Energy tax hits new flak

■ Proposal a sign that Clinton's program may be in trouble on Capitol Hill.

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's proposed energy tax hit more turbulence Thursday when two Democratic and two Republican senators proposed to kill the tax and replace it with spending caps on Medicare and other federal programs to help the poor.

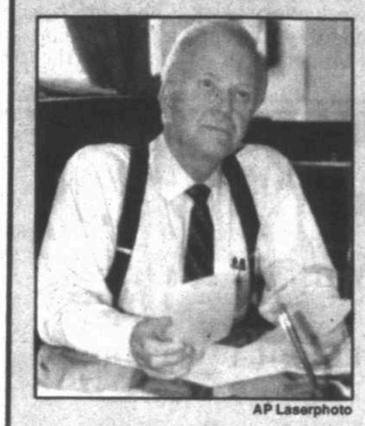

The proposal — coming on the heels of similar efforts by conservative House Democrats to add more spending cuts to the president's deficit-reduction program — was the latest sign that Clinton's program may be in trouble on Capitol Hill.

The substitute plan by Democrats David Boren of Oklahoma and Bennett Johnston of Louisiana and Republicans John Danforth of Missouri and William Cohen of Maine calls for spending cuts of roughly two dollars for every dollar in new taxes. By comparison, Clinton's five-year, $500 billion deficit reduction plan calls for equal amounts of new taxes and spending cuts.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Bob Packwood won a victory Thursday when a Senate panel voted unanimously to reject a petition urging that he be ousted from office for lying in his 1992 re-election race. Yesterday's 16-0 vote by the Senate Rules Committee had been anticipated, but Packwood's troubles are far from over. The focus now swings to the Senate Ethics Committee, where the outcome is much cloudier./7A

Hair spin control

WASHINGTON — It may have been the most expensive haircut in history. Two of Los Angeles International Airport's four runways were shut down for nearly an hour Tuesday, some incoming flights were delayed and Air Force One sat on the tarmac with engines running — all so that President Clinton's Beverly Hills hairstylist, Christophe, could come aboard and gave Clinton a high-price trim before he took off for Washington. Questions about Clinton's runway razor cut dominated the White House news briefing Thursday, with the communications director, George Stephanopoulos, scrambling to explain why the populist president tied up one of the country's busiest airports./10C

Picture emerges

DALLAS — One month after at least 77 people died in the Mount Carmel commune near Waco, a hazy picture of the cultists' final minutes is beginning to emerge. Forensic experts, examining the charred remains of Branch Davidian members who were fatally shot, crushed, suffocated or burned in cult leader David Koresh's long-prophesied apocalyptic showdown with law enforcement agents, have constructed a partial theory of what happened shortly after noon on April 19./3B

House votes school-funds 'option' plan

■ Debate stretches into night; final passage expected today.

By Joe Cutbirth
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — The Texas House on Thursday tentatively approved the Local Option school finance plan, with the bipartisan leadership of the Education Committee defeating numerous attempts to seriously overhaul the measure.

The vote was 98-44, with final passage expected today.

"I think that at the end of the day we are going to be one step closer to meeting the June 1 deadline," Education Chairwoman Libby Linebarger, D-Manchaca, predicted as the debate began.

Members rejected three alternatives offered by individual Republicans, including a proposal by Rep. Anna Mowery, R-Fort Worth.

The Mowery proposal, which lost by a narrow 75-65 vote, would have earmarked the state's entire $14 billion Foundation School Program budget exclusively for teacher salaries. Local districts would have been responsible for all other education expenses.

Mowery said her plan would give the average teacher a $7,000 raise and would end the funding disparity cited by the courts because state money would not be used for any purpose except to pay teachers on an equalized basis.

"I'm afraid I consider the main bill before us Robin Hood . . . although it is Robin Hood by choice," she said.

Mowery was speaking of the Local Option Plan, which was unanimously approved by the House Education Committee this week. The proposal gives the 109 richest school districts in Texas

NEW YORK — Sam married Diane.

Just kidding. But there's a pretty good chance you saw the truth for yourself.

As an estimated 40 percent of the U.S. population looked on, the final "Cheers" episode wrapped Thursday night with Sam and Diane finished, forever.

Before the final fadeout, there was a temporary tryst between the couple who started spatting and romancing 11 seasons ago.

But "Cheers" fans counting on a few changes for the road weren't disappointed. Nor were they upset that too much was disturbed.

Flash! Cheers lives on, and Sam is still running it.

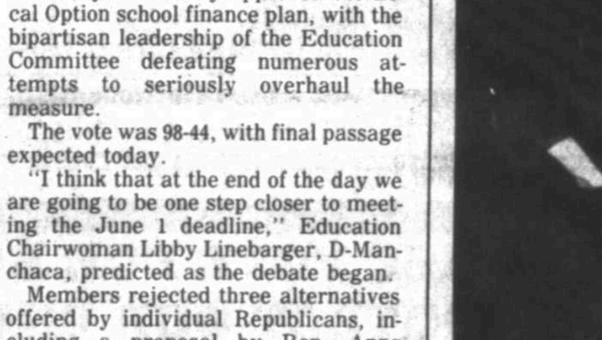

"I'm the luckiest son of a bitch in the world," he said in the poignant closing moments, just before the camera pulled outside for a long last view of the bar.

Before that, Rebecca married her plumber boyfriend, Don. Woody took office as a Boston City Council member. Norm wangled a job with the city from Woody. Cliff got a promotion at the post office. Carla went home to her kids. Frasier? He'll be moving to Seattle for the only "Cheers" spinoff, due on NBC next fall.

The nation of viewers honored not just "Cheers," but the passing of a television era.

The airing of episode No. 275, and weeks of hoopla leading up to it, likely brought to a close a dynasty of

Dangerous weather season blows in

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

A tornado watch is issued if conditions are right for a tornado; a tornado warning means a funnel has been sighted or indicated on radar.

With cold weather becoming a memory and hot weather just around the corner, West Texas has entered that dangerous time called severe weather season, when thunderstorms can pop up a moment's notice and an easy breeze can instantly turn into a killer wind.

"Thunderstorms are the main hazards during warm weather," said John Fausett, weather preparedness meterologist for the National Weather Service in Midland. "In spring and early summer, storms have the greatest chance of being severe."

For West Texas, that time is typically the last two weeks in May and the first week in June, Fausett said. However, he added that severe weather can pop at any time.

The reason for the severe weather in the spring is the presence of the jet stream, a fast-moving air mass about 20,000-30,000 feet above the earth's sur-

Block grants to distribute $1.3 million this summer

A plethora of southeast Midland community improvement programs should receive additional financial help this year due to Midland's rising poverty rate.

The Community Development Block Grant program, which serves areas of low-to-moderate income, will distribute $1.3 million in federal funds this summer — a 33 percent jump from the $856,000 offered last year.

Residents of southeast Midland can tout their programs at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the DeZavala Elementary School.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development used 1990 census figures to determine their specific allocations. That change showed an

Judge's ruling strikes law banning assisted suicide

DETROIT (AP) — A judge struck down Michigan's law banning assisted suicide on Thursday, further complicating efforts to prosecute suicide doctor Jack Kevorkian.

Circuit Judge Cynthia Stephens ruled that the Legislature unconstitutionally added the measure to a bill that dealt with a narrower issue in the assisted suicide debate. The ruling came in a lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of two terminally ill people and others.

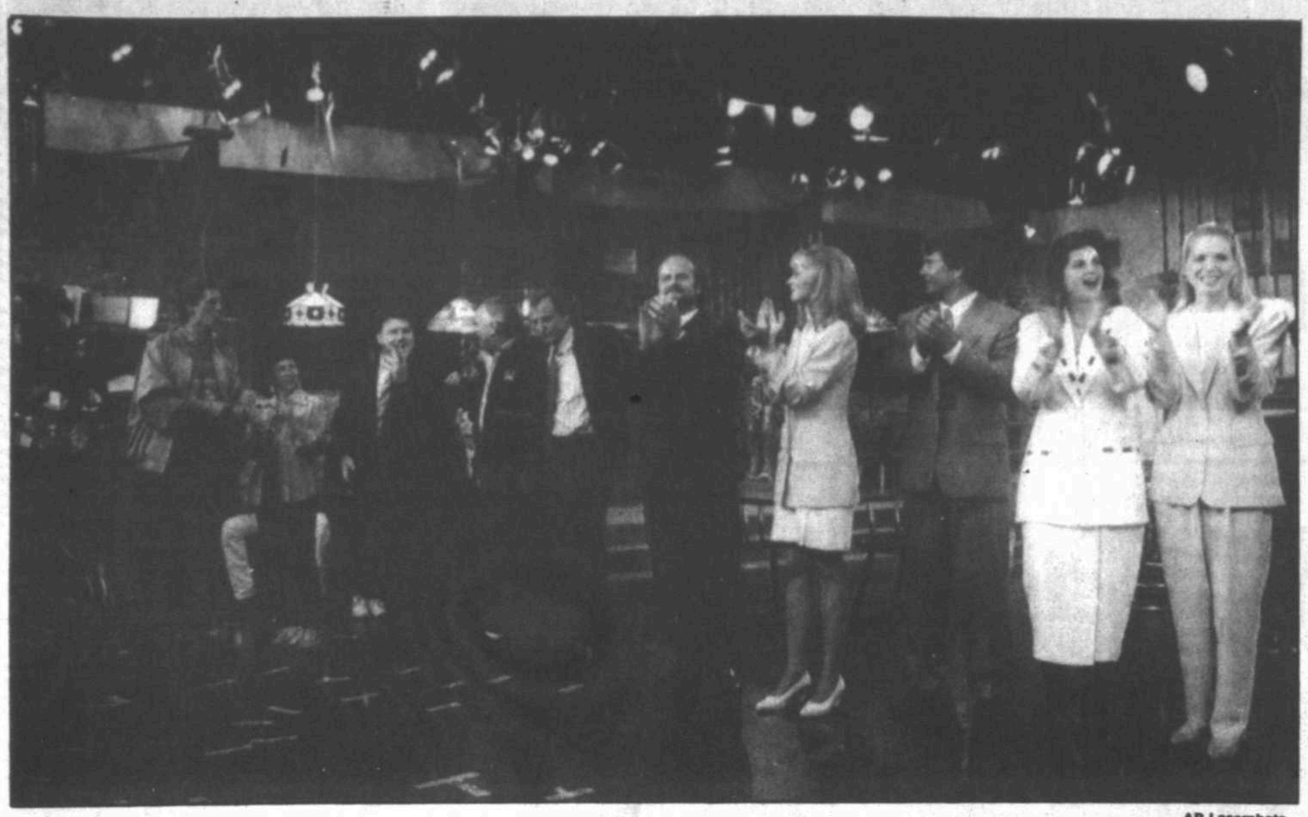

The Legislature rushed the law into effect Feb. 25 after Kevorkian helped three people die the week before.

Kevorkian was present at a 16th suicide Sunday, the first since the law took effect. Prose-

CHEERS: After 11 seasons, series serves one last round

After 11 seasons and 26 Emmys, the cast of NBC's "Cheers" makes a final curtain call after the taping the the last episode. great and timeless sitcoms that began with "I Love Lucy" and "The Honeymooners" four decades ago.

In the unruly new TV world where scores of channels scrap for the viewer's affection, no broadcast series may ever again win the wide and long-term favor "Cheers" enjoys.

And its departure from NBC finishes off that network's Thursday murderers' row, a legendary lineup that included "Cosby," "Family Ties," "Night Court" and "Hill Street Blues."

"This feels like a change of life," said New York musician Gary Portnoy. A self-described "Cheers" junkie, and the man who co-wrote and sang the "Cheers" theme, he was bracing himself for the show's farewell broadcast.

He wasn't alone. One hundred million viewers were expected to tune in the movie-length finale.

Seldom has a TV series enjoyed more success than "Cheers."

And seldom has the audience taken so long to wet its whistle.

Premiering in September 1982, "Cheers" finished last in the ratings its first season — and took eight years to reach the top. It has been at or near it every since, snagging a record 111 Emmy nominations in the process.

Of course, after Thursday's episode, neither woman-crazy barkeep Sam, his lippy waitress Carla, primo barfly Norm, nor the rest of the show's glorious losers would actually uproot themselves from the place where everybody's glad they came.

They'll just do it all again and again. (Already, reruns air daily on 197 U.S. stations and in 37 countries worldwide.)

But as time drew near for "Cheers" to cut off its fans from any new episodes, sentiment flowed like beer at Happy Hour.

Suspense was added to the brew, since the concluding few minutes were kept tightly under wraps by NBC, which filmed the scene without a studio audience. All most viewers knew going in was that long-ago girlfriend Diane (Shelley Long, who left the series in 1987) would return to Cheers and rekindle her romance with Sam.

To complete the gala night, Jay Leno was scheduled to broadcast the "Tonight" show live from the Bull & Finch Bar, the Beantown tavern that inspired the fictional Cheers. There most of the "Cheers" cast was expected to watch the last episode.

Among Leno's other expected guests was Portnoy, who had gone into a studio in 1982 to musically inquire, "Wouldn't you like to get away?"

"Sometimes I feel funny, because the 'Cheers' cast and crew went to work every week," he said. "I worked one day 11 years ago, and since then I've gotten to go along for the ride."

increase in Midland's poverty rate from 6,093 in the 1980 census to 12,774 in 1990 count. The national poverty level for a family of four is an income of $1,163 a month.

"We're very happy with this sum," said Sylvester Cantu, CDBG coordinator. "We'll be able to do a lot more in that area of town this year. Of course, it's bad that our poverty is rising, but I still guess we're below the national average."

The 1994 fiscal year grant, which is offered by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, will serve citizens living south of Illinois Avenue, east of Midkiff Road and east of Big Spring Street.

Although the majority of the money will be given to community improvement programs — such as infrastructure work, public facilities, housing programs and economic development — a portion of the funds can be used for public services.

"The City Council can put in 15 percent of the total ($190,350) to help support public services. That percentage is constant each year," Cantu said.

Last year some of those public service programs included: the Southeast Senior Nutrition Program, $56,000 to feed 80 people every day; Citywide Community Services, $10,000 for a home-cleaning program and $25,000 for the Northeast YMCA's Senior Wellness Program.

The largest allocation of last year's CDBG money — $250,000 — went toward street paving projects, which included paving 15 miles of streets and installing curbs and gutters on at least 12 streets.

Other programs that were offered CDBG money included: $50,000 for a Homeownership Incentive Program, which helped provide down payments for nearly 100 families last year; $30,000 for the Housing Emergency Repairs Program, which provided emergency repairs for gas lines, sewer lines and water heaters for homes of low income senior citizens; $150,000 for improvements at the proposed eastside community park; $35,000 for improvements at Martin Luther King Park and $45,000 for the demolition of about 45 abandoned Midland homes. An additional $70,000 went toward CDBG administrative costs.

Irish extremists grab elections

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Hard-liners on both sides of Northern Ireland's sectarian divide scored impressive victories Thursday in local elections shadowed by violence.

Strong individual showings by the Democratic Unionists on the Protestant side and by Sinn Fein, which supports the IRA's 23-year campaign of violence against British rule, suggested that prospects for political compromise in the British-ruled province remain bleak.

The vote count hadn't begun when the outlawed Irish Republican Army reminded everyone how it influences events in Northern Ireland.

A bomb packed into a truck badly damaged more than a dozen buildings in downtown Belfast, including the ornate Grand Opera House and the Europa Hotel — often described as the most bombed hotel in western Europe.

"Everyone seemed to come out and vote tribally," said Norman Stockton, a political analyst for Ulster Television."

The Democratic Unionists, founded and led by the firebrand Rev. Ian Paisley, increased their share of the vote by 10 percent to 30 percent in Protestant parts of Belfast, electoral returns showed.

With 65 of 101 electoral districts in Northern Ireland's 26 councils counted by Thursday evening, the Ulster Unionists had won 122 seats while the Democratic Unionists had captured 62 seats. Both parties insist on Northern Ireland's continued union with Britain.

On the Catholic side, the Social Democratic and Labor Party and Sinn Fein each scored victories in different parts of Northern Ireland. But the ballots from west Belfast, a center of Catholic alienation and IRA support, were not due to be counted until Friday.

In the so-called "murder triangle" around Dungannon, 50 miles west of Belfast, Sinn Fein council members Ray McMahon and Francie Molloy topped the polls in their wards for the first time.

Locals said support for the party was strengthened by a string of murders in the area by anti-IRA "loyalist" gunmen.

Russian sub could pose nuclear risk

Russia — (NYT) Russian scientists have issued their most dire warning yet on the threat posed by the nuclear submarine Komsomolets, which sank in the North Atlantic off Norway four years ago. They warned that in the next few years plutonium from its nuclear warheads could leak, spread more than 60 miles and possibly poison major fishing grounds.

Western scientists discounted the new estimate Thursday, saying the Russians were fanning public apprehension in an attempt to raise money for a proposed clean-up of the cold-war relic, which lies some 300 miles off the Norwegian coast in waters more than a mile deep.

The truth is difficult to discern since data on the submarine are sketchy.

Crippled by fire, the experimental submarine went down in April 1989, killing 42 men.

Queen Mother is hospitalized during vacation

LONDON (AP) — Queen Mother Elizabeth was hospitalized Thursday for treatment of an obstruction in her throat, Buckingham Palace said.

The 92-year-old mother of Queen Elizabeth II was taken to Aberdeen Royal Infirmary in Scotland Thursday evening, the palace said.

The palace described her ailment as a "slight tightening of the throat," and denied a report that a fish bone had lodged inside.

She will remain in the hospital for observation, the palace said.

The Queen Mother, widow of King George VI, was vacationing in Scotland, the palace said.

Ukrainian leader seeks full power and rival resigns

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — Ukraine's prime minister resigned Thursday after President Leonid Kravchuk asked lawmakers for decree-making powers that would give him nearly complete control of the government.

Parliament recessed for the day following Prime Minister Leonid Kuchma's announcement, and it was unclear when lawmakers would vote on his resignation or on Kravchuk's request.

As prime minister, Kuchma has had the decree-making powers that Kravchuk is seeking. Those powers expire Friday, and Kuchma had asked parliament for a one-year extension. He said he would resign if lawmakers refused.

When they failed to put the extension to a vote, a frustrated Kuchma tendered his resignation.

"It appears that my government will not get the special powers it asked for," he told parliament. "And during two days of debate, I did not hear a single good word about my government."

Kravchuk, a former Communist Party official and the first popularly elected president of Ukraine, told parliament he hoped to break the political paralysis gripping Ukraine by assuming sole power. He said he also hoped to reform the nation's sagging economy.

Reform in this nation of 52 million people has moved slowly, with only about 100 of 68,000 state-owned enterprises privatized so far.

Although Kuchma is regarded as a reformer, some of Kravchuk's top advisers have accused him of strangling Ukraine's economy.

Chance of rain to hang around

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of rain, a high in the upper 80s and south winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low in the lower 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high near 90.

After an overnight low of 54, Thursday's high reached 90, compared to the record high for that date of 101 set in 1989. The record low was 49 set in 1967.

STATE

It was generally fair and warm across Texas on Thursday.

A frontal boundary stretched from Dallas-Fort Worth to Abilene and into West Texas, dividing partly cloudy skies and northeasterly winds in the north from sunny skies and southerly breezes in the south. The northeast Panhandle was mostly cloudy and a few showers dampened the Permian Basin.

Temperatures at 3 p.m. ranged from 69 at Childress to 90 at San Angelo and Junction.

The North Texas forecast for today was for partly cloudy, windy and warm conditions with highs of 81 to 87. Lows were to be from 64 to 71. Expect considerable cloudiness Saturday morning, becoming partly cloudy and windy Saturday afternoon with a slight chance for showers and highs in the upper 80s.

West Texas was expected to be mostly clear but with a chance of thunderstorms east of the mountains through tonight. Highs were to be in the 80s with lows in the 50s and 60s.

Forecasters said South Texas would be partly cloudy through today with highs in the 80s. Lows were to be mostly in the 60s.

NATION

The nation's midsection endured an unseasonal chill Thursday, with the temperature almost reaching the freezing point in Nebraska's capital.

The band of cold air stretched from the Ohio Valley region to the northern Plains.

Rainstorms and thundershowers were scattered over the northern Rockies, while rainshowers spread over the southern Plains, the Tennessee and Ohio valleys into the northern Atlantic coastal states.

In northwest New Mexico, the Animas River was close to flood levels and was expected to rise through the weekend because of melting snow in Colorado.

Gov. Roy Romer visited potential flood sites in southern Colorado and said authorities will "try to prevent a flood before it happens."

In Alaska, the villages of Alakanuk and Emmonak were flooded because of ice jams on the Yukon River. No injuries were reported.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BLOWS: Basin enters a 'dangerous season'

face, and the sharp contrast in cold and warm air. The same conditions are present the early fall, around September, producing a secondary severe weather season.

"The jet stream is present in the spring, helping a lot of our severe weather, and then it moves northward," Fausett said. "However, it comes back down in the fall. The secondary season is not as active as the spring severe weather season because the contrast between the cold air and the warm air is not as sharp."

Severe weather is more typical in the mid-afternoon to early evening, because of the heat. However, cold air on top of a system also can produce a storm. As the months move into summer, storms become more sporadic.

A severe thunderstorm is described as one with winds more than 58 mph and/or hail ¾-inch in diameter or larger.

"Of course, if one spawns a tornado, that's a severe thunderstorm," Fausett said.

There are several warnings to listen for if the weather outside looks nasty. A severe thunderstorm watch means thunderstorms are possible, while a severe thunderstorm warning means thunderstorms have been sighted or indicated on radar.

A tornado watch is issued if conditions are right for the formation of a tornado, while a tornado warning means a tornado has been sighted or indicated on radar.

If a warning has been issued or if severe thunderstorms are approaching, residents should move inside or to the nearest shelter. If an underground shelter is not available, move to an interior room or hallway on the lowest floor. Stay away from windows.

If you are caught in a car, do not try to outrun the weather, especially a tornado. Leave the vehicle immediately and lie flat in a nearly ditch or depression.

Anyone living in a mobile home should seek other shelter.

Two other deadly sides to a thunderstorm are lightning and flash floods, which claim an average of 80 and 146 lives, respectively, each year nationwide, Fausett said.

During a storm that has lightning, stay inside or in a closed vehicle. Do not use the telephone except for emergencies. If you are caught outside, do not stand under isolated trees or telephone poles and do not make yourself the tallest part of the landscape. Stay away from open water and any metal vehicles or objects, such as golf clubs. If you are with a group, spread out, keeping several yards between each person.

If a flood warning is issued, evacuate immediately if advised. Avoid areas that are subject to sudden flooding. Do not walk through water that is above the ankles and do not drive over a flooded road.

