Hopes For Early Coal Pact Fade

Canal Tally 'Too Close To Call'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Just four days before the first of the Panama Canal treaties comes to a vote, the count is much too close to call and both sides are playing a game of names and numbers.

President Carter's stature as a leader, U.S. relations with Latin America and the re-election chances of several senators are all at stake.

And the final, major push for victory is under way as opponents and proponents near the fateful rollcall on the socalled neutrality pact — first of the two-part canal agreement — scheduled for no later than 4 p.m. Thursday.

"Eyeball Appeals"

Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale are making "eyeball" appeals for ratification at private meetings in the White House Oval Office and at intimate lunches in the Capitol.

Sens. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., Robert Griffin, R-Mich., and their anti-treaty allies are working to nail down the last few votes that would assure them the strength to reject the pact.

They are also unleashing a radio blitz aimed at the handful of "undecided" senators they consider most likely to jocn them, and those they feel would be hurt most by not signing up.

Guarantees Defense Rights

The neutrality treaty, as amended by the Senate Friday, guarantees U.S. defense rights in the waterway beginning in 2000, when the United States cedes it to Panama.

The second treaty, known as the Panama Canal treaty, sets out conditions for transfer of control and operation of the canal in the period until 2000.

It will not be voted on until sometime in April — and it has virtually no chance of passage unless the neutrality act first wins approval.

Approval of each pact requires a two-thirds majority — a minimum of 67 if all senators vote. Barring illness, all are expected to.

In the names and numbers game that has gone on for weeks, each side agrees on one thing: Neither has nailed down the number it needs to prevail, but both are very close.

Tight Vote Seen

"We don't have them yet," an administration official said. "We still believe we're going to make it, but it's going to be very tight."

Both Sides Claiming 'Progress'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for the striking United Mine Workers and the coal industry recessed their main contract talks Sunday, eliminating hopes for a tentative contract settlement before a back-to-work court order takes full effect today.

Officials on both sides of the 97-day walkout stressed that the recess did not indicate a breakdown of the talks, and said bargainers would continue to meet in small groups to discuss remaining issues.

But with federal marhals completing efforts to serve back-to-work orders in the coalfields, they conceded that no agreement appeared imminent in the long dispute.

"There's not going to be anything (for you) to hang around for today," top industry bargainer Nicholas T. Camicia told reporters as he left the hotel where talks were being held.

UMW president Arnold Miller also said it was not possible to predict the outcome of the talks.

Both sides stressed that they were making progress in the latest round of talks, which began Friday without the assistance of federal mediators.

Revised Contract Offered

Camicia confirmed that the industry had offered a revised contract proposal that was being used as the basis for further negotiations.

"It's our proposal they're looking at," he said.

"We're getting down to the brass tacks," said Camicia.

He added, "We still have a lot of work to do" before reaching a settlement, but said he was encouraged by the talks.

An industry spokesman who declined to be identified said, "at some point you have to start flushing ideas out, and that takes time."

Miller said, "I think we're making progress," but he refused to speculate on whether a settlement could come within a few days.

Breakdown Still Possible

"We could go two, three days and make significant progress and then have a breakdown," Miller said. " ... You don't really know till you get down toward the end."

But top administration official expressed optimism on Sunday about the talks.

Meanwhile, U.S. marshals continued serving Taft-Hartley Act back-to-work orders on local union officials as coal operators prepared for a new work week.

UMW miners planned local meetings to discuss the court order.

"I'm just going to read them the injunction and advise them to go back to work," said Robert Carter, a UMW official in Pikeville, Ky.

"From what membership I've talked to, I don't think they'll go back to work," he said.

The latest round of talks were being conducted without government mediators.

Differences Narrowing

Reports that negotiating differences were narrowing came from both sides of the bargaining table.

"We've made some progress ... on everything, on the contract," said top industry bargainer Nicholas T. Camicia

TROOP BUILDUP BARED

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A South African soldier captured by black nationalist guerrillas in South-West Africa says his army has 55,000 troops there aided by European mercenaries, a newspaper reported Sunday. The soldier was said to be 22-year-old Johan van der Mescht.

Begin Vows To Avenge Attack

TELF AVIV, Israel (UPI) — A grim Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Sunday Israel will never forget the bloody Palestinian terrorist attack on a busload of picknickers that left 37 dead and 85 injured and vowed it would be avenged.

Begin said it proved again the mortal danger of a Palestinian state — an indication Israel will harden its stance in the Middle East peace talks.

In Beirut, the Palestine Liberation Organization said Sunday its Saturday attack — the most deadly in Israeli history — was a strike at Egyptian-Israeli peace moves and at Israeli settlement policy on occupied Arab lands.

The PLO said the raid was commanded by a 25-year old Palestinian woman, Dalal al Mughrabi. She was killed, Begin said.

As he spoke solemnly to a nationally televised news conference in Jerusalem, soldiers and police launched the biggest manhunt in Israel's 30-year history for three of the 11 terrorists thought to have fled the scene of the carnage and taken refuge in the city's populous northern suburbs.

Reprisal Raid Hinted

Begin and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman hinted at the possibility of a reprisal raid against guerrillas based in south Lebanon. The prime minister said the Arab death squad embarked from Lebanon on a mission designed to seize hostages in exchange for terrorists held in Israeli jails.

Begin was to have joined Weizman in the United States Sunday for talks this week with President Carter but postponed his trip until next week. No new date has been set.

The 11 terrorists, landing on the coast 35 miles north of Tel Aviv in two French-made Zodiak rubber dinghies, killed 37 persons and wounded 85 others, a number of them seriously.

American Among Dead

Among the dead was an American woman free-lance photographer from New York City whose name was witheld pending notification of next of kin. One policeman was killed and nine others were among the wounded.

Begin said six guerrillas were killed, two were captured and three others fled.

The terrorists, according to Begin and the police, attacked a private car, a taxi, two buses and fired on other private cars from one of the commandeered buses in a 30-mile spree of violence as it sped down the coastal highway toward Tel Aviv.

They never got to the city and were stopped at a police roadblock near the Tel Aviv Country club, about six miles north of the city. There, the terrorists fought a 10-minute battle alongside the hijacked bus. The bus exploded and burst into towering flames after a terrorist grenade was hurled at it.

Some of the people inside the bus — most of them bus company employes returning from a day's outing to the stalagmite caves near Jerusalem — burned to death where they sat, their arms bound to the seats with rope.

Witnesses said the cruelest terrorists were the two women in the squad, refusing to allow the wounded to leave. The other gunmen traded cigarettes with the hostages and seemed drunk with success before the shootout.

Dogs and helicopters aided the search for the escaped terrorists. The searchers set up headquarters at the country club.

"This is the atrocity perpetrated upon our people yesterday," Begin, his speech halting, told reporters after detailing the massacre.

"We shall not forget.

"There was no need of this outrage to understand that a Palestinian state would be a mortal danger to our nation and our people."

Moisture Prospects Increase Over Area

STRONG winds blasted West Texas Sunday afternoon, prompting travelers' advisories as visibilities across the region were reduced to near zero because of blowing dust, but by Sunday night light rain turned the grit into a muddy shower.

Southerly winds raked the Lubbock area, at one point reaching 45 mph, and gusting well above 30 mph most of Sunday afternoon. By late Sunday, though, light rains began to settle the flying dust.

Though conditions at Lubbock International Airport were somewhat restricted, a spokesman said no major difficulties in landings or takeoffs were experienced Sunday.

Sunday's blustering winds preceded a Pacific cold front that moved into the South Plains region late Sunday and early today. Instability accompanying the front produced the light, but steady rain across the city.

Late Sunday, showers and thunderstorms also were scattered throughout the rest of the Panhandle. At 7 p.m. Sunday, thundershowers were reported in Amarillo and along a line south of Brownfield to southeast of Plainview.

At 4:30 p.m. Sunday, a light thundershower moved across Dalhart with wind speeds clocked at 66 mph.

National Weather Service forecasters say there is a 20 percent chance of rain in the Lubbock area again today. Today's high temperature should be in the low 60s, with the low reading expected in the low 30s.

And northwesterly winds at 20-30 mph again are expected to rake the South Plains, increasing chances of a rerun of Sunday's duststorms.

Across the remainder of the state Sunday, cloudy skies were the rule and temperatures were mostly in the 60 and 70-degree ranges.

As the cold front moved across the western part of the nation into Texas Sunday, it triggered thunderstorms and snow flurries in the mountainous regions of western New Mexico. Storm warnings were issued for the western and northern mountains of that state, and a winter storm watch was posted for the central highlands and south central mountains through today.

Similar watches also were issued through today for portions of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota and Michigan.

Skiers Buried By Avalanche

LES MOSSES, Switzerland (AP) — An avalanche rumbled down mountain slopes near this village in western Switzerland Sunday, burying at least 14 skiers under a deep blanket of snow, authorities announced.

First reports said between 15 and 60 skiers might have been trapped. Police later said they knew of only 14 persons missing but they acknowledged there could be more.

"It was a huge, horrible monster," a police spokesman said. "We can safely say that we are looking for 14 victims, seven Swiss and the rest French, but there may be more."

He said two skiers were quickly rescued but "there are others in there somewhere — we just don't know how many or where."

The avalanche broke loose as hundreds of weekend skiers were on the slopes to enjoy one of the warmest days of the season. Witnesses said the snow thundered down the slopes onto the upper part of a ski lift packed with skiers, sweeping them off balance and burying them beneath the snow.

'Resurrection Service' Fails To Revive Woman

REEDS SPRING, Mo. (AP) — After praying over a freezer for more than two hours, a preacher admitted Sunday that he had failed to raise his mother from the dead.

Evangelist Daniel Aaron Rogers and the three other preachers he had recruited to assist him in the "resurrection service" said they had "tried everything Jesus told us to do, and we don't know what went wrong."

Gladys Rogers, 80, died Feb. 2 in Harrison, Ark., 25 miles south of this southwest Missouri town. Rogers packed her body in dry ice for six days, then had it placed in the freezer. It took him more than a month to win a permit to have the body removed from Arkansas to the Clarkson Mortuary here.

Reeds Spring was the only place he could find a mortician who would go along with his plan.

"Jesus commanded us to preach the gospel, heal the sick, raise the dead," said Rogers, when asked his motive.

He had said his mother would rise from the dead and give a sign that "the end of this age" is near.

Rogers arranged for gospel singers from St. Louis to lead singing in an adjoining chapel as he and his fellow preachers prayed for the resurrection to occur in a combination office and visiting room, closed off from the chapel, where the freezer was powered by a portable generator.

About 250 persons — nearly matching this town's population of 280 — waited in the chapel as the men emerged to preach, pray and, at one point, take two members of the congregation into the room.

J.T. Williams, an evangelist from Pea Ridge, Ark., walked from the prayer room to tell the congregation the ceremony was not going well.

"We have tried everything Jesus told us to do, and we don't know what is wrong," Williams said. "She has not risen from the dead."

About 55 minutes later, Rogers came

Absentee Voting Beginning Today

LUBBOCKITES who won't be around to cast ballots in the city's April 1 city council-school board elections may cast absentee ballots beginning today.

Absentee voting will continue through March 28 in the City Hall at 916 Texas Ave. for the council races and at the Lubbock Independent School District administration building at 1628 19th St. for the school elections.

Both elections will be using punch-card voting devices for their elections this year, and the April 1 elections will be combined with the city and school district using the same voting boxes, election judges and ballots.

Ward System Pros, Cons Aired In Forum With Candidates

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PROS AND CONS of a ward system in Lubbock and various campaign issues were aired Sunday by nine of the 10 candidates seeking city council positions.

In a forum sponsored by the Overton South and UNIT neighborhood associations, the ward system question drew mixed reactions. But none of the candidates present disagreed about major issues facing the city — stepped-up police enforcement programs and better zoning and code enforcement.

About 60 persons attended the afternoon meeting.

Mayoral Candidates Differ

Mayoral candidates in the April 1 municipal elections espoused radically differing views on changing the current at-large election system.

Robert Kizer warned that a federally-mandated change is inevitable and argued that the city must plan immediately for the change.

"We'd better plan now and not wait for the feds (federal government) to hit us over the head with it," he said. Kizer also suggested expansion of the city council from five members to nine members. Such a change, he said, would mean better representation for all citizens.

One of his opponents, Leland Kelly, said, "We definitely need a change." A stronger city government is necessary, he said.

James Marshall, third of the four mayoral contestants, suggested a compromise in the election system. An at-large system should be implemented for 10 years and then changed to a ward system for a decade, he said.

Marshall said that each system has its problems and abuses. By alternating the two, he explained, the drawbacks could be offset and power distribution balanced.

Dirk West, another mayoral candidate, was not present at the meeting, a fact Kizer acknowledged with the gibe that West "plans to run a name campaign. I'd like to see him run an issue campaign."

The two contestants for the Place 1 council seat differed in their views on a ward system.

Mike Stevens said he believes a change is an inevitable eventuality. The federal government "will have the city split up like a pie," he predicted.

Although he agreed a change seems unavoidable, Alan Henry said he is "not ready to roll over and play dead" with the federal government. "We must still fight," he said, adding that he would oppose "representation without at-large voting."

Henry said he is not opposed especially to instituting geographical requirements though.

One of the Place 3 candidates, M.J. "Bud" Aderton, agreed with the inevitability of a new system, saying he does not "dispute that the ward system will be forced in the future."

But, he added, he does not believe it will be better. He said he believes council members should have the interests of the entire city at heart when making their decisions.

Glad Norman, another Place 3 aspirant, agreed. He, too, espoused a nine-member council but said he does not agree with the ward system."

Large Agenda Confronts State Democratic Leader Committee

WACO (AP) — Texas Democratic leaders meet here today to decide if the long-time controversy over horse race betting will appear again on May 6 Democratic ballots.

Texas Republicans have already approved a primary referendum on legalized parimutuel gambling for their ballot.

Texas voters have rejected horse race betting three times since 1968, but by a diminishing margin each time. It lost by only two percent in 1974, compared to a 10.8 percent whipping in 1968 and seven percent in 1972.

Actually, the State Democratic Executive Committee has little choice in the matter since they have in hand petitions with nearly 100,000 signatures demanding the non-binding voter poll. State law says referendums will be placed on the ballots if asked by at least 75,000 qualified voters.

Also on the SDEC agenda Monday is the certification of all the Democratic candidates in the local and statewide primary contests. Twelve appeals are before the committee.

Committee members also will discuss the date and site of the September state convention. No invitations have been received so far from cities who want the convention.

Despite a challenge from State Republican Chairman Ray Barnhart, there was no indication the Monday session of Democratic leaders would take up the touchy Panama Canal issue. Barnhart said last week that the state GOP committee has approved two resolutions opposing the Panama treaties. He challenged the state Democratic committee to take a stand.

The drive to put horse race betting on the ballot has been backed by the Texas Horseracing Association, the Texas Thoroughbred Breeders Association and the Texas Quarter Horse Association. It is opposed mainly by the Christian Life Commission of the Baptist Convention of Texas.

Supporters say if voters indicate approval of legalized parimutual betting, the bill that will be presented the 1979 Legislature would call for non-profit tracks where 85 percent of the money bet would be returned to bettors. Five percent would go directly to the state treasury as taxes, five percent would go to horse owners in the form of purses offered at the races, and five percent would go to the track for operation, maintenance and to pay back capital investment.

"Out of each $2 bet, $1.70 is returned to the bettors," said Charles Hancock, Caldwell banker and secretary-treasurer of the Texas Horseracing Association. "Ten cents goes to the state, 10 cents to the track and 10 cents to the competitors — the horses and their owners."

If the parimutuel betting bill passes the legislature and is signed by the governor, then each county would have the option of holding another election to see if it would be adopted for that county.

Supporters estimate passage of the bill would produce $30 million in new state taxes the first year and $50 million a year afterwards.

Few Seen Returning To Mines

AGES, Ky. (AP) — The miners sitting around Junior Deaton's store say that even if they wanted to go back to work it wouldn't be very easy after three months of loafing.

"Look at this," said one, rubbing a flannel-covered stomach protruding over his belt. "I've got to get that back in shape before I can go back to work."

The other men laugh and rub their bellies. The meaning is clear: they're not going back to the mine under the Taft-Hartley injunction.

When they're not striking, most of the men work at the Eastover Mine, about a quarter-mile down the road in Brookside.

Brookside was the site of a 13-month Upited Mine Workers organizing strike that ended in 1974. An Academy Award-winning documentary — "Harlan County USA" — was made about the strike.

This time, they "have no problem with the Eastover Mining Co." The problem, they say, is the lack of a "good contract we can live with."

"I don't think nobody from Brookside wants to go back," says Frank Allen, a striking Eastover miner who lives in Ages. "There's no reason to go back. Everybody here agrees with that. Just ask them."

Allen starts getting the attention of the half-dozen miners engaged in a conversation in a corner of the store. "Are you going back to work?" There's agreement around the circle of men. No, they're not going back.

Union officials in Washington are predicting that about half the miners will return under Taft-Hartley, but no one here owns up to such intentions.

Martin Carmack, who's 74 and spent 40 years in Bell and Harlan County mines, won't say if miners should go back to work under Taft-Hartley orders, but instead volunteers this: "If you want to know my opinion on who caused this, it's (UMW president) Arnold Miller."

Another retired miner, Lovell Andrews, 59, offers basically the same assessment: "It looks to me like the president is afraid of those big coal companies."

The two retirees also agree that court injunctions won't get many miners back on the job. "They won't go back to work," says Andrews. "And if they try somebody's going to get killed. If they have a picket line, to stop or discourage miners who come to the mine to work, us old fellows will be out on that picket line. Tuesday or Wednesday is when the trouble will start."

Carmack saw Taft-Hartley invoked unsuccessfully twice before. He believes it won't work this time either.

"It would be different if they seized the mines," he says. "Harry Truman did that (in 1948) and they hung (American) flags from the tipples and we went back to work, but not under Taft-Hartley."

Catholic Schools Get More Blacks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The percentage of ethnic minority students going to Roman Catholic parochial schools increased sharply last year, while overall attendance dropped, the National Catholic Educational Association said Sunday.

The figures were contained in the association's 1978 edition of Catholic Schools in America.

According to the study, the percentage of ethnic minority students enrolledin Catholic elementary and secondary schools over the past six years has increased from 10.8 percent to 16 percent.

Over the same period, the percentage of black students has increased from 5.1 percent to 7.6 percent in Catholic elementary schools and from 3.8 percent to 5.8 percent in secondary schools.

The number of Spanish surnamed students increased from 5 per cent to 7.5 percent.

"Despite the loss of more than 1 million students since 1970-71," the study said, "Catholic schools enrolled about 67,000 more ethnic minority students in 1976-77 than they did then."

The overall decline in the number of students — 62,000 in elementary schools and 14,000 in secondary schools — was attributed to the general decline in the number of school age students.

"... there are indications that non-public schools may maintain present enrollment levels even in the face of continued public school declines due to fewer school age children," the study said. Coupled with a loss of eight schools last year and the general enrollment decline, the figures on ethnic and minority enrollment are sure to play a prominent part in the current debate over educational funding.

Congress is currently considering different proposals for aiding the nation's financially hard-pressed educational systems, including a bill sponsored by Sens. Robert Packwood, ROre., and Daniel Moynihan, DN.Y., that would provide a tuition tax credit at all levels of education, including the elementary and secondary.

The Packwood-Moynihan bill has been strongly opposed by the Carter administration and by church-state separatists.

Supporters of the legislation, however, have maintained the private schools systems provide a necessary educational alternative and are particularly important in the inner cities where they education large numbers of non-Catholic minority students.

According to the NCEA study, Catholic education comprised approximately 55 percent of non-public schools and 70 percent of the enrollment in these schools.

Deer Makes Use Of Bathtub

BELTSVILLE, Md. (UPI) — A Beltsville couple found their house guest a trifle ungracious. She overflowed their bathtub, spilled their shampoo, soaked their wall-to-wall carpeting and left without cleaning up the mess.

To make matters worse, she was a deer and had not been invited.

Murray Crocker was sitting in his living room Saturday morning thinking about getting ready for work when he heard a commotion in his neighbor's apartment. Then he heard the smash-up of the glass in his son's bedroom window and a ruckus in his garden apartment.

"It shook me up a bit," Crocker said. "At first we thought there was a maniac loose."

His wife, Elizabeth, who was in another bedroom, stayed put and left the detective work to her husband.

But instead of a burglar, Crocker found a small deer — in his bathtub.

He wasted no time slamming the bathroom door and called police.

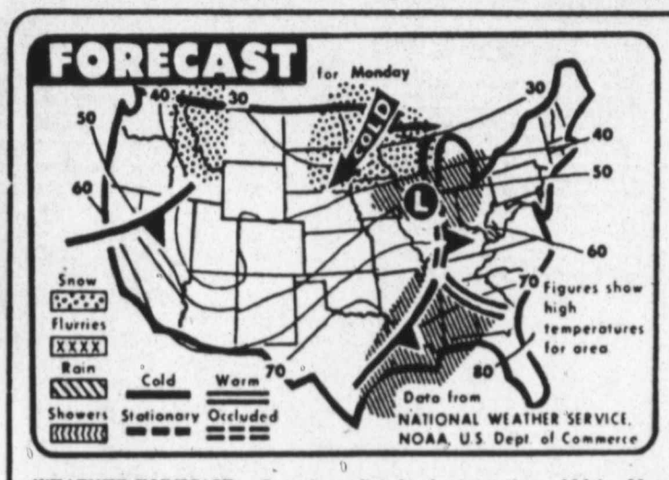

When policemen, fire officials and a game warden arrived, they found the bathtub overflowing and the deer, which turned out to be a doe, covered with soap bubbles.

Meanwhile, water was cascading out of the tub and soaking the wall-to-wall carpeting in the hallway.

"The deer must have kicked the faucets on and kicked over several bottles of shampoo," said Crocker.

Water Problem Survey To Include Curry County

By FAYE PLANK
A-J Correspondent

CLOVIS, N.M. — Curry County will be included in an Economic Development Administration study of water problems in the nation's high plains region, including eastern New Mexico.

The federal study is to financed by a $6 million congressional appropriation and has been dubbed as the "largest research endeavor ever undertaken by the Economic Development Administration," according to Robert Hall, assistant secretary of the administration. He says the study should be completed by 1980.

Water tables under Curry County are rapidly dropping as farmers pump the non-rechargable reservoirs for field crops.

State Engineer Steve Reynolds says it's a certainty that the wells will go dry economically. Experts say the rapidly escalating cost of energy used to power the pumps might virtually eliminate irrigation farming before the water runs out.

Statistics furnished by New Mexico State University show about 200,000 acres of land were under irrigation in Curry County in 1976. Reynolds estimated there would be enough water in the year 2000 for 50,000 irrigated acres, and by the year 2020, the total would drop to 10,000 acres.

Farmers in eastern New Mexico get water by tapping acquifiers 200 to 300 feet thick. The recharge from rain and other sources is negligible.

Bob Creel, NMSU research specialist, said farmers faced with the dropping water tables and soaring costs are likely to move into dryland operations, if they have enough land. Creel said dryland yields are lower so a farmer needs more land to make a living.

Farmer's energy costs have quadrupled in the past few years according to George Abernathy of NMSU. If the farmer with 500 to 600 acres is forced to quit irrigating, he may just give up and sell out to a larger operator.

He said farmers growing commodities can't effectively pass along the cost increases and anybody with less than 640 acres might have a difficult time maintaining a family on less.

Abernathy said some irrigation wells north of Clovis that were pumping 600 gallons a minute two years ago, are now pumping 200 gallons a minute as the water level continues to drop.

Abernathy concluded, "The tragedy is the younger people who bought land at irrigated prices and are seeing it go back to dryland prices. It varies by area, but the grimmest is in the Clovis area."

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible
Matt. 12:18B-38, The Living Bible

I will put My Spirit upon Him, And He will judge the nations.
19 He does not fight nor shout;
He does not raise His voice!
20 He does not crush the weak, Or quench the smallest hope; He will end all conflict with His final victory,
21 And His name shall be the hope Of all the world."
22 Then a demon-possessed man—he was both blind and unable to talk—was brought to Jesus, and Jesus healed him so that he could both speak and see.
23 The crowd was amazed.
"Maybe Jesus is the Messiah!"
they exclaimed.
24 But when the Pharisees heard about the miracle they said, "He can cast out demons because he is Satan, king of devils."
25 Jesus knew their thoughts and replied, "A divided kingdom ends in ruin. A city or home divided against itself cannot stand.
26 And if Satan is casting out Satan, he is fighting himself, and destroying his own kingdom.
27 And if, as you claim, I am casting out demons by invoking the powers of Satan, then what power do your own people use when they cast them out? Let them answer your accusation!
28 But if I am casting out demons by the Spirit of God, then the Kingdom of God has arrived among you.
29 One cannot rob Satan's kingdom without first binding
Satan. Only then can his demons be cast out!
30 Anyone who isn't helping Me is harming Me.
31,32 Even blasphemy against Me or any other sin, can be forgiven—all except one: speaking against the Holy Spirit shall never be forgiven, either in this world or in the world to come.
33 A tree is identified by its fruit.
A tree from a select variety produces good fruit; poor varieties don't.
34 You brood of snakes! How could evil men like you speak what is good and right? For a man's heart determines his speech.
35 A good man's speech reveals the rich treasures within him. An evil-hearted man is filled with venom, and his speech reveals it.
36 And I tell you this, that you must give account on Judgment
Day for every idle word you speak.
37 Your words now reflect your fate then: either you will be justified by them or you will be condemned."
38 One day some of the Jewish leaders, including some Pharisees, came to Jesus asking to see a miracle to prove that He was really the Messiah.

Campaign Trail Draws Newlyweds

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

George and Laura Bush and Jesse and Carole George could be sunning on the beaches in the Bahamas or taking in the sights in Niagara Falls while they're honeymooning.

Instead, the couples have chosen to honeymoon in the unlikely cities of Seagraves, Brownfield and Dimmitt.

What's the attraction in the South Plains cities? Voters.

Bush is a Republican candidate for U.S. Congress and George is a candidate for the state senate on the Democratic ticket.

George, 37, married his wife, Carole, 32, Sept. 14, 1977, and was campaigning again at noon the following day.

Bush and his wife, Laura, both 31, were wed Nov. 5, 1977.

And the two couples say their campaign honeymoons can t be rivalled.

Both couples said the shared goal of winning their respective elections had drawn the marriage partners closer.

"Politics and the marriage are so important to both of us, we're both giving our all," Mrs. George said. Bush concurred: "We're business partners with a common goal," he said.

However, Mrs. Bush admits she had some reservations about marrying in the midst of the campaign. "I worried about the stress of the political campaign combined with the stress of being newlyweds," she said.

But she said the experience hasn't "really caused any problems, and intead has really made us closer."

George said they both "discussed what the first year of marriage was going to be like," so there really have been no surprises.

At age 31 "you have a different perspective and the adjustment pangs are a lot less harsh," George said.

The Georges say they, too, have had no adjustment problems since their marriage Sept. 14, which they labeled "a rather unique experience."

Although the couple postponed an official honeymoon, the Georges say campaigning is like a continual honeymoon.

"We're meeting exciting people and we've done more in a month than a normal couple that just got married," Mrs. George said.

And the Georges admit only one regret — they haven't had time to unpack all the boxes in their new home.

Both couples say they try to set aside one day a week to be alone, but George noted often the week is 15 days long.

George said he anticipated problems only "if one of us got bored with politics."

Both wives have jumped enthusiastically into the campaigns for their favorite candidates and Mrs. George has gone so far as printing her own calling cards: "A positive woman with a positive candidate."

Apparently there's little disagreement between the spouses on the issues of the day, but Bush said his wife had "heightened his sensitivity to the other person's point of view."

What advice would they give couples contemplating a similar honeymoon?

"Make sure there is an excellent understanding prior to entering the political arena," Bush said. "Lots of times you have to be flexible, and the time you spend with each other is on an irregular basis."

On thing is certain, Bush said. "I know I'll look back on this time in my life as remarkable."

Brazil Faces Major, World Role As Great Exporter Of Foodstuffs

By RICHARD W. FOSTER

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — By the mid-1990s Brazil will be exporting as much food as the United States and will be a power to reckon with in world trade, according to U.S. experts studying Brazilian agriculture.

Its future as one of the world's major breadbaskets is assured by the advances of Brazilian agriculture in the past decade and the fact that only about 15 percent of the country's arable land is cultivated, the experts say.

Special Role Foreseen

Brazilian officials say they foresee a special role for Brazil should the world face repetition of the crop failures that led to widespread famine in 1973 and 1974. They note that Brazil is an exception in the Third World, where population growth generally is outstripping advances in food production.

Joao Baptista Figueiredo, the army general picked to become Brazil's president a year from now, says his administration will emphasize agriculture and has pointed to future world food needs as an important opportunity for Brazil.

"Today our trade balance is being saved by agriculture," the 60-year-old general said in an interview with the newspaper Jornal do Brasil recently. "We have learned how to sell our products on international markets. Now it is time to take advantage of the expanse of our national territory, of our virgin lands. Brazil is one of the few countries in the world which still has agricultural frontiers."

Gap Likely To Close

Brazil exported $8 billion worth of farm products in 1977, compared to $24 billion by the United States. The U.S. experts here say the gap is likely to be closed within the next 15 years as Brazil opens up new agricultural lands, and encourages production of exportable crops such as coffee, cocoa, soybeans, wheat, rice, corn, oranges and beef.

At that point, according to the U.S. specialists, the United States and Brazil will be exporting at a level of $50 billion to $60 billion worth of farm products annually.

The Americans, who specialize in reporting on Brazilian crops and projecting future trends, said they base their predictions on statistics provided by the Brazilian Ministry of Agriculture but also gather information independently.

Assessment Confirmed

They made on-site inspections, for instance, of the July 1975 frost that killed coffee plants in southern Brazil. Their assessment of the damage was later confirmed by U.S. satellite readings.

Brazil's recent performance as an agricultural producer is the basis for the impressive future projections, the specialists said.

For example, last year Brazil's cocoa production, at 250,000 metric tons, was almost double the 1960 output, while soybean production zoomed at the same time from a mere eight million bushels to 441 million tons. It is now the world's second exporter of soybeans behind the United States.

Brazil also is the world's biggest sugar producer and the largest grower of rice in the Western Hemishphere. Plans call for a sharp increase in wheat production with the aim of first becoming self-sufficient in the crop and then an exporter of it. Exports of orange juice concentrate have increased from 5,000 tons in 1962 to 210,000 tons in 1976, making Brazil the world's largest exporter of the product.

