Rag-tag Somalis fight 20th Century enemy

By BRIAN JEFFRIES

SHILABO, Ethiopia (AP) — Mohammed Abdulahi Aden is only 12 years old.

He stood in a clearing in the bush with a French-made automatic rifle slung over his shoulders.

The rifle was almost as big as he was, but he carried it proudly, as a warrior should.

"I am a member of the Western Somali Liberation Front army," he announced.

"And I am fighting for my land."

Bloodied but still defiant, ethnic Somalis living in Ethiopia's eastern Ogaden region are continuing a war stretching back 15 years.

Aimed at freeing them from Ethiopian rule, the war is waged against an opposition that includes thousands of Cuban troops, tens of thousands of Ethiopian soldiers and sophisticated Soviet-supplied equipment.

Since the Cubans and Soviet military advisers spearheaded an Ethiopian offensive eight months ago, sweeping through the region to recapture it from the guerrillas and regular Somalian troops, the Ogaden war has slipped from public view.

But a three-day trip through part of the Ogaden — the first made by foreign journalists since the March offensive — found that the ethnic Somalis who populate the area have lost none of their fighting spirit. They are determined to press forward with their "war of liberation" — one they consider no different from others that have ended colonial rule in Africa.

The mostly nomadic Ogaden Somalis — numbering between 2 million and 4 million and of the same ethnic stock as the people of neighboring Somalia — are intensely nationalistic. The region has been part of Ethiopia since its conquest in the late 19th century.

But the Somalis consider themselves to be colonized and complain that the world fails to recognize this because the colonization was by black Ethiopians rather than by white settlers from beyond Africa's shores.

When the full-scale war ended and the regular Somali troops pulled back across the border, WSLF officials say, the guerrillas were left with no option but to pull back from their positions, disperse into the countryside and regroup for what they anticipate will be a protracted hit-and-run war.

They are now concentrating on isolating the Ethiopians and Cubans in the towns and cutting their supply lines. In this objective at least, they appear to be successful.

Shilabo is one of the few towns still held by the guerrillas, although it has been deserted for three months after a series of bombing raids by Ethiopian planes. Many of the population of 6,000 are hiding out in the bush fearing further raids. But others have regrouped nearby, building themselves a temporary village of thatched huts and loosely woven shelters of branches.

They hope the village is difficult for Ethiopian fighter planes to spot from the air. So far the village has escaped unscathed.

It is the headquarters for a WSLF committee that oversees a region embracing 100,000 people, says Hussain Muhammed Hassan, the committee's chairman. The committee is responsible for mobilizing the entire

Oil tanker explodes; 36 dead, missing

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Frogmen searched the sunken wreckage of an oil tanker in Manila Bay today looking for at least 30 crewmen missing after a deafening explosion ripped the ship apart.

The underwater rescuers had penetrated the sunken stern of the 20,824-ton ship and were probing the engine room and cabins where most of the missing crewmen were believed to be.

The Philippine coast guard said five other crewmen and a security guard were known dead and another 21 crewmen were hospitalized, some with serious burns.

Newspaper reports said the crew members were mostly Indonesian and Hong Kong Chinese. The ship, the Feoso Sun, was based in Hong Kong and registered in Panama to Feoso Sun Tankers, S.A.

The ship had already offloaded its cargo of Chinese crude oil when the explosion erupted Wednesday.

"It was empty, and there were fumes, and there probably were sparks from some source that set it off," Coast Guard Cmrd. Simeon Balitas said.

Balitas said the ship had returned to its anchorage and was being surveyed for damage when the blast took place. The tanker was damaged earlier when it rammed the pier while docking.

Balitas said the captain, Ng Wing Sum of Hong Kong, was ashore trying to get clearance from the owners to drydock the ship when the blast shook the area.

The explosion was offshore from Limay, an industrial complex on the Bataan peninsula 30 miles west of here.

"The explosion was deafening, and it thundered through Limay," said Rene D. Herrera, fire protection supervisor at the Bataan Refinery Corp. where the ship had unloaded some 5.9 million gallons of oil.

"Black smoke rose about 1,000 feet above the ship immediately after the explosion," he said.

The blast split the hull and the bow protruded from the water about 1,000 yards offshore.

Experts say water policy restricts development

By MARK VOGLER
R-T Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — The Carter administration's water policy threatens to restrict future agricultural and industrial development in West Texas, according to a panel of state and regional water resource experts.

West Texas, already faced with a critical shortage of water, could find it difficult to develop new water reserves and use current ones because of restrictive policies advocated by the president, participants of a two-day water symposium sponsored by the Texas Tech University Center for Public Service, said here Wednesday.

R-T Special Report

The symposium, titled The Multi-Faceted Water Crisis of West Texas, was to conclude today. Discussions are focusing on methods of water conservation and means of providing West Texas with new supplies.

"The president's water policy is undoubtedly going to require some changes in our state water development program. It's definitely going to increase the cost of doing business," said Herbert W. Grubb, director of plannning and development for Texas Department of Water Resources.

George W. McCleskey, legal counsel for the Texas Water Development Board in Lubbock, said Carter, in releasing his national water policy statement in June, proposed measures which would yield opposite results of what he intended.

"It will result in less water becoming available because of non-compliance with new federal regulations. And we may not be able to use some of the water now available because of the new restriction," he said.

Implementation of the president's water policy may have an adverse effect upon the state (of Texas), while having a beneficial effect upon the other states (particularly the Northeast region)," he added.

McCleskey said the Carter Administration is preoccupied with catering to even the most minute environmental concerns at the expense of developing water resources.

Panelists criticized the President's intention to cut back drastically on water projects in the western states. The Carter Administration has taken the position that many of these water projects are necessary and an enormous waste of federal tax dollars.

Emmett Gloyna, Texas reclamation representative of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, said the administration's charges that the western water projects are "pork barrel" are grossly distorted.

During the past 76 years, Gloyna noted, Congress has appropriated about $8.7 billion for construction of reclamation projects across western states.

Of that total, about $7 billion will be repaid to the federal treasury, about half of that with interest, he added.

"Much of the West's economic vitality and its quality of life can be traced directly to the timely development, conservation, regulation and management of its very limited water supplies for the benefit of its people," Gloyna said.

"Reclamation's water deliveries are now producing over $4 billion in annual gross crop value. Our involvement in food, fiber and forage production amounts to about 60 million tons annually.

"This production will meet the annual food requirements of over 36 million people. We have more than 60 million recreation visitor days at our projects each year. Flood control benefits total more than $50 million annually. About 40 billion kilowatt hours of pollution free, non-resource consuming electricity are generated annually by 50 reclamation hydroelectric plants," he said.

Ruth Wright, of the Texas Tech University department of political science, said a Congress ruled by a regional bias is reinforcing the President's water policy, a situation similar to that which occurred during hearings on the national energy legislation.

"There is little Northeast enthusiasm for water projects in both the House and the Senate," she said.

John Specht, Texas director of National Water Resources Association, called the President's policy regressive and said it lacked a national goal.

"Tragically, the environmental assessment and subsequent environmental impact statements have become the tools to delay or stop needed projects in the hands of radical environmentalists and bureaucrats, all at the expense of the consumer," Specht said.

He said the president's definition of water conservation did not conform with the needs of the western states.

"A new definition of conservation as related to water resources is being pressed upon us by the administration which has far-reaching implications. President Carter, in emphasizing the need for water conservation, is advancing a definition which limits use and effectively stops development," he said.

"If we limit the further development of our water resources and experience a continued growth in population, a substantial reduction in per capita water use will be required. While certain efficiencies in water use can and should be accomplished, a basic reduction in water use means a lowering of our national living standards.

"Our efforts should be pointed at raising our living standards, especially for low income segments of our population, not lowering our national standards," said Specht.

Suspended peace justice ousted by voters

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

A 33-year-old former peace justice in Lamesa was ousted from office in Tuesday's election by one of five write-in candidates.

However, the story goes beyond a familiar tale of competition among friendly rivals at election time.

Ex-Peace Justice Richard Don Nelson, the first judge suspended without pay by the state Commission on Judicial Conduct for alleged misconduct, did not even wage a re-election campaign, according to his attorney, Willis Gresham of Lamesa.

Gresham, a member of the law firm of Cayton, Gresham and Fullbright, said late Wednesday, "I would have to say I'm not surprised at the election results in light of the publicity."

He was said he was referring to what he called mostly "negative publicity" generated against his client, Nelson, a Lamesa native.

Nelson is scheduled to be tried Nov. 27 in the 106th Judicial District Court of Dawson County District Judge George H. Hansard in connection with charges against the ex-magistrate.

In fact, Nelson is currently involved in a fight to regain his job and prove his innocence in a court of law in connection with three burglary charges and one charge of official

Reflections on a thing called politics

By LINDA HILL
R-T Staff Writer

The system of political campaigns in Texas and elsewhere is without question too long and too expensive and too wearing on candidates and the public.

But somehow it manages to work anyway.

How it works may be best understood by looking at a typical campaign stop. Let's go to Lamesa or Del Rio or Amarillo with a statewide candidate.

There he is — future governor or future senator — coat off, shaking hands, talking and, above all, listening.

Yes, it's superficial. The candidate likely knows only what his staff assistant has told him about the locale — and he learned that scant moments before his arrival.

And, as the skeptics contend, he may well forget or seem to forget everything he's been told once he gets to Austin or Washington.

Crowds may be sparse as well.

But the point is this: Everyone in town has a chance to, as John Tower says, "look into the whites of his eyes," size him up and tell him what's wrong with the government.

And a surprising assortment of people come.

Gnarled men in jeans and workshirts, talking about the price of diesel.

The local banker, with a "tight money frown" on his face, pulling the candidate aside to talk about federal regulation.

Housewives asking about inflation or the Panama Canal.

Usually it's a partisan group, rounded up by the local campaign organizer. But the concerns don't vary much with the party or the candidate or the town.

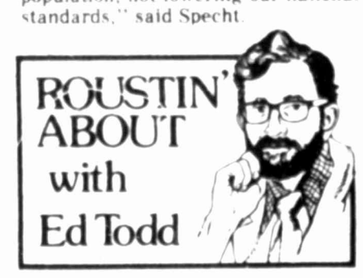
The people who come have a refreshing lack of reverence for power...it's "Hi, John," without regard for position on a Senate committee.

Despite what the candidate or his staff or the media may think, these people know they're the boss.

It seems impossible that once elected the politician can forget he's got to face those same people next time around.

Austin or Washington have their bureaucracies and their mountains of forms which make government seem impersonal and distant. And, of course, it often is.

But, sure as death and taxes, once every four or six years, government comes home.



"If you don't see it, we probably don't have it," said the honest shopkeeper.

She seemed fascinated by the junk, the discards of others, which somehow ended up in a trading post for antiques.

"I just get the biggest kick working in here, because you run into so many things," said Edith Higdon, who's a sometimes shopkeeper for Lewis and Orva Snodgrass's Tall City Trading Post.

The post's owners were out tending to other business, and Mrs. Higdon was minding the store. Business was exceedingly slow. She browsed around at least as much as a first-time customer might.

She picked up an old, old parasol. It was such an old, neglected, weathered antique that its fabric was rotted or torn away. It was a skeleton.

"Now," she asked, "just who would buy this thing?" Somebody will, and, at today's inflated prices, probably will pay far more for it than it cost new.

The shop was pretty well crowded with items — bottles, pens, dolls, old phonographs, railroad lamps, glass menagerie, knives, linen, records, old-timey photographs, furniture, tableware...just anything you'd expect to find — or not find — in an antique-junk store.

And if you're looking for something in particular, such as an old printer's brass pica pole, well, you're sure not misconduct lodged against him, said Gresham.

Judges who are suspended but later acquitted of charges may be restored to their jobs with any back pay owed, according to Maurice Pipkin, executive diretor of the state Commission on Judicial Conduct.

"There has just been a tremendous amount of negative publicity against my client," claimed Gresham.

"You understand Mr. Nelson did not get out and campaign. He was just being bombarded with publicity. I don't think that everything that's been printed has been fair."

The lawyer said he believes the only thing to do "is to go to trial. I think it can be tried in a week."

Despite the so-called negative publicity, Gresham indicated he has no plans now of seeking a change of venue for the trial location.

"We and Mr. Nelson have confidence in the independence, fairness and honesty of the citizens of Dawson County," he said. "I just don't think the people of Dawson County will let a man be convicted in the media."

Nelson, whose name was the only one to appear on the ballot, saw two write-in candidates top his own vote results by nearly 1,000, according to officials.

Emerging as the winner was John F. Parchman, a farmer and former distributor of wholesale gas. He tallied 1,534 votes to Nelson's total of 158.

Fernando Vera, Richard W. Meador, R.F. Spayberry and Shirley H. McGlaun also ran in the race.

The post is now held by Mrs. David Harris, who was sworn into office earlier this year by County Judge Leslie Pratt.

Said Parchman late Wednesday, "When Mr. Nelson was suspended, myself and some others got involved in a write-in effort."

He said he was the first of the five people to jump into the race. "I just had a lot of interest in the job," he said.

"I simply want to try to make a good justice of the peace."

He emphasized fairness and honesty as the backbone of his campaign efforts, he added.

A Dawson County resident the past 50 years, Parchman emphasized fairness and honest as his qualifications for the JP position.

Nelson's suspension cannot be appealed by law until until the four county grand jury indictments against him have been cleared up, according to officials.

Nelson was indicted by a Dawson County grand jury July 13.

The decision to suspend Nelson marked the first test of a change in the state constitution made Nov. 8, 1977. This change granted the state Commission on Judicial Conduct the authority to "suspend with or without pay any state judge indicted in state or federal court pending the outcome of those indictments."

The ex-peace justice has been indicted on one count of official misdoncut in connection with an incident March 16, when, according to the indictment, he "did intentionally and knowingly misapply a thing of value belonging to the government...public funds, to wit, U.S. currency that had come into his possession by virtue of his office."

Following his arrest on June 28, Nelson was arraigned before Judge Pratt. He is now free on bonds totaling $8,000. Up until the decision made by commission members in July, Nelson continued to serve as peace justice.

Nelson, reached late Wednesday, said he had no comment other than to say his third pre-trial hearing was to be at 10 a.m. today in the 106th Judicial District Court of Judge Hansard.

Although Gresham earlier had talked of challenging the suspension of his client by the state, he indicated Wednesday the main order of business now is to follow through on the trial.

When Nelson initially was reached for comment in July in connection with the charges leveled against him, he replied, "I'm innocent until proven guilty."

Justice of the peace courts in Texas have original jurisdiction in civil cases where the amount in contention does not exceed $200.

These same courts also function as small claims courts in disputes over unpaid wages and salaries as along as the contested amount does not exceed $200 and in instances of uncollected bills where the amount does not exceed $150.

Both misdemeanor traffic cases and non-traffic misdemeanor cases are heard in justice of the peace courts in Texas.

Davis reportedly nearly scuttled FBI surveillance

HOUSTON (AP) — An FBI agent says an unidentified man almost scuttled a surveillance operation critical to the state's murder-for-hire case against millionaire Cullen Davis.

That man, agent Jerry Hubbell ~~later~~ learned, was Davis.

The Fort Worth industrialist is on trial, accused of masterminding a scheme to kill the judge who presided over his high-stakes divorce case. The judge was not killed.

Hubbell, the state's second witness, faced a new round of defense cross-examination today. The silver-haired Dallas agent told Wednesday how Davis stumbled the FBI unit monitoring his pivotal meeting August 20 with David McCrory, his chief accuser.

"It scared them," prosecutor Tolly Wilson said of the four agents in the van. "They thought the whole deal was blown."

Hubbell testified that a man he could not identify approached the unmarked FBI van that morning and that it was packed with cameras and videotape euipment.

Unknown to Davis, McCrory, 40, was wired for sound.

The state contends Davis agreed to meet McCrory there to deliver $25,000 for a "hit man" hired to kill a Fort Worth judge.

Davis, 45, is on trial accused of soliciting the murder of Joe Eidson, his divorce judge. It was a murder that never came off.

Agent Hubbell testified that he and three other agents had been at the parking lot only a short time when he heard a car drive up.

He said "blackout curtains" prevented him from identifying the driver, but that he could see his silhouette when he climbed from his car.

"I could hear the motor of the vehicle parked beside the van," he said. "I could see the shadow of an individual...from a rear window."

Asked by a prosecutor what happened next, Hubbell replied:

"I heard somebody outside knocking on the side of the van."

Q: Did you or the other agents make your presence known?

A: No, we did not.

Q: How long was the man there?

A: Less than a minute.

Although Hubbell did not identify the man as Davis, other principals in the case did so. And the videotape collected that morning is among the most incriminating evidence in the case.

The first comment on a transcript of the taped encounter between Davis and McCrory alluded to Davis' suspicions about the unmarked van.

"Just paranoid," he is quoted as telling McCrory at the outset of that critical meeting.

A second FBI agent testified earlier he was told by McCrory that Davis would pay up to $80,000 to have Judge Eidson killed by the hit man. According to McCrory, the agent said, the Fort Worth industrialist was prepared to pay a contract killer hundreds of thousands of dollars to dispose of the judge and others.

Agent Ron Jannings testified McCrory provided him a number of price tags for the murders of Davis' "enemies."

FBI informant cites defense smokescreen

HOUSTON (AP) — A mystery figure in the murder-for-hire trial of millionaire Cullen Davis contends that defense attorneys are using him as a "smoke screen."

"They would not subpoena me as a witness. It would be cutting their own throat," said David Binion, 34. "Richard Haynes would like to have me as a mystery man. I'm being used. Priscilla Davis has never asked me to murder anyone. Haynes knows it because I have told him so."

Binion's name surfaced in testimony Monday when Haynes, chief defense lawyer, asked an FBI agent if he knew that Davis' estranged wife Priscilla had tried to hire Binion to kill Davis.

The Fort Worth industrialist is accused of soliciting the murder of the judge who was presiding in his divorce case. The trial was transferred to Houston on a change of venue.

The FBI agent, Ron Jannings, declined to answer questions about Binion, citing federal laws which protect the identity of informants.

Binion told the Houston Post he had decided to make himself available for comment because Haynes' mention of his name had caused a great deal of trouble among his acquaintances here. Binion said he has lived in Houston for six months, working as an automobile salesman. Before that, he said, he lived in Fort Worth and helped in an FBI investigation of illegal betting.

Haynes was coy with reporters when asked about Binion but his associate, Phil Burleson, said, "We contend that David Binion is the man Priscilla tried to hire to kill Cullen."

Binion denied this.

"I talked to Priscilla three or four times. She called at my former place of business and said she would like to see me," Binion said of the contact last year.

"But friends said it would be best if I did not see her. But last winter I went to her house. In the position I was in I expected her to propose something like that."

count.

"I'm just waiting for whatever happens," he said. "I don't know if he (Welch) is going to ask for a recount. If he asks, I'll have to wait and see what the outcome is."

Welch, though, when asked about the situation today, said he was not considering a recount.

"It's the reporters who are asking about it."

If there is less than a 5 percent difference in votes between candidates, the election code states the loser can ask for a recount automatically, according to Ernest Angelo Jr.

The person asking for a recount must do so within 48 hours after the "official declaration," which could be considered the canvass.

Votes will be canvassed Monday for the official results. Final count Tuesday showed the tally to be 2,496 for Snoddy and 2,475 for Welch.

Meanwhile, Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith continued to station officers over the voting machines Tuesday night because of the slim margin by Snoddy.

Smith said today it was an agreement among the election board to safeguard the boxes pertaining to the commissioner's race.

Other members of the board are County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry; Darrell Smith, Democratic county chairman; Bill Shaner, Republican county chairman, and Blake Hansen, county judge.

"We were not questioning the activities of any personnel at the boxes," Smith said.

"We have to answer for the security of this equipment."

Officers began "guarding" the voting machines Wednesday. The machines have been taken to a county facility and have been kept separate from other voting machines, Sheriff Smith noted.

Tuesday's was the first election effort by Snoddy, a Midland oilman for 27 years. He ran on the platform of reducing the commissioners' salaries and pulling out county support of Midland Community Action Agency.

Welch, a farmer and rancher, had been on the commission 10 years. He campaigned on the basis that property taxes in the county had not been raised for several years.

Election won't harm SALT, says Carter

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Carter said Thursday he does not believe approval of an arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union has been jeopardized by Republican gains in the Senate.

Carter told a nationally televised news conference he anticipates a tough fight in the Senate for approval of a new SALT agreement but that he believes both "liberals and conservatives, Republicans and Democrats" would favor a balanced pact.

On other topics, Carter said:

—The administraion probably won't drop the so-called farm set-aside program in which farmers reduce the numbers of acres planted with corn, wheat and other grains. In exchange, the farmers receive federal price supports for their crops.

to find it.

But you find what you're not looking for, and that's interesting.

Mrs. Higdon wandered to the center of the shop — it was a tight squeeze — and picked up some decades-old hand-embroidered linen. She wondered how something like that, which she figured should have sentimental value for someone, ended up in the trading post.

"This was in somebody's hope chest, maybe 50 years ago, I guess, and you wonder what happened to them."

She picked up a photograph of a World War I doughboy and seemed puzzled why it didn't stay in somebody's family.

Nearby were a few stacks of old Edison 78-rpm quarter-inch records from the late 1910s and 1920s. There were old foxtrot dance recordings and such titles as "Swanee River," "Dreamer of Dreams," "Dear Old Southland," "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" and "What A Friend We Have in Jesus."

"Those are really old," Mrs. Higdon said, as if she were willing to reminisce. "They were old when I was a kid." She's 68.

"I guess I used to dance to them when I was 14 and 15 years old."

Indeed, she used to dance to the foxtrot.

"When I was young, the Charleston was the rage," she recalled.

She sauntered over to a shelf of 40- to 50-year-old glassware. They called it "depression glass," because back then it was cheap, was given away as prizes at the Friday night movie and because the Great Depression had struck the nation.

Still looking around the shop more like a browser than a shopkeeper, Mrs. Higdon commented on this n' that and pondered: "Anymore, it's hard to tell the real McCoy from reproductions."

After working her way to the front of the shop, Mrs. Higdon paused.

"Here's some nostalgia for you — the churn, the anvil, and.... What do you call that?... the kettle and the piano stool."

Unquestionably, she very much likes working in the shop.

"I'm sort of odd, I guess," she said, because most people wouldn't like that sort of work and might not get a thrill or quiet satisfaction over thinking about things from the past.

Mrs. Higdon picked something unfamiliar to her.

"What do you suppose this was?" she asked.

She'd think about it, and then would go on to something else.

area for the war effort. Other regional committees carry on the same work throughout the Ogaden and are the keystones of the WSLF structure, say guerrilla officials.

Each regional committee is divided into sections responsible for political, economic and defense affairs. The most important is defense, said Hassan.

That section picks recruits for the regular WSLF guerrilla army fighting at the fronts, gives universal military training to civilians to enable them to protect themselves, advises on the best way to disperse camels, goats and other livestock from water wells during an air attack and provides manpower to remove the wounded from the battlefields.

"We have no problem recruiting people to fight," Hassan said. "Everybody volunteers, men and women, but the committee keeps back those like the younger children and the elderly."

Not everybody gets a gun. In the town of Jidale, a middle-aged Somali was seen haranguing senior WSLF officials. They explained that he was complaining that the regional committee was refusing to arm him.

"But we dare not do so," said one official. "He is a little unstable and we fear that if we give him a gun, he will rush off into the Ethiopian lines and get himself killed."

The Cubans and Russians have inspired more hatred than even the Ethiopians, since they came to Ethiopia's aid and turned the tide of the war against the Somalis just when they appeared about to capture the entire region.

In a guerrilla line blockading the town of Kebri Dehare, one fighter recounted how he and a group of comrades dug up the body of a Cuban killed in a battle with the WSLF and placed a slain guerrilla in the grave.

"We wanted a man who fought for his land to be buried in the land — not a Cuban," he said. "We left the Cuban to the hyenas."

Frost gone for a while

The frost which shrouded vehicle windshields here earlier this week is not expected to reappear for a couple of days, said the weatherman.

In fact, warmer temperatures today and Friday are forecast for the Midland area by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast calls for fair temperatures through Friday with today's high predicted in the mid-70s. The low tonight is expected to drop into the mid-50s.

The high Friday is predicted in the low 80s with winds from the southwest from 10 to 15 mph tonight.

Today's overnight low of 41 degrees was far off the record low of 27 degrees set in 1948 for a Nov. 9. And Wednesday's high of 68 degrees was well below the record high of 87 degrees set in 1934.

Winds today and tonight are to be southwesterly at 10 to 15 mph.

Sunset today is to be at 5:53 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow is to happen at 7:13 a.m.

Capital walk 'brought home' Clements triumph

By GARTH JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bill Clements walked under the vast rotunda of Texas' pink granite Capitol and it hit him for the first time that he would be the state's first Republican governor in 105 years.

"It brought home for the very first time that it really happened," the 61-year-old multi-millionnaire who was once an oil field roughneck, told a Capitol news conference Wednesday.

Clements, who had never made a political race before, was declared surprise winner over Democrat John Hill, attorney general and former secretary of state, by 16,000 votes.

The latest vote totals from all 254 counties, 245 complete, showed Clements with 1,181,562 and Hill 1,165,863.

"I will be governor for all Texans, including those who voted for Mr. Hill," he told the news conference. "The future of Texas needs all of us working together ... My campaign isn't over. It's just beginning because now I have the duty to put into practice my ideas and your ideas for making our state even greater."

Clements repeated that "I am a Texan down to the toenails, and I suspect that is why I was elected."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe, whose third-term plans were thwarted by Hill in the May primary, congratulated Clements and promised to work for "a smooth and orderly transition."

Clements visited Briscoe at the Governor's Mansion late Wednesday, posing for pictures at the back door.

Briscoe said the results of the election should be a signal to Texas Democrats that "we need to begin now to rebuild the Democratic Party of Texas and to infuse a new spirit of vitality in our party." He said he would dedicate himself to "return the Democratic Party of Texas to dominance in this state."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who won easy re-election, said he did not see party differences as a "big deal" in the 1979 Legislature where Clements will face 25 Republicans and 126 Democratic lawmakers.

Hill told a news conference "there's nothing to cry about. We've run a real strong race ... It was just the other side got more votes, they got the people out and they won the election."

Hill did say that he did not get the vote expected in Bexar (San Antonio) and Tarrant (Fort Worth) counties. "In Midland-Odessa we didn't run very well."

Hill said he would step out of public life and become an Austin lawyer. Before being appointed secretary of state by Gov. John Connally, Hill was a successful plaintiff's attorney in Houston.

Earlier, Clements said he sees no problems in working with a predominantly Democratic state legislature.

"The legislature has essentially the same outlook I do, and they are essentially conservative," Clements said shortly after being declared the winner.

Clements said much of the credit for his win went to the 25,000 volunteer workers who worked long hours in his headquarters. He called his good-looking brunette wife, Rita, his "secret weapon," because she campaigned constantly, either with him or in separate tours.

Clements said he was "most happy with the results and deeply honored," but he was taking every effort to insure the returns reported unofficially will be preserved for Monday's official canvass in the 254 counties. He said he had no specific example of vote handling irregularities, "but this is a just a precaution."

Texas' last Republican governor was Edmund Jackson Davis, who held office from mid-December 1869 until mid-January of 1974 when he was removed both by defeat in an election and by an order of President U.S. Grant. He was elected by a margin of only 908 votes in an election held under military rule of Reconstruction days. A Union general supervised the election and there were no Democratic Party candidates in the race.

Davis, a brigadier general of two regiments of Texas loyalists in the Union Army, was defeated by a margin of 50,000 votes in the 1873 election by Richard Coke, a Waco Democrat. Coke was installed as governor by the legislature on the second floor of the Capitol. However, Davis refused to evacuate his offices on the first floor, guarded by black militia. President Grant broke the deadlock with a terse order to "Vacate your office."

