Error Follows Error in Count Of Vote in Ohio Senatorial Contest

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 16. (AP)—Graham P. Hunt of Cincinnati tonight swung back into the lead over Senator Cyrus Locher of Cleveland, for the Democratic short term senatorial nomination on basis of a second unofficial count announced today by county election boards in figures previously reported.

The Allen county election board tonight announced an official count of Hunt 1,067, Locher 1,989, as against an unofficial total reported yesterday of 547 for Hunt and 1,990, for Locher.

On the basis of the new total, Hunt now leads his opponent by 445 votes, the revised total being Hunt 93,469; Locher 92,949.

Hunt, who had been indicated as winner by an approximate majority of more than 10,000 votes on almost complete unofficial returns, saw that lead virtually wiped out today when officials in Cuyahoga county (Cleveland) discovered an error of 10,000 in Hunt's vote whereby he had been credited with that many votes more than he actually received. The discovery of that error and the tabulation of the remaining precincts which had not yet reported threw Locher in the lead by a bare 76 votes.

Senator Locher tonight issued a statement declaring he has won the nomination and that further check on the Cuyahoga county vote as well as the vote in seven other counties will increase his majority.

The corrected Cuyahoga county vote still shows Hunt carrying the county over Locher by more than 3,000 votes, but the senator says he has information from private sources indicating that majority will be absorbed and that the correct vote in his home county will show he carried it over Hunt.

HASSELL LANDS TRAIL BLAZER IN ONTARIO

Illinois Aviator Succeeds In First Jump Of Norway Trip

BATTLES STORMS

Airman Hopes to Open New Air Route To Old World

COCHRANE, Ont., Aug. 16. (UP) Bert R. J. Hassell, of Rockford, Ill., met with success today on the first day's flight in his attempt to chart a new air route to Europe—a route over the North Atlantic by way of Greenland and Iceland.

Hassell and his flying companion, Parker D. Cramer, took off from Rockford early today in their plane, the Greater Rockford, and landed here at 2:30 p. m., making a perfect landing on the temporary runway which had been built for them.

Hassell told the United Press correspondent they had encountered some stormy weather on their flight today. The first 300 miles of the hop were easy, he said, and the weather was excellent.

Storm Encountered

"Later we ran into a storm," he explained, "but it did not slow us up to any great extent and we struck good flying conditions in the last hour or so. We were in the air six hours and 40 minutes."

Hassell and Cramer rejoiced at today's success and rested tonight, hoping to take off again at dawn for Mount Evans, Greenland, the second stop on their proposed three-stop flight from Rockford to Stockholm, Sweden.

The Greater Rockford was welcomed by the entire population of Cochrane, the last possible point on the plane's flight at which it could be refuelled. The craft approached from the west, circled the town, and then landed.

Out Damage Paid

The landing field, which had been under preparation for three weeks, was near an oat field and the city had paid $200 to the owner for damage to the crop.

Mayor Ivy, members of the city council, and a band were present to greet the aviators. Hassell and Cramer congratulated the officials on their preparations.

Rain and hail here early today had threatened to cause the fliers trouble but the sky cleared about noon and conditions were favorable when they arrived.

The Greater Rockford left its home airport at 6:45 a. m., with scheduled stops here, at Mount Evans, Greenland, and at Reykjavik, Iceland. The last lap of the trip will call for the longest water jump —548 miles to the coast of Norway.

3725 Miles to Cover

The trip to Stockholm is 3,725 miles (4,283 statute miles) and because of the short water hops, backers of the flight contend it affords the best route to Europe.

The fliers covered 750 miles today and the second leg of the trip calls for a 1,200-mile flight. The hop from Mount Evans to Reykjavik is 725 miles and the final lap is 1,050 miles.

The monoplane is equipped with radio, operating on a 32.5 meter wave length and using the call "KHAH."

Bank Bandit's Sweetie Meets Lover's Fate As Abductors Take Young Girl 'For a Ride'

CROWN POINT, Ind., Aug. 16. (UP)—Bearing a bullet wound in the head, the charred body of a young woman believed to have been the sweetheart of a bank bandit, was found in a ditch three miles west of here today.

Like her sweetheart, authorities believed, she had been "taken for a ride."

Although the body found today was burned beyond identification, Sheriff Ben Strong of Lake county expressed the belief it was that of Miss Adeline Saccard, Chicago, sweetheart of Angelo Francisco, West McHenry bank bandit whose body was found near Mount Prospect, Ill., Wednesday.

A girl, said to be Miss Saccard, identified the bank bandit's body at Mount Prospect late Wednesday. Francisco had been shot through the head.

John Bethke, a farmer, who found the body today, told police he heard several shots this morning and when he had finished his chores made an investigation.

The girl evidently had been shot as she was held by her abductors in the middle of the road. Tracks in the road indicated the body was dragged to a ditch where gasoline had been poured over it and ignited.

The gorund in the vicinity smelled strong of gasoline, authorities said. Ten feet away from the ditch, blood-stains were found.

Police believe the girl was killed because she knew the identity of her sweetheart's slayers. Francisco was suspected of participating in the West McHenry State bank robbery at McHenry, Ill., in which five bandits obtained $12,000 last Monday.

He had been sought also in connection with the $133,000 Evergreen Park mail robbery, in which Charles "Limpy" Cleaver was convicted of complicity and Attorney Charles S. Wharton was found guilty of being an accessory.

Francisco's body was found in an automobile which had been driven into cornfield near Mount Prospect. Sheriff Sanford of McHenry county identified the automobile as that used by the bank bandits. Eye witnesses to the robbery said Francisco resembled one of the bandits.

AL TO ANSWER KANSAS EDITOR

Nominee Prepares Blast For Wm. A. White

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16. (AP)—Governor Smith has decided to reply to William Allen White's charges that as an assemblyman he favored the saloon and allied interests.

Fortified by an exhaustive review of his own legislative record, the Democratic presidential nominee is preparing an answer, but does not know when he will make it public.

Denial Cabled

A denial, cabled from Europe by the Kansas editor, that he had "retracted" any of his accusations, put a new light on the situation, to Governor Smith's opinion, and has served to hold up his rejoinder.

In announcing this plan the governor mentioned the Republican national committee as having made public White's cablegram. It was designed to correct what the editor regarded as an erroneous impression he had retracted charges relating to Smith's stand on gambling and commercialized vice.

Whether the presidential nominee in his counter blast also will take cognizance of other attacks on his public record, such as those made by Dr. John Roach Straton of New York, has not been disclosed.

Many Conferences

Governor Smith is shaping up his rejoinder between conferences with party leaders at the executive mansion where overnight he planned to have as his guest Senator George of Georgia, himself a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination at Houston.

Still another dry senator—Walsh of Montana, who prosecuted the senate oil inquiries—is due for a visit to the executive mansion tomorrow. He is coming to Albany at Governor Smith's invitation.

London Set Agog As River Censor Bans Swim Suits

LONDON, Aug. 16. (US)—The world's largest metropolis today is in the throes of a bitter struggle between Mr. and Mrs. Grundy, as blue-law partisans, and those who seek modern comfort in warm weather wear.

It all came about because Mr. Grundy, in the person of a lock-keeper on the Thames, forbade the river to three charming young women all clad in bathing suits of the type now generally worn in the United States and on the continent.

The lock-keeper took seriously the new regulation of the Port of London authority and the Thames conservancy board appointing him and his fellows as censors of women's dress. So the row started.

James Prince who owns a houseboat at Thames Ditton, came up the river in a punt with three sisters, June, Vera and Ileen Wilson. The day was not, and, all the morning they had been bathing in the river. They suddenly decided in the afternoon to have tea with a friend who has a houseboat above the lock, and so, without waiting to dress, stepped into their punt in their bathing suits.

Mr. Grundy was on the lookout for a victim. They were allowed to enter the lock, but, once inside, the gruff voice of authority spoke.

"Your dress is disgusting," it shouted. "Haven't you any more clothes? You can't go through the lock like that."

The girls were flabbergasted, their companion indignant.

"We have not brought our trunks with us, I'm afraid," replied one of the girls. "We cannot go back for our clothes."

Authority's reply was: "Then you can't go through the lock."

The party, with that, were ignominiously expelled from the sacred precincts of Molesey lock.

People who were going through the lock at the time considered the action of the authorities arbitrary. One woman said that she saw nothing displeasing in the girls' dress.

HEAVY LOSSES RESULT FROM WINDS, FLOODS

Dozen Communities Are Reported Isolated In Affected Area

TEN FATALITIES

Property Damage Runs Into Millions On Estimates

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 16. (AP)—After wreaking destruction in the foothills, floods from the latest tropical storm swirled toward the sea tonight in swollen rivers of Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina, and added hourly to the huge damage toll.

A dozen cities and towns still virtually were isolated and unofficial estimates of damage to property and crops, highways and railroads ran into millions. Ten deaths have resulted and a score have been injured.

Dam Leaks Badly

The most acute situation appeared tonight near Lake Lure, N. C., where a dam across the lake of that name was reported leaking badly from the pressure of flood waters behind it. The dam, 100 feet high, backs up millions of gallons of water which would be loosed into the Broad river should the structure give way. A crew of men was laboring feverishly to save it.

Nearly half of the state of Georgia was affected, with one county, Wilkinson, entirely isolated because of washed out highways and railways. Asheville, N. C., had no service and only limited traffic was moving from Macon and Thomasville, Ga., where, with the floods rapidly receding, no further damage was expected if rains ceased.

The tropical storm itself, which swept up from the West Indies and hammered the west Florida coast before turning inland, was dissipating over the mountains of eastern Tennessee and western North Carolina where a low pressure area was all that remained of the hurricane blow.

Transportation Crippled

Floods, which menaced the lake Okeechobee region in southern Florida this week, are not spread over wide areas.

Milledgeville, Ga., on the banks of the Oconee river, saw the stream rise higher than ever before, and tear out bridges and railway fills so the transportation was paralyzed. The water supply also was cut off.

After inundating a section of East Macon last night the Ocmulgee river fell rapidly today.

Pisgah Forest, N. C., a village of 300 persons in Transylvania county, was isolated, while water stood above the floors of homes in Rosman, ten miles from Brevard, N. C. Dozens of towns and communities reported houses damaged or swept away by floods.

PAINTER QUITS NUDE SUBJECTS

Artist Suddenly Deserts Her Chosen Field

By SAM LOVE

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (UP)—Why Lillian Genth, who has achieved fame by painting nudes, has resolved never to paint another nude as long as she lives is the current mystery of the New York art world.

For years Miss Genth, a pupil of James MacNeill Whistler, has supplied the art galleries and private collections of the world with paintings of beautiful, young, slim-limbed women. The Genth nudes peep from leafy bowers, are surprised in exquisite landscapes or test with gracefully extended toes the water of some woodland pool, on treasured canvases in many parts of Europe and America.

Now she has turned her back—almost with a shudder—on all nudes and speculation on the reason why has suggested a score of motives, none of which she will comment upon.

Maybe Straton Did It

Some of Miss Genth's admirers believe that she has turned to a religious faith incompatible with nudes. It has ever been asserted that she was turned from further depicting her peculiarly ethereal and nymph-like models by the persuasion of Dr. John Roach Straton. Another volunteer explanation is that Miss Genth has grown tired of nudes and seeks a change. This is based on the argument that the human body offers little in the way of variety after the first few years and that Miss Genth is merely renouncing nudes because she is fed up on them.

"The reason is purely personal," she said today in slight amplification of her abrupt announcement. "I may divulge it some day, but not now.

"It is a great sacrifice for me to give up painting nudes, for I love this type of art and have by no means done all I could do with it. I have never thought of my nudes as naked women, but as elves and spirits, belonging to the rustic landscapes against which I painted them. But never again—never."

Bar Seductive Scenes

Miss Genth indicated that the pendulum of her art had swung so far that she would not only never again paint a nude woman, but she will not even paint the sort of a landscape on which a nude would disport, were one available.

"From now on I shall paint only the veiled women of the Orient and the Spanish senoritas in their mantillas and ample skirts," she said. "I shall paint only Spanish and American landscapes — sunbaked and dry. They do not suggest the youthful, nude, fresh, grentres or running brooks, they are very old —and very covered."

The result of the strange renunciation can hardly be better shown than by comparing the noted Genth painting, "The Bird Song," which hangs in the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, with her latest exhibited picture "Ayisha-I-Rakkasss," known as "The Dancing Girl."

In "The Bird Song," a lovely woman has evidently been drawn from her bath into a shrubbery of the lawn by the call of some sweet-throated warbler. But "The Dancing Girl" sits like Abhudda in a hard Oriential courtyard, swathed in veils and trappings like a mummy with only her toes peeping immodestly out.

Woman Answers Slander Suit Of Episcopal Pastor

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16. (UP)—A charge that Rev. William Thomas Reynolds, fashionable Episcopal clergyman, was intoxicated last February was made in good faith, Mrs. Marguerite Du Pont Lee asserted in her answer today to the minister's $100,000 slander suit.

She declared in her answer the former Christ church pastor was not only intoxicated at the time, but that she had seen him in the same condition on previous occasions. She said she knew he had a weakness for liquor and nursed him herself in an effort to keep his weakness from the congregation.

Rev. Reynolds had charged that Mrs. Lee's statement that he was intoxicated while holding healing services at St. Paul's church had humiliated and disgraced him. Mrs. Lee replied the statement was made only to the minister's nephew and within the hearing of his chauffeur. She asserts she paid his salary of $200 a month and allowed him $50 for incidentials. For a time, she said, she always gave him $125 a month for a personal chauffeur.

News Scribe's Idea for Air Cooled Train Coaches 'Goes Over' With Road

CORSICANA, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—If in future years travelers across Texas during the summer months find themselves riding in a pleasant air cooled passenger coach they will owe it to Boyce Martin, newspaper scribe of this city.

Boyce attended the national Democratic convention at Houston last June. On the train Martin got hot. Not politically hot—just naturally warm from the Texas sun that streamed through the windows and made the heat waves dance across the fields.

As he sat and wondered if his supply of collars would last until he reached Houston, an idea was born in Martin's fertile brain.

"Why not have air cooled train coaches just the same as air cooled restaurants, theaters and office buildings?" mused the uncomfortable reporter.

Being a man of action, Martin wasted no time in addressing a letter to the president of the New York Central lines, offering his suggestion to the rail head.

He has received a reply from P. E. Crowley, president. It said:

"Your thoughts in connection with cooling the cars during the extreme hot weather will be brought to the attention of our engineering department."

STORY OF OLD SONG IS TOLD

Many Folk Tales in New Publication

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 16.—"Foller de Drinkin' Gou'd," a negro folk song, forms the subject for the title page and one of the leading articles of the last issue of the Texas Folk Lore Magazine, edited by J. Frank Doble of the University of Texas. The origin of the song, sung during the Civil war by run-away slaves, was traced by H. B. Parks and the music for it was set by Carl A. Fehr of Austin.

On the cover of the magazine, the chorus of the song is reproduced, while above it is a drawing depicting the run-away slave following the trail blazed for him, drawn by Mrs. Winthrop Prescott Cody of Vermont, formerly Virginia Thomas, a graduate of the university.

Other Tales

In addition to the folk song, "Foller the Drinkin' Gou'd," there are other articles which will prove of interest to Texans and others interested in folk lore. "The Play-Party in Oklahoma" is a discussion of the origin and history of the dancing games so popular among the young people of a few generations ago, written by B. A. Botkin.

John K. Strecker has written a story on folk lore relating to Texas birds; A. W. Penn tells some "Tall Tales for the Tenderfeet;" and J. M. Deaver brings some "Flashback Yarns from the Sulphurs."

Pipeline Days

"Paul Bunyan: Oil Man" is the subject of an interesting discus- of the mythical hero who haunted the logging camps of the north woods about the middle of the last century. This story is written by John Lee Brooks, while Acel Garland tells yet another tale about the same figure, under the title of "Pipeline Days and Paul Bunyan."