Coffee To Make Comeback

Coffee, Brazil's traditional export crop, brought in $2.8 billion in 1977. Production is expected to return to 1960s levels of 27 million bags per year, marking a recovery from the 1975 frost.

Current production of farm products is carried out on only five percent of Brazil's national territory of 3.3 million square miles, the world's fifth largest nation. But since the 1960s the population has been moving into the interior, cultivating virgin lands.

The expansion of soybean production was in part the result of the migration of hundreds of thousands of farmers from the state of Sao Paulo west into the state of Parana. Brazilian farms have now pushed all the way to the frontier, some even spilling over into Paraguay.

Like U.S. In 1850s

The U.S. analysts compare Brazil's westward expansion to that of the United States in the middle of the last century. "They are at about the stage we were in the 1840s or 1850s, before the Mississippi was crossed en masse and the prairies of the Midwest planted," said Leon J. Mears, chief U.S. agricultural attache here.

A government program calls for the agricultural colonization of an arid plateau in central and western Brazil, half the size of the U.S. Midwest. Called the Cerrados, the plateau is covered with low-lying scrub forest and has been used until now only for cattle grazing. But experimental farms, using fertilizer, have produced rice yields up to three times greater than those produced in Brazil's most fertile established farm areas in the south.

Problems To Be Solved

Dozens of problems involving transport, fertilizer production, and trained manpower must be resolved before the Cerrados project is completed. If successful, it will bring into cultivation one of the largest virgin croplands in the world.

The rapid expansion of farm production is a conscious government policy, accomplished with a system of cheap bank credit and guaranteed minimum prices for key crops.

In the most advanced farm areas in southern Brazil, the use of fertilizers and tractors has increased rapidly with large investments by foreign agribusiness and farm equipment firms.

There were 8,000 tractors in Brazil in 1950; 409,000 in 1977.

Techniques Side By Side

Changes have come so quickly that primitive and modern farming techniques exist side by side. In Bahia, farmers park their tractors in front of one-room shanties made of sticks and mud. In Parana donkey carts pass giant harvesters on farm roads.

The large quantities of crops produced for both domestic and international markets have overtaxed a transportation system still short on railroads, river networks, paved roads, and port facilities.

In the western territory of Rondonia, which has doubled its population annually in recent years, rice crops have gone to waste for lack of storage facilities. Trucks carrying crops out through the jungle can load only at half capacity, because of rutted and flooded dirt roads.

No Mississippi

"Brazil has no convenient Mississippi River to get its crops to market," said agricultural attache Mears, "and Brazilian rivers for the most part flow westward, away from the coast."

Mears said getting crops to cities or ports costs five to seven times what it does in the United States.

Experts say it is only a matter of time before river networks, new highways and possibly railroads are built.

Most of these problems are inevitable in a country that is changing so rapidly, said one Brazilian government economist here.

"We skipped the 19th century. You have to expect some discontinuities," he said.

PRINCE KILLED

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Tenzing Namgyal, crown prince of Sikkim until India annexed the tiny Himalayan kingdom in 1975, was killed in an automobile accident Saturday in the Sikkimese capital of Gangtok, the Indian news agency Samachar reported. It said the car carrying the 28-year-old Namgyal collided with a truck on a hill road and plunged into a ravine.

Demonstrators Expect Larger Confrontation

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Nazis and anti-Nazi demonstrators Sunday described a clash a day earlier during a "white power" parade as a prelude to a major confrontation next month in predominantly Jewish Chicago suburb of Skokie, Ill.

A hostile crowd of more than 1,000 persons Saturday prevented the Nazis from marching through the business district of an all-white neighborhood and from holding a rally in Gravois Park.

Because of the large anti-Nazi turnout, the 42 stormtrooper-uniformed Nazis remained aboard a flatbed truck that had brought them to the parade site. They rode the 12-block route tightly packed on the truck under heavy police escort.

The Nazis became easy targets for the snowballs, rocks and bottles hurled by jeering crowds as the truck passed at 10 miles an hour. They fended off the barrage with wooden shields bearing white power slogans and cursed at the taunting spectators.

Frank Collin of Chicago, leader of the National Socialist Party of America, blamed the disruption on "Communist-loving Jews." He said many more Nazis will march through Skokie on April 20 — Adolf Hitler's birthday.

"That will be our grand march," Collin said. "We will show there is still hope for an all-white America."

Bonnie Pechter, national director of the Jewish Defense League, said 103 league members were scattered through the crowd and accomplished their goal of thwarting the Nazi march and rally.

"It wasn't necessary for a larger turnout, like the thousands we're planning for Skokie," she said. "This was just a practice session. We firmly believe the Nazis don't have a right to exist."

About 20 red-helmeted members of the Revolutionary Socialist League led chants of "Death to the Nazis, power to the working class," and were among a crowd of about 300 persons who ran after the Nazis' truck to the planned rally site.

When the Nazis continued toward their recently opened party headquarters without stopping at the park, the crowd's hostilify increased. Police then whisked the Nazis into a police bus and drove them to a police station for their safety.

Six persons were arrested on peace disturbance charges. No one was injured seriously.

The Nazis sat out the siege in the police station recreation room. Police brought them their civilian clothes and they left. Leaders of the group said a planned weekend Nazi convention would be moved to an undisclosed location in Chicago.

AN EDITORIAL:

Emphasis Should Be Quality

ALTHOUGH IT may not be all things to all groups, the integration plan to be submitted to Judge Halbert O. Woodward in Federal Court today may come as close as one can expect.

Lubbock's School Board, we feel, has made an effort not only to comply with Judge Woodward's order on the subject at hand, but has gone the extra mile in attempting to make the plan as compatible as possible with the parents', students' and teachers' views.

INDICATIVE OF this has been the change in plans to close Ella Iles Elementary School.

In doing so, the trustees made what Board President Charles Waters called a "main concession." The board agreed to keep the eastside located Iles, which bears the name of one of Lubbock's first black teachers.

This also appears to be in keeping with the wishes of the majority of the black community, especially the parents of children in the area.

TO COMPENSATE for keeping the school open, it also was announced that an enriched program of study would be set up. This, to many observers is more important than the goal of moving people around.

The Board also announced other programs to enhance various schools and student endeavors, all of which should give students wide latitude in seeking out the schools and courses of study and athletics in which they are interested.

Whether the overall program and the revisions will satisfy Judge Woodward, the Justice Department and, in the event of later challenges, higher courts, remains to be seen.

HOWEVER, WE fervently hope that the "powers that be" in this instance give the plan a chance to work.

Certainly it is not perfect in the sense that it meets everyone's wishes. But, on the surface, it appears to be fair. Its thrust is directed at the welfare of the student and not toward some social goal sketched in Washington.

We are dealing with people, young people. They are not pawns. Given an opportunity for an equal quality education at all levels and in every part of the city, we feel all —whether white, black or brown—will grow up to be worthwhile citizens.

The plan obviously has a broad base of support. It should be given a chance to succeed. If it does, it can be built upon as necessary.

AN EDITORIAL:

He Ain't Heavy, He's Boss

JIMMY CARTER'S promise to campaign this year for Democrats seeking congressional re-election raises the embarrassing question of who wants him.

Admittedly, party leaders are delighted that Carter will devote more time to politics than he has to date. But not every Democrat in Congress is exactly, well, clamoring for a presidential campaign appearance.

While by no means the majority, a substantial number fear Carter could prove a liability in their own races and would just as soon not have him around embracing "my good friend and fellow Democrat..."

THE JITTERS are most noticeable among House and Senate members from oil-producing states, the farm belt and the West—areas where the President's standing in the public opinion is at its lowest.

Mused Rep. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., "I want to be as diplomatic as possible in saying this...He'll be a drag."

Others were not so flippant, however. "Any good incumbent should run ahead of the ticket," said Rep. Abner Mikva, D-Ill., an assessment reportedly widely shared on Capitol Hill.

Nearly all Democrats now in Congress outpolled Carter in 1976, and the advantages of incumbency are so immense that the President's popularity—or lack thereof—should have little impact this year in districts where the incumbent is running again.

VOTERS ANGRY at Carter are more likely to vent their spleen on Democratic candidates for House and Senate seats that have been vacated by members either retiring or seeking other offices.

Unfortunately for Carter, many of the open seats this year are in states like Texas and California, where the President's popularity is at ebb tide.

Recent off-year elections have produced major setbacks for the party in control of the White House. The Democrats lost 48 seats in 1966, two years after the Lyndon Johnson landslide. The GOP lost an identical number in the 1974 Watergate wipeout.

Campaigning for incumbent Democrats who want him in their districts may win Carter some political chits, but not much else.

The real referendum on the Carter administration will be taking place in districts with no incumbent. It should be interesting to see how much time the President spends campaigning in those areas...

M. STANTON EVANS:

Marijuana Users Escape Fed's Heat On Smokers

WASHINGTON—There is no zeal like that of the convert, and in that sense of antismoking crusade of HEW Secretary Joseph Califano is understandable.

As a former heavy smoker (three packs a day), Califano wants to persuade and/or coerce the rest of us into going along with his new-found aversion to tobacco.

He has announced a $23 million HEW program to put a halt to smoking, including anti-tobacco "education" by the federal government, possible anti-smoking taxes and efforts to encourage the states to adopt tough anti-smoking laws.

Califano acknowledges there are limits to what the federal government can do in this regard, given the political strength of the tobacco states and the fact that tobacco is indigenous to our culture.

HE SEEMS TO feel the proper role for HEW is that of opinion leader.

By constantly pounding away at the alleged evils of tobacco, the government can transmit the message that smoking is wrong and dangerous —especially for young people.

It will take awhile to find out for sure, but it seems likely Califano's crusade will have some impact.

With government spokesmen harping on the issue, lots of lurid descriptions of the health hazards of tobacco being circulated and constant official harassment of smokers, it seems likely that use of tobacco products will be affected.

The signaling power of the federal government in this respect is potentially quite great.

ALL THIS BEING so, one has to wonder why this identical signaling power is being used in just the opposite fashion with respect to marijuana.

This is a substance that, on the recent scientific evidence, is far more dangerous than tobacco in every conceivable respect (though the pot promoters have tried to tell us otherwise).

Yet for some mysterious reason, the selfsame HEW that is pushing every possible alarm bell with respect to tobacco is reluctant to say anything disparaging about marijuana even though it will acknowledge the serious problems with the stuff when it is forced to.

The evidence on marijuana suggests, for instance, that it can cause extensive brain damage, which tobacco, of course, does not.

IT HAS BEEN known for some time that marijuana use results in mental disorientation in the user; now it appears that the reason for this disorientation is the impact of the drug on physical structure of the brain.

Oxford Prof. William D. Paton, who heads the British drug research program, puts it this way:

"These recent findings converge to a remarkable extent in supporting a prima facie view that repeated cannabis (marijuana) use acts on the deeper parts of the brain—where sensory information is processed and mood controlled...

"That this is at first reversible, but becomes more persistent as cumulation occurs, and that later irreversible changes occur with loss of brain substance, due either to interference with the capacity of brain cells to synthesize their requirements or to interference with cell division."

IN ADDITION, we now have evidence that marijuana can affect the structure of the chromosomes, the immune response and sexual functioning.

Even in terms of bronchial and pulmonary disorders, the effects of marijuana are more severe than those of tobacco.

According to studies conducted for the Army, one year of heavy cannabis smoking—20 cigarettes a day—can produce as much pharyngitis, bronchitis, emphysema and other respiratory conditions, as would be expected from smoking 20 to 40 cigarettes a day for 20 years.

Yet despite all this, the selfsame federal government that is signalling people not to use tobacco is simultaneously wig-wagging the message that use of marijuana is perfectly okay. How come?

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

A Salmagundi Stew

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The rancorous feud between Sen. Daniel F. Moynihan and HEW Secretary Joseph Califano is escalating over Califano's fanfare in setting up a new "office for nonpublic schools" to dramatize President Carter's ostensible commitment to federal aid for parochial schools.

Moynihan, the New York Democrat who understands the labyrinthine bureaucracy at Health, Education and Welfare almost as well as Califano, is seething over what he regards as Califano's virtual deception in parading the office as "new."

An existing office of "nonpublic educational services" was set up in 1971 and is still operating.

The "Office of Nonpublic Educational Services" described itself this way in February 1976:

"This office coordinates all pertinent Office of Education services...to assure propoer coverage for nonpublic school children services...Complaints are also handled."

AS FOR THE "new" office, Califano described it in congressional testimony Feb. 28 this way:

This office will coordinate all federal education programs which call for participation of private school students...and process complaints."

Moynihan said last week that Califano has put President Carter in the "embarrassing position of having made as a substantive proposal what is at most a symbolic gesture first made back in 1971."

Moynihan fears Califano is not serious about federal aid to private schools, and that public announcement about the "new" office was pure imagery.

Moynihan is still livid at Califano's confidential memorandum to Carter on Feb. 4 urging the President to "move quickly" on a program of federal grants to college students.

The need for haste:

To outflank a competing program moving through Congress that is backed by Moynihan and Sen. Bob Packwood for $250 tax credits to help defray the cost of higher education.

THE CONSERVATIVE backlash against Senate Republican leader Howard Baker for his support of the Panama Canal treaties forced him to back out of a March 11 party fund-raising dinner in Oklahoma City.

One of the most hawkish states, Oklahoma looks on the Panama Canal treaties with outrage.

Baker's espousal of the treaties made ticket sales for his appearance at a state and county fund-raising dinner so sticky he was advised by state party leaders to find a "conflict" and cancel. He did.

IN SIMILAR VEIN, conservative antagonism to Baker's canal position in Iredell County, N.C., was responsible for another acute embarrassment.

One stunt at the party fund-raiser was auctioning off pictures of famous Republicans, including Sens. Robert Dole, Jesse Helms, Baker and others.

The photographic blow-ups of Dole and Helms brought $21.50 each—but Baker's had no takers.

Finally, an embarrassed party official bid $4 for Baker.

A footnote: Baker had no illusions that his stand on the canal treaties would not hurt him badly, at least in the short run.

But the depth of anti-Baker sentiment in Oklahoma and North Carolina underlines a deeper fear: that it could cost him the Republican presidential nomination in 1980.

OVER-PROTECTIVE aides were responsible for a dismal performance by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance before the nation's governors Feb. 27 which projected an inaccurately negative image of his ability.

Vance actually has been quietly taking command of scattered foreign policy machinery, a fact obscured in his public performances.

Personal aides made matters worse when they vetoed a scheduled Q-and-A session at the governors' conference here.

Claiming Vance would have to spend the weekend preparing for such a session, these aides insisted that he stick to a prepared text.

Hodding Carter, Assistant Secretary of State for public affairs, vainly protested that Vance "likes" question-and-answer sessions and handles them much better than he does formal remarks.

The speech was delivered in characteristic Vance style, slow and clumsy.

Several governors said privately the Secretary of State seemed slow-witted, a false impression that could easily have been avoided by the give and take of a spontaneous Q-and-A session.

ANDREW TULLY:

Riches To Rags

WASHINGTON—Do not minimize the importance of a President who can keep his cool. But there's such a thing as carrying it too far in matters affecting what's left of the working stiff's pocketbook.

Through Press Secretary Jody Powell, Jimmy Carter announced he was unmoved by that government report that consumer prices rose in January at twice their pace of the six previous months.

Powell said the development was "not seen as a basic change in the underlying 6 to 6.5 per cent" inflation rate of 1977.

Carter needs new bifocals, or something. The cost of living rose 0.8 per cent in January. Between July and December, prices rose less than 0.4 per cent a month.

Take-home pay of workers, adjusted for inflation and taxes, plummeted 3 per cent in January —the largest such decline on record.

MAYBE WE NEED Julius Shishkin in charge of a worrying outfit in the White House. Shishkin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, is not afraid to worry. He called the January rise "very strong and widespread," and termed it "a cause for conern"—governmental politesse for saying things are in one helluva shape.

As in the past, this latest inflationary outrage hit hardest at people least able to shrug it off. Which is to say that the price parade was led by food, housing and medical-care costs.

Meat prices were up sharply. Poultry, eggs, fresh fruits and vegetables cost more. Home ownership costs rose 1 per cent, and residential rents were up 0.6 per cent.

Costs of being sick were up another 0.8 per cent. Even bus fares were up.

Bill Brock fails a tad short of the role of nonpartisan observer because he is chairman of the Republican National Committee.

But it is hard to blame him for saying that the January price rise was "further proof that the Carter administration's economic policies are a complete failure."

CERTAINLY, Carter's alleged war on inflation has not been the kind of all-out blitz he promised the electorate when he was campaigning against Gerry Ford's policy of "higher and higher prices."

Actually, the inflation rate dipped slightly under Ford.

Anyway, Brock roars that "What the American people need is the (naturally) Republican-proposed 30 per cent across-the-board cut in the tax rates coupled with responsible cuts in government spending."

Since any real pressure on Big Labor and Big Business by either party seems out of the question, perhaps Brock's plan would at least encourage business to expand and thereby create new jobs.

AS FOR REDUCING government spending, forget it. Carter's budget is just as inflationary as those Lyndon Johnson used to come up with when he was fighting a major war without controlling wages and prices.

In fact, big spending is bipartisan. An example is a new Senate office building rearing its ugly head on Capitol Hill.

Plans for the structure include a terraced rooftop restaurant and a "physical fitness room" big enough to accommodate a basketball court.

In 1972, the price tag was "only" $42 million. Today, the cost is estimated at $122 million.

And bread and water for the rest of us?

CAN THE PUBLIC influence issues at City Hall? The Statehouse? In the Halls of Congress and at the White House?

Do letters to editors and public officials have any impact, sway any opinions, open up new lines of communication?

The answer to all of those questions, if posed a year or so ago, would have been for the most part a qualified "Yes." Today, we would say: "Definitely!"

Whether because of a wide-ranging number of extremely volatile issues, or because the Silent Majority no longer is silent, "them cards and letters" are having an impact, on everything from school integration to the Panama Canal.

How much, especially on the latter, remains to be seen. But, it is now obvious that public opinion, expressed vocally and otherwise, is getting through "where it counts."

THERE IS NO question but that what the folks back home think, as shown in nationwide surveys, letters and calls, have had an effect on key issues before Congress.

A virtual avalanche of mail last year helped defeat the common situs picketing bill sought by Big Labor.

A similar onslaught is being mounted now by foes of the so-called Labor Reform package, a bill which would all but negate State Right-to-Work laws. And letters by the bushel are helping put the brakes on the administration's efforts to push the Panama Canal Pacts to a quick approval.

No longer do "the peepul" put politicians on pedestals. In brief, the message is getting through: The people more and more expect their public servants to heed their wishes. And woe be unto the man who equivocates.

Whether this citizen particiption will continue remains to be seen. If it does, a new day could be dawning and we might just save the nation yet!

SPEAKING OF political candidates, we sometimes think the media "plays up" the wrong thing.

Not long ago, a candidate announced for an office here. One of the local stations zeroed in on the fact that the man was retired and that he was somewhat older than most would-be office-seekers.

Although we emphasize we are not taking sides in this case, the fact the man had run a most successful business, built from scratch, met innumerable payrolls and in turn was seeking "to give something back" to his community was ignored.

Charisma, looks, high-pressure "powder-puff" images are all part of the game. But, it takes more than that to run the country's business, as we have sadly learned of late.

SINCE THIS is Political Monday, so to speak, it's about time for an update on what is happening to the two-party trend in Texas.

While there is some argument, and legitimately so, whether we are at the two-party point, there is no question but that "voting 'er straight" is a thing of the past. And has been for years. Although we haven't named a Republican governor yet, and have only a sprinkling of members in the Legislature, it's a new ballgame.

Richard Morehead, writing in The Dallas News, says there is no question but that the old order is changing. As he observes, until the 1950s, winning the Demo nomination was always "tantamount to election," because GOP hopefuls almost always were also-rans.

But, in 1951, the first elected Republican to be seated in the Legislature, Edward T. Dicker, a Dallas Realtor, set the stage for new GOP bids. Morehead says Dicker was almost as much a curiosity as if he really had been an elephant.

TODAY, THERE are four GOP people in the State Senate and 19 in the House, including one from Lubbock.

There are four Republicans in the U.S. Congress from Texas, which shows GOP support is broad based. Too, until President Carter's narrow victory, Texas had backed the GOP presidential candidate for much of the past quarter century.

Actually, the state is more Independent than it is Two-Party in the strict sense of the term. No Republican, including Sen. John Tower, could get elected without a healthy helping of support from "Independent" former Democrats.

But, it is no longer an oddity to have several candidates in one week walk into the office and say: "I'm So and So, and I'm seeking the Republican nomination for..."

Given time, Texas will become a two-party as well as independent state. When it does, it will carry an even greater voice in national politics and we all should be better off for the fact...

Minicomputer Latest Innovation For Autos

(EDITORS NOTE: Remember the first automatic transmission or the first push-button windows? Here come the computers, the biggest innovation in automobiles since the 1950s. In a few short years, they'll regulate everything from exhaust emissions to windshield wipers and give you up to the minute information on gas mileage and the time you'll arrive home.)

By DONALD WOUTAT

DETROIT (AP) — It will tell you how many miles you can go before you run out of gas. It can tell you what time you'll finally weave your way through rush hour traffic to your front door. And it can tell you why the steering wheel keeps pulling left.

The automobile minicomputer is coming — a complicated, mobile version of the pocket calculator.

Push a button and a digital read-out can tell your gas mileage or find a radio station. Push another button and a minicomputer can tell the engine what to do.

In a relatively short time — 1981 is seen as the model year when electronics become fullblown on automobiles — minicomputers could control dozens of functions, including transmissions, valves and instrument panels. They could alert drivers to an overheated engine, brake line wear or low tire pressure. Radar could apply the brakes.

"By 1985, we might have quite a brain in the automobile," says Earl W. Meyer, Chrysler's chief engineer for engine electronics. "This is going to be a whole lot bigger than the automatic transmission," says E.R. Karrer, Ford's engineering vice president.

All this stems from the government's mandate for better fuel economy and cleaner emissions, which has forced the automobile industry into its biggest technological advance since the 1950s.

The motorist will get better gas mileage and consume less fuel while driving a simpler, safer car that's more easily maintained. Emissions will be cleaner, and theoretically, so will the air.

It will also be a bonanza for the electronics industry, which by some estimates will snare $1 billion worth of auto business by 1981. Much of the cost will be passed along to the consumer.

Most engineers don't talk about that, but some industry analysts say that by 1981, the computers could add $400 to the cost of a car, and Ford says that by 1990, electronics will be 10 percent of the cost of an automobile. But engineers say electronics is the only way to meet government demands.

Critics say automakers were tardy in embracing electronics.

"That's an unfair indictment," says John T. Auman, a senior engineer at General Motors Corp. He said the electronics industry had to struggle to adapt to the automobile, noting that pocket calculators don't have to work at below-zero temperatures on bumpy roads at 60 miles per hour.

The principal device involved in the revolution is the microprocessor, the principle of which is used in calculators, watches, telephones, cash registers and other everyday items.

It contains a computer chip the size of a finger tip that can be programmed for almost anything and knows logic and arithmetic. Its comparable predecessors would have filled the trunk and back seat of a car.

Under the hood, engineers concentrate on spark plugs and carburetors to meet demands for fuel economy and clean emissions — demands engineers say are conflicting without the precision of electronics.

Here's a partial list of what's going on:

—An electronic "feedback" carburetor is being tried on 30,000 1978 Ford Pintos and Bobcats in California. It monitors levels of oxygen in combustion exhaust gases and continually adjusts the fuel-air mixture to the proper ratio for efficient fuel burning and fewer pollutants. Engineers say the carburetor as it's known today eventually will be defunct.

—Chrysler is refining its "lean burn" system, begun on 1976 models, in which a computer regulates the firing of spark plugs. Chrysler has put lean burn on all V-8 models and the new four-cylinder Omni and Horizon.

—GM put its first microprocessor on the 1977 Oldsmobile Toronado. It reads engine temperature, altitude and other operating conditions and adjusts spark timing accordingly.

—Ford's 1978 Lincoln Versaille has a computer that regulates both spark timing and the rate at which exhaust gases are recirculated to cut down nitrogen oxide emissions.

There are also more visible effects.

For those bothered by squeaking grinding wiper blades, Ford offers the intermittent-action windshield wiper, which is told by a computer to pause every so often.

And Cadillac is testing a "tripmaster," which tells how many miles of fuel you have left, how far it is to your destination, and what time you'll get there.

The tripmaster and a similar experimental unit by Chrysler give an instantaneous read-out of your gas mileage.

As you step down hard on the accelerator, the digital m.p.g. figures plummet before your eyes. When you ease up, the m.p.g. rises sharply. It's graphic evidence that, as the ads say, "actual mileage may vary according to driving habits ...."

Despite the cost, some see long-term savings. Electronic controls are simpler, more compact and more precise than mechanical devices. That means less hardware and greater reliability, engineers say.

"A microprocessor doesn't wear out," Meyer says. "Mechanical devices must wear out."

Meyer, whose office at Chrysler has moved five times in the last few years to accommodate the growth of his department, is optimistic about another potential problem, repairing the space-age car.

Garages, he says, will have diagnostic gear to plug in to electronic cars. A computer will not only pinpoint the problem but tell the mechanic what to do. He calls it a sophisticated version of what Volkswagen has been doing for years.

Chrysler has already made a diagnostic device that uses a microprocessor to test its lean burn engines.

Ford's Karrer, however, sees a danger that the motorist of 1981 will have trouble finding someone to repair his car.

Karrer speaks from experience. In the late 1960s, he recalls, Ford introduced an electronic voltage regulator that didn't work well. It retreated, and only this year — well behind the rest of the industry — has put fully electronic voltage regulators on some models.

"When you have an experience like that, you get a little leery," he says.

Tank Car Explosion Victim Dies

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A railroad signalman burned when a tank car containing propane gas exploded last month at Waverly, Tenn., died Saturday, becoming the 14th victim of the disaster, a hospital spokesman said.

Hank Black, a spokesman at the University of Alabama Burn Center, identified the victim as William E. Baker, 57, of Waverly. Baker worked for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

He was airlifted, along with other burn victims, to a Nashville, Tenn., hospital after the Feb. 24 tanker explosion in Waverly. Baker was later transferred to Birmingham for further treatment.

Black said the victim died as a result of the burns suffered in the blast. It destroyed neighboring homes and businesses in Waverly, a town of 5,500 about 65 miles west of Nashville.

The rail tanker exploded as workmen were preparing to transfer its contents to another tanker. The car had been damaged in a Louisville and Nashville train derailment two days earlier.

Thief Gets City's Water Payments

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — City officials Monday will begin the tedious task of checking through records to locate persons who paid their water bills by check just before a thief stole more than $31,000 from an unprotected storage room.

A city hall spokesman said about $31,827, including about $28,000 in checks was discovered missing late Friday. The money was in locked money bags kept in an unlocked area of a storage room at city hall.

A city spokesman said persons who paid their city water bills by check will be asked to stop payment on the checks to prevent the thief or thieves from cashing the checks. The city will pay the fees banks charge for stopping payment on a check, the spokesman said.

A police spokesman said the theft is under investigation.

A city spokesman said more strict security precautions will be used in the future.

Wine Connoisseur No Snob

SEATTLE (AP) — There was Joe Canavan ... spending more than $1,300 for two bottles of wine. Then, just a few minutes later, there he was again ... scrubbing bathroom floors on his hands and knees.

Canavan, owner of the Space Place Tavern, was at a local wine auction, and spent $900 and $470 respectively for two bottles of Chateau Lafite Rothschild, vintages 1865 and 1929.

"The realities of life quickly intrude on the sublime," he says. "The auction was over at 5 p.m. and by 6:30 I had put on a pair of overalls and was down on my hands and knees scrubbing out the bathrooms of the tavern. The janitor hadn't showed up."

Canavan's private wine collection numbers around 2,000 bottles, but acquiring the 1865 Lafite was a special goal.

"I went to the auction determined to pay anything to get it," he said. "Why did I want it? I guess pride of ownership. Why does any collector want the best he can get?"

Conferees Expected To Okay Compromise Gas Pricing Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House energy conferees — following reflection and rhetoric — are expected to approve some version of a compromise natural gas pricing plan leading to deregulation in seven years.

Some House members expect a comfortable margin of victory on the deregulation plan prepared by senators to break a deadlock that has frozen congressional action on the White House energy plan.

Some of the 17 Democrats on the House conference committee who oppose deregulation could defect and still leave a majority of the 25 House conferees, these House members say.

The suggestion the House would accept the deregulation it opposed in the past emerges from conversations with many of the House conferees and their leaders — powerful committee chairmen anxious for Congress to finish energy legislation this spring.

One impediment to approval may have been eliminated with President Carter's statement last Thursday he could accept the phasing out of government controls that some thought he wanted continued indefinitely.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., working to break a Senate standoff on deregulation, reached the compromise late last week with a slim majority of nine of the 17 conferees.

Jackson's plan would let natural gas production prices start at around $1.88 per thousand cubic feet, compared with $1.48 now, and increase to nearly $3.75 by 1985.

"New gas" entitled to the highest price would be defined much more liberally than in the version approved by the House last year. But the federal government would have some price and distribution controls in the intrastate market, where gas is sold in the state of production.

Backers contend the bill is a realistic compromise of earlier positions by the House and Senate.

The original House bill, by its tighter controls, would have given $16 billion less to producers. And the original Senate bill would have given producers $56 billion more, it was estimated.

"So this (compromise) redistributes incentives so that there is no incentive to hold gas within a state," a staff member for one backer of the bill said. "It unlocks some gas and gives people a cheaper alternative than imports."

Where Carter once called for indefinite continuation of regulation, he now presses for a compromise that leads to deregulation in several years — a switch not lost on Republicans.

"I would like to suggest that this year, a special award be given to ... President Jimmy Carter," GOP Whip Robert Michel said.

"After being strongly for deregulation in 1976 and vehemently oposed to deregulation all through 1977, the president is now suddenly for it again without a word of explanation of what he was talking about in 1977."

Democrats had a different view.

"This is a good working paper," said Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Energy Committee.

"It's tied together with baling wire at the moment," Speaker Thomas O'Neill said. "Let's get it into cement."

Malpractice Suits Said New Child Abuse Result

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Parents who beat children more frequently are filing malpractice suits against attending physicians in an effort to shift the blame, a professional journal warns doctors.

And doctors who otherwise might not report child abuse had better think twice because a malpractice suit may be in the offing, an editorial in the current issue of Legal Aspects of Medical Practice said.

"It may well be that the strongest incentive health care professionals have to report these cases will be the risk of personal liability for failing to comply with the reporting statutes," said the monthly publication of the American College of Legal Medicine.

