

Phone Bill Favored By Police

AUSTIN (AP) — Three law enforcement officers told a House panel today they need a law that would prevent "hostage-takers" from talking by telephone to anyone but police.

"Our whole technique goes down the drain" when people holding hostages can talk freely on the phone, said Robert Cain, a Houston detective who negotiates in hostage situations.

The House Committee on State Affairs referred the bill to subcommittee. The legislation is sponsored by Rep. Tony Polumbo, D-Houston, who wants police to have the authority to tell the phone company to cut service to a building where hostages are being held or an armed criminal is barricaded.

The phone company would be instructed to set up a private line on which the criminal could talk only with police.

Cain said it's hard to negotiate by phone when a hostage-holder is fielding calls from reporters, family, friends and "cranks."

"For this work we must have the situation controlled," Cain said.

He recalled a 1980 incident in which a woman, who was prepared to surrender, became confused and "very upset by people telling her to do a lot of crazy things."

Dr. Greg Riede, a psychologist for the Houston Police Department, said, "Unless we have control, there is no reason to negotiate."

If a hostage-holder decides to take the phone off the hook, "We are reduced to yelling through the door," he said.

Many criminals want to make public statements, Riede said. Police could allow them to make such statements in return for freeing hostages, he said. However, "what we could have traded for the hostages is gone" because reporters call and allow the suspects to make statements, Riede said.

There were no witnesses against the bill, but John Duncan of the American Civil Liberties Union told The Associated Press the measure is "a back door form of wiretapping."

Duncan said in a telephone interview there is "absolutely too much discretion in it" because it allows police to act without a judge's permission.

Speaker Bill Clayton says the House will dig into a major controversy this week, taking up a bill denying unemployment compensation for people who quit their jobs or are fired for misconduct.

He said he expects the Senate-passed measure — which Gov. Bill Clements has designated emergency legislation — to be on Wednesday's or Thursday's calendar.

CALLS FOR SUMMIT — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev calls for a summit meeting with President Reagan during his address to the 26th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party today in Moscow. Brezhnev Proposes Talks With Reagan

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev made a major overture to the new U.S. administration today, calling for a summit meeting with President Reagan and a resumption of U.S.-Soviet negotiations to limit nuclear arms. But he also denounced "bellicose calls" from Washington.

He also proposed that the two superpowers limit their submarine fleets and the deployment of submarine missiles. And for the first time he said that the Soviet Union would discuss Afghanistan with the United States, although only as part of talks about the demilitarization of the Persian Gulf region.

Opening the 26th congress of the Soviet Communist Party, the 74-year-old chief of the party said in a keynote address that the state of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union "and the sharpness of world problems demanding resolution... dictate the necessity of a dialogue on all levels, an active one."

"Experience shows that the decisive element here is meetings on the highest level," he added. "That was true yesterday and remains true today."

Although he offered negotiations, Brezhnev declared that since Reagan became president "candidly bellicose calls and statements have resounded from Washington, specially designed, as it were, to poison the atmosphere of relations between our countries."

According to a Soviet journalist, Brezhnev delivered only a summary of the speech. It apparently was a concession to his age and the state of his health. Soviet television carried about six minutes of the address live, then switched to a studio announcer reading the contents. Nearly five hours later, live coverage resumed and Brezhnev was shown delivering the final few pages.

No explanation was offered for the unusual procedure and Western reporters were not allowed to attend the meeting.

Referring to SALT-2, the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty which the U.S. Senate refused to consider after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and which Reagan says favors the Soviet Union, Brezhnev declared:

"For our part, we are prepared to continue the relevant negotiations with the United States without delay, preserving all the positive elements that have so far been achieved in this area. It goes without saying that negotiations can be conducted only on the basis of equality and equal security."

Shots Erupt In Spanish Parliament

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Police and paramilitary civil guards burst into the Spanish parliament today as it voted on a new prime minister, shouting "everyone on the ground" and opened fire.

Minutes before the shots rang out, one policeman held a pistol to the head of parliament President Landalino Laviala, a member of the government party.

It was not immediately clear whether he was hit.

As 350 deputies threw themselves to the ground, the national radio station interrupted programming and broadcast music.

Telephone connections with the Congress of Deputies, the lower house of parliament, were cut.

The last words heard on the radio station SER were: "The police are pointing their pistols at the prime minister (Dr. Adolfo Suarez). Now they are pointing at the journalists too."

The Spanish news agency EFE said a man wearing a military uniform began firing, while shouting "Hit the ground."

The men burst in as the 81st vote was cast in an effort to elect Deputy Prime Minister Leopoldo Cavo Sotelo as premier to succeed Suarez and end a three-week government crisis.

Over the government radio, Spaniards heard a voice cry: "On the ground, on the ground, on the ground. I'll kill you."

The same voice continued, apparently to a news photographer, "Don't focus on me or I'll kill you."

In the background, an unidentified man was heard to say, "Nothing's happening, nothing's happening at all."

Police, meanwhile, reported no clues to the whereabouts of the honorary consuls or their kidnappers despite a massive hunt in both the French and Spanish Basque country and the questioning of dozens of suspected separatists.

The kidnappers held the families of the men incommunicado Thursday night after the abductions, giving them a nine-hour start on the police.

"They probably had the consuls safely hidden before we even knew they were kidnapped," said one police official.

Another police official in Madrid said it was believed the kidnappers were prepared to hold their captives indefinitely.

The Basque separatist organization ETA earlier demanded the release from prison of 310 of its members, the firing of "fascists" from the police force and a local referendum voters on whether a nuclear power plant under construction near Bilbao, capital of one of the Basque provinces, should be allowed to operate. High-ranking officials in Madrid said the government would not negotiate with the terrorists, and a telephone caller claiming to represent ETA said it believed Cavo Sotelo would adhere to this hard line.

The caller threatened more violence, saying ETA guerrillas would use their weapons "more adequately."

Madrid papers reported that 30 foreign embassies pulled their consular representatives out of the Basque region, but British and French spokesmen said their consuls had not been withdrawn. The U.S. Embassy said the American consul in Bilbao, Kenneth Thompson, was on vacation.

Two teams of kidnapers took Hermann Korsatko, the honorary Austrian consul, and Antonio Alfaro Fernandez, El Salvador's representative, from their homes in Bilbao Thursday night while a third team made off with Gabriel Birrum, Uruguay's representative, from his home in Pamplona. Alfaro and Birrum are Spaniards while Korsatko has dual Austrian and Spanish nationality.

Deputy Plan Postponed By County

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

County commissioners today postponed taking any action on a request from Sheriff D. L. "Sonny" Keesee to authorize the formation of a reserve deputy force.

Commissioners appeared in favor of the proposal to utilize 25 volunteer deputies. However, they requested the sheriff's department to provide them a written report on plans for the volunteer force.

According to Commissioner Alton Brazell, the commissioners' court's major concern is the county's liability for volunteer deputies.

Assistant District Attorney Yvonne Faulks noted that the county would be liable for the actions of a volunteer deputy anytime he was on duty. The county has the same type of liability for all deputy sheriffs, she explained.

The county would not be liable, however, for injuries to the volunteer deputy or any damages to his personal property, Mrs. Faulks said.

Brazell emphasized that Keesee's report to commissioners should spell out all duties the volunteers would be expected to perform.

"I think it's a good idea, but we need it all down on paper for our insurance company," Brazell said. He also cited the need to get a cost estimate on liability coverage for the volunteers from the county's insurance company.

Don Stapleton, chief administrator in the sheriff's department, noted that Keesee already has received numerous inquiries from local residents interested in

Braniff Reports Huge 1980 Loss

GRAPEVINE (UPI) — Braniff International today reported a loss of more than $128 million, the largest annual loss in its 52-year history, and its president called 1980 the worst year for the airline industry in the United States and perhaps the world.

A Braniff spokesman said the loss was the greatest since Braniff began flights on June 20, 1928. He said, however, other airlines have experienced more severe financial losses.

Braniff said its 1980 net loss was $128,511,000 — equal to $6.57 per share — which included a writeoff of almost $26 million in "pre-operating expense and costs associated with discounted routes."

In 1979, Braniff's net loss was $44,330,000 — equal to $2.21 per share.

"The year 1980 will probably be remembered as the worst for the airline industry in the U.S. and possibly in the world as well," said John J. Casey, who became chairman and president of Braniff on Jan. 7, replacing Harding Lawrence, who was forced to resign.

"The real cause of those huge losses was Harding Lawrence," an airline industry source told UPI. "Lawrence expanded too rapidly and then didn't cut back fast enough to prevent disaster. Lawrence wanted to build an around-the-world airline before he retired, but instead he nearly ruined a good airline before the lenders got rid of him."

In 1978, with deregulation of the industry, Braniff made unprecedented expansion under Lawrence's leadership and with the enthusiastic support of most of the company's management team. It originated new service to 16 cities in one day, an airline industry record that still stands.

But then the crunch came. Jet fuel prices doubled and Braniff had to buy some fuel on the even more expensive "spot" market to serve the new routes.

Major Banks Reduce Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — The prime lending rate at major banks dipped as low as 18.5 percent today for the first time since Dec. 5, although most major banks kept the key rate at 19 percent or higher.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third-largest commercial bank, today cut its prime lending rate to 19 percent from 19.5 percent, and was quickly followed by No. 4 Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and No. 6 Chemical Bank. But they failed to match the 18.5 percent prime rate set by No. 7 Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.

Ameritrust Co. in Cleveland, however, the nation's 40th largest bank, today matched Continental Illinois, reducing its prime rate to 18.5 percent from 19.5 percent.

And many of the nation's large banks, including No. 1 Bank of America and No. 2 Citibank, continued to keep their prime rates at 19.5 percent.

Continental Illinois, based in Chicago, undercut the rest of the banking industry Friday, announcing it was reducing its prime rate a full percentage point to 18.5 percent, effective today. Among other banks at 19 percent are No. 5 Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., which led the move on Feb. 9, and No. 9 First National Bank of Chicago.

Continental Illinois' move came after the Federal Reserve Board released its weekly data on the nation's money supply, which showed commercial and industrial loans at the nation's banks fell $1.186 billion in the week ended Feb. 11.

Roger Anderson, chairman of Continental Illinois, noted the continued weakness in bank loan demand in announcing the cut in the bank's prime rate.

The prime rate is what banks charge on loans to their best-risk corporate customers. Smaller businesses generally pay higher interest for their bank loans.

The prime does not apply to consumer loans. Rates on those loans are limited by law in most states and vary widely. But the prime is closely watched because it often signals the direction of all kinds of interest rates, including consumer-loan rates.

NAGGING WIFE SPOILS RIDE

Man Pays Cabbie $520 For Trip To Chicago

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — A man who decided to take a taxi cab to Chicago because his car broke down and he missed a bus finally arrived at his destination, but he had to pay $520 and listen to his wife gripe all the way.

Tracy Sandifer, who drives a taxi for the Yellow Cab company, said he agreed to drive the couple from Kansas City to Chicago for $520. Train tickets would have been only $115. But the man was in a hurry.

"He didn't want to wait for the next bus," Sandifer said. "He didn't want to fly. His car had broken down on the way here. I don't know why he did it."

Sandifer says he didn't know his passengers' names because the man was being lambasted by his wife for the entire trip, made on Valentine's Day.

"She was working on him all the way," the cabbie said. "She raised hell every inch of the way to Chicago. She said she was going to leave him. She said she didn't want to spend any more time with a guy who would spend $520 on a cab."

Garwood Named In Four Grand Jury Indictments

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI) — An Onslow County grand jury today returned four felony indictments against convicted collaborator Robert R. Garwood, accusing him of sexual misconduct involving a 7-year-old girl.

The indictments accuse Garwood of taking indecent liberties with a minor, first-degree sex offense, attempted first-degree sex offense and attempted first-degree rape.

The first-degree sex charge carries a possible life prison term on conviction. One of the definitions of a first-degree sex charge involves sexual misconduct against a person under 12 years of age committed by a person at least four years older than the victim.

Garwood was arrested in September in connection with the alleged incident.

Garwood, a Marine private convicted earlier this month of betraying his country in Vietnam, is on leave while the Camp Lejeune commanding general reviews his case.

Maj. John Schmidt, spokesman for Camp Lejeune, said Garwood went on "appellant leave" late Friday. Gar-wood's lawyers said last week he would undergo psychiatric treatment at an undisclosed civilian hospital in Virginia.

Garwood, 34, of Adams, Ind., was convicted of collaboration with the enemy and striking an American POW. He was sentenced to reduction in rank to private and a dishonorable discharge.

(Marine Capt. Teresa Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Quentin Wright of 2117 52nd St. and a graduate of the Texas Tech University School of Law, served as assistant prosecutor during Garwood's court-martial — the first jury trial of a Vietnam-era prisoner of war.)

Garwood's lawyers maintained throughout the court martial he was driven insane by Viet Cong torture and was not responsible for his actions in Vietnam. Garwood, who did not testify, was described as a very sick man who will bear emotional scars of his 14 years in Vietnam for the remainder of his life.

His conviction and sentence are being reviewed by Maj. Gen. David Barker, who has the option of accepting the jury's recommendations or reducing Garwood's sentence. He cannot make it harsher.

Garwood's lawyers have said they will appeal the conviction to the U.S. Military Court of Appeals.

Phillips Undergo Drug Treatment

NEW YORK (AP)—Actress Mackenzie Phillips, 21, and her musician father, John Phillips, are undergoing treatment for drug addiction together after squandering their fortunes, their careers and nearly their lives on heroin and cocaine, the two say.

Fired last year from her starring role on TV's "One Day At A Time," Miss Phillips said in an interview in this week's People magazine that she had "always wanted to be like my father ... even though he was a junkie."

"I wanted the weird life, and I went for it, and I got it," she said.

Phillips, founder of the 1960s rock group the Mamas and Papas, which recorded hits such as "Monday, Monday," said he spent more than $1 million a year supporting his and his third wife Genevieve's heroin and cocaine addictions.

"I know Mackenzie felt she would never be able to live again without cocaine," Phillips said. "And I felt there was no life for me after heroin."

Phillips and his wife checked into the drug rehabilitation program at Fair Oaks hospital in Summit, N.J. in September and were joined two months later by Mackenzie, who weighed but 90 pounds at 5-foot-7 and had nearly died twice from cocaine overdoses.

Program director Dr. Mark Gold says the Phillips family is near recovery under a regimen of psychiatric counseling, rigorous physical exercise, diet control and nonaddictive withdrawal drugs.

Doctors Trying To Save Runner

NEW WESTMINSTER, British Columbia (AP)—Terry Fox, a 22-year-old amputee who tried to run across Canada, is "resting comfortably" as doctors make what they call a last-ditch effort to save the bone cancer victim.

"He spent a fairly good night and is now resting comfortably," a spokeswoman for Royal Columbian Hospital said Sunday. Fox was admitted Saturday after an adverse reaction to an anti-cancer agent.

Fox has vowed to resume the run, although doctors give him only a 10 percent chance of surviving until Christmas.

Europe Listens To Country Singers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—If they weren't before, 5 million listeners in Europe are now familiar with the likes of Crystal Gale, Porter Wagoner and Johnny Paycheck.

With some help from 1.3-million watt Radio Luxembourg, a special concert here Saturday night was beamed to Europe and parts of Africa.

Listeners on the other end heard music styles ranging from the hard-core country of Paycheck to the light country-blues sounds of Miss Gayle, younger sister of country music superstar Loretta Lynn.

Miss Gayle and Paycheck told the audience they plan European visits this spring.

And Gov. Lamar Alexander, who told the audience, "We're making broadcast history," invited the foreign listeners to visit Tennessee.

"It's as cheap to come here as it is to travel around Europe," he said. "Everybody has heard about Nashville. We'd love to share our country music. We're awfully proud of it."

Litter-Pickers Find $14,000

WILSONVILLE, Ore. (AP)—Three men who were trying to earn spare change by searching roadside litter for returnable cans ended up going after paper instead. It was worth more.

The three Portland men, who asked police to withhold their names, found $14,000 in cash along Interstate 5 south of Wilsonville on Friday.

After the men brought the money to police, officers returned with them to the same spot on Saturday and found even more money.

The paper they found was worth some 300,000 cans and bottles at the going deposit rate.

Police said they would consult the Clackamas County district attorney's office Monday about the ownership of the money.

Atlanta Task Force Begins Work

ATLANTA (AP)—The head of a new task force announced by Vice President George Bush was meeting with city officials today to begin a renewed federal effort to help solve the deaths or disappearances of 20 black children.

The vice president didn't spell out the role to be played by the task force, but he announced during the weekend that it "will not impinge on the police investigation" into the 18 slayings and two disappearances which began 19 months ago.

"Our interest is in getting the task done and not being hindered by bureaucratic processes and a lot of people floating around," said Charles Rinkevich of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, who leads the new task force.

Further information will be announced this week on the role of the task force, which will combine support services from the departments of Justice, Health and Human Services and Education, Bush said.

Rinkevich said he would meet today with Mayor Maynard Jackson and Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown "to begin the process of understanding what the city needs."

Previously, the only federal involvement in the cases was the assignment of FBI agents to assist a special police task force conducting an investigation of the cases.

The city has asked for $1.5 million in federal aid in the investigation. Officials say the investigation has cost nearly $1 million so far, with the bill mounting by more than $200,000 a month.

On Sunday, state crime laboratory officials checked a car in which a suicide victim was found to determine whether there was any link to the slayings of the children.

Police initially said the victim, who was found Saturday, resembled a composite drawing of a man being sought by DeKalb County police as a possible witness in the slaying of 11-year-old Patrick Baltazar.

But DeKalb Public Safety Director Dick Hand said later that police had determined there was no connection between the suicide victim and the man depicted in the composite drawing.

Medical examiners said the victim, a young Atlanta man, died of carbon monoxide poisoning after he ran a hose from the car's exhaust into a window of the car.

Baltazar and another of the 18 victims — 11-year-old Jeffrey Lamar Mathis — were buried Saturday as some 250 volunteers unsuccessfully searched for clues in an area south of the city where Mathis' body was found.

Congressional Study Criticizes Government Silver Dollar Sale

WASHINGTON (AP)—A government sale of nearly a million century-old silver dollars, replete with misplaced orders, changing prices and the approval of bad checks, "left a legacy of cynicism, disappointment and mistrust," a congressional study says.

Rep. Chairman Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House Banking subcommittee that investigated the sale, called the offering "one of the most horrifying examples of government mismanagement I have seen in my 16 years in Congress."

The General Service Administration made "critical errors" at nearly every turn, he said.

The subcommittee report, released Sunday, criticized GSA for failing to fill all the orders, changing announced prices, putting out misleading press releases and sending coins and refunds worth more than $1 million in exchange for bad checks.

At one point, the study said, 3,865 orders were lost for a month.

Some people purchased 35 coins, while others were denied one, according to the report.

Roy Markon, the GSA official who handled the sale, said problems resulted because of over-response "due to the way the price of silver jumped rapidly. We weren't expecting the kind of response we had to deal with."

Nevertheless, Markon, GSA's commissioner of federal property resources, said the sale raised $52 million, more than double what had been expected.

The report said GSA tried to play down the bad check problem by releasing information it knew or should have known was "misleading or inaccurate."

Calling the check cashing procedures used by the GSA inconsistent with government accounting policies, the report said $200,000 of the bad checks remained uncollected eight months after the first coins were mailed.

Markon said the amount due on uncollected checks has been reduced to less than $100,000.

A half million people requested silver dollars, but only 36 percent of the orders were filled even though there were twice as many coins available as there were orders, said the staff of the subcommittee on consumer affairs and coinage.

By the time a limit was imposed on the number of coins an individual could order, the study said, it was too late to ensure that all orders would be filled.

The sale was the last of silver dollars discovered in 1964 that had been struck at the Carson City, Nev., mint between 1878 and 1893.

GSA revised its announced prices when it became apparent that escalating silver prices could have allowed the coins to be sold for less than the value of the silver they contained, the report said. But this required the agency to scrap some 18 million brochures, posters and order forms.

After changing the announced prices, GSA took ads in two coin collectors' magazines giving a toll-free telephone number for those seeking information, but the number did not work in Virginia, the report said.

Grateful Jews Seeking Information On Hero

WASHINGTON (UPI)—In Hungary 36 years ago, a heroic Swede named Raoul Wallenberg risked his life to save 30,000 Jews from murderous Nazi Gestapo troops — then disappeared when the Soviets captured Budapest.

Nothing has been heard from him directly since that day, but grateful Jews who think Wallenberg still may be alive at age 68 are offering a $1 million reward for information leading to his freedom.

Annette Lantos, co-chairwoman of the Free Wallenberg Committee of the United States, announced the reward, pledged by a number of organizations, Sunday. She and her husband, Rep. Thomas Lantos, D-Calif., escaped Budapest through Wallenberg's efforts.

While attached to the Swedish Embassy in Budapest, Wallenberg arranged "protective" Swedish passports for 30,000 Hungarian Jews — and flew the neutral Swedish flag over makeshift homes and hospitals to provide haven for the Jews.

Russia first claimed Wallenberg had been killed by the Nazis in the fall of Budapest, but in 1957 said he had a fatal heart attack in 1947 in Lubyanka prison.

Mrs. LANTOS, in an interview with United Press International, said hearings in Stockholm last year elicited information that Wallenberg was seen recently in Spets Korpos prison in the Soviet Gulag.

"There is much reason to believe that he's still alive," she said. "That's any we keep pushing the issue. We have no real interest in honoring him or erecting memorials. We want to get him free and back to his family."

"We are not trying to use this as anti-Soviet propaganda," she said. "It would not cost them anything — just giving up a harmless old man would produce tremendous good will all over the world and right this terrible wrong, perhaps the greatest injustice of our generation."

Mrs. Lantos was 12 when she and her mother got protective passports. She had been childhood friends with her future husband, who also received a passport, and they reunited after the war and were married in Los Angeles in 1950.

Lantos has introduced legislation to make Wallenberg the only man besides Winston Churchill to be made an honorary U.S. citizen.

"Neither of us would be here today if it wasn't for Wallenberg — an angel of mercy in that terrible hell," Mrs. Lantos said.

With the Nazis hunting for him, Wallenberg — in a final act of "heroic courage" — marched to Nazi headquarters to save 100,000 Jews as the Russians encircled Budapest in 1945.

"The trapped SS went berserk and tried to eradicate the last of the Jews," Mrs. Lantos said. "They had mined the protected houses when Wallenberg emerged and marched to Nazi headquarters in disregard of his life."

"He told the commanding officer, General Schmidthueber, that if the mines were exploded he personally would see to it Schmidthueber was executed after the war."

Newlywed, Boy Die In Copter Crash

AVALON, Calif. (UPI)—A helicopter carrying a honeymooning couple and a family of five to Santa Catalina Island crashed and sank in deep water just 300 yards from a beachfront heliport, killing a young boy and the groom trapped in the sinking wreckage.

The pilot of the Catalina Airlines helicopter and five of the seven passengers, who clung to the wreckage of the Sikorsky S-62A, were rescued soon after Sunday's crash.

The five were taken aboard the life-guard boat Baywatch and transferred to area hospitals, with the pilot reported in serious condition today.

Three lifeguards attempted to get inside the chopper where the boy and the man were still trapped, but the fuselage quickly sank in about 240 feet of water and efforts to save the two were unsuccessful.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known, and a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board said a full investigation was ordered. A diver was sent to the scene today to recover the bodies and the wreckage.

It was the fourth fatal crash in less than four years for Catalina Airlines, which operates both helicopters and airplanes between the mainland and the Southern California tourist resort.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the helicopter was flying from San Pedro to Peppy Beach heliport on Santa Catalina, about 26 miles, when it crashed.

Freed Americans Face Prison

NEW YORK (AP) — One of four Americans freed from Turkish prisons after serving eight years on drug charges says she knew she was back home when she saw a Howard Johnson's sign in New York City.

JoAnn McDaniel, 36, sounded "just like she did eight years ago," her father, in Salem, Ore., said after a half-hour telephone conversation. "She said she was just so glad to get over here."

But Miss McDaniel, her new husband and two other Americans who arrived in New York Sunday after being freed from Turkish prisons may face at least two more weeks in prison — this time in the United States.

The four Americans, who have 16 years remaining on their Turkish senences, were transferred to the Manhattan Correctional Center after their arrival here.

Justice Department spokesman Rex Young said Sunday that a parole hearing would be set in the next two weeks.

All four were in "remarkably good spirits," said Rep. Harold S. Sawyer, R-Mich., who worked to obtain their release under a United States-Turkey prisoner exchange treaty implemented in December.

For Miss McDaniel, formerly of Coos Bay, Ore., and Robert E. Hubbard, 31, of San Antonio the flight home from Turkey was a honeymoon. They were married Friday, two days before their release from Bocu Prison near Izmir.

They and Kathryn Zenz, 34, of Lancaster, Wis., and Michael Ray, 35, of Little Rock, Ark., were turned over to American diplomats and a U.S. marshal who escorted them to the United States.

Sawyer said the prisoners would have served terms of three to six years if they had been convicted in the United States of the offenses they were charged with in Turkey. Sawyer said he would be surprised if the four weren't out on parole in two or three weeks.

"They are guilty of a foreign crime," Sawyer said. "They are not guilty of any crime against the United States."

Harold McDaniel, 72, said his daughter told him by phone Sunday that she and her new husband planned to settle in Oregon. It was the first time he had spoken to his daughter since her arrest in 1972. McDaniel said he spoke briefly with Hubbard and "he appeared to be a low-key fellow."

Miss McDaniel's mother died last year of brain disease.

Jim MacDonald, a friend who took part in the phone conversation at McDaniel's home, said Miss McDaniel told him she knew she was home when she saw the Howard Johnson's sign.

Thomas White, an assistant federal public defender, said there was an outstanding warrant against Ray involving a 1969 case in San Diego, Calif. He said he did not know the details of that case, but added that "under the treaty, in order for any action to be taken against Ray, we must ask the government of Turkey for its permission to do so."

