Scientists at Los Alamos National Laboratory have found that physical stimulates, such as a calm forest pool or a fire's flames, provide a handy tool in predicting human behavior.

Mourners pray for those who died

Preschooler only member of immediate family to survive tornado, related stories — 2A

SARAGOSA, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of mourners, some of them weeping, stood beside the rubble of a shattered church in this tornado-flattened town Sunday, praying for the 29 who died in the storm and those who must go on.

"While our hearts are heavy, God is still with us," Bishop Raymond Pena of the El Paso diocese told the survivors of Friday's twister.

About 500 people, including residents, friends and throngs of reporters, attended the afternoon Mass. Many shielded themselves from the hot sun with umbrellas and a few women collapsed, overcome either by heat or emotion.

"Non-believers now will question our faith in God. But for us, the words that Jesus speaks to us in the gospel today, 'I will not abandon you,' is a sign that God hears our prayers," said Pena, standing on a flat-bed truck.

The service was delivered in both Spanish and English. A mariachi band played hymns.

On either side of the bishop stood statues of Jesus and Joseph, which somehow survived the twister with only slight damage.

"The fact that the statue of the Lord remained intact was of great comfort to the people," Pena said before the service Sunday.

"The first thing they said to me was 'Look, our altar is still there, the statues are still there.' I looked at the statues' survival as a sign of God's love," he said.

The service was held at the site of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church, which was blown apart along with virtually every other building in the remote West Texas community of Mexican-American farm workers. Among the victims were six children.

Sunday morning, front-end loaders and dump trucks were scooping up the remains of the town of about 350 residents. Volunteers and relatives of victims picked through the debris, looking for cash and valuables.

"These families have been an inspiration to me," Pena said. "They are people of great faith, very trustful of God's love as they go through this crisis."

Under clearing skies, utility crews erected new telephone and electric poles to restore service, even though only a few houses were still standing in the area.

He said the pastor at Fort Davis reported collecting $400 at Saturday's Mass. There are 480,000 Catholics in the diocese, and all but two of the 29 who died were Catholic.

U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, who was at the site, said he has asked President Reagan for federal disaster aid. And U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said the Federal Emergency Management Agency was expected to send in a damage-assessment team.

Gov. Bill Clements expressed his sorrow Saturday and pledged all possible help the state can give to the town, about 190 miles east of El Paso.

Sunday morning, about 75 people attended a somber Mass in nearby Balmorhea.

"It says in the Bible the poor shall confound the rich, the wise. I think this is a very good example of God's work in the world," said the Rev. Ralph Barranger, who serves as priest for Saragosa and Balmorhea's Christ the King Church.

Balmorhea shelters survivors

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

BALMORHEA — Balmorhea, a small tourist town on a route to scenic mountain country, has turned into a Good Samaritan relief headquarters for survivors of Friday's fatal Saragosa tornado.

Shelters were set up at the Balmorhea High School, and next door at the First Baptist Church, the American Red Cross installed its operational headquarters.

Meanwhile, mourners at neighboring Saragosa had shed tears and said their goodbyes in seeking solace for the living and peace for the dead at Sunday's memorial service on the grounds of what was a Roman Catholic Church.

Graveside funeral services for the tornado's victims who lived in Saragosa will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Saragosa Cemetery. Afterward, rites will be held at the Balmorhea Cemetery for those who lived in Balmorhea. Two of the 29 victims will be taken to Mexico for burial, according to Pecos Funeral Home in Pecos. A wake will be held at 7:30 p.m. today at Balmorhea High School, where the victim's bodies are lying in state.

"We just finished a memorial service in the front yard where the Catholic Church used to be," said a worker, the wife of a Reeves County deputy sheriff.

"It's definitely a disaster," she said of the death and debris which lay in the tornado's wake. "The Red Cross and the Salvation Army have been here almost from the moment it happened," she said.

The tornado devastated this town about 8 p.m. Friday.

"It's pretty devastating," said the Rev. Don Jeffreys, interim pastor of the Balmorhea First Baptist Church, which organized a relief effort. The church's custodian was killed in the tornado.

On Friday night, about 50 people from Saragosa were sheltered in the Balmorhea gymnasium, and Saturday night, about two families were sheltered in Balmorhea, which is southwest of Pecos.

"Most of them are (now) staying with friends and relatives," said Glenn Standish, an American Red Cross volunteer from Lubbock. He was cooking meals, which would feed people there as well as in Saragosa, where the Reeves County Sheriff's Office set up a command post.

Dan Waggoner, director of disaster services for the Red Cross in Dallas, arrived at Saragosa-Balmorhea Friday night. At least 40 Red Cross staffers and volunteers will be at Saragosa and Balmorhea in providing needs for the survivors.

"We will stay here as long as it takes to meet everybody's needs," Waggoner said Sunday.

"Obviously, it's a pretty traumatic situation because of the lost of life and property. People are grieving."

The Red Cross has been inundated with food and clothing — far more than it needs for the Saragosa survivors.

"We don't need any commodities or any clothing or food," said Waggoner. "But we do need money."

"When it comes down to the bottom line, what buys houses is money."

Conscientious objector recalls earning medal

By MARC RICE

RISING FAWN, Ga. (AP) — Desmond T. Doss has told his story over and over, but people still want to hear how the conscientious objector's display of heroism in World War II earned him the Medal of Honor.

"From a human standpoint, I shouldn't be here to tell this story," said Doss, 67, who was severely wounded during the battle for Okinawa during World War II.

A Seventh-day Adventist, Doss refused to arm himself but served as an Army medic and received the nation's highest military award for risking his life to save his comrades.

"I wasn't trying to be a hero," Doss said. "I was thinking about it from this standpoint — in a house on fire and a mother has a child in that house, what prompts her to go in and get that child?

"Love," he said. "I loved my men, and they loved me. I don't consider myself a hero. I just couldn't give them up, just like a mother couldn't give up the child."

Doss was honored for repeated acts of bravery from April 29-May 21, 1945.

On April 29, Doss, a private, carried 75 wounded soldiers, one by one, through a fire-swept area to the edge of a 400-foot-high escarpment and lowered them on a rope-supported stretcher down the face of a cliff to friendly hands, according to his citation.

He exposed himself to heavy fire in order to rescue or treat five more men on May 2, the citation said.

On May 5, Doss braved enemy shelling to treat a wounded artillery officer. Later that day, he crawled to a wounded soldier who had fallen 25 feet from the enemy's position, rendered aid and carried the man 100 yards to safety while exposed to shooting.

During a May 21 night attack, while treating a number of wounded soldiers, Doss was seriously wounded in the legs by a grenade. He cared for his own injuries and waited five hours before others began carrying him to cover.

Seeing a more critically injured man, Doss crawled off his own stretcher and directed the medics to give their attention to the other man. While awaiting their return, he was struck again and suffered a compound fracture of the arm.

Doss, "with magnificent fortitude," bound a rifle stock to his shattered arm as a splint and crawled 300 yards to the aid station, the citation said.

"I couldn't have served with a better group of men than the men I worked with," Doss said. "They trusted me, I trusted them, and we just worked together as a team. And when I saw those men out there and their lives depended on me, I just couldn't let them go, even though I knew it could cost me my life."

"But I didn't feel like I was going to be killed," Doss said. "I just said, 'Lord, help me,' and I felt if I was going to be wounded, it would be worth it if I could save one more man."

Doss, who can laugh a little about it now, said of his multiple injuries and lengthy recovery, "I learned there is nowhere you can't put a bandage."

Doss received his medal in October 1945 from President Harry Truman, who had expressed disdain for conscientious objectors but later said in a letter to his wife, "The only one of 'em I ever came in contact with, whom I thought to be on the level, was the skinny little pharmacist's mate (Doss) to whom I gave the Congressional Medal of Honor out in the back yard of the White House."

Doss, who has been deaf for 11 years, and his wife, Dorothy, welcome visitors and are active in veterans' projects, such as a proposed museum in Chattanooga, Tenn., to honor recipients of the Medal of Honor.

Family doesn't know how retired bishop got AIDS

HOUSTON (AP) — A retired Methodist bishop who died of AIDS last week was the highest-ranking church leader known to die of the disease, a Methodist spokesman said, while family members say they may never determine how Finis A. Crutchfield Jr. contracted the virus.

"There has been no homosexual or extramarital sexual contact," said the bishop's son, the Rev. Charles Crutchfield, who is pastor of First Methodist Church of Odessa.

The younger Crutchfield also said in a statement released following the Houston bishop's funeral Saturday that his father was not a drug user and had not received a blood transfusion.

"We are left with the conclusion that we simply do not know, and may never know, how he contracted the virus," said the 44-year-old Crutchfield.

Homosexuals and intravenous drug users are at highest risk to contract acquired immune deficiency syndrome, while other AIDS victims contracted the disease through blood transfusions before donated blood was tested for the AIDS virus.

Methodist spokesman Spurgeon Dunnam III said the elder Crutchfield was the highest-ranking church leader known to have died of AIDS.

Crutchfield entered Methodist Hospital with viral pneumonia in December and was diagnosed as having AIDS in January, Dunnam said.

The 70-year-old Crutchfield was bishop of the Houston-based Texas Annual United Methodist Conference from 1976 until retiring in 1984 and was a prominent Methodist leader nationally.

He was active in ministering to people with AIDS, his son said in the statement, especially after he retired.

"He helped to plan and conduct funerals, provide transportation to the hospital, and clean the apartments of AIDS victims," Charles Crutchfield said.

The bishop died Thursday after 162 days in the hospital.

There was no mention of AIDS during Crutchfield's funeral service, attended by 500 people.

Those who wish to donate funds specifically for the recovery of Saragosa and its people may contact their local Red Cross chapters or they may make pledges by dialing the American Red Cross hot-line number at 1-800-453-9000.

Elvis Curb, executive director of the Midland American Red Cross chapter, has been monitoring the disaster.

"Particularly in a small community, it definitely is a large-scale disaster," Curb said.

He said that the Red Cross has been "overwhelmed" with clothing, furniture, blankets and canned foods.

But for now, the Red Cross needs contributions of money to purchase specific needs for individuals "to see that their needs are met."

Individuals will be needing to purchase items from underwear and shoes to specialized foods, medications and personal hygiene items.

"We attempt to meet the needs of the people as much as possible instead of imposing our values," Curb said. For example, "We don't attempt to tell them what to eat and what not to eat."

Funds for rebuilding houses and other buildings would come from the federal government once the governor and the president have the declared Saragasa a disaster, Curb noted.

"The repair of a pile of debris is virtually impossible," Curb noted.

If any of the tornado's survivors are turned down by the government for housing rebuilding grants or low-interest loans or are denied payment for medical expenses, the Red Cross then has an additional assistance program to help the disaster survivors.

The Red Cross's additional assistance is based on losses and the needs of the families.

In the wake of the 1979 Wichita Falls tornado in which 53 people were killed and 1,812 were injured, the Red Cross spent more than two years in assisting survivors.

"So, when there are lots of injuries and deaths," Curb said, "it seems to take a long time to restore the community and the survivors to a natural state."

PRAY

"Maybe this disaster is being used by God to teach the rich, to teach the wise, what true Christian life is," Barranger said.

"So we do have hope, we do have confidence that God will take care of us. He always has in the past and I'm sure that he always will in the future."

Pena called again for federal disaster aid for the victims.

"I feel that we have to find a way to help these people," he said.

Bill Wendt, who manages the Saragosa Mission School on the north end of town, said Saturday he saw the bodies of two small children in the rubble.

"One little bitty baby was wrapped in wool blankets. And she was still warm. I reached down, my stomach turned and I picked her up. My son has one about that age," he said, shaking his head.

"It was almost like (the tornado) had eyes," he said. "Where people were is where it got."

Residents wonder if they can rebuild

By SCOTT McCARTNEY

SARAGOSA, Texas (AP) — Within an hour, 450 people responded to the tornado disaster in this tiny, isolated west Texas town. Relatives of the dead pitched in to find the living. People from other towns sheltered victims, and donations of food and blankets poured in.

Yet despite the small-town camaraderie that sped the rescue of Saragosa, the predominantly Hispanic town was left Sunday with the question of its future: Could it pick up and rebuild, or did a nighttime twister wipe an old pioneering railroad town off the map?

"I don't like this place anymore. Too much has died," said Frank Ramirez, who escaped serious injury when the tornado leveled his house.

The tornado dipped out of the sky and zeroed in on the town Friday night, leaving a wide swath of destruction and few buildings standing in Saragosa, population 350.

Many here wonder if there will be enough economic and emotional muscle to rebuild the town. A few of the injured families returned Sunday and could only stand by their homesites, crying.

"I really don't expect it will be rebuilt. I don't think they can afford it," said the Rev. Ralph Barranger, the local parish priest.

Residents, most of whom had little or no insurance and work in low-paying farm jobs, awaited word on state and federal disaster relief. Most of them said that if help comes, they would try to rebuild. But for now, all there was to do was pick up whatever family photos or valuables that could be found in heaps of mud and timber.

"This is my hometown — what's left of it. We're going to try to pick up the pieces, but I don't know — I don't know if people can come back," said Blasa Lujan Nino, whose mother's house was swept off its foundation.

A car ended up on top of a neighbor's house, and neighbors' clothing was found Sunday in her mother's house, said Mrs. Nino. Her mother and other family members barely escaped the twister in a pickup truck driven by her brother.

"I could feel it suck me in. One side of the truck started to lift off the ground, and I had it floored and it was only going 25 miles per hour," said Chon Lujan, 29. "Then the truck dropped down and picked up speed."

Like others left homeless, Mrs. Nino said her mother will live with her in Las Cruces, N.M. Others said they will relocate to other towns.

Jose Candelas built his grocery store in 1950, "by myself, nail by nail." He rebuilt in 1962 after a bad storm caused extensive damage. Now, at 67, he faces rebuilding again with as much optimism as he can muster.

"If people stay here, we need it (the store). If people go, maybe I have to go, too. I want to stay, but if you don't have any more people here to make a business, it's not a place to stay," Candelas said.

"I don't have a penny. I lost $6,000 cash from the store," he said, after having recovered a small piece of merchandise — a $15.95 cross.

Phillip Lopez searched through the remains of his brother's home looking for the $1,000 cash nest-egg lost in the tornado. His brother was staying with his badly injured son in an Odessa hospital.

"It's going to take a lot of hard work to rebuild this place," said Lopez. "We're hopeful we can get some help."

Saragosa was founded in 1911 when the Southern Railroad established a work camp and Saragosa became a distribution point for alfalfa, melons and cotton. The railroad no longer provides employment here, and most residents work in agriculture jobs, some as migrant laborers.

Reeves County Sheriff Raul Florez said 85 percent of the communities that received his call for assistance responded to the disaster, a total of 450 people in an hour's time.

"This is a very close-knit area. Our communities are spread out considerably, 40 to 50 miles between towns. It's isolated here, but we're real close together when it comes to helping others," Florez said. "We all waddle in the mud together."

The townspeople, with a strong heritage, will rebuild their community, Florez predicted. But it's going to take money.

"If we have federal aid, we'll build back up," Florez said. "From here on, it's either (Texas Gov. Bill) Clements' or (President Ronald) Reagan's problem."

Preschooler only member of immediate family to survive

SARAGOSA, Texas (AP) — Armando Morales' proud mother for weeks had been inviting family members to the 4-year-old's preschool graduation ceremony.

She often showed off photos of him dressed in cap and gown.

Saturday, Armando was the only surviving member of his family.

Armando was staying Sunday with his grandparents, relatives said.

When a tornado struck the Saragosa Community Hall Friday night during the graduation, it killed his mother, Corina Morales, 23, her husband, Tito, 26, and their 1½-year-old son, Andrew.

Mrs. Morales was expecting her third child when she died, said Blen Rodriguez, her sister.

Also dead in the community hall were Mrs. Morales' brother, Socorro Rodriguez, 26, and her brother-in-law, Jorge Martinez, 35.

"We've been through a lot," said Ms. Rodriguez.

Three of Mrs. Morales' 12 brothers and sisters and their families had driven to Saragosa on Friday afternoon from their home in Wink to take part in the graduation celebration.

Ms. Rodriguez said many Wink residents have stopped by the house to express sympathy.

"It's bad enough when you lose one, but when you lose six...," she said. "We're a God-fearing family, and I believe God is helping us through this," she said. "I think we're going to make it."

One of Ms. Rodriguez' brothers, 18-year-old Milton, survived the twister. As he recovered from head wounds Saturday at the family's home in Wink, he had trouble talking about the incident.

Ms. Rodriguez had planned to attend the graduation, but stayed home when she became ill.

Volunteers flock to scene

SARAGOSA, Texas (AP) — From a catfish restaurant owner in Odessa to a group of New Mexico boarding school students, volunteers flocked to the aid of victims of this weekend's savage tornado.

"There's really been an outpouring from the community," said Susan Clowe, a disaster specialist with the American Red Cross.

In Saragosa Sunday, volunteers were combing through the splintered remnants of houses and handing out free food and drink as people gathered for a memorial service for the 29 dead.

Catfish restaurant owner Sid Clark said he brought in his catering trailer after learning that a friend of one of his employees had lost several family members in Friday's tornado.

"We got to talking about that and decided to do what little we can do," Clark said.

His trailer served 350 for breakfast and was preparing to serve lunch.

"It's not anything major, but I feel like we're doing what we can," he said.

The tragedy at the predominantly Hispanic community overwhelmed any racial distance, said Pat Kelly, who drove in from nearby Pecos Sunday to help.

"As far as racial barriers go, they all flopped to the ground. When it comes to the Mexican people and the white people, they will help each other out," he said.

Bishop Raymond Pena of the El Paso diocese, who conducted a memorial service Sunday, said, "Everyone has been so sensitive in meeting the needs of the grieving families."

A charitable organization based in Montreal, Canada, called Reeves County officials offering clothing and toys from its clothing bank.

"And we've offered to have 60 of their youngsters come to Montreal to spend two to four weeks at our summer camp," said Sid Stevens in a telephone interview from Montreal. Stevens works with the Sun Youth Organization in Montreal.

"Borders do not exist between brothers as close as the United States and Canada in times of disaster," Stevens said.

More than 20 Salvation Army volunteers were at the disaster site, and a Seventh Day Adventist emergency crew from Amarillo also set up a relief station.

A group of probationers from Midland County sorted out salvagable items from the debris and stacked the rest into a neat pile.

Tyson Eicholtz, one of the probation center officials, said it was the first time probationers had been told to work off restitution through disaster relief.

BISHOP

The statement by Crutchfield's son came after widespread speculation among Methodists that Crutchfield had AIDS. Funeral announcements last week simply said Crutchfield died after an extended illness.

The younger Crutchfield's statement quoted from what he wrote in an advance copy of the May 29 issue of the United Methodist Reporter.

The younger Crutchfield wanted to make a statement, but his mother, Benja Lee Crutchfield, was initially opposed, Dunnam said.

Dunnam, editor of the United Methodist Reporter, the weekly newspaper for the 9.2 million-member United Methodist Church, said a family disagreement over whether to issue any comment about the bishop's death delayed the statement's release for three hours after the funeral.

"In order to avoid speculation that would focus attention more on the cause of his death than the cause of Jesus Christ for which he lived, my mother and I have decided reluctantly to depart from a long-standing policy of withholding comment about family illnesses," the younger Crutchfield said.

