Deaf Smith County site among last nine choices

Department of Energy has for nuclear waste storage plan

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor

Sites in Deaf Smith and Swisher Counties have been termed "suitable for further consideration" in the U.S. Department of Energy's search for a nuclear waste repository.

The Office of Nuclear Waste Isolation, headquartered in Columbus, Ohio, said in a just-released report the two Texas Panhandle sites are to be looked at along with seven others in the United States. Mississippi and Utah each have two of the locations, while Louisiana, Nevada and Washington possess one apiece.

According to Brian Quirke, DOE public information officer out of Chicago, Ill., the report represents a formalization of last year's Location Recommendation Report. The final site chosen will be one of the nine still being considered, he said during a telephone interview this morning.

Steve Frishman, manager of the state's nuclear waste programs office in Austin, said Thursday over the telephone a final location is supposed to be determined within a year of March 31, 1987. As outlined in the Nuclear Waste Policy Act, signed by President Reagan last January, detailed site characterizations of three final candidates are due by January of 1987.

Frishman, however, anticipates a final decision will occur anywhere from eight to 20 months later than scheduled. The DOE will not admit it, he said, but detailed site characterizations of the final three locations are likely to take more time than the allotted two years.

Final environmental assessments of the nine sites are scheduled to be finished next August. That will allow the DOE to reduce the number of locations "to at least five," Frishman said. He thought public hearings would probably be held prior to the reduction, as drafts of the assessments are due next April.

On January 1, 1985, the DOE is to present the president with recommendations based on preliminary site characterization studies - for the three finalists. To follow are the detailed site characterizations, which Quirke claimed will include exploratory shafts. Those shafts, he said, would be 12-foot-wide holes bored down to the proposed repository level.

Prior to a final recommendation and decision by the president, there are to be public hearings held at each of the three sites, Frishman claimed. He thought if one of the Panhandle locations is a finalist, a hearing would also be held in Austin to accommodate state leaders.

The site ultimately approved by the president, however, will not necessarily house a nuclear waste dump. Congress recently passed a motion allowing the concerned state's governor to veto the repository. A simple majority vote by both houses of the federal government, though, would override that veto.

Quirke said the legislation came about because congressmen realized the nuclear waste storage matter was not "popular." Regarding the likelihood of a gubernatorial veto being overridden, he said, "Anyone would be a fool to venture what the Congress will do. That's a very involved decision."

One reason why Congress might side with a governor's veto, Quirke believed, would be proof the DOE was in some way erroneous with its selection process.

Quirke agreed with Frishman's opinion the DOE "is being very flexible with the schedule under the (nuclear waste policy) act."

"The schedule is at this point hard to pin down," Quirke said. Among the factors posing delays were

"significant" objections by several states. Also, DOE had to have its selection process approved by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which did not receive DOE plans until late last month.

The Deaf Smith site, located mainly in the county's north-central region, covers approximately 300 square miles, according to Quirke. About 190 square miles are taken up by the Swisher County location, placed northeast of Tulla. Quirke said the DOE plans to reduce each of the two areas to between 15 and 20 square miles.

Quirke said the two Panhandle nominees are among the seven "salt" sites.

Leftists allowing amnesty for indians

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government has freed hundreds of imprisoned Miskito Indians as part of a new amnesty program but firmly rejected a proposal for peace talks with anti-Sandinista rebels.

"We do not speak to mercenaries or foreign powers who kill our people every day," Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto said Thursday. "We do not talk to puppets. We would rather talk to the puppeteers."

In Nicaragua, where rebel peace talks rejected

His comment, in a videotape interview made available to The Associated Press, referred to the Reagan administration's support for some of the rebels.

In Panama, President Reagan's Central American envoy, Richard Stone, said Thursday he would try to arrange talks between the Nicaraguan rebels and the Sandinistas. He said he met with leaders of four guerrilla factions at their request.

"We asked Ambassador Stone to facilitate a dialogue between us ... and the Sandinista regime to seek the democratization of Nicaragua, to seek peace in Nicaragua," said rebel leader Adolfo Calero, who heads the Nicaraguan Democratic Force fighting in northern Nicaragua near the Honduran border.

In Washington, a senior American official said the rebels told Stone they would stop fighting if the Sandinista junta takes specific steps toward establishing democracy as it promised shortly before overthrowing rightist strongman Anastasio Somoza in 1979.

But Calero said other Latin American countries should be allowed to send observers to guarantee fair, free elections. On Sunday, the Sandinistas are expected to announce an election date for sometime in 1985.

U.S. officials say they do not believe the estimated 10,000 to 12,000 rebels have enough strength to topple the Sandinistas. But they believe rebel pressure could force the junta to moderate its internal policies and reassess its ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union and its alleged support for leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Meanwhile, about 300 Miskito Indians were brought from a Managua-area prison farm Thursday night to a release ceremony where the amnesty program was announced. Junta coordinator Daniel Ortega read the release order in Spanish, then it was read in Miskito.

The amnesty decree said it extends to all Nicaraguans guilty of "crimes against public order and security" in isolated North Zelaya province on the Caribbean coast during the past two years.

It also covers Nicaraguan citizens other than Miskitos who have been involved in "criminal deeds" in the province but does not cover most of the rebels fighting the Sandinistas in northern and southern Nicaragua.

The Miskitos have generally resisted the leftist government. Hundreds have taken up arms against the Sandinistas.

The opposition newspaper La Prensa, quoting unofficial sources, said about 600 Miskitos would be released from jail. The amnesty also would affect the estimated 16,000 Miskitos who fled to neighboring Honduras.

Human rights groups have criticized the government's policies toward the Miskitos, which included a relocation program from traditional homelands on the Coco River.

Some of the freed Miskitos said they had been held two years without trial and in some cases without being told of the charges against them.

The amnesty follows other conciliatory steps taken by the Nicaraguan government in recent weeks that have included a lessening of press censorship, new dialogue with the Roman Catholic Church, the withdrawal of some of the estimated 8,000 Cubans from the country and the scheduled announcement of a date for elections.

In Honduras, U.S. Navy Secretary John F. Lehman said Thursday that Nicaragua has allowed itself to become a Cuban

Block selected to be vice president

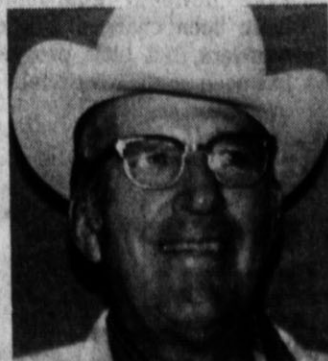

A Hereford man who has been a member of the Texas Wheat Producers Association almost since its inception in 1950 has been elected one of three vice presidents of the organization.

Ivan Block, who farms a half-section of milo, wheat and corn southwest of Hereford, was elected this month at the organization's annual membership meeting and symposium in Amarillo.

Block will represent this area and assist the association in its efforts to promote the product and the activities of the organization. He said the Texas group, headquartered in Amarillo, works with the National Association Wheatgrowers to expand foreign markets and educate consumers here and abroad about the uses of wheat.

"There is a surplus of every commodity grown in this country, and wheat is in the worst position," he said. "So much of our farmland is planted in wheat, much of which has recently been converted from cotton crops or pasture land. That, plus the fact that we have had several good years for yields recently, has kept the prices extremely low."

