'Upward Bound Program' presented to PTA

The Lockney PTA met March 12, at the elementary cafetorium. A short program was presented by Terry Ellison, Charlotte Mitchell and Joyce Evans on the Gifted and Talented program in the Lockney School system.

This program entitled "Upward Bound" will benefit all students. The state requires that all students be tested and those that qualify be identified. Mr. Ellison explained that since 1988 the schools have been working on this program, the state requires that it be in place by the 1990-91 school year.

Lockney has chosen to use the Caprock Writing Project, for one reason there are several that are already trained in this area.

Mrs. Evans spoke on the "Tactics for Thinking," which will benefit all students in thinking better, thinking more, and the decision making process.

Teachers will receive training in this area. The state tests have been changed to include more thinking skills, which will give a better assessment of student achievements. Mrs. Mitchell explained that all students will have the opportunity to participate.

Lockney has chosen to identify 7% of its students as gifted and talented. The State of Texas requires at least 5 points of criteria be considered equally to qualify the student as gifted and talented.

First, achievement test scores in math and reading.

Second, the teachers will nominate students using a checklist.

Third, parents may nominate also by using a checklist.

Fourth, a creativity test will be given by Mrs. Mitchell to each student.

Finally, tests which show how they learn and how they think will be given.

The committee, consisting of the counselor, building principal and a teacher, will consider students for this program. Students must meet three out of five criteria to qualify. Once a student has been identified as gifted and talented, they do not have to re-identified the next year. If a student is re-nominated they may be re-tested.

Mr. Hallmark stated that the gifted and talented program does not mean anything as far as a child's ability. They have to be identified by state law, parents and children should not be disappointed if they are not.

The High School Student Council sponsored a Drug Abuse Fair with the winner going to the Regional Fair. The winners are as follows:

K-3: 1st place, Mrs. Rexrode and Mrs. Johnson's 1st grade classes with an audio cassette tape; 2nd, Lendie Miller-poster

The next order of business was to elect new officers for the 1990-91 PTA year. The new officers will be: Reeda Cay Smith, President; Kathy Allen, Vice-President; JoBeth Dietrich, Secretary-Treasurer; Robin Stoerner, Program Chairman; Sandra Cummings, Educational Chairman; Kim Lambert, Projects Chairman; Debbie Galloway, Hospitality Chairman; and Bruce Adamson, Legislative Chairman.

Once again PTA will give a Teacher Appreciation Luncheon on May 11, members will be called to bring a salad, vegetable or dessert. Caprock Industries will be donating the meat.

PTA also, voted to give a $500.00 student scholarship and a $200.00 teacher scholarship for a teacher continuing education. Anyone wanting to apply for one of these scholarships needs to contact Charlotte Mitchell or Kathy Allen.

The PTA will also be purchasing the lower case alphabet for the Ellison Machine, computer covers, and $1000.00 toward new risers.

This year's membership in PTA was 130, we need parents, teachers, and administrators to be in PTA, not just to make money, but to make Lockney schools the best for "our kids."

The next PTA meeting will be May 7, in the elementary cafetorium, at this time the scholarship winners will be announced and officers will be installed for next year.

Life management skills retreat held by educational service center

Fifteen students from Lockney attended Life Management Skills Retreats held January 12-14, February 16-18, and March 9-11 at the Baptist Encampment south of Floydada.

The Life Management Skills Retreat, is a program that helps the "at risk" students with strategies which emphasize decision-making through a series of activities and events experienced in a retreat setting under the direction of certified counselors trained in the use of the LMSRM.

The retreat counselors, strive to foster self-worth, enabling the students to express their potentialities and capabilities. Students need to realize the causes and manifestations of a poor self-image which lead to the self-defeating behaviors of school dropouts. They need to become aware that they cannot change, for the most part, the life and world situations in which they live, but that they can choose to change their responses and decisions to these situations.

These retreats have proved to have a great impact on the student's personal growth.

David Luna was presented with the "Outstanding Boy" award at the January 12-14 retreat. At the February 16-18 retreat Becky Rodriguez was presented with the "Outstanding Girl" award and at the March 9-11 retreat Sammy Salas won the "Most Improved Boy" award, Richard Guerrero the "Outstanding Boy" award and Adela Sustaito the "Most Improved Girl" award.

number of 25 students since last April. Another retreat will take place March 30 - April 1, 1990.

They were accompanied by Tomas Rendon, Lozell Keeter and Maria Elena Arellano who served as sponsors for the group.

Serving as counselors at the retreat were Bruce Roark, Yolanda Sanchez, Tony Saldana, Marilyn Vieregge and Robert Alfaro. They were from the Region XVII Education Service Center in Lubbock.

The retreats are held at the Baptist Encampment at the Floydada canyon.

