Odd Bits Salvaged

"No, ma'am, I don't think so," we says. "I don't believe my local merchants would appreciate it."

She was a young lady, and shapely, who had come up with the idea of selling reader-type advertising in surrounding towns and having the ads printed in our paper.

k-k

She had a little different approach to most people who clip merchants for that type of advertising. She would pay us as soon as the ads were printed, rather than having to collect for them first, and she wouldn't sell any automotive ads, etc., that were competitive to our local merchants.

k-k

Our usual experience with this type of salesperson is that he (or she) must have a copy of the paper containing the ads before collection can be made. When they leave out to collect, they sometimes leave the newspaper holding the bag.

k-k

Such a campaign would have brought out-of-town dollars into our coffers, if everything was on the up and up, and said offer could use some additional cash to pay taxes, etc.

k-k

But to us, any type of advertising that invites local people to go out of town to do their buying is competitive to the local merchants, whether or not the firm doing the advertising is in direct competition to any one merchant.

k-k

An invitation to go out of town to buy is in competition with all merchants—even the filling station man, the cafe operator, the person selling coffee or cold drinks. For if you drive to another town to buy something that is not available here, the chances are you will buy something that could have been purchased in your home town—if only a meal or cold drink.

So we turned down the offer. We learned early in the newspaper business that it is traditional for a newspaper man to be pretty much of a booster for trading at home. The years of experience have taught us no different, although we've seen lots of people going away from home to make purchases. Towns are not built, or maintained, that way.

The new 50-star U. S. flags were flown in a number of places in Munday last Friday. Although Armistice Day has fallen by the wayside—wars have followed the "war to end wars" and Armistice Day has now become Veterans Day—and Munday decided not to celebrate by closing, a number of stores has "Old Glory" flying in the breeze last Friday. Our guess is that better than 50 per cent showed their patriotism by having the flag flying.

k-k

The new 50-star flags are in Munday as a result of a recent campaign by the American Legion to bring our flags up to date. They had pretty good success in selling the new flags, and practically all that were flown here on Veterans Day were of the 50-star variety.

k-k

When we were approached on the matter, we asked for a trade-in allowance for our old 48-star flag. We didn't get it, and now we have one we can't use. We're undecided whether to destroy it or keep it. It could be possible that two states would withdraw from the union at some future date! Even Louisiana is not satisfied with the segregation question!

k-k

It was good to see and visit with former Methodist pastors and their wives, or families, who were here this week delivering the stewardship lectures at the First Methodist Church. Among them were: Rev. Luther Kirk of Amarillo, on Monday night; Rev. Doyle Ragle of Vernon, on Tuesday night, and Rev. Don Davidson of Abilene, on Wednesday night.

k-k

During our stay in Munday, we have seen eight pastors of the Methodist church, most of whom have returned on numerous occasions. Trouble with us is that we get to reminiscing of by-gone days and are unable to follow their sermons too closely!

k-k

It always brings back pleasant memories for these good people to return to Munday for a few hours.

These are urged to turn in their money as soon as possible, so the drive may be completed.

The total asked by the budget committee was $5,500, and if you were not contacted it will be appreciated if you will call the Chamber of Commerce office and make your contribution and help obtain this goal.

Moguls Beat Holliday, 2 to 0, Here Friday; Win Second Place In District

The spirited Munday Moguls who got off to a bad start in early-season games, closed out a successful season here Friday night with a 2 to 0 District 11-A victory over the Holliday Eagles, this clinching second place in district standings.

The rugged defensive battle was decided in the second period when the entire right side of the Mogul line rushed in to tackle James St. Clair of the Eagles in the end zone for a safety. Players responsible for the margin of victory were Bobby Partridge, Gary Wood and John Renua.

The play was set up by a jarring tackle by end Ronnie Hardin on St. Clair, who fielded a Munday punt on his own three and fumbled. St. Clair managed to recover the ball, but on the next play was swarmed under for the safety.

Partridge had a hand in another Munday "save" when he recovered a Holliday fumble on the Mogul 13 in the third period. This was the deepest penetration for the visitors.

With only two minutes left in the game, the Moguls put on a drive that carried to the Eagle 30 before being halted. Fullback Tommy Dickerson and Quarterback Douglas McGrady were the big horses in the Mogul drive.

