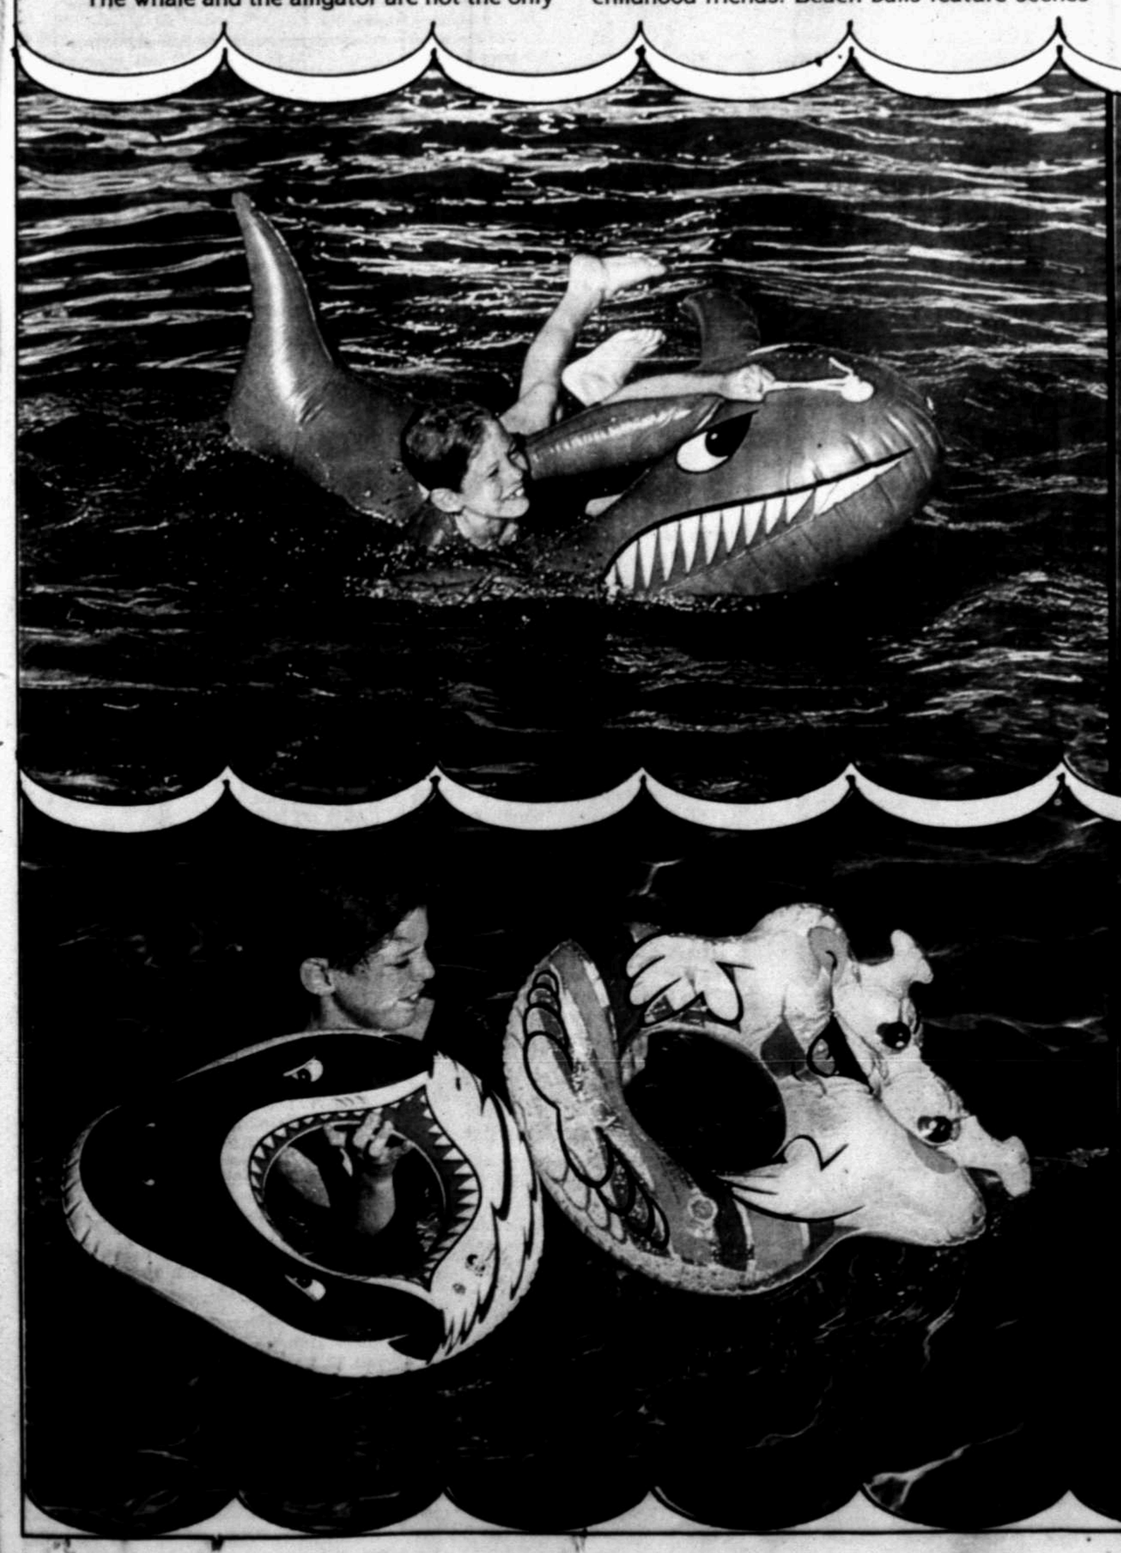

Another novel idea is the aquatic answer to a bicycle built for two — a raft built for two.

For those who enjoy the rough waters as much as Wes and Kim Olson (pictured above), the Wet Set created the Whale Ride-on and the Alligator Ride-on, found at Peyton's Toys in Midland Park Mall. Inflatable toys to accessorize the pool include, clockwise, a shark boat from Toys-N-More, 2310 Michigan; an Alligator Ride-on from Peyton's Toys, Midland Park Mall; a nylon rainbow-printed raft and swim rings featuring a shark and a clown with movable eyes, all from Toys Plus, 4612 Billingsley Dr.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Minuet Club debutante Andrea Neisig was honored with a lemonade party last weekend. Hostesses for the fun event in the Neisig home were Andrea's grandmother, Alpha Smith, her sister, Jennifer (Mrs. Mike) Alvarado of Austin, and family friend Michal Marcum.

Other debs attending were Kelly Munn, along with her mother, Lynn (Mrs. Bill) Munn, and Elaine Hinchey, accompanied by her mother, Patsy Hinchey; her sister, Laura, and her grandmother, Patsy (Mrs. Arthur) Yeager.

Family members representing debs, who have scattered for the summer and were unable to attend the party, included Sara (Mrs. Norman) Fry, Artie (Mrs. D. Murdock) Fry, Evelyn (Mrs. Wright) Cowden, Karla (Mrs. Wright, Jr.) Cowden, Gertrude (Mrs. Edwin) Alstrin, Jean (Mrs. George) Donnelly and Beth (Mrs. Kevin) Leede.

The daughter of Sarah and Russell Neisig, Andrea will be a sophomore at Texas A&M University this fall. She is a member of Chi Omega social sorority.

A "WELCOME TO THE CLUB, Grandmother" luncheon was held recently in the home of Raylene (Mrs. Dean) Smith to honor Ginger (Mrs. Jimmy) Floyd.

Michael Patrick Floyd, who was born July 21 to Susan and Stephen Floyd of Midland, was the cause for the celebration.

Enjoying the party were the baby's proud mother, Susan; grandmother Dorothy Morgan of Fort Worth, great-grandmother, Mrs. Ray Lane of Sterling City, aunt Angela Floyd, and friends Schatzie (Mrs. Charles) Tighe, Harriet (Mrs. Gene) Motter, Shirley (Mrs. Randy) Johnston, Judy (Mrs. Don) Dunbar, Edna (Mrs. Bill) Green, Tommye Tankersley, Ann (Mrs. Russ) Estes, Marge (Mrs. Del) Woods, Corinne (Mrs. Toby) Carletonn and Hallie (Mrs. Dale) McCarter.

BACK FROM A TRIP to Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, for Expo '86 are Dell and George Davis. Joining them for the week's fun were former Midlander John Winham and his wife, Mary, of Dallas.

As was to be expected, the foursome encountered long lines for everything, but the inconvenience was offset by the interesting people they met, the cool temperatures and the cleanliness not only of the city but of the exposition itself. Dell reports that 15 million people were originally expected to attend the fair, but attendance had already reached the 10 million mark at the event's halfway point.

They enjoyed the delicious fresh sea food, staying in a Bed and Breakfast home and traveling by different modes of transportation, such as sea bus and sky train to get to various points in the city.

Departing Vancouver, the Texans went by ferry to Vancouver Island and lunched at Nanaino in an old lighthouse, which has been converted into a charming restaurant. They visited British Columbia's capital city of Victoria before beginning a four-hour ferry trip through the San Juan Islands. Arriving back in Washington, they spent one night each in Mount Vernon and Seattle. A ride to the top of the Space Needle was their final adventure before heading home.

SEVEN TRINITY SCHOOL students returned Saturday from a memorable three-week trip to the East Coast.

Trinity teacher Bill Fleischmann organizes a trip each summer for interested students to different places. This year's group was composed of Dedee Huff, daughter of Susan Huff; Christi Leonard, daughter of Cathy and Jim Leonard; Jennifer Scoggin, daughter of Sue and Larry Scoggin; Matthew Renick, son of Lynda and Pete Renick; Gonzalo Montaldo, son of Maria and Luis Montaldo; Clifton House, son of former Midlanders Susan and George House of Houston, and Kalyan Vindhya, son of Premalatha and Prem Vindhya of Odessa.

Andover, Mass., was home base for the Midland youngsters. Their host families all have students in Andover schools. It was a good opportunity for the East and West to meet and mix, as the two groups of young people traveled together and shared many interesting experiences.

Highlights of the trip included a five-day campout in Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire and a hiking trip to Cape Cod. The Midlanders particularly enjoyed such New England pastimes as lobster boils, clambakes and blueberry picking, as well as considerable time spent at the beach.

Other high points included a tour of Boston, a Red Sox game, and a stop at L.L. Bean in Maine. The students absorbed American history first-hand through visits to Washington, D.C.; Yorktown, Jamestown and Williamsburg, Va., Philadelphia and Valley Forge, Pa., and Plymouth and Lexington, Mass.

Experts offer pool safety tips

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

For many homeowners, the backyard pool is one of life's pleasures, a place to escape the summer heat without rubbing elbows with the rest of the human species or experiencing the sting of the jellyfish.

But there's another side to the backyard pool. A child wanders off and enters the water, or just tumbles in, without knowing how to swim. A life is lost, and parents are left to ask themselves a million times over: How could it happen?

With another pool season well under way, government and industry officials are urging the public to keep safety in mind.

Safety experts offer several tips, including these:

- Be vigilant about pool safety whether the family is in the pool or in the house. Many children who drown are in their street clothes.
- Instruct babysitters about the need for pool safety.
- Stretch a float line across the pool to indicate where the deep end starts.
- Make clear-cut rules to bar diving in shallow water and "playful screaming," which one day could mask a real emergency.
- Never use a pool with its pool cover partly in place.
- Keep toys away from the pool area because a young child playing with them could accidentally fall into the water.
- Learn cardiopulmonary resuscitation, and keep rescue equipment by the pool.
- Do not consider young children "drownproof" just because they've had swimming lessons.

Nationally, it is estimated that more than 200 children under 5 die in home-pool drownings each year.

"You think these things are never going to happen," said Andrea Nordquist of North Bellmore, N.Y. "Once you lose a child ... it's no longer a far-fetched thing."

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission is trying to measure better the scope of the problem. The agency began a study May 1, to be concluded by Sept. 30, delving into about 100 cases of death or emergency-room treatment in eight counties in three warm-weather states: California, Florida and Arizona.

To some degree, safeguards must be in a backyard pool by government mandate, but they differ depending on the code that applies, the interpretation given it and the level of enforcement.

The move toward stricter standards in one area of pool safety — pool enclosures — and the questions of interpretation that follow are illustrated by a change in the state code. The state amended its building code on enclosures for many new pool installations starting last Oct. 25, requiring that pools be enclosed entirely.

The reasoning was that, although fencing around the property may keep outsiders out, it does nothing to safeguard children in the house. The new minimum standard carries certain exceptions, such as above-ground pools in which the pool deck is at least 46 inches above the adjoining ground.

Consumers can check their local building department to see what code requirements exist and how enforcement agencies interpret them.

"There is no substitute for adequate supervision," the National Spa and Pool Institute says in its "Children Aren't Waterproof" booklet published this year. (The booklet is available without charge from the institute at 2111 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22314.)

A 44-pocket entertainment center by the Wet Set is approximately 78 inches by 60 inches and features separately inflated pillows which can be placed anywhere on the raft. It also has a 6-pack pocket in the center for refreshments.

Although these inflatable toys are a fun way to perk up the summertime blues, it is important to remember they are toys and should not be used as, or considered, life-saving devices.

"They are not life preservers. They have not been approved for that purpose," said Richard Young, manager of Doug Russell Pool.

"They give you a false feeling of safety. It makes it easy to get into water that is too deep because you feel safe, but they are too easy to fall off of," Young continued.

Inflatable toys are not allowed at the Doug Russell Pool. Young said that too many parents have the wrong idea about the toys. "They use them as baby sitters," Young said, adding that the only real safety precaution to prevent accidents with small children is the constant attention of a person in the water with the child. Life jackets are also helpful, he added.

So, if the summer has become a little blah and there is a need to pump-up deflating spirits, perk up the poolside with some fun inflatable toys.

Pool paraphernalia popular

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — In the beginning, pool toys were simple — a beach ball, a raft, a pair of flippers. But today, adornments for the pool seem to outnumber those for the home.

There are floating radios, motorized sailboats and diving dolphins. There are immersible telephones, bobbing bars with ice buckets, gliding flamingos and volleyball games. And, of course, inflatable board games (for chess, checkers and backgammon), floating ashtrays, ring tosses, pneumatic flying saucers, aquatic basketball nets and lily-pad candleholders.

There is even an inflatable, seaweed-green dragon that unfurls 23 feet from snout to tail.

Pool paraphernalia, chic and extravagant, is gaining popularity, according to retailers. This summer's heat and the decline of travel abroad have helped increase sales.

"People are looking for quality items, and they're willing to spend an extra couple of dollars to get something different, something that will last," said Susan Warshaw, vice president of Bel-Aqua Pool and Spas in New Rochelle, N.Y.

"Anything that's fun and new and novel is imminently salable," said Carole Bannett, manager of the Lee Bailey department at Henri Bendel on West 57th Street, cautioning, however, that "it must be sensible."

Capitalizing on the interest in fancy playthings are manufacturers like the Frenry Co. in Clearwater, Fla. In the last three years, designers there have elevated inflatable toys to a fine craft, if not an art.

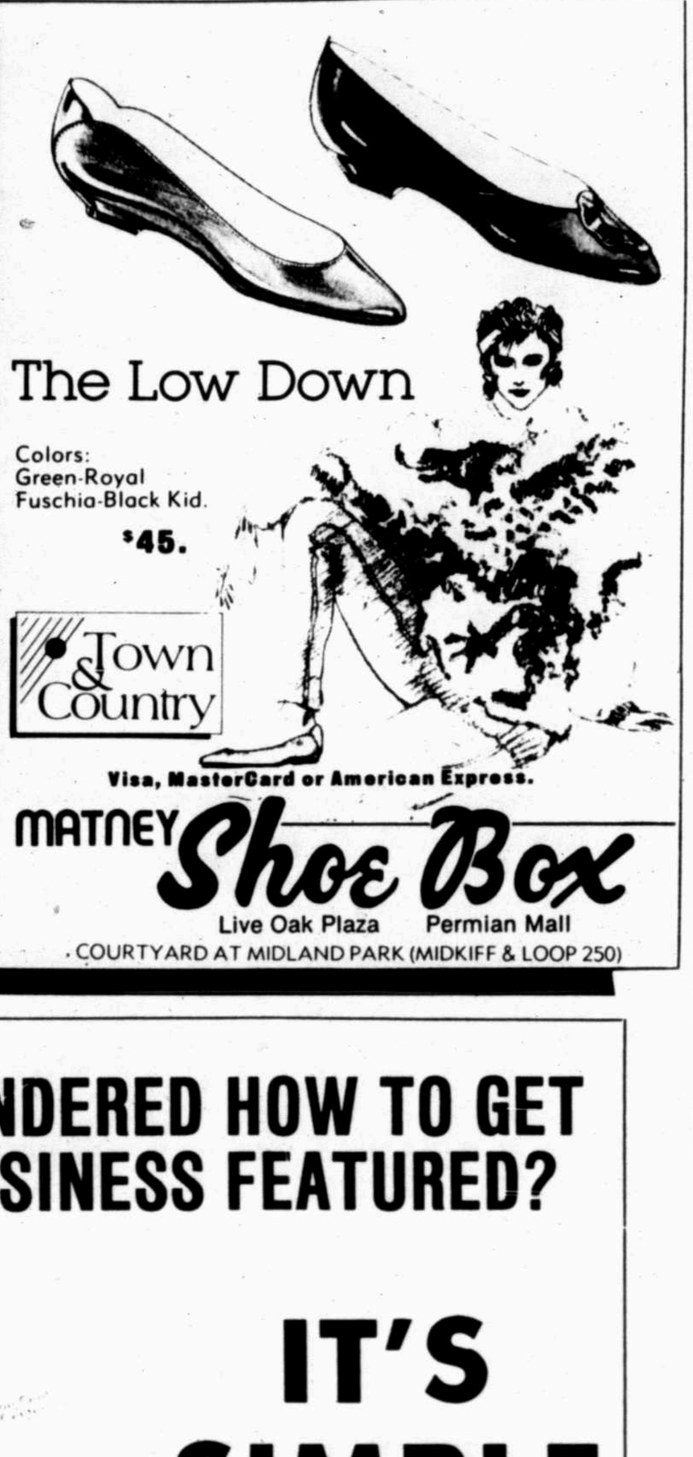

"Inflatables used to be bulbous, plain objects that made cheap, innocuous toys," said Fred A. Thomas, chief executive officer of Frenry, formerly called Gulf Coast Aqua Leisure Inc. "We have brought them to life."

"They make the pool area festive," said Sharon Cullity, manager of Penny Whistle Toys on Columbus Avenue. She waved toward a 23-foot dragon suspended from the store's ceiling and a gaggle of pool toys below, "They turn everyone into little kids."

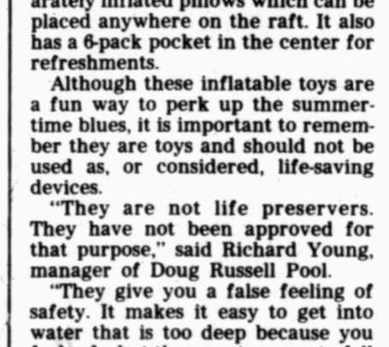

Toy octopuses help support man's family

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The crocheted octopuses Jerry Thacker makes are short on tentacles — only six — but they're long on personality. They have wiring designed to make their eyes and feet light up red.

Thacker says he hopes to get the toy into production and on the market to help support his wife and two children, whom all have muscular dystrophy.

Pools are heart of summertime

By PATRICIA LEIGH BROWN
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — On those turbulent days of summer when the bond market is as slippery as a wet inner tube, George Liss, a New Jersey investment banker, takes off down Route 202 toward the private New Jersey resort he and his wife, Jeanne, call home.

"What do we need a cave for?" Mrs. Liss had asked her husband when he first announced his intention to build a backyard pool that was "a re-creation of nature at her best."

"I'm in a high-pressure business," Mr. Liss explains. The Lisses' highly landscaped oasis, with trickling waterfall and sylvan grotto, "takes me away from being a nut," he says, meaning his job. "It's tranquil. When I come home, I like the feeling of returning back to basics."

Back to basics. Freeform and grottoed, or rectangular and turquoise, the swimming pool, along with freckled skin and water wrinkles, has become an American symbol and chlorine the elixir of summer.

For many Americans, particularly suburbanites, the backyard pool has taken the place of the family room in warm weather, becoming a focal point of leisure-time activity. "The pool has become a kind of summertime hearth," says John Stilgoe, a professor of visual and environmental studies at Harvard University.

In popular culture, pools have come to symbolize an uncertain future ("The Graduate"), newfound status ("The Beverly Hillbillies"), rejuvenation ("Cocoon") and, of course, boy-meets-girl. Neil Klugman, hero of Philip Roth's "Goodbye, Columbus," first meets the unforgettable Brenda Patimkin by the pool ("The first time I saw Brenda, she asked me to hold her glasses").

RESIDENTIAL SWIMMING pools were once strictly fantasy objects, exclusively for industrial tycoons and sequined legends of the silver screen. It wasn't until after 1940, when Gunite, a mixture of sand and cement air-sprayed through a nozzle, was developed, that backyard in-ground swimming pools became a reality for millions of Americans. Gunite reduced the cost of in-ground pools by as much as 75 percent.

Since then, the democratization of the swimming pool has continued, despite horror stories of cracked pools, losing battles against algae and the doomed wanderlust of hapless frogs.