Other folk tales concerning both whites and negroes are included from the pens of Mary Jourdan Atkinson and J. Frank Dobie, John R. Craddock, G. T. Bludworth, Mary Virginia Bales, N. J. H. Smith, Martha Emmons, Bertha McKee Dobie, Kate Stoner O'Connor, Palmer A. Throop, Robert Adger Law and Newton Gaines.

POISON KING HELD IN JAIL

Fortune Teller and Woman Denied Bond

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 16. (INS)—S. W. Daniels, alias "Professor Brandorini," self-styled fortune teller, alleged to have been the ring leader in a wholesale poison plot here, and Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Pressley, today were held in county jail without bond charged with murder and conspiracy to murder in connection with the death of L. M. Lockamy, former husband of Mrs. Pressley.

The trio, first of six to be tried in city court on charges growing out of the alleged poison plot, were bound over to Mecklenburg superior court late yesterday following a preliminary hearing. Mrs. L. W. Pridgen, and Mrs. Lily Townley, charged with attempting to kill their husbands by poisoning, and J. H. Moore, negro preacher, charged with giving his wife poison were being given hearings today.

At the trial of Daniels and the Pressleys yesterday an alleged confession given to the police by Daniels was introduced into the evidence. In this confession Daniels declared he sold Pressley and the then Mrs. Lockamy six little packages of araenate of lead with which to poison Lockamy in order that Pressley could marry Mrs. Lockamy. He said Mrs. Lockamy asked how the poison should be administered and he told her to give it to her husband in coffee or milk.

YOUR TURN, GIRLS

EL PASO, Texas, Aug. 16. (UP)—Women employees of the El Paso Post, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, henceforth will be allowed to smoke at their desks after 4:30 p. m.

"I found that along about 4:30 every day there were unexplained absences of girls from their desks," F. G. Westberg, business manager of the Post, explained in issuing the new regulation.

"Too much time is wasted when a girl has to leave her work to smoke. I can't have the time lost. I bow to the inevitable."

London "In Ruins" After "Attack" From The Air

LONDON, Aug. 16. (INS)—Heavier appropriations to strengthen London's air defense are expected to be demanded of parliament as a result of the mimic air battles which have been carried on over the city during the past few days. The tests have shown that the attacking airplanes are able to keep out of the way of defense units, and to drop bombs at vital points almost at will. A hundred bombing planes took part in last night's attack, and today most of London was "in ruins."

Pilsudski Seeks More Territory For Poland

FATAL CRASH IS CRIME PLOT

Mexican Train Wrecked by Plotters

EL PASO, Aug. 16. (AP)—Mexico City dispatches to El Continental today attributed to a criminal plot the wreckage of a train yesterday between Loma and Lagos on the Mexico City-Ciudad Juarez line, in which two trainmen were killed.

The plotters lifted the rails from the right of way in an apparent attempt to derail the first passenger train. However, an exploring train reached the place before the regular passenger train and was wrecked. The locomotive, two armored cars and a platform car with soldiers turned over. Fireman Benjamin Pichardo and Brakeman Julio Carrillo were killed. Engineer Juan Del Valle and several soldiers were seriously injured and sent to Aguas Calientes for treatment.

Soldiers who were uninjured pursued a band of rebels lurking in the vicinity and killed several.

Burglars Empty Flour Sacks To Hold Loot

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—Needing sacks to carry away their loot of canned goods, pocket knives silk hosiery and odds and ends taken from Leon Westergren's grocery store here, burglars emptied four sacks of flour on the floor and used these sacks for their booty.

Then they emptied a sack of sawdust into the flour, mixed it thoroughly, and departed, leaving a sawdust sack behind.

Texas Indians to Be Given Health Care

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—A group of physicians, under direction of the state health department, will be sent in October to the Alabama Indian colony, near Livingston, Polk county, to give the Indians thorough physical examinations and inaugurate better health measures.

Dr. J. C. Anderson, state health officer, decided upon this after a recent visit to the colony, in which Governor Dan Moody is interested as to welfare phases.

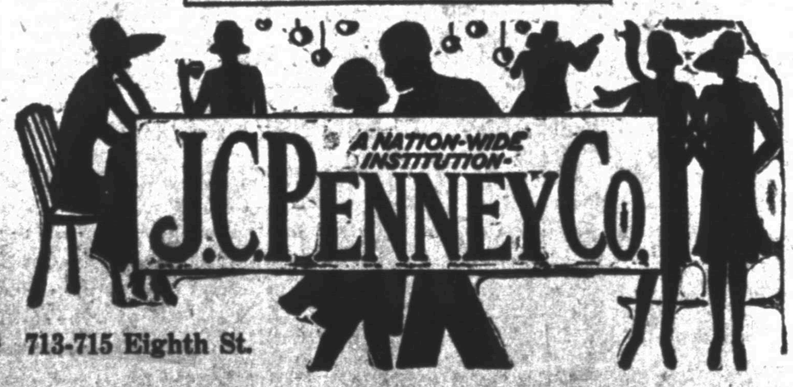

Dr. Anderson found some of the living conditions bad and an indifferent health average, he said. He favors a state appropriation to maintain a resident trained nurse to minister to the Indians, of which there are 256. They are the survivors of the tribe which came to Texas from Alabama in the days of the Texas republic.

The state will be asked to match a $40,000 appropriation recently secured from the federal government to outfit the Indians with better farming equipment and living quarters.

MAY COMPANY OPENS GROCERY DISTRIBUTING BUSINESS HERE

NEW BUSINESS IS NOVEL ONE

Shear Products Distributed By Large Trucks

A novel wholesale grocery business has been organized here by Harry H. May—a grocery-to-grocery business with a big truck to be used in distributing the Shear Coffee company's line in this territory.

The May company has been organized and incorporated under the state laws of Texas, with Mr. and Mrs. H. H. May as owners. Mr. May is president and general manager, and Mrs. May is secretary and treasurer.

Mr. May has secured the exclusive control of the Wichita Falls territory on the Shear Coffee company's line, extending from Bowie to Amarillo. The coffee is warehoused here and each day loaded on the truck and sold direct to the retailer. Mr. May says he will add some new lines to be sold from time to time, as the business develops, and in all likelihood he will put on additional trucks in a short time. The Shear company's business has grown at a rapid rate during the past three years under the management of J. M. Boyd.

Although the business is new, Mr. May is not at all new in the wholesale grocery line. He has been a resident of Wichita Falls for the past 19 years, during which time he has been with the Waples-Platter Grocery company, H. O. Wooten and the Goodner Wholesale Grocery company. He was manager of the H. O. Wooten local wholesale house for two and one-half years. He has ever been a loyal booster for Wichita Falls, and is optimistic about the future of the city.

It is a far cry from working as delivery boy in a small town to the owning of a wholesale business, but Harry May has achieved that progress. He quit school at the age of 14 years and took a job as delivery boy for a retail store at Decatur, for the munificent sum of $3 a week. He was soon promoted to clerk, and after seven years in this store he went on the road for a Fort Worth wholesale grocery house as traveling salesman. Wichita Falls, which was on his route at that time, was a small town with only five or six grocery stores, and Mr. May called on such firms as O. W. Bean and Son, Taylor and Hardy, Morris and Farris, J. M. Cloud and W. P. Collier, which many persons will remember as Wichita Falls grocers in the early days. Following his vocation in the wholesale grocery business, he has seen Wichita Falls grow from a village into a busy little city, and he is as proud of its growth and prosperity as any man living here.

The present seems to Mr. May an opportune time to start his own grocery business here, though in a different manner and only in a small way. He intends to drive his own truck, and make his own sales and deliveries all in one transaction personally until he gets his lines established. He says he feels the same old thrill of the spirit of adventure that he felt when as a barefoot boy he drove a one-horse delivery wagon. His personal slogan is "Start every day with a pleasant feeling that it will be a day of romance and adventure." And his business slogan is, "Honesty, friendship and sincerity, added to service, effort and efficiency, sum up a successful business."

Special invitations to a number of farmers living in that immediate territory have been sent out and a large attendance is expected.

His Idea Is New

Harry H. May, above, has organized a novel wholesale grocery business here. He will distribute Shear Coffee company's products in this territory in a large truck, carrying a complete stock from store to store. The new concern is known as the May company. Mr. May is president and general manager and Mrs. May is secretary and treasurer.

Musical Comedy Star Hurt While Swimming

PARIS, Aug. 16. (UP)—A hasty dash through Paris to the American hospital from the exclusive "Lido swimming pool" on the Champs Elysees today probably saved the life of Louise Groody, American musical comedy star of "No, No, Nanette."

Miss Groody had been swimming at the pool with a gay party of friends. She dove into the pool from a height of 20 feet, striking her stomach. Harry G. Arnold, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Paris real estate dealer, saved the star as she sank under the waves, due to severe cramps.

Arnold placed her in a taxi cab and took her to the American hospital where she later regained consciousness. Miss Groody is out of danger, but must remain at the hospital for several days.

Psychologists say a man never craves for a smoke so much as he is reduced to his last match.

SOLDIERS FACE DEPORTATION

Flaw In Immigration Papers Blamed

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 16. (AP)—Through a curious technicality in the immigration laws, Uncle Sam is about to lose two very good soldiers and the soldiers are about to lose the footheld which they thought they had earned in this country.

Sergeant Albert A. Cleuter of the twenty-third infantry and Corporal Albert Gillet, instructor in radio at Brooks field, are to be deported if steps taken by immigration officers here are carried out.

Both men came to this country from Belgium as seamen and enlisted shortly after their arrival without carrying out all of the technicalities relating to passports. The recruiting officer assured them that everything would be all right at the end of their enlistment and helped them obtain their first citizenship papers.

Both reenlisted at the end of their first "hitch" and applied for their final naturalization papers. Authorities, however, noticed the irregularities in the passports and took out deportation papers.

Cleuter and Gillet have been known as good soldiers and men of good character. Gillet is a graduate of the Belgian Military academy and once held a commission in the Belgian army. Cleuter married a Texas girl who now has the alternative of returning to Belgium with her husband and losing her American citizenship, or staying here while he returns to Belgium. They are scheduled to sail as "undesirable aliens" from Houston September 9.

WINS SYMPATHY

Mummy Exhibitor Tells Effective Story Of Hard Luck

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—A tale of hard luck and misfortune has won for John Manick the right to exhibit on Main street a mumified Indian.

When Manick first asked the city council for permission to show his mummy, city commissioners were unenthusiastic. But when he told them how he had, at times, been forced to beg for a living, and how his wife had died, they relented.

Manick assured the council that he wants to make an honest living, that there is nothing objectionable about his mummy, and added that it is "one of the wonders of the world."

Texas School Children Increase by 20,000

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—An increase of some 20,000 in the number of public school children of Texas will be estimated by the state department of education to the board of education meeting Thursday to make the per capita apportionment for the school year beginning in September.

STATE SCHOOLS LEARN HEALTH

State Officer Pleased at Interest Taken

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—Acting in the role of an evangel of health education, Dr. J. C. Anderson, state health officer, is winding up a tour of the state teachers colleges of Texas, stressing the doctrine of immunization against disease.

Dr. Anderson's idea is to get the 13,000 school teachers enrolled in the college summer sessions interested in health measures, and depend on them to pass on valuable advice and admonitions to hundreds of thousands of school children this winter.

After finishing the first round of itinerary, visiting the colleges at San Marcos, Kingsville, Nacogdoches, Huntsville and Grand Prairie, the negro school, Dr. Anderson reported that the interest shown in health subjects was almost astonishing.

He went this week to the college at Alpine, Canyon, Denton and Commerce, and also visited Texas Technological college at Lubbock and the College of Industrial Arts at Denton.

In East Texas he found that the malaria problem has been alleviated very much in the last few years.

His chief subject in speeches was immunization against typhoid, diphtheria and smallpox. He also urged that children be taught to get their certificates of birth and vaccination for smallpox.

"Every person between 12 and 45 years of age should be vaccinated every two years for typhoid," he said.

"Every child between one and 12 should be immunized against diphtheria with toxin-anti-toxin, and vaccination for smallpox should be made before the child is a year old."

PLANETS RULE GIRLS' BEAUTY

Birth During Venus' Periods Assures Loveliness

CHICAGO, Aug. 16. (UP)—Although the zodiacal signs get crossed sometimes, girls born between April 22 and May 21, or between Sept. 21 and Oct. 22, have the greatest chances for facial beauty.

Venus, the goddess of beauty, is in the ascendancy during these periods, which, under the signs of the zodiac, are termed Taurus and Libra.

"Some of the greatest beauties of history were born under those signs," Mrs. R. J. Maurer, authority on beauty and student of astrology, declared today during a discussion on the subject at the American Cosmeticians' society convention in session here.

"Lily Langtry, 'the Jersey Lily,' was a Libran, while Adelaide Rehan, the great actress, was a Taurian."

"But," another member of the assemblage interrupted, "the planets wander far off their course at times.

"For instance, Maxine Elliot, the most beautiful woman of America, was born under Aquarius, which dominates the heavens from Jan. 20 to Feb. 22."

Adelina Patti, one of the world's greatest opera singers, also was born under Aquarius' reign over the house of life, it was disclosed in the discussion.

Then there was Mme. De Pompadour, favorite of King Louis XV, whose wit electrified the world during the sophisticated days of the French renaissance—a Capricornian—having been born between Dec. 22 and Jan. 21.

"If you are a Capricornian," Mrs. Maurer explained, "you are prone to skin troubles and will wrinkle early.

"Hence, you must begin young in life to safeguard your appearance with face creams and skin tonics."

Further discussion brought out the fact that each planet has produced its beautiful women.

Other Planets

The late Queen Alexandria of England, Lillian Russell, and Mme. Recamier, who were world famous for their lovely faces, were born between Nov. 22 and Dec. 22, when Sagittarius, dominated by Jupiter, controlled.

Empress Josephine was born between June 22 and July 22, when Cancer, ruled by the moon, was in ascendancy and the unfortunate Marie Antoinette under Scorpio, Oct. 22 to Nov. 22.

"Those born when Libra and Taurus rule," Mrs. Maurer concluded, "possess natural beauty, and need rouge and powder only to preserve and accentuate their own inalienable charm."

The planets will guide one in using cosmetics, she said.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

It was not for the two baffled gentlemen in the background that Cherie put on this black satin frock—first sign and symbol that autumn will follow summer. No sir, it was for the young man in the left hand corner of the picture. The dress is worth an audience. It is shirred down the front to the beltline and has a tailored peplum that divides in front and back and fits smoothly over the hips. Unfortunately Cherie had to include in her invitation the person to the right, but time will end all that. In the meantime we wish to remark on our own responsibility that the person is wearing a really charming new fall frock—a black satin, trimmed with ecru lace in the proper places.

You can see very well that Cherie has put it over. When she can carry the young man past a group so attractive as the one to the left there is nothing more to fear. These three frocks are also being autumnal. To the left, a crepe satin with the satin side used for the yoke, scarf and band around the hips. Center, a dress with a kerchief girdle and a one-sided drape in back, drooping from one shoulder. Right, another black satin with a wide skirt shirred in front, a trim bodice and a black and white kerchief that manages to look demure and rakish at the same time. Cherie's frock is another satin with a double kerchief and a wide girdle that repeats the design on the scarfs.

Courage to Ignore Cry for Aid Essential to Make Good Mother

Adoration and Self-Sacrifice Do Not Make a Good Mother—It Takes Patience, Foresight and the Kind of Courage That Can Ignore a Cry for Aid or a Plea for Indulgence.

What does it take to make a good mother?

The popular definition of a good mother is one who practices the rite of child worship. A woman who prostrates herself before her children and lets them walk over her roughshod. One who offers herself daily and hourly as a living sacrifice on the altar of motherhood. A woman whose love for her children crowds out every faculty of common sense and judgment, and makes her too blind to see their faults and too weak to correct them.