So tight was the defensive battle that Munday won the battle of yards with 105 on the ground and eight through the air. Holliday was held to 95 yards rushing and eight through the air.

Tony Hobert and Bob Partridge were outstanding on defense and helped to keep the Eagles under control.

Munday's lone district loss came at the hands of the district champions, the Crowell Wildcats, who are playing Keller for the bi-district championship next Friday at Jacksboro. The Moguls were tied by Paducah, but won on penetrations.

Knox City Business Firms Gutted by Fire

Knox City merchants are estimating their losses in a disastrous fire which gutted five business firms early Tuesday morning. The loss early Tuesday was estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000.

The fire was reported going strong when firemen reached the scene shortly after 3 a.m. The Knox City fire department waged a long fight for the first 45 minutes, it was stated, then firemen from Munday, Benjamin and Rochester helped battle the blaze. At 7:30 a.m. firemen were put ting out final pockets of resistance within the buildings, but little of the buildings or merchandise had been saved.

During the height of the fire, flames shot more than 50 feet in the air.

Destroyed in the blaze were Lowery Dry Goods Store, J. T. May Variety Store, Young's Barber Shop, Central Cafe and the Texas Theatre. McCarty Jewelry Store, south of the theatre, and Hughes Radio Shop, just east of the dry goods store, suffered heavy smoke damage and some water damage. The radio shop was saved by a fire wall.

Johnny Vinita, Knox City fire chief, said all the buildings were under one roof and lack of fire walls between the establishments was given as the reason the blaze could not be contained.

At one period the flames threatened a dry cleaning shop across the street north of the burning area. Most of the businesses were at least partially covered by fire insurance.

The dry goods and variety stores had just received stocks of Christmas merchandise, which were destroyed. Mr. May, looking at the remains of what had been his variety store, said all he apparently had left were a few wastebaskets which were still in the remains of a show window.

Local firemen said this was the fourth major fire which Knox City had suffered in the past ten years.

Wm. Griffith, Former County Official, Dies Thursday; Funeral Held On Friday

Funeral services for William Griffith, 81, pioneer resident of this area and former Knox County commissioner and judge, were held at 10:30 a.m. Friday from the First Baptist Church in Knox City with Rev. Claude Stovall, retired Baptist pastor from Albany, officiating. Burial was in the Knox City Cemetery under direction of Wylie Funeral Home of Cisco.

Mr. Griffith passed away Thursday morning at a Cisco rest home. He had been in failing health for several years. He was a member of the Baptist Church.

Judge Griffith was born March 8, 1879, in Collin County and moved to Scranton, southwest of Cisco, in 1886. He moved to Knox County a few years later and served as county commissioner for 12 years, 1926-38 and served two terms as county judge in the 1940's. He moved to Cisco in 1951.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Julia Griffith of Cisco; a son, Ross Griffith, who is a justice of the peace at Cisco; two sisters, Mrs. W. E. Seay of Norman, Okla., and Mrs. Eugene Cox of Oklahoma City; two brothers, Dave Griffith and Harve Griffith, both of Munday; 12 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

A son, Howard Griffith, preceded him in death in 1941.

Nephews of the deceased served as pallbearers.

Plans for another series of like demonstrations will be made at the meeting.

The Vegetable Committee is composed of Lonnie Offutt as chairman, with Gene Thompson, James Smith, Bill Langford, Leland Floyd and Clint Norman as members.

Acclaimed Coach Is Speaker For Mogul Banquet

A real treat is in store for those who attend the annual football banquet this year.

The Moguls have chosen Claude Gilstrap of Arlington State College as the highlighted guest for the banquet, which will be held on Tuesday, November 22, at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium. He has been in Arlington for the past 11 years, and during the 1957-58 season his team won the Junior Rose Bowl title in Pasadena, Calif. Gilstrap is a recognized authority in the football world.

A former Mogul, Gary (Skip) Cure, played with these national championship teams.

Among Gilstrap's many talents is his ability as an outstanding and interesting after-dinner speaker, and his message will be enjoyed by all who hear him.

Banquet tickets may be purchased from any football player, ped squad member, or any member of the Quarterback Club. They must be acquired by Saturday, November 19, and they will not be sold after this date.