Fly over many American communities these days, and John Cheever's classic image of a suburban landscape as a string of swimming pools, depicted in the 1964 New Yorker short story "The Swimmer," seems prescient. According to Joel W. Caesar, executive director of the northeast region of the National Spa and Pool Institute, a trade organization, there were 2,569,000 in-ground residential pools nationwide last year, an increase of a million pools since 1975. When above-ground pools are included, the number rises to 4½ million.

One reason for the growth is that "people, especially double-income households, are working more and traveling less," says Caesar.

Pools are sometimes prized as decorative objects. Like gazing at a hearth, some people prefer the hypnotic effect to actually swimming. "I don't swim at all," admits one Southampton pool owner, Gillis MacGil Addison. "I float on the mat trying hard to get the back of my legs tan."

In tony communities like Southampton, the idea of swimming pool as status symbol, Addison believes, is passe. "No one in Southampton entertains by the pool," she says. "It's just there. It's rather like having a food processor."

Addison installed her pool primarily as an investment, she said. "When I learned what they were asking for the month of July to rent a house with a pool, I said, 'I will happily install one.'"

BUT IN tony communities and not so tony ones, the pool's most important function is as a magnet for the family. "It really saves your life with children," says a southeastern Connecticut pool-owner, Buttons Goodrich, mother of three. She says this despite her 2-year-old son Jock Jr.'s predilection for throwing toys, rocks, chairs, pool brushes, shovels and a pot of geraniums into the pool.

At the Westchester home of Bill and Janet Jacobs, where freshly mowed grass clings stubbornly to wet feet, summer life centers on the pool. "There's no question it brings us together as a family," says Mrs. Jacobs. "Instead of going off in different directions, we're all here."

In their own backyards, pool-owners can control their environment. To Stilgoe, the rise of the backyard pool reflects "not so much keeping up with the Joneses" as "a privacy issue."

Of course, for many pool-owners, exercise is still the key reason for having one.

The aquatic film star, Esther Williams, the doyenne of pools, swims at least half a mile and exercises daily in her octagonal white-bottomed pool in Beverly Hills, Calif., often accompanied in the water by her silver schnauzer, Maximilian.

She also finds entertaining "delightful" by the pool.

Imagination and budget seem to be the only limitations. Williams said she went to a pool party given by the actor Burt Reynolds. As often happens at outdoor parties, it rained. "He vowed it would never happen again," she said. "Now, he presses a lever and the entire patio gets covered with a wonderful canopy."

Williams marvels that, "He will never have soggy pasta again."

Random sampling of toys offers slimy creatures

Hearst News Service

A random samping of toy and department store shelves revealed some of these offerings for children:

■ The Slime Pit, the "evil pit of gruesome ooze," part of the Masters of the Universe collection by Mattel, complete with green Slime.

■ The Evil Horde figures, also part of the Masters of the Universe line, including such characters as Hordak, the ruthless leader, and Leech, the "evil master of power suction." There's also Stinkor, "the evil master of odors."

■ Garbage Pail Kids, bubblegum cards made by Topps Chewing Gum Co., include a whole slew of raunchy characters: Picky Mickey (a.k.a. Beaky Becky), with the face of a boy and the body of a vulture, chewing on a skull; Well Done Sheldon, a cowboy figure impaled with arrows and tied to a stake with a fire licking his boot tops; Dwight Bite, an apple head with a big bite on the side, complete with green worm poking out; Juicy Jessica, being devoured by a green kid-eating plant, her blood dripping onto the skeleton of a previous victim.

The backs of some of the cards feature "wanted" pictures with a space for filling in names, such as "Wanted for Creating a Health Hazard: Slob (fill in a slob's name here). Also guilty of the following crimes: Attracting vermin from as far away as Afghanistan, impersonating a toxic dump site, coloring his clothing without using a dye."

■ Madballs by AmToy, billed as having "the ugliest faces ever found on a ball."

Importance of health care often overlooked

Associated Press

Many people overlook the importance of taking an active part in health care. Health experts advise communicating with your doctor as you would with any professional to whom you are paying for a service.

Ask your doctor to explain what is wrong with you in terms you can understand. Before undergoing any treatment, ask why it is important, if it is absolutely necessary and what the alternative is. Ask the doctor why he considers his suggested treatment the best.

MISTER ROGERS

Loving children 'equally' tricky

By FRED ROGERS
with BARRY HEAD

We heard a story from a friend, co-worker and fine teacher (who, like many fine teachers, often taught through stories), and it went like this: As a topic for his thesis, a student once chose The Universe. His professor read the thesis ... and failed the student for not sticking to the subject.

Deciding to write about Love may run the same risks, but a note from a correspondent set off a sudden train of thought that we felt compelled to try to catch in words. "It isn't possible," our correspondent wrote, "for parents to love their children equally, and they should not feel guilty when they come to that realization."

The problem, of course, is: What is love? We can't hope to answer that here, but perhaps these thoughts will help find answers of your own and put the problem of "equal love" in a slightly different light.

Love, whatever it is, is essential nourishment for human beings' healthy emotional growth. That nourishment has many ingredients. We couldn't list them all any more than we could list all the foods that give our bodies nourishment, but here are a few that might appear on such a list.

There's: liking; feeling affectionate toward; needing to feel dependent on; needing to feel in control of. We'd have to put friendship and companionship on the list, as well as attachment, physical attraction, passion and sexuality. Shared interests and contrasting interests can be important. Certainly respect and admiration.

Then there's loyalty and fidelity, and the darker ingredients such as possessiveness, jealousy, anger, grief, disappointment, yearning, emptiness, loss and the like.

And there are the brighter ones such as fullness, tenderness, patience, compassion, concern, sympathy, empathy. There's touching and being touched ... and on and on.

Whatever love is, it is never all of these ingredients all at once. It doesn't even have to include liking; for some people, loving their enemies has real meaning.

Love may comprise one, a few, many of its possible ingredients. The ingredients that constitute love change as we change, as those we love change, as times and circumstances change. The combination of different ingredients produces different feelings, and when put together, the different ingredients change one another (just as different combinations of foods produce different chemical reactions).

Given the countless combinations of ingredients and intensities, it is inevitable that we feel differently about any two people that we say we love. As our correspondent clearly knew, no parents ever feel the same way about any two of their children ... and no child ever felt the same way about both parents.

As children, most of us wrestled at one time or another with which parent we loved the most. We probably jumped to the conclusion that the parent we felt we needed more right then was the parent we loved the most, and that had to mean we loved the other less, and so we felt guilty.

As parents, we can feel once again those old pangs of guilt when we wonder whether we love one of our children more than another. But if today I have a need, even a craving, for the nourishment that apples can bring, does that mean I've lessened my "love" for oranges?

Love may be something like "infinity": You can't have more or less infinity, and you can't compare two things to see if they're "equally infinite." Infinity just is, and that's the way I think love is, too.

I certainly agree that it's natural for parents to feel differently about their children, and I don't believe that recognizing our different feelings need bring us guilt. But as for love, it's there or it isn't. That may be the most one can hope to say, and when it is there ... well, that's saying more than enough!

If you'd like to tell us something about life in your family, I'd be glad to hear from you. Write "Insights Into Childhood," c/o Family Communications, 4802 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15213.

Preplanning may prevent wedding bill blues

Copley News Service

Love may be free, but marriage isn't.

The question of who will pay for the wedding and how finances will be handled thereafter should be discussed long before the happy couple says "I do."

Tradition says the bride's parents usually shoulder most of the cost burden for a wedding. But times are changing, according to Bride's magazine. There's a definite trend toward sharing of wedding expenses, with the groom's family, as well as the bride and groom themselves, taking on a chunk of the financial responsibility.

One reason for this may be changing attitudes toward the nature of marriage. In this era of liberation, a bride's parents are no longer considered to be "marrying off" their daughter. Rather, the wedding is seen as the joining of two people and two families, with everyone contributing to the festivities.

A second reason is frankly economic; the cost of a formal wedding these days often runs high — usually exceeding $3,000. Rather than cut back on their idea of the perfect celebration, many couples and their families are instead finding new ways to meet the expense, especially where the bride and groom are on their own and earning money themselves.

The actual dividing up of the costs can be done in several ways. An easy, tactful method that Bride's recommends is to settle on specific expenses in advance rather than to just split the cost of the whole wedding down the middle. For instance, the groom's family might agree to cover the flowers, the music and the liquor. They would then discuss the general budget for these items with the couple and have the bills sent directly to them. This eliminates the need for money changing hands or for further talking about costs between families.

Another idea would be for one family to pay for the ceremony, the other to pick up the reception tab. Each family then has complete jurisdiction over its part of the celebration.

Before tying the knot, many couples choose to sign a marriage contract, stating what property will belong to whom in case of divorce. A marriage contract may not be very romantic, but it can settle in advance many of the property disputes that go hand in hand with divorce.

After the wedding vows are said, a budget can help couples achieve both short- and long-range financial goals.

A budget need not mean deprivation, says Today's Marriage magazine, it's simply a tool to help you do what you want to do ... step by step.

Identify your goals — whether it's a summer roaming through Europe or an investment program to fund a college education for your baby. What are your hopes for the future? Have you thought them through?

Where are you now? To draw up a budget, you need to do two things: first, determine your net worth — that's the figure you'll get by subtracting everything you owe from everything you own. Second, analyze your cash flow — the flow of money into your bank account and out again.

Consumer products of past exhibited

NEW YORK (AP) — A selection of important products and services that have had an impact on consumer attitudes, habits and well being for the last half century will go on display at the Cooper-Hewitt Museum, the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Design, next fall.

"Milestones: 50 Years of Goods and Services," will be exhibited from Sept. 23 through Jan. 4, 1987. Drawn from a list of 50 goods and services compiled by the editors of "Consumer Reports," it is organized to coincide with the 50th anniversary of Consumers Union.

The exhibition will explore the impact of a variety of products introduced in those years, from air conditioners to washing machines, credit cards, television, polio vaccine, running shoes, suburbia and compact cars. In some cases, actual objects will be augmented by related books, posters, photographs, premiums, packages, brochures and advertising ephemera.

Had A Wedding Lately?

After the wedding photographs were delivered:
"I don't know why we didn't go first class on the pictures, we shot the works on everything else. Now that all the bills have come in I realize that spending a little more for quality photographs would have been a drop in the bucket after all the other expense."

"I always figured that pictures are all the same. After seeing a friend's album (that Sam Hollis did) I can understand why one photographer can charge more than another. Wish I had paid more attention to quality and less to the bargain basement price."

The anniversary gathering, from 7-9 p.m. in First Baptist Church's new parlor, was hosted by the couple's children.

'Pouf' better than 'pop'

NEW YORK (AP) — If your champagne cork goes "pop" instead of "pouf," you're doing it all wrong. According to Bill Kroesing, president of Freixenet U.S.A., champagne and sparkling wine corks should not shoot out of the bottle with a resounding pop.

Here's how to do it correctly: after removing the foil and wire harness, slant the bottle at a 45-degree angle away from you and your guests. Grip the cork and slowly rotate the bottle. The cork should ease out with a discreet "pouf."

If there is any leftover bubbly, place the handle of a silver spoon down the neck of the bottle, then refrigerate it, Kroesing suggests. The spoon helps to retain the bubbles and freshness without an additional covering.

Reusable corks or bottle stoppers are also available.

THE SUBJECT IS ROSES

August important to roses

By JOY BUTTS

Those of us who try to help things grow in West Texas find no month of the year less inspiring than August. Yet, in reality, August is a month filled with promise.

For rosarians, this is the time to lay the foundation for that outstanding flush of bloom which can be so spectacular in September and October. August is a promise of blooms to make us forget what a struggle we've had getting through this long, hot summer.

Fall roses may be the most beautiful blooms of the year. The bushes have reached a good size, and healthy new growth is common. As temperatures become cooler, rosebushes respond with relief, just as humans do.

IT'S A good practice to leave as much foliage as possible when cutting away spent blooms this summer, especially on your newest rosebushes. Leaves are the manufacturing factory of your rosebush and during the extreme heat the bushes need all the foliage they can grow just to get through.

Mid-August is the second time during the year that pruning of rosebushes is in order. Be advised that the pruning done in August is nothing like what you did last February or March to bring the roses out of dormancy. August pruning is directed strictly toward "cleaning up" the bush, and encouraging stronger growth. Promise: rose blooms will be better in the fall.

Remove any dead wood from the bush, cutting back to a good cane, or to the bud union when necessary. When a cane had a hole down its center it is evidence that a borer is present. Cut back such canes, about two inches at a time, until the hole is no longer there.

SEAL ALL cut canes the size of a pencil or larger with Elmer's glue or some other sealer, not petroleum-based. (Before any oil-related readers decide we are biased, take note: petroleum-based sealants tend to cause rose canes to die back further than necessary.)

Clean out the center of the bush by removing all growth crossing or headed toward the middle of the bush. This will promote good air circulation which is so necessary for a healthy rosebush. Remove any twiggy, unproductive growth, keeping all larger canes and heaviest lateral canes.

For Hybrid Tea and Grandiflora bushes, trim major canes far enough down to be cutting to a stem pencil-size, or larger if possible. Make the cuts sharp, spaced about ¼-inch above a bud eye at the base of a leaf axil pointing toward the outside of the bush.

Keep in mind when cutting: a new cane cannot be any larger than the cane from which it grows; most times it will be smaller. It may not always be possible to follow the rules on your new rosebushes, but, whenever it can be done, cut back to a cane which will support new growth strong enough to hold up a nice, big bloom. Promise: blooms will be larger in the fall.

ON FLORIBUNDA roses, proceed as with the other roses, except the canes of these bushes may not grow as heavy on some varieties. Keep all the laterals where you can promote new growth which can support a nice spray — cluster of blooms.

Evaluate your Floribunda bush. You may see a large number of multi-branched growths toward the tops of the canes — candelabaras. It is frequently beneficial to cut to the first leaf below a candelabara, removing the entire head.

Another method is to remove the very center part of the growth, then cut back the remaining two or three heavier canes to a leaf near where the branching began. Hybrid Teas and Grandifloras may have candelabra-type growth, also, and may be trimmed the same way. Promise: there will be more blooms in the fall.

CLIMBING ROSES may be cleaned up too, but should not be drastically trimmed. Remove dead wood any time. Unproductive twiggy growth can be trimmed off, but cut the bush only to keep it in bounds.

In addition to summer pruning, mid-August is the time to put down your balanced fertilizer again, unless that was done in July. Keep your feed program going, spacing the applications about three weeks apart for water-soluble food, planning the last feeding for mid-September. All fertilizing should stop in September so new growth can harden-off before winter arrives. Otherwise, there will be damaged canes.

August is a good month in which to give your roses a summer "tonic." Many rosarians brew a batch of "cow tea" by placing cow manure in a large container and adding water, allowing to sit for about a week. Then, pour one gallon of the liquid around each rosebush. Repeat once in two weeks.

An even cleaner product which can be used beneficially following the same method is alfalfa pellets. Basically concocted the same, apply one gallon per rosebush and repeat once more in two weeks. Promise: rose colors will be deeper in the fall.

IT IS not unusual for mildew to begin to show up on the rose foliage around the first of September. Plan to start spraying with Ortho Funginex or Orthonex about then, repeating every two weeks through October. Other mildew products may be used, of course.

Do your beds still have mulch at least two inches deep? If not, it is time now to add to what mulch you have, increasing to about three inches deep.

By following the practice of summer pruning, along with a good feeding and spraying program, you can expect your roses to reward you by fulfilling their promises: more, bigger and better blooms with much deeper colors in September and October. You'll love your fall roses.

DEAR ROSIE has awarded the last of this year's free rosebushes for responses to the July column. The male reader winning Sheer Bliss was Dave Means. The current Midland Rose Society member winning Summer Dream was Patsy Berry, MRS treasurer.

Congratulations to all winners and thanks to every one of you who wrote in. Special thanks to the male readers who were more responsive than anyone. For any questions or comments, write P.O. Box 5464, Midland 79704.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

'Taking it easy' different for individual retirees

By STEVE A. EDWARDS

Edwards

I was surprised recently when a friend grumbled about "taking it easy." His comment was that it was often difficult and did not just happen.

Upon reflection, I tend to agree with the thought that "taking it easy" does not just happen. Like work or play, it requires a certain temperament and attitude. Obviously, it can be extremely different for different people. As an example, a person who enjoys puttering around all the time may believe he is taking it easy. The truth of matter, though, is that he is a very busy person, constantly doing little things while looking for more to do. In other words, he is involved and considers that "taking it easy."

Along the same line, there is the person who believes that "taking it easy" involves doing those things in which he has been interested all his life and just has not had the time for before. "Taking it easy" is exploring these new avenues.

When all the facts are in, the vast majority of people, including the professionals, agree that the happiest and most contented retirees are those who keep busy in one way or another.

There is nothing wrong with wanting to spend your spare time on hobbies, part-time employment, volunteer service opportunities or even challenging your mind or skills by going back to school. It's a good opportunity to explore some of those areas of life that you have often wanted to pursue. Any activity that makes you feel needed and worthwhile and stimulates you on a day-to-day basis is an activity that will make retirement meaningful, fun and rewarding.

Much has been written on boredom and the feeling of uselessness. The conclusion of most research projects dealing with this subject has been that when people have nothing to which they can look forward and no activity that can become a part of their everyday living, then the feelings of uselessness and boredom begin to become evident. These feelings, if allowed to fester and grow, can create physical conditions that lead to poor health. Researchers in this field have noted that the busiest people, those with a broad range of activities on a periodic basis, are usually the healthiest.

Your attitude, then, not only determines whether or not you will put into motion life-long dreams or aspirations, but it also can create a healthy emotional change thereby making life much more fulfilling and enjoyable.

If you truly believe you can retire and take it easy by doing nothing, then that's great. If it is a part of that dream carried through many working years, then give it a try. Be open-minded about new and different ideas.

Remember though, there is no disgrace in admitting failure. If something with which you are involved doesn't work out or if you cannot cope with doing nothing, then admit it to yourself and go out and find an activity that will inspire you and keep you healthy. There are so many possibilities you can explore. Just be patient, persistent and open about trying new ideas.

The following thoughts should be added to your list of basic concepts necessary for successful retirement:

■ Successful retirees are not afraid to compromise. When compromise is necessary, they do it graciously. They are not afraid to change their point of view.

■ Successful retirees maintain a neat appearance. Pride in how they look is a common trait among happy and successful retirees. This includes not only their personal appearance but also the environment around them.

■ Successful retirees have learned how to relax and play. At this point in their lives, they have learned to take life not too seriously. Whether involved in activities or resting, they have learned how to relax.

■ Successful retirees have learned how to adapt to changing lifestyles. This is the strongest asset of successfully retired individuals. They are not so set in their ways or inundated with fear that they cannot change.

■ Successful retirees are able to love. Being able to give love is giving of yourself. Knowing how to accept love is being able to understand other people. The giving and accepting of love is an act of maturity, yet one of the saddest commentaries of our time is that so few people know how to handle this emotion.

Life at any age is not meant to be merely a "passing of time." There is within everyone the desire to be useful and to have a purpose. If life is stagnant or empty, the fault lies with the person who fails to reach out to continually add new meaning to his or her life.

DEAR ABBY

Organization helps sufferers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 69-year-old grandmother living in Spartanburg, S.C. That's not important, but this is: Because of something I read in your column three years ago, I found the answer to a problem that had very nearly made me a recluse. It was the kind of problem I was too embarrassed about to even discuss.

Because you solved my problem with a single letter in your column, I beg you to free others and repeat the letter that did so much for me. It's enclosed. — THANKFUL IN S.C.

DEAR THANKFUL: I'm thankful to you for reminding me that there are many readers out there who need this information as much as you did. And here's the letter:

DEAR READERS: If you don't have a bladder control problem, you're lucky. But if you are among the estimated 10 million Americans (or Canadians) who are incontinent to an annoying degree — or know someone who is — read on:

When you sneeze, cough or laugh, do you feel a wetness on your clothing?

When you come home, do you find that you can't get your key in the door fast enough to make it to the bathroom in time?

What can a man wear after a prostate operation for the days (or weeks) he has a little "dribbling"?

These are the kinds of questions and concerns that have brought a few men and women together to form a self-help group for people with urinary or bladder control problems. They named their new organization HIP — Help for Incontinent People.

For a copy of the organization's helpful newsletter, send a long, stamped (22 cents), self-addressed envelope to: HIP, Box 544, Union, S.C. 29379. The newsletters are published four times a year. They are free, but because this is a non-profit group, contributions are welcome.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this in your column and title it, "A Summer Warning":

Last year, my good husband suggested that we rent a summer place at the shore where we could go to get away from the hustle and bustle of the city. Nice, right?

Wrong! He moved me and the children out there, promising to come down every Friday to spend the weekend with us.

Well, I found myself at the shore, but my husband never came to be with us. Every weekend he had a different excuse. His car was acting up. He was too tired to make the drive. He had some business meetings he couldn't miss. Someone he knew had died and he had to go to the funeral. He had to visit a sick friend in the hospital, and on and on.

"Poor baby," I thought. Surprise, surprise! He had put me in a safe place, leaving him free to run around all summer. When I came home I found out that he had taken up with some floozie who I suspect he's still seeing. He pleaded not guilty, but I had all the evidence I needed.

No more R and R at the shore for me. If he can stand the summers in the city, so can I! — SWEATING IT OUT IN THE BRONX

ASK DR. RUTH

Husband flunks 'course'

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Westheimer

Q. I guess knowledge isn't enough to make a guy make love right.

My husband has read the books and knows women need longer arousal than men, but he just won't do the foreplay. He says a tube of K-Y does the job just as well.

