Front-line clashes mar cease-fire in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Front-line clashes and renewed bombardment of residential neighborhoods strained Lebanon's four-day-old cease-fire on Saturday, and the U.S. Embassy reported no word on kidnapped American diplomat William Buckley.

Embassy officials said they had received no claims of responsibility, ransom or other demands a day after three gunmen in civilian clothes abducted the 55-year-old Buckley in front of his home in west Beirut.

"There are no further developments," said Marine Maj. Robert McLean, 34, a spokesman for the embassy.

Police said at least 13 people were killed and 35 wounded in battles between Christian and Moslem militias along the "green line" between Christian east and Moslem west Beirut, at the city's southern outskirts and in the hills east of the capital in the 24 hours ending at sundown Saturday.

The Gaza hospital in the Palestinian refugee camp of Sabra, south of Beirut, reported seven people were killed and five were wounded when the camp and surrounding area were shelled Saturday evening. The casualties included both refugess and Lebanese residents, hospital officials said.

It was not known if those victims were included in the police account, but it was the heaviest casualty toll for a single day since the Tuesday cease-fire declared by the reconciliation conference among Lebanon's nine principal leaders in Switzerland.

The negotiators in Lausanne, Switzerland, resumed full meetings on Saturday after 48 hours of informal bargaining sessions. They are trying to work out a blueprint for power sharing that will end the civil war.

Key aides to President Amin Gemayel said the talks continued to progress positively, but the Saturday afternoon session would not be the final one.

Buckley, first secretary of the Beirut embassy's political section, was abducted Friday morning at the driveway of the 10-story apartment building in which he lives. He was forced out of his car at pistol point, then taken away in a white Renault 12.

Embassy officials said that eight hours after the abduction, they received reports the kidnap car was seen heading south through the beachside suburb of Khalde, just south of Beirut.

Khalde sits on an intersection of roads leading to the Druse-controlled Chouf Mountains southeast of the capital, the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon and Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon.

Buckley's abduction frightened several other American Embassy staffers into leaving their apartments in the Moslem half of the capital to stay at the Marine-guarded embassy compound on the seafront Ein Mreisseh Boulevard.

Christian radio stations said shells struck east Beirut's residential neighborhoods of Furn el-Shubbak, Ein Rummaneh, Sinn el-Fil, Badaro, Hazmieh and the outlying Christian suburbs of Hadath, Beit Meri, Ein Saadeh and Mansouiyeh.

It was the first time since the Tuesday cease-fire was called that residential neighborhoods were shelled.

Mondale sweeps caucuses

BY EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

Walter F. Mondale swept past Sen. Gary Hart for caucus victories in the union heartland of Michigan and the hills of Arkansas and held a decisive lead over him in Mississippi on the delegate-rich Super Saturday of the drive for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The only weak spots for Mondale in the five caucus states came when uncommitted slates carried the day in South Carolina and in Kentucky, where just a handful of counties voted Saturday. Latin American Democrats meeting in Panama City, Panama, also backed uncommitted delegates.

"It's been a good day, and I could use one," the former vice president said in Illinois.

Hart, a dark-horse candidate only three weeks ago, played down the significance of the results, particularly from Michigan, saying he was happy to get as much as he did "in a process that was stacked against us from the beginning."

And the Colorado senator said he expected a long fight for the nomination. "I never anticipated winning this nomination in March," he said.

Mondale's performance Saturday was another step on the road back from a string of early defeats by Hart. After fighting Hart to a 3-2 split in the Super Tuesday primaries, Mondale was looking for a better showing Saturday to give him momentum going into Tuesday's crucial primary in Illinois.

And he got it.

"This has been a good national win for me," he said at a campaign stop in Illinois as well. "We did well on 'Super Tuesday.' We did better tonight. We're fighting back."

Mondale was the victor in Arkansas, winning 20 national convention delegates to only nine for Hart.

He won Michigan, where strong support from the United Auto Workers and other unions were the key to his winning the lion's share of the state's 136 delegates to his column.

Returns from 377 of Michigan's 397 caucuses gave Mondale 49 percent; Hart, 34 percent; Jackson, 14 percent. The rest went to uncommitted slates.

Those Michigan results translate into 79 delegates for Mondale; 49 for Hart and eight for Jackson.

"The history of the 1984 election may well record that the final Mondale drive toward the nomination and election to the White House began here in the City of Detroit and the state of Michigan," said Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, a Mondale backer.

Hart spent only one day campaigning in Michigan, but his campaign ran radio and television ads in Michigan in the last two days, urging his supporters to turn out.

Given Mondale's advantage with union support there, Hart said, "We just had no choice but not to put a lot of effort in there."

In Mississippi, the former vice president was winning just over 30 percent of the vote, slightly ahead of the uncommitted slates in returns from 1,325 of 2,070 precinct caucuses. Twenty-eight percent backed Jackson, and 12 percent Hart.

Party officials in Mississippi stopped counting late Saturday night, saying they would resume Monday. No estimates of national convention delegates based on the incomplete returns were available.

Father kills son's kidnapper

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A karate instructor accused of kidnapping one of his students died Saturday after the student's father shot him in the head and then told deputies, "If it were your son, you would have done the same thing," officials and witnesses said.

Gary Plauche stepped from a telephone booth at Ryan Airport on Friday night and fired one shot point-blank into the head of Jeffery Paul Doucet, according to deputies and witnesses. Doucet had just arrived on a flight from Los Angeles to face trial on charges of abducting 12-year-old Jody Plauche, who was freed unharmed.

Doucet died at noon Saturday from a single gunshot wound to the head, said Joy Phillipps, a spokeswoman at New Orleans' Charity Hospital.

Plauche, who had been held on a charge of attempted second degree murder, now faces a charge of second degree murder, said Sgt. Roy Forbes of the East Baton Rouge Parish Sheriff's Department.

Plauche had been held on $100,000 bond on the attempted murder charge, but Forbes said a judge would decide now whether to release Plauche on bond in view of Doucet's death.

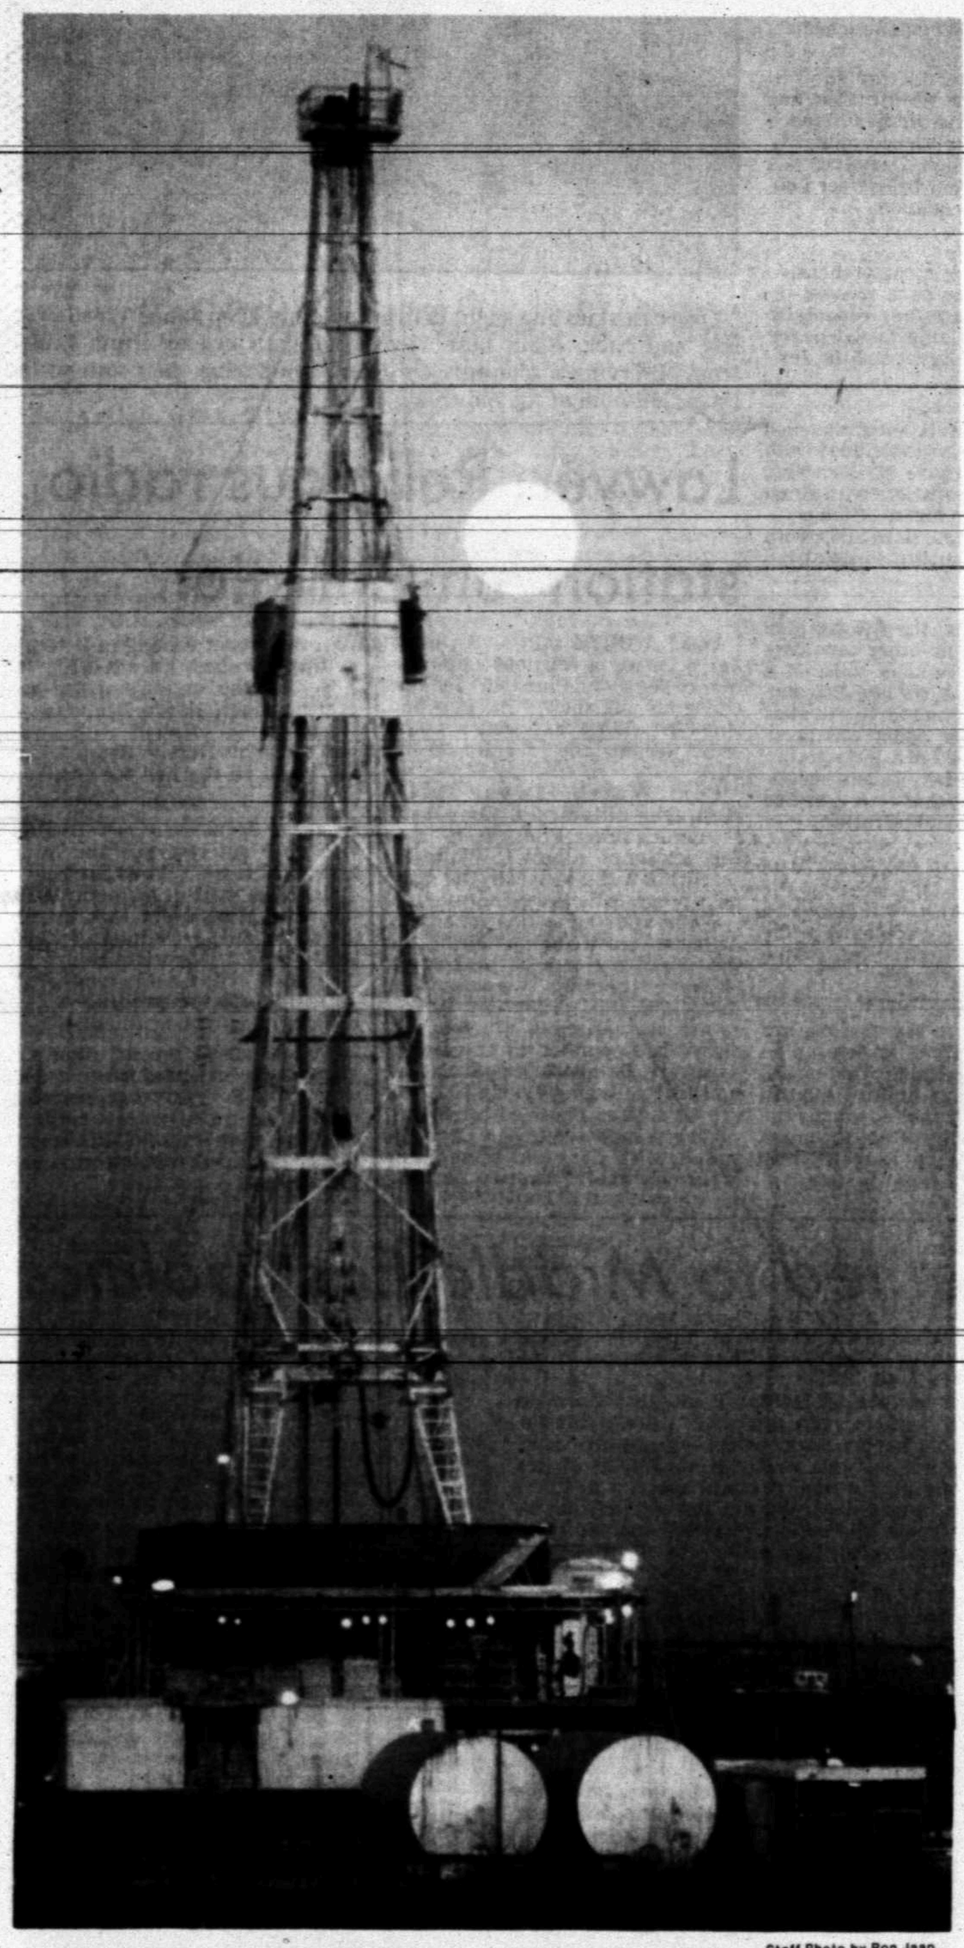

Foster Sanders, Plauche's lawyer, said in an interview with WAFB-TV that he hopes District Attorney Ossie Brown will consider the pressure on Plauche in light of his son's kidnapping.

"I'm hopeful that if all the allegations that have been made are fully investigated that perhaps there will be no charge in this matter," Sanders said.

He added: "There is no doubt that in this particular case, Mr. Plauche was driven by an overwhelming and unending concern and love of a parent for a child, having heard very serious allegations about what happened to his son while he was actually kidnapped by the alleged kidnapper. And I think as these facts become known...more people will be able to understand what drove Gary Plauche to what happened in Baton Rouge last night."

Sanders refused to elaborate on what Plauche believes happened to his son during the abduction, but described his client as "a very distraught, sick parent." Authorities said the child was released unharmed.

Last summer, Jody's mother praised Doucet for helping Jody and his younger brother become physical and academic achievers while they were members of his prize-winning karate team.

Midland's future tied to Middle East

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a three-part series examining the close relationship between Midland and the Middle East.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

In the conference room on the 11th floor of a downtown office building, the man tapped his fingers on the table and talked about his subdivision. Its development will stay on schedule, he said, barring some world calamity.

And what would that be, he was asked.

Closing off the Strait of Hormuz, he said with a half-smile.

The Middle East: Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq. It keeps slipping into casual conversation here. "The one thing we need to get Midland back on its feet again is a war in the Middle East." Some say it in jest; many are serious.

Like it or not, Midland's existence — and that of the Permian Basin — is tied to the Middle East. More so, possibly, than most other cities in the state or the country. What people do in St. Louis or Chicago or San Francisco has little effect on Midland. But when guns are fired in Iran or Iraq, Midlanders wake up and follow the development step by step.

IT ALL BOILS down to oil. It is Midland's number one industry. Population is tied to it. Retail sales are tied to it. Even the city government's budget shortfall this year is tied to it.

And Saudi Arabia controls the purse strings.

That's why when the war between Iran and Iraq heated up two weeks ago Midlanders began watching for the latest development. If the Strait of Hormuz is shut off, it means a reduction in the world oil supply, and maybe a need to begin more production here.

By the same token, though, Saudi Arabia could flood the market with oil and force Midland's economy into a downward spiral.

'Miracle baby' dies of heart failure

FORT WORTH (AP) — A man who lost his wife, 3-year-old son and a baby daughter delivered as her fatally burned mother lay dying says he "wouldn't be able to make it" if his third child hadn't survived the fire that destroyed the family's apartment.

Six-week-old Brenda Renee Smith, whose birth after the fire Jan. 30 had been described as a miracle by her doctor, died Friday of heart failure in John Peter Smith Hospital.

She had been delivered by emergency Caesarean section 12 hours before her 24-year-old mother died of her burns.

Firefighters said the mother showed no vital signs when they pulled her from the burning apartment, but oxygen-filled blood was pumped through her body as she was taken to the hospial.

The father, Vernon Smith Jr., was only able to rescue his 16-month-old daughter, Darla, from the fire.

The Forecast For 7 a.m. EST Sunday, March 18

Rain Snow Showers Flurries

●Low Temperatures

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecast for Sunday predicts rain for parts of Washington and Oregon, with snow predicted for northern Maine. Rain is also predicted for the central Gulf Coast states stretching into southern portions of Illinois and Indiana and the western portion of the Carolinas.

Weather turns sharply cooler for windy forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The unpredictability of March weather in general and West Texas weather specifically is combining to create a wild and windy forecast for the Permian Basin.

Weather today is expected to be mostly cloudy and cooler with a 20 percent chance of isolated showers and thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

And hold on to your hats — or skirts — winds should be southerly at 15 to 20 mph and then do an about-face, coming from the north at 20 to 30 mph. A high in the mid-60s is predicted.

Tonight partly cloudy skies are forecast, along with colder temperatures in the low 30s. Monday should be partly cloudy and cool with highs near 60.

An overnight low of 46 was exactly twice as warm as the record 23-degree low set this date in 1934. The 78-degree high Saturday was 13 shy of the record high of 91 in 1977.

STATE

A stationary cold front lingering across Central Texas triggered outbreaks of light rain and drizzle Saturday, and forecasters called for more precipitation through the beginning of next week.

The front, stretching from north of Austin to Texarkana, kept portions of Central Texas soggy, while the rest of the state remained mostly dry.

Cloudiness developed over most of North, East and Central Texas, but morning clouds dissipated over much of deep South Texas, and skies were sunny in western and northwestern sections.

High temperatures reached the 80s to near 90 in the lower Rio Grande Valley, while 70s and a few lower 80s prevailed over the rest of the southern half of the state south of the front, the National Weather Service said.

Readings in North Central and Northwest Texas, north of the front, hovered mostly in the 50s and 60s, the weather service said.

Winds were southerly at 10 to 20 mph across South and West Texas, and northerly at about 10 mph in North Texas.

NATION

Late winter snow fell across the northern Plains on Saturday, while freezing rain and sleet soaked parts of Illinois and Iowa.

Norfolk, Neb., received 6 inches of snow early on St. Patrick's Day, and 9 inches fell at Pickstown, S.D. In Epps, La., golf ball-sized hail was reported.

Crews in Arkansas continued cleanup efforts after tornadoes touched down in at least nine spots on Thursday, killing five people and leaving more than $15 million in damage.

Snow was scattered over northern Maine and along the lower Great Lakes and from the Dakotas across southern Minnesota.

Reagan peace plan shattered

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's already-dim hopes of advancing the Middle East peace process have been dealt a shattering blow by the decision of Jordan's King Hussein to divorce himself from Reagan's peace plan.

It was the latest of a series of developments that show American influence and ability to shape events in the region is in sharp decline.

Among them:

— The defeat for American policy in Lebanon, illustrated by the pullout of the Marine peacekeeping force and the abrogation of the U.S.-backed Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement.

— The statement by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, with Reagan at his side in a White House ceremony last month, calling on the United States to recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization and negotiate with Yasser Arafat, its chief — something Mubarak knew an embarrassed Reagan would be loathe to do.

— A chill in relations with Saudi Arabia. The Saudis wanted the United States to do more to pressure Israel to seek peace with Arabs, while Washington wanted the Saudis to do more to pressure Syria to get out of Lebanon.

— THE FACT that Reagan's special Mideast envoy, Donald Rumsfeld, has not been in the Middle East for a month and will soon return to private business in Chicago. The White House, not wanting to have its foreign policy record further blemished with a formal Rumsfeld resignation, says he will be back when he is needed.

— Iraq's use of illegal chemical weapons against Iranian troops, which compelled the State Department to issue a condemnation. Washington, which has worked to improve relations with Baghdad, was unsuccessful in its efforts to persuade the Iraqis not to use the weapons.

In some ways, however, the unkindest cut of all was Hussein's statement in a New York Times interview last week that Reagan's peace plan was "hopeless" as long as Washington sided closely with Israel.

After the failure of his policy in Lebanon, Reagan said he would henceforth focus his attention on achieving a broader Middle East peace. But without Hussein, the kind of peace agreement he envisions is impossible.

HUSSEIN SAID in remarks directed at the administration: "You obviously have made your choice and your choice is Israel and support of Israel. That being the case there is no hope of achieving anything."

He also said "there is no way by which anyone should imagine it would be possible for Arabs to sit and talk with Israel as long as things are as they are."

Only a day before, Reagan had gone before a Jewish group in Washington to urge support for a controversial plan to sell Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan and a plan to provide $220 million for a Jordanian military strike force to help put down turmoil in the Persian Gulf. Officials said it will be extremely difficult to win congressional approval now.

The timing of Hussein's remarks indicated he either did not care about the American arms or figured he could not get them anyway, at least not without strings attached.

Meantime, the decline in U.S. influence in the Middle East has been offset by a rise in the influence of Syria, which is backed militarily by the Soviet Union. Damascus has emerged as a power broker for Lebanon in the new equation.

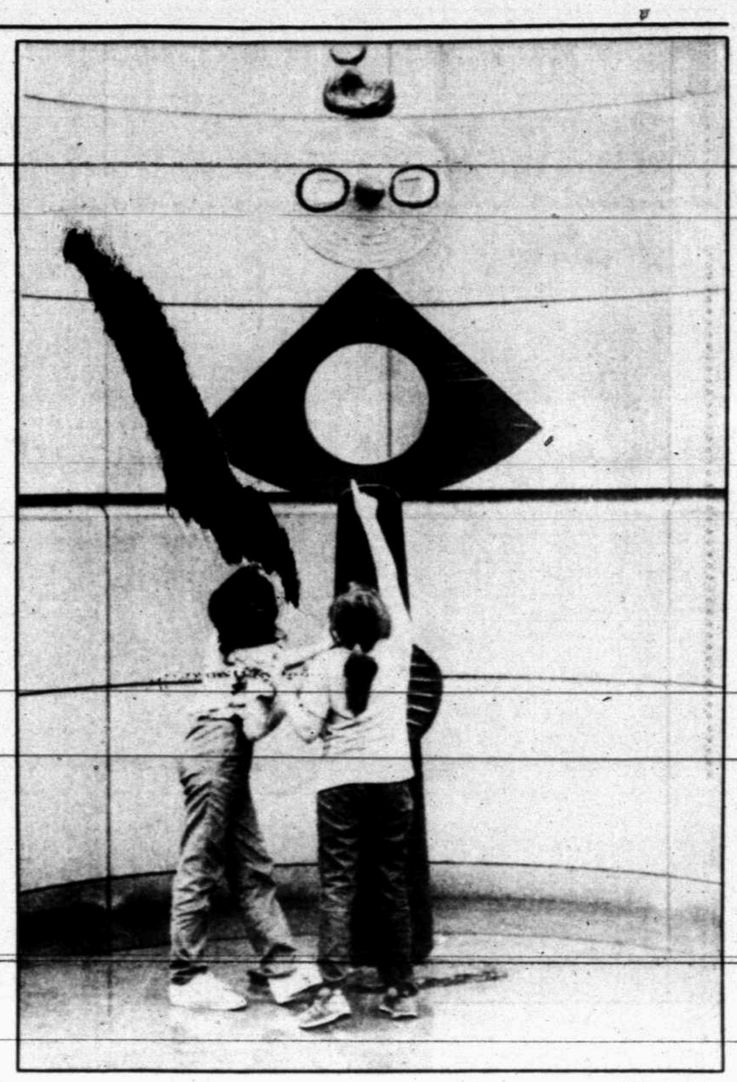

U.S. HOPES for a comprehensive Arab-Israeli peace have focused on Hussein for years, but especially since the 1978 Camp David peace accords between Egypt and the Jewish state.

The Reagan peace plan, unveiled on Sept. 1, 1982, was designed with the express purpose of attracting Hussein into negotiations with Israel and Egypt on the future of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, with Jordan representing Palestinian interests.

Without Jordan, the Reagan plan is dead because no other candidate that might be acceptable to Israel is available to speak for the Palestinians. Egypt attempted to fill that role when Anwar Sadat was president, but it lacked a Palestinian mandate and failed. Sadat's successor, Mubarak, refuses to try, saying such an effort would be futile.

Leaving things as they are — with the Israelis in firm control of the occupied territories — is fine with Israel but prolongs problems for the Palestinians and guarantees continued turmoil in the region.

While officials say the United States cannot afford to give up in the search for a Middle East peace, they acknowledge nothing significant can be accomplished during the rest of 1984 because of the upcoming election. After that, Reagan's 1982 peace plan will look pretty stale.

Lawyer: Religious radio station 'un-Christian'

FORT WORTH (AP) — An attorney accusing a religious radio station of being "un-Christian" for canceling his talk show, "The Law and the Christian," has won a court order keeping the program on the air.

Fort Worth lawyer Odell McBrayer obtained a temporary restraining order Friday from State District Judge Albert L. White Jr. forcing KWJS-FM to air the half-hour program Saturday morning.

White said the station in nearby Arlington must continue airing the show until a March 26 hearing on McBrayer's petition for a permanent injunction.

Officials with the KWJS, which is owned and operated by the Jimmy Swaggart Evangelistic Association, notified McBrayer Friday that the show was being canceled, he said.

"This is supposed to be a Christian station with Christian prineiples," McBrayer said. "There's nothing Christian about coming in here and cutting everybody's fieads off."

Neither the station's acting general manager, Hardy Brundage of Houston, nor officials with Swaggart's headquarters in Baton Rouge, La., could be reached for comment Saturday.

Calls to Brundage's answering service were not returned and Swaggart's offices were closed Saturday.

McBrayer said in his petition for the restraining order that he and the station had a contract in which he did collection work in return for the chance to do his program.

Cutting off the program was a breach of contract, he contended.

McBrayer said several other talk shows were canceled after a decision by the Swaggart organization to change the station's format to Southern gospel music. The station had been playing contemporary religious music.

Midland's future tied to Middle East politics

According to the American Petroleum Institute in Washington, D.C., almost 8 million barrels of oil travel each day by tanker through the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the Persian Gulf. While it's Japan and Western Europe who are dependent on that source for their oil, the United States would be brought into the picture if Iran or Iraq cuts off that outlet. Bringing in the U.S. means Midland and the Permian Basin, the source for 20 percent of this country's domestic crude supply.

Oil. It's not only Midland's lifeblood, responsible for 85 percent of her economy, but also her world commodity.

"We're all concerned more with what's going on there as to anywhere else in the world," said R.F. "Bob" Bailey of Alta Energy Corporation in reference to the Middle East. "It's the focal point of the world oil supply."

MIDLANDERS AS A whole are cognizant of everything in the world, according to Phillip Marcum, president of MGF Oil. "But anything that affects your livelihood would rank pretty high up there." While the Middle East probably isn't the average dinner topic in Midland, events over there fall into the list of top five areas of interest. "It may be number one with some people," he added.

"The oil industry is certainly tied to the Middle East," added E.E. Runyan with Bell Petroleum and president of AIME. "In years past, the dominant factor in determining production was the Texas Railroad Commission. Now, it's the Saudis. They're very influential in this pricing structure. The Saudis are just across the Gulf from Iran and Iraq. If anything happened there, they (Saudis) could be involved quickly."

Looking beyond the RRC production quotas, it's the Saudis who have controlled the price of oil for 40 years, according to Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

"When it was $3 a barrel, they were setting the price. It cost them 25 cents a barrel then," he recalled.

If the Strait of Hormuz is shut off, "someone will want to raise the price. I don't think it would happen right away, but possibly after they're sure that source is eliminated. If this thing gets worse, it could mean a definite increase in all areas, not just drilling but in workover, the oilfield services. And the price may start going back up."

IT WAS A worldwide shortage and price increases in 1973 and 1979, both caused by events in the Middle East, that boosted prices and lead to the boom in the Permian Basin. Two years ago, said Thompson, the price was $40 a barrel — set by the Saudis. Today, it's down to $28 to $30.

"Banks were making loans based on $100-a-barrel oil," he added.

It may sound unreasonable today, after the inflationary balloon was deflated, but back then it appeared logical. Jim Williams, professor of finance and economic forecasting at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, remembers what the trade magazines were forecasting back in 1975-76.

They would predict the next year's crude prices, and each year they had fallen below where the price actually landed. "People would feel they were being innovative loaning at current prices or at the forecast prices," Williams said. "It was predicted to be $65 a barrel by the year 2000. That was common."

The worldwide market determines crude prices, said Williams, and whatever those prices, the Permian Basin has to accept them.

IF IT GOES to $40 a barrel, it would definitely affect the Permian Basin on a positive note, according to Marcum. "If they (Saudi Arabia) say it's $20 a barrel, it unfortunately also affects us. Production is keyed to price. If the price goes up, production goes up. If the price drops, so does production.

"We're unique in that the whole economy here is built around petroleum," said Thompson. "About 85 percent is generated from the petroleum industry. People tend to overlook the fact that so much comes from petroleum."

Hazarding a guess on the outcome of the Iran-Iraq war is impossible, local oilmen agreed. Thompson noted that it has been going on for 3½ years and no resolution appears near.

Recent firing on oil tankers heightened the situation — and people's interest — while Lloyd's of London raised its insurance prices on the tankers. The world's uneasiness with recent developments were reflected about two weeks ago when the spot market shot up several dollars, Bailey noted. However, the price dropped back close to its original spot.

"The way things are now, they can change hourly over there," he said.

Thompson noted that the people in the Middle East "think differently than us. With Khomeini, he says it's a fight to defend Islam."

WHATEVER THE differences in culture, Bailey only knows that "it's extremely important that we maintain a good relationship with those people." And Runyan noted that Midlanders are no strangers to the Middle East — many have been there to visit or work.

If something happened over there, "if they did blow apart," said Thompson, he feels there are some Midlanders who would begin putting together their deals immediately. "You can't put deals together overnight. It would take two to three months before there was any direct effect."

MONDAY: Strategic Petroleum Reserves should avoid a shortage, or will they?

Judge: Baby to continue with transfusions

DALLAS (AP) — A judge has ruled that a 6-day-old premature baby will continue to receive blood transfusions, despite objections from his parents who say that violates their religious beliefs as Jehovah's Witnesses.

State District Court Judge Gary Hall on Friday extended an injunction permitting Medical City Dallas Hospital to give transfusions to Shannon Jermaine House.

The infant's physician, Dr. Rachel Griffin, said the child would die if he was not given a blood transfusion.

Ms. Griffin testified by telephone at Friday's hearing. Hall said the child's delicate condition made it impossible for the physician to be in court. She testified that the parents still did not want the transfusions, even though stopping them "may cause the child to die."

The parents, William and Jacqueline House, did not attend the hearing and refused to comment when contacted by The Associated Press.

Hall said he would conduct another hearing in two weeks and issue a permanent injunction if necessary.

Kevin Kurtz, who was appointed as the child's legal guardian, said the child was born six weeks premature.

"It is a life-threatening situation," Kurtz said. "The lungs collapsed and he had to have tubes in them. But the child's condition has stabilized."

He said the infant's parents are reluctant to talk to him.

"Their (religious) position puts my client in the position of dying," Kurtz said. "My position is that the child must receive all the medical care available, even if that conflicts with the parent's religious beliefs."

House, in a Dallas Times Herald interview Thursday, referred to a Biblical admonition "to keep abstaining from things sacrificed to idols and from blood and from things strangled and from fornication. If you carefully keep yourselves from these things, you will prosper. Good health to you."

Court documents filed by the hospital said the child, who was delivered by Caesarean section, was suffering from "severe prematurity and severe respiratory distress." The documents said the infant "probably will die if untreated."

Jim Bohanan, hospital administrator, said, "The child is critical, but stable. You can't forsee anything. But if the problem is not treated, he could have brain damage and could be fatal."

Salvadoran women at the Casa Oscar Romero help out in the kitchen while waiting for a chance to travel on and find a job.

House provides refuge for Central Americans

SAN BENITO, Texas (AP) — A fragile woman with a caramel complexion and shiny black curls studies a Greyhound bus map taped to the living room wall. Beside the map hangs a child's crayon drawing of a hut in El Salvador.

In one of two crowded bedrooms, a teen-age boy reads from the Bible to a young girl in second-hand clothes sitting on a cot.

And outside the dilapidated white house on a screened concrete porch, 20 gringo visitors in Abercrombie khakis and Addidas sneakers take notes on atrocities described by a priest.

Welcome to Casa Oscar Romero, a halfway house for Central American refugees.

Last month, the house was in the news because of the arrests of a nun, a religious worker and a reporter, who were charged with conspiracy to transport three illegal Salvadorans.

All six — Sister Dianne Muhlenkamp of Fort Wayne, Ind., layworker Stacey Merkt of Colorado Springs, Colo., Dallas Times Herald reporter Jack Fischer, and Salvadorans Mauricio Valle, Brenda Sanchez-Galan and her 18-month-old daughter, Bessie — had either lived in, worked at or were writing about the house.

The layworker and nun were indicted by a federal grand jury last Tuesday on two counts of transporting illegal aliens and one count of conspiracy to transport illegal aliens. Prosecutors said they were still investigating the reporter's involvement.

Fifteen miles north of the Rio Grande, Casa Romero is the first stop on a nationwide underground railroad, a loose-knit network of churches, organizations and individuals assisting Central American refugees.

The names derives from Salvadoran Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, who openly challenged the government and was shot through the heart while saying Mass in San Salvador in March 1980.

On the porch of Casa Romero, Father Lee DaCosta describes the experiences of the aliens he has sheltered in his church, Our Lady Queen of the Universe, to the visitors from the Wisconsin-based Border Assistance Group. He speaks of small boys fleeing their homes, of death squads and detention camps.

Jack Elder, the 40-year-old house director and former Peace Corps volunteer, has heard it all before and has more practical matters on his mind. He leaves to go change money for a house guest departing that night.

For Elder and his wife, Diane, days are filled with helping refugees, supervising house operations, speaking to groups like the Kiwanis Club on American foreign policy and dealing with an increasing number of visitors.

Casa Romero was founded by Rosemary Smith of Cincinnati, Ohio, two years after the archbishop's death, with funds from Brownsville diocese and other sources.

Before coming to southern Texas, Miss Smith taught hygiene and farming in El Salvador for 17 years.

She left when two co-workers were murdered. She established Casa Romero as a temporary home for Salvadoran and Guatemalan refugees released from a nearby federal detention facility, known locally as El Corralon — the corral.

The detention camp is always overflowing. And officials admit the house is operating in a legal gray area, although no agency has yet initiated overt action against the house.

Hal Boldin, the Immigration and Naturalization Service district director who oversees the detention camp, said he was following agency guidelines in dealing with Casa Romero and, anyway, the INS had its hands full with routine border patrol.

Regardless of legal status, about 800 refugees have called Casa Romero temporary home since it opened 15 months ago.

"What we're doing is insignificant in terms of actually assisting refugees," said Elder, who works for Miss Smith for $110 a month plus housing and board. "But Casa Romero is more than just a house, it's a kind of symbol, a place where people who are concerned about refugees can come to contribute and see what's going on.

"It's important in that respect. But I never lose sight of the fact that we're really doing very little to help refugees, considering the magnitude of the problem."

Although no precise count exists, estimates from the INS and the United Nations place the Central American population in the United States at 500,000, with 200,000 in Los Angeles, 100,000 in Houston, 80,000 in Washington and large concentrations in San Francisco, Chicago and New York.

They are mostly Salvadorans fleeing the turmoil created by the war between guerillas and the government.

If the estimates are correct, the United States now shelters about 10 percent of El Salvador's total population.

Brothers to be questioned about slaying of minister

PALO PINTO(AP) — Investigators said they would travel to Phoenix, Ariz., Sunday to question two jailed brothers about the slaying last month of a Methodist minister in Texas.

Maricopa County Jail authorities said the two brothers were being held without bond as fugitives from justice. The brothers bragged about the slaying to an undercover police officer after their arrest Friday in Phoenix, said Palo Pinto County sheriff's investigator Joe Bishop.

Bishop said the two are suspects in the slaying of the Rev. John H. Basham, 55, of Dublin. Basham's body was found Feb. 9 in a van along Interstate 20 south of Gordon, about 35 miles north of Dublin and 70 miles west of Fort Worth.

Basham was reported missing by his family on Feb. 8 after he failed to show up at a ministerial conference in Dallas. He was to have accepted an award the previous day as the outstanding Methodist minister in his district.

Officials at the Maricopa County Jail said the two brothers were being held on local theft charges, but no charges in connection with Basham's death had been filed against them Saturday.

Bishop said he and Texas Ranger Billy Peterson planned to question the men Sunday in Phoenix.

Palo Pinto County Justice of the Peace Adron Nicks said capital murder warrants were issued here about 12:05 a.m. Friday, less than three hours after the men were arrested at a motel in downtown Phoenix in connection with the attempted sale of a stolen car.

A Maricopa County Jail information supervisor said a March 22 court date has been set for the pair in Phoenix concerning the capital murder warrants, but declined further comment.

Phoenix police Sgt. Brad Thiss said the brothers divulged details of the slaying to police while being investigated for numerous car thefts in the Phoenix area.

Bishop said one of the brothers, 25, gave his address as Boston. The other, 23, gave a Huntington, W. Va. address.

Bishop said that he was told that Basham met the brothers in a Dallas bar on Feb. 6 and that all three went for a ride in Basham's van, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

"I don't know what he was doing in the bar," Bishop said.

Bishop said the brothers, both in their 20s, apparently "set out to rob" Basham.

Sewage problem closes course

AUSTIN (AP) — City officials have closed a public golf course here so they can dump more treated wastewater on it.

Routinely, the Jimmy Clay Golf Course in Southeast Austin is irrigated with a daily flow of 1.2 million gallons of treated effluent from the Williamson Creek treatment plant. Because the overburdened plant's holding ponds are at capacity, the city will increase the release onto the golf course.

"We're closing down for awhile," said Leonard Ehrler, city parks director.

The closing will allow the city to increase the effluent flow to the 190-acre course, he said.

"We can only put so much water on and have it playable the next day," Ehrler added.

The course is used by up to 300 golfers a day. Austin has three other municipal courses.

A state district judge has stopped Austin from adding water and sewer customers to the Williamson Creek plant, which serves one of the city's rapidly growing areas.

Drifter summoned as trial witness

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Ottis Toole was jailed in Texas following his transfer from Florida and attorneys said the drifter would be called as a defense witness in the capital murder trial of Henry Lee Lucas, his former traveling companion.

The announcement came Friday as a seventh juror was selected for Lucas' trial on charges that he killed an unidentified woman whose nearly nude body was found Oct. 31, 1979, in a culvert north of Georgetown.

Lucas, who has claimed responsibility for killing scores of women, faces a possible death penalty if convicted. His trial was moved here because of publicity in Georgetown.

Toole was transferred Thursday evening to the Williamson County Jail in Georgetown from Jacksonville, Fla., said Don Higginbotham, Lucas' defense attorney.

Toole, who has been identified by Lucas as his partner in some of the slayings, has been subpoenaed by the defense to testify in Lucas' trial. Higginbotham said Friday he did not know when Toole would be transferred to San Angelo.

ON CHECKING OLDER PLUMBING

Houses built since World War II are more or less modern. You can pretty much count on copper plumbing. Houses older than 40 years old require extra-careful inspection of the plumbing system.

Why is plumbing such an important consideration? Faulty plumbing is more expensive to remedy than inadequate wiring. You hope to find all the old galvanized pipes replaced with copper ones. Galvanized pipes suffer from corrosion. They eventually develop "hardening of the arteries." Deposits narrow the inside until flow is impeded. You don't want to see a patch job where a single emergency was solved by putting a length of copper pipe into old, galvanized tubing. Such a joint signals a serious chemical reaction ahead. Eventually, someone will have to rip out the whole line and replace it with copper. That someone might be you.

If the house has a modernized kitchen and baths, it's likely that the whole plumbing system was updated at the time they were installed. If you're in doubt, check it out.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.
New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss
No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special) An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire.".

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

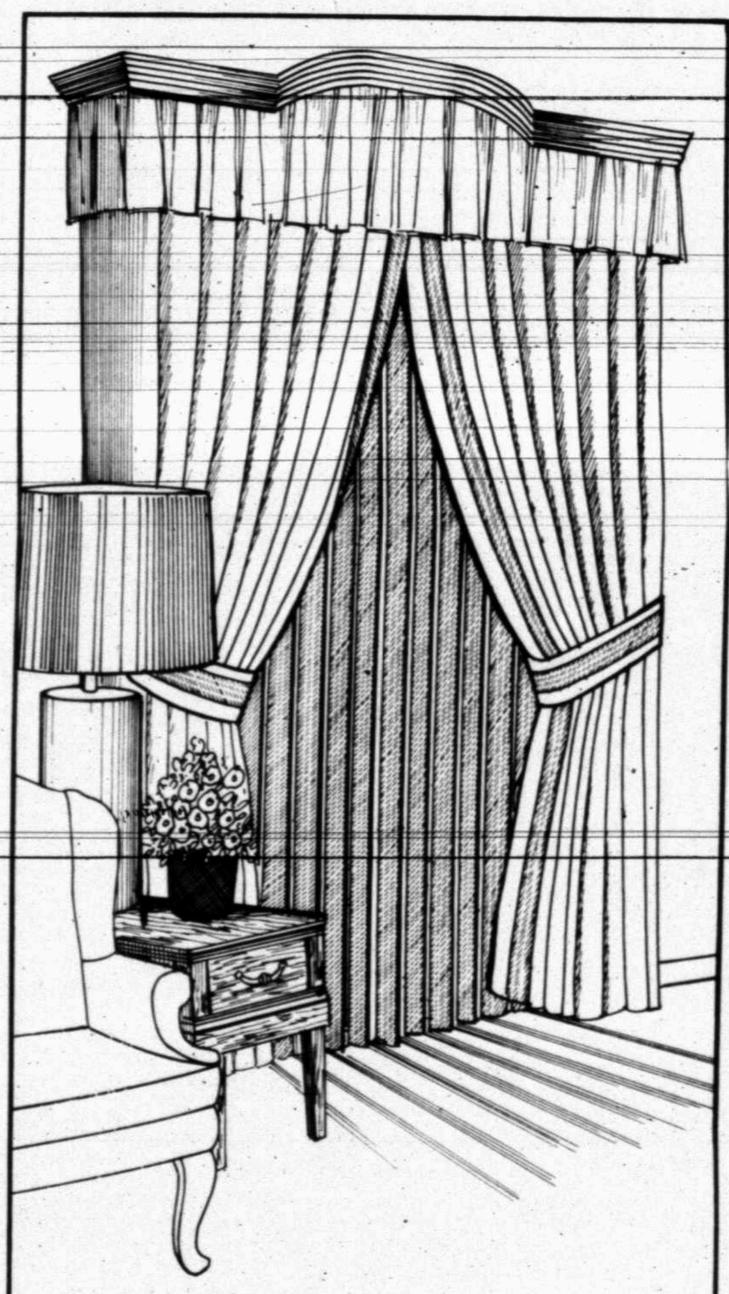

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. Rushmore creator's son says work not finished

LA FERIA, Texas (AP) — Lincoln Borglum says Mount Rushmore will be a great monument when it's finished.

Guidebooks may say the monument in the Black Hills of South Dakota is already one of America's wonders, but Borglum calls it a work-in-progress and he should know.

Borglum worked on the mountain for a decade under the direction of his father, Gutzon Borglum, who designed and supervised construction of Mount Rushmore. Gutzon Borglum died in 1941 and his son took over, working until funds ran out.

Forty-three years later, at age 72, Borglum still hopes to return to the mountain and complete his father's dream.

"We took everything down off the mountain and packed the drills and such in grease, thinking we'd be back," Borglum says. "But then the war started and there wasn't any money to do the rest of the work."

Gutzon Borglum's plan called for a great Hall of History behind the 60-foot-high, granite faces of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt. Panels in the hall were to identify the carved faces, explain how and why they are there and provide a little bit of the history of the United States of America.

From the time work began in 1927 until he died, Gutzon Borglum raised $250,000 for the project from federal and private sources, finding funds even during the Depression. Lincoln Borglum says he expected to raise more money, too, and drilled a 90-foot-deep cave in anticipation of completing the hall.

But when World War II began, money went to artillery, not art.

"So now there's nothing up there," Borglum says. "But if we don't finish it, someday Mount Rushmore will be a mystery like the heads on Easter Island, which we don't know anything about.

Gutzon Borglum knew from the start he was creating a work for the ages. He carved the faces from granite, which erodes from natural forces at about one inch per 100,000 years.

"But we didn't think of the atom bomb in those days," Borglum says.

He thinks of it now.

And Borglum says the Hall of History could be more than a celebration of the past. It could be a well-marked toolshed for building a future.

"I think the Hall of History should be finished as a hall of records where we put some of our better inventions to help future civilizations rebuild should ours be lost," Borglum says.

America has buried time capsules "all over but they don't know where many of them are. Assuming that everything else is gone, this landmark could stand as a beacon" marking the location of a new beginning.

To help Borglum finish Mount Rushmore, a non-profit organization has been set up in Harlingen to raise funds for the hall — the Mount Rushmore Archives Foundation.

Texas may seem a peculiar place to try to raise money for a monument located in South Dakota.But Borglum says his father did some of his finest work at his studio in San Antonio. In fact, the first model for Mount Rushmore was built there.

Fencing operation crushed

AUSTIN (AP) - Authorities say they recovered up to $1 million worth of stolen goods, ranging from oil field equipment to silverware from what they say is one of the largest theft and fencing operations ever broken up in the state.

Four people were arrested and charged Friday with one count each of felony theft: Kenneth Gail Murchison, 51; his sons Kenneth Dewayne Murchison, 19, and Darrell Lee Murchison, 17; Barbara Lee Kunze, 28, identified as a friend of the elder Murchison.

Justice of the Peace Guy Herman, who accepted the charges, said the elder Murchison also was charged with one count of possession of methamphetamines. Herman said he set bail at $10,000 for Ms. Kunze and the younger Murchisons, and at $25,000 for the elder Murchison.

"This was the largest operation of this sort broken up in Texas in the last few years," said Travis County sheriff's department spokesman Curtis Weeks.

Weeks said the four were arrested at a residence on Old Bee Cave Road in Austin, where the stolen goods were found.

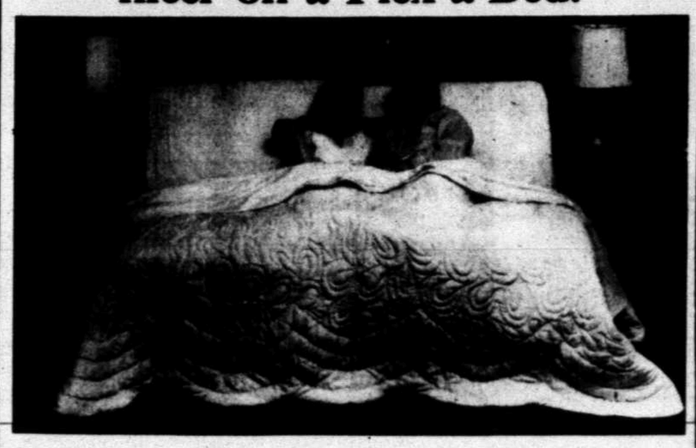

Weeks said "everything you can name" was discovered at the mobile home site in the 6 a.m. raid, including a tractor-trailer rig, half a dozen flat-bed trucks, 91 guns, stereo equipment, appliances, oilfield and construction equipment, tools and silver.

Two defendants convicted in Big Dan's rape trial

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — Two men were convicted Saturday of gang raping a young woman on a barroom pool table while onlookers joked and cheered.

Cries and screams from the defendants' relatives echoed through the century-old courtroom after the verdict, and one man was dragged away by court officers.

Daniel Silva, 27, and Joseph Vieira, 28, were convicted of aggravated rape, which could bring a life sentence and possible deportation for the Portuguese immigrants.

The eight-man, four-woman jury reached the verdict after 5½ hours of deliberation following a 16-day trial in a case that became a focal point for women's rights advocates.

The two are among six men charged in the March 6, 1983, gang rape of a 22-year-old woman in a New Bedford bar. Four other men are defendants in a separate trial that is expected to go to the jury next week.

The defendants heard the verdict read over headphones by a translator. They showed no emotion.

Spectators, including family and friends of the defendants, cried softly as Superior Court William Young revoked bail and the defendants were led off in handcuffs. After the defendants left, spectators began screaming and sobbing, and a man jumped to his feet and was carried off.

Attorney Edward Harrington, a former New Bedford mayor who defended Silva, said, "I'm depressed and very concerned. That's all I have to say right now."

Outside the court, angry clusters of people who appeared to be from the large local Portuguese community, complained that the men did not receive a fair trial.

"They were treated like dogs, and they should have been treated like human beings," said one man.

After 90 minutes of deliberation in the locked, third-floor room of a century-old courthouse, the jurors returned briefly to the judge if a model of the barroom could be moved into the jury room.

The jury also asked to see transcripts of the lengthy testimony. Young agreed to the first request but turned down the second.

The case has been in the national spotlight for over a year since police reported the woman was raped and sexually abused while others in Big Dan's tavern cheered them on.

The notion of a crowd of men cheering as a woman lay pinned to the table provoked an outcry among women's rights advocates.

Consultant gives advice to candidates

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Mondale has to stop playing America's folksy uncle. Gary Hart has to show the beef. And John Glenn should have made fewer speeches.

These opinions come from Bob Squier, a Washington-based media consultant and proven political kingmaker with a strong preference for Democrats.

He worked on Jimmy Carter's presidential campaign in 1976, Hart's Senate victory in Colorado in 1980, and he helped mold the image of former Gov. John Y. Brown of Kentucky by sending the millionaire businessman into a coal mine for a TV ad.

His current clients include Rep. Albert Gore of Tennessee, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, and Rep. Paul Simon of Illinois. Gore and Simon are running for the Senate.

Squier's advice comes too late for Glenn, who withdrew from the presidential campaign Friday, but he said the senator from Ohio "was one man who could have run as a Washington insider."

This runs contrary to the successful strategies of Carter in 1976 and Ronald Reagan four years later. The both found home in the White House by attacking everything else in Washington.

"Glenn was an authentic American hero who was a great celebrity," Squier said in an interview last week. "Having been an astronaut was something people liked. He had a good platform from which to start.

"I would have taken all that for granted, and focused entirely on his senatorial career. He needed to do a dull, documentary sort of TV film, making relevant his whole period in the Senate: John Glenn, the senator, from inside his Senate office," Squier said.

Glenn did attempt to emphasize his experience as a businessman and senator early in the campaign and switched to drawing on the hero-astronaut image only in the final stages when nothing else seemed to be working.

How would Squier have finessed Glenn's apparent discomfort in public gatherings?

"I would have limited his exposure," Squier said. "I would have put him in question-and-answer sessions where he could come across better. He's not the kind of man who makes good public speeches."

Squier, a documentary filmmaker, said Mondale's problem is that his public persona does not accurately reflect the private man.

"He reminds me a lot of (President Lyndon) Johnson," said Squier. "Johnson was powerfully persuasive one-on-one, in his office. On TV, he played the part of Uncle Lyndon, president.

"Mondale tries for the same folksy image. He talks differently in public than in private. Listen to how he drops his 'G's' at the end of words: 'I'm goin' up to Michigan, and I'll be droppin' in on the people.'"

Squier said Mondale must improve his TV image, a criticism also made this week by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., a Mondale suporter.

"He always wants people to like him, so even when he says something serious, he punctuates it with a grin," Squier said. "It's not a natural smile, it's a grimace, and it telegraphs nervousness.

"He has a hard time being natural, and the trick of appearing on TV is being natural. He needs to relax and be himself. He's not quite in synch with himself and his times."

This lack of ease plays into Hart's theme that he and Mondale are from different generations, said Squier.

"Hart's more natural in public, but he's afraid of his sense of humor," the media expert said. "He's probably afraid to let go, or else he might seem too silly or too casual."

Because of the bang-bang nature of the campaigning for Super Tuesday, March 13, the short stops at airports were not the best forums for expounding on Hart's "new ideas." Squier said it was amusing when Hart inserted his book between two buns and said, "There's the beef," but it didn't tell voters enough.

"Hart has to tell stories that illustrate his abstractions, his 'new ideas,'" said Squier. "He's given voters the container for the ideas, now he has to talk about them."

Squier suggested that Hart go to places that can demonstrate his commitment, a senior citizens' home, for example, to show the residents that they, too, are part of his new ideas for the future. He could tell them: "You're first in line," Squier said.

USAF commander, crewman arrested

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — An Air Force intercontinental-missile crew commander and a crewman were arrested on suspicion of burglary Saturday by police responding to a silent alarm at a business.

Capt. Dennis Reimer, 30, and Airman Michael A. Roa, 21, were booked into Pima County Jail on suspicion of burglary, criminal damage and resisting arrest, police said.

Both men are stationed at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, and Reimer is a crew commander at one of the few remaining active Titan 2 sites around the city, said Capt. Neil Talbott, a spokesman for the base.

Talbott said both have been suspended from duties at the base while the Air Force investigates. He said that step was routine in such cases.

As crew commander, Reimer was in charge of a four-person crew at the intercontinental ballistic missile launch site, Talbott said.

Campaign: From promise to disaster

John Glenn

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Glenn might have been thinking of his dream of the presidency when he looked out the window of his chartered campaign airplane last January at his home town below.

"Center of the universe, New Concord, Ohio," he said. "You can start from there and go anywhere."

By the time he went for the White House, Glenn seemingly had fulfilled enough dreams for more than one man's lifetime. He was a war hero, the first American to orbit the earth, a millionaire businessman, a U.S. senator.

But his White House candidacy was the exception, an effort that started out with great promise, and drifted slowly from disappointment to disaster.

It ended Friday, when Glenn told news conferences in Washington and Columbus, Ohio, that he was "reluctantly" quitting.

As the Democratic campaign unfolded last winter, it seemed like it would end up a two-man race: Walter F. Mondale and John Glenn.

Glenn said his campaign was an appeal to the "sensible center" made up of both Democrats and Republicans. He scorned "radicals of either the left or the right," and he attacked Mondale sharply as the candidate of the "bosses of big labor."

THE MONDALE camp later said the attacks did their work on their man, but they didn't help Glenn at all. Another senator, Gary Hart, picked up some of the same anti-Mondale themes, and combining it with his "new ideas, fresh start" slogan, reaped the benefit.

"I would like nothing better than to stay in the race, compete in all the caucuses, compete in every single primary, and win the nomination of my party," the 62-year-old Glenn said on Friday.

"But over the past few weeks it has become clear that in 1984 none of those things are likely to happen."

By then he had run through a string of dismal elections, run up debts of more than $2 million and become a virtual also-ran in what had effectively become a competition between Mondale and Hart.

It was a swift demise for the contender that Mondale aides once feared would give them the toughest competition for the Democratic nomination, and a man who public opinion polls indicated could defeat President Reagan, as well.

His natural appeal was unmistakeable, and his campaign was still young when a new movie, "The Right Stuff" was glorifying his flight and the early days of the U.S. space program.

IN MASON CITY, Iowa, a woman waited until almost everyone else had shaken his hand before she showed him a poem she had written 22 years ago. It was a tribute to the space flight he made.

In New Hampshire, he signed a yellowing newspaper clipping that a woman showed him from the day after the space flight.

But if Glenn himself is an authentic American hero, his critics said he was a poor politician, and his campaign struggled almost from the start.

His critics complained about his speaking style so much that Glenn began to joke about it himself.

"I admit to being dull," he said. "But I'm not boring."

His aides said he had trouble forcing himself to make the hundreds of telephone calls that are essential to a nationwide campaign.

His campaign went through one shake-up last fall, when field organizer Joseph Grandmaison quit.

THERE WAS another shake-up a few months later, when long-time aide William White was removed as campaign manager.

Glenn installed a new top command of well respected political operatives, but some of them ridiculed the candidate in private conversations with reporters, and they sometimes seemed more concerned about their own careers than about his. "How do you think we look," one of them said after Glenn finished poorly in the Iowa caucuses.

Glenn portrayed himself from the start as a representative of old-fashioned American values. "All Americans share the simple values we learned in this small town — the values of excellence, honesty, fairness, compassion for those who have less, and confidence in the future," he said when he announced his candidacy on April 21, 1983.

But his private polling indicated that Mondale would defeat him easily in the early primary and caucus states unless he could somehow redefine the Democratic party.

He finished fifth in Iowa, the state where he needed to finish second to maintain his status as Mondale's chief foe.

In a last-hour attempt to salvage his campaign, he began to talk about his heroic past, something that his aides and his polls told him earlier to ignore because while it impressed the voters, it didn't persuade them he was qualified to be president.

"The right stuff. You better believe it," the announcer said in the advertisements he ran in the Deep South.

"I know it was my life on the line then," he said at one stop in New Hampshire as he discussed his space flight. "It wasn't just a political reputation

State employee ordered to prison

ATLANTA (AP) — State employee Nancy Brown was ordered Saturday to spend a year in prison for conspiring to defraud Georgia by taking Caribbean pleasure trips with a state official while on public time.

The Georgia Labor Department worker also was fined $2,000 and placed on probation for four years. Judge John Langford said those who violate public trust commit the "most serious kinds of crime."

Mrs. Brown was accused of conspiring with Labor Commissioner Sam Caldwell to make it appear she was on her job when she was with him on trips to the Bahamas and Florida. He faces trial April 3.

Ocean fish, plants contain toxicity

OCEANSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Fish and plants taken from the bottom of Oceanside Harbor contained toxic copper residues in amounts more than 10 times greater than levels that cause alarm, officials said.

Concentrations of the residue from an illegally used weed killer were as high as 350 parts per million in some of the 27 samples taken after a state game warden noticed an absence of marine life.

"This is more serious than we thought," Rod Shackelford of the state Fish and Game Department said Friday.

Sampling began when wardens learned harbor officials had dumped copper sulfate crystals near docks to control algae. Two harbor officials face misdemeanor charges.

Salt mine may have set record

RETSOF, N.Y. (AP) — The biggest deep salt mine in the Western Hemisphere has hauled up its 100 millionth ton, and experts say its production may well be a world record.

The International Salt Co. mine is 100 years old this year, and hit the 100 million-ton mark on Feb. 29.

The total production of salt at the western New York mine likely is a world record, said Lincoln Harner at the Salt Institute in Alexandria, Va., and Dennis Kostick of the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

Homosexual policy approved

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A policy barring discrimination against homosexual students and employees at the University of Michigan has received final approval.

At a meeting Friday of the school's Board of Regents, a move died to block the policy, which was issued last week by University President Harold Shapiro at the request of campus homosexual rights groups.

"... Educational and employment decisions should be based on individuals' abilities and qualifications," not "irrelevant factors" such as sexual orientation, a university statement said.

Seventeen firefighters injured

NEW YORK (AP) — Seventeen firefighters were injured Saturday, one of them hospitalized, after entering a Staten Island building that was "pouring" smoke which turned out to be tear gas, authorities said.

The firefighters, responding to a report of a fire, suffered eye and throat irritation from a tear gas grenade, said Fireman Charles Farrell. A witness told fire officials a van pulled in front of the unoccupied building and the occupants tossed something inside at about 12:20 a.m. Minutes later, a fire alarm was pulled.

Farrell said the building had "smoke pouring from it." Firefighters entered but were quickly overcome by the gas, he said. The grenade did not start a fire.

Giant stove gets ready to heat up

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — A nine-story, $66 million wood stove — believed to be the largest wood-fired generator in the nation — was dedicated Saturday, almost ready to start gobbling up 1,200 tons of wood chips a day and turning out electricity.