"This revelation does not take away from the superb contribution that Bishop Crutchfield made in many areas of the life of the church," said Bishop Ben Oliphint, who succeeded Crutchfield as leader of the 273,000-member Texas Conference in South and East Texas.

"All of us live by the mercy and grace of God," Oliphint said. "We're all human, and we're all dependent upon God's love."

Crutchfield's doctor had reported his case to the city Health Department, as required under state law.

Robert Folletti, the city epidemiologist who investigates most AIDS cases, said Crutchfield's case had been reported months ago and had been assigned to the undetermined category, meaning the department has not been able to determine the source of the virus.

An investigation usually consists of interviews with the patient, the family and physician, he said.

The bishop's doctor had no information about the situation, Folletti said. Crutchfield was on a respirator at the time and could not be interviewed, he said.

No cases of AIDS contracted through casual contact have been documented in Houston or the United States, Folletti said.

Woman, baby reportedly killed

A woman and baby who reportedly died after their car tumbled into a quarry north of Austin were among at least 10 people killed in Texas traffic over the Memorial Day weekend.

The woman drove off the road and over a 15-foot cliff sometime Saturday night, said Sgt. Charles Maxey of the Williamson County Sheriff's Department. A security guard at the White Lime Quarry found the vehicle Sunday afternoon, according to police reports.

Edward Kennedy cheered in Poland

WORLD

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, declaring "I am a Pole," invoked the memories of his two assassinated brothers and their sentiment for Poland at a rally before thousands of cheering Solidarity supporters Sunday.

Standing on a sun-drenched doorstep alongside Lech Walesa, a founder and former leader of Solidarity, Kennedy praised the banned free trade union movement for fighting "against tyranny, repression and for human rights."

The atmosphere in the courtyard outside the rectory of St. Brygida's church was like that of an American political rally, and Kennedy warmed to the cheers of the crowd of thousands of people who packed the square and chanted his name.

"My family has had a special feeling for your country," Kennedy said, noting that his brothers Joseph and John came to Poland before World War II and that his brother Robert visited in 1964.

His voice booming over a loudspeaker system, he added to thundering cheers, "and we're having such a good time now, we're going to come back again and again."

Pinning a Solidarity button on his lapel, Kennedy declared to cheers, "Jestem Polakiem (I am a Pole)," stirring memories of the famous words of his brother President John F. Kennedy, who told the people of Berlin, "I am a Berliner."

Kennedy and more than a dozen members of the Kennedy family accompanying him on the four-day trip flashed V-for-victory signs, the symbol of Solidarity. An eight-piece band played the U.S. and Polish national anthems.

The facade of the red brick rectory was adorned with large Polish and American flags and a photograph of native Polander Pope John Paul II.

Color photographs of John, Robert and Ted Kennedy were passed out, setting off a mad scramble by the crowd. Many people later lined up for Kennedy family members to sign them.

Walesa, taking the microphone from the Massachusetts Democrat, said "I want to thank Mr. Senator for visiting our city, and I want to ask the senator to pass greetings from Gdansk to the American nation and tell it that Solidarity lives and Solidarity will win."

Zbigniew Bujak, the former Solidarity underground leader, said "This place (Gdansk) is the heart of our Solidarity," he said. "The American ideals of human rights are exactly the same as those of Solidarity."

Bujak and Adam Michnik, the essayist-historian and Solidarity adviser, on Friday received the 1986 Robert F. Kennedy Foundation memorial human rights award from the Kennedy family.

Congratulations Outstanding Graduates From Midland Christian and Greenwood High Schools

Total contents prepared by advertising

Stephanie Smith, daughter of Danny and Linda Smith, has excelled in academics and athletics at Greenwood High School.

Smith, a member of the National Honor Society, was named Outstanding English Student in 1985 and 1986 and Outstanding Geometry Student in 1986. She has been on the A Honor Roll every year since 1983.

In 1985 this Greenwood student placed first in the district in UIL (University Interscholastic League) Persuasive Speaking. In addition, during her years at Greenwood High School, she was chosen as the alternate for Girl's State. She has taken a number of honors courses and has received the National Merit Science Award, the National Merit Math Award, Rotary Club Youth Award and the Optimist Club Award. She has been named as a Distinguished American High School Student and listed in Who's Who.

Athletics have also been important to this basketball and track participant. She's been on All-District, All Region and All-State teams and was named All-District 4-AAA Most Valuable Player in 1987. Also in 1987, she was selected as an All-Star by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches and by the Texas Girl's Coaches Association. Competing in shot put, she qualified for Region 4-AAA. She was also on the District 4-AAA track championship team.

Smith has held a number of offices including: Junior Class President, Senior Class President, Sophomore Class Secretary, National Honor Society Vice President and President of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes-Huddle Group. This graduating senior has also been President of the Greenwood 4-H Club and has served on the Midland County 4-H Council. She has been in the Greenwood High School Band and the Gifted and Talented Program.

Smith is a member of the Greenwood Baptist Church Youth Council and Youth Ensemble.

She plans to attend Tarleton State University next year. Later, she hopes to transfer to Texas A&M and major in physical therapy.

Greenwood High School senior Scott Driver is the son of Handley and Temple Ann Driver and great great grandson of Midland County pioneer rancher J.W. Driver. This student has certainly made a name for himself during his years in high school.

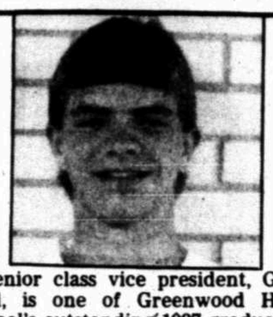

This Honor Roll student was selected as Midland Downtown Rotary Club's Student of the Week and was a member of the National Honor Society.

He has been a very active member of the Midland County 4-H Club for eight years. He has served as the secretary of the Midland County 4-H Council and as president of the Greenwood 4-H Club.

Driver has participated in a great number of livestock shows, exhibiting a Grand Champion Steer in 1987, the Grand Champion Swine in 1982 and Champion Lambs in 1987 at the Midland County Livestock Show. In addition to participating in statewide livestock shows, he has been selected Top Boy's Lamb Showman on two occasions.

He has been reporter for the Greenwood FFA and a member of the National High School Rodeo Association. He was Texas High School Rodeo Association Region II Champion Team Roper in 1986.

Driver plans to attend Texas Tech University and major in agribusiness.

He was in the Gifted and Talented Program and was on the A-B Honor Roll for three years. He was named Art Student of the Month in September and was the recipient of a typing award.

Teal has done particularly well in football and basketball, which he has participated in all four years of high school. He was named All-District Defensive Back and honorable mention All-District Quarterback in football. He made the All-Tournament Basketball Team at Regan County Tournament. In addition, this athlete participated in track one year.

Teal has been a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the National Honor Society. He is in the Society of Distinguished American High School Students. He has also been selected for Outstanding Christian Young People of America.

He plans to attend Hardin-Simmons University and follow their pre-dental course. Some day he hopes to have his own dental practice.

Ann Long is one of Greenwood High School's outstanding seniors. Her parents are Ra and Jerry Duckworth and John and Betty Long.

Long has been a member of the National Honor Society and the recipient of the National Science Merit Award and National Foreign Language Merit Award.

As a member of the Greenwood High School Band, Long has served as Drum Major. She was also selected as Band Sweetheart and class secretary.

Long, who was born in Fort Stockton, moved to Greenwood and began attending Greenwood schools when she was in the fourth grade.

She is a member of the Greenwood Baptist Church.

Karen Phemister, an outstanding Greenwood High School graduate, has received a number of academic honors and participated in many school organizations.

Phemister placed in several UIL competitions including: feature writing-second place, headline writing-second place, and spelling- fifth place at district competition. She was named Academic All-American and received the National Science Merit Award and Rotary Club Youth Merit Award. This Honor Roll Student was in the Gifted and Talented Program and One-Act Play.

Phemister has served as Student Council Representative, Class Officer and National Honor Society President. She's worked on the school newspaper staff four years and has been it's editor for three years. She's also a member of the Quill and Scroll.

This senior said she has enjoyed her years at Greenwood High School, but is looking forward to attending Southwest Texas State University in the fall. She plans to major in journalism. After she graduates, she hopes to persue a career in journalism or education. "It is my dream to take over for Erma Bombeck when she retires. She's my idol," Phemister said.

Brian David Morgan, Co-Captain of the 1987 Greenwood High School Basketball team, is the son of Don and Linda Morgan.

Morgan was selected for the 4-AAA All-District Basketball team, received AAA All-Regional Team Honorable Mention. He was named to the All-Tournament Teams in the Coahoma and Reagan County Tournaments during the 1986-1987 season. He also received All-District Honorable Mention for the 1985-1986 season.

Morgan has been nominated for the All-Academic Team and was a nominee for the Hall of Fame Texas Coaches Basketball Association Teams.

This senior also participated in football one year, golf two years and track two years.

Morgan has excelled in academics, as well as athletics. He was Vice-President of the National Honor Society, a participant in the Gifted and Talented Program and the Outstanding Student in Spanish. He received the United States Academy National Merit Award in Science and was selected for the Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

This Greenwood student served as junior and senior class treasurer and was selected as Rotary Club Student of the Week. He was a member of Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Future Farmers of America.

Next year, he plans to study engineering at Texas A&M University.

David Johnson, a 1987 graduate of Midland Christian High School, has excelled in athletics during his high school years.

Johnson has been Captain of the football team and was awarded Honorable Mention All-District football.

This athlete was also Captain of the Midland Christian High School Basketball team.

He was a state qualifier for golf and a state qualifier for track. He also played varsity tennis.

Johnson plans to attend college and major in physical education.

Mark Graham, son of Roy and Sharon Graham, is one of Greenwood High School's Outstanding 1987 graduates.

Graham has received a number of academic honors including the National Merit Science Award and the National Merit Math Award. He has been a member of the National Honor Society and has been named Who's Who in Agriculture. This recipient of the Rotary Youth Merit Award has also been listed as a Distinguished American High School Student. Graham has taken honors English and government and has been on the A-Honor Roll.

His athletic activities have included varsity basketball, football and track. He was the second team All-District defensive back in 1985 and the second team All-District wide receiver. In 1986 he made honorable mention for the All-District basketball team. He received the same honor this year.

Graham has been on the Midland County 4-H Council and the Youth Committee at Greenwood Baptist Church. He was Vice-President of his class his freshman, sophomore and junior years. He was the Vice-President of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes two years and President of the Greenwood FFA two years. In addition, Graham has been in the Greenwood High School band and the Greenwood Baptist Church Youth Ensemble.

He plans to attend Texas A&M and major in agricultural education.

Tim Rusert is the son of Roger and Judy Rusert. He is one of the outstanding graduates of the Greenwood High School Class of 1987.

Rusert placed third in the UIL Regional Accounting Competition and first in UIL District Physics Competition.

For two years this senior has participated in 4-H Shooting Sports. He has also served as the 4-H Vice President. In addition to shooting sports, Rusert enjoys tennis and golf.

He is a member of Good Shepard Lutheran Church.

He plans to attend Midland College next year.

Douglas Doyle Birnion, who plans to attend McMurry College next year and study psychology, has excelled in a number of areas at Greenwood High School.

Birnion, an honors English and government student, received the Rotary Youth Leadership Award and the American Legion Award. He was named Best American History Student and Rotary Club Student of the Week. Birnion has been a National Honor Society member.

He made All-Region Band three years and went to State Solo and Ensemble Contest two years. In junior high he was named Best Band Student. His junior year he served as Band Chaplain.

Birnion is a member of St. Paul United Methodist Church, where he was president of the youth group two years and a choir member for five years.

He participated in football his freshman and sophomore years and in basketball his freshman, sophomore and junior years.

Gerry Morgan is one of Midland Christian High School's most outstanding graduates this year. He is valedictorian of his class and a member of the National Honor Society.

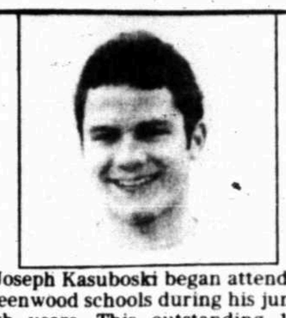

His academic honors include being named Most Outstanding Student in physical science, biology, algebra II, trigonomentry, geometry, English I, II, III, Bible II, III, German I, American history, world history and economics.

He has also participated in sports as a member of the varsity golf team and the varsity tennis team. In 1985 he was the boys' tennis team's Most Valuable Player.

Morgan has served as Editor of the yearbook staff. He is a member of the German Club, Optimist Youth Club, Speech Club and his church youth group.

This 1987 graduate plans to attend Texas A&M and pursue a career in aerospace engineering. He has received some scholarships.

Morgan is the son of Bill and Jacqueline Morgan.

Joseph Kasuboski began attending Greenwood schools during his junior high years. This outstanding 1987 graduate is the son of Lawrence and Barbara Kasuboski.

He has participated in ballet for ten years and gymnastics for eight years. He is proud to have received the Governor's 90th percentile Physical Education Award.

Kasuboksi has received the National Science Merit Award. He has also placed in a number of competitions including: Number Sense- second place and Informative Speech- fifth place. He has been on the Honor Roll and has received Superiors in Spanish Prose and Spanish Dance.

The National Honor Society member has been on the Greenwood Student Council for three years. He is also in a player group and choir at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

David Galyon is Midland Christian High School's 1987 Salutatorian. Gaylon is a member of the National Honor Society and was named Most Outstanding Student in German II.

This exceptional student has also been on the varsity tennis team. He has been a member of the German Club, Drama Club and his church youth group.

Galyon has served on the yearbook staff at Midland Christian High School and on Midland's Teen Court.

Next year, he plans to attend college. He is considering Texas Tech and Abilene Christian University.

Falwell to evaluate PTL network preachers

NATION

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — PTL Chairman Jerry Falwell says the ministry's new board is evaluating the message and lifestyle of every preacher who buys air time on the PTL network.

Falwell is bent on restoring what he calls wholesomeness and discipline to the scandal-rocked, debt-ridden evangelism empire built by Jim and Tammy Bakker.

He said plans to evaluate PTL network preachers are based on his objection to a "prosperity theology" that celebrates luxuries and instant gratification.

"I think this prosperity theology, what some call 'health and wealth' theology, is the most damnable heresy being preached in the world today," Falwell, an independent Baptist fundamentalist, said in an interview published in Sunday's Charlotte Observer.

"The philosophy that all Christians who are living in the perfect will of God are going to be physically healthy and financially wealthy is not only heresy and unbiblical, it is very frustrating and debilitating to millions of believing Christians," he told the newspaper.

"There are millions of poor people in this country who sincerely love God," he said. "There are millions of sick people in hospitals and convalescent homes who sincerely love God. When they hear these health-and-wealth preachers and then look at themselves, they say, 'God must be angry with me.'"

"We also are going to look very carefully at the personal lifestyle and quality of Christian testimony of persons who appear as guests on the PTL Club show..."

Gone from PTL with the houseboats and fur coats sold at auction Saturday are armed guards for the executive offices and aides with six-figure bonuses.

Going, Falwell says, are ultra-skimpy swimsuits at PTL's Heritage Village water park.

"A dress code is coming" at the water park, said Falwell, who founded the Moral Majority and the 22,000-member Thomas Road Baptist Church in Lynchburg, Va. "It is not going to be prudish, but it is going to be reasonable and modest."

Falwell took over the ministry in March after Bakker resigned amid disclosure of a 1980 tryst with a former church secretary.

In a letter made public Saturday, Mrs. Bakker accused Falwell of betraying her and her husband by taking over the PTL ministry for himself.

"He was so smooth, so kind, and I guess we were so gullible," Mrs. Bakker said in a letter to Joanne Thompson, who operates a religious television station in Greenville.

Falwell denied the allegations.

PTL's new board of directors is dominated by fundamentalists. Charismatics and Pentecostals, who controlled the board throughout the Bakker years, are no longer represented.

The PTL scandal may have affected contributions to another evangelist.

The Rev. Robert H. Schuller's "Hour of Power," based at the Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove, Calif., received less from Jan. 1 to May 19 than in the same period last year.

Fred Southard, chief financial officer for Schuller's "Hour of Power" TV show, said he didn't know why contributions had fallen off but said it was "interesting" that the decline occurred during the PTL troubles.

Earlier this year, Schuller laid off several "Hour of Power" employees and ceased broadcasting on 12 TV stations and two major cable TV stations as the result of the ministry's $1.5 million deficit in 1986.

Civil War wreckage will be viewed on video screen

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Scientists will be taking another look this week at the wreckage of the Monitor, a Civil War ironclad vessel that lies in 220 feet of water 16 miles offshore.

Remote-controlled submarines will prowl the Atlantic Ocean floor and provide researchers with a clear picture of the wreckage on a video screen, said Dane Konop, a spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The federal agency is overseeing a $1.8 million operation to see if it would be possible to raise the ship.

"We plan for all of the work to be done by remote-operated vehicles," Konop said. "We don't intend to do any manned dives this time."

That could change, he said, if some particularly significant artifact was found by the ROVs, as the submarines are called.

Since the wreck was discovered in 1973 by Duke University researchers, divers have recovered more than 130 artifacts, including the ship's anchor.

"Obviously, when a ship goes down, everything does not stay in one place," Konop said. "With divers, they concentrated on the hull, but with the ROVs we hope to cover a large area — the debris field — around the wreck."

The Monitor fought the Confederate ironclad Merrimack to a draw in the Battle of Hampton Roads in March 1862. The battle, the first between ironclad ships, is credited with revolutionizing naval warfare.

The Monitor went down off Hatteras during a storm in December 1862 as it was being towed.

Konop said this week's expedition will give scientists a chance to produce an updated map of the site, to examine the wreckage itself and to conduct corrosion studies.

Singlaub says he's been supporting Laotian resistance

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — Retired Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, who testified before Congress about the Contra resupply network, said he is gathering military supplies, weapons and humanitarian assistance for anti-Communist guerillas in Laos.

Singlaub did not say how much money or supplies he and his organizations have provided to the Laotian resistance, according to The Sunday Sun of Lowell.

He told the newspaper that he gathered the aid through his international group, the World Anti-Communist League, and the U.S. Council for World Freedom, another group he is associated with.

Singlaub said no weapons were sold through the U.S.-based organization because "that would be a violation of my agreements with the IRS and the Neutrality Act."

Singlaub has been linked to support of anti-Communist groups elsewhere in the world, including Afghanistan and Angola, in addition to boosting the anti-Sandinista Contras in Nicaragua.

Singlaub said he has been supporting the Laotian resistance for about three years to keep the pressure on the Communist government in Laos and to maintain sources of information on U.S. servicemen Singlaub believes are still being held in Southeast Asia.

He told the newspaper he met the leader of the largest Laotian resistance group, and had representatives at a recent meeting in Thailand of the leaders of 22 hill tribes trying to unite against the Vietnamese.

Singlaub said he disagrees with U.S. attempts to improve relations with the Communist Laotian government in order to bolster efforts to return the bodies of U.S. servicemen from the Vietnam war and provide information on missing soldiers.

Observance holds special meaning

Memorial Day, set aside to honor American servicemen and women who gave their lives for their country, is a solemn, emotional observance in any given year. But the one today has special meaning because of the recent tragedy in the Persian Gulf.