Doctors were urged to protect themselves from potential allegations by immediately reporting suspected cases of abuse.

"Parents who abuse their children may sue the physician for malpractice in an attempt to shift their guilt and cleanse their consciences," the magazine said.

"Parents may attempt to shift some of their own guilt feelings for failing to more properly care for their child by bringing a malpractice action..."

"They can be expected to bring more medical malpractice actions in the future."

Laws in all states require doctors to report suspected cases of child abuse to social or law enforcement agencies.

The magazine said a number of medical malpractice suits involving child abuse have been filed recently against physicians.

Consumers Show Dip In Confidence

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of 5,000 households in February showed consumers have scaled down their plans for major purchases in the six months ahead and are feeling a bit more uneasy about the ecomony than they were in January, according to a report released Monday.

The survey, conducted by The Conference Board, a business research group, found substantial drops in the numbers of families planning to purchase a major appliance, new or used automobile or home in the next six months.

Overall, The Conference Board said its buying plans index skidded to 112.2, down 22 points from January. The index is based on changes against a 1967 level of 100.

In response to other questions, the report said, respondents were slightly less optimistic about the likelihood that business conditions, availability of jobs and their personal income would improve over the next six months.

The report said its consumer confidence index, designed to measure attitudes about the economy, slipped to 104.3 in February, about one point lower than in January.

Conference Board economist Fabian Linden said adverse weather, the coal strike and higher paycheck deductions for Social Security may have influenced attitudes in February.

He said the next two surveys may determine "whether we are running into real trouble or simply encountering bad but transitory conditions."

State Planes Fly For Many Reasons

AUSTIN (AP) — State aircraft are wonderful time and money savers for officials with work to do — and also for those with political ambitions and ranch retreats.

An Associated Press survey of flight logs maintained in 1977 by all elected officials with state aircraft disclosed:

—Gov. Dolph Briscoe made 33 trips in his state plane to his Uvalde ranch, where he apparently spent all or part of 68 weekdays during the first 10 months.

Mothballed

The last log entry was Nov. 4, and press secretary Bob Bain said, "the governor virtually mothballed the state plane after that date because of the pending campaign."

—Briscoe, Attorney General John Hill and Agriculture Commissioner Regan Brown, all building up to active political campaigns, flew busily about the state making speeches and contacts.

—Wives, legislators and others whose official purpose for traveling on state aircraft is open to question regularly show up on passenger lists.

Comptroller Bob Bullock normally used his two planes for hard-nosed tax collection and administrative chores, but sometimes provided free air taxi service for legislators.

To View Ranch

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong's aircraft use also tends to be businesslike, but he occasionally flies out to the provinces for a speech. He flew several legislators to a Big Bend-area ranch he wants the state to buy.

Railroad commissioners have used their newly acquired plane to a slight extent for speaking engagements.

Briscoe aides acknowledge he often spends weekends at the ranch but say he leaves on Friday evenings and returns on Monday mornings.

Accepting that, Briscoe appears to have spent at least part of 28 working days — not counting Mondays and Fridays — at the ranch during January-October.

This doesn't count an Aug. 18-23 vacation or the governor's trip to Europe last summer.

Issue In Race

Briscoe's work habits are an issue in this year's governor's race. Hill regularly accuses him of "absenteeism" and of tending to personal business at the ranch while a manpower funding "scandal" was brewing in his official family.

Bain said 28 days during 10 months averages out to "slightly more than half a day" per week.

"That would not be absenteeism, especially if you take into consideration the periods when the goveror is working on Saturdays and Sundays," he said.

Bain said Briscoe worked at least part of 27 Saturdays or Sundays between Feb. 12 and Nov. 5, primarily giving speeches.

While other officials detail the purposes of their flights, Briscoe's logs say only that they were for "official business," even the trips to Uvalde.

The general appropriation bill, however, requires annual reports to include extracts from logs describing "the official business purposes of each flight:"

The state auditor reminded Briscoe of the requirement after the governor's 1976 report omitted flight log extracts. But the 1977 report also was turned in without any aircraft information.

Bain said the ranch trips "are regarded as official business. He is governor 24 hours a day."

Bain said the hourly operating cost of the governor's Grumman G1, including gasoline and the salary of his pilot, is $384, meaning a 30-minute flight from Austin to Uvalde costs the state roughly $192.

Jet Fleet Corp. of Dallas, an air charter service, said Grumman G1s burn 240 gallons of fuel an hour, and aviation fuel costs between 75 cents and 80 cents a gallon.

Also In Contests

It might be coincidence, but officials who most actively used their state planes also are involved in contested political races.

Bullock and Armstrong, who seldom used their planes for speechmaking trips, are unopposed for re-election.

Hill made at least 47 flights to address such diverse groups as the Texas Senior Citizens Association and the State Little League Baseball Convention.

Hill also flew in the state plane to Woodville, where he was parade marshal in the Dogwood Festival, and to Laredo to receive the "Mr. South Texas" eward.

Brown made more than 50 trips, after becoming agriculture commissioner, March 28, to speak to trade associations, farm and ranch leaders and consumer groups.

Such trips admittedly are in a gray area.

On the one hand, state officials should not isolate themselves. On the oother, state funds are being used to political advantage, providing them with the exposure all politicians need.

"Every public official has to decide whether these speaking invitations are part of the job, and I decided they are. It is the only way most people will ever have a shot at asking a question of an officeholder face to face, and I think these experiences are healthy both for the officeholder and the public," said Hill.

Hill's use of his state plane for speaking trips tapered off after he formally announced for governor on Sept. 19. But he flew in it to Corpus Christi Oct. 1 to speak to the Texas Speech and Hearing Association and to Houston on Oct. 15 to address a conference on rights of the handicapped.

Outside Advice Sought

Brown, running for a full term as agriculture commissioner, said a former member of the state auditor's staff advises him whether each flight is legal.

He said he always travels as Commissioner Brown, not Candidate Brown, but acknowledges it is hard to separate the two.

"Everything we do is political — all the state people. This is a political organization," Brown said.

The wives of Briscoe, Hill and Brown often accompanied them on state aircraft. Armstrong's wife and Bullock's ex-wife rarely were passengers.

Bullock asked Hill on April 30, 1976, for an opinion on aircraft use, including the legality of wives as passengers.

Hill waited 18 months to answer, then said: "The flight must be for official business and there must be a business reason for the presence on it of any of the people you name" — including wives.

Room For Judgment

But Hill left lots of room for judgment calls, including the "traditional role" of the official's wife and her connection with the trip's purpose.

Mrs. Hill was a passenger on Hill's plane 33 times last year.

"On the occasions when my wife accompanied me, she went because she is the wife of the attorney general and was invited to participate with the attorney general in representing that office," Hill said.

Bain said Mrs. Briscoe legitimately flies on state aircraft because she accompanies "the governor in that capacity as others have accompanied their husbands."

Brown said taking his wife along "helps me to function better as a state official. It's awfully hard to be away from your family as much as we have to be."

State Reimbursed

When Briscoe flew to Philadelphia last September for commissioning of the U.S.S. Texas, business associate R.J. Nunley went along, but Bain said Nunley reimbursed the state $532 for the trip.

Legislators are hard to turn down when they ask for a plane ride.

Rep. Joe Wyatt, D-Bloomington, twice was the lone passenger on Bullock's King Air. Wyatt heads the House Ways and Means Committee.

Other legislators who have had free rides on Bullock's aircraft include Reps. Bill Heatly, D-Paducah; Bob Hendricks, D-McKinney; Ron Wilson, D-Houston; Pete Laney, D-Hale Center; and former Rep. Sarah Weddington, D-Austin.

Both Bullock and Brown flew groups of senators to the March 31 funeral of former Sen. Don Adams in Jasper.

House Speaker Bill Clayton flew to Lubbock on Brown's plane June 10, and the purpose was described only as "at the request of the speaker's office."

After Conference

Hill sent his plane to Houston March 9 to pick up Reps. Tom Uher, D-Bay City; Don Henderson, R-Houston; and Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, after a conference with Houston doctors on medical malpractice bills.

Another Hill log entry, dated April 30, says, "returned Rep. and Mrs. Bill Clark from Brownsville to Austin." Mrs. Clark is Hill's daughter.

Bullock said the burden is on legislators — not the officials who provided them free rides — to assure that their trips are for official business.

"If a legislator says, 'I need to come to Austin, I have a committee meeting, can you help me get down there?' what am I supposed to do? Ask, 'Where is your meeting?' and go to the Capitol and check the time and place of the meeting?"

The comptroller, in fact, says his plane is at the disposal of "anybody who's entitled to be buried in the state cemetery."

Draft Agency Maintaining Low Profile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Selective Servcce system, whose unwelcome "greetings" from Uncle Sam changed the lives of millions of American youths it drafted into the military over three decades, now faces an uncertain future of its own.

The agency had more than 9,000 full-time employees and some 20,000 unpaid members of local draft boards reporting to it at the height of the Vietnam war, but it is now in "deep standby" mothballs.

President Carter's government reorganization program is considering scrapping Selective Service as an independent agency and absorbing its present emergency planning role elsewhere, such as the Defense or Labor department.

The $50,000 director's post has been left unfilled since its last occupant, Byron Pepitone, departed last year. Other executive offices are dark and unused. Sixty-seven employees remain scattered throughout its headquarters, which once occupied an entire floor of an office building.

Even the receptionists' cubicle at the front door stands empty.

Until draft registration ended two years ago, the Selective Service System issued every male youth on his 18th birthday the white pasteboard square known as a "draft card" that once was the standard means for a teen-ager to prove he was old enough to buy a beer.

It drafted more than 10 million men in World War II, about 1.5 million in the Korean War and 1.7 million men in the Vietnam war years, ending in 1973. The customary method was to send induction notices which started out, "Greetings."

Some officials want registration resumed because it would take up to 110 days to start a draft again in case of crisis. But less than five years after the anti-war and draft evasion memories of Vietnam, that does not now appear politically feasible.

"Many feel it's an infringement on an 18-year-old to require him to go down and register in this day and age," acknowledges Robert Shuck, a career civil servant who is sitting in as acting director.

The planning Shuck now does, aimed at setting up the system again in an emergency, is lowkey. The agency has only 135,000 drakt cards left in its warehouse, which would not be enough for a single day of registration.

It turns down occasional requests for replacement draft cards from people who want them to apply for jobs, mostly with local governments who haven't gotten around to changing draft-era personnel regulations.

"Even if you want a draft card today, we're not issuing them," says Shuck.

Unique Name Proves Only Small Obstacle

WHITMIRE, S.C. (AP) — 10-8 Kelley says he hasn't had much trouble with his name. Only twice was it an obstacle.

"It took me 10 years to get the 'Georgia Farm Market' subscription started because of a hassle over my name," recalls Kelley. "And once an insurance company questioned my use of 10-8, so I refused to buy their insurance. They didn't trust me so I didn't trust them."

Kelley, 75, is listed on his birth certificate as "teneight," but he shortened it to the numerical 10-8, which is how it's listed on his driver's license. All his mail is addressed to 10-8 Kelley.

"Mamma went 10 months with me and I came out on the eighth day. Two doctors gave me that name."

If you think his name is unusual, how about his mother's?

"Her name was Mary Artie Missy Vandora Illinois Minnie Lee Lanania Mary Ann Mandy Sara Ann Sandy Polly Ramdum Judy Ann Francis Boodiegard Collins Kelley," he said.

"But we called her Mary."

Chilean Regime Permits Probe Of Assassination

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The Chilean military regime is allowing an investigation to go forward that some say will implicate its agents in the mysterious assassination of socialist exile Orlando Letelier in Washington 18 months ago. The government claims these suspicions are part of a Communist plot.

The United States has asked permission to question two men, one reportedly an American, whom it suspects of involvement in the killing. U.S. investigators think Chilean agents may have hired Cuban exiles to carry out the assassination, according to American press reports.

But a key link in the investigation may have been lost, says an investigating judge.

Supreme Court Justice Marcos Libedinsky said the Foreign Ministry, following routine practice, may already have burned temporary official passports used by the two men to enter the United States.

And Justice Juana Gonzalez, assigned by the Supreme Court to consider the American request, says she can call no one to testify until Judge Libedinsky establishes that the names given in the U.S. petition "correspond to real people."

The U.S. government says two agents of the Chilean security police traveled to the United States one month before Letelier was slain on Sept. 21, 1976, and that they used passports identifying them as Juan Williams Rose, 28, and Alejandro Romeral Jara, 27.

Letelier, who served at various times as foreign minister, ambassador to Washington and defense minister in the government of Chile's late Marxist President Salvador Allende, was killed by a remote-control bomb placed under his car. A companion also died in the blast.

The leftist politician had gone into exile after spending a year in prison following Allende's overthrow by a military junta in September 1973.

The U.S. magazine Penthouse said last week a six-month investigation it conducted found that Chilean agents paid $1 million to the killers.

Chilean newspapers claim Williams is really Michael V. Townley, a native of Waterloo, Iowa, who has lived here for more than 15 years and is married to a Chilean. The papers say Romeral is an army infantry captain named Armando Fernandez Larios.

Townley's wife said he was in southern Chile last week, but she issued a statement in his name denying he had ever used the pseudonym Juan Williams Rose, traveled under a Chilean passport or had any part in Letelier's death.

The army reportedly is planning an investigation into whether Fernandez ever traveled under the name Romeral. Reporters who went to the house where Fernandez lives with his mother and brother last week were told the family was at a nearby resort. Two men in an unmarked car were staking out the house.

President Gen. Augusto Pinochet says Chile is giving the United States "the maximum of assistance" in the case "because this government has had nothing to do with the crime...."

"I have the impression that this is a very well-mounted campaign, like all the campaigns that the Communists mount to discredit the (Chilean) government," he said.

Legal experts here think the United States will not be granted its request to send federal investigators to Chile to question the two men. A Chilean lawyer and professor, Alfredo Etcheberry, has been named by Washington as its judicial proxy in the interim.

Judge Libedinsky's first move in investigating the passport issue was to question Humberto Alvarez, who was No. 2 man in the Foreign Ministry's consular department in 1976. Alvarez said after his session with the judge that he had nothing to do with the granting of the two passports and did not know who signed them.

Alvarez' immediate superior, Carlos Guillermo Osorio, died last Oct. 22 from what an autosopy ruled was a self-inflicted gunshot wound. Libedinsky said he was not looking into Osorio's death because it was not part of his assignment.

Radioactivity Stirs Conflict Over Rock

PORT HUENEME, Calif. (UPI) — A U.S. Navy ship docked Sunday in preparation for unloading 5,500 tons of radioactive crushed rock and dirt from Antarctica, but a state health official said the Navy would have to get the contaminated material out of California.

It was the second shipment of radioactive matter brought here by the Navy because of an 11-nation treaty prohibiting dumping of radioactive substances in the Antarctic.

"We're going to allow it on a temporary basis," Jerome Lackman, head of the State Department of Health said. "My standpoint is it will be here just long enough to be taken to an approved dumping site — and there is no site in California approved for dumping of radioactive waste."

He said the closest approved site was in the Nevada desert.

No U.S. Navy spokesmen were available during the weekend, but Lt. Tom Crane of the Naval Nuclear Power Unit on the facility, said earlier the material was not dangerous.

"There are in Ventura County natural rock formations with twice the background radiation as is found in the material from Antarctica," he said.

"I could care less," Lackman told UPI. "God put the existing rock formations here and we can't force nature and the good Lord to take back what is given in California.

"The fact is, because we have natural radioactivity, it's more reason not to put manmade radioactive matter here. This is accumulative in humans.

"It's presumptuous of the Navy to compare itself with the good Lord," he added.

Lackman added that his legal office was trying to determine how long a "temporary" period might be and was dealing directly with the Navy Department in Washington.

Navy officials here said they wanted to use the crushed rock as foundation for parking lots and roads. The shipload of contaminated matter was to be unloaded starting Monday and was to be covered with asphalt, a Navy spokesman said earlier.

The Navy late last year shipped 7,908 tons of the contaminated material to Port Hueneme, where it remains covered with asphalt.

Laos Seeks Return Of Water Buffalo

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand and Laos are negotiating the repatriation of a refugee water buffalo from Laos.

The Bangkok World reported that the animal recently forded the Mekong River between the two nations and began grazing on the lawn of a Thai provincial governor's home. Laotian officials are anxious for its return because of a national shortage of work animals.

Bandit Pair Sought In Holdup Of Restaurant

Two armed suspects took an undetermined amount of money from the McDonald's Restaurant at 2343 19th St. early Sunday in the city's latest aggravated robbery.

Night manager Thomas Edward Hutchins told police that a man, armed with a knife, entered the establishment through the rear door about 3:30 a.m.

"He walked up to me, made a jabbing motion at me with the knife and told me to open the safe," the 18-year-old manager said.

Hutchins then told police that the man called for his accomplice to enter the restaurant. "The second man then began waving this pistol around and The night manager told officers that the first man took the money from the safe and that both subjects ran out the rear door and got into a light blue pickup.

Lubbock police late Sunday were looking for the two suspects — the first, an 18-20-year-old Mexican American male weighing 150-160 pounds, and the second, a Mexican-American male about 160-170 pounds and muscular.

Hutchins told police that the first man was wearing a pair of panty hose and a piece of white knit over his face when he entered the restaurant. He said the man also wore a dirty, white T-shirt, gray pants, blue tennis shoes and yellow gloves.

Witnesses told officers his accomplice was wearing a white T-shirt, blue jeans and a light blue jacket.

Witnesses later told police that they thought the man's pistol could have been a toy gun.

The weekend's police activity was also filled with numerous burglaries in homes and businesses across the city.

Pharmacist Jim Lester told officers that between 6 a.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday someone took $900 worth of drugs from the Save-On Pharmacy at 5050 50th St.

Entry apparently was made through a beauty shop next door to the pharmacy. Burglars knocked a hole in the west wall of the shop, entering the pharmacy through the hole.

Robert Craig Bessent told police that late Saturday or early Sunday, burglars made off with $1,000 in rodeo riding equipment from his pickup, which was parked at a club at Loop 289 and South University Avenue.

Kenneth Rocha, owner of a club at 1813 Texas Ave., Sunday reported the theft of $1,056 in cigarettes, beer and money from the establishment.

Rocha told police that early Sunday someone had gone through the change boxes of the pool tables, had forced the cigarette machine open taking a few packs and had made off with all the beer except the "light."

Entry apparently was made through the east side of the building, where a nailed board had been removed from a rear window.

Steven Ray Peterson of 4521 Brownfield Road, No. 111, said that late Saturday or early Sunday, someone had removed a $900 portable generator from his pickup in the apartment complex's parking lot.

In other burglaries:

— James Richard Zeeck of 104 N. Ave. V reported the theft of a camera, calculator, guitar and radio from his home sometime late Saturday or early Sunday. The loss was estimated at $500.

— Brad H. Teague of 1810 Aberdeen Ave. told officers that someone made off with a camera, television set, turntable and jewelry sometime Sunday morning. He estimated the loss at $687.

— Danny Eudean Love of 1702 E. Auburn told police that burglars had removed tapes and a camera, worth $300, from his home Friday night or Saturday. Entry was made through an unlocked rear sliding glass door.

Both Tim Lee Christesson of 2223 5th St. and Alvin Eugene Ivory of 2211-A 5th St. reported the loss of their color television sets this weekend.

Christesson said his $500 set was taken sometime between 8 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Saturday, while Ivory said his $800 set was removed sometime Sunday morning. Entry at both residences was made by kicking open the front door.

Study Shows Most Students Drinking

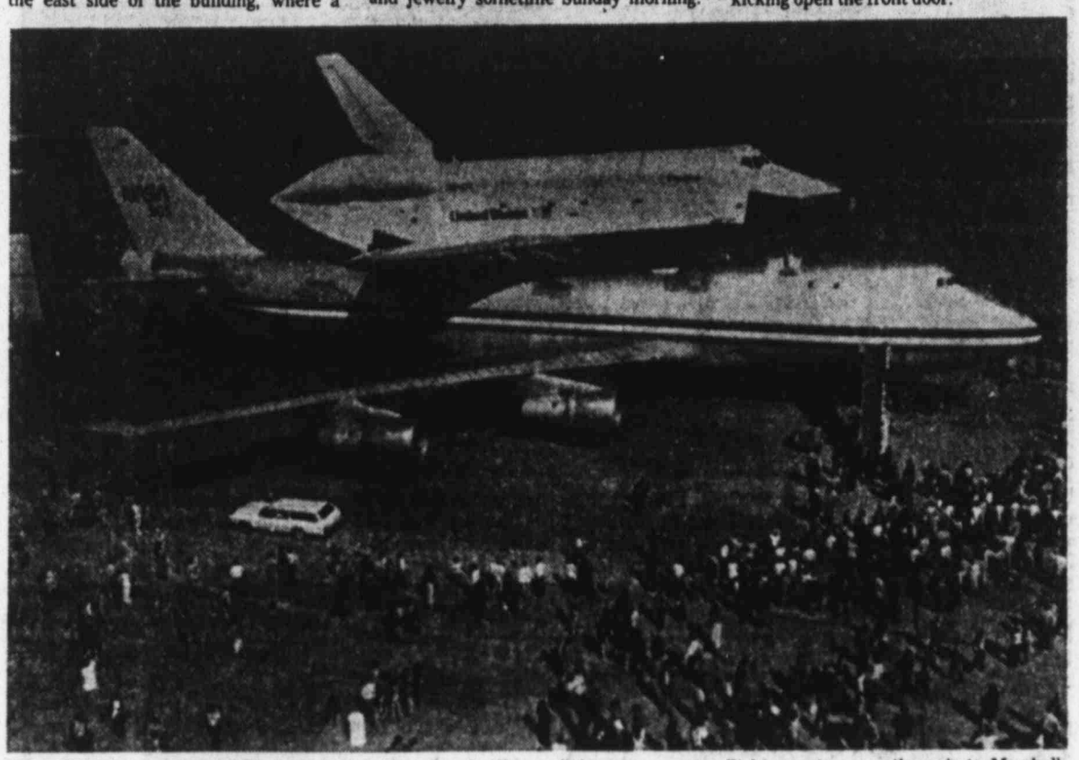

BOSTON (AP) — Ninety-five percent of all New England college students drink alcohol, and most of them have been drinking since high school or earlier, a survey shows.

The survey, released today, also shows that three-quarters of senior college men drink at least once a week.

The poll sampled the drinking habits of 10,508 students at colleges across New England. It was conducted by The Medical Foundation, a Boston research and community health agency. A survey conducted in 1950 showed that 20 percent of college men and 40 percent of college women did not drink at all.

NO VACANCIES

SARREGUEMINES, France (AP) — Criminals sentenced to jail terms in this northeastern French town are being placed on bail until there is a vacant cell, authorities said. The jail is full to its capacity of 141 prisoners, including 61 currently on trial.

Rhodesia Seen As Next Target For Cuban, Soviet Soldiers

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department African experts think Cuban and Soviet troops, fresh from victory in Ethiopia, are increasingly likely to become involved in combat in Rhodesia.

The officials, speaking privately, are pessimistic that American diplomacy can help bring a moderate and stable black government out of the Rhodesian cauldron of competing black nationalists, white colonialists and superpower rivalry.

Despite personal efforts by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance last week, the administration could not arrange a conference of the competing nationalist groups.

The officials, who declined to be identified, say it appears likely that the "internal" nationalist groups will proceed with their plans to compete in elections and take over the government on Dec. 31, as agreed to by Prime Minister Ian Smith.

The "external" groups of the Patriotic Front, meanwhile, may intensify their guerrilla war from bases in the sympathetic neighboring countries of Zambia and Mozambique, the African experts say. These groups reject the internal settlement, calling it a sellout that will preserve for whites much of the privileges they had under colonial rule.

The Smith government has indicated it will step up its tactic of crossing into Zambia and Mozambique for pre-emptive strikes on guerrilla bases. Either of those countries, or the Patriotic Front itself, could call for aid from the Soviets and Cubans.

There are an estimated 25,000 to 30,000 Cuban troops in Africa, based in Angola and Ethiopia. There are 1,000 Soviet advisers in Ethiopia. Cuba and Russia are supporters of the Patriotic Front.

Publicly, the Carter administration has said it would view as "most serious" any communist intervention in the conflict. Such intervention would increase pressure on the administration to intervene on behalf of the internal groups.

Some State Department African experts say they hope that pressure will be resisted. They believe experience of such nations as Tanzania shows American interests can be served by getting along with non-aligned, socialist states.

The two main competitors for power in a black-ruled Zimbabwe appear to be:

— The "internal groups," whose major spokesman is Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a Methodist clergyman. Muzorewa became politically prominent and popular in 1971 when he dissuaded the British from accepting an independence plan favored by Smith.

— The Patriotic Front, whose leaders are Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

Muzorewa's group also includes Ndabaningi Sithole, a nationalist leader jailed for 10 years by the Smith regime and branded as a communist. But Sithole has re-emerged as an ally of the British and American business interests in Rhodesia.

It also includes Jeremiah Chirau, who was appointed and paid as a tribal chieftain by the Smith regime. As a black member of past Smith governments, he is considered to have little popular support.

Nkomo is Rhodesia's pioneering black nationalist. Like Sithole, he spent most of the 1960s in jail. And, like Sithole, he is considered ideologically flexible.

Mugabe has been operating his guerrilla effort from Mozambique. He is considered a more committed Marxist than the other nationalists. White Rhodesians feel he has less popular following than Nkomo.

White Rhodesians believe Muzorewa is the most popular nationalist leader. But some have felt that he is not an astute politician and would have trouble retaining his popularity in office.

The internal groups have agreed to allow whites to continue to control the police, army and judiciary during the interim period. After majority rule, they agree to allow whites enough representation in the new government to block constitutional changes.

The constitution, which would be unchangeable without white approval, guarantees the property rights of whites, who own half the land in the country, and their status in the civil service.

The front's leaders are supported by most of the major nations of black Africa. Nkomo is close to Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, a colleague from the days when Zambia and Rhodesia were both British colonies struggling for independence.

This is a major factor in American considerations. The Carter administration has gone to great lengths to cultivate such influential African states as Nigeria.

Animal Lovers Mourn Death Of Hippo Bubbles

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Flowers and phone calls poured into Lion Country Safari on Sunday from those who mourned for Bubbles, the pregnant, fugitive hippo who died as rangers tried to return her to the wild animal park.

Park spokesman Jerry Kobrin said there was a slight increase in visitors to the park 50 miles south of Los Angeles. Many visitors asked to see Bubbles' 800-pound daughter, Tiny Bubbles, Kobrin said.

The park has donated Bubbles' skeleton to the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History, and park officials said Sunday they will name a theater after her in the park.

Dr. James Dale Smith of the museum staff said the skeleton will be used in research rather than for public display.

Bubbles fled the park Feb. 20, scaling a 4½-foot fence, and took refuge in nearby Clucker Lake. She died Friday night, more than an hour after being hit with tranquilizer darts and falling with her head facing down a hillside.

An autopsy conducted Saturday by veterinarian Dr. Donald Dooley indicated that the weight of her internal organs had pressed against her diaphragm, making breathing difficult for the 4,000-pound hippo.

"I concluded that the death came about because of the head-down position," Dooley said.

If officials had realized the position of her head might be a problem, they would have turned her around, according to park spokeswoman Jo Schetter.

Bubbles' death was a shock to park rangers and staff members who thought she had been doing well and that the capture had been a success, Miss Schetter said.

"It was devastating," she said. "People were just very numb at first. People were just staring at each other. Nobody talked."

Then the phone calls started coming in — from as far away as London.

"During the early hours we were called everything from incompetents to murderers," said Kobrin.

Then, the name-calling stopped "like magic, like someone had drawn a line," he said. "We were getting sympathy, offers of money for animal funds."

Miss Schetter said the park eventually may give Tiny Bubbles a collar or other special marking so visitors will be able to pick her out, "but only if it doesn't make her uncomfortable."

Rites Pending For Deputy B.D. Herron

Services for Bobby Dwight Herron, 43, a Lubbock County Sheriff's Deputy, are pending with Resthaven-Singleton-Wilson Funeral Home.

Herron, of 5501 W. 3rd St., died at 4:45 p.m. Sunday in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital after a brief illness.

He had been a Lubbock policeman before becoming a sheriff's deputy and had also worked as a deputy for the Garza County Sheriff's Department.

The lifelong Lubbock resident was a member of Mackenzie Masonic Lodge and Highland Baptist Church.

He had served in the U.S. Navy.

Survivors include his wife, Nancy; a son, Christopher Lee of the U.S. Air Force; two stepsons, Robert and Tad Jeffcoat, both of the home; a daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Kling of Washington; a stepdaughter, Traci Jeffcoat of the home; his mother, Mrs. Clo Herron of Lubbock; a sister, Mrs. Cindy Griffin of Lubbock; and his grandmother, Mrs. Bob King of Lubbock.

Doctors Say Publisher May Remain Paralyzed

ATLANTA (AP) — Larry Flynt, Hustler magazine owner who was shot from ambush last Monday, remains in serious condition and may have to undergo more surgery, doctors said Saturday.

Surgeons said earlier that Flynt has less than a 50 percent chance that he will walk again because of damage to nerves.

THE PIG WITH A SOCIAL SECURITY CARD — Waterhole Ike is a pig with his own Social Security number. Owner Mark Cowley of Golconda, Nev., had to get his pig a card when he began selling stock in the animal. (AP Laserphoto)

Patrons Syndicate Porker

GOLCONDA, Nev. (AP) — The holder of Social Security number 530-80-4623 is a pig — in fact, a drunken pig.

Waterhole Ike never works; has dozens, if not hundreds, of offspring, and spends a good deal of his time lolling in the mud.

Every morning he waddles into Mark Cowley's cafe-tavern — Waterhole No. 1 — in this town in northern Nevada, and drinks beer from a 5-gallon bucket.

"He's all right until about 10:30 a.m. and then he comes in, has his drink and he's in hog heaven," Cowley said. "It uncurls his tail."

After a drink, Waterhole Ike listens as Cowley reads him letters from around the state.

Cowley heads a syndicate that promotes the pig. He already has sold about 1,000 shares of stock in the porker at $1 each. If a thoroughbred horse can be syndicated, said Cowley, so can a pig.

"The racehorse, Secretariat, was syndicated and worth I don't know how many millions," Cowley said. "And he had trouble performing stud service."

So far, that's not been a problem for Waterhole Ike. He charges $25.

Waterhole Ike's story began about two years ago, when Cowley and eight of the patrons in his bar formed the syndicate. All the money collected was put in a cigar box.