Although I do have orgasms (when I initiate sex), the whole thing with him is getting boring.

A. A tube of K-Y Jelly is a good thing to have in the house, but it will not whisper loving things in the woman's ear, turn on the favorite radio station, bring home the flowers and bottle of wine or kiss and caress her, nor does the manufacturer pretend it will.

One of the mistakes men make is thinking that when a woman is lubricated she is sure to be ready for the main event.

The only reasonably reliable way to know that she is ready is to get some signal from her to that effect. If she is a trustworthy lover, she will not fake that.

Your husband may have read the books, but not with care or understanding. He flunks the course.

If he won't go to a therapist with you, your best bet is to initiate more often, since you are most aroused then. And point out to him that sex is more pleasurable to him as well as to you when you are ready for it.

Q. I really care about this girl. It isn't just sex, though that's terrific. But I haven't told her I am having sex with a guy as well because when people find out I have sex with other guys, they drop me.

The guy knows about her, but he doesn't mind. Should I tell her?

A. You absolutely have to tell her, because when she decided to go to bed with you, she decided to trust you, to believe you were a safe person to have sex with.

She did not bargain for risking infection from this other guy.

You may trust the other guy, you may be willing to believe that he is faithful to you and not risking AIDS by having sex with other men, but you have no right to make that decision for her.

This would be as true if she were another male, incidentally.

In the present health crisis, you have to tell the truth to all partners about your sexual activity, past and current.

Letter difficult

NEW YORK (AP) — Everyone has tough letters to write during his lifetime — apologies, thank you's and condolences. But the hardest by far is the letter asking for money.

To do so can be a very difficult experience because it compromises the asker's pride, according to Family Circle magazine. And, believe it or not, it is almost as painful to be asked.

Here are some rules for a good loan-request letter that can ease the pain at both ends.

- Even though it's personal, make it business like.
- Include a plan for repayment.
- Offer to pay interest.
- Pick your prospect carefully.

CARLSBAD CAVERNS

Water flowing, seeping and dripping over eons created Carlsbad Cavern with agonizing slowness. It took more than 60 million years for the huge underground rooms and their beautiful stone decorations to gradually form.

In less than a century, however, the cavern has gone from being the unknown home of rustling bats to the world-famous park filled with bustling tourists.

In just the last dozen years, the cave's trails have been repaved, improved and even completely wired with special underground radio equipment.

The Indians, of course, knew of the great cave, but there's little evidence that they ventured much beyond the entrance. Cowboys probably first stumbled across the cave in the 1870s or 1880s, but it wasn't until the early 1900s that people began regularly trooping into the cavern.

These early visitors went into the cave were not seeking the hidden beauty of its formations; they were after money. Cash, in this case, came in the unlikely form of bat droppings. Bat manure — called "guano" — makes a very rich nitrate fertilizer.

IN 1903, an Abijah Long filed for the mineral rights on the cave and guano mining began shortly thereafter. Over the next 20 years, more than 100,000 tons of guano were hauled out of the cavern in big mining buckets riding on cables.

Pioneering "tourists," such as geologists and photographers, had to enter the cave by riding 170 feet down standing in one of those buckets.

It wasn't until the mid-1920s that the first trails and wooden staircases were constructed into the cave. The cavern was declared a national monument in 1923 and was upgraded to national park status in 1930.

For decades, visitors were taken through the cavern in group tours led by a park ranger. However, the number of people wanting to tour the cave increased to the point that daily guided tours became too unwieldy.

In 1973, a new system was set up using a low-powered radio transmitter to help individuals conduct their own self-guided tours of the cave. This dramatically changed the way people view Carlsbad Caverns.

NOW INDIVIDUALS can either march through the cavern at a brisk pace to cover the entire long tour in under an 1½ hours or loiter along leisurely spending the entire day examining the cave's formations.

As tourists leave the visitor center near the cavern entrance, they are issued a small radio — it looks exactly like a telephone handset minus a mouthpiece — with a strap attached to it so that it can be worn around the neck.

A transmitter in the center constantly sends 40 different recorded messages describing various cave features through coaxial cables to loop antennas buried underneath the trails.

There are signs along the path marking all the "listening zones" — the spots where you're standing within one of the loop antennas — when you can start listening to the recordings. When you lift the radio to your ear, it turns on automatically.

Often you'll pick up the radio in mid-recording, but the broadcasts repeat continuously so that if you wait a minute or two you'll be able to catch the whole thing from the beginning again.

The receiver can be tuned to pick up a normal narrative in English for adults, a simplified child's explanation in English or a Spanish-language translation for adults.

Please see CAVE, Page 2F

CAVE

This system is not without its flaws. The little radios are often handled roughly and have become rather temperamental, sometimes fading in and out along the course of the tour. Plans are being made to replace the 12-year-old receivers with new smaller, lighter ones, according to Bob Peters, staff park ranger.

Rangers are still positioned at strategic points along the route to answer visitors' specific questions. Just this summer, new backlighted signs have also been erected alongside the trail to provide further information.

There is one stretch of trail — through the underground room called the "King's Palace" — that doesn't have any radio recordings. In theory, this is to allow you to contemplate the natural sounds of the cavern — dripping water, mainly — without interruption. In fact, you end up primarily hearing the sounds of other tourists conversing.

The cavern is certainly a unique spot for people-watching. On one recent day the visitors ranged from a group of yuppies surreptitiously sipping pina coladas from a canteen (a bad idea considering the numerous opportunities the cave provides an inebriated person to hurt himself) to a middle-aged woman who kept reciting lines from J.R.R. Tolkien's fantasy novel "The Hobbit" throughout her tour.

Imaginations can vary a lot, too. Two girls had a terrible time getting their mother to visualize the elephant shape in a formation called the "Bashful Elephant."

"Look Mom, can't you see it?" the little girl said.

"No ..." replied the squinting mother.

"Right there!" the girl and her teen sister chimed in together, pointing with a slight air of exasperation.

Most of the more prominent formations and rooms have picturesque names. As one ranger observed, "More people want to see the 'Bottomless Pit' rather than the '140-Foot Pit.'"

The trails meandering through all these subterranean wonders are divided into two parts, each of which have recently been given color-coded names. The "Blue" tour begins at the cave's natural entrance and winds steeply downward for 1¾ miles. The walk, reaching 830 feet beneath the surface at its lowest point, takes an average of one hour and 45 minutes.

The trail passes by one of the oddest places in the entire cavern — the Underground Lunchroom. This well-lit area of restrooms, picnic tables, food vendors and souvenir and film sales stands looks a bit like a shopping mall in a World War III nuclear fallout shelter.

The lunchroom's motto is "Eat Lunch 750 Feet Underground!" The novelty is, frankly, better than the cuisine. The food — fried chicken, ham and cheese sandwiches and some snack items — is just passable.

"The food was pretty bad, but that was beside the point at the time," one veteran underground diner said, "I was eating way underground!"

The "Blue" tour then joins the "Red" route, which essentially loops around the famed "Big Room." The "Big Room" covers 14 acres and has a ceiling that's more than 200 feet above most of the trail. This part of the trail is 1¼ miles long and takes an average of an hour to walk.

The entire "Blue" tour is undoubtedly the best way to see the cavern, but the long walk and steep incline may be too much for some older individuals, persons with breathing difficulties, mobility problems or small children.

People on the "Red" tour bypass these difficulties by taking an elevator down 750 feet and then entering the "Big Room." The trail around the "Big Room" is fairly level and much of it can be negotiated by people in wheelchairs.

Shoes are important in Carlsbad Cavern, especially on the long hike from the entrance. Not only are the walks fairly long, but there are also some steep inclines and slickly damp spots. Sneakers or some other comfortable walking shoes with rubber soles and heels are recommended by the park service. Floppy sandals are not recommended and high heels would be downright dangerous.

Entrance fees to the cave are $3 for adults, $2 for ages 6-15 and free for those under age 6.

Park's New Cave 'rough-and-ready'

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Editor

Over the years, Carlsbad Cavern has become thoroughly domesticated. Elevators whisk tourists up and down, the trails are paved, electrical lights illuminate every nook and cranny the public can see and it has even been wired for radio broadcasting.

However, there are actually more than 70 other caves in Carlsbad Caverns National Park, and one open to the public, New Cave, is a rough-and-ready country cousin compared to its uptown neighbor.

Because New Cave is unpaved and unelectrified, tours through it are at least a little closer to the journeys that true cave explorers — spelunkers — make into wild caverns.

New Cave, despite its name, is not all that new. It was discovered in 1937 by Tom Tucker, a goat herder who found the entrance after some of his goats had wandered into it. Guano mining took place in the cave intermittently through the 1950s.

The cave remains largely undeveloped, at least in part because of its isolated location. The cave is located in Slaughter Canyon 23 miles from the park's Visitors Center. Much of the drive to the cave is over unpaved, rocky county roads.

Once in the cave's dirt parking lot, a visitor still has to make a strenuous ½ mile uphill hike. The trail rises 500 feet in its short length and is a tough enough climb that the park service recommends persons allow 30-45 minutes to make the walk.

In fact, the park's New Cave leaflet sternly warns that the climb "should be attempted only by those in good physical condition. For safety reasons, stay on the trail at all times. This trip is not recommended for children under six years of age."

PARTICIPANTS HAVE to wear hiking boots or good walking shoes, bring one flashlight per person (the stronger the better) and carry their own drinking water.

The tours are guided by a pair of rangers toting lanterns. Once past the part of the cave hard hit by guano mining, a number of fascinating things appear out of the darkness. The cave even has ancient Indian pictographs painted on the wall of one side passage.

A less mysterious wall marking was made more recently when the cave was used for the 1950 movie version of "King Solomon's Mines."

The entire film crew packed up from location shooting in Africa, moved to New Mexico, disassembled its equipment, carried the parts up the steep hill into the cave, then reassembled them inside the cave. For all this effort, less than 15 seconds of cave footage appeared in the finished film.

During shooting, star Deborah Kerr took a tube of lipstick and autographed one of the formations. Years later, when rangers discovered her signature, they attempted to wipe it off, but it only smeared. The pink smudge still remains.

The crew also dumped some light bulbs into a small pit beneath a dripping stalagtite. Again, it took years before rangers found the discards and by then the bulbs were solidly coated by minerals. It was decided to leave them rather than chip away at the formation.

THE TRIP through New Cave is much more of an adventure than touring Carlsbad Cavern. Much of the walk is steep, the ground is unlevel and there's even one point at which trekkers have to use a rope to help pull themselves up a slick slope.

Almost a fifth of the people on a recent tour fell down at one point or another, virtually all of them got dirt or old bat guano on them and everyone seemed to love every minute of it.

Federal budget-cutting has left the future of the New Cave tours a bit hazy, however, according to park rangers.

The tours are expensive to the park on a per-visitor basis because they are limited in size and require extra manpower, said Bob Peters, staff park ranger.

Money had to be taken from the national parks maintenance funds to keep the tours going this summer.

"If we take additional cuts this year, it likely will affect the New Cave tours," Peters said.

Meanwhile, daily tours are still scheduled through Aug. 17. During the fall, the tours will only be conducted on the weekends.

The fee is $4 for adults and $3 for children younger than 16. Since you pay at the cave entrance, high on a rugged hillside and far from a cash register, bring the correct change.

The groups are limited to 25 people each and reservations are required to participate. The tour is popular enough that one should make reservations as early as possible.

Weekend tours and larger groups generally require reservations earlier than a weekday tour or a single person. If the tour is booked up when you call, check back again later; some people could cancel and a spot could open.

To make reservations or get more information on the New Cave tours, call (505) 785-2232.

National Park Service faces financial changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Across America, the staffs of the 48 parks and 289 other monuments, battlefields, seashores, historic sites and other places run by the National Park Service are girding to accommodate a $26 million, 4.3 percent budget cut.

William Penn Mott Jr., the Park Service director, says his superintendents and rangers have taken pains to minimize the impact on tourists of the cuts.

He says park visitors "will notice few visible signs of budgetary reductions," but his agency has compiled a two-inch-thick binder for Congress cataloging the ways the parks are scrambling to absorb the budget cuts without disrupting services.

The parks will seek to minimize the impact of the budget cuts by postponing maintenance, buying less equipment and hiring less summer help instead of shutting campgrounds or leaving beaches unguarded.

But the task is made more difficult by the fact that a banner year is expected for America's parks and scenic attractions, spurred by cheaper gasoline, fears of traveling abroad and declining mortgage rates that have boosted families' disposable incomes.

Reservations are up sharply at hotels and campgrounds in the system's crown jewels — Yellowstone, Yosemite, Grand Canyon and other world-famous parks. Indeed, the park service is also expecting a big influx of foreign tourists, lured by the cheaper dollar.

The Park Service has no plans to close the Washington Monument, but it is asking Congress for permission to charge visitors a $1.50 entrance fee as part of an overall strategy to raise fees or start charging admission at most national parks. No action is imminent.

Denis Galvin, the service's deputy director for budget, said higher fees — such as the proposed $10 per car at Yosemite and Yellowstone instead of the current $3 and $2 respectively — would allow restoration in fiscal 1987 of the funds now lost.

At Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming, the Park Service will put off a re-roofing project, cut back on road maintenance, paint fewer center stripes and economize in other ways.

Ben Clary, assistant superintendent of Yellowstone, said postponing maintenance can prove costly. If the roads get too worn, "instead of just overlaying them, you get into major rehabilitation work."

At Grand Canyon National Park, rangers and rescue workers plan to spend 25 percent less time in the air in a helicopter. They also are considering getting rid of the dozen government mules who carry supplies up the gorges and relying instead on a commercial muler.

In Brooklyn, N.Y., the service is mothballing a greenhouse at Floyd Bennett Field and cutting its support for ethnic festivals at the field, headquarters for the Gateway National Recreation Area.

It is trimming $25,000 from the $585,000 it pays the National Symphony Orchestra for summer concerts outside the U.S. Capitol. The Kennedy Center is losing $205,000, which will force it to hold off replacing the marble on its terrace and refinishing bronze doors and handrails.

The grass in Rock Creek Park in Washington will be mowed every 20 days instead of 15.

At the Golden Gate National Recreation Area in San Francisco, local officials suggested closing on Monday the Cliff House with its panoramic view of the Pacific, and scrapping an overnight program for youth volunteers on Alcatraz island. Headquarters wants both cuts rescinded.

At Bandelier National Monument in New Mexico, which houses the ruins of the cliff houses of the 15th century Pueblo Indians, officials suggested cutting out a fire truck for half the season. That, too, was overruled.

Nearby New Mexico attractions visited

Carlsbad Caverns National Park isn't the only attraction in nearby southeastern New Mexico worth visiting; others include:

■ Guadalupe Mountains National Park. This mountainous area is almost as attractive as Big Bend's Chisos Mountains, but less developed and much less crowded. It's 55 miles southwest of Carlsbad, N.M.

■ Living Desert Zoological and Botanical State Park. This park perched on the hills overlooking Carlsbad features paths winding past exhibits of the animals and plants of the Chihuahuan Desert.

'Bat Flight Breakfast' planned

Carlsbad Caverns National Park will host its "Annual Bat Flight Breakfast" 5-7 a.m. Thursday. Participants can eat breakfast and watch the cavern's bat population dive back into the cave after their nightly feeding. Fee is $4.50 a person. For more information call (505) 785-2232.

Parks pose problems

Associated Press

To preserve uninhabited wilderness areas in their natural condition or not to preserve them is a relatively new question facing the National Park Service. According to a University of Michigan environmental law expert, related questions include:

■ Should people be forced to give up their homes so that their lands can be converted to national park space?

■ What happens when the rights of a community conflict with the "greater public good"?

"Traditionally, the Park Service has sought to preserve parts of the public domain that were essentially uninhabited wilderness," notes Prof. Joseph Sax, who is the Philip A. Hart Distinguished University Professor of Law at U-M.

"Only in recent years have new units of the national park system been established in places where there are human settlements."

The strategy in such areas has been to remove commercial activities, leaving existing residential areas temporarily intact — with some owners selling out immediately and others remaining for up to several decades under use-and-occupancy agreements, Sax explains.

To the Park Service, the policy seemed reasonable and humane, he says.

First, one of our deluxe guest rooms is just $49 a night and you can sleep up to four in a room. Next, we'll give you coupons that let you buy two days at Six Flags for the price of one and save you money on admissions to Wet 'n Wild and International Wildlife Park. Plus, until Labor Day, our $49 rate is good seven days a week, not just on weekends. But there's more.
KIDS EAT FREE! That's right. When accompanied by a paying adult, kids 10 and under eat breakfast, lunch and dinner free in Papayas' restaurant. And, we've got lots more surprises in store for the entire family. There's a free movie shown every night in our Adventure Theater, and on weekends special appearances by guest "clown" Andy Amfac. We've got a video arcade, swimming pool and daily drawing for free tickets to Six Flags. For an additional charge, guests will find a complete health spa for workouts and the Bear Creek Golf & Racquet Center with two, 18-hole championship courses, seven tennis courts and ten racquetball courts.
So, stay with us in Dallas/Fort Worth this summer and turn your family vacation into a family adventure. For reservations or further information, call toll free, 1-800-527-2823.

Bertha Tune read the minutes and Ruth Steward gave the treasury report. Pauline Skotz gave a committee report urging members to bring articles for battered women and children. Lillian Letchwar introduced Ms. Thorton, activity director of Terrace Gardens nursing home, who spoke of the need for volunteers.

Birthdays were announced. Mary Key led in singing "Happy Birthday." Maurine Hickman asked Opal Walters and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stubbefield to do kitchen help.

AT WIT'S END

New look hair-raising

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Someone should have told me that when my sons were born bald with rosy, scrubbed cheeks, I should have quit while I was winning.

But no, I had to make such a big deal about growing hair. Whenever they grew a few strands on their head, I combed it, fluffed it up, rearranged it and said, "My, what big boys you are!"

Eventually, it fell in their eyes, grew over their ears and in the '60s cascaded down their backs and got stuck in the sofa cushions. Naturally I was upset. I did not go through 36 hours of labor with each one to have them look like Doris Day and Sandra Dee respectively. For a period of 10 years it was the only form of communication we had. I'd say, "Get a haircut, weirdo," and they would slam the door.

When short hair came in, I thought my prayers had been answered when I noticed a shadow over their lip and some wiry, zinging hairs coming out of their chin. Eventually, they looked like what came out during a full moon. I have never seen so much disgusting hair on a face in my life. When they came home from college on spring breaks, my husband and I used to watch them as they slept with tears in our eyes. They looked like Abraham Lincoln on a penny.

In a few years, the beards eventually disappeared and life settled down to normal.

A few months ago, one of them came home and after a few days I said, "Aren't you going to shave?"

He said, "I did, just a few hours ago."

The "new look" is what is being worn by Don Johnson on "Miami Vice," Harrison Ford and Bruce Weitz on "Hill Street Blues." Before that it was worn by winos and travelers whose luggage had been lost for three weeks. It isn't a beard, it's a stubble of hairs that stick straight out all over the face like a porcupine in heat.

It goes with the sexual revolution. To look sexy these days, men have that I-just-rolled-out-of-the-sack-look. Bare feet, wrinkled trousers, no belt, tousled hair while they chew on a toothbrush. We're talking visuals here.

We used to call it 5 o'clock shadow and hairy men fought it like a disease. They shopped for razors that would give them such a close shave, it removed the first layer of skin just to have a woman run her hand over their face and coo, "Now, that's more like it."

Now a stubble is a sign of manliness... a suggestion that you didn't sleep in your own bed the night before and you may not sleep in it tonight.

I can't wait till they grow bald again.

Tour planned

WILTON, Conn. (AP) — An opportunity to view the People's Republic of China through a camera lens will be offered during a 15-day trip through China this fall.

Leader of the Oct. 4-19 tour, sponsored by Glimcher Tours of Wilton, will be Sumner Jules Glimcher, who has previously led photographic tours to Japan.

Glimcher, photographer, filmmaker and author, has taught film at Columbia University and Harvard.

The tour will begin at the Great Wall and exceptionally photogenic locations will be covered in Beijing, Xian, Suzhou, Shanghai and Canton.

An eight-day extension to this tour, which will end in Hong Kong, will also be available.

Respondents find frequent-traveler rules confusing

NEW YORK (AP) — More than half of the respondents in a poll made for Sheraton Club International were confused by frequent traveler bonus programs rules. The 200 travel program members surveyed belonged to an average of three frequent traveler programs each.

The survey showed that 91 percent of those polled were satisfied with existing programs, 59 percent felt they were difficult to keep track of and 42 percent said most program awards couldn't be used when desired because of restrictions.