Miss Zenz, a nurse, Miss McDaniel, a social worker, and Hubbard were convicted of trying to smuggle 264 pounds of hashish into Turkey from Syria, Turkish authorities said.

Fate Of Missionary Unknown

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Amid contradictory reports of execution deadlines and a self-imposed news embargo by most of Colombia's newspapers and radio stations, there was no word today on the fate of American missionary Chester Bitterman.

One of many anonymous telephone callers claiming to speak for the group that kidnapped Bitterman last month said the 28-year-old man from Lancaster, Pa., would be killed by midnight Saturday. But there was no evidence the threat was carried out, and a source close to negotiations on Bitterman's fate said no such deadline had been set.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said the abductors threatened to kill Bitterman if their demands were not met by March 5. The kidnappers alleged that the Summer Institute of Linguistics, with which Bitterman is associated, is a CIA front, and they demanded that it get out of Colombia.

Only one of Bogota's radio stations reported anything about Bitterman on Saturday, and none of the city's four Sunday newspapers published a story on the kidnapping although their Saturday editions had said he would be executed Saturday night.

A reporter at the radio station Caracol said the news media had agreed not to publish or broadcast further stories based on anonymous telephone calls because they could not be authenticated.

When Bitterman was kidnapped, he was preparing for his first field assignment for the linguistics institute, to live with a tribe of primitive Indians and learn their language.

Repairman Convicted Of Murder

ANOKA, Minn. (AP) — A 30-year-old electronics repairman who allegedly stalked a former teacher for years — then slashed her face while she sat on the witness stand — faces sentencing next month in the death of a boy who may have been a witness to her abduction.

A jury on Saturday rejected defense arguments that Ming Sen Shiuue was mentally ill and found him guilty of kidnapping and second-degree murder in the abduction and slaying of 6-year-old Jason Wilkman.

In September, the Roseville man was convicted in U.S. District Court of kidnapping Mary Stauffer, 37, a Baptist missionary, and her daughter, Elizabeth, 9, of Arden Hills.

The prosecution contended Shiuue abducted Wilkman and beat him to death because he was a possible witness to the May 16 abduction of the Stauffers. The Stauffers escaped from Shiuue's home after being held captive 53 days.

Anoka County District Judge Robert Bakke set sentencing for March 2. Assistant County Attorney Michael Roith said he would recommend Shiuue be sentenced to the maximum of 40 years in prison.

Nebraska To Retain 55 MPH Speed Limit

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The speed limit on interstate highways in Nebraska will remain at 55 mph following the Legislature's decision to kill a measure that would have let motorists put a heavier foot on the accelerator.

The bill to raise the existing speed limit to 60 mph and eliminate an existing "grace" provision allowing drivers 10 mph leeway in interstate speed violations was rejected on a 27-13 vote.

Speed limits were set at 55 mph in all states after the federal government — in a move to conserve fuel — said it would sever transportation funds to any state with a higher limit.

It's Bigger'n All Of Us

POLITICIANS ARE fond of claiming that tax increases are due to the ever-increasing demands of citizens for additional services and handouts.

But the truth is, the ones who benefit most from the growth of government are the bureaucrats and politicians themselves.

New spending programs provide promotion opportunities for federal employees and give politicians additional patronage plums and pork from the barrel, to distribute in ways that will garner the most votes on election day.

Power, prestige and income for bureaucrats and politicians increase with the size of the public sector.

The federal government has become bloated in recent years, almost any way one looks at it. Unfortunately, though, most people are accustomed to measuring the growth in only one way.

MEASURED BY the traditional yardstick of total expenditures, the expansion of the public sector has proceeded at an incredible pace.

During the Truman administration, the federal government spent about $137 million, with an "m." a day. In contrast, the Carter administration spent an average of more than $1.3 billion, with a "b." a day—a ten-fold increase. (The rate of spending doubled between the Nixon and Carter administrations).

But as disturbing as these figures are, they represent only a fraction of the total burden of government upon the taxpayer and the economy.

They do not take into account the indirect costs of government paperwork and regulations.

The Commission on Federal Paperwork has estimated that government reports and forms cost the economy about $100 billion each year.

UNNECESSARY regulations are hardly less burdensome. The price of a new car, it is estimated, has been increased by almost $700 simply because of pollution and safety regulations.

Americans pay for more government not only through higher taxes, but through higher consumer prices.

Government grows primarily because those in government—politicians and bureaucrats—benefit from its growth. Tax limitation and balanced budgets represent partial constraints, of course, but it will be difficult to control the expansion of government until we change this basic incentive structure.

At present there are rewards for spending, but few for reducing waste and corruption or trying to save tax dollars. This uncontrolled burgeoning, if not soon abated, could have devastating effects not only on our economic but our social and political systems as well.

'1-2-3—Touch Your Toes—1-2-3...'

James J. Kilpatrick: Why Johnny Still Can't Read

WASHINGTON—Rudolf Flesch is what you might call an even-tempered man. He stays mad. Twenty-five years ago he dropped an academic bombshell, "Why Johnny Can't Read."

This spring he has a sequel coming out. It is called "Why Johnny Still Can't Read." An advance copy has come to hand, courtesy of Harper and Row.

For those who came in late, Dr. Flesch is a man with a mission. He holds a couple of earned Ph.D. degrees, one from his native Vienna, another from Columbia.

At 69, he has a dozen books under his belt. His glorious mission is to teach children to read and to teach adults to write. He loves phonics and he despises jargon, and if you are wondering what he stays mad at, it is this:

HE STAYS MAD at the publishers and educators who persist in teaching children to read by the "look-and-say" method.

It has been a splendid crusade and in one sense a productive one. Twenty-five years ago the forces of look-and-say were firmly in the academic saddle.

They dominated the faculties of teacher-training institutions; they wielded a controlling influence over the publishing of reading primers and manuals. The "phonics-first" method of instruction had been trampled underfoot.

Largely owing to Dr. Flesch's crusade, the picture has brightened. If the look-and-say pedagogues have not been unhorsed, they have been pretty well bounced around. Several publishing houses—Dr. Flesch praises them as the "Phonic Five"—have produced courses of instruction that put phonics in first place.

Even those publishers who continue to push look-and-say—he identifies these as the "Dismal Dozen"—have made a tactical retreat. They now include a little phonics with their large mass of guesswork.

THIS BATTLE BETWEEN opposing theories of reading instruction might appear to be trivial—a mere shaking of limbs in the academic grove. On the contrary, the issue is profoundly serious.

Children who never learn to read well are likely to grow up as adults who understand poorly. They are handicapped persons in the deepest meaning of the word.

Dr. Flesch cites studies indicating that 21 percent of our population is functionally illiterate—unable to read warning labels on medicines, or to comprehend an application form—and he puts most of the blame upon the high priests of look-and-say.

For the record, phonics-first teaches a child to decode the language. Under this system first-graders first master the alphabet and the sounds of letters. They move on to syllables, and to "sounding out" words.

BY CONTRAST, LOOK-and-say relies chiefly upon recognition of whole words. When Dr.

Kenneth May The Obstructionists

PSEUDO LIBERALS and other obstructionists are being dragged kicking and screaming toward the 21st Century.

Their political power bases threatened by President Reagan's progressive economic policies, they are circling the wagons to fight all change and to maintain the status quo.

They know that their only hope for keeping the poor indebted to them is to block the President's efforts to free the economy.

Reagan laid out before Congress last week the most significant blueprint in this century for unshackling Americans from confiscatory taxation, oppressive federal regulation and lavish spending programs.

This march toward economic, political and social freedom for all Americans is anathema to those whose activist careers in government, organized labor, consumerism and civil rights movements require their subjects to kneel at Washington's throne.

WRAPPING THEMSELVES in false piety and rhetorical concern for the poor and disadvantaged, these throwbacks to fascism want a government that controls the people rather than one which leaves the people free to enjoy the fruits of their labors and control their own destinies.

Without a government in which unelected bureaucrats write the rules and distribute the handouts, the ersatz liberals have no shackles with which to maintain themselves in positions of power and influence.

There's little wonder that the big spending congressmen, big city mayors, big labor bosses and big government lobbyists are wailing and gnashing

John D. Lofton:

Networks Squeal Like Stuck Pig

WASHINGTON—The Rev. Donald E. Wildmon from Tupelo, Miss., founder of the National Federation for Decency, held a press conference here the other day to announce the formation of the Coalition for Better Television.

What the Coalition will do, beginning in March, is monitor TV programs for three months for their violent, sexual and profane content.

At the end of this period, the Coalition will select one or more advertisers who rank among the top sponsors of TV programs in the categories mentioned, and then ask for a voluntary boycott of all their products.

Conversely, the Coalition will select one or more advertisers who support quality programming and ask that their products be chosen over their competitors.

IN HIS STATEMENT to the press, the Rev. Wildmon predicted that the networks would respond to the Coalition "with the only reply that they know—by crying censorship." But, he pointed out:

"The clearest expression of the First Amendment is the right of a person to spend his money where he so desires. With our plan of action the networks have the right to spend their money where they desire and consumers have the right to spend their money where they desire."

Well, the Rev. Wildmon was right. Like the proverbial stuck pigs, the networks have indeed squealed "censorship!" CBS yelled it, ABC yelled it and Peggy Charren, the head of Action for Children's Television (ACT), yelled it. But the censorship issue is a phony one. It is a red herring.

WHY DO I say this? Let me explain. ABC spokesman Tom Mackin says: "We do not believe that any group has the right to appoint itself as the moral censor for all the people. We find the Coalition's threat to boycott a totally unacceptable method of trying to influence programming."

But Mackin is not telling the truth. He most certainly does believe that some groups have the right to appoint themselves "moral censor" for all the people.

And one such group works for his network. ABC, as well as NBC and CBS, all employ groups of individuals whose sole job it is to say what will or will not appear on television. These people work in an area called programs and practices, and what they do is censorship.

ACT's head honcho Peggy Charren says: "Anything that reduces options for audiences instead of increasing them for choice is not productive and is a dangerous way to make change. I'm more concerned with censorship than I am setting their teeth over Reagan's plan for setting the little man free.

The question is whether the little man will again be bamboozled by those who have enslaved him by making him think they were his friends.

CONTRARY TO what these demagogues would have us believe, the President's New Direction does not benefit the rich (although there's nothing wrong with letting people keep more of their honest gains) at the expense of the poor and near-poor.

One classic example these heads-in-the-sanders like to use is along these lines: The proposed cut in tax rates would save a typical family of four earning $20,000 a year $300 in taxes next year whereas a similar family with $200,000 in wages would save $3,619.

That's just one way of saying that the higher-income family now pays higher taxes and, thus, would get to save more.

OF GREATER importance, though, is the fact that if the Reagan economic program works in cutting inflation in half, that $20,000 family will save $1,200 next year in lower prices on top of its $300 tax saving.

For those near or below the poverty line, cutting inflation will mean far more to them than increasing their food stamps.

One approach enslaves the low-income family by making it dependent on government: Reagan's approach would restore its self-esteem even while increasing its real buying power and standard of living by making its dollars go farther at the market place.

The President's program is designed to restore work incentives and to hack away at work disincentives.

UNDER THE NEW Direction, ample funding would remain for those programs necessary to meet the needs of the aged, the disabled and others who are disadvantaged through no fault of their own.

Those who now are shackled by a "helping hand" they are afraid to release lest they need it again and it's not there would be freed, however, to seek gainful employment.

It would become possible to live better on a modest earned income than on unemployment benefits and food stamps.

If the plan is allowed to work, business and industry will create more jobs; the pity is that the people who take those jobs won't realize that they owe the opportunity to government policy.

THE FAKE LIBERALS have convinced them, after 50 years of propaganda, that the government helps them only by giving them money or by creating a make-work job for them.

This is the Big Lie of policies which have brought the United States to the brink of bankruptcy.

Despite all the billions of dollars spent, the problems have not been solved. Increasing the spending, adding more programs, will not solve them; it will make them worse.

For two generations, the ultra-liberals have masqueraded as apostles of change and progress. In truth, they have become the opposite.

A change of direction clearly is indicated. The moderates and conservatives have become the advocates of change and betterment. And those with their boots on the oppressed naturally are worried.

up any kind of mechanism to restrict what is broadcast."

But Charren also speaks with a forked-tongue. Look at her own organization. One of its principle fetishes over the years has been TV advertising aimed at children between the ages of two and 11.

And what does she want to do with these ads? Why, she wants to ban them completely, abolish them—censor them.

In another interview, ABC's Mackin told me:

the small society

"I don't mind people saying they don't like what's on TV. I used to be a TV critic. But, it would never occur to me to urge a boycott of products. The best thing people can do is turn off what they don't like, or write letters to the network. Nobody is compelled to watch anything."

Well, terrific. But this hasn't worked. People have turned off their sets and they've written the networks. Yet today, there is more garbage on TV than ever before.

Sylvia Porter: Burn The Midnight Oil On Education Expense

(Fifth of nine columns) NEW YORK—In 1980, the Tax Court twice rebuffed the IRS for its efforts to bar employees from deducting the expenses of education undertaken by the employees to qualify for higher positions in their firms.

The basic rule for deducting the cost of education is that the taxpayer undertakes the education as a means to improve or maintain his skills in his business.

There is no deduction for the cost of general education, or education that you need to qualify for a trade, business or profession (such as law school or medical school).

And if the education qualifies a taxpayer who already is in business for another trade or business, the cost is not deductible even though the education also sharpens his skills in his current trade or present business.

TAXPAYER ALERT: THOSE two 1980 Tax Court decisions give you powerful backing if you get into any fight with the IRS on deducting money you spent for education to qualify you for promotion within your own firm.

The IRS may try to disallow your deduction on the premise that the higher position you get is a new trade or business.

In one case decided by the Tax Court, the employee was at the lower management level of a supermarket chain. Without being required to do so by his employer, he spent more than $1,400 to pay for a management program that would sharpen his skills.

He was later promoted to store manager—a full four management grades higher than his post before he took the course.

THE IRS DISALLOWED his education costs on the grounds that the course had led to a new trade or business. The Tax Court disagreed.

The rise in management grades in the same retail food operation is not a change in business, but simply a change in duties in the same business, said the court.

In the second case, an individual who was classified as an engineer, scientist, specialist by his employer took courses to qualify him for management and administrative positions in the firm.

Here, too, the IRS barred his deduction for the cost of the courses and declared that the courses qualified him for a new trade or business. Again, the Tax Court disagreed with the IRS.

IN UPHOLDING THE taxpayer's deduction, the Tax Court pointed out that the courses simply qualified him for a change of duties within the same business rather than for a new trade or business.

If you are a parochial school teacher, you were affected by an important appeals court decision in 1980.

Berry's World

In this case, a parochial school teacher took courses, some of which were required in order for her to retain her parochial school job. But these courses also led to a degree which in turn qualified her to teach in the public school system.

Here the Tax Court agreed with the IRS that the courses qualified her for a new trade or business (public school as against parochial school) and therefore disallowed her deduction for the expenses of the courses.

But the Third Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the Tax Court and allowed the deduction.

A QUESTION FREQUENTLY asked when some courses are required (as in the parochial school teacher case) is: Must you be forced in some way to take the education courses in order to be able to deduct the expenses?

Answer: not necessarily. You can deduct the education expenses even if you voluntarily decide the education and its costs will help you maintain or improve skills required in your trade or business, or your present job.

If, for instance, you're a TV repairman and you take special courses to catch up on stereo developments, your expenses are deductible as needed primarily to maintain and improve your skills.

52 Americans Pursue Pleasures Of Everyday Life

By SID MOODY
Associated Press Writer
Like weavers, long absent from their trade, the 52 are gradually picking up the threads of their lives.

In small ways: A trip downtown, a thanks in person to a fourth grade that did not forget. And in larger: Career choices, choices that finally can extend beyond what to have with dinner's rice. On Day 29 of their freedom — last Tuesday — the Americans held hostage in Iran had begun to mark their time on the calendar of American everyday.

One had broken a leg skiing. One tooled a new car through traffic, windows open to the fresh air of home. One was just back from the Caribbean sun where the options were no more portentous than whether to roast on the back or stomach. One, whose name had once been a staple on TV late evening news, could hardly keep awake to watch whatever alarms and excursions had taken his place.

Home, the hostages, home from Iran. Sgt. Johnny McKeel had said he would spend his leave in customary Marine fashion, chasing girls. Instead, on a day when much of the United States inhaled an unseasonable warm wave that hinted not even winter was eternal, McKeel was chasing fish off the coast of his native Texas. The police chief of his hometown in Balch Springs near Dallas went with him.

Another Marine, Sgt. Kevin Hermenting, whose mother had trod where all the president's men could not, was staying with her son in suburban Oak Creek outside of Milwaukee. She had been the only family member to talk her way through the locked gates of the seized U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Kevin was just back from several days skiing in northern Wisconsin. On this day he drove his nine-day-old Dodge Omni downtown to shop. "I drove in shirt sleeves with the windows all open. It was a great feeling."

Sgt. Bill Gallegos had been skiing, too. And broke a leg. When he awoke this day in Pueblo, Colo., he took some medicine for the injury. Then he embarked on the Great American Day Off. Downtown to buy some clothes, eat a pizza. Later, he and his parents drove to Denver to spend the night. The next day was Bill Gallegos Day in Colorado. The governor and a banquet would honor him.

The nation had not quite come down off its high.

Kathryn Koob had not forgotten, either. One of the two women hostages, she had pledged "to meet as many Iranians as I could and say thanks." Her first stop this day was to meet with fourth graders in a school near her home in Jesup. She thanked them for the letters they had sent while she was captive. She thanked a Rotary luncheon in New-

Sgt. Steven Kirtley also said thanks. He went to a dinner meeting of the Homebuilders Association of Greater Little Rock. While he was gone, the group had donated a two-bedroom addition to his family's home.

Time had softened the 23-year-old Marine. When he first was released, he thought the United States should extract an eye for an eye and bomb Iran.

"I'm still bitter, but not to the extent that I think we should totally annihilate the whole country."

Ex-Captives Make Diverse Future Plans

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
The future is all over the world.

For the 52 Americans held hostage in Iran for 444 days, tomorrow means new assignments, new ideas and, in some cases, new jobs. Some of the servicemen plan to stay in the military; others envision civilian careers. There are books to be written, appearances to be made and offers to consider. Few of the former hostages plan major changes in their lives as a result of their ordeal, but all are making adjustments.

Kathryn Koob of Jessup, Iowa, plans to keep her job as a cultural officer with the International Communications Agency. She says she wouldn't mind going overseas again — but she also says she would be very careful about picking the country. Miss Koob wants to write a book about her experiences in Iran, but has not made any firm plans.

Robert Ode, 66, retired from the State Department in 1976, but he accepted a temporary assignment that put him in the U.S. Embassy on Nov. 4, 1979. Ode's wife moved to the retirement community of Sun City West, Ariz., during his captivity and he says, "Since ... I have a lovely home here and the golf course right in front of me, I don't think I will probably take any (assignments), at least not in the foreseeable future."

Ode wants to travel, however. "I've always been fascinated by new places," he says. "We may go to Europe next summer, maybe Iceland. We're also going to visit Mexico and I'd give my eye-teeth to go to China."

Marine Sgt. Steven Kirtley, 23, of Little Rock, Ark., will stay in the service until his enlistment runs out Dec. 29. "Then I'll go to school," he says, probably at the University of Arkansas. He hasn't decided what he'll study.

Richard Morefield, 51, who was consul-general in Iran, says he is "ready to get back to Washington and get back to work." He expects he will be stationed in the United States for a year. "After that," Morefield says, "I'll go wherever the president wants me to go."

Michael Metrinko of Olyphant, Pa., also will keep his job with the government. "I'm going back to work with the foreign service ... I have no idea where they will assign me, but ... I like the work. It's what I want to keep on doing."

Former Hostages Report Threats From Veterans

BALCH SPRINGS (AP) — Letter-writers identifying themselves as Vietnam veterans have threatened to kill Marine Sgt. Johnny McKeel Jr., but the former hostage says he doesn't take the threats seriously.

Another of the 52 Americans held hostage by militants in Iran, Robert Ode of Sun City, Ariz., said his telephone answering machine recorded a whispered threat last week.

And extra security was added to a homecoming parade in Nebraska for former captive Michael Moeller following a telephoned threat three weeks ago, officials said.

McKeel said he has received "about 12" death threats since he returned home to Balch Springs, most of them in letters and many from people identifying themselves as Vietnam veterans who were upset that McKeel and the other hostages received heroes' welcomes when they returned home in January after 14½ months of captivity.

The Marine said he hadn't notified authorities. "Ninety-nine percent of them are just cranks anyhow," he said.

McKeel said he's also been pestered by telephone calls from "people calling and not saying anything and hanging up."

Ode told Arizona authorities last Tuesday that on Feb. 16, someone whispered into his answering machine, "Iran was right. ... We're going to get you."

He said he told the sheriff's department about the message and added he was unsure "whether it was an Iranian, a crackpot, a local resident or all three."

Officials Probing Mayor's Ex-Aide

CHICAGO (AP) — The mayor's former chief of etiquette is under investigation by state officials who want to find out whether she falsely collected unemployment compensation, authorities say. The state Bureau of Employment Security says it wants to know whether an etiquette school run by Noreen McBride prevented her from seeking regular employment or taking another job during the six months she received unemployment benefits after being fired as a sales clerk.

Mrs. McBride resigned 11 days after being appointed to the $35,000-a-year city post. Officials said the amount of unemployment compensation Mrs. McBride purportedly collected is confidential.

Business & Industrial Review

FOR THOSE WHO WANT THE BEST — The pictured Hydro Mulching unit is shown here by Charles Wilcox of the Sod Father firm affording everything in lawn preparation and care. Wil-

Sod Father's Hydro Mulching, Other Services Prove Popular

"The Sod Father (TM) Inc. is the only lawn care company you will ever need!" This is quite a promise, but it is a fact. Charles Wilcox, who has been helping people have beautiful lawns since back in '58, heads the Sod Father, Inc. and Wilcox Lawn Service & Turf Farm, 4107 E. 4th St., phone (806) 744-0829. His experience and full knowledge of the field makes reliance upon the Sod Father even more meaningful.

A Professional Way
 In brief, here is what the Sod Father can do for you in your own situation: Hydro Mulching is a key service, with this process enabling sprigging or seeding of grass, watering, mulching and fertilization, all in one speedy and fantastically efficient operation.

The Sod Father has a complete fertilizer, weed and wild grass and insecticide program... even soil analysis.

"We'll do any yard," is the report from Wilcox. "We invite your business in dethatching (similar to scalping), lawn leveling or lowering, tree and shrub spraying, sprigging and Hydro Mulching.

"We are booking now for complete spring and summer maintenance. We are glad to put in new lawns or re-do the old one, then fertilizing as desired. We welcome 'one time' jobs or continuous maintenance. Whatever it takes for service, we do our best."

Out-of-town jobs are welcome as are those in Lubbock.

For Finest Grass
 For Tex Turf or Tifton 328, sprigging or sodding, the Sod Father is the firm to call.

All in all, for those who "want the best," the Sod Father, Inc. comes through, seemingly especially for you.

There's still time to arrange "for the most beautiful lawn one can imagine" for this summer... but hurry. Let the Sod Father enter the picture now at this strategic time and before the busy spring weeks. Check now for immediate attention to your own yard, whether developing it, re-doing it or mapping a maintenance program.

Free estimates are given. Terms are available.

"The first move is up to you, though; just call us. It is that simple.

"The Sod father, Inc., wants to work for you!"

"Large Clothes for Big, Beautiful Ladies" is making a lot of friends and customers for the remarkable BJ's Toggery, 2507 34th St. (just west of the University Avenue intersection and across from the S & H stamp redemption center.

Not only does BJ's Toggery provide the hi-fashion look in larger sizes, but smaller sizes also are on the racks!

Swim Pool Paint Is Consideration Typical Of Felix West Paints In City

"Is your swimming pool going to be ready when the swim season arrives? Does it have a fresh coat of paint?" Then don't delay; get swim pool paint from the new shipment at Felix West Paints!

"Much more than a paint store alone," Felix West Paints, on Clovis Road just east of University Avenue in Lubbock, stocks fully in all departments to justify the invitation:

"Get it all at Felix West."

Felix West is geared to serve in even greater capacity this year, with the firm actually expanding in size in '80, also having remodeled and rearranged for greater customer convenience. And the stock has been increased from its already seemingly complete status. A convenient east entryway has been built onto the off-street paved parking area adjacent to the building.

And special bargains still are afforded.

As example, Felix West has a lot of regular $6 and $12 prices marked down to $3 and $4 per yard!

"Bring your measurements, and from this wide assortment of linoleum remnants, we know you will find just what you have wanted, at a fraction of the regular price."

"So come on in, secure that linoleum, paint and even the seasonal needs in abundance at Felix West Paints.

Not only is the stock complete at Felix West Paints, but the firm holds the price line for customer benefit.

And most often there are some real bargains in discontinued items, remnants, etc., making it advantageous to check the store frequently for special opportunities.

Another item of customer consideration is the long hours observed every weekday. Felix West Paints is open from 7:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays; yes, Felix West is open all day Saturdays.

Thousands of general hardware items and scads of other products contribute to the "difference that is Felix West Paints."

Colony Paint
 Colony paints, Armstrong and Congoleum... these are among the names that spell true quality and availability for the demands of every season; always at Felix West.

Felix West has a pipe threader as an added service, enabling cutting and threading.

Located just one block east of University on the Clovis Highway (2319 Clovis Road), Felix West not only is one of the easiest stores to find (look for the distinctive signs), but it provides all the popular and even hard-to-find hardware items that make a trip there worthwhile.