Thirty-seven American lives were lost, but what makes the loss even more sobering are the details surrounding how the sailors died. They weren't locked in hand-to-hand combat with the enemy. They weren't bent on avenging others who had fallen in battle. The news accounts to this point, at least, imply that those 37 courageous and patriotic Americans were the victims of a cruel "mistake" by an Iraqi pilot who fired a missile at the USS Stark in the apparent belief it was an oil tanker — a primary target in the Iran-Iraq war.

That's a sad fact because loss of life, regrettable under any circumstance, is only rendered more senseless when it occurs in an avoidable circumstance. Where American servicemen and women are concerned, the cost to this country by way of prior wars and military actions is already much too high.

The sailors who died when the USS Stark was attacked no doubt believed they were fulfilling their commitment to this country and its people by patrolling the Persian Gulf. And they were doing exactly that. They were fulfilling a promise those in the armed services have carried out tirelessly and with courage — to protect and defend this nation and its interests against all enemies and, if necessary, to lay down their lives to achieve that goal. That's a high price, but it's a price the brave men and women of the armed services have paid over the years.

Now, once again and with great sadness, the Persian Gulf is added to the long list of places where Americans have spilled their blood and given their lives to maintain the ideals and hopes of this country. To fail to recognize their great deed would be unimaginable. Americans owe to them the fondest gratitude and respect.

On this Memorial Day, we honor their memory and the memory of all the others who have died for this nation.

Another View:

Citicorp's shrewdness

Any bank that reports a $2.5 billion loss in a single quarter must be in serious trouble, right? Wrong. Citicorp's dramatic decision to set aside enough cash to cover a fifth of its loans to poor countries simply acknowledges facts that have been known for years. The institution remains a major player in global banking, one that deserves credit for injecting a constructive note of reality to negotiations over third world debt.

Like most big banks, Citicorp lent billions to countries with ailing economies in the 1970s on the assumption that governments would never permit their loans to default. But the assumption was mistaken. Now, unlike most American banks with big loans outstanding to poor countries, Citicorp has joined European and Japanese lenders in concluding that stockholders prefer to know the worst.

The gamble appears to have paid off. Market analysts view the one-time hit as a shrewd psychological coup that will distract attention from past errors and reinforce Citicorp's image as a flexible and imaginative competitor. Other benefits are quite tangible: the write-off frees the bank to pursue an aggressive policy of selling dubious debts for less than 100 cents on the dollar. And it pre-empts debtors tempted to use the threat of formal default to demand more favorable settlements.

The market's positive response makes it more likely that other U.S. banks will follow Citicorp's lead toward honest disclosure of shaky loans. If most take the plunge, the secondary market for their debts will surely boom. Someday soon, private investors and pension funds may be able to add discounted portions of Brazilian and Argentine debt to their portfolios of corporate stocks, Treasury securities and mortgage-backed bonds. That wouldn't reduce the dollar cost of defaults. But it would reduce the adverse impact of any such losses on the financial system by spreading the risk to a much larger pool of savers.

There's a more important possible effect. The banks' implicit acknowledgment that impoverished nations will never repay their loans in full could open the way to realistic settlements. Private banks can't be expected to provide the infusions of foreign capital so desperately needed by countries like Mexico and the Philippines. That's a job for multilateral lenders, like the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, that are backed by the credit of the major economic powers.

Nevertheless, formal agreements to write off substantial chunks of the loans, or to accept less-than-market interest rates, would at least stanch the flows of capital from poor lands to rich. Citicorp's show of strength in adversity was intended to serve its stockholders. It also serves the public.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 25, the 145th day of 1987. There are 220 days left in the year. This is Memorial Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

Two hundred years ago, on May 25, 1787, the Constitutional Convention was convened in Philadelphia after enough delegates had shown up for a quorum. In the months that followed, the delegates drew up the United States Constitution, which to this day remains the basis for America's national government.

On this date:

In 1803, American essayist and poet Ralph Waldo Emerson was born in Boston.

In 1810, Argentina began its revolt against Spain.

In 1935, baseball great Babe Ruth hit the 714th and final home run of his career, for the Boston Braves, in a game against the Pittsburgh Pirates at Forbes Field.

In 1946, Trans-Jordan (now Jordan) became a kingdom as it proclaimed its new monarch, King Abdullah Ibn Ul-Hussein.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy asked the nation to work toward putting a man on the moon by the end of the decade.

In 1963, the Organization of African Unity was founded, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

In 1976, U.S. Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, admitted having had a "personal relationship" with Elizabeth Ray, a committee staff member who claimed she received her job in order to be Hays' mistress.

In 1979, 275 people died in the worst U.S. air disaster when an American Airlines DC-10 crashed at Chicago's O'Hare airport.

In 1985, more than 11,000 people were killed as a hurricane and tidal wave devastated Bangladesh.

Ten years ago: The motion picture "Star Wars," written and directed by George Lucas and starring Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford and Carrie Fisher, opened in theaters.

Five years ago: Argentina called for a negotiated end to the Falkland Islands war against Britain with the help of United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Thought for Today: "Committee — a group of men who individually can do nothing, but as a group decide that nothing can be done." — Fred Allen, comedian (1894-1956).

Army's runway tests raising questions

WASHINGTON — When the Army tested asphalt sealers to determine which one gave airport runways the best protection from jet fuel spills, the testing methods raised almost as many questions as they answered.

Jack Anderson

Jet fuel can melt asphalt like butter. A sealer that would be impervious to spilled fuel would save the Army millions of dollars a year in repair costs.

But admitted irregularities in the field test conducted by the Army at the Davison Airfield refueling apron in Fort Belvoir, Va., made one manufacturer hopping mad. Carl Leverenz, of International Bitumen Consultants in Atlanta, challenged the test that flunked his sealant, Product 21.

Five brands of asphalt sealer were applied in 1984 at different refueling points, and examined six times during the test period, which ended in May 1986.

The Army stands by the results of its test. But a lengthy investigation by our associate Stewart Harris turned up these irregularities in the testing process:

— The test results were changed significantly between the draft and the final report. In the draft report, for example, one product was rated "excellent" in April 1985, but this description became only "fair" in the final report. Other products were upgraded.

— The sealer test was completed only at Davison Airfield. The Army customarily conducts tests simultaneously at several locations.

— Manufacturers were not invited, as they usually are, to be present at the periodic examinations of their products.

William Taylor, who retired last year after 30 years as an Army highway engineer, told us the sealer test wasn't objective. He theorized that those in charge got defensive when Leverenz complained to his congressman about the test.

"I think Leverenz is trying to force the issue and they just got their back up against the wall," Taylor said, adding: "I'm not saying Product 21 is the best material on the market, but it is one of the best."

Product 21 is used at Luton airbase in Britain, and the airport manager there told us the sealer works "fine" three years after it was applied to the asphalt.

The engineer who signed the Army's test report, Carl Williams of Fort Monroe, Va., agreed that the test differed from others conducted by the Army, and conceded that the procedures probably could have been more disciplined. But he said the test was conducted under real-life conditions; if a sealer must be applied under laboratory conditions, he said, it probably won't perform in the field.

As for the changed test results, Williams explained that the five products were graded subjectively, and the grades might have been changed after he looked at photographs of the test patches as the test progressed.

Product 21 failed because it cracked, exposing the asphalt to spilled jet fuel, according to the final report. Williams said the cracks formed because Product 21 and asphalt expand and contract at different speeds.

On a visit to the airfield, Leverenz showed us the patch where he said his material had been applied. It was different from the spot shown in the Army test report. Leverenz signed an affidavit that the Army had confused his product with another.

Williams denied the charge.

We hired Dr. Walter F. Rowe of George Washington University, a distinguished forensic scientist, to examine samples of the sealers scraped from the refueling apron. Rowe concluded that material scraped from the patch where Leverenz said Product 21 was applied did not match a pure sample of his product.

This means that the Army probably did not confuse the test patches.

MINI-EDITORIAL: As Kermit the Frog wisely noted, it's not easy being green. And green is exactly what the Russians are at free enterprise after 70 years of Marxism-Leninism-Stalinism-socialism. That's why Mikhail Gorbachev is having such a tough time trying to revive even the rudiments of capitalism in the Soviet economy. No one can remember how it works. In Hungary and the People's Republic of China, there are still many influential individuals who have personal memories of profit, incentive and the other wonders of capitalism. But any Soviet citizen who was an adult in 1917 would now be in his dotage, or at least close to it.

RUSSELL BAKER

Getting airline to pay may be most modern

NEW YORK — Dr. Harold J. Liverworth, the modernity specialist, can no longer be reached by telephone. "Being unreachable by telephone is one of the most modern things you can do right now," he explains in his new book, "No Moss Grows on Me," soon to be a major motion picture.

Russell Baker

For years the great modernist kept a telephone answering machine. Its weakness, Liverworth explains, was that it left you with no alibi for not returning calls.

Then, one of those accidents that fill the annals of discovery: The doctor had a flight canceled.

Naturally, he sought to recover the $238 cost of the unused tickets.

"Six months of mailed pleas for my money got me nowhere," he writes, "so I tried phoning. I reached a man empowered only to accept flight reservations, but he kindly provided the phone number of the company's passenger refund office in Houston. It would surely provide satisfaction, he said, if I phoned at my own expense."

Thus did Liverworth discover the perpetual busy signal.

"At whatever hour of the day or night I punched up that Houston number, I got a busy signal," he writes. "It was amazing. Continental Airlines had discovered the perfect modern method to avoid ever having to deal with your surly creditors."

Hadn't a modernist as shrewd as Liverworth learned about the perpetual busy signal from trying to call New York's Department of Motor Vehicles, or IRS offices, or any of the dozens of government numbers that supposedly exist to provide public information?

Of course. "But I had always assumed that these lines were actually tied up by government workers who had gone into public employment only to get free phone service."

But surely, he reasoned, a company like Continental Airlines that was too chintzy to pay a $238 debt wouldn't let refund office clerks get away with abusing its phones.

"The modernity of the phenomenon is breathtaking," he writes. "With the perpetual busy signal, great corporations and important people like myself need never again have to deal with people who give us a pain in the neck."

Readers may ask how I reached a man who is unreachable by telephone, and of course, I did not reach him. I reached his agent, who provided the above excerpts. She has not seen the finished manuscript, has not seen the doctor in three months and is not sure where or how he is.

Well, what about having "No Moss on Me" soon become a major motion picture? How can there soon be a major motion picture if the author has disappeared, leaving nothing but excerpts?

"Precisely," said his agent. "It will be an extremely modern thing to do: Dr. Liverworth's book will become a major motion picture before Dr. Liverworth completes the book."

It sounded as if the great modernist had discovered a thrilling new concept of modern entertainment: the major motion picture based on the best-selling book that never gets written.

"You have remarkable insight," said the agent, showing me another excerpt from Liverworth's manuscript:

"Since practically nobody reads, compared with the numbers who view, it is a waste of modern time to write the fantastically popular best seller on which the movie must be based.

"By sending the author on a 15-city publicity tour to promote the astonishing book he plans to write, by publicizing his creative suffering in gossip magazines, and by placing him on shows like "Life Styles of the Rich and Famous," we can create an immense public audience for the movie without requiring anybody either to buy or read the book."

I suggested that a movie based on an unwritten book about a busy signal didn't look like box office dynamite, considering today's movie audience was composed mostly of 15-year-olds. The agent said that such old-folks material would, of course, be left out of the movie. For the 15-year-old audience, Liverworth has written some excerpts on the "absolutely most modern things you can do," said the agent.

For instance: "The most modern thing you can do today is have twins of different ages. It happened recently in England. To have one twin middle-aged when the other is born, have embryologists simultaneously fertilize two human eggs from the same mother, let one develop into a baby and store the other for 40 years before starting the second twin."

Well. That should certainly produce something scarier than "Nightmare on Elm Street" for 15-year-olds. Now if Liverworth can only discover an ultramodern method for making an airline pay up.

CHARLEY REESE

'Paper armies' don't win many battles, wars

I was having a conversation with a military officer recently and remarked that most civilians don't realize how fast National Guard and Reserve units will have to be called up if there is a war.

Charley Reese

He laughed. Most of the Guardsmen and Reservists don't realize it.

In every nation there are two armies. There is the army that finally fights when there is a war and there is the bureaucratic army which exists in between the wars. The fighting army acts like an army. The bureaucratic army acts like a bureaucracy.

The point is that a bureaucracy always seeks to accomodate itself to the source of funding and this is true whether the bureaucrats wear civvies or uniforms.

So when Congress, the source of funding, opted for an all-volunteer army for purely domestic political reasons, the defense bureaucracy made the accommodation instead of telling the truth, which is that given the worldwide missions our Armed Forces have been assigned by the politicians, the U.S. cannot afford an all volunteer army.

In a rational world, this fact would be recognized and either the idea of a volunteer army would be scrapped or the missions would be reduced to fit the capability of the size volunteer army we can afford.

In the irrational world of Washington where politics and expediency rather than reason drives things, the army was simply shrunk to fit the budget. This necessitated assigning about 40 percent of combat capability planned for the first 30 days of hostilities to National Guard and Reserve units. Virtually all of our air defense, such as it is, is assigned to Air National Guard units.

In a rational world, having done this, leaders would recognize that units expected to go from civilian life to combat within 30 days must receive better training that a weekend a month and must have top of the line equipment ready to use on a moment's notice.

In the Washington world, of course, this was not done, although it is not considered polite to say so. It is not considered polite to point out that Congress has failed to create an army with equipment and the capability of carrying out the missions Congress and the Executive Branch have assigned it.

Instead, we opt for the bureaucratic solution which is to solve the problems on paper. There are reams of paper and reports, in triplicate, which show with excruciating detail that the American Armed Forces are ready on a moment's notice to accomplish their missions.

Only a fool would believe them.

At the very time, for example, that former President Jimmy Carter was pronouncing the Persian Gulf an area of strategic concern, we had neither the airlift nor sealift capability to fight a conventional war in the Persian Gulf. As events painfully proved, we did not even have the capability of conducting a military rescue operation in the area.

At the very time, for example, that former President Carter announced a shift to a counterforce nuclear policy — targeting Soviet missile siloes — we did not have missiles with the combination of accuracy and yield to destroy those siloes in a retaliatory strike.

I am not arguing what our missions ought to be but merely that we make sure that when we assign a mission, we also create — in flesh and steel, not on paper — the capability of accomplishing it. If you are going to defend Western Europe then there are minimum requirements of manpower, weapons, ammunition, and transportation equipment. We ought either to provide them or admit that we will not defend Western Europe — at least not successfully.

Historically we have never been prepared for war but historically we have been lucky enough to prepare after we were already in them.

It seems prudent to me that after you rolled 14 successive sevens that you not count on the indefinite continuation of such good luck.

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Forecast for 8 AM Monday

In North Texas, partly cloudy through Tuesday with a slight chance of mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Lows tonight 64 to 70. Highs today and Tuesday 84 to 90.

In South Texas, widely scattered thunderstorms north and southeast through Tuesday. Otherwise partly cloudy to cloudy and continued warm and humid. Lows tonight in the 70s except in the 60s northwest. Highs today and Tuesday in the 80s and 90s.

In West Texas, fair west, otherwise, partly cloudy through Tuesday. Widely scattered thunderstorms Panhandle tonight. Warmer north today. Highs today 80s most areas, except, mid 90s along the Rio Grande. Lows tonight upper 50s mountains and Panhandle to mid 60s south. Highs Tuesday low 80s mountains to mid 90s Big Bend.

Breezy, warm day forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

A breezy late spring day will greet Midlanders today.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for partly cloudy skies, warmer temperatures, and less than a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms.

The high temperature today is to be near 90 degrees, and winds are to be southerly at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

For tonight and Tuesday, the weatherman is predicting partly cloudy skies, a low in the mid-60s and high near 90 degrees.

Sunday's peak temperature was 77 degrees, which was nowhere near the record high of 102 degrees for May 24 in 1964. The overnight low was 55 degrees. The record low for a May 25 is 50 degrees in 1954.

STATE

There were scattered showers and thunderstorms across much of the state Monday.

Much of the storm activity was in south central, southeastern, northern and eastern Texas, as well as the western sections of the Panhandle.

Partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies were common across the state. There was a heavy cloud cover over south central and East Texas due to the showers and thunderstorms.

A moist, unstable air mass over the state with passing upper level disturbances, and cooler outflowing air from the thundershowers meeting the relatively warmer air outside the shower and cloud cover area contributed to the inclement weather, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

Wet, stormy weather extended over much of the Plains and into the Southeast on Sunday, and more than 8 inches of rain fell on Nebraska.

A stationary front stretching from the Rockies through central sections of the Plains to the mid-Atlantic Coast combined with a storm system over the southern Rockies to produce numerous showers and thunderstorms over much of the Plains and in the Mississippi Valley.

More thunderstorms were possible across western Nebraska and a flash-flood watch was issued for much of the Panhandle region.

Thunderstorms also extended from the central Appalachians and the Tennessee Valley into the Southeast. Scattered showers and thunderstorms developed across the southern and central Rockies.

For today, showers and thunderstorms were forecast from the Ohio and Tennessee valleys across much of the Mississippi Valley and Plains into the central and northern Rockies. Rain showers were forecast across the Great Lakes, and west of the Rockies.

MIDKIFF — Odis M. Holiman has been a horse handler, cowman and a lot more most of his life. And he wasn't content just to retire from the business world in 1979.

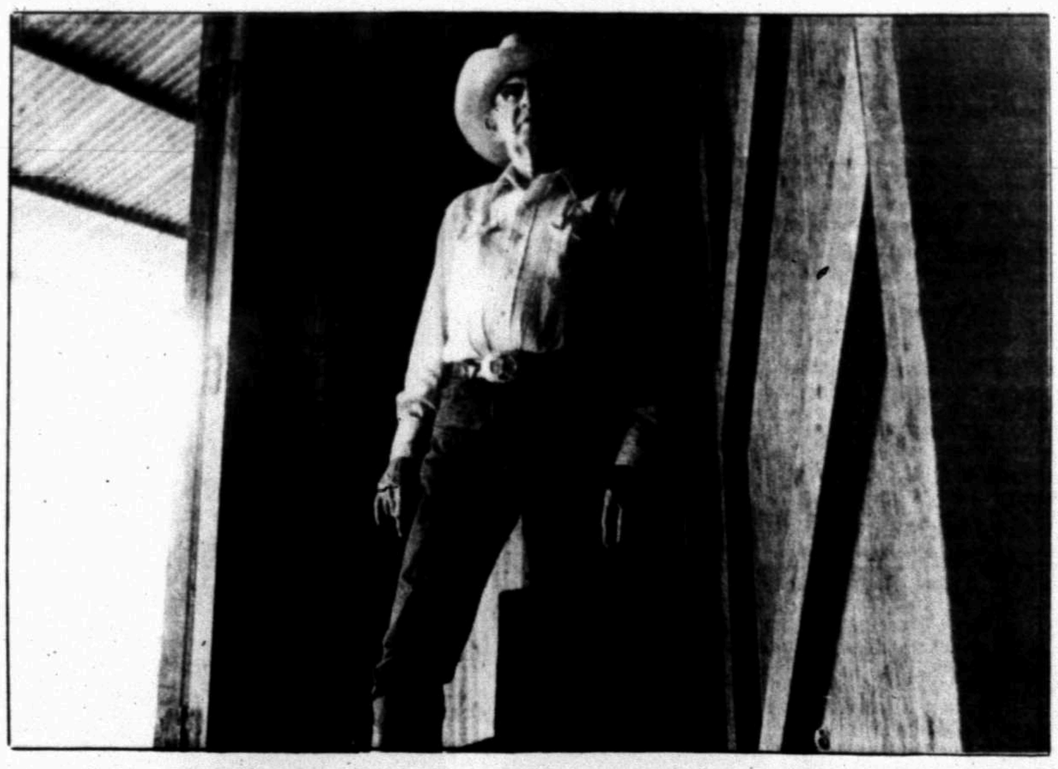

"I got tired of doing nothing," he said, "so I went up there and built me a store."