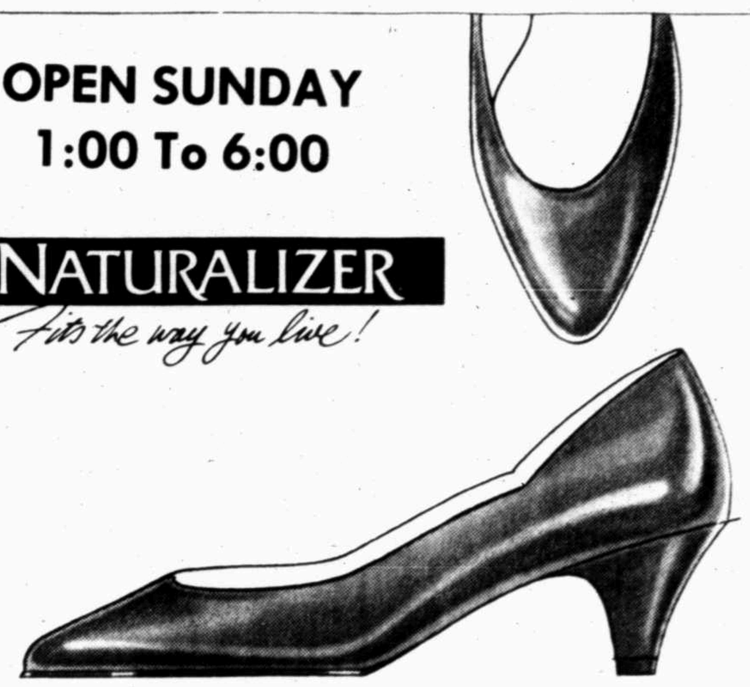

Bat species studied

Copley News Service

Flying foxes form a group that represents about 200 of the nearly 1,000 species of bats. Recent studies indicate that flying foxes, their wingspans ranging up to 6 feet, may actually be primates.

Ranson named Miss June Teen

Carla Lynn Ranson, 16, daughter of Doris and Jerry Ranson of Midland, will compete in the June 1987 Miss June Teen Texas State Pageant in Dallas.

She was crowned Midland's Miss June Teen 1986 recently. Miss Ranson, a junior at Lee High School, received a $500 savings bond toward her college education, as well as other prizes.

She will promote June Teen Texas Scholarship Pageant through commercials, special appearances and statewide recruiting for the state pageant.

Other winners in the local pageant were Khristie Davis, pageant talent; Camillia Williams, pageant cover girl; and Anjanette Comer of Odessa, beauty and modeling runner-up.

Guest performer was Liza Gonzales of Lamesa. Pageant choreographer was Shurah Smith of Midland. The pageant was sponsored by June Teen Texas Scholarship Pageant Systems Inc.

Freshman sign up for excursions

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Freshmen at Dartmouth College have the option of spending their first three days of college in the out-of-doors by taking part in excursions into the hills of nearby Vermont, along the Connecticut River or into the White Mountains.

More than 800 of the first-year students — some 80 percent of the entering class — have signed up for the trips, which include hiking, biking, fishing or canoeing and wind up with a fireside gathering at a rustic lodge high on Mount Moosilauke.

In 10-person groups, the freshmen are led on the trips by experienced outdoorsmen, many drawn from the ranks of Darmouth alumni, staff and faculty.

These excursions will run Sept. 4-14.

SADD idea helps teens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rate of teenage traffic deaths due to drunk driving in the United States has dropped sharply in the past four years. Although nobody can say definitely, chances are that drop was influenced by Students Against Driving Drunk.

National Highway and Transportation Safety Administration figures show that in 1982 there were 2,030 traffic fatalities involving teens aged 16 to 19 with more than .10 alcohol in their blood. In 1985, the number was 1,400, representing a 31 percent decrease.

Since it began in 1981, SADD has spread to 9,000 high schools — almost half of all public high schools — as well as 400 colleges in the United States.

"We want to work with the military to set up chapters in Germany and Tokyo," said SADD founder Robert Anastas, who also is planning trips to New Zealand and Australia to speak about his organization.

The impetus for SADD was the death of two boys from Wayland High School in Marlboro, Mass., where Anastas was a counselor, who were killed in car accidents. The trauma made him reconsider the drug and alcohol program the students were getting and decided that lecturing was insufficient, that teenagers themselves had to participate if drunk drinking were to stop.

Under the program, students sign a Contract for Life, promising that they will call their parents for a safe ride home rather than attempt to drive home under the influence of alcohol or drive home with someone who has been drinking. The aim of the contract also is to keep parents and children communicating, something Anastas feels is extremely important.

SADD, which quickly spread nationwide, at first drew some criticism from people Anastas calls "neo-Prohibitionists."

"They, one, didn't understand how kids could take charge of such a program about drunk driving and be trusted; and two, looked at SADD as a program that was just about drunk driving, not drugs and drinking. That's not true," he said in a recent interview.

The SADD program has developed a curriculum for schools and Anastas said the material distributed includes pamphlets and a booklet on drugs.

He said objections also arose to the Contract for Life.

"They said, if you sign a contract, doesn't that condone drinking? I told them that the problem we haven't shared with kids is that there are two choices. You can drink and get yourself home, or you can drink and call for a safe ride.

"In either case I'm not condoning drinking, but if I have to make a choice, I'll choose getting a safe ride. That's because there's no other way you can immunize kids against drunk driving and drinking, but I can give them my love."

SADD is supported by both government groups and private industry, including the beer and liquor industry. Anastas approached Anheuser Busch company, "frankly because they're the biggest," for help in distributing SADD material. Donations from the beer and liquor industry make up about 5 percent of SADD's funding, Anastas said.

"I want them on my side. I'm not trying to preach abstinence to kids. I drink a beer occasionally. I just want to say it's illegal (for minors) to drink, don't do drugs and you certainly shouldn't mix the two with driving.

Anastas said that the biggest problem teenagers face is peer pressure. SADD gives them the opportunity to be able to say no to alcohol and drugs and not be in the minority.

Apart from signing contracts, students develop programs to promote awareness about drinking and driving. One example was a recent contest sponsored by the Reader's Digest magazine, which invited high schools to develop programs with the theme "Don't Drink and Drive."

The winners of a $20,000 scholarship were Great Falls High School and C.M. Russell High School, in Great Falls, Mont., that printed posters and distributed them statewide. Both schools have SADD chapters in them — as have about 95 percent of the other high schools that participated in the contest, Anastas said.

As the first group of SADD high school students graduated, Anastas adapted the program to meet the requirements of college students.

Skill, education not enough in no-job market

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

One of the most disturbing facets of the local record unemployment is the high quality of the labor pool left seeking jobs. The skill and education levels of those standing in line on any given day at the Texas Employment Commission office would have had headhunter firms salivating four short years ago.

Current TEC job skill listings show:

- 390 oil and gas related secretarial and clerical workers;
- 98 geologists;
- 93 seismic surveyors;
- 85 drafting personnel;
- 68 petroleum engineers; and,
- 64 topographic surveyors,

among those looking for jobs through the local TEC placement service.

Office and professional personnel have been cut significantly — and numbers for some classifications could be somewhat understated because of individuals who may be working as independent consultants.

Despite the large number of 'white collar' unemployed on the TEC's survey, all segments of the oil and gas industry have been impacted by the continuing oil slump.

Drilling and well servicing laborers have been hardest hit: 2,341 of those registered at the TEC are classified as having oilfield wellsite labor experience — drillers, tooipushers, floorhands, roughnecks and other 'blue collar' wellsite jobs.

The oilfield trucking classification — including equipment or petroleum products hauling — includes 2,141 job seekers.

Hatcher points out that there is likely some overlapping between labor classifications, so adding the two job segments together is not necessarily an accurate way to identify more than 4,400 of the 7,600 Midland residents reported out of work in June, the most current local unemployment figures available.

THESE SKILLED, well-educated workers are chasing their piece of an ever-shrinking pie.

TEC keeping pace with the challenge

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

As the unemployment rate in Midland County continues to set new record highs each month, the Texas Employment Commission is shifting to keep pace with heavier demands.

Joe Hatcher, office manager for the TEC in Midland, said that increased unemployment has forced the agency to hire extra employees and change some of their procedures.

"We have a staff of 26. That's the largest work force we've had for the last several years," he said.

The Midland commission office has hired nine temporary workers since January to help ease the workload.

To cut back on waiting time for people filing for unemployment insurance, Hatcher said that the TEC is conducting group sessions with 15 to 20 persons at a time instead of talking to each individual filing a claim.

He also added that pre-arranged scheduling will be starting soon.

"When people come in to make their initial report, we will schedule them to come in for their second visit at another time. This will cut down on the waiting."

But, Hatcher reminds first-time filers that they will probably still have to wait between two and three hours.

"There will still be some inconveniences. People will have to wait longer, but the office staff are coping pretty well."

When a person first visits the TEC, he must

Employment picture bleak

It will get better, but worse first

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

With the Texas economy in shambles, the employment picture is bleak.

In the Permian Basin where unemployment is three times the national unemployment rate, joblessness is a problem of very serious proportions, affecting all aspects of the oil-based economy. And because of the energy industry's prominent role in the economy of Texas, it is having a profound effect statewide.

In June, the unemployed in the Petroplex numbered 12,300 in Odessa and 7,600 in Midland in June, slightly over 19 percent and 14 percent. This is about 2.5 times greater than last summer's unemployment.

If the present decline rate continues in the Permian Basin, the area could be in for an unemployment situation of disastrous proportions, perhaps equal to the 50 percent rank some border towns experienced during the bust of the peso. A year ago unemployment for Midland-Odessa was among the lowest in the state, standing at 5.9 percent for Midland and 6.9 percent for Odessa. In June it was 14.2 for Midland and 19.6 for Odessa. Only a month before it 11.7 percent for Midland and 16.1 for Odessa, bringing both cities to the bottom of the list in unemployment.

While it is no rosy picture, the outlook for the rest of the state is not been as bleak. In fact, July recorded a sharp drop in Texas unemployment from a record 10.5 percent in June to 8.7 percent, according to Labor Department records. A rebound in the construction industry is credited with creating 210,000 jobs to help bring those unemployed from 846,000 in Junes down to 707,000.

IT WAS THE THIRD straight month that Texas unemployment exceeded eight percent and exceeded U.S. employment, which stood at 6.9 percent for July, after a .2 percent improvement.

What is the outlook for Texas employment? Not so good, according to the State Comptroller's Office which has revised its predictions upward for those without employment.

Earlier this year the State Comptroller estimated that Texas would lose only 55,000 non-farm jobs, fewer than the 72,000 lost in the oil price collapse of 1983. But, those numbers have now been revised.

Speaking to a meeting of investors last week, Thomas Plaut, senior economist for the state Comptroller's Office told the gathering that things will get worse this year before they get better.

He said that his agency now forecasts 81,000 jobs will be lost this year and another 33,000 in 1987, before the economy finally bottoms out and turns around in the second half. He said the current energy-driven recession would top the 1982-83 downturn as the most severe Texas recession of the decade.

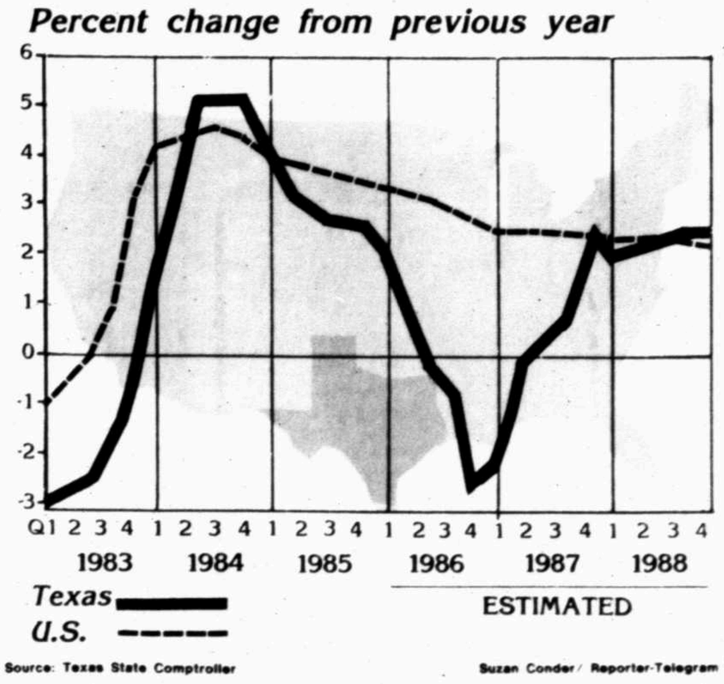

"The economy continues to deteriorate," he said. "I would like to say that things will get better, but right now we don't see any light at the end of the tunnel. If things do change, it's likely they'll be for the worse."

WHILE THE DOWNTURN of 1983 affected primarily the blue collar sector of the energy industry. Unemployment gloom this time around has been spread across the income spectrum, affecting blue and white collar workers alike. In recent months it has been growing gloomier for executives in the $50,000 to $100,000 range in recent months.

According to a survey by the Association of Executive Search Consultants, an industry trade group, demand for executives in the second half is down 9 percent from the first half of the year, and is off 20 percent from a year ago, reflecting a general decline in demand for executives since 1982.

This deep cut into the white collar segment of the industry is expected to cause the Comptroller's Office to Texas employment growth which has tracked or exceeded U.S. rates in the past will continue to plunge throughtout 1986, with recovery taking place in 1987, according to Texas State Comptroller.

THE PICTURE

- Texas will lose 81,000 jobs in 1986, 33,000 in 1987.
- Approximately 50,000 jobs will be lost in the energy sector this year.
- Midland unemployment is over 14 percent, Odessa over 19 percent and is expected to higher.
- Midland unemployment has increased 141 percent in the last year, Odessa unemployment has increased 184 percent.
- Unemployment in Midland is increasing at the approximate rate of 26 percent per month.
- Unemployment in Odessa is increasing at the rate of 33 percent per month.

HANGING ON

Midlanders take their own track to coping

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

A menace is loose in the city, attacking innocent Midlanders, chewing them up and spewing them out to helplessly fend for themselves. It is no respecter of persons — attacking both the young and old, male and female. It is not bound by social or economic class. The menace is unemployment.

Unemployment in the city has jumped drastically in the past six months because of deterioration in the oil industry, and the numbers are growing daily. But it is more than numbers. For each number, there is an unemployed man or woman whose financial and emotional well-being is being put to the test.

Families with mortgage payments, car payments and insurance bills are being forced to give up their homes and autos because they are unable to meet their creditors' demands. Others are managing to hold on to what they've got, but often at the cost of the comfortable standard of living they had previously enjoyed.

How are these families hanging on?

Del Windle, an independent with a Ph.D. in geology, was forced to close his office when oil prices dropped and deals became few and far-between. With two children and car and mortgage payments, the Windles had to make adjustments. Mrs. Windle took a job and Del is working with David Boes, an unemployed engineer, doing sprinkler installation and repair, concrete work and putting in flower beds. "We are only getting enough work to keep us busy 20 to 25 hours a week, but that is at

Is IPAA shifting policy on import tax?

Is a major policy shift toward a crude oil tax in the making? There are clues that it may be happening — at least within the ranks of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Last week at the meeting of IPAA's 42-member executive committee in Colorado, the organization unanimously adopted a strong "statement of action" which calls for a national policy to deal with the collapse of America's domestic oil industry.

It will come as no surprise to anyone that the most plausible and discussed policy to counter the collapse of the domestic petroleum industry is an oil import tax. Unless one subscribes to the American Petroleum Institute position — that the opening up of offshore tracts, deregulation of natural gas and more favorable tax treatment will somehow save the thousands of independent producers and wildcatters and the thousands of supply and service companies and drilling contractors facing extinction. Major oil companies maybe, but none of the above.

In the Colorado Springs statement IPAA seemed to hint, in only semi-disguised language, that it might be ready to do an about face on the question of crude oil import fees. In fact it appeared very much that the organization may be building a face-saving case in the statement.

A major step at the meeting established an Emergency Action Task Force to inform the public and Congress of the "inevitable national catastrophe," and to assist national policy makers in assessing, on a priority basis, every possible action — including import tariffs.

The words "including — but not limited to — tariffs" were slipped into the official statement, as not to attract too much attention, but they seem to signal a definite departure from former IPAA policy in which tariffs were presented as "unworkable." As such, they also accent the most desperate pitch yet for the oil industry.

Also included in the statement was a reference to an IPAA policy statement issued in May 1985 when the industry was in a marked recession: "Protecting the economy and the national security against an over dependence on foreign produced energy is in the national interest. Actions to prevent such over dependence are a legitimate concern of the federal government warranting under extreme circumstances intervention in the marketplace."

Can you spot the key words in this paragraph? Now when IPAA announces it is considering oil tariffs, it can make a case by saying: "We have always felt that under certain extreme circumstances market intervention might be warranted, and the circumstances have now become so grave that we must consider market intervention."

Another paragraph openly invites the government to adopt a policy to overcome market manipulation. The paragraph reads as follows: "The oil and gas industry is undergoing the sharpest contraction in history. This is a direct result of the determined manipulation of world oil markets by foreign governments using oil supply and pricing as a tool of foreign policy. The U.S., in contrast, has no specific policy for dealing with the situation."

I may be reading more into the statement than is there. Maybe IPAA has no intention of reversing it position on import fees now or ever, but I don't think so. This is precisely the type of verbal warm up and testing that normally takes place before major policy shifts, be it in government or the private sector.

I think we will soon see an announcement by IPAA that the eminent collapse of the domestic oil industry compels them to support oil import fees.

The question, now, is if and when the Reagan administration will move to establish an import fee. It is a standoff now, with the administration seeing how long it can stand on principle in the face of a collapsing oil industry.

Consider this example. A son comes to his father's home begging for help: "I got laid off, Dad. I can't find a job, Dad. I'm dead broke. I'm sick. My kids are sick and hungry.

LOOK WHO'S BUILDING AT CLAYDESTA NOW!

Bill Williams, Postmaster and Clayton Williams Jr. with the Employees of ClayDesta Station, U.S. Postal Service, Midland, Texas 79705

The U.S. Postal Service, and here are some of the important reasons why they chose ClayDesta Plaza to build ClayDesta Station, Midland's second largest postal facility:

- "Growth." The Postal Service is building on a commitment to Midland's next 30 years of growth, and they recognize ClayDesta Plaza as that center for continuing growth and expansion. While planning for the future, the new ClayDesta Station will be meeting current demands for expanded service to the growing number of companies at ClayDesta.
- "Service." ClayDesta has a reputation for providing the highest quality service in Midland. The Midland Postal Service also has the commitment to provide the most convenient services possible. The four and one-half acre site has been designed to provide for ample parking, easy access, and convenient postal services close-at-hand. ClayDesta Corporation believes the new ClayDesta Station will provide the most convenient postal services possible for its tenants.
- "Value." The U.S. Postal Service chose the ClayDesta site because it offered value for the dollar, a landmark address, and ample room for parking and expansion. It's all part of the commitment, and part of the success.

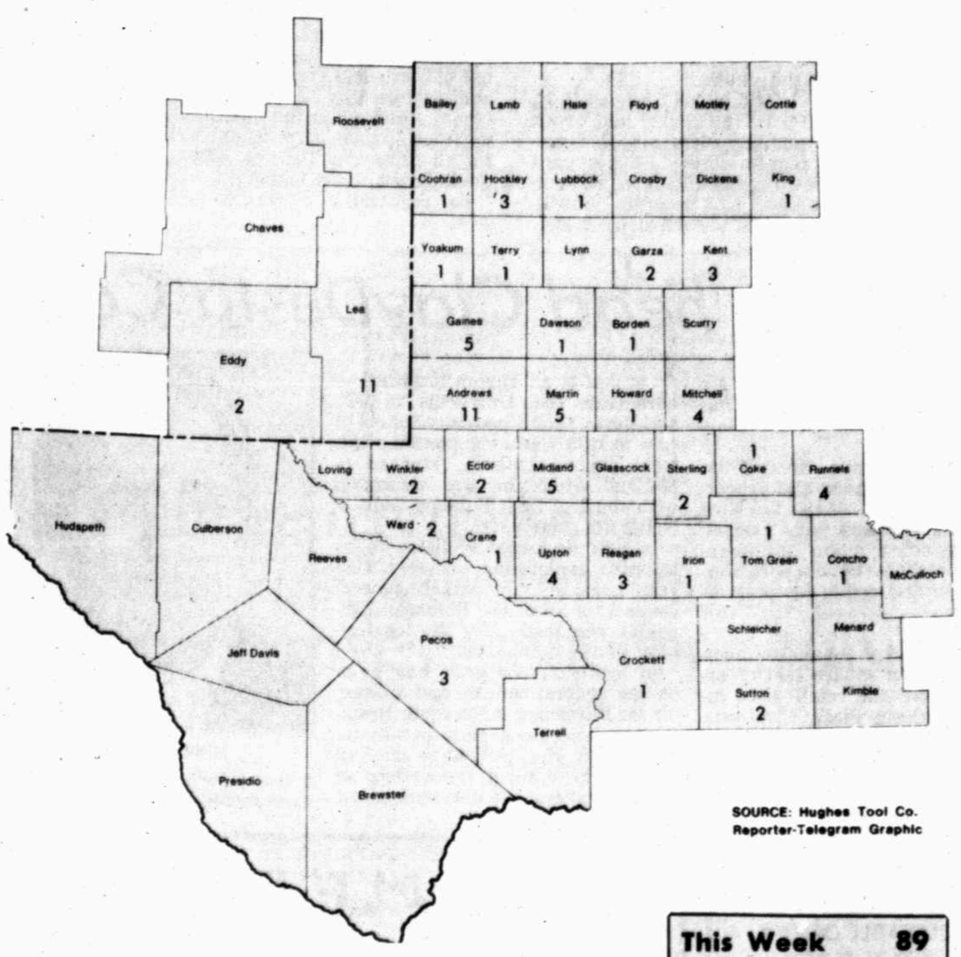

Before you make your move call Randy Hutton or Bill Sandlin and find out for yourself how affordable ClayDesta quality really is. ClayDesta Corporation . . . Building on a Commitment.

