Reagan calls income tax unfair, dumb

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Assailing the federal income tax as unfair and dumb economics, President Reagan today urged Americans to reject any notion that the system cannot be changed.

"This is America, and there are no limits except those that we put on ourselves," the president said in an address at North Carolina State University.

He renewed his plea for support of tax overhaul — the chief domestic goal of his second term — only a day after House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill predicted great difficulty in getting the bill passed.

As the House returned to work after its summer recess, O'Neill, the top Democrat, said he had "found very little sentiment for the tax-reform bill" among business executives, and "the people on the street — they never even mention it." But O'Neill promised the Democratic-controlled House will begin work by mid-month on the plan.

Reagan even drew scant support for his tax plan from conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who flew here with Reagan on Air Force One.

"With all due respect to my president," Helms told reporters, "I have not heard one person in North Carolina mention it except in a deprecating way."

Carrying his campaign to a college campus, Reagan aimed to whip up public support for a new system of lower rates, higher personal exemptions and fewer deductions. A fairer system will boost the economy, create 10 million new jobs before 1990 and launch "an entrepreneurial renaissance of invention and productivity that will keep American No. 1 in world competition," he said.

"The way our tax system is structured, the harder you work and the more you earn, the less you get to keep," he said. "One of the first priorities of our tax overhaul is to make sure that more of your hard-earned dollars will end up where they belong — in your wallets, not in Uncle Sam's pockets. ...

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Black and mixed-race youths hurled gasoline bombs and stones at homes in white suburbs of Cape Town and East London, and one homeowner responded with gunfire, police said today.

It was the first report of racial violence spreading to white areas during the year of unrest in which more than 650 people have died.

Police also said they shot and killed two youths who were among crowds throwing stones and gasoline bombs at police vehicles in the mixed-race township of Elsie's River near Cape Town.

About 60 mixed-race youths shattered windows of a home in Cape Town's white Windsor Park district late Wednesday. Two homes were damaged in attacks by about 50 blacks in the Amalinda suburb of East London, about 550 miles east of Cape Town, police said.

The homeowner in Windsor Park responded by opening fire on youths, two of whom were wounded, police said.

No injuries were reported in Amalinda.

Arson and looting also was reported in Eastern Cape black townships and black districts outside Port Elizabeth and Johannesburg, police said. In the black township of Duncan Village near East London, a center for mentally handicapped adults was burned down, officials reported.

Residents reported hearing repeated gunfire in Scottsdene and Retreat, two of the mixed-race districts near Cape Town. Scottsdene is less than a mile from Windsor Park, a blue-collar neighborhood 12 miles northeast of Cape Town.

Police raced to the two white suburbs as residents reported they were under attack, but the youths had fled.

At least 29 people have been killed in rioting in the mixed-race districts around Cape Town and in the city's giant black townships since the government banned an Aug. 28 march demanding the freedom of the country's top black leader, Nelson Mandela.

Youths set fire to cars, threw up road barricades and stoned police vehicles in rioting in the mixed-race districts of Athlone, Elsie's River, Mannenberg, Ravensmead and Retreat, police said.

Police today provided road escorts for whites driving into the city from districts north of Retreat witnesses said.

The deaths of two white soldiers in a traffic accident and a black police officer were reported Wednesday. The independent South African Press Association reported that at least 40 people were wounded Wednesday by police gunfire and rubber bulletes east of Cape Town.

The Johannesburg newspaper Business Day reported that top business leaders plan to fly to Lusaka, Zambia, to confer with leaders of Mandela's outlawed guerrilla movement, the African National Congress. The paper said the trip is being organized by Gavin Relly, chairman of South Africa's biggest mining conglomerate, Anglo American.

Agencies undecided on seatbelt policy

Midland drivers obeying traffic laws, but not wearing their seatbelts, don't have to worry about being pulled over for a few months, say local traffic officials.

"We're not pulling people over for seatbelt violations. We are warning people as we stop them for other violations," said Capt. H.D. Wicker of the Midland Police Department.

Capt. Jim Chancellor with the Midland County Sheriff's Department, said, "Officers are not pulling over people to give verbal warnings at this time."

Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Ken Pittmans said it varies on whether his agency will stop and verbally warn a driver for not wearing a seatbelt.

"It depends where we are and how busy it is," Pittmans said.

Pittmans said he has not issued any verbal warnings to drivers.

"Usually people will put them on if they see us. They have a guilty conscience. It's getting the job done," Pittmans said.

The Texas seatbelt law requires drivers and passengers in cars and trucks with carrying capacities of less than 1,500 pounds to wear seatbelts.

The law became effective Sunday, but citations with fines ranging from $25 to $50 will not be issued until after Dec. 1.

A 90-day grace period was granted to verbally inform the public the law is in effect, said David Wells, spokesman for the state Department of Public Safety in Austin.

State bank hasn't changed much in 80 years

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — Washington County State Bank celebrated its 80th birthday, but patrons say some things have not changed Texas' oldest existing state bank.

The bank hardly resembles its original two-story office, where employees neatly hand-printed each transaction in a ledger.

It has grown from a few employees to 60 and from $100,000 in deposits to $110 million.

But senior vice president Billy Sohns, 70, still finds time to chat with a longtime customer and is often spotted shaking hands in the lobby with regular patrons.

Sohns started as the bank's bookkeeper in 1939, back when most of its customers were farmers.

"When I first started, we did notary work, wrote wills and did affidavits," Sohns said. "We were just like lawyers. We were the main institution in the community."

In addition to bookkeeping, Sohns also spent mornings peddling cotton for bank patrons.

"These cotton buyers out in the fields did business with us," he said. "They'd buy some cotton and would come into town at night and dump some samples of the cotton on the front door.

"My job was to take the samples to the mills in town and sell 'em," he recalled. "We'd then credit the money to the buyers' accounts. That way, they could afford to buy more cotton."

Sohns said he tried to retire last year, but he was talked into coming back to work two days a week.

Washington County State Bank was chartered Aug. 15, 1905. Four other state banks — in Houston, Somerville and San Antonio — were chartered sooner, but have merged with other banks or have gone out of business.

Last week, an official state historical marker was dedicated at Washington State Bank, proclaiming its historical significance.

Sohns recalled when he would record every transaction in a ledger at the end of each day. The bank had not account numbers or personalized checks then, he said. Only names were necessary.

Dallas pilot still missing

A Dallas man who landed a private plane in a Mitchell County field about 25 miles northeast of Big Spring was still missing this morning, but authorities had abandoned the search because of "questionable circumstances" surrounding the incident.

"We've more or less called off the search," said Mitchell County Sheriff Wendell Bryant this morning. "We think he made it out of the area."

A man identifying himself as Wayne Samples of Dallas called Big Spring police about 2:43 a.m. Wednesday and told them he had crashed his rented plane and was hurt, according to the Department

Simultaneous lightening bolts lit up the evening sky near County Road 160 and Rankin Highway as a thunderstorm moved eastward through Midland County Wednesday evening.

More thunderstorms predicted for Basin

From Staff Reports

The National Weather Service is predicting "the possibility of more thunderstorms" in the area as a low pressure system moves eastward through the Permian Basin, said a NWS spokesman.

A severe weather warning was put into effect at 9:58 p.m. Wednesday, when temperatures dipped 15 degrees in places and following reports of marble-sized to dime-sized hail and wind gusts up to 58 mph in the Greenwood area.

"A warning was put out because Greenwood reported the minimum requirements for a severe thunderstorm," said the spokesman. "Hail must be ¾ inches (dime-sized) and wind gusts must be at least 58 mph to be considered a severe thunderstorm."

The warning was in effect in Midland County until 10:55 p.m., when the small but powerful storm system moved out of the area.

Geologist may further explore Titanic

OODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — The chief scientist on the joint U.S.-French expedition that found the Titanic says he plans to explore the sunken luxury liner in a small manned submarine, possibly next summer.

But Dr. Robert Ballard, a geologist, refuses to give the exact location or depth of the Titanic because he doesn't want it disturbed by others.

"I would like to keep that confidential, as others are talking about coming out here and dredging or dragging and damaging it," Ballard said. "The Titanic is in beautiful condition and we don't want anyone to come out and maul it."

"If I give you the depths, a good oceanographer will know how to get at it," he said with a laugh.

Ballard's comments to officials at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution were made available Wednesday from the transcript of a ship-to-shore telephone call placed Tuesday to the Navy vessel Knorr.

Ballard, expected to return to Woods Hole next week, would not give the exact location or depth of the liner, which was found Sunday and is believed to be about 500 miles off Newfoundland and 13,000 feet under the icy waters of the North Atlantic.

The Titanic was the most luxurious liner of its time and thought to be unsinkable when an iceberg cut a 300-foot gash in its side on its maiden voyage April 14, 1912. About 700 people escaped by lifeboat, but 1,513 others drowned.

Ballard said he plans to examine the ship in the future from the Alvin, a three-man, deep-water research submarine. The first views of the Titanic are being taken by a video camera aboard the Argo, an unmanned vehicle developed by Ballard.

The 25-foot-long Alvin, currently on a mission in the Pacific Ocean, has two small arms called manipulators that can pick up items no bigger than a suitcase. But Gordon Glass, an executive assistant at Woods Hole, said he doubted there would be any retrieval of objects.

"We would never do that," said Glass. "I suspect that the position of the institution and Ballard would be to leave the Titanic alone."

He said he believes Ballard's sole desire in using the Alvin would be to have "his eye down there."

Dr. Robert Spindel, head of the engineering department at the institution, said the Alvin could not be sent to the Titanic site before next summer because it is already promised to other projects and is scheduled for an extensive overhaul.

Of videotapes done Wednesday, Ballard said: "About 10 minutes ago we saw beautiful color pictures of cases and cases of wine bottles, totally undamaged plates, all sorts of other material that did not break up, whereas other parts of the ship were damaged.

"The upper part of the bow is in remarkably good condition considering it's the part that felt the iceberg and part that collided with the bottom.

"The under part of the bow is badly damaged, where the boilers came out, but the actual top, the very small little flagpole, right on the very tip of the Titanic's bow, is still standing there totally pristine."

It is believed that items from the ship would fetch high prices from collectors, but Ballard has said any attempt to salvage the wreck would be silly. He also said it would be desecrating a gravesite.

The group stopped at the Titanic sinking site last Wednesday while returning home from sea trials of the Argo, which Ballard developed for the joint U.S.-French underwater expedition program funded by the U.S. Navy.

Woods Hole officials have said the primary purpose of the dive was not to find the Titanic but to do engineering tests on the Argo.

A joint U.S.-French news conference on the find will be held in Paris and Washington Sept. 13.

Falwell, Jackson differ on cure for apartheid

NEW YORK (AP) — The Revs. Jerry Falwell and Jesse Jackson, taking their longstanding disagreement on South Africa on national television, agreed that apartheid is an illness, but differed radically on the cures.

Falwell, leader of the fundamentalist Moral Majority, said Wednesday night the reason the media was focusing on South Africa over other African nations was because it was one of the few places with a free press.

"The South African issue has to be the Watergate of the American media. You have to go to 20 or 30 countries before you find South Africa as the major problem," Falwell said on ABC's "Nightline" program.

He said the famine in Ethiopia "was the major problem" in Africa by far, followed by "Uganda, where Idi Amin has killed 300,000 blacks...Libya (with its) hit squads and terrorists" and other countries.

"We don't see these happenings in Havana and in Moscow because you can't bring a camera in there," Falwell added.

Jackson interrupted: "Mr. Falwell, let us not forget that Hitler was not a Communist or Marxist...the ruling elite of business and military political leaders (in South Africa) think they have some divine inspiration to determine the destiny of the majority of the people."

Falwell said he wasn't belittling the importance of fighting apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation, but that it should be eliminated through "constructive engagement" and not by encouraging the pullout of American investments.

That was the way, he said, "to cut off the cancer without killing the patient."

Jackson, an unsuccesfful candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984, said, "Constructive engagement has failed morally, and, in fact, has encouraged more investment."

Falwell argued that American divestiture in companies in South Africa would hurt not only South African blacks but millions of other blacks who come there in search of jobs. Jackson replied that U.S. investments were robbing South African blacks of their dignity.

Jackson noted that the path toward self-determination for South African blacks must initially be painful before "long-term pleasure" could be achieved.

"When you have a boil on your arm, it will swell up and give you immense pain. You might think you are dying. But it doesn't mean you are dying but that the blood is purifying," he said.

In the same way, he said, South Africa must go through a period of turmoil. "With increased investment in apartheid, the rope around the necks of the people appears to be getting tighter as opposed to looser. The American corporations that are there are providing about 70,000 jobs. There are about 22 million blacks there, so 70,000 jobs is not a trade off for the dignity of 22 million people...

"If people get the right to vote, they will also get a job...In slavery everybody had a job, but no one had dignity," Jackson added.

VIOLENCE

The rand, South Africa's currency, closed Wednesday at 38 U.S. cents, down from 41.50 cents a day earlier. In the first 20 minutes of trading the currency tumbled to 37 cents until the central bank sold dollars to prop it up.

The rand reached its all-time low, 34.80 cents, on Aug. 27, prompting the government to suspend currency trading for five days. In 1981, the rand was worth more than $1.25.

The declining value of the rand means South Africans pay more for imported goods and for items made domestically, which are usually produced by imported machinery or made from imported parts.

The rand's value is an indicator of foreign investors' faith in this nation, where daily riots against apartheid, the legal system of racial separation, has resulted in the deaths of more than 650 people in the past year, almost all of them black.

In Washington, House and Senate leaders said if President Reagan vetos legislation imposing limited economic sanctions against South Africa, his veto almost certainly will be overridden.

The White House has not yet said whether the president would sign the legislation, but Reagan has said he did not favor it.

Possibly trying to head off such a confrontation, Reagan today met with top foreign policy advisers to review the administration's policy toward Pretoria.

The legislation would ban large computer sales to South African agencies reponsible for enforcing apartheid, the sale of nuclear technology, new bank loans to the government, and the import of South African gold coins.

Air Force to conduct anti-satellite weapon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force says it has met a 15-day waiting period requirement and now plans to conduct the first test of its anti-satellite weapon against an object in space this month.

Some congressmen had been told to expect a test Wednesday. It was postponed, however, apparently because of timing and not because of a warning by the Soviet Union that it would feel free to step up its own anti-satellite efforts.

The new test date remains a secret. All that is known about the target is that it is an older satellite, in orbit but no longer functional.

According to the Pentagon sources, the Air Force proceeded to plan the test for late Wednesday, only to discover at the last moment that Defense Department lawyers weren't starting the clock until midnight.

"I don't know how the legal notification was handled, but somewhere people just miscalculated," said one source who spoke only on condition of anonymity. "The judgment now is that the 15-day period doesn't expire until midnight. So to test today wouldn't fulfill the requirement."

In a statement Wednesday, the Pentagon said simply that the period would expire at midnight and "the first test of the U.S. anti-satellite system against an object in space is planned for later this month."

Officials said they were reluctant to identify the target satellite or its orbit because that would help the Soviets monitor the tests.

The exercise will take place over the Pacific Ocean, one source said. An F-15 jet fighter will leave Edwards Air Force Base in California and launch the rocket when the satellite swings by overhead.

TAX

"The present system, with all its shelters and loopholes, is not only unfair, it's dumb economics," the president said. "The economic misuse of the real estate provisions of our tax code alone is mind-boggling," he added, noting many of the nation's business districts are lined with vacant office buildings that were built as tax write-offs.

He did not mention that those write-offs, chiefly for depreciation, were made far more lucrative by the 1981 tax cut that was the chief part of his economic program.

However, he did credit his 1981 program with fostering 32 consecutive months of economic growth and creating 8 million new jobs.

His new tax plan will carry that expansion a step further, Reagan promised, while removing the poorest Americans from the tax rolls and cutting taxes for most workers.

SEATBELTS

Grace periods are not uncommon with various laws, said Ann Streetman of the Texas Safety Association in Austin.

Ms. Streetman said a similar grace period was granted for the child seatbelt law for infants to 4-year-olds. The child seatbelt law became effective on Oct. 31, 1984, but fines were not issued until January 1985, she said.

After the grace period ends, city and county police officials said they haven't decided if they will pull seatbeltless drivers over for just that one violation.

Wicker said after Dec. 1, the city police department will probably continue to issue citations for seatbelt violations if other traffic violations are committed.

Lt. George Fosters said the Midland County Sheriff's office will probably decide within one month, on how it will deal with seatbelt violaters after the grace period ends.

Pittmans said the Department of Public Safety will stop people after Dec. 1 if they are not wearing their seatbelts.

As separate government entities, city, county and state police can enact different policies on citing and fining those not wearing their seatbelts.

Even though drivers don't have to fear fines for another three months, state and local officials say they have noticed an increase in drivers wearing seatbelts since the law became effective Sunday.

Wells said he didn't have any specific numbers, but statewide the Department of Public Safety has noticed a general increase in seatbelt use since Sunday.

In Midland Chancellor said, "I have noticed since the first there are a good many people that I have seen wearing seatbelts. It's just going to take time to get used to. I'm glad they gave us a grace period."

of Public Safety. The line went dead before police could establish his location, but later an unidentified man called back to say he and Samples were at a Diamond Shamrock gas station in Westbrook. When police reached the station, there was no sign of Samples.

"We went out this morning (Wednesday) and located the aircraft" several miles southeast of Vincent, said Lt. Rusty Ameen of Midland's Civil Air Patrol squadron. Ameen and other members of the Midland squadron reached the downed plane about noon Wednesday after an Odessa CAP pilot located it from the air.

"The plane looked like it had landed and tried to take off again," said Ameen, who noticed damage to the Piper Archer's propeller, left tail wing and landing gear. According to Ameen, Samples had taken off from a McKinney airfield, but hadn't filed a flight plan.

"As far as what we know, he's still alive," he said.

But National Transportation Safety Board investigators decided Wednesday the plane had not crashed, according to DPS reports, and Bryant said he called off the search for Samples due to "questionable circumstances" surrounding the man's disappearance.

We've got the Sesquicentennial covered

If you would agree that Ma Ferguson was a famous Texan or that Jose Antonio Navarro brought in the first Texas oil well, you may need a Lone Star history refresher course.

We will have many opportunities to review our state's proud past during 1986, when we celebrate the 150-year birthday, or sesquicentennial, of Texas.

By the way, as history buffs know, Ma Ferguson was the first and only woman governor of Texas and was elected in 1925. In 1836, Jose Antonio Navarro was one of two native-born Hispanic Texans to sign the Texas Declaration of Independence, which he helped draft, and was later elected to the Texas Republic's Senate.

Ma Ferguson and Jose Antonio Navarro, along with other famous Texans and symbols of our state's heritage, will be featured on the cover of about nine million Southwestern Bell phone directories for 1986. To commemorate our state's 150-year birthday, Southwestern Bell Telephone recently conducted a statewide art contest for the Sesquicentennial year directories. We received more than 500 entries.

Statewide contest winner announced

And the winner is... Bill Hall of Arlington. Hall's colorful montage displays the rich texture of Texas. After much head-scratching, the six judges selected Hall's work as the best of many excellent entries.

At the end of 1985, Houston and Austin will be the first cities to receive new directories with the special artwork covers. Then, throughout 1986, the Sesquicentennial directories will be distributed to Southwestern Bell Telephone customers in more than 150 Texas cities.

Delivery of these special directories is just one event Texans may look forward to in 1986. Southwestern Bell Telephone will present a sneak preview of one major statewide Sesquicentennial activity at our exhibit at this year's State Fair of Texas, October 3-20 in Dallas. Hope some of you can pay a visit to our exhibit in the Grand Place (formerly called Women's Building) at Fair Park.

New toll-free service aids Hispanics

Southwestern Bell Telephone recently inaugurated a trial of an important new service for our Spanish-speaking customers throughout the state.

It is a toll-free number to give customers an opportunity to obtain general information and assistance from Spanish-speaking employees. If a customer needs specific information about an account, a bureau employee will call the customer's business office — with the customer on the line — and serve as an interpreter, if necessary.

The Spanish Service Bureau's toll-free number is 1-800-592-7726. If you forget the number, you can get it from an 800 Directory Assistance operator (1-800-555-1212).

Our business offices throughout Texas have always tried to help Spanish-speaking customers as much as possible. Sometimes, however, Spanish-speaking employees were not available. Now, we have specially trained employees dedicated to helping those who call the toll-free bureau.

Also to provide help for our Spanish-speaking customers, we have translated several booklets, including our popular series of Tele-Help (Tele-Ayuda) booklets, into Spanish. Those booklets cover such subjects as establishing local telephone service, using the telephone to make your home more secure, installing home telephone wiring and handling annoying phone calls. To order a Tele-Help booklet, in English or Spanish, customers may call this toll-free number: 1-800-325-2686, extension 86.

Although these booklets answer many questions, sometimes customers need the personal help of our employees. Meeting the telecommunications needs of all our customers is why we're in business. We are hopeful that the new Spanish Service Bureau will help us reach our goal of complete customer satisfaction.

Police officers look over the scene of a collision between a tractor-trailer and a car near San Antonio Wednesday. The driver of the car, a suspect in the robbery of a San Antonio grocery store, was killed in the accident.

Suspect's flight ends with fatal collision

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A desperate flight from police ended in death for an armed robbery suspect Wednesday when his car plowed into an 18-wheeler loaded with gravel, authorities say.

Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland said the accident scene Wednesday was littered with packets of money, a handgun and a note in a paper sack that said, "I have a gun in my pants. Put all the money in this bag or I'll start shooting."

He said the $3,800 found at the scene was more than what was taken in the Wednesday robbery and said deputies are investigating the possibility that some of it may have been taken in a holdup the day before.

Copeland identified the dead man as Charles J. Barta, 18, of San Antonio. The truck driver — Miguel Lopez, 46, of San Antonio — was treated at Santa Rose Medical Center and released.

The accident closed a half-mile section of Loop 1604 for more than four hours.

The incident began about 11 a.m. at an HEB Store where a man brandishing a pistol handed a clerk a note demanding money.

Witnesses said the suspect drove away in a blue sedan. Officers spotted a car matching the description on Loop 1604. Patrol cars chased the vehicle at speeds of more than 100 mph before it tried to pass a slow-moving truck carrying a mobile home.

"He passes us, sees us and then he steps on it," said Deputy Lorenzo Rivera.

Copeland said the driver of the sedan pulled out to pass the truck but apparently saw an oncoming 18-wheeler. The driver turned to get back into the proper lane but grazed a pickup, he said.

"He hit it just enough to flip him out in front of the 18-wheeler," Copeland said.

Austin election system before judge

AUSTIN (AP) — A new system of electing Austin's mayor and councilmen for three-year staggered terms is before the U.S. Justice Department for final clearance.

However, Councilman Charles Urdy, only black member of the council, has served notice he will appeal the decision, contending that Austin's at-large election system is "the most discriminatory system there is."

Mayor Pro Tem John Trevino, the only Mexican-American member of the council, said he also had reservations about the change.

Although Urdy declined to take part in a drawing Tuesday to select which council members would get three-year terms and which would get two, he won a three-year term when he was given the final slip of paper in the bowl passed among council members.

The drawing, which was set up by a charter change approved by voters last Jan. 19, must be approved by the Justice Department under the Voting Rights Act, which prohibits discrimination against minorities.

Prison drug probe also reveals tax fraud operation

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — An investigation into a drug network run by inmates and prison guards also revealed a tax fraud operation involving more than 100 prisoners, authorities said.

The drug and tax refund operations came to light during an investigation by Walker County sheriff's officers that began in January, said Deputy Rick Berger.

At least three guards have been fired for allegedly delivering marijuana to prisoners and nine inmates believed to have distributed the drugs are also under investigation, Berger said.

"I was surprised at first at the number of the officers involved in this stuff," Berger said. "It's a large-scale operation when you consider that pounds of marijuana are being delivered every day by a number of employees."

Authorities also are investigating several civilians who allegedly act as fronts for the smuggling ring by setting up bank accounts and post office boxes to carry out the transactions, Berger said.

TDC spokesman Phil Guthrie said Wednesday that drugs are "a chronic problem in any prison system."

"And I think it's important to have these investigations," he said.

Berger said guards who participate in the delivery network can make thousands of dollars, some even doubling their salaries.

"We're talking about guards making $15,000 a year and picking up an extra $31,000 on the side if they make (several) deliveries a month," the deputy said Tuesday.

Arrests in the drug investigation began in July when officers learned a prison guard planned to bring drugs into a TDC unit, Berger said.

The guard, cooperating with the investigators, agreed to buy the drugs from two women at a motel, Berger said. The women were arrested July 12 and charged with delivery of marijuana that was to be sent to the Wynne Unit.

Authorities declined to release the women's names, saying they also are helping in the investigation.

Berger said authorities believe the drug deal was set up by a convicted robber at the Wynne Unit and that a convicted forger also may be involved in the deal. The guard would have been paid $500 for the drug delivery, he said.

'Eviction notice' threatens company town in Panhandle

PHILLIPS (AP) — A mass "eviction" notice to about 1,500 people threatens to destroy this small Texas Panhandle community, residents say.

The two biggest landowners in town, M M Cattle Co. of Amarillo and Phillips Petroleum, have told the people living in about 450 houses to move off their leased land by the end of 1986.

"What we're interested in is keeping our home here. Not moving out, but staying right here where we belong," said P.O. Atkins, his voice cracking as tears streamed down his face.

Atkins was one of about 800 people attending an emotion-charged town hall meeting Tuesday to talk about how to keep the landlords from forcing people off their land.

"We all have the same problem," said Sam Jackson, former Phillips school board member. "So we're not here to hear a bunch of personal problems, we're here to see if we can resolve our problems."

The residents expressed fear of displacement, support for their school and a desire to stay in the town they came to at the request of the petroleum company for which it is named.

A mass exodus would mean the end of Phillips High School, home to 400 students and the only governmental entity in this company town of 2,500 residents, the Borger News-Herald said Wednesday.

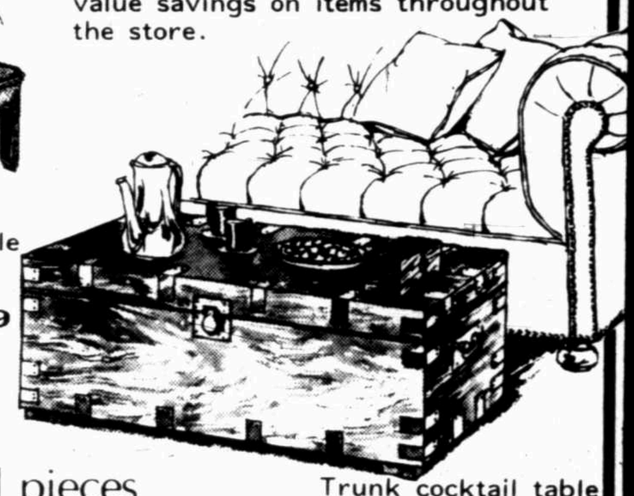

The cattle company is asking residents of about 390 homes to move their houses from its property because it cannot afford to build a sewer system meeting state regulations, said Wanda Whittenburg, an attorney for M M Cattle.

Farm Credit System asking for bailout

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press

NATION

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress and other federal officials reacted with relief to a surprise announcement that the Farm Credit System, the nation's largest farm lender, will seek outside help to shore up its deteriorating finances.

"Finally!" said Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., chairman of the House Agriculture credit subcommittee, after getting word of the switch on Wednesday.

"We're going to have to do a bailout, just like Chrysler and New York City," added Jones, who has scheduled hearings on the issue next week.

While it is federally sanctioned, the Farm Credit System uses no federal money, instead raising capital by selling bonds. It is cooperatively owned by its farmer-borrowers, and regulated by the federal Farm Credit Administration.

Jones said upwards of $5 billion will be needed to restore the financial health to the $74 billion system. Others said the cost could run as high as $20 billion.

Farm Credit Administration spokesman Roger Stromberg said the system still is expected to be able to manage its problems for the immediate future. But he said worsening farm financial projections indicate that an infusion of cash will be necessary in 18 to 24 months.

Donald E. Wilkinson, FCA governor, has been insisting the banks could handle their losses through funds transfers, increased interest rates and economy moves. But this week he shifted positions, saying further deterioration in the farm sector makes potential loan losses more than the system can absorb.

"He recognizes that it's got to be faced at some point," said Rep. Cooper Evans, R-Iowa, who has advanced a long list of legislation to bolster the system's finances. Evans said Wilkinson's public admission of the system's problems would make it easier to get remedial legislation through Congress.

The Farm Credit Administration board of directors met until late Wednesday to discuss what kinds of help the system should seek, and scheduled a news briefing on the situation today.