You never see a girl who comes of a respectable family who goes to the bad, or a drunken, loafing, no-account boy, that some one doesn't sigh sympathetically and say what a "good mother" he or she had. In almost every murder trial the tragic figure is not the prisoner at the bar, but a broken-hearted, saintly looking old woman. The "good mother" who is going to the foot of the gallows with her prodigal son or daughter.

Undoubtedly the mothers of criminals have nearly all thought that they were good mothers. Assuredly every mother who is spoiling her children thinks she is a good mother because she puts her children before herself, and because she works her fingers to the bone for them and never considers her own pleasure or comfort where they are concerned. But these are not good mothers, they are the worst possible mothers. They are their children's most deadly enemies, and in their blind devotion they do their children a greater injury than malice itself could invent.

Who, then, is a good mother?

A good mother is a woman who prepares her children for life.

For example, look at Mrs. A. Mrs. A. considers herself a good mother because she adores her children, and since the day her first baby was born she has never done anything but hang over them, and worry about them, for they are naturally robust children, and they are always having colds and catching infections.

But Mrs. A. isn't a good mother. She isn't doing her best to give her children health and strength with which to fight the battle of life. She can't bear to deny her darlings anything, so she lets Johnny munch candy and drink soda water all day, which so destroys his appetite that he never eats a substantial, nourishing meal. And she lets Janey, who is thin, hysterical and overwrought, go to the movies three or four times a week, and sit up as late as the grown-ups. By the time they are 25 or 40 they will break down with some stomach disorder and nervous prostration.

And there is Mrs. B. who is sure she is a good mother because she will not admit to herself that her children have a fault. Still less does she try to correct them. When Johnny quarrels with the teacher and won't go to school, it is always because the teacher doesn't understand him and is unjust. When Bobby starts half a dozen different things and never finishes any one of them, it is because he is so temperamental. When Tommy gorges himself on pie and makes himself sick, it is because he has such a sweet tooth. When Sammy flies into unrestrained rages and strikes out blindly in his anger, it is because he inherited the Thompson temper that mother is sure he will outgrow by and by.

And because mother was too good, too sweet and tender to discipline her children and to teach them to curb their appetites and to hold them with a strong hand to their duty, Johnny grows up an uneducated boor, Bobby is a quitter, Tommy becomes a drunkard and one day when he saw red Sammy committed murder.

And look at Mrs. C. Such a good mother. Look at the way she sacrificed herself to her daughters. Why, she has never had a single decent dress or hat since she began buying real lace to put on her first layette. Wears the girls' cast-off finery. Sits up nights darning their silk stockings and laundering their lingerie. Does all the cooking, washing and scrubbing so Mamie and Sally's hands may be soft and manicured. Stews over the kitchen stove while they are lying on the couch reading the latest novel.

But the result of Mrs. C.'s handiwork is that she turns out on the world, two or three pretty, selfish, spoiled, extravagant girls, who have never given a thought to anything but their own personal appearance and their own pleasure.

They marry, and are a curse to their husbands because they have not been taught anything about how to make a home, or been given any sense of responsibility. They quarrel with their husbands because they are expected to act like reasonable human beings instead of pampered babies. Nine-tenths of women's disappointments in marriage is the result of their thinking that their husbands would go on spoiling them the way their mothers did.

No, the good mother is not the over-loving, over-indulgent, soft mother. The good mother is the woman who recognizes that life is a fight from start to finish, who trains her children for it, and who puts into their hands the weapons with which they win through to victory. She hardens them. She teaches them endurance. She breeds strength and courage and determination into them.

You can teach a babe in the cradle to bite back its cries, or to howl to Heaven for the moon. You can teach the little toddler how to take care of itself and stand on its own feet, or else you can make it a weakling that will hang on to somebody's hand as long as it lives. You can teach the smallest child to carry on after it has become discouraged and wants to quit. You can teach it to be efficient. You can teach it habits of industry and thrift, and how to handle money, even when it has only a few pennies to spend. You can teach it to control its appetite and its temper. You can teach it consideration for other people, and politeness, and good manners, and when you have done these things you have fitted it for life. You have insured its success and happiness.

That is what every woman can do for her children. And no mother is a good mother who does not do it.

LONDON AWAKES TO AIR DANGER

Tests Prove City Is Easy Prey From Skies

LONDON, Aug. 16.— (UP)—The capital of the British empire and the largest city in the world found itself wondering tonight just what could be done about its air defenses.

Despite apparently successful negotiations to outlaw war and supremacy of Britain's naval defenders, the public has discovered with alarm that the island's isolation has become a small barrier in the face of modern aviation. London is at the mercy of a foreign attack from the air.

Night attackers over the city have found it easy to penetrate a vulnerable point and reach their objective in the sham battles which have raged over the metropolis for several days.

Changes May Result

Day and night the gigantic air maneuvers have progressed. The night bombers, attacking from many directions, have proved that they can break through the lines of defense. Radical changes in Great Britain's defenses for the city may result from the tests. It is believed that a demand for additional squadrons and the so-called interceptor fighters will be voiced immediately following the tests.

Faster fighting planes will likely be demanded by those who are well acquainted with the "inside dope" on how Fairey-Fox day-bombers—based on the Curtiss designs of the United States—were able to out-class and out-speed Great Britain's present squadron fighters during the maneuvers.

Recalls War Days

Although this is the first time that the maneuvers in mass formation, with the giant planes droning throughout the night have been held since the war, certain aviators declare that the tests demonstrate the confidence placed in the modern motors of the machines by the British air-force, particularly in view of the difficulty in negotiating night-landings.

The civilian population of London is playing its own part in the raids," laying awake at nights with the memory of the German air-raids, which were the real thing in their minds.

Ranching De Luxe Gains In West Texas Region

MIDLAND, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—Ranching de luxe has started in this section of West Texas, and the days when cowboys heated their branding irons in the fire made from mesquite roots apparently is past.

Foy Parks, Midland cattleman, is the first to discard the old time method for a ranch country innovation. When natural gas pipe lines recently were laid through his ranch en route to Midland, Parks piped in on the supply and his mark is now seared on stock from gas-heated branding irons.

Park's only worry is that he may contribute to the effeminacy of the modern cowboy.

Quebec Liquor System Both Moral And Financial Success, Premier Says

Fewer Cases of Drunkenness Now Seen in Province; Revenues Derived From Liquor Sales Used in Educational and Other Civic Enterprises

EDITOR'S NOTE—The United Press herewith presents the last of a series of three articles dealing with the liquor commission system of Quebec province. In carrying this series the United Press of course assumes no responsibility for the views expressed and seeks only to present in news form the results of its inquiries into Montreal and Quebec.

By CARL D. GROAT

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 16. (UP)—The Quebec liquor commission system is an "unqualified success from both the moral and financial standpoint," Premier L. A. Taschereau of the province of Quebec told the United Press in an exclusive interview today.

"As a result of this system," he said, "prohibition here is practically dead. There was a strong movement in favor of prohibition before the introduction of this system, and there is no doubt that when there were open bars in the province, conditions were not satisfactory.

Revenues and Education

"With the money obtained from this new system, we have been able to do many things which otherwise would have been impossible. We have increased the revenue of the province by 25 per cent and this money goes to education, colonization, good roads, and hospital work. Eighty thousand dollars have been spent on the roads (not all from the liquor commission, however).

"It is our policy to favor as much as possible light wines, and the sale of wines is increasing, while the sale of spirits is decreasing. It is cheaper to drink wines than beer, for you can get a bottle of wine for 40 cents. We obtain the best and purest wines from Paris.

"And we have some good testimonials from the clergy as to the benefit of the present system."

The prime minister's secretary had previously told the writer that the saloon owners threatened the premier's life when the law was first proposed, and, moreover, there was a strong current against him from the prohibitionists, who at the time were very strong. Taschereau, however, put through the special act for a commission and according to himself, the results have been especially good from both a financial and moral standpoint.

Arrests Are Few

"Take the city of Quebec for instance," Taschereau said.

"It is a city of 125,000, and many strangers also come here, but there are only about 1½ arrests per day for drunkenness. I think that is a very satisfactory result. From the moral standpoint, it is interesting to note that all provinces except two are following suit.

"As far as our province is concerned, the commission system has been an unqualified success. At the outset, many doubted it would succeed. And all of the provinces were dry. Quebec refused to be dry."

Asked if he regarded the "government in the liquor business" as a menace, Taschereau replied he did not.

"We have been able to do many things that we would not otherwise have done," he commented.

He refused to draw any parallels between conditions here and in the U. S. under prohibition, but observed:

"Let our southern neighbors come here and judge for themselves. I can only say that this has been a success in our province."

Engineers To Survey Davis Mountain Route

ALPINE, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—D. E. Colp, chairman of the state parks board, addressing the Alpine Chamber of Commerce, said engineers would be sent here immediately to survey the proposed scenic highway through the Davis mountains. Plans to establish a state park has been abandoned in favor of a number of small parks in the area to be traversed by the scenic route, Mr. Colp said.

Arrangements are being made for acquisition of a right of way for the 10 miles of incompleted road on the Mexican border highway in Pecos county. Efforts to have the state designate the road from Alpine to Fort Stockton as a state highway are also being made.

Since the Canada Colonization association came into being Jan. 1, 1925, it has placed 2,620 families on 645,098 acres.

CIRCUS CROWD GETS THRILL

Boy Wanders in Front Of Racing Horses

DALLAS, Aug. 16. (AP)—A 24-year-old youth who demanded a close-up of the aerial gymnasts as they flew from ring to ring afforded a real thrill for spectators at a circus here this week.

Although plenty of seats were provided, the youth so forgot himself as to wander directly out on the track. Standing there, head thrown back and mouth agape, he enjoyed the circus hugely until the management unthoughtedly routed a "wild wester" around the track.

On they came, the cowboy, the Indian nad the woman rider. Circling the end of the speedway, the trio came thundering down upon the youth, still fascinated at the aerial spectacle above.

Hundreds of spectators shouted warning. Women hid their faces.

The dust cleared over the scene, and as the riders continued their wild stampede the youth was seen sitting at the edge of the track, looking dazedly about to see what other damage the lightning had done and rubbing several bruised places. There was an audible sigh of relief.

"I was standing by a horse and it lay down on me," was his description of the accident to emergency hospital doctors.

A claim adjuster for the circus squared things up with a $2 bill.

Cotton Pest Situation Better In Wilbarger

VERNON, Aug. 16. (Spl)—Improvement in the cotton pest situation throughout Wilbarger county was reported by County Agent R. E. L. Patillo here Wednesday. The agent stated that farmers from several sections of the county had reported a decrease in the activities of boll worms, and web worms. Leaf worms are apparently unchecked, but the county agent was optimistic in regard to these pests, pointing out that they can be successfully combatted.

R. V. Hood, Dallas, representative of a dusting company, spoke to a number of bankers of Vernon Tuesday afternoon on the methods of combatting the pest and the extent of their ravages.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Aug 16.—The precocity of modern children and the amazing rapidity with which they pick up information is well illustrated by the following story: Little Jimmie, age12, had a small sister, aged 10. One day the little girl expressed to her mother a childish curiosity as to where children came from. The mother, who apparently had not read John B. Watson on raising children and didn't care about the scientific methods of instructing children, enlarged guilty on the old stork story. Jimmie, who was present during the conversation, listened, contemptuously. When his mother was finished, he said patronizingly, "Gee, maw, haven't you heard nothin' about reproduction yet?"

◆ ◆ ◆

It is curious that the things men are most proud of are not the big things they have done, but little things that do not amount to much. There is a New York millionaire who fought his way up from the ranks in a long life of grim struggle. He is tremendously wealthy now, and the strain is showing. Nervous almost to the point of break-down he was forced to retire from active business and take a rest in an exclusive sanitarium. He was allowed to amuse himself as he saw fit, so long as he did not attempt to work again. Some impulse led him to pass the time by working with his hands at a carpenter's bench in the sanitarium. After some weeks of toil he made a wooden footstoop. And his tremendous pride in the creation was childish. The achievement was greater to him than all the millions he had made. For the first time he had learned to play.

◆ ◆ ◆

In New York during the hot weather the fireplugs serve another and more important purpose than that of putting out fires. In those sections of the city where apartments crowd each other up into the sky and whole families are jammed into stuff yiittle rooms, the children suffer a great deal from the heat. The sun beats pitilessly on the asphalt streets and the cement pavements making thm blistring hot for little bare feet. It is then that the fire plugs bring relief. They are turned on and made to throw a spray of cooling water into the air. Under this huge shower the children dance and shout in bare feet and old clothes. Some of them can afford the luxury of swimming suits. Others wear old overalls, or suits of underwear. Some of the tiny tots in some parts of the city wear nothing at all and do not seem to be bothered. With their round little bellies and their short fat legs they dance and splash around screaming with happiness. The tired perspiring mothers sit in the doorsteps and watch happily while the tots crowd under the falling stream of water.

Business' New Outlook

"THEY run in cycles."

That was the way the old-time business man used to speak of periods of industrial depression.

It was taken for granted that any period of prosperity had to be followed by hard times, in which factories would be idle, men would be out of work and dividends would dwindle.

But a new idea is coming to the front now. Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, voices it in the current issue of Forbes' Magazine.

"Bad times and unemployment are largely preventable," he writes. "They are natural results of the incredible waste that still exists in production and distribution, which in turn is due to faulty economic and business thinking."

Prosperity, Mr. Filene says, comes when the masses of people have good buying power; that is, when they enjoy high wages and salaries, and when the things they wish to buy are priced low. Mass production, he points out, has made both of these situations prevail.

Yet, in spite of this, there is a good deal of unemployment. We are prosperous, yet a good many people are out of work. What is the reason for it?

Some people blame mass production itself, which has decreased each worker's output so much that fewer men are needed to produce goods. Mr. Filene does not believe this.

"The truth seems to be," he writes, "that, to an important degree, it is due to the fact that there is not enough mass production and mass distribution. The businesses that are still being run in the old way turn out products that cost too much and therefore cannot be sold in competition with those made and sold by mass methods. The inefficient employers and distributors are forced out of business. Unemployment results."

Mr. Filene is quite hopeful about it. He makes the flat prediction that "employment for everyone is coming because it is clear that scientific mass production cannot live unless the masses can buy freely the goods so produced. It is obvious that the masses must be fully employed in order that any industry shall flourish permanently."

This, really, is a startling new viewpoint. Business leaders used to think a certain amount of unemployment a good thing. It kept wages down and lessened the chances of strikes. Now they are beginning to see that the workman's fate affects them directly. In a quite unpredictable fashion it is becoming evident that the rich man is his brother's keeper.

It seems odd to think that cold, dollars-and-cents business may bring the world closer to brotherhood and equality than several centuries of preaching and philosophizing. But this is an age of new things.

Three Generous Sons

A 72-YEAR-OLD man who lives in East Bridgewater, Mass., got into the news in an unusual way the other day.

He had his three sons called into court on non-support charges. They came and testified that they contributed $5 a piece per week to his support. They had learned, however, that he had been going to movies and making little trips to Boston. So they stopped paying it. They were willing to support him, but they hated extravagance. The judge ordered them to resume the payments, but ruled that the district probation officer would henceforth supervise the old man's expenditures.

One wonders just what an old man is supposed to do with himself, anyway, and just what a son's duty to an aged father is. Fifteen dollars a week is not a large income by any standard, and going to movies is hardly sinful dissipation.

And—just how proud of themselves ought these three brothers to feel?

Women As Pilots

THE EXPLOIT of Lady Heath, British airwoman, who piloted a commercial plane carrying 25 passengers across the English channel on one of its regular trips, suggests the possibility that aviation will become a new field in which women can exercise their talents.

There is no reason why women should not be as good pilots as men. The job calls for an excellent physique and good powers of endurance, but does not require great physical strength. No one has ever demonstrated that the qualities most needed by a competent aviator are not possessed by women as well as by men.

It is entirely possible that the future will see many women piloting commercial planes about the country—indeed, "probable" is no doubt a better word than "possible." Woman has invaded every other field; why not this one?