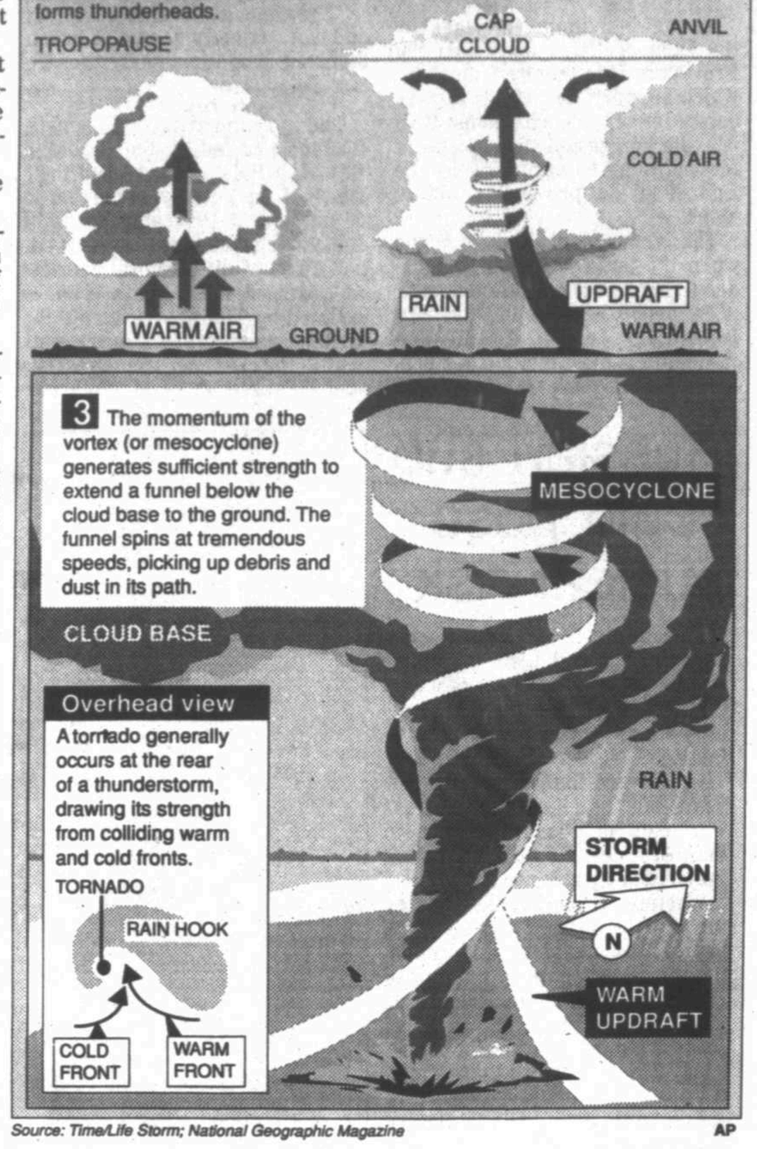

Although the Midland-Odessa area has been spared devastating weather in recent years, Fausett said residents should not be too relaxed during severe weather season.

"Although we are in tornado country, the real hot spot is about an hour's drive northeast of here," Fausett said. "For some reason, this area is spared. However, all it takes is one severe storm to do significant damage."

The birth of a tornado

1 Thunderstorms act as Earth's cooling agent by drawing hot, moist air from the ground. When temperatures vary greatly between the ground and atmosphere (as they do in summer), this air rises rapidly, condenses and forms thunderheads.

2 This heated updraft collides with higher cold air and creates turbulent winds surrounding it. These winds are forced into a violent upward spin and are the beginnings of a tornado.

3 The momentum of the vortex (or mesocyclone) generates sufficient strength to extend a funnel below the cloud base to the ground. The funnel spins at tremendous speeds, picking up debris and dust in its path.

SCHOOLS: House OKs Local Option plan

five options to share their property wealth with poorer ones.

Its object is to lower taxable property wealth to at most $280,000 per student in each of the state's 1,048 school districts.

Districts in North Central Texas that would have to make a choice under the plan include: Glen Rose, Highland Park, Coppell, Sunnyvale, Carrollton-Farmers Branch, Carroll, Grapevine-Colleyville, Richardson, Plano and Palo Pinto.

Districts with wealth below that level would not be affected unless a rich district chose one of the five ways to share its wealth directly with a poor one.

The Local Option Plan would allow a rich district to:

- Merge its tax base with one or more poor districts;
- Send money directly to the state to pay the cost of educating students in a poor district;
- Contract directly with one or more poor districts to assume the cost of educating students;
- Shift taxable property wealth to a poor district nearby; or
- Consolidate voluntarily with one or more poor districts.

The first three options would require voter approval, because they involve sending tax money raised in one district into another district.

Education Vice Chairman Steve Ogden, R-Bryan, successfully offered a minor change that would allow the wealthy districts to enact the change by November this year rather than the Sept. 1 deadline set by the education committee.

Ogden said the November date is a one-time deadline that will make it easier on the districts that choose an option that requires an election.

The coalition Linebarger formed this week held together to defeat most of more than 40 other amendments offered by lawmakers during debate that began shortly after 11 a.m. and stretched into the night.

A critical vote to dedicate the proceeds of the state lottery to education lost 69-66.

Rep. David Swinford, R-Dumas, urged the House to "do what the people want" and earmark lottery proceeds to education. Lottery profits presently go the state's general fund, where lawmakers have the flexibility to spend them as they please.

"I'm tired of this smoke and mirrors about the lottery," he said.

House budget leaders opposed the plan, and Rep. Bob Turner, D-Voss, told Swinford, "You're just trying to leave people with a warm and fuzzy feeling."

Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, encouraged by raucous applause and cheers from most of the members in the chamber added one of the few amendments that was accepted unanimously.

JUDGE: Ruling ends assisted-suicide law

cutors had been awaiting results of a police investigation before deciding whether to file charges under the assisted suicide law.

Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair could not be reached at his office for comment.

A spokesman for Attorney General Frank Kelley said he had not seen the opinion and could make no comment.

The judge agreed with the ACLU's claim that the measure violated the Michigan Constitution by expanding a bill setting up a commission to study death and dying to include a ban on assisted suicide.

That, she said, unconstitutionally changed the initial meaning of the bill and put the assisted suicide ban in a measure with an unrelated title.

While striking down the law on technical grounds, the judge also found "a right to die" for the two terminally ill patients.

"This court cannot envisage a more fundamental right than the right of self-determination," she wrote.

"Without that right none of the others, such as speech, association, the right to bear arms or to due process can have meaning or effect."

ACLU Executive Director Howard Simon said the ruling was "a victory for privacy rights of adult citizens in the state of Michigan."

The law made assisting in a suicide a felony punishable by up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine. It was to remain in effect for up to 21 months while the death and dying commission studied the issue and the Legislature acted on the panel's recommendations.

Kevorkian attorney Geoffrey Fieger said his client was disappointed there wasn't going to be a court battle.

"It deprives him of the opportunity to show the world what's going on," Fieger said.

It is not clear what Kevorkian's role was in the suicide of Ron Mansur, 54, of Southfield. The cancer patient died at his Detroit real estate office in Kevorkian's presence by inhaling carbon monoxide.

Detroit police searched Kevorkian's Royal Oak apartment on Thursday but a Detroit police spokeswoman refused to release any information on the search warrant or what was found.

Another Kevorkian attorney, Michael Schwartz, said Stephens' ruling effectively ended the investigation.

"Clearly if the police are looking at it from that possibility, there's nothing more to look at. The law is over," Schwartz said.

The state of Michigan suspended Kevorkian's medical license in November 1991. California, the other state where he was licensed, followed suit last month.

FLAK: Clinton's energy tax hits turbulence

upset with politicians "playing childish political games" in the quest for reducing the nation's $4 trillion debt. He called the bipartisan initiative "a great opportunity for the president, if he will seize it."

"People are tired of political bickering and politics as usual," Boren said. "They want to see us come together as Americans and seek a bipartisan solution to our problems."

Although the biggest part of their proposal lies in capping federal entitlement programs, the lawmakers reserved much of their anger for Clinton's energy tax — which has been a political lightning rod ever since it was unveiled on Feb. 17. Boren and Johnston, both from energy-producing states, are staunch supporters of the oil and gas industry.

The tax, the second biggest revenue raiser in Clinton's plan after income tax increases on the wealthy, would raise $71 billion over five years by imposing a levy based on the Btu content of most fuels.

When fully phased in by 1997, the levy would add about 8 cents to a gallon of gasoline, about $2.25 per month to the average family's electric bill — and raise the cost of most U.S.-manufactured products, according to administration estimates.

Johnston, an influential Democrat who chairs the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, said the energy tax "is the poison pill in the package," and he warned that Clinton "could not get 50 votes in the Senate to pass the tax."

Added Boren, "As far as I'm concerned, it (the plan) must not include an energy tax."

The senators' broadside against the energy tax and Clinton's overall package comes as the full House, whose tax-writing panel has approved most of Clinton's package — including the energy tax — prepares to vote next week.

In June, Clinton's plan will be taken up in the Senate by the tax-writing Finance Committee — where Democrats enjoy a narrow 11-9 margin. At least three of the Democrats, John Breaux of Louisiana, Kent Conrad of North Dakota, and Boren, are vocal opponents of the energy tax. Danforth is also on the panel.

Boren acknowledged that he is [illegible] he can forge support for his proposal on the panel, but he said he hopes their efforts will embolden House Democrats unhappy with Clinton's package to make major changes there next week.

"After seeing the revolt underway in the House, Boren and Johnston want to stir things up a little more over there," said a Senate aide familiar with their strategy.

The administration swiftly attacked the senators' plan, saying that Clinton was committed to keeping the energy tax. But White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers also said the president would be open to changes if necessary.

"The legislative process is occasionally a messy one and occasionally there is dissent or a difference of opinion," she said.

The senators' package would kill the energy tax, along with $51 billion in other new taxes proposed by Clinton, and impose a ceiling for government benefit programs such as Medicare and Medicaid beginning in 1995. Social Security would be exempt from the Boren-Danforth caps, but their plan would reduce annual cost-of-living increases for high-income recipients of Social Security.

All told, Boren said their alternative would slash the federal deficit by $540 billion over five years.

New IMF study indicates China may be an economic giant

Washington — (NYT) With China playing a larger role on the economic stage, some economists are wondering whether it should be invited to join the Group of Seven industrial democracies.

"China will have a very different viewpoint from the Group of Seven," said Bergsten. "It's a developing country; its per-capita income is just an eighth or so of that of the G-7 nations. Besides, China is neither industrial nor a democracy."

In its new study, the IMF does not measure an economy's size in the traditional way, by translating the local-currency value of output into dollars. Instead, the fund uses purchasing-power parity, which compares currencies according to what they buy at home.

The measure looks at prices of a bundle of goods and services, including food, clothing, housing and transportation, using that yardstick to compare the total value of output in different countries.

Many economists favor this measure, noting that if a country's exchange rate drops 10 percent against the dollar, this should not automatically reduce the size of that nation's economy by 10 percent.

"It's a great triumph that the IMF has made this change, because it gives a more accurate reflection of the world economy," said Robert Summers, an economics professor at the University of Pennsylvania, a leading authority on this measuring method. "Purchasing-power parity has long been the accepted method in the academic community. This measure helps change people's perception of the world, although we should remember that all the distended bellies are still there."

Some economists say they will still measure economies using current exchange rates because they do not fully trust purchasing-power parity. They say it is hard to compare the value of goods in different countries, for instance, to weigh the value of a Chinese car with that of an American car, or of a one-bedroom apartment in New York City with one in Beijing or Tokyo.

IMF officials said they would now rely mostly on purchasing-power parity in measuring economies, but added that they would not abandon use of exchange-rate measures.

Using the fund's new measure, per-capita income in China was about $1,600 last year, compared with $370 using estimates based on exchange rates. Per-capita income in the United States last year was $22,204, based on purchasing-power parity.

Using this measure, India's economy soars to $996 billion, the sixth largest, from $285 billion using exchange rates. India's per-capita income jumps to $1,150 a year, from $330.

World Bank economists apply the purchasing-power parity somewhat differently, and as a result their estimate of China's total output is even higher than reckoned by IMF. The bank puts the figure at $2.2 trillion in 1990. If one adds China's growth of 10 percent a year over the last two years, its 1992 output reached $2.6 trillion, making it larger than Japan's.

Using the new measure, the share of the developing world in global output soars to 34 percent, from 18 percent.

Officials from some developing countries object to using purchasing-power parity because World Bank rules state that countries with annual per-capita income of more than $765 cannot qualify for loans under the most favorable terms, usually 35 years with no interest.

War crimes court might be established by United Nations for Yugoslavian acts

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — An international war crimes court to try those responsible for "ethnic cleansing" and other atrocities in the Yugoslav conflict will need a staff of almost 400, the U.N. chief said Thursday.

The court would cost $31.2 million to operate during its first year, Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali told the Security Council.

The Security Council is expected to approve the establishment of the 11-judge court at The Hague.

It would be the first international war crimes tribunal since the World War II allies held the 1945-1949 Nuremberg trials of Nazi leaders and the Tokyo war crimes trials.

Serbs, Muslims and Croats have all committed atrocities since Yugoslavia began its violent disintegration in 1991, but U.N. experts have blamed the Serbs for the worst acts.

Venezuelan president could stand trial

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The Supreme Court authorized an embezzlement trial against President Carlos Andres Perez on Thursday, making him the first democratically elected Venezuelan leader to face charges while in office.

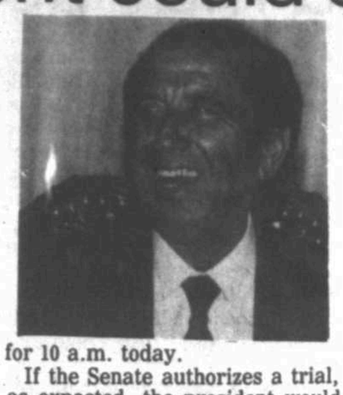

Throughout the country, where political and social unrest led to two coup attempts last year, people braced for upheaval and rioting.

Allegations of corruption have dogged Perez during both of his terms, but he finished out his first tenure without charges. The court, on a 9-6 vote, accused him of misusing $17.2 million in government funds, an allegation the president has denied.

Minutes before the decision was handed down, the entire Cabinet resigned, presaging the ruling against the 70-year-old president.

Information Minister Angel Zambrano said the resignations of the 17-member Council of Ministers was intended "to pave the way for the new administration to take over."

'I don't know why they're doing what they are doing to me?'
—Pres. Carlos Perez

Perez, who has said he will not resign, is scheduled to address the country of 20 million people in a broadcast this evening.

Now that the court has found that there is evidence against the president, it is up to the 49-member Senate, which is controlled by opposition party members, to decide whether to order a trial. The Senate had scheduled a meeting for 10 a.m. today.

If the Senate authorizes a trial, as expected, the president would be suspended for its duration. Perez' term expires Feb. 2.

If convicted, the president faces a prison term of six months to three years.

The streets were calm before news of the ruling was released, but in Caracas, police patrols were increased from 2,000 to 5,000. News reports said up to 12,000 national guard troops were on alert.

Perez, whose popularity has dropped to single digits in recent polls, has denied wrongdoing but reaffirmed in a radio address Thursday that he will respect the court's decision.

"I don't know why they're doing what they are doing to me?" said Perez, who characterized the allegations as a conspiracy against him.

Independent prosecutor Ramon Escovar, who brought the case to the Supreme Court in March, praised the ruling.

"This is a historic political advancement in Venezuela," he said. "This is just one, but a dramatic step in the fight against corruption."

The president has said he used the money to protect Venezuela's security but has refused to give details.

A poll published Thursday by El Nacional newspaper showed 70 percent in favor of Perez resigning, something he has said he will not do.

Bosnian Serbs create own state, other nations deny recognition

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Despite a total lack of international acceptance, a Serb mini-state with its own government structures, money and border procedures has taken hold in much of Bosnia.

Bosnian Serb leaders firmly declare their right to decide their fate for themselves, but are vague about the future status of that self-proclaimed republic.

Formation of a Greater Serbia, encompassing all Serb territories in the former Yugoslav federation, has been one of the driving forces of almost two years of warfare in Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. But the Bosnian Serbs say they also want to retain some separate identity.

They already have established many of the trappings of a separate state — officially the "Republika Srpska," or Serb Republic. This mountain town is the capital of the republic. Senior officials maintain offices in the Panorama Hotel, the town's biggest.

The trappings include an army built from the Yugoslav People's Army, a separate currency, a national assembly, government departments, state-run radio, a television network — even its own postal service.

Bosnian Serbs control 70 percent of Bosnia-Herzegovina's territory. At a Serb checkpoint about 10 miles northwest of Sarajevo, customs guards wearing blue uniforms and red-white-and-blue shoulder patches with the words Serb Republic demand that travelers show passports and ask "do you have anything to declare?" as at any international frontier.

Travelers report similar checks along the border with Yugoslavia to the east.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and others say they are entitled to their own state, even if they are holding off on declaring outright independence.

"Serbs have the same right of self-determination as other peoples," Slavisa Ratkovic, a Karadzic aide, said in an interview. "We have the right to establish our own state just like anyone else."

Karadzic said Bosnian Serbs have everything they need for an independent state.

"We have our own republic," he said. "It functions. We have territory, we have boundaries, we have authorities, we have people. These criteria are a fair measure to recognize any state."

More than a million Bosnian Serbs voted overwhelmingly for an independent Serb state in a referendum last weekend. It was criticized not only by the world community but also by Serbia, the larger of the two remaining Yugoslav republics and the Bosnian Serbs' chief supporter.

Yugoslavia has been hit hard by economic sanctions, forcing its most powerful leader, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, to pressure Bosnian Serbs into accepting an international peace plan that denies them their own borders.

The wars in Bosnia and Croatia broke out after the two republics seceded from Yugoslavia. Ethnic Serbs in both states opposed secession.

No one recognizes the state the Bosnian Serbs have carved out of Bosnia-Herzegovina, but that hasn't stopped them.

Britain steps closer to European unity

LONDON (AP) — Britain came closer to approving the treaty on European union Thursday, over the objections of rebel Conservative lawmakers who want to kill the accord.

The treaty must be ratified by all 12 members of the European Community, and Britain is the last holdout.

The House of Commons voted 292-112 on Thursday to send the ratification bill on to the House of Lords, which is expected to return it to the lower house for approval within several weeks.

Although leaders of the opposition Labor Party ordered members to abstain, 66 Labor lawmakers joined 41 Conservatives in voting against the bill.

Prime Minister John Major still faces weeks of political maneuvering — in the Lords, then again in the House of Commons — to defeat Conservatives who oppose the treaty.

Major has said, however, that he is confident of getting the bill ratified.

Before the vote, the government warned fractious legislators that Britain will suffer permanent damage if it destroys the pact.

"Too many still believe the community to be in some way a conspiracy between wily, over-clever foreigners to outwit us," Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said. "That really is not how the rest of Europe sees it."

Labor supports the treaty, but it objects to Major's adding a provision to exempt Britain from European Community labor regulations that bolster trade union rights and restrict working hours. The regulations are called the social chapter.

■ Boys' taunts lead to sexual harassment claims

ST. CLOUD, Minn. — A 10-year-old boy claimed that a dozen classmates were taunting him daily, and had taken to calling him sexually explicit names.

His complaints went unanswered.

So Jonathan Harms took a tape recorder to school. His recording of the jeers has become the basis for a sexual-harassment complaint.

The teasing by about 12 boys happened in the lunch line, the bathroom, the classroom, on the bus and the playground, according to the complaint filed with the state Department of Human Rights.

The central Minnesota school district of Sauk Rapids-Rice, which was notified of the complaint Tuesday, is accused of failing to protect the third-grader.

"He was never believed," said the boy's father, Sam Harms. "He would report and tell and never be believed."

Jonathan either hid the recorder in the pocket of his baggy pants or taped it to his calf.

Five boys were suspended after transcripts of the recordings were given to school officials, Superintendent Jerry Hartley said. He said he believes the district responded appropriately.

■ Police charge actor Judd Nelson with assault

DALLAS — Actor Judd Nelson has been accused of intentionally kicking a woman in the head at a restaurant after being heckled by her friend, police said.

But Nelson's companion at the time, "Beverly Hills 90210" star Shannen Doherty, told her father it was an accident.

Police said Wednesday they filed a misdemeanor assault charge against Nelson in connection with the incident early Sunday in which Kim Evans, 21, of Dallas was kicked. Evans suffered cuts inside her mouth.

Nelson and Doherty were sitting on a restaurant's outdoor patio next to another restaurant's outdoor patio where Evans and a friend were sitting. The woman with Evans taunted Nelson, saying he had not appeared in a hit movie recently, witnesses said.

Nelson has appeared in several movies, including "The Breakfast Club," "St. Elmo's Fire" and "New Jack City."

Some witnesses said Nelson deliberately kicked Evans while others said he accidentally struck her while climbing over a railing that separated the restaurants.

■ Woman regrets video of hostage-taker's death

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A woman who videotaped police as they fatally shot a man threatening to kill his little brother, then sold the tape for publication, now says she regrets recording the scene.

Terrance Cloyd, 20, killed his mother and 8-year-old sister Tuesday, then walked outside holding his 10-year-old brother hostage at gunpoint, police said.

Kelli Kallio, 20, a nursing student who sold the tape to local TV stations and newspaper, was among neighbors who watched the early morning standoff with police.

"Something inside me just said 'Tape it,'" she said.

However, she added: "If I had it to do over, I might not give the video to anybody." She said she would decline an offer for the tape from "A Current Affair," the syndicated program that buys home videotapes to dramatize news events.

An associate producer with the program, Michelle Adler, said from New York that "A Current Affair" would use Kallio's tape on Thursday's program.

Adler said Kallio gave verbal agreement in a conversation Wednesday. She said the program would pay $150 when Kallio returned a contract.

There was no immediate comment on that Thursday from Kallio; she did not return telephone calls.

Panel rejects call to oust Packwood

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Rules Committee threw out a complaint seeking the ouster of Sen. Bob Packwood on sex harassment allegations Thursday, arguing members had no authority to unseat him.

Packwood praised his colleagues' decision, but a lawyer for the group that brought the complaint said it showed the Senate was "out of touch with the American people."

The panel voted 16-0 to reject a petition contending Packwood lied to voters about the allegations during last year's campaign and therefore was guilty of election fraud and should be ousted.

The separate Ethics Committee still is investigating accusations that Packwood made unwanted sexual advances toward more than 20 women who worked for him or with him during his 24-year Senate career and tried to silence some by threatening to expose details of their personal lives.

That panel has authority to recommend punishment, including expulsion, if it finds a senator violated Senate rules or standards.

Packwood said he was pleased with Thursday's vote "both for myself and for the Senate.

"The last thing the Senate wants to do is get into the practice of conducting autopsies on 32 elections every two years if the loser claims the winner told a lie," the Oregon Republican said in an interview with The Associated Press.

But Katherine A. Meyer, a lawyer for the Oregon voters who sought to unseat Packwood, said of the ruling, "It says the Senate is really out of touch with the American people."

"The Senate does not think there is anything wrong with lying and cheating and stealing your way into this exclusive club, and I think the American people are tired of that attitude," she said.

She said that the Rules Committee had denied the petitioners a fair hearing, refusing to thoroughly investigate the claims, and that she feared the Ethics Committee would do the same.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., chairman of the Rules Committee, said he agreed with colleagues who worried that setting a precedent of reviewing campaign conduct and comments "would open Pandora's box."

"I think it was a very clear consensus that it is very difficult to read the minds of voters after the fact — what would happen, what if," Ford said.

He said the Republican Party has launched a similar effort to unseat Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., "just for publicity purposes" based on allegations he lied during his 1988 campaign.

More than 200 Oregon petitioners had asked the Rules Committee to nullify Packwood's re-election. They alleged that an effort to silence some of the female accusers prior to his victory in November was electoral fraud akin to stuffing ballot boxes.

But several members of the committee said during a hearing last week they did not believe they had the authority to unseat a colleague even if convinced that he or she had lied to voters. They said that campaign statements did not constitute the kind of electoral fraud covered by Senate rules.

The petition argued that Oregon voters would have chosen a Democratic challenger, former Rep. Les AuCoin, if they had known about the allegations that Packwood forced himself on female employees.

Three weeks after the election, The Washington Post published several of the women's contentions about uninvited sexual advances.

The Post, which had been pursuing the story for months, also said Packwood had provided the newspaper with derogatory information intended to challenge the women's credibility in the days leading up to the election.