Industry insiders have been speculating for months that despite their public bravado, the system's regulators eventually would have to turn to outside sources, including the federal government.

The system holds the largest single share of the nation's $212 billion farm debt. Because its loan portfolio is exclusively in agriculture, it has taken a worse-than-average beating from farming's current economic doldrums.

The Farm Credit System is made up of 37 regional banks which make mortgage and operating loans to farmers and loans to farm cooperatives.

It suffered loan losses of $428 million last year, the greatest in its 70-year history. Eleven production credit associations — the local lenders that serve as a conduit for operating loans — have been liquidated over the last two years. Internally financed bailouts already have been approved for the system's Spokane, Wash., and Omaha, Neb., districts. And its financiers say the system may incur a "substantial net loss" this year.

Several avenues are under discussion for lifting some of the burden of system loans that have gone sour.

A new corporation — either a federal entity or a private consortium — could be established to take over the system's bad loans, along with nonperforming farm loans of other lenders. Federal guarantees could be extended either to the system's farm loans or to the bonds it sells to raise capital. Or the government could make a direct stock purchase from the system.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block declined at a news conference Wednesday to say what kind of bailout the administration might support or when its recommendations would be ready.

Block said survival of the system is important "but I want farmers to survive too. And farmers cannot survive with 16 percent interest. They need to have competitive interest rates."

Citizenship clears way for Murdoch empire

NEW YORK (AP) — Media magnate Rupert Murdoch says he became a U.S. citizen "because I wanted to," but the move clears an obstacle to his $2 billion purchase of the nation's largest group of independent television stations.

Murdoch, 54, pledged allegiance to the United States on Wednesday with 185 other new citizens in a 15-minute ceremony at U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

Afterwards, the Australian-born publisher said he became a citizen "because I wanted to and I'm very satisfied." He declined to say if he changed his citizenship to comply with federal regulations limiting an alien's ownership of a broadcast license.

Rupert Murdoch

Murdoch plans to add the seven Metromedia television stations to a media empire including more than 80 newspapers and magazines and half of 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. His U.S. newspapers include the New York Post, the Chicago Sun-Times and the Boston Herald.

Under Federal Communication Commission rules that prohibit establishment of new newspaper-broadcast cross-ownerships in major cities, Murdoch may have to sell the Post and Sun-Times if he retains Metromedia stations WNEW-TV in New York and WFLD-TV in Chicago, two of the seven stations he is buying.

Murdoch has applied to the FCC for a waiver to keep the two newspapers for two years so he can get the best price for them.

The commission has never granted such a waiver, although it has on occasion allowed buyers of existing cross-owned property to hold both properties briefly while seeking a buyer for one or the other.

The Media Access Project, a non-profit law firm in Washington that represents public interest groups before the FCC and in federal courts, contends it is unlikely that selling the New York and Chicago newspapers at a higher price will help keep the papers alive.

"There is no way that the competitive viability of the newspapers will be enhanced by requiring the purchaser to pay more for them," the group argued.

Murdoch has agreed to buy the Metromedia stations for about $650 million in cash and to also assume its bond debt of $1.45 billion. He then would sell one of the stations, WCVB-TV in Boston, to Hearst Corp. for $450 million.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An investigation by former Attorney General Griffin Bell found nothing to implicate top E.F. Hutton & Co. managers in banking practices that led the firm to plead guilty to 2,000 counts of mail and wire fraud, the brokerage firm says.

Bell's report follows recent public statements in which he said top Hutton officials were remiss in not having a management structure that would have caught the excessive bank overdrafting that got the firm in trouble.

Nonetheless, Bell told reporters last week that former Hutton President George L. Ball and others in the top circle were not directly responsible for the improper activity.

Hutton Chairman Robert Fomon told the firm's employees on Tuesday that Bell had found "no criminal culpability on the part of any individual. There were failures of judgment. But he's saying that nobody intended to break the law."

Fomon said he had not seen the report, which was to be released today, but had been briefed by Bell.

Although ordered up by Fomon and financed by Hutton, Bell's report was being released directly by the former federal judge — rather than through the company — in an apparent attempt to show it was an independent inquiry.

Foman said Bell "didn't find a smoking gun" linking top managment to the scheme and "it's become clear that nobody else will either."

A House subcommittee on crime has been conducting hearings on the case, particularly the Justice Department's failure to seek criminal penalities against any individuals.

Hutton paid $2.75 million in fines and legal costs as part of its settlement with the Justice Department on May 2. The firm also agreed to an injunction that prohibits future overdrafts — whether excessive or within the bounds of accepted corporate practices — without bank permission.

Toddler dies in underwater nightmare

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors hoped to match the astonishing survival of a youngster last year by battling to keep alive a 3-year-old boy who spent 2½ hours submerged in Lake Michigan.

But they lost the four-hour battle when the child, Anthony Ruffino of suburban Bensenville, was pronounced dead at 3:53 p.m. Wednesday at Weiss Memorial Hospital, after his grandfather's parked car rolled 50 feet down a boat ramp into the lake, police said.

Doctors pinned their hopes to the recovery of Jimmy Tontlewicz, the youngster who survived a 20-minute submersion in the lake after a sledding accident on Jan. 15, 1984, said hospital spokeswoman Nancy Gospo.

"They gave him CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) and tried to raise his body temperature gradually" but the effort failed, said Ms. Gospo.

Anthony was brought to the hospital by fire department ambulance after 10 scuba divers spent nearly 2½ hours searching for him in the murky water of Montrose Harbor, police said.

Martial arts 'fleeced' by Sen. Proxmire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire today gave his monthly "Golden Fleece" award to a federal study of an unexplained phenomenon in which martial arts experts seemingly debilitate opponents by inscribing X's in the air.

Proxmire, D-Wis., gave his September fleece award to the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke, part of the National Institutes of Health.

Proxmire said the institute was "tossing away $160,000 to study in part whether someone can 'hex' an opponent."

"Look out, Hercules, here comes the 98-pound weakling who is good at drawing 'X's in the air," Proxmire said. "Those bulging biceps and swollen pectorals can be pounded into submission by a hocus-pocus move. That is a thesis the institute is testing with taxpayers' money. We have had voodoo economics, now we may get voodoo physiology."

Generic Valium OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — Valium, the tranquilizer so commonly used and misused in the 1970s that its name became synonymous with middle-class drug abuse, is about to become cheaper for those now taking it.

The Food and Drug Administration approved licenses Wednesday for three drug companies to market generic versions of the prescription tranquilizer. The competition over diazepam, the generic name, will end a 22-year market monopoly by Hoffman-La Roche Inc., whose patent on Valium expired this year.

The approvals were announced by Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler, who touted the expected marketplace competition as a boon for price-conscious consumers.

Mrs. Heckler dismissed suggestions that lower prices might spur renewed abuse of the drug, saying the dangers of addiction now are well known to physicians.

Girl shot on school bus

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Police searched for a 12-year-old boy who shot a girl in the face on a school bus after other students dared him to pull the trigger of a .38-caliber gun he was carrying.

The youth, who was not identified because of his age, remained at large today, police said.

The girl, Lagretta Nash, 14, was listed in stable condition today after undergoing surgery at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital following the shooting Wednesday, said Richmond police Sgt. Robert E. Walker. The bullet entered her chin and exited from her neck, he said.

Terrorists bomb three Paris businesses

Parisians view the damage at the Renault automaker building, struck by a bomb explosion early today. French terrorists Direct Action say they bombed this and three other businesses which they say oppress South African blacks.

WORLD

PARIS (AP) — Bombs exploded today at four businesses apparently targeted for doing business with South Africa, police said. Three people were slightly injured.

An anonymous caller to the French news agency Agence France Presse claimed responsibility for the attacks on behalf of leftist terror group Direct Action, saying the companies oppress blacks by operating in South Africa.

The businesses hit today included a coal-importing company, an aluminum firm, the automaker Renault, and a construction firm.

Bombs appeared to have been planted in front doorways and the damage was said to be serious.

A man living in the building in front of the coal-importing company was slightly injured in the blast, police said. Two other men were injured in the explosion at the construction company, where the heaviest damage occurred.

An anonymous caller telephoned the French news agency to claim responsibility for the clandestine leftist terrorist group. There was no way to verify the caller's claim.

"The French and South African states are ready to do anything to assure their domination of the people they exploit," the caller said. "It is in the Paris ministries that begins the death (of) the blacks which is completed in the ghettos of Pretoria."

Interior Minister Pierre Joxe, Police Chief Guy Fougier of Paris and Robert Broussard, France's top anti-terrorist official, visited the scene of the bombings.

Direct Action, which had been all but broken up by police, reappeared in the last year and apparently has linked up with West German and Belgian terrorists.

Among the terrorist activities it has laid claim to was an Aug. 8 attack a U.S. Air Force base near Frankfurt, West Germany, in which two people died. Direct Action claimed joint responsibility with the West German Red Army Faction for that blast.

Air strike by Israelis hits Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An Israeli air raid on a guerrilla base near the only major Christian population center in Syrian-controlled eastern Lebanon killed six Palestinians and wounded 10, police said today.

Police also reported that a car-bombing in the Christian enclave of Zahle three hours before the air raid Wednesday killed 14 people and injured 46. Five more people were missing and presumed dead, police reported.

The car bomb at Zahle's vegetable market was the sixth in Lebanon since Aug. 14. At least 154 people have been killed and 296 wounded in explosions.

Christian-controlled radio stations said the victims of the car bomb would be buried in a mass funeral today at Zahle's main Greek Catholic church.

Lebanese Civil Defense officials said a Chinese diplomat from Peking's embassy in Amman, Jordan, in Lebanon on a business trip, was among the wounded. They identified him as Zhang Tiejian, an attache, but did not disclose his condition.

Police said Israeli jets struck at nearby Qabb Elias in two runs 10 minutes apart. They quoted rescuers as saying most of the casualties resulted from the second sortie.

Israel's military command said the base at Qabb Elias was a key post of the Palestinian Arab Revolutionary Committee, a Libyan-backed guerrilla group. The command said it raided the base after several guerrillas of the group were captured earlier in the week infiltrating Israel.

BOMBS DROPPED by the jets also hit fields outside Qabb Elias, six miles southwest of Zahle, near the highway linking Beirut with Damascus, Syria.

A Syrian military statement said the raiding Israeli planes "destroyed a few civilian houses and killed a number of innocent civilians."

It claimed that Syrian air defenses in eastern Lebanon fired at the Israeli jets and hit three of them.

Israel's military command claimed the jets hit four buildings occupied by the guerrilla group before returning safely to Israel.

Wednesday's raid was Israel's 11th air strike this year against bases in Lebanon in retaliation for guerrilla attacks.

A few hours before the air raid, several Soviet-made Katyusha rockets landed in northwest Israel close to the Lebanese border. Israeli military sources said there were no casualties.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres has said that Israel will attack guerrilla bases in Lebanon whenever it has information that attacks are being prepared.

Officials said they did not know who was responsible for the car-bombing in Zahle, a city of 100,000, 25 miles east of Beirut.

It occurred after President Amin Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, ordered police to disarm all militias in Zahle, the largest Christian enclave in the predominantly Moslem area of east Lebanon.

ZAHLE HAD BEEN shelled sporadically from Moslem positions in recent weeks. The Syrians arranged for the Lebanese Forces, the main Christian militia, to withdraw from the city last week to stop further attacks and neutralize the city.

Fighting between Shiite Moslem militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas around the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp in South Beirut dwindled to sporadic machine gun exchanges today after overnight duels with rocket-propelled grenades and heavy machine guns.

Palestinians said one guerrilla was killed and eight were wounded.

Police said six civilians, including four children, died and 28 were wounded in the battles that began Tuesday night.

They said the main highway to Beirut airport which runs near the camp was closed to traffic because of sniper fire.

Lebanon's 96 banks, including the Central Bank and its six provincial branches, were closed today by a strike. The strike was called to protest the kidnapping of six Christian employees of the Central Bank and other banks by Moslem gunmen.

At least 60 Christians and Moslems have been seized in recent weeks.

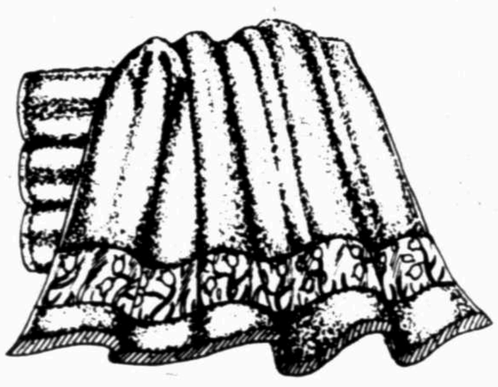

Afghan guerrillas hit

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A Soviet-Afghan task force backed by air strikes and artillery is pounding rebel positions near the Pakistani border in a bid to crush the Islamic insurgency in Afghanistan.

Guerrilla commanders said their men were holding many of their positions Wednesday in eastern Afghanistan's Paktia province, although their firepower is limited.

Right decision

It may not have constituted an earth-shattering decision to many Americans, but President Reagan had no sooner rejected the proposed shoe-import quotas than the sob-stories began appearing — stories lamenting that American shoemakers are being thrown to the wolves. Those stories may be good copy, but they only gloss over the fact that the president's decision was a wise one on several counts.

For example, the ailing American shoe industry was protected against foreign competition from 1977 to 1981. Yet, during that same time the industry's work force decreased steadily as domestic shoe sales continued to decline. Obviously, the American shoe industry isn't competing in the world market. It is sheer folly to assume that yet another trade barrier would stop the bleeding. But that barrier would certainly have inflicted considerable pain on American consumers.

The proposed five-year quota on foreign footwear would have cost consumers nearly $3 billion in higher shoe prices. That equates to — depending upon which estimates you use — between $50,000 to $70,000 for each job saved in the shoe industry, or more than three times what the average footwear worker earns each year in this country. Clearly it would be far more economical to retrain and relocate these displaced workers than to try to save their jobs.

Had Reagan caved in to protectionist pressures on shoe imports, other industries undoubtedly would have wanted the same favorable treatment. Worse yet, a presidential misstep would have sent a dangerous signal to Congress where protectionist sentiment is reported to be reaching fever pitch. That's scary for more reasons than one.

More than 300 pieces of legislation have been introduced this year to curb imports on goods ranging from automobiles to waterbeds. Several bills would go so far as to pull up the drawbridge by imposing tariffs on all imports. Meanwhile, the Democratic leadership is supporting a bill that would slap a 25 percent surcharge on all goods from Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and Brazil unless those countries buy more American products.

It's tempting when economic times are tough to protect a nation's own businesses at the expense of the free market, but it isn't overly bright. Such protectionist measures are particularly dangerous because they invite retaliation against American exports. This in turn could lead to a worldwide trade war with potentially disastrous consequences. Millions of Americans are employed in export industries. Many, if not most, would lose their jobs in any trade war. For starters, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that 220,000 Americans in export-related industries would lose their jobs immediately. And the prospects for another global Depression, which some have been saying lies just beyond the horizon, would be greatly enhanced.

That's nothing to scoff at and all the more reason why President Reagan must stand firm for free trade and continue resisting the reckless alternative of protectionism.

Call council for action

Regarding your article dated Aug. 28, "Council approves budget, tax rate," I agree with Ralph Holder in part. City government could learn to get by on less. But if we are to have good streets, we must pay. I think it would be appropriate for me at this time to publicly thank Councilman David Godfrey. After reading the article of Aug. 28, in which Ms. Sammie Broach remarked about the streets being cracked and grass growing in them, it really hit home with me. Councilman Godfrey told her she should call City Hall.

Since I have the same problem as Ms. Broach, I thought a lot of good that would do, as I had called the street department a year ago. Councilman Godfrey also said to call him, so I thought that is what I would do.

I called Councilman Godfrey at his place of business. He was very receptive and concerned, although he did not know me at all. He took time from his own business to hear me out. He asked for my phone number and called me the next day to let me know that someone would be out.

So Mr. Holder, there are people that are civic minded. And their side benefits are being a sounding board for irate citizens. Let us direct that attitude in the right direction at the department heads and that particular department, like the head of streets and paving. And about you calling in when you saw seven men standing around while one man worked, maybe seven of those were supervisors and one a laborer. As you know every job needs supervision.

I think it would be advantageous for the councilmen to call the department heads into the council chambers and have a little visit with them. I personally think we are very fortunate to have the mayor and councilmen (especially David Godfrey) that we have. I voted for most of them.

But I did not vote for the department heads in the city. So if you have a problem with a department at the city, call your mayor or council person, and you won't be disappointed. They are special people to take a lot of flack for $25 a month.

Car owner's nightmare

I recently purchased not one, but two brand-new vehicles.

When any hard-working Midlander spends upwards of $30,000 on new automobiles he will surely take pride in keeping them clean and as new looking as possible.

By the nature and location of my employment I'm forced to drive the north service road of Wall Street near the 4100 block.

It must have been the brainstorm of a high paid Einstein in the highway department, or else it is getting close to budget allocations for gravel and tar. Who made the decision to gravel the service road anyway?

I've watched that street for three weeks bleed tar every afternoon since the highway department got brains. Now that it has settled down, here they come and throw more gravel.

Both of my cars now have rock chips in the paint and I use a pint of tar remover each time I wash my cars. Not to mention the inconvenience for auto dealers having to pull their cars back from the front of their parking lots to save paint and windshields.

Why didn't the decision maker for gravel and tar drive down Thomason Valleys or Illinois Gutters west of Midland Drive first?

Once again we see how intelligent our tax dollars are spread around.

Asbestos removal caught on snag

WASHINGTON — Removal of asbestos material from thousands of the nation's schools has come to a virtual halt because insurance companies are canceling the policies of the firms that do the messy and dangerous job. This means that millions of American children will continue to be exposed to the risk of cancer and asbestosis as the fire-retardant material crumbles with age.

Jack Anderson

"The plight is a most serious one in this nation, with more than 31,000 schools, to say nothing of 1,400 governmental buildings and hundreds of thousands of private structures, which contain asbestos and must have it removed," Henry Nozko, president of AMCAT, a leading asbestos-removal company, warned White House officials recently in a private letter we've seen.

In other high-risk areas, insurance companies have reacted to potentially ruinous payoffs by raising their premiums. But in the case of asbestos removal, which entails the threat of injuries or illness that might not surface for years, and are thus difficult to plan for actuarially, the companies have simply canceled the policies.

"CIGNA Insurance Co. precipitously canceled all of AMCAT's insurance — liability, property damage, auto and others — because they wanted no part of insuring anyone who removes asbestos," Nozko wrote, adding: "AMCAT's insurance agents went to more than 80 insurance companies in America and found that none are interested in underwriting this risk."

AMCAT finally found one company that would sell it insurance, but at an extremely high premium: 20 percent of AMCAT's revenues. That's almost 10 times the premiums it had been paying. "It has practically destroyed the company," Nozko told our associates Donald Goldberg and Indy Badhwar. "We will make no money this year."

Nozko said that hundreds of removal firms have had their insurance canceled, either immediately, like AMCAT's, or when the policies expire. "It's a disaster; there are no two ways about it," he said.

In his letter to the White House, Nozko said removal of asbestos from schools is "a serious national problem, which is now at a standstill unless government intervention resolves (it)." He estimated that 40 million youngsters are being exposed to asbestos danger, and said asbestos removal contractors "must be insured."

The insurance crisis has not gone unnoticed at the White House. The situation was outlined in June in a Cabinet Affairs Memorandum distributed to several federal agencies for comment. Officials familiar with the problem confirmed that many asbestos-removal firms are also having difficulty finding affordable insurance.

So far, the Reagan administration's response has been to support legislation sponsored by Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., which would establish a pool of funds to provide insurance coverage. But the bill has failed to get out of committee.

ON THE JUNKET TRAIL: It evidently took some effort, but Yugoslav officials managed to scare up enough dignitaries to occupy a group of House Armed Services Committee members for one day after they sampled the tourist delights of the ancient resort of Dubrovnik on the Adriatic coast.

"Despite the absence of many officials because of the traditional August summer vacation," a confidential State Department trip summary reported, "the Yugoslav hosts worked up a full program and turned out a good delegation for the talks and luncheon in Sarajevo Aug. 5."

The lawmakers' entourage, which included five wives, 13 aides, including a Navy doctor, also laid a wreath at the new Vraca World War II memorial overlooking Sarajevo, and lunched with Yugoslav officials in the villa of the late Marshal Tito.

Footnote: A member of the delegation said: "There's no question that there is free time on trips like these. There is also free time back home. The real issue isn't whether someone spends an hour in the pool, but whether he does his homework and gets the most out of the hours of meetings we have each day. Some members do, some don't."

GEORGE F. WILL

This is a 'most favored nation'?

WASHINGTON — You can not toss a brick in Washington without conking someone eager to impose economic sanctions against South Africa. That fact should help Congress keep short its forthcoming debate about whether there should be "most favored nation" status for China, Hungary, Afghanistan and Romania.

George F. Will

MFN status involves access to reduced import duties, credits and other preferences amounting to subsidies. China got MFN status in the 1970s and is considered special because ... well, it is big and therefore.... Besides, the regime is only "so-called communist." President Reagan, on the return trip from China, spoke of the "so-called Communist Chinese."

Some State Department officials consider Hungary, which has MFN status, proof that a therapeutic U.S. policy can move a Soviet satellite toward stealthy independence from Moscow. You say the independence is invisible? Silly you. That just proves how stealthy it is. And never mind the fact that Mikhail Gorbachev's policy toward Eastern Europe is neo- (why should America have all the "neos"?) -Stalinism. Pravda is busy denouncing the classic sins of "revisionism," "national communism," "national tendencies," "Russophobia" and "anti-Sovietism."

Regarding China and Hungary, Washington is, perhaps, incorrigible. But why even discuss MFN status for Afghanistan and Romania?

The decision regarding Afghanistan is economically unimportant. Afghanistan's only significant export is its population, approximately one-third of which is in refugee camps abroad. Romania is a more interesting case, if only because the argument against Romania is not significantly weaker than the argument against Afghanistan, yet a sizeable State Department lobby supports Romania.

Recently Romania produced some toilet paper containing Biblical words such as "Esau, " "Israel," "Satan." As many as 20,000 Bibles sent to Romania in the 1970s were seized and recycled into toilet paper. Romania has cited its willingness to permit the shipments of Bibles as evidence of its independence, liberality and eligibility for MFN status.

In his 1983 Christmas homily, the Rev. Geza Palfi, 43, protested a government edict making Christmas a "day of labor." He was arrested and died three months later of internal injuries. In spite of severe anti-religious policies, church attendance in Romania is higher than in any Eastern European nation other than Poland. This phenomenon, which is evidence of intense dissatisfaction with the regime, is cited by the regime as evidence of its toleration.

In the United States, we debate the registration of guns. In Romania, typewriters must be registered with the police. Psychiatric "hospitals" are used for the torture of dissidents. To acquire MFN status, Romania formally ended a confiscatory "education reparation tax" on those who wished to emigrate. The tax is now collected, unofficially, in bribes. Concerned about the low birth rate, the government submits women workers to mandatory gynecological examinations.

The Helsinki Watch Committee considers Romania "one of the worst human rights offenders in Eastern Europe." Romanian actions violate, comprehensively, Romanian law and the nation's international undertakings, including the obligation to allow U.S. citizens to exercise inheritance rights or receive just compensation for property held in Romania.

After three and a half years in Bucharest, the U.S. Ambassador, David Funderburk, who speaks Romanian and studied there for two years, resigned to express his exasperation with the State Department's unshakable faith that Romania's President Ceausescu conducts a significantly independent foreign policy. The evidence for this "independence" is an assortment of acts, such as Romania's participation in the 1984 Olympics, acts that are, singly and even cumulatively, small beer.

Ambassador Funderburk says his embassy staff "observed a large Soviet presence in Romania that was not welcome news to some officials in Washington. On our own initiative we looked in registries, checked schools, traced license plates and came up with an ungodly number of resident Soviets, including Soviet agents in factories monitoring Romanian exports to the Soviet Union."

Romania's occasional rudeness may annoy the Kremlin. Romania criticized the invasions of Czechoslovakia and Afghanistan, did not break diplomatic relations with Israel after the 1967 war and does not permit Soviet military maneuvers on Romanian soil. But such gestures hardly constitute independence.

They are dust in those eyes, including State Department eyes, that do not want to see Romania's complete compliance with the Kremlin's two paramount requirements — domestic Stalinism and support in the military-industrial complex that is the Soviet Union. The Romanian regime has harshly criticized Poland's Solidarity movement, and has integrated its intelligence service with the Soviet's East-bloc network.

Trees, which only God can make, die so that debates, which Congress makes can be transcribed on paper. The coming debate on MFN status should not cost many trees.

Changing world not an easy job

EDITOR'S NOTE: While Art Buchwald is on vacation we reprint some columns from the past.

I was in New York recently and took a ride with a friend of mine in a taxi. When we got out of the cab, my friend said to the driver, "Thank you for the ride. You did a superb job of driving."

Art Buchwald

The taxi driver was stunned for a second. Then he said, "Are you a wise guy or something?"

"No, my dear man, and I'm not putting you on. I admire the way you keep your cool in heavy traffic."

"Yeh," the driver said and drove off.

"What was that all about?" I asked.

"I am trying to bring love back to New York," he said. "I believe it's the only thing that can save the city."

"How can one man save New York?"

"It's not one man. I believe I have made that taxi driver's day. Suppose he has 20 fares. He's going to be nice to those 20 fares because someone was nice to him. Those fares in turn will be kinder to their employees or shopkeepers or waiters or even their own families. They, in turn, will be nicer to other people. Eventually the good will could spread to at least a thousand people. Now that isn't bad, is it?"

"But you're depending on that taxi driver to pass your good will to others."

"I'm not depending on it," my friend said. "I'm aware that the system isn't foolproof. I might deal with 10 different people today. If, out of 10, I can make three happy, then eventually I can indirectly influence the attitudes of 3,000 more."

"It sounds good on paper," I admitted, "but I'm not sure it works in practice."

"Nothing is lost if it doesn't. It didn't take any of my time to tell that man he was doing a good job. He neither received a larger tip nor a smaller one. If it fell on deaf ears, so what? Tomorrow there will be another taxi driver I can try to make happy."

"You're some kind of a nut," I said.

"That shows you how cynical you have become. I have made a study of this. The thing that seems to be lacking, besides money of course, for our postal employees is that no one tells people who work for the post office what a good job they're doing."

"But they're not doing a good job."

"They're not doing a good job because they feel no one cares if they do or not. Why shouldn't someone say a kind word to them?"

We were walking past a structure in the process of being built and passed five workmen eating their lunches. My friend stopped. "That's a magnificent job you men have done. It must be difficult and dangerous work."

The five men eyed my friend suspiciously.

"When will it be finished?"

"October," a man grunted.

"Ah! That really is impressive. You must all be very proud."

We walked away. I said to him, "I haven't seen anyone like you since 'The Man of La Mancha.'"

"When those men digest my words, they will feel better for it. Somehow the city will benefit from their happiness."

"But you can't do this all alone!" I protested. "You're just one man."

"The most important thing is not to get discouraged. Making people in the city become kind again is not an easy job, but if I can enlist other people in my campaign...."

"You just winked at a very plain-looking woman," I said.

"Yes, I know," he replied. "And if she's a schoolteacher, her class will be in for a fantastic day."

"They were mainly lightening trips," said a spokesman.

According to the NWS, there is a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with partly cloudy skies predicted and a low temperature near 70 degrees. Winds will be out of the southwest at five to 15 mph.

Fair weather is predicted for Friday with high temperatures in the mid 90's, southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

The record high temperature for Wednesday's date was 99 degrees set in 1983. A low of 53 for today's date was recorded in 1984.

STATE

Showers and heavy thunderstorms covered parts of Southeast Texas and the upper coast from east of Houston to west of Port O'Connor this morning, spawning at least one tornado in Brazoria County.

No damage or injuries were reported after a tornado skipped along the ground east of Interstate 35 between Liverpool and Danbury at 5:15 a.m., a Brazoria County sheriff's dispatcher said.

Elsewhere, a few thundershowers were over parts of south Central Texas and west of the Pecos. Partly cloudy to cloudy conditions were common across most of South and East Texas, while the rest of Texas enjoyed generally fair skies.

NATION

A flash flood watch was posted in southeastern Missouri, which had rain and thunderstorms as the remnants of Hurricane Elena moved across the region.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from southern New England across the southern Great Lakes and upper Mississippi Valley to the central Plains.

Fair skies prevailed from the southern mid-Atlantic states to Florida while cloudy skies were common over the Pacific Coast states.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from the upper Mississippi Valley across the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley to New England; showers and thunderstorms scattered from the Tennessee Valley across the lower Mississippi Valley to the Gulf Coast and Florida; thunderstorms scattered across the central Rockies and Plains; rain along the Pacific Coast; and scattered showers across the northern Rockies.