When the syndicate outgrew the box, Cowley decided to open a savings account for the pig. But the savings and loan firm needed a Social Security number for the account holder to report interest for taxes, so Cowley applied for a card.

"Everything I put on there was the truth," Cowley said. "His mother was Go-Pig-Go, and his father was Three Stars. He was born on May 1, 1974.

"Down at the bottom where it says signature, I wondered what to do, since everybody knows a 2-year-old pig can't write," he said. "So I wrote Waterhole Ike by Mark Cowley'."

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare sent Waterhole Ike a Social Security card and Cowley gave the number to the bank.

"I went to the welfare people and told them I knew this guy who couldn't work because he is an alcoholic and he has 10 dependents.

"The welfare department was going to give him $650 a month. I even almost got him into the alcoholic rehabilitation program. As far as the government is concerned, he's just the same as you or I."

Waterhole Ike got a letter the other day from his bank.

"The letter said he is now eligible to borrow from $2,500 to $25,000 or more at any of their statewide offices," Cowley said.

The future seems secure for Waterhole Ike. More stock certificates are being issued and he now has just about $1,000 in the bank.

Character Actor Enjoys Variety Of Off-Camera Enterprises

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jonathan Harris, currently starring in the Saturday morning kiddie show "Space Academy," is a witty, urbane and accomplished actor who seems destined to play in less than distinguished TV series.

He has, in fact, starred in seven series altogether, including a pair of animated cartoons, "My Favorite Martian" and "The Three Musketeers."

His five live shows were "The Third Man" with Michael Rennie (90 episodes), "The Bill Dana Show" (52), "Lost In Space" (90), "Uncle Croc's Block" with Charles Nelson Reilly (16) and now "Space Academy" (20).

Additionally, Harris reckons he has appeared as a guest in some 600 other television shows, making him one of the most visible character actors on home screens.

"I've been on television as much as anyone I know and I've learned nothing except how to steal scenes," Harris says.

"But I'm not sneaky about it. The first day on the set I holler, 'Everything I see belongs to me, so just forget it.' That usually goes over with the rest of the cast with a dull thud."

Harris is embued with a rollicking sense of humor which usually is directed at himself. Of his many series, he says, "Everyone is a hero in a hit and we're all bums in a bomb. I know nothing of movies. I've done only three in my life and all were of no consequence."

Harris and his wife, Gertrude, were high school sweethearts in the Bronx. They went to the senior prom together and eventually married and settled down in New York City.

Today, after 35 years of married life, they live in a California ranch-style home atop a hill in an exclusive section of the San Fernando Valley. Their son, Richard, 33, is in the automotive business in Louisville, Ky.

Their three-bedroom, fourbath house, is a mixture of contemporary and antique furniture collected over the years on the east coast and in California. Jonathan's favorite individual piece is a genuine Tiffany lamp which rests on a 200-year-old English desk-table in the living room.

Because "Gertrude and I both have excellent taste," the Harris' eschewed a professional decorator and planned the furnishings themselves. The rooms are restfully done in earth tones, oranges, browns and rusts.

Jonathan spends as much time outdoors as he does in, thanks to his fascination with some 40 rose bushes on which he lavishes much time and love. The gardener is not allowed to touch them.

"I feed and prune and spray and fertilize those roses with great love," Jonathan says. "And I talk to them, too, but not tenderly. 'Bloom!' I shout at them, 'or else!'"

There is a swimming pool in the garden, used only in the summertime and then principally by Gertrude.

Jonathan cooks all the meals. Most of the time he sticks to broiled fish or chicken and a salad to maintain waistlines. But once a month the Harrises entertain on the grand scale, usually at dinner parties for from eight to 12 guests at sitdown feasts.

It is then that Jonathan's love for haute cuisine comes into play. He is most proud of his beef Wellington and such rich, fancy desserts as trifles with apples and whipped cream.

He swears by the adage "he who cooks does not clean." After dinner it is Gertrude who washes the pots and pans, except for dinner parties when help is brought in to do the mopping up.

Jonathan's working day begins at 5 a.m. when he arises, sips coffee and reads through his lines. He drives to the studio and is ready to begin work at 7:30. He usually returns home by 6 o'clock in time for a couple of libations, most often gin and Dubonnet.

On those days when he doesn't work, Jonathan, attired in shorts and shirt, heads for Santa Monica and a five-mile walk on the beach, striding the distance in about an hour.

To and from work or the beach, Jonathan's automobile is filled with opera music from his tape deck. At home every room is generally awash with grand opera from his collection of 80 full recordings of classic works.

"Opera is a vital part of my life," he says. "I play no favorites, but I love all of Verdi and the schmaltz of Puccini."

Jonathan and Gertrude attend every opera that comes to Los Angeles. Most of it, he says, is inferior, but even so he enjoys every last aria.

Harris speaks in stentorian tones and would have loved to have become an opera singer but, alas, he "can't sing note one." His inability to carry a tune, however, hasn't stopped him from trying.

"At every opportunity I tour with musical comedies," Jonathan says.

We've noticed

People who come to our funeral home don't look the way they used to. They dress differently, for one thing.

And they don't always think the way they used to. They've changed with the times.

If the people who come here are changing, shouldn't we be changing too?

We don't intend to be "wild" or "faddish" . . . but we do intend to keep in step with the thinking, the taste, and the values of the public we serve.

Actor Pursues Film, Literary Career

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tony Curtis prefers to think of it as a revival of his film career and not as a comeback.

Curtis, who had been absent from the screen for almost two years, is now back with four movies. He stars in "The Manitou," "Sextette" with Mae West, "The Bad News Bears Go To Japan" and "Casanova and Co."

"People said I was making a comeback," Curtis snorted. "I say the motion picture business is making a comeback, not me. I was always here."

Curtis, 51, who starred in such films as "Operation Petticoat," "Some Like It Hot," and "The Defiant One," sits in a chair in the library of his Bel Air mansion. But he seems ready to spring up and prowl about the room, as he does several times. You sense an undercurrent of tension. Maybe it's just the weather; rain is coming down in buckets outside.

He is busy again with films and at work on a second novel. He is friendly and outwardly happy, yet smarts at the mockery he has suffered and at the reception his first novel received.

He talked about his best-selling book, "Kid Andrew Coy and Julie Sparrow." He said, "I got a check for $22,000 for royalties the other day. I got an advance of $50,000 and that's already been paid back. So what's that — over 70,000 copies sold in hardback?

"But I didn't get a review except in fringe newspapers. I couldn't get on the 'Today' or 'Tonight' shows to talk about it. Playboy's the only magazine that reviewed it. Playboy said if you stick a gorilla in front of a typewriter it would write a better book than I did."

Curtis said he was thrilled by the success of the book. He said, "It's meant so much to me. It gives me more confidence. It takes the edge off the picture business for me. Not so much for making money, but having another job. Another outlet for my time and energy."

Curtis said he is now writing a second book, to be called "Star Struck." It will be fashioned from his observations and experiences in Hollywood, Las Vegas and New York.

He was asked if he didn't feel some people had been putting him down in his film career.

"I feel that," replied Curtis, who was born Bernard Schwartz. "Maybe some people think it's paranoia, but I've felt it from the beginning. When I did 'Son of Ali Babi' people joked that I said, 'Yonda lies duh castle of me fodda.'

"I never said that. I have a New York accent, but when I work on a script I can eliminate the regional accent. Is it my fault they put me in a movie with bloomers?

"It was an ethnic joke. It made me angry. I don't like Jew jokes. No more than Richard Pryor likes black jokes. I don't do jokes like that. I don't try to equalize myself by making jokes about short people or fat people. Suppose they put me in 'Son of Lepke.' Would they still make fun of my accent?"

Curtis said he thinks things are changing. He said, "Younger people are not so much into ethnic slurs as they were when I was young. I was like a white black man. When I was younger I heard more of it."

In his newest movie, "The Manitou," Curtis plays a psychic who does battle with the spirit of an Indian medicine man. The film also stars Michael Ansara, Susan Strasberg, Stella Stevens, Jon Cedar and Ann Sothern. It was produced and directed by William Girdler, who was killed several months ago in a helicopter crash while scouting film locations in the Philippines.

He also has a guest star role in the upcoming ABC movie 'Vegas."

Curtis said he had been out of films because "my family was in turmoil. It took me 18 months to gather my children from my other marriages."

He said he gained custody of five of his six children from his three marriages. He previously was married to Janet Leigh and Christina Kaufman and is now wed to the former Leslie Merter. The only child he doesn't have custody of is is Janet Leigh Curtiss, who plays one of the nurses in ABC's "Operation Petticoat." The series is adapted from the film Curtis Starred in with Cary Grant.

Curtiss starred in two television series, ABC's "The Persuaders," made in Europe with Roger Moore, and NBC's "McCoy."

"McCoy" was an unfortunate experience for me," he said. "You know how clever they were? They took one of my movies, 'The Great Imposter,' and turned it into McCoy."

"The charm and the intrigue of the character for me was that he still thought he was a kid. We can all identify with people like that. My idea of the character was that while he was right in the middle of conning somebody his mother calls him on the phone. But those people get nervous if somebody isn't killing somebody. It's the treadmill of the ratings."

Curtis said he would be interested in doing a mini-series.

DELIGHTFUL SIGNS OF THE SEASON — At Baby World and Lue Ree's, springtime is the watchword, with Easter fashions and even stuffed toys as proof. Courtney, age 5, and Cherry, 12, daughters of owners Jonathan and Vickie Hoffman, are pictured modeling some of the new arrivals from Fischel, Martha Miniatures and Cherry Barrel. See these and other provocative fashions now stocked in abundance.

Readiness For Easter, Spring Evident At Popular Baby World

'Tis hard to think of these separately . . . Easter . . . children . . . pretty frocks and suits . . . smiling faces . . . Baby World . . . and Lue Ree's Children's Shop!

Yes, Easter is in the air, with the anticipation of related "dress up" and happy occasions accentuated by the prettiest stock ever for the little folks . . . at Baby World (and its, sister shop, Lue Ree's, now under the same ownership).

Select at Baby World, 4918 50th St., from a huge selection of apparel, girls sizes through 6x, and boys sizes through 7. At Lue Ree's in Briercroft Shopping Center, boys wear is stocked from infants through size 12, girls in infants through size 14, plus pre teens and some juniors.

Furniture for the children's rooms is stocked in a most comprehensive and delightful selection at Baby World.

Easter Toys

Not only have all the new Easter fashions and materials arrived, but there are lots of delightful stuffed, cuddly Easter-related toys at both stores.

'Tis a fun time for shopping!

From day to day, even with the huge stock, new arrivals are very much in evidence, with spring and Easter needs receiving top attention at this time.

Accessories

Accessories are stocked at both the stores owned by Vickie and Jonathan Hoffman who are most appreciative of the trade that has made possible the growth of their stores.

Convenient hours at each are 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays.

Possibly best known for the apparel items and accessories, Baby World is truly outstanding in its presentation of furniture for the little folks, with the Simmons products stocked.

Nursery Considered

"Everything for the nursery" is the correct image of Baby World, area shoppers have found.

"After all, your baby deserves the best!"

Everything at Baby World and Lue Ree's . . . the merchandise, decor and friendly greetings included, conveys that exciting offerings are the rule, with the customer given every consideration.

One may select with confidence from top lines, from today's fashions, at prices to please.

Special Features Mark Anniversary Sonotone-Lubbock Wednesday Event

This Wednesday . . . that is the day!

It is the 26th Anniversary Event at Sonotone-Lubbock, 2318 Broadway.

"Now these 26 years do not apply to me," Louise Bills, manager, quips, "I am a wee bit older, but I've been serving you (I hope) for 26 years!"

Open House will be conducted from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on March 15, in a come-and-go affair, at Sonotone-Lubbock.

There will be refreshments and favors for all.

"Sonotone-Lubbock will provide transportation for senior citizens wishing to attend! Simply call us, and we will be glad to come and get you. We love you."

Special Feature

Then, at conclusion of the big day, a hearing aid will be awarded to some fortunate person! Be sure and register during the announced anniversary day.

Louise further explains that the celebration honors "my youngest customer, Mrs. Martha Knoles who will be 102 years of age come July 2!"

Mrs. Knoles, alert Idalou centenarian, has been most profuse in her acclaim of her hearing aid fitted by Ralph Huntington of Sonotone-Lubbock. She was fitted with the aid in early 1977; and it is the first hearing aid ever worn by this outgoing area resident!

She also reports how friends and relatives have voiced their enthusiasm about her better hearing.

Such testimonials are treasured by Sonotone-Lubbock with its staff that year in and year out serves the interests of the hard-of-hearing in a wide South Plains area.

LOUISE BILLS

"If you have not become acquainted with the fine folks at Sonotone-Lubbock, there is no reason to delay longer!"

Old friends and new ones alike are invited to the 26-year celebration; please come!

A veteran in hearing aid sales, service and achievement, Louise Bills has been heaped with honors from manufacturer and customers alike.

Each staffmember exemplifies the firm's concept of service in every contact.

"Professionalism with a human touch" at Sonotone-Lubbock has earned appreciation and acclaim of customers throughout the area. Small wonder these people at Sonotone-Lubbock, 2318 Broadway, phone 762-5469, have made life richer for hundreds throughout the region.

No-Obligation Test

Individual hearing tests, at no obligation, personalized fitting, frequent check-ups and the interested care of a Sonotone consultant is the service one can expect without exception at Sonotone-Lubbock.

"If you have a hearing problem or suspect that you may have one, that visit or call you make to Sonotone-Lubbock may be the most important one you will ever make."

ALLINE ELLIS AMONG THOSE ASSISTING IN 'SPRINGTIME' DEPARTMENT

Fashionable, Practical New-Season Women's, Children's Apparel Noted

Nowhere are the new-season preferences more evident and gorgeous than in Woolco's Ladies and Children's Departments where the scene is beautifully set for Spring and Easter.

Fashions are stocked to satisfy every lady's taste . . . softly feminine one-piece dresses, long dresses, three-piece vested skirt suits or pantsuits; and a large selection of the peasant or country look will lead the fashion parade for the misses and juniors.

Half sizes will chose jacket dresses, soft one-piece dresses and the three-piece skirt suit or pantsuits.

Maternity customers can find all the great looks from dressy blouses to jeans and dresses and pantsuits.

For Junior Boys

Junior boys can be just like dad, thanks to Woolco, in their three-piece or leisure suits teamed with dress or sport shirts. These come in junior boys sizes 2-7 and infants sizes 12-18-24 months.

Qualified Help

These fashions and many more can be found in the ladies and children's departments at Woolco, where every saleslady is anxious to help "make Woolco your favorite store."

Woolco Again Comes Through With All Candy, Toys, Accessories For Easter

Woolco is Easter candy headquarters!

Choose from a wide variety of filled baskets and filled pails, a size and assortment to fit any budget and any sweet tooth! All are attractively packaged and cellophane wrapped.

The enormous selection of Easter candy includes chocolate bunnies in several shapes and sizes, both solid and hollow milk chocolate; malted milk eggs in a variety of sizes and colors, foil wrapped in bunny banks; speckled colored eggs, and a large variety of hard candy to fill baskets with hide-and-seek marshmallow eggs and rabbits, cellophane wrapped for freshness, and jelly bird eggs.

Baskets are stocked in all sizes, shapes and colors, in woven bamboo plastic for durability, with mountains of grass to fill the baskets.

And what a selection of plush toys . . . bunnies, lambs, etc. in all sizes and shapes.

ROSA GALARZA TELLS OF EASTER GOODIES

Selection Excels For Men, Boys

Woolco's Boys Wear and Men's Wear Departments are well prepared to add a lilt to one's Easter and Spring wardrobe with the latest styles, the finest quality, and great selection . . . all at Woolco's low discount prices.

A great selection of boys' and men's three-piece vested suits, at real money-saving prices, has just arrived. Also a large choice in boys' and men's sport coats is available.

The wardrobe can then be completed with many dress shirts and ties. The boys' and men's departments are simply loaded with the greatest selection of handsome casual wear one could imagine.

"And remember, these smartest styles and finest quality all are at Woolco's low discount prices!"

JAMES IVEY EDWARDS COMES TO VILLAGE CRAFT

Village Craft Corner Bringing Top Artists For Workshop, Class Schedule

Village Craft Corner scores again . . . to the benefit of those wishing instruction in oils, fabric painting, acrylics and more!

James Ivey Edwards, noted painter and sculptor, is being brought to Village Craft Corner (and to Lubbock for the first time) for an eight-week series of acrylics classes beginning Thursday, March 30! Classes will be from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m., and from 6 to 9 p.m. on announced dates.

Also, Edwards will be in the Village Craft Corner (in South Plains Mall) on this Saturday, March 18, demonstrating and displaying his work.

His love of the wild has carried him on many sketching trips throughout the desert Southwest, the Plains and the Rockies as far north as Canada.

The bulk of the artist's work is in acrylic, and he has developed several techniques in that media. He also is accomplished in oil and watercolor techniques.

He now teaches privately in all media, and has taught painting and sculpture on the college level.

Edwards, from Canyon, received training at Amarillo College, West Texas State University and the University of Texas. He has painted professionally for 13 years, taught privately for five years, and has taught at West Texas State University and the University of Oregon in Medford.

Although the classical media are well within his use, Edwards uses acrylics extensively because of their brilliance and permanance, he explains.

He uses his paintings and sculpture to accomplish his goal of being an artist of the complete West, including its people, its wildlife and the land itself.

Inquire now for details about the course at Village Craft Corner; early attention is advised.

Other Instruction

Also, there is an impressive list of other instructors and classes at this popular shop.

Virginia Jones will conduct classes in beginning oils, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m., beginning Friday, March 31. Virginia has exhibited widely in the area and holds numerous awards. She paints and exhibits primarily in Texas and New Mexico.

Also beginning this month is a course in fabric painting with Delta dyes, conducted by Sally Wax. These sessions will meet from 10 a.m. until 12 noon on Tuesdays, and from 6:30 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays. Early inquiry for details and registration is advised.

Georgia Bartlett, no stranger to area artists, is from Abernathy and will conduct four weeks of oil workshops in "Fantasy Poppy Florals, beginning April 3, from 6 p.m. until 9 p.m. on Mondays.

Her work has been shown in numerous galleries including the Elegante Gallery, Odessa; Frame Gallery, Lubbock; and the Garland Lott Gallery in Plainview.

Full details on all these classes and workshops will gladly be furnished, including scheduled and additional information regarding each instructor.

Village Craft Corner, remember, stocks scads of craft, art and hobby supplies within the big shop, too.

All-New Steve's Flowers Has 'Plus Factors' To Appreciate

"If you have not become acquainted with Steve's Flowers, 3833 50th St., then an exciting, rewarding new experience awaits!"

It is new . . . it is different . . . it is pretty . . . and the service and stock proves the customer is appreciated!

Steve's Flowers, phone 793-2721, in Turner Square, is all new, open since Jan. 1.

However, the owners and founders are veterans in the field.

"Meet Mr. and Mrs. Steve Dearth (Steve and Tommie) who are your kind of folks."

Tommie Dearth is a Lubbock native and is a 1952 graduate of Lubbock High School and a '56 graduate of Texas Tech. She is the former Tommie Wynn.

Steve is a 24-year Texas resident and has been in the floral business "most of his life". The couple owned a retail florist business in Amarillo some seven years before coming to Lubbock 10 years ago, with Steve associated with another Lubbock florist firm during this period.

The Dearths have two daughters: Becca, a junior at Coronado High School; and Melissa, in the 4th grade at Hardwick.

With Easter just a few days distant, now would be an excellent time to learn the "difference" that is Steve's Flowers, "as modern as today, with the charm of yesteryear."

Easter lilies will be arriving, and one is invited to come in or call and make reservations to be sure of selection.

Select, too, at this one of the prettier shops of its type anywhere, from such desired items as cut flowers, blooming and green plants for home or office, tropicals, accessories and everything in the floral line for an outstanding party or wedding.

Steve's Flowers is a member of Teleflorist and the American Floral Service as a customer consideration.

Both Steve and Tommie are on the job to lend their expertise and to personally assure the service that one can appreciate; the friendly and informal atmosphere is most evident, yet professionalism is equally noted.

Prompt delivery is another "plus" for the firm.

Everything is new, and Steve personally did all the decorations that have drawn acclaim from early customers.

"Won't you too, come in and let's get acquainted? We are open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and until 12 noon on Saturdays."

KNOW THEIR FLOWERS — Tommie and Steve Dearth, owners of the new Steve's Flowers, are shown in a gazebo area of the beautifully appointed 50th Street facility where stock not only is most comprehensive but also attractively displayed, and where friendliness prevails.

Business & Industrial Review

OPERATES OWN BUSINESS — Johnie Johnson, long-recognized front-end specialist, serves at the 34th Street Johnie's Exxon that he now owns. Note the accompanying story for the numerous services there.

Johnie Johnson Exxon Stresses Service, Experience, Location

Judging from the rapidly increasing patronage, a lot of Lubbock folks are glad to rely upon Johnie Johnson in his own business, the Johnie Johnson Exxon at 34th Street and Knoxville Avenue!

Johnie, with over two decades experience (with one downtown Lubbock firm for 17 years as front end specialist and most recently as service manager) four months ago announced his ownership of the big facility on 34th Street.

Features of Johnie Johnson Exxon, phone 795-5942, include:

Expert wheel alignment, with brake and front end work a specialty, and with quality Bear spin balancing and wheel alignment equipment utilized;

Shocks, mufflers, tail pipes;

Tires and batteries, together with other accessories;

Oil filters and additives;

Even tune-ups! (A mechanic is on duty six days a week).

A state inspection station, Johnie Johnson Exxon is open long hours, seven days a week.

Huge access and parking aprons make "pulling in to Johnie's" most convenient, and not only is this convenience to be appreciated, but the entire facility is attractive, clean and thoroughly geared to efficiency in customer service.

Whether it is for gasoline, front end work or a tune up, whatever the service or product needed from Johnie's, one can be assured that this veteran in the field sincerely appreciates the trade and confidence.

"Johnie has been around a long time and likely already has served you. He welcomes old friends and new ones alike to come in, visit, and form the habit of depending upon him . . . now at the 34th Street and Knoxville corner."

New Mini-Computer, Electronic Cash Registers Added To Store's Stock

"Did you realize that the HLx Data Systems Corp. in-store mini-computer is available right here in Lubbock, from Lubbock Cash Register Co., 3033 34th St.?"

Thoroughly in keeping with its consideration of the area businessman, Lubbock Cash Register Co. has stocked this unit among its sales items, in keeping with its program of the "right product", service, knowledgeable personnel and appreciation of its customer list.

More about this HLx Star System mini-computer:

It has removable media disk reader/recorder. A base 32,768 Bytes of computer memory are standard. Memory can be added on a plug-in basis to almost 100,000 Bytes.

A variety of operational modes for different retailers is enabled.

The Star System owner can make an accurate P/L of operations on a daily basis given sales, product cost and labor cost from the machine.

Generally, only one disc is necessary for programming and operations per installation! The disc drive can be used to transfer information from the computer memory onto the disc or vice versa.

"The system offers the most in control and efficiency, of any system available today, and at a very reasonable price," reports Max Christopher, owner of Lubbock Cash Register Co. where its unit is presently available.

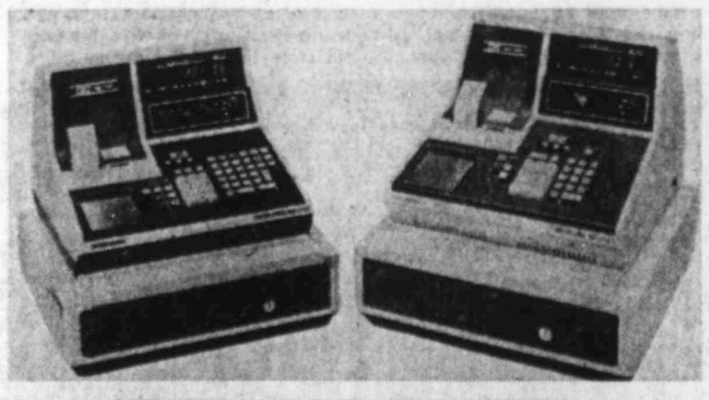

Attention also is directed to two new series in TEC Electronic Cash Register units, the MA-140 and the MA-190.

Each afford increased versatility to a broad range of ECR users.

The MA-140 series, available in two models (four and eight department total), features an exclusive new "Slip-Shute", a single-slip mechanism that permits validation of sales slips, customer checks and the like. It also offers the ability to program a greater variety of functions including some not previously available to all types of businesses.

The MA-190 series, offered in three models (eight, 12 and 16 department totals), combines all the features of the MA-140; in addition, its department keys may be programmed with pre-set amounts for greater accuracy.

Also, see Lubbock Cash Register for other units, other prestigious lines and for service.

NEW-MODEL TEC ELECTRONIC CASH REGISTERS

NEW BOON FOR BUSINESSMAN — Lubbock Cash Register Co. owner Max Christopher is shown with the new HLx mini-computer now stocked at his firm, together with other new machines that he recommends and stocks for area business.

SERVICE TRIO — Corky Matthews (center) and Terry Matthews and David Williams are among those assuring superior service at Matthews Plumbing Co.

Matthews Plumbing Providing Quality In Products, Service

"Call Matthews Plumbing, 763-1422, for all your plumbing needs! It is as simple as that."

Sales and installation of Payne air conditioners and State water heaters also are key services of Matthews, and with the change of seasons one could do well to check into the sensibly priced packages available there. Of course, Payne and State need no introduction; they are quality in every respect.

Matthews Plumbing is owned by "Corky" Matthews who has literally grown up in the business. He has assembled around him a staff, including licensed plumbers, that is very well qualified. Corky is the son of R.E. Matthews, well-known retired Lubbock builder. The Matthews Plumbing firm is essentially a family business, with personalized attention thus assured.

Established for five years, the firm has been in its present new and modern quarters at 1121 29th Street for some eight months.

The firm considers itself as "repair specialists", taking care of anything in plumbing repairs and on call day and night.

Three radio equipped trucks are maintained, aiding in fast service around the clock. Portable sewer machines are part of the equipment, of course.

New commercial work also is solicited.

Matthews Plumbing counts a lot of Lubbock customers among its friends, taking care of small jobs or big ones alike. One of the larger clients is the South Plains Fair that has utilized Matthews services for a number of years.

The Matthews Plumbing firm is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and Better Business Bureau, and it places foremost the old-fashioned business concepts including integrity, quality merchandise, qualified service and sensible pricing.

Fabric Mart, On 26th Street, 'Worth Finding, Patronizing'

"Maybe we are a little hard to find, but it is worth the effort to locate us!"

"We are speaking of the Fabric Mart, 2801 26th Street (just one block west of Boston Avenue on 26th), the only store of its type in this vast area of the city."

Home-owned and operated, the Fabric Mart takes pride in offering quality fabrics at reasonable prices, with a broad price range stocked.

Long established (in the same location for a quarter century), Fabric Mart has since January 1977 been owned by Mr. and Mrs. E.P. Hensley of Lubbock.

Mrs. Edna Redden, with the firm for 12 years, is the very capable manager; and experienced staffmembers are the rule, with all well versed in the fabric field and with several excelling as seamstresses themselves.

Special Considerations

Satisfaction is guaranteed at the Fabric Mart, and special discounts are available for schools, churches, sororities and civic organizations.

And something else . . . you don't have to wait on yourself at Fabric Mart! Qualified assistance is right there!

Accessories

Exciting fabric arrivals are noted at all times, and Fabric Mart carries a full line of notions, too.

Patterns are stocked from Butterick, McCalls, Vogue and Simplicity.

The Fabric Mart, 2801 26th St., phone 795-5519, is open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., six days a week, and the folks there only ask the opportunity of proving that this is an extraordinary store . . . with you in mind, and with satisfaction guaranteed.

QUALITY, NEWNESS ALWAYS — Mrs. Edna Redden, manager of the Fabric Mart, 2801 26th St,, points out that new materials include Superhit by Logantex, Loomskill fabrics in Trevira polyester, eyelet embroidery and more. She also emphasizes that the firm's skilled staff delights in working with brides in the selection, planning and special ordering for weddings. And for men . . . the Fabric Mart has material for fine suits and can order from the John H. Daniel Company for tailoring.

Business & Industrial Review

Chance's Lawn & Leisure Tells Heavier Stock For New Season

Chance's Lawn & Leisure stocks scads of sale and lease merchandise. It is a fact.

With the outdoor season at hand, with the garden and lawn needing attention, Chance's, at 3604 50th St., is especially well prepared, providing quality merchandise at economical prices.

So much is available there that listing would be near impossible. However, attention is called to the several products and services mentioned below:

Finest Mowers

A very, very good selection of new lawn mowers is on the showroom floor.

Rear-bagger Snapper mowers, push, self propelled and some with electric starters are stocked.

Also Toro, in side or rear bag; the Lawn Boy rear or side bag. And the Jacobsen riding mowers in stock are marked at up to $300. off!

Also there are the Yazoo heavy duty commercial mowers, and the really fine Trimmer reel mowers.

John Deere comes out with a new rear-bag, self propelled model that will be available soon; and other John Deere models are in stock now.

Then there is the "best homeowner or commercial gasoline edger", the Power Trim models, stocked at Chance's.

A full line of the gas and electric Weed-eaters is stocked at special low prices. Toro and Spin Trim nylon weed cutters are also stocked and recommended.

Sprinkler Needs

Select, also from Nipak or Ferti Lome fertilizers, replacement parts for mowers, garden hose, even sprinklers. Chance's stocks the Rain Bird do-it-yourself sprinkler equipment for underground installation, even making available a rental ditcher.

A full line of Stihl, John Deere and Homelite chain saws is stocked, with the firm offering service as well as sales.

Chain saw sharpening is expertly done.

Limited supply of John Deere bicycles presently is on hand, and one should select early.

Some Reconditioned Units

Good, used, reconditioned equipment is available at economy prices, including mowers, edgers, and some tillers formerly used as rental units.

Rentals

In the rental segment of the firm, one can secure just about anything, it seems.

There are auto repair tools, small hand and electric tools for the handyman and builder, floor care equipment, cement working equipment, lawn and garden tools, plumbing and even woodworking equipment;

Dollies and other moving accessories;

Camping Equipment

And now a new line of camping equipment for rent, including stoves, lanterns, sleeping bags, tents, catalytic heaters and more. What a benefit for the camper.

For those taking advantage of late-season ski opportunities, Chance's has all that is needed in snow ski equipment, at low rental fees.

