Chicago's mayoral primary ends in upset

Related stories, Page 2a

CHICAGO (AP) — With overwhelming black support, U.S. Rep. Harold Washington upset well-financed incumbent Jane M. Byrne in the Democratic primary to move only a step away from becoming the first black mayor of America's second largest city.

The 60-year-old two-term congressman overcame a paltry campaign war chest, a 1974 conviction for failing to file U.S. income taxes and subtle appeals to racism on Tuesday to beat Mrs. Byrne by a slim margin of about 32,250 votes out of a record 1.14 million counted by early morning.

Mrs. Byrne split the white vote with Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, according to an Associated Press-WMAQ-TV poll, while only 6 percent of white respondents said they had voted for Washington.

Daley conceded, pledging to support Washington against Republican Bernard Epton in the April 12 general election. Mrs. Byrne told her supporters early today that the vote was "too close to call" and went home to bed.

"By today's vote, the Democratic Party has been returned to the people," the beaming Washington told chanting supporters.

Widespread charges of vote fraud marred the election, and U.S. marshals were ordered to impound the ballots as they were counted — for safekeeping and as possible evidence in criminal prosecutions.

With 2,878 of 2,914 precincts reported, the results were: Washington, 415,050 votes, or 36.3 percent; Mrs. Byrne, 382,798 or 33.5 percent; and Daley, 340,702, or 29.8 percent. The other votes were split among minor candidates.

According to the Associated Press-WMAQ-TV poll, Washington captured 84 percent of votes cast by blacks, whose power was enhanced by an aggressive registration drive last fall.

Washington's showing in the black community — with an estimated 600,000 to 650,000 voters — deprived Mrs. Byrne of votes that were instrumental in her own upset victory four years earlier.

The GOP hasn't won the mayoralty in 50 years, but Washington has said he is not taking the general election for granted. Epton ran unopposed for the Republican nomination.

Chicago has been described by local civil rights groups as the nation's most segregated city. Federal lawsuits have challenged alleged discrimination in its schools, police department and park district.

Washington said he would deal with residents of all sections of Chicago.

"Our concern is to build; it is to heal and to bring together," he said. "Our determination is to unify this city."

The primary was a referendum on Mrs. Byrne's leadership, with Daley and Washington attacking her tumultuous first years in office, alleged cronyism and the city's fiscal condition. Her $10 million political war-chest — built largely with donations from people doing business with the city — also was a major issue.

But the primary also was a test of the clout of the Daley name — built up during 21 years when Richard J. Daley, the candidate's father, ruled as mayor and boss of the Democratic machine.

And it offered the city's increasingly political black community its first real chance to install a black as Chicago's chief executive. Washington's campaign — his second bid for the job — often was compared to a crusade.

The three Democrats spent more than $12 million in the primary, making it the costliest in Chicago history.

Light rain didn't dampen voter enthusiasm Tuesday. The last time more than 1 million turned out for a primary was 1955, when the late Daley ousted the incumbent to begin the first of six terms.

Concern over possible vote fraud was reflected by the presence of the first group of federal agents ever to monitor a non-federal Chicago election.

The Board of Election reported more than 950 complaints. Most were minor but some included complaints about electioneering, vote buying, and illegal assistance to voters.

Unemployment, initial claims increase

January joblessness matches 1982 level

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Following a pattern which occurs each January, unemployment in Midland rose in the first month of 1983 to levels higher than in the previous month and yet was the same as in January 1982: 5.6 percent.

Also in January, more Midlanders filed initial claims for jobless benefits — 582 — than in any single month of 1982. The previous high was 463 initial claims filed in December 1982.

In Odessa, the jobless rate climbed from December's 6.7 percent to 8.2 percent, higher than the 4.6 percent recorded in January a year earlier.

The rate in Texas rose also, from 7.4 percent in December 1982 to 8.5 percent in January, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission today.

The actual rate in the United States was 11.2 percent and 10.2 percent seasonally adjusted.

Midland's jobless rate rose by a full percentage point in January, from 4.6 percent to 5.6 percent.

This rate represents 3,650 persons without jobs here out of a labor force of 65,350.

Midlanders filed 582 new claims for unemployment benefits in January. There are now 3,341 continued claims on file at the Midland TEC office, said Charmain Carl.

The unemployment rate was about what she and Ed Miller, TEC Midland manager, expected. Hourly wage earners are more affected than salaried employees and professionals, she said, but people from both groups continue to seek unemployment benefits.

Some of the jobless trend results from companies closing their Midland offices or eliminating certain facets of their operation here, Ms. Carl said. For example, the accounting or exploration departments may have been moved to other cities.

"Some of this is seasonal. We traditionally have some layoffs of people who took Christmas jobs, and the weather of course affects construction projects," Ms. Carl said.

"Traditionally, it's a heavy month for unemployment claims. It always comes to a crisis in January," she said. "It's interesting to note that the unemployment rate of 5.6 percent is the same as in January a year ago."

On the positive side, however, Midland now has a larger work force available to fill local jobs — 65,350 people — and more people actually employed — 61,700 — than it had in either December 1982 or in January 1982.

In fact, the 61,700 figure matches the high point for all of 1982, when that number of people was employed here last March.

In Odessa, the unemployment rate rose from 6.7 percent at the end of 1982 to 8.2 percent in January. The total available civilian workforce also rose, however, from 71,450 to 73,000, and the number of Odessans actually on the job also increased from 66,650 to 67,050.

Unemployment around Texas varied. In El Paso it was 13.3 percent in January; in San Angelo it was 5.0 percent. Dawson and Howard counties reported their jobless rate at 7.7 percent in January, and in Reeves County, the rate was 12.3 percent.

City Council hears well field report, considers sewage bid

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Paul Davis Well Field has enough water to quench Midlanders' thirst for the next 50 years, according to an evaluation released Tuesday to the Midland City Council.

The panel heard the well field report by Joe Reed of Ed Reed & Associates during the meeting in City Hall Council Chambers. In addition, the council approved awarding bids for two phases of the sewage disposal plan and gave the go-ahead for an engineering firm to start designing a pipeline to carry Air Terminal's effluent to the city's sewage treatment plant.

Paul Davis Well Field, located 30 miles north of Midland, is the city's primary water source, said Reed. It consists of 52 sections of land, 19 of which have been developed. Of those 19, there are three different owners. The remaining 33 sections are owned by the University Lands System.

Reed's firm drilled 40 test holes to determine the well field's future supply. With 71,408 acre feet developed, Reed said the field contains a total of 317,000 acre feet from which to draw. This is about a third of what T-Bar Well Field in Winkler County holds, he added. T-Bar is an undeveloped field with water rights owned by the city of Midland.

"In general, the water quality is excellent," he said, adding that the tests showed the water quality improved as wells were drilled west of current development.

Adding Paul Davis Well Field in with the amount piped in daily from the Colorado River Municipal Water District, the field should supply Midlanders' needs for the next 50 years, said Reed.

On an average day, according to Utilities Director John Lowe, 3 million gallons are pumped out of Paul Davis. The rest comes from CRMWD.

With the capability to also store water in McMillen Well Field and pump it out during peak days, Reed said Midland's system could provide up to 26 to 27 million gallons of water in one day.

Councilman Tom Sloan, though, looked at what would happen if all of Midland's water had to come out of Paul Davis, instead of mixing it with CRMWD. Figuring that the city's use is 15 to 17 million gallons a day on the average, that means the Paul Davis field would be depleted in 16.5 years.

"If we're using Paul Davis exclusively, on that basis there's not a lot of water out there," he said.

Turning to the sewage disposal project which calls for taking wastewater through one treatment step and then shipping it to a holding area 15 miles southeast of the city, the city accepted bids for putting in that effluent line and for fencing the holding pond. Those items are included in the $20 million water revenue bond project which is being centered on J. "Timber" Floyd's land.

Lowe also told the council it was time again to consider what route to go with the small sewage treatment plant at Midland Regional Air Terminal. Constructed during the 1940s, the plant could be upgraded, a new one constructed or a pipeline installed to ship the effluent to the main plant southeast of the city.

He suggested going with the third option of installing a main trunk line.

"Prices are considerably less today," he said of the pipeline work, referring to the bid for the Floyd system which came in about $2 million below the estimate.

With a new hotel and other businesses going in at Air Terminal, Lowe said it would put more of a demand on that system.

The engineering study, which will cost about $345,000, will design the line and determine where it should be laid and what rights of way need to be purchased.

The council also decided the engineering study should look at how far south of Interstate 20 the line could be installed to serve that area if it is annexed in the future.

Large gas bill heats up Midlander

To Hoyt Fox with apologies goes Energas' promise to correct the indigestion-producing gas bill he received this week.

Fox, a 38-year-old city policeman who recently changed addresses, promptly called the company's emergency number when he got home from work late Tuesday and discovered he had been charged $3,850.54 for the last billing period.

He said this morning that whoever answered the emergency number told him, "That's not an emergency; it's a catastrophe."

Fox jokingly added that he might have to apply for Energas' "Heat Help For Needy Families" program "if this keeps up."

Not to worry, however. Energas service department representative Miriam Hollis traced the problem to a misread meter at Fox's old address and quickly computed what he actually owes for approximately six weeks' service: $138.78.

"We'll send him a corrected bill today," said Ms. Hollis, hastening to add: "We're sorry it happened. I'm glad he's not mad."

With a sigh of relief, Fox replied: "That's more like it."

Cuts in city expenditures sought

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Black clouds hanging over their heads and red ink staring at them colored the opinions of Midland City Council members Tuesday as they put a hold on several large purchase items.

During the session in City Hall Council Chambers, the panel faced for the first time in years the need to cut the budget in light of a $1 million shortfall in sales tax rebates. The deficit was reported last week to city officials and department heads were instructed to search where individual budgets could be cut.

City sales tax of 1 cent on every $1 purchased in Midland is rebated monthly by the state comptroller's office and makes up about a third of the city's expected revenues.

Last summer the council had estimated $11 million in the budget. To date only $3.6 million has been received when the figure should be closer to $5-6 million, city officials noted last week. The fiscal year ends Sept. 30.

"Damned right I'm mad," said Councilman Tom Sloan after the meeting adjourned, pointing to the $1 million deficit as the reason.

IT WAS ONE of those days which started badly and kept going downhill. A water line break in Wadley Avenue had started spilling forth water Monday afternoon and the cutoff valve still hadn't been located by Tuesday morning. By then, 3-4 million gallons of water had flowed down Wadley and water pressure in north Midland was low, according to Utilities Director John Lowe. City crews continued to shut off valves and finally located one that slowed the water flow, but some residents still had no water, said Assistant City Manager Fred Poe.

And the council agenda began with five items that called for spending a large sum of money — buying a cab chassis, pickups, a utility trailer, four flatbed assemblies, an asphalt emulsion booster tank, high density fertilizer and two four-wheel trucksters.

All were deferred until the March 15 meeting, giving staff time to study the budget and determine if these items are necessary.

The council awarded a contract for constructing an additional air carrier parking apron at Midland Regional Airport to E.E. Anderson Construction, which had bid $1,286,684.50. Much of the cost is being paid by the Federal Aviation Adminstration.

Series of Quakerism meetings planned

The Midland Friends Meeting is planing a series of discussions on Quakerism beginning Monday at 7 p.m. in the library at Trinity School, 3500 W. Wadley Ave.

Eight weekly sessions covering various aspects of Quakerism will be held. The sessions are designed for both non-Quakers and Quakers.

The Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) was founded in England about 330 years ago. While it has been a group in the forefront of social concerns, it has never been a large group. There are only about 250,000 members in the world today.

Quakers' central conviction is that God is present in all persons and God's guidance, often called the Inner Light, can be called upon without the necessity of creeds or ritual.

City budget cut by sales tax shortfall

Sloan then questioned Aviation Director Victor White if Midland is eligible to receive the money ahead of time and use it on a cash advance basis rather than having to be reimbursed. White replied the FAA has problems with the city's auditing system of such federal projects.

According to Bob Clements, internal auditor hired by the council, the federal government wants a separate system set up for these funds.

SLOAN THEN turned to Finance Director Grant Walton about the system and a letter from the accounting firm of Main & Hurdman. Clements interjected, saying the firm had written "a short paragraph saying we should segregate funds for federal grants."

Later, though, the city got a "cash advance" to put up a traffic signal at the intersection of Big Spring Street and Ohio Avenue. Martin Allday, representing Wagner & Brown which built the Summit Building, noted that vehicles coming out of the accompanying parking garage during peak times can't move. "It's a chaotic situation," he said.

Mayor G. Thane Akins pointed out that a light for that intersection ranks as No. 5 on a priorities list compiled by Public Works Director Fred Baker. For the current year, the top four had been included in the budget. "The ones with a higher priority have a higher number of accidents," he said.

Allday then asked if his client could put up the $20,000 to buy the light and be reimbursed during the 1983-84 budget.

"But what happens if our shortfall continues and we can't include the cost of it in next year's budget?" Sloan said.

Allday said his client paid enough taxes on the building and didn't intend to donate the light to the city.

"We're looking very closely at our budget," added Councilman Carroll Thomas. "We may not be able to include the cost of any signal lights in next year's budget."

ALLDAY INDICATED his client could wait to be repaid, and the council directed the staff to order the light and the attorney to draw up a "time warrant" or I.O.U.

A change order on the two-floor addition to City Hall which would have added to the already over-budget item was deferred by the council. City Manager James Brown explained that ceramic tiles on the building's exterior were cracking and falling off. Instead of replacing them, architect Bill Babb had suggested an alternative that was more expensive.

"But we're already running over," said Councilman Steve Davidson of the $1 million-plus addition.

The council's black mood extended into other areas, such as a company asking for a waiver from the sidewalk ordinance. They voted for the waiver "reluctantly" they said in the motion. "I'm tired of people taking pot shots at city ordinances," added Davidson.

And the taxi fare structure to take passengers from Midland Regional Airport into the city was changed from a zone system to a metering system.

Doris Hamm of Tall City Cab Co. noted that some cab drivers are over-charging customers and the metering system would avoid that. Agreeing was Sloan, who later said he had received complaints from passengers about being overcharged.

Rita Lavelle to testify in EPA probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita M. Lavelle, an elusive figure since President Reagan fired her from the Environmental Protection Agency, is taking her case before senators investigating the program she headed.

She was to appear before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee today. An aide said she would "vigorously defend" her stewardship of the hazardous waste program at EPA.

The Senate panel and five House subcommittees have launched separate investigations into allegations the $1.6 billion "superfund" cleanup program was politically manipulated and the agency's top officials were too close to the chemical companies they were regulating.

Ms. Lavelle defied one House subpoena to appear last week and dodged process servers from another House committee armed with a second subpoena, choosing to make her first appearance before the friendlier Republican-controlled Senate.

But some Republicans were expressing their own exasperation at the Reagan administration's stewardship of the EPA.

Several House Republicans circulated a letter Tuesday urging Reagan to appoint someone to take Ms. Lavelle's place "who will inspire the public's trust." The president fired Ms. Lavelle on Feb. 7.

The letter warned that winds of scandal already are "dangerously close" to sweeping Democrats into partisan control of the environmental issue.

"It's important for Republicans to seize the initiative by rallying behind the appointment of a trusted, dedicated professional to administer the superfund program," Reps. James Jeffords of Vermont and Claudine Schneider of Rhode Island said in a cover letter to other House Republicans.

"It is not in the best interests of the Republican Party for the credibility of the EPA's commitment to environmental protection to remain in doubt," they said.

But several House and Senate Democrats had a different idea of what needs to be done. They introduced legislation to strip the administration of the power to control the EPA.

The bill would make the agency, established in 1970 by the Nixon administration, independent, similar to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission. Instead of answering to the president, the agency would be run by a five-member commission.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said he did not know of any move in the administration to endorse the change, but he quipped that maybe the administration would give the EPA "to Nigeria."

In an effort to coordinate the proliferating investigations, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., met throughout the day Tuesday with the chairman of all five House subcommittees.

The five chairmen said they discussed but discarded the idea of setting up one ad hoc committee to investigate the agency.

"There are enough problems to go around" to all the committees, said Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, D-Ga., chairman of the House Public Works subcommittee.

Meanwhile, a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee began closed-door interviews of the first of some three dozen subpoenaed EPA employees.

The subcommittee issued the subpoenas after EPA Administrator Anne Burford — Anne Gorsuch before her marriage Sunday — imposed restrictions the subcommittee found unacceptable on more informal interviews.

The committee interviewed four employees Tuesday, all from EPA headquarters in Washington.

The employees are being asked about EPA's handling of the cleanup at the Stringfellow Acid Pits near Riverside, Calif. It is part of an investigation into whether cleanup money was withheld for fear it would benefit the Senate campaign of then-Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Tuesday the performance of the EPA under the Reagan administration has been "criminal."

"The EPA perfectly expresses Ronald Reagan's belief that law and order is not to be applied to corporate criminals and polluters," Nader said in a Terre Haute, Ind., speech. "They have permitted corporations to act with pollution impunity, to flagrantly avoid or violate environmental standards and to engage in pollution violence that is at epidemic levels."

Washington popular on South Side

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — Harold Washington is a zealous but pragmatic champion of civil rights whose flair for oratory clearly scored big on Chicago's predominantly black South Side.

The 60-year-old, black congressman, whose campaign for the Democratic mayoral nomination ignited euphoria on his home turf, upset incumbent Mayor Jane Byrne and fellow challenger Richard M. Daley in Tuesday's primary.

He is an outspoken foe of this city's creaking political machine. But he started his career by ringing doorbells as a precinct captain in that same machine.

In 1972, the South Side began to turn against City Hall. Washington, then a machine state representative, sensed the way the wind was blowing, severed his old ties and took up the cry against "plantation politics."

"The machine thinks it can stride through our community like John Wayne with boots and spurs," Washington declared as he scrambled for mayoral votes.

Such phrases come effortlessly to him. "If there were an honest election in this city, the whole country would go bananas," the dignified-looking lawmaker with the gray hair and moustache pronounced at one point.

Washington's political ties have changed, not his passion for the rights of black people. When he began his 15 years at the Statehouse in Springfield, most machine blacks there gave the civil rights movement short shrift. But he repeatedly sponsored civil rights resolutions, usually doomed to fail.

"He was the only machine legislator who would come around to civil rights meetings in those days," political strategist Don Rose recalls.

In 1978, popular South Side U.S. Rep. Ralph H. Metcalfe's death a few weeks before the election enabled ward bosses to place an easygoing City Hall favorite with no grass roots support on the heavily Democratic 1st district's ballot. Washington, then a state senator, trounced him in the 1980 primary.

Washington immediately became an officer of the black caucus and played a highly visible role in the 1981 Voting Rights Extension Act debate. The quick showing went over big on the South Side.

"I could be a good congressman in a few years," Washington delighted in telling reporters before the 1982 election. He got more than 90 percent of the vote, his popularity undimmed despite the 30 days he sat in the Cook County Jail in 1974 after pleading no contest to charges of failing to file tax returns for four years.

Washington at first denied he failed to file but now says he made a mistake. While black voters voters clearly have forgiven him, when he took his mayoral campaign to the County Jail, TV stations dug out old mug shots, and one newsman told viewers it was "a homecoming."

The son of an attorney and Democratic precinct captain, Washington served in the Army Air Corps, reaching the rank of first sergeant. He is a product of Roosevelt College and Northwestern University law school. Before running for the legislature, he was a city prosecutor and an arbitrator for the Illinois Industrial Commission.

"Very few people know him well," a political associate says. Divorced years ago, he sidesteps questions about the names of his friends.

Few large cities have black mayors

By The Associated Press

Chicago would become the largest U.S. city run by a black mayor if Harold Washington wins the April 12 general election against Republican Bernard Epton.

Washington, a two-term congressman, defeated incumbent Mayor Jane Byrne and Richard M. Daley in Tuesday's Democratic primary. No Republican has been elected mayor of Chicago in the last 50 years.

There are 25 black mayors in cities over 30,000 population, according to the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Here are some other black mayors of major U.S. cities:

—Los Angeles: Tom Bradley, a Democrat elected in 1973, is serving his third term as mayor of the nation's third-largest city. He narrowly lost a gubernatorial bid last November to Republican George Deukmejian.

—Atlanta: Andrew Young, a former Democratic congressman and U.N. ambassador, was elected in 1981, succeeding the city's first black mayor, Maynard Jackson, who served two four-year terms.

—Detroit: Democrat Coleman Young, elected in 1973 and re-elected in 1977 and 1981, is Detroit's first black mayor.

Askew seeking Democratic presidential nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Florida Gov. Reubin O. Askew, calling for "a consensus for change" to cope with a high technology world, today launched his dark-horse candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Hoping to retrace fellow Southerner Jimmy Carter's path from obscurity to the White House, Askew promised not to be misled by visions of an America of days gone by.

"I don't want to become president by pretending that we live in a world that no longer exists," Askew said in remarks prepared for delivery today at a news conference announcing his candidacy. "Some Republicans seem to believe this is still the 1950s. Some Democrats seem to believe that this is still the 1960s.

"But I've been out representing America abroad in the 1980s. And I know that the future of freedom itself may well depend on our willingness and our ability to accept and adjust to the changed nature of the world."

"I will reach out to the American people to ask for their help.... I will ask them to help me forge a consensus for change," said the 54-year-old Muskogee, Okla., native.

With his formal announcement, the former two-term governor and former U.S. Trade Representative becomes the fourth candidate officially to join the race for the 1984 Democratic nomination. Former Vice President Walter Mondale announced on Monday, while Sens. Gary Hart of Colorado and Alan Cranston of California made their hopes official earlier this month.

Sens. John Glenn of Ohio and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina are expected to jump into the contest later this year.

Askew, who was Florida's governor from 1970 through 1979, said computers, robots and high technology are forcing changes in the world "as basic and profound as any since the Industrial Revolution."

Dallas developer seeks to end Midlander's use of his trademark

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Dallas real-estate developer who claims Midlander oil operator-investor Theron D. Vaughan infringed on his "Vantage" and elongated "V" by using "colorful imitations" of the trade name and mark in his businesses has filed suit in federal court in Midland to enjoin Vaughan from using the trademark and name.

The suit was filed by Dallasite John F. Eulich who operates Vantage Companies and Vantage Properties Inc. and who contends Vaughan is taking advantage of the "good will and reputation" associated with Vantage.

Vaughan's use of "Vantage" in his Vantage Properties and Vantage Storage is "likely to deceive and cause confusion" and "constitutes unfair competition, palming off, unjust enrichment and misappropriation" of the rights of Eulich and his Vantage companies, the suit's petition alleges.

Eulich claims that he has been using the "Vantage" name in business since 1959 and the elongated "V" since 1964 and that he registered "Vantage" as a United States Service Mark in 1975 and likewise registered the elongated "V" in 1976.

Eulich and his Vantage companies "have devoted substantial effort to advertising and promoting their business and services and have developed substantial recognition for their services under the 'Vantage,' elongated 'V' and 'Vantage Properties' names and marks in the marketplace for real estate and construction services," the petition says.

Eulich further alleges that his "Vantage" services are "well known and accepted by the purchasing public," that he and his companies have enjoyed "substantial good will and valuable reputation" under the trade names and marks and that his Vantage companies have valued "reputation and credibility."

Defendant Vaughan "was familiar with the high level of acceptance" of Eulich's real estate management and construction services under the "Vantage" and elongated "V" name and mark, Eulich claims.

"Defendant (Vaughan) is advertising, soliciting business for and rendering real estate development and storage for services" under the "Vantage" names and elongated "V," the petition says.

Vaughan's use of the mark and names would enable him "to trade on the extensive and valuable good will and reputation belonging" to Vaughan and his companies.

Eulich charges that Vaughan's acts were "calculated to deceive the trading consumers into accepting and purchasing defendant's products or services or that they are sponsored by, connnected with or supplied under the supervision" of Eulich and his Vantage companies.

The petition says Eulich's markets include real estate investment and development, property management and leasing, construction of commercial buildings, shopping centers, hotels, motels and business complexes.

San Antonio's Medical Center Hospital is under investigation for several sudden infant deaths during 1981-82, but directors say they can find no wrongdoing in the hospital.

Nothing wrong surrounds deaths: Hospital officials

Directors want to dispel suspicions

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hospital officials have found no evidence of wrongdoing at Medical Center Hospital, where a grand jury is investigating a string of "suspicious" infant deaths, an official said.

Dr. Williams Thornton, chairman of the Bexar County Hospital District, said Tuesday he would cooperate with any investigation in hopes of dispersing what he called "the cloud hovering over" Medical Center Hospital.

"We have not had any evidence of wrongdoing in this institution," Thornton said at a meeting of the hospital district board of managers.

"I believe there is a grand jury investigation going on at this time. We are assisting the district attorney's office in this investigtion — even though we have found nothing wrong," he said.

The San Antonio Express-News and the San Angelo Standard-Times have reported that a licensed vocational nurse helped care for a baby who later died in Kerrville and all of the children whose deaths are being investigated here.

The two newspapers reported that a grand jury is investigating at least a dozen sudden deaths of infants at Medical Center's pediatrics intensive care unit from late 1981 to early 1982.

Four families have hired two San Antonio lawyers to conduct investigations into the deaths of their children.

"Right now we are looking at an investigation into medical and hospital records," said Tom Stolhandske, one of the attorneys.

"We are trying to pinpoint whether there is any pattern in the four deaths and whether any of the same personnel were on duty at each time of the four deaths," Stolhandske said.

Before Tuesday's meeting, Thornton told The Associated Press the number of deaths in the intensive care unit was not necessarily out of the ordinary.

"That's not a playroom," he said. "That's a room full of sick kids. Some are going to die. That's unhappy. But it happens.

"Why do you consider one death suspicious and not another?"

Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DeMaio said Tuesday he was notified of the "suspicious deaths" and passed the information to the district attorney's office. He declined to give further details on the tip.

DeMaio said his office would have had trouble beginning an investigation because of the lag between the times of the deaths and when he first heard about it.

"Most of the time we have bodies," he said. "But because of the time lag in the reporting, we have nothing."

A Kerrville County grand jury reportedly is looking into the death of one baby and the serious illness of seven others who developed severe respiratory problems.

A doctor on the staff of the hospital district told the Express-News the babies were believed to have bled to death after allegedly being injected with Heparin, an anti-coagulant drug often used to unclog blocked blood vessels.

Both Thornton and the doctor told the newspaper the babies in Kerrville — 50 miles to the northwest — were given succinyl choline, a muscle relaxant that can cause respiratory arrest.

FBI investigating police conduct during rally

AUSTIN (AP) — The FBI is investigating whether Austin police violated the civil rights of demonstrators at a weekend Ku Klux Klan rally that turned into a rock-throwing brawl, a federal prosecutor says.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Dan Maeso of San Antonio said Tuesday the U.S. Justice Department ordered the investigation "to see if civil rights of the demonstrators were being violated."

Twelve people, including four police officers and a reporter, were injured during the melee. Nine people were arrested.

FBI agents will examine allegations of police brutality leveled by members of the Brown Berets, an activist Hispanic group that was among anti-Klan hecklers at the rally Saturday.

The investigation will be directed by Justice Department attorneys in Washington because a "mass protest" was involved, Maseo told the San Antonio Light.

Federal agents will examine a television videotape that showed several Austin police officers beating a man with their night sticks, Maseo said.

The same man, identified as a prominent figure in the Brown Berets, filed a complaint concerning an alleged beating by Austin police that also was videotaped.

Agreement reached on sewage pollution

AUSTIN (AP) — A final judgment has been reached in one of five water pollution cases involving the Lake Houston watershed, Attorney General Jim Mattox has announced.

Mattox said Tuesday that officers of the Montgomery County Municipal Utility District No. 15 have agreed to upgrade and maintain the sewage treatment plant, which discharges into the watershed.

The district also agreed to pay a $10,000 civil penalty to the state.

Rolls Royce purchases slowing down

Some fear looking wealthy during hard times

DETROIT (AP) — The makers of Rolls-Royces consider the purchase of their luxury cars a reward for people who have worked hard to get where they are.

But now some wealthy Americans who can afford the $111,000-plus, British-made automobiles aren't buying. Their reason — fear of crime or of looking snobbishly rich when millions of people are out of work, some salesmen and dealer officials say.

"This is a working man's town," where a Rolls-Royce attracts considerable attention on the street, said John Ebersole, salesman at Tamaroff's car dealership in the Detroit suburb of Southfield, Mich. Last year, its first full year selling the world-renowned autos, it sold only two.

Some people fear being followed home and robbed after driving around in a car that sports specially selected burr walnut veneer on the dashboard and hand-sewn leather seats, Ebersole said.

His dealership's Rolls-Royce sales were the worst for any U.S. dealership last year, he said. But others also suffered sales declines as 908 Rolls-Royces were sold nationwide in 1982, down from 1981's 1,158, a drop of more than 20 percent.

The American arm of the British carmaker says it has no evidence of customers' concern about flaunting their wealth. The company blames low sales on high interest rates.

Reg Abbiss, a U.S. spokesman for Rolls-Royce Motors Inc., said low sales resulted when the wealthy chose to put their money where they could profit from high interest rates instead of buying cars.

"We think someone who buys a Rolls-Royce is proud of having a tangible symbol of their success," he said. "It is a way of rewarding themselves...It might tend to be provocative to drive a new $100,000 car where there is a lot of poverty around, but it is also a sign that you are a good businessman (to be able to afford such a car)."

AP Laserphoto

Rolls Royce dealers across the nation report sales of the exclusive cars are down.

Sales were low enough at Siggi Grimm Motors Inc. in Tulsa, Okla., that the dealership stopped selling Rolls-Royces this month and now sells Mercedes, Peugeot and Nissan cars, according to Jim Parker, a salesman.

He would not say how many Rolls-Royces the dealership sold last year but said there is more demand for Mercedes, which are priced between $22,500 and $54,000.

Even the U.S. dealership which said it sold the most Rolls-Royces last year — about 100, up from about 75 in 1981 — acknowledged some wealthy people are restraining purchases.

"This is a very conservative part of the country; there are some people who are hesitant to take out a Rolls-Royce and drive it around, especially in a small town," said a salesman at Charles Schmitt & Co. in St. Louis who asked to remain anonymous.

Of the Rolls-Royce sales at Charles Schmitt last year, about 80 percent were to out-of-town buyers, mainly from Texas, Florida and California, he said. In those areas, a Rolls is not an uncommon sight, he added.

Rolls-Royces are at home in Palm Springs, Calif., agreed Jim Epsteen, general manager at the Peter Epsteen Ltd. dealership in Palm Springs.

But his dealership's sales still were down last year because of the recession, he said.

Rolls-Royce buyers "are just like anybody else" when the economy is bad, he said.

At Uptown Motors Inc. in Milwaukee, general manager Glenn Pentler said some affluent Americans don't own Rolls-Royces because "there is a feeling here (among other people) that they must be making too much money off their accounts or something" if they drive Rolls-Royces.

The salesman at Charles Schmitt said part of the reason for increased sales at his business was some discounting the price of the cars up to about 20 percent.

"They (Rolls-Royce) overproduced for 1982 and had a glut on the market," he said.

Abbiss acknowledged "last year's trading conditions were very, very tough," but said the company expects a better year, possibly even shortages of its cars, in 1983.

Prices start at about $111,000 and run to $162,500 for the top-of-the-line Corniche convertible which takes about five months to build.

House OKs smaller fund for non-PUF universities

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House members have kept their promise to create a special fund for the state's smaller universities, but with tax increases looming this session, they decided the schools should get $50 million less than originally proposed.

The constitutional amendment, proposed by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, called for $125 million a year to be set aside for 17 state universities which do not share in the Permanent University Fund. The PUF funds University of Texas and Texas A&M system schools.

In a 138-7 vote, House members approved the fund after adopting an amendment that cut it to $75 million a year. The fund would pay for construction, repairs, capital expenses and library materials. The measure now goes to the Senate.

If passed by the Senate, the proposed fund would go to voters on April 30. If they approve it, it would become part of the Texas Constitution.

In a special session last year, legislators abolished a dormant state property tax that was supposed to fund the 17 schools. They also passed a one-time "catch-up" appropriation for construction at the schools and promised to do something this year about establishing a permanent fund.

The proposal also would stretch the PUF, which is funded by revenues from oil and gas production on state lands, to cover all UT and A&M schools, some of which do not now share in it.

House members voted 94-50 in favor of an amendment by Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, to cut the fund down to $75 million.

Berlanga argued that bonding authority also established for the schools by the proposal could allow them to as much as triple the amount of the fund.

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco

Ms. Delco said she hoped the Senate would restore the funding.

"I have to look upon it as a fiscally conservative move," she told reporters. "It could have been worse."

Constitutents follow their man

About 70 travel to D.C. to see Gramm sworn in Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — They spent approximately $500 each to personally deliver their message to Tip O'Neill, Jim Wright and the rest of official Washington. The message: Phil Gramm is still their man.

Gramm, the former Boll Weevil Democrat who was re-elected this month as a Republican, was officially sworn in Tuesday and about 70 of his constituents followed their leader here for the occasion.

"We want the whole nation to know we're proud of Phil," said Jewell Rhea of College Station, Gramm's hometown.

Gramm was sworn in Tuesday by House Speaker O'Neill, D-Mass., a longtime adversary of the Texas congressman. However, the two men apparently negotiated a truce for the event. As Gramm stood in front of the speaker, O'Neill brought the house down by asking: "Is the gentleman here?"

MANY CONGRESSMEN are out of town because of the President's Day recess. However, it was still noteworthy that only a handful of Democrats listened to Gramm take the oath. Majority Leader Wright was not one of them. About 60 Republicans also sat in attendance.

"I'm not surprised that Phil Gramm was re-elected as a Republican," said Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., whose feelings epitomize the Democratic Party's mood toward Gramm. "He has campaigned against Washington. This appears to be a winning platform for him in Texas."

Gramm had resigned his seat after House Democrats kicked him off the Budget Committee for allegedly informing Reagan administration officials of top-secret Democratic strategy.

The reborn Republican got 55 percent of the vote in the Feb. 12 special election. Democratic Party officials said the election returns indicated that Gramm may be losing support in the 6th Congressional District. But the approximately 70 supporters who came to Washington on Monday showed that they are 100 percent solidly behind the former Texas A&M economics professor.