Rebels antsy to face some 'foreigners'

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — If the Midland Lee Rebels appear to be a little antsy this week, there is good reason because they finally get to face some "foreigners" face-to-face.

Lee, coming off a 12-2 season and two straight trips to the playoffs, couldn't come up with a scrimmage opponent, so it's been a long wait to see some strangers in different colored uniforms.

Lubbock Coronado will provide the strangers at 8 p.m. here Friday at Lowry Field in the season football opener for both teams and it's a step Lee coach Jack Tayrien is ready to take — not to mention his players, who have endured two-a-days, no scrimmage opponent and murderous heat for three long weeks.

"We're ready to play somebody," says Tayrien. "We're excited about having a football game. I don't know how good we will be, but it's time to get a chance to hit someone else for a change.

"CORONADO IS a good team. They are young and inexperienced in some areas like we are. We just need our kids to go out and get after it and concentrate on getting better. Our kids need some games under their belts."

While Lee does indeed some playing time to hone an attack at another possible playoff berth, this contest may be even more critical for the Mustangs of Coronado and coach Ken Wallace. The Mustangs open District 3-5A play next weekend against Lubbock High. They don't have the luxury of three non-conference games like the teams of District 4-5A.

"We've got to grow up in a hurry and a team like Lee is what we need right now," notes Wallace. "Playing a team like Lee does more for us than anything we can do. It's a great teaching tool for the kids. They see right off what it's going to take to win because Lee always has such a fine team."

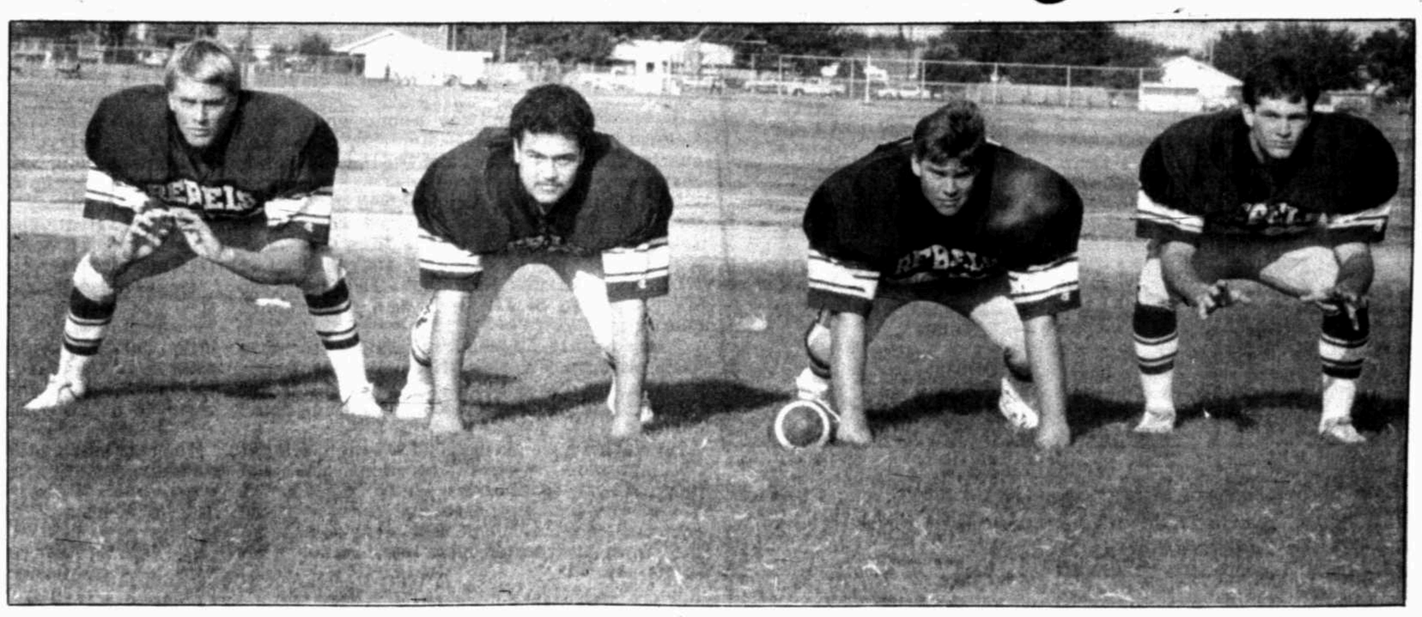

Coronado is young, but Wallace sees that as a strength from the point of view of building a solid program. The Mustangs have 12 of their 22 starters as underclassmen and will be starting two sophomores.

"We have the talent to build with and I think we will have a good football team before it's all over," says Wallace. "Even though we are young, we're not in awe of Lee. We're just going to have to go out and get after them."

Lee, on the other hand, will start 20 of 22 positions with seniors. However, that doesn't all add up to a great deal of playing experience. Lee has six returning starters on offense, but none of them are in the key backfield positions. Defensively, Lee can only field two returning starters since senior halfback Terry Young came up with a broken arm in its intrasquad scrimmage. Cornerback Kevin Witt is the only player on defense who can really be listed as a returning starter since middle linebacker Tony Brown started at defensive tackle a year ago. It will be on defense where Lee must prove itself early.

AND THE defense should get a good test from Coronado since the Mustangs own junior James Goolsby, a 192-pound stick of dynamite at tailback. Goolsby gained over 900 yards last year as a sophomore while playing for Lubbock Monterey.

"Goolsby will give us a good test," says Tayrien. "He's the type of kid who can score from anywhere on the field and it will be a challenge to stop him. What we don't need against a team like Coronado is for them to break on top of us early and that's a possibility with a back like Goolsby to call on."

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

But Wallace seems more concerned about making a first down.

"Well, I'm glad Lee doesn't have a lot of returning starters on defense," says Wallace. "Maybe they will let us make a first down. We've scouted Lee and know they have a good football team. My coaches think the Rebels will be back in the playoffs again. Like I said, we have to grow up in a hurry."

Wallace says his team is in good health for the opener while Lee will be missing some badly needed cogs. In addition to Young, the Rebs will be missing backup fullback Novert Morales with a bad knee and kicker Brian Wurster was injured in a car wreck a couple of weeks ago and is lost for the season.

"WE'RE KEEPING a close eye on the kicking game," said Tayrien. "Mike Little will do our extra point kicking and Dexter Traylor will perform the kickoff duties. Jake Young will punt."

Lee won a 27-0 decision over Coronado a year ago, but the Mustangs are decidedly improved. There is no question that Lee is still a good football team, but the question still remains if they are an improved team over a 12-2 mark posted last year.

Only playing time will answers the questions at Lee, and ready or not, it's finally time to start answering some of those questions.

A lot of eyes are geared toward the Lee Rebels in 1985 and Coronado will be the first test under fire.

It's a step Lee appears ready to take. Step 2 comes next week when the Rebels travel to Temple to face a team Lee beat 35-7 a year ago. It was one of the worst defeats in the history of state power Temple and the Wildcats desperately want another shot at Lee.

Runyan still having golf love affair after 66 years

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Paul Runyan turned 77 on July 12 and is a far cry from retiring from the job he first fell in love with 66 years ago.

"I started playing golf when I was 11," said Runyan. "I knew within a year or two that it was what I wanted to do for a living. I started my apprenticeship when I was 13 and a half."

Now, Runyan is getting up there in years but you couldn't tell by watching him on the course. Sure, he doesn't hit the ball as far as he used to but, he never hit it very far anyway.

Runyan also isn't playing in as many tournaments as before, but his age isn't the reason. One of the reasons he plays in only "four or five tournaments a year like Legends of Golf," is because of his job. He's now a teaching professional for the Golf Digest School and this week he is one of three instructors giving a clinic at Green Tree Country Club.

"I enjoy what I'm doing very much," said Runyan. "It helps me keep enthusiastic, it makes me feel usefull. I thought at age 60 I'd be washed up in golf. Instead, I'm more useful now than I ever was before."

Runyan's usefullness doesn't come from how well he still plays golf - and he can still play a mean game - but from the knowledge he has gained over his 66-year career.

"The knowledge I've gained over a long period of time is valuable to the teaching profession and valuable to golf manufactureres. I use my knowledge of the game game and help manufacturers make right decisions that can save them hundreds of thousands of dollars.

While his job keeps him from playing the seniors tour on a regular basis, it isn't the only reason. His pride is getting in the way, too.

"I play in four or five tournaments a year, tournaments that I'm invited to play. I'm to proud to go out and qualify for the rest of them. Why should I have to qualify for tournaemnts when I've won more than 50 tournaments."

What has Runyan upset about qualifying is that exemptions come from money winnings and in the years when he was playing, prize funds were low. He thinks it should be number of tournaments won instead of dollars.

"One year, I led in money with $7,000 and, now, I can finish 19th in a tournament and make $8,000 in a week.

"I'm protesting the situation but I'm not getting anywhere," continued Runyan. "So, for now I play when I get invitations, if it doesn't interfere with my job. My first allegiance is to my work."

Runyan started playing on the PGA tour "in 1929 until wartime, 1943," said Runyan. "I played sporadically after the war until 1963."

Among his titles, which number 55, Runyan has won the PGA Nationals in 1930 and '34 and won both the national and world senior titles in '61 and '62.

"I was fairly successful, the most successful of the light hitting players," said Runyan. "I won more tournaments than any other light hitting player in the annals of golf. I won 24 PGA sponsored events and 31 state and sectional events."

Today, as an instructor, Runyan teaches players of all levels of ability, from beginners to professionals, young and old.

Among the pros he instructs are: Gene Littler, Frank Beard, John Schroeder, Chuck Cortney, Phil Rogers, and "a lot of others I can't think of right now. Among modern day pros, most of them are for the short game."

At the GTCC clinic, which is being taught by Runyan, Davis Love and John Elliott, "Everything is being taught," said Love. "The full swing, placement of hands, putting, the short game."

"Normally, we do schools from three to five days in duration at resorts around the country," said Elliott. "People come to see us. Here, we're coming to the people for private lessons."

According to GTCC head pro Larry Bishop, the school was set up because "We're trying to get a good teaching program going here and we thought the Golf Digest School was a good lead in to getting that accomplished.

"I think this school is excellent," cpntinued Bishop. "The thing about this instruction is that they try to match a style of play to the person instead of matching the person to a style of play. It's more individualistic."

Hogan Park greens fees take hike

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The controversy over the annual greens fees apparently became academic Wednesday when the committee to save the yearly greens fees from the chopping block and come up with an alternative met with the City Parks and Recreation Dept. Wednesday.

"We won the battle, but lost the war," said Edwin Nixon, who headed the committee.

The City rejected the Golf Committee's recommendations and apparently will go along with its plans to eliminate annual greens fees and install $8, weekdays, and $10, weekends, greens fees.

The battle referred to was the temporary reprive for annual greens fees memberships ($300 with a $1.50 surcharge per round). They will be sold by the financially ailing city course until the end of this month. That means all the $300 greens fee memberships will expire by next October.

At that time, $340 cards for 40 rounds of golf will be offered and will be honored daily and weekends.

The City Council will hear the presentation Tuesday at its regular meeting.

With after-5 p.m. play doubling over last year, the $5 fee in the late afternoon also will be dropped and golfers will pay the full $8 or $10.

The Parks and Recreation Dept. countered the Golf Committee's figures by pointing out that it loses $6.53 on each round played by a senior member, $2.33 by the regular annual member and makes $1.01 on the daily greens fee player. This is based on the estimated cost of $7.33 per round.

The P&R contends that 22 per cent of the play (17,630 rounds) are regular annual fee players, 24 per cent (19,350) seniors and 54 per cent (43,228) daily players.

Nixon said he would like to see a committee of concerned golfers appointed to consult with the P&R during the course of the next year, "Maybe we could come up with some solutions that would work and perhaps avoid some of the controversy that arose this year."

Committee seeks debt answers at Hogan

When prices were raised at Hogan Park Golf Course last year and the budget upped by 14 per cent over 1983-84, a year in which a $49,611 profit was realized, the city course envisioned a $50,000 profit.

As the fiscal year enters its final stages, that profit looms more like a $60,000 to $70,000 deficit on an operating budget of $623,800 and it's time to look forward to fiscal 1985-86.

To keep it from happening again, the proposed budget will be upped 45 per cent to $941,000-plus. To make ends meet, the City plans to eliminate the annual greens fees of $300, with a $1.50 surcharge for each round played. It's a move felt necessary to reduce losses.

There's no doubt something has to be done, but the debate is over whether this is the answer. Golfers, bristling over probable loss of the annual privileges, can't understand the reasoning, pointing out that a lot of Midland oil operations that did business that way are no longer around. "If you're losing money, you don't raise prices. You start looking for ways to cut back. And if the golf course is operated this way by the City, what do you suppose is happening in areas where it really counts? "

The financially-troubled courses's operating expenses are more than half a million dollars more than other public courses in West Texas and their daily greens fees are substantially higher.

One of the reasons is that 13 employes who maintain the course this year averaged something like $27,000 a year and the average will climb to $29,000 for 19 employees in the new budget.

This is a result of the City's system of reimbursement on the basis of service and qualifications. Golf course salaries are high because apparently the City is a pretty good place to work and employees stay on longer.

The mood at the meeting last week was that golfers were being burdened with the City's extravagance. "I have no quarrel with the system of reimbursing faithful employees," said one disgruntled witness, "But do the golfers have to pay for the City's system?"

AT ANY rate, the anticipated loss on the the Hogan Park operation is projected at $223,229. And the City Parks and Recreation Dept. figures by doing away with the annual greens fees, the operation come closer to paying its own way.

Golfers suspect that the Hogan money is being used to underwrite other losses in the City Parks and Recreation Dept. "If they are paying $27,000 per employee to maintain the softball fields which bring in no income, they've got to make it up somewhere."

Faith in the City Council isn't strengthened by the belief that the golf playing members of the council are all members of country clubs. "Let's face it, no one is representing us. The council couldn't care less."

The operation of the clubhouse is another bone of contention. The committee wants that part of the operation divorced from the course upkeep, especially since the City seems intent on assuming the cart, pro shop, merchandise, snackbar operations, currently under the jurisdiction of Pro Rex Worrell.

Under the current operation, it's reported Worrell handles the golf cart franchise, hires the people to run it plus an assistant pro and cart keeper out of the money he makes on the operation of the pro shop and his one per cent of annual gross on greens fee revenues. Last year the course grossed $460,000.

If the City takes this over when Rex retires, golfers feel they'll get stuck with the bill to keep it from losing money. They contend it's a fringe benefit and should stand on its own.

If golf carts are a profitable venture, fine, but don't make the golfer who walks subsidize them or anything else in the clubhouse.

IN THE face of the opposition from golfers over proposed changes, the City agreed to consider recommendations from a committee of golfers organized to study the Hogan Park situation.

Edwin Nixon, Midland Schools assistant athletic director, headed the research and made his report at last week's meeting in the Hogan Park snack bar.

The recommendations will include retaining the annual greens fee, but raising it to $450 per member with another $100 for each additional family member. The daily greens fees would be lowered from $9 daily and $11.50 weekend to $8 and $10.

Nixon figures the operating deficit could be reduced to $66,000 through the recommendations, if adopted.

Another committee recommendation would be to hire a fulltime golf director. "It should be someone who can devote full time to what is a $6,000,000 facility."

Nixon noted that City P&R director George Logan, can devote about two hours a day to the course. "That's not doing justice to a facility with a $1,000,000 budget."

"As I see it," says Nixon, "We (golfers and City) need each other. We are just trying to present a reasonable alternative that will make everybody happy."

THE CONCERN over the annual greens fee players is understandable, but in the uproar, the daily greens fee player is being overlooked, just as he was last year.

What's more he doesn't seem to care what the City does to him. Which is hard to understand. Despite his silence, the City might do well to consider that it is chasing away potential revenue, perhaps, the most important part of the course's revenue.

The annual fee is a great bargain, if you have the time to play that much golf. But how many of the daily greens fee players have reduced the number of times they play a month, or simply have abandoned the game for some other form of recreation because of the fat fee?

And it is the daily greens fee player who pays a substantial amount of that yearly revenue. At $9 and $11.50, it is suspected Hogan has already lost a lot of dailies and at $8 and $10, that many won't be lured back. At $6 daily and $8 weekend for residents, Hogan would be more in line with the world around it.

Nystrom mismatch for McEnroe

AP Laserphoto

Pam Shriver screams in frustration during an upset loss to Steffi Graf in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open tennis tournament Wednesday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The match that was not supposed to be at all turned out to be no match at all.

John McEnroe's 6-1, 6-0, 7-5 quarterfinal against Joakim Nystrom Wednesday night wasn't so much a match as a mismatch. By the time the 10th-seeded Swede got into it, he was out of it.

McEnroe was supposed to play the wunderkind who won Wimbledon. But Nystrom, one of the army of five Swedes seeded at the start of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, burst that bubble by beating the 17-year-old West German in the fourth round.

So it was Nystrom who wound up drawing McEnroe in the quarters — and being drawn and quartered by the top seed and two-time defending champion.

In Saturday's semis, McEnroe will meet No. 3-seed Mats Wilander, who advanced when fellow Swede Anders Jarryd withdrew from their quarter, complaining of dizziness and chills. Also Wednesday, Martina Navratilova and 16-year-old West German Steffi Graf won in women's quarterfinals.

Today, No. 2 men's seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia plays No. 7 Yannick Noah. Tonight, Jimmy Connors, the No. 4 seed, plays unseeded Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland to complete the men's quarters.

By Wednesday night's second set, the spectators were applauding Nystrom's occasional point, and they positively roared when he won three games in a row in the third, breaking McEnroe in the process. It was as though they were demanding that they not be cheated out of tennis on both sides of the net.

U.S. Open Tennis

The first set lasted 38 minutes, the second 37. The third took an hour. It would have ended sooner had McEnroe not been distracted by the courtside microphone, by a questionable call or two and by the crowd which, rather than appreciating the artistry of his first two surgical sets, was lusting for a brawl.

"Do they want to see 7-5 in the fifth set of a terrible match or do they want to see great tennis?" McEnroe wondered. "I was playing about as well as I can play for a couple of sets. I felt I was really doing everything right and that people were seeing something special. ...

"When you're up 6-1, 6-0, 2-0 and people have paid a lot of money, maybe it's not good enough just to play great tennis. They're probably happier now. They got a couple of disputes. They feel better about it. 'Oh, OK, he can win now.' "

McEnroe led Nystrom 2-0 in the third when the spell was broken. "It only takes a little bit of momentum to swing it around," he said. "He got a little confident, came up with a couple of good returns, suddenly it's 2-all, I let down a little bit, the next thing you know it's 5-2 and I was thinking about the next set. Luckily, I was playing real well so I was able to get back on track fast."

The man holding the courtside mike and aiming it "like a sword in my direction" was McEnroe's main target. "I don't need a guy out there who goes out of his way to do something like that," he said.

"I'd asked to have the guy changed and they did it (in the first set) and suddenly I see the guy back on the court in the third set. I said, 'What's happening here?' and suddenly it's, 'He's part of the system. We can't have him changed,' like the stands would crumble if he was removed."

That microphone picked up McEnroe snapping, "It's amazing how bonehead umpiring can make a difference."

It was a reference to umpire Steve Winyard. But as McEnroe said later, "It was directed at anyone who cared to listen. I heard Vitas (Gerulaitis) say it, actually. He's got to get credit for it. He said it a couple of matches back, something I hadn't heard. It stuck in my mind. I haven't said that in 26 years." He smiled impishly. "I figured he didn't get fined for it so I won't get fined for it."

During the afternoon, when the temperature outside the National Tennis Center hovered in the high 90s and surely exceeded 100 on the courts, Graf and No. 4-seed Pam Shriver set an endurance record while Jarryd was unable to endure against Wilander.

Graf, the No. 11 seed, outlasted Shriver 7-6, 6-7, 7-6, the first time all three sets have gone to the limit since the beginning of the tie-breaker era in 1970. Each tie-break was decided 7-4.

That sent Graf into the women's semifinals against Navratilova, Shriver's doubles partner and the two-time defending women's singles champion. "Maybe if she breaks a leg or something ..." Graf mused.

On the stadium court, Jarryd, seeded sixth, succumbed not so much to Wilander as to the heat. He retired in the third set, the first time that has happened in a U.S. Open quarterfinal since Eddie Dibbs bowed out in the first set of a 1979 match against McEnroe.

Simmons has unranked Longhorns singing praises

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas is nowhere to be found in the national football polls but Coach Fred Akers says he has several players who deserve national recognition.

He also mentioned a couple of players for possible all-Southwest Conference honors, and said 226-pound tailback Edwin Simmons, who has had surgery on both knees, "might be the surprise story of all time."

"I never dreamed he'd be doing (in practice) what's he doing this soon, if at all," Akers told writers on the SWC football tour Wednesday.

Akers at a news conference singled out tight end William Harris, center Gene Chilton, linebacker Ty Allert, punter John Teltschik and placekicker Jeff Ward as possible national all-stars.

Harris, 6-foot-5 and 234 pounds, "is the best tight end we've ever had here," Akers said. "I have not seen a tight end that I would trade him for anywhere."

He said safety Richard Peavy, also returning after knee surgery, "would probably be a preseason All-American" if he had not been injured at the end of the 1983 season.

Akers said defensive end James McKinney "should be among the best in the conference" and offensive tackle John Stuart, 280, "could be among the top linemen in this conference."

Overall, Akers said he hopes the Longhorns' kicking game can buy time for the offense and defense to develop into a winning football team. "Our kicking game is the single strongest phase of our football team," he said.

Teltschik averaged 41.3 yards net on 67 punts last season, Ward kicked 12 field goals and led the team in scoring with 63 points, and Akers praised the deep snaps of center Terry Steelhammer.

With added speed and quickness on kick return teams, "We have a chance to be one of the top ones in the country. It is the most solid, strongest part of our football team," Akers said.

Akers said of his offense, which had 46 turnovers during the regular season last year, "I think we've got a chance to be a pretty good offensive team if we can keep our people on the field."

Fifth-year senior Todd Dodge is the No. 1 quarterback now, Akers said, but he is in a "competitive situation" with junior Bret Stafford for the starting position.

Akers said because of injuries last year Texas never fielded the same starting lineup two games in a row.

Texas faded to 7-4-1 after a 6-0-1 start that included a victory over Auburn and tie with Oklahoma.

Asked about preseason rankings that placed Texas below several other teams in the Southwest Conference, Akers said, "I can't argue with that. At least four teams have more proven talent."

He said the low ranking would not help Texas. "There is no such thing as Texas being overlooked. We're not going to sneak up on anyone."

At the conclusion of the SWC media tour on Wednesday, the participating sports writers voted SMU as the best team by a narrow margin over Arkansas. SMU was given 20½ first-place votes and a total of 308 points by the 37 sports writers, compared with 301 points and 15½ first-place votes given to the Razorbacks.

The rest of the rankings were: Houston, Texas A&M, Texas, TCU, Baylor, Texas Tech and Rice.

Redskins' age average still old

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite shedding half a dozen players with over 70 years of pro experience, the Washington Redskins will still field one of the most experienced teams in the National Football League this season.

On Wednesday, defensive lineman Tony McGee officially retired, adding his name to the growing list of Redskins veterans who have either called it a career or been released by Washington.

McGee, a 14-year veteran, joined 19-year veteran quarterback Jim Hart and George Starke, a 12-year man, who retired prior to the start of the regular season Sunday.

Other players missing from last year's roster are three nine-year men —running back Joe Washington, who was traded to Atlanta, and safety Mark Murphy and tackle Morris Towns, who were waived.

Despite the departures, the current 45-man roster includes 11 players over 30. The average age of the club is 27.20 years, exceeded only by the Los Angeles Raiders' 27.49.

BUT AGE and experience are valuable commodities in the NFL. It is no coincidence that the league's three oldest teams — the Raiders, Redskins and the San Francisco 49ers — combined have won the last five Super Bowls.

The league's three youngest teams, all averaging less than 25 years, are Indianapolis, Houston and Philadelphia.

The oldest Redskins are: kicker Mark Moseley, who at age 37 beat back a pre-season challenge from rookie Tony Zendejas; John Riggins, the league's oldest running back at 36; and quarterback Joe Theismann, who will celebrate his 36th birthday Monday night in Dallas where the Redskins meet the Cowboys.

On Wednesday, Redskins coach Joe Gibbs announced that he will start Riggins ahead of the recently acquired George Rogers against the Cowboys.

"It's no big deal," insisted Gibbs. "They will both play enough to have their tongues hanging out but John's tongue will be hanging out first."

Both Riggins, who is in his 14th year in the NFL and ninth with Washington, and Rogers, who is bidding to replace him as a starter after coming over from New Orleans in the off-season, took the news in stride.

"I'm going to get my four at-bats. It doesn't matter whether I bat lead-off or cleanup," said Riggins, who last year averaged 95 yards on 23 carries a game.

"Other guys on this team are just as capable as I am," added Rogers. "Whomever is in the game will do a good job. We're a good enough team that with either one of us we can win the game."

"You can play effective golf without a pivot but, your hand grip and swing are a must," said Elliott. "The object is to try to combine all three and be effective."

Effective is the key word in the instructors' teachings: Take what a golfer does well and expand on it and teach them how to be consistant.

"This is making it easy," said pupil George Webb. "My shots are much straighter and it's easier to hit. It feels good, awfully good.

"What they're teaching us is something you can repeat," continued Webb. "If I go out and shoot a good round, a good score, if it doesn't feel right I can't go out and do it again tomorrow. With this, I can."

"This is wonderful, " said pupil Carolyn Henry. "It's helping me gain confidence in my golf game. They are helping us to refine our game, fine tuning what we already know. These people are really good."

For the fee, the student not only receives the instruction and experience from the pros, but also individual lessons that are video taped for home reference.

It's a lesson that can last a life time and not make some rounds of golf seem like they're lasting that long.

Chicago's Leon Durham, left, reaches to tag out Houston's Bill Doran Wednesday, but it was on of the few bright spots for the Cubs as the Astros won by a whopping 11-6 margin.

Carter ties homer mark

Associated Press

Gary Carter has the stance, the vision and the swing. Because of those three factors, he also has five home runs in two games.

Carter added a pair of homers Wednesday night in a 9-2 rout of the San Diego Padres to the three he hit for the New York Mets on Tuesday night. He tied the major-league mark for most homers in two consecutive games, held by 12 other players, and has hit eight home runs in the last six contests.

"It's the most wonderful thing in the world to go up there with a great deal of confidence, just feeling that you are going to hit the ball hard somewhere," Carter said after the Mets stayed within a game of first-place St. Louis in the National League East race. "I'm just seeing the ball super. Now I have a stance that I feel comfortable with."

Comfortable enough to have delivered the game-winning RBI in each of the three New York victories in San Diego this week.

"It was a big thrill, no question about it," he said.

Carter homered leading off the second inning off Roy Lee Jackson. The Mets went ahead 2-0 in the third on Wally Backman's run-scoring single, and added two runs in the fourth on Howard Johnson's triple and Jackson's balk. Carter delivered a run-scoring single in the fifth off reliever Greg Booker. His second home run was hit off Ed Wojna in the seventh inning and gave him 10 RBIs in the series.

Cardinals 4, Reds 3

Mike Jorgensen won't make the St. Louis fans forget slugger Jack Clark but he has eased the pain of Clark's loss.

In his 10th start as a fill-in for Clark — who is out with injured ribs — the 37-year-old Jorgensen delivered the game-winning hit in the bottom of the ninth as the Cardinals stayed ahead of the Mets. An error by Cincinnati shortstop Dave Concepcion, who booted Terry Pendleton's high hopper following Andy Van Slyke's leadoff double, allowed the Cardinals to tie the game.

"It was a fastball pretty much out over the middle. I couldn't get around as much," he said. "I stayed on top of it, though."

The Reds had gone on top in the eighth inning, sparked by player-manager Pete Rose's single, which lifted him within four hits of Ty Cobb's all-time record of 4,191.

Gary Redus led off the eighth with a pinch-hit single and Rose singled to send Redus to third. Dave Parker, who had three hits, lined a single to right to score Redus and send pinch-runner Eric Davis to third. Concepcion's sacrifice fly scored the go-ahead run.

"They're a tough team," said Rose. "They keep coming at you. That's why they're in first place."

Dodgers 4, Expos 2

Slump-ridden Greg Brock equaled his RBI total for the month of August, knocking in a pair. Brock hit a solo homer and added an RBI single at Los Angeles. His first homer since July 26 tied the score 1-1 in the second, and the Dodgers added three runs in the third on Mike Marshall's RBI double, a run-scoring single by Mike Scioscia and Brock's single.

