Coming Sunday...

Midland's version of that ancient German celebration of beer, food and fellowship—Oktoberfest—unfolds Sept. 9, 10, and 11 at the Museum of the Southwest.

Even the Germans don't wait for October to start cutting the sausage and slipping into the lederhosen, and the museum's "Septemberfest" will combine high art with primitive crafts to take advantage of Midland's balmy September weather.

Pretzels, strudel, sausage, barbeque, popcorn, pickles and corn-on-the-cob will ease hunger pangs suffered while strolling among the tree-shaded exhibits and demonstration booths, and a clown-face make-up booth will be among the more popular features.

Read about the festivities planned for next weekend and see what last year's Septemberfest looked like through R-T photographer Bruce Partain's lens—this Sunday in your Reporter-Telegram.

Mexico bears Anita's brunt

By TOM FENTON

TAMPICO, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Anita, packing winds up to 155 miles per hour, slammed into the northeast Mexican coast before dawn today, washing out roads, uprooting trees and tearing off rooftops in a dozen or more fishing villages.

There was no immediate report of casualties. At least some of the villages had been evacuated hours beforehand.

The erratic storm moved west-southwest into Mexico and, by mid-morning, its winds had diminished to no more than 100 mph. It dumped several inches of rain over farming communities in its path.

Countless roads were washed out or blocked by mudslides, and communications were disrupted in some locations.

"We haven't had anything we can't handle," said Mario Flores, director of public safety for the state of Tamaulipas.

Electric power was cut off in Soto La Marina, the town directly in the hurricane's path as it came ashore at about 4 a.m rushing in at 12 miles per hour.

Soto La Marina and La Pesca, both on the edge of the Laguna Madre, had most of their residents evacuated by the Army early Thursday ahead of torrential rains and vicious winds.

"People are more afraid of the wind than the water," Flores said.

Mayor Leonel Tavares said the drought of recent months would help keep floods to a minimum.

Anita, the first hurricane of the season, first had aimed its punch at the lower Texas coast, but veered south Thursday morning and drifted into northeastern Mexico as South Texas sighed with relief.

In Matamoros, across from Brownsville at the tip of Texas, nearly 8,000 people were taken to shelters. Officials said today most of them were returning to their homes and there appeared to be little danger of flooding.

"We were very, very lucky," said Brownsville meteorologist Al Dreumont, "torrential rains and excessive winds missed us by only 25 miles."

The National Weather Service said that the primary concern was a serious threat of flash floodings in northeastern Mexico as rains of more than 8 inches fell in the area.

La Pesca, a tiny coastal fishing village, and Soto la Marina bore the brunt of Hurricane Ella in 1970.

Brownsville, some 100 miles to the north, recorded winds of 45 mph and "moderate" rain.

The leading edge of the storm dumped torrential rains along about 200 miles of the Mexican coast. Water covered some Tampico streets, and the highways north of Tampico and Ciudad Victoria were reportedly flooded.

"This is a sparsely populated area, but some communities are so isolated, that it is possible they may not have heard warnings and may not have a chance to get out," Al Druemont, Weather Service chief meteorologist in Brownsville, said late Thursday.

"If a storm of this intensity hit an unsuspecting community. . .it would kill a lot of people," added Druemont.

In San Fernando, a small town of about 15,000 located 20 miles inland in a marshy area, soldiers, police and volunteers evacuated about 2,000 people Thursday afternoon.

"They're using trucks, pickups, army vehicles and cars to carry people to shelters," said Jose Luiz Gonzalez, a volunteer manning the San Fernando police department.

Marselina Saldivar, left, keeps watch over her four grandchildren as they curl up against her for a short rest. They were among many families seeking refuge from Anita in Brownsville's Central Junior High School as the season's first hurricane approached from the Gulf of Mexico.

Forum enlivens hospital issue

By GEORGE H. JOHNSTON

If a hospital district is formed in Midland, it will lead to socialized medicine, said Fred Johnson of the Taxpayers' Association of Midland Thursday night.

But Jim Allison Jr., Midland Memorial Hospital trustee, said a hospital district is the only way to provide good medical care in Midland County.

Both men appeared at a forum, sponsored by the Midland League of Women Voters, on the Sept. 17 hospital district and $10 million bond issue election.

Johnson said his group wants to get taxing control back to the people and to encourage them to vote on the tax issue.

"If another tax is brought upon us, where will it end?" Johnson asked.

"It appears that instead of officials serving us, we will serve them," Johnson added.

Johnson said he, and members of the Taxpayers' Association, do not see why the proposed renovations to the hospital were not made when the west wing was completed in 1973.

"We have heard in the papers that the distance between the emergency room and intensive care unit is a hazard, and we all believe this, but in the last renovation why didn't they place the emergency room closer to the elevator?" Johnson asked.

Allison said the west wing was the first part of a three-part plan to add to the hospital, and plans did call for placing the CCU closer to the emergency room.

However, the last two phases were never constructed because of a lack of funds, Allison added.

The west wing was also planned under a zero population growth for Midland, and because of the city's rapid growth, it was crowded when it opened, Allison said.

According to Allison, the hospital trustees determined $10 million would be needed to bring the hospital up to standards, including an addition to and renovation of the hospital.

"The trustees obtained a private fund-raising firm to see if the money could be raised," Allison said.

The firm surveyed 400 persons, who contributed 80 to 90 per cent of all funds in the past, and those people said the money could not be raised. They suggested a hospital district instead, Allison said.

Johnson said his group believes there are other ways to improve the health care without a hospital district, and the people of Midland have not had time to study the proposals.

Johnson produced a letter from the Hospital Corporation of America (HCA), which owns hospitals in Big Spring and Carlsbad, N.M., which said company officials have a definite interest in building a hospital in Midland.

The letter also said capital funds are available now to start construction in the immediate future.

According to Johnson, company officials of HCA said the room rates for their best rooms are $85 a day with others as low as $65 a day, considerably less than Midland Memorial Hospital's rates.

