Queen Mum

LONDON (AP) — "Happy Birthday Grandmother England," read a banner carried by one of thousands of admirers outside the London home of the Queen Mother, who celebrated her 90th birthday Saturday.

Crowds of fans, some of whom had camped out overnight to get a better viewing position, were rewarded when she stepped onto the geranium-framed balcony about 11 a.m. to wave and smile. The Band of the Coldstream Guards played "Happy Birthday" as she appeared.

The mother of Queen Elizabeth II then emerged to greet the crowd around Clarence House, the mansion that has been her London home since she was widowed 38 years ago.

Iraq says nine Kuwaiti officers among leaders

■ Despite mounting pressure from other countries, observers remain doubtful Iraq will initiate its promised weekend withdrawal from Kuwait.

By Salah Nasrawi
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Baghdad on Saturday announced a new military government for Iraqi-occupied Kuwait, and foreign reports said Iraq was massing troops along Kuwait's southern border with Saudi Arabia.

Baghdad television said the new Kuwait leadership is made up of nine Kuwaiti army officers. Earlier, Iraq said it was building a new Kuwaiti army to back the government it installed.

In Washington, Iraqi ambassador Mohammed al-Mashat denied U.S. and other foreign reports suggesting that Iraq plans to invade Saudi Arabia.

U.S. and Kuwaiti officials expressed skepticism that Iraq would begin a withdrawal this weekend from Kuwait — as it had indicated Friday. Reports of the withdrawal, to begin Sunday, came in a communique read on Baghdad radio.

Saud Nasser Al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti ambassador to Washington, told reporters at a news conference that Iraq "does not intend to withdraw" its troops from Kuwait.

In Rome, the 12-member European Community announced it was imposing an embargo on oil imports from Iraq and Kuwait, suspending arms sales to Iraq and freezing Iraqi assets in Europe.

That action was only the latest in mounting pressure on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait, which his forces invaded Thursday to settle disputes over oil and land.

In Washington, al-Sabah said there were reports of "800 or maybe more" casualties from the fighting, although he said he had no contact with his homeland because lines have been cut. Persian Gulf-based Arab diplomatic sources have estimated that at least 200 people were killed or wounded during the Iraqi invasion, but could not confirm the higher casualty figures.

In other developments:

In Washington, the Pentagon said a third aircraft carrier would head for the Middle East to bolster the eight-ship U.S. Navy presence already there. President Bush said Friday that if Iraq moved against Saudi Arabia it would be attacking U.S. "vital interests."

Clearview struggling for financial survival

■ Since Midland Memorial Hospital acquired the chemical dependency treatment center, Clearview has experienced a variety of difficulties — including resignations, low patient load and the failure of a planned program to open on time.

EDITOR'S NOTE: During the last year and a half, Clearview Hospital has seen the number of its patients dwindle, a high number of staff resignations and more than half of its board resign. In the first part of this three-part series, the Midland Reporter-Telegram examines some of the reasons behind this turmoil.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Clearview Hospital officials, in the wake of dwindling occupancy and a recent rash of board and staff resignations, are fighting to steer their facility out of murky financial waters.

Since Midland Memorial Hospital acquired the facility about 19 months ago, the chemical dependency treatment center has seen the number of empty beds increase as the months pass.

Through firings and resignations, the Clearview staff has experienced more than 60 percent turnover under MMH ownership. In addition, seven positions have been eliminated through layoffs and attrition.

Seven trustees also have resigned from the 12-member Clearview Hospital Board within the past nine months.

And a badly needed outpatient program — which hospital officials have said may be the key to a healthy Clearview future — that had been planned for an early January opening has yet to get off the ground.

"We've got a lot of hard work ahead," said Kingdon Hughes, a Midlander who was appointed to the Clearview board in February. "Our economics are terrible.

"We've got our work cut out for us to make that thing work financially, but we can do it."

Thomas Bruner, a former MMH trustee who was elected in May to serve as a Midland County Hospital District director, said MMH officials never foresaw the problems now plaguing the facility.

The seed for Clearview was planted in 1985, when Scharbauer Brothers & Co. donated the 10-acre tract of land on which Clearview sits off West Loop 250 near Thomason Drive.

"We saw a need in our community at that time for a chemical dependency center," Bruner said. "We saw it as a way to benefit our community without having to spend any money."

MMH was in the middle of a $15 million expansion project that year and could not afford to build Clearview, he said. "We were strapped," he said.

MMH helped negotiate a joint venture between Camelback Hospitals and Samaritan Health Service, both of Arizona, to build and operate the 49-bed non-profit treatment center.

"We thought it was a wonderful chance," Bruner said. "Thinking back, I still do.

"They (Camelback-Samaritan) did a great job. They had one of the premiere facilities in the country."

Meanwhile, MMH retained the right to elect half of the 12-member Clearview board, with the other six members chosen by Camelback-Samaritan.

MMH also had the right of first refusal should Camelback-Samaritan decide to sell Clearview, which it did three years later in a move to consolidate operations in Phoenix, Ariz.

"They were undergoing some retrenching in their operations," Bruner said. "My intuition tells me they were not as successful as they wanted to be."

Still, seeing a need for a treatment center here, hospital directors agreed Dec. 14, 1988, to buy Clearview for about $5.1 million and keep it a non-profit facility, Bruner said.

"At that time it looked like a good buy," he said, adding that any excess revenues were to be put back into Clearview.

But about a year after the purchase, the facility felt the blow from a gradual decline in insurance coverage which began in mid-1989, Bruner said.

And the patient count simultaneously began to plummet, although it had declined steadily since MMH had assumed ownership.

MMH statistics show that 48 percent of Clearview's beds were occupied in March 1989. The monthly figure declined to 43 percent by the end of the 1988-89 fiscal year in September.

MMH officials that month, as part of their proposed 1989-90 budget, set an occupancy goal of 51 percent for the fiscal year. In addition, they approved

Texas Department of Health cites numerous deficiencies at Clearview

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Texas Department of Health officials, investigating a complaint, cited dozens of deficiencies at Clearview Hospital following a three-day inspection earlier this year. Clearview officials, though, said the deficiencies were minor and have been corrected.

The April 26 survey uncovered insufficient record keeping and substandard conditions in Clearview's food service operations, records obtained by the Midland Reporter-Telegram show.

"Most of the things in there are pretty picky," said Robert Rabidoux, administrator of the chemical dependency treatment center.

Rabidoux said inspectors visited the facility in response to someone — possibly a Clearview employee — who filed a number of complaints with health officials.

"I have no idea who did this," he said. "I don't know if it's an employee or an ex-patient. People get upset and they get angry."

Although health officials did not put the hospital in the "non-compliance" category, they listed extensive recommendations in a 20-page report and gave Clearview 10 days to develop a correction plan. Deadline for compliance with the plan was 60 days.

Rabidoux said the cited deficiencies, none of which resulted in fines, have been corrected. "We've complied with every single one," he said.

A June 1 letter outlining Clearview's response to the survey was sent to state health officials, who approved the corrections and did not return for a follow-up inspection, Rabidoux said.

Texas Department of Health officials in Austin declined comment on the inspection.

Their report shows that Clearview had no available records on whether physicians' practices there had been evaluated for appropriateness of diagnosis and treatment.

Chance for rain at 40 percent

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms. Highs will be in the mid 80s with winds east to southeast 5-15 mph.

Monday's forecast is mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high in the mid 80s.

The record high for Saturday was 104, set in 1944. The record low was 61, set in 1978. Temperature extremes on Saturday were 87 and 64.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms developed again Saturday over North Texas just south of Tyler to Abilene, and most of the precipitation remained south of the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The thunderstorms developed along a boundary of cool air laid out by morning thunderstorms, while an upper-level disturbance tracked across the humid atmosphere over North Texas.

A new area of thunderstorms developed Saturday night over southern Oklahoma and extreme North Texas near Wichita Falls.

Rainfall totals for North Texas from 7 p.m. Friday to 7 p.m. Saturday included 1.68 inches at Dallas Love Field, 0.80 inches at Wichita Falls, and 0.93 inches at Stephenville. Most of this rain fell during the morning.

Evening temperatures across North Texas were in the 70s to low 80s. Extremes at 8 p.m. ranged from 84 degrees at Lufkin to 74 degrees with rain at Longview.

In South Texas, a few isolated showers and thunderstorms were detected but soon diminished, except over the central Rio Grande Plains.

A weak cold front just north of the Edwards Plateau, extending into Far West Texas brought scattered showers and thunderstorms. Otherwise skies were mostly fair across South Texas.

Temperatures had cooled into the 80s by late evening, except for a few 90s along the Rio Grande Plains.

The South Texas forecast calls for scattered showers or thunderstorms northwest, spreading southward Sunday. Cooler temperatures are expected Sunday night, with highs Sunday in the upper 80s along the coast to 90s to near 100 elsewhere.

The North Texas forecast calls for diminishing thunderstorms from the north Sunday and Sunday night, becoming widely scattered Monday. Unseasonably mild temperatures are expected through Monday. Highs Sunday and Monday 86 to 92. Lows Sunday night 62 to 71.

NATION

Rainshowers and thunderstorms swept much of the Midwest, South, and the Rockies on Saturday, with unseasonably hot weather in the Pacific Northwest.

Rain extended from eastern Michigan through Ohio and Indiana to Tennessee, in southern Illinois and Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas.

Showers and thunderstorms also reached from Florida across Alabama to western South Carolina and North Carolina..

There were scattered showers and thunderstorms from southeast New Mexico across the southern and central Rockies into northwest Wyoming.

High temperatures in the Northwest included 106 at Medford, Ore., and 98 in Portland, which broke by one degree a record set in 1952. It was 89 at 1 p.m. in Seattle.

The mercury climbed to 100 degrees in Corpus Christi, Texas, breaking the record high for the date.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

U.S.-Soviets deal makes history

By John Pomfret
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — When Dennis Ross, a top State Department policy maker, accepted an invitation to spend a few days at a Soviet dacha discussing the future of the world, nobody paid much attention.

It was supposed to be a quiet time, a little vodka and a lot of talk. Then Iraq invaded Kuwait, and Ross and his Soviet counterparts helped make history.

On Friday, Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze issued a joint statement, prepared by Ross and Soviet officials, condemning Iraq's invasion and calling for an international arms embargo on Baghdad.

For the first time since World War II, the superpowers acted as allies when confronted with a war. Moscow assented to Washington's request it cut weapons deliveries to Iraq.

For the Soviets, the decision to join the Americans was a difficult one because of decades of close ties with Iraq. Moscow has a treaty of friendship with Iraq and is its biggest arms supplier.

But, as Shevardnadze said during a hastily called news conference with Baker at a military airbase outside Moscow on Friday, "this aggression is inconsistent with the principles of new political thinking."

Perhaps more significantly, State Department officials said the Soviet Union put no restrictions on any U.S. response to the crisis.

The genesis of the statement reads like a case study of "new political thinking," Shevardnadze's buzzword for the changing relationship between Moscow and Washington.

American officials who participated in the whirlwind talks, telephone calls and abruptly changed plans used words such as "extraordinary" and "milestone" to describe the negotiations with their longtime foes.

Wednesday — A half-moon glimmered overhead when Baker stepped off his Air Force plane in the Soviet city of Irkutsk at 2:30 a.m. for talks with Shevardnadze.

The talks in "the Paris of Siberia" were expected to focus on the 12-year-old civil war in Afghanistan and arms control. But in the first session Baker asked Shevardnadze to pressure Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein to withdraw troops massed on Kuwait's borders.

Later, the foreign minister, in a remarkable step, admitted the response had been wrong.

"I really did not think at that time that the Iraqis would so openly engage in aggression against such a defenseless country," Shevardnadze said.

Thursday morning — Lt. Gen. Howard Graves, an aide accompanying Baker, tells the secretary that Iraq has invaded Kuwait.

Thursday — At 1:30 p.m. Baker's jet touched down in Ulan Bator, Mongolia, making him the first top American official to visit this vast, land-locked nation in 46 years. But events in the Middle East overshadowed his trip.

In Moscow, the Soviet Union condemned the invasion and stopped arms deliveries to Iraq.

Enter Dennis Ross.

After the Irkutsk talks with Shevardnadze, Ross went to Moscow with Shevardnadze's men for what were originally planned as broad discussions on the next two years.

In a dacha outside Moscow, the Americans raised the idea with Soviet officials of a joint statement.

"There was a fair amount of discussion about the consequences of allowing naked aggression to go unchallenged," said a senior State Department official. "If you allow someone to engage in this kind of action and get away with it, you're going to invite more."

Back in Ulan Bator, Baker gamely watched Mongolian wrestling and archery competitions, as the crisis unfurled.

Lt. Gen. Graves kept him posted.

"We've got more phone lines out of Mongolia than the Mongolians," Graves quipped as scantily clad Mongolian wrestlers grappled with each other on a grassy plain outside Ulan Bator.

At 8 p.m., Baker received a call from President Bush, who was interested in the joint statement.

At a banquet that night, Baker toasted Mongolia's moves toward democracy, then announced he cut short his trip.

"It is with a very heavy heart," he said. The Texan had planned a two-day hunting trip on the Gobi Desert.

In Moscow, Ross and his Soviet colleagues thrashed out details of the statement. An international arms embargo was agreed on. State Department officials declined to say whether there were any disagreements but they said the Soviets did not make Washington rule out any option against Iraq.

Friday, 1:45 a.m. — Bush, flying on Air Force One to Colorado, called Baker again and approved the statement.

"Wake up and get a pencil," State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler told one reporter at 3 a.m. "We're going back to Moscow."

Friday, 7:30 p.m. at Moscow's Vukunovo II military airport — "This has been a rather unusual meeting," Shevardnadze said of his just concluded talk with Baker.

Then the two men read the statement, each in his native tongue.

emergency Arab League summit to discuss the crisis initially planned for Sunday in Saudi Arabia was postponed.

■ Persian Gulf shipping sources said Iraqi troops seized the crews of all ships docked at Kuwaiti ports and impounded the vessels. The crews from many nations included at least 20 Americans, the sources said. However, spokesmen at the U.S. State Department said they had no information to confirm the report of U.S. crewmen being seized.

■ In London, the Defense Ministry said Iraqi soldiers took 35 British servicemen acting as advisers to Kuwaiti forces from their homes in Kuwait overnight. It said they were later flown to Baghdad. The servicemen were among 66 British military advisers in Kuwait. Britain said it has been assured by Iraq that all 35 were safe.

■ Kuwaiti diplomatic sources who contacted Kuwaiti residents by telephone said Iraqi tanks and troops had begun to withdraw from downtown Kuwait city. Gulf-based Arab diplomatic sources, who are in contact with their embassies in Kuwait, said there was scattered shooting and looting by Iraqi troops in the Kuwaiti capital. Iraqi soldiers broke into banks, supermarkets and automobile showrooms, driving off with luxury cars, the diplomatic sources said.

■ Three U.S. oil workers missing since the Iraqi invasion turned up in Baghdad apparently unharmed, the State Department said in Washington. An official said U.S. authorities were told eight other Americans had also been taken there in a group of 24 Westerners. Iraq's U.S ambassador said the Americans would be free to leave. U.S. officials, who earlier said 14 Americans were missing, said the 11 Americans may account for all those thought missing.

Iraq said the new Kuwaiti government is headed by Col. Ala Hussein Ali. He holds the positions of prime minister, commander in chief of the armed forces, minister of defense and interior minister. The other eight members were lieutenant colonels and majors.

Diplomatic sources elsewhere in the gulf, however, said those names could be fake, or the people on the list could actually be Iraqis.

"I assure you ... that none, I repeat none, of the names ... put forward are Kuwaiti nationality or citizenship," said al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti ambassador in Washington and a member of the royal family. "They are all Iraqi military people."

Also Saturday, Baghdad radio broadcast a communique from the "provisional government of free Kuwait" announcing it was creating a popular army that would accept all Arab nationals "who wish stability for Kuwait in its new age."

The official Iraqi news agency said that 140,820 Iraqis living in the border area with Kuwait had volunteered to serve. The gulf diplomatic sources said busloads of the Iraqis began arriving in Kuwait.

There were reports from the U.S. State Department, intelligence officials and witnesses that Iraq was moving parts of its invasion force to Kuwait's almost 150-mile-long southern border with Saudi Arabia, the monarchy that has the world's largest oil reserves.

Residents of the Saudi border city of Khafji, reached by telephone from Bahrain, said Iraqi troops laid down a checkpoint less than a mile from the frontier.

The U.S. State Department said some of the invasion force had pushed to within five to 10 miles of the Kuwait-Saudi border.

The possibility of an Iraqi thrust into Saudi Arabia worried members of Congress. Lawmakers attending secret briefings on the crisis said 120,000 Iraqi troops massed along Kuwait's southern border could easily attack the Saudis next.

On Saturday, Bush said in Washington that the use of force in resolving the crisis remains an option. Saudi Arabia ships 1.2 million barrels of oil to the United States daily.

A high-ranking Saudi official said Saturday on condition of anonymity no Iraqi troops had entered Saudi Arabia.

On Friday, Iraq's Revolutionary Command Council, led by Saddam, said it planned to begin a withdrawal Sunday, "unless something appears that could threaten the security of Kuwait and Iraq."

Iraqi troops seize U.S. crew

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Persian Gulf shipping sources said Iraqi troops on Saturday seized the American crew of a ship docked at a Kuwait port and took them off the vessel.

The sources said the fate of the 20 Americans from the ship was not known.

The vessel was docked at Shuwaikh port, the main port of Kuwait City, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity. It was unclear whether the vessel was a tanker or a container ship.

First reports identified the ship as the Sea Wolf and said it was believed owned by the American firm called Crowley Maritime.

A Crowley spokesman in Jacksonville, Fla., said the seized ship was not the company's.

The gulf sources said two Iranian ships, Iran Hormuz and Safeer, were also seized.

The State Department has already asked the Iraqi government to confirm the whereabouts of 14 missing American oil workers.

In Washington on Friday, U.S. officials were trying to confirm rumors that other Americans might have been picked up by Iraqi troops, said one official.

A U.S. diplomat in Baghdad went to the Foreign Ministry and presented a list of the 14, the companies they worked for, and the three sites from which they were taken on Thursday when Iraqi troops invaded Kuwait, said a U.S. official.

The U.S. diplomat in Baghdad reminded the Iraqis "of their commitment to safeguard the safety of Americans," said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher. The commitment was given to U.S. diplomats in Baghdad during the early hours of the invasion, Boucher said.

Iraq's ambassador to Washington, Mohamed Sadiq al-Mashat, denied Friday that his country was holding any Americans.

Eleven Americans believed accounted for in Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three American oil workers who had been missing since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait have turned up in Baghdad apparently unharmed, the State Department said Saturday.

An official said U.S. authorities were told that eight additional Americans among a group of 24 Westerners also have been taken to the Iraqi capital.

As of late Saturday Iraqi time, the eight had not been contacted by U.S. consular officials but were reported to have checked in to a Baghdad hotel, the official said.

He added that the two groups may account for all Americans thought to have been missing since the invasion Thursday.

The names of the Americans were not available from the State Department. Efforts were being made to contact their relatives in the United States.

Iraq's U.S. ambassador, Mohammed Sadiq Mashat, said the 11 were found and are in Baghdad.

Mashat said he hadn't heard reports attributed to Persian Gulf shipping sources that 20 Americans had been seized off a vessel in Kuwait. The State Department also said it could not confirm the reports.

There was no information on the nationalities of the 16 other Westerners among the group of 24.

Initially, the State Department had thought 14 Americans were unaccounted for, but the official indicated there may have been only 11.

Liberian rebels threaten foreigners

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Rebel leader Prince Johnson said Saturday he is ordering the arrest of all foreigners in Monrovia in hope of provoking international intervention in the nation's bloody civil war.

Johnson, whose troops have occupied much of the city in their battle to oust President Samuel Doe, told reporters the roundup would begin Monday and single out American, British, Lebanese and Indian civilians at first.

Four U.S. warships containing 4,000 Marines have been stationed off the Liberian coast for weeks, but Washington repeatedly has ruled out intervening. The forces could presumably evacuate the few hundred remaining Americans.

Fighting has shifted considerably throughout the capital in recent days, and it was unclear whether foreigners in sections now under Johnson's control could move freely to areas controlled by Doe's troops.

A Lebanese trader on Saturday became the first foreigner reported killed in the fighting, which began as an insurgency in December but which has since turned into vicious tribal war including massacres and torture.

Mohamed Farhat, who had lived in the Liberian capital for more than 15 years, was reportedly shot and killed in front of his wife and four children when he tried to stop Doe's troops from looting his furniture store.

Johnson himself shot and killed a Liberian wearing a Red Cross emblem Friday, claiming the man was selling rice that was supposed to be free, according to a Western journalist who saw the shooting.

"I want the world to know how we deal with profiteers," Johnson said before firing a burst from his AK-47 assault rifle, killing him instantly while another detained relief worker — still handcuffed to the victim — said rice vouchers were being sold to prevent a stampede.

The victim, whose name was not known, was arrested with Jacques Monthouroy, a Frenchman working for the U.S. Catholic Relief Services. Monthouroy was released after the U.S. Embassy vouched for him.

The killing has stopped rice distribution in Monrovia.

The fighting in the civil war is centered in Monrovia, where forces loyal to Johnson are trying to topple Doe, whose troops were defending Doe's fortified mansion.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Hiroshima marks bombing

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — When Hiroshima remembers the atom bomb it is with a flock of doves and a mournful tolling of bells. On the central monument to the bomb victims is a prayer "that this evil shall never be repeated."

Forty-five years after the United States dropped the first atomic bomb, Hiroshima continues to lay the grim realities of nuclear war before the world.

In Japan, most remembrances of the Aug. 6, 1945, bombing focus on the horrors of the atom bomb and the 140,000 deaths it caused, and rarely on the responsibility of the warring nations.

When Hiroshima began refurbishing its Peace Memorial Museum last year, 16 groups of citizens, bomb victims and labor unions demanded the city include an "aggressor's corner" that would focus on Japan's aggressive role in World War II.

City officials refused. In a written statement, the city quoted former Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, who said in 1988 that it was unclear that Japan was an aggressor in World War II.

"The purpose of this museum is to bear witness to what happened on August 6th in Hiroshima," said Yoshitaka Kawamoto, president of the museum.

The museum's exhibits say the atomic attack was aimed at civilians.

"If we had a display about Japan's aggressive role, people will think it is natural for aggressors to be atom-bombed," said Toru Kataoka, manager of the Peace Culture Center, which is housed in one of three major buildings at the Peace Park. "It opposes our basic policy on the museum, which is to pray for the victims."

Tamil rebels kill 110

KATTANKUDI, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil militants burst into two mosques in eastern Sri Lanka and killed more than 110 people as they knelt in prayer, officials said Saturday.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attack, but officials and witnesses said the separatist Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam were responsible for the massacre in which 75 people were also wounded.

The Tigers broke a 13-month cease-fire on June 11 and resumed their 7-year-long war for independence in the Tamil-dominated north and east of this Indian Ocean island. More than 3,000 combatants have been killed in the latest fighting.

Tamils, who are mostly Hindus, make up 18 percent of the population. The predominantly Buddhist Sinhalese dominate the government and military and account for 75 percent of the population.

Military officials said the rebels kill Moslems and burn their homes and shops because the Tigers suspect them of supporting the government.

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Half a million homeless victims of the Iranian earthquake are threatened by food shortages and the frigid weather about to descend on northern Iran.

The quake June 21 killed 40,000 people and injured 60,000 in Gilan and Zanjan provinces, where temperatures sometimes drop to zero in winter.

Housing the refugees before then is the government's main priority, Abdollah Nouri, the Iranian interior minister, said last week.

Abu Nidal aide slain

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Two gunmen armed with silencer-equipped pistols on Saturday killed an official of terrorist mastermind Abu Nidal's Palestinian faction in a southern Lebanon refugee camp, police said.

A police spokesman said the gunmen shot Abdul Fattah Aziz, known by the code-name Kifah Ghalib, shortly after midnight at the Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp.

"Aziz was hit in the chest and neck. Death was instantaneous," said the spokesman, who cannot be named in line with police regulations.

Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabri al-Banna, broke away from Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization in 1973 and set up the Fatah-Revolutionary Council. It has bases in Iraq, Syria, Libya and Lebanon.

Moslem family killed

TACURONG, Philippines (AP) — Soldiers allegedly massacred 19 members of a Moslem family to avenge the death of two comrades who were gunned down by a member of the clan, a government official and witnesses said today.

Lawyer Ciriaco Jabido, regional director of the government's Commission on Human Rights, said the incident took place Friday in the village of New Passi on the outskirts of this town, 610 miles southeast of Manila.

The military unit operating in the area had earlier reported the incident as a clash between government troops and Moslem separatists.

Coup bid hurts Trinidad's economy

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — A Moslem zealot's attempt to overthrow the government, and the burning and looting that accompanied it, have staggered Trinidad after three decades of stable democracy.

The rebels surrendered Wednesday and the six-day coup attempt ended with the safe release of the hostages, but the casualty toll in the assault and subsequent violence was at least 38 dead and 150 wounded.

Now Trinidadians face food and gasoline shortages, economic disruption from a week of paralyzing curfews and the devastation left by looters and arsonists.

This racially and ethnically diverse nation known for sun and calypso also must deal with tensions created by the violent effort to destroy a democracy that has endured since independence from Britain in 1962.

"As a sociologist, I know that conflict and crisis can either splinter groups or unify them; it's never in-between," said Anthony Maingot, who was born in Trinidad and is a Caribbean expert at Florida International University in Miami.

The coup attempt by Abu Bakr, leader of a commune of 250 to 350 Moslems, began July 27.

Bakr and his followers, most of whom are poor and black, attacked police headquarters with explosives and seized Prime Minister N.R. Robinson and other government officials in Parliament House.

Bakr's immediate demands were the prime minister's resignation and elections within 90 days.

"I don't know that they planned beyond taking Red House," the parliament building, said Col. Joe Theodore, who led the Trinidad and Tobago Defense Force in the crisis. "He went in with a half-baked plan."

The sports and culture minister, Jennifer Johnson, one of the hostages, said the rebels were convinced they could improve Trinidad by establishing a fundamentalist Moslem state. Bakr, whose newspaper had attacked "satanic" U.S. and International Monetary Fund economic treatment of Trinidad, promised to help the poor.

There were no signs of popular support for Bakr's attempt to overthrow the prime minister.

Trinidad has had a boom-to-bust economy over the last 20 years tied to the world price of oil, its main source of wealth.

The 1970s oil boom brought prosperity and gave Trinidadians the highest standard of living in the Caribbean. The bottom fell out of the oil market in the 1980s and Trinidad's gross national product, the value of all goods and services, has dropped 41 percent in eight years.

Robinson led the new National Alliance for Reconstruction to a landslide in 1986 with promises of recovery, ousting the People's National Movement, which had been in power since colonial days.

He has tried to diversify the economy, partly by expanding tourism, to which the island was largely indifferent during the oil boom. Unpopular austerity measures demanded by the IMF in return for loans included wage freezes, new taxes, public employee layoffs and devaluations that cut the Trinidad dollar's value from about 42 cents to 24.

Officials say the economy has shown signs of recovery, but that Robinson's reserved personal style and an unraveling of his coalition weakened the government.

"There is discontent in the country," government spokesman Gregory Shaw said. "Apparently, he (Abu Bakr) took this as a sign that the people were ready to revolt, but that is not the way Trinidadians change government."

CLEARVIEW: Center has too many empty beds

But by March of this year, Clearview had averaged only 31 percent occupancy for the fiscal year. The monthly figure slipped from 37 percent in March to 33 percent in April and then to 29 percent in May.

The hospital took 18 beds out of circulation in June, reducing the number of available beds from 49 to 31.

The occupancy rate would have been 28.6 percent in June under a 49-bed operation. The rate was 45 percent that month for the 31 beds.

Clearview Administrator Bob Rabidoux said occupancy typically dips around November and December and then picks up as the new year starts. However, the census didn't bounce back this year, he said.

Rabidoux blamed most of the continuing drop on the decreasing flow of insurance dollars.

While insurance companies used to pay for 30 days of treatment for adults and 45 for adolescents, some now pay only a little more than half of those lengths of time, he said. Not all insurance companies have cut back on their coverage, he added.

The insurance drought and low occupancy, though, haven't been Clearview's only troubles.

From January 1989 through June of this year, 39 staffers resigned, seven positions were cut through layoffs or attrition, and six employees were fired.

Dr. Joseph E. Wolpmann, who had been retained as medical director after Clearview changed hands, resigned in June. Wolpmann still has patient admitting privileges at the hospital.

Wolpmann, who joined the Clearview staff in November 1987, refused to elaborate on his reasons for abandoning the director post.

"I'd rather not comment on it," he said. "It's been a pretty traumatic thing. I'd rather not go to the press with it yet."

One former Clearview employee, who spoke on the condition that his name not be used, attributed some the staff problems to a political power struggle between facility employees and MMH officials.

"They told me I better keep my mouth shut if I wanted to keep working here," the source said. "That whole hospital is out of crank. You wouldn't believe it.

"It's full of really angry people. They aren't allowed to be themselves or do their jobs. They're told to either shut up or get out."

Other resignees have either left Midland, could not be reached by telephone or declined comment.

MMH spokesperson Laurie Johnson attributed part of the resignations to fierce competition nationwide for health care workers.

"In health care it's not unusual to have turnover," Ms. Johnson said. "There's a shortage as a whole in nursing, counseling and staff. You'll see a lot of movement in the field."

Meanwhile, as occupancy continued to drop, Clearview officials were forced to cut staffing.

Counselors, nurses, maintenance workers and kitchen personnel were among those who lost their jobs when positions were cut, reducing the number of staffers to 68.

"It was a business decision," Rabidoux said. "There were some areas where we thought we had too many people. We've got a core group now to deal with this census as best we can."

James McDaniel had served as a Clearview maintenance man for about five years when he was laid off in May.

"They said their patient count was too low," said McDaniel, 60, who still hadn't found a new job as of last week. "I'm disappointed they treated me like that, but I'm not surprised."

He claimed that the hospital, in the face of the layoffs, had spent exorbitant amounts of money on unnecessary renovations.

"They spent money like crazy out there remodeling," McDaniel said. "A lot of stuff we tore out we had to put back a week later. It's a sin how they run that place."

Hospital records show that from January 1989 until April of this year, $91,181 was spent on renovations and capital equipment.

Refurbishing costs include $31,500 in atrium landscaping last year and $19,371 in recarpeting and $2,811 in furniture recovering this year.

Clearview this year also paid $1,220 for artificial plants, $4,403 for kitchen utensils and $3,900 for a fire alarm system, among other capital expenditures.

Last year the hospital spent $510 for a spotlight, $2,899 for a personal computer and $1,798 for a cellular mobile telephone among other items.

By November 1989, the hospital had installed a softball field, outdoor fitness center, croquet court and a running track for patient use.

Rabidoux defended the expenditures, explaining that a majority of them were made before occupancy reached critical levels.

"The census was adequate at the time," he said. "In a hospital you have to do that (remodeling)."

Rabidoux also noted that much of the renovation labor was done inexpensively through restitution inmates and Texas Employment Commission referrals.

The former Clearview employee, who asked to remain anonymous, said MMH has sunk more dollars into Clearview than available figures indicate.

"These guys are good at covering their tracks," he said in regard to MMH underwriting more expenses than acknowledged. "There was a lot of shuffling of financial stuff in order to look good."

But Rabidoux said that other than advertising, MMH has assumed none of the Clearview overhead. Figures show that MMH spent $495,000 on Clearview advertising from Jan. 1, 1989, through June of this year.

Clearview footed the $3,830 bill for studio photos of Clearview board members, three of whom resigned in June. Seven Clearview Hospital Board members have resigned since November.

"I really don't have any comments," said Rea, who had served for about five years. "I had filled out my five years. That was plenty long enough."

Joe Dominey, who was appointed to the board in February, said he resigned in June partly because fellow trustees Ruth Bell and Rea had announced their resignations.

Dominey said he and the other two June resignees felt like they mostly were being used as political puppets.

"I felt like the board was purely an advisory body and did not have the ability to develop policy for Clearview," he said. "It was kind of a quagmire over there. There was a sense of indignation.

"Frankly, I felt it was best that a fresh board be selected."

Ms. Bell, who was on the board when MMH assumed Clearview operations, was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Among the other resignees, one resigned in November for personal reasons, while Jack Steele and Jim Kendrick, two MMH administrators, left in February after a change in board bylaws.

Ms. Johnson said bylaws were changed in order to bring more community involvement to the Clearview board. Dominey and Hughes were chosen to replace Steele and Kendrick, respectively.

Margaret Purvis, a former Midland County Hospital District director who chose not to seek reelection in May, said the number of Clearview Board resignations was not as bad as expected.

"It looked like it was going to be an en masse resignation and it was not," Ms. Purvis said.

She said that board should have more political elbow room in the running of day-to-day Clearview activities.

"I regret that the board of Clearview has not been given the opportunity to be more involved in the operations of the facility," Ms. Purvis said. "I think there's some really good people on that board. Their talents and expertise should be used to the fullest."

Cindy Trifon, a former Clearview physician assistant, said that despite the seemingly unsettled board and staff situation, the treatment program hasn't suffered.

"If anything, the (MMH) purchase helped Clearview," said Ms. Trifon, who was laid off in June after 3½ years with the facility. "It changed for the better, actually. Things were better run after they purchased it.

"The people out there are well qualified and experienced."

However, Ms. Trifon said the facility's treatment methods, which have changed little in five years, were developed 15 years ago and have become outdated.

"I would say that the patients are getting fair care," she said. "It's not as good as I think they deserve. You have to be on top of the latest things going.

"You can't keep operating the same facility with the methods that you used five years ago."

Ms. Johnson, though, said Clearview is still considered to have one of the finest treatment programs in the country.

"I think that program can hold its own," Ms. Johnson said. "It's as good or better as any program you can find."

Clearview offers a family oriented treatment program, with adults staying 30 days and children staying 45.

Rabidoux said much of the treatment involves family members, who in a number of cases must also change their attitudes toward drugs and alcohol. The patient also undergoes individual and group therapy.

The program includes detoxification, alcohol and drug abuse education, nursing care, exercise, recreation and relaxation training. Patients also enter an aftercare program and are eventually referred to a support group such as Alcoholics Anonymous or the Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

Despite the extensive care Clearview patients receive, the national trend in treatment is leaning toward outpatient programs, which insurance companies view more favorably, Rabidoux said.

The opening of an outpatient center at 4500 W. Illinois Ave. has been stalled mostly because MMH is waiting to complete negotiations to begin the Optifast weight reduction program, he said.

Optifast, an MMH program, will be housed with the outpatient program in the same 13,200-square-foot facility, which the hospital purchased last year for about $100,000, he said.

Rabidoux said Clearview may be troubled, but programs scheduled to be introduced this fall should help uncloud the facility's future and no changes are expected for the inpatient program. In addition to the outpatient program, Clearview is planning a daytime treatment program and a psychiatric program, he said.

"I think the plus for us is that we're part of Midland Memorial Hospital," he said. "There isn't any other hospital around that has that type of umbrella."

The morale among Clearview staff members has also shown signs of improvement as the past year's troubles slowly fade into the background, Rabidoux said.

In addition, it is critical to have a quality treatment center in the Permian Basin, he said.

"I want this hospital to survive," Rabidoux said. "If some tough decisions have to be made to ensure that, I'm willing to do it."

MONDAY: Changes in insurance policies have been a major factor in the decline of the number of patients at Clearview Hospital and similar facilities throughout the region.

TDH: Deficiencies called 'pretty picky'

(From 1A)

In addition, hospital officials failed to document findings or recommendations stemming from a September 1989 review of the facility's quality assurance plan, the report states. A quality assurance plan is a monthly Clearview performance evaluation conducted by hospital officials.

Inspectors also said hospital employees in nine cases neglected to keep timely medical records, which were supposed to be completed 15 days after a patient's discharge. Those records also lacked nursing, counseling and physician signatures, they said.

Overall, the percentage of records which were not completed before the required deadline ranged from 30.4 percent in August 1989 to 66.6 in June 1989 and January of this year, survey results show.

Although the bookkeeping deficiencies did not signify catastrophic problems at Clearview, Rabidoux said the citations were taken seriously. "Record keeping in a health care facility is real important," he said.

Of why record keeping was lax, he said it was partially the fault of previous administration.

The inspection also uncovered deficiencies in food service operations, with citations ranging from not meeting the patients' nutritional needs to improper food handling.

The report notes that the four-week menu cycle lacked adequate servings of milk, citrus fruits and some vegetables.

Other findings in the survey included:

- Food particles under equipment in the serving line area;
- Lint and dust on ceiling and wall areas in the serving line area;
- Stored kitchen equipment covered with debris and food particles;
- Dried-on food particles found on stored utensils;
- Peeling and chipping paint on walls throughout the kitchen area;
- Food stains on kitchen walls;
- Kitchen personnel not properly using hair nets;

Rabidoux emphasized that the deficiencies, all of which have been corrected, did not represent a health threat.

Is Saddam destined to rule Arab world?

By Elaine Sciolino
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — With a single, swift military action, Saddam Hussein has dispelled the image he has assiduously tried to cultivate in the West as a man who can be trusted.

Iraq's 53-year-old president is still the same radical revolutionary he was at age 22, when he attempted his first political assassination, and as unsentimental as he was 10 years ago when he presided over a firing squad as it executed more than 20 officials for disloyalty.

By seizing the desert sheikdom of Kuwait, Saddam betrayed and terrified his Arab brothers, destroyed the balance of power in the Persian Gulf, plunged the world's oil markets into chaos and challenged the assumption that the end of the cold war would bring peace to the world.

Saddam sees himself destined to dominate the Arab world much as Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt did a generation ago.

And as the world's biggest arms buyer, the commander of a battle-hardened army of one million men and the keeper of oil reserves second only to those of Saudi Arabia, Saddam has the tools to achieve his expansionist goals.

THESE GOALS pervade the dozens of volumes of his writings, speeches and interviews, particularly those published in the years before the decadelong war with Iran sidetracked his political ambitions.

"We don't look on this piece of land here in Iraq as the ultimate limit of our struggle," he told a group of visiting Iraqi ambassadors in 1975. "It is part of a larger area and broader aims: the area of the Arab homeland and the aims of the Arab struggle."

After a coup attempt against him five years later, he called Iraq's political struggle a "revolution which aims to destroy the bases of imperialism, to shine over the whole Arab world to make it a new power on the world scene."

And only a few months before Saddam invaded Iran in September 1980, he unveiled an ambitious pan-Arab charter for the decade, rejecting any superpower military presence in the Middle East, North Africa and the Indian Ocean and charting a course of regional nonalignment.

IT WAS SUCH boldness than that prompted Saddam to invade Iran, a military miscalculation that cost tens of thousands of Iraqi lives and left him with a devastated economy, a dissatisfied population and an overblown military apparatus with nothing to do.

Although the war gained no territory for Iraq, it marked the first time in recent years that an Arab country fought a war and did not lose, and Saddam emerged as a victor.

In the months before the invasion of Kuwait, he had predicted another Mideast war was inevitable, threatening to "scorch half of Israel" with poison gas if it tried to attack Iraqi military installations.

Saddam Hussein Tikriti was born into a landless peasant family in the village of Tikrit about 100 miles northwest of Baghdad on April 28, 1937. Orphaned as a child, he spent much of his youth quietly on the melon farm of an uncle who was a devout Sunni Muslim.

But he became a member of the Arab nationalist Baath Party while still in high school, and at age 22 was one of 10 young party militants assigned to assassinate dictator Gen. Abdel Karim Kassem.

The assassination plot failed and Saddam was arrested, but he escaped, fleeing 300 miles across the desert on a donkey to Syria and cutting a bullet out of his thigh with a penknife.

Hearing of his adventures, President Nasser summoned the young revolutionary to Cairo, where he studied law and began the underground life of intrigue that would ultimately bring him to power.

When the Baath Party seized power in a bloodless coup in 1968, Saddam became secretary and second-in-command to new President Maj. Gen. Ahmed Hassan Bakr, although it was clear from the beginning that Saddam wielded power.

'We don't look on this piece of land here in Iraq as the ultimate limit of our struggle. It is part of a larger area and broader aims: the area of the Arab homeland and the aims of the Arab struggle.'