A Hereford resident since 1948, Block is also a member of the Texas Grain Sorghum Producers board and is active in community affairs. He and his wife Francis have two sons, who also farm, and a daughter in Dallas.

Other officers elected at the recent meeting were Robert Graves of Perryton, president; Leonard King of Childress and W.R. Moore of Munday, vice presidents; and C.L. Edwards, Panhandle, secretary-treasurer.

Also this month, during a quarterly meeting of the Texas Wheat Producers Board, changes in its assessment procedures were voted in as a result of passage of a constitutional amendment affecting the checkoff program. Leo Witkowski of Hereford is a member of that board.

Twenty-nine resolutions adopted by the Texas Wheat Producers Association will be presented to the National Association during the annual convention at Denver in January. Block plans to attend that convention.

Nativity Week planned

The seventh annual "Living Nativity Week" is planned for Dec. 5-10 at West Texas State University by the Latter Day Saints Student Association.

The association is composed of West Texas State University students from Hereford, Amarillo and Canyon who are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Christy Duncan of Hereford, association president, said a cast of 10 will present the program every 15 minutes between 7 and 8:30 p.m. on the hillside near the football stadium. "Just pull into the parking lot," she said. "It is not even necessary to get out of your car."

The nativity enactments include Mary and Joseph arriving at the inn and visits of the shepherds and wise men. The costumes are all handmade.

Martinez found guilty

A Randall County district jury found Raymond Martinez, 19 of Hereford, guilty of involuntary manslaughter Wednesday and he was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Martinez was indicted by a Randall County grand jury last February following a wreck that left Lorille O'Donald of Canyon dead. Martinez and a companion, Allen Shire of Hereford, were critically injured in the collision.

Martinez' attorney was unable to prove that the suspect was not the driver of the pickup, which reportedly crossed the center line of Highway 60 near Canyon while traveling at a high rate of speed.

They two-day trial was heard in Canyon by 251st District Court Judge Naomi Harney.

Police report two thefts

Two thefts involving more than $200 worth of merchandise have recently occurred, reported the Hereford Police Department.

According to Lieutenant Vernon Hope, 11 fire extinguishers were taken from the Hereford Independent School District bus barn either Nov. 5 or 6. The theft was valued at $608.

Sometime between 3 and 3:30 p.m. Thursday, a 13-inch color television was stolen from the cab of a truck owned by Hereford Cablevision, 126 E. Third St. Hope said the vehicle was resting in the company's parking lot.

Police arrested two people for DWI Thursday, which also saw one incident apiece of harrasing phone calls and a juvenile problem.

FCA gathering slated

A meeting to organize a local adult chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is planned for Dec. 5 at 7 p.m. in the Heritage Room of the Deaf Smith County Library.

Bob Wagner, a member of the Amarillo Regional Board, said preliminary steps have already been taken with Jim Conkwright being named president of the organization. The FCA is open to everyone, especially parents of junior and senior high school athletes.

Wagner said senior high chapters have been organized in the past and there are now junior high "buddies" as well. He said some sponsors for the youth organizations are still needed.

Activities sponsored by the adult FCA chapters include junior olympic events, counseling seminars and fund-raising banquets. Wagner said a dance is tentatively planned for this month by the local unit.

Victim asked about arrest

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A man buried in a makeshift coffin for four days emerged from his grave and asked if police had arrested "Ron White," the man now on trial in his abduction, a former sheriff's deputy says.

Jim Hall testified Thursday that Michael Baucom, covered with filth and urine, clung to his arm and wept after Hall and another deputy dug him up Sept. 26, 1982. "Have you got Ron White yet?" Hall recalled Baucom asked shortly after being freed.

Elmo Schwab, attorney for 38-year-old Ronald Floyd White, has said his client did not commit the kidnapping and was insane at the time Baucom was abducted from his Santa Fe home.

Officers were led to Baucom by Mark Oler, another suspect in what they believe was a kidnapping plot, Hall said.

Review panel flaws hospitals

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal court review panel says violence among patients is still a problem in the eight state mental hospitals involved in a 11-year-old lawsuit questioning their operations.

"Approximately 37 percent of the hospitalized patients had engaged in violent behavior during the 45-day period reviewed," said a report released Thursday by the three-member panel.

"Almost all of the staff's interventions around violent behavior are crisis-oriented and aimed at bringing an already volatile situation under control."

The three-member review panel appointed by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders, Dallas, made a half-way report Thursday in settling the lawsuit which alleged inadequate treatment and conditions in the state hospital system.

Parents sue city over drowning

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The parents of a 12-year-old boy have filed a $7 million negligence suit against the City of San Antonio stemming from the death of their son, who drowned after tumbling into an uncovered manhole.

The body of Raul Perez was recovered Nov. 4, more than a day after he fell into the weed-obscured hole while chasing a soccer ball during physical education class.

The youngster's body floated through more than eight miles of gas-filled underground tunnels before being raked into a sewage treatment plant.

Mayor Henry Cisneros called the death a "terrible tragedy," and later paid a private visit to the Perez family.

National

Jobless rate appears steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — National unemployment will likely hold relatively steady, with no repetition of the sharp decline in October, private economists say.

These analysts said that with applications for unemployment compensation benefits rising, and evidence the economic recovery is slowing, the civilian jobless rate will stand still or fall only fractionally.

These assessments came on the eve of today's release of November's civilian unemployment rate.

Many private economists — and perhaps some within the Reagan administration — were surprised by the sharp drop in unemployment from September to October. The seasonally adjusted jobless rate fell from 9.3 percent to 8.8 percent.

But that half-a-percentage point dip in the rate was brought about largely because more than a half million people dropped out of the labor force — or stopped looking for work.

Gremayel and U.S. still talking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials, in a race to prevent Lebanon from plunging once again into chaos, say they need to show progress toward a troop withdrawal within a month.

Going into today's second round of meetings here with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, officials said the two sides were trying to find "mechanisms" to make the May 17 Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement work.

Both President Reagan and Gemayel reaffirmed their support for the agreement at meeting here Thursday. Gemayel planned to meet with Secretary of State George P. Shultz and other senior officials today.

U.S. and Lebanese negotiators avoided saying they were seeking to modify the agreement in order to make it more attractive to Syria, which has rejected it.

Syria won't withdraw, and Israel says it won't pull out until the Syrians do. Israel also has said it won't agree to change a word in the accord.

Children die in anthill tunnel

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Eight schoolchildren were killed and two were injured when an anthill tunnel collapsed on top of them in southern Zimbabwe, police said today.

The children, aged nine to 16, were digging Wednesday for soil to make mud floors for their school in the Mberengwa district, according to a police spokesman, who said they suffocated when the tunnel collapsed.

German minister in trouble

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The lower house of Parliament today cleared the way for Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff to be charged with bribery by unanimously voting to lift his parliamentary immunity.

Prosecutors had sought to remove Lambsdorff's immunity so they could file charges against him for his alleged involvement in a kickback scandal with the giant Duesseldorf-based Flick industrial concern.

Flick, one of West Germany's largest industrial holding companies, controls or has interests in many firms, including manufacturers of cars, tanks, paper, chemicals, steel products and railroad locomotives. It retains control of 10 percent of the Stuttgart-based Daimler-Benz and 30 percent of the U.S. chemical company W.R. Grace.

