Legislative pace increasing as session nears close

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Home mortgage interest rates — an explosive legislative issue that had been defused — apparently is burning again.

With only four weeks remaining in the 140-day regular session, the legislative pace was certain to speed up.

An indication of the Legislature's staggering work load before adjournment May 28 was the listing of 30 bills on the calendar of the Senate Economic Development Committee for today.

The committee agenda usually has 10 bills at the most.

Gov. Bill Clements apparently had shut off a proposal to raise mortgage rates from 10 to 12 per cent by stating he would veto the bill.

Interest was revived, however, when the Federal National Mortgage Association announced Thursday it will no longer buy mortgages in Texas that exceed the 10 per cent maximum. Mortgage bankers at a Houston convention unanimously urged Clements to reconsidar his position.

They say the Texas usury ceiling of 10 per cent makes it unprofitable to do business in the state.

The mortgage rate bill is on organized labor's "10 Most Wanted Bad Bills" list and also is opposed by Texas farmers and the Texas Consumer Association.

If Senate sponsor Bill Meier, D-Eu less, can get 21 votes to bring the bill up for debate, a filibuster is almost certain.

Delaying tactics also might be used in the senate against bills to lower usury penalties, provide employer self-insurance against workers' compensation compensation claims and make changes in the consumer credit code.

A controversial presidential primary bill could face its first floor test. Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, wants to hold a March 1980 presidential primary separate from general party primaries in May.

State chairmen of both the Republican and Democratic parties criticize Ogg's bill as an invitation to cross-over voting.

Senate debate is expected soon on a proposed tax relief bill that would provide homestead exemptions for some elerly and disabled Texans and establish a special taxation formula for farm, ranch and timber land.

The Senate Finance Committee should get more exact figures this week on its proposed $20.9 billion state budget for 1980-1981. The senate committee proposal is $600 million higher than the budget adopted by the House last week.

Air Park, like city, growing

Future expansion may necessitate relocation

By MIKE SLATON
Staff Writer

Fields surrounding Midland's Air Park now are sprouting apartments instead of wildflowers. Where cattle once grazed, bulldozers busily turn the soil for new housing developments.

Overhead are the planes — jets, turbo-props, single and twin-engine flown by private citizens and major companies.

Development on all sides of Midland Air Park is progressing at a fast rate, with the number of planes using the facility also on the rise.

At a conservative estimate, said Col. Wilson H. Banks, aviation director for the city of Midland, 150 takeoffs and landings occur at Air Park every day.

About 120 planes are based at Air Park, most of them company owned, said Banks. In addition, a varying number of transient airplanes use the Air Park, he said.

"People fly in from Dallas and Houston to do their business and then return home. Air Park is very convenient for these commuters," said Banks.

One of Air Park's major functions is as "a reliever" for Midland Regional Airport, the director said.

"This is a very important function," said Banks, "as it takes away from the congestion and traffic at Midland Regional Airport."

In doing so, it lessens the chance of an accident at Midland's main commercial facility.

"Midland Air Park is a very fine general aviation facility," said Banks.

In comparison to other facilities of its kind, Air Park is very safe, he added.

Recently, the amount of development going in around Air Park has caused some concern about the future safety of those who will be living in close proximity to the facility.

"I'd prefer nothing around it for miles," said Banks, "but you have to look at the situation realistically."

Banks said the cost of replacing the Air Park would, at a rough estimate, be $3 to $5 million. A new Air Park would have to be built while the present Air Park continues in operation, he said.

Moving the facility any farther from Midland would defeat its purpose as far as convenience is concerned, Banks explained.

"It (Air Park) can't stay there forever," Banks noted, however.

As the community grows, things have to change," he said, adding that the facility has quite a way to go before any move would have to be seriously considered.

Banks said his office is "very aware" of the residential situation surrounding Air Park.

"We do everything we can to keep pilots from flying over residential areas," said Banks, but he said, "sometimes it is necessary to fly over those areas to take off and land."

As far as noise from the planes is concerned, Banks said he has received only one complaint in the past several months.

Air traffic noise is comparable to some of the trucks and motorcyles on the road today, said Banks.

And the new jets operating out of Air Park actually are quieter than the propeller planes, he claimed.

Locations for additional fixed-based operators are being sought at Midland Air Park. The new businesses would put more aircraft in the air in the northwest part of Midland.

But until the Federal Aviation Administration decides there is enough air traffic to warrant another location for the air facility, business should continue — and continue to pick up — at the Air Park's current location.

Sunday drill readies city for disaster

By SUSAN TOTH

Puzzled residents in North Midland looked out their front doors Sunday to see carloads of men and women in army fatigues barricading roads, setting up command posts and dropping off tagged Boy Scouts.

More strangely still, the Boy Scouts hid in the bushes or lay down in obvious pain before other uniformed people came through, bandaged the "victims" and carried them off on stretchers.

Later, police patrol cars swept through neighborhoods and the military roadblocks were replaced with city barricades.

It was all part of an annual spring disaster exercise put on by the 103d Military Police Battalion of the Texas State Guard.

Had Midland been hit by a devastating tornado preceded by heavy rains — the scenario for Sunday's practice run — the overall reaction or state of preparedness would have been not too bad.

City, county and private groups took advantage of the guard drill to polish their own disaster skills, and found themselves, for the most part, ready.

There were, of course, minor problems. Finding those was one of the purposes of the drill, organizers pointed out.

For instance, city and broadcast officials realized the Emergency Broadcast System radio was in City Hall, while the Emergency Operations Center, where emergency broadcast information would come from, was in the central fire station.

Communications systems between department heads in the EOC and workers in the field was another area City Manager Jim Brown saw as a possible shortcoming in the city's operations.

Inclusion of the city in the guard's communications net was a need the guard, a volunteer group that usually is one of the first outside groups into a disaster area, discovered Sunday.

For the most part, however, the whole thing went so well the local battalion may be recommended for a commendation for its planning and execution.

In an effort to make the exercise as realistic as possible, Red Cross workers were on the site of the

At month's end, fuel hard to find

Gasoline is available, but consumers must look harder to find it, at least until Tuesday, Midland dealers said today.

The reason? Allocation levels for the month of April have sold out in many cases.

A spot check of Tall City service stations Sunday showed that many dealers were either out of or running low on unleaded gasoline. And many other dealers who used to be open on Sundays had closed doors.

While the shortage should clear in the next few days as retailers begin receiving delivery on monthly allocations for May, the good news will not last.

Another spot survey of local gasoline wholesalers today found the suppliers experiencing a decrease in the May allocation levels from the April level of availability.

For the first time since allocation began last month, all companies are being supplied at levels below 100 percent of their sales during the same month one year ago.

Eddins Walcher Company, which supplies local Amoco stations, reported a drop from a 100 percent allocation in April to 87 percent in May, a spokesman said.

Midland 66 Oil Company allocations dropped 10 percent from last month to 75 percent for May, according to a company spokesman, and the news was much the same from other wholesalers.

Spokesmen for Texaco Inc. and Exxon Company said they expected announcements on their May allocation later today.

Allocations began in April following an order from the Department of Energy. The order called for allocation to continue through September, covering the peak driving season.

To stay on top of the situation locally, Midlanders perhaps should plan their longer trips earlier in the month and prepare to cut back on driving toward the end of each month, oil company officials recommend.

Memorial Day weekend may find families staying close to home as gasoline becomes harder to find.

And consumers may find themselves buying gasoline on weekdays instead of evenings and weekends, as service stations close their doors because of depletion of their allocated amounts, wholesalers said.

Judging by reports, the situation in Midland is less intense than in the larger urban market areas.

An estimated 30 percent of the service stations in Dallas were closed for gasoline sales last Monday morning, according to one Midland wholesaler who was visiting the city at that time.

Unleaded gasoline is approaching 40 percent of service station gasoline volume, and for some smaller stations, unleaded accounts for half of the total sales.

U.S. already has taste of SALT

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whatever finally happens to a new strategic arms limitation treaty now in the final stages of negotiation, it has already given the Carter administration its first period of tranquillity and cooperation in relations with the Soviet Union.

The prisoner exchange that brought five Soviet dissidents to New York over the weekend is only one example of the restrained and conciliatory policies the Soviets have adopted in an unspoken, but obvious effort to help President Carter persuade the Senate to ratify the treaty.

In addition, the Soviets are allowing Jews to emigrate at record setting rates. If recent monthly figures continue, more than 40,000 will be released this year.

There also are some things the Soviets might have done but haven't.

For example, they did not retaliate against China for its incursion into Vietnam, although they had helped the Vietnamese go into Cambodia.

Unlike the period from 1975-77, the Soviets have not taken advantage of turmoil in the Third World to push for geo-political gains. Cuban troops remain in Angola and Ethiopia, they did not move into Rhodesia or South Yemen. And the Soviets have not yet meddled noticeably in Iran or Pakistan.

Soviet diplomats keep tabs as close as any lobbyist these days on how the Senate is lining up on the impending arms treaty. They know how many senators are already against it, and how many more might be if the debate takes place at a time when the Soviets appear to be on the march once more.

The administration, for its part, is reciprocating in quiet ways. It has, for example, approved the export license for a computer the Soviet news agency wants to buy for the 1980 Olympics. That license was withheld last summer.

It is also exploring ways to make a more substantial gesture in the direction of improving U.S.-Soviet trade relations by granting the Soviets "most-favored nation" status, perhaps in time for the SALT summit meeting likely to occur in late May or early June.

Most-favored nation status would mean the Soviets would have access to the American market at standard tariff rates, the kind assessed in trade with most of the world. They would also be able to get financing from the U.S. Export-Import Bank.

The Soviets lost the trade status in 1974 when Congress passed the Jackson-Vanik amendment. It denied the status to communist nations that do not allow free emigration.

The negotiations over the trade status have a particular urgency because the United States is moving rapidly to grant the status to China. Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps is due in Peking early in May to talk about it. Carter has insisted he will be even-handed between the Soviets and Chinese.

Thus, American sources say the administration is exploring many possible avenues to get the most-favored status for the Soviets as well.

main first aid station, ready to lend assistance.

A necessary concession to another reality was the lack of coffee and sandwiches, usually a Red Cross staple in any disaster situation. Midland's Red Cross feeding van still is in Wichita Falls, serving real tornado victims.

Reality intruded into the make-believe crisis in other ways. Movement of the boy scout "victims" — each neatly tagged with injuries ranging from "severe arm cut" to "broken neck" — was delayed because city ambulances had to make emergency runs to pick up genuine automobile accident victims.

Meanwhile, at Midland Memorial Hospital, some 35 members of the medical staff showed up to check out their part in a disaster and to wait for "victims." Nurses simultaneously led others through the crowd, making way by announcing, "real patient, real patient" as they entered the emergency room.

Brig. Gen. Roland B. Harris, deputy commander of the Texas State Guard, a group under direction of the governor rather than federal officials, commended the hospital emergency staff for its part in the disaster play.

"They looked like they were ready to take care of half of Midland today," he noted.

Many of the would-be victims had trouble taking their injuries seriously. One youngster with alleged severe head wounds was seen peeking out from under his bandages while being transported to the emergency room in a police car.

Another "complained" he had had to walk quite a distance to the first aid station because he only had a severe arm cut, while his friend — who'd collected on a bet by trading tags with him — was carried on a stretcher because of his simulated broken leg.

The four-hour drill, all involved agreed, served its purpose.

Three years ago, a similar spring drill was held in Monahans. The next year, a tornado ripped through the town less than two blocks from the area designated in the drill.

"The city put our plan into action (in Monahans), and it worked," a guard spokesman said. "They think we're great in Monahans."

Some Teamster steel haulers quit strike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Some Teamster steel haulers returned to the road today after a month-long strike over a proposed contract and the right to vote on the pact.

A spot check by The Associated Press with several large steel carriers in the Pittsburgh area revealed that many drivers had decided to abandon the strike.

"Everything seems to be over. We haven't had any trouble overnight and nothing has been reported any where else," said a spokesman for McNicholas Transfer Co.

"We're moving here this morning," said an official of Lake Shore Motor Freight Lines.

Most affected steel companies said layoffs would continue until truck availability improved and stored steel could be moved out.

"We are starting to get some trucks," said a spokesman for U.S. Steel Corp., which furloughed employees at Youngstown, Ohio, and Vandergrift, Pa. "But I would expect layoffs to continue. We have to move the steel before we can get back to normal operation."

The dissident Teamsters for a Democratic Union called for a general return to work on Sunday following an end-the-strike vote by the largest steel-hauling local in the Teamsters union.

"Our committee's advocating that we not make a last ditch stand," an aide to TDU leader Ken Paff said in Detroit Sunday after the 1,600-member Local 800 voted here to return to work.

The vote came as support for the month-long strike waned in the East, where some non-striking union members had already resumed hauling general freight and steel.

The strike had kept many of the Teamsters' estimated 17,000 steel haulers idle since April 1, and forced the layoff of some 6,000 mill workers because steel shipments were bottled up.

Steel haulers in Youngstown, Ohio, were scheduled to vote on a possible return to work today, TDU said.

TDU, a union splinter group, had supplanted some elected union leaders as strike coordinator.

Members of steel-hauling Local 92 in Canton, Ohio, voted Sunday to end the strike if holdout companies signed the agreement and agreed to immediate pay for six days' retroactive sick pay negotiated in the proposed agreement.

"In Gary (Ind.) they'll be in full operation Monday. In Detroit, Cleveland, Canton (Ohio) and Erie (Pa.) they don't think they're going to be able to hold up past Monday," one spokesman said.

The Teamsters' 300,000 drivers ended a 10-day walkout April 10, but steel haulers defied a back-to-work order, demanding a separate vote on their provisions in the proposed master freight agreement.

But support for the strike dwindled as individual settlements were reached with the 50 members of the National Steel Carriers Association, lone holdout among four major employer bargaining groups.

Mabee's P-40N Warhawk receives top award in Odessa Air Show

ODESSA — A Curtiss P-40N Warhawk owned and flown by Joe Mabee of Midland was judged "best of show" at the third annual Odessa Air Show sponsored Saturday and Sunday by the Midland-Odessa Chapter 123 of the Experimental Aircraft Association.

The Warhawk is a World War II single-engine fighter of Flying Tiger fame.

Judged best warbird at the show was a Chance Vought F4U Corsair, a carrier based fighter of World War II and Korean Conflict service, owned and flown by Howard Pardue of Breckenridge.

A pea green Pitts Special aerobatic biplane built and flown by Dane Jones of Odessa was judged the best of the home-built, experimental aircraft at the show.

Best of the antique-classic airplanes was a 1946 rebuilt Taylorcraft high wing plane owned and flown by Mike Sharp of Midland.

An estimated 3,500 people attended the two-day show, said show coordinator Bill Wicks, who awarded trophies to the fliers.

Winners of flying contests held Sunday were:

—Flour bombing: 1. Vincent Hinds of Hobbs, N.M., flying the Confederate Air Force's German-made Fieseler Storch STOL aircraft, first; Charles Hughes of San Angelo, flying a Fairchild F-24 monoplane, second; and Frank Hinds of San Angelo, flying a N3N pre-war Navy biplane, third.

—Spot landing: Bob Barham of Odessa, flying a Cessna 152, first.

—Ribbon cutting: Don Dison of Midland, flying a Bellanca Citabria, first; Marcus Bates Sr. of Odessa, flying a Buecker Jungmann biplane, second; and Bill Wicks of Odessa, flying a Bellanca Citabria, third.

"Freedom fliers" giving free-style aerobatic demonstrations were:

Doug Warren of Big Spring, flying a De Havilland Chipmunk monoplane.

Robb Satterfield of Midland, flying a De Havilland Chipmunk owned by Jim Hall of Midland.

Dane Jones of Odessa, flying his Pitts Special biplane.

Mike Sharp of Midland, flying his Taylorcraft (T-craft).

Steve Clark of Big Spring, flying his T-craft.

Buzz Hurt of Odessa, flying his clipped-wing T-craft.

J.D. Gathright of Dallas, flying his "Yankee-Doodle" T-craft.

Van White of Lubbock, flying his Piper J-3.

Lou Shaw of Dallas, flying Hurt's T-craft.

Gene Beggs of Odessa, flying his home-made Pitts Special biplane.

Steve Franklin of Lubbock, flying Hurt's T-craft.

Prior to the free-style aerobatics, Satterfield and Pardue gave demonstrations in two craft.

Satterfield piloted his North American P-51D Mustang, and Pardue flew the Corsair.

Service station robbed at gunpoint

A service station attendant about 2:55 a.m. today looked up from a book he was reading and found a man pointing a pistol at him, police said.

Armed with a revolver, the man demanded cash from the attendant at Digler's Exxon at 3603 W. Wall Ave., police said.

After getting the money, about $130 cash according to police reports, the man reportedly struck the attendant in the jaw with his fist.

The attendant told police the man, between 30 and 40 years old, was wearing a red and white checkered, long-sleeve shirt.

The man entered and left through the front door of the service station, police said.

It was not known which way the man went after leaving the station, police reports indicated.

Limited draft nixed by Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed renewal of a limited draft lost its first vote in Congress today in a House armed services subcommittee.

By a 5-4 vote, the military personnel subcommittee rejected the proposal by Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., to draft up to 100,000 young men a year into the ready reserves.

Montgomery said the reserves have only 200,000 of the 700,000 people they want.

"There is a need and if there is a need the time is to do it now," Montgomery said.

But several other members said that although they agreed that some sort of draft might be needed in the future, it would not be realistic to try to get Congress to approve it now.

After voting down the draft plan, the panel turned to a related proposal to revive draft registration.

The votes came coincidentally just before a planned rally on the Capitol steps by draft opponents.

Although its numbers are small, the subcommittee's decision will influence its parent Armed Services Committee's recommendation and that panel in turn will influence the full House's eventual decision.

The anti-draft rally was planned by the Committee Against Registration and the Draft, a coalition of 20 organizations, long before the subcommittee vote was scheduled.

Several subcommittee members who had decided to vote against Montgomery's limited draft proprosal said they thought it might be necessary in the future — but not yet.

"I don't see that as much of a political reality so I think it would be futile to vote for it," said Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich. "The fact of the matter is that I think the volunteer force is in trouble and I do believe down the road there is going to be a need for a draft. But I'm prepared to wait a while."

Rep. Majorie Holt, R-Md., said no draft was necessary now and Congress should see first if draft registration would solve the Pentagon's manpower problems. "If we institute registration, maybe that will encourage more people to volunteer," she said.

Montgomery's bill, backed by Army Chief of Staff Bernard Rogers, would draft young men — not women — into the reserve units to be called first in a war.

In publicly urging the limited draft, Rogers told a Senate committee the individual ready reserve is 500,000 people short of its goal of 700,000.

But the Joint Chiefs of Staff as a whole favors only renewal of draft registration — not to increase numbers of people in the military but to increase the speed with which they could be called in a war or emergency.

Crane shooting remains under investigation

CRANE — A shooting incident late Friday in which a woman died and a man was wounded remained under investigation here today, according to a spokesman with the Crane County Sheriff's Department.

Ophelia Puga Lopez, 52, of Crane was fatally shot about 11 p.m. Friday. Her husband, Juan Lopez, also was wounded.

The incident occurred at the Lopez residence, the officer said.

Further details of the incident were not available, according to the spokesman.

Chance of moisture remains in forecast through Tuesday

Midlanders who woke up this morning to cloudy skies and misty rains can look forward to more of the same through Tuesday, the weatherman said.

Cloudy skies with a chance of thunderstorms through Tuesday is the word from the National Weather Service office at Midland Regional Airport.

This morning's light rains dropped only a trace of moisture in the official rain gauge at the weather service, and most Midland-area residents got little if any rain early today.

But the weatherman is giving the city a 40 percent chance of continued rain tonight, with chances decreasing to 30 percent for Tuesday.

Winds are expected to shift to the southeast and decrease to 10-15 mph tonight.

Sunday was cloudy and cool, with a recorded high of only 69 degrees with the overnight low at 54. Record temperatures for Sunday's date are 95 degrees set in 1947 and 41 degrees set in 1960.

Most area weather watchers were noting cloudy skies and a threat or promise — depending on the need — of rain, but little real action in that regard this morning.

Big Lake reported a heavy rain Sunday with enough hail to cover the ground.

Heavy thunderstorms hit South Texas Sunday, knocking out power to thousands of residents in Victoria County and inundating Brownsville with almost 2 inches of rain and Victoria with 3 inches.

Winds gusting to 75 miles an hour buffeted Guadalupe, a community 7 miles south of Victoria. Winds were clocked at 59 mph at the Victoria airport.

Some hail also was reported.

Electricity was restored by early today at Victoria.

The heavier storms moved into the western Gulf of Mexico, although some showers were falling early today on the lower Texas coast.

Scattered light showers fell over portions of West Texas early today, but rainfall amounts were of .10 of an inch and less in most places. Heavier rain was falling in southern and western sections of the South Plains.

A heavy layer of clouds kept temperatures in the cool to mild range over much of Texas this morning. Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from near 70 in extreme South Texas to around 50 at Dalhart and Tyler.

Ecuador's new president sees 'democratic changes'

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Jaime Roldos, a center-left populist with little national political experience, won a landslide victory in Ecuador's presidential election and promised "democratic change" after nine years of military rule.

The National Information Office said Roldos, a 38-year-old lawyer, got 608,056 votes, or 66.5 percent of those counted Sunday, to 249,877, or 27.3 percent, for his conservative opponent, Sixto Duran Ballen, 57.

The Information Office said 914,297 votes had been counted, including 56,364 blank and null ballots. There were 2,088,874 registered voters, and about 2 million had been expected to vote.

Roldos declared in a televised victory address that his government will seek a balance between economic development and social justice.

"I extend my hand to all Ecuadoreans," he said. "My government will respect ideological pluralism and be respectful of all men, from the right to the left.

"Ecuador has declared itself in favor of change. I won't delay until I have achieved an authentic, Ecuadorean democratic change."

Roldos was supported by the Concentration of Popular Forces Party. His campaign slogan was "Force of Change" and he promised he would redistribute the nation's wealth if elected.

Duran Ballen, an architect backed by the Constitutionalist Front Coalition, stood for private property and free enterprise.

Opponents of Roldos and the vice president-elect, Osvaldo Hurtado, accused them of plotting a socialist government that would bring economic ruin to Ecuador.

Roldos has served as a congressman and has been president of both the Ecuadorean Federation of University Students and the National Lawyers Association.

Roldos won the first-round presidential elections July 16, but failing to get the required majority for election, faced Duran Ballen, the runner-up, in Sunday's runoff.

Adm. Alfredo Poveda, chief of the ruling military junta, has promised to transfer power to the new government Aug. 10, national independence day.

The voters on Sunday also chose 69 representatives to a national congress. It too will be inaugurated Aug. 10, the same day a new constitution approved in a national referendum takes effect.

