Taxpayers group wants clout

By Becky Werhan

Clout. Stated simply, that is what the newly formed taxpayers' association is after. In addition, the group wants to grow into "a body sympathetic to better county government" — a description offered by executive committee member Britt Dick.

Ninety-six interested taxpayers filled the Aransas County district courtroom Tuesday night, August 25, at the second organizational meeting of the group, which was originally stirred into action four weeks ago by the school board's proposal to increase property taxes by 26 percent.

The group managed to effect a three-cent decrease in the tax raise and while further protest of the tax increase is planned by the association, the need to broaden the purpose of the group has been realized and was stressed by several members Tuesday night.

"We need to form an association to fight taxes, offer opinions, goals and objectives to the elected bodies of this county," Dick told the group, opening the meeting which was moderated by Mitch Ammons.

Ammons, formerly a dean at Wharton Junior College, was elected interim chairman of the association. An interim executive committee was formed as well. Serving on the committee are Homer Faber, in charge of membership; Ed Brennan, in charge of issues; Britt Dick, public relations and media; Peggy Langley, telephone committee; James Metzner, liaison chairman; Althea Hardy, finance; J.C. Harlan, in charge of by-law formation and incorporation documents and Carol Prophet, head of the program committee.

Prior to the election of interim officers, the group heard from special guest Colonel Vic Penuel, head of the Corpus Christi Taxpayers Association.

Penuel told the group, "It takes an issue to get a group like this going. And if you get united over an issue and do it right, you'll gain clout."

Penuel gave a talk on "the trials and tribulations" of the Corpus group in order to enlighten the new association. He informed the members about the Corpus group's dues system, the need for incorporation (protection from law suits); the proper way to question official bodies and various legal ramification of taxpayers associations, in general.

Penuel spoke on the Victoria association and other area groups and invited all members of the Aransas County group to attend the next meeting of the statewide coalition of taxpayers' groups, to be held in Dallas on September 12.

"You have to have clout," said Penuel. "Don't ever point an unloaded gun. Be informed and inform your elected officials."

Penuel also stressed the fact that restraint and calm thinking was a necessity in such a group. "Face it, don't try to just fight it. A lot of hot water and personal attacks on elected officials will not get you anywhere."

Following Penuel's presentation, the group heard from guest Anna Warner. Warner, member of the Corpus Christi group's executive board, was responsible for the 20,000 signature petition involved in the recent Proposition 14 fight. She gave the group pointers on petitioning — "Have an issue", "Don't knock on doors", and "Know what you're fighting for" were points she stressed.

"Get together, stay together and work together," Warner told the crowd. Her last words were, "Go get 'em!"

The group then held elections and heard from member Ed Brennan, who informed them of a legislative article which leaves open the possibility of a petition drive to further fight the school board tax increase. A petition of 15,000 voters, delivered within 60 days of the board's decision, could mandate an election on the increase.

Brennan told the group, "We can do it!", a statement which elicited applause from all present.

An executive meeting of the interim board was held the following day and was described by Chairman Ammons as "productive."

"We covered a lot of ground," said Ammons, who stressed the need for a positive approach for the group. "We need to be positive for all the elected boards, the media and John Q. Public," said Ammons. "There's no room for negativism."

He continued, "We need a great deal of steam and speed at this point, in order to insure the strength of the group, but we're not a lynch mob. I can assure you that we're not going to see anyone act up or act inappropriate. We've got to maintain a positive outlook."

Dues for the association, set by the executive committee, are $5 per family per year and $2.50 per year for senior citizens.

The next meeting of the association will take place Tuesday, September 8, in the district courtroom, located at the north end of the county courthouse.

I'll go -- but do I have to wear shoes?

David Allen Parr and his mother, Mary Parr were doing the same thing last week that mothers and school children everywhere are doing about this time of year — buying new shoes for school. At Winn's on Wednesday David Allen had a hard time getting into this particular pair of sneakers and an even harder time making up his mind which pair to choose. David Allen will attend Rockport Elementary kindergarten, hopefully with shoes on, starting Monday. [Pilot Photo by Becky Werhan]

Nuclear plant nears completion

By Preston L. Pendergrass

BAY CITY (CN) — Despite continuing protests and challenges since it was announced in 1973, construction of the South Texas Project (STP) is moving ahead toward the projected completion date of all units in 1986.

When this huge, relatively silent plant goes "on stream," a large portion of South Texas will be assured a new source of electricity produced by nuclear energy in units that are expected to last at least a half-century.

STP officials are predicting the project will be completed and an operating license issued by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), an arm of Congress invested with the power to issue or withhold such licenses or to issue a restricted license.

Vocal public groups opposing the nuclear plant have had their day before the NRC during past hearings that began last May and will again lodge their protests when the hearings resume on September 14 at South Texas College of Law on San Jacinto Street in Houston.

Persons wishing to participate in the hearings are asked to call Graham Painter, Houston Lighting and Power Co. public affairs office in Houston, phone 713-229-7125.

The NRC has five members appointed for staggered terms from various geographical areas of the nation by the president at the request of Congress. He has the power of appointment, but cannot remove commission members.

Even though the NRC has full authority over nuclear plant licensing, builders of such installations make commitments to correct whatever the NRC finds wrong, as well as changes ordered by builders, during construction.

For this reason, STP owners and builders say they feel reasonably sure they will be granted an operating license when the time comes.

Owners and builders estimate they have spent at least a million dollars in legal fees and lost time defending STP in hearings as scores of their executives have been summoned to testify by the NRC.

Plant officials say they are often irritated by protests lodged with the NRC. Although they say they welcome what they call "competent criticism," the officials contend the protesters never get to the important issues. They do not provide an alternative to nuclear power.

The South Texas Project is jointly owned by a consortium composed of HL&P, which is pricipal owner and project manager; the municipally owned electric systems of the cities of San Antonio and Austin; and Central Power and Light Co.

These utilities will share the cost of STP and the electricity produced by the project in proportion to their degree of participation. HL&P has a 30.8 percent ownership in the project; San Antonio, 28 percent; Central Power and Light, 25.2 percent; Austin, 16 percent.

STP is located on a 12,300-acre site between Bay City and Palacios west of the Colorado River in Matagorda County. The plant is designed to provide electrical power to Houston, San Antonio, Austin and Corpus Christi.

The plant cost was pegged at $2.7 billion — at the last estimate. No current figure is available, but some officials in power circles have put the cost as high as $4 billion.

Two loosely-organized groups, one based in San Antonio calling itself "Concerned Citizens About Nuclear Power (CCANP)," and one in Bay City known as "Citizens for Equitable Utilities (CEU)" will continue the presentation of their views before the NRC when it resumes its hearings on September 14.

CCANP leaders want STP shut down for good. CEU officials disagree.

Said Lanny Sinkin, a founding member of CCANP, "We oppose nuclear power plants in general, but you don't have to be anti-nuclear to oppose this one (STP)." Sinkin is a University of Texas law student.

Peggy Buchorn, executive director of Bay City's CEU, says: "I don't see any reason for that plant to be shut down completely. Our only interest is to assure ourselves that it is built safely and with fiscal responsibility."

These views will be further expanded before the NRC, both group leaders said.

County commissioners approve drainage system for west side

Once again, the county commissioners are grappling with this peninsula's drainage problems. At the most recent regular meeting of the court, Wednesday, August 26, the commissioners gave the go-ahead for a much-needed drainage system emptying on the west side of the peninsula.

A series of outfall ditches are planned to run from the Fulton outlots through George Strickhausen's Spanish Woods unit to the old Sun Oil dock site on Copano Bay. The necessity for such a system has been emphasized repeatedly to the court by county engineer Tommy Griffith, who again appeared before the court with plans and a cost estimate.

Cost of the preliminary stage of the work alone is estimated at $20,000-$25,000. Actual field work cost is expected to near that figure.

When the cost factor appeared to be the only stumbling block to the court's approval to the planning stage, Griffith, who, with partner Jerry Brundrett, will be doing the work, suggested a monthly billing plan. "You can't put this thing off much longer," stressed Griffith. "You can pay us whenever you get the money. It needs to be done."

All commissioners and county judge John Wendell agreed that the present drainage system is lacking. Because of the rapid buildup of new businesses along Highway 35 North, present system capabilities are being pushed to the limit.

The only large ditch system which handles the north end runoff is the line running from the Fulton outlots, past the Whataburger and Live Oak Bank and emptying into Little Bay.

Griffith and Commissioner J.M. Spriegle recalled heavy rains in the past, particularly the tropical storm of September, 1979, that left the Highway 35 North area and Little Bay Shores flooded.

Griffith cited the "myriad of buildings" on the Highway 35 strip. Wendell added that several new shopping centers and the new Wal-Mart store would add to the overload. Large roofs, parking lots, curbs and gutters of business development increase the runoff of water.

Present at the meeting at Griffith's request was Michael Ingram, planner for the proposed Rockport Country Club Inc. The country club will have a 160-acre golf course, a factor cited by Griffith and Ingram as beneficial.

Ingram explained to the court that the course would be able to use runoff water in a storage lake necessary for the watering of the greens. He told the commissioners that whatever excess runoff the development had could go through the Copano west drainage route. "We wnat to work with you," said Ingram. "We need a direction, too. If we can get a uniform drainage system, this golf course and the development can have a positive impact on the overall drainage plan. We can diminish your load."

Despite Judge Wendell's disagreement with Ingram on the positive impact of the course, discussion continued.

Brought up by John Lee was the overall drainage situation of the county, including the poor runoff in his precinct, 1, which takes in the southern-most portion of the county.

Some discussion followed on the high cost of draining the whole county as effectively as possible. "What it might take is a bond issue," said Wendell, "and you know that that will not go in this county."

When the go-ahead on the system was given to Griffith, he told the court that work would start on the planning in a couple of weeks. When the actual digging starts, work will begin at the Sun Oil end of the ditch. The ditch will join an existing 1200-foot ditch section recently dug by the county at the north end of the Spanish Wood Unit One. Strickhausen, developer of Spanish Woods, has given the county 17 surface acres of right-of-way for the proposed system.

In other action, the court approved the closing of a portion of Stanley street, running behind J.C.'s Grocery, off Market.

Also approved by the commissioners was the addition of a minute order from the city of Fulton, okaying county sanitarian Harold Scheer to perform services for the city of Fulton, working in the same capacity as he now serves Aransas County.

Formal approval was given to the firm of Ogletree, Gunn, Byrne, Walsh and Hubner — an engineering company seeking to construct a bike path on Fulton Beach Road. No construction was approved by the court, but the firm had requested permission to seek government funds necessary for the project.

Over-privileged Hispanics?

FOR SOME DAYS I HAVE been reading the flow of accounts which have been born of an oil company's order to the effect that only English be spoken on the job.

What a furor! My reaction has been a mixture of amusement and annoyance, mostly the latter.

