Portugal Government Overthrown By Army

LISBON (UPI) — The army overthrew Portuguese Premier Marcelo Caetano today in protest against the colonial wars that Portugal has waged in Africa for the past 13 years.

Caetano handed over his job to Gen. Antonio de Spínola, the liberal-minded African war hero whom Caetano fired for saying Portugal could not win the seemingly endless African wars, the rebel armed forces announced.

The announcement was made over loudspeakers outside the Carmo convent, headquarters of the paramilitary Republican National Guards where Caetano and some of his ministers had made a last-ditch stand against the snowballing movement of army protest.

"Right now, Premier Caetano is handing over the reins of office to his successor," General Spínola, the rebel announcement said. It said the handing over was taking place inside the building, following a cannon and tank assault on the building by the rebels.

The assault climaxed a 4 a.m. uprising by large parts of the nation's armed forces against the Caetano government. It reflected unrest over what the rebels called the inability of the government to settle Portugal's 13-year-old anti-guerrilla wars in Africa and the lack of democratic freedoms.

Rebel units assaulted the downtown Carmo convent where the para-military National Republican Guards have their headquarters after Caetano ignored a 2:30 p.m. (8:30 a.m. CDT) deadline to surrender.

Witnesses reported rebel units first fired light cannon and machineguns at the convent, then sent in a tank to knock down the gates. The tank was turned back. The witnesses said the rebels then used bullhorns to tell the Republican guards to "come out."

"We have plenty of dynamite," the rebels told those inside the building.

The rebels, who controlled Lisbon's radio and television stations, earlier said Caetano and several of his ministers were holding up at Carmo. They also claimed they had detained Adm. Americo Thomaz, the 79-year-old President, and were holding him at the Military Police headquarters.

Witnesses reported shooting from various points of the city. In the downtown Chiado district, security police fired machinegun salvos into a group of youths demonstrating their support for the rebels.

Many were hit and carried into a nearby security police station, witnesses reported.

The situation was described as "very confused" by a senior diplomat contacted by telephone.

A government spokesman, Pedro Eytro Pinto, director of the Information Service, said "the legal government is still in power and we are trying to control the situation." He did not comment on the rebel claim that Admiral Thomaz had been detained.

The rebels, who broadcast a promise of democratic reform and free elections, let a 2:30 p.m.-4:30 a.m. CDT deadline for government troops to surrender elapse.

When it passed, they simply repeated the appeals without mentioning a deadline, saying they wanted to avoid bloodshed.

But 40 minutes after the deadline had passed, the rebel radio asked the population to evacuate three small sections of town, including the one where the machinegunning of the demonstrators had occurred.

The rebels said "dangerous" police and republican guards elements were holding out in the Camos, Rossio square and Largo do Garbo sections. The announcement appeared to imply that the rebels planned to take action.

The bloodshed at Largo do Garbo occurred just as three rebel tanks passed a security police station, witnesses said. A group of youths lustily cheered them on and jeered the policemen peering at them from the station.

At this moment, police opened fire.

It was the second military rebellion in Portugal since March 17 when troops protesting the involvement in Mozambique, Angola and Guinea in Africa tried to move into Lisbon with tanks only to be halted without bloodshed by loyal troops.

There were conflicting reports on how much of the capital and the countryside the rebels controlled.

Government sources said the rebel claim of "domination from the North to the South" was not true.

Israel Accuses UN Action Of 'One-Sidedness'

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Israel accused the United Nations today of "one-sidedness" after the Security Council condemned an Israeli reprisal raid into neighboring Lebanon.

Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah angrily walked out of the council meeting Wednesday night when members refused to include in the condemnation a reference to the Arab guerrilla attack that led to the raid.

Israeli troops dynamited 20 houses and seized 10 hostages in Lebanon earlier this month in reprisal for the guerrilla slaying of 18 Israelis in the frontier town of Qiryat Shemona.

"Is the shedding of Jewish blood to be again passed over in silence?" Tekoah asked the council before leaving the chamber with four aides scrambling after him.

The council voted 13-0 with China and Iraq abstaining to condemn Israel's "violation of Lebanon's territorial integrity" as well as "all acts of violence" in the region.

U.S. Ambassador John A. Scali sought to have the Qiryat Shemona incident specifically mentioned in the passage condemning "all acts of violence," but his amendment was voted down, 7-6.

Scali then voted for the unnamed resolution, explaining the reference to "all violence" was also a condemnation of "the tragedy at Qiryat Shemona."

Without reference to the Qiryat Shemona massacre, and in all its studied one-sidedness, the resolution and its addition are a singularly gross miscarriage of justice," Tekoah said.

UMMM, GOOD! — Women of First Christian Church will hold a Tasting Bee at the church from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Friday. Tasting some of the food being prepared for the event are, from left, Mrs. Greg E. Warden, Mrs. Ronald Wheeler and Mrs. Don Tinney, all co-chairmen of the event. Tickets for the meal and recipe books will be on sale at the door.

2 Brothers-In-Law Arrested In Forgery, Burglary Cases

By PAUL SIMS

Two brothers-in-law, Larry E. Abshier and Richard G. Webb, both of Pampa, were arrested last Thursday and have been charged on counts of forgery and passing forged checks and burglary of Brister's Kawasaki in Pampa.

The arrests were made after an investigation by the Gray County Sheriff's department, headed by Sheriff Rufe Jordan, state authorities and city police.

For the forgery charges, bond has been set at $5,000 for each man, and the same amount has been set for the burglary charges. The two are in Gray County Jail awaiting grand jury action.

On Feb. 9, the Ard Drilling Company of Midland, which had set up operations near Canadian, sent $5,036 worth of payroll checks to Robert W. Wadkins of 316 Gillespie of Pampa, a daylight driller for the company. The checks were made out to employees of the company in the Pampa area.

The two subjects, both who had worked a short while with the company, are alleged to have removed the envelope containing the checks from Wadkins mailbox while the driller was not at home.

Checks were forged and cashed at two Ideal's stores in Pampa, Gibson's Discount Center, a motel and grocery store in Canadian and a grocery store in Miami.

The same two have also been charged with the April 10 break-in of Brister's Kawasaki, 2124 Alcock, in which a motorcycle valued at approximately $2,800 and two crash helmets were stolen.

Gray County sheriff's deputies D.L. Day and Joe Brewer and Texas Ranger Bill Baten investigated the theft and turned in the following report.

The subjects allegedly stole the motorcycle early April 11 (approximately 2 a.m.) and rode it to a Chevrolet panel truck two miles south of Pampa on the Borger Highway. The van carried the motorcycle eight miles south of town, where the Kawasaki was hidden in some canyons.

It was stripped down and the parts were allegedly used on another cycle which had previously been wrecked. An investigation at 1080 Varnon Drive revealed several parts of the stolen Kawasaki.

The two were charged with burglary and are awaiting grand jury action on the charge.

Webb, 19, of 1080 Varnon, and Abshier, 20, of 810 Scott, have both served prison terms and have lived in Pampa for the past five months, officials reported.

Sheriff Jordan credits the sheriff's department, city police and state officers with being "instrumental in breaking the cases."

FOR NIXON

Committee Okays Subpoena's Delay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By a 34-4 vote, the House Judiciary Committee today gave President Nixon five more days to respond to its subpoena for tapes of 42 of his Watergate-related conversations.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., noting that the panel has been instructed by a 410-4 House vote to conduct an impeachment inquiry, said he hoped Nixon would not take the action as a sign of weakness.

"We will not be diverted," Rodino said.

The President had asked for the additional time for the reply, which had originally been set for 10 a.m. today.

The 42 tapes cover 1,600 minutes of presidential conversations in the winter and spring of 1973 with top Nixon aides about the time when Nixon says he first learned of the involvement of close associates in the Watergate coverup.

Besides the extension of the subpoena deadline, the committee was prepared to approve dropping as many as 30 allegations against Nixon to focus on charges of criminal wrongdoing that will lead either to his exoneration or his impeachment.

By early summer, after studying evidence and interrogating witnesses, the committee will vote on each of the remaining charges as potential counts in a resolution of impeachment, which would then go to the House.

The new deadline demands that Nixon surrender the tapes by April 30—one year to the day after H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman were deposed from their high White House jobs because of Watergate disclosures.

Four liberal Democrats voted against giving the President more time to answer the subpoena, contending he had had plenty of time to prepare the tapes since Feb. 25, when they were first requested.

The four were Reps. Jerome R. Waldie, Calif.; Robert F. Drinan, Mass.; Charles B. Rangel, N.Y.; and Elizabeth Holtzman, N.Y.

In the meantime, Republican sources disclosed the scope of the committee's second request for potential evidence.

The original list of 56 impeachment allegations has been pared down by counsel John M. Doar and Republican counsel Albert E. Jenner after their 100-man staff had investigated each charge.

Patricia Gives Statement Against Father, Fiancee

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Branding her father and fiancé as pigs and "clowns," Patricia Hearst has sworn her allegiance to the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army which kidnapped her nearly three months ago.

Miss Hearst, 20, daughter of newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst, also said it was "ridiculous to the point of being beyond belief" for her family to think she was brainwashed into participating in a $10,000 bank robbery by the SLA April 15.

Her comments were contained in an 18-minute tape recording given to a San Francisco community relations policeman by intermediaries Wednesday. The upper left hand corner of her driver's license was sent along with the tape to authenticate it.

But Hearst, president and editor of The San Francisco Examiner, maintained his complete trust in his daughter despite her vituperative remarks about him.

"Regarding her personal attacks on me, if she has been brainwashed and I certainly believe she has, it's not surprising she would say something like this," he said in a statement released at his Hillsborough

News To Hike Subscription Rates May 1

Due to increased costs in the price of newsprint and other production costs, The Pampa News will increase its subscription rates May 1.

The following rate changes in all subscription services will be in effect on that date:

Rates by mail in the retail trade zone, $6.75 for 3 months, $13.50 for 6 months and $27 a year.

Outside of the retail trade zone rates will be $7.50 for 3 months, $15 for 6 months and $30 a year.

Mail rates for servicemen and students will be $1.75 a month. Single copies will be 15 cents daily and Sunday.

mansion. "No matter what she says, we still love her."

Miss Hearst called her father "pig Hearst" and her fiancé, Steven Weed, 26, a "sexist, racist pig." She added she never wanted to see Weed again. And she announced, "I'm a soldier of the people's army."

She said her father and Weed were "clowns" to think she had been forced into existing in the SLA.

FBI agents—just hours before the tape was released—found two cars used by the nine-member team which held up the Hiberna Bank branch in the quiet Sunset District. They were located in a public parking garage in the Japanese Cultural Center near the downtown section. They had been left there a couple of days after the holdup during which two bystanders were wounded.

Band Visits Alamo On Long Journey

By CLAY LIVELY

SAN ANTONIO — The Pampa High School band toured the Alamo this morning after arriving in the city about 8 a.m., one-half hour ahead of schedule.

Following breakfast at a downtown cafeteria and a short break for stretching tired and cramped bodies and legs, the group boarded the three buses for the trip of several blocks to Texas' most famous shrine.

While there, the band toured the Alamo itself, visited the museum and various exhibits and strolled to the courtyards and outbuildings adjacent to the Alamo.

Still running ahead of schedule, the members of the band left the Alamo at 10:30 a.m. to go to Breckenridge Park, where they toured the zoo and ate lunch. At 1:30 p.m. the group loaded back onto the buses and continued on to Corpus Christi, where they were expected to arrive around 5:30 p.m. in preparation for the Buccaneer Days activities.

The trip down was uneventful with the buses pulling out of Pampa at 9 p.m. yesterday. A short break was made at 3 o'clock this morning to pick up three new bus drivers at Abilene.

Skies over San Antonio were sunny during the time that the band was here. That same weather is expected at Corpus Christi on arrival there.

Upon reaching Corpus Christi today, the band will eat dinner and then go to suburban Gregory Portland High School for the first of two rehearsals scheduled before the 3 p.m. Friday performance.

Saturday will be the "fun day" for the band and the rest of the entourage. A trip to Padre Island National Seashore will be followed by a seafood dinner at a Corpus Christi restaurant and a moonlight (hopefully) boat ride in the Gulf.

Sunday at 9 a.m., after breakfast and a devotional which is optional for those on the trip, the band will leave the coastal city for Pampa by way of San Antonio and Brady, arriving back in town about 2 a.m. Monday.

LEAVES ON TOUR — Harvester band director Jeff Doughten, second from left, directs the band members onto the waiting buses Wednesday evening in preparation for departure on their annual spring tour. The Pampa High School group visited in San Antonio this morning and were due to arrive in Corpus Christi at 5:30 p.m. today.

Bargain Basement Hijacking Cheaper

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hijacking has come down in the world since stricter security has limited access to airplanes, but an incident here may have set a record as the shortest, cheapest hijack to date.

"Take me to Los Angeles," the hijacker, holding his hand in his pocket as if he had a gun, said to Paul G. Wine Tuesday.

That wasn't much trouble for Wine. His bus was then in Santa Ana, only 40 miles away, and he was headed for Los Angeles anyway. But he didn't collect the fare, $1.03.

The only hostages, of a sort, were the three men already on the bus, who did not realize what was going on.