Ecuador's last elected president, Jose Maria elasco Ibarra, was chosen by the people in 1968, but he declared himself a one-man ruler in 1970. He was overthrown in a military coup in 1972.

Ecuador's election was watched carefully in South America, where only Colombia and Venezuela now have democratic governments and several other military regimes are initiating the return of democratic rule.

Elections are scheduled for July 1 in Bolivia. Peru, another Andean neighbor of Ecuador, plans to transfer power to civilians no later than 1980.

Ecuador, a Colorado-sized nation of 7 million, has swung from authoritarian rule to civilian-elected government 35 times in its 149-year history.

Vietnam-China peace talks deadlocked over Cambodia

PEKING (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim says the Vietnamese-Chinese peace negotiations are deadlocked over Cambodia and "it will be a long process to solve the problem."

"The Chinese want to introduce all the elements of the problem into the discussions, including Cambodia and border matters. But the Vietnamese do not want to discuss Cambodia," Waldheim said after the leaders in Hanoi rebuffed his offer to mediate.

Arriving in Peking on Sunday from Vietnam, Waldheim told Chinese leaders at a banquet that unless there is a breakthrough in the talks and a quick end to Vietnam's war in Cambodia against troops loyal to ousted Premier Pol Pot, the situation could "deteriorate further with consequences far beyond this region ..."

"It is therefore imperative that all efforts be directed towards finding a settlement in conformity with the principles of the charter of the United Nations," he said.

"I remain ready, as I have stated in the past, to do my utmost to be helpful to the governments concerned to make a contribution in the search for peace and understanding."

The banquet was given by Foreign Minister Huang Hua, who described the U.N. chief as "an esteemed and well acquainted friend of ours" and charged that Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia was "instigated and supported by superpower hegemonism," meaning the Soviet Union, Vietnam's ally.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia Dec. 25, ousted the pro-Chinese government and installed a pro-Vietnamese government Jan. 7. The Chinese invaded northern Vietnam Feb. 17, asserting they were punishing the Vietnamese for border provocations, but it was believed they were also trying to force the Vietnamese to withdraw from Cambodia. However, the Vietnamese did not withdraw, and the Chinese pulled most of their troops back across the border in mid-March.

Chinese and Vietnamese deputy foreign ministers opened peace talks in Hanoi April 18. Vietnam made a three-point proposal including establishment of a demilitarized zone along the border and a joint commission to supervise observance of a peace agreement.

China rejected the Vietnamese proposal and last Thursday made its own eight-point proposal.

British polls show Thatcher's lead dwindling

"Britain is at a turning point." — Margaret Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — With only three days until Britain's general election, two of three new public opinion polls show a further blunting of the lead Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party holds over Prime Minister James Callaghan's Laborites.

The latest polls, released Sunday, also indicated Mrs. Thatcher, seeking to become Europe's first woman prime minister, was still trailing Callaghan and Liberal Party leader David Steel in personal popularity.

A poll by Research Services Ltd. put the Conservatives 11½ percentage points ahead of Labor, a drop of 9½ points in one week. One taken by Market Opinion and Research International put the Tories ahead only 3 percent, a three-point drop in three days. But the Gallup Poll increased its Conservative lead from 5½ percent to 8 percent in a week.

A Marplan poll predicted a Conservative majority of up to 60 seats in the 635-member House of Commons, compared to the five-vote edge won by Labor in the last election in October 1974.

Another Marplan survey, of women under 45, said a majority would vote Conservative because they blame union pay demands for the doubling of prices in the five years of Labor rule. The women gave the Tories a four point edge compared with the 10 point lead they gave Labor before the 1974 election.

Mrs. Thatcher, seeking to overcome Labor claims that her hard line on unions would bring Britain to an industrial Armageddon, said Sunday that as prime minister she could work with the unions.

"Union members, whether they vote for us or not, are first and foremost members of families, mothers and fathers, sons and daughters who share our values and who want to see once more a healthy Britain," she told a rally of 2,000 cheering Conservative trade unionists in North London.

"Britain is at a turning point. Its people will choose either to continue our lonely road toward socialism and poverty or to turn again toward the free world of the Western democracies before it is too late."

But Labor's treasury chief, Denis Healey, accused Mrs. Thatcher of "extreme and unremitting hostility" to the unions. He told 2,000 cheering union members in Eastbourne that she "openly rejects consensus and glories in confrontation."

The prime minister in a message to Labor Party candidates today said the Conservatives have "promised more than they can deliver." The "flaw at the heart of the Conservatives' case," he said, is that their promise to cut taxes would raise prices so much that almost everyone earning less than 10,000 pounds — $20,000 — a year would be worse off.

The Conservatives have proposed cutting taxes and scrapping state controls to encourage economic growth, which has averaged only 1.9 percent a year during the 1970s.

Scots' National Party suffers after setbacks

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — The Scottish National Party precipitated Britain's national election Thursday, but the independence party is in bad shape after a string of setbacks.

The party is still campaigning for Scottish autonomy, yet, the emotional impetus of its crusade appears to have slowed after years of debate and an inconclusive referendum March 1.

The Nationalists are battling a Labor Party revival in Scotland and a big effort by the Conservatives to regain crucial seats they lost in October 1974, when the "Snips," as the Nationalists are known colloquially, surprised the oddsmakers by winning 11 of Scotland's 71 seats in the House of Commons.

Party chairman William Wolfe boasts the Nationalists can win up to 50 of the 71 seats this time. But many party workers say privately they fear they may lose four or five of the 11 seats they won in 1974.

The Nationalists' slump has been so bad that Jim Allison, the Labor Party organizer in Scotland, does not consider them a threat. "The Tories are the problem now," he said.

An opinion poll in the Glasgow Herald, one of Scotland's leading papers, gives Labor a lead of 22 percentage points over the Tories in Scotland, the opposite of surveys in Britain as a whole.

Labor won 41 of the 71 Scottish districts in 1974 with 36 percent of the vote. The Nationalists got 31 percent of the vote, but carried only 11 districts because much of their vote was in Labor districts. The Conservatives won 16 seats and the Liberals three.

Prime Minister James Callaghan was forced to call the current election after his plans to give Scotland limited home rule collapsed. The March 1 referendum produced only a half-hearted yes for devolution, as the home rule process is known. The vote was 32 percent for semi-autonomy and 30 percent against, failing to win the 40 percent required for establishment of a Scottish Assembly.

The Nationalists withdrew their support of the Labor government because Callaghan was unable to keep his home pledge, and the government fell on a Conservative no-confidence motion March 29.

"The Scots have long memories. They will not easily forget or forgive the way they were betrayed by Jim Callahan," said one Nationlist legislator. But many Scots now appear indifferent to devolution. Opinion polls indicated prices and jobs are the main issues.

Japanese prime minister to open talks with Carter

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira left for Washington today for talks with President Carter that may be strained by the Japanese government's refusal to open up bidding on lucractive telecommunications contracts to U.S. firms.

It is Ohira's first foreign trip since he became premier in December. He was accompanied by Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda, government trade representative Takeshi Yasukawa and other officials.

Ohira has said he hopes to establish a firm foundation for a "productive partnership" in defense, national security and trade with the United States.

But U.S.-Japanese talks broke down in Washington last week over the size of Japanese government purchases from foreign businesses, fanning protectionist sentiment in Congress and prompting fears Ohira's visit will fail.

Japan was reported to have proposed letting foreign businesses bid for about $6.5 billion worth of equipment for such state-run companies as the Nippon Telephone and Telegraph Corp., and Japan National Railways. The United States turned down the proposal, holding out for $7.5 billion and a share of the main components for advanced electronic telecommunication facilities.

The Japanese government refused to budge. Then the United States reportedly agreed to accept Japan's offer if the Japanese would open all government purchase contracts for telecmmmunications equipment to foreign bidders beginning in 1985. Japan rejected that idea, too, leaving the talks deadlocked.

Ohira gets down to substantive meetings with Carter on Wednesday. He meets with Cabinet members and congressional leaders Thursday. On Friday he goes to New York for talks with business leaders. He flies to Los Angeles Saturday and leaves for home the next day.

Odessa man charged in stabbing incident

ODESSA — An Odessa man was in city jail here today on charges of aggravated assault in connection with a stabbing incident Sunday.

Charged with the third degree felony offense is Thurman Dean Jones, 36, of Odessa. He appeared before Peace Justice Charles Gee, but bond has not been set, according to a spokesman with the Odessa Police Department.

Officers said William Russell Crafts, 56, was stabbed in a hotel on East Fourth Street about 2:30 a.m. Sunday. Crafts and Gee both reside at the hotel, police said.

Crafts sustained a cut on his back from the top of his shoulder to his waistline. He was taken to Medical Center Hospital, where he was treated and released, officers said.

Pope may make visit to holy land

JERUSALEM (AP) — Pope John Paul II has told a top Israeli official he would like to make a pilgrimage to the holy land, a foreign ministry official said today.

But the official said the pope expressed his desire "as a general intention, not a plan." The subject was raised during a 45-minute audience the pope granted Joseph Ciechanover, the Foreign Ministry director-general, on April 23, the official said.

The late Pope Paul VI was the only pontiff to visit the holy land in modern times. He toured holy sites in Bethlehem, Jerusalem, Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee in 1964.

Ciechanover reported on the papal audience to Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet on Sunday. He was quoted as saying the pope had given his full endorsement to the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Sources said Israel saw the papal approval of the treaty as a significant development since many European countries have expressed reservations about the pact.

Ciechanover also said the pope planned to visit the memorial to victims of the Nazi Holocaust at the Auschwitz death camp on his visit to Poland in June.

Free enterprise study

The Political Science Department of West Texas State University at Canyon long has been a staunch advocate of the free enterprise system and in the teaching thereof.

And this year it again is taking the lead in conducting a special summer program which will deal with the free enterprise system.

It will be a special, six-hour, graduate level program designed mainly for junior high and senior high school social studies teachers.The accelerated program will be offered during the 1979 second summer term, beginning July 13 and continuing until August 8, or thereabouts. It will be directed and taught by Dr. Roy E. Thoman of the university's Department of Political Science.

The program is funded through a grant from the Texas Bureau for Economic Understanding.

Dr. Thoman, in announcing the program, said approximately 30 scholarships are available. Those teachers receiving scholarships will be able to enroll for six graduate credit hours at absolutely no cost — free tuition, fees, books, and, in some cases, free university housing.

This is a marvelous opportunity for social studies teachers and it is hoped that a number of them from this particular area will make prompt application, since the number of scholarships is limited. The Canyon zip code is 79016.

The Free Enterprise Institute for Teachers certainly should be stimulating and beneficial for all concerned. "Political Systems and Capitalism" and "American Government and the Free Enterprise System" will be offered. Dr. Thoman said the courses present an opportunity to learn about the interaction between government and the free enterprise system.

There is a tremendous need throughout the state for the teaching of courses of this nature to better acquaint social studies teachers with the nation's cherished free enterprise system. Many teachers have not had the opportunity of taking such courses and West Texas State University and the Texas Bureau for Economic Understanding are due congratulations for making this particular Free Enterprise Institute possible. This is where a big need exists — the teaching of teachers in free enterprise.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce and the West Texas Chamber Foundation long have recognized this need, and right now they are putting together a program designed to reward teachers who do the best jobs in teaching free enterprise in the region's public schools at the secondary level.

The teaching and preaching of America's free enterprise system is something which cannot be overdone.

The same old story

U.S. Sen. John Tower says that "Once again the Soviet Union has shown total disdain for the unilateral concessions made by the Administration in restricting the introduction of new nuclear weapons into the European Theater."

His declaration came in response to announcement of the deployment of a new Soviet tactical nuclear missile in Eastern Europe.

"At the very instant the Carter Administration is saying the SALT II agreement is virtually completed," Texas' senior senator said, "the Soviets apparently feel quite comfortable in injecting an element of instability in U.S.-Soviet relations by deploying the SS-21 tactical nuclear missile. The United States, on the other hand, has long since decided against the early deployment of an enhanced radiation weapon."

Tower added that this latest move on the part of the Soviet government, reinforces the position taken by many opponents of the SALT II agreement that the treaty must be examined in the broader context of overall U.S.-Soviet relations, including Soviet adventures in Africa, the Middle East and elsewhere, and the balance of U.S.-Soviet conventional military and naval strength.

He said further that it is time for the Carter Administration to immediately reassess its entire approach to the SALT II agreement, as well as its basic foreign policy, and to do so before submitting the treaty to the Senate for ratification.

To all of which we shout a loud AMEN.

CHARLEY REESE

It's columnist's turn to declare, 'I told you so'

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

ORLANDO, Fla. — I am one of those guys who can eat crow or say, "I told you so," with equal aplomb. Today, it's my turn to say, "I told you so," in regard to the Panama Canal which our president with the advice and consent of some cowardly senators gave away to the miserable little country known as the Republic of Panama.

I told you that Jimmy Carter was a liar. He said on national television that the treaty his people negotiated would cost the American taxpayers "...not one single tax dollar." That was his exact phrase.

Listen to Rep. Robert E. Bauman, R-Md., a member of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, which has been conducting a hearing on legislation to implement the treaty:

"In our hearing over the last few weeks, we have been keeping a running account of the testimony from various administration officials," he said. "My rough calculation is that we are now at least past $3 billion in direct subsidies and costs that the American taxpayer will have to bear in order to carry out these treaties. It is likely over the life of the treaty that the amount will pass $4 billion."

Carter either lied or made a $4 billion error. Take your choice. I also told you that the end result of the Panama Canal giveaway would be a canal dominated by the communist bloc and that Panama would soon establish strong ties with the Soviet Union.

In commenting on his recent trip to Panama, Bauman said, "While we were there," we discovered that members of the Soviet Politburo had been in town negotiating the establishment of relations with the Soviet Union as well as a possible trade pact with the Soviets and the Eastern European communist countries, all of which will probably occur after October 1st when the treaties take place."

I'm no prophet and I was only one of many, many people who were saying the same things, but in addition to those who engage in deceit, there are plenty of Americans who engage in wishful thinking, a practice which is most often described as being moderate or reasonable. The society which views facing facts as an example of extremism needs a shrink.

If you look with unbiased eyes at Panama and its dictator, Omar Torrijos, who still runs the country through his puppet president, Royo, then future events require no psychic powers to foresee. Torrijos, Royo and all the others in key positions are Marxists.

Torrijos will seek the same power that Fidel Castro has by tapping the same source — the Soviet Union. He will become the Soviets' bully boy in Central America. Once he has established his ties and received his arms, he will nationalize the canal and kick us out. And we will do nothing because, by then, to do so would mean a confrontation with the Soviets for which we have neither the stomach nor the military strength.

Furthermore we will receive no support from our allies in Great Britain and Europe. When the Egyptian dictator, Gamal Nasser, nationalized the Suez Canal and abrogated an international treaty, we, the good old U.S. of A., prevented the British and the French from taking the canal by military force and re-establishing the terms of the treaty. Don't think they won't enjoy it when Torrijos and his Russian friends tell Timid Jimmy what he can do with that treaty.

If we were not being governed by fools, we would naturally be working to establish a strong relationship with Nicaragua which is the logical site for another cross-ismus canal. As it is, the fools in Washington are doing all they can to destroy the present Nicaraguan government which, when it does fall, will be replaced by a communist regime.

It is enough to make you question the loyalty of some of our decision-makers, but one should never underestimate the human capacity for sheer, innocent stupidity.

We should not be surprised. We elect charlatans and demagogues. Why should we be shocked when they turn out to be fools in very field except their own specialty which is manipulating gullible voters.

I was appalled but not surprised to read recently that Carter had to ask his security advisor if it was true, as one of the Israeli officials was telling him, that Jordan used to be part of the Palestine Mandate. That a man who had chosen to involve himself in the Middle East had not known that is equivalent to an automobile mechanic not knowing where a carburetor is located.

The spectacle would be hilarious if the consequences were not so grim. It is not even any fun to say, "I told you so." Nobody takes pleasure in pointing out that the pilot of the aircraft on which he is flying is a fake who doesn't know the first thing about landing a plane.

At any rate, when Central America goes to hell, remember the names of the people responsible. They will all act greatly surprised but at least you will know better than to fall for that gambit since I, and others, told you so well in advance.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Plight of Soviet prisoner told

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The persecution of Jews in the Soviet Union is no abstract evil for Israel's leaders. It is a continuing problem that arouses their deep personal concern.

A particularly harrowing case was brought to my attention by Aliza Begin, wife of Israel's prime minister. During a recent visit to Washington, she handed me a file that she had brought from Israel. It detailed the plight of Ida Nudel, who is rotting in the filth of a Siberian labor camp. She is the only female Zionist imprisoned by the Soviet government.

Mrs. Begin asked that I bring Nudel's case to the attention of the American public. It was not Mrs. Begin's first plea for the courageous Zionist dissident. In a telegram last June, Mrs. Begin appealed to Rosalynn Carter on Nudel's behalf.

"Have learned with utmost distress," she wired the first lady, "that Ida Nudel, the brave fighter for the elementary human right to join her family in Israel, is to be tried in Moscow ... We women must stand by her in this terrible ordeal. Literally at the last minute, I appeal for your intervention on her behalf."

Mrs. Carter apparently did not intervene personally in the case. She "sent a cable to Mrs. Begin expressing sadness and sympathy for the plight of Ida Nudel," the White House told us. And she told Mrs. Begin that an American embassy representative had been sent to Nudel's trial.

The State Department informed us, however, that the embassy official had been denied admittance to the courtroom, where Nudel was sentenced to four years of living death in a labor camp.

Government sources told us that Prime Minister Begin also championed Nudel's cause at a meeting with Vice President Mondale during the peace treaty negotiations.

What had Ida Nudel done to earn this high-level interest in her case? She had been a persistent, vocal critic of the Soviet government for seven years, refusing to be intimidated by torture and harassment. Indeed, she had become the "guardian angel" of Jewish political prisoners in Russia.

Denied an exit visa in 1971, Nudel fought official repression with a determination and ingenuity that enraged Soviet authorities. Working alone in her small Moscow apartment, she collected information about dissidents who had disappeared into the Gulag Archipelago, sent them parcels and news of their families, and nursed many of them back to health after they were released.

"The one person above all others who helped keep up morale and who constantly helped with letters and parcels, the person rated by all to be a superhuman angel, is Ida Nudel," wrote a Jewish prisoner who spent five years in Siberian exile.

Nudel described the price she paid in a letter to her sister in Israel. "What haven't they done to me since I first applied to leave!" she wrote. "I was placed in a prison cell ... I was beaten and hounded like a wild beast during a hunt. Many times I have been seized on the street and thrown into dirty, smelly cellars they call a detention cell."

When she went to a clinic for treatment of a heart condition she developed in 1972, Nudel was treated instead for alcoholism, though she does not drink.

Finally, on June 1, 1978, Nudel went too far. She hung a banner from her apartment balcony and openly criticized the government. When police moved in, she defiantly dumped water on them. She was charged with "malicious hooliganism" and sent to Siberia.

Last September, contact with Nudel ceased. She explained in a last letter: "I will become silent while being confident that you will not remain silent. Ask my tormentors for information about me and then my suffering will have a meaning ..."

Footnote: The State Department assured me that they are watching Nudel's case "very closely," and that official concern had been conveyed to the Soviet government "at very high levels."

MILITARY MARRIAGE: When Lt. j.g. Gary M. Kaleita married Tawny Molter on Dec. 21, 1977, a rear admiral sent them his warmest congratulations from Washington. But Kaleita's commanding officer, Capt. Thad H. Harden, sent in a fitness report that effectively torpedoed the young officer's hopes of a Navy career. For Kaleita had committed the unpardonable sin in Harden's brassbound view: He had married an enlisted woman.

Kaleita met Molter when he was an ensign and she a radioman second class at the Naval Communications Station in Nea Makri, Greece. When Harden heard of the budding romance, he summoned Kaleita to his office where, the junior officer told us, he received "the worst dressing down I have ever faced, including physical threats and extremely abusive language"

Harden threatened the ensign with court martial and Molter with transfer back to the United States if they persisted, but Kaleita checked with a legal officer and stood up to Harden's bullying. The result was a series of bad fitness reports that would ruin Kaleita's career; he has decided to resign his commission in June, 1980.

The admiral? He is Rear Adm. George B. Shick Jr., who visited the Greek base in 1977, met the young couple and encouraged them to marry. He later wrote: "The good news of your forthcoming marriage brought a smile to my face ... People like you two make the Navy go ...."

The unsmiling Capt. Harden refused to talk to us.

INSIDE REPORT:

Carter's Rhodesian trap said on verge of closing

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — Testifying before Congress March 29, the administration's principal policymaker on Africa tightened the catch on the Rhodesian trap that has been insensibly built for Jimmy Carter over two years and is now on the verge of closing.

Richard Moose, assistant secretary of state for Africa, had the chance before the House African Affairs Subcommittee to disengage the president from blind support for Soviet-backed "Patriotic Front" guerrillas. The question was whether the "Front" or Prime Minister Ian Smith and his black allies were in closer compliance with settlement guidelines set by Congress.

A formidable case can be made that last autumn Smith and the biracial moderates were ready to comply fully while the Patriotic Front was intransigent. At the least, both sides could be accused of playing to the galleries. But Moose doggedly testified, in contradiction to reality, that the Patriotic Front, not Smith's group, met the two conditions set by Congress: an all-parties conference and internationally supervised elections.

That climaxed over two years of a policy that now finds President Carter in this uncomfortable position: supporting Marxist terrorists against the ballot box while the U.S. Congress and a predicted new Conservative government in Great Britain race to lift western economic sanctions against Rhodesia. The candid appraisal by one gloomy State Department official: "The problems are going to be horrendous for Mr. Carter."

The policy originated in the belief expressed to us in March 1977 by one of Carter's senior White House aides that "the white man is finished in southern Africa." That meant the U.S. must get on the side of the blacks, even if their ideology was Marxist and their record on human rights questionable.

This policy was becoming untenable last October when the administration reluctantly granted U.S. entry visas for Smith and his black colleague, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole. Developments behind the scenes, not revealed until now, began pressures on the Carter policy which today are reaching the breaking point.

The Case-Javits amendment, signed into law Sept. 26, requires agreement by the Rhodesian government to attend an "all-parties conference" as one condition for lifting sanctions. So long as Smith objected, it was no problem for Carter. But Senate conservatives, headed by North Carolina's Jesse Helms, persuaded Smith to agree.

Soon after Smith arrived in Washington last fall, Sen. Helms directed an aide, John Carbaugh, to inform the State Department of Smith's agreement. According to Carbaugh, the reaction from Douglas Bennet, assistant secretary of state for congressional relations, was enthusiastic; Bennet suggested an all-parties Rhodesian conference at Camp David, site of the just-completed Mideast summit.