Congressmen vow to re-enact vetoed bill

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats say they will oppose further military aid to El Salvador, perhaps by a Senate filibuster, until they have re-enacted a bill vetoed by President Reagan that would tie assistance to progress on human rights.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, the Republican chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, also criticized the veto Thursday and predicted that the measure would be revived in the session of Congress that starts Jan. 23.

Percy stopped short of saying what position he would take on the bill in light of the veto, although he noted that he has supported it in the past and said he was disappointed at the president's action.

Most of the reaction to the veto, however, came from Democrats, who said it would encourage right-wing terror squads in the Central American country and cripple diplomatic efforts to bring about more humane treatment of dissidents.

"I would presume that this is going to be perceived as a green light by those involved in the death squads and the security forces who support the death squads," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., the original author of the vetoed measure.

Dodd said the administration was telling the Salvadoran regime, "It doesn't matter what you do. You can count on the U.S. for all the military aid that we can convince Congress it should support."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. called the veto a "tragic error" and said the human rights measure "will be at the top of the House leadership's legislative priorities" when Congress reconvenes.

Dodd said he would block any additional military aid for El Salvador — using a filibuster if needed — until the vetoed bill is law. He noted that with Congress in session another presidential veto would be subject to being overridden by a two-thirds vote. The bill passed both houses by unanimous vote this year.

The vetoed measure, a re-enactment of a bill first passed in 1981, would have required for military aid a semi-annual report by the president certifying that the Salvadoran regime was making progress on human rights and other reforms. Reagan has made four such reports and the next would have been due Jan. 16. El Salvador is slated to receive $64 million in military aid this year.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said he would not support any more military aid to help the Salvadoran government put down a guerrilla insurrection unless the aid is firmly tied to "real human rights progress."

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., called the veto "a disgraceful blemish on our own traditions of human justice" and said it "makes an ugly mockery" of U.S. warnings to the Salvadorans about the need to control rightist death squads.

Aides said Reagan vetoed the bill because he felt the certification requirement was not effective in improving human rights and because it undermined U.S. support for the Salvadoran government in its 4-year-old war with the leftist guerrillas.

Major oil companies meet

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp., maneuvering to retain control of its future, confronts its chief opponent, Mesa Petroleum Co. Chairman T. Boone Pickens, face-to-face for the first time today.

Gulf management, under pressure from the Texas oilman to set aside oil and gas reserves as a royalty trust, hopes to stymie Pickens' aggressive plan by reincorporating under Delaware laws.

At a special shareholders meeting here, the nation's fifth-largest oil company was to complete balloting on whether to move the corporate charter from Pennsylvania. The results were not expected to be certified for days after the meeting at the David L. Lawrence Convention Center.

By reincorporating, Gulf could restrict shareholders' ability to call special meetings and would eliminate their rights of cumulative voting.

Otherwise, Pickens could elect three members to Gulf's 13-member board of directors next May with the 12.5 percent of Gulf stock he said he controls.

"It's a defensive move," said Arthur L. Smith of Oppenheimer & Co. Inc. of New York.

Under Pickens' plan, royalties from Gulf's oil and gas production would flow directly to its shareholders and would not go to the corporation for dividends and other corporate uses.

Pickens claims the combined value of shares in a Gulf royalty trust, plus shares in what remains of Gulf, would exceed the current price of Gulf stock.

Oppenheimer, reporting independently of Gulf and Pickens, said the estimated combined market values of the two stocks would range between $50 and $75 per share. Gulf stock has been trading in the mid-$40s.

"Since mid-July we've been suggesting that Gulf represents one of the best values in the oil industry. Obviously, the Mesa-Pickens group saw the value first," Smith said Thursday.

Bus wreck probe continues today

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

LIVINGSTON, Texas (AP) — A lack of witnesses and extensive damage to a Trailways bus may make it difficult to determine the cause of an accident which killed six people, a federal investigator says.

Patrick Bursley, chief of the National Transportation Safety Board's team examining the wreck, said Thursday he is sure the bus had no mechanical difficulties which could have caused the wreck.

The bus, carrying 11 passengers and a driver, smashed into the rear end of a truck north of the Southeast Texas town of Livingston about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday. The bus barreled through a guardrail on a bridge, flew over a stream and smashed into the creek bank.

Bursley refused to speculate on a state trooper's comment that the bus driver may have been speeding and a report from a passenger who said he noticed the driver dozing.

"There have been a number of hypotheses, but we have not cross checked," he said. "The speed of the bus will be a very significant finding to our investigation."

The bus suffered considerable damage in the crash and emergency crews dismantled the wreckage further to free two people — including driver Ed Perry of Houston — who were trapped for 90 minutes.

"This is not going to be an easy shot," Bursley said. "In terms of writing off the accident, the bus hit the truck. But we think there's more than that."

Bursley, who arrived from Washington on Wednesday evening about 12 hours after the 5 a.m. wreck, said a preliminary examination shows the front corner of the bus hit the rear corner of the empty flat-bed truck on U.S. Highway 59, about five miles north of Livingston.

The bus was on a regular run from Shreveport, La., to Houston, about 75 miles away.

People were hurled from their seats, four were thrown from the bus and seats were ripped from their moorings, adding to the difficulties in reconstructing the moments before the crash, Bursley said.

"We're probably going to have some trouble there in trying to place where various people were," he said.

Buses are not equipped with seat belts. Bursley said it was questionable whether passengers would use them, but he said belts could have kept passengers from getting thrown out of the bus.

The team would likely remain at the scene for three to four days but no report or recommendations are expected for about six months, Bursley said.

"We'll be taking very extensive measurements and photographs," he said. "Our process is very laborious."

Of the five passengers still hospitalized, one was listed in serious condition, two were satisfactory and one other was good. Perry's family asked the hospital not to release information about his condition, said Hermann Hospital spokeswoman Sarah Sharpless in Houston.

Truck driver Richard Paloma Garcia, 43, of Livingston, said he had just pulled out from his home onto Highway 59 when he was hit in the rear. He was not injured and state troopers have said he was not doing anything wrong. No tickets were issued in the accident, Bursley said.

Estes claims to know about many murders

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes is seeking immunity from prosecution for information in the mysterious 1961 death of a U.S. Agriculture Department official, The Abilene Reporter-News reported today.

Estes met in Abilene with U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples for two hours Thursday to discuss the unsolved case, the newspaper said.

Henry Marshall, 51, of Bryan, a U.S. Agriculture Department employee, was found dead June 3, 1961, on his ranch 13 miles northwest of Franklin in Robertson County. Marshall was found shot five times in the abdomen with a .22-caliber bolt-action rifle.

Marshall's death has been ruled a suicide, but Peoples said Marshall had been beaten and found to have a lethal amount of carbon monoxide in his body.

Marshall was described a year after his death by then Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman as a "key figure" in the investigation of Estes' affairs.

Estes, who was paroled to Abilene last month after spending four months in prison, was convicted of fraud in 1963 in connection with a multi-million dollar fertilizer tank scheme, but stayed out on appeal until 1965.

Peoples, who first talked to Estes about the case four years ago, said Thursday he was "very cooperative."