Rig count appears to have bottomed

Rig counts in both the Basin and the U.S. have risen for the third consecutive week. Although modest, the advance could signal the bottom for the falling count that had dipped to its lowest point ever only a few weeks ago.

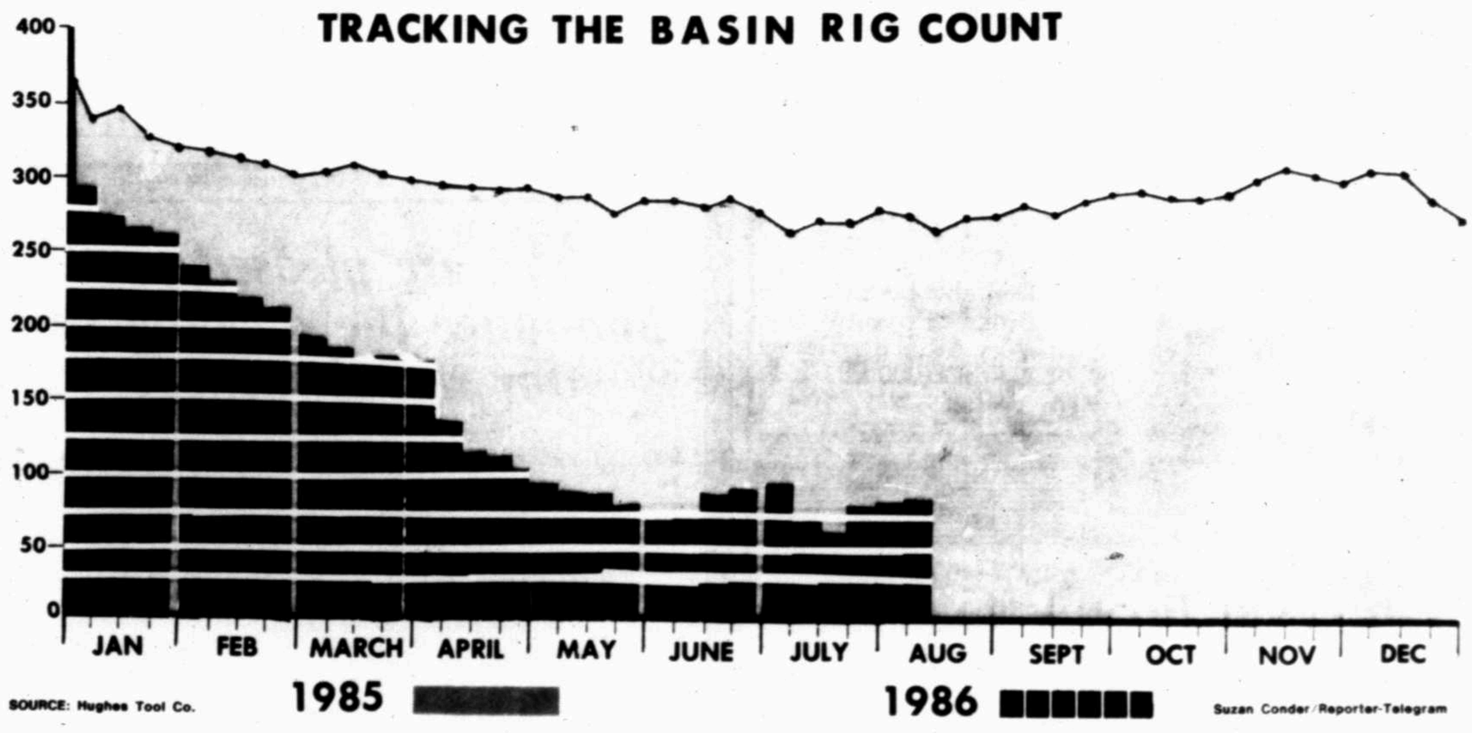

The Permian Basin count rose by one this week for an 89 total. Completion by District stacked up as follows: District 8 (Midland) — 38; District 8A (Lubbock) — 20; District 7C (San Angelo) — 18; and Southeast New Mexico — 13.

Nationally, five more rigs were drilling, for a total of 721. Although only a drop in the bucket compared to year-ago figures of 1,911, the number of rigs continues to climb.

Colorado added seven to its total, while California gained six and Wyoming rose by five. Texas showed one more rig working, while New Mexico tallied three additional rigs at work. Oklahoma lost two rigs and Louisiana took a big drop, down by 17 from the previous week.

One year ago there were 276 rigs making hole in the Permian Basin.

Permits to drill wildcats decline

Through the first seven months of 1986 permits to drill for oil and gas in the U.S. totaled 28,659 — a drop of more than 43 percent from the previous year's seven-month total of 50,537, according to Petroleum Information.

New field wildcat permits, those for pure exploration, showed the steepest drop, down 47.7 percent to 2,744 from 5,242 a year ago.

Permits for other exploration, in and near existing fields, were off 42.6 percent through July. A total of 3,234 of these permits had been issued, compared to 5,629 for the same period a year ago.

MEETINGS

D&D to hear wellhead expert

Joe Gassie, sales representative for Seaboard Wellhead Inc., will be the guest speaker the the Midland Desk and Derrick meeting, August 14, at the Petroleum Club of Midland.

Gassie has resided in Midland since 1975, and helped design the wellhead equipment for Gulf's Emma Lou Gas Unit No.2 which was at the time the deepest well in Texas.

He will speak on the design and operation of wellhead equipment. Gassie, a graduate of the University of Southwestern Louisiana with a degree in political science began his oilfield career with Gray Tool Co.

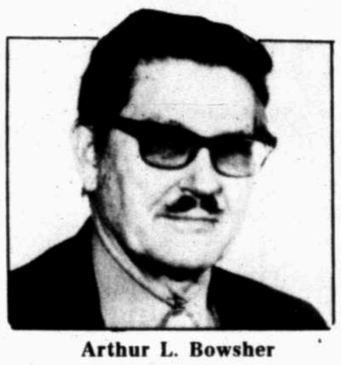

Joe Gassie

Roswell geologist to address WTGS at Tuesday meeting

Roswell geologist, Arthur L. Bowsher will address the West Texas Geological Society at its Tuesday noon meeting on the subject of "Dynamic Growth of Selected Paleozoic Reef Complexes."

Geologist for Yates Petroleum Co., Roswell, Bowsher says the sequential positioning of the compound biohermal facies of Paleozoic reefs reflects the history of water movement, or the rise and fall of water over the shelf in which the reef complex accumulated.

Bowsher is a graduate of the University of Tulsa with graduate studies in invertebrate paleontology from the University of Kansas, and the author of 48 technical articles in professional journals.

Arthur L. Bowsher

Reservations for the meeting may be made by calling West Texas Geological Society by noon Monday at 683-1573.

WeCTOGA slates barbecue

West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association has announced Lytle Shores Auditorium as the site for this year's annual barbecue. The barbecue will be Thursday, August 21 at 3:30 p.m. with board of directors meeting and social hour preceding the barbecue at 6 p.m.

At 7 p.m., Robert Jett of Lone Star Gas Co., Dallas, will speak. He is a veteran of 20 years in radio and TV in the South and Southwest. All association members in the Permian Basin are urged to attend. Tickets are $15 prior to August 15 and $20 after that date.

SCORE chapter forming locally

The Midland Chamber of Commerce Small Business Council and Midland College are in the process of establishing a local Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) chapter, so that area businesses — both large and small — can benefit from the knowledge that comes only from experience.

SCORE is a volunteer group of retired men and women who provide free management counseling in solving the problems encountered by local businesses. The program is sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Currently, the Chamber's Small Business Council is looking for retired or semi-retired business people who have had successful careers and are now able to contribute their personal time and expertise to firms that need their help.

"We want an inventory of qualified people," said Jerry L. Jones of Midland College, "who are experts in a wide range of fields, from accounting to drilling and public relations to manufacturing or retailing."

Jones said that Midland's SCORE chapter will ultimately have about 25 volunteers who will make up a very diversified and experienced group. In addition to one-on-one counseling with businesses as needed, the volunteers will hold periodic workshops and seminars for small business owners and managers.

Interested volunteers should contact Jerry Jones at Midland College or Alison Peeler at the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

PBGC plans three courses this week

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will hold the following courses:

"Genealogy and Developing Your Family Tree", a weekly brown-bag lunch and lecture series, held in cooperation with the Midland Chamber of Commerce, will be held Wednesday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Frances Walker, past president of the Midland Genealogical Society, will be the speaker. The session is free to the public.

"Advanced Lotus 1-2-3," will be held August 19-20, from 7:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. The course will cover: introduction to programming; elements of a program, diagramming program flow; 1-2-3 keyboard macros; creating your own command menu; and putting together a sample Lotus 1-2-3 program. Individual computers will be assigned to each student. Registration is limited for the course which will be taught by Ted Windecker, president of T.R. Windecker, Inc. The fee is $130 or $15 for those unemployed since January.

"Exploration Economics and Risk Analysis," is scheduled for August 20 to 21 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This course includes entry-level concepts associated with cash flow analysis, present value concepts, use of yardsticks for optimum investment selection and risk analysis. The portion on risk analysis includes a section on the mechanics of prospect risking that enables a consistent risking methodology for all prospects. The fee is $295 or $40 for those unemployed since January.

For registration or further information, call 683-2832.

Latham to head ClayDesta Corp.

Paul Latham, general counsel for all of the Williams Companies, has been appointed president of ClayDesta Corp.

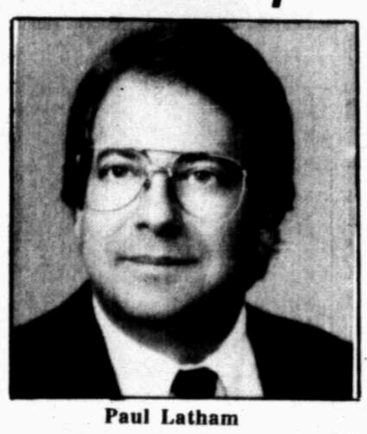

In his new position as head of the real estate development and property management arm of the Williams organization, Latham will oversee the leasing, construction and operations efforts of the corporation. Latham will also retain his position as general counsel for the companies.

ClayDesta Corp. manages more than one million square feet of office, warehouse and retail space including ClayDesta Plaza, ClayDesta Center Downtown and Spring Park. Recently, ClayDesta Corp. signed Enserch Exploration to a multi-year lease.

Latham is an honors graduate of both Texas Tech University, in 1974, and Texas Tech University School of Law in 1978. Upon completion of his legal degree, Latham returned to Midland where he was associated with the law firm Bullock, Scott & Neisig for four years.

In 1982, he joined Williams Co. as assistant exploration manager. One year later he was named general counsel for all of the Williams Companies, responsible for the legal affairs of the companies.

In addition, Latham has been named general counsel and a director for Physicians & Surgeons Hospital where he has been integrally involved in the purchase of the facility, the current renovations to the hospital and the development of a new 114-bed replacement health care facility.

complete all the paperwork and request unemployment insurance from the state of Texas.

Hatcher said they will process the paperwork and the person should receive the first check in approximately two weeks if the person has met all the critera.

"From time to time we will have delays due to the increased workload," he said, "but, if there is a problem, bring it to our attention."

The TEC is doing what it can to place people in jobs, Hatcher said. He noted that the Midland office placed 288 individuals in new jobs during July, the second highest total in the West Texas region.

Hatcher, who was previously the TEC area manager for Jasper, Newton and Orange Counties, said that Midland is unique because it has not felt the impact as other parts of the state.

"In places such as Beaumont, Houston, Corpus Christi and Port Arthur unemployment has been high for the last three years. It hovers around 20 percent. Midland is just beginning to feel the effect."

But, he added that there has been a significant drop in employee placement in Midland.

Last year during the summer the Midland TEC could place between 700 to 1,000 people a month.

However, to help get the Midland unemployed back into the workforce, Hatcher said that area businesses must list any openings they have with the TEC.

"We have between 4,000 and 5,000 people on file. These are highly skilled, highly qualified people."

The TEC is also hooked up to a state-wide computer system and they have access to job openings in other states.

However, Hatcher said that job placement outside the Permian Basin is a very small percentage.

"What we need is to focus any available jobs into one area. This will increase the placing people in jobs," he claimed.

"The worst thing that can happen to a man and I am using the term 'man' generically–is not being able to provide for their family. We want to help them as much as we can."

InterFirst founder quietly resigns

DALLAS (AP) — Edwin L. Cox Sr., the founding director of InterFirst Corp. of Dallas, resigned from the bank holding company's board.

In June, InterFirst increased its loan-loss reserve to cover an $80 million personal loan to Cox's son, Edwin L. Cox Jr., a former director of the company's lead bank.

InterFirst, the third largest bank holding company in Texas, did not announce Cox's resignation, but the independent oil and gas producer's name was not included in the company's second-quarter report issued to shareholders Wednesday.

An InterFirst spokesman confirmed that Cox, 64, had resigned July 22. The spokesman declined to comment on the reason for the resignation and Cox could not be reached for comment.

COPING

least keeping our heads above water for the time being," Windle says.

WINDLE EXPECTS to re-enter the oil industry when things pick up, but he is not looking for that to happen anytime soon. He is still keeping his fingers in it as much as possible, but there is not much demand for his services right now. "It used to be that oil was my vocation; now it's my hobby. I've sort of become 'Mr. Mom'."

For Sydney Lawler, an unemployed geologist, the financial woes are not her greatest source of trauma. "I work to be fulfilled. I didn't get into the oil industry for the money; I got in because I love geology," she stated.

A former employee of B&G Energy, Syd says the emotional ramifications of suddenly being unemployed are the hardest to deal with. "You tend to take it personally. I know it's happening to alot of people out there, but it's still hard to swallow."

Syd, a native Iowan with a masters degree in geology, says she was raised with the Midwestern work ethic that "if a person worked hard, was honest and loyal, they would be rewarded for that." Now she's not so sure that's true. Employees who are directly responsible for thousands of dollars of income to their companies' are being let go.

But that's not to say Syd is without financial concerns. After two and one-half years with the firm, she was laid off without severance pay. "Luckily, I have some savings and don't have mortgage or car payments, so I can at least survive. I really have to watch every penny I spend though."

The 33-year-old geologist would like to stay in Midland and is exploring the possibilities of being able to do that. With a teaching certification in Iowa, she is now going through the lengthy process of trying to get certified in Texas and get set up to take the TECAT. She is still evaluating her feelings about remaining in the petroleum industry when it is subject to the uncertainties of boom-and-bust cycles. "I am still paying for a student loan on my masters' degree that may not be worth anything," stated Lawler, who says that people can't help feeling bitter.

SHE FEELS that companies have stopped cutting 'excess baggage' and are now cutting the 'meat' of their operations. "Many of the younger professionals being forced out of the industry now won't be coming back."

But, all in all, Syd Lawler is a survivor and she knows that her diverse background will enable her to find a job, although it may mean leaving Midland. "When I see an opportunity, I will pounce on it."

Billie Boyd refuses to take her layoff from BHP (Americas) Petroleum, Inc. personally. "I, like all the others, was a victim of something I have no control over. We're not deadbeats who don't want to work and I won't be put down because of it."

That is not to say that Billie has not had some distressed moments in the two months since her termination. "We have a mortgage payment and an 8-year-old son to think about. Luckily, I was given about three months severance pay and was able to cash in my thrift plan which I had been contributing to for about five years. That has kept us going thus far, but when that's gone, we're going to have problems, and that is something I worry about."

Billie's husband is also a victim of the oil crunch. An engineer and draftsman, he is now doing contract work, but can only find enough work to keep him busy two days a week. The Boyds say that not living beyond their means in the past has helped them cope with present difficulties. "We had to cut back. So far it's just been little things. We didn't get to take a vacation this year and our son has had to be denied things that he normally could have had," Boyd said.

ONE OF THE major losses confronting those laid off is the loss of benefits. "I've been shopping around for medical insurance and it's expensive."

The 47-year-old secretary is looking for employment but there are not many jobs available and competition is fierce.

Boyd says the emotional impact on some who have faced termination is great. "My family is my priority. I worked for the paycheck, not for fulfillment. For others, however, career was a priority, and those are the ones who are devastated by the cutbacks."

She blames the government for the problems of the industry. "As a country, we handled the situation poorly, allowing ourselves to become dependent on foreign oil. I believe charity begins at home. We shouldn't buy foreign oil and turn around and tell our own that they can't take oil out of the ground."

Boyd also hopes the Midland industry has learned something from the latest downturn. "The oil industry must learn to stop paying outrageously high salaries to a selected few. The rest of us could have held on to our jobs a little longer if there were not those few making big money."

The Boyds say they have not slept as well this summer, but a faith in God and in each other has enabled them to cope better than many.

The Jaffas are another family whose income was demolished with the demise of the oil industry. Michael was a roughneck for ARCO until he was laid off in April. Nancy's secretarial job at the Texas Railroad Commission was not enough to carry them through and after several months of struggle, they were forced to move home to Rhode Island. "I don't know if there is a job there for me — things may be equally bad. But at least we have our family there and it's times like these when families can pull you through," said the 26-year-old father of two.

DEREK MANEMANN, 30, is another classic example of an oilfield worker coping with job loss. Derek lost his job as a roughneck with Gene Sledge Drilling Co. in April. He has held oilfield-related jobs for most of his working life. "That's all I know. Every job I have had has been in some way related to the oilfield, both in Houston and Midland, and it has been my life," stated Manemann.

He admits that pay in the industry is hard to beat and has him spoiled. "I will stay with the industry if I can, because I am used to the money."

He has been living on his unemployment compensation supplemented with the money he was able to save while he was employed. "I was able to do some odds and ends and yard work after my termination, but now everybody is doing yardwork. There are only so many lawns in Midland," he added.

After his unemployment benefits expire Manemann expects he may be forced to look for a job elsewhere, as an increasing number of unemployed are forced into the Midland job market. "I am an experienced welder and have training for that skill. I have an application in for a welding job on the Texas section of the Pacific Texas pipeline."

Like most others, Manemann knows that times are tough, but feels confident that things will turn around. He is thankful he doesn't have a family to worry about until that time comes. "I have found that I can get by on very little when I have to."

WORKERS

Since early 1985, the total number of non-agricultural wage and salary jobs in the city had declined by 3,300 positions as of July 1.

TEC figures total 46,500 total jobs in Midland at the end of June, compared to 47,400 two months earlier, and 49,800 last year.

Shrinkage in the number of jobs available has been evenly distributed across industry classifications, with only service sector jobs showing a slight increase in recent months, but still lower than a year ago — the 9,000 service jobs in June were up 200 compared to April, down from 9,100 in 1985.

Other job classification losses since April are: 500 in mining (which cover oil and gas); 300 in government; and 100 each in the manufacturing, wholesale/retail trade, and financial sectors.

Over the same period, the total civilian labor force mushroomed by 2,300 with an influx of seasonal jobseekers as well as laid-off workers. In June, 46,100 of 53,700 available workers were employed.

Since June 1985, total employment has fallen by 4,800 while the labor force has contracted by only 400.

PITTS

They're going to throw me out into the street."

Does the father bar the door and tell the son that its a tough world and he's going to have to take his lumps just like everyone else? Does he stand on principle and send him away, knowing full well that his son and those who depend upon him could die? I think not.

At some point, principle must give way to compassion and survival. I don't think the oil industry can curl up on the doorstep of the White House and die without getting some attention.

If IPAA comes forward with a plan for a workable oil import tax, coupled with evidence of collapse within the industry, I think we will see the administration and maybe even traditional enemies of the oil industry willing to take a look at such a plan.

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

also revise upward its predictions for lost jobs in the energy sector. The chief economic agency for the state had earlier predicted that only 46,700 energy-related jobs would disappear this year.

Another sector which may see jobs disappear this year than had been anticipated is manufacturing. Most of the more than 33,000 jobs expected to be lost in manufacturing will come, not in the electrical industry, but in oil field manufacturing, according to State Comptroller Bob Bullock. Included in this manufacturing total is refining, which despite low oil prices is expected to lose over 9,200 jobs. Small decreases are predicted for construction this year and next, followed by increases in 1988.

Housing starts are expected to fall from 150,000 last year to 110,000 this year and 97,000 next year, and employment will surely track these starts.

The good news for Texas employment is that predictions call for recovery in employment growth in 1987 and 1988 and a return to levels on a par with those of the U.S. Also not to be overlooked is the other side of the coin, 7.4 million Texans now have jobs.

Texas Air loses $44.8 million

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. reported a net loss of $44.8 million for the second quarter, down from $41 million in profits during the same period a year ago.

Officials of the Houston-based company blamed the loss on $64.2 million in bankruptcy court expenses for Continental Airlines, its principal subsidiary. Without the expense, the company said it would have posted a profit of $19.4 million.

Continental emerged from reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in June after almost three years in court.

Texas Air's loss amounted to $1.90 per share before extraordinary credit, compared with earnings of $2.69 per share for the second quarter ending June 30, 1985.

Texas Air, also the parent company of New York Air and CCS Automation Systems Inc., posted revenues of $540 million, an increase from $495 million in the second quarter of 1985.

Texas Air recently contracted to acquire the shares of Eastern Air Lines Inc. that it doesn't own for a per share price of $6.25 in cash and $3.75 of securities. Texas Air already benefically owns 51 percent of Eastern.

This month the company received tentative approval from the Department of Transportation of its acquisition of Eastern, subject to certain conditions.

Introducing the new Light Mortgage from Pioneer Mortgage. It can trim fat house payments by $100's a month and $1000's a year.*

If you're tired of carrying that heavy interest home mortgage, bring it in to your nearest Pioneer Mortgage office. We'll show you how much our new Light Mortgage can save you – on your monthly payments, and on the total cost of your loan.