But Bennet soon was chastened by a cold wind from Africa. According to Carbaugh, Bennet reported that Joshue Nkomo, one-half the Patriotic Front, "will not come"; as for the other half, Robert Mugabe, "I gather he won't come either." Shifting ground, the Carter administration soon prescribed a conference agenda, to which Smith objected. Both sides now had reservations, but there was no question who wanted to talk and who wanted to fight last October.

That set the stage for the March 29 House hearing when Rep. Stephen Solarz of New York, the subcommittee chairman, asked Moose who was complying with the Case-Javits amendment and who wasn't. Incredibly, Moose testified that Smith, Sithole and their colleague, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, all "rejected" the "concept" of an all-parties conference but that Mugabe and Nkomo "would attend."

That seemed a little thick even for Solarz, no friend of Smith. "Do you know if they have said that they would attend?" he asked. Moose's classic reply: "If you listen to Mr. Nkomo, you may be a bit confused about this, but our belief is that he would attend. I think that he is not necessarily speaking to us when he makes those statements."

Solarz noted that Smith had agreed to attend when he visited Washington. Quite so, said Moose, but later Smith and associates "were not willing to negotiate seriously." What he failed to mention was the added ingredient of U.S. insistence that the all-parties conference consider a transitional administration including the Patriotic Front.

Helms may well raise these points in the Senate when he introduces a bill to lift sanctions. That debate will find Carter backing forces in Rhodesia that will refuse to attend conferences, object to elections and have now demonstrated insufficient military or political strength to seriously disrupt the just-completed Rhodesian elections. The only consolation in Foggy Bottom is the glum prediction that the biracial coalition will be unable to maintain itself against outside force — a dubious and unworthy prophecy.

Second bowling event scheduled

Interested Midlanders can do their part to help children with learning disabilities and have fun at the same time at Saturday's Second Annual Bowl-a-thon sponsored by the Midland Association of Children with Learning Disabilities.

The event will begin at 6 p.m. at Air Park Lanes. Funds raised by participants will go to further the education of a teacher interested in the field of learning disabilities.

Participants are to sign up sponsors who promise to pay an amount for each pin knocked down in a three-game series.

The Midland Association sent representatives to the state and national conventions of the national organization and maintains a library of professional books to help parents and teachers keep up to date in the field.

Learning disabilities may affect up to 20 percent of all school children. Untreated, it can prevent a child from mastering the basics and do extreme damage to the child's self confidence, according to Midlander Sandra Rose, an organizer of the event Saturday.

Learning disabilities usually are disorders of the central nervous system that interfere with one or more learning functions.

Midland public schools have classes for the learning disabled in all elementary, junior high and high schools.

Sponsor sheets for the bowl-a-thon and more information about learning disabilities may be had from Mrs. Rose at 694-4271.

Taking aim at the pins at the end of the lane are, from left, bowlers Rusty Stewart, 14, Chris Rose, 11, and Robbie Powell, 13, who will be participating in the Midland Association for Children With Learning Disabilities Second Annual Bowl-A-Thon to be held at 6 p.m. Saturday at Air Park Lanes. Bowlers have been obtaining pledges, to be paid on a per-pin basis. Additional information may be obtained by telephoning 694-4271. (Staff Photo by Mike Kardos)

Justice official advises tough EPA investigations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top-ranking Justice Department official says the Environmental Protection Agency should hire tough new investigators, insulating them from "political finagling" so they could crack down on polluters who dump hazardous waste.

Associate Attorney General Michael J. Egan made the comments in a speech prepared for delivery today at the National Enforcement Investigations Center in Denver.

Deputy EPA Administrator Barbara Blum, in a speech scheduled for delivery at the same meeting, said her agency is already moving to strengthen its investigations and prosecutions.

She indicated the EPA hopes to investigate as many as 300 waste sites annually, leading to an estimated 50 prosecutions a year.

She said the agency will divert at least 50 staff members from regional offices and headquarters to join the 22 investigators and attorneys now working on hazardous waste disposal cases. And she said the EPA will ask for a $131 million supplemental budget appropriation to add 190 new people.

Speaking for the Justice Department, Egan said, "I have a hard time imagining anything more contemptible than an individual or organization that would deliberately dump poisonous materials without regard for human life and health.

"About the only thing worse would be a government that had the tools but not the will to do something about it," he said.

Egan said EPA is "particularly weak" in conducting basic investigations "in the FBI sense of the word."

"Law enforcement without adequate investigation is simply impossible," he said.

Egan urged the environmental agency to "hire some people who know what it's like to go after a tough cookie and get the job done. When the enforcement network is in place, insulate it from political finagling."

He also advised the EPA to be less eager to settle cases out of court rather than press charges.

Death still met with disbelief

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a multi-part series on death and how people adjust to the crisis. The Reporter-Telegram will take an in-depth look at the emotions and realities involved when a person learns he is dying.)

By GARY OTT
Plainview Daily Herald
News Editor

Percy Montgomery is a normal-enough-looking fellow.

He's 5-11, weighs approximately 175 pounds, has short brown hair combed to one side and sports a well-groomed mustache.

Percy Montgomery also lives a pretty-much normal life.

He's married, has two small children, owns a small house near

First in a series

Plainview, works a 40-hour week at his blue-collar job and enjoys watching sports on television, especially the Dallas Cowboys.

Life seems pretty normal for Percy Montgomery.

There's one problem: He has cancer.

"I WAS 27 when my doctor told me I had cancer," Montgomery recalled. "That was a year-and-a-half ago. If I'm lucky I can continue to live my normal life," he said with a sincere smile. "But, I know there's a very real chance I won't. If nothing else, this experience has made me a realist."

Montgomery, a ficitious name he agreed to use for this article, is now 29 and receives cancer treatment regularly.

Doctors — and there have been several — think there is a "reasonably good chance" the cancer won't spread. But, they can't be sure.

"I TELL THE doctors from the very beginning that I want to hear the truth," Montgomery said, his smile quickly fading. "I'm young, married, have two children and a lot of responsibilities. I don't have time for sympathy. I want facts."

Montgomery was not always so brave. Nor, has he always been so eager to hear the truth.

He relates the following scenario:

Time — August, 1977.

Place — A small farming community in eastern Oklahoma.

After rejecting pleas for several months by his wife that he visit a doctor concerning his nagging but seemingly small health problems, Montgomery finally concedes and sees his family physician.

The eventual news: Cancer.

"I CRIED LIKE a baby when the doctor told me. I was angry — very bitter," Montgomery said, an intense look in his eyes. "I cursed God. It all seemed so unfair. In all honesty, it still does. I don't think you ever get over that inner bitterness.

"Over the past year I've accepted the fact that I have cancer but I'll never understand why it happened to me. I guess there's no answer to that question, is there?"

Death, of course, is one of the great paradoxes of our times. Everyone faces it eventually — it is a cornerstone of most religions — and yet, for years it was rarely even discussed.

Now, as people — dying patients, members of their families, doctors and religious leaders — have become more educated on the subject, death can be, and is, discussed openly.

Ironically, though, the dying patient often faces the realities of death better than others.

Family members, understandably, are sometimes too emotionally involved with the patient to discuss the subject.

DOCTORS, BY their own admission, have had difficulty facing death and communicating with the dying patient.

Some religious leaders can seem uncaring about the emotional realities involved with dying — talking, instead, only of spiritual philosophies concerning "life after death."

Fortunately, in recent years, these attitudes have changed and most experts in the field credit the open and honest approach to death as being the key reason.

Nevertheless, dying patients generally are still the most honest about the subject. In many cases, they are able to convey their innermost thoughts — openingly admitting their despair but, at the same time, accepting reality and maintaining continuity in their lives.

Over the past month, The Herald has discussed death with several persons — including those who are dying from terminal diseases and those who have a history of heart trouble.

PERHAPS SURPRISINGLY, most accept their fate even though they don't understand why it is happening to them.

"It's hard to explain," said a 45-year-old Plainview woman who says she expects to die from cancer within the next couple of years. "When you're first told you have a terminal illness and will probably die, your reaction is one of disbelief.

"Deep inside I knew the doctor was right but I wanted to get a second opinion," she added. "Once the diagnosis was confirmed I had a horrible feeling of hopelessness, followed by anger then hope that somehow I would live.

"Also, I had a great deal of self-pity at first," she said, a smile beginning to appear on her weathered but friendly face. "Once you get that (self-pity) out of your system then you can begin facing reality and moving forward with your life. Of course, that's easier said than done."

ONE THING MOST victims agreed on is that once you realize death is a probability you don't all of a sudden sell your possessions and travel around the world "jamming 25 years of living into one or two."

Instead, most concurred, they try to maintain continuity in their lives. "I have become closer to my family," said a 50-year-old businessman who has suffered two heart attacks and lives with the realization that a third and fatal one is a very real possibility.

"Instead of wanting to live extravagantly and spend money foolishly, I would rather gain a better understanding of life and the simple things that most of us are too busy to notice or enjoy," he said.

"When you realize death is a possibility you tend to slow down and appreciate the really important things like love, family and friendship," he said. "It's a shame you have to be facing death before you understand such a simple lesson."

(Part Two of the death series will deal with family members and how they cope with the realization that a loved one is dying.)

House forwards state spending bill

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House members used last week to complete work on their $20.3 billion, two-year state spending bill, sending it to the Senate for action on a final vote of 88-54.

The legislation includes 7 percent pay increase for state employees and public school teachers; a controversial prohibition against using state and federal funds for abortions was deleted; and, it is alleged the appropriations bill violates a spending limitation which House members approved earlier in the session.

Also during the fifteenth week of the session, House members finally okayed the proposed constitutional amendment allowing churches and non-profit organizations to conduct bingo games and raffles, free from the state's prohibition against gambling, on a 103-37 vote.

That proposal now goes back to the Senate because the House added some stringent controls before the bingo could be legally conducted.

The proposed constitutional amendment, prohibiting a state income tax, did not fare so well.

It failed again on a 99-38 vote, short of the required 100 to send the legislation to the Senate, and even Gov. Bill Clements, who endorsed the amendment, admits the issue may be dead for this legislative session.

Rept. Tom Craddick of Midland voted against the appropriations bill and for the income tax amendment and for the bingo amendment.

CDC to begin sampling residents for high DDT

TRIANA, Ala. (AP) — The Center for Disease Control has set May 11 to begin taking blood samples from Triana's 1,000 residents suspected of having high levels of DDT in their bodies.

An epidemiologist for the center in Atlanta, Dr. Kathleen Kreiss, said the community south of Huntsville could become a living laboratory for the study of DDT's effects on humans.

She said the tests are a follow-up to the sampling of blood from 12 volunteers in February. Those tests found high concentrations of the pesticide's residue.

The residents of the mostly black town were contaminated by eating fish taken from Indian Creek and Huntsville Spring Branch, which were polluted by DDT running off from a manufacturing plant at Redstone Arsenal near Huntsville.

The Tennessee Valley Authority found high levels of DDT in fish taken from the waters in December. The plant, operated on Army property by Olin Chemical Corp., made DDT for some 30 years before closing down in the early 1970s.

Palatibility also considered in discussion of nitrite ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blue bacon at breakfast? Tasting like burnt rubber?

Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., says the Agriculture Department hasn't paid enough attention to what bacon may look and taste like if new substitutes are found to replace nitrite, a widely used curing agent.

Nitrite is under review because of fears it could cause cancer. If that is proven, the Justice Department says nitrite will have to be banned immediately.

The USDA wants Congress to set a one-year moratorium on can ban and then allow a gradual phasing out of nitrite as acceptable substitutes are developed.

Supporters of nitrite point to its ability to prevent organisms that can cause botulisum, a deadly food poisoning. Nitrite also is used in the curing process to enhance the color of bacon and other products.

Foley says that if a new chemical is found to prevent botulism and is entirely safe it might have other side effects.

"Suppose it turned pork blue and made it taste like burnt rubber," he suggested at a recent meeting of newspaper farm editors. "There are some elements of taste, palatability and color, I think, that are involved here besides just safety."

Foley, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said the department's plan to find a substitute does not give enough consideration to "the problems of color and palatability."

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland agrees that taste is an important factor in food, but adds that most people probably could adjust to new colors if they had to.

Bergland, who followed Foley on the same program, was asked about the committee chairman's concern that a replacement for nitrite might turn pork blue and make it taste like burnt rubber.

"Well, we're concerned, of course, but taste is like beauty...," Bergland said, pausing.

"In the mouth of the beholder," a voice in the audience prompted.

"In the mouth of the beholder," Bergland said amid audience laughter.

They fought the floods—and lost

Beaumont, Texas, residents Danny Martin and Dave Brown, like residents of flood-striken areas throughout the nation, begin cleaning up the debris. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

Donn Erickson fought for four days and lost. Betty J. Alexander lost, too. So did Mike and Cordie McLain. So did John Rasmussen.

The rains came and the rivers rose, and the people lost.

Erickson, a North Dakota guidance counselor, lost the dream home he'd built along the banks of the Red River. Mike and Cordie McLain lost much of their furniture when the Illinois River's overflowing waters chased them from their home in Rome, Ill. Mrs. Alexander and her eight children fled their home outside Jackson, Miss., before the rising Pearl River. Rasmussen stayed on his North Dakota farm — and watched the flood cover his tools, his crops, his stored grain.

•

It was Monday when Coast Guardsmen finally carried Donn Erickson from the home he'd built 13 years ago on a "gorgeous piece of property" beside the Red River. After he left, the river won.

Water shot through a weak spot in a dike; a water main broke in his front yard, and a murky, gushy mass erupted like a volcano, covering Erickson's home and four others with eight to 10 feet of water.

The 39-year-old Erickson had fought four days with no more than an hour of sleep each day, packing and carrying sandbags to shore up a dike that city engineers didn't expect would hold. His sons, Scot, 14, and Mark 17, and their hockey and wrestling teammates, helped as well.

"On Saturday, we thought we had made it," Erickson said. "They said the river would crest at 48½ feet. We felt excited about that."

But the relentless Red kept rising, fed by intermittent rain and snow, and the forecast was revised upward. When the city of Grand Forks, without explanation, took its pump away from the dike near his house, Erickson knew it was all over.

"I got that depressed feeling again, and I told my wife and kids to leave," he said.

"I realized we had reached a point where we had to go," said Jeanne Erickson, 37. "I wondered what we would come back to."

Mrs. Erickson and the children went to a friend's motel. But Erickson stayed, still working frantically to hold the 8-foot wooden dike behind his home.

Weariness overcame him Monday, and he stopped a moment to rest on the stairs of his house. Six hours later, the Coast Guard carried him out. He slept for more than 10 hours, while the water raged over his property.

"We never had more than six inches of water in our basement before," Erickson said. "In other floods, we used a very small pump and we always stayed dry."

He says he doesn't blame the city for what happened to him. His goal now is to protect his neighbors.

"We sandbagged today, yesterday, and we'll do it again tomorrow," he said. "We want to do all we can to help them now."

•

The Illinois River is receding but still swollen. More than a month of flooding is ending now, and hundreds of weary, displaced families are making their way home.

Mike a.id Cordie McLain and their seven children — ages 7 to 19 — fled five weeks ago, staying nearly a week in a church basement and a month in a single motel room.

Last week, they went back to their house in Rome, about 12 miles upstream from Peoria. The house is standing but ravaged by floods.

"There is an awful lot of mud and the smell is just tremendous," said Mrs. McLain. "The furniture down in the family room and two bedrooms is all ruined. We took as much furniture as we could upstairs, but what we couldn't take, we lost."

Repairs and cleanup could take weeks. Wooden paneling has been splintered and warped, and an entire floor of insulation must be replaced.

The muddy Illinois, which ran several feet deep through the town's streets until recently, has retreated from the McLain's front yard, but it still encircles the homes of scores of their neighbors on lower ground. It has left behind buckled and broken walls, damaged streets, crumbling foundations and an enormous scattering of logs and debris which covers the stricken area like a blanket.

"The kids got kind of nervous and scared, watching the water come closer and closer and wondering what was going to happen next," she said.

When the furnace went, so did the family, all nine of them straight to a Red Cross shelter in the basement of the Rome Baptist Church.

After a week, they moved into a single motel room near Peoria, where tensions sometimes flared and McLain, a shift worker for the Caterpiller Tractor Co., often got no more than two hours sleep.

"We could have split the family up, but I believe a family should stay together," Mrs. McLain said. "When you stand together through things you come out stronger as a group."

•

Since Easter Sunday, Betty J. Alexander and her eight youngsters have made their home at the Boys Club building in Jackson, Miss. They sleep on folding cots set up by the Red Cross on the club's basketball court. What possessions they have left — clothing, toys, a few books — dot benches where they spend the days. One child is asleep in a military-type cot under one of the court's baskets.

They were ordered to evacuate their home in the Flowood area east of Jackson when the rising Pearl River threatened a levee protecting the community. Mrs. Alexander said the storms that triggered the flooding had already ripped the roof off her home, exposing her belongings to the elements.

"We got out as much as we could, but everything was wet," she said. "A lot of the stuff we did get out was lost during the moving process."

Hers is one of the last families sheltered at the Boys Club. "This place was full when we got here," she said. "Everybody, men, women and children together, and there wasn't much privacy."

She said she has been promised a trailer to live in but, until it arrives, will make do with the two undamaged rooms of her home.

"They've been pretty nice to us here and we've had good food," she said. "The Red Cross gave us some clothing because what we had mildewed."

Mrs. Alexander said she receives welfare payments to buy food for her family. "I don't have any money and I don't have a job," she said. "By the time you buy enough to eat, you don't have anything left for new furniture and linen."

•

John Rasmussen sits nearly trapped in his farm home near Drayton, N.D., watching helplessly as his grain rots.

"I said after the 1950 flood that I'd never stay in this country through another one, yet here I am, going through it again," he said.

He looked out the kitchen window, and water extended to the horizon. He sees his machinery, moved to higher ground on a nearby road before the Red River flood hit last week, rusting wheel-deep in water.

He sees water three feet deep up the side of his machine shed, and he says the basement of his home "is full of water."

Most of all, he worries about 28,000 bushels of barley, sunflower seeds and wheat stored in grain bins in his yard. He wonders how much is wet and spoiled and how much it will cost him.

Rasmussen, 50, also awaits for the water to recede so he can get into the fields of the 970 acres he farms with his son-in-law. "Only 3,200 square feet are out of water," he noted.

"The only other time my grain got wet was the 1948 flood," he said. "This year, we'll be looking at only half-income off this flooded land — if we're lucky."

Rasmussen, who has farmed since 1947, built a dike around 240 acres in 1975, but last year's flood washed over it and he didn't rebuild it. "It's almost hopeless to dike," he said.

"It looks like a mess and irritates me that we're paying the price," added Rasmussen, president of the Red River Flood Control Association. "I believe that a third of this water we're battling wouldn't be in the river channel if it was controlled. We're suffering 25 years of water mismanagement on both the North Dakota and Minnesota sides of the river."

Rasmussen, his brown hair turning gray, said he and his wife, Donna, won't leave their farm unless they lose electricity. The farm is less than a mile from the overflowing Red River and is on the bank of the flooded Park River eight miles south of Drayton.

"It's wooded along the river bank," Rasmussen mused, "and it's pretty in the summer."

Cancer antibody discovered

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers at Boston University say an antibody first found in the blood of brain cancer patients now appears to be present in the blood of most cancer patients.

The antibody, which usually is not found in healthy persons, may provide a sensitive blood test for cancer, Dr. Samuel Bogoch told the American Academy of Neurology meeting in Chicago Friday.

Bogoch said in a telephone interview that a test for the antibody appears to have spotted developing cancer in seven persons who had no other signs of the disease.

The Boston University School of Medicine neurologist said a study with blood samples from 290 cancer patients and controls showed the antibody was present in nearly 90 percent of the 162 cancer patients.

He said it also was present in 16 of the 128 persons who either were healthy or had diseases other than cancer. That would appear to falsely indicate the presence of cancer. But Bogoch said seven of those 16 later developed cancer, suggesting the test had been right.

Currently, there is no general blood test for cancer. Such tests exist only for specific cancers, such as cancer of the colon.

Researchers have sought such a test both for diagnosing cancer in ill persons, and for potential use in mass screening. One person in four comes down with cancer at some time in his life.

Bogoch said it was impossible to say yet whether the cancer antibody test would be useful for screening. But he said it was an encouraging sign that the test appears to have spotted cancer in otherwise healthy people.

The special cancer antibody is sensitive to a protein which Bogoch has named malignin, first isolated from brain cancer cells. Bogoch said it now appears that malignin or close chemical relatives are manufactured by most cancer cells.

Soviet dissidents receive heroes' welcome in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Eduard Kuznetsov and Mark Dymshits arrived in Israel to a heroes' welcome today. They were the last of seven Soviet Jews freed by the Kremlin after nine years in prison for plotting to escape from the Soviet Union by hijacking an airliner.

"Blessed be he who has sustained us and brought us to this day," said Prime Minister Menachem Begin, quoting a Jewish prayer celebrating joyous occasions.

Kuznetsov and Dymshits, pale and gaunt from their prison years but smiling broadly, arrived at Ben-Gurion airport on a flight from New York. On Friday they and three other Russian dissidents were swapped for two convicted Soviet spies.

The men were welcomed by an emotional crowd of relatives, friends and government officials led by Begin, himself a former prisoner in a Soviet labor camp.

"Thanks to your efforts we have arrived to be with you," said Dymshits. "I'm happy that after nine years I can join my country and my family in my homeland."

On Sunday, Begin also headed the crowd of relatives, friends and officials at Ben-Gurion Airport to greet five of the Jews who were freed last Tuesday and arrived from Vienna with 82 other Soviet Jewish immigrants.

"We waited for you for 8½ years, but the day finally came," Begin told Wolf Zalmanson, 39; Anatoli Altman, 36; Boris Penson, 33; Leib Khnokh, 35, and Hillel Butman, 46.

School children sang as relatives and friends hugged the first five immigrants and showered them with flowers. Begin greeted them in Russian and escorted them into the terminal, where they were given Israeli citizenship cards.

Waiting for Butman was the 5-year-old daughter, Geula, he had never seen. The child, conceived during a prison visit by his wife and born after Mrs. Butman emigrated to Israel, was taken aboard the plane for her first meeting with her father in private. He proudly carried her down the steps.

Butman and the other six were among 26 Jews sentenced for plotting to hijack a Soviet airliner in Leningrad in 1970 after they were refused exit visas to Israel. Kuznetsov and Dymshits were sentenced to death, but after worldwide protests the sentences were commuted to 15 years imprisonment.

Three of the 26 — Alexei Murzhenko, Iosof Mendelevich and Yuri Fyodorov — are still imprisoned. Speaking in Hebrew, which he learned while in labor camps, Butman paid tribute to them as well as to other Soviet Jews, the so-called Prisoners of Zion, still trying to leave the country.