About an hour ago, rising from my siesta (The first and greatest Hispanic contribution to the human race) a thought burst upon my fresh consciousness, like bright sunlight coming suddenly from behind a black cloud: The Texas Hispanic is the most under-privileged and most over-privileged of all the many nationalities who have ever landed upon these shores.

Pondering my thought I slowly decided that "most under-privileged" can scarcely be the solitary claim of the Hispanic because it could justly be disputed by older people from Ireland, Italy, Germany and a host of other countries.

If any people were to merit that unpleasant distinction I suppose it would be the Amercan Negro. But that is not our subject for today.

Over-privileged on the other hand must apply to the Hispanic. Consider all the years so-called Anglos of a liberal and bleeding heart bent have dedicated themselves to their Hispanic brethren. Or have they? Yes, when it comes to securing such things as better pay, working conditions, housing. But no, indeed no, they have helped keep them from the American mainstream, specifically by helping keep the Hispanic speaking Spanish.

There the liberal plays into the hands of would be leaders of the race whose bent is not really to help their people but instead to dominate them, hoping that by keeping them as a solid ethnic block they can eventually establish a huge padron system that will dominate South Texas and other border regions.

Intentionally sympathetic to this concept are judges and other law makers to have subscribed to forced busing, advancement of Spanish in public schools, requirements for publication of legal notices in Spanish. What other nationality newly arrived upon these shores has even been so coddled — Albeit coddled to his own detriment?

AT THIS POINT I MUST confess that I have been at least mildly surprised that the oil company that has ruled for English only on the job has stood its ground so well. And, needless to say, delighted that they have been joined by others. Altogether I feel that entirely too much publicity has been given to the entire matter. And here am I carrying on with it!

RIGHTLY OR WRONGLY it has often occurred to me that many of us, Anglo and Hispanic, choose to remain silent when some of the presumed Latin leaders raise their voices. There seems to be something dirty and sordid about the business of debating and opposing them.

Of this they are well aware and so take full advantage. However, in recent days during the hassle of language, things seem to have back-fired, despite the circumstance of the area's largest newspaper appearing sympathetic.

Why all the flap, making so much of getting an exact copy of the speak-English order? On the other hand, letters to the newspaper from Anglo and Hispanic alike appear to support the order.

PERHAPS AT THIS point I should endeavor to place myself in the shoes of the Hispanic citizen who wishes to join the American mainstream and asks only that he be given a fair shake, a decent opportunity. He is then, we must assume, intelligent enough to realize the importance of getting as much education as possible, and speaking English well and with little or no accent.

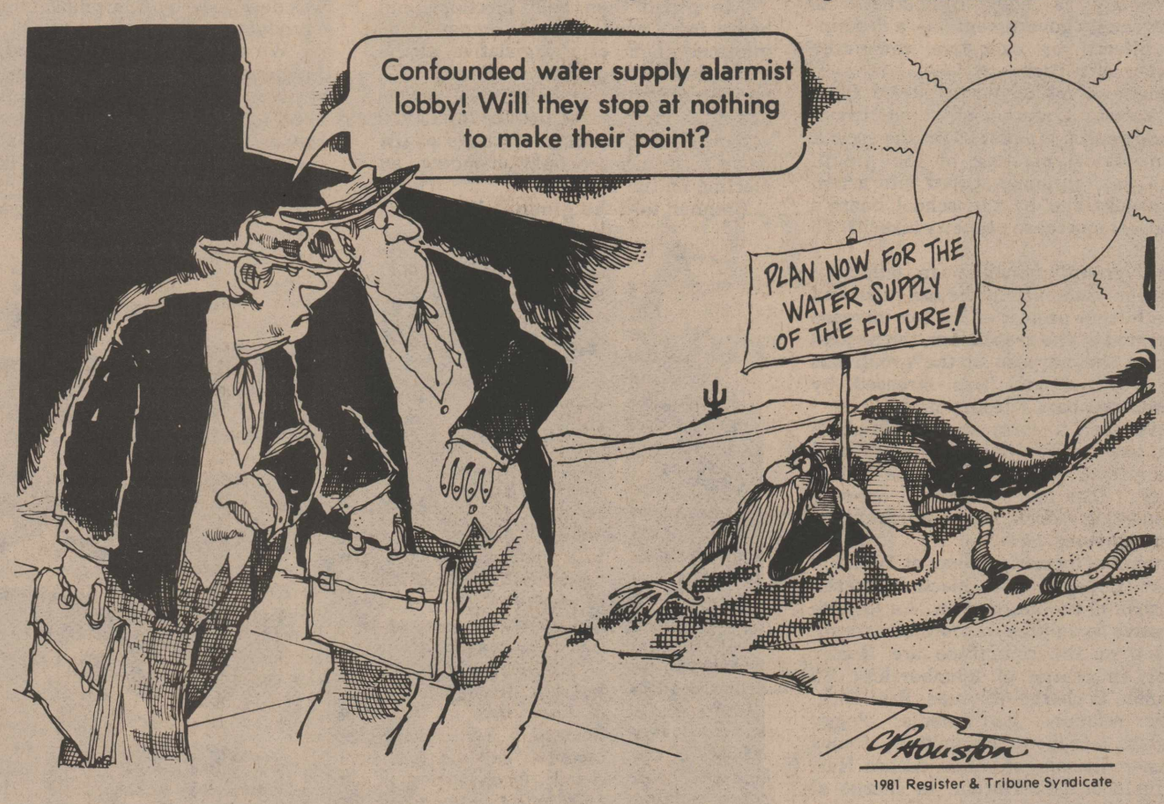

Accomplishing these things, and there are thousands of Hispanics who have, there then rises the dilemma of the handicap thrust upon them by others of their original nationality who are content to be led by selfish opportunists.

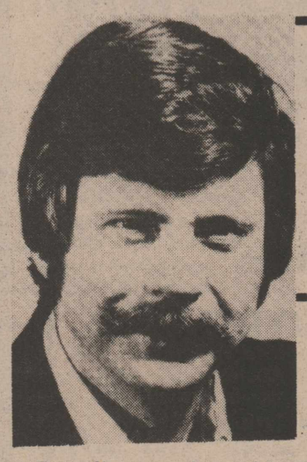

Not so many years ago this would have been totally discouraging. Times have changed so that in truth the qualified Hispanic is frequently, even usually given preference over other applicants. No wonder that in some quarters the 80s are being heralded as the decade of the Hispanics.

GOING BACK DIRECTLY to English being spoken on the job is to deal with simplistics. English is the language of this country, even though no law has ever been passed to this effect. The firm that adopted the speak-English rule is incorporated in the United States and pays its people in the currency of the U.S., where the workers also live and are protected by U.S. law.

In addition the more the employees practice and improve their knowledge of English the better they qualify for advancement.

I haven't particularly enjoyed writing this column. I have the feeling that the subject is one not worthy of discussion, that at best all it might accomplish would be upsetting a few fanatics, people with twisted minds bent on serving their own egos, but of no use to the nation or those they pretend to serve.--ahab

The little things

I realize we have big problems to solve in this world, but we will solve the big problems. It's the little ones that usually get us in the end.

I was taking a shower the other morning and it occurred to me what all is wrong with taking a shower.

When a person takes a shower, it should be a simple, pleasant, refreshing experience that starts the day out right.

It should be, but it isn't, because taking a shower can drive you crazy.

Who, for instance, decided that only short people take showers and therefore the shower head should be only four feet above the floor of the bathtub?

I am six feet tall. I want to bathe above my navel, too. But in just about every shower I step into it is necessary for me to reach for my toes in order to get water on my head.

I knew a guy in college who was a lot taller than me, and he hated to bend over to get his hair wet in the shower, so he would go for weeks without washing his hair.

If you go weeks without washing your hair, small creatures will start living there.

"I think you ought to wash your hair a little more often," somebody said to Henry, the tall fellow.

"Why?" he asked.

"Because when you stop moving your hair keeps moving."

Also, it is very rare to find a shower where the water comes out in a nice, steady, even stream.

There are showers where an elephant could walk through and not get wet, and then there are showers where the water comes out so hard that small boys have been pinned to the bathtub floor for hours.

Water temperature is something else. There is a little fiendish man who lives inside all shower heads and he's the one who surprises you with a drastic change in water temperature while you are taking your shower.

Let's say you've been out mowing the grass and you want a nice, cool shower. You're soaping and singing away, and suddenly the little man makes the temperature of the water very hot and you scramble around, trying desperately to keep from being scalded, and you get soap in your eyes, which is a horrible thing in itself, and the little man in your shower head thinks all this is the funniest thing he's ever seen.

His other trick, of course, is to make the water turn very cold when you want it nice and warm.

Some of the more graphic curse words in our language were first uttered by a person whose shower suddenly turned icy cold. I've had goose pimples that didn't go down for weeks after such an experience.

There should be a seat in showers so a person can wash his feet without having to do a Wallenda, and the soap dish should be bigger so that when the soap gets wet it doesn't slide out of the soap dish and onto the floor of the tub where you might step on it and fall and break your head.

And women never should leave their undergarments hanging in showers to dry. A man in Skokie, Illinois, was taking a shower one night and became so entangled in his wife's pantyhose — which she had hung in the shower to dry — that he was trapped for several hours.

When he finally freed himself, he resembled a prune and ever since goes into hysterics every time he sees Juliet Prowse on television.

Like I said, it's the little things that get you.

The real estate consumer

Use housing space wisely

Many families shopping for a new home are discouraged by the cost of housing. Costs of land, construction and money have increased greatly. They want more space. They want a larger home.

But perhaps families should adjust to the present housing situation by rethinking their shelter needs. For example, as much as one-third of the space in the average American home is "wasted." With that in mind, here are some ideas for using space more efficiently.

A "living-den" may be used more often and cost less than a separate living room and den. Bedrooms can be smaller if storage space is adequate.

A small, well-planned kitchen saves steps and is likely to be more satisfactory than a large, poorly planned one.

With more thought to the efficient use of space, more families can buy housing that will meet their needs but still be within their budget.

Interior designs for the handicapped

If you are planning a new house which will be used by a wheelchair resident, careful planning and a little extra expense can make life much easier for that person.

Entry ways should be 36 inches wide with interior doors of the sliding or pocket type with 32-inch openings. Eliminate thresholds and increase hall widths to 3-½ to four feet.

The bathroom should permit a five-foot turning radius with the fixtures arranged for easy transfer to the toilet. Grab bars and lifting aids are a must, and make certain they are attached to a firm support.

Set the vanity high enough so the wheelchair can go underneath. Finally, install automatic garage door openers and covered entries. All these items make life at home easier for the handicapped, but independent, person.

Cash in on free solar energy

Energy from the sun is free, so why not "cash in" on it when building a home?

Positioning your home in relation to the sun's movement throughout all seasons can save money on utility bills. A house should be oriented along an east-west axis, with the longest walls and largest roof plane facing south to take advantage of winter sun and allow for easy shading in the summer.