Holiman, who was rooted on the farm and ranch, delved into the business world in Midland, Odessa and Fort Stockton at different times, and got caught up in computerized bookkeeping and in merchandising.

All the while, he ranched.

"Most of the time, I had two or three things going."

And, as the years passed on, he found himself in full-time retirement on the 4,054-acre Wagon Wheel Ranch north of Rankin and wanting more to do.

Holiman, like his father, is a cowman who made a good cowhand. He stands tall in his barn north of Rankin and west of Midkiff.

Holiman got restless despite the company of pedigreed horses and a helpmate wife.

"Even when I was retired, I was ranching," he said, "but wasn't doing much because of the drought."

So this year, just to give himself and the misses something to do, he built and opened the Wagon Wheel Ranch Store between Midland and Rankin in Upton County.

He plans to sell residential lots at the ranch, he said.

At 70, Holiman is a kindly old chap. He runs the store, where his hired help serve travelers and neighbors country food. Holiman also looks after 30-odd horses — both thoroughbreds and quarter horses.

"I've just got too many of them, and I don't have time to fool with them," said Holiman. He plans to auction off most of them May 30.

"I can't hire anybody to do it the way I think it ought to be done."

Among his horses and foals are "some grey mares and grey geldings. They are really the best I've got."

Holiman has some horses with "race-horse potential" and some from the same bloodline — but "way back" — as Alysheba, the Midland-owned thoroughbred colt which recently won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness Stakes.

"I've never raced any horses," said Holiman. But he did play polo in the late 1930s and in the 1940s.

And for awhile, he was troubleshooting electrical problems on U.S. Army Air Corps aircraft in World War II. He had given up part-time calf roping to take up part-time polo playing.

"I was good enough that people would pay me to ride their horses," Holiman recalled. "I enjoyed polo more than calf roping. I didn't have the money to play it like those guys in Midland."

He didn't fling himself headlong into rodeo sports "I bull-dogged one steer and decided that wasn't for me," he recalled of his teen-age years. "I got him."

Many years later, when he ceased to dare a hazardous ride, Holiman — to his surprise — got bucked.

"I've never been bucked off too many times," he said. But a brown gelding, Mean 'n' Lean Okie, twice threw him to the ground and knocked him out of whack.

Holiman, who has owned the Wagon Wheel Ranch since 1960, breaks horses in a circular pen which is made of cedar posts, railroad cross-ties and telephone pole crossarms.

"This pen — like it's built — has a psychological effect on them (horses)," he said. The pen's posts rise in a circular fashion like peaks and valleys

Davises preparing for final showdown

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — Barring a last-minute settlement, Cullen and Priscilla Davis return to court Tuesday for what looms as the final showdown in their long-playing legal saga of sex, money and murder.

The issue this time is less blood than money.

In a pair of wrongful death and personal injury civil suits, Mrs. Davis, 46, contends her ex-husband was the man in black who wounded her and killed her 12-year-old daughter in a 1976 shooting spree at the Davis mansion.

She is joined in the million-dollar wrongful death action by her second husband, Jack Wilborn, the father of the slain child.

In 1977, an Amarillo jury acquitted Davis in the death of Andrea Wilborn, his stepdaughter, but that verdict carries no legal significance in the civil suits.

According to principals in the case, Davis, 53, proposed to settle the civil suits for a total of $100,000. But Mrs. Davis and Wilborn rejected the offer as "outrageous and insulting."

Davis settled out of court last year with Bubba Gavrel, 33, who was critically wounded and permanently crippled in the shootings. Neither side disclosed the terms of that agreement.

Dallas lawyer John Collins, who represents Wilborn, said over the weekend he saw little chance of a settlement but that a pretrial ruling by Judge Claude Williams "has to influence the settlement posture."

He referred to a decision by the judge to severely limit the defendant's lawyers from exploiting Mrs. Davis' past lifestyle.

"It's just as simple as it can be," Williams told Steve Sumner, a Davis lawyer. "The plaintiffs say Davis shot these people. You say he didn't."

In the Amarillo murder trial, a defense team headed by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston attacked Mrs. Davis' credibility through her sex life, her use of pain killing drugs and her association with what Haynes called "scuzzies and scalawags."

Sumner, a member of that defense team and now the lead attorney, maintains Mrs. Davis' past is relevant and crucial to his case.

"This jury has a right to know the real Priscilla Davis and what her lifestyle was like at the time," he said.

Defense lawyers say Mrs. Davis was not blameless in the mansion shootings because she placed herself and her daughter "in a continuing atmosphere of potential peril by virtue of their lifestyle and personal relationships, as well as the lifestyle of her live-in companion, Stanford Farr."

Farr also was killed in the shootings.

In a ruling favorable to the defendant, the judge said he would not allow indiscriminate mention of Davis' role in a bizarre murder-for-hire scheme in 1978.

That case involved tape recorded meetings between Davis and an FBI informant in which they discussed killing several people, Mrs. Davis among them. In 1979, a Fort Worth jury acquitted Davis of those charges.

Said Bob Gibbins, one of Mrs. Davis' lawyers:

"The ultimate issue is No. 1, did Cullen Davis do the shooting? And No. 2, if he did, then what are the damages? If they're going to try Priscilla again...then it's going to be a free-for-all."

Unlike criminal prosecutors, plaintiff attorneys need not prove a defendant's guilt "beyond a reasonable doubt" but by a less difficult "preponderance of the evidence."

Furthermore, they must convince only 10 of 12 jurors to win a civil verdict while a unanimous jury is required in criminal cases.

"It's not completely out of the question that we could settle, but I'm not at all optimistic," Sumner said last week.

A 1980 convert to Christianity, Davis was once the richest man ever to stand trial for murder in this country. He since has seen his business empire collapse under the pressure of tumbling oil prices.

Creditors forced the oil-related Davis dynasty, Kendavis Industries, into bankruptcy last year and recently ousted Cullen and his brother Ken from the company hierarchy.

Although Sumner insists his client is financially strapped, the extent of Cullen's private fortune is a subject of broad speculation.

So, too, is the story he will tell from the witness stand about his activities the night of Aug. 2, 1976. Davis did not testify in Amarillo but has said he dined alone that evening and attended a movie, "The Bad News Bears."

He said he was at home before midnight and in bed with his mistress when the shootings occurred.

Known to a generation of Texans as simply Cullen and Priscilla, the graying Fort Worth millionaire and his flashy blonde ex-wife have traded accusations in courtrooms from the Panhandle to the Gulf Coast.

On the night of Aug. 2, 1976, in the midst of nasty and prolonged divorce proceedings, a gunman dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig invaded the secluded $6 million Davis mansion.

He shot Andrea first, then shot and wounded Priscilla, who had returned to the mansion with Farr, 30, who was and killed.

Military bugler played taps at 10,354 funerals

EL PASO (AP) — After playing taps for 10,354 military funerals, Army Staff Sgt. Duane Finch is laying down his horn forever. The daily practice and the dedication, he says, "take so much out of you."

"I've quit playing completely," said the career bandsman and bugler. "I don't conceive of ever playing taps again, or even the horn again."

The saddest of all those thousands of funerals, Finch said, were the ones "when nobody (was) there. Just the coffin. I hate doing those."

Finch, 39, is on final leave from Fort Bliss while awaiting his July 1 retirement.

His parents gave him a trumpet for high school graudation and he used the horn during his entire 20-year Army career. It still looks like new.

The Maynard Ferguson model from the Franklin Holton Co. of Elkhart, Wis., has a large bore that Finch says gives a more quality sound.

The trumpet has been his "bugle" for playing the mournful taps at all those funerals, conducted in all kinds of weather.

"You have to play it in any kind of temperature," he said. "I had to go up to Fairbanks, Alaska, once to play and it was 38 below, with a wind chill factor of 75 below."

"I played from a staff car. Just rolled the window down and played from about 75 feet away," Finch said, recalling that he had no choice.

"I checked out my horn before the funeral and I found the spit valve froze up in seconds," he said, giving a bug-eyed imitation of a bugler trying to blow a blocked-up horn.

"I've played in wind, rain, hail, sleet and fog," he said. "The only weather I haven't played in is a hurricane, tornado or a typhoon."

His most unusual service, he said, was when he had to play for two funerals at once in the same cemetery. That was at Fort Bliss, where he has been with the 62nd U.S. Army Band for most of the past 12 years.

"At Fort Bliss National Cemetery, they schedule funerals 30 minutes apart," he said. "On that day, the one on the east side was 15 minutes late, the one on the west side 15 minutes early.

"They pulled the caskets out at the same time," said Finch, whose central location was between both services. "It was very quiet. There was no wind at all. I was watching both ways and saw the salutes go to both firing squads at about the same time.

"They fired...pop, pop, pow, pop. And when both firing squads finished, I faced between them and started playing as loudly as I could," he said. "And when I was finished, the lieutenants in charge of both funerals came over and thanked me."

Finch said he has never failed to make it through the playing of taps, although he admits he's missed a few notes.

He has played taps from Korea to Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia, Finch said.

At Arlington during the late 1960s, when hundreds of young men were being killed in Vietnam each month, Finch played taps for about 1,000 services during several months of duty, he said.

"They did eight or nine a day there, six days a week," said Finch, who is studying for a degree in business retail management at El Paso Community College.

Finch says two of his most memorable services were a memorial service in Korea for General of the Army Omar Bradley in 1981 and a funeral earlier this year at Fort Bliss for a man Finch said had been the next to last surviving veteran of the Spanish-American War.

Completed budget not expected this session

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Deadlocked on virtually every aspect of the budget, members of the House-Senate budget negotiating team said Sunday they see no way to write a budget during this legislative session.

"If we keep keep going at this rate, we'll be lucky to get one by Christmas," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

With an agreement nowhere in sight, both sides said a special session this summer cannot be avoided. The House-Senate conference committee met for hours Sunday, yet failed to reach an agreement on any major area of the budget as lawmakers moved into the final week of the regular session.

Rep. Jim Rudd, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and the leader of the House team, said it's clear no tax bill will come out of the regular session to fund the spending bill, making the conference committee's deliberations pointless.

Asked why they can't come to an accord, Rudd, said, "The harder question is how can we." Nevertheless, the committee will keep working "to make the next time smoother," said Rudd, D-Brownfield.

Sen. Grant Jones, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and chief Senate negotiator, said he finally is conceding that the committee's work won't be completed. "I get the impression Rudd is determined to not get a bill out."

Jones, D-Temple, grew angry when asked why he has lost his optimism. "Have you been in there, have you watched?" he asked. "Then you asked me why my optimism has eroded."

The House, mindful of Gov. Bill Clements repeated threats to veto any tax increase beyond the extension of the "temporary" sales and gasoline taxes enacted last summer, wants deeper cuts in the budget. Without a leaner budget, representatives said any new tax measure would be too much for the conservative House.

Odessa council schedules hearing on private jail

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The City Council Tuesday is scheduled to hold a public hearing to determine if a specific use permit should be granted to convert the old Gulf Oil building into a privately run minimum security jail.

The proposal of local contractor Jimmy Moore already has been rejected by the City Planning Commission by a 3-to-1 vote.

Moore wants to remodel the 26,000 square foot structure, last used as a dormitory facility for Odessa College atheletes, to house up to 125 inmates. The converted facility in the 900-block of West 2nd Street, he estimates, would employ as many as 20 people and would have a payroll of more than $400,000.

According to Moore's proposal, the facility would primarily house prisoners under contract with the Texas Department of Corrections, but might also be used to confine county or federal prisoners.

The inmates of the facility, Moore has said, would be low-risk, non-violent types.

Earlier this year, council members rejected a specific use permit that would have converted the Sands Motel on East 2nd Street into a halfway house for state prison parolees. The rejection was prompted partly by protests from residents and business people in the general area.

Council members subsequently drafted and approved an ordinance that provides basic guidelines for establishment of halfway houses and minimum security facilities.

At least two new city council members, Jim Perkins and Craig Heap, have indicated they oppose construction of any jails within the city limits of Odessa.

Mayor Don Carter, who has said he has been working on a proposal for establishment of a minimum security facility in Ector County as another facet of economic development, has indicated he'll judge Moore's proposal when it's presented to the council.

Council members Barney Barnett and Dub Kennedy have indicated they'll reserve judgment of Moore's proposal until they've had a chance to study it.

Precinct 4 Councilman Jaime Rodriguez has predicted the proposal will fail to gain council approval.

DEATHS

City Council to consider taxing phone bill

From Staff Reports

Midlanders could see their telephone bills increase with a 1 percent sales tax being considered by the City Council at 9 a.m. Tuesday in the Council Chambers.

Although the 1 percent sales tax will add more to each individual phone bill, City Manager Fred Poe, said the tax could generate up to $200,000 extra for the city coffers.

Cities around the state will be considering taking advantage of the extra tax approved during the 1985 state legislative session.

If approved, the tax would go into effect in October, Poe said.

The state already assesses a 5 percent sales tax on all phone bills, he added.

The council will also consider hiring a firm to prepare a report and right-of-way description for the realignment of Lamesa Road north of U.S. Highway 80.

The engineering report, which could cost up to $16,000 and take 60 days to prepare, will examine the cost of connecting Lamesa Road to Interstate 20, said Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor.

The connection is part of a recommendation by the Eastside Economic Development Task Force to boost traffic and business in east Midland.

The council will also consider a resolution temporarily changing Scharbauer Drive and "A" Street to Scharbauer Drive and Alysheba from June 4 to 6.

Alysheba is owned by the Midland Scharbauer family and has won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. If Alysheba wins the Belmont Stakes on June 6, he will have captured the coveted Triple Crown of horse racing.

COWMAN

"It looks wild and buggery," Holiman said of the 35-foot-diameter pen. "The poles are so high, he (the horse) doesn't think he can jump over it" and doesn't even try.

The cowman sports a Western hat and works about the pasture and ambles about the store in his high-top cowboy boots. He stuffs the pants' legs of his denim blue jeans into the boot tops.

And like his father, Joe Marion Holiman, he's a practical man. His father, a cowman, moved the family from Comanche and Hamilton counties in Central Texas to west of San Angelo to find better times during the dreary days of the Depression. Holiman helped out on the 17½-day trail drive in which sheep, goats, cattle and horses were moved over the rolling hills and prairie land.

"I mean, times were tough," Holiman recalled. "If you had a job that paid 35 to 50 cents per day, you were doing pretty good." It was dry out West and there wasn't very much grass, but he figured "it was better than where we were."

"My Daddy was a good cowhand wherever he went," Holiman said. Years later, after he was established in business and agriculture, Holiman foresaw the losing side of farming while operating a spread near Fort Stockton.

"I saw in 1967 that it (farming) was going to break me if I didn't quit, so I quit." He kept the banks and the insurance companies from encroaching on his land, which he still holds — five sections in Pecos County.

Holiman diversified.

In the mid-1960s, he pioneered "computerized bookkeeping." He operated data-processing businesses in Fort Stockton, Midland and Odessa, and his wife managed a clothing store in Odessa.

And he got so involved in computers and bookkeeping that he almost made "one of the biggest mistakes" ever in his ambition to really make it big in computers.

"I offered to trade this ranch for a computer — even-steven," Holiman said, and seemed startled that he would have even considered the notion.

His idea was to swap the land for an IBM 360 Model 30 computer. "That thing would have wore out and become obsolete, and my land would have been gone."

"They didn't take me up on it, and I'm thankful for that. It was a big mistake on my part even to think about it."

Laws of nature predict behavior

Copley News Service

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. — Poets, searching for their colorful metaphors to describe an emotional scene, have often resorted to the physical world. The mob, waiting only for a spark to ignite it. Or a calmness likened to a forest pool. Or a pressing crowd like water rushing downstream.

Now, scientists at Los Alamos National Laboratory here say such comparisons also provide a handy tool in predicting human behavior.

"We can't predict exactly what will happen in a specific group, but we can determine the most probable consequences of an event," explains Frank Harlow, a theoretical physicist and Fellow in the Los Alamos Theoretical Division.

Harlow and Don Sandoval, an engineering student at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces who has worked summers at the Los Alamos facility, have taken mathematical and computer models used in fluid dynamics, simulating turbulence in liquids, and applied them to the fluid nature of people in crowds. Their equations represent characteristics of the real world.

"We show how excitement can spread through a crowd," Harlow explained. "People who weren't interacting suddenly begin to interact. Similarly, fear or some other negative feeling can spread and break up the group."

In preparing their model, "the researchers focused on a handful of crucial personality traits, individual levels of excitement and fear, susceptibility to a group evoking those qualities, the relative position in a crowd and the walking speed.

The model, they said, shows how the excitement of a loose group of people can be aroused by the haranguing of a speaker, the sound of sirens or the sight of flames.

"Attracted first" Harlow said, "are the people most susceptible to excitement. Others nearby respond similarly, influenced by how close they are to the action and how strongly their neighbors are responding. Within seconds, people who had nothing in common become interacting members of what Harlow calls a "mob."

It's not all just theory, or laboratory fun and games. Harlow points out that the model of mob behavior can have applications in studying other cause-effect sequences in the animal world, such as in schools of fish that swiftly change direction or in packs of dogs scavenging through garbage.

As for studying people, Harlow says he would like to include such traits as anger or loneliness.

The research on mob behavior, which is supported through the Los Alamos facility's internal Institutional Supporting Research and Development fund, was a spinoff of a program to develop new computational techniques in fluid dynamics, Harlow said.

The laboratory is operated by the University of California for the U.S. Department of Energy.

Parents' behavior affects children

By PAT YADON
Hearst News Service

Jane's mother told her again and again, "You really think you're something" in a way that taught Jane she was nothing. Jane grew up to consider herself a doormat, went through two or three marriages and had many social problems, said counselor Tanya Goldbeck.

Tom's father wanted him to lose weight, and he measured Tom's progress every day. He spanked the teen-ager when he gained weight and gave him a candy bar when he lost, said psychologist Curt Wills. Tom later committed suicide.

Sandra's parents punished her for wetting the bed by making her sleep on a rubber mattress with no covers. She tried to stay warm by covering herself with her waist-length hair. The punishement was not physically abusive, but denying the child and degrading her was emotionally abusive.

"If a child can't go to bed at night feeling loved, you have the makings of emotional abuse of that child," Wills said.

Probably 40 percent of America's children feel some effects of emotional trauma, Goldbeck said, adding that abusive parents seem to have become more widespread in the last 20 years. Parents are so busy with their own problems they do not notice their children are depressed, Goldbeck said. Single parents and fathers working two jobs or not working at all may take out their frustration on their children.

Many adults never learned how to raise or discipline children, and in their ignorance and hurry, they rely on the quickest methods to control their youngsters, Wills said. They use threats, force and aggression to produce children whose fear makes them outwardly deferential.