Pirates 2, Braves 0

Rick Reuschel pitched a three-hitter for his his fifth straight complete game and first shutout of the season and first in six years. He walked one and struck out six in his first start since signing a new three-year contract Tuesday. The 36-year old Reuschel, 11-7, has the only winning record on the Pittsburgh staff.

R.J. Reynolds, playing in his second game for Pittsburgh since being acquired from the Dodgers, tripled to right off Dave Schuler in the fifth inning to score Joe Orsulak, who walked against starter Pascual Perez, 1-9. Perez has not won since July 14.

The hosts added a run in the seventh against Rick Camp on Johnny Ray's RBI single.

"We could have batted against him all night and not scored," said Braves Manager Bobby Wine.

Astros 11, Cubs 6

Thanks to eight RBIs from the bench, the Astros swept the Cubs at Wrigley Field for the first time since 1973. Tim Tolman pinch hit a three-run homer, Jerry Mumphrey came on in the sixth inning to double in two runs and then belted a three-run homer for Houston.

Chicago's Ryne Sandberg, who has 13 hits in his last 25 at-bats, drove in four runs with a two-run homer, a single and a grounder.

Giants 4, Phillies 3

Rob Deer pinch hit a three-run homer off reliever Fred Toliver in the bottom of the ninth to lift the hosts to victory, snapping the Phillies' six-game winning streak. Mike Schmidt's two-run homer, the 450th of his career, had given Philadelphia a 3-1 edge.

"We've been hurt by the home run. It's only fair we hurt someone else," Giants Manager Jim Davenport said.

Deer had struck out against Toliver on Monday, and the rookie outfielder said he had that experience in mind when he came to bat in the ninth.

National League

Pete Rose taking day off

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Pete Rose is taking a day off from The Chase.

Now five away from breaking the hallowed mark of 4,191 lifetime hits by Ty Cobb, Rose says he's going to spend an off-day today sitting around watching television.

"I'm not going to do anything tomorrow," the Cincinnati player-manager said after going 1-for-3 with a walk in a 4-3 loss at St. Louis Wednesday night. "I'm going to watch the Cubs on TV."

The Reds finished a three-game series in St. Louis Wednesday night, during which Rose had only one hit. After a day off today, Cincinnati begins a three-game series in Chicago. The Reds return home Monday to open a 10-game homestand.

Rose, who has been starting only against right-handers, intends to play in the first two games of the series with the Cubs pitching Derek Bothelo and Dennis Eckersley. He plans to sit out the Sunday game when the Cubs throw left-hander Steve Trout.

Eckersley was a late change from the Cubs' original probable starter, Jay Baller, also a right-hander.

"I've had my rips against Eckersley," Rose said. "It's like hitting against (LaMarr) Hoyt. He doesn't walk anybody, so you know you're going to get a strike to swing at."

Rose has been struggling through a mini-slump of late. In his last 12 games, he is 9-for-41 for a .220 average over that period. During that slump, his season average has dropped from .273 to .266.

Although he is averaging 0.9 hits in each game he has played this season, the average has been only .75 hits a game over the last 12 games. That puts him on a pace to break the record about a week from today.

"I've probably had a lot of walks during that time, though," Rose said of the slump. "And it seems like every hit I get is an important hit. It either sets up a run or drives in a run. I've been able to maintain my on-base percentage."

Wednesday night, Rose's 4,187th career hit came on a hit-and-run play during Cincinnati's two-run eighth, giving the Reds a shortlived 3-2 lead. The Cards won the game with two runs in the ninth.

In the first inning, Rose, batting third in the order ahead of Dave Parker, struck out swinging at a high, 1-2 fastball from right-hander Kurt Kepshire. It was only the 27th time Rose had struck out in 338 at-bats this season.

Rose flied to left field in the fourth inning, then walked on four pitches from Kepshire in the sixth. He came up with one out, Gary Redus at first and the Reds trailing 2-1 in the eighth. The count went to 1-1 against left-hander Ken Dayley, and Redus was running. Rose poked the ball down the right-field line for a single that sent Redus to third base.

Rose then left for pinch-runner Eric Davis.

"I was thinking about hitting the ball that way anyway," Rose said. "The thing that surprised me was Dayley never threw to first. The only thing I wanted to do was get Dave Parker up."

With his third hit of the game, Parker then drove in Redus for the first run of the inning.

Yankees narrow gap with Jays

AL Roundup

Associated Press

The game was on the line. Unfortunately for the Toronto Blue Jays, so was Cleveland first baseman Mike Hargrove.

And when pinch-hitter Garth Iorg, a right-handed batter, ripped a smash down the first-base line, instead of a game-winning hit, it became a double play. And when George Bell grounded out with runners at second and third, the Blue Jays had lost a shocker to the Cleveland Indians 5-4.

"I can't believe it," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "He was standing right on the line. Iorg hit the ball right on the nose. I just don't know why he was standing on the line. We did everything right in the game — everything."

Meanwhile, the Seattle Mariners also mounted a ninth-inning rally that fell a run short and lost to New York 4-3, enabling the Yankees to slice Toronto's lead in the American League East to 2½ games, the closest they have been since July 22.

Cleveland and Toronto were tied 3-3 entering the ninth inning thanks to home runs by Brook Jacoby and Benny Ayala of the Indians and Lloyd Moseby of the Blue Jays. Jacoby led off against Toronto relief ace Tom Henke with a single and Otis Nixon, a .231 hitter, hit his third home run — both of the season and of his career.

After Jesse Barfield opened the bottom of the ninth with his 21st homer against Jerry Reed, the Blue Jays loaded the bases on a walk to Tony Fernandez, Damaso Garcia's double and an intentional walk to Lloyd Moseby. Jamie Easterly took over and Iorg grounded to Hargrove, who stepped on first and threw to catcher Jerry Willard, who tagged Fernandez. Rich Thompson picked up his fifth save by retiring Bell.

"You want to stop those guys, you want to knock them out. We get pumped up for the big guys," said Nixon.

Yankees 4, Mariners 3

Surprise starter Rich Bordi hurled 6⅔ innings and Don Mattingly and Andre Robertson each drove in two runs as the Yankees recorded their fifth consecutive triumph. Bordi, pressed into service after Marty Bystrom developed tenderness in his shoulder and making his first start after 42 relief appearances, allowed one run and six hits before needing help from Neil Allen and Bob Shirley, who got Alvin Davis to hit into a game-ending double play following Phil Bradley's two-run single. It was Shirley's first save since 1981.

Loser Mark Langston retired the first nine Yankees but walked Rickey Henderson leading off the fourth and Mattingly followed with his 26th homer for a 2-1 lead. The Yankees added a third run in the inning on an infield hit by Don Baylor and Robertson's double and scored what proved to be the winning run in the sixth on a walk to Baylor, a sacrifice and Robertson's single.

"I tried to go as long as I could because my buddies in the bullpen need the rest," said Bordi. "I was really hoping to go nine innings, but I ran out of gas. As it was, we still had to use two relief pitchers."

Angels 5, Tigers 2

Brian Downing belted a two-run homer to back the seven-hit pitching of John Candelaria and Donnie Moore. Candelaria, 4-1 since the Angels acquired him from Pittsburgh on Aug. 2, allowed one run and five hits in six innings. Loser Jack Morris gave up just three hits but four runs in seven innings.

Rod Carew worked Morris for a two-out walk in the California sixth and rode home on Downing's 18th home run for a 2-1 California lead. Bob Boone's sacrifice fly in the seventh made it 3-1 and, after Larry Herndon homered in the Detroit seventh, the Angels got two insurance runs in the eighth on Bobby Grich's RBI double and Gary Pettis' single.

Royals 6, White Sox 5

Chicago left fielder Luis Salazar misjudged Pat Sheridan's two-out fly ball in the 10th inning and Darryl Motley scored from third base.

"As a outfielder, I know he feels terrible right now," Motley said of Salazar's miscue. "It was a routine play and he knows he should have caught the ball. Those are things you never wish on anybody. I'm just glad it happened to him instead of me."

Motley, whose great running catch in left field with two out in the top of the 10th kept the White Sox from scoring, doubled leading off the Royals' half against Chicago relief ace Bob James. He remained at second as Steve Balboni grounded out and Buddy Biancalana walked but took third on John Wathan's long fly ball.

The White Sox tied the score in the eighth when Salazar tripled off Dan Quisenberry and scored on Ron Kittle's single. Wathan's first home run in more than a year snapped a tie in the sixth inning and put the Royals ahead 5-4.

Orioles 6, A's 1

Storm Davis pitched a five-hitter and Cal Ripken, Floyd Rayford and Mike Young hit solo home runs. Davis came within two outs of his second straight shutout but Oakland's Bruce Bochte hit his 11th home run with one out in the ninth. Loser Don Sutton failed in his bid for his 294th career triumph.

Brewers 11, Twins 10

Rick Manning drove in four runs, three with his second homer of the season, and Cecil Cooper collected his 1,000th career RBI with a two-run shot. The Twins led 7-6 in the sixth inning when the Brewers scored five runs. Ted Simmons singled home the tying and lead runs before Manning blasted a 412-foot drive into the upper deck in right field for an 11-7 lead. Minnesota scored three times in the bottom of the sixth on a ground-rule RBI double by Mark Funderburk and a two-run single by Kent Hrbek.

Jackson's Mets earn right to meet El Paso

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Jackson Mets took the Eastern Division championship in the Texas League Wednesday night with a 3-1 win over the Arkansas Travelers.

The second straight victory for the Mets in the best-of-three series sends them to El Paso on Friday for the best-of-seven league championship series.

The Mets, Eastern Division champions for the second half of the regular season, scored first Wednesday night at Ray Winder Field with two runs in the second inning.

Singles by Jason Felice and Keith Miller were followed by Ross Jones' grounder between the legs of Traveler shortstop Rod Booker, scoring Felice and sending Miller to second. A single to center by Stan Jefferson then sent Miller across the plate.

The Travelers' only run came in the bottom of fifth. Bob Gerren's fly to right field was dropped by Felice for a two-base error, with Gerren safe at second. Jose Rodriguez singled to center to knock Gerren in.

The Mets last run was scored in the seventh. With Jefferson on third and Marc Carreon on first, a single by Dave Magadan drove Jefferson home on a fielder's choice, with the throw too late at the plate.

Winning pitcher for the Mets was starter Craig Weisman. The loss was marked up to Allen Morlock, who started for the Travelers.

El Paso won both the first and second half titles in the Western division.

Dickerson's holdout OK with Denver coach

Associated Press

Dan Reeves, whose Denver Broncos open the season against the Los Angeles Rams on Sunday, thinks it's just great that the Rams' Eric Dickerson is a holdout.

"I think Eric is worth a lot more than he's asking for," Reeves said Wednesday of the player who rushed for an NFL record 2,105 yards last season.

"He should ask for a whole lot more money," Reeves joked. "Then next week he can come down (in his demands)."

Greg Koch, a starting offensive tackle who walked out of the Green Bay Packers training camp on Aug. 18, returned Wednesday, cutting one more name off the list of National Football League holdouts. But with just four days to go until the NFL openers, several key players remain away from their teams — with Dickerson the most noteworthy.

"I have a lot of mixed emotions," said Koch, a starter whose dispute with an assistant coach reportedly precipitated his walkout. "My No. 1 priority is to play football and to play this year. I'll be happy here. I surely missed football and that's the man reason I'm back."

The Packers also picked up guard Mike Obrovac from Cincinnati and signed punter Joe Prokop, waived by the New York Giants.

In other NFL developments Wednesday:

— The Seattle Seahawks waived their No. 1 draft pick, running back Owen Gill out of Iowa, and added veteran punter Jeff West to their 45-man roster.

"We would have been overstocked at running back," Coach Chuck Knox said of the decision on Gill, who was picked in the second round. "It was not an easy decision, but I'm sure he'll play for someone in the NFL."

— The Cleveland Browns put wide receiver Brian Brennan on injured reserve and signed receiver-punt returner Clarence Weathers, released by New England.

—The Washington Redskins announced that 36-year-old John Riggins will start at running back against Dallas Monday night ahead of George Rogers, obtained in a trade with New Orleans. But Coach Joe Gibbs said "they will both play enough to have their tongues hanging out."

—The New York Giants placed Stacy Robinson, their second-round draft pick, on injured reserve with a broken hand and reactivated safety Larry Flowers, who was cut earlier this week.

Koch joins a growing list of holdouts and walkouts who have trickled back to their teams as the season approached, including Miami quarterback Dan Marino, who shattered the single-season marks for passing yardage and touchdown passes last season.

Dickerson, however, remained home in Sealy, Texas, where he has been since the beginning of August while trying to renegotiate a contract he signed with the Rams just before the salary scale exploded in a bidding war with the United States Football League.

His negotiating position may have improved last weekend when his replacement, Barry Redden, sprained an ankle. Redden's status for this weekend is questionable.

Also among the missing are cornerback Mark Haynes of the New York Giants and safety Todd Bell of the Chicago Bears, first- and second-team All-Pros last season; linebacker Bob Brudzinski and strong safety Glenn Blackwood of the Dolphins; wide receiver Earnest Gray and defensive end Casey Merrill of the Giants; wide receiver John Jefferson of the Packers; defensive end Dennis Harrison and linebackers Jerry Robinson and Joel Williams of the Philadelphia Eagles; and Marvin Powell and Reggie McElroy, the New York Jets' starting offensive tackles.

The reasons for the holdouts vary.

Most of the Eagles, for example, are protesting the hard-line salary policies of new owner Norman Braman. Others, like Dickerson, Powell and McElroy, want current contracts renegotiated. Still others are free agents with nowhere else to go — the USFL's financial problems provides them with no feasible alternative.

Slusher, who represented such previous holdouts as Mike Haynes, Gary Barbaro and Randy White, has Mark Haynes, Merrill, Bell, Brudzinski, Blackwood and Jefferson this year.

Slusher has not said much. However, on Tuesday he told Mike Lupica of the New York Daily News that he felt the Giants were trying to make an example of Mark Haynes.

TREASURY BILLS

Yields rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities rose in Tuesday's auctions, reversing decreases of recent weeks.

The Treasury Department sold $7.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.12 percent, up from last week's 7.07 percent. Another $7.2 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.30 percent, up from 7.21 percent last week.

The rates for the three-month bills were the highest since Aug. 19, when they averaged 7.14 percent. The rates were the highest for the six-month bills since Aug. 12, when they sold for 7.36 percent.

The new Treasury bill discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 7.4 percent for three-month bills and 7.7 percent for six-month bills.

El Paso Natural Gas announces settlement of 12-year-old suit

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso Natural Gas Co. has settled a long-standing legal dispute by agreeing to assign its oil and gas rights in the San Juan Basin of northwestern New Mexico to two of its major gas producers.

The agreement, recently approved by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, was announced by company officials in El Paso Wednesday.

Under the settlement, El Paso Natural Gas no longer will pay costly overriding royalties to Conoco Inc. and Tenneco Oil Co., and will give up ownership of expensive petroleum "liquids" to the two oil companies.

But El Paso Natural Gas will continue to buy gas from the properties for its interstate natural gas system.

Company spokesman John McFall said Wednesday that no estimate was available on how much money the company will save through no longer paying the overriding royalties.

"But it won't result in any extraordinary gain or loss to the company," he said.

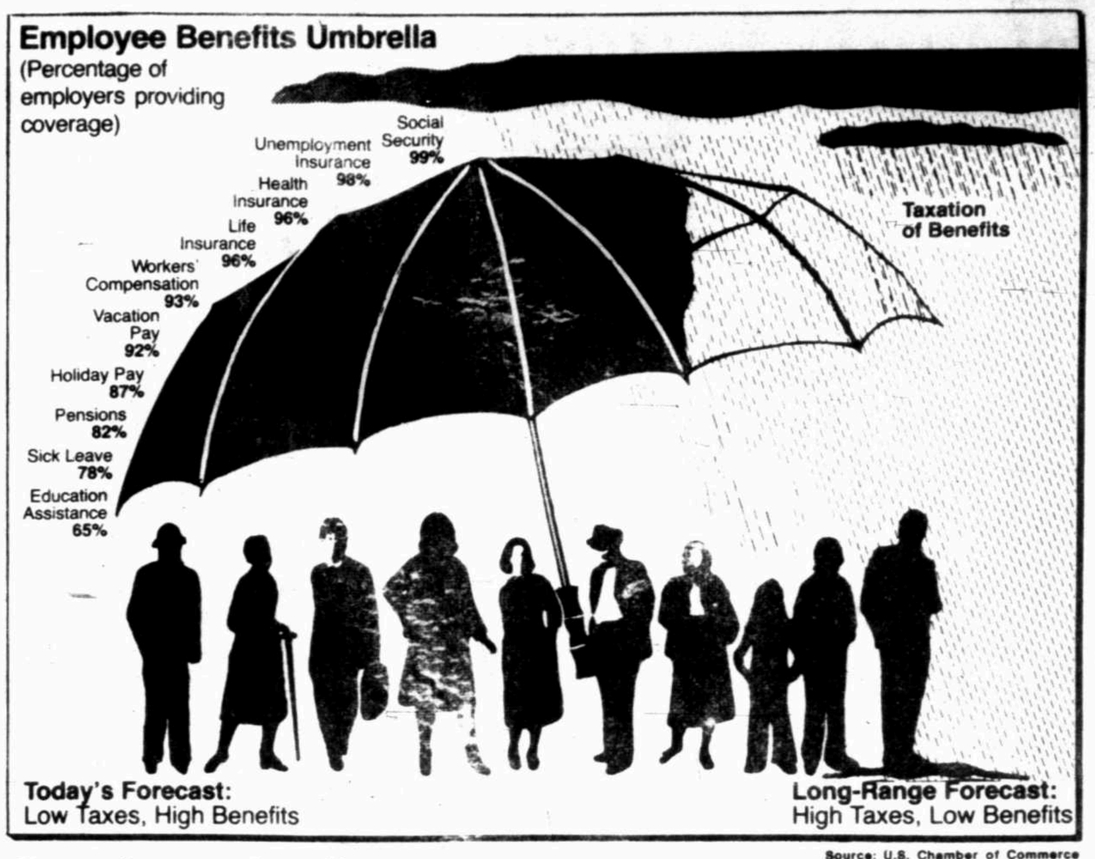

Because Tenneco and Conoco will own the rights to the petroleum liquids, which pipeline companies generally separate from the natural gas stream and sell at premium prices, extraction operations at El Paso Natural's Blanco, N.M., plant will be phased out, McFall said.

But he said only about eight of the company's 45 Blanco plant employees would be affected by the move, and those workers are to be transferred to other jobs within the company.

McFall said the settlement, which took effect Sunday, also means Tenneco and Conoco will build a new 500-million-cubic-foot-daily gas processing plant south of Farmington, N.M., to extract natural gas liquids from the gas prior to its sale to El Paso Natural Gas.

The legal battle grew out of gas well lease agreements dating back to 1952. Litigation began in the case 12 years ago. El Paso Natural Gas had tried to force Tenneco and Conoco to take over ownership of its natural gas leases to avoid paying the expensive overriding royalty payments.

Judge William Blanton of the 11th District Court of Harris County, however, denied in February 1984 El Paso Natural Gas' efforts to turn over ownership of the leases to Tenneco and Conoco.

Officials say U.S. steel producers now own their own

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that the Reagan administration's steel import program is on the way toward providing the steel industry with relief, it's up to U.S. producers to ensure their own survival, a top trade official said.

While problems remain with the administration's five-year program to curtail foreign steel shipments, the plan, which took effect last October, has proven workable, trade officials told reporters Wednesday.

Figures released by the office of U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter showed that the 14 nations participating in the program shipped 19.5 percent less steel into the United States during the first seven months of this year than in the same period of 1984.

The leading exporter, Japan, sent in 3.86 million net tons, a drop of less than 1 percent. Shipments from the second-leading supplier, South Korea, fell 16.2 percent to 1.1 million net tons.

U.S. trade officials they were encouraged by figures for July alone, when imports of steel products from all trading partners fell by some 785,000 net tons compared with June.

The voluntary restraint agreements negotiated with the 14 steel-producing nations "work and they are enforceable," said Charles Blum, a negotiator for Yeutter. The pacts "give the American steel industry a chance — probably its last chance — to put its house in order," he said.

Some steel companies "are going to take advantage of this and emerge strengthened," he said, adding that others may not survive into the next decade.

"The monkey is now on the back of the domestic industry," he said. "It's up to them to produce."

However, Blum and others conceded that problems remain with the program, including surges in steel shipments from new suppliers and greater-than-expected volume from Canada, which is not covered under a U.S. agreement.

Yeutter said in a letter last month to Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate steel caucus, that such problems "threaten our chances of success." He appointed an interagency panel to review the problems and develop a list of recommendations for the president's review.

TEC to host employment seminar

Texas Employment Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers has scheduled a half-day seminar in Midland, aimed at helping employers control unemployment tax costs. The seminar will be October 18 at Midland Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Commissioner Nabers, the Employer Representative at T.E.C., said the series of statewide seminars was a result of the numerous employer inquiries she has received since her recent appointment.

"As a former employer, I am well aware of the concern over rising tax costs. There are ways to reduce these costs. Employers have been asking for help and these seminars are our way of responding to the requests," she said.

Gov. White, who appointed Nabers to the T.E.C. in December 1984, said, "Texas employers are the foundation of this state's economic vitality."

He urged employers to take advantage of the seminars designed to cut the cost of doing business in Texas, saying, "We can create an even more desirable business climate in this great state."

During the half-day seminars, Employment Commission representatives will discuss the laws and procedures concerning unemployment compensation taxes, ideas for immediate cost reduction, the appeals process and fraud control.

FDIC suit blames schemes on bank failures

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has filed a lawsuit under a racketeering statute alleging that two Kansas banks failed because of linked financing schemes.

The suit, filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Kansas City, expands an April lawsuit the FDIC filed in connection with the 1984 failure of Indian Springs State Bank, of Kansas City.

The suit was filed under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations statute, which allows damage awards to be tripled if defendants are found guilty.

"This is the first time the FDIC has utilized the RICO statute to prosecute individuals (in) the collapse of insured banking institutions," said Michael Manning, an FDIC lawyer.

The lawsuit links the failure of the Indian Springs bank and the Rexford State Bank in Rexford, Kan. to a New York money broker headed by Mario Renda.

The FDIC alleges that the broker, First United Fund Ltd. of Garden City, N.Y., deposited millions of dollars in each bank on the understanding that some deposits would be lent to specific individuals. The suit claims the banks failed when the individuals defaulted on the loans.

Defendants in the suit include Sam Daily of Honolulu, Hawaii, and Nasib Kalliel, a Texas businessman. The lawsuit said Kalliel conceived a scheme to obtain loans from the Rexford bank that was similar to a scehme used to obtain loans from the Indian Springs bank. "Said loans were procured through a pattern of racketeering activity," the suit said.

The FDIC alleges that Kalliel contacted First United, which deposited $2.4 million in the Rexford bank last summer. The bank, in turn, lent $2.1 million to farmers who signed up for a farm credit program, which routed the money to bank accounts controlled by Kalliel, the suit said.

The FDIC claims that Kalliel and his companies, including First Financial Guaranty Corp. of Houston, claimed that they had assets of more than $184 million and guaranteed that the loans would be paid to the bank.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas crude oil production decreased two percent during the first half of the year, the Texas Railroad Commission reported Wednesday.

Latest totals show that oil production reached 413,266,184 barrels during the first six months of 1985. For the same period in 1984, the production was 421,706,245 barrels.

Through the first six months of this year, oil production averaged 2,283,239 barrels daily.

During May, commission records show that 52 refineries in Texas processed 130,266,669 barels of crude, compared to 124,824,963 barrels in April and 134,150,251 barrels for May of 1984.

Datapoint head proposes leveraged buyout

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Datapoint Corp. Chairman Asher Edelman has proposed a $100 million leveraged buyout of the computer manufacturing firm, the company announced today.

Edelman, who bought controlling stock interest in the firm in March, made the proposal to the Datapoint board Tuesday, company officials said.

The proposal is for stockholders to receive $6 per share in cash or an aggregate of $100 million.

The buyout would be part of a merger of Datapoint with a corporation to be organized by Edelman and his partners.

"Edelman and certain of his affiliates, together with Charles Stevenson Jr., a director of Datapoint, and certain other members of the board and management would be equity participants in the buyout group," a company news release said.

The board voted to retain some independent investment bankers to review the buyout proposal.

Grocery chains join Texas beef promotion

AUSTIN (AP) — Hoping to offset a beef surplus and the lowest cattle prices in years, three of the state's biggest grocery chains are joining in a special promotion of Texas beef.

"There is a massive surplus of beef that has built up in Texas feedlots this year, causing cattle prices to plummet to the lowest level in seven years and threatening many ranchers with bankruptcy," assistant state agriculture commissioner Susan DeMarco said Tuesday.

"To cut into this price-depressing surplus and to help Texas consumers benefit from cheaper beef prices, we're asking Texas supermarket chains to join in a statewide September beef sale," she said.

HEB Stores of Texas, Kroger stores in Texas and the Houston division of Safeway already have agreed to participate, the Texas Department of Agriculture said. Other retail grocery chains also are being asked to take part.

The beef promotion began over the Labor Day weekend and will continue through mid-October, said Andy Welch, TDA spokesman.

According to department officials, Texas ranchers have been losing as much as $150 per head in recent months on cattle sent to slaughter.

Nationwide, the beef industry deficit during the first half of 1985 is estimated at $1 billion, Welch said.

Ms. DeMarco said that unless prompt action is taken, "that kind of loss will inflict deep and lasting economic wounds in Texas, which is the nation's No. 1 beef-producing state, where rancher sales of beef have traditionally totaled $5 billion a year."

Faced with the surplus, she said the TDA initiated talks with the Safeway, Kroger and HEB chains and, "The retailers responded quickly and positively by agreeing to work with TDA on special in-store promotions that will sell more Texas beef."

Canadian UAW chief says it will not follow parent union

TORONTO (AP) — The fledgling Canadian arm of the United Auto Workers will not follow its U.S. parent into the "enterprise unionism" represented by its pact over General Motors Corp.'s Saturn project, the Canadian director says.

Canadian UAW chief Robert White said Wednesday that he has talked in general terms with GM and the Japanese automaker Suzuki Motor Co. Ltd. about the possibility of a Canadian joint venture, but that nothing was imminent.

He said at a news conference during the UAW-Canada founding convention that the Saturn agreement covering GM's production of a new generation of small cars "hasn't yet met a worker ratification vote," adding that such an agreement wouldn't be considered in Canada.

"We're not opposed to change. We're not opposed to innovation," he said. "But we have no interest in breaking up our collective agreements, setting up separate enterprises and going down the road to enterprise unionism in Canada."

In a speech opening the convention, White said his friendship with former UAW president Douglas Fraser kept the union from spliting during recent troubled times. But the longstanding tensions between the two branches ended with the breakaway of the Canadian UAW.

"We had to fight as hard with the leadership of our own union as we did with the corporations," he said.

White told 338 union delegates that when "political winds were moving much more sharply to the right" in the United States than in Canada, the union held together through his personal friendship with Fraser, who was replaced by Owen Bieber in 1983.

Tensions within the UAW burst into the open when the 135,000-member Canadian branch went on strike at Chrysler Corp.'s Canadian subsidiary in 1982 and at the Canadian subsidiary of General Motors Corp. in 1984, both times against the wishes of union leaders in Detroit.

White also said he was disappointed that Bieber was not attending this week's convention.

Bieber declined an invitation to speak at the convention, instead sending a message saying, "As you embark on this course of independent action, we hope that the needs and desires of your members will be well-served.

"Although we disagree with your decision to separate, we, of course, respect it," said the telegram, signed by Bieber and UAW secretary-treasurer Raymond Majerus. "As with workers everywhere, the International Union, UAW will remain a firm friend and ally of Canadian workers."

Before adjourning Saturday, the convention is to adopt a constitution and elect officers. White, who has been the UAW's director for Canada, is running for president of the new union, whose formal title is to be National Union, United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of Canada.

Its common name will be UAW-Canada.

Final details of the split will not become official until the convention of the parent UAW in Anaheim, Calif., next spring. White said he hoped transfer of the Canadian union's property and share of the international strike fund could be completed in the next few weeks.