Iraq's political struggle is a 'revolution which aims to destroy the bases of imperialism, to shine over the whole Arab world to make it a new power on the world scene.'

— Saddam Hussein in 1975 and 1980

SADDAM'S RISE to the presidency in 1979 was accompanied by a campaign of self-congratulation that outdid even that of his archenemy, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who was then the Iranian leader.

On 20-foot high posters throughout the country, he is portayed in various roles — as a desert horseman, as a young graduate in cap and gown, as commander in chief in aviator glasses and military beret.

Married for more than 25 years to a first cousin, Sagida Khairallah Talfah, a former teacher, he is often shown smiling broadly in photographs with the youngest of his five children in his lap, a cigar in one hand.

That image of the benign "father-leader," as he is known, is promoted on nightly television where the beefy, moustached Saddam is shown focusing on some of the more mundane pastimes of Iraqi life, from attending a ritual circumcision to swinging a sickle with peasants in a wheat field.

Saddam's rule has brought Iraq, once a coup-plagued country, its longest period of stability. More feared than loved, he has secured his power by an organized party structure and an interlocking system of police, internal security and neighborhood organizations unrivaled in the Middle East.

4 Texans among those moved to Baghdad hotel

Associated Press

Four Texas oil field workers unaccounted for in Kuwait since the Iraqi invasion were among 11 Americans freed and housed at a Baghdad hotel Saturday, the U.S. State Department announced.

The fate of three other Texans missing since Iraqi forced invaded Kuwait last week remained unknown late Saturday.

Initially, the State Department had thought 14 Americans were unaccounted for, but an official Saturday indicated there may have been only 11.

Marjorie Walterscheid of Jacksboro said the State Department notified her about her husband's release at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. She said Rainard Walterscheid was said to be all right, but that she had not spoken with him.

Walterscheid, 52, has worked in oil fields in more than a dozen countries since 1964. He has been assigned to Kuwait since March.

Edward Hale of Spring, a community near Houston, and Gary Carr of Keller, near Fort Worth, also were freed Saturday, said an official for OGE Drilling. Both men are employed by the Houston-based company.

Relatives of Charles Amos, an employee of Santa Fe Drilling Co. in California, said he also was among those freed at the hotel, the Longview News-Journal reported late Saturday. Amos, 59, is from Harmony in northeast Texas.

Other missing Texans have been identified as Jim and Phyllis Calvin of San Antonio and Kuwait Petroleum Co. worker Bobby Parker, 48, of Vidor, near Beaumont.

Their families said late Saturday they had received no word from the State Department about their loved ones' whereabouts or safety.

Calvin is a former basketball coach at Amarillo College. Two years ago he began coaching Kuwait's national team.

Parker was scheduled to return home Aug. 10 and a family reunion was planned for the next week.

U.S. loans may have funded invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Atlanta-based Italian bank helped finance the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait by supplying $3 billion in credits partly guaranteed by the U.S. government, the chairman of the House banking committee said Saturday.

"There is no question but those $3 billion are actually financing the invasion of Kuwait," Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, told The Associated Press. "There is no question that the greater portion of that was dealing with armaments."

Gonzalez said $800 million of the credits made during the 1980s, when Iran and Iraq were at war, was guaranteed under an Agriculture Department export financing program. Gonzalez first made his assertions in an interview Friday with the Austin (Texas) American-Statesman.

Justice Department investigators months ago began looking into activities of the Atlanta affiliate of the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, a large, Rome-based institution owned primarily by the Italian government.

The Atlanta bank is one of several BNL branches in the United States. Others are in New York, Chicago, Miami and Los Angeles, Gonzalez said.

He said a number of officials of the Atlanta bank recently were fired as the investigation intensified.

Gonzalez said the Defense Intelligence Agency is also looking into the arrangement. He also said that the Italian government has sent an investigator to Atlanta to look into the case.

Gonazalez scheduled an Aug. 14 hearing in the case by his House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee.

The inquiry followed reports that the Atlanta bank extended $3 billion in letters of credit to Iraq, some guaranteed by the Department of Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corp.

The Commodity Credit Corp. and other Agriculture Department agencies normally guarantee loans by private banks to foreign countries as a means of financing exports of American farm products and related goods.

Gonzalez said in this case the CCC guaranteed $800 million of a total of $3 billion in credits for Iraq. He said the loans were supposed to finance purchases of grain and machinery.

Gonzalez said, however, there was clear evidence that armaments perhaps including chemical weapons were obtained by Iraq under the deal. He said some agricultural exports may also have been included.

The cost to Iraq of seizing and occupying Kuwait may never be known, but Iraq did borrow an estimated $30 billion from its Arab neighbors over the course of its eight-year war with Iran.

He said full details of the arrangement are hard to come by because Iraq later settled with the parent bank in Rome.

He also complained that there is too little federal regulation of such operations.

"Banca Lavoro is just small potatoes, even though Italy, astoundingly, is second in foreign banking activity in the United States," Gonzalez said.

U.S.-flagged ships move cautiously in gulf

By Nabila Megalli
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain — It was business as usual for most shipping in the Persian Gulf, but U.S.-flagged tankers were moving warily Saturday, depending on the U.S. Navy for guidance.

Eight U.S. warships are inside the waterway. Gulf shipping executives said the warships were operating normally, but added that they had cut down on their radio communications.

"The U.S. warships are just not talking as much as usual, and not identifying themselves," said one shipping executive, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A shipping executive at the bustling port of Dubai said: "There is no tension, all is normal, but the American vessel are being cautious."

Another executive, reached at Ras Tanura, the main Saudi oil loading terminal about 125 miles south of the Kuwaiti borders said: "There is no problem absolutely, loading and unloading is normal."

Two of the five Kuwaiti tankers which still fly the U.S. flag, suspended their journeys to Kuwait after Iraq's Thursday invasion of Kuwait.

Kuwait re-registered 11 tankers to fly the U.S. flag at the height of the Iraq-Iran war to entitle them to U.S. Navy protection.

Saturday, the Kittanning, a U.S. tanker, was overheard by radio monitors in the region asking the U.S. Navy whether it should continue to the Saudi Arabian port of Ras Tanura.

The operator on the American warship, which was not identified, said he would check. Within 10 minutes he came back to advise the Kittanning "no problem, continue."

Scores of oil tankers were destroyed during the last few years of the eight-year Iran-Iraq war, which ended in 1988. Iran and Iraq attacked some 550 vessels of various nationalities during the war in an effort to cut off shipping to the opposing side.

Weak revenues in 23 states point to recession

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half the states have seen no real growth in revenues this year, indicating they are in recession or close to it, a study of state finances said Saturday.

The impact was cushioned by a big round of tax increases last year, and even more are likely next year, the author of the study said.

"The pressure is building on states to raise taxes next year," said Steven D. Gold, director for the Center for the Study of the States at the Nelson Rockefeller Institute of Government at Albany, N.Y.

"If you see a state that has lower revenue this year than last year, you know they're under tremendous pressure and there's a good bet they'll have to raise taxes next year," he said.

The report was issued by the center, which is part of the State University of New York at Albany.

It said that in a survey of revenue collections in 43 states, 23 reported total tax revenue increases equal to or below the inflation rate — meaning no increases after adjustment for inflation.

The figure was in line with a Labor Department report Friday showing unemployment shot up 5.5 percent last month and the economy grew by just 1.2 percent in the second quarter, below the level needed to create new jobs.

Orders to factories for manufactured goods fell 1.5 percent in June, the third drop this year, a sign layoffs and cutbacks could be coming.

Construction spending was unchanged in June after being down two straight months and the government's Index of Leading Economic Indicators, weak most of the year, showed no strength at all.

The conclusion that many state economies are in or near recession is consistent with a report from the National Governors' Association and the National Association of State Budget Officers in April that states were in worse financial condition than a year ago.

The study said corporate income tax collections were the weakest component of the state revenue picture, with a 6.7 percent decline, reflecting a drop in earnings.

The two other principle revenue sources, the sales tax and personal income tax, posted overall gains of 6.6 percent and 7 percent respectively.

Those three taxes account for more than 70 percent of state collections. In most states the revenue figures were for the 12 months ending in June.

Weak state economies were found in all regions of the country, but New England and Mid-Atlantic states were in the worst shape, the report said.

In five states, revenue was lower than in the corresponding period a year earlier: Massachusetts, Maine, Michigan, New Hampshire and New York.

Eighteen other states had increases of less than 5 percent, the approximate rate of inflation used in the report.

They were: Rhode Island, Vermont, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, New Mexico, Colorado and Oregon.

Only eight states had revenue increases of 10 percent or more: Illinois, Georgia, Louisiana, North Carolina, West Virginia, Idaho, Wyoming and Nevada.

Tax increases enacted since last year have helped boost revenue in several of those states, including Illinois, Georgia and West Virginia.

"Things are even worse than they look when you consider the fact states raised taxes quite a bit last year," Gold said.

Three states reported decreases in personal income tax collections: Hawaii, which cut its rates, and Michigan and New York.

Maine and Massachusetts reported lower sales tax revenues, and 19 others had increases of 5 percent or less.

East Coast fares poorly in tax survey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a state by state list of tax revenues for states, according to a study by the Center for the Study of the States at the Nelson Rockefeller Institute of Government at Albany, N.Y.

Seven states are not on the list and were not included in the report because of they did not provide information or information was incomplete: Alaska, Delaware, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wisconsin.

Each state is followed by four numbers. In order, they represent the growth or decline in personal income tax, corporate income tax, sales tax and all taxes.

Administration drops objection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration lifted its objections to legislation creating a commission to probe the savings and loan collapse after being assured the panel would not interfere with criminal prosecutions, Senate sponsors of the bill said Saturday.

Sens. Christopher Bond, R-Mo., and Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., released letters from the departments of Justice and Treasury indicating the administration "dropped its objections" to a Senate-sponsored bill setting up an eight-member bipartisan investigative commission.

Administration officials had said they would fight a rival version of the legislation, the Banking Law Enforcement Act of 1990, passed by the House on July 31, and had spoken out against a proposal by the National Governors' Association last week for such an investigative panel.

The executive and legislative branches of government historically have feuded over companion investigations of various scandals by the Justice Department and congressional committees.

This was dramatized recently in a federal appellate court's decision reversing one of former Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North's Iran-Contra convictions and ordering a lower court to review other convictions to determine whether immunized testimony North gave the Congress was impermissibly used against him by Iran-Contra prosecutors.

Drinks test postive

MIAMI (AP) — Tests found cocaine in eight more bottles of a Colombian soft drink and officials Saturday warned consumers not to drink the beverage, which already caused one case of critical poisoning.

The eight bottles of Pony Malta de Bavaria that tested positive for dissolved cocaine Friday had been collected by government officials from a distributor who supplies the drink to mobile vendors for streetside sales.

Each of the 6.16-ounce bottles contained lethal dosages of up to 10 grams of cocaine, said George Niblack, environmental supervisor for the Dade County Health Department. Niblack said the lethal dosage was 1 gram.

A Miami-area man, Maximo Rene Mendez, 25, drank from a bottle of the soft drink on July 26 and suffered convulsions and cardiac arrest. He was still in a coma Saturday.

Two bottles from a lot Menendez had purchased also tested positive for the drug — one contained 54 grams and the other 37 grams.

Illegal cache found

MIAMI (AP) — Police waited and waited for a driver of a van to return after a minor accident Saturday. Then they found out why he didn't — the van was stuffed with $12 million worth of cocaine.

Metro-Dade police officer Donald Blocker estimated 1,000 pounds of cocaine were packaged in sealed cocaine bricks inside 40 cardboard boxes filling the back of the van.

"The accident was so minor that it probably would have been resolved by the two parties without anything being written" by police, Blocker said. "It looked like the person just panicked."

NEA to study grants

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The deep division in the nation over public support of controversial art was reflected Saturday at a clamorous meeting of the council that advises the chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts.

For three and a half hours, the council members wrangled, sometimes with angry outbursts, over grants involving the performance artists Holly Hughes and Karen Finley, whose work is noted for its sexual content.

In the end, by a vote of 10-6, the council endorsed the proposal of the endowment chairman, John E. Frohnmayer, that five controversial grants recommended by a peer panel be studied by the endowment's legal counsel and then reconsidered.

Midway in the debate Saturday, 16 members of a group called Out, which promotes gay rights, disrupted the meeting and were then removed by the police, though no one was arrested.

Earlier Saturday, the council unanimously supported Frohnmayer's request that it restore two grants to the Institute for Contemporary Art of the University of Pennsylvania, which had organized the Robert Mapplethorpe photography exhibit some members of Congress considered obscene.

Senate OKs defense spending bill

They passed campaign finance 'reform' legislation ... and an environmental protection measure arising from the Exxon Valdez oil spill off Alaska.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a $289 billion defense bill Saturday that cuts $1 billion from President Bush's request for the Strategic Defense Initiative but leaves intact his fiscal 1991 proposal for two B-2 bombers.

In a rush to finish before a summer recess, the Senate adopted, 79-16, a military budget that slashes $18 billion from Bush's request of $307 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

"We have developed a manageable and prudent and responsible reduction in defense expenditures related to the threat," Senate Armed Services Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said shortly before the chamber approved one of the first military budgets in the post-Cold War era.

The Senate package, adopted despite the threat of a presidential veto, calls for a military personnel reduction of 100,000 and elimination of $1.6 billion in procurement money for the MX rail-garrison missile program.

The White House has said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney would recommend a presidential veto because of the SDI total and troop cuts. The objection comes even though the Senate bill is considered the high mark in Congress.

The House, when it returns in September, will likely approve its committee's version of a $283 billion defense bill.

Senators lingered as legislative loners in the Capitol as House members commenced their August recess in the early morning hours. During a marathon session, they passed campaign finance 'reform' legislation, a bill containing assistance for areas hardest hit by AIDS cases and an environmental protection measure arising from the Exxon Valdez oil spill off Alaska.

Passage of the defense bill came after the Senate voted to restructure the SDI program, commonly known as Star Wars, by delaying deployment of the "Brilliant Pebbles" concept.

By a vote of 54-44, the Senate approved a restructuring amendment that leaves intact the chamber's approved total of $3.7 billion for SDI — $1 billion less than Bush proposed.

However, the measure scales back the administration's request for the Brilliant Pebbles concept from $329 million to $129 million.

Nunn criticized the Pentagon for trying four different systems for the SDI program in the past three years while Congress hasn't received "one clue from anybody in this administration" on how to pay for the anti-missile shield.

"No one can tell you where the money's coming from and yet they're charging straight ahead," Nunn said, noting the likely annual cost of $10 billion for SDI.

The amendment comes on the heels of a congressional report that found deploying the first phase of SDI in 1993 would be "premature and fraught with high risk."

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, said that the introduction of Brilliant Pebbles has drastically changed the SDI system's design, leaving it in a state of flux.

Jury still out in Barry drug trial

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The jury in Mayor Marion S. Barry Jr.'s drug and perjury trial deliberated for four hours Saturday but did not reach a verdict.

The jury has now deliberated 10½ hours since being handed the case late Thursday afternoon.

There have been few clues about what progress, if any, is being made on resolution of the 14 charges of drug possession, conspiracy and perjury.

Bush taps Roberts for SEC vacancy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush nominated Washington attorney Richard Y. Roberts on Friday to fill a vacancy on the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Roberts, a former chief of staff to Sen. Richard Shelby, D-Ala., would fill the seat of Joseph Grundfest, who left the five-member commission in January.

The nomination is subject to confirmation by the Senate. No date for confirmation hearings was set.

The SEC regulates the stocks and bonds, the exchanges that trade in them and other financial markets such as mutual funds.

Reunited

J.C. "Jake" Bradley, former Prairie Lee School bus driver, receives a flower from Darlene Livingston Jones at the school reunion on Saturday in Greenwood.

Prairie Lee classmates gather to reminisce

■ The school, which opened in 1907, was consolidated along with the McClintic and Stokes schools into the Greenwood Independent School District in the early 1950s.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

GREENWOOD — Not so long ago and not too far away, school children away from their family farms climbed windmills, skated on frozen ponds, shared box lunches, played hooky by hiding in thickets and got upset when no one came to seek them out.

They kept warm by coal stove and stayed somewhat cool by opening windows and catching breezes.

A daring pupil named Charlie Lay just about won the most-paddled contest by too-often calling his teacher, Georga Pigg, who practiced discipline, "Miss Hog." The teacher "beat the tar out of me," the late Lay once told a classmate.

And pretty little Marijo King, who was 6 in 1907, doesn't remember what her first-grade teacher taught her, if anything. Aided by a governess, she already was reading well before she entered the old Prairie Lee School.

The teacher wasn't inclined to bathe too often.

"And I don't remember anything he taught me at all," recalled Marijo King Collins, 89, at the eighth annual reunion and covered-dish luncheon of Prairie Lee School Saturday in Greenwood. "I remember he smelled bad, and I didn't like him."

The Prairie Lee School, which opened in 1907, served farm and ranch students east of Midland until about 1950, when the Prairie Lee, McClintic and Stokes schools were consolidated to form the Greenwood Independent School District.

Acreage for the school was donated by Mrs. Collins' father, Midland rancher John M. King Sr.

Back then, King also donated land for the Greenwood Baptist Church, the cemetery and "the whole bit," Mrs. Collins recalled.

"Mother's dream was to have a church, and his dream was to have a school," she said. "They both wanted both, but Mother (Mattie King) pushed for the church more, and he pushed for the school. They worked together real good."

After the school consolidation, the old four-room Prairie Lee school building was relocated — moved to south of Midland — and became a watering hole.

"They turned it into a honky-tonk, a tavern, whatever you want to call it," said Livingston, retiring president of the Prairie Lee Reunion. Darlene Jones is taking on the 1991 reunion.

Later on, the old schoolhouse became a barbecue place.

Bertie E. Wilson Soper, 58, another Prairie Lee ex-student, wasn't too fond of the school-turned-tavern conversion.

"My granddaddy would have been a very unhappy man," she surmised. "He was a Baptist minister here — Homer Wren."

Wren was minister of the Greenwood Baptist Church, which was named after two early-day preachers, Green and Wood. In the 1920s, he was the first preacher over at Valley View Baptist Church southeast of Midland.

While considering her grandfather's preaching, Mrs. Soper was filling her plate with the country-style foods at the reunion. The fare ranged from fried chicken and mashed potatoes to black-eyed peas and peaches.

"Nobody can cook black-eyed peas like the people here," she said. "We grew up on black-eyed peas."

Rosie Lee Hart, 62, loaded up her plate. "You can see how we grew up and why we are so big and healthy," she said.

Among those joining in the reunion was W.H. Vanlandingham, principal of the Prairie Lee School in the late 1920s, who left for a better job and in the 1950s returned as principal at Greenwood.

"Do you like retirement?" Vanlandingham, who is closing in on 90, asked 71-year-old Arlie Bryant, a Prairie Lee ex-student. "Tell me the truth."

"No, I really don't," Bryant replied over lunch.

Vanlandingham has retired from education, but he's still working. He farms dryland and irrigated cotton near Seminole in Gaines County. When he was at Prairie Lee in the late 1920s, "everybody farmed," he said.

Work was hard on the farm, and school was strict.

"I'll tell you what," Vanlandingham said. "We had order and discipline. And if we had any time left, we tried to teach 'em something."

Kenneth McMahan, 72, recalled one particular Prairie Lee school day.

"I remember when me and Al Bradley played hooky and hid in the thicket. And we got mad, because nobody came out and looked for us."

A latter-day Prairie Lee student, Dee Pigg Rhoads, 57, recalled the closeness of families in the rural community and the rapport between teachers and students. "The teachers would play baseball and basketball with us during recess," Mrs. Rhoads said.

"You knew everybody around," said Mrs. Rhoads, whose mother Georga Pigg, 91, taught at Prairie Lee and later in Midland.

"She was very strict," she said of her mother, who attended the reunion. "She was very loving. She was an excellent teacher. She drilled the kids."

Leona "Lee" Meissner Foster, who was a Prairie Lee first-grader in the mid-1930s, said the school provided a major part of the social life of boys and girls.

"Other than picking cotton and chopping cotton and feeding the pigs and cows, going to school and to church was our social life," Mrs. Foster reflected. "Everybody was family, and everybody was friends."

NEA director takes shots at Williams

■ Clayton Williams' education program comes under fire at a regional Texas State Teachers Association leadership seminar.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams came under fire Saturday when national and state education leaders sounded off on political issues.

TSTA members of Region XVIII gathered to attend a day-long seminar on leadership development. Texas State Supreme Court Justice Oscar Mauzy, on the campaign trail for Supreme Court chief justice, opened the seminar Friday evening with a dinner speech.

Ms. Duncan supported voting Ms. Richards into the governor's office.

"Imagine what it would be like to actually work with a governor who has taught school," she said. "Imagine being able to call her on the phone and request her leadership on our issues, knowing she understands the issues."

"Unfortunately, all the media hoopla and outcry over Williams' unfortunate jokes about rape and his confessions about patronizing 'service' houses has overshadowed his agenda for our state, especially our schools," she said.

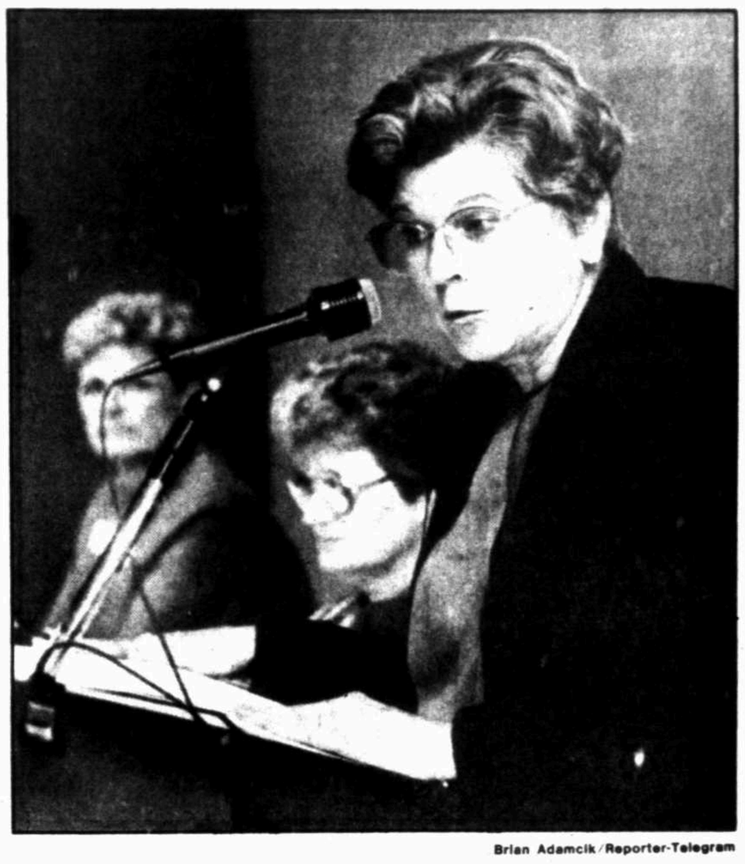
Ms. Duncan said Williams' education platform of privatization would "destroy our public schools and our jobs. His policies would fire all education support personnel — bus, food service and janitorial service — and turn their duties over to private companies."

The NEA representative also said Williams' plan to allow parents to select their childrens' schools would "set teachers on a migratory teaching circuit, following students from school to school and district to district."

Ms. Duncan decried Williams' endorsement of deregulation of the public school system.

"The key ingredient in Williams' education plank is the abolishment of the Texas Education Agency to totally deregulate education in the state and give absolute local autonomy to the school board," she said.

"We're tempted to just poohpooh Williams as another crackpot with a jackpot trying to buy the office," Ms. Duncan said. "But recent political polls tell us that we had better take him seriously."



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Sue Hovey, NEA Executive Committee representative, addresses education issues at the Texas State Teachers Association leadership development seminar in Odessa Saturday.

Ms. Duncan said it was ironic that Williams' television ads endorse a plan to pay for the first two years of college tuitions and books for low-income students, while he is opposed to spending money for pre-kindergarten programs.

Sue Hovey, NEA executive committee member and keynote speaker for the TSTA seminar, agreed.

"Elementary students are the most significantly at risk," Ms. Hovey said. "We need to help keep students in school by intervening at an early age."

Ms. Hovey said 1.1 million students drop out of school every year. "That amounts to one busload of students in every state every day of the week," she said.

Ms. Hovey endorsed "Operation Jumpstart," a one-on-one dropout intervention program for elementary school children.

"To implement this program in every American school, it would cost $2.2 billion," she said. "The NEA challenges President Bush to consider this program. The federal government could fund $1.1 billion and local districts could fund the rest."

She said Operation Jumpstart is a "motivational, not remedial program."

"Several weeks of individual attention could instill motivation," Ms. Hovey said. "This individual attention could cut the dropout rate in half in 10 years."

The NEA member said the American public is placing too much emphasis on abortion and issues involving "conception to birth."

"After birth, who cares about the child?" she asked. "We also have 500,000 teen-agers giving birth and not finishing school every year. They need to learn — not only calculus — but child care. Some people may say that we shouldn't be involved in these issues, but if we are not involved, who will be?"

Ms. Hovey said she is tired of the American public blaming educators for drug abuse, promiscuity and crime.

"I don't teach this stuff in school," she said, challenging parents, governors and legislators to become "accountable" for children.

"Parents drop their children off at school in the morning and pick them up in the afternoon expecting them to have all the social, intellectual and moral skills they need to face the world," Ms. Hovey said. "If they don't have all the skills they need, then the public says the 'school fails.'"

Ms. Duncan said education organizations are also designing a statewide health insurance plan for teachers.

"Our big push in the next legislative session will be salary increases and the adoption of a state funded health insurance policy for every school employee," she said. Ms. Duncan admitted that both of the big ticket items would require a raise in taxes.

Although Ms. Hovey said asking for salary increases was "self-serving," she said teachers are in the teaching profession because they care about education.

"We lead students to the fountain of knowledge. But we can't

Midland residents will take stand against crime Tuesday

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Law enforcement officials are asking local residents to take a stand against crime and become acquainted with their neighbors at the same time.

It's all part of participating in the seventh annual National Night Out Against Crime this Tuesday evening.

"It's an annual reminder to look out for your neighbor," Midland Police Lt. Jerry Morris said.

According to Joan Lewellen, a member of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission, about 40 Neighborhood Watch groups in the city and county of Midland will be gathering for the night out.

"One night out of the year we encourage groups to meet (including) new groups or to rekindle the fire in old groups," Ms. Lewellen said.

But the night out isn't just for Neighborhood Watch groups, Ms. Lewellen added.

"We encourage everyone to turn on their lights as a signal to the criminals that we don't want them around," she said.

More than 7,000 communities and 20 million citizens across the United States are expected to take part in the symbolic stand against crime this year, according to the Midland Crime Prevention Commission.

According to law enforcement officials, the night out encourages people to be aware of what's going on in their neighborhood. Knowing one's neighbor makes people more aware of suspicious activity next door or across the street — the theory behind Neighborhood Watch programs.

Ms. Lewellen agreed.

"If you don't know your neighbor, you don't know what looks suspicious," she said, adding that she had a friend in Oregon who was burglarized, as his neighbor watched the entire incident. The neighbor thought the burglars were the victim's children.

According to Morris, old-fashioned neighborliness is especially beneficial in solving and preventing home burglaries.

"Where Neighborhood Watches are active, the burglary rate is down in those areas. It's kind of like the buddy system. ... You take more interest in a buddy or friend than someone you don't know," Morris said.

One example, Morris said, is a neighbor calling police concerning a home being burglarized when the residents are out of town. The time factor and a witness give the police an edge to solving the crime.

"It gives us more tools to fight crime with ... and more information to work with," Morris said.

In cooperation with the night out Monday, an "Angels Night Out," a Midland Angels baseball game will be sponsored by the Midland Crime Prevention and KWES Magic 102 FM. The first 500 fans will receive light sticks.

DEATHS

Program will honor volunteers

Staff Report

WASHINGTON — Congressman Lamar Smith has announced a program to recognize outstanding volunteers in the 21st Congressional District of Texas, which includes Midland.

Smith is seeking nominations for the monthly award program that is scheduled to begin in October. Nominees cannot be paid for their activities and must be involved in an ongoing program with proven results. An individual, couple or group may be nominated.

The program also will be announced on the September edition of "In Touch with Congressman Lamar Smith," his new monthly cable show.

Gregg Petersmeyer will be a guest on that show. He is the director of the President's National Service Office, better known as the "Thousand Points of Light." Smith's regional program will be patterned after the national one.

To nominate an individual, district residents may write the congressional field office nearest them. In Midland this is: Lamar Smith (R), District 21, 201 W. Wall, Suite 104, Midland, 79701.

Nominations should include the nominee's name, age, address, home and business phone numbers and a brief description of why the nominee should be chosen.

Rural schools meeting slated

Staff Report

Southwest Educational Development Laboratory's Rural, Small Schools Initiative, will present the conference "Country Stars: Rural, Small Schools Guiding the Way to School Improvement," Thursday and Friday in Austin, free of charge.

The statewide conference is for education professionals and policymakers interested in rural education. Small group sessions will address Chapter One Rural schools, school improvement partnership process, linking school and community services and staff development.

Keynote speakers will include Texas Sen. Bill Haley, author of major Texas education reform legislation, Betty Dillon-Peterson, director of curriculum and staff development in Lincoln Public Schools of Nebraska, and Daryl Hobbs, rural sociologist from the University of Missouri.

The same conference will be offered Aug. 13-14 in Albuquerque, N.M.

For information call (512) 476-6861.

The woman said she had been assaulted in the city, then taken east of the city and sexually assaulted, sheriff's department reports indicate.

Lee High School Rebel Muster set for this week

The Robert E. Lee High School 1990-91 Rebel Muster will be held at the Lee High School Youth Center. Following are the dates and times for the Muster:

- Seniors: Wednesday
  - A through M: 8:00-12:00
  - N through Z: 1:00-4:00
- Juniors: Thursday
  - A through M: 8:00-12:00
  - N through Z: 1:00-4:00
- Sophomores: Friday
  - A through M: 8:00-12:00
  - N through Z: 1:00-4:00

Necessary items for Muster:

- A student photo ID (or $5.00 to have it replaced). IDs are needed to complete the Muster.
- Check or cash for school pictures — either an $8.00 or $10.00 packet (these are optional purchases).
- Check or cash to purchase a yearbook, which costs $30.00 (this is an optional purchase).
- Check or cash for reserved parking — $25.00 — limited to seniors and juniors, or as spaee permits.
- Check or cash to clear any outstanding book charges. These charges must be cleared before you can begin Muster.
- Separate checks — each payable to Lee High School in the appropriate amount.

If a student does not come to Muster:

- The student's class schedule will be dropped from the computer.
- The student will have to reschedule. Only limited elective classes are available at this time, and the student probably will not be able to get into the electives which were originally selected.
- The student's name will not be dropped from the computer, only the student's courses.
- If a student absolutely cannot attend muster, the student must contact a counselor so that the student's schedule can be held until he or she can pick it up.

For more information contact Linda Jolly, senior counselor; George Harris, junior counselor; or Nona Ray, sophomore counselor; at 689-1600.

Body in coffin identified; Cause of death unknown

HOUSTON (AP) — Medical examiners are awaiting toxicology test results to learn what killed a 24-year-old man whose body was found in a coffin wrapped in plastic.

The body of James Robert Lutz was discovered July 25 in a Montrose area townhouse near downtown Houston. He was identified through fingerprints, said police Sgt. Ralph Gonzales.

Police sources said Lutz likely died from suffocation, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Homicide detectives refused to speculate, but after Lutz's death, police received several calls from people who said Lutz may have died during a bizarre sexual practice known as "mummifying."

The practice involves wrapping somebody in plastic sheets while others watch, police said.

Lutz's body was wrapped in plastic and his head was swathed with another piece of material, police said. His feet were bound with duct tape.

His body was discovered by a friend who entered the townhouse to look for some tools. He went to an upstairs bedroom and noticed a foul odor coming from the casket, police said.

An autopsy showed Lutz may have been dead about a week.

The man who lives in the residence had been in Veterans Hospital for surgery since July 22, and has refused to talk to police.

PRAIRIE: Woman recalls closeness of families

(From 1B)

She was from a farm family and was born on a dairy at Fairgrounds and Cloverdale roads just southeast of Midland.

Her father just about survived the Great Depression of the 1930s.

"He was surviving the Depression, but the drought with the Depression got him," Mrs. Foster recalled. He went "flat broke," left the dairy, and "moved out here to the farm."

Of those early days, Mrs. Foster recalled a Prairie Lee bus driver, farmer Jake Bradley, now 77.

"If anybody was slightly misbehaving or picking on one another (in the bus), he would just look up in the mirror, you'd see his eyes up in the mirror, and you got 'good' real quick," she said.

But Bradley said the students hardly caused him any trouble, at least "not to speak of."

TSTA: Salary increase will be next target

(From 1B)

make them drink," she said. "Our job is just to make them thirsty."

Ms. Duncan said inspiring students shouldn't be a problem. "Teachers and school employees are used to pulling off miracles every day."

The TSTA announced they also will endorse Bob Bullock for lieutenant governor, Gib Lewis as House speaker, Carl Parker to chair the Senate Education Committee, Ernestine Glossbrenner to chair the house committee and Dan Morales for attorney general.

"It is very critical that we throw our hearts, souls and checkbooks into the November elections," Ms. Duncan said. "Our endorsed slate of candidates are pro-education."

Volunteers fire funeral salute for Confederate soldier

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Gray-clad volunteers will fire a funeral salute for a Confederate officer today more than 128 years after he was killed in the Civil War Battle of Glorieta Pass.

A Kentucky tombstone will mark the grave of Maj. John Shropshire, who had been buried until 1987 in an unmarked plot at the battlefield southeast of Santa Fe. A Glorieta landowner unearthed the graves during construction work.

Shropshire was one of three Confederate soldiers whose remains were positively identified this spring by Museum of New Mexico archaeologists with assistance from the Smithsonian Institution.

"The family knew that he had gone to Texas with his older brothers and that he had been killed, but we had no idea where his remains were until someone found the graves recently," said W.O. Shropshire, whose great-great-grandfather was the major's brother.

Shropshire, 28, was killed March 28, 1862. He was among 1,200 Confederate soldiers defeated by 800 Union troops at the mountain pass.

Museum officials had been trying to locate Shropshire descendants since his identity was established.

OPEC reliance must be ended

The United States has been living on "borrowed time" the past several years, with no realistic energy policy in use and with dependence on imported oil increasing. It couldn't last forever and the beginning of the end may have come Thursday when Iraqi soldiers stormed into neighboring Kuwait, raising the specter of open warfare in the OPEC nations.

If that develops — and possibly even if it doesn't — the United States oil "pipeline" to the OPEC nations could be severed, bringing back the gasoline lines of 1973.

Of course, there are numerous other considerations in the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. More than 4,000 Americans are reported to be in Kuwait and potentially endangered by the Iraqi attack. Their fate must be of prime concern to President George Bush.

There is the need to prevent any further escalation of violence in the OPEC nations. Already — and to its credit — the Soviet Union, Iraq's biggest arms supplier, has suspended all weapons shipments to the area. While that's an important first step, along with the condemnation of the U.N. Security Council and the outcry from the world community, more needs to be done immediately.

President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev should present a united front against Iraq's aggression and demand it's immediate withdrawal from Kuwait, thus illustrating the superpowers' intolerance of the invasion.

Yet all those steps will only constitute reaction to an intolerable assault. To prevent the same dilemma from recurring in the future, what must happen is that the United States and other world oil consumers must begin to cut their dependence on OPEC's oil supply. That won't be easy because OPEC already has demonstrated that it can control the world supply, to an extent, and in that manner can control the price of oil.

That's why Iraq invaded Kuwait; the Iraqis had charged that Kuwait was stealing oil from a border region both nations claim. The Iraqis also accused Kuwait of depriving Iraq of oil revenues by cheating on OPEC production quotas, thus driving oil prices down.

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, who represents Midland and the rest of the 21st Congressional District, pinpointed the problem the United States is facing when he noted, "Our oil supply and prices are determined by a half-dozen OPEC oil ministers sitting halfway around the world. That's a dangerous and intolerable situation."

To George Bush's credit, his administration has been working for months on a national energy policy. This crisis merely developed before the policy was complete and no doubt will speed its development.

Although Uncle Sam's hands may be tied in responding to the Iraq invasion with effective force immediately, President Bush and the Congress should begin to cut dependence on OPEC now. It could be accomplished and legitimate control of the situation returned to the Congress if the domestic oil industry were given the necessary initiatives to produce more oil on the U.S. mainland and the continental shelf. The domestic industry has been permitted to deteriorate over nearly a decade and putting the oil fields back into production won't be simple or quick. It will take time and plenty of money. But a lesson learned hard is still a lesson learned.

This nation cannot permit itself to be placed at the mercy of the OPEC oil ministers ever again.

RICK BROWN
'Teaching whole child' not just empty phrase

AUSTIN — The unfortunate catch-phrase is "teaching the whole child" — a term fraught with pomposity, conjuring images of stuffy education bureaucrats assured in their knowledge of what's best for kids.

Brown

Let us teach the "whole child," we imagine them saying in introduction to a lecture we don't want to hear. The terminology tells us nothing of what is to come, but does establish right off who's the one with superior knowledge.

So what is this whole child with whom we are dealing?

The reference is to the whirlwind of negative social forces kids these days tote to school along with their Ninja Turtle lunch boxes.

Drugs are foremost among them, but there are lots of others, and not all are confined to a single economic level.

There are the problems of latch-key children, who come from families with only one parent and or in which both parents work.

Related to this are the physical and mental problems that stem from neglect, which may or may not have additional roots in parental drug use, as well as physical and sexual abuse.

Peer pressure and an over-commercialized society also account for increased attention to superficial things in the school yard.

The upshot is that kids today carry more emotional baggage than they used to. There are more choices to make, and making the wrong choices can be more detrimental.

Education systems that miss this crucial point are not, as they say, teaching the whole child.

In Texas, we don't have to look too far to find the effects of past educational failures; the statistics by now are familiar.

Eighty-five percent of the inmates in our burgeoning prison system are drop-outs. Cities estimate that about the same percentage of all crimes are related to drugs in one way or another.

Compare the $12,000-plus the Texas criminal justice system spends on average to hold one inmate for one year with the $3,000-plus we are spending per pupil per year on average and you can see the advantage of catching problems early.

Faced with this kind of challenge, we should thank the business-funded Texas Research League for pointing out that the business community itself may need some educating in this regard.

A survey of 600 league members found many positive indications that Texas business is not as mired in the past as attitudes voiced by some leaders might indicate.

The survey found overwhelming support for such proposals as increased teacher pay, more early childhood education programs, a longer school year and smaller class sizes.

JACK ANDERSON
Chilean arms merchant supplies Iraq

WASHINGTON — On the wall of Carlos Cardoen's factory are the photos of two men who have shaped his career. One is despised, the other deposed. One is Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, arguably the most dangerous man in the world, the mad dog of the Middle East for the 1990s. The other is General Augusto Pinochet, the dethroned brutal dictator of Chile.

Anderson

Pinochet gave Carlos Cardoen his start as an international arms merchant, and Hussein has been his best customer. Cardoen, a Chilean and the largest defense manufacturer in Latin America, not only keeps Iraq supplied with arms, but he has built factories there so Iraq can make its own bombs.

Cardoen's latest deal skates dangerously close to breaking a U.S. ban on sales of American arms to either Chile or Iraq. He is remodeling some old American helicopters into what could easily become an Iraqi combat fleet.

Both the State Department and the Federal Aviation Administration are quietly looking into the Cardoen deal to see who, if anyone, could be breaking the law if the deal is consummated.

Cardoen's ties to Iraq go way back. He built his business on the back of the Persian Gulf War, making cluster bombs for Iraq.

Iraq has few friends, especially among the industrialized nations with weapons to sell, so it counts on Cardoen to be the intermediary, buying weapons that Hussein can't get through the front door.

Cardoen, a millionaire many times over, is good at what he does. He captured the Third World market by designing an array of simple, inexpensive bombs, grenades, armored trucks and the like showcased in a slick catalog.