However, Allison responded by saying he talked with HCA officials Thursday, and they indicated their room rates were considerably higher than the Midland hospital.

Allison also said a private hospital firm would probably not offer indigent care because a firm tries to make a profit.

Allison said a private firm was one hospital district alternative studied by the trustees, but he said those firms build very "economical" physical plants much like apartments in northwest Midland.

"You could not expect a building like that to last 25 years, plus the firms are not interested in taking indigent care," Allison said.

Allison said after the meeting that a private firm would not be able to get a certificate of need from the state

Not all cottonseed the same says farmer

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

LAMESA — There's seed bin upon seed bin of different varieties of cottonseed.

And large-scale cotton farmer Ronnie Culp ought to know.

"I'm not a one-variety man," he said in the heat of the day in his cotton patch at the Arvana community. "I like to plant many varieties." He must know the difference.

But his tractor drivers, who may not, might not have cottoned to all of that stop-and-go planting last May.

On a small scale, they planted 50 varieties of seed just to see how each fared on an experimental plot on Culp's dryland farm.

"They planted 49 feet and changed seed," Culp said. And they did that so many times that, to hear Culp talk, it bordered on aggravation.

Merely, Culp was cooperating with Dawson County Agricultural Agent Joe Ed Wise in testing out the varieties.

The net worth of the effort will be told come picking, er, stripping time. To be weighed with the bales will be a myriad of factors: the ever-changing weather, the soil condition, the bite of disease, and the farmer's care in tilling the soil. Farmers, researchers, county agents and others will be checking out the vigor of the plants and all-important yield.

Some 80 Dawson County farmers and other cotton partisans were milling around in a niche of Culp's farm. They were on a farm tour. None was trampling.

Cotton specialist Lavon Ray of Lubbock, on the fringes of Culp's experimental patch, was telling this 'n' that about the tests that are coming into bloom.

He really wasn't, but Ray seemed almost apologetic about the touring folks "having" to leave the caravan of pickup trucks and cars just to do some row walking.

"I'm responsible for getting you off the turnrows" and into the patch, he said. "I think on a farm tour you should get off the road."

Naturally.

At another stop, on the Bill Meares farm at Hancock, the touring folks saw only a fraction of the cotton varieties that they had seen (or glanced over) at Culp's place.

Meares said he couldn't tell one variety from another. He planted six strains of cotton seeds on his experimental acreage.

"No, to tell you the truth," Meares said he couldn't tell which was what. "To turn anybody loose out here, you can't tell the difference. Sometimes you think you can."

Fellow farmer Fred Bell said he can tell . . . sometimes. He pointed to the shape, the curl, of a cotton bur and then noted the firmness and shape of the lint itself.

At still another stop on the tour, farmer Bennie Lybrand said the county agent last spring brought him a bunch of cottonseed varieties to plant and mark.

The new varieties are "grown up" now, and their bolls are just are about ready to open and to be plucked.

"I didn't know what they were, and I still don't know what they are, to be honest with you," Lybrand said.

Just as the good and faithful farmer that he is, Lybrand deep plowed, broadcast the fertilizer and herbicide, and then started planting on May 8.

And the rains, such as they were, came sparingly.

Not that it'll make any difference to the unwary, but the new varieties and the old reliable ones cropped up together.

Honestly, it's hard to tell which are the more vigorous and fruitful.

WEATHER SUMMARY

HURRICANE ANITA'S visit to the northeastern coast of Mexico early today brings heavy rain to southern Texas and the Gulf coast. The National Weather Service also forecasts rain for the Northeast, cool weather from the Northwest to the Great Lakes. Most of the country is expected to be warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Health Facilities Commission for a new facility.

"And they are not willing to renovate Midland Memorial," he added.

During a question and answer session at the forum, Dr. Brian Mohr, a Midland cardiologist, said he was offered $60,000 a year to work for a private hospital firm.

He said he turned them down because of their attitude toward treatment of people.

Indigent care is another reason Johnson cited against the hospital district.

Johnson said "members of the community have been told that if they vote for the district, they will not have to pay a cent for hospital care."

Johnson said indigent care will increase if the district is approved.

Victims of shootings, fights and "DWI accidents" is where most of the indigent care money is going, he added. But Johnson agreed an indigent care plan is important and would be needed in a private hospital.

"I could not say how to take care of the indigents," Johnson said.

Allison said the county currently provides $100,000 a year to Midland Memorial for indigent care.

As a result, he said, the hospital ends up with $500,000 to $600,000 a year in indigent care, which patients pay for in increased room rates.

"The patient is paying room rates of $10 to $15 a day higher than hospitals with indigent support," Allison said.

The hospital district would provide that care, he said.

In studying the hospital situation, said Allison, many alternatives were studied, but none was satisfactory.

One alternative was the sale of private bonds, but the hospital did not make enough money to retire the debt, Allison said.

Another alternative, he said, was to give the hospital to a church foundation. But that was not satisfactory because churches also seek contributions from the community.

As a result, Allison added, churches are having trouble getting enough funds.

The Baptist foundation, which Allison said is one of the largest in the area, is considering handing one of its hospitals to a hospital district.

Allison said there are no state or federal funds for the hospital.

Finally, the trustees considered giving the hospital to the county.

However, said Allison, "we would have a situation like that in Odessa with a new facility that can't deliver a baby."

The object of the bond issue will be to relocate the CCU-ICU directly across from the emergency room, expand the obstetric-gynecology unit, increase operating rooms from six to eight, create public and patient-staff corridors and elevators and to renovate the old structure, according to Allison.

"The renovation is needed so that 30 people don't have to share a bathroom. We are running at capacity now because we can't mix sexes, smokers and non-smokers and diseases," Allison said.

Allison cited the recent emergency at the Texas Instruments plant as illustrating the need for hospital expansion.

"They had one room available that night. It was fortunate that none of the TI employes needed hospitalization," Allison said.