The mighty Moguls have completed a fine season, bringing recognition to the town and acquiring honor for themselves by gaining second place in the district.

Mogul Band Wins Contest Rating

On Tuesday, November 15, the Munday High School Band went to Wichita Falls and was awarded a first division by judges for the Texas Interscholastic League. A first division is described by the TIL as being a "superior" band and one which should receive a first place trophy.

This contest included all bands in the region 14, which extends from the state boundary to Graham south, and from Knox City to Bowie. As a regional contest it was very exciting for all who had the privilege of attending.

The judges, band directors from over the state, made some very favorable comments about the band. "Nice ideas," "very effective," "looks and sounds good," band is small, but does a very good job," "some fine work"—these are but a few of the many fine compliments paid to the band by the four judges.

Although school has been going on only three and one-half months this is the fourth trophy which the band has won. The band has won these trophies in three contests competing with over sixty bands. All of these students who are sacrificing their spare time to help have a better band for the school and community are to be commended for a job well done.

Some future plans of the band are for the Christmas street parade, a Christmas program, TIL concert playing contest in the spring, the annual Musicade; and it is hoped, if they keep improving, to make a trip in the spring.

Three Accidents Investigated In County In October

The Highway Patrol investigated three rural accidents in Knox County during October, according to Sgt. F. P. Jircik, patrol supervisor for this area. These wrecks resulted in one injured and a property damage of $1,365.

This brings the total for the year in this county to one person killed, nine injured and property damage to $28,700.

"In 1959, 8,200 pedestrians were killed on the streets and roads of America," Sgt. Jircik said. That figure represents about 24 per cent of all traffic fatalities in this country in one year's time. "If we could eliminate this one category from our death toll," Jircik said, "it would contribute heavily toward a general massive reduction in traffic fatalities."

"True, a pedestrian doesn't have much of a chance against two tons of steel. But, if the driver and pedestrian both would use good defensive measures and common sense, this type of casualty could be averted."

PRECEDENT FOR WATER POLLUTION CONTROL

Water pollution, and the attendant problem of land-water conservation, has become a matter of national concern. There is much greater urgency for action in some regions than in others. But there's barely a sizable section of this country that isn't facing pollution problem in some form.

In an address before the Water Pollution Control Federation, the head of one of this country's major oil companies challenged the membership to provide competent leadership in developing sound programs for the effective use and protection of the nation's water resources.

His major point was that water problems are not just of a technical nature. There are grave social and economic problems involved which call for the maintenance of a proper perspective in seeking solutions. As he puts it, "Our exploding population, our rapidly expanding metropolitan industrial complexes, our fast-changing technology with the constant introduction of new manufacturing processes—all demand that our research in the field of pollution abatement expand and surge forward."

He also pointed out that the oil industry has succeeded in dealing with a problem of similar magnitude and character. In earlier days, short-sighted and unsound practices in drilling and storing oil resulted in waste and pollution. Then the producers themselves initiated state conservation laws and an interstate compact. This compact, to which 30 states are now parties, has been in operation for 25 years and has confirmed the wisdom of state rather than federal administration of the production and conservation of petroleum.

This kind of thinking and cooperation, with its emphasis on state responsibility, can solve the water pollution problem. There's little time to waste.

A DISAPPEARING ISSUE?

A controversy over government health-care benefits for the aged is very much in the news now. But, reports the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, it may disappear as a political issue.

The reason for this is simple—the problem is gradually, even rapidly, being solved without widespread government intervention. By the end of this year 65 per cent of the aged who need and want health insurance will have it, and in five years, according to the projections, the figure will be 80 per cent.

The last Congress turned back the drive to set up compulsory health care benefits for everyone drawing Social Security payments, whether they needed or wanted them or not. Instead, it passed a federal-state measure which is designed to help the aged people who are actually needy. Let's hope future Congress hold that wise policy.

NO LONGER A DREAM

Associated Press farm writer Ovid A. Martin reports: "Pushbutton farming—agricultural automation—is no longer a dream. It is here, says the Agriculture Department in its 1960 year book."

"This latest in a long series of books on various aspects of American agriculture is entitled 'Power to Produce'. It depicts—in layman's language—the mechanical revolution in farming and paints a picture of advances to come."