Of course, all parents occasionally snap at their kids or overreact when they are tired or frustrated. But true emotional abuse gives children the message that they are not worth anything, Goldbeck said. It causes intense feelings of discomfort and secondary problems such as withdrawal, aggression or acting out.

Many abusive adults intend to be good parents and are not aware of the damage they are doing, Goldbeck said. She cites four ways parents may emotionally abuse their children without realizing it.

■ Some parents are overly critical, so they think nothing the children do is quite good enough. Eventually the children want so bady to satisfy someone they seek immediate gratification, possibly in drugs or sex.

■ Parents who constantly argue at home can make a child feel responsible for the conflicts. He may feel so guilty he begins to blame himself for everything that happens.

■ Hostile, frustrated parents may yell their criticisms, telling children they are stupid or no good and never will amount to anything. People who constantly hear these labels often begin to believe them and act accordingly.

■ Parents who simply never find time for their kids probably do not realize how their neglect affects children. The majority of children Goldbeck talks with say the one thing they want most is more time with their fathers.

"Our kids are raising themselves," Goldbeck said.

People who need help learning to raise their children can find parenting classes and counseling, she said.

"If you find yourself into that very thing that you despised and disliked (in your childhood), then get somebody to help you out," she said.

"When we as parents degrade children and put them down, assassinate their frail egos, they grow up being unhappy, sad individuals who overcompensate, or lash out and become aggressive, hostile adults," Wills said.

Victims of emotional abuse often suffer from such poor self-esteem they feel helpless and they limit their success in life by setting low goals, Goldbeck said. And frequenly the victims turn around and abuse their own children, for the same reason their parents abused them — they never learned any other way.

Types of behavior signal abuse

Hearst News Service

Four types of child behavior could signal emotional abuse if they stem from the parents' behavior:

■ An overly compliant, shy, passive, undemanding child may have learned to escape abuse by not causing any trouble.

■ A demanding, aggressive child may have parents who are inconsistent and meet only some of his needs. He may become unusually frustrated and throw temper tantrums when he does no get what he wants.

■ Some children become overly adaptive; they are willing to be whatever the parent wants. They may switch roles and take on the parents' responsibilities or may become overly dependent if the parents want a baby.

■ Emotionally abused children may show developmental delays in motor or social skills.

Other subtle but noticeable behaviors that may signal a problem are: anxiety, repressed hostility, an inability to concentrate, stomach pains or other physical ills, a feeling of helplessness, flighty ideas or disjointed speech, counselor Tanya Goldbeck said. Other warning signs are: a tendency to withdraw or to act out, an increase in moodiness or whining, a sudden increase in needs for attention or in feeling disliked by everyone.

If a teacher, friend or clergyman notices these signs, he needs to talk to the parents or an adult who is close to the child, Goldbeck said. If the person thinks the problem is severe and that the parents are causing the behavior, he should report it to governmental authorities.

Adjusting to stepparents often difficult

Hearst News Service

Lori wanted to make her stepfather angry so he would leave — and let her mother and father get back together.

"I threw fits because I thought if I did, I could get my way," the 13-year-old says of a time five years ago when adjusting to a new family was out of the question. "I wanted everyone to argue because I was miserable and I wanted everyone else to be miserable."

Lori didn't get her way, but a broad metal smile crosses her face when she thinks back.

"He wouldn't get mad, but he wouldn't bend either."

The key to avoiding the puppet strings stepchildren like to attach to new-found moms and dads is determining whether what they're doing is just natural testing or a cover-up for deeper problems, say Karen and Vic Soares, remarriage ministers with the Catholic Diocese of Beaumont, Texas.

"Children play a lot of games to begin with, just to see how far they can get with their natural parents," says Soares, the stepfather Lori wanted nothing to do with when he married her mother. "As it turned out, Lori had some unfinished grievance work and was very angry at her parents for getting a divorce."

Because so many marriages break up because of child-related problems, counseling or exchanging ideas with blended families who already have experienced the rough times is helpful.

"Blended families are pretty new and are becoming more widespread," Mrs. Soares says. "And the children are getting into power games pitting one set of parents against the other because they view the new marriage as a loss."

One of the more common power plays is the "you're not my real mommy" game. This game is one that tests the new stepparent's authority. The countermove is to let the youngster know that he or she needs to obey you, the Soareses agree.

"Tell the child that you are an adult authority figure and when you apply the rules you speak with the same authority as their real parent," Mrs. Soares says.

It is equally important for the real parent to give the stepparent the authority, along with plenty of reinforcement, so the child has no next move.

Ultimatums about going to live with daddy are another common game. The best countermove is a solid, "No, you may not live with daddy." Then look for the real problem.

"We often know the games, but not the motives," Soares explains. "Manipulation of this sort is a way for a child to act out his feelings."

Mrs. Soares found her children would use the same ploy on their father when they were unhappy at his house on weekends.

"We called a family conference, including Karen and myself, her children, their father and their new stepmother," Soares says. "We sat the kids down in a line on the couch and let them know we weren't going to play the game, so if they had some problems with the situation, now was the time to talk about them."

Children try manipulation and exhibit regressive behavior such as bed wetting, thumb sucking, bad grades and delinquent behavior when they are unhappy with the new relationship, he adds. Communication is the key to avoiding the manipulation game, but if problems are deep-seated, counseling may be necessary.

But children aren't the sole game players in a lot of blended families. A good example of parents manipulating children is the "Disneyland Dad" syndrome.

"The non-custodial parent will have his kids for 24 to 48 hours and that whole time they may be out at the mall, eating this and that and having a blast," Mrs. Soares explains. "They don't have to do chores or homework."

The Disneyland Dad isn't presenting the real world, she adds, making it tougher on the custodial parent.

"You can't be negative when you try to explain why you can't be the same way. You have to stay neutral," Mrs. Soares says. "The best answer we've found is to say you have a responsibility to raise them properly and teach them right or wrong."

It's important to remember that children have a natural affinity toward testing, and if the signs point to deeper problems, they could be hiding something. Mrs. Soares says counseling is a valid way of approaching a problem when the regular ways don't work.

DEAR ABBY

Reader defends noisy family weddings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from "The Rev. Farrell" who objected to babies crying in church during the wedding ceremony.

Lighten up, padre! The "sacred ceremony" has a 50-50 chance of ending in divorce anyway. My husband and I have three small screamers of our own, and I recall that there were many little ones crying at our wedding — and some big ones, too, including the bride, who sobbed right along with them.

My point, Abby: Marriage is a family affair. Would the good reverend disallow wheelchairs, arthritics with canes, obese bridesmaids or pimpled-face ushers if he thought the aesthetic perfection of the sacred ritual was in danger of being marred?

If this so-called man of God feels that crying babies are "an invasion of the sacred ceremony," he is denying those small family members (and their parents) the joy of sharing in this beautiful tradition as a family. Sign me ... ONE OF THE FLOCK

DEAR ONE: Ewe must be kidding. Wheelchairs, obese bridesmaids or pimpled-face ushers would in no way detract from the aesthetic perfection of the marriage ceremony, but any shepherd with half a brain would carry the bleating lamb out the door after the first bleat.

DEAR ABBY: We heah in Na Hampsha is very disappointed in youwa reply to "Appalled in Sacramento" (her son's school teacha had written across his essay, "Is this original? What does this got to do with insects taking over?") "Appalled" wanted to correct the teacher's grammar and have her son return it to the teacher. You rejected that idea.

We's very concerned that ouwa kids learn correct grammah.

Too many folks these days have a tough time communicatin' things right. We agree that the child should not hafta return the essay to the teacha, but it definitely ain't right for teachas of the English language to make such a big goof and let it go uncorrected.

Please reconsida your advice to skip it. — PRO-GRAMMAR, KEENE, N.H.

P.S. Please excuse ouwa careless erras.

DEAR PRO: I gotcher message. You and about 500 other readers objected to my advice to "skip it."

Take Two: The student's mother should take it up with the teacher personally instead of asking her son to return the essay with her corrections of the teacher's grammar. And if she finds that the teacher's "error" was an accurate indication of her English grammar skills, it should be called to the attention of the school principal. Teachers cannot teach what they do not know.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 35-year-old woman who has worked at the same desk for 12 years. I am not even what you would call a secretary; I control billing and inventory for a company.

I dread the month of April, and it's not because of the tax deadline. It's because of National Secretaries Week.

The owner of this company thinks he's God's gift to women. Because I am divorced, he assumes that I am man hungry. (I'm not.) I once needed a day off to take care of some personal business, so he let me off. The following week he told me I could "repay" him for the day of by meeting him at his beach house while his wife was out of town. Frankly, I wouldn't touch this man with a 10-foot pole, so I just told him I would have to ask my "boyfriend." Well, that blew out his candle in a hurry.

I love my job. The money is great, but this boss is the bad part of the job. Thank God for my imaginary boyfriend. — NO NAME IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR NO NAME: Should you ever misplace your 10-foot pole, be aware that your boss is guilty of sexul harassment.

Signs of new stability growing in world oil prices

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — The pace of oil exploration is showing signs of picking up again in the North Sea off this port city, following a slowdown brought on by last year's sudden slide in world petroleum prices.

The oil companies that put Norway on the oil map in the 1970s are proposing new drilling projects, and while they aren't predicting a new boom, some are advertising for workers again in the local newspapers.

This speedup reflects a growing confidence here and throughout the international oil industry that prices have stabilized and that the OPEC cartel is succeeding in gradually drying up the world oil glut.

"They have stabilized the boat at $18 a barrel," said Kari Thu, the mayor of Stavanger, a town whose 860-year history is dotted with cycles of boom and bust in fishing, shipping and shipbuilding.

"We'd like the price to be higher, but we can get by now," she added.

Last summer the price of oil dipped below $10 a barrel. That helped most Western economies, but it posed a serious threat to future oil development in Norway and many other nations.

Analysts and oil industry officials in Stavanger and elsewhere say they cannot be sure that the downward trend in oil prices — which began in 1982 with the onset of an oil glut — has come to an end. Yet signs are growing that prices will hold at least through the end of 1987.

"There is some light for us now," said Tore Ulleberg, a spokesman in Stavanger for Amoco Norway Oil Co., which is considering drilling four additional wells at its existing Valhall oil field.

Ulleberg's cautious optimism seems to be shared by others in the industry, which contends that many oil drilling prospects in the North Sea's harsh environment are uneconomic when oil fetches less than $18 a barrel.

"You can see here that we have the feeling that stability has returned, at least for the short term," said Oddeinar Foss-Skiftesvik, an official at the Norwegian Oil Industry Association in Stavanger, representing the companies that run Norway's offshore oil fields.

Oil prices on the open market have been hovering around $18 a barrel since March. In recent days, prices for top-quality grades of U.S. and British North Sea crudes have broken the $19 mark.

"The general opinion among people I've talked to inside and outside of OPEC is that people feel relatively comfortable with current prices," said Paul McDonald, who follows the oil industry from London for the investment firm of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. "They feel there's a reasonable equilibrium."

The current stability in oil markets is due mainly to a decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries last December to cut back its oil production and enforce a base price of $18 a barrel. Before that, OPEC had been trying to win a bigger share of the market by selling its oil at deeply discounted prices.

"The market is quite happy with the OPEC strategy and believes it can be sustained," said Stephen Turner, an oil industry analyst at the investment firm of Wood Mackenzie and Co. in Edinburgh, Scotland.

OPEC oil ministers are due to open their regular summer meeting June 25 in Vienna, Austria.

Analysts believe the cartel leaders will reaffirm their December accord and possibly adjust it by sanctioning a modest increase in the members' production quotas or by increasing prices slightly.

King Fahd of Saudi Arabia declared on May 19 that his country, which produces more oil than any nation except the Soviet Union and the United States, favored freezing OPEC's oil prices for at least two years.

While many forces in the oil market are now working in OPEC's favor — including a slow but steady rise in world demand for oil — it remains uncertain how long the cartel can keep prices on an even keel.

"We have to admit that the present relative stability of oil prices is extremely fragile," the Norwegian oil minister, Arne Oeien, said in a speech to his counterparts from 20 other Western nations May 11.

Even a relatively small increase in world oil production "would inevitably lead to a dramatic drop in prices" and new turmoil in the oil industry, he said.

In a break with the policies of other Western oil producing nations, Norway last January decided to force the companies operating its North Sea fields to reduce production for six months. The purpose was to support OPEC's strategy of raising prices by limiting output.

The government is due to decide in late June whether to extend its production limits.

Although the oil companies operating Norway's fields have said they oppose government restrictions on output, they have welcomed tax-relief measures implemented last January in hopes of spurring new oil exploration.

Pennzoil investors optimistic about settlement

By LEE A. DANIELS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Pennzoil Co.'s stock moved sharply higher late last week as investors became optimistic that the company was likely to get a favorable settlement in its multi-billion-dollar dispute with Texaco Inc.

Those hopes were based on the disclosure that Robert Holmes a Court, an Australian financier, had acquired 6.4 percent of Texaco Inc.'s shares. Holmes a Court, a shrewd investor known to pursue undervalued companies, said that he had bought the stock as an investment only. But many Pennzoil investors appeared to believe that his presence would increase the pressure on Texaco's management to settle the dispute.

Still, several analysts and legal experts questioned whether Holmes a Court intended to force a settlement — or even had the legal power to do so.

Pennzoil's shares jumped $4.625 Thursday, to $85.25 a share, on the New York Stock Exchange, while Texaco's shares fluctuated between $37 and $38 a share before closing at $37.50, unchanged.

Texaco has been fighting a $10.53 billion damage award resulting from its purchase of the Getty Oil Co. Pennzoil has repeatedly said that it would not settle with Texaco for less than $4 billion. However, Texaco has said that amount is far too much.

Oil industry analysts, arbitrageurs and bankruptcy experts said that the situation was complicated because Texaco had sought protection under Chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Code, which means that the courts and creditors have a substantial say in how the company is operated.

"There's no ban against the purchase or sale of stock of a bankrupt company," said Jack Gross, a bankruptcy lawyer at the New York firm of Stroock, Stroock & Lavan, referring to Holmes a Court's stock purchase. "But if he were to acquire a controlling block, could he replace the Texaco management and board?"

Gross said the question could not be answered until it came before the bankruptcy court. But he said the courts have traditionally been very reluctant to allow a debtor company's management to be replaced.

Meanwhile, Harvey Miller, Texaco's chief bankruptcy attorney, said that Holmes a Court "can't force Texaco to a settlement."

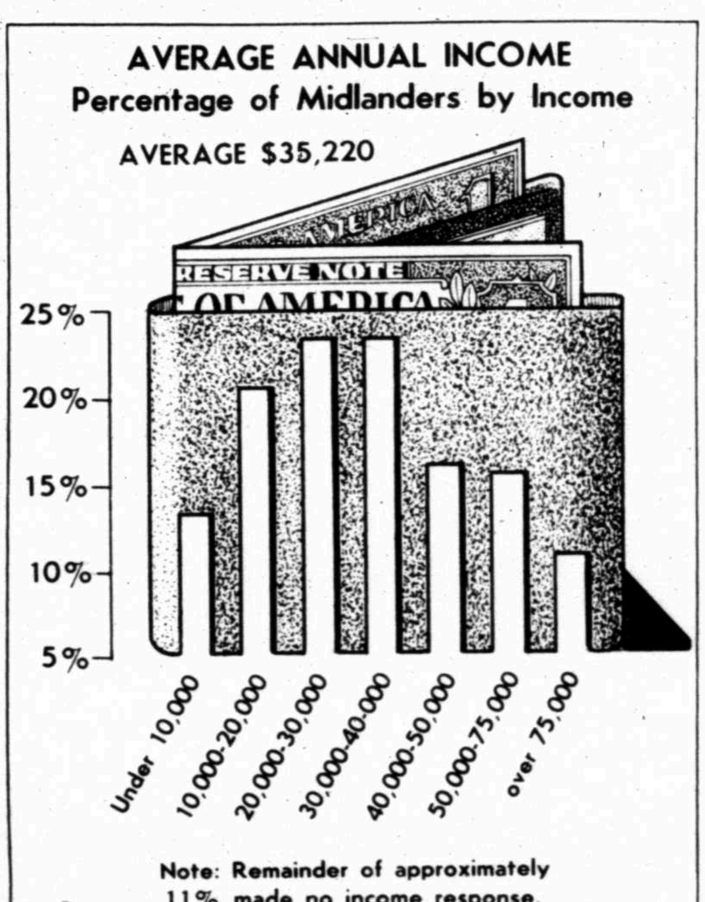

"He's a shareholder," Miller said. "Any settlement would have to be approved by the Bankruptcy Court, which would have to consider all the ramifications of a settlement."

Frank R. Kennedy, a professor and bankruptcy expert at the University of Michigan Law School, said that even if Holmes a Court held a much larger stake in Texaco, his ability to influence the company or the bankruptcy proceedings was "not likely to be significant for some time."

"Stockholders are at the bottom of the totem pole in bankruptcy proceedings, and they've frequently been held to have no interest before the court," Kennedy said.

"Texaco's management is now beholden first to its creditors, not to stockholders," he said. "And while it's possible that he could influence the creditors' committee, it's not a great possibility."

Statistics guage market

Alongside oil, the most precious natural resource of the Permian Basin remains its people — the gritty individuals who survive boom and bust — the families who make up the backbone of the West Texas economy.

Midland-Odessa Pulse has compiled a comprehensive tracking study of the consumers residing in Midland and Odessa, encompassing the aspects of overall behavior, attitudes, media habits and purchasing habits.

Although there is nothing average about Midland citizens, this median-based trend analysis of marketing data provides businesses with an invaluable key to making decisions that invariably will result in improved profitability.

The survey statistically reflects that the average Midlander is caucasion, 42-43 years of age, lives in a freestanding dwelling, and has lived in the area for almost 16 years. A majority of the respondents are married with an average annual family income of $35,000. Over half the participants have children living at home, with the average age being approximately 9-10 years.

Further exacting and significant details of the respondent analysis are available through Pulse.

United to raise fares

NEW YORK (NYT) — United Airlines, the nation's largest air carrier, will raise fares across the nation by $15 for one-way first-class flights and by $10 for one-way unrestricted coach flights, effective June 3.

United said the increases were necessary because of rising fuel prices. But airline analysts said the move was intended to take advantage of increases in passenger loads.

Candace Browning, the airline analyst for Wertheim Schroder, a Wall Street brokerage agency said, "United is looking at the strength of traffic and advanced bookings. When demand goes up you raise the price."

Analysts noted that throughout the industry, passenger volume on domestic flights in April was 18 percent higher than in April 1986.

United intiated the most recent round of nationwide fare increases April 11 when it raised one-way first-class fares by $15 and one-way unrestricted coach fares $10. All the major carriers instituted similar fare increases.

The major airlines were studying United's action Tuesday.

"It's a trial balloon to see if the other carriers will match them," Robert Joedicke, the airline analyst for Shearson Lehman Brothers said.