Family rooms, living rooms and similar areas used frequently in daylight hours, plus walls that have the greatest number of windows, should be located on the south side. Shade these windows from the summer sun by using overhangs, porches or trellises.

These ideas will help keep out the heat in summer, but will allow winter sunshine to enter windows and lower the heating bill.

Should you buy a used home?

Once you have decided to buy a home and how much you are willing to pay for it, you still have to decide whether or not to buy a new or older home.

Compared to a new house of the same size and conditions, a previously owned home generally will cost less. It will be located in an established area where the character of the neighborhood is apparent, and it will have an established yard with trees and shrubs.

A preowned home may be lacking in certain critical items, however, and could require more maintenance than a new home. For example, adequate insulation is not found in many homes more than 10 years old. Some older homes do not have adequate electrical wiring to handle today's arsenal of household appliances.

Remember, as with any large investment, there are risks and rewards involved in buying a home — old or new.

Texas homes in 1990

What will the Texas home of 1990 be like? Most experts agree it will continue to be expensive.

If housing prices increase at the same 10 percent rate as in the rest of the nation, the average home will cost more than $130,000 by 1990. Such a price tag will strain family budgets, but desire for home ownership should remain strong.

To cope with higher prices, families will tend to purchase smaller homes. Floor space per inhabitant may remain constant, however, due to the smaller household sizes expected in the future.

A good proportion of the population will live in attached housing — that is, townhouses or condominiums. These types of housing provide amenities at a relative low cost, and cost is what the future is all about.

Potatoes: Q and A

From time to time I get a lot of questions about specific garden commodities. I thought that you might like hearing some of these questions and the answers that I give.

Some may be rather elementary, but usually the questions are concerned about specific problems with garden plants. Here are some of the questions I receive about potatoes:

Question: How do I know when my potatoes are ready for harvesting?

Answer: Potatoes are generally mature when the plant starts to turn yellow. Potatoes require 75 to 140 days from planting to maturity depending upon variety and the season in which they are grown. Immature potatoes will often skin and bruise easily.

When digging potatoes, if the skin is not set and is easily removed, delay the harvest. Dig spring-planted potatoes before the soil becomes hot. Avoid harvesting the potatoes when the soil is wet to avoid potato diseases.

Question: I have some seed potatoes left from my spring garden. Would it be all right to eat them?

Answer: No. Potato tubers purchased for seed purposes definitely should not be eaten. Frequently, such tubers have been chemically treated. Like all treated seeds, seed potatoes should not be fed to humans or animals.

Question: After harvesting, how shoud I handle my potaotes to result in longest storage time possible?

Answer: Dig potatoes when the soil is dry, being careful not to skin or bruise the tubers. Do not wash the potatoes. Place them in crates or some suitable container and store them in a dark area for about 10 days at a temperature of 60 degrees to 65 degrees F. with a relatively high humidity.

After this curing period, keep the potatoes at 40 degrees to 45 degrees F. with the humidity near 85 percent and provide good air circulation.

Question: I used potatoes purchased at the grocery store as seed for planting and they rotted without sprouting. Why?

Answer: Many potatoes sold for fresh market consumption have been treated with chemicals to prevent sprouting in storage. These chemicals will also prevent sprouting after planting.

Another possibility is that the potatoes that you purchased in the store were from this year's crop and had not been stored properly to break the rest period which must be broken before the seed will sprout.

Cool temperatures or extremely warm temperatures can break the rest period and allow potatoes to sprout. Next time plant certified seed that has been properly stored to induce sprouting.

Question: Can I save the small potatoes from my spring crop for planting in the fall in my garden?

Answer: Yes. This is commonly done because good seed potatoes are scarce in the fall in Texas. Sometimes the potatoes saved from the spring garden fail to sprout when planted in the fall because of a natural dormancy in newly harvested potatoes.

Considerable controversy exists as to how to handle these potatoes in order to break the dormancy and enable them to sprout when planted. One recommended procedure for breaking the dormancy includes harvesting the potatoes and placing them in a cool storage area, preferably in the range of 50 degrees F. until about three to four weeks before the anticipated fall planting date.

At that time, remove the small potatoes and maintain them at normal environmental condition until planting time.

Maintaining the seed potatoes at a high humidity during this time by covering them with moist burlap bags or some similar material will also initiate sprouting. The small potatoes should be planted whole and not cut to prevent rotting.

Question: What size piece should seed potatoes be cut into?

Answer: Each seed piece should contain at least two to three "eyes". Research has shown that the best size seed piece weighs approximately two ounces. If seed potatoes are expensive or scarce, the size can be reduced although each piece must contain at least one eye.

The Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher

Editor's note: The Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher on his grassburr ranch explains how inflation is universal, more or less.

Dear editor:

A friend handed me a newspaper clipping reporting that a survey among big shot executives making an average of $88,500 a year reveals they are having to struggle with inflation the same as everybody else.

"That's the kind of struggle I'd like to have," he said.

I told him he doesn't understand.

Say an executive making $88.500 a year has a $200,000 house, and a man in that bracket can't live in a house costing a piddling $100,000. Be in the wrong neighborhood.

If he has two children, that means he has to have four cars, one for him, one for his wife and one apiece for the kids. You'd be surprised to learn how many cars, even Cadillacs, are bought on the installment plan among upper bracket people. Add another $10,000 for that.

I don't know what gas and upkeep would come to, but add another $5,000. If the two kids are in an elitist college, and where else would they be, add $20,000 more a year, with a little more for the year one of them wrecks his car.

Add say $10,000 more for income tax and a lawyer's fee for keeping it from going any higher, and probably that much for property taxes and insurance, and the total outlay for that executive making $88,500 a year comes to $92,500, before he buys a single sack of groceries or pays his utility bills.

Clearly, that man is way below the poverty level and is entitled to welfare, unless supply side economics can double his salary before his bank loan comes due.

Land swap is 'land steal' in eyes of area residents

What has been termed a land swap is being called a "land steal" by residents in Palm Harbor and Citv-by-the-Sea, according to Nan Irwin.

"It's a real nasty deal," she said Monday when contacted about a land trade, agreed on by Palm Harbor and City-by-the-Sea property owners and the State of Texas, in which the property owners are paying for a 150-acre tract of land in Williamson County to trade the state for several coastal strips of land here in Aransas County.

The trade was agreed on to avoid litigation after both the state and the property owners claimed title to the land located in the Palm Harbor/City-by-the-Sea area.

Property owners are claiming title to the land under patent laws that trace back to the original Spanish land grants. The state land office is claiming title under a law that gives the state the right to land formed by man-made measures such as dredging.

A law passed in 1973 also gives the state the right to land that erodes through natural processes, if no effort is made by the property owner to replace the erosion within a year and a half.

"The state says the land (involved in the land trade) washed away 25 years ago and nobody replaced it," Mrs. Irwin said.

In 1957, the Army Corps of Engineers created the present shoreline when it used the area as a dump for material dredged to form the Intracoastal Canal.

Because the existing land was formed by dredging, state officials say, it belongs to the State of Texas.

"The land is inside the patent line," Mrs. Irwin said, "but because it was covered by water prior to the Intracoastal, the State claims it. It's a crazy, wicked thing — All the people feel like we've been had."

At least 15 property owners are involved in the situation and some of them have homes built on the lots the State says belongs to it.

"It's not a bunch of rich oil people that have bought these lots," Mrs. Irwin added. "It's people that have bought the land for homes.

"We could have banded together in a class action suit against the state," she continued. "But the state has 14 lawyers and can drag out a thing like this."

She added that property owners have written to Governor Bill Clements and state senators and "everybody just about has been to the state land office."

Under terms of the trade, the state land office sent appraisers to set a value on the Coastal land which consists of several small strips, a little more than 15 acres, according to Sarah Speights in the office of Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong.

Also appraised was a 149-acre tract in Williamson County which, according to Mrs. Speights, was determined to be equal in value to the coastal property here.

Property owners here will pay the state the purchase price of the Williamson County tract, a figure set at $71,000 according to Mrs. Irwin.

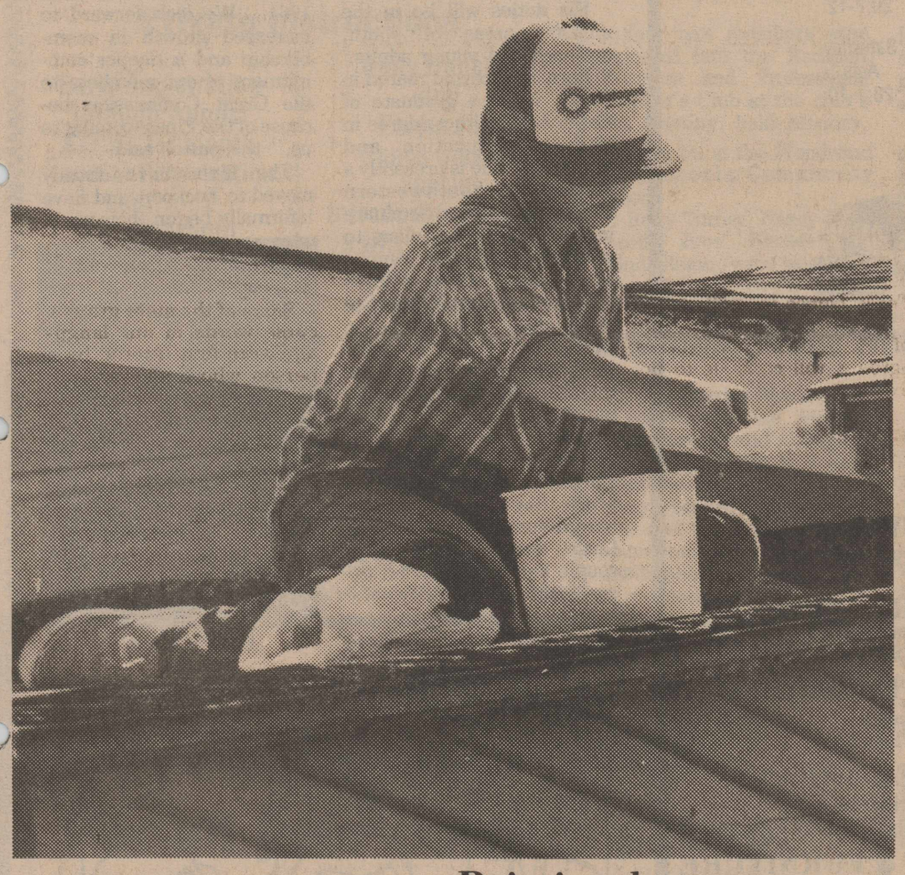

She said the state officials have made no distinction in assessing useable land and land that cannot be used because it is in the right-of-way for the Intracoastal Canal. "You cannot build on land that's been set aside for Intracoastal easement," she emphasized, "but the state is charging for it anyway.