The First Baptist Church in Lockney was the site for the wedding ceremony uniting Heather Amber Holt of Lockney and Brian Glen Smith of Abernathy on March 17. Bro. Garry Higgs, minister of First Baptist Church, read the vows.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Holt of Lockney and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dean Smith of Muleshoe. Grandparents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Frizzell of Lockney and Mr. and Mrs. R.B. Holt of Floydada. The groom's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Houston Smith and Mrs. Vida Adkisson of Abernathy.

Adorning the altar area of the church included a candle arch and spiral candelabra accented with tropical foliage, ivory candles and ivory tulle bows. Formal baskets filled with ferns and hurricane globes surrounded by tulle and English ivy completed the nuptial area. The bridal aisles and pews were marked with large ivory tulle bows tied with satin love knots and English ivy. The stained glass windows of the church were adorned with hurricane globes surrounded by tulle, English ivy and satin love knots.

Musical selections were presented by Zelda Ellison of Lockney, pianist; Lucy Dean Record, organist; and soloists Ronnee Patton of Lubbock and Lisa Mosley of Lockney. Selections included "Sunrise, Sunset", "Only God Could Love You More" and "In This Very Room".

For her wedding, the bride chose a formal de lustered antique ivory satin gown. The bodice, encrusted with hand-beaded sequins and pearls on alencon lace, featured a Victorian neckline, Renaissance sleeves appliqued with lace and pearls, and basque waistline. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of zebra alstroemeria, gerbera daisies, miranda frusia intertwined with English ivy and gypsophila and tied with tulle atop a lace covered Bible belonging to her mother and carried on her wedding day.

Following tradition, the bride carried a gold watch in her bouquet belonging to her great-grandmother; something new were her earrings, a gift from her father; something borrowed were her wedding slippers and something blue, her garter. Flower girls were Autumn and Adrienne Camden, cousins of the bride, of Weatherford, Oklahoma. They wore ivory, ankle length taffeta dresses and carried lace-lined baskets. Roddy Spradling, nephew of the groom of Muleshoe, served as ring bearer.

Lighting the candles were Hilary Webster and Jaime Webster, cousins of the bride, of Wichita, Kansas. Ushers were Monty Teeter, of Lockney, Ritchie Thornton of Lubbock and Rusty Teeter of Abilene.

Attending as best man was Mark Bell of Lubbock. Groomsmen were Gordon Havens of Wolfforth, Kip Holt, brother of the bride, of Lockney, Randal Stillwell of Cotton Center, Randy Houston of San Angelo, Doug Spradling, brother-in-law of the groom of Muleshoe, Tim Cope and Steve Cope of Lubbock. James Laney, of Lubbock, recited I Corinthians 13 as a part of the wedding ceremony.

A reception followed the ceremony in the Garden Room of the church.

The bride's table was laid with a floor-length ivory taffeta cloth, draped with ivory tulle and featuring a floor ruffle. It held a tiered cake covered with gum-paste flowers and lilies of valley. Cascading satin love knots fell from the top of the cake. Serving at the bride's table were Roxanne Parsons of Lubbock, Angie Buesing of Canyon and Rachelle Ford of Dallas.

Cheesecake was served from the groom's table, which was covered with an ivory cloth and featured brass appointments. Centerpiece was a hurricane globe surrounded by English ivy. Attending the groom's table was Stacy Wilkes of Brownfield and Chana Cope of Lamesa. Passing out rice bags at the reception were James Camden, Todd Cotham and April Dorman.

Twenty years ago experts said "that a man walking on the moon was impossible. Experts also said that persons with mental retardation couldn't run a hundred meters, swim the length of a pool, or play a game sport like basketball. As with lunar landings, the experts have been proven wrong.

Special Olympics is founded on the belief that people with mental retardation can, with proper instructions and encouragement, learn to enjoy and benefit from participation in individual and team sports, adapted as necessary to physical limitation.

But, many mentally retarded citizens of West Texas have not had the opportunity to share the joy, skill, and courage that are a part of Special Olympics. Hundreds have never had the opportunity to benefit from participation in the Special Olympics Program.

West Texas citizens, civic organizations and businesses are invited to stand together to help the Area 17 citizens with mental retardation.

Physicians and dietician advise the daily lowering of fat intake

For the last couple of years, dietitians and physicians have been advising people to limit their daily intake of fat to 30 percent of their total calories for the sake of lowering blood cholesterol levels.

A special report in the October 1989 issue of "Diet and Nutrition Letter" from Tufts University reinforced the importance of a low-fat diet. According to the report, the benefits of a low-fat diet include a lower blood cholesterol level, a better success at weight loss and a possible reduction in high blood pressure. The report also suggests that the diet may help ward off certain cancers, such as those found in the breast and colon.