Whether one selects from the Colony paint stock or chooses from the wide inventory of hand and power tools, pipe fittings, shop items, inexpensive gas or electric bathroom heaters, etc., the price and quality is unmistakably the best — a tradition well practiced and protected at Felix West Paints in its one big Lubbock location.

Felix West is no newcomer to Lubbock or to the hardware and paint trade, and he is unusually adept at stocking the right items for South Plains clientele.

AIRSTREAM, THE ULTIMATE — Correctly hinted here are plus features in both interior and exterior of Airstream units, several of which will be shown by the veteran Abbott Trailer Sales at the Mall showing, Thursday through Saturday. Abbott invites full inspection and consideration of these 'affordable and luxurious' trailers and motor homes.

Abbott, 'Your Dream Builder,' Showing Airstreams At Mall

"Upon viewing our Airstream units at the RV Show this Thursday through Saturday in the South Plains Mall, we at Abbott Trailer Sales believe that you'll realize in a very graphic manner the meaning of our motto: 'Building Dreams Is Our Business'."

"Yes, with our 23 years experience in trailer sales and service, we are West Texas' oldest and largest dream builder."

So, for Airstream sales and service, it is Abbott Trailer Sales, 408 Ave. Q, phone 763-4747, right downtown, and for fun and inspection and opportunities of a big recreational vehicle show, it is this weekend at South Plains Mall where we look forward to sharing with you the dreams made possible by Airstream and Abbott, providing finest in motor homes or trailers."

"The durability, popularity, convenience and beauty of Airstream has been proven time after time... to the vacation pleasure of millions. After all, this year commemorates 50 years of building the world's finest recreational vehicles. Yes, Airstream was founded in 1931, and since that date it has been an industry leader in areas of quality, resale value and design. We know that upon your inspection at the Mall showing, you'll recognize first hand why this is a fact."

Flexibility of Choice

"Whatever your preference in an Airstream... motor home or trailer, whatever floor plan or size, we correctly point out that there's an Airstream for everyone."

"If you're ready to retire, but not ready for the rocking chair, there is an Airstream for you."

"And whether you've two kids or four, or you are just one happy 'free wheeler' bent on heading for the open road, there's an Airstream for you!"

"View and select from the all-new models of shiny silver and lightweight, aerodynamic, energy-efficient Airstream construction... a sensibly-priced Airstream, sized in new lengths for every type of family and lifestyle."

Airstream offers a valued choice of loading up with all the fancy frills, or sticking to basics. In either instance or in between, it is a travel trailer that travels "like a stream of air"... a high performer custom tailored to the needs of the owner."

"For more ways to get more out of life," the Abbott exhibit of Airstream units (trailers and motor homes) at the South Plains Mall showing this weekend, can be quite a revelation... an introduction to the delightful advantages of owning something special, of experiencing new travel and vacation convenience, of fighting boredom or exorbitant travel expense."

"With the price of fuel going up and the fuel supply in question, Airstream is the unit to go with. Pages could be written on the aerodynamic construction, the test after test that has proved Airstream's worth, the many standard features of every unit, etc., but it would take a book! The best idea is to come to our exhibit and see for yourself; besides, we want to visit with you as new and old friends alike. We pride in the fact that we at Abbott Trailer Sales have served so many of you in the two decades past, and we look forward to continuing as your dream builder!"

Stovall Steam Carpet Cleaning Affords Both Quality, Saving

Not only are a variety of quality services offered, but Stovall Steam Clean Carpet Cleaning Service has announced a limited-time "10 per cent off" offer for any residential or commercial carpet cleaning upon presentation of the Stovall ad in this section.

"When we clean carpets, everyone looks" is the dramatic assurance of Earl Stovall who utilizes the famous Hydra-Master equipment and process.

Simply call 793-0355 for full details and free estimates on

- (1) Carpet cleaning;
- (2) Scotch Guard application;
- (3) Upholstery cleaning; and
- (4) Emergency water extraction.

Hydra-Master Excellence

"I am convinced that Hydra-Master steam cleaning is one of the very best cleaning processes available," longtime resident Earl Stovall emphasizes.

Stovall personally is on hand for every cleaning job from Stovall Steam Clean, and "I am just not going to do a bad job," he assures.

He points out the following Hydra-Master characteristics:

- It cleans deeper — 400 lb per square inch, yet carpet fibers are gently massaged and fluffed.
- It dries faster — with 20 hp unit extracting all dirt, moisture and shampoo residue; and

Only the cleaning wand enters the home. A self-contained truck-mounted unit supplies all power and water from outside one's home.

Service Is Foremost

Stovall invites calls day or night, and he can arrange cleaning operations for any hour.

Whether the need is carpet cleaning, upholstery cleaning or the sometimes very pressing need for emergency water extraction, let Stovall Steam Clean Carpet Cleaning Service, phone 793-0355, do the job — right! Earl appreciates your business and wants to show it... in service and quality, at the right price.

CARPET CLEANING THE MODERN WAY — Earl Stovall is shown here with the Hydra-Master equipment and mobile unit utilized in his expert cleaning operations. As a special introductory offer, Stovall invites attention to the limited-time 10 per cent discount outlined in the accompanying story.

ASSURANCE OF SERVICE TO APPRECIATE — From department heads to every skilled technician and every employee, Frank Brown Pontiac chooses carefully, maintaining a staff that puts the customer consideration and knowledge of the job foremost. Coming in for a salute this week is Service Manager Jon Chamberlain (center) and Jimmy McDonald and Ken Campbell, service writers.

Frank Brown Pontiac, Strong On Service, Salutes Staffers

"Top service standards" in its every customer relationship is just one of the reasons, but a most important one, placing Frank Brown Pontiac, Inc. in the select group of Pontiac Masters Dealers for the past eight years.

With 3,200 Pontiac dealers in the nation, Frank Brown in Lubbock is only one of 23 dealers to be designated a Masters Dealer for these past eight years.

Another qualifying factor for the Lubbock firm is its record as one of the top 100 dealers in sales throughout the nation! Knowledgeable, well-trained, dedicated personnel is one of the hard and fast rules at Frank Brown Pontiac, not only aiding in such honors but aiding the customer in value received.

The service department comes in for a special salute this week from Frank Brown, president of the firm.

Heading this key segment of the firm's operations is Jon Chamberlain, 24, an 11-year Lubbock resident.

Chamberlain is very aware of the role of the customer in welfare of the dealership itself, and he takes personal interest in seeing that every job is done as if it were on his personal car.

Born in Burlington, Vt., Jon was reared in Florida and in Lubbock, attending Monterey High School and South Plains College and Western Texas College. Racing, golf and bowling are his hobbies, and the family includes his wife and two children.

Service writers, vital to the department's best service to every customer, are Jimmy McDonald and Ken Campbell. Each knows his job, serving superbly.

McDonald, 20, is a native of Dallas but reared in Lubbock where he graduated from Monterey High School, later attending Texas Tech. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald have one son. Golf is Jimmy's hobby interest.

Campbell, 29, was born in Casper, Wyo., and raised in Aspermont (Tex.). He, too attended Texas Tech and has lived in the Lubbock area for 10 years. The Campbells, who reside in New Home, have one child. Golf and fishing are his hobbies.

"One or all these men likely are the first contact one has with the service department of Frank Brown Pontiac, 4637 50th St., and we at Frank Brown take pride in introducing them as 'our kind of folks'."

Frank Brown Pontiac dates its founding to back in mid-1970, year and day of the tornado here, in fact, with the present facility completed for move-in in January of 1972. It was described at that time by Pontiac officials as "the most modern facility of its type anywhere," and up-to-date operation and service has been its watchword ever since.

Frank Brown, native of the Texas Panhandle, personally is on hand to serve at the dealership. He is proud of his product and his staff. Reports will follow at frequent intervals on these pages of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal pin-pointing special services or announcements of Frank Brown Pontiac. Watch for them; you can benefit accordingly.

Automatic Overhead Door Unit Cited As Family Consideration

"Does this winter find your family and yourself enjoying the convenience and the safety afforded by an automatic overhead door installation for your garage?"

"Likely during the sub-freezing days or even in seasons past you have envied your neighbor who with such facilities was spared exposure to inclement weather... sand, rain, snow, sleet, wind, etc. You, too, can arrange such convenience and protection without exorbitant expense.

"There is absolutely no need for you to walk on slick driveways to open or shut the garage door, just as there is no need to drive into a darkened garage at night.

"After all, you can enjoy the convenience and security of an automatic installation from Overhead Door Co., 50th Street at Frankford Avenue (just off the Brownfield Highway near the Loop), phone 797-4141.

Convenience, safety and protection — this is the whole story of the automatic overhead doors from Overhead Door Co. of Lubbock.

General Aluminum Windows
Not only does this veteran Lubbock firm offer the automatic openers and complete overhead doors and openers, but it also is distributor for General Aluminum Windows!

Long Service
Serving with finest products and desire to please, traditional with the firm for its full quarter century of service, the Overhead Door Company of Lubbock last year observed its 25th Anniversary and is geared in every operation to render maximum customer service in years to come.

With winter weather present and with more likely to be on its way, what better time is there to arrange for an automatic door opening unit for the family's benefit now and for seasons to come, upgrading a present home or in building a new one.

"Give your home distinction and new convenience at low cost. Give your family the Overhead Door electric operator from Overhead Door Co. of Lubbock.

"Take your pick of the several opener models afforded, including the fine Touch 'n Go system, for your particular need and preference; each represents real value.

Simple Operation
Learn now of the several features of Overhead Door Co. units... such as the simple operation of the remote transmitter, added security, automatic as the door itself, since the door is securely locked when down; motor operating on standard household current providing smooth, quiet, dependable and positive operation of the door; instant reversing mechanism insuring complete safety should the closing door encounter an obstacle, and should a power failure occur, a spring-loaded quick-disconnect instantly converts the door to manual operation.

Automatic doors represent a wise gesture by the head of the family. With these units, the wife can open the garage, enter and lock it without leaving her vehicle.

The Overhead Door Company of Lubbock is glad to demonstrate how simple it is to enjoy these benefits.

Overhead doors with automatic openers also are available recommended for commercial and industrial buildings.

Whether selection is from an opener system, a steel, wood or fiberglass overhead door, or the General Aluminum Windows, Tim Hatch at Overhead Door Co. assures the very best value in installation and sales.

REALISTICALLY A CONVENIENCE, SAFETY FACTOR — Shown is a Lubbock installation of an overhead automatic door from Overhead Door Co., 50th Street at Frankford Avenue, with (upper right) the popular automatic opener that can be a lift in your own situation, whether for a new or existing home. General Aluminum windows also are distributed by the Lubbock firm.

Business & Industrial Review

FROM FIRST TO LAST, A MARK OF EXCELLENCE — The pictured Great Divide fifth wheel trailer will be shown this weekend by Davis R.V. Center in the South Plains Mall RV Show. This and other units have gained a wide following for the Davis firm that takes pride in its every product and service.

Davis R.V. Center Including Numerous Models in Mall Show

Davis R.V. Center is glad to have the opportunity of again showing finest in recreational vehicle (RV) units at the South Plains Mall show this year, with the display to be this weekend (Thursday, Friday and Saturday).

Be sure to see the Davis units including the Great Divide 28 ft. fifth wheel trailer, the 34 ft. Avion trailer (elegant, by Fleetwood), also the 28 ft. Great Divide trailer to be shown.

Davis wants to see you continue having fun... the RV way... and this customer-pleasing Lubbock firm has gone all out in every season to provide selection and economy... really affordable adventure.

Aside from the showing this weekend, Davis considers the customer with a lot of products and services that have won friends for its operations through the years at its 220 Paris Ave. location near downtown Lubbock.

Manager Hal Howerton calls attention, as example, to the good stock of used trailers now on the lot... clean trailers that are priced to assure value in every instance.

Storage is available, and this can be a real convenience for the RV owner who likes to have his unit serviced, checked or repaired at the big Davis service department, then stored under lock until needed.

Accessories
Davis stocks the desired accessories that make for vacation and trip convenience, comfort and economy.

"See us for your needs in jacks, in equalizer hitches, parts, etc."

Strong On Service
Davis services any make of recreational vehicle, and it is suggested that the units be checked now in preparation for spring and summer use, kept in top condition for readiness as trip opportunities avail themselves. The Davis service department is super.

Showing 'Great Divide'
"But whatever you do, please visit our displays at the South Plains Mall this weekend; discover for yourself why the great Divide, for example, is the first name for ruggedness and durability, the last word in design excellence and classic beauty! Check the roomy living area of this fifth wheel, a unit that is more than a pretty face!"
Imagine the benefits, summer and winter, of R-17 to R-20 insulation. The interior walls and cabinetry are all hardwood panel, not imitation or print panel. The warm glow of natural wood in the Great Divide grows more inviting as years go by.

Quality components are the rule. Exceptional comfort and beautiful style are featured in the sofa-sleeper and swivel chair. Heavy-gauge tubular steel frames and deep-cushion upholstery assure living comfort and years of reliable service.

And there is the Avion "America's finest travel trailer" that is handled by Davis, with the 34 ft. model showing at the Mall event.

Avion is a luxurious travel trailer built in the tradition of old world craftsmanship. Its anodized aluminum aircraft type construction is designed for years of long-range traveling, with low maintenance and superior appearance.

Check every aspect of the Avion: the chassis, the cabinetry, insulation, suspension, capacities, storage room, its water fill and heating systems, its aerodynamic styling, and more; you'll appreciate its quality and beauty, for sure.

"See you at the RV Show this weekend with a big and sincere Davis welcome!"

Bowers Paint, Wallpaper Firm Emphasizes Address, Services

"Have you discovered the Bowers Paint and Wallpaper Center, now in its new location at 5152 69th St.?"

Then, maybe the following special announcements and money-saving specials will speed your visit there... to your profit and satisfaction:

Woven woods are stocked and are marked at a whopping 30 per cent off until the last of March!

Limited-time specials include interior semi-gloss white enamel for just $9 per gallon!

And the very best Latex enamel, regular $19.99, on special at $15.99 per gallon.

Flat wall paint, regular $14.99 per gallon, now $12.99. And look at this:

Rentals, Sales
Wallpaper remover machines, to make paper removal really easy, are available for rental at just $5 per day!

Airless spray equipment also is for rent and for sale.

(Bowers is distributor for the famous H.E.R.O. airless sprayers, stocking both gasoline and electric models in these sprayers great for any commercial or industrial job and carrying a full one-year guarantee.)

Bowers Paint and Wallpaper Center, "the best little paint house in Texas," is owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Bowers (Larry and Betty), who opened business in mid '79 on 50th Street, moving to the present facilities just a few days ago.

Cook Paints
They are exclusive Lubbock dealers for the full Cook Paint line and can mix over 800 colors. They stock the related accessories and paint supplies, of course.

They also feature the Joanna woven woods.

Electrocoating Service
Wallpaper selection is enabled from over 200 books, with fast delivery assured. Aside from the paint and wallpaper lines, Bowers offers a unique electro coating service, with electrostatic paint applications for all office furniture. He goes right into the business at hours assuring no inconvenience or work stoppage, with the coatings drying overnight. Desk tops can be replaced too, beautifully and simply, by this expert in the field.

Actually, this service can be summed in the motto of "our business can help your business look its best." Get full details from Larry Bowers, phone 794-6818, or come by the Bowers Paint and Wallpaper Center, 5152 69th St., easily accessible especially from Slide Road or Loop 289.

Bowers Paint and Wallpaper Center is open from 8:30 until 5:30, Mondays through Fridays, with Saturday hours of 9 to 4.

"Let us prove to you why we are the best little paint house in Texas!"

SPECIALS ARE ANNOUNCED — Larry and Betty Bowers of Bowers Paint and Wallpaper Center, now at 5152 69th St., call attention to their quality Cook paint line, other related products and services, and current specials to focus attention to their new southwest Lubbock location.

Cosmopolitan Spa, Largest In Region, Reveals Advantages

"We at the Cosmopolitan Spa would like to take this opportunity to thank the people of Lubbock for their support and warm welcome to West Texas.
 "For those of you who have not taken the opportunity to come by our office at 52nd Street and University Avenue, in the University Park Shopping Center, let us show you what this most luxurious spa in West Texas has to offer you!
 Elaborate Facilities
 "We will be featuring two conditioning floors with the very newest and most modern exercise equipment. A separate

Lellem Welch Experts Recommending Bruner 'Softy 2' Water Conditioner

"Doesn't it seem a good idea to let Lellem Welch put 'softness' in your life with a Bruner water conditioner?"
 Lellem Welch, Inc., at 1401 Ave. J, phone 762-8797, is especially thrilled about the new Bruner Softy 2, the "ideal water conditioner for inflation-conscious Americans!"
 With exceptional taste and odor removal capabilities, the Softy 2 can handle the needs of a family with up to five persons, with 50 grains per gallon of hardness.
 Really, these full-service water softening units are the very practical answer to all problems of hard water, while eliminating the frills of more expensive water conditioners.
 Simple, Inexpensive
 Aside from simplicity and economy, check the following as reasons for serious consideration of a Softy 2, now available from Lellem Welch.
 Softy soft water is important in stopping lime build-up in water heaters, thus saving a considerable amount of fuel throughout the year. It minimizes build-up in water pipes and plumbing fixtures. Plentiful soft water cuts household costs by reducing necessary amounts of detergent by lengthening the life of fabrics being washed, and increasing the life of appliances using water.

 Softy works hard to make family living a little easier (and nicer) by simplifying effective housecleaning, by adding sparkle and shine to dishes and table service, and by delivering water softness to baths, showers and shampoos.
 The Softy 2 is aptly described as "that city feila" which eliminates the taste and odor of chlorinated water after its purifying job has been accomplished. It is recommended for those people who want the advantages but not the side effects of chlorine in their water. (It utilizes both activated carbon and ion exchange resin inside its resin tank.)

Commercial, Residential
 Lellem Welch also sells and services industrial and commercial type equipment... and has been servicing all types of equipment for the past 21 years. Quite a record, isn't it?
 Also consider this when selecting a water conditioner:
 Bruner's experience in water treatment has revealed that the need for higher quality water is on the increase, and Bruner is dedicated to keep up with demands such as water quality, energy savings, more economical water treatment, and customer service. The analysis and research laboratory at Bruner grows continuously each year in order to meet these needs.
 "Lellem Welch, Inc., 1401 Ave. J, phone 762-8797, is glad to be a Bruner dealer, serving with the full support of our own experience and Bruner's experience.
 "Let us put 'Softness' in your life!"

Pharr RV's Displays Multiple Units In Weekend Mall Showing

Pharr RV's, Inc., the recreational vehicle folks at 1702 Clovis Road, looks forward to seeing you all at the big RV show this Thursday, Friday and Saturday in South Plains Mall!

"We'll be there with the greatest units we have ever stocked and shown, including the so-practical Coachmen fifth wheels, Coachmen deluxe travel trailers, the elegant King's Highway motor home and the Apollo motor home."

"We think you'll enjoy the convenience and the fun of viewing and comparing at the special Mall showing, and it all re-emphasizes that Pharr RV's ('Better Buy Pharr') can be quite a friend, whether you want to relax and see the sights close to home or prefer the rugged mountains, the seashore or backwoods adventure. We are on the job, still enabling comfort and economy in vacation travel."

"It could be that you'll find everything you have ever wanted in a motor home in the King's Highway... it is a great new way to travel! There's the deep pile carpeting, plush interior fabrics, functionally designed and fully-equipped kitchen, etc. Plus rugged construction, built-in safety features, and responsive handling."

"Please be our guest in visiting our big display at the South Plains Mall this weekend... and come by our headquarters any day... at 1702 Clovis Road."

"For practicality, convenience, beauty and just plain fun, there's likely nothing else like the '81 Coachmen QuinStar/Caper XL Fifth Wheels!"

And Pharr has these Fifth Wheel Units in stock, in 28 to 35 ft. lengths, both new and used, to provide the best selection of these he has ever had.

If desiring a full-size recreational unit (RV), then the Fifth Wheel seems made to order, easily pulled by the pickups of one's preference.

"Don't fret about small units or small autos: solve the vacationing, travel needs with a Fifth Wheel; lots of other people are doing it!"

In outlining the good supply of '81 Coachmen units on the lot, "the No. 1 seller in America," Pharr points out some features of the Fifth Wheels, in particular.

QuinStar features a one-piece seamless aluminum roof that is easy to maintain and it is watertight. Rugged tubular steel frames and the galvanized metal underbody combine for strength, safety and further all-weather protection.

"It is the perfect combination of convenience and luxury."

Pharr's not only has these units, but stocks many other quality RV units and provides quality service for the region.

New and used Class A motor homes are on the big lot.

Park Models

And the park models (8x35 trailers) also by Coachmen.

Rentals

Rentals of motor homes and small travel trailers (even small enough to be towed by the small cars) is a big department of Pharr's RV's.

RV storage is one of the several services offered.

Parts, accessories and service are all available.

A good selection of RV units always is maintained at Pharr's, at its clearly-marked and easily reached facility near downtown Lubbock, at the Amarillo Highway-Clovis Road "Y," 1702 Clovis Road.

"Pharr wants to help you enjoy travel and vacation opportunities in every season and for years to come. Why delay; discover upon your own visit and inspection how Pharr can make your week-ends, vacations or retirement a whole new experience without exorbitant cost."

Truskosky's Annual Spring Fashion Show Slated Sunday

"Mark your calendar, don't let anything interfere with your plans to attend Truskosky's Second Annual Spring Fashion Show this Sunday at the Civic Center Theatre in Lubbock!"

So enthusiastic has the public's response been to this Truskosky's show in the past that special and elaborate plans have been made for this Spring event, at 2 p.m., Sunday, March 1.

Admission is free.

Over $500 worth of door prizes has been announced.

Professionals will be on hand for entertainment... with singing, dancing and plans for a good time by all! (To say nothing of the chic apparel to be modeled and shown in Truskosky's inimitable way.)

All this is presented by Truskosky's, unique and popular ladies apparel store at 2503 Amherst (just off University on Amherst).

Though possibly best known as a "good working girls' shop," Truskosky's has something for all.

Sizes include 8-20 and 38-44 for the larger ladies.

Only Top Lines

Whatever the selection at Truskosky's, one can be assured that it is "top brand, truly top dollar merchandise" presented at unbelievably sensible prices.

Select from sportswear, dresses, robes and gowns, even shoes!

Carol Truskosky personally is on hand and she does her own discriminating buying at market... 10 times a year and more!

Essentially a family operation, Truskosky's keeps the overhead low. They own their own building. This and selective purchasing results in keeping prices down.

Opened three years ago, Truskosky's has gained quite a reputation for its presentation of name-brand wear... such as Lillian Russell, Kay Windsor, Jo Lester, Fire Islander, Rogue, Devon, etc.

True Fashion, Not Fad

Carol does not purchase "fads" or "trends" at market, but rather chooses for her store "what looks good, what is flattering to large women," as example, and "what looks great on you, our valued customer."

Though reared in Lubbock, graduating from Lubbock High School, Carol was away for some years before opening the store here. In fact, she has had years of experience in the field, buying for her own shop and operating it in New York.

She seems to have gone all out to provide an apparel source for women here, a store reflecting her wide and successful experience. There is no high pressure at the store; one is invited to browse, visit and select at leisure; Truskosky's is a fun place to shop!

"We look forward to seeing you at the Spring Fashion Show Sunday afternoon; and we equally invite and appreciate your visits at our easy-to-find store, 2503 Amherst at University. Our stock might even amaze you!"

Lubbock Electric Serves Oil Industry Throughout Region

Southwest TV And Appliance Serves With 'One-Stop' Concept

Much, much more than an appliance store alone, Mike Shaw's Southwest TV & Appliance, at 3415 82nd St., can provide the "total kitchen" from design to complete furnishing!

Imagine the service, the convenience, the quality... and savings... by relying upon Shaw and his team of professionals for:

- (1) Design and total remodeling of any kitchen;
- (2) Provision of one of the finest quality cabinets on the market today, the Master Craft oak precision-made cabinets;
- (3) Custom building;
- (4) Custom counter tops utilizing beautiful ceramic tile, formica, etc.; and
- (5) Furnishing with one of the largest selections of quality appliances in all West Texas, with choices from the full lines of Frigidaire, Amana and Kitchen Aid.

Shaw and his experts are glad to serve with a turn-key job or to furnish appliances, installation hints, etc., to the extent desired.

"To Any Extent"

"To whatever extent we can help, our aim is to better serve the Lubbock area and to provide a 'one stop' source for kitchen planning, construction, furnishings, etc., with the firm also providing the great electronics by RCA, Quasar and Sony.

"If you are building a new home, we can design the most functional kitchen possible; if you are remodeling, we can design a workable kitchen to fit the existing area.

No matter how large or small, just

New Beauty For Home Furnishings

"Reclaim and protect your investment in quality furniture pieces by obtaining the professional refinishing and restoration services now offered by Finish-Off Stripping Center, 1922 Ave. E."

To assure prolonged life and renewed beauty for valuable or treasured antiques and other favorite furniture items, take advantage of the extensive skills and experience of craftsman Don McBrayer at Finish-Off. Five generations of his family have a continued tradition in the piano refinishing business. McBrayer has accrued 20 years experience in various reconstruction and refinishing techniques as well as in fine woodcrafting. He is accomplished in achieving the unparalleled beauty of hand-rubbed lacquer finishes used on really fine furniture and musical instruments. He has worked with foreign as well as domestic finishes.