Chance's Lawn & Leisure maintains a large repair department, and early attention to mower and other needs is advised as there no doubt will be a big rush when the warm days come to stay!

Overhead Automatic Door Installation Seen As Great Family Consideration

"Did the bad weather find you enjoying the convenience of an automatic overhead door installation for your garage?"

"Or have you envied your neighbor who with such facilities was spared exposure to snow and sleet, avoided walking on slick driveways to open or shut the garage door, and who could drive into a well-lighted garage at any hour of the night, enjoying both convenience and security?"

Let Overhead Door Co., 50th Street at Frankford Avenue (just off the Brownfield Highway near the Loop), phone 797-4141, come to your rescue!

Convenience, safety and protection — this is the whole story of automatic overhead doors from Overhead Door Co. of Lubbock.

Serving with the same fine products and desire to please, traditional with the firm for over 20 years, the Overhead Door Company of Lubbock is in relatively new location and in large, modern quarters.

For those who looked to the Overhead Door Company of Lubbock for years at its former 5283 34th St. location, the present location and expansion can be especially appreciated. The new facility is much larger than the former home, with greater storage, and even parking, to give the maximum of customer service.

So ... what better time is there to visit Overhead Door Co., to arrange for an automatic overhead door for the family's benefit now and for seasons to come, upgrading a present home or in building a new one.

"Give your home distinction and new convenience at low cost. Give your family the Overhead Door electric operator from Overhead Door Co. of Lubbock."

Auto-Mate 80

Special attention is called to the Auto-Mate 80, the ultimate garage door opener with all the features one would expect, and more.

Security and convenience are synonymous with the Auto-Mate 80. The simple touch of a button on the remote transmitter is all it takes to open, close and lock the garage door. Added security is as automatic as the door itself since when down, the door is securely locked.

A powerful 1/3 h.p. motor, operating on standard 115 V household current, provides smooth, quiet, dependable and positive operation of the door.

Complete Operation Safety

An instant reversing mechanism insures complete safety should the closing door encounter an obstacle. Should a power failure occur, a spring-loaded quick disconnect instantly converts the door to manual operation and is simply reconnected by hand.

This heavy duty, UL-approved operator can handle sectional or one-piece doors up to 18' by 8' or two single car doors hooked up tandem.

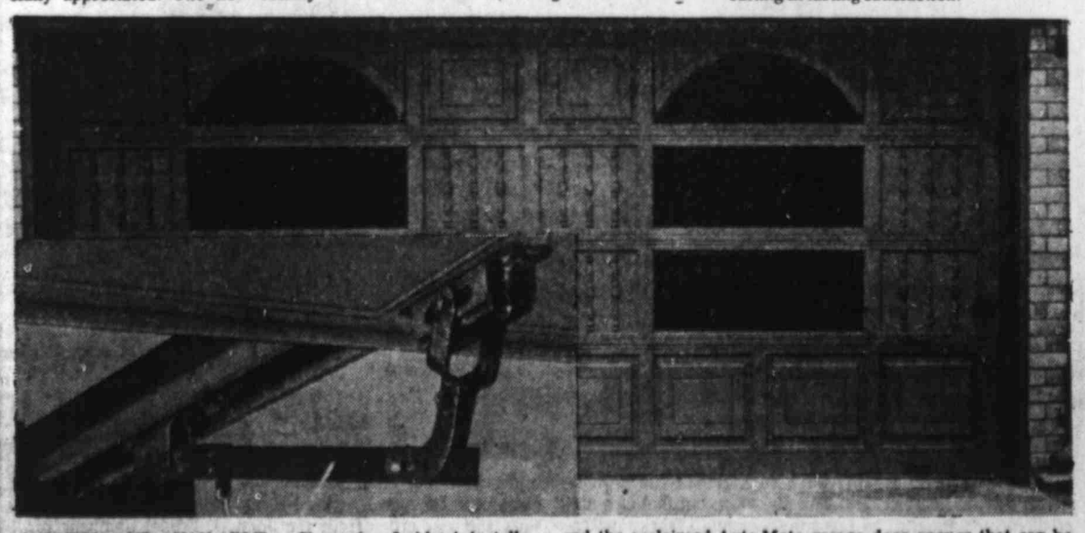

Automatic Doors represent a wise gesture by the head of the family. With these doors, the wife can open the garage, enter and lock it without leaving her vehicle — quite a convenience benefit in inclement weather (wind, rain, dust, snow), and a definite safety factor on dark nights.

Free Estimates

The Overhead Door Company of Lubbock is glad to demonstrate how simple it is to enjoy these benefits. Call for free estimate.

Overhead doors are available and recommended, also, for commercial and industrial buildings.

Whether selection is from a steel, wood or fiberglass overhead door, Tim Hatch at Overhead Door Co. assures the very best value in installation and sales, resulting in lasting satisfaction.

MODERN AND AVAILABLE — Shown is a Lubbock installation of an overhead automatic door (note its attractiveness) and the acclaimed Auto-Mate garage door opener that can be "a lift in your own situation," thanks to Overhead Door Co.

'DOESN'T THIS HINT OF THE DESIRABILITY OF MAMA'S PIZZA?'

Mama'a Pizza Seen Superior In Food, Decor To Remember

"There's no pizza like a Mama's Pizza!"

Just a catchy slogan? Difficult to believe? Not so!

An appreciative clientele from throughout the South Plains can attest to the "difference" that is Mama's Pizza, 1309 University in Lubbock, phone 747-3851.

Not only is the food superb, but the decor and atmosphere alone are worth a trip there . . . the furnishings were purposely selected to justify their notice in the same sentence with the fine food!

Three large areas, on three levels, accommodate the customers. Whether one prefers the Pub, the main floor or the upper dining area, pleasing surroundings prevail in the English mood. Antiques from the British Isles have been tastefully selected and arranged.

And Mama's Pizza can serve 365 persons in its spacious facility! Private party reservation are welcomed.

More about the atmosphere:

There are lots of tropical growing plants contributing to the friendly atmosphere. And an open fireplace for further coziness. And note the beautiful backgammon tables of hard redwood, the Jack Daniel kegs, the distinctive mural by an Arlington artist, and the stained glass signs a la England.

Texas-Based

Mama's Pizza is a franchised unit of the Texas-based Mama's Pizza organization centered in the Fort Worth — Arlington area.

Dave Carroll is Lubbock manager, and Bruce McMickle is president of the corporation.

The Lubbock unit was opened in late January and has met with instant and enthusiastic acceptance. Carroll, who came here from Mama's Pizza in College Station, is on the job personally, often cooking, to assure personal service in the finest tradition of the firm.

Freshest Food

Oh yes, the food! None is pre-cut or pre-prepared. Freshness is the watchword.

Be assured of garden fresh vegetables, with the tomatoes, green peppers, mushrooms and all sliced daily. Fresh yeast rising dough is used exclusively.

The menu is most enticing, with choice in pizza ingredients including hamburger, sausage, pepperoni, black olive, green olive, onion, mushrooms, green pepper, jalapeno and Canadian bacon.

And the breadstix and the salads are "out of this world". As is the spaghetti and homemade lasagna with Mama's special sauce, Mozzarella cheese, parmesan cheese, Ricotta cheese and with Italian garlic bread.

The sandwich selection is outstanding, whether choice is the Mama's Sub, the smoked turkey or others from the tasty menu.

Beer on tap is available, as is wine and soft drinks.

Mama's Pizza is open from 11 a.m until 12 p.m., Sundays through Thursdays, and until 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday.

"May we prove our good food, our quality and our unique atmosphere . . . all designed with you in mind?"

Stormaster Shelters Acclaimed In Area Tornado Protection

"Most likely someone within your acquaintance has arranged for the safety of a Stormaster Shelter. Have you given your family this same consideration?"

'Tis the season of the year to seriously arrange for protection during windstorms or tornadoes.

"In Lubbock and area, the Stormaster underground shelter protection can be speedily and easily secured by consulting with the Stormaster specialists at 3406 62nd St., phone 792-5977, who season after season have served most admirably, and who have been proven time after time.

Stormaster shelters are built right; they serve a definite need in the unsettled spring weather conditions of the South Plains; and they are backed with the professional understanding and integrity of their builder, Homer Ries.

Ries, the only authorized Stormaster builder in the South Plains and Panhandle, prides in the Stormaster and in its construction. A graduate in engineering, he appreciates the needs of the area and the quality of Stormaster. Mrs. Ries is a native of Lubbock; he is a longtime resident and both are graduates of Texas Tech.

Stormaster is not new in underground protection; it has been in business for over two decades in the Oklahoma City and Dallas areas.

The Stormaster unit is not pre-fab.

It is built in a choice of two sizes, 6 ft. by 8 ft., and the more popular family-size 8 ft. by 10 ft., with construction taking about three days, depending on the weather, of course, and involving digging the hole, setting forms, pouring cement, finishing with paint, special inside plaster, benches and electrical outlet.

All concrete work is a one-pour operation with six-sack cement reinforced with paving mesh — no cold joints. It is guaranteed not to leak or seep. It is painted inside and outside and comes complete with seats, vents, electric box and special Stormaster doors.

(The doors are so constructed that children may enter unescorted.) The extra-strength plywood door covered with galvanized metal is attached to a heavy steel frame which is embedded in the concrete. This waterproof door was designed especially for this shelter.

Stormaster construction qualifies for Title I financing.

For full information check now with Homer or Mrs. Ries at Stormaster of Lubbock, 3406 62nd St., phone 792-5977. If there is no answer, please keep calling, day or night. Part-time office help is on the job as well as Mr. and Mrs. Ries.

STORMASTER SHELTERS UNDERSTANDABLY POPULAR — Take a product that is built right, serving a need, and back it with the "know how", professional understanding and integrity of its builder, and one has the Stormaster shelter picture in the Lubbock region. Shown is a local family emerging from one of these family-size shelters.

Arabs Label Attack On Bus Courageous

Both moderate and hard-line Arab states hailed the Palestinian guerrilla raid into Israel, with Saudi Arabia calling it a "courageous operation" demonstrating the weakness of Israeli security.

Western governments condemned Saturday's raid and in Moscow Soviet Jews staged a brief demonstration Sunday to denounce it.

Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization said in Beirut its Al Fatah branch carried out the raid, in which at least 32 Israelis and nine of 11 terrorists were killed. The PLO called it "our answer to Israeli arrogance."

Egypt's minister of state for foreign affairs, Butros Ghali, said the attack "proves that security in Israel will not be attained through settlements or the addition of new lands."

"There can be no peace unless there is the right of self-determination" for the Palestinians, Ghali added, underlining two key Egyptian demands in peace negotiations with Israel. But he said that despite the attack "let us hope the peace process will continue."

Carter Condemns Act

President Carter, in a statement Saturday in Washington, called the attack "an outrageous act of lawlessness and senseless brutality." Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said it was "murder and cannot be justified."

Other Western condemnations came from the British, French and West German governments.

Saudi Arabia said the raiders in their "courageous operation" showed Israel that "security is impossible as long as Palestinians are without a homeland."

"The operation had a noble aim ... to let the world remember that the Palestinians do exist and that no peace talks will succeed without their participation," Saudi government radio said.

The Syrian newspaper Al-Baath, organ of the ruling Baath Socialist Party, said the attack was staged "to answer capitulationist plans," a term the Syrians use to refer to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace overture to Israel.

Libya said in a government radio broadcast, "All doors should be opened to the legal and just Palestinian struggle to enable it to strike hard at the enemy inside occupied Palestine."

In Moscow, more than two dozen Soviet Jews, joined by Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov, staged a demonstation on a downtown street to protest the raid. Within minutes they were dispersed by police. The Kremlin made no immediate comment on the attack.

Pope Not Insensible

Pope Paul VI, offering his Sunday blessing to the throng in the Vatican's St. Peter's Square, said he could not "remain insensible" to "bitter and disappointing events ... affecting public life." Vatican sources said the pope was referring to the guerrilla attack.

All 13 Palestinian refugee camps were put on alert. Guards were reinforced and instructions issued to avoid gathering in large groups. Many women and children were ordered to evacuate the camps, a Palestinian guerrilla spkesman reported.

The Lebanon-based PLO called President Carter's condemnation of the raid "a hostile act against our Palestinian people and its just cause."

In Kuwait, the PLO's Salim Zanon was quoted by the Qatar news agency as saying the Palestinians had "accurate information that Israel is planning a strong blow shortly against Palestinians and Syrians in So th Lebanon." He claimed Arafat had received assurances from Moscow that the Soviet Union "will not stand with its arms folded" if Israel launches a reprisal raid.

Canal Vote's Outlook Still 'Very Close'

al votes surfaced late Friday: A reservation, worked up by Sens. Sam Nunn and Herman Talmadge of Georgia, which would allow the United States and Panama to negotiate a possible U.S. military presence in Panama after the year 2000.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd gave this proposal his personal support Saturday, saying it would "brighten the possibilities of ratification" for the neutrality pact and the canal treaty.

A reservation, unlike an amendment, would not require a new plebiscite in Panama.

But by helping to allay security fears, it could produce perhaps three or four votes for ratification. And that might make the difference.

Those backing ratification appear to have a solid base in the low 60s.

The opposition has a hardcore count of around 30.

There is, however, a wide range of opinion on how many of those votes are "soft" and subject to change. These estimates range from a low of four to a high of 10 or even 12.

These are the senators who are getting attention and, presumably, pressure.

Four Top Targets

The four main targets, according to some sources, are Talmadge, Nunn, Dennis DeConcini of Arizona and Edward Zorinsky of Nebraska.

Opponents are also eyeing Sen. Jennings Randolph, DW.Va. Normally a party and administration loyalist, Randolph faces a bruising reelection fight against former Gov. Arch Moore. A vote for ratification would hurt.

Those getting the high-level sell from Carter are Sens. Edward Brooke, R-Mass.; Paul Hatfield, D-Mont; and Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., all believed leaning against ratification.

Ethiopian Troops Claim Victories

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopian troops sweeping northeast from their Ogaden stronghold of Diredawe have retaken control of nearly all of the railroad leading to the tiny east African country of Djibouti on the Gulf of Aden, Ethiopia claimed Sunday.

In a broadcast monitored here, Ethiopia's military government said its regular army troops and militia forces captured the strategic railroad town of Aysha, 25 miles from the Djibouti border, on Thursday.

Reporters have not been permitted to enter the battle areas and there was no independent confirmation of the Ethiopian claims.

The railroad to Djibouti, an important channel for Ethiopian imports and exports, was cut last June by Somali-backed guerrillas fighting in the Ogaden region of Ethiopia. The link between the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa and Diredawe was reopened last week.

Somalia announced last week it was withdrawing its regular army troops from the disputed Ogaden Desert, but the rebels who are ethnic Somalis seeking to unite the zone with Somalia have vowed to continue the war.

It is estimated that 12,000 Cuban soldiers and 1,000 Soviet advisers are helping the Ethiopians.

Space Agency Makes Contact With Skylab

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Space agency scientists have contacted the Skylab satell the for the first time in four years, and they soon will try to push it into a safe orbit that will keep it from an early collision with the Earth's atmosphere, officials said Sunday.

A spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said engineers in Bermuda sent radio messages Saturday that successfully activated a computer which has been silent since the last time Skylab was used, Feb. 8, 1974.

"The computer continued in operation for about five minutes and good data was received," the spokesman said. "Results indicate that the computer system and the power system on Skylab are good and that the thrust gas pressure that will permit future attitude changes also is good."

Minimum Drag Sought

Soon, he said, the scientists will send "commands that may permit it to maneuver into an attitude that will result in minimum drag as it orbits Earth. Such maneuvers may be made in a month or so and may add several months to Skylab's orbital life time."

NASA previously said the 85-ton Skylab was safe in orbit for at least six years. Then the scientists recalculated the figures and the spokesman said NASA currently predicts Skylab will begin falling back to earth sometime between next summer and early 1980.

The prediction raised fears of a break-up similar to the Soviet satellite which came down in Jaunary. The Russian satellite broke up over an uninhabited area of Canada but threatened to hit populated regions.

Aim At Higher Orbit

The spokesman said astronauts on an October 1979 space shuttle flight will try to maneuver Skylab into a new, higher, orbit or attempt to construct an orbit that will allow the satellite to land safely in a deserted area of ocean. The experiments began at 3:30 a.m. Saturday as the satellite passed over NASA's ground station in Bermuda. The spokesman said scientists were able to send commands that turned on the communications system in the satellite's airlock module.

The next time the satellite passed, the scientists turned on the Apollo telescope mount section of Skylab — where many delicate electronic parts are located.

With power coming from the satellite's solar panels and stored in batteries, the parts were working well enough to raise the inside temperature to the point that the computer could work properly. Once the messages from thermometers on Skylab showed that there was enough heat, the scientists sent the message turning the computer on.

Skylab was launched May 4, 1973. It was visited three times by astronaut crews during 1973 and 1974.

PREPARING FOR 'RESURRECTION'—Evangelist Daniel Aaron Rogers, right, helps unload a freezer containing the body of his mother, Gladys Rogers, at a mortuary in Reeds Springs, Mo. Rogers, with help from three other preachers, was unsuccessful in an attempt to resurrect his mother from the dead Sunday. The ministers had predicted that she would be raised and would give a sign that "the end of the age" is near. (Laserphoto)

Attempt To Revive Frozen Woman Fails

into the chapel and told the congregation that his mother had not been resurrected. He said a prayer and then shook hands with members of the congregation as they left the chapel.

Vision Recalled

On Sunday morning, Rogers had said from his home in Harrison, "We expect Momma to be raised. A neighbor of one of my associate evangelists said she had a vision, and she saw Momma open her eyes and get up."

Asked at that point how he would feel if his mother was not raised from the dead, he said, "I can't anticipate that. I would be surprised, but I don't anticipate it."

Rogers had said he would have an Indonesian faith healer come to Reeds Spring within 10 days if Sunday's efforts failed. Missouri health officials have said they would allow the resurrection efforts to continue for an unspecified period of time before requiring that Mrs. Rogers be buried.

Signal Expected

Rogers said he believed the resurrection of his mother would be a signal that Christ is coming 'and the end of this age, as we know it, would be near." He said this meant "all the wicked will be burned up, by fire ... we believe by atomic bomb fire."

"That don't mean it's gonna happen the day after Mom is raised, but we do believe that the time will be near," he said. "The righteous, the good people, they're gonna survive. Just the extremely wicked are gonna be destroyed."

Rogers, 41, is a native of Arizona and has lived in the Harrison area off and on the past 21 years. He calls himself an interdenominational evangelistic preacher, with a small church near Deer, Ark.

His father, also a preacher, died in 1975 at the age of 78.

Coal Strike Talks Make 'Progress'

after the two sides recessed their talks Saturday.

Asked whether he thought a settlement was close at hand, he replied, "You never know."

UMW bargainer Wilbert Killion also said "some progress" was being made.

Meanhwile, Ambassador Robert Strauss, the Carter administration's special trade representative, said, "I think the process of negotiation is going forward in a much better climate than before. I think they'll pull it off and I'm very optimistic," Strauss, who appeared on CBS-TV's Face the Nation, has played a large role in earlier administration efforts to settle the strike.

Union Council Not Called

But Miller said he had not yet called the union's bargaining council to Washington. The council would have to approve any contract that bargainers agree on.

The union and industry agreed on a new round of face-to-face talks last week following administration declarations that an industry-wide bargaining impasse existed. Efforts were underway to explore the possibilities for company-by-company settlements.

But such agreements would raise serious questions about the future of both the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, and officials on both sides are anxious to preserve their organizations.

The two groups have negotiated industry-wide contracts since 1950.

It was understood that industry bargainers had offered the UMW a proposal calling for significantly lower deductible costs for health care than were contained in a contract the UMW membership rejected by a 2-1 margin a week ago.

But at the same time, the BCOA reportedly withdrew its offer, contained in the rejected contract, to guarantee health and pension benefits.

Under the rejected contract, miners would have been required to pay up to $700 a year for health care that has been free. The maximum figure for pensioners was $450.

The industry also was understood to have offered to liberalize proposals for determining pension eligibility.

It was not known how the UMW had responded.

Views Of Candidates Aired Here In Forum

candidate present who supported the ward system concept. She said such a system would guarantee better representation.

And, she added, "it seems the city should take the voluntary step (of changing the system) instead of spending so much money fighting a case precedent shows it will lose."

She apparently referred to a court challenge of the current at-large system. The case is pending in federal district court here.

Bob Schmidt, another Place 3 candidate, was not present at the forum when the ward system question was posed.

All candidates present were unhesitating in their support of code enforcement and anti-crime programs.

Disparity Question Raised

The neighborhood associations sponsoring the forum quizzed each candidate about whether he believed there is a disparity in the level of public services provided to various neighborhoods.

All the candidates agreed such a problem exists and and added rampant crime rates as a problem facing the city.

Kizer suggested that a city commission be organized "to look at what the police are doing" and to advise the department "where police protection should be."

Kelly advocated strict codes and more police patrols while Marshall decried current planning and zoning practices and espoused direct citizen control of zoning.

"I think zoning ought to be handled by law and not by men," he said. He suggested that neighborhood districts of at least 20 acres each be organized. Residents of those areas should then plan the area's development by voting on council-recommended changes, he said.

The two Place 1 aspirants responded to the disparity question differently. Henry, a current Place 3 councilman, recited a checklist of recent city council actions to support older neighborhoods such as Overton South.

He cited a push to install old-fashioned streetlights in the Overton neighborhoods and the creation of an urban design-historic ordinance to protect older buildings.

And, he stressed the importance of hiring a city attorney who will enforce zoning ordinances aggressively. Fred Senter, current city attorney, will retire in July, and Henry pledged to seek a sucesuccessor who will take code enforcement seriously.

Stevens said there is no doubt that inequalities in municipal services exist. "It's obvious that some neighborhoods are favored more than others," he said, adding that it is a "moral situation that shouldn't be allowed to exist."

Miss Mercado suggested that "it would seem common sense would tell us that with a higher crime rate we should have more police protection."

She recommended that protection in crime-prone areas be stepped up. "Everyone's needs must be met, not just some," she added.

Norman attacked the issue of code enforcement, saying that there are not enough building and zoning inspectors. The departments are "way understaffed and definitely need help," he said.

Crime, too, is a serious problem that has grown "ridiculous," Norman said, adding, "Crime is taking up our police force's time."

Schmidt answered an unequivocal "yes" to the question of service disparities. But, he said, "neighborhoods are like children" in that they have different needs to be met. To treat all neighborhoods identically would "be a disservice to the budget," he added.

He said he could not "make promises of what I would do" about spreading municipal services. Schmidt explained he would have to weigh each issue and question with mitigating circumstances and the overall situation in mind.

Aderton acknowledged that "maybe (codes) are not always applied equitably." But, he said, the situation should be taken to the city council instead of being splashed in the news media.

Leftist Coalition Leading In France

PARIS (AP) — A Socialist-Communist alliance challenging 20 years of Gaullist rule was winning a slim popular majority Sunday in the first round of French legislative elections, computer projections showed.

The combined left was given a fraction over 50 percent of the vote.

Russians Protest Support Of Terrorists By Kremlin

MOSCOW (UPI) — Demonstrators led by Nobel Peace laureate Andrei Sakharov Sunday accused the Kremlin of supporting Palestinian terrorists whose attack on a bus in Israel killed at least 37 people.

Passersby, who appeared to be civilians and not KGB agents, grabbed the demonstrators' signs and burned them on the sidewalk opposite the House of Friendship, an international meeting place near the Kremlin.

"The world has witnessed another terrible crime, the murder of children in Israel by Palestinian terrorists," Sakharov said in a statement. "Our hearts are full of pain and sympathy to the victims of the crime and to their families.

"Disgrace to the organizers, to the inspirers and the accomplices of the crime," he said. "Disgrace to the children murderers."

Western correspondents estimated the number of demonstrators at between 14 and 25. In addition to Sakharov and his half-Jewish wife, Yelena Bonner, they included Vladimir Slepak and other Jewish activists.

The group unfurled four 6-foot banners reading "Shame to those who protect murderers" and "Shame to the murderers of children."

Within 10 or 15 seconds they were surrounded by a crowd. A few scuffles broke out as members of the crowd ripped the banners away and set them on fire.

About a half dozen gray-uniformed militiamen appeared and tried to disperse the crowd without attempting to make any arrests. Some apparent passersby lingered, admonishing the demonstrators and Western correspondents.

Mrs. Sakharov said she believed those in the crowd were ordinary Soviet citizens rather than KGB state security agents. She said she was surprised at their action.

The guerrilla attack Saturday has not been reported by the official Soviet press, radio or television but many Soviets listen to Russian-language broadcasts of the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp.

Sakharov noted in a written statement that the Palestinian attack came two days after Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, met with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in the Kremlin.

Israelis Vow to Avenge Terrorist Raid On Bus

it would lead to a Palestinian state in the occupied West Bank of Jordan and Gaza Strip. The terrorist attack could only harden Israel's tough stance on the issue.

Begin, in response to a question at his 50-minute news conference about whether Israel will retaliate, said: "Those who kill Jews in our time cannot enjoy impunity. We shall eliminate this constant threat. Our fight will be victorious."

Weizman was asked a similar question on his arrival at BenGurion Airport from the United States and replied, "I'm holding responsible any country from which such raids are launched."

The massacre, he said, "will certainly have an effect on the general atmosphere" of the peace talks. "It reiterated again the dangers of having an uncontrolled area in the close vicinity of populated Israel."

"This is a terrible day in our lives," Begin said. "But we must be strong. The cruel enemy again tries to break us, but he will not succeed. We shall overcome."

Weizman, who rushed from the airport to a meeting with his top military brass, said the terrorist attack "might affect the (U.S.) administration's stance (in the negotiations) even though the U.S. administration has clear-cut objectives."

In Haifa, the first of the 37 who died were buried Sunday. Funeral services were held for Na'ama Hadani, 5. Her parents could not attend. They lay wounded in a hospital.

'Retornados' Making New Lives In Portugal

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Three years ago, Olimpio Alves was a prosperous oil executive in Angola. Driven out by civil war there, he arrived in Portugal a penniless refugee.

Now Alves has new prosperity as owner of a thriving supermarket, and he no longer yearns for Angola.

"I have found a new life," he says.

Thousands of refugees from Portugal's former colonies in Africa and most recently Timor in Asia, desperate for jobs and homes when they reached Portugal, are recovering lost wealth. In the process, officials say, they are providing a significant stimulus to an economy hurt by underproduction and unemployment.

The "retornados," Portuguese for returnees, were a heavy burden when they began arriving nearly three years ago. The Lisbon government spent vast amounts on emergency housing and food.

Government loans totaling the escudo equivalent of $300 million helped give the refugees a new start. Alves' story is typical of many.

Alves, 42, fled with his wife and two adolescent sons from Luanda, the Angolan capital.

"It was very hard at first," he said. "We had to get out because of the civil war and the Communists, and there didn't seem to be anything for us in Portugal.

"Luckily, a friend had bought a bit of land outside Lisbon on the coast. There was a big empty building on it and we decided to turn it into a supermarket together.

"Three of us scraped up 600,000 escudos ($15,000). The government gave us a loan of a million escudos ($25,000). That was enough to convert the building and stock the store."

The store is usually filled with customers and business is good, but Alves said: "It was something of a comedown for us. In Angola, we were used to much higher living standards, with two cars, maids, a big house, paid holidays. But we have been making a fair profit, which has gone toward repaying the loan.

"Now we are beginning to live more comfortably. The main thing is we have survived by our own hard work, and that's something we can be proud of."

It is impossible to determine how many of the refugees there are in Portugal now. Estimates run as high as a million, about a tenth of Portugal's population.

Most are white, middle-class settlers with only one or two generations of colonial life. Others are black or of mixed race. Their tropical faces and bright scarves are a constant reminder of the former empire of which only Macao, the enclave near Hong Kong, remains.

The refugees left the colonies hurriedly, their belongings seized by new nationalist governments or sold at a fraction of their value. Hundreds spent weeks sleeping on the floor at Lisbon's airport, then moved into unheated tents for the winter.

Tens of thousands lived in hotels for months at government expense.

The newcomers, many of them politically conservative, faced suspicion in Portugal, which was struggling to stabilize a center-left democracy following the 1974 revolution that ended Lisbon's colonial policy.

The poor and jobless of Portugal resented the aid given the refugees and blamed them for a surge in crime.

But the refugees now are integrated, said Col. Antonio Goncalves Ribeiro, the high commissioner for refugees.

"When they came, it was a tremendous problem," he added, "but there has been a big change in their attitude.

"There is a new spirit among them. They know they have to rebuild their lives and those of their children. To do that, they have to help rebuild this country."

The settlers used government loans to start factories, construction firms, farms, bars, restaurants and hotels. When possible, they gave preference in contracts and hiring to other refugees.

Now employers say they prefer to hire "retornados."

"They're more reliable," a Labor Ministry official said. "They work harder and longer and they don't go on strike. They know what it's like to have nothing."

The government plans to cut back support for refugees this year. It says their businesses are expanding too fast for the economy, which must be slowed down to keep imports in check.

The housing program, the government says, has succeeded. Only 15,000 "retornados" still live at government expense in hotels and rooming houses, in contrast to the more than 70,000 a year ago.

Housing aid is being eliminated this month for more than 7,000 who, refugee officials say, have cost the government $30 million during the past two years. Nearly 1,000 refugees who resisted ouster from several hotels around Lisbon had their food allotments cut off.

The cutbacks will still leave an estimated 40,000 "retornados" on relief lists. Many more unemployed former government workers in the old colonies are still on state employment rolls at half pay while they look for jobs.