But you won't find his latest offering in the catalog. Cardoen is keeping a low profile on his plans to retrofit old American Bell 206 helicopters (nicknamed LongRangers) and sell them to as yet undisclosed clients. Publicly, Cardoen Industries calls the retrofitting a civilian job for cropdusting, firefighting and fishery surveillance. At least that's what Cardoen's American representatives told the FAA when they applied for FAA certification of the retrofitted helicopter.

But a Cardoen brochure that our associate Melinda Maas obtained in Chile touts the military attack capabilities of the helicopter once Cardoen is finished with it. Considering Cardoen's reliance on Iraq as a regular customer, U.S. officials are concerned that either Iraq or Chile will end up with a lethal weapon made partially from U.S. technology.

Cardoen officials told us they are studying the military uses of the helicopter, but would not confirm whether Iraq was a pending customer. "We have designed a new version of the Bell helicopter which is entirely a civilian version, but could be developed at a later point to serve other purposes," Cardoen Vice President Jorge Ochoa told us.

He denied reports that Iraq had put in an order for 50 of the retrofitted LongRangers. "We do not know at this point who we will sell the helicopters to. Once we receive FAA certification, then we will look at the market," Ochoa said. He added, "We are not doing anything that the United States has not been aware of all along."

That remains to be proven. Cardoen's U.S. affiliate, Global Helicopter Technology Inc. of Hurst, Texas, applied to the FAA for certification of the remodeled Bell 206 as a civilian helicopter. Cardoen doesn't need the FAA's permission to sell the helicopters from his base in Santiago, Chile, to other foreign countries. But the FAA review is considered a seal of approval that aircraft buyers around the world — even Iraq — prefer to have on the merchandise they buy.

The U.S. government doesn't want to put that seal of approval on anything that might put U.S. technology in the wrong hands. FAA officials told us they were only looking at the modified LongRanger as a civilian helicopter, but they had heard rumors about a sale to Iraq and were concerned.

A law authored by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called the Kennedy Amendment, bans sales of U.S. arms technology to Chile. It dates back to the abusive Pinochet regime in 1976. There is a separate ban on the sale of U.S. arms to Iraq. It remains to be seen who, if anyone, could violate those laws in the LongRanger deal.

Bell, the original manufacturer of the helicopters, is not involved. Cardoen is buying used LongRangers from other sources. Bell sources told us they are cautiously keeping an eye on what Cardoen is doing. Bell no longer makes the helicopter, but there are 1,200 of them around the world. Cardoen apparently has only one so far that he is using as a prototype.

Barr's rendition was bad, but not shocking

Roseanne Barr, purveyor of vulgar entertainment for the TV audience, ran afoul of President Bush last week. The president said he was offended by Miss Barr's singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" at a professional baseball game in San Diego.

Baker

Miss Barr is a mighty power in television, but so was Michael Dukakis a mighty power in Massachusetts until Bush started saluting the flag, and look at him now, poor devil.

When you ruffle Bush's patriotic feathers you'd better smile, pal. Miss Barr refuses. She will not apologize. The president didn't like the way she sang it? Let him try to sing it, she said.

With this attitude, she may end up so desperate for employment that People magazine will soon find her struggling to get by on welfare checks.

The president was not in San Diego to hear Miss Barr's performance live. He must have heard it, as I did, on several television news shows next day. Either because it was a slow news day or because Miss Barr is a huge money maker for ABC, both NBC and CBS showed it on their network news shows.

The Washington local stations, which love everything that's ghastly, gave it the doting coverage they normally reserve for lumpy body bags en route to the morgue.

On first watching the performance, I was puzzled about why it was supposed to be shocking. Various reporters said the great star, who is famous for comedy after all, had done a funny, or comic, or satirical treatment of the anthem.

This seemed to be stretching for scandal. All I heard was a woman who probably can't even sing in the shower struggling before a huge audience with a song whose difficulties might test the powers of Joan Sutherland.

I figured Miss Barr had got in over her head when she agreed to come to the ball park and sing, had discovered her limitations too late but was doing her best, dreadful though it was, because the show must go on.

This judgment was based on my own experience of trying to sing our national anthem at sporting events. I gave it up long ago and now merely move my lips silently, like almost everybody else in the stands.

The view that she was making light of the anthem was supported by her performance at the end when she clutched her crotch and spat on the ground, in parody of baseball players' two favorite ways for killing time between pitches. This struck me not as disrespect, but as evidence of the dreary lives many show people feel obliged to live to earn their millions.

Some questions should be asked before Miss Barr is sentenced to the doom of Michael Dukakis. For instance, why must all professional sports events open with the national anthem? Doesn't this debase the anthem by using it to create a false notion that the big-money people governing sports are engaged in patriotic endeavor?

GEORGE WILL
Hussein more brutal, vicious than Mussolini

WASHINGTON--The anesthetizing tranquillity of the post-Cold War world has suddenly been driven away by Iraq's emphatic reminder of the nature of the pre-Cold War world. This echo of the preceding 30 or so centuries suggests how much like the past the future may be.

Will

It is tempting, but misleading, to compare the strutting Saddam Hussein to Mussolini, and thereby diminish Hussein, making him seem, as Mussolini now does through the obscuring mists of history, more absurd than menacing. Mussolini was the very junior partner in the Axis, and was last seen hanging from his heels at a Milan gas station. Hussein, too, is unlikely to die old, venerated, in dignified retirement, or in his sleep. But he is unlike Mussolini in two significant particulars.

Hussein radiates a more virulent and personal viciousness than Mussolini did. (Mussolini's internal-security apparatus was evil but not as brutal as Hussein's and it is unimaginable that Mussolini would have used poison gas against Italians as Hussein has against Iraq's Kurds.) And Hussein disposes of far more military might, relative to neighbors, than Mussolini did.

However, Hussein is a very 1930s figure. He issues ultimata. He masses troops on international borders ostensibly to give weight to the diplomacy of ultimata but actually to demonstrate, with contemptuous clarity, that ultimata are perfunctory preludes to the crossing of borders.

The U.S. response to this, particularly regarding reassurances to Saudi Arabia, will probably be influenced, and for the better, by the fact that today's President is the last of a well-schooled line. Unless Lloyd Bentsen, the former bomber pilot, runs and wins in 1992, George Bush, the former fighter pilot, will be America's last President from the World War II generation. For that generation, war was the enveloping, formative experience and the word "Munich" is freighted with warning when it denotes analogies.

The lesson of Munich was: When it is necessary to confront an expansionist dictator, sooner is better than later. As Douglas MacArthur said, in war all tragedy can be summarized in two words–"too late." Too late perceiving, too late preparing for danger.

Democracy is not, as Ronald Reagan and others seem to assume, the certain solvent of danger. Democracy does not necessarily render a society pacific, just as a dictatorship (for example, Franco's Spain) does not necessarily manifest aggressive dynamism. But democracy does generally help domesticate nations. Therefore it is well to note the following:

Democracy has recently been sprouting here, there and, it almost seems, everywhere between the cracks in the crumbling concrete of despotisms. It has been sprouting not only in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, but in Latin America, too. However, the world still waits and watches, without grounds for near-term hope, for the first democracy in the so-called "Arab world."

In the 42 years since Israel was established on one-sixth of one percent of the land in "the Arab world," the reaction in the region to the existence of Israel has been unanimously hostile, and this unanimity has obscured the fact that the phrase "the Arab world" is only a geographical, not a political expression. The most envenomed and bloody relationships, and most volatile confrontations, do not involve Israel.

The "blame Israel first (and last, and in between)" brigade is large and growing, here and abroad. But it should be given pause by Hussein. Iraq's act is redundant evidence of this truth:

The existence of Israel, and of "the Palestinian question," usually has precious little–and often, as in this case, nothing–to do with the largest and most dangerous doings in the Middle East. Today it is especially apparent that Israel is the all-purpose but implausible alibi for the various pathologies that convulse many Arab nations, and relations between them.

Readers views on: Smoking law

Law will protect family's health

I am thrilled to see that our city is considering a smoking ordinance and want to publicly endorse this positive, healthy action. It is not my desire to get people to stop smoking cigarettes. The reason for my strong support is to protect mine and my community's health from the damaging effects of passive smoke.

Cigarette smoke does the greatest day-to-day harm to people. In fact, it is the number one cause of disease in America. Smoking-related disorders cause 340,000 premature deaths each year and generate $26 billion in medical care costs. Research is revealing that passive smoke is harmful to one's health. Did you know that non-smoking women whose husbands smoke are three times more likely to have a heart attack than wives with non-smoking spouses? Folks, passive smoke, like cigarette smoke from someone that is smoking in a restaurant, is damaging. If cigarette smoking can bring about health ailments and illnesses, then passive smoking must be just as destructive.

Health is a fundamental right which has been historically recognized and supported as one of the basic human rights. As a result, sanitation and environmental regulations have been developed and enforced. There are many governmental actions that have protected our right not to have our health endangered by the actions of others. A government's first line of defense to protect a community's health is through health policy, i.e., a smoking ordinance.

People are quick to react with the intent of protecting their health when an AIDS victim is exposed to the public. Yet, when citizens try to protect themselves from the damaging effects of passive smoke, they are accused of denying smokers their rights. Another point to consider is how we deplore drugs and addictions, as a community, yet we do not want to jeopardize the "rights" of smokers.

People choose to smoke. That is their right and choice. However, when that right jeopardizes a basic human right such as health, a big problem exists. Courtesy and manners, as well we know, are not working. The time has come for us, as a community, to take responsibility by supporting our city council in establishing a city smoking ordinance.

'Big lie' includes 'right' to smoke

The Big Lie is still alive! Hitler must be very proud, somewhere. Some still claim the right to experiment with and kill innocent people! Hitler claimed his right given of God. Smokers claim theirs from the Constitution. I accept neither postulation. Remember, genocide was claimed a right by the Fuehrer. He never sold me.

No authority which grants a privilege, under certain specific conditions, constitutes it a right under any circumstance! At the USPS, where I formerly worked, it was successfully argued by the "smokers' rights group" that although it was stated in the Employment Rules Manual, "Smoking is a privilege and not a right. It must not be allowed where it discomforts non-smoking employees," over a period of time it had come to be thought of as a right, and would be very difficult to withdraw.

So you see, as in most cases the right was actually a grab. Over many years working at the postal service smokers never gave me a break, not even after it was demonstrated that tobacco smoke products make me ill! My doctor requested a smoke-free environment for me, but since the P.O. would not comply I was forced to take an early retirement.

It has been devastating to my retirement annuity. Should I have worked to age 65 as I intended, my annuity would have been about $200 a month more. I estimate that I have lost in the neighborhood of $6,000 in the past five years, and am locked into that for the rest of my life.

Though it did not help me, but to the good fortune of other P.O. employees following, another agency superior to that of my former employer mandated drastic restrictions on smoking which were implemented in about a year of my retirement. At Midland Postal installations asthmatics and allergy sufferers no longer have to tolerate a condition over which they formerly had no control ... investigate!

Smoke can cause illness in some

Most non-smokers' complaints deal with obnoxious fumes and odors. Valid as these may be, some of us have other complaints. There are those of us who have maladies that are aggravated by smoke: allergies, emphysema and other lung diseases, and glaucoma. Through 17 years of chemotherapy for glaucoma control, my eyes have become increasingly sensitive to smoke, regardless of source, but especially from cigarette smoke.

It is most aggravating to be subjected to cigarette smoke in restaurants, in City Hall, in theaters and other public places. One of the most annoying cases where smoke is inflicted on trapped occupants is in public elevators. Although this is against state law, rarely is it enforced either by building management or the police.

I strongly support segregated smoking and non-smoking areas in bars, restaurants, theaters and all government buildings. And it's high time that non-smokers start voting with their feet, their dollars and their ballots to remove this cruel and unusual punishment which is inflicted daily on innocent non-smokers.

The Midland City Council should realize that where there's smoke, there's fire. And if THEY won't accommodate the non-smokers, maybe we can elect some others who will.

Basin has second humane society

This letter is to correct a statement made in your Monday July 23, 1990, article about this year's Cause for Paws event. You stated in your write-up that the SPCA is the only humane society between Dallas and El Paso. This statement is incorrect.

There is another humane society here in Midland. It is called the Humane Society of the Permian Basin and is also known by the name "Friends of the Animals."

The HSPB has on many occasions funded various projects for the SPCA. We feel we are all promoting animal welfare. Our donations come primarily from individuals wanting to help animals. We have no annual fund raisers; however we support the SPCA in their fund-raising — the HSPB believes strongly in controlling the pet population through education and neutering.

We help indigent people with their pet problems. We offer a partial adoption through the City of Midland Animal Control for people who cannot pay the full adoption. We offer low cash spay and neuter for anyone seeking it. Our organization is small in numbers but we welcome anyone to join us whose primary interest is a better life for all animals.

We applaud the SPCA, however, they aren't the only society between Dallas and El Paso and we wanted you to know as we feel sure you always strive to repeat correct information. Thank you and anyone seeking help can call 689-0999 and leave a message to receive a call back for help.

Can you help meet library challenge?

The Reporter-Telegram of July 24 reported the "challenge" grant from Abell-Hanger of $300,000 to expand the library.

It will take the effort of the entire community to raise the money to match this grant. Some interested citizens have indicated a willingness to contribute to this undertaking. Any donation to the fund may be mailed to Friends of the Midland Public Library, Box 1191, Midland, Texas 79702. Checks may be made payable to the Friends also and identified for "Library Expansion Fund."

The "Friends" have agreed to receive and take custody of all funds received until the county has appointed a coordinator to take charge.

We believe this is a very worthwhile project as our public library serves all citizens of Midland County equally without discrimination.

Fireman's family offers its thanks

It's never easy to say goodbye to a loved one. Many people helped the Mills family and me in the recent loss of my father, Leonard E. Mills Sr., and we would like to express our gratitude to the following organizations who helped in the funeral arrangements: the Midland and Odessa Firefighters Associations and other regional and state firefighters associations, the City of Midland, the many people who came to show their love and respect for him.

These people did a tremendous job organizing the procession, helping find a chaplain and minister. Their compassion and support was overwhelming.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Leonard Mills was a Midland fireman who died of a heart attack early July 28, shortly after fighting a car fire.

Group will oppose 'halfway house'

Would you like a prison in your backyard? Midland City Council has already approved a halfway house for criminals to be located within our city limits. One hundred criminals guilty of such crimes as auto theft, burglary, and "hot check" writing are to live here on their honor without any means of confinement. If these criminals had honor in the first place, would they be in prison?

The proposed location of the halfway house is the Leisure Colony Motel which is in the middle of a residential section of Midland, many of whose residents are elderly and widowed having lived here for many years. There are also many small businesses in this area which will be affected. I do not believe that Midland needs more crime of this nature.

The investors in this venture will not reveal their names unless the halfway house is successful. They claim they will be creating 28 new jobs, thus boosting our economy. However, they fail to mention the 100 jobless people who will be moving into our community.

You may say none of this concerns you; however this halfway house will be a precedent for future facilities of this nature. Will the next one be in your backyard? Let's band together and keep this private prison for profit out of our city!

Please contact your city council member and the Midland City Planning Department today! There will be a meting Monday, August 6, at 3:30 p.m. to make the final decision on this matter. Please attend this meeting at City Hall to keep more criminals from entering our city.

44 trees per diaper unlikely equation

There is a possibility that your newspaper needs a staff mathematician to examine your releases. Now we learn from the newspaper of July 24 that 18 billion dirty diapers are thrown away each year and that they require the pulp of 800 billion trees.

That is obviously more than 44 trees per diaper and seems a bit excessive unless very small trees are used. In any event this data needs checking.

SPEAKING OUT

In truth, I'm pleased flag amendment failed

By Don Handley

Don Handley, a Vietnam War veteran who returned to Midland in 1983, is a 1961 graduate of Midland High School and an aspiring writer. He is employed in a local retail store.

Please excuse me if I breathe a sigh of relief for the failure of Congress to pass that amendment, supposedly protecting the flag from "physical desecration."

For the record, I am not some kook who carries a deep hatred for the United States. I know what the flag is, and what it stands for. I've been present at too many military funerals, where flags were lifted off coffins containing men who died serving this country. I've also been at the other end helping to recover bodies out of crashed aircraft on the runways of DaNang, Vietnam. No one need remind me of the flag, and the people who died in service.

I find it almost incomprehensible that the actions of a few people can divert the attention of the executive and legislative branches of our government from urgent, real problems and put our "leaders" into a name-calling debate over who among us is the most patriotic. I find it reprehensible that certain politicians would impugn the motives, and question the patriotism of those of us who sincerely think the best interests of the people are best served by leaving the Bill of Rights as it was handed to us by the Founding Fathers.

I would urge people to look closely at any office-seeker (regardless of party affiliation) who might be tempted to use this as an election-year issue, and retain a sense of healthy skepticism as to their fitness to hold public office.

In this country, we are faced with a savings and loan bailout crisis, AIDS, budget deficits, drugs killing our kids, a disintegrating highway infrastructure, just to mention a few. These problems are going to require expensive solutions and courageous votes by our leaders. This flag-burning non-issue has given some politicians a chance to capitalize on an issue that costs next to nothing, and has potential for a good PR return, to enhance their careers, as if public service was ever meant to be a career.

I submit the real patriots of this land will be the ones who love what the flag stands for (as I do); who render appropriate honors to the flag (as I do). They will admit the flag as a symbol stands for both the good and bad in this country. You may not see them making a public demonstration of their respect for the flag very often. They will be the ones who are working, trying to find solutions for the major problems I mentioned earlier.

Put another way, they will be working to make the good better, and to correct what is bad. They will cast their votes with the same courage that a group of people in Philadelphia put their names on a piece of paper — 214 years ago — knowing full well they were putting their necks inside a British rope. They will exhibit the same courage of the crash rescue people I saw at DaNang, risking their own lives to pull people from crashed and burning aircraft.

They are the ones who know the flag as a symbol — the Constitution — and the people of this nation are strong enough to withstand the attention-getting antics of a few individuals.

America's future looking bright

Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

SAN SIMEON — In a recent column, I wrote that the gloom-and-doom talk about the long-term future of the American economy was myth, not fact.

Hearst

The doomsayers also contend that the United States is globally in decline, that it has lost world political and economic leadership.

That, too, is a myth that was exposed this past week in a New York Times article.

Written by Alfred Balk, author of the forthcoming book "The Myth of American Eclipse: The New Golden Age," (Transaction Books), the article cited facts showing that America leads the world by far and is likely to continue doing so.

"Since the late Reagan years, we've heard a media and political refrain: the U.S. is in decline. Japan is the coming No. 1 power," wrote Balk, a well-known journalist, editor and former publisher of the World Press Review.

"Is this rational?" he asked. "After all, we have twice Japan's population and gross national product, and our political, cultural and economic weight has Americanized the world."

He cited a Pentagon projection that in the year 2010 our gross national product will be twice that of Japan or China or the Soviet Union. Pointing out that America is "the reigning superpower and chief broker of a new global order," Balk said that in productivity, science-and-technology capability and global investment, the U.S. "leads the world by far."

"Real productivity per U.S. worker is by far the world's highest — and 50 percent above Japan," he continued. That should put an end to the criticism that our workers are not as good as the Japanese.

Noting that in science and technology, our university, corporate and governmental research complex "is pre-eminent in all ways." Balk added:

"We far outspend anyone else in research and development. Our scientists lead Japan and Europe combined in postwar Nobel Prizes. From '76 through '86 we doubled our scientist population.

"In high technology, U.S. companies account for two thirds of all commercial aircraft. The world's largest microchip manufacturer is not Japanese but American (IBM, which produces only for itself), and we excel in several classes of chips.

"The U.S. controls more than 60 percent of the world's computer industry compared to Japan's 20 percent. We lead in supercomputers. Microprocessors and software are virtually American monopolies. General Motors and Ford are No. 1 and No. 2 in the auto world in sales, assets and profits, obtaining more than half their profits overseas.

"We don't know our own strengths. If we are to restore our national spirit and fulfill our destiny in a global 'American century,' it is malaise, not the delusion of impending eclipse, that we should address. We have the wealth, international status and the know-how to solve problems in a variety of fields. If the media and other opinion leaders opened our eyes to our true status, the speed of our 'revival' might surprise us."

Balk has rendered a great service in opening our eyes to the myth of America's decline. Our higher educational institutions should use his book to enlighten our youth on the greatness of America and to encourage confidence in the future that lies ahead for them.

EDUCATION

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

The Midland Independent School District has issued its guidelines to qualify for reduced-price and free lunches.

Families receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children or federal Food Stamps, need only apply through the MISD Food Service office, which can confirm eligibility through the welfare office.

Other households can qualify for free lunches, if the following criteria are met:

- A one-person family that earns less than $8,164 annually, $681 per month or $157 per week;
- A two-person family earning less than $10,946 a year, $913 per month or $211 weekly;
- A three-person family earning less than $13,728 a year, $1,144 per month or $264 weekly;
- A four-person family earning less than $16,510 a year, $1,376 per month, or $318 weekly;
- A five-person family earning less than $19,292 a year, $1,608 per month or $371 weekly;

Police chief apologizes for holding track team at gunpoint

AUSTIN (AP) — A Florida police chief apologized to Austin track team members who were held at gunpoint after being mistaken for heavily armed men suspected in a series of beatings, a newspaper reported.

But the team's coach said the teen-agers are shaken by their ordeal, and some will consider taking legal action against the police department, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

"The police overreacted," said Howard Ware, who coaches the Austin Striders Track Club. "Common sense would have told them that these kids were not the criminals they were looking for."

Ware said the incident occurred Tuesday, as he and 16 team members were on their way to practice for a national track competition in Clearwater, Fla.

Dozens of teams from all over the country gathered in the Gulf Coast resort city, west of Tampa, for the seven-day Amateur Athletic Union Junior Olympics competition. The competition ends today.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Early registration lets students know they'll get into classes

By H. A. Tuck

This is the final week of early registration, which allows for complete registration in fall semester classes. There will be one day for regular registration on Aug. 22.

Tuck

The advantages of coming in this week are several. Not the least is that students can get their schedules completed and guaranteed and won't be wondering if a class is already full. Books can be purchased and — rare thought — even be skimmed before the session starts.

In order to maintain some sort of order, students are being registered in an alphabetical sequence: M-R on Monday from 9 a.m.-7 p.m., F-L on Tuesday from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.; A-E on Wednesday from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.; and S-Z on Thursday from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

Registration takes place in the Student Center, Administration Building. First-time students and transfer students must present transcripts in order to register. Full-time students who haven't taken the TASP (Texas Academic Skills Program) exams will be required to take the Pre-TASP-Test now and then the TASP later.

If you don't wish to pay tuition and fees at this time, you may come to the Student Services Office and obtain a time permit for the Aug. 22 registration day. The permit will assign a specific time to report for registration. Time permits may be obtained through Aug. 16.

If you're somewhat confused by this, call 685-4501 and let someone from the admissions staff explain it.

Are you aware that Midland College maintains an office which is dedicated to assisting single parents, women returning to the work force, the disadvantaged, and the disabled?

The Center for Reassessment provides testing, information, guidance and sometimes just moral support, and it's all free. Wanda Phillips and Terry Clemmer currently are located in Room 168, Occupational-Technical Building. They are open from 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday. You can call them at 685-4568 if you wish.

• • •

Although the Student Center expansion is scheduled for completion by the time classes begin, the dean of students, registrar, and their staffs probably won't move until after late registration is finished in early September.

At that time, the Center for Reassessment will be moved into the Student Center and become part of the Dean of Students' counseling and testing staff.

• • •

A reminder that the resurfacing project for the parking lot adjacent to the Student Center, Faculty-Science, and Health Sciences Buildings is still under way. Occasionally, this leads to congestion on other parking lots, but it will be finished soon.

• • •

If you enjoy wry, down-home type humor then you should get tickets for the Aug. 19 appearance at Chaparral Center of syndicated columnist Lewis Grizzard. He'll be at Chap Center with tickets priced at $17.50 and $15 for reserved seats. Tickets are available at Chaparral Center or at Endless Horizons in either Midland or Odessa. You also can place orders by calling 685-4584 and using a credit card.

The final Continuing Education course of the summer is scheduled for Tuesday and Aug. 14. It's on Financial Planning and Budgeting and is being offered on those two Tuesday evenings from 7-9 p.m. Cost is $12 and the instructor is Martha Lassater.

There are a lot of new courses being offered through Continuing Education this fall, along with most of the perennial favorites.

If you haven't seen the course bulletin, be sure to come by the Continuing Education Office to obtain one. While there, you can even register now for courses which start later this fall. You also can register by mail with forms contained in the bulletin.

How about $95.00?

No one would argue that a comprehensive, reliable home security system makes perfect sense. It's the price that often seems unreasonable. Fortunately, Westinghouse Security Systems cuts the cost of home security to a low, one-time installation fee of $95. At that price, you can protect your home and family with Westinghouse Smart Protection, and receive:
• 24-hour, 365-day-a-year security
• Panic buttons
• Professional monitoring through our Central Monitoring Facility
• Fast, effective response to your emergency calls

Using the most advanced technology available, Westinghouse brings you a basic system that includes three sensors, a master control keypad, motion detector and an interior siren. Once your system is installed, monthly monitoring is only $19.50 per month. To get your Westinghouse Smart Protection, call 1-800-SMART-25 today. Because when it comes to affordable safety, we've got your number.

More than 1,836 students already enrolled in MC's fall semester

Staff Report

Midland College enters its final week of early registration with more than 1,836 students already enrolled.

During the early registration period, students may complete their registrations, enroll for classes, and pay fees during a single trip to the campus. Upon completion, students are guaranteed places in courses at times most convenient for their personal schedules.

During the next two weeks, students not wishing to pay at this time may obtain time permits for a special one-day registration on Aug. 22. The time permits are being assigned on a first-come basis for 15-minute periods during that registration date. The last day to obtain a time permit is Thursday, Aug. 16.

Persons wishing to enroll, pay fees, and complete all registration requirements should come to the Student Services Office in the Administration Building. Students are being handled according to this alphabetical schedule and these hours: M-R on Monday from 9 a.m.-7 p.m.; F-L on Tuesday from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.; A-E on Wednesday from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.; and S-Z on Thursday from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

All persons receiving financial aid, including the Abell-Hanger Foundation Scholarships, must register in person. All first-time and transfer students must present transcripts at the time of registration.

"Students who haven't taken the TASP (Texas Academic Skills Program) exams may not enroll for more than eight hours and may not take a math or English class. We are offering the Pre-TASP-Test at the Learning Resource Center in room 213B through Thursday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m.," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar. "The PTT may be used for registration purposes, but the students will have to take the TASP sometime during the fall."

Cates emphasized that the state-mandated TASP created several changes, so those who are thinking about college enrollment need to visit with the counseling staff as soon as possible.

Midland College's 1990 fall semester begins Monday, Aug. 27, and concludes on Dec. 14. The college will observe Labor Day Monday, Sept. 3, and Thanksgiving on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 22-23.

Persons with questions regarding entrance or registration should call 685-4501.

Firm including battery testers with products

Duracell U.S.A. says it has patented the Copper Top Tester strip, which is squeezed to the top and bottom of the battery. A liquid crystal bar creeps up to either "replace" or "good."

The tester can be used for alkaline batteries and can be used over and over on standard AA-size, AAA-size, C and D batteries, said a spokesman for Duracell.

Every steel food and beverage can used in this country is 100% recyclable. Tin food cans and bimetal beverage cans are steel cans and should be recycled. And the steel industry already has the capacity to recycle every can that is made. What's more, steel cans are easy to recycle - even when they're mixed in with other recyclables - because they're magnetic. Which means they can be easily separated from other materials.

The Steel Can Recycling Institute is helping communities throughout Texas and across America add steel cans to their curbside and voluntary drop-off recycling programs. And by recycling more and more, we'll all be working to save energy, preserve our natural resources and clean up our environment.

Now that's something we can all be proud of. And it's so easy, it's child's play.

Upstart 900- industry worries 'old guard' Bell

DALLAS (AP) — Some small service companies believe the 900 number will someday make even a trip to the doctor as easy as picking up a telephone. But some local phone companies have doubts about the long-distance industry's latest gold rush.

Bob Manley's company, Ciscorp, a small Dallas outfit looking to deliver new kinds of telephone service, is one of about 200 small companies driving the growth of the 900 industry nationwide.

Each one is a service bureau type of organization that develops, markets and manages their own application of the 900 service.

Other 900 numbers offer a variety of entertainment and information services at pre-set prices ranging from 50 cents to $50 per call. The charges are tacked onto the caller's phone bill at the end of the month.

Introduced by major long-distance companies on a widespread basis last year, 900 service has the potential to transform telephones into a new type of credit card.

To date, local telephone service providers, such as Southwestern Bell, have been gun-shy of the 900 service, which puts them in the role of collecting money for other companies.

"We want to go slow here," said George Murphy, area manager for business service marketing at Southwestern Bell. "We're trying to stay away from a situation where we lose control over what's happening in the 900 industry."

Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Hugh Parmer did battle last week with Southwestern Bell, which refused to collect campaign donations to his 900 number, claiming it has a policy not to collect political contributions.

Parmer took the matter to the Public Utility Commission. Southwestern Bell agreed Friday to resume collecting Parmer's $10 contributions until the PUC rules on the issue.

New York-based Strategic Telemedia estimates that by 1993 the 900 market will triple to $1.8 billion in annual fees charged to 900-number callers.

"We're going to see a lot of turmoil over the next several years," said Chris Elwell, editor of the Information Industry Bulletin, a weekly industry newsletter based in Stamford, Conn. "Long-distance companies are going to want to put more and more 900 applications into place, but local telephone companies do not want to bill for them."

Abortion issue spawns 'Officers for Life'

CORPUS CHRISTI — About 12 law enforcement officers, including Nueces County Sheriff James T. Hickey, have founded a group that will seek laws permitting officers to refuse duty that protects abortion clinics.

The group, Officers for Life, is believed to be the first of its kind in the country, said Ron DeLord, president of the Combined Law Enforcement Agencies of Texas.

The city has become a focus of anti-abortion activism in the past nine months, during which:

— The Roman Catholic bishop has excommunicated two abortion clinic employees.

— The sheriff has prayed on the sidewalk while police pulled his wife and other anti-abortion protesters from a clinic doorway.

The two abortion clinics in the county are within Corpus Christi city limits, making the task of protection a duty of the city police department.

Police Chief Henry Garrett told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times he wouldn't object if city police officers joined the group, as long as they continued to do their jobs.

Elva Bustamante, who directs one of the abortion clinics targeted by anti-abortion protesters, said she was astounded that law enforcement officers would form such a group.

Officers for Life held its first meeting July 26 and those in attendance included both sheriff's deputies and several members of the city police department, said Ruben Rodriguez, a communications supervisor in Hickey's department who called the meeting.

Hickey said his involvement in founding the group was to allow Rodriguez to announce the meeting on the sheriff's department bulletin board.

"It was Ruben's idea," Hickey said. "I wish it was my idea. I'd like to take credit for it, but it's his. I'm behind him 100 percent."

"Right now we're just getting together," said Rodriguez, who wears a brass replica of the feet of a 10-week-old fetus on the collar of his uniform shirt.

Since November, a group calling itself Body of Christ Rescue has blocked abortion clinic entrances 20 times. Corpus Christi Police Department off-duty officers have been paid overtime to clear the entrances to let women with abortion appointments enter the clinics.

Garrett said the issue has been raised only once by an officer who had friends among the members of the anti-abortion protesters.

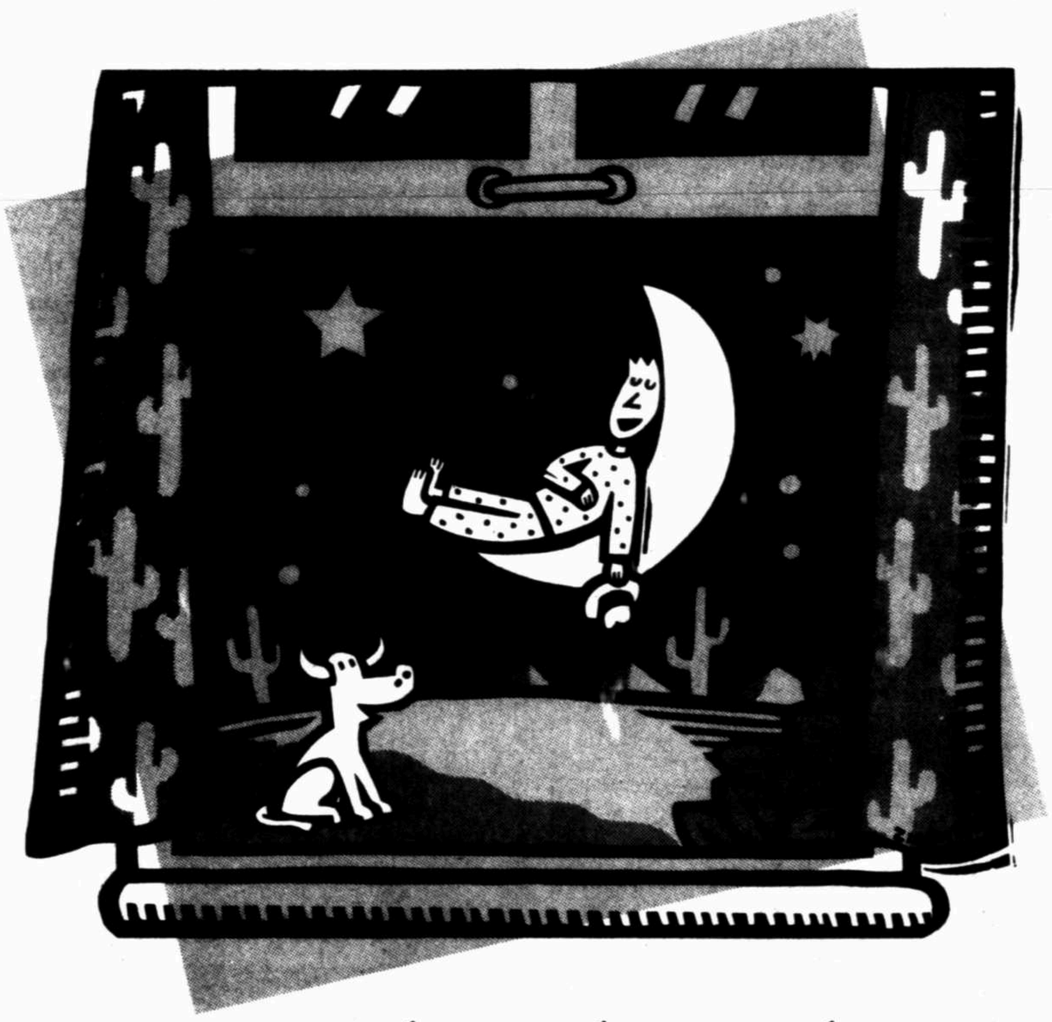
Now AmWest can give you something few banks can...



A good night's sleep.

Now AmWest has "DreamSaver"—a savings program designed to bring peace of mind to all those who worry about saving money.

Here's how it works: You tell AmWest how much you want to save every month, (as little as $25 if you like) and they'll deduct it automatically from a free checking account (that's right, free checking) and put it into a CD account. Keep your money there for a full 12 months and it will earn a high-interest CD rate. Take it out early, and you'll get a penalty — three months interest or $50.

So "DreamSaver" not only helps you save money on a regular monthly basis — it helps you keep your hands off it too. And with a little money in savings — a good night's sleep will come a whole lot easier.

Put Your Money on Texas.

Dr. Gary Graybeal examines the oil-and-water mixture that washed ashore behind his house in Beach City, Texas, Saturday.

Crude washing in at Houston Point

BEACH CITY (AP) — Oil oozed into sensitive marshlands on the north end of Galveston Bay, but fishing resumed Saturday in parts of the bay where up to 700,000 gallons of oil spilled from a damaged barge.

Cleanup crews used vacuum trucks to suck up the oily mess, which has washed up along an estimated seven-mile stretch of Houston Point. The oil has struck marshes and some residential property in the area.

Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene, who flew over the area Saturday, said he was encouraged by the shoreline cleanup but expected it to last another week.

"We're at the point where most of the oil is on the beach. I think we can deal with that," Greene said. "There's no more oil coming from anywhere. It's just a matter of finishing the job."

Environmentalists were worried by reports of at least two oil-soiled birds. Workers used noise makers along the oily shore to keep birds from landing in the goo.

Booms along the shoreline trapped some of the oil and stopped new crude from washing ashore, the Coast Guard said.

New oil was reported Friday morning along Houston Point, on the north end of the bay between the Houston Ship Channel and Trinity Bay.

Crews were laying additional absorbent booms to protect marshes further into Trinity Bay, Greene said. The Coast Guard also plans to spray oil-gobbling microbes on some marshy areas Sunday, he said.

State officials dumped the microbes on a 400-yard stretch of beach on Pelican Island on Thursday, but results weren't expected for several weeks.

"My comfort level is much higher today as far as the oil we can see," said Larry McKinney, director of resource protection for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. "For the long-term, I'm still concerned because we can't account for about 500,000 gallons."

Coast Guard officials estimated that between 500,000 and 700,000 gallons of oil spilled, but they have been perplexed by the relatively small amount of oil that has been cleaned up or has washed ashore.

The oil spilled into Galveston Bay when a tanker collided with two barges July 28 in the ship channel, the Coast Guard said.

One of the barges nearly sank, but it has since been raised and moved to shallower waters in the bay. Salvage crews Saturday were considering the possibility of cutting it in half, then moving the pieces out of the bay.

Limited traffic resumed Friday in the ship channel after the barge was moved.

In Beaumont, Texas, two federal lawsuits were filed on behalf of hundreds of people who say their livelihoods have suffered because of a massive oil spill in Galveston Bay.

Both class-action lawsuits name Apex RE&T Inc., owner of the barges, and Eletson Corp., owner of the tanker Shinoussa, as defendants.

The lawsuits seek monetary awards for each fisherman expected to lose money because of the spill, which occurred with the shrimping season's peak period approaching. Neither lawsuit asks for a specific amount of damages.

Lawyers in Houston for both companies did not return calls from The Associated Press Saturday.

Meanwhile, a ban on all commercial and recreational fishing in the bay was partially lifted early Saturday.

STATE IN BRIEF

Civil suit seeks spill damages

BEAUMONT (AP) — A Texas lawmaker said he has filed a federal suit on behalf of about 300 people whose livelihoods he claimed were harmed by the massive Galveston Bay oil spill.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said the lawsuit will seek unspecified damages from the corporations that own the two vessels involved in the collision.

The lawsuit is a class action, involving fishermen and oyster-bed owners and operators, he said.

The legislator contended no clean-up plan was in effect until more than 24 hours after the midday collision occurred eight days ago.

"If we fought fires the same way the federal bureaucracy deals with this, we'd never get any of them out," he said.

Sheriff will be tried

SEYMOUR (AP) — A prosecutor says a suspended Baylor County sheriff will be tried on official misconduct charges in connection with a citizens' fund.

District Attorney Bobby Burnett said Friday he plans to appoint a special assistant district attorney to help him prosecute the case against Sheriff Jerry Barton.

Burnett dropped three felony theft charges pending since April against Barton and chose to try him Aug. 20 on one of five felony charges of official misconduct filed last month.

A grand jury indictment alleges that Barton misappropriated $3,069 from the Baylor County Citizens Assistance Fund, which held money for battling drugs, on Sept. 14, 1989.

Virus claims victim

HOUSTON (AP) — An elderly Baytown woman who died last week was the season's first confirmed St. Louis encephalitis victim, Harris County health officials said.

The 72-year-old victim, who authorities declined to identify, died July 29.

"I think it's safe to say we could get widespread occurrences of this disease throughout the county," said Mark Canfield, epidemiologist for the Harris County Health Department. "This disease could become more widespread."

Robert Bartnett, director of the Harris County Mosquito Control District, has been warning that this year's St. Louis encephalitis problem promises to be one of the worst in several years.

So far, district personnel have found evidence of the virus that causes the disease in 105 different pools of mosquitoes collected throughout Houston and in Harris County. It is the largest number of positive pools ever identified by this time of year, Bartnett said Friday.

Mosquito control district personnel are targeting areas where they have identified the virus.