THEY WAITED in line on the Capitol steps at 9 a.m. Tuesday to have their pictures taken with Gramm. Then they packed into the House chambers to watch him take the oath. And then they sat in a House Caucus room to hear his words.

Legislators want to halt foreign-owned state land

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Billy Clemons says foreigners have little respect for the Texas environment and should be banned from owning houses, farms or businesses in the state.

However, Clemons, D-Pollok, said Tuesday he's not going to push for approval of his bill that would set up such a ban. The bill is "probably too broad," he said.

"When I wrote it I didn't really think of the scope I was writing. I probably won't push it and we'll work harder on (Rep.) Pete Patterson's bill," he said.

Patterson, D-Brookston, wants to ban foreigners — except Mexicans — from owning farm land in Texas.

"They don't have any respect for our water, our air, our trees, nothing," Clemons said of foreigners.

In past years, lawmakers have failed in attempts to bar foreigners from owning agricultural land in Texas.

Patterson's bill says, "Aliens shall have and enjoy in this state such rights as to real and personal property" except for ownership of farm land.

The bill, however, would not apply to Mexicans because of a provision exempting citizens of "a foreign country that has a common international border with this state."

President Reagan receives the Distinguished Service Medal from Jack Flynt, past National Commander of the American Legion. The president addressed the organization's national convention in Washington.

Reagan defends foreign policy to American Legion

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan claimed Tuesday he has strengthened America's foreign policy to where the United States again is in the vanguard of the international quest for freedom and is "the greatest force for peace" in the world.

In a lengthy speech delivered to a friendly audience of the American Legion's national convention in a downtown Washington hotel, the administration labeled a mid-term assessment of his foreign policy achievements and goals, the president defended his military buildup as the essential start to a strong foreign policy, said he has restored "honesty and realism" to dealings with the Soviet Union and has reasserted "maintenance of our alliance partnerships" as the key to U.S. international relations.

And, despite traces of Cold War rhetoric about "the Soviet leadership's pursuit of global military superiority" and "subversion by the new colonialists of the totalitarian left," Reagan declared his "deep personal commitment to achieving an arms reduction agreement" through the Geneva talks on nuclear weapons.

In his speech, the president appeared to be making a new offer of U.S. involvement to help the stalled negotiations in Lebanon when he said "this administration is prepared to take all necessary measures to guarantee the security of Israel's northern borders" after the Israeli army withdraws.

But White House spokesman Larry Speakes later assured reporters there was "nothing new in the speech" and that the statement merely "underscores the president's commitment" that the negotiations produce terms that will guarantee Israel's security against terrorist attacks across its borders with Lebanon.

Although the president would be willing to consider an American role in a multinational force to establish a border security zone if that were part of the negotiated settlement, Speakes said it was "too hypothetical and too early" to talk about it.

Speakes insisted that Reagan was not trying to send a message to the negotiators in Lebanon because he has said before he would consider a U.S. role in an extended peacekeeping force if that were one of the negotiated conditions.

Wearing a dark blue legionnaire's cap tilted at a jaunty angle over his left eye, Reagan received prolonged standing applause from the overflow crowd of the veterans and family members.

He was presented the American Legion's highest award, the Distinguished Service Medal, for his devotion to American principles and his leadership.

The president said he was there to "report on the progress we have made in the past two years in our quest for peace and freedom in an uncertain world."

He said that when he took office the United States' standing in the world had fallen to where "in the view of many of our friends, we had become an uncertain ally; in the view of potential adversaries, we had become a dubious deterrent to agression."

"America had simply ceased to be a leader in the world," Reagan said.

But in the 1980 elections, he said, "the American people sensed this dangerous drift" and started "a national reawakening."

The president said the first steps were restoring the nation's economy, which he said was in progress, and "rebuilding the foundation of our military strength."

Although many people complain of the large defense expenditures during economic hard times, the president said, "similiar voices were heard in the 1930s."

"But the result of heeding those voices then was a disastrous military imbalance that tempted the forces of tyranny and evil and plunged the world into a ruinious war," he said.

The president then went down a long list of foreign policy areas, proclaiming his commitment to U.S. alliances with NATO, with Japan and other allies.

He mentioned without audience response his efforts to build friendly relations with China, but drew applause when he said "we are committed to maintaining our relationship with the people of Taiwan."

Reagan detailed his attempts at helping the undeveloped nations of the world "in a more forthright and less patronizing way."

St. Louis desegregation plan announced

Up to 15,000 blacks will be bused

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The nation's first comprehensive voluntary busing plan between a large city and its suburbs should help draw this community together after an 11-year court battle over school desegregation, supporters say.

"I'm very pleased," said court-appointed negotiator D. Bruce La Pierre, after agreement on the plan to put up to 15,000 black students on school buses every day was announced Tuesday in federal court.

"We have an opportunity as a community to do something that no one else has ever accomplished — we can achieve through voluntary means lasting school desegregation and quality education for all of the children in our city and in our county," La Pierre said.

"This is unique and will draw various aspects of this community together," said Susan Uchitelle, executive director of the Coordinating Committee for Voluntary School Desegregation.

Some other U.S. cities and counties have voluntary busing plans involving both city and county schools, but most are in small towns and adjoining rural districts.

The St. Louis agreement, approved by all but one of the county's 23 school districts, was to settle a desegregation suit filed against St. Louis County schools in 1972 by Minnie Liddell, a parent. Since then, the Concerned Parents of North St. Louis and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have joined the suit as plaintiffs.

Under the plan, up to 15,000 black students in the city would be bused to suburban schools in the county beginning next fall.

U.S. District Court Judge William L. Hungate gave the schools until March 24 to work out details of the agreement.

Hungate scheduled an April 11 hearing for the lone holdout, Riverview Gardens school district, to determine if that district was responsible for the segregation of city schools.

Hungate waived similar hearings for the 22 suburban districts which agreed to the voluntary busing program.

Riverview Gardens' 5,000-student district already has a black student population of 42 percent, said school board president Stephen L. Folly. "We don't feel we're guilty of anything," Folly said.

Although city schools have been under a mandatory busing plan since 1980, 80 percent of the city's 59,000 students are black, so most city schools are not effectively desegregated.

Over the next five years, suburban districts would be required to accept transfers of up to 15 percent of their school populations. They would be required to have a black enrollment of at least 15 percent but no more than 25 percent.

In return, white suburban students would be encouraged to venture into the city to 19 or more "magnet schools" which specialize in particular disciplines and skills.

If the quotas are met at the end of five years, the plaintiffs have agreed not to refile their suits.

The program would be funded by the state of Missouri and by a city school tax increase.

Attorney Robert Dierker, an attorney for the city school board criticized the tax increase, calling the tax a "usurpation of power."

The state is already paying for a voluntary program in 15 of the school districts, in which 950 black city students attend county schools and 350 white suburban students attend magnet schools in the city.

Federal government offers to buy dioxin-contaminated Times Beach

EUREKA, Mo. (AP) — Residents of dioxin-tainted Times Beach responded with satisfaction, but some regrets, to the government's $33.1 million plan for buying out the riverside hamlet that has become a ghost town.

About 150 residents of the St. Louis suburb met here Tuesday, where Environmental Protection Agency administrator Anne M. Burford announced the federal plan to buy out the entire town of Times Beach and help relocate its 2,400 inhabitants.

"I was one of the most obstinate opponents of a buyout from the beginning," said acting Mayor Sid Hammer after the spontaneous residents' meeting. "Hell, I'm 43 years old. I wish I didn't have to go anywhere else. But if I have to start all over again I'll do it."

"I'm absolutely elated," said Charles F. Stone, who owns two Times Beach trailer parks he said were valued at $3.5 million. He said he would take his portion of the government settlement and go "someplace where it's high and dry and warm and no dioxin."

Mrs. Burford said the EPA will pay for the immediate relocation of the town's residents and businesses, with the state of Missouri paying 10 percent of the cost.

The dioxin was mixed with waste oil and sprayed on the town's unpaved roads and other towns to control dust a decade ago. The chemical, a byproduct of herbicide production, causes kidney, spleen and liver ailments in laboratory animals. Its effect on humans is unclear.

The offer to relocate Times Beach residents is the first federal buyout of a contaminated town, although the federal government and New York state spent about $7.5 million each to buy 660 homes in a 10-block area around the former Love Canal chemical dump in Niagara Falls.

Mrs. Burford said the money for the Times Beach cleanup would come from the EPA "superfund," collected from a special tax on hazardous waste companies and earmarked to clean up contaminated sites.

Residents can accept the offer — based on values before the contamination was found — or continue living in the town, she said.

"It's not over. It's just beginning," said Penny Capstick, who moved out of the town two weeks ago after living there for the past 14 years. "My husband Joe and I decided to get an attorney."

The Capsticks fear they won't be compensated for $4,000 they invested in their home after December floods submerged the town. "We'd never leave if it weren't for our little girl," Mrs. Capstick said. "But the place is a ghost town, and we didn't want to take chances with her health."

AP Laserphoto Map

EPA administrator Anne M. Burford announced the federal government has agreed to buy dioxin-contaminated Times Beach, Mo., for $33 million.

"I'm 75 percent pleased," said Rose Elliott, who added that she and her husband James would probably accept the buyout.

Mrs. Elliott's neighbor, Carolyn O'Leary, a 19-year Times Beach resident, said she would wait to see what the government offers for her home.

Most residents moved out after flooding from the Meramec River damaged the town's 800 homes and businesses in December. About 300 people still live in Times Beach.

As the floodwaters receded, the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta recommended that residents stay out of town because technicians had found dioxin along the roadside at levels up to 100 parts per billion.

"Contact with dioxin-contaminated soil in the Times Beach area on a long-term basis represents a health risk," the CDC reiterated in a statement issued Tuesday in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Vernon Houk of the CDC said the highest concentrations were found beneath city streets, which have since been paved with asphalt. He said samples ranged there from 100 to about 300 parts per billion.

Challenger's maiden voyage set for March

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maiden flight of the space shuttle Challenger, plagued by engine problems, is now tentatively set for March 19 or 20, two months late.

"That's a very tight schedule, but we are quite confident it can be met," said Air Force Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, who directs the shuttle program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Challenger, the second ship in NASA's planned four-shuttle fleet, originally was to have been launched Jan. 20, but has been set back by fuel leaks in two engines.

First, one of the three main engines developed a hydrogen leak in a combustion chamber manifold. A spare engine was rushed to Cape Canaveral, Fla., but it sprang a leak in an oxygen heat exchanger.

Neither leak could be repaired in a short time, so a new engine being readied for the first shuttle, Columbia, is to be delivered to the Cape next Monday for immediate installation on the launch pad.

On its first orbital mission, Challenger's crew is to deliver into space a tracking and data relay communications satellite during five days in space.

Bail set for man charged with setting hospital fires

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bail has been set at $200,000 for a medical technician charged with setting four of 13 fires at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center that caused a total of $6,500 damage.

A bail reduction hearing was scheduled today for Marcus Henderson, 25, who was arraigned Tuesday on four counts of arson and one count of making a bomb threat.

Henderson, who had been arrested only on the bomb threat charge, was linked to four fires that occurred Feb. 6 through "witness identification" and other evidence, said Deputy District Attorney Lael Rubin.

Comptroller tries to recover benefits

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida's comptroller is trying to recover thousands of dollars in $50 savings bonds, trading stamps and merchandise received by state workers traveling on official business.

Comptroller Gerald Lewis wrote to workers Monday, asking them to "join a majority of state employees in cooperating with our efforts to conclude this matter."

Because taxpayers finance travel for state officials, any benefits or promotional items belong to taxpayers, Lewis said. He did not say what action his department would take if workers failed to comply.

County paying suspect's medical bills

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — An attorney for a critically ill robbery suspect is fighting efforts to drop charges against his client by county officials concerned about the cost of caring for the prisoner.

Christopher Cordova, 19, was stricken by an arterial tumor after being charged in December in the holdup of a travel agency.

He was hospitalized and remains in a coma, and Pueblo County has already been billed for $10,000 in medical expenses. The district attorney said last week he wants to drop the charges before the expenses mount further.

Cordova's attorney, Dave Crockenberg, filed a motion objecting to dismissal of the charges. A judge took the matter under advisement.

Volcano's latest eruption ending

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Low clouds and fog have prevented scientists from getting a good look at Mount St. Helens' new lava growth, but they said the volcano's latest eruption appears to be tapering off.

The restricted access zone around Mount St. Helens was reopened Tuesday and seismic activity was at low levels, a scientist said.

"If this trend continues over the next several days, we might be able to call the eruption over," said Steve Brantley, a spokesman for the U.S. Geological Survey. He was inside the crater Monday.

Family sues to block farm foreclosure

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A family that owes $110,000 in government loans has filed suit to block foreclosure by the Farmers Home Administration on their farm and 379 others across the state.

Legal Services of North Florida Inc. filed the suit Tuesday on behalf of Jimmie and Sally Branch of Grand Ridge. The Branches alleged the FmHA failed to advise farmers of ways to avoid foreclosure, such as extensions, budgeting, refinancing and loan consolidations.

The FmHA argued unsuccessfully in a Georgia case that it had given the farmers proper servicing to avoid foreclosure.

RABBI VISITS ARCHBISHOP

Rabbi Doctor Josef Zeitin, formerly executive Rabbi in the city of Shanghai, then of Santa Fe, N.M., and who served Temple Beth El in Odessa for seven years paid this week a visit to the Most Reverend Robert F. Sanchez D.D. Arch Bishop of Santa Fe.

Rabbi Zeitin, who has been a strong interfaith worker in Odessa, Midland and Big Spring and who was also visiting lecturer in comparative religion at the University of Texas in Odessa discussed with the Archbishop the Rabbi's contact with the National Conference of Catholic Bishops in Washington D.C. and its section for Catholic-Jewish relations.

The Archbishop told the Rabbi about the practical side of the Ecumenical movement in this Archdiocese and about its progress and the literature in this field.

Dr. Zeitin also discussed the section of his PhD dissertation dealing with history of the Catholic Press in the Gutenberg city of Mainz. This informal meeting will certainly contribute to a better understanding of the two religions, Judaism and Christianity.

"The Rabbi told the Archbishop this was not his first visit to a Catholic Clergy. His teacher at the German State Gymnasium in Humanities was for some years a Catholic Priest whom he saw almost every day in his class and to whom he is very much indebted for the fine teaching he received in his special subjects.

The Rabbi presented the Archbishop with a copy of the History of the Jews in Shanghai which he wrote in 1973 for "THE JEWISH LIFE" in New York and also with a Tape of his TV interviews in Manhattan that includes the Guidelines of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops of 1975 regarding Catholic Jewish relations.

The Rabbi was also invited by the White House, when the Chinese Vice Premier Teng visited Washington in his capacity as former Executive Rabbi in Shanghai.

'Old boy' network can help older executives

Hearst Feature Service

If you're over 50 and looking for work, Richard Ferry, president of Korn/Ferry International, the largest executive search firm in the world, offers this advice:

"Executives over 50 start running into problems in the job market," says Ferry. "An employer doing the hiring, especially for a middle management postion, finds that he's plugging up a hole in the organization by hiring someone over 50 rather than using that spot as a vehicle to move others through their career paths.

"I think they'd rather bring in someone who can be given the opportunity to move one or two more steps within the corporation," he says, adding that most employers are reluctant to talk about such things because of potential age discrimination suits.

He says that potential employers also tend to be concerned about older executives' energy levels and familiarity with state-of-the art technologies.

"Ideally, the man who's 53 or 54 should be positioned near to the top of his career. If he's in top management, there's an opportunity to jump into the chief executive officer's role because many of the nation's largest corporations are headed by men this age. If he's in middle management at 55, he should stay put for security."

However, Ferry points out that executives in the 40-year-old age bracket are very much in demand these days.

"In this economic climate, there's a greater demand for the seasoned executive, the individual with maturity and experience. In the last decade, we've seen a swing in demand for executives that are about 10 years older than those employers were previously asking for."

Ferry suggests that the best way for an unemployed executive find a job is to put the word out through his "old boy" network. If the executive doesn't have such a network because he's new to a city, Ferris recommends targeting opportunities.

Church throws party honoring Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every year on George Washington's birthday, a little country church in Lorton, Va., near the nation's capital, throws a birthday party for their famous former parishioner.

They don't mind that 10 miles away in Alexandria, Va., people are gathering at the same time to honor the first president in a church more widely — but wrongly — acclaimed as Washington's principal place of worship.

Pohick Episcopal Church, in Lorton, doesn't hold any grudges against Christ Church, in Alexandria, for taking the credit, Rev. Robert Blackington, temporary rector at Pohick, said.

However, he said, "We all appreciate our history and like to think of it as a living part of the church."

Facts show overwhelmingly that Pohick Episcopal, about 20 miles south of Washington, is the church where the father of the country prayed. According to vestry records, he even helped plan and build it.

A redistricting of parishes in the 1760s apparently caused the mix-up, though no one knows for sure. The sitting president is regularly invited to Christ Church to observe Washington's birthday. Dwight Eisenhower, Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan are among those who have. Last year, Reagan observed the 250th anniversary of Washington's birth at the Alexandria church.

However, records show that while Washington occasionally attended Christ Church services, he was on the vestry at Pohick Church where his father, Augustine, had served in 1735.

The original Pohick church was actually a nearby chapel that had been built in 1700. First known as Occoquan Church, it was in the parish of Truro.

In the mid-18th Century, Washington and fellow Virginia statesman George Mason served as members on a building committee for a new Pohick Church. The two decided on a site halfway between Washington's Mount Vernon home and the Mason estate.

Spaniards continue to die from contaminated rapeseed oil

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Nearly two years after 8-year-old Jaime Vaquero Garcia collapsed with excruciating stomach pains, they continue to die — victims of what is known here as "the toxic syndrome," a medical mystery that has already claimed more than 300 lives.

Avelina Ambres Menendez was victim number 338. Four days before she died, Mrs. Ambres asked a photographer to take her picture in her hospital bed and make sure it was published.

"They say I'll be out of here soon and walking again," the 40-year-old woman told a reporter from the daily newspaper El Pais. "I don't believe it."

Mrs. Ambres died Feb. 11 in the intensive care unit of King's Hospital. She had first entered the hospital in May 1981 with respiratory problems and partial paralysis in her arms and legs.

She was among the thousands of Spaniards who bought and consumed toxic industrial rapeseed oil, labeled as "pure olive oil" and sold door-to-door in the working class neighborhoods of Madrid and other cities in the center of Spain. At less than half the normal selling price, it seemed a bargain for a product that is a staple of the Spanish diet.

The day after Mrs. Ambres died, the death toll climbed again. Petra Sandoval Gomez died in the intensive care unit of another hospital.

According to Ministry of Health officials, 80 people remain hospitalized throughout Spain after having consumed the poisoned oil. More than 20,000 were initially affected.

Five people are still in intensive care units. Doctors say there is no antidote for the poison and no cure for the debilitating effects on those who survive.

It was an official at Madrid's Nino de Jesus Children's Hospital, Dr. Juan Tubuenca, who first linked the deaths with the contaminated oil. He questioned parents of child victims, who at the time were thought to have contracted an "atypical pneumonia," and discovered they all had consumed the oil.

The oil was traced to a company near Madrid and analysts found it was 90 percent rapeseed oil, commonly used as an industrial lubricant.

About 40 people have been either indicted or imprisoned for fraud in connection with the sale of the tainted oil. Some of the businessmen involved fled the country. No one in the country's archaic public health system, theoretically responsible for assuring that consumer products are safe, has been indicted.

Another extensive legal investigation is under way and could result in murder indictments if the courts ever decide that the adulterated oil was the specific agent that caused the deaths.

Teams of medical investigators from Spain, other European countries and the United States have been unable to pin down the exact nature of the chemical interactions in the oil that produced the nausea, shortness of breath and wrenching pain that led to death or prolonged hospitalization.

More than 200 of the victims died within seven months of young Garcia. Now stories of toxic syndrome deaths are routine and appear on the inside pages of the newspapers.

Although more than $28.5 million has been spent on aid and medical care for the victims, many of them formed associations to file negligence lawsuits against the government.

Last month members of Madrid's city and provincial associations shut themselves inside a church because they were unhappy with what they said was the new socialist government's attitude toward their plight.

According to spokesman Javier Rincon, they wanted to know what was happening to them and members of their families and whether they would have to live in the shadow of painful deaths.

Premier Felipe Gonzalez has named Carmen Salanueva as the new director of the National Toxic Syndrome Plan, the government agency directly responsible for dealing with the problem.

Ms. Salanueva said the government would concentrate on three areas: adjustment of payments to those affected to keep up with the country's 15 percent annual inflation; creation of a rehabilitation plan for the afflicted and continuation of research to determine what it is that keeps on killing people who thought they had purchased real olive oil.

Prisoner 'happy' to have something to occupy time

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Billy Hughes, whose art studio is Cell J-21 on Texas Death Row, says he can identify with the smiling animal who is the star of his "Happy Horse" cartoons.

"He's in that stall just like I'm locked in all the time," said Hughes. "I call my cell a stall instead of a cell. I don't refer to it as a cell because that's kind of cold and hard."

Hughes ran a horseshoeing business in Fairhope, Ala., and delighted in owning, showing and training horses before he was convicted of killing a Texas Department of Public Safete magazines, directs the publication of a national stable guide, produces illustrations for publications of the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and co-edits a national newsletter for Death Row inmates and their families.

"I do not have enough time in the day," he said.

"But if I didn't have these particular things, I would be studying sign language or braille or just sitting and drawing. If I had nothing in my cell but a pencil, I would draw on the walls."

He said he doesn't understand how other inmates can spend their days watching soap operas on television.

"I've always got to have something to do. I would not just sit there and vegetate, watching TV or listening to the radio or something like that," he said. "I like to be a doer, not a talker."

Hughes said one thing he did not do was kill the DPS officer he was accused of slaying near Sealy.

He said he was pulled over by two DPS officers while he was driving through Texas, and that when he reached into his glove compartment for his motor vehicle registration, a gun blast shattered his rear window. Hughes said he sped off and later was arrested and charged with killing the officer.

The inmate, who twice has received stays of execution while his case is being appealed, said he would expand his cartooning and stable guide business if he were freed. He also would be able to try out the guide, which he started three years ago while in prison.

The twice-yearly guide, titled "Travel'n Horseman's Stable Guide," is designed for people who travel with horses and need a place to board them temporarily. It sells for $3 a copy and is sold by subscription and in stables. About 1,000 copies of the last edition were sold, Hughes said, adding that he doesn't make money from the guide but does break even.

Hughes said he gathers advertising and information for the guide by mail and corresponds with people who use the stables listed. He designs the guide, and his parents handle the printing, mailing and check-writing.

Among the 200 stables listed in the guide are four which use Happy Horse as their logos and in their advertising, he said. The inmate also hopes to start a line of Happy Horse greeting cards. He said his cartoons featuring the grinning horse bring him fees ranging from several dollars to several hundred dollars.

Hughes owned his first horse when he was 13 and at one time had five.

"My sister and I just loved horses, and it stayed with me. It was something I never outgrew and I didn't want to outgrow it," he said.

"I tell my parents I wasn't born, I was foaled."

He started shoeing horses when he was 14 and after graduating from high school went into the business full time.

That ended with his arrest in Texas in 1976. But his imprisonment also sparked his interest in cartooning, which he had dabbled in during high school. Prison gave him plenty of time for the practice and repetition needed to teach himself the art.

"I can't say I'm actually happy here. That's the reason I came up with the name Happy Horse — he's my part that can go out."

U.S. Senators lodge complaints about new Hart Building

WASHINGTON (AP) — The scurrying sounds in the new Hart Senate Office Building aren't just of senators scrambling to a vote, but from other creatures that inhabit the new $137 million structure — ones with four legs and beady eyes. Mice.

As senators moved into the new marble building, they found their spacious, high-ceilinged offices already well occupied by the rodents.

The unwelcome roommates joined a growing list of complaints registered by senators finding the Hart building not quite as plush as billed.

Mousetraps soon joined the usual complement of office equipment throughout the building.

Workers in the office of Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., were having little luck with their traps and tired of complaining to the building superintendent. So they tried a time-tested means of coping with the problem. A cat.

"We had the cat for about a week. We haven't seen a mouse since," said Rick Cocker, a Jackson aide.

* * *

Next to the mice, the biggest headache for Hart dwellers seems to be the subway system. Some senators have protested that the one-car train, which makes an intermediate stop at the Dirksen building before ending up in the Capitol basement, is slow, creaky and unreliable.

The subway is intended to rush senators to the Capitol, especially when their presence is needed for a vote.

But senators with offices in the portion of the Hart building furthest from the Capitol have complained that they can barely make it to the floor in the 15 minutes allotted for roll-call votes.

Several times the subway has been headed for the Hart building, only to be turned around and headed back to the Capitol at the request of a senator who got on in the Dirksen building, Hart occupants grumble.

* * *

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., has complained that the acoustics in his Hart office are great — for eavesdroppers.

Dole said he has trouble hearing people talking to him a few feet away in his private office, while everyone outside the door in his reception area can apparently hear every word of the conversation.

Some elevators in the new building never work and others have a reputation for getting stuck.

And the roof leaks. During a recent heavy snowstorm, a large puddle of water accumulated on the marble floor of the vast atrium.

Meanwhile, two 6-by-6-foot panes of thick tempered glass on the interior, facing the atrium, have cracked, apparently because of stress.

"We are conducting an investigation to determine why the glass cracked," said Elliott Carroll, executive assistant in the Capitol Architect's office.

Retirement age plan proposed

From Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — If the Reagan administration persuades Congress to raise the standard government retirement age to 65, employees who are now eligible to retire under the current age and service rules (nearly anyone over 55) will be able to retire as planned without taking any pension cutback.

The White House wants to require employees to work longer, and contribute more into their retirement fund, to get unreduced benefits.

Under present law employees can retire at 55 (with 30 years service on an annuity equal to 56.25 percent of their high three-year average salary).

Current law also permits retirement at age 60, with 20 years service. That produces an annuity equal to 36 percent of the salary average. Workers may also retire at 62 with five years of service and get an annuity equal to 7.5 percent of their average salary.

The administration proposal, if it survives in Congress, would impose a 5 percent annuity reduction on employees for each year under the age of 65 they retire.

THE OFFICE of Personnel Management says, however, that employees who are 55 or older at the time of enactment could still retire under present rules. That is, they could retire at 55-30, or at 60-20 or 62-5 without any annuity cutback.

OPM says its plan would phase in the penalty for retiring before age 65 over a 10-year period. Employees could still retire at age 55 with 30 years service even if the proposal became law. But their annuity would be subject to a reduction depending on their age at the time of enactment.

For example, an employee who was 55 years old at time of enactment could still retire after 30 years service without any penalty. A worker who was 54 could retire at age 55 (with 30 years service) and take an annuity deduction of "only" 5 percent.

An employee aged 53 at time of enactment could still retire at 55 (with 30 years service) but would be subject to a 10 percent annuity reduction.

A worker who was 51 at the time of enactment would take a 20 percent reduction if he retired at 55 with 30 years.

The reduction for someone aged 49 would be 30 percent, and so on down the line.

Employees who do not reach their 45th birthday before the date of enactment of the proposal would take the full proposed 50 percent annuity reduction if they decided to retire at age 55 with 30 years service.

YOUNGER employees and those coming into the system in future, would be subject to the new 65 retirement rule.

Those who quit at 55 with 30 years service would take the full 50 percent reduction.

The administration plan is part of the budget. It has been formally outlined to Congress but not yet introduced in the form of legislation.

Many observers think the Reagan retirement plan will have an easier time in the Senate. But that overlooks the fact that a very important member of the Senate, and of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee is up for reelection in 1984. He is Ted Stevens of Alaska, the Assistant Majority Leader.

Jew recalls attack

PARIS (AP) — The bullet holes in the ceiling and along the marble bar in Jo Goldenberg's Jewish delicatessen-restaurant at 7 Rue des Rosiers in the Marais section of Paris are barely noticeable now.

But these are only the most obvious scars remaining from the terrorist fusillade of last Aug. 9 that left 28 people dead or wounded on the blood-soaked floors.

Not so obvious is the attention employees pay now to who comes through the door — or the plainclothes police on duty in the restaurant.

A measure of the depth of the personal tragedy that the police and press here have filed away under "Rue des Rosiers" can be found in the soft voice of Jo Goldenberg as he recalls that day of horror more than six months ago and all the painful days since.

"It stays with you always," Goldenberg told a visitor one morning recently at a table in the rear. "You can't forget it."

GOLDENBERG wasn't there when it happened — when two men burst through the door and turned their automatic weapons on a lunchtime crowd. He heard about it on the radio and rushed back to find a scene of carnage.

"There was blood everywhere, dead everywhere, wounded everywhere," he said. "They lined up the bodies on the ground outside."

Among the six dead were his cousin and his best friend. Two of those killed were his employees.

The tragedy might have had greater proportions, Goldenberg said, but a terrorist grenade malfunctioned. "Otherwise, there would have been 25 dead," he said.

An institution in this Jewish quarter of Paris which dates to the 13th century, the delicatessen stayed open for three days after the attack.

"I wanted to show that terrorists could not close me," Goldenberg said.

HE THEN SHUT down for eight days and reopened with business only a quarter of what it had been. Few customers stayed to eat in the restaurant and Goldenberg also had staffing problems.

Some of that continues now, although in many ways the restaurant seems like any other of its kind — its deli counter loaded with sausages, caviar, smoked fish and a multitude of other kosher specialties.

On the wall at the front of the restaurant is a photograph of Jo Goldenberg and President Francois Mitterrand, taken during a visit by the French leader in January.

It has not been established who was behind the attack, which came at the height of the Israeli assault on Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon. But it provoked a massive outcry from the French Jewish community about anti-Semitism.

Goldenberg, however, does not blame France.

"France is a hospitable, welcoming country," he said. "Terrorism is banditry, and we are all against it. The attack struck at the conscience of the entire population — Jews or not."

HE ALSO rejected the thesis that anti-Semitism is on the rise.

"I don't think it is growing," he said. "I think it has fallen into disgrace."

Yet as Goldenberg spoke of the terrorists, a note of anger came into his voice, and he, like others in the French Jewish community, emphasized his determination not to be victimized.

"The Jewish community will be more and more vigilant," he said. "It refuses to let itself be cornered by any provocations."

As for the restaurant, Goldenberg said, the important thing is to continue what was begun in 1920 by his family just a few doors down the street from where the delicatessen now stands.

"We're continuing," Goldenberg said. "We have confidence in the future."

'Ghost stations' 'scary'

BERLIN (AP) — The subways from Tegel and Wedding to Alt-Mariendorf and Neukoelln in West Berlin have the "ghost stations" on their route. They don't stop there. The stations are in East Berlin and are sealed off from above.

For West Berlin's subway riders they are grim reminders of the division of their city by The Wall.

The ghost staions are easily recognized. The train slows to a crawl. The lighting is dim. Plaster crumbles from decaying walls. The platforms are covered with grime.

The first ghost station after Kochstrasse, the last stop in West Berlin on subway Line 6, is Stadtmitte. Riders know when it is coming up. The train slows but doesn't stop. Two blue-uniformed East German guards with automatic weapons come into view. They watch as the train slips by.

STADTMITTE IS one of 12 ghost stations on two West Berlin subway lines that cut through a two-mile-wide swath of East Berlin that juts into the West.

When the East Germane completed the Berlin Wall in 1961, the stations were declared off-limits to East Germans and sealed to prevent escapes.

The ghost stations are along subway Lines 6 and 8, which link the old French sector neighborhoods of Tegel and Wedding in the north with Alt-Mariendorf and Neukoelln in the former American sector in the south.

About 90,000 people travel the lines daily. Line 6 runs 12 miles, with about two miles in East Berlin. Line 8 runs seven miles, with about 2.6 miles in the East.

"Going through the ghost stations is always a little scary," said a 26-year-old woman who travels the route regularly, boarding at one of West Berlin's gleaming stations.

THE TRAINS are required to slow down and they can stop only at one station in East Berlin — the Friedrichstrasse station. There, subway riders can clear border control and make connections with trains bound for Eastern Europe.

Guenther Hecht, spokesman for the West Berlin Transportation Co. which runs the subway, said the East German government leases the five-mile right of way to his city-owned firm.

"The East German government collects 5 million marks ($2.2 million) annually just for granting us passage," he said. "They claim they need this much for maintaining the tracks."

West Berlin service crews aren't permitted to enter the tunnels into the East, and so must rely on their Eastern counterparts when equipment fails.

"If a problem does arise, we've got a hot line with our Eastern partners," said Hecht. But he admitted that when there is a breakdown in the East "it takes an awful long time to get the trains moving again because (their) handling of such problems is slow and bureaucratic."

HE SAID passengers have sometimes been stuck in the tunnels several hours waiting for East German repair crews to show up.

Has anyone ever tried to escape from the East by subway?

"Even if there were attempts, escape would be hopeless considering the tight security system the East has put up around the stations," he said.

Hecht also said he doubted the East Germans will ever deny right of way to West German trains.

"You have to remember there is a lot of money involved. They would never voluntarily give up this source of highly valued Western currency," he said.

An air of disrepute

When former Midlander Larry L. King returns to the Tall City in May, he'll undoubtedly bring a hint of "disrepute" with him. But he won't be driven out of town on a rail.

That's because King's "homecoming" also will mark the first amateur production in the United States of his widely acclaimed musical, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." As an added benefit, proceeds from the production in Midland will go toward completion of Midland Community Theater's downtown Yucca Theatre, the permanent home of that organization's Summer Mummers offering each year.

King will be giving much back to his hometown via the production, which will run May 13-June 4: Premiere site for amateur production of the play, his professional expertise as an actor and, of course, a monetary step toward fulfillment of one of MCT's dreams — completion of Yucca Theatre.

The professional stage productions of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" and the subsequent movie production under the same name delighted thousands in the United States and brought no small degree of fame to King. The play's achievement at those levels should serve to bolster area interest in the Tall City's amateur production.

It will be a memorable "homecoming" for King and a delightful experience for all Midlanders who attend, particularly members of the cast.