The hijacker ordered Wine not to pick up any more passengers, but he reckoned without a determined commuter.

Wine drove past a woman waiting at a bus stop. She chased the bus, and when it halted for a red light, she banged on the door, demanding admittance. The hijacker relented and Wine let her aboard. Police said she was identified later as Bernadita Velita.

And so bus 58-D, its four other passengers still unaware that they were being taken along on a bargain-basement hijacking, swung onto the Santa Ana Freeway for Los Angeles.

That's when passengers Billy Morse and Daniel Hein realized something was unusual. The bus wasn't supposed to be there. The other passenger made no protest, apparently heading for Los Angeles anyway.

Morse and Hein protested, and the hijacker allowed Wine to let them out. They climbed over a freeway divider and ran for a telephone, alerting police and a bulletin was broadcast for the wayward bus.

By that time, Wine was rolling into Los Angeles. The hijacker asked to be let out at 7th and Central, where he calmly strode away.

Wine, 64, who will retire in two months, said he never saw a gun and still isn't sure whether the hijacker had one. But by tightening up the run and eliminating stops, the bus was 54 minutes early.

ON MITCHELL, STANS Jury To Consider Government's Case

NEW YORK (UPI) — The government finishes today its year-long drive to send its former Nixon Cabinet members to prison for what the federal prosecutor Wednesday described as an attempt to "use political power to influence justice."

Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans could get 45 years each on conviction.

They "sat at the very pinnacle of government" and because of their power "they felt they were above the law," Prosecutor John R. Wing said in his closing argument Wednesday.

The federal court jury of nine men and three women put in a wearying 12-hour day, ending at 8:30 p.m. They listened to summations by Peter Fleming Jr., Mitchell's chief counsel, and to Wing, who was to finish by noon today.

The jury wanted to continue Wednesday night, but Judge Lee P. Gagliardi told them he wanted them fresh enough to pay close attention to his charge on the law, which he said would last "several hours" during the afternoon.

An Historic Case
It appeared that the historic criminal case—the first involving former Cabinet members in nearly 50 years—would reach the jury tonight. The indictment was returned by a grand jury here May 10, 1973.

It accuses the two former powerful national figures of attempting to impede a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of financier Robert L. Vesco in exchange for his secret $200,000 cash donation to the 1972 Nixon campaign and lying under oath about it.

Attorneys for both defendants told the jury it was the government witnesses at the trial who lied to them. The prosecutor replied Wednesday: "You know as you start deliberation that somebody is lying to you—for sure. Your job as jurors is to figure it out."

Wing said that Mitchell "took the stand and deliberately, consciously lied to you to get out of one count" of the 15-count indictment. He pointed out that the defense had argued there was no evidence the defendants "fixed" anything, and said:

It's Just as Criminal
"We never said the case was fixed, and the

Chuck Quarles Selected For Awards Volume

Chuck Quarles, Pampa High School junior, has been selected for inclusion in the annual awards volume, "Outstanding Teenagers of America," published in Washington, D.C.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Quarles, 2222 Williston, he is eligible to compete for the region's $500 scholarship and for one of two national $1,000 scholarships.

Quarles served as quarterback for the Harvesters football team this past season and is a sprinter and member of the mile-relay team for track. He has been active in various organizations, including the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Pampa Key Club. He served as one of three captains for the football team.

Police Scaling Down Hunt In Operation Zebra

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Operation Zebra, the city's massive manhunt for the black killers of 12 white persons, was scaled down today after police admitted the random stop-and-question dragnet was ineffective.

Protests over the random stopping of blacks on the streets spilled into federal court Wednesday, where Judge Alfonso J. Zirpoli heard arguments that the procedure was unconstitutional.

The U.S. District Court judge indicated he would sign a temporary restraining order against the Police Department. The hearings on two civil rights suits continue today.

Chief of Police Inspectors Charles A. Barca told the court the program would continue but only persons matching a composite sketch of one suspect would be stopped by roving teams of plain-clothes officers.

He said nearly 600 blacks had been stopped in six days but the efforts of patrolmen were "unproductive and ineffective" in capturing the elusive gunman or gunman who have shot 18 white persons, 12 fatally, with a 32-caliber pistol since last November.

In Sacramento, 70 miles north of San Francisco, three black Muslims were arrested Wednesday for the slaying of a white man authorities say appeared to be Zebra's shooter. It was the fourth shooting—two fatal—of a white in the past week in the state capital.

Protests against San Francisco police tactics in the largest manhunt ever launched by the city have ranged from demonstrators mobbing Mayor Joseph Alioto outside City Hall to the court suits to condemnations from community leaders.

Israelis Observe Somber Independence Day Action

United Press International
Israelis observed a somber independence day today with muted ceremonies overshadowed by the 45-day war of attrition along the rocky hills of the Golan Heights.

An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said Syrian and Israeli artillery duelled during the morning on Mt. Hermon and the southern Golan Heights. There were no reported casualties.

A military communiqué in Damascus reported fighting throughout the night for the strategic, 9,232-foot peak and said the clashes spread to other sections of the northern front.

The Beirut newspaper Al Hayat said Syrian troops captured Kasr Shebib, described in the report as the highest point on the mountain. But a Tel Aviv military spokesman said he hadn't even heard of the position.

"There are many vantage points on Hermon with all kinds of names and it may

Demos Select Polling Places For Primaries

The Gray County Democratic Executive Committee met last evening in the Gray County Annex Building east of Pampa.

Glenda Anderson was elected to membership to serve as precinct chairman for Precinct 10 in place of Gretchen Osborne, who is no longer a resident of Pampa. Elmo Hudgins was seated on the committee in place of Georgia Mack.

Final preparations were made for conducting the Democratic Primary on May 4, between the hours of 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

The Democratic polling places were selected as follows:
Precincts 1 and 6, Civic Center, Lefors; Precinct 2, Baker School; Precinct 3, Grandview School.

Precincts 4 and 5, McLean Grade School; Precinct 7, Horace Mann School; Precinct 8, Stephen F. Austin School; Precinct 9, Woodrow Wilson School.

Precinct 10, Gray County Courthouse; Precinct 12, Lamar School; Precincts 11 and 13, Gray County Annex Building, east of Pampa on Highway 152.

Election pamphlets were distributed to the election judges and there was a review of primary procedures.

The Democratic precinct conventions were scheduled at 7:15 p.m. on May 4, and minute forms were distributed for the use of precinct convention chairmen.

The meeting was chaired by Harold L. Comer, Gray County Democratic chairman.

Watson Named Bonds Chairman

Floyd F. Watson, president of the First National Bank in Pampa, has accepted the appointment by the U.S. Department of the Treasury to serve as volunteer chairman for the Gray County Savings Bonds Committee.

In announcing Watson's appointment, Rex Brack, chairman of the Texas Savings Bonds Committee, remarked that "His business experience and active participation in community affairs will be most valuable in his volunteer service as Gray County chairman, especially in these times when the United States Savings Bonds program takes on increasing importance in helping to keep our nation economically strong and secure."

As Gray County chairman, Watson will work with other community leaders in a year-round program to encourage the increased purchase of Savings Bonds at banks and on the payroll savings plan.

Watson is well known in civic affairs. He has served as past president of the Pampa Junior Chamber of Commerce, Pampa Rotary Club, Pampa United Fund and on the board of trustees of the Pampa Independent School District.

Watson and his wife, Maxine, live at 2320 Aspen. They have two daughters and one son.

be on their side of the truce line," he said.

Israel, which observed independence ceremonies last year with a military parade and dancing in the streets, toned down today's ceremonies of the nation's 26th anniversary.

In the only organized celebration, about 2,500 young marchers hiked across Jerusalem from the Valley of the Cross to the center of the modern Jewish section of the Holy City.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir, in a somber mood, said Wednesday on television, "I will never again be the same as I was before the Yom Kippur war."

She said the war left Israel with "a profound and severe shock" on the 26th anniversary of independence in 1948.

"I really and truly believe that the time will come when our neighbors will live with us in peace," Mrs. Meir, 75, said. "I doubt that I will still be there to see it, but I am sure it will happen."

Realtors Adopt New Trademark

The Pampa Board of Realtors today announced its adoption of a new trademark in conjunction with a change in the name of its national organization. The new trademark identifies the National Association of Realtors, formerly the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

According to O.K. Gaylor, board president, the new name and trademark signify the Association's reaffirmation of its dedication to protecting the right of the American property owner to a decent place to live.

"The National Association of Realtors has a tradition of speaking for the property owners of our country," he said. "We're continuing to work at all levels—in Washington and state and local governments—to achieve legislation that makes home ownership possible."

Gaylor pointed to the Association's recent proposal of national legislation to ease the mortgage money crisis as an example of this work.

Gaylor pointed out that the new trademark identifies the Association's members as trained experts in the real estate industry. The term Realtors is a federally registered trademark reserved for the use of the National Association and only its members are allowed to use it. It is for this reason that the term Realtor now appears in both the trademark and the association name.

The Realtor trademark also identifies the world's largest business association. "Whenever you are—in any of the 50 states or Puerto Rico—there's a Realtor to serve you," Gaylor said.

BRANDT'S AIDE Spy Case Breaks In West Germany

BONN (UPI) — Federal police arrested one of Chancellor Willy Brandt's top aides and another five persons on charges of espionage for East Germany, a spokesman said today.

The police spokesman said they arrested Guenther Guillaume, 47, and his wife Wednesday morning at their villa in Bonn's diplomatic residential Bad Godesberg quarter.

The spokesman said Guillaume, a mild-mannered civil servant with a double chin and straight hair combed back, admitted he was a ranking officer in East Germany's National People's Army.

The chancellor's aide had been in charge of Brandt's party correspondence and appointments since 1970.

Political commentators called it West Germany's biggest spy case. The arrests dominated all news casts on radio and television and pictures were shown of Guillaume together with Brandt during an election campaign trip to North Germany last month.

Brandt was on his way back to Bonn after opening a trade fair in Hanover when the news of the arrests broke. Other Social Democrat leaders left a parliamentary debate on abortion to confer, and the opposition Christian Democrat leaders called a special session to discuss the crisis.

Guillaume arrived as a refugee from East Berlin in 1956 and earned his living as a photographer and paper salesman in Frankfurt before joining the Social Democratic party.

The Government Printing Office uses about 11 boxcars loads of paper a day.

Mysterious Sphere Piece Of Artwork?

TAOS, N.M. (UPI) — A metal sphere found on a Florida coastal island may belong to a sculptor who used the mysterious balls in his artwork.

James Durling-Jones, a Taos sculptor, said Tuesday he lost several of the spheres in May of 1971 while traveling between South Carolina and New Orleans, La. The one found several weeks ago by a pre-medical student on Fort St. George Island near Jacksonville may be one of them, he said.

He said he had several of the metal spheres in a luggage rack attached to the roof of a van he was driving through Florida in 1971 and that "somewhere between South Carolina and New Orleans, some of them rolled out of the luggage rack." He said he turned west just south of Jacksonville.

Still Has Seven
Durling-Jones, who said he still had about seven of the spheres he planned to use in his artwork, said he could not remember how many of the spheres he was carrying back to New Mexico.

Experts have determined the metal sphere was manmade. Durling-Jones said if the one found in Florida was one of his, it was indeed manmade.

He said they were given to him by a friend "back east," but would not identify the person who gave him the metal balls.

Durling-Jones said the metal spheres, made of stainless steel, were used to control shut-off valves in pipelines. He said the ones given him were imperfect and could not be used for their intended purpose.

Has Various Sizes
The Taos sculptor said the metal sphere found in Florida closely matches the description of the balls he lost.

He said he still has several spheres of various sizes, including one eight inches in diameter, the size of the one found in Florida. Durling-Jones said the Florida sphere's weight of 22 pounds is about the same as the other eight-inch spheres he still has.

Father, Son Reach Rapport Through Indian Guides

By CPT. TERRY KEARNS
KANEHOE, Hawaii — Staff Sergeant Jim Willeford of Pampa, and his 7-year-old stepson, Greg, share something that some fathers and sons of today might lack. What they share reinforces the love and understanding that is needed between all fathers and sons — friendship.

They have reached their rapport through the Y-Indian Guides, an organization that has been bringing fathers and sons together for the last 10 years.

Willeford became involved in the Y-Indian Guides after Greg became familiar with the program through his friends. A trip to the nearest YMCA (Young Men's Christian Association) was all it took to get the Willefords signed up and into the program.

After two years in the program, Willeford is quick to admit his love for the Y-Guides.

"Since Greg and I joined we have become much closer," he remarked. "Not only has our relationship improved, but we have actually become good friends."

It's little wonder that relationships mature with the Y-Guide motto "Pals Forever."

Beginning in the early 60's the Y-Guides have grown from just a few members to 29,000 tribes. Sponsored by the YMCA, the Guides are divided into regions, nations and tribes according to geographic locations.

On Hawaii today there are 22 tribes and 3 nations. K-Bay "Indians" belong to the Windward Nation and make up three tribes with about eight to ten fathers and sons in each.

A boy must be between the ages of 5-9 to join Y-Guides while the dad can be any age. They are a father and son organization, and the only time mothers are allowed to participate is during annual family picnics.