Peoples said Thursday that Estes, 58, had nothing to do with Marshall's death. But neither Estes nor Peoples would elaborate on what Estes might know or on what charges he would seek immunity.

About a year after the death, Peoples said, the late Col. Homer Garrison, then commander of the Department of Public Safety, "told me to get my teeth into" the case.

The body was exhumed after a grand jury investigation and an autopsy conducted in Bryan by Dr. Joseph A. Jachimczyk, chief medical examiner for Harris County.

"It's the only big case in my career that's not cleared," Peoples said. "I've got more knowledge on it than any living soul."

Estes said recently that if he ever talked about some things he knew from his wheeler-dealer days in the early 1960s, it would shake the nation, but he had not been specific until Thursday.

Estes served six years of a 15-year sentence, before being paroled to Abilene in 1971. He was convicted of fraud and concealing his assets to avoid paying taxes in July 1979. He was sentenced in August 1979 to 10 years in prison, and his previous parole was revoked.

Estes said his attorneys "at the present are working to seek the extent of immunity that I'd have to have to protect me. Not only would I have to have immunity but other people are going to have to have immunity."

"I think Mr. Marshall (information on his murder) will just be a step to many things that I think needs to be cleared up," he said.

Peoples said Thursday that

Estes mentioned that he knew information about the Marshall case when Peoples was transporting him to prison Aug. 26, 1979.

"We've discussed this pretty well in detail," said Peoples, "but we, of course, won't go into any depth at the moment because of the fact that Mr. Estes is certainly wanting possible immunity in the event he decides later on to get on a permanent record with any of the cases that are outstanding or any involvement that he might have known about, not directly himself but some of the things that might have happened throughout the years."

Peoples said Estes told him in 1979 that Marshall's death was "definitely not suicide, but... very definitely murder."

"But he advised me, 'You are looking in the wrong direction.' I said, 'What direction should I be looking in?'"

"And he said the direction I should be looking in was the people that had the most to lose. I further asked him if I should have been looking toward Washington, and at that time, he said, 'You're now on the right track. But that's all I will say.'"

Estes said he thinks "the events that could come out of this hopefully will change history and alter history in a great way."

Marshall had been head of the cotton allotment program for the state of Texas in 1961, when he was employed by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee of the U.S. Department of Agriculture at College Station, Peoples said.

West Texas ranchers take wait-and-see attitude

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Some West Texas ranchers say they are taking a wait-and-see attitude about a government feed program aimed at helping them overcome last summer's drought.

Bruce McKenzie, owner of a ranch 27 miles east of Fort Stockton in Pecos County, says that he hasn't decided whether he will buy the surplus corn the government is offering drought-stricken producers.

McKenzie, who raises sheep, was one of about 25 ranchers who met Wednesday in Fort Stockton with a representative of the state agriculture department.

"We would be curious how much corn each rancher will receive," McKenzie said, adding that most of those attending wanted more information before applying.

"It's a little late to really help us. A lot of people had to go ahead and sell their breeding sheep. If they had known the corn was coming, they might have held on," he said.

The Department of Agriculture announced Wednesday that 27.7 million bushels of government-owned flow-grade corn would be available under the new drought relief program for livestock growers.

McKenzie said he lost about $10,000 because of the drought. "I sold 75 percent of the lambs that I would normally sell," he said, explaining breeding is down, some lambs died and those sold were lighter than normal.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Most Mexican newspapers lauded President Miguel de la Madrid's efforts to overcome the worst economic crisis in 50 years, in editorials Thursday marking the end of his first year in office.

"On Dec. 1, 1982, Mexico was in the midst of its worst economic crisis in history," said the moderate daily El Universal. "The country needed drastic measures to overcome complex problems."

"These twelve months have not been without problems or stumbling blocks, but Mexico now advances sure of its destiny and confident of the leadership of the current government," it said.

The left-leaning Excelsior praised de la Madrid for the "lessening of the crisis," and an "unprecedented effort to investigate illegal actions by government employees."

The conservative daily El Heraldo published no editorial, but ran a cartoon entitled "the first year," featuring de la Madrid tossing a tiny rubber intertube to a drowning peasant.

De la Madrid's came into office promising a "moral renovation" campaign to clean up corruption in government and a tough austerity program. Inflation has been reduced in the last year but thousands of Mexicans are unemployed.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda said Mexican national security is at stake in Central America but charged U.S. military involvement in the region would lead to further inflation.

In a two-and-a-half-hour speech to the Mexican Senate Wednesday, Sepulveda said "the conflict in Central America inevitably affects us for reasons of geographical affinity and social and cultural continuity."

But he said the United States "has no right whatsoever to intervene in Central American under any kind of pretext or excuse."

Sepulveda said a scheduled Dec. 21 meeting of the Contadora group foreign ministers — from Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama — with ministers from El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala, Nicaragua and Costa Rica could lead to a "real, congruent commitment to peace and regional security."

At the meeting, the nations are scheduled to sign a regional peace treaty calling for the removal of foreign military advisors from the region, mutual non-aggression between the nations, and a commitment to political pluralism.

COATZACOALCOS, Mexico (AP) — Mexico began shipping containerized freight across the narrow Isthmus of Tehuantepec Thursday with a new transportation system the government hopes will compete with the Panama Canal.

The Greek freighter Arc Aeolos Wednesday unloaded 124 units of containerized freight here after picking up the containers in Brazil, Houston and Tampico, on Mexico's Gulf coast.

The containers were immediately placed on special trains that transport them 180 miles across the isthmus to Salina Cruz on the Pacific Coast.

The Mexican freighter Jalisco was scheduled Saturday to pick up the containers and carry them to shipping destinations on the U.S. West Coast and in Japan, a spokesman for the Transisthmus Multimodal Service, the government agency in charge of the system said.

Mexico had begun setting up the trans-isthmus transportation system three years ago to compete with the Panama Canal. It was scheduled to be finished last year but because of budget cuts was delayed.

The system consists of two giant cranes which lift the containers from the freighters and place them on trains, which transport them across the isthmus on refurbished train tracks.

At the port of destination, two cranes load the containers onto the waiting ship. Because of the poor quality of the tracks, the route takes two days.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — South Korean Foreign Minister Lee Won-Kyung was scheduled to arrive in Mexico Thursday for a three-day visit, the first time a minister of that level has visited here in 21 years of diplomatic relations between the countries.

A spokesman for the South Korean embassy here said Won-Kyung's visit was intended to strengthen commercial and political ties between the two countries.

He was to be received at the International Airport by Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda and will meet with President Miguel de la Madrid Friday.

Judge refuses to cut off prosecution funds

AUSTIN (AP) — State money can be used for the prosecution of a former inmate accused of killing a prison official even though court-appointed defense lawyers have not been paid, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin on Thursday turned down state Sen. Craig Washington's request to cut off the prosecution funds until the defense gets $184,062 it says it due.

Washington and Bill Habern of Houston are the court-appointed lawyers representing Eroy Brown, who is awaiting trial on charges that he killed a Texas Department of Corrections farm manager.

Nowlin said any order curtailing state funds for the prosecution of Brown would "hinder the criminal prosecution in an ongoing state proceeding."

