Coahoma ISD calls special meeting

The Coahoma Independent School board has scheduled a special meeting tonight, beginning at 7 p.m., to interview candidates for the position of high school principal.

The trustees will also consider action on hiring the new principal. Dennis Ward, former high school principal, resigned July 19 to take a position with the Crane Independent School District.

The meeting will be in the board room of the administration building.

Special meeting called by BSISD

Trustees for the Big Spring Independent School District have scheduled a special meeting tonight beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Action items include resignations and employments, the local sick leave policy and bids for basketball and swimming.

The board meeting will be followed by a budget workshop, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. No action will be taken during this workshop, and the sessions are expected to continue through Wednesday.

CAF to have open house

Those wishing to inspect the construction progress of the Confederate Air Force headquarters and the American Airpower Heritage Museum can do so at an upcoming "mixer" sponsored by the Odessa and Midland Chambers of Commerce.

The mixer will be at the AvStar Aviation Hanger at the Midland International Airport and is scheduled for August 15, from 5 to 7 p.m.

Cost is $5 per person and includes complimentary hors d'oeuvres, ice tea and soft drinks. Mixed drinks will be available at the cash bar.

Payment must be received by August 5. Include the $5 fee, name, address and phone number. Mail to the Midland Chamber of Commerce, August 15 CAF Mixer, P.O. Box 1890, Midland Texas, 79702.

Museum searching for memorabilia

The West of the Pecos Museum in Pecos is seeking memorabilia for an exhibit dedicated to the Pecos Army Air Force.

During World War II, airmen were trained at the Pecos Army Air Base, and any information or donations for the exhibit are needed to complete the two-year old search for information.

Of special interest is anything concerning "Pancho" Barnes, whose plane crashed into a touring car at the Pecos Airport on Aug. 22, 1929.

To donate items to the museum, contact the West of the Pecos Museum, 1-445-5076.

Bush expected to name panel to investigate Vietnam MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole says he expects President Bush to name a blue-ribbon panel to resolve the issue of Americans missing in Vietnam, rather than have a Senate committee investigate it.

"I think what we should do, and what I would like to see happen this week, is for the president to say, 'I'm going to have a presidential commission,'" Dole said in a television interview Sunday.

At a news conference for Kansas reporters Friday, a newsmen asked the GOP leader if he was suggesting to the president that he appoint such a commission.

"We discussed it on Tuesday this week at the White House," Dole said. "I think we will have some development in the next week."

"Congress is moving on a commission," he said. "My view is it would be better to have a presidential commission."

Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H., has called for a Senate investigation of whether Americans are still held prisoner in Southeast Asia. His move has attracted 41 cosponsors, about twice as many Republicans as Democrats.

Judy Smith, a White House spokeswoman, said she knew of no developments on the issue since a briefing Friday by national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, who said he is convinced no Americans missing from the Vietnam War are still alive.

The recent release of a grainy photograph purporting to show Americans still held captive in Indochina has renewed the debate on 2,274 Americans unaccounted for from the wars in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Kenneth Quinn, a deputy assistant secretary of state, traveled to Vietnam last week to investigate the photo.

The Pentagon said Thursday that the picture had passed through the hands of a "ring of Cambodia opportunists led by a well-known and admitted fabricator" of information about missing Americans. Scowcroft, asked whether he believed some missing Americans are still alive in Southeast Asia, said, "No, I do not."

Dole, appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said, "I don't know, and I don't think Brent Scowcroft knows."

"Let's raise this to the highest level to see if we can't address it," the Kansas senator said. "That might in effect help some of the families who are distressed."

In addition, Dole said, "We might be able to weed out some of these people who, I think, have got something pretty good going here. They indicate to families that they can find their sons or husbands. A lot of money is being spent."

In his meeting with Kansas reporters, Dole suggested, "Put somebody who really has great credibility as chairman of that commission; put people on the commission, maybe fresh faces, who aren't going to be looked upon as having some bias either way."

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Solomon said in Bangkok, Thailand, Sunday that the United States will not establish diplomatic ties with Vietnam until the issue of Americans missing there is resolved and a Cambodian peace accord is signed.

Solomon is to meet in Bangkok Tuesday with Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Le Mai.

Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of POW/MIA Families, called Scowcroft's remark "unfortunate" Saturday and said, "Now is the time for Hanoi to move rapidly to resolve this issue, and we urge them to do so."

Older women suffer in job force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Older workers have had time to develop skills and compile experience and seniority, but at least for women that doesn't necessarily translate into a better income.

"The influx of women into the labor force and the multitude of 'first women' in high-profile jobs have created a widespread perception that the nation is moving rapidly toward economic equality for women. Sadly, for employed midlife and older women, that perception is wrong," said Lou Glasse, president of the Older Women's League.

While the television image of the young female lawyer or corporate manager conveys power, "most of today's young women can expect to do the same low-paying work as their mothers and to suffer the same poverty in retirement," con-

Main Street Inc. has taken over the management of the restaurant and gift shop located in Railroad Plaza. The stores are being remodeled with a railroad theme and will be reopened soon.

Main Street Inc. to operate plaza stores

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

The downtown Railroad Plaza is being reorganized with name changes, new managers and a renovation of the restaurant, said Big Spring Main Street Inc. Coordinator Beverly Franklin.

The restaurant and gift shop located in railroad boxcars at 100 Main Street will now be managed by Main Street Inc. instead of private renters, Franklin said. Work is under way to reopen a new restaurant and shop by Aug. 15. The plaza has been open more than a year.

"I would say that Big Spring Main Street is going to utilize the area better than it has been used," she said. "We're going to use it the way it was intended to be used, as a traffic builder and to create jobs."

Seminar to study recycling measures

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

Area leaders with successful recycling centers will be featured at a seminar and workshop Tuesday night at the First Presbyterian Church.

Sponsored by the Howard County Coalition for the Environment, the seminar will help Big Spring community members learn the pitfalls and advantages of having a local recycling center, said Jeff Morris, facilitator for the workshop and the project leader of the church.

"I have been really pleased and surprised at the interest in the community for this. There's a lot of enthusiasm, and I feel we can really make this work," Morris said.

The workshop is the result of Morris' work with an interested group at his church and Linda Fraser, a member of Keep Texas Beautiful. Morris said two meetings between the groups developed the idea for the workshop.

He said he believes the community seems motivated to start a center after talking with local Parent and Teacher Associations, as well as schools and businesses.

"Our next step is to learn the facts — that's the reason for the workshop. The seminar is open to any and all people and organizations interested in recycling," Morris said.

Fraser, wife of Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, said she hopes Big Spring can develop a recycling program, and she's seen a large amount of interest in the idea locally.

"If we can just get people into the habit, it's not such a difficult thing to recycle. It's like wearing a seat belt — at first every one said 'what a hassle' — but now it's a daily routine type of thing," Fraser said.

She added she hopes to get recycling started in Big Spring because the governor's committee awards $60,000 for communities with a progressive attitude that works toward making their towns attractive.

"Now we don't even recycle Christmas trees. I was so excited to

Sharp wants travel money paid back

DALLAS (AP) — State Comptroller John Sharp says two members of the Texas High-Speed Rail Authority who have been "spending money like it was from Pooh Bear's honey tree" should repay thousands of dollars in travel costs.

Sharp made the remarks Sunday after The Dallas Morning News reported that Authority Chairman Charles Wyly Jr. of Dallas had been staying in expensive hotel suits while on state business and that rail authority board member Clive Rannels had billed taxpayers for flying his personal turboprop plane between his home in Houston and meetings in Austin.

Houston may lose chance to show off

HOUSTON (AP) — A waning interest among national television media in the 1992 Republican National Convention could cost Houston its chance to show off, observers say.

A study commissioned by the Greater Houston Convention and Visitors Bureau estimates Houston would get 296 minutes of coverage by the networks and cable stations, with "eight minutes of pan shots of Houston." That translates into $5.8 million worth of coverage if it had been bought as advertising.

But television networks' budgets were drained by costly coverage of the Persian Gulf War and networks have shown little interest in a gathering expected to nominate President Bush for a second term.

Morales: Society can help stop gangs

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales says society can keep youths from joining street gangs and becoming involved in crime by providing more jobs, recreational activities and drug counseling.

Morales delivered a sobering assessment of the state's gang violence problem during a speech Saturday at the annual convention of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce.

He said the "insidious spread of gang-related violence throughout our communities" is a major challenge facing Hispanics.

Morales said that while state leaders are concentrating on ways to fund more prison cells, they should also look into providing programs for today's youth.

Amnesty seekers smuggle families in SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Amnesty applicants are paying professionals to smuggle their families into the United States "in droves," a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization official says.

"If the family makes it past the border and the early checkpoints, they are pretty much home free," Vito Ramirez, a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service special agent with the Laredo Anti-Smuggling Unit said Sunday.

"They make their way through the country on fake documents, they are available everywhere, after that," Ramirez said.

Merger forms Transportation Department

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate approved a bill that would merge the current Department of Highways and Public Transportation and Department of Aviation into a new Texas Department of Transportation.

The bill was approved Sunday on a 24-6 vote. The legislation, which had been approved by the House, was returned to the House with amendments Sunday night, after 5½ hours of debate on 28 proposed changes.

The Motor Vehicle Commission and Texas Turnpike Authority also would be placed under the Department of Transportation, with the move of the Turnpike Authority subject to passage of a constitutional amendment.

Operations of the High-Speed Rail Authority, which is charged with constructing a high-speed train connecting the state's major cities, would be transferred to the Texas Railroad Commission on Sept. 1, 1995.

Royder said lawmakers are "guilty once again of pandering" to the highway department's "self-perpetuating needs to continue to spend taxpayer dollars to build new roads when they should have taken the opportunity to shift" the department's "responsibilities toward public transit and environmental protection."

Scott Royder of the Sierra Club's Lone Star Chapter said the bill made some improvements. But he said the Senate had caved in by accepting much of the House bill.

Royder said lawmakers are "guilty once again of pandering" to the highway department's "self-perpetuating needs to continue to spend taxpayer dollars to build new roads when they should have taken the opportunity to shift" the department's "responsibilities toward public transit and environmental protection."

Like so much other legislation in the 30-day special legislative session, which reached the halfway mark today, the transportation bill could end up in a House-Senate conference committee.