During meetings and functions the fathers and sons stick strictly to Indian customs and names that the dads and boys pick for themselves. Willeford is called Big Bear, Greg is Running Cub.

How did they happen to pick the names?
"When you think of a name you might like, you're supposed to say it at the breakfast table," commented Willeford. "If everybody laughs, you're supposed to take the name."

Even though Indian names and customs are the thing at Y-Guide functions, he admitted that the overall purpose of the program was not learning the ways of Indians.

"The purpose of Y-Guides is to bring a father and son closer together. The Indian theme is what we use as a vehicle to reach our objective of better understanding and friendship."

Background and financial position is no barrier in the father and son organization. In the Windward Nation there are fathers that are sergeants, lieutenants, colonels, doctors, lawyers and carpenters.

The fathers and sons aim for feather awards which are given in recognition of an accomplished task. The first thing they must be able to do is recite the six Y-Guide aims which are much like those of the Cub Scouts. The sons will recite half then the father will say the other half.

All of the feather awards are accomplished in this manner with both father and son pitching in as a team to complete a task.

Willeford has already accomplished a first in the Y-Guides. He is the first Marine chief to be elected to the Windward Nation and is representing Oahu tribes at the annual Y-Guides national convention in Rochester, N.Y., April 24.

Besides tribal meetings which are held once every other week, there are camp outs, rifle shoots, archery, family picnics, pinewood derbies and sports events which keep the fathers and sons busy.

Willeford and Greg Willeford have gotten more than just learning Indian ways out of the Y-Guides. They have become friends, something that can't be bought or handed down. In their case the Y-Guide motto "Pals Forever" will probably always apply.

Who Pays What For Weddings?

NEW YORK (UPI) — To keep the bride's family from feuding with the bridegroom's at bill-paying time follow set rules on who pays what at wedding time.

The Jewelry Industry Council says bills fall as follows:

—The bride pays for her trousseau, wedding ring for bridegroom, wedding gift for her bridegroom (optional), presents for her attendants, accommodations for her attendants, personal stationery and calling cards, her medical examination.

—The bridegroom pays for engagement and wedding rings, the marriage license, gift for the bride, his medical examination, bride's bouquet and going-away corsage, boutonnières for men of wedding party, flowers for the two mothers, gloves, ascots or ties for men in the party, gifts for his ushers and best man, accommodations for his best man and ushers, fee for the clergyman, the wedding trip, flowers to the bride's mother after the wedding, accompanied by a warm thank you note.

—The bride's family picks up bills for wedding invitations and enclosure cards, announcements, engagement and wedding photographs, rental for church, fees for the organist, soloist and sexton, aisle carpet, flowers for the church, bridesmaids' bouquets and flower headress, gratuity for traffic policeman, transportation for bridal party from house to church and to the reception, bridesmaids' luncheon, entire cost of reception.

—The bridegroom's family pays its own traveling expenses and hotel bills, wedding gift for the bride and bridegroom.

BIG BRAVE, LITTLE BRAVE — Jim Willeford, former Pampa resident, and his 7-year-old stepson, Greg, dress up in Indian attire for all Y-Guide functions. The Indian theme is used as a vehicle to achieve the motto "Pals Forever."

GOOD ROADS, HWY. 60

Bartlesville Ready For 2 Conventions

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — The Oklahoma Good Roads Association has scheduled its quarterly board of directors meeting in Bartlesville on Saturday, April 27, to be held in conjunction with U.S. Highway 60 Association's national convention.

The Highway 60 Association convention begins a day earlier — Friday — with headquarters in Bartlesville's Holiday Inn.

The announcement that as many as 50 directors of the Oklahoma Good Roads Association will be in Bartlesville for the meeting on Saturday afternoon, with many of them planning to remain for the Highway 60 Association's convention banquet, insure that the annual meeting of the U.S. Highway 60 Association will be one of the most successful in the organization's history, officials said.

A crowd of about 400 persons is anticipated as Gov. David Hall of Oklahoma keynotes the convention banquet in the American Legion Convention Center Saturday evening.

Tickets for this event are available through the Bartlesville Area Chamber of Commerce in the Professional Building, 5th and Keeler (Area Code 918, 336-8708) or may be purchased in any of the four banks in Bartlesville and Dewey. Deadline for ticket sales is today.

It is expected that as many as 200 persons — national officers and board members, state leaders and other boosters of U.S. Highway 60 — from the 10 states touched by "scenic 60" will begin gathering in Bartlesville on Friday to hear highway progress reports and discuss future improvement goals.

The round of meetings will be kicked off by a gathering of board members Friday with further sessions to be scheduled Saturday as needed.

Saturday will not be an "all work and no play" day for attendees at the Highway 60 convention as a tour of Woolaroc Ranch, Woolaroc Museum, and the National Y-Indian Guide Center also located at Woolaroc is on the agenda.

Woolaroc, now open to the public 365 days a year, was developed many years ago by Phillips Petroleum Company founder Frank Phillips as a weekend retreat. The ranch is located 13 miles southwest of Bartlesville.

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

There's something new in dentistry, according to officials of the Texas State Health Department. It's called prevention — and it's the top priority of a "new generation" of dentists.

Most people never think of a dentist in terms of prevention. In fact, according to studies made by the U.S. Public Health Service, about two-thirds of the American population don't think of a dentist at all.

Health department authorities think that part of the reason may be the image of dentistry in many people's minds. When you think of a dentist, do you think of drilling and filling cavities, pulling teeth, root canals, and other forms of pain and suffering?

Many people do. Many people don't go to a dentist at all until they have a toothache or their gums begin to hurt more than they can stand. By that time, there may be little that a dentist can do other than to drill — and fill, or pull the tooth. And that's too bad.

That kind of dentistry, according to the state health department, is the old dentistry. The new dentistry is prevention — preventing disease, preventing pain, and, most of all, preventing the loss of your natural teeth.

Of course, the scientific and technical skills involved in dental treatment are considerable, but today's young dentist cares more about prevention than he does about extraction.

In fact, health authorities say that dentistry today has begun to attract a whole new generation of dentists with a completely new attitude toward their science.

The "new generation" in dentistry is civic minded, idealistic, socially conscious, and concerned for the well-being of everyone in his community. Young dentists are quick to join community dentistry programs, or even start them up, to bring the benefits of modern dentistry to the poor, the isolated, and the underprivileged.

The young dentists have been very active in such projects as converting old buses into mobile dental clinics that bring modern, preventive dentistry into the ghettos and barrios of the central city, or into remote rural areas where dental manpower is spread a little too thin.

The new spirit of community involvement is exemplified by the participation of dentists in dental health education programs that have been introduced in the public schools of many Texas communities during the past few years.

In many cases, these programs have been initiated by the dentists themselves, working with school teachers and administrators and with public health personnel. It's no longer unusual for a dentist to contribute several days of his time — and sometimes his staff, materials, and facilities — for this purpose.

Now there is even a statewide Interdisciplinary Committee for Dental Health Education, composed of representatives of local and state dental organizations, dental auxiliaries, public and private school personnel, and public health workers, whose joint purpose is to encourage the inclusion of preventive dental health education in the school curriculum.

All of these efforts are part of the movement in modern dentistry toward preventing disease and the loss of teeth.

Today's young dentist feels a strong obligation to alert his fellow man to the possibility of preventing disease, and the dentist knows that he can do more by prevention than he ever could be filling cavities or pulling teeth.

Dental health today is much more than a series of stop-gap measures ending with a mouthful of dentures. Dentists know that disease and the loss of natural teeth can last throughout their lifetime.

So, state health department authorities say, when you go to your dentist, don't be surprised if he spend most of his time telling you how to care for your teeth, instead of just filling cavities.

And, if you follow his advice carefully, you'll be very pleasantly surprised to find that you can keep your teeth healthy and attractive for the rest of your life.

Lake Meredith Gets Requests From Poland

Receiving a postcard with a picture of an American Bison may not be a surprise, but when it is postmarked Czestochowa, Poland, it takes on more meaning. But it is not so unusual for Lake Meredith Recreation Area.

Park Secretary Fern Cain reports that 12 to 15 postcards from Poland come to Lake Meredith each year. The writers request information from parks all over the world.

"Some of the postcards are well-phrased and legible, but others take time to decipher. It really makes you realize how difficult it must be for foreigners to learn English," commented Mrs. Cain.

Lake Meredith receives approximately 200 letters annually requesting general information. The requests come from people planning vacations, school children learning to write business letters, and Poles who collect folders from National Parks in other countries.

FOR BETTER COOLING

Hot Weather? Ventilate Attics

By DOROTHEA BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI) — When outdoor temperatures soar to 90-plus, as they will be doing in most parts of the country before long, the attic space of your home may reach 130 to 150 degrees.

Whether or not you have air conditioning, it's a wise idea to do something about that heat, and one of the best things you can do is install an attic ventilating fan.

Efficient cooling, with or without air conditioning, calls for forcing the mass of superheated air out of the attic. Drawing outdoor air and "flushing" it through the attic space can reduce the downward heat flow through ceilings by more than half, according to the U.S. National Bureau of Standards.

For homes with air conditioning systems, this will reduce the energy drain since the attic ventilation cuts the load on conditioners so they no longer have to run constantly.

Lowering of attic temperatures by 30 to 50 degrees will contribute greatly to the comfort of homes with no cooling system. Used properly, and in conjunction with other ventilating units, an attic fan can help keep air circulating throughout the house and bring in cool air at night.

The Home Ventilating Institute (HVI), to provide guidelines for proper attic ventilation, has established standards for certified ratings of "powered attic space ventilators" and for their selection and installation. To qualify for HVI certification a fan must be tested independently at Texas A & M University under a uniform laboratory procedure.

The standard, which applies to self-contained fan units mounted on roof or wall to ventilate attic space only, calls for ten air changes an hour or a minimum of 0.7 cubic feet per minute per square foot of attic floor area, plus 15 per cent more capacity for dark roofs.

HVI says the simple formula based on attic floor area has proved practical for houses of various sizes and shapes in various climates and there seldom is need to calculate air changes and do the often complex mathematics of figuring attic volume. Air intake vents of one square foot of free opening per 300 cfm. of fan capacity are specified, so as to assure suitable movement of air.

Easily Installed
Powered attic space ventilators are equipped with thermostats, set according to manufacturer's instructions within a reasonable proximity to outside air temperatures, and control buildup and retention of heat in the structure of the house.

Although the main job of attic ventilators is to control summer heat, HVI says, they also can be used to remove water vapor which escapes from living space to the attic in winter and can cause structural damage if not controlled.

Powered attic space ventilators are designed for easy installation between framing of walls or roofs in new and existing homes.

In air conditioned homes, HVI says, controlled attic ventilation starts offsetting its cost right away in saving electricity used for running the cooling unit. Sometimes further savings occur when ventilation permits selecting a lesser capacity air conditioner at time of installation or extends equipment life.

Whatever the design of the home and however equipped to cope with summer heat, a new level of hot weather comfort can be expected with a fan that draws superheated air from the attic.

Reindeer are unlike other members of the deer family in that both sexes have antlers.

FOR THE BRIDE

Casualness, Individuality Aid For Table Settings

NEW YORK (UPI) — Casualness and individuality are the marks of the most popular table settings, according to the Jewelry Industry Council.

The bride's china pattern and crystal, too, ought to be registered at the bridal registry in the jewelry or department store. Following her choices, the shopper of a wedding gift can't do anything but please.

The bride's china pattern may be available in the newer three-piece place setting as well as the traditional five-piece place setting. But also consider coordinating or matching serving pieces, oven-to-table-to-dishwasher items with their emphasis on convenience, china accessories for gourmet cooking, table-top cooking and casual entertaining.

Crystal is a gift newlyweds appreciate as barware, as dessert and party-going helpers, as unusual decorative pieces, vases, bowls, salad sets.

Stainless is an ideal wedding gift also. Modern, practical, convenient, a special favorite of the young and young-minded, stainless flatware and hollow ware is especially adaptive in the first home, and every home after that.

Fewer satisfies for the same reasons and looks remarkably well with either silver or stainless in those highly individualized table settings, as decorative accents around that bright, exuberant young atmosphere.

Clocks make good wedding gifts, too. Choose a room, gift it with a clock. Your bride couple will have a good "wardrobe of clocks" for its first lovest.

Other good wedding gifts: figurines, limited edition sculptures, plates, historical reproductions honoring the coming bicentennial of the nation, objets d'art.

Dear Abby

Beautiful character can make up for ugly face

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I wish to speak for the ugly men in this world, including myself. Ugliness is a terrible curse. It makes us ugly people feel inferior to the point where we seriously consider suicide.

Our social lives are deficient, for few people seem willing to associate with physically ugly people. Without sex appeal we miss a very important part of life that the average person takes for granted.

My ugliness is not a bodily one. I am not grossly fat or painfully thin, neither am I deformed in any way. It's facial ugliness that has caused strangers to come up to me and say: "Gee, you're ugly." That is the God's truth. Can you imagine anyone being so cruel?

Abby, you could perform a great humanitarian service if you would devote a little space to a possible solution to this problem. Or perhaps a reader who has overcome his ugliness can tell me how he did it.