"Whereas carbohydrates and proteins provide only 4 calories per gram, fat provides 9 calories per gram, making it more 'fattening,' said Cindy Rowell, R.D., outpatient dietitian at Methodist Hospital.

Fat comes in three forms: saturated, polyunsaturated and monounsaturated. Research shows that saturated fat raises blood cholesterol more than anything else in the diet, including cholesterol found in food. Saturated fat is found in animal products, palm oil, palm kernel oil and coconut oil. Many processed foods, such as cake mixes and creamers, contain saturated fat.

Unsaturated fats - monounsaturated and polyunsaturated - lower half the cholesterol saturated fat raises. They're found primarily in cooking oils, margarine and many salad dressings. Two recommended monounsaturated oils are olive oil and canola oil.

While most food products list the amount of fat, the figure is in grams, not percentages. A simple formula can help solve the dilemma. To figure out the percentage of calories in a food that come from fat:

1. Multiply the number of grams of fat in the food by 9.

2. Multiply the answer in step one by 100.

3. Divide the outcome of step two by the total number of calories in the product.

The resulting figure is the percentage of fat in the product.

"Oils contain almost 100 percent fat, while vegetables and fruit contain almost no fat. The thing to do then is balance out the diet so that the day's fat calories amount to less than 30 percent of the total calories consumed," Rowell said.

Clements designates March 25-31 as Retired Teachers Week in Texas

William P. Clements, Jr., Governor of Texas, has designated the week of March 25 through 31, 1990, as Retired Teachers Week in Texas.

The Texas Retired Teachers Association has been instrumental in addressing the needs of retired educators in the state of Texas since its organization in 1953.

Retired educators have benefitted greatly from the goals of this organization which include: elevating the status of retired teachers, encouraging retired teachers to use their talents and experiences to help their state, nation and community, creating opportunities for united action to solve problems faced by retired teachers, and cooperating with local units of this organization and with other national groups.

The motto of the TRTA is "Giving of Self and Finding Joy in Service is Part of our Immortality." These words symbolize the willingness of our retired educators to continue to contribute to the future of our state.

Have a good week!

Bluebonnet market set to bloom

The bluebonnet, the queen of Texas wildflowers that rules countless pastures and roadsides, will extend her reign for the first time this spring to hundreds of home landscapes.

"We should have the most spectacular display of bluebonnets ever seen in home landscapes simply because before last fall they were never available in large quantities to be planted by home gardeners," said Steve George of Dallas, a horticulturalist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Scientific advances have created a multimillion-dollar market in the nursery industry by transforming the popular state flower from a sporadically germinating wildflower into a commercial bedding plant.

For the first time, "scarified" seed allowed commercial nurseries to grow bluebonnets for transplants to home gardens last fall for spring blooms. A new process of treating the seed with sulfuric acid makes the sturdy seed coat less resistant and assures reliable germination within 10 days. The treatment that has provided both seed and plants to the public was devised by San Antonio Extension horticulturalist Jerry Parsons.

First-year sales in North Central Texas alone exceeded 270,000 plants in the fall of 1989. One nursery reported selling 9,000 plants the first 72 hours they were in stock, with 40,000 sold during the first four weeks of the fall season. The specially treated seed also was in high demand with sales of more than 950 pounds in a completely new market.

"This not only creates a new market for nurseries but balances their very seasonal business by offering a new product during the slower fall season," George said. "And Texans now have a much easier way to grow bluebonnets at home with a choice of treated seed or plants."

Packages of bluebonnet seeds marketed primarily at nurseries are marked "acid scarified" and should be planted in late August and early September so they will be established before winter's cold weather. Transplants may be planted through Halloween.

Bluebonnets have frustrated home gardeners because of their hard seed coat that prevents reliable germination. Usually only the most persistent gardeners would spend the time and effort necessary to grow bluebonnets and then had very little assurance of success.

Few Texans are aware that bluebonnets grow in the wild in other colors. Parsons used his radio show on gardening to conduct a public search for strong plants in white, pink and light blue—all of which, while rare, do occur in nature. He harvested seed and developed fields of transplants in those colors, proving that they also can be grown commercially.

White bluebonnets are found only once in 10 million blooms, and pink varieties occur only once in 100 million blooms. Their colors are not a result of external genetic manipulation but are rare, naturally occurring instances in the bluebonnet world.

The initial search grew from the dream of Texas native plant enthusiast, Carroll Abbott, to plant a Texas flag in bluebonnets for the Texas Sesquicentennial in 1986. Abbott, known in the nursery industry as "Mr. Texas Bluebonnet," pioneered native plant development and produced specialty seeds for others interested in Texas wildflowers. Unfortunately, he died before the flag project was complete. The "Abbott pink" bluebonnet was named for him. The search continues to discover a true red.