"Calvin Williams is stuck for $585 (the amount the state assessed for his property)," she charged, "and his property is in the Intracoastal right-of-way and unuseable."

She added that although the land in question has been under development for about 15 years, the land office only laid claim to the area about a year and a half ago.

According to Mrs. Speights, the Irwins are primary property owners involved in the trade in Palm Harbor but there are several others including Lois and G.V. Moseley, Williams, Frederick Barrett, the Jac-Loran Corporation, Circle Y Saddlery Inc., Frank Subjeck, Jack T. Brown, Larue Hostetter, Ernest Mulle and Raymond Ince.

In City-by-the-Sea, Mrs. Speight added, the primary property owner involved is Frank Claunch.

"I don't think I ever planned on not coming back"

WWII captivity remembered

By Ted Norman

General Ted Spaulding, U.S. Army Retired, speaks of his days as a prisoner of war in World War II as if it happened yesterday.

Spaulding originally joined the California National Guard in 1937 at the age of 23 to earn enough money to make the payments on an insurance policy he didn't want to lose.

In 1941, the now retired army colonel went on active duty and in July, 1941, Spaulding was commissioned a second lieutenant just before going overseas.

His first assignment was at Clark Field in the Philippines where he was a tank battalion reconnaisance officer in charge of six half-track vehicles and about 36 men.

Spaulding said that after a brief period of combat he became a prisoner of war after his outfit surrendered to the Japanese in Marveous on the Bataan Penninsula. Asked if he had any notice that he was about to become a POW Spaulding said, "I had the unpleasant duty of carrying the message up to the Battalion Commander that we were going to surrender."

He said there wasn't any big problem or fear as they surrendered. "At the due time we assembled at the designated place. We ceased hostility and the Japanese came in and took over and summarily lined us up and started walking us out."

Spaulding said there wasn't any fear in having to surrender. "I don't think I had the misgivings that a lot of people had. I had known a lot of Japanese people in California and I didn't have this horrible fear of the Orientals that seemed to be so pervasive through the whole country," he said.

He continued by saying that some knowledge of the Japanese soldiers had been gained during the fighting and that some American prisoners had escpaed and come back with reports that they had been treated well. "We had some that were captured, held for about a week, escaped and came back and the accounts were reasonable," said Spaulding.

When asked if he entertained thoughts of escaping Spaulding said, "Well, I knew there was no real good chance of escape because there wasn't any place to go. In fact some of the fellows who didn't turn in earlier finally turned in later."

Spaulding said those who didn't surrender at first finally came to the realization that they were on an island several thousand miles from the nearest friendly territory "and there isn't much you can do."

The retired soldier said he knew very early that they would have to surrender. "I was in the headquarters when I heard General Wainwright, who was the overall commander, tell General Parker, our Corps Commander, that he had just received orders from MacArthur to issue rations to us for 30 more days."

Spaulding said they were out of food on Bataan and they were hauling supplies over from Corrigador. General MacArthur issued orders to ship supplies for 30 days and that was all, Spaulding added.

Asked what the morale was like just before the surrender date he said it was good. "The morale was surprisingly good. Generally the troops had the idea that one day they would look up and see a convoy steaming in that bay. They had remarkably good morale."

Spaulding said he and the other prisoners were kept in the Philippines and moved through a series of POW camps for almost two years.

He says about 26,000 people were lost in about six weeks at the first POW camp from diseases such as malaria and dysentery. He said "a lot of the deaths were our own fault. We prepared the food in our own kitchen. The Japanese brought the rations to the gate of our camp and told us to cook it, divide it up and eat it."

He said that this was when morale "went to hell. At that point a lot of the men felt the quicker we die the better."

According to Spaulding the Japanese are to be faulted because they had the supplies that could have solved the medical problems of the prisoners and they didn't do anything for them.

Through the years the Japanese took thousands of the prisoners out of the camps and moved them to Japan to be used as work details. And by the summer of 1944 the Japanese ships were not having very good luck getting through and Spaulding said two shiploads of prisoners were lost before the Japanese tried to take him to Japan.

In December 1944 Spaulding was included in a group of prisoners who were put on a ship in Manila to be taken to Japan for a work detail. There were about 1600 prisoners onboard the cargo ship when it left the Philippines.

Just as the ship got outside Manila Bay the U.S. Navy showed up and bombed the ship eight or nine times, accordng to Spaulding. He said eight or nine ships, loaded with prisoners, left the bay and by 4 p.m. that afternoon the ship he was on was the only one left afloat.

Spaulding says the ship he was on pulled into an estuary in an attempt to stay afloat and the U.S. convoy bombed and sunk it. He said the ship had been hit several times during the day but most of the damage was to the superstructure of the vessel. But the final hits set the ship on fire.

After the ship was on fire, according to Spaulding, the Japanese said, "You can come out of the hold and swim ashore." He said the Japanese had taken off the night before in the lifeboats and the only means of trying to survive was to swim.

He said the Japanese had soldiers on shore "and as long as you swam straight for the shore you were all right but if you swam to any other direction they would shoot you."

Spaulding said there were probably 200 or 300 Americans lost in the bombing of the ship. He said he had anticipated the ship getting sunk and he had earlier manufactured a life perserver out of empty milk cans.

He said the ship went down about 300 yards from land and the crude and hastily made life preserver not only made it possible for him to get to shore but he managed to help a nonswimming buddy in his efforts.

Spaulding says the Japanese allowed each prisoner to bring a pack onboard and his pack contained the life preserver.

He continued after the sinking, all of the prisoners who made it to shore were then rounded up and placed in a tennis court with only one spoon of raw, polished rice and a little watter during seven days of being held in the tennis court.

The ex-prisoner said he had never heard of a case where "they had lost them all," and so he entertained high hopes of making it through his imprisonment and returning to the states alive. "I don't think I ever planned on not coming back," said Spaulding.

After the week of sitting on the tennis court the Japanese loaded the prisoners on trucks and took them to the railroad where they were placed on the train for a trip to the north end of the island. He says some of the prisoners got a little rice during the process of being loaded on the train but most still didn't get anything to eat.

The train cars were filled with cargo and the prisoners were put on top of the cars and, according to Spaulding, the train went past Clark Field "just as the Americans were bombing the hell out of it."

The Japanese told the prisoners to wave if the planes came so they wouldn't shoot at the train.

Spaulding says after the train arrived at the north end of the island they spent four more days sitting on the beach without anything to eat. One of the foodless days was Christmas, 1944.

The prisoners were then loaded on another boat and on the 28th of December the ship departed port for Spaulding's second attempt at sailing to Japan.

"They fed us a little cooked rice and water. We had a lot of wounded on board and no medical supplies so we began throwing people overboard," he said.

Spaulding said the ship sailed to Formosa where they spent several days tied to another ship taking on fuel. "A couple of Navy planes came over and saw this beautiful target and let go. The ship settled to the bottom of the harbor. They dropped one bomb right down the hatch where I was and killed all but about 30 or 40 of the several hundred in the hold," he said.

"I don't know of anyone who wasn't hit. I was hit several times," said Spaulding as he continued to describe the event. "The bomb hit the main beam of the hold, set the ship on fire and we sat there for three days with bodies all over the hold and finally they put a sling over the side and put the bodies over the side then they lowered the rest of us over and put us on a third ship."

Spaulding said the Japanese gave an American doctor, Dr. Reed, some mercurochrome but no bandages. He said everyone was wounded. "There was a navy corpsman there and all he had was a pair of scissors and the guy came up to him with his hand just hanging by two or three tendons and said to the corpsman, 'Would you trim that off, please?'"

Spaulding said he was underway on a ship for his third attempt to get to Japan and the prisoners discovered the ship was loaded with sugar and they broke into the hold and ate sugar.

Spaulding said they finally made it to Japan around January. Around 200 of the original 1600 men were left and about half of the 200 died the first month in Japan.

The ex-prisoner says a fellow prisoner just before he died, told him, "You know, I think they think they're treating us all right."

Spaulding retired as a Brigadier General and in 1977 ran for and won a seat in the South Dakota State Senate, "which was an exercise in frustration and futility. I had several things I wanted to get done and they weren't all popular."

One thing he did was to get a resolution condemning Carter's amnesty program for draft dodgers. Spaulding said he also tried to get a program to develop alcohol for motor fuel but he said people at the South Dakota State College said it had already been proven that it wouldn't work and that he might as well forget it."

The retired military man said, "I'm going to go back one of these days and remind them about it."

Spaulding says the population of South Dakota is less now than in 1920. The state has seven colleges and he tried to close one of the colleges. He said the same thing cost the governor of North Dakota his job.

Spaulding said when he was in the army there were more men from Texas than anywhere else and they were good soldiers and that is one of the reasons he always wanted to come to Texas.

He now spends part of each year in his Rockport home and part in South Dakota.

Lamar may get Cable TV soon

Rockport Cable TV may soon be offering cable service to residents in Lamar and Holiday Beach. An informational meeting will be held Tuesday September 1 at 7 p.m. in Neptune Hall at Sea Gun Resort and Rockport Cable owner Oliver Hensler is hoping for a big turnout.

Hensler explains that the decision to extend cable across the causeway was made after many area residents requested the service.

Because of the high demand, Rockport Cable has waived their usual homes per square mile requirement for the lightly populated Lamar Holiday Beach area.

The final decision on cable service is really up to the residents. If 300 people commit to cable service, then Rockport Cable will proceed. Those who wish to have cable will make an initial deposit of $250, which will be credited to the monthly bill if cable is extended.

"We'll begin engineering work if we can get 200 commitments," said Hensler, "with the assumption that the next 100 will commit."

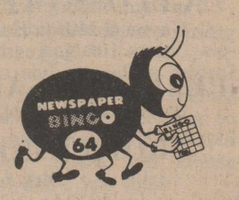

If the necessary commitment is not reached, those who have made their deposit will get a full refund plus interest.

Agreements have already been reached with the county, and state permits for the cable extension are underway, said Hensler.

Depending on residents' response, cable service may go in within a year, though the agreement made with residents specifies that the extension may take as long as two years.

Of first priority to Rockport Cable at this time is their present service area, and prior commitments within their existing operational service area will be honored before work gets underway on the Lamar extension.

Would you like to be able to go to a retreat like this when you are worried — a place where you could be alone with your thoughts — a place where you could untangle your problems?

If you would, then you are like most people. Everyone needs a retreat, at moments. And everyone has one! It isn't a mountain cabin or a seaside cottage — but it is a place far better suited to prayer and contemplation, a place to sort out old errors and make new resolutions. It is your place of worship.

Let it be your sanctuary. Go to it when you are troubled. You will find within its walls your moment of peace and you will walk out into the street again far better able to make the most of your life.