DOUBLE UGLY

DEAR DOUBLE: Did it ever occur to you that "ugliness"—like beauty, could lie in the eye of the beholder? Some of the world's most attractive and appealing people do not conform to the generally accepted concept of beauty, but that doesn't make them ugly.

The qualities that make one loved and wanted have nothing to do with the way his face is formed. Honesty, kindness, generosity, patience, compassion—all the virtues—can be developed. A beautiful character counts for more with people who count than physical beauty.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man who watches television while making love to his wife? My husband never makes love to me in the bedroom anymore, always on the sofa in the living room so he can watch TV, too. And it's usually on the spur of the moment, which is not to my liking.

He was a lot more considerate and loving when we were dating. He's so afraid he's going to miss something good on television it has practically ruined our sex life.

Will you please tell me how I can get him back in the bedroom?

DISSATISFIED

DEAR DIS: Move the TV into your bedroom!

DEAR ABBY: How can we thank you? Because of a message in your column telling runaways about a program called "Operation Peace of Mind," our runaway son let us know that he was alive and well. He is only 16 and had been gone for nearly a year.

Abby, please publish that toll free telephone number again so other runaways can let their parents know they are alive. It meant the world to us to hear from our son.

GRATEFUL IN SEATTLE

DEAR GRATEFUL: With pleasure: Runaways; call this toll-free number: 1-800-231-6946. An operator will telephone your parents anywhere in the United States and convey a message to them from you. There will be no lecturing or counseling. Your call will not be traced, and the only question asked of you is: "Do you need anything?" If you do, you will be told where you can obtain it free of charge. I repeat, no one will attempt to contact you or bring you home regardless of your age.

Runaways, please forget the past and send that message to your parents now. They will sleep better tonight; and so will you. God bless. [P. S. This wonderful program is staffed entirely by volunteers in Houston, and was aided by Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Texas.]

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

CASUAL ELEGANCE — Two-part separates by Glenora Jrs. of comfort-borne, pure cotton "fade-out" corduroy from Cone Mills. Slim-fitted vest tops floral print shirt and long "renovated" jeans-skirt with V-insert and patch pockets.

JETABOUT FASHION '74 — Traveling is a comfort-bound breeze in classic, 3-part plaid cotton suit by HBW, Division of Howard Wolf. Artfully printed pure cotton corduroy from Compton-Richmond. Banker's vest of "fade-out" denim from Brookhaven Textiles is paired with rosebud printed shirt.

RIVIERA-BOUND — Glitter-spangled "St. Tropez" T-shirt by Rascals of soft, comfortable pure cotton knit from Marcrest. Paired with new trim-fitting daisy printed jeans by Lady Wrangler of black all-cotton denim from Avondale.

Shortage Of Toilets Nears End

Chicago (NFS) — 1974 has been labeled the "year of the shortages" by many economic experts. But one shortage should ease off by the end of April: toilets.

According to Harold O. Staus, director of market research for Universal-Rundle Corporation, New Castle, Pa., one of the nation's largest manufacturers of bathroom fixtures, the toilet shortage should ease somewhat after the first quarter of 1974.

Staus stated that a drop in housing starts coupled with an increase in the production of toilet units should bring toilet supply and demand into balance in 1974.

"WE ARE currently estimating that 8 million toilet units will be produced by our industry as a whole in 1974," Staus said.

"The best estimates we have today indicate that 7.7 million toilet units were produced in 1973. Government figures will be available shortly on this."

Although the sale and shipment of toilet units have increased steadily since 1970, Staus said that there has been no significant increase in kiln capacity within the industry during the past 10 years.

"IN 1970, when only 5.6 million toilets were produced," Staus continued, "the industry was operating below capacity. In 1971, when 6.7 million units were shipped, the industry was probably shipping slightly above capacity. In 1972, when 7.3 million units were shipped, the industry began dramatically using up inventories."

One result of this was that toilets came into extremely short supply in 1973.

STAU SAID that additional kiln capacity will be coming on line in 1974, and so the shipment of 8 million units should not present any real problem.

The work clothes zipper continues a high fashion item in women's apparel. Pierre Cardin uses the big zippers, and their big pulls, in a lot of the sportswear in his collection for American retailers. They go well with the trend to leathers and to sweater looks.

COTTON OPTICS '74—A Kaleidoscope of Spring/Summer Fashions

"COTTON OPTICS '74" — like fashion — dazzles the eye — reaching with the speed of light to ever-changing events and new, supercharged lifestyles.

Changing perspectives are a constant source of fascination to the human eye — providing a kaleidoscopic variety of visually rendered combinations and new ideas.

In the fast-flowering world of fabrics, only cotton — effortlessly fashionable and infinitely comfortable — takes up the energy required to form the cotton-fiber from a naturally available, non-polluting, renewable resource — sunlight.

"COTTON OPTICS '74" takes fashion on a prismatic turn toward the future. Cotton's natural affinity for a full spectrum of trend colors and silhouettes is highlighted in Spring/Summer fabrics produced "by popular demand" and including corduroy, denim, chambray, prints and knits.

In terms of domestic consumption, cotton ranks Number One, and its position is unique in comparison to other fibers.

The reasons for cotton's popularity are inherent in the fabric's natural benefits of aesthetics, absorbency, dyeability, durability and healthful comfort. Cotton's static-free qualities are another facet of its unique and inimitable comfortability.

New, freshly color-steeped and printed cottons have soft, unfettered silhouettes designed for easy season-spanning and total comfort. Refined constructions, innovations in weave and deftly rendered cotton "dynamies" are producing fabrics with coloring brilliantly defined to highlight a fluid printed silhouette or serve as a foil for solid grounds.

Intriguing tides of popularity for print and pattern in fashion stir up refreshing waves of color in denims, corduroys and knits knowingly needed for jet-age gypsies.

Sleek, body-conscious silhouettes lend full-powered fashion energy to designs made more versatile by components that add up to a total look, or cleverly divide to conquer new trends toward individually wearable separates and personalized accessory styling.

Pattern interest zigs and zags, dots and dashes, makes waves, plays optical leapfrog, follows long, sweeping lines of art nouveau goes delicately formal in miniature florals or bursts into vibrant mosaic batik and paisley effects.

Pure cottons, woven web-thin in soft, gauzy shirt-weights, gossamer see-through eyelets, and supple, sinuous interlock knits, are threading the fashion scene with new excitement.

Surface interest abounds in new cotton fabrics for dress and sportswear markets, with subtly slubbed knits, dimensionally textured print-cloths the pacesetters.

Cotton has a commanding lead in the domestic fiber race for top-scoring consumption, and "COTTON OPTICS '74" projects a strong fashion hold on the future.

In A Jam With Your Disposer?

Chicago (NFS) — Garbage disposers are built to take a lot of punishment.

But if a hard object such as paper or a clip or bobby pin accidentally falls into the unit, a jam will probably occur.

Ernest J. Prialux, vice president-consumer product service for the In-Sink-Erator Division, Emerson Electric Co., Racine, Wis., points out that the principle of operation of a disposer is a simple one.

"IN VERY basic terms, a round metal turn table inside the mouth of the disposer rotates at more than 1,700 revolutions per minute," Prialux said.

"This action causes the food waste resting on the table to be flung against the inner wall of the disposer. Here a circular shredding ring actually shreds the food waste until the particles are small enough to be flushed to the drain line connection below."

"A hard metal object falling between the rotating table and the outer shredding ring will halt the table and cause a jammed condition."

HERE'S WHAT Prialux recommends you do about it:

1. First make certain that the switch for your disposer is in the off position.

2. Reach in the disposer and remove the object, if possible. Remember there are no knives or blades inside, just the rotating table and the outer shredding ring.

3. If your disposer comes with a self-service wrenchette, fit it into a socket under the disposer and work the rotating table back and forth until the jam is free.

4. For other makes, use a broom handle and insert it through the drain opening so that the end of the handle is touching one of the projections on the rotating table. Then pry with a steady, but strong pressure, first in one direction and then in the other until the jam is free.

5. After the jam is free, press the small red reset button, normally located on the bottom of the appliance.

Prialux stated that if the jam persists after these measures are tried, it's time to call a local disposer service agency.

Some garden vegetables, like corn, okra, peppers, tomatoes, squash and greens need extra nitrogen for best results.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, APRIL 26

Your birthday today: Now pick yourself up and move on and upward into higher service, larger personal responsibilities. Daily living includes numerous surprises, varying from inconveniences to joyful moments. The wise will make meditation a regular part of life. Relationship is what you make it; nothing rigid or static endures this year. Today's natives are independent of spirit, often enterprising reformers by temperament, interested in specialized subjects.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: It's a busy day with something for everybody, the difficulty being that you have to do something about this general distribution. Cultivate family and friends first.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Apparently minor disagreements are potentially serious and should be dealt with thus from the outset. Even ordinary routine is subject to revision.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Use your own judgment early; set some priorities on spending, and stick with them. Younger people have a way of persuading you into parting company with extra cash.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Be flexible, willing to go along for the overall good despite inconvenience. Much inspiration arises in conference with technical advisors.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Be open, visible, aboveboard in every respect in your dealings—if you can't comfortably do so, give some thought to what you're doing and why.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Since you have already made your decisions on quite a number of pending issues, strive to express them under normal pressure with supreme confidence.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Being tactful and considerate goes about so far; it is more important to settle in your own mind what it is you want and how to go about it.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Formality has much to recommend it. Your own feelings run quite strong, are out of proportion with the cool surface you've presented to the world for so long.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Group and joint interests come together, are within reach of definite action to consolidate recent progress, in sizable negotiations.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: It may be important to notice that many people, particularly Cancerians, often complain of matters which have nothing to do with what is really troubling them.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Being flattered by approval from your fellows or influential people shouldn't lead you to take any short cut or assume any special status.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Sharp reactions may lead to lapses of caution. Be considerate of those around you and their uptight feelings, but assert your right to be heard.

Now Mom Starts To Play The Home Workshop Game

Chicago (NFS) — "The home workshop has gone the way of the automobile — it now belongs to the whole family."

So says Dean Peel, national sales manager for Dremel Manufacturing Division of Emerson Electric Co., Racine, Wis., manufacturer of creative power tools.

"Not many years ago, when you said 'do-it-yourself', you were talking about the man in the family, and possibly junior. Today, the mother and daughters are as likely to deserve that title as the males in the family," Peel says.

PEEL OUGHT to know. His firm posted strong increases in the sales of its electric Moto-Shop jig saw workshops and hand-held rotary Moto-Tools during the past two years. A hefty portion of the rise is accounted for by sales to women while more of its Moto-Shops are being used in elementary schools.

"Women have been safely operating power equipment for decades: sewing machines, lawn mowers, appliances, autos. Consequently, power tools are a natural addition, especially today's lightweight, safety-engineered creative power tools," he states.

"With proper supervision and guidance, children aged six and up can safely use the Moto-Shop and its accessories; one California artist introduced her daughter to the Moto-Shop when she was only four years old. Children are great imitators, so it's important to set a good example for them. For instance, always wear safety glasses when working with any powered tool."

"THE MAN OF the house still does all the things he used to do, from building shelves and furniture to paneling a room, and Junior may still work on his model airplanes and autos."

"But now, when they turn off the Moto-Shop jig saw, Mom or Sis may turn it on to cut out miniatures, decorative wood plaques, candleholders, or wooden chests, purses, and similar items slated for decoupage."

"Or when Dad or Junior put down the Moto-Tool after deburring metal parts or routing or shaping wood, the feminine members of the family may pick it up to make jewelry, in-laid miniature chests, hand-some eggery, or to carve in clear plastic."

THE WORD "workshop" may conjure up images of a large basement area equipped with hundreds or even thousands of dollars worth of equipment, but this is not necessarily a requirement," Peel says.

"A Dremel creative power tool workshop takes up so little space that families living in small apartments or in mobile homes can easily keep and use all the tools they'll need to handle most arts, crafts, and hobby projects. The kitchen table serves admirably for the working surface, and all tools can readily be stored in a closet or cabinet," he says.

THE COMPANY also provides woodcutting patterns for hobbyists at a nominal cost.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

During any session of play, many deals arise where declarer is confronted with the uncertainty as to whether to promptly gather in all of the opponents' trumps, or to defer their complete gathering-in. In these situations, he frequently starts out by drawing trumps, and simultaneously, he observes the denomination of the trumps with which the opponents follow suit. Very often this observation pinpoints the way to the correct line of play.

The latter situation was the case in today's deal, in which, at the outset, declarer was uncertain as to how many rounds of trumps he should play. But after he made his initial trump lead, the proper line of play became obvious.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

♥ K
♦ 9 8
♣ A 7 5 2

The bidding:
South West North East
1♠ Pass 1NT 2♥
3♠ Pass 4♠ Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

After winning the opening lead with his heart ace, East played back the queen of hearts, which South ruffed. South then paused for reflection.

He had just nine tricks; and it was rather apparent that the club suit offered the only hope for the creation of the needed tenth trick. If the outstanding clubs were divided 3-3 (which they didn't figure to be), then South's fourth club would become a winner after the third club lead was given away to the defenders. Of course, if the four adversely held trumps were divided 2-2 (a 40 percent chance), then it was immaterial how the outstanding clubs were divided, since in this case dummy's third trump would be used to ruff out declarer's fourth club.