Midland's reputation may even survive the experience.

Crimes against humanity

Klaus Barbie was a bit overweight, but he liked to dress smartly. He didn't do especially well in school, graduating two years behind his class. But he did have "dark blond sleek hair" and a "consistently strong, positive attitude," according to his employment file. These requisites helped him rise in the Nazi ranks and get a job in France. Between the winter of 1942 and the summer of 1944, this seemingly common man participated in 4,342 murders and ordered 7,591 deportations to death camps. He sent Jewish children to the gas chambers of Auschwitz. He captured and tortured to death the French resistance leader Jean Moulin.

When the Allies defeated Germany, Barbie was taken prisoner by the U.S. Army. France requested Barbie's extradition for trial, but, according to U.S. interrogator Erhard Dabringhaus, Barbie sold U.S. agents intelligence about the Soviets and was given a sanitized identity and $1,700 a month. In 1951, U.S. agents may have helped him escape to South America, where he lived until January, when he was expelled from Bolivia. He now faces trial in Lyons, France.

Upon his capture, Barbie told an interviewer: "I am a convinced Nazi ... and if I had to be born a thousand times, I would be a thousand times what I have been."

What is the purpose of prosecuting an old man, after all these years, for crimes of the past? To punish him for what he did to the people he butchered. To show other people who would commit crimes against humanity that they too will be relentlessly hunted and punished. And to remind us that the Nazis were people not completely unlike ourselves who, because of their belief that Jews and others were not human, caused untold suffering and destruction.

U.S. complicity in Barbie's escape must be investigated. Protection of a murderer, even for intelligence-gathering, is intolerable.

In the village of Izieu, near Lyons, there is a plaque on the school from which Barbie had 41 Jewish children carried off, never to return. Its inscription is the only answer to the Klaus Barbies of the past and of the future. It reads: "Each man has a part in the deaths of all men, because each is a part of humanity."

Another View:

Murdering of a faith

A few weeks ago, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini informed the Iranian people that he had heard rumors about a certain excess of zeal in the management of the country's Islamic revolutionary justice system. The ayatollah professed shock. "Heaven forbid," he said, that "individuals ignorant of matters spiritual" should be oppressing others in the name of revolution. That statement seemed to promise some moderating of Iran's bloody-handed approach to dealing with alleged subversives, heretics and others suspected of violating divine law. Like so many other pledges made in Iran, this one still awaits redemption.

In the western Iranian city of Shiraz the other day, an Islamic court sentenced to death 20 local leaders of the Bahai faith. Their executions will bring to about 140 the number of Bahais known to have been judicially murdered in the four years since Khomeini came to power. Hundreds of other members of the faith have simply disappeared. The charge against the Shiraz group was the usual and fanciful one that they were spies for Israel. More to the point, capital sentences were imposed because, given a chance to recant their faith, the Bahais refused, saying that "they were also proud of their religion...."

The Bahais have been in Iran for about a century. They are no strangers to persecution because of their beliefs. Bahaism is an eclectic faith, drawing on the ethical teachings of most of the great religions. As a tiny and economically successful minority in a country where religious intolerance often boils over, the Bahais have repeatedly provided handy scapegoats in times of trouble for a succession of national leaders.

Iran's Islamic clergymen have always considered the clergyless Bahai faith a suspect if not criminal deviation. Now the mullahs are in power, and the opportunity for dealing with this deviation has been seized. Bahaism is a humane and unmilitant religion. The laws of the faith go so far as to forbid Bahais from holding political office or engaging in partisan politics. This preclusion alone shows the vicious nonsense behind the allegations made against the Bahais in Iran of spying or other subversive political activities.

Bahaism is a religion deeply rooted in ideas of intellectual freedom, sexual equality, universal education and world peace. It is these beliefs, and not any fanciful political behavior, that Iran's Shia Moslem rulers find so abhorrent. And so, by the dozen and by the score, the leaders of the Bahai community have been arrested, tried and executed in a continuing wave of religious persecution that cries out for the condemnation of the civilized world.

Khomeini claims to find it "unacceptable" that Islamic justice in Iran might go astray. His concern, if indeed any exists, plainly does not extend to what his fellow clergymen are doing to the Bahais.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

USIA aiding right-wing regimes

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Information Agency, which is supposed to seek favorable publicity abroad for the United States, is now helping foreign governments get favorable coverage in this country.

Jack Anderson

The agency is teaching Latin American and Arab officials how to handle American newspaper and television reporters. This delicate indoctrination is directed by Ian MacKenzie, who used to be a registered agent and publicity man for the late Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza.

Despite MacKenzie's best efforts, poor Somoza never did overcome his public-relations problems. Now other right-wing regimes will be able to learn the MacKenzie methods.

The public-relations training will cost the American taxpayers $170,000, which has been funded for this purpose to a conservative outfit called the Mid-America Committee for International Business and Government Cooperation.

USIA officials, who said they were unaware of MacKenzie's background, insisted that the purpose of the seminars is to see that the American public is given balanced reporting about countries that are important to U.S. foreign-policy goals.

They described the program as an effort to educate foreign officials in the unfamiliar workings of a free press, and said the chief beneficiaries would be American reporters, who have often complained to the agency about the unresponsiveness of supposedly friendly governments.

As an example, USIA said the government of El Salvador is "afraid" of the American press and is not as adept at giving its side of the civil-war story as are the leftist guerrillas. The officials said the same is true of Arab governments with which the Reagan administration is trying to maintain good relations.

The $170,000 contract calls for the committee to conduct two 15-day seminars for "media officials" from Latin America and the Middle East.

The first seminar was held in Washington last December. Of the 14 government flacks who got all-expenses-paid trips here, four were from El Salvador. They included spokesmen for the Salvadoran armed forces and the ministry of defense, as well as one private individual, the information director of the extreme right-wing Arena party.

The Haitian regime of Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier sent two p.r. men to the seminar. The right-wing governments of Chile and Guatemala sent representatives, as did Bolivia, Ecuador and Barbados. USIA officials said invitations were sent to several other governments, including the liberal regimes in Mexico and Panama.

Despite USIA's assurance that the program is educational and nonpartisan, internal memos of the Mid-America Committee, seen by my associate Lucette Lagnado, tell a somewhat different story. They indicate that the USIA's grantee, at any rate, intended the seminar program as a propaganda vehicle from the very start.

The aim of the first seminar, according to one memo, was to give "media assistance to government officials and their armed forces in Latin America (to) strengthen their effectiveness in the 'War of Ideas.'"

The memo continues: "In El Salvador, the government and armed forces have consistently failed to take the offensive in the propaganda war. On the other hand, Marxist guerrillas ... are on record as fully understanding the importance of winning over American opinion through the U.S. media ..."

In strictly educational terms, MacKenzie's Latin American seminar was a little one-sided politically. The trainees' only meetings on Capitol Hill were with an aide to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and a member of the Republican Policy Committee.

The second seminar will be held here next month. Those invited on the free junket include press officers from such oil-rich countries as Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Qatar, as well as from Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Algeria, Yemen, Oman, Morocco, Tunisia and the United Arab Emirates — all of which the Reagan administration is cultivating. Oddly, Syria is also invited, even though it is on the official State Department list of governments which support terrorism.

Conspicuously absent from the guest list is Israel. Asked for an explanation, a USIA official responded that Israel is "the last country in the world" that needs help in handling the media.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Human rights improved, says U.S.

WASHINGTON — Human rights situations are improving in the vast majority of the countries of Latin America, according to the U.S. State Department.

William Giandoni

Only Cuba, Grenada, Haiti, Nicaragua, Paraguay and Surinam were listed as countries where human rights are severely restricted or where their observance worsened in 1982.

What is more, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, on releasing the 1,323-page report, which covered 162 nations of the world, noted that Brazil, Uruguay, El Salvador and the Dominican Republic moved vigorously toward more democratic governments by holding honest elections last year.

Following are some of the department's comments on individual Latin nations and some of the former European colonies that have figured in the news recently.

Argentina's "military government instituted major changes ... in 1982, easing restraints on political and civil liberties and committing itself to elections by not later than November 1983."

Bolivia's inauguration of President Hernan Siles Zuazo Oct. 10 marked Bolivia's return to civilian democratic government after 18 years of nearly continuous military rule. Political amnesty was declared in May, under the military regime.

In Brazil, "the successful completion of the national elections" was the most significant change in the human rights picture. "The long-term improvement ... began during the late 1970s; 1982 has witnessed the continued consolidation of the earlier changes. ..."

Chile's human rights situation has "improved significantly. ... The first six months of 1982 were relatively free of political violence but extremist violence showed a moderate increase beginning about midyear."

"Colombia enjoys a strong, functioning multiparty democracy."

Costa Rica's presidential election Feb. 7, 1982, and the inauguration of President Luis Alberto Monge three months later "continues Costa Rican tradition of 30 years of free and democratic elections." Terrorism, which has its origin in "political turmoil in other Central American countries," is "the most alarming threat to human rights in Costa Rica."

Cuba is "a tightly controlled Marxist-Leninist state dominated by the Cuban Communist Party." The Cuban constitution of 1976 provides that "the government may restrict any right or freedom when exercised in 'opposition to the state.'"

In the Dominican Republic citizens now enjoy in practice the broad range of human rights guaranteed them by the 1976 constitution. "The openness of Dominican society allows information about alleged abuses to come to the fore."

Ecuador is "a strong supporter of human rights within the Andean Pact and in Latin America."

El Salvador is in transition from a civilian-military junta to a multiparty democracy. Civil strife between Marxist guerrillas and the U.S.-backed government "has led to human rights violations by all parties involved," but there were signs of improvement with political assassinations, killings of civilians, disappearances and torture reported "at substantially lower levels than in 1981."

In Grenada, human rights have continued to deteriorate since the March 1979 coup, with no improvement in the government's attitude noted in 1982.

Guatemala's human rights picture "changed fundamentally" after Gen. Efrain Rios Montt assumed the presidency following a coup in March. "In the short term, human rights trends in Guatemala will be greatly influenced by the state of the guerrilla movement," that has been battling Guatemalan governments since the early 1960s.

Haiti "severely" restricts civil and political rights, but the department said "the long-term trend is toward slow improvement."

Honduras has had its first constitutional president in nearly 10 years since January 1982. President Roberto Suazo "has dealt firmly with terrorist situations," but "with patience and restraint."

Mexico, "more economically advanced than most developing countries," showed "some improvement" in the human rights situation in 1982. "Most attention has focused on the fate of 'disappeared' or missing persons held by the government," alleged to number around 500.

Nicaragua, run by "a group of nine Marxist revolutionary leaders who took control in July 1979," saw its human rights situation deteriorate "markedly" in 1982.

Panama moved toward "a full democratic government, a process to culminate in direct national elections" in 1984. The government "continued its generally good record of respect for the integrity of the person."

Paraguay has experienced "tranquility, stability and economic growth" under the rule of Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, who became president 29 years ago, in 1954, "but at a considerable cost to political rights and individual liberties." The department said that "there were increased detentions and no improvement in the areas of political rights and individual liberties in 1982."

Peru suffered an increase in political terrorism in 1982 "by a fanatical Maoist group, Sendero Luminoso." The human rights violations there "seem to have been cases of excesses by individuals, rather than the result of government policy."

LETTERS

Postal service delaying mail

To The Editor:

Should you receive this letter I will be astounded!

This letter is directed to our "new postmaster in regard to our current "postal service."

On Jan. 6th I mailed a letter to a friend in the city — on Feb. 4th I received the letter at my return address stating the mail was "not deliverable as addressed." The address used was also this individual's business address. Needless to say the building is still standing and still has the same address it has had for the past five years or so.

I placed an order with a company in Illinois on Nov. 9th, which would supposedly take two weeks for delivery. I received it last week; it has been "lost in the mail."

Today, the 14th of February, we received at the office in which I work a bill marked "unclaimed." This bill had been mailed from our office Jan. 19th to another business in town, and also had been sent to the correct mailing address. Had it been certified or registered mail and returned unclaimed I could certainly understand the situation; however, it was sent first class general delivery and the responsibility of the post office.

I have just two questions for this impeccable department of our "governing body:"

First of all, can I "not claim" any bills I receive if I'm not in the frame of mind to pay them that particular month as in the instance above?

Secondly, who will pay the penalty made on my credit if my bills are not received in a timely manner should I decide to "claim" them in the first place?

Frankly, I feel it is high time we begin to get what we pay for and I can think of no better place to start than the government, after all I pay them 25 percent of my salary monthly to do their job. Or is it perhaps, that they simply own 25 percent of me!

Last but not least — the "postal service" has changed the zip codes throughout the entire United States of America, but in order for the public to be aware of the changes made we will have to buy a new zip code book from the post office for the nominal fee of $9 for anyone interested — how touching, another hidden tax.

Time of crisis

To The Editor:

Recently I have been contemplating the state of this nation, and I believe much good will come of our current economic crisis.

When water is banked up, it only starts going deeper and finding new paths around its barrier to reach its destination. Likewise, during this time of crisis, we are being forced to dig down deeper into ourselves and discover new depths of character and a new meaning to life. And, in doing so, we would do well to remember the Possibility Thinker's Creed: When faced with a mountain, I will not quit. I will keep on striving until I climb over, find a pass through, tunnel underneath, or simply stay and turn that mountain into a gold mine. With God's help.

During this time of crisis, we would do well to do three things: (1) remember that "righteousness exalts a nation" (Pr. 14:34) and "blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord." (Ps. 33:10); (2) pray for our government leaders, for they need and deserve our prayers so much, especially during this difficult time; and (3) those who are Christians need to renew their commitment to Him Who is the God of our nation.

To those who are unemployed, I know what it is to not be able to pay the rent or put food on the table, but hold on, for better times are coming, and it is often through adversity that our greatest character is born.

To all of you I say let us not give up and "jump ship." Our great nation has weathered many a storm and will, no doubt, be called upon to weather many more. But we will make it, and we will be stronger because of it. Remember the Statue of Liberty: She stands in New York Harbor holding high the torch of freedom for all who enter there to see. And by the grace of God, she will continue to stand tall and be a beacon of hope for all. Hold on, my fellow Americans. Hold on, for I see a beautiful light at the end of the tunnel.

Libyan involvment in death plots alleged

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick accused Libya of plotting to kill American diplomats in the Middle East and at least one European capital, as well as the prime minister of a neighboring African country.

She refused to elaborate on the allegations Tuesday in her address to the 15-nation Security Council.

The meeting was requested by the Libyan government, which charged that the use of American AWACS radar planes in Egypt and the dispatch of U.S. warships to Mediterranean waters near Libya were part of an "aggressive policy."

Mrs. Kirkpatrick said that the U.S. military maneuvers apparently had deterred a Libyan attack on Sudan. Libya has denied Sudan's allegations that it planned to overthrow the government in Khartoum last Friday, but then postponed the coup order for "a month or two."

The Pentagon announced Tuesday that the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz and accompanying ships had returned to their cruising location off Lebanon. U.S. Defense Department officials also said the four Airborne Warning and Control System planes probably would leave Egypt today.

"The United States desires to fabricate pretexts to interfere in the affairs of Libya," Libyan Ambassador Ali A. Treiki told the council.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick called Libya's charges against the United States "false and malicious" in a letter distributed to the council before her speech.

"Furious that its plans for illegal, violent action were frustrated, the government of Libya comes now to the Security Council with lying complaints against the United States. In fact, the United States committed none of the acts charged by the government of Libya."

She then told the council Libya "is involving itself increasingly ... in this hemisphere, always on behalf of military dictatorships, always opposed to democratic regimes and movements."

The American envoy accused Col. Moammar Khadafy's regime of a "1975 plot to murder the prime minister of a neighboring country, plans to kill American ambassadors in several Middle Eastern countries and in at least one European capital."

Afterwards she refused to say how many U.S. ambassadors were targets or name them and would not identify the African prime minister allegedly slated for death.

"If I had intended to be more specific ... I would have said so," she told reporters.

The council adjourned Tuesday without passing any resolutions.

In Khartoum, Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak, on a one-day visit with Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri, said Tuesday that Egyptian jet fighters had scrambled to intercept two Libyan aircraft that violated his country's air space.

Mubarak did not specify when the incident happened but it apparently was during the crisis last week between Sudan and Libya.

The current verbal war between the United States and Libya further aggravated relations between the two countries.

In late 1981, the United States charged that a Libyan hit team sought to assassinate President Reagan.

Soviet minister hints at increased missile strength

MOSCOW (AP) — Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, marking Armed Forces Day today, hinted that the Soviet Union would increase its missile strength if NATO goes ahead with plans for new nuclear deployment in Western Europe this year.

The threat of war, "above all nuclear war," is increasing through the fault of "imperialist circles of the U.S.A. and its allies," Ustinov asserted.

"In such conditions, the Communist party is taking necessary measures to ensure the security of the country and heighten the vigilance of the Soviet people," he said in anniversary remarks published in Soviet newspapers.

Ustinov repeated Soviet claims that the United States, backed by its NATO allies, purposely held an inflexible stance in nuclear arms negotiations at Geneva so that deployment of new U.S. Missiles in Western Europe can be started late this year.

NATO plans to deploy 572 cruise and Pershing missiles to counter Soviet SS-20s aimed at Western Europe unless the talks show progress soon.

"But let the hawkish imperialist circles not hope to achieve military superiority over the U.S.S.R.," Ustinov said.

"If they challenge us, contrary to common sense and defying the peoples' will for peace, and if the United States begins to deploy its medium-range missiles in Western Europe, the Soviet Union will be able to respond to this additional threat effectively and promptly."

Today is the 65th anniversary of the founding of the Soviet army and navy. It is not observed as a national holiday, however, and schools, shops, factories, government offices and public services were operating.

Hijackers free 161 hostages after three days

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Three Libyan hijackers released their 161 hostages today after a three-day siege, witnesses said.

It was not immediately known if the hijackers surrendered.

After the hijackers notified Maltese authorities of their decision to surrender, Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, who was personally conducting negotiations, drove up to the Libyan Arab Airlines plane to greet the hostages.

Sick people and children were taken to five ambulances, which took them to a makeshift sick bay set up in the airport lounge.

The rest of the passengers and crew members boarded three Air Malta buses and were escorted to the terminal.

Earlier, unidentified foreign fighter planes were sighted flying over the airport. Airport officials speculated the jets might be from Libya — perhaps in attempt to pressure Malta in negotiations with the hijackers, who forced a jetliner to land on this Mediterranean island while on a domestic flight to Tripoli Sunday.

An army officer who confirmed reporters' observation of the foreign planes said the sighting forced the Maltese to turn off control tower lights and the searchlights trained on the commandeered Libyan Arab Airlines jetliner parked at Luqa International Airport.

The army officer asked not to be identified.

The hijackers had demanded to go to the United States, France or West Germany.

The French Foreign Ministry said today it had not received any request for asylum but noted that France consistently taken a tough line against air piracy.

The United States stood firm, too.

"We will not deal with the hijackers unless they release all the passengers and the crew," U.S. Embassy spokesman Joel Levy said today.

None of the hostages is believed to be American.

A spokesman for the West German Foreign Ministry said today an Associated Press reporter's query was the first he had heard of the request for asylum. The spokesman, who declined to be identified, said his nation's policy is that "hijackers should be sentenced either in the country where they are arrested or the country where they come from."

Morocco had turned down the hijackers' earlier request for safe passage to that country, saying it didn't want to encourage pirates of the sky.

11-volume 'Diary of Samuel Pepys' offers unique look at 17th-century London

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Sex, partying and gallstones. It took 50 years, but today, the 350th birthday of author Samuel Pepys, you can read about that and more in the unexpurgated 1,300,000-word diary of his young manhood in 17th century London.

The release of a 626-page companion and separate index to "The Diary of Samuel Pepys" finished an 11-volume landmark in the history of publishing.

Today's publication of the work, for the first time including some of its juiciest passages, also makes for great reading.

The diarist's philandering, including the time his wife, Elizabeth, caught him making love to her companion, teenager Deb Willet, is among the frank revelations in the full version of one of the world's most famous books.

"I would love to have had him as a fellow guest at a dinner table — he had an enormous vitality and interest in other people," editor Robert Latham told The Associated Press in an interview.

Locked away for more than 100 years until the first abbreviated edition appeared in 1825, the diary Pepys kept between the ages of 27 and 36 also describes the Great Plague of London in 1665, the Great Fire the next year and the Restoration of the English monarchy with King Charles II after the death of Cromwell.

Its reading is mandatory for many high school English literature classes, but until now students could only consume the cleaned-up version of some excerpts.

Pepys was a tailor's son who rose to become Clerk of the Acts to the Navy Board and to be considered the founder of the modern Royal Navy. But his immortality comes from his sharp, good-humored view of how the British ate, drank, traveled and caroused in the years 1660-1669.

Pepys died in 1703. No one knows just why he quit writing his enticing entries when he did, although there are theories.

"I think it was the fear that he was going blind," said Latham, adding that the death of Mrs. Pepys in 1669 might also have broken the diarist's routine. Pepys never did go blind.

When the ninth and final volume of the diary text was published in 1976, The Times of London described the venture as "one of the glories of contemporary English publishing."

This definitive version has Pepys' expansive notes on everything from his gallstone surgery to guilt about stringing his lute on a Sunday.

JOGJAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — President Suharto today reopened the ancient Borobudur Buddhist temple in central Java, restored after 10 years of work by 700 workers at a cost of $25 million.

Participating in the ceremony was Amadow Mahtar M'bow, director general of the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization. UNESCO helped fund the restoration of the 8th Century monument

U.S. Marines have live firing drill

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. Marine Corps conducted a live firing drill in Okinawa today, its second this year, a corps spokesman said.

Abouo 75 Marines from the 12th Marine Regiment at Camp Hansen in northern Okinawa fired 100 live shells from four 105-mm howitzers in the camp training range for about two hours, the spokesman said.

He said about 160 demonstrators protested the drill outside the base, but didn't interfere with the exercise.

Former Iranian diplomat freed

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — A former Iranian deputy prime minister accused of smuggling opium was freed after a West German court accepted his claim of diplomatic immunity, judicial officials said today.

Sadegh Tabatabai, brother-in-law of Ayatollah Ruholla Khomeini's son Ahmed, was detained Jan. 8 at the Duesseldorf airport.

Authorities said they found more than 3 pounds of raw opium worth $17,000 in Tabatabai's luggage when the 39-year-old biochemist arrived on a flight from Tehran.

Swedish police break drug ring

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedish police say they have broken up an international drug ring including a Lebanese airline captain who smuggled heroin by hiding it in his pilot's cap.

The captain, flying a Boeing 707 air freight jet owned by Trans Mediterranean Airlines, touched down at Arlanda International airport here about once a month, police said.

Each time, he breezed past unsuspecting customs officials with up to 500 grams of pure heroin hidden in his cap, they said. The amount has an estimated street value of about $350,000.

Foreign exchange controls begin

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The Venezuelan government imposed foreign exchange controls today in an effort to stop the drain of currency from the country.

Venezuelan Minister of Finance Arturo Sosa made the announcement after meeting for several hours with President Luis Herrera Campins and other members of the president's Council of Ministers.

Sosa read a statement on the measures from Herrera declaring that the official exchange rate of 4.3 bolivars to the dollar would be maintained for essential needs of the country, such as food, medicine, and imports for the oil industry.

Water strike to end

LONDON (AP) — After a month of boiling drinking water, Britons are relieved that a water-and-sewage strike ends Thursday and they will be able to pour a fresh glass of water from their taps.

Union leaders say the tentative settlement will also please 29,000 strikers by giving them a basic wage hike of about 12 percent, despite the stringent fiscal policies of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government.

"The settlement is much higher than the employers would have wished," said Len Hill, chairman of the negotiating team for the state-run National Water Council.

Union leaders called off the strike Tuesday after a deal was struck that gives the workers the increase in basic wages over a 16-month period.

Mrs. Thatcher's administration has sought to limit pay increase to public workers to about 4.5 or 5 percent.

The settlement, which rank-and-file will consider in a hand vote today, was "the best deal any group of workers has achieved in this pay round" (recent settlements), said Ron Keating, general secretary of the National Union of Public Employees.

Union leaders Tuesday night told the strikers to return to work Thursday morning.

Ahead is a backlog of work: repairing burst water mains and doing essential maintenance work that has left some 91,000 homes and businesses without direct water supply, forced 8.25 million Britons to boil their drinking water and sent untreated sewage tumbling into England's waterways.

The Water Council said it could be two to three weeks before the last major bursts are repaired and that people in affected homes will have to keep boiling water for at least another week.

"The political repercussions of the deal could be considerable," the London Times commented today.

"We have beaten off the government who tried to enforce an incomes policy in the public sector," said David Basnet, general secretary of the General Municipal Boilermakers and Allied Trades Union, one of the three unions involved in the dispute.

"As a result, gas and electricity workers will be more determined to press for larger increases."

Officials of both sides have accepted the proposed agreement, sketched out by an independent, three-man panel.

The council had been offering raises of 7.3 percent over 16 months.

El Paso Eastwood defeats Midland High, 58-44

There will be no Tall City team in Girls' Regional Tournament

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

EL PASO — There will be no Midland basketball teams in this weekend's Regional Girls' playoffs at Langford Chaparral Center.

Midland High, the Tall City's last hope for a home team in the four-team playoff series, lost the area title to El Paso Eastwood 58-44 here Thursday night.

The Bulldogs, who fell behind 8-0 to open the game, never led in the one-sided contest.

"It's not how many points they had, it's how many we didn't have," Midland coach Jane Young said.

It was three and a half minutes into the game before Denise Lanz scored Midland's first points with a pair of free throws. A minute later Penny Griffin hit the Bulldogs' first field goal, making the score 12-4.

The first quarter was indicative of the game as Midland usually got only one shot against Eastwood's dominating board strength.

"Their inside game was very good," Young said. "We just couldn't stop their big girls."

One of those "big girls" was Carol Glover, who led the Eastwood first quarter charge with half of the Troopers 16 points. The 5-foot-10 junior finished with a game-high 20.

"I can put Carol anywhere," Eastwood coach Roland Menser said. "Inside, outside, whereever I need her, she'll do a good job."

MIDLAND, WHICH got only one turnover in the opening eight minutes, began the second period with a full court press that gave Eastwood problems. The Troopers had trouble with the inbounds pass as they had several blocked or tipped, but, with the exception of one five second violation, the Bulldogs' press did not cause a turnover. Midland had five contributing to a 35-26 lead.

"We just didn't get anything from our press," Young said. "We seemed dead-legged, we just didn't get up and down the court. We were on the road from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., and that's tiring. It's no excuse though. We were just outplayed on the court."

Menser, whose team made the same trip to Midland for the Tall City Tournament agreed saying, "It's a long ride. I'm sure they would have played better if they had come down the day before. When we go to the Regional Tournament in Midland, we'll fly if we can."

BOTH TEAM'S shooting went cold as the third period opened. Eastwood broke the 10-point lead barrier midway through the quarter when Alex Provencio put in a layup on a breakaway. Provencio, a 6-foot-1 center, had 14 points for the Troopers.

The Bulldogs' ball-handling, one area which was supposed to be superior, was again their downfall in the third period. MHS suffered eight turnovers to the Troopers' three and Eastwood led 47-33 going into the final frame.

With Midland playing a desperate catch-up game, the fourth period was a faster paced and foul-plagued quarter. Eastwood's biggest lead was 15 points at 55-40.

Both teams shot reasonably well from the field, Eastwood hitting 48 percent to Midland's 45, but the Troopers took and made more shots. Both teams scored eight points from the free throw line.

"I just didn't shoot as much as I should have," Bulldog Sheila Christian said. "We hustled more the first time we played them (a Midland High victory, 60-59 before district 4-5A play got underway). We were just more aggressive."

The 5-foot-7 senior, who has led the team in scoring all season with a 14.8 average, only managed seven points in the game. Denise Lanz and Rebecca Caton scored 14 each to pace Midland High.

El Paso will have two representatives in the Regional Tournament as Bel Air, which shared 2-5A championship with Eastwood, defeated Lubbock Monterrey 71-61 in Monahans. District 8-5A representatives Duncanville and Nimitz will round out the four-team tournament field.

Midland High (44): Rebecca Caton, 6-2-1-14; Sheila Christian, 3-1-4-7; Denise Lanz, 5-4-2-14; Penny Griffin, 2-0-2-4; Orvetta Johnson, 2-0-3-4; Margaret Stanley, 0-1-1-1; Cindy Besek, 0-0-1-0; Teresa Mason, 0-0-1-0; Lisa Bowers, 0-0-0-0; Karen Tabor, 0-0-0-0; Deidra Knapp, 0-0-0-0; Sally Seal, 0-0-0-0; Sharon Mendenhall, 0-0-0-0. Totals: 18-8-15-44.

El Paso Eastwood (58): Carol Glover, 9-2-3-20; Alex Provencio, 6-2-3-14; Debbie Anderson, 4-3-3-11; Carla Clark, 3-1-0-7; Julie DeMoss, 2-0-2-4; Cathy Gonzalez, 1-0-3-2; Denise Miller, 0-0-1-0; Kim Reasoner, 0-0-1-0; Margo Campbell, 0-0-0-0; Shelley Bentley, 0-0-0-0. Totals: 25-8-16-58.

Walker ineligible, will join Generals

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Herschel Walker, Georgia's Heisman Trophy winner, has been declared ineligible for his senior season of collegiate football and will play with the New Jersey Generals of the new United States Football League, the school said today.

In a prepared statement, the school said Walker was "technically ineligible" because he had agreed to a contract with the Generals.

While refusing to confirm the signing outright, Generals vice president of business affairs Charles Theokas said Walker's arrival would "absolutely have a huge, huge impact on the credibility of the franchise," much as the signing of Joe Namath out of Alabama gave instant credibility to the fledgling American Football League two decades ago.

Generals spokesman Kevin MacDonnell said Walker was due to arrive at the team's Orlando, Fla., training camp today. The USFL season begins March 6.

Reports said Walker, 20, actually had signed an agreement last week with the Generals, worth a reported $16.5 million, but had decided to exercise a 24-hour escape clause contained within the contract.

"He made a mistake and he admits that," Georgia football Coach Vince Dooley said today. "He's had an early education in the hard reality of the business profession. Now it's time for him to look ahead.

"This is indeed a sad day for Georgia," Dooley said. "Herschel Walker has meant so much to our program the past three years."

News of the decision struck hard at home, where the Georgia Senate decided to wear red and black armbands in "mourning" for the loss of Herschel.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association's chief enforcement officer, David Berst, said the matter of Walker's ineligibility and his decision to quit college football had come about rather abruptly, despite rumors that had persisted since last Friday and an NCAA decision to investigate the case.

Berst said the USFL contacted Georgia coaches Tuesday night, at which time Dooley spoke with Walker. Dooley called the NCAA this morning.

"They were well aware of NCAA rules by that time," Berst said. "Because of our prior conversations, we (the NCAA and Georgia) knew what course of action was needed."

The school's statement said Walker "now has decided to sign an official contract" with the Generals, thus ending five days of speculation on his future that started with reports in the Atlanta Constitution that the Generals had offered him $16.5 million to skip to the new league.

At first Walker denied the reports. He said there was no actual offer, adding last Friday at a news conference, "I am planning to return to Georgia for my fourth year."

Then, on Saturday, the Boston Globe reported that Walker already had put his name on a contract with the Generals, deciding within his 24-hour grace period that he had acted prematurely. For him, however, the damage already had been done.

The university's statement said information about Walker's agreement with the Generals was brought to Dooley's attention Tuesday afternoon by assistant football coach Mike Cavan, who had been contacted by USFL officials.

"Dooley subsequently had conversations with Walker Tuesday night," the statement said. "Both agreed Walker's actions would cause him to be ineligible on two potential points: the negotiation of an agreement and the involvement of Walker's attorney in the matter.

"After discussions with his parents, Walker has decided it would be in his best interest to pursue a professional football career at this time."

Walker, a three-time All-American, was not immediately available for comment.

"There's been an immediate impact on ticket sales," Theokas said from the team's headquarters at Hackensack, N.J. "The phones have been ringing already."

The NCAA began an investigation of Walker's dealings with the USFL earlier this week after the published reports. Berst indicated, however, that with Walker's decision to jump to the USFL, the matter was dropped.

"Walker and USFL officials disclosed that Walker earlier had agreed to negotiate a professional contract with the New Jersey Generals, thereby affecting his continuing eligibility under NCAA regulations," Berst said. "The NCAA appreciates the cooperation of the University of Georgia officials, officials of the USFL and Mr. Walker in this matter and wishes Mr. Walker continued success in his future endeavors."

Walker gained 5,259 yards in his three seasons at Georgia, only 823 less than Tony Dorsett's four-year NCAA record. He ran for 1,752 yards and scored 17 touchdowns in winning the Heisman last season.

A world-class sprinter, Walker also had expressed a desire to compete in the 1984 Olympic Games. However, that aspiration disappeared with his signing with New Jersey.

"Once a pro, always a pro," U.S. Olympic Committee spokesman Bob Paul said. "The rule is a hangover from Elizabethan times, and it's one we're trying to change, but there's not enough time to get it changed prior to the 1984 Olympics.

"Walker is not eligible for the Olympics ...."

Greenwood girls beat Whitharral

LAMESA — The Greenwood girls hit 29 of 36 free throws to break open what had been a close game Tuesday night and set up a 59-41 victory over Whitharral in Class A Area game played here.

Leading by a 29-26 count going into the final frame, the Rangers canned 22 of their free throws down the stretch in a big 30-point quarter to gain the victory and a berth in Friday's Regional game against Forsans.

It took Greenwood about six minutes to post its first points of the game and the Rangers ended up trailing 9-4 at the end of the opening quarter, but cut the margin to 20-19 by halftime.

"Both teams were real tight," said Greenwood coach Cliff Stephens. "There wasn't more than two minutes left on the clock before we even scored. Whitharral has a real fine ball team and they took it to us in the first half. I was real proud of the girls, the way they came back in the second half. They showed a lot of character. We probably played the best second half we've had all year to make up for the worst first half."