The Shepherd's Staff

By Charles Fake, Pastor
Rockport First Baptist Church

The Bible speaks of a time when "many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Our own age answers that description quite well. The information explosion of the twentieth century is much more than a minor facet of our experience; it is the root cause of the foment of the present era.

Revolutions, riots, moral experimentation, the casting aside of old value systems for new and untried ones — these are some of the symptoms of the spirit of rebellion sired by a head full of facts hitherto unknown.

The flood of technological invention and discovery has disseminated ideas throughout the world via satellite communications, television, radio and publishing.

The peasant in a third world country sits in his dirt-floored hovel and listens to his little transistor radio expound the virtues of a standard of living he has never heard about before, and he wants it for himself.

The student in college talks with speakers who have come to his campus by jet from the revolutionary centers of the world, and he opts for a way of thinking and acting he might never have known in his own little world.

The avalanche of new ideas gives every person an education of sorts as these concepts make their way into our homes through the ever-present, omniscient, and sometimes omnipotent television set. When the preacher stands to address his congregation today, he can almost hear a mumbling from the pew: "Oh yeah?" Every preacher must accept the fact that the days of unqualified acceptance of his statements, even when speaking "Ex Pulpita," are gone forever.

This is good; it presents quite a challenge. And when a person commits his life to Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord today, we believe he is making an intelligent decision, based on good judgment of facts. Think it over; the wisest move of your life will be to wade through the morass of knowledge that fills your mind, straight to Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and the Savior of the world.

Jerry Pipes joins First Baptist Church

Jerry Pipes has joined the staff of the First Baptist Church of Rockport as associate to the pastor, effective September 1.

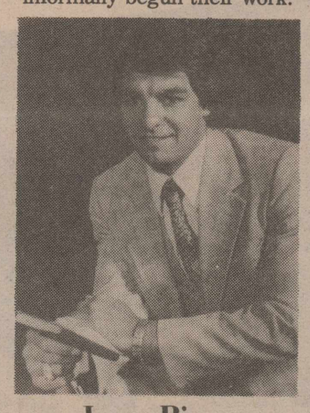

His duties will be in the ministry areas of youth, outreach and young adults.

Born in Alice and reared in Bryan, he is a graduate of Texas A&M with a degree in Physical Education and Psychology. He is presently a student at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, but plans to enroll in the satellite campus at Houston, where classes are conducted on Monday of each week. By attending classes on his day off each week, he will be able to give full-time to his Rockport ministry.

Debra, his wife, is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons University with a degree in Music. She plans to continue her graduate work at Corpus Christi State University. The couple has been married for one year.

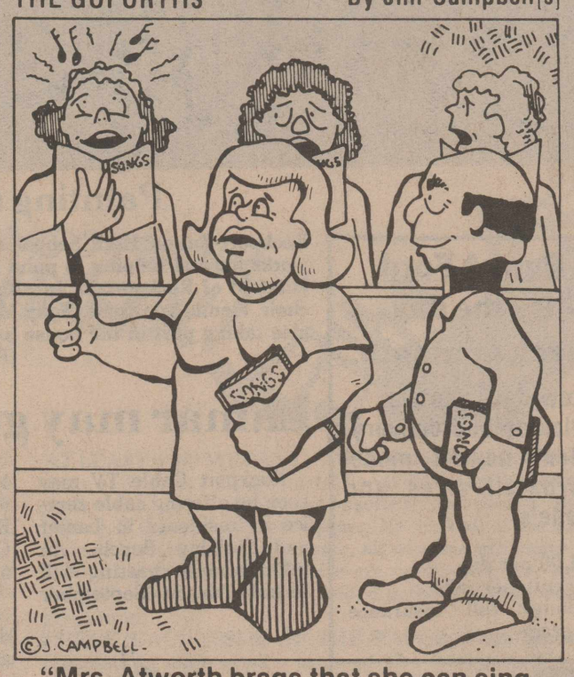

"Jerry's coming to our church will fill a great need in the youth, young adult and outreach ministries of our congregation," said Rev. Charles Fake, who has been pastor of the church since 1964. "We look forward to increased growth in membership and a deeper commitment of our members to the Great Commission because of the Pipes' coming to us," the pastor said.

The Pipes have already moved to Rockport and have informally begun their work.

Antique necklace donated to B&PW district for fundraising

An authemtic antique silver and turquoise necklace has been donated to the District 13 Business and Professional Women's District 13 for the purpose of raising funds for medical research.

Jane Skullawl, an American Indian, has donated the necklace, valued at $1,000, to the district to raise money for the M.D. Anderson Research Foundation.

A drawing to win the necklace will be held October 18 at the District 13 meeting in Corpus Christi.

Tickets may be purchased from any local or area B&PW member. The cost is one dollar and is tax deductible. Winners need not be present at the drawing to win.

The donation for research was made in memory of Ms. Skullawl's late fiance, a doctor in Oklahoma who, during his travels in Peru, purchased several antique pieces of Inca jewelry, including the necklace mentioned above. Before his marriage to Ms. Skullawl, he was murdered.

Ms. Skullawl has made a previous memorial donation of another of the antique pieces, worth $5,000, for medical research in Oklahoma.

Nursing Home News

By Maxine Mayer

Activities at the Aransas Pass Nursing and Convalescent Center were at a very brisk pace last week. We had many visitors, friends, families and some very faithful volunteers, who are on a one-to-one basis with many of our residents.

Monday afternoon, the "Pony Express," the marching drill team led by Mrs. Tina King, was out entertaining our residents. They were greatly enjoyed and we hope to see them more often.

We served lemonade and coffee to all who attended this program.

Tuesday afternoon, Gary Bennett, minister of the Aransas Pass Church of Christ, was out to lead our weekly Bible study, along with Alice Mayfield.

Tuesday evening, the Pruitts and friends of the Pentocostal Church of God were out to hold their monthly singing program.

Winnie Wier celebrated a birthday with a nice party, given by her husband.

Wednesday morning Delma Rodgers was out to do her visiting, reading to different ones and running errands for others. Also out to visit on Wednesday were Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Manship and Mrs. Emma McDaniel.

Thursday afternoon, Julie Harrington, a new volunteer, was out to visit and read the Bible to several. She also helped play bingo with our residents.

Thursday afternoon, the Order of Eastern Star of Ingleside were out to play bingo, as they do each month.

Friday afternoon, the Rockport AARP club members were over to have our monthly "Old Fashioned Sing Along."

Saturday morning, Father James Hamilton was out to give Holy Communion to all of our Catholic residents.

Saturday afternoon, Mr. James Johnson, one of our residents, was feted with a big birthday party, which was given by his family.

Sunday morning worship services were led by our own Rev. Al Bankert.

Sunday afternoon, members and friends of the Ingleside First Christian church were over to have their monthly "Sing-In."

Each morning, Tuesday through Friday, we had our exercise classes. Each morning and afternoon, we had our coffee and social time.

Thanks to all who bring us pretty flowers and nice clothing. We do appreciate you all very much.

Healthful Hints

[Most Often-Asked Questions On Nutrition]
By Jean Glowka

Q. This isn't exactly a question: I guess it's more of a comment. I have often wondered if anyone has ever thought about how strange our culture will seem to students of ancient history a few thousand years from now. For instance, won't they find it amazing that the general public spent a small fortune yearly buying colored, sugared, chemicaled water (commonly known as "soft drinks"), spent a large fortune promoting via TV, radio, billboards, etc., using catchy jingles, songs, slogans and appealing actors? The fact that this colored water contained nothing to nourish the body should further amaze and amuse them don't you think?

A. I certainly think you're right! That's quite a comment on our belief system and something we should all think about, along with other amazing and amusing facets of our culture. Thank you.

Q. Are the snack items available in health food stores lower in calories than other snacks?

A. No. Unfortunately, this is a popular misconception. However, the snacks available in health food stores are generally very nutritious and do not contain such things as white sugar, white flour, harmful chemical preservatives, artificial colors and flavors. So, although you probably get just as many calories in a "health food" snack, you are getting nutritious calories — not empty calories (such as are in the "soft drinks" mentioned above)!

ACRA holds last horse show of season

The Aransas County Riding Association held their last horse show of the season Sunday, August 30. Approximately 40 local and rea riders took part in the 24-event show. Following the afternoon of events, high point winners for the ACRA horse show season were named.

David Mundine, Gwynetta Faucett and Kay Lynn Walton received the high point belt buckles. Mundine, from Rockport, was the Senior division winner with a total of 670 points. Gwynetta, from Robstown, was the Pee Wee Division leader with 570 points and Kay Lynn, a Corpus Christi rider, was the Junior Division winner with 640 points.

Thirteen-year-old Kay Lynn's performance in Sunday's show was excellent. Entered in seven events, she placed first in six of them and took second place in only one. She rides, trains and takes care of all her own horses, with no help from her parents, says Riding Association spokesman Peggy McLester.

Kay Lynn took the grade geldings, bareback equitation, junior trail, junior poles, junior figure 8 and junior cloverleaf.

Mundine won Sunday's working cowhorse division and senior figure 8 and Pee Wee winner Gwynetta won Pee Wee western pleasure in Sunday's show.

Other ACRA event winners were John Barton in the colt and filly; Kenneth McNeil in aged stallion; Laurie Jones in registered mares and junior western pleasure; Elnora Lazuc in grade mares; Ronnie Behuke in registered geldings; Julie Behuke in senior western pleasure; Pecos Bill McNeil in Pee Wee trail; Jerry Balderee in senior trail and senior poles, Brent Bigbee in Pee Wee poles, Pee Wee figure 8 and Pee Wee cloverleaf; Kenneth Keller in open ribbon roping; Bill Reynolds Jr. in open breakaway; and Laurie Woodman in senior cloverleaf.

Instaboat in America

By Mrs. Richard Alden Knight

LOUISVILLE, KY. — The Outdoor Writers Association of America convention served as the introduction to the press of the highly portable Instaboat, a product of Canada available there, Europe and South America and now in this country.

A folding boat made of 45/1000s aluminum panels connected by neoprene joints, when folded it can be easily carried under an arm since it weighs only 56 pounds, all parts neatly and compactly packaged.

Since it is so light, it can be carried on any roof-top on the cheapest ski rack, even lashed to the landing gear of a light plane.

While it is lightweight, it does comply with Canadian and U.S. Coast Guard safety standards and has excellent flotation. The gunwales are bordered with foam flotation strips and I am told that, even full of water with an added 80 pounds of dead weight, it will still float.

The neoprene panels down the centerline and along each side of the floor not only make folding okay but, when the boat is loaded and on the water it converts the hull to a modified V, increasing its handling ease. The Instaboat, incidentally, can be paddled or rowed, or operated with a two-horsepower or electric motor.

Since the Instaboat is rated for 625 pounds of people and gear, it is obviously compatible for fishing and hunting occasions. In fact, a camouflage unit is available.

While it is easily toted around and set up by one person (I saw one young man get his set-up time down to less than a minute), it comfortably can accommodate two adults and a good bit of gear.