Begin conveyed greetings to the group from President Carter, who negotiated the swap of the five men for the two spies. "And he promised me he will continue with the efforts to bring about the release of all Prisoners of Zion in the Soviet Union," Begin said.

The best-known of those still held is Anatoly Shcharansky, whose trial and conviction on espionage charges last year was denounced by Carter and other foreign leaders. The U.S. government is reported negotiating for his release, and his wife, Avital, who was at the airport, told reporters, "With God's help, Anatoly's next."

Kuznetsov told an interviewer in New York the hijack plot failed because all the plotters were under close surveillance. Four had been in prison before and the others had applied to emigrate.

"In the beginning, we thought our chances of success in stealing a plane were about 95 percent," he said. "But the longer I considered it, the proportions turned upside down. and as the day grew nearer, the chance of failure was 95 percent.

Ginzburg, family to join Solzhenitsyn in exile

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg and his family plan to join author Alexander Solzhenitsyn in exile at the novelist's 51-acre Vermont estate, after being invited to "live there as if they were coming home."

Ginzburg, the most celebrated of five dissidents released Friday in exchange for two Soviet spies, said Sunday in an interview that he expects his wife and two children to join him in Vermont in a month.

They will stay at Solzhenitsyn's home "indefinitely," he said.

"It was a misunderstanding," he said, denying reports that his wife was reluctant to leave the Soviet Union. "What she is saying is that she has lots to do before she leaves."

The 42-year-old human rights activist, who has been in Soviet prison camps three times, said he was reluctant to leave his homeland, though he acknowledged: "I am a little tired of seeing four walls.

"It's my country. I love my country regardless of its government," Ginzburg said, before describing Soviet government officials as a "new breed of person ... creatures."

Ginzburg will leave for Vermont on Tuesday, where he will join Solzhenitsyn, who has been in exile since 1974.

Dressed in his gray suit and white dress shirt, but without a tie, Ginzburg looked far more robust than he had Saturday when, at a news conference, he looked ghostly white.

He declined to discuss his health other than to say that he was suffering from an ulcer that had been aggravated "extremely" during his latest confinement.

That hardly toned down his optimism.

"I hope I will live long enough to see the time when the human rights movement in the Soviet Union will no longer be necessary," he said.

Then, he said, he would be free to express himself completely, "to write about my favorite subject, which is ballet."

"As yet it is difficult," he said. "It is very difficult to write about ballet when friends all around you are being put into prison here and there and everywhere."

Two of the other dissidents, Mark Dymshits and Eduard Kuznetsov, attended a Soviet Jewry rally here Sunday before flying to Israel, where they will settle.

Georgi Vins, a Baptist pastor, attended church services in the capital with President Carter.

The fifth dissident, Valentin Moroz of the Ukraine, was back here after attending a rally in his honor in Philadelpia late Saturday. He was also offered a teaching position at Harvard on Sunday.

Terrorists bomb Venice

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Terrorists set off at least 20 bombs overnight, blasting police stations, political offices and a newspaper office in Venice and several nearby towns, authorities reported today.

No injuries were reported and damage was generally light.

There were no immediate reports of any group claiming responsibility for the blasts.

'Our struggle must continue'

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the five dissidents exchanged for two Russians spies has urged the United States not to relax in the efforts to free Soviet Jews.

"Our struggle must continue," warned Mark Dymshits Sunday as he addressed a crowd of some 100,000 that rallied at the Dag Hammarskjold Plaza near the United Nations.

Another of the dissidents — Eduard Kuznetsov — attended the rally, along with New York senators Jacob Javits and Daniel Moynihan.

"I am very, very thankful to you, you who fought for our release," said the 52-year-old Dymshits. "I'm struck as if by lightning."

Kuznetsov was met here by his wife, Sylva Zalmanson, who served a prison term for her role in the attempted plane hijacking that put her husband and Dymshits in prison, at one time under sentence of death. She later was released and emigrated to Israel.

The Kuznetsovs and Dymshits left the rally to go to Kennedy Airport, where they boarded a plane for Israel.

At the United Nations, Kuznetzov told the crowd through an interpreter: "Just two days ago we were in a Soviet camp, and I couldn't imagine that I would be standing here and thanking you on behalf of all Soviet Jews.

"How many times I said the words — 'Next year in Jerusalem.' Now it's not next year but the next day. Tomorrow at last I will be in Jerusalem."

In Philadelphia, a rally that had been planned to protest the imprisonment of Ukranian Valentin Moroz turned into another outpouring of joy when Moroz himself appeared before the crowd.

While in Washington, a fourth Soviet dissident, Baptist Georgi Vins, went to church with another Baptist, President Carter.

The fifth and most famous, Alexander Ginzberg, remained in his New York hotel room arranging to move to Vermont to live with an old friend and associate, Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

Carter acted for humanitarian reasons in prisoner swap

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials say the Carter administration became involved in the exchange of Soviet dissidents for Soviet spies out of humanitarian concerns, although the nation never before took part in such a swap.

President Carter's decision to take the precedent-setting action is seen as a possible first step in future efforts to secure the release of other dissidents held by the Soviets, most notably Anatoly Shcharansky.

Asked why the United States decided to enter the swap, which took place Friday, one official replied: "The humanitarian grounds were overwhelming."

The administration felt it would be improper to ignore an opportunity to free five persons from Soviet confinement, regardless of whether they had direct ties to the United States or whether the swap involved the release of spies held in this nation, reporters were told.

As for the Soviet decision to take part (in the swap of prisoners), the official, who asked not to be identified by name, said: "Historically, they have gone to extraordinary lengths to get their spies back."

As for the Soviet decision to take part, the official, who asked not to be identified by name, said: "Historically, they have gone to extraordinary lengths to get their spies back."

One intangible result the Russians may be seeking is the goodwill of the U.S. Senate when a vote is taken on a strategic arms limitation treaty now in the final stages of negotiation.

Asked wheher the decision would help win votes for an arms treaty, another official, who also asked to remain anonymous, said, "This creates a better atmosphere" in terms of the overall U.S.-Soviet relationship.

Carter, who approved the swap and signed papers commuting the 50-year jail terms of the two Russians convicted of spying, made no public comments on the exchange until Sunday, when he attended church with one of the freed dissidents.

Teaching a Bible class at the First Baptist Church, which he attends when in Washington, Carter said, "It is sinful to remain silent in the face of injustice. The people who know Christ, who know God, must represent justice on behalf of the oppressed everywhere."

The president apparently was referring to, among others, the dissidents who remain imprisoned in the Soviet Union and the efforts of his companion for the morning, Georgi P. Vins, a 51-year-old Russian minister, to lead a group of Baptists in his native land.

Vins, who Carter said had been transported in a cattle car in Siberia only four days earlier, sat in the adult couples Bible class taught by the president. Then, with Carter at his side, he attended the church's morning worship service.

In the lesson, Carter combined elements of a U.S. civics course and veiled criticism of the Soviet Union, seeking a Biblical analogy to Vins' life of persecution.

Carter touched on a citizen's duties, recounting for Vins and the approximately 100 others in the class the American expression, "My country, right or wrong," and stating:

"I doubt God would approve that statement. American citizens constantly have a duty to inquire into the rightness of our country's actions, and that is not treason. That is not a violation of God's laws."

The Russian remained silent throughout the 35-minute lesson. As the president lectured, Vins wiped his mustache and goatee with a gold-colored cloth handkerchief. A nervous tick appeared in his right cheek and he leaned his head forward intently.

Vins remained at the church when Carter departed.

More unleaded gas is the goal of a $205 million expansion being carried out at Marathon Oil Co.'s Garyville, La., refinery by Fluor Engineers and Constructors, Inc. The expansion, to be completed by late 1979, will more than double the refinery's unleaded gas capacity to more than 100,000 barrels per day. Cleanup bill would hit $600 million annually

By BILL RICHARDS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is preparing legislation that would require oil and chemical producers to pay a total of as much as $600 million annually into an emergency fund for cleaning up hazardous waste dumps and oil spills, federal officials said Sunday.

The move reflects growing concern at the federal level over continuing reports of waste dump sites containing chemicals and other hazardous substances that are causing health and environmental problems.

ENERGY
OIL & GAS

Federal officials who have been under fire from members of Congress for moving too slowly on the problem also are planning a crash enforcement program scheduled to be announced Monday. Under it, up to 300 investigations and 50 prosecutions of waste site operators and contributors are planned annually, officials said.

In a speech scheduled for delivery in Denver Monday, Barbara Blum, deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, is to tell a joint EPA-Justice Department task force working on the hazardous waste problem that 17 sites are being investigated by EPA for possible prosecution.

Other EPA officials said these include several sites in upstate New York — in addition to the much publicized Love Canal chemical dump — and sites in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Federal officials estimate that between 1,200 and 2,000 dump sites around the country may contain hazardous waste that could develop into a public health hazard. The cost of cleanup has been estimated in the billions.

Federal sources said that the administration's legislation, which is before the Office of Management and Budget for review, would require chemical and oil producers to pay a fee on either production facilities or final products. The money would be used for emergency relief in the event of dangerous waste dumps or oil spills.

This legislation is the second part of the administration's "superfund" proposal, which originally was designated only for oil spills. The first portion of the legislation was submitted to Congress in March.

According to the sources, this second portion, planned for introduction in May, was expanded to cover chemical and hazardous waste dump cleanups because administration concern about these sites now outweighs fear over potential oil spill damage.

The emergency fund would take in between $300 million and $600 million in fees annually from chemical and oil producers. Officials at OMB are deliberating whether there also will be federal contribution.

In the case of hazardous waste dumps, the money would go to pay for emergency relief such as cleanup and containment costs, according to federal officials, who asked not to be named. The fund would be used both for working dump sites and those that have been closed but are still leaking hazardous substances, the officials said.

Companies responsible for dump sites still would be liable for cleanup costs through federal lawsuits. Only seven such suits have been filed up to now, according to EPA records scheduled for release Monday.

Last November, EPA said 102 hazardous waste dump sites around the nation posed "current threats" to the health of persons living nearby. The agency's latest records indicate that about half these sites are no longer considered immediate hazards, it has added 32 new ones to the "current threats" list.

According to Blum, EPA will divert at least 50 staff members from regional offices and headquarters to augment the 22 investigators and attorneys now working on hazardous waste. In addition, Blum said the agency plans to seek a supplemental budget appropriation of $131 million for 190 new workers.

She estimated that the expanded enforcement would mean about 300 hazardous waste site investigations annually by EPA and that the investigations would lead to as many as 50 new cases for Justice Department prosecution.

Despite the crackdown on hazardous waste contributors and dump site operators, many officials now concede that it is virtually impossible in a large number of cases to fix the legal blame or financial responsibility. Many of the original operators are out of business or say they operated chemical and hazardous waste sites under the rules prevailing at the time.

Blum said that federal environmental and legal officials now believe that up to 75 percent of all hazardous waste sites needing some type of remedial effort will have to be cleaned up at public expense.

"'Gypsy hauling' and 'midnight dumping' practices, we believe, are widespread," she said. For example, 80,000 gallons of waste oil in Hawaii "just disappear" every month.

Contracts negotiated

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The National Iranian Oil Co. says production of Iranian crude oil will average 3.5 million to 4 million barrels a day for the rest of the year, with a total of 1.05 million barrels daily going to Exxon, Texaco, Gulf, Caltex and Shell.

Reza Azimi, the company's marketing director, told a news conference Sunday nine-month contracts had been agreed on with 35 countries and oil companies. He said the price was $16.57 a barrel for light crude and $16.04 for heavy crude.

Azimi said all the buyers agreed not to sell any of the oil to South Africa or Israel.

Before the revolution that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the throne, Iran produced an average of 6 million barrels of crude oil daily and exported 5.3 million.

The head of the Iranian oil company, Hassan Nazih, told the news conference the government is limiting daily production to 4 million barrels for the time being.

"We at this time do not need any foreign personnel at any level," he declared.

Before the revolution, some 600 foreign technicians were employed in the industry by the Oil Services Co., which was owned by 17 foreign oil companies and produced and marketed most of Iran's oil for the national company.

"OSCO is finished," said Nazih.

Azimi said the company sold oil on the spot market in March for $18.70 to $22.20 a barrel and will continue to sell 200,000 to 300,000 barrels a day on a spot basis.

No Help wanted

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The new revolutionary government will operate Iran's huge oil industry without the help of foreign production technicians, the head of the National Iranian Oil Co. said Sunday.

"We at this time do not need any foreign personnel at any level" to handle the current production of 4 million barrels a day or more, Hassan Nazih said at a news conference.

Before Iran's February revolution, some 600 foreign technicians aided in the production of an average of 6 million barrels of crude oil daily through the foreign-operated Oil Services Co.

Nazih said, "OSCO is fed."

Officials of National Iranian Oil noted at the news conference that Iran, like other oil-exporting countries, was getting "better deals now" on supply contracts than it had in the past. But Nazih refused to say whether Iran's income from oil exports would be larger now than before the revolution — and before the latest round of sharp price increases.

Exports will be lower than in prerevolutionary times, but the price is higher. Industry sources expect Iran's daily oil income to average $48 million to $50 million now, compared with $55 million to $60 million before the revolution.

The sale of oil provides 90 percent of Iran's foreign income.

Nazih said the government is limiting daily production to 4 million barrels for the time being, and production for the rest of the year is likely to average 3.5 million to 4 million barrels a day.

Explorers reported in West Texas; discoveries take potential tests

Wildcat operations have been scheduled in Crockett, Irion, Stonewall counties, and Exxon Corp. has amended destination for a wildcat in Ward County. A Permian sand gas discovery has been completed in Motley County and a Pennsylvanian strike has been finaled in Nolan.

Joe McGuire of Midland announced plans to re-enter and cleanout to total depth of 8,400 feet in the former Loyd H. Smith, Inc., No. 1 Goerge Bean, Crockett County project.

Operator previously had filed application to test above 1,500 feet.

The project is one location northeast of San Andres gas production in the Donham multipay field and two miles south of the depleted Wyatt (Ellenburger gas) field. It also is two and one-eighth miles northwest of the two-well Pikes Peak Draw (Canyon gas) pool.

It is 14 miles northwest of Ozona and 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 34, block UV, GC&SF survey. It will be operated as the No. 1 Joe F. Bean, South.

IRION WILDCAT

Transcontinental Oil Corp. of San Angelo No. 1 Phillips is to be drilled as a 7,600-foot Ellenburger wildcat in Irion County, four miles south of Mertzon.

Location is 7,350.3 feet from north and 7,196.9 feet from west lines of Gonzales County School Land survey No. 1

The site is in the west edge of the shallow Irion field and 7/8 mile southeast of the Irion, West (Canyon oil) pool. It also is 4.5 miles east of the Sixty-Seven (Strawn) field.

STONEWALL TEST

Fisher-Webb, Inc., of Abilene No. 1 Tredmeyer is a new 5,000-foot wildcat in Stonewall County, five miles southeast of Old Glory.

Drillsite is 660 feet from south and east lines of J. D. Essary pre-emption survey, abstrct 773.

It is 5/8 mile west of the depleted Hankins (Bend conglomerate) field and 1/2 mile southeast of a 6,155-foot dry hole.

RE-ENTRY TRY

Sojourner Drilling Corp. of Abilene announced plans to re-enter the former N. P. Energy Corp. of Texas No. 1 Van B. Bullard, Stonewall County 6,446-fiot Ellenburger failure.

It is five miles southwest of Aspermont and 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 198, block D, H&TC survey.

It will be operated as the No. 1 Van B. Bullard.

Tests will be made above 3,400 feet.

The location is one and five-eighths miles east of the one-well Johsons Chapel (Tannehill) field and separated from it by dry holes.

A previous application had scheduled the project to be cleaned out to 3,300 feet.

RUNNELS AREA

Windfohr Oil Co. of Fort Worth No. 1 R. R. Merrill is to be dug as a 4,750-foot wildcat in Runnels County, five miles north of Winters and one and three-eighths miles northwest of the Clarke (Gardner) field.

Location is 1,200 feet west of the southeast corner of John Forbes survey No. 511, then 500 feet south to the location in the James N. O'Brien survey No. 512, abstract 395.

MOTLEY OPENER

Jack Grimm of Abilene No. 1 Frank Eiring has been completed as a Permian sand gas discovery in Motley County, 15 miles northwest of Matador.

A re-entry of an 8,990-foot failure, it finaled for a calcualted absolute open flow potential of 140,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day.

Completion was natural through perforations from 550 to 565 feet.

Originally drilled by Grimm and abandoned in 1976, the strike is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 66, block T, Arnold & Barrett survey, abstract 1224.

NOLAN OPENER

Fisher-Webb Inc. of Abilene No. 1 McLaughlibn has been completed as a Pennsylvanian sand oil discovery in Nolan County, four miles north of Silver.

Operator reported a daily flow of 120 barrels of 41-gravity oil, no water, through a 10/64-inch choke and perforations from 5,770 to 5,776 feet after a 40,000-gallon fracture treatment.

Total depth is 6,052 feet and 4.5-inch casing is set on bottom. Hole is plugged back to 6,010 feet.

The wellsite is 660 feet from south and 730 feet from west lines of section 9, block 1-A, H&TC survey and 3/4 mile east of the two-well JMM (Canyon gas) pool.

HILLIARD WELL

Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc., of Midland No. 1 McInroe has been completed as the second well in the Hoblitzelle (lower Canyon) pool of Hockley County, seven miles east of Levelland.

The operator reported a daily pumping potential of 320 barrels of 41-gravity oil and 17 barrels of water, through perforations from 10,066 to 10,070 feet after a 500-gallon acid treatment.

It is one location south and slightly east of the other producer and 2,446 feet from south and 1,488 feet from east lines of section 4, block A, William Tubbs subdivision, psl survey, abstract 349.

The Canyon was topped at 9,734 feet and the lower Canyon top was picked at 10,038 feet on ground elevation of 3,440 feet.

Other tops include the Glorieta at 5,442 feet and the Clear Fork at 6,049 feet.

It was reported earlier that the project had been abandoned at total depth of 10,224 feet. Five and one-half-inch casing is cemented at total depth of 10,255 feet.

WARD AMENDMENT

Exxon Corp. has amended contract depth for its No. 1 Gulf, wildcat operation 2.2 miles northeast of Barstow in Ward County.

Originally staked as a 17,800-foot operation, it has been amended to 18,200 feet.

Location is 1,320 feet from northeast and northwest lines of section 181, block 34, H&TC survey.

RIG MOVED

The Methane Gas Co. of Dallas has moved the rig on No. 9-A E. G. Baggett, Crockett County wildcat, 50 feet east after the original hole was junked at an unreported depth.

Scheduled for a 3,000-foot bottom, it now is 1,980 feet from south and 1,621 feet from east lines of section 2, block NG, GC&SF survey.

The test is 3/4 mile southeast of Clear Fork production in the Baggett multipay field and 18 miles south of Ozona.

STEPOUT STAKED

Delray Oil, Inc., of San Antonio spotted its No. 5 Raymond Rush 1/2 mile southeast of the same operator's No. 3 Raymond Ruch, recently completed 3,500-foot gas discovery in Nolan County, 2.5 miles southwest of Talpa.

Scheduled for a 3,900-fioot bottom, it is 1,540 feet from north and 3,100 feet from east lines of section 111, ETRR survey.

The site also is 5/8 mile southwest of No. Delray No. 1 Rush, Serratt oil discovery.

COKE PROJECT

Natomas North America, Inc., of Midland No. 3 Higgins is to be drilled 5/8 mile southwest of Natomas No. 1 Higgins, discovery well of the Higgins Ranch (Canyon) field of Coke County, seven miles northeast of Carlsbad.

Location 4,950 feet from north and 2,200 feet from east lines of section 76, R. O. Collyns survey No. 76.

It is separated from the discovery by Natomas No. 1 Higgins, active project bottomed at 7,150 feet.

..."Use up your small and undersized envelopes and cards before July 15," Postmaster D.E. Holster reminds customers. That is the date when the Postal Service's new size standards become effective.

The postmaster said that after July 15, envelopes and cards measuring less than 3½ inches high or 5 inches long will be returned to the sender if mailed.

Holster added that because the envelopes and greeting card industries have had more than three years to prepare for the new standards, few retailers should still be selling undersized pieces.

"Many consumers, however, are likely to still have smaller envelopes and cards in their supply of stationery," Holster said.

Undersized pieces and flimsy cards are being banned because they become trapped in other mail, tear and jam mail processing machinery. As a result, the letters of others also can be damaged.

The standards also affect oversized and odd-shaped pieces of mail, Holster said. For first-class mail weighing one ounce or less, there will be a surcharge of seven cents for pieces more than 6⅛ inches high or 11½ inches long.

Spears received his award from the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Spears, chairman of the Student Development Board during the 1978-79 year, also was active this year on the Governing Council, the only legislative body on campus, and the inauguration committee.

A former varsity cheerleader at Austin College, Spears served as president of the Pre-Law Society on campus. In 1977, Spears was selected to participate in the college's Washington Semester Program. He assisted as an intern in Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's Washington office, where he worked with legislative assistants and coordinated the senator's energy programs and proposals...

...ROBERT PAUL DRUMMOND, a Midland graduate student at Eastern New Mexico University, recently received prize money for a paper presentation in the Sixth Annual Student Research Conference at ENMU.

Drummond won the award in music for his research of "The Life and Works of Merit N. Woodruff," a little-known early American composer (1780-1799). An historical and biographical perspective is included in the study with stylistic analysis from his choral works.

He initiated the study by sending letters to various state and local historical societies in New England, particularly in the state of Connecticut where Woodruff resided.

The final section of the study consists of performing editions of four of Woodruff's compositions prepared by Drummond...

Donald Ewan named Boss of the Year

Donald N. Ewan was named the 1979-80 Boss of the Year for the Permian Chapter of the National Secretaries International Association during a luncheon at the Hilton Inn.

Presentation of the award was made by 1978-79 award recipient, R. E. Nivens, district landman for Amarillo Oil Company. The luncheon was a climax of Secretaries Week activities in Midland.

Ewan, vice president of sales for The Ortloff Corporation, was graduated from Southern Methodist University with a bachelor of business administration and a bachelor of science degree in industrial engineering. He is a registered professional engineer in the state of Texas. He was employed by Elcor Corporation, parent company of The Ortloff Corporation, in 1966 as manager of Purchasing. In 1976, he transferred to The Ortloff Corporation as busness development, was later promoted to director of sales and then to his present position.

He is a member of the Gas Processors Association, National Petroleum Refiners Association, Southern Gas Association, American Petroleum Institute, Texas Society of Professional Engineering, SMU Alumni Association, Downtown Rotary of Midland, Sons of the American Revolution, and alumni of graduate school of Sales Management and Marketing. He and his wife Betty have two daughters. His secretary, Jane Cooley, nominated him as Boss of the Year.