ABE MARTIN

Women an' airdale dogs are crazy about autos, but you never saw a fox terrier jump in an' ride with just anyone that pulls up t' th' curb. "We waited too long. Ever' buddy makes it or knows where they kin get it," declared Tony Moppe, t'day, in discussin' th' possibility o' ever again gittin' th' vote out in this country.

CROP BROUGHT RETURNS

The American cotton crop for the season just ended is estimated at $1,440,514,000 by H. G. Hester, secretary of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange. This figure shows an increase of more than $210,000,000 over the value of the crop of the previous year, but is under the value of the crop the year before.

The average price for the crop, taking the figures of the 10 markets designated by the department of agriculture, was 19.30 cents a pound, compared with 12.96 cents in the previous year.

These figures should be interesting on the eve of another cotton season, when factors seem favorable for a fair price for cotton.

ELIMINATE DOLLAR MARK FROM HOSPITALS

Hospitals should not appear as hostelries, bidding welcome only to those from whom can be expected a financial gain, Dr. Joseph C. Deane, president of the American Hospital association told members at the annual convention at San Francisco. "The hospital which refuses treatment to a patient until it has examined his financial standing and made sure that he can pay in advance should be rejected from our membership," Dr. Deane declared.

SIGNALS IMPROVE TRAFFIC

Since the installation of our signal lights in the business section of Vernon, there has been a remarkable change for the better in the handling of traffic. The truth of the matter is, so noticeable has been the change in dealing with this problem, we do not call to mind a single instance where cars collided at street intersections since the lights were installed. And, generally speaking, the automobile drivers, as well as the pedestrian traffic are very observant of the signal stops.

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

...nest Mallingham was alone in the library filled with strange curios gathered from many lands by the great scientist, Winthrop Gaston Martenet, erratic and fireless explorer into the mysteries of life, who had now been dead seven years. Ernest was waiting for a woman and, because these queer surroundings got on his nerves, he was waiting impatiently, Julia was late again. Julia was the young widow of old Martenet's son, Maxwell, a man twice her age. Maxwell had disappeared four years after his father's death and because he had been more or less a nobody it was taken for granted he was dead. But Ernest Mallingham is suspicious and when the young widow appears he accuses her of keeping a secret from him and the rest of the world. Breaking down, she promises to tell him.

Adventures in the Jungle of the Big City

At 11 o'clock the following day Hannan Martenet stood at the corner of Broadway and 42nd street and munched an apple. His healthily tanned face looked as if the suns of many climes had shone on it, but none for very long. He wore a blue serge suit and straw hat adorned with a black and red ribbon, and it was evident that both were recent acquisitions. So, too, was probably the cane, with its handle of silver representing a yawning dog's head on which he leaned experimentally. His mild blue eyes, roving with frank curiosity up and down the street, suggested that he was an unsophisticated young man who had much to learn.

His education was just about to begin.

A well-dressed gentleman with a mellow smile detached himself from the stream of pedestrians and approached Hannan Martenet.

"Grand morning," he remarked with enthusiasm.

Hannan agreed that it was.

"Stranger in town, aren't you?"

"Well, yes, in a way. I haven't been here since I was a kid. The old town has changed."

"I'll say it has!" declared the affable gentleman, and he proceeded to expiate on the changes.

His voice grew confidential, his smile blander. And finally: "I know it's nervy to ask a favor of a stranger, but—"

"Always glad to oblige," Hannan assured him, turning his unsophisticated smile on the affable gentleman—a smile that seemed to embrace all Manhattan island.

"Well, it's like this. See that store in the middle of the next block? The fat guy behind the counter makes a bluff of being a ticket agent, but he's really a bookmaker. Yes, a bookmaker. His name is Reuben Gluff. Now, I've got a sure tip on Lucky Susan in the ninth at Mount Royal. I don't want to let everybody into the know—see? It would kill my chances of a clean-up. Now that fat guy in there knows me. He'd get wise in a minute if he knew I was backing Lucky Susan—see? Now, if you'll take this twenty—"

He started to peel a yellowback from a roll of generous proportions, but just then he caught a queer gleam in the unsophisticated eyes of his companion.

"Keep your money," Hannan advised. "I know the rest of that trick. Came across it last time in Suma, Fiji Islands, and it had whiskers then."

The affable gentleman gave him a startled look, then grinned.

"Well, I sure picked a wrong one that time."

He walked hastily away.

"The old town," said Hannan to himself, "hasn't changed much, after all. I'm beginning to feel at home."

He stretched himself with a sense of well-being, inspected the silver knob on his cane, and tossed the core of his apple in a refuse can. The display in a haberdasher's window across the street beckened him. He entered it, selected a gray tie with blue dots, retreated to the rear to exchange it for his old one, passed a few pleasantries with the salesman, and walked out again. Once more he stood sunning himself on the sidewalk. His gently beaming eyes seemed to say that life was a gorgeous and hilarious affair.

Presently his roving eyes picked out a slim figure in a navy-blue suit and a black hat adorned with a shy touch of red. He came forward, his mild blue eyes twinkling as they inspected the face under the hat.

"Gorgeous morning," said Hannan pleasantly.

She turned with a slow, freezing glance that measured him from the feet up. Hannan sauntered still closer and leaned airily on his cane.

"Maybe you didn't hear me," he suggested. "I remarked that it was a gorgeous morning."

"Yeah, I heard you, Mr. Sheik."

"Maybe you didn't hear me," he suggested. "I remarked that it was a gorgeous morning"

Her lips curled contemptuously. "You can save your breath. I know the rest by heart. You're going to call me Bright-Eyes and tell me I look like somebody you used to know back in Kalamazoo. Then you're going to make a rabbit crack about being lonely and on the lookout for a nice little pal. It's a wonder you fresh guys wouldn't try a new line of stuff once in a while. Now take a tip and beat it before I call a cop."

The biting tirade utterly failed to wither Hannan's good humor. He took out pencil and paper and wrote something.

"Maybe this will make the job easier for you," he suggested.

She gave him a blank look. "Say, what's the grand idea?"

"Read what I've written, and you will see."

She took the paper, glanced at it, started to read, and a puzzled expression mingled with the scorn in her face. Again she looked up at him.

"That," Hannan explained, tapping the paper with his finger, "is a list of the places where I'm going today. It will save you the trouble of always keeping me in sight."

Her eyes widened. There was a look of chagrin in them.

"Oh darn it! Then you know!"

"I know you have been on my trail all morning, ever since I stepped out of the Illington. What I can't understand is why anybody should take the trouble to have me shadowed. I don't mind, though—not a bit."

"Well, wouldn't that jar you?" A look of disgust came into her face. It was rather a nice face, Hannan observed. "And me patting myself on the back and thinking I'd struck a soft snap. When did you tumble?"

"Oh, it didn't take me long. You see, I've been stalked so often in different parts of the world that a funny feeling comes over me whenever somebody is trailing me."

She drew a deep, long breath.

"Well, all I can say, Mr. Hannan Martenet, is that you're wiser than you look."

With a disgusted flick of her ankles she walked away.

Hannan watched her until she disappeared in the crowd. A sense of perplexity came, and it remained with him throughout luncheon.

The question remained unanswered when, a little later, he ducked into a subway entrance and rode downtown. After a while he emerged and inquired his way to a huge office building. On the ground floor was the main office of the United Bankers Trust company, lavish in its display of marble and gold leaf. Hannan, waiting while his card was brought to one of the executives, felt a little awed in the presence of so much grandeur.

"This way, if you please, sir."

Hannan followed his guide up a flight of stairs and into a plainly furnished office. At an immense desk sat a bald, bespectacled man chewing a wooden cigar. He gave Hannan a long, hard, keen look that yet was not unfriendly, then extended his hand. "Glad to see you, young man, mighty glad. Ouch—you've certainly got a grip in that fist! Your grandfather was the same way. I used to yell and squirm every time he shook my hand.

"You look a great deal like him, too. Sit down and let me see your papers. Just a formality, of course."

Hannan looked about him while Mr. Curry inspected his credentials.

"Quite satisfactory," declared Mr. Curry, returning the papers. "Cigar? That fool doctor of mine won't let me smoke, so I'm doing the next best thing. You wouldn't believe it, but I actually get a kick out of this wooden thing. I actually do. All a state of mind, anyway. Well, I'm certainly glad to see you, Hannan. Long time since you left America. You have your grandfather's eyes and nose and mouth, and I imagine you have a great deal of his disposition, too. You don't bear much resemblance to your father, Hannan. No, not much."

"So I was told when I was a kid."

"Let me see—you are about 28, aren't you?"

"Twenty-seven."

"H'm. And you look as carefree and irresponsible as a youth of 20. Well, it's great to be like that." Mr. Curry sighed a little, perhaps in remembrance of a different kind of youth. "Your grandfather was that way, too. He and I were very close friends. Yet there was a side of him, particularly toward the last, which I never understood. There were many things he never told me about. As you know, he appointed this bank to act as executor of his estate. An individual executor would not have served his purpose as well. Do you know anything about the contents of the will?"

Hannan shook his head slowly.

"Of course you don't. You have been away for so many years. I have made repeated attempts to reach you, but by the time I succeeded in tracing you to one locality you were always somewhere else. I shan't try to explain the details of the will now, except to say that your grandfather left you well provided for. Most of your share is in the form of very high-class securities. As for the town house, it was left to Maxwell Martenet, your father, and upon his death it became the property of the widow. Then there is another house, as you may know; one located at a placed named Valhalla Notch, in the New Hampshire hills."

"I was never there," said Hannan, "but I have heard about it."

Mr. Curry leaned back in his chair and gazed out the window.

"It's a curious place, I understand, and all the curious provisions in your grandfather's will are related to it. During the latter part of his life—the part that I know very little about—your grandfather spent a great deal of his time at Valhalla Notch. As you know, he had a strong scientific bent, and among other things he was deeply interested in the science of hydraulics. He fitted up a laboratory in the house at Valhalla Notch and conducted various experiments there.

"The results of those experiments I don't know, but they must have been extraordinary. Your grandfather was very secretive about them. He did not even take your father into his confidence until after his death."

"After his death?" Hannan exclaimed, his sun-browned face aglow with interest.

For a few minutes Mr. Curry chewed his wooden cigar in silence.

"He left a letter for your father, with the injunction that he was to destroy it after reading it and that under no circumstances was he to divulge its contents to anybody. It is my impression, although I can't speak with certainty, that this letter told something of your grandfather's experiments. He left a similar letter for you. I shall hand it over to you directly."

Hannan's eyes widened.

"My grandfather seems to have been a curious sort."

"He was, indeed. You will know more about it later. As for the property at Valhalla Notch, it is to be held in trust by this bank, taxes and other expenditures to be paid from a trust fund. The heirs are privileged to use the house, but there are certain restrictions which, I think, you will find explained in the letter I shall hand you."

He rang. Hannan sat silent, a soft glow in his eyes. A dim picture of his grandfather—tall, silent, mysterious and solitary—rose in his imagination.

"The Martenet papers, please." Mr. Curry told the young clerk who entered.

Hannan felt an odd thrill. Soon he was to learn his grandfather's secret. The clerk returned and placed a bulging portfolio on the desk. Mr. Curry fumbled the contents, then drew out a sealed blue envelope. With an unconsciously dramatic gesture he handed it to Hannan.

"I wish you wouldn't read it here," he said. "I'm a curious old man, and I would be tempted to ask questions. Take it to your hotel, read it in your room, then burn it."

With an awed glance at the envelope Hannan put it in his pocket.

Mr. Curry shifted his cigar to the left side of his mouth. "I dont need to tell you, Hannan, that your grandfather was a man who had great faith in the honor of the Martenets, both as a family and as individuals. He had faith that his heirs and descendants would obey his wishes in every respect. I am satisfied that they will prove worthy of that faith."

Mr. Curry took the wooden cigar from his teeth.

"Fond of your father, weren't you, Hannan?"

"It's a curious thing, Mr. Curry, I seem to remember more of my grandfather than I do of my father. I was fond of dad, and I believe he was fond of me. But we didn't always understand each other. I'm afraid I wasn't a very good son, Mr. Curry."

Mr. Curry fixed him with a kindly gaze.

"I don't think you need have any scruples on that point. One of the last things he said to me was that he wished he had been a better father to you. Maybe each of you in his place was better than he knew."

"I never got any details of his death."

"And I have none to give. You see, he just went away and didn't come back. My own opinion is that he left town to attend to some private matter and met with an accident—perhaps drowning. I knew your father well, and I am certain of one thing. He did not disappear deliberately. If he were alive he would have come back."

Hannan's next question came hesitantly, as if he uttered it only to rid his mind of a disagreeable thought.

"You don't think he met with any sort of foul play?"

Mr. Curry's answer was not as emphatic as might have been expected.

"The police who investigated the matter didn't think so. However, I am still making inquiries, in a very quiet way, in certain directions. You see, though there is no doubt in my mind, there is no legal proof of death. Three years from now—seven years from his death—the courts may declare him legally dead unless an assumption to the contrary should arise in the meantime. But the likelihood of such an assumption arising is very slight—very slight."

Hannan scanned his face, wondering if he had told all that was on his mind.

"Whenever you are in need of funds—" Mr. Curry began.

"Thanks," and Hannan brightened a little, "but I don't need anything at present. The pearl lagoon turned out a success."

He went out. Mr. Curry sighed, looked moodily into space, and picked up his wooden cigar.

Boy Sets Out to Wed 'Miss Clara Bow'

But Tricky Denver Lass Was Pullin' One

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 16. (UP)—Elmer J. Crist of Columbus, Ohio, is either a most gullible young man or an extremely fortunate fellow.

Crist today obtained a marriage license and gave the name of his bride-to-be as "Clara Bow of Hollywood, Calif." Tonight, in his $4-a-week hotel room, he told of the romance which had led him to take the decisive step.

"Sure, it's the movie actress," Crist said. "I met her today at 17th and Broadway. It was a case of love at first sight and we decided to get married immediately. She is going to meet me tonight and I've got a license and everything is fixed so we'll be married right away."

Crist has never been to Hollywood. He came here from Columbus and expected to find employment. He still is without a job but not apparently in need of money.

"If you'd like to meet her I'll bring her around to your office," he concluded, amiably.

Late tonight Crist had not appeared and was reported to be still searching for "Miss Bow of Hollywood."

Zone Commission Asks Cooperation

Service clubs of Wichita Falls have been asked in a letter from Walter S. Curlee, chairman of the city zoning commission, to name their individual city plan committees to consider the problems of the city and from time to time make suggestions to the city plan commission as the study of the proposition progresses.

Through these committees it is hoped to obtain many ideas from the business men of the city which may aid in eventually developing the best possible zoning system in the state.

No committee meetings of the commission are planned for the next four weeks, Mr. Curlee declared. He said that a meeting of committee chairmen probably will be called early in September to outline the study work.

LONDON, Aug. 16. (US)—Three one-dollar bills as "conscience money" have been received by a resident of Middlesborough, Arthur Hetherington, from Newark, N. J., U. S. A. The letter was anonymous, but bore the Newark postmark. A brief note enclosed with the dollar bills stated:

"I once took some coppers out of your mother's house. I return them with interest."

Mr. Hetherington said his mother died 34 years ago.

Rotarians Hear Talk by Farabee

"Friendships with no boundaries would be a good thing," J. R. Farabee told Rotarians at the club luncheon held at the Kemp hotel Thursday noon. "Fellowship" was the theme of the entire program.

Considerable unfriendly feeling could be overcome if people understood each other better, Mr. Farabee said, pointing out the friendliness between Americans and Canadians on our northern boundary, because of national understanding. Mr. Farabee also suggested that the Rotary club form a committee to extend the fellowship of the club to new citizens coming to Wichita Falls.

The idea of a fellowship committee from the club was commended by Hubert M. Harrison. Through this plan, he declared, every Rotarian could make his personality felt for good in Wichita Falls.