The open dimensions of the Instaboat are 10 feet eight inches with a beam of 45 inches and depth of 13 inches. Folded up and ready for transporting, it becomes 11 feet four inches long and only 15 inches deep. (It seems to me that I've seen young men checking into airline desks with longer and deeper surfboards!)

Currently, there are six wholesale distributors around the U.S. for this most practical small boat and more are being added. E.B.S Marine Inc., 41, Cantin, C.P. 446, Jonquiere, Quebec, Canada G7X 7W3 can tell you which dealer is nearest you.

Certainly, if I did not already have the Blue Canoe, I could well be tempted by the Instaboat... In fact, I still may be; it's certainly easier for me to transport alone!

Area fishing report

Key Allegro —Fishing has been slow in the bay and almost at a halt offshore because of the north winds during much of the past week. But if things get better for the weekend there is plenty of frozen bait ready, 729-2761.

Kleine's Rattlesnake Point —Anglers are catching trout, some nice reds, gafftop and some flounder. The north winds seem to have made fishing better on the bay. Plenty of fresh dead and frozen bait, 729-2892.

Copano Causeway —A lot of fishermen are trying their luck at the causeway and some good size trout are being landed. The rain and north wind during the week has helped cool things down. It is still too hot to fish during the day but the pier is full at night with those trying to land something under the lights. Live bait is a possibility for the weekend, 729-8633.

St. Charles Bay—Fishing is pretty good with some fair size trout being taken. The flounder situation is starting to look good. Hopefully there will be bait for the weekend, 729-2053.

Sea Gun —No report. 729-2341.

Palm Harbor—Not a lot of people out fishing but those that try are bringing in their limit. No live bait but plenty of frozen bait of all kinds plus a big selection of lures, including that famous house special that everyone is talking about, 729-8540.

Fulton Beach Marina—No report, 729-8609.

Fulton Harbor Bait — Fishing is terrible, even the charter boats are not doing as good as usual. Some fish are being caught by those who are trying their luck off the wall but a northeast wind and heat has just sent the fish somewhere else. There is a gallon or two of fresh bait available every day but it goes fast. Should be some live bait over the weekend, 729-8532.

Beach Road Bait House —Some good flounder and speckled trout being caught off the pier at night. A little live bait from time to time, hopefully available for the weekend, 729-8614.

Sandollar —Fishing is good off the pier, for weeks they have been catching small fish only and tossing them back but this week a half dozen gar were landed, one weighed in at 62 pounds and five feet long. A little live bait from time to time, 729-8562.

The schedule of solunar periods for the following week as printed below has been taken from the original Knight Solunar Tables. Plan your day so that you will be fishing good territory, hunting good cover during these times if you wish to find the best sport that each has to offer. The tables are not a guarantee that you will catch fish or see game during the period, however.

The major periods begin at the time shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The minor periods are somewhat shorter in duration.

A MIRRORED EXERCISE BAR AND WEIGHT ROOM are just two of the personal touches added during recent remodelling. You can take the basic house for granted: 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, 2 kitchens, wet bar, a boat dock, a waterside fish-cleaning table. ON A CLEAR DAY, YOU CAN SEE FOREVER. And that's not an exaggeration when you talk about this 3 bedroom, 3 bath home overlooking Aransas Bay. The upstairs den is mostly glass along the front and back watersides; the downstairs den (with complete wet bar facilities) opens out onto the washed concrete patio and canal docking facilities. Other features include utility room, beautifully tiled entry, walk-in closets, and 2-car enclosed garage. Includes landscaping. Now being completed. $245,000

Monticello survey an eye-opener

AUSTIN — A recent survey on Lake Monticello near Mount Pleasant told Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists what they already suspected — the lake is still full of lunker largemouth bass.

Crews blocked off two small coves on the lower end of the popular bass fishing lake and applied the chemical rotenone to evaluate the standing crop after intensive winter and spring fishing pressure in recent years.

The survey revealed a remarkable 256.6 pounds of bass per acre, compared to 119.5 pounds collected in a survey the year before. The largest bass collected was an eight-pounder.

The survey results also should be no surprise to most serious bass fishermen. The lake already has produced one state record largemouth weighing 14 pounds, 1½ ounces. The fish, caught by Jim Kimbell of Pittsburgh, February 2, 1980, broke the record set in 1943.

Kimbell's record subsequently was broken twice by fish taken from Echo Lake, a private impoundment near Athens. However, Monticello's production of 10-pound-plus fish has made it the state's most outstanding trophy bass lake.

Department biologists believe several factors contribute to the lake's high productivity, with the main one being introduction of the Florida strain of largemouth into the reservoir when it was first impounded.

Biologist Joe Toole of Marshall said the high poundage of bass collected in his survey may have been partially a result of fish concentrating in the cooler waters of the lower end of the power plant reservoir. "Last year one of the coves we selected was closer to the warm water outlet, and we picked up fewer fish there," said Toole.

Toole said a decline was noted in populations of grizzard shad, an important forage species for largemouth bass. "However, bluegill and redear sunfish also are utilized by bass, and we found adequate standing crops of those fish," Toole said.

Toole reminded fishermen that beginning September 1, there will be a new "slot" length limit on largemouths at Monticello. Only bass smaller than 14 inches or larger than 18 inches will be legal size.

He said of the total bass collected in the latest survey, 112 pounds were in the 14- to 18-inch class, representing approximately 44 percent of weight of the total catch.

"This suggests," Toole said, "that with the cooperation of fishermen, the slot limit will provide ample protection for that size class and enhance the future trophy bass fishing potential of the lake."

Rockport 'place to play' for Sam Kahalewai

By Pat Blair

He's a songwriter...with a Second Degree Black Belt in judo...a former employee of Southwestern Bell Telephone who became a cruise director before taking over a newspaper in Kansas...

He's Sam Kahalewai, a native of Hawaii who now, with his wife Marguerite, divides his time between their home in Kansas and their home on Key Allegro.

They discovered Rockport back in 1975 and bought their first house here — a place on FM 1781 — about a half hour after they saw it. They used that house about a year and a half before buying a second house in Fulton. The Key Allegro home is their third.

"We sure like this place," Sam said during a recent interview at the residence he shares with Marguerite and their puppy, a "Scottie-poo" named Kinipopo. "The name means 'playful'," says Sam adding he talks to the dog in Hawaiian — and gets ignored.

Being in a coastal area, it seemed natural to the Kahalewais to buy a sailboat — even though neither of them had owned or operated a sailboat before. Now they're experienced hands aboard the "Haleakala", another Hawaiian name which means "House of the Sun" and which — no coincidence — is the name of the highest mountain on the island of Maui.

Sam was born in Honolulu (his five children still live there) and raised in Kaneohi. Orphaned by the death of his mother at birth and his father a few years later, Sam attended the Kamehameha School of Music, graduating in 1938.

It was at the school he learned about music. "They taught us to sing, read and write music," he said.

Following graduation, Sam and his brother were among the "many Hawaiian boys" sent by the U.S. Department of the Interior to Howland Island in 1938 to search for the missing aviatrix Amelia Earhart.

"We were down there from 1938 to 1940," Sam recalled, "and it was very hazardous because of Japanese fleet activities." His brother died on Howland.

Even on Howland, though, Sam — known in Hawaii as "Trade Wind Sam" — kept up his interest in music. In 1940, he went to work for the telephone company as a troubleshooter but he still pursued a musical career. Following the war, he formed a group of his own and went on tour, including the mainland United States and into Canada.

In 1956, the Matson (cruise ship) lines was looking for a cruise director on the Lurline from California to Hawaii. Because of his reputation as an entertainer, Sam was selected as one of the candidates.

"On the trial trip," he recalls, "I was seasick all the way up and back. It was a miserable trip!"

He got the job anyway and served on the Lurline for eight years, until 1964. (Two years later, the Matson Lines folded and Sam jokes, "When I left, they went broke!")

He went to Kansas in 1965 at the invitation of Marguerite Sours whom he had met earlier when she was visiting Hawaii.

At first he was wary of going to Kansas: "I was afraid of the Indians. But the Indians looked at me and said, 'Brother!' " Sam throws his arms wide, laughing.

Immediately after leaving the Lurline, Sam was available for a while as an entertainer on an "instant call" basis: groups would need a performer, or sometimes a group, and Sam would "pack and go" wherever he was wanted.

Sometimes the trips were solo; other times he would be requested to bring along a group of Tahitian dancers or hula dancers to join the act.

Sam and Marguerite are both hula dancers, although Sam says he knows only what he "picked up" over the years. "When we were kids, we were required to dance hula," he said. "My grandmother had me by the ear with a switch in her hand to make me dance. I didn't like it — I thought it was sissy."

Sam's formal training was in judo. It all started, he said, when "three Hawaiian kids beat me up. I was a musician, not a fighter. But I met this other kid taking judo and I took judo."

After he'd been taking lessons a while, Sam said, "I went out and beat up those three guys." Then he went back and took more judo lessons for 18 years — until he qualified for the Second Degree Black Belt he now holds.

When he joined Marguerite in Kansas, he started as general manager for her radio station, KSKU FM-stereo, in Hutchinson. Eventually, however, he acquired a weekly newspaper which he operated "very successfully," Marguerite says. "In a year and a half on the Bee, he made more money than I made in five years with the radio station."

The Kahalewais also collaborated on songwriting, Marguerite writing the lyrics and Sam composing the music, and together turned out "A Lei of Songs from Sam."

Sam wrote one of the songs on the album, and he and Marguerite collaborated on another four. The remaining songs on the album — seven — include one traditional Hawaiian song and six by other writers.

"Lei" was Sam's second album. Earlier he had produced one titled, "The How and Why of Hula."

Both he and Marguerite are members of ASCAP, the American Society of Composers and Publishers, and Sam is a life member of the Musicians Association, Local 677 in Honolulu. He's performed in the Royal Hawaiin Hotel and Queen's Surf, the Kilohana Gardens, Moana Hotel and Don the Beachcomber, Edgewater Hotel, Boston Statler, Waldorf Astoria, the Foutainebleau in Miami, the Sacramento Inn — to name a few.

Last fall for the first time in years, Sam and Marguerite went back to Hawaii for a three-month visit — and discovered that Sam is included in a book called "The Golden Years of Hawaiian Entertainment, 1874-1974," by Tony Todaro.

"I'd never heard of it," Sam said. The book, of which he now owns a copy, was among the high points of his visit. Another was being urged to play a role in the Hawaiian historical movie now being shot on location on the islands.

Sam appreciated the offer but turned it down. "I wasn't anxious to work," he said, "and it would mean several months on the island — I'd have to leave Marguerite alone.

"Besides," he added with a grin, "if you start working, you can't play."

Sam and Marguerite love to "play" here in Rockport. They leave their farmland in Kansas (being worked by tenants) an average of four times a year to come to Rockport, including a long winter stay from November until April.