Frankly, we think you'll be amazed. Because our Light Mortgage contains only 10.00%* fixed rate interest – the lowest home mortgage rate since 1979. Since that's probably below the interest rate you're now paying, your savings could be anywhere from substantial to tremendous.

But you can't go just anywhere and ask for a Light Mortgage. There's no telling what kind of rate you'll get. You can only be sure by asking for a Pioneer Light. Only at Pioneer Mortgage.

Check your mortgage against the Pioneer Light Mortgage.

Cruise

Q. Could you tell me about Tom Cruise? Is that his real name, how old is he, does he have brothers and sisters, what movies has he made?

Nancy Pace Anderson, Calif.

Kathy C. Madison, Wis.

A. Thomas Cruise Mapother IV was born in Syracuse, N.Y., on July 3, 1962. Because of his father's electrical engineering job, the family moved around a lot, last to a town outside Ottawa, Canada, where his parents were divorced.

Following the split, he and his three sisters moved with their mother to Louisville, Ky., where his interest and skill in sports, begun in Canada playing ice hockey, accelerated. (He had a rougher time in the classroom because he had dyslexia. As a result, he hated school.)

At 16, his mother remarried and the family moved to Glen Ridge, N.J., where he continued his sports, now football and wrestling. He wasn't very focused, though, and had no idea what he wanted to do after high school — travel possibly, before thinking about college — or even where his talents were concentrated. He realized that he wasn't good enough for pro sports.

When his glee club instructor suggested that he try out for the school's production of the musical "Guys and Dolls," though, he found his calling. He got the lead, and after the performance had a serious talk with his mother. He wanted to try to make it in show business and he asked her to give him 10 years to do it. Skipping his high-school graduation, he moved to New York.

Within five months of his arrival, he landed a bit part in a movie, the bomb "Endless Love." A few months later, he got a small part in the movie "Taps," later expanded to a major part, when he replaced the actor already cast. The embarrassing "Losin' It" followed, then "The Outsiders." His next film was the surprise hit "Risky Business," and that film made him a star.

The less successful "All the Right Moves" followed, as did a year in London for the recently released failure "Legend." "Top Gun," on the other hand, is a major hit and his next film is eagerly awaited: "The Color of Money," a sequel to "The Hustler" co-starring Paul Newman and directed by Martin Scorcese. It's due out in December.

Hanks

Q. Could you give me some information on Tom Hanks. How old is he, where is he from and will he be making any more movies?

Pam Freeman Justice, Ill.

A. He's 29, from Oakland, Calif., where he and his three siblings were raised by their divorced father, until, as he explains it, his father married again, to a Chinese woman with her own children and all of a sudden, there were a lot of people around the dinner table with names he couldn't pronounce.

He attended Skyline High School in Oakland where he was the class cutup, if not a great scholar, and Chabot Junior College. After Chabot, he won a scholarship to California State University in Sacramento, where he discovered theater.

Soon, he was acting in the classics and after graduation, was asked by the director of the Great Lakes Shakespeare Festival in Cleveland to apprentice there. He spent three seasons with them and then moved to New York, where he lived in a garret, made a slasher movie, "He Knows You're Alone," and appeared with the Riverside Shakespeare Company.

An ABC talent scout spotted him and flew him to Los Angeles where he spent eight weeks auditioning for TV pilots. One of them, "Bosom Buddies," sold and became a series, if not a great ratings hit. He made other TV appearances as well, particularly one in an episode of the series "Happy Days" in which he played a guy who Fonzie had pushed out of a swing during childhood and who was now returning, as a black belt in karate, for revenge.

Years later, "Happy Days" star and now director Ron Howard remembered that bit and called him in to read for the movie he was directing, "Splash."

That movie, of course, became a tremendous hit, leading to a string of other movies for Hanks: "Bachelor Party," "Volunteers," "The Man With One Red Shoe," "The Money Pit" and "Nothing in Common" which was released in late July. He also has a new movie, which he just finished filming in Israel called "Love Hurts"; no release date has been set.

Blair

Q. I saw an actress named Linda Blair in a movie called "Ruckus" recently and I thought she was great. Could you tell me about her background and what she's doing now?

Bill M. Donald Abilene, Texas

A. She's 27, was born in St. Louis and raised in Westport, Conn., but starting at the age of 6, she spent her afternoons in New York modeling. At 10, she got her first movie role, a bit part in a movie called "The Sporting Club" followed by something called "The Way We Live Now."

She was 12 when she filmed the movie that would really bring her attention, "The Exorcist," in which she portrayed the possessed child Regan, a role she repeated in the critically slammed sequel, "Exorcist II: The Heretic."

She also did a number of TV movies such as "Sweet Hostage," "Sarah T.: Portrait of a Teenage Alcoholic," "Born Innocent" and "Victory at Entebbe" as well as "Airport 1975" and independent movies such as "Chained Heat," "Hell Night," "Roller Boogie" and her newest, soon-to-be-released "Night Fighters."

Her personal life has often gotten more attention than her movies: at 15, she moved in with the then-little known Rick Springfield and at 19, was busted in a massive drug sweep. She pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiracy to possess cocaine and was placed on three years probation. She also posed nude for Oui magazine in 1982.

Q. I have always admired the British actor David Warner. Could you please tell me where he's from and what movies he's been in.?

I. Kelly Grand Falls, Nfld., Canada

A. He was born in Manchester, England, the illegitimate child of two parents who kept stealing him back and forth from each other, so he moved around a lot during his childhood.

His movies include "Tom Jones" (he played T.J.'s brother), "Morgan," which was his big break in movies, "Straw Dogs," "Cross of Iron," "The Omen," "The Battle of Cable Hogue," "Airport 1979," "The Man with Two Brains," "The French Lieutenant's Woman," "Tron" and "Time Bandits."

He's currently filming "Hansel and Gretel," in which he also sings.

Edwards

Q. Can you tell me whatever happened to that good-looking Vincent Edwards, who played Ben Casey on TV? Also, when did that series end?

Miss R. Peck Jersey City, N.J.

A. The series ended in 1966 and his career foundered afterwards. He started directing — a TV movie called "Maneater," episodes of series such as "Fantasy Island" — and continued acting in miniseries such as "The Rhinemann Exchange" and "Evening in Byzantium" and the movie "The Seduction." He's currently shooting a movie called "Return to Horror High" in which his daughter co-stars. There's also talk about doing an updated Ben Casey TV movie for next season.

Musicians take their babies on the road

By KATHY LARKIN
King Features

Time after time, in big and little concert halls strung like a chain of musical notes across the country, violinist Ani Kavafian — the Istanbul-born offspring of two Armenian musicians — tucks her $250,000 Stradivarius beneath her chin and rejoices that an even more precious possession waits for her in a local hotel room: Matthew, her first-born. He is an outgoing, outrageously beguiling toddler, cherished production of Ani and husband Bernard Mindich, a successful New York corporate lawyer turned sculptor.

When rocker Pat Benatar and guitarist/producer husband Neil Geraldo hit the road with their recent 10-week tour, "Seven the Hard Way," the newest member of the family went along too — daughter Haley, just 1 year old.

And when harpsichordist/conductor Judith Norell picked up her baton to launch the first of six opera performances in Lennox, Mass., last year, the attentive little 5-year-old brunette in the audience was daughter Daniella. Chuckles Daniella's mother, "She stayed up late, loved the opera and learned to sing many of the arias."

Canadian singer Anne Murray tried packing her offspring on tour — only to find herself distracted, torn between job and children. And the sound of schoolroom bells can drown out the lure of musicians on the road.

Singer Patti LaBelle, who estimates she tours eight months a year, leaves son Zuri, 12, home in Philadelphia with husband Armstead Edwards (a former high school vice-principal) so Zuri can complete his education. Still, he does make flying trips to his mother's main concert dates.

It's a tough choice. And today many women musicians with packable bands, baby cribs and children opt for the best of both options: a tour and traveling baby.

The first time violinist Ani Kavafian and the son who shares her happy, outgoing disposition took to the road together, Matthew was just weeks old and she was "still pretty sore from the whole experience of having him."

Still they flew together to a performance in Interlochen, Mich. "I didn't want to cancel the concert," says Ms. Kavafian, sitting in her multilevel Manhattan loft while her son alternately crawls and toddles through the open, wall-less spaces, watched by the three family cats. "Besides," she adds. "I really had to be with the baby. I was breast-feeding."

Ms. Kavafian was lucky. Her husband went with her. What's more, her mother lives in nearby Detroit within easy baby-sitting distance. Chuckles Ms. Kavafian, "She loved it."

This was also a one-week road trip. "Matthew did wake up during the nights, so it was a little hard until I finally got into the routine of baby and concert, baby and concert. Now Matthew and I have both accommodated to this kind of set-up. He's comfortable in airplanes, strange hotel rooms. He's good with people. And he's learned to sleep through the night anywhere we go. Matthew is already a flexible human being."

Matthew and his security blanket are scheduled for a busy 1986. Ms. Kavafian, daughter of family of "string players" — her late father, Yenovk, and her mother, Peruz, were musicians with the Istanbul State Symphony and her stepfather, Detroit music teacher Ara Zerounian, is another violinist — projects tour stops from Santa Fe and San Francisco to Alaska. And next year, she and musician sister Ida hit Canada — together.

For Ms. Kavafian, the U.S. has been a refuge, a lucky country. Brushing back the shock of black hair surrounding the wide brown eyes she has bequeathed to her son; she is remembering that night in 1956 when armed Turkish soldiers invaded her family's Istanbul home, a night when the Cyprus conflict made both Greeks and Armenians living targets.

"We were saved by our downstairs Turkish tenant. She confronted them and, speaking their own language, convinced them it was a Turkish house. We escaped. Others were killed. Stores were looted. The next day, the whole area smelled of spilled wine and goat cheese."

Her family fled to America. "I can still remember landing here. It was the promised land. I knew about it. We'd been told about it. But it was still an explosion of...everything. This wonderful, big, free place with all the people, all the hustle and bustle. It was something..."

It was here that Ms. Kavafian met first her husband, Bernie, a friendly articulate man with prematurely white hair framing a strong face; and later, the violin: a $250,000 Stradivarius crafted in 1736 by the then-92-year-old master Antonio Stradivari just one year before his death.

Never played by a professional violinist, it was "waiting" for Ms. Kavafian and the concert hall in a New York shop. The ticket price was higher than a "C" note. "But I had to find the money," she insists.

Owning the "Strad" took $25,000 in personal savings, $50,000 raised by selling her old violin, $70,000 borrowed from her fiance and her sister, even some musical demonstrations — she played impromptu bank concerts on the borrowed Stradivarius just to float a loan.

And there were two fund-raising dinner/concert evenings. One was hosted by opera star Anna Moffo and husband, former RCA board chairman Robert Sarnoff, in their luxurious apartment. "They were wonderful! We raised $10,000 — half the down payment." The second time, Ms. Kavafian played and cooked dinner for friends in her own home.

Now, four years later, just paying the last of her bank loans with tour dates and tutoring hopeful violinists 14 hours a week (the high, soaring notes of one apprentice is even now punctuating this interview) Ms. Kavafian is happy. "My violin has come alive. And for me, it makes all the difference in the world. I needed a quality instrument with great projection to match the places I was playing in — great halls with major orchestras."

But Matthew can outweigh all that on the scales with one tip of his baby finger. "Matthew is the best thing I've ever done. I could have played a million concerts in the biggest halls with the greatest orchestras," says his mother.

"But having this little one. It gives a perspective to life. When I'm on stage now I have a wonderful sense that this is not all there is. When I go back to the hotel room, there is Matthew."

Adds Ms. Kavafian, "In a sense, I've been thrown into a situation where all of a sudden, I'm musician, teacher and — in my 30s — a new mother. And I'm totally aware of being torn in all these different directions. And I haven't even added being wife to my husband, which is very, very important to me."

There are, she says, "endless rewards to this life."

Ms. Kavafian suddenly inhales deeply and throws her arms wide. "Look. Look at all the chances I've been given, all the rewards. A beautiful little boy. A really neat husband. A career that's like a dream come true. A great violin. It's unbelievable. I don't know what drives other famous people to do what they're doing. But suddenly I've become one of them."

How do the beauty queens do it?

By RITA L. TISSER
King Features

A number of my female friends recently bumped into each other somewhere between the day-old bread and the reduced-vegetables-and-fruits counter. Ever since my 40th birthday, I hang out there a lot.

None of us are young things. It would be safe to say that when people try to guess our ages, the only thing they don't get right is the time of delivery on our birthdays. If one were to compare us to shoes, we would be more like broken-in running shoes than sleek Italian pumps.

My whole life I was looking forward to being a wedgie rather than a spike. When I was a child it had been so simple — all the single young women wore dangerously high spikes to church. The single women complained about their feet while eyeing the young men of the parish. The middle-aged women talked about births, deaths, illnesses and how many quarts of tomatoes they put up last week — all the important events of life. They wore white wedgies and four-year-old spring hats.

In the produce department, we started to talk about beauty queens, those women who have been in the public eye for 20 to 30 years. Two very well known beauties came to mind: Jane Fonda and Joan Collins.

"How does she do it?" one of the women asked of Collins, star of TV's "Dynasty."

"Sandblasting."

All of the women looked at me.

"Here in the Midwest they sandblast buildings. In Hollywood they sandblast people. Come on, how do you think middle-aged women end up with perfectly smooth thighs?"

This was greeted by hoots. They think I'm jealous.

"You know, Joan Collins's makeup was designed by Mattel," I said. "She's been dipped in polyurethane. She's going to look like that for the next 50 years. Her mouth is always open because she can't breathe through her pores."

"Her figure! Are you kidding? don't you see why she wears her business suits slit to the waistline. It's to make her neck look longer. It's all delusion."

"Illusion," countered another friend, "you mean her figure is an illusion."

They all looked at me as if I was crazy.

"Her waistline looks small because her shoulders are padded, or she wears puffy sleeves. It gives her a T-shape. All the professional football players use it to make themselves look in shape. Some of them weigh 200, 300 pounds. Have you ever seen a picture of Joan Collins on a bathroom scale in a bath towel without padded shoulders?"

"Now, you have to admit she has a tremendous bosom," one of the older women said.

Everyone else nodded.

"Engineering," I said. I had to make them understand. "She's hired one of those big West Coast engineering companies and it probably designed her bra, something like load lift. That's her midriff you see popping up out of all her clothes. I'm surprised she doesn't design a line of clothing featuring her pop-up tops."

"OK. I'll concede that she's a bit artificial," responded one woman.

"Artificial!" I shouted. "You could say she has a longer shelf life than all the combined white bread in the country."

The women exchanged worried looks. "Now, Jane Fonda has a natural beauty that doesn't come out of a bottle," one said. These women weren't going to give up their myths easily. Even to myself, I had to admit that the only place Jane Fonda has stretch marks are, no doubt, around her mouth.

"She spends so much time going for the (calorie) burn, her brain is probably seared," I said. "She thinks lying down is a position you assume while exercising your legs. Imagine any woman who doesn't think her legs are heavy enough when she works out so she puts five-pound weights on them."

The women were embarrassed but I couldn't shut up now. The muscle that keeps the mouth sealed truly does become more elastic with age.

"These women have taken our rights away." Now I was beginning to sound like Jane Fonda and I had followed her exercise tape only once. I had to say something positive or I would be drummed out of the conversation. "Now, look at Elizabeth Taylor. She has always been my idol."

Immediately one of the other women responded, "Doesn't she look terrific since her diet?" Everyone agreed except....

"I admired her before her diet," I said. "She looked so cuddly, sort of mother-of-the-brideish in all those blue chiffon tents. I always thought she looked satisfied. Like her chocolate souffle didn't collapse."

"But she let herself go — a woman with her looks."

Judith Norell

Ani Kavafian

BABIES

The door to Judith Norell's apartment in New York is decorated with crayoned pictures and childish scrawl that reads, "Welcome" — evidence of her two daughters, Daniella, 6, and Gabrielle, 2.

The smiling, willowy woman who stands in the entrance to a high-ceilinged, old-fashioned New York apartment with its comfortable deep couches and chairs is both harpsichordist and conductor. Ms. Norell will play this year in 20 concerts hopscotching the country. She has appeared with the Symphony Orchestras of San Francisco and Baltimore, with Canada's National Arts Center Orchestra; at the Newport, Aspen and Tanglewood festivals.

Last year, sponsored by the Creo Society, she celebrated Bach's tricentennial with a unique effort: 26 gala, different one-night programs played in private homes and museums and recorded by the American Public Radio Network. (And if you think Bach is too highbrow, Ms. Norell also fingers the harpsichord for the music of George Gershwin and ragtime composer Scott Joplin.)

Ms. Norrell's love affair with the harpsichord began one day in London, when she stepped inside the Fenton House Museum, to discover a treasure house of harpsichords with their light tinkling sounds, forerunners of the modern piano — an instrument Ms. Norell had studied but found "too muffled, mushy in sound."

She adds, "I was at a turning point in my career; not an amateur musician, but not well enough known as a pianist. I loved music but I felt frustrated."

Intrigued by the harpsichord, she took lessons "from a wonderful old gentleman at the Royal College of Music, Dr. Thornton T. Lofthouse." Ms. Norell had found her path.

Back in this country, she studied with Denise Restout, assistant to the late, famous Wanda Landowska, earned a masters degree from Juilliard and made her Carnegie Hall debut in 1970.

Married to operatic producer Ian Strasfogel — they met at Aspen where he was directing a production — Ms. Norell knows "getting started," with or without connections, is not easy.

"It's doing things little by little. I met other musicians at Juilliard; they asked me to play for them. And I was bold enough to ask for auditions. But it's a real struggle."

For four years, Ms. Norell had her own chamber group: the Baroque Music Masters. Eventually, the players went their separate ways. Says Ms. Norell, "I was pregnant with my first daughter, Daniella, and the amount of administration I had to do, organizing rehearsals, etc. was terribly time-consuming."

Ms. Norell, daughter of an engineer and a housewife, has always loved music. "My own mother was very musical. But she came from a very poor immigrant family. They could only afford piano lessons for one child."

Still for this woman who cuddles Daniella during the interview, music and children are a combination even more perfect than Bach and his harpsichord. In fact, one reason the 17th century great may be her favorite composer is because "he was so human...and the father of 20 children."

Chuckles Ms. Norell, "I have this image of his home as a musical day-care center; you know, papa at the keyboard and children crawling all about."

She adds, "It's funny. As a woman, until you have children, you think of work as a growth experience. Once you have a child, you are no longer totally self-centered because there is someone else making demands on you, someone who won't understand when you say, 'I can't because I have a concert.' "

After Daniella's birth, her own attitude changed. "I didn't care so much about being a tremendous success. My ambition was tempered by the demands my daughter made on me and by the delight I took in her...And having children awakened in me a kind of patience that I never had before."

Daniella has traveled everywhere with her mother. Her first trip abroad was to the Spoletto, Italy, festival when she was 9 months old. Now trips are curtailed by her schooling, limited to weekends and summer. "But," says her mother, "as soon as Gabrielle is older, we will all travel more."

Sometimes her husband goes with them; occasionally there is a baby nurse. But not often. "It's not too difficult to get baby sitters. Concert presenters are very kind about arranging things like that. When Daniella was just 2 and I took her to Newport, the festival director got his daughter to babysit."

For Ms. Norell, the choice is simple: "I don't want to be separated from my children."

And there is another dimension: the realization that any modern woman is a human being of many dimensions — wife, mother and, if desired, career woman as well.

Says Ms. Norell, "It is important for any woman to keep something that is totally her own — not as mother, not as wife, but just as a person."

Tom Hanks achieves star status

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — These days you can find Tom Hanks behind a desk in a spacious office at the Burbank Studio. He has achieved that symbol of a star's eminence: the development deal.

Quite a milestone for an actor who only a few years ago was appearing in such epics as "He Knows You're Alone" and "Mazes and Monsters."

What is a development deal? That's when a studio says to an actor or director: "Let's get together. Move into our building and we'll pay you to look for properties and develop scripts. If we like what comes out, we'll back the movie. If we don't, you can take it to another studio."

Hanks made his deal with Columbia Pictures, which had a similar contract with Sally Field, resulting in "Murphy's Romance." Hanks has no sure-fire project after a year, but he's still developing.

"Splash!" is the movie that made Tom Hanks a hot ticket. Since then he has had four releases with varying results, mostly bad.

" 'Bachelor Party' did OK," the actor said in an interview. " 'The Man With One Red Shoe' came and went fast. 'Volunteers' was a disappointment. 'The Money Pit' did better than it should have."

That's not exactly a sterling record, but Hanks pointed out the perils of making comedies, which is his field of endeavor. "You can make a dramatic movie, and even if it's nothing great, you don't get any adverse reaction. Show an audience a comedy and if they don't laugh, you're dead. There's nothing you can do about it. The word gets around, and people stay away.

Tom Hanks

"You can do interviews until you're blue in the face, you can take ads on the Goodyear blimp. Nothing you do is going to change the results," he said.

"But does that mean that the picture is a failure? Look at 'The Treasure of the Sierra Madre.' It lost money when it was first released," he said. " 'The Wizard of Oz' wasn't a moneymaker at first. Some of my pictures are getting a second life, so I don't feel so bad about them."