It was probably declarer's intention to cash the ace and king of trumps, but when, at trick three, he led his trump ace, East followed suit with the nine-spot, an obvious singleton. Declarer now "changed horses in midstream" for dummy's eight of trumps had just become as good as South's king.

To trick four a club was led to dummy's king, after which a club was returned to South's ace. A third club lead was taken by West's nine-spot.

It mattered now what West returned, for South could not be prevented from ruffing his fourth club with the board's eight-spot, with no risk involved. So South's only losers were a heart, a club, and a diamond.

New Device May Save Your Life

Chicago (NFS) — A man collapses at the airport. A woman falls over in a "faint" in a department store. A spectator at a high school football game suddenly keels over.

When a rescue unit is called to aid these heart attack victims, trained people are ready to start external heart massage — pressing on the individual's chest 60 times a minute to start the heart beating again and save a life.

Until recently, one factor in starting heart massage soon enough, oddly, was finding the right kind of support for the patient. If the patient is put on a bed, pressure on his chest is dissipated by the mattress underneath. And if he's put on a hard surface, he needs support to keep his head in the proper position.

Then Medical Devices, Inc., Ormond Beach, Fla., came up with a lightweight polyurethane plastic support designed by medical experts in cooperation with heart specialists. It has the required firmness but also is contoured so the person automatically is in the correct position for heart massage with his head back and the airway open to his lungs. With prototypes already thoroughly tested in hospitals under emergency use, police and fire departments, ambulance services, lifeguard groups and others are beginning to use the device.

"YOU'LL BE seeing more of these units which are colored red so they can be spotted quickly — almost anywhere," said George Pandapas, president of the manufacturer, Medical Devices, Inc.

For full flavor, cook dried fruits in the same water in which they were soaked.

Which Would You Hire?

Two men apply for the job of painting your house. Both are experienced workmen. Since you can't use both, you have to make a choice. Which shall you hire?

Of course, you could pick a painter on the basis of his salesmanship or personality. But as you reflect on the matter, you decide that promises and appealing attitude are not the proof of their pudding. What you really want to know is how well does the man paint, how much does he charge, and what is his reputation for financial responsibility. So you ask for references and you check them out. Here is what you find.

Mr. G. has been in business a great number of years. In the last 30 years he increased his prices by 500 per cent. In the same period, his old customers tell you, the quality of his service declined substantially. His credit report shows him in chronic debt.

Mr. E. also has been in business for a long period, although not as long as G. He has had to raise prices, too — about 125 per cent in the last 30 years. On the other hand, he has been able selectively to lower rates on specified jobs. In the same period, he has reduced project time markedly. His financial reputation is known to one of the soundest in the village.

You might decide to give the job to G. out of pity, but if a good paint job at the better price is your prime objective, then Mr. E. is the rational choice. The criteria for selection were performance, price, and financial reliability.

Those criteria are applicable to other situations. Barron's National Business and Financial Weekly applied the tests to two workmen. The results appeared in its April 8, 1974, edition. One workman was the U.S. Postal System. The other was the privately run Bell Telephone System. In a series of tables and commentaries, Barron's showed the following records.

U.S. Postal System — first-class postage rose from 2 cents in 1932 to 10 cents in 1974; home mail service was reduced from two deliveries daily in 1932 to one daily in 1974; office mail service was reduced from four deliveries daily in 1932 to two daily in 1974; annual deficits rose from $66 million in 1935 to $1,390 million in 1973.

Bell Telephone System — local telephone service rates rose 125 per cent since 1932; long distance toll rates declined 8 per cent between East Coast points since 1932 and dropped 85 per cent between East Coast - West Coast points in the same period; telephone connection time reduced to a mere fraction of the time required in the 1930s; taxes paid annually rose from $94 million in 1935 to $4,350 million in 1973; dividend payments to shareholders rose from $39 million in 1930 to $1.7 billion in 1973.

In other words, the Government-run post office stands in the role of Mr. G. whereas the privately run Bell Telephone System stands in the role of Mr. E. As the reader probably has detected, the symbol G. stands for Government, and the symbol E. stands for Enterprise.

Which outfit would you hire to furnish your gasoline?

THE CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Federal Aid To The Subways?

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The forces operating on the federal government to induce it to stick its proboscis into every facet of our lives were never better illustrated than by the current drive to raid the federal highway fund on behalf of urban mass transportation.

The Constitution lays on Congress the duty to regulate commerce between the states. Reasonably interpreting this as giving it an obligation to encourage such commerce, Congress has long appropriated federal tax revenues to finance the construction and repair of interstate highways. As a result, our national road network is truly one of the wonders of the world, carrying people and goods all over the country in a fruitfully exchange.

But now a major attempt is underway to divert a substantial part of these revenues to a quite different and far more debatable purpose. Like most bad ideas, this one has the enthusiastic approval of the Democratic leadership in Congress and the half-hearted support of the Nixon Administration as well.

In my own city of New York, for example, the fare on subways and buses is presently 35 cents. Nobody pretends that this represents the actual cost of a ride. Recent wage hikes, not to mention such comparatively new burdens as maintaining armed guards in the subway cars and washing off the graffiti, have upped the real cost to something like 50 cents. But no politician who holds, or hopes for, city or statewide office (and we've just had a mayoral election, with the governorship coming up this November) dares suggest that the fare should go up to 50 cents. "Save the 35 cent fare!" is the cry from every side.

In practice this means finding the necessary money somewhere else. Twice in recent years the voters of New York State have been asked to approve a bond issue to subsidize New York City's 35 cent fare. And twice, most recently last November, the people in the suburbs and upstate New York managed to vote the proposal down. They don't see why they should be required to help pay what it costs to carry people back and forth between (for example) Brooklyn and Manhattan, and to be frank about it neither do I.

So now the search for a subsidy has turned to the federal till — that great socio-political deity from which practically all blessings flow. The argument is being made that part of the revenues previously set aside for federal highway aid should be devoted instead to subsidizing the subway and bus lines of New York City and a few other large urban agglomerations — all under the rubric of "federal aid to urban mass transportation."

What is boils down to is a proposal that everybody's federal taxes, including those of people in smaller cities, in towns and in rural areas all over America, should be raised to subsidize the bus and subway fares paid by the residents of New York and handful of other big cities. The betting among politicians is that the poor devils who are to be peeled will be too slothful, too disorganized and too ill-informed to resist effectively the lobbyists for the inner-city subway and bus riders. And they are probably right.

Why the federal government should get into this field at all is a good question, if rather out of date. The Commerce Clause has been construed so broadly by the Supreme Court over the past third of a century that it can just about be said of the federal government, the Tenth Amendment to the contrary notwithstanding, that nothing human is alien to it. So the chances are, that everybody's taxes will be going up, slightly before long, to pay for this new "benefit" for the big cities. Of course, if our leaders haven't quite got the guts for that, they can always print enough extra money to pay for it and then leech the money's value out of the public's hide in the form of further inflation. Either way, I wonder if the straphangers of New York City will be duly grateful? (Copyright 1974)

AN AMAZING STORY
Power Of Sonnenfeldt
In Nixon Administration

By CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. — One of the most amazing stories in the Nixon administration is the ascendancy of Helmut Sonnenfeldt as a major influence on American foreign policy, despite unresolved charges that he lied to a congressional committee on matters dealing with national security.

Sonnenfeldt, 49, is an expert on Soviet-American affairs. His influence on foreign policy is second only to that of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, and for details of Soviet-American relations, Kissinger leans heavily upon Sonnenfeldt, an old friend.

While the special prosecutor pursued in detail the charges that former presidential aides Dwight Chapin, Egil (Bud) Krogh, Herbert L. (Bart) Porter, and Jeb S. Magruder lied about campaign financing, the Justice Department has exhibited no interest in exploring the possibility that Sonnenfeldt committed perjury.

And, as the controversial Sonnenfeldt has survived, prospered, and been approved by the Senate as counselor in the State Department, he owes it all to the passing of the magic words: "Henry wants him."

As Chapin, Krogh, Porter and Magruder have been convicted in the Watergate affair, Sonnenfeldt sits in on White House conferences with Kissinger and takes a leading role in preparing for Mr. Nixon's meetings with Soviet leaders this summer.

Meanwhile, serious questions remain unresolved concerning Sonnenfeldt's truthfulness before congressional committees and his handling of information with high national security classifications.

Those questions were raised but not resolved before two Senate committees — Foreign Relations and Finance — and still are under active investigation by the House Internal Security Subcommittee, where Kissinger has been able to stall the appearance of key witnesses for several months with "executive privilege" assertions.

Several responsible witnesses have testified against Sonnenfeldt, and John Hemenway, a former Foreign Service officer, spelled out the problem succinctly in a letter to the Justice Department asking for a criminal investigation. "Specifically, Mr. Helmut Sonnenfeldt, an employee of the U.S. Department of State and the USC (National Security Council), stands accused of 'leaking' highly classified information to foreign agents with whom he had frequent and close association and to other persons."

These charges were made in the public record. The charges were specific, capable of being decisively proved or disproved, and were under oath by a number of responsible citizens including Mr. Otto Otepka, retired member of the Subversive Activities Control Board, and Mr. Stephen Kozak, retired U.S. diplomat who currently holds a responsible position with the AFGE (American Federation of Government Employees) of the AFL-CIO. Many corroborating witnesses are available and have been named in the record.

Hemenway noted that Sonnenfeldt denied the charges under oath before the Senate Finance Committee.

Political figures who have abhorred the lack of investigations that was the Watergate cover-up and who have criticized arbitrary executive secrecy in connection with the White House tapes have been unconcerned or silent as the Kissinger branch of the same Nixon administration refuses to answer factual questions and produce witnesses in the Sonnenfeldt controversy.

Newspaper and magazine writers, who rightly pursued the suspected perjury in the Watergate cover-up and who delved into Mr. Nixon's tax matters, seem content with inaction on the serious charges against Sonnenfeldt.

Although some of the security violation charges against Sonnenfeldt go back to the late 1950s, his most recent triumphs over his critics are due almost entirely to the fact that Kissinger regards him as an indispensable man in negotiations with the Soviet Union — and the People's Republic of China.

From all that is known or written, Sonnenfeldt's brilliant talents are as indispensable to Kissinger as Kissinger is to Mr. Nixon. And, as Kissinger becomes more involved in the whole sweep of American foreign policy and running the State Department, he becomes more dependent upon Sonnenfeldt for the detailed staff work in preparation for international meetings.

While Sonnenfeldt is described as "a hardliner" in American-Soviet negotiations, he and Kissinger presided as the major policy planners in the disastrous Soviet grain deals and the much-criticized Strategic Arms Limitations Talks (SALT) agreements.

We are told that Sonnenfeldt's abrasive personality causes periodic clashes with Kissinger, but it was Kissinger who rescued Sonnenfeldt from his most recent Senate confirmation problems by passing the word to Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright (Dem., Ark.) that he wanted Sonnenfeldt as counselor and would personally vouch for his loyalty and integrity.

For Fulbright and Senator George Aiken (Rep., Vt.), the ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee, the fact that "Henry wants him" was enough. They didn't even require Kissinger to appear formally under oath to be precise about just why he wanted and needed Sonnenfeldt, or why the serious charges made under oath should not be resolved with an examination of all available witnesses and documents.

Byrd also questioned whether Sonnenfeldt had an adequate background in business and international economics for the Treasury post, and cited the grain deals as indicative of the consequences of a lack of experience in trade matters.

Chairman Russell Long (Dem., La.) heard testimony from two former Foreign Service officers — Hemenway and Kozak — concerning the alleged leaking of classified information to intelligence agents for Israel. They said their allegations could be supported by other witnesses and documents at the FBI, CIA and State Department.

Long made a futile effort to obtain those documents, and finally gave up in the face of an executive branch stall. When he reported the Sonnenfeldt nomination to the floor he explained that it was not his fault that all of the evidence was not explored because the executive branch had refused to cooperate.

Before the Sonnenfeldt nomination came to a vote in the Senate, it was withdrawn and, at Kissinger's urging, Sonnenfeldt's name was submitted as counselor at the State Department. This move brought the nomination under the jurisdiction to Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Fulbright.

While Fulbright expressed concern over the allegations against Sonnenfeldt, he prevailed upon his committee to vote approval because "Henry wants him." Fulbright didn't even call the witnesses who wanted to appear against Sonnenfeldt, nor did he require that Kissinger be questioned under oath on the handling of the security questions in the Sonnenfeldt matter.

What makes the Sonnenfeldt affair most amazing is the fact that it is taking place at a time when it appeared the press, politicians and political scientists had made new resolves on the dangers of executive secrecy, the importance of executive department accountability to Congress, and the corruptive impact when allegedly false testimony is permitted to go unchallenged.

OUTRIDER

Another Subpoena Back In 1807

By GARRY WILLS

This historic document has an awesome ring to it — a summons to "Richard M. Nixon, President of the United States of America, or any subordinate officer, official or employee with custody or control of the things described in the attached schedule." It calls up the memory of an 1807 subpoena issued to Thomas Jefferson, to Robert Smith, to Henry Dearborn, or either of them who may have the papers herein.