GOING INTO the game, Coach Stephens was "real concerned with our free throw shooting but the kids really came through last night. We were 29 of 36 for the game and they were hitting some clutch free throws in the fourth quarter. If we hadn't been hitting those, Whitharral could have made a game of it real quick. They're the kind of team that can explode on you and score a lot of points.

"We told the girls at halftime that you have to take these games one at a time. I don't know if what we said at halftime had any effect, but the girls came out and played like champions."

On the night the two teams scored 50 free throws with Greenwood holding a 29-21 advantage at the line. Renvy Evans and Belinda Duke each came away from the line with 11 points to pace the Rangers in scoring with 19 each while Kay Wallace added 11. For Whitharral, Shelly Kay connected on 16 free throws to enroute to a 24-point performance.

The victory over Whitharral gives Greenwood a 27-2 record on the season while Whitharral fell to 28-3. On Friday night, the Rangers will travel to Levelland where they will take on Forsans at 4 p.m.

Forsans is one of only two teams that has beaten Greenwood this year, a 48-47 ball game, and the Rangers would like to avenge that loss and continue their path to the State Playoffs in Austin.

The only other Greenwood loss came at the hands of District 4-5A's Midland High, a 42-38 defeat in the Tall City Tournament.

Greenwood (59): Renvy Evans, 4-11-19; Kay Wallace, 5-1-11; Cindy Lea, 1-0-2; Belinda Duke, 4-11-19; Deonna Dean, 1-1-3; MarieMorgette, 0-5-5. Totals 15-29-59.

Whitharral (41): Shelly Kay, 4-16-24; Joyce Mills, 1-1-3; Angela Polk, 1-2-4; Donna Lucas, 3-0-6; Cecyle Marrow, 0-1-1; Donna Lorenz, 0-1-1; Jenny Joplin, 1-0-2. Totals 10-21-41.

Seton Hall upsets Pitt, 74-68

By The Associated Press

Just goes to show you can't trust any of these Big East teams.

As balanced a basketball league as there is in the country, the Big East had another of its twisty nights Tuesday as lightly-regarded Seton Hall took the measure of Pitt 74-68.

"We've been playing hard all season, but this was the first time we really got something for our efforts," said Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo. "We got a solid 40-minute effort tonight. We've had stretches of playing well for 20-25 minutes, but never for the whole game."

It was Seton Hall's first Big East victory in 18 games, dating back to last season. The hapless Pirates were 0-13 in the conference this season before Tuesday night's win in South Orange, N.J.

The triumph, only the fifth in 24 games overall for Seton Hall, was all the more impressive because it came against one of the hottest teams in the league. The Panthers had won six of their last seven Big East games, including victories this month over St. John's, Georgetown and Syracuse, all Top Twenty teams.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Clyde Vaughan, who led the Panthers with 18 points, tied the score at 47, before McCloud hit two more jumpers to give the Pirates a lead they never relinquished.

In games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 5 Louisville beat Wright State 71-55; No. 7 Villanova stopped St. Joseph's (Pa.) 70-62 and No. 20 Tennessee tripped Auburn 82-74.

Top Ten

Lancaster Gordon scored 16 points and Charles Jones had a career-high 10 blocked shots to lead Louisville to a sluggish victory over Wright State.

Louisville, 23-3, was unable to break the game open against the NCAA Division II visitors from Dayton, Ohio, and the final 16-point margin was Louisville's largest of the game.

Louisville native Fred Moore led Wright State, 20-4, with 19 points.

"I didn't think we would be real spectacular tonight and we weren't," Louisville Coach Denny Crum said.

He added that the Cardinals' 24 turnovers showed they weren't mentally ready for Wright State.

"I thought Wright State was better than our players thought they were," he said.

John Pinone scored 20 points as Villanova defeated intra-city rival St. Joseph's to win the Big Five championship of Philadelphia. The Wildcats, 20-4, led from the outset on baskets by Dwayne McClain and Pinone. After building a 33-26 halftime, Villanova never led by less than seven points.

Second Ten

Senior Dale Ellis, playing his last regular-season home-court game, scored 35 points to help Tennessee defeat Auburn.

Ellis, a 6-foot-7 forward, was mobbed by fans and congratulated by Tennessee and Auburn players after a second half which saw the Tigers move from a 15-point deficit with 8:55 to trail 78-73 with 2:05 to go.

Along with Ellis, Tennessee got 20 points from Michael Brooks and 15 points from Dan Federmann to hold off Auburn's final rally.

"Dale Ellis was just great inside all night, " said Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe. "He never shows any emotion despite the situation. Without a doubt, I think he is the best player in the Southeastern Conference."

Arbitration a bitter pill to take

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Imagine a general, preparing to storm an enemy bastion, calling his troops together for a rallying speech.

"We've got a big job ahead of us, men," he bellows. "I wish you were equal to the job. But you're just average soldiers. You're not worth what the government is paying you. But we'll have to take our chances, anyhow.

"Charge!"

That's not too far astray from some of the arbitration meetings that take place between representatives of major league baseball owners and players who can't agree on a contract.

Calvin Griffith, owner of the Minnesota Twins, emerged from such a session recently at which the arbitrator awarded relief pitcher Ron Davis $475,000 for the 1983 season, and you would have thought Davis spat in his face.

"I'm so sick," said the chubby Twins boss, "I almost wanted to vomit."

The club had offered Davis $360,000.

"He is no more entitled to that kind of money than I am being president of the United States," Griffith fumed. "I know deep down in my heart that I would die a slow death if I had to pay him that kind of money for the whole year."

A WEEK later, after a similar hearing, the New York Mets' Mookie Wilson was awarded a salary of $325,000, more than tripling his $100,000 paycheck the year before, and this time it was General Manager Frank Cashen's time to hit the roof.

"I'm shocked," said the Mets executive. "I'm disappointed. Mookie hit .279 and tripled his salary ... If you take into account the strike season that was only 92 games or so he's played only two years.

"What if he hits .279 again this season? Do you triple his salary again next year?"

When Rick Cerone won a $440,000 arbitration suit two years ago, Yankee owner George Steinbrenner was livid, accusing his catcher of lacking loyalty.

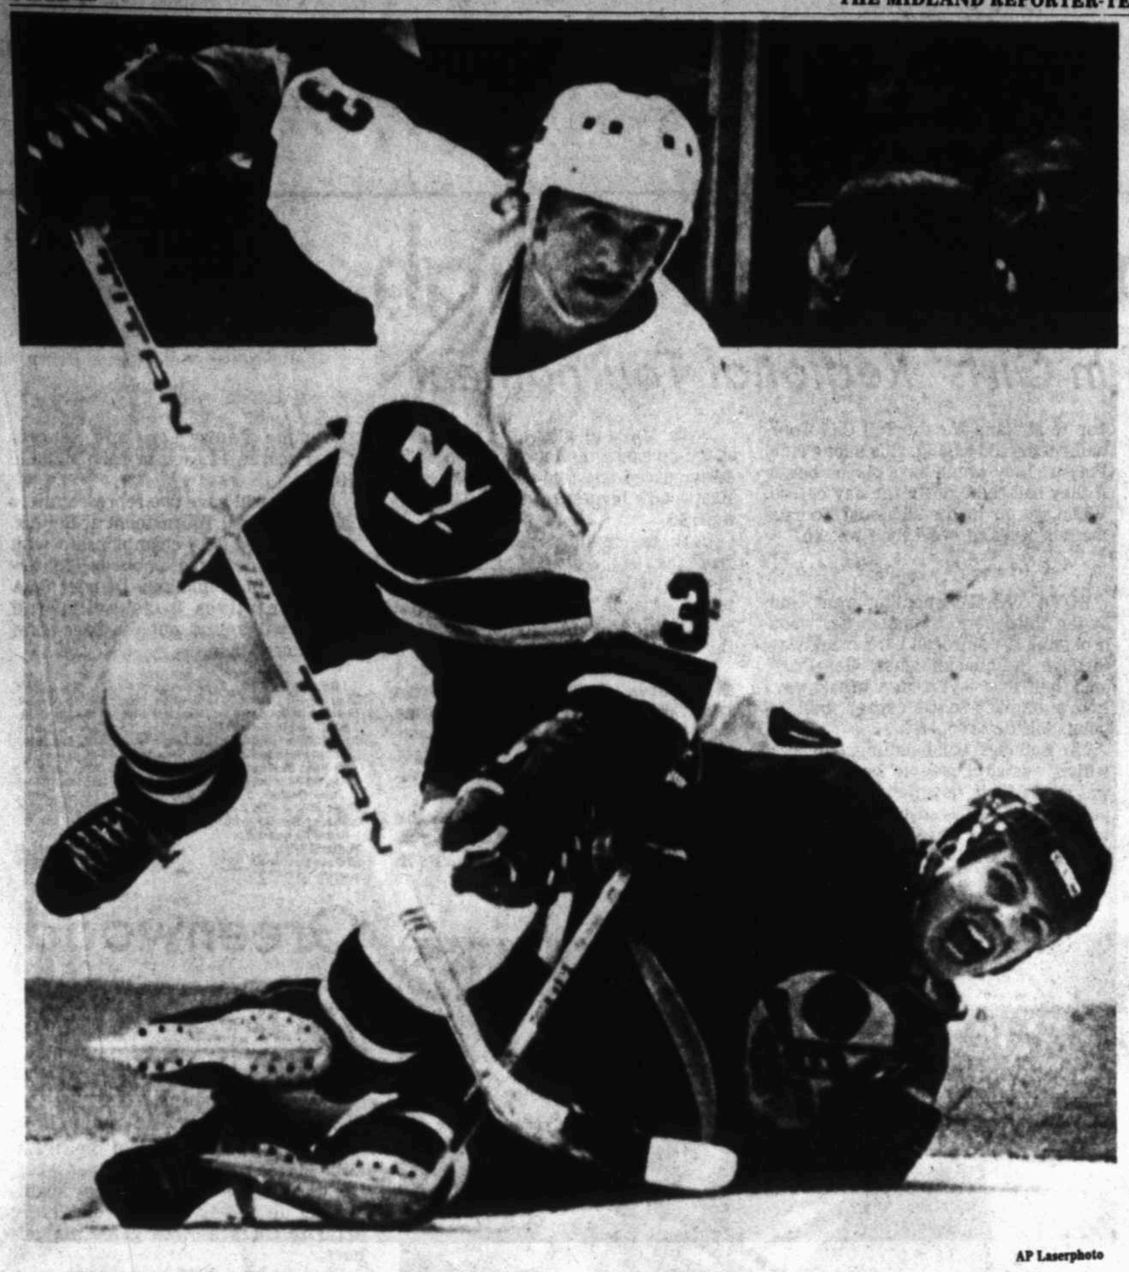

"These cases are not unusual," says Peter Rose, a former associate general counsel for the Players Association, who now, as an attorney, represents players at arbitration hearings. "I've seen club owners literally denigrate their players, rip them apart at such hearings.

"I've seen players leave these meetings with their morale shattered. They say, 'Well, if that's what these guys think of me, to heck with them. I don't want to play for them.' "

"It doesn't foster a healthy relationship. But it's the best means available to settle salary issues."

NEUTRAL ARBITRATION has been a part of baseball business life since 1974, coinciding with the advent of free agency. Days are gone when guys like Babe Ruth simply walked into owner Jake Ruppert's office and hammered out salary head-to-head.

Now negotiating is done by lawyers and agents. That failing, the case is taken to arbitration — the club submitting a figure it feels the player is worth, the player countering with his own appraisal of his value.

Dionne establishes another noteworthy achievement

By The Associated Press

He has never come close to a National Hockey League championship. Few of the teams he's played on have had winning records.

Yet Marcel Dionne keeps right on plugging away, setting milestones and hoping that someday, he will lead the Los Angeles Kings to the Stanley Cup.

Dionne established another noteworthy achievement Tuesday night, scoring his 40th goal as the Kings downed the Boston Bruins 5-3. The shifty veteran center, now in his 12th season as an NHL star, is the first player ever to score at least that many goals in nine seasons.

The historic 40th came at 8:03 of the third period and lifted the Kings into a 5-2 lead. Just 38 seconds earlier, Terry Ruskowski had connected on a power play for Los Angeles.

"I care for the people that I work for," Dionne said when asked what keeps him going despite the lack of team success he's endured. "I have a lot of pride. I can't let myself down. Every game, every season and every practice is a challenge to me."

The Kings remained just one point ahead of Vancouver in the race for the final Smythe Division playoff berth. The Canucks defeated St. Louis 6-3 Tuesday.

Elsewhere, it was Montreal 6, Quebec 1; the New York Islanders 2, Winnipeg 2; Minnesota 3, Detroit 2, and Calgary 4, Edmonton 1.

"The Kings haven't had too much success over the years in consistency," admitted Dionne, who has been reunited recently with Charlie Simmer and Dave Taylor to reform the 'Triple Crown Line.'

"I don't want to see a mental letdown. Sometimes we suffer from a lack of intensity. We have to keep digging.

NHL

"I want to be cautious because our next game is very important. Now we have to beat Vancouver and beating Vancouver will be very tough because they play a tough defensive game.

"We must beat the weaker teams in the league."

The Kings don't exactly qualify as an NHL power with a 21-30-10 record, but they have lost just once in their last six games in overtaking Vancouver, whom they play Thursday night.

Canucks 6, Blues 3

The Canucks set a team record of 70 power-play goals when Stan Smyl and Ivan Hlinka scored with a man advantage in the first period. Lars Molin had a goal and two assists for Vancouver.

Canadiens 6, Nordiques 1

Montreal continued its unbeaten ways against its provincial rival as Keith Acton scored twice and Guy Lafleur set up three goals. The Canadiens, coming off two of their worst games of the year — a 4-1 loss in Hartford followed by a 5-0 pasting against the Islanders — established a 3-0 lead after two periods, then pulled away after Quebec got its only goal from Anton Stastny.

Acton, who has only 18 goals this season, was placed on Montreal's top line — next to Lafleur and Ryan Walter — and responded with his best offensive night of the season.

"We all like to score but even if you play on an offensive line you have to stop them from scoring," he said. "It was fun tonight because it seemed they were trying to stop us from scoring all the time."

Islanders 2, Jets 2

Winnipeg rookie goaltender Brian Hayward stopped 37 shots as the Jets rebounded from their worst defeat of the season — a 9-4 drubbing by the New York Rangers on Sunday — to tie the Islanders. John Tonelli and Mike Bossy were the only ones to beat Hayward, while defensemen Tim Watters and Moe Mantha scored for the Jets. All four goals came in the first period.

"Any time you shut down the Islanders for two periods, the team is doing a hell of a job," said Hayward. "Things were going my way tonight."

Flames 4, Oilers 1

Lanny McDonald, the NHL's top goal-scorer, connected twice to up his season's total to 52, a Flames' record. He leads Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky, who scored the Oilers' only goal, by one.

Don Edwards stopped 42 shots for the Flames and Guy Chouinard added three assists in the fight-marred contest. A full-scale brawl erupted in the third period, with 22 penalties and 142 minutes assessed.

"I refuse to talk about the fighting," said Flames Coach Bob Johnson. "Instead, I'll say we obviously played a great game against an outstanding team and I thought we played smart hockey."

North Stars 3, Red Wings 2

Brian Bellows scored twice and set up the game-winner by Bobby Smith with only 43 seconds remaining.

"Bellows is everything that I've ever heard about him," said North Stars Coach Murray Oliver. "I never saw him play in the juniors. The only thing he didn't do when he came to us was shoot the puck. Now, he's got a shot.

"Brian is a very mature 18-year-old young man. He's tough enough to play in this league. He has leadership qualities, too."

Big Ten 'gags' Knight for criticizing refs

CHICAGO (AP) — Indiana University Coach Bobby Knight was reprimanded Tuesday by the Big Ten Conference for his recent tirade against basketball officials and the conference said an additional offense could result in a game suspension.

The action was announced by Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke for Knight's conduct in games against Iowa and Northwestern last week.

Following a 74-65 victory Saturday over Northwestern, Knight said, "The officiating in the Big Ten has been the worst in my 12 years since I've been at Indiana. It has deteriorated to the point so far that this is the worst conference in the country. We pay the people the most in the country to officiate and they literally don't understand the game."

The Big Ten has a gag rule against coaches criticizing the officiating publicly — but Knight broke that last Wednesday in the final minute of Iowa's 58-57 victory over Indiana when he directed his wrath against Duke, attending the game.

"I'm sick and tired of the gag rule when it starts hurting kids," said Knight. "You can't play hard when the officiating is horrendous."

The Big Ten released a statement saying the league has "conducted an investigation of circumstances" involving the two games. "A thorough evaluation of all of the pertinent information resulted in the conclusion that there was a violation on the part of Coach Knight of the Conference Sportsmanlike Conduct Code."

According to the code: "Any person who publicly is unduly critical of any game official, conference personnel, another university, or its personnel ... shall be subject to a public reprimand for the first offense, and a suspension for one contest for an additional offense," a suspension meaning the coach "cannot be present in the playing arena for the designated number of contests, but may conduct practice sessions."

Duke said Knight and Indiana University have been told that if Knight again violates the code by engaging in any act of unsportsmanlike conduct within a year, Knight will be suspended for one game "in addition to any other penalty which might be imposed upon Coach Knight or Indiana University."

Two SWC games to be Regionally televised March 5

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Conference games between Texas A&M and Texas Tech and between Houston and Baylor will be regionally telecast March 5 as part of a TV basketball doubleheader on NBC-TV, the SWC office announced Monday.

The Saturday games, originally scheduled for 7:30 p.m., will be moved to afternoon tip-offs.

Army-Navy in Rose Bowl near terms

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An agreement to play the 1983 Army-Navy football game Dec. 3 at the Rose Bowl instead of its traditional site in Philadelphia is nearing completion, according to an official of the Army-Navy Foundation of Pasadena.

Rolfe Arnhym, executive director of the nonprofit foundation, said officials at the Naval Academy and the Military Academy and the secretaries of the Army and Navy have signed an agreement with the foundation, and all that's needed is the approval of Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

Pasadena's board of city directors has approved use of the Rose Bowl. Under the contract, 25 percent of the proceeds would be shared by the academies, with the rest going into the Rose Bowl capital improvement fund.

Arnhym said a crowd of more than 90,000 people would be expected. The expense of transporting some 9,000 midshipmen and cadets to Pasadena would put tickets in $12 to $25 range.

Sawyer, Lemon to head second Old Timers game

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eddie Sawyer, who led Philadelphia's fabled "Whiz Kids" to a pennant in 1950, and Bob Lemon, who steered the New York Yankees to the World Series in 1978 and 1981, have been chosen to head the Second Annual Cracker Jack Old Timers Baseball Classic.

The game, to be played at Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium here July 18, will feature five innings of baseball fun and nostalgia.

Floyds host traditional party before Doral Open

Some media is invited; Leave cameras, note pads at home

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MIAMI (AP) — There was, originally, no real plan to make it an annual affair, but Ray Floyd trapped himself.

"I've got no choice," the current PGA champion said after a practice round for the Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament, which begins Thursday.

Floyd was discussing the party, now one of the highlights of the PGA Tour, which he and wife, Maria, host at their showplace home in an exclusive area near Miami Beach.

It will be held, for the fourth year, Friday night with attendance expected by about 100 pros and officials and a handful of television and press members who follow the Tour on a regular basis.

"We live here. We have a lot of friends on the Tour. We thought it'd be nice to give the players a nice, quiet, easy night out. You know, you go to a party and there's 40 people there you don't know and all they want to do is talk golf and bug you to death.

"This isn't like that. We just wanted to get some friends together — everybody knows everybody else and it's relaxed — for a nice evening. We first thought of just having a dozen people or so. But if you do that, you step on a lot of toes."

SO RAYMOND and Maria opened up the catered affair — a sit-down dinner, waiters, chefs, bartenders, valet parking, the works — to all the touring pros.

"It's just a bunch of friends getting together. Several TV people have asked to bring a crew out to film it. I said no. That's not what it's for. Press people are there, but they're not working.

"The first year we had it, I won the golf tournament," Floyd said. "So I had no choice but to have the party again.

"And the next year I won the golf tournament again.

"So Maria says, 'That's it. It's an annual affair.' "

Ray failed to win the Doral tournament last year, but he's high on the list of those most likely to succeed on the 7,065-yard, par-72 Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club this time.

FIRST, OF course, there's his history of success on what, in effect, is his home course. And, too, he's playing very, very well.

"The best West Coast I've ever had," the 40-year-old veteran said. In four starts on the schedule's western swing, he had two top-10 finishes and broke par in 16 of the 17 rounds he played. He capped it off with a 64 Sunday in the final round at San Diego.

"That helps, at least from a mental standpoint," he said. "I'm playing well and I'm really looking forward to the tournament."

Some other leading players in the 144-man field include current Masters champion Craig Stadler, Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Tom Kite and Rex Caldwell, a runner-up in his last three starts.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Tiger selected as '88 Olympic mascot

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee announced Wednesday the selection of the tiger as mascot of the 1988 Summer Olympics.

A committee spokesman said that tiger was named over some 60 other suggested animals because of its braveness, coupled with Korea's traditional belief that the animal is a spiritual being.

He said the selection needs to be approved by the International Olympic Committee before it becomes official.

The spokesman said that rabbit was the closest rival in the course of a year-long selection process, and that among the suggestions were magpie, crane, Chindo dog, which is an indigenous dog known for its cleverness, deer, turtle and pigeon.

The exact design of the proposed tiger mascot is expected to be completed by May, he said.

Ancient Korean records claim that tiger existed on the country's peninsula, although it has not been sighted for the past century or so at least in South Korea.

Defense not key to Bulls victory over Nuggets

NBA

By The Associated Press

When the Chicago Bulls and Denver Nuggets play, there had better be fresh light bulbs in the scoreboard.

The two teams, ranked next-to-last and last in defense in the National Basketball Association, singed the nets for the second time this season Tuesday night, taking 213 shots before the Bulls prevailed 144-133 at Chicago Stadium.

"We are probably one of the worst defensive teams in the NBA," said Coach Doug Moe of Denver, which allows 123.5 points per game, last in the league. "And while at this point, I cannot teach anybody certain things, my big hope is that we could get some rebounding. Because no matter how good we play defensively if we don't rebound well, we're in trouble."

The Bulls, who lost to the Nuggets 132-124 in Denver on Dec. 3, got 31 points from Orlando Woolridge and 23 each from David Greenwood and Reggie Theus to offset 37 points by Kiki Vandeweghe and 31 from NBA scoring leader Alex English for Denver. Chicago outrebounded the Nuggets 51-43.

Greenwood, who lost his starting forward spot because he was averaging just 7.8 points per game, put the Bulls ahead for good with six straight points late in the game.

Suns 112, Bucks 105

Walter Davis scored 15 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter to power Phoenix over Milwaukee.

Davis also hit a jumper at the buzzer ending the third period to give the Suns an 87-83 lead. Then after Milwaukee closed the gap to 95-93 with 5:58 remaining, Davis hit three straight shots for a 101-93 Phoenix lead.

Junior Bridgeman, who led the Bucks with 20 points, cut the deficit to 107-105 with 1:19 left, but a three-point play by Davis sealed the victory with 42 seconds remaining.

Sonics 117, Clippers 101

Gus Williams scored 27 points and Lonnie Shelton 23 as Seattle easily defeated San Diego.

Fred Brown had six points as the Sonics scored the last nine points of the third quarter to take an 86-70 lead into the final period. The Clippers, who got 20 points apiece from Terry Cummings and Craig Hodges, never got closer than 12 points in the last 12 minutes.

Nets 100, Pacers 108

Albert King led New Jersey with 26 points, including a 12-foot baseline jumper with 23 seconds left that lifted the Nets past Indiana.

The Pacers, who have lost four games in a row, rallied from a 13-point deficit to tie the game twice in the final minutes, but they couldn't pull ahead.

Otis Birdsong was 9-for-9 from the field and scored 21 points for the Nets, while Herb Williams had a career-high 34 points for Indiana.

Warriors 109, Hawks 97

Joe Barry Carroll scored 26 points and sparked a 29-10 run down the stretch that carried Golden State past Atlanta.

With the Warriors trailing 87-80, Carroll hit six points in a row to start the winning rally. Larry Smith put Golden State ahead to stay, 96-94, with two free throws with 2:31 remaining.

Bullets 99, Jazz 98

Jeff Ruland scored 31 points and Washington survived a last-second scare to beat Utah.

The Bullets led 99-96 when John Drew, who paced the Jazz with 26 points, missed a three-point field goal attempt with seven seconds left. Jerry Eaves got the rebound for Utah and hit a long jumper at the three-second mark, but the officials ruled he was just inside the three-point circle.

Knicks 108, Mavericks 106

New York's Bill Cartwright rebounded a missed shot and slam-dunked it for the winning basket with six seconds left against Dallas.

Cartwright, who led the Knicks with 20 points, climaxed a furious fourth quarter that had three lead changes and 11 ties.

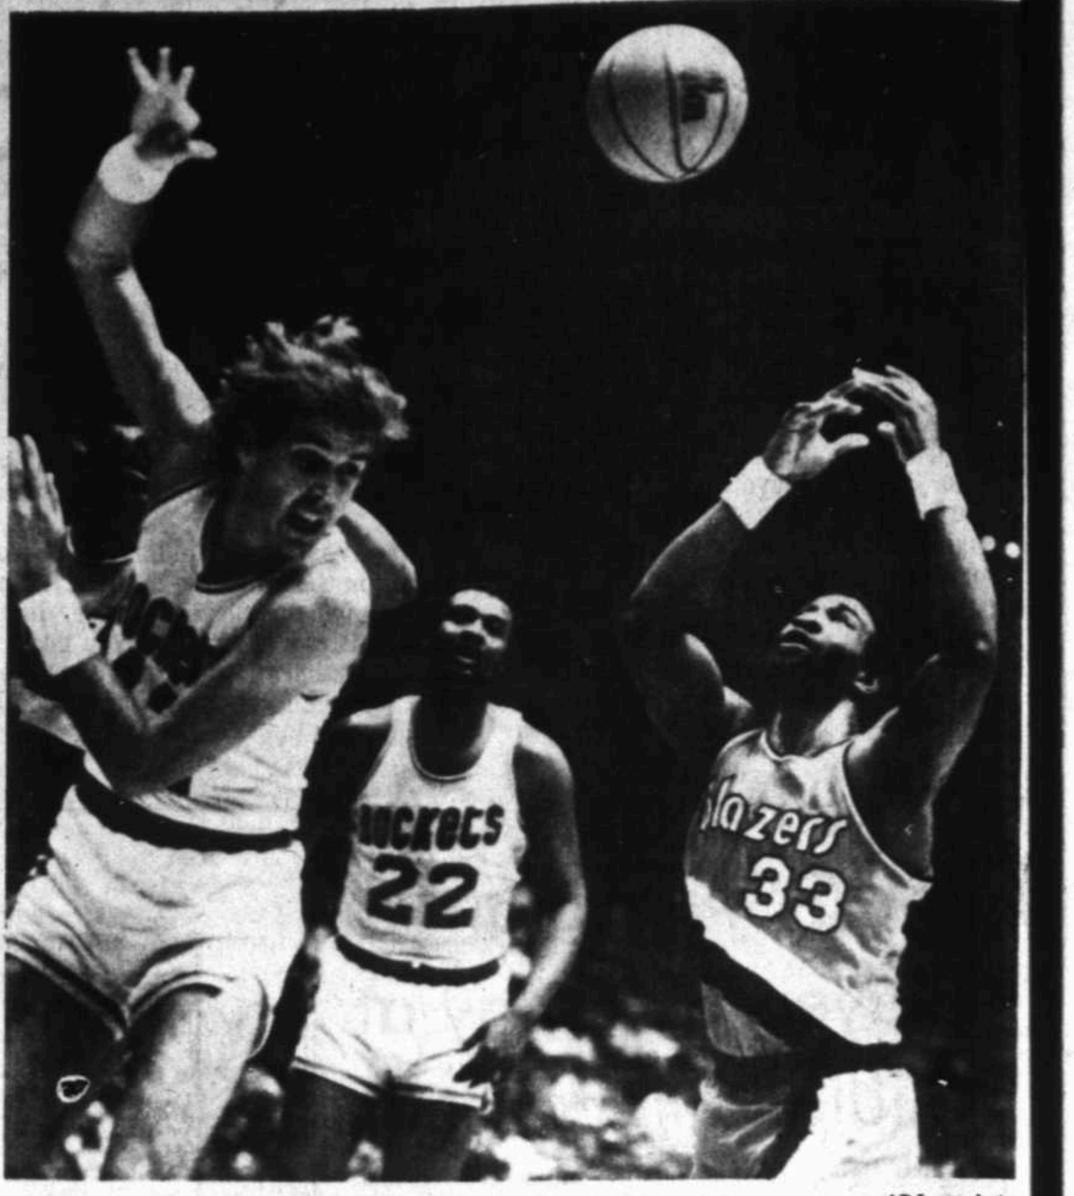

Jay Vincent, who scored 14 points in the fourth quarter and joined Mavericks' teammate Mark Aguirre with 25 points, missed a corner jumper at the buzzer.

Trail Blazers 113, Rockets 107

Jim Paxson scored 28 points and Portland beat Houston despite a spurt of 22 straight points by the Rockets.

The Trail Blazers built a 51-37 lead with the help of a 14-0 run in the first period, but the Rockets, with Allen Leavell scoring 24 of his game-high of 30 points in the first half, answered with their 22 in a row to take a 59-51 advantage.

But Portland held Houston to 16 third-quarter points for a comfortable 93-77 lead going into the final period.

Richard in better shape, may find a few more to pitch to COCOA, Fla. (AP) — There were few volunteer hitters when Houston pitcher J.R. Richard took the mound to pitch batting practice last September — and those who did approached the plate as if tip-toeing through a mine field.

Richard, trying to come back from a near-fatal stroke he suffered on July 30, 1980, had no control over his once blazing fast ball.

"We couldn't even let him throw batting practice in September unless we could find enough volunteers to bat against him," Astros Manager Bob Lillis said.

That was last season.

A slimmer Richard reported to camp this season in much better form and with a determined plan for pitching again in the major leagues. "I kept myself in good condition all winter and I kept my mind on baseball," he said. "I believe I can make this club. I'm planning to make the club."

Lillis says the 32-year-old right-hander will pitch in some exhibition games and will have to improve his control and his slider before being considered ready for a comeback in the majors.

The slider is the key, Lillis said. "That was his big pitch. It's not near what it was before the stroke. But he's throwing the slider a whole lot better now than in September."

Richard is so confident that he will return, he's already started casting for a proposed movie of his life. ABC-TV has the rights to the film. Former Astros Manager Bill Virdon would be played by Robin Williams and Richard will play himself."Who besides me could play it so good, unless it's the second me," he said.

Richard still has one year remaining on a contract that pays him $800,000 annually. He hopes to earn it.

"I'm not worrying about any of that now," Richard said. "I want to do whatever the club asks to fit into spring training. I don't have a timetable. I've just put my life in God's hands. My only goals are to make the club and bring as many people to Christ as possible.

"And, I would like to catch me a 20-pound fish."

Pressure off Dodger farm club hurler this season

By MARK HEISLER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

VERO BEACH, Fla. — El Sid rides again, through the sleepy streets of what the local kids call "downtown Zero Beach," past Holman Stadium, ringed with palm trees, where it all began for him a year ago.

Where it ended is something else. Who ever had a minor league season like Sid Fernandez, who at age 19 overpowered the Florida State League, was jumped to triple A and ticketed for the top, whose exploits were reported in the press box in Dodger Stadium inning by inning (Fernandez through four, one hit, no runs, eight strikeouts), who was profiled in every paper from Pismo Beach to Point Loma, not to mention Sports Illustrated, and interviewed on every network that could afford a plane ticket to Albuquerque?

After which he blew sky high. He started to get beat and stomp around mounds. After an early shelling by the Salt Lake City Gulls, he tore a pipe off a wall and turned the Dukes' clubhouse into a lake. Things were going so badly for him that when he sliced the index finger on his pitching hand and got sent home early, it was whispered that he had done it on purpose.

And then, when he got back to his home in Honolulu, feeling something less than victorious, he started gaining weight. By the time he reported back to the mainland for the start of the instructional league, he was up to 230 pounds, looking, in the memorable phrase of scout Guy Wellman, "like he didn't pass up a luau."

IN ALL, it slowed down the Dodgers' recent habit of jumping their kids two levels at a time. There had been one success after another. Steve Howe, Fernando Valenzuela and Steve Sax put in a total of five seasons in the Dodger system among them, and all were jumped over triple A. Teams like the Dodgers, with strong farm systems, are usually very protective of their young prospects, but by 1982 Al Campanis was telling everyone, "The good ones come fast."

Here is one of the best, who came fast and went faster.

Fernandez is now back in Dodgertown, nursing a sore Achilles tendon, ticketed for nothing more than a return to Albuqerque. The networks have stopped chasing him around and the Dodgers have, likewise, taken a step back. Sid Fernandez, now 20 years old, is being treated like a kid again.

That he was even invited to early camp a year ago was amazing. Fernandez had been only a third-round draft pick, out of Honolulu's Kaiser High School, but he exploded when he hit Lethbridge, Alberta, in the Pioneer League.

THE PIONEER League is solely for rookies, players who have just been signed. Fernandez struck out 128 of his fellow rookies in 76 innings. The Dodgers started including his statistics on their pregame press releases. Campanis saw him in the instructional league and brought him to camp with the big team.

"I didn't have a good spring," Fernandez said. "My control was terrible. But it's an experience that'll be with me a long time.

"I couldn't believe it. Wow! Stretching with Steve Yeager and Steve Garvey. I talked to Terry Forster. I couldn't believe that stuff....

"I couldn't talk to Fernando but I met him, in Nobe Kawano's office. Mr. Lasorda — Tom — introduced us.

"The coaches want you to call them by their first name, but it's hard. We had a coach at Lethbridge, Gary La Rocque. I kept calling him Coach Gary, Coach La Rocque. He told me everybody was going to be kidding me if I kept on doing it."

Gary La Rocque was 27 years old when Fernandez was in Lethbridge, trying not to call him "Mr." Fernandez is a nice young man, polite, quiet, shy and easily embarrassed, and that was right in character.