The committee's action Thursday took only five minutes. It voted without debate on a motion by Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, to dismiss the challenge.

Packwood refused to comment Thursday on the allegations he schemed with staff members to silence women.

Committee owes thorough hearing

Only infrequently, and then fitfully, do mainland Americans pay much attention to their offshore ward Puerto Rico. Many islanders now fear their vulnerable economy will be devastated by a Clinton administration deficit reduction proposal. These fears could well be overblown, but 3.5 million Puerto Ricans are owed a better demonstration that Treasury Department officials have responsibly done their homework.

President Clinton has endorsed, and Congress is weighing, a Treasury proposal to amend Section 936 of the tax code that gives U.S. companies an exemption from federal taxes on income earned in Puerto Rico. This tax break, which extends to interest on local bank deposits, is seen in Washington as an excessive giveaway whose prudent trimming can yield $7 billion over five years. Treasury is doing its job in taking aim at all such long-encrusted tax breaks. But grievously, it has failed to spell out potential damage to an island where unemployment is 18 percent, or more than twice the mainland rate. Hence the outcry in Puerto Rico.

Hence the need for thorough hearings by the House Ways and Means Committee, as urged by Rep. Charles Rangel of New York.

Puerto Ricans say that 110,000 islanders are employed by businesses benefiting from Section 936, or 70 percent of all manufacturing jobs. Treasury retorts that the chief beneficiaries have been capital-intensive pharmaceutical companies; it proposes a far less costly tax incentive related directly to payrolls. But Puerto Ricans insist that this would mean the loss of high-skill jobs and the flight of pharmaceuticals, either to Mexico or to Asian competitors.

One unanswered question is how much of this offshore wealth is recouped by parent companies on the mainland, without tangible benefit to islanders. Another is why Puerto Rico has not outgrown its dependence on a tax crutch. And a third is whether Section 936 has provided too generous a relocation subsidy to mainland companies.

These matters call for sensible responses. Amending Section 936 need not be devastating if more narrowly targeted incentives are formulated. But care is surely in order to prevent wanton damage to islanders, who for all their progress average an annual income of $6,200, or half that of Mississippi, the poorest of the 50 states.

Finally, a measure of extra fairness is owed to a territory acquired as war booty in 1898. Puerto Rico's inhabitants became citizens through conquest, not choice. A careful Ways and Means Committee hearing is the minimally decent obligation owed by a negligent landlord.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, May 21, the 141st day of 1993. There are 224 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 21, 1927, Charles A. Lindbergh landed his "Spirit of St. Louis" near Paris, completing the first solo airplane flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

On this date:

In 1542, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto died while searching for gold along the Mississippi River.

In 1832, the first Democratic National Convention got under way in Baltimore.

In 1840, New Zealand was declared a British colony.

In 1881, Clara Barton founded the American Red Cross.

In 1892, the opera "I Pagliacci," by Ruggiero Leoncavallo, was first performed, in Milan, Italy.

In 1941, a German U-boat sank the American freighter S.S. "Robin Moore" in the South Atlantic.

Military adds fat to closing bases

WASHINGTON — When the military of the world's last remaining superpower goes on a diet, there is still room for some splurging in the name of national security.

Anderson

Republican senators torpedoed President Clinton's economic stimulus package amid complaints that much of the money would have gone to inner cities for amenities such as swimming pools and shopping facilities. But four years earlier, no one in Congress raised an eyebrow when the U.S. Army spent more than $300,000 to build a new physical fitness center at its Cameron Station facility in Virginia, seven months after the Pentagon had selected it as one of the first bases to close as part of base realignment.

Cameron Station is by no means an exception. While communities across the country have been devastated by defense cutbacks, some military installations have managed to add fat at the very moment that the military is trying to tighten its belt. In most cases, funds that Congress appropriated for closure and realignment have been put to good use. But a series of internal audits by the Department of Defense Inspector General, reviewed by our associate Jan Moller, reveal an agency where taxpayer dollars are still being misspent in ways that range from wasteful to whimsical:

— At Pease Air Force Base in New Hampshire, which closed in March 1991, auditors discovered that telecommunications lines between the base and former President Bush's summer home in Kennebunkport, Maine, were still up and running long after they were needed. These were not just any phone lines — they were lines provided to the president by the Defense Communications System. In a new variation on the $600 toilet seat, some of these lines cost $10,000 per year just to operate. The auditors estimate that taxpayers paid a total of $151,000 to maintain telephone links that nobody used.

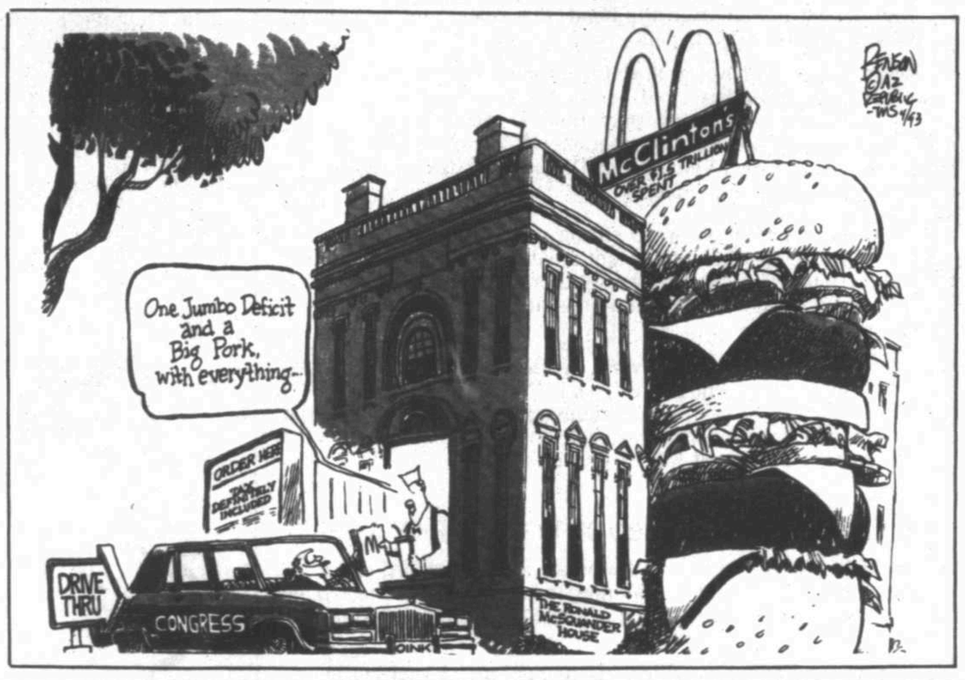

— At Naval Station Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, construction crews continued working on new facilities to homeport the battleship USS Missouri, even after the Navy had decided to decommission the ship. The Navy awarded contracts to build pier and shore improvements for the Missouri in September 1990. Two months later, the Navy decided to mothball the ship, yet Pearl Harbor officials said the construction projects were already far enough along that to cancel them would have been an even greater waste of money.

— Auditors also discovered that 10 projects being developed by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and the Defense Commissary Agency were "not fully related to realignment." This included some "get well" requirements costing about $11.1 million to improve existing facilities. Included in these "get well" funds was a request from Cannon Air Force Base for alterations to their dining facilities.

AFES officials also requested more than $4.6 million in base closure funds for "special use space" that included enclosed shopping malls, fast-food outlets and mechanical space.

By the end of 1993, the Pentagon will have spent more than $1 billion shutting down operations around the country. The good news is that this year will be the first time the military will actually save more money from closure than they spend to make it happen — a total of $65.9 million. Still, filibustering lawmakers might want to look at the base closure account the next time they get the urge to make a political issue out of taxpayer-sponsored shopping malls.

Iraqgate: Baker's bills still come in WASHINGTON — If the Department of Justice wins a case to be tried in Atlanta this fall, then the U.S. taxpayer may be forced to cough up over $380 million to a corrupted Italian bank.

Safire

Whose side is the Department of Justice on?

Iraqgate buffs will recall how the Atlanta branch of Italy's state-owned Lavoro bank helped finance Saddam Hussein's military buildup with billions in loans guaranteed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Ostensibly to promote grain sales, the guarantees were James Baker's method of providing backdoor financing to Iraq, to which Congress was not about to give foreign aid.

When the flow of U.S. money to Iraq was disrupted by a tipoff to the FBI, Italy — our go-between — stood to lose billions. If it turned out that the bank's officers in Rome knew about the corrupt loans, then the Department of Agriculture need not make good when Iraq defaulted.

Italy's ambassador, Rinaldo Petrignani (now with the law firm of Rogers & Wells), was cabled by Rome to "raise the case to a political level." He met with Attorney General Dick Thornburgh at the White House; our chief law officer, who happened to get a memo briefing him on the case in detail just three days before, said he did not remember the meeting.

The Bush Justice Department — perhaps Mr. Thornburgh himself — denied a request to send investigators to Rome. A couple of long years later, the local Atlanta manager was indicted; Justice's theory is that he alone is guilty and the bank headquarters in Rome is innocent.

But the local fall guy changed his mind about taking the fall, withdrew his plea of guilty and charged the CIA knew of Rome's involvement in the Iraqi financing; documents forced out of the CIA by the Senate corroborate that.

So here we are with the Clinton Justice Department going to trial to prove Rome's bankers innocent, when Italian and American investigators know the opposite is true. That smells fairly fishy, and nobody at Agriculture or Justice wants to take the responsibility.

In an act of faccia tosta (that's chutzpah in Italian), Lavoro sued for its U.S.-guaranteed loan money in federal claims court. Last week, Justice asked that a decision to pay be dismissed or deferred pending the outcome of the trial of Christopher Drogoul, Lavoro's Atlanta manager.

That covers posteriors at Justice and Agriculture. If Drogoul is convicted in Atlanta and bank headquarters is absolved, the American taxpayer will have to make good on Jim Baker's backdoor financing of Saddam — but our bureaucrats can say, "The claims court made us do it."

Iraqgate — the secret, unlawful American-British-Italian buildup of Saddam — marches on.

In London, another front-organization case collapsed when it came out that British intelligence was running Matrix-Churchill, the outfit that supplied Saddam's advanced technology. Paul Henderson, the purported spy heading the front, told me he could say nothing because he was writing a book. A British independent counsel, looking into that end of the global scandal, will presumably buy a copy.

Meanwhile, after a two-year delay by an assistant U.S. attorney in Miami, Justice is finally moving against Carlos Cardoen, the merchant of cluster bombs to Saddam.

According to Alan Friedman of The Financial Times, the arms dealer says this was also with the Bush administration's guilty knowledge.

Ironically, when Rep. Charles Ford of the House Agriculture Committee brought in a witness to brief the new attorney general on a facet of Iraqgate, they were shunted off to Janet Reno's new assistant from Miami, Richard Scruggs — the same guy who failed to aggressively pursue the Cardoen case.

Catch the pattern: Justice's Public Integrity Section chief, Michael Shepard, last month declined to prosecute the Commerce official who misled Congress on 68 export licenses to Iraq; he was just named U.S. attorney in Chicago.

Ms. Reno, who spoke up for the independent counsel Act before Congress, has no idea how many career officials in her headless Criminal Division fear being called before a grand jury.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Dying would have been piece of cake

Inquiring minds want to know, "Lewis, what's it like to come close to dying?" I did, in fact, do that — come close to dying. My own doctor said, "You were as good as gone."

Grizzard

The man has a way with words.

Several weeks ago the idea was to put a new aortic valve in my heart at Emory hospital, which surgeons accomplished. The problem arose when my heart wouldn't start beating on its own again after it had been stilled for the operation and its role had been taken over by a machine.

It was a touchy few days.

"They told us," said a friend, "it doesn't look good, but their eyes and faces said it was over."

But here I am. Miracles happen.

What's it like to come close to dying? I really don't know. While all that was going on, while friends and family said they were going through the anguish of it all, I wasn't around.

My bloated old body was, but my mind set free of the pain and the dread by whatever it was they were shooting in my veins wasn't even in the same vicinity or time period.

They could have given me a head transplant and I'd never have known it.

I was even in World War II at one point while they carved away on me.

Get this dream vision:

Eisenhower himself called me to his command post during the war in 1943 and told me some of Hitler's generals wanted to surrender, but they couldn't convince the Fuhrer.

Ike, knowing how many Discovery and Arts and Entertainment channel World War II documentaries I had watched, put me in charge of finding a way to convince Hitler it was useless to continue the war against the Allies.

Piece of cake. I found a few of the scientists who would later work on the Manhattan Project and develop the atomic bomb to draw me a picture of what one looked like, I showed it to Hitler's generals and they took it back to the Fuhrer, who called off the war and there wasn't even a Normandy invasion.

And another La-La land experience: British golf officials came to me and explained they might have to call off the British Open because it was a tradition that each year's champion must drink a special grog, the recipe for which had been lost, and you know how the British are about tradition.

That was easy, too. I located an old woman living in a back alley in Saint Andrews, Scotland, who had the recipe and I saved the Open. A damned fine grog it was, too, incidentally.

I had no out-of-body experiences. I saw no bright lights that I followed into a tunnel. I heard no angels singing.

On the other hand I got no whiff of smoke, either, something to be avoided at all costs when one is hovering near the ultimate embarkation point.

There was never any fear. Never any dread. There were no warning bells, nor voices of instruction regarding a journey's end and perhaps another's beginning.

I didn't see God, I didn't see the Devil, and please don't be tacky enough to ask about Elvis.

I guess all that is a good thing. Had I closed on that proverbial piece of rural property (croaked) it would have been a peaceful, no-hassle exit for me, at least. And what did the gambler say: "The best you can hope for is to die in your sleep"?

So, if I had died, that would have been a piece of cake, too. But when have I ever taken the easy way out of anything. Coming close to dying was a snap. Living the rest of my life surrounded by everybody and his brother-in-law who is suddenly a health expert is going to be the hard part.

President signs 'motor voter' law easing voting registration

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton signed into law Thursday a landmark measure requiring states to ease voting registration, ending a hard-fought battle by Democrats and advocates for young, disabled and minority Americans.

The so-called "motor voter" law requires states to allow registration by mail, as well as when citizens apply for or renew a driver's license, visit welfare and other government agencies or stop by a military recruiting office.

"Voting is an empty promise unless people vote," Clinton said at the White House signing ceremony. "Now, there is no longer the excuse of the difficulty of registration."

Whether the new law will result in increased voter turnout, however, is the subject of dispute. Clinton said it would: "Motor voter works at registering voters, and people who register vote." But states with similar laws generally have experienced higher turnout in the first election after enactment, but no long-term climb.

And critics have argued some provisions invite fraud, particularly one that prohibits purging a name from voting rolls solely because the individual has not voted for an extended time.

Roughly 65 percent of eligible Americans are registered to vote. Supporters of the new law predict that number will top 90 percent within a few years because of easier registration. States must comply with the law by Jan. 1, 1995.

"Democracy only works when we remove the obstacles to taking part," said Vice President Al Gore.

Young people are likely to benefit most from the new rules, and on hand for the signing were representatives of MTV and Rock the Vote, an organization that lobbied 18- to 24-year-olds to register for the 1992 election and supported the legislation.

Advocates for the disabled predicted 17 million adult Americans with disabilities who are not currently on voting rolls because of inaccessible registration offices will register as well, either by mail or by signing up at government agencies where they receive services.

And NAACP leaders praised the signing as an extension of the civil rights movement's victory in ensuring blacks the right to vote. President Lyndon Johnson's remarks at the signing of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 were played at the start of the ceremony.

"The whole civil rights community, Mr. President, celebrates this day," said Benjamin Chavis, the NAACP executive director. "Of all the government rights afforded to the American people, and particularly those rights secured by the blood, sweat and tears of African-Americans, hardly any is more precious than the right to vote."

Also attending the South Lawn ceremony were members of Congress instrumental in passing the law.

That breakthrough came after supporters agreed to add language creating penalties if government workers coerce people to register with a particular political party. Because Democrats hold an edge at the state and local government level, some Republicans had suggested government appointees at welfare and other agencies might coerce recipients to register as Democrats.

Scam sends ATM industry scrambling

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A gang of high-tech thieves who hooked up a bogus automatic teller machine and hauled in a bundle sent the banking industry scrambling for ways to prevent illegal use of the nation's 83,000 ATMs.

Adding customer fingerprints, watermarks or holograms to ATM cards are being considered by the Electronic Funds Transfer Association, which represents ATM companies, said Margaret Steeves of the Yankee 24 ATM network. The network has 3,700 ATMs across New England, New York and New Jersey.

Steeves said Thursday that customers should have no reason to distrust an ATM as long as it includes the logo of a legitimate bank and does not appear to be temporary.

That wasn't the case with a fake ATM hooked up by brazen thieves in a suburban Hartford mall in late April. So far, losses total more than $60,000.

The machine spit back each customer's card after recording the account numbers and security codes.

The gang has been traveling the East Coast using counterfeit cards encoded with the stolen information to make hundreds of illegal withdrawals at ATMs. They've struck in New York, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and Virginia, authorities said.

The fake machine was believed to have been stolen from a warehouse. It apparently dispensed cash for a couple of days after it was hooked up on April 24, merchants at the mall said. The thieves hauled it away on May 9, a day before the scam was discovered.

Head of school resigns because he lacks degree

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (NYT) — The headmaster of a private school here has resigned after it was found that he lacked a college degree.

Christopher B. Howard, 42, headmaster of the Unquowa School for five years, submitted his resignation to the school's 21-member board this week, effective Sept. 1. He began work at the school 15 years ago as a student teacher and taught English before being promoted to headmaster.

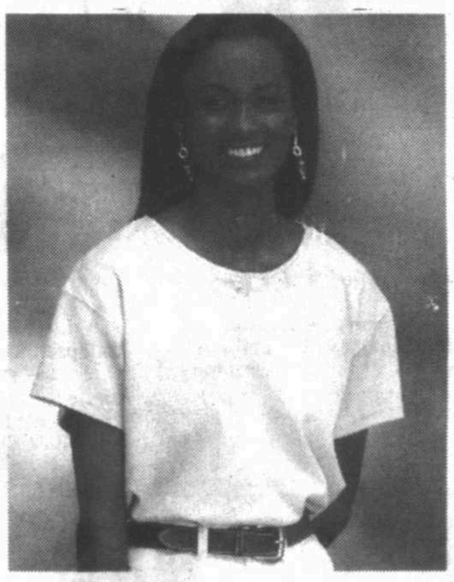

The board accepted his resignation early Thursday morning and voted 14-1 to pay Howard a year's salary of $45,000 as severance pay.

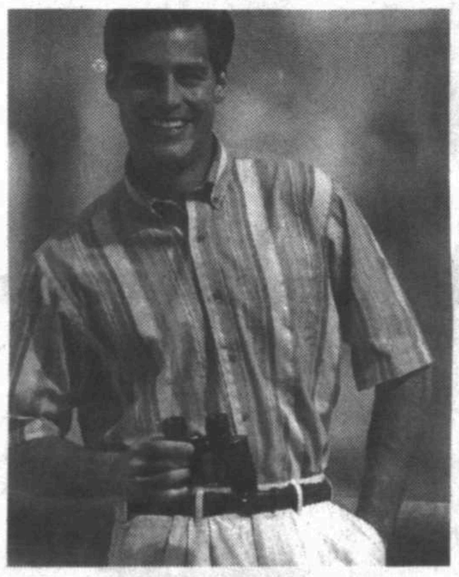

The lack of a degree was discovered by parents and teachers who were dissatisfied with the management of the 76-year-old school, which has 165 students in kindergarten through eighth grade and charges an average of $7,000 a year in tuition.

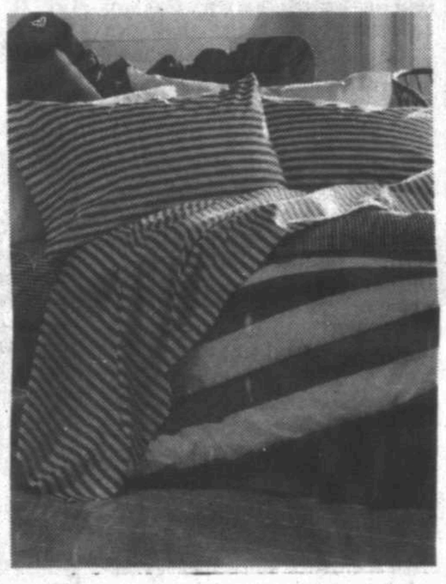

Howard, who is listed in a catalogue for private schools, the 1993 Bunting & Lyons Blue Book, as a 1978 graduate of the University of Bridgeport, attended the university but did not receive a degree, the university president, Edwin Eigel, said.

Howard told the board that he thought he had completed his degree requirements at the University of Bridgeport, even though he did not attended graduation ceremonies in 1978, said John Roy, the board's vice president.

Blind trusts can be big money-makers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blind trusts, often used by presidents and other government officials to avoid potential conflicts of interest, can also be lucrative sources of income. George Bush, for one, made nearly $200,000 last year from his.

President and Mrs. Clinton, who reported 1992 assets of between $534,000 and $1.7 million, are "moving toward" putting their assets in a blind trust, the White House says.

Presidential spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers told a press briefing Thursday the Clintons "had been in the process of (setting up a trust) for awhile, and are nearing completion on the details."

"The sooner the better," said Stephen Gillers, an ethics expert and professor at New York University Law School. "It should have been done on Jan. 19, but May 19 is better than June 19."

Jan. 19 was the day preceding Clinton's inauguration.

In January 1981, soon after he was inaugurated, Ronald Reagan converted his personal wealth — except for two residences — into $740,000 in cash and put it in a blind trust.

When he became vice president the same year, Bush set up his blind trust, worth $1.3 million when he left the White House last January.

Presidents, government officials and members of Congress set up blind trusts to transfer control of their investments to a trustee, often a friend, attorney or financial institution. The government official has no control over how the assets are handled and no knowledge of the trust's operation.

Jimmy Carter's blind trust, which totaled $529,300 in 1979, was administered by his longtime friend Charles Kirbo, an Atlanta attorney. Lyndon B. Johnson, his wife and two daughters had $3.5 million in a blind trust in 1964.

The arrangement is designed to help officials avoid conflicts and the appearance of conflicts in their policy decisions.

"It's essential," Villers said. "We as a people want to be confident that people who exercise public power do so in the public interest and not in their own interest."

With the guidance of trustees and savvy investment managers, blind trusts can turn a tidy profit, as happened with Bush last year.

But things can sometimes turn sour, as happened recently with Sen. Christopher Bond, a Missouri Republican. Bond filed a suit in federal court this month alleging fraud and securities violations by a New York investment adviser who had managed the senator's blind trust since 1985.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, who had been one of the Senate's wealthiest members, would prefer making his own investment decisions to having a blind trust, according to Bentsen spokesman Jack DeVore.

At any rate, DeVore said, avoiding the appearance of conflicts as a wealthy public servant is "an impossible task . . . You shouldn't be expected to take a vow of poverty."

Women say they were tortured 14 years ago

ATLANTA (AP) — They were bound and gagged, hung upside down and beaten on the soles of their feet. They spent months listening to the screams of others being tortured in an Ethiopian jail and watched helplessly as cellmates bled.

They thought they had left the "Red Terror" behind when they moved to the West. But three Ethiopian women stumbled upon the man they claim tortured them 14 years ago, and this week they faced him in federal court in Atlanta.

"Now, it is a different position," said Hirute Abebe-Jira, who lives in Gloucester, Ontario.

"Now, I don't have to be upside down. Now, I am not afraid of him."

Ms. Abebe-Jira, Edgegayehu Taye of Atlanta and Elizabeth Demissie of Los Angeles testified that Kelbessa Negewo imprisoned and tortured them during Ethiopia's tumultuous late 1970s.