Senators, for example, on Sunday accepted a request by the House for a conference committee on a measure that would reorganize state health and human services agencies.

The Senate, with the House in adjournment, also approved a bill that sponsor Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, claimed would bring in $500 million a year in federal funds for Texas hospitals that serve a disproportionate share of patients on Medicaid.

The concept is to reward those hospitals and to provide an incentive to others to do more, so access to health care will be improved. Currently, 24 hospitals meet the criteria for the federal matching funds.

The proposal was sent to the House on a 30-0 vote.

Under the transportation bill, the three-member board overseeing the new department would be selected by the governor, which is the practice now for the state highway commission. The governor would designate the chairman but the board would appoint the executive director.

Senators added an amendment 17-13, that would require one of the three new commissioners to be chosen from a rural area. An amendment that would increase the commission from three to six members was rejected 34-7.

Galveston happy with alcohol ban on seawall

GALVESTON (AP) — City leaders and shop owners are elated by renewed enforcement of an alcohol ban along the Galveston seawall.

"Galveston always has been seen as a place to let your hair down and do what you want," says Mayor Barbara Crews. "We want people to enjoy and relax but there are limits to the kind of behavior that will be tolerated. We want people to know there are limits."

The 10-mile-long seawall, built after the 1900 hurricane to prevent future tidal surges from ravaging the island, has been at the center of one of Texas' most popular tourist destinations. More than a quarter million beachgoers can jam the resort island about 50 miles southeast of Houston on busy weekends.

The Galveston City Council passed the ordinance in 1988 banning alcohol on the seawall, but it wasn't until this summer that officials decided to enforce the ban beginning after the July Fourth weekend.

"The alcohol ban has been very positive so far," says police Capt.

Rick Boyle. "The feedback we're receiving from citizens and business has been very favorable."

"I have noticed a very big change," Mayor Crews agrees. "What I have seen are more families and individuals who seem to be really taking advantage of the seawall, strolling, riding bikes, running, walking and just enjoying the sights. It's just more pleasant."

"It's been a 100 percent improvement," says Carl Schutz, who's been running on the seawall several times a week for 20 years. "It's the best thing they've ever done. You don't get all the groups that sit around — and no bums. It was a despicable situation."

"At least it's a lot calmer than it used to be," adds Elizabeth Taylor, 21, who works at a seawall clothing store called Surf Styles. "You don't see as many people drinking. It had gotten pretty scary here. I had to call 911 a couple of times."

Charles Walker, who operates a bicycle rental and facepainting shop on the seawall, says the prohibition also has helped keep the boulevard and sidewalks clean.

GALVESTON — Since police enforcement of a ban on drinking of alcohol on Galveston's famed seawall along the Gulf of Mexico, officials and shop operators have seen an increase of families and individuals taking advantage of the seawall.

More people are strolling, riding bikes, running, walking and just enjoying the sights. It's just more pleasant according to Mayor Barbara Crews.

Department switching to tear gas

DeSOTO, Texas (AP) — Members of the DeSoto Police Department will soon begin using a less violent method of subduing suspects — a non-toxic tear gas.

DeSoto police Capt. J.D. Horvath said a growing number of cities are starting to use the chemical agent as an alternative to nightsticks, following highly publicized videotaped beatings by police during arrests in Los Angeles and Fort Worth.

"There are many situations where this will be useful," said Horvath, the department's director of planning. "When we go out on family fights, there's almost always a husband who says, 'You're not going to arrest me.'

"Instead of having to wrestle him with a baton, we can just irritate him and get the cuffs on without a problem," he said.

Horvath said initial reaction to use of the gas among officers has been good.

Horse racing booms in Texas, lags elsewhere

DALLAS (AP) — Texas is celebrating an apparent horse racing boom, while many tracks across the country appear to be facing financial ruin, experts say.

Weak attendance and slow betting has some of the industry's most familiar institutions, including race tracks and breeding farms, near collapse. Several new ventures never made it.

Meanwhile, groups of investors are fighting for rights to build Class 1 tracks in Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio, which rank among America's 10 largest cities.

"The way things are going now, I wouldn't consider building a track anywhere in the country, unless it was Texas," says real estate developer Jerry Carroll of Florence, Ky., an investor in a proposed San Antonio-area track.

After years of struggling for reasons, track operators still haven't reached a consensus on why racing fails while other sports in their towns prosper.

Some explanations for the slide are:

- Competition from other gambling, legal and illegal.
- An aging fan base combined with a failure to attract new generations.
- A revision in tax laws to restrict writeoffs for horse owners.
- High pari-mutuel takeouts.

The Birmingham Turf Club in Alabama and Iowa's Prairie Meadows are in bankruptcy. Minnesota's Canterbury Downs and The Woodlands in Kansas City are struggling against a discouraging bottom line.

Hialeah Park, one of the country's historic and beautiful tracks, closed its gates in 1989. Promoters hope to reopen it soon, but the 62-year-old, scenic, Longacres track near Seattle is in its final year. Longacres cannot produce the income to compete with other uses of the expensive real estate on which it sits.

A rare exception to the widespread failure is the $100 million Remington Park in Oklahoma City.

Breeding farms also are suffering. The famed Calumet Farms in Lexington, Ky., has filed for bankruptcy and many other farms in Kentucky are up for sale.

The consulting firm of Christiansen-Cummings

Associates Inc. blames the decline on rival gambling options.

"Twenty-five years ago, horse racing was about the only legal game in town in almost every jurisdiction," Will Cummings told The Dallas Morning News in Sunday's editions.

"Now you've got lotteries, which have proven to be a serious competition. And then there's the expansion of casino gambling within Nevada and into New Jersey and the cheaper air fares that have made it more accessible."

Betting on races at Atlantic City dropped by one-third when the city's casinos opened.

With various forms of legal gambling on the increase around the United States, experts say horse racing's share of the wagering action will probably continue to fade.

But there's still hope in Texas.

"Texas is going to have first-class racing and quality horses, as long as the Legislature doesn't see government getting involved with gambling," Drew says.

Preacher defends himself against newspaper article

RICHARDSON (AP) — A prominent Baptist preacher whose rag-to-riches rise was contradicted in a newspaper article stood before an enthusiastic congregation Sunday to rebut news accounts of his life.

Darrell Gilyard, 29, who often said he grew up homeless under a bridge, actually was reared in a comfortable Florida home, The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story Sunday.

Gilyard used an emotional, 50-minute sermon Sunday to attack the article, calling it "the most devious and sinister story I have ever read in my life." He said the ordeal had been a "witch hunt."

He was interrupted several times by cheers and applause by the estimated 125 Grace Church congregants who attended the service, held in a hotel convention room.

Gilyard became one of the nation's most-sought after black Baptist evangelists after frequent appearances on Rev. Jerry Falwell's nationally televised "Old-Time Gospel Hour."

But, recent charges of sexual misconduct with female members of his congregation began a fall from grace highlighted in previous media accounts. Gilyard questioned the accuracy of Sunday's article, which disputed the preacher's account of poverty and homelessness.

"I read this story and I was crushed; crushed because they have taken half-truths, half-facts and innuendos and put them together in such a way that I have to stand before you this morning and ask, 'Who is trying to destroy me and why?'"

"Is it the people for whose ministries I have raised millions of dollars? Is it the pastors who envy or resent the fact that hundreds were saved every time God has used me to minister in their churches? Is it the legalistic Baptists who fear that the great multi-racial experiment is working?"

"Who is trying to destroy me?" The News questioned Gilyard's repeated claims that he was forced to sleep under a bridge from the age of 13 on.

Gilyard conceded Sunday that he may have exaggerated stories of his homeless life, but added that he had at times been forced to sleep under a bridge.

Barbara Davis, the 65-year-old Palatka, Fla. woman who said she reared Gilyard from the age of 5 until he was 19, told The News that she was "embarrassed" when she saw Gilyard's life story on "The Darrell Gilyard Miracle Story" on Falwell's show in January.

She told The News that Gilyard had two reasons to invent a homeless background — to save wayward Christians and turn a profit.

Gilyard was taken in by Ms. Davis' sister, Mary Eliza James, after his migrant worker parents abandoned him as a baby. When Gilyard was 5, Ms. James died and her sister, whom he called "Auntie," assumed his care.

Ban on IQ testing being challenged

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Five years after black parents won a statewide ban on using IQ tests to assess their learning-disabled children, a second group of minority parents is suing to bring the tests back.

The original litigants say the tests are culturally biased and resulted in huge numbers of black children being misclassified as retarded.

The new plaintiffs, backed by the conservative Landmark Legal Foundation of Kansas City, Mo., say the black-only ban is discriminatory and denies black parents the option of having their children tested.

The new case was sparked when Mary Amaya was told her mixed-race son could be tested if she re-registered him as Hispanic, rather than black, said Landmark lawyer Peter Hutchison.

Earlier this month, some parents won a preliminary ruling allowing them to arrange testing for their children. The lawsuit has not yet gone to trial.

Education Department lawyer Barry Solotar said state officials are considering how to respond to the July 15 ruling. One option would be to ban tests for all races, which would knock the props from the discrimination claim.

The case is being followed closely by national activists, who considered the California ruling a landmark decision.

Critics admit IRS improving ethics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years after embarrassing allegations of misconduct and abuse of power by several of its managers, the Internal Revenue Service is getting good marks for improving its ethical climate.

"Substantial progress has been made," says Rep. Douglas Barnard, D-Ga., whose House Government Operations subcommittee has been probing the IRS for three years.

Even the National Coalition of IRS Whistleblowers, a Church of Scientology offshoot that dogs the agency's every move, offers a grudging commendation for positive strides to clean up the problem.

Nevertheless, IRS Commissioner Fred T. Goldberg Jr. told Barnard's panel last week, "we still have a long way to go — and in many respects our job will never be finished."

The subcommittee in July 1989 investigated seven cases of alleged wrongdoing by some senior managers, a designation covering 1,500 people each making more than about $60,000 a year. The allegations involved activities of the IRS Criminal Investigation Division, which investigates criminal violations of tax laws, and the Office of Inspection, which polices employee conduct.