UNITED WAY OF MIDLAND WANTS TO KNOW YOUR THOUGHTS

Get out your pencil or pen and get ready. We want to know what you're thinking.

That's right.

This is not a skills test or an examination of how knowledgeable you are about world events.

We, the United Way of Midland, want to know what you think about us. And we want you to be honest about it. Little bashful about "letting it all hang out?" Well, we'll make it easy. You don't even have to sign your name unless it's something you really want to do.

We tried to think of questions that might fit every angle you could cover -- how we handle your money, what agencies we give it to, how we raise the money, what you think about our role in the community. And we even tried to think of every answer you might have, ranging from really liking us and what we do to not agreeing with us at all.

If you really agree with something we're doing, let us know. If you don't like something we're doing, well, then give us the one-two punch.

Through our 17 affiliated agencies and hundreds of volunteers, United Way touches almost 35,000 people -- or about a third of the people in this city. That means if we're doing something wrong, it could have a major impact. And that's not what we want.

Several United Way volunteers are working on a Strategic Management Plan to keep the non-profit organization headed in the right direction for the next five years. But as an organization comprised of many volunteers helping thousands of others, we want to know what you think. For, in essence, we are you.

So, pick up that pen or pencil and start filling out the survey. And once you have made your statement, mail the survey to the United Way, P.O. Box 2314, Midland, Tx. 79702. Deadline for returning the completed survey to us is Monday, August 13.

Have a question? Call us at 682-4358. We'll be glad to give you an answer.

But, please, tell us what you're thinking.

Lambert, Harris steal show

Associated Press

CANTON, Ohio — A typically unemotional Tom Landry says even though the Dallas Cowboys were America's Team, the Pro Football Hall of Fame seems to have adopted the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"I understand now why Pittsburgh beat us twice in Super Bowls," Landry said Saturday as he was inducted into the football shrine. "Their whole team will be here before they're through."

Landry, the coach of the Cowboys for the first 29 years of the franchise's history, was joined in the Hall of Fame class of 1990 by Steelers linebacker Jack Lambert and running back Franco Harris. The seven inductees also included Miami Dolphins quarterback Bob Griese, Kansas City Chiefs defensive tackle Buck Buchanan, San Francisco 49ers offensive tackle Bob St. Clair and Ted Hendricks, a linebacker for Baltimore, Green Bay and the Oakland-Los Angeles Raiders.

Tom Landry

Landry acknowledged that he is often seen as a stone-faced, unemotional person.

"I hear they're taking bets whether I show any emotion. The odds are very long I won't ... If I don't show emotion, it's all on the inside," Landry said.

The biggest cheers of the day from the large crowd surrounding the front steps of the Hall of Fame were reserved for Harris and Lambert. The contingent of Steelers fans stood and cheered whenever their team was mentioned.

Harris, who spent his entire 13 years with the Steelers, looked at the defensive stars being inducted and said, "I think I helped these guys get in here."

Buchanan said he started playing football only because a neighbor needed someone to walk home with him after practice.

"I would like this bronze bust to be seen as a greater testament to my football career," Buchanan said. "I wanted to show how far hard work and honest effort can take you.'

"If I could start my life all over again, you can be sure I'd be a pro football player and you can be certain I'd be a Pittsburgh Steeler."

Referring to the six Steelers now in the Hall from their Super Bowl teams of the 1970s, Harris said, "We never knew we were building a Steeler wing to the Hall of Fame. But you'll always know you saw the best."

Griese, who spent his entire 14 years with the Dolphins, looked at the defensive stars being inducted and said, "I think I helped these guys get in here."

Buchanan said he started playing football only because a neighbor needed someone to walk home with him after practice.

"I would like this bronze bust to be seen as a greater testament to my football career," Buchanan said. "I wanted to show how far hard work and honest effort can take you.'

Bryan finding his own spotlight

■ Former Midland Lee linkster Larry Bryan shoots three straight 33s to take the lead after 27 holes at the Midland Men's City Golf Championship.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

In some respects, Larry Bryan has spent his golfing career in the shadow of former Midland Lee teammate Bobby Gee.

In college, it's been more of the same. Bryan earned NCAA Division II All-America status at Abilene Christian — but Gee was the Southwest Conference champion while playing for Texas A&M.

But Bryan has beaten his old friend in the past, and he's only 27 holes away from doing it again after shooting a seven-under-par 99 Saturday on the entire 27-hole Hogan Park layout after day one of the Midland Men's City Championship. The Abilene Christian senior-to-be is four shots ahead of McMurry University golfer Benton Spradlin, five ahead of

Angels take sweep of San Antonio

■ Midland pitchers combined for the first shutout of the season at Angels Stadium in the first game, and the Angels came from behind to win the second game of a doubleheader.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Two San Antonio errors in the bottom of the 11th inning allowed pinch runner Reed Peters to score the only run of the game as the Midland Angels posted the first shutout of the season by any team at Angels Stadium, 1-0 over the Missions in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader Saturday.

The Angels took a sweep with a 7-5 victory in the nightcap.

Mike Butcher allowed just four hits through six innings of work and Robert Moore pitched 4 innings of hitless relief, but David Martinez got the victory as Midland squeezed out the extra-inning beauty against the front-runners of the Texas League's Western Division.

Peters, who was running for Howard Nichols after his leadoff single in the 11th, looked to be picked off first base by Missions' reliever Kevin Campbell (1-5), but first baseman Eric Karros dropped the ball and the umpire reversed his call at the bag.

After Luis Aguayo was called out on strikes, newcomer Johnny Monell lashed a single to left that eluded the grasp of Henry Rodriguez and allowed Peters to score all the way from first.

The only real scoring threat mounted by the Missions came in the fifth when Steve Finken and Homar Rojas managed singles. But Butcher escaped by striking out Luis Martinez and getting leadoff batter Tom Goodwin to bounce into a force play a second base.

Baseball takes its turn today

Associated Press

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — In the 1970s, Jim Palmer and Joe Morgan could usually be found with winning numbers on winning teams. On Sunday, they will find themselves on the steps of the Hall of Fame.

Palmer pitched in six divisional playoffs and six World Series for the Baltimore Orioles. Morgan played in seven playoffs and four Series for the Cincinnati Reds.

Last January, they became the 20th and 21st players elected to the Hall of Fame in the first year of elgibility.

Palmer was named on 411 of 444 votes cast by members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. His 92.5 percent trailed only Bob Feller's 93.75 percent in 1962 among pitchers.

"There was a lot of doubt in my mind in terms of getting in the first year," Palmer said. "There are a lot of guys who deserve it who don't. To

JIMMY PATTERSON

It ain't what it used to be, sad to say

Cynicism has struck. Oh no, not again, some would say.

At first, just for a brief moment, the thought was that what hit was actually sentimentality. But no, it was definitely cynicism, brought on by what was once sentimentality and has since descended into nothing but contempt. Amidst all this cynicism is a fair amount of reality, in order to lend credence to all this skepticism.

Patterson

The elder Mr. Patterson, a fine baseball fan and father of this cynic, was in town for a short stay this weekend. Driving around town one day, he asked a question about baseball.

Don't recall the exact question, but get the skeptical juices flowing it did.

For as long as their has been a seamed ball, an Abner Doubleday, and a diamond on which to run, there have been thousands upon thousands of fans who have fallen in love with this game. Why even today, there are those who perceive the game tantamount to heaven itself, although I'd hardly compare St. Peter and Roseanne Barr. Not for a minute.

Nor could Fay Vincent be compared to You Know Who. He does a nice job, but he's not that good.

Despite Mr. Vincent's recent efforts (as well as the mighty efforts of the late A. Bartlett Giamatti) to rid the game of its scum, baseball is just not as charming as it once was. It is no longer a simple pleasure. Too many Pete Roses and George Steinbrenners. Too many with big egos, like the Cansecos and the Strawberrys, etc., etc.

On two hands, name the truly memorable characters who grace us with their presence today.

Obviously you start with Nolan Ryan. Dale Murphy, who's not even sacred in Atlanta anymore, is considered a good person. Barry Bonds hit a boy with a foul ball the other day and made a very nice, yet all too rare, gesture.

But there are not enough Ryans or Murphys or Bonds.

Large egos. Big bucks. Bigger bucks. Baseball is nothing but a race to see who can get the largest contract first. And after the contract is signed and the money is had, it's time to get down to the real business: Figuring out when your option year rolls around so you can become the richest once again.

I suppose these hard feelings have something to do with major leaguers and their utter disregard of their upbringing.

A recent Sports Illustrated article on the Toledo Mud Hens typified the attitudes of major leaguers. Detroit refused to play an exhibition game with the Mud Hens, and the Minnesota Twins pay the Hens $10,000 a year so they won't have to face the trials of playing before minor league fans — the most appreciative around.

You bring in a big league team to a smaller city, and the locals crave a look at the guys who've made it to THE SHOW.

Take Midland, June 1989. When the Boy Wonders from Anaheim made us all feel real special by giving us a couple of hours of their time — not to mention their memorable turns at bat — bless 'em.

Names won't be mentioned. No sense in dredging up bad memories or again bringing attention to the insensitive fat heads who are quite obviously of much more import than your average person.

It was that one exhibition game that I guess has forever changed my outlook on this game. Big time baseball players are just people, but they unfortunately perceive themselves as so, so much more. And it's a shame, it really is.

It's been over a year since that hot June day when close to 4,000 people were ripped off. I only write about it now because of the images it has shattered, apparently forever.

Seaver said to be new Yank GM

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Tom Seaver, a pitching star with the New York Mets in the late 1960's and '70s and a three-time Cy Young Award winner, will be named general manager of the New York Yankees by owner George Steinbrenner, according to a published report.

The New York Daily News said in its Sunday editions that Seaver's appointment "is more than a rumor. It is all but a done deal."

Steinbrenner agreed to resign as the Yankees general partner by Aug. 20 as punishment for his association and payment to gambler Howard Spira. Steinbrenner has proposed that his son, Hank, become the new general partner but has not said if the team's front office would be restructured.

Pete Peterson, currently the Yankees general manager, would be Seaver's "nuts and bolts" man, the News reported. George Bradley, the team's vice president of baseball operations and the chief trader, would run the minor-league operations, the newspaper said.

Seaver, 45, is in his second season as a Yankees broadcaster on WPIX-TV in New York. He refused to comment on the situation during the Yankees game against Cleveland on Saturday night.

"We've talked and that's it," Seaver said. "I'm not going to have anything else to say."

Howard J. Rubenstein, Steinbrenner's spokesman, could not be reached for comment.

Peterson said he didn't know anything about Seaver becoming general manager and said he didn't think he would stay on as one of Seaver's aides.

"If Tom Seaver were to get a job with any front office, it would help that team because he's a very knowledgable baseball person," Peterson said. "But I have no knowledge of this at all."

Seaver was 311-205 in a 20-year career that ended in 1986. He is tied for 15th on the career victory list and is third in strikeouts with 3,640 behind Nolan Ryan and Steve Carlton.

He has the fourth-best earned-run average in baseball history at 2.86 behind Walter Johnson, Grover Cleveland Alexander and Whitey Ford. Seaver is seventh on the shutout list with 61.

Seaver, a five-time 20-game winner, won the National League Cy Young Award in 1969, 1973 and 1975 with the Mets. He began his big league career in New York in 1967 and was the team's star until traded to Cincinnati for four players in the middle of the 1977 season.

The Reds sent Seaver back to the Mets between the 1982 and 1983 seasons but was taken by the Chicago White Sox in the free agent compensation pool after one year in New York.

Seaver led the National League in strikeouts in 1970, 1971, 1973, 1975 and 1976 and led in winning percentage in 1969, 1979 and 1981.

Witt leads Texas to sixth straight win

Associated Press

AL Roundup

Bobby Witt pitched a five-hitter and won his seventh straight decision and the Texas Rangers beat the Toronto Blue Jays, 3-2, for their sixth consecutive victory.

Witt (10-8) did not allow a hit until the fifth, walked only two and struck out five. He completed his third game in 21 starts this season.

Toronto lost for the fourth time in five games. The Blue Jays fell 2½ games behind Boston in the American League East, their largest deficit since July 5.

Julio Franco and Ruben Sierra each got two hits for Texas. Sierra drove in two runs and Franco scored twice.

Todd Stottlemyre (10-12) has lost four of five career decisions against Texas.

Franco singled with one out in the first, stole second and scored on Sierra's two-out single. Stottlemyre struck out the next five batters before the Rangers scored twice in the third on a single by Franco and consecutive triples by Rafael Palmeiro and Sierra.

John Olerud walked in the fifth and Greg Myers got Toronto's first hit, a double with one out. Rance Mulliniks followed with a run-scoring single, Witt threw a wild pitch and Manny Lee had an RBI grounder.

Red Sox 3, Tigers 1

Roger Clemens won his 15th game but his scoreless streak ended at 26 innings as the Boston Red Sox rallied to beat the Detroit Tigers.

Clemens (15-5) celebrated his 28th birthday with his 110th career victory. He allowed nine hits in 8 2-3 innings, walked two and struck out eight, including Cecil Fielder four times. Rob Murphy got the final out for his sixth save.

Detroit's Steve Searcy (1-3) gave up eight hits, struck out seven and walked six in his first complete game this season.

With their sixth straight victory and seventh in eight games, the Red Sox improved their American League East lead over Toronto to two games. The Blue Jays were scheduled to play at Texas on Saturday night.

Clemens had pitched consecutive shutouts since he allowed a run against Kansas City on July 20. His streak ended in the fourth when Lloyd Moseby doubled with one out and scored on Gary Ward's two-out single over second baseman Jody Reed.

Clemens' scoreless streak was the longest in the major leagues this season.

Boston, held to one hit for four innings, tied the score in the fifth on consecutive two-out singles by Reed, Carlos Quintana and Wade Boggs, who had three hits.

The Red Sox went ahead in the fifth. Dwight Evans walked, Tom Brunansky doubled and Tim Naehring was walked intentionally, loading the bases. John Marzano struck out on a 3-2 pitch but Searcy walked Reed on four pitches to force in the go-ahead run.

Boston added a run in the seventh on singles by Boggs, Ellis Burks and Evans.

Royals 9, Orioles 1

Mike Macfarlane hit a grand slam and drove in a career-high five runs and Danny Tartabull homered twice as the Kansas City Royals beat the Baltimore Orioles.

George Brett also homered as the Royals ended a three-game losing streak. Kansas City prevented the Orioles from going over the .500 mark for the first time since April 23.

Andy McGaffigan (3-0) allowed two hits in six innings to lower his ERA to 1.39.

Indians 17, Yankees 3

Cory Snyder's grand slam off the left-field foul pole broke a sixth-inning tie and the Cleveland Indians set a season-high for runs, routing the New York Yankees.

Snyder's fourth career grand slam broke a 3-all tie and sparked a burst in which Cleveland scored 14 runs in the final four innings. It was the Indians' first slam since July 24, 1989.

Dion James, Candy Maldonado and Jeff Manto also homered for Cleveland. Utilityman Tom Brookens drove in three runs and Snyder and Alex Cole each got three of the Indians' 18 hits.

Bud Black (10-6) gave up six hits in seven innings. He struck out four and walked one. Tim Leary (5-14) took the loss as three pitchers gave up the most runs against the Yankees this season.

Maldonado started the sixth with a one-out walk, Chris James doubled and Brook Jacoby was intentionally walked to load the bases. Snyder sent the first pitch toward the upper deck, and the ball hit the foul pole for his 13th home run of the season.

James' two-run homer in the first was his first since last Sept. 10 and the first off Leary in 90 2-3 innings. Leary last allowed a homer to Kansas City's Mike Macfarlane on May 18. Leary gave up seven runs and seven hits in six innings.

White Sox 9, Brewers 6

Sammy Sosa hit a three-run homer during a six-run sixth inning and the Chicago White Sox won their fourth straight game, beating Milwaukee and extending the Brewers' losing streak to seven.

A crowd of 52,198, largest of the season at County Stadium, saw the Brewers lose for the 10th time in 11 games. Milwaukee's seven-game skid, its longest of the year, has come at home.

Red nightmare continues, Bucs overtakes Mets

Cincinnati's summer swoon continued Saturday night when San Diego's Joe Carter hit a grand slam with two out in the 11th inning, giving the Padres a 7-3 victory that cut the Reds' lead in the National League West to 3½ games.

The Reds' third straight loss and 11th in 13 games left them with their smallest lead since May 4 when they were three games ahead of Los Angeles.

The Reds led second-place San Francisco by 11 games when their skid began. The Giants beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1 Saturday and have chopped 7½ games off Cincinnati's once huge lead in less than two weeks.

The Reds tied the game with two out in the bottom of the ninth when pinch-hitter Luis Quinones homered off reliever Craig Lefferts, who hadn't allowed an earned run in his last eight appearances. It was the first home run of the season for Quinones, who is 11-for-23 as a pinch hitter.

But in the 10th, Rick Mahler (4-5), Cincinnati's third pitcher, gave up a two-out double to Roberto Alomar and intentionally walked Tony Gwynn. He also walked Jack Clark and Carter followed with his 18th home run and second grand slam of the season.

Greg Harris (7-5) pitched the last two innings for the win.

Pirates 3, Phillies 1

Don Slaught, who singled home Pittsburgh's first run in the second inning, doubled home two more in the 10th, giving the Pirates a victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and lifting them back into a first-place tie in the National League East.

But Sid Bream opened the Pirates' 10th with a walk off reliever Roger McDowell (3-5). Gary Redus ran for Bream and went to third on Jose Lind's hit-and-run single. After pinch-hitter R.J. Reynolds lined to short, Slaught doubled into the left-center-field gap to score both runners.

That made a winner of Patterson (6-3), who gave up only Hayes' homer in 2 1-3 innings. Ted Power pitched the 10th for his sixth save.

The victory was Pittsburgh's third straight and enabled them to tie the New York Mets, who lost to St. Louis 7-5, for the division lead.

Neal Heaton came out of a six-week pitching slump with six scoreless innings for Pittsburgh. Heaton, who has lost five straight and hasn't won since June 24, gave up four hits, struck out four and did not walk a batter.

Astros 6, Braves 2

Glenn Wilson put Houston ahead with a two-run homer and Rafael Ramirez added a three-run double in a five-run fourth inning that powered the Astros past the Atlanta Braves.

Jim Deshaies (5-9) snapped a personal four-game losing streak with a six-hitter for his first complete game of the season.

Loser Charlie Leibrandt (4-5) went six innings and gave up all the Houston runs and seven hits. Houston has won threes-traight while Atlanta has dropped four in a row and nine of 10.

With the Atlanta leading 2-1, Bill Doran opened the Astros' fourth with a double and Wilson hit his ninth home run. A single by Craig Biggio, a walk to Mark Davidson and an error by first baseman Francisco Cabrera on Franklin Stubbs' grounder loaded the bases for Ramirez.

Giants 2, Dodgers 1

Trevor Wilson pitched a two-hitter and Brett Butler scored from second base on a sacrifice fly as the San Francisco Giants beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Wilson (7-3) allowed only Hubie Brooks' fifth-inning homer and Kal Daniels' two-out single in the ninth. Wilson had pitched a one-hitter against San Diego on June 13, giving up a leadoff single to Mike Pagliarulo in the ninth.

Wilson, 0-3 with 6.20 earned-run average in three previous starts, retired eight consecutive batters before Brooks led off the fifth with his 13th home run. After walking Lenny Harris with one out, Wilson retired the next 13 batters before Daniels' hit. Wilson struck out seven and walked three in his third complete game.

Mike Morgan (9-10) gave up two runs and five hits in seven innings. He has lost four of his last six decisions.

Cardinals 7, Mets 5

Terry Pendleton broke a sixth-inning tie with a three-run double and the St. Louis Cardinals ended Dwight Gooden's eight-game winning streak with a victory over the New York Mets.

Ken Hill (2-1) beat New York for the second time in nine days and Pedro Guerrero and Rex Hudler hit two-run homers for the Cardinals.

Cubs 10, Expos 2

Andre Dawson drove in five runs with a two-run homer and a bases-loaded double and Ryne Sandberg had four hits and scored four runs, leading the Chicago Cubs to a victory over the Montreal Expos.

History makers fall short

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Candiotti and Doug Drabek were in a race for baseball history and they didn't know it.

At Yankee Stadium on Friday night, Candiotti was working on a no-hitter with a nasty knuckleball for Cleveland when word came that Drabek had one going for Pittsburgh at Philadelphia.

Who would pitch the record eighth no-hitter of the season first?

There was also the amazing possibility of two no-hitters in different leagues on the same day for the second time this season.

On June 29, Dave Stewart of Oakland and Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles pitched no-hitters on the same day in different leagues for the first time in baseball history.

Less than 48 hours later on July 1, Andy Hawkins of the Yankees pitched a no-hitter against Chicago at Comiskey Park and lost 4-0 on two outfield errors in the eighth inning.

Even though Candiotti had a no-hitter, the Yankees were leading 2-1 after five innings.

"I started thinking this year has been so strange with all the no-hitters that Candiotti would pitch one and we would win," Yankees manager Stump Merrill said.

Candiotti kept his no-hitter going for 7 2-3 innings before rookie Oscar Azocar singled to center to score Steve Sax, moving the Yankees within one run at 4-3

"No big deal," Azocar said. "I broke up two no-hitters in the minor leagues."

While Candiotti was losing his no-hitter, word came that Drabek was within one out of the eighth no-hitter of the season. At least somebody would get it.

What's Drabek doing?

Answer: No-hitter over, Sil Campusano singled. So much for baseball history.

MORGAN: First ballot reserved for the best

From 1C

During the '70s, the only years that neither Palmer nor Morgan appeared in the playoffs was 1977 and 1978.

"It was a disappointment if we didn't have a winning season," Palmer said. "I was around Hall of Famers like Brooks Robinson and Frank Robinson, but I never really thought that much about being a Hall of Famer."

He's thinking about it now, though. Palmer broke into the majors with Baltimore at the age of 19 in 1965, and by the time he was finished in 1984, the graceful right-hander had a career record of 268-152.

He pitched as a rookie in the 1966 World Series and shut out the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-0 on a four-hitter in Game 2.

His career earned-run average was 2.85. Palmer was a 20-game winner eight times and pitched 3,948 innings without allowing a grand slam in the major leagues.

His chiseled good looks, sky-blue eyes and 6-foot-3 rugged frame made Palmer a matinee idol on the mound. After baseball, Palmer found fame and fortune as a baseball announcer and a model for underwear.

His career was threatened in 1967 by an arm injury, forcing Palmer to miss the 1968 season.

Morgan's road to Cooperstown had a few more bumps than did Palmer's, but he got 363 votes from the writers for 81.7 percent.

"To make it on the first ballot is unbelievable," Morgan said. "The only players who are deemed great make it on the first ballot. I guess that makes me a great second baseman."

The diminutive second baseman started his career with the expansion Houston Astros where he played seven full seasons.

Not too many expansion players end up with an invitation to Cooperstown. But Morgan got his break when he was traded to Cincinnati, where he won two World Series and consecutive MVP awards in 1975 and 1976.

"In 1975, at the end of the season, Sparky Anderson came to me and said 'You're going to be most valuable in the league,' " Morgan recalled. "And he said, 'Joe, you need one of those to get into the Hall of Fame.' That was the first time I tought about going to the Hall of Fame. I started thinking maybe. I never thought for sure."

"I went to Houston, and Houston won the division. I went to San Francisco and we finished two games out. I went to Philadelphia and we won. I guess what that says is I could play under different circumstanes. I didn't have to be surrounded by the great players I was surrounded with in Cincinnati," Morgan said.

Morgan also holds the National League record for most games played at second base (2,427), and his 1,865 lifetime walks ranks third on the all-time list behind Babe Ruth (2,056) and Ted Williams (2,019). For his career, Morgan averaged .271, with 16 home runs and 69 RBIs per season. Maybe not Hall of Fame numbers, but he was the dominant second baseman of his time.

"He did it all, and he did it all the time," said catcher Johnny Bench, the first member of the Big Red Machine to enter the Hall of Fame. "I always thought that Joe was the best player I ever played with, and that takes in a lot of ground."

In order to be elected to the Hall of Fame, a player must appear on 75 percent of the ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

In 1989, Carl Yastrzemski and Bench were elected in their first year of eligibility, too.

Each year, the controversy grows over who should or shouldn't be in the Hall of Fame. By most standards, Gaylord Perry has the numbers to make it.

In 20 seasons, the right-hander had a record of 314-265 (an average of 16-13) with 3,534 strikeouts (177).

The master of the greaseball sort of staggered to 300 wins, though. After 10 seasons with San Francisco, Perry finished his career by pitching for Cleveland, Texas, San Diego, the New York Yankees, Atlanta, Seattle and Kansas City.

Ferguson Jenkins was 284-226 with 3,192 strikeouts. He was a 20-game winner seven times, including six straight seasons (1967-1972). He also won a Cy Young.

From 1C

Hendricks was the seventh Raider to join the 155-member Hall of Fame.

He picked up three Super Bowl rings, played in eight Pro Bowls, had 26 career interceptions and blocked 25 kicks.

"About the only goal left was the Hall of Fame," he said.

He said there was something special about being a Raider.

"A lot of people come out at the end of their careers and perform" for the Raiders, he said. Raiders president and general partner Al Davis has "got that mystique for the silver and black (the team's colors) that he developed himself. All he ever was concerned about was winning, and I cared about that, too. The Raiders believed that statistics don't mean anything, only winning."

Hendricks was ushered into the Hall by Davis, marking a record eighth time that the former Raiders coach and commissioner of the old American Football League had presented a player for induction.

Hendricks said the only thing that might have made his induction better was to have Davis precede him into the Hall.

"I guess, like the rest of the old Raiders, I wanted to see Al in there before us so he wouldn't have to make all these presentations without already being in the club himself," he said.

Bears shut down Browns, 13-0 in Canton opener

Associated Press

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Chicago Bears coach Mike Ditka looked at it as the first step toward reversing a 6-10 season.

"We needed to take a step forward and we did that. I think we can surprise some people this year," Ditka said after his Bears beat the Cleveland Browns 13-0 in the annual Pro Football Hall of Fame exhibition game Saturday.

The Bears dominated the Browns, limiting them to 128 total yards while picking up 307 yards. The Browns averaged 315 yards a game last season.

"Let's not get too excited, but there were a lot of good things out there," Ditka said.

Browns coach Bud Carson said, "It was a sloppy first game. Obviously we're not satisfied with it. But that's what you play the game for, to find out where you stand.

"We knew we had a lot of work to do. Now we know we've got a lot more to do than we thought we had."

Bears starting quarterback Jim Harbaugh completed six of eight passes for 97 yards before leaving the game in the first half with a bruised lower back.

"I was happy. Every series I was in we moved the ball and we did it throught the air," Harbaugh said. "The staff worked really hard over the offseason to give us better reads and plays. I think you saw that out there."

The Bears, whose 6-10 record a year ago included a season-ending string of six losses, had 18 first downs while holding the Browns to 10.

The Browns, 9-6-1 in the regular season and a 37-21 losers to Denver in the AFC title game a year ago, did not move the ball past their own 42 until the final minute.

Murphy's trade means nothing sacred anymore

An Analysis

By ROBERT BYRD

Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — On a team that consistently finished last, he was the consummate nice guy.

That's what made Dale Murphy a hero — truly a hero — in his adopted hometown, even more than his skills on the field. And those skills were considerable; it gets harder and harder to remember as the years go on, but there was a time when the best player in baseball roamed center field for the Atlanta Braves.

He was more than a ballplayer. He seemed a friend to everyone who came to see him, to everyone who turned on the "SuperStation" to watch him play.

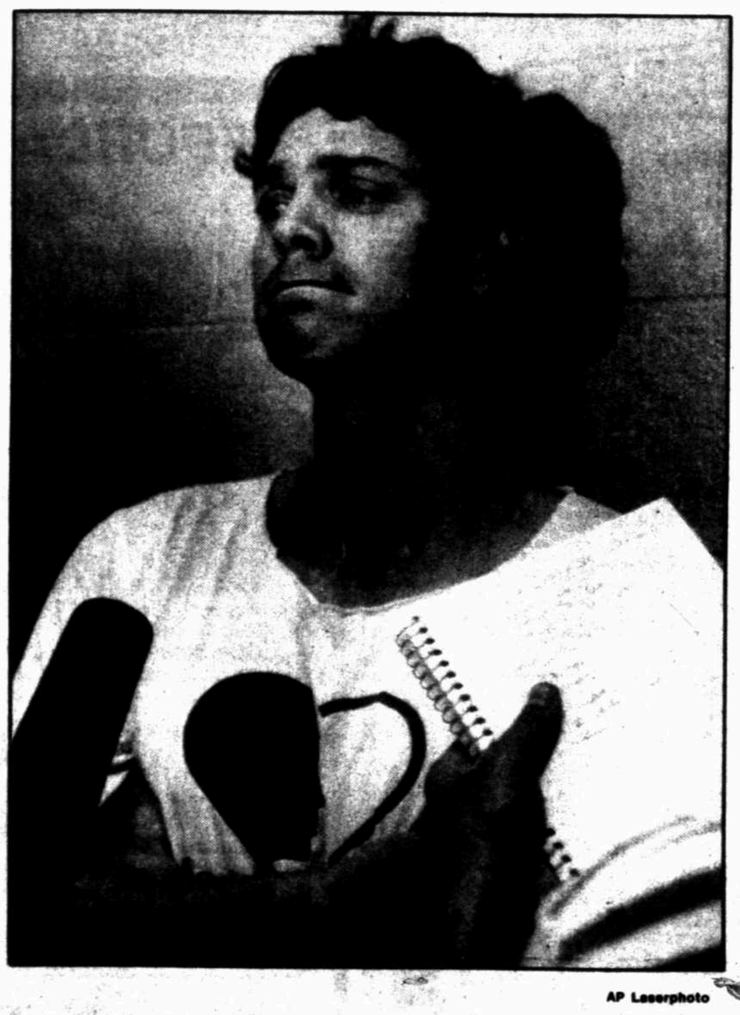
He seemed our friend because of what he didn't do, as much as because of what he did.

Dale Murphy never introduced his own line of sportswear. He never screamed "play me or trade me." He never complained that he was confused about his role when he was moved from catcher to first base to center to right. He never threatened to quit if he didn't get a 500 percent raise, and he never had his own 900 phone number.

Because of the things that he didn't do, and because of the things he did, a deeply religious man was cheered as an icon. Indeed, somewhere between his arrival in 1976 and his departure Friday night — and it would be impossible to say exactly when — the relationship between Dale Murphy and Atlanta shifted into something outside the realm of sport.

Families — it always seemed to be families that cheered the loudest for him — streamed every summer to Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, the kids wearing Murph T-shirts and waving Murph pennants. The team, of course, was horrible. They came to see him.

No matter how badly Murphy's season was going — and these last couple of years have not been good ones — the mere speaking of his name always drew the biggest ovation of the night.



AP Laserphoto

As a person, he really is too good to be true. He and his enormous family live in the suburbs just like everybody else — albeit in a house much larger than you or I could afford. He does charity work. He signs more autographs than the rest of the team put together. He smiles and talks to strangers. Yeah, all right, he did cut an advertising deal — for ice cream.

All that made it almost too easy to forget that he hit home runs, stole bases and never dogged it, not once.

And now he's gone, and not to the cries of an angry city that you might expect. For years now, at the ballpark, in the bars and on the sports talk shows, Atlantans have been wishing Murph would get traded — not because they don't like him, but because they do. He deserves a break. He deserves the chance to play for a winner.

Two years ago, Murphy almost went to the Mets, for Howard Johnson, Len Dykstra and Rick Aguilera. The Braves said it wasn't enough. Now he's gone for Jeff Parrett, earned run average 5.18.

Murphy's old slugging partner, Bob Horner, speculated in an interview last week that if the albatross of his last-place ballclub were lifted from Murphy, he could erupt with another MVP year.

Kite ties record, shares lead

Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Tom Kite came from seven shots off the pace with a record-tying 9-under-par 62 Saturday and grabbed a share of the lead with John Cook after 54 holes of the $1 million St. Jude Classic.

Cook, who began the day at 6-under, shot a 66 to bring his tournament total to 11-under 202, the same as Kite.

Kite started the third round at 2-under 140 before he tamed the TPC course at Southwind with his lowest round of the year and the third 62 of his PGA career.

Kite, the 1989 PGA player of the year, had four birdies on the back nine — his first nine holes of the day — and added five birdies on the front side to match the course record set in Thursday's opening round by Larry Silveira.

Silveira, who entered the third round with a 1-stroke lead, saw his bid for the $180,000 winner's check fade with a round of 4-over 75, leaving him six shots out of the lead.

David Canipe is alone in third place at 10-under 203 while Mark Brooks, Jay Don Blake and Tim Simpson are two shots back at 9-under 204.

Kite, who also holds the course record at Pebble Beach with a 62, said he is surprised by some of the scores being shot at the 7,006-yard, par-71 Southwind course.

"It's not an overall low leading score, but we are seeing some surprising individual scores. I feel the golf course is tougher (than the scores show), except that the greens are soft. If the greens were a little harder, some of the holes would be about impossible to get to," Kite said.

Tom Kite

"Somebody will get hot again tomorrow, but it's a question of how close to the lead they are. There are 20-25 guys that could win the tournament," said Kite, who finished second at Memphis in 1981 and 1987 and third in 1978 and 1979.

Kite birdied two of his first three holes and then began a string of four consecutive birdies by dropping a 25-footer at No. 17.

The 1973 PGA rookie of the year followed with a 4-foot birdie putt at the 18th and then added birdie putts of eight and 10 feet at the first and second holes to go 6-under for the day and 8-under for the tournament.

Kite, who missed only one green during his round, added a birdie-2 with a 20-foot putt at the fourth hole and chipped to within a foot for a birdie at No. 5.

Kite placed a 6-iron off the tee within 12 feet of the cup at the 169-yard eighth hole and converted the birdie putt to earn his share of the course record.

Cook used seven birdies to offset a pair of bogeys to grab a share of the lead.

"The wind was swirling a little, but it was a good day. It tested you and kept you on your toes," Cook said. "The greens were more puttable, the fairways are very good, I hit some good iron shots and I putted well. That added up to a 66 and kind of surprised me.

"I've played well lately on Thursdays and Fridays, but haven't been getting myself into position on Saturday," said Cook, a three-time winner on the tour, most recently at the 1987 International.

The 17-year pro, who shook off the effects of bogeys on his final two holes Friday with a first-hole birdie-3 at No. 10, said he found playing conditions suitable to low scores Saturday.

"The greens were in so much better shape. The first nine holes (Nos. 10-18 for Canipe) were like playing on new greens," said Canipe, whose top finish this season is a tie for 10th at the Greater Hartford Open.

"I guess my game is coming together with the summer heat."

Buffalo talks expansion

BUFFALO (AP) — Bob Rich Jr., representing Buffalo's expansion bid, has spoken informally with Montreal Expos owner Charles Bronfman about the team's availability.

Martin Stone, who represents Phoenix interests, said, "If the stadium falls through in Phoenix, I would be interested in purchasing the Expos with an eye toward keeping them there."

In a related development, a survey released Thursday by the Maricopa County Sports Authority indicated Phoenix-area residents were divided on whether a baseball stadium should be covered or open.

The survey found 27.7 percent favor an open-air stadium with a mist system for cooling, 27.4 percent favor a fixed dome

ANGELS: Pitchers dominate

From 1C

In fact, the big righthander did not allow a hit or a walk through four innings, and he fanned two. The only baserunner against Moore came on Aguayo's error at third, but it did no damage with two outs in the 10th because Davis nabbed that prospective thief as well.

Midland enjoyed a two-out triple by Mark Doran in the fifth, a stand-up job off the base of the right-center field wall that was his first of the year. But Doug Davis fanned to end the inning and keep Opperman in the game with a two-hitter.

Butcher kept his composure with a routine 1-2-3 effort in the top half of the sixth, and the Angel offense took advantage of two walks and a Howard Nichols single to knock Opperman out of the game. But still the Angels came up empty.

Second Game

Midland took the second game with 7-5 come-from-behind effort in the nightcap.

Brandy Vann got his first win as an Angel in relief, and the Haloes scored four runs in the fourth to erase a 3-0 deficit. They added three runs in the bottom of the sixth of the seven-inning game.

San Antonio got off to a 3-0 start that chased Midland starter Don Vidmar from the mound in the fourth. But Midland got four straight hits in the bottom half of the inning to tie the game and went ahead 4-3 as Mark Howie's hit into a fielders choice that was thrown home but off target, allowing Monell to score.

For the PGA, no news was good news

■ A discussion on racism is again prompted by the sports world as the PGA heads for an Alabama course known to discriminate against blacks.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — It has been a long time since there has been this much focus on the PGA national championship.

And never for this reason.

Nick Faldo has a chance to become the first man in 37 years to win three grand slam events in the same year.

But this tournament will more be remembered as the event that integrated all-white Shoal Creek country club.

Faldo comes to the 72nd PGA as the best golfer in the world. Greg Norman enters looking to re-establish his claim to that title. And Payne Stewart, the defending champion, suddenly is mentioned with the best.

But for now, the issue is racism, not by the PGA or the USGA or the PGA Tour, but by the private clubs where they hold their tournaments.

"I never knew," sighed Grant Spaeth, president of the United States Golf Association, "that leasing a piece of real estate for a couple of weeks could cause so much trouble."

The problems of this tournament are not Spaeth's. They belong to the PGA. But the issue raised will effect every tournament down the road.

It started when a black politician in Birmingham criticized the PGA for holding its national championship at a course that has no black members.

It heated up when the founder of Shoal Creek, Hall Thompson, said the club would not be pressured into admitting blacks.

It raged when civil rights groups said they would picket the event.

And it boiled over when several major advertisers pulled out of the television coverage of the event because of the tormoil.

Calm was restored and the threats of protest withdrawn after Shoal Creek agreed to integrate.

But there is still the question of all those other tournaments played on restricted clubs. And there are those not happy with the way the Shoal Creek controversy was settled.

The Augusta National Golf Club, host of the Masters and a recognized symbol of the all-white private club, has announced it will invite black members this fall.

The PGA Tour, the PGA and the USGA all have announced that policies have been or will be established to require non-discriminatory practices by the clubs that host their championships.

And Shoal Creek announced that a prominent black Birmingham businessman, Louis Willie, will be accorded honorary membership and steps will be taken to offer regular membership to other blacks.

The NAACP abandoned plans to picket and protest the tournament. Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said his group also would scrap planned demonstrations and urged all other groups to do the same.

A day later, however, two black players on the Senior PGA Tour, Lee Elder and Charles Owens, accused the NAACP and the SCLC of a sell-out in negotiations with Shoal Creek and the PGA.

"I feel we should go to the very end with this thing," said Elder, the first black to play in the Masters. "An honorary membership doesn't mean anything."

"You need a tub of water and you get a teardrop and you're satisfied. No, it didn't go far enough," Owens said.

The impact and possible consequences of those remarks are not clear.

But the PGA, seeking to avoid the recurrance of a racially motivated disruption of its championship 21 years ago, very quietly has taken security out of the hands of local Birmingham volunteers and established its own security standards and procedures.

In the 1969 PGA championship in Dayton, Ohio, a demonstrator protesting South African apartheid threw a cup of ice in the face of Gary Player. Player also was charged, but unharmed, by black demonstrators who ran onto the golf course during the playing of the third round of that event.

Jim Awtrey, executive director of the PGA, said he believes the current controversy has been settled.

"I'm confident this issue is behind us and we can go ahead in an orderly manner and conduct our championship without protests or demonstrations," he said.

But it is against a backdrop of controversy, disquiet and unease that 150 of the world's leading players will assemble for the last of the season's four major championships.

How long they'll all remain is not certain. Lee Trevino, who won this title at this course in 1984, said he'd come again but warned that any on-site problems would send him packing again.

Jim Thorpe, the only black from the PGA Tour to qualify for the tournament, said he only hoped "I don't get so tied up answering questions I can't concentrate on golf."

Faldo, in Great Britain while most of the furor about Shoal Creek was in progress, has been shielded from the controversy and may have little trouble keeping his mind on the game.

As the winner of the Masters and last month's British Open, he comes into the event as a clear-cut favorite to become the first since Ben Hogan in 1953 to win three major titles in a single season.