Negewo, an Atlanta hotel bellhop who represented himself in the trial here, denied the charges.

Authorities: Some U.S. drug makers give false claims of health benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The products of American-owned drug makers can be perilous in the Third World because of labels that lack critical warnings or make claims that would be prohibited in this country, congressional investigators said Thursday.

"Nothing could be more reprehensible than the exploitation of men, women and children in developing countries with misleading and deceptive medical claims," Rep. Henry. Waxman, D-Calif., said.

Waxman and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., had long sought the study by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment, which randomly sampled 241 drugs made by foreign subsidiaries of companies based in the United States.

The seven-year study of drugs sold in Brazil, Kenya, Panama and Thailand, found that two-thirds of them made unsubstantiated claims of health benefits or failed to include information that prescribing doctors should know, the OTA said.

Among the missing information: proper dosage, ingredients, side effects, and warnings about medical conditions that the drugs could worsen.

The drug industry was quick to denounce the report, issuing a statement even before it was publicly released.

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association said the study was unfair because it failed to recognize differing laws in different countries and that labels are constantly being rewritten as new information becomes available.

The manufacturers also criticized the Office of Technology Assessment for being slow.

"It is unfortunate that the OTA took seven years to complete the study that Congress requested to be completed in two years," association President Gerald J. Mossinghoff said.

"Given the amount of additional time taken, it is all the more unfortunate that the study does not provide an accurate picture of what the actual situation is in developing countries regarding pharmaceutical labeling," he said.

The drug makers said they were being held unfairly to standards that did not apply in the countries where their products were being sold.

But the Office of Technology Assessment, the scientific arm of Congress, said its results were based on the determination of what physicians would need to know to prescribe the drugs safely.

The office found, for example, that the birth control pill Norinyl 1+50 did not list its inactive ingredients, did not warn of such risks as heart attack and other possible adverse reactions.

For the drug Demolox, an antidepressant, the label did not warn that it could cause psychotic behavior in schizophrenic patients, did not include a complete list of drugs that should not be taken at the same time, and did not warn to prescribe in the smallest possible dose because of the risk that a depressed patient might deliberately overdose to commit suicide.

"The findings of this study are disgraceful to the American-based drug industry in a country which is looked to for leadership," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, a consumer activist who was a member of a panel advising the OTA on the report.

The Food and Drug Administration regulates the sale, manufacture and labeling of drugs manufactured in the United States for marketing in this country or export. It has no authority over drugs manufactured, repackaged or sold abroad by U.S.-owned companies.

The Office of Technology Assessment recommended that Congress consider extending FDA labeling authority to include drugs sold in developing countries by U.S. multinational corporations.

Alleged kidnapping

ODESSA — Odessa police are still investigating an alleged kidnapping that occurred Wednesday morning.

According to an Odessa police report, 13-year-old Shaniqua Jones reported to police that she was walking to Bowie Junior High School Wednesday at 7:30 a.m. when a woman at the residence of 518 W. 25th asked Miss Jones to help her catch her dog. After Shaniqua caught the dog and handed it to the woman, the woman then pulled Miss Jones inside and held her at knifepoint, police said.

Miss Jones told police she was able to escape at about 9:38 a.m. She then went to school and notified school officials.

The woman is described as a white female, 43 years of age, according to the police report.

3-vehicle accident

Two Midlanders were treated and released at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Wednesday following a three-vehicle accident.

According to a police report, a 1991 Nissan pickup, driven by 43-year-old Oriana Karen Roberts of Midland, was eastbound in the 3400 block of Illinois Avenue at about 5 p.m. Wednesday. A 1952 Ford tractor, driven by 70-year-old Charlie Franklin Aubrey of Midland, was westbound in the center turn lane, attempting to turn left. The tractor proceeded into oncoming traffic and struck the pickup with its right front tire. The pickup then struck a 1993 Pontiac Bonneville, driven by 54-year-old Billie Whitehead Sherman of Midland, who was exiting a parking lot. Aubrey was thrown off the tractor.

Aubrey and 13-year-old April Roberts, a passenger in the pickup, were treated and released at the hospital.

Swoopes honor

AUSTIN — Texas House members were excited to get a visit from a "super superstar" in women's basketball — Sheryl Swoopes, who led the Texas Tech Lady Raiders to the NCAA 1993 women's basketball championship. Lawmakers posed for pictures with, sought autographs from and passed a resolution to honor Ms. Swoopes, who said from the speaker's rostrum, "I really cannot believe I'm standing up here." She thanked them on behalf of herself, her teammates, coaches and others at Texas Tech, which also happens to be the alma mater of House Speaker Pete Laney. Later, Ms. Swoopes said, "After winning the national championship and going to the White House and getting to see President Clinton and everything, I thought that was the tops. But actually, I'm enjoying this more than I did the White House." Ms. Swoopes is a native of Brownfield and her local representative — Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield — said, "She is a super superstar." "I am now relegated to the second best-liked person in Brownfield, Texas," Rudd quipped.

Toll dodger is fined

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man with a wallet stuffed with cash but no change now must pay $99.35 for dodging a 35-cent toll booth.

The fine was levied against Tony Almarez on Wednesday by Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Mark Atkinson. It took a jury less than 10 minutes to convict Almarez of not paying the 35-cent toll.

Almarez, a 26-year-old insurance agent, estimated he already has spent "several hundred dollars" fighting a ticket issued Nov. 17, 1992 after he zipped through the unmanned toll booth on the Sam Houston Tollway. He wasn't sure if he would appeal.

Almarez had $600 in bills on him about 2 a.m. that day but no change.

Almarez kept going, only to be pulled over by a deputy constable.

IRS comes to aid of non-filers

■ About 20 employees will be at Midland office Thursday to help people file back taxes.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

People who haven't filed their federal income taxes for this or past years can get some relief Thursday when IRS employees assist non-filers in getting back "in the system."

Richard Soto, group manager of the examination division of the IRS, said his staff will help taxpayers get current on their back taxes.

The office, located in the federal courthouse at 200 E. Wall Ave., will be open from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. with about 20 IRS employees available to help file the taxes. Soto said no appointment is necessary.

"We're trying to get people, that have dropped out of the system and have stopped filing, to come back in and start filing. The benefit they are going to derive is they are going to get current with their tax returns. It is an opportunity that we are giving to them to work with them on working out any type of tax liabilities they might have," Soto said.

"We're not going to waive any kind of tax penalties that might be due or any interest. It's not an amnesty program," he added.

But, some of the penalties could be waived if the taxpayer comes in voluntarily and has valid reasons for not having filed.

"It is sort of like the police department having a lot of people out there with unpaid traffic tickets. The enforcement of trying to get those people to pay up is time-consuming and costly. If we can do the same things with taxpayers that otherwise are good citizens that frees up our resources for more significant compliance programs," Soto said.

"It's a two-fold effect in that we get an opportunity to redirect our resources where they can be better utilized and it also alleviates concerns and worries that these people have about not having filed," he said. "We're going to be at a point where we will extend as many opportunities as we can for taxpayers to come in, but sooner or later we will start knocking on their doors."

Soto said the IRS will work out installment payment agreements for those who cannot pay or have prob-

Train strikes tractor-trailer; trucker unhurt

■ Officers: Driver turns after signal begins flashing.

Staff report

A Midland man escaped injury after the tractor-trailer he was driving was struck by a train at the intersection of Midkiff Road and Industrial Avenue.

According to police officials; the truck, driven by 28-year-old Johnny Wade Saverance, attempted to make a left turn across the railroad tracks from Midkiff to Industrial when it was struck.

Saverance said that as he attempted to make the turn, a pickup, headed west on Industrial, was sitting at the intersection and prevented Saverance from making the turn in time. The truck, which contained non-toxic drilling fluid, was struck by the train in the back, causing it to turn over on its side. The truck is owned by Buckeye Inc.

Officials said Saverance attempted to make the turn even though the flashing signals at the track had already gone off to signal the advance of a train.

Senators tentatively approve Craddick's bailiff, school bus bills

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate on Thursday tentatively approved two bills by Rep. Tom Craddick setting qualifications for Midland County district court baliffs and eliminating a time-consuming process school bus contractors use for exemptions from the state fuels tax.

If they receive routine approval on third reading today as expected, the bills will go to Gov. Ann Richards for her signature.

Craddick, R-Midland, said each county has the right to set qualifications for baliffs, and Midland County currently has none for its three state district courts, the 142nd, 238th and 318th.

The legislation would require baliffs to be at least 21 years of age and hold a peace officer's license.

As for the gasoline tax, Craddick said school buses transporting students are exempt from the state's fuel tax. However, if a school district contracts with someone to provide bus service, the contractor must pay the tax and bill the school district for the refund. The district then must submit a voucher to the state, receive the payment and send it to the contractor.

Craddick's bill would allow any school bus used for students to get the exemption automatically, "which saves a lot of money and paperwork for the comptroller's office."

Craddick has two bills pending before the Senate that would provide tax incentives for the discovery of new oil or gas fields and for returning inactive wells to service after three years of inactivity.

Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Roby, Senate sponsor of the bills for Craddick, said he did not know when he would be able to bring up the bills, but he was sure they would pass before the session ends May 31.

Tech student hopes twirling will be event in Olympics

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Former Lee High School twirler Starla Adams recently won first place in solo twirling at an international championship in Marseille, France.

Starla Adams is doing her bit in a grand way to get baton twirling into the Olympics.

"Who knows, I'll probably be retired before they get it in there," said Miss Adams, who, nevertheless, is hoping for an earlier entry of that sport into the Olympics.

Earlier this spring, Miss Adams, 19, became the first-place senior-girls gold medalist in the International/World Baton Twirling Championships in Marseille, France.

"This is one more step to get baton twirling into the Olympics," Miss Adams said of the world competition.

After all, baton twirling is a blend of physical and mental agility and stamina: from gymnastics and precision maneuvering of the baton to focusing and concentration.

"While the baton is spinning, my body is doing the same thing: spin-

School to present cancer seminar for area health-care professionals

■ Speakers to discuss detection, treatment of invasive gynecological disease.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

ODESSA — Gilda Radner, the late comedian who died as a result of ovarian cancer, made the disease well known. However, it is only one of many invasive gynecological diseases local physicians hope to shed some light on.

"Cervical and endometrial cancers are the most common. Ovarian is the least common and the most difficult to detect until the later stages," said Dr. J.E. Mendez, assistant professor at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

To familiarize area physicians, nurses and health care professionals with early detection and treatment of pre-invasive gynecologic disease, Mendez's department will offer a seminar on "The Early Diagnosis and Treatment of Gynecologic Cancers" from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on May 28.

Mendez is program director of the event that will feature guest speakers prominent in the field of oncology.

"The whole purpose of the conference is to familiarize all practicing physicians on what is going on with oncology, to be aware of what's out there, so they might be able to diagnose earlier," Mendez said. "Technology is changing rapidly, and it is always appropriate to understand it."

BATON: Twirling builds confidence, Adams says

ning, my body is doing the same thing: spinning, turning, flipping, sometimes running from it," said the 5-foot-2 Miss Adams. "The baton rolls all over my body."

When she tosses the baton well into the sky, she said she does two flips and catches the tool of her sport.

Baton twirling is her passion. "It represents who I am now," Miss Adams said. "It's like my job."

Miss Adams said that the international honor represents the pinnacle of her 15-year twirling career during which she — like her sister, Gina — has won hundreds of championships at the local, regional, state, and national levels.

"This was the highlight of my twirling career," Miss Adams said. "It's just like everyday life: You've got your mind set for what you are going to do everyday."

The baton is not just a rubber-tipped metal "stick you throw around," Miss Adams said.

"There's a lot more to it than seeing how high you can throw it into the air. It requires focus, concentration, dedication, timing. If you don't have all of those things combined, you are going to have a hard time taking care of business."

Miss Adams proved she could take care of business most ably in the world competition in France. She won the senior girls solo competition despite dropping her baton once.

"Everybody wants a no-drop," she said. "I won it (the gold medal) with one drop" and "beat someone who had a no-drop."

Miss Adams' "dumb drop" in her 2½-minute routine came in the transition between her specialized body-baton maneuvers or what she calls "tricks."

"It wasn't as if I dropped the baton in a trick where I do all of the flips and spins. That (drop) shouldn't have been."

But like an ice skater who slips during a performance, "you pick the sucker up, and you go," Miss Adams said.

"You need to forget what happened and go on and do the rest of your routine — do better. You've got to focus on the positive. It is hard to do, but it is so necessary."

In competition, it is "just as important to be prepared mentally as it is physically," Miss Adams said. And at the level at which world-class twirlers compete, twirling becomes "more mental than it has ever been before.

"The mental is what will make it or break it for me."

Miss Adams, who has been twirling since age 5, won the right to compete in France by placing first in the National Baton Twirling Association's Grand National Championships competition last year.

Hundreds of twirlers from 11 nations, including Canada, Great Britain, Italy, Spain, Germany, Scotland, and The Netherlands, were in the world competition.

The training and competition were intense. "If I didn't have the baton in my hand," Miss Adams said, "I had a pillow to my head."

Miss Adams said that she would like to "give a huge Texas-size 'thank you' to everybody who has given me good words of encouragement," other support, prayer and their good luck in her competition in France.

"It's nice to know there is support for you in your hometown," she said.

Now a feature twirler at Texas Tech University, Miss Adams, like her sister before her, was the feature twirler at Lee High School for three years.

Miss Adams' introduction into twirling was at age 4 when she took her first twirling lesson. At that time, her sister already was into the sport.

"I bawled and squalled and hollered and said I wasn't going to do it," she recalled. "I was just a brat. I didn't want to do what I didn't want to do."

But she made a commitment to her mother, Gail, that she would give twirling a try the next year.

"I started off with a bang," Miss Adams said. "Without my mother, I wouldn't be where I am today. She helped me become what I am. She is wonderful."

Miss Adams' major payoff in twirling is that of confidence-building. It's not a skill, an avocation, that could turn into a vocation and earn her a livelihood unless she goes into teaching twirling and judging twirling competition.

Twirling "builds up your confidence," Miss Adams said. "It's not that I think I'm Miss Wonderful," but she has a better definition of "who I am."

Krueger nominates district judges

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Secretary of State John Hannah, a former federal prosecutor, headed a list of 10 people nominated Thursday for posts as U.S. district judges.

A total of 21 Texans now have been recommended to President Clinton by Sen. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, for positions as judges, U.S. attorneys and U.S. marshals.

"The team represents the new Texas, the Texas of diversity, the Texas of change, the Texas of challenge, the Texas of the future," Krueger said.

Senate tradition allows a senator of the president's party to recommend nominees for judicial positions. If appointed by Clinton, all nominees must go through the Senate confirmation process.

Krueger said he was confident that all his nominees would be confirmed, regardless of the outcome of his June 5 runoff election against Republican state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison.

"I will be extremely surprised if each individual . . . is not in the very position for which I have nominated him or her," Krueger said. "I think it's very, very likely."

The nominations were criticized by one state legislator because they included no Hispanic women.

"We would hope that since this is the new Texas and we're all striving to be inclusive of all Texans that we would have a Hispanic woman appointed to a federal judgeship. And there are qualified women out there," said Rep. Yolanda Flores, D-Houston.

But Bob Mann, communications director for Krueger's Senate office, said Krueger had nominated "the most diverse group of public officials ever appointed in Texas."

"Among the 21, 14 are black, Hispanic or women," Mann said. "Five are black. Five are Hispanic."

U.S. district judge is a lifetime appointment. The list of those nominees is:

■ Eastern District judge: Hannah, who has been secretary of state for Gov. Ann Richards since 1991. He was U.S. attorney for the eastern district from 1977 to 1981 and represented East Texas in the state House from 1967 to 1973.

■ Northern District judge: Eric Moye, Dallas, a state district judge. A former columnist for the Dallas Times Herald, Moye is an adjunct professor of history at Southern Methodist University and active in the Dallas Civil Liberties Union. He would be the first black appointed to a federal judgeship for North Texas.

■ Western District judges: Fred Biery, David Briones, Orlando Garcia, Royal Furgeson.

Biery has served on the 4th Court of Appeals in San Antonio since 1989, was a county court-at-law judge from 1979 to 1982, and was a state district judge from 1983 to 1988.

Briones has presided over an El Paso county court-at-law since 1991.

Garcia has been a justice on the 4th Court of Appeals since 1991 and served in the Texas House from 1983 to 1991.

Furgeson, an El Paso lawyer, is a Vietnam veteran who clerked for U.S. District Judge Halbert Woodward.

■ Southern District judges: Vanessa Gilmore, Janis Graham Jack, Alice Oliver-Parrott, Mario Ramirez.

Ms. Gilmore, Houston, is an attorney and was the first black appointed by Richards to the Texas Department of Commerce policy board, which she chairs.

Ms. Jack, Corpus Christi, is an attorney who holds degrees in both law and nursing and is legal counsel for Planned Parenthood of South Texas.

Judge Oliver-Parrott is chief justice of the 1st Court of Appeals in Houston and was a district judge before that.

Ramirez is a district judge in McAllen, a post he has held since 1983. He also was a district judge and a county court-at-law judge in Hidalgo County.

In addition to those 10 nominees, Krueger recommended four people for the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals: Judge George Kazen of Lardeo, Judge Morris Overstreet of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, Judge Robert Parker of Tyler and Jorge Rangel of Corups Christi.

IRS: Employees won't be able to waive penalties

lems in liquidating their tax liabilities.

He said taxpayers coming to the office need to bring paycheck stubs or W-2s, 1099 forms from banks or savings and loans, cancelled checks for business expenses, receipts for medical and dental services, receipts for lodging for business trips, paid invoices for work-related expenditures, logs for work or volunteer-related expenses, receipts for donations to churches or charitable organizations, records for government assistance, mortgage interest statements, as well as credit card and automobile payment statements.

"A lot of people after they have stopped filing fear coming back in because they feel there are more than penalties and interest, but they feel like they are going to jail." He said that is not accurate.

He said prosecution is a last resort for non-filers.

"An individual who has come across a hardship or a situation where they have stopped filing, it's not as bad as they think . . . we're not that bad," he said.

Soto explained why the IRS is offering this special service to non-filers.

"Since 1985, the number of non-filers have steadily grown. So instead of us waiting until it really gets tremendously out-of-hand, we are trying to address it as a concern right now and get that to a point where we can get as many people to come back into the system and be part of the system, where we don't have to worry about our resources," Soto said.

CANCER: Tech to present seminar

(From 1B)

The seminar, which will be conducted in the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center auditorium, will focus on endometrial carcinoma, LEEP procedures, vulvar carcinoma, screening of gynecologic cancers, cervical carcinoma, and ovarian cancer management.

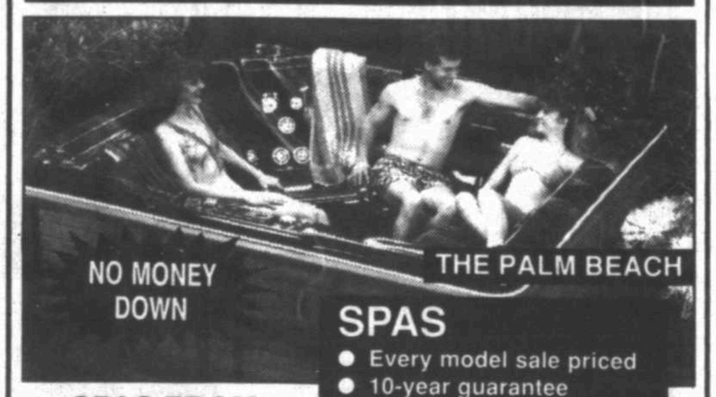

Guest speakers will include Dr. Alan Gordon, clinical associate professor of TTURAHC at Odessa and Texas Oncology in Dallas; Dr. Larry Puls, assistant professor department of Ob/Gyn TTURAHC at Amarillo; Dr. Patrick Soisson, William Beaumont Army Service Hospital, El Paso; Dr. Taylor Wharton, professor and chairman, University of Texas, M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, Houston; and Dr. Mitchell D. Greenberg, director of clinical research and education, department of gynecology, Graduate Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.

EARNEST KIKER

Growers should spray pecan trees to control casebearer

Pecan trees make up a big percentage of the home landscape trees in Midland and for that reason garderners are often concerned about the damaging effects of the pecan nut casebearer.

Kiker

Adult moths this time of year lay eggs near the tip of the pecan nutlets. The pecan nut casebearer larvae (small worms) that hatch from the eggs, can destroy an entire nut cluster of pecans by feeding on the young pecans. Feeding on the small nutlets will kill the nut, causing it to turn dark brown and give it a mummified appearance.

Home gardeners or commercial pecan growers wishing to control the pecan nut casebearer should inspect the young pecan nutlets for eggs to accurately schedule spray times to control the larvae. Eggs appear as tiny grayish-white to reddish oval dots smaller than a pinhead. If more than two eggs per 100 nutlet clusters are found, the trees should be sprayed.

Charles Allen, an entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, has predicted the spray date to be between May 22-29 for the Parmian Basin.

The dates are predicted with a heat unit model that uses actual temperatures and historical weather data to predict the activity of the pecan nut casebearer.

If a person chooses to control the pecan nut casebearer, the worst that will happen is he may lose 20-50 percent of his nut crop.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Aide killed Koresh, himself, investigators say

By Kathy Fair
Hearst News Service

DALLAS — One month after at least 77 people died in the Mount Carmel commune near Waco, a hazy picture of the cultists' final minutes is beginning to emerge.

Forensic experts, examining the charred remains of Branch Davidian members who were fatally shot, crushed, suffocated or burned in cult leader David Koresh's long-prophesied apocalyptic showdown with law enforcement agents, have constructed a partial theory of what happened shortly after noon on April 19.

As stiff prairie winds spread the fire that two — possibly three — cult members simultaneously started, cult second-in-command Steven Emil Schneider sat in the compound's communications room with would-be Messiah Koresh.

Schneider — who had given everything, including his wife, to Koresh — leveled a rifle at the center of Koresh's forehead and pulled the trigger.

Then, Schneider, 48, a one-time professor of comparative religion, propped the muzzle beneath his chin and pulled the trigger a second time, a source involved in identification of the victims said.

The charred bodies of the 12 youngest children were found in their mothers' arms. Some of the other children — 25 in the compound at the time of the fire were minors — may have been shot, but that has not been determined, authorities said.

Some adults spent their final minutes feverishly firing at the FBI. Earlier in the day, authorities reported, Branch Davidian cultists futilely fired at the lumbering tanklike vehicles that punched holes in the compound walls to inject tear gas.

One victim — a woman — was found wearing a gas mask. In her hand was an ammunition clip. Still another victim was found wearing an ammunition belt. Guns were omnipresent in the building — often found beside the burned remains of cultists. But authorities don't know if their final use was suicide or combat.

Authorities may never be able to determine how many cultists died by gunfire, said FBI Agent Richard Swensen of New Orleans. The heads of at least 12 victims could not be found, one person involved in the investigation said.

For those who weren't shot, death from smoke inhalation or burns was certain — and quick.

Carbon monoxide in smoke, one pathologist said, would quickly render a victim unconscious.

"Then the reasonable conclusion is that there is no sensation at all," he said. "No more than when they're asleep."

Investigators have repeatedly been jarred by the ironies — the cruelties — of the conflagration. During the 51-day standoff with Koresh and his followers, FBI negotiators were heartened by a videotape released by the cult leader showing 13 children in relatively good health.

In the tape, Koresh dandled his 4-year-old daughter Serenity Sea Jones on his knee. The child looked into the camera and thanked federal agents for a shipment of milk. "I'd like to have some ice cream," she added, telegraphing to authorities that her father apparently had kept an earlier gift of ice cream for himself.