Allison also said the improvements were needed in order to recruit more doctors to Midland.

"People now go out of the community not because of the hospital, but because they can't get a certain doctor. Many times you read of a person with a head or chest injury going to Odessa because they can't get a special doctor here," Allison said.

In beginning his part of the forum, Allison said the hospital trustees invited Taxpayers' Association members to a meeting before they determined their position on the hospital district and bond issue election.

"But we were turned down," Allison said.

Midland merchandise recovered through Big Spring 'fencing store'

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

BIG SPRING — Much of the merchandise recovered through a fencing operation run by Big Spring police was from Midland, Big Spring Police Chief Stanley Bogard said this morning.

The fencing operation, a second-hand store called The Shade Tree, was opened by Big Spring police undercover agents March 3 and closed when officers Wednesday received indictments on 22 persons on theft and drug charges.

"The main reason for opening the store was to put a dent into some of our property being taken out of town and sold in other places," Bogard said. He said police also wanted to help fight the drug problem in the city.

Recovered thus far has been about $30,000 worth of property and $5,000 worth of black market drugs, Bogard said.

Eighteen of the indicted persons have been arrested.

Often, Bogard said, the property had been sold to The Shade Tree and was in the police station before the theft was reported, but police could not let the victims know their property had been recovered.

In the case of typewriters and other property stolen this summer from Crockett Elementary School in Midland, Bogard said, school officials did not know the property had been stolen until Midland police checked on it. They had been alerted by Big Spring police when the property was recovered, Bogard said.

One particularly difficult moment, he said, was a woman's reporting a missing silver tea-service which had great sentimental value. She became enotional about the loss of the tea service, but the officers could not jeopardize the operation by returning it, he said.

Three undercover agents were involved in setting up the store. They had been "on the street" since December of last year, preparing to open the store, Bogard said.

The operation was ended for financial reasons amd because of time, he said. An undercover agent can just work so long and then they become paranoid," he said.

Bogard was pleased with the operation, but said it cannot be repeated in Big Spring "in the near future."

The undercover officers will be back in uniform "as soon as they get a little rest." Bogard said he is worried about their safety and steps will be taken to protect them as much as possible.

Blacks hardest hit by joblessness

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's jobless rate rose from 6.9 per cent to 7.1 per cent in August as climbing unemployment among blacks matched a post-World War II high, the government reported today.

In August, the Labor Department said, "the over-the-month increase in unemployment was concentrated among black workers," whose jobless rate rose from 13.2 per cent to 14.5 per cent. The August level matched the post-war high for blacks recorded during the recession in September 1975.

Unemployment among blacks has been traditionally higher than for whites, whose jobless rate was unchanged last month at 6.1 per cent.

Overall joblessness has hovered at about 7 per cent of the work force since April, showing little month-to-month change after dropping steadily from its 1976 high of 8 per cent last November.

Economists say economic growth has slowed following a sharp expansion earlier in the year, and this means fewer jobs are being created to meet the needs of the growing labor force.

"The ratio of black-to-white jobless rates continued its recent updrift to the unusually high level of 2.4 to 1 in August," the Labor Department said.

The rise in black unemployment comes at a time that civil rights and labor leaders have been increasingly criticizing the Carter administration programs for easing unemployment. Earlier this week, the government released figures showing joblessness among black youth, age 16 to 21, reached the highest summertime rate ever recorded — 34.8 per cent.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said today in his annual Labor Day message that President Carter's job-creating programs were nothing more than "Band-aids" and that they would do little to solve the basic unemployment problem.

While the jobless rate rose in August, returning to its June level of 7.1 per cent, the Labor Department reported employment increased by 210,000 to a total of 90.8 million.

The civilian labor force rose by 390,000 in August to a total of 97.7 million, the department said. Both employment and unemployment increased because more people were looking for work than were able to find jobs.

The total number of unemployed was up by 180,000 in August to 6.9 million, with most of the increase occuring among persons who lost their jobs, the Labor Department said.

There is some margin of error as with any survey. But the government contends the relatively large size of the sample assures a high degree of accuracy.

Salvation Army aiding in relief of hurricane

Two Midland Salvation Army workers remained in Brownsville today as part of a contingent of rescue workers sent to the coastal city to help with disaster relief in anticipation of Hurricane Anita.

Salvation Army Capt. Robert Vincent and Capt. William Thomas left Thursday in a rescue van equipped with communications equipment and emergency food provisions, Ben Petersen of the Midland Salvation Army said.

Capt. Vincent would have headed emergency relief operations had the hurricane struck the area, Petersen said.

It was not known today if Vincent and Thomas would continue into Mexico to aid with rescue operations there, Petersen said.

Bill Lynch, national field representative from the Midland Chapter of the American Red Cross, had taken an emergency van from Odessa to a central staging area in South Texas Wednesday night, said Maurice G. Cole, Midland Red Cross director.

Rain may soil weekend fun

Midlanders planning picnicking, golf or other outdoor activities for the Labor Day weekend run little risk of being rained out after all, the weatherman said today.

Mostly fair weather is expected through Monday with continued warm afternoons, although there is a slight chance for thunderstorms during the weekend.

The low tonight is expected to be near 70 and the high Saturday in the mid-90s, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

Winds are expected to be from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph tonight.

Skies this morning were reported clear in Andrews, Lamesa, Rankin, Big Lake, Big Spring and Crane.

THE BACKFIELD IS crowded in this practice game of flag football which previews the Midland Junior Football Association sponsored by the city Parks and Recreation Department. To make this year's program a success, however, more coaches, officers, and persons to provide transportation are needed. A meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday for coaches and others at the Parks and Recreation Department, 300 S. Baldwin St. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Damage minimal

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Preliminary reports show that Hurricane Anita caused only minimal damage to crops in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, State Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said today.

Brown said, however, heavy rains could reduce production from the second picking of cotton. The first picking had been completed when Anita hit Mexico, touching off rains in the Texas valley.