As proud officials cut the ribbon, the light-blue McNeil Generating Station glistened in the winter sun, with mountains of snow-covered wood chips and a 260-foot smokestack outside.

After workers inside finish putting last coats of paint on equipment and tighten bolts, utility officials hope to start churning out electricity in three to four weeks.

The silver boiler, which stands 7½ stories, is suspended from the ceiling by beams to allow for expansion when it heats up. The temperature inside the boiler will reach 2,100 degrees when operating at full power to produce 50 megawatts.

Although the plant will have a staff of more than 40, it can be run by five people if necessary. One sits in the control room, watching the lights, buttons and switches that watch the plant and using a computer screen to give commands.

"We know we're the largest in this country and we've never heard of another plant like it anywhere else," said Tim Cronin, spokesman for the Burlington Electric Department.

Supporters have said the plant, first conceived 10 years ago, is the perfect replacement to the city's aging petroleum-fired generating plant. They said there were too many questions marks surrounding alternatives like expensive oil, pollution-producing coal and controversial nuclear energy.

Local critics were dubious about setting aside 40 city acres for the project and committing the city's municipal electric department to the idea. They were also worried about noise and pollution.

Statewide, environmentalists wondered where all the wood would come from.

"For any power company, burning wood to make electricity is new and unique," said Robert Young, general manager of the department. "But I've never had any misgivings, considering the alternatives."

The chips are loaded on a conveyor belt and dropped into a giant boiler, heating water to create the steam that will activate a turbine and create the electricity.

The plant was completed at $20 million below original estimates, but it will still take a while for the city to finish paying the bill. Consumers have already seen rate increases of more than 15 percent a year to pay for it and the department is asking for a 19.7 percent rate hike this year.

Tuxedo first worn in 1886

Griswold Lorillard, a member of the Tuxedo Club of New York City, wore a tail-less dress coat the evening of Oct. 10, 1886, shocking many club members. But the "tuxedo" eventually became more common than the tailcoat.

Once-troubled neighborhoods calm

MIAMI (AP) — Police barricades around troubled black communities were removed Saturday and merchants promised to rebuild following two nights of violence sparked by the acquittal of a policeman in the fatal shooting of a young black man.

"We're just in a watchful alert state," Miami police spokesman Ray Lang said.

Isolated burglaries were reported early Saturday. Riot-trained police squads were told to be ready for another night of duty just in case violence flared again.

But police said they expected the city to remain calm.

"We're not anticipating any problems," said John Jones, a spokesman for the countywide Metro-Dade Police Department.

Police cars on the fringes of black neighborhoods and boarded-up businesses were the only reminders Saturday afternoon of the violence that rocked three black neighborhoods after Miami police Officer Luis Alvarez was acquitted of manslaughter in the death of a 20-year-old county messenger.

The fatal shooting of Nevell Johnson Jr. in December 1982 at a slum video arcade sparked three days of racial violence in the predominantly black Overtown neighborhood where Johnson lived. Alvarez said Johnson was reaching for a concealed pistol when he shot him.

City and county police arrested some 370 people on various misdemeanor and felony charges after Alvarez's acquittal.

Authorities reported that 37 people — including seven police officers — were injured. Two of the injured officers were wounded by glass shattered when a bullet crashed into their patrol car.

More than 20 businesses were ransacked and 14 fires started in the violence that followed Alvarez's acquittal.

Merchants promised to rebuild stores looted by youths who poured into the streets to protest the verdict by an all-white jury.

At the Family Meat Market in Liberty City, Robert Labaut walked through the littered, pillaged store to survey damage done by 50 youths who carted away $90,000 in frozen meat Thursday night.

"We'll try to reopen in a little while; it's up to the insurance company when," said Labaut, whose uncle Rafael Torres owns the store.

The store and another Liberty City meat market owned by Labaut's uncle also were looted during race riots that flared in May 1980. Those Liberty City riots, which left 18 dead and $100 million in damage, were sparked by the acquittal of four white former police officers in the beating death of a black insurance salesman.

A few blocks away, black businessman Willie Gaither said he would reopen his looted Star Service Station in Liberty City.

"This really hurts me," said Gaither, district manager of the service station which also was looted during racial violence in 1982. "I didn't think it would happen again."

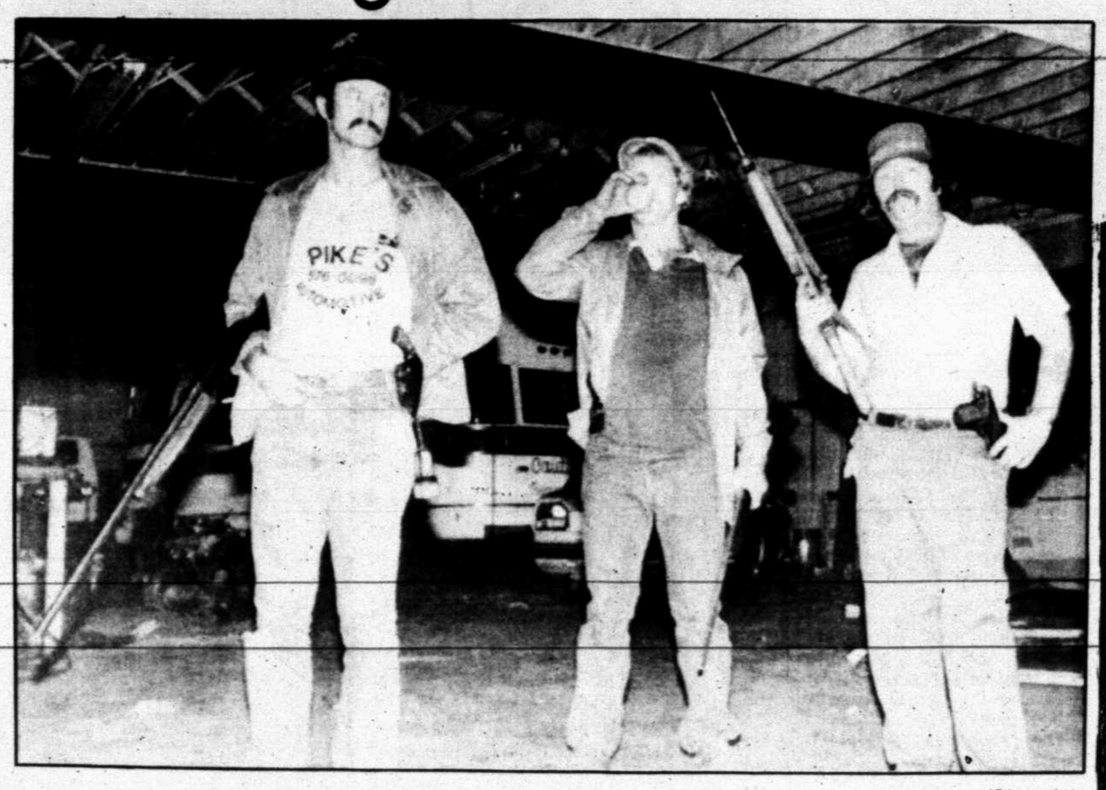

Miami police kept patrol cars on the fringe areas of Overtown and a predominantly black section of Coconut Grove, but Saturday resumed answering routine police calls in the troubled areas, Lang said.

During the height of violence, police refused to answer routine calls in troubled areas because of fears they could be traps, he said.

Sniper fire rang out at a sprawling apartment a mile north of Liberty City late Friday, but no one was injured. The shots were apparently aimed at police, said Metro-Dade police Sgt. Larry Scheer.

Police surrounded the buildings and conducted a room-by-room search that led to the arrests of five men on charges ranging from disorderly conduct to throwing a "deadly missile."

No weapons were found, but 40 rounds of ammunition were confiscated, said Sgt. Steve Sessler.

Employees of Pike's Automotive shop in the Overtown section of Miami, Fla., are well armed as they prepare to guard their property Friday night on the second day of civil unrest in the Miami area. The unrest resulted when Police officer Luis Alvarez was found not guilty in the manslaughter charge against him.

IMF director blasts deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the International Monetary Fund is warning that huge budget deficits in the major industrial countries threaten any prolonged economic recovery.

Jacques de Larosiere said Friday night that recovery can "only be built on an expansion of productive investment," and he added: "There may be a number of obstacles to this."

The most serious obstacle, he said, "is to be found in the excessive budget deficits in some major countries, which are absorbing too great a share of domestic saving, and thus, threaten to crowd-out private investors from financial markets."

Town shows some progress amid violence

MIAMI (AP) — The trouble with Overtown, many residents say, is that inescapable view of downtown Miami's gleaming skyline. The panoramic vista is a billboard of progress, a reminder of what is missing only a few blocks away.

But beyond the scars of two days of sporadic violence are small signs that life has improved in the 14 months since the community first erupted.

A new neighborhood center. A boxing team for youngsters, organized by a police officer. Officers patrolling the area on horseback, hoping to get to know the community better.

And amid the decaying tenements and looted storefronts, across from the video arcade where the neighborhood's troubles flared in 1982, there is a new shopping center — as yet unopened.

On Dec. 28, 1982, Alvarez, a Hispanic, shot and fatally wounded Nevell Johnson, a black man, in the video arcade. That touched off three days of violence that left one other black man dead, dozens of residents, passers-by and police officers injured and millions of dollars of property damaged.

Last week an all-white jury acquitted Alvarez of manslaughter. People feared a blowup much worse than what occurred. However, authorities have arrested more than 300 people and 37 have been injured in two days of sporadic looting and violence that did spring up from Overtown to Liberty City and Coconut Grove.

What has changed in the past 14 months in Overtown?

"Nothing's changed a bit," said Yolanda Johnson, 15, as she watched police officers carrying shields and rifles in her neighborhood Friday.

Iron bars over the door had been pulled down by the force of a mob early Friday. Looters then cleaned out the place, crushing carrots, broccoli and lettuce underfoot in their haste to escape.

More than 45,000 people once lived in Overtown, a 192-square-block section in the shadow of downtown Miami. But criss-crossing expressways lanced the community, and the land acquisition for that 1960s project displaced thousands.

Now Overtown has about 16,000 residents, and an unemployment rate estimated in one study last year at 42 percent. The average family income in Overtown is $9,000; Dade County's average is $23,846.

Lebanese rivals try to draft power-sharing proposal

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Leaders of Lebanon's rival factions gathered Saturday after 48 hours of informal bargaining sessions to begin crucial deliberations on a draft power-sharing proposal for national unity.

The closed-door meeting was delayed for seven hours to give Syrian and Saudi Arabian mediators more time to narrow the gaps between pro-and anti-government delegations.

Key aides to President Amin Gemayel said the talks continued to progress, but said the Saturday afternoon session would not be the final one.

As the negotiators met, their followers in Beirut clashed in the heaviest fighting since a cease-fire was imposed on Tuesday. Police said at least 13 people were killed and 35 wounded in the battles.

Several conference sources said the Lausanne negotiators remained divided over the extent to which the distribution of key government posts would be divorced from religion.

Moslems and Druse, believed to be a majority of Lebanon's 3 million people, are fighting the current system that reserves most political power for Christians.

Sources close to various delegates said agreement had been reached on several principal issues, including an equal Moslem-Christian representation in Parliament, instead of the previous 6-5 ratio in favor of Christians that has been maintained since Lebanon's independence from France in 1943.

One Gemayel aide, who spoke on condition his name be withheld, said "the private talks have proved to be much more important than plenary sessions.

"The Syrian and Saudi mediators have really been working day and night and I think their efforts will prove successful soon," he said.

American marshall leads St. Pat's parade in Dublin

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — A shamrock-bedecked crowd of 250,000 lined the streets of Dublin on Saturday for the annual St. Patrick's Day parade, led by an American grand marshal for the first time.

Some 5,000 Irish-Americans joined in the festivities honoring Ireland's patron saint, a shepherd and missionary who brought Christianity to the Emerald Isle more than 1,500 years ago.

Afterwards much of the crowd followed a well-respected tradition by repairing to the city's taverns to "drown the shamrock."

Vacation group organizer Robert Flynn of Washington, D.C., led the parade through streets emblazoned with flags and shamrocks, wearing a white sash saying "Grand Marshal."

"I regard it as a very great honor to be the first American to lead a St. Patrick's day parade in Dublin," said Flynn, dressed in a blue suit and bowler hat.

Flynn is full-time president of Club Americana and has organized trips to the Dublin parade since 1969. The Irish Tourist Board, which organizes the parade, gave him the title of grand marshal.

The procession of floats, dancers and marching bands took almost two hours to pass the reviewing stand.

Tass: Reagan spreading 'absurd' allegations about Jews' treatment

MOSCOW (AP) — The official news agency Tass on Saturday accused President Reagan of spreading "absurd and provocative allegations" about the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

The charges came in a commentary by Tass analyst Yuri Kornilov, apparently in response to Reagan's March 13 speech to the Young Leadership Conference of the United Jewish Appeal.

In his speech, Reagan mentioned restrictions on publication and teaching of Hebrew in the Soviet Union and noted the sharp decline in Jewish emigration.

Reagan also mentioned cases of Jewish dissidents who have been sentenced to jail, including Anatoly Shcharansky, who was sentenced in 1978 on espionage charges. "We must support Soviet Jews in their struggle for basic rights," he said.

Cuba considers removal of troops from Angola

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba, after being forced out of Grenada last fall and voluntarily withdrawing some troops from Ethiopia, has begun to prepare Cuban public opinion for the possibility that its forces in Angola will be brought home as well, U.S. officials say.

In each of the countries, Cuba's presence dates back to the mid- to late 1970s. But officials said the retrenchment is the product of events unique to each situation rather than part of a conscious pattern.

The possible departure of 25,000 Cuban troops from Angola reflects the progress in American-led negotiations to achieve independence and black majority rule in Namibia, a South African colony.

The United States and South Africa's anti-communist government have insisted that progress in the independence process be conditioned on a firm commitment by Angola to end the Cuban troop presence.

Cuba initially sent forces to the southwest African nation in 1975 to protect the Marxist government there from South African attacks. Traditionally, Havana has said little to the Cuban people about the diplomatic and military situation in Angola, a former Portugese colony.

No information, for example, is reported on Cuban casualties, on where the dead are buried or on troop rotations.

Thus, some diplomats were surprised by an article late last month in Granma, the Cuban Communist Party daily, on the status of the Namibian negotiations and on the demands that the Cubans leave Angola as part of an overall settlement.

A U.S. official, who like others spoke on condition he remain anonymous, said the article provides a heightened indication that Cuba is preparing to bring its troops home.

One aspect of Cuba's relationship with Angola that remains secret is the payment Cuba receives for its troop presence. According to an official, most of Angola's foreign exchange, derived from oil exports, is used to pay for the Cuban troops.

A 1983 CIA estimate suggested that Cuba receives more than $2 billion annually, but there have been some indications Angola has been hard-pressed to keep up its payments because of financial problems.

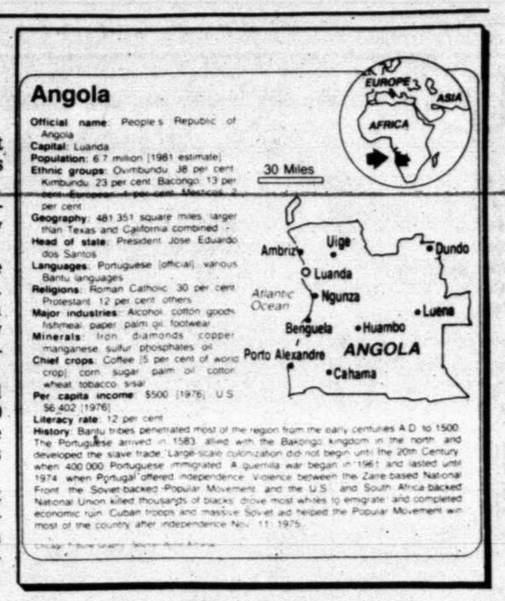

The U.S. official said Cuban casualties in Angola have been considerable but added there are no reliable estimates. Some analysts believe there is deep resentment among the families of dead Cuban soldiers over Cuba's military involvement in Angola.

The prospective departure of Cubans from Angola follows Cuba's decision several months ago to substantially reduce its troop commitment to Ethiopia.

Cuba sent forces to Ethiopia in late 1977 to help the Marxist government in a border conflict with Somalia. According to officials, the threat of renewed conflict with Somalia is minimal because of Ethiopia's superior military power, thus reducing the perceived need for large numbers of Cuban troops.

Before the recent withdrawal, believed to have involved several thousand soldiers, U.S. officials said between 9,000 and 13,000 Cubans had been stationed in Ethiopia. Some Cuban troops are expected to remain in Ethiopia, but it is not clear how many.

The Cuban deployment in Ethiopia six years ago set back what had been a promising attempt at accommodation between Washington and Havana, a policy given high priority during the early months of the Carter administration.

South Africa courts nations of black Africa

An Analysis

By ANDREW TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer

KOMATIPOORT, South Africa — Diplomacy, military might and economic pressure applied to weaker neighbors appear to have given South Africa's white-minority rulers their widest acceptance in black Africa in a decade.

If that is so, South Africa's whites have taken a big step toward a cherished goal — ending their isolation in world affairs.

The world shunned South Africa after Prime Minister P.W. Botha's National Party came to power in 1948 and began imposing on the black majority the formal strictures of apartheid, a unique system of legalized race-separation. South Africa was expelled from the United Nations General Assembly, the Olympics and other international bodies.

Only Malawi among black African states has diplomatic relations with South Africa, although nearly all trade, more or less secretly, with South Africa. Many African countries refuse to admit South African citizens, and others bar any traveler with a South African stamp in his passport.

AROUND THE world, anti-apartheid activists boycott South African products, urge governments and corporations to sell South African investments and heap moral condemnation on South Africa.

South Africa's last approach to black Africa, when the late Prime Minister John Vorster succeeded in starting a dialogue with the Ivory Coast and a few others, collapsed in 1975 after South Africa invaded Angola in a fruitless attempt to prevent a Marxist faction from winning a civil war.

South Africa faces a complex task in the west: a regional settlement involving Marxist Angola and the territory of South-West Africa, or Namibia, which is administered by South Africa and lies between the two antagonists as a buffer.

Also involved are 25,000 Cuban soldiers stationed in Angola to defend the government, 15,000 anti-Marxist Angolan guerrillas aided by South Africa, guerrillas of the South-West Africa Peoples Organization who are based in Angola and fighting for an independent Namibia, and the United Nations, which has repeatedly called on South Africa to relinquish control over Namibia.

SOUTH AFRICA, which with the United States insists that the Cubans must leave when Namibia becomes independent, has proposed an all-party peace conference. Angola and SWAPO have rejected it.

But Angola and South Africa have so far refused to let the recent infiltration of hundreds of SWAPO guerrillas into Namibia upset their six-week-old disengagement. South Africa is withdrawing troops from southern Angola and Angola has promised not to move forces into the area.

Black Africa remains largely skeptical of South Africa's intentions. Of black leaders invited to Komatipoort for the signing of South Africa's non-aggression treaty with Mozambique on Friday, only Prince Bhekimpi Dlamini, Swaziland's prime minister, appeared.

Tanzanian Foreign Minister Salim Salim said South Africa "has all along been the aggressor" in southern Africa. Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko voiced concern that the "diplomatic ballet" in the region would obscure black African goals.

Political Editor Patrick Laurence of the Rand Daily Mail in Johannesburg, a newspaper critical of South African policy, pointed out that apartheid remains the basic issue. "All negotiations between South Africa and black Africa have a hidden agenda — excision of apartheid in all its forms," he wrote.

Africans recall that South African commandos killed 42 people in a December 1982, raid against black nationalists in Maseru, Lesotho's capital, and that they conducted occasional sorties against black African National Congress targets in Maputo, Mozambique's capital.

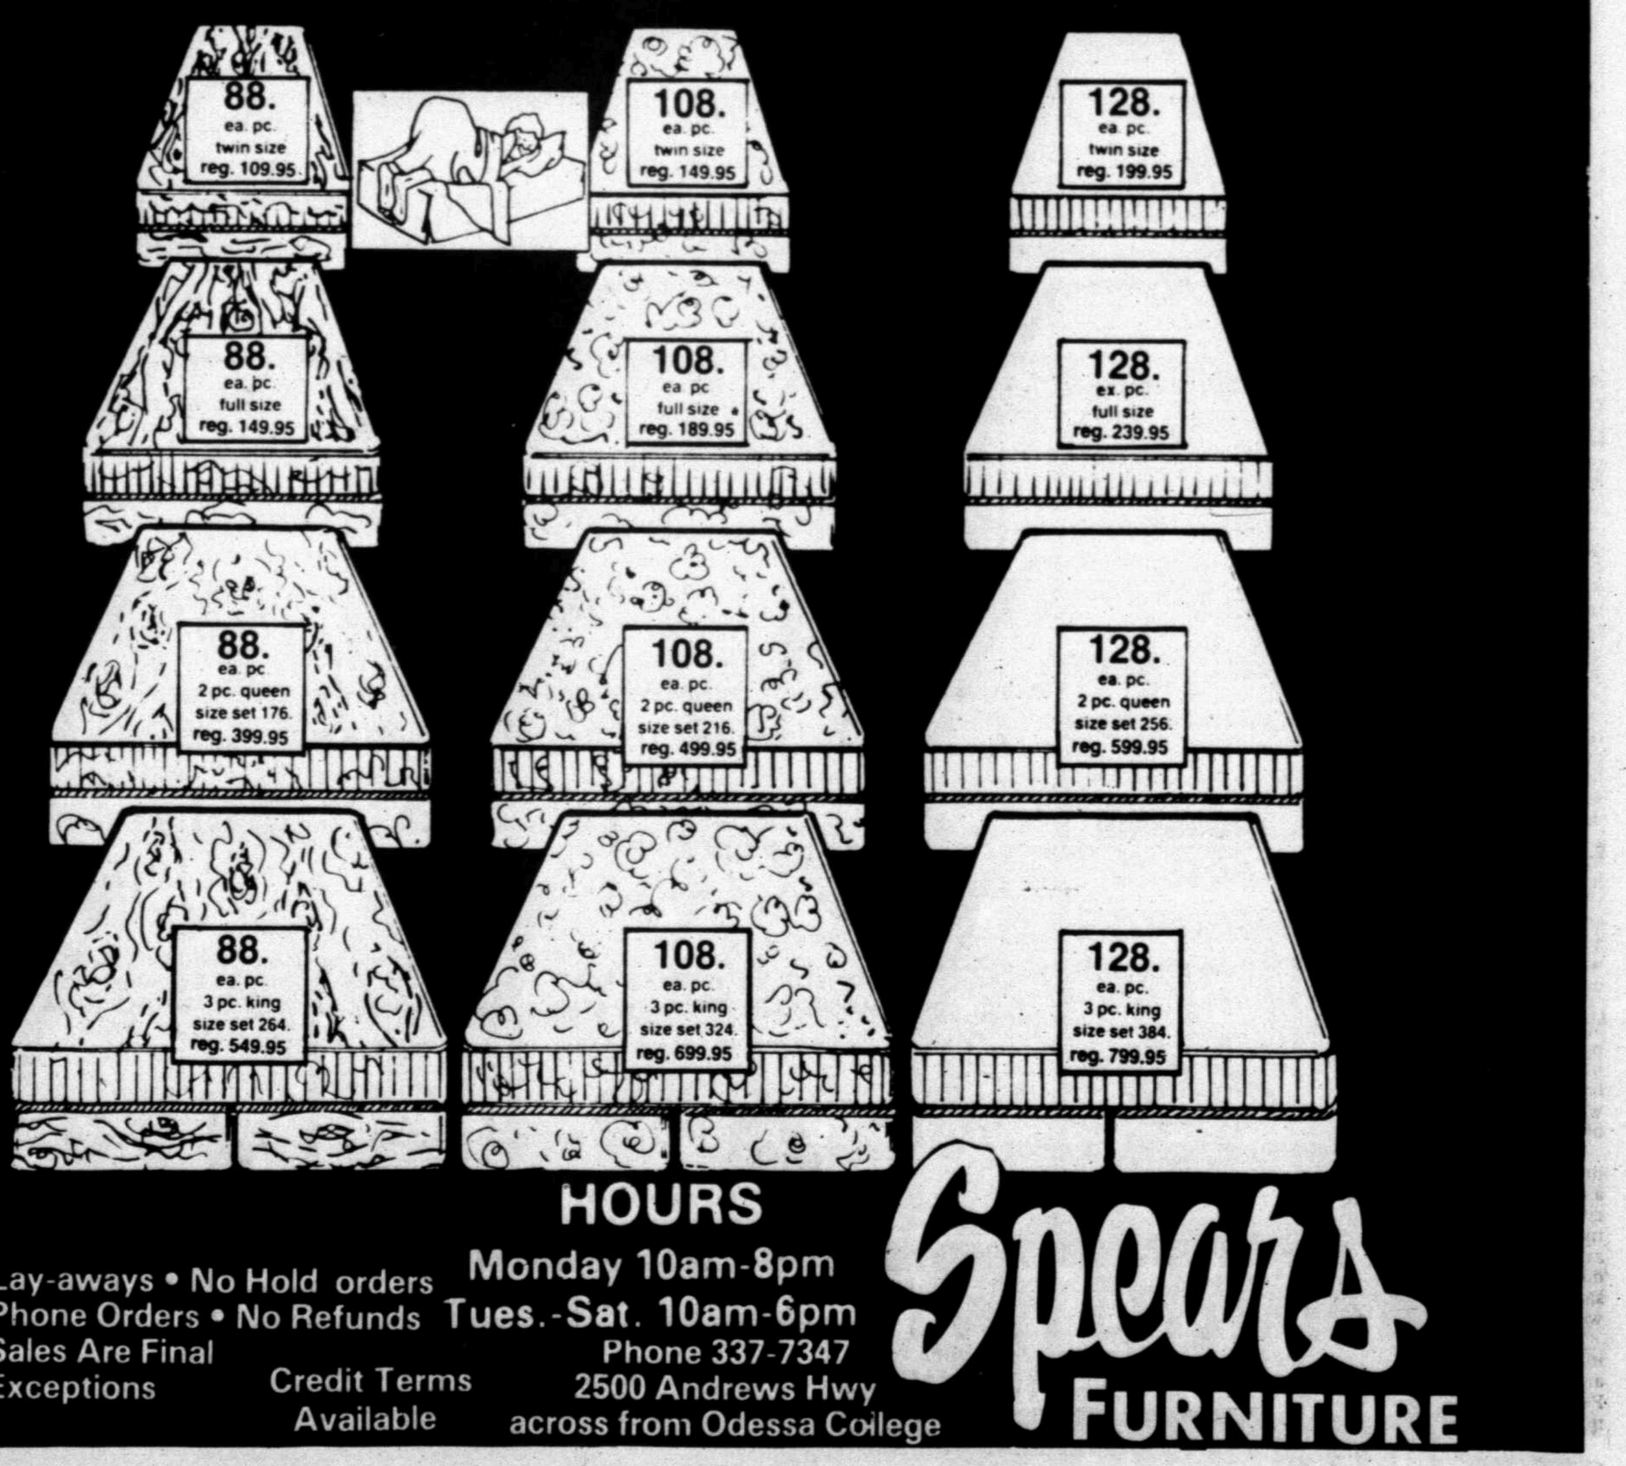

The Mozambican government says South African economic pressure has cost the country nearly $4 billion in nine years. A recent statement said the number of Mozambicans working in South African mines was cut to 40,000, reducing remittances by $578 million and leaving 70,000 people unemployed.

U.S. photographer killed in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — American photographer John Hoagland, working for Newsweek magazine, was shot and killed while walking with government troops who were ambushed by leftist rebels.

His body was sent back to his native San Diego, Calif., by a commercial airliner today after a religious service.

The Rev. Peter O'Neil, a longtime friend of Hoagland's, conducted the funeral service. He said Hoagland spent his life seeking truth "cost what it may," and died in the search.

"It was John's work to seek the truth and communicate it. When we think of our dead friend, we may ask ourselves if it is worth giving our life for the truth. But if some are not willing, the truth cannot be communicated," O'Neil said.

Hoagland, 36, was the last of at least 13 foreign and Salvadoran journalists killed covering the four-year-old civil war. He was the second Newsweek photographer killed in El Salvador.

Hoagland and photographer Robert Nickelsbrg, working for Time magazine, were caught in a crossfire Friday as they headed for Suchitoto, 27 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Nickelsberg said he and Hoagland had walked about a mile with some army soldiers when guerrillas attacked them from behind, about 14 miles north of San Salvador. He said they both immediately ran about 20 yards off the road and took cover behind a tree.

"We got sprayed with bullets and one of them got him," Nickelsberg said.

He said he did not know whether a guerrilla or a government soldier fired the fatal shot.

"I've been hit," Nickelsberg quoted Hoagland as saying before he passed out, within 10 seconds after being shot. He said those were Hoagland's only words.

Candidates play to Salvadorans' hopes, fears

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — In scorching, dusty town squares, in radio and television blitzes, El Salvador's presidential candidates are winding up campaigns that have been playing to the hopes and frustrations of the war-weary people.

It's campaign '84, Salvadoran style, for the balloting Sunday, March 25; the candidates' gloves are off.

"We must stop the spilling of blood, we must stop the tears from coming to the eyes of Salvadoran mothers," shouted Christian Democrat candidate Jose Napoleon Duarte at a recent rally at Cuscatlan Park here.

"We must end the days when right-wing death squads break down the doors of houses and take away husbands and sons at night."

Duarte, the most liberal and apparent front-runner among eight candidates, accuses his main opponent, ultra-conservative Roberto d'Aubuisson of the Nationalist Republican Alliance, of having close ties to the death squads.

Earlier this month, the Christian Democrats tried to get d'Aubuisson removed from the ballot on a charge that he lacked moral character.

D'Aubuisson's party, known as ARENA, lumps the Christian Democrats with the leftist guerrillas fighting for power here and claims Duarte would hand the government over to the guerrillas.

"The Christian Democrats' leaders are our enemies because they are communists," roared a warm-up speaker at a d'Aubuisson rally in San Vicente.

"We have proof that the (Christian Democratic) mayor in Santa Clara meets every night at midnight with the guerrillas in his house."

Three polls show 45 to 55 percent of voters expressing a preference for Duarte, a moderate, but also show roughly half of the electorate as undecided.

ARENA is listed with about 20 percent and the third major party, the National Conciliation Party headed by Francisco Jose "Chachi" Guerrero, with 11 percent. Five small party candidates also are running.

To win next Sunday a candidate must get more than 50 percent of the total vote. If nobody does, the top two will meet in a runoff election a month later.

El Salvador's four-year-old civil war has claimed more than 45,000 lives, shredded the country's economic and social foundations and displaced hundreds of thousands of Salvadorans.

The war has dominated the campaign but few concrete proposals for ending it have emerged through the rosy promises of peace, jobs, tranquility and freedom.

D'Aubuisson vows no negotiation with the guerrillas and "the rigor of the law for those who act against the sacred interests of the people."

He favors undoing many of the economic reforms imposed by Duarte's U.S.-backed provisional government in 1980-82, especially the nationalization of key exports such as coffee.

He promised the San Vicente crowd his government would put factories there. Duarte advocates an opposite approach.

"You can't confront the symptoms of the violence and not confront the causes," he told a news conference. He said his government would start by ending "neo-fascist and institutionalized violence" and thus "gain the moral authority to confront subversion."

He has said there are basic social reasons why thousands of Salvadorans flee to the hills to join the guerrillas and the country needs to look at what those reasons are.

Leftists launch drive to disrupt national elections

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels announced a major offensive Saturday to disrupt presidential elections scheduled for March 25. The guerrillas claimed they mined three major highways, and scattered fighting was reported in the eastern part of the country.

"We are going to step up the war before, during and after the elections," the guerrillas' clandestine Radio Venceremos said in a broadcast monitored in San Salvador.

Radio Venceremos called the elections "a coverup for a plan for direct intervention by American troops."

"The dictatorship and imperialism have implored a truce to let its farce go by. From now on there will be no truce. We are and will remain at war, as long as the basic reasons that cause it remain," the broadcast said.

In the broadcast, Joaquin Villalobos, the rebel commander for the eastern part of the country, said the guerrillas had mined the Pan American Highway, the Military Road and the Coastal Highway — the country's three major roads that run from west to east. This claim could not be confirmed immediately.

Villalobos, commander of the People's Revolutionary Army, one of five guerrilla groups that form the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, said the offensive has been named "Down With the Electoral Farce; Up With the Popular War."

Last month, leftist leaders had said they were boycotting the elections for president and vice president because their candidates would be easy targets for rightist death squads, but pledged they would not disrupt the voting.

The Reagan administration has been urging such an election in the hope it would help defuse some of the violence. The United States strongly supports President Alvaro Magana's conservative government, which leftist forces are trying to overthrow.

In the provincial capital of San Miguel, which rebels attacked with mortars and rifle fire late Friday night, residents said the rebels blocked the Pan American Highway with hijacked vehicles by shooting off the tires.

Fighting with automatic rifles and mortars there lasted until 8 a.m. (9 a.m. EST) Saturday, they said. A bus company official said in a telephone interview that no buses or trucks arrived all morning from San Salvador, 85 miles west. But he said he saw no sign the Pan American Highway was mined.

There was no way to confirm immediately if the Coastal Highway and the Military Road, a spur of the Pan American Highway, were mined.

Two government soldiers were reported wounded in the fighting in San Miguel.

NATO, Marines play 'circle games'

BARDUFOSS, Norway (AP) — In the waning days of winter above the Arctic Circle, 40,000 adults including more than 5,000 U.S. Marines are taking part in a lifelike game with a multimillion-dollar price tag.

In sub-freezing temperatures along icy roads, Marines in combat outfit tote M-16s as schoolchildren playfully pelt them with snowballs. F-16s streak over craggy 4,000-foot mountains and blue fiords, adding a thundering sound track to the make-believe war in northern Norway.

Teamwork Avalanche Express is the largest set of North Atlantic Treaty Organization war games ever held on the European doorstep of the Soviet Union.

The Western alliance has committed to it more than 150 ships, 300 aircraft, a 5,000-man U.S. Marine Amphibious brigade and 20,000 other ground troops, including Canadians, Britons and Hollanders.

War games, if not hell, may be nearly as costly as the genuine thing.

As commanders plot the mock attack and defense of Troms, a Connecticut-sized county that is the keystone of Norway's defense, the field bakery of a single unit turns out 5,000 15-ounce loaves daily. The helicopters, trucks and tanks of the Allied Mobile Force guzzle tens of thousands of gallons of gasoline.

The exercises, which will cost tens of millions of dollars, will bring more than $6 million to the local economy in Troms alone, says Lt. Cmdr. Thorbjoern Wale of the Norwegian Naval Reserve.

Peking to get golf course, racecourse, ancient village

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese capital will get its first golf course, a horse racecourse and a recreated ancient village in a new park complex under construction, the city has announced.

The official Peking Daily said 1,778-acre Baihe Park is adjacent to Miyun Reservoir, about 45 miles northeast of the city center.

Few Chinese know how to play golf, so the links are likely to be frequented by foreigners living in or visiting the city.

The new Peking park will feature recreated villages from the era around 220-280, and will have four streets devoted to China's four great ancient inventions — the compass, gunpowder, paper and block printing.

Lama: Persecution growing

PEKING (AP) — The exiled Dalai Lama of Tibet and his followers complained this week that persecution of Buddhists has increased in China. But the Chinese Communist government on Saturday reported a resurgence of Tibetan Buddhism.

The official Chinese news agency Xinhua said Tibet, a semi-autonomous region, now has 1,400 monks and nuns in its monasterie.

About 500 have been newly recruited or have returned to monasteries closed during China's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, when religion was banned, the report said. China invaded Tibet in 1950 and made it a semi-autonomous region in 1951. Before the repression of the 1960s, as much as a sixth of Tibet's male population were monks. The estimated population is 2 million.

The lamas, or Tibetan Buddhist priests, do "some productive labor to earn part of their living," the agency reported, while the state provides living allowances and maintains the lamaseries.

Novel to be published

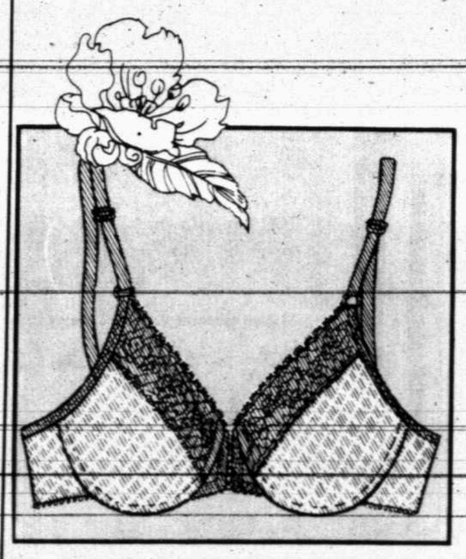

PEKING (AP) — China's leading poet, Ai Qing, is to have his long-suppressed first novel published, the official news agency Xinhua reported Saturday.

Ai, now 74, was labeled a rightist during Mao Tse-tung's crackdown of 1957, when he promised to let "a hundred flowers bloom and a hundred schools of thought contend," but then punished those who criticized his policies.

Bulldogs go 2-0 in District 4-5A

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — When it counts, the Midland High Bulldogs are playing for keeps.

After a 2-6 pre-district, including an 8-4 loss to Pecos on Thursday, the Bulldogs have played perfect ball in District 4-5A competition. Tuesday they upset Odessa Permian 2-1 at Midland High Diamond and Saturday they backed up that performance with a 6-2 victory here over the Big Spring Steers.

After two scoreless innings of play, the Bulldogs brought home two runs in the top of the third and scored the winning run in the fourth for a 3-0 lead.

Big Spring cut the lead to 3-1 in the bottom of the fifth, but Midland High came right back with three more runs in the top of the sixth for their final tallys of the game. The Steers scored their last run in the seventh.

Doug Daehling got his first 4-5A start of the season and went the distance allowing only five hits in his seven innings of duty for a 1-0 record. Daehling also hit the game's only extra-base hit, a double.

For Big Spring, Tommy Gartman also went seven, suffering his fifth loss of the season and second in league play against no wins.

The Bulldogs return home Tuesday for a 4-5A game against co-league leader Abilene Cooper at 4 p.m. MHS, Cooper and Midland Lee are all tied for first place at 2-0.

On Wednesday, the Dogs play their final non-district game of the season when they travel to Snyder for a 4 p.m. game.

NAIA's top seed falls

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Junior swingman Terry Porter tossed in a game-high 37 points Saturday night to lead ninth-seeded Wisconsin-Stevens Point to a 77-50 upset victory over top-seeded West Virginia Wesleyan in the quarterfinals of the NAIA National Basketball Tournament.

Stevens Point, 27-3, will meet fourth-seeded Westmont, Calif., in a semifinal game Monday night. Westmont was a 78-65 winner over fifth-seeded St. Thomas Aquinas, N.Y., earlier Saturday night.

Porter had 18 points in the first half as the Pointers took a 28-23 lead at halftime. They stuck to their patient offense to build a 40-29 lead with six minutes gone in the second half.

West Virginia Wesleyan went to a full-court press that created a handful of turnovers and helped the Bobcats cut the deficit to 48-43 on a layup by Chris Harrison with 7:07 remaining.

Rebels defeat Bobcats in 8th

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Too bad a pitcher can only count one victory or loss per game. If more were possible, Midland Lee's Bryan Willis would have recorded a double win over San Angelo Saturday at Midland Lee Diamond.

Not only did Willis come on in relief of Mike Small in the top of the fourth to pitch 4⅓ innings of shutout ball, he also hit the game-winning RBI in the bottom of the eighth for a 4-3 District 4-5A victory over the Bobcats.

Small, who survived a pair of first inning errors by third baseman Paul Colwell, had three no-hit shutout innings under his belt before Colwell's throwing error in the fourth set up his downfall.

San Angelo's Mike Torres lead off the frame with a ground ball to Colwell who threw high and wide to first base. It was the spark the Bobcats needed to mount a rally. Zane Hoppe followed with a single to left that moved Torres to third and Bill Osborne brought him home with a single up the middle, cutting Lee's lead to 3-1.

Joel Padilla made it 3-2 when he brought Hoppe home on a fielder's choice that went from Colwell to Dirk Bergoon at second. Padilla went to second on a steal followed by Dwain Hulse's strike out and Greg Lisewsky's walk to load the bases. With two out, Larry Guerro singled to left, scoring Padilla and tying the game at 3-3. Willis came to the mound from center field to get the final out of the inning.

Four innings and three Lee errors later, Willis was still pitching the Rebels out of trouble, recording five strike outs while giving up three hits and a walk. Six San Angelo base runners were left stranded on the paths, including four who were on second base or farther. The pressure never got to him.

"Some can do it and some can't," said Lee coach Ernie Johnson about the trouble Willis pitched out of. "It's nice to have that attitude. He's confident and the players have confidence in him when he's on the mound. He'll go out and throw strikes with runners in scoring position."

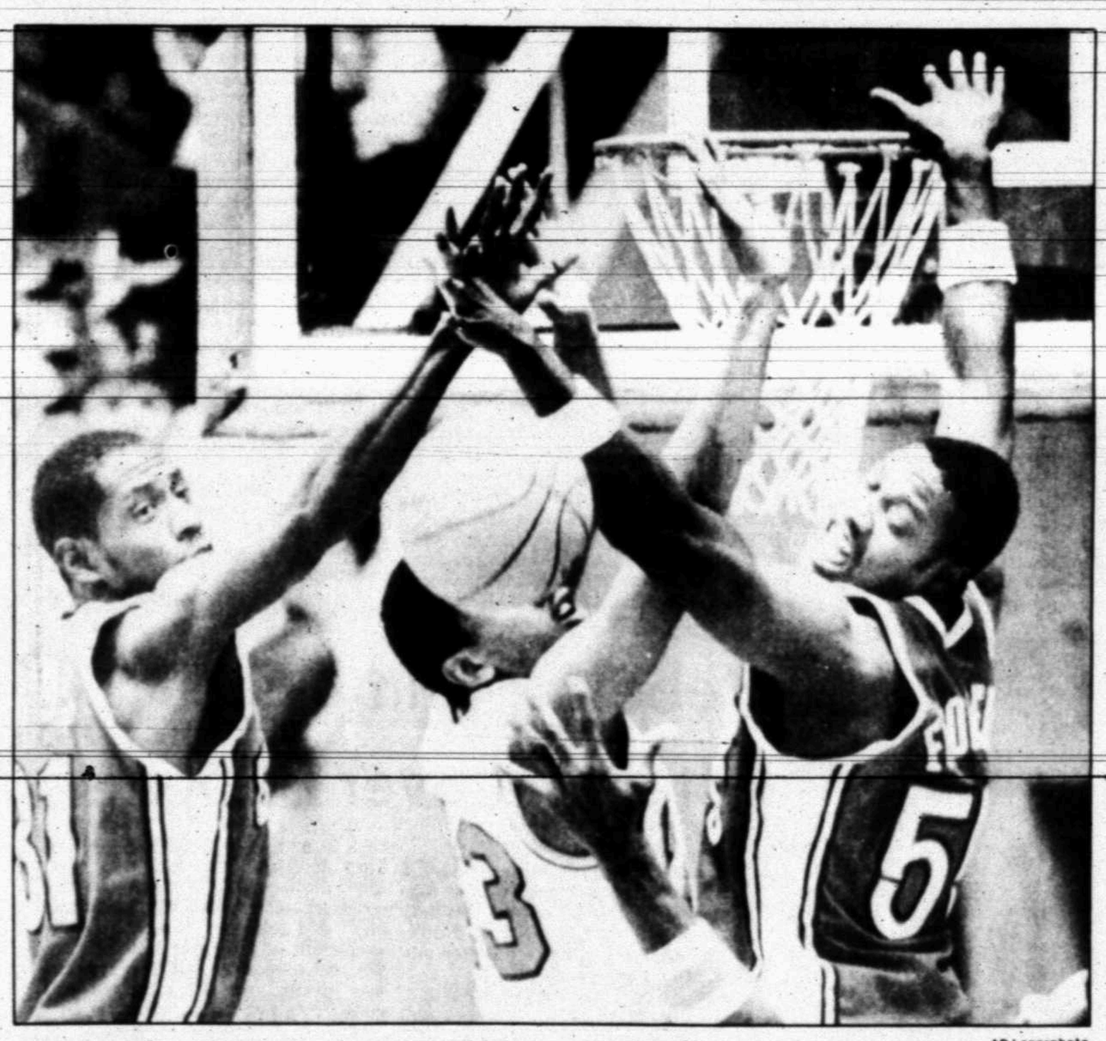

IN THE bottom of the eighth, Cary Brown led off with a high pop up to right field that San Angelo's Stacey Williams couldn't catch up to. Brown kept running and was heading for second for a double when the ball finally touched ground.

Colwell, who scored two of Lee's earlier runs after a single and a walk, laid down a sacrifice bunt to move Brown to third. One out later, Willis took the first pitch to left field to score Brown and win the game.

"We hit the ball when we had to, especially when we had to," said Willis.

Johnson, who was far from pleased with his team's play, said, "There was not much defense and not much hitting. I thought it wasn't a very well played game on our part.

Heels, Cougars, Wildcats advance

By The Associated Press

NCAA Playoffs

Top-rated North Carolina, third-ranked Kentucky and No. 5 Houston rolled into the regional semifinals Saturday, while unheralded Dayton emerged as the Cinderella team of the NCAA Basketball Tournament by ousting seventh-ranked Oklahoma.

Other members of the Associated Press Top Twenty to post second-round victories were 11th-ranked Maryland, No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas and No. 16 Memphis State, while ninth-ranked Texas-El Paso, No. 10 Purdue and No. 20 Temple joined Oklahoma on the sidedlines.

Saturday's scoreboard looked like this:

East, at Charlotte, N.C. — North Carolina 77, Temple 66, and Indiana 75, Richmond 67.

Mideast, at Birmingham, Ala. — Kentucky 93, Brigham Young 68, and Maryland 102, West Virginia 77.

Midwest, at Memphis, Tenn. — Houston 77, Louisiana Tech 69, and Memphis State 66, Purdue 48.

West, at Salt Lake City, Utah — Dayton 89, Oklahoma 85, and Nevada-Las Vegas 73, Texas-El Paso 60.

The second round concludes Sunday with four more doubleheaders.

Michael Jordan scored 27 points as North Carolina shook off determined Temple, whose pressure defense forced 15 Tar Heel turnovers in the first half. With 11 minutes left and North Carolina leading 48-47, the Tar Heels scored six straight points on Matt Doherty's layup, Kenny Smith's basket on a goaltending call and two free throws by Sam Perkins. Terence Stansbury led Temple with 26 points.

"THEY WERE very quick," Jordan said of Temple's defense. "They jumped in the passing lanes and they were putting a lot of pressure on us. That's the first time we've faced something like that. I think we corrected that in the second half."

Indiana earned the right to meet North Carolina when Steve Alford hit 10 straight free throws in the last 12 minutes to lead the Hoosiers past Richmond.Alford, the nation's second leading free throw shooter at 90.6 percent, converted both ends of a two-shot foul with 12:33 left to break a 46-46 tie. Indiana opened the lead to 54-49 when Alford hit a jumper and Mike Giomi added a baseline shot with 7:55 left and gradually pulled away.

Alford led Indiana with 22 points, while Kelvin Johnson had 20 for Richmond.

"It's a nice prize to get to play North Carolina," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "People probably thought the same thing about us when we were that good."

KENTUCKY took advantage of steals, turnovers and eight early points by Sam Bowie to jump out to an 11-point lead and waltz past BYU.The victory enabled the Wildcats to return to their home floor at Rupp Arena in Lexington for the Mideast semifinals against the winner of today's game in Milwaukee between Tulsa and Louisville.

The Wildcats overpowered BYU with an 11-0 burst that broke a 41-41 tie, including four points each by Bowie and Kenny Walker and three by Jim Master.The Cougars were never able to get closer than seven the rest of the way and Kentucky turned it into a rout with runs of 8-0 and 9-0 early in the second half and led 61-35 with 13:32 remaining.

Walker led the balanced Kentucky scoring with 19 points, Bowie had 16, Melvin Turpin 15, Master 13 and reserve Winston Bennett 11. BYU's Devin Durrant, the nation's third leading scorer entering tournament play, had 28.

"I think they really want it, I think they're really hungry," Coach Joe B. Hall said of Kentucky's quest for the school's sixth national championship.

The second game at Birmingham produced another rout as Ben Coleman scored 19 points and Herman Veal and Len Bias 18 each as Maryland crushed West Virginia.Maryland shot a sizzling 70 percent to build a 55-39 halftime lead and relentlessly added to the margin after the intermission.Lester Rowe led West Virginia with 18 points.

"Our best game of the season," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell.

ANDREWS — It was hard telling the winners from the losers here Saturday at the Mustang Relays. It was one of those meets where mistakes played the key role.

And on top of that, Midland Lee's Walter Jones and Odessa Permian's Jason Leach only got to look at each other instead of racing against each other. In short summary, the 5A division was a wipeout.

Oh yes, Permian won the 5A title 143-141 over Lee to get a small amount of revenge of losing to Lee on its own turf in Odessa last weekend. But Permian's victory seemed shallow in that the Panther 1600-meter relay team dropped the baton on the final event to give up 20 points to Lee.

But Lee topped Permian in mistakes, losing a possible 16 points to errors. Sophomore Quintus Hampton failed to finish the high hurdles, walking off the track, and just finishing would have been two points. Sophomore Gary Powell was disqualified in the 100 meters for jumping, losing a possible eight points and senior Michael Johnson was disqualified during the 300 hurdles, costing Lee six more points. It was one of those days.

What did go right was that Leach won the 100 with a 10.4 and Jones won the 200 with a 22.1. The only thing wrong was that neither were matched in any race and that in itself is enough to ruin any track meet. Leach didn't run the 200 this week to enter both relays.

That move did help Permian as the Panther sprint relay team defeated Lee, handing the Rebels their first loss of the year in that event.

Hampton did redeem himself in the 300 hurdles with a 40.3, his first varsity victory and Isaac Garnett remained undefeated in the shot put with a 59-3½, not his best. Still, Garnett was over 59-feet three times.

"The mistakes definitely beat us, but I was surprised that we got back as close as we did," said Lee coach Sam Volpe after seeing his Rebels trail by as many as 46 points. "It also hurt us that we couldn't run Marc Brackens in the 400 meters since he has a mild muscle pull. We only used him on the relay."

Francis, Adams, Gill made WT grid history

Sometimes you intend to do something, but you never seem to get around to it. Something always keeps coming up to interfere.

It won't go away. It's there and as long as it is, so is the guilt.

That's the way it was when James Mims mentioned in the lobby before Arsenic and Old Last last December that Jay Francis had died.

Then, around Christmas, Woody Adams passed away. Same thing all over.

The contributions both had made to West Texas athletic lore deserved something more than the details of a functional obituary.

Then, a couple of weeks ago Audrey Gill passed away. He had been Midland High football coach, athletic director and later principal at Midland High. He also had served in an assistant principal at Midland Lee.

AUDREY TOUCHED a lot of Midland lives, including both those of Woody Adams and Jay Francis. In delving into the past, it's remarkable how the lives of all three were intertwined, particularly back in their high school athletic days in West Texas.

Adams and Francis performed in what was the Golden Era of Midland football. After all, how many Midland teams have gone to the Rose Bowl?

I knew Audrey and Woody, but I never met Jay, although his son, Jimmy, was a punting end for Midland Lee back in the 1960s, on the team that gave the Rebels their first win over Odessa Permian. I think that was one of the most exciting high school finishes I've ever been fortunate enough to witness.

Still, Jay's reputation as a wonderously talented back in the 1930s was no secret. Joe Salman, who grew up in Rankin, was full of Jay Francis stories, so suspiciously so that some would bring a scoffing, "Nobody could be that good."

But he was. Just look it up. Joe got tired of my skepticism and did look it up and compiled his feats in great detail.

FRANCIS MADE all-state in 1939. He started for the South in the Coaches' All-Star game. It wasn't difficult to fathom why. In his high school career, he gained 1,965 yards...on touchdown runs alone. He scored 65 TD's, 25 from 25 yards or more away and 13 from more than 50 yards out.

He scored five touchdowns in a game—three times. Against poor Roby, Francis scored the five in five minutes and gained 256 yards in that brief flurry...just five minutes.

During his high school seasons he amassed 4,267 yards rushing and averaged 8.4 yards per carry. He scored 184 points in one season and had 407 for a career. He rushed for 308 yards against Kermit in 1937 and 296 against Abilene in 1939.

To be perfectly honest, Francis was a terrible passer even Joe conceded that. Completed only 19 of 68, but then who cared whether Jim Brown could block.

Adams recalling Jay said, "He was the greatest runner I ever played with or against—including college. There is only one ball carrier I would put in his class—Frank Sinkwich of Georgia."

Gill, who played at Sweetwater, agreed. He said "Without reservation. He was the grreatest broken field runner I ever saw on a football field. If he got as much as two steps on you, he was gone."

Considering the college careers that Adams and Gill had, this was the highest possible praise.

Francis drew the attention of Dutch Meyer, Homer Norton, Frank Leahy, Pete Cawthon and Tonto Coleman, but it was Henry Frnka at Tulsa University who wound up with him. Tulsa, at the time, was THE team in Oklahoma and was a bowl-going regular.

He played 60 minutes in all seven games for the Tulsa freshmen. In his first game he scored four touchdowns. Then, along came the war. Jay joined up and returned to Tulsa when it was over, "My legs were gone and I could not make the team," he recalled.

JAY AND Woody played on the unbeaten 1936 Midland team, but Francis' junior and senior years in 1938 and 1939 were tarnished by one loss each season. Wink, which had a 19-game streak going and was the Permian of its day in West Texas, did it in 1938.

In 1939, it was Sweetwater that spoiled it. Gill, an all-stater along with Francis that year, recalled, "I remember very clearly the coach's instructions before the game.

"'Now Audrey, you have only one job. Get with Francis and stay with him. No matter where he goes, you stick with him. Every time the ball is snapped, you head straight for him and don't give him any running room. Now, the rest of you, you don't have but one job to do and that is to help 'ol Audrey out."

Although Midland led at half, 13-2, on a 32-yard run and on a 35-yard Francis touchdown pass to Wendell Williams (later a star at Rice), Sweetwater came back to win 36-13.

Worthy sets pace as LA tops Rockets

From Wire Reports

HOUSTON — James Worthy scored 10 of his 14 points in the fourth quarter as Los Angeles beat Houston, 123-111, in the NBA Saturday night.

The teams were tied, 93-93, with 10:56 left in the game when the Lakers took charge. Los Angeles scored nine unanswered points, five by Worthy, and put together a 14-1 spurt for a 107-94 bulge with 4:53 to play.

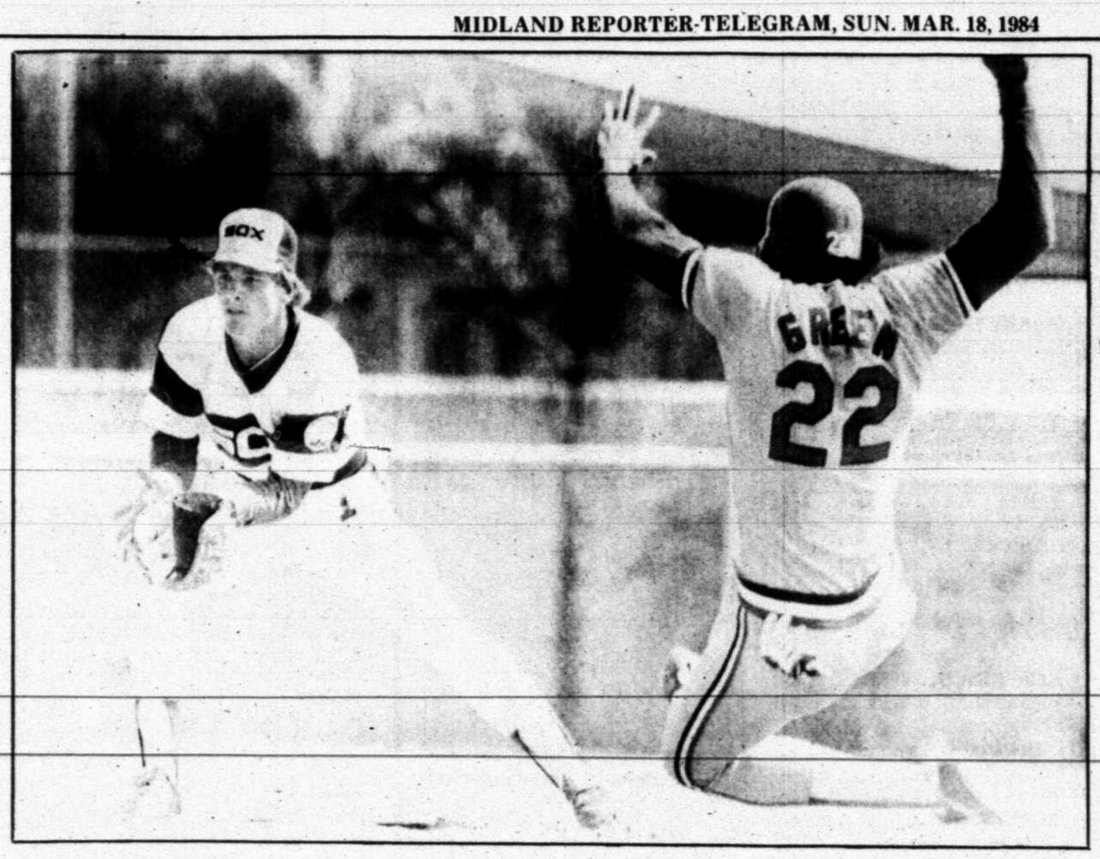

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 29 points, eight in the final period to lead the 44-22 Lakers.

At halftime, the Rockets retired the jersey of Calvin Murphy, the league's 17th all-time scorer and No. 2 on the NBA list for career steals and free throw percentage.

In 13 seasons, the 5-9 guard from Niagara University was the club's all-time leader in games, points, minutes, assits, steals, personal fouls and disqualifications.