The latest Tom Hanks movie is TriStar Pictures "Nothing in Common" with a cast including Jackie Gleason, Eva Marie Saint, Hector Elizondo and Bess Armstrong. Hanks plays a Chicago advertising whiz whose life is disrupted when his parents separate. The director is Garry Marshall ("Young Doctors in Love," "The Flamingo Kid").

"Nothing in Common," said Hanks, required "my biggest investment as a human being of any role I've played so far." The film also allowed him to observe first-hand the legendary Gleason.

"There's no doubt that he is one of a kind, an idol in the literal sense as well as an idol of mine," said Hanks. "He represents not only his body of work but the whole history of television.

"Going in, I naturally wondered, 'Can I hold my own?' The intimidation factor was immense. But I found that Jackie — or I should say 'Mr. Gleason' — is not at all competitive. His only consideration is, 'What does this need? How can we give it a spark? Let's try to maximize this scene.' His way of working comes from his confidence, and it rubs off on you.

"He is not the kind of actor who can articulate the way he operates. I'm sure if he had to face 15,000 students at a university and advise them on acting, he'd say, 'Just go out there and learn it.'"

Tom Hanks' education in comedy came early. "I first realized I was funny was when I was 6 and I stood in line for handball," he said. "I took the stuff my older brother said and repeated it for my friends. They roared with laughter. My brother was very shy. I was never shy."

He continued his impromptu comedy while growing up in Oakland, Calif. At Sacramento State University he acted in plays for Vincent Dowling, who invited him to train at the Great Lakes Shakespeare Festival. "That was a great experience, where I could appear in comedies like 'The Taming of the Shrew' and 'Two Gentlemen of Verona,' " Hanks observed. "It's a great jump from working in theory and working in practice."

He moved on to New York where he did theater and schlocky movies. ABC brought him to Hollywood in 1980 for the short-lived but fondly remembered series "Bosom Buddies." Then, "Splash!"

The theme of "Nothing in Common" is not autobiographical, said Hanks, but he does know about separations: His parents divorced when he was young and remarried several times, and he's now separated himself. Hanks and actress Samantha Lewis have two children, 8 and 4.

Actress 'discovered' selling T-shirts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — How Karen Cellini came to be on ABC's "Dynasty" is probably more astonishing than any story she'll play on the hit prime-time soap opera.

Just a few weeks ago she was selling T-shirts at the Hard Rock Cafe in New York, and her theater appearances had been limited to a few productions far from Broadway. The "Dynasty" role is her first in television.

Miss Cellini was signed for the role of Amanda Carrington, the daughter of Blake Carrington (John Forsythe) and Alexis Carrington Colby (Joan Collins). She replaces Catherine Oxenberg, who was with the cast since 1984 but was dropped in a contract disagreement with the producers.

"I'd interviewed for a part on 'The Colbys' (the "Dynasty" spinoff series) and there were four of us they talked to and put on tape," Miss Cellini said. "I didn't get the role, but a girlfriend of mine got it. I went home and an hour later my agent called and told me to pack my bags. They wanted me to fly to Los Angeles to audition for 'Dynasty.' "

She arrived on a Thursday night, read on Friday, was immediately hired and went to work on Monday.

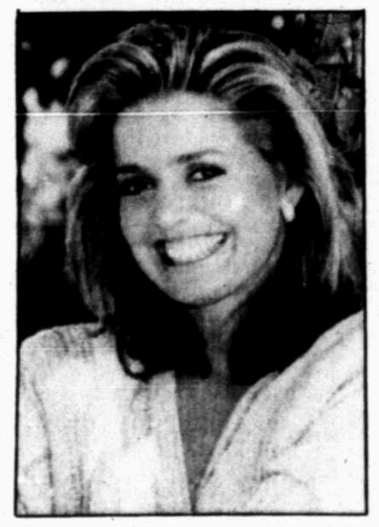

"I've never been on television before except for being a glorified extra on 'Kate & Allie.' This is my first job, that's how I look at it. I've done some small shows, some workshops. I've only been in the business for two years."

She added: "I have a character to play and I don't care if she's a new one or an old one. I'm going to breathe some life into it."

Miss Cellini went to work for the Hard Rock Cafe as a hostess a year ago. "I quit because I wasn't making enough money," she said. "Then they hired me as a salesperson in the T-shirt room. That was great, because I worked on commission. That helped me get on my feet and took a lot of pressure off of me.

"I continued to audition, but it kind of slowed down. I spent a lot of time developing myself as a person. A few weeks ago I felt balanced. I felt the time was right. I knew I was at a turning point and something important was going to happen in my life."

She said she was thinking of "just picking up and moving to an island and singing again" when the "Dynasty" job came along. "I thought of flying to some Caribbean island, walking into a piano bar and talking myself into a job. It's always been a goal of mine to be a great singer. I've been freeing myself up for that. This is part of the process. You just seem to be able to touch people more in the music business."

Karen Cellini

Miss Cellini grew up in Philadelphia, with an Italian father and an Irish mother. She has a twin sister, Kate, and two brothers.

"I left when I was 18 and moved to Miami to study fashion design for a year," she said. "I loathed the school. ...I did a lot of sailing, then I went back to Philadelphia and entered Temple University.

"I also spent six months in London on a university program. I did a lot of traveling across Europe with a backpack, too. I was so incredibly lonely. I couldn't wait to get back. I went there to get away from everyone. I went there to write. I kept a journal. I was just trying to find out who I was."

While in New York she helped start an acting workshop called the Fisherman's Rock Co. The workshop was run by Peter Kass. His wife was her acting coach and his son, Robert, became her agent.

She said of her "Dynasty" role, "My character is very warm and nice. I want people to see that's as cool and as good as being bad and evil. I think people will like watching someone who makes them feel good."

In the cliffhanger that ended last season, Amanda (played by Miss Oxenberg) was trapped in a Denver hotel fire.

Alaska town has largest collection of totem poles

Associated Press

It isn't on most travel brochures. But Saxman, Alaska, boasts a tourist attraction nonetheless, believed to be the largest collection of totem poles in the United States.

Recently, yet another totem pole was raised in Saxman, bringing the number in the collection to more than 70.

Such ceremonies aren't unusual in this small village. What made this one different was that it was open to the public — and that it re-enacted an ancient society's notion of opposites working together.

In this case, the opposites were two clans, the Ravens and the Eagles, both moieties of the Tlinget society, an Indian tribe from southeast Alaska.

The pole, which was raised by hand by the Eagle clan, is owned by the Ravens, though it has an eagle on it. Today, most totem poles are raised by machine because it takes so long to do it by hand.

Most people believe that these towering cedar monuments, deeply etched with the clan and tribal symbols of wolves, bears, eagles, ravens, killer whales and legendary figures, are idols or objects of worship. Actually, each pole tells a story or designates the clan or lineage of their owners or serve as a mortuary monument.

The Secretary of State Pole in Saxman was erected to commemorate the visit of William Henry Seward, who bought Alaska from Russia in 1867. When he visited the territory he was given royal treatment that the natives say was never acknowledged. Today, his totem pole is designated a "Shame Pole."

A shame pole is carved in an upside down manner. It remains thus until retribution is made, and is a reminder to the community of the misdeed or debt owed by a member of the native area.

One of the tallest totems in the area is dedicated to Abraham Lincoln. According to tradition, the taller the totem, the more important the commemoration.

There are three kinds of totem poles: shame, commemorative and mortuary.

Mortuary poles are carved out of respect for the deceased. In many cases, the deceased's ashes are enclosed in the pole as a memorial repository.

Besides starving one's children or saying no to one's husband, letting oneself go is the biggest sin a woman can commit. You hear the comment repeatedly, no matter the accomplishments of the woman. "Dr. Mary Fainsworth has eliminated dandruff, female mustaches, and has mated gorillas in captivity." But it's all destroyed with the one little comment: "It's too bad she let herself go."

The real reason Ronald Reagan became president was because Nancy hadn't let herself go. If only Betty Ford had her face lift sooner...Margaret Mead probably is the only woman who never has been criticized for letting herself go. Personally, I don't think Margaret ever cared, living on all those islands without a blow dryer.

[illegible] cellophane package of spoiling tomatoes. "Do you know they no longer like to surgically remove varicose veins, because they use them for repair in open-heart surgery."

The women looked at each other bewildered.

I tossed the tomatoes into my cart.

"Remember, yesterday's tomato is today's sauce." With these words I sailed off.

Standing next to the checkout counter, I leafed through a magazine featuring one of today's lithe beauties. Inside there was an article showing Hollywood mothers with their new infants, proving once again that beauty is inherited. Several of the babies already had cleavages, to say nothing of well-toned thighs and arms.

The new mommies were outfitted in the latest exercise gear showing the exercise routines that put them back into the wonderful shape they were in before they had their babies. Of course, they fail to show pictures of their nannies, or their housekeepers, or their cooks.

I was tempted. After all, I had my son more than seven years ago. Maybe it was time to get into shape.

No, I wasn't going to be seduced into buying another of those expensive magazines by promises of a wonderful body. I carefully placed the magazine back on the counter. And then something caught my eye, so I threw the magazine into my cart.

I could hardly wait to get home to read the never-before-published memoirs of Marilyn Monroe, "The Secret Cheesecake Recipes of MM." Now there was a woman.

The world is waiting.

'Howard' good for fowl mood

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

Howard, an advertising copywriter, comes home from work, a little tired and a little sad. He listens to the messages on his telephone answering machine, lights a cigar, pulls a cold beer out of the refrigerator and turns on the TV.

He just plans on resting his tailfeathers and propping up his webbed feet. After all, a duck's home is his castle...or pond...or something like that.

Abruptly, a bizarre cosmic event yanks him out of his apartment, sends him hurtling millions of miles through space and plops him down in a city that's inhabited by a weird race of hairless apes — a mysterious place known only as Cleveland.

The movie version of "Howard the Duck" doesn't have the satirical bite of the original off-the-wall Marvel comic book of the same name, but it does have its moments.

One of those moments is when Harold the yuppie duckie, finding himself in a scuzzy back alley on an alien planet, surveys the situation around him and sums it up this way, "Talk about a bad day."

Even after Howard is befriended by a young would-be rock star named Beverly, played by the very pretty Lea Thompson, things get worse for him. He is, after all, "trapped in a world he didn't create."

People, for some reason, have a difficult time accepting a three-foot-tall, cigar-chomping, talking duck.

As one character puts it, "Different lifestyles are one thing; different lifeforms are another."

He is even arrested for being — what else? — an "illegal alien."

Howard, who had apparently lost a lot of his fledging idealism even before being forcibly removed from his own planet, quickly becomes one really cynical duck.

His outlook momentarily brightens when he runs into a scientist, played by Jeffrey Jones, who has a space laser that could probably zap Howard right back to his duck world.

Unfortunately, there's a teensy-weensy little malfunction and instead of going home, Howard ends up having to save the earth — and, more importantly, the beauteous Beverly — from a very powerful and very evil demon from outer space.

This puts him in, you might say, a really fowl mood.

Never fear, Howard the hero can hold his own against the forces of darkness. He's a self-proclaimed "Master of Quack Fu" and can pilot light aircraft even though he believes that "If God had intended us to fly, he wouldn't have taken away our wings."

The executive producer of this general weirdness is George Lucas, which leads to a few inside jokes in the film. For example, in Howard's apartment we see a movie poster for "Breeders of the Lost Stork" featuring a duck wearing an Indiana Jones fedora; Lucas, of course, was producer of "Raiders of the Lost Ark." At another point, a character tells Howard to get in touch with his duck feelings, a takeoff on Obi-Wan Kenobi's advice to Luke Skywalker in Lucas' "Star Wars."

Even though Lucas' high-tech Industrial Light and Magic special effects company created the film's visual effects, Howard still looks a lot like a very short guy in a duck suit. In close-ups, though, he does have a highly expressive face — for a waterfowl, that is — which is a nice match for his dry wit.

Ms. Thompson is also very enjoyable, as is Jones (who has a tricky dual role of sorts) and Tim Robbins, who plays a nerdish but nice lab assistant.

Fans of the cult classic "Howard the Duck" comics will probably be disappointed that the movie lacks the comic book's sharply sarcastic wit, which somehow managed to hit everything from Anita Bryant to Moonies.

What the film version of "Howard the Duck" may lack in bite, though, it makes up in wisequacks.

"Howard the Duck," rated PG for sexual innuendo, strong language, a little cartoonish violence and one gross monster, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

'Heartburn' flawed but lovable

The one oddly serious flaw with "Heartburn" is that Jack Nicholson costars in it.

It's not that Nicholson is bad; the exact opposite is actually true. Nicholson delivers an absolutely terrific performance. The problem is that it's probably too good to go with the screenplay.

The movie virtually demands that we dislike Nicholson's character and but he's so charming that it's hard to do so.

"Heartburn" is adapted from Nora Ephron's novel of the same title. That book is generally believed to be a thinly fictionalized account of the writer's marriage to and divorce from journalist Carl Bernstein, who along with Bob Woodward helped break Watergate wide open.

In the film, Nicholson and Meryl Streep meet at a wedding, are immediately smitten with each other and soon get married.

It's not hard to see why they fall in love. Ms. Streep is luminous and funny. Nicholson is loving and lively.

Ms. Streep gives another one of her meticulously perfect performances, this time in a role that requires a thistle-light comic touch rather than exotic foreign accents.

Although the movie is strongly slanted to Ms. Streep's advantage, Nicholson deftly holds his own with his sparkling good humor.

Nicholson and Streep are so real and likable that by the midway point of the movie they seem like old friends of ours.

We see this wonderful couple wed, move to Washington, go through the humorous trials of renovating a dilapidated townhouse and of having children.

When the marriage suddenly begins to go sour, the movie becomes weirdly one-sided. Abruptly, good-old loving-husband Nicholson becomes a total jerk who is energetically cheating on his terrific wife for no reason at all.

It may very well be that, if "Heartburn" is really based on her life, Ms. Ephron simply has no clue at all as to why her marriage failed.

Whatever the case may be, it leaves the film hanging uneasily when Nicholson's vibrant presence is banished for having an affair that makes no sense whatsoever.

Despite this serious flaw, the movie is still well worth watching. All the actors are marvels, not just Ms. Streep and Nicholson, but also Catherine O'Hara as a enthusiastic gossip, Maureen Stapleton as a kind therapist, Stockard Channing and Richard Masur as friends of the couple and John Wood as, of all people, Alistair Cook.

There are many comic scenes beautifully staged by director Mike Nichols. Among the most memorable are Ms. Streep's case of cold feet (frostbitten feet might be a more accurate description) right before her wedding, the spontaneous medley of "baby" songs when the couple discovers they're going to have a child and, last but not least, a sly spoof of "Masterpiece Theatre."

It's a shame that a movie with all this talent and skill couldn't have given a better-balanced look at the decline and fall of its marriage, but it'd be hard to really hate this case of "Heartburn."

"Heartburn," rated R for strong language and adult themes, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

'Flight' makes a bumpy time trip

For most of us, Albert Einstein's famed Theory of Special Relativity — the idea that time passes slower for objects moving near the speed of light — is not exactly of vital day-to-day importance.

The closest thing to this time dilation an average West Texan is likely to encounter is the drive from Kermit to Jal, N.M. Thanks to the time zone change at the state border, drivers arrive in Jal about a half-hour before the time they left Kermit. It's a fascinating phenomenon, but not exactly of cosmic importance.

On a regular basis, though, perhaps the people who have gotten the most use from the special relativity theory have not been physicists or astronomers. Instead, it has probably been the makers of science fiction films.

Einstein's theory has been cropping up regularly in movies since at least the 1950s, usually just as a passing phrase used to explain something weird.

In Steven Spielberg's "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," for example, an assortment of long-lost people, none of whom have aged a day since their disappearance, wander out of a spaceship.

A scientist, gawking at them, exclaims, "Einstein was right!"

"Einstein was probably one of them," a fellow scientist replies cryptically.

The handy-dandy theory of relativity resurfaces again in a similar fashion in the new Disney film, "Flight of the Navigator."

The movie is first set in 1978, with a 12-year-old boy, played by Joey Cramer, taking a fall in the woods and hitting his head. He wakes up, apparently just a few minutes later, and runs home to find that his parents have moved, his little brother is now a teen-ager and the world has changed.

Cramer's character hasn't changed, though; eight years have passed but Joey is still only 12 and has no idea what happened.

Pretty soon a mysterious spaceship drifts into the picture and some not-too-nice NASA types begin lurking around.

The tone of "Flight" shifts dramatically from Cramer's spooky "Twilight Zone"-like situation through a smart-kid-versus-stupid-scientists scenario similar to "WarGames" to an odd but humorous conclusion apparently inspired by last summer's "Explorers."

This gives the film an uneven, bumpy feeling and makes its already shaky plot still less plausible.

The movie is a lively one, though, that kids should enjoy and, viewed with enough willing suspension of disbelief, can reasonably entertain an adult. It's good summertime family fare.

To paraphrase Einstein, "Flight of the Navigator" isn't subtle but at least it isn't malicious, either.

"Flight of the Navigator," rated PG for a little vulgar language and some situations that might scare young children, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

Hanks steals show from Gleason in 'Nothing'

The unlikely duo of yuppie comedian Tom Hanks and old-time funnyman Jackie Gleason star in the tragicomic "Nothing in Common."

Hanks plays an ambitious but lovable young ad executive in Chicago. He's shallow but friendly, fun but childish and fond of women but afraid of commitment.

Gleason plays his father, a man that people describe as "the last of the old-time salesmen."

Hanks returns from a tropical vacation to find that his mother, played by a gracefully aging Eva Marie Saint, has just left his father after 38 years of marriage.

Hanks' character sides with his mother, but maintains strained relations with his embittered and increasingly unhealthy father.

The younger actor easily steals the show from Gleason, but Hanks has a lot of help in pulling this off. He's given much more time onscreen since he's the commodity that will get kids to buy tickets to the movie.

Hanks is also given much more funny material in the screenplay. He has the lively, wisecracking character. Gleason on the other hand is playing a character much like that of Willy Loman from "Death of a Salesman."

"Nothing in Common" is being advertised as both a tragedy and a comedy, "just like life," and the movie aspires to the sort of mixture that made 1983's "Terms of Endearment" so successful.

While the humor works well — largely because of the pairing of the two substantial comic talents — the serious side of the film is not so well developed.

The reconciliation between father and son is quite believable but feels very rushed, as do all of the more sentimental scenes.

At the same time, there's not going to be enough humor to please people who wander into the theater thinking they're going to see another typical Hanks opus like "Bachelor Party" or "Splash."

Nevertheless, director Garry Marshall, along with Hanks and Gleason, deserve some credit for attempting something a little different, even if they aren't altogether successful.

"Nothing in Common" almost, but not quite, gets comedy and tragedy to share some common ground.

"Nothing in Common," rated PG for sexual innuendo, strong language and some adult situations, is now showing at the North Park Cinemas.

School teaches how to repair instrument dents

RED WING, Minn. (AP) — Pounding dents out of a tuba isn't much different from pounding dents out of cars, says Jack Sobotta. But you need a lighter touch on tubas.

Sobotta, former operator of an auto body shop in La Crosse, Wis., is among 67 students in an internationally recognized course in repairing musical instruments, which is taught at the Red Wing Vocational-Technical Institute.

Sobotta, 56, gave up the body business after he fractured disks in his back in 1980. "I was looking for work and walked into a friend's music store in La Crosse and asked if he had a job for me there. He told me if I'd go to school and learn to repair musical instruments he could use me," Sobotta said.

When he began working on instruments, he said, "the teacher laughed at me because I was hitting it too hard and making more dents than I was taking out."

Red Wing AVTI students can enroll in one of three programs for repairing band instruments, string instruments and electronic instruments and equipment.

The school is one of five in the country to offer band instrument repair, and employers are waiting to hire its graduates, said Gene Beckwith, who teaches the nine-month course.

"Last year we placed 100 percent of the people in our band program. There are far more jobs than students coming through," he said.

This year students from West Germany and Botswana, in southern Africa, are among 21 students in the band program. That's because there are few such schools in other countries, Beckwith said.

Moses Raiefala of Botswana will be responsible for repairing instruments for his country's military band when he returns there. His government is paying his expenses.

The student body is varied in more ways than geography. The program is unusual for a vocational school because fewer than 10 percent of the students are right out of high school, Beckwith said.

When he (Sobotta) began working on instruments, "the teacher laughed at me because I was hitting it too hard and making more dents than I was taking out."
— Jack Sobotta

"The average age in our classes is about 25 and it goes up to retirees." Many have college music degrees and have been performers, teachers or band directors, he said. "Quite a few had stars in their eyes and thought they could make a living as a musician," Beckwith said.

Said Dave Townsend, who teaches band instrument repair, "Most people who come here have had some experience on an instrument, and we recommend that they do because they actually have to learn to play the instruments." Sobotta, for instance, says he plays the guitar and is learning to play wind instruments.

The band instrument program does repair work for schools all over the country and gets instruments from manufacturers, Beckwith said.

Students must learn to take an old instrument and fabricate or rebuild parts that are no longer available.

Most band instruments that are used regularly have a life cycle of about 10 years, he said.

The school has done some design and research work on instrument maintenance and acoustic design for Yamaha International in Grand Rapids, Mich., Beckwith said.

When the McDonald's All American Band appeared at the Rose Bowl and Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade in New York City last year, two Red Wing AVTI students were on hand for emergency repairs.

The programs also offer short interim courses for college students who want to learn to repair their own instruments, Beckwith said.

The emphasis is on electronics in the program for electronic instruments and equipment, said teacher Del Kusilek, but most students have some kind of music background.