Chief U.S. diplomat in Cuba says he's hopeful of uniting families

By RICHARD PYLE

HAVANA (AP) — The chief U.S. diplomat in Cuba says he hopes several Americans can leave for the United States with their Cuban families "in a matter of days."

Other U.S. sources, however, say the families won't leave before late next week at the earliest.

The head of the new U.S. interest section here, veteran diplomat Lyle Lane, says his 10 member mission's first priority is helping Americans who want to return to the United States with their Cuban families plus a handful of other Americans in Cuban jails.

Responsibility for U.S. affairs in Cuba shifted from Swiss to American hands on Thursday with the formal opening of the U.S. interest section.

The ceremony marked an end to more than 16 years of official hostility between Havana and Washington. At a news conference afterward, Lane said, "It is clear, that the Cuban government as well as our own looks at this as a significant step."

Since President Fidel Castro agreed last month to let the Americans' families leave, Lane said, the Swiss have found only 22 families who wanted to go and 20 others who don't.

Forty-two families either haven't responded or haven't been located, he said.

But Lane conceded that the process of finding the families and seeing what they want to do is proving more difficult than anticipated.

He also said paperwork required to process those wishing to leave has proved a burden to Cuban officials.

The families include 120 persons with U.S. citizenship. They have always been free to leave Cuba themselves but elected to stay because their Cuban relatives could not go along.

Castro dropped this restriction following an appeal by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, during a visit here last month.

Meanwhile, in Boise, Idaho, Church said Cuban officials have told him the flights may begin next week, if details can be worked out.

The Cubans told him, he said Thursday, that those leaving the country will be allowed to take personal property with them, which Havana has not previously permitted.

There are seven Americans officially listed as being in Cuban prisons for espionage or other political crimes, but Castro has refused to release them or commute their sentences.

One prisoner, Rafael del Pino, was reported by a Miami newspaper to have committed suicide in his cell.

Army studying chances for women in combat

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is conducting a major new study which could result in women serving under fire in a future war, officials say.

The study, the most detailed of its kind ever conducted by the Army, is aimed at establishing how women can fit best into the service structure and how many can be used effectively.

Army officials said Thursday there is no intention to change longstanding policy barring women from a direct combat role — as an infantry soldier, machine gunner, or member of a tank crew. But they said they are looking at how women might serve in what they call a "combat environment."

As the officials explained the concept, women eventually might be assigned to signal, military police, transportation, maintenance or medical units with a role in the battle zones.

Traditionally, women soldiers have been kept far to the rear in higher headquarters or hospitals, although women nurses sometimes have been exposed to shellfire in past wars.

Meanwhile, leaders of women's organizations appealed to Congress on Thursday for more jobs for women in the armed forces.

Testifying before a Joint Economic Committee panel, they said expanding participation of women in the armed forces would result in greater military effectiveness.

One witness, retired Col. Mary A. Halaren, a former director of the Women's Army Corps, testified that WACs served in London during World War II bombing raids. "No one ever asked for a transfer to a safe billet," she said.

Water commission to offer experience

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The new Texas Water Commission will have plenty of experience to bring to bear in deciding whether to grant water use, pollution and weather modification permits.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe assured that by naming all three members of the old Texas Water Rights Commission on Thursday as the new commission.

The water rights commission went out of business this week.

He appointed water rights commission chairman Joe Carter to be chairman of the new body, with a six-year term.

Also reappointed were Joe Carroll, to a four-year term, and Dorsey Hardeman to a two-year term.

Hardeman has been serving on the water rights commission even though his term expired several years ago. Briscoe presumably has chosen to let him serve without reappointment because of the difficulty he might have in winning Senate confirmation.

Hardeman is a former senator whose sometimes abrasive style won him several enemies who remain in that legislative chamber.

The water commission was created by the legislature this year in a reorganization of water agencies into a single Texas Department of Water Resources. The commission will make its decisions on water permits autonomously but will be served by the department staff.

Recording star Waters dies at 76

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Ethel Waters, whose singing career spanned six decades — and whose life spanned most of the joy and sorrow available to human beings — died Thursday at the home of friends.

Though she had made several fortunes from her recordings and from stage, screen and television, Miss Waters, 76, died in near-poverty.

"She was almost blind from cateracts," a friend said. "And she had been fighting diabetes and heart trouble for more than ten years. About the only money coming in was a little Scoial Security check.

"But she always had a big smile for friends — and you could hear her humming that gospel tune of hers: "I sing because I'm happy — I sing because I'm free — His eye is on the sparrow — And I know he watches me...."

It was that song — and other gospel hymns — that had finally brought the most enduring fame to the girl who began her career at 14, shouting out blues songs from the stage of a Philadelphia night club under the name of Sweet Mama Stringbean.

"I got nine dollars a week," she recalled later. "And that wasn't too bad — considering I had a daytime job chambermaiding and laundressing at a hotel that paid me almost five dollars more...."

Miss Waters was born on Halloween in 1900, and was reared by her grandmother in various towns near Philadelphia.

Prostitutes may be going to sea

ROTTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — City officials are considering a plan to put Rotterdam's prostitutes aboard a floating brothel in an abandoned area of the local docks.

Mayor Andre van der Louw and three other members of the City Council are going to Denmark today to look over a 400 bed hotel ship that might be for sale.

A campaign to confine the city's estimated 700 prostitutes to a secluded part of the city started in 1974 when the two main red light districts began spreading into residential districts.

The ship plan will be presented to City Council on Oct. 13, and City Hall sources say approval is expected.

"The sooner it gets going the better," one streetwalker told a reporter who asked what the ladies of the evening think of the idea.

Blasting caps being retrieved

ROUND ROCK, Tex. (AP) — A U.S. Army demolition crew worked late into the night Thursday to gather blasting caps that were strewn by a window-shattering dynamite explosion at a construction site near here.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety said that no injuries were reported in the ground-shaking blast, which erupted Thursday afternoon when 15,000 pounds of dynamite was touched off by a grass fire.