WHAT FERNANDEZ showed in camp last spring was a fastball that was only in the 85 mph range, but had amazing movement. Fernandez has a release in which he drives off his big thighs — he was a football linebacker at Kaiser — and his ball climbs toward the strike zone and fairly explodes upward at the plate.

The big team moved on and Fernandez stayed behind with the Vero Beach Dodgers, for whom he went 8-1 with two no-hitters, a one-hitter, a two-hitter and a three-hitter. He struck out 21 batters in one game and 16 in another. Overall, he struck out 137 in 85 innings.

"He was awesome," says Vero Beach General Manager Charlie Blaney. "We only had him for two months and he was voted the league's MVP.

"When he pitched, attendance went up 50 percent. We knew he was going up, though. He had to. He had the league overmatched."

It was only a matter of how high Fernandez was going, to double-A San Antonio or triple-A Albuquerque. There were people who were cautious — pitching coach Ron Perranoski and instructor Sandy Koufax — but the front office decided for the big jump, a la Fernando.

"I didn't make the decision," Campanis says, "but I thought it was a good decision. Bill (Schweppe, Dodgers minor league director) came to me and asked me what I thought. I thought it was a good decision."

As decisions go, this one ranked right up there with Custer deciding to visit the Little Bighorn. This was not the second coming of Fernando, this was another person. Of course, this was not as self-evident then.

PART OF what happened to Fernandez last season was due to those surface resemblances. Here he was, another pudgy, left-handed Dodger prodigy. "Fernandez-mania" might sound a lot like "Fernandomania," but soon after that, the resemblances end.

Fernandez's ancestry is Portugese. He speaks English only, though with a little Hawaiian pidgin accent.

More to the point, Fernando is truly a phenomenon unto himself. He was a grown-up pitcher at 16, a natural, with good stuff and control that was truly amazing. Fernandez is a fastball pitcher, with rudimentary breaking pitches and control that is often shaky.

The biggest difference between them, though — indeed between Fernando and anyone — was their poise. Valenzuela has incredible poise. "Fernando is extraordinary," says Joe Beckwith. "He's E.T."

Fernandez is more like everyone else. At age 19, under great pressure, he blew up.

He won his first two games in Albuquerque, but then he started struggling. Campanis says he was trying to establish his breaking pitches and got away from his fastball. Scouts say the smarter PCL hitters started taking those high pitches for balls, rather than missing pitches that wound up around their necks, as had the less-disciplined Florida State League kids.

WHATEVER, FERNANDEZ could not handle it. He took to pacing the mound, throwing his hands in the air, which angered the umpires. In his first trip to Hawaii, pitching before the home folks, he gave up several runs, and when the umpire stopped the game for a rain delay, spiked the ball on the mound and stomped off.

"I watch the films now," Fernandez says, "and I watch myself looking like an ass. I just can't be doing that....

"I've been razzed ever since I started, about my weight," Fernandez says. "I wasn't sure what was behind it. I never hurt anybody. I finally found out, this is how these guys act.

"They'd say, 'Sid you gaining a few pounds?' I'd take it personally. People can't say diddly now. I've lost the weight....

"Then I cut myself. People think I did it on purpose. I didn't. I was trying to fix my shoe and I fixed my finger, instead.

"It happened one night after Bible study. I like to read my Bible. We'd just read a chapter where it said, 'Whatever happens, give thanks to the Lord.' What a coincidence....

"I was 230," he says. "Some people said I was 260. I wasn't even that heavy when I was playing football."

The Dodgers slapped him on a diet and Fernandez weighed in here at 213.

"I feel better now," he says. "I feel like I know what's expected of me. Like we're doing stretching exercises and someone says, 'Hey, Sid, you'd don't look too enthusiastic.' I don't talk back. If it was, say, Rick Monday, he'd say, 'Pipe it, buddy.'

"My philosophy ... My father is a very strong individual. He told me, the best way to go somewhere is straight through. Never go around. That's what I'm doing, going straight through. I'm a big guy. I can handle myself."

Questioning some of baseball's finer points

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

The subject for today, class, is "So You Think You Know Baseball?"

One answer and one answer only. Neatness counts. First prize is a picture of the Dodgers front office refusing to sign free-agent Joe Morgan to a one-year contract. Second prize is the ball Joe Morgan hit over the fence to knock the Dodgers out of the 1982 pennant.

We will skip right over "How many years did Ty Cobb hit over .400?" and the trivia faithfuls like "Who played third base in the Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance combination?" We are concerned here with the artistic aspects of the grand old game, not the mechanics. Ready? Places, everybody.

Question: What is meant in baseball by the term "arbitration"?

Answer: Arbitration is a device whereby a layman who has never seen a game of hardball, or at least not since the Philadelphia Athletics were in the league, is asked to decide whether a .211 hitter gets a half-million dollars a year or three-quarters of a million. He does not know the infield fly rule intimately, he probably thinks the St. Louis Cardinals are an ecclesiastical group convened to elect a Pope, and he thinks Vida Blue is a disease, but he has the power at one stroke of the pen to dole out more money than Babe Ruth made in his lifetime. He allows players to bring in videotapes of one of their two sensational catches from the year before, but management cannot bring in a montage of the 811 infield pop outs or double-play balls he hit.

Q – What does the "designated hitter" rule do?

A – It turns a game whose principal charm has been its controversy and turns it into something as predictable and monotonous as a violin recital at Carnegie Hall. It takes the second guess out of the game, which is like taking sex out of marriage. It takes the fun out of the game, the manager out of the game. It's like watching Farrah Fawcett play a nun, or going to a mystery where you know who did it. It turns the Hot Stove League into cold gruel. It's like taking the generals out of war, putting the game on automatic pilot. Dull.

Q – Explain "integrity of the game?"

A – Integrity is a flexible set of standards by which you bar a national hero from making a living gladhanding tourists in a gambling parlor while you permit men who own and run gambling parlors (i.e., race tracks) to own and run baseball teams and baseball, too. It's called nobless oblige, which means rich people can do anything they want but don't you try it. Or, why don't you just buy a racehorse, Mickey?

Q – What is meant by "burnout"?

A – A psychotic personality who finally falls over the edge gets to blame sports for his self-imposed neuroses. It's like a bank robber blaming the gun manufacturer. As Harry Truman said of burnout: "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen." It's been my experience, burnout usually comes in a bottle.

Q – Explain the meaning of "desire"?

A – Desire is such an important ingredient in the makeup of the athlete, it's the reason they have to have curfews.

Q – Do you think seven-game divisional playoffs would cheapen the World Series?

A – Not nearly so much as they would cheapen the regular season.

Q – Not even if they have "wild-card" teams?

A – The only way wild-card games would be fair would be for wild-card teams to have to play one run or one touchdown down to the teams that had a better season record. That way, they'd win the old-fashioned way. They'd earn it.

Q – Will the Dodgers be the same without Steve Garvey?

A – Will Steve Garvey be the same without the Dodgers?

Q – Are ballplayers today better than ballplayers of 40 years ago?

A – Why, certainly. They're 40 years younger.

Q – Who do you think should be named to carry out the duties of commissioner of baseball?

A – How about Babe Ruth?

Q – But Babe Ruth is dead?

A – So?

Stahr looking to break four minute mile

CARMEL, N.Y. (AP) — What's in a name? If the name is Mike Stahr, everything.

Stahr, a senior at Carmel High School, is the nation's No.1 scholastic miler. He reaffirmed that position by winning the mile at the 1983 Millrose Games for the second straight year. He's trying to become only the fourth American high school runner to go under four minutes in the mile and the first to do it in 16 years.

"I have to say he's No.1 at this time based on (the) indoor (season)," said Carmel Coach Paul Collins. "The guy's won the Jumbo Elliott Mile (at the Millrose Games) two times in a row and they try to pick the classiest fields they can (for the race)."

Collins is not alone in his opinion. The facts speak for themselves. Stahr has lost only once in the mile in the past two years, when John Carlotti of Bernardsville, N.J., beat him by one-tenth of a second in 4:05.6 in the scholastic Fifth Avenue Mile last September in New York. Both runners agree Stahr misjudged the finish line.

Stahr avenged the defeat at the Millrose Games, winning in 4:10.98. Carlotti was second in 4:11.4 and Miles Irish of Burnt Hills, N.Y., was third in 4:11.84.

The three represent the strongest crop of scholastic milers in recent years, something which had prompted Stahr to suggest before the Millrose race the possibility of a sub-four minute mile.

THE NATIONAL high school indoor record in open competition is 4:02.7, set by Thom Hunt at San Diego in 1976.

Three American high school runners have broken four minutes outdoors, the last being Marty Liquori 16 years ago. Jim Ryun set the record of 3:55.3 in 1965. Tim Danielson ran 3:59.4 in 1966 and Liquori ran 3:59.8 in 1967.

Although Stahr didn't come close to joining them with his Millrose performance, he took the disappointment in stride.

"Maybe I didn't get the time I was saying, but the most important thing is I won," he said. "I think if that's what it took, I would have. It very quickly turned into a strategical race. I think everyone could have gone faster there."

Collins is certain Stahr will do better before he leaves Carmel for either Villanova, Oregon, Kansas or Florida.

Setting USFL odds a gamble for Nevada's bookmakers

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Setting odds for the new United States Football League is more of a gamble than Nevada bookmakers prefer, but they say they will be ready for the first USFL game March 6.

"We figure we won't know any more or less than anyone else will know," said Chris Zenuh, an oddsmaker at Reno's downtown Club Cal Neva. "It's kind of a gamble on our part."

But, he said, "Everyone's talking about it. There isn't a day goes by that someone doesn't ask about the USFL."

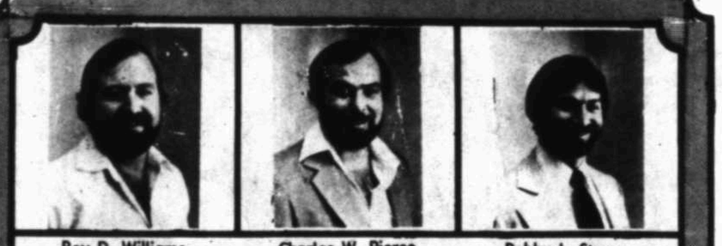

Jimmy Brann, an advertising and publicity executive for a Las Vegas firm which helps set point spreads, said southern Nevada bookmakers also were getting ready for the USFL.

"There's been no official announcement from any of the major casino sports shops as yet," he said.

TIPS FROM POLAR
Question: What can I do about my furnace? When the blower comes on it sounds like a tornado!
Answer: If your blower is too noisy, you might consider lining the blower compartment with sound-proofing insulation. This will help considerably. Don't forget the motor and bearings need periodic maintenance also.

"The men who know tires best!"

Businessmen and women learn to avoid failure in seminar

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Energy-Business Editor

"Why Businesses Fail — And How To Prevent It" was the topic Tuesday evening of the first in a series of Chamber of Commerce-sponsored seminars for small businessmen.

Amy Stewart, who chairs the Chamber's Small Business Council, said 36 small businessmen and -women attended. Over one—half of those attending now run their own businesses.

Jamie Thompson, owner of Exploration Graphics, Midland, and Eugene Nini, chairman of the Faculty of Accountancy and Information Systems at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Odessa, were the speakers.

Thompson shared with the audience some lessons she has learned while running her own business. "An entrepemuer is an optimist by definition," she said, "and over optimism is what does company's in."

The first quality a good small business manager needs, Thompson said, is resourcefulness.

"There are so many things that can go wrong in a small business that resourcefulness is of paramount importance.

"Another thing I think a manager has to have is self-discipline. I think it takes a strongly disciplined person to impose restraints on himself and on the organization.

"Another thing a manager needs is expertise ... it's not necessarily experience."

Thompson said a man familiar with the functions of the muscles, who understands the physics of a body in fluid, when put in a lake, will still drown, right along with his knowledge, unless he has actually been taught to swim.

"Small business requires a swimmer, and not just someone who knows the technique," Thompson said.

With verve and humor, Nini outlined his theory of management. He assured those attending the seminar his theory is not academic in nature, but has its roots in the "real world," where Nini once worked as president of a manufacturing firm.

"Experience to manage is the single most over-rated statement ever made in the history of mankind," he said. "It is totally ludicrous, what we say about experience to manage."

Nini said the only reason businesses fail is that they are managed poorly. "In my opinion ... 80 to 85 percent of the management in the United States is poor."

Being a good manager means being a good leader, Nini said. Leadership is the ability to deal with people. "If you can't deal with people you cannot be a manager," he said.

"I can tell you why most management is poor," Nini said. "The reason why management is so poor, it very simply centers around the 'Male Virility Syndrome — macho man.'"

In our society — in most societies — Nini said, boys are raised to be domineering, aggressive and physically tough. It shows up in their management style.

"If you have a problem with anybody, you get in his face and whip his butt," he said.

Attempting to dominate is the worst trait of poor management, Nini said. Prejudice is the reason people attempt to dominate, he explained.

"If you don't dominate, and you're not prejudiced, then you know how to love."

The two most important characteristics of leadership, without which a manager cannot succeed, are security and compassion, he said.

"I am not saying financial security, I am saying psychological security. You know who you are, where you are, what you're doing, where you're going, how you're going to get there, and what you're going to do when you get there. That's security," Nini said.

Compassion, he added, is considered by some a sissy word. The word has come to mean "to help," Nini said. "Somehow you tell me how you can possibly lead anyone without helping them."

Quoting Rev. William Sloan Coffin, Nini said, "It takes a tough man to be tender."

Some of the "toughest" men in America, Marine Corp Drill Instructors, Nini said, raise their right hands to their recruits and say, "Gentlemen, I promise to treat you with dignity, respect, fairness and compassion."

The Chamber's small business seminar series resumes March 1 with Effective Time Management. The series runs through March 29.

An enrollment fee of $25 per session is charged. The proceeds will be used to fund scholarships for business students at Midland College.

For more information, contact Allison Peeler at the Midland Chamber of Commerce, 683-3381.

Business failures increasing

American businesses failed at the rate of 100 every working day in 1982, making it the worst year since 1932, the bottom of the Great Depression.

Oilmen make Lone Star State tops

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Texas oilmen again made the Lone Star State number one in oil and gas drilling in the United States in 1982, according to Petroleum Information Corporation (PI), a worldwide energy record-keeping firm.

Pi, in a multi-image presentation at the Midland Hilton, gave all the facts and figures illustrating what happened in 1982 in the oil and gas business. PI chairman Bill Goodin noted that any given year is analyzed in the context of previous years.

Midlanders played an important role in activity in Texas and the nation. Major discoveries in Glasscock County, Texas, by Midland's William E. Hendon Jr., and successful stepouts in Louisiana's Tuscaloosa Trend by Wagner and Brown were mentioned by PI as contributing to the overall record.

PI predicted fairly strong levels of oil and gas activity in 1983, although it said they would be below those of 1981 and '82. The company forecast 65,000 to 70,000 wells would be completed nationally (versus more than 84,000 in 1982).

Any total above 62,704 will make 1983 the third best year in the history of U.S. drilling, said senior vice president Tom Dougherty.

PI's outlook for 1983 assumes there will be no major depression or military problems anywhere in the world, that reasonable economic growth will be maintained, that inflation and interest rates remain stable, and that OPEC members maintain their unity, Dougherty explained.

In line with general economic forecasts for other industries, chairman Goodin said he expected PI's balance sheet would be flat for fiscal 1983.There are no plans to make any changes in PI's Midland offices, which employ about 150 people.

PI said gains in Texas drilling played a major role in establishing another record year nationally. There were 84,693 completions in 1982, an all-time record which surpassed 1981 results by 7 4 percent. Texas lead by accounting for more completions — 26,897 — than any other drilling state. The Texas total was up 7.6 percent from 1981 figures.

Exploration and development activity in the Texas portion of the Gulf Coast, and in the Permian Basin and Bend Arch province paced 1982 activity in the state. Of the top 10 drilling counties in the U.S., four were in Texas: Young, Eastland, Archer and Jack counties.

The Permian Basin of west Texas and southeastern New Mexico was second only to the Appalachian Basin when ranked by completions. It was also second in the number of wildcats completed, with 703, for a success ratio of 22.5 percent.

PI noted 32 deep completions in the Permian producing entirely from zones below 15,000 feet. A new Texas drilling depth record was set in Pecos County in mid-year by Hunt Energy with a 29,670-foot dry hole.

As with other deep drilling plays across the country, economic uncertainties undercut activity here by the end of 1982, PI said.

Intensive field development continued in the Permian Basin in 1982, in Tom Green County, Texas, and Chaves County, New Mexico. An estimated $20 million has been invested in the K.W.B. Field in Tom Green in the last 16 months, and more than 300 new gas wells were added to the Pecos Slope Field, PI said.

The Bend Arch province, in west central Texas, was also ranked among the top 10 geologic provinces by total completions. PI recorded 5,594 completions in the province in 1982, including 2,848 oil and 606 gas well completions.

One measure of drilling success is the amount of reserves added, PI said. Texas was the leader in this category, with preliminary estimates showing more than 788 million barrels added, which amounts to about one third of the estimated additions for the entire U.S. in 1982.

Throughout the nation, energy companies found 2.6 billion barrels of oil and condensate reserves and produced 3.13 billion barrels. They found 18.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and produced 19.5 TCF.

Oil well completions increased by 3.9 percent nationally and gas completions were up by 9.9 percent, PI said. New field wildcats were up 3 percent and development well completions were up 7 percent over 1981 figures.

However, 1982 was a year of change in the pace of oil and gas activity. PI said the increased completion total does not reflect the drilling decline which occurred throughout most of 1982. Momentum from late 1981 and higher early 1982 activity accounted for the higher completion totals, the company said.

U.S. judge halts Braniff-PSA plan

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Braniff International was dealt another blow when a federal appeals court here suspended the grounded airline's bid to put some of its planes and employees back in the air through Pacific Southwest Airlines.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stayed a federal court's approval of the plan Tuesday until it can hear objections to the Braniff-PSA deal, which calls for leasing 30 Braniff planes to PSA as part of Braniff's liquidation.

Braniff officials said the appeal court's action may kill the deal.

The stay was sought by the Federal Aviation Administration and Continental Airline Inc. to prevent San Diego-based PSA from flying Braniff planes before the proposal clears all court hurdles.

Braniff had scored a court victory earlier Tuesday in Fort Worth when U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon, who approved the plan Friday, refused to stay his own order implementing the deal.

But the 5th Circuit overruled Mahon and ordered an expedited hearing. No date was set but arguments are expected to be heard in late March or early May.

"If we are talking about a hearing as late as April or May, the deal is dead," said Braniff executive vice president Philip Guthrie. "If we are talking about next week, this really isn't as bad as it first appears."

PSA has said that the deal must be approved in time to take advantage of the peak summer traveling period, or it will back out.

Several competing airlines including Continental, and the FAA, have challenged the court's right to transfer to PSA landing slots temporarily allocated to other airlines when Braniff collapsed.

The FAA has claimed, so far unsuccessfully, that the slots are not part of Braniff's estate.

The FAA said it already had temporarily assigned about one-fourth of Braniff's 400 landing slots to other airlines. Furthermore, the FAA says it has sole jurisdiction over landing schedules, not the courts.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers of Fort Worth approved the Braniff-PSA deal last month and delivered a firm order to the FAA to return the slots to Braniff to be allocated to PSA.

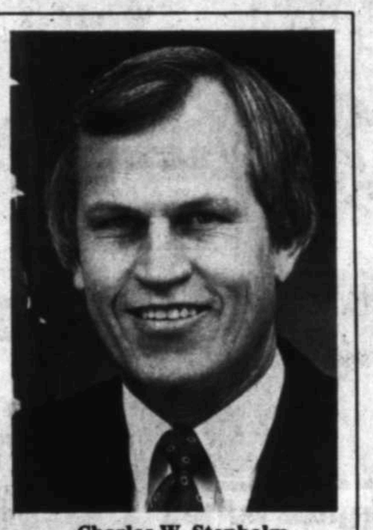

Flowers said Braniff's assets were worth far less without landing slots. Flowers also ruled that the FAA, which he claimed was established only to regulate air safety, had enough latitude to appease all airlines. Mahon upheld Flowers' ruling.

Before the court action Tuesday, Braniff and PSA planned to sign the final agreement March 1.

"If we had closed the deal, competitors still could have asked for an appeal and received it," Guthrie said. "But the court could not have forced PSA to stop service.

Four-door cars sell more

DETROIT (AP) — The two-door model share of the domestic auto industry continued to shrink last year, according to a trade journal.

Ward's Automotive Reports reported Tuesday that 58.5 percent of the cars built in the United States and Canada for the U.S. market in 1982 were four-doors. That was up from 53.5 percent in 1981. The 1981 model year was the first since 1966 where two-door models did not get most of the market.

Gainers led 7-6 over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume slowed to 37.48 million shares at noon EST from 41.15 million at that hour Tuesday.

Airline issues rose amid expectations that their fuel costs would fall. Gainers today included Pan American ¼ to 5⅞ and Delta ¾ to 45⅛.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Administration did poor calculating job

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Even when all the explanations are listened to, it was an amazingly poor job of calculating two years ago that led those entering the White House to promise a balanced budget for fiscal 1984.

By most current estimates, including those who originally made the error, the deficit will be short of the balance bar by something on the order of $200 billion, an amount bigger than the budget itself for 1970.

It is a miscalculation that, were it to have occurred at General Motors or IBM, might have cost the chairman, president and treasurer their jobs, and probably the jobs of a few thousand other employees too.

And were a miscalculation of relative proportions to have been made in a household budget, the failure probably would have cost the erring spouse any further use of the checkbook.

The administration has survived it all, however, even if the economy hasn't, and one of the ways in which it survives is to borrow unprecedented amounts of money, such as $180 billion in the current fiscal year.

That, of course, is something most people thought the administration stood foursquare against, since money the government borrows from the private sector leaves that much less with which to finance private-sector expansion.

In turn, it would seem, such a situation serves to make even more difficult the simultaneous shrinkage of the federal establishment and the strengthening of private enterprise, goals to which the presidency is dedicated.

How could such self-damaging errors have been committed?

Looking back from the catbird seat, which provides a distinct advantage, many critics would blame overconfidence, to such a degree that the obvious could not be seen, or when it was seen, was ignored.

Whatever, the budget makers failed to foresee the weakness of the economy, the level of prices and the height of interest rates. Less revenue came in anticipated. And billions went out to pay those high interest rates.

The administration added to its own woes too. It raised defense spending, failed to make budget cuts it had promised, and went ahead and with an income tax cut that reduced revenues further.

A dilemma was created, in which deficits discouraged the private sector, on which the administration counted for deliverance from recession, and the failure of the private sector forced the government further into deficit.

And so the recession continued instead of waning.

Now, by most gauges, a recovery is developing, although it is too early to determine its strength and duration. It may be a mere blip, or a surging wave. It might gain strength, or be aborted by rising prices and interest rates.

It must be recognized too that the word "recovery" doesn't carry much meaning without measuring the base from which it ascends. This recovery is coming from a very low base, from a badly weakened economy.

Last year the steel industry operated at less than 50 percent of capacity, and as the year ended the capacity utilization of all industries was less than 70 percent. And there are more than 12 million Americans unemployed.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Companies refinance bonds when rates low

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Now that interest rates have dropped, I assume it is to a company's advantage to call in and pay off bonds it issued at high interest rates, by issuing bonds with lower interest. At what interest rate differential is this advantageous to a corporation?

Doyle

A. You're very right in your assumption. The process you outline is called "refunding" or "refinancing." Some bond issuers have used it in recent months. More undoubtedly will, if interest rates stay down.

Let's say XYZ Corp. needed $100 million to build a factory or for some other business purpose last year and raised that money by selling $100 million of 16 percent bonds. As a result, XYZ has to pay $16 million a year interest.

Because interest rates have come down, XYZ might now be able to sell $100 million of bonds at 13 percent — a $13 million annual interest cost. XYZ can use the money from the sale of the 13 percent bonds to call in and pay off the 16 percent bonds, thereby reducing its interest costs $3 million a year, if the 16 percent bonds don't have call protection.

But, that's a big "if." Many bonds issued with high interest rates do have call protection — prohibiting issuers from calling them in after a short period of time. Call protection is a "sweetener," to get investors to buy bonds and can shave the issuer's interest cost a bit. In this example, XYZ probably would have had to pay more than 16 percent interest on bonds issued last year, if those bonds did not have call protection.

Even if call protection does not prevent a refunding operation, there's no exact formula for determining how large a drop in interest makes all refundings advantageous.

Q. A banker advised me to remove all my money from savings and loan associations and put it in banks. He said the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. does not have enough money to cover insured S & L accounts and will pay off only fractionally when an insured S & L fails.

He said, if an insured bank fails, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. will pay each depositor up to $100,000, immediately. Is this true?

A. One of my fondest dreams is that some bankers would stop throwing rocks at S & Ls, and vice versa, on the subject of FDIC and FSLIC safety. Both are rock solid safe.

At last count, FDIC had $12 billion to cover $980 billion of insured deposits at banks, while FSLIC had $6.6 billion to cover $524 billion of insured deposits at S & Ls. and both have special drawing rights on the U.S. Treasury, in the most unlikely event we ever see a rash of failures and-or "runs" on banks and S & Ls.

Phillips Petroleum gives $15,000 check to UTPB

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin is $15,000 richer today, thanks to Phillips Petroleum Co.

Phillips presented UTPB a check for that amount in a brief ceremony at Midland's Petroleum Club Tuesday noon.

E.E. Clark, manager of Phillips' Permian Basin Region, made the presentation.

"Phillips Petroleum Co. has always been interested in institutions of higher learning around the country," Clark said.

Phillips has made contributions to UTPB since its inception.The reason Phillips has supported UTPB, Clark explained, is the company felt "A university of that order in the Permian Basin would be of extreme importance to the oil industry. It is only fitting we have a university here and that it in some manner make a contribution to the industry."

The check was received by James Caldwell, Dean of the College of Arts and Education. Caldwell pledged UTPB would do a lot more for the petroleum industry in the future. The university appreciates Phillips' farsightedness, he said.

The check was given without restriction, and may be used as the university sees fit.

Clark said the univeristy can count on continued support from Phillips.

Union leader says Labor lax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coal miners have been exposed to perilous conditions because the Labor Department has encouraged lax enforcement of the mine health and safety act, a union leader charged at a House subcommittee hearing.

Enforcement has been undermined to the point that some violations are being overlooked, United Mine Workers President Richard Trumka told the health and safety subcommittee Tuesday.

A UMW inspection last week of a North American Coal Co. mine in Alledonia, Ohio, turned up 160 violations, he said, while a federal team making a concurrent inspection found 12.

"An inspector who walks past violations doesn't care for my people," said Trumka, a former miner from Nemacolin, Pa. "An inspector that corrects them, does."

Assistant Labor Secretary Ford B. Ford, scheduled to testify at a later hearing, responded that the Mine Safety and Health Admistration and the UMW "vigorously agree on our most basic goal — the safety and health of our nation's miners."

MISD board approves new elementary school

Salaries, resolutions also discussed

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The first school built in the district since 1966 was approved Tuesday by Midland Independent School District trustees following a tour of the new facility.

Also approved during the board meeting was the creation and filling of a new administrative position, an increase in salaries for driver education teachers and assistants, and resolutions to the State Board of Education, the state Legislature and the Texas Commission on Alcoholism.

Students are expected to move into the new De Zavala Elementary School in March. The school is located north of the old facility, which was converted into the De Zavala Annex to house Headstart classrooms and office, migrant education office and to serve as a replacement for the science, social studies, special education and early childhood materials center destroyed by the Carver School fire last spring.

Trustees also approved the promotion of Midland High School Principal Jack Stone to director of staff development. The new position, according to Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr., was created to supervise the staff development plan and to assist with the new teacher inservice program. Stone also will work in teacher recruitment and assignment.

When questioned about not advertising for applicants to fill the position, Baressi said he felt promotions or transfers from within the district could be made without advertising.

Stone has been with MISD since 1959. He served as teacher and coach at San Jacinto Junior High, assistant principal at Austin Junior High and Lee High and principal of Burnet Elementary and Alamo Junior High. He has been principal at MHS since 1978.

Stone will take his new post July 1, according to Baressi. A new principal for Midland High School will be hired by Aug. 1.

In other action, trustees approved an increase in salaries for driver education teachers and assistants as well as an increase in fees for the course.

Driver education teachers and assistants presently are paid $7 an hour, according to Assistant Superintendent of Instruction Dr. Duane Moore, who added the figures had not been revised since 1977.

"There is no (other) program in the district where the teachers assistants or aides get paid the same as those with training," Moore said.

Assistants, who are required to seek additional hours of training from an institute of higher learning, are limited to behind-the-wheel instruction. Driver education teachers, however, are qualified to instruct in the classroom and behind the wheel, he said.

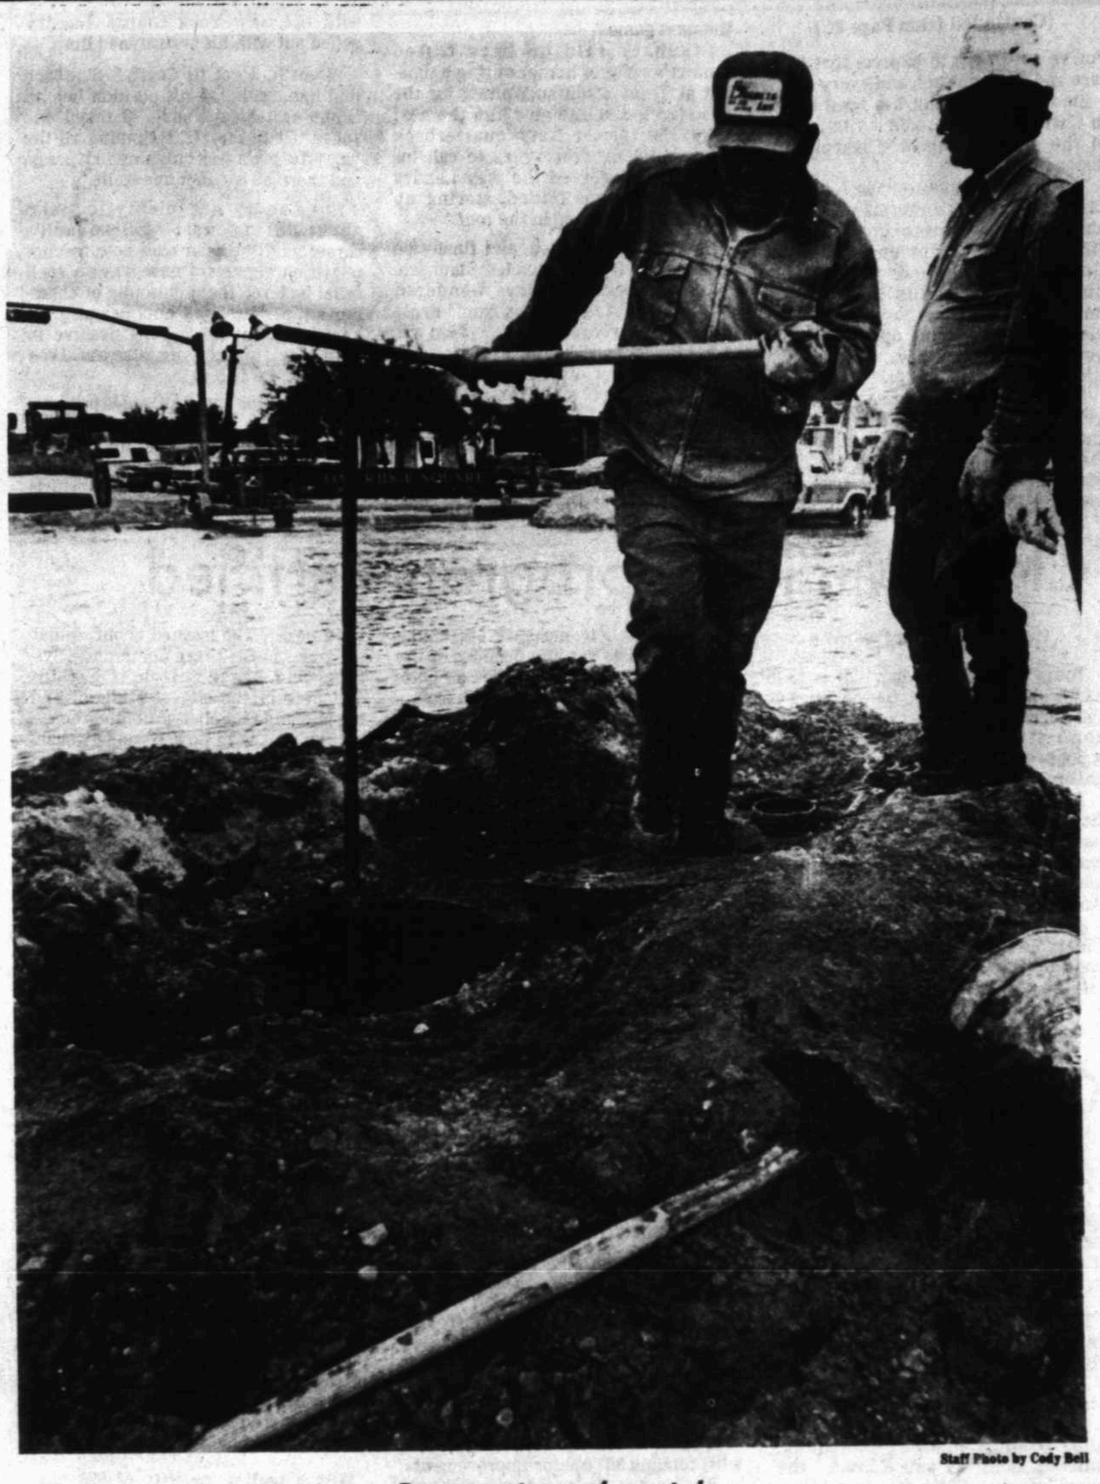

The revision increases teacher salaries to $9 per hour and assistant salaries to $8 per hour. Also, classroom fees will go from $20 to $25 and behind-the-wheel fees from $42 to $60.