He said it was "a little disappointing" that the money had not already been transferred, saying he thought legal advisers to union officials in Detroit were being overly cautious.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

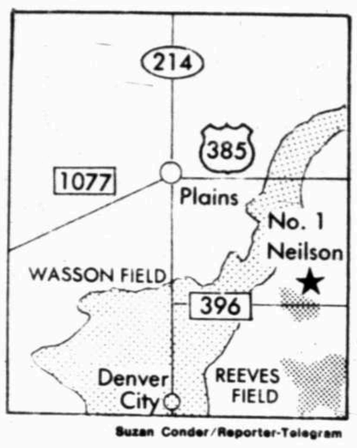

Prolific well flows 1,917 barrels

The Mary Two field area of Yoakum County has yielded another prolific producers.

ESTORIL PRODUCING CORP. has completed the No.1 Neilson to flow 1,917 bopd of crude on a 48/64 in. choke from an open hole section of the Devonian formation at 13,119-13,134 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 165 psi.

Located 509 ft. from north and 990 ft. from east lines of Section 754, Block D, 17 miles northwest of Denver City, the well is ¼ miles from the firm's prolific No. 1 Boswell which flowed 1,824 bopd in January of this year. To date, Estoril has drilled six wells in the Mary Two field. Three wells completed low on the mile-long feature came in for strong, yet less prolific wells. The Boswell No.2 potentialed for 194 bopd, the Hendrick No.1 for 223 bopd and the Hawn No.1 for 380 bopd. The No.1 Stone is drilling and will complete in approximately five days at 11,495 ft.

"The difference in potentials seems to be related to position on the feature," said Cliff Drescher, Estoril manager of engineering. He said the feature was unusual for the area in that it may ultimately support seven wells, more than the typical two to three well Devonian features of the area.

The field was discovered in 1981 with the drilling of the Osborne Oil No. 1 Hendrick, which now produces 39 bopd, but Drescher says the Estoril wells are probably separated from the discovery wells by a fault and are probably on an entirely different feature.

The area of interest in the Mary Two field area could expand to the west, because Conoco recently completed its No.1 Julian in the northwest quarter of Section 747 for 510 barrels.

Schleicher producer flows 3.8 Mmcf daily

The Toe Nail field of Schleicher County gained a strong Strawn gas producer with the completion of CARAWAY OPERATING CO., San Angelo, No. 2 ARCO-Thomerson "5".

The well was potentialed for a calculated absolute open flow of 3.8 Mmcfd through perforations 5,251 to 5,264 ft. Gas-liquid ratio was 182,979:1, and condensate gravity was 66.5 degrees.

The 5,500 ft. wildcat was drilled to a totaldepth of 5,325 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 5,321 ft.

The well topped the Palo Pinto at 4,520 ft., Harkey Sand at 4,688, and the Strawn at 5,250 ft. on ground elevation of 2,420 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and 1,778 ft. from west lines of Section 5, GC&SF survey, Abstract 197, 18 miles northeast of Eldorado.

Midland company still developing Pecos field

MID-AMERICA PETROLEUM, INC., Midland, continues to develop the Taylor Link West field of Pecos County with the completion of three San Andres producers in the field.

The No. 19-P University potentialed to pump three barrels of 30 gravity crude and 822 barrels of water from perforations 1,635 to 1,701 ft.

The No. 37-P University MAP H potentialed to pump three barrels of 30 gravity crude and 10 barrels of water from perforations 1,607 to 1,629 ft.

The No. 111-P University "K" potentialed to pump three barrels of 30 gravity crude and 40 barrels of water from perforations 1,736 to 1,809 ft.

Reagan plan would eliminate delaying taxes into retirement

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration Tuesday proposed eliminating the tax break for a fast-growing pension program that has enabled millions to save money and delay paying taxes on it until retirement.

The proposal is one of three modifications of President Reagan's proposed overhaul of the tax code submitted to Congress by the Treasury Department. Without the changes, the tax plan would bring in $25.1 billion less than the current tax code over the next five years, thereby increasing the federal deficit.

Besides eliminating so-called 401 (k) plans, the package also called for rescinding two other provisions of the president's tax proposal. One would have linked the value of business inventories to inflation for tax purposes; the other would have converted the tax credit for child-care costs into a deduction.

In a letter to key members of the House and Senate tax-writing committees, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said the proposals "present the best available means" of providing the needed revenue.

The new pension proposal would not affect tax-deferred Individual Retirement Accounts, to which taxpayers could continue to contribute $2,000 per year.

Together, the three measures in Tuesday's revision package would bring in $22.9 billion in additional tax revenue from 1986 to 1990, $11.6 billion from the pension change, $11.1 billion from the business alteration and $200 million from the child-care change.

These new proposals, like Reagan's overall plan to lower tax rates and curb deductions which he submitted in May, are considered beginning points for congressional work. Both the White House and Congress have emphasized many elements of the plan are negotiable.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who pressured the administration make the plan "revenue-neutral," called the revisions "a good-faith effort to close the revenue gap."

"I accept their response as close enough to the mark. With the administration propoal in hand, Congress is now ready to begin its work," Rostenkowski said in a statement. His committee is scheduled to begin writing its version of tax overhaul on Sept. 17 in closed session.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said the changes "have boosted the chances for tax reform." While he praised the decision to retain the child-care credit, Packwood said he expected "significant opposition" from companies and workers to the proposed elimination of the 401 (k)s.

Under those plans, which have grown rapidly since they began in 1978 and now cover between 15 million and 20 million workers, employes can place part of their earnings into special accounts with their employers without immediately paying income taxes on those earnings or the interest generated.

The employer — many companies supplement the money with contributions of their own — invests the money and the employee can draw it when he retires. He has to pay taxes on it then, but is generally in a lower tax bracket at retirement and has been able to invest the money he would have paid in taxes otherwise.

The Treasury Department's original tax proposal, issued last November, also would have wiped out the 401 (k) plans on the grounds that they cost the government tax dollars and were unfair to employes who could not take advantange of them.

DeltaUS revises quarterly financial results

TYLER (SWN) - DeltaUS Corp. has announced revisions to its second quarter and first half financial results of 1985.

Financial results previously reported on Aug. 14, 1985 were based upon preliminary information regarding the proposed sale of the company's oil and gas assets to Kerr-McGee Corp. The definitive sales agreement, which was signed on Aug. 19, 1985, has allowed the company to better estimate the results of the proposed transaction.

The revisions have decreased the net losses previously reported from $17.4 million ($0.83 per share) and $26.5 million ($1.27 per share) for the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1985, respectively, to losses of $14.4 million ($0.69 per share) and $23.5 million ($1.13 per share) for the same periods.

Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — CBS Inc. said Monday that it has offered a voluntary early retirement program with special benefits to 2,000 of its employees, or 7 percent of its total work force, as part of a continuing cost-cutting effort.

The broadcaster, which assumed $1 billion in debt in the stock buy-back that helped repel a takeover attempt by Atlanta-based broadcasting tycoon Ted Turner, said it may soon announce additional cost-cutting moves, possibly including layoffs.

"Naturally, the size of any layoff would be determined partly by the response we get to this program," Ann Luzzatto, a CBS spokesman, said.

In a statement, CBS President Thomas L. Wyman said that the company "is in the process of examining ways in which we can streamline our operations to ensure our ability to be competitive in all our businesses."

CBS declined to estimate how much the early retirements might save the company, which declared in unveiling its stock buy-back last July that it hoped to cut operating costs by $20 million a year by 1987. One analyst, J. Kendrick Noble of the Paine Weober brokerage, estimated that the move could save the company far more than the $20 million-a-year target.

The program will apply to employees who are over 55 years old and have at least 10 years credit toward their pensions. Such employees will be given a credit of an additional five years toward their retirement benefits. Employees who wish to take advantage of the program will have until Nov. 1 to decide.

Rumors of pending layoffs at CBS have circulated widely since the July 3 buy-back announcement. Broadcast trade publications have reported that the company was about to cut its 1,400 employee news division by about 100.

But CBS officials insisted that plans to reduce staffing at the news division, as well as elsewhere in the company, are not complete.

Edward Atorino, analyst with the Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. brokerage, said that the program was a "humane alternative" to a large layoff but carries the risk that "the wrong people will take them up." He said CBS' cost-cutting program was driven not only by the need to cut debt created by the stock buy-back but also by the prospect of slower growth in broadcast revenue.

Because of a slowing in the economy and slippage in the network's ratings, broadcast revenue growth is expected to decline from its historical growth rate of more than 10 percent to several percentage points below that, he said.

"And yet they're locked into commitments for programming that are expensive and that they can't get out of," he added.

Analysts said that early retirement sweeteners have become more popular as a way to cut costs. They have recently been used by Du Pont and American Telephone & Telegraph Co., among others.

In announcing the stock buy-back plan last July 3, CBS also said it expected to raise $300 million through the sales of assets that have been "under-performers" or did not generally fit with the company's strategic plans.

The sales effort is already under way. CBS last month sent out prospectuses offering for sale three of its publishing units: the CBS general book division, which publishes trade books, its Praeger textbook unit, and Winston-Seabury, a publisher of religious and educational books.

Ten days ago, CBS said that it had sold a small cable-television network — the 19,000-subscriber Black Hawk Communications — to Sammons Communications of Dallas for an undisclosed amount.

Commerce commission says it doubts viability of competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a setback for the Reagan administration's plan to sell Conrail, the Interstate Commerce Commission says it is doubtful two regional railroads could provide long-term competition to a combined Conrail and Norfolk Southern railroad.

The two regional rail lines — the Guilford Transportation Co., and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie — are a key to the merger plan since the Transportation Department expects them to ease shipper concerns about the emergence of a rail monopoly between the Midwest and parts of the East.

The Transportation Department has been battling for more than a year to gain congressional approval for the sale of Conrail to the Norfolk Southern. The department argues that under a track divestiture plan, the smaller railroads would be able to provide an alternative for shippers along the key east-west rail corridors.

But an ICC report sent to a House subcommittee that is examining the proposed Conrail-Norfolk Southern merger, concludes that both the Guilford and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie are likely to be driven out of business as competitors to a Conrail-Norfolk Southern.

Spokesmen for the department and the Federal Railroad Administration declined to comment on the ICC report saying it had not been examined. One department source, speaking on condition of anonymity, noted that the Justice Department, with the help of an outside consultant, is also examining the viability of the two regional railoads and it is hoped that study will come to a different conclusion.

The Justice Department last year endorsed Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole's proposal to sell Conrail to the Norfolk Southern, but only on the condition that enough track is divested to other railroads such as the Guilford and P & L E to maintain competition.

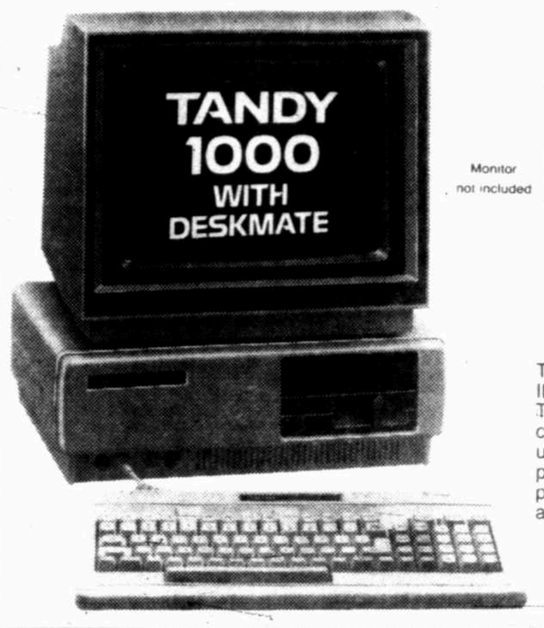

The ICC report was made public Tuesday by Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., chairman of the House Public Works and Tranportation subcommittee that is considering the Conrail sale.

Florio said the ICC's conclusions, if correct, raise questions about whether "we would be creating a giant monopoly" by merging Conrail with the Norfolk Southern. "This is perhaps the most troubling question yet raised about the ... (merger) plan," he added.

The ICC report concluded that the Guilford and the P & L E might compete briefly with their larger competitor. But their long-term viability would be doubtful because of the strong competition from a combined Conrail-Norfolk Southern and their own financial shortcomings.

Amendment would curb 'frivolous' appeals

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A proposed constitutional amendment virtually eliminating "frivolous technicalities" in indictments as grounds for appellate courts to reverse trial-court verdicts is on the Nov. 5 general election ballot.

And Texas Sen. James E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson was promoting that amendment, known as Proposition 11, in a stopover Wednesday at Midland Regional Airport.

"Murderers, rapists and many violent criminals have gone free because of technical defects in the indictments that are not raised until the appellate stage of the trial," Brown said.

Brown, a 44-year-old former prosecutor and chairman of the Associated Texans Against Crime (ATAC), also is on the campaign trial in his bid for the Republican Party nomination for Texas Attorney General.

Brown noted that the amendment would apply to typographical errors, omissions and other "defects" which have nothing to do with the substance of the case or the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

He cited the "most flagrant" case which originated in Houston: A man was convicted of murder...by stomping his wife to death." However, the guilty conviction was reversed on appeal and was remanded for retrial by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals due to a flaw in the wording of the indictment.

He noted there are "numerous" cases in which convictions have been reversed because words were misspelled. In another case, the word "amphetamines" was incorrectly spelled with an "i" instead of with an "e." "The defendant went free."

In a law effective Nov. 1, an objection to the wording of an indictment has to be made by the defense attorney prior to the case going to trial or else the defect is waived and "cannot be raised for the first time on appeal," he said. "That's already law."

"The proposed constitutional amendment applies to the trial stage of a case. The defect would be brought to the attention of the trial judge, who would have "the jurisdiction" to correct the indictment and immediately proceed with the trial "without the necessity of sending that case back to the grand jury for re-indictment and delay."

"Provisions were made to safeguard and protect the rights of the defendant," Brown said. "No additional offense and no increased offense can be made as a result of the correction."

Brown noted that most cases that are reversed have "nothing to do with the defendant knowing what he is charged with."

"The clear intent of this provision is to make sure that appeals and trials are based on evidence and guilt and innocence and not on technicalities," he said. "We've protected the rights of the defendants."

"But we are going to stop those (appeals) based on typographical errors, omissions — things that we all agree are not going to affect the substance of the case."

Brown predicted passage of the proposition, which he said was "overwhelmingly" popular in a poll made by his office.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, State Rep. J. Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter and Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire indicated their support of the proposition at the press conference.

"It's something that makes good sense," said Godwin, president of Computer Consulting Services of Odessa. 'It's an effort to bring some reasoning to our criminal justice system and to bring about punishment where it is necessary but still provide the ample protections in our systems of laws."

Schorre said the change is "long overdue."

"What it basically will do is stop the 'trial by technicality' in the criminal areas we've had in the past."

Schorre said the Texas District and County Attorneys Association has been sponsoring this type of legislation for years.

Schorre noted that Brown had introduced the recent legislation, which Godwin supported.

Brown said some defense attorneys had opposed the proposition.

SCHORRE SAID "it had gotten to the point of being ridiculous" how far the criminal defense bar would go to have cases thrown out that had nothing to do with whether or not the individual was a threat to society or had committed the offense.

After Brown's press conference, Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman noted that the "technicality" ploy used by defense attorneys often is referred to as "hiding behind the log."

Defense attorney John Hyde later noted that in "some extreme cases," defendants have "gotten off" due to indictment defects or technicalities.

"The most extreme case that I can remember was a case was reversed for someone kicking and stomping someone to death," Hyde recalled. "The indictment didn't say what the person used to kick and stomp." Those cases of abuses get the "highest notoriety" and the attention of the public.

"I'm not in favor of indictments being reversed because of trivial technicalities," he said, "but I am not in favor of anything that would waive a person's constitutional right to be confronted with a clear definition of what he's accused of doing...To what one person is a technicality may be to another person a fundamental right."

Ruling on KOSA crash expected within month

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A ruling should be approved within a month on the cause of a crash that occurred Nov. 26, 1983, at Midland Regional Airport, killing the pilot and seven passengers.

Jerry Jameson, an air safety investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington, D.C., said Midland's report was included with a group of other accidents and now is being circulated among the NTSB board members.

"There was some holdup on this," he said. "They went into it further for some reason, and I don't remember what it was."

Approval of the final report depends on the availability of the board members, he said, and estimated a meeting should be held within the next three to four weeks. The board is designed to have five members, but now has only three. One more has been nominated by President Reagan and is awaiting approval by the Senate. Jameson had no status report on nomination of a fifth board member.

He warned that a board meeting "depends on what happens. We have had several accidents lately," and another one could delay the meeting.

The Beechcraft King Air B100 carrying six members of a KOSA-TV news crew, a part-time helper and the pilot was approaching a runway at Midland Regional Airport about 1:50 a.m. Nov. 26 for a landing when the plane suddenly went back up for a "go-around." It crashed, nose down, about 750 feet east of the north-south runway. The television crew was returning home from covering high school playoff football games involving Midland's Lee High School and Odessa's Permian High at Wichita Fall and Fort Worth.

Killed were Gary Hopper, 32, Jeff Shull, 25, Bruce Dyer, 26, Edward Monette, 26, Brent Roach, 24, and Bobby Stephens, 47, all employees of KOSA-TV; Jay Alvin Price, 37, brother-in-law of Hopper; and the pilot, Keith Elkin, 29.

Initial speculation for the go-around was that the landing gear had failed to come down on approach to the runway or that the pilot may have been suffering from a heart attack.

An autopsy report indicated the pilot had suffered cardiac changes before death and one physician had suggested Elkin may have been feeling the symptoms of a heart attack as the plane was approaching for a landing.

The NTSB accident report — about 3 inches thick — states: "During the investigation no factual basis was established as to why the pilot initiated the go-around."

Wind shear was looked at as a factor in the crash with the report noting that a pilot flying to Odessa's Schelemeyer Field had stated he had encountered a wind shear during his descent. Meterological information from those hours indicate "the possibility of low to moderate wind shear below 500 feet AGL (above ground level) and the possibility of updrafts and downdrafts below 100 feet AGL. Pilots who landed immediately prior to the accident stated that they did not encounter any significant wind shifts."

The autopsy findings, according to the NTSB report, showed "antemortem cardiac changes" including small vessel disease, contraction band necrosis and early margination of leukocytes.

MS ReadaThon could be subject for book

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Multiple Sclerosis ReadaThon could write a book about itself, Margaret Blackshear, spokeswoman with the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Permian Basin Chapter, says.

On one hand, she says children "learn that reading books outside of school can be fun. At the same time it gives them a chance to help solve one of this country's greatest mysteries."

Beginning Oct. 1, area schoolchildren, ages 6-14, will help raise money for multiple sclerosis research and patient services by reading books and asking friends, neighbors and family to sponsor them for each book they read. Participants include youngsters from Midland, Ector, Andrews, Martin and other surrounding counties.

The month-long ReadaThon was begun in 1974 by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and its local chapters. Since its inception, it has permitted the national organization to increase significantly its funding for research and chapter services, Ms. Blackshear says.

In 1984 alone, an estimated one million children enrolled in the program. Further statistics show that approximately 808 children in West Texas read 12,795 books and raised about $42,651 with 40 percent of all local dollars raised going directly to nationwide research and development. The remaining 60 percent went to fund local patient services and other programs.

Called "Mystery Sleuths," each child who participates in the program helps to solve the baffling mystery of multiple sclerosis, the chronic, often disabling condition of the central nervous system, Ms. Blackshear says.

Multiple sclerosis often attacks young adults in the prime of life, many of them just as they are starting their careers and families. Recently published data indicate the highest incidence for definite diagnosis of multiple sclerosis occurs between the ages of 20 and 40.

As yet, its cause is unknown and there is no specific treatment to stop the disease. Recent data also indicates about 250,000 people in the U.S. suffer from varying degrees of symptomatic multiple sclerosis.

According to Ms. Blackshear, the MS ReadaThon goes one step further than the other "thons" in that it "builds up a child's self-esteem and sense of accomplishment which comes from doing something for others less fortunate than themselves."

Furthermore, the young Mystery Sleuths read more books than they would ordinarily read, and thus improve their individual reading skills.

"There is a definite educational benefit from it," Ms. Blackshear says. "It motivates children to read."

Although the MS ReadaThon is not directly associated with any school program, it can be incorporated into one.

"We usually do a short assembly at the schools and the kids can register there. Or if there is no assembly at the school, they can register at their county library. You have to work very closely with them because it's a program that can benefit the whole school district," she says.

The program is conducted almost entirely by chapter volunteers and staff and is offered to schools and youth groups at no cost. Nearly 50 educational organizations endorse the ReadaThon, including the U.S. Department of Education, International Reading Association, American Association of School Librarians, Children's Book Council and Texas Education Agency.

Prisoner transportation costs county $73,406.74

Staff Writer

The cost of transporting and boarding Midland County prisoners in other West Texas county jails as of Sept. 1 had reached $73,406.74 since the first inmates were shipped out April 23, according to Midland County Judge Bill Ahders.

"The excesses that we're paying for this kind of board and room and transportation weren't allowed for in our (1985) budget," Ahders said Wednesday.

He and the four county commissioners "had no idea" the new line item would crop up this year, he said.

These costs would be doubled by the end of this year "unless we quit housing prisoners, but I doubt that very much," Ahders said.

For the seven-day period ending Monday, the county had spent $5,635.96 for the housing and transportation of inmates. The costs included the wages of deputies during the time they transported the inmates, lodging charges and transportation expenses. Regular and reserve deputies were used in the transfer, Ahders said.

The per-day cost for Midland County inmates housed elsewhere includes:

— Aug. 26: $907.12, including $775 for housing, $44.62 for transportation, $87.50 for salaries. One inmate was exchanged at the Mitchell County Jail in Colorado City. Three prisoners were picked up at the Scurry County Jail in Snyder and five were transferred there.

— Aug. 28: $866.44, including $750.50 for housing, $40.94 for transportation, $75 for salaries. Three prisoners were picked up and four were returned to Midland.

— Aug. 29: $880.90, including $825.50 for housing, $24.15 for transportation, $31.25 for salaries. Three inmates were exchanged at the Crane County Jail.

— Sept. 1: $750.50 for housing.

Sheriff Gary Painter began transporting prisoners on April 23 after the Texas Commission on Jail Standards ordered the population in the County Jail be limited to 85 inmates. Meanwhile, the Midland County Commissioners' Court is overseeing the planning and renovation of the jail, which was included in the May 11 passage of a $3 million bond issue.

At present, 31 Midland County inmates are farmed out to four West Texas county jails, said the sheriff.

"We've had over 30 (farmed out) a day for the last couple of months," Painter said. The lodging cost per prisoner per day is about $25.

Painter noted that his core of reserve deputies is assisting in the transfer of prisoners and that deputies in his Criminal Investigation, Patrol and Civil Warrants divisions are assisting jail personnel in the transfers.

"All of them are pitching in and helping," he said. "It's hurting us right now, because we don't have all the personnel we need."

Currently, the sheriff has 58 deputies, including 18 jailers.

Consultant to talk on government waste

From Staff Reports

George S. Goldberger, a financial consultant versed on government waste, will explain how government spending can be reduced by ferreting out waste, in his talk on "The Problem of Big Government" in a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Midland Center.

He is assistant to J. Peter Grace, chairman and chief executive officer of W.R. Grace & Co., an investment corporation.

Goldberger was a project director for the Grace Commission, which was formed in 1982 by President Ronald Reagan "to scrutinize government spending" from the viewpoint of the private business sector. The Grace Commission's 47-volume comprehensive report documented 2,478 recommendations to reduce government spending and to cut the federal deficit by $424 billion over a three-year period without weakening the U.S. defense program or harming any social-welfare program.

Goldberger was named a project director of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control in federal government. Commonly known as the Grace Commission, PPSS was established in 1982 and was made of 160 senior business executives and more than 2,000 volunteers, who studied federal government operations and identified opportunities for cost savings and revenue generation.

Today, Goldberger assists Grace with financial responsibilities in the United States and the Far East.

Prior to joining Grace in 1977, he was a management consultant with Booz, Allen & Hamilton.

Goldberger holds a masters degree in business administration from the Wharton School of The University of Pennsylvania and was graduated from the Polytechnic Institute of New York with a bachelor's degree in systems engineering.

His appearance in Midland is sponsored by the Texas Association of Business, an alliance of businesses which advocate the merits of the free-enterprise system. TAB was founded in 1922.

Co-sponsors include Yale E. Key Inc. of Midland and Odessa, RepublicBank First National of Midland, InterFirst Bank of Odessa, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, M Bank of Odessa, Texas Commerce Bank of Odessa and The Odessa American. Associate sponsors include Hy-Bon Engineering of Midland, ESI Inc. of Midland, End Devices of Midland, Johnn Drilling of Odessa, Teraco of Midland and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. of Midland.

GOP candidate banks on experience

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Jeff Wentworth is banking on the three years of knowledge and experience he saved while working for a U.S. congressman to give him an edge in the contest for the Republican nomination for the 21st Congressional District.

A San Antonio native who graduated from Texas A&M and Texas Tech Law School, Wentworth announced his candidacy for the position during an afternoon news conference Wednesday at Midland Center. Midland was his first stop after making the initial announcement earlier that day in San Antonio.

With incumbent Tom Loeffler deciding to return to Texas and go for the governor's seat, the 21st District race will be up for grabs for the first time since 1978 when Loeffler won. San Antonio resident Lamar Smith has announced his candidacy in the GOP primary while Van Archer, also of Bexar County, has indicated he is interested.

Wentworth, 45, said he is the only candidate so far who has experience in Washington, D.C. "I can be more effective quicker than anyone else who's running," he said. He pointed to Loeffler, who also had worked for Sen. John Tower before being elected to Congress, as becoming effective quickly "because he was familiar with the ropes."

The issues in the campaign, he said, are giving aid to Central America, instituting a fairer and simpler tax system, approving a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution and giving line-item veto support to the presi-

British ship returns with 'big picture' of Gulf

By JANET McCONNAUGHEY

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Strong currents more than 1½ miles underwater have created mounds that look like big sand dunes on the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico, scientists say a new survey shows.

"Never before were we able to see the regional 'big picture' of the sea floor so clearly," said Dr. Bonnie McGregor, chief U.S. Geological Service scientist for the Gulf survey.

She was among a number of scientists and government officials who held a news conference Wednesday in the workroom of the British research ship Farnella — a converted 230-foot deep-sea trawler — during a stop in New Orleans.

Among other things, Ms. McGregor said, the survey found the remains of a stream channel that was cut in the ocean floor during the ice age and appears to still be depositing sediment.

Understanding how such channels become blocked by salt domes and filled in with sediment could help in the search for oil and gas deposits that often are associated with such structures, she said.

She said that although oil and gas companies have mapped numerous areas deep beneath the ocean floor for themselves, the USGS survey is the most comprehensive one ever made of the Gulf.

The trip to New Orleans was delayed a day because of Hurricane Elena, said Dr. Mike Somers, the British scientist who developed the sonar scanner used to create the photographic map that covered most of one wall in the room.

"After we'd finished our work, it was a 12-hour trip to get the pilot to take us up the Mississippi River. But they'd all evacuated because of the hurricane," he said. "We had no choice but to spend another unscheduled 24 hours at sea."

Tropical Storm Danny passed right over the ship, but the scientists said the 12-foot seas posed little problem — aside from the loss of 12 hours of work.

"This ship was built for the North Sea. So it's built to ride out storms," Ms. McGregor said.

She said the Farnella, which tows a number of detection devices, has now surveyed about half of the Gulf of Mexico waterbottom which President Reagan declared an exclusive economic zone in 1983.

The zone stretches 200 nautical miles from the coasts of the United States and its island territories and totals more than 3 million square miles of sea floor.

The rest of the 150,000-square-mile Gulf of Mexico zone — an area east of a line dropped south from near Thibodaux — will be checked out in the next month or so before the Farnella stops in Florida, Ms. McGregor said.

That includes the fan of Mississippi River sediment flowing hundreds of miles into the Gulf and the area where that sediment meets the Florida coastal waterbottom, which is built from coral, she said.

"The Mississippi has a very active delta, carrying sediment from much of the country. We'll map where all that sediment goes," she said.

The 250,000-sqare-mile area off the California coast was surveyed last summer, and turned up formations where cobalt and other hard minerals may be found, according to the USGS.

The main picture is taken by a 25.5 foot long, torpedo-shaped device called GLORIA which is towed 440 yards behind the ship and bounces a cone of sound waves off of the deep sea bottom to map it.

GLORIA was developed by Britain's Institute of Oceanographic Sciences, which equipped the Farnella and is letting USGS use the ship for the next five years under a cooperative research agreement.

It can map an area the size of New Jersey in one day, said Robert Broadbent, assistant secretary of the U.S. Interior Department.

In shallow water it may get a picture five feet to either side of the ship. In deep water, the sound waves spread as far as 22 feet to either side, McGregor said.