Travel Time Travel Agency presented the program during the luncheon. Officers for the Permian chapter were introduced, including Pat Swindle, president; Florene Anderson, vice president; Sharon Taylor, recording secretary; Lana Hoelscher, corresponding secretary; and Polly Clark, treasurer.

Special presentation was given to Sharon TAylor, Permian Chapter's Secretary of the Year. She is secretary for Amarillo Oil Company.

Patients set their fees

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — If Dr. Milton Seifert's patients are upset about his prices, they have only themselves to blame. After all, they're the ones who call the shots for the Excelsior, Minn., physician.

For the past five years, an advisory council of 50 of his patients has set the budget for Seifert's practice, including fees, salaries and collecting overdue bills; mediated complaints by other patients; and decided which cases should be treated as emergencies.

The council has also run annual health-education conferences and supplied transportation to the office for patients who needed it.

The physician admits he was a little concerned at first about the experiment, but his fears proved unfounded.

"The hardest thing I had at first was getting my patients to believe that it was all right to tell me what to do, and what they had to say was useful," said Seifert, who was in Dayton to explain his practice before the Wright State University Medical School recently.

"Now the great thing is that I as the doctor don't have to worry about getting involved in fee increases and so forth. The patients depend on the practice themselves so they want to be sure it's in good financial health and they don't want me to get mad and go someplace else," Seifert said.

Seifert said his advisory council had decided this year he should earn $45,000 a year, but he said he was actually earning about $40,000 because of inflation and debt delinquency.

The fees set by his patients are not different from those at other private family practices in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, he said.

Most doctors in the area make about $65,000 a year, Seifert said, and "I think the reason I'm getting paid less is because we're doing the extra things."

The "extra things" include a health educator and a "living problems counselor" who helps patients with emotional and family problems.

Seifert said he hired these professionals because he realized that he had neither the time nor the expertise to deal with emotional problems.

"Every patient who walks through the door has both a mental and a physical problem," Seifert said. "Every family doctor sees that. Some take the time to deal with it and some don't."

Seifert concedes some doctors might never set up a practice like this because they think it would reduce their income, but he thinks most have "simply never thought about it before, or didn't know how to accomplish it."

DEAR ABBY

Bashful fluffs his pillow talk

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please don't laugh at my question, or throw this away thinking it's from some silly kid. It's not. I'm a normal, 33-year-old man who would like to learn now to be a great lover.

I know what to DO, but I don't know what to say to a lady while I'm making love to her. I feel as though I should be saying something. But what?

They don't have schools for this sort of thing and I can't ask anyone to give me lessons. I have very few hangups, and I've never had any trouble with my love life, but I'd like to know how to make my partner feel really great. — WANTS TO PLEASE

DEAR WANTS: Anyone who sincerely wants to make his partner feel "really great" is well on his way to becoming a great lover. You say you have very few hangups. Fine, because frank dialogue with one's partner is essential. There's also a wealth of information to be found in books. And finally, practice makes perfect.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have some good friends I'll call Marge and Bob. We had some terrific times together until they began having marital problems. They kept calling and asking if they could come over to talk. Their talks always ended up in shouting matches. Nothing was ever settled, and it made wrecks of us, so we asked them not to come over to talk anymore.

Now they call us on the phone and talk endlessly. First Marge calls me and complains about Bob, and when she hangs up, Bob calls and tells my husband his version of the story.

Abby I know good friends are supposed to be supportive, but we're out of patience with these two.

How can we refuse to listen without giving them the impression that we don't care. We do. — GOOD FRIENDS

DEAR FRIENDS: Tell them that BECAUSE you are such good friends you can't view their situation objectively. Urge them to seek help from a qualified marriage counselor. It could save their marriage — and your friendship.

Businesswomen's seminar to feature career experts

Valuable advice for career women will be given by business experts at the upcoming Seminar for Women in Business and Professions May 10.

The one-day seminar is sponsored by the Uptown Business and Professional Women's Club and will be held at the Permian Basin Grduate Center, 108 W. Illinois Ave.

Topics to be discussed in the five workshops are Assertiveness Training, Financial Planning Management and Leadership, Starting Your Own Business and Women's Legal Rights.

Participants may choose to attend three workshops from the five offered. Registration fee for the 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. workshop is $15 for business or professional women and $7.50 for full-time high school or college students. All fees include lunch and materials.

Marion Kimberly will teach the workshop on Assertiveness Training, a course designed to aid the participant in distinguishing assertiveness from aggressiveness or passive behavior. Participants will also learn the benefits of assertiveness and the techniques and skills of acting assertively.

Ms. Kimberly is engaged in private practice here as an individual group and career counselor. She has also taught numerous courses for the Permian Basin Graduate Center and Midland College.

Carol Reinert and Christi Weeter will instruct the session on Financial Planning, designed to inform participants in methods of long range and short term financial planning for women with limited funds to invest.

Both Ms. Reinert and Weeter are accountants with Main LaFrentz & Co.

Bob Avary of Bob Avery and Associates will focus on the special problems facing women in management at the Management and Leadership workshop. He will also discuss the possible solutions to these problems and improvement of communication skills.

Avery is a consultant specializing in communication and decision making training.

Starting Your Own Business, to be taught by Jamie Thompson, is designed to help participants understand the problems encountered in starting a business and how to plan for these problems and their solutions.

Ms. Thompson, president of Exploration Graphics, Inc., was recently chosen as one of the top ten women executives in Texas by Texas Business magazine.

Timothy Ann Sloan, assistant district attorney, will instruct the session on Women's Legal Rights.

She will give participants a basic knowledge of the Equal Rights Amendment and information on credit and property rights.

Registration deadline is May 4. For further information, contact Andrea Yarbrough at 684-4412 or Rexanna Heidelberg at 682-6282.

Volunteer reception set

The Headstart and Midland Independent School District volunteer program will honor all school volunteers with a May Day reception from 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday in Lancaster House at 1705 W. Indiana Ave.

Children from Anson Jones Elementary will perform different cultural dances from 1 to 1:45 p.m., followed by students from Pease Elementary, who will present a handbell performance.

Decorations will include letters, essays and pictures from students about "volunteers." Headstart schools will provide refreshments for the event, and serve as hostess groups along with the Midland City Council of PTAs.

This is the second year of a citywide effort to recruit volunteers. The event is sponsored by the City Council with cooperation and support of the Midland schools, Junior League of Midland and the Human Relations Council.

Parliamentarians to attend meet

FORT WORTH — Parliamentarians from throughout the state, including several members of the Permian Basin Unit of the National Association of Parliamentarians, will convene here when the Texas Association of Parliamentarians hold its 25th annual convention at the Ramada Inn Central Friday through Sunday.

A parliamentary procedure institute, entitled "Strategic Use of Motions," is scheduled Friday from 9 a.m. to noon. Phyllis M. Silvestri, a professional registered parliamentarian from Las Vegas, Nev., will be the instructor. Mrs. Silvestri currently serves as chairman of registration for the NAP. The institute will be open to the public.

Presiding during the convention will be Mrs. Gus B. Green of Fort Worth, TSAP president. Registration will begin at 3 p.m. Friday. The annual meeting will formally open at 1:30 p.m. Saturday and close after lunch the following day.

Prison artwork to go on sale

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Prison art goes on sale May 5 in Huntsville.

More than 1,200 pieces of artwork by some 100 Texas inmates will be offered for sale. Prices range from $2.50 to $250, and the artist gets to keep all money from sales, according to prison officials.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) The situation at home is tense, but if you focus on the practical, it will soon better itself. Talk matters over with a financial expert who can help you a great deal. Take no chances with credit.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You need advice in handling personal affairs, so seek an expert early. Evening fine for being with congenials. Pay bills on time.

GEMINI (may 21 to June 21) Handle problems that you have early and then forget about them. A bigwig you know can give you backing that is most helpful to you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get rid of that martydrom complex and busy yourself at the practical and get good results, become more affluent.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make a good impression on a bigwig by showing your particular talents and get backing you need. Show that you are conscientious in handling cred affairs. make sure your records are correct.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Conditions around you are changing radically, so be sure to benefit from them. Get out to new places of recreation with good friends. Stay within your budget, though.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Although the situation does not seem favorable in business affairs, this is only the surface, so cheer up. Shown more affection for loved ones this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can be benefited by new outlets, so be on the alert. Neighbors could be annoying, but a bigwig helps you out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A loved may be irate and needs understanding. A debt could be troubling you but look to higher-ups and the government for aid.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be more tactful in dealing with partners who are in a strange mood now. A close tie could prove difficult but it is due to some sort of pressure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to persevere where your practical affairs are concerned and you get much done. Get into some hobby you like later that will take away that tired feeling.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care you do not overspend for pleasure and take all the pleasure out of it. Work on special talents you possess and get good results.

Rocky Flats protest 'like a play'

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Volunteer attorneys circulated among anti-nuclear activists, offering advice and helping to keep order as more than 280 persons were arrested in a tightly orchestrated protest at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant.

"It's kind of like a play. But that's cool. It helps keep things under control. I guess there's an art to getting arrested," plant spokesman Bernie Velasquez said.

At least 284 protesters were arrested Sunday in what organizers called a deliberate act of civil disobedience — blocking access to the plant, the nation's only producer of plutonium "triggers" for nuclear weapons.

Buses took the arrested demonstrators to a west Denver suburb south of Rocky Flats where a makeshift processing center was set up in a warehouse used by the U.S. Geological Survey to store rock samples.

The protesters, many of them laughing and calling to their friends, were photographed and then passed through an assembly-line operation that had the same coordinated precision that marked the protest itself. It took 10 minutes to process each protester.

They were charged with trespassing under the U.S. Atomic Energy Act of 1954, a misdemeanor carrying a maximum fine of $1,000. They were released and ordered to appear in U.S. District Court in Denver next month.

Many of the protesters spent weeks training in Denver to prepare for the demonstration at the plant, which is operated by Rockwell International Corp. under contract to the U.S. Department of Energy.

Former Pentagon analyst Daniel Ellsberg was among those arrested at Rocky Flats. He was arrested on a railroad spur leading to the plant, near the spot where he was arrested one year ago Sunday.

More than 200 persons were arrested during a seven-month period last year. Ellsberg and 11 others were given suspended sentences early this year after a mass trial on county trespassing charges.

The protesters, many of them laughing and calling to their friends, were photographed and then passed through an assembly-line operation that had the same coordinated precision that marked the protest itself.

About noon Sunday, more than 350 chanting protesters began walking toward Rocky Flats and split into three groups headed for the main gate on the plant's west side, the east gate and the railroad tracks.

At the west gate, more than 200 demonstrators lined up across from the gate, a line of Rockwell security guards in front of them.

On a signal by organizer Chris Moore, the protesters moved across the road in groups as a Rockwell spokesman said they would be arrested if they crossed a white line marking off federal property.

The protesters crossed the line and sat in the roadway in small groups. Security guards and federal marshals moved in immediately.

Some protesters apologized as they let their bodies go limp in the arms of guards. Some of the guards, complaining that they were getting tired, asked the demonstrators to walk to the buses.

"We've been dealing with each other for about a year and a half, so we know some of them," Rockwell spokesman Sam Thomas said.

On Saturday, about 10,000 persons assembled to sing, hear speeches, and demand that the plant be closed or converted to non-military use. Many seemed more interested in the entertainment. From the stage, a leader reminded the crowd — calling for "more, more" from the performers — that they were there for "a political rally."

Other anti-nuclear demonstrations this weekend, given impetus by last month's near-catastrophe at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania, were staged in Vermont, Arkansas, New York state and on a Navajo reservation in New Mexico.

Panel willing to learn all about nuclear power

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's commission investigating the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident makes no bones over what it doesn't know about nuclear power. The first day of hearings included a lecture on how a nuclear reactor works.

"But," says panel chairman John G. Kemeny, the president of Dartmouth College and a mathematician by training, "I'm determined to become an expert in the next six months."

"It will be a major learning experience," the 52-year-old Hungarian-born professor who was once a researcher for Albert Einstein said in an interview.

Kemeny and the other 10 members of the special presidential panel were sworn in last Wednesday and began taking testimony the next day from government officials.

Still without a scientific staff, the panel clearly struggled to get its orientation. Kemeny said he hopes by the time hearings are held May 17 in Middletown, Pa., near the crippled Three Mile Island plant, a staff of 20 to 25 technicians will be on board.

Firm, seeking license for new plant, admits high exposure

BOSTON (AP) — Officials of the Boston Edison Co. acknowledge that workers at the firm's Pilgrim I nuclear power plant are on the average subject to more radiation than workers at any other civilian nuclear plant in the country.

The Boston Globe reported in its Sunday editions that the plant at Plymouth is one of the nation's "hottest" plants in terms of radiation.

"It certainly is not a record that we are proud of," John Murphy, Boston Edison's director of public information, said Sunday, "but the radiation level did not exceed safe levels. No one was injured."

Murphy commented on the Globe's report that radiation is coming from lingering radioactive material which leaked from uranium fuel rods more than five years ago.

Boston Edison is seeking permission from the state Public Utilities Commission to build a Pilgrim II station at Plymouth.

Murphy said the leaking rods were eliminated and "the radiation levels never came close to Nuclear Regulatory Commission levels for safe radiation." However, he conceded the radiation levels were high.

The newspaper said 1,875 workers at Pilgrim I, 30 miles south of Boston, recorded an average exposure in 1977 of 1.63 rems, the highest monitored among commercial nuclear reactor workers in the country, the newspaper reported.

The Globe reported the average exposure for plants of Pilgrim's type and age was 0.64 rem.

A rem is a measurement of human exposure to radiation. It would take about 25 chest X-rays in a year to give an exposure equal to one rem. Murphy said the NRC safety level is set at five rems.

The newspaper quoted Ralph E. Lapp, a physicist and Boston Edison radiation consultant, as saying Boston Edison has spent $1.5 million for a special cleanup, but that the problem may linger for another two years.

Canadian nuclear plant workers get unsafe dose

DOUGLAS POINT, Ontario (AP) — Two employees at the Bruce nuclear power plant here were exposed to levels of radiation exceeding the safe yearly maximum, an Ontario Hydro official says.

The accident occurred Saturday, a day after Opposition Leader Stuart Smith made public documents indicating that the generating station on Lake Huron had experienced some of the problems that triggered the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg, Pa.

Bob Beardsall, an Ontario Hydro information officer, said one man was exposed to 5.5 rems of radiation and the other to 8 rems when a piece of a fuel bundle containing highly radioactive used fuel broke.

Gasohol getting more interest

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent-Agriculture

The only water hitting the ground last week in Midland County was that from sprinkler irrigation systems. Those producers with irrigation wells are operating them around the clock to prepare the soil for planting. A few acres of cotton have been planted. The continued dry weather is depleting surface moisture on native rangeland and dryland cropland. We are still hoping for rain soon to put West Texas agricultural prospects back on top shelf.

In recent months as motor fuel climbs toward one dollar per gallon, a considerable amount of interest has been generated in producing alcohol for use in internal combustion engines.

Gasohol is defined as a blend of gasoline and alcohol (usually ethanol) composed of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethly alcohol (ethanol). The use of gasohol as a motor fuel has been widely publicized. Presently, Texas does not permit the production of 100 percent (200 proof) ethyl alcohol.

A bill being considered by the 66th Legislature would allow the production of 100 percent ethanol for use as a motor fuel. If the bill does pass, there will probably be certain state permits and regulations required for ethanol production. In addition to future state requirements, there are numerous federal requirements that must be met for the production of ethanol.

Primarily, the present commercial ethanol manufacturing process is the fermentation of grain (corn, grain sorghum, wheat, etc.). The process of converting cellulose materials into ethanol is promising because waste materials (straw, corn and sorgum stalks, cotton gin wastes, etc.) could potentially become energy sources. Although the cellulose conversion process has been tested and demonstrated in the laboratory, a pilot plant has not been built, and a commercial plant may be years away. Current literature indicates that alcohol may be produced at a cost of approximately $1.10 to $1.25 per gallon.

Farmers have interest in producing alcohol on their own farm on a scale suitable to supply their own farm on a scale suitable to supply their own needs may write Mr. Henry O'Neal, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University, Agricultural Engineering Bldg. Room 303, College Station, Texas 77843.

Knowing and keeping tabs of what fertilizers have been used on the home lawn over a period of years is important. If fertilizer nutrients are not kept in balance homeowners may begin to learn new words such as chlorosis (yellowing and poor growth), iron deficiency and micronutrients. These conditions and the need for micronutrients can be brought about by excessive phosphorus levels in the soil.

A survey of the soil samples tested in 1978-79 indicated that 21 percent of West Texas hoemowners with lawn problems had very high to excessive phosphorus levels. To address how and why this situation occured, one can only guess.

The first guess is that the homeowner did not realize how to properly apply the correct amount of fertilizer. The second guess is that the homeowner, over the years, failed to keep tabs on how much phosphorus had been applied each year. A soil analysis prevents this phosphorus buildup from occurring and determines whether and how much phosphorus should be applied.

If you feel you need a soil test, here are some tips that will help you obtain better results from your soil analysis. Prior to taking small samples, scrape the litter from the surface; then, use a spade, soil auger or soil-sampling tube. To use a sharp shooter, dig a V-shaped hole and take a half inch slice of soil from the smooth side of the hole. Repeat in 10 to 15 different places. Place subsamples in a clean container, mix thoroughly and take out approximately one pint for the composite sample.

To aid in interpretation of the soil test and in making recommendations, fill in Form D-495, "Soil Sample Information Sheet for Lawn, Garden and Flower Beds" as completely as possible and submit with your samples. Information sheets and sample boxes are available at the County Extension Office, Courthouse Annex Building, 218 W. Illinois.

Here's what fuel means on your electric bill.

The cost to provide your electric service is divided into two parts: base rate and fuel. The base rate covers the cost of bringing electricity to you–things like the miles of lines, substations, power plants and the Texas Electric employees to make it all work are included in the base rate.

But the other part of your bill, fuel, is what some people don't understand. The "fuel" amount on your bill is what we must pay to buy the natural gas, oil or lignite coal that we use to make your electricity.

Without that fuel, all the other things that make up your electric service system would be useless. We must burn fuel to make your electricity. How much we use each month to make your electricity is shown by the fuel amount on your bill.

At Texas Electric, we want you to understand what you're paying for.

American Telephone & Telegraph was one of the most active NYSE issues, down ⅜ at 58⅜. In response to a suit filed by MCI Communications Corp., the company said it had not violated any antitrust laws.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .18 to 57.22. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .01 at 183.66.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 10.74 million shares at mid-day.

Talmadge voices strong counterattack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge launched a blistering counterattack on the financial misconduct allegations against him today, saying three allegations were trivial and the major charge was based on the word of a "liar, cheat and embezzler."

The emotional presentation by the veteran Georgia Democrat came as the Senate Ethics Committee opened its public hearing on allegations that Talmadge had violated Senate rules.

Talmadge presented his own opening argument after committee special counsel Carl Eardley opened the session by reciting the allegations against Talmadge and by discussing the witnesses to appear before the panel.

Talmadge said only one count against him was worthy of the committee's time. That is an allegation that he knew of a secret bank account set up by his former administrative assistant and that he profited from the more than $39,000 in campaign contributions and improperly drawn expense funds deposited in the account.

He said evidence would show that he neither knew of the account or that he profited from it. And he said his actions in ordering an audit of his affairs in June 1978 and in turning over evidence to the Justice Department showed he could not have known of the account.

"These are steps that only a fool would take if he were aware...that there was a hidden, phony bank account waiting to be found," Talmadge said. "Even my enemies don't claim that I am stupid."

The 22-year Senate veteran said his attorneys would present evidence that showed that his former administrative assistant, Daniel Minchew, needed funds at the time the secret account was in operation.

"You will have evidence that in one year alone, 1974, when most of the money was taken from Daniel Minchew's secret account, his obligations and expenditures exceeded his legitimate sources of income by more than $40,000," Talmadge claimed.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Women push for more business opportunities

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The women aren't taking a thing for granted. Though their future in business seems assured, they aren't sitting back and waiting for invitations. They're organizing for the push.

A few weeks ago the Financial Women's Association of New York held a breakfast meeting at which they released the names of women they felt should be invited to sit on corporate boards.

So far, not much has happened to that list, the publication of which some claim was a sure way not to get an invitation. But the women stirred up talk, and they got a progress report from General Motors.

As guest speaker, GM chairman Thomas Murphy told the women that their future in management was a "skyline of rising opportunities."

At GM, he said, "we should see women filling upwards of one-third of all our engineering and plant supervision positions," many of which once were considered too weighty and technical for delicate females.

But as some women see it, those jobs won't be filled unless they press for them. They had to push in the courts to open the door a crack, they remember; and now, they say, they have to keep their weight against it.

"You will never be one of the boys, you will never get into the locker-room. And if you do, you may wish you never had." Those words were delivered a few days ago at another meeting of women on the move.

Speaking at a meeting of women students from 37 graduate schools of business, Joan Pinck, vice chancellor of the Massachusetts board of higher education, gave that warning at the Wharton School.

This meeting, like several others recently, had been called for the specific purpose of uniting for the big push. The difference was that these women were still in school; they were anticipating the problems.

One of the problems is that men still control big business; and at the top, they rely on each other. Some call it the old boy network; and out of it come job opportuities.

Women may learn from it. "We to establish, individually and collectively, a female identity," said Ms. Pinck. Failure, she said, would mean women "will fall prey" to ambiquity and tokenism.

The same message is being delivered throughout the country in seminars and speeches, and in the process a good many stereotypes and myths, some superficial and others deeply imprinted, falling before reality.

In Dallas, for example, a seminar for women entrepreneurs began with attendees identifying themselves. A demur lady in black dress and pearls stood up. A secretary? "I am a custom home builder," she said.

Beginning June 1, a seminar for women in finance is scheduled for three days in San Francisco, to teach personal and professional management techniques and to bring together women who can help women.

In almost no instance are the women going it alone. Practically every seminar or new organization has managed to attract some form of aid rom big business, and for very good reasons.

One prominent reason is that women have a great deal to say about how money is invested. They have made swift professional advances in the financial field. And personally, they own a great deal of stock in corporations, some left to them by deceased husband-executives.

The New York financial women obtained Murphy for obvious reasons. As the biggest employer among manufacturers, GM is constantly in the spotlight. It seeks recognition for its minority employment practices.

Among other accomplishments, it has two women directors; the corporations secretary is female, as are two corporate assistant secretaries. It has just named a female vice president, it's first.

Aware that they will be employing women MBAs (Master of Business Administration) for legal and good business reasons, Exxon, Procter and Gamble, Scott Paper and the Sun Company funded the Wharton meeting.

And when you're able to gain the financial and moral support of that against which you are pushing, it suggests pretty good organization and superior management techniques.