Jefferson has tried to forestall that subpoena by sending all the papers it called for ahead of time, but the subpoena was issued while his response was on the way. President Nixon has referred to this incident on two occasions, and his lawyers have argued from it in court and in memoranda. According to Nixon, Jefferson refused to respond to the subpoena. But not only did he respond, he volunteered the material before the subpoena was even served.

Months later, the prosecutor to whom Jefferson had sent all the relevant papers argued that deletions should be made in one of the letters before it was made public. This is what some historians have called Jefferson's refusal to comply with the subpoena. But the prosecutor never refused the document to the court, and did not invoke an "executive privilege."

He offered the complete letter not only to the judge but to the defense lawyers. He argued only that the defendant, Aaron Burr, should not read the deleted parts, which were immaterial and possibly defamatory of other people. When Burr said that "delicacy" about confidences and private reputations should not impede the showing of evidence, only an argument from the public good, the prosecutor agreed with these distinctions and argued that the public good was the reason for the deletions.

Chief Justice John Marshall, sitting as a circuit court judge, ruled that only the President himself could argue for the deletions by personally attesting that they were immaterial to the case and would be prejudicial to the public good if broadcast. Jefferson responded to this ruling by testifying both things. There was no defiance of a subpoena.

A reference in one of Jefferson's letters has caused some historians, including Jefferson's greatest biographer, Dumas Malone, to think that a second subpoena was issued to the President after the Marshall ruling. But Jefferson was referring to a subpoena that had been issued to the prosecutor before the ruling spelled out what the President should do to obtain the deletions he desired. (There is a long article clarifying this point in the forthcoming issue of the "New York Review of Books.")

Jefferson resented the fact that Marshall issued any subpoena at all, and grumbled bitterly about it in his private correspondence, but mainly because he would have responded to a simple request, and had actually sent on the material that was sought before the subpoena was issued.

For President Nixon to compare his situation with Jefferson's is as ludicrous as his invocation of Lincoln as a Watergate prototype. Nixon has not volunteered all relevant material; he has not offered the "court" (in this case the impeachment committee) entire documents, asking only for deletions from the public record; he has not responded to requests or rulings so faithfully as to forestall subsequent subpoenas.

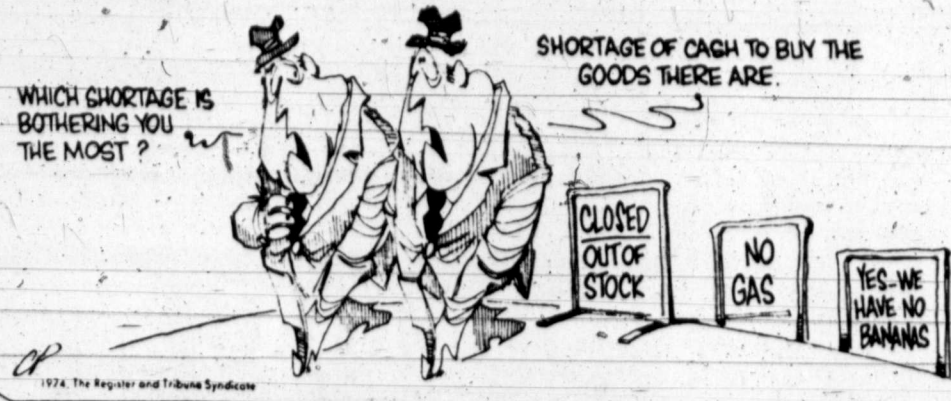

Jefferson was not subpoenaed a second time because he did not need to be. He had not only complied, but showed a spirit of compliance — so that a mere suggestion in Marshall's ruling elicited the presidential testimony needed for making the deletions. He never invoked an "executive privilege" in the name of confidentiality or protection of his office — he argued from (a) the immateriality of the deleted portions to the case being tried, (b) possible damage to other parties, and (c) the preservation of the public order.

And we must remember that Jefferson himself was not on trial, was not even a direct part of the case being tried. This was not part of an impeachment process, where the power of inquest is spelled out for the House of Representatives. Jefferson was complying with a court that was prosecuting a private citizen. He had far more solid ground for resisting a subpoena in those circumstances than the current President has when himself under investigation for impeachment — yet even then Jefferson did not resist. The two situations resemble each other about as San Clemente resembles Monticello — or as the Disney World Address resembles the Declaration of Independence.

Democrats Planning For Precinct Conventions

Texas Democrats will start the selection of 76 national delegates when they gather at more than 5,000 precinct conventions on May 4, primary election day.

And party leaders are urging everyone — especially women, youth, minority groups and senior citizens — to participate.

"When you vote on election day, you automatically elect yourself a delegate to your precinct convention," said John C. White, Commissioner of Agriculture and chairman of the Texas Affirmative Action Committee.

TAAC was formed early this year to inspire more involvement from the traditionally under-represented groups in the Democratic Party. New rules were adopted to insure broader representation.

A key rule provides that any group, comprising at least 20 percent of those in attendance, can by written petition caucus separately and elect their share of the convention delegates.

"This rule is a guarantee that everyone can participate, every voice will be heard," said White.

From the precinct level, delegates journey to 254 county conventions on May 11. The county conventions will select a total of 5,463 delegates to the state convention in Austin Sept. 17.

The state convention, in addition to writing a platform and electing party leaders, will choose delegates to a national conference in Kansas City Dec. 6-8 to write a charter for the Democratic Party.

"You start writing a new charter for the Democratic Party when you attend your precinct convention," White pointed out.

"And you take the first step toward nominating the next Democratic presidential candidate," White added.

The Revolutionary Battle of Bunker Hill actually was fought on Breed's Hill.

or chipped concrete can fly into the cranium in a lethal manner, says the Hand Tools Institute. If you're going to nail into masonry, the Institute suggests: look into new devices on the market for shielding the nail during application.

Driving nails into concrete without the proper tools and safety precautions can be just about as dangerous as playing Russian Roulette with a revolver pointed at your head. In fact, your head is the most vulnerable area of all when you are hammering anything into concrete. Shattered nails

Never use an extension ladder outside in high winds.

The key to proper leaning of an extension ladder: the angle in relationship to the vertical support. In general, the ladder base should be placed a distance equal to one-fourth the total working length of the ladder away from the base of the vertical support.

A belt buckle can be a mighty important reminder when it comes to proper climbing of ladders. Among the more dangerous practices is over-reaching from a ladder, or shifting your weight to the side, either of which can cause you to lose your balance or cause the ladder to shift or tumble unexpectedly. It's the unbalanced maneuver that usually causes the sudden jerky movement of a ladder. That sets the scene for a potential accident. To prevent this, keep your belt buckle in mind. When climbing, your body should be in the center of the ladder at all times — your belt buckle between the two outside rails of a ladder.

To reduce splashing and bubbling when you cook macaroni products, add a spoonful of vegetable oil to the water.

Mature green fruit, including tomatoes, ripens best if it's placed in a paper bag in a warm spot but not directly in sunlight. The bag traps the ethylene gas given off naturally by the fruit as it ripens. Tissue paper wrapping used by some shippers serves the same purpose. Ethylene gas ripening is also done commercially in ripening rooms with piped in gas.

Creamy, piquant potato-cucumber soup is a versatile plate-mate. It can star as the main course for the youngsters or play a glittering supporting role at a gourmet dinner party. Its flavors can emerge subtly when it's chilled or robustly when it's heated.

Add to these diversified characteristics, the preparation time: only half an hour, thanks to frozen southern-style hash brown potatoes. The time for making potato soup the old-fashioned way is more than cut in half.

The diced, frozen potatoes, oil or steam blanched, are perfect for soups, hash, potato salads, casseroles, or, of course, pan-fried hash browns.

For the soup, cucumbers are chopped in a blender with chicken broth and added to a roux and the diced potatoes. Chopped carrot gives color with buttermilk and shredded lemon peel being the final, tangy ingredients.

Warmer weather brings easier meals, and soup and sandwiches are mainstays. The youngsters will applaud this soup, paired with junior club or make-your-own sandwiches and glasses of milk. Served with only a salad and milk, the soup still offers a nutritionally complete meal.

As a hostess, however, you owe it to yourself to plan the soup as your first course and watch your guests' eyes when they see you carry a tureen of this fragrant soup to the table.

The convenience you purchase with frozen southern-style hash browns — no peeling and no dicing — is only one reason that consumption of frozen potatoes is up to almost 32 pounds per person nationally. Frozen potatoes also eliminate waste and spoilage and are economical, high in vitamins A and C, and surprisingly low in calories. Set the stage for serving these handy frozen treats soon.

POTATO-CUCUMBER SOUP

- 1 medium cucumber, seeded and chopped (about 1½ cups)
 - 2 cans (13½ oz. each) chicken broth
 - 1 tablespoon butter
 - ½ teaspoon salt
 - dash of cayenne
 - 2 tablespoons minced onion
 - ½ cup chopped carrot
 - 2 tablespoons flour
 - 3 cups frozen southern style hash brown potatoes
 - 1 cup buttermilk
 - 1 tablespoon shredded lemon peel
- Put cucumber and chicken broth in a saucepan and simmer over medium heat until cucumbers are tender. Pour ½ of mixture

FASHIONETTES

Give a girl enough scarf...and that's just what is happening in the fall and winter clothes. Scarves come in all dimensions and in all sorts of exaggerations. Sometimes they add sharp color contrast to a costume but more often they're coordinated in color. Special favorites are the pale beige and camel tones and the long rectangular shapes that loop loosely at the throat and fall to the waistline or lower.

Watch for something new in fur patterning. Designer Pauline Trigere calls it marbling, skillfully working skins in tones of beige, gray and off-white into an unusual mix. The fur is dyed fox.

To save energy, pre-heat at a time into a blender and blend until cucumbers are finely chopped. Melt butter in a saucepan over medium heat; saute onion and carrot until tender. Stir in flour, salt and cayenne until smooth. Gradually stir in blended cucumber mixture and add southern-style hash brown potatoes. Simmer about 15 minutes while stirring occasionally until potatoes are tender and flavors blended. Stir in buttermilk and lemon peel. May be served hot or cold. Makes about 5 cups.

In 1898, Congress formally declared war on Spain in the battle over Cuba.

Scientists To Dive To Hunt For Oil Seepage On Ocean Floor

DALLAS (UPI) — Scientists will dive in a two-man submarine in about six weeks in an effort to substantiate research indicating that much of the oil and tar found on the beaches, surface and floor of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean comes from natural seepage.

So far, the finger is always pointed at tankers or spills from offshore oil operations as the villains. Fears of beach pollution are holding up exploration off the Atlantic coast, where drillers might find billions of barrels of badly needed petroleum.

Dr. William E. Sweet Jr., 49, of Texas A & M University's Oceanography department, is in charge of the research. He has been investigating the origin of oil and tar in the Gulf for the past three years, mostly with underwater television cameras and bottom samplings.

"We know from studies that none of the tar we are picking up in the Gulf comes from the oil rigs," Sweet said in a telephone interview. "You get tar on your feet on Padre Island (off the South Texas coast) and point at rigs in the Gulf."

Blames Seepage
But that is not where it is coming from. Petroleum exploration can be conducted in a safe manner.

"I say a heck of a lot of it comes from seepage. I don't have enough evidence now to say that most of it comes from seepage. I suspect that most of it comes from seepage." Sweet hopes that with the submarine, costing more than $100,000, he can find oil, gas or tar actually coming up through the Gulf floor.

"We have seen gas bubbles, and, while we have not taken any of the gas directly, we have had the water analyzed and it shows traces of hydrocarbons," he said. "We know it isn't just marsh gas."

"It is difficult to say where we can prove that the pollution is coming from seepage. We hope we can prove that the seepage is going on, but outside of the area off Mexico, we have never been able to pinpoint one of the seeps."

Indians Used Asphalt
The submarine can dive to 1,200 feet below the surface, which means it can look for seepage 50 or 60 miles off the South Texas coast and 100 miles off the Louisiana coast.

Sweet claimed that historical evidence indicates the preColumbian Karankawa Indians on Padre Island used asphalt washed up on the beaches to waterproof their pottery.

Sweet said there also are reports of oil slicks in Havana Bay in 1506 and that the survivors of DeSoto's ill-fated expedition used tar found on the Texas-Louisiana coast to caulk their boats.

And there was tar reported on Galveston beaches in 1841 or 18 years before the first commercial oil well in 1859. In 1909, the ship Comedian reported three jets of brownish liquid spurting into the air in a water depth of 600 fathoms while in the early 1900s, large patches of viscous oil were reported in the North Central Gulf," he said.

"It has been estimated that less than one per cent of the oil that has ever generated becomes entrapped in reservoirs. Of the rest, some tends to be squeezed out of the source beds and probably migrates through the sediment to the surface.

"If only one-tenth of a barrel (4.2 gallons) of oil a day per thousand miles of ocean seeped to the surface, 18,250 barrels a year would be released into the Gulf of Mexico alone."

Sweet declined to guess what proving that seepage is responsible for most coast pollution would do toward changing minds in Atlantic coast states about offshore drilling.