Clements, who pitted his business skills against Hill's political expertise, overtook Hill in the counting early Wednesday after the pair waged a see-saw battle through Tuesday night.

Observers credited Clements' win largely to his $6.4 million campaign and the border-to-border organization of paid professional and volunteers. He took full credit for the fallout from the Proposition 13 movement, advancing his own programs for curtailment of state spending and tax relief.

Hill was criticized for allegedly relaxing after his surprising defeat of Gov. Dolph Briscoe in the Democratic primary and spending more time planning for his gubernatorial tenure than opposing Clements. As late as Tuesday night Hill claimed his surveys and his staffers assured him he would "win big" over Clements.

Church group at noon meeting

The "His Group," a musical ensemble from the First Baptist Church, was featured in a special musical program presented Wednesday noon at the meeting of the Downtown Lions Club in the Midland Hilton.

The group, including students from Midland and Lee high schools, is directed by David Campbell, minister of music at First Baptist.

The vocal numbers included "Sunshine in My Soul," "23rd Psalm," "Mirror," "Stop Look and Listen," and "One in the Bond of Love."

Leslie Park was presented in a bassoon solo, "Beneath the Cross of Jesus," accompanied by Mr. Campbell.

The program was arranged and introduced by Duke Jimerson.

Carter introduces new measure for toughening judge selection

By RONALDD J. OSTROW
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Carter issued standards Wednesday for choosing 152 new federal judges on the basis of merit.

Attorney General Griffin B. Bell, discussing the standards with reporters, indicated that he would undertake a major effort to persuade more senators to use a judicial selection commission in recommending federal district judges.

Bell said that he had promised Chief Justice Warren E. Burger that 80 percent of the 17 district court judges and 35 circuit court of appeals judges would be named and confirmed by the Senate by April 1.

But Bell said that that timetable did not apply if the Senate Judiciary Committee for the first time conducts full-scale investigations of the nominees, separate from those conducted by the executive branch.

Bell said he had no information that such inquiries might be conducted by the committee, which will be headed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., when the Senate returns in January. But Kennedy is known to be considering conducting much broader inquiries, possibly with investigators to be added to the committee's staff.

Salute to Veterans

Veterans Day this year returns to its traditional Nov. 11 observance date, nationwide, and this is as it should be.

It should never have been changed. The traditional date, of course, stems from Armistice Day, which commemorated the signing of the armistice ending World War I on Nov. 11, 1918. It officially received its name in 1926 and became a national holiday by act of Congress in 1938.

It was in 1954 that President Eisenhower signed into law a bill which renamed Nov. 11 as Veterans Day, an occasion to honor the veterans of all wars in which the United States has been involved.

This was perfectly satisfactory with most everyone, but then a few years ago Veterans Day somehow got tangled up in the "long holiday weekend" legislation, which changed the date to the fourth Monday in October.

This was not at all pleasing to the general public, particularly to members of servicemen's organizations. The hue and cry which went up gained the ear of Congress and, in 1975, the date was changed back to Nov. 11, effective in 1978. The Texas Legislature got the jump on Congress by enacting legislation in 1975, changing the date back to Nov. 11 immediately.

So, the Veterans Day matter now is back in order and most Americans apparently are happy about it.

But regardless of all this, Veterans Day remains one of the most significant, most patriotic and most meaningful of our state and national holidays.

It is fitting, indeed, that Americans should pause on this annual occasion to honor all the men and women who have served in the uniform of the United States of America.

They certainly have made a contribution to the preservation of the nation's freedom, while also striving to expand freedom around the world.

And this same tribute is expressed also to all those persons serving in today's armed forces at home and abroad.

There is something about Veterans Day which brings out the spirit of patriotism among most citizens of this great and free land. And there certainly is nothing wrong in a proud display of patriotism on this or any other occasion.

Servicemen's organizations here and across the land are joining with other groups in sponsoring and staging events of various kinds to commemorate the occasion.

Let's all join in the spirit of the observance by at least flying our flags Saturday as an expression of the sincere appreciation to American veterans for the contributions they have made through the years in gaining and preserving the freedom of this great nation.

Mahon papers to Tech

Texas Tech University is fortunate, indeed, to be the recipient of the accumulated paperwork of Congressman George Mahon's 44 years in Congress.

The Library of Congress, the Smithsonian Institute and the LBJ Library at The University of Texas all had sought the records, but the Texas Tech archives won the big prize. And it is a big and most valuable collection.

The congressman is retiring from Congress and now is in the process of "closing shop" in Washington.

More than 700 boxes, containing 2,000 papers each, already have started arriving at Tech.

"The other institutions wanted the papers, but we think Mr. Mahon felt Tech was the logical place all along," David Murrah, university archivest and director of the Southwest Collections, said. He undoubtedly is correct in his observation. This is great for Tech and great for West Texas, which is Mahon country.

Murrah said it will take at least a year to process the bulk of the material.

Plans for a formal dedication of the papers to research are in the planning stages.

ART BUCHWALD

To have or have not; that is the question

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The meanest thing about inflation is that it is making so many HAVES and HAVE NOTS. How does one distinguish between a HAVE and a HAVE NOT? It's done by a federal bureau in Washington, which sends you a registered letter when your standard of living falls below that of everyone else around you. If you are officially designated a HAVE NOT you are eligible for all sort of government benefits, though your credit rating in the private sector is marked "deadbeat."

I went to the Bureau of Haves and Have Nots to talk to an official who was keeping score.

He was at his desk, with a large stack of files, stamping HAVE or HAVE NOT on the top of each folder.

"This must be tough work. It can't be much fun making a HAVE into a HAVE NOT."

"I don't make them into HAVE NOTS. Inflation does that. For example, look at this file. This family makes $18,000 a year; they have a small house and a car. A few years ago there was no question that they belonged to the HAVES in this country. But now they must be considered part of the HAVE NOTS. They're just not making it any more."

"But why?" I asked.

"They're living over their heads to keep up with the Joneses. The ironic part of it is that the Joneses are living over their heads to keep ahead of these people, and therefore we had to put the Joneses in the HAVE NOT pile as well."

"The Joneses are also HAVE NOTS?" I said shocked.

"That is correct. When you get into double-digit inflation you'd be surprised how fast HAVES become HAVE NOTS.

"This fellow here had all his money invested in the stock market. In one month he became a HAVE NOT — and so, by the way, did his broker."

"How long has your bureau been in existence?"

"It started during the Roosevelt era when a majority of the people were HAVE NOTS, and the HAVES could be counted on your fingers. Then World War II came, and the HAVE NOTS were determined to come back from the armed forces and become HAVES. They did, by going to school and working their tails off. Many moved to the suburbs where they thought they had found The American Dream. But although they were HAVES in other people's eyes, in their hearts they were HAVE NOTS, because they were always afraid someone would take everything they had away from them.

"The post-World War II HAVES decided that because they were originally HAVE NOTS, their children would lack nothing. So the kids were raised as first generation HAVES, and didn't know what it was like to do without. It ruined a lot of them. and I've heard many HAVE PARENTS say that if they had to do it all over again they would raise their children as HAVE NOTS."

"Apparently, from your HAVE NOT pile of folders many of them will soon have the opportunity."

The official said, "The problem is that a lot of HAVES could remain HAVES if they just weren't so worried about what other HAVES think about how they live."

"Do you find many HAVE NOTS becoming HAVES?"

"All the time. I would say more than 50 percent of the children of HAVE NOTS in this country eventually wind up as HAVES."

"What do you do with all the folders after you mark them?"

"We tally them and send the figures out to every politician in the country. At the moment the pols are still aiming all their rhetoric at the HAVES — but if inflation keeps making many more HAVE NOTS, you'll be surprised how fast the politicians change their tune."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Depression is potential threat

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — There is one electrifying word that sends President Carter right up the wall. It is mentioned only in hushed tones in the backrooms of the White House. The word is "depression."

There has been sober, open talk that the president's latest money manipulations may dry up credit, slow the economic machinery and throw the economy into a stall. Even White House economists acknowledge frankly that the slowdown could cause a recession.

But behind closed doors, they are beginning to use the forbidden word. They fear an economic setback in the United States could cause a downslide that would be hard to stop. The ingredients are present in the Western world, they confide, for a depression.

Several nations have borrowed so heavily to finance their deficits that they have reached their limit. These countries have been under tremendous political pressure to improve living standards. But inflation has swollen the amount that must be borrowed to maintain these standards.

Nations cannot go on borrowing to improve living standards. The money can never be paid back unless it is invested in production instead of consumption. For many countries, the debt is already greater than they can absorb without a financial breakdown.

The bulk of this debt is owed to private financial institutions, including the U.S. banking colossuses. The secret figures, we have been told, exceed $170 billion in bad loans and $290 billion in endangered loans. This has already produced a severe strain on the international banking system.

But skyrocketing prices keep adding to the bad debts until the whole banking system is threatened with collapse. Even a modest oil increase, which the oil skeikdoms say is imminent, would pile billions of dollars more upon the banking burden. A mere 7 percent price rise, which is less than expected, would increase the deficit of the industrial nations by an estimated $52 billion.

If the indebted governments started defaulting on their loans, the shock waves would rock the U.S. banking system. There is doubt in the backrooms that a depression could be averted.

Normally, an economic slowdown should force down prices. But the economic experts fear that the inflationary pressures, like an active volcano, cannot be easily suppressed. They fully expect that people will have to pay higher prices, without the higher incomes to meet their bills.

The experts also have little confidence in President Carter's ability to manage the economy. His inexperience and erratic policies, they fear, increase the economic danger ahead. They are beginning to brace, therefore, for an economic skid.

SPEEDY DELIVERY: For years, drug smugglers have been using small, high-speed airplanes to bring marijuana into this country from Latin America. But recently, according to confidential government documents, drug traffickers have adapted the airborne technique to smuggle hard drugs like heroin and cocaine.

During a two-month period last summer, for example, six seizures of significant amounts of hard drugs were made by the U.S. Customs officers. It's not clear whether the seizures reflect better detection methods by the Customs Service or simply a marked increase in smuggling activity.

Notes one intelligence report: "The fact remains ... that newer, high-speed, expensive aircraft are being increasingly connected with the 'harder' narcotics and pose a serious problem for the Customs Service ...

"The fact that in none of the seizures was there any attempt to conceal the drugs, indicates that the pilots had no intention of clearing Customs, and probably little fear of detection. The type of aircraft used for these smuggling attempts was, in all cases, relatively new and high-speed, able to outrun the opposing Customs aircraft in most instances."

Until recently, it was an easy matter for the jet-borne smugglers to outdistance their federal pursuers. The Customs Service was stuck with an aging fleet of 63 aircraft, one-fourth of which were in the repair shop at any given time. On an investigative trip to Florida, for example, Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., found that not one of the eight planes assigned to that Customs district could even get off the ground.

In the past few months, however, Customs has borrowed four T-39 jets from the Air Force. Equipped with sophisticated radar, the T-39s have a range of 1,400 miles, can cruise all day at 120 miles an hour and can speed up to 525 miles an hour when a suspicious plane is detected.

Footnote: Until the Air Force jets arrived, ironically, the fastest plane Customs had was one that used to belong to fugitive financier Robert Vesco. The Customs Service seized it in Texas a few years ago — one of the few assets Vesco left behind when he fled the country with millions of dollars he is charged with stealing from his mutual funds empire.

U.S. Government hypocrisy on Vietnam revealed

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — This capital is increasingly populated by moral cowards and intellectual pygmies. What else to say about the sudden, post-facto action threatening the immigration status of that former South Vietnamese general who had the bad luck to be photographed and televised while executing a Viet Cong prisoner during the 1968 Tet Offensive?

The poor devil is Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan, who now operates a small restaurant and carry-out in nearby suburban Virginia. He arrived here in April 1975, along with the rest of the 200,000 Vietnamese refugees who fled when the Communists conquered Vietnam.

Now come the Immigration and Naturalization Service claiming that restaurateur Loan must stand a hearing on the status of the permanent residency certificate (green card) which it issued him in 1976. There is a good possibility that I.N.S. will "re-sind" that magic card after arguing that Loan is guilty of "moral turpitude" for executing an out-of-uniform Viet Cong prisoner during the crucial Tet Offensive.

What I.N.S. and two members of Congress who seem determined to get Loan deported, seem to forget is that Saigon was under seige and in great panic during Tet. Indeed, Loan's own officers came back to their barracks and found their wives had been attacked by Viet Cong that day and had their legs cut off. There were many such atrocities committed by Viet Cong in civilian garb and thus eligible to be classified as "unlawful combatants" in international law.

Even the U.S. embassy grounds were penetrated during Tet, in a rampage of killing and destruction by the V.C. who eventually failed their mission.

In the heat of the assault, then Gen. Nguyen Cao Ky (remember that cool mustached fellow?) wanted all out-of-uniform Viet Cong captured, thus making them fair game for execution.

Ky, who now operates a liquor store in Los Angeles, is man enough to take responsibility for Loan's action, brutal as it appeared in newspapers and on TV screens at the time. "If it is thought necessary to persecute Loan, why not also persecute his superiors," Ky said. "I was one of his superiors."

So was South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu. And how about the U.S. Commander, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, or for that matter, President Lyndon B. Johnson, Robert S. McNamara, his defense secretary, and Walt Rostow, LBJ's national security advisor?

Gen. Loan was under orders to ferret out the Viet Cong in civilian clothes and deal with them summarily. Martial law had been declared by President Thieu and military orders to implement it were given by Gen. Ky. Have I.N.S. and Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman (D-N.Y.) and Rep. Harold Sawyer (R-Mich.) no sense of history?

So Gen. Loan lost a leg in combat, and when the Communists ran over his country, fled to the U.S. The State Department and I.N.S. knew who he was when he entered the country, and when he got his green card. But after Holtzman-Sawyer complained and demanded an investigation of any Vietnamese refugees possibly guilty of drug-dealing or war crimes, including Loan, the Carter Administration decided to go after Loan.

I would like to ask President Carter, Attorney General Griffin Bell, I.N.S. Commissioner Leonard Castillo and the aforementioned righteous Congress persons — none of whom went through Tet — if the U.S. was indeed involved in Vietnam, that in fact, it turned out to be our war, should we not be honest enough to accept responsibility for what went on there?

Does anyone really think it would be just to not only take away Loan's green card, but to deport him as well?

The law protects him from being deported to any nation which would persecute him, so it is virtually certain he would not be returned to Hanoi for any trial the Communists have in mind for him.

I think that Loan should be let be. He, his wife and five children have made a quiet life for themselves in America, were welcomed here by our government which was apparently grateful for his anti-Communism at one stage in his life.

The United States doesn't show much integrity if it leads such people to believe one set of facts at one time, and then punishes them later for the same set of facts.

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE

Russian phone really bugged

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians' telephone at the White House is still bugged.

Among the dozen or so telephones mounted on a wall in the White House press room for news organizations which regularly cover the president is one for Tass, the Soviet news agency.

More than a year ago, a waggish radio reporter picked a dead cockroach from a loudspeaker in the press room — it had been caught on the speaker's fabric front for weeks — and placed it in the telephone mouthpiece.

His gag was widely reported at the time, but it apparently went unnoticed by his Soviet colleagues. With White House press secretary Jody Powell looking on, a recent check by reporters determined that the "bug" was still in place.

BEWARE OF TWO Southern gentlemen bearing rooster pepper sausage.

That may sound like reasonable advice, given the name of the concoction. But two Southerners presented some to President Carter recently and the president proclaimed it the best sausage he ever tasted.

He may have been the butt of a bit of put-on.

It seems that his friends Griffin Bell, the attorney general, and Charles Kirbo, an Atlanta lawyer, called on Carter with something they called "rooster pepper sausage." Carter had it for breakfast one morning with homemade biscuits and grits.

Prior to sampling the Bell-Kirbo offering, Carter had said the sausage his father made on their south Georgia farm was the best he ever ate, according to Powell. But now, says Powell, the president has changed his tune and declared rooster pepper sausage No. 1.

But Powell expresses a bit of skepticism about the existence of rooster peppers, let alone rooster pepper sausage. He suggests two possibilities must be considered:

"One, the president is putting me on.

"Two, Judge Bell and Squire Kirbo are putting on not only the rest of the country, but the president, too."

ALSO BEWARE of a Southern lady playing poker.

William Fitzgerald, a Michigan state senator, didn't take that advice and now he's sorry. The Southern lady in this case was Lillian Carter, the president's mother.

The president, speaking at a Democratic rally in Flint, Mich., disclosed his mother's poker-playing skills while urging voters to support Fitzgerald's gubernatorial campaign, which turned out to be unsuccessful.

Fitzgerald and Miss Lillian were members of the U.S. delegation at the funeral in Rome of Pope John Paul I. On the flight home, someone started a friendly poker game and Miss Lillian joined in. So did Fitzgerald.

"He shouldn't have done it," Carter said. "As a result, his campaign finances have been reduced by my own mother."

Court sets aside death conviction

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday set aside the death penalty conviction of Felix Garcia Ochoa and set a rigid standard for providing counsel to accused persons before they confess.

A Cuero jury assessed Ochoa the death penalty in the July 11, 1976, slaying death of Yorktown policeman William Mullins, who died in the front yard of Ochoa's home.

Mullins had stopped Ochoa after receiving a report his car was weaving back and forth on the road between Cuero and Yorktown. He tried to arrest Ochoa, but Ochoa got into his car and drove off.

Mullins followed Ochoa home, and Ochoa admitted shooting him. At his trial, Ochoa said the reasons for shooting were not explained in the confession he signed. He said he got his pistol out and fired at Mullins only after Mullins drew his gun first.

The court said Ochoa should have been provided a lawyer before he signed anything. It cited the testimony of Sheriff J.R. Adams that Ochoa told him before confessing that "he probably ought to talk to a lawyer or something to this effect."

In ordering a new trial for Ochoa, the court cited the U.S. Supreme Court's "Miranda" decision that says an accused person cannot be questioned without counsel if he "indicates in any manner" that he wants a lawyer.

"We read this language in Miranda literally; where a defendant indicates in any way that he desires to invoke his right to counsel, interrogation must cease," the court said.

It said Ochoa's statements to Adams "were sufficient to invoke his right to counsel."

"Although he did not make a 'formal request' or absolute demand for a lawyer, he did in some manner indicate to Adams that he wanted to exercise his right to counsel," the court said.

In other cases, the court:

— Ordered a new trial in the conviction of Lucien Coleman in Harris County for aggravated robbery. Coleman was assessed life in prison, but the appeals court said the trial court erred in permitting the introduction of evidence of other offenses — the burglary of a residence and theft of an automobile.

— Overturned the sentence of 15 years to life assessed against Charles L. Thornton of Bexar County in the Feb. 17, 1974, robbery of Ruthie Hardin. The court said the trial judge used a prior felony conviction to "enhance" — increase — punishment even though there was no final judgment in that case.

— Reversed the marijuana possession conviction of Alton Eugene Myers, who was assessed a 10-year prison sentence and a $5,000 fine by a Weatherford jury. The court cited final arguments in which the prosecutor asked, "Why would a man have 269 pounds of marijuana?"

The court said this amounted to a comment on the failure of Myers to testify, adding, "The inference from this argument was that it was a quantity that would be possessed only for the purposes of sale."

U.S. hopeful of compromise

By PAUL CHUTKOW

PARIS (AP) — American representatives to the UNESCO conference said Wednesday they are increasingly optimistic that some sort of acceptable compromise can be reached on a controversial draft declaration on the mass media.

"The situation is very fluid," said American delegate William Attwood, publisher of Newsday, the Long Island daily. "Initially, I was rather pessimistic about a compromise but now everyone seems to realize that all would lose in a major confrontation."

The five-week UNESCO policy planning conference continues to be dominated by the media declaration which would encourage journalists and news organizations to combat war propaganda, racism and apartheid.

Attwood, who is helping direct American negotiating on the Soviet-inspired declaration, said as yet there is no Western counter-draft that the United States finds totally acceptable.

"Several groups are trying to draft declarations acceptable to all and we are helpinv each of them," Attwood said. "There is no official American draft, nor will there be."

Attwood said the United States had reservations about all attempted drafts so far, including one written by a group of Western nations led by Italy. It was presented informally Tuesday to some developing and Communist nations. "Nothing yet proposed will be passed in present form," Attwood said. "We have a long way to go toward a consensus draft."

With formal debate on the declaration still a week off, U.S. officials remain hopeful all references to journalists' duties and government enforcement, which are in the current text, will be deleted.

"The United States will never, never agree to any declaration that compromises our First Amendment," one highly placed American official said. "On that, there can be absolutely no compromise, period."

One informal committee discussing one draft Tuesday acknowledged it was bogged down in the wording of the title and the preamble, reflecting the difficulty in achieving unanimty among the conflicting ideologies represented among the 146 members of the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

More than 100 amendments already have been proposed to the declaration. Attwood said, however, that a prior agreement on a unanimously accepted text could short-circuit the problem of the many amendments.

George Beebe, head of the World Press Freedom Committee, said many developing nations appear responsive to two recently announced U.S. offers of assistance in news and communications. These include formation of regional training centers for journalists from the developing world and an offer to make communications satellites available to developing nations wishing to improve broadcasting to their rural areas.

Nevertheless, Beebe said he felt there was little chance of avoiding a "bitter confrontation" over the draft declaration, which several Western journalistsic groups have come here to fight.

Beebe, associate publisher of the Miami Herald, told the UNESCO General Conference his committee represents 32 journalistic organizations on five continents.

Funded by Western media, the committee has sought to correct imbalances in international news flow with grants for training programs and seminars in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean, he said.

Arrest reported in coin thefts

BIG SPRING — Big Spring police arrested a 42-year-old Pasadena man late Tuesday in connection with incidents of coin thefts from machines in two local hospitals.

The man was arrested at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in west Big Spring near Malone-Hogan Hospital. Employees earlier had called police after seeing a man allegedly remove coins from machines, said Detective Avery Falkner.

An estimated $600 in coins was reported taken from the machines, he said. This money has been recovered, said Falkner.

Falkner said police were told earlier today that a similar theft occurred Tuesday at the Veterans Administration Hospital here.

He said a man apparently used sophisticated picks and a variety of keys to open the machines.

"There are people who do this all around the country. They make their living this way," he explained.

Americana artist Norman Rockwell dead at 84

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Artist Norman Rockwell, whose freckled-faced boys, pig-tailed girls, kindly doctors and small town scenes mirrored Americana on Saturday Evening Post covers and Boy Scout calendars in a career spanning six decades, is dead at age 84.

For years, the pale, lean-limbed, pipe-smoking illustrator worked seven days a week — with a half-day off for Christmas — to produce a canvas image of the nation he loved. But he once described himself as "a hack illustrator."

He should be remembered, his wife, Molly, said after his death late Wednesday at his Stockbridge home as "an artist and illustrator ... well-known artist and illustrator."

She said her husband's death was not unexpected, and that he "had been ill a long time." She said, "He didn't die of anything except being 84 years old."

A painting of the Rev. John Sargeant talking to an Indian chief in Sturbridge, Mass., stood unfinished on an easel in a red barn studio behind the white New England-style home. The painting was set in the year 1700 when the missionary Sargeant was trying to convert Indians to Christianity.

Mrs. Rockwell, a slight, white-haired woman with blue eyes, said the painting was about three-quarters completed and that her husband had planned to make changes but had not worked on it for a year. She said the painting would be turned over to the Rockwell museum here.

Mrs. Rockwell said funeral services would be at 2 p.m. Saturday in St. Paul's Episcopal Church in this western Massachusetts community. She said there would be no visitors' hours.

Rockwell's America was a nation of rough-hewn but gentle workingmen, prim grandmothers and soldiers home from the great war. In the turbulent 1960s, it was a nation torn by Vietnam and divided by race.

It was an America of the Four Freedoms, a series of paintings for the Post taken from a speech to Congress by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1941. The paintings became part of the nation's war effort and its rallying cry.

But always it was an America depicted with a passion for visual truth — he worked invariably from live models and props, even to posing a chicken, which he said would "stand just as you've placed him for four or five minutes."

Perhaps the most popular artist in the United States, Rockwell died without attaining status in the world of "real art."

Critics found his work simplistic, corny and superficially photographic — however much he touched and delighted millions.

Rockwell never claimed to be anything more than an illustrator who made a lot of money. "I just do the things, and people pay me very high prices," he told The Associated Press in 1974.

His labors, which began when he left high school at 16, produced uncounted works — including more than 360 covers for the Post, which first bought his illustrations when he was 22. He later switched to Look magazine when the ownership of the Post changed hands.

Although much of his work was nostalgic, he was also an illustrator of his times: he spent 26 straight hours on a Post cover saluting the historic flight of Charles Lindbergh, and depicted Neil Armstrong's footprint on the dusty surface of the moon after the first moonwalk in 1969.

Late in his life, he was often ill and confined to a wheelchair. But in late 1977, he still made occasional journeys to his studio in a barn next to the white colonial home he shared with his third wife, Molly.

"It's hell to grow old," he said then.

Mrs. Rockwell, 82, a retired teacher who married the illustrator in 1961, said shortly after his death that her husband's "work was his passion." His "greatest delight," she said, were his Post covers.

"He was very happy and he was devoted to his work," she told the AP.

Stockbridge, the small western Massachusetts community in the Berkshires that was Rockwell's home and supplied his models for many years, also holds his prime achievements: at the Old Corner House run by the historical society.

There is Norman Rockwell — his originals, appearing larger, wiser, funnier, richer than on the covers of magazines or the 30 years of Boy Scout calendars.

And there, Police Chief William Obanhein was one of the first of many to recall the town's No. 1 citizen. "It's sad," said the police chief. "It's going to be a great loss. ... He was a well-respected man ... a nice guy. He was a great man and everybody loved him."

Rockwell loved America, on his terms. "I paint life as I would like it to be," he once said. "If there was sadness in this created world of mine, it was a pleasant sadness. If there were problems, they were humorous problems. The people in my pictures aren't mentally ill or deformed. The situations they get into are commonplace, not the agonizing crises and tangles of life."

But Rockwell touched on the crises of life: one memorable painting showed a tiny black girl walking with two husky white policemen.

"I went to Russia and they had it in the newspaper that these guards were taking her to prison," he once said. "I meant they were trying to take her to school."

Rockwell painted the famous — Dwight D. Eisenhower, Richard Nixon, John Wayne and John F. Kennedy.

He said his favorite president was Eisenhower. "When Ike gave you that grin he was an artist's delight," he once said.

Born in New York City, he had his only formal art training as a teenager in the Manhattan Art Students League. He later lived for many years in Arlington, Vt., before moving to Stockbridge.

His first marriage ended in divorce. His second wife, Mary, who died in 1959, was the mother of his three sons.

Vermont neighbors remember Rockwell as down-to-earth

By NANCY SHULINS

ARLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — One weekday afternoon in 1942, James Martin took off from work and donned borrowed clothes to pose for "a neighbor who painted."

For his work that afternoon, Martin earned $5 — and a place in history. His artistic neighbor was Norman Rockwell, who died at his Stockbridge, Mass., home Wednesday night at the age of 84.

Rockwell painted Martin in a series of works known as "The Four Freedoms," which eventually were reproduced on the envelopes of U.S. Savings Bonds that raised over $100 million for the war effort.

Martin is among scores of Arlington residents who posed for Rockwell, who came to the southwestern Vermont town in 1939 at age 45 and stayed for 14 years.

"It was like living in another world — a more honest one, somehow," the artist would later say of his years in Arlington.

Unlike some celebrities, Rockwell had no qualms about being seen in public, Martin says. "You could find him riding his bike down the road, with his corncob pipe and blue jeans. 'Hello, hello, hello,' he'd say. He had no high hat about him."