"Texas is in a minority of those states that produce oil. There is not as clear an understanding of it by those who do not produce oil. We can't continue to import foreign oil. We need to search out oil and drill for it. I'm disturbed that some people in the administration don't seem to understand it," Wentworth said.

Agriculture needs to wean itself away from governmental assistance, but it has to be done in phases because of the dependence it has on the government, according to the candidate. "Most people in agriculture I've talked with in this district want government as far away as they can get it."

Looking back to the three years he served as an Army counter-intelligence officer, Wentworth said he supports a strong national defense. "National defense is the number one reason for the existence of the federal government."

It was his 3-year-old son, Jason, who added a different dimension to the news conference. At one point, Jason left his mother, Karla, and went to his father's side.

"Son, why don't you go to your mother," said Wentworth, hoisting up his son in his arms.

"I don't want her," Jason wailed.

But Wentworth went back to the news conference to relate his and his father's attempts to win public office. After his father started campaigning in 1956 for various offices, Wentworth finally won a Bexar County commissioner's seat in 1976. He served there until 1982. During his tenure, Wentworth said he succeeded in uncovering illegal activities by the District Clerk's office. A Republican eventually won that seat, he said.

Burned, melted wire forced landing

ABILENE (AP) — A burned or melted wire forced American Airlines Flight 436 to make its emergency landing at Dyess Air Force Base Tuesday, a federal investigator says.

Armond Edwards, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator, said Wednesday that the wire, part of the engine fire-warning system, burned or melted when hot air from the engine compartment blew across it.

The air normally is recycled for de-icing, air conditioning and pressurization of the cabin, he said.

"For some reason the air duct separated, and hot air passed over the wire," Edwards said. "If the line (wire) is broken, the emergency engine fire light comes on."

Although investigators later found no evidence of any fire, the fire light came on, indicating problems in the engine on the right wing.

Edwards said procedures call for the engine to shut down immediately. If the light is still on after 20 seconds, the first "fire bomb" — a fire extinguisher in the engine compartment — is discharged.

If the light is still on after another 30 seconds, the pilot should kick on the second fire bomb. If that doesn't put out the fire or at least turn off the light, the pilot should find the nearest available airport and land, he said.

"That's just what they did," Edwards said.

Thirty-two people were injured — most only slightly — when the jumbo made its emergency landing at 11:58 a.m. Tuesday. The jet was about 60 miles west of Abilene, flying at 37,000 feet, when the fire light first came on.

Suspect sought in sexual assault

From Staff Reports

A 5-year-old Midland girl was sexually assaulted early Wednesday by a man who abducted her around midnight from the parking lot of the El Paisano Apartments, 2400 Whitmire, according to police.

The girl, who had been helping her parents unload groceries, was released several hours later on Loop 250 and found by a Midland couple. From her comments that the abductor made her put something in her mouth, police believe she was sexually assaulted, but have no leads in the case, reports said.

In other reports from law-enforcement agencies, a $1,200 air conditioner was reported stolen by Raymond Lewis Jr., 4604 Pleasant. Lewis told sheriff's deputies he noticed the air conditioner missing from a vacant mobile home when he was having the home moved from its space on County Road 1130 near Highway 80. The burglary occurred sometime between June and August, reports said.

Steve Massey, Route 11, Box 11246, reported the theft of a self-propelled lawn-mower that was stored behind his home. The mower was taken sometime between Aug. 16 and Saturday, reports said.

However, this autopsy did not reveal that Elkin was undergoing a heart attack when he was trying to land the plane, according to the NTSB report. A second opinion was obtained from the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology's Cardiological Branch. The AFIP determined the pilot had not suffered a heart attack. "It was noted that the changes in the heart tissue, as seen on the slides, are common among victims of high speed crashes with ensuing fires and should not be interpreted as pre-crash heart attack."

In the Human Performance Factual Report, NTSB investigators interviewed other pilots who used Midland Regional Airport and knew Elkins. "They all agreed that Mr. Elkin had to have a very good reason to go-around under the circumstances. The reason, however, is unknown."

FAA drawn into plane crash suit

DALLAS (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has been drawn into the litigation surrounding the crash of a Delta Air Lines jumbo jet that killed 135 people last month.

Delta has filed a petition in federal court claiming negligence on the part of air traffic controllers caused the Aug. 2 crash at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Cynthia Zoe Dahl, 35, of Sandy, Utah, filed the original suit against Delta, alleging negligence on the part of the airline. Her husband, Steven Bradley Dahl, 36, died in the crash.

Delta filed the third-party petition on Aug. 29. It claims the crash was "caused by the negligence of the one or more air traffic control personnel" employed by the FAA.

Rumbaugh orders lawyers to allow execution to go on

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Charles Francis Rumbaugh, scheduled to die by injection next week for the robbery-slaying of an Amarillo jeweler, says he has ordered his attorneys to halt any attempts to block the execution.

"I told them to leave it alone," Rumbaugh said Wednesday during an interview at death row. "I've been prepared for a long time. I've been sitting under this threat of death for 10½ years."

The 28-year-old inmate said he met with his attorneys last week and they told him they were willing to pursue two legal challenges in his case involving ineffective defense counsel and psychiatric testimony.

He said both issues, however, have been resolved by the courts in earlier challenges.

"They left some papers for me to sign," he said. "They said: 'If you change your mind, sign these papers. But don't wait until the 10th to do it.'

"We laughed a lot. These lawyers — they care. It's not just a job. They learn we're not the mad-dog killers they hear about and read about. They find out we're not a whole lot different than anyone else."

A girlfriend visited him this week. His mother is expected to visit on Monday.

Rumbaugh would be the 10th Texas prison inmate to be executed since the Supreme Court allowed resumption of the death penalty in 1976. Five prisoners have been executed this year and Rumbaugh is one of four inmates with pending execution dates.

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An apparent argument over a woman resulted in the death of a 28-year-old southside man, according to Odessa police.

Police spokesman Rusty Baker said Leroy Hawkins, 1421 S. Sam Houston, was shot once in the upper right chest about 10:10 p.m. Wednesday. Hawkins was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital while under going emergency surgery.

Baker said investigating officers questioned suspects in connection with the shooting but they were later released without charges being filed.

Baker said detectives have been unable to determine who fired the shot that fatally wounded Hawkins.

According to Baker, Hawkins and his brother, Ricky Dean Hawkins, were sitting in a car near the intersection of Sam Houston and Monahans Street when another car with several people in it pulled up alongside them.

Police reports indicate the second car began to leave and had traveled only a few feet when gunfire erupted.

Baker said detectives will submit the case to the Ector County District Attorney who will determine if the case should be presented to the grand jury.

Additional charges are expected to be filed against a 42-year-old Ector County man arrested late Tuesday and arraigned on one count of aggravated sexual assault of a child.

John Henry Hankins, 6513 Sparta, was arrested about 6 p.m. Tuesday at his home by Sheriff's Lt. Jerry Davis and deputies Troy Davis and Roy Gladden.

Hankins was arraigned before Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee, who set bond for Hankins at $25,000. Hankins was released after posting bond.

A 33-year-old Odessa woman was released from the Ector County jail just before noon Wednesday after posting bonds on charges of aggravated assault on a police officer and criminal trespass.

Pamela Holbrook, 1502 E. Douglas, was arrested about 8 p.m. Tuesday after she allegedly bit off-duty police Lt. John Blanco and refused to leave his home when ordered to do so.

Blanco had called police to complain about loud music at a residence in his northside Odessa neighborhood. A patrol officer was dispatched and investigated the complaint.

After the officer left, according to police spokesman Baker, a woman and three men appeared at Blanco's front door and wanted to "work out a deal" about the music.

Blanco ordered them to leave his property. The men did, Baker said, but the woman stayed to argue. As Blanco attempted to escort her from his property, the woman allegedly bit him.

Ms. Holbrook was subsequently arrested and arraigned before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly on charges of aggravated assault on a police officer and criminal trespass. Weatherly set her bond at $1,500 on the assault charge and a $500 personal recognizance bond on the trespass charge.

From Staff Reports

The Muscular Dystrophy Association "took a large leap forward" in the Labor Day fund drive, increasing donations by nearly $80,000 from last year, according to spokesman Kerry Zubras.

"It was much better this year," said Zubras of the community-wide effort to raise money in conjunction with the annual Jerry Lewis Telethon. "We were extremely happy."

Zubras attributed much of the gain to businesses getting more involved.

"We had increased efforts by corporate sponsors this year," he said. "Town & Country Stores, Southland Corp. (7-Eleven), Standard Sales of Odessa (a Budweiser distributor) — they all really pushed this year."

Zubras also noted large donations by other groups, such as KWES radio (FM 102) which conducted a two-week fund drive with deejay Mark Allen broadcasting from a billboard perch where he vowed to stay "until $10,000 had been raised." KWES received donations of more than $10,500.

Other large donors included the Midland Fire Department, which took in more than $8,000 with its annual "Fill the Boot" campaign conducted at major intersections, and the Odessa Fire Department with more than $5,000 in donations.

Zubras also noted McDonald's last-minute efforts, whose red-shirted volunteers collected more than $7,000 — nearly three times the $2,310 brought in last year.

"The pledges were generally up," said Zubras, who said that KMID-TV's broadcast of the local drive was especially helpful.

"We took a large leap forward from last year," he said.

Most of the money will go to support local MD patients and the Permian Basin MD Clinic in Odessa.

"The money pays for the fitting of braces, wheelchairs, physical therapy and other things the patient may need," he said. "Any money not used locally is sent on to the national foundation for research."

Zubras said the money was collected from pledge centers in Midland and Odessa and surrounding communities, including Andrews, Big Lake, Crane, Fort Stockton, Kermit, McCamey, Monahans, Pecos and Stanton.

The MS Society relies heavily on corporate sponsorship to help the organization limit its expenses, Ms. Blackshear says. "When you run a program such as this, you need to find a way to keep expenses as low as you possibly can. That increases the money that can go to patient services and to research."

Hispanic group backs water plan, knocks Audubon Society

AUSTIN (AP) — As a key Hispanic group has joined the effort to push the proposed $1.4 billion statewide water plan, a leading Hispanic lawmaker is criticizing the Audubon Society, for opposing it.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, Wednesday said the Audubon Society offered little during the writing of the plan and is tardy in voicing its unhappiness now.

"It's most unfortunate they took that position. We went out of our way in the legislative process to accommodate every environmental group. It took us quite a while to ever get the Audubon Society to contribute and to provide input in the negotiations on the plan," he said.

Berlanga said he considers the water plan vital to the state's future.

"We're at the crossroads. If we're going to continue to prosper, if we're going to continue to have the type of educational programs we want, it is extremely crucial that the voters approve Propositions 1 and 2 come November," Berlanga said.

The water plan is being presented as two constitutional amendments on the fall ballot. Voter approval is required for the plan to take effect.

Proposition 1 would authorize $980 million in state bonds to raise money for construction of reservoirs, pipelines, treatment plants and flood-control projects. It would create a $250 million insurance fund to guarantee water bonds issued by cities and other political subdivisions.

Proposition 2 would authorize $200 million in bonds for low-interest loans to farmers to purchase water-saving irrigation equipment.

"In light of the federal retreat from funding water-related projects, it's important that we in Texas take care of our own future water needs," said Ruben Bonilla, Mexican American Democrats chairman.

Berlanga predicted passage.

"I think the support is going to be there for us to be successful. You're going to see the continuation of bipartisanship. I think you'll see an all-out effort," he said.

He said predictions of a low voter turnout for the Nov. 5 election may be wrong. Because of water rationing and other problems in more than 200 cities this summer and last, Berlanga said the public is well aware of the issue.

"I think people can relate to the water problem more than nay other issue in quite some time," he said.

Bonilla said his 7,500-member group will seek some of the $1.25 million the plan's backers are raising and would use the money for radio and television ads and a get-out-the-vote drive.

'Hell week' sends lawmaker's son to hospital

LUBBOCK (AP) — A congressman's son who spent four days in the hospital after fraternity "hell week" at Texas Tech University says he volunteered for the initiation rites.

Cary Stenholm, 19, was hospitalized Aug. 24 when he collapsed after doing sit-ups and push-ups as a Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity pledge, authorities said. He is the son of U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford.

"I don't consider what happened hazing. But everybody else does," Stenholm told The Associated Press Wednesday. "I was willing to do it. I love SAE. I want to be one."

The Tech dean of students, Larry Ludewig, said the investigation began last week after an anonymous telephone call to his office.

"We have an investigating officer looking into it right now," he said Wednesday. "It's an alleged act of hazing. We're trying to determine whether there were individuals involved or if the activity was group-sanctioned."

Stenholm said he is concerned that the probe will damage the SAE chapter at Tech.

"What I went through would be the same as a football practice where the coaches sit there and make you do calisthenics," he said. "When I went into hell week, I had not worked out for three months. I was ready to get back in shape."

Stenholm said there was nothing unusual about his initiation, which he described as a two-day series of activities that included "some fun stuff" and "some bad stuff."

"I think I'm getting this extra publicity because of my dad," he said. "I went in there with my pledge brothers. It was part of hell week. Everybody goes through it."

"We took him to the hospital and we took care of everything," Alderson said of Stenholm's collapse.

"We don't condone any form, any type of hazing, no matter how insignificant it may be," Ludewig said.

Houston lawyer named to water panel

AUSTIN (AP) — Houston attorney John O. Houchins, whose appointment is questioned by some environmentalists, has been named a member of the powerful Texas Water Commission.

The three-member commission will oversee the $1.4 billion statewide plan if it is approved by voters in November.

Dede Armentrough, speaking for the Audubon Society which had worked to influence the appointment, said environmentalist were disappointed but they would give Houchins "a chance."

"It could have been a lot worse," Ms. Armentrout said.

"We'll work with him," said Stuart Henry, speaking for the Sierra Club in Texas. "We don't have any choice."

White made no comment about the controversy between environmentalists and those backing the water plan projects over the appointment but most considered Houchins' appointment a compromise.

Ms. Armentrout said the society's announced opposition Tuesday to the water plan was not tied to the appointment of a commissioner.

Henry said the Sierra Club would announce its position on the statewide water plan at a news conference next Monday.

Houchins replaces Lee B.M. Biggart of Austin, whose term expired on the three-member commission. Houchins' term ends Aug. 31, 1991.

Houchins has business and law degrees from Baylor University and a master's degree from the Wharton Graduate School of Finance at the University of Pennsylvania.

"We were disappointed he did not make the appointment from the list of very capable people we sent him," Ms. Armentrout said.

"We had been led to believe he was going to do that."

She said Houchins "seems like a really night guy, but we have no record we can judge him on on water issues."

Motorist held in death of sheriff's deputy

HOUSTON (AP) — A Humble motorist was jailed in lieu of $2,000 bond for allegedly hitting and killing a sheriff's deputy working at the scene of a traffic accident.

Jerry Don Rodriguez, 19, of Humble was charged with failing to stop and render aid after he turned himself in to authorities early Wednesday, said Houston police officer J.W. Williams.

Police said Rodriguez apparently was unaware that his car struck and killed Harris County sheriff's deputy Reginald Norwood, 27, Tuesday morning.

"He thought that he had hit a construction barrel," said police officer W.C. Blair.

Three other men also were injured in the pileup that began when a horse galloped across U.S. Highway 59. Part of the freeway was closed for six hours, authorities said.

Malpractice insurance surveyed

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance was scheduled to hear requests today that health care providers bolster the reserves behind medical malpractice insurance.

The board was expected to take the request from the Joint Underwriting Association under consideration and make a decision later.

Malpractice insurance rates administered by the Joint Underwriting Aassociation were increased 50 percent on an emergency basis May 22 after having remained about the same for a decade. Insurance rates by private insurers also have made a large jump during the past year.

The underwriting association, set up in 1975, allows doctors who have trouble finding insurance elsewhere to be insured.

Allergic reactions to monosodium glutamate studied

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Regarding your reply to the MSG (monosodium glutamate) question in a recent column, it never ceases to amaze me how lightly the topic of allergic reaction to this deadly chemical is treated in all the articles I have ever read in newspapers or magazines. It's brushed off lightly as a sensitivity or allergy similar to a strawberry rash. Believe me, if you were ever afflicted with this horrible reaction to MSG, you might quickly change your opinion.

While I am very careful before eating anything whenever I'm eating out, there are times when I have been misinformed or mistaken about the presence of this food additive, and I suffer horribly for three full days afterwards. My whole system is completely poisoned with this awful substance, beginning with a throbbing headache; my rib cage is sore and aches as if I had been beaten; I feel nauseated and exhausted. By the third day the symptoms begin to subside, but there is a dreadful ache in my head which takes the place of the horrible pounding which preceded it.

I have spoken to others with similar symptoms due to reactions to MSG, and all agree with me that the symptoms are far worse than what's written by researchers who tend to minimize adverse reactions. And none of us eat Chinese food! These chemicals are abundant in all soups and soup bases, salad dressing mixes and gravies, so an unsuspecting soul can very easily ingest MSG quite innocently.

Why is the real truth not written about this dangerous chemical, not to mention the fact that not a glimmer of information is offered about how to alleviate the painful symptoms once we have ingested it? Joan Smith, Modesto, Calif.

A. Richard Cristol is the executive director of the Glutamate Association, an organization which maintains an extensive library of data on MSG and is very familiar with all the relevant scientific literature on this subject.

Cristol maintains that the percentage of the population who are sensitive to high levels of MSG to be less than 3 percent. Of this 3 percent, most of the reactions are self-diagnosed and follow inconsistent patterns of response: One person may say he has a flushed feeling while another may say he has a headache.

Since the body rapidly metabolizes MSG, Cristol feels it is doubtful that anyone would suffer for three days, as you report. He further states that his association is unaware of any clinically documented "severe" reactions. Coming to the conclusion, without medical evaluation, that something you ate is causing severe suffering for three days is a risky business.

Therefore, if you (or anyone else) sincerely believe that you have a problem with MSG, there is an organization of scientists, doctors and experts in this field who would like to investigate your problem clinically. This involves a four-day medically supervised activity, all expenses paid including your trip to the clinic, sponsored by the International Glutamate Technology Committee. For more information, contact Dr. Andrew Ebert, P.O. Box 76181, Atlanta, Ga. 30358-1181. So far 30 to 35 volunteers have taken part in the procedure, with varying results.

If you decide to participate in order to get to the root of your problem, please let us know of the results. Good luck!

Q. When does old aluminum cookware become too old to use safely, if ever? Mine is pitted and I am concerned. Barbara Girdler, Riverside, Conn.

A. If you are concerned about aluminum leaching into your food from aluminum cookware, this is more likely to happen when using new pots rather than old. For one thing, a new pot would have more aluminum in it than an old pot. And for another reason, according to Frank Rathbun of the Aluminum Association, aluminum has a natural tendency to form a microscopically thin (and harmless) layer of oxide film that reduces corrosion.

When cooking acidic foods such as spaghetti sauce, a tiny amount of aluminum will probably get into the sauce. If you're cooking a neutral food such as beef stew, the aluminum will probably not corrode at all.

Q. My wife and I like to buy toothpaste on sale and were wondering what the shelf life of a tube of toothpaste is, especially in regards to the effectiveness of the fluoride ingredient. Jim Tatum, Pomona, Calif.

A. Wayne Perin, a consultant with Procter & Gamble, says that for Crest and Gleem there is no shelf-life limitation on those toothpastes as far as the fluoride effectiveness is concerned. The fluoride is stable indefinitely. However, the flavor of the products will change over a period of time, and Perin does not recommend your storing toothpaste for more than a year.

Q. Once and for all, would you please tell me if a tomato is a vegetable or a fruit? Gina Ricci, Stamford, Conn.

A. Botanically speaking, a tomato is a fruit because it is a fleshy plant product that contains seeds. Also fruits are cucumbers, zucchini, avocados, squash, corn kernels, eggplants and even green beans.

Nowadays, however, we don't classify fruits and vegetables according to their botanical definition, but rather by how the product is customarily used.

In the last century the Supreme Court actually had to decide whether a tomato was a fruit or a vegetable. Under the regulations at that time, fruits could be imported without paying duty fees, and an importer claimed he did not have to pay fees on a shipment of tomatoes because they were fruits.

The court decided that tomatoes, since they are usually served at dinner "in, with or after the soup, fish or meat, which constitute the principal part of the repast, and not, like fruits, generally as dessert." So the tomato became a vegetable, and the importer paid his fee.

BETTER BUSINESS

By LINDA TRUITT

The Better Business Bureau has issued many warnings during the past several years to be cautious when dealing with telephone solicitors, especially when they want your credit card numbers.

Some solicitors are willing to offer fantastic prizes, once-in-a-lifetime investments and exotic vacations in hopes you will be gullible enough to recite your credit card number to them over the phone. The customer may never receive the prize, investment or vacation or later may discover everything was misrepresented. In the meantime, the company is either duplicating the charge card or making unauthorized charges.

This season, some telephone solicitors are pushing travel clubs. Some solicitors call people nationwide with the offer of a free trip to an exciting resort area. Sometimes all that is requested is a major credit card number for "verification;" other times the listener is also told he can join the club and receive discounts on future trips. The cost of the membership is usually between $300 and $400 annually.

During early 1985, Executive Gold Card Travel Club, Los Angeles, Calif., was reportedly telling local residents they had been selected from computer printout to receive a free Hawaiian vacation for eight days and seven nights. All airfare and hotel expenses would be paid and the trip could be scheduled for anytime within the next 12 months. All that was needed was a VISA or MasterCard number to verify the winner.

On May 1, 1985 the Los Angeles Police Department's Forgery Division executed search warrants on Executive Gold Card and reportedly seized $2 million in credit card drafts and shut down the operation.

In addition, the California Attorney General recently filed a civil suit against the company and its owners, Roy Castner and Laurence Berry. The complaint, filed July 10, charges the defendants with violations of the California Business and Professions Code. Among other things, the defendants are accused of unfair competition, which included the following alleged practices:

- Making unauthorized charges to credit card accounts;
- Notifying consumers that they will receive a gift and that as a condition of receiving the gift the consumer must pay money or purchase services.

The defendants are also charged with making false or misleading statements in their sales pitch to the public. Among those misrepresentations are the following:

- That no charge is being made at the time of the telephone solicitation when, in fact, defendants immediately charge consumers' credit card accounts;
- That consumers would receive a vacation package worth $1,000 when the vacation package actually had little value, if any;
- That consumers, by purchasing a membership, would receive a free trip to Hawaii plus accommodations. In fact, the trip is not free.

The Attorney General is asking for an injunction against Executive Gold Card, as well as at least $2 million in civil penalties, restitution to consumers injured by the defendants' allegedly unlawful practices and court costs.

Croissants 'trendy' frozen food

By LINDA ANDERSON

Linda Anderson

One of the latest "trendy" foods is the croissant, a flaky yeast roll shaped like a crescent. Many fast-food establishments have latched on to the croissant for their breakfast bread, though, which may mean this pastry is on its way out.

For those of us who like convenience along with status, some manufacturers are offering frozen, filled croissants. Just heat it up and — voila — dinner is served.

Adult, teen and children taste-testers tried two of these frozen foods — Sara Lee's Le San-wich Croissants and Swanson's Le Menu Croissants — for taste, texture, price and advertising accuracy. Both the products tested were the ham and Swiss cheese variety.

Both products come with a choice of several fillings — Sara Lee's croissants are available in ham and Swiss cheese, chicken and broccoli, roast beef in wine sauce and broccoli and cheese, and Le Menu croissants have ham and Swiss cheese, chicken bistro, vegetable gourmet, cream cheese with pineapple and nuts, and turkey with wild rice, mushrooms and onions.

Both are available in packages of two croissants each. Le Menu costs $2.79 for a 7-ounce package (or about $1.40 each), and an 8-ounce package of Sara Lee croissants is priced at 2.19 ($1.10 each).

Labels on both boxes claim the contents are "butter croissants." Other label advertising claims Le Menu is a "tender, flaky croissant filled with delicious savory combinations ... baked, quickly frozen and individually wrapped so all the delicate flavor is preserved."

Sara Lee's label claims the product is an "authentic croissant wrapped around a delicious recipe of flavorful ham and Swiss cheese ... European bakers have wrapped our famous light, flaky butter croissants around a variety of savory, mouth-watering fillings.... perfect creations for delicious light meals and snacks ... irresistible ..."

All the tasters enjoyed both brands of croissants, but decided the Le Menu filling contained more identifiable ham. Sara Lee croissants had pieces of chopped ham which were easier for the 2-year-old to chew, but for those who want more substantial meat filling, Le Menu was better.

And although both croissants had been frozen and were filled with melted cheese, both remained marvelously flaky after baking.

The taste-testers were pleased with both brands of frozen filled croissant, and will probably eventually try all the flavors. But as a quick meal for a family with four children — including two ravenous teenagers — they are a little expensive. After all, some hamburgers only cost 39 cents.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Who wrote, "'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all"?

Speaking for myself, I would rather not know what I'm missing. I would be interested in knowing how you feel about it. — THREE-TIME LOSER

DEAR T.T.L.: Alfred Lord Tennyson wrote those words, and I agree with him.

The opposing philosophy, "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise," was expressed by Thomas Gray.

That is not to say that ignorance is always bliss, for in some cases, what you don't know CAN hurt you.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for recently including in your column letters dealing with quiet people. It's time for us quiet ones to be heard.

I am one of those quiet types, but contrary to what you and others may think, I am not quiet because I am shy. I am quiet because I am secure; I don't have to sell myself or prove anything.

Abby, why do you assume that all quiet people are shy? — QUIET BUT NOT SHY

DEAR QUIET: I do not assume that all quiet people are shy; I believe that most quiet people are shy because my mail tells me so. But then, all generalizations are dangerous, including this one.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Embarrassed Mother," who took it upon herself to send written apologies plus thanks for all her daughter's wedding gifts because six months had passed and the gifts had not been acknowledged.

That mother had her nerve for butting in. When I was married, I was three months' pregnant and feeling lousy. I had all I could do to drag myself out of bed every morning to go to work, but I had to, because my husband was laid off and we needed the money.

I managed to write about half my thank-you notes, but I was too embarrassed to send them because so much time had already gone by, so I didn't send any.

Whenever I ran into people who asked if I got their wedding gift I would explain what happened and thank them for the gift. Most people were very understanding and said, "That's OK. I just wondered if you got it." — MY SIDE OF IT

DEAR MY SIDE: I still say, better late than never. Read on for a letter from another embarrassed mother, and how she handled it:

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law was another one who took forever to get her thank-you notes off after the wedding.

Six or seven months later, if someone asked me if my daughter-in-law had ever received their wedding present, I'd say, "I'll give you her telephone number; why don't you call and ask her?"

Of course I was embarrassed, but I refused to let someone lay a guilt trip on me. — NOT MY FAULT

Dairy products are only part of daily food needs. A nutritious diet is made up of a variety of foods from several food groups: meat, poultry and other protein foods; dairy products; fruits and vegetables; breads and cereals; and limited amounts of fats and sweets. The importance of dairy products for rounding out a nutritious diet is their concentration of several needed nutrients in proportions suitable to human needs.

If you don't eat enough dairy products, it's difficult to get enough minerals to meet your daily nutritional needs without taking supplements. Supplements may be better than nothing, but a varied diet from all food groups is more likely to provide the minerals in appropriate balance to each other.

The need for dairy products varies with age and sex. Since different dairy products vary in concentration of milk nutrients, dairy product consumption is easiest to express in milk equivalents. The amount of milk (or milk equivalents in dairy products) needed varies from two to three cups for children to four cups for teenagers. Adults also need at least two cups of milk each day.

All dairy products — and foods prepared from them — may fill some or all of your milk needs, but daily milk drinking is still the most reliable way to be sure you're getting enough milk nutrients.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have a chance to really go places now. Return phone calls promptly to avoid missing out on a golden opportunity. Reduce leisure-time spending. Plan a fun but inexpensive weekend.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

With two rounds to play in the European Championship, the pre-tournament favorites from France were still in contention. In the penultimate round, however, they were blitzed by Switzerland and had to be satisfied with a tie for third place. This hand was largely responsible.

With most of his values in the enemy suit and with partner known to be short in that suit, North's jump to six hearts was unwise. South's decision to go on to the grand slam seemed a reasonable gamble.

Any normal lead would surely have led to a two-trick defeat. Indeed, in the other room six hearts went down one. Unfortunately for France, their West decided that this was the time for some drastic action. He selected the ten of clubs for his opening lead!

The deception succeeded — unfortunately, it was his partner who was fooled! To East, this looked like the top of a doubleton. He withheld the king of clubs and a stunned declarer won the first trick with the jack. However, that in itself was not enough.