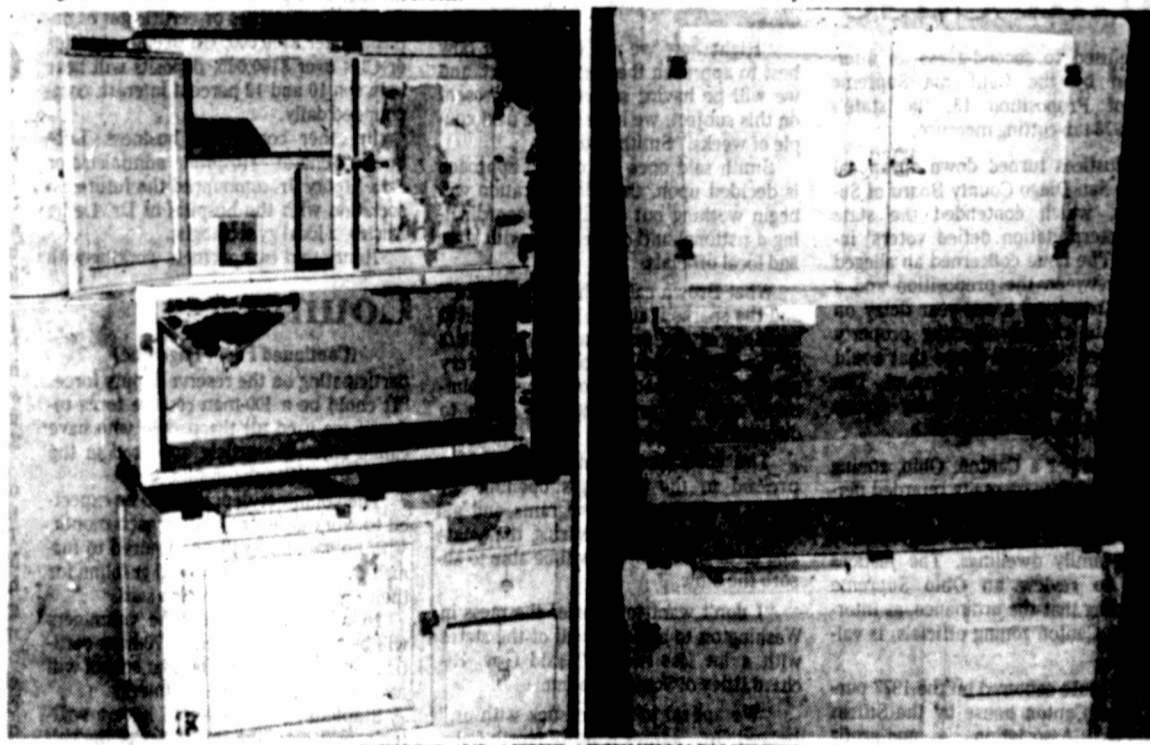

Familiar with the wide assortment of tools, equipment, materials and techniques used in restoring, rebuilding and renewing all types of furniture, McBrayer's unique expertise is particularly valuable in restoring antiques. An antique enthusiast himself, McBrayer takes pride in repairing, reconstructing and even duplicating hand-carved detail in fine woods to accurately restore an antique damaged through neglect, use or accident. To preserve the integrity of any collector's irreplaceable articles, prompt restoration is a monumental task no amateur should attempt.

Persons interested in extending the life of a special item or returning a well-selected furniture piece to usefulness may find professional repair or refinishing to be advantageous as well. A piece of furniture that has grown rickety under constant use or through aging can be stabilized and strengthened beyond even its original condition.

"Perhaps you have a functional piece that needs updating with the added attractiveness of a specialty finish. Maybe a fresh, new look for a favorite, but worn, item could save the trouble and cost of replacement with an inferior or even more expensive product."

Because of the specialized equipment, supplies and skills required to refinish some articles, people are discovering they are saving time and labor to let Finish-Off complete the refinishing process. Of course, the expertise of Finish-Off's craftsmen assure the most professional results.

U.S. Backs Charges Against Soviet Bloc

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration took the unusual step today of releasing captured documents and other materials to support its claim that Soviet-bloc nations have sent tons of weapons to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

appears to be a major effort last year by communist countries on four continents to convert El Salvador into the first unambiguously communist state on the American continent.

to lay the groundwork for unspecified retaliatory action by the United States to counter the Soviet bloc effort.

Congress Faces Fight On Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress begins intensive work this week on President Reagan's economic proposals with Democrats vowing not to rubber-stamp them.

Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Saturday the administration's plan "will not favor the working people, the people who pay taxes and have nothing left."

"Here, as regards the shipments, they have been packing the bundles day and night," the letter said.

Legislators from both parties have expressed concern over the economic effects of Reagan's proposal that tax rates be slashed 10 percent a year for three years, starting July 1.

The tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee opens hearings on the tax package Tuesday and committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said it will take weeks to hear all the anticipated witnesses.

"On the other hand, the warehouses in Esmeralda (Cuba) are filled to the brim with the shipment that arrived last week, over 150 tons."

New Storm Hammers Midwest

A storm packing up to 6 inches of snow and heavy rain ushered winter back to the Midwest today, and New Englanders worked to clear their homes of floodwaters, swept over riverbanks by spring-like temperatures last week.

White House budget director David A. Stockman told The Associated Press in an interview that the administration is open to negotiation with Congress on some parts of the tax plan, but is insisting on a three-year package.

"Also they will have a backlog because more shipments will be arriving this week in Esmeralda reaching between 300 and 400 tons."

Lubbock, along with most of the rest of Texas, will enjoy pleasant weather today and Tuesday, weathermen predict.

At another point, Vladimir said it was impressive "how all countries in the socialist bloc fully committed themselves to meet our every request and some have even doubled their promised aid."

"This is the first revolution in Latin America to which they have unconditionally turned to assist, before the taking of power."

Winds will be westerly to southwesterly at 10 to 15 mph today, 5 to 10 mph tonight and southwesterly at 15 to 20 mph and gusty Tuesday.

At the same time, Energy Secretary James Edwards was scheduled to lobby for Reagan-backed cuts in energy research programs before the Senate Energy Committee.

"I think it's to Cuba's own self-interest to halt them (arms shipments) right now and end this transmittal of subversion into Central America," Meese said.

Heavy, wet snow covered Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Waterloo, Iowa, and Rochester, Minn., received 6 inches of snow late Sunday.

Meese said the administration has developed contingency plans for dealing with developments in El Salvador, but he added, "We're not going to say what they are nor are we precluding anything."

"We're not necessarily limited to military force," he said. "There are economic steps that can be taken. There are intermediate actions that can be taken which have to do with informing the peoples of other countries about what's happening."

Numerous minor traffic accidents were reported in eastern Iowa Sunday, where winds gusting to 40 mph knocked down power lines and disrupted telephone service in some areas.

Administration officials hoped that releasing the evidence today would buttress their contention that the Soviet Union and its allies are committed to converting the country into the first Marxist state on the American continent.

"Reagan would have it both ways," Brown told reporters later. "He would get benefit for providing the money for us, and we would bear the blame for the higher tax."

Light rain and drizzle stretched from the Gulf coast to the Great Lakes, while drizzle and fog clouded the Virginias and North Carolina.

The administration also decided to re-lease its findings to build public support.

Appearing before the governors this morning, Attorney General William French Smith said the administration hopes to come up with its battle plan against violent crime in the next two weeks.

Ice-jammed rivers in New England were unclogged by heavy rains and warm temperatures during the weekend, flooding roads with up to 6 feet of water and forcing families from their homes.

The justices turned down an appeal from the San Diego County Board of Supervisors, which contended the state court's interpretation defied voters' intentions.

"Right now we are considering how best to approach the overall subject, and we will be having something to present on this subject, we hope, in the next couple of weeks," Smith said.

The bus carrying fans and officials of the Oklahoma Stars hockey team was returning home from a game in Tulsa when it spun out of control and overturned Sunday.

The dispute centered on the 1977 purchase of a Canton house by the Siffirin Residential Association, a non-profit group that arranges normal living environments for the mentally retarded.

"I don't want to transfer the mess in Washington to a mess in all of the states with a lot less money," said Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina.

Bud Kahmer, a director of the Stars fan club, said the bus that crashed and the one in which he was riding were going too fast in the rainstorm.

—Refused to sidetrack a $630 million libel suit filed against Penthouse magazine by owners of the resort Rancho La Costa, who were called "mobsters" in a March 1975 article.

There was speculation that this time he was not well enough for such a long public performance.

"When thunder clouds gathered on the international horizon by the beginning of the 1980s," he said, "the Soviet Union continued to persevere in efforts to remove the threat of war and to preserve and deepen detente and acted to expand mutually beneficial cooperation with most countries of the world."

Governors Ponder Plan To Boost Gasoline Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is considering a 2-cent-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax to help state and local governments finance highway maintenance.

want the states to have this flexibility."

Reagan has proposed a cut in the program this year, and a cap for the next several years well below the growth rate of medical costs.

The proposal, which would raise about $2 billion annually, would need congressional approval.

Budget director David A. Stockman told the National Governors' Association on Sunday the administration may ask that states be allowed to pre-empt some or all of the additional revenues raised through an increase in the tax, which now is 4 cents a gallon.

Most states have no latitude in setting reasonable hospital rates. If they approve patient care, they have to pay whatever the hospitals charge.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis acknowledged that Congress had rejected several Carter administration proposals to raise the tax 5 cents to 15 cents a gallon to promote conservation.

Revenue from the gasoline tax now is earmarked for a trust fund used primarily for highway construction.

As a result, Medicaid costs have soared to $30 billion a year, with the states paying 55 percent.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California criticized the proposal, saying the federal government would increase the tax as a state relief measure and then drop it, leaving the states to re-impose it as a state tax.

Lubbock County Hospital District finance committee members today approved a depository contract with Lubbock National Bank for the next two years.

Henry earlier told The Avalanche-Journal the clinic's physicians had become upset with improper billing procedures at the hospital which were cutting revenues to the clinic.

What Brown called the "tax shuffle," and the sparks it struck, provided a vivid example of the problems the governors face with Reagan's economic recovery program.

The committee reviewed bids from Lubbock National and First National banks in a meeting today and voted to accept a staff recommendation that the contract be signed with Lubbock National, its current depository.

The hospital district's full board was expected to consider the depository contract and other matters in a meeting at 1:30 p.m. today.

The governors' greatest fear, as expressed in the meeting's opening sessions, is that federal programs and aid will be cut without ensuring that state and local governments will be able to absorb the blow.

First National's proposal would have yielded lower interest rates than Lubbock National's, with time deposit rates to be compounded quarterly.

Meanwhile, in a speech carried by Tehran Radio today, Rajai defended the Iranian revolution as "creative and humane," an apparent retort to moderate secular critics within his own country — including President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

"I don't want to transfer the mess in Washington to a mess in all of the states with a lot less money," said Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina.

Lubbock National's rates will yield the district 8 percent interest on multiple and fixed maturities or certificates of deposit over $100,000. On fixed maturities or CDs over $100,000, deposits will bear between 10 and 12 percent interest, compounded daily.

Rajai, a hardline cleric and member of the fundamentalist Islamic Revolutionary Party, told an Indian reporter in Tehran: "In our war against Iraq, a Marxist will not go to fight for us though he will be willing to fight for his ideology," according to the latest issue of the magazine Sunday.

"We appeal to you to stick with us," begged Gov. James Hunt of North Carolina. "We believe that when it gets to Congress, a lot of people are not going to

The Iran-Iraq war over rights to the vital Shatt al-Arab waterway between the two nations, began its sixth month today. Teen Reports Sexual Assault Near Tech Campus

A 16-year-old girl told police she was attacked and sexually molested about 9:15 p.m. Sunday by a man in an alley near the Tech University campus.

The girl, who told officers she was five months pregnant, said she was walking home when the assailant grabbed her and pulled her down next to a trash dumpster.

The man allegedly tore the teenager's blouse, fondled her and slapped her in the face when she screamed. The girl said she broke free and ran to a friend's apartment, where she called police.

The victim, who officers said was visibly shaken, was taken to Lubbock General Hospital for treatment and counseling.

The suspect was described as a slim, 6-foot-tall Mexican-American in his 20s, with long, stringy black hair. The girl said he spoke in a deep voice with a strong Spanish accent.

In a separate incident, a 35-year-old

Lubbock woman was hospitalized about 8 p.m. Sunday after she reportedly was beaten by her husband.

The woman told police she and her husband were arguing when the man began striking her in the face, chest and stomach. The victim today was in satisfactory condition at St. Mary's Hospital with multiple injuries, including a severely bruised kidney.

Rex A. McLennan, 41, of 2019 39th St. was treated at Lubbock General Hospital shortly after midnight today after he reportedly was assaulted at a club in the 2400-block of Marshall Street.

McLennan told police he and another man got into a scuffle over money. The assailant allegedly knocked the victim out of a chair, kicked him several times in the face and cut him with a piece of glass. A friend took McLennan to the hospital.

Debra Denise Terrell, 20, of Lubbock said she was assaulted by one of two men she caught burglarizing her apartment.

The woman told investigators she awoke about 2 a.m. today to find the intruders going through her residence. One of the men, realizing the woman was awake, reportedly struck her on the side of the face with a glass cup.

The burglars had fled before Miss Terrell's roommate arrived and found the injured woman. She was treated at Lubbock General Hospital for two cuts to the face. The assailants were described as tall black men.

Linda Garnica, 33, said she was attacked about 4:30 p.m. Sunday when she went to a Cornell Street residence and complained about beer being sold to juveniles.

Mrs. Garnica said several persons were present when she was complaining to another woman about the woman's selling alcoholic beverages to children. She said another woman then jumped her, striking her in the face. Reports did not indicate the victim suffered serious injuries.

Reports state the Gateway Conoco Station at 3301 Clovis Road was burglarized and ransacked between Friday and 1 a.m. today.

Police said brake fluid and oil were poured on the floors, papers were scattered and glue was spread on a telephone and desk calculator. Obscenities also were scrawled in a pool of oil on the garage floor, bottles were broken, lights on a pickup shattered and a toilet stuffed with various items, resulting in the flooding of the bathroom.

Police said two 21-year-old men were arrested about 3:30 a.m. today after prohibited weapons were found in their car parked in the 2100-block of 21st Street.

Officers said they confiscated a sawed-off baseball bat and a pair of "brass knuckles" in the men's vehicle.

Police Nab Two City Robbery Suspects

By JACK DOUGLAS

Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Lubbock man and his 41-year-old female companion were arrested shortly before 11 p.m. Sunday after they were spotted in a vehicle matching the description of a getaway car used in a service station holdup several hours earlier.

However, the gun-toting man who is thought to have entered the Fina service station at Brownfield Road and Quaker Avenue about 7:30 p.m., while two persons waited outside in a maroon Monte Carlo, is still at large. Det. Lt. Billy Knox said this morning.

Knox said police investigators have received the first name of a possible third suspect in the holdup, which netted a reported $1,000.

Officer Patrick Kelly said he saw a car — identical to the one reportedly used in the heist — run a stop light at 19th Street and Avenue K at 10:55 p.m.

After the car was stopped, the 30-year-old driver and the woman were taken into custody on suspicion of being accomplices to the holdup.

Reports state six packages of a green substance were confiscated from the vehicle. A subsequent test revealed the substance to be hashish, investigators said.

The man and woman were in the Lubbock County Jail this morning on suspicion of aggravated robbery and possession of a controlled substance. The suspects were not immediately identified, pending filing of charges.

The 21-year-old station attendant, Dave Wayne Salls, said a tall black man entered the business, asked for a package of cigarettes and pulled up his shirt, revealing a pistol tucked in his pants. "Be cool, and give me the money," Salls quoted the bandit as saying.

The employee said the man was belligerent, very talkative and once told him, "Quit looking at me or I'll shoot you."

Police said the armed man pushed Salls into a back office, handed him a roll of tape and ordered him to tie his ankles. The robber then attempted to use the tape to tie the attendant's hands behind him, but the tape kept tearing apart.

Salls said the man told him, "If this tape breaks one more time I'm going to shoot you." However, detectives said the bandit left the office, closing the door behind him, without harming the employee.

Salls said he could hear the man moving about in another room, and then heard a woman ask the bandit to get "me two packages of Benson and Hedges." Salls told police his first thoughts were that the man had been surprised by a customer, and was forced to make a purchase to keep from looking suspicious.

Officer In Friona Shoots Man During Altercation

FRIONA (Special) — A 26-year-old Levelland man died at Parmer County Community Hospital early Sunday morning after being shot by a Friona police officer responding to a domestic disturbance call.

Cesario C. Mendoza, a welder who formerly lived in Friona, reportedly was shot by officer Nick R. Hand, who was stabbed in the left side in the incident.

Hand was in satisfactory condition today at a Levelland hospital, according to Friona Police Chief Bill Denney.

Denney said the shooting appeared to have been in self defense and that the case would go before the next grand jury. Asked if Hand will be placed on temporary suspension, the chief said, "He will take a few days off; I'll put it that way."

A police spokesman declined to reveal specific details, but said Hand and other officers responded to a disturbance called in from 1001 Virginia Ave.

Services for Mendoza are pending with Parsons-Ellis Funeral Home of Friona.

He was born in Morton and was a welder in Levelland. He married Esther Rios in January 1980 in Levelland.

Survivors include his wife, of Levelland; three daughters, Dianna and Michelle, both of Friona, and Jeannie of Levelland; his mother, Mrs. Daniel Mendoza of Friona; 10 sisters, Ramona Flores, Tina Carrillo and Mary Prieto, all of Friona, Lupe Pesina of Hereford, Mary Vela of Whiteface, Victoria Garcia of Burley, Idaho, Alice Gonzalez of Kansas, Ramona Trevino of Amarillo, Janie Kauffman of Payett, Idaho and Mrs. Santos Rosales of Ropes; six brothers, Dan Jr., Joe, Julian and Nemesico, all of Friona and John of Hereford and Abel of Kansas.

Lawyers Say Exams Part Of Ploy

ANAHUAC (UPI) — Lawyers for Vickie Daniel say an attempt to subject her and her two children to psychiatric examinations is merely a ploy for the prosecution to gather more material for her murder trial.

Mrs. Daniel is charged in the Jan. 19 shooting death of her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr.

Daniel's sister and executrix of his estate — Jean Daniel Murph of Richardson — wants custody of the two children.

Mrs. Murph has asked Judge W.G. Woods to order a psychiatric examination of Mrs. Daniel and the children. A hearing was scheduled at 10 a.m. today.

Mrs. Murph's attorney said the psychiatric examinations are necessary, but defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes said, "They are doing this so they can use that lawsuit to enhance the prosecution in the murder case."

"You don't have to be too astute to recognize that Mrs. Daniel is not a criminal, per se," Haynes said. "She has no record of law breaking."

The defense is also seeking to have the custody suit moved to Tyler.

Andrew Lannie of Baytown, one of Mrs. Daniel's three attorneys, said the Tyler court would have proper jurisdiction because she and the children were residents of Smith County at the time the custody suit was filed.

Unusual Measures Keep State Legislators Busy

By United Press International
Between such mundane matters as fiscal budgets and school appropriations, state lawmakers are toiling over some offbeat measures — like providing hormones to dwarfs, giving death row convicts options for their executions and choosing official state fossils.

The action on Capitol Hill in Washington may grab most of the headlines, but there are some interesting antics afoot in America's state capitals.

Take, for instance, a bill in the Arkansas Senate designed to aid the state's dwarf population.

It would allow the state medical examiner to remove the pituitary gland from a corpse during an autopsy and donate it to the Arkansas Dwarf Association. A clause in the bill explains that the association could then extract "hormones needed by dwarfs."

Then there's a California measure seeking to prevent dogs and cats from being hunted down by Southeast Asian immigrants.

State Sen. Marz Garcia, a Republican, says some new immigrants — accustomed to eating dogs and cats in their homelands — have been stalking the animals in California. So he introduced a bill, recently passed by a committee, that would make the killing of a dog or cat for food a misdemeanor. Killing a dog or cat for any other purpose would still be legal.

"I decided to go ahead with the legislation to avoid a cultural conflict," he said.

Oklahoma state Rep. Frank Shurden introduced a bill to give death row convicts the option of dying by lethal drug injection — as state law currently holds — or, if they so choose, to be executed in the same manner they killed their victims.

Shurden, who also introduced a bill to give third-time male sex offenders the option of castration or a lengthy jail term, said his latest bill was prompted by inmate lawsuits charging drug injection executions are inhumane.

"If a convicted murderer thinks the injections are a little rough on him, he can choose to die the same way he killed his victim," Shurden said. "If an inmate wants to be clubbed to death or stabbed to death, let's give him a choice."

In New York, the state Senate is still lamenting the loss of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who moved to Los Angeles two decades ago.

It passed a resolution to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the "first and only time" the Brooklyn Dodgers won a world championship and expressed the hope the team would someday return to "their one and only true home."

Angered by the hostage crisis, Wyoming state Rep. Joe Stewart introduced a measure to bar the enrollment of Iranian students at the University of Wyoming and the state's seven community colleges.

"In view of the fact that they're a bunch of international bandits, I don't think the state of Wyoming should pay for their education," the Democrat declared. "Who knows what they are going to do after they leave here?"

No action has yet been taken on his measure.

In Vermont, state Rep. Norman Reed said municipalities in his constituency are sick and tired of paying for rescue efforts to pull people and their cars from the 182-foot Quechee Gorge, a popular sightseeing attraction located off a state highway. So he introduced a measure seeking state reimbursement for community rescues of unfortunate tourists.

Idaho faces a severe state budget tangle, but a hot issue firing up state lawmakers in Boise this year is the withdrawal of their special parking privileges.

The Boise City Council withdrew the legislators' free parking privileges, claiming it needed money from parking meter revenues. Since the withdrawal, a bill has been introduced to ban parking meters within 150 feet of all public buildings in the state.

"Boise stuck its neck out and we ought to chop it off," one angry lawmaker said.

A measure recently introduced in Maryland had little to do with state affairs, but it generated national attention.

Actor Clayton Moore, star of television's Lone Ranger series, was stripped last year by a Los Angeles judge of his right to wear the mask that made him famous. The company with the rights to the Lone Ranger successfully argued that Moore, 64, no longer was good for the character's image.

In galloped Baltimore delegate Raymond Dypski. In a gallant appearance before a legislative committee, he argued that people needed heroes nowadays and Moore represented just that. His plea to get the Legislature to formally recognize Moore as the real Lone Ranger went down in dismal defeat, however.

Many of the more offbeat bills in state legislatures are aimed at giving something — a fish, even a fossil — an official designation.

New York state Sen. Martin Aver wants to make milk the official state beverage.

Colorado state Sen. Polly Baca-Barragan, at the urging of her 9-year-old daughter and her classmates, introduced a bill to have the stegosaurus named the official state fossil.

Michigan Workers Protesting Taxes

DETROIT (AP) — About 3,500 Flint-area workers, in what the Internal Revenue Service calls "one of the biggest tax protest movements in the country," are directing employers not to make income tax deductions from their paycheck.

Most of the workers are employees of General Motors Corp., where word of the protest has spread by word-of-mouth and through organizations promoting the revolt, the Detroit News reported Sunday.

The workers have been trying to sidestep deductions by claiming as many as 99 dependents on their W-4 forms. Others filed federal W-4E forms, designed for low-income workers who do not plan to earn enough to pay income taxes, he said.

One protest leader contends labor is a personal property traded to an employer for wages and is ineligible for taxation.

IRS officials initially became aware of the move when employers, as required by law, began informing the IRS last fall of large numbers of employees changing their filing status.

"This is the biggest, or at least one of the biggest, tax protest movements in the country," said Leonard Nawrocki, IRS manager of criminal investigations in Flint.

Nawrocki said many of the workers, feeling there is "safety in numbers," do not expect to be prosecuted for false returns.

"We're trying to alert people and convince them that wages are taxable and they could be subject to penalties, interest and criminal sanctions if they continue to refuse to pay," Nawrocki said.

Dean Hazel of Pontiac, a GM employee who founded the tax protest group "We The People ACT," said an estimated 700 members pay $65 in monthly dues for such benefits as tax law workshops and cassette tapes.

"If Nawrocki wants to haul our guys into court, he'll get his ears pinned back," said Hazel. "The IRS has been losing on 'false and fraudulent' W-4 cases for years. So many people are doing it they'll never be able to keep up."

Reward Offered For Prim Murder Information

Crime Line Inc. this week offers $1,000 in reward money for leads in the murder of former city zoning administrator A.J. Prim — a case which is more than 11 years old.

Prim was found at 3 a.m. July 8, 1970, shot in his 1967 Chevrolet at the intersection of FM 1729 and Acuff Road. He died 16 days later from the incident in Methodist Hospital from .22-caliber wounds in the abdomen.

Prim was able to tell sheriff's deputies a black man entered his car at a traffic light at Idalou Road and Quirt Avenue and forced him to drive east of the city. The 50-year-old Prim told police his abductor shot him when Prim refused to follow the black man's instructions. Prim said he attempted to drive back into Lubbock, but passed out several times before passersby found him slumped over the wheel in his car.

The Lubbock County Sheriff's Department recently reopened the decade-old investigation of the murder of the city official. Anyone having information about the case is urged to call Crime Line at 741-1000. Callers will remain anonymous.

Crime Line is supported entirely by private donations. Persons wishing to contribute to the Crime Line reward fund may mail their tax-deductible donations to Crime

Line Inc., P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, 79457.

A $300 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Pepper Calvin, charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

She is described as white, 19 to 23 years old, and Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy issued a warrant for her arrest.

Information leading to the arrest of fugitive Michael Ray Crawford, 30, will bring a $300 reward from Crime Line. Charged with felony theft, he is described only as of birth at Dec. 14, 1950.

A $300 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of suspects in a Feb. 16 burglary in which $745 worth of property was stolen.

Police were called to 2110 21st St. Apt. B about 5:05 p.m. Feb. 16, and the victim told police that between 1:30 and 5 p.m. that day, someone cut the screen on the back east window of his home, entering through the unlocked window.

Taken were a Panasonic 13-inch black-and-white television set with a black face and white case and the letters "M.G." under the top handle, a Ithaca .12-gauge automatic model XL-900 shotgun with silver side plates, a brown wood-grain Magnavox AM/FM clock radio, a gray portable Sears AM/FM cassette player/recorder, and a 1972 size 9 1/2 Quannah High School senior class ring bearing the initials "M.E.G."