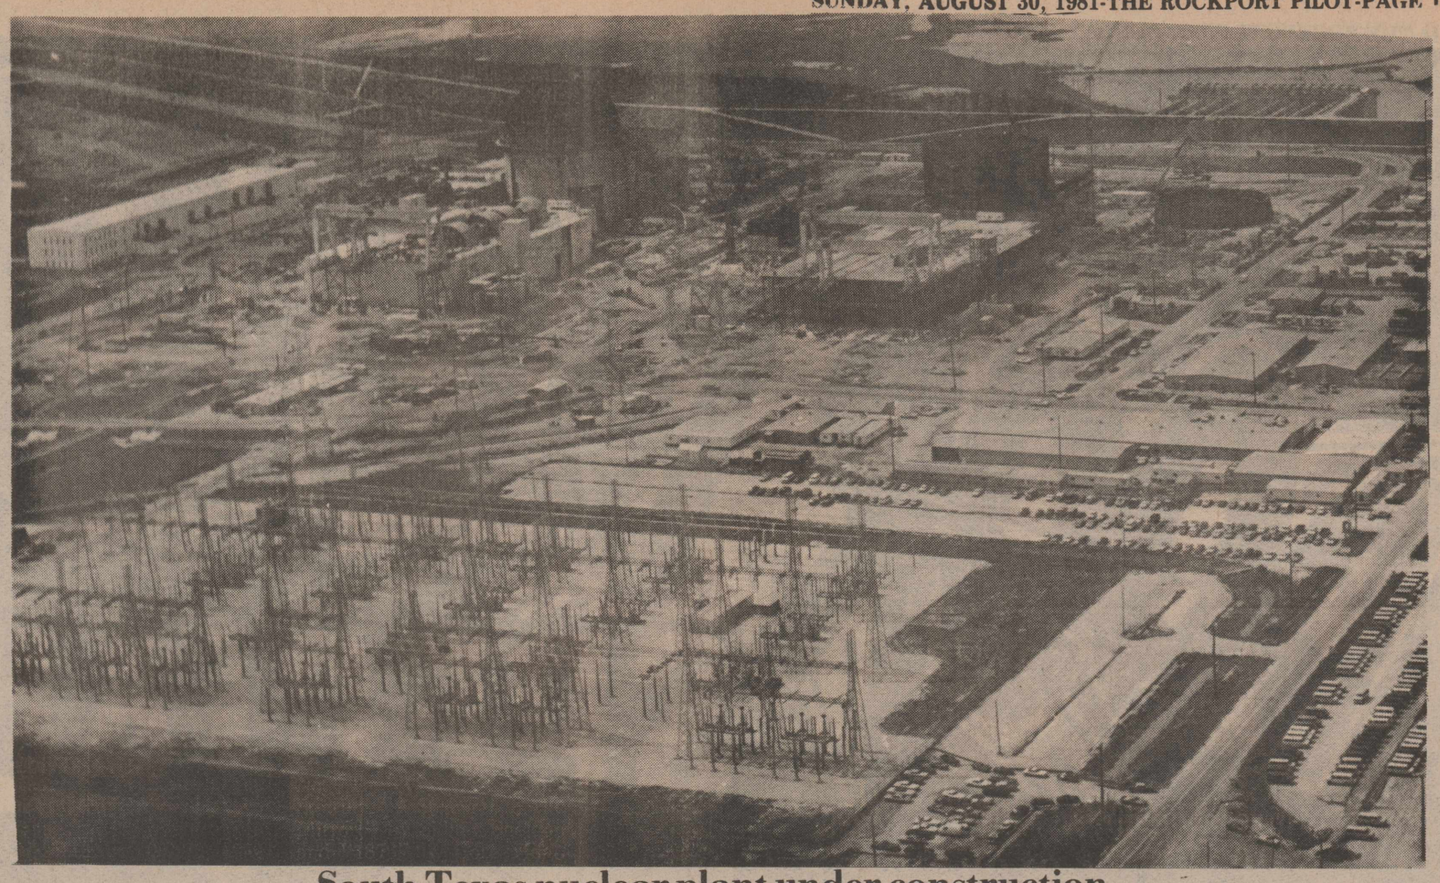

They like the people here, and the atmosphere. "We've met people here from every conceivable walk of life," Marguerite says.

Sam still entertains "spasmodically" and last year he put on a luau for the Rockport Sailing Club, but mostly he and Marguertie are here to enjoy themselves.

"Entertaining is too much work," he says. "We want to play."...

South Texas nuclear plant under construction

Recent photo shows aerial view of the South Texas project, a nuclear plant under construction between Bay City and Palacios. Latest estimates say the plant will be ready to go "on stream" in 1986. Brown & Root is architect-engineer-constructor of the plant owned by a consortium of two utility companies and the municipally-owned electric systems of two major Texas cities. Hearings to determine operating license eligibility will resume September 14 at South Texas College of Law in Houston. [Photo Courtesy of Bay City Tribune]

Passing on shoulder not legal

AUSTIN — A new Texas law has answered the commonly-asked question, "Is it legal to pass on the right on a paved shoulder of the road?"

The answer, according to House Bill 1604, is no, unless the other vehicle is slowing or stopped on the main traveling portion of the highway, is disabled or preparing to make a left turn.

The new law makes it illegal to drive on the paved shoulder of the road except under one of the following conditions:

—To stop or park.

—To accelerate prior to entering the main traveled lane of traffic.

—To decelerate prior to making a right turn.

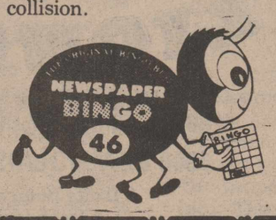

—To allow faster-moving vehicles to pass safely.

—When permitted or requiired by an official traffic control device.

—Or at any time to avoid a collision.

AC officials make fugitive arrest

A Florida man wanted on warrant for failure to appear, trafficking and cocaine was being held for Florida officials this week by Aransas County officers.

Sheriff Bob Hewes, Investigator Ricky McLester and two U.S. Customs officials were involved in the Wednesday morning arrest of Harley Walters, a fugitive from Palm Beach, Florida.

As of Thursday, he was being held in the Aransas County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond, Hewes said, adding Palm Beach authorities had been notified and were en route to pick him up.

Hewes said Walters was boat captain for a large company and took a fishing party to Mexico. The party returned to the U.S. Wednesday and Walters was recognized as being wanted.

Hewes said Customs notified his office as the nearest sheriff's office and he and McLester went to make the arrest.

Band boosters to sell calendars

Rockport-Fulton Band Booster Club president Clouis Fisher has announced that the Band Booster Club is preparing to sell calendars next year in its effort to help support the band.

Fisher says the calendars will have many aspects that will interest the public and the Rockport-Fulton area business people.

Each year the booster club raises money to help the band in many ways. One year a clinician was brought in to help the band students while other years the funds raised by the booster club sent band members to camp, provided funds for parties or trips. The funds raised help both high school and junior high school band students.

The calendars will have a color picture of the band, the names and birthdays of Rockport area residents and the names and phone numbers of various businesses in the area as well as meeting dates of civic groups.

Fisher says the most immediate need is for a sponsor to help pay the $215 for the color picture of the band. Anyone interested in sponsoring the band picture can contact a band booster or Clouis Fisher.

Anyone interested in having their birthday listed on the calendar may do so for 50 cents. Anniversaries may also be put on the calendar for 50 cents.

Clubs and organizations may also have their name and meeting times on the calendars. Clubs with weekly meetings can be put on the calendar for $20, bi-monthly meetings are $15 and monthly meetings are $5.

Businesses can have their name and phone number on the calendar for $20.

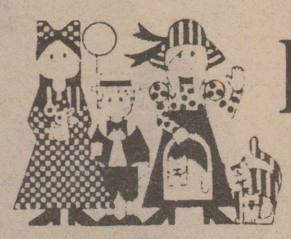

All information to be printed on the calendar must be in by the first week of October when it is to go to the printer.

The Band Booster Club will begin selling the calendars just before Christmas for $2.50 each. To purchase a calendar or place your order contact any band booster member or call the band booster secretary, Vikki Moon at 729-2890 or Clouis Fisher at 729-3189.

1981 Round up for District 15-AAAA

By Bob Crawford

Each year when the preseason polls come out, there is rarely any surprise as far as the team picked to finish at the top of the league. This year is no exception as the Gregory-Portland Wildcats get the nod as the preseason favorites.

Rockport-Fulton's head coach Brian Connolly has a rather rigid stand on the matter as he states yearly, "Because of their past record, they have to be regarded as the preseason selection as the district champion. This year, however, Beeville must be considered as well. But all in all, GP has to be beaten and have the title taken away before any other team can be considered."

Connolly has high hopes for his Pirates this season, but as he points out, "The depth factor is still one of our greatest enemies. If a first team offense player goes down with an injury, then most likely a first team defensive member will have to go both ways."

The Pirates have a potentially powerful offense with two of the finest high school running backs in Texas in the forms of sophomore Dwayne Walls (over 900 yards in '80) and senior Michael Simmons, who can break for the distance from any place on the field. At quarterback the Pirates feature Adam Harden, a senior with a rifle for an arm, and Harden's favorite target has been senior tight end Dennis Hull, who has the knack for getting open and catching the ball.

Up front, the Pirates are nearly pat with seniors such as Michael Arthur anchoring the line at center. Gene McElveen, Jon Shaw, Michael Henderson (when injuries don't slow him down), and junior Charlie Ochoa round out the forward wall. Michael Kautz starts at the split receiver position.

Defense for the Pirates is another ball game completely. The Pirates are still experimenting looking for the right combinations. Connolly stated that some of the younger players would have to come through quickly this season for the Pirates to solidify on defense. Senior Eddie Naro leads the defensive eleven.

All of the potential owned by the Pirates gets them a nod for somewhere in the middle of the pack in District 15-4A, but with a few breaks, some good execution, and determination, the Pirates could bring it all home for the fans of Rockport.

The high school football "Bible" of Texas is Dave Campbell's "Texas Football" magazine. This year District 15-4A shapes up in this manner, according to Campbell and his writers: Gregory-Portland, West Oso, Beeville, Rockport-Fulton, Flour Bluff, Robstown, Tuloso-Midway, Calallen, Sinton.

GP enters the 1981 wars with its usual cast of thousands, and big ones at that. Names football fans will hear over and over are Kent Harris (quarterback), Rocky Collette (fullback), Steve Sampson (halfback), and David Vasquez (halfback). Of course, none of those fellows would be heard from if it weren't for the beasts up front who block and open the way. All-District performer Pat Love (6-3, 250) steadies the powerful front wall from his tackle position, and there seems to be a lot more where he came from. The Wildcat defense will not be a slouch either.