It's been 24 years since Rockwell closed up the white house, loaded his canvasses into his truck and left the Green Mountains of Vermont for the Berkshires of Massachusetts. The once sleepy subject of a country artist has grown into a bustling tourist town.

"What kind of neighbor was he?" James Edgerton gazes at the white house across from his as he considers the question.

"When he lived here, I had some tough times. Lost my whole dairy herd to brucellosis. Rockwell wouldn't paint his house until I could afford to paint mine. That's the kind of neighbor he was."

GOP victors hail election results

DALLAS (AP) — Republican victors in Texas elections Wednesday hailed the results as the beginning of a two-party system in the state dominated by Democrats since Reconstruction.

Bill Clements was elected the first Republican governor in 105 years, defeating Attorney General John Hill, and Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, overcame a strong challenge from Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, giving the state's two top races to the GOP.

Both races were so close they were not decided until about 17 hours after the polls closed. Unofficial totals with all but 10 of the state's 5,784 precincts counted gave Clements 1,181,562 votes and Hill 1,165,863; Tower defeated Krueger with 1,148,269 to Krueger's 1,134,560.

"This is the harbinger of a two-party system in Texas," Tower told supporters in his hometown of Wichita Falls after the votes were counted. "I'm delighted we have elected a Republican governor. Bill Clements will do a splendid job."

Republicans also increased their strength in Congress, adding two more seats to the two they already had in the Texas delegation to the U.S. House.

But Democrats, including six newcomers, controlled the 20 other U.S. House seats, and easily dominated the rest of the statewide jobs — Mark White was elected attorney general, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby was re-elected, and Warren G. Harding was elected treasurer.

Democratic incumbents John Poerner and Mack Wallace were elected to the Texas Railroad Commission.

Voters gave overwhelming approval to the "Tax Relief Amendment" which was among nine proposed changes to the Texas Constitution. Six other amendments were approved, and two failed.

The rejected amendments would have given cities authority to issue bonds to build facilities to attract industry and to redevelop blighted areas.

Clements, 61-year-old head of the giant SEDCO Inc. in Dallas, spent more than $6 million in his election bid as he rose from near anonymity earlier in the year. A former deputy defense secretary in the Nixon and Ford administrations, Clements easily brushed aside former state GOP chairman Ray Hutchison, then took on Hill, who had beaten incumbent Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Briscoe, who was stung by his loss to Hill in a bitter Democratic Party primary battle last spring, withheld his full backing of Hill, and members of Briscoe's family worked for Clements' election.

"The results of this election ... should be a signal to the Democrats of Texas that we need to begin now to rebuild the Democratic party of Texas and to infuse a new spirit of vitality into our party," Briscoe said.

He congratulated Clements and pledged to help in a smooth and orderly transition.

Briscoe said Clements' election should be a mandate to the next Legislature "to continue the policy of fiscal responsibility that has caused Texas to prosper during the past years." During the campaign, Clements promised he would cut taxes, saying Hill had promised only to freeze taxes.

Hill conceded in an early afternoon news conference in Austin.

"I want to congratulate him. He's got a big job ahead of him," said Hill, who announced plans to practice law in Austin.

"I think we realized that at some point in time this would happen," he said of the GOP gubernatorial win. "We'll measure them (Republicans) four years from now. In the meantime, I'm going to continue to lead this Democratic party. There's a lot of fight still left in me."

Krueger, his eyes red-rimmed, did not concede the race, but said:

"I can only say that if the incumbent senator is retained office, I wish him well and wish the people of our state well in his service. If we have won, I look forward to serving the people of Texas well."

Krueger quoted a passage from Shakespeare: "Thou hast ever been one that has taken the buffets and rewards of fortune with equal thanks..."

"I've always sought to be one who took buffets or rewards with equanimity, and at this point the election results remain unsure, and I don't know if I'm buffeted or rewarded, or both," he said.

Gough enters innocent plea

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Larry Paul Gough, 36, entered a plea of innocent Wednesday in the starvation death of his girlfriend's six-year-old son last June.

Gough and the mother of Melvin Kirk Ward, Brenda Carr, have both been charged with second-degree murder in the boy's death and both have now entered an innocent plea.

Last month in the hearing for 26-year-old Ms. Carr, Gough's 11-year-old daughter Cynthia testified young Ward was beaten, tortured and starved prior to his death.

The boy's decomposed body was discovered in a shallow grave near Decatur, Texas, after a woman claiming to be the boy's mother called authorities and told them where the body was buried.

Ms. Carr's trial is set for Dec. 11 and Gough is to be tried during the February docket.

Homosexual rights bill next

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid shouts of "shame! shame! shame!" a New York City Council committee defied Mayor Edward Koch's lobbying efforts and voted down a homosexual rights bill for the fifth time in seven years.

The bill's defeat came one day after homosexual rights victories for Election Day referenda in Seattle and California.

The 6-3 vote in the General Welfare Committee came late Wednesday at the end of a raucous 12-hour hearing marked by loud exchanges between committee members and some 200 supporters of the bill.

Some 103 speeches were made at the hearing about the bill, which would bar discrimination in employment, housing and public accommodations because of sexual orientation.

The bill was killed in committee three times — July 1972, April 1973 and September 1975. The measure was voted down by the full 43-member council in 1974, the only time the committee reported the bill out.

Koch, who has issued an executive order banning discrimination against homosexuals by city departments, was applauded by the gallery when he urged the committee to vote the bill onto the floor.

Also speaking in favor of the bill was former Rep. Bella Abzug, a longtime supporter, who asked, "Can you imagine a landlord refusing to rent an apartment to Gertrude Stein? Or the Board of Education denying a teaching job to Socrates or Plato? Or a restaurant refusing to serve Nijinsky or Willa Cather?"

Advocates of measures to protect the civil rights of homosexuals had better luck in two of three states that voted on homosexual issues in Tuesday's election.

California refused to require school boards to fire or not hire teachers who practice or advocate homosexuality. Seattle voters upheld a local ban on housing and job discrimination against homosexuals.

However, Dade County, Fla., voters defeated a proposal similar to one they rejected last year after a vitriolic anti-homosexual campaign by singer Anita Bryant.

In a statement referring to the triumphs in California and Seattle, Jean O'Leary and Bruce Voeller, co-executive directors of the National Gay Task Force, said Wednesday:

"Tonight the General Welfare Committee of the New York City Council failed to get the message: the backlash is backfiring and this is a time when all Americans will understand that denial of human freedoms to any group of citizens threatens the rights of us all."

Ships collide, spilling oil into Mississippi

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Liberian tanker and a Panamanian ship collided in the Mississippi River near New Orleans today, spilling crude oil into the water. No injuries were reported.

The Coast Guard said it was "a potential major oil spill," but it was not immediately known whether the tanker was loaded or whether the spill occurred after it had emptied its cargo at one of the refineries in the area.

The tanker, the Irene Lemos, was reported going down at the bow, with an apparent gash about 30 feet long in the hull.

There was no immediate word on the status of the Panamanian vessel, the 606-foot Maritime Justice which was loaded with scrap.

Indira Gandhi wins Parliament seat

NEW DEHLI, India (AP) — Exultant followers of Indira Gandhi, heartened by her election to Parliament, stepped up pressure Wednesday against the government's efforts to place the former prime minister on trial for alleged misdeeds during her regime.

Mrs. Gandhi, 60, won a seat vacated by one of her followers in a special election held Sunday in Chikmagalur, 1,100 miles south of New Delhi.

The victory allows her to resume a seat in parliament for the first time since she and her government were swept from power in India's March 1977 national election.

Some of the jubilant victory statements by Gandhi supporters from around the nation demanded that Prime Minister Morarji Desai, Mrs. Gandhi's successor, resign and call new elections. Desai's comfortable majority made this highly improbable.

Gandhi followers also denounced the pending and planned trials of Mrs. Gandhi on charges stemming from investigations of the emergency rule she proclaimed in June 1975.

C.M. Stephen, opposition leader in the lower house, said the government should recognize that Mrs. Gandhi is reentering parliament as India's acknowledged popular leader and "stop all vindictive persecution" of her.

During the 19 months she has been out of office, Mrs. Gandhi frequently said she did not care about returning to parliament. Many political sources say they think that a strong factor in her decision to run was to gain the added protection parliamentary status would provide against court proceedings.

A member of parliament is not immune from prosecution but attendance in parliament is a valid excuse for postponing court proceedings which, in India, move at a snail's pace.

Mrs. Gandhi is currently on bail in cases accusing her of criminal misconduct in procuring jeeps for her 1977 campaign and of contempt in refusing to testify before the commission of inquiry investigating her administration.

The government said last week that whether Mrs. Gandhi is elected or not, it intends to file charges by the end of December based on commission findings that she assumed emergency powers in violation of the constitution.

The former prime minister has been defending the contempt action by challenging the authority of the commission on both constitutional and procedural grounds.

Mrs. Gandhi told reporters Wednesday she will not take on the time-consuming post of parliamentary opposition leader that is being offered to her.

Industry Minister George Fernandes, who managed the campaign against Mrs. Gandhi, predicted that she would accept the post, adding that once she is in parliament she will have to answer many "awkward questions" because "she cannot talk like(a fascist there."

9 votes separate candidates

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Republican Leo Thorsness emerged with a nine-vote lead over Democrat Tom Daschle today as final ballots were counted in the last U.S. House race still undecided in the aftermath of Tuesday's elections.

But the edge was so narrow that no winner could be declared until an official statewide canvass is completed in about 10 days.

Seventy-nine ballots in one precinct in the 1st District had been inadvertently sealed following the election and not counted in unofficial returns, which had Thorsness leading by 42 votes.

Thorsness got 23 of the absentee ballots for an unofficial 64,608 votes and Daschle received 56 votes for 64,599.

Thorsness took an early lead and had a 4,600-vote spread before Daschle made his comeback early Wednesday.

It was the first political campaign for Daschle, 31, a former administrative aide to retiring Senator James Abourezk.

The focus of his campaign was a door-to-door campaign which he said took him to more than 30,000 eastern South Dakota homes.

Thorsness, 46, made his first political bid in 1974 when he lost a U.S. Senate campaign to George McGovern.

Thorsness, an Air Force pilot who spent several years in a North Vietnam prisoner of war camp, also served as chairman of the South Dakota Republican party in 1976-77.

Russian flu cases found in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Baylor College of Medicine researchers say the nation's first three Russian influenza cases of the 1978-79 season have been diagnosed here.

Dr. Robert B. Couch, director of Baylor's Influenza Research Center, earlier had forecast an outbreak of this type flu in the months ahead.

"But it is too early to predict the course the disease will take," Couch said Wednesday.

The three cases were said to involve preschoolers who have recovered.

One case was a 3-year-old Mexico City boy who was hospitalized for diagnostic tests at Texas Children's Hospital. The virus was isolated the week of Oct. 22 and it was said he since has returned to Mexico.

A 4-year-old girl and her 2-year-old brother were diagnosed as having Russian flu after routine blood tests at one of eight clinics operated by the Harris County Hospital District. A Baylor representative said they were treated Oct. 31 and have since recovered at home.

The virus was reported in about 100 Houston area cases last winter.

Vandals deface synagogue

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Vandals scrawled anti-Semitic slogans and caused thousands of dollars in damage to a synagogue here on the 40th anniversary of Germany's "Night of Glass," when Nazis destroyed Jewish synagogues and businesses, police said.

Rabbi Leigh Lerner said the attack on Mt. Zion Synagogue was done sometime late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

He said slogans and swastikas were scrawled on outside walls. Police said Nazi-style messages also were painted on windows, doors and the sidewalk. One message said "Hitler Lives."

In the early morning of Nov. 10, 1938, Nazis burned down or wrecked 267 synagogues and 7,500 Jewish business sites throughout Germany.

After the rampage, which derived the name "Kristallnacht" from the amount of shattered glass littering Germar streets, 20,000 Jews were arrested and interned in concentration camps.

IRS may be interested in vice records

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice squad officers say the Internal Revenue Service may be interested in records—seized ir the arrest of a man accused of furnishing prostitutes through an escort service.

Sgt. J.N. Flagg said the records list the names of several thousand customers and how much money and time each customer spent with each employee, plus comments about the sexual capabailities of some of the customers.

Vice squad officers said the IRS may try to determine if some customers claimed tax deductions for entertainment.

Chuck Bailey, district IRS public affairs officer, would not comment specifically on the case but said such a deduction would be disallowed since paying a prostitute is an illegal expenditure.

Officers said three charge-plate machines were seized along with the records.

Poll shows voters against Carter

NEW YORK (AP) — While a majority of the public wants to see President Carter run for another term, those who actually turned out to vote were much less enthusiastic about a 1980 presidential re-election bid.

The Associated Press-NBC News Election Day poll Tuesday found that the voters said "No" to a Carter re-election bid by a 43-to-36 percent margin, while others said they were not sure. Late in October, an AP-NBC poll found the public generally — voters and non-voters alike — favored a Carter candidacy in 1980 by a 50-to-38 percent margin.

These two findings do not necessarily mean a shift in attitudes toward Carter. The difference is probably due to the variance between the composition of voters and the public at large.

The Election Day survey also revealed that Carter has earned far broader support from black and Hispanic voters than from other segments of the traditional Democratic coalition.

The Associated Press and NBC News interviewed 34,500 voters on Tuesday to survey public opinion on political issues and the Carter presidency.

Asked to assess Carter's two-year performance in office, 41⅜percent of all voters rated the president as good or excellent. Thirty-nine percent rated him as only fair and 18 percent answered "poor."

But blacks and Hispanics were far more generous with their support, with 60 percent of those surveyed giving Carter an excellent or good rating, compared to 39 percent among whites.

Even among blue-collar voters, a bastion of Democratic strength throughout the years, Carter was rated positively by 43 percent.

To put that in perspective, conservatives were not at all impressed with Carter. Only 23 percent of the voters who described themselves as very conservative gave the president high marks.

The black and Hispanic support for Carter could be firmer than it might seem.

While white voters, by a 45-34 margin, were urging Carter to call it quits, blacks said they favor a Carter campaign by a 59-18 percent margin, with Hispanics in agreement, 51-26 percent. Across the board, one voter in five said he was not sure how he feels on the question.

These breakdowns may come as a surprise to Washington political observers, who have noted intermittent hostility between Carter and black leaders over the depth of the president's commitment on such issues as full employment legislation and federal aid for poor women seeking abortions.

Probably the best survey news for Carter is the public perception of the nation's economic problems.

Voters, citing inflation as the top priority for the new 96th Congress, said Carter is not primarily to blame for the current surge in prices. Some 45 percent of those surveyed said Congress is to blame, with 20 percent citing labor unions and 15 percent citing the business community. President Carter was named as culprit by just 7 percent.

Voters were also asked to look ahead two years to the 1980 presidential sweepstakes and name their favorite. Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., were in a dead-heat among all voters, with Republicans Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford close behind.

Ironically, given a choice among possible candidates, more black voters named Kennedy as their first choice than named Carter.

As with every sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News street poll can vary from the opinons of all voters because of chance variations.

For polls with neary 35,000 interviews, the results should vary no more than 1 percentage point either way simply because of sample error.

That is, if one could talk to all voters in the country, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the findings of this poll by more than 1 percentage point.

For the regular AP-NBC News telephone survey of 1,600 adults, the error margin is plus or minus 3 points.

Negotiators eye dispute over Palestinian issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Egyptian negotiators were meeting today with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance amid indications of a growing dispute over linking a peace treaty with Israel to future talks involving the Palestinian issue.

Acting Foreign Minister Boutrous Ghali and his deputy, Osama Al-Baz, were understood to be carrying instructions from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that the treaty nearing completion must state clearly that the immediate, next goal is an overall Mideast settlement.

Israel is committed to dealing with the Palestinian issue in the next round of negotiations. But Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, newly returned from Jerusalem, and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan informed Vance on Wednesday that hardliners in their government want to delete a treaty provision linking the two sets of negotiations.

The provision appears in a preamble to the treaty. Israel's attempt at deletion — which the United States likely would join Egypt in resisting — complicates efforts to complete the treaty.

Israel first raised an objection to the language two weeks ago. Differences appeared to be narrowing since. But the issue flared up again when Weizman went home for consultations.

Israeli hardliners who are concerned that Israel would be conceding too much in advance of the second round of talks want the link softened or erased.

Sadat, on the other hand, is chary of appearing in the Arab world to be cutting a separate deal wioh Israel or of not protecting Palestinian interests.

There are known to be only two other major issues in dispute.

One concerns the details of Israel's transfer of Sinai oilfields to Egypt. The other involves the kind of aid Israel would receive from the United States.

American officials were reluctant to comment on the dispute over the treaty language and how it might affect negotiations over the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

However, George Sherman, a State Department spokesman, emphasized that "from the U.S. point of view we would like to move into these negotiations as quickly as possible."

He described the Israelis' 40-minute session with Vance as "a serious meeting."

Germans carry heritage of guilty for atrocities against Jews: Schmidt

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, speaking today on the 40th anniversary of the beginning of the Holocaust, said Germans bear the "heritage of the guilty" for Nazi atrocities against Jews.

"The Germans living today are mostly as individuals innocent," Schmidt said at a memorial service with Jewish leaders in a rebuilt Cologne synagogue burned by the Nazis 40 years ago. "But we have to bear the political heritage of the guilty and accept the consequences. Here lies our responsibility."

In Jerusalem, Israel commemorated "Kristallnacht," or the night of the broken glass, by renewing a campaign to persuade West Germany to lift the statute of limitations on war crimes.

Death of border patrolman probed

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury Thursday investigated the slaying last April of a border patrolman near the Mexican border, but an assistant U.S. attorney said the panel "is just looking into the case" at this time.

Jose Paz Gomez Jr., 31, was strangled with a board held across his throat while he and his partner, Frank Lugo, were looking for illegal aliens along the border.

Lugo said he and Gomez became separated, and that later he couldn't find Gomez. An FBI report concluded the border patrolman was not killed by aliens.

Gomez' body was found April 21 in an irrigation ditch near Quemado, a border town north of Eagle Pass. His .357 magnum service revolver was missing and wasBfound nearby three days later. One shot had been fired.

'Gasahol' energy

MILTON, Conn. (AP) — Scientists estimate that the nearly 145 million tons of waste thrown away each year by Americans could be converted to some 10 billion gallons of useable automotive fuel, or about 10 percent of the nation's annual consumption of gasoline.

A new enzyme process that can convert materials derived from trees and other plants into alcohol is the key to turning garbage into fuel, according to researchers.

TPPSS group full of courage

By ERMA BOMBECK

When the story of the courageous women of our times is being written, the Three-Piece Polyester Slack Suit Group will deserve an entire volumn.

The TPPS (may their tribe increase) began as a small, non-violent task force of women who got sick of hemlines going up and down like a yo-yo, so they switched to slacks. When their stomachs strained at the polyester, they added an overblouse and over that a jacket. It was to become the marching uniform of the women who had had it with fashion dictators.

I have not seen my mother's legs in 10 years.

When you think about it, no other group in our times has dared defy the trend-setters from Paris, London, New York. Their tactics are some of the best in the world. They don't demonstrate, protest, lobby, burn anything, intimidate, or take their cause to the White House. They just ignore whatever fashion goes in or out.

Mother has remained firm but drip-dried through mini-skirts, maxi-coats, vests, gauze, wrap-arounds, layers, jump suits, tents, jumpers, bush jackets, Chinese quilted tops and caftans.

She has weathered wedgies, berets, scarfs, pleats, padded shoulders, cowl collars, satins, denims, pajamas, and signature blouses.

That takes a special kind of guts.

The other day I said to Mother, "What do you think of the new styles?"

"Tell me what they are and I'll tell you what I think of 'em."

"They're bring stockings with seams back."

"It's all right if your legs haven't grown together, then they look like they're sectioning off meat at the butcher's."

"Shoulder pads are going to be in and so are culottes."

"That's nice," she said, "come see what I'm making."

On her sewing tabel was another TPPS. "Mother, why do you limit yourself to just one style?"

"I'd like to change 'em once in awhile, but if I put the zipper on the side, and tucks in the front, next year some designer would say the zipper has to be in the back and tucks are out. If I tucked the blouse in, next year designers would put it out. The jacket with the big patch pockets would be redesigned to be shorter and with puffed sleeves and the whole suit would be made out of foil or something. If I left the hem at the ankle, some smart-aleck would say it had to drag on the floor. We're hanging in there because we dress to be comfortable."

I wish I had the guts to join her . . . but I'm weak.

CETA provides needed jobs

By PATSY GORDON
R-T Lifestyle Writer

Under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA), the Midland County Human Resource Center's Manpower Office is sponsoring classes in machine shop and licensed vocational nurses' training as two of several special projects conducted by the office.

The Human Resource Center is a subdivision of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and the program is administered on the federal level through the U.S. Department of Labor, said Kayla Dean, a Manpower counselor.

CETA was created in 1973 by Congress to help the economically disadvantaged, unemployed and underemployed to get back into the job market, said Ms. Dean. The target groups right now are veterans, people aged 45 or over, youths 16-21, school dropouts and the handicapped.

Classroom training is the program's biggest project, said Ms. Dean, along with work experience and public service employment.

Another project is the on-the-job training contracts, whereby persons are placed with private or public places of business. "CETA pays a portion of the salary and the employer pays the rest. Agreement is then reached that the trainee is hired at the end of his training," said Ms. Dean.

The Youth Employment Training Programs (YETP) are conducted all year long, but there are other summer programs for youth, explained Ms. Dean.

Other special projects include weatherization program sponsored by the Community Action Agency, with CETA providing the workers. "These are programs whereby CETA agrees with a non-profit agency to perform special duties," she said.

In 1977, the operating budget of PBRPC was $2,797,592, with 2,174 persons placed in subsidized employment in the 17 counties served by the commission.

As of Oct. 1, new regulations required prospective clients to show definite proof of income for the past 12 months. Requirements to get on the program include being economically disadvantaged, unemployed and under-employed.

Manpower presently has 33 people on programs, but it is just starting it's fiscal year, said Ms. Dean.

Plans call for the creating of additional courses including another machine shop class, welding, auto mechanics at Odessa Trade School, cosmetology at Aladdin Beauty School and secretarial and drafting at Commercial College.

The local manpower office had $143,000 to spend in 1978, not counting tuition or books, said Ms. Dean.

CETA, according to the counselor, is "unique because the money is paid back in about a year by the participant through paying taxes after being placed in a job.

"We only train in areas where there are shortages," she added. This helps the area's unemployment rates and gets people off of food stamps and unemployment compensation."

The machine shop class of 14 students take two courses in machine technology. These are drafting, and human relations that is geared to learning how to relate to their coworkers and how to motivate themselves.

Those who don't have a high school diploma take the GED test.

Approximately two weeks before graduation, students are able to find a job. If they still have problems on the job, they go to school half-a-day within these two weeks.

Ms Dean said the program is developing good rapport with machinists in Midland, who have begun calling Manpower and requesting the students.

When the classes are completed, there is a banquet and graduation ceremony. College credit is given for the course.

The LVN students are all female heads of household. The program lasts a year and about a month after classes are over, the women take their state board examination. They usually are hired before taking the exam, said Ms. Dean.

DEAR ABBY

Mum's the word for son's wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law and I are separated by 3,000 miles. I never visit unless she invites me. She and my son have been married for 10 years and I'm invited for one week every year.

A half hour after my arrival, my daughter-in-law goes into her bedroom and leaves me with her two children, 7 and 8. Two hours later my son comes home and informs me that his wife has a headache.

I prepare the evening meal and my son takes his wife hers on a tray. This goes on every day until I leave. There is never any communication between us. She stays locked up in her room until I leave. She hardly says hello, and she never says goodbye. She doesn't even talk to her children. She acts as though they aren't there.

How can anyone be so hateful? She has a beautiful home, new car, money, clothes, jewelry—everything a woman could ask for.

This "sick" routine is a fake. If she doesn't want me to visit, why does she invite me? Her letters are so sweet. What is your opinion?—TEARS IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR TEARS: It's obvious that your daughter-in-law feels unable to handle any kind of communication with you, and she refuses to try. Before condemning her, ask your son what's going on. (She could be in therapy.) For you to have tolerated her disappearing act for 10 years without asking for an explanation seems strange. I can't blame you for shedding tears, but take comfort in the French philosophy: "To know all is to forgive all."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FEELING GUILTY" IN MATTOON: Don't feel guilty. No one said it better than Felix Frankfurter: "There's no highbrow in any lowbrow, but there's a fair amount of lowbrow in every highbrow."

Not all tastings on level

By TOM GABLE
Copley News Service

There has been, of late, a flood of news releases from various wineries touting the receipt of yet another gold medal from some obscure tasting competition in such wine-loving areas as Bulgaria, South Africa and Brazil.

Questions one must ask routinely regarding such tastings are: qualifications of the judges; how wines were selected for the competition; and the methodology of scoring. Rarely do the news releases touch on such things, which raises other questions about the motive for a winery entering such a competition and then bragging about it.

From personal experience, there is one wine competition where the winning wineries deserve to brag — the Sonoma Harvest Fair. It is held each year in September during the harvest and features a judging of the wines of Sonoma County, Calif. An independent staff gathers up the wines, puts them in their appropriate categories and arranges them in numbered glasses for the five-member white or red panels to evaluate blind.

The two panels include experts and professors from the University of California at Davis.

Perfection kills affection

Copley News Service

May was furious.

"I have just about had it with Fred. He always has to be right. He's such a perfectionist he just drives me crazy. It's bad enough that he has to be perfect but he's constantly criticizing me, saying that he's only trying to help me improve myself. On top of that he blames me for everything that goes wrong.

"Somehow it always gets twisted into being my fault. Any affectionate feelings are being drained out of me. Mostly I feel anger and resentment."

"Oh, I just don't see it that way," responded Fred. "It is true that I work very hard, set very high goals, and am not easily satisfied. But I kind of see that as a good thing because it's part of what keeps me motivated to work even harder. I will admit that I do wonder sometimes if there is ever an end to striving. Sometimes I wonder what the ultimate reward really is."

"Well, what about always being on my back?" demanded May.

"I guess that's just part of this whole thing I was talking about," said Fred. "I have very little tolerance for imperfections around me. I'm sorry. I can't seem to help it; besides, you never mentioned all this before."

May has a legitimate gripe. Fred has been a critical, judgmental, reproving parent instead of lover, friend, companion and husband. In fact, her identification of him as a parental figure has kept her from asserting herself directly. Instead of confronting him about his treatment of her and how it makes her feel she withdraws both emotionally and physically, almost like a small, powerless, punished child.

"I just don't feel sexual lately; something must be wrong with sex drive. I can't get turned on to Fred. In fact, sometimes I even feel repulsed by him physically," said May.

By placing the blame for their non-existent sex life on herself, she is continuing to avoid confronting her anger and hurt directly. Clearly, feeling "repulsed" suggests more than a diminished sex drive. Withdrawing from Fred sexually is her indirect way of making her statement — it's her way of getting back at him without taking responsibility for "getting back at him."

Fred is being driven from within. He is very critical of himself and no accomplishment or success will satisfy the voracious, demanding, insatiable demon within. He cannot tolerate losing or being wrong. He will not allow even the smallest imperfection to be recognized since it would mean that he is totally bad, a total failure.

Fred has never quite accepted his humanness. Part of humanness is to have some faults and frailties. In order to accept oneself, one must evaluate both the good and the bad and not generalize from one "bad" to the whole person. This is difficult to accomplish if one has never been given approval and support from those who "should know," parents and family, even though you are not perfect.

Fred never has got that approval and he has been devoting all his waking moments to getting it by doing more, accomplishing more, winning more, never being wrong, never failing, etc.

However, the demanding demon within is never appeased. And until Fred incorporates a loving-parent-within, one who will allow him his humanness, he will never find peace.

He is demanding perfection in May in order to have her sustain his image of self-perfection by association.