Declarer crossed to dummy with trumps to ruff the table's two spades. Then came an avalanche of trumps. On the last two trumps, declarer sluffed a diamond and a club. Meanwhile, East was having all sorts of discarding problems. Ignoring the bidding and trusting his partner's opening lead, he elected to play declarer for three diamonds and four clubs, and he clung grimly to his clubs as he sluffed diamonds. As a result, declarer was able to score three diamond tricks at the end to reel in 13 tricks!

Leave them something to REMEMBER.

Ritter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When John Ritter opens in a British comedy at the Music center's Ahmanson Theater, it will be his second appearance there. This time, he's a star. Last time, he was an usher.

Ritter, 36, who played Jack Tripper in ABC's long-running "Three's Company," will co-star with James Coco in Royce Ryton's slapstick comedy "The Unvarnished Truth," which was a hit on the London stage.

The youngest son of the late country music star Tex Ritter worked as an usher in 1968 while a student at the University of Southern California.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Country singer Willie Nelson says the FarmAid concert to benefit financially strapped farmers may have been his idea, but someone else is going to have to figure out how to distribute the proceeds.

FarmAid — featuring such talent as the Beach Boys, Billy Joel, B.B. King, Waylon Jennings and Bob Dylan — is scheduled Sept. 22. All 78,000 tickets have been sold.

Since FarmAid was his idea, Nelson has said he would have to make sure the money goes "where it has to." He has suggested financing low-interest farm loans but added, "People have to figure it out who are smarter than me."

• • •

TORONTO (AP) — Soprano Cristen Gregory, in full wig and bustled gown, claimed a record high high-C, belting it out from a wind-swept observation pod 1,200 feet up the world's tallest free-standing structure.

Gregory performed the feat Wednesday as part of a publicity stunt to promote the Toronto Operetta Theater's production of "The Count of Luxembourg," in which she will appear.

After a few drinks and a round of songs at a party at the restaurant in the 1,821-foot CN Tower, the soprano and a group of observers went by elevator and then steps to the pod at 1,214 feet, an area closed to the public.

The area has only a single strand of guard wire around its edge but Gregory, her heavy ruby-colored gown flapping wildly in the wind, strode to the edge, struck a pose and repeatedly hit high notes for photographers and TV.

Artistic director Guillermo Silva-Marin insisted the height of the tower ensured its claim to a record. He said it would be submitted to the Guinness Book of World Records.

Redford

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Robert Redford, long interested in environmental causes, is quietly attempting to get the oil industry and environmentalists to privately discuss their differences on offshore drilling.

Redford was the driving force behind a little-noticed three-day meeting in Morro Bay, Calif., attended by about 30 environmentalists, senior exploration and production executives from the oil industry and Redford himself.

It was held last month and sponored by an organization Redford founded, the Institute for Resources Management. The institute tries to solve environmental disputes, most of them local, through mediation. It has sponsored previous conferences on Indian tribes' relations with electric utilities and with firms mining coal on Indian land.

William E. Crain, Los Angeles-based vice president for exploration for Chevron USA, said the Morro Bay gathering was the only attempt he knew of to get the two sides talking. Many environmentalists, fearing damage to California's scenic coastline and to sealife, oppose any attempt to exploit the plentiful petroleum believed within reach of offshore wells.

An industry participant who spoke on condition that he not be identified said one idea tossed around was that environmental groups might distribute to oil companies maps of tracts they consider particularly sensitive, with an explanation why, and a warning that leasing those tracts might bring court challenges.

Once a company has paid for a tract, objections to it on the grounds of environmental harm have less chance of being heeded, he said.

Redford's initiative got under way just after results of a more well-publicized negotiating effort were announced. Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel and members of the California congressional delegation in July reached a tentative pact to bar drilling in most federal waters off California until the year 2000, releasing only 150 nine-square mile drilling tracts for exploration. They lie within an area in which Congress in recent years has banned drilling.

Oil companies and their trade associations, which consider some California waters highly promising, have denounced that agreement. Some called it a "joke" because of the sites' dim hydrocarbon potential. A dozen Republican members of the House from California refused to go along with the compromise.

Mulroney

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said the birth of his fourth child on the first anniversary of the sweeping Conservative election victory was more exciting than the political victory.

"Nothing beats this," Mulroney, 46, said Wednesday after the birth of the 7-pound, 14-ounce boy. The child has not been named.

"There is no substitute for family life, it's what makes our society and what makes our country."

PEKING (AP) — Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, the first Spanish head of government to visit China, was greeted by Premier Zhao Ziyang, a 19-gun salute, an army honor guard and 300 dancing youngsters.

Gonzalez arrived for his seven-day official visit on Wednesday, accompanied by his wife, Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordonez and Culture Minister Javier Solana.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jo Jones, the drummer whose beat drove the early Count Basie Band, died Tuesday of cancer. He was 74.

Jones first played with Basie in 1935. He left in 1936 to play in St. Louis. But after Basie settled at the Reno Club in Kansas City later that year, Jones became a permanent member, until 1948. Jones appeared on Jazz at the Philharmonic tours, toured Europe with Ella Fitzgerald and Oscar Peterson and often had his own trio in New York. Jones played an audience-rousing solo in the 1984 New York Kool Jazz Festival's tribute to Basie concert.

Chileans riot in support of proposed transition to democracy

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet theatened to "tighten the grip" of military rule to control anti-government protests by thousands of people in which three died and more than 300 were arrested.

The protests and a strike on Wednesday by transport workers paralyzed parts of Santiago, Concepcion and Valparaiso, Chile's largest cities.

Police said two people were shot to death overnight in unexplained incidents in Santiago slums, and that a 16-year-old boy was shot as 100 demonstrators attacked a community center in another slum district.

Sixteen bombs exploded before dawn in Santiago and at least eight commuters were injured as gangs tried to shut down the bus system with rocks and firebombs, police said. Other explosions blacked out neighborhoods of Valparaiso.

Pinochet said in a luncheon speech to Santiago's Rotary Club, "This is not a hard dictatorship but a soft dictatorship. But if necessary we will have to tighten the grip."

Pinochet, who overthrew the late Marxist president, Salvador Allende, in 1973, imposed a state of siege last November to stop similar protests, then lifted it in June.

Police identified the dead youth as Eduardo Pardo. Hospital officials said he died of a bullet wound to the abdomen.

They said the other two people killed in the protests were Daniel Araneda, 26, and Marisol Vera Linares, 22.

The Rev. James Wheeland, an American Roman Catholic priest, quoted parishioners as saying the bullet that killed Pardo came from inside the community center, which had been occupied by police. Police had no comment on that report.

Police reported 314 people were arrested in six cities, 30 stores were looted in Santiago, and that 10 people were wounded by gunfire.

Pinochet closed three universities and sent hundreds of army soldiers into Santiago's streets. Police helicopters buzzed the city all day.

Army and police patrols fired tear gas, water cannons and live ammunition in running battles with demonstrators downtown, at universities and in the slums ringing the city.

Moderate political leaders opened a nationwide campaign Wednesday to get millions of Chileans to sign a document calling for transition to a full democracy.

Signed last week by 11 non-Marxist parties ranging from conservatives to Socialists, it called for election of a Congress with power to reform Pinochet's 1980 constitution so a president can be chosen by popular vote.

Pinochet's constitution calls for the armed forces to nominate a single presidential candidate for approval in a 1989 referendum, and for congressional elections a year later.

Pinochet rejected the document last week and belittled its signers as "pseudo-politicians who hardly weigh in on the scale." In response, political leaders announced a month-long drive to add millions of signatures to their manifesto.

Guatemala freezes prices; Protests continue

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The government rolled back an increase in bus fares, promised to freeze prices of basic goods and raise salaries, but demonstrations against its economic policies continued until police broke them up with tear gas.

It was the second time this year that the military government of Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores has been forced to cancel measures designed to bolster the weak economy.

Mejia Victores announced Wednesday that the government would restore the 10 cent bus fare in the capital Guatemala City, rescinding a 5 cent price increase.

He also promised unspecified salary increases for government workers and to urge raises in the private sector. He said prices of basic foods such as beans, rice, and cooking oil would be frozen and that the government would crack down on merchants who charge more than the official rates.

The bus fare increase took effect Sunday, and on Monday students began demonstrating, burning buses and smashing store windows. Two people have been killed and an estimated 100 injured in the protests. More than 600 demonstrators have been arrested.

Demonstrators tried to close a market in a working-class neighborhood and later marched on the national palace. Police fired tear gas to block their marches.

The protesters destroyed at least two more buses, smashed the windows of businesses along the route and damaged private cars. About 25 buses have been burned during the protests.

About 500 soldiers in armored vehicles occupied the University of San Carlos campus shortly before midnight Tuesday in what the school's rector, Eduardo Meyer Maldonado, called an "abuse of power."

Senate ready to override Reagan if South African sanctions vetoed

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate leaders say President Reagan almost certainly will be overridden if he decides to veto legislation imposing limited economic sanctions against white-ruled South Africa.

Possibly trying to head off such a confrontation, Reagan today was meeting with top foreign policy advisers to review the administration's policy toward Pretoria.

A White House official, who asked not to be identified, called the session "a broad review on an issue we have always regarded as one of great importance." But he added that the meeting is "not expected to precipitate any immediate action" and that no specific decisions are likely to be taken as a result of the discussion.

The White House has not yet said whether the president would sign the sanctions legislation, which is expected to win final congressional approval after the Senate returns from recess next week. But Reagan said last month he would look with "jaundiced eye" on such legislation.

Despite Reagan's views, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said Wednesday there were more than enough votes to break a conservative-led filibuster against the measure and win final passage. Beyond, there were "a substantial number of votes in addition to the two-thirds required" to override any veto of the bill, he added.

In the Democratic-controlled House, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., told reporters, "I think we probably could override" any veto. An aide to House GOP Leader Robert Michel of Illinois added there was "no doubt" that was the case — with strong Republican support.

The confrontation over the sanctions legislation looms as merely the opening round in a struggle between Congress and a president bent on launching a "fall offensive" to push his conservative agenda, with jousting over tax reform, spending bills, the volatile trade issue and farm legislation also in the wings. The House resumed business on Wednesday.

The South Africa bill was left hanging when Congress adjourned last month, with conservatives in the Senate using the threat of a filibuster to block final approval. Since then, black unrest in that nation has intensified and President P.W. Botha stopped short of outlining major reforms in race relations in a widely heralded speech to his political party. Those developments were certain to strengthen the resolve of lawmakers calling for sanctions.

"I think it was good legislation then, and I think it's good legislation now," Lugar said. In a telephone interview, he said he expected there would be "substantially more than 60 votes" — the number needed — to limit debate.

Lugar, who played a key role in working out the compromise, said he has urged White House officials "to read the legislation carefully." He noted it did not contain a provision in an earlier House bill that calls for an end to new investment in South Africa by American firms.

NEW YORK (AP) — Business leaders charged in a report today that America's schools are failing to foster character traits like teamwork and honesty, which they consider just as crucial to career success as the 3 R's.

The 107-page report, "Investing in Our Children: Business and The Public Schools," said schools should stress the "invisible curriculum" of teamwork, honesty, reliability, self-discipline and "learning how to learn."

It also recommended operating schools like businesses, giving successful ones free rein and putting failures in "receivership."

The business world considers good work habits and character traits no less important to future employability than academic skills, according to a survey included in the report.

A majority of the business leaders surveyed said "an alarming number" of students leave high school with the unwholesome message that the adult world tolerates tardiness, absence and misbehavior.

"If schools tolerate excessive absenteeism, truancy, tardiness or misbehavior, we cannot expect students to meet standards of minimum performance or behavior either in school or as adults," said the report.

It is the latest of more than a dozen education critiques published by various sources since a presidential commission in April 1983 issued a report decrying the "rising tide of mediocrity" in America's schools.

Today's report differed from earlier critiques in stressing "bottom up reform" and warned against excessive state regulation. It said that unless a district is floundering, states should leave the running of classrooms to local school boards, principals and a revitalized, well-paid teaching profession.

"This report is a strong call for stringent education standards and tough discipline, but we also want to encourage maximum creativity on how these standards are achieved," Owen B. Butler, chairman of Procter & Gamble and head of the 60-member panel that produced the study, said at a news conference.

The report recommended that school administrators use tried-and-true business tactics to address some of education's ills.

It suggested, for instance, that excellent schools be freed from time-wasting state regulation and supervision. Failing schools, on the other hand, should be declared "bankrupt" and placed in state or local receivership to be either reorganized or closed.

Schools, like businesses, should be subject to a competitive "market system," in which parents would be free to send their children to any school in a given region or state, the report said.

"Such freedom of choice would reward schools that met the educational objectives of the families that select them and send a message to those schools that are bypassed," it said.

The study was produced by the New York-based Committee for Economic Development, a public policy research group whose 225 trustees are mostly top corporate executives.

The panel that produced the report included officials from such companies as 3M Co., Dow Chemical Co., American Can Co., and Atlantic Richfield, as well as a number of university presidents and other educational leaders.

About a dozen leading educators served as advisers to the panel, including Atlanta schools superintendent Alonzo Crim, former U.S. commissioner of education Harold Howe II, Columbia Teachers College president P. Michael Timpane, and American Federation of Teachers president Albert Shanker.

The report reserved its harshest criticism for vocational education programs, which it said have "failed to make a measurable impact on the success of its graduates in the labor market."

Chicago strike ends; Other teachers hold out

Associated Press

Chicago's 431,000 public school students returned to class today a day late, but with the knowledge that after three straight years of teachers' strikes, a two-year pact tentatively accepted by educators will open school on time next year.

Meanwhile, more than 140,000 students in Michigan, Ohio, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New York and Washington, including 43,000 in Seattle, were kept out of school as walkouts by more than 7,900 teachers continued.

Teachers in the nation's third-largest district will vote Sept. 19 on a pact approved Wednesday 579-57 by the Chicago Teachers Union House of Delegates that would give 40,000 workers 6 percent raises this year and 3 percent next.

"We won," CTU President Jacqueline Vaughn told delegates before the vote. "We wanted a two-year contract because we wanted to restore stability and we got it."

The average teacher currently earns $30,000 annually. Each percentage point increase in teachers' salaries costs about $8.3 million. Chicago budgeted $1.4 billion this year for schools.

The settlement had been announced earlier by Gov. James R. Thompson, who kept an aide shuttling between the two sides at a downtown hotel for 30 hours. Thompson, whose daughter attends a Chicago elementary school, intervened in the talks after declaring himself "very frustrated" by the strike.

In Seattle, where 3,700 teachers struck Tuesday, "everyone's caught in a Catch-22 situation," said Gail Blaine, president of the Seattle Council Parent Teacher Student Association.

Thousands starve across river from plenty

By MICHAEL PARKS

CHOKWE, Mozambique — Just across the Limpopo River from Chokwe, more than 5,500 Mozambique peasants, the victims of five years of drought, are starving, and Red Cross workers cannot take them any of the food stockpiled here from donations from around the world.

"They are at the point where they are eating roots, bark from trees, leaves, whatever they can find," said Birgitte Bay, a Danish nutritionist working in Chokwe for the League of Red Cross Societies. "We have food for them, we could save them — but we can't get to them.

"That's bandit country across the Limpopo. If we put a truck across — and we have tried — we will probably lose the truck, the driver, the food and our Red Cross volunteers. And if any of the food does reach those peasants, the armed bandits will attack them, take the food and probably kill them. It is a desperate, maddening situation."

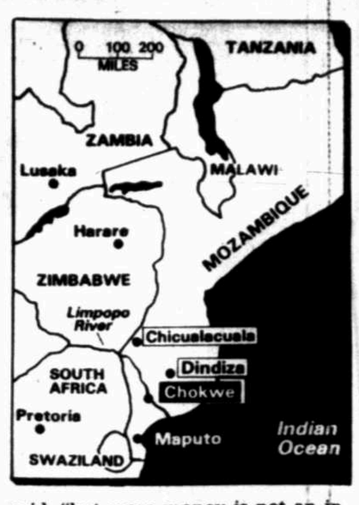

The little drama at Chokwe — starving peasants on one side of the river and food on the other — is repeated across war-torn Mozambique. In scores of places, guerrillas of the rightist Mozambique National Resistance — regarded as "armed bandits" by the country's Marxist government — prevent the distribution of food to tens of thousands of starving peasants.

Mozambique's 14.3 million people are emerging from a famine that, at its peak 18 months ago, killed an estimated 100,000 in a year and since 1981 has probably killed nearly 200,000, according to the government.

LAT Photo

BUT THE FOOD crisis here continues. Nearly 2 million Mozambicans will survive only with international assistance next year; more than a third of the children are severely malnourished; and present government estimates put the country's grain deficit at 400,000 tons, much higher than originally anticipated.

"We still need food, although the situation has improved compared to a year ago when we had 4 — 4½ million on the edge of starvation," Amos Mahanjane, director of Mozambique's Department for the Prevention and Combating of Natural Calamities, said.

"The countryside is now very green, it is true, and the harvest appears to be good, better than it actually is...But we could still have very serious problems in some areas and a difficult situation overall."

Five of Mozambique's 10 provinces are still considered drought-stricken, according to Mahanjane, but conditions are improving after three good rains earlier this year.

"We are no longer in a drought-and-famine situation, but one of widespread malnutrition that is still acute in many places," said Bo Backstrom, chief representative of the League of Red Cross Societies. You will see the effects of this drought for a long time, particularly on children. And then there are those pockets of starvation that we must try and reach."

The meager food rations in Maputo, which is better fed than any other city or town, make clear how relative this improvement is. The monthly ration for each person there is 2.2 pounds of rice, 3.3 pounds of cornmeal flour, 1.1 pounds of sugar, one quart of vegetable oil and seven ounces of soap — when these commodities are available.

"THIS IS not Ethiopia, not Sudan, not the Sahel, where the tragedy is on such a massive scale," a British aid worker said, "but when you still have 2 million people dependent for survival on international assistance, you still have a crisis of major proportions."

"The drought is ending, the harvest has been good and considerable international assistance is available," said Glenn Porter, acting director here for the American relief organization CARE, "but we could be in a new emergency situation in a few months because the armed bandits make the normal distribution of food almost impossible. There is food to be distributed, but we can't get it out everywhere we should. There will be a lot of these pockets of hunger, pockets of starvation around the country."

The situation in some of those pockets is often quite perilous. At the small settlement of Dindiza, about 100 miles north of Chokwe, for example, more than 16,000 peasants have gathered, waiting for promised relief supplies.

When trucks could not get up the ragged dirt roads, first because of heavy rain and thick mud and later because of guerrilla ambushes, an airlift of food was planned by the Red Cross — and the peasants cleared a landing strip by hand and flattened it with their feet over the past three months.

"WE ARE ready to go if the strip is suitable," Backstrom of the Geneva-based Red Cross League said in Maputo, "but the military keeps telling us the area is insecure, that the armed bandits could overrun it...Yet, people are probably starving to death while we wait."

Even around government-held district towns, the guerrillas' hit-and-run war leaves refugees starving only a few miles from help.

"Severe malnutrition starts maybe 10 or 12 miles outside town," Ian Bray, head of field operations for the British charity Oxfam, said at Chicualacuala, 200 miles northwest of here on the border with Zimbabwe. "When refugees come in, you see the children's hair turning red, their arms and legs spindly, their bellies swollen — the whole African malnutrition syndrome — although we have relief supplies here. Why? The trucks can't get through."

Even in areas where the harvest is good, sufficient to feed not only residents of the area but regions that are still drought-stricken, Mozambique faces yet further difficulties, Mahanjane said, because of the fighting, of poor transport and of other distribution problems.

Northern Tete, for example, has had its best harvest in years, Mahanjane said, and the government could easily feed the drought-affected southern part of the province by buying grain in the north and trucking it south.

BUT WITHOUT consumer goods to buy, the farmers will not sell their produce because the Mozambique currency in which they would be paid is so devalued that it is almost worthless; instead they will probably sell it across the border in neighboring Malawi.

The old rural trading system, which ensured farmers markets for their produce and supplies of seeds, tools and agricultural chemicals as well as consumer goods, has become another casualty of the war, the drought and Mozambique's changing economic policies over the last decade.

"The government has raised its prices for corn, rice and other crops to encourage greater production," a French agricultural adviser here said, "but more money is not an incentive if, in practice, it buys less."

This was one reason for sharp reductions in the acreage planted this year — state and cooperative farms planted only 45 percent as much as last year, and peasants perhaps only two-thirds as much. The government, as a result, must worry about feeding its 2 million urban residents plus the 2 million peasants still in drought-stricken areas.

These and related difficulties are also hampering long-term recovery, according to foreign agricultural advisers, who warn that long-term development projects must be undertaken if "famine is not to become a structural phenomenon in Mozambique," as one put it. These projects must include rehabilitation of farmlands abandoned because of the drought, replacement of the land lost because of security problems, construction of irrigation and flood-control systems and diversification of crops and livestock.

VIRTUALLY every major international relief and assistance agency is working here, and Mozambique is receiving aid from both the socialist East and the capitalist West, making it one of the largest recipients of such help in Africa.

The United States, which is providing 155,000 metric tons of food this year and is planning to provide about 70,000 tons in the 1986 fiscal year, has become one of the largest donors, giving Marxist Mozambique $182 million in assistance since it became independent a decade ago.

"Mozambique is emerging from this crisis — we are no longer faced with mass starvation as we were a year and a half ago — and the challenge is to ensure that it can survive the next drought without such problems," said Marta Mauras, representative of the U.N. Children's Fund (UNICEF). "That will require a lot more hard work. Preventing famines is as important as 'curing' them, and even harder."

EDITOR'S NOTE — Drought was not the root cause of the famine killing millions in Africa. It was the collapse of food supply systems. Human failure, not nature's whimsy, was to blame.

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

EL GENEINA, Sudan (AP) — Africa's famine is a largely man-made calamity that could have been averted.

Scientists, reaching this conclusion, fear hunger will spread even after drought ends, partly because of the very efforts used to fight it.

Chaotic, belated drought relief is wasting uncounted lives. But officials admit that the dead — and scores of millions now desperately hungry — were already imperiled by decades of misguided development and bad policy decisions.

Nearly $10 billion in Western food aid has saved lives over 10 years. But much of it came at the wrong times, in the wrong amounts, depressing prices and discouraging local production.

C. Payne Lucas of Africare in Washington, a veteran of 25 years in Africa, fears that only specialists realize the calamity's dimensions. He put it:

"World War III has started, between Africa and its environment, and it will claim more casualties than the first two wars and the exterminated Jews combined."

Food production has plummeted so dramatically since 1973 that even with normal rains, it would have dipped to its present level by 1988, according to the World Bank. Drought simply spurred the downward trend.

Per-capita output is 220 pounds, only two-thirds of what is needed. And the United Nations expects the population to triple within 45 years. Already, one-fourth of Africa's 531 million people live entirely on imported grain.

"Without a massive mobilization of resources," warns the Worldwatch Institute in Washington, evidence suggests "famine will become chronic, an enduring feature of the African landscape."

THE WORDS of African, American and European experts come to life in this dust-blown crossroads at the dead center of Africa.

El Geneina means "garden" in Arabic, from greener times as a nomads' oasis. Today, on a widening moonscape, children wither away in staggering numbers while mountains of U.S.-donated grain spoil at Sudanese railheads because of lack of transport.

Traditional societies are dying — farmers, herders, nomads — amid ecological and economic devastation foreseen by specialists a decade ago. Nature's and man's self-regulating systems no longer function against

In this western Sudan region of Darfur, hundreds of thousands may die in a few months. It is the rainy season, but farmers are too weak to plant. Most have eaten their seed. The long-awaited rains now delay relief and erode bare soil.

"How can this happen?" asked Ekber Menemencioglu, U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees officer here. "The crazy thing is all the food we need is here in the country awaiting delivery."

Across Africa, 30 million people in 21 countries are in immediate danger, the U.N. secretary general's office estimates. Hundreds of thousands died in the early 1970s. This time, the death toll surpasses a million. Food aid needs are up to 10 times what they were then.

But nearly every country is at risk. In Kenya, trees disappear at five times the sustainable rate. Population grows at 4 percent a year; the average Kenyan mother has more than eight children.

HAD WESTERN and African officials heeded clear signs, scientists and specialists say, they could have held off the desert, aided poor farmers, and built systems to trap seasonal rains.

They could have identified isolated pockets of hunger to stabilize markets with small, timely food shipments and stemmed the mass movements that trigger famine.

Tarekegne Taka, an Ethiopian economist who directs African development for the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization, warned of bitterness that the West was not doing enough.

"Our children will never forgive you," he said. "They will never forget."

"Africa is like a man dying. When vital organs go, the rest follow. Drought hit hard because the body was so weak. The West thinks once the rains come, it will be over. That's not true."

He acknowledged some African leaders had neglected land and agriculture, hid famine to save embarrassment, kept food from political foes, and condoned theft, corruption and incompetence. But, he said, outsiders had to persevere.

"If the donors are not equipped to handle the crisis, the recipients are even less so," he said. "Either you want to save lives or you don't."

At least $20 billion in Western aid has helped over a decade, but environmental scientists say some projects actually increased desertification and erosion.

TRACTORS DAMAGED topsoil. Livestock swamped badly placed wells, ruining rangeland. Aid officials seldom consulted farmers, and often brought disruptive government control. Research was not applied. Many Africans trained abroad stayed there. Others prefer air-conditioned offices to the hard life they left behind.

Roadbeds, railways and irrigation systems from colonial times were allowed to collapse. Aid went into elaborate schemes providing equipment sales and contracts to Western companies. Projects failed for lack of maintenance or fuel, leaving social and economic disorder.

In Paris, Eugene Whelan, U.N. World Food Council president, was categorical: "We collectively missed the opportunity of avoiding famine. Policies must be changed or famine will re-occur — and let there be no doubt about it."

Contributing to the famine were cities that mushroomed over 25 years, while food prices were kept low to assure urban peace. The best land went for export crops to subsidize industries, armies and elites. Many farmers moved to the cities.

Without land tenure, farmers depleted soil and burned off vegetation for new land. Trees were cut for fuel and buildings. As wood disappeared, farmers burned animal dung and crop residues, depleting the last sources of soil nourishment.

Meteorologist J.G. Charney noted an increase in the land's albedo — the reflectivity of the Earth's surface. Put simply, bare soil absorbs less sunlight, raising above-ground temperatures and inhibiting growth. Fewer plants release less moisture. Rainfall diminishes, wind whips off topsoil, and the desert spreads. Rains that do fall erode bare surfaces at increasingly drastic rates.

"FOR THE first time, we may be on the threshold of man-induced climate change," wrote F. Kenneth Hare, a Canadian meteorologist who studied African deserts. Others warn there is no time to wait for conclusive proof.

Drought in 1972 caught Africans living on a razor's edge. Relief started only after people began dying. Villagers had left their fields and lost their animals. Many survivors moved to the cities. Ravages to the land went untreated.

Western and U.N. officials helped Emperor Haile Selassie cover up famine in 1973. Finally, after a dramatic British Broadcasting Corp. television report, relief poured in. Perhaps 500,000 people died in the famine.

Marxists overthrew the emperor and dismantled the feudal system they blamed for the famine. They turned working farms into unproductive cooperatives and did nothing to help individual farmers who refused to join.

In 1978, the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa reported one billion tons of topsoil a year was being washed from Ethiopia's central highlands, largely because forest cover had dwindled from 30 percent to 3 percent in 50 years.

By 1982, specialists reported crop failures. From April 1983 to September 1984, the FAO issued six separate African alerts, including Ethiopia.

Other stricken nations saw their relief shipments diverted to Ethiopia only to pile up in ports. U.N. officials say only 40 percent of Ethiopian victims could be reached with relief.

"The whole chain of tragic events could have been stopped at the source," said Frances D'Souza, of the International Disaster Institute in London. In November 1983 she had pleaded for small shipments to targeted areas to head off mass movements of desperate people.