George Taylor, accompanying himself on the guitar, sang several numbers, joined by the entire group on the last selection, "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny."

Club singing was led by Dr. O. T. Kimbrough, with Mrs. R. E. Shepherd at the piano.

RATE HEARING PLANS MADE

Order of Procedure Mapped Out by Commission

AUSTIN, Aug. 16. (AP)—Order of procedure in the hearing of what is regarded as perhaps the most important case the state railroad commission ever has had to adjudicate, was announced today.

The case involves application of the Texas railroads to apply to freight traffic within the state the new schedule of rates prescribed recently by the Interstate Commerce Commission in what is known as the consolidated cases. Hearing will begin next Monday here.

Substantial effect of intrastate application of the new rates would be to cheapen the cost of long freight hauls and increase the short hauls cost. Shippers affected by the latter eventuality are expected to present detailed opposition at the hearing.

Under the order posted today, railroads will be allowed to present direct evidence supporting their application first. Then testimony will be taken from shippers who support the carriers' petition or are agreeable to it. Next will be heard the testimony of shippers opposing the railroads' proposals or any part of them.

At the close of each shipper's or group of shippers' testimony relating to a certain commodity or subject, or at the close of all shippers' protesting testimony, the railroads will be permitted rebuttals.

RATE CASE REOPENED

AUSTIN, Aug. 16. (AP)—On application of about six railroads serving West Texas, the state railroad commission ordered today that the carload cement rate revision case be reopened to consider the proposition of adjusting rates to Texas points west of Big Spring, San Angelo and Del Rio. Time and place of the hearing was not set.

Skyscraper Fire In Trash Burner

The fire sirens screamed down crowded thoroughfares and gaping crowds craned their necks skyward about 10 o'clock Thursday night when curl after curl of black menacing smoke swirled upward from the roof of the Staley building.

The fire in the Bob Wagoner building months ago was recalled by those not newcomers in the crowd which quickly gathered. Watchers kept a keen eye heavenward, expecting momentarily to see tongues of flame leap out.

The janitor, unmindful of the alarm he was causing continued to burn trash of an unusually heavy day in the building furnace in the basement. The fire trucks turned homeward and another "false alarm" was registered.

Brickmason Charged In Dallas Slaying

DALLAS, Aug. 16. (AP)—J. Frank Ruth, 41, brickmason, was charged with murder in the death of James Winslow, 25, who was shot three times and instantly killed at an oil filling station here today.

J. B. Mathis, owner of the filling station and the first person to reach the scene of the shooting, told officers that Ruth's only comment was, "There he is. He broke up my home, and I told him to stay away."

Illegal Operation Charged in Death

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Aug. 16. (UP)—Dr. Charles L. Moeller, who said "I do not believe in bringing children into the world under a handicap," was held without bond here today on a charge of murder, in the death of Mrs. Lucy Baricevic.

A coroner's jury today returned a verdict of "death as a result of an illegal operation performed by Dr. Moeller."

Moeller told authorities he had lost a legitimate practice as a surgeon after an operation which robbed him of one eye and forced the use of heavy spectacles.

"I had to perform illegal operations to make a living," the doctor said. "Most of my patients were married women. Some had husbands who refused to support them or were drunkards."

Dr. Moeller already was under $20,000 bond charged with murder in the death of a 16-year-old Fairmount City girl.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health."

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

When Should We Use Milk?

Milk forms about as perfect a food as can be devised for infants up to about twoy ears of age. While the mother's milk is best for human babies, cow's milk may be substituted, but in this case it is advisable to add an occasional feeding of orange juice, since cow's milk is deficient in some of the elements which are required.

Milk must be considered as a solid food, and not as a drink, for such it becomes as soon as the hydrochloric acid of the stomach acts upon it. Milk has very nourishing qualities, the solid matter being composed of protein, fat and sugar. In using milk, which is a protein, one should follow the protein rule of food combinations.

Milk is best eaten with some acid fruit, or with the non-starchy vegetables with which it forms a perfect meal. It should not be combined with meat, nuts, fish or the starchy foods. Milk may however be combined with bread or cereals that have been thoroughly toasted.

Curdling is the first process of the digestion of milk, and the smaller the curds the more readily the milk is digested. If acid fruit is used in this combination, the milk curds will be broken upon into very small particles. This makes a very good lunch, and solves the lunch problem very satisfactorily. Bread must not be eaten with this meal or a bad combination will result.

It is better not to take milk between meals or with regular meals but to use it as an entire meal by itself, with either the acid fruits or raw non-starchy vegetables.

Milk is a valuable food in any non-catarrhal disease. Children who do not like the taste of fresh milk may use buttermilk or some kind of cheese. Cottage cheese or cream cheese, being protein, may be used in place of either eggs or milk, but being of such a concentrated nature, they should always be used with a salad or with some of the cooked green vegetables.

Cheese and milk are often considered constipating, but this is only because they do not form bulk in the intestines but are practically all absorbed in the process of digestion. This constipating effect is entirely overcome if the bulky vegetables are used at the same time.

No doubt the best kind of milk to use is that which is fresh from a healthy cow. Many dairy companies prepare this milk under the title of "certified milk." Because of the extra care required to make the milk comply with the legal standards, it is usually necessary for dairies to charge more for this than for the regular pasteurized milk.

It has been found that pasteurized milk is the safest plan for large communities because of the danger of contaminating milk because of much handling and transportation. This is especially true where the laws regarding raw milk are rather lax. While pasteurization cannot make the milk clean, it adds an element of safety in the use of the milk which has been thus treated.

I sometimes advise an exclusive milk diet during the cures of certain diseases, especially stomach ulcers, and I will be glad to send these directions to anyone who is interested.

Questions and Answers

Question—Mrs. O. D. writes: "I have a brother who has been sick with tuberculosis for over a year. He has been in a sanitarium for six months and still is no better. In fact, he is getting weaker. What would you suggest for him to do?"

Answer—It would be unwise for me to attempt to advise you about your brother's case, as of course I cannot examine him or diagnose his case through the columns of this paper. My theories about the treatment of tuberculosis are very different from those practiced in the average sanitarium. For example, he has probably been kept in bed and stuffed on too much food. My plan would be for him to take light exercises, such as walking, and decrease the quantity of food, using only those foods of the finest quality, with no effort being made to increase his weight. I have written a great deal on this subject, and will be glad to send you any literature you wish if you will only send me your name and address.

Question—G. H. asks: "Is stale bread easier digested than fresh? If so, why is this so?"

Answer—The reason why stale bread is digested more readily than fresh is because it requires thorough mastication and insalivation due to its dryness. There is no less starch in stale bread however, and if one is attempting to avoid so much starchy food it is best to toast the stale bread completely through in order to dextrinize every part.

Question—K. L. J. asks: "Is there any remedy to stop a white coating around the eyes every morning? Seems to be caked on the lashes."

Answer—Use some good eye wash two or three times daily, and have your eyes examined by a competent optometrist.

CATS HALT SPUDDERS' WINNING STREAK AT 17 STRAIGHT, 3-1

RED ROLLINGS BEATS CHAMPS

Turgeon Hits Homer; Stanton Clouts Safely

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

That's a fine ball club we've got. A fine club indeed. After winning 17 straight games they go and lose one. Goodness, gracious. Here the good folk of Wichita Falls and vicinity were about convinced that the Spudders couldn't lose, and they up and drop a game to the Fort Worth Cats.

Yep, people, the sad news is true. The winning streak is busted. But somehow, there isn't much regret over losing. They HAD to lose some time, they have done wonders, that great, fighting Spudder club; they're practically certain winners of the second half flag. So while of course we wanted to win all we could, there's no undue sorrow over that loss.

It just wasn't our day. The Spudders outhit and outfielded the Panthers, according to the base hit and error figures. But it just wasn't the Spudders' day and it WAS the Panthers' day. So the Panthers or Cats or whatever you choose to call them, won the game, 3 to 1.

Rollings Wins Game

Mr. Jake Atz may thank one Red Rollings for the victory of his team. For this Mr. Rollings performed prodigious fielding feats at third base and in the ninth inning saved the game when he got in front of a spanking liner by Pete Lapan and started a double play, after one was out and two runners were on bases. A few inches away and Pete's hit would have scored a runner; might have tallied two and anyhow would have put the Spudders into the ball game. But it wasn't the Spudders' day.

And it was the Cats' day. Particularly Mr. Rollings' day.

Peter Turgeon gave the Galloways a lead with a home run in the first inning but a double, two bases on balls and a hit batsman by Bill Shores enabled the Cats to tie in the second. Then the Panthers tallied two in the sixth, with a trio of hits and a sacrifice, which proved enough to win, as Jimmy Walkup hurled effectively, particularly with men on bases.

Shores gave up seven knocks and all the tallies in seven innings while Herb Cobb kept two blows scattered in the eighth and ninth.

The Spudders banged Walkup for 11 smacks, but fast fielding and bearing down by left-handed Jim kept them scoreless after the first round.

Benton Gets 3 Hits

Anyhow, Stanton maintained his streak of hitting in consecutive games by smacking a single, the tenth contest in a row in which he has hit. The rival shortstop led the attack, Benton and Richardson macing three knocks each, one of the Cat infielder's drives going for two bases.

The Spudders played errorlessly while the Cats made two misplays, one of which figured in the scoring.

No ground was lost, however, as the Buffs were also beaten and the Spudders neared the cinching of the second half honors, still eight games ahead of Houston.

After the Cats went out in order in the first inning, Turgeon hit a home run over the left-center wall in the Spudder half.

Atz' men tied it in the second. Bonowitz, first up, walked. Cobb lifted to Jenkins. Richardson doubled past first, Bonowitz stopping at third. Newton was hit by a pitched ball, putting three runners on. Ramage struck out. Walkup strolled, Bonowitz ambling home. Swenson went back for Moore's foul.

Stanton singled to center, to assure his hitting safely in his tenth consecutive game, but two were out and he was thrown out stealing.

Not a Cat got on base in the third, in which Riley fanned for the second time.

Spudders Threaten

Lapan bounced to Rollings. Richardson made a glittering stop of Shores' grounder. Richardson went back of second to stop Benton's smash but Rabbit beat the throw. Turgeon singled to right-center, his second hit, Benton going to third. Bonowitz and Bischoff exchanged positions. Benton was out at home on an attempted double steal, Cobb to Richardson to Cobb. Benton banged his nose against part of Joe's paraphenalia but was able to resume play.

Richardson was safe on an infield hit after one was out in the fifth. Bischoff lifted to Benton and Ramage popped to Stanton.

The Spudders had runners on in their half but failed to score. With one out, Lamb singled to left and went to second when the ball rolled through Bischoff. Jenkins singled over second, Lamb going to third. Lamb was out, Rollings to Cobb, on Swenson's grounder, Jenkins reaching third and Wally second. Stanton lined to Ramage.

The Cats had a couple of runners on in the fifth with one out but Shores bore down and there was no scoring. Moore hit to right with one out and went to second on Rollings' single to center. The usually hard-hitting Riley popped to Turgeon. Jim jawed a bit with Kane, and Harry was riled but Jake Atz came in from the first base coaching lines and made peace. Bonowitz fouled to Swenson.

Double Play Halts Spuds

A double play prevented the Spuds from tallying. Lapan opened with a single to left and went to second on Shores' sacrifice, Walkup to Riley. Benton's second hit, a single back of second, knocked down by Ramage, sent Lapan to third. Turgeon hit into a double play started by Richardson and finished by Ramage and Riley.

Fort Worth went ahead in the sixth. Cobb doubled to left, Jenkins barely reaching the ball at the fence. Richardson singled to center, Cobb scoring. Bischoff sacrificed, Stanton to Turgeon. Turgeon went into right for Ramage's left. Walkup lined a hit to center, Richardson scoring the second run. Benton took Moore's liner.

Bonowitz grabbed Fitz' drive. Lamb singled to center, his second hit. Rollings made a sensational catch of Jenkins' foul. Swenson hoisted to Moore.

Lamb raced into foul territory for Rollings' loft. Fitzgerald was under Riley's fly. Bonowitz grounded to Swenson.

Cobb Relieves Shores

Stanton, Lapan and Eldred, batting for Shores, failed to get on.

Herb Cobb went to the hill in the eighth and passed Joe Cobb, first up. Lamb went back for Richardson's poke. Swenson made a corking stop of Bischoff's grounder and forced Cobb at second on a toss to Turgeon. Ramage doubled to right, Bischoff stopping at third.

Walkup was called out on strikes. Benton singled to left. Rollings made a great stop and throw of Turgeon's grounder and threw out Pete at first, Benton going to second. Rollings fell but captured Fitzgerald's foul and came up with the ball after a somersault. Lamb flied to Bischoff.

Moore lifted to Fitzgerald in the ninth. Jenkins came in for Rollings' fly. Riley singled to center. Riley stole second. Bonowitz fanned.

Walkup tossed out Jenkins. Swenson singled to center. Ramage had a double play in front of him but dropped Stanton's grounder after starting a throw and both runners were safe. Lapan shed a harsh liner to Rollings and Swenson was doubled at second.

Barr Banishes Seven When Bears Win in 8th, 7-4

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 16. (AP)—The Buffs today almost won a ball game, but in the eighth inning Penner lost his control, or Umpire Barr lost his temper, and the San Antonio Bears scored six times to win, 7 to 4, and sweep the three-game series.

As a result of the heated debate as to whether Penner had lost his control, Umpire Barr chased Manager Snyder, Selph, Littlejohn, Whitworth, Lindsey, Hallahan and Carleton from the park. Score:

MAKES LONG SWIM

DANZIG, Aug. 16. (UP)—Otto Kemmerich, noted long distance swimmer, today completed a swim from Pillau to Zoppot, a distance of approximately 100 kilometers (about 63 miles) in 43 hours and 15 minutes.

Notes of the Game

Mike Cvengros will hurl the opener today at San Antonio.

The victory cost the Cats the services of "Pig" Newton, the rookie outfielder, for several days; probably the duration of the season. Newton was hit on the wrist by one of Shores' fast shoots in the second inning, and painfully injured. He had succeeded Ralph Shinners, sold to Toronto, in right field and his injury leaves the Cats without a third gardener.

In their winning streak of 17 games the Spudders took 14 games out of 15 on their home stand.

Victims and number of games were Waco, three; San Antonio, three; Beaumont, two; Houston, four and Fort Worth, two.

Other notable achievements on the home stand was the increasing of his lead in home runs to 24 by Jenkins, and the winning of his 19th game by Steengrafe.

The Spudders only had four assists, three of which were made by Swenson.

Rollings accepted eight chances, an unusual number for a third baseman, in his display of superb fielding.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

COMING EVENTS cast their shadows and omens of portent indicate that Oklahoma City and Tulsa will be in the Texas league next year. A recent news story from Topeka, home of Dale Gear, president of the Western league, is to the effect that that loop will be reorganized next season, with three northern cities supplanting the three southern towns now in the circuit. Gear, it seems, is convinced that Amarillo can't carry on for another season, wise reasoning in view of baseball financial difficulties in that town this year. So he and his other club owners are looking around with the view of dropping Amarillo and permitting Tulsa and Oklahoma City to withdraw from the circuit to enter the Texas league.

◊ ◊ ◊

The plan of the Western league is to reorganize in the north, with franchises placed at Kansas City, Kan., St. Joseph and Sioux City. That reorganization only will be the salvation of the Western league is certain. The wonder of it is that the league, with its terrific burden of transportation imposed in long jumps, has weathered the storms of adversity this long. Placing of a club in Kansas City, Kan., is of course contingent upon the consent of George Muhlebach, owner of the Kansas City club of the American association. It is rumored that Muhlebach, himself, may control a Western league team in the Kansas side of Kansas City, and that under those conditions he would not be unwilling to waive territorial rights.