The Lakers took a 35-31 first quarter lead paced by Jamaal Wilkes' 14 points, and held a 63-59 halftime lead.

Allen Leavell and Lewis Lloyd led the 26-41 Rockets with 21 points. Wilkes added 25 for Los Angeles.

Chicago White Sox shortstop Scott Fletcher stealing in exhibition game at Sarasota, Fla. takes throw as St. Louis' Dave Green is caught

Eckersley shows old mound form

Baseball

By The Associated Press

It isn't uncommon for a pitcher to throw in the bullpen after a poor outing, but that wasn't the case Saturday for Boston's Dennis Eckersley.

The veteran right-hander went to the bullpen because he was too sharp.

In his third exhibition appearance, Eckersley went five innings in the Red Sox's 5-4 loss to the Minnesota Twins, allowing three hits and one run. His control was so fine that he threw only 47 pitches; the Red Sox wanted him to throw 80 or so.

"I knew I had thrown under 50 pitches, so I wasn't surprised when I was told to throw some more," Eckersley said. "I want to be able to throw at least 100 pitches with ease by the time we open the regular season, and time is getting short.

"I threw pretty good, used every pitch I've got. I was real pleased with the way I got the palm ball over. I'm very encouraged. Even the umpire commented and asked me when I started to throw it. It's supposed to help me against left-handers, but I threw a couple to right-handers and surprised them.

"The way things are going, I'm hoping for a big year. There hasn't even been a twinge in my shoulder, which bothered me the last couple of years. And it's really nice to get people out instead of getting lit up."

BOSTON PITCHERS got the Twins out with success until the bottom of the ninth, when Minnesota pushed across four unearned runs against Brian Denman. Pinch-hitter Dave Engle's two-out, bases-loaded grounder scooted past third baseman Steve Lyons for an error as the tying and winning runs scored after Gary Gaetti's two-run single made it 4-3.

Mike Scioscia's run-scoring single in the fifth inning broke a 3-3 tie and the Los Angeles Dodgers went on to edge the Detroit Tigers 5-4. Los Angeles scored three times in the first two innings against Juan Berenguer.

Darrell Porter's two-run homer in the 10th inning off Guy Hoffman gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Porter connected following a two-out double by David Green. Chicago's Greg Walker hit a 430-foot homer off Neil Allen in the sixth.

Tony Perez drove in four runs with three hits and Dave Parker had two hits and two RBI, leading the Cincinnati Reds to a 9-1 pounding of the New York Yankees. Perez had a sacrifice fly in the first inning and a run-scoring single in the second, both off Matt Keough, and a two-run single off Joe Cowley in the ninth.

Rookie Curtis Wilkerson drilled a game-winning single with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning, lifting the Texas Rangers over the Baltimore Orioles 4-3. Wilkerson's hit was the third single of the inning as Jim Anderson and Donnie Scott also connected off Dan Morogiello. Ken Singleton homered for Baltimore.

BERT BLYLEVEN hurled five scoreless innings and teamed with four other pitchers on a five-hitter as the Cleveland Indians blanked the Chicago Cubs 2-0. Blyleven yielded two hits and walked one while striking out three. The veteran right-hander has pitched 12 shutout innings in his three exhibition appearances this spring.

Pittsburgh's Brian Harper hit a solo homer in the eighth inning and the Pirates and Kansas City Royals played to a 4-4 tie in a game called by mutual consent after 11 innings.

Bob Horner collected two hits, including an RBI single that put Atlanta on top in the first inning, as the Braves defeated a split squad of Montreal Expos 3-1. Horner led off the fourth with a double and pinch-runner Randy Johnson scored on Rafael Ramirez's double. Atlanta pitchers Ken Dayley, Brian Fisher and Bob Walk stopped the Expos on four singles.

The rest of the Expos lost to Houston 4-3 when the Astros scored twice in the bottom of the ninth on Kevin Bass' infield hit and Tony Scott's bunt, which catcher Bobby Ramos heaved wildly past first as both runners circled the bases. Jim Gott pitched five scoreless innings, allowing five hits, in the Toronto Blue Jays' 4-1 victory over a Philadelphia Phillies split squad. The Jays scored three runs in the third inning against loser Steve Carlton on Alfredo Griffin's RBI triple and run-scoring singles by Damaso Garcia and Cliff Johnson. Willie Upshaw homered in the fourth for Toronto.

ANOTHER GROUP of Phillies bowed to the New York Mets 8-2, mainly thanks to a five-run second inning which included Hubie Brooks' RBI triple and Jose Oquendo's two-run double.

Home runs by Dick Schofield and Fred Lynn powered the California Angels to a 6-5 victory over the Oakland A's. Schofield's homer was a two-run shot in the sixth.

Paul Molitor and Jim Gantner each had five hits and Cecil Cooper had four in a 25-hit attack which gave a split squad of Milwaukee Brewers a 13-8 victory over the San Francisco Giants. Molitor had three doubles and a triple and raised his spring batting average to .548. Gantner had a triple, double and three singles.

Former University of Missouri football star Phil Bradley collected three singles, scored three runs and drove in one to rally the Seattle Mariners to a 8-4 victory over a San Diego Padres split squad. Manny Castillo rapped a two-run inside-the-park homer for the Mariners, who rallied from a 3-0 deficit after three innnings.

A split squad of Brewers and Padres met in a night game.

MHS takes thirds in ABC Relays

ABC Relays

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING— While three different Midland track teams didn't have a full share of Irish luck on St. Patrick's Day, a few individuals did at the ABC Relays here Saturday.

Midland High's boys and girls and Midland Lee's girls didn't make a strong showing in the overall team standings, although the MHS boys finished third in the main division and the MHS junior varsity finished second in JV fare.

Lubbock Estacado and District 4-5A opponent San Angelo shared top honors with 105 points each. Lubbock Coronado finished second with 92 points and coach Johnny Williams' boys totaled 67 points. The JV team scored 60 points, second only to Muleshoe, who instead of competing on the 5A level entered in the JV division and assembled 205 points.

"It was a pretty tough field," said Williams after the long event staged in many forms of unpredictable West Texas weather. "It's the strongest meet we've been to this year."

All three teams, and especially coach Brenda Mitchell's MHS girls, have been nagged by injuries this season. In some respects, the toll made its presence felt Saturday with inconsistent team performances.

"We're in terrible shape," Mitchell said. "We've had to scratch events, Charlotte Hines has shin splints, Orvetta Johnson has a strained hamstring, Liz Pratt has a strained hamstring, Prentice Wright strained her leg this morning."

Midland High's girls finished ninth with 24 points, with Lee just ahead at 33. The Rebels under coach Linda Caraway had problems, too.

"We've got our things to work on," Caraway said. "We need to beef up the sprints some more. We've got the speed, we're just not running that well."

Like the others, the short time factor between basketball and the start of track has had a negative effect. "Faye Oudems, Brenda Haven and Diane White pushed too hard and now they've got injuries," said Caraway. "We started two weeks behind everyone else."

BUT THE bright spots for Midland and Lee shone out like patches of sunlight through the clouds. Midland High distance heroine Claire Hardy turned in a typical effort, easily winning the 3200 (by nearly a minute), and taking a second place in her first 1984 try in the 1600. Hardy lost there to Cathrine Ross of El Paso Coronado by six seconds.

For Lee, Nancy DeWitt finished second in the shot put (38-10) for the Rebs' highest placement.

Hardy has yet to be seriously challenged in the 3200, and her consistency has been MHS' strongest point. "I'm just taking things one at a time," said Hardy. "I'm just enjoying it. I had a long rest between cross-country season and now."

The MHS boys took firsts in the shot put and in the 100 meters. Darrell Davis wasted the competition with a 58-1 throw, bettering runnerup Johnny Walker of San Angelo by 6-7. Allan Foret nipped Derrick White of Lubbock Estacado by .07 with an 11.02 first in the 100. MHS sprinter Terry McGowan was third with an 11.17.

Chris Rooker took second in the high jump with a 6-5.

"IT'S HARD to know how we'll do," said Mitchell of her injury-plagued girls' unit. "We're erratic. Theresa Simmons had the best throw today in the discus, but scratched twice and threw one out of bounds."

Simmons, who has notched the district's best throw thus far in 1984, had become another victim of misplaced luck.

It happens. In Foret's winning 100, he leaned into the finish line to erase any doubts as to who had won. Crossing, he fell forward and received a nasty scrape on his left shoulder.

Williams doesn't need to see Foret taking spills. A back ailment had caused Foret, another injury victim, to sit out the past two weeks. "I'm still not in good shape," said the sprinter. "My back's still hurting."

It is a young team Williams has built to carry the MHS track hopes. Seniors Randall Swindell and Ross Petree are rarities on this edition of the purple and gold: seniors. "There are a lot of sophomores on the team," said Swindell, "We have a lot of good athletes at Midland High, even though Lee gets most of the students."

Petree, also suffering an injury in the form of a bruised foot, has felt the inconsistency of a young team, too. "Last week I scored 23 points, this week four. That's real consistent. There are a lot of young guys, and we haven't been able to keep together. We'll figure it out by district." Petree took fourth in the 800 meters.

Freddie Goodman is one of the super sophs, and he nabbed third in the 400 meters. Sophomore Michael Eaden is optimistic: "We're getting better every week."

In junior varsity competition, MHS' second place total was encouraging because Muleshoe competed a varsity team in the division. Steve Mizzles won the shot put with a 43-4 throw. Jason Fuller took second in the 400 with a 53.59 clocking behind Coronado's Ty Barron (52.99). The team also finished .35 out of first nehind Estacado in the 400 meter relay.

Midland High visits Monahans in its next competition at the Sandhills Relays this weekend. MHS and Williams at least has the spring break to recover a little and try to avoid injury problems.

Caulkins claims 12th NCAA title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Junior Tracy Caulkins of Florida set an NCAA and meet record Saturday and claimed her 12th individual NCAA title Saturday by winning the 200-yard butterfly at the Division I women's swimming and diving championships.

Caulkins was timed in one minute, 55.55 seconds as she won her fourth individual championship during the three-day meet at the Indiana University Natatorium.

With only two events left in the meet, Texas held a commanding 62-point lead over defending champion Stanford, 362-300. Florida was third with 253 points, followed by Southern California at 212.

Caulkins, the 21-year-old swimming star from Nashville, Tenn., won two medley races and the 100 breaststroke earlier in the meet, in addition to swimming on a relay team that won while establishing an American record.

Her time in the butterfly was more than a second quicker than the record of 1:56.71 set by Mary T. Meagher of California last year. Meagher did not defend her title this year, having dropped out of school to concentrate on preparing for the Los Angeles Olympics.

Earlier, junior Marybeth Linzmeier of Stanford won her third consecutive title in the gruelling 1,650-yard freestyle.

Linzmeier finished 10 seconds ahead of her nearest challenger in 16 minutes, 2.38 seconds — just .04 seconds slower than her winning time in 1982 when she began her streak in the distance race.

"The first 500 felt really smooth," said Linzmeier after winning her eighth individual gold in NCAA action. "If I had been pushed, I would have been able to go faster and get the record."

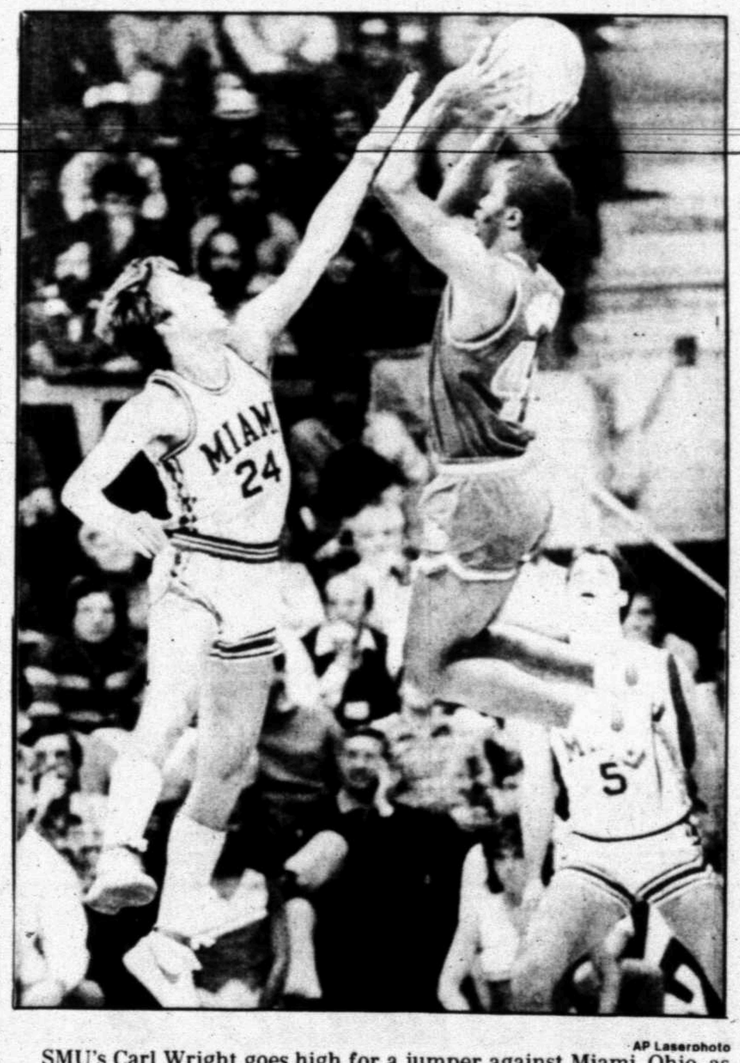

The 5-foot-11, 140-pounder said she possibly made a mistake in going out quick.

"I probably should have relaxed a little more in the first 100," she said. "I was starting to hurt in that last 500 and had to work to keep my elbows in."

Freshman Agneta Eriksson helped Texas in the opening final of the night with a first in the 100 freestyle. Eriksson, who expects to be representing her native country of Sweden in the Olympics this summer, finished ahead of Southern California's Sue Habernigg by just .03 seconds, with the winner finishing in 49.63.

"I'm the first woman from Sweden to win a national race in the United States," said Eriksson after her career-best time. "I came to the United States because I thought it would help my development. It's much harder swimming here. There are more tough people to swim against. And the training is much harder."

Another freshman, Susan Rapp of Stanford, set a meet record of 2:12.84 in winning the 200 breaststroke, finishing nearly three seconds ahead of runner-up Kathy Treible of Florida.

Rebels 2-0 in 4-5A after win over Bobcats

There wasn't much clutch hitting. We left too many (nine) on base. We were lucky to win, again. We had good relief pitching. Small didn't pitch bad, we just did a butcher job behind him on defense."

San Angelo coach Rex Scofield was surprised at Lee's six errors and was pleased with his team's performance despite the loss.

"We played the best game we've played in our last few games," said Scofield. "We've made some errors in the past. Today we played with some intensity. I thought we played better defense than they did today. They bobbled the ball a few times. Normally, you have to beat Lee. They don't beat themselves. They didn't today but could have."

STEVE WOODLEE led the Lee attack with a 3-for-4 performance and scored one run. He is now 4-for-6 on the year for a .667 batting average. Woodlee, after a pre-district effort that saw power hitting produce a grand slam to set up the victory over Dallas Thomas Jefferson in the Tournament of Champions, is back to his '83 form: hitting singles.

"It's the situation," said Woodlee. "These count for the district and you don't hit the same. In pre-district you're trying to find yourself. Also, you just try to move runners over, score one run at a time. If you need a lot of runs you get more extra base hits."

Johnson isn't complaining. He'll take as many singles as he can get. They, too, add up to victories, even those that aren't as pretty as others.

"We're tickled to death to win this one," said Johnson. "It wasn't a very auspicious win for our home debut. We had a good crowd, the weather was warm, and the popcorn was good. I'm not sure how we won though."

Rob Walker and Willis each added two hits for Lee while five others collected at least one. For San Angelo, Hoppe went 2-for-4, including a double, to be the only Bobcat with more than one hit.

The victory gives the Rebels a 2-0 4-5A record; 9-3 overall. San Angelo is now 0-2. On Tuesday Lee travels to Abilene to face the AHS Eagles at 4 p.m.

Granny hits track jackpot

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — A 78-year-old grandmother, making her first visit to a race track, won a Santa Anita pick six record $313,929.60 after purchasing a $2 ticket.

Two tickets were sold Friday on the winning combination, swelled by a two-day carryover, but Alberta Gearin of Sweet Home, Ore., was the only one to immediately cash in the ticket.

"I've never been to a horse race in my life," said Mrs. Gearin, who was vacationing with family in Bellflower, Calif.

"I've never won a thing in my life," added Mrs. Gearin. "Oh, I did win $180 one night playing bingo."

Permian edges Rebels in track

"This is what happens when you have a young team," said Lee assistant Eddie Wolski. "They won at Odessa last week and thought the world was ours. I kept telling them that we are behind Permian about three weeks."

Since Permian eliminated themselves in the 1600 relay, Lee could have won the meet by running Brackens in the 400 and dropping him from the relay. But that is hindsight, as this particular meet should be.

But Andrews was all smiles in the 4A Division, posting 207½ to win easily over Lovington, N.M., who had 104.

Andrews' Randy Friemel had the best effort of the day, posting a 6-10 in the high jump, a new meet record.

"My previous best was 6-7½," said Friemel. "I guess this was just my day, but I was a little worried in the warmups since I missed 5-8 twice. The wind bothered me a little and I've had problems with a knee and shin. I quit after clearing 6-10 because I was just too tired to go higher."

Odessa High won the girls division with 130 points while Lovington had 113 and Andrews 104. Andrews' LaYana Maxie set a record of 15.3 in the 110 hurdles and Charlotte Jones won the long jump. Odessa High's Kerry Evans set a record 25.70 in the 200.

Lee ran away with the junior varsity division with 159 points while Odessa High and Hobbs tied for second with 81.

Lee won seven events with Odell Samuels, high jump (6-2, a new division record); Carl Long, 3200 and 1600; 400 relay; Nober Morales, 110 hurdles; Lonnie Dixon, 100; and Tracy Colvin, 200.

In the 5A division, Odessa High's Reggie Jones set a meet record with a 13.8 in the 110 hurdles. Lee's Harold Woods was second.

Lee's David Jackson had a personal best in the discus with a 158-0½, finishing second to OHS' Joe Terry.

Utah rips Mavericks

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 40 points and Mark Eaton blocked 12 shots as the Utah Jazz downed Dallas 118-103 Saturday night and moved 1½ games ahead of the Mavericks in the NBA's Midwest Division.

Rolando Blackman scored 29 points to lead Dallas. Mark Aguirre, locked in a battle with Dantley for the league scoring title, could manage only 15 points.

Rickey Green contributed to the Utah victory with 16 points, nine assists and four steals.

The Jazz broke open a tight game at the outset of the fourth period. Leading just 80-76 going into the quarter, Utah outscored the Mavs 13-0 in the first 4½ minutes of play and it was never close after that.

Sutton throws caution to wind

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Hal Sutton, who surged through an opening provided by Greg Norman and took the third round lead, had one dominant thought going into Sunday's final 18 holes of the $400,000 Bay Hill Classic.

"I'm in no position to play conservatively," said Sutton, who took the PGA title and led golf's money-winners in 1983.

"I've had my little spill doing that," Sutton said. "I found out that six shots wasn't enough."

That was a rueful reference to last year's Anheuser-Busch Classic in Williamsburg, Va., when Sutton blew a six-stroke lead in the final round, shot a 77 and finished third.

This time, his lead is just one stroke.

And, said veteran Ray Floyd, that may be good enough.

"Hal is playing awfully well," Floyd said. "I've played with him several times in the last few weeks, and he's playing very, very well. If he continues that, somebody will have to go out and take it away from him. He won't give it away."

Sutton, however, noted that "you can make some mistakes out there" on Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill course.

And there was ample evidence to illustrate that point.

Norman, the white-haired Australian who tied the course record and took a three-stroke lead with a 62 in Friday's play, made double bogey on the second hole, then made double bogey again after a lost ball on the fourth.

"Golf," said the undisturbed Norman, "always is a humbling game."

It was the opening Sutton needed. He made up four strokes on Norman in four holes, took the lead alone on the eighth, birdied the 10th and brought it home on a string of pars that was good enough to retain his position atop the standings.

He finished with a no-bogey round of 67 and completed 54 holes in 203, 10 shots under par.

Norman, who shook off that double dose of disaster early in the round, made a great birdie from the rough on the 18th that finished off a round of par 71 and a 54-hole total of 204.

George Burns was another shot back at 205 after a hard-won 69 that included five birdies.

Ray Floyd and Sammy Rachels were next at 206, three shots off the pace. Floyd bogeyed two of the last three holes for a 70. Rachels had a 68.

They were followed by Bernhard Langer of West Germany, 69-207, and Nick Faldo of England, 68-208. South African veteran Gary Player, Bruce Lietzke and Gary Koch were at 209. Player and Lietzke had 68s, Koch a 72.

Tom Watson, with a third consecutive 70, was seven shots back and apparently out of title contention at 210.

Masters champ Seve Ballesteros of Spain had a 68 and was 1-under-par at 212. Palmer was 74-217.

Jack Nicklaus, who had made double-bogey on the 17th hole for two consecutive days, got past that trouble this time. But he made double-bogey on the 18th where he hit his second in the water. Nicklaus finished with a 73 and was out of it at 214.

Norman, winner of 31 tournaments around the world but still seeking his first American tour title, was a three-shot leader before his pair of double bogeys.

"I hit two bad shots that deserved to be punished," he said.

Johnson, Massey tie for lead at Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Chris Johnson fired a 6-under-par 66 on her home course Saturday to lift her into a tie with Debbie Massey after three rounds of the $150,000 Tucson Conquistadores LPGA Open.

Johnson, a 25-year-old Tucson native and winner of last week's Samaritan Turquoise Classic in Phoenix, now has a 10-under-par 206 total on the 6,346-yard Randolph North Golf Course in the quest for the $22,500 top prize.

Massey carded a 4-under 68 for her 206 total. She bogeyed the par-4 17th hole to drop into a tie with Johnson, who drilled in a 15-foot birdie putt on No. 15 and a six-footer on the 18th.

Lauri Peterson, eagling the par-5 18th, shot a 2-under par 70 and is at 207 after 54 holes, while Becky Pearson is at 208 after shooting a 3-under 69.

Friday's co-leaders Patty Sheehan and Ayako Okamoto of Japan are at 209 and 210, respectively. Sheehan blew to a 1-over 73 Saturday while Okamoto was at 2-over 74.

Defending champion Jan Stephenson had a 68 and is five strokes off the pace at 211. First-round leader Kathy Whitworth ballooned to a 75 and is eight strokes behind with a 214 total.

Jordan sets two Midland records

AUSTIN — Midland High sprint specialist Andrew Jordan set two school records and is under consideration for High School All-American in two events from his performance in the State Swim Meet here Saturday at the Texas Swimming Center.

"Jordan set two school records in the prelims (on Friday) and rebroke them again in the finals," said MHS swim coach Jesse Marsh. "He made two mistakes in the 50-free or he would have won it. He finished exactly three-tenths of a second from winning. He made a mistake on the start and one at the turn. Most kids wouldn't have placed that high with two mistakes."

In the 50 free, Jordan finished in fourth place in a time of 21.44. He placed fifth in the 100 free at 47.47.

Mike Seay, the only senior at state this year for Midland High, placed 12th in the 100 butterfly in a personal best time of 53.51.

UIL Swimming

The boys 400 free relay team finished in 12th place in the finals with a time of 3:20.37. Swimming the relay were: Rickey Perkins, Seay, David Hartman and Jordan. The relay prelim time of 3:19.49 on Friday was a new school record.

"I'm very pleased," said Marsh. "All the kids had their best times, every kid on the relay. We even timed our alternate John Brenner and he had his best time."

The state swimmers for Midland High, except for Seay, will all be back for at least one more year. Jordan, Brenner and Hartman are juniors while Perkins is a sophomore.

"We're picking up a couple of real good kids so we should be real strong next year too," said Marsh.

Frogs in sweep; Bears, Hogs split

From Wire Reports

FORT WORTH — Mike Ramsey tripled and scored on an error in the bottom of the eighth in the nightcap as Texas Christian swept Texas Tech 10-3 and 3-2.

TCU tied it, 7-7, in the sixth of the first game, scoring three runs on three hits, including Donnie Millender's lead-off home run.

In the top of the seventh, Wes McKenzie blasted a Brian Ohnoutka fastball over the left field fence, giving Tech the lead, 8-7. Tech added another run in the inning.

Millender and Jeff Shafer, who drew walks and advanced on a sacrifice by Stuart Stark, scored to tie it, 9-9, on Johnny Morgan's blast to the fence.

Glenn Caperton walked two more to load the bases and was relieved by Keith Wood. Wood went the full count on Darrin Roberts, and the last pitch of the game missed on the outside corner of the plate.

Mark Strickland, 2-0, took the win for the TCU. Caperton, 1-2, was the loser for Tech.

Brian Ohnoutka, 2-0, shut down Tech in the ninth to record the win for TCU. Rod Simon, 2-1, took the loss, going the distance for Tech.

TCU is now 12-5 overall and 2-0 in the SWC. Tech is 14-11 and 0-2.

Todd's game winner came off Howard Hilton, Arkansas' third pitcher in the inning.

Kenneth Patterson, 4-2, went the distance for Baylor. The Razorbacks, now 16-3 and 2-1 in conference, also scored three times in the fifth on RBI singles by Mike Bertotti and Jim Ward.

In the nightcap, Mark Berry's four hits led the Razorback hitting attack off four Baylor pitchers. Don Dumas, 2-3, took the loss for Baylor in relief.

Swindell hurls no-hitter

AUSTIN (AP) — Freshman pitcher Greg Swindell fired a no-hitter to whip Texas Wesleyan 12-0 in the first of two baseball contests between the Longhorns and the Rams.

Swindell faced just one man over the limit in Texas' seven-inning win in the opener. Second baseman Bill Bates led the 14-hit Texas attack with an inside-the-park home run.

Texas won the second contest 13-3 behind the efforts of another Houston freshman. Rusty Richards hit two home runs to lead Texas to its 26th win of the year.

Sophomore Alvin Franklin scored 21 points, while All-American Akeem Olajuwon scored 16, grabbed 12 rebounds and blocked four shots as Houston turned back Louisiana Tech. Michael Young also contributed 16 points as Houston, gunning for its third straight Final Four appearance, won for the 13th time in its last 14 games.

THE COUGARS pulled away from a 54-50 lead with 7:32 remaining. Olajuwon returned after sitting out three minutes because of foul trouble and Houston promptly went on a 11-2 tear as Ricky Winslow hit for seven of the points, including two slam dunks. Karl Malone and Rennie Bailey topped the losers with 18 points each.

"It was hard for us to get it inside because of Olajuwon," said Tech Coach Andy Russo. "He took it away from us. He altered our shots."

Houston will meet Memphis State in the Midwest semifinals. The Tigers trounced Purdue as Keith Lee scored 29 points to the delight of the capacity crowd of 11,200 in Memphis' Mid-South Coliseum. Lee was 7-of-8 from the floor and 5-of-5 at the foul line in the first half when Memphis State led 37-22. Purdue got 14 points from Jim Rowinski.

Roosevelt Chapman, Dayton's all-time scoring leader, had a career-high 41 points as the Flyers added Oklahoma to its list of tournament victims, which also includes Louisiana State. Chapman scored 10 points on free throws in the final 4:47 as Dayton forged an 11-point lead and survived an Oklahoma rally.

All-American Wayman Tisdale, only a sophomore, scored 36 points and became Oklahoma's all-time scoring leader, surpassing Alvan Adams' 1,707 points from 1972-75. Dayton outscored the Sooners 17-9 early in the second half and went up 59-48 with 14:04 to play.

"I feel that I'm an All-American also," said Chapman. "In this game, I had a chance to show it."

Nevada-Las Vegas got 14 points from Ed Catchings, 13 each from Richie Adams and Danny Tarkanian, and took advantage of cold shooting by UTEP. The Runnin' Rebels out-scored the Miners 16-6 to build a comfortable 44-32 lead with 13:21 left in the game. UTEP, which shot only 30 percent in the first half, was led by Luster Goodwin's 16 points.

Meyer begins Farewell, Phase II

By The Associated Press

Coach Ray Meyer begins Phase II of his goodbye to college basketball Sunday — and he's not all that pleased having to send his fourth-ranked DePaul Blue Demons against Illinois State in the NCAA Midwest Regionals with so little preparation.

Meyer, who concluded Phase I eight days ago with a 64-49 victory over Marquette that brought to an end his 42nd regular season at DePaul, has had his biggest problems in the Blue Demons' opening games in the NCAA tournament in recent years, losing the first one each time. He blamed first-round byes then — and DePaul had one this year, too.

"People consider a first-round bye an advantage," Meyer said. "However, they forget we never have the opportunity to prepare for an opponent until one day before our game. I really believe the hardest game in a regional is the first game because you can't prepare for your opponent."

The Blue Demons go into the second round with a 26-2 record to the 23-7 record held by Illinois State, which nipped Alabama 49-48 in the first round.

DePaul isn't as unfamiliar with Illinois State as it might be. The Blue Demons beat the Redbirds 69-66 last Dec. 3 for Meyer's 700th career coaching victory.

Sunday's other NCAA Midwest second-round game is Wake Forest, 21-8, vs. Kansas, 22-9. In the West Regionals, it's second-ranked Georgetown, 29-3, vs. Southern Methodist, 25-7, and Duke, 24-9, vs. Washington, 23-6.

In the East, it's Arkansas, 25-6, vs. Virginia, 18-11, and Syracuse, 22-8, vs. Virginia Commonwealth, 23-6. The Mideast games are Tulsa, 27-3, vs. Louisville, 23-10, and Illinois, 24-4, vs. Villanova, 19-11.

Saturday's second-round games were, in the East, North Carolina 77, Temple 66, and Indiana 75, Richmond 67; in the Mideast, Kentucky 93, Brigham Young 68, and Maryland 102, West Virginia 77; in the Midwest, Houston 77, Louisiana Tech 69, and Memphis State 66, Purdue 48; and in the West, Dayton 89, Oklahoma 85; and Nevada-Las Vegas 73, Texas-El Paso 60.

Unlike Meyer, Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy is delighted with a first-round bye given to his Demon Deacons in the regionals. "That was probably good for our team," he said. "We're not very big and we're not very deep. I think the fewer (games) we play, the better if we plan on going very far in this thing."

THE GEORGETOWN-SMU game matches a pair of 7-foot juniors, All-American Patrick Ewing of the Hoyas against little-known Jon Koncak of the Mustangs.

"I don't think Patrick knows how to spell my name, but I sure know how to spell his," said Koncak, who warmed up for Sunday's game with a career-high 32 points in SMU's 83-69 first-round victory over Miami of Ohio.

Koncak hasn't faced Ewing before — but he does play in the Southwest Conference and has faced Akeem "The Dream" Olajuwon of Houston, the nation's leading rebounder this season and a center right up there with the star of the Hoyas.

"I'm still not in a class with guys like Akeem and Patrick," he said, "but hopefully the gap is closing."

Duke, led by sophomore guard Johnny Dawkins' 19.4-point scoring average, faces the Washington front of West Germans Detlef Schrempf, a 6-9½ forward, and 7-foot center Christian Welp. Schrempf had 23 points and 13 rebounds and Welp 16 and 10 as the Huskies opened tournament play with a 64-54 victory over Nevada-Reno.

VIRGINIA Coach Terry Holland says the way to beat the eighth-ranked Razorbacks in the East Regional "is to combat their aggressive defensive pressure and get good shots. It will be very difficult. One of the keys to their defense is they take away what you want to do and force you to do something else."

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton called the Cavaliers "the best basketball team ever entered in the NCAA Tournament with the record they have." Virginia is 18-11.

The Cavs, like 23-6 Virginia Commonwealth, reached the second round by winning first-round games on shots in the final seconds, the Rams beating Northwestern 70-69 on guard Rolando Lamb's 20-foot jumper at the buzzer. Northeastern lost despite shooting 75 percent from the field, an NCAA tournament record.

"I don't know if I want to play a team that beat a team that shot 75 percent," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim. "For us to be successful, we like to run and we have to shoot well. But Northeastern found out that isn't necessarily the answer."

Louisville Coach Denny Crum, whose team reached the second round of the Mideast Regionals by beating Morehead State 72-59 Friday night, doesn't want to get caught up in Tulsa's pressure game. "We've got to do a good job handling their pressure," he said. "If we don't handle their pressure, they'll beat us.

"And we don't want to slow things down. But there's a difference between playing at a fast pace and hurrying. We have to be cautious about that. If we get to hurrying, we'll make a lot of mistakes."

Cubs come and go in Midland, but leave identity

How many do you remember?

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The Midland Cubs are opening spring training this week in Mesa, Ariz., preparing for the opening of the Texas League season in early April. George Enright, who managed here before, spent a couple of seasons managing in Class A and now returns for a second go round.

Midland has been a Chicago Cubs farm club since 1972, when the franchise was moved here from San Antonio.

Since then, not much water has passed under the West Texas bridge, but a lot of players have come and gone.

PICKED at random are five former Midland players, all but one still active, who in big league camps this spring, hoping to make an impression. Can you name them?

Starting from the left, this guy came out of Southern Illinois University with "can't miss" credentials. He played on the Midland Cubs' only Texas League champion and was called up late in the season and made an immediate hit as a centerfielder with his aggressive, daring play...and it didn't hurt that he knocked the cover off the ball.

He got national publicity. After all, he was a natural. He jumped off motel balconies into swimming pools and his nickname, Tarzan, of course. Unfortunately, after a few seasons commuting between Wichita and Chicago and three mediocre season at Oakland, he was gone and is now out of baseball....

BATTING NO. 2 in the photo lineup, he beat a steady tattoo of base hits, once collecting 14 hits in 15 trips for Midland. Born in Fort Walton Beach, Fla., this shortstop-second baseman attended the University of Toledo, Valencia Community College and Georgia Southern College.

Chicago never really gave him a chance, brief looks in 1981 and 1982, but before the 1982 season he was traded and became a key figure in the Chicago White Sox' runaway win in the American League West last year....

THE GUY in the middle made Dick Stuart, baseball's Mr. Stonefingers-Mr. Strangeglove of a decade ago look like a George Sisler. The 6-0, 190-pounder from Puerto Rico could hit, but in one game he made five errors at third base for Midland. The Cubs tried him at third, second, outfield and briefly at first as he hit 21 homers and knocked in 84 runs, but the question remained at the season's end—Where do we hide him on defense, Chicago isn't in the American League, you know?

In 1982, he found his position, one he had played back home before turning pro, and the Midland Cubs weren't hiding him. He was a nifty first baseman. He banged 27 homers, hit .334 and was promoted to triple-A Iowa last year and continued to amaze. Called up to Chicago at the season's end, he was so impressive, that some were wondering—Where are we going to play Bill Buckner next year?

A mid-winter trade to San Diego answered the question. It was a trade that made a lot of people back in Midland unhappy...

SCALP-HEAD, No. 4 in the order, was a good enough high school quarterback in San Francisco to get some scholarship offers from the WAC, but he picked baseball after being drafted in the 30th round. At Midland, in 1981, he batted .264, hit 10 homers and led TL catchers in putouts and assists.

Chicago thought enough of him to send a veteran player to Midland for a couple of months to work with the 6-2, 197-pounder on his defensive skills. Last year he moved up to Iowa and got a late season look from Chicago.

This spring, Chicago is giving him a look as a first baseman...

THE LAST batter, and the way he hits, that's where he belongs, played one season with Midland, 1980. He played for Eddie Stanky at South Alabama and came to Midland after catching part of the previous season with Boston, where he batted .169.

With Midland, he hit .243, but since leaving, he has played for Chicago and 111 games for Cincinnati in 1981, despite a .180 stick. However, major league talent hunters like his work enough behind the plate to keep him around. This spring he is in spring training with the Yankees...

Astro spring can't be as bad as 1983

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Spring training for the Houston Astros last year was enough to ruffle even the easy-going nature of Manager Bob Lillis.

Anything that could go wrong, went wrong.

Frequent rains kept the Astros from the hard workouts they needed to prepare for the season. The team won only three spring games, started the regular season with two starting pitchers on the disabled list and consequently lost their first nine games.

THE ASTROS rebounded to finish third in the National League Western Division behind Los Angeles and Atlanta. The resurgence has continued into spring training this year, leaving Lillis with having to solve only two key problems areas, catching and deciding on one starting pitcher.

"That's an over-simplification but those are two positions that will be in the heat of the battle as far as determining the final 25," Lillis said. "But everything has been going very smoothly.

"We didn't get this good work last year and it showed. The guys understand now that we have good conditions so we have to work long hard hours."

The Astros could open the season with only two new faces and an old face that returned.

CATCHER Tom Weighaus is a strong candidate to backup Alan Ashby and pitcher Jeff Heathcock could find a spot on the pitching staff. The Astros also signed Enos Cabell, who played for the Astros from 1975 through 1980 before he was traded to San Francisco.

Ashby is returning from a season of frustration that included injury, a hitting slump and criticism of his defensive qualities behind the plate. He hit .227 and had 13 errors in 85 games.

"But he's healthy now and he's improved," Lillis said. "We are expecting big things from Alan. We also have Weighaus, who looks like he can catch and throw."

In 1981, Knepper had a 9-5 record and the second best earned run average in the National League behind teammate Nolan Ryan. Knepper has had 5-15 and 6-13 records the past two seasons however.

"I think he's going to be much improved too," Lillis said. "He's really improved his unloading time to home plate with runners on base. That's something we're really working on this year."

THE REST of Houston's rotation will include Nolan Ryan, Joe Niekro and Mike Scott. Mike Madden also could earn a spot.

A key to the bullpen will be the continued progress of Joe Sambito, trying to comeback from elbow surgery, and Mike LaCoss, returning after off-season knee surgery.

The Astros also have Frank DiPino, Bill Dawley, Dave Smith, Vern Ruhle in the bullpen.

RYAN, WHO started last season on the disabled list along with Scott, is off to a fast start.

"He's pitching better at this stage of spring training than he ever has," Lillis said.

Lillis doesn't expect a repeat of last season's early season flop, but if it happens, there is a silver lining.

"We tried not to last year but one thing about it, if it happens again, we'll know low to handle it," Lillis said.

Cubs release Fergie; 300-bid in jeopardy

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Former Cy Young Award winner Ferguson Jenkins, conceding the "handwriting was on the wall," was given his unconditional release Saturday by the Chicago Cubs, throwing into doubt his quest to reach the 300-win plateau.

"It was inevitable, I think," said Jenkins, who stands just 16 victories shy of the 300 wins attained by just 16 other major leaguers. "My performance last year wasn't all that great (a 6-9 record and a 4.30 earned run average)."

Jenkins — who won 20 or more games six straight years for the Cubs from 1967 to 1972 and was awarded the Cy Young in 1971 — added, "The handwriting was on the wall. You can't close the door on foreseen things.

"I have played 22 years of baseball," he continued. "It's been fun."

Jenkins, in 19th place on the all-time win list and considered by many a future Hall of Fame selection, did not say whether he would try to catch on with another ballclub.

His only immediate plans, he added, were to return to his farm in Chatham, Ontario, in Canada and spend some time with his family.

THE 40-YEAR-old right-hander, who posted a 286-226 mark in 18 major league seasons with five different ballclubs, was scheduled to pitch Saturday's exhibition against the Cleveland Indians when he received the news.

"Fergie's had an outstanding career in baseball and with the Chicago Cubs," General Manager Dallas Green said, "and we felt that if there was any chance whatsoever of his continuing to pitch in the major leagues, a release at this time ... would be in his favor.

The Cubs acquired Montreal Expo right-hander Scott Sanderson during the off-season. Sanderson, Dick Ruthven and Chuck Rainey were set in the starting rotation, with Jenkins, Dickie Noles, Steve Trout and Rick Reuschel expected to battle for the fourth spot.

"We felt that our pitching staff was lining up to the point that Fergie probably would be pushed back," added Green, "and we felt that his release at this time was the best way to handle a difficult situation."

JENKINS BEGAN his baseball career with the Philadelphia organization in 1962, and moved up to the parent club in 1965. He joined the Cubs in 1966, starting his 20-game win string the following year.

He won the Cy Young on the strength of a 24-13 mark and 2.77 ERA in 1971.

Have you ever wondered why your refrigerator at home makes a noise when turned on, but the refrigerator in your R.V. is quiet? The difference is in the type of cooling process. The home refrigerator uses a compressor, whereas the R.V. refrigerator is an absorption unit ... pulling the heat from the box and leaving cold air in its place. R.V. refrigerators cannot be recharged like the home unit. The cooling coil is a sealed unit and if bad, must be replaced. The beauty of the R.V. refrigerator is that it can operate on LP gas or electricity ... making camping with the convenience of home easy.

Billy Sims Trailer Town, 520 E. 2nd, Odessa, has Dometic Refrigerators in stock and on display for your shopping convenience. We're open Mon.-Fri. 9 to 6 and on Saturday 9 to 5. If you've a question regarding the present refrigerator in your R.V. feel free to come by ... We're always happy to be of service.

If you can smell amonia or see a yellow residue on the back side of the refrigerator ... its a good clue that your coil is going out. (It Is "Money In The Bank" to take advantage of extended warranties when available on large items such as refrigerators and air conditioners.)

Oxford-Cambridge race delayed

LONDON (AP) — The 130th university boat race between Oxford and Cambridge was postponed for 24 hours Saturday after an unprecedented accident wrecked the Cambridge boat.

The race was called off less than 20 minutes before it was due to get under way on the River Thames in Putney.

Shortly after taking to the water for a final practise session, the West German-made craft, valued at some $10,150, smashed into the thick mooring rope of a stationary tug.

The bow section of the streamlined, yellow boat was completely torn away and sent shooting into the air, while the crew tumbled overboard into the murky, chilly water as the shell split practically in half.

None of the nine oarsmen was hurt and all reached the shore shaken but safe.

"We hit it straight on. There was a rumbling and a scraping and the next thing we knew the boat was full of water," said American Steve Berger of the Cambridge crew.

"Everything was taken out of our control and the boat began to go down very fast. The water was bloody cold."

Berger and his crew managed to pull the two sections of the boat ashore but it was rendered totally unusable.

Without Abbott, Costello would never have gotten to first base.

Teamwork was the name of the comedy game for Abbott and Costello and it kept generations of television viewers laughing. After all, what is a funny guy without a straight man?

Duke finally makes it

FALLBROOK, Calif. (AP) — "Hey, look at this," Duke Snider said as he strode across his sun-splashed patio. "Seats from Ebbets Field.

"I mentioned to a guy last year that I'd love to have one, and one day, here they were. Look here, some guy even carved his initials."

Sitting on those blue benches, it is easy to imagine Snider the "Duke of Flatbush," playing center field for the Brooklyn Dodgers. He did it with such grace and style that Duke was not so much a nickname, but a title.

Duke Snider....Seats from Ebbets Field

Snider sent many of his 407 home runs into the Ebbets Field grandstands during an 18-year career capped in 1980 by his election to baseball's Hall of Fame. He laughed at the notion that one of his pokes might have landed in the very seats now resting on his patio.

His became a household name, as did Jackie Robinson, Pee Wee Reese, Roy Campanella, Gil Hodges and others among Dodger teammates. These were the "Boys of Summer," the team that gave birth to the phrase, 'Wait 'til next year.'

Even now, 20 seasons after his retirement, the 57-year-old Snider said, he receives some 5,000 letters a year from fans.

"I thought that when I quit playing that I'd more or less be forgotten," he said. "But the team I played for was the reason I wasn't. I think we were the sentimental choice of the whole baseball world — unless you were a Yankee fan — because we'd never won a world's championship.

"I think the whole baseball world was happy when we finally beat the Yankees in 1955. There was a ticker-tape parade from Yankee Stadium all the way back to Brooklyn. It was like the end of World War II.

"We didn't realize, when we were going through all that, that it would be such a great part of baseball history. Jackie came in 1947, the first black to be allowed to play baseball, and then Campanella and (Don) Newcombe followed and opened the door for the black player. We didn't realize just how important these things were."

In that simpler time, every park had grass on the field and its own personality, and the players thought of little but the game. Snider has seen a lot of changes in his 14 years as a baseball broadcaster, the last 11 with the Montreal Expos.

"We were a team. We thought like a team. There was no professional jealousy, and there is that today," he said. "Of all the conversations we had as teammates, I can't remember anyone ever mentioning salaries.

"We could have held out. We could have demanded more money. But we were anxious to get to spring training. It was like going back to school, to see your friends.

"You'd think nothing about seeing 15 of us out to dinner together. Now they rush out of the clubhouse, two going this way, two going that way, a lot of them just going right up to their rooms. Pee Wee used to say, 'You rush in and out of the clubhouse, you rush in and out of baseball.'"

Net pros coming to RHCC

USTPA to hold doubles tournament

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Ranchland Hills Country Club will host Midland's first national professional tennis tournament April 12-15 at the United States Professional Tennis Association's First Bankers Trust and Southwest Airlines Love Doubles Championships.

The USTPA, an organization of teaching pros, has endorsed the tourney which features a $15,000 purse and whose proceeds benefit the American Heart Association.

Among the 32-team field competing in the tourney are several former collegiate All-Americans and international Davis Cup competitors, including the duo of Jorge Andrew and Victor Reimer. They are making the improbable trip from Caracas, Venezuela to Midland, Texas in quest of a $3,000 first prize.

"The USPTA is ecstatic," said RHCC tennis pro Terry Bobbitt, who organized the event. "They can't believe the package we've put together and we haven't even hit a ball yet."

Current U.S. Davis Cup coach Arthur Ashe, a pretty good player in his prime, even got wind of the event and as a past Heart Association campaign chairman backed the tourney. Bobbitt lined up sponsorships for everything from air fare and accomodations from Southwest and Holiday Inn, to four free cases of tennis balls.

"The reception from every corner has been excellent," said Bobbitt of the initial Midland national match. "We had to turn down some very good teams, and I think we could have had 48-50 total. Our management has been very supportive and enthusiastic."

Bobbitt has rattled a few cages in Midland since arriving at RHCC, and according to him, all efforts have been towards strengthening Midland's tennis base. "If John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors were out here on court one, it doesn't do any good if people don't come to watch. I guarantee them that short of going to a Grand Prix tournament, this will be the best tennis they will see and it's free. All they have to do is drive out here.

The tourney is free and open to the public, and the sponsorship has provided prizes of air travel, merchandise, food, and other things for a raffle that will benefit the AHA. Raffle tickets are available from Bobbitt or the AHA.

In dianapolis wants Saints

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints have been contacted by people who want to bring an National Football League franchise to Indianapolis, and the Saints' talks with the Louisiana Superdome have broken off, a New Orleans newspaper reported Saturday.

In a column by Bob Roesler, executive sports editor, the New Orleans Times Picayune, The States Item, quotes the Saints' president, Eddie Jones, as confirming that "we had a contract with Indianapolis."

But Jones said, a proposal to move was never discussed. "We didn't get into anything you would term a lucrative offer," he said.

"We pointed out to the people that we have a contract here and intend to stay here. We are negotiating our lease with the Dome stadium," he said.

Then, however, he added that talks with the Superdome have broken off.

"They turned down what we feel is our bottom-line proposal so we are through talking," Jones said.

"It is difficult to tell you what we are going to do. The unfortunate part about it is there will be a lot of press, then we are going to get more calls from other places. A lot of places want teams."

Jones said John Mecom, the Saints' owner, does not want the team to leave New Orleans. "It's probably going to be a short-term legal fight. Beyond that, I don't know what it is going to be.

Cliff Wallace, president of Facility Management of Louisiana and the Dome's general manager admitted that he and Jones are at an impasse, but said, "I am still very optimistic that we are going to get it worked out."

The Saints are in the final year of a 10-year contract with the Dome. They pay 10 percent of gross ticket sales as rental plus gameday expenses and they are renting two box suites and executive and ticket offices.

The New Orleans Breakers, a United States Football League franchise that moved from Boston this year, pays 7 percent on gross ticket sales plus one percent of all television revenue for the 10-year life of their contract. They also pay gameday expenses based on attendance.

With two pro team tennants, the Dome was able to give the Breakers a better deal, Wallace said.

Texas Rangers

Rader wants to eliminate fizzle

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Manager Doug Rader watched with dismay last season as the Texas Rangers' first-half sizzle turn into a second-half fizzle.

Rader made managing look easy in the first half of his rookie season when the Rangers built a 44-36 record and led the American League's Western Division by two games.

That was the sizzle.

"WHAT HAPPENED was we had a great deal of success with California, Oakland and Seattle right before the All-Star break," Rader said. "It was possibly an inflated situation because at that time those particular ball clubs weren't playing particularly well and we were playing as well as we could play."

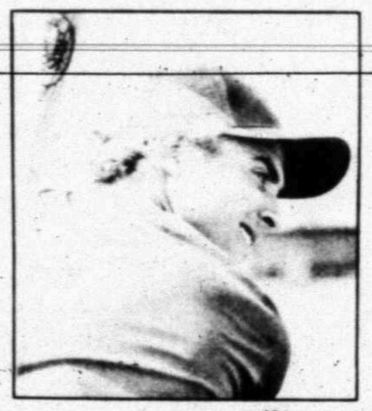

Then came the fizzle.

The Rangers lost 21 of their next 26 games and faded back into the pack, finishing third in the final standings.

"We didn't play any differently the first half or the second half," Rader said. "We just got out-horsed at one period in the second half when we played what I considered the best teams in the league.

"After the All-Star break we went to Toronto, which was playing very good and we got swept there and then we ran into New York, Milwaukee, Toronto and Baltimore and we just couldn't score enough runs to compete with them.

"We had a horrible July and after that we pulled ourselves together and played well but in July, playing against those top caliber of ball clubs, we just got our socks blown off."

Pete O'Brien
...first base hopeful

Despite their second half tailspin, the Rangers improved 13 games from 1982 with strong pitching and defense. But they couldn't score runs and finished with a .255 team batting average.

THE RANGERS acquired Gary Ward from Minnesota and Ned Yost from Milwaukee but better performances this season from first baseman Pete O'Brien and third baseman Buddy Bell are needed if the Rangers are to continue their improvement.

"We had a very difficult time scoring runs last year," Rader said. "We had to do something to get leverage off our strength, which is pitching. We feel Gary Ward is an accomplished hitter and will supplement our lineup.

Bell's .277 average last season was the lowest of his five-year Ranger career and O'Brien hit a disappointing .237 in his rookie season.

Rader also thinks his year's experience in dealing with his players will make him a better manager in 1984.

"I came in from another organization and wasn't familiar with the players," Rader said. "When you manage, you manage people, not just a team so the more familiar I become with the players the more I know what makes them tick and the better I become a manager."

Rader has named Charlie Hough his opening day pitcher followed by Dave Stewart, acquired from Los Angeles last season, Danny Darwin and Frank Tanana.

RADER MUST decide between Ward and Larry Parrish for his starting rightfield with the loser becoming the designated hitter.

Former New York Yankee shortstop Bucky Dent returns for his second season with the Rangers and Wayne Tolleson will be at second base. Billy Sample and George Wright return to their left and centerfield positions.

120 takes 1st in MCC golf

The team of Bill Martin, Jack Huff, Clem Ware and Richard Lamphere won Saturday's Midland Country Club golf tournament with a best two scores of the foursome total of 120.

Second place went to Wilson Comola, Jim Williams, Steve Merrit and Wayne Greenlee with a 122; third to John Philback, Ken Karr, Kerry Blair and Mark Hardwick, also with a 122; Darrell Pounds, George Irish, Jim Crowder and Sam Bakke finished fourth at 122 and Tom Welch, Charles Gaines, Wilber Rocchio and Gus Locker were fifth at 125.

New museum opens doors in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Dempsey's boxing gloves, Ty Cobb's baseball bat, a uniform worn by Babe Ruth, the shoes Jesse Owens wore the day he shattered three world records and tied a fourth. All are part of a most impressive collection that, not long ago, was in danger of being scattered to the winds.

Now, however, those items and some 50,000 other bits of memorabilia from sport's golden moments have a stately new home.

Last week, the First Interstate Bank Athletic Foundation formally opened the doors to the Britt House, a turn-of-the-century mansion near downtown Los Angeles that has been refurbished to into one of the finest sports museums in the world.

The opening marked the culmination of curator Bill Schroeder's dream. He, along with the late Paul Helms, a businessman-philanthropist, began the foundation as the Helms Athletic Foundation almost a half century ago.

When the oft-moved collection lost its sponsor in 1981 and was being boxed up to be donated to universities around the nation, Peter Ueberroth stepped in to save it.

Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, and his wife Ginny became the personal benefactors of the Athletic Foundation until a new sponsor could be found.

"I've visited about every other sports museum in the world, and this is the best," Ueberroth said. "And if anybody wonders about where the memorabilia from this Olympics is going to go ..."

The museum is divided into more than a dozen sections for different sports, with its Olympics display particularly noteworthy.

BOWLING BEAT

Love, Graham top bowlers for week

BY RANDY ISENBERG

Midlander Bob Love carded a high series of 692 with a 248 game recently at Dellwood Lanes. Love nipped Pat Brownfield (690) and Bob Thames (683) for league honors ending March 9 play.

In the Ladies Scratch Trio league at Regal Lanes, Patti Graham had 224 and 245 games en route to a 651 series to cop womens' honors for the week. In the process Rosie Urias' 617 series was no better than second. Sue Douglas finished third with a 615 set. Douglas had the high women's single game total of 266.

Among the men, David Porter's 267 was tops for the week.

The city bowling tournaments for men and women begin April 7-8 at Regal and Dellwood Lanes, with women's competition scheduled to conclude the weekend of April 14-15.

The mens' competition starts April 27-28 and runs for three weekends ending May 12-13. Entry forms are available at bowling centers.

NFL owners eye USFL

HONOLULU (AP) — National Football League club owners gather at Waikiki this week for their annual winter meeting, but the challenge of the United States Football League, shifting franchises and dealing with undergraduates will keep them from being lulled by the balmy tradewinds.

The NFL owners so far have avoided any policy changes in response to the new league, but the possibility of a supplemental draft of USFL players, or permitting the drafting of undergraduates, will be main topics of discussion at the meeting, which opens Sunday.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said a supplemental draft will be one of the many ideas league officials will discuss. But Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys and chairman of the NFL competition committee, said he doubts there will be any change.

"If teams want to pick players from the USFL, they can use any one of their draft choices, just as they did — as we did — last year," he said.

Schramm's committee met last week on Maui, and will make a recommendation on the draft issue.

A supplemental draft would allow NFL teams to go after USFL players when their contracts run out. It also would allow an NFL team to use all 12 of its picks in the regular college draft for players who have not signed professioanl contracts. Last year some teams used one or more picks on USFL players in hopes of future signings.

Paul Harvey is coming to Odessa

. . . and you're invited

Sunday, April 1. . . 3 p.m.

Holiday Inn Convention Center
6201 E. Hwy. 80 — East of Loop 338

When he says, "Stand by . . . for news!", Paul Harvey becomes the undisputed Voice of America for 20 million listeners, radio's largest audience today. Some 1,070 radio stations and 120 television stations broadcast his views. Over 300 newspapers publish his columns. More than a million people each year attend his speeches . . . like the coming appearance in Odessa.

Why? Because for citizens everywhere, Paul Harvey has become the quintessential American. For him, the entire U. S. is one giant hometown. He knows its people, its moods, its wants and needs, its strengths and weaknesses. Perhaps like no one else on the scene today, he articulates the soul of our nation . . . and when he speaks, even governments listen.

He can tickle your funnybone, prick your conscience, prod your ambitions, and soothe your frustrations . . . all in one five minute broadcast. Imagine what he can do in an hour, in person.

Better still, come see for yourself, April 1, when St. John's Episcopal School brings Paul Harvey to Odessa. For an afternoon you'll never forget, we suggest ordering tickets now. Many are already taken.

Tickets $25. No seats reserved.

Who's who here?

A casual observer can get a better understanding of where we are in the political year by observing a few subtle signs. The drop-outs are doing just that.

The primary elections and the caucuses already have revealed a number of truths:

1) Former Vice President Walter Mondale need not send his luggage to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue just yet.

2) U.S. Sen. Gary Hart definitely is using the correct brand of after shave lotion.

3) U.S. Sen. John Glenn certainly showed he possesses "the right stuff" — to be an astronaut and a senator.

4) The Rev. Jesse Jackson opened presidential politics to blacks, but he still doesn't have a prayer this year.

Glenn's decision this week to withdraw from the race for the Democratic nomination was yet another indication that it's later than a lot of voters may think. With "Super Tuesday" past and Mondale and Hart in what has been described as a horse-race for the nomination, there's little doubt that the complexion of the race has been better defined.

During coming months, the differences between the two Democratic front-runners will become more obvious and, hopefully, the discussion of issues will become more pointed.

With President Reagan maintaining a stronghold on conservatives and, potentially, a number of moderates, the race for the presidency promises to continue along a traditional line of conservatism versus resurrected liberalism. In that atmosphere and with the nation facing more economic hurdles in coming years, the mandate is for voters to make themselves fully aware of what President Reagan and each of the Democratic hopefuls can offer.

Presidential politics can prove spell-binding. During a weak moment almost any bill of goods can be sold to an uninformed public.

Voters who learn the issues and make themselves aware of the differences between the candidates will be aware that "Promises, Promises" is only a song.

Spelling a winner

Congratulations are in order for Paul Pickering of Goddard Junior High School who correctly spelled "claymore" Thursday and walked away as winner of Midland's 1984 Citywide Spelling Bee.

As the Tall City champion, young Pickering will go on to represent Midland at the regional spelling bee in Lubbock April 7. The competition will eventually lead to the national bee in Washington, D.C.

Pickering's accomplishment is no mean feat. Good spelling is a discipline which only results from study, practice, calmness and concentration, among other factors.

We salute not only the citywide spelling champion, but also the other 25 outstanding spellers who participated in the local spelling bee.

All those students earnestly attempting to improve their spelling skill are winners.

Another View:

Summertime chance

A sure harbinger of spring is the report that President Reagan will again seek legislation permitting employers to pay teenagers less than the minimum wage for summer work.