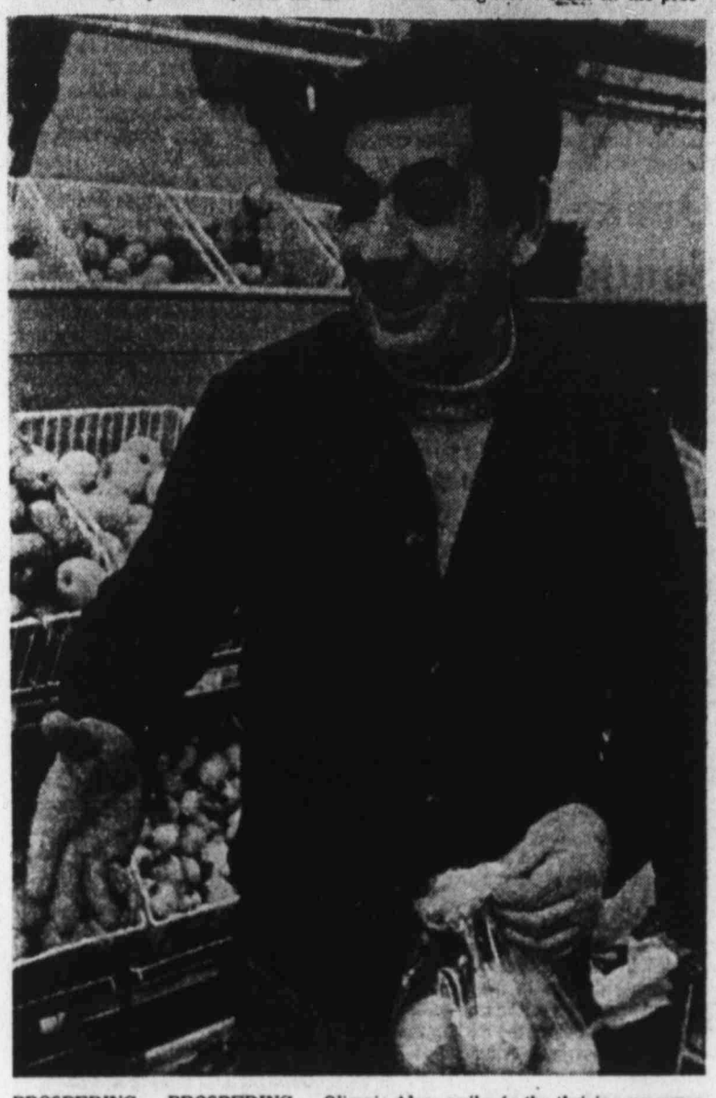

Those still in refugee camps are living better. Rows of tents at a camp in a forest near Lisbon have been replaced by prefabricated houses, and television antennas sprout from some homes.

Some refugees are still bitter against the leftist officers who carried out the Portuguese revolution.

"They betrayed the colonies into the hands of the Soviet Union," said Joao Serejo, leader of a refugee pressure group. "They were in a hurry and followed their own Marxist ideas without consulting anyone. They have a lot to answer for."

A handful want to go back. The Angolan government is checking the backgrounds of 2,000 retornado families who have applied for permission to re-enter the African state.

But most "retornados" agree with Paula Gomes, a secretary in a government ministry, who came here from Maputo in Mozambique: "I was born in Mozambique and lived there most of my life. I loved Africa. But now I feel settled here. I would never go back. There is nothing for me now in Mozambique."

PROSPERING — PROSPERING — Olimpio Alves smiles in the thriving supermarket he owns in Lisbon, Portugal recently. Three years ago Alves was a prosperous oil executive in Angola. Driven out by civil war there, he arrived in Portugal a penniless refugee. Now, like thousands of refugees from Portugal's former colonies in Africa and most recently Timor in Asia, desperate for jobs and homes, Alves is recovering lost wealth. (AP Laserphoto)

Group Focuses On Seal Hunt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Greenpeace, a conservation organization, is mounting a 28-man expedition to Newfoundland this week to focus attention on seal hunting on the ice floes off Labrador and Newfoundland.

"Canadian and Norwegian sealers are preparing to slaughter 180,000 harp seals in the face of worldwide opinion against this senseless slaughter," a Greenpeace spokesman, Robert Taunt, said at a news conference.

"We don't want to have happen in Canada what has happened in America to our buffalo and eagles," he said.

Five sealing ships departed from St. John's, Newfouundland, Sunday and began steaming to the sealing grounds.

Taunt said Reps. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and James M. Jeffords, R-Vt., also would observe the seal hunt.

Taunt said Greenpeace hopes to focus public attention on the hunt as a means of marshalling public opinion against seal hunting and prompt the Canadian government to stop the killing, especially of baby seals.

Furnishings Go On Display At Lee Mansion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of the personal possessions which Mrs. Robert E. Lee took with her when she fled her home ahead of Union troops in 1861 have come home to Arlington House for the first time since the Civil War.

When her husband accepted command of the Confederate armies at the start of the war, Mrs. Lee left with all the household goods she could manage to remove from the Lee home overlooking what is now Arlington National Cemetery, across the Potomac River from Washington.

The National Park Service, which maintains the home as a national memorial to Robert E. Lee, has arranged a special loan exhibition of original furnishings which will be on public display through June 30.

The items have been lent by Lee's descendants and other private individuals as well as Lee museums and institutions.

There is a rosewood parlor set which the Lees bought for the superintendent's home at West Point and later moved to Arlington. The set is on loan from the Lee family.

From Mount Vernon, boyhood home of Mrs. Lee's father, George Washington Parke Custis, came a large bookcase on loan from the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, which maintains the George Washington mansion.

Portraits on loan from members of the Lee family include likenesses of Mary Custis Lee and her mother, Mrs. George Washington Parke Custis, painted about 1831 by Auguste Jean Hervieu; Custis, builder of Arlington House, painted by Charles B.J.F. de Saint Memin; a pastel of Lee's sister, Catherine Mildred Lee Childe by an unknown French artist; and Lee's children, Robert Jr. and Mildred, painted by Ernst Fischer.

Mrs. Lee was also an artist, and three sea scenes she did in oil are shown in her painting room.

Among the contributors to the exhibition are Mount Vernon, Washington-Lee University, Stratford Hall, Lee's birthplace, the Robert E. Lee boyhood home in Alexandria, Va., the Virgin a Museum of Fine Arts, the Museum of the Confederacy and Lee's Headquarters Museum in Gettysburg, Pa.

Circus Elephant Kills Keeper

CHICAGO (UPI) — A circus elephant caretaker who was showing his charges to visitors was killed late Saturday by one of the beasts.

David Farr, 35, of Petersborough, Ontario, was picked up and thrown into a pillar by one of the Hawthorne Circus Co., elephants in the basement of the Chicago Avenue Armory.

He suffered multiple injuries to his abdomen, chest and head, said a spokesman at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, where he died about 90 minutes after the incident.

Farr had been with Hawthorne for about a year. His major duties were to feed, provide hay and clean the animals, said company spokesman John Cuneo.

Hawthorne is in Chicago presenting the Shrine Circus at the Medinah Temple.

'Bank' Files Body Part Donations

HOUSTON (AP) — Glen Karsten says there is "a great untapped need" for information among people who want to donate vital organs or their entire bodies for medical purposes but don't know how to go about it.

She also hopes the unique organization she helped found 10 years ago to meet that need will be so successful it will go out of business.

"Transplants were the big thing back in 1968 when four friends and I thought some sort of service was necessary to channel potential donors to potential recipients," said Mrs. Karsten, president of the Houston-based private, non-profit Living Bank that enables people to indicate in a uniform way that they want to give all or part of themselves away.

"Acceptance of the idea of donations for transplants for research is much greater now," Mrs. Karsten said. "And with discussion of death and dying much more common, people aren't so shocked by the whole thing. I hope people will become knowledgeable enough to make us unnecessary."

Surgeons in Boston made the first successful kidney transplant in 1954, and the first successful heart transplant was completed in South Africa in 1967.

The Living Bank, which has processed more than half a million inquiries in the past 10 years, operates as a referral service. Persons interested in becoming donors receive a donor card, accepted as a legal document in all 50 states following passage by state legislatures of the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. The card indicates which organs donors wish to give and carries the bank's 24-hour telephone number (713-528-2971).

The bank does not arrange organ transfers but does notify appropriate agencies that organs are available and refers them to donors' families or public officials.

Lorraine Gress, who took over as executive director last year, said most initial contact comes from next-of-kin or nurses who have been treating donors. She emphasized that the Living Bank is not a storage facility but an information center.

"Our great advantage is that we are a single-site referral service. The family only has to notify us. Then they will be contacted by recipient agencies, but they do not have to initiate the contact."

HOUSTON: the contact."

Miss Gress works with a staff of five and a $100,000 annual budget to process inquiries and send out donor cards. She said the bank received more than 21,000 letters after a poem on organ donations appeared in a "Dear Abby" newspaper column in January.

"It is much easier for potential donors to discuss the idea with their families before any action is necessary," Mrs. Karsten said. "People grieving for loved ones aren't always in a position to make a fast decision."

Several states provide space on drivers licenses to indicate the bearer is also a donor. But the Texas license, for example, gives no number to call.

No more than 20 minutes can elapse between the death of a kidney donor and the receipt by the transplant patient. Corneas can be kept somewhat longer.

The Living Bank has received grants from several Texas foundations to spread the word about donations across the state. Miss Gress said she also has plans to inform public safety officials and emergency room personnel about the program so potential donations will not be lost.

Although the donor card is a legal document, Miss Gress said many persons are hesitant to take action concerning donations for fear of legal reprisals from next-of-kin. The act has not yet been tested in the courts.

Quake Rocks South Italian, Sicilian Areas

MESSINA, Sicily (AP) — A sharp earthquake that rocked parts of Sicily and the southern tip of Italy sent thousands of persons fleeing into the streets, authorities said Sunday.

Two elderly persons died of heart attacks, and several people were hurt in the rush to get out of swaying buildings, police said of the Saturday night earthquake.

They reported that a few hundred houses were damaged and some were evacuated. Many people spent the night out in the open, afraid to return to their homes.

Officials said there were 22 earth tremors over a 12-hour period, with the sharpest one lasting 10 seconds. The quakes's epicenter was in the Mediteranean Sea, about 10 miles southeast of the Sicilian resort of Taormina, near the Mt. Etna volcano, they said.

The quake registered six degrees on the Mercalli scale of 12 and five on the Richter scale.

An earthquake of five on the Richter scale — a measure of ground motion as recorded by seismographs — can cause considerable damage in the local area. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 7.9 on the Richter scale. Each degree on the Richter means a ten-fold increase in the quake's intensity.

Americans Worried By Decline Of U.S. Dollar

By LOUIS HARRIS

A substantial 69 percent of Americans express concern at the sharp decline in the value of the dollar abroad. The key element destabilizing the dollar is seen as tha excessive amount of energy which this country is importing from other countries.

When asked to estimate the likelihood that President Carter will take steps to keep the dollar from declining further in value, no more than 11 percent nationwide are highly confident that he will make things better for the dollar.

Basically, public concern over the plight of the dollar focuses on four areas, according to a recent Harris Survey of 1,510 adults nationwide:

—A majority of 53 percent says it is "worried a great deal" that "we are importing too much energy from abroad," and another 27 percent are "somewhat worried" about that state of affairs.

—A plurality of 42 percent is "worried a great deal" by the fact that "we are buying much more abroad than we are selling to the rest of the world," with another 34 percent somewhat worried about this imbalance.

—A relatively lower 33 percent worry a great deal that "we haven't convinced people abroad that we are rea;ly going to take tough measures on energy at home,' with another 36 percent somewhat worried.

—Thirty percent of the public are deeply concerned that "we haven't convinced people abroad that we have inflation under control at home," while another 35 percent are somewhat concerned.

Although the U.S. dependence on foreign oil is viewed as the most serious cause of the sharp drop in the value of the dollar, Americans also worry about the unfavorable balance of trade, the laggard efforts to pass an energy bill, and a sense that the country has not yet come to grips with inflation at home.

Despite its concern over these matters, the vast majority of the public is not confident that President Carter will take steps to correct the situation:

—Only 11 percent are "highly confident" that Mr. Carter will take steps to keep the country from importing so much energy from abroad, with another 50 percent "only somewhat confident."

—Only 10 percent are "highly confident" that the President will take steps to correct the imbalance in trade, with another 54 percent "only somewhat confident."

—On "really taking tough measures on energy at home," only 11 percent are "highly confident" that the President will take such steps, with 49 percent "only somewhat confident."

—Finally, only 9 percent are "highly confident" that President Carter will take anti-inflationary measures that will be convincing to people abroad, although 48 percent express some confidence that the President will do the job.

Basically, only a small part of the public shows great confidence in the President's ability to handle the underlying causes for the drop in the value of the dollar. Moreover, about 30 percent have no confidence at all that he will be able to remedy the situation. When this group is joined to those who are only somewhat hopeful that Americans are quite skeptical about the ability of the administration to cope with a problem that worries people greatly.

Jamborees Popular With CB Cultists

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — The turnout plainly pleased Mystery Man but did not surprise him.

"We had 2,000 last year. I figured we would top that, and we did. There aren't many functions that draw this big a crowd. All we do is put out the word and they come from all over."

The parking lots testified to that.

Cars, pickups, vans, campers, buses, with out-of-state tags, lined the Holiday Inn, filled every space at the Convention Center, crowded the Cherokee Campground. Each vehicle sprouted a whip antenna, some two, some three.

If you have not attended a CB jamboree you might not be aware that what began as a chat on the highway among truckers, mostly involving lurking cops, has developed into a full-blown culture.

Mystery Man explained:

"There's a jamboree some place close enough to drive to every week, or nearly. Most of us are about the same age, oh, 35 to 50. We have a lot in common. To start with, we're all CBers. A jamboree makes a nice weekend for the whole family."

For a period of several years, Mystery Man and his family — Mystery Lady, Mystery Kid, Lady Javelina and Ghost Writer — rarely missed a jamboree.

A check of "CB Voice" (yes, the CBers have their own newspaper) shows no fewer than 42 jamborees in 23 states scheduled for March, of which Jam-Bo-Ree-By-The-Sea, here at Jekyll Island, was one.

Mystery Man is the CB handle of John Walter and is the name stitched across the back of the gold vest that is the uniform of the Golden Isles CB club. John Walter, Mystery Man, is the club's president and host for the Jam-Bo-Ree-By-The-Sea.

As with Shriners, Legionnaires, others, a uniform is a big part of the CB cult. There is, however, no ladies' auxiliary. Mystery Lady, Dorothy Walter, sports the same gold vest.

"We'll give a trophy to the best-dressed club," Mystery Man said. "Some, as you can see, are dressed pretty fancy."

Pretty fancy? For a group given to ear-splitting country music, flashy bumper stickers, late night dancing, singing and partying, "pretty fancy" is the understatement of the weekend.

It must be as hard to award the best-dressed trophy at a CB jamboree as at a convention of Mexican generals.

Some clubs wear matching pants, others matching hats. All wear vests in brilliant colors decorated to the wearer's taste with patches: eagles, bears, skulls, poker hands, Elvis, zodiac signs; with plastic tags, etched with graffiti and attached in long strings; with beads and trinkets and medalions, souvenirs of jamborees past.

Booths lining the convention hall dispense more of this paraphernalia than radio equipment.

Much of the plastic graffiti tends toward cutesy sexy; "I'm X-rated," or "If this camper's rockin', don't bother knockin.'" But you can also buy, "Smile — God loves you."

And one other sign, white on red. A motorist should never be without it, nor, for that matter, a prudent CB jamboree-goer:

"Send help."

Public Bidding Procedures Urged For Manpower Agency

AUSTIN (UPI) — The new director of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs says he hopes to establish public bidding procedures for individuals and businesses seeking government contracts.

Rafael Quintanilla Jr., a former Weslaco attorney selected to head the troubled office, assumes the $32,219-a-year job Monday.

Quintanilla, son of a former migrant, wants to clean up GOMA and refocus attention on the problem of helping laborers who follow crop harvests to find work.

"In all the stories that have been run I don't think there's been a story yet about the people who are the individual recipients of this program," he said.

GOMA was a little known division of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's office until its executive director, Rojelio P. Perez, and program director, Joaquin Rodriguez, were indicted in January for witness tampering in connection with a Brownsville court of inquiry into Manpower training programs operated by a Harlingen union.

Perez and Rodriguez were suspended and an audit ordered that showed GOMA had 42 hidden employees paid in an unusual arrangement with a private consulting firm.

GOMA deputy director, Sergio Martinez, was suspended Feb. 28 when he refused to testify before the Travis County grand jury about his part in the arrangement.

"we need to start changing some things," Quintanilla said in an interview before moving to the governor's office. "There's obviously been some things wrong."

GOMA officials will be required to keep written records of their telephone conversations and other dealings with contract seekers and local agencies operating migrant programs, he said.

The new acting GOMA director said he will impose some of the same ethics standards used by the Public Utility Commission where he has been a hearings examiner for the past two years.

"I think the Public Utility Commission is head and shoulders above any other (agency) in the field of ethics," he said.

New procedures will be instituted to encourage more competition for the federal Manpower monies distributed by GOMA and local advisory groups will be formed to make recommendations on program operators.

"The local pople may know something about a trade school, for example, that I wouldn't know," Quintanilla said.

Some government contractors have said a GOMA official influenced them to start up training classes with James H. Bartlett, a Midland trade school operator whose schools have drawn sharp criticism from the Texas Education Agency.

And councils of government in some areas of the state have complained GOMA bypassed them in awarding migrant funds to community action agencies that were less well situated to handle Manpower programs efficiently.

"I want to try to be as open as possible in letting any interested party contract with us," Qucntanilla said. "I hope to set up some sort of public bidding system and maybe even advertise."

Quintanilla said he knew nothing about GOMA until the Manpower fund scandal hit front pages of newspapers and did not apply for the top job until the agency lost its second acting director in less than one month.

Briscoe originally named his chief legal counsel, Don Adams, to head the agency after Perez ouster. Adams, a former East Texas senator, provoked angry protests from Mexican-Americans with a ban on speaking in Spanish.

Rep. Ruben Torres, D-Brownsville, gave up his House seat to take the job but quickly resigned when news reports detailed his connections to a Brownsville man indicted along with union officials accused of stealing Manpower funds.

Quintanilla was selected from more than 40 applicants.

"In two years with the Public Utility Commission I've handled every type of case that could come up. I don't want to get stale. I'd rather move on to something else," Quintanillu said.

His wife works in the city of Austin's Manpower training division. 3

Quintanilla worked with migrants as an attorney for Texas Rural Legal Aid, Inc. in Weslaco and Edinburg, before he became a $25,600-a-year hearing examiner at the Public Utility Comission in 1976.

He is the son of a Victoria construction laborer whose education ended at the the second grade. Both his parents worked as migrant farm laborers, following cotton crops from South to West Texas.

His mother, although she never attended school, was determined her children would be educated. She settled the family in Victoria so the children could go to school.

Quintanilla graduated from the University of Texas law school in 1973.

"I think my family background, my work at Texas Legal Aid, plus my ability to speak Spanish make me qualified for the job," he said. "I think my background is what makes it rather than just my surname.

"I've been there in the Valley. I know the poverty. I've been in the colonias. Living conditions are much, much worse there. I know what's needed."

Doctors Say Flynt Experienced Spell Of Heart Problems

ATLANTA (UPI) — Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt, hospitalized for three gunshot wounds received in a sniper attack, suffered "cardiac irregularity" Sunday, his doctors said.

But John Rozier, a spokesman for physicians at Emory University's Hospital in Atlanta, said Flynt responded to treatment. He remained in serious condition.

Flynt and his attorney, Gene Reeves, were gunned down last Monday in Lawrenceville, about 30 miles away, as they were returning to the Gwinnett County courthouse where Flynt was on trial for distributing obscene material.

The sex-magazine entrepreneur was transferred to Emory last Wednesday, where he underwent a third operation.

Flynt was wounded by bullets which tore organs in his abdominal region and injured his spinal column. He is paralyzed from the mid-thigh down and doctors say he has less than a 50 percent chance of regaining the full use of his legs.

Of Flynt's heart problem, Rozier said, "Flynt experienced an episode of cardiac irregularity this morning which responded appropriately to treatment."

He also said Flynt "continues to experience fever," but, "otherwise is in good spirits."

Doctors did not explain the "cardiac irregularity," but Rozier said it was apparently not a major problem.

Saturday, physicians reported Flynt had an intra-abdominal infection, and there was a "threat" of a blood infection.

Asked about rumors that Flynt had contracted pneumonia, Rozier said, "I've heard nothing about pneumonia at all."

Meanwhile, Gwinnett County authorities said there were no new developments in their search of the assailant.

Movie Theater Bomb Injures 18 In Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A bomb exploded in a cinema, injuring 18 persons during the screening of a Soviet film Saturday night, police said Sunday. No serious injuries were reported.

No one claimed responsibility for the blast, but police said they believed it was the work of ultra-rightists objecting to the showing of Soviet-made films.

Agency To Stage Public Meeting

A public meeting of the Texas Department of Human Resources is scheduled for Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. in the Garden and Arts Center.

Citizen involvement in the overall planning and budgeting process of the agency is being encouraged by Nathan Martin, a regional administrator.

Martin said agency representatives will provide information to the public on program priorities and the decision-making process of the agency. Citizen response to department recommendations will be recorded and transmitted to the state executive staff.

Proposed Title XX budget issues will be discussed, along with those 1980-81 program and funding issues identified by the audience at the meeting.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

There isn't a parent alive who hasn't been struck down in their prime by a condition called "Terminal Dumb."

It's usually diagnosed by their teenagers, who kindly refer to it as "premature senility."

For some of us, it was a cruel blow. One day my mother was a bright, intelligent, worthwhile human being with something to contribute to society. That woman could do anything and I believed her. She could make the traffic light turn green by blowing on it, cure my scraped knee by kissing it, and knew every answer to every question you could imagine.

Then one morning she woke up and she didn't know anything.

There wasn't an ounce of logic to anything she said. ("Wear boots. It's raining.") She became repetitious. ("Close the door.") Her grammar was so bad she once used the word "seen" without a helping verb and I had to correct her before a roomful of company.

She couldn't remember things anymore. One day when she didn't remember that my sister got to lick the pan on her 14th birthday and got a watch and I only got a boughten cake and a dresser set, I lost all respect for her. I was amazed she could feed herself.

Luckily, after I was married, my mother pulled out of it. It was like a miracle. She got hold of herself and was once again able to carry on a conversation without being corrected, make a move without criticism and really began to understand and appreciate me.

I hadn't thought much about the disease until the other night at dinner when I said, "Do you know what I'm thinking of?"

"Don't end a sentence with a preposition, Mother, and sit up straight. You're slouching. Your spine will grow that way."

"You are always criticizing me," I said. "You're making me psychotic."

"You misuse that word all the time," said my son. "Why don't you look it up?"

"I wish all of you would get off my case and stop prosecuting me."

"DON'T SPELL IN FRONT OF ME!"

I have a feeling that my mind has slipped out of my primetime spot temporarily. I don't know how long before my miraculous recovery takes place, but hopefully it will be soon ... for their safety.

Lubbock Resident Writes Books For All Children

By MARTHA BOWDEN
Family News Staff

According to the lyrics of a long popular song, love makes the world go 'round. So, too, does laughter, according to Barbara K. Walker, popular author, teacher, world traveler, story teller — and a resident of Lubbock.

Especially in the world of children, she believes, laughter is a universal bond, and in one of her latest books, "Laughing Together" (Four Winds Press, 1977), Mrs. Walker illustrates this truth verbally by providing jokes of children of the world in both the original language and in the English translation.

Initially commissioned by UNICEF to compile an international book of children's jokes and humorous stories ("giggles and grins from around the globe"), Mrs. Walker found the project quite an undertaking, she said, paging through a copy of "Laughing Together".

Mrs. Walker had earlier told the story "Just Say Hic!" (by Barbara K. Walker, Follet, 1965) to a small group of Cub Scouts visiting the Mahon branch library in conjunction with their study of folk tales which are Mrs. Walker's specialty.

In the children's department of the library, numerous books Mrs. Walker has written, of Turkish, African, Samoan and Ukranian folk tales, are on display.

Also on display are a variety of artifacts from Turkey: a sheep's dog collar (worn by sheep for protection from wolves), a Turkish folk guitar, a 'bath dipper', a pair of camel skin slippers, a hot tea glass, and an evil eye good luck charm.

Mrs. Walker and her husband, Dr. Warren Stanley Walker, Horn professor of English at Texas Tech University, share an interest in Turkish folk tales and lived in Ankara, Turkey, during 1961-1962, doing research on Turkish literature, particularly folk tales. Mrs. Walker taught English in a Turkish private elementary school during that time. Except when teaching English, all her transactions were in the Turkish language.

In her book "Watermelons, Walnuts and the Wisdom of Allah and Other Tales of the Hoca," Mrs. Walker states that folk tales, of all Turkish products, are the "most lasting of all the Turkish products." They center around Nasreddin Hoca, Turkey's folk hero, who several hundred years ago, it is told, lived in the town of Akshehir, serving as a religious teacher, Moslem priest, and occasionally as a judge in small town disputes.

Both wise and foolish, Nasreddin Hoca was entirely human and often in many dilemmas. As Mrs. Walker wrote in her introduction to the book the hoca was always able to laugh at his own mistakes — "a trait which has made Turkish children and their parents love him all the more," according to the author.

"Stargazer to the Sultan," Mrs. Walker said, is one of her favorites of all the books she has written. As the author of 17 children's books, 350 periodical pieces, and two adult books (on which she and her husband collaborated), choosing a favorite was not an easy task, she remarked.

"Laughing Together" is also special to her, Mrs. Walker said, because children's humor is so different from adult humor. Often adult humor is based on prejudice and involves making fun of someone. Children's humor, she noted, is more positive and reflects in her opinion that children throughout the world are basically the same.

Mrs. Wlaker's latest book, which she prepared with Mabel H. Ross, "'On Another Day...' Tales Told Among the Nkundo of Zaire," will be published in October.

Since childhood, writing stories for children has been Mrs. Walker's goal. she considers children to be the most important audience in the world because children are impressionable and receptive to the truth.

Because children are so important, Mrs. Wlaker believes that children's books are important and should touch the heart and mind so that "a book good enough to be read at five is still good enough to be read at 50."

"Even if a book is thin and and full of pictures, if it is a good children's book, all ages of children -and adults -should be encouraged to read it," Mrs. Walker observed. Just as a book should not be judged by its cover, neither should it be judged on the basis of how long it is or how many pictures it has, she added.

One of Mrs. Walker's strongest interests is to further international understanding, and writing books for children and young people, she believes, is a unique and meaningful way to promoting understanding among people in the world.

Of Mrs. Walker's children's books, the 12 which are Turkish-based have been selected by the Turkish Ministry of Education for incorporation into a nationwide reading program. All 12 also have been slelected by the Director-General of Cultural Affairs, Greek Ministry of Civilization and Sciences, for translation into Greek.

In 1967 Mrs. Walker was cited by the Turkish Ministry of Education for "distinguished achievement in acquainting Americans with Turkish culture" and in 1963 she was awarded a bronze medal by the Institute of Pedagogy, the University of Padua, for international service to children's literature.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR COOKS:

I just know you're going to be fascinated by some of the following tips about that most fantabulous spice -powdered ginger.

Did you know you could add a dash of powderd ginger to most dishes and it accents the taste? The taste of ginger cannot be detected but it works like magic.

It's delicious on melon; sprinkle a little on your eggs; add it to the sugar when you glaze carrots or sweet potatoes.

When you use powdered ginger in cooking sea food, it completely eliminates any fishy odor.

Best of all, I have found that, at least for me, the addition of powdered ginger to canned baked beans, beans you cook from scratch, bean soup -beans fixed in any style -will be easier to digest.

Hard to believe? Just give it a try. You'll see I'm right...-Heloise

LETTER OF LOVE

DEAR HELOISE:

Heloise you make my day. Please keep sending hints my way.

Some I know and some I don't. Some I use and some I won't.

Some have adifferent twist. Some have a different turn.

But it's like I always say, "You're never too old to learn." -Kim

DEAR HELOISE:

For a towel holder in my kitchen. I use a metal shower curtain ring fastened over the cupboard door knob.

I slip a small towel through the ring and it works perfectly. -Viv Foley

DEAR HELOISE:

When making instant ice tea or powdered drink mixes that you add sugar to, put enough hot water in the pitcher to dissolve the sugar and other ingredients.

The hot water will melt the sugar so when the rest of the water is added, the age-old problem of sugar going to the bottom of the pitcher is gone. - Mother, Wife and Babysitter

DEAR HELOISE:

An appliance repair man once told me that when I want to clean the sole of my iron, to heat the iron so it is warm, not hot.

Then take fine steel wool and go all over the sole plate.

Now rub the iron over waxed paper a few times and it's like new again. Caution: This cannot be done to an iron with non-stick coating. -Donna Marie

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who have small openings around water pipes or other openings where mice find their way into your house, garage, or basement, we found steel wool pads are great.

Tear them apart and pack as tight as possible in the openings. The mice will disappear as the steel wool cuts their mouth if they try to chew their way in. - Mrs. John Botts

How right you are. -Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have old lined drapes that you are going to discard, save the linings for dust cloths.

Some of the material will ravel easily, so I cut the linings in usable-sized dust cloths and then hem them.

In hemming them, thread color is not important so I empty a lot of bobbins that have a little thread left on them and so acquire empty bobbins to use when I really need them.

The drapery material can be folded and put in the trunk of the car to use for protective covering when needed.

Glass fiber curtains cannot be used, but most other materials would work OK. - Eunice Reese

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain the cause and treatment of a detached retina. Also, when there is a detachment at two areas, does this continue on to a complete detachment? Is surgery for this extensive? Are there preventive measures? -E.D.

The retina is the inside lining of the eyeball. It consists of nerve-rich fibers that pick up light images. The retina is attached to the next (outer) layer by fine connective tissue called the "choroid." To get a rough idea of what happens during retinal detachment, picture the retina and choroid as two balloons, one inside the other, the inner one filled with a liquid. If a hole develops in the inner balloon (retina), some of the liquid will seep in between it and the outer one (choroid). As a result, the inner layer will become separated from the outer. This is what happens in retinal detachment.

The condition is more common in individuals with myopia (near-or short-sightedness). It can also occur in persons who have had cataract removal. Removal of the cataract reduces liquid pressure inside the eye, setting up the situation for separation of the retinal layer.

If attachment to the choroid layer is already weakened, a blow on the head can cause detachment. Other diseases of the eyeball can be factors, too. If detachment has occured at one or more points of the retina, the entire structure can become detached.

Symptoms of detached retina include any sudden appearance of so-called "floaters," specks of floating material within the eyeball, flashes of light, and blurring of vision. As detachment progresses, a "curtain" effect over the eye is experienced. If the detachment is near the center of the eye (macula), blurring occurs.

The only treatment is surgery to "patch up" the holes in the retina and allow reattachment. Cryosurgery (freezing) and laser-beam surgery have been developed for this procedure.

While there is no way to prevent detachment from occurring if the stage is set for it, persons with severe myopia should be aware of these symptoms and seek prompt treatment. Good results are usually attained if treatment is sought soon enough.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 79, and in recent years have had trouble falling asleep at night. About 15 yeas ago I started taking sleeping pills once or twice a week. However, for the past year I have been taking one every night. Now I have noticed that my legs from the knee down have gotten thinner and the skin from toes to knee is sort of numb to the touch. Also, my feet feel heavy when I walk.