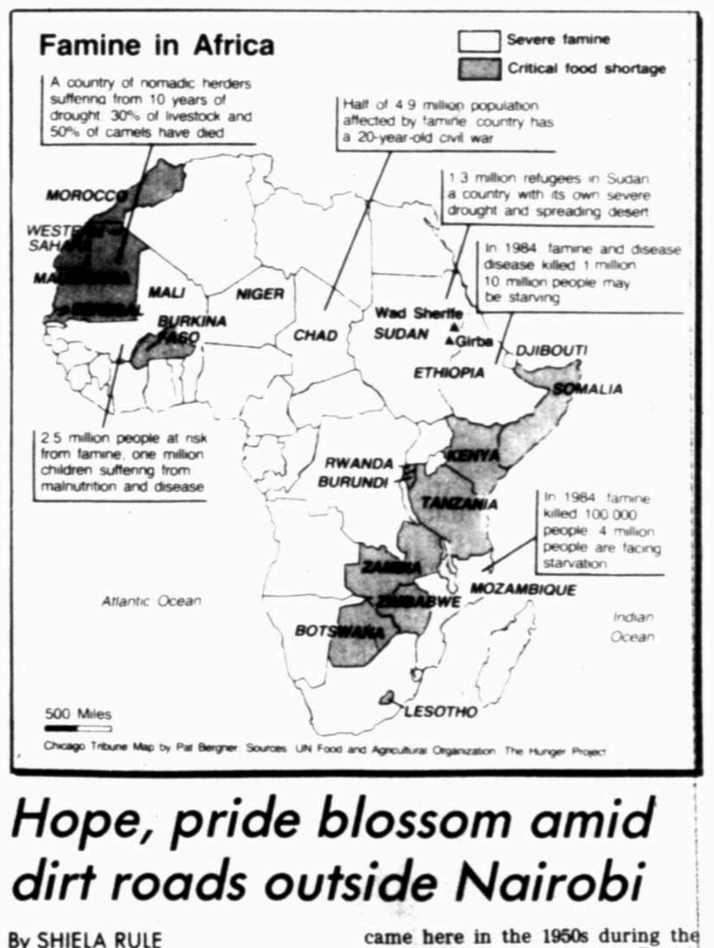

A decade earlier, Stephen Green, a former U.N. official in Ethiopia, charged that donors allowed Haile Selassie to let several hundred people die by refusing aid. "New mechanisms must be found to permit the international community to intercede effectively in such cases, to save lives," Green pleaded then.

Today, U.N. officials, speaking privately, say Marxist officials are also refusing food to many victims.

Aid officials argue for a vigorous new approach in the short and long terms. But the donor community is disorganized, and only limited new funds are being committed.

"There is no overall plan for the long term. To continue as we are now, with business as usual, is to write off Africa forever."

Hope, pride blossom amid dirt roads outside Nairobi

By SHIELA RULE
New York Times News Service

KABIRO, Kenya — Hope and pride blossom amid the dirt roads and bleak shacks of this squatters' village a few miles outside Nairobi.

With about 2,000 families in the community and about seven children in each family, women and their children make up the overwhelming majority of the population. The women are trying to build a future from their determination, hard work and belief in life's possibilities.

Hundreds of the 10,000 women who attended the conferences earlier this summer marking the end of the United Nations Decade for Women journeyed to the Kenyan countryside. There, they reached out to rural women such as these. In return, the visitors received African hospitality and lessons in hard-won survival.

One day, a bus loaded with lawyers, librarians, educators and others from such places as Fiji, California, Australia and Botswana pulled shakily into this ragged gash of land beyond the high-rise buildings and first-class hotels of Nairobi. As the visitors sank their feet into the muddy road, the women of the community, dressed in yellow, green and brown dresses and sporting Day-Glo orange caps, greeted them with traditional song and dance.

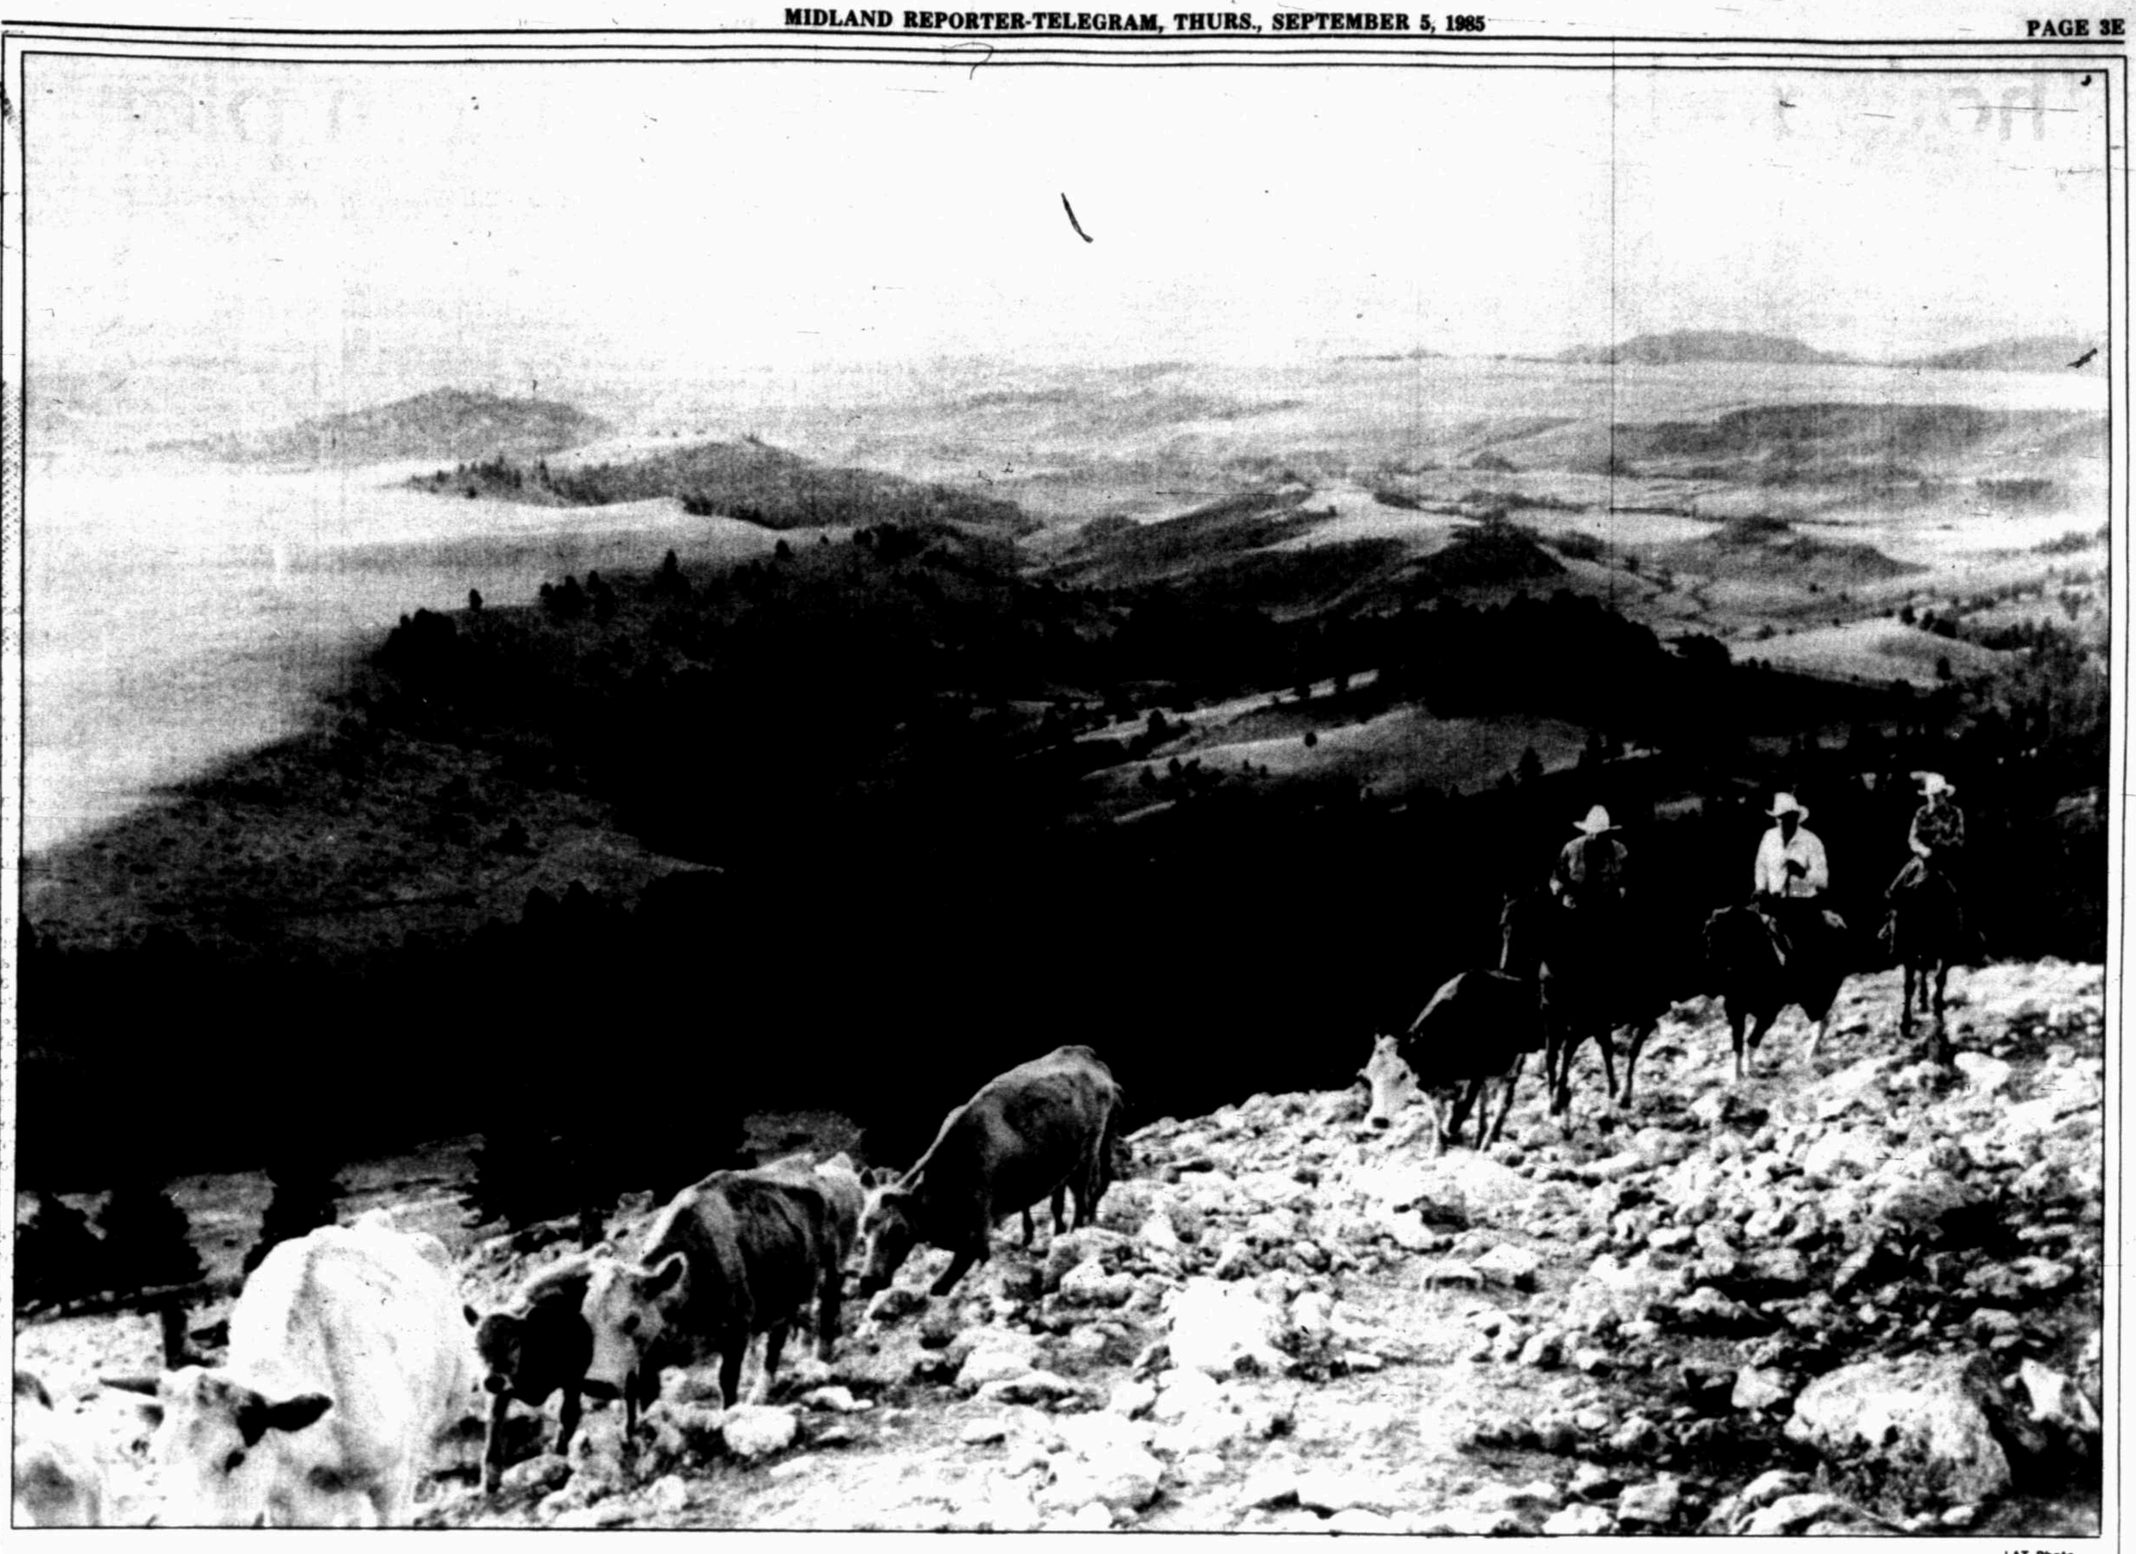

Kabiro is home to families who came here in the 1950s during the Mau Mau rebellion against British rule. Many of the men were killed in the uprising. With little of their own, the women planted roots and tried to see each day through.

With the broad support of the Institute of Cultural Affairs, a private non-profit organization that fosters local initiatives to improve the quality of life in more than 21 countries, the women of Kabiro began to mold the hodgepodge of people and shacks into a community. There are now a school, a clinic, clean water and a few vegetable gardens. Women and men make bricks and roofing tiles to help support the village.

But the land they live on does not belong to them. There are plans to build low-cost housing on at least part of it, one official of the Institute of Cultural Affairs said, at prices that would be out of reach to those who live there now. So three years ago the women sat down to develop ways to gain a plot to call their own.

"It is the only way we can move ahead," one member of the women's organization said. "If we get a lot of money from the things we sell, we can go to the government and say we have a certain amount but that we have no place to go. Maybe the government will give us a place to go."

"My eyes have been opened," one Japanese woman said. "I will do whatever I can."

"I want to keep it the way it used to be," says Larry Brannian, a range rider for Sun Oil, center, who helps drive the company's livestock into Wyoming's summer grazing range.

By JIM CARRIER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BUFFALO, Wyo. — Crazy Woman Creek is rippling in the background, a small fire of dried sticks is snapping and boiling away the coffee, and Larry Brannian is slouching against a big pine, his cowboy hat pushed back, his cowboy rope coiled beside him, his cowboy coffee cup in hand.

"I have only one regret," he drawls. "I should have done this 20 years ago."

He takes a careful drink, and, using a leather glove as potholder, pours himself another from the blackened pot, filled with water and grounds — cowboy coffee. "This is the way it should be done," he says.

For nearly 40 years, from the flatlands of Iowa, Larry Brannian dreamed of life as "it should be," in the high country of Wyoming, beside a campfire, his horses nickering in the corral behind him.

"I wanted to grow up, wear a white hat, ride a horse, catch a pretty girl. I always liked Roy Rogers movies. They were the good guys. Everybody liked them. I just never outgrew it."

For those 40 years, though, the closest he got was an occasional hunting trip into the Big Horns, or the view of a calf's rear end as it waited nervously in a rodeo chute.

At age 40, Larry Brannian fulfilled his boyhood dream and became a cowboy, cutting his family income by $40,000.

LAT Photo

Then one day the gate opened, and Brannian roped and hogtied his dream, determined that it not get away. He became, at the age of 40, a cowboy.

Today Brannian, 43, is in his second summer as a "high country range rider" for Sun Oil. He rides 28 square miles for the company, looking out for 315 cows and their calves, pushing them to new grass, spreading salt blocks with his mule, Coke, and living in a tent beside the Crazy Woman.

He makes $800 a month, $2,400 for the summer, just one of the jobs he works to support his cowboy habit. His wife, Eva, works, too, now that the three girls are grown. They make $40,000 less than they used to, back in Iowa. But he is happy, and so, then, is she. "This is where Larry belongs," she says.

Brannian's story began in Brooklyn, Iowa, 43 years ago. He used to hitch rides on milk cows, and take down his grandmother's clothesline for a lasso. At about 5, he saw a rustler change a brand in a Roy Rogers movie, using a cinch ring lashed to a willow branch.

At home, he roped a Guernsey heifer in the orchard, choked her down until she couldn't stand, and built a fire. Then with a stove poker from the house, he began to print his name in her hide. He got "L" and "A" and part of "R" burned in before he fell the swift kick of his grandfather's boot.

"The days of the cowboy are over," his mother told him. "The open range is gone. They drive in pickups today." But still he dreamed. "Back there, the only way to be a cowboy was to rodeo. So I started to rodeo." He was 15 years old.

Within a couple of years he was winning buckles and saddles, and dreaming of the pro circuit. But marriage to his high school sweetheart, and fatherhood, strapped him to a job, then two, then three, as his family grew.

Auctioneer school gave him a trade, and he worked at it feverishly, along with a job at the Amana refrigerator plant, and carving wood, and sweeping a school at night. He was raking in the dough, driving a Continental to weekend rodeos, and seeing his family in between. One Sunday he decided to stay home. The phone rang 62 times.

"I've had it," he told Eva. "I'd like to live in the mountains where you can cowboy and hunt and fish. I can't do that when I'm 65."

So he piled the girls into the car and drove through Montana, Wyoming and Colorado, looking for home. They chose Buffalo, and moved in 1979.

"The first year we didn't do nothing. We rode the mountains. We fished. Eva and I had a great time. We'd grab the girls and come up and lay around under a tree and giggle."

During a lunch stop on a cattle drive, a horse nuzzles Brannian, who insists he's much happier since leaving the life of a Midwestern factory worker and weekend rodeo cowboy for the full-time cowboy life.

LAT Photo

With money running out, he took a small ad in the paper: "Cowboy service." And soon he was working for ranchers tired of young transients. He never told them he was a cowboy from Iowa. He got by on his rodeo skills.

Brannian begins his day at dawn, graining his horses, throwing a fresh batch of grounds into the boiling coffee. Then he saddles up and rides through his cows, going south in the morning, north in the afternoon, pushing into the bawling cattle grazing in the rough old clear-cut, looking for drooped ears, the sign of sickness.

He takes along Mike Van Ersveld, a 13-year-old would-be cowboy from Iowa. Some day, Brannian hopes to charge to take city boys under his wing for a summer of roping, shooting, cooking on an open fire. The kind of life he would have died for when he was a kid.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Guerrillas of the communist Khmer Rouge claimed today they killed 2,583 Vietnamese soldiers in 14 major battles in Cambodia during August.

Khmer Rouge Radio monitored in Bangkok said the casualties included 11 Vietnamese soldiers killed and seven others wounded in the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh.

Khmer Rouge Radio said Wednesday that 127 Vietnamese soldiers were killed and 220 others wounded as guerrillas overran two Vietnamese regiments in the western province of Battambang on Aug. 31.

The Khmer Rouge, with about 30,000 soldiers, is allied with two other guerrilla groups opposing Vietnamese soldiers who invaded Cambodia in late 1978, ousted the Khmer Rouge and installed a pro-Vietnam government.

Three survive two months at sea

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A U.N. commission says three Vietnamese boat people survived more than two months at sea and landed in Malaysia. Twenty-eight other people died during the voyage.

Leon Davico, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said Wednesday that the boat was robbed four days after the 31 refugees left Vung Tau, Vietnam on June 16.

No one was hurt in the robbery, but a day or two later the boat's engine failed, Davico said. Food and water ran out around June 25, he said.

The 28, including the captain and crew, subsequently died of exposure, thirst, drinking sea water and eating poisonous fish, Davico said. Survivors stayed alive by collecting dew with their clothing.

Bangladesh lifts political ban

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — The official news agency quoted President Hussain Mohammad Ershad as saying a 6-month ban on political activity will be relaxed Sept. 15.

The news agency, Bangladesh Sangbad Sangsta, said Ershad called for national elections late in winter to restore democracy to the country.

Ershad made his comments to newly elected local officials in a region northwest of Dhaka, the capital, on Wednesday, the news agency said.

On March 1, Ershad banned political activity, imposed martial law regulations, restricted publication of news critical of his military regime, and put the country's two major opposition leaders under house arrest.

The two leaders have been released since then.

Mexico expels U.S. preachers

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A group of 13 American evangelical preachers and six of their children have been expelled from Mexico for allegedly violating the country's laws governing the exercise of religion, authorities and news reports here said Wednesday.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Vince Hovanec confirmed the group of American citizens was expelled from the country from the Gulf Coast state of Veracruz but said he had no further information.

"All we have at this moment is confirmation from Mexican immigration authorities the group was asked to leave the country or expelled. We have no further information, or even the correct names yet," Hovanec said.

Gandhi guarded at funeral

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A Hindu politician assassinated by Sikh terrorists was cremated today in a ceremony marked by tight security and an unexpected visit by a close friend, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Police sealed off the capital city to search for the killers of 46-year-old Arjun Dass, who was killed in his office Wednesday along with his bodyguard. Six people were wounded in the attack.

The site was thronged by about 4,000 mourners and more than 200 uniformed and plainclothes police. At least 20 special police commandos carrying semi-automatic weapons also were present.

PARIS (AP) — A French researcher who was kidnapped in Beirut in May was allowed to visit his family, an official of the Shiite Moslem militia group Amal said in an interview on French television.

Akef Haidar, reported to be Amal's second-in-command, gave no other details Wednesday night on Michel Seurat's visit with his family, who live in Beirut.

French news reports said the gesture may mean Seurat and Jean-Paul Kauffmann, kidnapped with him, might be freed soon after Israel releases more Shiite prisoners it holds.

ADVERTISING ORDER 5T31444NALX. ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY. Texas received Final Authorization under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) on December 12, 1984. The Sixty-Ninth Legislature for the State of Texas recently enacted legislation reorganizing the Texas Department of Water Resources, responsible for the Industrial Waste Mangement Program, renaming it the Texas Water Commission and, in addition, transferring to the Texas Water Commission from the Texas Department of Health and Administration of the Municipal Hazardous Waste Program. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is providing notice of these impending changes which will become effective under State law on September 1, 1985, and the EPA's and the State's plan regarding compliance with 40 CFR Part 271.21(b) and (c). Copies of the State legislation and a draft of the State's program revision are available for public inspection from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, excluding holidays, at the following locations: U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Library, 28th Floor, Interfirst Two Building, 1201 Elm Street, Dallas, Texas 75270, Telephone (214) 767-7341. Texas Water Commission, Library, Fifth Floor, Stephen F. Austin State Office Building, 1700 North Congress, Austin, Texas 78711, Telephone (512) 463-7834. U. S. EPA Headquarters, Library (PM211A), 401 M Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20460, Telephone: (202) 382-5926.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: H. J. Parr, State Programs Section (6AW-HP), Hazardous Materials Branch, U. S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region VI, 1201 Elm Street, Dallas, Texas 75270, (214) 767-2645.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On December 26, 1984, the State of Texas received authorization pursuant to Section 3006 of RCRA to operate the State's hazardous waste program in lieu of the federal program in Texas (49 FR 48300). On March 26, 1985, EPA published a notice of clarification (50 FR 11658) stating that the state was not authorized to implement the requirements and prohibitions of the Hazardous and Solid Waste Amendments of 1984 (HSWA) Pub. L. 98-616, November 8, 1984).

The application submitted by the State for Final Authorization described a program which is to be jointly operated by two state agencies: The Texas Department of Water Resources (TDWR), having jurisdiction over Industrial Waste Management, and the Texas Department of Health (TDH), having jurisdiction over Municipal Hazardous Waste Management.

The Sixty-Ninth Texas legislature enacted legislation (Senate Bill 249) transferring jurisdiction for all municipal hazardous waste management from the Texas Department of Health to the Texas Water Commission. This transfer is effective September 1, 1985. In addition, Senate Bill 249 provides organizational changes to the TDWR and renames the agency the Texas Water Commission (TWC).

All duties, authorities and responsibilities held by the TDWR continue to be held by the TWC. Section 10.004(f) of Senate Bill 249 provides that the reorganization of the TDWR into the TWC does not affect or impair any act done, bonds authorized or issued, or penalty that has before the effective date of Senate Bill 249, and those bonds, obligations, rights, permits, licenses, standards, rules, and criteria remain in effect until such time as they are paid, recalled, changed, altered, renewed, amended, cancelled, revoked, repealed, or abolished under the Water Code or other state laws. It is anticipated that the TWC will be making name change revisions in its Industrial Waste Program shortly and submitting these revisions to EPA. At a later date, there will also be some substantive revisions necessitated by Senate Bill 249, House Bill 1867, and House Bill 2358. The recisions of the industrial waste program made as a result of the reorganization and renaming of the TDWR do not fall within the ambit of 40 CFR under 271.21(c). This section states that whenever there is a transfer of all or part of a program from an approved state agency to another state agency, the new agency is not authorized to administer the program until approved by EPA under 40 CFR under 271.21(b). EPA does not view the reorganization of the TDWR into the TWC with the attendant savings clause of Section 10.004(f) of Senate Bill 249 as a transfer within the purview of a 40 CFR under 271.21(c). Thus, the authorized industrial hazardous waste program will continue in the State of Texas without interruption. There is no provision, however, in Senate Bill 249 continuing in effect the Municipal Hazardous Waste program after September 1, 1985. The statute is quite clear that, after September 1, 1985, authority for the regulation of Municipal Hazardous Waste lies with the TWC and all TDH Municipal Hazardous Waste authority ceases. Therefore, EPA does consider the transfer of the Municipal Hazardous Waste program from the TDH to the TWC to fall within the meaning of 40 CFR Part 271.21(c).

Since the TDH authority ceases and the TWC authority for municipal hazardous waste is not authorized until approved by EPA, there will be a lapse in authority to operate a RCRA program for municipal hazardous waste in Texas until the TWC is authorized by EPA for this program. In order to minimize any significant impact this lapse of authority would have on the program, EPA and the State have committed to an aggressive plan of action to keep tha lapse time as short as possible. The Governor of Texas, in a letter received by EPA on August 22, 1985, has affirmed the State's intention to move quickly in amending the authorized State Program to reflect the transfer of responsibilities. The State has made these further commitments. The TWC will adopt, on an emergency basis, Municipal Hazardous Waste Regulations on September 3, 1985 (the first work day after the transfer goes into effect.) The TWC will submit an official request for a revision to the State's authorized program which reflects the transfer of authority from the TDH to the TWC. Such revision will include amendments to the Memorandum of Agreement, the Attorney General's Statement, the Program Description and the municiapl hazardous waste management regulations and will be submitted within the first two weeks of September, 1985.

On August 19, 1985, the TDWR, as predececessor agency to the TWC, submitted a draft of proposed changes to the State's program reflecting the revision of the program to include municipal hazardous waste. EPA has reviewed this draft revision and is satisfied that, if adopted substantially as submitted, the revision would be approvable.

Upon receipt of the official submittal, EPA will then expedite the review and approval process. If the submittal is approvable, EPA intends to publish an Interim Final Rule as close to September 30, 1985, as possible, effective upon publication, approving the State's authorization. Such Interim Rule would be published as soon as practicable to attempt to restrict the lapse time. It would provde for a subsequent comment period and opportunity for hearing.

If the revision submitted by the State is not substantially the same as the draft and is not approvable under 40 CFR 271.21, EPA will institute proceedings under 40 CFR 271.23 to withdraw authorization of the State's program.

We wish to clarify how we anticipate that issues related to the Municipal Hazardous Waste Program will be handled during the interim between September 1, 1985, and the authorization of the TWC for the Municipal hazardous Waste Program. EPA, pursuant to authority under Section 7003 of RCRA, may pursue any action concerning municipal hazardous waste which is causing an imminent and substantail endangerment to the public health or the environment. The TWC, of course, will be able to take municipal enforcement actions under State law (to be effective September 3, 1985). In addition, the TWC has agreed to not issue permits to Municipal hazardous Waste Management Facilities during this interim period. In this way, questions regarding the validity of such permits will be avoided. The interim period is expected to be of such short duration that the suspension of the issuance of permits to these facilities should not be burdensome to the regulated community. Other work on the processing of these permits, up to but not including the issuance of draft permits, will continue.

EPA and the State of Texas are committed to maintaining the smooth operation of the State's Hazardous Waste Management Program through this revision process. EPA feels that restricting the gap in the authorized program to the shortest period of time is in the best interest of EPA, the State, the regulated community and the general public.