"It'll be fun to see how important that putt at Medinah really was," Faldo said.

The tall Englishman lipped out a 72nd hole putt at Medinah that kept him out of a playoff for the U.S. Open, the only major title he has missed this season.

ESPN and ABC will provide national television coverage despite the loss of several leading advertisers.

The ugly truth

John Hill, of Lockport, Ill., rests at an Illinois hospital Friday after being beaten while coaching first base during a Little League teen-age All-Star game Monday. A rival coach and others allegedly attacked him, leading to the 10-year veteran coach sustaining fractured ribs and a broken nose. Hill also has a bruise the size of a grapefruit after being hit on the leg with a baseball bat.

perennial city title contender Steve Whiteside, and seven ahead of Gee, whose putting suffered en route to a first-round 72.

The two-time city champ bounced back on the third ninc Saturday to post a 34, the third-lowest score on holes 19-27 behind Bryan and Spradlin.

Championship flight golfers will play another 27 holes today to finish making up for Friday's rainout. The championship flight will tee off for a nine-hole morning round, before returning for the last 18 holes, beginning at 2:15.

Golfers in the other flights were not affected by Friday's torrential downpour in northeast Midland.

Gee realizes that he has to play the golf of his life to catch Bryan today. But if he can't win it, he won't begrudge Bryan the chance at his first city title after several high finishes in recent years.

"If I can't win, I'd love to see him do it," Gee said. "I'm real happy to see it go well for him, because I admire his character."

Bryan was similarly gracious about Gee's plight.

"Bobby had a bunch of breaks go against him," Bryan said. Indeed, Gee said he might be up with his friend if he hadn't had a couple of makable putts lip out of the cup early Saturday.

"I hit the ball as good as I can hit it, but I really had a rough day putting."

Bryan didn't have a rough day doing anything. After breezing through his first 18 holes in 66 strokes, three fewer than both Whiteside and Bill Baker, Bryan birdied the first three and four of the first six holes in the afternoon round to take a commanding lead.

"I really just kept out of trouble," Bryan said. "I hit it in the rough once, and it cost me a stroke (when he had an unplayable lie and had to take a drop)."

Spradlin was somewhat able to keep pace, but the former New Mexico Junior College standout admitted that four shots would be hard to make up if Bryan maintains anything close to his Saturday pace.

"I guess anybody's catchable," Spradlin said. "But to catch him, I'll certainly have to get some breaks."

In results from other flights, Charles Killinen, Orlando Montanez and Barry Levin all shot 74 to lead the first flight, as did Tom Hill in the second flight. Emilio Armandez leads the third flight with an 83.

Charles keeps lead at Webber

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bob Charles shot a 2-under-par 70 to retain a one-stroke lead Saturday after two rounds of the Paine Webber Invitational at the Tournament Players Club at Piper Glen.

Charles, the leader on Friday with a 66, fell to even par with a three-putt bogey from 40 feet on the 389-yard 14th, but holed a greenside bunker shot for birdie on the 15th.

"I sure needed a boost because nothing was happening," Charles said. "When you're hitting good shots and not making anything, it's frustrating. And then after a three-putt on the hole before, I was feeling down."

He followed the chip shot with a four-foot birdie on the next hole and finished with a two-day total of 136, leading Bruce Crampton, Joe Jimenez and Tom Shaw by one.

Crampton opened with birdies on the first two holes to make up a two-stroke deficit, then added two more before struggling on the back nine.

Broncos slip by Seahawks

TOKYO (AP) — Alton Montgomery and Michael Brooks set up scores with pass interceptions and Elliott Smith ended a Seattle threat with another interception as the Denver Broncos beat the Seahawks 10-7 Sunday in an NFL exhibition game at the Tokyo Dome.

The game was played before an enthusiastic near-sellout crowd of 48,827, which lustily cheered every completed pass and hard hit.

The Broncos scored first after Montgomery picked off a Kelly Stouffer pass near the Seattle 40 and returned it to the 27.

Jimmie Jones, Dallas' third-round pick reported to camp after 17-day holdout.

Eric the Great still Eric the Late

Associated Press

Disgruntled running back Eric Dickerson isn't likely to be around when the Indianapolis Colts resume training camp workouts Monday.

Leigh Steinberg, who signed Dickerson as a client last week, indicated Friday that he doesn't anticipate a rapid return for Dickerson, AWOL since July 26. He is being fined $1,500 each day he is absent.

"What we hope to do is create a solution that will stand the test of time," Steinberg said. "True healing can't be done in just a couple of days."

Dickerson said Thursday that he hoped Steinberg could facilitate a trade to a Super Bowl contender, and if that failed, he hoped a resolution could be reached with the Colts.

"We're moving cautiously enough to make sure this gets done right," Steinberg said. "I realize we're dealing with a short-term time frame, but another day or two shouldn't matter if it gets done correctly."

The Colts have warned Dickerson and quarterback Chris Chandler, who has been missing from camp since July 20, that they are risking being placed on the league's reserve-left squad list which would suspend them without pay for all of 1990 without freeing them from their contract.

Irsay has said the club will not renegotiate either players' contract.

NFL Camps

While the 37-year-old Grogan has looked less than razor-sharp in the opening weeks of training camp, Wilson has made a strong bid for the starting role.

"I would like to be the starting quarterback, but I certainly don't mind if people refer to the quarterbacks as 'Grogan and Wilson,' " said Wilson, a 10-year veteran who joined the Patriots last year after a year's inactivity.

"I think I still have the skills that are necessary to not only play in this league, but to win," Wilson said.

The former Los Angeles Raider was working in real estate development in the Seattle area when the Patriots, looking for insurance in case Grogan could not return from a neck injury, signed him before the 1989 season.

However, the Patriots were unable to settle on a starting quarterback last year. Tony Eason and Doug Flutie each started for three games and Grogan for six before Wilson got his opportunity.

"I did have something to prove to myself, but that took about one day," he said. "From that point on, it was an effort to try and convince other people on this team that I was still a worthy player."

COWBOYS

Jimmie Jones, Dallas' third-round draft pick, made his first camp appearance in Saturday morning's workout. Jones, signed Friday after a 17-day holdout, practiced like someone who held out 2½ weeks.

"He looked rusty and very anxious at times," coach Jimmy Johnson said. "The other guys have been here awhile so he's got a lot of catching up to do."

Johnson also announced that the Cowboys had waived two rookie free agents: quarterback Fred McNair of Alcorn State, and offensive tackle Mark Warner from Canisius.

PACKERS

The two sides haven't talked since July 25 when Braatz issued a statement saying he had given Majkowski and agent Randy Vataha permission to solicit trade offers from teams outside of the NFC Central Division.

Braatz' deadline for Majkowski and his agent to find other offers was Saturday.

PATRIOTS

When the New England Patriots' quarterbacks are listed, Marc Wilson is usually mentioned behind 14-year veteran Steve Grogan.

That order may be reversed when the Patriots open the regular season Sept. 9 against Miami.

LIONS

In an offense that features four wide receivers on every play, it's impossible to have enough quality players running pass routes.

Detroit coach Wayne Fontes took four receivers in April's draft, hoping one or two to fit in the run-and-shoot offense. Those may be fifth-rounder Jeff Campbell of Colorado and eighth-rounder Willie Green of Mississippi.

As a senior at Colorado, Campbell caught 10 passes for 286 yards while returning 25 punts for 365 yards. He was all-Big Eight as a return man. Green He caught 41 passes for 816 yards and three touchdowns as a senior while finishing his career with 126 catches for 2,274 yards and 12 TDs.

CARDINALS

Timm Rosenbach, a leading candidate for Phoenix's starting quarterback job, threw for 143 yards and two touchdowns to highlight the controlled scrimmage against the San Diego Chargers.

Rosenbach completed 8 of 10 passes in the scrimmage, broken down into five 12-play series for each teams.

After hitting Roy Green with a 59-yard bomb to the Charger 6-yard line, Rosenbach flipped a touchdown pass to Vai Sikahema. Rosenbach later threw a 40-yard score to rookie Ricky Proehl.

"This was good experience. It's a step. I got a long way to go," Rosenbach said. "I felt really confident. It's a whole different story when you know what you're doing."

Fans even go wild for Jones

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

AUSTIN — Sights and sounds from the Dallas Cowboys training camp at St. Edward's University, Austin's Altar of Adoration:

■ A grown woman screaming and begging for Michael Irvin's autograph and giving it to her daughter with the warning: "If you lose it I'll brain you."

■ A crowd of at least 50 people sitting in the stands just to watch a grounds crew line the field.

■ A Texas Stadium crowd never sounded louder than the scream for signatures as owner Jerry Jones strolled down "autograph alley" on the path from the playing field to the lockerroom.

■ The screech of a hair drier at 3:30 a.m. penetrating the paper thin walls of St. Teresa dorm like a dentist's drill. The early bird was a broadcaster preparing for his radio show back home.

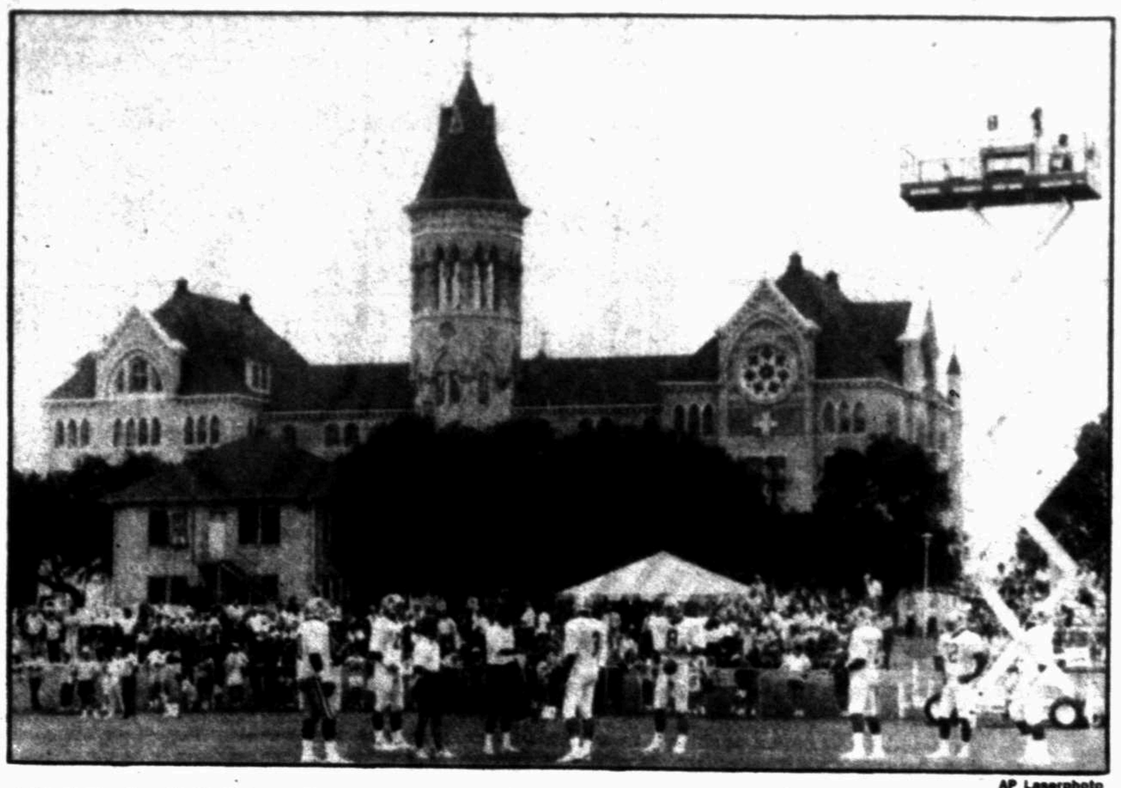
■ The humorous sight of coach Jimmy (Too Short) Johnson standing on a Coke box so the media swarm could hear him at the end of practice briefings.

■ The pitiful sight of 350-pound Nate Newton trying to deal with the suffocating heat and humidity.

■ A peppy fan who had to arise at the break of dawn to position himself so he could get autographs as sleepy-eyed players stumbled to practice. Some of the players were cut the next day.

■ The amazing enthusiasm of some 5,000 fans who paid $5 each to see a practice where there was no hitting at Westlake High School.

■ Kelvin Martin running his fastest route of the year to get away from reporters without explaining what happened when he was stopped by Austin police at 1:30 a.m.



AP Laserphoto

The beauty of St. Edwards University's architecture was one of the sights that caught the eye of AP sports writer Denne Freeman.

■ The laughter coming from a Babe Laufenberg interview. "I'm just two heart beats away from the starting quarterback job."

■ The brevity of wide receiver Dennis McKinnon, who said he didn't give interviews the first two weeks of camp.

■ The cheers for a simple completed pass from a crowd estimated at 6,800 fans for a Sunday afternoon workout.

■ The swarm of media for every practice. Cowboys press chief Rich Dalrymple issued over 250 working media passes.

■ The near civil disturbance created when the Austin police department started hauling away automobiles parked on the street alongside the Cowboys practice field.

■ The danger of watching practice along the sidelines. Several close misses on players hurtling out-of-bounds.

■ The flight of the ball after Troy Aikman throws it — a speeding projectile. The flight of the ball after Steve Walsh throws it — a wobbly duck.

■ The pitiful face of a fellow sports writer after he locked himself out of his automobile with the motor running.

■ The sharp crack of plastic on plastic as 250-pound human beings run into each other in the meat-grinder "middle drill."

■ The amazing way the newly sodded practice fields held together despite seven days of rain.

■ The beauty of the St. Edward's University stone academic building, constructed in 1888.

■ The completely spent players dragging back to their dorms after another practice in searing Texas heat.

Associated Press

SAN MARCOS, Texas — New Houston coach Jack Pardee took a long look during Saturday's practice at the Oilers return teams, an area targeted for improvement.

The Oilers have signed former Baylor standout Gerald McNeil and drafted Texas speedster Tony Jones in trying to shore up the return squads.

McNeil made it to the Pro Bowl in 1987 as a return man for Cleveland and Jones has sprinter speed.

"That's a lot of it," said Pardee of the speedy returners. "If we get a block we have people who can go all the way."

"We want to start our drives on something other than a touchback," Pardee said. "We want to start outside the 20.

"Gerald has looked as good as I thought he would. He's a natural. He's done it since he got crawled of the crib. Although he hasn't gotten much bigger since then."

McNeil, 5-8 and 144 pounds, played for Pardee when he coached the USFL's Houston Gamblers.

Starting quarterback Warren Moon was missing from Saturday's workout after traveling to Victoria to accept an award from the Texas Jaycees as one of the five outstanding young men in Texas.

The Oilers will not practice Sunday in order to participate in Family Day. Players will be available for autographs and pictures, while Pardee will receive the key to San Marcos from city officials.

Meanwhile, no progress had been made in contract talks with holdouts Cody Carlson, Patrick Allen, Sean Jones, Lenny Harris and John Grimsley according to General Manager Mike Holovak.

However you say it, Hogeboom says call me 'starter'

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — So far in training camp, Phoenix Cardinals new head coach Joe Bugel has called quarterback Gary Hogeboom "Hogenboom," "Hogebahm" and "Hogieboom."

He even forgot his first name at one news conference.

"No wonder he doesn't pay any attention to me," Bugel said with a laugh.

But as far as the former Dallas Cowboys quarterback is concerned, all he wants to be called by Bugel is "starter."

Hogeboom, an 11-year veteran, is locked in a three-way battle for the starting job with second-year pro Timm Rosenbach and third-year pro Tom Tupa.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't think I would be the starter," Hogeboom said. "The job's open. I still feel I can run a football team. I'm here to play."

The 6-foot-4, 207-pound Hogeboom was signed to a four-year, $3.27 million contract by Phoenix as a Plan B free agent in March 1989 after he played six years at Dallas and three at Indianapolis.

He started 13 times last year and completed 204 of 364 passes.

Hogs' departure may help Texas recruiting

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — The University of Arkansas' move to the Southeastern Conference should not hurt recruiting in Texas, and it may even help, UA recruiting coordinator Harold Horton says.

Former UA head Coach Ken Hatfield, now at Clemson, said he had voiced reservations about recruiting in Texas when talk of Arkansas changing leagues had surfaced during his years with the Razorbacks.

And, at least one SWC coach is already talking about hurting Arkansas recruiting in Texas by not scheduling the Razorbacks once they depart the conference.

But, Horton is optimistic.

"It's not going to affect us in Texas, because we will work hard," Horton said of the switch to the SEC. "We will get just as many out of Texas as we've been averaging. We'll get that many or more."

Arkansas has averaged six players a year from Texas since 1980 with highs of 12 in 1983 and nine in 1982. In four of those years, including 1990, the Razorbacks have signed just four players from Texas.

"Over 300 players from Texas signed with Division I teams last year," Horton said. "Approximately 100 signed with Southwest Conference schools. So, two-thirds signed with schools outside the SWC."

Since Wednesday's announcement that Arkansas would join the SEC, 20 players from Texas have been added to Horton's list of recruits who have agreed to visit the UA campus.

"We called them and they're very much aware (of the league change)," Horton said of all the Razorback recruits. "It's been very positive. Of course, kids are not looking for a reason not to come to a school."

R.C. Slocum, head coach at Texas A&M, said if the Aggies remain in the SWC he would not go out of his way to schedule future games with Arkansas.

"I don't see playing Arkansas after they've left our league. That could just give them a door into Texas for recruiting.

"They're going to have a problem (recruiting) in Texas if they don't play down here," Slocum said. "A kid's folks would never get to see him play in Texas. That is hard to overcome."

Horton said he believes Arkansas will continue to sign six or seven Texans each year. And, he said the move likely would help recruiting in other areas of the country.

"I think it will help us in northern Louisiana, in Memphis (Tenn.), in Mississippi and in St. Louis," Horton said. "I look at it as a positive because we have more to sell."

Jack Crowe, head coach at Arkansas, said he believes he can see more positives than negatives in Arkansas' upcoming recruiting efforts. "If we don't get any late surprises. If there are going to be any more changes, I hope they come before Jan. 1."

Both Texas and Texas A&M have been rumored as possible choices to follow Arkansas to the SEC.

Texas Coach David McWilliams declined to comment on a possible move, saying that is in the hands of UT president William Cunningham. Slocum said he wasn't privy to any such discussions at A&M.

Baseball becomes country's teflon-coated sport

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Baseball's best and worst, separated by 24 hours.

Monday night, a crowded hotel suite in New York City. George Steinbrenner's past catches up with him — he's out!

Tuesday night, a crowded ballpark in Milwaukee. Nolan Ryan catches up with the past — he's history!

Baseball bounces back, again.

But in its 100-plus years, has the game ever delivered two more disparate days? Two different stories on the front page for two different reasons?

There's Ryan: No talk and all action. A role model for kids ... and adults.

"I'm sure this is hard for some people to believe, but I'm not a numbers-oriented person," the man with a record six no-hitters said after his 300th career victory, in which he raised his all-time strikeout total to 5,219, some of them accomplished with a 100 mph fastball.

There's Steinbrenner: All talk and too much action. A magazine cover man ... for the wrong reasons.

"I'll win in the end. I always do," he said, long before his streak ended.

There's Ryan, the local boy from Texas who grew into a legend and became a national hero. In his moment of fame, he was flanked by his two sons.

"It's important to have my whole family here, let them share in it," the proud pop said.

There's Steinbrenner, the big-city ship-builder who also built a reputation as a national scourge. A minute after being defamed, he was pushing for his two sons to take over the family's other business, the New York Yankees.

Henry G. Steinbrenner for now and Harold Steinbrenner "at such time it becomes appropriate," the fallen father is saying. All because baseball did to Steinbrenner what he had done to so many managers and players.

"I've brought up my kids with the attitude that you treat people the way you want to be treated," Ryan said.

And, there's commissioner Fay Vincent. He met with Steinbrenner for most of Monday, then issued his ruling that night. On Tuesday evening, he was at home, watching Ryan on television.

"I don't feel slighted in the least," Ryan said. "With the number of media we had here, he might not have wanted to get into the Steinbrenner situation and take away from this."

But Ryan already had shown he could put history on hold, as well as make it.

Last year, at the time when commissioner Bart Giamatti was set to ban Pete Rose from baseball, Ryan was about to become the first pitcher to reach 5,000 strikeouts. Giamatti deferred and let Ryan go first — Ryan set the record on Aug. 22 and Rose was gone two days later.

Same thing this season. With Ryan at 299 wins, Vincent had decided that No. 300 should come before anything else. But after Ryan failed in his first try, Vincent couldn't wait any longer and announced his decision.

The next day, Ryan took care of business. Along the way, he brought baseball's focus back to the field. Once again, baseball had shown its ability to survive.

In the fall of 1981, a seven-week strike interrupted the NFL season. When football returned, not all of the fans did.

In the summer of 1981, a seven-week strike split the baseball season. When the players came back, so did the crowds, more than ever.

There was a time when the only strikes in baseball came on fastballs across the letters and curveballs that caught the corners. Those days, of course, are long gone, and it's better this way. Labor disputes, for example, helped lead to free agency and that has led to better competition.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The City Council of Midland, Texas will meet in regular session on August 14, 1990, at 10:00 a.m. in the City Council Chambers, City Hall, to consider approval of the proposed Statement of Objectives for the 1990 Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program. The Council will also consider approval of the 1990 to 1992 Housing Assistance Plan and the 1990 Community Development Plan.

The City will receive $736,000 in entitlement funds for FY 1990. $50,130 remaining unspent from prior years will be reallocated into the 1990 program and $27,000 of program income is expected in 1990. Total funds for the 1990 program are $813,130.

In summary, the "Midland Centennial Comprehensive Plan" and the "Objectives for Midland - the Eighties" contain the City's COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT OBJECTIVES. A primary objective is to improve the services, amenities and the environment in low and moderate income areas of Midland. Other objectives include providing for safe, sanitary and affordable housing, and economic redevelopment. To address these objectives, 1990 CDBG funds are proposed to be used as follows:

1. Playground Equipment for Day Care Center $7,000
Midland Project Self-Sufficiency's Goode Beginning Day Care Center (1321 S. Goode).

2. Meals for Senior Citizen Programs $59,159

3. Park Development in East Midland $17,500
Acquisition and developmental costs for new park (south of Golf Course and along Fairgrounds Road). Proposed facilities include baseball fields.

4. Neighborhood Housing Services Program. $62,500
Program delivery expenses (application assistance, counseling, rehabilitation related services) and a rehabilitation revolving loan fund (Crockett, Washington Park and South Park neighborhoods).

5. Emergency Home Repair Program. $15,000
Grants for emergency repairs (heating, gas lines, etc.) of low-income single-family owner-occupied homes within low and moderate income neighborhoods. Public Service.

6. Housing Rehabilitation Program. $100,000
Grant program for low and moderate income, single-family owner-occupied homes within low and moderate income neighborhoods.

7. Homeownership Incentive Programs. $100,000
Down payment and closing cost assistance for low and moderate income first-time home buyers (low and moderate income neighborhoods selected by neighborhood Housing Services).

8. Revolving Loan Fund Program. $75,000
Loan assistance by Midland Economic Development Company to businesses who will create or retain low and moderate income jobs. (Funds include $25,000 of estimated program income).

9. Neighborhood Street Paving Program $300,000
Streets in low and moderate income neighborhoods will be selected later.

10. Program Administration. $76,971
Funds include $2,000 of estimated program income.

TOTAL: $813,130

The above activities will not cause the displacement of people nor the loss of low or moderate income housing. However, should circumstances require that displacement occur, displacement will be conducted in accordance with the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Act of 1970. Should the loss of housing become necessary, such activity will be performed in accordance with the City's Residential Anti-displacement Plan.

Citizens are encouraged to comment upon the above objectives and Proposed uses. The proposed final statement to HUD is available for examination at the Department of Planning and Development, Room 220, City Hall, 300 N. Loraine. The approved Final Statement shall be available at the same location for public review until August 28, 1990 at which time it shall be forwarded to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

For further information, call the City's Department of Planning and Development at 685-7408.

First, National cars are backed by the industry's first "Buy Back Guarantee." If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with a car you buy from us, bring it back within 30 days or 1000 miles and we'll exchange it or buy it back."

Second, we sell only late model cars. And because we display the price on the window of each car, there's none of the usual haggling over price.

Third, we have a wide variety of cars to choose from. National currently has cars available to sell that were manufactured by General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Nissan, Honda and Toyota.

Additionally as an added convenience National accepts trade-ins and can arrange financing. *Some Restrictions Apply

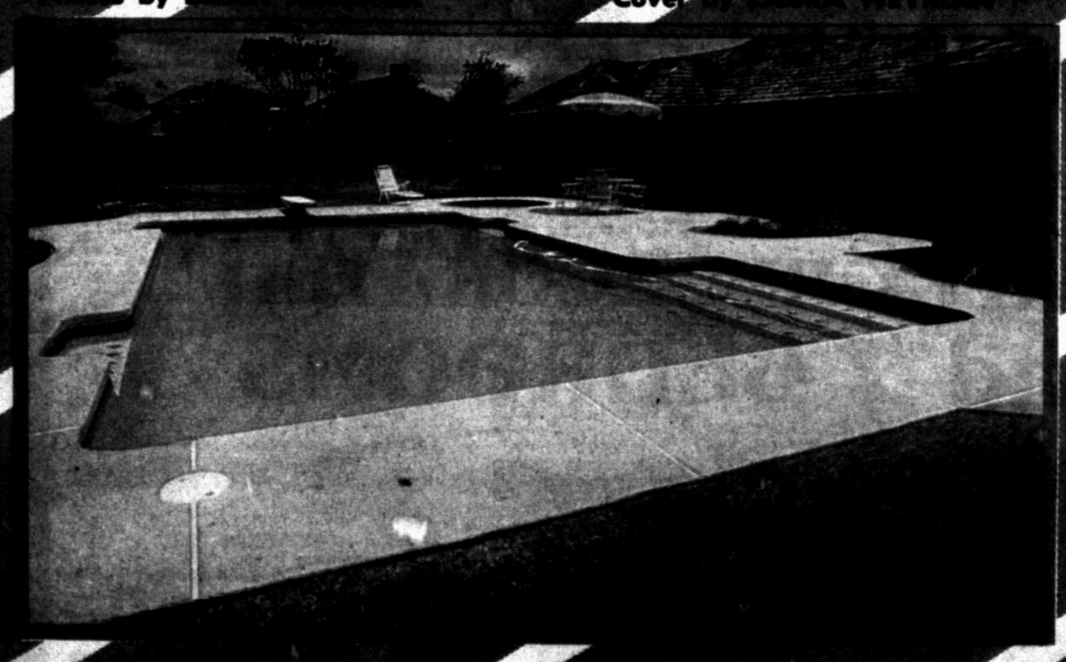
The Perfect COMBINATION



A sitting area, above, in the master bedroom is placed by an angled wall with windows. The outdoor pool, left, is very inviting, especially on a warm summer day.

By JILL HANCOCK

Knowing that every house must have a few innovative concepts to attract a potential buyer, a lot of thought was put into the location and design of this week's featured home. Appealing to all family members is a back yard pool and spa. Avid golfers, or even beginners, are just steps away from a luxurious 27-hole golf course. Residents will also enjoy fishing in the private lakes. The windows which are placed along the back of this four-bedroom and three-bath home take advantage of the view that Green Tree North offers its residents.

A spacious living room and an elegant dining room allow for formal entertaining, while a family room welcomes time for a favorite television show or movie. A study provides privacy for late night office work or a retreat to play games on a home computer. The well-planned kitchen and adjacent breakfast room are perfect for food preparation and family meal time.

This home definitely combines all the elements that owners are looking for today!

Leaded glass highlights the front entry of the home. The entrance hall has a tile flooring which provides a pathway to tour this residence. A paper in shades of mauve and teal adorn the walls. The leaded glass windows and transom allow for natural light and a brass light fixture descends from the cathedral ceiling.

The second part of this area is located to the left of the entrance. This versatile space can be used as a music room, easily displaying a grand piano, or as a seating area with a game table. Two walls provide a place to display favorite pieces of art.

The tile flooring which separates the two formal living areas leads past a walk-in wet bar into the family room. Access into the bar is made through the family room, but it has a pass-through into the living room when formally entertaining. A flame stitch paper in shades of mauve, teal, rust and blue lines the walls of the [illegible]. A matching border encircles the walls by the ceiling.

PERFECT: Back yard pool, spa are ideal for summer entertaining

(From 1D)

Four windows in the family room provide a grand view of the patio and back yard pool. This informal area is perfect as a gathering spot for a busy family. A French door opens onto the patio. The spacious back yard is divided by a curved brick wall which allows for privacy for swimmers, but does not detract from the openness of this area.

Extending to the left of the front door, the tile flooring leads to the formal dining room. This elegant room has walls which are lined with a pale peach wallpaper and a border framing the tiered ceiling. A medium shade of peach is inset in the ceiling and a brass fixture serves as a gorgeous accessory. A floor-to-ceiling window overlooks the front yard.

A doorway, which divides the formal dining room and the music area, opens into a wonderful kitchen and breakfast room. Shades of rose and mauve decorate this area. The kitchen was planned around an island that can seat two people. A windows above the kitchen sink frames the front yard. The appliances include a General Electric double oven, cooktop and dishwasher, as well as a Compactall trash compactor. There is an inset in the cabinets for a microwave, a built-in desk and beveled edge countertops.

The adjacent breakfast room is brightened by a tall window that views a beautifully landscaped flower bed. A sever is inset along one wall and features upper glass cabinets for pottery and glassware and lower cabinets for storage. An angled ceiling also highlights this room.

A corridor leads from the breakfast area to a corridor which is adjacent to the family room. The large laundry room can accommodate a washer, dryer, freezer, a built-in ironing board and a sink. A window allows a view of the front yard. A door leads to the side-entry, three-car garage.

A guest bath is located next to the laundry room and by the family room. It has a southwest wallpaper and a fantastic mirror which compliments the decor. The location is also idea for swimmers.

Sequestered for privacy, a spacious bedroom is situated at the end of this hall. The room features white walls with a wallpaper border along the top of the walls. A window frames the back yard. A wallcovering which is similar to the border in the bedroom adorns the walls in the full bath. A skylight brightens the bath.

From the front entrance, the tile pathway leads to the right to a private study. This room is large enough for a desk and a sitting area. It is also ideal for overnight guests.

A hallway to the right of the study leads to the home's other three bedrooms. The first two bedrooms have tall windows and spacious walk-in closets. They are connected by a full bath which is decorated in a pale peach wallpaper. A skylight allows for lots of light into this area.

The master bedroom is situated at the end of the hall. A sitting area is placed in front of an angled walls with windows that overlook the back yard pool. A French door provides a private access to the back yard pool and spa. This room is enhanced by a southwestern border on the white walls and the cathedral ceiling.

A door opens into the private bath which is designed with two separate vanities, a deep bathtub, built-in shower and customized closets. Two skylights brighten this room, with a paper in shades of teal, blue, mauve, rose and cream adding color.

The exterior of this approximately 3,600 square foot home is highlighted by a circular drive with brick ribbon accents, brick curbed flower beds which are filled with lush landscaping and large oak trees. The other amenities include a central vacuum system, a security system and a sprinkler system.

Langston, Realtors is offering this two-year-old home for $279,000.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

The kitchen is planned around a central work island that is also used as a breakfast bar.

This home is designed around a waterfall, outdoor pool and atrium and is being offered by Don Harvey, Realtors.

Floor plan highlights home

By Jill Hancock
Advertising Feature Writer

A fossil rock exterior adds to the unique appeal of a five-bedroom home that is located in Green Tree Country Club Estates. Designed around a water fall, pool and atrium, this two-story home views these areas from many of the rooms.

Two massive wood doors open onto a magnificent front entry which has a 20 ft. ceiling. A staircase, whose design is similar to the letter "Y", is placed against the back wall and leads to four bedrooms and a family room. A window above the first part of the staircase views a two-story rock waterfall.

Long corridors, one upstairs and one downstairs, wind through the entire home, enabling many of the rooms to view the waterfall, pool and atrium. To the right of the front entrance, a door opens into an octagon shaped room that can be used as a study, or due to the adjacent full bath, as a bedroom.

A spacious game room is located next to the study. The hallway steps down into this area whose walls are lined with built-in bookcases and a wet bar. This room can easily accommodate a pool table, as well as a seating area. A rock fireplace is situated at the left end of this room, dividing it from the formal living room. The full bath which serves the study/bedroom also opens onto the game room.

The corridor extends along the back of the home to two doors, one which opens onto the atrium, to the left, and on the right side to the back yard. The atrium is filled with lush foliage. The back yard has a wrought iron and rock fence which overlooks the golf course.

The formal dining room is located across from the atrium. A wall of windows, a built-in buffet, fabric along the ceiling and a crystal chandelier are the amenities of this octagon-shaped area.

The kitchen is placed next in this circular hallway. An island with a Jenn-Air cooktop divides the kitchen and the breakfast nook. The other features include two pantries, a breakfast bar, cabinets with electrical plugs inside to conceal appliances and modern appliances.

The staircase leads upstairs to four bedrooms and a family room. The first room, to the right, has a window that overlooks the front yard and has a window seat for storage.

A door off of the hall allows for passage to a deck that leads, via a winding staircase, down to the outdoor pool.

Divided into two areas, the master suite is very unique and includes a fabulous bath. A dual rock fireplace separates the sitting and sleeping areas. Windows view the pool and a door provides access to the pool. A sliding glass door opens into a private deck. A ladder leads to an observation deck on the roof.

The bath has two vanities, a whirlpool tub nestled in one corner and a large steam shower with a seat.

A hallway from the master bedroom leads to the family room. A pagoda shaped wood ceiling, a wrap around desk with windows that view the golf course and storage cabinets are the amenities of this room.

The fourth and fifth bedrooms are connected by a full bath. The bath has two private dressing rooms with a vanity and share the bathing area.

For a private viewing of this unbelievable home and to see the other amenities, call Don Harvey Realtors at 683-5333. This home is priced at $279,000.

First-time buyers need to understand closing costs

Many home buyers, especially first-time purchasers, are unaware of the cost to close on a property — but these terms and costs are important for both the first-time and the repeat buyer.

"First-time buyers probably have the toughest time with closing costs partially because they don't know what to expect. Closing costs can add up and, therefore, prospective home buyers need to plan ahead so they don't get caught with fees they hadn't planned for," says Dene Kelly, president of Dene Kelly, Inc. Realtors.

Dene Kelly, Inc. Realtors is a member of RELO/The International Relocation Network, the nation's oldest and largest referral network of independent real estate brokers, headquartered in Chicago.

The RELO network provides a wide range of relocation services to assist transferees and their families sell a house in one community and purchase a new home in the new community. It will be celebrating its 30th anniversary this year.

Ms. Kelly notes some of the closing costs that prospective home buyers should be aware of:

Dene Kelly

■ Appraisal — an expert judgment or estimate of the quality or value of real estate as of a given date.

■ Attorney's fee — the cost to receive legal counsel in order to complete the home-buying transaction.

■ Credit report — a statement of the borrower's credit history and ability to pay a bank loan. The cost is usually less than $75.

■ Discount points — set on a range of zero to four points, discount points reflect the difference between the loan's face value and it's current cash value. Each point is one percent of the loan.

■ Escrow — money or other valuables left in trust with a third party until the fulfillment of a specific art or condition.

■ Homeowners insurance — the cost of insuring a home is usually paid one year in advance.

■ Interest per diem — this reflects the prorated interest or mortgage payment which starts with the date of closing and runs until the first mortgage payment.

■ Mortgage insurance — protects the lender if the buyer defaults on mortgage payments. The premium for mortgage insurance varies with the type of mortgage.

■ Origination fees — this fee covers the lender's cost for processing a loan. The cost is usually one percent of the total loan.

■ Recording fee — the fee paid for making the real estate transaction a matter of public record.

■ Transfer taxes — the fee paid to a city for transferring ownership of property.

■ Title Insurance — protects the home buyer from any loss that may be incurred as the result of a defect in the title.

Ms. Kelly notes that fees for these various documents, transactions and legal assistance will vary upon the community, the property and other variables. "A good attorney will be able to assist homeowners in deciphering the route to purchasing a home," she adds.

In addition to providing a wide range of relocation services, the RELO network has entered into an agreement with the Dallas-based Associates Corporation of North America, allowing Dene Kelly, Inc. Realtors and other RELO members to further help homebuyers, as well as sellers by offering a variety of expanded financial services, including mortgage services, homeowners insurance and a special mortgage program for transferees.

Dene Kelly, Inc. Realtors has 18 sales associates and has served Midland for 12 years.

Face Value

... put on a smile

By Elizabeth Edwin Lifestyle Editor

It's said that you can't judge a book by it's cover, but quite often people are taken at "face value." And once that first impression has been made, it may be very difficult to change it. So it's important that you put your best foot — or face — forward.

A smile is one of the most effective ways to do this. That's just one of the reasons that Monday through Aug. 12 has been designated as "National Smile Week."

According to Chase's Annual Events, the week annually begins on the first Monday in August and is sponsored by internationally syndicated columnist Heloise. Her recommendation is to, "Share a smile and it will come back to you, bring happiness to you and the giver."

Heloise's sentiment is very true. Not only does a smile create a warm feeling for the receiver, but it makes the giver feel and look better, too. Face it. If someone steps in front of you with a camera, generally the first thing you do is smile because it makes you look more attractive.

"There's a significant amount of research showing that the giving of smiles is very healthy, that is helps shift attitudes," said Dr. Jim May, director of the Family Wellness Center. "When someone smiles at us, our attitude toward them will shift, it gives a warm feeling."

May said that some of the research conducted about the benefits of smiles and laughter included a study with mothers and their infants. "Some of the babies were just taken care of. The others were smiled at and talked to and this group progressed much faster," May said. "It really is true that a smile really does change a person's attitude, whether they give or receive it."

One way to keep a smile on your face is to keep a positive attitude and try to be around positive people. In Robert L. Whiteside's book, "Face Language II," he notes that the traits of optimism and pessimism are so old that they were recognized and used in the masks of the actors of ancient Greece. "The happy, upturned mouth symbolized comedy, and the sad, drooping mouth symbolized tragedy," he wrote.

Grin and Bear a Healthy Smile

Text by Elizabeth Edwin

Having a great smile doesn't just happen by turning the ends of your mouth upward. A great smile also requires care of your teeth. So, in honor of National Smile Week, Monday through next Sunday, here are a few tips to help you keep your smile looking good.

General maintenance of teeth is very important in the prevention of tooth decay. But the hardest part about taking care of your teeth is it must be done on a day-to-day basis and no one can do it for you; this is something you must do for yourself.

Some of the basic tools you will need include a toothbrush, dental floss, a floss handle (if you have trouble reaching some areas), toothpaste and few minutes each day.

Many dentists also recommend a flushing mechanism such a the Waterpik. "Things like the Waterpik and electric toothbrushing are good as an addition, but they do not take the place of hand brushing and flossing," said Midland dentist John T. Greer. They are particularly helpful to those who wear bands or braces because, "you can't floss with braces on," Greer said.

The toothbrush is the first step in keeping a beautiful smile. Greer recommends a soft, multi-tufted brush with rounded bristles. "They are kinder to the teeth and soft tissue," Greer said. "Hard bristles will not clean the teeth any better and can be abrasive. ... A soft brush is more flexible and can move into places a hard brush cannot. A soft bristle is more forgiving to those who don't brush properly."

A gentle scrubbing motion should be used for brushing all teeth. Be sure to reach the inside, or tongue side, of the teeth as well.

In his book "The Complete Family Guide to Dental Health," Jacob Himber, D.D.S., recommends

Fund-raiser benefits the Volunteer Center

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Some 420 Midlanders could be found at the American Legion Hall the evening of July 28, enjoying Shrimpfest '90, a party benefiting the Volunteer Center of Midland.

McKnight-Harrison

It featured "all you can peel 'n eat Cajun Style Shrimp" with boiled vegetables, cole slaw, fruit cobbler, beer and wine coolers.

The festive event included Swing and Dixieland music by Paul Diveley's "Easy Listening" Band and also a silent auction.

Among those seen at the gala were Jay Renolds, Kay and Mike Smith, Barbara and Mark Reed, Carol and Jack Steele, Siri and Richard Langston, LaVerne Foster, Susan and Randall Foster and Molly and Dode Harvey.