My doctor does not think it is the sleeping pills. I had an X-ray of the lower spine where the nerves go down into the legs and nothing was out of order. Wanting another opinion I am asking you if you think the sleeping pills might be the culprit. I have been very active all my life and still am, with a large garden, etc. -P.F.

The pill you mention is a combination of barbiturates and is safe except for a person allergic to barbiturates. I would not suspect it as the villain here.

The numbness may be due to nerve damage from other causes — vitamin deficiency, diabetes or circulation problems. None of these would be unusual at your age. The leg tiredness upon walking raises strong suspicion of circulation disturbance.

SPECIAL NOTE: Readers who would like information regarding biliary atresia, a tragic liver disease affecting babies, will want to read a copy of a new publication of the Pediatric Liver Research Foundation. The address is 413 Haddon Ave., Collingswood, N.J. 08108. I am indebted to E.J.R. — whose child died of this — for bringing this to my attention. In biliary atresia, there is malformation of the bile ducts and gall bladder, resulting in progressive cirrhosis of the the liver. It is relatively uncommon.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I have been reading a lot in the newspapers lately about the possibility of getting cancer from hair dyes. It is very upsetting.

Premature greying runs in our family. My mother and her sisters had snow-white hair when they were in their 40s. Some people may think it's pretty but I think it adds 15 years to any woman's age — no matter how young her face is. I started to dye my hair when I was 35 and have been doing it for 27 years.

I keep reading about the experiments being done with rats. Every report I've seen says the rats are drinking the dye — and in enormous quantities. I don't want to drink it, I just want to put it on my head.

The only person I've heard mention this subject on the news is Walter Cronkite. He is like a second God in our house. Walter Cronkite says the studies are "inconclusive." Someone else on that same broadcast said a woman would have to drink 25 bottles of hair dye every day of her life in order to get as much as the rats got.

A lot of people in this country trust you, Ann. Your opinion would mean a great deal to us and millions of others. Will you please tell us what you think — or is this potato too hot for you to handle? –Scared –Like So Many Others

Dear Scared: No potato is too hot for me to handle if I have the backing of blue-ribbon experts. I've done a lot of digging into this hair-dye controversy because a great number of women have written to express concern, just as you have.

Dr. Edmund Klein, a most distinguished and world-renowned skin cancer specialist at the Rosewell Park Memorial Institute (New York's State Center for Treatment, Control and Research of Cancer), had this to say:

"Many of my patients, including those who have a tendency to develop skin cancers, as well as those who have already developed skin cancers, have been dyeing their hair for decades. To the best of my knowledge, not one cancer has occurred in these patients that could be traced to hair dyes.

"The majority of chemical agents which cause skin cancer produce it at the site where it makes its first contact with the body — usually the skin, because its impact is strongest at that particular place.

"In my opinion, if hair dyes were a serious cause of cancer they would have produced skin cancers on the scalps, since these women have a predisposition toward developing the disease. It is even less likely that hair dyes would cause cancer in the average individual who is not prone to developing skin cancer. Almost any agent can, under very unusual circumstances, cause cancer, but fortunately, these circumstances apply to less than one in a million.

"Statements that create scare and panic should be based on something more than inconclusive and possibly irrelevant studies."

Dr. Edmund Klein is only one of several authorities with whom I consulted. A past president of the New York Academy of Sciences described the rat studies as "poorly designed" and said, "They may or may not prove anything — even about rats." Not one single authority with whom I checked believed the rat studies have any validity whatsoever. I have been using hair dyes for over 30 years and will continue to do so. –Ann Landers

CRUMB CAKE

½ cup packaged corn flake crumbs
½ cup regular all-purpose flour
2/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
6 tbsp. regular margarine or butter
½ cup packaged corn flake crumbs
1½ cup regular all-purpose flour
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 cup buttermilk
2 eggs
½ cup regular margarine or butter, softened
1 tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. ground nutmeg

For topping, measure the first five ingredients into medium-sized mixing bowl. Mix until crumbly. Set aside. Measure remaining ingredients into large mixing bowl. Blend 30 seconds on low speed, scraping bowl constantly. Beat 3 minutes on high speed, scraping bowl occasionally. Pour batter into greased 15½ x 10½ x 1-inch baking pan. Crumble topping over batter. Bake in oven at 350 degrees about 25 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Cut into 3½ x 3-inch pieces. Serve warm or cooled. Yield: 15 servings.

Q.1—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K7 ♡AJ92 ◇KQ82 ♣AJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	3 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—East has stepped in where angels fear to tread. In view of his overcall, you cannot be certain that you can make nine tricks at no trump since you have only one stopper in his suit. However, you can expect a reasonable penalty if you double and you will still be a 3 to 1 favorite to win the rubber.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ10952 ♡7 ◇K32 ♣J105
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Thus far, you have not shown much of value when, in fact, you have a fair hand. Since partner has shown a good hand by his reverse, there is no question that you should contract for game—it's just a matter of which game. Although you have an unbalanced hand, we slightly prefer three no trump to four spades. If partner has "soft" values in hearts, e.g., K-Q or K-J, they might be of no value in spades but would pull their full weight at no trump, and the diamond king should be an entry to your long spade suit.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ943 ♡84 ◇A76 ♣952
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—You are in the slam zone, so you must make a bid that is more encouraging than a mere four spade rebid. We suggest you cue-bid the ace of diamonds and see how partner reacts.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q105 ♡6 ◇QJ83 ♣98643
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♡	Dble.	?

What action do you take?

A.—You have little of value to contribute and there is only one way to get that message across to partner—pass! You certainly do not want to start a rescue operation. Indeed, you would be delighted if the opponents bought the hand, for on defense your hand has some merit.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9862 ♡Q107 ◇10763 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble.	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—By first doubling and then jumping in his own suit, North has shown a very strong hand, for you promised nothing when you responded to his double. Since you have excellent trump support and a ruffing value, we feel strongly that you should raise to four hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠762 ♡A8 ◇Q5 ♣AKJ1075
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—With a full opening bid opposite an opening bid, you should insist on game. A jump to four clubs describes your hand perfectly. If partner simply rebids five clubs or four hearts, pass. If he bids four diamonds, bid four hearts. If he chooses to cue-bid four spades, you can bid five hearts to show that you are not averse to slam.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J92 ♡75 ◇AJ87 ♣KJ63
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble.	?

What action do you take?

A.—You have 10 points in high cards, which is the minimum for a redouble. Since that describes your hand exactly, there is no reason why you should look for any other bid.

Q.8—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ85 ♡AJ107 ◇62 ♣KJ8
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble.	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—With a sound opening bid facing partner's takeout double, you want to be in game. However, you do not know which major suit to choose. Ideally, partner should have four cards in each major for his takeout double, but there are times when he will have only three cards in one of the suits. The solution is to make a "fake" cue-bid of two diamonds. That does not promise first- or second-round diamond control in this sequence; it simply asks partner to pick a suit. You intend raising to game no matter which major he chooses.

Opening lead: ♠ Q.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "North's one-diamond response to his partner's club opening would be made by most experts. His reason for that bid is that he can give a jump raise if the opener rebids one spade or one heart, can pass to a one notrump call and bid two notrump if opener goes to two clubs."

Alan: "Opener does rebid one heart and the final contract becomes four hearts.

South has no trouble making his game because the diamond queen is located where he wants it to be, but the game bid is a good one."

Oswald: "A one-heart response by North would produce a raise to two hearts by South. North might decide to pass since his hearts are so weak. Also a one-spade response (normal 40 years ago) would probably lead to failure to ever find the heart suit. Not too bad a fate since three notrump makes also."

Alan: "This hand is given here as a preliminary to discussion of the problems involved in bidding balanced—type hands. They will be discussed further all week."

A Dakota reader wants to know the meaning of the expression: "He punched declarer."

It means that a defender forced declarer to use his trumps to ruff and caused him to lose control of the hand. It has nothing to do with physical assault.

Heartline

(HEARTLINE is a service for senior citizens of all ages. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. HEARTLINE: I am 62 years old and I am on my Social Security benefits. My hearing is getting bad. I have been thinking about getting a hearing aid. Can you give me some advice? T.R.

A: Effective selection of a hearing aid is something of a problem. In some cases hearing loss can be corrected by medical treatment. In other instances use of a properly selected hearing aid will improve a person's ability to hear. There are also cases in which neither medical treatment nor a hearing aid will help the individual hear better. Since August 15, 1977, hearing aids may be sold only to people who have been examined by a licensed physician within six months before the aid is purchased. It is possible, however, for people 18 years of age or older to waive the requirement by signing a statement indicating they know why a medical examination is advisable. The Food and Drug Administration recommends that consumers who are considering buying a hearing aid should select a seller who will let them rent an aid on a trial basis, to make certain that the device will actually improve their hearing and that they will feel comfortable wearing it. The FDA reports that the average price for a hearing aid is between $300 and $450. Useful information and a list of hearing aid models "retained on contract" for 1977 by the Veterans Administration is available (Hearing Aids Selected, IB 13-2) from the Supply Service Department of Medicine and Surgery, Veterans Administration, Washington, DC 20420.

HEARTLINE: I am now 60 years old. I have been in business for myself all my life and have paid my Social Security through self-employment. Since I am self-employed, there is no one to tell me when to retire. I plan to work past the age of 65. I know that there is a reduction in Social Security for drawing it before age 65. However, are there any extra benefits for working beyond the age of 65? J.J.

A: Yes, there is a delayed retirement credit for those people who work beyond the age of 65 and do not draw their Social Security benefits. Presently, the delayed retirement credit is 1 per cent per year of one twelfth of one percent for each month beyond the age of 65 that a Social Security check is not drawn.

Now, for workers reaching age 62 in 1979 and after, the delayed retirement credit will be increased 3 percent per year of ¼ of one percent per month that a person continues to work and does not draw a Social Security benefit.

This provision becomes effective in January of 1979. However, since workers reaching age 62 in 1979 will not reach age 65 until 1982, it will have relatively little effect before 1983.

This new law was passed primarily to give people an extra incentive to work beyond the age of 65. Adding 3 percent to your Social Security benefit sounds very good until you look at the situation closer. For example, a person is eligible for $300 per month Social Security benefit at age 65. By working until age 66, this person might increase their Social Security benefit to $315 and then add 3 percent to this and it gives them a monthly benefit of $324.25 per month. So by working for one extra year, this person has increased his Social Security benefit approximately $25 per month.

However, for earning this extra $25 a month, this person gave up $3600 in Social Security benefits that he could have been drawing during the year he was 65. To make up this lost $3600, the person would have to draw Social Security benefits for 12 years.

It is possible that many people might need to work that extra year because the money they will earn should far exceed the $3600 that they could have been drawing from Social Security, or, it could be that this person really wants to continue working. However, if someone does not want to work another year nor do they need this income, then they sould not work just to receive the delayed retirement credit. The new provision is a step in the right direction, but it is not a big enough step to continue work.

Tulia Council Sees Proposed City Budget

A-J Correspondent

TULIA — The Tulia City Council has set a preliminary $2-million-plus budget for consideration and adoption at their March 21 meeting.

Anticipated revenue for the year beginning April 1 is $2,110,499. Anticipated expenditures are $2,105,194.

Requests from the Federal Revenue Sharing hearing conducted on Feb. 8 were presented at the same meeting councilmen presented the proposed budget. Tulia Day Care Center requested $3,000, and the Swisher County Library asked for $6,666. Last year's funding for the Swisher County Library was $3,500.

A presentation of the city power plant's production and costs indicated that demand is anticipated to grow at an annual rate of five percent based on an average of the past seven years.

The study also showed that cost per kilowatt-hour has risen steadily over the years due largely to increases in fuel expense.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I am retired, with $60,000 in various time deposits yielding 6 percent. Would you suggest I switch the $60,000 into bonds rated A or better for more income? What would be the pros and cons?

A. Your money, I assume, is mostly in one-year deposits. That gives you considerable liquidity — if liquidity is what you really need.

You could boost that income by 1¾ percent, or $2,050 a year, if you moved into 6-to-7-year time deposits. Since you evidently shied away from the longer term deposit, I must infer that you are frightened by longer term commitments — which, in a way, — is what you would be getting into with A, or better, bonds paying around 8½ percent but with maturities 20 to 30 years off. A bond may be sold at any time, but there can be no guarantee as to the market price you will receive.

All I submit to you is that your $60,000 is now earning up to $1,500 a year less than it could be bringing in if you would lend it on longer-term loans.

Q. How can one tell how much he has accumulated — in market value — if he reinvests dividends plus additional cash?

A. All you need do is multiply the number of shares your quarterly statement says is in your account by today's stock market price for your shares.

Q. I am still running my own store and wondering what to do with about $26,000 worth of life insurance with a cash value of about $17,000. My children don't need the protection. It would cost me 6 percent to borrow on the insurance, which makes it unprofitable to borrow to buy bonds. And still the $17,000 seems to be lying idle.

A. There is still some margin of profit if you borrow at 6 percent and reinvest for 8½ percent, which is what you can get from high grade corporate bonds. Secondly, the cash value is increasing. I'd discuss it with your insurance advisor. Make him defend continuation of the program.

Q. I've read that an important factor in the strong consumer goods market is the buying power generated by bvorrowing against steadily rising home values. Is it true that people are borrowing on their mortgages to buy things?

A. I don't know where the borrowed money winds up, but from letters to this column I would say that the idea that rising market value of homes can provide a base for raising a bigger mortgage is quite popular.

I suppose the cost of raising money by increasing the mortgage on your home at an interest rate of, say, 8½ or 9 percent is cheaper than paying 11, 12 or much higher percentage rates via installment loans or other credit arrangements. But it is still money that has to be paid back — if you worry about such things. But then we don't worry about spending via more borrowing on a natinal level, either.

Notre Dame Turns UH Green 100-77

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Center Bill Lambeer got 20 points to spark a 100-77 Notre Dame rout of Houston in the NCAA Midwest Regional here Sunday, giving the Irish a St. Patrick's Day berth against Utah in the regional playoff.

Earlier, Louisville held off St. John's, 76-68, at Oral Roberts University to advance to the March 17 playoff in Lawrence, Kan., to play the winner of the Creighton-DePaul game.

The Irish were never in any real trouble in the game as they took a quick 28-11 advantage and then carried a 47-32 lead into halftime.

A lot of the scoring came from inside as Lambeer, 6-foot-11 sophomore center, continually outmuscled Houston defenders on the boards. Guard Don Williams kept Houston from keying on Lambeer as he canned 19 points from outside.

Lambeer's 20 topped five Irish players who scored in double figures, including Williams' 19.

For Houston, guard Kenneth Williams led four Cougars in double-figure scoring with 17 points.

The Irish built a 27-point lead, at 79-52, with eight minutes left in the game and then coasted to the easy victory.

The Cougars ended the season at 25-8. With the win, Notre Dame moved to 21-6.

Notre Dame's victory gives Coach Digger Phelps his fifth consecutive team in the NCAA regional finals, a feat matched only by UCLA.

The Louisville duo of guard Darrell Griffith and forward Larry Williams powered the Cardinals to their victory over St. John's.

Larry Williams, a 6-foot-8 junior forward, scored 25 points, 13 of those coming in a hot second half. Griffith, a 6-foot-3 guard, added 14 points in the second half to make his total 21.

George Johnson, a 6-foot-7 forward for the Redmen, led his team with 24 points, 16 of those in the last half.

After trailing by five, 39-34, at halftime, St. John's suffered a scoring drought of nearly six minutes, to trail 55-38 with 14 minutes left.

C SPORTS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Monday, Mar. 13, 1978

Griffith then reeled off eight straight points, six of those on free throws, to pull the Cardinals out of danger at 74-60.

St. John's ends the season at 21-7.

"I thought it would be closer," said Phelps of his Irish runaway victory. "We were ready for them, we were ready for the press because we had seen their films."

"We played a really good game today — one of the best all year," said Lambeer. "You lose once and you're gone. That's our emotional high. Not too many teams are going to be able to beat us when we play like that."

Houston Coach Guy Lewis, whose team carried the flag of the Southwest Conference, was obviously dejected about the margin of the loss.

"It was very obvious that we were never in the ballgame," Lewis said. "Everybody always says everybody is up for Notre Dame. We certainly were not. I thought we were ready to play, but we were not ready to play.

"We were totally whipped. We've been whipped before. This is not the end. We'll be back.

"I'm still proud of this team. It won 25 ballgames. I'll take that next year."

Weiskopf Holds Off Nicklaus

MIAMI (AP) — Jack Nicklaus came within a couple of inches of making a miracle happen again, but gritty Tom Weiskopf shrugged off the pounding challenge of his good friend and hung on for a drama-packed one-stroke victory Sunday in the 36-hole wind-up of the Doral Open Golf Tournament.

"I was beginning to believe some of the things I've been reading," chuckled Nicklaus, who holed wedge shots for a birdie on the ninth and eagles on the 10th and 12th holes of the final round.

Coming from five shots back and in the same group with his close friend and hunting companion Weiskopf, Nicklaus fell just short of duplicating his fantastic, come-from-behind triumph two weeks ago in the Inverrary Classic.

Just as at Inverrary, he played his back nine in 30 and, this time, used only nine putts on those holes.

This time it wasn't good enough. He missed by only a couple of inches holing out a wedge shot for a birdie that would have tied it on the final hole.

"I got a bad bounce," he joked. "Actually, it just slid by. Just missed by a couple of inches, didn't it Tom?"

"I wasn't watching," dead-panned Weiskopf.

"You just don't shoot 30 from five behind and pull it out twice in a row," Nicklaus said. "When he gets in position to

Rangers-Expos

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Centerfielder Juan Beniquez drove in three runs and scored once Sunday to lead the Texas Rangers to a 6-5 exhibition baseball victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Rangers are undefeated in three exhibition starts.

Dodgers-Braves

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Atlanta Braves jumped on 20-game winner Tommy John for three first-inning runs and held on for a 5-3 exhibition victory Sunday over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

John was wild, issuing three walks in the first inning rally as well as two wild pitches. The Braves, who defeated the Dodgers, 14-3, on Saturday, took advantage as Rowland Office drove in one run with a sacrifice fly. Cito Gaston singled home the second and the third scored on a wild pitch.

Blue Jays-Astros

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Jesus Alou's two-out, bases-loaded double in the ninth inning gave the Houston Astros a 3-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Sunday.

Losing pitcher Mike Cosgrove walked Luis Pujols, allowed a single to Craig Cacek and walked Don Pisker to load the bases with no one out in the ninth. After two outs, Alou delivered his game-winning hit to right-center field.

Yankees-Orioles

MIAMI (AP) — The New York Yankees, paced by infielder Mickey Klutts' home run and two singles, collected 13 hits off four pitchers Sunday and romped to a 9-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in exhibition baseball.

In addition to Klutts' score, shortstop Buckey Dent added two doubles and three runs batted in, while Mickey Rivers had a double and a single and drove in two runs.

Royals-Phillies

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Shortstop Mike Buskey's seventh-inning error set up two unearned Kansas City runs as the Royals pulled from behind to defeat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-6 in a National League exhibition baseball game Sunday.

Al Cowens doubled in two runs and Darrell Porter hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth inning to put Kansas City within striking distance, trailing 6-5.

Red Sox-White Sox

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Jorge Orta's three-run double and Lamar Johnson's ensuing home run led a six-run Chicago uprising that chased Boston starter Mike Paxton in the third inning as the White Sox scored a 9-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Red Sox Sunday.

Cardinals-Mets

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Steve Henderson drove in three runs with a home run, double and single and also contributed three sparkling defensive plays while sparking the New York Mets to a 4-0 exhibition baseball triumph Sunday over the St. Louis Cardinals.

NCAA Tourney Heads To Second Round Tilts

By The Associated Press

Indiana and Duke, two of college basketball's traditional powers, eked out 63-62 victories over a couple of upstarts, Furman and Rhode Island, in East Regional first-round play Sunday in the NCAA basketball championships.

In the opener of the doubleheader at Charlotte, N.C., Indiana built a 13-point lead and needed all of it to turn back Furman's rally. Butch Carter sank three free throws in the final 30 seconds to clinch it for the Hoosiers, NCAA champions two years ago.

The second game saw Rhode Island leading by three points in the final minute only to have the eighth-ranked Blue Devils pull out the victory on a basket by Mike Gminski with 32 seconds to go and two free throws by the big center with 17 seconds on the clock.

Other winners in the completion of the opening round Sunday were Penn and Villanova in the other bracket of the East Regional and Notre Dame, Louisville, Utah and DePaul in the Midwest Regional.

They join Saturday's eight winners in the second round of the NCAA tournament. The Mideast and West Regionals will be played Thursday, the East and Midwest Regionals on Friday.

In Sunday's other results, it was Villanova 103, La Salle 97 and Pennsylvania 92, St. Bonaventure 83 at Philadelphia; Utah 86, Missouri 79 in double overtime and DePaul nipped Creighton 80-78 at Wichita, Kan., and Louisville 76, St. John's, N.Y., 68 and Notre Dame 100, Houston 77 at Tulsa, Okla.

On Saturday, it was Miami, Ohio 84, Marquette 81, OT; Michigan State 77, Providence 63; Kentucky 85, Florida State 76; Western Kentucky 87, Syracuse 86, OT; Arkansas 73, Weber State 52; UCLA 83, Kansas 76; San Francisco 68, North Carolina 64, and Fullerton State 90, New Mexico 85.

Indiana led Furman from the start and was in front 46-33 with 13:27 to play before the Paladins mounted their comeback. With 30 seconds left, the Hoosiers' lead was down to 60-58.

Carter then sank the front end of a one-and-one foul situation, rebounded his own miss on the second try and returned to the line seven seconds later after being fouled by Furman's Ron Smith. This time he made both ends of the one-and-one to make the score 63-58.

Baskets by Jonathan Moore and Al Daniel brought Furman within one, and a missed free throw gave them possesion of the ball with two seconds to play, but Rodney Arnold missed a 20-foot jumper as time ran out.

Mike Woodson led Indiana with 26 points and Wayne Radford had 20 before fouling out with 1:21 left. Al Daniel led Furman with 21 points.

Gminski led Duke with 25 points. Rhode Island's Sly Williams, whose fifth foul sent Gminski to the line for the decisive free throws, scored a game-high 27 points.

A layup by Jiggy Williamson and a basket by Percy Davis gave Rhode Island a 62-59 lead before Gminski hit a field goal with 32 seconds left. A foul by Duke's Kenny Dennard sent Davis to the line, but he missed. The ball went to the Duke end, where after a struggle for possession a jump ball was called. Williams fouled Gminski in another loose-ball battle and he converted both shots of a one-and-one for te victory.

Keith Herron scored 24 points, Alex Bradley and Reggie Robinson added 22 apiece and Rory Sparrow had 19 as Villanova beat crosstown rival LaSalle. The Wildcats trailed 53-47 at halftime but reeled off 10 straight points early in the second half to gain control.

Michael Brooks of La Salle led all scorers with 35 points.

Keven McDonald's 37 points led Ivy League champion Pennsylvania past St. Bonaventure, which had led 42-37 at the half. The Quakers moved in front with six straight points early in the second half and built their lead to 15 with 5:33 to play.

Louisville took a commanding 55-38 lead by outscoring St. John's 16-4 in the first six minutes of the second half. The Redmen closed within four, 64-60, with less than four minutes remaining.

Weiskopf

win, a player as good as Tom isn't likely to fold. You have to beat him. It was fun. You know, it's a lot of fun holing wedges and all those other things that were happening.

"I was just kind of waiting to see what would happen next.

"Tom won and he deserved to win."

He had to absorb the best Nicklaus could throw at him.

Weiskopf, frustrated in three earlier challenges for this title, swept out into a 4-stroke lead with a 67 in the morning round, then grimly hung on with a closing 68 that was fashioned in full view of Nicklaus' uncanny heroics.

He said a string of three consecutive birdies, beginning on the 10th, was the key to his victory, built on a 272 total, a whopping 16 under par.

"Jack made those two eagles on 10 and 12 but I played those holes birdie-birdie-birdie. So I lost only one shot. That was the key," he said.

But that's only the bare bones of story. It was one of the year's great finishes.

Nicklaus, who had finished second and first in his last two starts, seemed content to stay around par — and within striking distance — for the first 26 holes of the long, cloudy day.

Then, almost as if he taken a look at the leader board and decided the time had come, he pulled his awesome game together and began to play with the fearful majesty of which only he seems capable.

This time, however, it wasn't quite good enough.

He was five shots back when he began his move. He played the next 10 holes seven under par. Weiskopf played them three under.

Sounds of "Sooee Pig" rocked ORU's Mabee Center as Houston took the court, showing a large number of Arkansas fans who had purchased tickets expecting to see the Razorbacks play in the Midwest Regional.

Those fans had little to cheer about after Houston fell to the early deficit.

"We picked a terrible place to play the worst game we've played all year," Lewis said. "In front of practically the whole nation. One good thing about it, any recruits looking in know we sure need help."

Jarvis Blows In To Battle Chaps

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Larry Hays peered out the window Sunday afternoon, just to reconfirm his belief that the dust was still blowing, then quipped, "I hope this thing has all its fun today."

The reference was the need of ihis Chaparrals to play games, not watch the wind and dust blow, or see rain or snow tumble from the skies.

And Lubbock Christian College will open its most hectic week of the season today with a 4 p.m. single game against Jarvis Christian at Chaparral Stadium.

It was originally slated as a 1 p.m. doubleheader, but auto troubles prevented Jarvis from leaving the Hawkins area —near Longview—until late Sunday and they weren't expected to arrive in town until noon today.

Thus, it's back to the tripleheader business. These two teams particiapted in a pair of triple bills here last year and will try another one Tuesday, beginning at noon.

Hays also had a chance to check his hospital report Sunday and didn't like what he saw. Designated hitter Mark Morgan has been ruled out for at least two weeks with mononucleosis; third baseman Clark Langdon will miss possibly all 12 of this week's games with a pulled hamstring; Richard Bowles suffered a neck injury when stealing a base Saturday and his status is in doubt, as is that of shortstop Glenn Wilken, who has been hampered by a sore shoulder. Plus Tommy Inman, one of only two of last year's regulars hitting over .300, has shoulder woes also.

Hays indicated he was leaving Wilken's status up to him and trainer Tim Marshall, who had to treat the shoulder before each game of the Midwestern series last weekend.

Bowles and Oscar Acosta reaped Texoma Conference Player and Pitcher of the week awards last week. Bowles went 10-for-22 in 8 games, upping his average 182 points to .273. Acosta made three relief apperances, allowing only nine hits and three walks in 9 1/3 innings, fanning 12 and posting two wins.

Today, Gary Swann, who failed to record an out Saturday against Midwestern, will get the call. Jarvis, which is 4-5-1, will go with either righty Lawrence Day (0-1) or southpaw Robert Johnson (0-0).

Jarvis' most recent outing was Saturday, when the Bulldogs lost 5-4 and then tied 7-7 at home against Stephen F. Austin.

The Bulldogs have whipped Texas College twice at home and Texas Southern twice on the raod, losing three times to Stephen F. Austin and tiwce to Grambling.

After this four-game series, the Chaps will trek to Abilene to face ACU Thursday, then return home for a Friday twin bill against Panhandle State and a Saturday — and possibly Sunday — doubleheader against North Texas State.

Foyt Rolls Up Aggieland Win

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texan A.J. Foyt, battling a sore shoulder and recent Daytona 500 winner Bobby Allison, broke away from the field in the second half of the race Sunday to win the USAC-sanctioned Aggieland 250 stock car race.

Allison, who recently ended a 19-year odyssey by winning at Daytona, finished second 13 seconds behind Foyt, who won the race with a Texas World Speedway track record of 138.180 miles per hour average.

Gary Bowsher, a second generation stock car driver from Springfield, Ohio, finished third.

Foyt, racing for the first time since suffering a shoulder separation Feb. 19 when his car flipped several times at Daytona, earned the pole position in record time but had to fight off three other challengers early in the race.

Foyt, Allison, No. 2 qualifier Terry Ryan and No. 3 starter Bobby Unser jockeyed for position throughout the first half of the race.

Unser, a two-time Indianapolis 500 winner from Albuquerque, N.M. blew an engine on the 27th lap and Ryan dropped from contention when he blew a tire and hit the wall on the 62nd lap.

That made it a two-car race between Foyt and Allison with Foyt taking the lead on the 77nd lap shortly after the race's third yellow flag.

By the 90th lap, Foyt and Allison were the only drivers on the same lap. At 100 laps, Foyt was leading Allison by 15 seconds.

Joe Ruttman, Upland, Calif., came in fourth followed by Billy Hagen, Shreveport, La.; Ramo Stott, Keokuk, Iowa; and Kevin Housby, Des Moines, Iowa.

'Motorcycle King' Triumphs

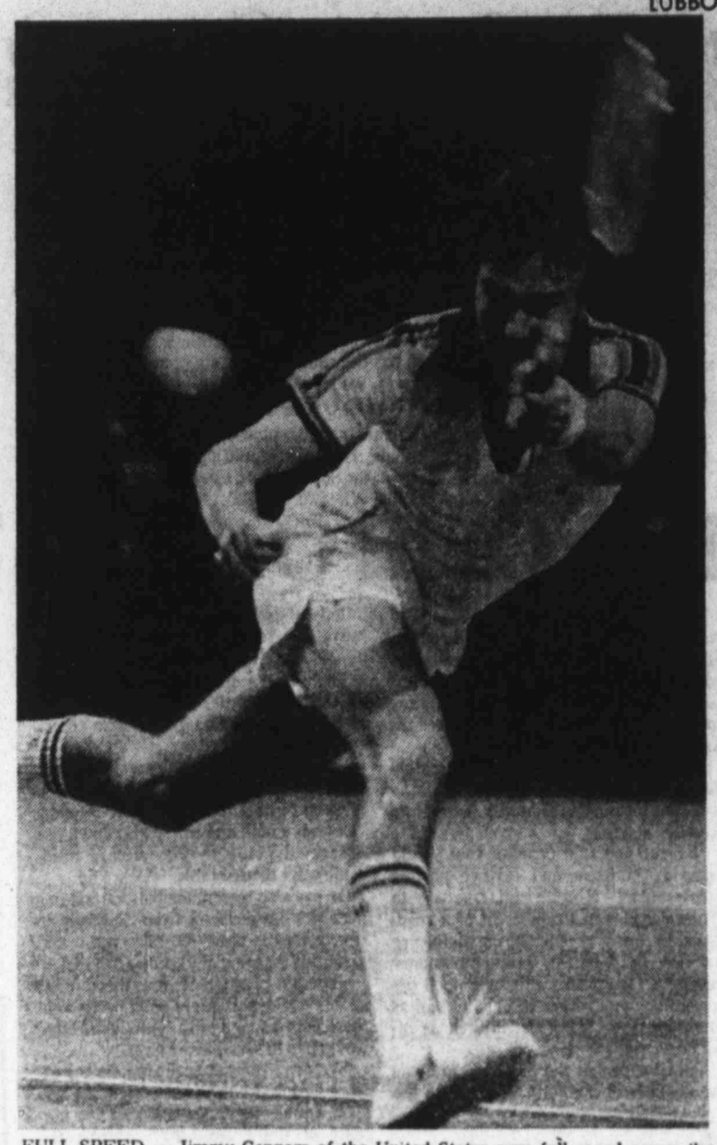

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — American motorcycle king Kenny Roberts, in his last U.S. appearance before beginning a quest for the World Championship, finally added the Daytona 200 to his impressive list of credits Sunday.