And because he cannot stand to have anyone see him be wrong or lose, he will argue with May to the point of relational disruption, browbeating her into submission, so that he can be victorious. Unfortunately, this is a hollow victory because it required destruction of the dear ally.

May and Fred have each been fighting their own battles; Fred's is with his perpetually critical demon within (his displeased "parent"), and May's is with her fear of open confrontation.

FDA announces stuffing recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two weeks before Thanksgiving, the Food and Drug Administration announced the recall today of 7,400 packages of Stop and Shop Herb Seasoned Stuffing Mix Bread Dressing in a half-dozen northeastern states.

The FDA said the recall applies to dressing with a code date of "1130," interpreted as a sale deadline of Nov. 30. It was manufactured by Stop and Shop Co. Inc. of Boston and distributed to stores in Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York and Rhode Island, FDA said. The recall is continuing.

The agency said the spice used to manufacture the stuffing was infested by insects but unlikely to cause any serious health problems.

Marriage loses votes for women

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — A woman elected by the voters of her state will be sitting in the Senate next year for the first time since Margaret Chase Smith bowed out in 1972.

But the House will have two fewer women than it has now when the 96th Congress convenes in January.

Nancy Landon Kassebaum, daughter of Alf Landon, was chosen by Kansas voters Tuesday for the seat being vacated by fellow Republican, Sen. James Pearson.

But two women who married politicians lost the House seats they have held for two terms.

Rep. Martha Keys, D-Kan., wife of Rep. Andrew Jacobs, D-Ind., was defeated by Republican Jim Jeffries. Jacobs was re-elected.

Rep. Helen Meyner, D-N.J., whose husband, Robert Meyner, is a former New Jersey governor, lost to James Courter.

"I'll get my husband back," Mrs. Meyner said in a speech conceding defeat. Meyner was with her as she spoke.

Mrs. Kassebaum defeated former Democratic Rep. Bill Roy to become the fourth woman in history to be elected to a full Senate term. Her 91-year-old father, a former Kansas governor and Republican presidential candidate in 1936, made several campaign appearances for his daughter.

Several women have been appointed to serve out the terms of their deceased husbands or been elected to shorten terms in special elections.

But the last woman elected to a full Senate term was Mrs. Smith, a Maine Republican who was defeated seeking a fifth term. The others were Maurine Neuberger, D-Ore., and Hattie Wyatt Caraway, D-Ark.

The only other female senatorial candidate in Tuesday's races, Jane Eskind of Tennessee, lost to Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker.

Sixteen women — 11 Democrats and five Republicans — won election to the House. There were 18 women in the 95th Congress — 13 Democrats and five Republicans.

Maryland elected women to four of its eight house seats, making it the largest state ever to have as many women as men in its House delegation. Democrats Barbara Mikulski and Gladys Spellman and Republican Marjorie Holt were re-elected and Democrat Beverly Byron was chosen to succeed her late husband, Goodloe Byron.

Costly food, less meat in forecast

Copley News Service

As if it were not enough that we have been warned that food prices are going to go nowhere but up, we now have the word that this nation of meat-eaters will experience a shortage, and a serious shortage, of beef during the next two or three years.

The prediction comes from Rert A. Bolinder, a member of the board of directors of the Food Marketing Institute.

Bolinder, who is spokesman for grocery retailers and wholesalers, said the cattle numbers peaked in 1975, and consumers paid low beef prices.

"That glut caused cattle producers to cut back on their herds," he said. "In January of this year, cattle numbers were at a low of 116 million head.

"Experts said the cattlemen would start rebuilding their herds, but figures from the United States Department of Agriculture indicate that the liquidation is still going on."

Bolinder said in an interview that when cattle ranchers hold cattle back from slaughter and instead keep them for breeding purposes, the American consumer will see hamburger and other lower-grade beef cuts become scarce.

"The worst shortage of meat will follow," he said. "That shortage could last until a new generation of cattle is ready for slaughter. That takes two years."

According to the USDA, some experts are predicting that beef consumption could fall to 100 pounds per person in 1980, which is down 26 percent from 1976 averages.

Bolinder attempted to give both the pro and the con of the controversy over nitrites in meat. Nitrites are chemical preservatives added to some meats, particularly the smoked varieties such as bacon and ham.

"No food retailer would willingly sell a product if it actually is proved to cause cancer in humans," he said.

"On the other hand, a person would have to eat 500 to 2,500 pounds of pork per day, depending on the item, to approach the level of nitrites that proved harmful to rats."

He said a ban on nitrites would cause chaos in the meat industry, and be "bad news" for customers at the meat counter.

"The effects have been persistent and destructive," he said. "Fluctuating food prices alarm the consumer unnecessarily.

"The House subcommittee on economic stability has reported that the price spread, between the farm and the retail market, reflects the general inflationary condition of the economy at large, and not factors special to the food industry."

Bolinder said inflation in this country could be put into perspective by remembering that in comparison to other nations, this country is "doing very well."

"In terms of grocery prices, Americans are still paying less of their discretionary funds for food than people in most industrialized countries," he said.

When USDA did a spot check on food prices in capitals around the world last July, the Japanese were paying $14.47 for a pound of sirloin which costs $2.36 in the United States. The Danes were paying $6.78 for a pound of sirloin.

The mid-life years: They can be exciting to live

By ELAINE SMYTH
Copley News Service

Why do so many of us celebrate that 35th birthday with a sigh and climb back into the same rut armed only with resignation and a dig-a-deeper-rut shovel?

The real us pounds away inside — wanting desperately to be let out — and we say "Not today. Maybe tomorrow."

We're running short on those tomorrows, says Dr. Robert E. Kavanaugh.

"The first half of life many people get into difficulties and troubles and continue into the same rut or routine in the second half of their life," Kavanaugh adds.

"A lot of current research has shown people can change in their middle years. But, unless they do, they will tend to repeat the same self-defeating conduct that made them regret much of the first half of their life."

Kavanaugh, author and former counseling psychologist at the University of California, San Diego, said the second half of life begins physically around 35..

But, emotionally, it really starts when we devour the daily obituaries or deliberately avoid the entire page on which they appear.

As an example of the rut-filled lives we allow ourselves to remain in, Kavanaugh recalled a conversation he overheard recently in a restaurant.

At the next table were two attractive women in their late 30s. After they verbally brushed aside their ex-husbands, the brunette announced to the blonde, "Well, I really changed my life today."

"You mean you quit your job?" asked her astonished friend.

"No," said the brunette. "I ate lunch at a different table."

The table, he added, was the last thing the bored female should have changed.

"The crux of the whole determination of the second half of life is how you feel about the values that you're living by. There's a great dichotomy between what people say their values are when questioned and what their behavior reveals their true values to be."

He defines values as things people spend time doing. Ideals, he adds, are what we'd like to do.

"And most people find it very difficult to tell the difference between their real values and their stated ideals."

He cites the case of the woman who spends four hours a day putting on her face, but tells the outside world she just wants to look natural.

Asian medications mostly dangerous

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: What about these Chinese medicines that you can find in some cities? A woman I know is on a big kick of using various strange Asian products, and I don't think they're reliable.--K.L.

DEAR K.L.: The Food and Drug Admininstration has warned about medications being imported in small quantities from Asia, and sold mainly in Chinese communities, which contain high concentrations of oil of wintergreen, chemically known as methyl salicylate.

Oil of wintergreen can cause death when taken by mouth in quantities of a teaspoon or more. Also, if applied to the skin in the concentration found in these Asian imports, it can be absorbed and cause serious poisoning. On the other hand, methyl salicylate is safe when present only in minute concentrations—as in some rubbing ointments on the market in this country.

The potentially dangerous products against which the FDA has warned are being sold under many brand names, including Koong Yick Hung Far Oil, White Flower Embrocation, Red Flower Oil, Cinnamon Leaf Oil. Many of these products don't have any English labeling or any warnings about overuse. They may be recommended for use by mouth and for application to the skin. The products are promoted as pain relievers for various ailments including headaches, arthritis, breathing and heart problems.

It is difficult to control the importation of wintergreen oil products as they are brought in personal baggage and then sold to merchants.

In the past, wintergreen oil preparations have caused a number of deaths through misuse among children and adults. Symptoms of wintergreen poisoning include vomiting, headache, restlessness, fast breathing and ringing in the ears.

Get your friend to check her exotic medicine chest. If any suspect product turns up, get in touch with the nearest FDA office.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: I never used to read your column until you started telling it like it is with drugs. What do you know about MDA and MMDA?--L.S.

DEAR L.S.: Chemically, MDA and MMDA are related to the amphetamines, mescaline and DOM (STP). They are controlled as hallucinogens; they also produce some stimulation and a sense of well-being. The MDA sold on the street it synthesized illicitly and sold in power, tablet or liquid form. It is usually taken orally but may be "snorted" through the nose or injected intravenously. The MDA experience is reported to be devoid of the visual and auditory distortions which mark that of LSD.

Unusual weather reduces CRMWD water deliveries

BIG SPRING — An ironical combination of drought and rain have reduced deliveries by the Colorado River Municipal Water District through the first three quarters of the year, said authorities.

Officials said deliveries of 15,641,112,000 gallons are down by 1,854,326,000, or 10.6 percent.

This situation is reflected in reduced deliveries of water to oil companies, said authorities.

For the nine-month period, oil companies received only 3,423,857,000 gallons for oil field repressuring, down 2,115,645,000 gallons from the same period a year ago. This is due, said officials primarily to curtailed deliveries for part of the year and a complete cutoff of surface water from Lake Thomas after May 1 when there was only minor runoff into the reservoir.

However, belated but generous rains in October cut municipal demands by 59 million gallons amounting to 897,644,000 gallons, said officials. They said it was the first time in seven months that the cities had taken less than a billion gallons of water.

For the first nine months, municipal deliveries stood at 12,217,264,600 gallons, up 261,220,000 gallons or 2.19 percent for the period.

Candy bar price due to rocket

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The old five-cent candy bar is going to cost a quarter.

Hershey Foods Corp said Wednesday that it will increase the wholesale price of its candy bars by 25 percent on Nov. 27 and that the prevailing retail price will jump from 20 to 25 cents.

When introduced, Hershey bars cost a nickel.

Marshal of Rockerville's work has changed little

By ERIC NEWHOUSE

ROCKERVILLE, S.D. (AP) — Being marshal of Rockerville isn't much easier than it was a century ago, except the bullets today are blanks ... most of the time.

The current marshal of this tiny Black Hills tourist town, Johnny One Feather, says he's in about as much danger as his predecessors.

One Feather says he broke his arm falling off a building while re-enacting a gunfight last summer, broke a toe in an ill-advised jump, and later smashed a kneecap in a Main Street brawl.

"And I got shot in the head from about three feet away with a double-barrel shotgun," he adds, recalling a recent stunt performed with blanks for tourists. "The wadding blew my hat off, burned my face, and did some damage to my eye."

Sometimes, however, the bullets aren't blanks.

"A whole bunch of Hell's Angels came in here a month or so ago," says One Feather, standing behind the huge oak bar of the Rockerville Saloon. "They were pouring beer on people and ripping off the machines.

"We had five of my gunfighters here that day, and they came in the side doors with sawed-off shotguns," he says. "I came through the front door and gave them a choice: either clear out or be carried out.

"Then I loaded my .357 magnum with riot shells in front of them," he says, "and they cleared out."

It was just like old times in Rockerville, which was founded in 1876 after gold was discovered in the area. Within four years, there were reportedly 800 to 1,000 people in the town, 10 stores, a bakery, a brewery and a couple of saloons.

But water was necessary for the rockers, which wash the gold from clay and ground rock. The town's population suffered a sharp decline a few years later when a plan to pump in water fell through.

For most of this century, only a handful of families have lived in the town. A year ago, it was sold in auction to a former Rapid City auto dealer and a Phoenix, Ariz., real estate developer.

And they hired One Feather, who says he is a former movie stuntman, as town marshal. He patrols the town in the winter and re-enacts famous gun battles for the tourists in the summer.

The modern-day marshal says he's even getting as notorious as some of his predecessors.

"I had one old drunk who called me out this summer, said he wanted to take me on," One Feather says. "But when I told him who I was, he said to go to hell — he'd heard of me and he didn't want no part of me."

New King probe starting

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former London police inspector testified today that James Earl Ray boasted in rambling jailhouse conversations of participating in a conspiracy to assassinate civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Alexander A. Eist told the House assassinations committee that Ray repeatedly expressed hatred against black people and said he might "get into Africa at some stage to kill some more."

But Eist testified that Ray gave him no clear account of King's assassination and never described his own part any further than throwing the rifle away after King was shot.

Eist was the lead-off witness as the committee began a month-long series of public hearings into the slaying of King in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

"Ray never really told me he pulled the trigger or anything like that," Eist said. "But he stated he threw the gun away."

The apparent assassination rifle, bearing Ray's fingerprints, was found after King was shot near the rooming house from which Memphis police believe the shot was fired.

But Ray contends he delivered the rifle to a mystery man he knew only as Raoul the day before the assassination for what he thought was only a gun-running operation and never saw the rifle after that.

"He said he had panicked and thrown the weapon away," Eist testified. "He said he had seen a policeman or some police vehicle."

Eist said Ray, now serving a 99-year sentence as the convicted assassin, after he was arrested in London in June 1968, where he fled following King's assassination. Eist was assigned to guard Ray in jail.

Ray pleaded guilty in court to King's murder but publicly recanted that confession and contends he was set up to take the blame by the mystery man he knew only as Raoul.

Eist said that Ray had told him that "they can only prove conspiracy against me."

"He was quite proud of the fact," Eist told the committee. "He seemed quite elated about it, in fact. He never ever showed any regret."

Eist said Ray repeatedly displayed hatred against blacks.

"He told me there would be a time to get into Africa at some stage to kill some more," Eist said.

Ray never named any other conspirators in King's assassination, said the former policeman, who now operates a pub in Cambridge, England.

"He rambled so much that if there had been anyone else involved, it would have come up in the conversation," Eist said.

Ray did mention one of his brothers once, Eist testified, but it was not clear what Ray said about the brother or which of three brothers he was referring to.

Before Eist took the witness stand, the committee emphasized it could not vouch for the truthfulness of his account of Ray's jailhouse statements.

They were first publicly disclosed by the committee during public hearings last August.

The committee's chief counsel, G. Robert Blakey, said in a statement, however, that two other witnesses corroborate the account "at least to a degree."

A London Daily Mail reporter, Owen Summers, has given the committee a sworn statement that Eist told him of Ray's admissions in 1968, Blakey said.

Blakey said another London policeman assigned to guard Ray, Thomas Smith, told the committee he also gained the impression that Ray was proud of being involved in the assassination.

Blakey quoted Smith as saying, "Although on occasions (Mr. Ray) did say that he did not shoot Martin Luther King, he did not appear to say it with a lot of conviction."

Describing his jail talks with Ray, Eist told committee investigators, "There isn't any doubt from the conversation that he told me that he was admitting to me that he had done the murder."

Contending Ray spoke of hating blacks, Eist continued, "He was telling me that for him to have shot a black man of note in certain parts of America would make him into a national hero."

Eist said he told his boss about Ray's statements but was advised the FBI already had the information he offered and Ray's statements to jailhouse guards would not be admissible as evidence in a trial.

He said he decided to give his account to the committee after learning of the House hearings and continuing public concern about the case in the United States.

Ray's attorney, Mark Lane, has attacked Eist's credibility and denounced him as corrupt and "a disgrace to the England police force."

Eist was charged in 1976 with two counts of conspiracy in connection with jewel robberies and was found innocent of both charges.

He retired in 1976 at the rank of detective chief inspector.

Big tip really wasn't so

DALLAS (AP) — The district attorney's office had some bad news Wednesday for a cocktail waitress who was tipped with a $1 million check from a mysterious visitor from the East. The news was just as important for two dancers at a Dallas night spot who were awarded $500,000 each by the same man, identified as F. Masood Khan, a Pakistani who first bought $75-a-bottle champagne for everybody.

"It was all just a joke," the man's bodyguard-secretary told city prosecutors.

But Craig Stultz, the manager of "elan," the night club where the incident occurred Monday night, said Khan did pay the $2,365.30 champagne and dinner tab — and added a check for $10,000 as a tip, which Stultz said the restaurant would not cash.

One of the recipients of the checks, Mike Christensen, said he had taken the check seriously and failed to see the point of the joke.

"I would like to talk with him ... even if it was just for the satisfaction of telling him what a chump he is," said Christensen, 26, a liquor salesman. He said Khan announced a "dance contest" and gave Christensen and his dance partner — a woman Christensen grabbed at random to enter the "contest" — the checks as "winners."

"I've got an attorney working on it and he claims that it was a breach of promise," Christensen said. "When the man puts down $2,300 for Dom Perignon (champagne) and tacks on a $10,000 tip, I wasn't even skeptical in the least."

Italian president vows war on terrorism as massive hunt for killers continues

ROME (AP) — Italy's president vowed a war on terrorism today as police in helicopters and squad cars pressed a nationwide manhunt for the leftist guerillas who killed a district attorney and two bodyguards.

"The war will be long and difficult but I am sure that the government, Parliament and the magistracy will know how to act," Sandro Pertini said in a speech to Italian judges.

"Our duty is not to give in to terror, not to be demoralized in grief," he said.

Pertini called the latest terror strike a "brutal crime" committed by "the criminal fringe continuing to push our country with implacable and fanatic vileness."

The president, a resistance hero who fought the Nazis during World War II, called the terrorists' victims "martyrs of a new resistance against an enemy ruthless to liberty."

The manhunt began Wednesday, hours after Fedele Calvosa, 59, and his bodyguards were gunned down on a road 35 miles south of Rome. One of the terrorists was wounded in the gunfire and died. Authorities speculated he was slain by his comrades to hasten their getaway.

A caller told a Milan newspaper after the shooting the leftist group Frontline was responsible. In Rome, a newspaper received a note from The Fighting Communist Formation, which also claimed responsibility for the attack.

Police said they couldn't verify the authenticity of the claims, but said the dead terrorist, Roberto Capone, 24, had leftist ties and once belonged to an extreme leftist group called Worker Power. Police questioned his family and friends, attempting to trace his recent movements.

Police said the district attorney was en route to work, accompanied by Giuseppe Paglieiand Luciano Rossi, when Pagliei braked the blue Fiat to avoid striking a beige Fiatblocking the highway.

A witness said three men stepped from behind nearby bushes and raked the car with submachine-gun fire. Pagliei managed to get off a shot before dying, police said. Rossi was unarmed and ran from the car but was felled by another burst of fire. Calvosa died in the Fiat.

Police said the terrorists dragged their wounded gunman into the beige Fiat and fled. The car, which had been stolen, was found a few miles away with signal lights flashing and doors open. Capone's body was inside.

Calvosa was the seventh Italian justice official slain in the last seven years and the third this year. His death and the death of his bodyguards brought to 19 the number of persons killed by terrorists this year.

New GOP fund drive pays off

By The Associated Press

A $2 million nationwide drive by the Republican party aimed at reversing the decade-long decline of GOP influence in state legislatures apparently paid off in this year's election.

In at least a dozen states where conclusive tallies were available, the Republican Party captured at least one branch of the state legislatures, or else sharply narrowed Democratic majorities.

Democrats, however, maintained their solid majorities in state houses in the Deep South, and other traditional strongholds, including California, Hawaii, Missouri, Michigan, and New Mexico.

Going into the election, the GOP controlled five state legislatures and Democrats controlled 36, with the remainder split between the two parties.

One of the most stunning gains by the GOP occurred in Minnesota, where Republicans ended Democratic dominance in the House of Representatives by picking up 32 seats. Democrats and Republicans now have 67 seats each.

There was no race in the Minnesota Senate, so Democrats kept their 48-to-19-seat advantage over Republicans in that branch.

Republicans captured the Indiana Senate, winning 29 seats to the Democrats' 21. And they widened their control of that state's House by two seats, and now lead Democrats by 54 to 46.

Sharp GOP gains also were registered in the Pennsylvania House. Democrats had controlled the House by 118 to 85 seats, but in Tuesday's election, Republicans gained a 101 to 101 tie, with one seat still undecided. The Senate remained in Democratic hands by a 27-22 margin.

Republicans regained control of both Vermont state legislative branches by retaking the House by an eight-seat margin, after trailing the Democrats by that number in the previous election. The GOP widened by one seat its already commanding control of the state Senate.

Illinois' House of Representatives fell into GOP hands by a slim, 88-to-87-seat margin, with two seats still undecided. Democrats had previously controlled both houses and still hold a 32-27 seat edge in the state Senate.

Republicans scored a sharp turnaround in the Utah Senate. The GOP picked up 19 seats, while the Democrats captured 10, ending a 17 to 12 advantage the Democrats had held before Election Day. And Republicans picked up 10 House seats to widen their lead over Democrats in that chamber to 50 to 25.

Control of the Kansas House of Representatives switched hands to the Republicans by a 69 to 56 margin.

Pope upholds celibacy for priests

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today upheld mandatory celibacy for priests.

"Yes, we are in the world, but we are not worldly," the Polish-born pontiff said in a speech to about 1,300 priests and friars in the Hall of Benedictions of the Apostolic Palace.

The remark drew a long applause from the priests.

"We must retain the sense of our unique vocation and this uniqueness must be expressed also in our exterior clothing. Let us not be ashamed," he said.

Addressing the audience both as supreme pontiff and as bishop of Rome, John Paul urged the clergy to have "an adequate style of life."

"O2r priesthood must be cler and expressive. And if in the tradition of our church it is strictly associated with celibacy, it is because of the Gospel clarity and expressiveness to which Our Lord refers with his words on celibacy 'for the kingdom of God.'"

It was John Paul's first reference to the controversial subject since he was elected last month as the first non-Italian pope in 455 years. But as a cardinal in Poland he had spoken out in favor of celibacy for priests.

Court rules that judge may not maintain authority over tax rolls

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state district judge cannot maintain continuing authority over a county's tax rolls, the Texas Supreme Court ruled today.

The court found that Judge Dee Brown Walker of Dallas was without authority to issue his order of Oct. 9 prohibiting Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Case to pursue their suit challenging the Grayson County tax rolls.

Walker rescinded his order after the Cases went before the high court to force him to cancel it, but the high court went ahead and ruled on the principles at stake in the case.

The Cases are among several plaintiffs who challenged the validity of the county's tax rolls because they do not include such intangible property as bank accounts, cash, stocks and bonds.

Walker took continuing jurisdiction over the county property tax system in 1972 after ruling on a case in which a taxpayer contended the rolls did not accurately reflect all real estate values. He forced the county to do a complete reappraisal.

When the Cases filed suit, he contended it would interfere with his 1972 judgment.

The supreme court said continuing jurisdiction was improper because judgment in the 1972 case became final 30 days after Walker entered it.

"We hold that a district court, on the basis of an agreed and final judgment that settled a controversy between one county taxpayer and county tax officials, cannot exercise continuing jurisdiction over all matters relating to reappraisal and revaluation of taxable property in a county," the high court said.

The decision also voided Walker's order last month approving certification of the Grayson County tax rolls.

Mountains to become national park

By BILL GARDNER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Here in the city that is synonymous with urban sprawl is a large, green, hilly area that begins downtown at Dodger Stadium and stretches 40 miles northwest along the coast. It looks almost empty.

It is the Santa Monica Mountains, and, thanks to a bill passed last month by Congress, this area of 200,000 acres will become a national recreation area and will remain relatively empty.

The Santa Monicas aren't high — the tallest peak is about 2,800 feet — and they aren't famous, but they are among the most photographed mountains in the world and some of the people who have settled here are not your typical mountain folks.

At the base of the mountains is Beverly Hills. This is Bel-Air, Brentwood, Pacific Palisades, Encino, Calabasas and Hidden Hills. Take a ride through these mountains and you may see a deer, but you'll surely see more Rolls Royces.

Farther out toward the coast is the old 20th Century-Fox ranch, where many cowboy films, and some non-cowboy movies, were made. Television's "M-A-S-H" is filmed there. "The Planet of the Apes" was done there, and even the skyscraper for "The Towering Inferno" was built and burned down on the ranch.

Ronald Reagan once had a large ranch in these mountains and one of the larger landowners is Bob Hope. The Huntington-Hartford estate closer to downtown is on the list of park acquisitions.

The mountains were also the site of two major brushfires last month that blackened 30,000 acres and destroyed about 200 homes. One of the blazes was set by an arsonist and burned from the mountains down to the beach at Malibu.

As the Los Angeles area sprawled and sprawled during the past four decades, some people looked at these mountains and saw something that should be saved from the bulldozers. Citizens' groups banded together and were successful in getting some acreage set aside for state and local parks.

There are now about 30,000 acres in state parks in the area, and officials believe the recent federal appropriation of $155 million will buy another 40,000 acres. Land around these acquisitions would be strictly zoned, serving as a buffer zone for the recreation area.

Joseph Edmiston, director of the Santa Monica Mountains Planning Commission, foresees something for everyone in this vast recreational area. Edmiston and all those who fought to get the recreation area talk eagerly of how inner city youths will be able to take buses to some of the parks areas near downtown.

There will also be relatively flat, close-in areas that older people can visit. Farther out, serious hikers can roam the jagged peaks that look out over the ocean.

"It's one of the few places where people can have a mountain experience and an ocean experience at the same time," Edmiston said.

Alongside some of the wealthy subdivisions that line the mountains are some patches of undeveloped land, canyons that look much as they must have hundreds of years ago.

"Right in the heart of the city you can think you're in a wilderness," adds Edmiston.

Not everyone is happy about the prospect of the federal government buying up all this additional land for a recreation area. For one thing, there are developers who want to build homes in various sections of these mountains. With hillside views, most of these homes would range from $250,000-$750,000.

And there are also many people who bought land up here with the intention of building their private home whenever they could afford it or perhaps when they retire. Peter Ireland, a 33-year-old movie extra, is downright bitter about what he terms the government's plan to deprive him of his "American dream."

"This is as big an issue that ever affected my life," he said.

"They lump my plans in with the guy who wants to build 50 homes," said Ireland. "I'm not out to disfigure the mountainside. I'm just trying to provide myself a home."

Santa Maria replica burns up

TIPTONVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Like its namesake, a $400,000, 90-ton replica of Christopher Columbus' flagship, the Santa Maria, wound up as pieces of floating timber.

The replica, owned by Young America Showcase Inc, left St. Louis last week en route to Memphis, about 100 miles south of where it caught fire. The 10 crewmen aboard the sailing vessel tried unsuccessfully to locate the fire before abandoning ship on the Missouri side of the Mississippi River, said Ken Wright of Fort Meyers Beach, Fla., the captain.

Yes, defenders can score four honors

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

"If a defender has four honors, who scores them? Do they still go to the declarer? What if dummy has the honors?" These questions and others are answered in today's hand.

East took the queen of diamonds and returned his singleton trump. South played low, and West won with the queen to give South the illusion that East had the ten.

South ruffed the diamond continuation and fell into West's trap by leading a low trump. If the trumps broke normally, he reasoned, he would be down only one.

West came out from behind the bushes, winning with the ten of hearts. He drew trumps with the king and ace and then led his last diamond. East had saved his long suit, and the defenders thus took four hearts and five diamonds for a penalty of 1700 points—plus 100 for the honors.

DEFENDERS GET BONUS

Yes, the defenders get the usual bonus if one of them has four or five honors. Declarer scores for honors if he has them or if they're in the dummy.

Yes, also, South's jump to three clubs was an overbid. And he should have abandoned trumps after leading them once. He would have been down only two, and there's no harm in saving 1200 points.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer opens with one club, and you are next. The opponents are vulnerable, and you are not. You hold: S-J1063; H-2; D-AQ10953; C-74. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds. Most experts use the jump overcall to promise a good six-card suit with much less than opening-bid strength. If you and your partner believe in strong jump overcalls, you should bid one diamond or pass.