Submarine to be used to check leak

NEAH BAY, Wash. (AP) — Oil from a sunken Japanese ship continued to wash ashore, killing scores of birds and threatening other wildlife today. Canada's Coast Guard said it would use a submarine to inspect and try to stem the leak.

An oil sheen and globs of oil mixed with kelp washed up on several beaches Sunday, a week after the fish-processing ship went down in international waters in a collision with a Chinese freighter.

More than 80 dead birds and 200 live, oiled-soaked birds had been found, authorities said Sunday.

The slick, believed to be less than 100,000 gallons of bunker oil and diesel fuel, contaminated about a half-mile Shi Shi Beach (pronounced shy-shy) on Sunday in Olympic National Park.

Future undecided for 'Playhouse'

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — CBS says it is weighing whether to drop Saturday-morning reruns of "Pee-wee's Playhouse" after the star of the children's show was arrested on charges of indecent exposure in an adult movie theater.

Paul Reubens, the 38-year-old actor who became a star as the nerdy, bowtied Pee-wee Herman, was arrested Friday after an undercover officer saw him masturbate, sheriff's officers said. He was freed on $219 bail.

The Emmy-winning "Pee-wee's Playhouse" was canceled in April, but reruns are scheduled through August, said Ann Morfogen, CBS vice president of media relations. She said the network would decide today whether to drop the reruns.

Americans welcome to bring dollars into Cuba

HAVANA (AP) — Now it's Yanqui come here.

Cuba is welcoming visitors who bring dollars from the country that has been its nemesis for more than three decades.

It needs the money, now that Soviet aid is drying up and Moscow's former allies in eastern Europe demand payment for their goods in hard currency.

Americans who get around the U.S. travel ban will be among the 10,000 visitors expected for the Pan American Games, which begin this week.

Those who want to visit the communist island 90 miles from Florida can do so easily by traveling via third countries like Canada, Mexico or Jamaica.

No figures are available, but Cubans say relatively few Americans visit the island. An estimated 340,000 foreigners came to Cuba in 1990, most of them from Canada and Europe.

Diana Nairn of Marazul Charters in New York said Americans exempt from the travel ban will be among more than 2,000 people her company sends to the games Aug. 2-18, including the U.S. baseball team and journalists.

She said her agency "won't touch" Americans covered by the ban, "but they'll find a way to go anyway."

Under the Trading with the Enemy Act, only American journalists, professional scholars, Cuban-Americans visiting immediate family and fully sponsored guests may spend money in Cuba. It is part of a trade embargo imposed 30 years ago when Washington broke relations with Fidel Castro's government.

"If Americans are going to Cuba through a third country, they're going there illegally," said Robert Levine, a U.S. Treasury Department spokesman.

He said anyone prosecuted under the act could face maximum penalties of 12 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Levine says no Americans have been prosecuted for visiting Cuba through a third country, but a Texan recently was sentenced to 90 days in federal prison and fined $5,000 for organizing a fishing trip to Cuba.

Nairn said the government may get in touch with Americans planning to visit Cuba if their travel plans become known.

Federal officials questioned several medical students in one of her travel groups, and some of their parents, about their reasons for going there, she said. As students examining Cuba's health care system, they qualified for the exemption and were allowed to go.

All an American needs to enter are a tourist card and a passport, which Cuban officials won't stamp if asked not to.

The travel ban appears an effective deterrent.

Israel seems likely to attend talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — In another sign Israel will accept the U.S. peace initiative, Secretary of State James A. Baker III is expected to return to the region "in the next few days," Foreign Minister David Levy said today.

Levy made the remarks to reporters before he flew to Cairo seeking Egyptian help in setting up the Middle East peace conference proposed by Baker. His three-day visit would be the first by an Israeli foreign minister since 1989.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Sunday that Israel has agreed in principle to attend.

While Israel has not formally replied to U.S. inquiries about attending a conference, Levy reiterated that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government intends to respond favorably.

"Israel has not delayed or postponed, (it) says yes," Levy said at Ben-Gurion International Airport before he flew to Cairo. "We must not now raise obstacles, difficulties or conditions, because we must not lose this opportunity."

"We, perhaps in another few days will be able to discuss all the issues, in a good atmosphere and in understandings which have been reached, with Mr. Baker himself," Levy said.

He did not specify when Baker was expected.

Brokerages reveal lists of clients

TOKYO (AP) — After weeks of speculation and amid rising national anger, Japan's top brokerages today reluctantly revealed the names of 200 top clients they said were compensated for huge stock losses in a major financial scandal.

Dozens of world-famous corporations — including Toyota Motor Corp., Nissan Motor Co. and Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. — appeared on the lists along with individuals and funds for police and for public employees.

Bowing to growing political pressure to name investors they had favored with compensation, the so-called Big Four brokerages — Nomura, Daiwa, Nikko and Yamaichi — said they made paybacks worth $930 million to about 200 clients.

The brokerages said some of the compensated clients had requested reimbursements for investment losses, but none had been guaranteed such paybacks. The paybacks were not illegal if not promised in advance, but they have outraged individual investors who had to swallow their investment losses.

The announcements came hours after Japan's leading economic newspaper, the Nihon Keizai Shimbun, published the first comprehensive list of compensated clients.

Emphasis turning to Middle East

MOSCOW (AP) — As President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev prepare to seal a nuclear arms reduction deal at their fourth summit, their emphasis already is turning to a new search for mutual economic prosperity and peace in the Middle East.

Bush and Gorbachev will sign a treaty Wednesday to cut long-range U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals — a symbolic gesture compared with the hard Soviet reforms that lie ahead.

Bush departed for the Soviet capital today after a relaxing weekend that included a golfing session Sunday near Washington with professional tennis player Andre Agassi and film star Kevin Costner. Gorbachev remained out of the public eye over the weekend following a punishing week of domestic politics.

Kenyans searching for reasons

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — When 19 girls were killed and 71 raped by male colleagues in a high school rampage, Kenya's education minister declared that the rioting students had been incited by anti-government activists.

But few people believed him. And many recognized a distressing pattern.

The Kenya Medical Association noted many similar, less violent, incidents recently and decried that "a catastrophe that has befallen our land."

The association and others blamed this month's rampage on factors ranging from the lowly place of women in Africa's male-dominated society to student stress and lack of proper role models.

And in apportioning blame, they did not spare politicians like Education Minister Peter Oloo Aringo.

One thing is clear: Kenya's 644,461 students are hardly a happy lot.

Students have boycotted classes and meals, held strikes and demonstrations and burned school buildings.

Since June, disturbances have led the government to close nine high schools, two universities and five colleges.

Student complaints, the medical association noted, followed a similar pattern: shortages of teachers and equipment, badly prepared or monotonous meals, fee increases, dilapidated buildings, misuse of school property by teachers and embezzlement of funds by administrators.

The July 13 melee at St. Kizito Mixed Secondary School was unique only in its unprecedented violence.

Senators raising their pay

It comes as no great surprise that U.S. senators voted to raise their salaries $23,200 a year, bringing the total pay to $125,100 annually plus perks.

After all, the House had already raised salaries of its members by a like amount two years ago, the raises taking effect this past January. Why shouldn't a senator make as much as a representative?

If there is a bright side to the pay raise, it is that the salary increase is coupled with a renunciation of honoraria, usually fees for speeches and appearances. In the past, special interest groups have paid influential senators and congressmen excessive amounts of money for showing up at a function. In some cases the fees have appeared to be payoffs for past and future favors.

Compared to the six-figure, or higher, salaries for athletes, entertainers and many corporate executives, $125,000 for a U.S. senator may not be out of line. But consumer advocate Ralph Nader argues $125,000 is 4½ times the average family income of Americans and six times the average pay of workers in this country. Another source reports that of the 100 members of the U.S. Senate, 26 already are millionaires.

Our problem with the raise is three-fold:

First, we don't like the way they handled it — late at night when there was as little attention by the news media and public as possible.

Second, the timing is poor with the country in a recession.

Third, we don't like the idea of big pay raises for Congress while the nation is carrying such a huge budget deficit — a dilemma for which Congress is mostly responsible.

Enterprise-Journal, McComb, Miss.

Promises are lip-service

Thumbs down to state and federal governments for continuing what amounts to be nothing more than lip-service on the rising costs in our health care system.

Political leaders responsible for making decisions that could lead to cutting the alarming costs and doing something about the acute financial strain on consumers offer nothing more than political lingo that turns to broken promises after elections are held.

Some 33 million people under the age of 65, roughly 16 percent of the population, are uninsured today.

This compares to 12 percent of the population that was uninsured in 1978.

The public is not ready for another campaign blitz in the 1992 elections where candidates from both major political parties claim to have the answer to the deplorable problem.

The public is tired of broken promises.

It is time that something gets done.

Soviets enter Western life

This (Group of Seven) summit will perhaps go down in history as the one where the Soviet Union began its return to "our common history" as (French President) Francois Mitterrand put it, or more prosaically, its entrance to the Western world.

It is a long voyage strewn with obstacles, but its direction was charted... with no ambiguity.

The club of industrialized countries gave, in London, a dazzling demonstration of its role as "global director."

With the birth of this G-7 plus one, which will no doubt be repeated, this tendency will only be reinforced.

Liberation, Paris

Mideast important subject

The Middle East has imposed its presence on a great scale at the (Group of Seven) summit, and the space the Middle East occupied in the political statement is an indication of its importance.

The frank principles the communique comprised opens wide the door of hope that the new world order would be just and would respect human rights, and would not be a meeting for distributing loot and regions of power.

Under the circumstances, all Arabs expected from the Group of Seven to practice more pressure on the Israeli government for the implementation of the United Nations resolutions on the Middle East problem.

It would be in the whole globe's interest to end the chronic tension hotbed in the Middle East in order to have the aspired peace and stability.

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Truth, hokum in Senate chamber

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — On the evening of July 17, Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., was talking about his bill to raise the pay of senators. "This is a great issue to demagogue," he said, and he went on to prove it.

Byrd's amendment to the legislative appropriation bill will give senators a raise of $23,200 a year, boosting their salaries to $125,100. This will put them on a par with members of the House, who gave themselves the same raise a year ago. In exchange for the pay hike, senators will give up "honoraria" that now may amount to $23,000 annually. Fair enough.

Byrd was doing fine until he got toward the end of his oration. Then he began to lament the consequences if the raise were disapproved. He feared for a slow erosion "of the quality of the men and the women who offer their talents for service in the Senate."