The 26-year-old Roberts, a two-time national champion from Modesto, Calif., shook off an early challenge by defending champion Steve Baker and then sped off to a record-breaking triumph on his Yamaha. His average speed of 108.373 mph was the fastest in the 37th runnings of the richest, most prestigious motorcycle race in this country.

Roberts, finally capturing the only major American road race he had yet to win, lapped every other starter in the 80-bike field at least once en route to a four-mile victory margin over Johnny Cecotto of Venezuela.

Roberts earned the No. 1 starting position by virtue of a near-record qualifying speed of 111.269 mph. He jumped into the lead at the start, with Baker, Cecotto and Skip Aksland in close pursuit.

Baker nosed in front starting the second lap but Roberts regained the lead going into the third of 52 circuits.

Connors Aids Rout Of Aussies

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The United States continued its rout of Australia in World Cup Tennis Sunday when Jimmy Connors, breaking Aussie John Alexander's service in the first game of each set, won in straight sets to remain unbeaten in Cup singles.

The 6-2, 6-4 victory put the United States ahead 6-0 with one match remaining — a doubles contest between Americans Roscoe Tanner and Brian Gottfried and Australians John Newcombe and Tony Roche.

In women's net action in Dallas Sunday, Evonne Goolagong administered a ser-and-volley tennis lesson to schoolgirl sensation Tracy Austin to catpure the $20,000 first-prize. Goolagong defeated Miss Austin 4-6, 6-0, 6-2.

The Americans clinched their third consecutive Cup title and a $70,000 check when Gottfried beat Newcombe 6-4, 6-4 on Saturday.

Connors, playing in his third World Cup, is undefeated in six singles matches. He beat Newcombe 6-4, 6-4 Friday night.

Gottfried, voted the tournament's most valuable player, called the tournament and the award "pretty exciting. I watched the cup a few years ago on television, wishing I could be here."

During check-presenting ceremonies, a tournament official scuttled speculation that because of recent U.S. dominance of the tournament, the 9-year-old event would be changed to abandon the United States-Australia format.

"We're convinced that the calibre of tennis played by both teams remains the best in the world," said William O. Bailey, president of tournament sponsor Aetna Life Casualty.

"This morning at a meeting of the team captains the decision was made to continue the team competition between Australia and the United States," Bailey said.

Associate tournament chairman Thomas J. Collins said changes are being considered in the makeup of the tournament itself but a decision would not be made for some time.

Connors described his play as "real hard, real firm, real consistent. I lost my serve once, but it was not my fault at all.

Goolagong, sweat soaking the back of her bright green tennis dress, earned the victory the hard way against the 5-foot-2 Austin.

With her ponytails flapping, the 102-pound Austin appeared to have radar in her racquet in the first set as she constantly passed Goolagong at the net.

Austin, who had broken Martina Navratilova's 37-match streak, tucked the first set away when a frustrated Goolagong netted a backhand.

The determined Goolagong doused any hopes of an upset before 9,000 fans in Moody Coliseum by ripping off six straight games in the second set. Her bristling serve aced the frail but fiesty Austin twice in the fifth game.

The seventh-seeded Austin broke Goolagong's serve in the first game of the deciding set and the crowd smelled upset.

However, the little Rolling Hills, Calif. 15-year-old was stricken by bad luck in the second game. With Goolagong serving in the second game, Austin popped up one of her patented "moon ball" lobs that struck the clock hanging over midcourt. The point went to Goolagong and the air went out of Austin.

Goolagong, winning her second tournament since maternity leave last year, quickly moved in for the kill against the little gal with braces on her teeth and wearing a blue and white print tennis dress.

"For her age, she has incredible court sense which is the basics of tennis," said Goolagong, who was playing Austin for the first time. "She was tough to stop but I served and volleyed about as well as I have in a long time."

The obviously-drained Austin said, "I'm not used to playing these hard matches. I just kept getting more tired every day. I need to go home and do some training. I have to get stronger."

Austin, the youngest female ever to compete at Wimbledon, said, "There were a lot of crucial calls out there and I felt like I got the bad end of one of them but there's nothing you can do about it. Evonne is just a great player."

Asked what she would have done with the $10,00 second-place money if she could have kept it, the amateur Austin said, "I guess I would have just run right out and spent it."

Austrian Captures Downhill

BAD KLEINKIRCHHEIM, Austria (AP) — World downhill champion Annemarie Moser-Proell of Austria honored a pledge Sunday that she had made the day before when she won the 50th World Cup race of her career — her 29th downhill victory.

The record victory gave the Austrian a perfect score — and victory — in the downhill division of the World Cup. She has 125 points.

But her fifth downhill success this season did nothing to her over-all Cup total of 126 points, in which only her three best downhill results are counted.

"My first World Cup race was some 10 years ago," said Moser-Proell, adding with a smile: "I placed last then."

As she did on Saturday here, she placed first, with a winning time of 1 minute, 48.68 seconds, and, once again, Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., was a close second in 1:48.81.

Third on the 2,894-meter Strohsack course with a vertical drop of 700 meters was veteran Swiss skier Marie-Theres Nadig, who clocked 1:48.96.

The World Cup season winds up next weekend at Arosa, Switzerland. Hannie Wenzel of Liechtenstein, who did not enter the two downhills here, already has assured herself of her first combined crown.

Moser-Proell was celebrated by a roaring partisan crowd of almost 10,000 lining the trail and waiting in the finish area for what most observers regard as the best female downhill skier of all times.

"I was terribly nervous this morning," she said after the race. "I knew the 50th win was at stake, and I was so bent on it.

"In the upper part of the track I skied very badly into a gate, caught an edge and almost fell."

Among the jubilant fans was Austrian women's team caoch Claus Derganc, who described Moser-Proell's achievement as "simply super," but otherwise wanted to forget the performance of most other skiers of his team, who placed fifth, ninth, 12th, 13th and 15th — clearly below expectations.

Strange SWC Race Shaping Up

By United Press International

Arkansas is leading the league, SMU has finally won a conference game and the Texas Loghorns are buried in the second division.

This year's Southwest Conference baseball race certainly has a different look about it.

Arkansas and Rice played three games in Fayetteville last weekend and the Owls have not scored a run yet. David Rhodes, Tim Lollar and Jeff Huddleston all pitched shutouts for the Razorbacks, allowing Rice only 14 hits in the three games.

The three victories boosted the Razorbacks to 5-1 early in the SWC chase to put the Hogs a game in front of Baylor and Houston.

But the real surprise is down near the bottom of the conference standings.

For the second straight weekend Texas lost two games of a three-game series to fall three games off the conference lead. On the opening weekend of the season the Longhorns were the victims of Arkansas and last weekend they lost two of three to Houston.

After losing on Friday, 6-1, the Longhorns bounced back in the opening game of Saturday's double header with a 14-4 decision and seemed on their way to winning the nightcap as well. But Houston scored twice in the bottom of the eight to rally and win, 7-6.

In Dallas, meanwhile, SMU ended a 10-game SWC losing streak and won only its second conference game in its last 52 starts. The Mustangs knocked off TCU, 11-8, in the middle game of their series, but the Horned Frogs won the other two.

The other SWC series last weekend saw Texas Tech take two from Baylor on Saturday after the Bears had won the opening game Friday.

Texas will try to get things going again next weekend at home against Texas A &M. The key series, however, will bring together Arkansas and Baylor in Waco. Houston will play a three-game series at Rice and Texas Tech will do the same at TCU.

U.S. Figure Skaters Show Strength At World Meet

OTTAWA (AP) — The United States figure skating fortunes have come a long way since that fateful day in 1961, when an airplane crash wiped out the entire American team.

"We were all the way back from the Brussels tragedy in five years," said Roy Winder, executive director of the U.S. Figure Skating Association. You don't win two Olympic gold medals (Peggy Fleming in 1968 snd Dorothy Hamill in 1976) with weak teams."

The World Figure Skating championships which ended Saturday night indicated that the United States might have more skating depth than any time since the Brussels plane crash. The Americans won a gold, silver and bronze medal and seem in good shape with the Lake Placid Olympics just two years away.

Charlie Tickner of Littleton, Colo., won the gold medal in the men's competition rising from third to first with a sizzling five-minute free style performance. Linda Fratianne, the 1977 world champion from Northridge Calif., could not overcome her early disadvantage in the compulsory figures and settled for a silver medal behind East Germany's Anett Poetszch despite winning the freestyle skating segment. And the California couple of Randy Gardner and Tai Babilonia, possibly the world's most lyrical pairs team, won a bronze medal.

"On the whole I think we did very well," said Winder. "I wanted both individual gold medals. I just wish Linda had come out with a flashier freestyle routine."

Winder wouldn't say it, but several American skaters and officials felt the judges penalized Fratianne for Tickner's victory the day before. A double victory by Tickner and Fratianne would have been the first such American sweep in the individual events since 1959.

"Had Charlie not won, there is no doubt in my mind that Linda would have won the world title," said one high-ranking USSA official, who requested anonimity.

Except for the pairs event, which the Russian matched set of Irina Rodnina and Aleksandr Zaitsev won for the sixth straight year, the Ottawa World's proved how wide open international figure skating competition is today.

Fratianne was dethroned by Poetszch, Tickner replaced Vladimir Kovalev of the Soviet Union in the men's event and the Russians' second-rated dance team of Natalia Linichuk and Gennadij Karponosov beat favored Soviets' Irina Moiseeva and Andrei Minenkov for the first time and took away their title.

Fratianne said she would dedicate herself to winning the world title back in Vienna next year. Besides Poetszch, her toughest competition might come from Lise-Marie Allen, 17, of Garden Grove, Calif., whose explosive freestyle program was the most captivating performance of the championships.

"Linda and Lise-Marie can both look forward to the 1980 Olympics," said Widner. "But they'll have to pull up their figures."

The figures are tedious tracing exercises which are not fun to do or watch. The Eastern Europeans are more diciplined than the American skaters and have had better results in the school figures. Fratianne, 17, was third after the figures, a position her coach, Frank Carroll, blamed on the conspiracy of the four German-speaking judges in the event.

Tickner, 24, was also third after the figures, but was able to charge by an uninspired Kovalev and a mechanical Jan Hoffman of East Germany in the free skating.

Robin Cousins, probably the best free skater in the world now, won the bronze medal in the men's event. Cousins would seem to be Tickner's strongest threat provided the Briton's knees, which have both undegone operations, remain healthy.

Tickner, a dedicated and sensitive athlete, who went from fifth to first in one year might be satisfied with his achievement and might retire while still on top. Charlie says his future plans are still uncertain, but he definately will be listening to any pro offers.

"Cousins could win in 1979 and that would knock down Charlie's pro value," said one American skater.

"At 24, Charlie must be facing the pressure of making a living," said Widner. "I hope he stays in amateur skating and my blessing are with him in whatever he decides to do.

But Tickner's coach, Norma Sahlin, who brought the best out of him, said simply:

"I don't think he'll turn pro."

Grant Inks 5-Year Pact

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Minnesota Vikings head coach Bud Grant and Vikings general manager Mike Lynn have been signed to new five-year contracts, according to Max Winter, Vikings president.

Winter made the announcement Sunday from Palm Springs, Calif. where he is attending National Football League spring meetings.

The contracts are the longest ever offered by the club to its head coach and general manager, Winter said, adding, "I've always felt that a strong foundation is essential in professional sports."

During the four years Grant and Lynn have worked together, the Vikings have been in the playoffs each year and have won two conference championships.

"We're delighted with the job Mike Lynn has done as general manager and with the coaching of Bud Grant," Winter said.

Grant, 50, has taken the Vikings to the playoffs nine times in the last 10 years, winning one NFL and three NFC championships. They made it to the Super Bowl four times, only to lose every time.

In his 11 years as Vikings head coach, Grant's teams have won 107 games, lost 43 and tied 4.

Nebraska Regent, Referee Soured By Lemons

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — The "say whatever you think" style of Texas coach Abe Lemons has once again ruffled some feelings.

Lemons has managed to alienate the athletic department of the University of Nebraska and has apparently had a hand in driving one of the nation's more respected basketball officials out of the Southwest Conference.

Lemons, known for his uick wit and one liners, has found more and more of his comments in print the past two years because of his move to the University of Texas. Lemons said this year that Texas athletic director Darrell Royal had admonished him about some of his statements.

Now he has the entire state of Nebraska mad at him through circumstances that were not of his doing.

Through a mixup, officials of the National Invitation Tournament indicated to both Nebraska and Texas that they would have the home court advantage in their NIT quarterfinal game.

NIT President Peter A. Carlesimo personally told officials at Texas the Longhorns would host the game if Texas beat Temple in the first round. So, after Texas' victory over the Owls last Friday night, Lemons said the issue was settled as far as he was concerned.

"If there is a game it is going to be played here," Lemons said.

That was enough to touch off the Nebraska people, who felt some sort of compromise should have been reached. But the NIT scheduled the game for Austin and its 16,000-seat arena on Wednesday night.

One member of the Nebraska board of regents became so hot about Lemons' attitude he levelled a personal attack on the Texas basketballl coach.

Regent Robert Prokop said the school was being "subjected to the insults of the University of Texas and its head basketball coach."

"I further feel that if the University of Texas and its athletic department through its head basketball coach has the audacity of insulting and belittling the University of Nebraska program, we should cancel all future contracts with the University of Texas in all athletic events."

At the same time SWC referee Paul Galvan, who has officiated in two of the last three NCAA basketball finals, said he was quitting the league. Galvan, of Abilene, Tex., also officiates in the Southeastern Conference.

He admitted part of his reasons for doing so concerned comments Lemons made after Galvan had worked the finals of the SWC tournament between Houston and Texas, a game Houston won, 92-90.

After that game Lemons made joking references to Galvan's height. Galvan is about 5-foot-6.

"Get down on your knees and what can you see," Lemons said to a crowd of reporters after that game. "Kneecaps. That's all you can see. I'm going to put in for 6-4 umps. I have nothing against sort people when we play them, but I want tall umps so they can see what's going on."

During the season Lemons — after seeing Rice coach Mike Schuler make 99 substitutions — said:

"All we needed were clowns to make it a circus."

Schuler later said he would never tell another coach how to deal with his team and Lemons' comments institgated "vlown night" at Rice. Scores of students dressed in clown costumes came to the game and one of them juggled lemons in front of the Texas coach.

Pro Grid Owners To Meet

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The National Football League, jarred repeatedly in recent years by numerous and sometimes serious injuries to its quarterbacks, sits down today to decide just how to protect the passers — and perhaps make the game more exciting, too.

And if the 28 club owners ultimately decide to make a change, they'll do so with the blessing of Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"I favor any rule changes that would boost the offense and further protect quarterbacks," Rozelle said. One way to achieve that is to throw a bit of a roadblock in front of oncharging defensive linemen. By doing so, the commissioner noted, "quarterbacks will be helped because they won't have to eat the ball as often and they won't get injured as often."

Almost certainly the best way to delay the defensive behemoths en route to the offensive backfields is the way they've always been delayed — albeit illegally at times, namely by holding them.

The owners are considering softening up the holding rule. Eugene Klein, owner of the San Diego Chargers, has an official proposal to do so.

"I would make holding legal except in flagrant cases," he said. "the defense is allowed to do a lot of things. A defender can grab a man and throw him down like a sack of potatoes. The offense needs some ways to offset this," Klein said.

He has also recommended that holding penalties be reduced from 10 yards to five. "As it is now," he observed, "it is just blocking too many scoring drives."

Scoring, of course, it what the game is all about — and there is concern that there isn't enough of it. Rozelle, for one, would like to see more offense.

"We need rules changes to help the offense because the defense is doing too good a job," he said. "The size and mobility of the defense have shrunk the field."

During the week of meetings, the NFL owners will also consider — and almost certainly reject — a proposal to employ videotaped instant replays as a means of supporting or over-ruling officials on controversial plays. The league has conducted experiments in this area and has repeatedly said it's not worthwhile because of the expense of providing all the camera angles, delays in viewing the tapes and the inconclusiveness of the replays.

But they might add another official. A seventh man, the side judge, with the responsibility of watching downfield receivers, was tried during selected games in the 1977 exhibition schedule and is likely to get another airing this week.

Russian Sets World Mark

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Vladimir Yashchenko of the Soviet Union broke the world record in the high jump when he cleared 7 feet, 8½ inches on his third try Sunday at the European Indoor Track and Field Championships.

The 19-year-old Yashchenko won the high jump when he cleared 7-7¾, which matched his world outdoor mark. The old indoor mark was 7-7⅝, which Franklin Jacobs of the United States set on Jan. 27.

Jacobs and Yashchenko were expected to face one another in a USA-Europe meet here on Tuesday.

Rolf Beilschmidt of East Germany was second to Yashchenko with a jump of 7-6¼, and Wolfgang Killing of West Germany finished third at 7-5⅛.

HEIDEN SHATTERS MARK

OSLO (AP) — World speed skating champion Eric Heiden of Madison, Wis., shattered the world record in the 1,000 meters Sunday at Savalan high mountain rink in central Norway.

Fielder Draws Raves

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — They call him "Jump Steady." He wears a No. 1 on the back of his red and white St. Louis Cardinals jersey. He has old-time baseball watchers drooling.

Garry Templeton, the Cardinals' 21-year-old shortstop, is generally rated the finest major league prospect to surface in the last decade, maybe two.

"The best shorstop I've seen in 19 years," Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson says enviously.

"He has matured so fast — no telling how good he is going to be, but he's sure to be a great one," adds the Cardinals' Vern Rapp.

A native Texan who grew up in Santa Ana, Calif., Templeton continues to impress diamond observers — friend and foe alike — with his remarkable range in short field, his rifle throwing arm and batting skill.

A switch hitter who treats right-handed and left-handed pitchers with equal disdain, he batted .323 from the left side and .321 from the right in his first full season with the Cards last year. His over-all average of .322 was second in the league only to the .338 of Pittsburgh's Dave Parker.

"In judging great ball players, you try to find out what they can't do," said Jim Russo, veteran scout for the Baltimore Orioles who sat beside Cardinals Hall of Famer Stan Musial during the Cards' weekend exhibition games against the New York Mets.

"I don't know anything this kid can't do and do exceptionally well," said Russo. "I saw him in high school. I was very disappointed when we lost him in the draft. Almost every other team in baseball was after him."

Templeton, a sturdy youngster at 5-foot-11 and 170 pounds, was selected by the Cardinals in the first round of the free agent draft in June, 1974.

"Everywhere we sent him he stood out," said Musial, a member of the St. Louis board of directors. "Sarasota, St. Pete, Arkansas, Tulsa. We realized we had a jewel."

Russo said if Templeton has one flaw it is an inclination, because he has such natural talent, to sometimes be nonchalant on a play and get careless.

"I don't think I'm nonchalant — I never heard the word 'til I got up here," Templeton said. "I just play natural."

The nickname "Jump Steady" was given him by other kids in Lackey, Texas, where he was born. There was a character in town by that name whom he resembled. Garry's father, a tire worker, moved his family of five children to California when Garry was seven.

In high school, Templeton played basketball and football in addition to baseball and performed in the high hurdles and long jump in track.

"I once thought I might go out for the Olympics if I had gone to college," Templeton said. "But when I got this chance to play baseball, I took it."

He said he asked for jersey No. 1, and the Cards gave it to him. It's a number he probably will wear — significantly — for years and, if baseball men are right, some day it may hang in the Hall of Fame.

A newcomer hasn't attracted such superlatives since the days of Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle.

Hull Reaches Milestone

QUEBEC (AP) — Bobby Hull seemed of two minds about the significance of scoring goals in the World Hockey Association after he collected the 1,000th score of his pro career.

On one hand, the 39-year-old left wing said there was little difference where he had collected his 1,000th. "In the WHA or the NHL it's the same thing," he said. "It doesn't matter which league it was done in."

On the other hand, Hull recalled milestone goals he had scored in the National Hockey League which still had more significance for him than No. 1,000.

"It was not the same as when I scored my 50th goal (in one season) in the NHL with the Black Hawks in New York City against Gump Worsley. And the 51st against (Cesare) Maniago in Chicago was of course a big one," said Hull, who got his 1,000th career goal Saturday night, playing with the Winnipeg Jets. "I'd say these were the most important in my career. The 1,000th goal was nice, but it's like any other goal."

Hull was recalling the 1965-66 season when his 51st goal broke the NHL season record which he had tied in 1961-62.

The Golden Jet, as he was known in his days in Chicago, went on to score a total of 604 regular-season goals for the Hawks and another 62 in playoffs for a total of 666 before moving to the WHA Jets in 1972.

With the Jets, Hull added another 333 regular-season and playoff goals up to Saturday night when he hit the 1,000 total in a game against the Nordiques in Quebec, thus joining veteran Gordie Howe who hit the 1,000 mark earlier this season.

A crowd of 10,313 at the Quebec Colisee gave Hull a minute-long standing ovation. "The crowd reaction was just fantastic," said Hull after his goal had helped the Jets beat the Nordiques 7-4.

Hull said linemates Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson had been passing the puck to him constantly during the last five games in an effort to set up his 1,000th, but in the end it was a pass from defenseman Barry Long that set him up for his 44th goal of the season at 17:27 of the second period.

Hull had five 50-goal seasons in his 15-year tenure with the Black Hawks. He scored 50 goals in the 1961-62 season, 54 in 1965-66, 52 the following year, 58 in 1968-69 and 50 in 1971-72, the year before he jumped to the Jets.

NAIA Files Law Suit

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics has filed suit in federal district court against Sportsamerica Inc., the firm with exclusive rights to produce television packages for NAIA championship competition.

The suit, filed Friday in Kansas City, seeks $328,666.70 in damages from the firm under four counts. The suit alleges the Baltimore-based corporation failed to produce the telecast for the 1977 NAIA Championship Highlight Special, the 1977 Soccer Championship and the 1978 Indoor Track and Field Championship. It also claims Sportsamerica is refusing to produce any other championship event, though the contract does not expire until 1980.

It is the second suit filed between the two parties. The first, filed by the corporation in June 1977, asked for actual damages of $48,967.

I have run ads with no results. What I have to offer is no gimmick. I need two people to help me run my business in the Lubbock area immediately.
My company has given me unlimited finances for this purpose.
Working arrangements are open. Liberal advances while training, bonuses & top commissions.
If you are ambitious, want a true career, are of good character & over 21, come in for an interview.
You look me over, I'll look you over & we'll see where we go from there. For a confidential interview, call for an appointment Monday March 13 2PM-6PM at 806-744-2364. Out of town call collect.

CONTEMPORARY 2 Story
If your tastes dictate a home that is not like every other home on the block — our opinion is that you will LOVE this 2 story contemporary home with a blush of conservatism. Master BR on the ground floor, separate powder room, superb dining area, lovely den-living that is complimented by a handsome firepalce and beautiful staircase. Upstairs there are two bedrooms (terrific view) and a semi-pullman bath. Summer fun is yours on a 22x12 covered and protected patio. Price 46,950 WE REPEAT 46,950.

A LEFF-RIGHT HOUSE
Curved streets make it slow moving to get to. But WOW for pleasant living and safety for the kids. Extremely nice 3 BR with a living room that has an attractive wrought iron separative for pleasant dining. Refrigerated air, 2 car garage and a very pretty color format. AND BEST OF ALL this home is only 28,500 with payments of $251.00. The loan is established & the equity is $6848.00. We believe this is one-if not the most reasonable-equity in our city. Mysterious Disease Deadly To Thousands Of New Babies

HOUSTON (AP) — A disease that appeared mysteriously a few years ago is taking a greater toll of deaths and disabilities in children than did polio during the 1950s, doctors say.

Two scientists at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston said in a recent interview they had developed a vaccine that would slow, and possibly stop, the spread of the disease. But, the problem now is how it can be administered to expectant mothers.

Dr. Carol J. Baker and Dr. Morven Edwards, both pediatricians at the medical school, said the disease, a Group B Streptococcus, is striking an estimated 15,000 infants every year. Half of those babies die, the others are left blind, deaf or mentally retarded.

The disease appeared with unexpected swiftness in 1970.

Dr. Baker suggested women could be immunized when they apply for a marriage license, "similar to the blood tests required in several states.

"When you say 15,000 infants a year, perhaps that is not an impressive figure. But it is a greater toll than the polio babies of the 1950s. It is a heart-breaking experience to see a child born with this disease and then die within two to 12 hours," she said.

The two scientists said the germ can be transmitted sexually but is not a venereal disease. Adding to the problems facing physicians is that adults show no symptoms. There are no social or economic boundaries, and it can strike a baby after a normal pregnancy.

Dr. Baker said, "We don't know why it came. Of course, the Group B Streptococcus had been known for many years, but until 1970 there were only a few cases known among infants."

The 15,000 children affected by the disease may be a low estimate, Dr. Baker said. "The reports generally come from the metropolitian areas and from the larger hospitals. The Group B strep could be causing thousands of other deaths and disabilities in areas where medical facilities are not as sophisticated as in the larger cities."

Many infected infants die soon after birth, others show symptoms of the disease a few weeks later with the Group B strep often resulting in spinal meningitis.

Dr. Baker said in Houston alone the disease has been the cause of 65 percent of meningitis among the newborn.

The doctors said it is mandatory to begin "an education program, go into the schools and inform the young of this danger. And, we must somehow, someway, start an immunization program."

The vaccine, now being prepared by Dr. Dennis Kasper of the Harvard Medical School, will not only save the lives of thousands of babies, the two researchers said, "but eliminate one of the major causes of mental retardation."

Dr. Baker said those children who are infected, but survive, may in later years develop abnormal behavioral patterns, including disciplinary and learning problems.

She said a first trial fo the vaccine has been administered to test for immunilogical results. The results, she said, are "encouraging."

Those who volunteered to take the vaccine were all pediatric residents at the medical college.

Dr. Edwards explained, "They gave their time and their bodies because they had seen the babies die. They had an emotional as well as a scientific reason to assist in the experiment."

The two doctors said large-scale studies will begin this spring, but the major hangup now is the lack of screening processes to check women of child-bearing age.

Dr. Baker said, "Routine detection is just not available. If you checked all the people, you would probably miss half who were infected."

The doctors said the disease strikes so quickly in some newborns, it is impossible to use the vaccine on them.

"We can detect the disease at birth but by then it generally is too late. We must immunize the mother," Dr. Baker said.

And, Dr. Edwards added, "Another major problem is the concern about administering any vaccine to a pregnant woman. So the answer is to give the vaccine to all of those of child-bering age. It is a huge health problem, but we are on the way to a solution."

Olton Council Elections Set

A-J Correspondent

OLTON — Six candidates will vie for three places on the Olton City Council in the April 1 election here.

Seeking re-election are Mrs. Billie (Owen) Norfleet and Larry Garvin. Rounding out the ballot are Johnny Jennings, Don Lawson, Bill Morris and Raymond Powers.

Vernon Nixon, whose term is expiring, is not seeking re-election.

Three Sisters Share Same Date Of Birth

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Three Portland area sisters celebrated their birthdays Sunday — all of them were born on March 12, but in different years.

Lawrence Buchanan says he and his wife didn't plan it that way, that it was just coincidence that Jean Matthews of Beaverton, Joyce Kaiser of Portland and Mary Maes of Boring all were born on the same date in 1932, 1934 and 1939, respectively.

And as if to back up their claim that they didn't do it on purpose, the Buchanans gave birth to a fourth daughter, Susan Hanson of Portland, on Dec. 2, 1946.

Monterey High Wins Second In UIL Meet

Midland Lee High School took first place, Lubbock Monterey second and Tahoka High School third in the 7th Annual University Interscholastic League Academic Skills Practice Meet at Cooper High School Saturday.

The practice competition, which enables students to compete in preparation for the district meets in April, grouped schools into two categories, Group I for Class B, A and AA schools and Group II for Class AAA and AAAA.

Students competed against students in the same group, but rankings for all schools were then tallied on a point basis according to success of each school, competing against other schools in the same group. In the official competition in April, the district meets will pit only schools in the same classes.

Fourth, fifth and sixth rankings in the practice competition went to Archer City, Snyder and Lubbock High.

Results of the individual competitions were:

Spanish Socialists Visit Washington For Meeting

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spanish Socialist representatives Enrique Mugica and Luis Solana flew to Washington Saturday to confer with Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and several congressmen, Socialist officials said.

They said the agenda for the weeklong talks would include Spain's relations with NATO. Spain is not a member of the alliance, but the United States maintains military bases on Spanish soil. The Spanish Workers' Socialist Party — full name for the second largest party in the Cortes (parliament) — says NATO should be replaced by independent, closely linked defense systems like those in France, Switzerland and Sweden.

Muniz Conviction Said Little Trouble To Party

AUSTIN (UPI) — Because many Mexican-Americans see the arrest of activist Ramsey Muniz as a political "set-up," his imprisonment has had little effect on the Raza Unida Party, the group's candidate for governor said Sunday.

Mario Compean said Muniz, who captured seven percent of the vote during one of his two campaigns for governor, was arrested on drug charges because he was seen as a threat to the state's political powers. Compean made the remark on the weekly television interview show, "Capital Eye."

Compean said the Mexican-American community was disappointed in the arrest of Muniz but it "lasted very little time."

"What has been very clear since he was convicted is that the real reason he is in prison is not because he was in illicit traffic of drugs, but rather because he was a threat to very powerful people in the state," Compean said.

"I think that has settled in pretty much as conclusion in the Mexican-American community, and therefore, his conviction has not damaged the party as much as some people thought," he said.

Compean said his own campaign for governor is being hampered by a shortage of money, mainly because he was late in organizing his campaign. Compean said he will not sponsor the "nickel and dime" type of fundraising activities that do not generate the kind of money needed to conduct a political campaign.

He said his campaign will approach voters on a much larger scale, such as direct mailings taken from voter registration lists.