Information leading to the arrest of the suspect in a Tuesday burglary will bring a $300 reward from Crime Line. Police were called to 3324 20th St. at 2:55 p.m. Tuesday, and the victim told police burglars probably entered the house through the unlocked back door between 12:40 and 2:45 p.m. that day.

Taken were several pieces of silver, including a 15-inch bowl, a teapot, a sugar bowl and a cream pitcher. Also a silver model TCM-111 Sony cassette player/recorder serial 040017 and a silver and black Regency reel-to-reel recorder. Total loss is $680.

A $300 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of a suspect in a Feb. 16 burglary at West Texas Salvage Sales, 3524 Ave. Q, in which an estimated $2,000 in property was taken.

Called to the business at 9:30 a.m. that day, police were told that the air conditioner on the top of the building was removed, and burglars entered through the shaft between 6 p.m. Feb. 14 and 6:30 a.m. Feb. 16.

The office safe was broken open and $448.94 in cash and checks were taken. $40 in cash also was taken from a nearby desk drawer. Other missing items include approximately 20 Timex watches, 50 Old Timer knives by Schrade, five Norelco electric razors, two ladies' watches and a Bell and Howell sound movie camera.

Texans Regain Strength On Government Panels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texans appear to be making their first strides toward regaining the clout they lost through retirements in the House two years ago.

That was when such longtime Capitol Hill fixtures, and committee chairmen, as George Mahon of Lubbock and the late Olin "Tiger" Teague of College Station retired.

Now that the committee assignments have been completed for the new 97th Congress, evaluations show members of the Texas delegation more strategically placed than they were in the last congressional session.

Hearings are held and legislation is shaped in committees, so congressmen perhaps can exercise their greatest influence at that level.

"I'd say we gained in terms of chairmanships," Rep. Phil Gramm, a College Station Democrat, said. "Certainly I would think the delegation's overall power and influence expanded."

Dary Stone, the new director of Texas state-federal liaison office in Washington, is convinced that the state's influence in Congress has increased.

"Absolutely, just no doubt about it," he said.

Here's the scorecard of changes from the 96th to 97th Congress:

The Texas delegation's position in the House was boosted by the moves of Rep. Kent Hance, a Lubbock Democrat, to the tax-writing ways and means committees and Rep. Tom Loeffler, a Hunt Republican, to the appropriations committee.

Those are two of the three committees that are considered the most powerful in the House.

The retirement of former Rep. Ray Roberts, a McKinney Democrat, cost the state's delegation one full committee chairmanship. It was the House Veterans Affairs Committee, ranked among the less powerful panels.

This year, Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, a Mission Democrat, became chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, a more strategic spot. That keeps the number of committee chairmanships held by Texans at two, since Rep. Jack Brooks, a Beaumont Democrat, retains the leadership of the House Government Operations Committee.

And no list of Texas clout in the House can overlook Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth.

As far as subcommittee chairmanships go, Roberts also was chairman of a public works subcommittee on water resources. Former Rep. Bob Eckhardt, a Houston Democrat defeated last fall, was chairman of the commerce subcommittee in charge of oversight and investigations.

In the new 97th Congress, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat, and Rep. Richard White, a Democrat from El Paso, traded in the subcommittee.

DOES GROUP INSURANCE MEAN YOU CAN'T COLLECT UNTIL THE WHOLE GROUP IS SICK?

Church Rejects Resignation Of Pastor

In an unprecedented action, the members of First Presbyterian Church rejected their pastor's resignation by voting to reaffirm the original invitation of the church for the pastor.

The Rev. Robert Nicholson, pastor of the church since 1971, called for the Sunday meeting of the church members to accept or reject the resignation he had submitted Feb. 11.

The large vote to reaffirm Nicholson will place the decision of his resignation with the Palo Duro Union Presbytery for a decision in March.

Nicholson refused to comment on the vote, explaining he was too close to the situation to make a public statement.

One church member said the resignation stemmed from misunderstandings between the pastor and church officers.

Sunday's meeting was moderated by the Rev. Paul D. Young, General Presbyter of First Presbyterian Church.

3-Year-Old Claims Push-Up Record

EL PASO (AP) — Henry Marshall Jr., son of the world's push-up champion, has broken one world mark and now wants to kick his father completely out of the record book.

Besides being able to do more than 3,000 push-ups in two hours, the main thing Henry Jr. has going for him in his quest is time — he is only 3 years old.

Young Henry got interested in doing push-ups from his father, Henry Marshall Sr. of San Antonio, who holds the world's record in 10 push-up categories and once did 2,800 push-ups using only one arm.

"Ever since he was a small baby he lay next to me during my four-hour workout," said Marshall Sr., 35, who was in El Paso visiting friends. "He started doing girls' push-ups on his knees and

MARCH OF SOLIDARITY — Hundreds of farmworkers form all over south Texas march to the shrine of Our Lady of Guadalupe in San Juan from the site of the third annual United Farm Workers Union convention held there Sunday. UFW president Cesar Chavez presided along with local UFW-CIO union leaders and local and state politicians. (AP Laserphoto)

Farm Workers Union Head Says Priorities Include More Strikes

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — Strikes and increased labor organizing head the priorities of the United Farm Workers, AFL-CIO, for the coming year in Texas, says national President Cesar Chavez.

"We're talking about a paid membership and initiating work stoppages against growers with additional organizing in the (Lower Rio Grande) Valley," Chavez told a news conference Sunday.

He was in Texas for the UFW's state convention.

Chavez was not specific about which growers would be singled out for strikes. The semitropical Valley grows citrus and many types of vegetables.

The union is urging the Texas Legislature to pass a bill extending workers compensation coverage to farmworkers, although the measure has failed in the past.

Chavez avoided comment on a rival union that was founded by a former co-worker who split over organizational tactics.

Antonio Orendain founded the Texas Farm Workers Union, not affiliated with the AFL-CIO, and this year called for a "general strike" against the Valley's $70 million citrus industry.

Growers say the strike has fizzled and AFL-CIO groups are upset over Orendain's tactics. At one point, the TFW picketed a union juice factory.

"I know the AFL-CIO doesn't look upon that favorably," Chavez told reporters in a rare reference to Orendain.

About 500 farmworkers, mostly from the Lower Rio Grande Valley, attended the one-day convention in a school gymnasium decorated with red and black banners and posters depicting farmworkers in the field, at the ballot box and on the picket line.

Texas farmworkers are predominantly Mexican-American, and often speak only Spanish.

The Reagan administration scrapped proposals left over from President Carter that would have made bilingual education mandatory in all 12 grades. Texas requires the special instruction through the third grade.

"It is apparent that Ronald Reagan is no friend of the Mexican people or of the poor," the resolution said.

In another resolution, the group criticized a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding an employer's right to require employees to speak English on the job. The case originated in Brownsville.

Farmworkers from Ohio asked the group to boycott products made by Libby's or Campbells Soup. Baldemar Velasquez, with the Farm Labor Organizing Committee in Ohio, accused the two companies of unfair negotiating practices during a recent tomato strike.

In other action, the convention endorsed a Democrat in a local state senate race that has drawn statewide interest after Gov. Bill Clements campaigned for a Republican candidate.

Rep. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, received the UFW's support.

Children Die From Fumes During Mother's Suicide

MESQUITE (AP) — A policeman's wife wrote a note for her husband and two kids that said, in part, "I wasn't the best Mom."

She then committed suicide by breathing automobile exhaust fumes and her children died in their sleep when those fumes leaked from the garage into the house, investigators said.

Jackie Marie Heerd, 33, was found lying on the kitchen floor of her home in this Dallas suburb. Her automobile, gasoline tank empty, was in the garage and the door from the garage into the kitchen was open — carbon monoxide filled the house, police said.

She apparently was returning to the house when she collapsed, leaving the door open to the fatal fumes.

"She may have changed her mind about committing suicide, she may have remembered one last thing to do. We don't know," said field investigator Tony Badger of the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office.

"We think it happened sometime in the morning because the car had run out of gas, the kids were still in bed and it looked as if they had all been dead about six hours," Badger said.

The children — Richard Lawrence Heerd, 5, and Sheryl Lynn Heerd, 10 — were found dead in their beds, clad in their pajamas, he added.

The grim discovery was made by Mrs. Heerd's estranged husband, Mesquite Police Sgt. Richard Heerd, between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. Saturday, police said.

Badger issued a preliminary ruling of accidental asphyxiation by carbon monoxide in the children's deaths.

"It didn't look like she meant to kill the kids," he said. "She left a note to her children and husband."

"I wasn't the best Mom... Do the best you can," Badger quoted the note as say.

DEAR ABBY

Woman Motivated By Letter

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations on your 25th anniversary as "Dear Abby." I have a very special reason for wanting to wish you well.

Twelve years ago you had a letter in your column signed TOO LATE. Abby, that letter motivated me to visit my aging and ailing mother every day during her last two years in a nursing home. I was doing quite well to visit her every Sunday for an hour.

I will always be indebted to you, Abby, for selecting that letter for your column. It motivated me to change my ways, and now I can live with a clear conscience.

Please run that letter again, Abby. It might do for someone else what it did for me.

GRATEFUL IN LONG ISLAND

grass above them. I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them. I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think.

TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: I am a recent college graduate engaged to be married this summer. I became engaged while I was in college last year, and asked one of my school chums to be a bridesmaid. At the time we were good friends. However, we grew apart gradually, until now when we meet, she hardly gives me the time of day. In fact, the last few times we met there seemed to be tension between us. Now I don't even consider her a friend.

Must I include her in my wedding party? If not, how can I gracefully exclude her?

STUCK OR NOT

61-year-old husband more now than I ever have. With our children grown and gone, the setting is ideal for romance. I still race home from the office to bathe and meet him at the door in a lace coat (the type one wears over a bathing suit). There's more to life than cooking, laundry and making beds!

I no longer have to worry about pregnancy or having the children hear us. These are the best years of our lives. I'm saving up for a mirrored bedroom ceiling!

DEAR GRATEFUL: I am grateful to you for reminding me to run it again. I have printed it three times, and each time I have heard from readers expressing appreciation. With pleasure I give it a much deserved rerun.

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heart-broken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat at home alone, loving me just the same. It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green

Nutrition, Health Lecture Set

A series of lectures from various disciplines, with speakers addressing various topics relating to human nutrition, is being given at Texas Tech University.

The lecture series were the brainchild of Dr. Leon Hopkins, head of the school of nutrition of the College of Home Economics, but faculty members from various departments and disciplines across the campus have taken part in planning the lecture series.

It is an attempt to bring together various disciplines and points of view in regard to problems of human nutrition, the

Lots of things seem to be happening in and around Lubbock right now — looks like the fine Spring weather makes everyone want to get out of the house (or office) and do something special...

Those terrific women out at Reese are busily planning their annual benefit auction for Saturday at the Officers' Club. Sue Pansello tells us that the selection of art this year from Royal Art, Ltd., Los Angeles, is exceptional. As always, proceeds will be donated to local charities. Preview starts at 7:30; everyone is welcome of course.

South Plains Plant Society will begin its 1981 season Thursday at 7:30 with a visit from the Littlefield Chapter of the African Violet Society, which will present a program on raising show-quality African Violets. Tom Sorelle of the Littlefield Club won the Queen of Show award at both the October and December general flower shows at the Garden & Arts Center.

South Plains Plant Society, which meets the fourth Thursday, is one of the few local garden clubs that is family-oriented and meets at night so working people can participate. It has both novice and experienced gardeners, of both sexes, and interests range from vegetables and herbs to orchids. More information? — Call Pat Harris, 797-4861.

Andre Piot will give a Christian Science lecture Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Room 107 of the Lubbock Civic Center. The public is invited to his talk on "Unlocking Bible Treasures."

February speaker at the Interdisciplinary seminar series on Human Nutrition, sponsored by the Department of Philosophy and the Lubbock Philosophy Club and offered through the College of Home Economics, will be Henry O. Kunkel, dean of the College of Agriculture at Texas A&M. He will speak on "ethics in nutritional and agricultural research" at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Room 169 of the Food Science Annex.

Christian Fellowship of Nurses meets Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Staff Room of St. Mary's Hospital to hear Tom McGovern speak on alcoholic rehabilitation.

Lubbock Women's Club members will view scenes from the Tech production of "A Streetcar Named Desire" Thursday at noon.

South Plains Association for Children with Learning Disabilities meets Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Oakwood Methodist to hear from directors for the Summer Camp for Children with Learning Disabilities talk about that program. The group will also meet for lunch today at Hemphill-Wells Mall store, for an informal get-together.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:
Lubbock Crosby Garza County Medical Auxiliary meets Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the Lubbock Women's Club to hear Dr. Robert Hayes of Tech speak on Modern Latin American History and Politics. Linda Fisher also reminds members to remember the style show luncheon March 3 at the Women's Club.

South Plains Fiberarts Guild meets tonight at 7:30 at Beck's Warp and Weave to learn lace weaving techniques from Jean Grimes, Jo Ponder and Carolyn Ross. Visitors are welcome.

Recovery, Inc., the association of nervous and formal mental patients, meets Thursday at 8 p.m. at University Ministries, 2412 13th St. For more information call Laura, 796-1499.

Texas Retired Teachers and National Retired Teachers Association meet Thursday at noon at First Christian Church, when Barbara Sommerville's singers and dancers will be special guests.

Chi Chi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi meets Tuesday at 7:30 in the home of Gwen Bain, 33204 A 74th. All local BSP women will also be attending the city-wide charity ball to be held Saturday — their big annual fund raising event.

Redbud Craft and Garden Club meets Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Royce Newsum, 5234 15th., for demonstration by Donna Alburn on making love knots.

South Plains Iris Society meets Monday at 7:30 in the Garden and Arts Center for a program by Charles Post, former president of S.P.I.S. and Tech music professor.

A reminder: La Leche League has both a morning and an evening group meeting weekly; babies are always welcome. For more information, call 792-1171.

At Wit's End...

Something has got to be done about the Suds Majority.

The S.M.'s are a militant group of soap opera watchers who in recent years have become quite vocal if anything interferes with the airing of their stories.

I'm not talking about your Social Soap Watchers who watch the soaps to unwind and who can quit "As the World Turns" anytime they want to.

I'm talking about your Chronic Viewers who every day of their lives need "One Life to Live" just to get started, can't stop watching until they stagger into the bedroom late at night from "Dallas" and are an embarrassment to their families.

Every time a national news story breaks of great impact on the country, you can count on them to send up a roar that is heard throughout the country—especially if the event preempts their soaps. Their feeling is if you want to end the Vietnam war, have a funeral for a national figure, or bring the hostages home from Iran, do it before 10 a.m. or after 2 p.m.

Somehow, I have the feeling if the network broadcast a warning to hit the bunkers by 1 p.m. if you expect to survive, a Soap Fanatic would call the station and say, "Does that mean you're not going to show 'Ryan's Hope'?"

Several decades ago, I read a short story about a restroom attendant who felt she was cut off from the drama of life, stuck away in a powder room replacing soap and giving hand towels to the women who came and went. To fight the monotony, she immersed herself in movie magazines, living vicariously in their adventures and their glamorous lives.

She never saw the steady parade of real-life drama that was within her touch. The women who unloaded their pain, their anxiety, their fears, their personal problems and one who was contemplating suicide played to a deaf audience.

Reality just wasn't dramatic enough.

I know about the Suds Majority. My grandmother was the Founding Mother of the movement. Television hadn't been invented yet, but Grandma marked her vigil every day at the radio beginning with the serial "Betty and Bob." When Bob was out of work, Grandma cut back. When Betty had a headache, Grandma took two aspirin.

I don't think Grandma ever knew she was surrounded by a widowed daughter, a son going out to war, a son-in-law out of work, a husband down to three days' work and the creditors moving in.

She always said, "Shhhh. My soaps are on."

Walking Termed Ideal Exercise

CHICAGO (AP)—Walking is not only inexpensive, requiring minimal equipment, it is safe and has an extremely low injury rate, says a medical writer who specializes in sports fitness and health areas.

Many physicians and physical fitness experts now regard walking as the ideal exercise for any age, says Marc Davis, writing in the 1981 "Medical and Health Annual."

The physical and mental benefits of walking now have been established beyond doubt, he points out. It is considered one of the most efficient means of developing and maintaining physical fitness and it also has a calming, tranquilizing effect. Stress-related problems such as headache, anxiety, tension and depression often disappear.

Walking is especially good for the heart, according to Davis.

"In human beings, with their upright posture, the heart must work against the force of gravity to pump blood from the lower body back up for recirculation," he states.

"The muscle strength developed in the legs from regular walking serves as a 'second heart,' powerfully contracting against the veins during movement. This action serves as a pump assisting in the transportation of blood to the heart and thereby reduces some of the cardiac work load."

Walking also accelerates the heart rate and increases the consumption and processing of oxygen, he adds. There is evidence it may help prevent heart attacks. Heart attacks, if they do occur, may not be as severe in people who have been exercising regularly, the article states.

The calming effect of walking has been demonstrated repeatedly, Davis notes. Walking provides an acceptable, positive outlet for relaxing tension. It is non-competitive, providing distraction from stress-producing concerns while elevating the mood of the walker. Walking can even induce feelings of euphoria, a phenomenon joggers have experienced. Veteran walkers also claim that a long, brisk stroll sharpens their senses and enhances their mental and creative powers. Improved circulatory efficiency, which

President Responds To Students' Letter

By ANN EVANS
Family News Staff

How many children have received a personal letter from the President of the United States at ten years of age?

Probably not many. But the pupils in Mrs. Fern Turner's fourth and fifth grade classes at Reese Elementary School recently got a reply from Ronald Reagan for the letters they wrote him.

"Dear Girls and Boys," wrote Reagan. "I want you to know how much your messages meant to me. There is much to do and I count on your help in our efforts to make that new beginning we all desire.

"The support of our nation's young people is encouraging to me, in a democracy even the smallest voices are important to the leaders of government. Keep up the good work! With best wishes always, sincerely, Ronald Reagan."

"We followed the campaign trail and watched the inauguration," explained Mrs. Turner, who has been a teacher for 30 years. "We also talked about the economy and what Reagan wants to do about it."

The children voted for the presidential election in their "Weekly Reader", a children's magazine. The "Weekly Reader" then correctly predicted the election, based on children's votes.

"This reflects the thinking of the parents," said Mrs. Turner. "A few of the children had voted for Carter, but they decided that Reagan was our new president and they were going to support him."

The letters to the president were written the day after the inauguration in connection with an English assignment. Mrs. Turner said she was surprised when the children got a reply from Reagan only two weeks after the letters were mailed.

"I've never seen such enthusiasm during an election!" she said. "The children had fun writing their letters — some even drew jelly beans on the envelopes."

The children's letters had lots of support for Reagan. "My family voted for Carter, but I'm standing behind you," wrote Linda Ramos. "I'm not asking for an autograph, I'm asking for a better and freer America."

Judy Griffiths wrote the President, "if I was old enough to vote, I'd vote for you."

"We trust and believe in you," wrote Lynn DoRego. "Aren't you glad the hostages are free? I sure am. Well I have to go, I'm running out of room."

Church Presents Special Lecture

"Unlocking Bible Treasures" will be the subject of a Christian Science lecture Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Room 107 of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Andre Piot, a native of Switzerland now living in St. Louis and a former mechanical engineer, will give the lecture, which is open to the public without charge.

Child care is available to those who wish to attend the lecture, in the church edifice at 2202 Broadway.

brings more oxygen to the brain, is thought to be responsible for this elevated mood.

Walking, of course, is also an excellent way to shed some of those extra pounds. Extra weight not only strains the heart but puts excessive demands on the lungs and other organs. Weight loss through walking is a slow but certain process and is considerably safer than crash dieting, Davis explains.

What should you wear while walking?

As listed in the "Medical and Health Annual," you should have well-fitting shoes, warm, comfortable socks, and loose-fitting clothes to permit freedom of movement. Winter walkers should guard against frostbite with extra layers of clothing and a windproof outer garment. Two pairs of socks are recommended in very cold weather.

And for wilderness or cross-country walking a pair of hiking boots will give proper traction and protect ankles from scratches and abrasions from underbrush and rocks.

Pass Pass 1 ♦ 1 ♦
Pass 2 ♦ Dble. Pass

What action do you take?
A.—First of all, partner's double is for takeout—you have not yet bid. He must have a pretty good hand and you could hardly have a better hand considering that you have not yet said a word. You want to play in partner's better major. You can get him to show it by cue-bidding three diamonds. Naturally, you intend raising to game whichever major partner bids.

What action do you take?
A.—Partner is making a general strength game try. In support of hearts, your hand is worth 9-plus points—almost a maximum. Accept his try by all means—bid four hearts.

The bidding has proceeded:

The bidding has proceeded:

What action do you take?
A.—You have next to nothing, and you can tell partner that by passing. Any action by you could lead to serious trouble. Don't be worried about the possibility that the double will be left in for penalties and that partner will come to grave harm—it doesn't happen often enough to merit hitting the panic button. Besides, hearts might be the only playable spot for your side.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ 2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Give thanks that, so far, you have not been doubled. We would recommend a bid of three diamonds if you could be sure that partner would pass. Unfortunately, he is far more likely to return to three hearts. Pass. Don't rescue partner when he is not yet in trouble. There is

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass 1 ♦ Dble. Pass
2 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
4 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—If you elected to jump to six spades, we would not blame you one bit. Even though partner passed originally, he has since come to life with two jump bids, and it is hard to place him with a hand that will not offer good play for slam. To be sure, you should check for aces first by bidding four no trump.

Solar Energy Use In Homes Continues To Grow

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Supporters of solar energy are running into storm clouds in Washington, but the use of the sun to heat water and homes continues to spread.

The Energy Information Administration, which is part of the Department of Energy, said recently that 28 percent more square feet of solar collection devices were produced in the first six months of 1980 than in the same period a year earlier. The agency said the solar manufacturing industry is growing "vigorously."

The Solar Lobby, a non-profit group formed to promote the use of renewable resources for energy, says that more than 300,000 active solar units have been installed in the United States. The organization also says the country could get as much as one-fourth of its energy from the sun by the year 2000.

The Reagan administration's budget plans, however, call for sharp cuts in government spending on development of solar energy. Backers of solar energy say the proposals could cripple the industry. There are two ways to use solar energy — actively and passively.

Passive systems make use of the architecture and design of a building itself. Extra-thick masonry walls, for example, or windows that face south can be used to gain energy from the sun.

Active systems start with a collector — an insulated, weather-tight box with a glass top and a dark bottom to absorb the heat from the sun's rays. One or more collectors can be placed on the roof, against the walls of a building or even on a separate support frame. The collectors heat air or liquid which is moved to storage areas by fans or pumps. The heat is kept in the storage areas until it is needed.

conventional fuels has risen. Many families may find the sun's energy is cheaper than they think.

The Department of Energy says that the cost of a solar hot water system, including installation, is approximately $2,000 to $3,000. You can get a federal tax credit of 40 percent of the first $10,000 you spend on an active solar system. (Passive systems do not now qualify for tax credits.) If you spend $3,000 on a solar hot water system, you could subtract $1,200 from your federal income tax bill. The actual cost of the system would be $1,800.

During the night, or on cloudy days, heat is circulated from the storage areas throughout the house. An auxiliary heater, like a conventional furnace or a wood-burning stove, is used to provide heat and hot water during long cloudy spells. According to the Solar Lobby, an active solar system can provide 50 percent to 75 percent of a home's heating needs.

The cost of solar equipment has declined in recent years, while the price of

You have to weigh the cost against what you save in fuel bills. You can get a rough idea of the savings by calculating how much you now spend on hot water. (About one-fourth of the average family's heating bill goes to provide hot water.)

Sun Explosions Can Affect Power Systems

COLLEGE STATION (P) — Titanic eruptions that rend the surface of the sun also pose an increasing threat to electrical power distribution systems here on earth, according to a university researcher.

breakers nationwide.

"The whole power system is not going to just fall apart," said Russell, power protection systems specialist and director of the Electric Power Institute at Texas A&M. charged particles and a magnetic field generated by the sun are spewed outward. If the Earth is in the path of that solar debris, its atmosphere first gets flooded with X-rays that cause radio blackouts, make navigation satellite signals unreliable and add ghosts to radar images, Russell said.

Then the main concentration of particles and the magnetic field roars past, rattling the Earth's magnetic field with intense electrical currents.

The barrage produces aurorae — shimmering curtains of light usually seen over the Earth's poles. At the surface, the Earth's magnetic field fluctuates, confusing homing pigeons and inducing electrical surges in power and telephone lines and the ground itself.

"The implication ... is that as new control technology predominates our (power) system, we can expect a greater sensitivity to these previously ignored phenomena," Russell said.

"But power distribution systems in the United States are not meant to withstand widespread disturbances such as solar activity or, say, nuclear blasts, which are scaled-down versions of solar flares," Russell said.

The chance that solar flares will affect Earth is now high because of an increase in sunspots, astronomers believe. During a sunspot, huge clouds of Within two hours comes a bombardment by high-speed protons and electrons blown from the sun's outer layer, or corona, which are captured by the Earth's magnetic field. Long-term communications blackouts and radiation hazards to air travelers crossing the poles follow, Russell said.

Entomologist Charting Ecology Of Cockroaches

NEW YORK (AP) — Betty Faber nonchalantly dips her hand into a shadowy terrarium crawling with cockroaches, grabs an insect one-third the size of her palm and smiles as it scuttles, hissing, up her arm.

"Like to hold one?" she asks, her eyes sparkling.
The offer is declined with a shudder.
An entomologist with a doctorate from Rutgers University, Mrs. Faber is five years into a long-term study of the ecology of cockroaches.

She keeps exotic types, such as Madagascar roaches that hiss through their breathing holes, in a terrarium in a dreary former janitor's room on the sixth floor of the American Museum of Natural History.