◊ ◊ ◊

THE WESTERN LEAGUE will be better off without Tulsa and Oklahoma City, and those Sooner towns will be more satisfied in the Texas league than in the Western. All the natural rivalry and interest of the Oklahoma burgs lies in the Texas loop territory, while they have nothing in common with the northern cities of the Western. Assuming that Tulsa and Oklahoma City enter the Texas league, it would make a 10-club circuit, as all of the towns in our wheel now are successful and going ahead with ambitious plans for next season. Possibly in the future, should a weakness develop among one or two towns, the league would be altered to eight clubs again. But that is looking ahead unnecessarily. There is no desire, nor no reason now to drop any of the cities now comprising the Texas league, and so long as those towns hold their own financially they will retain franchises. It will, therefore, be up to all the towns, and this goes in particular, of course, for the smaller cities, to maintain their own.

◊ ◊ ◊

TULSA AND Oklahoma City in the Texas league would help baseball in Wichita Falls. It would add interest of fans in Oklahoma towns adjoining the Texas border, a few miles from Wichita Falls. I think the rivalry between the Oklahoma cities would center mainly on Wichita Falls, Fort Worth and Dallas and to Houston, to a certain extent. Oklahoma City fans never have forgotten the hectic pennant race of 1909, when the Mets, as that town's team was then called, battled the Houston club for the pennant, losing out by a game or two in the last series of the season. Oklahoma City was a successful member of the Texas league in those days, with a population of hardly more than 50,000, until a business depression and a losing ball club combined to cause its loss of franchise along about in 1911. Now, with populations of more than 100,000 each, Oklahoma City and Tulsa rank as among the foremost cities of the southwest and their addition would only go further to make the Texas league what it is now—one of the fastest loops of all minor balldom.

Wichita State Wins From City National

Wichita State bank baseball team upset the dope Thursday afternoon on the Junior college diamond when they defeated the City National bank nine, 9 to 3.

Paul Landis let the fast-going City National down with only five scattered hits. He also led the batting for the day with three hits in four trips to the plate, which included a double. He scored two runs himself and drove in three more.

The Security National bank team management has been working to strengthen its club for the final spurt and this afternoon they will face the test of beating off the speedy First National team, who at the present time is battling the City National to a standstill.

Texas Electrics and Katy Loom Evenly Matches for Title Series

City Amateur Championship Play to Start Saturday With Double Header to Conclude Competition Sunday

Playing the first game of the all-city amateur baseball title series the Katy Railroaders and Texas Electrics clash Saturday at Spudder park at 4 o'clock.

The Railroaders are champions of the City league having come through both halves of the season in first place. Texas Electrics won the Twilight league title in a play-off three weeks ago when they defeated the hard-hitting Panhandle Longhorns for the first time in three years to win a Twilight league championship.

Although finishing the last half of the season with only three teams in the race the Twilight league was composed of much harder competition than was the City league.

The City league being organized later than the Twilight loop did not afford evenly matched teams, as the Railroaders outclassed the other three clubs with a team that has the appearance of a good match for the Electric company nine.

In hitting the Electrics hold a slight advantage having a team average of .324 while the Railroaders hit .311.

Katy outclasses the Electrics in the pitching averages having amassed the high average of .809 while the Electrics percentage totals .682. Lefty Watson, Monk Moore, Tom Hall and E. R. Stephenson will shoulder the pitching duties for the railroad club in opposition to Lefty Robertson, Roney Glidewell, and Smoke Lupher for the Electrics.

The two left-handers of the clubs will probably oppose each other on the mound for the game Saturday with Hall and Stephenson opposing Glidewell and Lupher in the double header Sunday at 2:30 o'clock.

Admission to the games will be 50 cents for adults with no charge for children under 15 years of age.

Western Loop To Reorganize

Gear Says Cardinals To Operate Franchise

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug 16. (AP)—Tentative plans for reorganization of the Western league, effective next year, were announced today by Dale Gear, president of the circuit.

Gear said that St. Louis Cardinals had agreed to take over the Amarillo franchise and that four cities, Kansas City, Kan., Topeka, Kan., Sioux City, Iowa, and Colorado Springs, Colo., were being considered as the Texas city's successor in the league.

The league president said he believed Tulsa and Oklahoma City would be willing to stay in the league should the Amarillo franchise go to Kansas City. He added, however, that Tulsa and Oklahoma City proposed withdrawals from the league were not being considered at this time.

Gear said Amarillo was "not quite big enough" to support a Western league franchise although he considered it a good baseball city.

SPUDS DEPART ON LONG TREK

Play 13 Days Before Return Home August 30

Our Spudders take the road today. They open a 13-day trek, on which 14 games are scheduled, with contests today and tomorrow at San Antonio. Then they move to Waco for a double-header Sunday and games Monday and Tuesday. They play at Houston August 22 and 23; the next three days at Beaumont and conclude the journey with three days at Shreveport, returning home August 30 for a two-game series with Shreveport.

September 1, the Spudders play at Dallas and the next day are at Fort Worth for three days, including a double-header September 3, Labor day. They are at Dallas September 4 and then return home to conclude the season, with the Steers here September 5, 6 and 7, and Fort Worth winding it up September 8 and 9.

This leaves 25 games, only seven of which are at home, before engaging in the league championship playoff with Houston, a series that seems a certainty, and which in fact doubtless will be assured while the champions are on the present trip.

Joe Ray Closes Career With Victory in Dublin

DUBLIN, Aug. 16. (UP)—Joie Ray closed his athletic career with a glorious victory in the marathon run in the Tailteann games, the Irish Olympics, today, covering the 26 miles, 385 yards, from Navan to Dublin in 2 hours, 31 minutes, 25 2-5 seconds.

Ray led during the entire last half of the race and won by a comfortable margin. The crowd gave him a great ovation as he crossed the finish line.

Stytler, South Africa, was second and Adams, Scotland, third.

Ray's time bettered that made by the French Algerian, El Ouafi, in winning the Olympic marathon, August 5. El Ouafi's time was 2:32:57, Ray finishing fifth in the Olympic race. Ray's time also bettered the Olympic record of 2:32:35 4-5 made by H. Kolehmainen, Finland, at Antwerp in 1920.

U. S. ATHLETE WINS

It is estimated that the tourist season, March to September, takes a total of 250,000 American visitors to England.

STILL WEARING 'HIGH HAT,' MR. TUNNEY SAILS FOR EUROPE

GENE LUNCHES WITH FIANCEE

Goes Abroad to "Get Away From Many Things"

By SAM LOVE
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (UP)—Still cursed by the "high hat" which he wears a trifle less gracefully, may, than George Bernard Shaw, Gene Tunney left his gloves and the geese hanging high today to sail for Europe on the liner Mauretania to engage in gentlemanly pastimes as the fellow of gentleman.

One hint he dropped as to his future plans, which in view of the fact that a Greenwich Village prize fighter is about to marry into a $40,000,000 fortune and the social register, was of burning news value, Tunney broadly hinted that he and his fated bride, Miss "Polly" Lauder, heiress to one of the Carnegie fortunes, would spend their honeymoon in Florida.

"We'll see you in Florida next winter," the ex-leather pusher unbending as best he could, remarked to the last reporter to leave the Mauretania stateroom today.

This particular reporter had seen Gene at Miami beach place last winter. He was overwhelmed.

To Winter in Florida

"With the family and everything?" the reporter asked.

"I hope to tell you," assured the Shakespearean scholar.

Otherwise, it must be sadly set down, Champion Tunney's farewell message to America was sadly lacking in hot stuff.

The champion—for although he has technically retired, no acceptable substitutes are filling engagements—had luncheon and spent the afternoon with his $40,000,000 fiancee. Reporters and photographers were searching the town for him, but they could no more find Tunney than could the late Tammas Heeney, New Zealand strong boy.

The best pug in the world then sailed for Europe and a walking trip over the continent with Thornton Wilder, a novelist, with such a classical style that the Pulitzer prize committee awarded him last year's prize with Hosannahs at finding a real classicist among America's pen pushers and typewriter thumpers at last.

"In his dual personality of happy fiance and unhappy box-fighter, Gentleman Gene arrived at the pier at 4:30 p. m., exactly half an hour before sailing.

Gene's Brother With Him

His brother, Detective Tunney, a man of fewer words than the $2,000,000 champion, was with him, along with three policemen sweltering in blue uniforms.

A mob of goofs was waiting at the pier, and they made for Gene like the sisterhood used to make for the late Rudolph Valentino. They pushed around him, despite the police, slapped him on the back, pulled at his clothes, pawed him, and assured him that he "was the boy."

Tunney tried to be nice about the mauling. In fact, he was nice. He lifted his hat—when he could get it off his head in the roughhouse—and murmured, "thank you," and "good of you" to the crowd.

One aboard the Mauretania, the champion scuttled like a prize rabbit to the stateroom of Leonard Hanna, a nephew of the former boss of the Republican party, and a member of the select party traveling with him to Europe.

There he braced his feet wide apart and fixed a delegation of reporters with the stare of the ancient mariner. The champion was winded, and he barked like a second lieutenant of marines who was still slightly damp behind the ears and was afraid the first sergeant suspected it.

As Usual—Gene Talks

"I'll do all the talking now," commanded the champion. "I won't answer any questions, and I don't want any questions put, because I don't intend to answer.

"This is simply because, in the first place, I haven't got the time. And secondly, there are 30 reporters here, at least, who will ask at least 2400 questions.

"I have not committed myself to any business. Any reports to that effect are untrue. At the present, I am not considering any business offers, and I will not consider any until I return. If any reports come out during my absence abroad of any business affiliations they are erroneous."

The champion was breathing easier but the reporters were still on the ropes.

"I am going abroad for a nice trip," he added, "and I hope to get away from many things."

"The newspapers and fight people?" queried an upstart.

"There! No questions!" admonished the champion.

"It's tough medicine," he added, "but it's all a part of the game."

This one was a puzzler. It broke up the party and the Mauretania departed shortly afterward.

Tunney had been the guest of honor at a luncheon given by William Powell and Hanna, both of whom were in his going-abroad party. The luncheon was in Powell's New York apartment, and Miss Lauder with the pugilist's prospective mother-in-law, Mrs. George Lauder Jr., were there, along with Sam Pryor and James T. Bush, vice president of the Equitable Trust company.

Tunney apparently spent the entire afternoon until he left for the boat with Miss Lauder in Powell's apartment.

Three Men Put to Sea In Small Motor Boat

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (US)—Bound across the ocean in a 32-foot motor boat, George V. V Brothers, his brother, John, and Charles A. Banfied put out to sea today.

With the pennant of the Pensacola yacht club fluttering at the masthead, the intrepid navigators weighed anchor.

They are bound for Cadiz, Spain, by way of Bermuda, the Azores, and Lisbon, Portugal—a distance of some 3200 miles which they hope to make in twenty-one days.

A Revere Rouse

CLEVELAND.—While Paul Revere advised "one if by land, and two if by sea, and I, on the opposite shore will be," Elmer J. Lynch wrote a note to Mrs. E. Groves with a bit of ribbon saying: "If you want me to meet you at the high school pin this on the lace curtain in your room." Mrs. Groves showed the note to her husband, who, with authorities, met and arrested Lynch.

Runyon's Operative Pays Visit To Shelby, Scene of Ring Fiasco

Memory of That Dempsey-Gibbons Fight Still Rankles and They're Indifferent to Mr. Solly Harris

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—One of my veteran operatives, A-99, otherwise Mr. Solly Harris, has just returned from a trip of exploration to Shelby, Montana, the seat of the famous battle of the busted banks, between Jack Dempsey, the Manassa man mauler, and Thomas Gibbons, of Minnesota.

Mr. Harris was the first pugilistic white child born in Shelby, so to speak. I mean to say he was the first offspring of the sour science to arrive on the spot after it was definitely decided that Dempsey and Gibbons would really meet there. Mr. Harris went in the capacity of publicity man, or what have you, and he remained just long enough to sweep out after it was all over.

It was there that Mr. Harris acquired a curious habit that has stuck with him to this day. It is the habit of walking on his heels. Some thought that he acquired this habit from the steady reverberation of the punches that used to hit Old Jack Thompson, the Senegambian, who was managed by Mr. Harris, but such is not the case.

In the days of his residence in Shelby the rain fell constantly on the heads of the just and the unjust, and also on the newspapermen gathered out thar in the wilds of Montana, who were neither. That is they were neither just, or unjust. They were neutral. There were no sidewalks in Shelby in those days, and the little puddles gathered underfoot.

Why He Walked on Heels

Wherefore Mr. Harris had to walk on his heels to avoid the puddles, and he did so much walking on his heels, especially going down to the railroad station to meet the incoming newspaper men that he never got over it.

Mr. Harris became widely famous in those halcyon days as the owner of the only room with bath in Shelby. It was in the leading hotel, called the Rainbow. Mr. Harris would have taken a bath at proper intervals in those times but for the fact that his bathtub was always tenanted by Samuel Potts Hall, the Chicago sports scribe, or Mr. Hippius Herbert Igoe, of New York, or by bottles of beer.

None the less, it was a bathtub, and wayfarers came from all over Montana to view the strange spectacle. Oddly enough, Mr. Harris walked right into that same room when he arrived in Shelby the other day, and the bathtub was still there, but it was minus Mr. Hall and Mr. Igoe, and even the bottles of beer. A fellow from Butte that Mr. Harris never met before in his life was occupying it.

"They've got another story on the rainbow," reports Mr. Harris. "The town looks quite prosperous, what with oil fields, and all. I didn't say much about the Dempsey-Gibbons fight to the citizens, because I didn't know but what some of them might still be a little touchy on the subject."

"Didn't you see Mayor Jim Johnson?" I demanded, reproachfully.

"Oh, yes, I saw the mayor," replied Mr. Harris. "He recognized me at once, but it seems the statute of limitations has run against everyone connected up with the fight, except maybe Jack Kearns, so Mayor Jim only said 'Hello.' He asked about Kearns' health. He said he hoped it isn't any too good.

Mayor Jim Johnson was one of the loyal citizens of Shelby who were behind the Dempsey-Gibbons fight. They are still behind it. As you may recall, if you are familiar with your history of the sour science, that a number of banks busted right in the citizens' faces after J. Leo McKernan, otherwise Kearns, had dusted out the tills of the town, and it was rumored that Mayor Johnson himself was singed in the explosion.

"He looked all right," says Mr. Harris.

"I guess he's got over it, though he may never look the same again."

It wasnt Mayor Jim Johnson who started the thing, however. A bunch of the boys were whooping it up in the back room one night, when up spoke Brave Loy Molumby, or someone, and said:

"Lets put on a big prize fight."

No sooner said than done. They promised J. Leo McKernan, otherwise Kearns, $300,000 for Jack Dempsey, while Thomas Gibbons, optimistic fellow, took a percentage for his.

They built a fine pine bowl hard by the town of Shelby and all hands adjourned westward to see what might come of it. Well they paid J. Leo McKernan something on account, but didn't meet the balance, and for a time it looked as if there might be no fight.

Finally, J. Leo McKernan said he'd take over the gate and see if he could get anything out of that, and the fight went forward. I believe J. Leo wound up with around $270,000, counting what was paid him on the guarantee, and what he took in at the gate that day. You could buy a first class ringside seat for a half pint of redeye half an hour before ring time.

I recall Mr. Solly Harris the night after the fight concealing himself under a lower berth in Mr. Jim Kearney's special train out of Shelby, seeking escape from Montana. Mr. Harris was never rewarded for his feats of publicity on behalf of the fight, and it was every man for himself.

He took Jack Thompson out there to appear in a preliminary on the card, but J. Leo McKernan couldn't spare enough change for such an elaborate program. I never heard how old Jack Thompson got out of Shelby. Perhaps he was under the berth with Mr. Harris.

"I saw Loy Molumby in Great Falls," said Mr. Harris. "He seems to be doing O. K. I took the pictures of the Tunney-Heeney fight out there with me, leaving New York the night after the battle, but it was simply astonishing how the folks didn't care to look at Mister Tunney.