Now the tape is a key aid to identifying the charred bodies of children. Authorities hope some incidental clue — body size, the color of a shoe — will help them assign names to the littlest victims.

Today, the Mount Carmel compound is a blackened spot on the Central Texas Prairie — detectable primarily as a patch of charred and new-turned earth. The few standing portions of the building have been razed; the site quarantined as a hazard to public health.

The next chapter of the Branch Davidian story will be played out in federal courts and in the nation's capital, where federal conduct during the ordeal will be scrutinized.

But the horror will live in the hearts and minds of those who were there, in their words as they struggle to explain to those who weren't.

"I have started having nightmares," one woman connected with the investigation said.

Meanwhile Wednesday, McLennan County authorities released the identities of other four more victims:

■ Yvette Fagan, thought to have been in her early 30s. Preliminary cause of death: smoke and carbon monoxide inhalation with extensive charring, possible gunshot wound to head. Her body was located in the kitchen serving area.

■ Pablo (Pavlo) Cohen, 28, Israeli citizen whose body was found atop a concrete bunker. Preliminary cause of death: smoke and carbon monoxide inhalation with extensive charring.

■ Jaydean Cornwell Wendel, 34, a former Honolulu police officer believed to have been killed in the Feb. 28 gunfight with federal agents. The location where her body was recovered was not released.

■ Rebecca Saipaia, 24, whose body was found on top of the bunker. Ruling on cause of death is pending. Her body was released to relatives in New Zealand.

King Ranch boasts female ranch hands

By Vivienne Heines
Associated Press writer

KINGSVILLE — Beverly "B.J." Myrick was 12 when she bought her first horse with $100 she had saved from a summer hay-hauling job.

Today, she makes her living on a horse as the only full-time female ranch hand working with about 50 cowboys on the sprawling 825,000-acre King Ranch. She and two other part-time female ranch hands form a tight-knit group who make their home on the range in this male-dominated world.

At work, the women doctor and feed the cattle and wash water troughs. Mrs. Myrick, a 32-year-old mother of two, said she knows each calf and its mother as well as she does her own children.

"You've got to be there every day so you know who belongs to who," she said. "I wouldn't change this for nothing because I guess I kind of like it. I like to take care of the animals.

"This ain't a job for anybody. I don't think a lot of women would like it. You've got to be there all the time, and it's kind of far away from town," she explained.

Mrs. Myrick works seven days a week, from dawn to dusk. But her husband understands the demands of her job: He's the unit manager for two of the ranch's four sections.

Although women always have played a role in South Texas ranching history, few have ridden and roped alongside the cowboys, said cultural anthropologist Dr. Joe S. Graham of Texas A&I University at Kingsville.

Traditionally, ranch women took care of the home, children and health care and were in charge of the children's spiritual development and education. The Mexican-American ranching community is even more conservative, Graham said, with most women remaining in those roles today.

"Very, very seldom do you see any instances of deviation from those social roles." Graham said. "None of them was out riding and chasing critters."

Women more likely to be seen on horseback have been those from the upper-class ranching families — including prominent King Ranch women like Henrietta King — who have historically had more independence than the women of the working class, Graham said. Mrs. King, who died in 1925, co-founded the King Ranch with her husband and supervised its operation after his death.

"In most of the situations, the gender roles were very clearly defined," he added. "You may have a few tomboys who aspire to that (being a ranch hand), but this is training that goes back to early childhood."

Mrs. Myrick and her two part-time counterparts, 22-year-old Stefanie Haegelin and 25-year-old Donna Pakebusch, agreed with Graham.

The King Ranch's only female ranch hands, who live on the ranch with their families, said their friendship provides vital support in the mostly male environment.

"I feel like they (Mrs. Myrick and Mrs. Pakebusch) are some of the only ones who truly understand me . . . understand the love I have for (ranching)," said Ms. Haegelin, a former high school cheerleader now studying agriculture at Texas A&I.

The three women said it is their love of animals and of the land that drives them to ride, rope and wrestle cattle with their male counterparts. They agree that there are constant tests to their physical and emotional endurance.

"As a woman, you have to truly love it more," Ms. Haegelin said. "It's so much more socially acceptable for a guy to walk around with his boots and his spurs all covered with cow mess.

"There's not too many women I know who think it's very glamorous or who would want to trade places with me for any length of time," she added.

And all three said that balancing their femininity in the masculine environment is a challenge.

Mrs. Myrick and Mrs. Pakebusch don't wear dresses at all. In fact, they didn't wear dresses to their own weddings. Mrs. Myrick's wedding attire was white pants and shirt. And she scorns makeup. For formal occasions, she pulls her long, sunstreaked hair into two pigtails instead of a single ponytail down her back.

Ms. Haegelin, however, said she likes to wear skirts and makeup when she goes out.

"There was a time when I was turning into a tomboy. My Dad told me, 'You have to know when it's time to get dirty, and you have to know when to be a lady,'" Ms. Haegelin said. "We're not a bunch of rough-and -tough tomboys. We all like to dress up and go out at night."

Added Mrs. Myrick, "You want to be respected for what you do."

"But also be recognized as a female," agreed Mrs. Pakebusch.

Stephen "Tio" Kleberg, ranch vice president, said Mrs. Myrick is one of a small number of women who have worked as ranch hands, although others have worked in the quarter horse training and breaking operation.

Mrs. Myrick, he said, regularly beats out fellow male competitors at the ranch's annual rodeo for employees: "I'd put her up against any of the men. And she can probably beat most of them. She's quick, she's smart, she knows her job. She's an excellent employee."

Kleberg said he hasn't had very many women ask to do the outdoor labor Mrs. Myrick does.

"In 20-plus years that I've been here, I don't have many requests. They do a lot of other things but not to do the outdoor cattle work that B.J.'s doing," he said. "It's long hours — it's seven days a week; it's not a pleasant environment. It's a tough job."

Nevertheless, Kleberg said he would never discourage women from working as ranch hands.

"They do a much better job than men with the horses. They're gentle. Typically, a man will try and use strength to overcome where a woman will use finesse," Kleberg said.

Mrs. Myrick, who has worked at King Ranch four years, grew up on a dairy farm in Jourdanton. Before she came to Kingsville, she worked on a ranch in Gonzalez.

"Here, you just do what everybody does. There's no discrimination here," Mrs. Myrick said. "People aren't looking at you if you're a boy or a girl. You've got to be able to do the job."

It was Mrs. Myrick who inspired Ms. Haegelin to work as a ranch hand. The two met in Gonzalez, where Ms. Haegelin's father worked. He now is a unit manager at the King Ranch.

"I'm around 10 guys all day long, and I have to put up with a lot of stuff — the talking dirty and the cussing," Ms. Haegelin said. "They don't open doors for you out here. You can't really expect to be treated as a woman as long as you're doing this. You're doing a man's job and you have to expect to be treated as one.

Mrs. Pakebusch said seeing her husband ride the horses all day, then watching Ms. Haegelin enter the cowboy's world spurred her to begin riding on the weekends with the ranch hands.

Now she works full time in the feed yard office during the week and rides on the weekends. Her husband is feed yard foreman at the King Ranch.

"I was raised in the country. I've always had a love of horses and that's how I got started," Mrs. Pakebusch said. "I saw Stefanie out there riding and I thought if she could do it, I could do it."

Song delivered Satanic message, teen claims

■ Through heavy-metal music devil told boy to kill his mother, according to attorney.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A 15-year-old Kingwood boy says he received the message to kill his mother from the devil in the form of a song by heavy metal band Megadeth, according to the boy's attorney.

"The doctor tells me that he is driven by forces he can't control or understand," said Tim Power, attorney for the youth. "If in fact he shot his mother, he was in the throes of a psychotic episode in which he was both seeing and hearing the devil."

At a detention hearing Thursday, the boy was released from a juvenile facility to be hospitalized, Juvenile Judge Veronica Morgan-Price said.

She did not know where the boy would be hospitalized.

The boy has confessed to the Monday night shooting death of his 47-year-old mother, Arlette Bone Merritt.

Earlier that evening, the youth listened to the Megadeth song "Go To Hell," Power said Wednesday.

As the eighth-grader recounted it, the message was from the devil as he rode a red fireball out of a black hole, enveloping the boy in black smoke, Power said.

The boy remained in the Harris County juvenile detention facility Thursday as sheriff's detectives continued investigating the shooting.

Authorities said they were preparing a murder charge and expected to request the boy be tried as an adult.

Psychologist Richard Austin examined the youth Wednesday and found that he suffered from "an unspecified psychotic disorder that could lead toward paranoid schizophrenia," Power said.

The district attorney's office ordered its own psychiatrist to examine the teen-ager for a second opinion.

Power said the youth told him that over the past two or three years, "the devil has been after him and won't leave him alone."

The boy said Satan appeared to him sometimes while he was awake but mostly as he slept. He said he would hear Satan's voice while immersed in heavy metal music, especially songs by Megadeath, Power said.

"You have a precarious, unbalanced child here being exposed to very violent, powerful music," Power said. "This music is placed in his hand by adults for profit.

"It is geared for teens, who at time may be having difficulty dealing with life," Power said. "They tend to escape into their music. This isn't rock 'n' roll. It's not Bruce Springsteen."

The State in brief

■ Scalia grants stay to Texas inmate

HUNTSVILLE — U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia has granted a stay for a Texas death row inmate scheduled to die June 4 for the sexual mutilation slaying of a Fort Worth man.

Scalia on Thursday postponed the execution of Ricky Lee Green, 32. He was condemned to death for the Dec. 26, 1986, slaying of Steven Fefferman, a television advertising executive with KXAS-TV in Fort Worth.

Fefferman, 28, was castrated and stabbed repeatedly in his townhome after meeting Green and having sex with him on a beach near Lake Worth, according to court testimony.

A brief order issued by Scalia said the enforcement of Green's sentence "is stayed pending the disposition by this court" of a formal appeal filed on the inmate's behalf.

■ City clinics to provide Depo-Provera

HOUSTON — Low-income women will be able to obtain the contraceptive Depo-Provera at health clinics for little or no charge under a contract approved by the Houston City Council.

The injectable solution prevents pregnancy for three months.

Councilman Judson Robinson III raised questions about Depo-Provera, noting its possible side effects, including bone-thinning. Animal studies have shown the drug can cause breast cancer.

As a result, council directed the health department Wednesday to conduct follow-up examinations after one year on those who receive the drug at city clinics, which already are dispensing the relatively new contraceptive, Norplant.

■ Law officers capture four escapees

EDINBURG — Authorities recaptured four inmates who escaped from the Hidalgo County Jail, but two others remained at large Thursday.

Deputy David Neubauer said the low-security inmates escaped late Wednesday, apparently by forcing open a locked door.

Three were rounded up in a brushy area not far from the jail shortly after the break, authorities said.

Another escapee was arrested in Mission early Thursday.

The four were charged with escape from a penal institution. Bond was set at $50,000 each.

■ Panel OKs funds to buy state park land

AUSTIN — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has voted to approve the last $500,000 needed to buy land for Government Canyon State Park near San Antonio.

The acquisition will protect a scenic and ecologically sensitive area and provide a new recreational park for central Texas, commissioners said Thursday.

The 4,700-acre tract provides habitat for endangered species, including the black-capped vireo and golden-cheeked warbler.

Richards blasts insurance provisions

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards told a Senate committee Thursday that the Texas Department of Insurance would be abolished if certain "trash" provisions aren't removed from a House-passed bill to continue the agency's operations.

The bill, which is pending before the Senate Economic Development Committee, won House approval earlier this month after lawmakers added several pro-insurance industry amendments.

"If you decide to pass that bill out with all that trash on it, there isn't going to be an insurance agency in the state of Texas," Richards warned senators.

However, Richards did not pledge a veto of the measure if the provisions remain in the bill.

One of those would allow insurance industry organizations to provide the data that the State Board of Insurance uses to set rates.

Richards said that measure would gut reforms passed by the 1991 legislative session to phase out those organizations from rate proceedings.

"What is happening is we are saying not only are we going to continue a practice to have the fox guard the henhouse, but we are going to invite the fox to roost with the hens," she said.

"It is time that we get serious about what we mean when we talk about rate setting in insurance," she said.

Insurance industry representatives defended the legislation, saying it will make insurance more available and affordable.

"Our purpose in proposing the amendments was to allow insurers a chance to operate their businesses more efficiently and pass those cost-savings along to the policyholders," said Jerry Johns, of the Southwestern Insurance Information Service.

Rick Gentry, of the Insurance Information Institute, said he was surprised the governor would suggest abolishing the Department of Insurance. He said such a move would hurt both consumers and insurance companies.

"Even the insurance industry recognizes the need for strong, evenhanded insurance regulation," he said. "I hope we can find some common ground."

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and sponsor of the bill, said the committee could vote on the measure today.

Group voices opposition to handgun bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Religious leaders and trauma doctors, standing before a list of 3,692 Texans killed by gunfire in 1991, Thursday voiced opposition to a pending bill that could allow Texans to carry handguns.

"The theory that more people with more guns equals more safety just doesn't wash," said Phil Strickland of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission.

"We are very deeply concerned about how to make the society less violent, not more violent. We do not believe this legislation will make our society less violent," Strickland said.

The group said it sides with Gov. Ann Richards, who has vowed to veto the bill if the Legislature sends it to her desk.

The House and Senate have passed differing versions of the measure. If the House accepts Senate amendments, the bill could go to the governor.

Under the bill, Texas voters would decide the gun question in a November referendum.

If approved in that election, Texans 21 or older who are registered voters, have no criminal background and are judged to be of sound mind could apply for a license to carry a handgun.

Murder witness sues ABC, news reporter

HOUSTON (AP) — A hearing was set for next month in the case of an ABC-TV reporter and news crew accused of harrassing a murder witness whose testimony helped put a Houston man on Texas' death row.

Bernadine Skillern is seeking a temporary injunction against the network and "Day One" news magazine reporter John Hockenberry.

A hearing on Ms. Skillern's lawsuit, filed Wednesday, was set for June 7.

Ms. Skillern in 1981 identified Gary Graham as the gunman who killed Bobby Lambert, 53, outside a Houston supermarket during a robbery. Graham is facing death June 3 for the slaying.

"Because I witnessed a murder by Mr. Graham of Mr. Lambert — I saw him and he saw me — (no one) has the right to harass and intimidate me," Ms. Skillern said Wednesday.

Ms. Skillern said Wednesday that Hockenberry and a news crew showed up at her house the night of May 12 and began banging on her door, demanded to talk to her and shouted comments like "Gary Graham is an innocent man."

Her 17-year-old daughter called 911 to summon police but the news crew left before officers arrived.

Graham contends he is innocent and his cause has been adopted by a number of death penalty opponents who are trying to spare him from lethal injection. Graham earlier won an unusual 30-day reprieve from Gov. Ann Richards.

Teri Everett, an ABC spokeswoman, declined to comment on the lawsuit, saying the network's attorneys had not yet been notified about it.

The news program "Day One" aired its segment on the Graham case on Sunday.

Ms. Skillern said she was unjustly being "held responsible for Gary Graham's fate when, in fact, he's responsible for his own fate."

FAMILY MATTERS

'Joint custody' can be confusing issue

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I have a very good friend who is going through a divorce. She and her "husband" are trying to be cooperative through all of it (no other woman involved). He has asked her for joint custody of their children (boy, 6, and girl, 3). Her attorney has explained what it all means to her, but she still doesn't really understand what it all means. She asked me to write you and ask you if it was better for the children for the parents to have joint custody. She just doesn't know what to do because he is being so nice but insistent about it. TRYING TO HELP

May

DEAR TRYING: Your friend has asked a very good question. The idea of joint custody — where both parents share responsibilities for the children after divorce — a good concept. Whether it has actually worked in practice is a matter of controversy. In Texas, the concept is called "joint managing conservators."

The real challenge of joint custody is in the parents' resolving of issues associated with decision-making and visitation. The parents need to agree upon which decisions will be shared, which will be divided and which will be assigned to a specific parent. The living arrangements can vary depending upon what the parents agree to — from every other day, to every other week, to the parents moving in and out of the same house, and so on.

Dr. Kim Rockwell-Evans recently reported on a survey of the research findings associated with joint custody. She found that the more important variables on the potential success of joint custody included parental conflict, re-litigation, parental alcohol or other drug use, parent income and educational level, and child behavior adjustment.

The research found that joint custody parents talked more often, but had about the same level of conflict as sole custody parents. Several studies found that re-litigation was higher in sole custody cases than in joint custody cases, while two studies found no difference. Substance abuse by the parents was an important consideration. Dr. Rockwell-Evans suggests that parents who are not alcohol or drug dependent are more likely to be trusted by the other parent in their parenting skills.

One study found that joint custody was more common among upper income families with higher education. She suggests that class differences should be considered in deciding about joint custody. Joint custody families were found to have a higher rate of compliance with child support payments than did sole custody families. This finding could have some bearing on the future economic well-being of the children.

In parental conflict, ex-spouses were found to have more disagreements when the divorce decree was vague. Spelling out who does what, when and how in the decree is important in reducing future conflict. Child behavior adjustment was found to be independent of the custody arrangements in a number of studies. One study did find a higher level of self-esteem among joint custody children than maternal custody children; however, Dr. Rockwell-Evans makes the important point that based on research findings, no one can use child behavior adjustment as an argument for or against joint custody.

I hope this will be of value to your friend in her decision-making process. Joint custody is not for everyone, but it can work very well — but that is up to the parents. I encourage your friend to meet with her lawyer as long as it takes for her to understand the legal ramifications of the decision. Whatever form the actual custody arrangement takes, I believe that what is most important is that the children feel loved and supported by both parents.

THE FOLLOWING ARE ADDITIONAL TIPS FROM THE PERMIAN BASIN CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION PROGRAM TO HELP YOUR CHILD STOP MAKING EXCUSES:

- When your child makes excuses for a behavior, calmly confront him or her with the facts. Encourage an open and honest line of communication.
- Do not make your child fearful of telling the truth even though you will be unhappy with his or her behavior.
- Make certain that your child can see the relationship between his or her behavior and the consequences that follow — "I cannot trust you because you make up excuses."
- Allow natural consequences to occur when you can — friends not believing what he or she says because of his or her excuse making.

DEAR ABBY

Wife's shotgun wedding still ringing in her ears

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Something has been on my mind for several years. When I was 18, I was in love with "Jim," who was 19. We started having sex, so I went on a birth control pill because he was in no position to get married. Well, I did a terrible thing: I purposely stopped taking the pill without telling Jim, because I wanted to get pregnant so he would marry me.

Van Buren

I got pregnant right away and went through all the motions of acting "shocked." To make a long story short, he married me and we had a beautiful baby girl. Two years later we had a little boy. Abby, I know what I did was selfish and underhanded, but I don't regret it.

My problem is whether to tell Jim that I tricked him into marrying me. He is a very understanding man, and we have a fantastic marriage, but I don't know how he would react. I'm also afraid if I tell him, I will have to tell my family and his.

What is the right thing to do? — FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING GUILTY: Since this has been on your mind for several years, you may feel relieved if you were to tell him.

It's history now, and you say you have a fantastic marriage. True confession may be good for the soul, but it can be bad for the marriage. But why you think it's necessary to tell your family and his is a mystery to me.

DEAR ABBY: My wonderful mother had surgery three weeks ago and was diagnosed with cancer, with a life expectancy of three to six months. This is the most devastating thing I've ever had to face. I hope you and/or your readers can answer some of these questions.

My co-workers are naturally interested and concerned, but they ask me daily, "How is your mother?" I appreciate their concern, but I really don't want to talk about my mother's health because it is progressively worse.

Almost everyone asks, "How old is she?" I finally got tired of answering that question, so I asked, "Why do you want to know?"

The reply, "I just wondered if she has had a full life." Abby, although my mother is in her mid-70s, she's too young to die. I wouldn't want to lose her if she were 100. How can I answer that question without being rude? — WEARY

DEAR WEARY: When asked a question you don't want to answer, simply say, "Thank you for your interest, but I'd rather not talk about it."

P.S. And thank you, "Weary," for suggesting that the "How-old-is-she (or he)" question should not be asked when the loved one is terminally ill. It's entirely irrelevant to most family members.

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't resist commenting on the letter in your recent column about whether a man could father children if he had only one testicle.

My husband had a shriveled testicle due to having had the mumps "go down on him" during his college years. But we had two children, a boy and a girl. I recall one time when he had consulted with a urologist, and the doctor asked him if he had children. He replied, "Yes, a son and a daughter." "Well," the doctor replied, "that blows the theory that perhaps one side produces males and the other females!" — MOTHER OF TWO, CANYONVILLE, ORE.

Antique bottle collectors search for valuable items

Associated Press

Bottle collecting is one of the oldest, most popular and least expensive field of antiques in which one man's trash is another man's treasure — but in rare instances those treasures can be worth thousands of dollars.

Glass bottles in nearly every imaginable form and color have been produced in this country, writes Bruce E. Johnson in Country Living magazine, and just about every old house and antiques mall contains old bottles — patent-medicine bottles, or barber, beer or bitters containers.

Glass bottles reflect the industrial development of the United States. The colonists' demand for glass windows and containers, combined with a ready supply of wood to fuel glasshouse furnaces, encouraged the establishment of an American glassblowing industry as early as the 18th century.

American glasshouses came to rival their European counterparts. Technological developments in the 19th century led to more uniform, colorful and decorative bottles with smooth lips and, later, molded screw threads.

Veteran bottle collectors have learned that gems can turn up anywhere, from the basement of an old house to the rafters of an attic or barn. Many collectors search inactive dumps and house foundations, watch as city workers excavate for new utility lines or even perform archaeological digs on the sites of turn-of-the-century outhouses.

Among the bottle types that collectors seek are:

- Barber bottles. During the latter half of the 19th century, barbers mixed and bottled their own hair tonics and colognes. The Pure Food and Drug Act in 1906 restricted many of the ingredients in these homemade formulas, so the number of barber bottles declined after that. They are highly collectible, in the $200-$300 price range.
- Beer bottles. In general, beer bottles are more common than barber bottles, although rarities do exist. A common brand such as Utica Club might bring only a few dollars, but a rare cobalt-blue SH Broughton Root Porter bottle could fetch nearly $500.
- Bitters bottles. Bitters collectors place a premium on unusual colors. For instance, an amber example of Kellys Old Cabin Bitters might bring $700-$900 at auction, but a rare dark olive-green version could easily climb to $3,000-$4,500.
- Candy containers. The most desirable are those in detailed, unusual shapes, such as early 20th-century airplanes, firearms, animals and historic buildings. With many currently priced under $100, candy containers may be one of the best buys in the field.
- Flasks. The best-known collectible bottles are figured flasks. Figurals have featured American presidents, military leaders and politicians, as well as patriotic themes and Masonic lodge insignias. A transparent George Washington flask might cost $50-$80, while a similar flask in sapphire blue is worth $4,000. Color is a critical factor in determining flask value.

Seniors' driving ability tested

By Randolph E. Schmid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plastered on the bumper of a pickup truck, the sticker captured the frustration of many hurried young drivers along Florida highways: "When I get old, I'm going to move up North and drive slow."

However, researchers say the slogan unfairly indicts thousands of safe older drivers, and those moving slowly trying to be safe.

Drs. William Schiff and Rivka Oldak of New York University have been experimenting with a relatively simple test that can help older drivers decide where they need improvement and whether they can continue to drive safely.

They sat people in a chair, with brake and accelerator pedals, and used a large television screen to simulate the view through the windshield of a moving car.

It's no fancy electronic simulator, but it's also a lot cheaper than those machines, said Schiff, who would like to see the system available to people nationwide.

The American Automobile Association financed experiments in Florida, New York and Vermont. Schiff said he's talking with officials in California and Massachusetts about doing similar tests there.