The room, decorated with cartoons of roaches, serves as an office. Her prime subjects, an unprepossessing colony of American roaches (Periplaneta americana) roam a nearby rooftop greenhouse.

There, Mrs. Faber catches roaches in food-baited traps, records the location and tapes numbers to their backs, so she can note them when she finds them again.

Her aim is to chart roach movements — where they go and what they do when they're left alone to do it. She wants to learn enough about their behavior in non-laboratory conditions to provide a framework for understanding roach lives.

"There are all these little bitty facts all over the place about different aspects of cockroaches," she said. And most of what people know, she said, depends on what, specifically, they wanted to find out.

Mrs. Faber proudly reports one thing she has not seen in her five years on the roof: "Migrations ... en masse and with purpose, like birds flying south for the winter."

It's important, she said, because it discredits the stories that, for instance, tearing down a building will send swarms of roaches across the street to another building.

"Roaches do stay in pretty much the same place most of their lives," she said. An area of 6-to-12 feet square is the range for males, and 9-to-15 feet for females, she said, adding that she does not yet understand how or why a roach sets its range.

Thus, the roaches in your bathroom may never see their cousins in the kitchen, unless you make them meet by environmental changes such as spraying, she said. Even then, she said, they won't go as a group, but as individuals.

Mrs. Faber blames faulty observation for misconceptions about cockroaches. "I think there are very few people who have a grasp on what they see when they're watching something like a cockroach," she said. "They don't know how to watch, and they don't have the patience to sit there and watch."

Patience aside, most people can't watch a cockroach without wanting to drop a shoe on the loathsome creature. Mrs. Faber concedes she used to feel that way, too.

"I grew up in Biloxi, Miss., where we lived with these things we called palmetto bugs, and I was always very afraid of them," she said. "They were also very interesting, and it was a big challenge to me to get over that fear."

Mrs. Faber sees similar fear and revulsion at Columbia University, where she uses roaches as subjects in teaching microdissection.

"The first year I did it, people could not believe I was real," said Mrs. Faber, who is in her fourth year of teaching at Columbia. "THEY had to do THIS, oh, my God!"

Now, she says, the attitude is more of acceptance, with a bit of perverse pride. "They go off and tell people, 'Do you know what I did?'" she said.

Mrs. Faber says it's partly humans' fault that the bugs bug humans. Humans have made things cozy for cockroaches.

"Most apartments are designed for roaches, almost," Mrs. Faber said.

FBI Focusing On Organized Crime

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI has made some progress in fighting organized crime, but has not yet eliminated it, says Francis "Bud" Mullen, a ranking agency official.

Mullen, the FBI's executive assistant director for investigations, said organized crime, white-collar crime and foreign counter-intelligence are the agency's top priorities.

In an interview with United Press International, Mullen said the FBI is trying to go after more "sophisticated" criminals and investigate illegal activities that are more extensive, for instance, than someone stealing a car and taking it across state lines.

As an example, Mullen said the FBI now spends less time on bank robberies if local authorities have the resources to handle the case.

"We are trying to use our resources effectively, but we have not stopped investigating bank robberies," Mullen said.

Of the fight against organized crime, he said, "We're having an impact. I used to think we were going to eradicate it."

White-collar crime is a "serious, pervasive problem" and one that is robbing billions of dollars from the public and private coffers. The FBI has assigned about 1,700 agents to deal with property and personal crimes, 1,800 for white-collar crimes and 1,300 for organized crime.

Those figures could change, but it would mean devoting less of the FBI's resources and manpower, now slightly short of 8,000 agents, in certain areas.

"Over 80 Years Experience"

Lubbock Policeman Recalls Duty In South Bronx

By LARRY SUTHERLAND
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For Lubbock patrolman Morris Thomas, Fort Apache, The Bronx, is more than the title of a controversial movie. From May 1975 to September 1976 it was a place he could smell, see, hear, work, and in one case, come close to dying in.

The 28-year-old native of Lubbock was an Army military policeman from 1975 until March 1980, when he left the military to become a policeman in Lubbock. His first assignment in the military police was at Fort Hamilton in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Frequently his assignment of tracking down deserters and AWOL military personnel took him to the 41st Precinct of the South Bronx — the area portrayed in the movie "Fort Apache, The Bronx." The movie, which has drawn the scorn of some residents living in the South Bronx, draws a picture of an area frequented by pimps, prostitutes and drug dealers who prey on the remainder of the poverty-ridden residents.

Thomas saw the film recently, and said of it: "As far as the scenery of the Bronx, it's accurate. The description of the people, fairly accurate. They (moviemakers) didn't show a lot of the street gangs... They showed a lot cleaner part of the Bronx than can really be portrayed... it's got slums that Lubbock has no comparison to, or anywhere in West Texas I've seen." The movie was shot on location in the South Bronx, with Paul Newman as the protagonist.

Thomas admits to some "culture shock" when he first worked in the area of the 41st Precinct. "The first time I went in I couldn't believe that humans could survive under such conditions as this... I guess that was the most surprising thing of all to find — a decent person, who could survive through all the corruption, the gangs, the killings, the murders, and come out of there with an attitude that he wanted to win, he wanted to survive."

The officer said people who were reared in the South Bronx could rise above it. One he knew was a doctor who returned to the community to help it. But, "he's one of the few. The majority never have a chance to make it," he said.

In the opening scenes of the movie, two rookie policemen are shot and killed by a prostitute, and a few youths steal items from the patrolmen's bodies.

Thomas said rookie patrolmen would never work alone without a senior officer, and the killing of an officer in New York would bring about vigorous efforts by police to catch the killer.

But he said the lack of witnesses to come forward about such an incident would not be rare in the South Bronx. "Yes, that would be accurate. Somebody gets murdered in the Bronx and nobody sees anything. They'll steal what they can off the body and run."

The hatred of police, made most graphic in the movie with a riot in front of the 41st Precinct, Thomas sometimes saw during his tour of the South Bronx. Police cars occasionally were overturned and burned. While he experienced no riot situations, he said policemen in the 41st Precinct told him of Molotov cocktails being thrown at the precinct house during the late 1960s and early 1970s.

As for his duties chasing down AWOLs and deserters, he said, "We've had knives pulled on us. We've had AWOLs run from us... I took one AWOL and got knocked off a three-story building with him, and I landed in a dumpster filled with human waste." The AWOL landed on concrete and fractured some ribs.

Thomas's closest brush with death may have come not in the Bronx, or other slums like Harlem or Bedford-Stuyvesant, but right at Fort Hamilton. He responded to a domestic disturbance call at on-post housing and was shot in the leg with a .25 caliber automatic by the wife of a man he was arresting. The wife had been assaulted by the husband.

The movie focused much of its attention on illegal drugs. Thomas said this rang true to life. "Drug dealing was very heavy in the South Bronx. It was nothing unusual to go up on the roofs and find junkies shooting up," he said. He and his military police partners were especially cautious about entering abandoned buildings to search for AWOLs and deserters. "These were junkie havens" and often a place for street gangs in the South Bronx.

Stealing was a way of life for the gangs. "Most of the gang members are anywhere from 12 to 14 years old. I've seen kids as young as 3 or 4 running with gangs. It's because the kids don't have anyone else to take care of them. On the street the gangs will take and clothe them (young children), feed them and take care of them and give them the only love they've ever known," Thomas said.

Thomas said the movie essentially portrays the street police of the 41st Precinct accurately. He said he frequently used city police to assist in apprehending AWOLs and deserters and rode with them from time to time.

Thomas said most of the Bronx officers cared about the people of the area. The Police Athletic League was one means of trying to reach the young potential criminal.

But the Bronx police had different standards of conduct from police in this area. "What we term corruption in West Texas is a normal every day occurrence up there (in the South Bronx). It's nothing to them (police). You stop a traffic violator and the old boy hands you his drivers license and there's a 20 or 50 dollar bill under it. The officer just palms it" and lets the motorist go without a ticket. But Thomas said he knew of no major corruption by Bronx police, such as covering up a homicide, as is shown in the movie.

Although much of what Thomas saw was a life of despair for South Bronx residents, efforts were made to improve the environment. "There were several groups, large groups made up of just average everyday people. They tried to help us, but were trying primarily to help the people themselves... A lot of them were trying to rebuild the buildings that they were living in, trying to make them suitable," he said.

Efforts also included escort services to protect the elderly and day care centers for the elderly. Did these self-help efforts work when he was there? "A limited amount, yes; there were some improvements," Thomas replied.

But overall, the area of the 41st Precinct was and still is a tough place to live. "Lubbock's so-called slum or poverty areas would be considered upper class in New York in the Bronx, in Harlem, in Brownsville (Bedford-Stuyvesant), a lot of places. If they came here they would think they were living in high country," Thomas said.

Texans Regaining Clout On Congressional Panels

tee chairmanships they held in the last session for more powerful panels.

Gonzalez survived a challenge and moved up to the banking subcommittee on housing while White took over the armed services subcommittee on investigations.

Two Texans picked up subcommittee chairmanships on the veterans affairs panel, Rep. Sam Hall, a Marshall Democrat, will have the compensation and pensions subcommittee while Rep. Marvin Leath, a Marlin Democrat, heads the housing and memorial affairs subcommittee.

Other Texans returning to subcommittee chairmanships include Rep. J.J. Pickle, an Austin Democrat, to the important and increasingly visible tax-writing subcommittee on social security; Rep. Abraham Kazen, a Laredo Democrat, to the interior subcommittee on water and power resources; and Rep. Mickey Leland, a Houston Democrat, to the postal subcommittee on personnel and modernization.

Another plus came when Gramm received a seat on the House Budget Committee.

In the Senate, of course, the Republican takeover made Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Armed Services Committee. He also heads the Senate Republican Policy Committee and is chairman of the banking subcommittee on financial institutions.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements, in town for the annual meeting of the National Governors Association, has invited the state's congressional delegation to a private dinner Monday night at his Virginia country home.

Wexford, as the Middleburg residence is known, was built for John F. Kennedy when he was president.

Clements bought it when he was deputy secretary of defense under former President Gerald Ford, and President Reagan rented it from the governor last fall as a campaign base.

Vice President George Bush is expected to be among the guests at Clements' dinner.

Wright took to the House floor the day after Reagan delivered his budget and tax-cutting message to caution against forgetting the drive for energy independence.

"It would be a major tragedy if, in our preoccupation with these (tax and budget) matters, we were to lose sight of the continuing and compelling need to make this country energy independent again," Wright said. "Without a vigorous, dynamic energy policy including conservation and production of all potential forms of energy, we certainly will not stabilize the price of petroleum and electric power."

The majority leader was a champion of the synthetic fuel program threatened with reduced support under Reagan.

Government Report Lists Major Abandoned Oil Fields In Texas

By United Press International

A government report on abandoned oil fields in Texas is a starting place — a kind of Sears, Roebuck catalog — for people with extra capital to spend, says the project manager.

"What we thought we would do is put together in one small package specific information about major abandoned oil fields in Texas," said Stan Stevenson, a petroleum industry specialist for the Department of Energy.

"An independent producer can go through it like a Sears and Roebuck catalog to find a well built in 1950 and abandoned in 1965 that produced so many barrels of oil.

"We don't have enough data for you to hire a rig and start drilling, but we have the year a field was abandoned (in the report) and anyone in the business can think back and remember if it was cheap oil or expensive oil."

When oil sold for $2 per barrel it was often too expensive to continue pumping 10 barrels a day out of the ground, Stevenson remarked. Now that oil is priced in the $35 per barrel range, it is economical to pursue the closed fields, he said.

The report includes 676 Texas oil fields that produced at least 250,000 barrels of oil each before they were abandoned.

"We isolated 8,000 or 9,000, but we had to shut off somewhere and these were the biggest," Stevenson said.

"The major oil companies have the money to send people out to Austin and pore through these old records. But the independents may not have the means to hire one of these independent bird dogs. We feel this is the way to get some oil in a hurry.

"The oil is down there and the economics are better. It's simply a matter of picking likely prospects out of the book, going to the county seat and finding the specifics of who owns the field."

Official Seeking Cause Of Dallas Derailment

DALLAS (AP) — It will take about 10 days before a Santa Fe railroad bridge over the Trinity River south of downtown will be open to traffic again, after a derailment and spectacular five-alarm fire that burned through the trestle on Friday.

A federal investigator, Thurman Toal, believes a broken rail on the bridge may have caused the derailment and resulting fire.

"The rail along that section is fairly light. We found some broken rails," said Toal, from the National Transportation Safety Board's Fort Worth office. "The trick now is to decide whether they were broken before or after the accident."

However, Loren Simmons with Santa Fe said an official cause for the derailment and fire, which did about $650,000 damage, has not been determined.

"We know there was a derailment," he said. "The friction of the wheels may have caused a spark, and perhaps some trash between the rails on the bridge caught fire, but we're not sure."

Railroad crews worked all weekend to clear the charred debris from the Trinity River bottom where three cars toppled 50 feet from the blazing trestle.

Biofeedback May Help Patients Stop Pain

is "weaned" from the equipment when he can perform the relaxation or other techniques on his own.

Sessions can last weeks or even months to obtain the proper results, Madden noted.

Some private physicians in Lubbock use the equipment, as well as the Texas Tech University medical school's psychiatry clinic, however Madden feels the method is not as popular here as it is on the east and west coasts.

He speculated that the great expense of setting up the proper equipment may have prevented some from undertaking the task, as well as the fact that the technique is not that widely known yet.

Madden said the method is used with discretion at the clinic to make sure that tension or other controllable responses are the only factors involved in the patients' complaints.

"We don't want to treat someone with biofeedback if they have a brain tumor," he said.

But for some, the method opens doors for the patient who cannot get results from, or cannot take, medication or who has found other practices unsuccessful.

"It often times helps us get in touch with a patient who, for instance, has been told 'it's all in your head,'" Madden said.

Iranians Asked Adair For Aid

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil well firefighter Red Adair and his chief competitor were approached by the government of Iran last fall and asked to help that nation defeat U.S. economic sanctions, a Dallas newspaper reported.

Iran sent Telex messages to Adair and Boots and Coots, another Houston-based well-firefighting team, to seek help in repairing damage done to Iranian oil fields by the war with Iraq, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

The two companies passed the messages on to Washington for advice and the Carter administration "told us to sit back and see which way the wind blows," Adair told the newspaper.

President Carter had banned shipments of oilfield equipment and technology to Iran, hoping the sanctions would speed release of the 52 hostages seized from the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

Adair's company had just finished a firefighting job in Iranian oilfields shortly before the hostage seizure and embassy takeover in November 1979.

At the time, Carter had imposed an embargo and trade with or travel to Iran, but after the messages from the National Iranian Oil Co. in Tehran, the administration told the Iranians they could deal with the firefighters after the hostages were freed, the News reported.

The newspaper quoted oil industry sources in London as saying the Iranian oil company is now anxious to start repairing oil field equipment damaged in the war, but the current Reagan administration has yet to say whether high-level technological help should be given Iran.

Basalin. The answer to tough Texas grass control problems.

Just ask your Agchem dealer to show you:

1. How Basalin stops yield-robbing grasses and many broadleaf weeds before they start competing with your cotton.

2. How to get the best grass control from Basalin herbicide for your soil and weather conditions.

3. How gentle Basalin is on your cotton. You don't have to sacrifice crop tolerance for weed control.

Texas cotton growers face tough grass control problems. In today's economy, it's more important than ever to solve these problems before they boost costs and cut into your yields.

Basalin consistently controls many annual grasses plus broadleaf weeds like pigweed and lambsquarters.

The fact is, there isn't another grass herbicide on the market that offers better, more consistent grass control and crop tolerance in cotton than Basalin herbicide.

Basalin Cash Rebate!
Order now, and get a $5 cash rebate for every 5 gallons of Basalin you buy. Just pick up a Rebate Claim Card at your agchem dealer when you pick up your supply of Basalin.

Just one more reason why Basalin is your best herbicide buy for clean, healthy cotton. So, see your agchem dealer today and ask for Basalin herbicide.

EYEBALLS THE AUDIENCE — Pope John Paul II imitates a person using binoculars just prior to boarding his plane from Manila to Guam Sunday. The pontiff has just ended his six-day papal visit to the Philippines. (AP Laserphoto)

John Paul II Challenges Japanese Bishops

TOKYO (AP) — With the adulation of millions of Roman Catholic Filipinos still fresh in his memory, Pope John Paul II began the first papal visit to Japan today by challenging Japanese bishops to increase the "tiny" flock of Japanese Catholics — now less than 1 percent of the predominantly Shintoist and Buddhist population.

"I have come here to offer you my fraternal support for your mission of proclaiming Jesus Christ to the 'pusillus grex' (tiny flock) of Japan," he told the bishops.

"We can hear the same cry that was addressed to the Apostle Phillip: 'We wish to see Jesus.' And today, does not this cry resound throughout the teeming metropolis of Tokyo and throughout all Japan? And is it not addressed in a particular way to you, the Bishops of Japan?"

After six days of cheering adulation in the Philippines, the pope received a friendly but low-key reception when his Philippine jetliner, with "Viva II Papa!" painted on the side, landed this afternoon in rain and fog at Tokyo's Haneda International Airport.

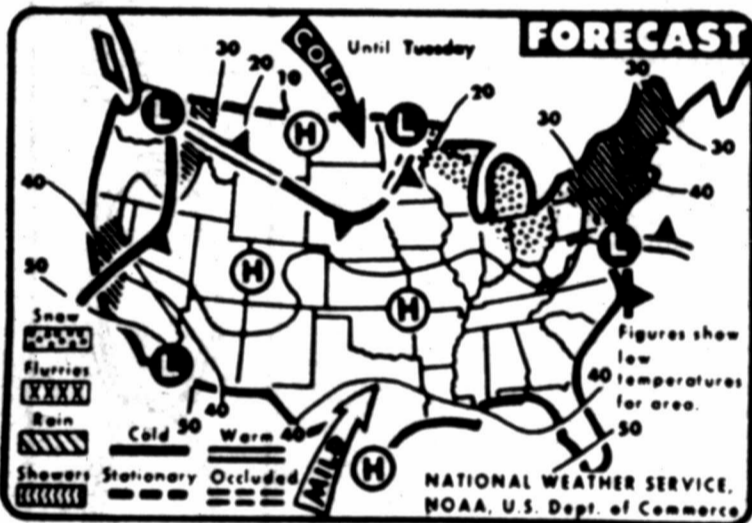

He came from the sunny, predominantly Roman Catholic U.S. island of Guam, where he stopped for the night after leaving the Philippines, celebrated Mass for 20,000 people and again condemned artificial contraception and abortion.

In contrast to the 100,000 Roman Catholics that jammed Manila airport for the pope's arrival there, the welcoming crowd at the Tokyo airport was made up of government and church officials, including Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito, and about 100 young Catholics wearing T-shirts bearing the words "Young and Pope."

Only about 400,000 of the 117 million Japanese are Roman Catholics and the general public has shown little interest in his Asian trip.

There were also no crowds along the route of the pontiff's 20-minute drive from the airport to St. Mary's Cathedral, where he told about 3,000 Japanese Catholic clergy: "It is a joy for me to set foot on the soil of Japan ... this hospitable land where Mother Nature has brought forth prodigies of incomparable beauty that speak to all the world about the glory of the Creator."

Speaking clear, fluent Japanese in public for the first time, John Paul said he came to Japan "as a pilgrim of peace, bearing a message of friendship and respect for all of you." He praised Japanese Catholics for "their religious faith

Israel Claims Guerrillas Killed

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel claims its troops killed about 10 Palestinian guerrillas in a helicopter raid on Palestinian base in southern Lebanon used as a staging center for attacks on Israel.

The Israeli military command said there were no Israeli casualties in the raid Sunday night. But the guerrilla command of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut, the Lebanese capital, said there were 16 casualties among the 200 raiders. It acknowledged three guerrillas killed and one wounded.

An Israeli military communique said the helicopters lifted the commandos out safely after they destroyed an Arab Liberation Front base at Kfour, about two miles north of the guerrilla-controlled town of Nabatieh and eight miles from the Israeli frontier. The Iraqi-backed front is one of eight guerrilla factions in the PLO.

The attackers blew up the main structure on the base, a two-story building on a hill that was used as an observation post and arsenal for guerrilla attacks into northern Israel, the communique said.

Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, Israel's military chief of staff, said the base was the headquarters of the guerrilla group responsible for an attack on the Israeli collective farm of Misgav Am in April 1980, in which an Israeli infant, an adult civilian and a soldier were killed.

"We settled our account with the Misgav Am cell," Eytan told reporters. "We achieved our aims completely."

It was Israel's fifth strike into southern Lebanon within a month in what the Israeli government says is a continuing campaign to keep the guerrillas on the defensive and head off their raids. The last previous raid into southern Lebanon was on Feb. 3.

A Palestinian account of the raid Sunday night said three Palestinians were killed and one wounded and three houses were destroyed at Kfour, but the guerrillas threw up a "tight siege" to prevent the Israelis from withdrawing.

"Our forces are in control of the situation and are clashing with the enemy who has suffered heavy losses," the Palestinian communique said.

Some of the Israeli troops landed at the nearby village of Zefta, apparently to prevent reinforcements from reaching the guerrillas at Kfour, the communique said, adding, "Our forces besieged the enemy troops and heavy fighting with all kinds of weapons" took place.

Israeli artillery began shelling Kfour at midnight to cover the raiders' withdrawal, while Israeli helicopters and planes dropped flares over Nabatieh and the coastal cities of Tyre and Sidon to the west, the Palestinian report said.

Israeli gunboats shelled 'Al Kasse-mieh, five miles north of Tyre, it added.

West Germany Selling Weapons To Nations Rejected By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — West Germany has emerged as a major seller of arms, particularly for countries in the Middle East and Latin America that the United States refuses to supply, a newly released study by a congressional agency says.

The study by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative agency, was completed last August, but on Pentagon insistence only a summary was distributed. Now a fuller version has appeared, but with many of the 93 pages deleted.

The report says 40 percent of West Germany's weapons sales are to countries the United States refused to trade with, mostly in the Mideast and Latin America.

The United States has refused to sell arms to Iraq, Libya and Syria because of Middle East policy. For other reasons, the report points out, the United States also has refused sales to Chile, Argentina, Brazil, Ecuador, Zimbabwe, South Africa, Angola, Mozambique and Ethiopia.

Between 1973 and mid-1978 the West Germans sold $1.08 billion worth of weapons to countries that the United States refused to supply because they were adversaries of Israel.

These sales included: —More than $538 million worth of orders from Algeria for plants to build rockets and explosives.

—$73 million worth of tanks and laser range finders to Syria.

—$66 million in tank transporters, trucks and tractors to Iraq.

"Although some of these sales were to 'areas of tension,'" the report says, "their low level of sophistication shows a deliberate ... effort (by the West Germans) to minimize the break with their own policy" against such sales.

It adds that the most notable departure from West German policy was the sale in 1977 of $240 million dollars worth of anti-tank missiles to Syria. These were jointly produced with France.

Another 20 percent of West Germany's arms exports go to Latin America, and the report said $625 million of the $862 million in recent sales in that region were to countries to whom the United States would not sell.

These consisted largely of naval vessels to Argentina, Brazil and Ecuador, and anti-tank missiles to Chile.

The report says West Germany — like the United States on a much larger scale — increased the value of new orders for arms from other countries more than tenfold from 1973-77. No specific figures were given.

A table accompanying the report shows that in terms of the value of the dollar in 1976, actual West German arms exports — as distinguished from orders — rose from $200 million in 1971 to $800 million in 1977. U.S. exports rose from $4.7 billion to $6.5 billion in the same period.

Border Feud Threatening To Escalate

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The border squabble between Ecuador and Peru threatened to mushroom into war as the two nations sealed their common border with troops and tanks and Peru said it might invade its neighbor's territory to stop what it claims are Ecuadorean thrusts into its territory.

Tanks and soldiers of both countries spilled onto the Pan American Highway Sunday, closing a part of the roadway that runs along the Andes mountain spine of South America's Pacific Coast.

Neither side reported fresh fighting Sunday, but both kept their armed forces on alert.

Nearly a week of border skirmishing between the two countries was quelled by a cease-fire on Feb. 2, but the truce began unraveling last week.

Peruvian President Fernando Belaunde Terry said that since Friday Peruvian troops had seized three Ecuadorean border posts he said were set up on Peruvian territory near Peru's most productive oilfields.

Calling the alleged presence of Ecuadorean troops on Peruvian territory an "act of war," the president's office said the military has been ordered to pursue Ecuadorean troops into Ecuador if necessary.

Ecuador accused Peru of mounting air attacks on its border posts Friday and Saturday, but it did not report any casualties.

Two Peruvian and eight Ecuadorean soldiers have been killed since the border skirmishes began on Jan. 28, according to official reports. The latest reported victim was a co-pilot of a Peruvian helicopter shot down Friday morning. Peru said 13 soldiers were injured in the crash.

In the Ecuadorean capital of Quito, the government called on the United States, Argentina, Brazil and Chile — guarantors of a 1942 border treaty between Peru and Ecuador — to stop Peru from carrying out its invasion threat.

Ambassadors of the four countries met Saturday night in Brasilia, Brazil, and a diplomatic source said Sunday that they were concerned about the mounting complaints of cease-fire violations from both sides.

The four nations have assigned their military attaches in Lima and Quito to act as cease-fire observers, but a source in Lima said the observation team in that country had not left the capital in four days.

A Peruvian source said the U.S. helicopter that was to transport the observers to the contested border district, a remote region in the jungle-clad Cordillera mountains, had crashed on Tuesday.

Leader Says Saudis May Turn To USSR

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Crown Prince Fahd, the strongman of Saudi Arabia's royal regime, says his nation might turn to the Soviet Union for arms if the United States and other Western countries won't sell it the weapons it wants.

"There are no restrictions of our arms purchases," Fahd told a Swedish reporter accompanying King Karl Gustav of Sweden on his current visit to Saudi Arabia, the official Saudi news agency reported.