Construction workers fled the area when they spotted flames licking the underside of an explosives storage building, according to state troopers at the scene.

Six or seven new homes in various stages of construction received moderate to severe damage.

'Casual' principles

During his campaign for president, Jimmy Carter benefited from three, probably five, flights on a plane belonging to the National Bank of Georgia, and Mr. Carter has proposed paying for them.

The bill, it is said, comes to $1,793.90 for all five, and, of course, that's beans as a contribution to a multimillion dollar presidential campaign.

But, nonetheless, a contribution it was, and so it very well may be a violation of the Federal Campaign Act, which forbids corporate contributions in cash, housing, or transportation.

Transportation was what Mr. Carter got, free rides through the Georgia skies.

This isn't to say at all that Mr. Carter was trying to beat the law. An unwitting violation it would have been, but unwitting violations are punishable, according to the campaign act, up to a maximum of $5,000.

With a President less pretentious about moral gospels, most persons perhaps would be inclined to say unwitting errors do happen, and let's all forget. But Mr. Carter has made so much of the need for public sector saints that at least he should admit the possibility of his then violating the law, if not gallantly suggest he now owes some fine money.

But no, there seems to be an air of casualness pouring from the White House. It is understood that the President isn't "particularly disturbed." Press Secretary Jody Powell allows anyway as how the trip to Dalton, Ga., was to address "a sparsely attended fund-raiser." The operative word is "sparsely," as if to say: so what if we didn't pay for the flight; that trip hardly mattered to the campaign.

Well, if the President wants to be casual about all this, we'll just consider as jabberwocky all that splendid moralizing he used to do.

The Bert Lance affair, of course, already has edged many persons in that direction. And it hardly helps to learn that the plane Mr. Carter flew on, all five times, was owned by Mr. Lance's bank.

Area police academy

One of the most significant and far-reaching functions going on in the Tall City is the new 12-week course launched last Monday by the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy.

Fifteen men and one woman are enrolled in the course, with classes starting early and recessing late each week day. Two sessions are held each year.

The regional academy is the successor to the former Midland Police Department Academy, which functioned here for many years. The broadened scope of the regional school permits law enforcement officers from a 17-county area to attend the school and to share in its benefits. Midland is pleased to be the host city for the academy, and its residents extend greetings to the "students" enrolled in the present class.

More efficient, better trained law enforcement officers will be graduated from the school after another 11 weeks, and residents of the cities and counties involved will be among the major beneficiaries.

The maintaining of law and order becomes more and more important in this day and age, and the cities which are blessed with well-trained, dedicated law enforcement officers are fortunate, indeed.

Well-qualified instructors from throughout the Permian Basin Empire have been engaged to teach all aspects of law enforcement. Those who finish the course will be much better prepared to continue in their chosen profession.

Enrolled in the school are three from the Midland Police Department, one from the Midland County Sheriff's Office, eight from the Odessa Police Department, one from the Fort Stockton Police Department and three from the Big Spring Police Department.

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE:

Are aliens really a serious problem?

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

Benjamin Shore

WASHINGTON — President Carter's welfare reform proposal generally has been given high marks for addressing realistic problems in realistic terms.

His illegal alien proposal, on the other hand, is being given failing marks for vagueness and possibly misplaced priorities.

The difference between these two long-promised initiatives is striking, if for no other reason than they were unveiled within days of each other after months of work by Mr. Carter's Cabinet and domestic affairs staff.

But the difference also was easily predicted.

Everbody agrees that the current structure of public assistance programs is poorly designed, built and managed.

But few agree on the size and seriousness of the illegal alien problem.

Welfare reform planners were able to consult accurate data, such as how many Americans are on welfare, how many more need what kinds of help, exactly where the help is needed and how much warious optioms would cost.

The drafters of Mr. Carter's illigal alien proposal had no accurate information on any aspect of the highly complex issue.

"No one in America has any idea," said Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell as he helped Labor Secretary Ray Marshall explain the illegal alien package.

Bell was referring specifically to the question of how many aliens are in the United States illegally, but he might as well have been talking about where they are, what kinds of jobs they hold and how long they have been here.

If no one has facts on the key elements of an issue, then why label it a problem and set about to draft a solution?

Energy and welfare clearly are seroius problems requiring solutions. We know this because, to a large degree, we have facts with which to define a national problem.

Who has facts that establish the illegal aliens situation as a national problem? No one.

There are theories, but they are based on suppsitions.

One is that illegal aliens take jobs that unemployed Americans could fill. Yet the only field research — both federal and academic — on this point has suggested that the theory is faulty, that most illegal aliens are working at jobs that Americans won't take and for which the pay is less than unemployment benefits.

Another is that illegal aliens are settling in the United States, receiving public assistance and causing a secret population increase.

Yet, to paraphrase Bell, no one in America really knows for sure.

So why did Mr. Carter tell Congress "the problem is severe and getting worse," and suggest dozens of government steps to solve this "problem?"

The best answer is that the President was convinced like may others into labeling the situation a major problem.

One aide who reluctantly helped draft the proposal commented privately: "It's tough for a president to be confronted with an issue that everyone calls 'illegal' and pretend it's all right. He has to do something."

Another explanation heard around the White House is that Labor Secretary Marshall, long interested in illegal aliens from his work as an economic professor at The University of Texas, personally convinced the new President that the issue had to be confronted.

Mr. Carter's advisers, many of them fresh from his campaign, considered illigal aliens to be a certified national problem. Their major error, it turns out, was in not waiting to find out exactly why it is considered a problem.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Suzi Thomson implicates 'Tip'

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Suzi Park Thomson, the glamour girl of the Korean scandal, has implicated House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill in secret testimony before the House Ethics Comittee.

O'Neill and South Korean wheeler-dealer Tongsun Park were so close, said Thomson, that Park's staff frequently chased him down in the speaker's office.