A FEELING OF DEJA VU prevailed at last weekend's party at the home of Liz and Bill Pennebaker to honor former Midlander Shirley Hansen, now of Atlanta, Ga.

The same clever invitations, issued to her farewell party six years ago, were reprinted (with updates, of course) asking guests to meet again at the Pennebakers. Reprising their roles as co-hosts were Ruth Cole, Bebe Fisher, Douthea and Bill Shaner and Billie and Jim Ross.

The guests enjoyed a buffet dinner and listening to Shirley, a piano player of note, and several of her musican friends "jam."

Her son, Jim Hansen, and his wife, Dixie, of Lubbock, were special guests. Other out-of-town guests included Mary (Pennebaker) and Jim Truitt of Big Spring and Jamie Pennebaker and Tom Fisher, both of Dallas. Among others stopping by to greet Shirley were Rita Buckley, Jane and Ray Riddle, Marty and Jim Conine, Madeline and Bill Pomeroy and Gladys and T. June Melton.

A SUMMER MUMMERS party was held recently to honor the 1990 Minuet Club debutantes. The debs and their guests enjoyed a rollicking evening, complete with Mummer hats and popcorn throwing.

Guests included Jeff Sommers, Ty Chambers, Andrew Ray, Greg Crowe, B.J. Holloway, Jason Oglesby, Eddie Phillips and Jeff Fry.

Hosts for the evening were Charlene and Doug Bunnell, Gayle and Doc Dodson, Rosalind and Arden Grover, Janet Foster, Jan and Dick McMillan, Toni and Bob Midkiff, Sarah and Russell Neisig, Margaret and James Purvis, Rosalind Redfern and Marilee and Ed Runyan.

OUR BEST WISHES go with Mona Gale Gibson as she leaves Midland after 14 years to make her home in Houston.

She was honored at two recent farewell parties, the first at the home of Nancy and Skeet Doss and co-hosted by Jim Bartlett. Guests included Mona Gale's Midland Community Theatre friends. Performance time was 8 p.m.,and guests were asked to "Come give your final ovation to this special 'Drama Mamma.'"

"Adios Mona!!! Look Out Houston, Here She Comes!" So began the colorful invitations to the second party held at Meadow Park Clubhouse.

Hosts and hostesses were Bob Anderson, Jo Caye Faught, Bob McDonald, Phur McKown, Tim Rosborough, Clint Walker, Cindy and Mark Earl, Jean and John Lawrence, Karen and Mark Neinast, Lisa and Fred Wagner, Carol and D.C. Wayland and Libby Watson.

Mona Gale, who has been a speech pathologist for the Midland Independent School District, will be in the same line of work in the Cypress-Fairbanks ISD.

The champagne brunch is to be held at 10:30 a.m. Aug. 11 at the Petroleum Club. Informal modeling will take place during brunch with fashions shown from J.E. Borron, The Canopy, The Gazebo, Margaret's, Pappagallo and Phyllis Short Jewelry.

Television personality Mary Catherine Mathews will be the commentator, and alums and their children will model.

Proceeds will benefit Family Services of Midland and the Chi Omega Scholarship Fund.

HEALTHY: Floss for a flashy smile

holding the brush at a 45 degree angle and moving it horizontally to and fro along the gum line and slightly under. This helps clean the area of the teeth that the gums comes over but is not attached to the teeth.

Once you have gently scrubbed each tooth, take the brush with toothpaste and scrub the top of your tongue. This may seem silly at first, but the tongue is rough and has many depressions that can hold odor-forming bacteria and food debris that decompose.

"Ideally, teeth should be brushed after every time you have a food product," Greer said, "but they should be brushed at least once a day; after breakfast or a bedtime.

"Everybody can brush in the morning and at night, but many people can't brush at lunch because they're at work. That's where I recommend swish and swallow. After the meal, just take some water and swish it around to rinse the teeth, then swallow," Greer said. "And the sooner you brush after a meal the better."

"The waxed floss was designed to slide between the teeth easier, but for those with tight placement, the unwaxed is not as fat and will fit between teeth easier," Greer said.

The reason for flossing is simple. Each tooth has five exposed surfaces and you have only been able to brush three of them: the cheek side, the tongue side and the biting or chewing surface. Unfortunately, the two remaining sides in between teeth are where most cavities start. This is where the gums get swollen and sore, and often bleed easily if not taken care of.

To floss, take about 18 inches of floss and begin to gently guide the floss between the teeth to the gum line. Then scrape, rubbing the side of the tooth toward the biting surface. Then pull the floss to the side of the adjacent tooth and scrape in the same manner. Do this until there is a "squeaky clean" sound.

Try to never pull or push the floss with a snap into the gum. This can cut the gum and make it bleed. However, realize that when you first start flossing, your gums may bleed a little and there may be a little soreness. As plaque is broken up, the gums should heal and bleeding should stop. If it does not, contact your dentist.

What you eat is as important as when you eat it. Generally, the foods you would eat for an overall healthy diet are the same foods you eat for healthy teeth. Also, sugars and starches that are consumed during a meal with other foods cause less acid formation than those eaten as a snack by themselves.

Fluoride helps protect teeth. The fluoride actually combines with and is deposited into the surface layer of the tooth's enamel in the form of fluorapatite, according to Himber. The more cleaned teeth are exposed to fluoride, the more fluoride is absorbed, and teeth become more resistant to dental decay.

Professional cleaning of the teeth also is very important to the prevention of tooth decay. "How often teeth need to be cleaned depends of the person's tendency toward plaque buildup and decay," Greer said. "Some people need to come in every three months because their plaque builds up rapidly and they are more prone to decay. Others only need to have a cleaning once a year. We really base it on an individual's needs, but a good rule of thumb is twice a year, not only for the cleaning, but to check for decay."

But even with good protection from fluoride and twice a year visits to the dentist, there is no one total immunity program to keeping a healthy smile. Unless combined with an effective oral hygiene program executed by the individual, even the skillfully and perfectly performed denistry is doomed to failure.

SMILE: Positive attitude breeds optimism, grins

(From 1E)

Abraham Lincoln once said, "The dear Lord gave us our face, but we make our own mouth."

If you find yourself dealing with a pessimist, Whiteside suggests:

- "Expect pessimism, so don't share your dreams or you will get cold water poured on them."
- "Talk 'positive' (constructively) to keep up your own morale. Whistle, hum or sing something light, such as 'Yankee Doodle' or 'Deep in the Heart of Texas.'
- "Get out as soon as you can, and find an optimist to be around."

If you find yourself in the presence of an optimist, Whiteside said:

- "Celebrate. Here is somebody all too rare and fun to be with.
- "You can share your news or knowledge without having a 'wet blanket' thrown at them.
- "Invite them to your parties and in hiring, give them extra consideration or favor."

To help yourself keep a positive attitude, the Optimist Club follows a creed that you may benefit from: "Think only of the best, work only for the best, expect only the best. Wear a cheerful countenance at all times, and greet every living creature with a smile."

Although a smile is generally thought of being executed with the mouth, it is really made with the whole face, especially the eyes:

People with bright, sparkley eyes attract attention. They are usually animated and full of spirit. Fortunately, according to Whiteside, this is a trait that can be cultivated. "Look in the mirror and think of what you most love — your eyes will brighten. In a way, magnetism or charm is spirit shining out. The eyes are indeed the 'windows to the soul.'"

Unfortunately, this charisma also ebbs with how a person feels. Lack of sleep, poor nutrition or an unsettling problem will show in the eyes. It's almost as if the eyes are the exposed part of the nervous system.

So during the next week, see if Heloise is right. As you come face to face with someone, give them a smile in honor of National Smile Week and see if it comes back to you and makes you feel better.

"It's easy to test," May said. "Just test it for a week."

Everybody gets 'the blahs'

N.Y. Times News Service

So you're feeling a bit low, uninspired, tangled in a web of boredom and moping that you cannot control.

You drag your body to the mirror, stare at the gloom in your eyes and exclaim: "Why me!"

Fact is, you're not alone when it comes to landing the blahs. Everyone stumbles across the road to this dump of a place from time to time.

Reasons can stem from being listless, disappointed, anxious, irritated or overstressed. Say your spirits are dragging the ground because a beach vacation is not in the family's plan. Or the long summer with nothing to do is making you weary.

Hey, bud, you could have the blahs.

But if the somber mood grows stronger and continues for a long time, depression rather than the blahs may be the trouble.

Depression — a state of being sad and gloomy — can be caused by unpleasant changes or challenges encountered daily. For example, a death in the family or the birth of a little sister or brother may bring on big worries or stress.

Depression may result from a chemical imbalance in the body, said Ron Rebal, psychiatrist and medical director of Harris Methodist Springwood in Euless, Texas.

Whatever the cause, if your blue mood can't be shaken as soon as you see the light at the end of the tunnel, get out of the hole. Confide in your parents or an adult you trust.

Maybe a visit to the family doctor or a counselor is in order. If that's the case, seeking help doesn't mean you'll end up in a windowless hospital room. Rebal said many times depression is treated with medication and counseling.

"Depression is a real common problem," Rebal said. "It's very treatable. The sad thing is when people are depressed and they don't get treatment."

Like most illnesses, depression doesn't come without warnings. The following is a list of some signs:

- Unhappiness.
- Changes in habits, especially sleeping and eating — either not enough or too much.
- Changes in attitude or behavior — either sad and withdrawn or overly aggressive.
- Restlessness or irritability.
- Inability to enjoy yourself. Even when good things are happening, you still can't pick yourself up.

Chronic fatigue syndrome virus hunted

By Elaine Herscher
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Researchers at the University of California at San Francisco say they are within months of developing a blood test that will help identify victims of chronic fatigue syndrome, a major step in the fight against the mysterious illness.

Scientists have recently reported that they are convinced that, like people with AIDS, victims of chronic fatigue syndrome suffer from an immune system disorder. Researchers hope that the blood test will determine who has the type of immune system problems that are believed to lie at the root of the disease.

"Much of the approaches we used to find the AIDS virus we are using to find this one," said prominent AIDS researcher Dr. Jay Levy, professor of medicine and research associate at UCSF's Cancer Research Institute.

Levy hopes to show that a virus is the cause of the immune system defects that mark the syndrome.

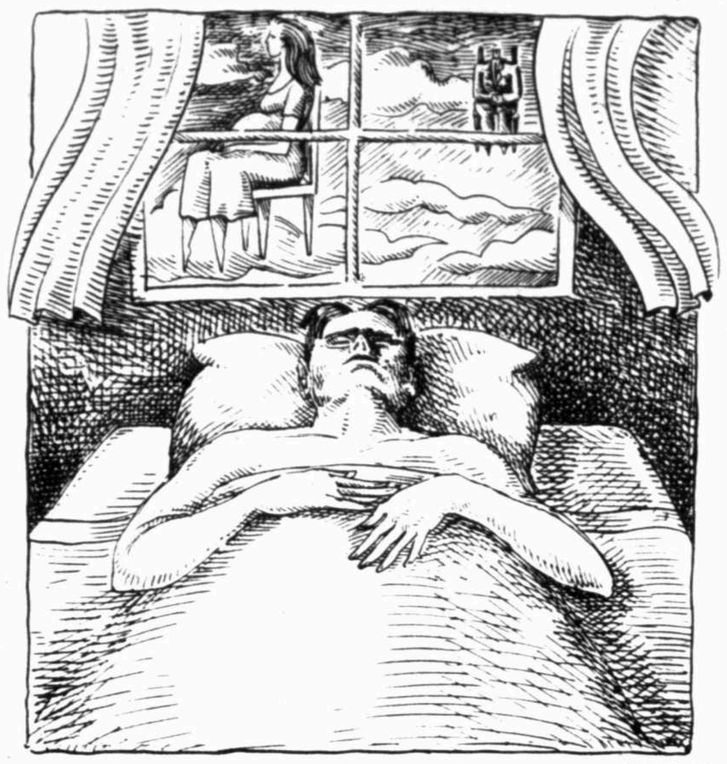
Levy's findings could provide the most significant proof to date that chronic fatigue syndrome is a legitimate malady and not a figment of the collective imagination of an estimated 3 million afflicted Americans.

Although many researchers continue to express doubts about the existence of a specific disease, a growing number of physicians and scientists believe that chronic fatigue syndrome is a definite and increasing phenomenon.

An apparent surge in the number of cases, new knowledge about the disease and attention from influential researchers have elevated the syndrome from so-called yuppie flu to what Levy describes as "the disease of the '90s."

SYMPTOMS OF THE disease range from near-paralyzing fatigue to heart and brain abnormalities that can leave people debilitated for years.

The national Centers for Disease Control, which has identified the illness as "an emerging epidemic," in March began a $1 million investigation into the prevalence of chronic fatigue syndrome nationwide. The move was prompted by



CNS Graphic

1,000 phone calls a month to the CDC from doctors and patients.

Researchers, including Dr. John Dwyer, former chief of clinical immunology at the Yale University School of Medicine, estimate that 1.5 percent of the world population has the disease, including about 3.5 million in the United States.

"I think there are many people who have this disease who are afraid to admit they have it because of the stigma," Levy said.

"Many physicians are not taking them seriously. That's why we need a way of defining it."

Levy and his colleagues, Dr. Alan Landay, a visiting scientist from Rush Medical School in Chicago, and Dr. Carol Jessop, an El Cerrito, Calif., internist who specializes in treating chronic fatigue patients, do not claim to have identified a virus that causes chronic fatigue syndrome. But they do say they have found identifiable white cell abnormalities that are highly specific to patients with the syndrome.

IN ADDITION, Levy said, a blood test for the disease may lead to ways to balance the immune system even before an infectious agent is discovered.

In the June 1990 Journal of Clinical Microbiology, a team led by Dr. Nancy Klimas of the University of Miami School of Medicine wrote that "CFS is a form of acquired immunodeficiency."

"This deficiency of cellular immune function was present in all the subjects that we studied," it said.

Although researchers are uncertain about the cause of the disease, a virus is suspected because the illness has broken out in clusters.

The most notable of the outbreaks was at the ski resort town of Incline Village, Nev., where the syndrome was diagnosed in 200 people in 1984. That year, about 100,000 people in the United States, Canada and New Zealand were believed to have been stricken.

"The sudden increase suggests this is a viral agent," Levy said.

Jan Montgomery, who founded the Chronic Fatigue Immune Dysfunction Syndrome Foundation in San Francisco after she contracted the illness, is typical of people diagnosed with the disease.

Montgomery, 41, said that in the past three years she has never felt better than 60 percent of normal. The disease has affected nearly every system in her body.

SHE HAS BEEN bedridden for weeks with fatigue and has experienced swollen lymph glands, joint pain, memory loss and seizures. She was hospitalized recently with heart trouble stemming from the syndrome.

"This is a terroristic disease," she says.

What little research has been done nationally so far has been paid for mostly by patients. In San Francisco, Montgomery's foundation is operating on donations and a small grant from the San Francisco Health Department.

In spite of the many recent findings, however, patients such as Montgomery continue to encounter skepticism from doctors who do not believe that chronic fatigue syndrome exists. The patients say their problems were compounded recently by an erroneous press release from the American Medical Association that said depression, not a virus, is the source of the illness.

The mistake in the July 3 press release was sent to media across the country and purported to describe a new study published in the AMA's weekly Journal of the American Medical Association.

In fact, the JAMA article ruled out Epstein Barr virus as the cause, a conclusion that was substantiated by other studies years ago. The authors explored the incidence of depression among patients but did not identify depression as the source of the syndrome.

"We confused chronic fatigue syndrome with chronic fatigue," AMA science news editor John Hammarley said of the erroneous press release. "We sent out the release before the lead author saw it."

SIMPLE CHRONIC fatigue, which is often associated with depression, is far less debilitating than chronic fatigue syndrome.

Asking questions important when picking nursing home

By Nancy Stancill
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Shop carefully if you're faced with finding a nursing home for a loved one.

Sharon Zill, assistant director of the Center on Aging at the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston, recommended visiting a variety of nursing homes and asking many questions before making a decision.

Visit during the day and come back at night or on weekends when nursing homes tend to be staffed thinly, said Zill.

Eat a meal there and take in the atmosphere. Do staff members look happy or harried? Is there a homelike feel to the place? Is it odor-free? Are residents encouraged to add furniture and other personal effects to their rooms?

Ask to see health department surveys. Ask if the home in recent years has been decertified, placed on vendor hold or fined.

Talk to the director of nurses as well as the administrator. Zill recommends asking the following:

- What is the percentage of Medicaid to private-pay patients? Because Texas Medicaid rates are so low, private-pay patients generally subsidize patient care, Zill said. The higher the percentage of private-pay residents, the better the care is apt to be.
- What is the turnover rate for nurse aides and licensed vocational nurses? Is the director of nurses a registered nurse? How long has the administrator been there? Must the facility resort to using contract nurses to fulfill staffing requirements? Staff stability means a lot.
- How much does the facility spend per resident per day on food? One dietitian said many for-profit homes spend as little as $2.65 per resident. Do the aides help to feed the residents? Do aides take care of the same residents daily or do they rotate? Care is generally better when the caregiver is consistently assigned to the same patients.

Bridal fashions phone call away

NEW YORK (AP) — J.C. Penney has given new meaning to mail-order brides.

Through its spring and fall bridal catalogs, it claims to sell more bridal gowns and attendants' dresses than any other retail or catalog source in the country.

The company offers 12 to 15 gowns and headpieces each season with coordinating dresses for honor attendant, bridesmaids, flower girl and ring bearer.

Adult sizes range from petite size 3 to misses' size 20. Some styles are available for tall women to size 20 and large women to size 24.

Apparel suitable for mothers and mothers-in-law is also available.

Retail prices range from $130 to $395 for bridal gowns and $80 to $110 for other dresses.

Fabric swatches and alterations are available, as well as fashion consultants trained to answer questions about size, color and style.

Orders are toll-free, delivery normally is within 10 days and unaltered merchandise is returnable.

Home computers need correct lighting

Associated Press

A home computer can be a real work saver and great fun to use. Enthusiasm will wane, though, if improper lighting causes eyestrain and headaches. Home Plan Ideas magazine recommends paying special attention to lighting at the time the home computer workplace is set up. By doing so these problems can be averted.

Evenly distributed illumination is a must for computer work areas because eyes constantly shift from keyboard to lit screen to paperwork. Reduce eyestrain by offsetting the video display screen's brightness with a lamp focused on the keyboard and paperwork. In addition, balance the task lighting at the work area with low-level general lighting for the rest of the room.

Task lighting reflecting off the video display screen is another cause of eye irritation. Don't aim the light directly at the screen. Instead, direct it at a spot above and a few inches behind the screen. The glare can also be reduced by placing the task light on the same side of the screen as paperwork. Experiment with the placement of the task light until it is comfortable for the eyes.

Because natural light through windows also can cause glare, position the computer screen so sunlight doesn't hit it directly. At the same time, arrange seating so that a window isn't being faced.

Homeowners select paint color by computer

NEW YORK (AP) — With the help of interactive computerized machines, homeowners now have the ability to plan their color schemes on an in-store computer that displays interior and exterior scenes similar to their own homes.

According to researchers at New York-based Intermark Corp., the new units allow experiments with virtually unlimited color combinations, enabling homeowners to see how the paint job will look beforehand.

In using the system, homeowners first select an on-screen image of the home exterior or room that most closely resembles their own from a variety of home decor styles. They then "scroll" through color groups to view up to 21 colors at a time.

After selecting a color, they move an arrow to the section of the room or home exterior where the color is to be used. Once the colors are decided, the computer prints out those choices with the corresponding commercial paint numbers and suggested appropriate primers and topcoatings.

Booklet offers 'sparkling' tips

NEW YORK (AP) — "Wedding Sparkle," a booklet from Codorniu wines in Lake Success, N.Y., contains information about serving sparkling wine or champagne at weddings.

The brochure provides tips on chilling sparkling wine, opening and pouring sparkling wine, and the correct glasses for serving sparkling wine. Also included is a chart listing the number of bottles needed to serve varying numbers of guests.

For a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to: Codorniu, Department NS, Suite 1001, 400 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10017.

Weaving Navajo rugs a dying art

■ With the number of weavers dropping on the Navajo reservation, it is estimated that by the year 2000, there will be no one left to make these hand-woven rugs available.

By Carol Olten
Copley News Service

Navajo rug weaving is becoming a lost art, but it is not due to lack of invention in finding new sources for wool dyes. Weavers today often use coffee grounds to make soft beige colors and the manganese from inside burned-out flashlight batteries for sky blues.

"The Navajo weavers have learned to become extremely inventive in finding dyes for their wools," said Tom Wheeler, a fourth-generation trader of Navajo rugs and crafts in northern New Mexico. "But the sad fact is that the number of weavers on the Navajo reservation is dropping rapidly. If the current rate continues, no one may be making these rugs at all by the year 2000."

Wheeler heads one of the oldest trading posts for Navajo goods.

The Hogback Trading Post was established in 1871 by his great-grandfather, Joseph Wheeler. The post, 15 miles west of Farmington, N.M., drew its name from the nearby sandstone hogback — a crested rock formation with sharply sloping sides.

In its early days, the post consisted of a small building with a dirt floor, an outside privy and no water. Joseph Wheeler traded flour and beans for the Navajos' rugs. He then sold the rugs to travelers, who looked upon them as novelties.

TODAY, THE HOGBACK Trading Post is located in a new 10,000-square-foot brick and stucco structure off Highway 550. Wheeler's great-grandson still buys rugs from the Navajos, but each year he finds that fewer rugs are available.

"The young girls who traditionally were taught the craft now are uninterested or too busy with other things," said Wheeler. "Navajo men do no weaving because, according to the Indian tradition, a figure called the Spider Woman gave the gift of weaving to women while another figure, the Spider Man, built the loom. The tradition remains important to the weavers today."

A few years ago he was selling rugs woven primarily with mauves, pinks and purples to go with the pastels of Southwest design.

Currently, he said, weavers are using more earth tones to go with the interest in rustic looks.

Rug prices also remain fairly stable, ranging from excellent quality rugs with very fine weaves selling for more than $15,000 to lower quality examples with heavy, loose weaves that retail for about $100.

RUGS ALSO vary in price depending on the quality of the wool. Rugs made by the Navajos before 1920 are not necessarily collectors' items or highly valued.

"In the early 1900s, the quality of wool was very poor," Wheeler said. "The weavers could not make quality rugs out of poor quality wool."

Wheeler senses a slight change in the market for the rugs.

"They formerly were collected by older collectors who bought everything Indian," he said. "Today the buyers are more the yuppies who want a rug to furnish a room."

Divers visit the awe-inspiring world of the Cozumel reefs, (left photo) where the clear water and diversity of underwater life make it one of the top dive spots in the world. A shore-line restaurant (right photo) invites travelers to enjoy a cool drink, sea breezes and complete relaxation in Cozumel.

Imagine a tropical paradise, with warm breezes, inviting beaches and clear ocean waters. Imagine that living so easy that rarely is anyone dressed more formally than jeans and T-shirts. Imagine sipping a frosty drink under the thatched roof of an open-air restaurant and watching the sun set over the ocean.

Cozumel, a 29-mile-long island 13 miles off the Yucatan coast of Mexico, is so close to home, it's even in the Central time zone, the same as Texas (except in summer — but every country switches over to daylight savings time).

Before the Spanish arrived, Cozumel was inhabited by the Mayans, who called the island "Ah-Cuzamil-Peten," which means "land of the swallows."

According to visitor information from Cozumel, the island was inhabited by Mayans as early as A.D. 300, and was used as a trading center for regions as far away as Panama to the south and Honduras in the south.

Ruins found there are the site of religious shrines dedicated to Ixchel, the Mayan goddess of fertility. Small ruins, and the largest archaeological site is the ruins of San Gervasio which is in the center of the island and is open to visitors. The Mexican government began restoring San Gervasio in 1980, and the site was open to visitors in 1988.

Linda Anderson/Reporter-Telegram

Linda Anderson/Reporter-Telegram

Upon entering the ruins at San Gervasio, visitors are meant through the site in a certain way and what each building island's population was about 700. By 1970, according to visitors' information, Cozumel's population reached 10,000 for the first time since 1900. Today the island is home to 30,000-40,000 people.

Because Cozumel is an island, growth is limited, according to Hilary Hylton in the Texas Monthly Guidebook, "Mexico: A Completely Up-To-Date Guide to an Extraordinary Country." Ms. Hylton wrote: "There's a limit to growth on this island because of the need to [illegible] everything [illegible] Cozumel still has the air of a small island, and it's a popular spot for [illegible] to enjoy the pleasures of Mexico's Caribbean without all the chic trappings."

Joel Lawrence and Douglas Wilhelm, in their book "The Mexico Guide to All Mexico," wrote: "Cozumel is more like the Caribbean islands (Jamaica, Puerto Rico, Antigua) than it is like any other part of Mexico. It is low and flat, with [illegible] tween [illegible] ing [illegible] have [illegible]

Cozumel business is West Texas owned

It's one thing to visit a tropical paradise like Cozumel. It's another to own a piece of it.

Tom Steddum and his wife, Gerri, owners of Scuba Shacks in Midland and Odessa, recently expanded their business by becoming owners of Scuba Inn and Scuba Shack Dive Service (formerly Divers Inn and Dive Cozumel Dive Shop) in Cozumel.

"I love it (Cozumel) and I love the people and it's a good investment," Steddum said. "The new Mexican government has opened up new investment opportunities for foreigners. It's a good, sound business investment."

But to Steddum, his new business is more than a good investment, it's a dream come true. The Steddums, who are both diving professionals, really love Cozumel. And buying the hotel and dive service will allow them to bring more divers to the island. "Our travel activity into Mexico will increase for sure," Steddum said, "from eight to 12 times to 15 to 20 times."

The island is wonderful for divers, Steddum said. "We have the best location on the island for diving and shore diving. Cozumel is one of the top three dive spots in the world."

Most of their dive packages are for 12 to 15 divers, he said. "We have three dive masters, full-time — Carlos 'Morsa,' 'Divin' Ivan' Diaz and

COZUMEL: Tropical paradise close to home

(From 1F)

Coral formations, seafans, sponges, star fish, eels, rays and vividly colored fish of all sizes populate the Cozumel reefs. From tiny neon blue fish that dart away from divers who swim too close and enormous groupers that swim right up to divers and look them in the eye, to rays and green eels who gracefully ruffle their way through the water, the underwater world off Cozumel defies description. Even the beauty of the coral colonies — some shaped like fans, leafless trees or brains — cannot be described in words.

While they are admiring the underwater sights, divers are advised to help preserve the delicate ecosystems there. Cozumel magazine states that "divers are reminded that in Cozumel the reefs are protected by law, to preserve them forever. Coral should not be collected, it is forbidden to dive any closer than one meter to the reefs, spear gun fishing is prohibited as well. It's a beautiful world down there — let's keep it that way. If you go diving, take only pictures, leave only bubbles."

EVEN THE fury of Hurricane Gilbert nearly two years ago couldn't destroy the beauty and uniqueness of the Cozumel reefs, according to experienced divers, who say that although the storm did cause some damage underwater, the reefs and other aquatic life are coming back.

Rebuilding efforts after Gilbert are obvious on land too. Although some scars from the huge storm are still visible — abandoned shells of homes and vacant lots where buildings used to be — new homes and businesses have been constructed and more are being built.

San Miguel, the only town on the island, is home to many shops and restaurants that make the island a paradise for non-divers too. The downtown Plaza is lined with shops specializing in black coral and other jewelry, Mexican arts and crafts, clothing, and of course, T-shirts.

However, remember that Cozumel is a Mexican tropical paradise, and many shops and businesses practice siesta, closing shop from 1-4 p.m. daily because those hours are too hot and humid to do business in. Instead, business hours are likely to be 9 a.m.-1 p.m. and 4 p.m.-9 p.m. But no one minds the wait in Cozumel, because no one is in much of a hurry.

Many restaurants specialize in seafood and traditional Mexican dishes, but others can provide such dining pleasures as Italian, Mayan and Tex-Mex cuisine — there's even a Japanese sushi bar. A place called Mr. Papa's specializes in hamburgers, fries and onion rings, and huge stuffed baked potatoes, for those who are hungry for a little taste of home.

Ice cream is a favorite treat on Cozumel, like it is most other places. One ice cream shop with the wonderful name of Yomi, Yomi, Yomi had wonderful ice cream too.

The Museum of Cozumel is a source of pride to the residents of the island. A tour of the museum offers visitors a history of the island from its formation by the coral reefs to its invasion by the Spaniards to its brush with death from Hurricane Gilbert. After going through the museum, visitors can go up to the second floor where an open-air restaurant on the balcony is available for those who want to relax with a cool drink and watch the world go by — and the cruise ships come in to the international pier in San Miguel.

Cozumel is a wonderful place to people-watch, because walking is a primary mode of transportation there. And because it is an international port, people from every country visit Cozumel. Ferries from the mainland pick up and deliver shoppers and visitors from Cancun and other Yucatan cities.

COZUMEL IS an island, so traffic isn't much of a problem there. Roads for the most part are two-lane, and most of the vehicles traveling these roads are motors-cooters (many of them rented by tourists), bicycles and taxis. Although some of the residents of Cozumel own their own autos (including one enterprising citizen who drives a truck with a plywood body), most of the cars on the road are rented (mostly by tourists) or are taxis.

If traffic is minimal on Cozumel, so are traffic laws. In general, (A) north-south streets in San Miguel have right of way over east-west streets; (B) speed limits are posted on some city streets; and (C) traffic moves down the right-hand side of the road. After that, drivers are pretty much on their own. Riding in a taxi can be exciting, but accidents more serious than fender-benders are rare.

Driving on Cozumel can be an adventure. Volkswagen "Beetles" and Jeeps are available for rent, but visitors soon discover driving on the island is not the same as driving in the states. For one thing, the roads are two-lane and not necessarily in the best of condition. For another, there's only one gas station on the entire island (and no unleaded gas).

Hotels range from the spectacularly luxurious to the just-plain comfortable, but on an island, even the most expensive hotels have some problems that mainland hotels don't. Televisions are not standard equipment in Cozumel hotels (but tennis courts often are); telephone service is difficult if not impossible (in fact, visitors wishing to make long distance calls are advised to call collect to avoid the 70 percent tax); and water in the bathrooms is sometimes cut off at odd times. But all in all, it's a small price to pay for a visit to paradise.

But to really get to know the island of Cozumel, first get to know the people who live there. Most of them are friendly, helpful, open and honest — and bi-lingual — and quick to offer a "buenas dias" and a smile to a stranger.

ON A TRIP to Cozumel, some of the people you might encounter include:

■ Carlos "Morsa," the dive master, who not only is a skilled professional, but a well-educated man who is very knowledgeable about the history of his people, the Aztecs. He also tells fascinating stories about his experiences as a diver; the trials and tribulations of parenthood; the books by his favorite author; and how he solved the problems of dealing with a pregnant wife who wanted cherries in the middle of the night.

■ Pastor (pronounced pas TOR), a guide at the San Gervasio archaeological site, who guided four Texans around the ruins for two hours, patiently answering their questions and giving them a brief history of how his Mayan ancestors lived. He made the ruins come alive with his stories of the people who used to live there.

■ The woman at the convenience store who arrived on Cozumel from Georgia, by way of South Carolina, and who kept a pot of "the best coffee on the island" going at all times.

■ Bunny and Lee Adames, owners of La Fablita Grill, a favorite restaurant, who, in addition to their indoor establishment, set up six or seven tables on their front patio for dining. Guests can enjoy the food and fragrant breezes under the enormous fruit trees and tropical stars. The Adames' children, Jenny, Leo and 7-year-old Elizabeth, visit with customers, charming them and making them feel at home.

■ Pedro, the small boy who offered to "watch your car" while visiting the Mayan ruins, and who, two hours later, was still patiently sitting where he said he would be, watching the car.

■ The clerks in the shops who were scrupulously honest when making change, even though they were having to use calculators to deal with a 2800 peso-$1 exchange rate.

■ The five-man musical entertainment group at Los Quetzales Bar and Grill who provided hours of folk music, played on traditional instruments. And the waiter there, who, when the restaurant ran out of ice cream, went down the street to the ice cream store to get some for a customer.

■ Sheila, originally from Colorado, who was tutoring a local woman in English and learning Spanish in return.

If you go to Cozumel, be prepared for no television or newspapers, very little telephone service, limited used of fresh water for showering (and drink only bottled water, just to be on the safe side), and no supermarkets, shopping malls or fast-food restaurants.

But also be prepared for soft summer nights (no matter what time of year it is), beautiful scenery, friendly people, unhurried living, wonderful food and welcome relaxation.

Poll conducted on children's issues

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Americans believe the quality of their children's lives is declining and they're willing to pay higher taxes to solve the problem, pollsters for the National Association of Children's Hospitals said.

Children actually are worse off — and the elderly better off — than Americans realize, association officers said. They are launching a nationwide effort to raise children's issues in political campaigns.

In a nationwide poll of 1,000 adults earlier this summer, 60 percent said that "the situation for children in America" has gotten worse over the last five years.

The poll, by the Penn & Schoen research firm, also found 59 percent favoring "a $100 annual tax increase to specifically fund care for all poor children."

"When people gather around the dinner table, they don't talk about (nuclear weapons') throw-weights or ICBMs or even the size of the (federal) deficit," Association President Robert Sweeney said. "They talk about their kids. And they think about whether they can feed them or raise them to be drug-free or get them to a doctor or get them through high school."

Robert Green, a Penn & Schoen vice president, said that "children's issues test better than any other concern" because "Americans believe children can't be blamed for their status in life."

"It doesn't mean people will support endless taxes for endless new programs," he said. "They support taxes specifically meant to fund children's health care."

BUSINESS: Area entrepreneurs open new branch in Cozumel

(From 1F)

Carlos Hernandez. (In addition to the dive masters,) we usually have instructors in the group. We can use free-lance dive masters if necessary."

Dive masters have the responsibility of guiding groups of divers safely through the waters of Cozumel. They must pass a "pretty rigorous course ... taught by master instructors" to become dive masters, Steddum said.

Divers' safety is very important to the Steddums, and they warn against businesses that claim to teach non-divers to scuba in only an hour or two.

"It's dangerous," Steddum said. "That's Russian roulette. The diving operators in Cozumel have founded an association to try to get those 'quicky courses' thrown out." The association wants to institute "rules and regulations for the dive shops to adhere to. It's safety for the divers and preservation for the reef."

MOST DIVERS are aware of the delicate ecosystems of the reef and want to keep it safe, he said. "The reef is an underwater national park. The west coast of the island from the downtown pier south is protected. Coral only grows an inch and a half or less a year. Everything down there is literally living color, and it's all animal, not vegetable."

If preservation of the reef and safety of the divers is important to the Steddums, so is the divers' comfort. In their hotel, "most of the rooms have two double beds and two baths," Steddum said.

"They were built for divers," said his wife, and divers fresh from an ocean dive who are sharing a room appreciate the fact that more than one bathroom means they don't have to wait for a shower.

"They (the rooms) have air conditioning and a little apartment-type refrigerator," Steddum added. The rooms are "clean and comfortable, but not luxury. They are just as roomy and just as comfortable as the rooms in luxury hotels on the island."

'We've seen more and more families with small children (visiting the island) in the last two years than ever before.'

—Tom Steddum
business owner in Cozumel

BUT NON-DIVERS are welcome to stay at Scuba Inn too, he said. The location is "also the home of Ernesto's Fajita Factory, Dollar Rent-A-Car, moped rental, windsurf rentals. On the premises we have underwater camera rental, T-shirt gift shop and a 7-11-type convenience store.

"A lot of people are coming to the island with kids. We can help them secure child care while the parents dive. We've seen more and more families with small children (visiting the island) in the last two years than ever before."

Traveling to Cozumel can be relatively inexpensive, Steddum said. "It's a lot less than (trips to) other Caribbean islands. It's 12 miles from the Yucatan peninsula." And flights to Cozumel are available on American Airlines, Continental Airlines and Mexicana Airlines.

His new status as a business owner in Mexico has led to some major changes in Steddum's lifestyle. "I have applied for immigrant resident status in Mexico," he said. "I can leave the country 90 days a year or 18 months in the next five years. That's OK with me because 90 days a year is a pretty good vacation.

"I still retain my U.S. citizenship. After a five-year period I can travel at will. It's kind of like dual citizenship — after five years I'll have all the rights of a Mexican citizen, except voting and holding office."

Steddum said that although he is learning to speak Spanish, the change in language hasn't been much of a problem for him because "most of the people in the shops speak English. My problem is (communicating) with lawyers and accountants and people like that.

"Things take a while to get done in Mexico. There's just as much bureaucracy in Mexico as in the United States."

SCUBA DIVING and Cozumel are both important to the Steddums, and they are concerned that recently both the sport and the island have received what Steddum described as "unwarrented negative publicity."

One segment of the program '20/20' involved a law suit filed by a man due to a scuba accident. "After the program aired, the suit was dropped because the man was wrong, but the network didn't come back and report that," Steddum said. "Like any sport, diving is as safe as you make it. That program was smut — it created a scenario and expounded on it, when it was based on a small part of truth and about 90 percent untruth.

"Diving in Cozumel is as safe as anywhere. 'Macho' divers come down here and think they are so much better than anyone else — they exceed their own limit and start blaming someone else, when they created their own problem."

Most travelers to Cozumel — both divers and non-divers — find the trip and the island safe and memorable.

To the Steddums, the island is unforgettable — and now they can call it home.

Vacation paradise becomes home

The tiny island of Tortola in the British Virgin Islands offers a respite from everyday life.

Whenever the world is too much with us, the age-old dream of running away to a lush tropical island, where the only sounds are the rustle of the breezes in the palm trees and the musical rhythm of the sea breaking gently on the sand, suddenly fills the consciousness, demanding fulfillment.

Some of us will heed the call and head for a take-a-break week maybe in Hawaii or farther away, in legendary Tahiti. A few will head for the Caribbean, seeking not only all of the above ingredients, but also some colorful trace of both the ethnic and colonial past of these islands that lie like jewels in the clearest waters.

But for some the urge is stronger, the need greater. They want to find a way to make island living an everyday thing and the return to concrete civilization the once-in-a-while break.

Jinx and Jeff Morgan did just that. It would be difficult to imagine a more California couple. Both writers, they lived very happily in the San Francisco Bay area. Jeff, a longtime reporter for the Oakland Tribune, had retired to write books related to news events he covered. Jinx specialized in articles, features, columns and books on restaurants, food and wine. They often collaborated on various projects.

Together they built an idyllic life: cooking, gardening, entertaining friends and exploring new food and wine trends all over the world. It was on just such a journey that they found themselves in the Caribbean, seeking new restaurants to report for the readers of Bon Appetit and American Way. They were intrigued by island food — food touched by Africa, the West Indies and the tastes of the colonials who settled the various island groups.

In their investigating they met a couple who owned a legendary inn, the Sugar Mill Hotel on Tortola in the British Virgin Islands. Rumor had it that the owners were seeking someone to take over and manage the place for awhile.

Lights flashed in both Morgan minds: "If only you had your own restaurant, your own hotel!"

Friends had been beseeching them for years. They struck a deal, raced back to California to tidy up loose ends and pack. They would manage the hotel and the restaurant for eight months and then — and then ...

Well, you can imagine the rest. After eight months, they bought the place. Now, some eight years later, the restaurant at Sugar Mill Hotel is one of the most talked-about in the Caribbean and the hotel is well-booked, sometimes years in advance, by a faithful clientele who appreciate the easy, laid-back approach of their California-Caribbean hosts.

Sugar Mill Hotel in Road Town on the island of Tortola is a small place. The original mill is now the lobby, lounge, bar and restaurant. It's a timber structure with a high ceiling, open to the breezes and the view of the sea. Separate cottages climb the hillside behind the mill, each spacious and sunny, simply and colorfully decorated.

Many have their own small kitchens for quick meals and most have balconies overlooking the sea. The swimming pool and gathering place around it have been completely redone and the beach bar (where light luncheons and snacks are also served) makes sitting on the beach watching waves break over the reef a real pleasure.

There are more glamorous resorts in the Caribbean and places where there's more loud music and lots of action, but there aren't many that offer the quiet, casual hospitality and the super food of Sugar Mill. It's the kind of place we all seem to dream about.