Secretary of Agriculture Benson is the author of the forward to this book. He describes the technological revolution that has been going on in agriculture ever since the first tractor rumbled across fields. This revolution, he writes, "gives us new benefits every month, even every day—better food and more of it, improved industrial products, less work, more leisure . . ."

The Secretary also touches on the charge that mechanization, automation and other advanced farming techniques and implements result in unemployment. It is true, of course, that machines do replace individuals—that mechanical energy supplants human energy. But, to quote him directly again, "increased productivity per man is one of the great contributions of our society. One element of society cannot lag behind. Agriculture is no exception."

As the Department's book shows, agriculture's mechanical revolution is still pretty much in its infancy, despite the enormous progress that has been made. Enormous new strides are coming in the foreseeable future. The fruits of this will be shaded by all.

The federal tax rate on corporations with a taxable income of more than $25,000 a year is 52 per cent. This fact caused Senator Marshall Butler to point out that the government "derives more revenue from an enterprise than the investors who risk their capital to provide jobs for our people and the goods and services that they need."

Chips From The Carpenter's Workbench

By JAMES HALLMARK

God intends for us to understand the Bible! This statement is certainly not in harmony with the prevalent contention that the Bible cannot be understood by man. Since we will all one day be judged by the word (John 12:48; Rev. 20:12) it is only reasonable to assume that man can understand God's revealed will for his life.

Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses and Joseph all understood clearly what God desired of them. On the first Pentecost following the resurrection of Christ, three thousand souls had no difficulty comprehending the divine will. Those people to whom Jesus addressed many of his lessons were common people. Those that removed preconceived notions, understood the Christ with ease. This word of caution. Even Christ's disciple failed to understand Christ at all times because they were trying to conform his message to their ideas.

There are a few simple rules that can help to make the study of God's word a real delight to you. First, never attempt to array one passage of scripture against another. Examine all that the Bible has to teach on the subject. Second, do not build a system of doctrine around a few verses. Third, consider the following in studying a passage: To whom is spoken, who is speaking, in what age was it spoken, and for what purpose was it spoken.

Remember, we cannot understand the Bible message correctly and both be right. We may both be wrong. If we understand the Bible, we will then be agreed.

"Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgement." (1 Cor. 1:10).

year has risen an average of 14.3 percent per year from 4,532 cases in 1956 until 1959 with a record total of 6,473 cases.

Under the law, basically, any child under 21 years of age and unable to pay is eligible provided he may be cured or his condition corrected so that he may be returned to a future of productive adulthood.

Children cared for under Texas' crippled children's program suffer a variety of conditions needing corrective treatment, devices, hospitalization or a corrective operation for certain conditions.

A breakdown of classes of cases shows most children under the program, administered by the Division of Crippled Children's Services of the State Health Department, need orthopedic services according to 1959 figures.

They are: congenital malformations—1,832; other disease handicapping conditions—874; diseases of bones and joints—732; and poliomyelitis after-effects—780.

Plastic repair of cleft palate and harelip—574 and burns—364—also account for a large portion in addition to other conditions including congenital heart lesions making up 339 registered cases in 1959.

Each year the demand for these services has increased, with the rate per 10,000 children served doubling in 22 years.

In Texas the total cases per

Cotton Allotments For '61 Explained

In response to questions raised by some growers about 1961 upland cotton allotments, B. P. Davenport, Jr., Chairman, Texas Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, today explained the difference between the 1961 program and the one in effect for the past two cotton years. He pointed out that the 1961 national allotment of 18.5 million acres compares with the "regular" 1960 allotment of 16.3 million acres. This 1960 figure was increased to 17.5 million acres under Choice (B) elections. In 1961, there will be only one upland cotton allotment, whereas for the past two crops growers had a choice between the "regular" farm allotment and the 40-per cent-larger (B) allotment. All

Farm Facts

To become the world's most efficient farmer, the American farmer has had to step up vastly his outlay for production materials. He, thus, is able to supply his fellow countrymen with food and fiber at prices proportionately lower in relation to their incomes than people in other countries are paying.

Farmers' expenditures for labor, farm machinery, feed, fertilizer, insecticides and other items increased from $6.4 billion a year during 1937-41 to $25.1 billion in 1958.

Prices of land, machinery, and equipment have continued upward, and farmers in general have increased the over-all sizes of their operations. They are handling more land, machinery, and livestock. As a result of this and inflated prices, the total value of capital per farm has gone up.