"If Sweden agrees to sell us weapons, we will buy. If we find the doors to American and Western arms markets closed, we might turn to the Soviet Union for buying the weapons we need," said Fahd, who runs the Saudi Arabian government for his brother King Khalid.

The Reagan administration is preparing to decide whether to grant a Saudi request for long-range fuel tanks, bomb racks and air-to-air missile fittings for the 62 F-15 jet fighters it has on order from the United States. Israel and its supporters in Congress oppose the Saudi request, claiming the equipment will give the jets the range and firepower to attack the Jewish state.

In seeking congressional approval for the original $2 billion sale of the planes, the Carter administration agreed to block the sale of equipment that would give the jets offensive capability.

Saudi Arabia put in a new request for the equipment after war broke out last September between neighboring Iran and Iraq. The Saudis said they needed it to protect their oilfields, which now produce 10.3 million barrels a day and provide 20 percent of U.S. oil imports.

The planes — the most sophisticated in the U.S. fleet — are scheduled for delivery next year.

In addition, Saudi Arabia signed a contract last fall for $3.5 billion worth of French naval defense equipment and invested $1 billion in production of France's F-400 Mirage jet, a possible alternative to the F-15. The Saudis also have been reported shopping for West German tanks.

"Although oil is a vital commodity for the entire world, it could still be used as a weapon in case of desperation," Fahd said in an apparent hint of a possible new oil embargo.

Polish Cardinal Supports Farmers Union Efforts

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski told small farmers they have the right to the same sort of union organization as was formed by Poland's industrial workers, according to remarks released today.

Wyszynski received a delegation from the farmers' Rural Solidarity group at his palace in Warsaw Feb. 6, but the text of his address supporting their efforts to gain government recognition was not released by the Polish episcopate until more than two weeks later.

With Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania and Prime Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski in Moscow for the Soviet party congress, a strike-free "honeymoon" asked by Jaruzelski was being observed by all major groups.

The only exception today involved 11 members of a 7,000-member government-sponsored religious association who declared a hunger strike, saying they were protesting re-election of the director at a meeting of 200 delegates of the Christian Social Association in Wroclaw Sunday.

"Charging the voting was 'falsified,' they said there have been 'political, financial and legal abuses in the association."

Iran Expected To Release Anglican Missionaries

LONDON (AP) — Three British Anglican missionaries held in Iran since August are expected to be released and fly home Wednesday, the Archbishop of Canterbury said today.

Dr. Robert Runcie told the General Synod of the Church of England, "You will share I know, my delight at such an outcome after so many months of prayer and anxiety."

He did not elaborate, but indicated he had received the word from his special envoy in Tehran who has gone there at least twice since Christmas to negotiate the missionaries' release.

The Foreign Office declined comment on Runcie's report, but confirmed that the three missionaries are no longer in official detention.

Anglican medical missionaries Dr. John Coleman and his wife, Audrey, both 58, have been freed from a detention center in Tehran, and Jean Waddell, also 58, the secretary to the exiled Anglican bishop of Iran, has been released from Evin Prison in the Iranian capital, Anglican emissary Terry Waite reported by telephone to London.

He said he is hopeful they will be joined by businessman Andrew Pyke, 37, who was arrested in August and accused of espionage, and four Iranian Anglicans who were also detained.

Waite, who was sent to Iran by the Archbishop of Canterbury, said Iranian officials told him the evidence of espionage on which the arrests were based "was found to be forged and there is no case to answer."

He said their departure was being delayed until arrangements were made for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution, to make a TV appearance explaining "the circumstances which led to the arrest of the Anglicans, the forged documents and the conspiracy against them."

He said a man had been arrested for the forgery and he had visited him, but he did not identify him.

Everyone accepts the fact that sleep is necessary for life. It is also the main factor in recovery from fatigue. If left to his own choosing, the average healthy human adult, with some exceptions, under normal conditions, will sleep between seven and eight hours each night. When he has had all the sleep necessary for a refreshed body, he will awaken slowly and naturally without mechanical aids. An occasional loss of sleep happens to most of us and is nothing to fear. In fact, some reports say that one is less likely to sleep well in spring than in autumn. Housewife sells 'glass plate' for $40; worth $1,800

NILES, Ill. — The story of a small fortune, lost because a housewife had no idea her glass plate was a collector's item, recently came to light.

In a letter to J. R. MacArthur, chairman of the Bradford Exchange, world's largest trading center in collector's plates, a Madison, Wis., woman wrote: "Thada Lalique 1965 plate ... which I sold to a friend for $40. I had not heard of you at that time."

The plate she sold is actually valued at more than $1,800. Although MacArthur points out that this price is exceptionally high, he said, "I'm afraid others may be losing hundreds or thousands of dollars by not knowing what their plates are worth."

To aid in identifying potentially valuable plates, the exchange offers free information on opportunities in promising plates still available at low prices.

To obtain a copy without cost or obligation, just send your name (please, no company names), address and zip code, before Saturday of next week, to: The Bradford Exchange, Dept. B67209, 9301 Milwaukee Avenue, Niles, IL 60648. A postcard will do.

Speed To Burn

EVERYONE KNOWS THAT athletes are getting bigger and stronger all the time, thanks to most families having the money to buy groceries and provide healthy meals packed with protein and vitamins. A generation or two ago, during the Great Depression, a lot of folks thought a balanced diet was having a slab of salt pork in their pot of beans.

Now the growing youngsters have enriched bread, fortified milk, steak every day and hamburgers every night. No wonder the list of Southwest Conference football recruits includes a herd of teen-agers bigger than the defensive line of the Pittsburgh Steelers!

More surprising is the speed displayed these days by both high school and college gridgers. Not long ago, believe it or not, only a few National Football League teams boasted a player with genuine 4.5 speed in the 40-yard dash. The Dallas Cowboys signed the fastest sprinter in the world in 1965, but even Bullet Bob Hayes ran more 4.5s than he did 4.4s.

How things have changed. If one can believe the coaches and the football magazines, Texas this spring had more than a score of senior schoolboy gridgers with that magic 4.5 rating by their names. Even allowing for a fast finger on the stopwatch, that is a lot of speed.

Texas Tech signed five recruits designated as 4.5 burners, while the University of Texas got a half-dozen in that category and an equal number only a step behind at 4.6. Since the Longhorns already have one of the fastest cats around in little Herkie Walls, who does an honest 6.1 in the 60 at track meets, one can only surmise that Coach Fred Akers intends to double as the track coach for the next four years.

DALLAS BECAME A contender in the NFL about the time that Hayes reported for duty in 1965, and the 'Pokes gained fame as a team built on speed and fitness. Hayes did exert a profound influence on NFL defenses, since there was no defensive back around with the swiftness to cover him man-to-man. So the NFL coaches had to adopt the bump-and-run and zone defenses developed by the rival American League, which didn't have the experienced cornerbacks to cover man-to-man.

The publicity about Dallas' speed helped the Cowboys from a psychological standpoint, because a lot of defensive backs got the jitters when facing the 'Pokes. They knew Don Meredith could toss The Bomb to Hayes at any moment.

This was the same factor that aided Green Bay when the Packers were in their prime. The Pack's reputation for bone-smashing ferocity intimidated many foes before the game even got under way.

Despite the publicity, though, the Cowboys were not all that fast.

IN 1966, for example, the Cowboys first jumped to the top of the stack in the NFL and challenged Vince Lombardi's vaunted legions for the crown. They lost, 34-27, in a thriller that still is ranked among the best title games in league history.

But a search for all that Cowboy speed, proclaimed by scribblers and golden throats alike, is futile. It just wasn't there, except for Hayes.

The other Cowboy wide receiver was a fellow named Frank Clarke, who usually caught more passes than he dropped. Clarke was rated as one of the team's speedsters, but even the Dallas press guide that year listed him as only 4.8 in the 40. He would not even be issued a uniform nowadays.

Another of the Cowboys' pass-catchers that season was veteran Buddy Dial, who earned honors at Pittsburgh before being traded to Dallas. Again, using the Dallas press guide as an authority, of Buddy raced over the turf in 4.8.

Then the real burners must have been in the Cowboys' backfield, huh? Not really. The fullback was Don Perkins, a stocky bundle of courage from New Mexico. Perk had an explosive start, but by the end of 40 yards little old ladies in tennis shoes were running up his back.

Perkins and his successor, Walt Garrison, were two of the best at picking up tough yardage with a minimum of blocking, but neither could run as fast forward as Mel Renfro could backward.

AHA! NOW WE ARE DOWN to the secret of the matter, readers will shout. That Renfro was a grass-burner deluxe, along with Hayes!

Not exactly. Renfro was a marvelous athlete with good speed for his day, but he was no streak of lightning. The Dallas coaches credited him with no better than 4.65 in the 40.

That was considerably better than his teammates in the secondary could do. Cornerback Warren Livingston was a 4.7 man and free safety Obert Logan was only 4.9. There are many linemen who can beat that these days.

In all fairness, though, most of the other NFL teams were no faster than the Cowboys at that time. And none of them had an individual like Hayes who could turn a game around with one sprint down the sidelines.

So perhaps, after all, the 'Pokes deserved their reputation.

Monterey Meets Cautious Sandies In Bi-District

By RUSS PARSONS

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Midway through the regular season last year, Amarillo High bumped off Monterey 57-55. The Sandies may have lived to regret that mistake.

In the bi-district championship game last season Monterey's buzz-saw full court press harnessed Amarillo High into 41 turnovers and the Plainsmen took a 102-77 victory en route to their state finals appearance.

And then this season Monterey proved its point once more, chopping down the then state-ranked Sandies by a 77-63 score.

"I don't really think the last two games will have that much impact," said Monterey coach Tim Tasker. "It might help us a little but not much. Our kids have been around long enough to know that this is a playoff and in a playoff, Amarillo High is going to be high as a kite."

But there's no disguising the fact that the last two contests have had some impact. For one thing, Amarillo High refused to play in Plainview — the site of last year's bi-district debacle — even though it is the only available neutral court.

Instead, the Sandies pushed for a home-and-home arrangement. Tasker lost both coin tosses and, as a result, tonight's game will be played in Canyon — 10 miles south of Amarillo.

The other thing that tips off how the Plainsmen feel about the Sandies is a little more subtle, but listen to what Tasker has to say about that first loss and make up your own mind.

"Last year they beat us," he said. "It was just like we lost to Tascosa this year. We lost to Amarillo High last year and we just played awful, there's no other way to describe it. We were awful."

If you detect a note of "Boy-I-Sure-Would-Like-To-Have-That-One-To-Do-Ov-er-Again," you ain't alone.

And the fact is, that the Golden Sandstorm feels much the same way. Coach Rosemary Jackson sounds like she'd almost rather face a pool of hungry sharks than that Monterey press, an interesting analogy.

"It's important for us to learn from there."

It is a violation of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules for any university representative, including booster groups, to help a high school student find a job.

Another St. Louis recruit, Kurt Mueller, told the Post-Dispatch he was offered a job by a Missouri alumnus last summer. But Mueller said he didn't take the job because he already had summer work.

Powers denied both reports and said they were "ridiculous."

In another report, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat said a NCAA official has questioned three Joplin athletes about a trip to the Liberty Bowl in Memphis last December. The athletes reportedly traveled in a chartered plane rented by a Missouri booster.

The three athletes had been hired in December after completing the football season by Dr. Elery Phillips, a Joplin veterinarian, to work on his farm.

None of the Joplin players have decided to attend Missouri. All-state quarterback Alan Cockrell signed a national letter of intent with Tennessee Wednesday while lineman Jeff Tupper is headed for Oklahoma and wide receiver Terry Wemer is going to Oklahoma State.

"It was mainly because of the Liberty Bowl trip," Wemer said of the Feb. 10 interviews by the NCAA. "He (field investigator Michael Glazier) knew about the trip and wanted to see what happened."

The three athletes produced receipts indicating they had paid their own bills, Wemer said.

Missouri athletic director Dave Hart said the university has not been formally informed of an investigation by the NCAA.

Notre Dame Nips Virginia

CHICAGO (AP) — Orlando Woolridge never made a bigger or more important basket in his life than the 16-footer he canned as time ran out to give Notre Dame a 57-56 victory over previously undefeated and top-ranked Virginia.

But he couldn't say as much about Sunday's winning basket as he could about the defensive job he helped do on 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson.

The Irish, who make a habit of springing great upsets and breaking legendary streaks, gambled by double-teaming Sampson and held the Cavaliers' leading scorer to 10 points.

Woolridge played in front of Sampson while Tim Andree or Joe Kleine played behind him and it worked, according to Irish coach Digger Phelps.

"I was ready to concede him 22 points and 16 rebounds," said Phelps. "I just didn't want him to score 40 points. But I never dreamed we'd hold him to 10."

Notre Dame came down the floor, and Tracy Jackson missed with Jeff Lamp grabbing the rebound and Virginia working on the clock. With 35 seconds left, Jeff Jones was fouled and made the first of two free throws. John Paxson made what appeared to be a pair of token free throws to whittle the lead to 56-55 with 10 seconds to play.

Virginia's Lee Raker tried to inbound the ball but the Irish pressured his teammates, and Raker finally threw it away. Notre Dame took time out and inbounded the ball to Jackson who shot and missed.

Kelly Tripucka grabbed the rebound but was stripped of the ball, which bounced off Sampson's hands and went to Woolridge. Woolridge fired and Notre Dame won, breaking Virginia's 28-game winning streak and handing the Cavaliers their first loss of the season.

"I just grabbed the ball, turned and shot," said Woolridge. "I didn't have time to think about anything until I saw it go through the hoop. I didn't realize the impact until about 800 people jumped on me. I have never made a bigger basket."

At 6-9, Woolridge was giving away seven inches to Sampson and spent much of the game resting his head on Sampson's chest.

"I had him one-on-one a few times but I felt better when we had somebody else behind him," said Woolridge. "I bumped him, I fouled him, I'd get up in his face, anything to distract him. I don't like to play that way, but what else could I do?"

Samson said: "I've seen that defense before. They played well, we didn't."

It was another in a string of Notre Dame streak-stoppers. In 1974, Notre Dame ended UCLA's 88-game winning streak, the longest in NCAA history. In 1973, they stopped Marquette's 81-game home streak. In 1974, they ended South Carolina's 34-game home streak. In 1977, they spoiled San Francisco's 29-game streak and last year handed DePaul a loss after the Blue Demons had gone 25-0.

"The first time is what counts and it's never the same again," said Phelps. "Nothing will compare to the UCLA game of '74. But there's no other way for Notre Dame to do it than the way we did it."

"A lot of people don't understand what Notre Dame is and I can't explain it," said Phelps. "Notre Dame is the greatest underdog institution in the country."

The game was played in The Horizon in suburban Rosemont, and both Phelps and Virginia coach Terry Holland likened it to an NCAA tournament game as far as the site was concerned.

Holland called it "a tough game for either team to lose. Notre Dame played a great game and definitely controlled the tempo. We'll try to make something positive out of it. All this season we've been able to put a win behind us, and now I think we can put a loss behind us."

Holland said he thought there were two seconds left on the clock when Woolridge scored and "I'd like to have had them run the clock back, but that's irrelevant now."

Tripucka led all scorers with 15 points.

Report Alleges Infractions By Missouri

ST. LOUIS (AP) — University of Missouri football coach Warren Powers denied published reports the school had violated recruiting regulations by offering jobs to high school students while one of the athletes reportedly involved gave a different story to a newspaper Sunday.

"We have a hard time getting jobs for our own 95 players," Powers said in Kansas City where he was attending a coaches clinic Sunday.

"We don't get jobs for high school juniors."

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch said in a copyright story Sunday that one Missouri recruit, Ron Avery, was told by a member of the university's coaching staff that a job was available at Killark Electric Manufacturing Co. last summer.

Avery, a senior at Central High School, said he was hired after he went to the company in June. A retired vice president of Killark is a Missouri graduate and has close ties to the football staff.

But Sunday, Avery said he learned of the job from Michael Presberry, a member of the Missouri football team and former teammate at Central.

"He told me he was working there," Avery said. "I asked them if they were hiring and he said, 'Yeah.' So I went

It is a violation of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules for any university representative, including booster groups, to help a high school student find a job.

Another St. Louis recruit, Kurt Mueller, told the Post-Dispatch he was offered a job by a Missouri alumnus last summer. But Mueller said he didn't take the job because he already had summer work.

Powers denied both reports and said they were "ridiculous."

In another report, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat said a NCAA official has questioned three Joplin athletes about a trip to the Liberty Bowl in Memphis last December. The athletes reportedly traveled in a chartered plane rented by a Missouri booster.

The three athletes had been hired in

MOTORIST TORTURED ON HIGHWAY
Driving a sluggish car that coughs, misses or drags on the highway can be sheer torture. Erratic engine performance is often caused by crankcase contaminants and sticking mechanical parts. In such cases you can help restore lost performance thanks to a special formulation called WYNN'S® ENGINE TUNE UP. This famous oil treatment works in 10 minutes as you drive to help quiet valves and lifters, while it dissolves away harmful deposits. So to help end highway torture, GET WYNN'S ENGINE TUNE-UP Today.

Monterey-Plainview Playoff Appears Set In 4-5A

With only two games remaining in the regular season, things are still up for grabs in two of the area's 5A boys' districts.

And in a way, the same is true for the third — District 4-5A — which contains Lubbock's three large high schools.

Though the District 4-5A regular season finish is all but final, this is the year of the tournament and the coaches insist anything can happen there.

It looks like a playoff between Plainview and Monterey is all but assured. The Plainviewers have 3-27 Hereford remaining on their schedule while Plainview wrapped up its year with Friday night's 57-56 overtime win over Coronado.

"We got beat in overtime, that's what happened," said Coronado coach Barry Arnwine. "We had trouble with (Plainview sophomore Gilbert) Wright again, he was a key."

"And (Lee) Carter shot the ball well in the fourth quarter when we sagged in on Wright. As far as the final outcome goes, he was the key to the game."

Maybe in terms of personnel, but tactically, you'd have to point out the fact that Plainview shot 26 free throws to only one for Coronado.

It might be just a coincidence — at least Arnwine wouldn't say it was more — but in the two key game's Plainview has won at home (Monterey was the other one), the Bulldogs have outshot their opponents 50-5 in free throw attempts.

"We continued to be bothered by the same old problem, we made a lot of silly fouls," is how Arnwine explained the situation.

"When you make silly fouls it's because of a lack of concentration. Shooting one free throw in a game is pretty unusual, but I don't remember that many bad calls. I don't like to make much of those things anyway."

In the other two boys' districts still playing in the area, things are just as screwy as ever, though one shows definite signs of clearing up.

Midland, which went undefeated in winning the first half of the District 5-5A season, still hasn't wrapped up the loop

The Bulldogs, with two games remaining, hold only a one-game lead over San Angelo Central, a team they beat 94-67 Friday night.

Still on tap for Midland are Abilene Cooper, which stands 13-15 but fell only 57-55 in the first half, and Midland Lee, 12-12 and an 80-57 victim.

In the "Amarillo" district — 3-5A — Pampa and Tascosa finished in a tie for the first-half title.

Pampa has come out of the blocks hot in the second half, jumping to a 2-0 start, but Tascosa has lost back-to-back games to go 0-2 in the second half. Replacing them as the Harvester's chief challenger is Palo Duro, a talented club that finished 2-2 in the first half.

Pampa and Palo Duro will lock horns Tuesday night in what is sure to be a game that has a lot to do with the district's outcome.

By the way, should Pampa tie with anybody but Tascosa for the second-half title, the Harvesters would get the district crown.

LSU Fattens Streak, A&M Loses

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Sophomore forward Howard Carter wouldn't guess what the weekend had done to Louisiana State's standing in the national basketball poll, but said he'd put his team at No. 2 or No. 3.

LSU went into the weekend ranked fourth in the nation but knocked off eighth-ranked Tennessee Saturday, then polished off Texas A&M on Sunday.

"But Oregon State still is undefeated," Carter said. "And there are a lot of good teams around."

With the 67-57 victory over Texas A&M coupled with a 57-56 loss by Virginia to Notre Dame, LSU became the owner of collegiate basketball's longest active winning streak — 25 games. The victory Saturday put LSU in sole ownership of the SEC championship.

"Isn't that sensational," exclaimed LSU coach Dale Brown. "That's just great."

"How about that — the nation's longest winning streak is in Baton Rouge, La. That's why you have to be a dreamer. We have a lot of guys who dream big dreams and work to make them come true."

LSU outscored Texas A&M 15-2 over a five-minute span in the first half, then coasted to victory keyed by 21 points from Carter. He had nine of LSU's 15 points in the first-half surge that saw the home team roll from a five-point deficit to an eight-point lead midway through the opening period.

LSU is now 26-1, while A&M is 13-11.

Both teams showed the effects of playing their second game in two days. Texas A&M defeated Texas in a South-west Conference game Saturday.

Freshman forward Leonard Mitchell and senior point guard Ethan Martin each had 12 points for LSU, and senior center ... eg Cook had 10.

For A&M, senior forward Vernon Smith had 18 points, and Rynn Wright, another senior forward, had 17.

Smith had 17 rebounds, the most on either team.

LSU's leading scorer, forward Rudy Macklin, was held to just four points against A&M — well below his 17.2 average.

"They did a heck of a job defensively on me," Macklin said after the game.

"They've got some players out there — some real talent. I don't know what their problem is."

Injury May End Phillips' Season

The District 1-4A boys' basketball race was narrowed to a pair of contenders — Berger and Canyon — but not without a storm of controversy Friday night in Levelland.

The Eagles ran their league record to 3-0 in the second round of competition and moved into a tie for the top spot with the idle Bulldogs with a 73-61 victory over the Lobos.

In the process, Canyon virtually eliminated Levelland from the title hunt while one of the South Plains' best college prospects — the Lobos' 6-foot-8 senior post Dwight Phillips — probably played the final game of his prep career.

While the loss was the second of the district's second half for Levelland, putting them in the same position as Estacado, Brownfield and Dumas, the loss of Phillips midway through the second period angered the partisan crowd.

Stress: Athletes Often Succumb To Pressures

(First of a Five-Part Series)

By The Associated Press

Part of being an athlete is being a hero, a superman. And for a long time the culture has assumed that athletes, because they were steely physically, were naturally strong emotionally.

Tradition taught athletes that's what they were supposed to be. Tradition taught fans they could expect it.

But today some athletes and coaches are acknowledging they're mortal. Baseball players like Darrell Porter, Bob Welch and Reggie Jackson, football players like Jim Plunkett and Lynn Swann, and even the young Olympic hockey star, Jim Craig, are casting aside the old cloak of stoicism. They're saying that like most of us, they suffer stress that affects physical and mental well-being, their home lives and their performances.

"It isn't easy being an athlete," said Dr. Bruce Ogilvie, a prominent sports consultant to many amateur and professional teams. "You can't imagine the stresses weighing down on them. They're asked to be excellent every time they put on their uniforms. When we place human beings in front of audiences requiring excellence every time, it's no wonder they sometimes turn to drugs and alcohol and have a high incidence of psychosomatic disorders."

The lifestyle can be glamorous, the money wonderful. But pro sports careers are short. While most of us have a few decades in which to make our marks, the athlete is driven to make it big quickly. What he's going to do when the cheering stops is another matter. Job security, the nomadic lifestyle, striving for approval from coaches, teammates and a fickle public all intensify the day-to-day stress of his job.

Sports physicians, teams and leagues are beginning to acknowledge the stresses. And some are trying to help athletes cope. In the area of alcohol and drug abuse, the leagues generally see their roles as disciplinary, yet some are helping troubled athletes get into drug and alcohol rehabilitation centers.

Some teams are offering psychological counseling for other problems. Some are trying to help athletes make the transition when their sports careers end and it's time for a second career.

The medical profession has taken up sports as a specialized field of treatment. And psychiatrists and psychologists are playing a bigger role.

There is good and bad stress, according to Dr. Hans Selye of the University of Montreal, a leading authority on the subject.

Good stress heightens the senses and creates or sustains energy. Good stress is part of being "up" for an event. It can improve performance. Tennis player Chris Evert Lloyd says she plays best when the stakes are highest and she is most nervous. She can tell she's in top form when she gets cramps between her fingers.

"Stress that helps performance — arousal, getting up for an event — is healthy. It's like a violin string. Tension is good. But too little or too much isn't good for the right note," said Dr. Kenneth Greenspan, director of the center for stress-related disorders at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York.

Bad stress can hamper athletic performance, make athletes more injury-prone, cause depression and family rifts, and it drives some to excessive alcohol and drug use.

Phil Esposito of the New York Rangers said at his recent retirement announcement: "I found myself getting down easily. I didn't score as I should have and that added to the mental pressure... When I was down — and I was down a lot more than I was up this season — the energy wasn't there like it always used to be."

Selye says stress can contribute to high blood pressure, heart attacks and ulcers. It can also play a part in physical or mental breakdowns.

Dr. Michael Genco, a chiropractor, explains that stress causes production of cortisone and adrenaline from the adrenal glands.

"These substances help the body cope," Genco said. "If there is too much stress, the adrenals may break down, causing fatigue, allergies or other body responses. And if the stress is prolonged, the body may need adrenaline and it may not be available."

Athletes find ways to shield themselves from overuses of stress. Some use conventional ways of relaxing, like deep-breathing or trying to ignore pressure. Others have more unusual ways of coping.

Before a game, basketball great Bill Russell used to throw up; then he knew he was ready. Chicago Black Hawks' goalie Glenn Hall would lose his lunch between periods. Darrell Griffith of the Utah Jazz used hypnosis to help his defense when he played at Louisville.

Other athletes have used transcendental meditation, exercises, religion and drugs to get ready for competition.

The examples of athletes tensing up and not playing well are legion. So are the cases when an athlete, looking for a milestone goal or victory, presses too much, disrupting his normal game patterns. The goal or victory often takes much longer to achieve.