"I went to Butte, figuring I'd clean up there, sure. The first day the Dempsey-Tunney pictures played there a year ago they took in $3,000. Mine drew only about $800. It was just as bad in Great Falls. They didn't want to see anyone but the old man mauler, even in pictures. I would have wigwagged out at that if a batch of boxing pictures hadn't come into the state on me so I sold out to a fellow who wanted to play the very small towns with them, and came home.

"Boxing pictures? Why, pictures that were taken under cover—not the authorized pictures," elucidated Mr. Harris.

"They were showing them for about half what I was asking. I guess Kearns got all the loose money there ever was out in that neck of the woods for the fight racket, anyway."

PARELLI MEETS TURK MATMAN

Kala Pasha Foe for Joe Next Tuesday Night

Kala Pasha, the roughouse Turk, Tuesday night will try to do what half a dozen other wrestlers recently to appear here have failed—pin Joe Parelli, Italian welterweight, for the best two of three falls.

Kala Pasha, who last appeared in Wichita Falls about two years ago when he defeated Joe Kopecky, in one of the roughest matches of local history, is "fast as greased lightning" and a lot rougher than Dutch Mantell, if that's possible, according to Promoter Alex B. Ross.

Parelli and Kala Pasha meet in the main feature of the weekly athletic card to be presented at Spudder park with three boxing exhibitions as preliminary side dishes.

The feature boxing engagement of the card will be a tilt between Country Boy Owens and Howard Jernigan. Country Boy will be in the ring Tuesday night for the first time in three months, having been out of operations with a broken arm, sustained in a bout with a refractory Ford truck. Owens is determined to give Jernigan a good lambasting for the sake of family honor. Jernigan, recently gave Johnny Owens, the Country Boy's brother, more than he could take.

Lefty Hemie and Johnny Owens meet in the second preliminary for four rounds, while the first preliminary will be between two 90-pounders, Budd Scott of Electra, and Little Boy Blue of Wichita Falls. The Scott-Blue engagement will be the first bout of a series for the paperweight championship of West Texas. A gold medal to remain up for two months has been posted by Harry Katz for the paperweight eliminations.

Bill Barred From East-West Tennis

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (AP)—Bill Tilden will not be allowed to play on the eastern team in the East vs. West tennis matches Friday and Saturday at Forest Hills, it was announced today by P. Schuyler Van Bloem, vice president of the Eastern Lawn Tennis association and member of the committee in charge of organizing the eastern team.

Van Bloem said his committee reached this decision because "it felt it would not be sportsmanlike to use a player against whom charges are pending."

Tilden, accused of violating the amateur player-writer rule, is to be "tried" by the United States Tennis association Aug. 24.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Each day science adds a slice of information to the glossary of hokum.

Now we discover that anger increases secretion in the suparenal gland.

The suparenal gland is in the retail sugar business.

Unfortunately, the suparenal gland is somewhere in your neck. It would be great if it were in your pocket where sugar meant something.

Every time you get angry this gland secretes a little more sugar.

In other words the madder you become the sweeter you get.

If this is true then the next war will be fought with lollipops.

When you toss a sugar bowl at the wife and she pays off with a red beet, that is not a family quarrel.

It is the language of flowers set to music.

When David lowbridged Goliath with a chocolate-covered grenade, their rendevous was not a duel. It was only a sugar date.

Dave smacked the big boy with a bon-bon.

When a traffic cop smears you with a plaster for obstructing detours, it is only because he loves candy.

When you take a bite out of his ear it is because you have a sweet tooth.

And when the judge gives you 30 days inside of Stone mountain, it is because he knows there is happiness in every cell.

Science may be right this time, but we suspect that mice will continue to nibble at sugar and lions will gobble meat. You cannot convince us that a leopard can change his spots for after-dinner mints or that a grizzly on the loose is a sweet thing.

Still, there is something in the idea of the suparenal gland making honey. After a man has been pushed around in the subway, flattened by a few taxicabs, insulted by waiters and gyped by ticket speculators, we can readily imagine that the whirring of the motors in his suparenal glands has converted him into an all-day sucker.

Man Returned to Jail to Serve Short Term On Old Conviction

Within two hours after he had returned to Burkburnett Thursday noon, a man convicted here of a misdemeanor six years ago was brought back to the Wichita county jail to serve a sentence of 30 days.

After he was convicted and had lost an appeal the Burkburnett man jumped his bond and left Texas. For six years he waited, hoping the law would forget, and Thursday he returned to Burkburnett.

W. G. Bralley, sheriff, sent Dick Morris, deputy, to Burkburnett, the wanderer was arrested and returned to Wichita Falls. He told Sheriff Bralley that he had sufficient money to pay the fine of $200 which was levied upon him at the time of his conviction.

Bell Eliminated In East Tennis

Doeg Victor in Five Sets; Mercur Beats Lott

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 16. (US)—If Fritz Mercur, former Lehigh university star, had played on the 1928 French Davis cup team, America might have won no matches at all.

For the second time within two days Mercur whipped a United States internationalist, when he conquered George Lott, third in the national ranking, 8-6, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3 in the eastern turf court play at the Westchester Biltmore Country club today.

The day before, Mercur had beaten William T. Tilden, 2nd, himself, and following that extraordinary deed, defeating Lott came easy to the Bethlehem, Pa., contestant, 15th in the country listing.

Mercur's opponent in the finals, scheduled for Sunday, will be John Doeg, the stalwart Californian who attends Stanford university. Doeg put out Berkley Bell of Texas, 20-year-old marvel, who eliminated Frank Hunter, another of the Davis cup squad, in the quarter-finals The score was 1-6, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

Terrill School Plans Grid Drill

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 16.—Announcement that the football training camp for the coming season at the Terrill school will open Sept. 12, to last ten days, has just been made by M. B. Bogarte, head master at Terrill. The camp will be held at the Shrine mosque, on the banks of Lake Worth.

Athletic Director Harry A. Faulkner, who put on the gridiron a state championship eleven last fall for Terrill, is expected to return from Camp Lincoln, in Minnesota, this week to begin operations for another big year in athletics, Bogarte said.

With four of last year's football stars returning, and a wealth of good material enrolled, prospects are good for another championship squad. Coach Faulkner will build his team around Roy Key, captain, who was all-state academy and last year; Paul Hardcastle, all-state half; Bob Hall, giant tackle, and Ronald Fagan, last year's quarter.

The Terrill track team, which ranked among the strongest in the United States in academy class last spring, will enlist all of the high point winners again this season.

On the football schedule for the coming season are games with San Marcos Baptist academy, Allen academy, Dallas academy, S. M. U. freshmen and Texas university freshmen, the last named being the home-coming game for Terrill, to be played in Dallas at Fair park stadium on Nov. 9.

COUNTY AUDIT IS EXPLAINED

Nicholson in Statement On Action

The audit of the books of Wichita county which cost the county $14,875, was ordered by the commissioners court only after they had been twice instructed to order such an audit by grand juries in the county, according to an announcement made by County Judge E. W. Nicholson.

The audit, Judge Nicholson explained, was not made by the county auditor because his records were among those included in the special audit and it was not lawful for him to work on these.

"The audit," Judge Nicholson said, "was advertised and awarded on competitive bids, as required by law, and was awarded to the lowest responsible bidder.

"The commissioners had the audit made from 1910 to 1927 to adjust the matter of the Kerr trust fund, and from 1916 to connect up with the last special audit of the books of other county officers.

"This audit cost $14,875, but the county has already received over $15,000 which it could not have received until this special audit was made.

"Personally," Judge Nicholson continued, "I favored an audit running from January 1, 1927, as everything back of four years was barred by limitation and I wrote an order to have the audit start with Jan. 1, 1923, but the commissioners changed the order to read Nov. 1, 1916, in order to connect up with the last audit made.

"The commissioners court," he concluded, "did not order the special audit because it wanted to but because it had been demanded by two separate grand juries."

Hoover Talking Movies Will Be Distributed

Vet Jack Britton Hands Lacing to Youthful Foe

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (UP)—Jack Britton, former world's welterweight champion, decisively outpointed Tony Vaccarelli in a 10-round fight at the Queensboro stadium tonight.

Britton conceded some 20 years but brought all the ring lore of 25 fight campaigns into the ring. Vaccarelli landed but one clean punch, a looping right to jaw in the 10th round.

Ducking, feinting, jabbing and riding punches with amazing ease, Britton made a show of his young opponent.

Britton weighed 148 and Vaccarelli 144½.

BLAIR FAVORS WEEKS' PLAN

Former Wichitan Discusses Colonization

Wylie Blair of Dallas, former wholesale groceryman of Wichita Falls, made a short address at a meeting of the agricultural committee of the chamber of commerce Thursday and discussed the Weeks small farm development plan in California.

Mr. Blair said he had seen the Weeks colony there and in addition to approving it, believed it is something which will be entirely practical in the Wichita irrigated valley.

The control of leaf worm, boll worm and other cotton crop pests was discussed at the meeting. After the meeting, J. T. Harrell, chairman, advised every farmer to watch his fields extremely closely for the leaf worm. "If there is any sign of eggs, prepare for the hatching so that as soon as they hatch they may be sprayed and killed before they damage the crop," he said.

"We have an excellent potential crop in the ground, and by exercising great care can protect it from the pests."

To the Voters of Wichita County:

I desire to express to you through the public press my due appreciation of the support given me in the late primary for the office of Tax Assessor and to thank you most kindly for the votes given me for said office.

While it is true, I did not receive enough votes in the first primary to put me in the run-off, still I appreciate the votes of my friends with as much gratitude as if I had been nominated for the office and I express to you my sincere thanks for the kindness shown me.

As to the second run-off primary on August 25th, next, it is my purpose to vote for Max Shumake, who, in my opinion, is thoroughly competent, experienced and trustworthy. Max is sick in bed and needs the help of his friends. I believe that he would make a good Tax Assessor. My friends, of course, will exercise their own judgment in voting for that candidate of their own choice, regardless of my personal views.

B. L. TREVATHAN
Former Candidate for Tax Assessor.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (AP)—The cotton marekt showed renewed firmness today after early declines. Prices made new high ground for the movement in late trading, December advancing from 18.67 to 19.39, a net advance of 46 points and a recovery of 127 points from the low level Monday. December closed at 19.27 with the general market closing steady at net advances of 27 to 36 points.

The opening was barely steady at a decline of 18 to 23 points, active months soon showing net losses of 23 to 28 points under liquidation or reselling by recent buyers, influenced by relatively easy Liverpool cables and hope of clearing weather in the eastern belt.

October and January both sold off to 18.65 under these initial offerings but selling was not general or aggressive and the market soon turned firmer on reports of further rains in the eastern belt and increasing complaints of damage by boll weevil in various sections of the South. After showing net advances of about 24 to 35 points, the market reacted partially under realizing by early buyers while some southern selling here was attributed to hedging.

Demand continued, however, and best prices of the day were reached in late trading when October sold at 19.38 and January at 19.34 or about 41 to 47 points net higher. The close was 12 or 13 points off from the best under realizing.

Exports today were 2,266 bales, making 114,438 so far this season. Port receipts 2,351. U. S. port stocks 489,374.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 16. (AP)—Advance of approximately $3.50 a bale followed an early decline in the cotton market today when shorts driven to cover by unfavorable crop and weather reports found contracts scarce.

October deliveries sold up from 18.08 to 18.77 and closed at 18.67 compared with 18.32, yesterday's closing quotation. The general market closed steady at net advances of 34 to 39 points.

Liverpool cables showed decline of 9 to 10 points, the weakness theer being attributed to a large failure in Bombay, India. The local market opened easy in sympathy and some selling on the generally favorable weather over the belt helped the decline.

The market turned firmer on reports of continued heavy rains in the eastern section of the belt and on the stronger technical position of the market. There were also many advices of rapid deterioration of the growing crop and increasing weevil destructiveness which added to the firmness. Trading became quite active in the last hour and all months made new highs under pressure of covering by shorts in a narrow market. October advanced to 18.77, December 18.89 and January 18.90 or 68 to 71 points up from the early lows.

In the final trading there was some profit-taking and prices eased off 10 points.

Bulls Still Gallop On Stock Market As Call Money Rates Sink Lower

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (US)—Call money eased materially—time money held firm—and the stock market today moved higher. Liquidating group movements featured most of the list under cover of the rather sensational strength of a very few issues.

American smelting replaced Can as the outstanding bull leader with the advance of the latter limited by quite heavy profit taking. Shorts in Radio and the other technical corners were given another licking.

It was noticeable that offerings of stocks increased with each drop in the call money rate from 6 per cent renewal to 4½ per cent at the close.

At the same time although several brokers would have liked to make better time accommodations, they could get no better than 6¼ per cent and at the close there was only a little time money offered at 6½ per cent. Rail shares were brought forward at intervals but, not enjoying the technical position of the few active industrials, failed to attract material following.

Had the lower call rate represented any change in federal reserve policies, the time money charge would have dropped at the same time. The most powerful banks in the loan market here, when queried as to the wild fluctuations in call rates, again blamed it on the "bootleggers." As in May, they stated, a huge supply of corporate funds made a sudden appearance Wednesday, mostly from the west.

It is rather interesting that this should happen just when powerful interests in one of the few corporations with sufficient cash to produce an effect were making a stock market play in Can and a few other stocks. The banks also pointed out that for an institution to refuse to handle such business would mean loss of important accounts.

Those most active on the bull side expressed belief that there would be a favorable call money market for their operations for the next several sessions.

Valiant efforts were made to put General Motors in the lead, as the most active market group of the moment is desirous of running in the big shorts therein. They feel if they can peg the price at somewhat higher levels for a while the bears would cover.

Chrysler gave further indication that the pool was out and slipped while other motors moved up. It is learned that while the pool was slipping out of stock, the head of a prominent railway and automobile equipment company was induced to make a substantial investment by his brokerage advisers. International Nickel was another outstanding issue, adding to its gain on expectation that new financing announcement tomorrow will be accompanied by dividend increase.

Grain

GRAIN REVIEW
By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Aug. 16. (US)—With no great change in crop and export news, price fluctuations in the local grain market were largely of a technical character today. After an easy opening, wheat went lower and then rallied to close with advances of ⅝c to 1⅛c.

A very nervous tone in the September future kept corn traders fairly active all session. The course of prices was much the same as in wheat with closing quotations ¼c to 1⅜c higher. Oats were ⅛c to ¼c lower and rye ½c to 1c higher.

Scattered selling by commission houses and locals at the opening on unexpected weakness at Liverpool gave the wheat market a weak appearance and prices declined. Hedging pressure was fairly steady and the market was slow to rally. Trade was moderately active.

About mid-session the lower prices attracted enough short covering and new commission house buying to absorb the surplus and by the close prices had worked moderately higher than the previous day's finish.

For several days the corn market has been a rather nervous affair, with the trade inclined to wait for further developments. Today the September future started the session with a sharp decline, but later rallied and went substantially higher on buying by shorts and commission houses.

There was some scattered selling on reports of rain in some of the states where there have been recent fears of drought. This was counteracted by short covering and the deferred futures advanced in sympathy with September.

Some of the strength in corn was no doubt to Broomhall's Review which pointed out that while the wheat and other crops in Europe were average or better, the corn crop would again be short. After last season's experience with a potential heavy demand for corn from Europe the trade is a little reluctant to act quickly on this factor.

Cash offerings of corn lightened somewhat and with a fair commercial demand, prices ruled ½c to 2c higher with the basis firmly held. Local shipping sales, 46,000 bushels.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 16. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Killing classes of cattle found a slow and draggy outlet at steady and easier prices. Strictly choice yearlings were regarded fully steady with choice mixed steers and heifers at Chicago scoring $16.75. Grass fat feed stock has been under pressure throughout the week and present values are unevenly lower as compared with a week ago. Common to medium southwestern grassers ranged from $10-$12. Receipts were estimated at 25,100 as compared with 29,019 a week ago and 28,495 the same day last year.