Total farm investment in 1959 ($200 billion) was equivalent to more than two-thirds the value of all stocks of corporations listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Farmers have twice as much invested in machinery as does the entire steel industry, and five times as much as the automobile industry. Investment per farm worker in the United States is more than twice the investment per worker in industry.

eligible growers in 1961 may receive the full available price support on their cotton, whereas in 1960 the eligible (B) growers received lower support but a larger acreage allotment.

Because of the provisions of the law the effect of the increased national allotment on the size of the State, county, and farm allotments will vary widely. Some farms may receive no increase or possibly a reduction from the available allotment acreage for 1960 primarily because of the operation of the minimum allotment provisions or participation in the Choice (B) program in 1960.

Growers on 1960 Choice (B) farms and on farms with allotments of 10 acres or less should keep these facts in mind when they receive their notices of 1961 upland allotments.

Davenport reminded farmers that the allotments will remain in effect for 1961 crop cotton whether or not growers approve 1961 marketing quotas in the national referendum to be held December 13. Allotments are used as a means of determining eligibility for the available price support.

A two-thirds favorable vote in the referendum would mean quotas for the 1961 cotton crop, marketing quota penalties on any "excess" cotton, and price support at not less than 70 per cent of parity. Opposition to the quotas by more than a third of the voters would mean no quotas or penalties for 1961 and support at 50 per cent of parity to growers who complied with their acreage allotments.

Agent Reports On Cotton Insects

The farmers of Knox County have been finding a good many cotton bolls that have fallen off the cotton and have been seeing a good many "grubs" in them. These are the larva stage of the boll weevil. There are a good many adult boll weevil around, also.

This will be important to the cotton farmer next year, also because a good many of these larva can over-winter and be on hand early next year. In the past, the county has had the same situation and very few were able to over-winter apparently due to a cold winter.

Further south, cotton farmers contend with the overwintering boll weevil and the pink bollworm almost every year. Cotton producers in this area should stop and take a look at the results of their control methods and decide if they should follow their experience.

In research and actual practice, overwintering has been greatly reduced by shredding stalks as early as possible and plowing them under. The mechanical treatment will take care of a few and the decomposition of the stalks and bolls that remain will take care of a great many.

The final recommendation is where possible, to rotate cotton to fields that have not been in cotton the previous year and even further if possible.

Starving The Boll Weevil

Intensive research is now under way at U. S. Department of Agriculture research stations in Texas and elsewhere on a new approach toward eliminating insect pests which destroy cotton at the rate of millions of dollars every year.

Basis of the new idea is to remove from cotton plants the various substances which attract and nourish such pests as the boll weevil, the pink boll worm, and others. Cotton plants which will produce little or no nectar are indicated as at least a partial answer.

The boll weevil comes first on the research list. Intensive studies are now being made of the boll weevil's diet—what attracts it and what repels it. An opening for this study was achieved at Texas A. and M. College when a synthetic diet was developed. This permits researchers to raise weevils in the laboratory without having to depend on developing various types of cotton plants as a food supply.

These studies are expected to lead to basic knowledge about the boll weevil's vulnerability to diet changes, particularly to substances which are repellant to the pest.

The USDA announced that work is going forward on "the development of cotton varieties with reduced ability to produce nectar . . . in an effort to make cotton less attractive to such insect pests as pink bollworms, cotton leafworms, and cabbage loopers."

It was reported that "several selections of cotton having fewer nectar glands have already been developed. In one insect feeding test, the researchers found seven to 10 times as many leafworms and loopers on a popular commercial variety of cotton as on one of the new selections. And in another test there were twice as many pink bollworms on the popular variety as on a research-developed selection."

It has long been regarded as a virtual impossibility to completely control the boll weevil, much greater progress having been achieved in pink boll worm control by means of cotton plow-up programs and other measures.

But, since the boll weevil feeds and reproduces naturally on the cotton plant, the new approach gives new hope. The ultimate goal is to identify the substance in the plant which attracts them, eliminate it through plant breeding, or control it chemically—and starve the weevil to death.