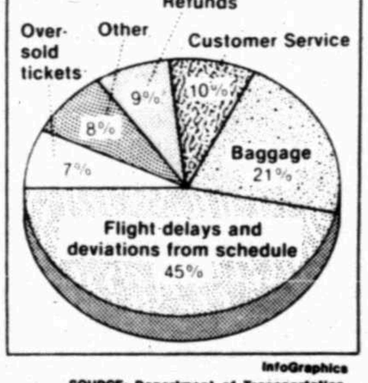

United's fare increases will come on the heels of increases in heavily discounted tickets offered by many airlines. Continental Airlines has announced that it would raise the fares in its "Maxsaver" program by 10 to 12 percent in most markets. Those increases will take effect May 21. Other airlines say they also will increase their deep-discount fares.

Airline complaints

Forty-five percent of the 1,903 complaints about airlines received by the Department of Transportation during April 1987 concerned deviations from flight schedules. Continental Airlines was by far the greatest offender of the air carriers, receiving more than 25 complaints per 100,000 passengers.

GM's plan for Saturn: few sellers, more profit

By JOHN HOLUSHA
New York Times News Service

DETROIT — The General Motors Corp. is expected to announce next week that it will try a marketing strategy pioneered by Honda, Hyundai and other automobile importers when it begins naming dealers for cars produced by its Saturn Corp., people familiar with its plans said.

Instead of appointing large numbers of dealers in an effort to force competition among dealers, and thereby increasing sales, GM will name relatively few Saturn dealers. That plan is intended to insure that each dealer will have a high level of sales, according to the sources.

A spokesman for Saturn confirmed that a dealer announcement is scheduled for next Wednesday.

Although Saturn has been scaled back from its ambitious early goals, it remains an important project for the company, top GM officials maintain. When it was first announced in late 1983, GM officials said new technology and an innovative labor agreement would permit Saturn to compete profitably with the lowest-priced of small imported cars.

With the new wave of low-priced cars from South Korea, Yugoslavia and Brazil entering the American market, GM can no longer make that claim. Instead, executives say, the Saturn cars will be priced to compete with such models as the Toyota Corolla and the Honda Accord, which sell in the $9,000-to-$14,000 range.

Because there will be only one Saturn model when sales begin in late 1990 or early 1991, questions had been raised about whether dealers would be able to sell enough cars to make a profit.

In exchange for promising to appoint only a few dealers in a metropolitan area, GM will evidently insist that dealers build new facilities for Saturn. Fewer dealerships, it is thought, would assure that each dealer had enough sales to justify the investment. For example, some GM officials have said that Detroit, which is the nation's sixth-largest metropolitan area, will have only one or two Saturn dealerships.

GM could have held down dealers' costs by permitting them to sell the Saturn cars at existing dealerships, along with other brands. That is an approach taken by Yugo, Suzuki and some other importers. But this could lessen the impact of a new brand, which would be competing with other, more familiar models in the same showroom.

GM officials have said they would give existing GM dealers with high consumer-satisfaction rankings the first chance to qualify for the Saturn franchises.

In the early stages of the project, there had been concern among dealers that GM would try to bypass the franchise system and set up its own retail operations. The company said that Saturn dealers would be franchised, but that it planned a different arrangement from that involving current dealerships.

Ex-distribution date watershed in stock split

On Mar. 31, I received a letter from the company whose stock I had sold saying that, on Feb. 6, the board of directors had voted a five-for-four stock split to stockholders of record Mar. 16. Enclosed was a certificate for some shares and a check for a fractional share.

The broker wants the certificate I received in the mail. I do not believe the company would have sent it to me, if I was not a stockholder of record on Mar. 16. Do I have to give up that certificate?

A. We'll start with the premise that you are dealing with an honest broker, as the vast majority are. (That should calm down some brokers who claim this column is unduly harsh on their fraternity.)

You're vague about exactly when the stock was sold. You'll find that listed as the "trade date" on the confirmation the broker sent you.

Assuming the trade date was before Mar. 10, you're not entitled to that certificate or the check for the fractional share you received.

In the normal course of market operations, that stock went "ex-distribution" at the opening of trading Mar. 10, the fourth business day before the record date. Anyone who sold the stock before that date was not entitled to the additional shares resulting from the stock split.

Also, on the ex-distribution date, the value of the distribution — in this case one share for every four owned — automatically is deducted from the stock's market value. The market price of that stock should have dropped 25 percent — give or take a bit for the ups and downs in trading — at the opening Mar. 10.

Diet Pill System Sweeping U.S.

Super Dream Pill
Guaranteed Weight Loss

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — According to a review of customers' files, here's what people are saying about the amazing, vastly improved "new version" of the world famous Dream Pill System for fast, guaranteed weight loss featuring Super Lite Dreams tablets:

"I lost 25 lbs. with a 30 day supply." Mrs. J.N.S., Ft. Payne, AL.

"Losing 1 lb. per day." Mr. J.G., Pineville, KY.

"I've lost 34 lbs. and I'm still losing." Mrs. J.K., Garden Grove, CA.

"I have been on Dream Pill for one month and feel great . . . have lost 27 lbs. Mr. A.D., Anadarko, OK.

The System's Dream Pill combines two natural substances called L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Diet researchers believe that growth hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail.

Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat as much as they want — and still be thin and wiry.

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. Much to her amazement, while taking L-arginine for its healing effects on a broken foot, Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Fickle fortune favors Unser in Indy 500

By MIKE HARRIS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The fickle fortunes of racing unbelieveably turned against Mario Andretti and Roberto Guerrero and gave Al Unser a record-tying fourth Indianapolis 500 victory Sunday.

"Lady Luck has to run your way sometimes, and this was one of those times," said the 47-year-old Unser, who replaced his brother, Bobby, a retired three-time winner, as the oldest Indy champion by nine months.

For most of the day, though, it seemed that luck would finally favor the long-suffering Andretti.

To the delight of the 400,000 or so fans, Andretti was dominating the race like no one since 1930 through 176 laps.

IT APPEARED nothing, not even his own renowned bad luck, could cheat him. It did, anyway. Incredibly, the fuel system in his Lola failed just 60 miles from the end; more frustration and bitter disappointment for Andretti since his only Indy victory in 1969.

"The fuel system just pitched," he said. "The thing backfired, so we brought it in and fuel was pouring out. It was a seal or something stupid like that.

"I thought I was in command. Everything ran perfect all day and then," he paused for several seconds, "another frustration."

Unser, who started the month without a ride and got into the race only because Danny Ongais was injured in a crash during practice, held off Guerrero in a four-lap sprint to the finish following the last of 10 caution periods.

HE AVERAGED 162.175 mph, covering the 500 miles in 3 hours, 4 minutes, 59.147 seconds. There were only six minor crashes or spins, but a spectator died after being hit in the head by a tire from one incident.

Guerrero, who gained the lead when Andretti pulled into the pits on lap 178 of the 200-lap event, also found unexpected trouble.

His car stalled while leaving pit road after a routine stop on lap 183. Unser, down a lap at the time, caught up and roared into a lead he kept for the last 18 laps.

"When I came in, I couldn't get the car out of gear," said Guerrero, who has completed 798 of a possible 800 laps in his four Indy starts and never has finished worse than fourth. "The clutch was giving us problems. I tried to start it up, but the engine stalled on it.

"The car was working well and we didn't need tires, so we just wanted to make a quick stop for fuel. Sometimes, those quick stops don't turn out the way you hope."

BOBBY UNSER was the color commentator on ABC's live telecast of the race and was in tears when he told the millions in the TV audience: "The Unser family now has a four-time winner."

A.J. Foyt is the only other four-time winner in 71 years of Indy.

"It's hard to believe," Unser said. "It's something you dream about, but it seemed it wouldn't come true because of all the problems. This one is more special."

He also won in 1970 and 1971 — the last man to win back-to-back Indys — and 1978.

"The older you get, the more you learn to appreciate it," he said in Victory Lane, where he was joined by his son, Al Jr., who finished fourth Sunday. "The older you get, the harder it gets, too. It's not that easy."

Unser didn't get his ride as the third driver on the Penske Racing team until three days before the second and final weekend of qualifications. He was given the car after Speedway medical officials ruled that Ongais, who crashed in practice the previous week, would not be cleared to drive again this month.

UNSER, whose 39 Indy-car victories are third on the all-time list behind Foyt's 67 and Andretti's 48, was seemingly without a chance in the race on the 176th lap.

That was when Andretti's car slowed after leading 170 laps, the fifth most in Indy history.

"I couldn't catch him. There wasn't anything I could do to Mario at all," Unser said.

As for Guerrero, Unser said, "I knew he was going to be a handful."

Andretti, who wound up ninth, still played a part in the finish, stalling on the track on lap 193 and bringing out the final caution flag.

Guerrero gave chase when the green flag came out on lap 197, but Unser, driving a Cosworth-powered 1986 March for the elite team of Roger Penske, pulled steadily away. He beat Guerrero to the finish line by 4.49 seconds.

"I just told myself I wasn't going to count the laps. I was just going to run it as fast as I could," Unser said.

Sport Briefs

Rodriquez, Barr, Geddes golf winners

OKLAHOMA CITY — Chi Chi Rodriguez shot 69—200 and held off a challenge by Bruce Crampton to claim a record-setting three-shot victory in the $250,000 Silver Pages Classic. Rodriguez's total was the lowest winning score on the PGA Seniors Tour this year. The previous best was a 15-under 201 by Billy Casper at the Arizona Classic. The victory was Rodriguez's third straight, tying the tour record set earlier this year by Bob Charles....

ATLANTA — Canadian Dave Barr birdied four straight holes on the back nine, breaking a tie with Masters champion Larry Mize, and finished with a 7-under-par 65 to win the Atlanta Classic with a 265. Barr fell into a tie with Mize with a bogey on 12. Barr then put together his birdie string that enabled him to pull away....

MASON, Ohio — Jane Geddes shot a 67—275 and outdueled Betsy King down the stretch to win the LPGA Championship by one shot, her second in the women's tour's major championships....

Tennis

DUESSELDORF, West Germany — John McEnroe walked off the court during the final at the World Team Cup and Czechoslovakia went on to defeat the U.S. 2-1. McEnroe was trailing 1-2 in the third set to Miloslav Mecir when he stunned a crowd of nearly 8,000 by walking off court. Umpire Richard Kaufmann immediately awarded the game, set and match to Mecir, who defeated McEnroe 7-5, 2-6, 2-1. McEnroe claimed that the reason for his departure was not over a dispute with Kaufman. McEnroe said he quit the match because of strained calf muscles....

GENEVA, Switzerland — Chris Evert beat Manuela Maleeva 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 in the the Geneva European finals....

STRASBOURG, France — Fourth-seeded Carling Bassett won the Strasbourg Grand Prix over Sandra Cecchini 6-4, 6-3....

Boxing

CORPUS CHRISTI — Former world champion Rocky Lockridge registered a sixth-round TKO of Dennis Cruz. Lockridge, 40-5, of Seattle, Wash., capped off the lackluster junior lightweight bout at the 1:05 mark of the sixth with two crushing right hands that sent Cruz down. Though Cruz, 22-3, regained his feet after the knockdown, referee A.D. "Spider" Bynum of Dallas waved the fight over. Corpus Christi's Lupe Suarez staged an upset when he KO'd former world amateur champion John John Molina 59 seconds into the ninth round of their scheduled 10-round junior lightweight bout.

Baseball

NAGOYA, Japan — Bob Horner hit a three-run homer Sunday in the Yakult Swallows' 4-3 loss Sunday to the Chunichi Dragons. Horner, who has seven home runs in his first 30 at-bats this season and is batting .400 through 11 games, went 1-for-4. He grounded out to third, struck out, fouled out to the catcher and hit the homer.

Rick Lancellotti hit a two-run homer as the Hiroshima Toyo Carp defeated the Yokohama Taiyo Whales 9-3 at Kanazawa.

Adams, Cox take first in Stampede

From Staff Reports

Craig Adams and Kelly Cox could do no wrong Sunday as they posted a six-under par 64 to win the rain-shortened Ranchland Hills Country Club Stampede partnership golf tournament with a two-day, seven-under par 133.

Saturday's heavy rains forced the tournament to be settled after 36 holes instead of the scheduled 54. It was the second year in a row that rain has plagued the tournament.

But Adams and Cox were up to the challenge on the soggy, but playable RHCC course. The pair produced birdies on the first two holes with a 10-foot putt on No. 1 and a 25-foot putt on No. 2.

The second hole at RHCC is the low point on the course and much of that hole was under water Saturday night. The RHCC course, however, became the hero of the day as it drained beautifully for Sunday's final round.

Adams and Cox were so dominant Sunday that they won the tournament by a full four strokes over the second place team of Arlen Dickson and David Reddout.

On Friday, Adams and Cox trailed first day leader Clay McDonald and Royce Woolard by one stroke after the McDonald-Woolard posted a first round 68. However, McDonald-Woolard fell to fourth place with a 72 Sunday.

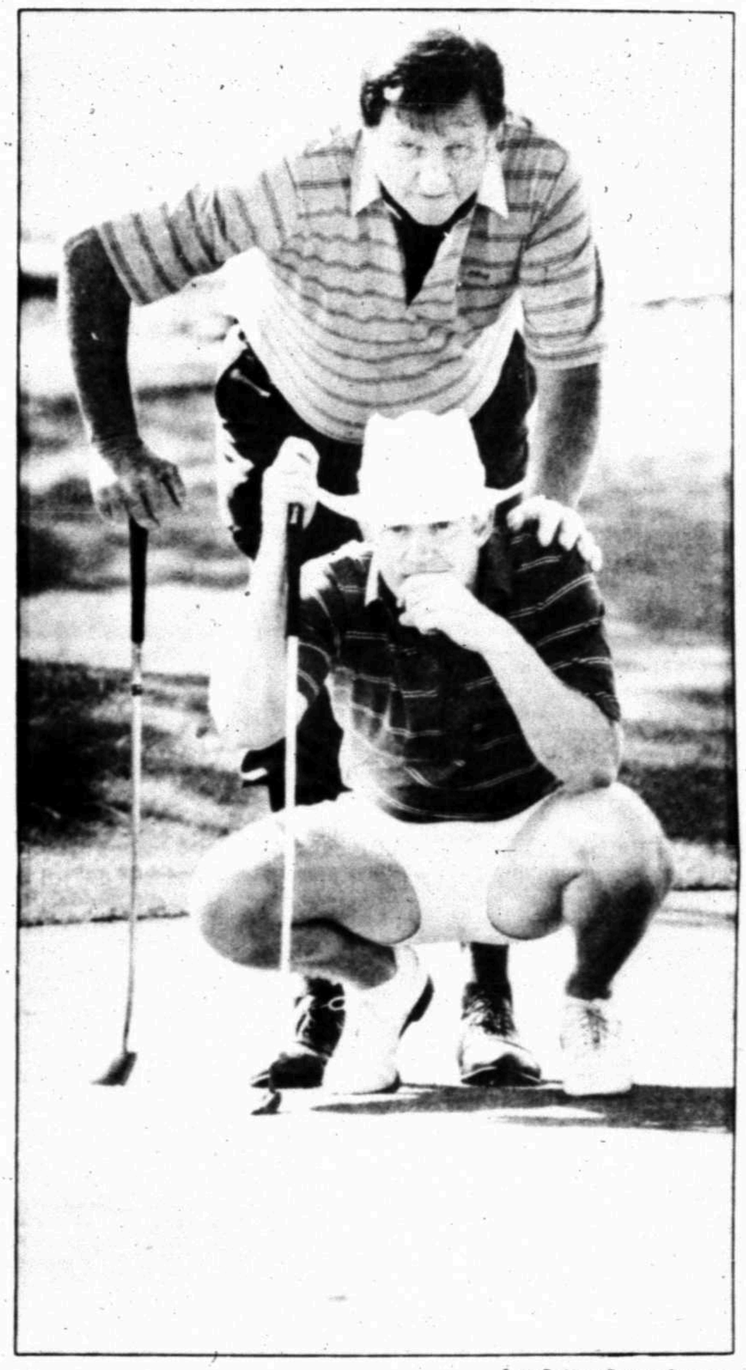

Third place went to Bob Young and Chris Brown, who recovered from Friday's 73 to post a 67 on Sunday. Harold Davidson and Ken Sewell placed fifth with a 140.

Over 200 golfers participated in the member-guest tournament.

Johnson spark as Pistons even Celtics

By HARRY ATKINS

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Vinnie Johnson scored 15 of his 25 points in the second quarter Sunday to spark Detroit to a 145-119 victory over the Boston Celtics as the Pistons evened the NBA Eastern Conference finals at 2-2.

Game 5 is scheduled for Tuesday night in Boston with Game 6 Thursday night back in the Silverdome where the Pistons have now won 10 straight games.

Adrian Dantley, who led the Pistons to victory in Game 3 with 25 points, led Detroit again, scoring 32 points, 23 in the second half.

Bill Laimbeer, who was ejected from Game 3 after a fight with Boston's Larry Bird, scored 20 points and pulled down 13 rebounds, while teammate Rick Mahorn had 17 points and 17 rebounds.

Bird, who refused Laimbeer's hand at the opening tip, was booed by the 27,387 fans every time he touched the ball. Bird responded with 17 points for the weary Celtics who were playing their sixth game in nine days.

Sam Vincent led Boston with 18 points, while Kevin McHale added 15.

The Pistons, taking advantage of the Celtics fatigue and injuries, substituted freely and played the game at a blistering pace that simply wore Boston down.

Isiah Thomas, who finished with 22 points, scored 12 points in the first quarter, including a 17-footer from the right side at the buzzer that gave Detroit a 31-25 lead, the largest in the game to that point.

Laimbeer hit an 18-foot jumper to start the second quarter for an eight-point lead, but it didn't last long.

The Celtics got five points each from Vincent and Danny Ainge, seeing his first action of the series after nursing an injured right knee, during a 12-4 run that helped them pull even at 37-37 with 8:42 remaining in the half.

The score was tied two more times, 39-39 and 41-41, but the Celtics never could get the lead.

Johnson, meanwhile, went on one of his scoring sprees, as the reserve guard registered 15 of his 17 first-half points the rest of the way to help the Pistons to a 62-58 halftime lead.

There was some minor pushing and shoving with 48 seconds remaining in the third quarter when Boston's Darren Daye collided with Mahorn under the Detroit basket.

Daye then shoved Mahorn and was assessed a technical foul, which Mahorn made for a 100-85 Detroit lead.

The Pistons led 104-88 after three quarters and extended the lead as reserves played most of the fourth quarter for both teams.

Lakers seek clincher today

SEATTLE (AP) — James Worthy and the Los Angeles Lakers want to end their NBA Western Conference final playoff series against the Seattle SuperSonics by completing a four-game sweep.

"We don't want to prolong the series," Worthy said.

"I don't want to use the word sweep, but it's a possibility now," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said.

The Lakers lead the best-of-seven series 3-0 after beating the Sonics 122-121 in Game 3 Saturday at the Seattle Coliseum, as Worthy scored a career-high 39 points.

Game 4 will be Monday at Seattle. If necessary, Game 5 will be Wednesday night in the Forum at Inglewood, Calif.

No team in NBA history has overcome a 3-0 deficit in a best-of-seven playoff series.

"It doesn't look good for us," said the Sonics' Xavier McDaniel, who scored a career-high 42 points in Game 3. "We're in the hospital, in critical condition. But we're not going to go down without a good fight."

"We're going to go out and play the best we can," Sonics Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "If we don't win Monday, we go on vacation."