"Bad stress can make an athlete perform poorly, lose concentration and become more prone to injury," said Dorothy Harris, a psychology professor at Penn State. "It can tense his muscles and rob him of his talents."

It cannot be said with any certainty how widespread drug and alcohol use are among athletes, but many coaches and players say that both are common in sports and that some athletes use them to ease the tensions.

"Alcohol and drug abuse happen in all fields, but athletes have additional pressures," said Greenspan. "They're asked to perform at the highest levels, then the game ends. They turn to all sorts of substances to get down. If they haven't done well, some take alcohol and drugs to forget."

Hollywood Henderson, the flamboyant former Dallas Cowboy, now a free agent, recently checked into a rehabilitation center, saying he had a $1,000-a-day cocaine habit that was destroying his career. Terry Furlow of the Utah Jazz was killed in a car crash in 1980. The coroner's report disclosed traces of cocaine and valium in his blood. Last year, baseball's Porter, Welch and Dock Ellis admitted their alcoholism and enrolled in a rehabilitation center.

"I used to drink to relax, but not anymore," said Welch. "I couldn't handle it. Every time I'd drink, I'd get drunk. I got lost in beer. But I found that I can have a good time without it."

These are dramatic examples. But even for well-balanced athletes, stress is a fact of life.

"There's no question I don't have as much outward enthusiasm anymore," said veteran Cincinnati pitcher Tom Seaver. "I found through experience that what I enjoy is the experience of pitching itself. When it's over, it's over. I don't take things as personally as I used to. I keep baseball in perspective. I don't get tremendously high or tremendously low."

Quarterback Brian Sipe, the pump behind the Cleveland Browns' "Cardiac Attack," said: "One thing we do very well at is concentrate. It's not who rises to the occasion; it's more who responds by maintaining what you do best and functioning normally. You learn that nothing changes, except sometimes people panic."

All athletes are subject to bouts with nerves. Golfer Tom Watson used to be called a choker. But he was learning how to win; now he's the best player in the game.

Harris, who teaches relaxation and concentration techniques to athletes at Penn State, tries to help them recognize and combat the symptoms of stress — cold and clammy hands, butterflies, frequent urination, dry mouth, body shakes, aches, fatigue, sleeplessness, negative thoughts and fears.

"The important thing is that these symptoms can be controlled," she said. "You can be taught to become aware of the body's signals and then regulate your responses when you're under stress. You can be taught to relax. I'm just surprised more athletes aren't doing it. They do everything else to improve performance, and this is legal."

McMurry Star Tops All-TIAA

By The Associated Press

McMurry center Keith White, who led his team to its fourth straight conference basketball title, has been named player of the week again in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

He also nailed down a spot on the all-conference team released Sunday.

McMurry's Vance Hughes joined White on the all-conference team and also was named freshman of the year, and McMurry coach Herschel Kimbrel was selected coach of the year.

The award for player of the year, however, went to Dwayne Johnson of Tarleton State.

McMurry will represent the TIAA in the NAIA District 8 playoffs. The site and opponent will be announced Monday.

White, a 6-7 junior from Houston Sterling, pumped in 46 points in two tournament victories last week. He was 14 of 18 from the field and two of two from the line for 30 points in McMurry's opening 87-82 victory over Sul Ross.

He came back to hit seven of 10 from the field and four of six from the line in an 18-point performance in the Indians' 84-73 win over Austin College Saturday for the league championship. He hit 75 percent of his shots in the two games and also had 14 rebounds and three steals.

Joining White, Hughes and Johnson on the all-TIAA first team are Melvin Eugene and Ron McKee of Austin College, Bill Koenig and R.Q. Tolliver of Sul Ross and Jack Inselmann of Trinity.

Named to the TIAA second team were Brian Fortner and Bruce Carver of Lubbock Christian, Mike Daniels of Sul Ross, Ross Taylor of Tarleton State and Harry Hussman of Austin College.

Honorable mention recognition went to Willie Sneed of Tarleton, Bebo Terry of McMurry and Jeff Barnes of Trinity.

'Indianized' English Legacy Of British

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — "I'm sorry, but Mr. Kapur is not sitting," said the male voice at the other end of the telephone. The speaker did not mean to imply that Mr. Kapur was lying down on the job or that he was just standing around. Rather, he was conveying the message that Mr. Kapur (not his real name) was not in his office.

The English language remains one of the more enduring legacies of the 150-plus years of British rule in India, but like everything else left behind after the 1947 independence, it has been "Indianized."

Some examples "Whatsoever is your native place?" A common question among travelers means "What is your hometown?"

"Please inform the staff to do the needful" translates into "instruct the staff on how to deal with the problem."

"I would like to have bed tea every day" means obviously, "I would like to have a cup of tea in bed every morning."

And, a political columnist reviewing a major upheaval might write in his newspaper: "There was a sea change in the national political scene."

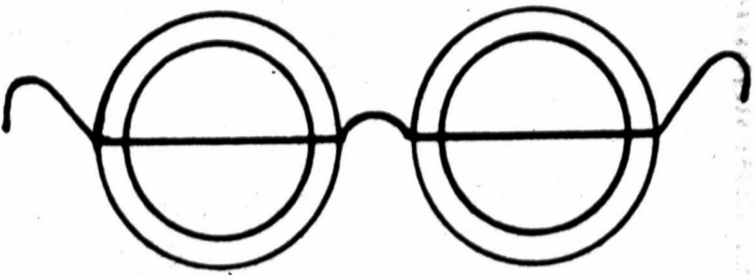

Thirty-four years after the British departure, English still has nationwide official status in India. There is, however, pressure from nationalist groups to phase it out in favor of Hindi.

Yet, in this nation of 676 million, with 14 distinct languages and a babel of dialects, English provides a link between north and south, east and west, and remains the lingua franca of trade and commerce, universities and government.

The Times of India newspaper commented in a recent editorial that few Indians can get jobs "without some knowledge of this alien language."

However, "English English" is spoken by a small number of usually affluent Indians.

Friday's Brain Twister: Yesterday was George Washington's birthday. Now, George Washington stares out at us from the United States dollar bill. How can you use George as a unit of measure?

Answer: The dollar bill is exactly 6 1/4 inches long. Today's Brain Twister: Can you draw these eyeglasses without lifting your pencil or going back over any of the lines? I can! But in doing so I made quite a spectacle of myself! (Look for the answer in Tuesday's Kids-Only Club column.)

Foreigners Invest In North Carolina
NEW YORK (AP) — North Carolina continued to attract companies from overseas even though foreign investment in U.S. manufacturing declined in 1980 for the first time in five years. Foreign companies invested money into at least 36 manufacturing facilities in the state in 1980, as compared to 25 in 1979 and 13 in 1978, according to a nationwide study by the Conference Board.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is someone in the background whom you know from experience has always looked out for you. Tomorrow will be no exception.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your efforts to treat others as fairly as possible tomorrow will be greatly appreciated by those you deal with. Such gestures serve to strengthen alliances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others may shun their tasks tomorrow, but you'll take pride in whatever you set your hand to and your achievements will attest to your worthy aims.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Members of the opposite sex find you extremely appealing tomorrow. Don't be surprised if you receive attention from one who never noticed you before.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Loved ones are as concerned for you tomorrow as you are concerned for them. Because each will be looking out for the others' interests, all will benefit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Work on projects tomorrow which challenge your imagination. Your enjoyment will be doubled if you have another talented soul with whom to share efforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your possibilities for material gains may come about through unusual developments tomorrow. Listen carefully to offbeat suggestions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The real "you" will emerge tomorrow, and those with whom you associate will like what they see. This will be especially true of persons who already find you attractive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck tends to favor you materially tomorrow, but she may screen her actions from view. Evidence of her good works will be seen later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Ways can be found tomorrow to take positive steps to make something you've been hoping for a reality. However, there's a chance you may delay taking action.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone who is very fond of you is anxious to help you achieve your present goals. This individual doesn't want to butt-in, but will assist if asked.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Treat life philosophically tomorrow. You'll find that those mountains are little more than molehills.

Your Birthday
February 23, 1981
Your financial prospects are more encouraging this year than they have been for some time. Profitable proposals may be brought to you by persons for whom you've gone to bat.
Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

Faye Dunaway, James Farentino Portray Charismatic Couple

By KENNETH R. CLARK
NEW YORK (UPI) — "Evita Peron" would play in Argentina about the way a molotov cocktail would play in an ammunition dump, but if the film doesn't deliver the Nielsens when NBC rolls it outnight and Tuesday, then the Nielsen mentality is beyond redemption.

Faye Dunaway, who specializes in portraying ladies made of steel, is stunning as the poor farm girl and third-rate actress who would have slept with the devil to get where she wanted to go. To many in her native land, Evita Duarte Peron did just that by becoming first the mistress, then the wife of the charismatic Juan Peron.

To many others, she is "Saint Evita," a dichotomous lady able to wrap herself in diamonds and furs and still champion her beloved "descamisados," or "shirtless ones," as if no contradiction existed.

From Peron's rise to power in 1946 until her death in 1952, Evita became a legend — one Miss Dunaway and James Farentino, in the role of Peron, bring to vibrant life on the screen.

Researching and playing; the role made a "Pronista" of sorts out of Farentino.
"He was very charismatic — very charming," said Farentino, in New York to help promote the film which was shot almost entirely in Guadalajara, Mexico. "Then I started doing research on him and I found out he was also demonic — a fascinating character."
"Not since his regime — nor since Evita — has the socioeconomic situation in Argentina been anywhere near what it was in terms of rising ... They were a very special pair."

the power without the other."
Evita and Peron could have produced no chemical reaction more volatile than the one turned out by Miss Dunaway and Farentino. Together, they make a rich, meaty movie, almost swashbuckling in its electricity.

Today In History
THE ALMANAC
By United Press International
Today is Monday, Feb. 23, the 54th day of 1981 with 311 to follow.
The moon is moving toward its last quarter.
The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.
The evening star is Mars.
Those born on this day are under the sign of Pisces.
German composer George Frederick Handel was born Feb. 23, 1685.
On this date in history:
In 1942, a Japanese submarine fired 25 shells at an oil refinery near Santa Barbara, Calif., two and a half months after Pearl Harbor.
In 1945, six members of the 5th Division of the U.S. Marines planted an American flag atop Mount Suribachi on the Pacific island of Iwo Jima.
In 1969, President Richard Nixon arrived in Belgium to start a tour of Europe.
In 1972, President Nixon conferred in Peking with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai.
A thought for the day: Thomas Jefferson said, "When a man assumes a public trust, he should consider himself as public property."

DR. LAMB Checkups Important

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 42-year-old male and my wife has been after me to get a medical checkup. She says I should have one every year but I think that is a waste of time. I've told her that the Cancer Society said that early detection of cancer was not as important as they had thought. Also I know that the diet recommendations from the Heart Association are under dispute, too. So why have an examination as long as I feel good and am able to do all the things I want to do? Who is right?
DEAR READER — Your wife. I'm sure a lot of people have misunderstood the brief news stories on these matters this past year. Controversy always makes a good news story, but there are far more areas of agreement than disagreement.
First, it is absolutely WRONG to say that early detection of cancer is not important. The American Cancer Society actually said, "The Society finds that the early detection of cancer is a very important health promotion activity." Moreover, to accomplish that their recommendation was and is that "a cancer-related health checkup is recommended for all persons over 20 every three years, and for all persons over 40 every year." That includes YOU.
What controversy exists about diet and heart disease has nothing to do with the importance of detecting changes that can cause you to have heart attacks and strokes.
The very important reasons why you need regular medical checkups are outlined in The Health Letter number 10-2, Your Valuable Medical Examination, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of The Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.
As that issue points out, half of all deaths today are still caused by heart attacks and strokes and other circulatory problems. You can prevent a lot of these by early detection of factors that lead to these disasters. Also, about half of the people who develop diabetes have abnormal tests before they have any symptoms. A regular medical checkup, coupled with attention to prevention programs can be your best investment in your health.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 16-year-old girl and I was wondering when a girl's body stops growing. I have heard that her hips and bust stop after her first period. I have also heard that a girl has the potential to grow a foot when she's 17, and continues growing taller until she's about 21. When do bust, hip and height growth cease?

DEAR READER — Cessation of growth varies a lot as it is tied to the onset of puberty. And that can vary a great deal. In general, a young girl first starts to develop some fat stores, compared to the lean body of the child.
The breasts usually develop first and about two years later the first menstrual period occurs. There is often a significant growth spurt preceding the onset of menstruation. This is sometimes called the pubertal growth spurt. The average for this peak growth period is around 12 years of age. The pelvis gets larger about this time, too.
As the pubertal growth slows the cartilage zone in the long bones calcifies and growth stops. With an average onset of puberty, most girls are through growing before age 18 and usually much sooner.

Zoo Hopes To Mate New Male Panda

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Zoo officials say they'll give 240-pound Chia-Chia three days to recover from his trip next month before starting the match-making with him and their own female panda, Ling-Ling.
The 240-pound male panda is expected to arrive in New York City from London on March 5 via air freight. Next comes a truck ride to Washington.
Efforts to encourage mating between another male panda, Hsing-Hsing, and Ling-Ling have been unsuccessful for the past six years.

GOING TO COURT — Jean Harris makes her way to the elevator at the Westchester County Courthouse in White Plains, N.Y., over the weekend as the "Diet Doctor" jury resumed deliberations. The eight-woman, four-man panel sent word to Judge Russell Leggett that they needed clarification on certain charges. (AP Laserphoto)

Harris Jury Still Deliberating

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Jurors in the Jean Harris murder trial returned to their seventh day of deliberations today, trying to decide whether the girls' school headmistress murdered Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower.

Sunday's 9½-hour day of deliberations was the jury's longest so far. The eight women and four men spent the whole day behind closed doors without sending any notes to indicate what progress they had made.

"There's been no communication whatever from them, so we can only assume they are still working on the top count," Judge Russell R. Leggett said, referring to the count of second-degree murder that Mrs. Harris faces.

"I've been an expectant father three times, and it's never been this bad," defense lawyer Joel Arnou said as he paced the corridor near the jury room.

Mrs. Harris awaited the verdict from an undisclosed location about 10 minutes by car from the Westchester County Courthouse. For the first time in the three-month trial, she stayed away from court Sunday because the jury didn't ask to rehear any of her testimony or the judge's instructions on the law.

Jurors asked three times after Leggett's original instructions to be told the definition of an intentional homicide. Each time, Leggett told them that intent to murder may be formed the instant the gun is fired, without premeditation.

Mrs. Harris, the 57-year-old former headmistress of the Madeira School for girls in McLean, Va., was charged with killing the 69-year-old millionaire cardiologist, her lover of 14 years, at his Purchase, N.Y., estate last March 10.

The prosecution alleged Mrs. Harris killed Tarnower in a jealous rage over the doctor's affair with Lynne Tryforos, his 38-year-old office assistant.

Mrs. Harris contended Tarnower was shot accidentally as she tried to commit suicide.

Leggett told the jurors they could consider two reduced charges — second-degree manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide — only if they agreed unanimously that Mrs. Harris did not intend to kill Tarnower.

Report Links Reputed Gangster, Houston Official To Kickbacks

HOUSTON (UPI) — Reputed New Orleans Mafia figure Carlos Marcello and Houston City Councilman Jim Westmoreland took part in an alleged kickback scheme involving the City of Houston's health insurance contract in 1979, according to government documents obtained today by KPRC radio reporter Olive Talley.

The documents indicate that Marcello and Westmoreland, among others, received money for their efforts to help Prudential Insurance Co. win the city's insurance contract in 1979.

the federal Brilab investigation.

The radio station said today records reveal that Westmoreland was approached about the city contract from two angles: first by Houston Port Authority Commissioner John Garrett, who was acting on behalf of labor leader L. G. Moore and undercover FBI agents who were posing as insurance representatives.

The second approach came from a New Orleans lawyer who was acting on behalf of Marcello, the documents said.

Marcello's attorney Russell Schonekas, who was not the lawyer FBI documents named, denied his client was in-involved in any business dealing with the city, and claimed Marcello never took any money from anyone in Houston or from undercover FBI agents on behalf of any activities involving the city.

Westmoreland's attorney, Tom McDade, calls the information in the documents "ridiculous."

"It's absolute poppycock, just bull. Pure unadulterated bull," McDade said.

On Dec. 11, 1979, Westmoreland met with Garrett, Moore, and others, along with undercover agents at a Houston hotel, the radio station reported. During a conversation there, the transcript obtained by KPRC of the secretly recorded meeting quoted Westmoreland as saying, "If Prudential bids and they are one of the top five, I can make it where they get the bid, if that's what you want."

"We're in the ballgame, we're in business," Westmoreland reportedly said.

On Dec. 26, 1979, the city council approved a new health insurance contract with Prudential through the Texas Municipal League. Documents reveal that on Jan. 9, 1980, undercover FBI agents paid Marcello $5,000 for his part of the insurance kickback. Government papers also quote Garrett as having paid Westmoreland cash for his efforts as well.

FBI agents allegedly gave Garrett $5,000 to give to Westmoreland, but it is not known if Westmoreland got that full amount, KPRC said.

Postal Service Trial Under Way

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unusual civil trial that began in U.S. District Court today could bring more than $300 million in back pay to half a million American workers whose employer violated a federal wage law.

The defendant in perhaps the most lucrative back-pay case ever is the Postal Service.

And, in an unusual twist, one of the plaintiffs suing on behalf of the workers is the Labor Department. It is not often that one federal agency sues another.

The case revolves around the Postal Service's admitted violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act, a New Deal-era law that provides, among other things, for a minimum wage and overtime pay after 40 hours per week.

The Postal Service has admitted in legal papers that it did not comply with the law from May 1, 1974, when the act began applying to the agency, to May 20, 1978.

The first witness in the case, attorney Gerald Feder, explained how he helped 91,000 postal workers receive $53 million in back pay for wage violations. The Labor Department wants the agreement for the 91,000 workers applied to the remaining 500,000 postal employees.

Feder said a postal union ran notices in its magazine of the claims he was filing against the Postal Service in U.S. District Court in 1975. Individual postal workers responded that they were interested in joining the legal action. It was these cases that were settled out of court for the $53 million, plus another $2.65 million in attorneys' fees paid by the Postal Service.

Feder said the suits accused the Postal Service of failure to properly calculate overtime because it did not take into account a 10 percent night differential, a 25 percent Sunday differential, and a territorial cost-of-living adjustment.

University Teacher Encourages National Policy On Productivity

America's productivity growth rate is declining and a national policy is needed to improve it, according to a Texas Tech University management professor.

Dr. Barry A. Macy, director of the Texas Center for Productivity and Quality of Work Life, explained the productivity decline.

"America is not producing as many goods and services per hour of labor as it used to. In fact, productivity growth rates in the nation's factories and businesses decreased by 50 percent during the 1970s," Macy said.

"There is no indication that the decline in productivity growth rate is leveling out," he said.

Macy cited several reasons for the decline in the nation's productivity. A lack of capital has stymied investment, he said. Inflation, high energy costs, little cooperation among government and business and more consumption with lower savings are principal reasons for a declining production rate and increased inflation. Outdated or worn-out equipment also hinders productivity.

"The average age of American equipment is 15 years, versus seven years in Japan," Macy said.

"Then there is the lack of incentives for increased productivity. In the last year in excess of $100 billion has been committed to compliance with government regulations instead of investment in plant and equipment," Macy ex-

Two additional reasons are that the various governmental agencies concerned with productivity are fighting each other instead of solving the problem and that businesses usually opt for short-term profits rather than a long-term perspective.

To cut down the inefficiency of conflicting government agencies addressing the productivity problem, Macy said a national policy to investigate the productivity decline is needed. In January he proposed to representatives of the Reagan administration that a private, non-federal research and policy organization be created to coordinate Congress, federal agencies and private business on the issue of productivity in the United States.

Although Macy does not expect a reversal of the present trends in productivity growth rates in the immediate future, he is convinced that productivity can be increased by improving organizational effectiveness and enhancing employee's quality of work life in the nation's private and public sectors.

"The Japanese have done it, the Germans have done it, and so can we," said Macy.

According to the management professor, there are two basic ways to increase productivity.

"One is to increase capital investment and technological innovation, and the second is better use of human resources," Macy said.

He believes the second alternative is more viable for America in the short run. In the long run, a dual strategy combining capital investment and technological innovation coupled with better use of our human resources is needed.

Because private industry today does not have as much capital to invest in technology and equipment as in the past, Macy recommended instead that it look at the human resources side to better use an organization's talents and skills in both management and labor.

Macy has been studying productivity and quality of work life projects involving union and management cooperation, profit-sharing plans, employee ownership and general improvements in industrial relations for 12 years. Drawing from this experience he directs the Texas Center for Productivity and Quality of Work Life. Macy and his colleagues are seeking new avenues for strengthening productivity and employees' quality of work life in Texas and the nation.

Macy and his Texas Center associates also are involved in projects to enhance productivity in government agencies, since governments now constitute a major sector of the economy. Macy testified last year to a Texas House of Representatives Committee on State Employee Productivity, recommending the establishment of a state task force composed of House, Senate, Governor's office representatives and private citizens to look at ways of improving productivity and employees' quality of work life in state agencies.

The Texas Center for Productivity and Quality of Work Life is an independent, interdisciplinary, non-profit center of the College of Business Administration at Tech.

Man Charged In Murder

Robert Lee Washington, 55, has been charged with murder for the Feb. 19 stabbing death of Joseph McNeal in Slaton.

McNeal, who was stabbed once in the neck, was ruled dead by Slaton Justice of the Peace Arvin Stafford. The stabbing incident occurred at the Twin Gables, a Slaton club.

Washington, also known as Robert Lee McGrew, turned himself in to the Slaton Police Department the day of the incident. The Lubbock County District Attorney's office has recommended that Washington's bond be set at $25,000.

Slaton police reports indicate that Washington walked into the police department and surrendered with the statement that he had "just gotten into trouble at Twin Gables."

After Washington explained that he had assaulted someone, a Slaton police officer asked if he had shot the man.

"No, I stuck him," Washington reportedly replied.

Professor Captures Parks Award

Dr. James W. "Bill" Kitchen of Texas Tech University's park administration faculty has been presented the 1981 Ruby Award at the 26th annual conference of the Southwest Park and Recreation Training Institute.

Kitchen received the award for his continuous support of the institute since 1964. The Tech professor has been program chairman of the annual conference for 16 consecutive years. A frequent program participant, Kitchen is the institute's director.

The Southwest Park and Recreation Training Institute gathers and disseminates information about the parks and recreation profession, fosters a greater degree of professionalism and supports the profession through its annual educational conference.

A native of Port Neches, Kitchen received his bachelor's and master's degrees in horticulture from Tech. He received his doctoral degree in horticulture from Texas A&M University.

Before coming to Tech in 1964, Kitchen served in the U.S. Army, was a high school teacher in Port Neches and was a research assistant at Texas A&M's soils and crop science department.

During Kitchen's first three years at Tech, he had dual responsibilities in the Department of Park Administration, Horticulture and Entomology and as director of grounds maintenance. As maintenance supervisor he oversaw campus improvement projects and the maintenance budget and personnel.

His academic duties have included directing the graduate research program in the Department of Park Administration and Landscape Architecture and developing joint research proposals with other departments. Kitchen has taught undergraduate and graduate courses in horticulture and park administration, planning and design.

He has developed a cooperative education program with the National Park Service, Southwest Region and Denver Service Center. He has coordinated a summer intern program for departmental students. He has been editor of the annual proceedings of the Southwest Park and Recreation Training Institute since 1965.

Kitchen is the author of more than 29 articles in professional publications. He is a contributor to "Handbook on Conifers: Brooklyn Botanic Garden Record of Plants and Gardens."

He has conducted numerous feasibility and environmental studies for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the National Park Service, the U.S. Forest Service, and other governmental agencies and private enterprises.

A board member of the Texas Recreation and Park Society, Kitchen was the society's president in 1977. He is a member of the National Recreation and Park Association.

Kitchen is a board member of the Southwest District Recreation Conference and the founder and past president of the River Recreation Association of Texas. He is a member of the Texas Historical Foundation and a former board member of the Caprock Girl Scout Council. Kitchen received the Girl Scout Thanks Badge in 1979.

School Gives Dub Harris More Responsibilities

W.B. "Dub" Harris Jr., director of development for the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, has been named interim director for Development and University Relations for Texas Tech University and the TTUHSC.

Harris will succeed George M. Fielding who has held the interim post since Oct. 15, 1980. Fielding, who was named interim director after the resignation of vice president Clyde E. Kelsey Jr., is leaving Texas Tech to enter private industry in Houston.

Harris, who holds a business administration degree from Texas Tech, became director of development at the health sciences center in 1972. He was executive assistant to the dean of the Texas Tech School of Medicine from 1975 to 1978. For six years before joining Texas Tech, he was vice president of public affairs at Lubbock's Methodist Hospital.

Harris is a past president of the Board of Directors and a fellow of the National Association for Hospital Development, also serving as chairman of the association's Education Fund. He is a past director and a founding member of the Texas Society of Hospital Public Relations. Her was co-chairman of a committee which worked to form the Health Systems Agency No. 2. Harris also serves on the public affairs and business affairs groups of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

For four years, he was chairman of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce Public Relations Committee. He served two terms on the Board of Directors of the Lubbock Advertising Federation, a past member of the board of the Sales and Marketing Executives, Inc., of Lubbock. For two years, he also was chairman of the Texas Tech United Way campaign and is a past member of the Lubbock United Way's Public Relations Committee.

He was a widely known businessman before he entered the field of public relations and development, engaging in real estate as well as the auto sales business. He was a district sales manager for ALD Inc. in Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Jacksonville, Fla., before becoming national sales manager in Chicago. He returned to Lubbock in 1964 as owner-partner in a Lincoln Mercury dealership.