CHRISTMAS SEALS. THE GOVERNOR AND MARY ANNE—Christmas Seals have a special meaning to Mary Anne Copeland, 5, of Austin this year since Christmas Seals provide funds to fight tuberculosis—and tuberculosis is the special enemy which took her father away from her last Christmas. She and her father, E. B. Copeland (left), visited Governor Price Daniel upon the occasion of his proclaiming the period November 14 to December 24 as "Christmas Seal Days in Texas." Mr. Copeland was a truck driver for the city of Austin before he became ill with tuberculosis. Released from a TB hospital in January, he is presently restrained by medical advice from working for more than two hours each day. He is very grateful, however, that he will be able to spend this Christmas with Mary Anne, her mother and two brothers.

Mogul Band Will Sell Fruit Cakes

It has been announced that the members of the Munday High School Band will be selling fruit cakes over the period of the next few weeks. The band is selling Manor fruit cakes and two orders will be placed—one at Thanksgiving and one at Christmas. Bobby Brooks, band director, urges you to call him at 3842 and a student will be sent to call upon you if you have not already been contacted.

The money from this drive will be used in making needed repair of Band Booster Instruments. "It was drives such as this, with your support", he pointed out, "that have enabled the Band Boosters to operate so effectively in the past."

Dollars And Sense

By Mrs. S. C. Kinsey, Knox County H. D. Agent

Managing for the health of the family: A homemaker's responsibility for the health of her family consists of doing whatever is possible to prevent and cure ill health and to provide healthful conditions under which the family will live, work and play.

Health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being, not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.

A health measure for which the homemaker is almost entirely responsible is adequate nutrition. Actually providing food may be easier than helping family members to develop good eating habits.

Well planned family recreation will relax strain and tension, release energy and pent-up feelings and contribute to good health of family members.

Protective measures against illness and disease may be taken by the family at home and protective insurance may be needed to provide a feeling of security in the event of ill health.

Phone with the built-in switchboard

Here's a phone designed to play a big role in business offices. Right in this single instrument are all the conveniences of a telephone switchboard. Six push buttons give you complete control over all incoming and outgoing calls. You can select any of five lines—talk on one while holding calls on others—"buzz" your secretary—or use the phone as an office intercom. Lights in the buttons tell you which lines are busy, which are free.

Our "phone with the built-in switchboard" is another example of how General Telephone works to make the telephone a more convenient and valuable instrument of communications for everyone. Call or visit our Business Office and learn how little it costs to have the "switchboard" service of a push-button phone.

Knox Prairie Philosopher Proves A Big Stumbling Block In The Very First Step Toward Moving Forward

Editor's note: The Knox Prairie Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Miller Creek seems to be dragging his feet on a new idea, his letter this week indicates.

Dear editor:
Here it is only a week after the country has elected a new President and some things have already moved forward.

For example, the mail service—not the mail service generally, it's about where it always was and I don't have any complaints about it, but a particular idea for the mail service.

As I understand it, the post office department in Washington is experimenting with a new type

J. A.

It's the Law in TEXAS

HUFFING AND PUFFING

You see much of human nature shining through our laws. "Puffing" is a case in point.

Your salesman may get carried away and claim too much for his product. Sometimes you can force him to make good on his claims, or give your money back.

But not if he was merely "puffing." Puffing is not true warranty.

Suppose a salesman claims that if you buy his car—whammy! The girls will come running for dates.

That is puffing. An opinion at best. Anyone should know better than to believe it. Anyhow, no court is likely to force the salesman to make good his claim.

But suppose the salesman claims his car is new or that nobody else in town could get it. And suppose you found it was used and you could buy others like it anywhere.

That's not puffing but a "warranty." And you can get your money back. But you couldn't make him deliver the dates with the girls.

Warranties are either express (written or spoken) or implied in the way you act.

Suppose as a seller you claim that an article—say a television set or a car—is in good working order when it isn't. Then you must make good or take the item back and return your customer's money.

You do not put implied warranties into words; by the way you act, you make someone think and rely upon certain things as facts when they are not so.

For instance: If a man offers to sell you a diamond ring, you have a right to think that he owns and has a right to sell the ring. So you buy it, but the jewelry store comes and takes it away from you. The man didn't own the ring after all. Then, you can sue the man.

Since you may have a hard time deciding whether a salesman is puffing or warranting an article, just ask him to write down his claims. He'll most likely stall if he's puffing.