The revelation came during five grueling hours of testimony before the committee last week. Until then, Ms. Thomson, a former Girl Friday for retired Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., had stubbornly resisted answering questions in secret session for the panel. She would rather testify in public, she said. She finally appeared for a closed-door hearing only after being threatened with a Contempt-of-Congress citation.

There is an unwritten rule on Capitol Hill that the "gentlemen" in Congress do not openly talk about one another. But hard-driving Republican freshman Bruce Caputo of New York is more interested in the facts than in backscratching his colleagues. It was he who dared to broach the O'Neill-Park relationship.

The questioning of Thomson had been tedious and a few bored souls in the hearing room had been nodding. Then came Caputo's turn to question the witness. What been the nature of the relationship, Caputo bluntly demanded, between Speaker O'Neill and Tongsun Park, the alleged payoff man who fled the country to avoid being questioned in the Korean affair.

Heads popped up. An electric tension penetrated the atmosphere of the hearing room. Ms. Thomson's attorney, Philip Hirschkop, asked Caputo to be more specific.

Caputo, one of the few lawmakers on the ethics panel who seems prepared to let the chips fall where they may, retorted with a more precise question. Had Ms. Thomson attended a party where O'Neill and Park were present?

"Yes," the petite divorcee replied tersely.

Had the two men been talking?

Ms. Thomson parried the question. She supposed they had said hello, she stated, but she hadn't made any effort to follow their conversation. The inquisitive New Yorker pressed her. Had it been a "serious" discussion, say in a corner of the room?

The witness continued to dance around the questions. She didn't watch things like that, she said politely.

The party Caputo was speaking of had been thrown by Park in honor of O'Neill's birthday. It was one of two Park soirees at which O'Neill had reportedly been the guest of honor. Now, continued Caputo, what exactly was the nature of the O'Neill-Park liaison?

Congressmen and staff members waited while Thomson turned to Hirschkop for a quiet conversation. The lawyer encouraged her to talk freely.

Haltingly, Thomson then recounted how Park's secretary had occasionally called Carl Albert's office in search of her boss. Park, it seems, had left a message that he would be with the "leader." The secretary had mistakenly called Albert instead of O'Neill, who was then the majority leader.

Thomson had then called O'Neill's office and left a message for Park to call her. The Korean millionaire had indeed dropped by O'Neill's office, picked up his message and called her, Thomson testified.

According to our sources, incidentally, it was not uncomnon for O'Neill and the Korean man-about-town to be together. O'Neill's staff, say insiders, often took messages for Park.

On some occasions, Ms. Thomson said, she had also seen former Atty. Gen. William Saxbe, Speaker Albert and others at Park's social gatherings. Albert, she continued, had attended only on behalf of lawmakers who were being feted by Park.

No other congressional inquisitor elicited testimony incriminating any of his colleagues. She had already told a grand jury, said Thomson, that she had no knowledge of Korean payoffs to Reps. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y. and Robert Leggett, D-Calif., as has been publicly alleged.

Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., asked Thomson if she knew anything about Korean Central Intelligence Agency activities in the United States. Thomson responded with an emphatic "No!" She conceded she had known several South Korean embassy officials, but not as KCIA agents. She specifically denied being associated with the KCIA herself, as press reports have suggested.

At one point, Thomson was asked if she had received any gifts fron the Korean embassy.

She replied that she was a relative of the wife of the former ambassador, Kim Dong Jo. Mrs. Kim had occasionally given her fresh "kim-chee," a spicy Korean cabbage, and she, Thomson, had taught the ambassador's wife how to make fried rice and American sandwiches.

The ethics committee pressed Thomson on the subject of kim chee. She patiently explained that it was hot and garlicky and that she did not like to keep it in her refrigerator because it "stinks." She offered to cook up a meal for the committee to convince them of her talents.

In addition, said Thomson, Mrs. Kim had occasionally replenished her supply of Scotch fron embassy stocks. But the amounts were really insignificant, Thomson insisted.

With one exception, Thomson remained calm and emotionless throughout the ordeal. Tears trickled down her cheeks when the committee began asking about her late father, a prominent South Korean who had been imprisoned by the Japanese for his pro-American views during World War II. Hirschkop spoke up to demand that any questions about her father be submitted in writing. The committee agreed.

BIBLE VERSE

The Lord also shall be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble. — Psalm 9:9.

Mark Russell says

Nixon, Haldeman and Ehrlichman were found guilty of tapping former aide Morton Halperin's phone. The judge awarded Halperin $1. A stiff sentence to be sure, but what price constitutional rights?

•

Friends of Nixon are planning a benefit concert to raise the money.

•

Do they have to chip in 33 and-a-third cents apiece, or does the pardon excuse Nixon, placing a 50 cent burden on Haldeman and Ehrlichman?

•

They are already in prison, so where will they get the money? I suppose they'll have to go a day without tipping the caddy.

•

Halperin, not satisfied with the dollar, is appealing. I guess there's no stopping anyone once he's beaten the system.

Carter's hip-shots ricochet on Zbigniew Brzezinski

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — After explaining to Zbigniew Brzezinski that he wanted to lunch alone with Henry Kissinger last week, President Carter suddenly changed his mind and invited not Brzezinski but the top White House aide, Hamilton Jordan, to join him.

In an earlier day, such treatment of the President's national security adviser would have been deemed cavalier. It is unthinkable that predecessors of Brzezinski such as McGeorge Bundy, Walt W. Rostow or the fabled Dr. Kissinger would have accepted it.

In the Carter White House, however, Dr. Brzezinski not only blithely allowed himself to be odd man out but seemed unperturbed. "Remember," one White House aide told us in trying to establish a rationale for Brzezinski's exclusion, "there's a new attitude in the Carter White House — an attitude of mutual trust."

Perhaps. But the exclusion of Brzezinski was a symbolic act that points up this danger: lack of overall foreign policy coordination that has led to flatly contradictory positions by bureaucratic interests competing for Mr. Carter's favor; the result is bewilderment in foreign embassies and, among the bureaucrats themselves.