The board also approved resolutions to the State Board of Education pertaining to the proposed substitutions for English IV and the Texas Legislature pertaining to changes in the organization of the University Interscholastic League.

Written by Coordinator of Fine Arts and Speech Maridell Fryar, the resolutions ask the State Board of Education to make the selection of substitutes for English IV a local option or increase the list of approved substitutions to include speech communication, journalism, vocabulary studies and developmental reading, all currently approved by MISD as substitutes for English IV.

Proposals to revise or eliminate the University Interscholastic League, which provides MISD students with athletic, musical and academic competitions, was adamantly opposed in another resolution written by Mrs. Fryar to the Legislature.

Trustees also approved a recommendation made by Moore, Director of Elementary Education Frank Marlow and Coordinator of Elementary Social Studies Dr. Peggy Dildy to purchase a $7,000 alcohol and drug abuse media program for grades 4-6. Funds to purchase the program would be reimbursed by the Texas Commission on Alcoholism.

Stemming the tide

Workers slowed the flow of water from a broken valve at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street at about 3 p.m. Tuesday afternoon, nearly 24 hours after the valve gave way. Gabino Galindo, an employee of Key Enterprises, closes a valve at the intersection. City employees searched until about 1:15 p.m. Tuesday before finding a valve, at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and Midkiff Road, that eventually slowed the water flow enough for workers to make repairs. It was unclear this morning what areas of Midland are still affected by either a lack of water or low water pressure.

Trustees say they'll fight proposed move to ECISD

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District trustees said they would fight to the "nth degree" if necessary to avoid losing $17 million in assessed valuation from the tax base to the neighboring school district to the west.

In reply to a petition presented to the Ector County Independent School District Board of Trustees last week, Parker Humes, MISD board president, said Tuesday the tax base loss could grow to be "in the hundreds of millions of dollars" over the years.

"It is the unanimous opinion of the board that the annexation would not be in the best interest of the Midland Independent School District," Humes said.

The petition, signed by 67 percent of the registered voters living in Mission Estates, an HBF Corporation development, and the Ridgewood community, both located in far west Midland near the Ector County Line, asked for annexation into the ECISD from MISD.

About 67 of the 80 identified students in the area are attending Odessa schools although they reside in the Midland school district, Scott Sharp, attorney for HBF Corp., said last week.

The area is located about five miles from Odessa and 15 miles from Midland, Humes said.

While the area is within Midland County and MISD boundaries, parts of Mission Estates have been annexed into the Odessa city limits, according to a Ridgewood community resident last week.

Roger Staubach, former quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys, spoke about the importance of people at the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce annual banquet Tuesday night.

Staubach brings his ideas to Big Spring Chamber

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The silvery stars glistening overhead told the story.

For the man whose football helmet once bore them, they were a symbol of consistency and success.

For 750 community supporters, they bespoke of greater heights to be attained.

The man is instantly recognized in the Southwest simply by his first name: Roger. Football aficionados know him better as the Dodger, Captain Comeback, the quarterback who so intensely hated defeat he invariably came up with a Hail Mary play at the game's end.

But it was the only way Roger Staubach knew how to play football or life: control the one thing that can be controlled — self — and maintain a positive attitude toward situations beyond grasp.

Supporters of Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce became attuned to that philosophy Tuesday night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, as incoming officers looked toward greater challenges to be faced and honored those whose lives already have reflected a self-maturity.

"It's really people that makes things happen," said Staubach, who retired from the Dallas Cowboys in 1979 after an illustrious 11-year career that carried him to the top of the all-time NFL passing ratings. "I think we have to get involved. But I think before we get involved in person, we have to control the one thing in our lives we can control...

"We can't control our spouses, our children, our coaches, how we can work together to try to solve each others problems. You can control one thing and that's yourself...We have to look at who we are, where we've been, where we are now, and where we're going. And we have to grow as human beings every day."

Equally important, said the former Heisman Trophy winner, is to forget racial, social, religious or political barriers and "reach out" to others. "It's got to be an agape love," he said, "a giving love expecting nothing in return.

Water valve break repairs continue

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Businesses and residences bordering Wadley Avenue between Midkiff Road and Garfield Street were without water this morning as a contractor labored to complete repairs on a ruptured water valve.

The valve burst about 4 p.m. Monday when workers from Key Enterprises attempted to connect a new water line running along Wadley Avenue to an existing line under Garfield Street. The mishap, at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street, sent water as much as two feet deep flooding down Wadley Avenue, stalling automobiles and cutting water service to the area.

City crews and the contractor's employees scrambled through Monday night and Tuesday morning, closing valves on surrounding water lines in an attempt to halt the flooding.

Mike Butler, Midland's assistant director of public works, said a valve at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and Midkiff Road was closed at about 1:15 p.m. Tuesday. That valve, along with the closing of several others, slowed the water flow enough to allow workers to connect the pipes at about 4 a.m. today, he said.

Butler said water service might be restored to the area as early as 9:30 a.m. today. He said no immediate estimate was available on the amount of man hours lost to the city because of the leak.

John Lowe, public utilities director, said water storage tanks were back to near normal today after the valve break taxed the city's water system. Lowe said about 16 million gallons were pumped into the system Monday and about 30 million gallons were spent Tuesday. Normal water usage for this time of year is about 12.5-13 million gallons per day, according to Lowe.

Clean-up program certified

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

Official certification of Clean Midland, Inc. by the Keep America Beautiful organization came at noon today during a luncheon at Midland Chamber of Commerce's conference room.

Present for the certification were Mayor G. Thane Akins, members of the City Council, Midland Chamber of Commerce and various other city officials along with members of Clean Midland's board of directors. With the certification, Midland becomes a part of Keep America Beautiful's Clean Community System, which includes more than 200 communities nationwide.

Keep America Beautiful is a national, non-profit organization formed in 1953, according to Clean Midland executive coordinator Nancy Sharp. Through the Clean Community System, she said, cities have reduced litter by an average of 44 percent after one year and 72 percent after four years.

The first year's goal in Midland will be to reduce litter by 30 percent, according to Ms. Sharp.

City Council hears report on traffic on one-way streets

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

No action was taken by the Midland City Council after hearing a traffic report that the number of vehicles on Cuthbert and Storey avenues between Garfield and Ward streets has declined in the past 90 days.

Meeting Tuesday in City Hall, the council also looked at the need for a multi-million dollar drainage system, overpasses on Loop 250, leasing of Cinema I, a carnival, nightclub and veterinary clinic.

The report looked at traffic on those two streets, plus Kansas between Garfield and Ward since the one-way designations were extended on Louisiana and Michigan streets.

Prepared by Public Works Director Fred Baker, the report noted that traffic counts reflected a "significant decline in traffic flow along Storey since 1981."

THAT YEAR, 2,237 cars traversed that segment of Storey in a 24-hour period. In 1983, the count was 1,504, or a 33 percent decrease, according to the report.

Since the one-way pairing of Louisiana and Michigan to the south, traffic on the westbound segment of Cuthbert dropped 6.9 percent. It fell from 3,486 vehicles per 24 hours in 1981 to 3,246.

Staubach speaks at dinner

People are important, former quarterback says

You've got to try to express that love, care and concern each and every day."

Staubach, who long has been active in Christian service, said a vital aspect of the growth process is learning to depend on God.

"I think you have to have faith," he said. "We don't understand all the answers — no way is that possible. You fill that void of not understanding God's plan with where you are as a human being, with faith. Belief. It's the only permanence we have. Everything else is temporary, the ups, downs, the good days, the bad days. Our spiritual life is our permanent life."

Staubach also reminisced about his glory days with the Cowboys, noting that Tom Landry is so serious on the field that even "when he wins the game, he walks off without a smile — because he's already thinking about the next game."

Staubach said he once tested Landry's sense of humor during a time-out at Texas Stadium. Waiting for the stoic-faced coach to give him the next play, the former Navy quarterback whose lifelong dream was to call his own plays observed the way Landry stood with arms folded, staring up through the opening in the roof.

"I waited and waited, and finally he gives me the play," recalled Staubach. "I said, 'Coach, I always wondered where you got those plays from.' Ernie Stautner (Cowboys' assistant coach) was laughing so hard his head set fell off. Coach Landry didn't even crack a smile."

One another occasion, said Staubach, Landry was demonstrating the proper way for his quarterback to fake a hand-off and then roll out. Having suffered a knee injury during his playing days with the New York Giants, Landry rolled out with his accustomed limp.

"I got it, I got it, Coach," Staubach told him, assuming his position behind center to take the snap. "I faked and rolled out to the right, limping all the way. The team was laughing like crazy, and there he is — not one smile."

But Landry had plenty to smile about during most of Staubach's career, and the man who now teaches television viewers a new way to spell relief believed the philosophy of chamber supporters was encouraging. "I know the attitude is very positive in this city, with your slogan, 'We Believe,'" he said.

Honored for their attitudes-put-into-practice were Jane Thomas, woman of the year; Ralph McLaughlin, man of the year; and Tom Rutledge, Russ Rutledge and John Freeman, industrialists of the year.

'Clean Midland' program certified

Today's activities began with a 10:45 a.m. training workshop for members of the Clean Midland organization's five committees — communications, schools, business and industry, municipal and civic organizations.

After the workshop, the formal certification ceremony was held. Clean Midland president Jim Everett received a certification plague from Bill Nash, vice president/field services for Keep America Beautiful.

The certification came only after Clean Midland, Inc. had completed a concentrated five-month effort to fulfill guidelines required by Keep America Beautiful. Those guidelines included completion of a series of photographs used to measure accumulation of litter in specific portions of the community — a process called a Photometric Index — and an in-depth examination of Midland's practices, regulations and resources relating to the management of solid waste.

Before certification took place, Clean Midland also was required to formally organize, receive recognition from the proper municipal authorities, secure a coordinator and sufficient funds for the first year of operation.

With the certification, Clean Midland becomes the only West Texas community approved by the Keep America Beautiful organization, according to Ms. Sharp.

The idea for Clean Midland was formulated by Director of Public Works Fred Baker, who learned about similar programs in the Clean Community System. The organization is a joint endeavor of the city of Midland and the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

"Our goal is to be self-funded eventually," noted Ms. Sharp, who indicated communities with similar programs enjoy a good cost-benefit ratio.

Clean Midland's thrust will be primarily educational in nature, she said, but added that community clean-up drives will be conducted under auspices of the organization. The organization's goal is to educate all segments of the community about solid waste disposal and to make Midland cleaner by making residents aware of how litter and solid waste accumulates and how it can be controlled.

Council hears one-way street report

In addition, the report noted a "slight increase" of 2.9 percent on Ward north of Cuthbert and a 4.6 percent decrease on that street south of Cuthbert.

The most noticeable change came on Kansas Avenue between Andrews Highway and Garfield, which posted a 27 percent increase in traffic. "This was predictable because of traffic into the (Luby's) cafeteria area and the other businesses along Louisiana, Andrews Highway and Kansas," the report notes. "While this is a fairly large increase, Kansas Street is quite different from Storey in that a very significant portion of the street has been zoned for commercial use."

THE REPORT also stated a majority of the traffic was coming off Andrews Highway onto Kansas and traveling east.

In the memo, Baker suggested doing another study, with this one to focus on where the eastbound traffic is coming from. "It may provide additional support for a recommendation to change the direction of Cuthbert between Ward and Garfield," he said, adding that traffic going west could take Kansas Street.

"I don't see any overwhelming problem that has occurred," remarked Mayor G. Thane Akins after scanning the report.

"Maybe we should drop the subject and leave it like it is," suggested Councilman Carroll M. Thomas, and that's what the council did.

Since the one-way pairing of Louisiana and Michigan to the south, traffic on the westbound segment of Cuthbert dropped 6.9 percent. It fell from 3,486 vehicles per 24 hours in 1981 to 3,246.

In other action, the council approved a list totaling $67,000 for improvements to Washington Park that included putting in some lighting, a basketball court, an 8-foot wide sidewalk and a picnic pavilion. Money to pay for this is coming from the Community Development Block Grant.

PUTTING IN a drainage system that would divert rain water from new residential areas in northeast Midland would cost about $5.8 million, the council was told by Assistant Public Works Director Russell Doyle. It boils down to $4,429 per acre, he said.

The question before the council, said Akins, which remained unanswered was would the city want to do the project in conjunction with developers in that area or just let developers handle the drainage problems on their land?

"Our primary concern is we have to come to grips with this as soon as possible. Holding ponds are being filled in and shifted elsewhere," he said.

The State Highway Department put smiles on the council's faces by suggesting overpasses on Loop 250 at Wadley Avenue, Holiday Hill Road and Tremont Street. "This is so far above what we've had to look at," said the mayor, who will write a letter of approval to the Highway Department.

J. "Timber" Floyd and Ken Dawson were given the go-ahead to open up Cinema I, located on Main Street downtown, as a theater and site for live shows. At the last session, the council had considered including the structure in a demolition bid.

With a seating capacity of 628, the theater has new air conditioning and heating units and bathroom facilities, said Dawson. A three-year lease was granted.

The council also approved a carnival sponsored by B'nai B'rith, listened to requests by westside citizens to include House Park development in the 1983-84 budget, passed an ordinance for a nightclub in a shopping center at the southwest corner of Loop 250 and Garfield Street and approved a veterinary clinic to be located in Mesa Verde shopping center on North Midland Drive.

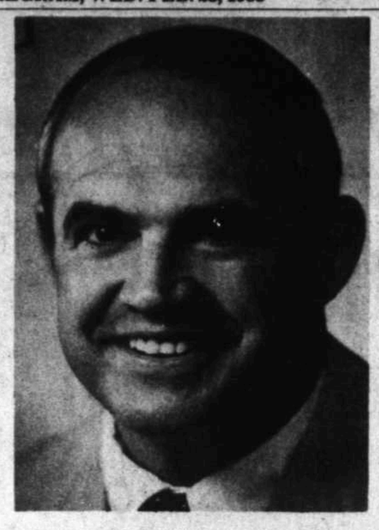

Man receiving shock OK

A man who suffered a severe electrical shock while installing equipment in Midland Memorial Hospital's X-ray room last week has been released from the hospital and is now recuperating at home, a hospital spokeswoman said Tuesday.

Keith Shaffstall, 27, of 308 Mariana, Apt. A "was in full cardiac arrest" when a hospital employee found him lying on the X-ray room floor shortly before 10 a.m. Thursday, another hospital spokeswoman said. "We really weren't sure if he was going to live. And now he's doing pretty good, except for a severely burned arm and some loss of memory."

Shaffstall is employed by the Gilbert X-Ray Co. of Dallas and initially was in critical condition in the hospital's intensive care unit. He was taken off the critical list Friday, however, and his condition improved to the point where he was released Monday.

Company investigators are still trying to determine the cause of the accident and an official ruling is expected later.

Gordon Marcum II

Councilman seeking re-election

Gordon G. Marcum II filed Tuesday with the city secretary's office to run for a fourth term on the Midland City Council, Place 2.

"During this period of economic slowdown in Midland, I feel it is especially important to the citizens that an experienced, fiscal conservative continue to serve," he said in his statement.

He noted that during his six years on the council, it has made progress in reorganizing city government to be more responsive to the needs of citizens and has continued providing a good quality of service.

"In the coming years, we must focus our attention to the problems of the East and South sides, a more efficient city government, street maintenance, traffic movements and downtown parking," he stated.

Acknowledging that finding solutions to problems isn't easy, Marcum pledged to dedicate his time and to "work diligently for solutions to make Midland the best place to live."

Deadline for filing for the April 2 election is March 2. The filing must be made with the city secretary's office on the second floor of City Hall.

Man charges due process denial

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former Vietnam War aerial "shotgun" platoon soldier who was meted a life's sentence for strangling his 27-year-old estranged wife in 1974 has filed a suit in federal court in Midland for a habeas corpus hearing.

The man, Billy Don Cato, is alleging that his constitutional rights have been violated and that his sentence should be set aside.

He was convicted in 1974 of first-degree murder by a jury in Midland's 142nd State District Court.

In his petition, Cato alleges that he was:

—Denied due process of law because the trial court failed to include the lesser offenses of "aggravated assault" in the charge to the jury. Cato claims he had no intentions of killing his wife, doesn't remember choking her and says he drove her to the hospital following their fight. The presiding judge, Perry D. Pickett, however, did permit "involuntary manslaughter" and "murder" in the charge.

—Denied due process and equal protection of the law. He alleges that the trial judge failed to include "insanity" as a defense to the offense. Cato says he was entitled to that defense, since he was suicidal, suffered a lapse of memory and "had seen visions." Cato claims that his Hawaii-born wife, Shirley Cato, was versed in karate, had given him a blow to the head and that he "had no recollection of committing any offense."

—Denied a mistrial since, he claims, the state used hearsay evidence to convict him. Cato cited the grand jury foreman who testified "as if he were an expert" on the cause of death and a pathologist who substituted for the pathologist, Dr. Martha Madsen, who performed the autopsy on his wife. Dr. Madsen was unavailable to testify at the trial.

—Denied confrontation of a witness — Dr. Madsen — by allowing one pathologist to testify for another.

—Denied a hearing on his mental ability to stand trial. "There was possibly a question of sanity at the time (of trial)," Cato says in his petition. Writing in the third person, Cato said that "the accused had received a blow to the head, seen visions and only had a partial memory of the past events."

Prosecuting Cato was then-District Attorney James Mashburn. Cato's court-appointed defense attorney was Vern Martin, the current district attorney.

The autopsy report, prepared on May 2, 1974, the date of the woman's death, said that "according to hearsay" Cato had strangled his wife and "dumped" her on the parking lot of Midland Memorial Hospital.

Cato, however, claims he drove his wife across town to the hospital's emergency room. She was pronounced dead in the car.

A nurse there testified in the trial that after Cato had entered the emergency room, he said, " 'My wife is out in the car. She is dead, and I killed her...She has been asking for this for 10 years.' "

Court records of the trial indicate that Cato married the woman in 1964 after she had turned 18 and while he was stationed at Schofield Barracks in Hawaii after serving his first of two stints in Vietnam. Earlier, Cato said he was betrayed by a Fort Worth woman whom he loved and who he thought was "upright," but "she wasn't. She was a nurse during the day, and she was a prostitute at night."

Cato testified that that revelation "blowed me," that he "hit the bottle," and "turned alcoholic briefly."

"If a woman can change me from an alcoholic back to a churchgoer in one night, that's something I have to do," he testified when asked why he married her.

Later the marriage became "very rough," Cato testified.

Trustees against proposed annexation

"We have some valid questions," Humes said. "It's strange, we think, that while the petition involves 87 students in the Ridgewood area, it avoids (around 60) students living in a trailer park immediately adjacent (to Ridgewood)."

Also, he pointed out, the petition involves some 4,000 acres of undeveloped land in Mission Estates.

"If enough students from our school district would ever be in this area, we've said before we'd consider building a new school out there," he continued.

An MISD bus presently services the area, according to Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi.

Other than the loss of valuable tax property, Humes said the board opposes the annexation because it could "set a precedent" that could have "bad ramifications."

"We'll oppose this to the 'nth' degree or to the final appeal — but we hope it won't go that far," he said. "In their petition, the statement was it would be best for these 87 students because it would be in their best interest. We're representing over 17,000 students and we don't feel it would be to their best interest."

When asked if the possible annexation would fuel animosity between the two school districts, Humes replied, "If (ECISD trustees) feel that's in their best interest, they'll vote to do it."

Last summer, several residents from the area approached Midland trustees about contracting the students to Ector County following a notice that ECISD would charge $1,260-per-student tuition for out-of-district students. Previously, the students had simply transferred to ECISD at no charge.

"We said at that time we oppose the annexation," Humes said.

"Let's call a spade a spade," Trustee Ron Britton said. "HBF developers are sharing the same attorney with Ridgewood and they're trying to include some 4,000 acres of land. I find it strange they're concerned about these 87 students when it would benefit them (the developers)."

Meatless meals are delicious with tofu

Tofu, as a staple item, has been used for centuries in Oriental diets. The versatility of the soybean product may also be used during the meatless Lenten season.

High in protein, low in cost, calorie, sodium cholesterol-free, tofu comes in white, semi-solid cakes and can be bought in most supermarkets specialty shops. Easy storage includes refrigeration in a covered container filled with fresh water.

Tofu absorbs distinctive flavors of other ingredients and mimics textures to lend itself from sauces to desserts.

Tofu lasagna is a meatless dish with the taste and preparation of traditional lasagna. Mash tofu with Parmesan cheese, parsley flakes and garlic salt. As with the traditional dish, layer mozzarella cheese, mushrooms, noodles and tomato sauce. An envelope of spaghetti sauce mix makes preparation quick and easy.

For an Oriental taste treat try vegetable and tofu stir-fry. A nutritious dish, it features a colorful array of Chinese pea pods, broccoli, bean sprouts, sliced carrots and the tofu. The crisp vegetables are quickly stir-fried in a mushroom sauce delicately flavored with ginger and soy sauce.

TOFU LASAGNA

1 envelope (1-1/2 oz.) Italian-style spaghetti sauce mix
1 can (6 oz.) tomato paste
1-3/4 cups water
3 tablespoons oil
3 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
1 pound tofu, mashed
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon parsley flakes
3/4 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 pound lasagna noodles, cooked
1/2 pound shredded mozzarella cheese (2 cups)

Prepare spaghetti sauce following package directions using tomato paste, water, and one tablespoon oil. Lightly brown mushrooms in remaining two tablespoons oil in skillet over medium-high heat. Combine tofu, Parmesan cheese, parsley flakes and garlic salt. Spoon thin layer of sauce into bottom of a shallow 12 x 8-inch baking dish. On top of this, layer 1/3 the lasagna noodles, 1/2 the tofu mixture, 1/2 the mushrooms, 1/3 the mozzarella cheese and 1/3 remaining sauce. Repeat. Top with remaining noodles, followed by remaining sauce sprinkled with mozzarella cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes until bubbling hot.

Microwave: Microwave assembled lasagna on HIGH for five minutes; reduce setting to MEDIUM and microwave 10 to 20 minutes, until lasagna is bubbling hot. Let stand 15 minutes before cutting.

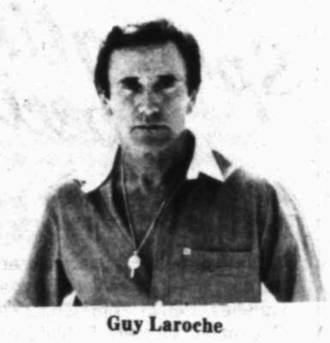

VEGETABLE AND TOFU STIR-FRY

3/4 to 1 pound tofu
1-1/2 cups water
3 tablespoons soy sauce
4 tablespoons oil
3 cups thinly sliced broccoli
1 cup green pepper, cut in strips
1 package (6 oz.) frozen Chinese pea pods, thawed
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
1/2 cup thinly sliced onion
1 cup bean sprouts
1 envelope (3/4 oz.) mushroom gravy mix
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

Cut tofu into 1/2-inch slices; gently squeeze between paper towels to remove excess moisture. Cut in cubes. Combine 1/2 cup water and soy sauce; marinate tofu in this mixture for at least one hour. Drain; save marinade. Stir-fry tofu in two tablespoons oil in large skillet or wok over meduim-low heat until lightly browned; remove from skillet. Add remaining oil to skillet and heat over high heat. Add broccoli, green pepper, pea pods, carrots and onion; stir-fry four to five minutes. Add bean sprouts and tofu. Combine gravy mix, remaining one cup water, reserved marinade, ginger and garlic powder; add to skillet. Simmer three to four minutes, stirring occasionally, until liquid thickens and vegetables are tender-crisp. Makes six servings.

Tofu Lasagna, an old favorite dish with a new twist, is one of the meatless lenten recipes made delicious with tofu, a staple item used for centuries in the Orient.

Guy Laroche

Symphony Guild to hold fashion show

Midland Symphony Guild will present the creations of Paris designer Guy Laroche at a fashion show and luncheon March 5 at the Midland Country Club.

Laroche is an internationally-known designer, with 32 salons and boutiques around the world. He has designed haute couture of such fashion notables as Madame Pompidou, the Vicomtesse de Ribes, Dewi Sukarno, Melina Mercouri, the princesses of the Saudi Arabian Court, and such Americans as Charlotte Ford and Mrs. Samuel Newhouse.

His "Haute Diffusion" spring-summer 1983 ready-to-wear collection to be presented at the Midland event features strong colors, easy fitting lines and comfortable warm weather fabrics of cotton poplin, cotton weaves, crepes and silks.

Three major trends stand out in the new collection: the "Shirting" look for town wear, with superimposed colors for straight dresses, loose-fitting blousons, gilets and bermudas; the "Sophisticated" town wear line, with close-fitting suits, long jackets with trousers, short belted jackets and side-slit coats; and the beach look, with carefree blouses, cotton jackets and slit skirts. A Dallas fashion celebrity in her own right, Ms. de Leon manages the Guy Laroche Highland Park Boutique and launched its Houston store and Midland's Guy Laroche shop in Oak Ridge Square.

Also featured at the show will be jewelry from the Dallas Pacetti-de Medeci collection.

Mrs. G. Arthur Donnelly, who is charing the Guild's fashion show and luncheon, noted that the event is to be held on a weekend, providing a special opportunity for mothers to share a social outing with their teenage daughters.

The event will begin at 10:30 a.m. with a champagne-cocktail social hour until 11:15 a.m., to be followed by the fashion show and luncheon. Tickets are $35, with proceeds benefitting the Midland-Odessa Sumphony and Chorale. Reservation deadline is Feb. 25. Tickets maybe obtained by calling Mrs. Herbert Boles at 694-4065.

Familiarity by doctors not 'outrage'

By JACK SMITH
From Wire Reports

I have mixed feelings, I'm afraid, about a story I read in the paper the other day reporting that some women are "outraged" by doctors who call them by their first names while referring to themselves as "Doctor Gold," or whatever.

That troubles me on two counts:

First, I question the use of "outraged" for a reaction that might more accurately be described as annoyed, irritated or, at most, angered.

Rage is a very good and useful word, and its use was certainly justified when it came into vogue in the 1960s to describe the reaction of black Americans to their continued degredation, a century after Lincoln.

It is also the only word I can think of to describe the feelings, which I can only imagine, of a woman who has been raped. She has, indeed, been outraged, and rage must be what she feels. Rage is a word that ought to be used only to express an anger so profound as to verge on madness. Rape is a crime that would cause it. Nothing is worse but murder and mayhem. But rage ought not to be wasted on a minor insult.

THE STORY in the paper recalled the experience of a married woman, Lucille Natkins, which she had described in the American Medical Journal under the title, "Hi, Lucille, This Is Dr. Gold."

The title was a quotation, evidently, of what Mrs. Natkins' doctor said to her when she came awake after surgery: "Hi, Lucille, this is Dr. Gold."

"Stupor turned to rage," Mrs. Natkins wrote. "She wanted to scream," the story in our paper said. She wrote, "You expletive, that's not the way it goes! It's Hi, Lucille, this is Jim, or Hi, Mrs. Natkins, this is Dr. Gold."

The first question, as I have said, is whether Dr. Gold's remark was demeaning enough to provoke rage. I don't think so.

The second question is: Was it demeaning at all?

I remember coming out of surgery a few years ago, and the surgeon said, "Hi, Jack. I'm Dr. Mayer."

I was not outraged. I was reassured. He knew who I was. He thought of me as a friend. And yet, he was, thank God, a doctor, and thought of himself as one.

What if he had said, "Hi, Jack, this is Al"?

I might have panicked. I would not have wanted to have been operated on by some guy named Al. My stupor turned to relief, not rage, when the doctor identified himself as a doctor, and said that I, Jack, was going to be OK.

I WONDER, though, how I would have felt if my doctor had been a woman. Let us imagine that her name was Florence Luboviski.

I am coming out of a stupor. Dr. Luboviski's face swims into view. She says, "Hi, Jack; this is Florence."

My mind goes back to some of my indiscretions. Florence? Did I know a Florence?

She laughs. "It's Dr. Luboviski," she says.

"Thank God," I say. "I thought for a minute you were Florence."

This is not entirely an academic question. I had a similar problem with my own doctor, a man of distinction whom I have always called Dr. Reap in deference to his distaste for publicity.

Though he is among the most admired of doctors, and the most cherished of friends, our doctor-patient relationship has suffered because he is trying to retire, and I do not think a doctor has the right to retire while his patients are still alive.

ON THE OTHER hand, I do not think he is obliged to stay in practice merely to keep me going. That would hardly be the crowning triumph of what has been a distinguished career, except for his strange inability to diagnose anything I come up with, or down with. Also, he can't stand the sight of blood, which rather limits him in his practice.

It hasn't been easy replacing him, though. For one thing, I had to find a doctor about my age, and most of them are retired, or worse. If a doctor is going to call me Jack, he has to be at least 50. Otherwise, I'm going to resent it, like Mrs. Natkins. I would not be outraged, mind you. Just irritated.

Dr. Reap calls me Jack, naturally, since we are old friends, and I call him Eddie. As far as I know, he never cured me of anything, except the time he recommended aspirin for what turned out to be thyroiditis, but he was always engaging in conversation, and while he never seemed to know what was wrong with me, he did know what was wrong with the government.

Often, when I came to him with a problem of the kind that men develop, as they grow older, and work under pressure, he would excuse himself to dictate a letter into his Dictograph for President Truman, or Eisenhower, or Kennedy, or Nixon — whoever happened to be in. I always doubted, by the way, that his secretary ever transcribed or mailed them, since she had better sense about such matters than he did.

But I wish he had been Lucille's doctor. I doubt that she would have felt rage when she came out of a stupor and he said, "Hi, Lucille. I'm Dr. Reap."

Fresh or cooked, bananas always versatile fruit

By BETSY BALSLEY
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

In many a household there is an unwritten rule: When all other fruits seem too expensive or they have graced the table too frequently of late, stop by the banana counter. Seasonal fruits come and go, but bananas maintain their welcome in most homes year-round.

Bananas are an excellent source of a number of vitamins and minerals, primarily potassium. They are easy to digest, making them good choices as a baby's first solid food. They are also bland enough to fit into most diets for those suffering from digestive problems.

The fact that they are low in sodium and fat and contain only about 100 calories per medium fruit also makes them a nice addition to the diet of a normal, healthy person. Some dieters find them a good pre-meal snack; one that fills them up and makes it possible for them to reduce the portion size of other foods without a feeling of deprivation.

Although, as with most fruits, bananas are generally thought of as a sweet treat or dessert item, they also make excellent cooked accompaniments to a main course or a fine ingredient in a dish that needs a touch of sweetening.

SINCE BANANAS ARE picked green and allowed to ripen off the tree, it is wise to choose the slightly green-tinged, very yellow fruit at the market and allow it to fully ripen at home. This way, you are more certain of getting unbruised fruit. And, although the old rule was that bananas should never be refrigerated, that is just one more old wive's tale that seems to be going by the wayside. Let the fruit ripen almost to the eating stage and then put it in a sealed plastic bag in the refrigerator if you do not want to use it at once. It will keep well for three or four days and even if the skin turns a dark brown, the edible part will remain firm and tasty.

Next time you pick up some bananas at the market, try using them in one or another of the following recipes.

CURRIED PORK AND BANANAS

2 pounds boneless pork shoulder, cubed
3 tablespoons clarified butter
1 large onion, chopped
6 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon coriander
1-2 teaspoon cinnamon
1-2 teaspoon cumin
1 tablespoon curry powder
1-4 teaspoon black pepper
1 (10 3-4-ounce) can condensed chicken broth
1 cup water
2 bananas
Rice and Peas

Brown pork in butter. Add onion and garlic and saute until tender. Stir in coriander, cinnamon, cumin, curry powder and pepper. Add broth and water. Bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 45 minutes to 1 hour, until pork is tender.

Peel and cut bananas in 2-inch pieces. Add to pork mixture and cook 1 minute. Serve with Rice and Peas. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Rice and Peas

1 1-2 cups rice
3 tablespoons oil
4 cups water
2 teaspoons chicken bouillon granules
1 (8-ounce) can peas, drained
1-2 teaspoon garlic salt

Cook rice in oil until lightly browned. Add water and bouillon. Bring to boil. Cover and simmer until tender and water is absorbed, about 20 minutes. Stir in peas and garlic salt. Serve hot. Makes 6 servings.

BANANA FRUIT SALAD MEDLEY

1 orange, peeled and sliced in half cartwheels
1 cup diagonally sliced celery
1 honeydew or cantaloupe, peeled and cut in bite-size wedges
1 to 2 unpeeled red apples
Lemon juice
4 bananas
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons sour cream, about
1-2 cup coarsely chopped macadamias or walnuts
10 maraschino cherries with stems
Banana Dressing

Combine orange, celery and honeydew in bowl. Cover and chill. Shortly before serving, core and cut apple into cubes. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Peel bananas, score with fork, if desired, and slice 1-2-inch thick. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Mix apple, bananas and sugar with other fruits in serving bowl. Add sour cream and toss to lightly coat fruits. Garnish with nuts and cherries. Serve with Banana Dressing. Makes 6 servings.

Banana Dressing

1 cup whipping cream, whipped
1-4 cup powdered sugar, sifted
1-2 teaspoon anise liqueur
1 1-2 teaspoons vanilla
1 tablespoon toasted sesame seeds
2 bananas
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 to 2 tablespoons half and half, optional

Fold together whipped cream, powdered sugar, anise liqueur, vanilla and sesame seeds. Just before serving peel and mash bananas with lemon juice. Fold into whipped cream mixture. For thinner consistency stir in half and half.

BANANA TARTUFO

1 banana
1 pint vanilla or chocolate ice cream
4 marashino cherries
Finely chopped bittersweet chocolate
Whipped cream, optional
Dessert wafers, optional

Peel banana and cut into 4 pieces. For each tartufo, insert a piece of banana and 1 cherry in center of level, slightly softened scoop of ice cream. Mound more ice cream on top of scoop to form ball. Place ice cream ball on plate and freeze to harden. Repeat with remaining ingredients, making 4 tartufos. Roll each frozen ball in chopped chocolate. Freeze until ready to serve. Serve in individual shallow dessert bowls garnished with whipped cream and wafers. Makes 4 servings.