Attitude affects heart attack risk

Copley News Service

Whatever happened to Type As?

The theory that people with Type-A personality are at a higher risk for coronary heart disease emerged from early research, and for several years was treated almost as fact.

But a careful study has stripped away aggressiveness, tenseness and competitiveness as risk factors for heart attacks.

A recent 22-year follow-up study of some 3,000 middle-aged men by University of California at Berkeley researchers indicates that Type-A behavior is not related to heart-attack deaths.

Smoking and high blood pressure are far more important risks than personality or behavior. But the one personality trait that may be linked to heart disease is chronic hostility or cynicism.

Several studies have suggested that the chronically angry, suspicious and mistrustful are twice as likely to have coronary artery blockages.

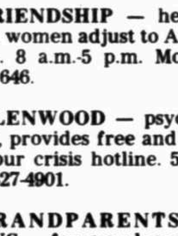
ASK DR. EPSTEIN

Neighbor worries about best friend's daughter

By Dr. Bruce A. Epstein

DEAR DR. EPSTEIN: I've lived in the same neighborhood for 25 years. Around the corner from my home lives my dearest girlfriend. Recently, I've noticed her 15-year-old daughter being picked up by an older man in front of my house. When I approached her, she seemed lost and very disoriented. She walked away, got in his car, and they drove off. Should I let my girlfriend know? CONCERNED NEIGHBOR



Epstein

DEAR CONCERNED NEIGHBOR: You are right to be concerned. Too many people choose to ignore uncomfortable situations today.

You should tell your friend what has been happening and let her know that you want to help. If the girl's behavior has changed drastically, her mother is probably aware that things are not right. However, the mother may not know what is wrong. Because you mention that the child seemed very disoriented, substance abuse should be considered as a cause. Often, parents go through a denial stage when they see their children's behavior changing. They may wish to believe the child is going through a teenage phase rather than face the probability of drug use.

You should suggest to your friend that she speak to her daughter candidly about this older man and also that she look for signs of drug use. If your friend does find evidence of drug use, she should bring her daughter to a treatment program for diagnosis without delay.

By bringing this problem to your friend's attention and letting her know you're willing to support her, you would be doing her a favor. The problem will not go away by itself; it will only become worse.

DEAR DR. EPSTEIN: My husband and I were divorced two years ago. My 12-year-old daughter and 7-year-old son have been extremely close to their father. My ex-husband remarried a year ago.

When my children visit their father on weekends, their new stepmother tells them that the only family she recognizes is my ex-husband, their baby daughter and herself. She belittles my children and tries to separate my ex-husband from them by cancelling planned visits. I have tried to explain that it will take time for their stepmother to adjust to the situation. My children feel they've lost their father's love and are extremely upset. What can I do to remedy the situation? FRUSTRATED MOM

DEAR FRUSTRATED MOM: The situation you describe is, unfortunately, all too common today. When parents divorce and remarry, it is usually most difficult for the children.

You have no control over the behavior of your ex-husband's new wife. Neither do you have control over your ex-husband's behavior. However, you do have a degree of control over what your children experience.

If visiting their father in the presence of this new wife is a negative, unpleasant experience for your children, you not only have the right, but the responsibility to end those visits. Explain to your children that their father loves them and that he can visit them either at your home or on outings alone. Explain to your ex-husband that you want him to spend time with the children, but that you will not allow them to continue to be exposed to the negative environment created by his new wife.

If your ex-husband has the best interests of the children in mind, he will agree to this arrangement. In time, if his new wife becomes more secure in her marriage, things may improve. However, you must think of your children's welfare now and limit visits with their father accordingly.

Over the border

By Copley News Service

Planning to drive across the Mexican or Canadian border? Better check your insurance.

If you're headed to Mexico by car, don't cross the border without insurance written by a Mexican company. You can purchase a short-term special automobile policy for tourists from agents for Mexican insurers found in nearly all U.S. cities on or near the border.

All you need when driving in Canada is proof that you're properly insured in your home state. That's because coverage territory for U.S. car insurance policies includes Canada and Puerto Rico. It's also a good idea to bring along a photocopy of your policy.

Small college training many of Mexico's new leaders

By Diane Lindquist
Copley News Service

MEXICO CITY — A small college located here in a former Jesuit seminary has molded the basic economic beliefs of many of the top Mexican government leaders who are transforming this country into a modern, global-market-oriented nation.

Once the country's most influential officials hailed from the law school of the massive public National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM). Now, the new "technocrats" in control are more likely to come from the economics department of the private Autonomous Technological Institute of Mexico, more commonly known by its Spanish acronym ITAM.

Although President Carlos Salinas de Gortari graduated from UNAM, earned his master's degree at the College of Mexico and his Ph.D. at Harvard, he taught at ITAM in the mid-1970s and has since tapped many of his former students and colleagues to serve as infantrymen in his march toward a complete economic conversion of Mexico.

A TIGHT BAND of "ex-ITAMs" are strategically situated in the upper echelons of the nation's most important ministries — commerce and industrial development, finance, exterior affairs, tourism, agriculture, planning and budget.

Finance Minister Pedro Aspe graduated from ITAM and returned to teach there after earning his doctorate at MIT. He headed the economics department, created the school's master's program in economics and now sits on the institute's board of governors.

Former finance minister and Mexican ambassador to the United States Gustavo Petricioli, a Yale graduate, is an alumnus who also sits on the board.

"There are more than ... 40 ITAM-connected people in the highest levels of government, from director general up, and they are very mobile," said Lorenzo Lazo, the school's vice president of development.

"It is very noticeable today that a lot of major decision levels are in the hands of ITAM," he said.

Since its formation 44 years ago, the institute has emphasized diligent study of liberal, capitalistic, free-market teachings. This brand of economic theory not only is bringing Mexico into the 21st century but also appears to be gaining acceptance in the liberation movements of Eastern Europe, including the Soviet Union.

Within Mexico, ITAM economists far overshadow their UNAM counterparts. Since its leftward tilt of the late 1960s, the National University's classroom emphasis has remained on Marxism, political economics and dependency theory.

"Our program is more technical, more based on what is called classical economics, which is taught in United States universities," said Ignacio Trigueros, chairman of ITAM's economics department.

"Our best students have almost an automatic admission into United States universities," he said.

INDEED, ITAM urges its graduates to earn advanced degrees in some of the world's most respected schools. They have distinguished themselves at Harvard, MIT, Georgetown, the University of Chicago, Stanford, UCLA and the London School of Economics.

"This is one of the few places in Mexico that wins admittance," Zvi Griliches, chairman of Harvard University's economics admissions committee, said of the school.

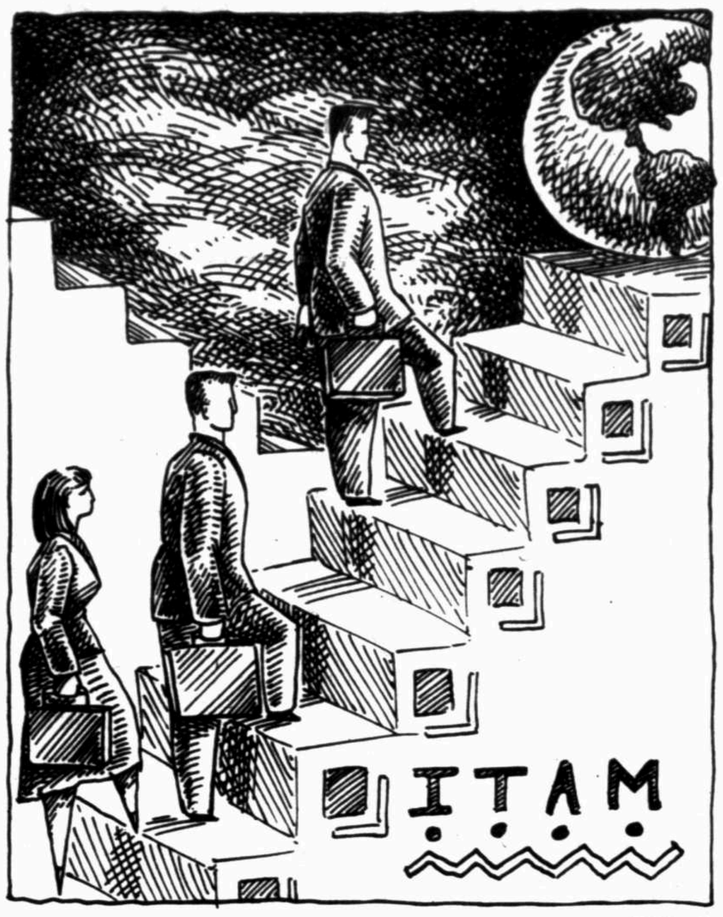
"They get a very good undergraduate training," said Clark Reynolds, a noted Stanford University economist. "If they do well at ITAM, they do well at the best U.S. universities."

ITAM was founded in 1946 by Mexican industrialist Raul Bailleres. A banker, stock broker, insurance executive and head of the nation's largest exporting silver mine, his major mission was to establish a high-quality economics program that would train the country's future business leaders.

A total of 3,500 students are enrolled in eight undergraduate programs in the social sciences, and 200 students are enrolled in four master's programs. The institute also offers 27 programs in continuing education. The number of graduates to date amounts to only about 12,000.

Although ITAM's programs in other disciplines are highly regarded, its course of study in economics is considered to be the school's strongest asset.

THE CAMPUS occupies a space roughly equivalent to three small city blocks and is not far from the heart of a neighborhood of historic homes, fine restaurants and the city's famous Saturday Bazaar of Mexican artifacts.



CNS Graphic

Although many are the well-to-do sons and daughters of business and government leaders, the school takes pride in awarding scholarships or loans to 28 percent of its undergraduates and 20 percent of its graduate students. Tuition runs $1,000 a semester.

From its beginning, ITAM has emphasized hard work and the pursuit of excellence.

"Mexican higher education in general is not too demanding. Students only have to study for the final exam," Trigueros said. "At ITAM it is different. You have to work daily. You have to go through the reading lists in order to understand the lectures. People work very hard."

Only 49 percent of ITAM applicants pass the school's entrance exam. All students must supplement their major emphasis with courses from a variety of disciplines.

"We prepare a good number of students and we try to push them — perhaps with excessive work — to do their best," ITAM vice president Lazo said.

In return, the college offers its students quality teaching and special attention. It has a ratio of one full-time, doctoral-level professor to every 32 students.

ITAM ENCOURAGES former students who have earned doctoral degrees outside the country to return to teach while undertaking fully funded research projects.

"It's like a commitment," said Ernesto Cervera, an economics adviser in the Foreign Ministry. After attending ITAM, he received advanced degrees from the University of California at Los Angeles and now teaches part time at the school.

The institute also recruits other Mexicans who attended prestigious foreign schools. Among the most noted is President Salinas, who was described by a former student as "solid theoretically — perhaps not the toughest one, but he was tough."

"As a result," Lazo said, "our students are exposed to the newest and latest advances that are available."

ITAM's sphere of influence has grown and has given rise to a tight group within the government — especially among a band of economists aged 30 to 45 who were connected with the school in the mid-1970s. They have a formal organization and stay in close contact informally.

"You might ask what made ITAM tick in those years," said Lazo, himself an economics undergraduate at the time. "That's a question we still ask ourselves."

THE GROUP bucked Mexico's traditional animosity between business and government, rejected more lucrative positions and turned to public service. "I'm like the black sheep in my family," confessed one of the high-ranking government officials.

"The reason ITAM economists are in the government is because the school trains good economists and the government needs good economists," said Undersecretary of Commerce Fernando Sanchez Ugarte, an ITAM graduate with a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago.

"The basic concern was to train people well. They weren't talking about what Mexico should do," he said. "But as an economist, you like to look at things in a more global perspective, and you get that in the government."

How much of their influence can be attributed to ITAM and how much to the international rise of free-market economists in general is unclear. Nevertheless, the ex-ITAMs have seized an opportunity to put an indelible stamp on Mexico's future.

Practicing their market-driven economics, they made Mexico a member of the international General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, eliminated trade barriers, adopted rules to lure foreign investment and pushed Mexican producers into external markets.

Their network reaches into private enterprise as well. Institute graduates are highly sought after and practically guaranteed jobs upon graduation.

"When you're studying here, you feel there is a network of people out there who will be good contacts for getting into business," said Manuel, a law student from Zacatecas.

THE SCHOOL and the influence its graduates wield are not without their critics in Mexico, however.

DEAR ABBY

Cards give students window to world

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: It all began when some fourth- through sixth-grade special-education students from Santa Maria, Calif., wrote me a letter asking my readers to please send picture postcards and state their occupations.

Van Buren

I published their request, assuring them that my readers were the nicest people in the world. Nine weeks later, I received this letter from Donna Eschen — their teacher:

DEAR ABBY: We have been overwhelmed with postcards and gifts from your readers! So far, more than 40,000 pieces of mail have been received! All seven continents are represented. Picture postcards from foreign countries from Zimbabwe to Antarctica to Iceland to New Zealand arrived. The generosity of your readers is unbelievable!

Letters and autographed pictures came from Burt Reynolds; Virginia's Gov. L. Douglas Wilder; Grant Devine, premier of Saskatchewan; Gov. Stan Stephens of Montana; Maureen O'Connor, mayor of San Diego; Mike Schmidt, former Phillies baseball star; Al Unser Jr., Indy race car driver; NASA astronaut Ken Reightler; James Kearney, vice president, Paper Corp. of America — the largest supplier to the U.S. for postage stamps and passports; William H. Fraker, production editor of Barron's; Richard Austin, secretary of state of Michigan; Andrea Barber, actress on ABC's "Full House"; Janet Barnes, Maryland Public Television; and Dr. Douglas Livermore, chairman, Economics and Business Department, Morningside College, Sioux City, Iowa. Renee Williams, an artist with Hallmark, sent an illustrated card. Ronald W. Allen, chairman of Delta Airlines, sent a card; so did state Rep. Joseph F. Toomey of Louisiana. And "Jef's — An Affair With Flowers," Beverly Hills, sent corsages and boutonnieres for the entire class.

A King's cake arrived from New Orleans, and Nancy and Fred Hoffman sent a chunk of the Berlin Wall! The mail is still arriving: a postcard from Clint Eastwood, and gift certificates for the entire class for El Pollo Loco. A grandfather from Almonte, Ontario, Canada, bet the kids $25 they couldn't find his little town on the map. (He lost — and sent the money.) We've papered our classroom ceiling-to-floor with picture postcards from all over the world!

We have tallied more than 300 occupations, including bear hunter, alligator wrestler, coffee taster, priest, nun, grave digger, bounty hunter, shepherd, newspaper carrier and New York cabdriver.

The children love to read. That's what this project was all about — improving their literacy, fostering a love of reading, and gaining greater knowledge of geography and occupations.

Four total strangers by the name of "Eschen" wrote, wondering if we could be related. And the advice most people wanted to convey was: "Stay in school, get an education, and don't do drugs!"

Thanks for making this project such an exciting and memorable one. You were right, Abby. Your readers are the nicest people in the world. — DONNA ESCHEN, PATTERSON ROAD SCHOOL, SANTA MARIA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I had the sobering experience of visiting the grave of a friend who had died 10 years ago at the age of 21. Her family was distraught at the funeral, and buried her in a wedding gown because she had never had a real wedding.

Apparently time had dimmed their grief; her grave was neglected, without a single flower to brighten it up. I have vowed to bring flowers there regularly since the rest of the world has forgotten her.

Abby, please continue to remind your readers to show their love to others while they're alive, but to also remember them in death. — SORROW IN SAN FRANCISCO

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? Get it off your chest by writing to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AT WIT'S END

More than Earth shook in California quake

By Erma Bombeck

Some people who pay attention to these things have figured out that exactly nine months after Northern California's earthquake, there has been an increase in the number of babies born in the area.

Bombeck

It is not the first time this phenomenon has been noted. It happened nine months after a power failure in New York. It happened after a Texas flood, and according to one of the nurses in the earthquake area, "when the cannery went on strike."

One medical facility had an increase of 175 percent in its number of babies conceived on Oct. 17, the day of the quake. A psychologist, however, acknowledges that although some people react to a 7.1 quake with a greater need for sex, he is cautious about making a statistical link, pointing out, "You'd be on very shaky ground." (No pun intended.)

The message is pretty clear here. People just don't know what to do with themselves when the electricity goes off. They are so programmed to watch television, listen to the radio, play video games, talk on the phone, do the laundry, run the dishwasher or cook, they have no idea how to amuse themselves.

Off the top of my head, I'd say this is probably one of the premium times to have a headache, but obviously this was not the case. You don't look for people to react to these catastrophes in a rational manner.

I'll never forget the first time my husband and I went to Africa. As we sat in the Land Rover, the dust of a thousand wildebeest enveloped us as we watched a stampede in progress. I noted that in the middle of this wild force of animals galloping by at a blurring pace, two wildebeest stopped to mate. Talk about timing! We can almost guess whose idea that was, can't we?

Probably no one will really know what conversation between couples went on when the earthquake began to rumble through Northern California. Was there a feverish moment when photo albums were stacked at the door in anticipation of a quick flight? Did someone fill thermoses and get canned food together as a precaution for what was to come? Was there an attempt to grab a portable radio and get to safer ground? Or did they sit there in the darkness and say, "Whatya wanta do, Marty? We could conceive a baby."

It's possible everyone is reading too much into these statistics. Whatya wanta bet? Given the circumstances of an earthquake, one of the partners had always had the fantasy of saying, "Did the earth move for you?" Yeah, that's it.

Airport fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House this week approved passenger user fees at airports as a way of financing new gates, runways and other construction designed to cut increasing congestion and delays.

Fees would be limited to $3 per passenger at each airport, with a ceiling of $12 per passenger for one round-trip.

The measure would authorize $17 billion over two years for airport operations and development. It calls for spending more than $6 billion in the Aviation Trust Fund over the next five years to upgrade airports.

Toy store sold

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — FAO Schwarz, a symbol of kiddie chic in America for decades, has been purchased by the Netherlands' most prestigious department store chain.

NV Koninklijke Bijenkorf Beheer, or KBB, said it bought FAO Schwarz for an undisclosed amount, and would use the American toy palace's prestigious name to expand its U.S. operations.

The publicly owned corporation said it had bought all of FAO Schwarz's 17 stores, including the two most prominent outlets in New York and San Francisco as well as stores in Boston, Chicago and Beverly Hills, Calif. The purchase includes the toy chain's catalog business.

Home sales surge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new homes surged 8 percent in June, the sharpest increase since November, the government said in a report that many analysts said indicates the sluggish housing industry has bottomed out.

"We believe that the second quarter was the low point," said David Seiders, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders. He and other analysts said they expected continued but subdued growth in both new and existing single-family markets for the remainder of the year.

The Commerce Department said new home sales totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 581,000 units after posting a revised 2.3 percent gain in May. May sales first were reported last month to have risen just 0.4 percent, the first advance in five months.

Soviet magazine

HOUSTON — A Houston consulting firm and the Soviet State Committee of Standards are teaming up to publish High Tech America, a for-profit magazine covering technical issues in industry.

The Russian-language magazine will be edited and printed in Houston, and all 15,000 copies will be distributed to government and factory managers in the U.S.S.R. The first issue, which will focus on oil and gas production, is due out in early 1991.

The Center for Energy and Economic Diversification is expected to become the catalyst for reshaping future of the Permian Basin.

UTPB center bringing new era to Basin

■ UTPB's energy center is expected to bring a new economic era to the Permian Basin when it opens Thursday.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

When The Center for Energy and Economic Diversification officially opens Thursday, it may mark the birth of a new industry in the Permian Basin — the research industry.

Observers expect the Center will become the catalyst for bringing a variety of high-powered research projects to the Permian Basin, along with research jobs and funds.

"The Center will have the difficult task of helping the Permian Basin fashion a new future," said Dr. Duane Leach, president University of Texas Permian Basin.

He said the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification would house four divisions: an oil and gas division for addressing oil and gas research and issues; an incubator for growing new businesses; a technology transfer division for getting information spread as far and as quickly as possible and an economic development division for bringing and creating new industry in the Basin.

Optimism for the facility runs high in the oil industry. "This could be the catalyst for making the Permian Basin the energy research center of the world," said Ed Runyan, a Midland oilman and a member of the voluntary Industrial Advisory Committee that has worked to develop a mission statement for the facility.

While the recommendations of the committee have no official status, they do provide an insight into some of the problems facing the oil industry in the Permian Basin and areas where remedy could be applied by such a facility.

Runyan said the committee hoped the Center would become a facility for taking pure research and translating it to practical field applications. "There is already enough pure research going on around the world, and we don't want to duplicate any of that," he noted.

The research mission prepared by a cross section of independents, majors, and oilfield consultants reads: "The research mission is to conduct applied research, field studies and pilot projects

Texan eyes gas pipeline for London

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Gale L. Galloway, the former Houston energy executive who has become a wildcatting superstar for his success in the South Texas oil patch, is gambling anew.

This time he wants to build a natural gas pipeline serving the London area.

The former chief executive of Houston's Entex Inc. has teamed with Britain's largest independent energy company, Enterprise Oil, in a $250 million power play aimed at serving electric utilities near London.

The 120-mile pipeline is designed to carry 1 billion cubic feet of natural gas from the southern basin of the gas-rich North Sea to an estuary along the Thames River east of London.

The project would be the first independently owned gas pipeline in Great Britain, which privatized its gas operations about three years ago.

It also will be the first major challenge to British Gas, the massive energy company that until now has monopolized the nation's pipeline system.

Galloway, chief executive of Gas Transmission Ltd., the 2-year-old Austin, Texas, company formed to spearhead the British pipeline project, said: "There's simply no gas being used for power generation. That presents a very attractive market. What's missing is the pipeline."

While Galloway recently has attracted attention as a big player in the South Texas horizontal drilling craze, his energy roots are in the pipeline business.

Galloway, 60, has served as the chief executive of both Entex and Celeron Corp., both among the biggest pipeline companies.

In January 1989, one year after leaving Entex, Galloway teamed with the investment banking firm of Wasserstein Perella to buy Tenneco's Louisiana Intrastate Gas Corp. for $120 million in cash.

Galloway had sold the 1,900-mile pipeline system to Tenneco four years earlier as part of a package of Celeron's pipeline and production assets. The Louisiana system later was sold again, to Arkla, Entex's parent company.

Galloway's gamble, which for now is being financed solely through personal loans and contributions from his management team, is timed to coincide with the privatization of England's electric utility system, now fueled primarily by oil and coal. If the project is approved by regulators, Galloway said he will seek additional financial backing.

Galloway predicts that once the industry is privatized, gas's cost savings and its environmental attractiveness, will create an industrial market that British Gas is not equipped to meet.

He said his system will be geared to heavy industrial users such as plants along the Thames.

The executive said he anticipates that gas will begin moving through the British pipeline system within three years.

New database gives Chamber more complete picture of Midland

■ The Midland Chamber of Commerce's efforts to attract new businesses and help existing ones has gotten a boost from a new database that offers a wide variety of statistics at the touch of a keyboard.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

The Tall City's efforts to expand its economic base have gone high-tech.

Employees of the Midland Chamber of Commerce — which has been working hard to attract new business to Midland — are learning the chamber's new database, which can quickly provide answers to a variety of questions asked by businesses considering coming to Midland or established businesses needing information for reports.

The data base includes a wide range of information, from SAT scores in Midland and other Texas cities, to the number of college graduates, to current and projected population, to residential and commercial utility bills.

A sampling of other information includes: population, wages, education levels, housing prices, commercial real estate prices, ethic distribution, traffic congestion, employment rates, retail sales and a host of other data.

"The chamber, through its economic development department, identified a need for a complete database to be used in attracting new industries and for assisting existing industries," explained Mike Strotheide, industrial development specialist with the chamber's Economic Development Department.

After visiting with different consultants, they chose Perryman's database, which contains over 25,000 pieces of information and is updated regularly. It was installed in May and employees began utilizing it in June.

One benefit, according to Strotheide, is that any of the information can be printed out and mailed or faxed to a client.

The program's user friendliness was designed into the program, according to Jim Moncrief of Perryman Consultants, manager of the company's Dallas office.

"As economic development intensifies, people's desire for information has increased dramatically," he said. "We find ourselves increasingly in a situation where people want the information that day. You count print information from our database out and fax it to the client, and the process is designed to take less than five minutes."

RIG COUNT PLUNGES. The number of working oil and natural gas rigs in the United States dropped by 26 this week to 996, Baker Hughes Inc. reported.

The company also reported that the Permian Basin rig count fell for a sixth week, dropping four to 95.

Despite the plunge, the figures for both the U.S. and Permian Basin remain well above those of a year ago.

Petro-Hunt, ARCO to drill 75 wells

DALLAS (SWN) — Petro-Hunt Corporation and Atlantic Richfield Company announced today their agreement to drill up to 75 horizontal Austin Chalk wells in Gonzales and Wilson Counties, Texas.

Under the terms of the agreement, Petro-Hunt will be the operator for the program. Petro-Hunt first entered the horizontal Austin Chalk play in 1989, and has operated a number of horizontal wells.

"The Wilson and Gonzales area is hopefully a geological extension of the highly publicized Pearsall area," says Bruce Hunt, president of Petro-Hunt. "We think it may offer equivalent recoverable reserves per well in comparison to what we've seen in Frio County. If so, we have a good position in the play."

A good position indeed. Petro-Hunt acquired drilling rights to about 65,000 gross acres in Wilson and Gonzales counties. Then, before the drilling began, an exploration agreement was consummated with ARCO. Under the terms of that agreement ARCO and Petro-Hunt will each have 50 percent of the project.

"We are eager to get some wells drilled," Hunt added, "and we were glad to find a strong, aggressive partner for the project. Hopefully ARCO and Petro-Hunt will find significant reserves in these two counties."

Several wells have been permitted and staked thus far in the project and three are currently drilling or testing.

Triton plans to raise restructuring dollars

DALLAS (AP) — Triton Energy Corp. announced a restructuring plan to raise money to pay off long-term debt and undertake new exploration.

Triton said it expects to raise $150 million, most of which will go toward paying down $250 million in long-term debt, said spokesman Phil Shook.

The Dallas-based company will sell fixed base aviation operations, a portion of its U.S. oil and gas interests, and a marketable securities portfolio.

In addition, Triton will sell to the public shares in Input-Output Inc., the company's seismic equipment subsidiary.

The company already has reached an agreement to sell North Sea oil and gas interests for $65 million, Shook said. Triton will retain its interests in the Paris Basin, which account for 40 percent of its reserves, he said.

"The restructuring also includes substantial reduction in general and administrative expenses and the elimination of the current 10 cents per share cash dividend on the company's common shares," Triton said in a statement.

Dispute puts wrinkle in Farah's comeback plans

■ William Farah claims the board of directors of the apparel manufacturer isn't doing anything for the company, while board members complain Farah is seeking total control of the company founded by his father in 1920.

By Suzanne Gamboa

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — This was to be the year apparel manufacturer Farah Inc. turned around a five-year-long downhill slide with a new line of wrinkle-resistant men's slacks.

Instead, William Farah, director and largest stockholder, claims the company his father founded in 1920 is losing its shirt. He blames the board of directors and wants them out.

The company's stock, which enjoyed a high of $29 a share in 1984, has plummeted to as low as $2 while Farah and the board have been battling. The dispute comes to a head Friday in a shareholders' meeting Farah sought to get rid of six of nine board directors, including his daughter.

"Nobody likes this kind of a fight in the business. But it got to finally where it's the only way we can solve it," Farah said in a recent interview. "They're not doing anything for the business. It's losing its shirt."

Farah Inc. lost $11.6 million last fiscal year on sales of $239 million. The company's largest manufacturing subsidiary has suffered $46.7 million in operating losses during the past five years, the company said in a letter to shareholders.

Farah claims the board isn't working hard enough, but directors say their fundamental problem with Farah is that he seeks overall control of the company.

"THE BOARD believes that William Farah has excessively tried to involve himself in daily management, especially the company's management operations," the company said in its proxy statement.

Farah is criticized by some as an obstinate and opinionated man who must be in control as long as he is involved with the company. But Farah shook his head when asked about that characterization, and said the bylaws give directors the power to run the company.

"For them to say that I'm the one that's holding it up. Why don't they do something about it? ... All they've been able to write (in the proxy statement) is beating on me about the past. That doesn't have anything to do with where we're going."

Farah's quest to regain control of the company he helped manage for 43 years comes less than a year after he stepped down as chief executive officer and signed a $365,000 consulting agreement.

"You have disagreed with the board regarding the scope of your activities on behalf of the company under the consulting agreement," Thomas G. Wyman, who replaced Farah as chairman, wrote in an April 25 letter to Farah that set off the current war.

AP Laserphoto

William Farah awaits a shareholders meeting this week, where he hopes shareholders will help him oust six members of the board of directors.

"The board considers these disagreements to have hindered the company's ability to operate its business on a day-to-day basis and such disagreements are not in the best interest of the company and shareholders."

HOPING TO keep Farah in check, the directors then barred him from entering company facilities and discussing the business with any officer, employee, customer or potential customer.

In dueling lawsuits, Farah claimed he was being wrongfully blocked from his office at the El Paso headquarters; directors claimed Farah was harassing employees, officers and directors and hindering company operations and representing himself as an officer of Farah Inc.

An affable and distinguished man, Farah appears younger than his 71 years. He has a sturdy build and a distinguished posture. The only physical trait that suggests his age is a slight shakiness in his hands and speech.

"I wanted to be on the scene where I could see and tell what was going on," Farah said. "He (Wyman) claims I interfered, but I never interfered one time."

The infighting follows forecasts of a bright future for the company, whose main products are men's clothing sold under the Farah, John Henry and Savane brand names.

BUT IN the first half of the current fiscal year, Farah reported sales of $59.2 million compared to sales of $78.6 million last year. The company's losses of $2.75 million in the same period of 1989 fell to about $2 million this year.

Allender did not return several phone calls and messages from The Associated Press.

The company is now operating on a new business plan it adopted in May with the help of a consulting firm.

This is not the first time Farah has waged a battle for control of the company in which he owns about 16 percent of the 6.3 million outstanding shares. The company has been on a roller coaster ride since Farah assumed control when his brother died in 1964.

In the 1960's, Farah enjoyed its heyday with permanent press fabrics. But that came to an end in 1972 when the company was crippled by a two-year strike because he refused to recognize a union. Farah surrendered in 1974, but not before a national boycott cost the company millions.

But he regained control of the company in 1978 and sued the banks, which paid him a $14.5 million in a 1985 out of court settlement.

"In my opinion, that six-year period was very tough on my father's ego. Mr. Williams was credited with the company's turnaround," James Farah, Farah's son, wrote in an April article for Family Business magazine.

If he wins the fight, Farah plans to have a three-member board including him, supporting board member Charles Wood and Wyman. Wyman has said he'd resign if Farah prevails.

Farah has been working tirelessly since July 19, trying to line up supporters. But he promises that if he doesn't win, the fight won't be over, suggesting lawsuits will follow.

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Kansas Gas and Electric Co. urged stockholders to reject a $27-per-share, $875 million takeover offer from Kansas City Power and Light Co.

KG&E said Thursday the offer, made last month, of $857 million in cash for its common stock and $18 million cash for three series of preferred stock was inadequate.

SCOTT BURNS

Call for spending cuts being heard

By Scott Burns

WASHINGTON — All Mike Monroney wants is restraint. "I'd like people to commit to the idea that you can balance the (federal) budget by controlling spending, not new taxes," he said.

Burns

Mr. Monroney might be heard. As Chairman of Co-Fire — Coalition for Fiscal Restraint — he heads the newest effort by professional and business groups to be heard in the din of Washington. The coalition membership, which represents over 5 million people in different trade associations, small businesses, and citizens groups, is trying to get the attention of Congress on a single issue: taxes.

"In my judgment, opposing a tax increase is the only intelligent strategy in this town. If you get a tax increase, it won't bring any spending restraints," Mr. Monroney said in a recent interview. "If I thought a tax increase would solve the deficits, I'd be all for it. But every study ever done shows that $1 in taxes results in over $1 in new spending. If we could hold the growth of government spending to 2.1 percent a year, you could balance the Federal budget by 1994."

Wishful thinking?

Very likely. But of all the paths for balancing the budget, spending control is the least damaging. Lets take a look at what HAS happened in the last 10 years and what might have happened if federal spending had been controlled:

■ FEDERAL SPENDING ROSE VERY FAST. For all the talk of massive budget cuts, the actual record shows that federal spending rose handsomely throughout the 80's. On average, spending rose over $60 billion a year, rising 93 percent from 1980 to 1989. That is an annual compound rate of 7.58 percent.

■ CONSUMER PRICES DIDN'T RISE AS FAST. Government spending rose faster than inflation, as measured by the consumer price index. Prices rose by 52.81 percent between 1980 and 1989. Government spending rose faster in every year except 1987. Over the nine year period, prices rose as a compound rate of 4.65 percent, nearly 3 percent LESS than the annual growth in federal spending.

■ WORKER WAGES DIDN'T KEEP UP WITH INFLATION. According to Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, government spending rose faster than the average private, non farm workers wages in every year except 1987. Wages rose at a compound rate of only 4.02 percent and exceeded the rise in consumer prices in only three years, 1982, 1983, and 1984. Expressed in dollars of 1977 purchasing power, the average workers weekly wages fell from $172.74 in 1980 to $166.52 in 1989.

Put that all together and you have to ask some rude questions. Like, where would we be if Congress HAD been able to control federal spending? Here are the answers for three different cases:

■ If Spending growth had been 5.65 percent, a full one percent faster than the rate of inflation, it would have reached $969 billion and the deficit would have been a SURPLUS of about $21 billion. In fact, the surplus probably would have been higher because the Treasury would not have had to pay out nearly $170 billion in interest in 1989.

■ If spending growth had merely MATCHED the rate of inflation — in other words if the government had suffered with the rest of us — spending would have reached only $889.5 billion and there would have been a surplus of OVER $100 billion.

■ If spending growth had been tied to the growth of workers wages, it would have risen to $842.5 billion and there would have been a surplus of about $150 billion before considering the dramatic reduction in both the Federal debt and the interest rate the Treasury would have to pay on it.

Bottom line: if Congress can live under the same constraints that working people live under, we can have a balanced Federal budget. Without new taxes.

DATA: Helps new, existing firms

(From 1G)

Perryman has sold the database to 13 counties in East Texas, which are linked together, and to three individual towns, and is in the process of customizing the database for a utility company.

The company developed the premise for the database in 1986 after oil prices collapsed and several communities in East Texas called Perryman for help answering questions by companies they were recruiting.

"We sat down with industry recruiters and asked them what questions they were asked most. Then we went to our resources and tried to build a computer system that was easy enough for anyone to use."

He noted that it takes Perryman approximately four months to develop a database for a client, "because we want to have the most current information possible."

While having quick access to information to provide a company that is considering coming to Midland was the motivation for the database, Strotheide and Bruce Partain, manager of memberships and communications for the chamber, both stress that it is also useful for existing businesses trying to put together reports for company headquarters, or for non-profit organizations needing information for grant applications.

"We want to encourage anyone to make an appointment with us, and we'll go over the database with them," Partain said.

"Our ultimate goal," observed Perryman's Moncrief, "is to help the community. Texas has such a tremendous opportunity to grow, and Midland is to commended for its efforts in recruiting businesses."

CENTER: Oil industry looks to diversify

that have the potential to accrue specific and immediate benefits to the local economy, local environment and petroleum industry..."

The informal committee, which looked at the Center from an oil industry perspective and included representatives from Arco, Exxon, Mobil, Conoco and Texaco as well as independents, thought that the Center should also look to evaluating new technology and at supporting new ventures through forfee consulting.

Runyan said the Center could perform a service to the oil industry and area by looking at much of the backyard and garage technology being developed. "Some of the Permian Basin's biggest companies, like Drilco, Wooley Tool and Watson Packer, started out as small mom and pop businesses almost at the garage level."

Jim Davis, a member of the mission committee and production executive for Arco in Midland, sees the Center as a means of heading off environmental and other issues before they develop. "It could be an excellent authority to provide assessment of potential problems and correct them before they develop. It could also become a qualified 'third party' to mitigate issues.

The Center, which will be officially dedicated Thursday at 9:30 a.m., will have classrooms, shops, labs, satellite communications and access to the world's most powerful computer to facilitate the process, according to the general contractor.

Among projects already being eyed for study at the Center are: field research for the so-called star wars Rail Gun; a sophisticated communications system; a comprehensive database for the Permian Basin and coordinated research with the University of Texas and Department of Energy to find methods for finding and recovering more oil in the Permian Basin.

"The Bureau of Economic Geology will have offices in the Center and that officially brings the University System into the research picture," said Dr. Warren Gardner, vice president of academic affairs, who is coordinating efforts to open and staff the Center, which will be administered by the University of Texas Permian Basin.

Gardner said the facility, thanks to a $100,000 per year grant from the Department of Commerce, was already partially staffed with researchers who have been working on labor and educational studies in the Permian Basin as well as collecting data for a comprehensive Permian Basin Database. An executive director for the facility will be named at a later date, and a staff of 10-18 is planned.

One of the first functions of the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification will be to host a conference aptly entitled: Building the Future of the Permian Basin, and Diversifying for Growth.

Attending the conference will be: Jeff Nathason, executive director of the New Mexico Incubator Center, who has recently returned from Siberia, where he was engaged in setting up enterprises for the Soviet Union. Dr. John Howe, president of the University of Texas Regional Science Center at San Antonio will be discussing regional medical facilities, and Dr. Mark Rice, director of the Incubator Center at Rensselaer Institute in New York. David Gerhardt head of the Texas Capital Network will provide information on venture capital. Dr. George Kozmetsky, former Dean of the University of Texas School of Business will mediate the conference.

Dr. Duane Leach noted that some of the greatest things the Center will do have not yet been thought of because it is a constantly changing world.

Government OKs merger of MCI, Telecom

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission approved the merger of two long-distance telephone companies, MCI Communications Corp. and Telecom USA Inc.

The merger is expected to help MCI make greater inroads into the long-distance telephone market dominated by AT&T.

Kathleen Keegan, an MCI spokeswoman, said the company expects the merger to be completed before the end of August "subject to the receipt of certain state regulatory approvals."

"We are pleased that the FCC has given us approval," she said.

MCI announced last April that under the terms of an agreement reached with Telecom it would acquire all outstanding shares of the company's common stock for $42 a share, for a total purchase price of about $1.25 billion.

MCI, which has headquarters in Washington, is the nation's second largest provider of long-distance service. It has 19,500 employees and had revenue in 1989 of $6.5 billion. It serves residential and commercial customers with long distance, voice and data services both in the United States and overseas.

Telecom USA is the fourth largest U.S. long distance company. Headquartered in Atlanta, it has 5,000 employees and had 1989 revenue of $713 million.

Exile will be performing at Midland's New West Club on Friday.

Exile music

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Lee Carroll is the grandson of a small-town doctor, the brother of a doctor, the brother of a dentist and the husband of a registered nurse.

Carroll laughed as he says, "I flunked out of pre-med."

"I didn't really want to be there. I went to college when I was 18, and I really didn't know what I wanted to do. After a couple of years, I realized my heart wasn't in it. I found myself staying up all night play the piano and skipping all my classes. I still didn't realize I wanted to be musician. Well, nobody in the town that I grew up in were musicians. I had no role models."

Carroll's music career began when at age 15 he asked his mother for a second-hand electric organ and she bought it for him.

Although he was living in a small community, it was not "culturally isolated." Mammoth Cave National Park was 10 miles from his house and nearby there was a job corps camp. He went to high school with Max Williams, the son of one of the job corps counselors.

"He got me interested in music. He played a little bit of everything — guitar, trumpet and piano. He wanted to play in a band, and there weren't any piano players around so he started showing me some things on the piano. Once I started doing that and got interested in it, I started playing in a little rock band in hometown. I haven't seen him in 20 years," Carroll said. "I'd like to run into him again some day."

The idea of being a professional musician, "didn't seem real," yet, after two years at the University of Kentucky at Lexington, Carroll "jumped at the chance" to join a blues band.

Now 37 years old, Carroll is the keyboardist for Exile, which will be performing at Midland's New West Club on Friday.