Hogs reached the $13 mark in Chicago today; light receipts on the broad shipping demand were instrumental in forcing a general upturn of 10-25c around the 11-market loop. The aggregate supply estimated at 57,700, was about 6,000 short of last Thursday and 22,000 less than a year ago.

Fat lamb trade was slow at steady to 25c lower values, with range offering taking the brunt of the decline. Aged stock was little changed. Choice range lambs in Chicago brought $15. Offerings totaled around 47,000 an increase of 6,000 from a week ago but about the same as a year ago.

25 LOCATIONS IN WEST TEXAS

New Work Makes Gain In Permian Basin

SAN ANGELO, Aug. 16. (Spl.)—The Permian basin of West Texas got 25 new locations for oil tests last week, nine more than made during the previous week, bringing the total for the last 10 weeks to 263. The locations are in half a dozen counties, though the previous week's 16 were in seven counties. Three corrections on locations were announced this week, two in Runnels county and one in Midland county.

Winkler county continued to set the pace, just as it has done for the last several weeks, getting 10 of the 25 of last week. Pecos county got seven, Howard county got three, Ward and Irion counties each got a pair, and Concho county got one. Winkler county led the previous week with eight of the 16, Howard county getting three, Crane county a pair, and Pecos, Crockett, Ward and Midland counties each getting one.

Half of Winkler county's locations last week were made by Southern Crude Oil Purchasing company. Refined Oil Market Remains In Good Shape

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 16.—Mid-Continent refiners report gasoline markets strong and steady.

Both the 56-58, 450 endpoint, and 58-60, (437 ep) U. S. motor grades are held at 9 3-4 cents flat, and demand is good. The 60-62, 400 endpoint grade is stronger at 10 1-4 cents, while the 64-66, 390 endpoint, is at 10 5-8 cents, with the 375 endpoint at 11 cents.

Kerosene is stronger, too, the 41-43 grade being quoted at 6 cents, and supplies scarce. The 42-44 grade is held at 6 5-8 cents.

Natural gasoline manufacturers report no cessation in demand and all grades held at 10 1-4 to 10 5-8 cents a gallon.

The Standard Oil company of Louisiana has advanced the tankwagon price of kerosene one cent a gallon in Louisiana and Arkansas, making it as of Monday.

Visitors to Smith Mansion Find Real 'Southern Hospitality' On Front Porch

By PERCY SCOTT

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16. (UP)—Two characteristics of Gov. Alfred E. Smith are outstanding in conferences on the porch of the executive mansion, where the Democratic nominee and his political visitors discuss issues upon which the presidential election will pivot.

"We speak frankly," said the governor.

"We find an atmosphere of old-time southern hospitality," said the departing guests.

This week has found the governor host to several important party leaders. They have been men who were not favorable to the nomination of Governor Smith at the Houston convention. They have been men who were best described as "dry as dust." They come from a radically dry section into the camp of a man whose desire to modify the prohibition laws is unquestioned.

No Tension

Such a situation might develop a tense atmosphere.

At the executive mansion—on the porch—there is no tension.

"I take them around," the governor explained. "I show them the place and my menagerie."

Then, shifting his cigar, he adds: "We sit on the porch after dinner and talk about the campaign—and go to bed early."

Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, who arrived today for a conference with the governor, was met at the train. Like his predecessors this week—Sen. Carter Glass of Virginia, and Josephus Daniels of North Carolina—The Georgia senator became the guest of Governor Smith when he stepped from his train.

He went to the executive mansion; he saw the place; he visited the menagerie; he sat down to dinner with the nominee's family—and undoubtedly he sat on the porch and talked about the campaign.

Probably he went to bed early.

There is one thing quite certain. Those who sit on the executive mansion porch and talk about the campaign, speak frankly.

Talks About Speech

The nominee's speech of acceptance, which is printed and ready for distribution, plays an important part in those talks on the porch. He hears the reactions of his visitors to his speech, but—and this is frankly understood—there will be no changes.

Apparently no one expects any changes. The Solid South will be in the Democratic column, his guests have assured him. They may not agree with the nominee's exact attitude on some issues but fundamentally there is harmony.

They leave Albany—they leave the executive mansion porch—ready to swing their states into line.

Seminole Again Hits 300,000 Barrel Figure

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 16.—The 300,-000 barrel a day mark was passed again Wednesday morning by the Greater Seminole oil field, thanks to the new flush production in the Little River pool.

The actual output was 300,021 barrels from 1135 wells, an increase of 2445 barrels over Tuesday's production of 297,576 barrels from 1130 wells.

First gauges indicated the output was but 299,651 barrels, but a recheck added 370 barrels additional to Little River's total, making its total of 101,275 barrels, or 213 barrels less than the previous day.

Earlsboro and Maud also contributed to the gains.

The comparative production report follows:

Pools—	Wed	Wells	Tues
Little River	101,275	164	101,488
Bowlegs	56,349	326	56,043
Earlsboro	79,423	278	78,100
Semi. City	49,633	294	49,021
Searight	13,175	69	43
Maud	166	4	43
Totals	300,021	1135	297,576

Very, Very Kind

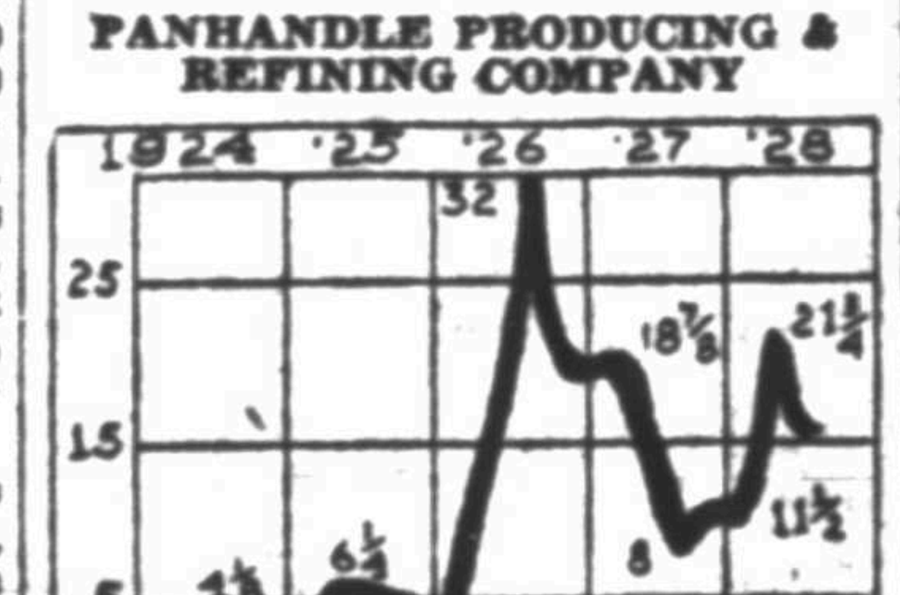

"Why are you leaving the party so early, Joe?"

"Oh, I've got to get the car home in time for dad to drive it to work."—Life.

SEA GIVES UP WAR CHAPTER

British Sub, Sunk in 1919, Raised to Surface

MOSCOW, Aug. 16. (UP)—The sequel to an unwritten chapter of the aftermath of the World war was revealed today when the soviet raids ethe British submarine L-55 with its cargo of human skeletons.

Acting on official information from the fort at Kronstadt that a fleet of four British mine-sweepers and a submarine lying in Kporsky bay, the Russian destroyers Agart and Gavril on June 4, 1919, steamed into the bay to give battle. The minesweepers fled, but the submarine was submerging—only her periscope showing—when the destroyers opened fire.

The submarine sank rapidly, carrying with her the entire crew of 41 men.

The incident was one of the many which occurred in the Baltic after the World war folowing the allies' hit-and-miss campaign against the famous German iron division commanded by the famous German manded by von der Goltz which had been operating in the Baltic states. Coming as it did in the mass of jumbled campaigns and counter-campaigns in the region, little attention was given the event, although the British themselves admitted that none survived the disaster. The submarine was comparatively new and had not joined the British grand fleet until the late summer of 1918.

After lying for 10 years in the rusty iron hulk of the ship, it was of course, impossible to identify any of the skeletons. The soviet's purpose in raising the ship was to determine the actual conditions under which it was sunk.

Admiral Hughes Sees Coolidge

CEDAR ISLAND LODGE, Wis., Aug. 16. (UP)—Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations, who came here at the express invitation of President Coolidge, spent the day in conference with the chief executive at the summer white house today.

Presumably they discussed the recently concluded Franco-British agreement limiting auxiliary craft.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur and General Lord, budget director, who were guests at the Lodge recently, discussed naval affairs with the president, but each limited his remarks to the American sea forces.

While it was generally understood that Hughes was here to make a detailed report to Mr. Coolidge of the Franco-British pact, the terms of which already have been made known by the state department, no official word was forthcoming at to the text of Hughes' discussion.

Hughes limited his views to the American naval situation when he conferred with newspaper correspondents at Superior early today. The navy construction bill, Hughes said, was in the hands of the senate. He refused to forecast whether the bill would pass when it comes up for consideration next December.

TAX COLLECTION TOTALS $6000

July Falls Below Other Months, Report Shows

Guy Raley, county tax collector, took in $6,036.93 in taxes during the month of July, his monthly report completed Thursday, shows. Of this amount $2,631.79 goes to the state and $3,405.14 goes to the county. Of the county tax, $422.73 will be alloted to the rural schools.

The collections for July are below those of any month for the present fiscal year, which began April 1, Mr. Raley said. Collections for the first four months of the fiscal year were $32,958.88.

Singing Convention At Cooper Church Sunday

The district singing convention will meet next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Cooper church, two miles east of Cashion, according to announcement made Thursday by J. S. Gore, secretary of the organization.

Everyone is invited to the meeting and singers are especially urged to attend, Mr. Gore said.

Texas Mother Knew Answer

"Yes, sir, I am certainly proud of my little boy," says Mrs. J. S. Bellah, 104 Huff Ave., San Antonio. "He's the picture of health as you can see, and I feel like he'll always be that way as long as I can get California Fig Syrup. I have used it with him ever since he was a year old. I knew what to give him for his colds and his feverish, upset spells because Mother used California Fig Syrup with all of us as children. I have used it freely with my baby and he loves it. It always fixes him up, quick."

In many homes, like this, the third and fourth generations are using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup because it has never failed to do what is expected of it. Nothing so quickly and thoroughly purges a child's system of the souring waste which keeps him cross, feverish, headachy, bilious, half-sick, with coated tongue, bad breath and no appetite or energy as long as it is allowed to remain in the little stomach and bowels. Fig Syrup gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act as Nature intends them to do, and helps build up and strengthen weak, pale and underweight children. Over four million bottles used a year shows its popularity. The genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years, always bears the word "California."

Talking sequences during the dramatic scenes and a vitaphone musical accompaniment add to the thrill of "State Street Sadie" the latest Warner Brothers presentation featuring Conrad Nagle and Myrna Loy in the leading roles.

This film, which comes to the Strand theater Friday, is an exciting and somewhat mysterious picture of crooks, and is particularly suited to those parts devoted to spoken dialogue. As we see it, definite touches of realism are added to the scenes in which the actors and actresses make use of spoken words.

◆ ◆ ◆

"State Street Sadie," is concerned with running down of a bank robber and gang leader known as "The Bat," who kills a policeman and attempts to pin the crime on an innocent man. There are scores of exciting scenes of the type that grip you until the final fadeout.

Myrna Loy is cast as Isobel, the daughter of the murdered policeman, who assumes the name as "State Street Sadie," and makes use of her charms to wheedle information from "The Bat." Conrad Nagle plays the part of Ralph Blake whose twin brother was the victim of "The Bat's" system. Their mutual efforts to solve the murder bring Isobel and Blake together and a romance is born.

◆ ◆ ◆

The supporting cast is a good one and includes William Russel who plays "The Bat," and Georgie Stone, as one of the gang. There is one thing we can say about "State Street Sadie," and that is, it's a mighty interesting film made vital through the medium of sound effects.

BALLOTS SENT BY AIR MAIL

County Clerk Retrieves Lost Time

The air mail was called into service Thursday by Miss Elizabeth Hall, county clerk, to enable Wichitans scattered over the United States to cast their ballots in the run-off primary of Aug. 25.

More than 50 absentees had left requests with the county clerk's office for ballots to be mailed them in order that they might vote. Due to failure of the Democratic state executive committee to get a certified list of state candidates to the county chairman, the ballots were delayed in printing so that voting prospects for those citizens of the county visiting in remote sections of the country looked exceedingly poor. Some might have time to mark their ballots and return them.

Ballots Lacking

The absentee ballots legally could have been mailed to the voters 10 days ago, but there were no ballots.

Wednesday was the first day for voting an absentee ballot at the office of the county clerk, and still there were no ballots. Thursday morning the certified list of candidates to state office was received from the secretary of the state committee, and about 10 o'clock Thursday morning a number of ballots were delivered to Miss Hall.

Before noon approximately 50 ballots had been mailed. Of this number about 40 went to Wichitans vacationing outside the state and these 40 each carried air mail stamps to insure quick delivery. Some of the ballots went to New York state; some are on their way to the Pacific coast.

Votes for some candidates are going to be saved by the air mail and the quick work of Miss Hall and her helpers in the county clerk's office.

Miller Unopposed

The official ballots contain 31 names, seven of which are those of candidates for state office. There are 15 contests. Although Barry Miller is unopposed on the ballot, his name was ordered printed because the law requires that before declared nominated a candidate must receive a majority of votes cast in his race.

In the first primary Mr. Miller was short of a majority and was thrown into the run-off with Tom Love. After Mr. Love's withdrawal from the race his name was omitted from the Wichita county ballot.

CUT TO PIECES

Negress Calls for Law When Flying Glass 'Injures' Her

A small scratch on the shoulder caused by a baseball being batted through a windshield by a boy at Eleventh and Baylor streets Thursday afternoon almost drove a negro woman into hysterics.

She was sitting in the car shouting "Lordy, Lordy, I'm cut to pieces," according to Elmer Thornton and F. B. Fountain, city detectives who answered the call from the police station.

The cut upon the negro proved just deep enough to draw blood. She was given first-aid treatment and allowed to go home, the detectives said.

REFINERY PAYS STATE TAXES

Raley Receivers $51,415.35 From American

Payment in full of county and state taxes due from receivers of the American Refining company and others, in the amount of $51,415.35 was announced Thursday by Guy C. Raley, county tax collector. The last payment received was for the estate of W. M. Priddy for the Fairview independent school district, amounting to $1,375.

These payments include taxes of the receivership properties for 1927 and prior years, Mr. Raley said.

Of the total amount received $45,562.44 is in state taxes and the balance is in taxes for independent school districts of Iowa Park and Fairview.

The amount represents payments from the American Refining company properties and seven other receiverships. These, with the amounts paid by each, include:

RADIO TOWER BEING BUILT

Steel Placed Atop Building For Station

Active construction of the 75-foot tower for radio station KGKO, the National Security Life Insurance station, atop the Perkins-Snider building started Thursday.

All day long, heavily laden trucks of steel beams and braces toiled from the Panhandle Steel works on the Burkburnett road to the building.

The curious crowds watched and saw the tops of the elevators opened so the beams could stick up the shaft as the elevator rose.

The first work in the construction of the tower is the reinforcing of the roof so it will at all times withstand a far greater weight and strain than the tower or storms will ever exert. This reinforcement consists of several tons of I beams, concrete and other steel work in which the legs of the giant towers will rest.

A generator room for the station is being built on the roof for a great part of the studio machinery. The studio offices and broadcasting rooms on the sixth floor of the building are being completely rebuilt, the chief feature being the sound proofing of the entire unit with an especially constructed celotex deadening material. The broadcasting rooms will be large enough to hold a large band or other musical organization.

The business manager of the station, A. C. Gilliam, is now making his permanent home here, but will continue to look after his interests in the Lone Star Broadcasting company at San Antonio.