But Nowlin said the Brown trial, scheduled for Edinburg, probably would not begin until the defense bill is paid by the state. His three-page order said State District Judge Darrell Hester of Brownsville, the trial judge, has postponed the trial "until the monies owed the appointed counsel are paid."

"The practical effect of that order is to moot the issue before this court," said Nowlin.

Brown, 32, was serving a 12-year sentence for a Tarrant County robbery when he was accused of killing two prison officials in April 1981.

After a hung jury in the first trial, Brown was acquitted in November 1982 of charges he killed Ellis Unit Warden Wallace Pack. Brown is now awaiting trial in the slaying of Billy Max Moore, a prison farm manager.

Brown pleaded self-defense, but prison officials said he was trying to escape.

If cleared in the Moore case, Brown will be freed.

Michigan State, Maryland upset in doubleheader; Arkansas wins

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

This is supposed to be tuneup time for both Michigan State and Maryland as they prepare for their respective conference basketball races in about a month or so.

But both national powers ran into some unexpected opposition Thursday night at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J.

Unheralded St. Peter's of New Jersey stunned the 11th-ranked Spartans of the Big Ten 73-66 in the opener of a doubleheader before Ohio State upset the sixth-ranked Terrapins of the Atlantic Coast Conference 72-68.

The last two minutes of the opener "was like an eternity" to St. Peter's Coach Bob Dukiet after he watched his team lose most of an 18-point first-half lead.

"It's a scary feeling," Dukiet said. "You hate to see a game go out from under you when you've been in control so long."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 12 Louisiana State tripped Washington 51-48, No. 14 Arkansas defeated Southeast Missouri State 98-69, No. 17 Fresno State trimmed California-Davis 92-49 and No. 20 Virginia Commonwealth routed Johns Hopkins 94-46.

Tommy Best's 22 points and 20 by Shelton Gibbs led St. Peter's first-game shocker over a supposedly vastly superior opponent. The Peacocks' early 18-points lead was whittled to 28-21 at halftime. But they built it to 17 twice in the second half before Sam Vincent, who scored 30 points for Michigan State, triggered a comeback for the Spartans that fell short.

Six points by Gibbs in the final 35 seconds, including the conversion of a two-shot technical foul, clinched the victory from the little Jesuit school from Jersey City.

"I think we lost the game in the first 10 minutes," said Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote. "Their overplaying, aggressive defense really bothered us. I take nothing away from them. I give them credit."

Tony Campbell, a 6-foot-7 senior from nearby Teaneck, led the way for Ohio State in the second game with 32 points, while freshman Curtis Wilson hit five free throws in the last 23 seconds to nail it down for the Buckeyes.

"We pretty much took it to them," said Campbell, whose Buckeyes converted 82 per cent of their floor shots in the second half and 57 per cent overall.

Campbell's 23rd point came on a layup with 48 seconds remaining, giving the Buckeyes a 67-64 advantage. Maryland's Adrian Branch then hit a jumper to reduce the margin to 67-66 before Wilson scored his only points of the night.

On last weekend of college grid season

Spotlight on Auburn-Alabama

By The Associated Press

The game plan is obvious for Auburn's football team Saturday.

"I don't think we're telegraphing any secrets when I say we're going to open up our offense," said Auburn Coach Pat Dye, preparing to meet 19th-ranked Alabama. "We'd be foolish not to. When you spot a weakness in your opponent, you're crazy if you don't make an effort to exploit that weakness. We're not the first team to discover where Alabama is vulnerable."

That, of course, is in the area of pass defense. Alabama's has been the worst in the Southeastern Conference this season.

That would put more of a burden on quarterback Randy Campbell, who has led the third-ranked Tigers to a 9-1 record and the top of the SEC primarily by handing the ball to runners Bo Jackson, Lionel James and Tommie Agee. Auburn's running game is No. 1 in the SEC.

If Alabama wins, Auburn will have to share the SEC title with Alabama and Georgia. While 7-3 Alabama has shown defensive weaknesses, the Crimson Tide is best in the conference at moving the ball and at scoring, averaging 431 yards and 31.8 points a game.

Quarterback Walter Lewis is the triggerman, with his 13 scoring passes and his scrambling runs. Fullback Ricky Moore has turned in three straight games over more than 100 yards running to complement Lewis' passing.

However, Jackson, James and Agee all are among the SEC's top 10 runners.

The game at Birmingham is one of two between longstanding intrastate rivals Saturday, the last weekend of the regular college football season. In the other, Florida State plays at 11th-ranked Florida. On an otherwise light schedule, Oklahoma plays at Hawaii and Air Force is at San Diego State in major college games.

In college football playoffs, it's Indiana State at Southern Illinois; Western Carolina at Holy Cross; North Texas State at Nevada-Reno and Boston University at Furman in the NCAA Division I-AA quarterfinals.

Knicks knock off Bullets; Warriors defeat Kansas City

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cartwright learned that life without Jeff Ruland is pretty easy.

Pumping in a game-high 25 points in three quarters, the New York Knicks' center used his four-inch height advantage over 6-foot-10 Ricky Mahorn and led his team to its third victory in three nights by defeating the Washington Bullets 127-93 in a National Basketball Association game Thursday night.

"I was ready to take advantage," said Cartwright, who hit 11-of-14 from the field, hauled down 10 rebounds, and blocked two shots. "I was ready to win."

In the only other NBA game, Golden State beat Kansas City 106-95.

Before the start of the game, several Knicks heard that Ruland, a moose of a man at 6-11, 240 pounds and Washington's leading scorer and rebounder, would sit because of a sore left hand.

Cartwright's first reaction was joy, then he felt some apprehension.

"I was worried about a psychological letdown," said Cartwright. "It's easy to say to yourself, 'Well, this is going to be a piece of cake.' But you have to fight that. I still had to go out there and get the job done. I never let up."

New York, winning 10 of its last 12 games and boasting a string of seven consecutive home victories, dominated the boards, outrebounding Washington 67-33 and setting a team record for offensive rebounds in the current Madison Square Garden with 29. Seven Knicks grabbed five or more rebounds.

"We lose so much without Jeff's muscle in there," said Bullets' Coach Gene Shue, whose club has dropped five of its last six games and seven of eight on the road this year. "Let's face it. We weren't just hurting under the boards, we were getting killed."

Ahead 55-42 at halftime, the Knicks, who never trailed in the game, built a 19-point lead in the opening minutes of the third quarter before allowing the Bullets to pull to within 70-60 on Ricky Sobers' bank shot with 5:09 remaining in the period.

With 3:30 left in the third period and the score 76-65,

Bernard King, who finished with 21 points, sparked an 11-1 attack that put the game out of reach. King and Cartwright combined for 23 points in the third quarter, as New York headed into the final quarter with a 90-70 lead.

Jeff Malone topped the Bullets with 18 points.

Warriors 106, Kings 95

In Oakland, Calif., Purvis Short scored a season-high 35 points and Darren Tillis, playing for injured center J.B. Carroll, grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked four shots to lead Golden State over Kansas City.

After the Kings closed to within three, 83-80, Short hit a baseline jumper and Floyd made a layup to point the Warriors toward an easy victory.

Guard Eric Floyd added 24 points for the Warriors while Joe Merriweather led Kansas City with 16 points.