It would be grossly unfair to blame this on Brzezinski. It is the President who sets the style and dictates the way he wants things done. The handling of the Carter-Kissinger luncheon on the terrace outside the Oval Office is a case in point.

Brzezinski's exclusion cannot be explained, as some White House aides are saying, by the "limited" subject matter: the President's wooing of Kissinger to support the Panama Canal treaty. In fact, the two men ranged over many issues far removed from Panama. Jordan, in charge of rounding up enough Senators for ratification, took an active role in the conversation.

Brzezinski should by right have been there both to protect the President from possible end runs by the formidable Kissinger and to soak up a little of Kissinger's foreign policy lore. Most important, word of his absence immediately fed the capital's rumor mills, already choked with tales of Brzezinski's limited authority over the bureaucracy. Herewith a sampler:

Item: Central Intelligence director Stansfield Turner failed to coordinate with Brzezinski the CIA's strong opposition to the proposed U.S. sale to Iran of AWACS (early warning) aircraft. A letter from Turner to Congress warning against the sale for security reasons damaged the administration's real position: strong support of the sale.

Item: One of Turner's National Intelligence officers told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee behind closed doors in June that withdrawing American troops from South Korea would incur "unacceptable risks" to the U.S. A few hours later, Gen. George Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Philip Habib, Under Secretary of State, baffled the same committee by saying the administration favors the troop pullout.

Item: By agreement with presidential press secretary Jody Powell, Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke on Aug. 18 formally briefed the press on Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's China trip. The next day, Brzezinski summoned a dozen reporters for a "world-wide" briefing—which turned into a second Vance-to-China analysis. There was no coordination with the State Department.

Item: Although no one publicly admits it, aides close to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance insist he is admitted to the flow of policy decisions only at the last moment, straining relations with the White House.

Item: When the New York Times of July 21 carried a Page One preview of Mr. Carter's foreign policy speech to be given that day in Charleston, S.C., Brzezinski accused State of the leak; State blames the NSC.

None of these incidents is important enough in itself to damage the Carter foreign policy. But when put together, the result is a blur of confusion. In addition, there is mounting criticism, not limited to the State Department, of both the President and Brzezinski for maladroit planning.

A classic case: The deliberately hostile reception here for then Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin shortly before the Israeli election last spring, followed by an open-arms reception for his successor, Menahem Begin. This seeming preference for Begin, who is infinitely more menacing to U.S. Mideast interests than Rabin ever was, was more a result of thoughtlessness than intention.

"We get a hip-shot from Zbig saying, 'This is what the President wants,' but it's not thought through at all," one middle-level State Department official told us. These hip-shots are undoubtedly fired by the President himself, but they are ricocheting on his adviser for national security.

Hurricane no shock for watchful Texans

By The Associated Press

For six seasons now, Texans have kept a wary eye toward the Gulf of Mexico, wondering when the next hurricane might suddenly rise up and strike. There was a feeling among some veteran coastwatchers that Texas was overdue for such a visit.

Hurricane Anita, with winds of more than 100 miles per hour, became that unwelcomed visitor this week.

But she certainly does not set precedent.

Other non-grata guests in the past have included the likes of such killing storms as Carla, Beulah and Celia.

Since 1818, at least 21 known hurricanes have clobbered portions of the Texas coast. Records — educated guesses at best — fix the death toll to date something over 8,000 with damages easily in the billions.

In 1953, the National Weather Service decided to give all tropical disturbances short womens' names to avoid confusion when two or more storms were active simultaneously.

Men had a good laugh.

But nobody laughed in September 1961 when Carla stormed ashore at Port O'Connor with 175-mile-per-hour winds. Before it was through 34 Texans died, 465 were injured and property damage was conservatively fixed at $300 million.

The most destructive Texas hurricane on record has no name. It was called simply the Great Galveston Storm of 1900. At least 6,000 unsuspecting coastal dwellers died in an age when hurricane warning systems were synonymous with how loud you could shout.

The list, before and since, is long and tragic. Five recorded hurricanes precede 1900. Fifteen followed including the great storms of 1915 and 1919 when 559 Texans died. The names only added a macabre glamour.

The intensity of the storms varied, but all spelled damage.

There was Audrey in June 1957 — the first storm of the season. Eleven Texans along the upper coast died. Property damage was initially put at $6 million. In Louisiana, some 500 died.

In July 1959, Debra arrived along the Middle Texas Coast almost unannounced. There was no loss of life. Damages were put at $6 million. The storm's lightning-like arrival prompted a heated editorial by the Houston Chronicle chastizing the weather bureau for not issuing extended warnings. Forecasters said the winds built quickly to hurricane force a short 40 miles of the coast and moved inland.

Carla smashed into the Port O'Connor area about 2 p.m. Sept. 11, 1961. Tides reached 18 feet. At least 34 died in Carla, the worst Texas hurricane to date. Port O'Connor was devastated.

For almost six years, Texans watched and waited but the whirling winds stayed away. Then on Sept. 20, 1967, Beulah shoved ashore just east of Brownsville with 150 mph winds. Thirteen died.

Celia followed on Aug. 3, 1970. It was the costliest storm in dollar damage. It killed 11. Crop and property damage totaled $500 million.

Fern embraced the coastal flatland Sept. 9, 1971 with some of the worst flooding since Beulah. Up to 26 inches of rain were measured at some points. Two died.

Rotary speaker says industry has fight

The petroleum industry has made some progress in Washington, but "we yet have a tough, tough fight ahead in the Senate," which this month will begin work on the House-passed Carter energy program, members of the Downtown Rotary Club were told Thursday noon at their meeting in the Midland Hilton.

The speaker was Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, whose subject was "Washington, Energy and Confusion."

Terming the proposed administration measure an "Energy Taxation and Regulation Plan," Thompson was somewhat optimistic that parts of the bill more detrimental to the petroleum industry will be eliminated or at least toned down in the Senate.