Last year the administration proposed a $2.50-an-hour level as compared with the legal minimum of $3.35. The House, under union pressure, said no, arguing that the 85-cent differential would cause some full-time workers to lose their jobs.

The argument makes little sense. It wouldn't be good business for an employer to fire a full-time worker who knows his job, then hire a teenager for three months, provide the training that even low-skill tasks require and do it for 85 cents an hour and with full knowledge that someone else will have to be hired when summer is over.

It is much more likely than an employer would consider teenagers as supplemental or seasonal help, the kind of help that he can do without but might be inclined to hire at lower pay.

Yet organized labor remains adamantly opposed to any reduction of the legal minimum wage. And the administration rightly contends there is a distinct connection between labor's attitude and the fact that there are more and more young people who have neither a marketable skill or work experience.

Understandably, labor's first loyalty is to today's jobholders but it is shortsighted to assume those jobholders can be protected by slamming and barring the door against the next generation of workers.

It isn't competition that the union leaders are shutting out, it is opportunity. That is bad policy, for workers and the nation.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, March 18, the 78th day of 1984. There are 288 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 18, 1970, letter carriers in New York City began a one-week strike that spread across the country.

On this date:

In 1776, George Washington took control of Boston after the British evacuated.

In 1782, the third vice president of the United States, John Calhoun, was born in Abbeville, S.C.

In 1837, the 22nd and 24th president of the United States, Grover Cleveland, was born in Caldwell, N.J.

In 1858, engine inventor Rudolf Diesel was born in Paris.

In 1965, a Soviet cosmonaut became the first man to leave an orbiting spacecraft and float in space.

And in 1980, President Jimmy Carter won Illinois' Democratic Primary, while Ronald Reagan took the Republican contest.

Ten years ago: The Arab oil countries — except Libya and Syria — ended their oil embargo against the United States.

Five years ago: National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski failed in his attempts to get Saudi Arabia and Jordan to back the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

One year ago: Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens told Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger that Israeli forces in Lebanon were under "strict instructions" to avoid incidents with American marines.

Today's Birthdays: Cardinal Lawrence Shehan, the former archbishop of Baltimore, is 86 years old. Actor Peter Graves is 58. Singer Charley Pride is 45. And actor Kevin Dobson is 40.

Thought for Today: "A friend is, one might say, a second self." — Cicero, Roman statesman (106-43 B.C).

ART BUCHWALD

Home isn't sweet home to Cratchit!

"Mr. Scrooge, thank you for appearing in front of the committee in regard to the confirmation of Her Majesty's Minister of Justice. We would like you to clear up some questions, please. When did you first get to know the nominee?"

"I never really did know the nominee personally, though I became a big admirer of his after he said there were no hungry people in England."

Art Buchwald

"Didn't you buy his house in Devonshire?"

"No, my employee Bob Cratchit bought his house in Devonshire."

"How did that come about?"

"Well, to the best of my recollection, someone in the Prime Minister's office contacted me and said the nominee had a house for sale in Devonshire and asked if I wanted to buy it. The home had been on the market for 20 months, and the Minister of Justice had already bought a house in Piccadilly. He was carrying two heavy mortgages, which was quite a burden, although the Marley Savings and Loan people were not pressing him for the money."

"Didn't that strike you as strange?"

"Not really. Banks never like to press someone who works that closely with the Prime Minister."

"So tell us what transpired, Mr. Scrooge."

"I didn't want the house myself, so I arranged for Cratchit to purchase it."

"Did your employee Bob Cratchit have the money to buy the house in Devonshire?"

"No, my Lord, I loaned him 70,000 pounds for a down payment and then arranged with the Marley Savings & Loan Company for a mortgage for Cratchit of 240,000 quid."

"At what interest?"

"I believe it was at 11 percent."

"Wasn't that a very low interest rate for a mortgage at that time?"

"Yes, my Lord, but I knew Cratchit had his heart set on the house, and I thought this would be a nice way to make up to him for what I had done to him in Christmases past."

"So then, Mr. Scrooge, Cratchit moved in the Devonshire house."

"No, he sold it nine months later at a loss."

"Why did he sell it?"

"I'm not sure. I believe Mrs. Cratchit didn't like the kitchen."

"When Cratchit sold the house at a loss after you went to all the trouble of loaning him the down payment, and arranging a very favorable mortgage, didn't you become very angry?"

"No, Bob's a very good employee and I value his services highly. If he wanted to sell the house at a loss that was his business."

"What about the 70,000 pounds you advanced Cratchit as a down payment?"

"I forgave the loan."

"Mr. Scrooge, our records show that you are a man not known to throw money away. Why would you forgive a 70,000 pound loan to a lowly employee?"

"The information you have on my frugality is not correct. Over the years I have become the victim of a bad press. The reason I forgave the loan was Cratchit has a crippled son, Tiny Tim, and the burden of paying it back would only have added to his worries."

"It's very strange you would go to all this trouble to bail out someone in the Prime Minister's office who you didn't even know. Did your appointment as Her Majesty's Undersecretary of Commerce have anything to do with your intervention in buying the Minister of Justice nominee's house?"

"Bah, humbug. I was selected for that position on my expertise as a merchant. If I thought helping someone high in the Prime Minister's office out of a financial fix would have anything to do with my appointment, I would have never taken the job."

"Thank you, Mr. Scrooge. Oh, one more question. Can you tell us if you ever saw the former Prime Minister's briefing book?"

JACK ANDERSON

Communism's fruits bitter

WASHINGTON — During the long and tragic U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia, the press — myself included — spotlighted the rampant corruption and incompetence of the South Vietnamese government. There were even some Americans who hailed the North Vietnamese, proclaiming that they would bring a housecleaning to the south and give the masses a chance to enjoy the fruits of their labors.

Jack Anderson

It is chastening to learn that the only changes in the South since the communist takeover have been for the worse. Corruption and incompetence still flourish in the government, religious persecution is increasing steadily, political freedom is non-existent and the workers get to keep even less of what they produce.

Western reporters have lost their interest in Vietnam since the communists seized control. But my associates Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson have learned what life is like in Vietnam today. They have interviewed refugees and international relief officials and have studied internal State Department files.

The picture that emerges is a depressing one: It explains why so many desperate Vietnamese are willing to risk the horrors of an escape by boat through pirate-infested waters to an uncertain future in a foreign country. For them, the unknown can't be worse than the known.

A recent State Department report, based on a survey of Vietnamese refugees in Thailand, makes this point: "Almost all Vietnamese interviewed gave economic hardship as a major reason for flight from their country." Some found life intolerable as "a native of a country in dire economic straits." Others were given a hard time because of "former political affiliations."

After decades of war, Vietnam's ravaged cities are in need of extensive reconstruction. Roads, bridges and power plants need rebuilding. But the government's conquest and occupation of Cambodia has drained the manpower and resources that could be put into reconstruction.

The Vietnamese economy is falling apart. The government's rigidly ideological policies are destroying not only the economy but the ancient traditions that once held the nation together. At the same time, communist officials have proven to be every bit as greedy for bribes as their capitalist predecessors.

"Citizens are caught between the rock and hard place of an inefficient, centrally planned economy and a rapacious black market," one government report notes. "High taxes, bribes to government cadre for routine services, confiscation of property, restrictions on economic activity, artificially low selling prices and declining utilities and transportation systems are among the many complaints voiced by the Vietnamese."

Another report states that "business taxation is so excessive that it is not feasible for small businesses to operate." For example, a modest, 1-meter (39.37 inches) commercial display sign is taxed the equivalent of $100 or more a month. Small businesses are lucky if they survive for a couple of months.

Major areas of the country are without such everyday amenities as electricity. The war-battered imperial capital of Hue, for example, has been without electric power for years.

The Vietnamese regime is building a huge hydroelectric dam in the South, and boasts that it is the largest project of its kind in Southeast Asia. The engineers are reported to be Soviets, while "laborers, mostly from Ho Chi Minh City and its surrounding area, are forced to volunteer labor for the project, including supplying their own food," one State Department report notes.

Vietnamese farmers, like those in other communist countries, have discovered that the regime considers them mere production workers existing for the state. Those who still own their own land are heavily taxed for the privilege. They must sell virtually all their crops to the government at artificially low prices — often for fertilizer instead of cash.

Beyond the food they subsist on, these farmers net perhaps $50 a year. At that, they're slightly better off than those who farm government-owned land for about 50 cents a day and get no share of the crops.

Fishermen are in the same depressed situation. Since 1982, all large, ocean-going fishing vessels have belonged to the government. The crew members earn about $10 a month.

One expert appraisal deplores the deterioration of education: "In the South, priorities have changed from emphasis on science, mathematics and technology to how to do well and how to speak well under the new government. Under-educated cadre often serve as teachers. As a consequence, educational standards have fallen drastically. Nevertheless, Northerners are now being sent to the South for instruction by Southerners in the field of technology."

Political repression is severe in the South. No criticism of the regime is permitted, and the government's spies are everywhere. Religious persecution, particularly against Catholics and Buddhists, has been stepped up recently.

Not surprisingly in these circumstances, nearly half the refugees interviewed in the State Department survey were able to give details of armed resistance and sabotage within the country. Guerrilla groups have been reported in at least nine provinces in the South.

GEORGE F. WILL

Koch giving candor bad name

NEW YORK — Unless you have a godlike indifference to opinion, or the insensitivity of a stump, political life, with its mandatory stateliness, requires the stressful repression of instincts. Paul Valery, the French critic, wrote: "What grimaces, what capers, leaps and chuckles prime ministers, presidents, and kings must indulge in, in the privacy of their bedrooms, so as to avenge their systems for the day-long strain imposed upon them." But if you are Ed Koch, New York's mayor, you chuck restraint and put your aggressions into print.

George F. Will

He has succeeded in making literature (very broadly construed) the talk of the metropolis. His book, "Mayor," sits atop the national best-seller list. Approximately 20 percent of all books sold in America are sold in the New York area, but that does not explain this phenomenon. Gary Hart complains that his ideas have been in book form ("A New Democracy") for a year without being examined, and publishers say that if you want to keep your political ideas a secret, put them between hard covers: Political books do not sell.

But a book that is a brawl? Koch does not subscribe to the axiom that one should personalize sympathies and depersonalize antipathies. We all need enemies because we all need alibis, and Koch the author has certainly seen to his supply of enemies.

As a friendly critic says, Koch has big ears and a thin skin. His voice, the voice of big city populism, is, as populism invariably is, raw. By the time he is done unstuffing his bosom of its pent-up contents, he has let fly against the most recent Democratic President, the current Democratic governor of New York and most of the pieties of contemporary liberalism.

He has withering things to say about affirmative action, public employees unions, "poverty pimps" (our mayor is a phrase-maker) and especially what he calls in conversation "arch-white-liberals" — a splendid contribution to social categories. If Reagan were an East Coast urban ethnic Democrat, and in an uncharacteristically rotten mood, this is what he might sound like.

Koch so exuberantly labels other people "wackos" that it is tempting to think that he is one. That is a sobering thought about a man whose budget ($17 billion) is the nation's fourth largest, behind Reagan's, California's and New York state's. But Koch is as gifted as any New York mayor since LaGuardia and is about as successful as a mayor can be in a city where 26 percent of the population is below the poverty line and more than 50 percent of the city's budget goes to the poor.

Koch says his book ("It's a scholarly work — it's got footnotes!") makes government understandable. Waving those arms of his — he was designed by the God of windmills — toward the ceiling of his office, he says his book "brings people into this room." But if he thinks the book is selling because the public yearns to understand the municipal government, he is, well, wacko.

People are reading it for the same reason that people slow down and gaze when driving past a wreck: Carnage is fascinating. Koch is unfailingly gracious to Koch (an aide calls the book "the greatest love story since Tristan and Isolde, but Ed Koch plays both parts"), but he is breathtakingly rude to the many "creeps" and "crazies" who have offended him by being "rotten" or "stupid" or fat or otherwise inadequate. Many of them are persons with whom he must continue to deal.

By any conventional understanding of the term, Koch's book is impolitic. But Koch believes — and who will now gainsay him? — that if the public praises "candor," then lay it on with a trowel. "I am going to run for the rest of my life — forever!" he says. Running and writing — American politics may never be the same. But will it be better if Kochism (Don Rickles as philosopher king) catches on?

Public life is not noticeably deficient in brutality and coarseness. And the measure of candor is not just a willingness to lacerate other people's feelings. Besides, kindness and honorableness are often good reasons for being less than candid. If confidences can not be kept, if every conversation is material for score-settling books, all but the coarsest people will flee from public life, and the civilities that lubricate the machinery of government will turn to dust.

Candor is an overrated virtue. A virtue of "Mayor" is that it, like Moliere's "Le Misanthrope," will give candor a bad name.

Teachers hold power to inspire, influence students

Bill Modisett

Teachers are composite people.

They are required to educate young minds and, hopefully, to instill in them an insatiable desire for an accumulated wealth of information.

But that's just the basic framework of a teacher's responsibility; their influence extends much further. They are the individuals who reinforce in young people the difference between right and wrong. They set an example of adult life that our youngsters either accept or reject; they are role models and as such vital links in our society.

If you don't think their influence is that substantial consider this: Chances are both parents work in your home. With society's time demands, that may mean parents spend only 12 hours or so each day with their children. Eight hours or more of that, the children are asleep and with the competition from television, video games and the like, and the necessity for study, that doesn't leave a parent a lot of time to exert a positive influence. Like it or not, after the age of six a child spends more time with educators than with parents.

In addition to educating, a teacher must be a disciplinarian, an entertainer, an antagonist, a leader, a friend and, possibly most importantly, psychologist.

On this page and the next today, a lot of readers give glimpses of the teachers who have been positive influences in their lives. I want to do the same because there have been many and their influence exists in stronger proportions today than ever before.

Mrs. Charles Kruse was my senior English teacher at Winters High School. It was her encouragement that instilled in me a love for reading and writing and gave me a vision of the worlds I could create with only a pen and paper.

Weldon Middleton, my biology and, later, chemistry instructor, expanded and shared my love for both the seen and the unseen worlds around us. He also was instrumental in instilling in me a recognition of self-worth.

Perhaps more than any other teacher, though, Mattie Cook touched my life and gave me a fuller understanding of what each of us must require of ourselves in order to expand our knowledge.

Miss Cook taught general math and algebra, two of my least favorite subjects. I rocked along through high school doing just what it took to get by in those required courses. I wasn't your stellar student, typically earning only a high C or low B on my report cards. That wasn't going to earn me any honors, but I was satisfied with it.

But in my first-year algebra class I slipped on the final exam and walked away with the highest score of any student. I had been a little worried that if I didn't do well on the test I would fail the course, so I had given it my all.

Mattie was furious! She scolded me: "Bill Modisett, I always knew you could do the work; you just didn't want to, did you?"

Well, the teacher had hit the nail on the head and in a couple of discussions that followed, she told me exactly what she would expect of me in future math courses. I was ashamed because I, too, had been well aware that my mathematical abilities were greater than my grades indicated.

Mattie had used an effective teaching tool on me. She made me recognize that I wasn't performing to the best of my ability and she let me know that although she wanted me to do better, I was the person being cheated by doing less than I could.

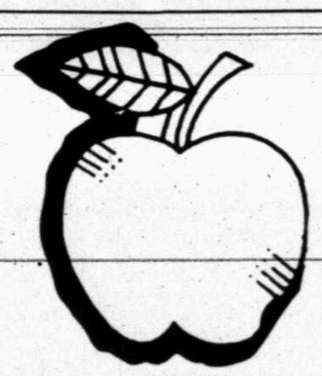

It worked. Oh, I knew I didn't want to pursue a career involving mathematics, but I also realized that my slovenly approach to math could affect my overall approach to life.

Mattie was a great teacher. As all great teachers, she demanded only my best — for myself.

If it's any consolation, she got it. When I took my college entrance exam, my second highest score was in mathematics.

'Favorite teachers' seen through eyes of pupils

Tuesday was Teacher Appreciation Day in the Midland Independent School District and in recognition of that observance the Reporter-Telegram invited letters from readers concerning educators who exerted a significant influence on their lives.

More than 100 letters were received. Adults responded, as did current students. In a few instances, teachers even offered their observations on how other teachers and the profession of teaching had touched their lives.

Space does not permit printing all the letters received, but here and on the following page are a significant sampling of the letters received.

I love her, she loves me

My teacher helps me. My teacher loves me. She tells me that she loves me. She helps me with my homework. My teacher's name is Mrs. Neyman. She teaches me in kindergarten at Bonham Elementary. She gives me stamps and stickers and candy.

I love her.

4th grader saw interest

I really don't remember what I learned in the fourth grade, but I do remember my teacher. I guess the knowledge I gained that year has blended into the succeeding years.

I appreciate Mr. Delong because he became my friend. He was the first adult, besides my parents of course, who showed a genuine interest in me as a human being. Our time together was brief (I had to move in the middle of the school year), but our friendship has lasted.

We have been corresponding by letter ever since. In fact, last summer I went back to Michigan and visited him. We talked of all the things we remembered of he and I doing together. Most of these activities occurred out of school!

Mr. Delong is still teaching and I know that he is still instilling a sense of acceptance within each of his students.

This teacher never forgets

As a senior in high school I have had a wide variety of teachers. There have been the fun ones and the boring ones, the ones from whom I learn and the ones from whom I do not. Of all these teachers, though, there is one particular woman that stands in my mind.

Barbara Yarbrough was my homeroom, math and science teacher my sixth grade year. She still teaches at South Elementary. I see her at football games, and she never forgets me.

I suppose she stands out in my mind because she was really an understanding, loving teacher. This was the first year that Midland bused its students across town. We were all pretty afraid of going to a new school with new people.

Mrs. Yarbrough's class was fun. She appointed me head of the bullentin board committee. Of course I thought I had it made — my first taste of authority. We always created original designs and ideas to make in our classroom a better atmosphere for learning.

Rarely do people associate fun with learning. In Mrs. Yarbrough's class, however, I learned more than in all my other classes put together. The education was fun; therefore, I was eager to try it. But I didn't just learn about math and science. I learned about some things which I consider more important in daily life. I learned about people and I learned about myself.

I suppose that is why Mrs. Barbara Yarbrough is, and always will be, my favorite teacher.

Teacher makes two-year magic

One of the best teachers I have ever had is Mrs. Lucinda Windsor. In the two years I have had her as a teacher, I feel I have learned more from her than from any other one teacher.

She has taught me so much more than English; she has taught me creativity, and she has inspired me to be observant and open-minded to all situations. I feel that the lessons I have learned from Mrs. Windsor are a value to me and have helped improve not only my mind but also my character.

Thank you, Mrs. Windsor for being a good teacher and a good friend.

Teacher opened me to reading

I remember Mrs. Davis and have great appreciation for her. In the first grade, we were just learning how to read and form words. She taught me how to read, to me that is special.

She took time out and had great patience. That is why I appreciate her. That special way we learned enhanced my ability and love for reading. Enjoying books and loving to read doesn't just happen. It takes time, which means it has to be built up. This starts with the person who gives you our first reading experience. It started with you, and it's helped all through school.

Preschool was unique time

Out of all the teachers I have had in my life (and there have been quite a few) the one I remember the most is my preschool teacher, Mrs. Gray. She was a kind lady with silver hair and she always had a warm, friendly smile on her face.

I remember one instance when my class was drawing and coloring trees. There were no more brown crayons, so I thought I would be original (and daring) and color my tree trunk black. When everyone saw my tree (of which I was so proud) they all laughed and I was deeply hurt.

Mrs. Gray took me aside and explained to me that the kids laughed only because my tree was different and unique; it wasn't like everyone else's. This pleased me because I loved to be different, and she knew it.

I just want to thank you Mrs. Gray, wherever you are, for mending a child's broken heart.

LETTERS

Law should protect religion

In regards to Sam Manning's comments on the editorial on "Religious roots," something should be made clear. If there is a lack of understanding of American history it is evidenced in his letter. It is popular now to proclaim "separation of church and state" by taking it completely out of the context it was written in.

The constitution was written by men who believed in a personal God, the Law Giver, who gave us inalienable rights. These men, whether they were deist or Christian, recognized that without God in government the end result would be loss of all liberty. William Penn said, "If we are not governed by God, we will be led by tyrants."

The first amendment was not written to protect government from religion, on the contrary it was to protect religion from government. The amendment was to protect us from becoming a secular state which, as history shows, will lead to an authoritarian government.

The prayer amendments are not to be used to force people to adapt to a specific religious belief, but to allow an acknowledgment of a Creator God who gave us our inalienable rights as described in the constitution.

It seems to me that out of eight or nine hours a day of possible humanistic teaching (a religion according to Supreme Court, Torcaso v. Watkins, 1961) that one minute is not going to do any harm.

I applaud the "Religious roots" editorial as a factual historical analysis.

Bus precautions seem shameful

I have been observing with much interest all the articles about the advisability of using seat belts, restrainers, and other devices for all vehicles, especially child restraints. Also, I read the article about letting pets ride in vehicles without adequate protection, but as yet I have not seen one word written about something that is so obvious that it is unreal; that someone hasn't spoken up before this is a shame.

I cannot understand how parents and school officials will allow the school buses to carry children across town in vehicles that are so jampacked that some children must stand in the aisles. I have even seen them so full that children must sit in the door-well. If an accident occurs, these children have no protection whatsoever. Also, every day the buses on the Rankin Highway discharge very young children (five or six) on the west side of the road and they must cross to the east side, unattended. This is a busy highway!

What is the excuse for this? There is none!

I urge the parents of Midland children to speak up before it's too late! Do something now! The government — both federal and local, have been given the right to bus these children, but they haven't been given the right to endanger their lives!

Concentrate on criminals

Just once I would like to have used our beautiful, new, homemade barbeque pit. But it was stolen from the enclosed back of our pickup, a mere 10 feet from our motel room door. As my husband discussed it with fellow employees the next morning, it came to his knowledge that eight of the 10 people in that room had been robbed within the last two months in Midland.

These robberies amounted to thousands of dollars and all were reported. One of them occurred in the room of a reputable motel, two in the parking lot of a reputable motel (within days of each other) and five in the parking lots of our office and of an apartment complex.

I would like to see the policeman, who all day long hands out speeding tickets for 35 mph in a 30 zone on Big Spring Street, spend one night in the parking lot of our motel and catch a real criminal.

MidTran services

MidTran offers unique service

Each year in the spring the four-year-old classes at Crestview Kindergarten and Day Care study a unit of land transportation.

Since MidTran has been in existence, we have been able to take a field trip around the city in a vehicle not normally ridden by a four-year-old.

Not only do we have a unique mode of transportation, but while on the field trip we can observe other methods of transportation being used around the city as well as other things we've studied — windmills, etc.

The children also have the learning experience of bringing the correct amount of money and paying for their own ride. It's an excellent learning opportunity and we hope we will be able to take advantage of this service for many years.

Don't cancel MidTran service

What would you do if you were unable to drive a car and you had to get to a job or go to school, do errands or keep an appointment?

In Midland many people with various types of handicaps depend on MidTran for their transportation needs. I would sincerely hope that MidTran not be terminated in a tempting, quick fix exchange for a more balanced budget.

As our city is again starting to grow and expand and attract new industry, we should remember the beneficial impact public transportation can have for a community and keep as our goal the refinement and improvement of this very needed service.

Jeanne M. Waddell

Don't cut back on good thing

This letter is in reference to the article printed concerning the MidTran service. For some time this city had been without public transportation. Now that it is here and available, they want to cut back or end it.

That is totally unfair for those persons who depend on it. And the majority are the senior citizens and the disabled. Here they have their own means of transportation right at their fingertips. They are self-reliant without having to depend on family or friends who may be unable to take them to the doctor, grocery store, the pharmacy and so forth.

There are the working class people and students who rely on this service also. I attend Midland College and have been riding MidTran since January. My car has not been running since the beginning of this year and I never thought until then I would ever ride MidTran. I was wrong in my thinking and I'm glad it is here.

I do hope that the bus riders and the citizens of this city take note and let their voice be heard to let it stay in full court. The demise of MidTran would be a huge step backward.

Defense trends in Europe encouraging for U.S.

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Domestic presidential politics, especially the meteoric rise in the political sky of Sen. Gary Hart, the Democratic maverick from Colorado, has been the big news in the country this past week.

However, I am inclined to believe that when he hits the large delegate states of New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, California and Texas, his dramatic race with the rather bland, not very inspiring former Vice President Walter Mondale will be more of a photo finish.

Since you have been saturated in the newspapers and TV news programs by presidential campaign news, I am going to devote the rest of this column to a final report on our European trip and what particularly impressed us as the most important trend in defense thinking over there since establishment of the Atlantic alliance more than 35 years ago. It is a trend that has especially encouraging implications for America.

Our last working day in Paris was devoted to a most pleasant and informative meeting with President Francois Mitterrand, who will meet with President Reagan in Washington next Thursday and later visit San Francisco. Economic problems, particularly France's concern about high U.S. interest rates which divert needed foreign investment from France, will, I think, be the chief topic of his talk with our president.

Later that afternoon we met with Jacques Chirac, Mayor of Paris, former prime minister under Giscard d'Estaing and leader of the Gaullist party. An engaging, forceful personality, he hopes to be the next president of France when President Mitterrand's term expires in 1988.

We spent nearly an hour with the French president, about the same time he spared us a year ago. As we – Joe Kingsbury Smith, Bernard Kaplan and I – entered the graveled courtyard of the Elysee Palace, once the ornate mansion of Madame de Pompadour, mistress of Louis XV, the ceremonial Garde Republicaine was standing at attention, with bayonet-topped rifles, and the commander's unsheathed sword flashing in the sunlight. "Ho, Ho," I thought, "what fame we have attained." Alas, the honor usually reserved for chiefs of state was not for us but for the president of the European parliament just leaving a meeting with President Mitterrand.

The French socialist leader, who is regarded as more of a pragmatic realist than an ideologue, has been having troubles almost everywhere in France with a spate of strikes.

When he came to power in May, 1981, he moved swiftly to implement socialist programs for sweeping nationalizations and social welfare benefits. These, coupled with the world recession, not only hindered business expansion but caused a consumer spending spree. Mitterrand frankly admitted the "hazards" of his stringent austerity measures that have resulted in a sharp popularity decline. Nevertheless, he, like President Reagan, is sticking to his efforts to curb government spending, especially subsidies to unprofitable industries.

He is considered by our ambassador in France, Evan Galbraith, to be one of the staunchest allied leaders on European defense. And that is the subject on which I wish to report the encouraging information we learned.

For a long time I have felt the day must come when we should start bringing home most of the 300,000 military personnel we have stationed in Europe, though I am not sure many of them would relish the thought.

However, we have been maintaining our military forces in Europe now for 40 years. Not that I don't believe they have served a good purpose. They have helped deter Soviet aggression. Their presence has prevented the wars that used to occur about every 20 years between France and Germany. But since World War II the European allies have been relying primarily on us to protect them. The time has come for them, especially West Germany, to play a more effective role in defending themselves which could lead to the withdrawal of most of our troops from West Germany.

In our meeting with President Mitterrand, Jacques Chirac, Lords Carrington and Home in London, British and French generals and other knowledgeable people with whom we talked, I was very pleased to learn my thoughts were widely shared.

There is a general feeling the Western European allies must do more to defend themselves so they do not have to be so dependent on the United States for protection. It is felt West Germany is capable of shouldering greater responsiblity for its own defense. It could cooperate more effectively with the other European allies in developing technologically advanced conventional weapons that could lessen the need for use of tactical atomic weapons in event of a Soviet attack with their numerically superior and more powerful conventional forces.

It is also felt the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) needs revision. This pact was concluded among the European allies in 1949, with West Germany admitted in 1954. It prohibited the West Germans from possessing or controlling atomic or nuclear weapons and limited to 500,000 the men it could have armed. We have what is called a two-key agreement with West Germany which provides that our atomic and nuclear weapons on German territory can be fired only if a German and American officer jointly agree to launch the shell or missile.

We heard a particularly interesting, and what seemed to me wise, suggestion from one of the leading French political personalities, who preferred not to be identified at this time. Located in France are French tanks with atomic warhead missiles. The missiles have a range of about 150 miles, which means, if fired from France, they would land on West German territory. The West Germans don't like that because it intensifies their fear that in event of war with Russia, Germany would become a nuclear battlefield. Our friend said that if he were president of France, he would be willing to move those French tanks into West Germany so that if the Soviets attacked, the missiles would land not on the West Germans but on Soviet reinforcements.

On the other hand, we learned President Mitterrand is adamantly opposed to the use of French atomic or nuclear weapons for the defense of any country except France. Nor would he agree to any other nation having a second key to fire a French atomic or nuclear weapon, although some of the other European allies have been suggesting a new European defense system be built around French and British nuclear weapons. President Mitterrand is not prepared to have France fill the gap created by any American military withdrawal from Europe.

However, there seems no doubt that if Russia attempted to invade Western Europe, including France, militarily, he would use his nuclear power to defend the Atlantic alliance of which France is still an active member.

That, as well as what we heard about the new trend in European defense thinking, was reassuring to me, as I hope it will be to you.

You made 6th grade exciting

I can still remember the first day of sixth grade and how I felt. You made me feel comfortable and welcome even before I knew you.

You made English exciting just by being yourself. Thank you for talking to me and being such a fun teacher.

I couldn't have come this far if it wasn't for you and even though I haven't seen you since the last day of sixth grade, I still remember.

Two teachers earn my praise

I am part of a Special Education program at Bowie Elementry but my class is located at The Cerebral Palsy Center because I have coordination and learning problems, caused by my C.P. I have to have special help with my school work and other situations. I've had many teachers over my 17 years of schooling, but I especially want to give praise to two of them now.

First is Mrs. Inez Cheatham who taught me how to hold a pencil. She also taught me all my basic school subjects. When I would have lots of trouble learning a new math or some other concept, she would keep going over it with me with an armloadful of patience when she was explaining it to me, until I got it down in my head real well. If I kept having trouble understanding something new she was trying to teach me, Mrs. Cheatham would make up worksheets on that subject every night at home until I got it down like I should have.

Whenever I had troubles with the other children I could always go talk to her about them. Whenever one of her students were absent for more than a few days, she would call their parents to see how the child was feeling, because she was a very tenderhearted person and cared about what happened to her students. She also had an abundance of love and understanding for her students, which I think made it easier and lots more fun to learn new things and about new new things.

When Mrs. Cheatham retired from teaching, Mrs. Karen Lang took her place. Mrs. Lang kept adding to Mrs. Cheatham;s groundwork with me. She taught me with the same amount of patience and understnding that Mrs. Cheatham had had. Mrs. Lang taught me how to do handwriting instead of printing. She taught me how to write many different kinds of stories, by letting me take an English grammar and composition course. She also taught me how to work out some simple long division problems on my own. She was the one who set up my graduation program at Robert E. Lee High School a few years ago, so I would be able to receive my high school diploma, which will be this year.

I want to thank them both for their never-ending friendship, encouragement, support and inspiration that they've given me through the years.

City's schools among best

After attending schools in the Midland Independent School District for 12 years, I believe that the educational system of this city is one of the best in the state. A major factor contributing to the success experienced by our school district is the employment of excellent teachers.

In retrospect, I'm convinced that several teachers have had a positive influence on my life, both in and out of the classroom. When asked to choose the most influential teacher throughout my educational career, I find myself faced with a very difficult decision. I cannot think of a teacher I have had that did not motivate me or satisfy me. All of my teachers have had a genuine interest in the individuals, not just the class as a whole.

One such teacher that has had a major influence on my personal life is my sophomore World History teacher, Mrs. Trudy Lewis. Like all of my teachers, Mrs. Lewis presented her lessons in a manner that was easily understood and slightly entertaining. I had no problem staying interested in her classroom.

Mrs. Lewis not only taught me history, but she also helped to build up the self-confidence in me and in several of my peers. I learned how to apply the concepts presented in any class to my own personal life with the help of Mrs. Lewis. Having this fine lady for a teacher led me to discover that teachers do not try to just overload the students with useless information. Mrs. Lewis always seemed to care about the lives of each of her students outside of the classroom as well as in the classroom.

It has been almost two years since I was enrolled in her class, and Mrs. Lewis still asks me how I'm doing and offers advice whenever she feels that it can benefit me. After talking with Mrs. Lewis, I knew that a teacher would rather inspire a student to learn in the classroom and then apply this knowledge to his own personal life with a winning attitude.

She taught me to feel good

She doesn't teach reading, writing, or arithmatic, but she does teach her students how to feel good about themselves and others. Miss Betty Barnes is a teacher at the C.P. Center, teaching in the Early Childhood Education Program.

Miss Betty as she is so fondly called by her students, teaches handicapped children of varying degrees, from the ages of three up through five years of age. She has no standard program for her classes. She works up a plan for each individual child, depending on what that child's needs may be.

My son was Miss Betty's pupil for nearly two years and with her help, caring, and patience he is now attending public school kindergarten fulltime. My own son's handicap was behavioral problems and Miss Barnes taught him how to control his frustrations and to interact with other children. She is both firm and loving with her students, and no one in her class feels that her or she is handicapped.

My son will always have fond memories of Miss Betty as his first teacher and he still talks of her often. I am glad that we had the opportunity of knowing and working with Betty and our family has benefitted in many ways from knowing her. We feel the M.I.S.D. is very fortunate to have Betty Barnes as a teacher in our school system.

Coach Gill was finest

Audrey Gill was the finest teacher that I have had the opportunity to meet.

In 1959 when Coach Gill interviewed me for the athletic trainer's job at Midland High School, I knew I had met a real gentleman. At that time, Coach Gill was the athletic director for MISD after having been head coach at Midland High School.

Later he was to serve as elementary principal, secondary school assistant principal and finally principal at Midland High School. Those people who were fortunate enough to have been touched by Audrey, Mr. Gill or Coach Gill, were blessed. Few people walk this earth that meant so much to so many as our teacher, coach and administrator — Mr. Audrey Gill.

We are all better people for having had the opportunity to know Audrey Gill.

One teacher hard to pick

As I began to think about Teacher Appreciation Week and that one teacher who has had the greatest influence on me, it was hard to choose just one teacher at Lee due to the fact I have been here only a short time. I feel that all my teachers have influenced me in one way or another, but I guess there seems to be one that stands out who intrigued, challenged, amused, and motivated me.

I would say that the one teacher who had the greatest influence on me was my chemistry teacher, Ms. Jeanette Magda. She was unlike any other teacher I have ever had. She introduced me to a subject I knew nothing about and guided my learning with her interesting and understandable methods.

Her techniques in presenting this subject proved that the basic theories of chemistry are involved in all aspects of existence. Her presentations were intense and factual concerning the material while at the same time they were enlightening and motivational.

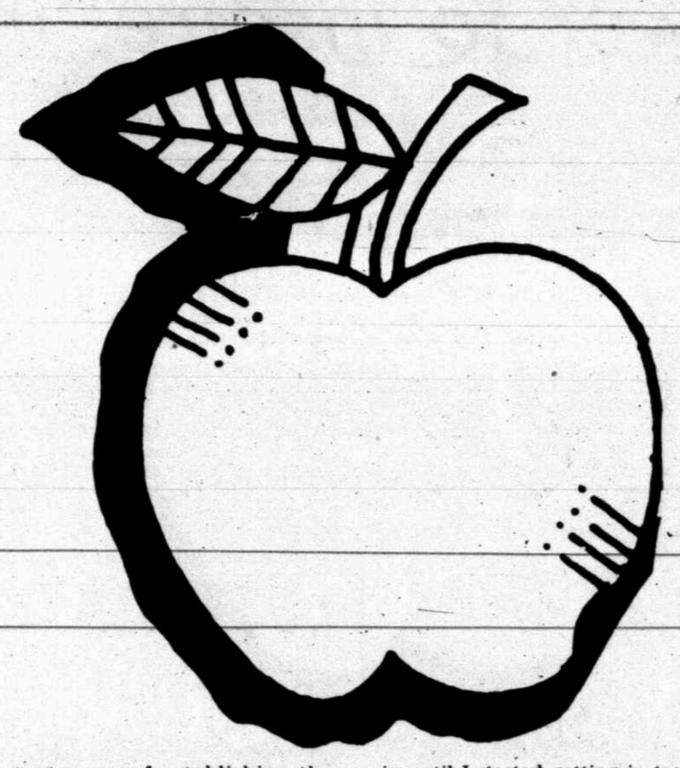

Her amusing sense of humor proved chemistry to be alive and relevant today. Her ability to convey her excitement and interest has aroused my desire to pursue a deeper knowledge of this subject, chemistry.

Mrs. Brown had nurturing way

I have been under the instruction of many excellent teachers in the 12 years I have spent in the Midland Independant School district, however, in this letter, I want to express my appreciation to my second and third grade teacher Mrs. Daisy Brown.

This woman nurtured me through two of my most important years of establishing the vital goals, values, and self-esteem which has continued and will continue through to the rest of my life.

During that extremely vulnerable time in which a child leaves his parents and comes under the influence of his teachers and peers who can so easily crush his sense of self-worth, Mrs. Brown built-up my self-esteem, strengthened the values my parents had initiated, and encouraged a sense of individuality by constantly letting me know that, no matter what anyone ever told me, I had the potential to reach the goals I had set for my life. She taught me to respect myself to set my goals high, and to stand up for what I believe. These are by far the most important lessons I have ever learned in school.

I have had many wonderful teachers since the third grade who have helped me follow through with my life's ambitions, but I want to say a special thanks to the one who helped me initiate these goals and who gave me enough self-confidence to tackle the following nine years of my education. Thank you Mrs. Brown!

Lauren Thurman

I learned more than geometry

In reflecting on my school life, one teacher really sticks out in my mind. Namely, Dr. William Helmer, my 10th grade geometry teacher.

Dr. Helmer taught me much more than geometry. He taught me how to love knowledge and embrace it in the same fashion as he did. He listened to our ideas and taught us the value of listening to others.

I recall the class days that were spent just listening to Dr. Helmer lecture on geometry and then his getting off the subject to tell the class something interesting he remembered. Somehow, I believe I learned more listening to him talk then by reading any textbook.

Thank you, Dr. Helmer, for teaching me to love knowledge.

Steve Wilson

Time intense, and rewarding

Mrs. Jane Harmon excited me about the value of education, because she took the time to work with me on an individual basis. She made Developmental Reading a class of intense learning, but also a rewarding experience.

I never thought as a senior in high school I still was a babe in the world of knowledge. Mrs. Harmon is a lady whom I admire for she is not only a teacher but a friend. I feel really fortunate to know that a teacher understands and loves you in spite of you. I was able to learn how to work and develop skills needed for the future.

I just want to say thanks to Aunt Jane I am a better person.

Kim Gordon

He showed me he believed

I am writing to tell you about the teacher that truly changed my life! During my freshman year in high school I lived in Dallas. I attended W.T. White High School. I was not making friends very easily. The first day of school I went to my fourth period Physical Science class and for some reason Mr. Richard Wingfield truly believed in me. I certainly didn't look like someone to believe in but he did.

During the next few weeks I began to make friends but these friends were not what you would call a good crowd. I didn't try in school anymore. I didn't really care.

Mr. Wingfield gave me little pep talks almost everyday. He'd call me up to his desk and tell me I was his superstar and that I could do much better! That made me feel great but they didn't sink in until I started getting in trouble for my grades and behavior at school. I never gave Mr. Wingfield a lot of trouble but I think my other teachers would have probably liked to take me over their knee and paddle me good! I know I deserved it.

Well, I made it through my freshman year but I had failed two classes. I had to go to summer school. I went and after the first two weeks of my sophomore year at White High School, I decided to return to Midland. Anytime since I've come back, if I feel bad, I recall Mr. Wingfield.

I went back to visit him a few months back and he still remembered me! He was proud of me. I still don't make the best grades around but that's life. I think I'm on the right track.

Thanks to the memories of my days in Mr. Wingfield's class, I'll be okay! I truly have to thank god for one wonderful, understanding, caring teacher: Mr. Richard Wingfield. He's one in a million!

Creativity began with her

The most influential teacher of my younger years was a wonderful woman by the name of Mrs. Magness. Under her tutelage, I was introduced to a basic concept of reading, writing, and math. But more importantly, Miss Magness was creative and open and taught many important aspects of life such as getting along with others and overcoming hardships.

By my sophomore year, I barely remembered Mrs. Magness, but still recalled her loving kindness. To my surprise, she turned out to be my sophomore counselor! Now named Mrs. Cobb, she still possessed the power of direction and guidance which had helped me through first grade and then again through 10th.

I believe a teacher and counselor of such calibre should be recognized by our community.

Jennifer Reese

She seemed to enjoy job

I was fortunate enough to have my favorite teacher in my very first year of school. She always treated us so kind and seemed to really enjoy teaching us. We really loved her and always tried to make her happy.

She always remembered birthdays and did special things for the birthday person. At the end of the year, we all were sad because we knew we wouldn't have her again, but at least we were fortunate enough to have Mrs. Jordan to start our school years off. She was a wonderful teacher.

Good comes from both sides

Those people who know about the Midland Independent School District know that our school system has many outstanding individuals on both sides of the desk. As a student of Midland schools for 11 years, I am aware that teachers can have a great influence on students.

Ms. Cynthia Savage is one teacher who has influenced my senior year in many ways. I am currently the Student Council president and have been fortunate to have Ms. Savage as both my sponsor and friend. The success of our council is largely due to the direction and help that she has given. Ms. Savage is one who believes in accomplishing goals. It is this attitude that she possesses and instills in us that has made it possible for us to be named an Outstanding Student Council for the State. This is an honor that Lee High has held as long as she has been the sponsor.

Not only has Ms. Savage had an influence on me in school, but outside of school as well. She is a person that I can come to for advice and support when dealing with personal matters. This rapport that she has with people makes her a favorite among high school students. She is a prime example of a teacher whose first concern is the student as a person.

Too often outstanding members of our community are overlooked. Teacher Appreciation Week is a time when the public can hear about the outstanding teachers within our school district. Ms. Savage is definitely one such teacher who deserves recognition and appreciation for her devotion to her students.

Teacher has an honor roll

I guess that everyone has a teacher(s) he or she remembers — for good or evil. I suspect this is especially true for those of us who chose teaching as our profession. We strive to "be liked" or "never do that" in our classrooms. I have some that I would like to share.

Miss N. Ethie Eagleton: Several generations of McCamey High School students have a love of and appreciation for Texas history that we will carry with us into the Texas soil when we die.

Mrs. Joe Conger: McCamey High School librarian who encourged me as a teen-aged librarian aide. So much of what I do now, I learned from her and not in library school.

The teachers at McCamey High expected us to do our best and most of us learned to give that best. We went on to the best schools in the country and state with a firm grasp of the basics. We did not suffer because we came from a "small" school.

Finally and most importantly, my heritage is teaching. My grandfather, aunts and uncles on both sides of the family and both of my parents all taught. I knew from them how precious education is both with and without the capital E. My mother especially, showed me that books can enrich life. I try to impart this to my students, but I know that I can never be as successful as she was.

Minority status not obstacle

Words cannot express how much I appreciate having Mr. Stratton as a teacher. He helped me realize that being a minority does not mean I am different.

Being the only minority student in his honors course gave me courage to challenge our society. I learned a lot in his class and he enriched my mind in attitudes, values, and beliefs. His teachings gave me encouragement, trust and confidence in myself and in the field of my career. Futhermore, his teaching habits gave me a strong sense of courage and stability.

Thank you for understanding me and helping me. One day, I will make you proud of me, and the credit of my accomplishments will be because of you.

Teacher had time to help

One of the most outstanding teachers I have ever had the honor to be educated by is Jim Estes.

He is active in all school activities and can be seen at every athletic event. In class he presents things in a way that make them very easy to grasp and understand, and in Honors Calculus this is a great achievement. He always has time to help you and is there when you need him.

Thanks Mr. Estes!

I was treated like an adult

When I heard it was Teacher's Appreciation Week, I immediately thought of Mrs. Honeyfield.

When I think about St. Ann's, I think of her a lot. She taught me so much, to meet deadlines, and to be more responsible. But what I appreciate the most about her, is that she treated me as an adult, not a child.

She became a friend to me, and someone I know I can rely on!

Thank you for everything!

Third grade was big year

Third grade was the big year. So many new and exciting things came with entering third grade. For one, we were finally going to get desks with tops that lifted up rather than the plain desks with a simple opening to store our books. We were also going to learn to write in cursive and learn our multiplication tables. Plus, there was a new, young, pretty teacher in the third grade, and we all wanted in Mrs. Childress's class.

I was one of the lucky ones to get in Mrs. Childress's class. She taught me to multiply and labored with me on my cursive "q's" and "g's", but most of all, Mrs. Childress represented the type of adult I wanted to be some day. She was pretty, energetic, and friendly. Mrs. Childress remained calm and in control through every imaginable situation. From kids fainting when given their T.B. tests to peers skipping school and going to the nearby store to buy candy. Mrs. Childress always knew what to do.

Nine years later, I still catch glimpses of Mrs. Childress driving her own kids to school and, like third grade days at Sam Houston, I still want to win the respect of Mrs. Childress. She still is my model for establishing an interesting, fun and complete adult life. Thanks Mrs. Childress for your teaching abilities in education and life.

Teacher left vivid memory

Miss Montgomery is the teacher who taught me the things most vivid in my memory today.

I remember running to her and telling how I felt or what I was happy about, and she listened, she really understood.

I especially remember cleaning out her locker one time and finding some very valuable old books. She gave me those books and those are my favorite books out of my whole collection.

On the last day of fifth grade I was very sad about leaving the most understanding and wonderful teacher I had ever had.

Magical pills still effective

In six years I have not forgot Mrs. Sell. She is still my most favorite teacher.

Maybe her magical pills haven't worn off yet or maybe the little sips of carrot juice she used to give me have affected my brain, but school is still as fun as it was then. Thanks!

Trish Humes

Name sums up appreciation

While thinking about Teacher Appreciation Week and how teachers have helped influence my academic career as well as my life, one name came to mind among the many others, Ms. Cindy Marsh.

Ms. Marsh is a sophomore English teacher and sponsor for the Junior Class at Lee High School. Her spirit and enthusiasm in the classroom seems to overtake you, making her class enjoyable and a pleasure to look forward to.

Her lessons in class are directed to the students in a one-to-one fashion which allows students to feel like she is talking to them and not over their heads.

Having served as a Junior Class officer, I have also had the opportunity to know her as more than a teacher, but as a friend. Time spent with her, whether it is in the classroom or outside it, is always a learning experience. She makes you think about what you're doing and her words are only of encouragement. Speaking with students from her past classes, it is easy to tell that she is well liked.

Ms. Marsh is one of the many exceptional and supportive teachers in our school system. Her influence on me and her students is greatly appreciated. Teachers really are special people.

Mr. Moreland offered help

I have a favorite teacher that I would like to show kindness to. His name is Mr. Moreland.

He helped me out whenever I needed help. He also showed kindness whenever me or the others were feeling bad or not feeling good about a grade we made in his class or another class.

The jokes he made usually did the trick. If that didn't do it he would make funny faces then that would really do it. But Mr. Moreland, you are one of the most kindest teachers.

Pauletta Polk

First grader got special 'Grace'

During this week of teacher appreciation, I have been thinking greatly of Mrs. Grace. I am very grateful for what she has done for me.

She not only taught me to read and write, but was a wonderful person and a great influence on me. Even though she was only my first grade teacher, I have never forgotten her and I never will.

Cuffing crime

The recent emergence of three citizen involvment groups in Midland has already generated a reduction in crime and an increase in the filing of DWI cases. One area of the city where the Neighborhood Watch Program has taken hold is showing a 90 percent decrease in burglaries.

Groups aim at crime's roots

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Their focus may be different, but their approach and goal are the same: a grassroots campaign to reduce the local crime rate.

In the past six months or so, city and county residents have banded together in three organizations to combat burglaries, drugs and drunk driving — a move that has already produced encouraging results.

The three groups are the Midland Crime Prevention Commission, Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs and Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.

Spokesmen for all three groups say their main thrust is to support police agencies and demonstrate citizen willingness to get involved in the law enforcement process — something officials have been urging for years.

THE MOST "VISIBLE" of the groups has been the Midland-Odessa chapter of MADD, which formed last fall with Cynthia Grubb of Midland as president.

"There was a feeling among the victims of drunk drivers that we were being left out of the court process," said Mrs. Grubb, who was involved in an alcohol-related accident prior to formation of the local MADD chapter.

"For instance, victims were contacted at the last minute for court appearances.

"There was also a feeling that there was no concerted effort to fight DWI. The left hand didn't seem to know what the right hand was doing."

Neal Meares

Cynthia Grubb

Christina Miller

One of the first things MADD did was check on how DWI cases are handled — from the point of arrest to how the charges are disposed of by prosecutors.

"We discovered that too many cases were not filed as DWI by city police, but as public intoxication," said Mrs. Grubb. "It may have gotten the motorist off the street anyway and made things easier for the police to process, but it undercut the felony DWI law.

"It also left offenders with the idea that all they had to do was pay a fine and that DWI was no big deal. There was no fear factor. Nothing worse would happen to them the next time."

AFTER MEETING with city and police officials on the issue, MADD was successful in getting a commitment that DWI will be filed "in all cases, where applicable."

MADD is now turning more of its attention to the court process to see that more DWI cases are tried, instead of the charges being reduced or plea-bargained out for "slap-on-wrist" punishment.

"There is no way for the general public to know how severe the DWI problem in Midland is if the cases are negotiated away behind closed doors," said Mrs. Grubb.

"When they're tried in court, at least jury members become aware, and word-of-mouth will make the public more aware."

In attempting "a more unified approach" to the DWI problem, MADD is working with city officials to establish a task force that would include a DWI victim and representatives of law enforcement agencies, the judiciary, the medical community, the alcohol council and the liquor industry.

"We'd like to keep the task force from seven to 10 members to keep it from becoming unwieldy," said Mrs. Grubb. "We don't want to 'identify the problem.' We already know what it is. We want to find solutions."

The Midland Crime Prevention Commission, which oversees the Neighborhood Watch Program, has also seen its efforts result in success.

According to statistics provided the commission by the police department's Crime Prevention Unit, there has been a drastic reduction in the number of burglaries where residents have joined together, elected block captains, put up neighborhood watch signs and seen to it that suspicious persons and vehicles are reported to police immediately.

COMPARED TO February 1983, last month's figures show a 90 percent decrease in residential burglaries where the watch program is in effect.

At the same time, there was a 17 percent increase in home burglaries on the far east and far west sides — areas where Neighborhood Watch has yet to take hold.

A similar picture is emerging in the county, according to Sgt. David Cobos, who heads up the Crime Stoppers program and Crime Prevention Unit of the sheriff's department.

Pointing to a pin-studded map on his office wall, Cobos noted the county neighborhood watch program just recently "got off the ground" and already has had some encouraging results.

"It's too early to determine a definite trend, but in areas where Neighborhood Watch is in effect there have been no reported burglaries."

Desegregation costs top $328,000

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Ector County Independent School District has spent $328,608 on legal expenses since the U.S. Justice Department stepped back into its desegregation picture in November 1979.

These figures (through January 1984) do not include fees for the recently-completed hearing in Midland federal court or documents filed with Judge Harry Hudspeth leading up to an April 1 order.

Nor do they reflect lawyer bills which date back from 1955, one year after the landmark Brown vs. Topeka Board of Education decision, to 1970 when the United States filed suit against both Midland and Ector County's school districts, or costs incurred during the time the district operated under an interim order from 1970-1979.

TO PUT THESE figures in perspective, consider that Austin's school district is in court to have the state pay some of the $1 million in court costs it incurred while working toward integration. Houston's school district has spent several million dollars during its 25-year desegregation struggle.

"You pay for services rendered," said ECISD's business director, Dr. Bill Walker. "People just don't understand the tremendous number of hours involved."

The district has paid varying amounts for services rendered to attorneys since November 1979, with $273,385 going to the Odessa firm — McMahon Cox Tidwell McCoy Hansen & Atkins. The Houston law firm, Bracewell & Patterson, was also retained for parts of the suit.

District records show $20,195 was paid during the 1979-1980 school year, $84,357 the next year as the district prepared for federal court and met numerous times with the Justice Department in seeking a settlement, and $119,031 in 1981-1982 during which time it was in federal court and Judge Fred Shannon issued a desegregation order in August 1982.

Another $72,653 went to lawyers as the district implemented its plan during 1982-1983. Then the Fifth Circuit of Appeals in New Orleans reversed Shannon's ruling and sent the case back for the Midland hearing. The district recorded $32,372 in legal fees through January 1984.

"THIS IS A unique kind of litigation," said ECISD attorney Robert Cox. While a lawyer can refer to case law and rely on precedents in most civil actions, desegregation law has been changing constantly since that first ruling 30 years ago. Until 1954, segregation was Texas Law.

Business legal despite queries

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

"Verily, I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

— Matthew 25:40

The Scripture adorns his business card and "God Bless You" is stated under the signature line on the receipt.

Some people who have bought items from him complained that they were misled, but Virgil C. Combs said his Services for the Handicapped is a legal business.

Midland police agree, although a couple of detectives drove one of Combs' delivery men to the houses of two unsatisfied customers to return their checks.

"We're not out to rip nobody," Combs said. "This company started with $34 Aug. 12. We haven't made but $4,000 profit and I'm getting tired of the misconception."

The business, a for-profit operation and not a charity, employs handicapped persons who have sold trash bags and presently are selling tickets to a children's movie over the phone from either an Odessa or Midland office. Combs said he hires the physically and mentally handicapped, senior citizens, disabled American Veterans and anyone who is handicapped, which he said includes family men laid off from work.

"ONE (EMPLOYEE) was brought over to me from MHMR (Texas Department of Mental Health & Mental Retardation). She's a Mexican, a little mentally retarded, but not to the point that she was untrainable. I paid her by the hour — $4 an hour. If I'd paid her on commission, she wouldn't have made any money."

Those starting off on hourly wages who would make more if they had been selling on commission are paid commission, he said.

"I tell you the reason I started this," Combs said. "That girl is doin' nothin' but eatin' up my profits. But if someone doesn't take her in.... The concept of a woman or man making $1 or $1.50 scrubbin' floors, well, they figure, 'I'm not worth very much — here I am scrubbing floors for $1 an hour.'

"The image of themselves will start changing a little bit once they get a good job and make good money," Combs said. "Once that dawns on them, they can become productive."

Among those employed at the Odessa office is a woman who suffers from emphysema. Because she has to be on an oxygen machine and cannot climb stairs, work is difficult to find. At Services for the Handicapped, she said she made $1,200 in commission sales one month.

According to figures supplied by the company, sales grossed $28,481.75. Payroll and expenses totaled $24,382.01; leaving a profit of $4,099.74.

The profits are used to make audio tapes of the New Testament for the visually handicapped, who may pick up a copy at no charge. The remainder is put back into the business, Combs said.

"I'VE MADE EVERY attempt to get every license that I can," Combs said. "We're registered with the State Comptrollers Office and have a DBA (Do Business As) filed with the City of Midland."

His Odessa office and the one at 1908 W. Wall Ave., Suite 204, in Midland are the only businesses currently in operation, Combs said. A DBA has been filed in Lubbock and he plans to expand into Dallas, Fort Worth and Austin.

All six cities are listed on the customer receipts as being served.

The business is legal, but the misconception by the public is there, according to Capt. Roger Meurer of the Midland Police Department, with whom Combs talked when he set up his business.

"It's OK," Meurer said. "It's not illegal. It is legal but it's still misleading and it's going to be a problem."

According to Combs, Muerer read the callers' statement and suggested the company should be identified as a for-profit business enterprise, which Combs said he did.

A revised phone sheet, from which the caller reads, states Services for the Handicapped is "a profit company created to provide jobs for senior citizens, the handicapped and disabled American Veterans."

Receipts, business cards and flyers state the company is "not a non-profit organization."

BUT A POTENTIAL customer hears "for profit" or "not a non-profit," and automatically thinks "non-profit," Muerer said.

Callers soliciting the purchase of tickets for the movie, "The Magic of Lassie," inform the customers the tickets can be donated in their name to a children's organization if they wish.

"If you want to donate them, get a receipt and write it off," Combs said.

Several customers have complained to the Permian Basin Better Business Bureau, the police department and the Midland Tape Lending Library.

According to Linda Truitt of the BBB, both the company and a similar one, which has been operating in Texas since 1968 and in Midland since last June, are legal, for-profit businesses.

Employees of Texas Handicapped Workers, who are handicapped and sell light bulbs and vitamins over the phone, identify the business as a private profit-making enterprise, said acting area supervisor Jennifer Little. The light bulbs have written guarantees in Midland and the role of the company is specifically explained to potential customers by the employees.

"They tell them that it's not a charity, it's a private enterprise," Ms. Little said. "And they can't accept donations."

"CUSTOMERS NEED to be interested in the product being sold," Ms. Truitt said. "Don't buy tickets, trash bags or whatever if you're not interested. And make sure it's not a higher price than you'd normally pay. And people need to understand the only person who can get a tax-deduction is the company. You're not making a donation — it's got a sales tax."

After Midland police received complaints about Services for the Handicapped, an employee for the company was stopped while making deliveries in his personal car at 10:30 a.m. March 2.

Mark Wayne Thomason said several police units pulled him over. When he got out of his car, he was instructed to place his hands on the roof. After a search through the company's receipts, Thomason said he was read his rights before his name and driver's license were radioed in. When it came back that he hadn't paid some traffic tickets and a warrant was out, he was handcuffed and his car was impounded, he said.

"THEY BOOKED ME and then they told me they had two people complain. They asked me if we had returned their money and I said, 'no.' Then they asked me if I would and I said, 'yes.' So two detectives took me back to (two customers') houses and walked me up to the door and I gave the checks back. Then they threw me in jail."

According to Meurer, the car was legally stopped after a citizen had complained about the organization. "It is in the course of the investigation to look at the sales receipts," he said. "We may be in the gray area (on reading him his rights before calling his name in and finding out about the warrants) but then again, we may not.

"We don't want to try to keep anybody from doing their job," Meurer said, "but our number one priority is to protect the citizens of the City of Midland."