Warning to his theme, Byrd feared that without the raise, "there will not be any welders that come out of the shipyards of Baltimore and stand in this place." A salary of only $101,900 would not attract a meatcutter or garbage boy to seek a seat in the Senate. No produce salesmen or even small-business men would come here to give of their talents.

Ours should be a citizens' government, said the senator. His voice trembled with emotion. He invoked the sons of coal miners. "The farm boy out there working on the plains in the frosty morning and late at night should be encouraged, as well as the rich man's son, to aspire to a Senate seat."

Byrd asked God's blessings upon the Senate's millionaires. He did not envy them at all. He wished he were among them. "But let us open the doors to a few poor folks who may aspire to run for the U.S. Senate as well."

In the press gallery, hardened reporters openly wept. Senators must have been equally moved. A little before 10 o'clock they voted 53-45 to take the raise.

Viewed in principle, a congressional salary of $125,100 a year, plus fringe benefits and plush perquisites, is defensible. It is not too much. The responsibility is heavy. The work is demanding. At the new salary level, members will have a little less in purchasing power than they had in 1969. In a $2.3 billion bill for legislative expenses, this $2.3 million disappears beyond the decimal points. Getting rid of these "odious honoraria," as Byrd termed them, is net gain.

The only rational criticism that may be offered, of course, is that members of Congress, as a body, haven't earned a raise and don't deserve it. On their record of performance, members are an irresponsible and incompetent lot. State legislatures across the country are demonstrating the political courage to bring their budgets into balance. No such courage is visible here. Our federal budget will not be balanced until the next century, if ever. President Bush bears a part of the blame, but the bulk of it lies right here on Capitol Hill. Maybe the garbage boys could do better.

Along with the hokum, Byrd's remarks contained much that was the very essence of truth and candor. In the past, he acknowledged, he had been one of many senators who had accepted speaking fees from special interests. The practice is legal, he said. Senators have to report the fees. "But not everything that is legal is necessarily honorable."

There is nothing honorable about honoraria. It is simply a way for special interests to gain access to senators and, in doing so, the special interests hope — to influence senators. "The perception that members are beholden to the special interests is reinforced by the system... The senator who receives the honoraria may, indeed, not be influenced thereby, but the perception is to the contrary and the damage is done, and it is done to the institution."

Not a senator rose to deny it. Under the system that now will be abolished, senators could pick up $2,000 for merely having breakfast with a special interest group and answering a few questions. This was not outright bribery, but it was the next thing to it. The speaking fees were directly personal. They were subtly different from the campaign contributions that come from political action committees.

The Senate vote produced a pip-squeak eruption from Ralph Nader, the people's most obnoxious friend, but this was to be expected. A few senators who voted for the raise may be in political trouble next year. Most voters, I hope, will conclude that on balance, the raise justifies not a scream, but a sigh.

Some things worth more than money

By BETTY JOHANSEN
Copy Editor

In his book "The Kingdom Strikes Back," Nazarene missionary to Haiti Howard Culbertson tells how Haitians have come to view the hypodermic needle as the "ultimate medical weapon." It didn't take charlatans long to capitalize on this perception. Promising to cure any disease, they give injections over and over with the same needle. Instead of curing disease, they spread AIDS, hepatitis and other infections.

It's easy for us Americans with our sophisticated medical knowledge to feel a little smug at such naivete, yet our society is rife with con artists. I recall one of the television news magazines doing an expose of the tabloid industry. The narrator explained how everything printed has to be attributable to a source, and statements (truth or falsehood is irrelevant) are bought. If no one will say what the tabloid wants to hear, someone from the files will be credited with giving the information. Several people (former sources) testified to receiving checks in the mail and not knowing what they were for.

Probably all of your favorite stars have expressed outrage at some tabloid for publishing vicious lies about them. We may wonder why the victims don't sue for libel, but our laws are so skewed in favor of the press (for good reason) that a lawsuit could make matters worse. And for some unfathomable reason the America public continues to support the sensational papers, buying them by the millions.

Along those same lines we find writers like Kitty Kelly. I should probably be ashamed of myself for the delight I felt last week when I learned George Carpozi Jr. had written an unauthorized biography of Kelly. Whereas I hoped fervently people would have the good sense not to support Kelly by buying her ridiculous tale about Nancy Reagan, I find myself hoping Carpozi's book will be a best seller. Kelly earned everything she gets.

And then there's the mail. Beggers regularly fill our mailboxes with pleas for money so they can pursue some urgent cause. Many of the causes sound truly worthwhile, but the TV news magazines have exposed the abuses in some of those schemes and I don't trust any of them now.

If you ask me

Yet thousands of people must be rewarding them for their efforts or how can they afford to keep on?

It's hard to be surprised at sellouts any more when we're utterly surrounded by them. But my stomach sank into my toes — you know, the way you feel on a roller coaster or upon hearing dreadful news — when I learned that the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce had decided to support the sale of alcohol in areas of Comanche Trail Park.

It's not as if we were discussing a return to Prohibition. The question is whether we're going to allow America's foremost social poison to pollute situations that might otherwise be happy family outings. It's beyond me to understand why, when the destructive effects of alcohol are so well publicized, we even have to discuss this issue.

I know of a highly principled cotton farmer for whom the sale of alcohol was not an issue. He is dead now, but two weekends ago on the way to a family reunion I passed his little farm south of Lubbock. There's a neat white house on the property, surrounded by a green ocean of young cotton plants.

That farmer was not a rich man. In fact, as I recall the story, he moved his family to Lubbock from the Waco area in the 1920s so his children could attend Texas Tech, because he couldn't afford to pay their room and board. With hard work he was able not only to educate his children, but also to buy his own quarter-section farm south of the city.

Later, when Lubbock County legalized the sale of liquor, the farmer was approached by a company wanting to buy some of his land for a liquor store — just a corner or a strip along the highway. The property was close to town on U.S. 87. It was a good location and the offer was lucrative. It must have been a temptation, but he said "No" in no uncertain terms.

"If I can keep one Texas Tech boy from losing his life from the use of alcohol, I'll be justified," he reasoned. That unknown boy's life was worth more to him than money.

Today "The Strip," a row of liquor stores, stretches out on both sides of that little cotton farm. It wasn't always easy to live in such a setting, but the farmer never sold out. Neither did his widow, although she lived there alone for fourteen years. Now the couple's children have leased the land to farmers who tend it, and it reigns as a small oasis of sanity in the midst of the booze industry.

I can tell you a similar story that's closer to home. In a 1985 edition of Scenes magazine, the story is told of a young, Big Spring couple who, in the 1950s, were hoping to own a bit of land and their own home. In 1959 a piece of property south of town known as The Baptist Encampment was put up for sale. The Baptists had decided to move their camp grounds to a more central location and probably needed the income from the sale to purchase the new land.

The young husband joined up with a friend to make a bid on the property. Although the highest bid was several thousand dollars higher than theirs, their bid was accepted. The reason? The highest bid was from a liquor company. And the Baptists decided to include in the contract that "... no liquor will ever be sold on this land."

They reasoned: What if some child who pledged his life to Jesus Christ on this property returned decades later and found a beer joint here? The idea was unthinkable.

The author of that story in Scenes was my Mother. Today I live on that land, which Mother referred to as "God's Sunshine Spot." Daddy and my brother Carl and his family have homes there too, and Johansen Nursery and Landscape Company operates there. Daddy's partner's half of the property went to a couple of homeowners and a veterinary clinic.

Today I'd like to salute the honorable gentleman from Lubbock whose farm still stands as a symbol of his integrity. And the Baptists who made it possible for my family and me to have homes. And all of you who refuse to sell out, even when the price is right.

Adoption speaks louder than words

DEAR ABBY: In Richland, Wash., men and women are carrying signs and parading small children in front of family-planning clinics in opposition to a woman's right to choose.

Meanwhile, a newborn baby boy was dumped in an apartment complex trash bin and left to die. He was found, hospitalized and survived. The baby, his 17-year-old mother and another son, a 1 1/2-year-old, have been placed in separate King County foster-care families.

Abby, please print the letter signed "Hates Hypocrites" again. In light of the above-mentioned incident — which is occurring all over the nation — that letter needs to be seen again. — BARBARA HARROW, RICHLAND, WASH.

DEAR BARBARA: Indeed I will. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: This is a message to those men and women who try to prevent women from entering abortion clinics and carry big signs that say, "They Kill Babies Here!" Have you signed up to adopt a child? If not, why not? Is it because you don't want one, can't afford one, or don't have the time, patience or desire to raise a child?

What if a woman who was about to enter a family-planning clinic saw your sign, then decided not to have an abortion but chose instead to give her baby to you? Would you accept it? What if the mother belonged to a minority group — or was addicted to drugs, or tested positive for AIDS?

Why are you spending your time carrying a sign? Why aren't you volunteering to baby-sit a child born to a single mother so she can work? Why haven't you opened your door to a pregnant teen-ager whose parents have kicked her out when she took your advice and decided not to have an abortion?

As for the taxpayers who resent paying for abortions, who do you think pays for foster care, welfare, social workers and juvenile delinquency? The taxpayers.

Let's talk about something money can't buy: love. Have you ever visited a home for abused and unwanted children? Have you ever been to juvenile hall and seen the children who have committed crimes because they were born to mothers who didn't want them?

I'm not thrilled about abortion, but I don't think anyone has the right to tell others not to have one unless he or she has done the things

I have mentioned above.

So, to those carrying those signs and trying to prevent women from entering family planning clinics, heed my message: If you must be against abortion, don't be a hypocrite — make your time and energy count. — HATES HYPOCRITES IN SANTA ANA, CALIF.

DEAR HATES: I couldn't have said it better. Or as well.

DEAR ABBY: To the Caucasian couple with the adopted Korean child: I, too, have been confronted by many unthinking strangers with rude comments. My most memorable occurred while grocery shopping with my blonde-haired, blue-eyed biological son and my dark-haired, dark-complexioned adopted daughter.

A woman approached me and asked, "Are these your children?" "Yes," I answered.

"Different fathers?" she asked. "Yes, and different mothers, too," I replied.