Families of POWs say Carter breaking promise

By DON McLEOD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Families of American servicemen who never returned from the Vietnam War are accusing President Carter of breaking his promise to seek the fullest possible accounting of U.S. prisoners of war and missing in action.

These families say the administration is more interested in improving relations with Vietnam than in pressing for information on the men officially presumed to be dead.

"The problem is there hasn't been any effective U.S. government effort to get the accounting that we've been promised all these years," said Ann Griffiths, executive director of the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia.

"And that is not due particularly to any lack of capability by the military," she said. "It's a political problem."

The plight of families of American POW's and MIA's resurfaced with Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood's return last month from communist Vietnam after 13½ years.

Before Garwood's return, U.S. officials had assured POW and MIA families there were no Americans remaining alive in the former war zone. Garwood was captured by the Viet Cong in August 1965 and officially listed by the Defense Department as a prisoner of war. But on his return to the United States, he was charged with desertion.

The POW-MIA league says Carter promised that the United States would not extend diplomatic recognition to the Hanoi government, lift the trade embargo or allow Vietnam into the United Nations until the prisoners and missing had been accounted for as fully as possible.

"Of course there's been a total change," said Ms. Griffiths. "President Carter reversed his policy and we were all geared to go ahead and normalize relations, when Vietnam invaded Cambodia and China invaded Vietnam.

"So, now everything is at a total stalemate and stagnating," she said.

Meantime, Vietnam has been admitted to the United Nations without U.S. objection.

The government lists about 1,150 of the unaccounted as known dead whose bodies were not recovered. Another 1,350 or so men once were listed either as missing or prisoners, but were not among the 533 American POW's whom the communists released in 1973.

A special House panel and a presidential task force concluded that none of the missing is alive and recommended that they be presumed dead — a judgment being made for each individual by the special military boards.

Ms. Griffiths says that Carter "even went so far as to say he would not allow presumptive findings of death to be made in these cases until he was personally convinced that every man had been accounted for as accurately as possible.

"He told us this in February of 1977, and in August of 1977 he agreed to a Department of Defense recommendation to go ahead and declare the remaining POW's and MIA's presumptively dead, in spite of the fact that to date, after six years, we have a total of 75 remains that have been returned.

"That's hardly what anyone, even totally uninformed, would consider the fullest possible accounting that could be obtained," says Ms. Griffiths, whose brother, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Jim Mills, has been unaccounted for since his jet plane was shot down in 1966.

All but 127 of the men once listed as prisoners or missing have been declared presumed dead. Special military boards make the declarations on a case-by-case basis after reviewing all available evidence.

The families and the services say the problems involved in a final accounting include getting identification teams into Vietnam, locating graves or crash sites and identifying remains.

The families say declaring the men as presumptively dead is unfair. They say the government is citing as sufficient evidence the mere passage of time without a sign that a man is alive.

"They're placing the burden of proof on the family. Either the family can prove he's alive or they're going to presume he's dead," Ms. Griffiths said.

"And with the limited resources of a POW-MIA family as compared with the government's resources, which have been totally impotent, then it's hardly a fair situation.

When a serviceman is reclassified from captured or missing to presumed dead, the wife gets 55 percent of his pension if he was elibible for retirement, and the children get Social Security and Veterans Administration benefits. If he was not eligible for retirement, there still are death benefits and insurance.

"But how much do you pay a wife who knew that her husband was alive and in captivity three years after he was initially shot down?" Ms. Griffiths asked. "How much money do you pay her to compensate what she has to go through for raising five children alone and not knowing whether she has a husband or they have a father?"

The families also have questions about reports from Vietnamese refugees and others of 4,000 sightings of white prisoners in Vietnam since the war. The reports are compiled in 15 volumes of documents that were released by the Pentagon in January.

The government discredits the reports, saying they are contradictory, inconsistent and unprovable.

'Little ol' winemaker' continues to bottle wine like forefathers

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — I must remember to visit my neighbor Joe Primiano the second week in October.

That is when Joe begins making his wine, and he has promised to share his secrets. It is time I got a cottage industry going around here as protection against the ravages of the taxman and use our cellar for something more interesting than broken screen doors, old snow tires and those boxes full of wire coat hangers that I must remember to bring back to the drycleaner one of these days.

Joe has been making wine every year for nearly 60 years, going all the way back to 1920 when he first came to America. Before that, he helped his father and grandfather make wine in his native Naples, Italy.

The other day Joe took me down into his wine cellar, which he built himself into the side of a hill. He showed me two stainless steel barrels of last year's vintage, which has got to rate as the best in Fairfield County or any 10 counties in any direction from here.

"I used to always use wooden casks, but you can't get them anymore," he said with a touch of regret. "You can get old whiskey barrels, but it takes four to five years to get the whiskey and charcoal taste out of them. So I paid $250 each for the steel barrels and find them to be almost as good."

Joe, a retired stone mason who will be 79 when he makes his next wine in October, still clings to the old methods he learned from his grandfather. "You grind and squeeze, grind and squeeze, no stems, just like in the old country," he said, pointing to the wine press he bought back in 1930 for $150. "If you ferment the stems, you lose a few percentage points of sugar. Chew a stem next time you eat a grape and you'll see it's acid." The science of wine-making involves changing sugar into alcohol, but in the hands of a master cellerman like Joe Primiano the science becomes an art involving all the senses.

To begin with, the grapes must have the right color, the right odor, the right taste and the necessary robust consistency. It takes 20 boxes of grapes to make one 55-gallon barrel of wine. Joe uses only 36-pound-a-box Zinfandel grapes from California, and 42-pound Elegante, which mainly add a nice ruby color to the final product.

"During the Prohibition times, when California grapes were hard to get, we used raisins but we never missed a year," Joe said.

Joe uses his eyes to study the clarity or cloudiness of the fermenting wine, to watch for the white foam at the top and study the sedimentation or settlement at the bottom. His ear, held close to the barrel like a doctor probing a chest cold listens for the "shhhhhhhhh" whispering sound that means it is time to top off the vintage to keep air from getting in, and then the "whock, whock, whock" noise that means the battle of fermentation is reaching its climax. He tastes the wine frequently to determine when to draw off the sediment from the bottom, when to filter the mixture to prevent the yeast from coming through and inadvertently producing a sparkling wine, when it is time to draw off the wine and clean out the barrel for the final waiting period.

Joe Primiano used to make five barrels of wine, about 1,200 bottles, of his robust Italian red and give them to his friends and neighbors at Christmas. "I never sold a bottle in my life, that's not my business, my business is with stones not wine," he says proudly.

Now he only makes about 800 bottles in the fall, one reason being that he recently lost his best fan and connisseur. "The doctor cut me off all wine for a while anyway."

But not without an argument. Joe is a firm believer in the advice that St. Paul wrote to Timothy:

"Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake."

Science is also on the side of our friendly Fairfield County vintner. "Wine," said Louis Pasteur, "can be considered with good reason as the most healthful and the most hygienic of all beverages."

Long before W.C. Fields put the knock on water, the poets were wise to the glory of the grape and the dangers of the faucet. Witness the Irish bard, Thomas Moore:

"If with water you fill up your glasses,
You'll never write anything wise;
For wine is the horse of Parnassus,
Which hurries a bard to the skies."

In parting, Joe gave me a bottle of Primiano '78, a fine year, recommending that it be carefully laid down "until your wife makes some nice lasagna. Come back in October and I'll show you how to make it under the Mulligan label."

Cancer data center requested in bill by Texarkana legislator

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Why the incidence of cancer is higher in five Texas counties than in the other 249 counties might be answered under a bill setting up a central office for collecting cancer data, says Sen. Ed Howard.

Howard, D-Texarkana, identified the five counties as Harris, Tarrant, Jefferson, Galveston and Montgomery.

Howard also invoked the name of Marvella Bayh in winning Senate approval of a bill that would establish the cancer registry at the state health department.

Mrs. Bayh, 46, wife of U.S. Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Indiana, died of cancer Tuesday.

The Senate sent the House-approved bill to the governor on voice vote.

"I would like for the Senate to approve this bill in memory of an outstanding citizen of our country," Howard said of Mrs. Bayh.

The bill would require doctors, hospitals and other health facilities to submit information on cancer patients to a registry at the state health department here.

The information would include types of cancer, how the disease was treated and what follow-up treatment was done.

All information would be confidential.

The registry would cost the state an estimated $637,697 over the next two years, primarily for 38 new employees at the health department.

The House sponsor of the bill, Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco, said in response to Senate passage of the bill:

"The Texas Legislature has recognized that cancer is the second leading cause of death in the state and is killing over 20,000 Texans annually. The state needs the information that this registry system can provide. With the type of data that the registry collects, our knowledge about how to treat cancer will be greatly increased."

Senate liberals join in refrain against anti-consumer 'lobby bills'

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — "Hi, this is the Texas Consumer Association office," states a telephone recording, which then relays the association's main legislative message:

"Senate Bill 357 demolishing the Consumer Protection Act passed the Senate and its companion House Bill 744 is in a House State Affairs subcommittee. Please contact your state representative expressing your concern that House Bill 744 be strengthened substantially from the version that passed the Senate."

WHAT SEN. LLOYD DOGGETT refers to as "tennis shoe bills" have kept Senate liberals on their feet for much of the 111-day-old session as they try to stall so-called anti-consumer legislation.

Doggett, D-Austin; and Sens. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston; Ron Clower, D-Garland; Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, and others have shouted their objections to colleagues and galleries filled with visitors and lobbyists:

"I have not seen a situation where there was so much lobby dominance and the only things being considered are lobby bills," is a Doggett refrain.

Joe Longley, who makes his living practicing consumer law, agrees, saying, "We're back to the old pre-Sharpstown syndrome. The lobby is more blatant, asking for everything bad, expecting to get at least something."

SEN. BILL MEIER, D-Euless, the sponsor of numerous changes in the Consumer Protection Act and target of Doggett-Schwartz barbs, responded in an interview:

"Statements that this session is lobby-oriented are not factual. What has happened is a slight change in the complexion of the Senate, making it more conservative. Those in the past who tried to pass bills are now trying to kill bills. The tactics of those left of center in terms of politics is to rail at the lobby.

"The type of legislation being passed is conservative and business-oriented, causing the ire on the floor of the House and Senate. The lobby is a good straw man."

Gov. Bill Clements stopped one Meier bill cold, stating he would veto his proposal to raise the interest ceiling on mortgage loans from 10 percent to 12 percent. "Certainly I have heard no cry from the people of Texas for higher interest rates," said Clements.

THE SCORECARD on consumer legislation, however, cannot be tallied until the session adjourns in 29 days.

What the consumer association fears most are Senate-approved changes in the Consumer Protection Act. The 1973 Legislature passed the law in the wake of the Sharpstown scandal, which involved allegations of legislative bribery in the passage of two bank deposit insurance bills.

The association includes individuals and organizations that pay $7.50 a year in dues.

Katy Davis of the association said the Meier amendments would virtually destroy the act, which was a major campaign issue in John Hill's successful race for attorney general in 1972.

THREE PROPOSED CHANGES are critical, Ms. Davis said in a telephone interview.

One would prohibit "class-action suits," by which an individual or a small group can attack an allegedly unfair business practice or product defect on behalf of numerous other consumers. If a single customer lost a few dollars through business fraud or deceit, he or she might be reluctant to sue.

Secondly, customers would have to prove the merchant intended to cheat them before they could collect damages. "Lawyers must feel they have a reasonable chance of winning before they will accept a case, and it is extremely difficult to prove 'intent,'" said Ms. Davis.

Thirdly, a Meier amendment would remove mandatory treble damages in certain consumer cases involving deception. Now, for example, if a jury awards a consumer $1,000, the consumer actually receives $3,000.

A common business complaint is the jury is not told of the treble damage provision before it makes its award.

Again, Ms. Davis said, a lawyer would hesitate to take a case that involves only $500 or so dollars without the treble damage provision because the lawyer's percentage would be too small.

Nobody wants these changes, insists Schwartz, "except the auto dealers and the real estate lobby."

TO COUNTER such comments, Meier released a list of 14 support groups, including retail grocers, oil marketers, jewelers, defense lawyers, builders, the Texas Chemical Council and the Texas Savings and Loan League, as well as automotive and real estate groups.

Meier voted for the 1973 consumer protection law — "I thought it was wise and established a way to afford relief from deception and fraud."

Now, however, his litany is a phrase he said he coined: "We must restore the balance to the market place."

"If you sue under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act (Consumer Protection Act)," said Meier, "you have almost a 99 and 44/100s pure chance of winning the case. ... A trial ought to be a search for the truth, not a way to arrive at a verdict because of statutory imbalance."

Meier discounts the theory his amendments will dry up the supply of lawyers for consumer cases. "There will be no problem getting attorneys to take lawsuits of this type," he said. "They would still receive a percentage of actual damages, plus attorney fees."

Another of the "tennis shoe bills" to clear the Senate was Sen. Tom Creighton's measure to allow auto dealers to charge $35 for paperwork in selling a car. Doggett said the service was worth more like 65 cents. The measure has been approved by a House committee.

ALSO WINNING Senate approval was Sen. Carl Parker's bill authorizing retail stores, such as Montgomery Ward, which was the chief supporter of the proposal, to sell one insurance policy to cover all debt risks.

"A true special interest bill," was Sen. Bill Patman's label for the bill, a label Parker denied.

Two other bills on Doggett's "list to watch" would extend the lives of the real estate and motor vehicle commissions. The Senate approved the real estate measure, 30-1, but added public members to the commission, which Doggett wanted.

Careful attention also is being given to bills raising the yield on loans and reducing usury penalties for banks and savings and loans.

A HOUSE-APPROVED BILL would allow a debtor to recover three times the amount by which interest exceeded the legal limit, plus refund of interest already paid and forgiveness of future interest. Present law, passed in 1892, imposes a penalty of twice the total amount of interest contracted for, plus forgiveness of future interest and refund of past interest.

The bill is ready for Senate debate.

Consumer groups feel there is no danger of "loan shark" legislation — raising interest rates on small loans — passing this session. The other major consumer topic of products liability also seems stuck.

The Senate Economic Development Committee approved seven bills 1½ months ago that make it harder to win products suits, but Meier said he has only been able to muster 18 votes out of 31 and needs three more to suspend the rules for debate.

Asked who was blocking the measures, he said, "the Texas Trial Lawyers Association — that's the bottom line, pure and simple."

Behind-the-scene efforts in the House to work out a compromise have failed so far.

PARTIAL CONSUMER VICTORIES have been scarce.

The Senate didapprove a Doggett bill that would authorize the State Health Department to regulate hazardous substances in children's toys and clothing. A House vote is pending.

ACORN — Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now — has concentrated on a bill that would allow the substitution of cheaper generic drugs for brand-name prescriptions. The bill was approved by a Senate committee but lacks the votes to be brought up for debate by the full Senate.

The Senate killed similar bills in 1975 and 1977.

ACORN claims 8,000 member families, or about 25,000 members, mostly in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and Austin. Dues are $16 a year per family.

There has been published speculation that Meier has sponsored numerous "anti-consumer" measures to prove his conservatism to business so he can call on its support if he runs for lieutenant governor.

"That's just an attempt to divert attention away from the issues — petty politics," said Meier.

Eye examinations may be mandated in new bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Every Texas child would have to undergo an eye examination before entering school for the first time if a House bill scheduled for consideration today becomes law.

The bill advanced, 79-36, on Friday. Approval today would send the measure to the Senate for further action.

A child would not be admitted to school without a certificate showing he or she had received an examination or a "vision screening test" approved by the State Board of Health.

Children whose parents have religious objections to medical examinations would be exempt.

The bill (HB2096) gives the board of health authority to require additional periodic examinations or screening in the future if it thinks these are necessary.

Rep. Bill Caraway, D-Houston, said school districts and the state would provide personnel to give visual screening tests to children who did not have examinations by doctors.

Mrs. Leonard died Saturday in a Big Spring hospital following a lengthy illness.

She was born Jan. 30, 1897, in Texas. She was married to William Leonard. He died in 1957.

A Baptist, she had been a resident of Big Spring since 1932, moving here from Rosco. She was employed as a cook at Cawper Hospital before retiring several years ago.

Survivors include three sons, Bob Leonard of Sweetwater, Leroy Leonard and Laurence Leonard, both of Tucumcari, N.M., and three daughters, Christine Williams of Brownsville, Betty Mikol of Los Angeles, Calif., and Babe Forgus of Big Spring.

Oma C. Rosson

BIG SPRING — Services for Oma Cecilia Maxfield Rosson, 75, were to be at 11:30 a.m. today in Sheppard Funeral Home with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

She died Saturday in her home after a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Rosson was born March 25, 1904, in Colorado City. She was married to Tom Rosson Nov. 24, 1924, in Big Spring. He died Jan. 19, 1970. She had lived in Big Spring for 70 years.

Mrs. Rosson was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star and the Women's Fellowship of the First Christian Church. She was a charter member of the Big Spring Sew and Chatter Club.

Survivors include two daughters, Andra Arcand and Mrs. Robert Myers, both of Big Spring; a son, Harold Rossom of Big Spring, eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Floyd Norman

ANSON — Services for Floyd Lee Norman, 33, of Houston, half-brother of Leroy Norman of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Bethsadia Baptist Church here with the Rev. Aubrey Todd, pastor of Weeping Mary Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Mt. Hope Cemetery directed by Lawrence Funeral Home.

Norman died Friday night in Houston following a motorcycle accident.

He was born Sept. 21, 1945, in Temple and was raised in Anson. He attended Anson Public Schools and entered the U.S. Marine Corps in 1966. He was a Vietnam veteran.

Norman was married to Annie Lara Hill on March 9, 1968, in Anson, and the couple lived in Anson, Dallas and Houston.

Other survivors include his wife, his mother, his father, two children, a half-brother and six half-sisters.

PEMBINA, N.D. (AP) — Earthen dikes just south of the Canadian border held back cresting flood waters from the rampaging Red River today, but flood control officials continued to worry about the situation in south Pembina.

The National Weather Service said the Red had crested at 53.6 feet and a sea of flood waters more than 10 miles wide was moving into Canada.

The record floods have already caused an estimated $60 million damage in North Dakota and Minnesota, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said those figures will increase as the flood waters recede and the agency gets a better handle on actual damages.

"Dike patrols found nothing overnight to blow the sirens or get the crowd out," said Joe Casey, a spokesman at flood control headquarters in Pembina. "We've got snow showers falling now, but we don't expect them to have an effect."

Midland Cubs split with Gold Sox

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland Cubs and the Amarillo Gold Sox spent the better part of four hours Sunday at Cubs Stadium splitting a Texas League doubleheader on an unfriendly cold and windy night. Still, there was a brief moment when the Cubs looked like they might pull off a sweep.

After winning the first game by a 4-1 margin on some good pitching by Herman Segelke and Mike Allen, the Cubs had the tying runs on base in the bottom of the seventh in the nightcap only to come up on the short end, 4-2.

Lefty Barry Biggerstaff was dealing the Cubs misery in the second game. From the third inning through one batter in the seventh, he had mowed down 13 Cubs in order, but the Cubs did manage to put a scare into the Gold Sox before it was over.

JAVIER FIERRO and Brian Rosinski rapped out back-to-back singles to chase Biggerstaff. Amarillo's answer to the problem was Greg Wilkes, who came in to strikeout pinch hitter Jesus Alfaro and retired Dan Rohn on a harmless grounder.

Biggerstaff and Wilkes ruined what could have been a great start for the Cubs in the first two games of the six-game set with the Gold Sox. The teams are off tonight, but will resume with a single game at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Cubs Stadium.

The Cubs scored all the runs they needed in the first inning of the first game on RBI singles by Jared Martin and Rosinski. They added insurance runs in the sixth on run scoring singles by Fierro and Rohn.

In between, the Cubs just left it up to Segelke, who picked up his first decision of the year with 6 1/3 innings of work.

THE GOLD SOX put a big scare into Segelke and the Cubs in the seventh. Amarillo touched Segelke for three of their base hits in that frame on singles by Dane Ilertson, Tom Vessey and Earl Battey with one out. Midland had its own answer in Mike Allen, who came in to pick up his first save of the year by retiring the only two batters he faced.

Amarillo never trailed in the second game with single runs in the first, second, third and fifth innings. Gary Ashby knocked in one run in the first and another in the third. Tim Flannery had an RBI single in the second. Ashby's sacrifice fly in the third proved to be the game winner although Brian Greer hit his second homer of the season for an insurance run in the fifth.

The Gold Sox banged out 11 hits off Midland loser Vince Valentini, making his first start for the Cubs. Valentini reported to the Cubs Sunday from AAA farm Wichita. Although he gave up 11 hits, he yielded only two earned runs thanks to a couple of his own errors.

Darrell Turner, who reported with Valentini from Wichita for a return appearance for Midland, pitched 2 1/3 innings of relief and gave up only two hits in a good outing.

The Cubs managed a 1-1 tie in the first frame of the second game on three back-to-back singles by Martin, Grandy and Mike Turgeon and they cut the margin to 3-2 in the third on an unearned run.

CUB PRINTS: In addition to Valentini and Turner, the Cubs have also added pitcher Mark Parker to the roster. Valentini was 13-1 for Geneva in 1978 while Valentini was 12-3 for Pompano Beach. To make room on the roster for the three pitchers, the Cubs have released pitchers Jeff Albert, Calvin Beal and Bob Clark. .Tuesday's game is Reporter-Telegram Family Night. The whole family will be admitted for $3 with a coupon from the paper.

Roberto Di Vicenzo

Green wins New Orleans by one shot

NEW ORLEANS — Hubert Green broke a five-way tie for the lead on Thg 16th hole, then saved his 4-under-par 68 with a critical par on the 18th and scored a 1-shot victory in the $250,000 New Orleans Open golf tournament.

Green, winner of the Hawaiian Open earlier in the year, solved a multiple-man scramble with his 16th hole birdie, pulling out of a tie with Lee Trevino, Steve Melnyk, Bruce Lietzke and surprising Frank Conner.

Trevino, Conner, Lietzke and Melnyk all tied for second at 274.

Birdies do job

AUSTIN, Texas — Argentina's Roberto De Vicenzo birdied five straight holes in the playoff, including a 5-footer on the sixth extra hole to carry the De Vicenzo-Julius Boros tandem to the $70,000 first prize in the Legends of Golf Tournament.

Tommy Bolt, who birdied three straight holes in the playoff, and Art Wall, who had seven birdies for the day, earned second place money of $40,000 in the incredible finish at Onion Creek Country Club.

Blalock wins

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Jane Blalock shot a final round par-72 to win the LPGA's Otey Crisman Classic by six strokes. Blalock went into the final round of the 54-hole, $100,000 tournament eight strokes in front of Pat Bradley, who notched a 2-under-par 70 for second place.