West Oso is a mystery team. Besides the Rockport-Fulton Pirates, no team in the district possesses such lightning-type speed. James Boyd ripped the Pirates a year ago, and he is back, but the Bears are under their fourth new head coach in five years, and a lot is still undetermined. The Bears, like GP, will field a very large team in regards to size and stature, but small in numbers.

Really looking to knock GP off the throne is Beeville. The Trojans have saved their best effort for the Pirates each year, so the Pirates know how the Trojans can play football. But like all the rest, Beeville has the GP syndrome. J.J. Robinson ran all over and around the other district teams last year. When he gets the ball, LOOK OUT! Chris Thomas is a solid blocker and ball carrier that evens out the offense at his fullback position. The big man for the Trojans is All-District tackle Steve Evans (6-3, 255). Beeville's defense will hit you.

Flour Bluff is a team with a lot of unanswered questions surrounding it. There are no real stars, but Coach Bill Rhyne will have a competitive team, especially with nine offensive starters left over. The Pirates stunned the Hornets last year, so the Pirates really couldn't measure how the Hornets play.

Robstown comes into the season with one name which Pirates from last year can't forget — quarterback DeJuan Oakes. Oakes ran and threw the Cottonpickers to a win over the Pirates in '80, and he returns. The Pickers will put some hugh people on the field in 1981.

Tuloso-Midway has a mixture of good players returning this season, and they could be a surprise. Most of their returners are running backs on offense, but there are seven returnees on defense, led by linebacker Kevin Alexander and Glenn Skoruppa.

Calallen lost heavily to graduation in '80. Back is dependable Mike Rhyne at halfback. Rhyne has been an all-purpose type of player, and he has contributed to the woes of the Pirates for the past two seasons.

At the bottom of the pile is Sinton. Those Pirates had a perfect record last year, 0-10. This year the Pirates have a new coach and will primarily be a team made up of last year's JV and Freshmen team, hoping just to exist in 1981.

They're called high school football players

By Ted Norman

They practice three times a day, every day, they have meetings twice a day, they give up their jobs, neglect their girl friends and alienate their families. They're called high school football players.

The question is, why do they do it?

Under the best possible conditions, practicing at 7:30 a.m. when the heat is not so oppressive, the conditions are still bad. They get dressed in a hot muggy room, put on several extra pounds of gear and clothing, then stand around and sweat while several coaches talk to them.

Then it's out in the sun to practice for two hours on ground that is baked like clay with the humidity hovering around 90 percent and the temperature reaching for the 100 degree mark or work out in the rain. The conditions are never good.

They run, they roll and they tumble. They throw the ball, catch the ball and kick it.

Their clothes are wet, their hearts pound and their brains almost overflow with all the things they have been taught that they must remember and remember well if they don't want to get yelled at or cut from the team.

And the question still remains, why do they do it?

Many of them have given up their part time jobs, they don't drive their cars because they can't afford gas. Some have given up their cars. A few who were working for money to go to college must now hope and pray that they can get to college on a scholarship.

Many young, and serious, love affairs are damaged beyond repair because of the time devoted to football.

The schedule for practice is one that would be demanding on most anyone, even a high school student.

Practice begins at 7:30 a.m., the fieldhouse opens at 7 a.m. for anyone who wants to come early. The morning practice lasts until 9:30 a.m. with a varsity meeting from 10 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. At 11:30 the boys break for lunch. Then they return for weight and specialty workout period from 1:30 until 3 p.m.

After 3 p.m. they are free until 6 p.m. when they return for practice until 8:30 p.m.

After the evening practice they are free once again and can do anything they please. However most mothers say their son comes home so tired he can barely crawl in the front door. At 10 p.m. it's in bed with lights out. Then the same program begins again in the morning.

Peter Nichols, defensive corner back for the Pirates gave up his job as cook at the Sonic Drive Inn for football. Peter's mother says, "He leaves home before sunup and drags in after dark bruised, tired and exhausted. But I think the sacrifice is worth it."

Peter was working mainly for gas money for his car. He was lucky enough to be able to work out a financial deal with his parents. Peter was working until after midnight and returning to work at 9 a.m. for the morning shift. His mother says he probably will return to work after football season.

His father took a vacation without his wife because she had to stay here during football practice season.

One football player gave up a good job with the state to play while another gave up his family. One has had so many knee operations he can't count them anymore, Still they show up for practice and try for a spot as a starter on the Rockport-Fulton varstiy football team.

One football player left home because the family's religious beliefs forbid him to play football.

Another family with 10 children with one of the children playing on the Rockport-Fulton football team feels he should be home helping the family financially.

Coach Connolly believes that it isn't all sacrifice involved. "These people have their whole life to work. Now they should be enjoying high school activities like football, other athletics, band and all the other clubs and organizations on campus."

It can't be denied that the boys learn more than just how to play football from all their efforts. They learn to believe in themselves as individuals, as well as a team. They learn to accept criticism and they learn to lose and not let it get them down. There are many other advantages to playing football.

Of course, some football players may even make up for the financial loss of quiting a job if they get a college scholarship or turn pro and play professional football. But they should all benefit in some way from the hard work and practice.

The Rockport-Fulton cheerleaders will add a little something to each game this fall by tossing 1,000 yellow and green miniature footballs to the crowds.

A spokesman for the Rockport-Fulton Booster Club announced that the booster club has purchased about 1,000 miniature yellow and green footballs with the Pirate's emblem on them.

The Rockport-Fulton cheerleaders will toss about 100 of the footballs into the crowd at each game.

Some of those catching the footballs may want to get their favorite player to autograph them.

So be sure and come to every game and maybe you will catch one of the little footballs.

Coach Connolly -- Looking ahead at football season

By Ted Norman

This is coach Brian Connolly's fourth season at Rockport-Fulton High School and he believes it will be a better year than the past three have been for the Pirates.

Connolly, head football coach of the Pirates, has not had the greatest success he feels he should have had but believes this may be a good year.

He was assistant coach at Alice and came to Rockport as the head coach in 1977 and has been disappointed that he has been unable to move the Pirates higher in the standings than they have been.

Last season the Pirates ended with a 3-7 record and Connolly says they were a better team than the records show. He says they lost two games in the early part of the season in the last few minutes of the game and this demoralized a lot of the players.

Asked about the games lost in the last minutes of play last season Connolly said, "I would just say we hadn't really been in close games before and I think our lack of experience and poise in critical situations caused it. We've had close games but never where we had to stop them on their last drive or score ourselves."

Later in the season, according to Connolly, the team suffered from three serious knee injuries and two back injuries that kept the team from doing better.

Asked why so many injuries Connolly says, "It was just our turn, we got hit pretty hard by a couple of teams."

Connolly says the Pirates had never played in close games before and hadn't been faced with critical situations such as those they were faced with last season.

He says he and his assistant coaches are working hard on the Pirates this year in an effort to produce a better record. One major change will be to do away with the two-way players, those who play both offensive and defensive position. Connolly says he feels this is too hard on a player and it will be done away with this season.

Only one change has been made in the Pirates coaching staff this year and that is the addition of coach Scott Powers from Houston who will be the defensive coordinator and coach the linebackers.

Asked about this philosophy of coaching high school football Connolly says, "We try to have a program that the kids want to be in. And we try to create an atmosphere where they don't feel threatened." He says they try to play down the individual and stress a team concept.

The coach believes that almost all the possible talent on the campus is turning out for the football program and he said he can't think of any one person he would like to see play that isn't. He says, "There is probably some kid walking the hall that would give our program a little more depth, but I don't believe there is anybody that we sit around saying boy I wish he was out for football."

The Pirates open the season September 4 against Aransas Pass and when asked about his feelings on the game Coach Connolly said that when the Aransas Pass Seniors were playing as freshmen they beat the Rockport freshmen, "So we feel they probably have a pretty good ball club," said Connolly.

Connolly continued his assessment of the game by saying, "To be honest with you, and I don't know this specifically but we may have kept a few more of our linemen, but they've got a couple of real outstanding backs, but I believe in the line we retained more."

Referring to published reports that the Pirates have 17 lettermen, 10 offensive and nine defensive starters Connolly said, "We are trying to eliminate the two-way player and when we start the season we won't be as experienced as it might look on paper."

He says that the first years he was here, and because he didn't know the kids, he wanted to play as many as he could. Then as the coaches got to know the kids they tried to go with half of the team as two-way players," but last year I felt it was a contributing factor to some of those mid to late season injuries. I think the fatigue factor entered into it. I think a player is more susceptible to injury as he gets tired and if you're a two-way player you get banged up a little more, and as the season goes on it gets harder for you to recover."

Connolly said that the Pirates had to go to the two-way player in the past because they do not have as many people in the varsity program as other schools do because of enrollment. "But this year we just made a commitment to do the best we can to eliminate two-way players and we think maybe the squad has enough balance in some areas that we will be able to do it."

The coach says the starting quarterback for the Pirates will be Adam Harden, a defensive letterman who played in the quarterback position some last year. "He has looked real good so far all through the off season," said Connolly.

Summarizing the past two seasons, both 3-7 seasons, Connolly said that everybody including the players, coaches and parents had a lot higher expectations and everybody was optomistic but the early loses took the momentum away. "Mentally I think everybody just dropped a little bit," said Connolly.

Reflecting on last year's injuries Connolly said, "They were kind of freakish things at times, one of them involved no contact at all, he planted a leg and turned and it just simply went out from underneath him."

Connolly says if the team gets off to a good start this season he believes the Pirates will get the support of the community. He says there are a lot of things to do in Rockport other than go to a football game. Connolly says he is happy with the stadium, adding that it is well lighted and the fans are very close to the playing field and the fact that it is right on the campus adds some atmosphere to the game.

The coach believes that with the high degree of success of the Rockport-Fulton track team last spring there is more interest in athletics in Rockport. "Some of our football players were on that track team so there probably is an underlying curiosity in the community about how well we will do."

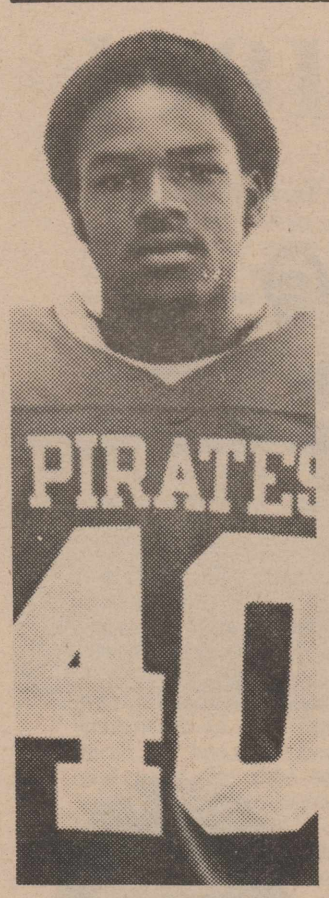

He continued by saying, "I think if we give indications early enough that we'll be successful that we will have interest right from the start."