CHOCOLATE CREAM BANANA CAKE

2 medium extra-ripe bananas
1 (18.5) package chocolate cake mix
2 (1-ounce) squares semisweet chocolate
2 cups whipping cream, whipped
2 large firm-ripe bananas

Peel extra-ripe bananas and slice into blender. Puree until smooth (use 1 cup). Prepare cake mix according to package directions for 2 (9-inch) layers, replacing 1 cup water with 1 cup pureed bananas. Bake and cool.

Melt chocolate according to package directions. Cool to lukewarm. Mix small amount of whipped cream into melted chocolate. Pour over remaining whipped cream. Fold into whipped cream thoroughly.

Split cooled cakes in half through center lengthwise to make 4 layers. Spread one layer with chocolate cream. Top with second layer. Spread with chocolate cream. Peel firm bananas and split in half lengthwise, place on top of chocolate cream. Top with third layer. Spread with chocolate cream. Top with fourth layer.

Spread chocolate cream over entire cake. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Garnish top of cake with additional sliced banana, if desired. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

BANANA-COCONUT CHIFFON PIE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1-4 cup cold water
3 eggs, separated
1 cup mashed ripe bananas
1-3 cup sugar
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup whipping cream
1-3 cup finely grated coconut
1 baked 9-inch pastry shell

Soften gelatin in cold water. Lightly beat egg yolks in top of double boiler. Stir in bananas, sugar and salt. Cook and stir over boiling water until slightly thickened. Remove from heat. Add softened gelatin and stir until dissolved. Chill until mixture is slightly thickened.

Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Whip cream until stiff. Fold egg whites, cream and coconut into banana mixture. Pile into pastry shell. Chill until firm. Garnish with additional whipped cream and sliced bananas, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

LIVING TODAY
Dual earner families benefit

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent
Home Economics

Around income tax time many couples start counting up the economic benefits of two salaries. But lifestyle benefits may be just as important as economics for many.

The rapid change from single-provider families to dual-earner families in the last decade has been motivated primarily by economic benefits. Both husband and wife now work in about half of all American families.

If present trends continue the labor force participation of women in 1990 will equal that of men. In these difficult economic times the wife's income allows many families to have the necessities, keep up with inflation or maintain a desired standard of living. A second income may also help educate the children and support other family members.

A recent survey indicates that dual earners feel they gain lifestyle benefits from having two incomes. Husbands express pride in their wife's capabilities as an earner. They indicate less personal pressure for being the sole income provider. Husbands also report feeling freer to make job changes, take job risks or increase their education.

The wives in dual-earner families report an increased sense of independence, self-confidence and personal fulfillment. They also describe closer, more sharing relationships with their husbands.

In spite of the benefits, dual-earner marriages can create problems. Researchers are now focusing their attention on the impact of dual-employment on marital relationships, child development, household management and family stress. This research in family life education will be needed to help dual-career couples manage their work and family to balance the gains and strains.

Making best use of animal fats in cooking

By MERLE ELLIS

Fat is a four-letter word to some people. In my book, however, it's a six-letter word — F - L - A - V - O - R — because fat is where the flavor is in meat. Without some fat, you would have a hard time telling the difference between a T-bone steak and a turkey leg. But that's not the fat I'm talking about, not today. Today we're talking about the fat you use for cooking: For frying potatoes, for making pie crusts, for browning meat for stews, for things like that.

Many of you, I would guess, have turned to vegetable oil for cooking, probably because some TV commercials told you it was better for you. I don't want to get in the middle of a controversy, but there seems to be some doubt about that.

According to informed nutritional sources, "A growing number of medical and scientific experts are voicing concern over the high consumption of trans fatty acids. . . ."

These are the fatty acids formed when vegetable oils are processed for human consumption. "Because of the highly sophisticated chemical nature of these acids and the way they behave in the human body, there is need for further research to determine the wholesomeness and safety of the products, particularly since fatty acids represent 95 percent of the fats and oils in our diets."

According to Randall Wood, a biochemist at Texas A & M, who recently completed a study of both animal and vegetable fats, "Americans would have to eat 100 pounds of lean beef, slightly less than the average person's annual consumption, to get the same amount of trans fatty acid found in one pound of margarine."

So much for the animal versus vegetable (fat) controversy. We'll have to let the scientific community solve that. In the meantime, if you haven't put all of your faith in those TV commercials, you can save a lot of money and add a lot of flavor to your cooking if you save the drippings from cooking meats, clarify them and use them for all manner of cooking.

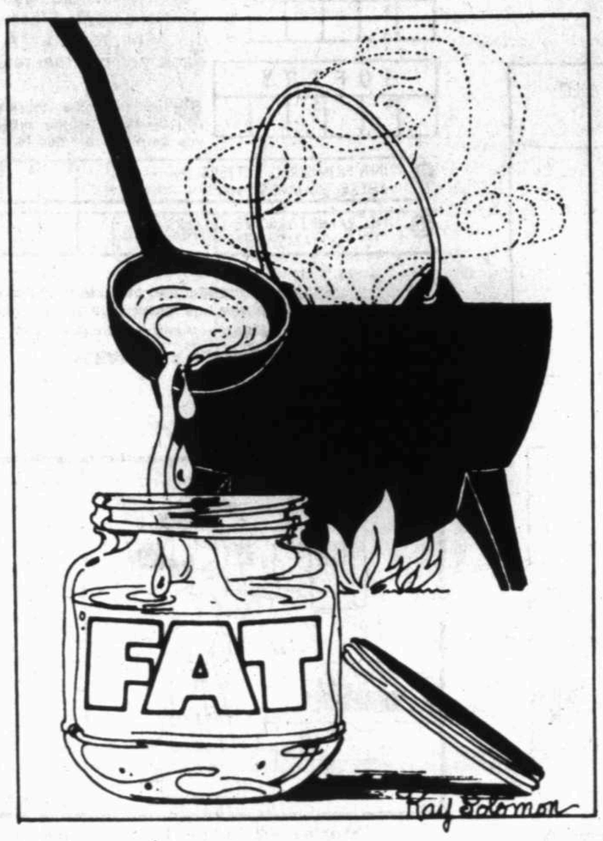

Clarified bacon fat is unbeatable for sauteing vegetables, making wilted spinach salads, and for pan-fried potatoes with onions. And you haven't tasted biscuits until you've had them made with clarified bacon fat.

Pork fat used to be the standard fat for every kind of cooking — especially baking. Leaf lard, the rendered fat from around the kidney of the pig, used to be the favorite fat for pie crusts. It still is in my kitchen. You can make your own simply by saving the fat from pork roasts and chops, then clarifying it.

Beef drippings make the finest fat for deep frying because they have very little flavor of their own. Rendered beef suet is almost tasteless and can stand high heat without smoking, making it perfect for French fries. It also is great for sauteing and baking.

Make it a practice to save beef, pork and bacon fats when you cook these meats. Save each in separate containers in the refrigerator until you have enough, then clarify them.

To clarify pan drippings, spoon the solidified drippings into a deep saucepan and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil, remove from heat and allow to cool; then refrigerate in the pan for an hour or two. All of the clarified fat will come to the top, leaving any impurities in the water. Lift off the fat. You may find some meat scraps or jelly still clinging to the underside of the fat. Scrape these off. Melt the fat once again and pour into clean storage containers. Keep in the refrigerator. Use as you would any cooking fat, animal or vegetable.

DEAR ABBY

Worlds of wonder open for children who read

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the librarian in Winter Park, Fla., who asked if you had any words of wisdom to help promote reading in young people.

Thank you for reminding children that our libraries are filled with books that will open new worlds, real and imagined, and they're all there free.

Abby, urging children to read is important. But children cannot discover the world of books unless that world has been opened to them first. That is the responsibility of parents and teachers.

Since television came on the scene, it is estimated that two out of three American children do not read because they either cannot read or they hate to read.

May I recommend the "Read-Aloud Handbook" by Jim Trelease (Penguin Books)? This fine book suggests practical and effective ways in which parents and teachers can inspire children to develop the habit of reading. — FLORENCE IN ARLINGTON, VA.

DEAR FLORENCE: On your recommendation I bought a copy of the "Read-Aloud Handbook." For openers this caught my eye:

"You may have tangible wealth untold:
"Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold.
"Richer than I you can never be —
"I had a mother who read to me." (Strickland Gillian)

As I read this treasure of a book, I became more and more fascinated with its contents. Listed were hundreds of books appropriate for children of all ages — books containing fairy tales, biographies, history and poetry.

More important, the author tells how to coax children away from television, and how to improve their language skills, awaken their imagination and create a real thirst for knowledge and entertainment through reading. I regret that this book was not available to me when my children were growing up. I give it my unqualified recommendation.

If you can't find the "Read-Aloud Handbook" locally, write to: Children's Book and Music Center, 2500 Santa Monica Blvd., Santa Monica, Calif. 90404.

Send $5.95, plus $1.50 for postage and handling. California residents please add 39 cents for sales tax. No tax is required for out-of-state shipments.

I realize that money is tight these days, but I urge parents of infants, as well as teachers who are responsible for the education of children 3 years old and older, to get this book. It's the best lifetime gift you can give a child.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for encouraging people to read. I cannot pass up this opportunity to tell your readers about the March of Dimes Reading Olympics.

It's a national program that offers children Olympic-style medals and certificates as a reward for reading, and at the same time teaches them to do something for others.

Every year an estimated 250,000 American babies are born with birth defects. The March of Dimes uses the money to help these children.

This is how the Reading Olympics works: Schoolchildren from the first grade through the ninth sign up sponsors (friends, relatives and neighbors) who pledge to donate a certain amount of money to the March of Dimes for each book that the student reads. Students select their own books — other than textbooks — at their own reading level.

Barbara Bush, the wife of George Bush, our vice president, is the national chairperson.

Last year, 185,000 students nationrwide read more than 3 million books and earned nearly $2.4 million for the March of Dimes!

For information about the Reading Olympics, your readers can contact their local March of Dimes chapter, or write to P.O. Box 2000, White Plains, N.Y. 10607. — SELDA ROTH, READING OLYMPICS DIRECTOR, LOS ANGELES COUNTY CHAPTER

Pasadena's Doo Dah Parade looking for legitimacy

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The city's Doo Dah Parade, which has put the Sounds of Silence Marching Band and the Synchronized Briefcase Drillteam onto city streets, is looking for its own form of legitimacy.

Doo Dah organizer Peter Apanel wants the Board of City Directors to change the municipal code to give his 6-year-old brainchild the same cost exemption, tax status and organized timetable as the venerable Rose Parade.

"There needs to be more of a set procedure" for the Doo Dah Parade, Apanel said at a recent board hearing.

But that hardly seems in step with the free-wheeling silliness of the march.

Already, some reins have been pulled in on the wacky walk. Last year, for the first time, the number of parade entries was limited and motorized entries were banned.

Paul Lukacs has been composing bridge problems for almost five decades. His monthly feature in Bridge World Magazine is one of the highlights of that publication. A second collection of single dummy problems, all of which have appeared in the magazine, has now been assembled by BW editor Jeff Rubens under the title Test Your Declarer Play Vol. 2 (Devyn Press, 222 pp., paperback, $5.95. Available from Bridge World, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025, for $5.50 postpaid).

If you are looking for an easy time, skip this book. But if you enjoy a challenge, this is a must for your bookshelf. To give you an idea, cover up the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play three no trump after a spade lead.

If declarer ducks the spade in dummy, East can win and shift to a heart. South must duck, and the defenders can continue hearts to force out South's only entry to his diamonds.

However, if declarer rises with the ace of spades, he is still exposed to defeat if West wins the king of diamonds and shifts to a heart. On this layout there is no further danger. But switch the defenders' major-suit kings and the error of declarer's play becomes apparent. West will regain the lead with the king of spades and play another heart through dummy's remaining honor, and thus enable East to cash the setting tricks in that suit.

The sure line is to play the queen of spades to the first trick! If it holds, declarer sets up diamonds immediately and has nine tricks. If it loses, declarer has two entries to the diamonds—jack of spades and ace of hearts—and the defenders can't attack both.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: "Fairy Tales" author Wilhelm Grimm, Pittsburgh Hall of Fame shortstop Honus Wagner, World War II naval commander Chester Nimitz and artist Winslow Homer were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor Barry Bostwick, boxing's Jimmy Ellis and conductor Michel Legrand. You will be amazed at the success you find and the attention you receive once you stop playing second fiddle. Step forward and bask in the spotlight! Children need to be allowed to participate in making family decisions. Romance becomes more rewarding when an old love returns. Do not be sidetracked from your goals. Concentrate on bringing greater order to your life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Those working in family-owned businesses find a growing communications gap between the generations. Lay your cards on the table. Love at first sight is possible. Cut entertainment spending.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You and your partner need to talk. Get a receipt whenever you pay for something today. A better day for salaried employees than those who free-lance or work on commission.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Give free rein to your imagination and you will find creative solutions to nagging problems. Travel is likely to produce very good results. Keep the costs within reason.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not be in too big a hurry where romance is concerned. Once you get into better physical shape, your outlook will change. Obey all safety rules. Negligence can cause accidents.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have worked hard and are about to receive the recognition you deserve. Students need to make a greater effort to understand what they are studying. Good grades are not enough.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your plans to bank some money win you the admiration of your family. Kids are full of energy now. Try to keep them in line without putting a lid on their enthusiasm.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look to the future with confidence. The best is yet to come. A lull in the work day enables you to catch up on routine chores. Ultimatums will not be effective. Use persuasion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Couples can reconcile if they agree to forget past grievances. An intriguing new job possibility is featured. Think about the financial ramifications before agreeing to make a move.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Follow a plan that enables you to bank more money. You derive inspiration from a romantic relationship. Give others time to prove their sincerity. Complete negotiations, but postpone signing papers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Use this quiet day for meditation and planning. You find lots of chores to keep you busy. Talk with someone who has experience in a field you would like to enter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your ambition sometimes gets in the way of progress. Do not try to accomplish everything in one day. Spend as much time as you can with an old friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Tackle one thing at a time and you will enjoy greater success. Solving a financial problem is a top priority. An engagement announced today will prove lucky for the couple involved.

Islanders use suicide as defense mechanism, researchers say

HONOLULU (AP) — In the normally placid islands of Micronesia, young men are killing themselves at one of the highest rates in the world, researchers say. And no one knows what to do about it.

Over the past 20 years, suicides among young island men have reached epidemic proportions, and "copycat" suicides are pushing the rate even higher, according to the Rev. Francis Hezel and Dr. Don Rubinstein.

Suicides among men between the ages of 15 and 30 are so prevalent that they have become an accepted method of problem solving in the island societies where harmony is often highly prized, the two said.

"For several years suicide has been the number one cause of death for youths in Truk," said Hezel, a Jesuit priest who has served for nearly 18 years as director of Xavier High School in the Truk Islands, where the suicide rates are highest.

Hezel was the first person to notice the trend in 1977, when he published a magazine article on the problem. Since that time, he and Rubinstein, a researcher at Honolulu's federally financed East-West Center, have collected a vast amount of information on the problem, but they aren't ready to offer any solutions.

"I'm not sure what we can do about it," Hezel said.

Hezel and Rubinstein said their figures indicate that annual suicides in the U.S.-administered Trust Territory of the Pacific, where about 120,000 people live, are averaging about 27 per 100,000 people. That's twice as high as the U.S. rate, they said.

When broken down by geographic regions and age group, some figures are even more dramatic.

"The general suicide rate for Truk is 40 per 100,000. The rate for Trukese males between 5 and 25 is a startling 250 per 100,000. This is 20 times the youth rate in the United States," said Hezel, who is doing research in Honolulu as part of a year's leave of absence.

About 40,000 people live in Truk, an island group 3,500 miles west of Honolulu.

The suicides almost always are sparked by a dispute between a young man and his parents or older brother over a "crazy little thing," Hezel said.

He cites as typical the case of a 16-year-old boy who hanged himself when he was refused $1 by his father.

The suicides are often clustered in groups, with the death of one young man closely followed by several others, he said.

At first, the nature of the incidents led Hezel to believe that the pressures of modernization in the strongly traditional island societies were to be blamed for the increasing death rate.

"But when we began to take a closer look at things, we noticed a pattern of poor family relations," he said. "Rather than an impulsive act, we found the suicides were often the result of a long-term intolerable situation."

Hezel and Rubinstein now think the high suicide rate may be the result of a traditional island defense mechanism run amok.

Young island men have used withdrawal, such as silence or refusing to eat, to express anger or shame, Rubinstein said. The Trukese use the word "amwunumwun" to express that behavior.

"Amwunumwun is a common strategy employed by Trukese to give vent to strong feelings...when it is inappropriate to display these feelings more directly," Hezel said.

Over the past 20 years, however, the strategy has taken an extreme form.

Falkland Islanders celebrate British rule

PORT STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) — After a six-week delay to clear away landmines and war rubble, residents of these disputed South Atlantic islands have begun a week-long celebration to mark 150 years of British rule.

The center of the festivities, the Port Stanley racetrack, lay in ruins after last year's 74-day war that followed Argentina's seizure of the colony April 2.

British troops, who have been guarding the islands since they drove out the Argentines last June 14, now have cleared mines from the track and rebuilt its shattered stands.

The festival, which began with a thanksgiving service Sunday, will include steer riding and sheep shearing competitions, sheep dog obedience trials, concerts, dances and a show by British army and air force entertainment groups.

The troops are part of a 3,500-strong garrison which outnumbers nearly 2-1 the 1,800 British-descended islanders, who are mainly sheep-farmers. They have opposed successive British diplomatic attempts to negotiate a settlement with Argentina on the status of the islands.

Some 1,000 islanders live in Port Stanley. British helicopters ferried in hundreds of others from scattered settlements to attend the festival, while some arrived by boat, bringing horses to compete in three days of races on the restored track.

British Foreign Office Minister Timothy Raison and Baroness Joan Vickers, a member of the House of Lords who sponsored a bill to give islanders full British citizenship, were among VIPs who traveled from London, 8,000 miles away.

The delayed celebrations mark the Jan. 3, 1833 watershed in the history of the Falklands. A single British sloop ordered off an Argentine commander who had set up a penal colony.

The Argentines departed without firing a shot, but their government, claiming Britain had committed "an outrage," never dropped its claim to the archipelago.

Argentina claims the islands on grounds it inherited the Spanish rights to them after declaring independence from Spain in 1816. Britain first named the islands in 1690, but did not settle them until ousting the Argentine garrison 150 years ago.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Weight, insulin dosage related

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have found out that I have diabetes and I've made up my mind to knock off about 20 pounds. I should have done this years ago, but now I have a special reason for doing so. Will I be able to cut down on the amount of insulin I take if I lose weight? — Gus, Detroit

Dear Gus: I hope you have discussed with your physician your plan to lose weight; if not, I suggest you do so.

Losing weight may in fact permit a person to reduce his or her insulin dosage. However, I would warn you not to reduce the amount of insulin precribed for you by your physician simply because you've lost weight. Determining a diabetic patient's insulin dosage is not a do-it-yourself project.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Raising a child is hard enough, but when you have to watch what to feed him so he doesn't break out, it's really a problem for both of us. If an eight-year-old boy has food allergies, does that mean he'll always have them or is there a possibility they will disappear as he gets older? — Mrs. A.O., Los Angeles

Dear Mrs. O.: Some children do outgrow their sensitivity to foods, but others do not. One rule of thumb I find with my patients is that the longer a food sensitivity persists, the more likely it is to continue into later years.

Dr. S. Allan Bock, of the National Jewish Hospital and Research Center in Denver, notes that sensitivity in younger patients is often caused by milk, and this sensitivity disappears sooner than for other foods.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife says she is going to keep me from having a heart attack in spite of myself. She says she realizes she can't stop me from smoking, but she can do something about the meals she prepares. What she's doing is cutting down on the amount of fat we eat and substituting vegetable oils when she does have to use something. I give her a big E for effort, but my question is whether it will do any good? — Herb, Arlington, Va.

Dear Herb: No one can answer your question with complete certainty, but one thing is certain: Your wife's effort to keep you healthy would have a better chance of success if you gave up smoking.

As for her change in meal preparation, which apparently involves an effort to cut down on saturated fats in your diet, there is reason to believe that this should be beneficial. It has been reported that the incidence of coronary disease in Greece, where the people consume a great deal of olive oil (a monounsaturated fat), is only about one-tenth that in the United States, where saturated fat in the diet is common.

For Joey, Chapel Hill, N.C.: It is true that many commonly sold foods contain low levels of toxic substances, but there is no reason to panic. It simply underlines the importance of a balanced diet based on a wide variety of foods, and the advisability of moderation in eating any one food.

Following small start, magazine makes it big

AUSTIN (AP) — The magazine began in two grimy little rooms up a narrow flight of stairs over a real estate company office.

The publisher was a 26-year-old lawyer who had sunk all of his — and his family's — money into the venture. The editor was a former Houston school superintendent.

One member of the staff was a lawyer, one was a guy who used to run an underground press in San Francisco, and one was a blind novelist.

They published 10,000 copies of the first issue in February 1973. Almost nobody expected the magazine to last.

Texas Monthly, a fat, slick, much-awarded regional magazine, now has a circulation of 289,730, claims a readership of 1 million, and — according to publisher Mike Levy — "delivers" Texas to advertisers.

Levy won't say how much money the magazine makes, nor will he say how much he spent to start it.

"Nobody would believe it," Levy said. "It was a shoestring, just a shoestring."

"I remember my wife at the time referred to them as 'the fraternity boys,'" said Gary Cartwright, who has been writing for the magazine since it began. "I liked them, but I sort of had my doubts.

"I remember them sitting around in this crummy little dusty office with poor lighting. It was really crowded. They had piles of manuscripts, but most of them weren't very good. And there was Billy Lee Brammer, who was legally blind, reading manuscripts with a big magnifying glass."

Brammer, author of the political novel "The Gay Place," was an eccentric man who one day simply left the office and never returned, Cartwright said.

"I think he forgot he worked there," Cartwright said. "He didn't even pick up his last paycheck."

"We were all amateurs," said Bill Broyles, Texas Monthly's first editor at the age of 28, now the editor of Newsweek. "If we had known what we were doing, we'd have known it couldn't be done.

Mike Levy

"None of us really made enough to live on. In a way, the magazine was capitalized by the staff. We worked for virtually nothing. We had to, because nobody who cared about their money would give it to us.

"We were too young and dumb and stupid to be scared. We all had a real sense of adventure, writing about the state we all loved," Broyles said. "We didn't want fat salaries, we wanted to work. It was a very entrepreneurial kind of place, a very Texas kind of place."

Greg Curtis, Broyles' roommate at Rice University, gave up his little printshop in San Francisco to come to work at the new magazine.

"It was fun. Given the facts at various times it might have seemed foolhardy, but I remember talking to Bill and saying 'This is going to work,'" Curtis said.

Farm exports expected to fall in 1983

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department analysts are confirming what agriculture leaders have been fearing for months — U.S. farm exports will fall again significantly in 1983.

"The economic recession, the high-valued U.S. dollar, foreign exchange constraints and debt problems in many importing countries are reducing exports despite low U.S. farm prices," the analysts said last week.

They projected a 5 percent drop in exports this year, to $36 billion from last year's already reduced level of $39.1 billion, the first time in 13 years that U.S. exports declined.

Their report predicted declines for all commodities, including major grains and fibers. Only exports of meat, livestock and dairy products are expected to increase, and those only fractionally.

The projections came just hours after ranking members of the Senate Agriculture Committee, fed up with the "calculated predatory trading policies of other nations," promised quick action to counter foreign export subsidies that are undercutting the U.S. in world markets.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the committee, acknowledged that the economic problems cited by the USDA analysts have contributed to the problem.

"Yet there is no escaping the conclusion that much of the blame for the erosion of our export markets must be laid upon the export policies of predator nations," Helms said.

The bills under committee review, nearly a dozen of them, are aimed particularly at the countries of the European Economic Community and Brazil, which have multibillion-dollar subsidy programs in operation.

While differing in details, they all generally set up a system of export subsidies to keep the United States competitive.

Farm area legislators behind easing surpluses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm Belt congressmen, trying to reassure their constituents they won't be unfairly taxed, are rallying behind legislation to void a tax ruling they fear could undermine the administration's entire crop reduction plan.

"This ruling will have the effect of discouraging many farmers from participating in the program," says Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

"Legislation is urgently needed to help assure that the program will have a maximum chance to succeed in reducing farm surpluses," de la Garza says.

At issue is an Internal Revenue Service decision last week that farmers cutting back production in return for free surplus grain under the government's payment-in-kind, or PIK, program must pay federal taxes on the value of that PIK grain at the time the grain is provided even if they haven't sold it yet and gotten some cash income.

Taxes on grain actually grown by farmers are due when the grain is sold, and the depressed market prices of recent years has prompted producers to withhold crops for months and even years in hopes that prices will finally rebound.

Farmers have until March 11 to decide whether to get into the PIK program or, if they're already in, whether to stay in. Farm leaders say the tax issue could be a key factor in those decisions.

Shortly after the IRS ruling, congressional leaders indicated that legislation to overturn it would be passed but probably not before the end of the PIK sign-up on March 11. But now there is growing optimism that a bill can be on President Ragan's desk before that date.

"We've made some progress on this IRS thing," says Dawson Ahalt, acting agriculture undersecretary for commodity programs. "We're pretty confident now that we can get legislation through before the end of the sign-up."

The House Ways and Means Committee, after initial indications that it would move slowly, has now scheduled hearings on the legislation for today.

Parasite-caused disease affirmed by Agriculture

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has confirmed 20 cases of psoroptic cattle scabies in seven states during January, bringing to 39 the number of cases reported nationwide since Oct. 1.

Department officials ordered that all infected or exposed herds remain under state quarantine until the diseased cattle are successfully treated under supervised dipping operations and found free of the parasitic mite.

Single outbreaks of the contagious disease were reported in Maricopa County, Ariz.; San Luis Obispo County, Calif.; and Tillman County, Okla., officials said.

Kansas reported two cases, one in Cheyene County and the other in Rawlins County, and Colorado reported four, two in Prowers County and one each in Bent and Kiowa counties.

Five cases were confirmed in Idaho, four in Bear Lake County and one in Jefferson County, and one each in the Texas counties of Castro, Death Smith, Floyd, Hutchinson, Palmer and Potter.

Scabies is caused by parasitic mites piercing a cow's hide and feeding on body fluids released from the wounds. There were 79 cases confirmed during the same October-January period of 1981-1982.

Agreement reached

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has announced multimillion dollar agreements sending thousands of tons of grain, oilseeds and cotton to the governments of Zambia and Honduras.

The Honduras agreement calls for the United States to provide $2.5 million in credit guarantees for the export of American cotton to that nation between now and Sept. 30.

The Commodity Credit Corp., USDA's commodity agency, will provide up to three-year coverage under that agreement, officials said.

Road prisons allow inmates to work time off their sentences

AP Laserphoto

Prisoners from the Big Pine Key Road Prison work along U.S. Route 1 in Big Pine Key as part of a contract with the Florida Department of Transportation to provide men for routine work. Today's prisoners consider road gang work "good time" due to improved conditions.

ALONG U.S. 1, Fla. (AP) — A car whizzes past, heading down the highway toward Key West. A man working along the roadside stretches, wipes sweat from his brow, leans on his shovel and gazes after the travelers.

If Randy DeGroat had been caught doing that 25 years ago, he would likely have been beaten or put in a sweat box for 24 hours. The offense was "eyeballing." For convicts assigned to a chain gang, that meant simply looking at a free person.

Times have changed to the point that DeGroat, 25, serving four years for robbery, says he was fortunate to be assigned to Big Pine Key Road Prison, one of nine Department of Corrections facilities that once ran "chain gangs."

Gone are the fetters and chains permanently fastened onto prisoners' legs. Guards no longer carry shotguns, clubs and batons. Capricious beatings and abuses belong to the past; sweat boxes are non-existent and prisoners' living and working conditions have improved.

"These young fellows don't know what 'hard time' is," said James Ingram, a Big Pine inmate serving a life sentence for armed robbery and a veteran of the old chain gangs.

The turning point, most officials agree, came on July 16, 1967, when 38 prisoners, hobbled by leg shackles, died in a fire that destroyed a barracks in the road prison at Jay. Only 13 inmates survived. The investigation into the fire revealed the brutality and squalid conditions that were common then.

"Road prisons are an incentive for the inmates," said Capt. Jerry Thomas, in charge of the 10½-acre Big Pine camp that houses up to 64 prisoners 30 miles north of Key West. "Food is generally better at a road camp. The inmates live in an open dormitory, they get to work outside and can earn time off their sentences."

Corrections officials said taxpayers and the state also benefited from the prison labor.

"We have a contract with the Department of Transportation to provide men to work along the roads," said Ken Sorenson, superintendent of Region IV of the state prison system. "They do road and bridge maintenance, repair roads and guardrails, cut grass along roadways and medians and perform community projects."

On a tour of the road camp's jurisdiction, covering 100 miles from Key West to Jewfish Creek near the Dade-Monroe County line, Thomas pointed out such community projects — Little League baseball fields with dugouts and scoreboards; bike paths, playgrounds, basketball and volleyball courts; a hall for disabled veterans, a Baptist church and a Florida Highway Patrol building prisoners helped construct.

The transportation department reimburses the Department of Corrections for the road camp labor, which involves about 700 of Florida's more than 27,000 inmates. The payment for the fiscal year 1981-82 was $6.5 million, said Vernon Bradford, a prison system spokesman in Tallahassee.

Inmates assigned to road prisons, Sorenson said, work 40 hours a week, either five eight-hour days or four 10-hour shifts, as at Big Pine. They are off duty the rest of the time. One inducement for them to volunteer some of those off-duty hours for community work is "gain time."

Prisoners can earn up to one day off their sentences for each day spent on community projects, Thomas said.

Gain time is also determined by the type of crime committed and how much of the sentence has been served. And gain time can be lost for breaking the rules.

The crimes that send men to prison have no bearing on whether they can be assigned to road camps. That decision is based on such things as physical fitness and the type of security each prisoner requires.

"Inmates must either be classified medium or minimum security to be sent to a road prison," Sorenson said. Medium security means a prisoner must always be within sight and sound of a guard. A prisoner with a minimum security rating can work out of sight and sound as long as authorities know where he is.

Sorenson contends road crews are a way of teaching "good work habits."

"This is like the military," said the former Marine sergeant. "They have so much time (allotted) for everything. That alone gives them a change of attitude. It's the American way."

Prisoners are out by 7 a.m. and back at 5 p.m. They are divided into crews and trucked to their work destinations with either a corrections officer or transportation supervisor in charge. Neither carries a weapon.

"My instructions are not to try to prevent any escape," Thomas said. Each vehicle is equipped with a radio and any escape attempt is relayed to headquarters, which alerts the Florida Highway Patrol and police departments in the area.

Thomas lives on the grounds with his wife and two daughters and says he has no desire for a transfer. Similarly, many of the convicts would also rather live at Big Pine than at other prisons, but a few said they'd rather serve their sentences in cells.

"I'd rather be in jail, watch TV and do my time," said Wendell Miller, who has three years remaining on a five-year sentence for grand larceny.

Choirboy becomes sheriff

BREWTON, Ala. (AP) — Stop drugs. Stop chicken fights. Stop gambling. Solve the unsolved murders.

Tim Hawsey, the "choirboy" elected sheriff of Escambia County, says he'll try to do all those things and more if folks will be patient. After all, he's trying to follow a sheriff who held the job for 24 years.

He said voters expect him to swing a big stick and clean up this timber-rich county on the Alabama-Florida border.

Hawsey, 30, attacked the job with a master's degree in police administration from Troy State University and evangelical zeal.

"I PLAN to take everything as it comes real slow and get into it," said Hawsey, taking the oath for the $28,500-a-year job recently.

A Mobile native who moved to Brewton at age 4, Hawsey defeated G.S. "Scotty" Byrne Jr., in one of the county's most memorable upsets last fall.

Replacing Byrne complicates things. "I'm sure a lot of people will be waiting for my first goof-up," said Hawsey.

Byrne, 58, lost to Hawsey, 6,533 to 3,646, in the Democratic primary. Political observers here said Byrne, who became sheriff in 1958 and had won every election since, just underestimated Hawsey.

Hawsey said they called him "preacher boy" during the campaign because he directed the choir at the Atmore First Baptist Church. He said he's been a choirboy since age 12.

"IT'S JUST something I really enjoyed. I grew up in church and a Christian family. I got interested in law enforcement and really can see how the Lord can use you in being sheriff. But it was not a case of the preacher running for sheriff," Hawsey said.

They used to call him the "boy cop."

Hawsey entered police work at age 18 as a dispatcher in the Brewton Police Department. A year later, he went to court to obtain legal authority to make arrests and became a patrolman. The court declared him an adult.

Later, with his wife, Diana, and two children, he entered the world of law enforcement academics, directing the criminal justice program at Faulkner State Junior College's Bay Minette campus.

He thinks drug traffic is the county's biggest criminal problem, though many believe the rumors of drugs outweigh the criminals.

"We've got some gambling problems, and some unsolved murders. Then there's the chicken fights which really don't mean very much, but people don't like them. It's a misdemeanor. You can arrest them 20 times in one night and they can still make a profit."

Actor Paul Newman, right, is shown with author Donn Pearce in the early 1960s during the making of the film "Cool Hand Luke." Pearce wrote the novel from which the film was adapted based on his experiences as a member of a Florida chain gang in 1949 when he served two years for grand larceny.

Ex-con: Prison was chamber of horrors

Prisoner writes of experiences

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — It's been 33 years since Donn Pearce did time on a Florida chain gang, an experience he turned into a novel that became the movie "Cool Hand Luke."

Even now he will talk only reluctantly about the year he spent at Road Camp No. 48 at Tavares where inmates worked and lived with shackles riveted around their ankles and a heavy chain limiting their stride.

No one denies prisoner treatment in those days was often brutal and inhumane, not only in Florida but in most states. But Pearce, articulate and using vivid recall, seems to hold back his emotions when he recalls life on a chain gang.

Prison "was a chamber of horrors," the 54-year-old Pearce said, but added quickly, "Perhaps any prison is."