Borg triumphs

LAS VEGAS — Bjorn Borg defeated Jimmy Connors 6-3, 6-2 to take home $50,000 in silver dollars as winner of the Alan King Classic. Americans Marty Riessen and Sherwood Stewart rallied to defeat Raul Ramirez of Mexico and Adriano Panatta of Italy 4-6, 6-4, 7-6 to win the doubles championship.

Track and Field

PHILADELPHIA — Villanova's 6,000-meter relay team set a national collegiate record of 14:59.35 to give the Wildcats their second major relay victory of the 85th annual Penn Relays at Franklin Field.

The Villanova quartet of Dean Childs, John Burns, Amos Korir and Sidney Maree beat Georgetown to the wire by at least 30 yards.

Georgetown's time was 15:04.14, an American record. Villanova does not get credit for an American mark because Maree is from South Africa. The old American record of 15:07.1 was set by Georgetown earlier this year.

LOS GATOS, Calif. — Finland's Reijo Stahlberg won the shot put with a toss of 68 feet, 5 5/8 inches, believed to be the best mark inthe world this year, at the Two Big Guys Mountain Games. Mac Wilkins and Al Feuerbach, hosts for the four-event, throwing meet, both failed to win their specialties, the discus and shot, respectively.

SMU captures SWC tennis title

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The Southern Methodist University Mustangs captured the 1979 Southwest Conference tennis championship with a vengance here Sunday.

SMU went into the final day with enough accumulated points to have won the title even if they had lost every match Sunday, but the Mustang netters took seven of the day's nine matches to cement their crown.

In the day's feature match, second-seeded Jai DiLouie of SMU beat top-seeded Kevin Curen of Texas for the second time this season. DiLouie broke Curen's serve six times on the way to a 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 singles win, one of the highlights of the rain-dampened tourney.

"It was a big advantage for me when we moved indoors," he said. "The slower court took away from Kevin's serve, and with the bad weather we've had in Dallas this spring we were more acclimated to playing indoors."

Curen, however, came back to team with Steve Denton and capture the doubles crown, beating the Arkansas team of Peter Hawking and Buddy Bowman in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2.

SMU finished the season with 82 total points, Arkansas was second with 71, followed by Texas, 62; Houston, 54; TCU, 38, Texas A&M, 34; Rice, 26; Texas Tech, 16 and Baylor, 4.

DiLouie finished the season with a record of 10-1 in singles competition. Curen's record was 9-2.

Lee Boosters meet

Bulldogs, Rebels face vital week

BY RICHARD VINCENT
R—T sports writer

The time has come in District 5-4A baseball where people begin perching on the ends of their seats and biting their fingernails.

This is the last week of the second half and the two teams tied for first place, Midland High and Midland Lee, are both facing stern assignments in their Tuesday games.

Midland High, 5-0 in district and 16-5 overall, hosts Abilene Cooper, the first half winner and still a second half contender, at 4 p.m. on the Memorial Stadium diamond.

Meanwhile, Lee, 5-0 in league and 19-9 for the season, must travel to Abilene High for a 4 p.m. engagement with the slumping but always-tough Warbirds.

For the Tall City outfits, Tuesday's games are critical if either one hopes to earn a post-season playoff berth against Cooper. And, since Lee and Midland High go at it in Saturday's loop finale, well, you get the idea.

Cooper, 4-1 and 17-3, is far from dead and Midland High could be extended to the limit. The Cougars' earlier 6-5 victory over the Bulldogs dropped the Purple Pack out of the first half race.

Bulldog Coach Larry Peel will probably select from any of three hurlers; Archie Booth, Mark Hewitt or Kelly Lilly, to start against Cooper, who should counter with talented Eddie Jacques.

Each team also has a passle of talented hitters. Shortstop Jimmy Zachry, catcher Tommy Munoz, designated hitter Sam Driskill, centerfielder Tracy Gann, and of late, sophomore third baseman Michael Feldt, have really been stroking the ball for the Purple Pack while Tracy Thomas, Mike Anderson and Bobby Mize do much of the damage for Cooper.

One bright spot lately for the Bulldogs has been defense, although Saturday against Odessa High they were hampered by a couple of bad throws. Still, they've been extremely effective in removing opposition runners, especially those trying to score on suicide squeeze plays.

Coach Ernie Johnson's Rebels have continued to play steady, solid, fundamental baseball in the second half, a remarkable turnabout from their first half exploits. Incidentally, it was during the first half that the Rebels dropped a humiliating 6-1 verdict to the Eagles.

That shouldn't happen again. Lee has been getting good hitting from centerfielder John White, catcher Clay Calhoun, pitcher Terry Willis, third baseman Wade Cartwright, shortstop Steve Pitts and right fielder Tyler Alcorn. And Willis, 9-2, and Alan Koonce have provided superb pitching.

But really, Johnson's been getting super efforts from everyone on his roster. And most importantly, Lee runners are no longer being mistaken for Rip Van Winkle. Instead of standing around and getting picked-off, the Rebels now come out stealing and sacrificing.

Abilene High, 2-4 and 9-11, has had their share of second half problems. After a surprising tie for second place in the first half, the youthful Eagles haven't killed any giants this go-round. Yet, with Mac Rogers or Ricky Stokes throwing and the hitting of Seth Smith, Freddie Johnson and Mike Ogden, they can go with anyone on the proverbial given day.

Other circuit clashes on tap have Odessa Permian, 1-4 and 14-10, at San Angelo, 0-5 and 4-14, at 4 p.m., and Big Spring, 1-4 and 8-16, at Odessa High, 2-3 and 8-18, at 4 p.m.

The way Mojo's been playing, even hapless San Angelo might give them a real scare while the Big Spring-Odessa High tussle should be a balanced matchup.

Baseball releases like losing old friends

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

It happens every year and after seven years, the callouses should be thick enough to take this in stride. But somehow it doesn't work out that way. When players are cut, it's like losing an old friend, which is really what it amounts to.

Over the weekend three Midland Cubs were dealt their releases as a result of some adjustments in the Wichita Aeros American Assocation roster and gone are pitchers Calvin Beal, Jeff Albert and Bob Clark.

Albert, part of the deal in the Chicago-Los Angeles Rick Monday-Billy Buckner trade a few seasons back, always has been a slow starter and fast finisher. Last year, plagued by home run pitches early in the season when he was working out of the bullpen, Albert was Midland's most dependable starter by the season's end and wound up the Cubs' leading winner with 11 victories.

Clark, a lefthander, came to Midland after a 10-3 season and 19 saves and a microscopic 2.22 ERA at Pompano Beach in 1977, but had a disappointing 4-3 season and a 6.75 ERA at Midland last year. After his only appearance this year, his ERA was 41.00, and as it turned out he was never to get that second chance.

CALVIN BEAL, signed as a free agent after asking for a tryout last June and posting a 4-4 record at Pompano Beach, pitched seven innings of one-run ball his first outing with the Cubs and after three appearances this spring was 1-0 with a 4.63 ERA. The figures are as good as anyone on the staff, but the 25-year-old Southern University product was packing his gear before Sunday's double header.

"It's a matter of progress. Age works against a player, even though he may be better than a younger player. The way the organization looks at it, the 19-year-old prospect they keep has a chance of being with the big club by the time he is 25," one of the members of the Chicago family explained.

Dennis Lamp, now established pitcher in the major leagues, may have summed up the nagging fear that haunts every minor leaguer who has been around a while back in the spring of 1978 when he was winning a place for himself on the Chicago Cubs staff after knocking around for seven years in the minors.

"At least, if I don't make it here this year," he said, "There's always AAA ball. Back in AA ball, if you've got a few years on you, you are always aware that the next pay check may bring with it the pink slip."

IT'S A bitter time, but, beyond the disappointment and the end of a way of life, the ball club may be doing the released player a favor. It is giving him a chance to get on with his life, ending delusions of a major league fame and fortune. However, the rationalization may not be that easy to accept at the time.

Beal hopes to pursue his pitching career. "I have a friend in Atlanta who may be able to get me a tryout in the Braves' organization. I sat out a year after graduating from college and I think I proved that I could come back and pitch, so I want to give it another try. If it doesn't work out, I'll get a job. I've worked before and I will again."

76ers hope history repeats

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Billy Cunningham remembered it as if it was yesterday.

Cunningham recalled 1967-68 when the Philadelphia 76ers led the Boston Celtics 3-1 in a best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship series. But the Celtics came back and won the title.

Cunningham, now coach of the 76ers, talked about that season after his team rallied from a 13-point deficit in the final period to edge the San Antonio Spurs 92-90 Sunday.

The Philadelphia victory tied the best of seven set 3-3 after the Sixers had trailed 3-1. The seventh game will be Wednesday night in San Antonio.

Cunningham hopes his 76ers will become the third team in NBA history to come back from a 3-1 deficit to win. The Los Angeles Lakers were the other in 1970 over Phoenix. And also, if you're a believer in omens, or superstitions, history shows that the Spurs in nine tries have never won a seven-game series, counting their time in the old American Basketball Association.

The 76ers took a strange route to victory as they went 6:32 without a field goal and 5:07 with nary a point as the Spurs built an 11-point lead in the third period, and led by 13 with 10:43 to play.

Philadelphia appeared ready for a summer vacation.

"No, we weren't thinking of going on vacation," said Julius Erving. "I knew we were down a lot, but we got a spurt going."

The 76ers outscored the Spurs 8-0 and soon led 85-84 with 4:05 left.

The lead changed hands five times after that, with James Silas giving the Spurs a 90-89 edge with 20 seconds on the clock. Philadelphia called time out.

"The play was dsigned to go to Dr. J. (Erving)," said rookie Maurice Cheeks. "But he told me he was going to be double-teamed. I slid down the lane, got down low. I knew there were a lot of big guys around me, but I really didn't feel any pressure."

Erving was double-teamed after taking a pass from Cheeks, and shot the ball back to the 6-foot-1 rookie, who spun and laid in a left-handed layup for the winning basket. The Spurs had two more shots after that, but Silas missed a 10-foot jumper, and Mark Olberding's buzzer shot went in and out of the hoop.

Caldwell Jones topped Philadelphia with 20 points and 17 rebounds. Darryl Dawkins collected 18, Cheeks 15. For the Spurs, Silas totaled 27 and George Gervin 21.

Who has the advantage in Game 7?

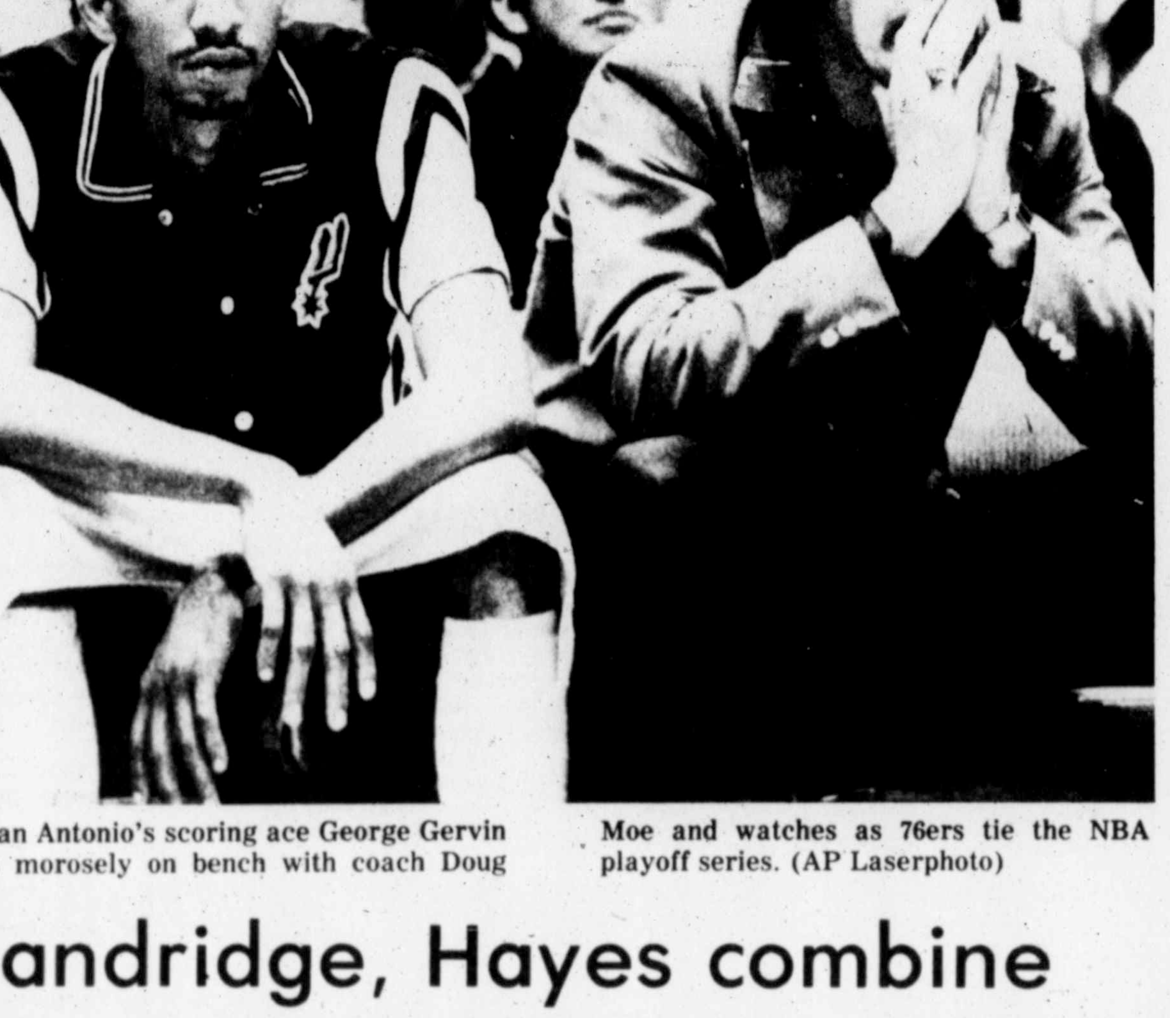
"They have the home floor edge, but we were down 3-1, and nobody expected us to do anything, so I'd say there is a little esure on them," said Cunningham. "We'll have strong officials and whoever plays best will win."

San Antonio's dejected coach, Doug Moe, didn't want to talk about the seventh game.

The Spurs' coach tried to explain the play on which Silas missed with three seconds left and the Sixers a point in front.

"The plan was to get the ball to either Silas or Gervin, and have either one take it in. You couldn't ask for two better players than these to do the job," Moe said.

Gervin played just 23 minutes, burdened early with three personal fouls. He said the Spurs would just have to go home and regroup.



San Antonio's scoring ace George Gervin sits morosely on bench with coach Doug Moe and watches as 76ers tie the NBA playoff series. (AP Laserphoto)

Colts acquire Lions' Landry

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Colts acquired quarterback Greg Landry from the Detroit Lions Sunday for undisclosed draft choices. Jim Husbands, a Colts' spokesman, said the trade is pending Landry's passing a Baltimore physical examination.

The 12-year National Football League veteran from the University of Massachusetts started the first five games of the 1978 season for the Lions before losing his starting job to Gary Danielson.

U.S. cycler wins race

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — American Kenny Roberts, driving a Yahmaha, won the 500ccm event in the Grand Prix of Austria motorcycle races Sunday. He was timed in 48 minutes, 24.23 seconds for 35 laps covering 92 miles. His average speed was 114 mph. Virginio Ferrari of Italy, driving a Suzuki, was second in 48:30.26.

Chisox John Allyn dies

CHICAGO (AP) — John Allyn, a major stockholder of the Chicago White Sox and former owner of the club, died of a heart attack Sunday. He was 61. Allyn served as president and owner of the White Sox from 1969 to 1975 when he helped pre the team from moving to Reattle by selling his majority interest in the club to Bill Veeck.

Allyn graduated from Lafayette University and joined the investment banking company founded by his father.

Cauthen finishes dismal 7th

PARIS (AP) — U.S. jockey Steve Cauthen's French debut was unsuccessful Sunday as he finished seventh aboard English-trained Hawaiian Sound in the $185,000 Prix Ganay at Longchamp Race Track. Frere Basile triumphed in the 2,100-meter (about 1 and 5-16 miles) classic, finishing a length and a half ahead of heavily favored Trillion.

Bird sparks IS baseballers

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Larry Bird traded his sneakers for a pair of spikes on Saturday and drove in two runs to help Indiana State sweep a college baseball doubleheader against Kentucky Wesleyan 5-1 and 7-1. Bird, the Sycamores' 6-foot-9 All-American basketball player, drew about 1,000 spectators to his one-time-only appearance with the baseball team. Normally, only about 250 fans show up for the Indiana State baseball games.

Bird, whose contract talks with the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association currently are stalemated, struck out in his only time at bat in the first game, but Kevin Cook and Phil Thatcher combined on a four-hitter for the Sycamores' victory. Bird also was at first base in the second game, and his single to center drove in two runs, giving the Sycamores a 2-1 lead. The two victories gave Indiana State a 25-6 record.

Merrill sets 2-mile record

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Olympian Jan Merrill set an American two-mile outdoor record Sunday, covering the distance in 9:46.4 in an Amateur Athletic Union development meet, breaking her own mark of 9:49.7 set April 17, 1978.

Hobday wins Madrid Open

MADRID (AP) — Britain's Simon Hobday shot a 2-over-par 74 in the final round Sunday to win the Madrid Open Golf Tournament, finishing with a 285 for 72 holes at the 6,928-yard, par-72 Puerta de Hierro Club course to earn $10,714. Three players, Britain's Gordon Brand, South Africa's Tienie Britz, and Spain's Francisco Abreu shared second place at 287.

Depailler drives to win

JARAMA, Spain (AP) — Ligier and Ferrari remain the cars to beat in the world Formula I driving championships, but the Spanish Grand Prix has shown reigning champion Mario Andretti and his new Lotus 80 have become a contender again. France's Patrick Depailler drove the Ligier team to a brilliant flag-to-flag win at the Jarama circuit near Madrid Sunday. Canadian Gilles Villeneuve finished only seventh in his Ferrari, but his car showed its potential with him scoring the fastest lap of the race.

Dandridge, Hayes combine for 68 as Bullets bite Hawks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even with President Carter in the stands rooting against them, Bobby Dandridge and Elvin Hayes have shown they get their act together when the money's on the table.

Forwards Dandridge and Hayes combined Sunday for 68 points, 23 in the final quarter, to power the defending champion Washington Bullets to a 100-94 victory over the tenacious Atlanta Hawks and into the Eastern Conference championship.

The Bullets will play at home Friday night and Sunday against the winner of the Philadelphia-San Antonio series, now tied 3-3, which will be concluded in Texas Wednesday.

"It was a man's game out there today," said Washington Coach Dick Motta after the game that gave the Bullets a 4-3 edge in the best-of-seven series. "It was no place out there for the weak at heart."

Dandridge scored 17 of his 29 points in the final quarter and Hayes was the game's high scorer with 39 points, six in the last period. John Drew led the Hawks with 24 while Terry Furlow had 21.

"This is the toughest seven-game series that wasn't for all the money that I ever played in," said Dandridge. "Atlanta gave us everything we needed and then some."

The Bullets suffered once more from the inability of their guards to score. At one point, the Washington guards had hit on only two of 23 attempts, but Phil Chenier and Larry Wright came off the bench to make four quick baskets to boost the Bullets' spirits.

Dandridge, who rested for eight minutes in the third period, said he likes to take charge in the final period, especially when he's not tired.

"During crucial situations, I can control the tempo," he said. "In the final minutes, I can go one-on-one or do anything I want to do. When Elvin is going well, or anybody else for that matter, in the early going, I have a tendency to let him do his thing. I wait for the last few minutes."

Hayes had nothing but praise for the Atlanta club.

"They are truly winners," he said. "I have more respect for Atlanta, basically, than for any other team in the league. any other team than us Atlanta would have beaten today.

"Atlanta played a tremendous game today. We just played a little better," said Hayes.

Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown said, "The old pros knew they were in a donnybrook. We have nothing to be ashamed of.

"We took them out of their offense, but what really hurt was where they outscored us 28-6 in second shots. That allowed them to keep control without working out of their offense. Their muscle was allowed to score."

Borg posts easy King Classic win

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Patience was a virtue for Bjorn Borg, playing the key factor in his winning $50,000 at the Alan King Tennis Classic.

Borg, a 22-year-old Swede, played almost flawlessly in defeating Jimmy Connors 6-3, 6-2 in the singles championship of the rich tournament Saturday at Caesars Palace.

"I was more patient than Jimmy," said Borg, the tournament's top seed. "He was missing more first serves. I prefer to play back and keep my ball deep so he can't come to tt. Jimmy's backhand is better and he has more power with it."

Although Connors leads Borg 10-8 in their personal rivalry, he made too many unforced errors in Saturday's match and his forehand volleys and forehand approach shots were erratic.

"I didn't expect an easy win," said Borg. "I have been playing better and better each match."

Borg lost the first set in his first two preliminary matches of the tournament, but was awesome on the final two days. He downed unseeded Gene Mayer 6-1, 6-1 in Friday's semifinals.

There were an unusual number of service breaks in the championship game. Borg broke Connors in the second game of the first set. Connors broke back immeliately and then Borg broke back again in the fourth game.

Champions look like Chumps to Mariners

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees continue to get hit hard by the Seattle Syndrome..

"If I knew what was wrong, I'd do something about it," said Yankee Manager Bob Lemon after another lost weekend with the Seattle Mariners in the Kingdome.

The Mariners are one of baseball's worst teams, but you'd never know it the way they handle the Yankees at home. They beat the world champions for the 11th time in 14 decisions in the West Coast city Sunday and after the 6-5 loss, Lemon was just as perplexed as ever.

"Nobody goes up there and deliberately makes an out," the Yankee manager said tersely in reference to a question whether his team took the Mariners too lightly.

For the third straight game, the Yankees blew a lead and lost in the late innings. This time, New York led 5-2 in the eighth inning before the Kingdome roof caved in on them.

Bruce Bochte's pinch-hit RBI single off Dick Tidrow with two out in the bottom of the ninth capped a three-run rally for Seattle. Seattle relief pitcher Rafael Vasguez, who pitched four shutout innings, was the winner while Yankee reliever Paul Mirabella took the loss.

Willie Horton's two-out, two-run single off Ron Davis tied the game at 5-5 before Bochte came through with his game-winning hit.

New York's Tommy John, bidding to become baseball's first five-game winner, departed in favor of Mirabella after Ruppert Jones' RBI single in the eighth cut the Yankee lead to 5-3.

Red Sox 2, Angels 0

Steve Renko hurled two-hit ball before leaving with one out in the ninth inning, pitching Boston past California. Renko had a no-hitter until Don Baylor spoiled it with a one-out double in the seventh. The veteran right-hander gave up a fifth-inning single before Dick Drago and Bill Campbell finished up. A sacrifice fly by Butch Hobson in first and Rick Burleson singled home another for the Red Sox in the fifth. "I had a goodder today and I threw only the fastball," said Renko. "The fastball was taking off and the slider was doow, at made both of them effective."