Miami, Pittsburgh try to clinch playoff berths Sunday

Raiders roll over Chargers

By MIKE CLARK
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Things weren't going well for Jim Plunkett and the rest of the Los Angeles Raiders in their quest for another divisional crown.

After 28 minutes of football Thursday night, the Raiders had gained but 72 offensive yards. Only 14 of the Raiders' 26 plays had gained yardage.

Quarterback Plunkett was chugging for his life in the face of an inspired San Diego pass rush.

The Charger offense, meanwhile, had scored on Dan Fouts' 5-yard swing pass to Chuck Muncie and on Rolf Benirschke's 24-yard field goal.

At moments like these, all eyes turn to the sidelines for guidance. And when they did,

Coach Tom Flores came up with the play that turned the game around and led to a 42-10 National Football League rout by the Raiders.

"It was an ideal call on his part," running back Marcus Allen said of the 43-yard option pass he threw to Todd Christensen with 1:50 left in the first half. "It was the right time for a play like that."

That score signalled the beginning of a stunning eight minute, five-touchdown symphony of offensive and defensive dominance by the Raiders.

With the victory, the 11th in 14 games for Los Angeles, went the AFC West crown, the Raiders' ninth in 12 years. San Diego, meanwhile, sank to 5-9.

The Raiders didn't appear poised to score — indeed, didn't seem to be doing much of anything — when Allen took a handoff from Plunkett and headed for the left sideline.

Suddenly, Allen screamed to a halt and threw back to his right to a sprinting Christensen, who was running free at the Charger 10.

"I felt pretty confident throwing the ball," said Allen, a former prep quarterback, "but he was so wide open that I was a little concerned about overthrowing it."

"He's an excellent passer," Flores said of Allen. "We felt their defense overreacted, and we executed perfectly." "We're notorious for being slow starters," said Christensen. "It took us awhile to get going but it was only a matter of time."

Brought to life by the Allen-Christensen strike, the Raiders needed only five plays and 26 seconds to move 65 yards for the go-ahead touchdown. It came 32 seconds before the half when Christensen made a one-handed grab of a feather-soft 25-yard pass from Plunkett.

Frank Hawkins ran 21 and 1 yards for touchdowns early in the third period before defensive back Rod Martin made it 35-10 with a 29-yard pass interception return at the 8:33 mark.

Christensen got his third touchdown of the night on a 14-yard toss from Plunkett with 3:21 left in the quarter. It was the eighth catch of the night for Christensen and his 77th of the season, breaking by one a Raider team mark set in 1964 by Art Powell.

"Sometimes quarters like that just happen," said Charger linebacker Billy Ray Smith. "It was mistake after mistake."

Sunday it will be Buffalo at Kansas City, Chicago at Green Bay, Miami at Houston, New Orleans at New England, Cincinnati at Pittsburgh, Atlanta at Washington, the Los Angeles Rams at Philadelphia, St. Louis at the New York Giants, Dallas at Seattle, Tampa Bay at San Francisco, Cleveland at Denver and the New York Jets at Baltimore.

Minnesota is at Detroit Monday night in a battle for the top in the NFC Central. Both teams are 7-6.

Miami and Pittsburgh can clinch playoff berths in their games. If the Dolphins beat the 1-12 Oilers, they'll win the AFC East, regardless of what the rest of the division does.

Pittsburgh can clinch an AFC wild card spot by winning any of its remaining three games, while 5-8 Cincinnati is on the verge of being eliminated from the playoff race. But the Steelers have lost their last two games after a seven-game winning streak.

"Obviously, this is a big game for us," said Steelers quarterback Cliff Stoudt, who threw four interceptions in a 45-3 Thanksgiving Day loss to the Lions.

"We obviously don't need to go out again and prove how badly we can play," added Coach Chuck Noll.

In the wild NFC West, where all four teams remain in contention, the Rams hold a one-game lead over New Orleans and San Francisco. Atlanta is two games back.

And the NFC Central is just as wild. Aside from the Minnesota-Detroit matchup, the Bears and Packers play a key game. Both Chicago, which has won three straight, and slumping Green Bay, which lost its second straight overtime game last week in Atlanta, are 6-7, a game behind the Lions and Vikings.

Rozier tops blue-chip list of Heisman Trophy candidates

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Rozier, the record-setting running back from the University of Nebraska, tops a list of blue chip candidates, one of whom will be named the nation's top football player for 1983 at Saturday's Heisman Trophy announcement.

Rozier, who became only the second player in NCAA history to rush for more than 2,000 yards in a season, and quarterbacks Steve Young of Brigham Young and Doug Flutie of Boston College reportedly were the three players asked to attend Saturday's reception and news conference at the Downtown Athletic Club.

The Nebraska senior rushed for 2,148 yards this season, giving him 4,780 for his career. Only Southern Cal's Marcus Allen previously had topped the 2,000-yard mark in a season, rushing for 2,342 in 1981.

Announcement of the Heisman winner was scheduled for 7:50 p.m. EST. The Heisman has been awarded annually since 1935.

Rozier's career total broke the Big Eight Conference mark of 4,582 by Oklahoma State's Terry Miller from 1974-77, and his 29 rushing touchdowns set an NCAA mark previously held by Lydell Mitchell of Penn State, who rushed for 26 in 1971.

Rozier led the Cornhuskers to a 12-0 record this year, a No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press poll and a berth in the Orange Bowl Jan. 2 against Miami, Fla.

The other top two candidates for this year's Heisman apparently are Young and Flutie. Pat Sullivan of Auburn, in 1971, was the last quarterback to win the award.

Young, a direct descendant of his school's founder, Brigham Young, was the top passer in the NCAA this year, completing 306 of 429 passes for a percentage of .713. He threw for 33 touchdowns and 3,902 yards, giving him 7,733 passing yards for his career.

"I haven't tried to aspire to it (the Heisman) or even try to lobby for it. It's just something that's a great honor, and if you get it, an even greater honor," said Young.

Young, a senior, guided Brigham Young to a 10-1 season, a No. 9 national ranking and a berth in the Holiday Bowl Dec. 23 against Missouri.

Flutie, meanwhile, brought Boston College from obscurity to national recognition in his junior season. The multipurpose quarterback passed for 2,724 yards and 17 touchdowns as the 13th-ranked Eagles compiled a record of 9-2, including a stunning victory over Alabama, and earned a berth in the Liberty Bowl Dec. 29 against Notre Dame.

The 8th grade Canyon Purple team was victorious in another close game against Stanton, 38-35. Cindy Tice scored 14 points for Stanton with Crystal Ball adding 12 points.

In 7th grade action Canyon Purple scored 34 points against Stanton's 18. Melissa La Fuente scored 6 points for Stanton.

On the other side of the bracket at La Plata Junior High, Canyon White tromped the La Plata 7th graders 35 to 8.

Eighth grade Canyon White scored 33 against La Plata's 21, while La Plata 9th graders beat Plainview Blue 47-33.

The final 9th grade score yesterday was Canyon White 37, La Plata White 24.

Ann Landers

Change always possible

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a winner! Ten years ago every day was a struggle. I was a high school junior with a baby and a lunatic for a husband. I thought about committing suicide every day for six years.

I overdosed, at 14, got pregnant at 16, had a baby and was married at 17, graduated from high school and was divorced at 18. I went through guys, dope and booze. I was a burn-out at 22.