Mummers continues through August

The Summer Mummers's 38th season is underway at the historic Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

This year's melodrama, "Peril on the Pecos," was first performed by Midland Community Theatre in 1958. It has been seen twice since by area audiences, in 1964 and again in 1972.

Produced by Doug Heck, the melodrama is being directed by by Ron Hughes.

Cast members include Tim Rosborough and Albert London alternating as Randolph, the hero; Buster Tieman and Scooter Tilley as Oklahoma Oswald, the hero's sidekick; Terryl Dendy and Jodi McElligott play the hardy heroine Savannah Sally; Mona Gale Gibson and Janes Phares play Mississippi Maud, guardian of the heroine; Harry Harrison and Michael Trost play Philadelphia Phoster, the villain; and his sidekick Big Chief Nocheese of the Chickenheart Apaches is played by Bob Haskell and Brad Wilson.

The melodrama and olio will play Thursday, Friday and Saturday through Aug. 30. Hours are 7:30 p.m. Thursday and 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday. For reservations call 682-4111.

Fifty years ago, garlic yuppie food of American cooks

By TED LARSEN
King Features

Where would good food and cooking be without onions and garlic, these two cornerstones of flavor? I'll continue to use onions and especially garlic, and in prodigious quantities.

Strangely, garlic's general use in American cookery is rather new. It was the yuppie food of 50 years ago.

Garlic is a native of Central Asia, and for centuries it has been a staple of Asian, African and European cookery. The slaves who built the Egyptian pyramids popped garlic cloves for strength, as they toiled under the blistering sun. You could have found that construction site with your eyes closed.

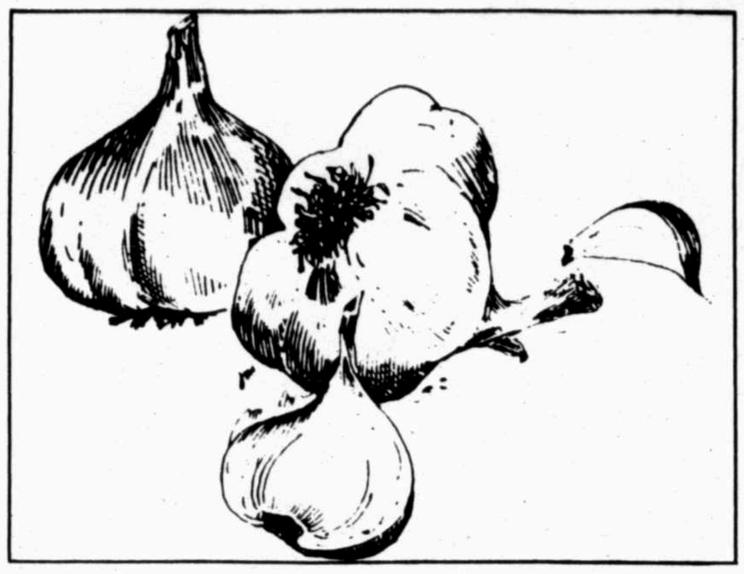

Medieval pilgrims generally carried a clove or two for plague protection. Even though early settlers discovered a wild garlic in the Colonies, the European variety that we know had an uphill battle to win wide acceptance.

For more than 200 years it was only popular around the Gulf of Mexico, where French, Spanish and African-Caribbean influences were strong. Elsewhere, garlic was the stuff of foreigners, popular only in ethnic neighborhoods of large cities.

American food writer Waverly Root had a significant observation. When he made France his home in 1927, only dirty stateside laborers proudly ate garlic. However, when he returned to these shores in 1940, garlic was the "in" seasoning. He noted that Americans relished garlic in everything except ice cream, a total turnaround in only 13 years.

The odor of garlic is a direct result of treatment. Rough handling will leave you gasping, while kid gloves results in a subtle, rich aroma. Locked in garlic tissue is an odorless sulphur-containing amino acid. When that tissue is disturbed by a knife cut, the compound mixes with an enzyme contained in garlic juice and the familiar garlic scent is formed by a variety of formidable-sounding chemicals, ammonia, pyruvic acid and diallyl disulfide. That's why a whole clove, slowly cooked undisturbed, is so mild, while crushed garlic is tremendously pungent.

Arleux, France, and Gilroy, Calif., both vie for the title of "garlic capital of the world." When buying garlic, look for the loose kind. The boxed variety are often stale and lacking zest. After all, fragrance is where it's at, even if your social life (and sweet breath) will suffer.

With pork producers responding to Americans' call for leaner porkers, this is both a flavorful and healthful recipe. It also screams "garlic!"

GARLIC ROAST PORK

5-7-pound pork roast
10 garlic cloves, peeled
1 tablespoon thyme
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
3 tablespoons unsalted butter

Preheat oven to 450F. Trim any excess fat from pork. Slice five of the garlic cloves into thin slivers; reserve the other five. With a small, sharp knife, make slits all over the roast and insert the garlic. Be sure to vary the depth, so the garlic will be well distributed.

Cream together the butter, thyme, salt and pepper. Using your fingers, spread this mixture all over the pork. Place on a rack and scatter reserved garlic around roasting pan. Place in oven and immediately reduce heat to 325F.

Cook at 25 minutes per pound, until internal temperature is 175F. Allow to stand 20 minutes before serving, so additional pan juices can accumulate. Serve with degreased pan juices, gravy or orange thyme sauce.

Unlike lamb, there is still a health danger from serving underdone pork. Make sure internal temperature is 175F.

Pork gravy: Remove all but 3 tablespoons of fat from strained pan juice. Mix juices with 3 tablespoons flour. Cook on medium heat until thick and smooth. Gradually whisk in 1½ cups water or milk. Stir until thickened. Season with salt and pepper and additional thyme. Serve.

Orange-thyme sauce: Heat 3 tablespoons water and dissolve 1½ tablespoons confectioners' sugar in it. Cook syrup. Add ¼ cup fresh orange juice, 1 teaspoon orange zest and ⅓ cup cider vinegar. Refrigerate. Make a day before using.

Try this unusual recipe at your next brunch. It's proof that garlic given gentle treatment will reward you with gentle flavor.

GARLIC ENGLISH MUFFINS

3 tablespoons vegetable oil
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
25 cloves garlic, unpeeled
Pepper, salt
1 cup dry white wine
4 English muffins, halved and toasted
4 tablespoons parsley, minced

Heat the oil and butter in a saute pan until foaming. Cook garlic cloves for 5 minutes. Add the salt and pepper along with the wine. Bring to a boil, reduce heat to simmer, cook, uncovered, for 15 minutes. Remove the simmered garlic cloves from their skin and place them in a mixing bowl. Using a fork, crush the cloves, one by one, until they form a paste.

Spread the garlic paste on the English muffins. Quickly return wine sauce in the saute pan to a boil and reduce by about half, or until slightly thickened. Pour sauce over muffins. Before serving, sprinkle with the reserved parsley.

Hints:

Try substituting a good, dry red for the white wine mentioned above. The result will be richer and more robust.

You can add equal portions of chopped chives, basil or tarragon with the parsley garnish at serving time.

The finished muffins can be dusted with grated cheese, such as Parmesan or Romano and placed briefly under a hot broiler to brown.

* * *

This zesty garlic-laced condiment is the French equivalent of Italian pesto sauce. Get ahead of the food fads and start using pistou before the crowds do.

PISTOU

1 teaspoon salt
3 cloves garlic, peeled
½ cup fresh basil, finely chopped
1 medium tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped
½ cup Parmesan cheese, grated
½ cup olive oil

In a blender, or with a knife blade, mash the garlic with salt, until pureed. Add the basil and process again. Add half the tomato and half the cheese and puree until smooth. Add the remaining tomato and cheese and continue mixing until all ingredients are totally pureed.

With the blender running, slowly add the oil until a creamy, mayonnaise-like consistency is reached. Cover and set aside.

Hints:

Pistou is best made at least one day ahead.

It can be used for flavoring all kinds of foods. Try it with pasta, soups, in sauces, on sandwiches or on roast meat.

Lawn can be thing of beauty or headache

By RACHEL COPE GOLDFARB
King Features

Gentle breezes dance through slender, wheatlike stalks, swaying with nature and giving one pause to enjoy the simple beauty all around. Unfortunately, this pastoral scene takes place regularly in our front yard and not in the expected wild grasses of rural acreage. It becomes necessary for us to leave and return to our home in darkness under heavy disguise to avoid the wrath of neighboring lawn devotees.

We never intend for the grass to get so long. Our best-laid plans for mowing are just too easily put aside for a spontaneous picnic, a Saturday afternoon Woody Allen film festival, yard-sale shopping, napping or making lists of things that need to be done around the house (never doing them).

And sometimes, with the mower tanked up and ready to rip, the rains arrive to prevent the job and encourage even more growth of the green stuff.

If mowing were the only yard job, our family might be able to manage. But that is a minuscule part of the warm-weather schedule of a homeowner.

When news of the first thaw hits the streets, yard fanatics in our neighborhood are galvanized for action with their fertilizer spreaders. They dump the powdery magic into their equipment and pace with it steadily in a pre-determined pattern to nourish the starving little grassroots.

Springtime growth sometimes indicates mistakes in the pattern configurations, as geomepric rectangles emerge in varying shadas of green, or the end of the fertilizer dump leaves a lush emerald spot right smack in the middle of the yard. They do not despair, though. They simply spend a months mortgage and 150 hours correcting the error.

Reseeding worn or thin areas of grass is another intricate process. The tiny seeds must be researched as to parentage, heritage and personality. Once they have been adopted by the family where they will put down roots, they must be deposited by hand, machine or in our case the grace of someone tired of stepping in the muddy spot near the porch.

Protecting the baby sprouts may require hammering stakes into the ground around which wrapped string indicates that one had better KEEP OUT! These restricted areas tend, however, to serve as magnets to unleashed dogs, hungry birds and children playing with frisbees.

Eliminating unwelcome growth is another task which saps the strength of an already weary yard slave. I see neighbors dart outside in their nightclothes before the dew has begun to burn off, to tweeze a dandelion from their meticulously groomed growing carpets.

I see them planting especially bred grass plugs amongst the other stuff to take over and choke out the weeds. I see them on chafed and reddened hands and knees, examining each blade for evidence of disease, unwelcome bugs or clover.

Our lawn problem seems terminal, they finally said. Weed growth, malnutrition and pest infestation has made our yard a cesspool of grassy maladies. We put out a contract on the sick stuff, deciding to call off every single blade in the interest of beauty and neighborhood unrest.

Once the ailing renegade grasses are eliminated, the good grass doctors will replace at with healthy licensed stock.

I really can't get too excited about the quality of our lawn. Sure, I enjoy walking barefoot through a thick, cool patch of grass or smelling the sweetness of fresh mowing But if it's mostly some shade of green, and it's short enough to find the dog running through it, then that grass is OK by me.

Actually, after receiving the bill from the lawn experts, I'm considering cementing in the whole thing and painting it green.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon
Monday, August 11, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The new responsibilities you take on will put you in the catbird seat for years to come. Bursts of energy give you the competitive edge in October and again in April. You score the biggest wins when you base decisions on logic, not emotion. Avoid negative people and situations. Love and a stable home life inspire you.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actor Lloyd Nolan, Montreal Expos pitcher Bryn Smith, TV host Mike Douglas, Arlene Dahl, columnist Carl Rowan, author Alex Haley, and financier-art collector Joseph Hirschhorn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good time to overhaul business procedures. You cannot afford to ignore new technology. Follow up on a tip, but do not invest money you cannot afford to lose.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A streak of good luck helps you move toward a career goal. Groom yourself for a leadership position. A friendship may be slowly turning into a romance. A child has an exciting idea.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your versatility becomes a big asset at work. Get the best professional advice available before attacking a credit or money problem. Establish a firmer foundation for a relationship.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Make a gesture of love toward a sibling. Romance could make concentration difficult. Look to an overseas partner for support. Your conscience should be clear. Quit blaming yourself for an honest mistake.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will be happier once you move into a position where you can make independent judgments. An emotional flap will soon pass. Your financial resources get an unexpected boost from a special source.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A gathering of old chums boosts your spirits. Devote more attention to a relationship that seems to be on shaky ground. Open new lines of communication. Love flourishes in an atmosphere of trust.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money arrives from someone at a distance. Better late than never! Say "no" to a relationship you know will never work. An older member of the opposite sex arouses your interest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travel perks up what might have been a dull month. You make new gains at school or work when you give free rein to your imagination. Try to spend more time outdoors.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A partner may have trouble keeping up with you today. Computer technology captures your attention. You could find a way to expand business and increase your personal income.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cultivate individuals who share your interest in humanity and social progress. Your artistic talents come to the fore. A childhood dream could become reality. Guard against deception. Choose allies with care!

AQUARIUS (Feb. 19-March 20): Your goals seem to fit in well with a scheme proposed by another. A partnership may not be very productive until the fall. Group activities hold special appeal. Welcome a new romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can move ahead with confidence now, making a fresh start. Put a past professional disappointment out of your mind. You perform better under pressure than you anticipated.

Theater school registration slated

Registration for Fall Theatre School at Midland Community Theatre will be held Sept. 2-12 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Classes will be available for students in grades 1 through 12 as well as classes for Pickwick Players, MCT's youth performing troupe. Classes in a wide variety of artistic disciplines are held one day a week at the theater.

Each class will be assigned a short play, chosen specifically for the talents of the students in that class, to work on. The theater hopes to present an evening of recital plays at the end of the semester.

Michael Spicer, MCT's associate director, is in charge of the Theatre School and the Pickwick Players. For more information call him at Theatre Midland's business office, 682-2544.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Fleck exhibit to close at Museum of Southwest

The exhibit "Joseph Fleck: An Early Taos Painter" closes today at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Organized by the Museum of Fine Arts, Museum of New Mexico, this exhibition will travel to seven museums across the Southwest.

Fleck was born in Austria in 1892. He received academic training at the royal Academy of fine Arts, Vienna, and early in his career received recognition for his artistic abilities. Due to the poor economic conditions of post World War I Europe, Fleck left Austria and came to the United States to pursue his artistic ambitions.

Initially settling in Kansas City, Mo., Fleck worked as a chief designer at a Tiffany stained glass workshop, supplementing his income with portrait commissions. He remained in Kansas City for two years until 1924, when he visited an exhibition of the taos Society Artists. As a result of this experience, Fleck moved to Taos and made his permanent residence there.

With the exception of two painting trips to Europe in 1926 and 1931, Taos was Fleck's home and inspiration until 1942, when he decided to accept the position of Artist-in-Residence at the University of Kansas.

Although he benefited intellectually from the university atmosphere, and especially from his friendship witht the well-known regionalist painter, thomas Hart Benton, Fleck longed for Taos and returned there in 1946.

This exhibition provides a comprehensive overview of Fleck's development as an artist and focuses on his interaction with the New Mexico landscape and native inhabitants.

Hours at the museum are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge to view any of the exhibits at the museum.

Ballet workshop planned

Ballet Midland's Summer Workshop Presentation will be held at 8 p.m. Friday at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at Midland College.

Dancers from levels four and five will present three works, including, Pas de Quartre, a traditional romantic ballet choreographed by Jules Perrot and staged by Susan Clark; "Kraken," a contemporary jazz ballet choreographed by Anthony Ferro, Ballet Midland's artistic director; and "Centennial Marches," choreographed by Ferro and first performed for Midland's 100th anniversary at the opening of Centennial Plaza last year. Ballet Midland is presenting this again as a sesquencentennial tribute to Texas.

Friday's presentation is the culmination of an intensive five-week summer workshop for local dancers instructed by Susan Clark, principal dancer with the Atlanta Ballet and guest artist for Ballet Midland, and Robert Barnett, artistic director of the Atlanta Ballet.

Admission is free, and Ballet Midland brochures will be available for students interested in fall registration.

Pickwicks to do 'Alice'

Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players will produce Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland" Thursday through Saturday in the Davis Theatre One, Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The Pickwick Players are MCT's youth performing troupe. This production, the second classic produced by the Pickwick Players this summer, will bring to the stage such beloved characters are the Mad Hatter and the March Hare, the White Rabbit, the Cheshire Cat, the Queen of Hearts and, of course, Alice. Alice's adventure will take young audiences to the Tea Party, the croquet match and the other delightful adventures of Wonder in the fantastical land.

Due to the popularity of the Pickwick's first summer show "Winnie the Pooh," two performances will be staged Friday. Performance times are 1:30 p.m. Thursday, 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. Saturday. Those interested in attending need to make their reservations so the theater can see if additional performances are needed. For reservations call 682-4111.

Avon salesman really is a man

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — When Avon comes calling on folks in northeast Cedar Rapids, it may not be a lady who rings the doorbell.

It could well be Bruce Carter, a door-to-door Avon salesman for four years who quit his longtime meatpacking job last year to go into the business full time.

Not only is Carter, 33, something of a rarity in what has traditionally been women's work, but he's proved that he can push cosmetics with the best of them, says his boss.

"Bruce is the first really successful man I've had in 13 years as district manager," Bonnie Jerow said. "I've had others — mostly men who sold products at work — but usually they haven't worked out."

Carter admits it's an unusual line for a man, but says stereotypes can be deceiving. "One of the first women I called on was so beautiful she could have been a model," he said. "But she was a construction worker."

DALLAS (AP) — Down in the lowlands east of Dallas, goats get going when the grass gets high.

Summer heat and oozing sludge produce lagoon grass that swarms up and swallows tractors at a city water plant.

To keep the grounds groomed, seven Spanish goats romp and chomp across 67 acres that previously demanded twice-monthly mowings by seven men and a convoy of cutting machines.

Museum hosts film series

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum is hosting a special children's series during August. In conjunction with the Ector County Library, the museum will show a well-known, full length feature, adapted from a literary classic at 1:30 p.m. Tuesdays.

Films in the series include "Incredible Journey," by Disney, Tuesday; "The Hobbit," an animated film classic about Bilbo Baggins by J.R.R. Tolkien; and "Swiss Family Robinson," by Disney, Aug. 26.

The film series will be held in the Community Room at the Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St. Doors open at 1 p.m. Admission is by a $1 donation and will be limited to the first 85 children and their parents.

No reservations will be accepted. People are encouraged to come early for a good seat.

Acting seminar slated

Laird Mayhew, acting coach and casting director from Dallas, will be in Midland Aug. 23 and 24 for a two-day acting seminar and workshop, "Breakthrough IV."

This workshop is for the beginner with no camera experience who is interesed in breaking into the film business and for the more experienced film actor.

"The purpose of this workshop is to bring the same opportunity offered in Dallas to Midland," says Robin Lane of the Midland-based Permian Talent. "We also want to establish the Permian Basin as a talent base and to offer training to all interested actors."

Cost is $150 and must be received by Thursday. Enrollment is limited to 16 students. Those attending must be at least 11 years old. Emphasis will be on television and film acting.

For more information call 697-1044 or mail payment to Permian Talent, 4515 Robin Lane, Midland, 79707.

Seay's work at cafe

ODESSA — Charlotte Seay is showing her artwork this month in the Gallery at Peach's Eigth Street Cafe, 716 W. Eigth St., Odessa.

The exhibit includes a selection of oil painted wall reliefs and oil paintings as well as recent works in watercolor.

Mrs. Seay, a Midland resident for 36 years, has studied with Maisi Sirois, Georgetown; John Carter, Texas' House of Representatives' "State artist;" Dr. Charles Stewart, formerly head of the fine arts department at Midland College; and Warren Taylor, art instructor at MC. Her paintings have been included in exhibits at the McCormick Gallery, MC, Midland Arts Association's spring art shows, Celebration of the Arts and The Hummingbird Gallery, Marble Falls. Most recently she exhibited her works at the Midland-Odessa Music Festival.

Peach's Eigth Street Cafe is open for lunch Tuesday through Friday and, for dinner, Tuesday through Saturday.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—Sometimes I am not sure whether I should double or overcall with certain holdings. For example, suppose my right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond and I hold:

♠AJ9 ♡AK1054 ♦Q8742

Is it correct to double or overcall one heart? — L.D., Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A.—I understand your problem. If you double and partner responds one spade or one no trump, you can't be sure that you are in the right contract. And certainly, you aren't strong enough to double and then bid two hearts should partner make an unwelcome response.

The only way to avoid that problem is to overcall one heart. Note that, unless you have a specific way to show hearts and clubs over a one diamond opening bid, not even an artificial overcall will help on this one.

Let's strengthen the hand slightly:

♠AJ9 ♡AKJ106 ♦K10542

Now your hand is good enough to double and then bid hearts should partner respond one spade or one no trump.

Q.—In "Goren's New Bridge Complete" you recommend limit raises of partner's major-suit opening bid and three no trump as your forcing raise of the major. My partner insists it is better to use two no trump as the forcing raise. What is your objection to that? — B.N., Cambridge, Mass.

A.—Very little, technically. Using two no trump as the forcing response to a major was an idea of the late Oswald Jacoby. Opener is then required to show a singleton, if he has one.

I do not mind so much losing the use of two no trump as a natural bid. Since the method is employed in conjunction with forcing one no trump responses, you would show a balanced 13-15 points by first bidding one no trump, then jumping to three no trump over partner's rebid. But I can see problems with two different meanings for a two no trump response—one over a minor suit, the other over a major.

Its proponents claim this method is more accurate in slam bidding. That is possibly so. Its drawback is it pinpoints shortness for a possible forcing defense, and in some circumstances can tell the defenders which tricks to try to cash, since they know whether or not opener has a singleton in a particular suit.