"I'm not going to become non-profit because I make money, I pay taxes and I spend it the way I want to," Combs said. "This is why it looks like a scam: I'm eating beans right now. But if I can provide 1,000 jobs and only make $10 a day off of each employee, I'll make $10,000. I'll make a profit — but I'll be providing something for the community."

Mid-management means middle of the problems

Historically, it has been the goal of most employees to climb the corporate ladder until they become a part of what has become known as management.

It is then, and only then, that they can begin earning huge salaries, getting weekends off and spending leisurely afternoons playing golf with fellow executives.

On the surface it sounds great. After all, only a fool (or workaholic) would reject such appealing fringe benefits. But a funny thing often happens on the way to the gold mine. It doesn't exist. That's because the busy executive faces endless group meetings, one-on-one sessions and angry phone calls from people who absolutely refuse to talk with anyone except "the person in charge." As the lower level personnel like to point out "that's why management earns the big bucks."

But what a lot of people don't seem to realize is that the job with the most headaches in any office is the one that falls into the category labeled mid-management.

Briefly stated, that means you are right in the middle of everything and, as a result, can't make anyone happy. You have employees working under you (often your former peers) who are constantly reminding you that your "fancy promotion" doesn't make you God and the problems you used to whine about still exist today.

And they are correct. So common sense tells you to fight their causes for them with management. Right?

Wrong. The upper echelon politely informs you that you are now one of them and your job is to accept top-level decisions and sell them to your people. And they are correct, too.

So where does that leave our poor mid-management flunkie? Several places, including:

— Hiding in the restroom on those days when unpopular decisions are announced.

— Hiding under your desk on those days when unpopular decisions are announced.

— Hiding under the sheets of your bed, after having called in sick, on those days when unpopular decisions are announced.

— Pleading ignorance when confronted by your employees about an unpopular decision.

— Feigning laryngitis when confronted about an unpopular decision.

— Giggling uncontrollably when confronted about an unpopular decision. (They may think you have finally flipped out and will feel sympathy for you.)

— Staring blankly into outer space at all times so that when you are confronted by your employees they will think it is your natural state and will become disgusted and leave you alone.

Of course, the best solution is to play the ultimate hypocrite. And it is really very simple. All you have to do is act extremely angry when announcing an unpopular decision to your employees. Then you slink into the boss' office and declare with great disdain, "I don't know what's wrong with those ingrates out there. They never try and understand management's problems."

If you can sleep at night, you've got it made.

Monaghan on Reagan-Bush team

AUSTIN — Bob Monaghan of Midland will be one of a 19-member grassroots leadership team with the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign in Texas' 254 counties. The team was announced here by U.S. Sen. John Tower.

Tower, the president's state campaign chairman, and co-chairman Martha Weisend of Dallas, met with the newly-named volunteer group Saturday in Dallas. Winning the state's critical 29 electoral votes was the focus of the organizational session.

Monaghan will direct the re-election effort in 37 counties that include Midland, Ector, Dawson and Lubbock. Vice chairman is Mrs. Bob Parsons of Odessa.

"Tower has done a fantastic job in organizing this," said Monaghan.

In naming the grassroots team, Tower said, "The future of the nation depends on our success in communicating President Reagan's record of reviving the American economy and rebuilding our national defenses. This grassroots organization will enable us to carry this message to the countless neighborhoods and work places that make up our vast state."

The Texas campaign structure will be directed by 10 regional chairmen responsible for multi-county areas plus metropolitan co-chairmen for Harris, Dallas, Tarrant and Bexar counties.

Regional chairmen, in addition to Monaghan, will be Steve Lilly Nacogdoches, Vic Rogers of Beaumont, State Sen. Buster Brown of Lake Jackson, John Armstrong of Kingsville, Marcus Anderson of Abilene, Pat Haggerty of El Paso, Wales Madden III of Amarillo, Hal Yeager of Wichita Falls and State Rep. Rollin Khoury of Waco.

Metro co-chairmen are June Coe and Jim Oberwetter of Dallas; H. "Pulse" Martinez and Mary Morton Jackson of San Antonio; Nancy Palm and Harold R. DeMoss Jr. of Houston; Anna Mowery and Charles Lundelius of Fort Worth and Jane Bergland of Arlington.

In making their announcement, Weisend noted the Texas campaign will utilize an intensive voter registration drive and voter turn-out appeal.

"In 1980, President Reagan attracted the support of a broad range of Texans and brought new voters into the Republican ranks," she noted. "We will capitalize on his sustained popularity by involving these new volunteers in our 1984 effort."

DEATHS

Pedro Castillo

Pedro Castillo

Pedro "Pete" Castillo, 84, of Midland died late Friday in a local hospital after a brief illness.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Monday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with Father Jim Foelker officiating. Rosary will be at 7 p.m. today in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Castillo was born July 14, 1899, at Saltillo, Mexico. He moved to Camp in 1917 and then to Corsicana and Cisco. He moved to Midland in 1928. Castillo worked as a chef for Scharbauer Hotel until 1946, worked at Ed Darnell's Cafe until 1949, and then operated his own cafe, El Charro, until 1975.

He was awarded a lifetime membership by the East Side Lions Club and for the past four years was associated with Casa de Amigos. He was a member of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Maria Castillo of Midland; three sons, Jessie and Joe Castillo of Midland and Roy Castillo of Odessa; five daughters, Juanita Galindo of Elloy, Ariz., and Mary Carasco, Amelia Navarrete, Maria Ochoa and Rosa Enriquez, all of Midland; a sister, Maria Aguilar of Laredo; 26 grandchildren; and 19 great-grandchildren.

John T. Johnson

BIG SPRING — Services for John Thomas Johnson, 77, of Big Spring, will be at 1 p.m. Monday at St. Mary's Episcopal Church, with burial in Trinity Memorial Park under the direction of the Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Johnson died Thursday morning in a Big Spring Hospital. He was an engineer for Cosden Oil and Chemical Co.

Ismael Robles

BIG SPRING — Services for Ismael Robles, 25, of Big Spring, are set for 10 a.m. Monday in Sacred Heart Catholic Church, with burial in Mount Olive Memorial Park. He died Friday afternoon in a Big Spring hospital.

Alma Custer

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Services for Mrs. M.A. (Alma) Custer, 84, of Oklahoma City, mother of Midlander M.A. Custer Jr., are set for 1 p.m. Monday at St. John's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery, directed by Smith-Kernke Funeral Home of Oklahoma City.

Mrs. Custer died Friday in an Oklahoma City hospital.

She was born March 6, 1900, in Narden, Okla., and had been a resident of Oklahoma City for the past 48 years.

Other survivors include two daughters, two sisters, seven grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Merl Odom

Merl Odom, 63, of Midland died Friday at a local hospital. Services will be 3:30 p.m. Monday at Golf Course Road Church of Christ with Don Davis officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Odom was born March 16, 1920, in Rotan. He served in the Army in France during World War II and received the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star. After being discharged he lived in Amarillo, Odessa and Big Spring. He married Lillian Brewster in Amarillo. He moved to Midland in 1955 where he was associated with Schlumberger for 30 years. He retired two years ago. He was a member of Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife; a son, T.K. Odom of Oklahoma City; two daughters, Tina Stafford and Bridget Hill of Midland; a brother, Jim Odom Jr. of Odessa; three sisters, Marie Rossie of Long Beach, Calif., Sue Carol Inman of Odessa and Bobbie Nell Odom of Odessa; and eight grandchildren.

Julian Brown, 85, of Midland died Saturday in a local nursing home.

Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Steven Howell

IRAAN — Graveside services for Steven Neal Howell, 24, of Crane, brother of Midlander Kenneth Wayne Howell, are set for 3 p.m. today in Restland Cemetery here. James Dennis Funeral Home of Iraan is handling arrangements.

Howell died Thursday near Dryden.

He was born July 22, 1959, in Abilene. He served with the U.S. Navy and was a member of the Church of Christ.

Other survivors include his mother, Mary Ann Knight of Crane; his father, David P. Howell of Odessa; and a sister, Helen Marie Howell of Austin.

Citizen organizations formed to fight crime

THE CITY'S neighborhood watch program has seen the establishment of more than 400 watch areas since Jan. 1, according to Commission Publicity-Historian Christina Miller.

"The signs really work," she said. "It's a reminder for the crooks to stay out and the residents to stay alert."

Noting a block captain who called police after a man was seen entering a home on Emerson Street March 13, Ms. Miller added, "The suspect was caught inside the house and police feel he's responsible other burglaries in the neighborhood.

"It's impossible to have a police officer on every street. Crime can be cut drastically if people get involved."

The newest citizen involvement group is NABD, which officially organized about two weeks ago and is concerned not only with burglaries, but also with the link between drugs and crime.

"Our aim is to attack crime, not law enforcement," said NABD President Neal Meares. "We want to show our concern and support. If law enforcement in Midland is a nine, we'll work to make it a 10. If it's the best in Texas, we'll work to make it the best in the world."

According to police department statistics, one in every 20 Midland homes was broken into during 1983. That breaks down to 2.8 burglaries a day.

"THE MAYOR SAYS we can't solve the problem by throwing money at it," said Meares. "If that's the case and citizens have become more aggressive, we'd like to see law enforcement become as aggressive as the citizenry is becoming."

Among the steps NABD is taking to fight crime is an effort to have the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration re-establish an office or at least an agent in the city. The agency closed its Midland office about a year ago and shifted personnel to other areas of the country.

On Tuesday, NABD representatives visted with DEA officials in El Paso. "They'd like to see an agent assigned here on a permanent basis," said Meares. "They feel there's a definite need for it. They now have to work the Midland-Odessa-Big Spring area — with a population of about 250,000 — from Lubbock."

To date, Meares said NABD has also "voiced our concern" with the Department of Public Safety, the grand jury, the sheriff's department, the police department and the city council.

"We plan to visit with school officials, the district attorney and various judges to see what can be done," he added. "We don't feel the people of Midland are aware of the magnitude of the problem.

"Crime will always be with us, but we don't want Midland, Texas, to be known as a community that's soft on criminals. With the people and police working together, we can reduce the problem significantly."

THE CONSENSUS among local law enforcement officers is that citizen involvement is — in the words of one officer — "long overdue and quite welcome. We don't resent it at all."

There is some concern, however, that citizen groups don't turn into vigilantes or become overbearing to the point where they believe their particular cause takes precedence over the multitude of other crimes that confront police on a daily basis.

But another concern is that the groups — as one officer put it — "hang in there. I've seen it happen. They'll come on strong at first, then just dry up and blow away before long. I hope it doesn't happen here."

Pilot, wife uninjured in emergency landing

From Staff Reports

A Midland pilot and his wife escaped injury Saturday when they were forced to land their single-engine plane on a country road, the Department of Public Safety reported.

John Weiler, 49, of 4510 Wilshire Drive, took off from Midland Regional Airport before noon en route to Tulsa, Okla. About 15 miles east of Stanton the 1976 Grumman developed engine trouble and Weiler attempted to return to the airport.

When the condition worsened, Weiler was forced to land on a caliche road in Glasscock County, nine miles east of Highway 137 and Farm to Market Road 307. The plane received no damage during the landing and later taxied to Martin County Airport.

Federal Aviation Administration officials in Midland and Lubbock will investigate the incident.

Justice of Peace releases four drug raid suspects on bond

From Staff Reports

Four persons arrested in a sheriff's department drug raid Friday have been released on bond.

Released on $8,500 bond set by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry was 22-year-old Michael Abrams of 1110 Austin St., Space 40. Released on $6,000 bond was Dora Abrams, 21, of the same address.

They are charged with felony possession of amphetamines and prescription tranquilizers. They are also charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

Two other persons arrested in the raid were released after posting $500 bond each on misdemeanor possession of marijuana charges. A fifth person was questioned but not charged in the case.

The raid was conducted about 11:30 a.m. Friday at the Austin Street address after deputies received a tip through the Crime Stoppers program, which offers rewards and anonymity for information on illegal activities in the city and county.

Rewards are also offered for information leading to the apprehension of wanted persons. The Crime Stoppers number is 694-TIPS.

CRMWD hearing slated April 12

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission has set a hearing for 10 a.m. April 12 on the application of Colorado River Municipal Water District for construction of reservoirs on Beals Creek and Red Draw in Howard County.

CRMWD is seeking to construct a channel dam on Beals Creek, five miles east of Big Spring, to intercept and divert low flows and impounding 3.4 acre-feet of water.

The reservoir on Red Draw, five miles southeast of Big Spring, is to impound 8,538 acre-feet diverted from Beals Creek.

CRMWD is amending existing water permits to use up to 6,000 acre-feet in Red Draw Reservoir to meeting existing authorization for mining purposes, and 2,000 acre-feet for industrial purposes.

Also requested are diversion points and rates of diversions for the reservoirs, and use of 50 acre-feet annually from Beals Creek for construction purposes.

The hearing will be held in the Stephen F. Austin State Office Building.

Prison officials propose psychiatric care program

AUSTIN (AP) — State prison officials, who promised a federal judge they would improve psychiatric care for inmates, have proposed a multimillion dollar program that includes a 350-bed psychiatric hospital.

"We don't have anywhere near the numbers (of psychiatric staff) now that we're talking about having under the new plan," said attorney Rick Gray of Austin, a former assistant attorney general who helped negotiate the plan for the Texas Department of Corrections.

The six-year plan, filed in federal court in Houston, is in response to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's 1981 prison reform order. After that order, TDC officials agreed to bring inmate psychiatric care in line with free world treatment.

Officials estimate there are up to 4,000 inmates who need psychiatric care.

The plan includes a 350-bed hospital at the Goree Unit in Huntsville, and more psychiatric staff members throughout the prison system, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Saturday. A staff of 1,011 is proposed.

Also proposed by TDC is the addition of 718 beds for the care of less acutely ill inmates. These beds would be created either by converting existing cell blocks or building new facilities.

Churches refuse 'tainted' money

CROSBY, Texas (AP) — Eight churches northeast of Houston have refused to accept a $500 donation from an American Legion post because they say the money, which was earned in bingo games, is tainted.

Ministers from the Churches United in Caring hold that bingo is gambling.

"I feel like it would be a compromise of our beliefs — that gambling was wrong and dangerous," said the Rev. Rodney Weatherly, pastor of Community Baptist Church in Crosby. "Though it's a mild form of gambling, it can hurt somebody."

City housing authority to meet

City of Midland Housing Authority will meet at 2 p.m. Tuesday at Hillcrest Manor, 700 W. Scharbauer Drive.

Once a year the board meets at Hillcrest Manor, the housing project designed for low income elderly or handicapped persons. It is managed by the Housing Authority.

The board also will hear a report on the housing rehabilitation program funded by the federal government and look at operating budgets for 1984 and 1985.

City to receive tax payments

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The City of Midland will receive $4,291.85 in additional tax payments from the Comptroller's Office as a result of Comptroller Bob Bullock's offer to taxpayers to "get right" with the state during February.

Bullock had reported earlier that 85 taxpayers took advantage of the offer, with the state to collect some $500,000 in taxes.

Bullock announced he would waive the 10 percent penalty charge normally due on back taxes and not file criminal charges against taxpayers voluntarily contacting his office to pay back taxes.

Eighty-one of the 85 taxpayers owed sales taxes, he reported.

John Moore of the comptroller's tax information office said the payment to Midland is one of the larger amounts going to any city as a result of the program, with the funds to be paid during the next payment period.

ECISD's desegregation costs top $328,000

Aside from the emotions involved, Cox pointed out: "You're talking an extremely large number of dollars over a large amount of time, possibly indefinitely."

Costs to desegregate schools can run into millions of dollars. For example, ECISD's modifications to Blackshear Elementary, one of eight magnet schools, cost $430,000.

As many as four attorneys from Cox's firm have worked on the case, accumulating three file cabinets full of court cases, statistics and related documents.

School records dating back to the district's creation in 1909 had to be dug up and studied to determine if any discrimination had occurred. Cox estimated he has read 300 court decisions from desegregation cases, many of which change periodically as they are brought back into court.

Cox stressed that the district has worked to come up with the most effective desegregation plan, taking into account integration and education. "This district had the foresight to realize that integration was also an opportunity to look at some programs," he said.

"IT'S MADE IT harder to deal with from a lawyer's standpoint," said Cox, explaining that this philosophy had not been used in many other desegregation cases. Also, Odessa has had to deal with a tri-ethnic population, while traditional southern desegregation cases only dealt with two.

The district has filed findings of fact with the Justice Department, which has taken ECISD's side since the 1982 order. The Committee for Redress, Unity, Concern and Integrity at All Levels — the southside minority group represented by Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund attorneys — and the West Odessa Parents for Quality Education are also expected to submit their versions of the issue for use by Judge Harry Hudspeth.

An appeal is likely. Cox said, "We'd just have to analyze it and see" if Hudspeth's order varied from the one the district has been operating under since the 1982 decision. CRUCIAL, which appealed this order, could do so again if they were dissatisfied with Hudspeth's decision as could the westside Odessans.

If no appeal is made of the decision, legal activity would be reduced, with the court requiring periodic reports under "continuing jurisdiction." No other immediate action would occur, though history would indicate some action will likely be taken in the future.

Cox noted the possibility that MALDEF would go to court to force ECISD to pay some of its legal fees.

"It's never over," said Walker of the continuing desegregation situation. "Once you're involved with it, you're involved forever."

Lack of public facilities hurting many rural Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association of Towns and Townships is citing new evidence that "a severe lack of public facilities" may be one of the biggest problems facing rural America.

According to the association, a study by the Agriculture Department points to serious infrastructure shortcomings in rural water systems, fire protection, transportation and waste treatment facilities.

Meanwhile, the Reagan administration has asked Congress to cut rural development programs in the Farmers Home Administration by 45 percent in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, including less money for rural water and sewer projects.

"The study does not address the adequacy of existing facilities, only their availability and, to some extent, condition," the association said in its monthly newspaper. "Nonetheless, the trends suggested in the study are serious."

AGRICULTURE

Paula N. Alford, the association's director of federal affairs, wrote the article, based on the USDA study.

The association's report said the USDA study shows there are more than 45,000 rural communities in the United States, almost two-thirds of which are unincorporated areas such as townships. Those, it said, have many more gaps in the availability of public facilities than in incorporated areas, such as small, towns.

"Researchers found that waste water treatment plants and public water supplies are two of the biggest shortages in rural public facilities," the report said. "About half of the incorporated communities with fewer than 2,500 residents are served by a waste water treatment plant. Only 11 percent of the unincorporated areas of the nation, however, are served by a treatment plant."

Defining a public water system as one that provides piped water for human consumption to at least 15 service connections, the report said that two-thirds of the year-round households in rural cities have public water service. However, only slightly more than one-third of the unincorporated rural communities have any public water service.

"These numbers soar even higher in certain regions of the country," the report said. "In the North Central states, 59 percent of rural communities have no public water supply.

Tuesday is Agriculture Day

National Agriculture Day will be celebrated Tuesday, the first day of spring. It has been authorized as an official national observance by a joint resolution of Congress and a presidential proclamation in 1981. Agriculture Day was first celebrated in 1973 and has grown to include thousands of events at local, state and national levels.

Theme is this year's observance is "The Food Chain — A Human Chain."

National events will include the selection of "Miss Agriculture" and an address by Secretary of Agriculture John Block before the National Press Club. There will also be a "Taste the Country" barbecue and reception at the USDA Building for members of Congress and the Cabinet, as well as state and national agricultural organization leaders.

Parades, public exhibits, farm-city luncheons or breakfasts, special radio and television programs, special promotion by major agricultural manufacturers and business and demonstrations of grain grinding, cow milking sheep shearing will be among events staged across the nation. Pioneer Hi-Bred International has prepared public service TV announcements to increase awareness of agriculture's contribution to the economy for major metropolitan audiences.

Agriculture Day is set aside as a special time to focus on the achievements of the 23 million men and women involved in U.S. agriculture. This is one-fifth of the work force and represents suppliers of goods and services through the food and fiber chain to retail food, clothing and horticultural workers. Together, they are responsible for more than 20 percent of the gross national product.

In Texas, one of every 35 persons is a farmer or ranche while 25 percent of the state's retail trade business is directly associated with agricultural production and selling of food and fiber products.

Soviet Union buys additional U.S. corn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought an additional 200,000 metric tons of U.S. corn — about 7.9 million bushels — for delivery this year under a new long-term agreement that took effect on Oct. 1, says the Agriculture Department.

It was the first major sale of grain to the Soviet Union in nearly two months. The sale was reported to the department by private exporters, as required by law. No prices or other details were disclosed.

However, the department says the latest estimated farm price of corn is $3.15 per bushel.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

Thus, the latest sales would have an estimated U.S. farm value of about $26 million.

What's in a name? Perhaps a job

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Jeanne Payne

Janet Storie

In ancient times men often derived their surnames from their trade. Thus, names such as Carpenter, Baker, Smith and Cook are still common.

The custom persisted in later days as well — as witnessed by such examples as Superman and Mr. Goodwrench.

Even today, whether by coincidence or destiny, several local people bear names which correspond with their occupation.

There is, for example, the Rev. Steven Church, minister at First Christian Church. "I arranged that," he said of his name.

"The standard comment is, "Oh, I shouldn't forget that!" And then they do. It's better than being Rev. Evil, I suppose."

Capt. Billy Sparks is, appropriately, a firefighter in Midland. People often giggle when introduced to him and his job. "A lot of folks think it's funny," he said.

James Stone could have been, perhaps, a geologist or mineralogist. He chose instead to become a jeweler.

The medical profession also seems to lend itself to name correlation. Just ask nurse Jeanne Payne or Dr. Kevin Comfort at Midland Memorial Hospital, who are sometimes needled about the coincidence.

Shrewd businessmen may even be able to capitalize on their names to attract customers or establish a subconscious sense of dependability. Rich Properties (oil properties), Armstrong Movers, Burns Welders and Dotson Datsun are local examples of convenient combinations of surname and business.

"It certainly doesn't hurt," admitted Bob Rich of Rich Properties. "It sounds a lot better than Poore Properties. I get a lot of comments about it."

Then there are those people whose names seem strangely at odds with their chosen profession, such as accountant Horace Robb or the law firm of Michener, Swindle, Whitaker, Pratt and Mercer. By the same token it's apparent why Jeff and Mark Leak decided to use initials only for their business — L&L Backhoe and Plumbing.

Ordinary first names can sometimes take on new significance as well, depending on a person's job. There is, for example, accountant Bill Kirk, computer manager Chip McCarver, plumber John Underwood and dentist Phil Everett.

Interesting bit of trivia? Just the kind of thing that might attract the feature instincts of a reporter such as Channel 9's Janet Storie, whose height has earned her the nickname Short Story.

AA group meets in Stanton

STANTON — An Alcoholics Anonymous group is meeting at 7:30 p.m. each Wednesday in the First United Methodist Church in Stanton.

The church, at 208 E. St. Anna Ave., is near the Martin County Courthouse.

The newly-formed group has the support of Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders.

"I think AA is a wonderful organization," Saunders said. "AA can do more for drunks than I can, even though I naturally am around them everyday."

The sheriff said AA helps "a lot of people. We appreciate what they are doing" in helping the alcoholic achieve sobriety and treat the disease of alcoholism.

"I have nothing but praise for AA," Saunders said.

Anyone who suspects he may have a drinking problem or a living problem associated with alcohol may call 756-2769 in Stanton, the Martin County Sheriff's Office at 756-3336 or the First United Methodist Church at 756-2303.

West Texans purchase Seminole bank

The Seminole State National Bank has been purchased by a group of West Texas investors and will reopen for business as usual Monday morning under its new name, Seminole National Bank.

New president and chief executive officer will be Olen M. Brock, a longtime West Texas banker and a resident of Midland. According to Brock, the bank, which was declared insolvent by the Comptroller of the Currency on Friday, will continue business as usual when it opens Monday.

"We wish to stress and assure the people of Seminole and Gaines County that checks will be honored in the normal manner and that our aim is to provide the best possible banking services to our customers.

We will be accepting deposits and handling bank transactions in the usual manner when the bank opens Monday at 9 a.m. We will begin reviewing all loans as soon as possible so that we may repurchase as many of these as we can in order to retain the continuity of operations."

Brock also stated that the new bank has been recapitalized and is financially strong, and that the new owners are dedicated to establishing and maintaining Seminole National as a good citizen of the community that will provide longtime financial services to its customers.

And, he said, "We have the banking experience and financial resources to do this. We wish to express our appreciation for the continuing support and loyalty of the bank's present customers and we will strive to retain that loyalty and earn new customers for the bank."

First West Texas Bancshares, a newly-formed holding company, which purchased the bank, intends that Seminole National Bank be a strong, independent vital part of the community, according to Brock.

Owners of the holding company will serve as initial directors of the new bank. That includes Brock, J.L. Davis, Keith Moore, David Davis, all of Midland, and Houston Hamby of Plainview.

MAAM meeting seeks child abuse agency

From Staff Reports

Mothers (and others) Against Murder (MAAM), a statewide group organized to create legislation in 1985 aimed at creating a new state agency to investigate all child abuse reports, will hold a local meeting March 26.

The name of the organization was chosen because child abuse in any form to any degree is murderous, according to a spokeswoman. Each time a child is abused in any way, part of that child is murdered and can never be revived.

MAAM was begun by Stephanie Boucher, who has garnered the interest of House Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga in sponsoring legislation for the the new state agency. Speaker of the House Gib Lewis also has expressed an interest in helping.

The idea of the new state agency is to promote better prosecution of child abuse cases and to separate the more serious criminal cases from the milder "social work" cases. In addition, MAAM members feel a new state agency is needed for the following reasons:

— Child abuse investigations; by law a local matter, are seldom handled or coordinated well between law enforcement officials and local welfare workers.

— Too often, an abused child is killed because someone thought it more important to keep the family together than to guard against the potential of further abuse.

— More effective prosecution and better training of investigators are needed to build effective court cases.

Those concerned about child abuse are urged to attend the meeting at 7 p.m. in the Cap Electric Room on Highway 80 in Stanton. For more information, contact Ann Prough at (915) 756-3853, or Toya Hall, 756-2784.

Area LULAC members to convene in Midland

From Staff Reports

The district convention for the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) will held March 31-April 1 at the Midland Holiday Inn-Country Villa.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. March 31. Included in the convention will be workshops on education, the EEOC and the Small Business Administration. There will be a luncheon and a banquet with guest speakers Tony Martin, chairman of First City Bank, and Johnny Mata, LULAC state director. A dance is also planned.

Admission for the convention is $20 per person and pre-registration is required.

LULAC was founded in 1929 in Corpus Christi. Three Mexican-American organizations combined to form the group, with a goal of overcoming discrimination. The organization now has about 500,000 members throughout the United States.

LULAC encourages patriotism and works to protect economic, political and social rights for Hispanics. It places its greatest emphasis on education and voter registration.

Almost $1 million in scholarships are awarded annually by the group. All money raised locally is doubled by the national headquarters in Washington. The Midland council plans to present its first scholarships this year.

The Midland council was chartered one year ago and plans to continue raising money for future scholarships. It encourages children to continue their education and plans to increase its voter registration drive.

For more information on the convention or LULAC, contact Isabel Jimenez, council president, at 683-8084, or Edia Hernandez at 683-2665.

Funds sought for transplant patient

From Staff Reports

A benefit to help raise funds for financing a liver transplant for Cherie Shelburne, 8-year-old daughter of Judy and Richard Shelburne of Midland, will be held Monday night at Playland Skating Center, 1004-A Andrews Highway.

Targeted for families, the event should benefit not only Cherie, but the health of the entire family, according to Kathi Greeman, Permian Basin assistant supervisor of International Jazzworks, co-sponsors of the benefit.

Beginning at 6 p.m., an hour-long workout geared toward all family members will be held. From 7 to 10 p.m., the family is invited to stay at the rink, usually closed on Monday nights, and skate.

A minimum $3 donation per person will be requested. All money will be donated to Cherie's trust fund, said Bill Jackson, part-owner of the skating center.

Cherie, a victim of biliary atresia, which affects the bile duct, is in Denver, Colo., for testing. She is expected to return to Midland with her family in time for the benefit.

Art treasures kept in Taiwan tunnel

The National Palace Museum near Taipei, Taiwan, rests against a mountain in which a 600-foot tunnel provides safe storage for more than 500,000 art objects that the museum can't accommodate.

The museum's collection totals some 620,000 art objects, including 12,000 paintings, 343 tapestries, 23,500 objects of porcelain, 4,400 bronze, 3,800 of jade, 1,900 of enamelware and 421 of lacquer, plus many rare books and documents.

'Joy of Money' class slated

Midland College is offering "Joy of Money" Wednesdays from 7-8:30 p.m. for six weeks beginning March 28. Cost is $15.

The course will deal with ways for individuals to become more skilled in managing their money. Students will realize the fun and creativity of money management as they learn ways to control their future freedom when dealing with the money world.

Interested persons should pre-register at the Community Services Department in the administration building. MC will be closed March 19-25 for spring break.

Lee's council 'outstanding'

Recently the Lee High School Student Council was named an Outstanding Student Council for the state — the third consecutive year Lee has earned this award.

The council was voted Parliamentarian for District 8 at the meeting held recently in Odessa. This year's officers are President Keith Cox, Vice President Devin Phiffer, Recording Secretary Steve Lewis, Corresponding Secretary Tandee Thomas and Treasurer Felicia Farrias.

Automotive students get car

Parkhill, Smith and Cooper Inc. has donated a 1978 Ford Granada to the automotive technology program at Midland College, which serves both college and high school students. The car will be used for theory and hands-on training of technology students.

MC plans to use the car in the Regional 1984 Vocational Industrial Clubs of America Skills Contest at Lee High School and to help in preparing students for other contests and for servicing and repairing cars.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC closed for spring break

By H.A. TUCK

Midland College is having its spring break this week and there won't be much going on. All classes are suspended and none of the offices will be open during the week. Classes resume March 26.

• • •

Women's Kaleidoscope, which is operated by the college's Special Needs Program, will have a free one-night seminar on Monday, on Assertiveness Training. Practicing psychologist Sam Guyton will present the seminar at 7 p.m. in Room 136, of the Occupational/Technical Building. She will discuss in-depth communication skills and techniques. Students also will learn the difference between aggressive and assertive communication through role playing.

Among the areas to be addressed will be: how to say no, how to express anger and criticism, and how to handle manipulation and rejection.

• • •

The Ronnie Milsap concert, scheduled Friday, in Chaparral Center, has been cancelled. Milsap had a conflict with a recording date, but will be back in Midland for a concert at the Chap Center sometime in September.

• • •

Although the Chaparrals didn't make the field for the Region V men's basketball tournament, there are some plaudits due for the folks who made the Regional women's and men's tournaments such big successes March 6-10.

First, to Bill Willimas for bringing both tourneys to Midland on a single week; to MC athletic director Delnor Poss who looked after all sorts of details as tournament director; to Chap Center director Mike Stevens who handled lots of items at the site; and, finally, to all the others who handled their individual duties so well.

Williams bid on both tournaments for 1985, but the conference members finally decided to hold the events in Snyder in 1985.

• • •

It was especially interesting to have the women's teams playing in Midland. McLennan Commuity College of Waco, coached by Chicky Mason, ran a full-court press seldom seen executed so well. It paid off with a victory over Odessa College. And Western Texas College, the fourth place finisher in the conference, knocked off the conference champion Howard College in the men's regional finals. That was a good indication of how tough and well-balanced the conference was this year. McLennan goes to Mississippi and Western Texas to Kansas for the women's and men's national championship tournaments.

• • •

While many MC students this week head for the beaches of South Texas or the ski slopes of New Mexico or Colorado, the varsity tennis teams visit Oklahoma for a series of matches during the spring break. Coach Joe Williams has scheduled matches against Clemson, Oklahoma State, Oral Roberts, Kansas State, and Arkansas Tech during the week as he prepares his players for the stretch run of conference, region and national competition.

• • •

John Hoenberger, director of maintenance, still is assessing damage caused tocampus plants and trees during the prolonged Christmas-time cold spell. He feels between 2,000 and 4,000 plants, plus a few trees, might hve been killed despite extensive watering just before the frigid weather hit.

In spite of that, there are some beautiful blooming trees and flowers scattered around the campus right now.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

making the grade

A Lee High School senior won third place in the Optimist International — North Texas District Freedoms Foundation Essay Contest. Bryan Bearden, son of Layne and Ruth Bearden of 3337 Providence, was awarded a trophy. The topic of the contest was "Freedom, Our Most Precious Heritage." The competition included entries from the 101 Optimist Clubs in the district.

Bryan Bearden

Bearden was also honored by the Optimist Club of Midland as Young Texan of the Month. He will now compete in the North Texas District Young Texan/Tex-Anne competition. Monthly winners in district competition compete for a $1,000 scholarship on the state level.

THREE HIGH school automotive students will be participating in the National Plymouth Troubleshooting contest. Brad Locke and Carlos Jimenez from Lee High and Roman Estrada from Midland High will attend the first phase of the contest in Odessa March 26. Students will tour the city and hear presentations by various politicians and members of the news media.

KATHLEEN DEAN, physical therapy student at Texas School of Allied Health Sciences at Galveston, has been named to the Dean's List for fall semester. She had to maintain a GPA of at least 3.5 to qualify. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thurston Dean, 1607 Gulf.

KAREN REDDIN, daughter of Bob and Joyce Reddin of 1609 Neely, was recently honored by the Midland Downtown Lions Club. She is a senior at Midland High School. She is Junior Engineering Technical Society secretary, band chaplin and a member of the student council president's cabinet. She is also a member of National Honor Society and Flag Corp.

"Making the Grade" features students who have received degrees, awards, scholarships or other honors. Items should be submitted to Rhonda Rigenhagen at the Reporter-Telegram. Pictures can be picked up or returned with a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Jannetta Eaden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lee Eaden of 1615 English Drive, has been selected Tall City Lions Club Queen for 1984-85. The 17-year-old attends Lee High School. She was 1983 Homecoming Duchess, two year letterman in basketball, state band finalist, senior rifleman and drill team chaplin. She is a past member of T.A.M.E. and was first runner-up in the 1983 Juneteen pageant.

Medalist to speak at 'Tree of Life'

Guest speaker for this year's Tree of Life fundraiser for Midland Christian School is Randy Matson. The College Station resident was the 1968 Olympic gold medalist in the shot put.

Randy Matson

The reception will be March 27 at ClayDesta National Bank Atrium. Along with a ladies luncheon in September and the fall dinner in November, the spring reception raises operational funds for the school.

Matson was born March 5, 1945, in Kilgore and graduated from Pampa High School. He was shot put and discus state champion his junior and senior years, breaking both records his senior year. He was also an All-District football player, All-State basketball player and All-American in track.

In 1967 he graduated as a Distinguished Student from Texas A&M with a bachelor of business administration degree in marketing. He was named the Southwest Conference Sophomore of the Year by the Dallas Morning News in basketball.

In 1964 he won a shot put silver medal in the Olympics. He broke the world's record four times before graduating from college. Matson was NCAA shot put and discuss champion in 1966 and 1967. He was national AAU champion for six years. He set a new Olympic record in the 1968 Olympics.

Scouts given funds for aquatic camp

From Staff Reports

The Atlantic Richfield Foundation has donated $26,500 to the Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America which will be used to purchase property for expansion of an aquatic camp.

Teh foundation presented the donation at the council's Feb. 16 executive board meeting. The money will be used to purchase about 1.5 acres on the east bank of Lake Colorado City, which will nearly double the size of the present camp facility.

The camp, scheduled to be in full operation within the next two years, will offer rowing, canoeing, water skiing and sailing. A committee is working on development of the park.

American Petrofina donated the improvements and assigned the lease to a recreational club on the westside of the lake to the Buffalo Trail Council in 1969. This lease is will expire April 1, 1985.

American Petrofina donated a 1.7-acre piece of land and dining hall building on the eastside of the lake in 1980. The foundation's donation will be used to purchase another 1.5 acres on which to expand the camp.

We leave you few options.

The Honda Accord LX 4-Door Sedan is so loaded with standard equipment that it's hard to list any options. In fact, almost the only one is a 4-speed automatic transmission. Practically everything else comes standard.

So you have no choice but to enjoy its cruise control, AM/FM stereo with cassette, air conditioning and Michelin steel-belted radials. Along with engineering features like front-wheel drive, 4-wheel independent suspension, power-assisted self-adjusting front disc brakes and a powerful new 12-valve engine.

More power to you: there's variable-assist power steering, power windows, power door locks and a power antenna.

SALE ENDS MARCH 7
Everything reduced. Furniture from previous trips has the largest discounts. We are going to begin phasing out larger pieces of furniture which are becoming increasingly difficult for us to handle physically. Our goal is everything on one level, not stacked three high. Accessories, clocks, paintings, and smaller antiques will also be discounted; but, the bigger it is the better the buy. Wilford C. Phillips Antiques, 6 Widener Strip, open after 11 A.M. daily. 694-7396.

PURE SILK

"WE WANTED A QUALITY LIFESTYLE, NOT GIMMICKS AND GIVEAWAYS..."

"...That's why, when John and I were transferred to Midland, we chose to live at Oakridge Apartments. Sure, we passed up a few gimmicks and giveaways offered by the other communities. But what we got instead is an apartment community superior to anything else we saw. New on the market this year, Oakridge Apartments are bright and beautiful with sparkling new amenities and lots of extras. But more than that, Oakridge is a real quality neighborhood. The people out here are just great, and the management team is the best we've ever had."

1-, 2- and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

Porcelain Painting

Text by David Lee Forrest

Evalena Simmons illustrated her home in this handpainted lamp.

Evalena Simmons carefully selects colors from her palette to finish this porcelain piece.

When talking to a dedicated porcelain artist, don't tell him you like his "ceramics."

"That's almost a dirty word to us," said Evalena Simmons, a Midland porcelain painting teacher and the program chairman of the Midland Porcelain Art Club.

"Porcelain first developed from ordinary pottery, but it is a thing beyond and apart from it," wrote Eugene F. Bunker Jr., apparently a true porcelain aficionado, in the 1975 World Book Encyclopedia entry on porcelain.

"All chinaware or porcelain is pottery, in the sense that it is one of the highest members of the great pottery family. But not all chinaware is pottery by any means," he said.

Members of the Porcelain Art Club believe their art of painting on porcelain, tile, enamel and glass is often misunderstood.

"People think we just paint little plates and hang them up," said Mrs. Simmons. "We paint anything; if it doesn't move we paint it."

In her home, Mrs. Simmons has plates, cups, vases, paintings on glass and lamps decorated with porcelain painting techniques. She even painted her tile kitchen countertop herself.

"It (porcelain painting) is very versatile. We can bake with it," Mrs. Simmons said. "We can use it for our lamps and windows."

"We can eat off it," another club member added.

The club likes to stress that porcelain painting is a fine art, however.

"We have a problem of educating the public that this is a fine art — not a craft-type hobby," Mrs. Simmons said.

Famous artists Rembrandt and Van Gogh both worked in china factories for periods of time, she added.

Club members explained that most decorated porcelain now sold in stores is simply made with mass-produced "decals" applied to it. Sometimes a bit of hand painting will be added to the decal so that it can be labeled "hand-painted."

"It's passed as hand-painted, but it really isn't," Mrs. Simmons said. "We disapprove of that very much."

The quality of true hand-painted porcelain doesn't always come cheaply.

"Truthfully, I can start a student off with $50," said Betty Seeker, another club member and instructor. "It really isn't too expensive."

That sum could provide a beginner with the basic paints and materials, she said, although not a piece of good porcelain to paint.

A major expense in porcelain painting is the kiln which Mrs. Seeker said most serious porcelain artists eventually want to have.

A kiln is necessary to heat the painted articles to make the paint and porcelain bond.

"The joy of china painting is going to the kiln first thing in the morning," Mrs. Seeker said, to see how the colors have come out.

"It is not an easy art," Mrs. Simmons said. "It takes a lot of practice; more practice than teaching. The teacher can only teach the basics."

Porcelain painting is growing in popularity, according to club members. There are 55 porcelain art clubs in Texas alone, Mrs. Seeker said, with at least 2,700 members. The local chapter has 68 members.

She said she paints porcelain "for the feeling of self-accomplishment."

"It allows just so much versatility," said Mrs. Seeker. "You're not bound by a piece of canvas."

Also, she noted, after having painted a piece of china yourself, "it's your piece of fine china."

The Midland Porcelain Art Club will exhibit porcelain pieces at a tea, 2-4 p.m. April 1 in the Midland Woman's Club in Hogan Park.

Most of the 68 club members will display their own hand-painted works. About 200 or 300 items are expected to be shown.

The public is invited to attend.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Three generations of a longtime Midland family, Harriet Faudree (Mrs. Bob) Roberts, her daughter, Ellen (Mrs. Larry) Bell and Ellen's daughter, Amy, entertained with a beautifully appointed mother-daughter-grandmother tea recently.

Colorful arrangements of spring flowers filled the Bell home for the party, which was held on two successive afternoons. The hostesses greeted the guests in charming, antique, heirloom dresses.

Serving in the house party were Dorothy (Mrs. Bill) Neely, Dorothy (Mrs. Bill) Gilmore, Bobie Jean (Mrs. Gene) McDaniel, Marylyn (Mrs. Dave) Leonard and Jennifer, Kathy (Mrs. Daryl) Faris and Marcie, Rhonda (Mrs. Lynn Jr.) Durham, and Caitlin, Jane (Mrs. Ray) Riddle, Patti (Mrs. Watson Jr.) LaForce and Margaret (Mrs. Courtney) Cowden.

NORMA JEAN AND BUD BOLES entertained with a party last weekend to announce the engagement of their son, Bobby Boles, and Erin Erskine, both of Dallas. The party was a doubly happy occasion, also marking the Boles' wedding anniversary.

Their home was beautifully decorated for the event with bouquets of spring flowers in pinks, yellows and greens.

Out-of-towners sharing the festivities were the bride-elect's parents, Evelyn and Bob Erskine of Dallas, and from Oklahoma City, the Boles' son, Greg, and friends Jackie and Jack Sanford. The Boles' daughter, Kathy, assisted with the party.

Plans are being made for a July 14 wedding in Dallas' Highland Park Presbyterian Church.

ONE HUNDRED EIGHTEEN members of the Museum of the Southwest's President's Club enjoyed an elegant evening recently. The black tie event began at the museum, where the guests were served cocktails and hors d'oeuvres as they viewed the current exhibit, an Alfred Morang retrospective.

The annual President's dinner, this year honoring Al Dillard, followed at the Petroleum Club. The prime rib dinner was accompanied by a variety of wines, and champagne and chocolate mousse was served for dessert.

The Thouvenel Quartet played during the dinner hour. After-dinner entertainment featured 12-year-old Felyce Rhodes from Hobbs, New Mexico, who dazzled the audience with her magnificent singing voice, and illusions performed by Bobby Holt, assisted by Holly (Mrs. Barry) Williamson and Peggy (Mrs. David) Eckley.

Special guests were the president's wife, Jane Dillard, museum director Jerry Porter and wife, Nancy, and Anne Sherburn, development and public relations officer for the museum.

GERTRUDE (MRS. EDWIN) ALSTRIN and her sister, Helen Giffert, recently returned from an enjoyable two-week trip to Arizona, which included a visit with Midlander Mable (Mrs. W. David) Henderson at her winter home in Green Valley.

The Midlanders were entertained at a series of luncheons and dinner parties while in Tucson. En route to and from Arizona, they enjoyed stopovers at Gertrude's Ruidoso condo.

Attending Margie Britton's initiation into the University of Arizona's Pi Beta Phi chapter was a highlight of the trip for Gertrude. Margie is the daughter of former Midlanders Libby and Dr. Hill Britton of Winston Salem, North Carolina, and niece of Susan and Ron Britton.

A WEEK OF SKIING at Vail and nearby Beaver Creek was enjoyed recently by five Midland couples, Judy and Warren Bartley, Margie and Carl Beach, Connie and Hill Glover, Nancy and David Holland and Paula and Dr. David Mallams.

They were blessed with excellent ski conditions and beautiful weather, and when not on the slopes, took pleasure in the shopping and the area's many fine restaurants. The Midlanders also enjoyed watching the preparations being made for the World Cup Classic sponsored by former President Gerald Ford, which was to take place the week following their visit.

HONEYMOONING IN SOUTHERN California are Stephanie and Butch Stewart, who were married on St. Patrick's Day in the First Presbyterian Church. The bride, daughter of Diane and Richard Mendenhall, is employed in the Trust Department of First City National Bank. Son of Jo and Morrell Stewart, the groom is with GCG Drilling Co.

Pre-nuptial festivities included a miscellaneous display shower given in the home of Sharon (Mrs. Jerry) Dunnam, with Sandy (Mrs. Jim) Alsup, Gail (Mrs. Gary) Gililland and Pat (Mrs. Herb) Stanley as co-hostesses, and a miscellaneous shower given by Robin Bagwell, Dixie (Mrs. Jack) Bagwell and Nita (Mrs. Derel) Williams.

The bridesmaids' luncheon was hosted at Anasazi's by Suellen (Mrs. Frank) Nall and her daughter, Kathlyn (Mrs. Tommy) Bolin of Dallas. Following the rehearsal Friday evening, the wedding party and family members returned to the Mendenhall home for dessert. The wedding reception was held at Midland Country Club.

Out-of-town wedding guests included the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Buda Belcher of Hutchinson, Kansas, and former Midlanders Marian and Bob Scott of San Antonio.

MIDLAND HIGH SENIOR Catherine Furgeson was honored by Danie Lebow at a delightful luncheon recently in Green Tree Country Club. A St. Patrick's Day theme was carried out in the party decor.

Guests were the honoree's mother, Nell (Mrs. Don) Furgeson, her sister, Amy, her grandmother, Jo (Mrs. E.H.) Kirksey, Shannon Thomas, Jill Giebel, Jamie and Beverly Henry, Debbie Fleeger, Carrie Hall and Connie Southerland.

Catherine plans to attend Texas Tech in the fall.

Nurseymen offer advice to Texas gardeners

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Plants that look dead now may still be saved and patience is key to spending less on plants this spring, nurserymen say.

Gardners are advised to check trees and shrubs carefully for signs of life in the next few weeks before cutting them down.

Large shade trees, like crepe myrtles, remain dormant while temperatures are cool. Be patient, wait for an extended warm weather and watch for signs of leaves, advises Larry Galbreath of Pletcher's Wholesale Nursery in Harlingen.

Scratch the stem of any plant with a pocket knife to check for green signs of life before spending money for replacements.

To encourage regrowth of bushes and shrubs, prune away dead parts of the plant as close to the ground as necessary, until "good, green bark" can be seen, advises Ted Turner Jr., of Turner's Nursery in Corpus Christi.

When a plant is cut to soil level, rake away the earth and leave the top of the green stem exposed to the heat and sun.

"It's sort of a race to see if the plant can break out leaves and begin photosynthesis to save itself before the roots rot," Turner said.

"Don't be jerking out anything, wait and get some heat to see if it's gonna put out," he said.

In order to allow for large arms and fullness under the arms, slash the pattern on a slight bias from below the armhole notch to the waistline. Spread the pieces apart and pin or cut tissue paper to fill in. Then recut the curve of the armhole. If the dress has a sleeve be sure to insert the same amount of tissue paper into the front and back of the sleeve. Slash each side from the underarm seam at the armpit toward the center two inches. Then cut at a right angle toward the wrist tapering to nothing. Spread the sleeve the same amount as the armhole. Fill in with tissue paper and recut the armhole line of the sleeve.

DEAR ABBY

Pecan pie recipe good for years

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was born in England, wed an American, and came to the United States in 1919. I've been a widow for 39 years. I'm nearly 92, and I still take my daily walks and feed the pigeons, who know me and come in a bunch to meet me.

I'll get to the point, Abby. About 15 years ago you sent me your recipe for pecan pie. At the bottom of the recipe it says, "Please let me know how yours came out." I have a guilty conscience because I have made literally dozens of your pecan pies and not once have I written to let you know that I now have the reputation for being the world's best pecan pie maker. It's easy to make, and all who taste it say it's the best pecan pie they've ever had.

I sent the recipe to my niece in Sussex, and she has had as much success with it as I. The only problem is that pecans are available in England only around Christmastime, so she used walnuts and said they are just as good as pecans. Her neighbors (all very well-to-do) think the pie is tip-top. So I'm writing to thank you, and let you know that soon Dear Abby's pecan (or walnut) pie will be the rage of Sussex! — ELIZABETH IN N.Y.

DEAR ELIZABETH: Your letter made my day. And if anyone out there wants the recipe, here it is:

ABBY'S PECAN (OR WALNUT) PIE

1 cup white corn syrup
1 cup dark brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup melted butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 whole eggs
1 heaping cup shelled pecans (or walnuts)

Mix syrup, sugar, salt, butter, vanilla. Add slightly beaten eggs. Pour into a 9-inch unbaked pie shell. Sprinkle pecans over filling. Bake in 350-degree oven for approximately 45 minutes.

You can top it with a bit of whipped cream or ice cream, but even plain, nothing tops this! And please let me know how yours turns out.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ENGAGED IN OMAHA: When people ask you how many carats your diamond is, they probably want to know how much lettuce was involved.

(Lonely? Get Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. Send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Many Americans turning to drier white wines

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

When it came to white wine, it used to be said, "Americans talk dry and drink sweet."

This meant that in spite of Americans' stated desire to have dry white wine, what they really drank was wine with 1 to 2 percent residual sugar. Those who truly like bone-dry wine would ignore "house white" (usually a chablis), because it was usually too sweet.

But I sense that tastes are changing, and although no statistics are kept on the average sweetness Americans prefer in their wines, it's clear that restaurants are switching in the last couple of years from sweeter to drier house wines.

Years ago, the only "house whites" found in American restaurants were sweet enough to turn off a wine lover.

If a bottle was not finished one day, it was held over to the next. And if it spoiled in that time, well, the consumer sitting in the smoke-filled bar wouldn't notice, went the argument.

But restaurateurs began to realize that they weren't selling as much wine with dinner as the marketing handbooks said they should, and by 1981 or so began looking more critically at their house wines. Some chose to serve two wines — one, behind the bar, was the same old song: sweet central valley blah-juice. A second, called the "premium pour," was bone dry, and was usually sold to diners at the same price as the bar brand, and earned the restaurateur less profit.

However, the tradeoff was worth it, many restaurateurs found, because a glass of good wine with dinner makes the food taste better, and the patron leaves with a pleasant feeling for the experience, and is more likely to return.

Tepusquet Vin Blanc, Beringer Chablis, Taylor California Cellars Chardonnay, Sebastiani Country White, and Robert Mondavi Vintage White, to name just a few, are now offering restaurants an alternative to the sweeter, bland stuff or the more expensive "premium pours."

There are far more generic white wines on the market today than in the past, and more of them are truly dry.

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

AT WIT'S END

Waiting for royal birth full-time job

BY ERMA BOMBECK

I'm trying to clean up things and get my life in order so I'll be able to devote the next seven months to the birth of Princess Di's and Prince Charles's second child.

Already I've made a notation of where I was and what I was doing when I got the news.

I was having breakfast with my husband (half a grapefruit and a bowl of crispies with half a banana and skim milk) when I heard it announced on "Good Morning, America."

Anticipating all of my questions, a British spokesperson said if the new baby was a girl and was as "spirited" as her Aunt Anne was with her brother Prince Charles, it could give Prince William a run for his money. (Not to mention the United Kingdom and Canada.)

In the ensuing months, I must be prepared to absorb Princess Di's maternity wardrobe, her royal diet, and if we're lucky perhaps her milliner will "leak" sketches of the hat she will wear during delivery.

The new nursery will come under scrutiny, as well as will her layette. Time, Life and Newsweek will have in-depth interviews with the palace obstetrician, details about the new nanny and how the people of Great Britain are being prepared for the imminent birth.

There's no doubt there will be a poll conducted to suggest a name.

The tackier tabloids will be busy dispensing updated graphs of what this does to the line of succession, with perhaps an outrageous quote by one of the princesses complaining that if they knew they were going to be this far removed from the throne they would never have practiced all that waving all those years.

Psychology Today will run a cover story on the psychological effects of the Cain and Abel sibling rivalry and a made-for-television movie is undoubtedly being put together as I write showing the royal couple planning a second child, starring Victoria Principal and Christopher Reeve.

Already I have read where a British gynecologist is warning of a copycat baby boom and suggesting that the royal couple stop at two children.

"Women think it is a great distinction for their children to share the same birth year as a prince or princess and an influence like Diana would mean an extra 2,000 babies this year," he said.

There were a lot of things I was going to do this year. I was going to clean out the hall closet, stitch my personal goals on a tea towel, plan a family reunion, and maybe start writing a new book, but all that has to go on the back burner.

Getting a royal baby born is just too time-consuming.

Older persons' insomnia studied

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — If you have to read yourself to sleep, skip the best-sellers and instead pick up the dullest volume you can find, a researcher says.

Many of the subjects of a study on insomnia among the elderly say they intentionally read boring books to head off to dreamland, said George Shute, a graduate student at Southern Illinois University.

"A lot of elderly people read themselves to sleep," he said. "They read something that's boring. If it's interesting, they'll be alert. Physiologically, they'll be aroused, their heart rate will be increased, their muscle tension will be a little higher ..., their breathing will be a little faster."

But Shute doesn't recommend reading as a sedative because "no matter how monotonous reading is, there's going to be some type of interest to it."

In his sleep research on 20 people aged 60 to 83, the 47-year-old psychology major says he's far found that the best cures for insomnia are the same tricks your mother probably taught you.

"The kinds of things we're thinking about are very reminiscent of the old counting-sheep process," he said.

The key is concentrating on something monotonous, Shute said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Some insomnia medication used with caution

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother has been depressed since my father died. She never was a really heavy sleeper and now she is having a lot of trouble falling asleep. The doctor gave her some medication which was supposed to help her with her depression and it seemed to work. However, he has now discontinued it. Would you have any idea why? — Ida, New York City

Dear Ida: I would have to assume that the actual or potential side effects of the medication prescribed for your mother outweighed its beneficial effects. For example, tricyclic antidepressants may be effective in the treatment of some patients with insomnia, but they may also increase the risk of cardiac problems. These side effects cannot be ignored even though the medication appears to be doing its job.

Dear Dr. Solomon: From a medical point of view, how is it decided who gets a pancreas transplant? I have diabetes. Should I try to be placed on the waiting list for a transplant? — Perry, San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Perry: At present, transplants are reserved for patients with diabetes who have developed serious complications. The risk of rejection of the transplant in these patients is considered less serious than the risk of complications of the diabetes itself if nothing is done.

According to Dr. David E. Sutherland, of the University of Minnesota Medical School in Minneapolis, it will be possible to offer the choice of a pancreas transplant to more patients once of the problem of rejection is overcome.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is in high school and the school requires a physical examination by the family doctor before a student can take part in athletic activities. One of the questions the doctor asked my son was whether he had mono. What does mono have to do with playing ball? — Mrs. J.M., New York City

Dear Mrs. M.: Patients with infectious mononucleosis often have an enlarged spleen and are therefore at risk for rupture of the spleen.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist with the Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question write to Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

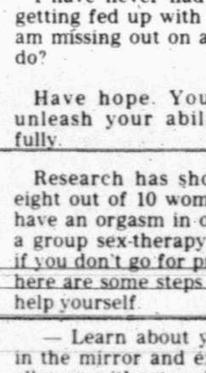

Hormone problem linked to acne

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Seventy percent of people experience acne at some time in their lives.

Now there is hope of preventing some of its physical and emotional scarring, according to Dr. Lowell Goldsmith of the University of Rochester.

Goldsmith, a dermatologist, uses a medication derived from cortisone, which suppresses the production of a male hormone produced by the adrenal glands of both men and women.

An imbalance of the hormone may be more significant in causing acne — at least in some cases — than testosterone, the male hormone produced by the endocrine glands.

DR. KURIANSKY

Self-image involved in sexual fulfillment

By DR. JUDITH KURIANSKY

I have never had an orgasm. I'm getting fed up with this and know I am missing out on a lot. What can I do?

Have hope. You can learn to unleash your ability to respond fully.

Research has shown that about eight out of 10 women can learn to have an orgasm in only 10 weeks of a group sex-therapy program. Even if you don't go for professional help, here are some steps you can take to help yourself.

— Learn about your body. Look in the mirror and examine yourself all over without making judgments. Include touching. Notice what it feels like to touch and be touched.

— Examine your attitudes about sex. Do you believe you shouldn't be sexual? Where did you get that idea? What did you learn about sex from your parents? Ask your mother what your grandmother taught her about sex. Then separate your own choices from those of your relatives.

— Face your fears. What will happen if you let go? Will you somehow lose yourself? Will your partner leave you after you have totally "given" yourself? Not having orgasm — no matter how painful you think that is — may actually be less painful than the losses you imagine would happen if you did completely let go.

— Reprogram your brain. Think "The more I let go, the more pleasure I experience for myself and with my partner."

— Get in touch with your anger, perhaps towards your partner, men in general or your parents. Have irrational outbursts at them in the privacy of your room. This may cause temporary problems in your real relationship, but if the love is strong, the good feelings will return, in even stronger force. Many women have their first orgasm after they release their feelings of anger.

— Be assertive. If you want to have orgasm, you have to feel you are entitled to have what you want. Say "yes" to three things you ordinarily deny yourself, and "no" to three things you ordinarily agree to do even though you really don't want to.

— Learn about your sexual response. Spend time on your own experimenting with your responsiveness. Let your imagination flow freely. Pamper yourself for an hour each day.

Keep these three fundamental principles in mind:

1. Your sexual response and your orgasm is for yourself and by yourself.

2. It will happen if you just let yourself respond. Stop trying and stop watching yourself.

3. Enjoy whatever happens without focusing on having to respond in a particular way.

Baby-care classic updated

Hearst Feature Service

Dr. Michael Rothenberg, who is helping to update Dr. Benjamin Spock's classic "Baby and Child Care," offers these insights into modern child-rearing:

— Day care. "There is absolutely no evidence that putting a child in day care has any detrimental effect whatsoever, all things being equal." Even newborns can do well under a substitute care-giver, but infants and toddlers generally do better in a small day-care home than in a large center.