The Lakers had the NBA's best regular-season record of 65-17, 26 more victories than the Sonics' 39-43 mark, and have won 10 of 11 playoff games. They swept Denver 3-0 and beat Golden State 4-1 in their first two playoff series.

Kyle Petty laps field to win 600 at 131.483 mph

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Third-generation driver Kyle Petty lapped the field Sunday to win the Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR Winston Cup race with an average speed of 131.483 mph.

Petty, 26, earned $89,405 in posting the first superspeedway victory of his career and his second NASCAR Winston Cup victory.

Petty's father, Richard, who finished fourth Sunday, last won this race 10 years ago and he was the last driver to lap the field, having done so in 1975.

Kyle Petty, driving a Ford Thunderbird, finished a lap ahead of Morgan Shepherd and Lake Speed, who raced each other to the checkered flag for the runner-up position.

Following Richard Petty were Darrell Waltrip, Terry Labonte, Buddy Baker, Phil Parsons, Jim Sauter and Rusty Wallace.

Wallace had built an 8½-second lead with 22 laps remaining in the 400-lap race on the 1.5-mile tri-oval, but fell off the pace when he dropped a cylinder.

Petty moved into the lead for the final time on lap 384 when his Wood Brothers pit crew got him out first during a pit stop on the final caution of the day. He was able to easily drive to victory after Wallace's mechanical problems left him as the only driver on the lead lap.

It was the seventh time a Wood Brothers car has visited Victory Lane at Charlotte Motor Speedway, and the fourth time the team has won the Coca-Cola 600.

Petty was able to avoid problems that plagued numerous top teams during the race. Top drivers Dale Earnhardt, Bill Elliott, Geoff Bodine, Benny Parsons and Ricky Rudd either left the race or spent several laps in the pits with mechanical trouble.

Fate rides with Al Unser at Indy

Williamson

Two days before the 1978 Indianapolis 500, Al Unser sat in a shed on Gasoline Alley with really nothing much to do, but talk.

He was driving then for Midland's Jim Hall, who had his first Indy entry, a Lola not many people were giving the time of day despite the fact Unser had qualified in the third row.

"It doesn't really matter what profession you're in. You always want to be the best at what you do," said Unser that day in 1978. "I think we have a chance to win this thing. I really do, or I wouldn't be here."

Two days later, Unser was wearing his third Indy crown, a year after A.J. Foyt had become the first four-time winner of America's greatest car race.

Things hadn't gone all that well for Unser since then. He once drove for Midland's Bobby Hillin after parting ways with Hall. This year he was in the race almost by accident — thanks to Danny Ongais.

Unser didn't get his ride as the third driver on the Penske Racing team until three days before the second and final weekend of qualifications. He was given the car after Speedway medical officials ruled that Ongais, who crashed in practice the previous week, would not be cleared to drive again this month.

Unser couldn't have been thinking about winning. He had enough trouble just getting a ride.

"I turned down several offers from teams and knew it would be tough getting a ride during this month. Things just worked out. You never know about fate. I'm sure Danny (Ongais) feels the same way. This was his ride."

But the Penske ride proved to be a good one. It held together. Mario Andretti's ride didn't.

Andretti had the best and fastest car on the track, using the Ilmor engine prepared by Midland's VDS racing. He had a one lap lead on the field with only 60 miles to go when apparently a seal gave way in the fuel system that cost him the race.

Still, Unser was third at the time, trailing Roberto Guerrero. It was suddenly a scrap for the finish instead of a runaway racer by Andretti. Fate was to be kind to Unser.

Guerrero's infamous pit stop, where his engine stalled forcing him to lose a lap to Unser, will probably be remembered at the brickyard for years to come. That and the fatal fuel seal of one fast, but hard luck Mario Andretti, who never seems to have Lady Fate when he needs her.

It's always seemed a bit strange to me that Al Unser isn't as popular in the racing world as brother Bobby, who has retired after winning the Indy race three times. In fact, if you took a poll, Al Unser Sr. probably isn't as popular as son Al Jr. on the race circuit.

Al Sr. is a bit caustic. He has a swagger about him. Maybe, he's just a maverick. He skips around from team to team, seemingly never to find that real home.

Hall won the Indy 500 again in 1980 with his own Chaparral ground effects machine. But this time it was with Johnny Rutherford driving. Unser was looking elsewhere and ended up with Hillin.

But today, this Al Unser is the only driver in the league with Foyt.

"In this business, you drive the best you can with the equipment you have and hope fate likes you. That's all you can ask or give," said Unser in 1978. That may be the motto that has served him best — even today after No. 4.

Baseball Today...

1906 — Jesse Tannehill's 3-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox snapped a 20-game losing streak for the Boston Red Sox.

1935 — Babe Ruth, winding up his career with the Boston Braves, hit three homers and a single at Pittsburgh, but the Pirates won 11-7.

1937 — The Detroit Tigers' manager and catcher, Mickey Cochrane, who had homered on his previous trip to the plate, was seriously beaned by Bump Hadley of the New York Yankees. He never played again.

1951 — Willie Mays, the New York Giants' highly touted rookie, went 0-for-5 in his debut against the Philadelphia Phillies.

1982 — Ferguson Jenkins of the Chicago Cubs became the seventh pitcher to strike out 3,000 batters, during a 2-1 loss against the San Diego Padres.

Cubs go extra innings to edge Braves again, 3-2

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Andre Dawson singled home the winning run with two outs in the 12th inning Sunday, giving the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Bob Dernier opened the 12th with a single and stole second. Ryne Sandberg struck out, and Dernier took third as Dickie Noles grounded out. Dawson followed with a sharp single to left, scoring Dernier.

Noles, 3-1, was the winner and Jeff Dedmon, 2-1, the loser in the second straight extra inning game between the two clubs. The Cubs won 7-6 in 16 innings Saturday.

Starter Charlie Puleo, who had hit his first major-league homer in the third inning to give the Braves a 1-0 lead, had a three-hit shutout going into the eighth.

Dave Martinez led off the inning with a bunt single and pinch-hitter Gary Matthews walked. After Ryne Sandberg was called out for interference, Paul Assenmacher relieved Puleo and was greeted by Dayett's double to left scoring Martinez and pinch-runner Bob Dernier.

But the Braves tied it in the ninth off Lee Smith, going for his 13th save. Ted Simmons walked with one out, pinch-hitter Ken Griffey singled pinch-runner Albert Hall to third and Hall scored on Ozzie Virgil's single.

Rick Sutcliffe, seeking a major-league leading eighth win, allowed four hits and struck out seven before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

Giants 6, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Robby Thompson's three-run eighth-inning homer broke a 3-3 tie. With one out, Candy Maldonado doubled to right off Kent Tekulve, 1-2, Will Clark was walked intentionally and pinch-hitter Harry Spilman fouled out to shortstop Luis Aguayo. Thompson then connected for his third home deep over the wall in left-center.

Pirates 7, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Right-hander Brian Fisher hit a three-run homer for his first major league hit and threw a five-hitter as the Pirates won their fifth straight. Bobby Bonilla added a pair of solo homers as the Pirates won their 10th game in their last 13 and swept Cincinnati in their first meeting this year after going 2-10 against the Reds last year.

Cincinnati has lost four in a row, eight of its last nine, and 11 of its last 15 games. Fisher, obtained last November from the New York Yankees, went the distance for the first time in his career to improve to 2-1.

Dodgers 8, Mets 6

NEW YORK — Mike Scioscia drew a bases-loaded walk from Roger McDowell to break a seventh-inning tie and Orel Hershiser allowed six hits in seven innings to lead the Dodgers.

Pinch-hitter Ralph Bryant hit a two-run homer in the eighth off Terry Leach and Shelby had an RBI single later in the inning. The Mets are now 1-13 on Saturday and Sunday.

Cardinals 8, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Jack Clark's second-inning grand slam sent Cy Young Award winner Mike Scott to an early shower and led the Cardinals to their fifth straignt win and 110th in the last 11 games. The Astros have lost five in a row and eight of the last nine.

Rookie Joe Magrane scattered seven hits for his fourth win without a loss and his second complete game since coming to the Cardinals from their Class AAA Louisville club on April 24.

Scott, 5-3, who had yielded only 16 walks in 74 innings this year, gave up six in the first 1 1-3 innings before serving up Clark's home run as the Cardinals got their eight runs on just five hits.

Clark extended his hitting streak to 10 games and raised his RBI total to 43, second in the majors. He had two homers and eight RBI in the three-game series.

St. Louis third baseman Terry Pendleton extended his hitting streak to 18 games, the longest in the majors this year with a bloop single to center in the first inning, leading to the Cardinals' second run.

Expos 2, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Mitch Webster keyed a two-run sixth-inning rally with an RBI single and Floyd Youmans, 2-3, and Tim Burke combined on a four-hitter.

Burke allowed one hit over the final two innings for his fourth save as the Expos evened their record at 21-21. The Padres dropped to 11-34, the worst in the major leagues.

Tartabull, Seitzer rip Texas for KC

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Danny Tartabull's two-run homer and Kevin Seitzer's two-run single Sunday gave the Kansas City Royals a 5-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Jerry Don Gleaton got the victory, his first of the year, after relieving starter Mark Gubicza in the fifth. Dan Quisenberry pitched the final 1 1-3 innings to get his fifth save.

The loser was Jose Guzman, 2-4.

Tartabull hit his seventh homer in the second inning after Setizer was hit on the shoulder by Guzman.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 1

BOSTON — Ken Williams drove in Tim Hulett with a 10th-inning double that was misjudged by left fielder Jim Rice, giving the White Sox a sweep of their three-game series with the Red Sox.

Hulett opened the 10th with his third hit, a single off Boston starter Bob Stanley's glove. After Ozzie Guillen sacrificed, Williams hit a line drive to left. Rice broke in on the ball and was unable to get back to make the catch, Hulett scoring on the double.

Indians 5, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Julio Franco's two-out ground rule double sparked Cleveland's five-run fifth. Franco's hit, grabbed by a fan sitting in the first row along the right-field line, scored two runs to snap a 1-1 tie.

Tigers 7, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Detroit scored five runs in the seventh inning on just two hits, an RBI single by Kirk Gibson and a two-run single by John Grubb. The victory was the Tigers' ninth in their last 11 games.

Rookie Jeff Robinson, 3-2, allowed just an unearned run in the second inning and a solo home run to Kent Hrbek in the eighth before Mike Henneman relieved in the ninth.

Orioles 4, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Ken Gerhart's freak double-play sacrifice fly scored Ray Knight with the winning run as Baltimore won its third straight. Knight reached base on a fielder's choice and moved to third on Terry Kennedy's single.

Gerhart then hit a fly to deep left that appeared to be going out of the park. But Jose Canseco leaped and caught the ball at the top of the wall, Knight scoring easily after the catch. Kennedy was caught taking his time going to back to first and was doubled up for the final out of the inning. The run counted since Knight crossed the plate before Kennedy was out at first.

Baltimore rookie left-hander Jeff Ballard, 2-0, allowed seven hits in seven innings for the victory.

Yankees 10, Angels 8

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Willie Randolph's one-out single in the 10th inning Sunday scored Wayne Tolleson with the winning run. Randolph's single came one batter after Rickey Henderson was called out for running out of the base line, a call that evoked a vociferous argument from Yankee Manager Lou Piniella.

Henderson had hit a checked swing ground ball to Angels first baseman Wally Joyner. Henderson dove to first base trying to elude Joyner's tag and was ruled safe by first base umpire Nick Bremigan. After a discussion with home plate umpire Dale Ford, Bremigan reversed his call.

Veteran left-hander Ron Guidry made his first appearance of the year, coming on in the sixth inning in relief of New York starter Dennis Rasmussen. Guidry, who was activated by the Yankees on Saturday, allowed one run and two hits in 1 1-3 innings in his first relief appearance since May 17, 1985.

Angels, Travs open 5-game series tonight

From Staff Reports

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Midland's Angels could look back on the first half of their Texas League East Division swing with mixed emotions Sunday after a five-hour bus trip from Jackson, Miss.

The Angels lost 2-of-3 to the Mets and the season's series, 4-6, but both of those victories were shutouts, the Halos' second and third of the season.

Lefthander Marty Reed suffered his first loss in six decisions, 4-1, but pitched his second straight complete game.

So, while the batting averages suffered in the heavy humidity of Jackson, the pitching got well.

Struggling Phil Venturino, 4-2, pitched nine shutout innings Saturday night, a game won by Doug Jennings' 13th homer of the season and a game saved by Vinicio Cedeno in the 10th, his seventh.

Mike Romanovsky got credit for the 5-0 shutout win as three Angel pitchers survived nine walks and a couple of wild pitches. The big reason was lefthander Vance Lovelace, who picked up his first save by retiring the Mets with a third-out strikeout with the bases loaded in the eighth and ninth.

The Angels face Arkansas in the opener of a five-game series today and return home Saturday to begin the stretch run of the first half.

The important thing here is to stay close to .500 so that June winning streak can do some good.

Baseball Today

STREAKS

Chicago's Floyd Bannister pitched a two-hitter Saturday, beating Boston 9-1 and ending a personal 11-game losing streak against the Red Sox. Bannister had last defeated Boston on May 18, 1982.

STATS

Atlanta and Chicago pitchers combined to walk 24 batters in the Cubs' 7-6 victory in 16 innings Saturday. The National League record for combined walks in extra innings is 25, set in 18 innings by Chicago and Cincinnati on Aug. 9, 1942. The major league record for most combined walks in a game is 30 by Detroit and Philadelphia (A's) on May 9, 1916, in a nine-inning game.

SWINGS

On June 1, 1986, Hosuton lefthander Bob Knepper had a 9-2 record with a 2.38 earned run average. Following Saturday's 4-3 loss to St. Louis, Knepper had a 2-4 record and a 6.59 ERA.

SOLO HOMERS

Detroit second baseman Lou Whitaker has led off a game with a home run three times this season and 21 times in his career.

Texas, Arkansas advance

AUSTIN Texas (AP) — Scott Coolbaugh went 3-for-5, including a two-run homer, as top-ranked Texas exploded for 10 late runs to defeat Houston 13-4 Sunday for the championship of the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament.

The victory propelled the Longhorns into the College World Series for a record 25th time.

The Longhorns, 58-9, will face Arkansas, 50-14-1, in a first round game at 3:10 p.m. Saturday in Omaha, Neb. The Razorbacks, who finished second to Texas in the Southwest Conference, won the South I Central championship Sunday in Huntsville, Ala., by defeating Clemson 4-2.

The Cougars finished the season at 40-24-1. Houston took a 3-1 lead in the top of the fourth, roughing up Texas starter Curt Krippner for five hits and three runs. The game was delayed two hours and two minutes by a heavy downpour in the bottom of the inning with Texas batting.

Arkansas 4, Clemson 2

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Mike Sisco's two-run single highlighted a four-run rally in the sixth inning that lifted Arkansas to a 4-2 victory over Clemson in the finals of the NCAA South I Region college baseball tournament Sunday.

The Razorbacks, 50-14-1, advance to the College World Series, which begins Friday in Omaha, Neb. Clemson, which lost to Arkansas 5-4 in 10 innings Saturday, finished its season at 54-14.

Arkansas will face Texas, 58-9, at 3:10 p.m. Saturday in a first-round game. Texas finished first and Arkansas second in both regular season and post-season tournament play in the SWC.

Lawyers red-dog Danny White

DALLAS (AP) — Three companies controlled by Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White have accumulated debts of at least $230,000 and one of them is the target of four lawsuits, the Dallas Morning News reported.

The newspaper reported Sunday that the companies have used White's name to promote themselves and have accumulated the unpaid bills for goods and services ranging from rent and machinery to business cards.

In an effort to settle the corporate debt and raise money, the newspaper reported, White has begun personally trying to sell stock in an issue that one of Dallas's leading stock analysts says is questionable.

An expert in Securities and Exchange Commission codes told the newspaper that some SEC regulations may have been breached.

White, chairman of the corporations' board and 90 percent stockholder, refused to discuss the situation in any detail with the newspaper.

"It's none of your business. You're just fishing for something, and it's obvious," White said before ending an interview by hanging up his home telephone.

The newspaper said it located at least 19 creditors who are holding bills for goods and services provided for Kowboy Kustom Inc. of Garland, which was established to assemble, manufacture and distribute chrome pickup truck parts.

Some of the creditors have been sending copies of demand letters to Cowboys general manager Tex Schramm and coach Tom Landry, the News reported.

Paul Linford, selected by White to run the Garland company, and two other incarnations of the company, acknowledged that the actual number of creditors is "at least twice" the figure quoted by the News.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

TUESDAY, MAY 26, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: An exciting love match is in the making and could develop into something sensational. Business and financial decisions will be easier to make if you obtain expert counsel. Hidden anger can work against you in the marketplace. Forget past grievances. An investment or new job will bring even greater rewards than expected. You have the experience and knowledge to beat out the competition. Enroll in a special class or training seminar.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Certain people seem superficial. You still have to deal with them. Be tolerant. Your performance this week could determine how well you will do down the road. Give a child the benefit of the doubt.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A child is paying more attention than she lets on. Try not to take on more work responsibilities than you can handle. Family members need some of your time too. You tell a great story!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Something that happens today could give you a new sense of mission. Give your heart equal billing with your head and a personal relationship will become more rewarding. Others admire your choice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Decisions should not be made while you feel under duress. Get away for a few days and consider what is at stake. Take things one step at a time. A sibling offers good advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Excitement at work carries over into your personal life. Select a gift with special care. The message it carries is more important than its cost. Your talents are very much in demand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will benefit from spending some time alone. Educate yourself on what has been happening in your field since you left school. Get more adventure into your life and you will feel just great!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New financial gains are in the spotlight. They could stem from your artistic talents or recent investments. Loved one's opposition fades when you talk things over. A prize or gift changes things.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be feeling impulsive or stubborn today. Get a better grip on your emotions. You need to reach a decision regarding a college education or further career study. Aim high!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Joint financial matters could involve you in a discussion about financial or contractual agreements. Do not pay for services until they have been performed to your satisfaction. Expect some discord in romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone with a reputation for reliability could let you down. Trust your own instincts about people and circumstances. Hold discussions about mutual goals. It is important that subordinates know your priorities. Have a schedule.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speculative financial ventures can be lucky today. Romantic communication also looks good. Writing and correspondence projects need careful handling. Be very careful to say exactly what you mean. Avoid beating around the bush.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New financial gains are part of the picture. You run across shopping bargains and wonderful investment opportunities. Partnerships require careful handling, however. A romance progresses nicely. Do nothing to rock the boat.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♡A93 ♢KJ873 ♣J632
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	1 ♠	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Had you held a fourth heart, your hand would have qualified for a limit raise of partner's suit (by whatever methods you use). However, with only three-card support we think you are good enough only to raise to two hearts, because a trump lead would reduce the effectiveness of your hand considerably. You are far too weak for two diamonds.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠872 ♡KQJ93 ♢A9 ♣K86
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Don't insult partner either by persisting in no trump—he has shown an unbalanced hand. For the moment you should choose a suit, and you shouldn't pass even though partner's two club bid is not forcing. You owe him preference to his first suit. Bid two spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J8 ♡KQ7 ♢AQ952 ♣K104
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♣	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have the best hand at the table, and your partner has made a vulnerable overcall. We don't know what the opponents are bidding on, but you should trust your vulnerable partner. With a stopper in the enemy suit, jump to three no trump. If his hand is unbalanced, he can correct to four spades.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♡AKQ92 ♢AKJ103 ♣94
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—You have a very good hand, but two-suited hands are not easily shown if you start with a takeout double. Bid two hearts, with the intention of showing your second suit when the bidding gets back to you. A takeout double will just invite preemption from the opponents.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡J976 ♢AJ942 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Dbl	2 ♣	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have enough to compete, so it is simply a question of which suit you should bid. If your side does have the values for game, it is more likely to be in the major than in the minor. Therefore, bid two hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K1083 ♢AJ83 ♣K9652
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dbl	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You certainly want to be in game, and perhaps in slam if partner has the right cards. The first order of business is to advise partner of your aspirations, and the way to do that is to cue-bid two hearts.