"One of the things we have demonstrated, or discovered, is that it's not simply reflexes" that are the problem for older drivers, Schiff said.

When he tested how fast people can move their foot from the accelerator to the brake, there was little difference among people of different ages, he said.

He did find a difference — sometimes significant — in the time it takes to make a decision to move the foot.

But not everyone slowed down with age. "Just because someone is older doesn't mean they have slower reactions," Schiff stressed.

Two other problems cropped up with some older drivers — unintended acceleration and visibility problems when facing glare.

Periods of low light and the presence of oncoming headlights tended to increase mishaps involving older drivers, Schiff found.

And they sometimes slammed a foot on the accelerator instead of the brake when suddenly confronted with a traffic hazard, such as a child or animal running into the road.

Some older people give up driving long before they have to simply because they have no way to test their skills, Schiff said.

If relatively simple testing systems were available in community centers, shopping malls, AAA offices and driver license offices, people who were concerned about their changing driving skills could test themselves, he said.

They could learn where they have problems, and possible ways to compensate, such as not driving at night or in heavy rain, when they might have visibility problems.

"Or they might find out that they're fine, which can also be reassuring," Schiff said. "A lot of people are very concerned about driving because they are 71 or 75 or older."

Sound approach to hearing loss needed

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Do chirping birds, ticking clocks or whispered murmurs no longer keep you awake? Does your loving but exasperated spouse explode with indignation because he or she feels ignored? Do business associates and acquaintances tend to avoid you as not being worth the bother? If so, you probably have impaired hearing due to aging, a deficit termed presbycusis, a condition suffered by one-third of the elderly population. Presbycusis results from slow degeneration of the auditory nerve with subsequent loss of high-pitched sound waves, thereby diminishing one's ability to discriminate and interpret.

Page

Vasodilators, vitamins, diuretics and hormones have been thoroughly tried as remedies, all to no avail. Hearing aids comprise the one great boon. Strangely, many individuals resist their use. A recent report in Britain where aids (hearing, that is) are free, disclosed that only 400,000 out of 1,300,000 deaf persons over 65 years of age use them!

Let us now voice a sound approach to domestic, social and business harmony thrown into discord by impaired communication due to hearing difficulties. The "I hear but can't understand" individual undergoes such a slow development of his or her impairment that considerable time passes before he or she appreciates the problem. For proper management one should commence with an otologist (ear doctor) to correct or rule out ear-canal blockage such as wax or infection; eardrum damage; and possible fixation of the small vibrating bones of the inner ear.

Next, one should establish environmental control with elimination as far as possible of din, clang, clatter, bombilation, cacophony, tintinnabulation and the other extraneous sounds of present-day society — all of which helped bring on the deafness in the first place. Then have your ear doctor recommend a hearing aid. The cheapest is a piece of string running from ear to breast pocket (people will shout, thinking you are sporting an old-fashioned aid!), but it may prove better to obtain a tiny, inconspicuous one albeit a bit more expensive. Beware of the hearing device salesman capable of selling refrigerators to Eskimos!

As regards to the role of the suffering spouse or companion, the late Alex Comfort, M.D., recommended "assertion training," such as: "I want to hear all your pearls of wisdom, so will you kindly speak slowly without a cigar in your mouth, turn off the Muzak and stop shouting. If you don't, I shall assume you don't want me to hear you or are not saying anything worth hearing!" Further instructions should include the following: Don't speak when you are in another room or when the water is running; don't devise tests to demonstrate the presence or absence of deafness; do have patience when the subject is tired or ill; do appreciate the need for family encouragement and cooperation; do, both you and the patient, maintain a sense of humor.

Now hear this, three deaf Englishmen riding on a train pulling into the station. The first: "By Jove, it's Wembly!" The second: "No, it's Thursday." The third: "That's a jolly idea, let's all have a drink!"

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Caregivers need help with aging adults

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: My mom is 84 years old and is beginning to require more help. Where do I find assistance in the community?

Edwards

ANSWER: No one can, or should, take care of another person without help. Important sources for finding such help include government or community agencies, medical facilities, and businesses catering to older people and caregivers — relatives, friends, coworkers and neighbors.

Identify which of your mom's urgent needs pose a problem. Take into consideration which needs you don't have the time, money, expertise or energy to meet.

Each time you speak with an agency, business or private individual who might be able to help you, record the information in your notebook. Be sure to write down each program's eligibility criteria, along with documentation to prove eligibility and any deadlines or other important items.

A good place to begin would be calling the local Area Agency on Aging (AAA). Check the telephone book for the one in your mom's area.

AAA offices coordinate services for low-income or disabled seniors, using money set aside by the federal Older Americans Act. Most AAAs don't actually get into the caregiving business; instead they contract with local companies or agencies to provide home-delivered meals, rides to doctor appointments, legal assistance and other services to seniors in each county.

Tell the AAA representative what problems you and your mom are facing. The representative will explain how you can access each service — who to contact and where.

There are also numerous other services and agencies that might be able to assist you, including Red Cross, Community and Senior Services, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Medicaid (Texas Department of Human Services), Medicare (Social Security), hospitals, utility companies, senior centers, United Way, Legal Aid Society, housing administration, welfare, public health department and caregivers' support groups.

The list of services and agencies available to assist in some form or fashion is comprehensive. And there are more services. Most communities have food banks, and some even have clothing or furniture banks.

The bottom line is, don't go it alone when taking care of an older adult. You don't have to, and the support is so important both to you and your loved one.

Some oil-field names have unusual origins

By Kent Biffle
Associated Press writer

LINDALE — Texas oil fields have names a poet could love, the tough names as well as the soft:

The Devil's Courthouse, Inkum and Fuzz — the rescued screwup of One-Joint-Off.

Charles R. Lewis isn't a poet. But he's keen on names that frolic like Loco Rico and Rig Dog, or shimmer like Moonlight and Illusion Lake.

After 15 years of tracking oil and gas exploration, he's bewitched by Texas fields named Elbow, Chirp, Pobump and you name it.

Hopkins County-born Lewis' weekly oil news reports run in 48 newspapers (down from 89 during the 1980s boom). For fun, he has dug up stories of the onomastic gymnastics behind the names of hundreds of Texas fields.

Early names were prosaic. For example, the Nacogdoches Field was dug with wooden tools 126 years ago at, yes, Nacogdoches. The Corsicana Field followed at you-got-it. In Navarro County was the Powell Field at Powell.

In 1901, mighty Spindletop in Jefferson County was the namesake of a topographical blip. And the Sour Lake Field in Hardin County was named for a nearby mineral spa of that name.

"World War II caused an abrupt upturn in exploration. Appropriate field names began to require a little more originality," Lewis said.

Within a short time, hundreds of fields were being named each year. Granted, some of the so-called fields amounted to no more than a single anemic well.

"Operators were asked to submit three proposed names to the Railroad Commission. And it wasn't unusual for the first choice to be rejected."

Commissioners reject some proposed names in the interest of clarity, taste, or whatever. Ideally, a name is distinctive and short enough for a map.

The Gunpoint Field in DeWitt County was discovered on the lease of Marvin Davis of Denver, who explained it: "The only thing on the map that wasn't already leased was shaped just like a pistol. My little 100 acres was right at the tip of the gun barrel." Its dozen wells have produced 79 billion cubic feet of gas since 1984.

Celebrating a famous old tonic, "Hadacol Corner" was the nickname of the liquor store nearest the site of General Crude's 1972 gas discovery in Upton County. The Hadacol Corner Field has produced 181 million cubic feet of gas.

An oil field routinely takes the name of its discovery well. That makes sense because the discovery well may be a field's only well.

Mentioned earlier, the Devil's Courthouse Field, operated by Union Oil, was named in 1955 for a solitary escarpment in Tom Green County. After producing 218,000 barrels of crude, the field's now inactive.

And Inkum? Humble Oil Inkum Field was discovered 40 years ago in Taylor County, Lewis said.

As the story goes, a post office chartered in 1904 gave an official name to a settlement and, later, the oil field. Postmaster-designate H.M. Puckett did his paperwork in indelible ink. A blot of the stuff soaked the blank where the suggested name of the settlement was supposed to go.

"No replacement form was available," Lewis said. "So, he sent the botched document to Washington. A persnickety aide to the postmaster general is said to have dispensed with the dreary problem by naming the place Inkum."

The post office is gone, but the Inkum Field is pumping, after extracting more than a million barrels of crude.

The Fuzz Field, Lewis said, took him to the mustiest records of the Southwest Conference.

Marshall Albert "Fuzz" Baldwin of Old Glory in Stonewall County was one of Texas Christian University's finest athletes ever.

"After moving with TCU from the old Waco campus to Fort Worth for his senior year, Fuzz was recruited to coach baseball for the Frogs. But his daddy recruited harder and got him into the family's horse and mule business.

"He later owned part of the mineral rights for the Fuzz Field. Enough oil was there to reward him with more than mule skinner's wages."

From its 1956 discovery to 1992, the T.F. Hunter Estate's Fuzz Field had made 1,649,552 barrels.

"The One-Joint-Off Field, discovered in 1984 in King County, has a cryptic name," Lewis said. "Nearing what W.C. Sojourner of Abilene had calculated would be lucrative production, a driller told him the target formation was 'not there.'

"But investigation showed the graveyard shift had misfigured and stopped one joint of drilling pipe (30 feet) short of the intended depth. When operator Sojourner submitted the field for state recognition, he guaranteed lasting fame for that one joint." After making 16,000 barrels, the field's now inactive.

Naming of the Loco Rico Field grew from a hunch of Abilene's John Barbee that a well punched in Runnels County in 1975 would make him "crazy rich."

Lewis said: "Having logged 30 years as a hard-driving independent operator, Mr. Barbee could look back to only one field which topped Loco Rico in total pay. That one, in Jones County, he named Jeffrey's Luck for a partner who bailed out of the deal a little too early."

Seventeen years after its discovery, the Loco Rico's dozen wells had pumped 360,000 barrels of oil and continues to make 11,000 barrels a year.

The Rig Dog Field commemorates little Mollie, mascot of a drilling crew in Hardeman County. She made friends by keeping cows away from the slush pit.

When Enserch geologist R. Leo Newport learned that a field had been named for some other Mollie, he and co-workers honored their mascot by calling the field Rig Dog. After producing 5,285 barrels, Rig Dog's now inactive.

Most rig dogs are named Butch, Lewis said, but the only Butch Field is actually named after G.E. "Butch" McBride, the Wichita Falls oilman who made the first helium discovery in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

The Moonlight Field in Midland County, nearing the 2 million barrel mark, was named in 1978 by a gaggle of geologists for the Moonlight Bar, a favored hangout.

Some say the Illusion Lake Field in Lamb County was named for a mirage. Others say there's a real lake. Given West Texas rainfall patterns, both factions could be right. No illusions is Delfern Oil's 2 million barrels.

Speculation is that the Chirp Field in Victoria County echoed the noises of the frogs and crickets on the Zdansky farm near McFaddin until — as Joe Zdansky put it — "the oil chirped out."

The Pobump Field discovered in Jones County in 1982 evokes a brother and sister, Dee Poland and Tina Bumpass. Operator John A. March of Dallas reported that if the first choice name of Pobump hadn't worked, the second choice would have been Bumpo.

Lewis, who has edited newspapers in Irving, Arlington, Grand Prairie, Tyler and Kilgore, has collected stories behind the naming of more than 300 Texas oil fields in his new hardback titled "Discovery Well."

Where else can you get the real skinny on the Dancing Bear Field in Stephens County? It was named for 300-pound geologist William D. Barber of Fort Worth, the writer told me during a visit to the hideout he shares with his wife, Gale, on Hide-A-Way Lake near Lindale.

He tells all.

Take the Handsome Field in Harrison County. It was named by TXO geologist Sandra Eichelberger of Tyler to memorialize her grandfather, the late Ed Pickerill, who was nicknamed "Handsome" because he was so homely.

Alamo Bowl

SAN ANTONIO — The Pac-10 Conference has reached a two-year agreement for its fourth-place team to play the Southwest Conference's third-place team in the Alamo Bowl.

The new bowl game will be played Dec. 31 in San Antonio's new 65,000-seat Alamodome indoor stadium.

The Alamo Bowl announced the Pac-10 agreement Wednesday and the Southwest Conference agreement Monday. The Alamo Bowl received its initial certification last month from the NCAA Special Events Committee.

NBA rookies

NEW YORK — Give some credit to the NBA scouts and general managers, whose draft foresight was confirmed by the All-Rookie team.

Of the top six picks in last summer's draft, five made the first team announced Thursday, including unanimous choices Shaquille O'Neal of Orlando and Alonzo Mourning of Charlotte — the top two draft picks.

Also picked were Minnesota's Christian Laettner, the third pick in the draft, Washington's Tom Gugliotta, who was No. 5, and LaPhonso Ellis of Denver, chosen sixth.

The missing man was Jimmy Jackson of Dallas, the fourth pick who did not sign with the Mavs until March 4 and still received three points in the voting by the coaches.

O'Neal and Mourning, the impact players their teams anticipated, each received the maximum 52 points — 26 first-team votes from the 27 coaches, who chose All-Rookie first and second teams but were not permitted to vote for their own players.

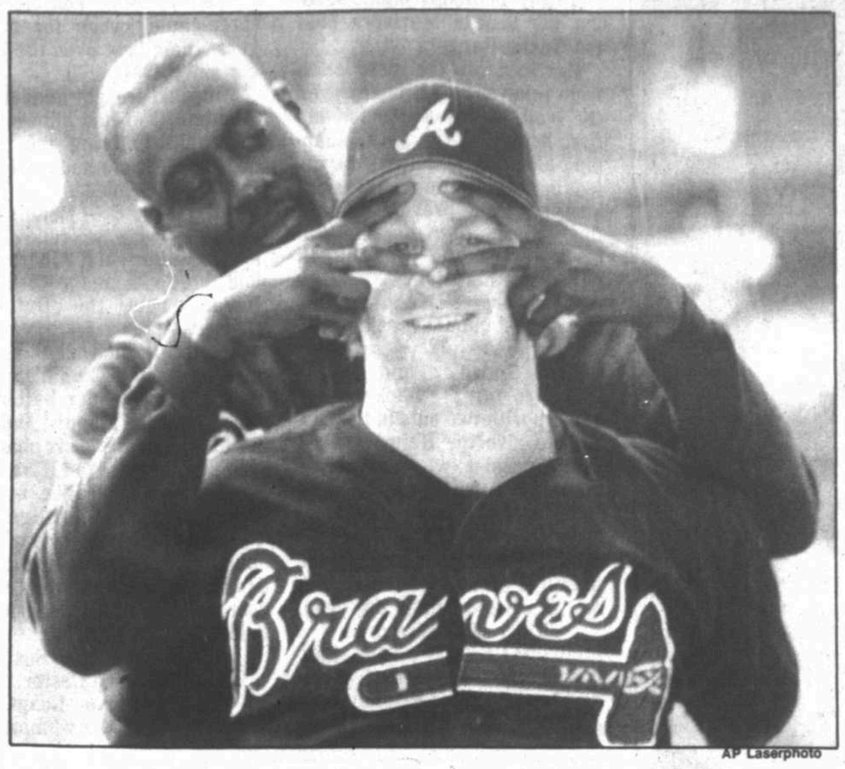

Brown resigns

LOS ANGELES — Larry Brown hit the road again Thursday, suddenly quitting as coach of the Los Angeles Clippers with two years left on his contract.

Brown, who carries one of the most extensive resumes in all of basketball, was mentioned earlier in the day as a candidate for the vacant coaching job with the Indiana Pacers. Bob Hill was fired Tuesday.

"Larry has resigned and expressed a desire to explore other opportunities," Clippers general manager Elgin Baylor said in a statement.

Braves hesitate to call Stanton closer

■ Though Atlanta personnel won't use the word closer, Midland High graduate Mike Stanton owns a major-league leading 16 saves.

By Tom Saladino
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Former Midland High Bulldog Mike Stanton leads the major leagues in saves, so he'd have to be considered the closer for the Atlanta Braves. Right?

Not exactly.

"We don't use that word around here," said pitching coach Leo Mazzone. "But he's certainly put up those type numbers."

Those numbers include a perfect 16 for 16 in save opportunities this season. Stanton hasn't blown a save in his last 19 tries, dating back to August. He's also 1-1 with a 3.44 ERA in 18 1-3 innings.

The 16 saves set a club record for left-handers, breaking the record of 11 by Tom House in 1974. Right-hander Gene Garber holds the Atlanta record with 30 in 1982.

"When you have relievers like you have in this game like Lee Smith and Dennis Eckersley, it's nice to be there," said Stanton.

"But as nice as it is, I still have to put the good behind me, as well as the bad, and go on to tomorrow."

Stanton, 25, already has doubled the number of saves he had last season, only six weeks into the 1993 season. But he didn't set a goal to be the closer.

"Actually I haven't really thought about it. I just went out in spring train-

Fabi turns best lap yet

Staff report

INDIANAPOLIS — Teo Fabi ended yet another day as a work horse test driver at Indianapolis Motor Speedway with a surprise Wednesday — his best lap of the month.

Driving the Indianapolis 500 entry of Midland-based Hall/VDS Racing, Fabi recorded a speed of 225.208 mph in "happy hour," a few minutes before the 6 p.m. close of practice. The last hour of practice is called happy hour because it is the coolest time of practice and more conducive to faster speeds.

The fast lap was the last of 112 Fabi had run Wednesday. The marathon practice session brought his total laps since the track opened May 8 to 737, nearly four full 500-mile races. No other driver is close in that department.

"We have needed to do a lot of work with the car," Fabi said. "And now that we have done it, it is starting to pay off."

Fabi qualified the Pennzoil Special on the outside of the sixth row for the 500-mile race, scheduled to be run May 30. His qualifying speed of 220.514 was ninth-fastest of the 26 cars already in the race. A four-lap average of 225 last Saturday would have won him the pole position.

During Wednesday's happy hour only two other drivers were faster — Emerson Fittipaldi at 226.051 (the fastest time of the month) and pole-sitter Arie Luyendyk at 225.398.

Fabi will continue to test various setups and components until the track closes practice Sunday, according to Hall/VDS officials.

Goodyear confident

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Scott Goodyear isn't going to sneak up on anybody in this year's Indianapolis 500.

A year ago, when the 33-year-old Canadian finished second to Al Unser Jr. in the closest Indy finish ever, there were some who considered it a fluke. But Goodyear, driving for respected team owner Derrick Walker, backed up his Indy

Spur season ended with 102-100 loss

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Charles Barkley needs no one to interpret the laws of basketball stardom.

"If you want to be great, you have to willing to take the big shot — anywhere and anytime," he said. "I always expect to hit the big hot."

Barkley was willing, all right, and he hit the winning shot — a top-of-the-key jumper over the outstretched arm of David Robinson with 1.8 seconds left.

The result was a 102-100 victory for Phoenix on Thursday night that eliminated the San Antonio Spurs in six games and sent the Suns into the Western Conference finals.

"I got the shot I wanted," said Barkley, who finished with 28 points and 21 rebounds. "Basically, it was a free throw."

Barkley, who dominated Game 5 Tuesday night with 36 points, said he learned all about taking clutch shots from Andrew Toney when he played for the Philadelphia 76ers.

"It felt good the second it left my hand," he said. "I knew it was in."

Phoenix, having survived another hard series, now faces the winner of the Seattle-Houston semifinal.

The Spurs tied the score 100-100 with 11 seconds to play on two free throws by Robinson, who had been 4 of 8 at the line until then in the fourth quarter. But Barkley, isolated in a 1-on-1 confrontation between two of basketball's best players, cleanly hit the winner.

"I thought he was going to drive by me, and then he just took the shot," said Robinson, replaying the moment

Lee honors spring athletes

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Suspense was somewhat lacking at Chaparral Center Thursday night during the annual Midland Lee Spring Sports Banquet as seniors Tanisha Mills and Martin Lattibeaudiere received the school's Most Outstanding Athlete awards.

They were easy picks in what could be considered as one of Lee's most outstanding athletic years, which included a state championship in girls golf.

Mills is the only Midland girl to ever win a individual state championship in track, winning the 400 meters in 1992. She placed fifth in that event this year, but also earned state berths in the shot put and the 1600-meter relay. Mills, who is headed for Rice next fall in track,

Lee's Wilson headed for MC

Midland College head basketball coach Steve Green made a rare dip into local talent, recruiting Midland Lee's 6-3 David Wilson.

Wilson, who helped guide the Rebels to a 29-6 season record on the way to a District 4-5A title and an area championship, became Lee's single

Heather Albright, the hero. Heather Albright, the legend. Take your pick. Either wears like that old comfortable pair of slippers in the closet.

Williamson

Not even Walter Mitty would dare dream the reality that Albright lived last Friday in the final round of the state championship golf tournament, firing a one-under par 70 at Austin's Jimmy Clay course to hand Midland Lee a Class 5A girls state golf championship.

Oh, the one-under par isn't so grand. A lot of high school girls these days turn that trick — but not after a round of 94 the day before — and certainly not on the final day of the state championship tournament.

If you are a golfer, you already know the story by now. Heather Albright, a junior, had never posted a tournament round below 85. In fact, she had never crawled under 90, except that one time to post the 85. She had never before turned in a score to help the team. Her score was always the tossaway. You expected that.

She finished the first nine on championship day at three-over, which projected to a fine 77 for the day. Even that would have caused some shock waves. But then came the binge. Four birds, no bogeys and a couple of big pressure putts to save par on the back nine to go into the red.

She was the talk of Austin on Saturday during the running of the state track meet across town at Memorial Stadium. Writers from across the state were asking questions to fill out their notes columns.

But believe it or not, there still remains some cynical writers in the state. One boomed in the press box, "A 70, right. The best wood in her bag had to be her pencil."

However, cynics aside, there were enough people watching this round with pencils in hand to know that this was real — improbable, but real.

All of us have a little Mitty inside of us. Who has never dreamed of standing at a Major League plate and hitting a home run? Who hasn't stood in the driveway with a mythical crowd roaring at you while you sink the winning free throw for the Boston Celtics?

Who hasn't dreamed of scoring the winning touchdown in the Super Bowl? Who hasn't dropped the winning putt to win the Masters? Dreams are part of the sports experience. But few of us come close to living the dream.

Heather Albright has lived the dream, climbing the mountain of obscurity to bask in the light of glory. Oh, how we all would like that one clear moment at the top.

The next time I play golf, I will be dreaming of Heather Albright. That birdie is just around the corner. Knocking 24 strokes off the score is just an outing away. She is my hero. Hackers still have hope. Miracles still happen.

And if she has a clue on how to do this, I can take care of the packaging. We'll make millions, maybe zillons. We won't have to win the lottery.

Dreaming never stops. However, Heather's dreams are tame these days because you would really have to be innovative to even think of topping this one.

NBA: Rockets stay alive with win over and over again after the game. "I just wanted to make him take a tough shot. And he hit it."

Phoenix was not home free, yet. With 1.8 seconds left, the Spurs inbounded and got the ball to Robinson on the right side, but Oliver Miller blocked his shot and time ran out.

"We wanted this victory," Miller said. "We kept our heads up, stayed aggressive on defense and we finished them off at the end."

For the Spurs, it's the end of a roller-coaster season that saw the firing of coach Jerry Tarkanian, the hiring of John Lucas and San Antonio reaching the semifinals for the first time since Robinson's rookie season.

"It was a tough way to lose, especially at home," said Robinson, who had 22 points and 14 rebounds. "I feel like I hit a wall right now because I want to keep playing. But physically my body needs a rest."

Lucas said the game boiled down to free throws and, of course, Barkley.