"Oh," she said, looking confused. "With people sleeping around so much these days, I just thought —" I didn't let her finish. I just walked away and left her with her big mouth hanging open. — C.M. IN APPLE VALLEY, MINN.

Blessed with special talent

By CHRIS TORCHIA
WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — From birth, Tony DeBlois, blind and autistic, didn't seem to have much of a chance.

Then, when he reached age 2, his mother heard him at play on a tiny toy xylophone, perfectly mimicking some of the childhood tunes he had been hearing.

Now, he is being paid to play piano, and is being considered for admission to the prestigious Berklee College of Music in Boston. He also dabbles in the organ, guitar, violin, banjo, recorder, harmonica and handbells.

DeBlois, 17, suffers from savant syndrome, in which a retarded person has a highly developed talent in a specific area, such as painting or mathematics.

Tony, believed to be one of only a few musical savants in the nation, is almost at the level of a professional pianist, said Steven Lipman, Berklee's director of admissions.

"He's able to mimic and embellish anything that he hears," said Lipman. "If he doesn't get it exactly right the first time, he gets it right the second time."

Watch Tony DeBlois at the piano, and you see a teen-ager with a trendy tail of hair whose fingers sweep the keys through ragtime, classical and Broadway tunes.

On a recent evening at his home, Tony played guitar and sang Elvis Presley's "Love Me Tender" and John Lennon's "Imagine," then launched into Scott Joplin's ragtime tunes and Broadway melodies on the piano.

Tony DeBlois, a blind and autistic 17-year-old, smiles at his home in Waltham, Mass., as he plays his guitar, just one of the many instruments he has mastered. Tony began playing melodies on a tiny xylophone at age 2, and now plays guitar, piano, banjo, harmonica and recorder, with hopes of attending the Berklee College of Music in Boston.

"I like to play the blues, the St. Louis Blues," said Tony, whose list of musical idols includes Dizzy Gillespie, Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong, Bach, Mozart and Beethoven, among others.

"He can just make up songs, he doesn't write anything down," said Tony's mother, Janice. "He can transpose songs and change them to other keys. He can play 'Silent Night' in a waltz, in a polka, in jazz."

Tony's "island of brilliance" is more creative than the skills of other musical savants who are limited to repeating tunes they hear, said Dr. Darold Treffert, author of "Extraordinary People," a book about savant syndrome.

"I had not seen until I came across Tony anyone who was involved in jazz," he said. "That's improvisation and that's another step beyond rote memory."

Tony, who is studying jazz piano at the Music School at Rivers in Weston, has earned $200 fees for performances at nursing homes and senior citizens centers, his mother said.

A real prince

Be a married mistress

By JULIE AICHER

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The best way to keep the "other woman" away from your man is to become the mistress in his life, says a New Mexico woman whose first husband was unfaithful.

In a day when romance often takes the back seat to children, careers and classes, Rose Smith of Albuquerque is telling women that if they ignore their mate, he's bound to stray or leave.

"We help the other woman sometimes without thinking about it," Smith says. "I try to make them understand why men cheat, and how easy it is for them to fulfill those needs so the other woman never gets her foot in the door."

Smith is the founder of Married Mistress Seminars and The Married Mistress Association. She says she formed the group about seven months ago after she became angered when she heard about a national support group for mistresses.

Albuquerque psychotherapist Jan Biefeld says estimates of how many married men cheat range from 27 percent to 67 percent. There is no firm figure, she says, because "the reporting system is so poor."

"If your goal is to be with him forever, doesn't it make sense for you to work toward that goal?" she says.

Busy women sometimes neglect their lover, "and figure, 'Oh, I'll take care of the romance later,'" she says.

"A lot of times they'll raise the kids for 18 years, and then they'll turn around to resume the romance, but he's already gone."

"You have to remember what came first," she says. "The relationship came first."

Some of Smith's suggestions include slipping a note in his lunch, having him accompany you to the store to pick out your lingerie, escaping alone together for the weekend or "just calling him up in the middle of the day to say, 'I love you.'"

"One lady was kind of irate over the phone, because I think she thought I was teaching mistresses how to take married men," Smith said. "So a lot of it is just getting the word out, and letting them know why a married mistress is."

A married mistress, Smith says, is all in the mind. It's a matter of assuming the attitude that mistresses have, instead of the attitude of a wife and caretaker.

Sometimes all it takes is for a woman to listen to her man's dreams or complaints without reminding him of his responsibilities, she says.

"A lot of times they just need someone to talk to — someone who's not going to criticize every word they say," she says.

A. According to Texas Trivia, the Texas coastline is 367 miles long.

Calendar

TODAY

• The City of Big Spring Clean Team will be working in district 2 through Friday. If you have articles to be picked up, call the city at 263-8311.

• There will be gospel singing at 7 p.m. at the Kentwood Center of Lynn Drive. Everyone welcome. For more information call 393-5709.

TUESDAY

• United Blood Services will have a blood drive sponsored by the City of Big Spring from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Fire Station No. 3 on 11th and Birdwell.

• Spring Tabernacle Church, 1209 Wright Street, has free milk and bread to give to the area needy from 10 a.m. to noon.

• A.M.A.C. (Adults Molested As Children) will meet at 5:15 p.m. in the Saint Mary's Episcopal Church library, 1001 Goliad. Anyone interested must call first — Dr. Federman or Dawn Pearson at 267-8216 ext. 287.

• The Parenting Support Group will meet at 7 p.m. at the Howard County Mental Health Center. This group provides support and parent education to assist parents in coping effectively with the management of their children and teenagers. Anyone interested must call first to schedule an orientation interview — John McGuffey, M.A., L.P.C., or Dawn Garrett, M.A., at 267-8216 ext. 287.

• There will be a Desert Storm Support Group meeting at 7 p.m. in the Scenic Mountain Medical Center cafeteria.

• The Big Spring Bass club will have a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. the Old Settlers' Pavilion in Comanche Trail Park. For more information call Joyce at 263-0062.

• There will be a Divorce Support Group meeting from 6-7 p.m. at First United Methodist Church, room 101. Anyone welcome. Child care is available. Use the back entrance at Gregg Street parking lot. For more information call 267-6394.

• Co-Dependents Anonymous will meet at 7 p.m. at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, fourth floor.

• Spring Tabernacle Church, 1209 Wright Street, has free milk and bread to give to the area needy from 10 a.m. to noon.

• There will be a Texas Public Employees Association meeting at noon at La Posada. For more information call Mrs. Spence at 267-8216 ext. 411 or call Beverly Miller at 267-8216 ext. 521.

Astronomers announce discovery of unusual planet

NEW YORK (AP) — Astronomers said Thursday they had detected the first known planet outside the solar system, a celestial body 20,000 to 30,000 light-years from Earth and two to three times its diameter.

Scientists said the discovery provides a puzzling challenge to the current understanding of how some stars are formed.

The discovery is reported in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature by Andrew Lyne, Matthew Bailes and Setnam Shemar of the University of Manchester's Nuffield Radio Astronomy Laboratories in Jodrell Bank, England.

Others have reported apparent detections of planets outside the solar system, but none of the reports is widely accepted.

Princeton University physics professor Joseph Taylor said he found the new report persuasive. "They've got something there that is significant, no question about it," he said.

The planet lies in the direction of the constellation Sagittarius, probably not very far from the center of the Milky Way galaxy, Lyne said. It is some 20,000 to 30,000 light-years from Earth. A light-year is about 5.9 trillion miles.

The researchers wrote that the planet's mass is about 10 times that of Earth, but Lyne said a better guess is 12 times. The planet is probably two to three times the diameter of Earth, depending on its makeup, he said.

It orbits a star about as closely as Venus orbits the sun, researchers calculated. Venus is the second planet from the sun, Earth the third.

Lyne said it is "most unlikely" anything lives on the planet.

What's puzzling about the planet is that it orbits a very dense neutron star; that's surprising because of the way neutron stars are thought to form, Lyne said.

Standard theory says neutron stars form when a massive star collapses onto itself, creating a huge supernova explosion that blows away much of its mass.

If the newly detected planet was in orbit before the explosion, the star's sudden mass loss would probably destroy the planet's gravitational leash and send it sailing off into space. Or at least it would probably push the planet into a more elliptical orbit than the nearly circular path it apparently takes, scientists said.

"It may be that this collapse isn't (always) as violent, and perhaps the presence of this planet suggests that," Lyne said.

The planet "is going to require some degree of wild speculation to explain," said Harvard University astronomy professor Ramesh Narayan.

The apparent planet was detected not by optical telescope but by analyzing the pattern of radio waves from the neutron star.

Scientists noticed a slight variation, about a hundredth of a second, in the pulse of the waves in a cycle that repeated itself about every six months.

The researchers concluded that the star was being pulled to and fro by the gravitational tug of an unseen planet that orbits it about once every six months.

David Black, director of the Lunar and Planetary Institute in Houston, said that if the planet truly exists, he considers it unlikely that it was there before the neutron star formed.

But if the study reveals some gradual process of mass loss by the star, "the new discovery will have led to a revolution in this branch of astrophysics," Black wrote in a Nature editorial.

Another possibility is that the planet formed during or after the birth of the neutron star. It might have grown from a gradual clumping together of matter from material surrounding the star. Such clumping resembles the way the solar system was thought to form, Black said.

That possibility has its own drawbacks but deserves study, commented planetary scientist Jonathan Lunine of the University of Arizona.

The overall study is "bizarre, and I'm not sure I believe it, but it's certainly very interesting," he said.

Crowd celebrates emancipation

MT HOLLY, Va. (AP) — With African drums, gospel music, speeches and prayers, a racially mixed crowd celebrated the 200th anniversary of the freeing of about 500 slaves by one of the nation's largest slaveholders.

More than 600 people stood in a field of clover Sunday to remember Robert Carter III.

On Aug. 1, 1791, Carter, who owned 16 plantations from Richmond to Maryland, freed his slaves in what is believed to have been the largest private emancipation in U.S. history. His act came 70 years before the Civil War.

"I have for some time past been convinced that to retain them in Slavery is contrary to the true principles of Religion and Justice," he wrote in the deed of manumission.

"It was the beginning of the end of a system that never should have been," said the Rev. T. Wright Morris of Shiloh Baptist Church in Burgess, one the event's organizers. "Two hundred years after this noble act, we still struggle."