Holiday floral workshop set at Midland College

A three-day workshop in holiday floral arrangement will be offered at Midland College Nov. 14 through 16, according to James Bramlett, director of Community Services at Midland College.

Featuring Thanksgiving and Christmas floral decorations, the workshop titled "Fun with Flowers" will be headed by Norma Risinger.

Mrs. Risinger explains ways to incorporate artificial flowers and foliage into special arrangements, the composition of centerpieces and designs for highlight bouquets.

Festive ribbon work and package embellishments also will be discussed.

Classes are scheduled Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 104 of the Occupational-Technical Building. The fee for the workshop is $6.

Pre-registration is in progress now between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays in room 140 of the Occ-Tech Building.

The office will remain open during the lunch hour. More information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

Theft, burglary losses reported to city police

Thefts and burglaries resulting in total losses of $940 were reported to to police during the past two days.

Steven Clark of the 1800 block of North Big Spring Street told Midland police early Wednesday an FM eight-track record player valued at about $240 was taken from his residence around 12:15 a.m.

Police said entry was made through a back door which had been forced open.

Bobby Westbrook of the 1200 block of Montgomery told police late Tuesday a .38-caliber pistol valued at approximately $70 was missing.

Officers said they were told the gun was removed from a bedroom about 3 p.m. and that the residence was left unlocked.

Cleo Jones told police Tuesday $100 in cash was removed from the billfold of Euel Hill of the 2800 block of Midland Drive between 6 p.m. Monday and 11 a.m. Tuesday.

Caesar Brannon of the 1700 block of East Pecan Avenue reported that between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Tuesday his .45-caliber pistol valued at $100 and $150 in cash were removed from his home.

Entry was gained through a bedroom window, according to officers.

Johnny Galindo of the 2300 block of Orchard Lane told police Tuesday a watch valued at $105 and an AM-FM stereo eight track cassette machine with two speakers valued at approximately $325 were missing.

Both entry and exit were made through either the front or back doors, said authorities, who added that both doors had been found opened.

Endrin faces EPA curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency said Tuesday it wants to restrict severely the use of the chemical endrin on agricultural crops, saying it may cause birth defects in humans and is a clear threat to wildlife.

After reviewing endrin for more than two years, the EPA proposed that its use "be allowed to continue on wheat and apple orchards, and on cotton in some areas" but only under new restrictions.

The EPA's conclusions have been forwarded to its scientific advisory panel and to the Agriculture Department, Velsicol Chemical Corp. — the only U.S. maker — and environmental groups, the agency said.

Comments from those will be considered before a final decision is reached on the chemical's use.

Edward Nassar much more than just a victim

EDITOR'S NOTE — Often after a murder, the victim is lost in the shuffle of time and legalities. Attention is focused on the person or persons struggling to avoid the pronounced sentence of death.

Almost without realizing it, the public often struggles along with the prisoner — even finds mercy when the prisoner expresses his desire for death.

Only when the crime is massively repugnant, as in the Manson slayings, will the public remember the victim.

This story, by Chris Sexton of the Beaumont Journal, concerns Edward Nassar of Mobile, Ala. Eddie Nassar was shot in the back by self-admitted slayer John Evans III of Beaumont, Jan. 5, 1977 in Nassar's pawn shop.

Evans and his companion, Wayne Ritter, were sentenced to death.

Much publicity has been given to Evans' fight to change Alabama's execution method from electrocution to death by injection. He receives supportive mail daily.

Except for the initial story, little has been written about the victim. Whom did Evans kill that day?

MOBILE, Alabama (AP) — Harriet Nassar is withdrawn and intensely private. She seldom sees the friends she and her husband mutually shared.

Her two daughters, Ashley, 11, and Rachel, 9, go to school as usual, but soon after the murder, Rachel began talking incessantly about her daddy. An uncle, Richard, looks so much like his brother, Rachel would sometimes just stare at him.

Nassar was special to those around him, helping those he could.

"I've been in his shop," says Gerald Fowler, now of Orange, "when someone would come in and say, 'I'm broke, I don't have a job and I'm hungry,' and Eddie would reach in his pocket and give them what he had."

Most people seemed to know they could go to Nassar for help. He was by no means wealthy but people knew somehow Nassar would help them, says Jim Webster, a close family friend.

A TANNED, DARK HAIRED man of 33, Nasser, of Lebanese background, was known by his friends as a Bible scholar, using most of his spare time to study.

The day he died, Nassar had been studying for a Wednesday class he was to teach that night at Pleasant Valley Church of Christ. The Bible was open on the counter where he had been preparing a lesson.

Nassar had left as minister of another congregation to open the pawn shop because a lesson he had prepared on racism was not met with acceptance or understanding.

"Eddie was deeply concerned about racism preventing the spread of the gospel," says Leslie Parks, youth minister at Pleasant Valley.

He had been trained in the pawn shop business by his father. In 1973, a tragedy occured in the shop Nassar had taken over from his father. That tragedy affected the rest of his life.

SOME MEN WERE HOLDING guns to his head and the head of a co-worker during an attempted robbery when a deaf-mute walked in. The man, James Coxwell, could not understand the robbers' orders and they shot him.

Thereafter, Nassar carried a gun in the shop and tried to keep a second person with him to deter any possible robbery attempt.

"He was very nervous from then on," says Webster. "If anyone walked in with their hands in their pockets, or wearing a coat, Eddie would get jumpy. It was the main reason he was dreading going back into the business."

Webster said the only reason Nassar would pull his gun was if he was absolutely certain it was a matter of life and death.

"If Evans and Ritter," said a friend who does not want to be identified, "had asked for the money, Eddie would probably have given it to them. Things weren't important to him. Life was important to him."

NASSAR'S CONCERN FOR LIFE extended into almost every facet. Webster said a couple who married at 16 might not have made it through the first months if Nassar had not been willing to spend so much time with them.

Young people also were of concern to him. "He was kind of their ringleader," said Webster. "And since his death, the young couples don't seem to get together as much, either."

Nassar never got the Bible degree he wanted. Webster graduated from Freed-Hardeman College in Tennessee in 1963 and Nassar, his roommate, left school, working on the degree a little at a time, taking classes at Alabama Christian College.

Of Nassar's beliefs and feelings, Webster says Nassar believed in capital punishment. "I think he would have approved the verdict given his killer," said Webster.

He said Mrs. Nassar "feels strongly about Evans' and Ritter's arrogance."

ACCORDING TO A BEAUMONT Journal story, both Evans and Ritter laughed and joked throughout the trial. It says they "seemed pleased with the verdict" given in April 1977.

"I've always been pretty much of a loner," said Evans. "I have never in my life cared or thought much about what people think of me. I just felt like there was nothing for me."

The pair committed nine kidnappings, two extortions, 39 armed robberies and the murder during a spree spanning nine states. They spent about $25,000.

Evans said Nassar went for his gun, and it was a matter of "him or me. You always go in ready," said Evans. "You know the chances you take, and you know the consequences."

ON THE DAY OF THE slaying, Mrs. Nassar took a deposit to the bank about five blocks up the street around 4 p.m. The children, as they did every day, had come home from school at 3:30 p.m. and were playing and watching television in the far side of the shop.

About 4:15 p.m., Nassar was showing a customer a gun when the man began loading it.

It was obvious to Nassar what the man intended, so he ducked behind the counter. As Nassar turned the corner and was near the walk-in safe, he started to pull out his gun. The girls were unaware of the situation as they played nearby.

Before Nassar could make his move, another man, whom Nassar apparently had not seen, shot Nassar in the back. The two men fled. Nassar told his girls to go for help. Thinking he was kidding, they were uncertain what to do.

WHEN PEOPLE BEGAN coming in the shop, however, and the girls began to realize what had happened, they "went to pieces" said Webster.

Mrs. Nassar returned from the bank to find her husband still alive.

Within a few hours, though, the doctors were saying his spine was splintered and that he might be paralyzed.

"While we were struggling with the prospect that Eddie would be paralyzed," said Webster, who had been called to the hospital, "They came out and told us the back side of his heart had been blown away. They didn't know how he had lived as long as he did."

Nassar died at 7 p.m.

Why did it happen? Webster says, "This is a pretty troublesome world. Maybe God wanted to spare Eddie of it all."

Evans says he wants to die, but by injection. "I want my death to mean something to me," he said.

Perhaps as much as Edward Nassar wanted life to mean something to others.

New sentence sought for Houston policemen

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Department of Justice attorneys, who want stiffer penalties imposed against three Houston ex-policemen given probated sentences for pushing a Mexican-American into a bayou where he drowned, told a federal appeals court Wednesday the punishment was illegal.

They asked the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to order a Houston federal judge to impose a new sentence on the former officers who drew 10-year probated sentences for beating Jose Campos Torres Jr. and pushing him into Buffalo Bayou.

In a unique plea, the department challenged the sentences as illegal. It was the first time the issue had been raised.

"You want to just wipe the slate clean and let him start all over, is that it?" asked Judge Robert A. Ainsworth Jr. of New Orleans, one of three judges on the 5th Circuit panel.

"Yes sir," replied John Huerta, a department lawyer from Washington who argued the government's accusation against U.S. District Judge Ross N. Sterling.

The former policemen were Terry Wayne Denson, Stephen Orlando and Joseph James Janish. They were convicted of negligent homicide in state court prior to trial on federal civil rights charges.

A federal jury found them guilty of conspiring to deprive Torres of his constitutional right not be stripped of liberty without due process of law. The prosecution said this deprivation took place on May 6, 1977, when Torres was arrested, beaten up while handcuffed, then shoved into the bayou.

Maximum punishment on that count would be life in prison. Judge Sterling imposed a 10-year sentence on each man, then suspended sentence and instead ordered supervised probation for five years.

The second count said the officers, acting under color of law, struck Torres, depriving him of due process of law. On that, the sentence was one year in prison.

Huerta said the U.S. Criminal Code requires a prison sentence on an offense punishable by life in prison. Therefore, he said, Judge Sterling had no authority to substitute probation for the 10-year sentences.

Michael A. Andrews, a defense lawyer, argued that the law should not be followed to the letter and that the "government is taking a very narrow view" of what Congress intended when it passed the law.

Another defense lawyer, Robert C. Bennett Jr. of Houston, said if Congress intended to ban probation in such offenses it would have said so.

Pope will devote time to human rights issue

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II said today he will devote a lot of time and effort to the issue of human rights, which he called "the great effort of our time."

He said people everywhere should defend themselves when their rights are violated.

"It is necessary to regard with respect the manifold programs and the activity, sometime reform-minded, of various tendencies and systems," the pope said. "At the same time, it is necessary to be aware that it is not a question above all of systems, but of justice and man. It cannot be man for the system, but the system must be for man. Therefore it is necessary to defend oneself from any stiffening of the system."

The pope said he was referring to social, economic, political and cultural systems and added: "From this point of view it is necessary to evaluate the great effort of our time that tries to spell out and consolidate 'human rights' in the life of today's mankind, of people as well as of states.

The Polish-born pontiff spoke at length in seven languages — Italian, French, English, German, Spanish, Portuguese and Polish — because, he said, "thanks to God, I found in the hall many people who greeted me in my native language."

Stanton, Andrews, Crane face unbeaten opponents on Friday

By STEVE O'BRIEN
R-T Sports Writer

With just two more weeks remaining in the regular season, three area football teams face critical encounters Friday that will likely determine if they are to extend their seasons at least another week.

The three area teams still involved in district races are Stanton, Andrews and Crane but all three also have the dubious pleasure of trying to keep their playoff ambitions alive against unbeaten opponents.

Andrews has the toughest task as they try to prevent Fort Stockton from wrapping up the District 2-AAA title Friday night. Stanton will square off with Seagraves for the inside track at the 5-A crown and Crane's Golden Cranes hope to eliminate the possibility of a coin flip deciding the District 7-AA champion when they meet Sonora.

FORT STOCKTON, the third ranked team in the latest Associated Press poll of Class AAA schools, registered their eighth straight shutout of the season by beating previously unbeaten Pecos, 21-0 last week, and could clinch the title by beating Andrews in Fort Stockton. Andrews has been saddled with a pair of losses on the year, but they are currently locked in first place in the district with Fort Stockton with a 2-0 mark.

THE MUSTANGS, the defending league champions, are decided underdogs against the Panthers, however. Andrews has compiled it's unbeaten district mark against Odessa Ector and Monahans who have won only four games between them this year and have the toughest part of their league slate still ahead of them with Fort Stockton this week and Pecos next week. Fort Stockton, on the other hand, has already disposed of Pecos, the top threat to their bid for a title, and will have only a 2-6 Ector squad to deal with after Andrews.

THE CONTEST will feature a confrontation of the league's two top rushers, Andrews' Van Pearcy and Fort Stockton's Paul Pogue. Pearcy, just a sophomore, tops the rushing charts with 858 yards while Pogue is a distant second with 682 yards. But, the two runners' per carry averages are almost identical with Pearcy averaging 6.4 yards and Pogue 6.6.

Seagraves could also nail down a trip to the playoffs with a win over Stanton. But, that is easier said than done. Seagraves, 8-0 on the season, stands atop the league charts with a 5-0 mark, a scant half game better than Stanton. Stanton is 5-2-1 on the season but is in the midst of a six game unbeaten string. The Buffaloes dropped their first two games of the season to a pair of AA schools, Tahoka and Coahoma, won three straight before tying Plains 10-10 and have won their last two since then.

STANTON GOES into the game fresh off a 72-0 thumping of winless Anton, a game which saw eight different players score 11 touchdowns, all on the ground. Seagraves also had an impressive warmup for this showdown by blitzing Forsan, 50-0.

After Sonora came back to score two fourth quarter touchdowns to tie Kermit 14-14 last week in a key District 7-AA confrontation, much has been said of the possibility of a coin flip deciding the district championship. Well, Crane can make all that talk meaningless with a win over unbeaten and twice-tied Sonora Friday. The Golden Cranes, 7-1 on the season, dumped Ozona 32-0 last week in their district opener to grab the top spot in the four-team conference and a win over the Bronchos would make them 2-0 for their finale against Kermit.

SONORA TOPS both the offensive and defensive district charts while Crane stands second in both categories. The Bronchos have relied heavily on the rushing game, picking up 1,751 yards on the ground in seven games. The bulk of the rushing chores fall to the lot of Wayne McLaughlin, the district's top rusher with 745 yards. He rushed for 121 yards on 29 carries and scored both Sonora touchdowns in last week's standoff.

Crane's Dewayne Draper and Carl Gibbs stand as the league's' third and fourth best rushers with 1,124 yards between them. Draper has ac-

Switzer has won 5 straight

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — They ascended five years ago at Norman, Neb., and at Lincoln, both inheriting successful football programs, the offensive and defensive alignments their teams still use and fans with a voracious appetite for victory.

Both won much more often than they lost.

But there is a critical difference in the records of Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer and Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, whose squads battle Saturday on national television for a share of the Big Eight Conference title and almost certainly an Orange Bowl bid.

Switzer, the winningest active coach in bigtime collegiate football among those with at least five years experience, has not lost to an Osborne-coached team since each became head coach in 1973.

Switzer, whose Sooners are undefeated and ranked No. 1 nationally, has a lifetime record of 60 wins, five losses and two ties.

He pondered his record against the Cornhuskers and Osborne this week and said, "If those games had been reversed, he (Osborne) would have been the winningest coach in major college football."

It's true. Osborne has a lifetime record of 54-14-2. If Nebraska had won all five games instead of losing them, the quiet Nebraska coach would be 59-9-2 and Switzer would be 55-10-2. Penn State's Joe Paterno would be somewhere between at 121-24-1.

"He's got the wins. I don't," said Osborne, reacting to the statistical twist.

Switzer reviewed those five years of head-to-head competition and the year before, 1972, when both were assistants at their schools and when Oklahoma started the streak. "It's simple. Of the six times I've beaten him, four of the times we were just better teams than they were, and two times, 1972 and 1976, we just lucked out in the fourth quarter."

A successful coach can be sent to the doghouse by fans because of prob-

Sports Act is signed by Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has signed into law legislation expected to stop squabbling among U.S. amateur athletic groups and to beef up the nation's participation in international athletic competition, especially the Olympic Games.

The Amateur Sports Act of 1978 promotes and coordinates amateur athletic activity in the United States, recognizes certain rights for the amateur athlete and provides for resolution of disputes involving national sports governing bodies such as the Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Carter, in signing the measure, said, "I hope this legislation will strengthen United States participation in international amateur sports competition and broaden opportunities for all Americans to enjoy amateur sports."

The President's Commission on Olympic Sports, created in 1975 by President Ford, studied amateur sports in this country and concluded that 50 years of feuding between sports organizations had hampered the nation's athletes.

Carter said the legislation, based on the findings of the commission, "establishes procedures and guidelines to resolve disputes without placing the federal government in control of amateur sports.

"The act designates the U.S. Olympic Committee as the coordinating body for amateur sports, restructures the Olympic Committee and many of its constituent organizations, and gives the Olympic Committee a mandate to resolve disputes through arbitration," he said.

In his brief message, Carter did not mention funds to carry out the USOC restructruring, although he earlier signed a separate measure authorizing $16 million to implement the reorganization.

In addition to the USOC reorganization, the funds will be used for the improvement of national training centers in Colorado Springs and Squaw Valley and establishment of others, as well as creation of sports medicine programs.

Nebraska, Texas to capture wins

By WILL GRIMSLEY

It's a proud number to wear — No. 1 — but it's as deadly as a black cat tripping under a ladder and smashing a mirror into 13 pieces. It's like making the cover of a slick magazine. If you're No. 1, you worry about keeping it. If you're not, you play your innards out to get it.

Such are emotional factors Saturday in the game between No. 1 Oklahoma (9-0) and No. 4 Nebraska (9-1), hungering for revenge. Even if the Sooners have the muscle, the Cornhuskers should have an edge in desire. We'll see.

Last week's score: 45-12, .780. Season: 310-1109, .739.

Nebraska 33, Oklahoma 30: After the race horse backs of both teams run each other out of breath, Billy Todd's FG wins it.

Penn State 27, North Carolina State 14: The Nittany Lions prolong major college football's longest winning streak.

Alabama 24, LSU 14: The Tide trumps the Tigers' ace, Charles Alexander, and leads with Tony Nathan.

Southern Cal 32, Washington 20: The Trojans refuse to be upstaged by their northern rivals in the Rose Bowl race.

Texas 18, Houston 14: It's Texas' version of the shootout in the OK corral.

Michigan 30, Northwestern 7: The Wolverines have to be looking ahead to the Purdue game.

UCLA 35, Oregon State 6: The Californians won't give the Beavers much meat to gnaw on.

Florida 19, Georgia 14: The improving Gators put a crimp in the Bulldogs' SEC title hopes.

Purdue 28, Wisconsin 13: The way Purdue throws the ball around, who'd guess Coach Jim Young learned at Woody Hayes' knee?

Maryland 33, Virginia 7: The Terrapins get a chance to let wounds heal from the Penn State clobbering.

Notre Dame 25, Tennessee 14: The Vols' Johnny Majors knows what to expect, but can do little about it.

Clemson 28, North Carolina 14: The Tar Heels have fallen upon lean times and Clemson can't be too sympathetic.

Arkansas 25, Baylor 10: The Razorbacks have the talent — it's just a matter of putting it in a jar.

Michigan State 23, Minnesota 7: A good year for the men of Sparta — no wooden horse cached here.

Navy 19, Syracuse 14: A good chance for an upset here, but Syracuse lacks the strength to capitalize on Navy's letdown.

Pittsburgh 22, West Virginia 18: A mountain feud, always closer than it should be — the Hatfields and the Coys started it.

Midland College wins basketball opener, 85-70

BY TED BATTLES

Midland College opened its 1978-79 basketball season with a 85-70 victory over the McMurry College JV, the kind of rough edged contest that is customary in openers, but the real story was the site of the game.

A record crowd for an MC game showed up for the Chaps' debut in the spacious new Chaparral Center. and if any ever saw a game in the "old" MC Physical Education building, they probably never noticed that the game was missing mid-season polish, so plush and relaxing were the new surroundings.

A crowd of 100 in the Chaparrals' previous home would have created a din that would have left the ears ringing long after the game. And the estimated 1,000 fans who turned out Wednesday would have overmatched the three-year-old MC PE building, but was almost lost in the yawning sea of 5,200 blue and yellow seats. And no one went home with abused ear drums.

LOOKING OVER the beautiful surroundings before the game, officials Byron Johnston and Terry Taylor marveled it was a long way from Flower Grove and changing into their uniforms in a car 12 years ago when they began as a team.

Midland Lee Coach Paul Stueckler was a spectator after working out his Rebels at the Center earlier in the day and commented, "The thing I like is that I can sit without feeling pinched. A lot of the new arenas I've been in have small chairs, but these are nice and comfortable. You can really enjoy a game here."

Stueckler even hinted he might not be adverse to moving a few Lee games, other than those already scheduled, to the Center, "If I weren't so reluctant to give up that home court edge. It's tempting, but looking back over our home record, we have an impressive winning percentage on our home court."

AS FOR the game, perhaps it wasn't Picasso perfect, but that will come. The Chaps and, for that matter, the Indians, flashed some fancy footwork and sleight-of-hand passing to ooh and ahh the crowd, only to miss the basket.

Still, there was enough promise shown to satisfy Coach Jerry Stone.

"I'm not disappointed. We missed some shots and were ragged in places, but this is a good group and we're going to be all right. It may have been partly due to the fact that this was our first game in the Center. There was a lot of pressure building up on them for this game and maybe they were trying too hard."

THE CHAPS got a 17 point effort out of veteran Luis Alvarado, the 6-7 postman from El Paso, and a 16-point spree out of newcomer Kenneth Young, a 6-5 power forward from Houston Wheatley. Also in double figures were sophomore Henry White (10), and freshman Chuck McGill, 6-5 from Dallas South Oak Cliff (13).

The Chaps broke out of an 8-8 tie to run up a 17-8 lead on a basket by McGill, a couple of free throws by freshman Robert Tate and a brace of buckets by Cullen Mayfield. The Chaps stayed in front the rest of the way, but could never run off and leave McMurry, a sophomore-freshman team that was better than its JV label might suggest.

"They recruited a good group of freshmen and I expect some of them to be on the varsity when the season starts," Stone predicted. "Especially, that No. 51 (Randy Woodard, a 6-5 freshman from Houston Sterling)."

Woodard wound up with 10 points, but it was 6-6 Keith White, a teammate of Woodard's at Sterling, who led the scoring with 19 points, 15 coming in the last half.

MC LED at half 36-29 and it was Young who threatened to make it a runaway by scoring four baskets in a spree just after half that vaulted the Chaps into a 48-34 lead, but the Indians battled back to trail 60-51 with seven minutes left before Tate hit a two-pointer, and McGill a three-pointer. Young then scored to make it 67-52 and was tagged with his fifth personal foul on the play and left for the showers, but not before he had scored 12 second half points.

Stone employed all 13 players on his roster 10 of them broke into the scoring column.

MC returns to action next Wednesday against the Wayland College JV in its final action before the Chaparral Tournament at the end of the month.

counted for 577 yards and Gibbs has added 547.

In other area action Friday night, Lamesa hosts Brownfield in a battle of the District 3-AAA cellar-dwellers. Lamesa is 1-7 on the season, dropping a 28-15 decision to Snyder last week. Snyder clinched the district championship with that win.

RANKIN'S RED DEVEILS play host to Marfa in a game that can only decide who will play bridesmade to Iraan in District 6-A. Iraan sewed up that title last week by walloping Marfa with a 420-yard rushing attack in a 47-7 win.

Marfa is 6-3 on the season after that loss and 2-1 in district play while Rankin is 6-2 and 1-1, their lone district loss also coming at the hands of Iraan. Though Rankin has been eliminated from title contention, that hasn't stopped bruising fullback Richard Barrett. The big senior has rushed for 1,237 yards in Rankin's eight games and has scored 16 touchdowns.

MCCAMEY'S BADGERS hope to avert being shut out of the district win column when they host Clint. McCamey, 3-5 on the season and 0-2 in league play, had an off date to get ready for this one. Clint is also 0-2 in district play after dropping a 22-21 decision to Rankin last week. Clint is 4-3-1 on the season.

The Reagan County Owls can double their win total of a year ago by beating Mason in their District 9-A match in Mason Friday night. The Owls, 2-8 a year ago, are 3-5 on the season now and were in contention for a district championship until last week. District front-runner Junction knocked off the Owls 27-19 to drop Reagan County to 1-2 in district play. Mason is also 1-2 in league games, losing to Menard, 14-7 last week.

FRIDAY'S SCHEDULE

DISTRICT 2-AAA
Andrews at Fort Stockton; Ector at Monahans; Pecos is open.

DISTRICT 3-AAA
Brownfield at Lamesa; San Angelo Lakeview at Sweetwater; Snyder is open.

DISTRICT 7-AA

DISTRICT 5-A
Ropesville at Anton; Forsan at O'Donnell; Shallowater at Plains; Stanton at Seagraves.

DISTRICT 6-A

Holmes gets prime time on TV with Evangelista

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Larry Holmes, having proven a success on national television last time out, returns to prime time Friday night on ABC to defend his World Boxing Council heavyweight crown against Spain's Alfredo Evangelista.

Holmes beat Ken Norton to gain the title five months ago and put to rest, for the time being anyway, the notion that boxing won't sell in prime time unless Muhammad Ali is on the card. Holmes-Norton chalked up an impressive 19.7 rating — percentage of TV homes — and 40 share — percentage of sets in use — and ABC is projecting slightly higher numbers this time around.

The three-fight card will run from 8-11 p.m. EST, and producer Chet Forte says he'll start the show with a 10-rounder matching Norton against Randy Stephens of Dallas to try and grab the audience early. The second bout, a 15-rounder, will match WBC super featherweight champ Alexis Arguello against Arturo Leon of Tucson, Ariz., then the Holmes-Evangelista 15-rounder will close the show.

"If every fight goes the distance, what you see is what you get," says Forte. But, as usual, he will have a barrel of taped material for use if one or more of the bouts ends early.

Howard Cosell will call the first and last fights by himself, as has been his custom. Chris Schenkel was supposed to call the second bout but his availability is questionable due to a pulled back muscle.

CBS, returning to its senses, will not televise the Heisman Trophy presentation this year. Last year the network turned the time-honored college football award into an excuse for a variety show, climaxing an hour of singing, dancing and lame jokes with "and now the envelope, please."

The show did not fare well in the ratings, the critics were merciless and outraged football writers vowed never to participate in the voting again. The Downtown Athletic Club, which gives the award, got heat from all quarters for "selling out to TV."

Thus there will be no Heisman Trophy Follies this time around. CBS Sports officials are quick to point out they had nothing to do with the show, it was the CBS Entertainment Division's baby.

Fred Rappoport, associate director of special programming for CBS Entertainment, refused to comment on the subject, saying he had to get clearance from someone else before he could say anything. Apparently he never got it.

That's the way TV operates.

ABC News appropriated the studio used for the ABC college football scoreboard show last weekend to prepare for election coverage. So ABC Sports decided to take the show on the road, moving to Cleveland where the Navy-Notre Dame was being played.

The network promised "live" coverage of the undefeated Midshipmen against the Irish but provided only one "live" play, a line plunge by Notre Dame. This may have been a disappointment to some but the network's explanation is pretty good.

As with many of these curious TV developments, one must consult the fine print in the contract, in this case ABC's contract with the NCAA. The contract states that ABC was not permitted to leave its national game — Maryland vs. Penn State — while that game was in progress. And ABC is also limited to two minutes of action — live or on tape — from Navy-Notre Dame at a time. If it showed more than that, it would count as a full appearance by both schools and that would mean that Notre Dame, for example, could not be carried again this year.