"They did a good job," Lucas said. "If we had to do it again we'd let Charles take that 23-footer again."

Suns coach Paul Westphal said the winning shot went exactly as planned, except Barkley shot too soon.

"We didn't want to leave any time on the clock," Westphal said. "We wanted to make it or miss it at the buzzer so they wouldn't have a chance to make it scary."

The Spurs' J.R. Reid (14 points) said his team had its chances.

"I'm sorry someone had to lose the game," he said. "But you can't ask David Robinson for any better defense."

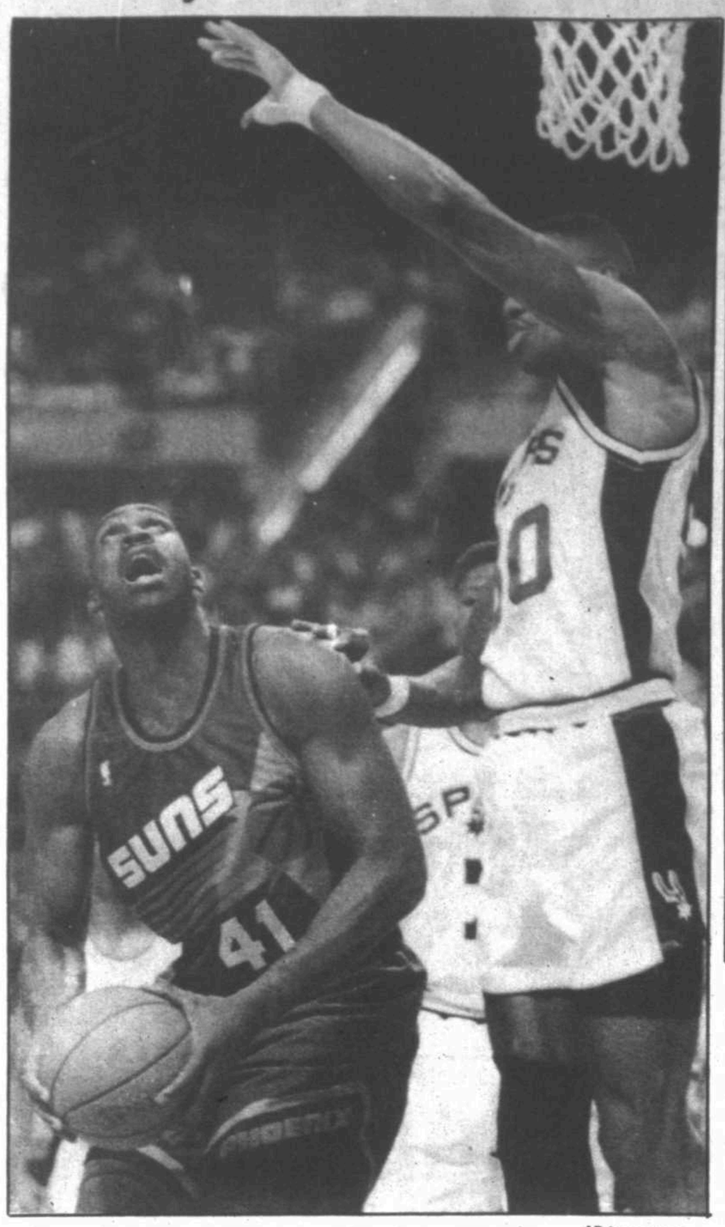

San Antonio took an 86-76 lead to start the fourth quarter on Sean Elliott's 3-pointer. But Phoenix immediately rallied with 12 straight points to take an 88-86 lead.

Then the fourth-quarter battle was on. The teams swapped leads four times before Phoenix finally went ahead 96-94 on two free throws by Johnson with 3:18 remaining.

"I thought we had the game under control," said Elliott, who added 19 points for the Spurs. "Every team makes runs at you. They did. I thought we would have ours."

Barkley was backed by Kevin Johnson and Dan Majerle with 18 each and Miller with 12.

"We just wanted to keep it close and have a chance to win it," Majerle said.

Rockets 103, SuperSonics 90

HOUSTON — Kenny Smith ended his shooting slump by scoring 30 points and the Houston Rockets avoided playoff elimination with a victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

The Western Conference semifinal, tied 3-3, will be settled Saturday in Seattle.

Smith, 3 of 13 in his two previous games, was 13 of 16 from the field, including four 3-pointers, in the highest scoring playoff game of his career.

He had 15 points in the first half and 10 in the breakaway third period when the Rockets outscored Seattle 36-13. Vernon Maxwell, scoreless in the first half, struck for 12 third-quarter points.

Sam Perkins and Derrick Perkins led Seattle with 14 points apiece but Shawn Kemp, who had 19 points in Game 5, scored only 1 point, that coming with 7:07 left. Houston center Hakeem Olajuwon was limited to 14 points and 10 rebounds.

Seattle lost the lead twice in the tight first half, the second time when Houston took a 27-26 lead on a jumper by Smith with 9:26 to go.

M's down Rangers 7-4

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Edgar Martinez's two-run pinch homer in the eighth inning keyed a six-run rally Thursday night, sending the Seattle Mariners past the Texas Rangers 7-4.

Martinez hit the first pitch from reliever Jeff Bronkey over the wall in left-center for his first homer of the year, snapping a 2-2 tie. Martinez, the defending AL batting champion, had only three previous at-bats this season after missing the early part of the year with a pulled left hamstring.

Tim Leary (3-1) allowed five hits in 8 1-3 innings, striking out six with one walk.

Juan Gonzalez and Rafael Palmeiro hit back-to-back homers with two outs in the seventh to give the Rangers a 2-1 lead. Gonzalez, who had missed the last five games with a hamstring problem, tied the game at 1-1 with a 399-foot shot to left-center, his 12th homer of the season. Palmeiro followed with his fifth home run of the year.

Tigers 6, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Tony Phillips tied the score with a two-run double and Travis Fryman hit a go-ahead, two-run single as the Detroit Tigers rallied for six runs in the eighth inning and beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

The victory completed a three-game sweep for the Tigers, their first over the Brewers since 1984.

Milwaukee right-hander Bill Wegman (3-6) had allowed only three hits entering the eighth and the Brewers had a 2-0 lead.

Indians 3, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Dennis Cook combined with two relievers on a three-hitter, and Albert Belle had three hits as the Cleveland Indians beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Cook (3-1) allowed three hits in 5 1-3 innings, and Tom Kramer retired all four batters he faced. Derek Lilliquist finished for his sixth save in six chances.

Jamie Moyer (0-1), making his first major league appearance since May 21, 1991, gave up two runs and 10 hits over 7 1-3 innings in his Baltimore debut. Moyer was signed by the Orioles last year and had been in the minors.

Blue Jays 4, Red Sox 3

BOSTON — Joe Carter, third in the American League in RBIs, drove in the winning run with a ninth-inning forceout as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Boston Red Sox.

Carter, who had three doubles and a single in Wednesday night's 10-5 loss to Boston, went just 1-for-5 Thursday night but drove in two runs, giving him 37.

Duane Ward pitched the ninth for his 10th save as the Blue Jays posted their fifth win in seven games to tie Boston for third place in the AL East.

Athletics 4, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dale Sveum tripled in two runs in the 12th inning as Oakland rallied past Kansas City to end the Royals' three-game winning streak.

Rickey Henderson and Terry Steinbach walked with one out in the 12th, and Sveum followed with a hit into the leftfield corner that Harvey Pulliam misplayed. Kevin Seitzer followed with an RBI-single.

Edgar Nunez (1-2) allowed one hit over 1 2-3 innings for the victory. Dennis Eckersley pitched the 12th for his sixth save.

Mark Gubicza, demoted to the bullpen earlier this week, took the loss and fell to 0-5

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Kirt Manwaring matched a career best with three hits, and had two RBIs as the San Francisco Giants won their sixth straight game by beating the stumbling Cincinnati Reds 6-1 Thursday.

Trevor Wilson (2-3) limited the Reds to two hits through five innings, but was yanked after giving up a leadoff double to Barry Larkin in the sixth. Wilson allowed four walks and struck out four.

Tom Browning (3-3) allowed a season-high 11 hits, walked three and struck out two in 5 1-3 innings as the Reds lost their fourth straight game in the opener of the four-game series.

Padres 5, Rockies 4

SAN DIEGO — Fred McGriff hit a two-run homer in the 11th inning after Colorado had gone ahead in the top of the inning, lifting the San Diego Padres past the Rockies.

Gary Sheffield opened the bottom of the 11th with a single off Darren Holmes (0-3) and McGriff followed with his eighth homer of the season to give the Padres their third win of the four-game series.

The Rockies took a 4-3 lead in the 11th when Dante Bichette hit a two-out homer off Gene Harris (3-0), but it wasn't enough to prevent their 14th loss in 16 games.

Phillies 9, Expos 3

PHILADELPHIA — Pete Incaviglia hit a first-inning grand slam and drove in five runs to lead the Philadelphia Phillies over the Montreal Expos.

Incaviglia's fifth career grand slam came off Chris Nabholz (3-4), who left after just 1 1-3 innings. Nabholz walked two and hit a batter before Incaviglia's fifth home run this season and second in two nights.

Curt Schilling (5-1) scattered seven hits as he pitched his third complete game this season and the Phillies' major league-leading eighth. Schilling struck out five, walked two and retired the final 15 Expos in order.

Cardinals 6, Cubs 3

ST. LOUIS — Bob Tewksbury won his fourth consecutive decision and Geronimo Pena, batting .149 left-handed, hit a three-run double as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs.

Tewksbury, baseball's best control pitcher, struck out three and walked none in seven innings. He has walked only two batters in 55 1-3 innings this season.

Tewksbury (4-3) was working on a two-hitter and had a 5-0 lead until the sixth, when Dwight Smith hit his fifth home run. Steve Buechele hit a two-run drive in the seventh, ending a 5-for-40 slump, his fourth home run this season.

Cardinals left fielder Bernard Gilkey got the Cubs started in the seventh when he dropped Ryne Sandberg's routine fly ball with a one-handed effort. Six batters later, Gilkey he used two hands when Smith flied out, ending the inning.

WILSON: JUCO seems best option

season scoring champion in the 1992-93 campaign with 775 points, averaging 22.1 points per outing.

Wilson looks at the junior college route as another chance to prove his talent for bigger schools.

"Texas Tech and UTEP showed some interest, but if you choose to go with a junior college, Midland College is about as good as there is around," Wilson said. "I think you can get more exposure in your first two years at a junior college than a small four-year school, and this is another chance at going to some four-year school you didn't have the opportunity to go to the first time around."

Green had a low pressure approach in landing Wilson, and MC still has a shot at signing Wilson's teammate Martin Lattibeaudiere, Lee's all-time leading scorer with 1,589 points.

"Coach Green made it known that he was interested in Martin and I and that we could come to Midland College, but he told us he wouldn't bug us like some of the recruiters," Wilson said. "I don't know where Martin will go. I don't know if he wants to come to Midland College since I've signed or not."

Lee coach Jon House said, "Martin is visiting West Texas State this weekend and Howard College next Tuesday, but he hasn't ruled out Midland College. We'll see what happens.

"If you're going to play junior college ball, MC is as good as any in the nation to showcase your talent," House added. "I think Tech and UTEP both would like to see David develop his game at a junior college. I think it's good for Midland and it's good for Midland Lee to have a local kid play here."

Wilson says he doesn't know what to expect when he arrives for MC workouts in September.

"I don't really know what they have in mind for me, but I think I can help out," Wilson said. "I just have to work hard. It really depends on me and what I do.

"High school was fun, but this is where it all begins. I'm looking forward to it."

LEE: Athletes receive awards

was also first team All-District in both volleyball and basketball. She was a member of the National Honor Society and Lee's student council. She had the top time in the 400 meters in the state as a junior.

Lattibeaudiere ended his basketball career at Lee as the school's all-time leading scorer, sinking 1,589 points in three seasons. He was president of the National Honor Society, first team All-District two years and a member of the Academic All-State team. He also played in a state-wide All-Star game and was honorable mention All-State. Lattibeaudiere will play college basketball, but he has not made his final decision yet as to where that will be.

Mills also picked up the Marine Distinquished Athlete Scholarship Award as did Scott McLeod, a three-time district shot put champion who won the Region I title and a state berth, placing fifth, this year. McLeod was also a two-year starter in football, was named as the MVP in that sport and earning an All-District berth in football.

Lattibeaudiere also received the U.S. Army Reserve Scholarship Award as did senior golfer Paula King. King was a member of Lee's state championship golf team, winning runner-up medalist honors at both district and region. She was the district and region medalist winner as a junior, competing in the state golf tournament twice. King was also a homecoming dutchess, a member of the National Honor Society, FCA, D-fy-it, and is headed to Oklahoma on a golf scholarship.

Whitney Elkins, who participated in both cross country and soccer, was a finalist in the state-wide Fina All-Academic team while posting a GPA of 5.37, ranking third in her class of 476. Elkins was given the $40,000 Air Force ROTC scholarship.

Joining King on the state championship golf team were Kaimi Fuller, Kim Fisher, Jennifer Dickson and Heather Albright, all juniors.

Joining Mills on the state qualifying 1600-meter relay team were Sonya Matchull, Tasha Franklin-Mayberry and Farrah Fisher. Joining McLeod in the state shot was senior Bernard Oldham. Lee swimmer Steven Mullins was also a state qualifier in that sport.

Lee won district titles in boys and girls golf and boys basketball. The Rebels placed second in boys swimming, boys track and baseball. The volleyball team got into the playoffs for the first time since 1969 and the Lee girls won second at the Region I swimming meet while the boys were third. The Lee tennis team defeated Midland High for the first time in the school's history.

The Lee baseball team won the bi-district title and the Lee boys basketball team won the area championship. Lee also fielded its first girls soccer team, and that squad will play for a district championship for the first time next year.

gust in the Marlboro 500 — the only other 500-mile event on the Indy car schedule.

This season, he has failed to finish two of three races despite starting seventh, first and fourth. The only race in which he was running at the end was the opener in Australia, where he finished 10th.

But Goodyear qualified on the inside of the second row, at 222.344 mph, for the Indianapolis 500 on May 30, and his confidence in himself and the Walker Motorsports team remains intact and strong.

"I have complete confidence in my team," Goodyear said Thursday as his crew worked on his Ford Cosworth-powered Lola.

Canadiens go up 3-0

Associated Press

■ NHL Playoffs

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Guy Carbonneau scored at 12:34 of overtime as the Montreal Canadiens beat the New York Islanders 2-1 Thursday night for their record-tying 11th straight playoff victory.

The Canadiens took a 3-0 lead in the best-of-7 Wales Conference final, which they can finish off in Game 4 on Saturday night.

Only two teams in NHL history have come back from 3-0 deficits in the playoffs — the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs and 1975 Islanders.

The Canadiens, who tied the playoff winning streak record for one season, set by Pittsburgh and Chicago last year, beat the Islanders in the second straight overtime of the series.

The Islanders had been the overtime kings in this year's playoffs before losing 4-3 in double overtime in Montreal on Tuesday night.

They still boast the best overtime record in history with a 29-9 mark, but the Canadiens have been stealing their thunder this year with a 7-1 overtime record and are 9-1 in one-goal games.

The seven overtime victories also set a record for the playoffs, breaking the mark Montreal shared with the 1980 Islanders.

Patrick Roy played a strong game in goal for the Canadiens, stopping hard shots from the slot by Steve Thomas and Islanders playoff hero Ray Ferrraro shortly before Carbonneau won it with his third goal of the playoffs.

STANTON: Spring turned tide

(From 1C)

ing and did my work," he said after Wednesday night's game against Montreal.

"We came into the season and (manager) Bobby Cox decided to put me in the ninth inning and it's been that way ever since. And I'm going to try to do everything I can to keep it that way."

Stanton was expected to win the job in 1990. He came up late in the 1989 season and recorded seven saves with the Braves after getting 27 in the minors.

But he had arm troubles in 1990 and pitched only seven innings.

In 1991, he was 5-5 with a 2.88 ERA and seven saves. Last year he was 5-4 with a 4.10 ERA and eight saves.

"He's doing this year what we always thought he could do — close them out," said Cox, who admitted he has never told Stanton the job is his.

"It just happened that the first game that came up. I pushed the button for Mike and he's been the guy we go to," Cox said. "He pitched well in the spring, so we gave him the ball."

"That was the difference. He had a good spring after not having good ones the previous two," said Mazzone. "Actually what he's doing is pitching in April and May like he's pitched previously in August and September and in postseason.

"Jokingly, I told him to make believe it's August when the season starts, and he's done just that," Mazzone said.

In the 1991 and '92 National League playoffs and World Series, Stanton was virtually unhittable. He allowed only 14 hits in 20 1-3 innings with one earned run and 16 strikeouts.

Still, Stanton doesn't know if the closer's job is his.

"Bobby, to this day, hasn't said anything — although he did one time in passing. I was dressing and late for the team bus and he yelled to the driver that he couldn't leave without our closer," Stanton said.

Asked about the incident, Cox just grinned.

Waite's round of 66 causes pause

Associated Press

POTOMAC, Md. — New Zealand native Grant Waite, who regained his PGA Tour card in January after a two-year absence, shot a bogey-free 66 Thursday to take a one-shot lead after the opening round of the Kemper Open.

Waite would more than double his career earnings of $134,689 with his first victory on the tour. His best finish was a tie for fourth at this year's Deposit Guaranty Golf Classic, which was held the same week as the Masters.

Tim Simpson, displaying the form he showed before a long bout with Lyme disease, shot a 4-under-par 67 in a round that featured four birdies and an eagle but was marred by bogeys on the final two holes.

Ed Fiori, Kelly Gibson, Jeff Maggert and David Toms also had 67s on the TPC at Avenel course. Eight players, including Wayne

■ Kemper Open

Levi and Tommy Armour, were at 68.

Sixteen players shot 69s, while Tom Kite and Howard Twitty were among a group of 19 at 70. Defending champion Bill Glasson shot a 74.

John Daly had a 40 on the front nine, finished at 77 and was disqualified for not signing his scorecard. Glenn Tait, a PGA Tour official, said Daly approached him later and explained he had simply forgotten to sign the card.

By then, however, it was too late. Daly finished in a second-place tie at the Kemper last year.

Waite, starting on the back nine, sank a 25-foot putt for a birdie on No. 11 and a 3-footer birdie putt on 14. He then birdied three holes on the front nine with putts that were between two and six feet.

Waite, who now lives in Salt Lake City, found himself way over his head during his first year on the tour in 1990.

"You get into a new town every week and it takes you a day just to find your hotel and the golf course," he said. "I was as intimidated as anyone else. But the longer you're out here, the more comfortable you get."

Waite, 28, spent the last two years playing golf in Australia, Asia and Canada, getting his game and mind in shape for a return to the tour.

"Two years down there helped me develop my game," he said. "I'm in a better position to play now, and my performance is showing that."

Simpson finished No. 8 on the money list in 1990, but his career began to deteriorate in the summer of 1991 after he was bitten by a tick and subsequently contracted Lyme disease. He finished No. 85 in 1991 and tumbled to 144 last year, making the cut in just 11 of 24 tournaments.

When the disease was at its worst, Simpson couldn't even lift a toothbrush. But a strong dose of antibotics helped control the disease, and now he is beginning to show his old consistency.

"I seemed to have turned the corner. I'm just thankful to be finally showing signs of coming back," he said. "It has been a rough two years for me."

He had an additional stroke of bad luck last month, when he fell backward six feet into a sandtrap and injured his back. He didn't arrive at the Kemper until Wednesday afternoon because he was receiving treatment from a chiropractor.

Fiori has missed the cut in nine of 15 tournaments this season and is No. 146 on the money list.

Shell readies deep-water project

■ Final decision won't come down until later this year, but money is budgeted in '93 spending plan.

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Shell Oil Co. hopes to begin development drilling on its deep-water Mars prospect off the eastern toe of Louisiana late this year and looks for the first barrels to flow in 1997.

A final decision on the project won't come down until later this year, a company spokesman said Wednesday, but Shell has budgeted money for the project in its 1993 capital spending plan.

Robert L. Howard, Shell vice president for domestic exploration, said Wednesday his company has learned a lot about deep-water development technology from its Auger project and believes Mars will prove "simpler and cheaper" than Auger.

Shell holds more lease acreage in the deep waters of the Gulf of Mexico than any other company and has been a world leader in developing the technology to produce oil and gas from such difficult environs.

Auger, located in Garden Banks Block 426, about 214 miles southwest of New Orleans, is under development now and is expected to begin producing in early 1994. Auger should produce 120 million cubic feet of gas and 45,000 barrels of oil a day.

Shell expects to spend $1.2 billion on Auger development — about $100 million under budget. Sitting in 2,861 feet of water, Auger is believed to contain a total of 220 million barrels of oil and its equivalent in natural gas.

Mars, located 130 miles southeast of New Orleans in Mississippi Canyon blocks 763 and 807, is one of Shell's biggest gulf discoveries.

Shell, the operator, owns 72 percent of the project. British Petroleum owns 28 percent.

Shell plans to use the same kind of platform on the first phase of Mars as it is using at Auger — a tension leg platform, which relies on steel pipe "legs" tethered to a plate on the ocean floor to keep the floating platform upright.

Phase one will tap an area with roughly the same reserves as Auger, Howard said.

The entire Mars discovery is believed to be much larger than Auger, however — on the order of three to four times larger or more, according to industry sources. Shell officials say it will be the end of the decade before they decide whether to go ahead with the second phase.

Phase two could employ either a second tension leg platform or a subsea completion system, where the wellhead sits on the ocean floor rather than on a platform.

Shell also expects to begin development on two smaller discoveries between now and 1995, the Tahoe discovery at Viosca Knoll Block 783 and the Popeye discovery at Green Canyon Block 116.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Crude oil futures prices rose Thursday in heavy trading around the expiration of the June delivery contract.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, light sweet crude for June delivery rose 39 cents to settle at $19.54 per barrel. The July contract rose 23 cents to $19.84.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 50 cents to $18 per barrel.

Traders said the June contract had fallen as low as $18.95 before rallying before the end of trading. Thomas Blakeslee, energy strategist at the commodity brokerage Brody, White & Co., said the contract topped $20 late in the day before falling off slightly.

But Thursday's gain was viewed as aberrational. The June contract had fallen in eight of the nine previous sessions, losing more than $1 per barrel, and there appeared to be no fundamental shift in sentiment.

Crude trading continues to be influenced by speculation the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will not strongly back production controls to support prices at a June 8 meeting in Geneva.

June natural gas rose 0.7 cent to $2.322 per 1,000 cubic feet, while July natural gas gained 0.8 cent to $2.196. Later contract months were lower.

Oryx Tower sold

A Nevada investment group led by Ralph Engelstad has purchased the Oryx Tower building located at ClayDesta Plaza. The Nevada group recently made an investment in other properties at ClayDesta, as well as purchasing the Briercroft Building in downtown Midland.

Dave Merker, vice president and general manager of the Nevada group, said, "We are pleased to make another investment in Midland's future." He said they are currently looking for a major tenant to relocate to the building. ClayDesta Corp. will continue to manage and lease the building.

Paul Latham, president of ClayDesta Corp., said he looks forward to continuing to work with the Nevada group and representing them in the Midland area.

Record stocks

NEW YORK — Computer-directed buy programs propelled the Dow Jones industrials on Thursday to its second consecutive all-time high.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 23.25 points to 3,523.28.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 13 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume totaled 279.55 million shares, down from 340.16 million on Wednesday.

Broad-market indexes were higher. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 2.37 to 432.29, posting its thirteenth all-time high for the year. The NYSE's composite index rose 1.55 to 248.41. The Nasdaq composite gained 6.99 to 697.42.