John Barden, a Duke University graduate student writing his dissertation about Carter, said, "His deed shows that contrary to what was often said at the time, and on many occasions since, slaveholders did not have to be trapped by the insidious system of bonded labor."

"He did what he thought was right at the time," said Thomas Arnest, a Carter descendant. "He was acting on his faith. He didn't have to do it."

see the church take a great interest in this. So many people have told me they're interested and they have a true concern for the environment," Fraser said.

Organizers from Kerrville, Odessa and Lubbock will speak before the group at the beginning of the meeting, and the second hour will be devoted to answering questions and organizing the Big Spring center.

"We may have to start with a volunteer program with periodic collection spots, but after we generate income we'll be able to buy permanent collection containers."

"We want a broad breadth and our intent is to be a non-profit center. If we do generate income, we'll reinvest in the system," Morris said.

Aluminum cans are currently collected at a center in Big Spring, and Morris said the aluminum is the most cost effective material for recycling. Paper and glass have minimal value and most centers collect aluminum to offset the cost of collecting the other materials, Morris said.

"Cans and plastic generate an income, but glass and newspaper have zero value," he said.

The workshop begins at 7 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall of the church, located at Runnels and Eighth streets.

"At the end of the program we'll poll all those who attended to gauge an interest in continuing to develop our own recycling program this fall following the beginning of the school year," Morris said.

Police beat

Arson is suspected in a fire at the Big Spring Cable Company, according to police reports.

On Sunday, a person or persons are believed to have placed burning materials through the night-deposit door at the business in the 2000 block of South Birdwell Lane.

"Somebody just basically tried to burn the building down," said Big Spring Cable manager Larson Lloyd.

Big Spring Cable Company has been the center of some controversy in the past weeks because of their decision to remove MTV from their selection of channels.

"We've received some threats in the past month, but none related to this (the fire)," said Lloyd.

Damage in the fire was confined to the night-deposit door and some carpeting, according to police reports.

Although no suspects have been identified in the case, both the police department and the city arson investigator are continuing the investigation, said Big Spring Fire Marshall Burr Lee Settles.

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following additional incidents:

• A Big Spring woman reported being assaulted by a family member in the 2500 block of Hunter.

• A Big Spring man reported $5,200 in cash stolen from his home in the 800 block of West 16th Street.

• A suspect escaped on foot after a police officer stopped a stolen vehicle in the 100 block of Airbase Road.

• A 64-year-old Big Spring man was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

• Four minor traffic accidents were reported in various parts of the city.

• The windshield of a vehicle was reported damaged in the 3600 block of Parkway.

• A plate-glass door was reported broken and a pair of men's boots stolen in the 200 block of Runnels.

• Two cartons of cigarettes, valued at $34.62 were reported stolen from a business at the corner of Owens and Third streets.

• The windshield of a vehicle, valued at $400, was reported damaged at the corner of Birdwell Lane and FM 700.

• A 21-year-old Forsan man was arrested for failure to appear before a judge.

• A 26-year-old Big Spring man was arrested for evading arrest.

• A Big Spring man reported receiving threats of violence in the 2900 block of Virginia.

• Two tires valued at $100 were reported damaged in the 2200 block of Runnels.

• A Big Spring woman reported being assaulted by someone known to her in the 1500 block of Young Street.

• A bicycle, valued at $150, was reported stolen in the 2800 block of Clanton.

• A broken window and stolen items totaling $170 were reported at a business in the 300 block of Runnels.

• A license plate was reported stolen from a vehicle in the 2600 block of Larry Drive.

Group reports serious infringements on rights

HONG KONG (AP) — Out of 16,000 criminal cases filed last year in China's largest city of Shanghai, just 30 people were acquitted and fewer than half the defendants were afforded counsel, an Australian human rights delegation says.

"This gives you an idea of the problems the Chinese people face," said David Connolly, a member of the first human rights delegation ever allowed into China. "They've got a long way to go."

The nine-member team of Australian politicians and China experts painted a grim picture of human rights two years after the military crackdown that crushed a mass pro-democracy movement in Beijing.

In their 13-day journey to Beijing, Shanghai, Chengdu and Lhasa, the capital of the troubled province of Tibet, the delegates said, they were basically spoon-fed the central government's line.

Kevin Garratt, an official with Australian Department of Immigration who is fluent in Tibetan, described the Himalayan province as "in danger of losing its culture" because of China's crackdown on its independence movement.

Alice Tay, a law professor at the University of Sydney, said China's legal system remained "Stalinist." She noted that under Chinese procedure, rights enshrined in China's constitution cannot be cited in day-to-day court cases, effectively negating them.

The delegates, meeting with reporters in Hong Kong on Sunday, complained of being followed by Chinese security agents, denied access to political prisoners and stymied in attempts to engage Chinese citizens in conversations.

Still, delegation leader Sen. Chris Schacht said he felt China was "bubbling with debate."

"If I was a senior, aging Chinese leader, I'd be pretty scared," he said.

follow the railroad theme."

The restaurant will be a cafe, possibly serving such foods as hamburgers, and will probably cater to special events such as birthday parties and weddings, she said. "At this moment we're still settling in on a menu."

Main Street Inc., which decided at a board meeting last week to manage the plaza, is still searching for a new name for the gift shop as well as a manager, Franklin said. The shop will probably include crafts from Texas and local artists.

The previous shop, called the Handmaiden, was opened last year by a renter from Big Spring and closed a few months ago, Franklin said.

The shop and the restaurant will create three jobs to start, Franklin said. "I know we'll build traffic back here."

Main Street Inc. also decided to create a mobile railroad display that will feature artifacts and will be located on Interstate 20, Franklin said. The idea, she said, is to draw traffic off the interstate while the Railroad Plaza will draw it off of U.S. 87.

"Maybe it'll be the catalyst we're looking for," she said.

Women

cluded a recent league study.

Outmoded stereotypes continue to consign many women to low-paying "women's jobs" such as secretaries, sales clerks, waitresses, nurses, teachers and librarians, the analysis reported.

Among full-time workers, for example, women 45 to 54 were paid an average of $20,466 in 1989, compared with $34,684 for men. In the 55 to 64 age group, women made $18,727 and men $32,476.

The group found that earnings are relatively low for both young men and women as they begin their work lives. Men's median incomes climb steadily until age 55 and then begin to decline, the analysis found.

"Women also experience an increase in earnings from youth to early midlife. However, women's earnings peak when they reach age 44 and begin declining at age 45," the report said.

A major factor is union representation, the study reported, noting that women of all ages are less likely than men to belong to a union, with the figure falling to just 10 percent of working women at age 65.

But segregation of women into lower-paying jobs is the prime culprit, the report concluded, and the problem is even worse for older women.

The report found that, in 1990, 58 percent of working women were clustered in sales, clerical and service jobs, while 62.5 percent of women 55 and older were in those occupations.

Gains made by women in professional and managerial jobs have occurred largely in the so-called women's occupations, the report added.

The survey found that women shown on television are primarily in their 20s and 30s. When people 60 and over appear on programs men outnumber women by 20 to 1, the analysis said.

A decade-long analysis of 3,500 magazine advertisements found only 30 women over age 55 shown.

And when older women appear in ads they are frequently portrayed as out of touch and not especially competent, the study added. It cited as an example an ad quoting a young woman as saying: "The difference between my mother and me? She still thinks software is a nightgown."

Employers still make decisions based on such stereotypes, the report concludes, fearing that older workers will be slow, wedded to the past and unwilling to learn.

And while older women struggle to overcome both such stereotypes and years of past discrimination, they also face the problems of being expected to serve as caregivers in an aging population.

Researchers estimate that 12 million people provide care to elderly relatives, and three-quarters of those providers are women, with an average age of 57.

Many of them work outside the home and have to adjust their employment, sometimes working only part time, to meet both duties.

As the population ages, the report concludes, "more midlife and older women will be forced to make accommodations to care for elderly parents and spouses, and more of them will therefore be poor."

Calling all rubber reptiles

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

Two holes from home, they were tied and on the lead. And at that moment, anyone who followed the game before woods were metal probably started wondering what would come slithering out of Lee Trevino's golf bag this time.

Nothing against Chi Chi Rodriguez, but the wrong Spanish-speaking, club-wielding comedian slipped into the U.S. Senior Open playoff alongside Jack Nicklaus.

Someone should have stopped the tournament Sunday when Trevino made his only birdie of Sunday's round at No. 16 to climb into a tie for the lead. They should have paid Al Geiberger and Chi Chi off before the former made bogey and the latter made birdie at No. 18 and sent everybody else on their merry way but Jack and Lee.

That's not to say that Rodriguez won't be his usual entertaining self today or that he won't play his colorful, smartly tailored slacks off. Or that he can't win.

But the likelihood is that by the time television joins the match in progress, it will, for all intents and purposes, already be over. Jack will be firmly in command and the rest of us will be wishing that he had been paired with someone who is both funny AND mean. Someone like Trevino.

Twenty years ago, when both were playing on what the always-roundish Trevino now calls fondly the "flat-bellied" circuit, he and Nicklaus finished tied after the regulation 72 holes for the U.S. Open championship at Merion. On the first tee prior to their Monday playoff, Trevino was joking with the crowd when he suddenly reached into his bag, pulled out a very realistic-looking rubber snake and flung it at Nicklaus' feet.

To this day, Trevino is still explaining to anyone who will listen that the snake was around because he'd bought his daughter a souvenir at the zoo — not because he needed a cheap prop to break up the gallery and break down Nicklaus' legendary concentration. Nonetheless, after that harmless little joke, he went out in earnest and put the bite on the greatest player the world has ever known, shooting 68 to Jack's 71 to capture the second of his six major titles.

Beating Jack Nicklaus in a Grand Slam event back then was only slightly more difficult than putting toothpaste back in the tube after the kids have finished decorating the sink with the stuff.

Recalling those days, J.C. Snead, who started Sunday tied with Nicklaus and a stroke behind Trevino and finished well back in the pack, cast the dilemma this way: "When you go head to head against Nicklaus, he knows he's going to beat you, you know he's going to beat you, and he knows you know he's going to beat you."

Yet, of Trevino's six major titles, Jack has been the bridesmaid on four of those occasions, including twice — the 1971 Open at Merion and the 1974 PGA at Tanglewood — when the two comprised the last group on the last day.