Orioles 13, A's 1

Gary Roenicke and Ken Singleton each belted three-run homers during a 10-run seventh inning as Baltimore overpowered Oakland. Kiko Garcia, Lee May and Rich Dauer also homered for the Orioles, who have won 10 of their last 11 games and have beaten the A's 14 times in 15 games.

Left-hander Tippy Martinez, taking over for the injured Jim Palmer in the first inning, blanked the A's on two hits over the next 61-3 innings for his first victory of the season.

Rangers 10, White Sox 0

Buddy Bell's two-run double keyed a three-run eighth inning and Texas scored five more times in the ninth to rout Chicago. Dock Ellis held the White Sox to four hits before getting late relief help from Jim Kern, who retired all seven batters he faced.

"Ellis looked great, just great," said Texas Manager Pat Corrales. "When I went out to talk to him in the seventh inning he told me he had run out of gas. I said 'thank you' and called on Kern."

Twins 5, Tigers 3

Roy Smalley collected four hits, including a homer, to help Minnesota beat Detroit. Smalley singled and scored in each of the first and third innings and hit a solo homer in the fourth. His final single improved his batting average to .400.

Geoff Zahn struggled to his third victory without a loss and Mike Marshall, who relieved in the sixth, picked up his seventh save.

"He's earning his money and having fun," Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch said of Marshall. "The man's in seventh heaven when he's on the mound."

Indians 5, Royals 4

Toby Harrah delivered a two-run double and Rick Wise teamed up with Sid Monge on a six-hitter to lead Cleveland over Kansas City. Wise gave up all of the Kansas City hits before Monge came on to pitch the ninth.

Wise snapped a personal three-game losing streak against the Royals. He had not won in Kansas City since June 1975.

Brewers 3-3, Blue Jays 1-5

Sixto Lezcano's RBI triple in the seventh inning broke up a scoreless game and triggered Milwaukee over Toronto in the opener of their double-header behind the six-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell.

Consecutive home runs by Rick Bosetti and Bob Robertson leading off the eighth inning helpronto win the second game.

Cubs sink Braves, 6-5

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

First the Chicago Cubs jumped all over Atlanta relief ace Gene Garber. Then they jumped all over each other.

"Unbelievable!" muttered Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox, who learned the hard way Sunday that a baseball game is never over until the last man is out.

The Braves entered the ninth inning with a 5-0 lead behind Larry McWilliams, who was hurling a two-hitter. They led 5-0 when Garber came on with the bases loaded and two out. But they trailed — and lost — 6-5 by the time Garber finally got that elusive third out following Tim Blackwell's two-run single, pinch-hitter Larry Biittner's RBI single and Bobby Murcer's three-run homer.

"I was on second when Bobby hit it," said Blackwell. "When I got to the dugout everybody was jumping up and down, jumping all over everybody."

"McWilliams pitched a fine ballgame, but he was worn out when I came and got him, but he still had his shutout," said Cox. "When you have Garber in that situation, you expect to win. I figured the game was a lock. It's a surprise to me any time he's hit like that."

IT PROBABLY SURPRISED the Cubs, too.

"It sure didn't look good for us for a while," Murcer conceded. "But I've seen it happen a few times ... in 16 years. You've just to get lucky for something like that to happen.

"The last couple of days we just haven't been getting a hit in the right place, but we got one in the right place today. I just wanted to hit it (the pitch he hit for a homer) hard someplace. It was a sinker, down and in. I wasn't really sure if it would be off the fence, or what."

Phillies 4, Padres 3

Second baseman Manny Trillo, whose error gave San Diego a run in the third inning, capped the Phillies' two-run ninth with an RBI single. Philadelphia entered the ninth trailing 3-2, but Mike Schmidt drew a leadoff walk from San Diego relief ace Rollie Fingers and Garry Maddox hit a looping fly that went for a double when left fielder Jerry Turner was unable to hold it. Schmidt scored on a wild pitch before Trillo's game-winning single.

Pirates 10, Astros 5

Omar Moreno and Willie Stargell drove in three runs apiece to rally the Pirates after Houston began the game with a leadoff homer by Terry Puhl. Pittsburgh starter Don Robinson left the game with a shoulder injury after delivering the home run pitch and Bruce Kison earned the victory with 71-3 innings of strong relief.

Expos 7, Giants 5

Gary Carter drilled two home runs in a game for the 10th time in his career and drove in four runs for Montreal, which erased a 4-3 deficit in the fourth inning when Ellis Valentine, making his first appearance since serving a three-game suspension for bumping an umpire, slammed a three-run pinch homer off Vida Blue. Larry Herndon drove in three San Francisco runs with a homer and triple but couldn't prevent the Giants from losing their seventh game in a row.

Reds 5, Cardinals 1

Paul Moskau pitched 5 2-3 innings of scoreless relief and singled home the winning run in a four-run fourth inning. Moskau took over in the third inning when Tom Seaver reinjured his back. Johnny Bench passed a team and career milestone with his 6,000th time at bat. The only other Reds to reach that plateau were Pete Rose, Vada Pinson and Tony Perez. Bench took a called third strike in his 6,000th at-bat but walked the next time up and scored the tying run on a double by Ray Knight, who scored on Moskau's single. George Foster homered in the fifth.

Dodgers 8-3, Mets 3-6

Richie Hebner drove in the go-ahead run with a single and Joel Youngblood smacked his fourth homer in six games to lead the Mets in the nightcap. In the opener, Dusty Baker drove in five runs with a homer, single and bases-loaded walk and Gary Thomasson had three RBI while Don Sutton scattered five hits. It was Sutton's 208th career victory, one shy of the Dodgers' record held by Don Drysdale.

Rangers forestall White Sox sweep

CHICAGO (AP) — It wasn't a question of who won or lost but whether the game should have been played.

Texas defeated Chicago 10-0 Sunday to prevent a three-game sweep by the White Sox, but Ranger players and Manager Pat Corrales were incensed for having to play in a steady, cold rain.

"There's no question about it, for the first time in my career I was totally unprepared mentally to play. That's too bad, because I was going pretty good coming in," hard-hitting outfielder Al Oliver said.

Oliver was speaking of the cold, wet, windy weather the two teams were forced to play in — not just Sunday, but all three games of the series.

"Someone could have been seriously injured. Obviously, the first priority is to make money with no concern for the players," said Oliver, who was hitting .414 going into the series but went 0-for-10 before getting RBI singles his last two times up Sunday.

The start of the game was delayed more than an hour because of rain, and action ceased in the second inning for another 34 minutes. Play resumed and the game was played in a steady rain with temperatures around 40 degrees.

Despite 'revolution,' students have sex problems

By IRA J. DREYFUSS

NEW YORK (AP) — They are heirs of the sexual revolution, but many college students still find trouble when they look for love, say sex therapists at campus counseling centers.

Students find sex partners more easily today than they did in the past, and don't feel as guilty about sex as their parents did, counselors say. But, they add, even unmarried couples have problems common to marriages — forming relationships and making them last. The students are looking for intimacy, but don't know how to find it, the counselors say.

The problems surface as sexual dysfunction, and are treated in counseling or medical programs at many schools.

"I would say there are more relationship problems now than ever before, because there are more expectations about relationships than ever before," says Dr. Daniel B. Goldstine, a clinical psychologist who works with students at the University of California at Berkeley. "Often, a sexual problem is a metaphor for a relationship problem."

Sex is expected of couples now, and it's expected to be good, he says. If it's not good, the partners worry. Anxiety, the counselors note, is a prime cause of problems like impotence in men and frigidity in women.

"Non-intimate sexual intimacy...I'd say it's the most significant and frequent problem in my whole practice," says Dr. Debora Phillips, a clinical psychologist in Princeton, N.J., who counsels Princeton University students. "A sexual relationship takes time. It involves a complex learning experience between two people."

And, she says, "this new phenomenon of people going to bed very quickly" gives couples "practically zero preparation for talking in an intimate way about sexuality with anybody."

This is not to say students are hopping from bed to bed. In fact, says Lorna Sarrel of Yale University's sex counseling program, there has been a decline in the number of coeds who lose their virginity simply for the experience.

"About five years ago, we feel there was tremendous pressure on the woman to have sexual experience," says Mrs. Sarrel. "Almost invariably, it wasn't a good experience. Women are a bit more thoughtful now."

But when it comes to putting in the effort it takes to keep love growing, many couples decide to quit, says Goldstine. Even in therapy, he says, they don't seem to want to put in the effort. And as a result, most of the couples he sees end up breaking up.

"I suspect it's a 'me generation' thing," Goldstine says. "It's the kind of 'go with your feelings' mentality that tells you that if you stub your toe, it's time to quit."

For those willing to put in the effort, Ms. Phillips prescribes an old, familiar treatment: necking. She tells students how far to go, and where to stop.

"I think it's something that's been lost to a whole generation," she says. "I'm teaching them how to make out. They're learning a lot about each other."

Also a problem for achievement-oriented college students, experts say, is performance anxiety — sex problems simply because a person is worried about whether he or she will have problems with sex.

"People who got A-plus in everything want to get A-plus in sex, too," says Mrs. Sarrel. However, says Ms. Phillips, sex is not like studying — worrying more and trying harder in sex can just make you more conscious of the problem.

The way to treat it, says Ms. Phillips, a behavior therapist by training, is through behavior rehearsal — repeating sex techniques until one has learned how the body responds.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Are they happier?

Dear Dr. Solomon: A few years ago, our young people appeared to be in a period of upheaval. Now that things have quieted down a good deal, I wonder if this means that today's youth are happier and better adjusted to life. —Mr. N.V.

Dear Mr. V.: Unfortunately, there is evidence of serious unhappiness among many of today's youth. Psychiatrists estimate that 10 to 15 percent of children in urban areas have some emotional disorder. among those 15 to 24 years of age, the suicide rate has doubled since 1965. The National Institute of Mental Health estimates that 5,000 people in this age range will commit suicide this year, and that an additional 250,000 will attempt it.

Moreover, a million teen-agers run away from home every year, and more than a million teen-age girls—one in 10—become pregnant each year. Of these, one-half receive no prenatal care until late in the pregnancy—and a baby born to a teen-age mother is twice as likely to die during the first year of life as a baby born to an older woman.

What has gone wrong? I'm not sure, but the situation merits attention. It's clear that not all young people are fully enjoying today's "youth-oriented" society. The one thing I know our youth needs—is parental control.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Two close friends of mine recently had cesarean births, and I've heard of several others. This seems like a strange coincidence. I was under the impression that such deliveries are rare. Are cesareans the new inthing in medicine?—Mrs. E.T.K.

Dear Mrs. K.: During the past five years, the number of cesarean deliveries has increased considerably, probably because of improved technology. Dr. O. William Davenport, president of the Florida Medical Assn., explains that the procedure has improved to such an extent that obstetricians are finding it safer for the high-risk fetus.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that some drugs are potentially harmful to the unborn child when taken by a pregnant woman. Is it safe to assume that non-prescription remedies are harmless?—Mrs. H.L.

Dear Mrs. L.: Pregnant women should be very cautious about taking any form of medication—even those sold over-the-counter without prescriptions. It has been found that many commonly used remedies, such as aspirin, cough syrups and cough drops, can lead to problems with the unborn child.

Dr. Reba Hill, a Houston physician, has reported that a study of 300 patients implicated aspirin as having some serious adverse effects on the fetus. Other common drugs that pregnant women should avoid, if possible, include antibiotics and tranquilizers. The best policy to follow would be not to take any form of medication without first consulting your obstetrician.

Junk mail haters: There is something you can do

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Consumers who find their mailboxes filled with unwanted offers of merchandise don't have to suffer in silence.

It is easier than ever to have your name removed from mailing lists these days, thanks to the Mail Preference Service operated by the Direct Mail Marketing Association.

The service was started in 1971; a companion "add-on" program for consumers who want more mail, not less, was begun three years ago. As of April, the association says, just under 138,000 people had asked to have their names removed from mailing lists, while more than 140,000 had asked to be added on.

The service offers no guarantee; a company does not have to stop sending you mail just because you don't want it. But association officials say that most direct-mail firms do not want to waste their time and money sending offers to people who are not likely to buy.

To have your name removed from — or added to — the lists used by direct marketers, write to: Mail Preference Service, 6 E. 43rd St., New York, N.Y., 10017. Specify whether you want the removal or add-on service.

While many people complain about the proliferation of offers, millions of others apparently like the idea of shopping by mail. Direct marketers sell more than $75 billion a year in goods and services, according to industry figures.

Shoppers who do buy through the mails are protected by Federal Trade Commission regulations.

You have the right to know when you can expect your merchandise to be shipped. If the ad or brochure says the order will be rushed to you in less than a week, for example, it must be shipped to you within that time. If no date is stated, the merchandise must be shipped within 30 days.

If the seller doesn't ship your goods before the deadline, he or she must notify you of the delay and provide a way for you to reply, free. You can agree to the new shipping date or you can cancel the order and get a full refund.

If the delay is less than 30 days, you must send in your reply or the seller can assume you agree to the later shipping date. If the delay is more than 30 days, you must give your express consent to the postponement. If you don't, the seller must return your money at the end of the first 30 days of the delay.

You have the right to get all your money back if you cancel your order. The seller must mail your refund within seven business days after you cancel your purchase.

Note: The FTC rule does not apply to some services, including mail order photo finishing and magazine subscriptions.

Rockslide's imposed isolation disrupts community

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — No one in this picturesque seaside community minds the small town intimacy forced on the area by a rockslide that has closed the main road from Los Angeles. But the isolation is another matter.

"None of my employees can get in unless I go pick them up," said Judy Johnston, manager of a fast food hamburger restaurant that lost $10,000 in business last week. "I'm frustrated. And even when the road does open, will my employees still be around?"

Two weeks ago, the hillside overlooking the Pacific Coast Highway burst loose, sending tons of boulders and rocks down onto the road. The State Department of Transportation closed a 5½-mile stretch of the route after four motorists suffered minor injuries from rocks that crashed through their windshields.

Most of that road was later reopened, but a 500-foot stretch remains closed. Surrounded on one side by the 150-foot cliff and on the other by the sea, the road is impassable.

THE DEBRIS HAS continued to trickle down the hillside, and geologists say they expect the hillside to tumble into the sea, destroying six $500,000 homes and an apartment building.

Shifting earth is not uncommon for the irregular terrain of Southern California, and as the rocks tumbled from Pacific Coast Highway, two other areas were trembling.

In Rancho Palos Verdes, 30 miles south of Malibu and the scene of a major landslide that destroyed or damaged 150 homes in the 1950s, new cracks began opening last spring. And farther south, in Laguna Beach's Bluebird Canyon, two more $150,000 homes fell victim to the same slow slide Monday that destroyed more than 30 homes last fall.

But those are residential neighborhoods and the problems — though serious — affect only the few residents in the area.

Malibu, a popular tourist area known for its beaches, is cut off from the world just as the summer season is getting underway.

BUSINESSES ALONG Pacific Coast Highway are devastated — customers are down 95 percent at some restaurants, with losses estimated at between $10,000 to $25,000 per week. One seafood spot had more than 50 reservations for Easter Sunday; all were cancelled.

The residents, many of whom work southeast of the slide area in Santa Monica, about 10 miles away, must either drive a circuitous mountain road 30 miles out of their way or walk past the slide area to the cars they left parked overnight on the other side.

"Every time we open our doors in the morning, it costs at least $1,500," said Connie Spiros, co-owner of the 680-capacity Sea Lion Restaurant, whose huge picture windows face the Pacific Ocean. "We employ 77 people, but look around today — it's incredible."

The restaurant was empty. One of the two waitresses working, who said waiting lists are common at lunchtime, said only 13 checks were written by dinnertime the day before.

Although Robert Yuro shares the frustrations of his neighbors, the owner of Alice's Restaurant refuses to complain.

HE'S SCHEDULED a meeting of Malibu businessmen at his oceanside restaurant Monday and hopes to work out a plan for publicizing alternate routes to the area.

"Instead of yelling and screaming, we have to let the disaster work for us," said Yuro, who had 65 employees but is now back to "a momma-and-poppa" operation. "I want to get people to support the community and go out of their way to get here. And I want to make it interesting to come here."

To encourage them, Yuro wants the community to sponsor "Malibucks" — providing $12 worth of food and fun for only $10 in Malibucks. He wants the creation of a carnival on weekends, with magicians, mimes and other entertainers walking the streets and beaches.

"We're thinking of chartering buses to leave the (San Fernando) Valley or Hollywood to bring people to Alice's for brunch, and then they can go to the beach for the day," Yuro said. "We'll have a couple of social directors out there with them and then we'll drive them back in the afternoon. They won't have to worry about the traffic.

"I think it can bring the community together," he said.

MOST RESIDENTS, however, won't be satisfied with any solution that fails to open at least two lanes of the highway. It is a mostly two lane road, but is four lanes at the point that is closed.

For now, residents walk single file along a narrow pedestrian path left open when the transportation department built a chain-link fence around the slide area.

"Right now, there's a spirit of goodwill and it's almost fun," said Thomas McDonald, after he parked his car on the south side of the slide and began the 1½-mile walk home. "All the wives come down early to drop their husbands off, and it's not an unpleasant walk in the morning.

"But solutions that extend out for a month are going to change the attitudes," continued McDonald, a Hughes Aircraft employee.

Sally Lienhard, a hospital dietician, said she had been driving the long way around to work until friends suggested she leave a car parked near the slide area.

"I've seen more neighbors and friendly people since I've started walking," she said, before turning briefly to greet a few familiar faces. "Even though it's inconvenient, it has its nice side."

Tim Marshall, who works for a publishing company, said he's been able to ride his bicycle on Pacific Coast Highway for the first time in the 10 years he's lived in Malibu.

Marshall was in good spirits even while carrying a 50-pound cannister of helium to fill balloons for his daughter's first birthday party and a large piece of cardboard on which to rest the cake. "It's delightful living up here now," he said, smiling.

NHTSA questions safety of gas tanks in Ford cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has told the Ford Motor Co. that the fuel tanks of 1970-73 Ford Mavericks and 1971-73 Mercury Comets are potentially dangerous and can explode into flames in rear-end crashes.

A pending inquiry on the matter could lead to a recall of the estimated 974,000 affected cars still in use. A total of 1.1 million were manufactured.

NHTSA officials this weekend said the agency has received reports of 26 Maverick and Comet rear-impact collisions which caused fuel spillage and fire, resulting in 31 deaths and 19 injuries.

The agency said it had written Ford president Philip Caldwell informing him that there has been an initial determination that a safety-related defect exists.

Sailors pay $300 for this suit and hope they'll never use it

By GRAHAM VINK

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — A fleet of 200 tuna boats lay drifting off Oregon's Cascade Head one evening last September when sudden gale-force winds whipped up 18-foot swells.

Seven boats capsized. The crews were quickly recovered — except for George Jameson.

Normally, his chances of staying alive in the chilly Pacific for even 30 minutes were slim. But the Seaside, Ore., fisherman, a father of three, was found almost 24 hours later, 10 miles off the coast.

Taken aboard the Coast Guard cutter Campbell, Jameson, 42, was in excellent condition despite 10-to-12-foot seas, 35-mph winds and water temperatures of less than 55 degrees.

"I was pretty comfortable," he recalled. The Coast Guard said his body temperature dropped only one degree.

Jameson owes his life to an ugly, cumbersome and expensive piece of clothing — the survival suit.

Increasing numbers of sailors from the Gulf of Alaska to the Norwegian Sea are paying $300 for a suit they hope they'll never use.

Two of the three men who made the historic balloon trip across the Atlantic Ocean last year might have died if they hadn't carried the suits on their first, unsuccessful, attempt.

The Coast Guard now continues to search longer for missing fishermen off the Pacific Coast, because more and more sailors are bobbing like corks long after they should be dead from exposure.

"When you find people floating around for an inordinate amount of time, it sort of sells you on the concept," said Lt. Cmdr. Jim Shaw of the 13th District Coast Guard search and rescue unit in Seattle. "A good survival suit helps stack the deck for the mariner."

As more sailors buy suits, the Coast Guard has been more inclined to extend its searches, he said. "After a certain point of a search, you have a tendency to say, 'Well, there's not much hope'."

But a survival suit "is definitely a factor," Shaw said.

Ben Abbruzzo, one of three Albuquerque, N.M., men to drift in a balloon across the Atlantic last August, credited survival suits for saving his life on a 1977 effort with Maxie Anderson that ended with an ocean ditching.

"We went through a 40-hour exposure to freezing rain and snow" while airborne in their balloon, recalled Abruzzo. "We think that without the suits we probably would not have survived."

In the chilly waters of the Great Lakes, U.S. Steel provides suits for its crews aboard carriers of bulk ore and ljmestone. In two years, the suits have never been pressed into service, said spokesman Karl Johnson in Duluth, Minn. "We hope we never have to use them," he said, adding that crewmen who fall into the lakes without protection will live "maybe four minutes, if they're lucky."

The suits were developed in the early 1960s, but "you couldn't give them away then," recalled Jim Hill, whose Bremerton firm dominates the business. "People weren't safety-minded."

The price has swollen from $60 to $300, but so has the market. Hill's Imperial Manufacturing sold $2 million to $3 million of the suits in 1978, and total sales are close to 25,000 suits, Hill said.

Money doesn't make you a bridge player

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

With money in your pocket you are wise and you are handsome and you sing well too. But are you a bridge player?

South took the king of spades, drew trumps and lost the club finesse. Needing three immediate diamond tricks East led the ace and nine of diamonds, but South correctly played low. If East's second diamond were the jack, South would cover with the queen to get a trick with dummy's ten.

FINISHES WITH LESS

East started with money in his pocket but finished with less after today's hand. Can you do better?

East should begin the diamonds by leading the jack. If South plays low the jack wins, and the defenders then take two top diamonds. If West covers the jack with the queen of diamonds, West takes the king and returns a diamond. East then has the ace-nine behind dummy's ten for two more diamond tricks.

U. S. consumers cashing in coupons to save cash

By LOUISE COOK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Clip and cash.

That's the motto for millions of Americans who are clipping, collecting and cashing in coupons in an effort to cut grocery bills.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that four out of five families — 80 percent — use coupons today. In 1970, a survey by the Nielsen Clearing House division of the A.C. Nielsen Corp. showed 65 percent of all households using coupons.

Manufacturers alone are expected to issue almost 70 billion coupons this year, according to the USDA, up from 62 billion in 1977 and 46 billion in 1976. Those figures do not include the millions of coupons issued by retailers, usually in newspaper advertisements.

The more than 2 billion coupons redeemed last year had a face value of $500 million, the Agriculture Department says.