More laid-off workers file for benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of newly laid-off workers filing claims for jobless benefits rose by 7,000 last week, the government reported Thursday.

"We're drifting along aimlessly," said economist Robert G. Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "It's consistent with employment growth, but growth of a subdued nature."

First-time claims for unemployment insurance rose to 344,000 last week, from a revised 337,000 a week earlier, the Labor Department reported. It initially had estimated claims totaled 339,000 during the week ended May 8.

Much of the increase was attributed to a surge in claims in California at the beginning of a new benefit computing period, a Labor Department spokesperson said. Claimants often postpone filing when they anticipate benefits are about to go up.

Dederick said claims have been on a plateau in the mid-300,000s for much of this year following a period of aggressive hiring that accompanied strong economic growth late last year.

"But because of the latest slowdown, businesses have lost that aggressiveness," he added. "We're still paying the price for some of the production excesses that were generated in the first quarter."

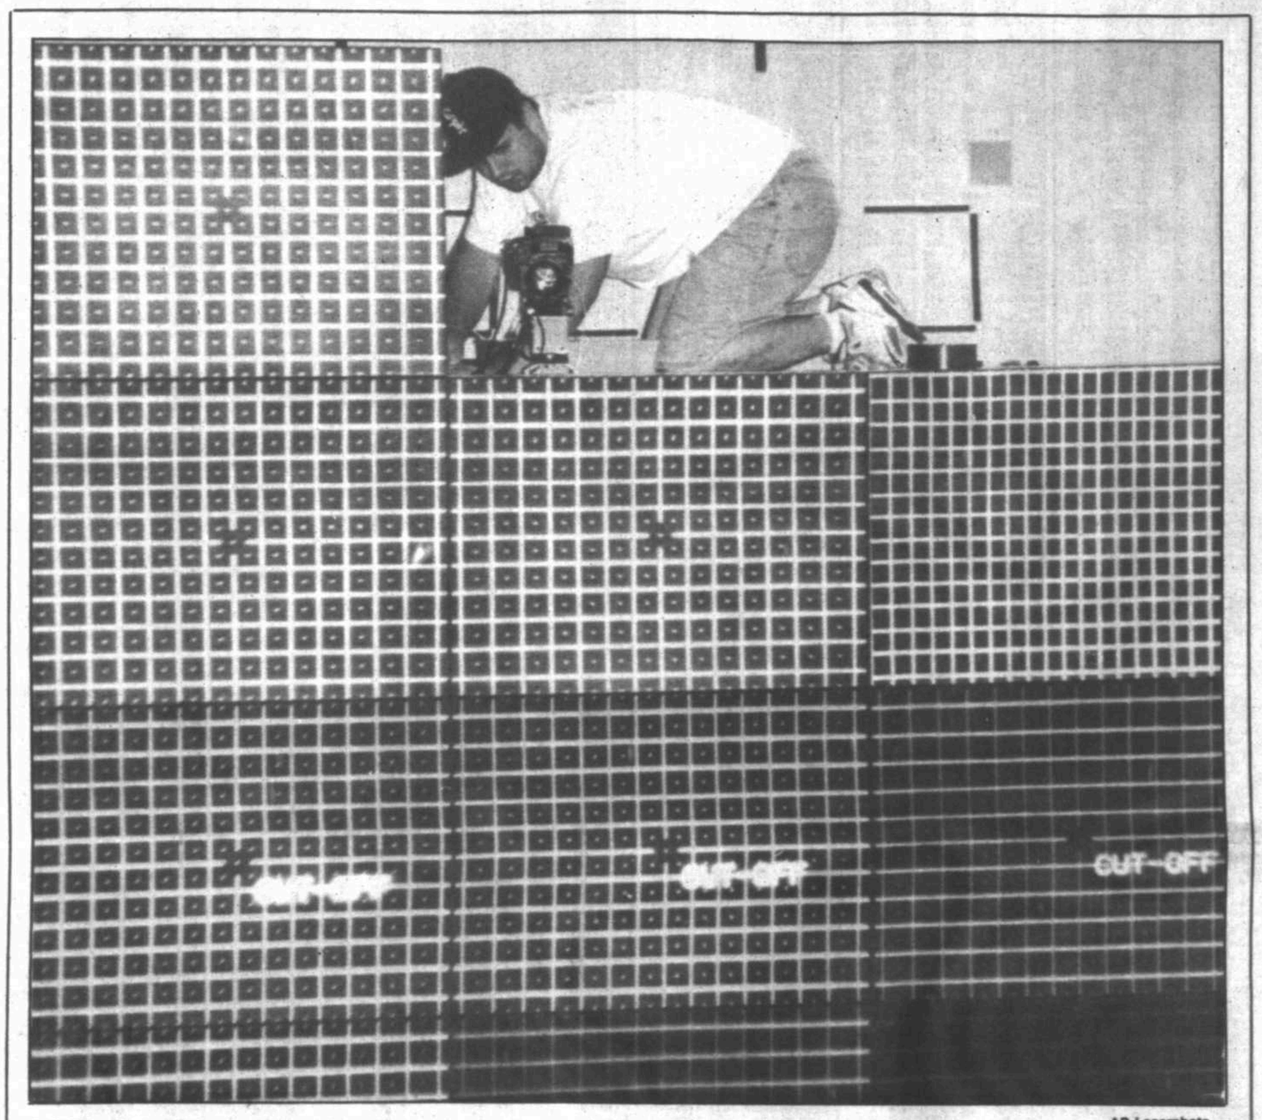

Cargill to build $8 million plant

N.Y. Times News Service

Cargill Inc. will use some of its expertise as a huge processor of agricultural products to enter the recycling business. It said on Wednesday that it would build an $8 million pilot plant in Savage, Minn., to make natural plastic, which can decompose or be recycled, from corn and potatoes.

The plastic is made from lactic acid, a byproduct of fermented sugars found in milk, sugar beets, corn and other grains. It can be recycled, put in a compost heap or incinerated.

Pat Gruber, a Cargill organic chemist and leader of the team that developed the plastic, said it could help manufacturers who faced different waste disposal requirements. "That's a versatility you can't get in other products," he said.

Computer makers warn FCC about HDTV standard

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Amid crucial negotiations over a standard for high-definition television, the nation's biggest computer companies warned the Federal Communications Commission on Thursday that they would develop a separate standard if the government endorsed the technology favored by broadcasters.

The warning came in a letter from the Computer Systems Policy Project, a group consisting of chief executives from 13 companies including Apple Computer, Digital Equipment and IBM.

The plea comes as developers of four rival high-definition TV systems face down-to-the-wire negotiations in Washington aimed at forming "a grand alliance" that would combined different features of each system.

A special advisory committee to the FCC has given these groups until Friday to reach an agreement. After that, they will be asked to submit separate systems for testing at a cost of $850,000 apiece.

In their letter Thursday, signed by Apple Chairman John Sculley, the computer industry pleaded for a television system that would be compatible with the needs of computer users.

It advocated a "progressive scanning" system, which, it said, eliminatesflickering and some other disruption on the screen.

The flickering, which is produced by the interlaced systems favored by broadcasters, is barely perceptible to a television viewer sitting at a distance from the set. But it produces eyestrain for people working at close range.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Mutual fund groups contain built-in diversity

By Bill Doyle

Q: I retired at age 53 and am 60 years old now. My pension is only $1,000 a month. I put all my money in "income" mutual funds with the same company. I have a total of $167,000 in six funds, in amounts ranging from $3,000 to $58,000.

Doyle

I am not concerned about the values of my fund holdings changing. I am more interested in receiving income, which I need to live on.

Did I do the right thing? Is it OK to have all my eggs in one basket? Or should I spread my investments among different mutual fund organizations?

A: Relax. You are doing fine. The list of funds in your letter shows you chose your investments wisely. I suspect you had assistance picking those six funds. If you did it on your own, you deserve an extra pat on the back.

Spreading your investments among various mutual fund organizations would reduce your risk. But your exposure to risk is relatively low now. Each of your six funds is a separate corporation. And each holds many different securities as investments. That gives you more than adequate diversification.

Besides, there is a lot to be said in favor of keeping all your investments at one mutual fund sponsoring organization. Assuming the organization is well-run, as yours is, the paperwork it sends to shareholders makes recordkeeping and tax calculations easy.

People who have investments at many different places sometimes go bonkers keeping track of things and figuring out what taxes they owe.

Q: I have most of my money in certificates of deposit. In the past, CDs have been excellent by providing good interest and no risk to me.

Some of the CDs are coming due and I will want to invest that money. But new CDs pay very low interest. Would you recommend mutual funds for me?

I would like something with no risk, but with a better return than new CDs are now paying.

A: We all would. But there is no such investment available. When you move away from the rock-solid safety of CDs and U.S. Treasury securities, you take on risk. That's basic.

Here's the rough rule of thumb: The higher the risk, the greater the potential return.

If you want no risk whatsoever, stick with CDs. But if you will accept some risk, income mutual funds would be good investment choices. Such funds aim to provide high dividends. Just be aware that the values of fund shares can fall from time to time.

Q: I own shares of a tax-free mutual fund and am confused by the significance of its falling yield and rising price. In the past eight months, the yield has dropped from 6 percent to 4.84 percent, while its price per share has risen from $11.01 to $11.77.

If this continues, wouldn't I be better off with a taxable investment?

A: As always, that depends on your federal income tax bracket. If you are in the 15 percent bracket, tax-free income provides no advantage. If you are in a 28 percent or higher bracket, that fund is right for you.

Mutual funds such as yours hold municipal bonds, which pay interest exempt from federal income tax. Your fund collects that interest and, after deducting its operating expenses, pays tax-free dividends to fund shareholders.

That fund's dividend yield is down because interest rates in general — including taxable interest — are down. But the 76-cent per share gain in value over eight months' time far and away offset that — and greatly increased the value of your investment.

You should be jumping with joy.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:

- You may request a quote, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.

- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, MAY 21, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Career advancement, financial stability and family togetherness are top priorities. Do not be surprised if you are deeply involved in politics by late summer. You are determined to make a contribution to your community! Lasting romance could develop from a brief encomter next December. Set a good example for your children by finishing what you start. A dream home or long-awaited trip is possible in early 1994.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Raymond Burr, novelist Harold Robbins, actor Mr. T, singer Leo Sayer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid taking too much for granted today. Other people may not keep their promises. Put your original ideas into practice. Romance will move in a new direction if you are more assertive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Discuss financial arrangements with your mate or partner. A last-minute change works to your advantage. Avoid acting on impulse — it could prove expensive. Creative work awaits you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Conventional methods work best today. A conservative person pays you a meaningful compliment. Avoid getting into petty arguments — you will probably lose. Emphasize flexibility this afternoon.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An artistic project affords you a feeling of accomplishment. Give free rein to your imagination. Your regular work is your best source of income. Assume more responsibility.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can wind up an important business transaction today. Cooperation from people at a distance could be the key to sudden success. Consult mate before making plans for family recreation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day for romance, finance and innovative ideas. A loved one may finally say the words you have long waited to hear. Do not be afraid to act quickly. Say "yes."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Tender loving care may be needed to keep a relationship's foundation from cracking. Once a misunderstanding has been patched up, forgive and forget. Emphasize shared interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Alliances can bend, even break under the strain of cross purposes. Look for illumination in today's events. An ultimatum will not convince a reluctant partner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Valuable resources, funds or agreements await you behind closed doors. You are able to convince influential people to rally behind you. Be discreet about romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your career achievements have placed you in a position to pick a real plum. The future looks bright for those willing to take the lead. Learn the difference between decisive and impulsive action.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Working independently now will help you focus on the need for a healthy partnership and stronger you. Consider all the angles before making a financial decision.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pool skills, resources and ideas to reap maximum rewards. Welcoming new job responsibilities will fuel career progress. Give credit where it is due.

Opening lead: King of ♡ Retaining your poise in the face of a bad break is crucial at the bridge table, as it is in life. There is often a way to recover after an unexpected setback.

The auction is worth studying. With a good no-trump opening and all prime cards, North cue-bid four clubs rather than meekly raise to four spades. When South cooperated in the slam effort by cue-bidding clubs in turn, North went straight to slam.

After the king of hearts lead, declarer was somewhat disappointed that a reasonable grand slam had been missed, but everything quickly changed. Declarer cashed the queen and ace of spades to discover the enemy had a sure trick in that suit and there was still the matter of the fourth club to handle.

The obvious danger was that East might ruff the second or third round of clubs and lead another trump, removing the last trump from the table and stranding declarer with a club loser. However, a careful avoidance play kept the defenders at bay.

Declarer led a club to the ace and returned the suit. Foresight was rewarded when East, who could not ruff profitably, discarded a diamond on this trick. Declarer won with the king, crossed to the king of diamonds and led another club. Again, it would not have helped East to ruff, so the defender discarded another diamond. The queen won and the remaining club was ruffed with the board's last trump. Whether East overruffed or not, a trump was all the defense could muster.

Add Captain Kangaroo to list of 'Barney and Friends' critics

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Add Captain Kangaroo to the list of critics of the children's television show "Barney and Friends."

Bob Keeshan, 65, who created "Captain Kangaroo" in 1955 and continues to play the role in videos and public appearances, said the popular PBS show featuring a dancing purple dinosaur could use more bite.

He called it gentle but boring.

"It has to get away from what we used to call 'a program in a telephone booth,'" Keeshan said. "You're confined. You can't move. There's no room to stretch. They have to break out and get away from that and build more characters and build other aspects to the show."

As host of CBS' "Captain Kangaroo," the six-time Emmy winner wore a captain's uniform and a sugar-bowl haircut. It was the longest running children's television show when it left the air after 29 years.

Work has begun on translating the old shows into German, French and Spanish "to introduce the Captain to Europe," Keeshan said Wednesday during a visit to Morgantown to dedicate a West Virginia University child development center.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music singer Tanya Tucker has canceled three performances because of exhaustion.

Tucker

She canceled appearances Wednesday night in Dallas, Saturday in Nashville, Ind., and Sunday in Salem, Ohio, on the advice of her doctor.

"As a result of her hectic schedule, Tanya is physically exhausted and suffering from sleep deprivation," said her father, Beau.

Tucker, 34, voted female vocalist of the year in 1991 by the Country Music Association, is known for hits such as "Delta Dawn" and "Strong Enough to Bend."

DUBLIN, Ireland — Former hostage Brian Keenan has married his physiotherapist in a secret ceremony in Dublin, an official at the Registrar of Marriages said Thursday.

Keenan, 42, and Audrey Doyle, 29, were married Wednesday afternoon in a civil ceremony at the central Dublin registry office, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

News of the wedding broke as reporters and photographers were gathered at a Roman Catholic church in the village of Kilternan, 10 miles from Dublin, where the couple had been due to marry on Thursday.

Keenan, born in Belfast, went to Lebanon to teach at the American University of Beirut. He was kidnapped by Muslim extremists April 11, 1986, four months after he arrived. He met Miss Doyle when she treated him after his release in August 1990.

News reports said the couple celebrated at a hotel near Dublin after the ceremony with relatives and friends, including former hostage John McCarthy and his girlfriend, Jill Morrell.

Keenan was held much of the time with McCarthy and Terry Anderson, formerly the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

LAS VEGAS — The reigning Miss America is finding it hard to talk about sex.

Leanza Cornett, who has made AIDS awareness her top priority, said some people still expect Miss America to be a woman who stands in grocey stores signing autographs.

"They don't want to hear Miss America say the word 'sex,'" she said during a stop Tuesday at a center for children who are infected with the AIDS virus.

Ms. Cornett, 21, of Jacksonville, Fla., said she uses the "s" word — and more — in what she describes as very candid discussions with high school students about safer sex and AIDS prevention.

Wearing a red AIDS awareness ribbon on her dress, Ms. Cornett said she tries to focus discussions on pediatric AIDS as she has traveled the country since being named Miss America in September.

COLUMBIA, S.C. — William Price Fox, author of the novels "Moonshine Light, Moonshine Bright," and "Dixiana Moon," has filed for bankruptcy protection.

Fox, writer-in-residence at the University of South Carolina, cited debts totaling $57,800 to 12 creditors and claimed assets of $9,900.

Among the creditors are the Internal Revenue Service, several credit companies and bank card issuers.

LOS ANGELES — Shock jock Howard Stern can scratch Rapper Young M.C. off his guest list.

"I'm never going to do his show again," said Young M.C., a frequent guest on Stern's popular radio show the past four years.

"He was really cool at first, but now he's walking all over everyone," the 26-year-old rapper whose real name is Marvin Young said in an interview published Thursday in the Los Angeles Daily News.

"He's the kid that got picked on in school, and he's just striking out at everybody," Young said. "It's unfortunate because a lot of us weren't treated well in school and we're doing OK."

Advisors outline plan to revamp medical lawsuits

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Clinton's advisers outlined a proposal Thursday for sweeping change in the handling of medical malpractice lawsuits under which individual doctors would be relieved of legal responsibility for negligence.

Instead of suing their doctors, injured patients would sue insurance companies and health maintenance organizations that employ the doctors.

Dr. Robert Berenson, a senior member of the staff of Clinton's Task Force on National Health Care Reform, said the proposal was based on the idea of "enterprise liability." Corporate enterprises — networks of doctors, hospitals and insurance companies — would be legally responsible for injuries caused by a doctor's negligence, he said.

Under this approach, Berenson said: "Settlements would occur many years earlier in many cases. Patients would get the compensation they need, would get their rehabilitation and their lost wages, instead of having the sort of lottery that now takes five or 10 years."

Administration officials would make health plans responsible for monitoring the quality of care delivered by doctors, on the theory that managers of a health plan would then crack down on doctors delivering substandard care. Health plans would set guidelines, and doctors following the guidelines would be presumed to practice good medicine.

Federal officials say the guidelines may also discourage doctors from performing unneeded tests and procedures. Moreover, they say, the proposal could encourage health plans to settle meritorious claims, through informal hearings and other alternatives to litigation.

Doctors have long sought changes in the handling of malpractice cases, and the White House apparently hoped to win their support. But doctors' groups complained Thursday that the plan would lead to intrusive supervision of their care by insurance companies and other corporate enterprises.

The administration contends that its proposal can reduce litigation costs, but does not envision huge savings. It does say the proposal can benefit consumers by giving health plans strong incentives to monitor and improve the quality of care.

Clinton will also ask Congress to establish certain legal standards and uniform procedures for the handling of malpractice cases, administration officials said. The handling of such claims is now governed mainly by state law and, as a result, varies widely from state to state.

Berenson, the head of a committee working on malpractice, and Kathleen Hastings, a member of the committee, gave details of the administration's thinking at separate conferences Thursday.

Describing the proposal, Berenson said: "A health plan would be liable for the negligent acts of its contracted or employed practitioners and providers. The individual physician would not be personally liable for negligence, but rather the health plan would be."

President Clinton originally intended to send his health plan to Congress by May 3, but has fallen behind schedule, and the White House now says he will not unveil it before mid-June. Congress is sure to alter it, but lawmakers express confidence that they will pass legislation by the end of next year to remake the nation's health-care system.

Clinton has not made final decisions about the details of his health plan. But Berenson's decision to speak publicly about the idea of enterprise liability suggests that it has already cleared many hurdles and is likely to be included, in some form, in the president's package.

Berenson said he still favored the proposal despite opposition by doctors and insurance companies. Insurers dislike the proposal because they expect to form and operate many of the new health-care networks and they would be defendants in many malpractice lawsuits.

Doctors and insurers fear that the number of lawsuits will rise because consumers will perceive big insurance companies as having deep pockets.

Kirk B. Johnson, senior vice president and general counsel of the American Medical Association, said that the White House was initially surprised at the doctors' opposition but that it was going full steam ahead with the proposal.

Doctors fear "there will be a very significant loss of physician autonomy" as corporate enterprises supervise the practice of medicine in minute detail, he said.

Berenson said the corporate enterprise, or the health plan, could establish and enforce guidelines for its doctors, so "there will be much more consistent oversight of practitioner activities."

Insurers do not relish such a role. "It gets us involved in the practice of medicine," said James W. McLane, chief executive of Aetna health plans, a unit of Aetna Life & Casualty. "It doesn't do anything but shift responsibility for malpractice from doctors and hospitals to another entity."

Consumer groups reacted cautiously, expressing neither strong support nor vehement opposition. They do not see the proposal as a big improvement or setback for consumers.

Linda A. Lipsen, chief lobbyist for Consumers Union, said the proposal for enterprise liability was better than proposals that would limit payments to patients injured at the hands of doctors.

Clinton's haircut delays two flights

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Clinton's haircut aboard Air Force One delayed a couple of inbound flights at Los Angeles International Airport and shoved Beverly Hills hairdresser Cristophe into the limelight.

Cristophe spent about 45 minutes cutting Clinton's hair Tuesday, while the plane sat on a tarmac in Los Angeles.

Cristophe, whose clients include Tom and Roseanne Arnold, Dustin Hoffman and Betty Ford, has known the Clintons since before the presidential campaign, said Cristophe publicist, Paulette Kam.

During the campaign, Cristophe tended to first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton's locks, transforming her with a new hairdo. But last weekend, Mrs. Clinton sent Washington abuzz with a $275 new do from New York's Frederic Fekkai.

Tuesday's presidential trim by Cristophe delayed two incoming commuter flights for about 20 minutes, said Diane Reesman, spokeswoman for the city Department of Airports.

Otherwise, operations weren't disrupted until Air Force One took off about 45 minutes after Clinton boarded the plane, forcing air controllers to divert traffic to another part of the airport.

"It was not a problem at all. These kinds of things cause virtually no interruption in operations," Reesman said. "We get VIPs here all the time."

Kam said the stylist was overwhelmed by the media attention. Another aide, Darren Engel, said the stylist was tending to a customer at his Beverly Hills salon and didn't want to talk.

"He's a modest, down-to-earth guy," she said. "All he did was cut somebody's hair. He cut the president's hair."

At a news conference Thursday in Washington, reporters badgered White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos about whether haircuts by Cristophe fit Clinton's image.

"I think he does have the right to choose who he wants to cut his hair," the spokesman said.

Stephanopoulos said the Clintons have a personal services contract with Cristophe that they, not the taxpayers, pay for. He said he did not know how much it was worth.

"It covers things like makeup and hair and they just — they pay for it," he said. "It's for the whole family."

One reporter asked if the Air Force One haircut was "a little foolish and indulgent?"

"I think it's a common practice," the spokesman said, explaining that President Bush would "quite often" sleep overnight on Air Force One. Reminded that Bush spent the night only once, Stephanopoulos said, "At least once ... that's just one point."

REMEMBER THE LIVES THAT WERE GIVEN FOR OUR FREEDOM

When you think of your freedom, remember the way
It was given to you to enjoy every day.
It has never been free, but exacted the price
Of our heroes who made the supreme sacrifice.
As our history shows us, it's just common sense
To be always alert and maintain our defense,
Against any aggressor who seeks our defeat,
So the concept of war will become obsolete,
But until we abolish the horror of war,
Let's remember the deeds of the ones gone before,
And then pray that our freedom will always remain,
So the lives they have given will not be in vain.
-- Gloria Nowak

DELIVERY

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

Often Asked ????

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth.

Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have F/T jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly!

Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers'papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet waqnt to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. So. ie collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

HIGH SKY AREA
LOOKING FOR EXTRA INCOME OR A STEADY PART TIME JOB..... Does A Weekly and Monthly Income Sound Appealing?

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its "special allowance" routes. This route receives a regular income from rack sales, $250 per month gas allowance in addition to the regular monthly route profits.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity require a P/T, 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work which allows for time to go to your "regular job".

Newspaper distributorships can provide great supplemental income for housewives and/or mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".