ABC switched to Cleveland during halftime of the Maryland-Penn State game and director Terry O'Neil decided to show one play to establish what was happening in the game at present, then use the rest of his two minutes for highlights of the game to date.

"In my mind there was very little choice," says O'Neil. "I could have shown live action for two minutes but we could have had three line plunges and a punt. Also we would run the risk of following the ball down to the 2-year line, then having to cut away."

His decision was obviously a good one: you only have two minutes, you show the most exciting plays. However, ABC officials are guilty of misleading the public by promising "live reports from Navy-Notre Dame" when they know the most they can hope for is a maximum of two minutes of action.

Soviets are using drugs in gymnastics

NEW YORK (AP) — When Maurice Chevalier sang about little girls, he probably wasn't talking about Soviet gymnasts because, according to some officials of the sport, these little girls don't get bigger every day.

"When you look at the Russian girls and they tell you how old they are, you can't help thinking that they're taking drugs," said Ernestine Weaver, coach of the American women at last month's World Gymnastics Championships.

An Associated Press report Wednesday quoted several European officials as saying that gymnasts from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe were using a "brake" drug that works on the pituitary gland to retard the body's development.

The result, according to the officials, is a Peter Pan of the parallel bars who isn't allowed to grow up.

"It looks like they jumped right out of the test tube," said Weaver from her home in Clarion, Pa.

To a gymnast, extra baggage can be a liability when she is trying to whip her frame through arduous maneuvers. Nadia Comaneci, the darling of the 1976 Olympics, blossomed into a 16-year-old woman, 20 pounds heavier, at the World Championships in Strasbourg, France.

"You could see the change in Nadia," said Weaver. "She had become a woman. She had a bustline. She wasn't heavy; she just had grown up."

And you could see the change in her results. Nadia finished out of the money as the Soviet girls — Elena Mukhinas, Nellie Kim and Natalia Shaposhnikova — swept the first three places in the overall standings.

Weaver said Kim was very poised and chatted with the American team about the whereabouts of retired stars Olga Korbut and Ludmilla Tourischeva. But, she said, Mukhinas, Shaposhnikova and tiny Maria Filatova were different.

"I saw Filatova three or four years ago and she had no neck, a small torso and real long legs. This time she had grown a little bit. But those kids don't even act like 17 or 18-year-olds. They act like little babies."

Even Comaneci expressed bewilderment at the baby-doll proportions of Filatova. "I can't believe that Filatova is a year older than I am," said the Romanian Nadia.

Switzer tough coach to beat

lems with a particular team, and Osborne reflected on possible pressure, "Sure. Some. There is not much you can do about that. It doesn't bother me any."

Osborne's predecessor, the Nebraska athletic director and legend Bob Devaney, said, "He wants to win, but I don't think it is a burden he can't bear."

Said Osborne, "We are 0-5 against Oklahoma but so are a lot of other good teams. There are not very many teams that have beaten them."

Nebraska is 8-1 with a No. 4 national ranking and will be playing at home before a traditional Big Red capacity crowd. Neither coach would pinpoint a coaching key.

"We must play a complete game against Oklahoma. You can't just do one or two things well. You have to do it all well."

Both will send in a 5-2 defense. Nebraska's defensive ends will have to live up to their reputation of mobility against Switzer's Wishbone offense. Osborne will stick to the I-formation, built around a hard blocking fullback and slippery I-back.

Switzer probably won't be thinking about a planned Nov. 20 bird-hunting trip "to let off pressure" and Osborne's mind won't be wandering to his favorite fishing hole on Lake McConaughy in western Nebraska. Each will be trying to earn his $38,000 salary across the synthetic carpet from the other.

Billy 'Whiteshoes' will undergo surgery

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler kick return specialist Billy "White Shoes" Johnson, plagued by a recurring knee injury, will undergo surgery Friday and be lost for the rest of the season, an Oiler spokesman announced Wednesday.

Johnson missed the entire Oiler training camp in a contract dispute and when he returned to action against the Dallas Cowboys in preseason, he suffered a knee injury during the third quarter.

Johnson came back for spot performances during the regular season against San Francisco, Los Angeles and Oakland before reinjuring the knee during practice Oct. 11.

The former NFL kick return leader, returned eight putns for 60 yards and four kickoffs for 73 yards in his abbreviated season.

Hazards are numerous in Victoria golf

VICTORIA FALLS, Rhodesia (AP) — When they talk of hazards at the Victoria Falls Classic golf tournament, they're not talking about sand traps.

Just getting to the famed resort takes a bit of nerve. To safeguard against the kind of SAM-7 missile that brought down an Air Rhodesia plane two months ago, pilots now come in on a low zig-zag course before touching down at the airport.

The 14-mile drive into Victoria Falls is behind a police escort, and the 10-square-mile village is ringed by land mines regularly set off by unfortunate elephants or baboons.

Then there's Zambia, just across the river from the Elephant Hills Country Club, where black nationalist guerrillas have their bases and from where they occasionally pop a rocket or mortar at Victoria Falls.

In case any reminder is still needed, the charred skeleton of the once-plush Elephant Hills Hotel looms over the par-73 course. The hotel was struck by an errant anti-aircraft missile just after last year's classic and most of it burned down.

There are also the elephants, buffaloes, hippopotomi and the like. They wander across the course at will, leaving massive, deep footprints and equally impressive droppings in the soggy turf.

Basketball league meeting is set

A meeting will be held for the Men's Basketball League Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Parks and Recreation gym at 300 Baldwin Street.

Anyone who wishes to submit a team or who has already submitted a team by phone needs to attend. The league will not be formed unless enough interested people attend. Only three teams have been submitted.

Further information on the league may be obtained by calling the Parks and Recreation office at 683-4281, ext. 280.

Syracuse overwhelms Yougoslav cage team

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Marty Headd's 16 points led a balanced offense as Syracuse University overwhelmed a touring Yougoslav basketball team 121-57 here.

Roosevelt Bouie and freshman Ron Paypon each scored 15 points for Syracuse in Tuesday night's exhibition game.

Aco Petrovic led the Zibona team with 11 points. Zibona is 1-4-4 for the tour against American college teams.

Seaver agrees with contract

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tom Seaver and the Cincinnati Reds have lost no time in agreeing to a contract that makes the veteran right-hander baseball's latest millionaire.

Seaver called his five-year salary package — reportedly worth $2 million — "the easiest contract I ever negotiated." The contract makes Seaver, 33, one of the highest-paid pitchers in baseball.

The three-time Cy Young Award winner could have played out his option in 1979 and put himself up for bids in the free agent draft. He reached agreement with the Reds while touring Japan with the National League club.

"I had in mind a figure that I thought was fair and equitable. The Reds were willing to pay me that. What more could I ask?" he said in a telephone interview from Nagoya.

He said he decided on a figure "that I thought was fair to both sides, a figure that took into consideration the way things are today and my contribution to baseball over the years. I mentioned the figure and the Reds agreed to pay, almost immediately."

The Reds acquired Seaver in June 1977 after a bitter salary dispute with the New York Mets' chairman of the board M. Donald Grant. He was earning $275,000 a year with the Mets and he agreed not to renegotiate until his New York contract expired after the 1978 season.

Seaver slipped to 16-14 in 1978 — the most losses he ever suffered in one season — but he finished with a solid a 2.87 earned run average. The highlight was his first no-hitter.

The signing comes at a time when the Reds are embroiled in a heated contract feud with veteran batting star Pete Rose.

"I've been down that road myself," said Seaver. "I know what it's like and it's a shame that relationships like that have to develop."

In signing Seaver, the Reds noted in a statement that the pitching great "will assume a large leadership role with the team." The remark was interpreted by one local newspaper as meaning that the club has written off Rose. The 37-year-old third baseman is reportedly leaning toward the Philadelphia Phillies or the San Diego Padres.

Norton ready to face Stevens in Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "Anytime you get over $200,000 you can call it a main event," says Ken Norton.

But Norton's scheduled 10-rounder against Randy Stevens Friday night at Caesars Palace is certainly not the main event. That honor, plus a purse of $1.5 million, belongs to Larry Holmes and Alfredo Evangelista, who is getting not only $150,000 but also a chance at the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship.

Holmes gained that title by scoring a split decision over Norton here June 9.

Holmes did a little gloating over that accomplishment Wednesday at a news conference when he said:

"I don't want to be like Ken Norton ... to have the title for three months and lose it. He worked hard and it's a shame that in his first defense he had to fight me."

"He has to say something," said Norton. "It doesn't bother me. I have nothing to say."

Norton had to work his way back after a two-round knockout in a title bid against George Foreman in 1974 and had to scrap his way back after a decision loss to Muhammad Ali in 1976. Now, he knows, he has to do it again.

When introduced at Wednesday's news conference, Norton said, "Well, I haven't a lot to say because I'm a supporting actor on this show."

A loss to Stevens, who has a 10-4-0 record, would probably make Norton an ex-fighter.

Phillips produces

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Indiana State's quarterback had no doubt who the best defender in the Missouri Valley Conference was Saturday.

Southern Illinois defensive tackle James Phillips became closely acquainted with Indiana State quarterback Scott Bartel during Southern Illinois' 28-7 win over the Sycamores Saturday.

Phillips, a 6-2, 250-pound sophomore defensive tackle from Collierville, Tenn., led a Saluki defense that dropped Bartel for losses eight times.

Rebels will bounce back with victory

Last week's game between the Robert E. Lee Rebels and Odessa Permian Panthers was one of the best defensive high school games played in these parts in recent years.

This corner has been covering District 5-4A for 16 years and can't recall one in which both teams played such outstanding defense. Too bad there had to be a loser in that one, but the Panthers did what they needed to in order to win. Lee played well and at times, whipped Mojo physically, and the outcome is all that matters, not the statistics, but the score at the end of the game. Lee fans told Odessans that two years ago when the Rebels won, 14-13 and this year, it's the Mojo fans doing the same thing.

It's getting to be some game year after year.

Taking a look at last week's predictions, in 46 games, this corner hit 40 correct for the best percentage of the year, .870 and on the year the record reads 317 right and 67 wrong for an .820 percentage.

Injuries could have a lot to do with the outcome of 5-4A games this week.

MIDLAND LEE faces the rugged Abilene High Eagles in Memorial Stadium and the Warbirds are 6-2 on the year and 4-1 in 5-4A play, just one game behind Permian. Lee is bound to be down this week after that tough 14-3 loss to Mojo, but it won't be down that much. Coach Gil Bartosh will send his troops out to pick up a 28-7 victory over the Eagles as the Rebs shoot for a 9-1 season record, making them the best 9-1 team in the state...

MIDLAND HIGH comes off a big 15-7 victory over Odessa High in Odessa last week and the surprising Purple Pack stands 4-4 on the year and 3-2 in league play for third place in the standings behind Lee and Abilene. The Bulldogs travel to Abilene and a date with the talented Cooper Cougars in P.E. SHotwell Stadium. Cooper ran up the score on Big Spring last week, winning, 54-0. Five starters for the Cougs, including quarterback Tracy Thomas were injured in a jeep accident last Saturday in the Key City. All five were thrown out of the jeep and Thomas had numerous stitches taken on a thigh, but all are expected to start. Going with Cooper to take a 21-8 victory...

ODESSA HIGH has lost six starters with injuries and rumors have it that two more starters have quit the squad, but that won't have any effect on the outcome of the game since the Bronchos are taking on the winless Big Spring Steers in W.T. Barrett Stadium. Am looking for Coach Dick Winder's Wild Bunch to take a 28-0 win despite all the injuries and problems...

ODESSA PERMIAN only needs one more victory in its final two outings to move into the Class AAAA state playoffs for the sixth time in the past nine years. Tailback Gregg Lambert, who suffered a wrist injury last week before the Lee game is doubtful with Ricky Reynolds slated to start against San Angelo Central. Coach John Wilkins is 2-3 against the Bobcats since becoming head coach at Permian in 1973 against Smitty Hill. Still going with Mojo to win, but it may be tougher that a lot of folks think since the Panthers can't possible be as high for Central as it was against Cooper and Lee. Permian to take a 28-8 win over the Bobcats to clinch the 5-4A championship...

OTHER GAMES: El Paso Coronado over Andress, 27-7; Austin of El Paso Eastwood, 20-14; Burges 26, Bowie 6; Irvin 14, El Paso High 0; Bel Air 52, Socorro 0; Eastwood over Ysleta High, 20-6; Tascosa 13, Amarillo 9; Palo Duro 27, Pampa 7. Holtz is happy with Hogs' drills

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Coach Lou Holtz promised Arkansas' second offensive unit Wednesday they would have more playing time when the Razorbacks meet Baylor on Saturday at Waco.

Against Rice last week, the second offensive unit was used sparingly because Holtz said they did not prepare themselves for the Rice game.

"Our alternate offense has looked much better than it did last week." Holtz said. "There's a good chance they'll see more playing time this week. Our alternate running backs, Thomas Brown and Hiram Wright, have had an outstanding week."

Holtz said Razorback receivers caught the ball well during Wednesday's workout. He praised wide receiver Bobby Duckworth for having a fine day.

Wide receiver Gary Stiggers suffered a brusied thigh during the workout, but it didn't appear serioius, according to trainer Dean Weber. Donny Bobo, a starting wide receiver who has been out all year with an injury, practiced for the second day Wednesday and should be ready to play against the Bears.

Jones may be in Colt lineup

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Colts have listed quarterback Bert Jones as a probable starter for Sunday's game against Seattle although he didn't throw at all during practice Wednesday.

Baltimore Coach Ted Marchibroda said he would decide on a day-to-basis on whether Jones will throw during practice.

Jones — who has missed most of this season with a shoulder separation — left the Colts game against Washington Monday night, his right arm held limply at his side after a running play.

But Jones re-entered the game to throw his third touchdown pass in the 21-17 Baltimore victory.

The quarterback was one of six Baltimore players injured Monday and listed as probable starters Wednesday.

Ham Jones out of Cougar tilt

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas has lost its second senior starter for the Houston game on Saturday with halfback Johnny "Ham" Jones out for two weeks with separated rib cartilage.

It was announced earlier that offensive guard Jim Yarbrough also would miss at least two weeks with nerve damage in his neck and shoulder.

Freshman Brad Beck will replace Jones, Texas' leading rusher, and freshman Mike Babb will replace Yarbrough.

Quarterback problems hurt Giants during 20-10 loss

By BOB OATES
The Los Angeles Times

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — When the New York Giants lost in St. Louis Sunday, 20-10, they launched a quarterback controversy by benching Jerry Golstyn for Joe Pisarcik with a minute to play in the first quarter.

That reminded former Ram quarterback Frank Ryan of his days in Los Angeles. Now director of athletics at Yale University, Ryan said:

"The emotional factor in football is so big that you can't win alternating quarterbacks. It's always harmful to a football player when he doesn't know where he stands. It doesn't mater how much talent he has or how smart he is. He can't play his game unless he knows he's going to be left on the field regardless of whether he makes a few mistakes."

Ryan, who led the Cleveland Browns to the 1964 world championship in a memorable win over John Unitas and Baltimore, 27-0, was involved along with Bill Wade in a famous Ram quarterback controversy in the late 1950s and early 60s. For a time, Terry Baker made it a threesome.

"Those were frustrating years," Ryan said. "I was new to pro football at the time but even then I thought the Rams would have been better off to pick one quarterback — either of us — and go with him win or lose. And of the quarterbacks I've known since those days, I've never met one who didn't agree."

Both New York passers also criticized their coach, John McVay, who dropped to a season record of 5-5 when Pisarcik threw ineffectively in relief of Golsteyn.

Said Goisteyn: "I didn't have enough time to get things settled and going."

Pisarcik: "If I'm going to be put in after three series with a few seconds left in the first quarter, if I'm good enough for that, why not start me?"

And so after losing his first eight pro games, St. Louis's Bud Wilkinson is now 2-0 for the last two weeks. A Sunday ago the Cardinals pulled out the Philadelphia game when the Eagles lost all their running backs to injury. Next, the Giants obliged Wilkinson with a quarterback hassle.

Is his luck beginning to change?

"If so," Wilkinson said, "it couldn't happen to a more deserving guy."

The Tampa Bay Bucaneers lost Doug Williams to a broken jaw this week — joining Miami, Cincinnati, Baltimore and the other teams which have tried toplay without their first-string quarterbacks this year. And the extension of the injury wave at football's key position leads to a question:

Could or should the NFL change any rules to give more protection to quarterbacks?

At his Yale office, Ryan said:

"I don't think there's anything you can do without changing the nature of the game. It's a contact sport and if you take the quarterback out of contact, it isn't football. When your quarterbacks are hurt, all you can do is open up another can of quarterbacks."

At age 42 Ryan is a walking endorsement of the skill of the NFL defensive linemen and linebackers who sacked him for a dozen years in Los Angeles, Cleveland and Washington.

"My left little finger won't work," he said. "They put two plastic joints in it at two different times but they couldn't fix it with four operations. I have a bad knee and there's still something wrong with my fifth cervical disc. The also took some bones out of one of my hips and put them in my neck, so that works better now — but I still feel the elbow and shoulder operations."

Ryan, however, wouldn't vote for any new law that would give passers equal protection with kickers.

"To block a punt, you aim for the area in front of the punter," he said. "You sholdn't come close to him if you do the job right. If you hit him, it's a foul. But passers put the ball up where you can't block it often. The defensive lineman has to aim directly for the passer to stop him. Now, how are you going to legislate against that and keep the same game?"

There is, nonetheless, one portion of a passer's anatomy that is of limts to any defensive players — his face. Thus Tampa's coach John McKay contended strenuously Monday that Ram linebacker Jim Youngblood's hit on Williams was a foul that should have been called. Youngblood said his helmet caused the damage.

"You can't punch a quarterback — or any other football player — above the neck — legally," McKay said. "I suppose the guy broke Doug's jaw hitting him in the little toe. I couldn't believe they wouldn't call a thing like that."

Malavasi bold after pulling ace from game

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Ray Malavasi looks, talks and acts like someone who fell out of a football coach's cloning machine. Yet the Rams' head man has turned out to be bolder than many of his breed and more daring than anyone imagined since he replaced George Allen back in August.

Having approved the trading of two stars (Harold Jackson and Monte Jackson) for draft choices, liberalized Los Angeles' offense and benched All-Pro linebacker Isiah Robertson, Malavasi made another surprising move when he pulled quarterback Pat Haden from a Monday night game in Atlanta when it was still up for grabs and sent in Vince Ferragamo, an unproven seond-year backup.

The Rams trailed, 12-7, when Haden was benched with 6:51 to play, did not score on Ferragamo's two series and lost to the Falcons, 15-7.

But, unwittingly or not, Malavasi probably opened an old can of worms — Ram quarterback controversies — just when it seemed Haden's starting job was finally secured after two years of turmoil.

MAYBE MALAVASI was merely trying to shake up and wake up an offense that made mistakes galore the previous Sunday in a 10-3 loss to New Orleans, which ended the Rams' unbeatn streak at seven league games. Maybe he merely pulled Haden the way baseball managers pull starting pitchers on their off days. Haden had thrown three interceptions and the club was punchless. Maybe Malavasi was merely gambling that Ferragamo could win it.

Maybe.

On the other hand the change — at that point, anyway — seemed unusual and unconventional for several reasons.

For one, Ferragamo had been under real fire only once before in his 1½ years with the Rams — and then only for a quarter in the last regular-season game of 1977 in Washingtn. Before Atlanta he had thrown exactly 20 passes as a professional.

For another, the Falcons' defense, tough enough ordinarily, was fired up by the prospect of an upset win on national TV, a win that would trim to two games th Rams' lead over both Atlanta and New Orleans in the NFC West.

Orange replaces ancient Archbold with Bubble

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The concrete stadium where such players as Jim Brown, Ernie Davis, Floyd Little and Larry Csonka played their college football will host its last football game Nov. 11.

Syracuse University's Archbold Stadium will be replaced by a $26 million, 50,000-seat stadium covered by an air-supported bubble roof of fiberglass, similar to the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich.

Syracuse University officials hope to use the domed stadium as a catalyst to put the Orangemen back on top of eastern college football.

THE 71-YEAR—OLD stadium, named after a generous alumnus, is scheduled to be demolished after the Syracuse-Navy game to make room for the new stadium to be built on the same site.

The new stadium is expected to be ready for the first home game of the 1980 season against Miami of Ohio. Next year, Syracuse home games will be divided among New York City, Buffalo and Cornell University.

During its heyday, Archbold Stadium seated more than 40,000 for games against eastern rivals Penn State and Pitt. But its seating has declined to 26,288 and its capacity has been rarely tested in recent years as Syracuse football teams have been struggling on the field.

Coach Frank Maloney, who played his college football in the nation's largest college stadium at the University of Michigan, says the decrepit Archbold Stadium has hurt his recruiting efforts. Potential players, he says, are turned off by the old stadium.

MALONEY WOULD show Archbold Stadium to visiting recruits only if they insisted.

But the new stadium could make Syracuse competitive in its recruiting battles for potential All Americas as the Orangemen try to regain the national championship they held in 1959.

"We didn't have that one big thing, that big edge, going for us in recruiting. But now we have it," said John Crouthamel.

Fort Stockton to win

While Fort Stockton and Pecos were rumbling through opponents like hot knives through butter on their way to last week's District 2-AAA showdown in Pecos, the defending league champion Andrews Mustangs were going quitely about their business in winning six of their eight games.

So, while most people were watching Fort Stockton roll to its eighth win of the year with a 21-0 whitewash of Pecos for its second district win, the almost unnoticed Mustangs were waxing Monahans 49-0 to move into a first place tie with the third-ranked Panthers and set the stage for Friday night's shootout in Fort Stockton.

SOME WOULD hesitate to call this one a shootout. Most prognosticators feel Andrews will have no more success against Fort Stockton than any of the other Panther opponents.

It's easy to see why the Panthers have been in the limelight for much of the season while Andrews has basked in obscurity. Fort Stockton has been one of the truly amazing stories in this or any other football season as they head into the final two games of the season with a chance to become only the seventh team in Texas prep football history to complete a regular season without giving up a single point.

THE PANTHERS opened the season with a 47-0 blitzing of Canutillo and that

Randolph star steals three passes in win

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

There's been another Brink's robbery in San Antonio but this one took place on a football field and was accomplished by a San Antonio Randolph player named, yes, Steve Brink.

Brink stole three Hays Consolidated passes, returning one 69 yards for a touchdown and started the winning touchdown drive with another theft in a 28-15 district showdown.

Brink also recovered a fumble and added six unassisted tackles to put the Ro-Hawks in line for their 12thTdistrict championshp in 15 years.

Brink's feat earned him mention this week in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll along with jack-of-all-trades Bo Weldon, who helped Vidor score 22 fourth quarter points to nip Port Arthur Lincoln 30-20.

"It's probably the best single effort I've ever seen in a big game," Randolph Coach Bob Mickler said. "He made some big plays and they all came at critical times. He gave us four turnovers and that's got to make a difference.

"Any time you get four turnovers in a game, you should win and we did because of him."

Vidor also won its game because of Weldon, who started the game at safety, shifted to tailback because of an injury, and finished the game at quarterback when starter Tim Rainbolt also was injured.

In the final eight minutes of the game, with Vidor trailing 20-8, Weldon intercepted two passes, recovered a fumble, scored two touchdowns, ran over a two-point conversion and kicked an extra point en route to the startling comeback.

Possibly the key play in Vidor's turnaround came when Weldon threw an interceptiton, took off to tackle the thief and when the ball was knocked loose, Weldon recovered it.

San Antonio takes no NBA prisoners

By The Associated Press

The San Antonio Spurs took no prisoners Wednesday night.

"They just beat us in every phase of the game," said San Diego Coach Gene Shue after dropping an embarrassing 163-125 National Basketball Association decision to the Spurs. "They run and shoot better than anyone. They are also one of the best passing teams I've seen."

The total was the highest in the NBA this season and set a new franchise record for the Spurs. The old mark was 160 when the team was known as the Dallas Chaparrals of the American Basektball Association.

"We knew we had lost games we should have won last week," said Billy Paultz, whose team lost three of four games by a total of seven points. "Tonight we came out running with our heads in the right direction."

It was the Spurs' rebounding that set up a brilliant fastbreak. Often whipped on the boards last season and so far this season, San Antonio overwhelmed the opposition on the boards, 61-43.

"This may have been the best rebounding game in my three years as coach of the Spurs," said San Antonio Coach Doug Moe. "Through the first three quarters we were playing as aggressively at both ends as we have all season."

Trail Blazers 112, Celtics 109

Lionel Hollins hit two free throws with 25 seconds left to enable Portland to foil a second-half comeback by Boston. Portland opened up a 10-point halftime lead, 60-50, sparked by the inside shooting of center Tom Owens.

Boston, trailing 76-61 midway through the third period, caught the Trail Blazers and moved into a four-point lead, 98-94, with 6:25 remaining in the game. But key baskets by guard Dave Twardzik and forward Maurice Lucas helped Portland take a 110-109 lead.

With just 25 seconds left, Nate Archibald fouled Hollins, who sank two free throws to ice the game.

Lakers 113, Pacers 111

Adrian Dantley sank two free throws with 22 seconds left to lead Los Angeles over Indiana. Dantley led all scorers with 34 points, hitting all 10 attempts from the free throw line.

"The momentum started going dead away in the fourth period," said Laker Coach Jerry West. "We had three quick turnovers at the start of the period. We missed the easy shots and then we couldn't make anything. I think it's the most turnovers we've had all year.

"About our winning shots: We were hoping that Dantley would get inside and at least get fouled. I felt a whole lot better when I saw him step to the line."

A jump shot by Henry Bibby with 3:14 left in the second overtime period put Philadelphia ahead to stay as the 76ers edged New Jersey.

The 76ers recovered from a 17-point deficit at the end of the first period and led by 119-117 with three seconds left in regulation. But Eric Money, who scored 37 points for the Nets, tied the game with an eight-foot jumper to send the game into overtime. The Nets had a four-point lead with 48 seconds left in theTfirst extra period, but couldn't hold on.

Platons 117, Bucks 106

Bob Lanier scored 16 of his 35 points in the final period as Detroit came from behind to beat Milwaukee. The bullish center hit Detroit's first three baskets of the closing period and added a free throw to put his team in front to stay at 95-93.

M.L. Carr followed with another three-pointer and rookie John Long with a jumper that made it 100-93 with just under seven minutes left. After the Bucks cut the gap to 104-100, two free throws by Terry Tyler and two more baskets by Lanier quickly vaulted the Pistons in front by 10 points and they coasted the rest of the way.

Knicks 104, Sonics 100

Bob McAdoo came off the bench to score 31 points and help break open a tight game in the last 3½ minutes as New York beat Seattle. The Knicks trailed 93-92 with 3:33 left before McAdoo went to work. He scored eight of the Knicks' final 12 points as New York claimed its sixth victory against seven losses.

Gus Williams scored 22 points for the losers.

Kings 105, Warriors 97

Phil Ford scored 21 points and did a good defensive job on John Lucas, leading Kansas City over Golden State. The 21 points was a professional high for Ford, the All-American guard from North Carolina. Golden State's top scorer was another rookie, forward Purvis Short, who also hit his NBA high with 26 points.

Suns 118, Cavaliers 96

Ron Lee scored 24 points and Mike Bratz added a career-high 20 as the Phoenix bench tallied 66 points to lead the Suns past Cleveland. The Cavs, playing without Campy Russell, managed only 37 points in the first half as the Suns pulled away to a solid 25-points lead at intermission and coasted home.

Steelers have come long way since early days

By BILL NACK, NEWSDAY

NEW YORK — Back in the early 1960s, at a time when professional football was just beginning to emerge as a national mania, the Pittsburgh Steelers seemed doomed to flounder forever in the pits of the National Football League. Those were the years when the NFL would hold its annual draft of college players and the delegation from Pittsburgh would have to buy a ticket to get in.