Now, granted, there is a big distinction between those majors won in the course of a career among all competitors and those won among those of the same age group. But in one regard, the trend continues; only last year, with Trevino looking down from the comfort of the television tower, Nicklaus missed a 3-foot par putt at the 17th to hand his snake-charming nemesis the U.S. Senior Open.

Of course, it has been anything but a one-way street; in winning his 20 majors, Nicklaus vanquished Trevino and too many other contenders and pretenders to list here. But Perfect!

Expos' Martinez blanks LA for 15th-ever perfect game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What does it take to no-hit the Los Angeles Dodgers? Mark Gardner's nine-inning effort didn't work, but Dennis Martinez' perfect game did.

Less than 48 hours after Gardner lost his no-hitter in the 10th inning and then lost the game, Martinez became the 15th player in major league history to pitch a perfect game, beating the Dodgers 2-0 Sunday.

Martinez, a 36-year-old right-hander, lacked an explanation for his overpowering performance, in which he kept the Dodgers guessing with fastballs, curveballs and sinkers.

"I don't know what was special," he said. "I just think every game I pitch my best effort. It just happened. It may never happen again in my life."

As he watched Martinez become the first Expo ever to pitch a perfect game, Gardner was a nervous wreck.

"I was shaking and my hands were wet," said Gardner, who on Friday night didn't allow a hit until the 10th and wound up the loser, 1-0.

Martinez also was involved in a scoreless game until the seventh, when the Expos scratched out two runs. He became the first to pitch a perfect game since Cincinnati's

Tom Browning did it against Los Angeles on Sept. 16, 1988, at Riverfront Stadium.

Martinez' gem was the second perfect game at Dodger Stadium, following Sandy Koufax's 1-0 defeat of Chicago 1-0 on Sept. 9, 1965.

As Martinez took the mound in the bottom of the ninth, the crowd got behind him.

Mike Scioscia hit a fly ball to medium left field to lead off the bottom of the ninth. Pinch-hitter Stan Javier then struck out, bringing the capacity crowd to its feet.

Pinch-hitter Chris Gwynn ended the game by hitting a deep fly to center fielder Marquis Grissom for the final out.

"It was scary," Martinez (11-6) said of Gwynn's shot. "I thought he hit it very well. But then it wasn't going very far."

"I hit it well, but I knew it wasn't enough to get out," said Gwynn, who also was the last out in Browning's perfect game. "He had command of all his pitches, just like Gardner had the other night."

After Gwynn made it a perfect day for Montreal, the Expos charged to the mound and swarmed Martinez as the fans roared their congratulations.

Returning to the dugout, Martinez sat by himself and sobbed.

Streaking Giants win eighth straight

National League

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The San Francisco Giants are quietly making their move.

San Francisco is still 10 games behind first-place Los Angeles in the National League West, even though they have won eight straight games. So no one on the Giants is claiming the team is in the race.

Dennis Martinez helped the Giants a little on Sunday when he pitched a perfect game at Dodger Stadium as Montreal beat Los Angeles 2-0.

At Candlestick Park, Matt Williams and Kevin Mitchell each homered off Tommy Greene (7-4) as the Giants sent Philadelphia to its seventh straight loss, 2-1.

Bud Black (8-8) went 6 2-3 innings, allowing one run and four hits as the Giants swept the three-game series. Jeff Brantley worked the final 2 1-3 innings for his ninth save.

Elsewhere in the NL it was St. Louis 3, Cincinnati 2; Chicago 6, Atlanta 2; Houston 9, Pittsburgh 7; and San Diego 2, New York 0.

Cardinals 3, Reds 2
Craig Wilson's pinch double drove in the tying and go-ahead runs in the seventh inning as St. Louis handed visiting Cincinnati its 15th loss in 18 games. The Cardinals have won eight of their last 11.

Jose DeLeon (5-8) won his second consecutive decision, while Randy HOUSTON — Houston Astros' Andujar Cedeno (17) leaps over Pittsburgh's Jay Bell after he was forced out at second base in the fourth inning Sunday. The Astros won, 9-7.

Myers (4-8) lost his second straight start since being moved into the rotation. Myers held the Cardinals hitless for 5 1-3 innings.

Cubs 6, Braves 2
Andre Dawson homered twice and drove in four runs to lead Chicago and Mike Bielecki past Atlanta at Wrigley Field.

Dawson, who was hit in the right elbow and had to leave Saturday's game in the first inning, hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning and added a solo shot in the eighth, his 18th of the season. It was Dawson's 34th multi-homer game and his first since May 15, 1990, at Atlanta. Charlie Leibrandt (9-9) took the loss.

Astros 9, Pirates 7
Casey Candaele homered and scored four runs and Ryan Bowen won for the first time in the major leagues as Houston beat visiting Pittsburgh to snap a seven-game losing streak.

The Astros scored five runs in the third off Zane Smith.

Padres 2, Mets 0
Fred McGriff drove in two runs with a two-out double in the sixth inning and Andy Benes (5-10) gave up five hits in eight innings as San Diego beat New York at Jack Murphy Stadium. Frank Viola fell to 11-7.

It's beginning to seem like old times again for Oakland

American League

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

You didn't expect the Oakland Athletics to just go away, did you?

The A's have survived injuries to Rickey Henderson, Dave Stewart, Carney Lansford, Walt Weiss and Mike Moore. They have weathered a 14-game winning streak by Texas and a 15-game skid by Minnesota. Dennis Eckersley even proved he was human, and the A's handled that, too.

Sunday was just like old times. Jose Canseco hit a three-run homer, Henderson hit a solo shot and Eckersley got the save in a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles, completing a three-game sweep.

The three-time defending American League champions have won six of their last seven to pull within four games of the first-place Minnesota Twins in the AL West.

"I think everybody in the league has been waiting for us to put a streak together," first baseman Mark McGwire said. "We've got a good one going now... five out of six on the road isn't too shabby."

In other games Sunday, it was California 8, New York 4; Seattle 6, Cleveland 5; Milwaukee 11, Minnesota 2; Kansas City 10, Toronto 4; Chicago 5, Boston 2; and Texas 10, Detroit 4.

Henderson's homer in the eighth snapped a 3-3 tie and made a winner of reliever Rick Honeycutt (2-2), who pitched out of a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the seventh. Eckersley, who has blown five saves this year — including three to the Cleveland Indians — made quick work of the Orioles in the ninth.

"That was vintage Oakland of the past," Canseco said. "Eck comes in with a one-run lead and shuts them down. We haven't really had that in the past, but it happened today."

The A's trailed 3-0 in the sixth when Rickey Henderson and Dave

Pair ties at Open

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — It could be golf. Or showtime. Or both.

Jack Nicklaus and Chi Chi Rodriguez will settle the U.S. Senior Open championship in an 18-hole playoff at historic Oakland Hills today.

Nicklaus is big and blond, strong and long. He's the best golfer to ever play the game. The 132-pound Rodriguez grew up hitting tin cans with a guava-tree stick in Puerto Rico.

But they finished 72 holes tied at 2-over-par on the 6,718-yard layout. Al Geiberger, victim of a heart-breaking bogey on the 18th hole, finished one shot back at 283. Lee Trevino, closing with a 4-over 74, tied with Jim Dent at 284.

Rodriguez, winner of four senior tournaments already this year, promised the playoff would be exciting, no matter who wins.

"To me golf is show business," Rodriguez said. "They come to be entertained, see a good show well staged. I give them a show. Jack gives them good golf."

But the crowd-pleasing Chi Chi, who earned a spot in the playoff with a dramatic birdie on the final hole Sunday, made it clear his familiar sword-fighting routine has a serious side.

"If the big bear goes to sleep, the little mouse from Puerto Rico will slip right in," he said.

This will be the fourth playoff in the history of the U.S. Senior Open, which was first played in 1980. Arnold Palmer won at this course in 1981, Billy Casper won in 1983 and Gary Player won in 1988.

Only USGA events go to a full-round playoff to break ties.

It is the first playoff in a senior event for Nicklaus, who is 13-10 in regular playoffs. Rodriguez, who was 3-1 in playoffs on the regular PGA Tour, is 1-4 in senior playoffs.

"You never know how a playoff is going to go," said Nicklaus, who has won four of the eight senior tournaments he has entered since turning 50 last year. "Sometimes you get great golf. Sometimes you don't. I think we'll play differently than we did today. We're going to be playing a medal-play match."

With Trevino effectively out of the picture after a bogey on the par-3 No. 17, Nicklaus and Rodriguez both needed clutch birdies down the stretch to catch Geiberger.

Nicklaus got his birdie at the 185-yard No. 17 by hitting a high 5-iron that dropped softly five feet from the pin. Rodriguez got his with a snap-hook 6-iron at No. 18 that rolled to a stop two feet from the cup.

"My caddy wanted me to hit 5-iron, but I told him I'd hit a

Henderson singled off Ben McDonald (4-5) and Canseco, who had been hit by a pitch earlier, followed with his 27th homer.

"My main concern there was getting the first fastball he threw and capitalizing on it," he said. "The first one was up for a ball and I figured he'd go outside with the next one. He did."

The Orioles led 3-0 after three innings, but the A's still had plenty of time to come back, a fact not lost on McGwire.

"We've got two months left, and a lot can happen in two months," McGwire said. "Everyone knows that."

Rangers 10, Tigers 6
Nolan Ryan struck out 10 and pitched two-hit ball, before leaving with a sore back after 5 1-3 innings as Texas beat Detroit.

Ryan (7-5) recorded career win No. 309 while Frank Tanana fell to 7-7. It was the first meeting between Ryan and Tanana, who had been teammates with the California Angels in the mid-70s. The two have a combined 45 years of major league experience between them.

The fourth-place Rangers pulled within 4½ games of division leader Minnesota in the AL West.

The 44-year-old Ryan, bothered by tightness in the back of his right shoulder, pulled himself out of the Instruction will include grip on racket to the mental aspects of the game. It also includes more than 30 hours of court time, including instruction, match play, video taping and use of ball machine.

For more information call Big Spring High School tennis coach Todd Spears at 267-1099.