Business Today

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — Atlantic Steel Company, third largest producer of steel in the Southeast, is making plans to expand—not into the field it knows best, but into real estate.

The company, which employs 1,600 workers in its steel division, is moving from its present facilities near downtown Atlanta to a rural location at Cartersville, Ga., about 40 miles to the northwest. When it moves, it will vacate 200 acres of some of the most valuable real estate in the nation.

Charles W. Bastedo, senior vice president and general manager of Atlantic Steel, said the company is going to hang onto those 200 acres and develop them into a complex of offices, businesses and high rise apartments, complemented with green areas and small lakes.

Valuable Property
In addition to being near the booming downtown Atlanta area, the acreage occupied by the 72-year-old firm lies near the intersection of two major interstate highways. Bastedo quoted real estate developers as estimating its value at about $150,000 an acre. That would make the tract worth $30 million.

"This is extremely valuable property," said Bastedo. "We considered abandoning the steel business and going into real estate altogether. But we thought about the employees and how many jobs would be lost."

Atlantic Steel is studying proposals from real estate firms throughout the United States for development of the acreage. But if there's a shortage of steel, as some experts expect, and it becomes more profitable to produce it, Bastedo said the real estate project could be delayed.

Atlantic Steel then would continue to operate its two electric furnaces at the Atlanta facility, along with the three planned for the Cartersville plant.

Four Phases
Bastedo said the move to Cartersville will be accomplished over a 10-year period in four phases, with the final phase to be completed in 1984.

It will cost the firm at least $60 million. Some $30 million will be used to finance the first phase, which consists of constructing a new electric furnace, a continuous caster mill and a rolling mill. Two more furnaces and a second continuous casting mill will be added in the second phase.

During the third and fourth phases, the company's rod, bar and wire mills will be moved piece by piece—by railroad and trucks—to the new location.

The company plans to spend $2.5 million for anti-pollution equipment at the new facility, Bastedo said. Pollution problems, along with lack of room for expansion were two reasons Atlantic Steel decided to move from Atlanta, Bastedo explained.

With the newer facilities and improved technology, Atlantic Steel anticipates a 50 per cent increase in production capability at its 250-acre Cartersville plant. The firm produced 340,000 tons of finished steel products in 1973, a 25 per cent increase over a 10-year period.

For the firm's 1,600 employees, the move means that some will have to sell or rent their present homes to go with the company to Cartersville. For others, it will involve longer commuting. None of the steel workers interviewed complained.

Want To Sell House? Check With Realtors

"If you want to sell your house in the worst way, sell it yourself—that the worst way," according to O.K. Gaylor, president of the Pampa Board of Realtors. Gaylor explained that too often homeowners seek advice and opinions from unqualified "experts" in selling their homes.

"Free advice is worth what you pay for it, and in many cases a lot less. The real job of selling your home is one of strong salesmanship and merchandising," he said.

"Selling your home requires the advice of an expert. Gaylor added as he pointed out that the current 1974 Realtor Week theme is: "The Realtor—A Voice For America's Property Owners."

"By representing and working for all property owners, we insure buyers and sellers of real estate fair, ethical and professional advice," Gaylor concluded.

Can Arthritis Harm Muscles?

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: How could I gain back strength in muscles that have "gone to pot" due to arthritis? I am losing the ability to walk with crutches without extreme pain in the muscles in the thighs. I want to do this at home if possible.

Is there any hospital in my area that does treatment for this sort of problem?

—Mrs. F.N.
This problem of muscular weakness from arthritis is a serious one, and I warn of it in my booklet, "How You Can Control Arthritis."

(Booklet is available by mail; send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to me, Dr. G.C. Thosteson, Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.)

It is not the arthritis as such which causes the weakness. It is the temptation, because of painful joints, to avoid exercise. The patient just doesn't want to move—and you can't blame him.

Just the same, it is important that the patient MUST move. Movement prevents "freezing" of a joint. It also prevents weakness of the muscles from disuse. These two facts are very important to anyone with arthritis.

When, as in Mrs. F.N.'s situation, muscles have lost their tone, there is no quick way of bringing them back. But if it cannot be done quickly, it still should be done slowly.

Simple home treatment would consist of massage of the muscles, which would stimulate circulation and prepare the muscles for use. Heat, in whatever form, whether a heating pad, hot bath or other method, would be helpful.

So is using the muscles as much as possible under the circumstances. It would not, in a case like that, be much, but every little bit would help. Just walking a few steps at a time would be worthwhile.

Any other simple method of using the weakened muscles also would help, and day by day more activity would gradually become possible.

Isometric exercises may help—that is, pulling or pushing against some resistance (the wall, a weight, whatever). As to clinics or institutions, they are scattered all over the country, and most readers (most certainly including Mrs. F.N.) will be within some reasonable distance of one.

Your own doctor very likely can direct you to one; if not, the various chapters of the Arthritis Foundation can provide such information. Trained massage and therapy to encourage use of the muscles is, of course, better than self-treatment at home, but even the simple home therapy I have outlined can be helpful.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a person is short of breath does it mean they have a heart condition and should they see a doctor or get pills for it?

—Mrs. J.
It can be an indication of heart disease; but shortness of breath also can indicate some ailment involving the lungs or respiratory system. So the answer is, yes, see a doctor; then wait and see whether the doctor finds something that pills will help, or whether some other treatment is called for.

Note to Miss G.S.: No, the various depilatories (hair removers) do not cause skin cancer, and your friend knows not whereof she speaks. Whatever brand you use, follow directions, because if not washed off at the proper time, skin irritation may result.

Diverticulosis is a bulge in the digestive tract. To become more familiar with the subject, write for my booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You." Send a long, self-addressed (use zip code) stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling to Dr. G.C. Thosteson, Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible. Copyright 1974, Field Enterprises, Inc.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

Fire Doesn't Stop The Sisters

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK—There was a stinky little broom fire backstage at the Shubert the other night but it didn't stop the Andrews Sisters' hit show "Over Here"—it only smoked it up and inspired Patty Andrews to say in a curtain speech, "Folks, you've just seen the hottest show in town."

The 11-o'clock Shubert Alley crowd congratulated them on their fine fire and wondered if they'd have one every night, just as they have a "third act," or after-show.

It was a big day for the Comeback Sisters who were honored at a TV Academy luncheon at the Pub Theatrical. Standing at the mike, Patty said, "Maxene is dying to say a few words. Maxene says a few words."

"I would like to say a few words," Maxene said.

"That's enough!" Patty snatched the mike from her.

Maxene seized it back. "I'm always trying to say a few words and I've got scars on my legs to prove it."

Thirty years ago they were personal hits at the old Paramount Theater and they wanted to go through that glamorous Shubert Theater stage door like Hepburn and Van Heflin. And now the autograph crowds wait for them at that very door.

"Thirty years ago," Patty said, "The producers of this show weren't even born yet."

"As kids we wanted to replace the Boswell Sisters," Maxene remembered. "One agent told our mother, 'Put your girls back in school. They move too fast and sing too loud.' We never learned to read."

"Music," Patty interjected hastily.

"Was there ever an Andrews Brother?" a fan called out.

"No, and was our father disappointed?"

They had a movie career that was hampered somewhat when they said that producers wanted to put their backsides.

These middle-aged ladies have captured the kids because little girls are impersonating them in class shows, doing "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy of Company C." Oldsters are remembering "Apple Blossom Time," "Beer Barrel Polka," and the one I can never spell or pronounce.

"What about your future?" asked somebody in the luncheon crowd.

"We're in it!" Maxene shouted back. And it is a happy thing to see.

Under Twenty

By LYNN TODD

Talk to any of the top automobile racers and they'll tell you that any race can be won or lost in the pits. Then ask what pit crew they'd like to have behind them, in, say, the Daytona 500, and you can bet they'll say the Wood Brothers.

The story of this highly unusual, race-dedicated family has now been told in an absorbing book, "Racing to Win, Wood Brothers Style," by Lyle Kenyon Engel.

From the opening chapter to the very end of the well-illustrated book the author puts you right in the pit as the crew feverishly works to get the car back out on the track. You can smell the exhaust, the oil, the fuel speeding into the tank and hear the sounds of a smooth crew efficiently, rapidly changing tires.

The Wood Brothers are sparked by Glenn, the leader. Leonard is the mechanic while Delano runs the family lumber business and doubles in the pit. Clay is an electrician. Another brother, Ray, quit the team in 1966 to devote more time to his religion. The balance of the crew are not brothers.

Glenn began stock car racing but became much more interested in what makes the cars tick. He began rebuilding stock cars and putting together the country's fastest pit crew. On the average it takes a fast crew about 20 seconds to service a racer on a pit stop. The Wood Brothers do it in 18.

Many is the driver who was just out of second place before a stop. After split-second timing in the Wood Brothers pit he raced back on the track to find himself in first place.

The Woods attract the top drivers for their cars. With scores of victories dating back to 1960 they have won with such top drivers as Don Gurney, A.J. Foyt, Parnelli Jones, Cale Yarborough (over a dozen times) and David Pearson.

The book points out the painstaking effort and hard work required and the small amount of money usually taken home by the winners after paying their expenses. It talks about the hardship of long, all-night sessions working on a blown engine, the hundreds of miles of weary travel and the thrills of bringing home a winner.

"Racing to Win" is a human story about the men behind the machines. It is a fascinating story even if you've never seen a stock car race. If you are a racing bug it is must reading.

Big George!

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

James Kauffman, Pampa assistant football coach for the past two years, has resigned his position and accepted the job of first assistant coach at Duncanville, a suburb of Dallas with a population of approximately 30,000.

Kauffman will work under Duncanville's new head coach, Jack Edwards, who recently resigned at Terrell. Edwards was one of the leading candidates for the Pampa job earlier this year.

Duncanville, which compiled a 1-9 record last year, competes in District 7-AAAA, which includes Arlington, Sam Houston, Arlington Lamar, Arlington High, Irving High, Irving MacArthur, Irving Nimitz and Grand Prairie. Edwards, concerning the reason he accepted the head job at Duncanville, said, "Most any time you make a change, it's because you feel like you can improve the situation. At Duncanville, we've got a chance for improvement."

Kauffman worked with Edwards when the two were assistants at Corsicana in 1969. The following season, Kauffman coached at Amarillo Tascosa and then came to Pampa in June, 1972. With the Harvesters, he coached the linebacks and ends during the 1972 season and was the offensive and defensive line coach last season.

"I think Coach Kauffman is one of the outstanding high school football coaches in the state of Texas. I think his dedication is tremendous," said Edwards. "His strongest points are his discipline and how well he gets along with the kids."

"And his knowledge of football," Edwards added. Kauffman, who is 38, will leave close to May 1, when spring training begins at Duncanville.

"There will be a substantial increase in salary and a much better opportunity there. Duncanville's very wealthy and growing very fast," said Kauffman.

Tampa Gets Okay As Franchise City

NEW YORK (UPI) — Expansion and inflation, two concepts that typify modern America, will take another staggering step outward and upward as part of the National Football League's tribute to the country's bicentennial. The NFL, which already has gone from 12 teams to 26 since 1960, will expand further in 1976 with the definite addition of Tampa, Fla. At least one other city, and possibly more, will be selected later this year to join the burgeoning fraternity.

Those cities under consideration are Seattle, Phoenix, Honolulu and Memphis, all of whose bids were discussed at this week's NFL meeting. The price of admission is a cool $16 million, almost double what the National League charged for its last group of expansion franchises just a few years ago and the largest in sport history.

Never Blink an Eye But no one concerned with the Tampa bid so much as blinked an eye at the initiation fee. The only emotion they showed was relief at gaining the privilege to pay the price.

"I'm sure that the people who are bidding for the franchise have certainly evaluated the situation and know there will be a return on it," said Leonard Levy, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Task Force that has worked for six years to bring the NFL to Tampa.

"This is inflation now, we're paying more for everything we do."

Levy said that some 13 groups have expressed an interest in taking over the Tampa franchise. One of the strongest groups is headed by Harry T. Mangurian, whom Levy said "has been the most viable and active" force in bringing a team to Tampa.

Bill Marcum, a member of the Mangurian group, said that money wouldn't be a factor if they won the bid.

Pirates Stop Atlanta, 5-3, Using Three Home Runs

United Press International
The Pittsburgh Pirates may be on the way toward solving their problems, but it looks as if the New York Mets' troubles are just beginning.

The Pirates and the Mets, the co-favorites to fight it out for the National League East pennant, have been looking more like Little Leaguers during the first weeks of the season as they've struggled to remain competitive in their division.

But the Pirates, at least, are beginning to show signs that they are on the rise. The Pirates, losers of 10 of their first 12 games, made it two victories in a row Wednesday night when they used their favorite weapon—the home run—to defeat the Atlanta Braves, 5-3.

The Pirates unloaded three homers in downing the Braves with Manny Sanguillen and Willie Stargell each contributing a two-run shot and Richie Hebner adding a solo blast.

Pittsburgh also got some good pitching from right-hander Dock Ellis, who allowed five hits in six innings to record his first win. The Pirates have not been getting much pitching thus far but Ellis' performance was encouraging.