Anyone who thinks life isn't worth living is wrong. I once had those thoughts while I was going through all of the trouble. But I finally decided if I killed myself today I wouldn't be around to see my kid grow up and I was down so low I had nowhere to go but up.

Now I have it all — two gorgeous kids, a wonderful husband and a free (and straight) mind. At 27 I have what some people never find. From the gutter I made it to the top of the world.

The point is that if I could do it, anyone can. Some need more help than others. I didn't need any. But if you need help, GET IT. Change is ALWAYS possible if you stay alive.—On To 100

DEAR ON TO: What a remarkable story! From a wretched burn-out at 22 to a happy, productive wife and mother five years later.

There's a huge hole in your story. How did you make the transition? It didn't just happen.

Please provide the details. You may be able to help a great many people if you fill in the gaps.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have printed many letters about child molesting, "funny uncles," etc. I think another one should be added. I'm talking about doctors.

I have two friends whose 14-year-old daughters were (at different times) sent to the same doctor—one for an injured ankle, the other with a bad cold. He performed vaginal exams on both girls, with no nurse present and without consulting the mothers.

This doctor, in his mid-50s, was committed to a mental hospital for several weeks about 10 years ago. At that time he had been involved with a 20-year-old practical nurse. She was the same age as his oldest son.

Natives of the town know enough to keep their young girls away from him. It's the newcomers who have the problem.

In both cases nothing was done. Both girls were embarrassed and very upset over the exam. It was totally unexpected.

The mothers did not know what to say or do, so they did nothing. Anyway, what could be done or said after the fact?

In our town there is no medical society, only gossip from nurses about this particular doctor. What can be done?—Small Town In Nebraska

DEAR NEB.: The other physicians in town should report the doctor to the county and state medical societies. Also to the American Medical Assn. headquarters in Chicago. I'm a great believer in the theory that the professions must police their own or suffer the consequences.

ST. ANTHONY'S
Father John Reardon, O.P., will conduct a parish renewal mission at St. Anthony's Catholic Church during the week of Dec. 4-8.

The mission will begin with the introductory sermon at all of the Masses on Sunday and will continue with sessions each day through Thursday evening.

Each mission session will be conducted in conjunction with the Liturgy of the Eucharist and followed, for those who wish, by sacramental confession. The final session will be held Thursday evening, Dec. 8, closing with the Papal Blessing of Pope John Paul II.

Reardon has a rich background of experience in priestly ministry. He served for years at Fenwick High School in Oak Park, Ill., and directed Bishop Lynch High School in Dallas as its second principal. He was an itinerant Dominican preacher, and he inaugurated the Dominican Hospital ministry at St. Mary's and John Sealy Hospitals in Galveston.

He completed his course in clinical pastoral education at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, D.C., where he achieved his certification as supervisor in the program. He has spent the last three years in parish work at St. Dominic's in New Orleans.

WESTWAY BAPTIST
Charlie Pitt will share his testimony on Sunday during the 11 a.m. service at Westway Baptist Church. He is an ex-prisoner and currently works with prison ministry in the area.

A breakfast will be served at 7:30 a.m. Everyone is invited.

FIRST UNITED METHODIST

Music of the Christmas season is heard in all services at First United Methodist Church this month, and a series of evening concerts beginning Sunday will carry the theme, "Advent Alive!"

Youth Singers will present the cantata, "I Believe," at 7:30 p.m. Sunday to initiate the series. Another special event Sunday will be an all-church chuck wagon dinner at noon to mark the "first-day run" of the annual Pony Express drive to support the church budget. A catered barbecue lunch will be served.

The evening program, directed by Jeff Wakeley, minister of music and youth, will have Bobby Boyd as narrator and Tina Langehenning as accompanist.

Soloists with the choir will be Christy Burford, Chris Crowley, Becky Ruland and Clay Stribling. Patsy Giles is in charge of special lighting.

Stribling is president of the Youth Singers, a choir of some 15 voices. Craig McCuistian is vice-president and Crowley is treasurer.

United Methodist Youth Fellowship will have its usual meeting at 6 p.m., the Junior and Senior High groups together to hear a Christmas program, "The Other Wise Man," by Molly Ritter.

On succeeding Sunday evenings, the church's traditional Carols and Candles service featuring the children's choirs and handbell choirs will be held Dec. 11, followed by a live Nativity scene on the church lawn staged by the youth groups; and the Sanctuary Choir's Christmas concert Dec. 18.

A Christmas Eve service of Holy Communion will be conducted by the pastor, Dr. Weldon Butler.

FIRST BAPTIST

Several activities are planned next week in observance of the Week of Prayer for Foreign Missions, which this year has the theme, "Because He First Loved Us."

On Monday at 7 p.m. the Baptist Young Women will meet in Kinsey Parlor. The Baptist Day Women will meet Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. in Kinsey Parlor. Sara Cook will speak on "Entering New Countries" in the fellowship hall at 6:45 p.m. Wednesday.

TEMPLE BAPTIST

Special programs scheduled in observance of the Week of Prayer for Foreign Missions will be at 7 p.m. Monday at the church; 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in the home of Evelyn Bozeman, 235 Star; and 7 p.m. Wednesday at the church.

Christmas Seal Tree booth opens tomorrow

For the third year, the American Lung Association of Texas will sponsor the Christmas Seal Tree in Sugarland Mall, according to Jewel Smith, chairman.

Beginning Saturday and continuing through Dec. 20, shoppers will be invited to help decorate the community tree during mall hours, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, by making a donation of any size and signing a paper candy cane ornament to add to the tree.

There are a half a million more automobiles in Los Angeles than there are people.

Proceeds from this event will fund Lung Association programs such as the Hereford Better Living, Better Breathing Club for patients with chronic lung disease, the Family Asthma programs, and anti-smoking education in schools.

"This year we hope to exceed the totals of the past two years," said Mrs. Smith. "People in Hereford are generous and supportive of worthwhile projects."

The Christmas Seal Tree was donated by Noon Kiwanis Club. Members of local clubs and organizations will man the booth. Anyone interested in volunteering to help at the tree should contact Mrs. Smith at 364-1418.

Lady finds overdue books costly

DALLAS (AP) — Toby Loughney had no idea where the bestsellers "Looking out for No. 1" and "I'm OK, You're OK" would get her when she checked them out from a suburban library, but they did her little good last week.

Three years after she failed to return the books to the Farmers Branch library, she was arrested, handcuffed, fingerprinted and had her car impounded. She was released after paying $55 in bail and $32.50 for the release of her car.

Miss Loughney, a 29-year-old nurse, is the target of an obscure Texas law known as the Farmers Branch ordinance. The law makes failure to return city library books a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $200, not including the overdue library fees.

"I had no idea until I was arrested that this was on the books," she told the Dallas Times Herald. "I was stunned by the whole thing."

On Wednesday, Miss Loughney, a nurse, pleaded innocent. A trial is set for Jan. 18.

"They handcuffed me and took me down to the police department, fingerprinted and impounded my car," she said, adding "that was a little too much."

Miss Loughney said she remembers checking out the books but doesn't know where they are.

Among the books she checked out were best sellers from the 1970s, including "Games People Play," "I'm OK, You're OK," "Passages," and "Looking out for No. 1."

"I have my stuff together now," she said.