— Treating fever. "We've taken a more relaxed approach to treating fever. You don't have to rush in with anti-fever medication as soon as the temperature gets up to 101. There is no demonstrable evidence of harmful effects of fevers as high as 103. The important thing is you've got to find out what's causing the fever."

— Single children. The growing trend toward one-child families is not necessarily bad as long as parents are aware of the pitfalls.

"My opinion is that one can be perfectly successful and have a perfectly normal single child in a family. There is nothing inherently dangerous about being a single child. But parents who've decided to have only one child should probably exercise extra caution to prevent spoiling the child. I think they're more at risk of being too permissive."

An only child also may feel more pressure to live up to his parents' hopes and expectations. "That one child has to fulfill the dreams of both parents."

— Bed-sharing. Parents should avoid taking sick or frightened children into their bed. In a recent Parents magazine survey, 82 percent of the upper-middle-class California families who were interviewed admitted they sometimes take their kids into bed with them, despite the warnings of most child-rearing experts.

"Our advice is not to take your children into bed with you when they're sick or frightened, but to stay in their rooms with them until they're comforted and can go back to sleep. Ben's and my primary reason for advising against it is not a sexual one at all. It has to do with a regressive pull. It fosters a sliding back developmentally. When kids are ill, they're much more vulnerable from a psychological point of view to getting hooked on a kind of dependency.

"On the other hand, having the child jump into bed for a morning cuddle is something else." A moment of warmth and closeness at the start of the day is nothing to worry about.

— Superbabies. Parents who try to turn their kids into intellectual superbabies may cause a lot of harm by placing undue stress on a narrow aspect of human development. Spock feels so strongly about the subject that he has written a new chapter entitled, "Can You Make Superkids?" Some upwardly mobile parents, for instance, are using flashcards to promote reading and math skills in infants who can't even talk.

Instead of emphasizing quality, parents need to be concerned with the child's overall well-being.

Brain waves show perfect pitch ability

NEW YORK (AP) — When most people try to decide if a tone they're hearing is pitched higher than a previous one, they generate a brain wave measurable toward the back of the scalp.

But people with perfect pitch — the ability to recognize a pitch by its musical name — showed a far smaller wave or none at all in a recent experiment, and that gives a clue to their rare ability, an Illinois researcher says.

The difference suggests that they use an unusual set of mental tuning forks to recognize each tone, while others must search their long-term memory to compare the new tone to previous ones, Michael Coles said.

Coles, associate director of the Cognitive Physiology Laboratory at the University of Illinois in Champaign, and two colleagues report the results of the brain wave experiment in today's issue of Science.

Perfect pitch appears in probably less than 1 percent of the general population. It lets people tell a B from a B-flat about as easily as they distinguish red from pink. One theory says everyone has it at birth, but most people lose it because they grow up hearing the same tunes in different keys. The ability can be learned, however. In the Illinois experiment, seven music students with perfect pitch and seven without it listened to a series of electronic tones while an electrode on their scalps measured a brain wave called P300.

In sorting through 2,000 tones in blocks of 100, the perfect-pitch students showed a smaller brainwave than the other students, or no wave at all. That shows they weren't reaching back into long-term memory to compare each tone with some remembered standard, Coles said.

Multiple myeloma diagnosis better

BOSTON (AP) — Better diagnosis, not more disease, is probably responsible for a dramatic increase in the reported incidence of deaths from multiple myeloma in the United States over the past three decades, according to a study published recently.

The research was conducted in Malmo, Sweden, where the malignant growth of plasma cells, usually in the bone marrow, strikes about four of every 100,000 people each year. This rate is among the highest in the world.

Masland

Fine Carpet Since 1866

House of Carpets..Midland's oldest and most respected name in carpets for over 33 years, presents America's oldest and most respected carpet family... the Maslands.

Masland, originally founded in 1866 by C. H. Masland, is still managed by the Masland family. Mike Masland is Chairman of the Board, Bill Masland is President, C. H. Masland III is V.P. for Research, and Daniel L. Masland is V.P. in Purchasing. You can be assured that the Masland quality and reputation is a result of personal family pride. You cannot go wrong with the Masland name on your carpets!

Only The Very Rich Can Afford Cheap Carpets!... Cheap carpets are necessarily made of cheap materials put together cheaply, so naturally they do not perform as well as better quality carpets. Carpets of higher quality cost a little more to begin with, but in the long run look better and last longer, thereby giving better value. For better carpet values, see Masland Carpets, at House of Carpets in Midland.

MID LIFE CRISIS

Text by Lisa Gerlock

It's normal, it's painful but it's a necessary process. And though it may seem like a permanent condition, it won't last forever, say authors Jim and Sally Conway.

Some of them would rather leave the subject alone — simply forget this painful chapter of their lives and tear the pages completely out of the book.

The chapter begins sometime during the ages of 35-55, said husband and wife writing team Jim and Sally Conway, who spoke recently at the First Baptist Church about Mid-Life Dimensions.

In an interview with the Reporter-Telegram, they explained the mid-life syndrome.

At first, the victim may want to run away. He may grow tired of his responsibilities. He takes on another perspective of life and re-evaluates his values and priorities. It's a painful time of confusion.

The syndrome is called "mid-life crisis" by the Conways, authors of three books on the subject. And most everyone in the 35-55 age group will experience some type of symptom. But, they add, it is a normal and necessary process of life.

"There are two key words," said Conway: " 'Transition' — a move from one era to another era — and 'crisis' — in the process of moving there is some kind of breakdown."

The Conways compare the process of transition, which they call "middle-essence," to other transitions in the maturation process, such as the move from teen to adult, adult to mellow adult, mellow adult to retiring adult, and retiring adult to aging.

"And there is some kind of breakdown. There is inner confusion."

Conway said he discovered the phenomenon during his 30 years as a pastor "heavily involved in counseling," and wrote a book on the subject because he learned few people realized it was normal to go through the transition or knew a solution to its problems.

"He had agreed to write the book and then he had his own crisis," Mrs. Conway said.

The breakdown is attributed to many factors such as the realization of failing pre-established financial, personal, professional or physical goals.

"In my case, I had run out of goals. I thought the goals I set in my 20s would run forever, but they ran out," said Conway.

Another of the over-riding factors in a mid-life crisis is the individual's simultaneous increase of responsibility and decrease of physical energy.

From the time a young adult assumes responsibility — about 25 years old — his responsibility increases an average of 10 percent a year, Conway said. By the time he's 45, his responsibility has increased 200 percent but at the same time his energy level is lower than when he began assuming minimal responsibilities, he explained.

Responsibility is not restricted to the executive or business owner. It applies to every man or woman, with or without a family.

"By the time a person has hit the age bracket 35-55, he has changes going on in two generations worth of family — his children are enduring adolescence or nearing the leaving-the-nest age, and his parents are becoming elderly," Conway said.

Mrs. Conway added, "This is the age when women realize motherhood isn't going to last forever — and some of them feel cheated. They may have dedicated their lives to caring for their children and keeping the house. Suddenly they realize it's all gone."

But the syndrome is not restricted to just those with families. It also affects those who have opted to postpone families — and suddenly feel the pressure of planning on borrowed time.

Mrs. Conway used an accomplished woman in the world of academia in a major Northeastern city as an example.

"She had never wanted to marry because she wanted to make it in her profession. She turned 39 and she had 'made it.' Now she's one semester into the school year and she's having a 'breakdown.' There's a refocusing period. She sees an ingredient missing in her life. There's a switch in her value system.

"But how can she find a husband and have a child right away?" Mrs. Conway added, when she's teetering on the line of 40, a time when child-bearing becomes a greater threat to the health of the mother and child.

EDB, product tampering major concern of poison hot-line callers

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Calls to poison-control centers used to be limited to children swallowing household chemicals or adults overdosing on drugs. But more and more callers around the nation are asking about EDB, product tampering and water pollution, experts say.

"The whole trend has changed somewhat. The poison centers have now become the repository of information on environmental poisons and tampering," said Dr. Steven M. Marcus, director of the New Jersey Poison Information and Education System.

About 12 percent of the 32,000 calls placed to the New Jersey poison hot line since it began operation a year ago were from people asking for non-emergency information.

"We at the poison center were getting tons of calls when each of these stories broke. The day the EDB story broke, more than half the 240 calls we received were related to that," he said.

Poison-control centers across the nation report a similar response, said Dr. Barry H. Rumack, president of the American Association of Poison Control Centers.

"It's certainly a national thing. Public awareness in the last two to three years has increased dramatically. We've seen a 200 to 300 percent increase in calls on these issues," said Rumack, who also is director of the Rocky Mountain Poison Center in Denver.

"EDB at the moment is of great interest," said Rumack, referring to ethylene dibromide, a pesticide found to cause cancer in laboratory animals that has turned up in grain-based food products and fruit.

Like the poison hot-line staff, many doctors in private practice reported getting calls from patients wondering how environmental hazards affect their health, Marcus said.

Marcus said his staff of eight physicians, nurses and pharmacists answering the toll-free hot line, 800-962-1253, have access via computer to the latest U.S. Food and Drug Administration test results for EDB in food products.

Despite the computer information, the doctors admit that environmental questions are often the most difficult to answer.

"The environmental questions are for the most part almost unsolvable," Rumack said.

Denise Smith

Smith receives B&PW award

The Uptown Midland Business and Professional Women's Club 1984 Young Career Woman winner is Denise Smith, branch manager of BMI Texas, a local Canon Copier dealer.

Denise graduated from the University of Texas in 1982 with a BBA in marketing. She maintains total responsiblity for the sales and service of the local BMI office. She is also enrolled in a Dale Carnegie night course.

Four other local women also participated in the competition. Each woman was recognized for outstanding work in her profession, scholastics or community service. The women were judged on individual interviews, conducted by three outside judges, speeches and roundtable discussions. After earning the 1984 YCW title, Denise represented B&PW at the District competition in Monahans.

B&PW is comprised of working women seeking to improve the professional, personal, economic and educational outlook for women. For information about membership of the organization, contact Sam Guyton, 686-0736.

Love letters show depth of emotion

Copley News Service

Well, there's one sure thing about the court-ordered divorce of Ma Bell and AT&T.

Now that we've all got our bills reflecting the high cost of separation, lots of us will be reviving a lost art: writing love letters.

Trouble is, the language has changed. I don't think anyone today writes, "How do I love thee? Let me count the ways."

But somewhere there should be a middle ground between that and, "Hey, Sweetie, your place or mine?"

Recognizing that few in today's microchip, boob-tube, bubble-gum world are at ease in writing tender love letters, I'll tell you what I'm gonna do, folks. I'm gonna give cupid a helping hand. Just fill in your choice, clip and mail off to: (a) the love of your life; (b) a good friend; (c) the gal/guy you met last night in Joe's Bar — if you can remember her/his name.

My (a) Dearest Sweetheart; (b) Favorite Girl/Fellow; (c) Good Buddy,

You (a) make my heart pound and my blood run wild; (b) raise my blood pressure once in a while; (c) give me acid indigestion.

How can I (a) live without you? (b) live with you? (c) borrow $75 for next week's rent?

You make me (a) deliriously happy; (b) grin occasionally; (c) nervous when you put your arms around me.

I'm going to buy you (a) diamonds and rubies; (b) rum and Coke; (c) a hamburger and fries at the Burger King drive-through.

Be mine and I'll send you (a) bouquets of roses; (b) two daisies; (c) one long-stemmed dandelion.

How about giving me (a) your sweet kisses? (b) a nice hug? (c) an introduction to your best friend?

Kissing you is like sipping (a) Dom Perignon; (b) Mogen David; (c) stale beer.

Wouldn't it be (a) wonderful; (b) nice; (c) mutually profitable, if we could (a) marry; (b) have a meaningful relationship; (c) call the whole thing off?

Your eyes are like (a) stars; (b) moons; (c) black holes; and your lips are like (a) rosebuds; (b) dried rose leaves; (c) thorns.

You are the most (a) beautiful/handsome; (b) attractive; (c) moderately personable; girl/guy in (a) the whole world; (b) town; (c) this bar after 2 a.m.

I'll always (a) be true to you; (b) tell you I've been true to you; (c) be putting the move on your best friend.

My love for you is (a) red-hot; (b) on a slow burn; (c) on the back burner and I'm out of gas.

If you ever leave me I'll (a) jump from the top floor of the Sears Tower; (b) jump from the top of a Sears catalog; (c) jump for joy.

I'd like to get you (a) on a slow boat to China; (b) on a fast ferry to Michigan; (c) on a missing person poster.

I'll never forget the night (a) we met; (b) our lips met; (c) I met your best friend.

Please write me (a) every day; (b) if you get work; (c) off.

Signed: (a) Passionately yours forever and ever; (b) Affectionately yours until someone better comes along; (c) Give my regards to your best friend.

P.S. This was also a test to see how deeply you are emotionally involved with the recipient of this letter. If all your choices were a's, marry her/him quick.

If you answered all b's, ask yourself the question: "Would I want to use this person's toothbrush?"

Survey: U.S. ranks 17th in alcohol consumption

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A recent world survey shows the United States ranks 17th in national pre-capita consumption of alcohol.

This information is part of "Thinking About Drinking," a special course in alcohol education.

The course, underwritten by Heublein Inc., will be available to 10,000 high schools for use in health, driver education, science and psychology classes and also to community groups.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT AND IMAGE PROJECTION IN TODAY'S BUSINESS WORLD

A personal development course can pave the way for smoother human relations by teaching the techniques and proper attitude for getting along with others. A personal development course can provide self-awareness of one's strengths, weaknesses, desires, and the knowledge to acquire the traits of personality and appearance that leads to success in the business world.

The proof of the value of personal development training is evident in the biographies of prominently successful people who have made the most of themselves and who have lived up to their potential. Many have had the kind of assistance that will be received in your personal development course-assistance that has helped them to look at themselves objectively. Once aware of how their appearance and personality affected others, they have made a genuine effort to improve their "image projection." This simply means that they have designed their appearance and personality for success. You can do the same.

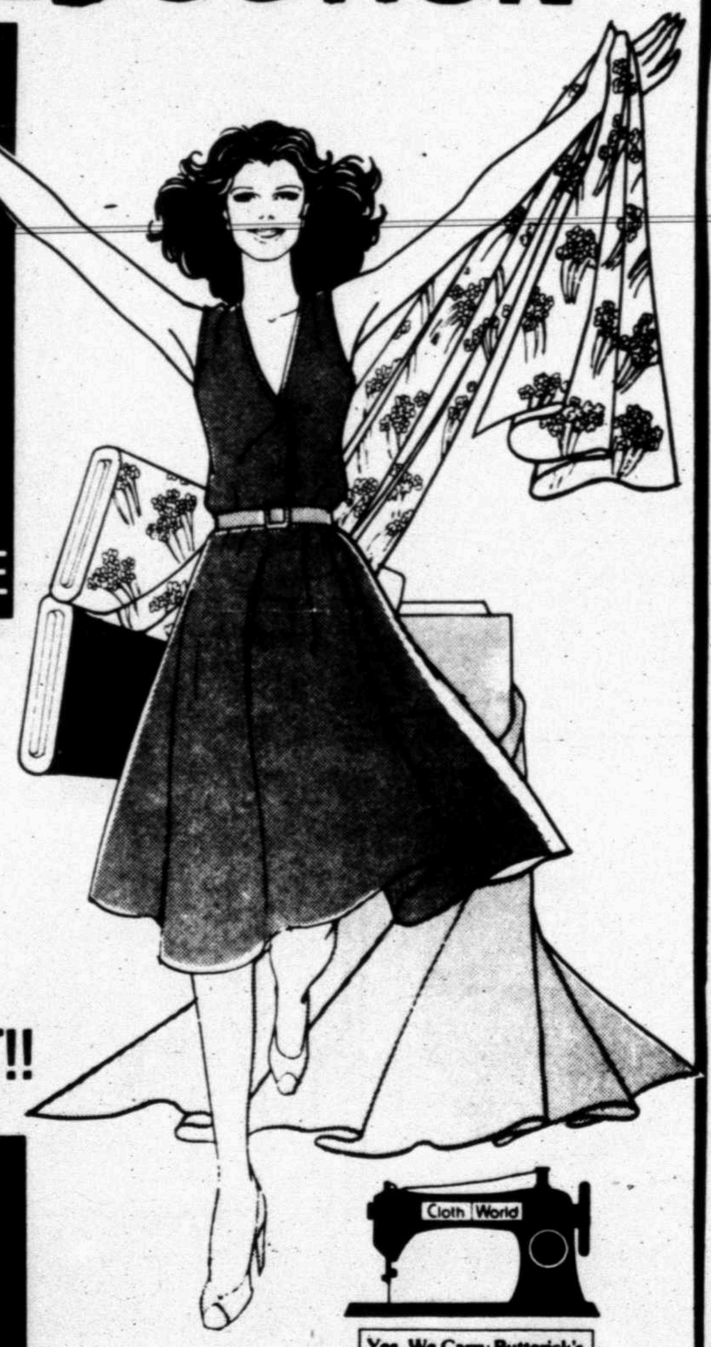

The clothes you wear have an affect on others. You will learn how to select the styles, colors, fabrics and accessories that are appropriate and becoming for you and for the business environment in which you will work. Awareness of lines, color, fabrics and accessories will make it possible for you to discriminate and to select the apparrel that is right for the image you wish to project.

Personality has been described as the total effect one person has on another. If this is true, your success demands that you learn and practice good manners, good speech and good interpersonal relations. Your personal development course contains lessons on voice improvement, how to use the business telephone to greatest effect and the twelve steps to a winning personality. Summed up, your personal development course is more than a dress for success course, more than a good grooming course, more than a personality pays course. In essence it is a "how-to" course to increase your self-awareness and to enhance your chances for success in the job market by teaching you how to project an image that potential employers will like, so that their response to your application for employment will be: "You're hired".

Crisis at mid-life just a process, say Conway authors

On the other hand, women who gave up their careers to have families realize they can't just jump back into their professions. Whatever their profession was 20 years ago has changed, Conway said. Even traditionally female-dominated professions, such as nursing and secretarial work, have modernized with technology.

"Knowledge is doubling faster than every five years, so by the time they re-enter the work force, knowledge has quadrupled while they weren't there," Conway said.

Many people suddenly faced with the mid-life crisis seek divorce as a solution. "The first highest divorce rate is within the first two years of marriage. The second highest rate ranks in the group of 15-20 years of marriage," said Conway, who believes divorce is a mistaken solution to the problem.

"Seventy to 80 percent of women in this age group are wrestling. Of those with identity crisis (from a study made) said that on a scale of one to 10, women rated the crisis 6-7 on severity. It is not an insignificant phenomenon. There is pain."

Ten or 15 years ago, only one wife out of 600 would have run away, according to Conway. Today, the figures are even — divorce is more accepted now, whereas before women would have stayed with husbands, even through pain, he said.

"They think when this is happening, it will be forever. It's not forever, it's a process of life — just like adolescence," he said.

Jim and Sally Conway

Symptoms of mid-life crisis involve a change in personality characteristics. "A man becomes a more feeling-kind of man; he's no longer just the idea man or the muscle man. A woman becomes more assertive. Both the husband and wife are picking up dimensions of each other.

"What they don't realize is that it is a positive change.

"A woman may become involved with another man 'who appreciates me for my talents and my leadership abilities.' A man may become involved with another woman 'who appreciates my sensitivity,'" he said.

Though the mid-life transition "is not as definite as menopause," the Conways agreed, they believe a chemical change could be occuring in the body at the time of the crisis. "Some studies have shown it may be partly due to testosterone level dipping," Mrs. Conway said.

But for the most part, the crisis will occur 10 years before menopause. "This is a whole different phenomenon," she added.

"Age 35-36 is the highest category for a spouse to run away from a marriage.

"We believe to opt out is more work than staying (with the marriage) to work out the problem. It is cheaper," Conway said with a smile.

"Adjustments can be made to focus on the needs of each other.

"Ideally, it's better if the crisis happens at separate times to the spouses," he continued.

The solution the Conways most recommend is "any kind of counseling" — friends or support groups.

"They need someone to tell them they're normal while they go through this. It is a developmental stage, a process. A lot of them will think they are crazy and many of the victims will deny it, many will be angry. Many are grateful to know it is normal. They need to know it is a special time and they'll get through it," Conway said.

The first book published by the Conways sold more than 40,000 copies in the first year, even though it was out of print six months. All three books have been best-sellers, the Conways said. "Women in Mid-Life Crisis," was released in October 1983 and, as of Jan. 3, 1984, has sold more than 60,000 copies. The book has also been published in five other languages overseas.

The Conways' books, "answer questions that are not discussed in Christian circles. This reinforces the attitude of 'something's wrong with my spiritual life,'" Conway said, "but it's no more abnormal than teens going through adolescence. But it's worse than adolescence because middle life has more responsibility and the transition takes you by surprise.

"The need to question is OK. But they need help in choosing a positive solution."

Alcoholism, for example is a problem that often occurs during the crisis time. "In many cases, people who never drank before their late 30s will become alcoholics.

"They will have a terrific impulse to get away: 'I feel like I'm trapped in a life I can't get out of.'"

The transition should last only three to five years, according to Conway, and the peak should last no longer than one year.

There is no easy solution, he said. It is important to ask questions and find answers to work through the problem, the Conways suggested, by answering questions such as "who am I going to be when I grow up?"

"It isn't like the measles. It is a roller-coaster effect. It will take a big dip and then go up again."

People should accept aging as a process to becoming wise, Conway suggested, and learn to be valued for things other than youth and vitality.

Middlescent parenthood may be rocky

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — A midlife crisis only dimly perceived until recently is being called nature's "dirty trick" by one researcher.

The "new" crisis is piled on top of all the other crises when middle-aged parents are bringing up teen-age children.

The conflict affects many couples between the ages of 35 and 55 — the generation that began delaying having children until the working woman took time out to start a family.

The friction is increased when middlescent parents and their adolescent children undergo their own crises simultaneously. Each age group has great difficulty seeing beyond its own problems. While teen-agers are introspectively struggling to find their identities and measuring their worth as males or females or as human beings, their middle-aged parents may feel helpless and despairing over the low cards life has dealt them.

"Just when parents feel they may be losing their vitality, health and physical attractiveness, their children are approaching peaks," says Florence Cherry, a Cornell University human development specialist. "Like their children, middle-aged parents also may endure stormy periods of depression and mood changes, and struggle with changes in identity and self. Nature plays a dirty trick on families by juxtaposing turbulent, confused adolescents with middle-aged parents."

Little research into middle age has been done, Cherry said, compared to the number of studies of the teen years. She warns that the conflict within the family can increase the anxieties and frustrations that each family member has with every other member.

Although the age-group crisis can't be wished away — and is too troublesome to be ignored — Cherry does offer some advice:

"If you can't give your child the support or caring he or she needs at the moment, tell the child you need some time for yourself but will be glad to talk about it later."

Further, Cherry suggests, middle-aged parents should try to recognize that they are undergoing change and that some of the tension may be coming from them, not their children. Without overloading a child with problems, let them know about family and individual problems.

When you're feeling bad, tell the child. And when you're feeling good, tell the child. In either mood, says Cherry, a parent may be preoccupied. Even so, she suggests that the parent listen to what the child is saying. Let the child know you're listening, although you may not want to respond until a later time.

New Houston hotel has 'hot' opening ceremony

By CAROLYN FITZ-GERALD
Travel Writer

As guests sweltered in the outdoor courtyard during ribbon cutting ceremonies at Houston's Inter-Continental Hotel Friday, the fire alarm sounded. It proved to be false and guests took the unexpected potion of the agenda good-naturedly. "The heat must have set it off," said one. "Or the champagne," quipped aother.

The Inter-Continental engineer explained, "Extractors in the kitchen just weren't balanced to handle the amount of smoke from the cooking overload as we prepared for the inaugural luncheon and reception."

"The problem will be corrected," he added.

Unruffled, Inter-Continental Hotel Corporation Chairman Paul Sheeline flexed the golden scissors presented to him on plush red velvet and snipped the red ribbon barring the entrance to the 581-room hotel across from the Galleria Mall on Westheimer Road.

A huge helium balloon bearing the Inter-Continental logo was launched and guests poured into the frigid palm-lined lobby to drink chilled champagne.

Afterwards, in the upstairs ballroom, inaugural diners were served veal medallions with mushrooms and given with silver bowls inscribed with the hotel's name and opening date.

Inter-Continental already operates one hotel in Texas, the Inter-Continental San Antonio. There are plans to open a hotel in San Diego, Calif., this month, and another in Boston, Mass., later this year.

Currently there are eight Inter-Continental hotels in the United States with a total of 101 in 48 countries.

In an effort to familiarize travelers with the hotel's international reputation, Inter-Continental is offering a free round-trip ticket to Europe for the first 3,000 guests who spend five nights in the hotel before September 15. The Pan American coach class ticket must be used between Oct. 1, 1984 and June 1, 1985. Nights at the hotel need not be consecutive and the tickets are good for 16 European destinations. The plan is known as "Houston Plus."

Local three- and five-night special promotions such as the "Space Odyssey," featuring a tour of NASA, and the "Rodeo Roundup," which includes a night at Gilley's western dance hall are also offered at the new hotel.

"Inter-Continental is geared to the repeat traveler," said Kenneth Meinen, the hotel chain's human resources director. "There are often three telephones, two televisions and permanently installed hairdryers in each room because we have found that is what our guests want."

In addition, the hotel features full spa facilities and tennis and racquetball courts which will be in operation by May 15.

Les Continents, the Hotel Inter-Continental Houston's fine dining restaurant, offers international cuisine in an elegant setting.

Opening festivities included a tour of NASA and a black tie reception where guests were greeted at the top of the escalators with violin music and escorted to the main ballroom.

A lobster tree and an ice sculpture garden topped with a Texas star were part of the lavish decorations for the reception.

Rare pre-Columbian artifacts decorate The Brasserie, the hotel's less formal restaurant.

"I love these events," said Mrs. Sheeline, who is a physical therapist in Connecticut. "It's our time together and we love to meet new people. Paul was born in Vienna which is in a hotel-oriented country. He studied to be an engineer but engineering wasn't human enough for him," she explained, indicating the room packed with people.

Ghostly tour of British town crawls with spooky stories

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

BATH, England — For those fond of ghost stories, grab a table at Garricks Head, a local pub, and order up a pint of spirits.

Ghosts?

The town's crawling with them.

It's from Garricks that Maggie Royal sets out on her nightly spook walks, guiding visitors through the shadowy streets of Bath.

Her story that sets my teeth to chattering is about the young bird who did herself in after gambling away her family's fortune. Yes, poor soul hanged herself.

And there's the old geezer with the white hair that's all done up with a black ribbon who spooks only men. (A gay ghost, the locals claim.)

The one with real spirit, though, is the spook who routinely flutters through a pub near a theater in town, causing all sorts of commotion. Imagine, a spirit that's fond of spirits? And pity the poor old charwoman who cleans up after everyone's gone — left alone in a haunted saloon ...

These and other ghost stories belong to the repertory of plump, white-haired Maggie Royal who swears it's all the truth. With her it's Halloween 365 days a year. Only Maggie plays no tricks. Her ghosts, she insists, are real.

"Seen 'em m'self," she confesses.

One was the ghost of her lodger's mother.

She shudders. "Another was m'cat."

Well, of course, a black cat; what else?

Maggie began searching out spirits after learning that a woman in York was making a goodly living conducting ghost walks in her town.

"I thought to m'self, 'We got just as many ghosts in Bath, so why not here?'"

This was nearly 10 years ago, and Maggie's been spooking the tourists ever since.

Her flock meets at this friendly pub, Garricks Head, where, buoyed up with a couple of pints apiece, the crowd follows Maggie up the street to a snazzy hotel that overlooks the town.

"Up there," Maggie says, pointing to the hotel, "up there in room No. 11 is where the ghost of Elizabeth Linely lives."

A non-believer in the crowd asks, "And who was Elizabeth Linely?"

Maggie raises a hand, suggesting silence. "She was a singer, married to a playwright, a horrid man who drank and wenched and left the poor young girl with a broken heart."

Maggie confesses, however, that the ghost of the troubled songbird hasn't been sighted in some time.

"One of the caretakers saw her a few years ago. She was singin' on the staircase."

More recent sightings of ghosts go unchallenged. A couple of years ago, according to Maggie, a guest collapsed during one of her walks and was rushed to a hospital.

"The truth," she says, crossing herself.

The victim reportedly saw Bath's infamous white-haired ghost, the crazy coot with the black ribbon in his hair.

"The poor thing was babbling incoherently when they led him away," Maggie says.

The tourist, of course; not the ghost.

A few months back a visitor from Miami saw the same spirit.

Maggie Royal's nightly ghost walk sets out from Garricks precisely at 8 o'clock. And while she offers no guarantee that anyone will see a spook, the ale at Garricks is good and so is the company.

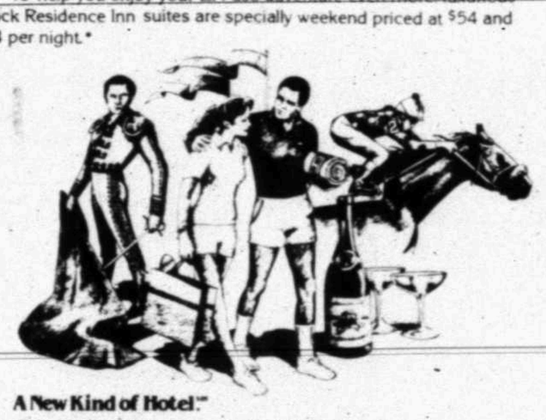

If you would believe Maggie, six different ghosts have surfaced in Bath on numerous occasions.

So if you're a ghost fancier and wish to pursue this further, drop Maggie a card at 8A Lime Grove, Whidcombe, Bath, England.

It's where she lives with her third husband and the ghost of that beloved black cat.

Computer business booming

Retail outlets up 700 percent since 1979

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

The fact that Midland boasts a large number of educated professionals can best explain why the town has experienced a boom in retail computer dealers.

Before 1980, finding a micro computer for the office or home in a neighborhood shopping center was shopping center was virtually impossible and the choices were limited.

Today, Midland boasts more than 14 computer dealers seven of which are retail computer centers offering virtually every computer available today.

Computer Technology Associates opened its Midland store in August 1981 and caters to both the home and business market.

"The retail store can become part of the family where you don't feel threatened to ask for help," said Mike Landrum, store manager.

Dorman Blackman and Thomas Wilkerson parlayed a general management consulting practice into a full-service computer and business systems corporation, with the formation of MIDA Corp.

The new company combined its consulting practice, Blackman, Wilkerson and Co. with Computer Patch's two retail stores in Midland and Odessa. In November, the retail stores were renamed to MIDA Computer Centers.

MIDA offers the IBM, Apple, Televideo and Compaq lines of micro computers.

Another retail center in Midland is Abacus Computers Inc. Munesh Singh is the president of the firm which opened December 1982. The store handles the Comodore 64 and Morrow and Columbia business computers.

With a degree in engineering plus an M.B.A., Singh saw an opportunity in Midland.

"We looked at other stores and saw a need in the marketplace for a store which knew about computers and business and who could put the right system together," he said.

In several years, Singh predicted, the home computer will be like the colored television of today and businesses without a micro computer will simply be wasting their time, he added.

Wilkerson said there is a micro computer to fit almost any need in terms of capabilities or price.

"The cost to put a micro computer on a manager's, middle manager's or secretary's desk is not much different, in terms of constant dollars, than the cost of an electronic caculator when they first came out 15 years ago."

T.R. Windecker Inc. is a retail computer dealer with a computer education program. Owner Ted Windecker teaches computer classes at Permian Basin Graduate Center and speakes to various civic organizations. His company specializes in business computers and provides a turn-key operation — assisting customers from selection to set up and training.

Windecker's three major lines are Hewitt Packard, Sanyo and Televideo. He is also negotiating with Sharp Electronics to carry its portable computer.

While most of the dealers agree not everyone has need for a micro computer, most agree on its educational value.

Blackman explained, "A lot of schools, particularily in the higher end, are now requiring students to buy computers before they enter because it is such an integral part of today's life style and business environment and people need greater computer literacy inorder to be able to cope with today's problems."

Singh is confident that the demand for computers will continue to grow in all segements of the market.

For the retail store he said, "Service and support will play the key role in future growth. Mail order catalogues may be able to supply equipment at a cheaper price but they provide no service."

"It's a very exciting field to be in," said Dorman Blackman.

Merger trend arousing thoughts, questions

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — America's oil giants are on a match-making spree like none before. Three of the best-known names — Texaco, Mobil and Chevron — have shelled out a combined $29 billion to sweep competitors off their feet already this year.

This joining of corporate hands is arousing antitrust passions in Congress, but many energy analysts believe the merger trend raises more pressing questions:

Does the combining of big oil companies make economic sense? Will it mean less money to spend on oil exploration? Will supplies be short as a result?

Daniel Yergin, president of Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Cambridge, Mass., said it was too early to know the answers. But it is clear already, he said, that traditional antitrust fears about oil mergers miss the point.

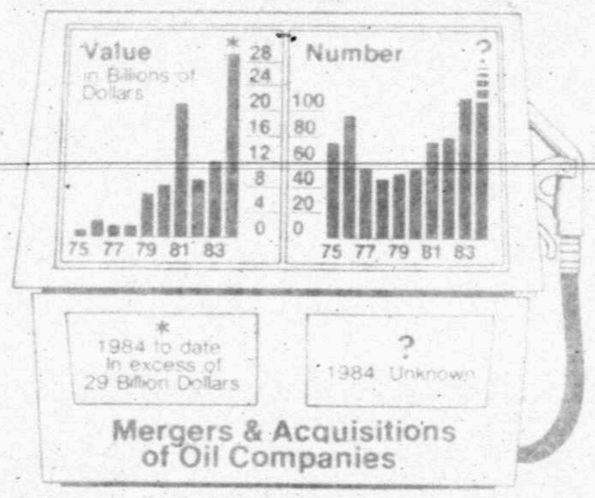

An estimated 40,000 U.S. companies are involved in the exploration, production, transmission, refining, distribution and marketing sides of the oil business. Although three-quarters of the nation's gasoline is refined by the top 25 oil companies, none currently holds as much as 8 percent of the market.

"The more important question is whether there will be a narrowing of geological ideas," Yergin said. Will fewer oil giants roaming the oil frontier mean fewer ideas about where to find new deposits — and thus fewer exploration successes?

"I don't think there is a clear answer there yet," he said.

Some in Congress disagree. Sen. Bennett Johnston, a Louisiana Democrat usually considered an ally of the oil industry, is pressing for a six-month ban on takeovers of domestic oil companies with more than 100 million barrels of proven reserves. That means the 50 largest companies would be off limits to buyers.

Johnston's proposal would halt, at least temporarily, the largest proposed takeover in corporate history: the $13.3 billion buyout of Gulf Corp. by Standard Oil Co. of California as well as Mobil Corp.'s proposed $5.7 billion takeover of Superior Oil Co.

Since the ban would apply only to oil industry mergers announced after Feb. 28, it would not affect Texaco's recently completed $10.1 billion takeover of Getty Oil Co., which was announced in early January.

Johnston contends that the big oil companies, by burdening themselves with billions of dollars in debt to buy competitors, will have less to spend on oil exploration.

"For the consumer, that will mean reduced supplies and higher prices," he said. "For the country, it will mean more oil imports. ... For the economy, it will mean increased pressure on credit markets and a threat to the economic recovery."

Few economists or energy analysts think the consequences would be so grave, but most agree the outcome will depend partly on how well the merging companies fit together.

George Keller, the chairman of Standard of California, said shortly after announcing his company's bid for Gulf on March 5 that the merger would permit more efficient oil refining and marketing. As a result, he said, gasoline and other fuel products could be delivered at a lower cost.

The Reagan administration has not taken a public position on proposals in Congress to block oil company mergers. But Donald Hodel, the energy secretary, said last week he was not concerned by the merger trend.

"It seems to me that the new, merged company now has a larger resource base, and if it does not wish to deplete that resource base, it will have to go out and explore at a faster rate," Hodel said.

It is not clear, however, whether the huge cost of these mergers will allow the companies to spend as much on oil exploration together as they would have separately.

A 1982 study by the Federal Trade Commission said oil company mergers were not diverting investment capital from exploration and development programs.

The pace and scope of oil company mergers has changed since that study, however.

ASK THE FDIC

New trustee can be legally named

By THOMAS R. PROCOPIO

I am the beneficiary of a trust created in a late relative's will. The trustee in the will is (was) First National Bank of Midland. I have been told that the FDIC sold the trust department to RepublicBank First National.

I am a concerned about this! At a recent social gathering I asked a lawyer (one whose judgment I trust), about the legality of the FDIC naming a new trustee of this trust. He said he thought there were some real problems with this, suggesting that the FDIC had no power to do this under Texas law.

I am concerned about the status of my trust; does it legally have a trustee now? What about the legality of the transaction done in the trust by RepublicBank First National, are they valid?

I would appreciate your opinion on this and I am sure other trust customers would also.

We would not have transferred the responsibilities for the trust department to Republic if we could not do it.

To my knowledge we have done this with several bank closings with sizeable trust departments as there was here in Midland with no problems. So I don't understand the lawyers contention that there is some question about the legality of the FDIC naming a new trustee.

Good common sense will tell you that if the FDIC could not do it legally we would not do it. There have been several bank closings in Texas where we have done exactly the same thing.

According to Don McKinley, an FDIC attorney, he also agrees that the move was legal.

"We think it is legal to transfer the trust department to RepublicBank," McKinley said. "Under the National Banking Act, the FDIC is appointed receiver of assets and liabilities of every kind. When the FDIC comes into possession of a trust department it transfers the department so that there is as little disruption as possible in the operation of the department simply because many people are depending on their income from their trusts."

McKinley also said, "The FDIC does not want the trust department of any bank left in limbo because we are not prepared to run a trust department for long periods of time. A trust department needs the benefit of trained and skilled people to run it successfully.

"The same committment the FDIC has to depositors of a failed bank," McKinley added, "it also has to the beneficiaries of a trust department. The FDIC does not want anyone to lose money.

"If a customer is disgruntled he or she can make application under the Texas Trust Act for a new or successor trustee.

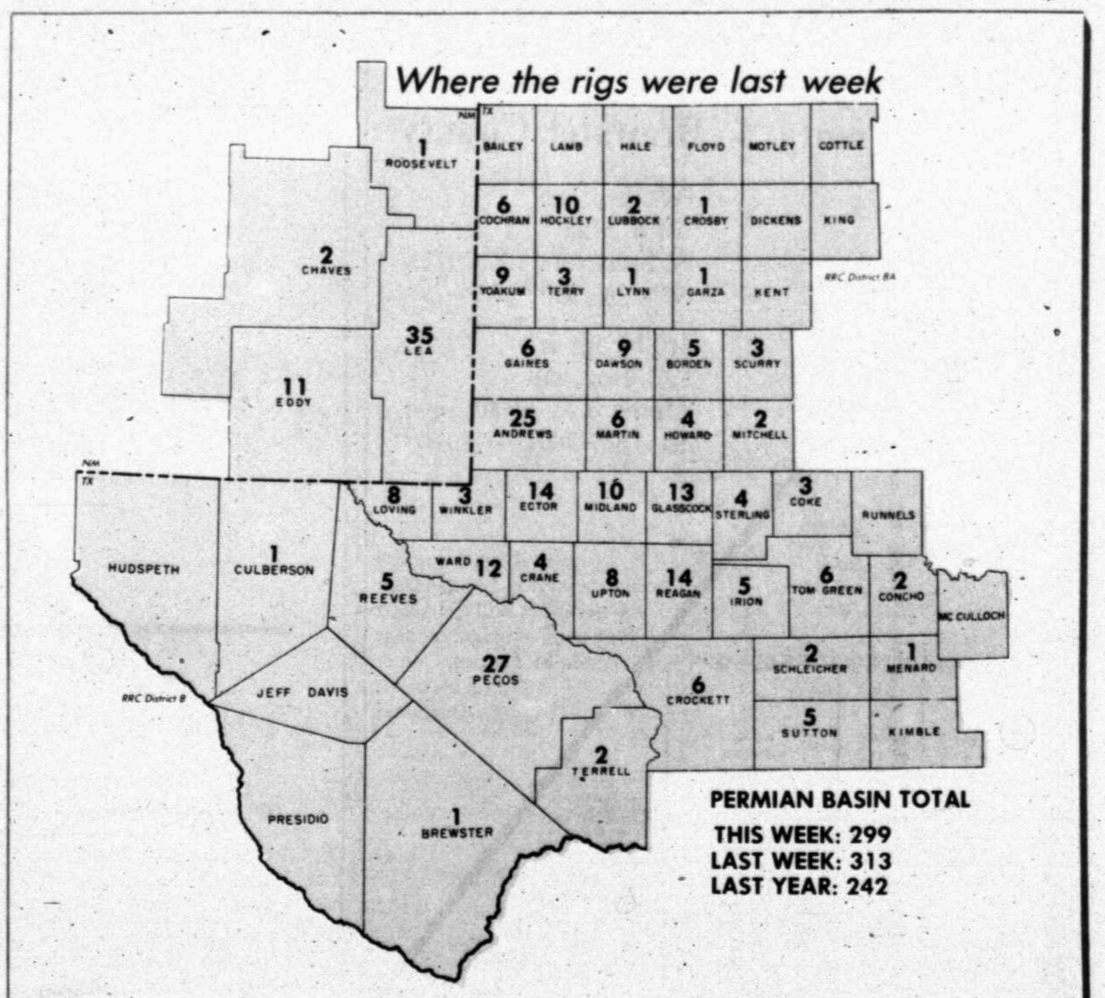

As far as the the difference between Texas laws and federal laws McKinley said, "While Texas laws may say one thing and federal laws say another, the FDIC says federal law is the governing law when a national bank fails and it is appointed receiver of the banks assets and liabilities. When federal and state laws are inconsistant, the FDIC tries to mesh the two as closely as possible.

"We try to mitigate against any adverse affects to the community, depositors, directors, and customers of the failed bank," McKinley said.

Pecos sulfur plant finds alternative to layoffs

PECOS, Texas (AP) — When the sulfur-producing Duval Corp. was faced with either laying off 20 percent of its labor force or reducing its work week by the same amount, it chose to do neither. Instead, the company opted to change the way people think.

"And we ended up not laying off a soul and saving over $3 million," said Robert Semrad, plant manager. "And it wasn't hard to do at all."

Under a "resources management" program adopted in the fall of 1982 by the Pennzoil Co. subsidiary, Duval gave its employees the opportunity to develop and implement projects that reduce production costs and increase productivity, Semrad said.

"What we're really trying to do is change the way we manage and it has given people here more freedom and responsibility to do their jobs," Semrad said. "It's changing the way people think. It's kind of odd that we've gotten so far away from the basic principles of management. People haven't changed, management has, and we're changing it again here — back to letting people think for themselves."

Duval's new management is simple — employees evaluate their jobs, develop ways to make them easier and less costly and then put their ideas into action. Supervisors no longer are "enforcers of rules, but are facilitators and coordinators," Semrad said.

"It's a combined effort of employees and management," he said. "Our ultimate goal is to improve productivity so that we can be more competitive in the sulfur market."

The program saved the company from having to lay off employees or from having to cut its work week in 1983. It also has boosted employee morale while saving the company millions of dollars, Semrad said.

Classroom instruction and a nine-week training course are part of the voluntary program. To date, 90 percent of Duval's 430 employees either have completed the training or have expressed interest in the program, said Don Marshall, purchasing agent and a resources management administrator.

"We felt like this was going to be a good effort when we started, but it sure has surpassed anything that we thought of," Marshall said.

Employees' projects have ranged from turning off lights that are not needed to developing new methods for monitoring wells, Marshall said.

"The projects have run the whole gamut," he said. "One was so simple — we moved a diesel tank closer to the area where it was needed. That saved us about 20 minutes each time we refueled. It sounds like a little thing, but every bit counts and when you put them all together, it's a great savings. It's also a good way to have employees feel like they're contributing something to their company.

"We ask them for their ideas and then we say 'OK, act on it,'" he said.

Employee James Moyers said the program has "been a big help to the company. Employees feel like they're getting more involved and have a say in how to change things.

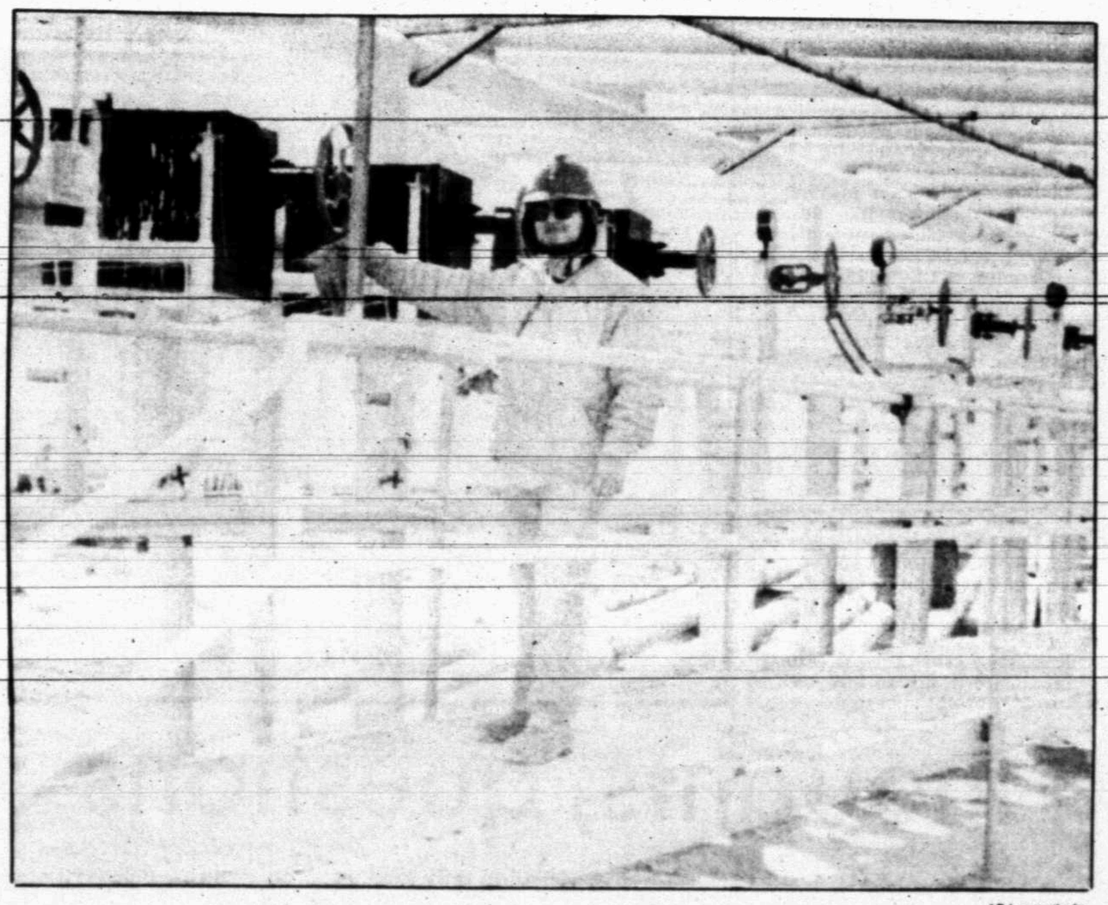

"After all, we're the people working most closely to the general operation of the plant. Management doesn't see these little problems, we do," he said.

For managers, Semrad said, the program "teaches the boss that he can't do it alone, that he can do it better if he enlists the help of his employee.

"It may take awhile for a supervisor to see that he can shine in the light of his employees as well as through his own activities, but once that's realized, everything's a go," he said. "It really teaches us to deal with people in a non-adversive manner."

Duval's plant, which is 39 miles northwest of Pecos, produces about 4,000 tons of sulfur daily and sits atop the largest sulfur mine in the Western world.

Marshall said employees first are asked for project ideas during training sessions, but "can continue to come up with things after they've completed training. Some people have come up three or four ideas and just keep thinking of them. There's always a way to make a job easier and it usually results in a savings too."

Gas field found under Stockton, California

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — A new natural gas field discovered deep beneath othe downtown area could yield enough fuel to heat about 2,000 homes and bring royalties of up to $200 a year to thousands of landowners, Chevron USA Inc. announced Wednesday.

Chevron found the gas 7,000 feet below downtown Stockton, more than oa mile below Stockton Field, about 70 miles east of San Francisco. That gas field, the state's oldest, was discovered in 1864 1,000 feet below the surface.

The new field is expected to yield two million cubic feet of natural gas a day, roughly enough to heat 2,000 homes. Underground leases the company signed will mean annual royalties of $75 to $200 a year to as many as 3,000 people who own property in or around the downtown area.

Engineers are still working to determine othe boundaries of the new field, which the company estimates will generate about $7,000 worth oof natural gas a day, or $2.5 million a year.

"It should be a quiet and relatively small facility," said Lawrence Hirst, Chevron's lands supervisor for the area.

The company expects to begin commercial oproduction at the facility by the end of the year and royalty checks will be sent out within one year after that.

You Can Count On An IRA Account For Retirement Security . . .

And You Can Count On Security For Your IRA Account.

You've heard it said . . . and it's true, the best way to save for retirement security today is with an IRA account. The money you put into an IRA now earns interest and defers taxes on that money until you begin receiving distributions from your account.

With few exceptions, any wage-earner is eligible to have an IRA account and you can contribute up to $2000 of your annual earnings (or $2250 for yourself and a non-employed spouse). The other good news is that you have until April 15, 1984 to make contributions to your 1983 IRA account . . . thereby earning a tax deduction for last year.

We think everyone who can should take advantage of the tax laws that allow you to save money for your retirement with the IRA account and we'd like to help you have one at Security National Bank. It just makes good sense to save more for tomorrow without taxing yourself today.

Reagan may push CO2 controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accumulated research evidence probably will push President Reagan into recommending new controls on sulfur dioxide emissions, a principal cause of acid rain, in about two years, according to Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus.

Ruckelshaus had recommended a modest control program but was overruled in preparation of the budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 in favor of stepped-up research.

In an appearance before the House Science and Technology Committee on Wednesday on behalf of EPA's research budget, Ruckelshaus was asked when Reagan might be persuaded to recommend action.

"You're asking me to get inside the head of somebody," Ruckelshaus protested, and added, "The president is not alone" in his position.

But the administrator continued, "I would presume at some point he'd be pushed to the point where he'd say, 'Yes, we ought to do something and here's what we ought to do.'"

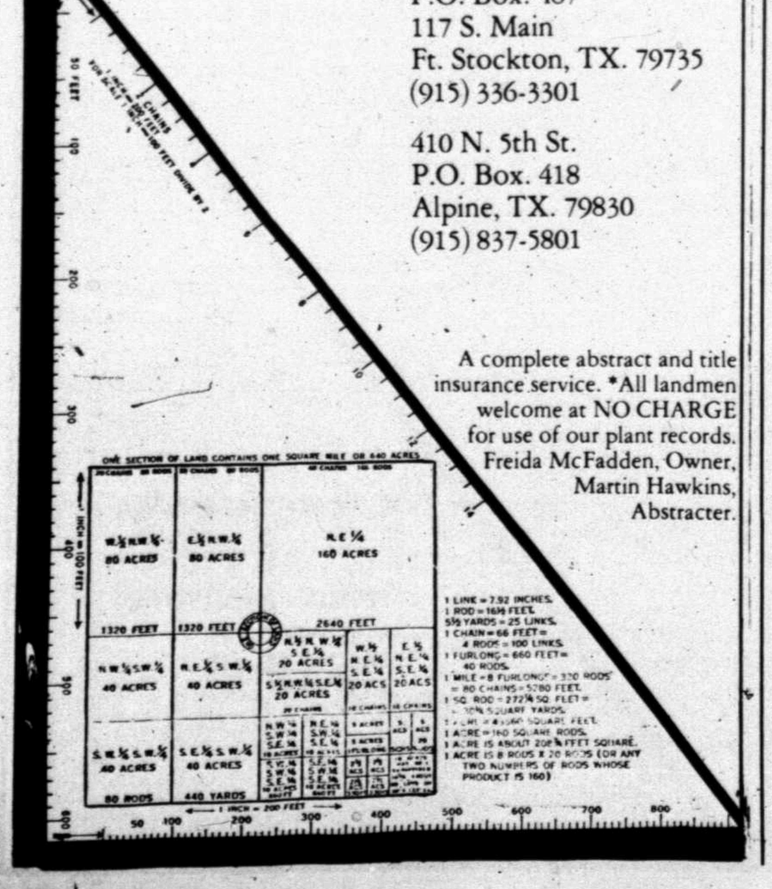

Asked by Rep. James D. Scheuer, D-N.Y., how long it would take to reach that point, Ruckelshaus said he thought the answer was "a couple of years, assuming all the information coming in points in the same direction."

business in brief

Andrews firm seeks branch office in Ralls

AUSTIN — An application by Andrews Savings and Loan Association for a branch office in Ralls has been set for the Texas Savings and Loan Department's April 2 docket call.

If the application is protested at the docket call, it will be set for a full hearing, with all parties given an opportunity to present testimony and evidence.

If there is no protest the application may be referred to Savings and Loan Commissioner L.L. Bowmman III for a decision, without a public hearing.

The docket call will be held at the department's offices, 1004 Lavaca, Austin.

Proposed location of the Ralls branch is 901 Avenue F.

Southwest Airlines shows record gain

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines flew a February record 338.6 million revenue passenger miles (RPMs) during February 1984, an increase of 33 percent over February 1983 when Southwest flew 254.6 million RPMs.

Passengers boarded in February increased 17 percent to 787,047, a record for the month, compared to the 675,530 boarded during the same month of 1983, while the average length of a passenger's trip increased from 377 miles to 430 miles.

Load factor for the month was 58.08 percent, reflecting improvement as compared the 57.47 percent a year ago.

Furniture rental industry supply expands

DALLAS — A group of Dallas businessmen have developed a unique apprroach to supplying the burgeoning furnituure rental industry. FRS (Furniture Rental Systems) plans to catalog, ship and invoice complete room groups of furniture, thus eliminating warehousing and back order problems for the small to medium-sized rental dealer. Each group is packaged and priced as one inventory unit complete with serial numbers for inventory control. The FRS says the total package price can run as much as 40 percent less than the rental dealer might pay to buy and warehouse the same goods piece by piece from local distributors.

Petroplex Savings may reorganize

AUSTIN — The Texas Savings and Loan Department has set a hearing for 2 p.m. April 4 on a application for reorganization for Petroplex Savings Association of Midland.

The application involves approval of a charter for New Petroplex Savings Association, with that "interim charter" to be used to allow the existing association to merge with a holding company, a department spokesman says.

Such interim charters are a commonly used method of allowing merger of an existing financial institution with a holding company.

Petroplex earlier had announced plans to form a holding compay to be called Midland Bancorp, Inc.

The hearing will be held at the department's offices, 1004 Lavaca, Austin.

Fixed rate mortgages remain same

WASHINGTON — Today, the minimum yield required by Fannie Mae (the Federal National Mortgage Association) for conventiona fixed rate mortgages is 13.050 percent, unchanged from last week's rate.

The rate for five-year adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs) is 13.050, up from last week's rate of 12.950 percent.

Markets advance/decline ratio favorable

BRIDGEPORT CT — The stock market's action to date in 184 has been characterized "by profit taking, a defensive retreat to bigger stocks and less cyclical industries and an intense speculative interest in oil stocks," Wright Investors' Services has reported. The Bridgeport-based firm stated that the stock market's recent weakness and the shift of investor favor to big and defensive issues may be signaling that recession will be the inevitable result of today's high interest rates.

While it is far from clear, according to Wright, whether the stock market correction of early 1984 has run its course, investors can take some solace from the fact that the number of NYSE issues advancing last week was nearly twice the number of declines. This was the first really favorable advance/decline ratio since the first week of January.

Houston gets financial clearing house

HOUSTON — The Finacial Services Roundtable (FSR), an information clearing house that allows community banks to exchange comparable operational data, has been established in Houston.

Membersship in FSR is available to community banks that feel the need for comparable operational data, trends among similarly sized banks and other types of information that generally is available to only large banks or members of holding companies.

85 taxpayers wipe their slate clean

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said recently that 85 Texas taxpayers took advantage of the Comptroller's offer to "Wipe the Slate Clean" by getting right with Texas tax law during February.

"We're still looking at some of these people's records to figure out just how much they owe," Bullock said, "butwhen the chalk dust clears, we expect to have gained abut $500,000 in taxes.

Customs cut could hurt border economy

WASHINGTON — Senator Lloyd Bentsen has said that the proposed budget for the U.S. Customs Service promises the sky, but will deliver only problems for the hard-pressed border economy.

Bentsen, ranking member of the senate Subcommittee on International Trade, said he fails "to understand how an Administration which professes to be concerned about the economicc tragedy along the border with a Mexico can add to the woes of that area by proposing additional cuts in Customs."

The Senator commented at the start of subccommittee hearings on the Customs Service budget, which reduces the workforce by 954 in the coming fiscal year on top of a400 persn cutbac in the current year.

Toastmasters install new officers

The newly formed Texaco Toastmaster's Club received its charter and installed new officers at a charter and installation banquet Friday night at the Midland Holidome.

The club, which has been active since January 15, elected Pat Coble as president; Janet Lee, educational vice president; Jeanne Smaka, administrative vice president; Bryan Jagoe, secretary; Brenda Martin, treasurer and David Hess, sergeant at arms.

Guest speakers for the occassion were: Scott Edward, Lubbock, distinguished toastmaster (DTM) and Joyce Eaton, accomplished toastmaster (ATM), who was in charge of table topics.

Tom Buford (ATM), past area three governor and club mentor performed the installation ceremony. Tom Long, Toastmaster's International district 44 governor and club sponsor was toastmaster for the evening.

NL Industries acquires ERCO

NL Industries, Inc. has acquired Erco Petroleum Services, Inc., as subsidiary of Energy Resources Co., Inc. of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and announced the formation of NL Erco as an operating division of NL Industries. Announcement of the acquisition was made by Bob Brooker, president of NL Information Services Group.