DOONESBURY

Madison leading convention advocate

Associated Press

Friday, May 25, 1787
PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The day was cool and overcast with occasional light rain and variable winds.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Four states had legal delegations, and one delegate each attended from Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Jersey. Therefore, Congress could not meet.

CONVENTION TODAY

When the delegates gathered at the State House, as they had since May 14, seven states had a quorum of their delegates present. On the 11th day after the date set, the Convention could begin.

Someone, probably Gov. Edmund Randolph as the ranking state officer present, assumed the chair. Credentials were presented by Rufus King (Mass.); Robert Yates and Alexander Hamilton (N.Y.); David Brearley, William Churchill Houston and William Paterson (N.J.); Robert Morris, Thomas Fitzsimons, James Wilson, and Gouverneur Morris (Pa.); George Read, Richard Bassett and Jacob Broom (Del.); George Washington, Edmund Randolph, John Blair, James Madison, George Mason, George Wythe and James McClurg (Va.); Alexander Martin, William Richardson Davie, Richard Dobbs Spaight and Hugh Williamson (N.C.); John Rutledge, Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, Charles Pinckney and Pierce Butler (S.C.); and William Few (Ga.).

Robert Morris, acting for Ben Franklin, who was too ill to attend, nominated Washington as chairman. Rutledge seconded. This nomination came from the only possible alternative (Franklin) and the general was unanimously elected, and escorted to the chair by Morris and Rutledge.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Thus officially opened, the Convention chose William Jackson as its secretary, appointed Thomas Claxton sand Nicholas Weaver as its doorkeeper and messenger, named Wythe, Hamilton and Charles Pinckney a committee to prepare rules, and adjourned until Monday.

DELEGATES TODAY

Washington invited himself to breakfast with the Meredith family, returned many visits in the forenoon, dined at Thomas Willings, and spent the evening "at my quarters" in the Robert Morris residence.

George Read wrote to John Dickinson in Wilmington. Gov. Randolph had rented a couple of rooms near Mrs. House's so his room — "on the first floor, up one pair of stairs, on Fifth Street" — was available for Dickinson. Elbridge Gerry also had applied for it. Read closed with the admonition, "You shoud be here at the first opening of the Budget."

LOOKING BACK

James Madison Jr. (1751-1836)

James Madison was one of the leading advocates for assembling this Convention to revise the Articles of Confederation. He significantly contributed to the Virginia Plan, the first and foremost proposal for drafting a new, central government. At the Convention his voluminous notes and strong arguments for an improved political system helped establish Madison's place in American history. But it was his essays in favor of ratification in "The Federalist" that firmly etched Madison's name in the political annals of the nation. From 1787, Madison's career was a direct path to the White House.

Madison grew up in Virginia, the eldest of 10 children. His education came mostly from home tutors until he entered the College of New Jersey at Princeton in 1769. Madison was only 25 when he helped draft Virginia's first state constitution in 1787. Madison's extensive notes of the Convention proceedings left us an account of the Constitution-making process.

Madison vigorously prodded a reluctant Virginia through the ratification process. He, John Jay and Alexander Hamilton authored "The Federalist," the authoritative essays which swayed the course of ratification and today are still considered landmark contributions to political science.

In the first Congress under the Constitution, he helped to create the executive departments and authored the amendments known as the Bill of Rights. Madison served in the House of Representatives from 1789 to 1797.

In 1794 Madison was introduced by Aaron Burr of New York to a young Philadelphia Quaker widow, Dolley Payne Todd. Their extraordinarily happy married life created a legend.

After his appointment as secretary of state by President Jefferson in 1801, Mrs. Madison became the leading lady of the capital, as both the president and vice president were widowers. On March 4, 1809, James Madison became the fourth president and Dolley Madison became first lady. She set the high standard that guided subsequent first ladies.

Madison died in 1836, survived by Dolley and a stepson, John Payne Todd.

Doobie Brothers raise almost $350,000 for vets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The reunited Doobie Brothers raised an estimated $350,000 for Vietnam War veterans as they boogied before a sell-out crowd at the Hollywood Bowl.

"This is for all you vets. Welcome home," the band's original leader, Tommy Johnston, told the audience Saturday night after the musicians returned to the stage for a second encore and played their first big hit, "Listen to the Music."

The band, who aren't brothers and aren't named Doobie, played together from 1969 to 1982. Twelve members returned for Saturday's performance, one of 10 on the band's current mini-tour that began Thursday.

Before the show, drummer Keith Knudsen, who organized the performance, explained to the audience that the cause of Vietnam veterans was worth a reunion.

"Everything goes to them, all the money from your tickets, all the money from the T-shirts outside. It's all theirs," Knudsen said.

Actor-singer Kris Kristofferson and his band played a brief set before the Doobies played for about 2 hours and 20 minutes, including the two encores.

"This kind of show is very special," Kristofferson said. "It's important to separate the war from the warriors."

About 2,000 Vietnam veterans were invited to the show for free.

TELLURIDE, Colo. (AP) — Shop windows in this mountain community are bearing signs that urge residents to "Vote Dead" in an election Tuesday to decide if Jerry Garcia and the rest of the Grateful Dead can perform here this summer.

"Talk on the street has it pretty even," said Virginia Egger, assistant town manager. "We have had a few extra people registering to vote lately, and a bunch of requests for absentee ballots."

The issue has sparked a philosophical debate between folks who want to maintain a small-town flavor and those who want to boost tourism.

Many residents believe the community has enough to handle with its annual bluegrass and jazz festivals, which attract up to 5,000 visitors, said Carole Chowen, a liquor store owner. The proposed Grateful Dead concerts Aug. 15 and 16 are expected to draw up to 10,000 fans, which is roughly 10 times the town's population.

"I think the vote will pass, and it'll be a great concert," said Pierre Mesa, who works in a local bakery. "Cleaning up might be a problem, but it won't be any worse than the bluegrass festival."

Lawmaker 'horrified' by what he saw on Stark

Sasser

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Sen. James Sasser expressed horror after a visit to the USS Stark on Sunday and said it was too soon to tell if the warship could have prevented the Iraqi missile attack that killed 37 American sailors.

The Tennessee Democrat, one of three U.S. senators chosen to tour the region after the May 17 attack, said he did not know why the missile frigate was unable to protect itself.

"A lot of the ship's records which contained this vital evidence had been destroyed," he told a news conference after returning to shore. "There's no way of saying conclusively that the attack could have been prevented."

Sasser said he did not know if all defense systems on the Stark were functioning properly when the ship left port and sailed into the Persian Gulf, where it sustained the deadliest attack yet on non-combatant ships in the 6½-year-old Iran-Iraq war. Each side has previously fired on other nations' commercial shipping in an effort to isolate its enemy and strangle its economy.

Iraq apologized for its attack on the Stark, saying it was a mistake.

Sasser said the attack would probably have been less tragic if the Stark had taken evasive action or fired chaff to decoy the missiles, or locked on to the Iraqi plane and activated its anti-missile system.

There might be "good reason" for all that, he said, adding: "But let's not prejudge the situation. It's not something to make snap judgment on."

The senator said his first impression after boarding the Stark, anchored three miles off Bahrain, was one of "horror as to what occurred with those who were in compartments when missiles penetrated and exploded in their sleeping area."

Aboard the Stark he met with its commanding officer, Capt. Glenn Brindel, and Adm. Grant Sharp, who heads a 10-man U.S. Navy team investigating the attack.

The navy's probe has focused on the possibility that a failure in the Stark's Phalanx anti-missile system kept the crew from knowing that an Iraqi warplane had fired missiles at the ship.

U.S. navy officials in Bahrain first denied the computer system that runs the Phalanx was faulty, then refused to comment further on the matter.

Asked about this, Sasser said: "I determined that this was a matter which for the present time might best be left to a court of inquiry."

This, he said, was "simply because what I perceive to be some confusion as to what has occurred aboard" after the missiles struck.

Sasser is one of three senators appointed by Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., to visit the gulf region after the attack. The other two are John Glenn, D-Ohio, and John Warner, R-Va.

Sasser told the news conference the Soviet Union should not participate in any proposed task force that would patrol the Persian Gulf to protect commercial navigation.

"I would say the United States would be willing to participate with other nations to guarantee the right of free passage in the gulf," said Sasser. He suggested Britain and France as possible partners in such a force.

The United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France have warships patrolling the gulf to protect commercial vessels flying their flags from Iraqi and Iranian attacks.

Sasser said a U.S. admiral, whom he did not name, would visit the Iraqi capital of Baghdad and interview the pilot who attacked the Stark. But an Iraqi official, demanding anonymity, said in Baghdad his government had not yet decided to make the pilot available.

Sasser said he would talk with U.S. Navy officials about plans to register up to 11 of Kuwait's state-owned oil tankers under the American flag in an effort to protect them from Iranian attacks.

John Paul accused of meddling in campaign

FOGGIA, Italy (AP) — As Pope John Paul II tours southeastern Italy, some politicians are accusing him of meddling in the campaign for next month's parliamentary elections.

The pontiff angered former Socialist Premier Bettino Craxi and other politicians with a speech Thursday to Italian bishops which they interpreted as an appeal to vote for the Christian Democrats in the June 14-15 balloting.

"The aim of Christian obligation is to set up temporal order according to the design of God for the true good of men and, thus to inscribe the law of God in the earthly city," John Paul said in the address.

"No one ought to be amazed if Catholics, in making their own decisions, aspire always to follow their deep convictions, docile to the guidance of their pastors."

The remarks were taken as indicating the pope wanted Catholic voters to heed the advice of their bishops.

The Italian bishops' conference in a statement this month offered their views on stormy election issues and urged the faithful to uphold "the unitary tradition" of Italian Catholics.

The statement said the bishops are "well aware that the mission of the church and religious order as such should not be mixed up with any political interest, but we are equally convinced, that (such a stance) cannot mean silence or neutrality on questions when common good is at stake."

Avanti, the Socialist Party paper, complained the next day that "once again" the bishops "allowed themselves to meddle directly in the electoral campaign with a choice not based on any principle but on factional interest."

The statements by the bishops and pope were widely interpreted as endorsements of the Christian Democrats, Italy's largest political party and a member of every government since 1945.

The dispute was noted on front pages of Italian dailies over the weekend.

One editorial cartoon in Sunday's La Repubblica pictured a nun saying, "The Gospel speaks clearly: firstly one gives preference to Jesus, secondly one votes for a Christian Democrat government."

John Paul, as bishop of Rome, is considered Italy's top primate.

Pope says devil root of many problems

MONTE SANT'ANGELO, Italy (AP) — Pope John Paul II said Sunday the devil still exists and is at the root of many of the world's problems.

"The struggle against the demon, which marked the life of the Archangel Michael, is present even today because the demon is still alive and functioning in the world," he said on the second day of his three-day tour of Italy's southeastern Apulia region.

John Paul prayed Sunday in a grotto dedicated to the Archangel Michael.

He descended the 89 steps into the Sanctuary of San Michele grotto, where he prayed at the altar and before a 16th-century glass-encased statue of the Archangel Michael.

The grotto is said to have been consecrated by the archangel himself during an apparition in 490. It has been the destination for centuries of pilgrims, including many popes and St. Francis of Assisi.

Addressing 5,000 people in the town square, John Paul said the archangel is depicted in the Bible as the "great fighter against the dragon, the chief of the demons."

The pontiff said the devil continues to upset "the moral balance of man."

The demon exists as "the disorder in society, the incoherence of man, the inner fracture of which the victim is not only the consequences of original sin but also the effect of the infesting and dark action of Satan," he said.

According to recent polls, Roman Catholic church doctrine on the devil has largely crept out of Christian consciousness.

John Paul has tried to revive it. His public comments on Satan last summer were the first papal pronouncements on the topic in nearly 15 years.

It was John Paul's first visit as pope to Monte Sant'Angelo, a town of 17,000 overlooking the Adriatic Sea and the Gargano mountain range.

Residents showered him with flower petals as he passed through cobblestone streets in his popemobile.

The pontiff then went to nearby Manfredonia, an Adriatic port of 58,000 people, and Foggia, an industrial city of 160,000.

On Saturday, he flew to San Giovanni Rotondo, then came to Foggia on Sunday as part of a three-day tour of the southern Apulia region.

Craxi lashed out at the pontiff's speech, saying "The Church should not indicate one party over another."

He suggested the pope was ignoring a revision of a church-state concordat that formally ended the status of Catholicism as Italy's official religion.

Former Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini, leader of the Republican Party, assailed what he called "the identification of the Christian Democrats as the defender of Catholic values."

The Christian Democrats said the pope did nothing wrong.

"The bishops have done their duty," party leader Ciriaco DeMita said.

Church officials also rallied around the pontiff.

Remarked Cardinal Ugo Poletti, president of the bishops conference: "Politicians see everything in political or party terms. I saw in the words of the pope an apt reflection on the tradition of the commitment of lay Catholics in the social and ethical life of the country."

The elections are being held a year ahead of schedule. Parliament was dissolved last month after Craxi resigned.

Craxi headed a five-party coalition for more than 3½ years. He stepped down because of squabbling with the Christian Democrats over which party should hold the premiership.

Ex-Philippine defense minister tells rally soldiers 'are with us'

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition leader Juan Ponce Enrile told about 15,000 people protesting alleged election fraud that soldiers around the nation "are with us," but the troops obeyed orders and stayed away from the rally.

The ousted defense minister spoke shortly before midnight Sunday to the crowd on a stretch of road between two military camps where soldiers joined a civilian uprising in February 1986 to topple President Ferdinand Marcos.

Enrile's center-right Grand Alliance for Democracy wants the government of President Corazon Aquino to void the congressional election held May 11 and hold a new one.

Incomplete returns from the Commission on Elections show Mrs. Aquino's candidates leading for 22 of the 24 Senate seats and nearly three-quarters of the roughly 200 seats in the House of Representatives.

Enrile, fired from the cabinet last year after an alleged coup attempt by his supporters, claimed the government rigged the election. Mrs. Aquino has acknowledged there was minor, scattered cheating, but she denies there was wholesale fraud.

"We are gathered here tonight to peacefully expose a grievance, hoping against hope that (the government) will hear the clamor of the people and that they will correct the sordidness that was brought by the cheating that happened," Enrile said in a 15-minute speech.

"I know that out there, in every military camp in the republic...our brother Filipino soldiers are hearing us, and they too are with us."

Enrile's party and the pro-Marcos New Society Movement have encouraged soldiers to join their protests despite orders from Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos to stay out of politics. No uniformed soldiers were seen at Sunday's rally.

Enrile was in 22nd place in the Senate race as the elections commission continued its slow tally, expected to be completed in another week or so. The top 24 vote getters among the 84 candidates win Senate seats.

Enrile appealed to the crowd to remain peaceful and "not give those who are against us a reason to harm us."

Many demonstrators flashed the "V" sign identified wih Marcos and chanted pro-Marcos slogans. One banner read: "Marcos, the only hope against communism."

"Who will replace Cory?" shouted one speaker, referring to Mrs. Aquino.

"Marcos" the crowd shouted back, although Enrile was present.

Protesters hung large red, white and blue banners reading, "Soldiers, do not follow the cheater" and "Cory Cheater" from the gates of Camp Aguinaldo, headquarters of the armed forces, and Camp Crame, the main base of the Philippine Constabulary.

Syrian denies saying Moslems sold hostage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria's military intelligence chief Sunday denied saying that Moslem kidnappers sold a French hostage to Libya, Beirut radio stations reported.

State and private radio quoted Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kenaan as saying he never mentioned Libya during an interview with a correspondent for the Paris magazine Le Figaro in the Bekaa Valley town of Zahleh.

"Naming Libya by the magazine is an attempt to disturb relations between Syria and that sister country," Kenaan was quoted as saying.

On Saturday, Le Figaro quoted the general as saying that "one or more French hostages were sold to the Libyans. They served as a means of pressure against the French government in the conflict pitting the troops of (Chadian) President Hissene Habre against the Libyan army."

The Habre government recently routed thousands of Libyan troops from northern Chad. France has 2,800 troops in Chad, a former French colony, to back Habre in his fight against the Libyans.

Kenaan has been supervising the pacification of Moslem west Beirut for the past three months. About 7,500 Syrian troops entered west Beirut on Feb. 22 to quell fighting among militias there.

Twenty-four foreigners are reported missing in Lebanon and presumed kidnapped. They include eight Americans, six Frenchmen, two Britons, two West Germans, an Italian, an Indian and two unidentified foreigners.

European travelers frustrated by airline, railroad workers strike

PARIS (AP) — Strikes by airline and railroad workers in France and Italy meant a weekend of frustration for travelers throughout Europe, especially those in London hoping to take advantage of a national holiday.

Thousands of people planning to leave soggy Britain's for some sunshine abroad spent a precious chunk of their three-day weekend at airports, delayed by a French air traffic controllers' strike that began Friday.

Britain's "bank holiday" creating a three-day weekend is one of several declared annually by the government for no particular observance and has no relation to the Memorial Day holiday in the United States.

"It always happens on a bank holiday, and it always happens when I'm traveling, and it's always somebody else's fault," one unidentified traveler at Gatwick Airport told the British Broadcasting Corp. in a television interview.

The French domestic airline, Air Inter, its schedule disrupted by strikes over the past five weeks, anticipated renewed job actions during the week by air traffic controllers and pilots, company officials said.

It maintained 85 percent of its flights Sunday.

Pilots planned strikes Wednesday and Thursday to press demands for an additional crew member in the cockpits of the airline's Airbus A-320 aircraft. The company maintains the aircraft are not equipped to accommodate a flight engineer in addition to the pilot and co-pilot.

Air traffic controllers said they would be striking for two hours each morning.

In Rome, railroad employees demanding higher pay began a 24-hour strike Sunday as pilots of Italy's Alitalia and ATI airlines continued their work stoppages.

The airline strike has affected 74 flights daily. Pilots have struck two hours each day since Friday to protest the airlines' refusal to pay them for previous strike days. The strike is scheduled to continue through June 6.

British travelers who set out for the open road found themselves in traffic snarls up to nine miles long, despite meteorologists' predictions of cloudy weather from Ireland to the English Channel.

Air travelers suffered up to 10-hour delays Saturday because of the French controllers' strike and because of a computer failure Thursday at the air traffic control center in Brest, France.

Hundreds spent the night at airports.

The rail strike in Italy came a day after workers from the three railworkers' unions signed a three-year contract with the state-run rail system, Ferrovia dello State.

The strike was called by Fisafs Cisal, the main railworkers' organization, for more pay. It also objects to a provision in the contract calling for the loss of more than 10,000 of the rail system's 215,000 jobs over the next three years.