In 1961, by the time of the draft, the Steelers had traded away their picks in five of the first six rounds. They did the same in 1962, retaining only their first-round pick. The year 1963, more than any other, symbolized the Steelers philosophy in those days. Steelers fans picking up the newspaper, on the day following that draft, were entertained by this:

"Pittsburgh: 1st round — Choice to Chicago, 2nd — Choice to Baltimore. 3rd — Choice to Green Bay. 4th — Choice to Chicago. 5th — Choice to Los Angeles. 6th — Choice to Chicago. 7th — Choice to Green Bay."

This inclination to trade away draft choices paid fruits in the ensuing years, only they were all lemons. The Steelers were 5-9 in 1964, 2-12 in 1965, 5-8-1 in 1966, 4-9-1 in 1967, and 2-11-1 in 1968.

Chuck Noll took over as coach in 1969, the year they were 1-13, but then the philosophy changed. The Steelers started keeping their draft picks. More, they made shrewd use of them. They drafted Joe Greene in the first round in 1969, and in 1970 took Terry Bradshaw in the first and Mel Blount in the third. But these were only preliminaries to the most memorable draft of all, the draft that made the Steelers champions at last.

That was in 1971. They took wide receiver Frank Lewis in the first round, linebacker Jack Ham in the second, guard Gerry Mullins and defensive end Dwight White in the fourth, offensive tackle Larry Brown in the fifth, Ernie Holmes in the eighth an safety Mike Wagner in the 11th.

All proved to be exceptional performers, and the effects of that draft were felt almost immediately. In 1972, the Steelers made it to the playoffs, winning 11 and losing three. That year they also drafted Franco Harris in the first round. They got to th playoffs again in 1973, and in 1974 — the year of another remarkable draft in which they picked Lynn Swann, Jack Lambert, John Stallworth and Mike Webster — they won their first Super Bowl.

The Steelers had built a championship team exclusively through the draft, and in doing so became a model and example for those teams that still needed convincing that the draft was the way to build.

"What I think has happened is that people, about four or five years ago, started to realize the value of the draft," said Gil Brandt, the Dallas Cowboys' director of player development. "I think Pittsburgh's great turnaround convinced them. They were 1-13 when they drafted Bradshaw. People started realizing that you had to do a good job drafting and decided that that was the way to build a team. There is now a great deal of emphasis on the draft. In the 1960s, I remember going to colleges and not seeing another scout for two or three days. Now scouts are all over. So there are no real mistakes in the draft. Look back. Do you know of anybody who has ever won a championship through trades? Buddy Parker tried to do it with Pittsburgh. George Allen came the closest of anybody. But no one has ever traded for championship." They have won them, as the Steelers and Dallas have won them, through the draft.

What we are witnessing today in the NFL, most emphatically in the emergence of Tampa Bay and Seattle, is an expression of a now-almost universal belief in the draft as the means by which the best teams are built.

The effect of this has been to make many teams more competitive. Tampa Bay's exceptional defensive team, formed around the Selmon brothers, is an outgrowth of the draft, and so is its offensive game, with Ricky Bell as centerpiece. In its third year, Tampa Bay is 4-5. They had Green Bay beaten last Sunday when the Packers' Chester Marcol kicked a 46-yard field goal with 41 seconds to go to win the game.

Seattle is also 4-5 — they creamed the Oakland Raiders recently — and on Sunday took the Denver Broncos into overtime before they lost on a field goal. The draft brought them to where they are now. Seattle has used the draft in a way that would have been positively alien to Pittsburgh 15 years ago. Last year, owning the second pick in the first round — that is, owning the right to Tony Dorsett, since everyone knew Tampa was going to take Bell as its first choice — thhey traded that pick to Dallas for the Cowboys' first-round pick and three second-round picks. Out of the deal, Seattle drafted three men, including all-rookie linebacker Terry Beeson, who are starting for them now and have been central, Seattle executives say, in making the Seahawks what they are.

In the NFL this year no team is safe. The "on any given Sunday" cliche, hard used for years by the NFL, begins to acquire legitimacy. So Houston beats the Steelers, and a week later the Oilers are crushed by Cincinati, which was 0-8. The Saints make fools of the Rams, and Monday night the Falcons stopped them almost completely. The Cowboys, looking invincible last year, are struggling this year. No one team is dominant. The good fortunes of each are so transient.

"There's much more overall balance," Don Weiss, the executive director of the NFL, said this week. "More emphasis is being placed on scouting and more widely developed personnel procedures. Teams spend more on scouting they they used to."

So this is a new era.

The days of dynasties, of the kind that Vince Lombardi built in Green Bay, are absolutely over, and so are the days of the One Big Team in any one year.

"Look at how dominating Dallas looked last season," Weiss said. "They still have a great deal of talent , but it's pretty obvious they can't expect to just go on the field and win. I don't think you'l ever see a team completely dominate a season, win them all or lose only one. The old dynasty days are over. You are not going to find a team winning five championships in seven years."

Brown, Kubin honored

By The Associated Press

BACK OF THE WEEK — Theotis Brown, running back, UCLA, set a school rushing record of 274 yards on 26 carries, including touchdown runs of 74 and 68 yards, in leading the Bruins to a 23-21 triumph over Oregon. Brown's first scoring run put UCLA ahead 10-6 in the final period and his second accounted for the decisive points, offsetting a late Oregon touchdown.

LINEMAN OF THE WEEK — Larry Kubin, defensive end, Penn State, made eight tackles, including three for losses totaling 34 yards, and led a rush that held Maryland to minus 32 yards on the ground while sacking the quarterback 10 times and intercepting five passes as the Nittany Lions trounced the previously unbeaten Terrapins 27-3.

Chantilly Eagles' star halfback Terry Able (32), the 4-foot-2, 46-pound standout, is congratulated by teammates during an Ankle Biters League game in Fairfax, Va. recently. Each of the 22 teams in the league has a maximum of 22 players, both boys and girls ages 7-9. (AP Laserphoto).

Claiborne didn't want to be in his senior play

By BETTY CUNIBERTI
The Washington Post

He did it, only because his coach asked him to.

"Jerry didn't want to be in the senior play," said Faye Claiborne, former high school sweetheart and present wife of Maryland's head football coach.

"Jerry," said Faye, "was a typical jock, and he felt it was beneath his dignity to be in a play; you know, bad for the image. But his coach told him he ought to broaden his horizons."

What he added to his horizon was a talkative girl who teased him about not knowing his lines.

"He missed school one day and stayed home to learn them," said Faye. "He came back and knew them perfectly."

In the tiny rural town of Hopkinsville, Ky., the two had always known each other but the friendship never became romantic until the school play paired them.

"We were a couple in the play," said Faye. "And we had to sort of embrace. If he would have had to kiss me, I think he would have gotten out of the play."

More than 30 years have passed since the closing of that dramatic production, but Jerry Claiborne, in many ways, still is the same character.

The young perfectionist who was shamed into staying home and learning his lines perfectly now is a 50-year-old man who arrives at work when it is still dark outside. Claiborne, fired from Virginia Tech and accused by a friend of "not working hard enough at recruiting," has raised a football empire at fifth-ranked, undefeated Maryland on a foundation of detailed time schedules and hard work.

The typical high school jock has become what is tediously described as "a man's man," and, even more specifically, "a coach's coach." When not attending to football, family or church, Claiborne is playing handball with Maryland's physical education teachers, or playing tennis with his daughter. He is in excellent shape.

The youngster reluctant to kiss the girl of his affections now describes himself as "a man of the 10 Commandments," a clean-living, non-drinker who worries about the changing morality of America's youth, about "the certain comandments that youngsters seem to be routinely ignoring."

The dutiful player who did what his coach asked now expects the same from his players, and he asks a great deal.

Maryland football players are in some way tied to the program every day from August two-a-day practices to the last game of the season. There is nightly curfew and a ban on liquor, drugs and females in rooms.

The rules serve partly to keep the players academically eligible and in good physical condition, but Claiborne also does not hide the fact that he seeks to influence their personal lives.

"I give them discipline, because they need it ," said Claiborne, "and sometimes, this is the only place they get it."

Faye remembers Claiborne, the high school boy, as being "a little cocky; but he put up an awful big front.

"He was not as popular as his older brother George. Jerry was intense, even then. He always has been. He was not as easy going, not as easy to get along with, as George was."

Like so many overshadowed little brothers, Claiborne nutured a competitive fire he probably never even thought about. Years later, his brother got out of high school and college coaching and wrote Claiborne a warm note, saying, "I'm not as competitive as you."

When Hopkinsville High made its senior class predictions, Jerry Claiborne's fate was listed as coaching.

"He wanted to be a coach, even as a little boy. We all knew it," said Faye. "At that time, being a coach was really the only way to make a living in athletics. Nobody talked about being in the pros back then."

Even if they were, Claiborne probably would not have fooled himself into the great money chase. In high school, and later at Kentucky, Claiborne succeeded at a variety of positions by depending more on guts and labor than on talent and size.

Today, that is Claiborne's kind of player.

"Do you know the player he always talks about to me?" said Faye. "(Center) Mike Simon. Mike Simon is one of his favorites, because he plays hurt and he never complains and nobody notices him. That's the kind of person he reacts to.

"He loves to help the kind of guy who honestly doesn't have enough to eat. He'll spend all day with him. It's the ones who have talent and don't use it that make him angry."

Faye said Claiborne also is angered "by hypocrites, by writers who take his words out of context, and he gets awful mad when boys miss their assignments."

To many observers, Claiborne seems a colorless, humorless man who does not relate well to people with beliefs that don't match his. He is often perceived as distant, cold and condescending.

"Our children always laugh at that concept the newspapers have of him," said Faye. "One of our daughter's friends was teasing her about his Coca Cola commercials, because he has to talk so fast and he sounds funny. So he went up to them in our home one night and started into his routine, 'Hello-I'm-Jerry-Claiborne-would-you-like-a-Coca-Cola . . .'

"When the children were small, we didn't believe in being buddies. It was not, 'I'm your buddy.' It was, 'I'm your father.' We're disciplinarians, and we're as square as square can be. We don't believe in sex before marriage, or in many of the things young people feel forced to do because of peer pressure.

"The world is changing, and much of it, we don't like. But our children and our players would come to Jerry with these problems. Jerry is a person who cries easily, who would call or write to anyone who had something bad happen to them."

Maryland quarterback Tim O'Hare has said that he probably would not go to Claiborne with a personal problem but added that "the players here who complained about him and his rules the most are the ones who write back and thank him, and ask him how the team is."

The answer to that is, the team, and the coach, are the same as ever.

Jim Rice of the Boston Red Sox was named the American League's Most Valuable Player Wednesday as he edged out Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees in balloting by the Baseball Writer's Association of America. (AP Laserphoto).

Nicklaus not on luxury yacht

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Reports that Jack Nicklaus was aboard a luxury yacht that went aground off the Great Barrier Reef during a violent storm were untrue, a spokeswoman for the American golfer's host said Thursday.

Nicklaus had been reported to be on the Melita, a yacht owned by Kerry Packer, chairman of Australian Consolidated Press. Several Australian newspaper carried dramatic stories about the dangerous incident, which occurred Tuesday. The accounts said the Melita had gone aground while searching for a missing man after his boat overturned in the storm.

The stories said Nicklaus and British race car driver Jackie Stewart were aboard the Melita.

Pat Wheatley, a spokeswoman for Packer, said Thursday neither Nicklaus nor Steward had been on the boat and that the confusion apparently stemmed from statements made by the owner of the yacht, Keith Lloyd.

Lloyd, who chartered his luxury yacht to Packer, told Australian Associated Press he thought Nicklaus was aboard. Nicklaus was due in Australia Tuesday to play in the Australian open, which starts Nov. 16. He had planned to spend a few days with Packer, a sponsor of the tournament, fishing off the reef.

Soviet cagers win

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Sergei Tarakanov scored 12 of his 14 points in the second half to spark the Soviet men's national basketball team to an 80-69 victory over Kent State University Wednesday night.

The Russians, showing a balanced offense, led by no morehthan eight points in the first half and went into the locker room with a 41-36 halftime edge.

Burrell McGhee of Kent led all scorers with 22 points.

Tommy John gets no respect

By JIM MURRAY
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Tommy John is leaving the Dodgers and taking the pennant with him because (choose one) he (1) wants more money on his contract (2) wants more years on his contract (3) is sick of seeing double-play balls go to the outfield (4) can't stand smog (5) misses snow (6) is sick of seeing Reggie Jackson hit home runs.

The answer is, None of the above. Tommy John is leaving the Dodgers for the same reason a kid runs away to join the circus, a girl elopes with a saxophone player or a guy busts out of a pen. He feels unwanted, unneeded and unappreciated. A left-handed Rodney Dangerfield, he gets no respect.

To the 3 million people who went to see the Dodger games at home last year, Tommy is Benedict Arnold, the man who shot Lincoln, no better than a Communist. The party line goes like this: The Dodgers took Tommy John in out of the snow and cold, an itinerant sinker-ball pitcher hurling for American League outcasts like Cleveland and Chicago. They took him in, clothed him, fed him, introduced him to Frank Sinatra, got him into the Crosby Pro-Am, tickets to Disneyland. The Good Life. Heaven can wait.

NOW COMES the good part; When he hurt himself pitching, the Dodgers not only paid his salary that year (they had to) but the following year (they didn't have to). Match that around New York, Tommy, baby.

The view from the pitcher's mound is entirely different, as you might expect. Tommy John explained it all carefully the other day as he sat at a luncheon making ready for his second Tommy John Celebrity Golf Classic at Yorba Linda Country Club next week to benefit children's cancer research and the Ronald McDonald House for the parents of leukemia victims undergoing treatment nearby.

"IN THE first place," said John, opening with a sinker on the outside corner as usual, "when is a debt repaid? I think I have repaid the Dodgers for their support of me with two National League championships, I have presented the Dodger image, I have shaken hands, I have gone on speaking engagements, I have never been one for late hours, or drug busts or drunk driving, I have done my share to bring 3 million people to the ballpark.

"I didn't just take the money and run the year I was hurt. I worked hard to get myself back in shape to pitch. I worked out, swam, lifted weights. I won the Comeback of the Year and the Fred Hutchinson Awards. I won the 1977 pennant game, I won one playoff and one World Series game this year.

"NOW, WE get to the 1975 season. The Dodgers paid my salary when I couldn't pitch, to be sure. But did it ever occur to anyone that, if they didn't, I would have become a free agent? The facts are, they had to protect their investment in me, and Peter O'Malley is the only one who ever admitted that to me.

"Now, I didn't want to leave the Dodgers. I tried to sign before the season started last year. The money was not really an issue. I wanted a three-year contract at the figure. They wanted only a two-year contract. I warned them that, if I had a good year, the figure would go up. It seemed to me they were banking on my not having a good year. Well, they were wrong.

"Finally, they granted me a meeting. They said, reluctantly, it seemed to me, OK, we'll give you a three-year contract at your figure. They said, we'll give you 24 hours to take it or leave it. That was on a Saturday. They needed my answer by Sunday night. I said, look, I'm not a bullpen catcher, a utility infielder. They acted like I was a mopup pitcher, or I was washed up. I concluded they really didn't want me. I said then I'll leave it.

"I'VE ALWAYS given the Dodgers good P.R. How do you think it made me feel to feel expendable? You know, after the operation, I said to Dr. (Frank) Jobe 'You know, my arm is like that of some kid's that's never pitched before, right? It's better than new, right?' and he agreed with me. My arm is 30 years younger than the rest of me. I was not the kind of guy you say 'Take it or leave it' to, or even 'Bring the answer in by Monday or the offer is no good.' I didn't think I deserved that. It never was money. Or even years. It was respect."

Thirteen teams, the maximum, have drafted Tommy John in the re-entry draft. The Yankees and the Phillies and Kansas City lead the bidding. But all of them are way ahead. Because none of them has told him he has to bring the answer by Sunday night. If they want a pennant, the offer is good till midnight Feb. 1 — and the terms left blank to fill in. This Rodney Dangerfield gets plenty of respect — now.

Patriot owner in tax trouble

By DICK BRAUDE

BOSTON (AP) — William H. Sullivan Jr., whose money struggles as owner of the New England Patriots date back to the football team's origins, again has his back to the goal line.

The National Football League team hasn't paid federal income taxes in more than a year while Sullivan seeks congressional legislation that would help him keep the franchise he founded in 1959.

The Internal Revenue Service is waiting while the Patriots owner tries to extricate the team from a trap in the Tax Reform Act of 1976 that affects no other NFL teams except the Patriots.

The law reduced tax writeoffs for owners of pro sports teams who deduct from their tax payments a hefty percentage of the value of player contracts.

THE PATRIOTS, however, were left completely out in the cold in 1976 and — unlike other teams — aren't eligible for any such break.

A 50 percent writeoff on the value of player contracts — far less than the old 80-90 percent — still is allowable, but not for a team like the Patriots that had an internal financial reorganization after the law's Dec. 31, 1975 effective date.

"The idea of the law," says team Vice President Chuck Sullivan, the owner's son, was to prevent fast-buck promoters from ripping off the government with huge depreciations."

"We're been trying for 2½ years to have our inequity adjusted," says William Sullivan. "Senators tell me they're afraid to vote for it because they'll be roasted in the media."

The IRS won't permit player contract depreciation for teams that undergo internal "stock reorganizations," and that's what happened to the Patriots in late 1976.

SULIVAN ANTED up more than $2 million in borrowed money to buy up 139,800 shares of non-voting team stock — owned largely by fans — and took full control of the team.

Because Sullivan went deep into debt to swing that deal, his finances are in jeopardy, and he could be forced to sell the Patriots unless Congress approves special legislation giving him the same tax writeoff as owners of other NFL teams.

A bill to remedy Sullivan's plight was endorsed by a congressional committee before Congress adjourned this fall. However, the measure never reached the House or Senate floor.

"We'll try again next year," says Chuck Sullivan.

If Congress doesn't act quickly, however, Sullivan said his father will have to seek an extension on the bank loan that enabled him to buy up the team's non-voting stock.

"All we're asking," says the Patriots vice president, "is for the same treatment given to all other professional sports teams."

Chuck Sullivan says key members of the U.S. Senate do not oppose the Patriots' special legislation.

But Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., blocked action on the bill this fall, arguing that the measure did not move properly through congressional channels.

THE SULLIVANS are not strangers to such political maneuvering.

In 1976, as William Sullivan plotted his move to buy the team's non-voting stock against the wishes of some stockholders who later filed suit, a special bill was approved by the Massachusetts Legislature to aid the Patriots owner.

With significant support from legislative leaders who are friendly to Sullivan, the bill changed state law to virtually assure stockholder approval of Sullivan's takeover.

Until November 1976, the stock purchase Sullivan planned required a two-thirds vote of approval by stockholders.

The special measure cut the necessary approval to a simple majority.

The law took effect Nov. 26, 1976. On Dec. 8, Sullivan took control after a stockholders' meeting in Foxboro, Mass.

Gianulias takes bowling lead in World Cup

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — U.S. collegiate champion Nikki Gianulias battled back from near-elimination and a protest to take the lead Wednesday in the women's division of the bowling World Cup.

The 18-year-old student from Suisun City, Calif., barely survived the cut Tuesday when she placed 16th in the two-day qualifying which opened the tournament.

Lucy Low of Singapore, who was eliminated after placing 17th, lodged a protest, claiming Gianulias had fouled on a crucial shot. The protest was denied.

Gianulias got off to a flying start Wednesday in match play when she won four games, tied one and lost three with a 186 average. Her grand total, including bonuses, was 1,592.

Close behind were Birgitte Lund of Denmark and Lita de la Rosa of the Philippines, who were tied for second with 1,584.

Geraldine Fitzgerald takes her act to television

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Fitzgerald was 55, with a long and distinguished career in the theater and on film to her credit, when she began singing lessons.

Five years later, this incredible performer with a feel for the audience that only years on the stage can bring, took a repertoire of sing-along tunes to the Reno Sweeney cabaret in Greenwich Village. The one-woman act was an immediate success.

Geraldine Fitzgerald, four years later, takes her act to television — a performance of "Street Songs" taped at Reno Sweeney this summer will be broadcast Thursday evening at 9 Eastern time on many Public Broadcasting Service stations. Air date and time may vary, so check local listings.

"It's the kind of act that makes the largest audience small," says the charming Irish — American performer, and it's something of a wonder to her. "The audience response, all along, has been very strong and very thrilling.

"The audience behaves as if it were their act; I don't know any other way to explain it. They always end up singing."

The hour-long television show includes a collection of what Miss Fitzgerald says are "songs you sing to hear yourself over traffic" — English and Irish music hall songs, old pop songs, tunes from Bertold Brecht, Noel Coward, Jacques Brel and even the Beatles.

"The songs all have a similarity," she says, "usually they tell a story about some person, and they're all 'winning' songs.

"Melancholy tunes, they are more for singing in the barroom. If you wanted to go into the street and shout a song," she says, "mine are the tunes you would choose."

A great deal of the music in "Geraldine Fitzgerald at Reno Sweeney" is Irish, and that's more than a simple consequence of the performer's heritage.

"The Irish are a very basic people," she says, "who will make their own entertainment. They'll sing in the street."

The program is of a kind seldom seen on television; the viewer's impulse is — certainly by calculation — to sing along. And Geraldine Fitzgerald is enjoying the phenomenon as much as anyone.

"Of all I have done, I like this best," she says. "The main reason people go into the performing arts is they want to communicate directly with people.

"This carries that desire further than anything I've done. I can even call out people's names in the audience if I want."

Miss Fitzgerald, born in Ireland in 1914, made her acting debut with the Dublin Gate Theater at 18. She made several movies in London in the 1930s, married songwriter Edward Lindsay-Hogg and, in 1936, took her career to this country.

She was cast as Ellie Dunn in George Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House" by Orson Welles for his Mercury Theater, and in 1939 she went to Hollywood to appear in two films, "Dark Victory" with Bette Davis and "Wuthering Heights."

Over the next several years, she acted on Broadway, in movies and later on television, notably in the TV production of "The Moon and Sixpence."

With her brother, she founded the Everyman Company, which was designed to bring street theater to inner city young people in New York. And for several seasons, she has appeared in Longwharf Theater productions in New Haven; she begins a run there Nov. 24 in "I Sent a Letter."

'Horseman' portrays Montana frontier

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — James Caan, Jane Fonda and Jason Robards star in the western action romance "Comes a Horseman."

The setting is the Montana cattle range of 1945 when the old frontier way of life is threatened by industrialization, symbolized by the drilling for oil.

The picture reunites Miss Fonda and Robards following "Julia," in which Robards won a second successive Academy Award.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Clint Eastwood is now filming his second movie at Alcatraz, "Escape from Alcatraz."

It's the first movie to film on the former prison island in San Francisco Bay since Eastwood's "The Enforcer."

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — "Foolin' Around," starring Gary Busey, Annette O'Toole, Eddie Albert, Tony Randall and Cloris Leachman, is nearing completion, Only a bizarre chase sequence remains to be filmed.

Lorie Humphrey, 13-year-old granddaughter of the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, was signed by producer Arnold Kopelson for her film debut.

Globe of Southwest offers final performance

ODESSA — The Globe of the Great Southwest offers final performances of its current attraction this weekend.

Glamorous singing star Barbara Mandrell will share the spotlight with the Statler Brothers and humorist Lee Laundre in a concert at 8 p.m. Friday in Odessa's Ector County Coliseum. Tickets for the event are on sale this week at the Record Center in Midland and will be available at the coliseum box office before show time Friday.

Art advocacy workshop slated

AUSTIN — "Arts Advocacy: A Blueprint for Action" is the title of a special workshop scheduled in Austin Dec. 1.

The workshop, sponsored by the Texas Arts Alliance and the Center for Cultural Resources, will be held at the Zachary Scott Theater in Austin.

Registration for the event is $10 for Texas Arts Alliance members, $20 for non-members. Additional information on the workshop may be obtained from Susan Morehead of the Texas Arts Alliance, P.O. Box 13406, Austin 78711, telephone 512-475-7870, or from Kristine Everett at the Center for Cultural Resources at P.O. Box 13433, Austin 78711, telephone 512-476-7353.

The special conference will cover the state arts budget request, the Lalor Agenda and other arts legislation, as well as general strategy and specific techniques for advocacy. Speakers will include legislators, lobbyists and arts leaders from throughout the state.

Special women's exhibit opens at museum

A special exhibit which opened this week at Midland's Permian Basin Petroleum Museum deals with the daily life of women during the frontier era of the Southwest.

Titled "Woman's World: A Patchwork in Time and Space," the exhibit consists of 28 historical photographs loaned by the Museum of the Great Plains at Lawton, Okla. Clothing and household items of historical interest gathered from Permian Basin sources have been added to complete the exhibition.

The show portrays a wide variety of roles for women in the final years of the 19th Century and early part of the 20th. The lifestyle of a businesswoman in a new and growing city could be vastly different from that of a farm wife just a few miles distant. The "pioneer woman" image often seen on TV or in the movies can be broken down into as many images as there were women on the frontier, the exhibit demonstrates.

The exhibition will remain on view here through December. The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame is located in south Midland on Interstate 20 West, near the Rankin Highway.

LBJ Library to open World War I exhibit

AUSTIN — It was called "the war to end all wars," and 60 years ago this month World War I ended with the signing of a general agreement to cease fighting.

To mark this 60th anniversary of the armistice, the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library in Austin Saturday will open a major exhibit that presents the story of World War I through music, motion picture film, literature and art, historic documents, military weaponry and the assorted memorabilia of civilians and "doughboys."

Suitably titled "The War to End all Wars," this exhibit presents original documents from history, including versions of the Versailles Treaty and the "Zimmermann Telegram," in which Germany offered Texas to Mexico if Mexico would join in war against the U.S. The official U.S. proclamation of war against Imperial Germany also is displayed.

Also on view are such items as the death mask of Woodrow Wilson, along with his eyeglasses and top hat and his famous pronouncements, including his protest to Germany over the sinking of the luxury liner Lusitania. Wilson's famous "14 Points" speech, and letters he received from such leaders as William Jennings Bryan, Theodore Roosevelt and Prime Minister Clemenceau of France also are presented.

Music of the World War I era helps set the mood of the the LBJ Library display, including recordings of "Over There," sung by Enrico Caruso, and "It's A Long Way to Tipperary."

Motion picture film shows Americans preparing for war as well as actual footage of combat.

Blowups of 100 historic photographs give a panorama of history, from the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand at Sarajevo, through shots of fighting in the trenches and famous personalities and events that figured in the war.

And the famous poster of Uncle Sam saying "I Want YOU" is among the collection of posters urging Americans to support the war effort.

Contributors to the exhibit have been the Library of Congress, the National Archives, the Smithsonian Institution, the National Portrait Gallery, the National Collection of Fine Arts, the Hirshhorn Museum, Woodrow Wilson House, the John F. Kennedy Library, Austin's Camp Mabry, and many individual citizens of Austin.

The Lyndon Baines Johnson Library is open to the public, free of charge, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days weekly, including all holidays except Christmas.

'The Sting' tops prime time program ratings for Nov. 5

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC brought the Oscar-winning film "The Sting" to television and could hardly have asked for more. The movie was the highest-rated prime-time program during the week ending Nov. 5, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

ABC, in fact, listed six of the week's 10 most-watched shows and chalked up its sixth week as No. 1 in the networks' ratings competition. The season is eight weeks old.

"The Sting," starring Paul Newman and Robert Redford, had a rating of 31.9. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 31.9 percent saw at least part of TV premiere of the box-office smash.

Two of ABC's top-rated regulars, "Three's Company" and "Laverne and Shirley," trailed "The Sting," although "Laverne and Shirley" had to share third place with CBS' "60 Minutes."