"NL Erco will add an important strategic dimension to the range of oilfield information services now marketed by NL Industries," said Brooker. "Erco provides an additional scientific and technological dimension of downhole data measuring and analysis."

Maxey to speak

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME will hold their monthly meeting Tuesday, March 20, at Ranchland Hills Country Club. The meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m. and dinner will be served at 6:30.

The guest speaker will be Margaret N. Maxey, Ph.D., director of the chair of Free Enterprise and professor of Bioethics in the College of Engineering at the University of Texas at Austin. The topic of Maxey's speech will be "Free Enterprise — Option or Imperative?"

Before her appointment at UT, Maxey was assistant director at the South Carolina Energy Research Institute. From 1970 to 1979 she was associate professor of Bioethics at the University of Detroit. She has also taught at Barat College, Lake Forrest, Ill.; Maryville College, St. Louis; and at Creighton University, Omaha. She is also a former consultant for Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, Livermore, Calif.

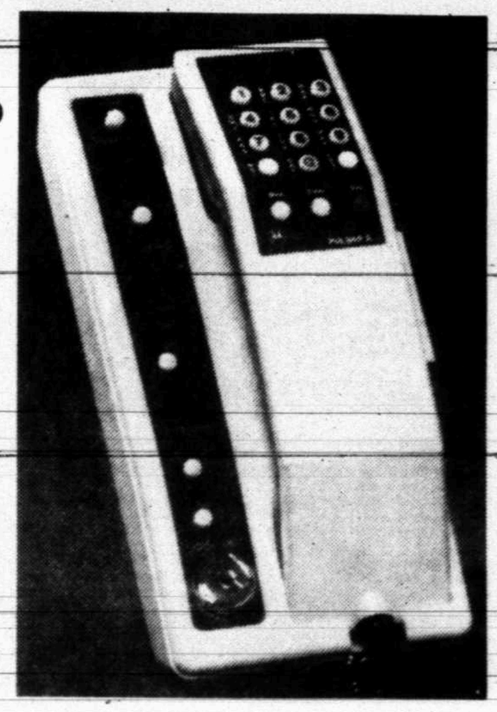

Maxey received her B.A. degree at Creighton University. She received a M.A. in philosophy at St. Louis University and a second M.A. in systematic theology at the University of San Francisco. She completed her Ph.D. in Christian ethics at Union Theological Seminary, New York, in 1971.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 251 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased by $317 million to $165.9 billion for the week ended March 14, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.84% from 8.78%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 8.77% from 8.75%. The taxable funds' average maturity remained at 37 days for the second week.

William E. Donoghue say, "Investors are becoming increasingly more sophisticated as more money is flowing into tax-free money funds. These funds have increased $3.4 billion since January 4, 1984. Taxable fund assets have increased nine out of the past ten weeks. If the increases continue at the present rate, money fund industry assets could reach an all-time high by year end."

PBGC to offer six new courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer six courses in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Oil and Gas Taxation," in Principles of Oil and Gas Law, Tuesday, March 20, from 7-10 p.m.

"Practical Geophysics II," Tuesdays and Thursdays, March 22-April 10, from 7-10 p.m. Main emphasis will be on interpretation from various geological provinces and will give the participant a deeper look into: seismic model studies and responses.

"Use of Old Electric Logs," Monday-Wednesday, March 26-28, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. This course will help geologists, geophysicists and engineers obtain maximum use of electric-type logs run prior to the late 1950's. Dr. Douglas W. Hilchie, Petroleum Engineering Consultant, will instruct the course. Fee is $400.

"Part I: Components of Geological Data," Tuesday and Wednesday, March 27-28, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. This course is designed for people breaking into the geological phase of the oil industry who require a better understanding of geological data and/or the responsibility of the geological assistant or secretary.

"Effective Listening," Tuesdays, March 27 - April 17, from 7-9 p.m.

"How to Communicate Under Pressure," Thursday, March 29, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. This seminar presents communication strategies and other techniques for dealing with people whom you find difficult.

Changes made in water rule

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has increased pollution safeguards in a rule that provides for the protection of fresh water from wastes produced by oil and gas operations.

The amendments to the Oil and Gas Division's Rule 8 require that all oilfield waste disposal be authorized by Commission rule or permit. The changes authorize several disposal practices and the use of several types of pits in oilfield operations.

Another change requires that the producer of salt water from an oil well keep records on the amount and origin of water produced, where the water is disposed of, and who transports the water.

Oilman warns of natural gas problems

NEW YORK — The president of the Independent Petroleum Assn. of American (IPAA) told New York security analysts recently that the U.S. oil and natural gas producing industry has accomplished a great deal in the last year, but could do far more if not handicapped by burdensome and restrictive government regulations and policies.

Jon Rex Jones of Houston, head of the national trade association representing independent oil and natural gas producers, warned the New York Society of Security Analysts that natural gas producers "are in particular trouble." Jones blamed the situation on the rigidities of the Natural Gas Policy Act.

Jones noted that there are a number of "ominous signs on the horizon" and that the natural gas industry is on "the verge of real problems" if Congress does not act.

Texas American producing in Louisiana

Commercial production of botn oil and natural gas has begun from dual zone discovery well in southern Louisiana, it was announced recently by William F. Judd, President of Texas American Energy Corp. (AMEX Symbol TAE).

The La Terre No. 1 well, located in Terrebonne Parish, La., is producing 413 barrels of oil and 860,000 cubic feet of natural gas per day on a 12/64 inch choke with 1,720 psi flowing tubing pressure from depths of 10,667 to 10,671 feet. In a separate zone the well is also producing 3,800,00 cubic feet of natural gas per day on a 18/64 inch choke with 3,450 psi flowing tubing pressure from depths of 11,247 feet and 11,249 feet.

State board approves Mathews' license

AUSTIN — Cody Terrel Mathews, with the Ortloff Corp. in Midland, has been approved for licensure as a professional engineer by the State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers.

Upon filing a copy of his official Texas engineer's seal with the board, Mathews will be duly licensed by the state. He was one of 66 individuals approved for licensure by the board.

Gulf shares withdrawal rights extended

AMARILLO — Mesa Petroleum Co. has announced that as a consequence of the tender offer commenced March 7, 1984, by Standard Oil Co. of California for all shares of Gulf Corp. common stock at $80 per share, withdrawal rights under the tender offer made by the members of the Gulf Investors Group on Feb. 23, 1984, for 13.5 million Gulf shares at $65 per share have automatically been extended until 12:00 midnight, New York City time, on Tuesday, March 20,1984.

RRC plans 'state of the industry' meeting

The Railroad Commission will hold its annual "state of the industry" oil and gas hearing on March 20 at 9:00 a.m. at th Hyatt Regency hotel in Fort Worth.

Some 20 senior officers of companies and associations in the oil and gas industry are expected to deliver their assessment of the present condition and future outlook for the industry to Chairman Mack Wallace and Commissioners Buddy Temple and James E. (Jim) Nugent.

Senator urges passage of natural gas bill

WASHINGTON — Senator Don Nickles, R-Okla., has urged passage of compromise natural gas legislation this year.

Nickles, a member of te Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, told a meeting of the Gas Mens' Roundtable that although it is uncertain such legislation will include a provision on mandatory carriage of natural gas by pipelines, "the whole issue of natural gas is so critical it's important to move forward" with or without mandatory carriage.

The Oklahoma senator outlined the elements he believes should be included in compromise legislation. They are: Deregulation of all gas purchase contracts as they expire or as they are renegotiated, and elimination of end-use restrictions — incremental pricing and the Fuel Use Act — and repeal any athority for the 2-year reimpossition of government controls on new gas prices.

SPE, DOE to co-sponsor joint symposium

TULSA — The Mid-Continent Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers (SPE) and the Department of Energy (DOE) will co-sponsor the Fourth Joint SPE/DOE Symposium on Enhanced Oil Revovery (EOR), in Tulsa, April 16-18, 1984, at the Tulsa Convention Center.

More than 2,000 oilmen from the U.S. and several foreign countries are expected to attend.

The purpose of the symposium is to provide a means for information exchange on development of EOR technology, according to Ralph W. Veatch, Jr. of Amoco Production Co. Veatch is serving as general chairman of the symposium.

Field trip scheduled

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleeontologists and Mineralogists (PBS/SEPM) will sponsor a one-day field trip, Saturday, March 24.

The field trip led by Carroll Hedrick and Sal Mazzulo will examine the back-reef facies and stratigraphy of the Guadalupe Mountain area surrounding Carlsbad, N.M.

Persons interested in attending are asked to meet at the intersection of highways 137 and 285 north of Carlsbad at 9:00 a.m. MST.

Participants are encouraged to bring field boots, sack lunches, water and a camera. The trip should last approximately six hours.

For more information and reservations contact SEPM at 683-1573.

Offshore superport struggling to survive

ALGIERS, La. (AP) — The nation's only superport, designed to take oil from giant tankers too big to use regular ports, is struggling along as a reality that could have waited on the drawing board for a few years.

"If we're looking at the $700 million spent to do what we're doing now, it probably would have not been built," acknowledged Bill Read, president of the Louisiana Offshore Oil Port or LOOP.

The superport proper, resembling an oil rig platform, sits in the Gulf of Mexico 65 miles from New Orleans.

Since May 1981, ships have been tying up at the four massive buoys to pump out their crude through a network of hoses and pipes that lead to storage cavities on shore and ultimately to refineries as far north as the Great Lakes.

The eight underground cavities are in natural salt formations and a typical cavity on the Louisiana coast is as tall as the Empire State Building.

The facility, capable of storing 32 million barrels of oil a day, is owned by giants — Ashland Oil Inc., Marathon Pipe Line Co., Murphy Oil Corporation, Shell and Texaco.

Luckily they're giants because they're having to pay the annual $70 million note to pay off the tax-free bonds that financed the terminal. The bonds will be paid off in the year 2006.

"No, it's not paying for itself," said Read. "We hope it will be by 1985."

In the interim, the superport is just another victim of the economy, he said.

As designed, the port can unload 1.4 million barrels a day.

"We thought national imports would be six million barrels a day at first and that would increase to 12 million by 1985," said Read. "The volume has gone down to three million barrels.

The nation imports 4.2 million barrels a day, but that includes more than crude oil, which is at the three million level, he said. The United States consumes 15.2 million barrels a day.

"Looking at projections of volume, it looks like we will be up to six million again by the late 1990s. Import levels will increase based on the general progression of increased consumption and decreased domestic production," he said.

The superport is averaging taking in 300,000 barrels a day.

Isn't the federal policy aimed at becoming completely self-sufficient?

"It's a great objective," said Read. "Naturally, as an American, I would like to see us do that. But, as a practical matter, I don't think it's going to happen."

Designed specifically to handle giant supertankers, the port now takes oil from any ship, including smaller ships that could get up the Mississippi River closer to refineries.

"It's been unprofitable since it started," Read said of his facility. "We need all of the business we can get. We're getting more of our business now from Mexico and the ships are smaller."

Terry Trovato, an aide to Read, said the tanker rates are real low on the so-called Mexican run where so much of the oil is coming from, making it unprofitable for supertankers to compete.

The facility still gets supertankers it was designed for but is also a good deal for smaller tankers.

"They just take a lot of unloading time because the port was designed for the larger ones," said Read.

To compare, a small tanker might bring in a 50,000 ton load while the largest supertanker is capable of a 500,000 ton load. Four football fields could be placed on a supertanker.

The facility can only take oil out as fast as a tanker can pump it and smaller tankers aren't geared to pump fast, he added.

Once the oil is pumped into the storage cavities on shore, it goes through a network of pipelines to refineries in Louisiana and other states.

Parker signs to drill Arctic offshore deal

TULSA — Parker Drilling Company is pleased to announce its selection by Global Marine Drilling Company to drill from Global Marine's Concrete Island Drilling System, the Glomar Beaufort Sea 1, in Alaska's Beaufort Sea. The contract was announced today by Robert L. Parker Jr., president and chief operating officer of Parker Drilling Company.

Glomar Beaufort Sea 1, a self-contained submersible drilling structure designed for arctic conditions, is the first unit of its kind to be used in the Beaufort Sea of Alaska. Because of is unique reusable quality, Glomar Beaufort Sea 1 is designed to be used as an alternative to the gravel islands previously used for exploatory arctic drilling. The Glomar Beaufort Sea 1 is being constructed in Tsu and Shimizu, Japan, by Nippon Kokan, KK (NKK). The design, construction, transportation and eventual operation of the Glomar Beaufort Sea 1 and Parker Rig 217 culminates an industry-wide effort in developing an alternative method for arctic exploration.

Parker Rig 217 utilizes a triple deck configuration for housing power, pump, pit and piephouse modules. By using this arrangement, deck space aboard the Glomar Beaufort Sea 1 is kept to a minimum. This configuration is a first for Parker's arctic development rig design. The design was created by parker's Alaska operations personnel and OIME, Parker's manufacturing subsidiary located in Odessa.

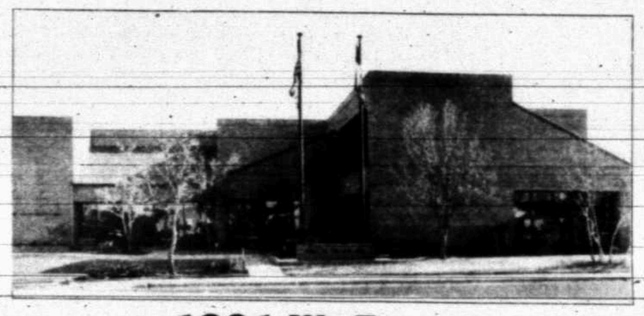

With a deck area of approximately 290 feet by 272 feet, the Glomar Beaufort Sea 1 will support Parker Rig 217, 100 employees, heliport and support equipment. The Glomar Beaufort Sea 1 is designed to hold consumables to drill three 14,000-foot wells in 35 to 55 feet of water.

Parker Drilling Company is listed on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol PKD.

Why An Independent Deserves An Independent Bank

COMMITMENT

Given all the negative press about the energy industry, a lot of people are down on oil and gas lending.

But that's exactly the opposite of the way we feel at ClayDesta National Bank.

Our bank was built by and for the independent operator. We believe in the independent. And more importantly, we know how to handle the special needs of the independent. We're one of just a handful of Texas banks who have full-time engineers and oil and gas lenders on staff ready to work with you.

We understand that there aren't many things more important to an independent operator than knowing your bank will stand behind you. You get a commitment from ClayDesta National Bank — you've got a commitment.

If you'd like to know more about what an independent bank could mean to your operation, call Bob Elliott or Steve Harper at 683-2265. Or just come on by. You'll love doing business with a bank that believes in you.

You've never seen a bank like ClayDesta.

Superior's history marked by family feuding

By the Los Angeles Times, Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The 63-year history of Superior Oil Co. is one that J.R. Ewing and his feuding kin on the "Dallas" television series might envy.

The company was founded in 1921 by William M. Keck, whose uncanny ability to discover oil led to its meteoric growth. Keck, known to many as the "Old Man," operated the company like a personal fiefdom before his death in 1964, quickly disposing of executives who fell out of favor while writing the book on how to fend off takeover attempts.

But Keck's six children were never close. Son Howard beat out his brother, William Jr., in a struggle for the company's presidency in the early 1950s. Howard subsequently refused to allow William to fly with him on the company plane, instead forcing him to use another company plane.

But the biggest family squabble began developing in 1982, when Willametta Keck Day, Howard's sister, met with investment bankers to discuss the sale of Superior. Howard Keck, then Superior's chairman and firmly in control of the company, bitterly resisted the idea. But last May, Day won a proxy fight forcing a group of outside directors to consider takeover bids.

Soon afterward, Howard resigned from his posts as Superior chairman and director. Perhaps frustrated with the feuding, he reversed his position and last November began to solicit buyers for Superior.

Sunday's announcement that Mobil had taken up Howard on his offer thus is expected to end the Keck legacy at Superior, although it won't end the family squabbling.

Day has a suit pending against Howard challenging the fees he charged to manage the six charitable trusts set up by William M. Keck's will.

She also is expected to push Howard to give up control over the largest trust, which benefits the charitable W.M. Keck Foundation, and turn over control to the foundation's board.

Gordon McLendon: a typical millionaire?

By the Los Angeles Times, Washington Post News Service

LAKE DALLAS, Texas — Hundred-pound killer shrews, while normally formidable, aren't any match for Gordon McLendon.

It happened a quarter century ago when McLendon was portraying a mad scientist in the classic (of sorts) horror film "The Killer Shrews." He was unceremoniously chewed to death in his brief but crucial cameo appearance. The role remains one of the lesser, if more curious, credentials on the resume of a true Texas character. He counts among his chums: George Bush, the Hunt brothers, Dallas Cowboys owner Clint Murchison and movie wheelers and dealers like Sy Weintraub, Freddie Fields, David Brown and Richard Zanuck.

Among his financial interests are strategic metals, oil, Etruscan art objects, real estate and Greek coins dating back to 500 BC. He owns the biggest chain of drive-in theaters in Texas and the most complete private collection of German currency printed during the runaway inflation of the 1920s. Although he's sold his radio stations, he's considered a broadcast genius who is credited with the concept of Top 40 radio.

He's written eight books, among them "The Fun Way to a Colorful Vocabulary" and "Get Really Rich in the Coming Super Metals Boom." A few years back, MGM released "Love Songs for the Good Times" by the Gordon McLendon Singers.

Now, at age 62, he seems to have been bitten again by the Hollywood bug ... or shrew, to suffer the analogy one more time.

For starters, McLendon is putting together an $80 million production fund for six or seven features that he and a consortium of his buddies will be underwriting during the next four years. They have already contacted "five well-known producers who will do the pictures," he said in an interview.

"We have $40 million in place and the other $40 million will come from me and what I get my friends to put up," said McLendon. "Or we may make a public offering."

He's also dickering with David Merrick's production company over a rise-to-stardom movie musical ("It's about a young ingenue we would hope would be Liza Minnelli") and is working to secure rights to the late Ayn Rand's perennial best-selling epic, "Atlas Shrugged."

Somehow everything seems to pay off for McLendon. According to Forbes magazine, McLendon's fortune from selling his radio stations during the '70s has made him one of the 400 richest folk in America. Forbes figures his net worth at between $100 million and $200 million.

McLendon said the figure might be low: "It's just so hard to say because a good 40 percent of our holdings are tied up in real estate. It's the biggest single investment we have," he said.

And, he said, he hasn't the foggiest notion what all that property might be worth if sold today.

It is clear to McLendon that perhaps $1 million of those many millions in the McLendon treasury came from the unlikely source of "The Killer Shrews." It starred Ken Curtis (Festus of "Gunsmoke"), Baruch Lumet (father of director Sidney Lumet) and Ingrid Goude, who was Miss Sweden of 1956. It was shot for a paltry $125,000 at McLendon's 100-acre estate north of Dallas, called Cielo, and has at least quintupled his original investment, he said.

"Killer Shrews" played in drive-ins on a double bill with another dubious McLendon Radio Pictures release, "The Giant Gila Monster." McLendon is quick to point out, both pictures made money.

However, he can't say the same for "Victory," the 1982 film directed by John Huston that re-introduced the McLendon name to Hollywood. It was a World War II soccer saga (the Aryan Nazi soccer players vs. their prisoners of war) starring Sylvester Stallone and Pele. According to McLendon, the film's gross expenses ran about $17 million and, as of last week, it had taken in only $10 million.

It was a box-office flop ... for just about everyone but McLendon.

Sy Weintraub had coaxed McLendon to invest and act as executive producer, but he accepted only on the condition that his money and producer's fee be returned at the beginning of principal photography in Budapest.

"Fortunately, I have this rule that I follow without fail: I won't go into any motion picture where I don't know at the start that I am going to get at least my money back, guaranteed," McLendon said.

His other investing rule: Have fun.

"I had a very minor, almost insignificant role in which I was on the screen maybe six or seven minutes," McLendon recalled of his part in "Killer Shrews." "I played an eccentric, absent-minded but brilliant scientist who got bit by one of these killer shrews."

McLendon earned his first media millions in the late '40s in another unusual casting: He built a national radio network around his dramatic re-creations of the play-by-play of major league baseball and football games. Only 26, he dubbed himself "The Old Scotsman" and pretended to be a 79-year-old sportscaster.

His dramatizations — initially based on pirated play-by-play information supplied to him by phone — included crowd noises, bat-cracking and other sound effects that made his basement studio in a Dallas hotel sound like the broadcast booth at Yankee Stadium. (By the time his Liberty Sports Network was dissolved in the early '50s, the Old Scotsman was airing on 458 stations.)

He explained how it all started: In the late '30s, when McLendon was an Oriental language major at Yale, he already knew that what he really wanted to do had little to do with his fluency in Japanese. After he wrote to Red Barber, lamenting that Yale offered no major in sportscasting, the dean of baseball play-by-play men invited McLendon to visit him in the booth at Ebbets Field. It was there that McLendon did his real undergraduate training.

In 1945, after he had graduated from Yale and had done a stint as a Naval Intelligence Officer during World War II, McLendon's father — already rich from real estate investments — helped his son buy a radio station in Palestine, Texas, to try out the tricks the Old Redhead had taught him.

"But you might say my real career as a sportscaster began in 1947, when we bought a station in Dallas," McLendon said. "I tried to think of some nickname that everyone would like and I am Scottish. I thought: which of the races have no enemies? The Scots don't! I've never heard 'I hate the Scots' in my life. They make jokes about us, but we don't have any enemies."

So the Old Scotsman was born over station KLIF on Nov. 9, 1947: "It was a game between the Chicago Cardinals and the Detroit Lions. The NFL and the competing All-American Conference were both delighted to have their games broadcast.

"I think some few of the clubs wanted to charge me $25 or something like that for the rights, but most of them gave them to us free, just figuring they clearly had a mental case on their hands any way."

Apparently they didn't think anyone would listen but, unless the game was a dead bore that even the Old Scotsman could not liven up, everyone began tuning into his Liberty Sports Network.

"I remember once when a score was up to something like 13 to 1 and I got so bored I did the last half inning in Japanese. I didn't get much feedback on that. I think they'd all tuned me out by then."

"Oh, the furor we caused! We referred the FCC to the White House and the administration told them they thought it was a wonderful idea to give the people a real taste of the vicious propaganda the Russians were hearing and what all of Europe was hearing every day, hour after hour."

It was about the same time that McLendon entered politics.

"The woman's name was Mary Elizabeth Stone. She was a Wichita Falls mental case. She said I was a Communist," McLendon said soberly.

Mary Elizabeth Stone planned to shoot McLendon while he was running for the U.S. Senate as a conservative Democrat in 1964. She practiced on his campaign poster, but mistook a McLendon look-alike for the candidate as the unfortunate man was waiting at a Texas airport.

"She hit his flight bag because he looked like me," he said. "There were two bullet holes in the man's underwear."

McLendon lost to LBJ protege Ralph Yarborough in that election, along with another candidate who has since risen to national prominence: Vice-President George Bush.

Since then, Bush has become a close friend.

And there are others:

Herbert and Bunker Hunt, who involved McLendon peripherally in their ill-fated attempt four years ago to corner the U.S. silver market.

TIGR bonds make excellent IRA investments

By Richard Sandoval

There is an excellent investment available that is relatively new, unknown, and perfect for an IRA. The investment is called a Zero Coupon Treasury Bond (acronym: TIGR), and it's the subject of this column.

Most bonds pay interest every six months and have a par (face amount) value of $1,000. A $1,000 bond paying 10 percent a year would therefore pay $50 every six months from the time you bought it until it matures (you get your $1,000 back).

A zero coupon bond, however, makes no periodic interest payments. It still matures for $1,000, but you can generaly buy it for a huge discount.

A TIGR, then, is a zero coupon bond with U.S. Government, backing. The price varies for anumber of reasons (when does it mature? What's the interest rate?), but a TIGR maturing in 30 years, for example, could probably be bought for as little as $121.

Disadvantages? Even though you're not receiving interest payments, the IRS says that you're "earning" interest and must pay tax on it. This is what makes it perfect for an IRA. Any income your IRA makes is tax deferred, so the interest that accumullates doesn't have-to have the tax paid immediately anyway.

Advantages? Besides safety (not toomany things safer than a bond backed by Uncle Sam), you can pick the year of maturity you want. After al, if a TIGR is bought for retirement, a person of 50 will want his TIGR to mature at a different time than a person of 25.

I want to mention, quickly, otherss that should be considered for the TIGRS. One is young people; it's a very appropriate investment to buy for your children and grandcchildren. Another is a parent who has a retarded child and wants to set aside money for him years into the future when the parent may not be around.

A very important thing to remember in any investment is liquidity. As I said in my last column, IRA money can be put into many things: certificates of depositss, money markets, stocks and bonds. What happens if you buy a TIGR and a few years later decide that you want to put your IRA money into something else? Most brokerage houses maintain a secondary market. What that means is there'll be a buyer for you, the seller.

Don't forget: the price you receive for your TIGR will vary.

A TIGR combines safety with the convenience that comes with making an investment and (almost) forgetting it. This is what makes it fantastic.

NOW YOU CAN PUT YOUR IRA ON THE NYSE.

And that makes a big difference.

Until now, most bank IRAs have been invested in savings certificates. But suppose you want greater investment flexibility?

Opening a First City Self-Directed IRA is the answer.

Then you can begin investing your IRA funds in stocks, bonds and covered call options carried on the NYSE and other major exchanges. Plus, you can save up to 70% on broker commissions since you make your own investment decisions.

Here's how it works: Once your account is open, simply call First City Brokerage Services,sm whenever you want to trade. An experienced trader will handle your order quickly and efficiently. Then at the end of the month, you'll receive a statement of all trades, as well as the value of securities held in your IRA.

All uninvested IRA funds earn a high rate of interest in a First City Money Market Savings Account.

And like any of our IRAs, you can invest as much as $2,000 annually, and earn up to $1,000 a year in tax deductions.

In addition, you have until April 16, 1984 to open the IRA and apply your entire contribution toward the 1983 tax year.

Rollover IRAs are also available. If you have an IRA elsewhere, or have recently received a lump-sum distribution from a qualified plan, you can invest these assets in a First City Self-Directed IRA.

To open your account, stop by First City, or phone First City Brokerage Services at 1-800-392-8989 (685-5292 in Midland), and we'll mail you our sign-up kit.

Then you'll have an IRA that can be invested more ways than ever before.

Max's Studio of Photography — features portraits with the glamour flair

Max Hutelium began working with photography in 1975 as a hobby. Since then he has done 703 weddings alone.

Although Max does a wide variety of photography, he specializes in ladies portraits with the glamour flair. This flair is created by the use of soft light, special poses and soft focus to create a misty romantic look. To learn the trade secrets of this type of photography, Max studied with a Los Vegas photographer. While the Los Vegas photographer used this technic to photograph women in lingerie, Max has incorporated this technic into his portraits to give a fully clothed model that sensual look.

The glamour flair gives the everyday women the extra glamour and sensuality that she enjoys. Although this is a sensual form of photography Max does not carry it to the point of photographing nudes.

Max also does model portfolios, business portraits, family portraits, pictures of pets and oilfield photograghs.

There is a nation-wide contest coming up featuring childrens photographs. Contact Max for more details.

Max's Studio of Photography offers a variety of of photo packages. Prices range from inexpensive to the very expensive hand brushed photographs. Max offers four different quality prints to choose from.

When it comes to weddings, Max is a veteran. As mentioned earlier, Max has photographed 703 weddings since he began. He still has some choice dates open for spring and summer weddings. It is best to book Max as far in advance as possible to insure that he will be available. Once again, there are a variety of packages to choose from.

There is a small sitting fee at Max's but it is well worth it for the time and professionalism you receive. The fees range from $25.00 to $50.00.

The $50.00 sitting fee includes the glamour flair treatment of a relaxed atmosphere, at least 3 changes of clothes for a variety of looks, a free make-up make-over if desired and at least 30 poses to choose from, although there are usually more. You also get a 5x7 print.

Make overs are available for a $15.00 fee if you select a smaller package.

If you would like to see a sample of Max's work, stop by his studio located 1½ miles south of I-20 on Rankin Highway. You can reach Max's Studio of Photography at 683-2143 if you have any questions.

Suzy's Emporium is a dieter's delight. Suzy's carries only low calorie, sugar free and low sodium. Stop by 4313 W. Illinois and check it out today.

Suzy's Emporium -- the dieter's own variety store

ATTENTION everyone who has special dietary needs, whether they are low calorie, sugar free, or low sodium. Please answer the following questions.

1. Does going to the grocery store test your will-power?
2. Do you detest grocery store managers for putting dietary food on the shelf next to the regular food so that you have to walk by the cookies or ice cream to get to them?
3. Are you starving yourself to lose weight?
4. Are you tired of the small selection of items you have to choose from to get the dietary food?

If you answered yes to any of the above questions, read on.

Suzy's Emporium is a dream come true to a person with special dietary needs, whether it be for weight loss, diabetes, a heart condition, hypoglycemia or high blood pressure.

Everything at Suzy's is low sodium and sugar free. "Everything" includes such things as candy, cookies, gelatins, pudding, even cake mixes, icings, pancake mixes and syrup. She also carries frozen chocolate brownies and eclairs that contain only 120 calories.

One specific brand that Susie Graham, owner, carries is Weight Watchers. Besides a large selction of their prepared food, she also has the soft serve frosted treat in chocolate and vanilla. At Suzy's, you can even sit at the tables and chairs and relax while you enjoy your frosted treat.

You can also have a coke float or a diet soda float at Suzy's. Of ourse they use the Weight Watcher Frosted in them so it tastes like your cheating but you're not.

Suzy's also carries the Sweet 'N' Slender frozen deserts. They are made with fructose instead of sugar so they are much lower in calories. Some of the things that are offered by this company are eclairs, brownies, muffins and coming soon- an ice cream creation that is very similar dilly bar but it contains no milk or sugar.

The salt free selection includes canned meats, such as tuna and ham, seasonings, soups, crackers and chips.

Have you ever wondered what to give a dieter as a gift? Why not send a basket filled with food from Suzy's Emporium? These baskets are even topped with balloons. For $10 to $30 you can send a birthday basket, a dieter's basket (you name the types of food sent), a breakfast basket (pancakes, pancake syrup, etc.), or possibly a Weight Watchers basket containing a variety of their products. Suzy's will even deliver them.

Suzy's Emporium also carries a varied selection of Potentials Unlimited Self Hypnosis tapes. Some of the topics available are weight loss and exercise.

One of the best benefits of the dietary food available at Suzy's Emporium is that it can easily be incorporated into a family's daily food program.

Suzy's Emporium is located at 4313 West Illinois. If you would like to call Suzy's, the number is 689-9851.

Midland Stained Glass can brighten your life

Midland Stained Glass Center, located at 4313-A West Ilinois, can help you turn your home into a fantasy of stained glass creations. The imagination sets the limit as to how far you can go in creating new and different pieces for your home.

Stained glass is a wonderful medium to work with when remodeling or redecorating your home. Many homes have atriums which are a perfect setting for a stained glass hanging. Mary Richardson, manager of Midland Stained Glass Center, recommends hangings for atriums instead of redoing the entire glass panel, for several reasons. One reason is that it is easier to change the hangings if you redo the decor or if you just want a new look. A hanging is also convenient if you move because you can take it with you.

Speaking of redecorating, now is the time to replace your wintery hangings with spring and summer setting and designs.

Besides hangings, stained glass can be used for a multitude of decorating items such as dresser sets, ring boxes, stationary boxes, night lights, tissue box covers, coffee table tops, end tables, game table tops, lamp shades and mirrors.

Mirrors can be used very effectively in decorating your home. Whether they are framed in decorative stained glass or etched, Midland Stained Glass Center can do both. You can commission them to create a mirror hanging from their materials or you can take a mirror in for them to work on. Any mirror that can be taken to the Center can be etched. Items such as dresser mirrors, wall mirrors, and free standing mirrors can be etched beautifully to add a special effect.

Mirrors and glass can be etched two ways for very different effects. A cream etching is done on the front of the mirror or glass for a very soft look and a smooth feel. The other form of etching is sandblasting. This is a deeper, rougher form of etching. Sandblasting can be done on the front or back.

Skylights and doors are also places where stained glass makes a beautiful difference.

Midland Stained Glass Center can create beautiful stained glass or etched designs for you but, they can also help you make them yourself. They offer a variety of classes that will begin in the near future. There will be a beginners class which will cover the basics of working with stained glass. For the more advanced artist, a class in Tiffany lamp shades will be offered in late April. How to work with beveled glass is the subject of another class. Construction of boxes such as ring and stationary boxes will be featured in still another class. The last subject covered in the classes is etching on glass.

If you are interested in participating in any of these classes call Mary Richardson at 697-0322 to sign up today. The classes are on a first come, first served basis.

Midland Stained Glass will also be holding a stained glass competion in the near future so you hobbyist/artists start thinking about what you would like to enter.

For the experienced artist who works with stained glass or etching at home, Midland Stained Glass Center carries a colored glass in a variety of colors and a full line of accessories.

To compliment your stained glass creations, they also carry silk flowers, vines and trees.

Whether you are a beginner or an advanced artist/hobbiest, Midland Staind Glass Center is the place to go. They are located at 4313-A West Illinois. Stop in and see what they have to offer soon.

If you need more information concerning custom work or the classes being offered, call Mary Richardson at 697-0322 or stop by and visit with her at the Midland Park Mall Home Show beginning March 26.

Midland Stained Glass Center, located 4313-A West Illinois is your headquarters for stained glass and accessories. For information on classes or custom work, call 697-0322.

Dorland Construction -- craftmanship, quality and reliablity you can trust

Quality craftmanship and a reputable builder are two things that are becoming increasingly more difficult to find in today's society where everything is done with record speed. Wouldn't it be nice to find a builder you can trust to do your work for you and not have to worry if it will be done properly? There is such a builder right here in Midland – Harold Doreland.

Dorland Construction has the reputation of building "finer" homes. This means they use only top quality materials and since the home is built one board at a time you are assured of fine craftsmanship throughout the home.

If you are planning to build a new home but aren't sure exactly what plan you would like to use, Dorland Construction can help. Harold Dorland, owner, can design a home for you or you can use their planning service. This assures you of a home that meets your needs.

While Dorland Construction will build a home on the lot of your choice, Harold Dorland prefers to build at Greentree. He was one of the first builders there at the beginning and has built many homes at Greentree. Now Mr. Dorland would like to see Greentree North grow like Greentree did.

Besides custom homes, Dorland Construction also does remodeling. They can remodel a room for a new look or possibly add an entirely new room on to your home. Dorland Construction can handle all types of remodeling, whether the job is large or small.

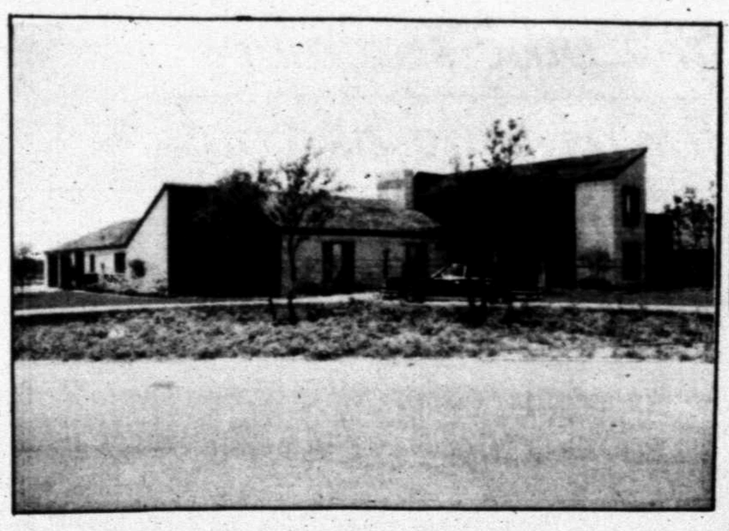

If your home is fine, but you have trouble getting up every day and going into an office that you don't like, why not let Dorland remodel the office and give it a whole new look? Dorland Construction also does commercial remodeling, so why put up with an office or building you don't like? There is no reason to put it off, call Harold Dorland today.

In today's competitive society it is often wise to find out a little about the "man behind the company" so to speak. Harold Dorland has impressive credentials as a builder. Not only has he helped to build up Greentree Country Club, but he is now helping Greentree North to get off to a good start. Harold Dorland can also add to his list of accomplishments the fact that he built Tom Kite's (the professional golfer) home at Greentree. Mr. Dorland is on the Board of Directors for the Permian Basin Home Builder's Association.

While quality and dependability never change at Dorland Construction some things have. If you have worked with Harold in the past and need more work done now, you won't be able to find him at 4408 W. Cuthbert anymore. The office is now located on Liop 250 East of Big Spring St., Cubs Stadium and Hogan Golf Course. The office is in a large yellow building on the north side of the road.

Currently construction of Loop 250 makes it a little difficult to get to the office, but you can always call them at their new phone number, 684-7767.

Remember, Dorland Construction is the name to trust in remodeling and custom homes.

Dorland Construction can build the house of your dreams or remodel your home to make it into a dream home. To make your dream a reality, call 684-7767.

U.S.A.F. fighter units will use shale oil fuel

Hearst Feature Service

SAN ANTONIO — Two U.S. Air Force fighter units will start using jet fuel drawn from shale exclusively beginning this fall. By the year 2000, shale fuel could meet 20 percent of all American military needs, according to Pentagon projections.

"Shale oil could provide us with 140 years of liquid petroleum, based on today's consumption rate," said Maj. Larry Dipoma, chief of the Technical Assistance Branch at the San Antonio Air Logistics Center. The center's Directorate of Energy Management, located at Kelly Air Force Base, will oversee the shale oil tests.

Shale oil could free the United States from dependence on foreign energy sources, Dipoma said. But he noted that the fuel is close to twice as expensive as conventional oil.

The Air Force's shale program has already cost taxpayers $20 million. Under the 1980 Energy Security Act, the Air Force is able to buy shale fuel at conventional oil price levels, with the federal Synthetic Fuels Corp. making up the difference.

"This is an insurance policy," Dipoma said. "Our goal is to have a secure domestic energy reserve we can use during war, or any time our access to cdei rtiirrce reaas onducted successful test flights of -16 and F-111 fighters using shale fuel. The next step involves testing the fuel with day-to-day use on F-111s at Mountain Home Air Force Base in Idaho, and F-16s at Hill Air Force Base in Utah.

The fuel will be processed by Union Oil Co. in eastern Colorado, carried by train to Salt Lake City for storage, and then pipelined to the two bases.

Estimates of recoverable quantities of shale oil range between 600 billion to several trillion barrels, with a third or more of that figure located in the Green River basin of Utah, Colorado and Wyoming.

Texas gas producer must make $2.6 million refund

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on Wednesday ordered a Texas oil and gas producer to refund $2.6 million to Florida's main natural gas pipeline company and its customers.

The commission ruled that Coastal Oil & Gas Corp. between 1965 and 1979 illegally diverted to its own intrastate pipeline subsidiary in Texas some 1.9 billion cubic feet of gas that it had contracted in 1958 to sell to Florida Gas Transmission Corp.

However, the commission refused to go along with a recommendation by one of its law judges that Coastal, based in Houston, should be made to pay Florida Gas the entire 1958 contract price of the 1.9 billion cubic feet that was diverted. That amount was estimated by Costal at $6 million-plus.

"In our view, the gas payback remedy is excessive," the commission said in a 14-page order.

It also rejected a recommended refund of $900,000.

BOTTOM LINES

Alta Energy Corp. president R.F. Bailey has announced the second consecutive quarter of record earnings for the company. Net income for the company's second fiscal quarter ended Dec. 31, 1984, was $91,600 compared to a small loss for the same period in 1982. For the six months' period ended December 31, net income was $149,237 compared to a loss of $44,466 for the same period in 1982. For the six months' period, net cash flow was $616,657 compared to $108,464 for the previous year. Revenue for the six months increased by $540,186 over the same period in 1982, in spite of significant declines in oil and gas prices and curtailment of gas sales due to decreased demand.

According to Bailley, "Our policy of building Alta Energy Corp. through increased reserves and operational capabilities, combined with a conservative yet agressive exploration program, is beginning to show in the company's record earnings.

DENVER — Forest Oil Corp. reports that net earnings rose 37 percent during the fourth quarter, 1983, over the same period in 1982. However, they declined 13 percent for the 12 month period of 1983. Total income was up slightly in the fourth quarter, 1983, but declined 12.5 percent for the 12 month period from 1982 record levels primarily because of reduced gas production due to the industry-wide decline in demand for natural gas.

• • •

FORT WORTH — Tanddy Corp. announced recently that consolidated sales for the month of February were $210,700,000 an increase of 16 percent over the February 1983 sales of $181,696,000. Tandy's U.S. Radio Shack division recorded a 12 percent gain to $157,321,000 during February 1984 from $140,199,000 in February 1983. Sales of U.S. Radio Shack stores in existence more than one year rose 12 percent during February 1984.

• • •

NEW ORLEANS, LA. — Tidewater Inc. announced that on March 1, 1984 the company received preliminary reports of the estimates of the domestic oil and gas reserves of its exploration and production subsidiary, Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc, from its independent petroleum engineers.

John P. Laborde, Tidewater chairman and chief executive officers, said these estimates indicate that capitalized historical costs are likely to exceed discounted future net revenues as determined in accordance with requirements of the Securities and Exchage Commission.

As a result, the company anticipates a fourth quarter write down of capitalized costs of about $14 million, in which case net earnings for the year ending March 31, 1984, would be reduced by $7.6 million, or $.45 per share. The actual amount of the write down will be determined based upon information as of March 31, 1984.

• • •

HOUSTON — Wainoco Oil Corp. has reported net income of $1.7 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1983, versus last year's net loss of $47.5 million. On a per share basis, net income was $.15 versus last year's loss of $4.48. Funds flow from operations for 1983 was $20 million, a 41 percent increase over the $14.2 million reported in 1982 and the second highest ever reported by the company. Wainoco also reported a working capital balance of $7 million at year end, an increase of $16.9 million over the $9.9 million 1982 deficit. Revenues for the year were $45.8 million, a 7 percent decrease from last year's $49.4 million.

• • •

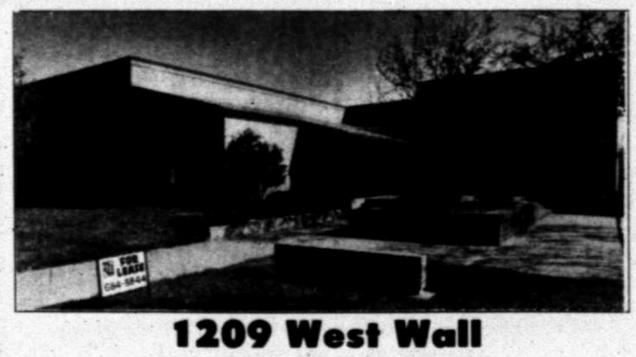

THE WOODLANDS — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. reports its capital budget for the fiscal year ending Jan. 31, 1985, has been set at $275 million.

The compay's capital expenditures for the prior year amounted to nearly $255 million.

Energy operations in the new year's budget account for $195 million, 16 percent more than last year"s comparablle expenditures. Planed outlays include $70 million for oil and gas exploration, $65 million for development and production, $23 million for gas processing, $22 million for gas gathering and transmission, and $15 million for property acquistions and other energy-rellated projects.

Rosalind Chao, who plays Soon-Lee Klinger on CBS-TV's series "After-M*A*S*H," has been acting since she was 4 years old.

Part of two cultures

By JANE ARDMORE
King Features Syndicate

"Acting, or whatever your career ambition, isn't all there is, and you are not totally in control of what happens to you. It has to do with luck, with fate, with destiny. My Christian faith helped me to realize that I can go on an interview, everything can be right, I can be perfect for the part; but if I'm not destined for that part, there's nothing I can do but go on."

— Rosalind Chao

Rosalind Chao, who's starring in CBS's "AfterM*A*S*H," has zoomed into focus as a role model for young Asian Americans, and recently was scheduled to address a class in Asian American studies at UCLA. She had no intention of making a speech.

"I love acting," she explains, "have loved it ever since I was 4 years old and the chance was first offered me. I turned cartwheels! I'm still turning them.

"But acting is one thing. You're hidden inside a character, you're safe. Addressing a large group of people as just yourself, forget it. This will be a question-and-answer period and I'll pretend I'm just one of the students."

Not a difficult indentity, since in her soft ivory sweater and skirt, her hair pulled back into a ponytail and bangs framing her eager face, she looks almost exactly as she did five years ago as a student at USC. She had already embarked on a show-business career but was not certain whether it would be in acting or in broadcast journalism.

"I always had such urgency about what I was doing. I'd even chosen my college because I wanted to stay in L.A., because I wanted to keep acting.

"LOOKING BACK," says Ms. Chao, "I regret not having gone East to school, not having squeezed every last bit out of my education. I got good grades, but I was so ambitious to achieve a career and wanted to make it by a certain age. I was so eager and the goal seemed so remote. I've had many good people to help me along the way and I'd like to help others, give them a ray of hope.

"Here I am, you see, so it is possible."

Even though, there were some dry periods here and there, and when she did graduate after a senior year during which she had an internship at KNX News Radio, she realized "that much as I admired Connie Chung, I was not cut out for this.

"A journalist needs objectivity and I felt a great deal of trepidation — I was always indentifying with the trauma of news, it made me nervous. I was never driven in journalism as I am in acting. So, although I had this offer to go into TV journalism, I opted for acting — and went for almost a year without a job.

"It was devastating," she admits. "Not only did I read for parts and not get them, I didn't read well. I don't know why. My confidence level went out the window. It started to feed on itself. I would go on another interview, get nervous, and the reading would get worse.

"Plus there weren't that many interviews going on, which made each one seem more important, more 'last chance.' That's when I realized that not only did I have to work harder, study more, I had to concentrate on my philosophy of living and get my priorities straight. That's something I want to share with these students.

"ACTING, OR whatever your career ambition, isn't all there is, and you are not totally in control of what happens to you. It has to do with luck, with fate, with destiny.

"My Christian faith helped me to realize that I can go on an interview, everything can be right, I can be perfect for the part; but if I'm not destined for that part, there's nothing I can do but go on. What has happened, looking back, is that each time I've lost a part, if I had gotten that part, it would have prevented my getting something else, another part or another personal experience that proved far more important."

Ms. Chao remembers, "There was a film I could have died for. If I'd gotten it, I couldn't have done 'The Terry Fox Story' (a cable movie with Robert Duvall and Eric Fryer), about the young man who ran across Canada to raise money for cancer.

"I had the pleasure of playing his Japanese girlfriend, Rica, a phase of myself I've never played before. As Rica I could be the young, carefree, all-American part of me (the girl who grew up in California's Orange County and has yet to visit China) whereas I've had more opportunities to explore the Old World part of me because that's more usually the type of part written.

"There was something else I didn't get which enabled me to be available for 'AfterM*A*S*H.' As Soon-Lee, the beautiful Korean, married to former Sergeant Klinger on this series, Ms. Chao is using more of her Old World heritage. "I identify with her in the sense that I see much of her character in my cousin who has only recently come over from mainland China, and in some young Korean friends. They're almost like I was as a child in my naivete to American life and way of thinking."

She reflects, "Even though I was raised in American schools and tried very hard to fit in, be assimilated, there were certain things foreign to me. My brother and I would watch 'Leave it to Beaver' on television with amazement. 'Gosh, the way these kids are with their parents! It's like they were on the same level.' We had a very different sense. Our father and mother were the head of our home, what they said, went."

MS. CHAO WAS fortunate. It was the strength of the family, their staunch support, the sense of heritage, that sustained her through all the ups and downs of a career with demands that have been so confusing to so many.

"I think of myself as American, but I'm very proud of my Old World Culture," Ms. Chao says. "There are those who feel ashamed. There are those who feel half-and-half. I have the luck to have two cultures rather than one.

"I love being Rosalind Chao, American (my father named me just before I was born; he had seen Shakespeare's 'As you Like It'), but I also love stepping into my parents' world where I am introduced as Chao-Jya-Lin, into my parents, home, where they call me, affectionately, 'Shiao,' 'young mistress of the house.' There is a certain part of me that will never be assimilated. I guard that part of me."

She stood, recently, in a Buddhist temple surrounded by her entire family ("my father has nine brothers and sisters, so you can imagine") to pay tribute to her grandparents on the anniversary of their wedding.

"Very valuable," says Ms. Chao. "In some cultures there is a tendency to discard people as they grow older, but we venerate our ancestors. Since my grandparents were Buddhist, the ceremony was held in a temple.

"On the wall were pictures of my grandmother and grandfather. There was incense burning. You spend the day burning little symbols, gifts you are sending to heaven for your grandparents. You think of them, revere them. It is beautiful, the old tradition, the sense of family."

SHE CONTINUED, "Something very strong. If I should shame my family, if I should cause them to lose face — God forbid that should happen — it doesn't even enter my mind. Respect for your elders, this is the way I was brought up."

She lived right across the street from Disneyland, where her father is a successful restaurateur, owner of Chao's.

"My father was born in Soochow, my mother in Peking, both of them from wealthy families. Both of them came to America (before the Communist takeover) for purposes of education. My father came to study textile engineering so he could return to help my grandfather run his textile mills.

"My mother came with a scholarship to either Bryn Mawr or Stanford. Her father had wanted one of his children to become a doctor, but my mother chose Stanford because Bryn Mawr has no theater department. And in her heart she loves drama, she loves the arts. She ended up majoring in drama.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. I saw Sam Elliot in "Lifeguard." Could you tell me how old he is, where he's from, if he's married and how "The Yellow Rose" is doing?

Sherryl Speer
Sapulpa, Okla.

A. He's 40 and was born in Sacramento, California. He grew up in El Paso, Texas (where his parents met, incidentally, when they were both working as lifeguards), and Oregon.

He isn't married, but he's been living with actress Katharine Ross for the last five years in L.A.'s Topanga Canyon in a Western-style ranch house that he built himself. They met when they co-starred in the film "The Legacy" and word is that she may put in an appearance or two in "The Yellow Rose," depending on how long the show stays around.

"The ratings have been bad," according to a source on the show. "We've been placing 62nd, 63rd which is near the bottom of the list, but at least NBC picked us up for seven more episodes. It only renewed two of its fall shows."

To breathe more life into the series, the episodes will now be self-contained, instead of serial, and the focus will be the three main characters, including Elliot, which has to please him.

"Sam came to Hollywood to be a cowboy star," says the source. "But they weren't making westerns anymore. Now he's got this...and he's playing it with a vengeance."

Q. Of all the rock singers today, my personal favorite is Adam of Adam and the Ants, but I know nothing about him except that he has the most beautiful face I've ever seen on a man. Can you tell me something about him?

Patricia Gravelle
Moline, Ill.

A. He's 29 (birthday: November 3), his real name is Stuart Goddard and he's London-born, an only child who is still close to his parents. He's a former art-school graphics major who left after one semester to "make my mark on rock 'n' roll," as he describes it. He formed the Ants in 1976, but disbanded them last year when he felt they were getting lazy and disinterested, and went out on his own. He now calls himself Adam Ant.

Q. I would like to know about Gil Gerard. Is he married and does he have any plans for movies?

Julie Martin
Thomaston, Conn.

A. He's married to "Hotel's" Con nie Selleca and they have a 2½-year-old son, Gib (for Gilbert).

They both have a fairly wicked sense of humor: He once came home to find her lying in the bathtub with a "slit" throat covered in fake movie blood; she recently came back from an exercise class to find a truckload of pigs that he'd had delivered to her.

On the professional side: He plans to make an appearance on "Hotel" sometime this season, is talking to CBS about a series and he produced a play, "The Amen Corner," on Broadway this season. So far, no movie plans.

Q. Can you please tell me about the group Menudo?

G. Samson
Pensacola, Fla.

A. Menudo (which means "small change" in Spanish) was started in 1977 by Edgardo Diaz, their manager and father superior, with the concept that the band members' ages would never exceed 16. "At 16, their voices change, that changes the sound of the music and that changes everything," Diaz explains.

So, the group has recently exchanged two members and is now composed of Ricky, the only original Menudo (nearing 16, in his last days with the group), Roy, Charlie, Ray and Robby (the band's first American resident, who just joined them during their Radio City concerts in New York).

The group members work hard, travel frequently (with a tutor, so that they don't miss schoolwork, and, in fact, return to Puerto Rico to take state education exams to prove it) and are chaperoned rigorously by Diaz.

"The boys have very mixed feelings when it comes time to leave the band," explains an associate. "They've become close to the other boys and accustomed to the life style. But, by 16, they want some freedom, too. They want to be able to date, which they can't do as a Menudo, or ride their motorcycles or go out without being mobbed.

"But they do have an option if they feel like remaining in show business: The manager will retain them and they can perform on their own. Two have: Fernando and Rene have their own weekly TV show, but most have gone on to college."

Future plans for the group: more concerts and their first album in English.

Actress Rosalind Chao comfortable in two cultures

"My father is essentially a businessman," Ms. Chao explains. "He wanted to start another business with my mother after they met and married (in California) so that in addition to his engineering, they could have a business of their own.

"He's not a cook and knows nothing of cooking, but he's super about business and what happened is that he's been incredibly successful. First he opened one restaurant, then another, and now on a piece of property next to Disneyland, he and my mother are building a high-rise, the Emerald Hotel, which will open this spring.

"THEY'VE DONE everything hand-in-hand. He could not have done it without my mother, and she could not have done it without him.

"If you were to meet my parents you might assume that my father is head of the house and my mother the stereotypical Asian woman. A real misconception, believe me. My mother is very much on an equal level with my father.

"I want to dispel the rumor that the Asian woman is always below. My father is allowed to be head of the household, but my mother is right there with him. She does not come on like gangbusters, but she is very strong. They have a wonderful equality. They are brilliant people."

And they have been marvelous parents, behind their children in whatever they did. Ms. Chao's brother is a business major at the University of San Diego. They're behind him. And they have been behind her, never pushing, always there.

The people who pushed her into acting were two producers at Melodyland, a theater down the street from Chao's.

"They used to eat at our restaurant. When I was 4 they asked my parents to let me be in their production of 'South Pacific.' I rehearsed, sang a solo, loved it, then got cold feet and dropped out before opening night."

SHE RECALLS, "When I saw the show, I cried. I said, 'Oh, mother, I wish I hadn't dropped out.' She said, 'It's a little late now. When you make a decision, you have to follow through.' "

A few months later, she had another chance in a production of "Teahouse of the August Moon" in a non-speaking role.

"Flower Drum Song" came next. An agent saw Ms. Chao and landed her some work in television commercials. One night she and her father were watching "Here's Lucy." Chao said she wished she could be on that show, but thought, "So foolish, what would a little Chinese girl be doing on that show? My father said, 'Of course you can; why not?'

Rosalind Chao

"A few weeks later there were auditions. Lucy was doing a Chinese laundry show and I was picked. My father wasn't a bit surprised. My father is never surprised. That was when I was in elementary school. That was my first guest spot.

"My first big guest spot was when I was in high school and played the oldest daughter of Yul Brynner in the short-lived TV series, 'Anna and the King of Siam.' (It was the performance executive producer Burt Metcalfe remembered when he was casting for Sergeant Klinger's bride.)

"I was allowed to do these performances so long as they didn't interfere with my schoolwork.

MS. CHAO SAYS fondly, "They have been so good, my parents. When I first went to nursery school, there was a language problem; so they started speaking English in our home. No matter what I wanted to do, they would want to help. I feel there has been real guidance in my life.

"My mother was baptized a Catholic and thanks to her, I was brought up and chose the Christian way of life though I'm not narrow-minded or think someone else's way is wrong. When I ask their advice on a decision, they'll say, 'What do you think, Jya-Lin?' They alway give me that mutual respect."

Which is why, someday, Ms. Chao would like to marry and have a family. "I'd feel I'd missed a part of life without having children. But not right now. I want to grow up myself before I take on that responsibility.

"Sometimes I think I'll never grow up. My parents, I feel, matured so much earlier because they were on their own over here after China went Communist. Even so, they didn't marry early. My mother was 30 when she married."

For a couple of years Ms. Chao has been dating a young man who has nothing to do with show business — he's a marketing executive in the games business. "But I don't see marriage in my immediate future," she says.

"What I do know is that in the long run, I'm going to need a strong base to come back to. Hollywood is one thing and 'AfterM*A*S*H' is a good beginning, but the minute you think life is one-dimensional, that's when you are in danger of getting lost in it.

"I'VE SEEN people get lost in show business. It is not life and death, even though when you're talking to an agent about a part, you think it is.

"There are other things," she says. "During the actors' strike, I did a bit of volunteer work in a hospital. At the time, I'd been a little down about some part I didn't get. Stupid. You'd see a child who was scheduled for a leg amputation the next day and realize...how one-dimensional can you get?

"I've changed and grown this last year. I've been fortunate to land on a series where everyone's down to earth. Very family-oriented men, Jamie Farr, Harry Morgan and Bill Christopher. I was naive in the beginning. I thought of show business as one big camp where everyone looked out for each other.

"It is, instead, a tough business. How lucky can I be to get a part in a series like this? In a country like this? With a heritage like mine?"

Just a week ago, she said good-bye to her Aunt Ie, her mother's sister whom her mother hadn't seen in 20 years. Aunt Ie was here for six months. "one of those ladies you can't help but love. Intelligent, high-spirited, you lay eyes on her, you have to smile. She was the one who studied English, who pressured my grandfather into letting my mother come to America to study.

"She leaves my two cousins here, so she'll be coming back. But to see someone you care for get on the plane with the Communist Chinese flag..."

Dancer Chita Rivera has style, flair

Chita Rivera, star of the Broadway show "The Rink," sits in her dressing room.

NEW YORK (AP) — The sleek, silver-gray sports car spun up to the stage door. Its driver, muttering imprecations about weekend Manhattan traffic, jumped out, swooped up a waiting reporter, photographer and press agent and guided them into the Martin Beck Theater.

Even when coming to work, Chita Rivera has style and flair.

"I have a very big voice and a very large growl," she says, after leading the cavaran across the darkened stage and into her salmon-pink dressing room.

Right now, she's working with another high-powered lady of the musical theater — Liza Minnelli — electrifying "The Rink," the stormy story of a mother-daughter relationship played out against an old roller skating rink in a decaying amusement park.