Miss Loughney was taken to jail last Friday after police stopped her for an alleged speeding violation in Richardson, a Dallas suburb.

"NBC News Overnight" writes its own obituary

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Fridays, "NBC News Overnight" does the week in review. Tonight, it will be a program-in-review, when it writes its own obituary after fewer than 18 months of classy, breezy and intelligent broadcasts.

"I'm real sorry to see it go," said anchor Linda Ellerbee. "But we're going to go out in style. Sappy is not our way."

"Overnight," which was canceled because of light ratings and heavy financial losses, plans to devote its final "Not-Ready-for-Prime-Time-News" segment to showing how other programs went off the air, including "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

At least fans of "Mary Tyler Moore" can see her in reruns. In fact, in New York, NBC's station has scheduled three consecutive half hours of "Mary Tyler Moore" as the nightly replacement for "Overnight."

Reruns of "Overnight" won't work. So, unless the newscast returns this summer, a possibility that NBC Chairman Grant Tinker didn't dismiss out of hand,

Ms. Ellerbee will say her last "And so it goes" for "Overnight" tonight.

It will be missed. As one letter-writer said: "We ... looked at your effort as the best that creativity had ever delivered to our nighttime audience." Signed, Bill Lord, executive producer of ABC News' "Nightline."

For the central character, an unemployed steelworker, ABC's "Heart of Steel" Sunday night takes an appropriately cynical view of both Ronald Reagan's America and Franklin Delano Roosevelt's America.

This film points an accusing finger at all sides — unions, management, government and workers — in explaining why the work ethic doesn't work as well anymore.

The movie captures the depressing sights of unemployment in excruciating detail: a once-pulsing steel mill lying deathly still, unemployed steelworkers hanging around cold streets waiting for job crumbs, and all-day benders in dank gin mills, where time is measured in empty glasses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita Lavelle, who insisted all along that she had told the truth and never tried to obstruct a congressional inquiry, says she is "very, very disappointed" that a jury believed otherwise.

The former Environmental Protection Agency official was convicted Thursday night on four of five felony counts lodged against her. She will be sentenced Jan. 9 and faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a fine of $19,000.

After an eight-day trial, the federal court jury convicted Ms. Lavelle on all of the counts alleging she lied about her dealings at the EPA with her former employer, Aerojet-General Corp.

She was found innocent on one count of lying when she denied playing politics with the $1.6 billion hazardous waste cleanup fund she managed.

Ms. Lavelle, 36, remained composed while each guilty verdict was read but began crying after the jury had left and she was alone in the courtroom with her lawyers.

"I am very, very disappointed," she told reporters outside the courthouse. "Unfortunately, that is about all I can say at this point."

Asked if she would appeal, her attorney, James Bierbower, said, "Who knows?"

Defense attorneys had called Ms. Lavelle a "scapegoat." Out of all the accusations of political favoritism and conflict of interest swirling around the agency earlier this year, she was the only EPA official to face criminal charges.

The Justice Department investigated others but said it had found insufficient evidence to support prosecution of former EPA Administrator Anne Burford and seven other top-ranking EPA officials.

Asked if Ms. Lavelle was a scapegoat, government prosecutor William Hendricks said, "not at all."

Asked if she would appeal, her attorney, James Bierbower, said, "Who knows?"

Nicaragua rejects talks with rebels; offers amnesty

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government has freed hundreds of imprisoned Miskito Indians as part of a new amnesty program but firmly rejected a proposal for peace talks with anti-Sandinista rebels.

"We do not speak to mercenaries or foreign powers who kill our people every day," Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto said Thursday. "We do not talk to puppets. We would rather talk to the puppeteers."

His comment, in a videotape interview made available to The Associated Press, referred to the Reagan administration's support for some of the rebels.

In Panama, President Reagan's Central American envoy, Richard Stone, said Thursday he would try to arrange talks between the Nicaraguan rebels and the Sandinistas. He said he met with leaders of four guerrilla factions at their request.

"We asked Ambassador Stone to facilitate a dialogue between us ... and the Sandinista regime to seek the democratization of Nicaragua," said rebel leader Adolfo Calero, who heads the Nicaraguan Democratic Force fighting in northern Nicaragua near the Honduran border.

In Washington, a senior American official said the rebels told Stone they would stop fighting if the Sandinista junta takes specific steps toward establishing democracy as it promised shortly before overthrowing rightist strongman Anastasio

Somoza in 1979.

But Calero said other Latin American countries should be allowed to send observers to guarantee fair, free elections. On Sunday, the Sandinistas are expected to announce an election date for sometime in 1985.

U.S. officials say they do not believe the estimated 10,000 to 12,000 rebels have enough strength to topple the Sandinistas. But they believe rebel pressure could force the junta to moderate its internal policies and reassess its ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union and its alleged support for leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Meanwhile, about 300 Miskito Indians were brought from a Managua-area prison farm Thursday night to a release ceremony where the amnesty program was announced. Junta coordinator Daniel Ortega read the release order in Spanish, then it was read in Miskito.

The amnesty decree said it extends to all Nicaraguans guilty of "crimes against public order and security" in isolated North Yelapa province on the Caribbean coast during the past two years.

It also covers Nicaraguan citizens other than Miskitos who have been involved in "criminal deeds" in the province but does not cover most of the rebels fighting the Sandinistas in northern and southern Nicaragua.

The Miskitos have generally resisted the leftist government. Hundreds have taken up arms against the Sandinistas.

The opposition newspaper

La Prensa, quoting unofficial sources, said about 600 Miskitos would be released from jail. The amnesty also would affect the estimated 16,000 Miskitos who fled to neighboring Honduras.

Human rights groups have criticized the government's policies toward the Miskitos, which included a relocation program from traditional homelands on the Coco River.

Some of the freed Miskitos said they had been held two years without trial and in some cases without being told of the charges against them.

The amnesty follows other conciliatory steps taken by the Nicaraguan government in recent weeks that have included a lessening of press censorship, new dialogue with the Roman Catholic Church, the withdrawal of some of the estimated 8,000 Cubans from the country and the scheduled announcement of a date for elections.

In Honduras, U.S. Navy Secretary John F. Lehman said Thursday that Nicaragua has allowed itself to become a Cuban beachhead in Central America.

"Nicaragua has brought a series of problems (to the region)," he told reporters after meeting with President Roberto Suazo Cordova.

In El Salvador, Assembly Speaker Roberto d'Aubuisson denied he had applied for a visa to enter the United States. He said a U.S. State Department spokesman had acted in "bad taste" by announcing it had turned down a visa request he never made.

Earlier this week, State Department spokesman John

Hughes in Washington said it had denied visa requests from d'Aubuisson, a far-right leader in El Salvador, and for Nicaragua's interior minister, Tomas Borge.

Also in El Salvador, today marked the third anniversary

For some time, we have been regaled with dire predictions of recession, depression and other ominous terms that depict a general worsening of our economic situation; all of which must cause many of us to wonder if our own source of life's basic needs might soon be in jeopardy. The fancy words would indeed appear to forecast a grim future when translated into terms of next week's groceries or next month's rent. Throughout history, in time of trouble man has always turned to religion as a last resort, even when it should have been his first. There is no better time than now to go to your Church and pray to God for His ever-present help and guidance.

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."