It was 1949 and Pearce was 21 when he was convicted in Tampa for grand larceny and given a five-year sentence. The judge cut the time to be served to two years.

Pearce spent the first year at the state prison in Raiford, where he worked in the print shop until he made a mistake that sent him to the chain gang.

"I used too much ink and ruined about 20 envelopes," he said. "Can you imagine that? Twenty envelopes! I should have gotten rid of them or spread them around in other boxes."

Road crews were dispatched to wherever road work was needed. "Bull gangs" did the heavier work; "patch crews" made minor repairs. They were on the road at the crack of dawn, Pearce recalled, and labored until nightfall with shovels or a "bush ax" or "yo-yo," long-handled tools with sharp cutting edges used to trim grass or cut thick underbrush.

The chains and shackles were never removed. Pearce still remembers the intricate procedure prisoners devised to remove and put on their pants while wearing leg irons and chains. He remembers, too, how to walk pigeon-toed and stiff-legged so the fetters wouldn't bruise his ankles.

Pearce spoke about the "box" without emotion. The "box" was an unventilated wooden structure, measuring 3 feet by 6 feet by 6 feet and resembling an outhouse. Prisoners put in it for punishment were given two identical cans — one contained water, the other was used as a toilet.

Pearce said he was twice put in the "box" for a day. "Once for talking in lineup and once for letting the mess hall door slam," he said.

Corporal punishment was readily administered by guards carrying walking sticks or blackjacks, he said. Prisoners were struck for any infraction of the rules such as not working diligently enough or for "eyeballing."

"That means looking at someone passing by when you were working on the roads," he explained. "Prisoners weren't allowed to look at a free person in those days."

After completing his sentence, Pearce returned to sea. He served in the merchant marine before and after his two years in prison.

He began writing "Cool Hand Luke" in 1960. Although Pearce never met the lead character, he said Luke "was a legend among chain gangs and died in Raiford while I was there."

His novel was published in 1965. Paul Newman starred in the movie, which was released in 1967. Since then, Pearce has written two other books and several articles for national magazines.

Pardoned 10 years ago, Pearce is a licensed bail bondsman and private investigator.

If he retains any bitterness about his treatment on the chain gang, he keeps it to himself. He admits only to being annoyed by what he calls "the ex-con syndrome."

"I've been straight for more years than a lot of cops have been alive," he said.

Marriage ban to be fought

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — A woman who wants to wed a murder convict at Attica state prison is getting support from corrections officials in her fight against a state law that prohibits life inmates from marrying.

Carol Ehlers, a 49-year-old secretary, says she didn't expect to fall in love with an inmate, especially a convicted murderer who won't be eligible for parole until 1994. But once she became involved, she decided to battle the law that stands between her and marriage.

Miss Ehlers said she met Martin Fitzpatrick in 1977 after she sent a batch of Christmas cards to prisoners and he wrote back. Fitzpatrick, 47, was convicted in December 1970 of killing two policemen investigating a gas station robbery outside Utica.

"I never intended to get involved," Miss Ehlers said, remembering newspaper stories about "the woman and the cop killer," and questions from friends and criticism from co-workers. "I fought it."

Now she is fighting a state law that denies basic civil rights, including marriage, to inmates sentenced to life in prison or on Death Row. Similar laws are in force in about a dozen other states.

The law "made some sense in the days when a life sentence meant you'd spend the rest of your life in prison," said Thomas Stoddard, counsel for the New York Civil Liberties Union. Now there is no such justification, he said.

The state Senate approved a bill last session to allow lifers to marry, but it was rejected in the Assembly. The state civil liberties union will lobby for passage again this session, Stoddard said.

An Erie County judge gave the couple permission to marry when they first asked in 1981. But the state appealed the judge's ruling and it was overturned by a higher court.

Leigh Anderson, an attorney with the Wyoming County Attica Legal Aid Bureau, said she will challenge the state law when she takes Fitzpatrick's case to the state Court of Appeals later this month.

Lou Ganim, spokesman for the state Department of Correctonal Services, said family ties generally improve prisoners' behavior and rehabilitation. Corrections officials support a change, he said.

Miss Ehlers said two lawyers and a private investigator are also working to prove Fitzpatrick's innocence.

"We didn't expect all this to happen," Miss Ehlers said. "We were quietly trying to get married."

Both say they are willing to wait for his release, communicating in the meantime by letter and by conversation across a wooden table with inmates and visitors all around and guards at both ends.

Project faces hazy future

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — One of the biggest solar installations in the country, located near the Iowa Statehouse, faces a hazy future, and the reason is simple.

"There just isn't that much solar energy falling on a square foot of Iowa to make it go," said Stan McCausland, the former state General Services director who was the driving force behind Iowa's $200,000 project, completed three years ago.

Authorities had hoped the project eventually would be expanded to supply half of all the energy needs for the Capitol complex.

Instead, it produces only a tiny fraction of the needed energy and has never run at more than 50 percent efficiency. Today, the mirrored panels are turned toward the earth, idled by a broken pump.

When working, the panels reflect sunlight onto an oil-filled tube 12 feet away. The synthetic oil in the tube is heated to at least 350 degrees and then pumped to a heat exchanger where the energy is converted to steam and combined with the rest of the heating system.

Even when it's running, the solar experiment has few vocal supporters. Jack Walters, McCausland's successor, said he'll keep the system going but will not expand it.

"I'm not saying it was a waste of money. But from everything I have read, it is a disappointment," he said. "The payback is 15 or 20 years, way off in space."

Don Ashwill, a heating specialist whose duties include monitoring the solar installation, said the panels are producing about 30 percent less energy than he had expected.

The oil used in the system is expensive and so thin that tiny quantities leak from joints in the tube, Ashwill said. In addition, because the mirrors are 12 feet away, it is hard to focus them on the oil-filled tube.

But the biggest trouble, McCausland said, is a lack of sunshine.

At Iowa's latitude, an average of 2,100 British thermal units of sun energy strike every square foot a day. By casting the mirrors at a certain angle and making them follow the sun, about 2,700 Btu will fall on solar panels like the Iowa system.

But a large amount of that light never reaches Iowa. The National Weather Service estimates the sky is partly cloudy to overcast 71 percent of the time in Des Moines.

And 30 percent to 40 percent of the sun's energy that does reach the solar panels is lost as it is converted into steam, McCausland said, adding, "Solar just is not all its's cracked up to be."

Woman whistles her way to win

HOUSTON (AP) — Rhonda Payne was back at it — whistling while she worked her way to her second straight whistling rodeo championship.

Last weekend, the 24-year-old part-time home economics teacher and veteran whistler belted out her own renditions of "Under the Double Eagle" and "The Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy of Company B" to get to the winner's circle.

"I never practiced whistling seriously to enter contests," said Mrs. Payne. "I'd just go out into the back yard and hang up clothes or just sit on the porch and whistle to myself. I've done it for years."

Mrs. Payne said that when she was a little girl, she started whistling on the back porch of her parents' Huntsville home "for the heck of it."

The champ is officially known as the whistling champion of the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

Decoy attracts criminals

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Constance Louie has been robbed 115 times in the past 18 months. The frail-looking woman who wanders through high-crime neighborhoods has been called a walking magnet for criminals.

But Connie Louie is a decoy cop, and her little red purse is one of the most widely traveled pieces of evidence in San Francisco police history, says Lt. Charles Beene, who has been training decoys for more than five years.

"When Connie walks into a neighborhood, looking like a small, scruffy, helpless, elderly Asian woman, street criminals see the change purse in her pocketbook and figure this old lady is a push-over," said Beene.

He callled Ms. Louie "the best in the country right now."

"Standup decoys have to have more ability than an actor in Hollywood, and she backs it up with a lot of courage, a lot of knowledge and a lot of confidence," he said.

At 5-foot-3 and barely 100 pounds, her beat adds to the crime statistics from Fisherman's Wharf to the Mission District.

The cases she enables city prosecutors to bring to court are so solid that more than 90 percent plead guilty to some charge rather than risk a trial and possibly harsher treatment, Beene said.

Her purse, said Beene, has been in the possession of murderers, rapists and common street criminals who, for a moment or two, think they've picked some old lady's pocketbook and gotten away clean. Not so.

Here's how it works, according to Beene:

Bent and halting of gait, Ms. Louie, wearing a radio receiver in her ear under her kerchief, shuffles past the pawn shops and bars on Sixth Street between Market and Mission streets.

A young man, well-dressed, is carrying a shopping bag on his arm. He spots Connie, looks right and left, and makes his move. He doesn't know that every step he takes is observed by a policeman watching from a hotel window across the street. Connie gets the word.

"You've got somebody interested, Connie," the officer says. "He's turned around and is facing the street, thinking it over. He wants it. He's turning around now, Connie. He's coming to get it...he's got it. OK, suspect walking south toward Mission."

That's it for him. Even before he's got a chance to inspect the two marked dollar bills in the purse, he's spread-eagled against a wall, frisked and arrested by decoy squad members.

"My heart always beats faster when I hear he's getting close to me. I try to be calm..." said Ms. Louis. Of the man who was just arrested, she said with ironic admiration, "I never felt it (the change purse) go. That guy knew what he was doing."

Artesians killed; Bear revived

TUMWATER, Wash. (AP) — "Artesians," those mysterious, subterranean, advertising agency-inspired creatures touted as contributing a special quality to Olympia beer, are being sent to the Great Brewery in the Sky.

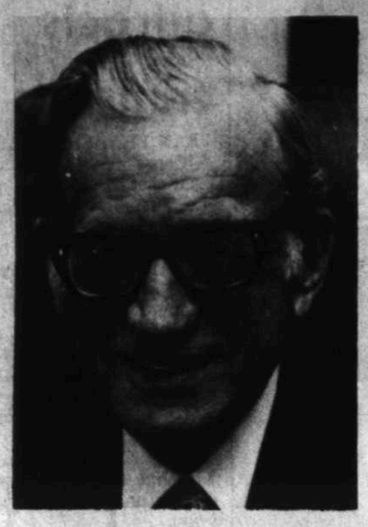

But, the playful bear that has served as Hamm's beer mascot for decades is getting a new lease on life.

Both moves take effect next month when Pabst Brewing Co. takes over operation of the Olympia Brewing Co. plant, said Bill Bowen, vice president for production services of the Milwaukee-based beer company.

He said Pabst studies showed the Artesians and Olympia's longstanding slogan, "It's the water," were ineffective in selling beer.

But, Bowen said in a telephone interview from Milwaukee, the Hamm's bear "has to be one of the most successful company mascots in the world."

Pilot outflies around-the-world Lear record

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The sleek, beige executive jet touched down on the San Francisco International Airport runway at 10:35 a.m., and the pilot was all smiles. She'd broken the world's record for circumnavigating the globe in a Lear jet.

Brooke Knapp, a 37-year-old Southern California businesswoman who took up flying to conquer her fear of it, made it around the world in her twin-engine Lear in 50 hours, 32 minutes, 45 seconds.

She broke the circumnavigation record by about 15 hours despite engine problems 500 miles east of Guam. The previous record was 65 hours, 38 minutes, 49 seconds by Henry Beaird, a Lear test pilot.

Ms. Knapp was accompanied on her dash around the globe by two co-pilots, a mechanic and an impartial observer from the National Aeronautics Association.

Her first words on arrival at the airport were: "It was a heck of a day's work. I think I'm ready for a nice, cold beer."

She waited for the cool brew long enough to greet her husband, Charles W. Knapp, chairman of the board of the Financial Corp. of America, who gave her a kiss and a bouquet. Then she faced reporters.

Ms. Knapp, operator of Jet Airways Inc., a charter company headquartered in Los Angeles, left San Francisco Wednesday at 7:58 a.m. and kept to a rigid schedule that resembled driving in the Indianapolis 500.

Islander finally wins race

STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) — The Falkland Islanders held a horse race 50 years ago to mark their first century under British rule, and William Morrison didn't win it.

So he came back from retirement Monday for the 150th anniversary, and won the coveted Governor's Cup at age 71.

Morrison had been a shepherd on the islands, but retired to England with his wife several years ago. In Monday's race, he guided a thoroughbred named Ballena over the finish line ahead of 15 other horses.

"I was scared to come back without winning," he said.

The event was part of the week-long celebration of the establishment of the British colony in 1833. The festivities were delayed for six weeks because the race track was still being built after the old one was wrecked in last year's war between Britain and Argentina.

Also, the annual shearing of the islands' 600,000 sheep had to be completed.

Hilton donates to UH

HOUSTON (AP) — The Conrad N. Hilton Foundation has donated $21 million to the University of Houston's College of Hotel and Restaurant Management.

College dean Dr. Gerald Lattin said $15 million will be earmarked for construction of a four-story annex to house food laboratories, a research kitchen, library and museum, computer lab and classrooms.

The remainder will be used to endow three teaching chairs, establish a maintenance fund, purchase books, design workshops and hold short courses for industry personnel.

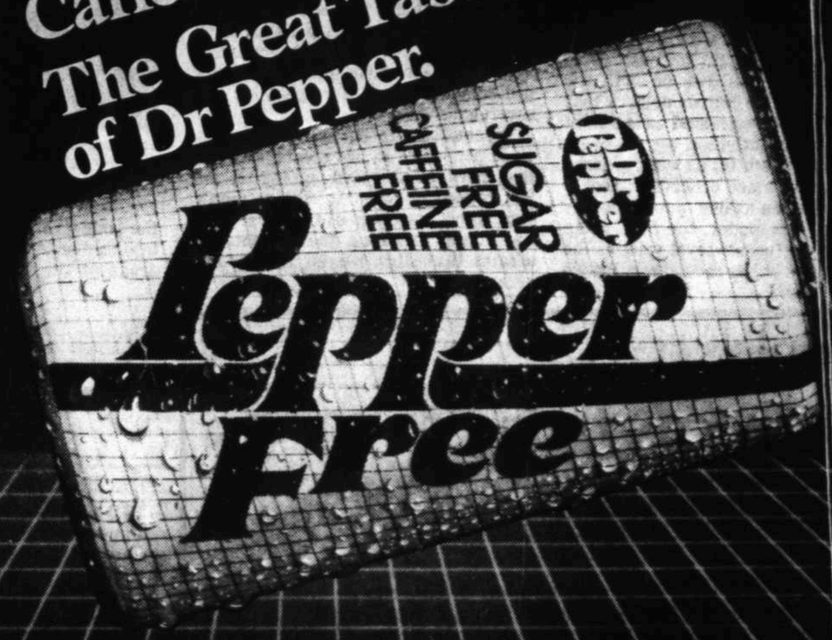

The donation was announced Monday by Barron Hilton, head of Hilton Hotels Corp.

Since 1979, the foundation has provided financial support to the college and contributed almost $1 million for scholarships and faculty development.

Queen Elizabeth takes legal action against press

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
European Correspondent, The Hearst Newspapers

LONDON — It's a long established axiom of the newspaper game that nothing sells papers like racy gossip about kings, queens and princes.

But, pushed to extremes by Britain's garish, gaudy Fleet Street tabloids, royalty-raking may be leading to a crisis over freedom of the press in the nation where, along with the U.S., the right to uncensored news was first recognized.

At the center of the gathering storm is the British throne and a raging debate about where legitimate news-gathering ends and unreasonable intrusion upon privacy starts.

The controversy's ramifications extend much further, however. They have produced demands on both the right and left of British politics that newspapers be restrained in some of their reporting activities.

Queen Elizabeth II this week ordered Buckingham Palace officials to seek a court injunction against publication by a London newspaper, the Sun, of an account by a former royal valet of the life and loves of her second son, Prince Andrew, as seen from the servants' quarters.

HER ACTION was seen as a sign of the deepening gravity of the situation. Never before has the queen taken legal steps to prevent a newspaper article from appearing. It's thought she would have been unlikely to have done so if the conflict between the press and the "establishment" had not already grown more vitriolic than at any time in this century.

"The queen's decision stemmed from a pair of unprecedented developments," according to Rachel Beaumont, a royalty watcher and writer. "Probably for the first time, a newspaper couldn't be persuaded by private appeals by her spokesmen not to publish something out of respect for the sovereign's wishes.

"Secondly, the British press, or a large portion of it, has recently shown that there are absolutely no inhibitions left regarding what it will or won't print about members of the royal family. Almost anything goes, a state of affairs that didn't exist until very recently."

Queen Elizabeth

A glaring example of the papers' new readiness to treat their royal clan at the same level of tastefulness as shown-business celebrities has been their coverage of the 21-year-old Princess of Wales. Fleet Street's love affair with "darling Di" during her courtship and the early days of her marriage to Prince Charles is now over with a vengeance.

Hounded by photographers and reporters wherever she goes, she is most often depicted these days as a spoiled, head-strong spendthrift.

Relations ebbed to a new low recently when, contrary to a longstanding gentleman's agreement between the royal family and the press, she refused to appear for a "photo opportunity" session during a Swiss skiing holiday. Her normally even-tempered husband was reported to have described the "papparazzi," the group of news photographers trailing them, as a "pack-of-rats."

REPEATED ATTEMPTS to get the press to tone down its coverage of the princess,including a plea made by the queen herself in a face-to-face meeting with editors summoned to the palace, have had scant result.

The very papers which have been most assiduous in detailing and photographing her every move and mood have headlined stories claiming she was suffering from severe nervous strain because of it all. Stories have suggested she is a victim of anorexia nervosa, a disease which leaves the sufferer with no desire to eat.

This was officially denied, but, as one observer remarked, "It would be a miracle under the circumstances if the poor girl wasn't a nervous wreck."

To most onlookers here, a link between the newspapers' extravagant concentration on royal doings, real or imagined, and their increasingly desperate battle for circulation seems obvious.

"Nearly every Fleet Street newspaper is losing money," Lord Jacobson, a retired Daily Mirror editor, explained. "Nothing counts now but circulation figures and, in the view of many of them, good taste be damned. But they're courting a real danger of legal restraints being imposed by parliament."

Demands that the papers be forced to mend their ways, since they apparently won't do so voluntarily, don't stem solely from their excesses in reporting on royalty. Also under sharp attack is the old practice known as "checkbook journalism," the paying of substantial sums to those involved in major stories, usually crimes, in exchange for "exclusive" accounts.

THIS CAME under intense criticism recently when several tabloids paid relatives of Peter Sutcliffe, the "Yorkshire ripper" mass murderer, for personal sidelights on the case.

The Press Council, an overseeing body on ethical practices with no power to enforce its rulings, condemned their actions as encouraging individuals to "make money out of crime." Unusually bitter recriminations were also voiced in the House of Commons.

Members of Parliament have called for legislation to outlaw checkbook journalism and otherwise tighten the laws of privacy related to printed matter.

A consensus could well be building up in favor of this. The Conservative Party is most incensed at what it judges to be the press's lese majeste in dealing with the royal family.

Onassis trying to save New York City building

J. Onassis

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis may be an international jetsetter, but she's still got roots — and plenty of interest — in the concrete streets of New York.

The former first lady is trying with others to save the 30-year-old, 24-story Lever House on Park Avenue.

She met Tuesday with Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin, whose two votes with the city's Board of Estimate are needed if the glass structure, described as the first post-World War II building of its kind, is to be preserved.

"I grew up in New York City. I think it's important for anyone who lives here to not just tear everything down. What is it going to be like in the future?" Mrs. Onassis, 53, told reporters.

Several years ago she and others successfully fought to save the city's Grand Central Terminal.

A real estate developer wants to tear down Lever House on the grounds that it's no longer cost-efficient, and put up a 40-story skyscraper.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Another star has been added to Hollywood's famous Walk of Fame, this one honoring singer William "Smokey" Robinson.

This month marks Robinson's 26th year in the recording industry and the star was presented in a ceremony Tuesday.

Robinson, 43, began with Smokey Robinson and the Miracles in 1958 but stopped performing in 1972 to spend more time with his family. However, his wife, Claudette, encouraged him to return to the business the next year.

Last year his album and single "Being With You" was a top hit. His latest album is "Touch the Sky."

Robinson's brass star, containing a record symbol in the middle, is the 1,759th to be installed along North Vine Street between Sunset Boulevard and Selma Avenue.

MIDDLEBURG HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Actor Dustin Hoffman was pleased to learn that Southwest General, the name of the hospital in his movie "Tootsie," has a real-life counterpart here.

The administrator of the real Southwest General, L. Jon Schurmeier had written to the actor, telling him of differences between his hospital and the one in "Tootsie," nominated for 10 Academy Awards.

Hoffman, who in the movie plays an out-of-work actor who dons women's garb and wins the soap opera role of hospital administrator Dorothy Michaels, signed the letter "Dorothy Michaels."

And he used one of "her" favorite lines in his reply to Schurmeier: "You're a dear."

Atari Inc. is packing up Pac-Man

Competition forces move to the Orient

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — Stiff competition in the crowded video game industry has prompted Atari Inc. to pack up Pac-Man and move manufacturing overseas, dumping 1,700 jobs here for lower labor costs and the hope of steady profits in the Orient.

The company, which surprised the financial world several weeks ago with lower than expected 1982 earnings, had been considering a move to Hong Kong and Taiwan for a year, Bruce Entin, vice president for press relations, said Tuesday.

"While we think this is a very painful move to make, we feel it is the right move to help assure our growth in the future," said Entin, who declined to estimate how much money the company would save through its move to the Far East.

Atari's decision to take its business overseas reflects a trend among the hotly competitive video game makers to reduce costs and stabilize profits, financial analysts say.

"This was widely anticipated in the financial community," said Richard Little, an analyst with Montgomery Securities, a San Francisco institutional broker and research firm.

"As competition increases, these companies are forced to cut prices, and if they want to attempt to maintain a level of profitability, they have to cut costs," he said.

Little noted that Mattel Inc., which had planned to manufacture computer keyboards in the United States, tried unsuccessfully for two years to find a cost-effective manufacturing site and then set up operations in Hong Kong and Malaysia.

"Someone like Coleco (Industries) is manufacturing the bulk of its products in the United States right now, but as their level of production increases, I wouldn't be surprised to see them go overseas," Little said.

Only a skeleton crew of sales and administrative staff will be left at Atari's headquarters in Silicon Valley, the high-technology center south of San Francisco named for the element used to make computer chips.

Six hundred workers in Atari's Home Products Division and Consumer Products Group were laid off immediately, and the rest will lose their jobs by early summer, Entin said.

Atari, employer of 7,000 Santa Clara County workers before the layoff and 11,000 employees worldwide, has been the leader in the home computer and video game industry, leaping from zero to $2 billion in sales inside a decade.

But the company's happy technological childhood has given way to a troubled adolescence, with Atari's share of the market shrinking from 70 to 80 percent two years ago to 35 to 40 percent in the last year, analysts estimate.

Despite its success last spring with the home video version of Pac-Man, cartridge sales failed to meet expectations in the final quarter of 1982, with per-share earnings of about 60 cents — half the level of the $1.17 a share recorded in the fourth quarter of 1981.

Also, the company faced investigations of some of its top executives for suspiciously timed stock sales before the early January announcement of sharply declining earnings.

The drop in earnings knocked the wind out of Warner Communications, Atari's parent company, whose stock dropped more than 20 points the day after the company released its estimates.

Despite that, Warner can thank its offspring for 47 percent of its $4.3 billion in sales last year and a hefty 70 percent of $500 million in operating earnings.

Marx's sidekick says comedian's companion helped

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — George Fenneman, Groucho Marx's sidekick on "You Bet Your Life," says Marx "picked up" after a long period of despondency when he became involved with Erin Fleming.

"He felt involved, he felt wanted," Fenneman testified Tuesday at the trial of a Bank of America lawsuit against Miss Fleming.

Fenneman, the comedian's straight man on the popular radio and television quiz show, said when "You Bet Your Life" was cancelled in 1961 after 11 years on television and three years on radio before that, Marx "felt left out."

"He wasn't working," Fenneman said. "He would have liked to have the shows come back on the air."

But Marx cheered up when Miss Fleming started working for him in 1971, said Fenneman, still a familiar face on TV because of his long-running ads for Home Savings and Loan Association.

"When Erin came into his life, he picked up again and we started to have lunch again. There was a definite change in his outlook," Fenneman said. "Prior to their being together, he really was despondent."

Fenneman added that Marx benefitted from Miss Fleming's efforts to return reruns of the show to television.

"I think she was very good for him," he said. "That's what kept him going all those years."

Fenneman was the latest Hollywood figure to testify on Miss Fleming's behalf. George Burns, Sally Kellerman and Bud Cort were among the others called by her attorney.

The bank, as executor of Marx's estate, sued for the return of $400,000 in cash and gifts which it claims the 42-year-old former actress obtained through undue influence over Marx, who died in 1977 at age 86.

Questioned by Miss Fleming's attorney, David Sabih, on Marx's coherence toward the end of his life, Fenneman said the comedian's speech had slowed.

"But mentally, I felt he was with it," he added. "His mind was still there, certainly."

Asked if he'd ever seen Marx abused by his companion, Fenneman said he once saw Miss Fleming force Marx to eat string beans on his plate — "not with anger, but as you would with a child."

Fenneman said he believed Marx enjoyed the many parties Miss Fleming had arranged at Marx's home.

"He very often got up and sang or sat at the piano and played," Fenneman recalled. "One evening, he did 13 choruses of a thing called 'Peezy-Weezy' which came from his...Vaudeville days. It was a song none of us had ever heard and he remembered all of it."

'Dallas,' '60 Minutes' return CBS to top spot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS returned to first place in the television ratings with the three most popular programs of the week, after yielding to ABC for two weeks during "The Winds of War."

CBS, leading overall in the current season, won the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings for the week ended Feb. 20 and placed seven of its series in the Top 10. ABC was in second place and NBC was third.

The ratings surge generated by "The Winds of War" carried ABC to victory for the first two weeks of February. Last week ABC's rating was twice that of CBS, and the miniseries took the first six places in the ratings.

CBS had a rating of 18.2 for the past week. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute, 18.2 percent of the audience was tuned to CBS. ABC had 17.4 and NBC had 16.3.

It was the 14th victory for CBS during the current television season, which began Sept. 20. ABC has won four weeks and NBC has won three weeks. For the season to date, CBS has a rating of 18.2, ABC has 17.6, and NBC has 15.5.

CBS' "Dallas" was at the head of the Top 10, and two other CBS shows, "60 Minutes" and "Magnum, P.I.," were in second and third places.

NBC took fourth place in the Top 10 with the opening chapter of its two-part adaptation of Sidney Sheldon's best-seller "Rage of Angels." Jaclyn Smith stars as the young lawyer who who becomes a top criminal attorney after a scandal early in her career.

The ABC movie "Who Will Love My Children?" was in fifth place. Ann-Margret, making her television movie debut, played a dying mother who gives away her 10 children to people who will love them.

ABC's "Amanda's" and "Condo," which got high ratings last week when their premieres were telecast prior to "The Winds of War," fell this past week. "Amanda's" made its bow in 11th place but ended up in 41st place this past week, and "Condo" fell from 13th place to 30th place.

Here are the Top 10: "Dallas," a rating of 25.8 or 21.4 million households, CBS; "60 Minutes," 24.8 or 20.6 million, CBS; "Magnum, P.I.," 23.3 or 19.4 million, CBS; NBC Sunday Night Movie, "Rage of Angels," Part I, 22.3 or 18.5 million, NBC; ABC Monday Night Movie, "Who Will Love My Children?," 22.2 or 18.49 million, ABC; "Falcon Crest" and "The Jeffersons," 22.1 or 18.40 million, both CBS, tied; "M-A-S-H," 21.8 or 18.1 million, CBS; "The Love Boat," 21.6 or 17.99 million, ABC; "Simon & Simon," 21.5 or 17.90 million, CBS.

Here are the next 10: "TV Censored Bloopers No. 5," 21.1 or 17.5 million, NBC; ABC's "Dynasty," CBS Tuesday Night Movie, "Murder in Coweta County," ABC's "That's Incredible" and ABC's "The Fall Guy," 20.9 or 17.4 million, four-way tie; "One Day at a Time," 20.8 or 17.3 million, CBS; "Candid Camera's 35th Birthday" special and "The A-Team," 20.6 or 17.1 million, both NBC, tied; "Three's Company," 20.3 or 16.9 million, ABC; "Hill Street Blues," 19.9 or 16.5 million, NBC.

Council strikes down homosexual discrimintion bill

NEW YORK (AP) — A bill prohibiting discrimination against homosexuals was voted down early Wednesday by a City Council committee — the seventh time such a measure has lost in the past 12 years.

The 6-3 vote against the bill by the General Welfare Committee came at 12:05 a.m. following about 15 hours of uninterrupted testimony from the public.

At times during the day Tuesday the crowd was enthusiastic, clapping, booing, hooting or shouting at speakers. At other times the reaction was muted, a smattering of applause or a solitary yell.

The meeting concluded with chants of, "We want justice!" from members of the audience who disagreed with the vote.

The bill would forbid discrimination in hiring and housing based on a person's sexual preference. Although many prominent politicians supported the bill, members of the City Council had said privately it would be defeated.

AILEEN B. RYAN, who chaired the committee, opened the hearing shortly after 9 a.m. Tuesday by terming the bill, "the most debated" in council history.

It had been introduced six times previously and had been the subject of 10 public hearings since 1972. It was defeated in committe three times, died in committee twice and was once voted to the floor, in 1974, but lost there also.

City Council President Carol Bellamy said she would move in the full council next month to set aside the committe vote and allow the bill to come to the floor. A similar move last year failed.

The first witness to approach the podium in the crowded hearing room was Mayor Edward I. Koch, who made the bill part of his legislative package this year to give it added weight.

Flanked by members of his security detail, the mayor urged the committee members to at least allow the bill on the floor for a vote by the full council.

"I believe that when that free and fair vote is exercised on the floor, the legislaton will prevail," the mayor said.

KOCH TOLD committee members it was "a myth" that a vote in favor of the bill was political suicide in most parts of the city.

"No one can point to a single member of this council who has voted for this bill either in committee or on the floor and who then lost their seat for doing so," Koch said.

The mayor pointed out that he signed an executive order shortly after taking office in 1978 that banned sexual discrimination in city government.

"And the sky did not fall in," he said. "The city did not grind to a halt. Life went on. And life will go on when this bill is passed by the City Council."

Koch has argued that dozens of other cities have adopted similar legislation and he says the city's cosmopolitan image has suffered because of the bill's defeat.

Supporters of the bill cheered and opponents booed as Koch strode away.

RABBI WILLIAM Handler, who spoke on behalf of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis, declared: "Homosexuality is a perversion."

The rabbi said it was "an incredible insult" to ethinic minority groups to equate human rights with homosexual rights. Homosexuality, he said, was "a perverted lifestyle."

Gov. Mario Cuomo was represented at the hearing by his new human rights commissioner, Carl McCall, who said Cuomo "continues in his support of the passage of this bill."

An elderly man drew an animated response when he explained that he was "three minorities in one."

"My name is Fred Gottschalk," he said. "I am 78 years old and I am a proud Jew. You have protected my position as a Jew and also as a senior citizen. I am also gay. I beg you to pass the gay-lesbian rights bill."

A young woman holding an infant testified against the bill, saying it ran contrary to the Bible.

"I DON'T want our land to become defiled before the eyes of God," said the woman, Barbara Van DerSwaagh.

An attorney for the New York Civil Liberties Union, Thomas Stoddard, said the bill was not meant to make homosexuality a special concern.

"The point of the bill is to make sexual orientation irrelevant," Stoddard said.

Adelman being recalled before Senate committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arms control nominee Kenneth L. Adelman will be grilled Thursday by senators who say he sounds like a cynic about weapons reduction talks with the Soviet Union.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, announced late Tuesday that Adelman is being recalled for his third confirmation hearing.

Percy said the panel might also question Ken Auletta, a New York Daily News columnist who quoted Adelman as calling arms control talks a sham to be undertaken for political purposes.

Adelman, 36, deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, was nominated by President Reagan in January as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

He would succeed Eugene V. Rostow, who resigned at the president's request.

At his first hearing, Jan. 27, Adelman raised eyebrows by giving what some senators described as vague answers and by saying he had no opinion on some arms control matters.

He did better at his second appearance a week later and members predicted he would win committee approval, although with some dissent.

After the second hearing, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., came up with the Auletta column, published in May 1981, and asked to have Adelman recalled for more questioning.

The column quoted Adelman, then a political scientist with the Stanford Research Institute, as saying on the subject of arms control talks, "My policy would be to do it for political reasons. I think it's a sham."

When the committee met last week, it became evident that the lineup of the members was 9-8 against Adelman. A vote was delayed for a week and some members suggested Reagan withdraw the nomination.

Reagan, however, stuck to his nominee. Cranston continued to insist on a hearing.

After conferring with other committee members on Tuesday, Percy announced that the hearing would be held, despite reported White House pressure against it.

Through a spokesman, Scott Cohen, Percy said he hopes that a vote can be taken immediately after the hearing.

He said he would ask the committee to send the nomination to the floor with either a favorable or an unfavorable recommendation.

He said that if the committee refuses to report the nomination to the floor, he would join Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., in lining up a Senate majority to force a floor vote.

69 Business Property, Office Warehouse Space for Rent

Introducing...
Mission Square Plaza
Retail and Office Condominiums

Owning is better than renting.

If you're presently renting retail or office space, you already know some of the disadvantages-frequent cost-of-living rent increases, leases that give the landlord all the advantages, costly sales overrides on your retail sales. In short, you're not in control.

From a pure economic standpoint, ownership beats renting. Consider these advantages:

* You mortgage payments are fixed and not subject to escalation or overrides to a landlord.
* You receive tax deductions for interest and tax payments.
* You get a tax deduction for depreciation over the next 15 years.
* You have control over your space, and no one can cancel your lease.
* You can buy enough space to meet your future growth plans and lease the expansion area until it's needed.
* All maintenance and upkeep is furnished through the Owner's Association.
* Your real estate investment gains value.

In addition to all this, Mission Square is strategically located in one of the city's fastest growing areas; North Big Spring and Loop 250, just northeast of ClayDesta Plaza.

Mission Square is an ideal location for professionals, service businesses, and a variety of retails stores. Contact our office now, for a full color brochure and further details.