Miss Rivera plays Anna, the mother, a woman she calls a survivor.

"She's mostly definitely a survivor and a believer. She will not let the negative aspect of life take over," she says.

"She has great faith — to the point where she's driven to defy that faith just to get a reaction from her daughter."

It's faith — and luck, the 51-year-old Miss Rivera says — that have kept her going for more than three decades in a business notorious for its use of people, especially dancers.

"I was blessed with a swell mother and father and a terrific family," says Miss Rivera. "My mother knew that I had to dance because I was breaking too many things in the house jumping off the furniture. So she put me into dance class."

Those classes led to a scholarship at the American School of Ballet, the school of the New York City Ballet. But when a friend needed moral support to audition for the road company of "Call Me Madam," Miss Rivera went too — and got the job. Not yet 18, she had succumbed to the lure of Broadway for good.

"It took me years to be able to go to a ballet and not sob because I had never done one — regretting I had never done one ballet," she says.

If she didn't get to do George Balanchine ballet, she did get a succession of larger roles in several musicals including "Seventh Heaven" with Gloria De Haven and Ricardo Montalban and Sammy Davis Jr.'s "Mr. Wonderful."

But her big break came in 1957 as Anita in "West Side Story." Her rousing rendition of "America" stopped the musical every night in New York and in London.

"'West Side Story' was a very emotional show. That was my first involvement as a dancer getting in touch with my feelings," she says. "We never believed we were suppose to even sing. Dancers danced. We were pantomimists. We did our acting through our dancing, not words.

"I've been one of the fortunate ones that have been allowed to grow, to take the next step."

It led to her first starring role on Broadway, an appearance with Dick Van Dyke in "Bye, Bye Birdie."

It was during the run of "Birdie" that Miss Rivera met Liza Minnelli, the teen-age daughter of Judy Garland. Fifteen years later, they worked together briefly when Miss Minnelli subbed for an ailing Gwen Verdon in the musical "Chicago."

Now they have been reunited for what Miss Rivera describes as a very intense relationship. In "The Rink," Miss Minnelli plays her daughter.

"We can actually feel the energy going back and forth. When one gives in, the other pushes out," she says. "We feed each other."

It's a relationship she says was developed by trust.

National Young Artists gave inspiring concert

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

Georgia Temple

Area classical music lovers recently could be divided into two categories — winners and losers.

The winners attended the Midland-Odessa Symphony's sixth concert of the 1983-84 season. From the opening strains of Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Trumpets in C to the closing drama of Liszt's Concerto No. 1 in e flat, the symphony's National Young Artists' concert was an inspiring evening.

Italian composer and violinist (Antonio) Vivaldi (born around 1677, died in 1741), reportedly wrote nearly 50 operas, but is best known for his instrumental compositions, including sonatas for one or two violins and concertos for various instruments. The lively, colorful concerto chosen for the opening of this concert bade the young artists a proper welcome. Trumpeters Dale Sterling (member of the Symphony and the Lone Star Brass Quintet) and Thomas Fairlie (first chair Symphony and the Quintet) left the listener wanting to hear more.

In addition to prize money, the National Young Artists Competition, held yearly by the symphony, offers high school and college students an opportunity to perform with the organization. This year's winners included two from each level. The first two on the program were from the seconday level — violinist Gloria Justen and pianist Helen Sim.

The symphony's program notes describe the solo piece in Violin Concerto in D, Opus 35 (1878), written by the first Russian composer to gain international fame (Peter Ilich) Tchaikovsky (1840-1893): "A dense and tangled forest of technical obstacles through which the violinist must rush recklessly, immaculately and brilliantly." The entire piece is a violinist's challenge.

After a light and superficial beginning, Miss Justin became immersed in the concerto and turned in an outstanding performance. Her dress and manner added a dramatic picture to this musically colorful work.

Sixteen-year-old Miss Sim projected an entirely different image. Her rosy peach full-length, ruffled gown created an illusion of youthful softness, hardly the visual picture one would expect to go with the passionate and powerful music created by Russian (who became an American citizen a few weeks before his death) composer, conductor and pianist (Sergei) Rachmaninoff (1873-1943). However, her commanding performance of his Concerto No. 2 in c minor was well-executed.

Following intermission and the presentation of the Symphony Debs, the audience had an opportunity to enjoy yet another work by Tchaikovsky, when cellist Judy Stone performed Variations of a Rococo Theme for Cello (1876). This piece is marked by interplay between the soloist and orchestra. The two complemented each other; Miss Stone clearly demonstrated her expertise with the cello.

The evening closed with Concerto No. 1 in e flat by Hungarian conposer, teacher and pianist (Franz) Liszt (1811-1886), performed by pianist Richard Dowling. The most celebrated pianist of the 1800s, Liszt (and this is also true of Rachmaninoff) composed music for the piano which calls a challenging bid to other pianists.

Although Dowling did not perform in the highly dramatic Liszt manner (Liszt was known to swoon as he finished a piece necessitating his being carried off the stage), his stunning performance brought him a well-earned standing ovation.

Those who weren't there lost out on a special evening.

Jordans add knot to Round-Up

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

An intimate candlelight dinner for 50 people, 51 paintings and entertainment via the Jordans tied another knot for the Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch at the seventh annual Hanging Tree Art Round-Up.

The Jordans' performance was a return engagement. Colleen and Bruce Jordan and Marilyn and Jerry Jordan, who collectively are known as the Jordans, have been performing together as a quartet for the past 12 years.

However, the Jordans' career received impetus in 1975 when Jerry Jordan's album, "A Phone Call from God," made the Billboard charts. The album, composed of narrative songs with Jerry talking and the Jordans singing, led to a contract with MCA Records and touring across the country.

Today, both couples live in Brownfield where Jerry spends his time painting (five of his works are in the show), and Bruce "peddles his art." Colleen names the paintings and writes poetry for each.

The show the Jordans staged Thursday included country and Christian songs as well as a plug for Jerry's art in the form of a recitation by Colleen of the poetry written by her (and her poetry pal, her mother) for Jerry's painting, "King's Crossing."

Colleen's moving performance of this work, written in four personified voices, was heightened by the ease with which she transformed her manner and tone.

The four haromin ized extremely well and were able to move within songs from country to Christian.

However, the Jordans' harmonizing on the non-Christian material (when they didn't combine the two within a single song), as in "Tumbling Tumbleweeds," was smoother than on pure Christian songs, as in "How Great Thou Art."

Marilyn and Colleen's voices always blended with egg-white soft sureness when singing without the men even in "How Great Thou Art." Bruce and Jerry's voices were also quite compatible as a twosome as well as being equal to performing solo selections.

The event marked the second year the Buffalo Trail Council held its art show and sale at its office rather than Chaparral Center, as it had done the two years prior. Proceeds from the sale go to the Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch, Fort Davis.

Art work for the show was provided by Midlanders Carol and Pete Swain, owners of The Hanging Tree Gallery, Kerrville, who first began putting on a benefit for the Boy Scouts about eight years ago.

'Rear Window' Hitchcock's finest

By BEULAH CASEY

Beulah Casey

Alfred Hitchcock's "Rear Window" (1954) is, arguably, his finest work and one of five Hitchcock films in re-release nationally. The others are "Rope" (known for its one 10-minute unedited shot), "The Trouble With Harry," "The Man Who Knew Too Much" and "Vertigo."

Starring James Stewart as a news photographer and Grace Kelly as his high-fashion society girlfriend, "Rear Window" is a movie based on a concept Hitchcock called "making a whole film in a telephone booth." In short, it involves setting limits on the filmmaker by closing in the range of the camera and yet explores all the cinematic possibilities.

The point of view in "Rear Window" is that of J.B. Jeffries (Stewart), a world-roving photographer who is temporarily home-bound with a broken leg on the mend. Unable to get around without help (his insurance supplies the bossy but loving ministrations of nurse Stella, played no nonsense-style by Thelma Ritter), Jeffries contents himself with watching the neighbors who live all around him in two-room highrises.

The marital discord between a man (Raymond Burr) and wife sparks Jeffries' interest because he feels himself the piece of cheese in the cat's claw of Miss Lisa Fremont, a young lady determined to get her man. And Grace Kelly as Lisa is nothing short of formidable — glamorous, gracious and gorgeous.

A favorite of Hitchcock and true to his formula of the "cool blonde," Grace Kelly is equally sophisticated in rolled-up jeans or Edith Head originals. To see Miss Kelly in "Rear Window" is to understand something of the fascination that surrounded her life. She glides around the closed-in set as if it were a dance floor, making the one room seem spacious.

"Rear Window" is rife with subliminal messages about voyeurism, marriage and castration, but on the more superficial level of the plot, "Rear Window" succeeds as a mystery with comic overtones. For as Jeffries peers and lears across the courtyard, a most disturbing event takes place — a man (Burr) appears to murder his wife.

Stewart at first dabbles disinterestedly with his lens. But once convinced of the hack-saw mutilation of the un-named invalid woman, he involves Lisa, Stella and war-time buddy turned-detective in solving the crime.

And as they get inextricably drawn into the maze of events, so are we. The tension builds slowly, almost agonizingly, until the final confrontation of Stewart and Burr. There, the editing by George Tomasini provides a hair-raising climax of fast-cut images, almost too expert to decipher — a blur of movement and struggling as the two tangle over a balcony ledge.

Rated PG and shot in color, "Rear Window" has the golden tones of early film stock and the actors wear makeup better suited for the stage.

Though 30 years old, "Rear Window" is dateless, enjoyable now as then — a feat of experimental construction with Stewart providing the seamless cement and Hitchcock at the trowel.

Oh, and for the true "Hitch" fan, he does put in a brief appearance. Look for the piano man.

More 'Annie' performances planned

Due to popular demand, additional presentations of Midland Community Theatre's production of the musical "Annie" have been set for Wednesday and March 25, the show's current closing date.

The show, which is being staged in Theatre One at Theatre Midland, was originally set to close Saturday.

Based on the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," the musical carries Annie from her life in Miss Hannigan's Orphanage in the loving arms of Daddy Warbucks at Christmas. Along the way the irrepressible waif brings joy and happiness into the lives of countless people including the president and his cabinet and through them the entire country.

This musical is directed by Don Bachmann, executive director at MCT. Music director is Tom Roberts, minister of music at First Presbyterian Church. The dance numbers were choreographed by guest choreographer Ed Brassos. Set design is by Brett Batterson and John Michael Warburton is technical director.

For reservations or information about a possible second extension of the run call MCT's box office at 682-4111.

Pickwick Players to stage play

"The Boy Who Talked With Whales" will be staged in Theatre One at Theatre Midland by the Pickwick Players March 31 at 2:30 p.m.

The Pickwick Players is Midland Community Theatre's youth performing group. The play will be staged for the Midland Independent School District March 28, 29 and 30. The March 31 production is open to the public.

"The Boy Who Talked With Whales" is the story of a young boy who has the capability of talking with the great leviathans. The story deals with the difficulty in growing up, talking to adults, and understanding love and friendship.

Lombardo band to play in Odessa

ODESSA — One of the great bands of the Big Band Era, Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians, directed by Art Mooney, will be in Odessa March 27 in the Holiday Centre ballroom for a one-night performance of "the sweetest music this side of Heaven."

The Lombardo orchestra will play for dancing from 8 p.m. to midnight. Tickets, priced at $25 per-person, include complimentary drinks from 6:30 to 7 p.m. Dinner will be from 7 to 8 p.m. For those who only want to attend the dance, the ticket price is $12.50.

Advance tickets are on sale at all Holiday Inn locations in Midland and Odessa. Mail order reservations will be taken at Holiday Inn Convention Center, P.O. Box 4891, Odessa, attention sales department. For more information call 362-2311.

Collection of stamps to be exhibited

LUBBOCK — Soplex-Hiplex '84, one of the oldest and largest stamp shows in the Southwest, will be held in Lubbock Saturday and March 25 in the Banquest Hall of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The show is sponsored jointly by the South Plains Stamp Club and the High Plains Regional Philatelic Association.

About 15 stamp dealers from Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Arizona will offer a large variety of stamps and other philatelic items for sale. Stamp collectors will exhibit over 1,000 pages of exhibits, covering almost every possible category of stamp collecting.

Admission is free. Hours of operation are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 25.

New York theater to hold auditions

The Circle in the Square Theatre School, a professional acting training program affiliated with New York's oldest professional theater, will hold its annual regional auditions in Austin, April 8.

The audition committee, which will also be visiting Boston, Denver, Memphis, Los Angeles, Seattle and New York, will be reviewing 750 applicants nationwide for 50 places in the two-year graduate level program. Students selected by the committee will work and study with New York's finest actors and directors, some of whom began their careers at Circle in the Square.

Because students are selected on a highly competitive basis, the rate of graduate employment among Circle in the Square alumni is generally high in professional theater and in film and television.

For more information on the Austin area auditions contact Circle in the Square, 1633 Broadway, New York, NY, 10019.

Museum to offer student workshops

An afterschool workshop series featuring classes for students in grades 1 through 9 begins March 26 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. Deadline to register is a week prior to the first day of class.

"The drawing workshop for older students in grades 7-9 will emphasize improving individual skills through personal attention," says Anne Sherburn, development and public relations officer for the Museum. "Students will experiment with different types of media and learn a variety of techniques to help them feel more comfortable with expressing themselves. It will be an ideal learning experience for anyone who is interested in art."

The drawing workshop is a five-week session beginning March 26 from 4 to 5 p.m. and concluding April 23.

Sock Puppet Theatre, which begins March 27, is a workshop for children in grades 1-3.

"Ritz Williford, the instructor, is a rare find for the Museum's educational programs. She is not only a very talented and enthusiatic teacher, but has a knack for getting the creative juices flowing in even the shyest child," Ms. Sherburn says.

Each child will learn how to make sock puppets and simple theater props. In addition, they will be taught to creativley interpret stories and fairy tales. Classes run from 3:30 to 4:45 p.m. The Sock Puppet Theatre will perform at Midland Center on May 19 as part of Midland's first annual Celebration of the Arts.

Also being offered for children in grades 1-3 is "Treasures from Trash." This class, which begins March 28, will meet from 3:30 to 4:45 p.m.

"It is designed to teach children to use their imagination and discover that art can be made from almost anything. Ritzi has some wonderful projects lined up for the five-class ses- sion. She will use egg shells, tin cans, and of course the ubiquitous newspaper for materials," Ms. Sherburn says.

Also offered on Wednesday afternoons beginning March 28 will be "The World of Puppets" for students in grades 4-6. In this class, students will lern how to make a variety of puppets as well as how to design stage props and develop a story line.

"Molly Taylor, who has been an instructor at the Museum for almost two years," is an excellent teacher, especially for this workshop," says Ms. Sherburn.

"She writes and illustrates her own children's stories and has developed a number of plays for children, too. She can really inspire her students to be creative and become very self-assured. Because of the individual attention she gives each student, class size is limited to 15 students."

This puppet troupe will perform May 13 during the celebration of the arts festivities at the Museum.

All of the workshops are $15 for members and $20 for non-members.

'A Streetcar Named Desire' opens Friday

Known as the home of the smash hit musical, standing room only signs are a familiar sight at musicals. Although theater box offices featuring dramatic presentations don't often have the same results, SRO was prominetly displayed for over a year at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre when Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire" was playing.

The winner of both the New York Drama Critics Circle Award and the Pulitzer Prize, "Streetcar" was also a box office success that played for over two years. It was made into an award-winning film and enjoyed Broadway revivals in 1956 and 1973. Today, "Streetcar" has been produced in over 80 countries.

Midland Commumnity Theatre opens its revival of this American masterpiece Friday in Theatre II at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The production is set for nine shows and closes April 27.

Elizabeth Hewlett plays Blanche DuBois. Southern-born Blanche wraps herself in a world of illusion as a protection against the cruelty of the real world. That world is represented by her brother-in-law, Stanley Kowalski, played by newcomer to MCT's stage, Glennon Cates.

Caught in the crossfire are Blanche's sister Stella and Stanley's best friend Mitch. Mary Anderson plays Stella, who is torn between her devotion to her sister and her love for her husband. The refined Mitch, whose dreams are shattered by Stanley's onslaught, is played by another newcomer, Michael Butler.

Miss Hewlett is a recent graduate of the acting program at Tulane University, New Orleans. She played Beverly in last summer's MCT production of "The Shadow Box."

Ms. Anderson was last seen in "Catch Me If You Can."

Also featured in the cast are Andy Prokopeak, last seen in "The Taming of the Shrew;" James Brazell, previously in "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" and "Guys and Dolls;" and Clint Galloway, an MCT veteran. Newcomers are Susan Lillard, Sigrid Lamm, Nena Diaz and Jeff Smith.

The production is directed by Ted Strickland, assistant director at MCT, set design is by Brett Batterson, lighting design and technical direction is by John Michael Warburton and costume design is by Mae Dawson.

The set construction crew is headed by Ava Hoelscher, paint crew by Marilynn Weaver, prop gathering by Betty Smith and Margaret Kepple, and prop running by Ann Semple. The costune crew is under the leadership of Billie Sartain and dressers will be lead by Natalie Lake. Lights will be run by Pam Allen and sound by Norman Gould.

Reservations may be made by calling MCT's box office, 682-4111.

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

In the late 1960s, Poland became the first Iron Curtain country to enter world bridge competition. It had a nucleus of talented players and a group of innovative theorists. Polish bridge reached its high water mark in 1978, when the Polish team won the World Bridge Team Olympiad in New Orleans. Watch Andrzej Milde work his magic on this hand.

"Loose lips sink ships" was a slogan during the Second World War. They certainly sink many a campaign at the bridge table. Had West wanted to compete further here, he would have been wise to do so with three hearts rather than three clubs. His actual bid of three clubs gave declarer a blueprint of his hand, and South was quick to seize advantage.

Declarer allowed the king of hearts to win the opening lead and he won the heart continuation in hand. It seemed that he would have to lose two club tricks and a trump for down one, but watch was happened.

Declarer cashed the ace of diamonds, taking care to unblock the ten from the table. He crossed to the ace of spades and then finessed the nine of diamonds. When declarer continued with a high diamond, West ruffed and dummy overruffed.

A heart ruff provided the entry back to declarer's hand for him to lead two more rounds of diamonds, discarding two clubs from the table. East had to follow to the first of these and he could ruff the fifth diamond if he so desired, but the contract was safe in either case. The defenders could get no more than one trick in each suit except diamonds.

Would declarer have found the winning line had West's bidding been slightly less revealing? Probably, because he cannot make the contract if diamonds are 3-3 — he needs a 4-2 split. And if the suit is divided 4-2, chances are that the player with the length in the suit holds the jack. So the diamond finesse is still the percentage play.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Ursula Andress, Virginia First Lady Lynda Bird Johnson Robb and authors Philip Roth and Irving Wallace share your birthday. Also born on this date: "silver-tongued" orator-politician William Jennings Bryan, frontier fighter Wyatt Earp, Chief Justice Earl Warren and comedienne "Moms" Mabley. Flexible and compassionate, you have a large number of friends who turn to you for advice and aid. Let them know that you also need a helping hand on occasion. A timely investment makes the financial future look bright. You get an oppportuity to escape from a dead-end romance and form a new, much happier alliance. Business booms.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A chance encounter brings you together with someone who can put big bucks in your pocket. A business deal is involved. A minor career change could turn things around for you financially.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The feelers you put out this week could bring a job offer. A career change turns out to be an excellent choice. A far-off friend plays a role in your new happines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Buy property if you have the necessary financing. Loneliness disappears when romance perks up. Do not retreat at work. A firm stand makes you a winner! A good day for greenhouse gardening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A family situation rights itself. You and a loved one draw closer together. A goodwill mission brings you new prominence. Keep your ego in check. Be more patient with parents, roommates.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be professional. Although you have leadership skills, some people worry about your ability to control your emotions. Anger could cost you a business deal or promotion. A financial question requires immediate attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): At last, you are vindicated! The struggle was worth it. Some extra cash comes your way. A new romance boosts your spirits. Do not expect a family member to share all your views.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Caution serves you well today. Resist an urge to take immediate but foolhardy action. An important financial or personal relationship is at stake. Romance thrives in an atmosphere of trust.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A great shopping day for experienced bargain-hunters. Keep an eye out for deception. Take a more realistic attitude towards a shaky romance. Momentary anguish will quickly give way to relief.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Domestic pressures subside when you opt for intelligent compromises. Group activities are a good outlet for excess energy. A platonic relationship begins to intensify. Speak from the heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Curb a tendency to constantly go over old ground. New projects prove more rewarding both financially and emotionally. Contact someone influential who knows how to handle real estate problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emotions run high on the domestic front. Make your life more peaceful by patching up your differences with a partner or friend. Look for new addition to your social circle.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March. 20): Keep your hopes and spirits high even if you must work overtime. Although romance is occasionally rocky, it is well worth the effort. Avert a domestic confrontation by halting excessive spending.

'Othello' to be at Globe

ODESSA — Shakespeare's tragedy of love and jealousy, "Othello," will be the third and final production of the Globe Theatre's 16th annual Shakespeare Festival.

North Texas State University will perform this classic Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. a morning matinee will be presented Friday at 10:30 a.m.

The key to the action of "Othello" is the handkerchief trick, the famous contrivance which Iago uses to convince his master, Othello, that Othello's wife is unfaithful to him. The handkerchief comes accidentally into the hands of the evil-hearted Iago, who then uses it craftily to back up his devilish insinuations about Othello's innocent wife, Desdemona.

Not only does the plot of "Othello" turn on the handerchief, but also it is a touchstone for the principal characters. Desdemona's deep, open-hearted love for Othello is revealed in the way she loses her handkerchief. She has taken it out to bind Othello's forehead as he complains of a pain there. Othello, whose mind has already been poisoned by Iago, brushes her away causing her to drop the handkerchief.

For Iago, the handkerchief is a windfall. He uses it in his unscrupulous plan to instill jealousy on Othello and bring about his destruction.

For Othello, the handkerchief is a token of everything he won and lost. It was originally given to Othello by his dying mother with instructions to give it to the wife he would some day love. Iago plants the lost item to make it seem Desdemona had given it away, along with other favors, to Othello's lieutenant.

This is not the only means the venomous Iago uses to breed jealousy in Othello, but it is the main piece of circumstantial evidence.

Admission is $7 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens or with a Globe Season Ticket. CELEBRITY CHATTER

How did he propose...?

Valerie Bertinelli: "When I met rock star Eddie Van Halen after a concert, there was this incredible chemistry between us, and we became very close, very fast. Two months later, when I stopped by his studio, the band broke into a blistering, heavy-metal rendition of 'Here Comes the Bride,' and I knew Eddie would pop the question that night. I also knew what my answer would be."

Valerie Bertinelli

Dolly Parton: "I met Carl Dean the day I arrived in Nashville — I was washing my clothes at the Wishy-Washy Laundromat when I saw this great-looking guy drive by, so I smiled. He smiled back, drove around the block, came into the Laundromat and struck up a conversation.

Dolly Parton

"We started dating, and a few weeks later, under the Tennessee stars and a big yellow moon, he asked me to marry him. There wasn't anything wishy-washy about his proposal!"

Adrienne Barbeau: "Six months after John Carpenter and I started dating, he was sitting in the kitchen noshing on a bologna sandwich with glops of mayonnaise on it, when, between gulps, he asked me to marry him. I was stunned — not because I wasn't crazy about him, but because I always thought I'd never marry.

A. Barbeau

"I told him I'd think it over for a few days whie I was in Canada, and before returning to Los Angeles, I had a T-shirt made that said 'YES, J.C?!' in big red letters. When he picked me up at the airport, he was nervous, fidgety and anxious for an answer. I pointed to the T-shirt, and he whooped and said 'I saw that, but I though you became a born-again Christian while you were out of the country.'"

Debby Boone: "I had the first inkling Gabri Ferrer was going yo propose was two weeks before Christmas, when I happened to see him having a discreet conversation with my mother and father. After that, whenever I saw my parents, they had a we've-got-a-secret look on there faces, so I had a suspicion something was going on. On Christmas Eve, rather than opening our presents at my house, as we traditionally did, Gabri suggested we open them at his place.

Debby Boone

"After we exchanged gifts, he said, 'By the way, I have one more for you,' and handed me a small velvet box. I opened it breathlessly and was overwhelmed to find a beautiful diamong ring. As he slipped the ring on my finger, he asked, 'What are you doing next year?' I replied, 'I think I'm getting married, but have you talked with my father?' 'Sure,' he said. 'Asking you is easy; the hardest part was asking Pat Boone if I could marry his daughter.'"

Ann-Margaret: "My romance with Roger Smith was a year-and-a-half love affair that traversed the entire country. We met in Chicago and started dating in San Francisco, where Roger took me for a spine-tingling ride under the Golden Gate Bridge.

Ann-Margaret

"Our schedules then took us to Los Angeles where, like an old-fashioned couple, we started going steady. Later, in New York, while driving through Central Park in an enormous limosine, Roger handed me a box and said 'We've been going steady long enough; I think it's time we became serious.' It was such a beautiful moment, I started crying."

Jaclyn Smith: "The first time I met cinematographer Tony Richmond, I was so captivated that I went home and named one of my poodles after him. A few weeks later, afte Tony had met his namesake, we were sitting in front of a crackling fire when he said, 'You need another Richmond around the house.' I looked at him, but before I could say anything, he said, 'That's right, I want to marry you.' At the wedding, one Richmond was best poodle, the other was the very best man."

Jaclyn Smith

Jill Clayburgh: "We (playwright David Rabe) had been living together for four years, so in one sense we were already married. When David did propose, it was because we both knew we wanted to spend the rest of our lives together — and have children."

Morgan Brittany: "While I was making a guest appearance on the 'Dukes of Hazzard,' I was sitting at a make-up table when this guy I didn't even know walked over and said, 'You've got too much lipstick on.' I found out he was Jack Gill, a stunt man, and thought, well, he's got nerve.

Morgan Brittany

"Two hours later, he came back and said, 'If you're not doing anything this Saturday, let's get married.' I couldn't believe this guy.! Six weeks later, though, he said, 'Let's do it for real.' By that time I knew he wasn't kidding and neither was I."

Bo Derek: "Shortly after John and I became serious abiut each other, we went for a sunset stroll along the beach. The sunlight was dancing on the water and white-capped waves washed the shore. The setting was so romantic — and I was so much in love with him — that all I could say was yes.!"

Nancy Reagan: "Well, there was never really a formal proposal as such. Ronnie and I had been going together for about a year, and before long our friends took it for granted that eventually we would get married — and, quite frankly, we did too. It was just a matter of time. I had an inkling the day was approaching when Ronnie proposed the old-fashioned way — he telephoned my father and asked for his blessing."

Nancy Reagan

Jill Ireland: "From the moment we met, some 20 ywars ago, Charles Bronson and I knew we would be married — we had a deep, unspoken understanding. One afternoon, we were driving along a California road and Charles held my hand tightly and said, 'When would you like to start planning the wedding?' He didn't have to ask me to marry him because he already knew what my answer would be."

Sally Kellerman

Sally Kellerman: "During the repeat of an old 'Harry O' episode, Jonathan Krane poppsed the question — you'd be amazed at the romantic impact those old re-runs can have, especially when you're in love."

Jane Seymour: "My proposal from David Flynn was both enthralling and a trifle mischievious. I was appearing in 'Amadeus' on Broadway, and five minutes before my stage call on opening night, David telephoned and asked me to marry him — which was all well and good, but the rascal knew that within the first 15 minutes of the play, Wolfgang Mozart also proposed to me. I suspect he didn't want to be upstaged, even by the ghost of the famous composer."

Melissa Manchester: "We were sitting in bed one day when all of a sudden an angusihed look came over Kevin's face, as though he had become gravely ill. Startled, I asked, 'Honey, what's wrong?' He took my hand and said, as if it were his dying breath, 'We must get married. I can't live without you. I want you to know I'll always be here for you and have to know you'll always be here for me.' I laughed, then cried — it was the most beautiful moment in my life."

JoBeth Williams: "Director John Pasquin and I dated for three years before even entertaining the notion of marraige, but one night, over a candlelit dinner, he proposed, and I knew the most important part of our lives was just beginning."

JoBeth Williams

Barbara Bach: "Five days after our first date, Ringo Starr told me he was in love, but a near-fatal accident solidified our bond. We were driving on a rain-soaked London road when Ringo swerved to miss a skidding truck. We knocked over two light posts and flipped twice. Through good luck, or fate, or God's hand, wee walkwed away from the crash unharmed. At that moment, we decided never to be apart again andproposed to each other."

Sissy Spacek: "That's the darndest question because I'm not sure of the time or place that Jack Fisk and I decided to get married. I know we were working on a picture together, and he said offhandedly, 'You want to get married?' And I said, 'OK.' It seemed so natural that we didn't need any hoopla or fanfare.

Sissy Spacek

Mariette Hartley: "By doing the most completely ourtageous impersonation of a pig I've ever heard. Patrick Boyriven has an uncanny ability to squeal just like a pig, which sends me into fits of rib-splitting laughter.

"One day, while he wasmaking his obscene sound, I said, 'Is this the way you romantic Frenchmen propose to your women?' And you know what? He just went right on squealing. I figured anyone who could do that and is French, I had to marry."

Marie Osmand: "Over the telephone. I was working in Bermuda, but spent every spare moment on the telephone with Steve Craig, the basketball player I was secretly dating. One night, we were sharing our thoughts on marraige, and I said, 'When are you going to ask me?' 'I am asking,' Steve replied. 'Will you marry me?' During our courtship, we ran up astronomical phone bills, but it was worth every minute."

Marie Osmond

Raquel Welch: "To be perfectly honest, I don't remember how Andre Weinfeld proposed to me. We were so madly in love and there was so much going on at the time that his proposal and the wedding are like one long, beautiful blur."

Joan Rivers: "First I tied him up. Then I pinned him down with my knee to his chest. Then I said, 'Edgar, either you marry me or I'm going to have you fitted with cement shoes and thrown off the Washington Bridge.' I just adore shotgun weddings."

Actress Locklear lucky enough to be starring in two series

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HARTFORD, Conn. — In a business where thousands of actresses are desperately looking for one job, Heather Locklear is an exception. She has two.

Locklear, 22, a blond Southern California beauty, plays Stacy Sheridan, the young policewoman-in-training on ABC's "T.J. Hooker." That's her full-time gig.

Then, whenever she's got a few weeks off, she reports for duty as Sammy Jo, the scheming niece of Krystle Carrington on ABC's "Dynasty." She'll appear on four new episodes of the steamy soap this spring.

How does she do it? Partly it's good looks. She is every bit as lovely in person as she is on the tube. Or on the eye-catching cover of a recent issue of Inside Sports, where she appears in a scanty bathing suit.

Connections help, too. Locklear is under contract to Aaron Spelling, who has so many shows on TV that ABC is jokingly called Aaron's Broadcasting Company. Besides "T.J. Hooker" and "Dynasty," Spelling is responsible for "Hart to Hart," "Matt Houston" and "The Love Boat."

Talent comes into the picture somewhere along the line. By her own admission, Locklear's role on "T.J. Hooker" — she stands around a lot while Hooker and Vince Romano solve crimes — isn't terribly demanding. But her role on"Dynasty" is tougher, and she handles both parts with style.

But there are plenty of attractive and moderately talented actresses in Hollywood, and a key ingredient in Locklear's success may be the same thing that brought her to Hartford on a rainy weekend last month.

She sat on the stage of the State Armory during an auto show for 5½hours on a recent Saturday and three hours on Sunday, pleasantly greeting fans who came out to see her. The rock music was deafening, the videos on the huge screen behind her were fuzzy and the food was crummy. She arrived on the red-eye Friday night and returned to Los Angeles late Sunday. Not exactly a glamour weekend.

Sure, Locklear got paid — no one would say how much, but it was probably about $5,000 — but given the salaries paid to TV stars these days, that's just pocket money. She did it, she said, because it was good for her career.

"Once they meet you, they're your loyal fans," Locklear explained. "They'll watch you all the time."

She is an ambitious, hard-working young woman, dedicated to success. Her career is booming, but she wants much more. She laughed when I asked her if she believes she's near the top of her profession.

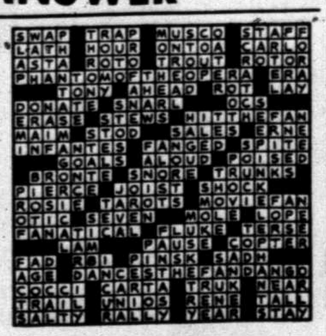

"I'm not even near close to the top," she says. "Of course, it depends on what you're talking about. If you're talking about Academy or Emmy Awards, I'm not near."

She wants to establish acting credentials and then break out of TV. "I would love to do features. I would love to do theater, too," she says.

Locklear has come a long way from the day, just four years ago, when she dropped out of UCLA after deciding that college was not for her. She signed up for an acting class and soon afterward was signed to do commercials for Sea and Ski, Pepsi and Polaroid.

Next came guest stints on "Eight Is Enough," a part in a made-for-TV movie and then, at 19, the part in "Dynasty." She still remembers her first day on the set.

Novel depicts couple's first year of marriage

By JOHN W. DEATS

The following books are among the best of the new novels this season and each should provide many hours of entertainment.

Edith Reveley's A PAUSE FOR BREATH is a finely drawn portrait of the first year of marriage for Bea and Hugh, trying to make a home in underdeveloped, turbulent West Africa. Hugh is a promising young man in the diplomatic corps, and his wife finds it difficult to put her life into focus. At times, the success or failure of their marriage seems to hinge on whether their hard-pressed air conditioner will run. Horror and possible destruction are but a hair's breath away in this emerging nation in transition, and the placid lifestyle fostered by colonialism is constantly in danger of being punctuated by violence.

An exceptionally well-written tale of romance on the lighter side is ROSAMUND'S VISION, by Stuart Mitchner. The main characters, C.C. Muldane and Rosamund Coleridge, meet on a train bound west from Baghdad, and find they have much in common. They share a love of English romantic poetry, try to see the best in people and in places, and each have roots in a city named Bristol. Rosamund introduces C.C. to her father, an eccentric bookseller living in Bristol, England. But C.C. hails from New Bristol, N.J., a depressing city with high unemployment and grim crime rate. C.C. wins Rosamund's hand in marriage, then moves with her to New Bristol, where he is a radio talk-show host. Read the novel to appreciate the two very likeable lovers, both intelligent and sensitive, and for a happy ending which is astounding but credible.

For a book with an admirable and strong central character, THE HEADMASTER'S PAPERS can be heartily recommended. Author Richard A. Hawley is, himself, a headmaster, lending a sense of realism and immediacy to his story. John Greeve is a highly respected, middle-aged headmaster of a New England prep school, whose tranquil life grows very troubled almost overnight. His son breaks contact with the family, his wife becomes very ill, and several grave mishaps affect the student body during the first semster of the year. Through it all, Greeve remains calm, handling situations one at a time, writing poetry in his spare moments to help garner his strength. The literary device of introducing correspondence, notes, and memos gives the reader added insight into what the headmaster is feeling and how he communicates the same. The reader's sympathy with the headmaster and the sense that the pulse of school life is so accurtely conveyed help make this book compelling reading.

A KILLING FROST, by Christopher Leach, is no disaster epic, but succeeds very well in conveying how fragile is the web of life. Just a few days before Christmas, Britain suffers the worst blizzard in its history. Most trains have ceased running, but one of the few to leave Waterloo Station is the 4:10 from London to Portsmouth. In the countryside, the train slows, then stops, caught in a snowdrift. The six passengers in the second carriage introduce themselves, assuming they are in for only a short delay. Then the lights go out, the heater goes dormant, and, much worse, they discover the window and doors have frozen shut. The carriage has been buried by drifting snow. As the cold grows more bitter, the six become more intimate and share secrets. One of the six dies of a heart attack, and the remaining five know they all may share a similar fate. This novel is guaranteed to chill, even on a balmy day.

John Deats is head librarian at Midland County Library.

'Tin Wife' is novel with dimensoin, depth

"Tin Wife," by Joe Flaherty; Simon and Schuster; $14.95; 256 pp.

A Review

Nothing is more presumptuous than a prescriptive review. You know the kind: Rather than address the book at hand, the reviewer takes it upon himself to tell the author the book he should have written. I've done this once or twice myself, but not with "Tin Wife."

Accept the imperfections in the late Joe Flaherty's third book. He was a man about New York for years, got his start at the Village Voice and managed Norman Mailer's surprisingly strong campaign for mayor of New York City over a decade ago (the material for his first book). His first novel, "Chez Joey," seemed more than autobiographical — almost an exercise in self-dramatization. That's why it's so surprising to see his last book go to the heart of a woman and manage to take it out and show us just what makes this heart beat.

Sissy Sullivan is a policeman's widow. Her husband has died of a heart attack while on duty under what turn out to be rather questionable circumstances. She worries about these circumstances and begins to dig until she has answers. Then, armed with them, she cons the system and manages to make it function to her advantage.

All this we discover rather late in the novel because the story is told mostly in flashbacks and meditations; not just Sissy's, but also those of her mother, her in-laws and her daughter. And with the possible exception of the daughter, none of them is a stereotype or even a flat character.

Toward the end of the book, Sissy has a conversation with her father-in-law, Christy, who is nobody's dummy. He states what must surely stand as the theme of the book when he says to her: "Life isn't the fall of saints. We all help to coarsen other people. Nobody's innocent. To live, you have to understand that." In the end, she does — and through Flaherty's painstakingly fair presentation, we understand it, too.

No, "Tin Wife" isn't perfect. I found myself wishing from time to time that there were a bit more present action in the book and a bit less retrospection. But enough of that — what we lose in narrative thrust we gain in dimension and depth. Joe Flaherty, within the covers of this book, brings alive the world of the Brooklyn Irish. "Tin Wife" is one of those rare novels that create a society for us, populate it with real people and teach us how they live.

'Supertube' entertaining history of TV sports

"Supertube: The Rise of Television Sports," by Ron Powers; Coward-McCann; $16.95; 320 pp.

A Review

As a kid, I watched the Chicago Cubs on TV. There was a camera behind home, another in center field, and a third one down the line. There were two announcers and one of them, Jack Brickhouse, screamed "hey, hey!" every time the Cubs hit a home run, which wasn't often.

It was down-home and simple. Brickhouse spent as much time recounting old baseball tales as he did explaining what was happening on the field.

In 1984, it's a whole new ballgame. WGN, the station that used to take me to the "friendly confines" of Wrigley Field, is now a "superstation"; cable subscribers can follow the Cubbies from the comfort of Los Angeles' San Fernando Valley. The graphics are slick, the production flashy — only the Cubs are as simple as ever.

Ron Powers, the Pulitzer Prize-winning TV critic, has noticed these changes, too, and "Supertube" is his history of TV sports. Today sports have become so profitable that ABC, NBC and CBS are willing to ante up a total of $2 billion a year for broadcast rights to the National Football League alone.

Roone Arledge, now the head of ABC News, changed the games, along with a small group of former ad-men who saw the lucrative potential of televised sports. A televised event once meant a couple of cameras pointed passively at a field of play. Today, we see slow-motion replays from innumerable angles; we admire on-field minicams that capture victory and defeat in gritty detail; we enjoy analysis of the most obscure statistics.

Powers' account of how all this came about — the politics, the gambles, the strokes of brilliance — is entertaining. He seems intent, however, on exposing something nefarious in TV sports. But is there really any muck to rake?

In huckstering a never-ending succession of sporting events, TV is sometimes deceptive and almost always overblown. But so what? Movie trailers and book-jacket copy usually promise more than they deliver. Only in a few instances — boxers whose impressive records were only in their promoter's imaginations — has TV been guilty of outright fraud.

Powers cites widespread cheating in college athletics as indicative of "how the crossed wires of American sports and American television sent high-voltage shocks through American society..." Pretty serious stuff. But the point is overstated.

While the huge cash flow into college sports has provided more temptation for coaches, athletes and administrators to break the rules, cheating has been going on in college sports since at least the '20s. The fact is that few fans would prefer to watch a mediocre team of first-rate biomedical engineers than an outstanding team of illiterate crayon pushers. TV may exploit that preference, but its existence isn't TV's fault.

Misgivings aside, "Supertube" is enjoyable, certainly more interesting than a Howard Cosell interview.

Book lends insight into coke trade

Copley News Service

A Review

Cocaine — Seduction and Solution: by Nannette Stone, Marlene Fromme and Daniel Kagan; Potter; 276 pages; $13.95. Excellent insights into the coke trade: who uses it and why. Authors interviewed scores of people. Common theme is that people who lack self-confidence use the narcotic to sparkle in every kind of activity — from radio announcing to group sex. Once hooked, they tend to use more and more because the body builds up resistance. Authors also provide solid advice on how to get off, and stay off, a potentially deadly and very expensive habit.

Don't Tell 'Em It's Good For 'Em: by Nancy Baggett, Ruth Glick and Gloria Kaufer Greene; Times Books; 307 pages; $14.95. A cookbook with a difference. Scores of delicious recipes are provided — followed by methods of making each recipe more nutritious. By, for instance, reducing the mayonnaise from one-fourth cup to three tablespoons. Or by cutting the salt in half. Or substituting skim milk for low-fat milk. Food still tastes good, they say, and is a lot better for you. But don't tell Mikey.

Image polishing has become critical

By DORRINE TURECAMO
King Features' Syndicate

It's almost impossible to live down a first impression. At the same time, reputations that took years to build can be lost in a minute. Your last performance is the one that's remembered.

Image polishing has never been so critical. As Willy Loman knew, you can have the latest technical information, but the only thing that's going to close sale after sale is "your smile and a shoeshine."

This, as any sales person knows, is only shorthand for: personal magnetism, telephone-letter-memo expertise, a mellifluous voice and manner of speaking, controlled body language interaction, polished presentations, effective listening and clothing with the executive look. No computer can replace these things.

Under all of these trappings are a few more layers that line it with substance and confidence: non-defensive language, boundless creativity, a balanced reading (growing) program, nourishing networking and therapeutic leisure. This is the outline for a winning package.

It isn't the company's logo, its decor, or even its reputation that sells the policy in your hands. It's you. What have you done for your image lately?

When did you last send an attention-getting letter to a newspaper? Letters to the Editor, the most-read part of the paper, is a good place to begin your campaign.

What was the last bylined article you wrote on your particular subject of expertise? Think of your own professional organization's publications and those of the people you want to reach. The more information you share, the more you and your company will grow.

Show your regular and prospective customers that you are a person they should put their trust in because of your intelligence, insight and innovativeness.

Look at yourself with the eyes of a dispassionate observer. Walk toward your image in the mirror, as though seeing yourself for the first time...as you really are. Do you see a confident, in-control, trustworthy, friendly person? Do your clothes categorize you into a particular regional, ethnic or economic level or could you be equally respected in any situation?

A man starts with his haircut, moves to the shape and height of his shirt collar, the design of his shoes and the color of his attache case. (Dan Rather's TV ratings went up when he began wearing a V-necked pullover vest on his newscasts.)

As women become more adept at the corporate image, they find the double standard begins to fade fast, along with sexual harassment in the office.

Dress is important, but so is the way you carry yourself, the design of your stationery and office walls, and the color of your car. Pale blue or yellow walls are said to increase our learning and productive capacity by up to 20 percent, on a daily basis.

Your tone of voice could indicate, "I'm not listening," "I'm fearful," or "Why don't you get lost?" Sitting at the opposite end of a conference table puts you in direct opposition to the leader in attitude, as well. These are underlying messages that speak louder than your words.

Most people treat their own image like a poor relative. As long as it doesn't visibly trip them or slap them in the face, they'll just try not to think too much about it. But a few hours' guidance with a proven image developer can help you emerge from a cast of thousands... and maybe double your income in one year.

Increasing numbers of doctors, lawyers, politicians and corporate executives across the country are selling themselves as persons with a solid, respected image. "Dr. Scalpel" is ready to pay a retainer fee of up to $2,000 to an image maker to insure that when plastic surgery is mentioned, his name will immediately flash into the listener's mind.

If a tax expert can't write an attention-grabbing magazine article or a best-selling book, the image maker will find a ghost writer who'll do it for him for a fee. The returns to the tax expert will go on for years. The aspiring state legislator will make his opponent look weak, in comparison, after he studies stage presence and mike techniques.

A Quiz for Persons 62 Years of Age and Older

	YES	NO
Q Would you like to live in a retirement community where entrance fees are refundable?	☐	☐
Q Would you feel more secure while on vacation knowing your home is protected?	☐	☐

GREEN ONION PINWHEELS

Butter or margarine
2 green onions, minced
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon double-acting baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
3 cups milk

In one-quart saucepan over medium heat, in 1 tablespoon hot butter or margarine, cook minced green onions until tender. Remove saucepan from heat; set aside.

Grease large cookie sheet. Preheat oven to 400 F.

In medium bowl with fork, mix flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. With pastry blender or two knives used scissor-fashion, cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs.

With fork, stir in milk just until mixture forms soft dough and leaves side of bowl. On lightly-floured surface with floured hands, knead dough 10 times.

Roll dough into a 12-inch by 8-inch rectangle. Spread green-onion mixture evenly over dough. Starting with an eight-inch side, roll dough, jelly-roll fashion; pinch seam to seal. With sharp knife, cut roll crosswise into eight one-inch-thick slices.

Place slices, cut-side down, on cookie sheet, about two inches apart.

In small saucepan over medium heat, melt 1 tablespoon butter or margarine; brush on rolls.

Bake 25 minutes or until rolls are golden brown. Serve warm, or, to serve rolls later, cool them on wire rack; wrap in single layer with foil. Just before serving, heat wrapped rolls in preheated 400 F. oven about 10 minutes or until warm. Makes eight rolls (200 calories per roll).

PUFFY FLAT BREAD

1 package active dry yeast
1 teaspoon salt
3½ cups all-purpose flour
1 cup water
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon honey

In large bowl, combine yeast, salt and 1 cup flour. In one-quart saucepan over low heat, heat water, butter or margarine, and honey until very warm (120 to 130 F.). Butter may not be completely melted.

With mixer at low speed, gradually beat liquid into dry ingredients just until blended. Increase speed to medium; beat two minutes, occasionally scraping bowl with rubber spatula.

Beat in 1 cup flour to make a thick batter; continue beating two minutes, scraping bowl often. With wooden spoon, stir in 1¼ cups flour to make a soft dough.

Turn dough onto well-floured surface and knead until smooth and elastic, about 10 minutes, working in more flour (about ¼ cup) while kneading. Shape dough into a ball and place in greased medium bowl, turning dough over so that top is greased.

Cover with towel and let rise in warm place (80 to 85 F.), away from draft, until doubled, about one hour. (Dough is doubled when two fingers pressed lightly into dough leave a dent.)

Punch down dough. Turn dough onto lightly floured surface; cover with bowl and let dough rest 15 minutes for easier shaping.

Preheat oven to 350 F. Cut dough into four pieces; shape each piece into a ball. On lightly floured surface with floured rolling pin, roll one ball into a 14-inch by 10-inch oval; place on ungreased large cookie sheet. Repeat with second dough ball.

Bake ovals 20 minutes or until puffy and golden brown. Remove breads from cookie sheets; cool on wire racks. Repeat with remaining two dough balls. Makes four flatbreads (125 calories per serving).

SKILLET CHILI CORN BREAD

2 cups all-purpose flour
1½ cups yellow cornmeal
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons double-acting baking powder
1½ teaspoons sugar
2 eggs
1¼ cups milk
Salad oil
1 12-ounce can corn with sweet peppers, drained
1 four-ounce can chopped green chilies, drained

In medium bowl, stir flour, cornmeal, sugar, baking powder and salt. In small bowl with fork, beat eggs, milk and ½ cup salad oil. Stir egg mixture all at once into flour mixture just until flour is moistened.

Reserve ½ cup corn; stir green chilies and remaining corn into batter.

In heavy 12-inch skillet over low heat, heat 1 tablespoon salad oil; evenly spoon batter into skillet. Cover skillet and cook 30 minutes. Sprinkle reserved corn on top of batter. Cover skillet and cook 20 to 25 minutes longer until toothpick inserted in center of bread comes out clean.

Remove skillet from heat; uncover and let stand 10 minutes for easier slicing. Serve corn bread warm. Makes 12 servings. 300 calories per serving.

DARK BROWN BREAD

¾ cup packed brown sugar
4 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
2 cups milk
2 cups whole-wheat flour
1 cup all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons molasses
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup walnuts, chopped

Preheat oven to 350 F. Grease 9-inch by 5-inch loaf pan. In large bowl with mixer at high speed, beat brown sugar and butter or margarine until light and fluffy.

Reduce speed to low; add milk and next five ingredients and beat until well mixed, constantly scraping bowl with rubber spatula. Increase speed to high; beat four minutes, occasionally scraping bowl. With spoon, stir in walnuts.

Pour batter into prepared loaf pan. Bake 1 hour and 20 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center of bread comes out clean. Cool bread in pan on wire rack 10 minutes.

Remove bread from pan and cool on rack 30 minutes for easier slicing. Serve bread warm. Or, cool bread completely on wire rack to serve later. Makes 1 loaf (12 servings). 295 calories per serving.

GOLDEN PRUNE SCONES

2 cups all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or margarine (¾ stick) or 2-3 cup butter-flavored shortening
2 eggs
¾ cup pitted prunes, chopped
3 cups milk

Preheat oven to 425 F. In medium bowl with fork, mix flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. With pastry blender or two knives used scissor-fashion, cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs.

In small bowl with fork, beat eggs. Reserve 1 tablespoon beaten egg for brushing on batter later. Stir prunes and milk into remaining beaten eggs. Stir egg mixture all at once into flour mixture just until ingredients are blended.

Grease 8-inch by 8-inch baking pan. Spoon prune mixture into prepared pan; brush top with reserved beaten egg. Bake 15 minutes or until golden.

Cool in pan on wire rack 10 minutes. Remove from pan; cut in half, then cut each half crosswise into thirds to make six rectangles. Cut each rectangle diagonally in half to make 12 triangles.

Serve scones warm. Or, to serve later, cool scones on wire rack; wrap scones in single layer with foil. Just before serving, heat wrapped scones in preheated 425 F. oven about 10 minutes or until warm. Makes 12 scones (190 calories per scone).

CRACKED WHEAT MUFFINS

1¼ cups water
¾ cup bulgur (cracked wheat)
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup whole-wheat flour
½ cup sugar
4½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
4 eggs
¾ cup salad oil

In 1-quart saucepan over medium heat, heat water and bulgur to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 10 minutes or until water is absorbed and bulgur is tender, stirring occasionally. Remove saucepan from heat; set aside to cool slightly.

Preheat oven to 350 F. Grease ten three-inch muffin-pan cups.

Into large bowl, measure all-purpose flour, whole-wheat flour, sugar, baking powder and salt.

In medium bowl with fork, beat eggs slightly; stir in salad oil and cooked bulgur. Stir egg mixture all at once into flour mixture just until flour is moistened. Batter should be lumpy.

Spoon batter into prepared muffin-pan cups. Bake 25 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center of a muffin comes out clean. Remove muffins from pans. Serve muffins warm.

Or, cool muffins on wire racks; wrap in single layer with foil. Just before serving, heat wrapped muffins in preheated 350 F. oven about 10 minutes or until warm. Makes 10 muffins. (390 calories per muffin).

PUMPKIN-WALNUT QUICK BREAD

3½ cups all-purpose flour
3 cups sugar
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup butter or margarine, softened or butter-flavor shortening
½ 16-ounce can pumpkin (1 cup)
½ cup milk
4 eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup walnuts, coarsely broken

Preheat oven to 350 F. Grease 9-inch by 5-inch loaf pan. In large bowl with fork, mix first six ingredients. With pastry blender or two knives used scissor-fashion, cut in butter or margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. In medium bowl, beat pumpkin, milk and eggs until blended. With fork, stir pumpkin mixture and walnuts into flour mixture just until flour is moistened. (Batter should be lumpy.)

Spoon batter evenly into loaf pan. Bake bread about 1 hour and 10 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. If top of bread becomes too brown, cover loosely with foil for last 15 minutes of baking time.

Cool bread in pan on wire rack 10 minutes; remove from pan. Cool bread completely on wire rack. Makes 1 loaf (345 calories per serving).

Had a Frazzled Day?

Pizza Mind.

Imagine this: A crisp, yet tender crust, and freshly prepared with fresh toppings including green and black olives, green peppers, and jalapenos for the adventurous. Then pepperoni, sausage and burger to add pizazz. All fresh, all tender, all the best we can buy. Now the cheese. Only Italian. Only provolone. These are the things of which great pizza is made. But how it's made makes it a Gatti's great pizza. And that's the best pizza in town. Now, wouldn't an honest to Gatti's pizza be good right now?

Good 'kid-vid' hard to find Saturday mornings, critics say

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first part of a two-part series on the "scandal" of children's television.

By SUSAN CRAIN BAKOS
King Features' Syndicate

The average American child sees 22,000 commercials a year and will view 18,000 simulated murders by the time he or she is 17.

Children don't even have to stay up past their bedtime to view their share of huckstering and carnage. Violence and the hard sell are a large part of children's TV.

On Saturday mornings the TV screen is bursting with explosions and products. Sometimes it's hard to tell the commercials from the shows. Creatures such as the Smurfs — blue males in white peaked hats and one female Smurfette — are both the show and the commercials.

Assorted super-heroes blow up the bad guys and reappear later in noisy commercials for action figure toys.

The networks are selling a strange blend of sugar cereals and packaged cookies, cuddly-looking stuffed things, and G.I. Joe paraphernalia. And, as Warner Brothers' character Porky Pig used to tell us at the end of cartoons, "That's all, folks."

GOOD PROGRAMS, the kind which encourage children to think creatively or deliver pro-social messages, are hard to find on Saturday mornings, which is prime time for the nation's children.

Some vociferous critics of "kid-vid" have labeled the Saturday programming almost a form of child abuse.

To adults, who only occasionally walk past the set and wince at the witless dialogue and the sounds of simulated destruction, that sounds like an exaggeration, doesn't it?

Well, spend one solid Saturday morning from 7:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. in front of the tube. Half-listening from behind the newspaper doesn't count.

Switch the channels frequently to sample fairly the offerings of all three networks. Don't miss, for example: CBS's "Donkey Kong" (which is also a sugar cereal), recounting the adventures of that dumb chimp from the video arcade; and NBC's "Mr. T.," a cartoon rip-off of "The A Team" in which the formidable star loses something in transition from human to drawing.

SATURDAY MORNING network TV is as nourishing for kids' minds as the sugar-coated cereal is for their bodies. The good children's programs are, almost without exception, not shown on Saturday mornings.

Maybe this is child abuse after all.

If your children watched cartoons 10 years ago, you are correct in believing that what seemed awful fare then was splendid stuff by today's standards. "Newsweek" recently blamed recent deregulation for the "national disgrace" of kid-vid.

In the early '70s, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) pushed the networks hard for improvement in children's programming. Mandatory programming requirements for local stations was even under consideraton.

Then, Mark Fowler, the FCC's chairman, instituted a new policy: Let the marketplace, not the government, determine the kinds of programs children will see.

The result? The networks canceled some of the best, and least profitable, children's shows. The ax fell on ABC's "Animals Animals Animals" and "Kids Are People Too," both Emmy winners; NBC's "Project Peacock," prime-time specials for kids which dealt with the real problems of growing up; and CBS's "30 Minutes," which was the only current-events show for kids on network TV.

COMMERCIAL TELEVISION has never been as commercial as it is now on Saturday mornings. "Buy, buy" is the brightly-colored message between all the "bangs" and "pows."

How do they get away with a programming concept adults wouldn't accept? (Imagine if "Ewing Oil" went under the name of "Texaco.")

"Children have no public voice and no independent buying power," says Peggy Charren, the outspoken president of Boston-based Action for Children's Television (ACT).

And many adults, who could provide the voice for children, have limited their contact with kid-vid to that occasional wincing glance.

In the conclusion of their 505-page hard-cover report on the effects of televised violence on viewers, NBC could find "no evidence that television is causally implicated in the development of aggressive behavior patterns among children and adolescents."

SPOKESPERSONS FOR all three networks argued in last April's Congressional hearings that there "is no convincing evidence" that television contributes to crime.

They stand almost alone in their faith that television has so little effect on its viewers, particularly the young.

The National Institute of Mental Health argued that "consistent results" in their studies indicated "People who are heavy viewers of TV are more apt to think the world is violent than are light viewers. They trust other people less and believe the world is a mean and scary place."

The networks countered: "That doesn't prove cause and effect."

Dr. Thomas Radecki, a University of Illinois professor and chairman of the National Coalition on Television Violence, believes the networks are deliberately missing the point: No one is saying television is the cause of America's high incidence of violent crimes. Many do believe it is a cause.

"TV is the biggest part of pop culture," says child psychologist Adrienne Strunk. "At the least it desensitizes us to violent behavior. Children see that cartoon violence isn't connected to real pain; and so they do not make the connection between real violence and pain either."

RADECKI DEPLORES the cartoons because "these programs may contain a 30-second lecture delivering a pro-social message like 'Be kind to animals' while the rest of the cartoon shows non-stop combat between the good guys and the bad guys.

"The characters never have any other way of working out combat than through the use of physical violence."

Cartoon figures don't negotiate — which may be an acceptable position for super-heroes fighting super-villains, but not for mortal beings. This year's ultimate Saturday hero isn't a figure with super powers: He's G.I. Joe, the doll who became a program.

Joe the doll has been around a long time. Suddenly he's in vogue again.

"G.I. Joe made the world safe once more for war toys," Ms. Charren says. "Parents shunned war toys during the Vietnam War. But now those toys are back."

While Joe's message — good guys stand their ground and fight and win — might appeal to some parents, many would rather not see war glamorized in cartoons.

In contrast to the network approach to war, "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood," an afternoon show on PBS starring Fred Rogers, recently handled the subject with sensitivity.

WE'VE COME a long way from the early days of television when parents and educators worried that ads for sugar cereals and toys might be harmful to children. ACT thinks we've come too far.

They have labeled the new shows "program-length commercials" and filed a complaint with the FCC. But few really expect the FCC to restrict these cartoons. The fall program line-up will probably include more of them, not less.