Indeed, CBS had four shows in the Top 10, and perhaps as significant as ABC's continuing grip on first place was CBS' second straight runnerup finish after five weeks in a row in last.

"Little House on the Prairie," tied for 10th with a CBS special, "Puff the Magic Dragon," was NBC's best show of the week.

ABC finished the week with a rating of 22.3, followed by CBS at 17.2 and NBC at 16.9.

A couple of badgers relaxing by their fireplace are portrayed by Mark Andrade, left, and Andy Kimbrough, in the Pickwick Players' production of "The Wind in the Willows." The children's play will have performances at 2:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Tickets for all performances are on sale daily at the theater box office, 682-4111. (Staff Photo)

'Texas in movies' exhibit to open

AUSTIN — "Texas in the Movies," an exhibit about films made in Texas or about Texas, is on view through Jan. 15 at The University of Texas.

The exhibit is open to the public from 8 a.m. to 12 midnight each Monday through Friday, on Saturdays from 9 a.m. until midnight, and on Sundays from noon to midnight, in the entrance level of UT's Perry-Castaneda Library.

Covering the period from the silent movies ("The Wind," starring Lillian Gish) to the present ("The Texas Chain-Saw Massacre"), the display includes still photographs of films, plus posters advertising them and related books and explanatory material. Among the numerous films featured in the show are such well-known movies as "Giant," "Hud" and "Home From the Hills."

The exhibit was prepared by the Perry-Castaneda Library's special services department.

Antiques to be featured at sale

ODESSA — Antiques and collectibles of many kinds will be featured at the annual fall antique show and sale here this weekend.

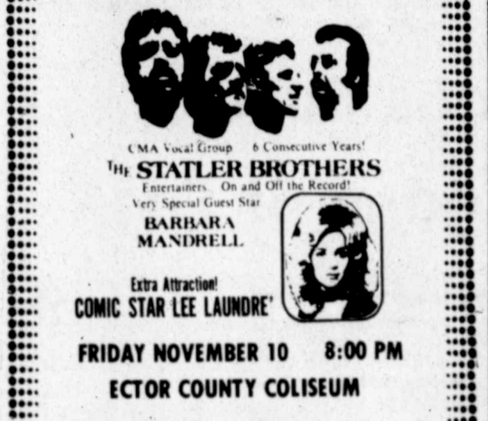
The exhibit opens Friday at Odessa's Ector County Coliseum, continuing Saturday and Sunday in the coliseum's Building A.

As was the case in the annual midwinter exhibit and sale held last February, a portion of the proceeds from the upcoming show will benefit the Stagehands organization of the Permian Playhouse, Odessa's community theater. The Stagehands will be serving a variety of snacks and refreshments during the three days for show visitors and exhibitors.

The show, presented by Continental Shows Ltd., of Amarillo, will feature some of the most highly-regarded antique dealers in the nation, displaying furniture, china, silver, art glass, jewelry, primitives, cut glass, Indian artifacts, Oriental objects, along with such collectibles as dolls, coins and advertising materials of yesteryear.

According to George Kuehler, producer-director of the show, "Continental Shows is always delighted to return to Odessa for this traditional event and to see all its Midland-Odessa friends."

Kuehler and co-director Lee Kirkendall said that each paid admission will be valid for all three days of the show. Hours on Friday and Saturday will be 1 to 9 p.m., while Sunday's visiting hours will be 1 to 6 p.m.



Young Russian-born violinist Mark Piskunov will be guest soloist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony in its second pair of season subscription concerts. The events are scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday in Odessa's Bonham Junior High School, and 8 p.m. Tuesday in Lee High School of Midland. Tickets will be available for purchase at the doors before the start of each concert.

Art exhibit this weekend

ANDREWS — The Andrews Art Guild's eighth annual art exhibit will be held this weekend in Andrews Civic Center.

The show will open to the public at 10 a.m. Saturday, continuing until 5:30 p.m. On Sunday, viewing hours will be 1 to 5 p.m. Art works on display in the exhibit must be picked up immediately after the closing of the show Sunday afternoon.

Evidence shows beryllium causes cancer in animals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Public Health Service told the Labor Department Wednesday there is enough scientific evidence to conclude the strategic metal beryllium causes cancer in animals and possibly does so in humans. The agency recommended that the government limit workers' exposure to the metal.

The recommendation grows out of a three-way controversy among cabinet departments on how to deal with the strong, ultra-light metal used in the aerospace and nuclear industries to make weapons, rocket motors, nuclear reactors and heat shields.

The Labor Department's Occupational, Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has announced plans to cut the allowable worker exposure to beryllium from two parts per million in the air at the workplace to one part per million.

Industry has opposed the tighter standards, and Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger warned his counterpart at Labor last summer that a stricter standard might jeopardize national security because meeting it would be too expensive for the manufacturers.

In a letter to Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, released Wednesday, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said a review of the scientific data by a panel of experts confirmed the potential danger of beryllium.

Califano noted that Dr. Julius Richmond, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, and Dr. William Foege, director of the national Center for Disease Control recommended that "OSHA proceed to set standards that limit exposure to beryllium in the workplace."

The panel of scientists who reviewed the various animal studies suggesting that beryllium causes cancer acknowledged flaws in some of the laboratory work. But "in spite of the deficiencies in the reported studies, the evidence for the carcinogenic potential of beryllium must be accepted," the scientists reported.

They added that population studies involving persons who have been exposed to the metal in the workplace are inconclusive although they suggest "a positive statistical association between beryllium exposure and human lung cancer."

Beryllium is made by Kawecki-Berylco Industries Inc., of Reading, Pa. and the Brush Wellman Co. of Cleveland.

FBI cracks down on smugglers of cigarettes

NEW YORK (AP) — With the FBI now empowered to arrest cigarette smugglers, New York state will collect millions of dollars more each year in cigarette taxes, state Tax Commissioner James H. Tully Jr. said.

"It is another blow at the forces of organized crime" that profit the most from illegal interstate cigarette trafficking, Tully said. Bootlegging to the Northeast has been highly profitable because of the region's taxes are so much higher than in tobacco-growing states such as North Carolina. President Carter signed a measure last week making cigarette bootlegging a federal crime.

China's Teng tags Russia, Vietnam 'hooligans of East'

By GEORGE McARTHUR
The Los Angeles Times

BANGKOK, Thailand — China's Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping was the smiling and perfect guest for four days of his visit to Thailand until his temper erupted Wednesday and he lashed Russia and Vietnam as "hooligans of the East."

He said that Vietnam was the "Cuba of the East" and made plain that China would not quietly accept an expected Vietnamese military campaign against Cambodia when the dry season begins in about four weeks.

He said that the so-called friendship treaty signed last month by Vietnam and Russia was a military alliance.

His vehement reply to a question about the alliance stunned many of the Thai newsmen present. They had expected he would make a firm but politely worded response in keeping with the genial image so carefully maintained for four days. But the public question and the presence of television brought out his famed outspokeness. He spoke in mandarin which was translated into Thaiand later into English.

He said "day by day there is more hooliganism in the East. I am sure that we all understand about the word Cuba and the Cuba of the East.

He added "our reaction to the treaty will depend on the moves taken by Vietnam. First, we must watch and see how much aggression they make against Cambodia. Then we will decide about the measures that we will take."

Teng did not deny Chinese political support for the Communist insurgency in Thailand but left the question largely unanswered. He did, however, angrily attack Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Van Dong who, on a recent visit, pledged non-intervention in Thai affairs.

"If somebody tells a lie and sells his soul, you cannot trust him," Teng said. "What Pham Van Dong says can only bring disaster to this region."

Thursday Teng continues his campaign in Malaysia and he will conclude his three-nation trip in Singapore early next week.

Presumably, in his private talks with Thai Prime Minister Kriangsak Chamanan, Teng was as candid as he was in his press conference. Although neither Chinese nor Vietnamese officials would reveal the details of these talks the Thais acknowledge that they covered the Vietnam-Cambodia war plus the current Vietnam-China border confrontation.

Until the press conference outburst Teng had confined himself during the state visit to preaching peace, promising trade and, above all, appearing the affable, smiling, happy guest. He warned against "hegemonists" without naming Russia or Vietnam and despite his angry last minute words, scored a significant diplomatic success.

The 74-year-old super pragmatist of the Peking Politburo — the highest ranking official to visit this region in almost 25 years — kept his Communist ideology in the background. He unblushingly wooed monarchists, Buddhist monks, hidebound generals and politicians who have trumpeted anti-Communism for decades.

It was a skilled performance, welcomed by Thailand, which has not received such attention since President Nixon visited here in 1968. Teng made it plain that is newfound affection was not only for Thailand but for all of non-Communist Southeast Asia — five nations populated by 232 million people.

Teng did obtain from Kriangsak approval of Chinese commercial aircraft to overfly Thailand en route to Cambodia. That agreement was evidently limited to commercial flights but it was valuable to the Chinese whose planes now fly over Laos to Cambodia. It is possible that the Vietnamese-dominated regime of Laos might deny such overflights if the China-Vietnam confrontation continues to escalate.

That possibility was clearly on the minds of the Chinese who sent their fifth-ranked Politburo member, Vice Chairman Wang Tung-hsing, on a surprise mission to Cambodia in tandem with Teng's visit to Thailand. In two nights of banqueting with Cambodia's Premier Pol Pot the usual effusive speeches were exchanged and Wang expressed confidence that Cambodia would "defeat the expansionists." He promised support but did not give the slightest hint of direct military intervention.

The unsettled situation in Cambodia strengthened Teng's diplomatic hand in Thailand. Although the Thais are officially neutral in the Vietnam-Cambodia dispute they regard Vietnam with apprehension.

The recent visit to Thailand by Vietnam's Prime Minister Pham Van Dong failed to diminish that apprehension. So did a followup visit by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Nicolia Firyubin. The reaction to Teng's visit clearly shows that Thailand's leaders, despite professed neutrality, are happily tilting toward China, at least for the moment.

"The only people unhappy about Teng's visit are the Russians, the Vietnamese and the Communist Party of Thailand "one Western diplomat concluded.

That was a reference to Teng's extravagantly publicized attendance at Buddhist rites inducting Thailand's crown prince into a two-week period as a monk. That was damaging blow Maoist oriented Thai Communists who call the king a "feudal remnant" and view the Buddhist hierarchy with similar distaste though they not openly attack it.

Throughout his stay and visit to such things as fish farms, grape orchards, military schools and even an award presentation at a badminton tournament, Teng made similar gestures aimed directly at the people.

In more concrete terms, the Thais and Chinese reached several general agreements, though some details remain to be ironed out. Foremost among these is a $7.5 million trade agreement for 1979 under which Thai agricultural and other products will be exchanged for oil and Chinese manfactured goods.

The two countries also agreed to scientific and technical exchanges involving about 30 projects. They decided that formal talks on air links will start later this month.

Carter plans to monitor 300 to 400 businesses

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Wednesday his administration will monitor the top 400 to 500 businesses in the country to make sure they comply with his anti-inflation program.

"We will use every available means at our command to induce them to comply," Carter said in a telephone call from his Oval Office to an anti-inflation forum in Hartford, Conn.

Administration officials such as Alfred Kahn, the head of the president's anti-inflation effort, were at the forum to explain the program to local citizens.

Carter made a similar telephone call last week to an anti-inflation forum in St. Louis, Mo.

He made the statement about monitoring businesses in response to a question from John Driscoll, president of the Connecticut State Labor Council, who wanted to know how the administration would force businesses to accept the guideline of holding down price increases.

Carter said the means at his disposal to induce businesses to comply include awarding government contracts and generating public interest.

Under the program, wages are to be held to a 7 percent increase.

The president noted that efforts to reduce inflation have not been successful in the past, but said he was "determined to be persistent and tough in my own leadership role in controlling inflation."

He called it a major battle. "It's a battle we cannot afford to lose and I do not intend to lose."

Carter also said he did not expect food prices in 1979 to increase "nearly so much as they did in 1978."

But he said food prices were difficult to regulate. "I don't have any intention of imposing price standards on food," he said, adding that it would be a serious mistake.

Voters in California approve crude terminal

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Voters in this port city have rejected the arguments of environmentalists by overwhelmingly approving construction of a terminal for huge Alaskan oil tankers that proponents promise will bring more jobs and more money.

With 100 percent of the vote in Tuesday's general election counted, the vote was 64,565 in favor of Proposition Y and 41,464 against.

The project by Standard Oil of Ohio would become the western end of a pipeline carrying Alaskan crude to the rest of the nation.

The Chamber of Commerce favored building the terminal in Long Beach Harbor, saying it would provide the city with $110,000 a year in tax dollars and 350 permanent jobs. The city already reaps $9 million a year from decoratively camouflaged offshore oil drilling platforms in the harbor.

Environmentalist opposition claimed the city's air quality was at stake, saying the terminal and eight storage tanks would pump gobs of pollution into the air.

Homeowners who also oppose the proposal said the plan would change the beach community's image from a resort and convention town 20 miles south of Los Angeles to that of a drab industrial city.

However, Sohio countered the pollution argument with a revolutionary clean-air tradeoff under a new state law. To offset any pollution generated by the terminal, Sohio has agreed to pay for pollution control devices for a local Southern California Edison Co. power generating plant and for 15 dry cleaning plants.

WTGS plans meetings

The West Texas Geological Society will meet at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday in the Midland Milton.

The program will be "Geology of the Pacific Northwest." It will be a lecture and slide presentation of the Oregon-Washington geology where the total sedimentary section exceeds 50,000 feet and may be as much as 100,000 feet.

The speaker will be Walter Youngquist. He has been a consultant to the Eugene, Ore., Water and Electric Board on geothermal power Resources since 1973. He is a geothermal councilor for the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and a visiting professor of geology at the University of Oregon.

Reservations for the Tuesday meeting should be made by 5 p. m. Friday.

Youngquist also will be the speaker for the WTGS meeting Wednesday in the Ranchland Hill Country Club. This event will get under way at 6:30 p. m. with a social hour. The dinner and program will start at 7:30 p. m.

His Wednesday topic will be "Over the Hill and Down the Creek," a lecture slide show based on his book of the same title. It will be a light-hearted presentation of the life of a geologist in a Peruvian desert oil camp.

Reservations for this meeting should be made by 5 p. m. Monday.

Solar tax credits due

President Jimmy Carter signed into law federal legislation early today which would provide tax credits for citizens choosing to use solar power equipment to heat and cool their homes.

The bill also would provide tax credits for those persons choosing to insulate and otherwise weatherize their homes to conserve energy.

The legislation provides that such tax credit under the insulation circumstances is to be 15 percent of the first $2,000 of qualifying expenditures, for a maximum credit of $300.

Also, the bill says the credit is to be be available for expenditures made on or after April 20, 1977, and before Jan. 1, 1986.

In addition, a credit carryover is provided if the credit exceeds the taxpayer's liability. These carryovers are to extend two years beyond the termination date of the credit or through the taxable years ending before Jan. 1, 1988.

The legislation also says credit will be made available for automatic energy-saving thermostats and clock theromostats, as well as energy usage display meters. The credit also is applicable to replacement burners on either old-fired furnaces or boilers.

Concerning solar energy, the bill says the tax credit will be available for existing, newly constructed and reconstructed residences.

Both owners and renters would be eligible for the credit. And, according to the bill, an individual who owns stock in a cooperative housing association or who is a member of a condominium management association would be eligible for the credit.

As amended, the bill says that the solar energy-related tax credit would be 30 percent of the first $2,000 cost and 20 percent for the next $8,000 of qualifying expenditures, for a maximum tax credit of $2,200.

Output can be increased

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Iran's reduced oil production, cut by a refinery strike, should not cause an oil shortage because other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries can increase output, OPEC spokesman Hamid Zaheri said.

He said even a complete cutoff of Iranian oil would not be felt for two months because the oil takes so long to reach its markets.

He made his remarks in an interview published today by the Austrian news agency APA.

Iran's normal production of 6 million barrels a day has been cut to about 2.5 million barrels by a strike of most of the country's 37,000 refinery workers. They are demanding wage increases and political concessions from Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Zaheri said any shortages will be from speculative purchases by oil firms anticipating a price increase.

Zaheri refused to speculate on the size of the next price increase.

The next OPEC ministers' conference, where a price increase likely will be decided, is Dec. 16 in Abu Dhabi.

OPEC's economic commission will meet at OPEC headquarters here next week to prepare statistics for use at the conference. They will be concerned with inflation and efforts to safeguard the oil income of OPEC members against the falling value of the dollar.

Speculation is the price hike will be from five to 10 percent, although "hawks" among the 13 OPEC members, such as Iraq, Libya and Algeria, want bigger increases. A barrel of crude oil now costs $12.70.

An increase of 10 percent would boost prices at the gas pump by about a cent a gallon.

President Carter signs diluted bill into law

By MAUREEN SANTINI

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today signed a diluted energy bill into law, declaring, "We have acquitted ourselves well as a nation."

Carter noted there were those who doubted Congress was capable of dealing with such a "politically sacrificial" issue.

However, the plan the president signed was a far cry from the original plan he submitted to Congress 19 months ago as the "moral equivalent of war."

"Today we can rightfully claim that we have a conscious national policy for dealing with energy problems," Carter declared.

He said the energy plan will enable the United States to save 2½ million barrels of oil per day by 1985. "This is not as great as the original goal, but it is a substantial basis on which to predicate future achievements," he added.

Carter noted the "difficult and sometimes painful" politics that characterized the formulation of the compromise agreement. "Many people gave up hope that our Congress was able to deal with so complicated ... and politically sacrificial an issue."

The 95th Congress completed work on the energy package just before adjourning Oct. 15.

Although it was a big domestic victory for the president, the compromise legislation omitted many of the tough proposals in his original package.

Among items scuttled along the way were stiff new taxes on gasoline, crude oil and industrial fuels.

While the bill provides tax credits to consumers for various energy conservation steps, it also is expected to increase costs for natural gas users.

Inviduals who use gas for heating and cooking will be affected directly, and everyone is likely to feel indirect effects from higher costs passed on by industrial users, who will bear the brunt of the price increases.

Natural gas prices will be allowed to rise by about 10 percent annually until 1985 when price lids will be removed from most natural gas. In the meantime, price controls will be extended for the first time to intrastate gas — that used in the state where it is produced.

There has been no clear resolution of what the new pricing plan will cost consumers. Various opponents of deregulation have claimed it will transfer $200 billion from consumers to producers over the next seven years. That could mean increases averaging $100 to $200 a year for typical families who heat with natural gas.

Deregulation supporters concede gas prices will go up, but say the additional cost attributable to deregulation will be closer to $20 a year for the average family. And they say it will mean more gas in the long run.

Other features of the new law:

—Taxpayers can take a tax credit of 15 percent on the first $2,000 for home insulation, storm doors, storm windows and other energy-saving equipment, up to a total credit of $300. The credit applies to purchases made as far back as April 20, 1977, the day Carter submitted his energy proposals to Congress.

—A tax credit of 30 percent on the first $2,000 and 20 percent on the next $8,000 — up to a total credit of $2,200 — can be taken for solar, wind and geothermal energy equipment.

—New cars that get poor gasoline mileage will be taxed, beginning with 1980 models getting less than 15 miles per gallon. By 1986, the tax will apply to cars getting less than 23.5 miles per gallon and will range from $400 to $3,850.

—New energy efficiency standards will be set for home appliances. Utilities will have to offer consumers help in better insulating their homes and in arranging financing for such improvements, and home insulation grants will be available for low income families, schools and hospitals.

—Industries and power plants will be encouraged, and in some cases required, to switch from natural gas to coal. Residential ornamental gas lamps will be banned by 1982.

—State commissions which set utility rates will be required to consider plans for lower rates to residential consumers who use power in off-peak hours and to consider eliminating discounts to large industrial users.

—Construction will be expedited on proposed pipelines to carry natural gas from Alaska to the lower 48 states and oil from the West Coast to the upper Midwest.

Committee hosts Superior brass

The Midland Wildcat Committee was the host Wednesday afternoon in the Petroleum Club of Midland for officials of The Superior Oil Co. of Houston.

Joseph E. Reid, president and chief executive officer, who formerly lived in Midland, headed the group of officials.

The other officials honored by the committee include Charles L. Barney, senior vice president, drilling and production; H. Robert Hirsch, senior vice president, exploration; Allan C. Durham, senior vice president, finance and administration, E. C. Hixson, manager of the land department, all of Houston; J. S. Eades, Conroe, Western Division manager, and Gene Wentworth, division land manager in Midland.

Reid said he thought the election of William Clements is a plus for Texas. "He will be a strong governor and I think we will always know where he stands.

"He has a good business background and having been in Washington he understands how government works. And, he is experienced in the operation of the oil business," Reid said.

Remarking on the Senate victory by John Tower, he said it is not so much that Bob Krueger was defeated by Tower, but that Krueger's voice in the House will be lost. "He was a strong voice for the oil industry. He was very capable in getting people in Washington lined up on our side," Reid said.

The Superior president said his company currently is in the process of adding to its Midland staff. "We still have several vacancies to fill and as soon as our staff in shape company-wide, we will send more people to Midland."

He said of oil the cities in the country that Superior operates in Midland and Denver, Colo., are the most popular. "When we assign one to either city it is hard to get them to move when reassignments come up."

"We are finding the housing situation rather bad in Midland," he added.

Reid, Barney and Hirsch all agreed that the overall business activity in the Permian Basin is running at a great pace. "The business climate in Midland is very good," Reid said.

Hirsch said that the exploration activities in the Permian Basin still holds great promise and "we intend to take advantage of that fact," Hirsch said.

Barney said that although Superior had a period of inactivity in this area in the past, that the company had doubled its exploration activities in the last year.

The company handles 95 million cubic feet of gas production per day, and 3,500 barrels of oil per day in the Permian Basin area, Barney said.

Robert L. Wlood is chairman of the executive committee of the Midland Wildcat Committee. He said approximately 250 oilmen were on hand for the Superior reception.

111 oil, gas tests scheduled in Permian Basin

Twenty-three wildcat operations and 88 field projects were staked last week in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

The 111 total is slightly less than the 121 staked in the two-state area a week earlier.

District 7-C of the Railroad Commission of Texas, headquartered in San Angelo, handled applications requesting permission to drill nine wildcats and 29 field area tests.

The District 8 office in Midland processed seven wildcat requests and 27 field applications.

District 8-A, Lubbock, reported three wildcat applications and eight field tests.

Lea County gained 15 new field projects.

Former CIA officer admits to selling secret documents

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — A former CIA watch officer, now charged with espionage, admitted to federal authorities that he sold the Soviets top-secret documents, an FBI agent testified Wednesday.

Special Agent James K. Murphy, a key prosecution witness, said he interrogated William Kampiles, a 23-year-old Chicago man charged with six counts of espionage, only days before he was arrested in Munster August 17.

When Assistant U.S. Attorney James Richmond asked Murphy whether Kampiles realized that he had given away important U.S. defense information, Murphy replied that Kampiles told him he knew it was a security breach.

"But I didn't think it would put the Russians ahead by leaps and bounds," Murphy said Kampiles told him.

Kampiles, a former CIA watch officer, is accused of selling the Soviets a tecnnical manual on the KH-11 space satellite, which has been used for several years to monitor Soviet troop movements in military installations.

If convicted, he could receive a maximum sentence of 70 years in prison for each count.

In earlier testimony Wednesday, Vivian Psachos, a researcher in the CIA's Soviet division, said Kampiles was told by a Soviet agent in Greece to furnish information on missile sites, CIA agents abroad, and a "shopping list," of other available documents.

Mrs. Psachos testified that she interviewed Kampiles with another CIA agent and two FBI officials in a Washington, D.C. hotel, shortly before his arrest.

She said Kampiles told the government officers that he never mentioned the KH-11 to the Russian agent he met at a party at the Soviet embassy in Athens last winter.

"Bill (Kampiles) realized he was a Soviet agent and he decided to play a game," Mrs. Psachos, a 21-year veteran of the CIA, said the defendant had told her.

She testified that Kampiles met the Russian on three occasions while vacationing in Greece in February and March, and told him he could furnish secret CIA documents.

Mrs. Psachos said Kampiles told the government interviewers that he lied to the Russian, saying he had worked as an economic analyst for the CIA for two years, that he was 25 or 26 years old, and that he was born and raised in Boston.

She said that to prove that he was not a double agent or "plant," Kampiles gave the Russian, identified as Michael Zavalis, a forged identity card from the CIA.

But according to Mrs. Psachos, Kampiles told the U.S. officials who interviewed him in Washington, that the ID card was all he gave the Russian.

The prosecution's first witness, a former friend of Kampiles, CIA agent George Joannides, testified Tuesday that Kampiles told him in the spring of 1977 that he wanted to work in the covert section of the CIA. Joannides said he told Kampiles he would need additional training and could not be considered for such a post until mid-1978.

Joannides testified that Kampiles said he did not want to wait that long and told him the following year he was trying to establish himself as a good candidate for an undercover CIA post by getting contacts with the Russians and providing them with "disinformation."

During the government interrogation of Kampiles in Washington, FBI agent Don Stukey told Kampiles he didn't believe his story, Mrs. Psachos testified.

Hearst attorney will appeal judge's ruling

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's attorney said Wednesday he will appeal the ruling of a federal judge who rejected a plea to either set aside or reduce her seven-year bank robbery sentence.

Attorney George Martinez, who did not indicate when he would file the papers in the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, declined further comment on Tuesday's ruling by U.S. District Curt Judge William Orrick Jr.

Unless a higher authority intervenes, Orrick's ruling will keep Miss Hearst in the nearby Pleasanton federal correctional facility until at least July 11, when she will be eligible for parole.

In a 36-page ruling, Orrick rejected Miss Hearst's claim in papers submitted Aug. 2 that her trial had been "reduced to a mockery, a farce and a sham because of ineffective assistance of counsel."

She contended, among other things, that her trial attorney, F. Lee Bailey, failed to provide effective counsel because his plans to write a book about the trial created a conflict of interest, resulting in prejudicial tactical decisions being made.

She also argued massive pretrial publicity made it impossible for her to get a fair trial in San Francisco.

By the time she is eligible for parole, Miss Hearst would have served 28 months of her sentence for participation in the April 15, 1974, robbery of a San Francisco bank. She was convicted of participating in the robbery with members of the radical Symbionese Liberation Army, who kidnapped her Feb. 4, 1974, from her Berkeley apartment.

IT'S A GREAT BIG, WONDERFUL WORLD

it just won't fit in a textbook

Nor does it stand still.

So much happens every day that textbooks would have to be revised and printed continuously to keep up with developments.

Each day The Reporter-Telegram contains enough information to fill an average size novel.

Prior to the age of printing and distribution of information to the general public, a thousand year span once was required to double the world's knowledge

With the advent of movable type and the printed word, that period was successively shortened to less than 100 years.

Now, in the age of the computer, the world's knowledge doubles in less than ten years!

At this rate more inductive data will be developed in the next ten years than in all of the millenia since the beginning of time to this day.

The information machine spews out mountains of data by the hour.

Macrocosmic knowledge to evaluate, classify and correlate.

What is the impact of this upon

Today's Teacher?

How current are the textbooks?

Were they printed this year?

Last year?

The most current textbook available was printed yesterday, and today, and every day . . . as new data are introduced.

And it's the most economical textbook in the world.

It's the "real life" textbook.

The textbook that relates.

It's the newspaper.

In the hands of a skilled teacher the Newspaper In Education program can be a motivating magician that transforms lethargy into eager participation.

Our Used Cars Are Sold With As Much Pride As Our New Cars.

Many people are not aware that on many occasions we spend good money and time on the used cars we sell.

Those trade-in cars that do not meet our standards never appear in our used car department. The newer model trade-ins in fine condition, get a quick check, a lick and some polish...while the good older ones do get fixed up, if we feel they are worth the money.

That's why we offer every used car with pride.