The country music group's first single "Keep it in the Middle of the Road," from the group's first album for Arista records, "Still Standing," climbed the Radio & Records country singles chart to No. 11.

Exile recently released its second single, "Nobody's Talking," off the Arista album, along with a new video which debuted on Country Music television in April.

Fans are most surprised when they meet the members of Exile and discover, Carroll said, "We're no different than they are."

The group, which was playing popular music in the 1970s, has had 20 different members. Carroll finds the current members compose "the best band in 27 years of history."

He can trace his first experience seeing Exile perform to when he was 14 years old and growing up in the 1,700-population town of Cave City, Ky.

Dick Clark's Caravan of Stars, featuring Paul Revere and the Raiders, Tommy Roe and Bryan Hyland, played Western Kentucky University, 30 miles away in Bowling Green.

"They picked up a local or regional band to open the show and play with the single artists. The opening act was Exile. My history with Exile goes back pretty far, even through I didn't know them then; they were the first concert I ever heard."

Carroll and Exile's path crossed again after he dropped out of college and was performing with the blues band. Then, when he was 23, Carroll decided to attend Berklee College in Boston, which specializes in contemporary music, especially jazz.

"If I was going to seriously pursue music as a livelihood, then I needed an education," Carroll said. "Eventually, I ended up going there for three years. A degree didn't seem to count for much in the music business if you're a performer."

He left Berklee College with some friends from school and they formed a jazz band called Fly By Night. They traveled extensively and when they performed in Lexington, some of the members of Exile came to hear them.

Race car driver

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

J.R. "Junior" Robertson was the envy of his friends. At 16, he had something more precious than a driver's license. He had a race car.

"My dad started racing, and then he gave me his old car that he ran. I started racing it and he built a new car," Robertson said, recalling his early days in racing.

He laughed and added, "We had to find friends that had a pickup or something that could pull a race car. I didn't even have a driver's license for the street."

That was 22 years ago. Now 38 years old, his thirst for the sport of racing is still unquenched. And, Robertson has two sons, Toby, 10, and Dusty, 8, who are as avid fans as he was when he was sharing his dad's passion.

His sons are with him at Twin Cities Speedway every Friday night during the season. Unfortunately his dad isn't here to see the continuation of his dream. He was killed in a car accident — on the streets of Midland — in 1982. But his mother doesn't miss races if possible.

"My family is behind me 100 percent," Robertson says. "It really makes it a lot more easier to do your thing."

Robertson and his sons will find themselves at Twin Cities Speedway Saturday, Aug. 18, for the 1990 National Demolition Derby, sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club.

Robertson will drive No. 26 in the races, while his sons ride their bikes in the Great Bicycle Race, one of the other events that evening. In addition, Robertson is looking for a car to enter in the demolition derby itself.

Speedway will host Demolition Derby

Staff Report

Twin Cities Speedway is the site of the 1990 National Demolition Derby Aug. 18.

The evening, which is billed as "Super Saturday Night" with entertainment for all members of the family, features six shows including a car show; radio control race cars by RC Pro Shop; spectator drags, where audience members drive the car their drove to the track; The Great Bicycle Race, which has classes for all ages; car racing; and the demolition derby, which is sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club.

The car show includes eight classes of cars. Those participating need to be on the track that day by 5 p.m.

The bicycle races, the radio control car show and the Open Car Show will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. Automobile racing begins at 8:30 p.m.

First place in the demolition derby is $2,000. More than $10,000 in cash and prizes will be given that evening.

To enter the derby, go by A Quick Signs or most automobile parts stores and pick up entry blank or call 683-8541 or 563-5456.

Racing is held Friday nights at Twin Cities Speedway, located in Midland County, off Coors Road between Midland and Odessa. The three-eighths mile asphalt oval track lies between Highway 80 and Interstate 20.

Radio-control cars

"We actually ran that car in three derbies in a row at Twin Cities Speedway," said Ted Norton. "We were able to put it back together each time. We had a blast with it."

Norton was a co-owner of the car known as "The Land Shark," not its driver.

"I've watched enough derbies to know I don't know if I want to do that or not," Norton said when asked if he might drive in the Aug. 18 derby at the speedway. "I've broken enough bones in my life to last me."

"Actually, when I met my wife, I had a broken collar bone and a broken wrist," Norton says. "Ordinarily, I'd been practicing and probably would never have met her. Since I was injured, I couldn't race so I was out driving around."

When they decided to marry, Norton walked away from racing, something he had been traveling the country doing for 10 years. He settled into running his own remodeling business and was mainly employed building cabinets. Then, seven years ago, he re-entered the world of racing. This time, the vehicles were much smaller.

Norton found himself fascinated as he watched a radio-controlled car being run along the sidelines of a parade at Christmas. It looked like fun. He had to know more. He began by helping to organize a local radio control club.

"At that time, it was all pro cars, and we raced on parking lots with wooden jumps, until the club got large enough where we could afford to rent some property and put a regular outdoor dirt track in. After we put the dirt track in on Andrews Highway, more and more people got involved. We saw there was a demand for someone to handle the parts and accessories and the cars."

Today, he has RC Pro Shop here and spends his time operating, selling and servicing radio-controlled cars. The business began in a small 200-square-foot store, which

Photographer travels Ho Chi Minh trail

By Jay Sharbutt

NEW YORK (AP) — Philip Jones Griffiths, a photographer who spent three years covering the Vietnam War, took a trip down memory lane last year. But he did it the hard way — on remnants of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

When he first saw what once had been North Vietnam's famous, much-bombed main supply route south, he suffered a bit of photographer's regret:

"I suppose what I was thinking is that I should have been here 20 years ago. The photographer's instinct is to say, 'I've been cheated. I should have been here.' "

His "Ho Chi Minh Trail" expedition, filmed for the BBC's "Great Journeys" series bought by 61 public TV stations, will start airing later this month — Aug. 11 here and from Aug. 13 to 16 in other cities.

The Ho Chi Minh trail was far more than a trail. It was a network of trails, dirt roads and river crossings, mostly covered by jungle, that stretched south for 200 to 300 miles into Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam.

It was heavily bombed by U.S. warplanes and periodically infiltrated by U.S. Army Special Forces troops, but few Western journalists ever traveled it during the war.

No doubt puzzled, officials in Hanoi last year gave Griffiths and his camera crew permission to film what it looks like now — at least those portions still passable in the Soviet-made jeep they loaned him, along with a guide.

Large chunks of the once-bustling trail have been reclaimed by the jungle, "and once you stop upkeeping a road like that it disappears very quickly. So our biggest task was actually finding it."

"I suppose what I was thinking is that I should have been here (Ho Chi Minh trail) 20 years ago. The photographer's instinct is to say, 'I've been cheated. I should have been here.' "

— Photographer Philip Jones Griffith

"Occasionally, you'd find what looked like a hopeful bit of road. But after half a mile, there would be so many old bomb craters that no vehicle on earth could traverse them. They were too close together."

Griffiths got to travel only the trail's Vietnam side. His attempt to follow it through Laos, starting at what once was a major wartime entry point called the Mu Gia Pass, was blocked by guards.

It wasn't just because the trail was washed out, he says.

"The Laotians wouldn't let us go in. They try to maintain a little independence from the Vietnamese, so they were anxious that it wouldn't seem they were being ordered to let us in."

But he doubts that the trail network through Laos exists anymore, although he concedes "there's no real way of finding out" without Laotian permission.

The Welsh-born Griffiths, whose documentary is liberally filled with North Vietnamese wartime footage of the trail, only got as far as Vietnam's Central Highlands before his expedition ended.

The reason: the continuing war in Cambodia in which soldiers who include the Khmer Rouge are fighting those of the Vietnam-backed government.

"We couldn't get too close to the border at times, because when you start coming around the edge of Cambodia, the Vietnamese began getting worried about the Khmer Rouge," he says.

Griffiths took a philosophical attitude about the possibility that the Cambodian communist forces might have crossed the border and mined parts of the road on which he was able to travel.

"My feeling is that the bits the Vietnamese kept in repair were pretty well-traveled, and if the Khmer Rouge had ever booby-trapped them, they certainly weren't going to tell me about it," he says.

The early part of his tour took him through what once was the so-called demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam, then past two famous battlefields — Khe Sanh and the A Shau Valley.

He spent one night in the latter, which in May 1969 was the scene of the bloody, controversial battle for what U.S. troops called Hamburger Hill.

"There's sort of a people's committee building on the valley floor right opposite Hamburger Hill," Griffiths says. "You sit on the balcony in the evening, and you look at Hamburger Hill.

NEW YORK (AP) — The soon-to-be-released single of South African pop star Brenda Fassie is a tribute to her uncle, Nelson Mandela. But the record's been banned in her native country.

"Black President," to be released by SBK Records on Aug. 20, was written by Fassie and Sello Twaloa.

Fassie made her recording debut in 1979 with the trio Joy. Her next band, Brenda and the Big Dudes, had a string of hits in South Africa. She went solo in 1987 and began to express political beliefs in her music.

EXILE: Keyboard player jumps at chance to join group

(From 1H)

"In fact, I think the only people who liked the band were musicians. We weren't really playing the kind of music that the general public cares much for now. We were ill-timed, either too late or too soon — probably too late."

After several years, Carroll and the other players decided they "couldn't make a living as a jazz band and switched over to pop music."

"We started watching MTV a lot, cut the sleeves off our T-shirts and got funny haircuts. We thought we were a rock band."

Carroll tired of the music and, after five years with the group, quit, left Boston and moved to Nashville, which was closer to his roots.

"I grew up 100 miles from Nashville, so it was home. Even through I'd never played country music, I decided to move to Nashville to see what would happen."

Within a year, he was playing with The Judds. In the meantime, he found he was fortunate to play the piano and not the guitar.

"Lucky for me, there weren't that many piano players. There's a sea of guitar players there — very, very tough competition, but it's not as bad if you are a piano player."

Dave Ennis, the piano player from Restless Heart, had heard Carroll when he played with Fly By Night. When jobs would come his way and he was booked, Ennis began recommending Carroll. That's how Carroll came to sign on as a sideman with The Judds.

About the same time, Exile came to Nashville to pursue a recording contract on a country label. The group was "not selling any pop records and country artists were taking their songs and having big hits with them."

"All of a sudden, I'm on the same circuit — playing with The Judds and working shows Exile was on."

When Carroll was asked by a member of Exile if he was interested in joining the group when the existing keyboard player left, he jumped at the chance.

"I already knew everybody in the band. It was a real opportunity for me. As the Judds sideman, I was basically a hired employee. They (Exile) were offering to take me into the business.

"Traditionally, in Nashville artists will not use their road bands to make records. They used the same 15 studio musicians to make almost all the records in Nashville. It's very frustrating if you are on the road with somebody and working day after day, and all of a sudden they are in the studio working, and you are locked out of the creative side of things. That was the real appeal — to be making the albums, to be involved in the business, to be privy to everything that goes on."

When asked to describe Exile's music, Carroll said, "We really don't fit into mainstream county music, whatever that means. It seems like the whole group scene in country music is an off-shoot of the country rock music of the '60s in a way. Rock fans were certainly used to seeing groups when there weren't any groups in country music.

"I think the thing that might set Exile apart from other groups is a little stronger '60s Motown influence — the R & B kind of feel. Basically, I still believe all the groups in country music are sort of an off-shoot of what baby boomers grew up listening to. I see a direct connection between '60s rock music and country groups of today. A lot of the groups today have members that go back to that."

Carroll cited as examples Desert Rose Band's member Chris Hillman who was in the Birds, Southern Pacific's Stu Cook who played bass with Credence Clearwater Revival and a couple of other Southern Pacific players were in the Doobie Brothers.

Exile's live show is, Carroll said, "High energy. We put a lot of work into it."

Time for Exile's show is 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $7 in advance and $8 at the door.

CAR: Racing family affair for Midlanders

(From 1H)

"I think it took me about five minutes, and I was out of it. I didn't think about protecting the front end. I thought you were supposed to run into everybody you could."

He was wrong.

"The main object of it is to protect the radiator, and you try to hit with the back of the car. That wasn't my theory the first time. Just go out there and bang them up. It didn't take me more than a couple of hits, and I was out. The best we've ever done in the derby is we ran third in one of them."

In his 22 years of racing, Robertson has won 11 championships at Twin Cities Speedway and captured third in the Grand American Racing Tour circuit two years ago. He has several sponsors for his race car, including, Bostic Diesel Service, Sunset Tubing Testers and A & A Welders, all in the Permian Basin, and Jay's Construction of Fort Worth.

Through the years, he feels he's received a lot of support.

"If it wasn't for the fans there wouldn't be any reason to be out there, really. They really have gave us a lot of support."

Despite sponsors and fans, racing remains his avocation, not his livelihood. Robertson, who worked for Machen Construction for 20 years, has spent the last year driving a hot oil truck for Crouch Oilfield Service.

Racing is an expensive hobby. The late model car Robertson drives has around $30,000 tied up in it.

"It's really gotten way out of hand on expense," he says.

Yet, Robertson hasn't considered quiting. In fact, for the past five years, he's been traveling the circuit, racing in Cheyene, Wy., Altus, Okla., Austin, Corpus Christi, San Antonio, Colorado Springs, Colo., and Kansas City.

"It's fun. We love the motel rooms and the fast foods and everything. It's always a new experience to go to a different track. Sometimes the kids get to go, sometimes they don't, if they are in school. During the summer, we pretty well take all the family and the pit crew."

The trips aren't easy. Robertson recalls when he raced at Twin Cities Speedway on a Friday night and Cheyenne, Wy., the next night.

"It's about 750 miles. We raced, drove all night and half the day, got into Cheyenne just in time to unload and race. Then we loaded back up, turned around and drove back home. We got in here about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon."

RADIO: Racing fun without risk of injury

(From 1H)

Norton said, "Looked like a hole in the wall."

RC Pro Shop prospered enough to move to a 700-square-foot location at San Miguel Square. Then, in January of 1989, Norton moved his business into a 3,000-square-foot location which houses an indoor race track, where races for NASCAR-style radio control cars are held. The model cars are like the Pro Stock cars which race at Twin Cities Speedway.

"They are built to a one-tenth scale. Right now in radio control, NASCAR-style are the hottest race going. They are much faster. NASCAR-type cars are the most popular, the fastest growing part of RC racing.

"People can identify with the one-tenth scale model of the car because some are replicas of actual cars. It's a way to go racing without fear of bodily injury. And a lot of times you can't afford to go racing in full-size cars."

Norton and the other members of the Radio Control Car Club of Midland will race their cars at Twin Cities Speedway on Aug. 18.

"The guys get real nervous. When they're driving, they are shaking all over. They have someone right on them, wanting to pass. It makes them nervous. It makes me nervous. I just don't know how to explain it, but it's the same thing."

Norton, who is 32 and a native Midlander, never dreamed he would wind up in a business which began as a hobby.

"I had absolutely no idea at all that I would be doing this," Norton said. "I figured for sure I'd be in the construction trade. I had no idea I'd be in the model car business.

"It really was a blessing in disguise. After the boom, everything dropped off so much. If I hadn't had this, I don't know what I would be doing, really."

Author didn't quit until book done

By Hillel Italie

NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis McFarland knows a lot about quitting.

He studied music, but gave it up: stage fright. Then came writing — novels. He'd stop cold at page 45. He even tried real estate, hated it, and left six months later.

McFarland

Wary of becoming "legitimate," he again took up writing. But how long can a husband and father, way past 21, tell people he's still finding himself, still trying to get that first book published.

So when McFarland started on a new novel, centered on a man whose brother commits suicide, the author decided this was one project he had to complete.

"It's sort of like you're doing something in the dark. I believed in myself and my wife believed, but it didn't seem that anybody else would be affected if I quit writing," said McFarland, 41, whose novel is called "The Music Room" (Houghton Mifflin, $19.95).

"I had quit on everything else; I always thought that something had happened to me in the middle. But with this book I decided no matter what else happens, I was going to keep on. And rejection after rejection, I kept on writing."

"The Music Room" begins with Martin Lambert learning that his 25-year-old brother, Perry, has jumped from the window of a Manhattan hotel room. Martin, 29, flies in from San Francisco to find out what happened, falls in love with Perry's old girlfriend, Jane Owlcaster, and discovers he knew little about his brother's life.

Now on the surface this has little to do with McFarland. A native of Mobile, Ala., he never had a brother commit suicide. He did not come from a musical family, unlike the one in the novel, nor were his parents alcoholics. The room that gives the book its title is vividly described, but also does not really exist.

But this is a story about quitting. Jobs. Marriages. Life itself. Martin, like McFarland, has a history of unfinished business. He's disconnected, easily distracted. When Martin receives the call about his brother's death, he puts the detective on hold, moves the French windows that overlook his garden and watches a hummingbird dart outside.

Later, lying in bed next to Perry's girlfriend, Martin thinks about the early deaths of his brother and father, killed by alcoholism at age 42.

"When I closed my own eyes, I thought at once of Perry, of how, despite his drive to succeed, despite his apparent self-possession, he had been, in his own way, lost. And then I thought how surely the whole family was lost .... And father was lost to himself as he groped his way towards his absurd early death. How often he would open the door to a room, surprised to find us there — 'Oh, I'm sorry, boys, I was looking for the ... ' — a stray in his own home."

Another link between author and subject. Martin is in his late 20s, and realizes he's unhappy, selling his San Francisco record company to start a new life in New York. McFarland remembers his late 20s as a time when he hated his life, "hated getting up." He had given up on music, sharing Martin's distaste for a career of "teaching ear training to a bunch of college students."

"I realized that even I became one of the most successful people in the field, composing or performing, maybe there's 100 people who would care," said McFarland, who studied music at Brooklyn College and now lives outside of Boston.

"It was so esoteric. I decided I would like a larger audience if I was going to do something artistic."

Martin, drinking heavily, accuses Jane of hiding information about the suicide. Frightened, aware that "full-blown sorrow over his death, still brewing at sea, had not yet reached shore," he escapes to his mother's house in Norfolk, Va.

One day, walking in the fields on a warm autumn afternoon, he has a vision, "the kind of vision that is the brutal side of grief: the vision of an impossible future."

He pictures a celebration, a birthday party for his father. It's late summer and both parents are sober. Perry is alive and happy, playing backgammon with his mother, Jane resting her hands on his shoulders. Their children are running by the water.

"... as the squeals of the children fleeing the cool surf and the laughter attending the backgammon game reach my ears," thinks Martin, "I am filled with the faith and quiet confidence that belongs to those who were given the heart and willingness to survive, to those given the great fortune to have continued."

Imagine those words as something McFarland said to himself, at one of the many times he was ready to give up the novel and perhaps take another look at selling houses. That's why "The Music Room" is a personal novel, regardless of how different his life is from Martin's. And that's why the author saw no other way to end the story than to make sure his character lived.

"Either you die or you start to go back up," McFarland observed. "I probably will never write the book where it ends with the person hitting bottom and staying there. That's just not what I want my vision to be.

"I believe that enormous grief and enormous loss are survivable. That's the greatest story for me."

'I had quit on everything else; I always thought that something had happened to me in the middle. But with this book I decided no matter what else happens, I was going to keep on. And rejection after rejection, I kept on writing.'

— Dennis McFarland

Hersey's short stories maintain air of optimism

"Fling," by John Hersey. Knopf. 207 Pages. $19.95.

By Joseph Holland

Associated Press

■ A Review

Hemingway is dead and O. Henry went down swinging. Fortunately, John Hersey, at 76, still writes with a lion's heart.

"Fling," the first published collection of short stories by this celebrated Pulitzer Prize-winning master, sparkles with individual gems in an already weighty crown. "God's Typhoon," the opening story, poignantly details the loss of innocence suffered by a young boy whose doomsday-preaching father is slaughtered in a violent tornado. The boy is left to rebuild his life by replanting the tyrannical man's cherished garden.

"The Captain" is a classic seagoing tale of a world-weary skipper and his mutinous apprentice forced into compromise by the greater power of a raging sea. A passage from "The Captain":

"We ate silently. Toward the end of the string I had noticed that a human presence had finally made its appearance in Ben's eyes, and that the persona of that presence was a peckish human being who had decided to hate our captain. It struck me that the eyes had been dead until bad blood infused them with a sparkling life. ... Everyone knows that there is a noble tradition, among seagoing men, of hating the captain. Captain-hating, even of good captains, goes very far back; the animals in the ark probably hated Noah, even though he was saving them from drowning."

In contrast to these two dramatic pieces, many of the stories are considerably more uplifting. Hersey writes with a lyrical movement whose grace is timeless. His more recent stories, written in 1989, maintain an air of optimism and innocence reminiscent of the 1930s and '40s. Mature, insightful storytelling, a product of living a long and full life, assures his two elderly characters in "Fling," the title story, a real credibility as they Lindy through one last dying hoorah together during the halcyon Kennedy years.

Douglas' storytelling saves his first novel

"Dance With The Devil," by Kirk Douglas. Random House. 320 pages. $19.95.

By Curt Schleier

Hearst News Service

■ A Review

"Dance with the Devil" is not an attempt to cash in on an author's celebrity. It would have been published if it had been written by Joe Blow. Of course, Mr. Blow couldn't have gotten the book the kind of attention Kirk Douglas will, but that's a function of America's love affair with Tinseltown.

Douglas, of course, has already established his credentials as an author. His best-selling autobiography, "The Ragman's Son," was moving, compelling and a notch above standard Hollywood fare. "Dance with the Devil" isn't as satisfying, but nevertheless is a breezy read for a summer afternoon.

Danny Dennison is the sole member of his family to survive a Nazi concentration camp. Because he doesn't understand how God could allow this to happen, he denies his Judaism. Brought to the United States, he marries a very beautiful and very waspy woman and achieves a modicum of success as writer-director of a series of popular but intellectually unfulfilling films.

But something is missing in his life. And who better to help him find it (and provide an excuse for gratuitous sex scenes) than a hooker with a heart of gold?

Sadly, Douglas' characters are flesh without blood. They react at the whim of the plot. Dennison's agent is a stereotypical Hollywood hustler. His anti-Semitic father-in-law is so one-dimensional, his actions so clearly plot devices, he almost slows the story down.

However, Douglas' skill as a storyteller save the day. Despite mistakes that would sink many other writers, Douglas manages to keep the story moving, involving and compelling. "Dance with the Devil" is a surprisingly impressive fiction debut. Top that, Michael Douglas.

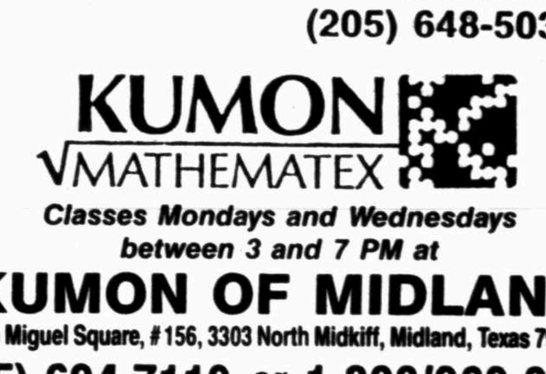
"I HATE MATH"



KUMON GETS RESULTS

KUMON is the widely heralded Japanese method of teaching math. It turns hate to love in almost every instance. It has more than 1,500,000 students world-wide and is already a part of the curriculum in nearly 200 U.S. school systems . . . And, it really works! Read what these widely diversified educators have to say about KUMON:

"Without KUMON, as third graders, they scored just inside the top 20% . . . But with KUMON, as fourth graders, they scored in the top 9% on standard achievement tests."

This summer marks the 25th anniversary of "Texas," which is staged at Palo Duro Canyon.

By Chip Brown

PALO DURO CANYON (AP) — Welcome to "Texas" where music accompanies gun-slingin' cowboys and war-painted Indians as they ride on horseback across dusty sagebrush....where roughneck cowpokes sing love ballads that could make a stone blush, and frontiersmen carry enough Lone Star flags to wallpaper the Alamo...where covered wagons roll, open barbecue pits smoke and, if you're lucky, a great western sunset paints the sky with pastels rivaling Monet.

For 25 years, these scenes have been brought to life in "Texas," a musical extravaganza staged at the heels of a 600-foot cliff guarding America's second largest canyon.

With Palo Duro Canyon as its backdrop and the sky as its lighting, "Texas" is filled with kicker dancing, large chorus numbers and costumes straight out of "Gone With the Wind."

While viewers gawk at the earthy scenery, the musical tells a romantic story of courage, a tribute to the pioneer spirit of those who had the grit to settle where many said it was uninhabitable.

"So this is Texas," said Jindra Bauer, of Prague, Czechoslovakia, after seeing the show recently. "I have heard so much about the pride of Texas. I learned a lot in a very beautiful way. I would like to see it again."

Each night except Sundays between June 13 and Aug. 25, more than 1,700 folks drive down into the canyon, past signs warning of "falling rocks," to attend performances.

Attendance for the show's silver anniversary season this year is expected to top 100,000 for the third time in five years. More than 1.7 million people have seen "Texas" since it opened in 1966. Attendance that first year was 61,338, but has skyrocketed since 1986 when it topped out at 105,423.

On a given night visitors from more than 40 countries will be in the audience, said Neil Hess, director of Texas.

"One night we had some people here from Tasmania," Hess said. "I would say that was pretty remote."

The musical's officials reward tourism by awarding a musical triangle to the audience member who has traveled the greatest distance.

The show's trademark is its opening. Two riders carrying the Texas and American flags bring their horses to the edge of the canyon's cliff and sound a bugle as the sun begins to set.

Hess said the story has not changed in 25 years, but the show's scenery and technology have.

An enormous sound system fills the canyon and at one point simulates a thunderstorm so realistic people have been known to open their umbrellas. The set also includes a three-car train, a railroad depot and a windmill.

When Col. Henry, a wealthy cattleman character in the show, is asked how he likes his steak, he replies: "Well, covering the whole plate, of course."

Jerry Williams, who has had a role in Texas for all of its 25 years, said, "Most people say the show is corny because people wouldn't say things like 'Good grannies, I never learned to dance.'

"It may be corny but it is absolutely sheer poetry."

Texas was the vision of Margaret Harper, a theater veteran who read about some of Green's outdoor dramas in a 1960 issue of Reader's Digest.

Mrs. Harper's enthusiasm toward Green's writing convinced the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, Inc. to commission the author to write an outdoor drama for the Lone Star State.

"We are lucky that the public is still eager to come, but luck is a small part of the picture," said Mrs. Harper, who resides in Amarillo. "The main factor is the roots which Texas has — the pride of everyone in the Panhandle and the support in every community."

The Institute of Outdoor Drama in Chapel Hill, N.C., lists Texas as America's best-attended outdoor drama. In 1989, 101,000 people from every state and 100 countries saw the show.

On average, weather has forced cancellation of only one show a season over the past 25 years, Hess said.

"It is an incredible thing because bad weather is what plagues so many outdoor productions," he said. "The weather has made this the most successful outdoor production in the United States."

Institute offering art classes

ODESSA — In response to popular demand, the Art Institute for the Permian Basin is offering another series of summer classes this month called "Basically Fun Art."

These classes will emphasize the basic elements of art. Students will explore these elements through creative expression in a variety of media.

Classes are sponsored by the Art Institute, which will provide all supplies for students. A class fee will be charged for each class and a special discount fee is offered for those having a family museum membership. A limited number of scholarships are available upon request.

Classes for children 6 to 8 years old begin Monday. Classes for 9 to 12 year olds begin Aug. 13. Adult classes began the last week in July.

Classes are limited. Registrations are handled on a first-come, first-serve basis. For more information call 1-368-7222.

Workshop to be taught by writer

Professional freelance writer Mary Frances Beverley will conduct a one-day seminar, "How to Sell What You Write," from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday in the Discovery Room of the Lexington Hotel Suites, South Midkiff at Wall Avenue.

Ms. Beverley has been a published writer for 40 years. Her non-fiction features have appeared in publications such as Texas Highways, New Mexico magazine, The Dallas Morning News, The Houston Chronicle, The San Angelo Standard-Times, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, Restaurant Hospitality and Fodor's Texas.

Attendees will receive handouts, answers to their questions and encouragement, Ms. Beverley said.

A light lunch, catered by Foods Fantastic, is included in the $50 fee for the seminar. Interested persons may send a check to 107 Club Drive, Midland 79701. For more information call 684-6122.

Museum will host Kite Day

Staff Report

"Come fly a kite" is the invitation to Midlanders from the MTVs — Museum Teen Volunteers — at the Museum of the Southwest. The Museum will host Kite Day Aug. 11, including competitions in kite flying, artistry, and aerodynamic creation.

Other activities include kite making, picnicking on the grounds and tours of the "To Catch the Wind" exhibition in the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum.

Categories for competition are Most Creative Kite, Most Aerodynamic Kite and the Lead Balloon Kite (non-functional).

Participants may come at 11 a.m. to test fly their kites or buy one at the Children's Shop, and to picnic. Snow cones, popcorn and other food items will be for sale to supplement sack lunches.

Prospective contestants may contact either Teen Volunteer Chairperson Kathy Hale or Master-in-Residence David LeMaster at the museum, 683-2882. Entry deadline is Aug. 3.

Tours of "To Catch the Wind" are scheduled at 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. Children who tour may take Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles kites. The kite fly-off begins at 3 p.m.

The Museum Teen Volunteers are an auxiliary organization sponsored by the Museum of the Southwest. The MTVs are organizing and sponsoring Kite Day as a community service project to create interest in the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

During the 1956 European Championship, the Italians were humiliated when their premier pair had a misunderstanding and went down six in a freely bid grand slam. Nine years later, they received equivalent largesse in their match against Switzerland.

East's one club opening bid described a wide variety of hands in the Roman System employed by Giorgio Belladonna and Walter Avarelli. On this occasion it showed a strong hand. South, Pietro Bernasconi, jumped to three no trump—a gambling bid usually based on a long minor with a smattering of outside values. Not surprisingly, Belladonna, East, expressed doubts about whether the contract could be made. North, Jaime Ortiz Patino, latter to become president of the World Bridge Federation, showed great faith in his partner's skills when he elected to pass. We would not have been so brave.

West could not have led a club even had he wanted to. Instead, he led the top of his heart sequence and East, ready to cash out for down one, rose with the ace of hearts, dropping the king. The defenders proceeded to take six heart tricks, on which East discarded two clubs and a diamond. West found the spade shift and, when the queen came tumbling down on the second round, the defenders took the first 13 tricks.

That was down 2,600 points, a record for a nine-trick contract that cannot be bested unless the contract is redoubled. Had North-South not been vulnerable, the record would have tumbled in recent years. Down nine doubled under the new scoring which went into effect a few years ago, would yield a penalty of 2,300 instead of a "paltry" 1,700.

Fort Worth's Casa Manana will stage 'Les Miserables'

"Les Miserables," which had its United States premiere in December 1986 at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., opened on Broadway in March 1987, where it went on to win eight Tony Awards including Best Musical. "Les Miserables" also received the 1987 Grammy Award for Best Original Cast Recording.

Based on Victor Hugo's classic novel, "Les Miserables" is an epic saga that sweeps through three turbulent decades of 19th century French history.

Individual tickets for Casa Manana Theatre's exclusive engagement of the Broadway National Tour of "Les Miserables" are on sale at the Casa Manana box office and all Rainbow-TicketMaster outlets. Ticket prices range from $20 to $40 depending on the day and time of performance.

Evening performances from Tuesday through Saturday are scheduled for 8 p.m., and the Sunday evening performance is scheduled for 7:30. Saturday and Sunday matinees are scheduled at 2 p.m. The curtain will rise promptly at the designated curtain time and latecomers will only be seated at a suitable break in the performance.

The Casa Manana box office hours are Monday through Saturday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 8 p.m. MasterCard, Visa and American Express are accepted. Call the Casa box office at (817) 332-6221 to purchase tickets.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, AUGUST 5, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your hard work will soon be rewarded. Your magnetic personality helps you attract new financial backing in November.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get involved with the unfamiliar. Communicating with a newcomer may be somewhat difficult. Keep your guard up! Someone you once trusted may attempt to deceive you. A visitor brings you good luck.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone at a distance can have a magical effect on your life! Catch up on long-neglected correspondence. Talk over any financial problems with family. Use a diplomatic approach.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid straying too far off the beaten path. Keep in touch with old friends and neighbors. Domestic harmony may wane today. Take steps to ensure no quarrels break out. Be a peacemaker.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A lively conversation with congenial people adds to the day's fun. A sermon gives you new hope. A long-distance connection hits the mark. Let family know how much you love and appreciate them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your long-term planning pays off. A message brings great delight. Curb a tendency to be overly possessive in your relationships. Do not seek to impose your opinions on others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel for pleasure today. Changing your Sunday routine helps chase away the blues. Heed the advice of those who have your best interests at heart. Group interaction will open new doors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Guard family secrets but be careful not to alienate strangers. A picnic brings widespread pleasure. Candid chats help bridge the generation gap. A love relationship can be rejuvenated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take stock of yourself. Old habits can be hard to break. Do not let minor setbacks upset you. Some news you receive later this afternoon will send your spirits soaring. Contact old friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A fast talker may have little to offer. Complete essential chores early in the day. Be more open to a younger person's suggestions. Comfort someone who has helped you in the past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use restraint and diplomacy when opposing ideas put forward by others. Postpone making final decisions until you can gather more facts and figures. Cover up if planning to spend time in the sun.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get in touch with old friends; they have wonderful advice to offer. A family or class reunion is long overdue. Share expenses. Someone at a distance can confirm a rumor.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Ceramics at art institute

ODESSA — "Oaxaca de Noche," an exhibition of paintings by Bill Wolf of San Francisco, is hanging in the Rodman Gallery of the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University.

Wolf is a narrative painter whose recent series of work takes as its inspiration his impressions of the city of Oaxaca, Mexico.

Also on display is the National Contemporary Ceramics Invitational Exhibition.

This exhibition includes ceramic works by Jean Behnke and Steve Reynolds, both of San Antonio; Joseph Bennion of Spring City, Utah; Karl Borgeson and Charlie Olson, both of Whitewater, Wis.; Terry Bumpass, Harris Deller of Carbondale, Ill.; John Harmon of Midland and David Heath of Odessa.

Other artists' represented are Elizabeth Hedley of Austin; Chuck Hindes and B.A. McBride, both of Iowa City, Iowa; Gail Russell and Tom Turner, both of Delaware, Ohio; Harvey Sadow of Jupiter, Fla.; and Sara Waters of Lubbock.

Ceramist Carol Bailey of Midland will give demonstrations at the potter's wheel in the gallery at the Art Institute from 2:30-3:30 p.m. Saturday, August 18, and Sunday, Aug. 19. The public is invited to view the artist's demonstrations.

No admission is charged at the Art Institute, 4909 E. University Blvd. For more information call 1-368-7222.

MOSC to be in Dallas

A special performance of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale in the McDermott Concert Hall at the new Morton H. Meyerson Symphony Center, Dallas, is set for Sunday, Sept. 30, at 2:30 p.m.

Tickets are available at all Rainbow Ticket Master outlets at a cost of $10 to $30. The performance is sponsored by NCNB.

Weekend festivities prior to the concert will include a gala reception at the Dallas Museum of Art featuring a unique presentation of jewels by Cartiers International known as the Panther Collection. At all events, the Midland-Odessa Symphony wine will be served, highlighting a partnership between West Texas business and the arts.

Special weekend travel packages from Midland-Odessa including airfare and hotel accommodations are available. For more information call the MOS, 563-5269.

Educator to be honored

Paul Baker will be honored with an arts festival in Waco — The Paul Baker Festival: Second Harvest.

Instead of focusing on Baker, internationally acclaimed stage director and educator, who lived challenging and changing the existing order, the celebration will showcase what happened to lives Baker touched and altered forever, according to a press release.

Once called "a genius" by actor Charles Laughton and termed in Time magazine as "one of the most effective college teachers in the country," Baker's innovations included stages surrounding audiences, swivel seats to allow audiences to turn toward the action, scenery extending into the foyer, horseshoe stages, different actors portraying different aspects of a single character and experimentation with costuming, set design and stage perspective.

The three-day event is scheduled for Aug. 10-12 and will include seminars including a drama workshop featuring Baker delivering his famous "Integration of Abilities;" exhibits of many Baker-influenced artists; and performances including "Sim...One Night with a Lady Undertaker from Texas" starring Mary Bozeman who as "Sim" has been compared to James Whitmore's Will Rogers and Hal Holbrook's Mark Twain.

Those needing more information may call Waco Civic Theater 817-776-1591.

MOSC receives grant

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale has received a grant from the Union Pacific Foundation for 1990 to help underwrite the presentation of in-school concerts reaching over 15,000 elementary school students.

"We are very proud to welcome Union Pacific to our core of supporters," said Don. Th. Jaeger, Music Director and Conductor for the Symphony. "Excellent music education for the school children in Midland, Odessa, and surrounding communities is one of the basic tenets of our organization. Appreciation of the arts is fundamental to a good educational system and we are pleased that the Union Pacific Foundation shares this philosophy."

The funds, in conjunction with support from the MISD and ECISD, will be used to provide a variety of concerts in the schools and familiarize students with symphonic music.

Programming is very carefully selected to kindle an interest and a love of music, and the concerts serve as an integral part of the highly praised band and orchestra programs in both the Midland and Odessa public schools.

Mexican art on display

AUSTIN — More than 50 works of art created by 17 young Mexican artists during the 1980s will open the 1990-91 exhibition season of the Archer M. Huntington Art Gallery at The University of Texas at Austin.

The show, titled "Through the Path of Echoes: Contemporary Art in Mexico," opens Aug. 31 on the first floor of the Art Building (San Jacinto Blvd. at East 23rd Street), where it will remain until Oct. 17, according to a recent news release.

Art classes scheduled

Places are available in Session II, August Museum School Kidz Classes at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

"Art-makers" will meet Monday through Friday from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. to introduce basic concepts used by art historians in learning about artists. Biographical material and paintings will complement the course material used. This class is for ages 10 through 12.

"The Real You" will meet Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to noon as a studio class. Students will do portraits, including self-portraits. Emphasis will be on proportion, balance and symmetry. Expressive elements will be introduced. This class also is for ages 10 through 12.

Fees are $50 for museum members and $65 for non-members. For information on registration call the museum, 683-2882.

Fair to be in September

ODESSA — The 15th annual Permian Basin Fair and Exposition is set for Sept. 12 through 16 at Ector County Coliseum.

Deadline for entries in the Creative Arts division is from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sept. 8 and 1 to 6 p.m. Sept. 9. The Creative Arts Division includes fine arts, decorative painting, ceramics, dolls, model railroads, crafts and hobbies, relics and antiques, collections, culinary, textiles and china painting.

Hours for the fair will be 3 to 10 p.m. Sept. 12 and 13, 10 a.m. to midnight Sept. 14 and 15 and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sept. 16.

For more information on the Creative Arts Division call 1-367-6111 or 1-368-0630.

TAOS, N.M. — The Taos Art Association's Annual Benefit Art Auction will take place at the Kachina Lodge Cabaret on Paseo del Pueblo Norte at 7 p.m. Friday.

The preview begins at 5:30 p.m.

"We will be offering the best in traditional, historical and contemporary art," says a release from the Taos Art Association. For a list of artists call Leah Sobol, 1-505-758-2052, ext. 2036.

On the evening following the auction, the TAA will honor the donating artists and collectors with an information by-invitation-only dinner.

Harlin Rhoades has been involved in magic for the past three years. He began this interest while working with the children of his church.

"There's no end once you start," Harlin said.

"Magic is limitless in its possibilities, so Harlin continues his act with churches, schools and private parties for children," said a release from the museum.

Those attending the 7:45 p.m. show, are asked to bring a blanket or lawn chairs.

The concert for Aug. 12 will be singer and songwriter Dick Bowden.

Dance workshop set

ODESSA — The Odessa College Blues Dance Team will conduct a workshop for prospective members from 7 to 9 p.m. Aug. 23-24 and 27-28 in the OC Sports Center, Room 211.

Participants will be taught two dances, a high kick and a novelty routine to be performed for their auditions. Sophomore team members and Pat Hodges, director, will select new team members Aug. 28 based on rhythm, flexibility and ability to learn and adapt to the group.

OC Blues Dance team books performances August through May. For more information call 1-335-6574.