The Mets, on the other hand, continued to plunge deeper into the East Division cellar as they lost to the San Diego Padres, 4-3. The defeat was the Mets' 10th in their last 11 games—their second in a row to the Padres—and they now have won only three times in 14 games.

Once again it was a combination of lack of hitting and poor relief pitching that deserted the Mets Wednesday night. The team, batting only .244, managed only five hits and reliever Bob Apodaca fell apart in the ninth inning as the Padres pushed across the winning run.

Derrell Thomas started the rally with a one-out double and, after a pair of walks, the Padres pushed across the winning run on Nate Colbert's check swing grounder to second base.

Colbert and Dave Winfield also helped the Padres' cause with early homers while Wayne Garrett had a two-run shot for the Mets.

In other National League games, Houston whipped St. Louis, 9-4. Cincinnati edged Chicago, 1-0, and Los Angeles topped Philadelphia, 6-1. Montreal at San Francisco was postponed by rain.

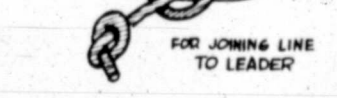

The badger has a fierce fighting spirit that makes it one of the most formidable combatants in nature.

Celtics Garner Eastern Division Playoff Series

BOSTON (UPI) — The sign on the blackboard said: "Practice tomorrow at 11 a.m."

That seemed to sum things up for the Boston Celtics, who had just eliminated the New York Knickerbockers from contention in the National Basketball Association championships in a 105-94 decision that waxed from brutal to poetic.

It was the first time the Celtics had won the Eastern Division playoffs since 1969, but there was no time to savor the victory because the Milwaukee Bucks, with 7-foot-2 Kareem Abdul Jabbar, loomed over the locker room like a specter.

The two teams meet Sunday in Milwaukee.

"This will be a mess-around practice. We get ONE mess-around practice for winning," said Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn. "Then we get down to business."

Boston held a 52-45 lead at the end of the first half, with neither team able to control play for any length of time.

Texas All Alone In 1st In AL West After Win

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Ferguson Jenkins has meant so much to the Texas Rangers thus far this year his teammates will likely follow him anywhere. And they proved it Wednesday night.

Jenkins was on his way to his fourth victory of the season, a 3-1 verdict over Boston, when Red Sox shortstop Mario Guerrero popped up to second base. The Ranger right-hander headed for the dugout, although only two were out. His teammates, figuring Jenkins must have known what he was doing, followed dutifully along like eight little puppies after their master.

That was embarrassing, Jenkins said. "I'm the one who started it."

But it was the only embarrassing moment for Jenkins Wednesday night since he became the first American League pitcher this season to win four games and since the Rangers now own first place in the American League West all by themselves.

The officials called a total of 31 fouls in the first half most of them under the boards, where elbows and hips were turned into nearly lethal weapons.

The defense on both sides was frantic and aggressive, especially in the first quarter when the two teams managed only a total of 41 points between them.

"The game was won in the first half," said Boston's Don Chaney, who took control of the game in the second half, scoring 12 of his 19 points. "It was a real tough half and the Knicks were tired when they came out for the last half," he said.

"This is just one step along the way," said captain John Havlicek, who turned in another outstanding performance, scoring 33 points, most of them in a second-half surge which broke the Knicks' back.

Missouri was the scene of 1,162 battles during the Civil War.

Better Hurry And Get Your Okie Hunting, Fishing Licenses

OKLAHOMA CITY — Non-residents anglers must pay $6 for an annual license or $3.25 for a 10-day trip license beginning May 1 to fish in Oklahoma lakes and streams according to a new license fee schedule announced by the Oklahoma Department of Wildlife Conservation.

Garland Fletcher, assistant director and Comptroller of the department, said license dealers have been notified of the changes stipulated by passage of the Wildlife Recodification by the Oklahoma Legislature and signed by Governor David Hall April 8. Fletcher noted the legislation carries the emergency provision and became law the instant it was signed by the governor. Non-residents who purchased Oklahoma fishing licenses before May 1 will be permitted to use those licenses until December 31. However, all other non-residents must purchase one of the new non-resident licenses to fish in the state after May 1.

This is the only scheduled change in Oklahoma hunting and fishing licenses, and was the first increase in any category since 1968 when hunting and fishing licenses were increased from $2 to $3.25. States surrounding Oklahoma generally have non-resident fishing licenses much higher than the charge levied for sport fishing by the Sooner State.

By W.D. LAFFLER
NEW YORK (UPI) — The Great Gatsby, a bad rap from movie critics, despite the big buildup given by the press, but Producer David Merrick thinks it will be one of the biggest motion pictures of all time.

It's not that I want to take sides on the merits or demerits of the movie, you see, at least consider the music in the film, and the feeling of nostalgia that has been gripping the country the past few years.

There's no doubt that the 1920's produced some of the best and most remembered pop tunes of the 20th Century. And quite a few of them are in the score of The Great Gatsby.

Enoch Light, who well remembers the F. Scott Fitzgerald era, has come forth with an excellent album that captures the mood of that time, "Great Hits From The Great Gatsby Era" by Enoch Light and the Light Brigade (Project 3 PR 4086 SD) includes such tunes as "Five Foot Two," "Alice Blue Gown," "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover," "Sheik of Araby," and "Yes Sir, That's My Baby."

Faithful to Period — Light's arrangements are faithful to that period and the sound is magnificent. This is a fine set of tunes for dancing and Light has put them in a sequence that will encourage Charleston dancers to show how it was done before giving way to the waltzers for a medley of "What I Do," "Alice Blue Gown," and "Three O'Clock in the Morning."

The original sound track of the movie, "The Great Gatsby," Paramount PAS 6601, is a two-record set that presents 24 tunes. One of the highlights is "Five Foot Two, Eyes of Blue," which was sung by Nick Carraway, who achieved some kind of immortality with "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover," and "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover," which was produced by a team of fine pop tunes that have been found in the movies.

written for the musicals. "Presenting the Golden Age of the Hollywood Musical" (United Artists UA-LA215-H) is a tribute to Busby Berkeley, who staged the imaginative dance numbers of dozens of those early shows.

Dick Powell Sings — The album contains several songs by Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler, including "By A Waterfall," "42nd Street," "Shadow Waltz," and "I Only Have Eyes for You." James Cagney also joins in a duet with Miss Keeler on "Shanghai Lil."

All of the songs were composed by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, with the exception of "By A Waterfall." In the "42nd Street" number, Miss Keeler opens with a rather nasal solo and then you can hear her famous feet tapping to the tune.

This is a monophonic record and the sound at times is glassy and grainy but it's an exceptional album and worthy of preservation in the libraries of collectors of nostalgic music.

Platter Chatter — Mick Ronson's version of "Slaughter on 10th Avenue" (RCA APL 10353) is a tasteful and imaginative. The Rodgers blues classic is the last number of an impressive album by Ronson and his rock group. Joan Baez sings in Spanish on her latest and one of her best albums, "Here's to Life" (A&M SP3614). All of the numbers seem tailored for Miss Baez, especially the haunting "Guantanamera."

Out of retirement — NEW YORK (UPI) — Joan Merrill has come out of retirement and recorded a Gladys Shelley tune, "Dancing Again," on the Wilcam label. Miss Merrill was the first artist to record Miss Shelley's "How Did He Look?"

Fastwood's "Breezy" — HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Clint Eastwood will direct "Breezy," starring William Holden and Kay Lenz.

Mystery series — HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dana Wynter will appear on an episode entitled "Come Into My Parlor" on "Great Mysteries Hosted by Orson Welles," a new syndicated series distributed by 20th Century-Fox.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market is suffering from inflation, interest rates, impeachment and indifference, according to E. F. Hutton. "But while it breaks the alliterate sequence," the firm says, "it should also be noted that the market looks more and more solid out, or to put it another way, most potential sellers appear to have been already satisfied." The market is in a good position to respond to positive news, the firm adds, and the next major move should be upward.

Despite discouraging economic news—a decline in the Gross National Product, rising interest rates and a sharp fall in production—the U.S. economy will convalesce slowly, says Argus Research Corp. "Over the next four quarters, the inflation rate will decelerate," it predicts, in the absence of dollar devaluations, the oil embargo and agriculture shortages. By the final quarter of this year, "real output will be in the vicinity of its long-term growth trend," the firm adds.

Sharply higher interest rates have depressed bond prices and scared capital away from needy firms, says the Dines Letter. "Wall Street houses that aren't making much money in stocks these days have now discovered a new way to compound their losses with bonds," the letter continues. In the wake of plunging bond prices, the letter says a major bank or brokerage failure on Wall Street would not be surprising.

Last week's spreading boost in the prime rate to 10 1/4 per cent dashed investor hopes for easier money, according to Standard & Poor's Corp. "A topping-out of interest rates would be a highly constructive development," the firm says, "but even though this may not be too far away, most investors meantime seem likely to hold a restrained attitude." It urges investors to stay on the sidelines until interest rates fall.

WORRY CLINIC

Harry, as well as Marilyn Monroe and thousands of others, fell victim to the "Suicide Triangle." Follow the 3 rules below for preventing this sad tragedy. Remember, suicide is the main cause of death among college students nowadays!

CASE A-616: Harry P., aged 19, was a quiet, introverted college student.

"Dr. Crane," his roommate told me, "Harry was really shy about dating girls. And he seemed to prefer sitting at home, reading books, instead of going to ball games, dances or social events."

"He had moody spells and must have felt lonely. For he committed suicide last week!"

"And left a note, saying since he had no friends, he thus had no interest in going on."

"Yet he was a brilliant fellow, making 'A' and 'B' grades, too!"

SUICIDE PSYCHOLOGY
We have an axiom in psychology that states:

"You can't be active and meanwhile feel blue."

That means inactivity correlates with moodiness.

If the telephone were to ring just as a would-be suicide were ready to put a gun to his temple, his walking over to take the phone call, might stop his auto-hypnosis about self-destruction.

Indeed, a good dose of Epsom Salts would likewise take his mind off the gun or bottle of sleeping pills.

And to play a game of tennis or compete in baseball, swimming, track or even take a hike, would activate his internal physiology.

Which, in turn, would change his melancholic outlook.

Did you ever hear of a person committing suicide while engaging in athletic events?

Ever see a suicide occur on a bowling alley, baseball diamond, tennis courts, etc.?

Have you ever read an account of anybody killing himself even while walking the dog?

Suicidal psychology can be charted by a triangle with these 3 corners:

- (1) All alone;
- (2) Inactive;
- (3) Indulging in self-pity.

Change any one of those corners of that "suicide triangle" and you can prevent the most common cause of death among college students!

For example, being "All alone" means not just being without an immediate human companion.

It also includes the despair of a person who has lost his mate or his child or even his faithful pet dog.

"Being alone" likewise indicates lack of an active faith in God, for God's co-workers are "No. Never Alone," as the church hymn states.

When people are also indulging in self-pity, as by feeling sorry for themselves, they need both the ego-inflation of honest compliments from their comrades.

Which is why I stress the "Compliment Club" so frequently.

But they likewise should be extroverted in outlook till they are focussing on other people, projects or altruistic concerns, such as hospitals for crippled children.

When introverted Silas Marner adopted little Eppie, he became wrapped up in her welfare rather than his own selfishness.

The final corner of that "suicide triangle" involves getting the potential victim into action.

Physical activity thus zooms your heart action and blood pressure, thus waking your sluggish brain from the auto-hypnotic trance that leads to suicidal notions.

So send for the "Compliment Club" booklet, enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., N. 10th St., Pampa, Texas 79064. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of the booklets.)

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The magazine Psychology Today has an article suggesting that doctors tend to overlook the remarkable curative power of sugar pills.

Studies show that the sugar pill, or placebo, is 56 per cent as effective as morphine and 54 per cent as effective as aspirin when given as a pain-killer, the magazine says.

It quotes Dr. Frederick J. Evans of the Institute of Pennsylvania Hospital as saying "we should treat the placebo as a standard item in the physician's black bag."

According to Evans, two placebo capsules work better than one. Very large brown or purple sugar pills, or tiny bright red or yellow ones, are more effective than other color and size combinations.

Gets Better Results
The patient responds better if the placebo has an unpleasant taste, and a placebo injection gets better results than an oral dose. Or non-dose.

This is all very well, I suppose, as long as sugar pills remain in the category of ethical, or prescription, medication.

But unless strict controls are exercised, articles of this type could lead to yet another form of drug abuse.

The pill-poppers in today's drug culture will try just about anything in their quest for new highs, lows and in-between.

Once they learn that sugar pills are 56 per cent as effective as morphine, there'll be a placebo pusher on every street corner.

What I dread more than sugar pill addiction, however, is the possibility that placebos will fall into the hands of those over-the-counter drug companies that advertise on television.

The Familiar Figure
Here's the familiar figure in the white smock standing behind an array of bottles.

"How often have you heard it said that all sugar pills are alike?" he says, a faint smile attesting to the absurdity of such a notion.

"The fact is that all sugar pills are not alike. Clinical tests show that Psychosomatic Sugar Pills are purer and more effective than all competing brands."

"Psychosomatics work better because they are big and purple and hard to swallow and taste simply gosh-awful. What is more they cost almost as much as the most potent prescription drug."