Spain captures Federation Cup

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Arantxa Sanchez Vicario defeated Mary Joe Fernandez in singles and then teamed with Conchita Martinez for a doubles victory as Spain defeated the United States 2-1 to capture its first Federation Cup title Sunday.

The U.S. took a 1-0 lead when Jennifer Capriati defeated Martinez 4-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-1 in the opening singles match. Sanchez Vicario beat Fernandez 6-3, 6-4 to even the match. Sanchez Vicario and Martinez then defeated Gigi Fernandez and Zina Garrison 3-6, 6-1, 6-1 in the doubles match.

game in the top of the sixth inning after he struck out Scott Eyingson. He spent 15 days on the disabled list earlier in the season with the same ailment.

Angels 8, Yankees 4
Luis Sojo drove in three runs and Max Venable homered as visiting California beat New York.

Jim Abbott (9-7) gave up eight hits in eight-plus innings before being relieved by Bryan Harvey after the Yankees scored twice in the ninth.

Venable led off the game with his second homer of the season, but the Yankees scored twice in their half on Don Mattingly's single and Mel Hall's double.

The Angels scored three runs in the second off rookie Scott Kamieniecki (4-3) on Sojo's two-run double and Dick Schofield's RBI single. During the inning, a Morgana impersonator ran onto the field and gave Kamieniecki a hug.

Sojo capped a three-run seventh with an RBI single.

Mariners 6, Indians 5
Pinch-hitter Alonzo Powell drove in the go-ahead run with a seventh-inning infield single as visiting Seattle improved to 12-5 since the All-Star break.

Pete O'Brien had three RBIs as Seattle took the season series from Cleveland 10-2, matching its best one-season win total against one team.

Randy Johnson (9-7) got the win, allowing five runs and six hits in six innings. Bill Swift got the final two outs for his ninth save.

Reliever Mike York (1-3) took the loss. Tracy Jones doubled with one out in the seventh and moved to third on Jay Buhner's single. Powell beat out a bouncer to third, scoring Jones.

O'Brien had a two-run single in the first, but the Indians took a 3-2 lead in the second on Alex Cole's two-run single and a sacrifice fly by Carlos Martinez.

Albert Belle hit his 17th homer for Cleveland.

Brewers 11, Twins 2
Paul Molitor and Darryl Hamilton each had five hits as Milwaukee tied a club record with 22 hits, pounding Jack Morris and Minnesota at the Metrodome.

Candy Maldonado and Franklin Stubbs each homered for the Brewers. Morris, who had won 10 of his last 11 decisions, allowed eight runs on nine hits in 2-2-3 innings.

It was the first career five-hit game for Hamilton and the third for Molitor, who also had a record five hits in Game 1 of the 1982 World Series.

Jaime Navarro (8-8) broke a personal four-game losing streak in pitching his sixth complete game of the season.

Molitor and Hamilton opened the game with singles. Molitor scored on a groundout by B.J. Surhoff and Hamilton scored on Stubbs' single.

In the second, Molitor and Hamilton each singled again. Molitor again scored on a groundout by Surhoff and Maldonado followed with his fourth homer, making it 5-0.

The Brewers scored three more in the third.

Spaniard ends LeMond's reign as Tour champ

PARIS (AP) — Miguel Indurain, the newest Tour de France champion, will start the defense his title next year in his home territory as the 1992 Tour starts at San Sebastian in the Basque region of Spain.

Wherever it starts, three-time champion Greg LeMond will also be there and likely will be among the favorites. This year he lost his title and for the first time in his career didn't even earn a berth on the podium as a top-three finisher.

"Next year I'll skip the classics. My objective is always to win the Tour de France," LeMond said. "As long as I'm racing, I'm going to come every time to the Tour with the intention of winning it."

Indurain won the title on Sunday by three minutes over Gianni Bugno of Italy, with LeMond 13 minutes behind.

Flushed by victory, Indurain also promised to be back next year. Now Indurain can be taken seriously instead of being seen as just a teammate of Pedro Delgado, the Spaniard who won the Tour de France in 1988.

Indurain improved from a 10th-place finish last year.

"Last year I was there to fight for a place. But it's not the same thing when you fight to keep the 10th position than when you've won the race," Indurain said.

Fighting for the title was a new feeling for Indurain, as was the also-ran battle fought by LeMond.

"There was nothing in my mind," he said. "I had no words to say, I could only cry. I didn't know how to express myself. I didn't know how to respond to this kind of game."

During the game, he sat alone in the dugout, speaking only briefly to catcher Ron Hassey. Hassey had been in such a position before, as Cleveland Indian Len Barker's catcher the night he tossed a perfect game against Toronto on May 15, 1981.

Control of his pitches has been Martinez' strength this season, Hassey said.

"He's been this way all year," the catcher said. "There's been only one or two games when he hasn't had the kind of stuff he had today."

Hassey became the first catcher in history to throw two perfect games. "We had a game plan, and we went out and did it," he said. "You give the credit to Dennis. He's the guy who had to throw the pitches. I'm just the guy who's catching them and helping him."

Unlike Gardner, Martinez got the offensive help he needed from his teammates. In the seventh, the Expos turned two fielding errors by shortstop Alfredo Griffin into a pair of unearned runs off Dodgers starter Mike Morgan (9-6), who was perfect through five innings.

The runs ended a 38-inning scoreless streak by Dodger pitchers.

With his fourth shutout, Martinez tied the Dodgers' Ramon Martinez for the major league lead and lowered his ERA to 2.05. The Montreal right-hander struck out five for his 22nd shutout in 401 career starts.

It was the seventh no-hitter in Expos' history and the first perfect game. It was the fifth nine-inning

Hartford winner

CROMWELL, Conn. — Billy Ray Brown of Missouri City, Texas chips to the 18th green during the final round of the Canon-Greater Hartford Open golf tournament Sunday. Brown won the tournament on the first hole of a three-way sudden death playoff.

"I've learned that when you push yourself to win it's much easier than when you push yourself to lose," LeMond said.

LeMond began pushing himself in front in this Tour right at the beginning and took a lead of two minutes over Indurain after the first time trial.

"Everybody in the pack was not going to give me a gift in the Tour de France," LeMond said. "Most of the people were racing against me. It's a natural thing. I won the Tour three times. I took a great lead in the first stage. I was the man to beat."

The American held his advantage through the first week until the transfer from Nantes in Brittany to Pau just outside of the Pyrenees.

However, the Pyrenees inspired Indurain more than LeMond and the Spaniard knew exactly when to take advantage of the situation.

"LeMond started very fast. Our team had to work and we took the best climbers. So that is where it was possible we could take over any advantage," Indurain said.

In the Pyrenees, Indurain came in second in the stage to Val Louron. LeMond was slowed by a viral infection that put LeMond seven minutes behind Indurain.

Once he recuperated, LeMond said it was easier to ride, and his results showed it with victories in the 16th, 19th and 22nd stages.

balance, and that's what baseball is all about," Dodgers center fielder Brett Butler said.

Martinez' achievement may have quashed recent rumors of a trade.

"I have no control over it," said Martinez, who does have a clause in his contract that allows him to veto any proposed deal. "I'm happy with the Expos."

Names in the news

Taylor to wed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor says she'll make an eighth try at marriage in October — this time with a construction worker she met while both were undergoing drug treatment. Michael Jackson will give the bride away.

"I always said I would get married one more time, and with God's blessings, this is it, forever," Taylor, 59, said in a statement Friday.

The groom is Larry Fortensky, 39, who met Taylor at the Betty Ford Clinic's drug abuse center in Rancho Mirage. Fortensky, who is also divorced, has been Taylor's boyfriend for four years, her statement said.

The couple will marry Oct. 5 in a private ceremony at Jackson's estate in the Santa Ynez Valley, about 100 miles north of Los Angeles.

Taylor, who won Academy Awards for "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and "Butterfield 8," has been married seven times, twice to the late actor Richard Burton.

Walters to stay with ABC network

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Walters, ABC-TV's million-dollar news star, has signed a contract to remain with the network, an ABC executive said.

A B C spokeswoman Teri Everett said Friday the network never publicly discusses personnel matters. But an executive, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Walters confirmed the signing.

The 59-year-old Walters, formerly a mainstay of NBC's "Today" show, joined ABC in 1976 to do newscasts and celebrity interview specials.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

TUESDAY, JULY 30, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Several trips are featured. Your popularity reaches new heights in October. Important doors open to you during the winter holidays.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Arnold Schwarzenegger, songwriter Paul Anka, director Peter Bogdanovich, actor Ken Olin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Those with artistic talent enjoy special success now. You find inspiration almost everywhere you look! Your powers of persuasion convince even the skeptical. Get together with close friends tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accomplish as much as you can early in the day. You may feel tired and somewhat listless later on. An effervescent attitude will reduce tensions at work. Get to bed early tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be a stickler for doing things the way "they've always been done." Open your eyes and you may see some advantage to relaxing the rules now. Be patient with indecisive people.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Domestic issues and family matters are in the spotlight. Discuss your plans, mutual responsibilities and joint obligations. Burn the midnight oil if work has begun to mount. Your dedication will be richly rewarded.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are full of vitality and helpful suggestions today. Go get 'em! Take an innovative idea straight to the top. Higher-ups will applaud your initiative. Romance heats up. Protect your good name.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your personal magnetism makes you very persuasive today and tomorrow. You make an excellent impression on someone who can further your aims. Mate or business partner shares some good news.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try to be more aware of other people's feelings. Someone who feels especially vulnerable now could take your lighthearted approach the wrong way. Share a personal secret only with your loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):

You may feel offended by someone's lack of principles. Try not to take this individual's actions personally. A longtime romance is a splendid thing. Be careful not to jeopardize your chances for happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Exercise tact and consideration when dealing with an authority figure. A supervisor may be in a belligerent mood just now. Keeping a low profile could be your best bet. Pursue romance after work hours.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid discussing controversial topics even though certain you are right. A tactful reply will avert a quarrel. Watch your step in romance. You don't know someone as well as you think you do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your work routine may not offer much in the way of excitement. Let cranky co-workers let off steam. Streamlining office procedures will increase productivity. Put your suggestions in writing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A complicated financial deal demands a realistic assessment. Only you can decide your top priority now. Get better organized and keep your schedule somewhat flexible. A quiet evening at home relaxes you.