(This newsfeature, prepared by the State Bar of Texas, is written to inform—not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is fully advised concerning the facts involved, because a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.)

of mail delivery in which you write a letter on a special piece of paper, fold it into an envelope, drop in in a machine. The machine then opens it looks at it, finds out where it's going, transmits it electronically to its destination, then tears up the original. On the receiving end, another machine reproduces it, seals it, and hands it over to the local post office for delivery.

I have been thinking about this system and I have my doubts. In the first place, if the machines can deliver a letter from New York to the Munday post office, it won't be long before somebody wanting to move even further forward will figure out how to have it delivered electronically to my mail box, and I'm having trouble enough keeping my present mail box propped up without having to maintain an electronic brain machine alongside it.

In the second place, I don't ever remember having received a letter on any day that I'd have been any better off or more informed if it had gotten to me two days earlier. Very few people have any thoughts or messages to convey to me that are that important. And I don't know of anybody, congressman, governor, sheriff, newspaper editor, who would be any better off or any more informed finding out what I think two days earlier than he can find out now. I take the position that if it takes me a week to think up an idea, anybody waiting on it can wait an extra day and not be hurt. In some cases he could never hear and be just as well off. And this things works vice versa.

It may be important to get a guided missile to its destination in thirty minutes, but very few thoughts are that devastating.

I think this country ought to move forward, even if it has to go around me to do it, but electronic mail service may not be in that category. I'm not interested in this country's spending money to get my monthly bills to me two days earlier than I'm getting them now.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Every No-Accident Day Is Thanksgiving Day In Texas, Safety Expert Declares

"Let every no-accident day be a day of thanksgiving," J. O. Music, General Manager of The Texas Safety Association declared today.

"Thousands of really good drivers in our state can look back on 326 days of no-accident driving thus far in this 'leap year' of 1960," he said.

"For them, the driving privilege has been taken seriously, and they have proved themselves worthy in meeting the tests of varying road, weather and traffic conditions," he added.

"Others, not so fortunate, became involved in accidents—some meeting their death, some being injured, some escaping harm but suffering damage to their vehicles and other property," Music pointed out.

"The Thanksgiving Day week and ahead will be the occasion for many family gatherings around the festive board," he declared.

"We hope none of these get-togethers will be marred by absence of guests who fail to arrive because of a traffic tragedy," he added. "But holidays seem to be Death's favorite days for breaking that family circle."

Music urged all holiday travelers to "take stock" of themselves. "Check that car of yours before you start homeward. Don't rush so fast that you speed your own death. Keep your mind on driving. On a long trip, stop for an occasional 'rest break' and non-intoxicating beverage. If by chance snow storms should develop, or if rain turns to sleet, be sure you have had the foresight to carry a set of reinforced tire chains, ready for use when the going gets rough."

Music concluded, "Among those drivers who have had no accidents thus far this year they may be some who will be able to make a similar boast at the very end of this year. Although a past good performance is a pretty good indicator of future accomplishment, it is not an absolute guarantee. Consistent application of common-sense driving rules, however, is pretty certain to deliver good results—preventing death, avoiding injury, and making travel convenient and enjoyable."

Plan To Retire? File Claims For Social Security

If you are going to retire at the end of this year, now is the time to file a claim for your social security benefits, for a valid claim may be filed as much as 3 months before the month you reach retirement age—65 for men, 62 for women. It takes a little time to start benefits because you must apply and furnish certain proofs and the amount of your benefit must be figured. It's a good idea to apply before the first of the new year as the necessary work on your claim can be finished by the time you retire so that your checks can start on time.

A lot of people worry about proving that they are old enough to get social security benefits. Some people think a birth certificate is required, and they don't have one. Although the best proof of age is a birth certificate, many people of retirement age don't have one. Many other kinds of documents can be used as proof of your age, so don't delay filing your claim because you don't have a birth certificate. Your date of birth can be proven from an old family Bible, insurance policies you've had for some time, or your child's birth certificate showing your age at the time of the child's birth. World War I draft records, census records, or voter's registration can be used also.

Remember to file your application early so that your social security checks will be started at your retirement. You are invited to meet with our representative who will be in Munday at the City Hall on Tuesday, December 13th from 10:00 a.m. until 12:00 noon. He will be glad to assist you in filing your claim.