He urged his listeners to contact Texas and New Mexico senators in partular, urging them to launch filibusters or offer "a thousand amendments" to the bill at the proper times.

"We are getting less gas from our wells and more gas out of Washington, but unfortunately we can't burn that stuff," Thompson said.

"If we could burn peanut oil and hot air, we wouldn't have a problem," Thompson added, "but we can't, so the problem remains with us."

Thompson lashed out at the administration for the blows it has dealt the oil and gas business. He also cited President Carter's major campaign promises and then listed one-by-one those same pledges which he hasn't kept.

"And this all adds up to continuing uncertainty and confusion," the speaker concluded.

Federal agencies agree on emergency loan action

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two federal agencies have come to an agreement on how to proceed with emergency loans to farmers stricken by droughts, hurricanes and other natural disasters in hopes of not getting tangled in each other's red tape.

A memorandum of understanding between the Farmers Home Administration and the Small Business Administration has been signed with that in mind, officials said Thursday.

The FmHA is part of the Agriculture Department and the SBA is an independent agency. Both have been engaged in making emergency disaster loans to farmers. The agreement was signed by Gordon Cavanaugh, administrator of FmHA, and Vernon Weaver, head of SBA. Officials said that the agreement pledged the two agencies "to cooperate in the use of their respective loanmaking authorities to complement each other" and to improve and expand financial assistance to farmers "with the least possible degree of overlapping confusing or duplicating activities."

A spokesman said that prospective borrowers from FmHA will still have to show that they cannot get credit from regular commercial sources—a policy of many years—while those who get loans from SBA do not have to meet such a credit test.

For some time, the FHA offered emergency loans to qualified farmers at an annual interest rate of 5 per cent. Since authorized to make farm emergency loans in 1975, SBA has offered loans at 3 per cent.

But recent legislation which grew out of congressional oversight hearings on farm emergency credit now requires FmHa to charge interest rates no higher than SBA for similar loans. Thus, the spokesman said, current FmHA emergency loans are being made at the 3 per cent rate.

The memorandum signed by Cavanuagh and Weaver also provides for "prompt and continuous interchange of information between the two agencies at national, state and district office levels where each is authorized to make farm disaster loans.

Bell employe testifies against ex-boss Ashley

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. employe has testified his former boss, former Bell executive James Ashley, threatened he "would be the Ralph Nader of the phone company."

Jim Reed, a Bell San Antonio division manager, testified Thursday that Ashley, who was fired after an internal company investigation, once told him he would be the "knight in shining armor striking out at the telephone company."

Reed's testimony came in a $29 million dollar lawsuit filed in behalf of Ashley and the family of T.O. Gravitt, the former head of Bell's Texas operations. The suit alleges Ashley was fired as the result of an improper internal company investigation that hounded Gravitt to suicide.

Testimony was to resume today.

Water cleanup ordered

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The City of Big Spring has been ordered to comply with the state's water quality laws, and placed on a schedule requiring the cleanup of its sewage treatment plant by not later than Jan. 15, 1980.

In the final hours of its existence, the Texas Water Quality Board placed the Howard County city under an enforcement order after the TWQB staff explained that the city's sewage treatment plant has been less than that specified in its permit.

The order prescribes that Big Spring must submit a plan for a new or rehabilitated treatment facility by not later than March 1 of next year and have that facility operational by Jan. 15, 1980.

The TWQB was absorbed into the new Texas Department of Water Resources at midnight Wednesday. All TWQB functions will be assumed by the water quality division of that agency with the three member Texas Water Commission to consider future permit and license issues.

Grocers who 'can't beat 'em . . .' join their fast food competitors

By MARION BURROS
The Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — Where else but in Southern California can mom pile the kids into the car, buy the week's groceries, a pair of shoe laces or two, a few kitchen utensils and then sit down in a corner of the same store for lunch: Tuna sandwich with a milkshake for one of the kids, a "quarter pounder" with a soft drink, for the other and for mom a health salad with a cup of coffee.

Supermarkets and food processors, afraid they are losing business to the McDonald's, Arby's and Seven Eleven's of the fast food business, are fighting back.

Especially in California they are experimenting with eat-in areas inside stores. No one is quite sure if the experiment will be profitable. In addition, all over the country supermarkets have expanded their prepared food sections and boosted sales with in-store promotions and newspaper advertising making price comparisons in an attempt to counter a trend that finds Americans eating one out of every five meals in some sort of restaurant. A little more than a third of the food dollar is spent on meals away from home and the National Restaurant Association estimates the figure will rise to $2 out of every $5 by 1980.

That money must come from somewhere else, and the grocery stores figure they are the somewhere.

Los Angeles is one of the country's most competitive markets and the efforts of supermarkets to counter this trend far more evident than in many Eastern cities. A large Los Angeles chain, Ralph's, is putting carry-out and eat-in facilities in its big new stores. The 60,000-foot operations, called Villa Grandes, twice the size of the ordinary supermarket. They sell everything from toasters and sneakers to liquor and cereals.

One such eat-in operation has six tables, each with four chairs, situated at the end of an extensive prepared food section that offers a variety of cheeses, deli meats, salads and barbecue. One of the tables even has a computer game top to amuse customers while they munch on lox and cream cheese for $2.25 or a combination sandwich of roast beef, turkey and Swiss with potato salad and a pickle at $2.19. Those who don't want to play games can contemplate the Italian grocery display. There are the usual drinks, cookies and pastries for dessert or a dish of frozen yogurt at 45 cents.

Elsewhere in the store a thirsty shopper can pick up chilled beer, wine and soda, even a shrink-pack containing a plastic glass and a fix-ounce bottle of wine.

At a Boy's Market in another part of town, a small canopied sidewalk cafe, enclosed by grillwork and decorated with murals and window boxes filled with dying plants, beckons the tired shopper. Outside signs invite shoppers to: "Relax and enjoy one of our gigantic pastrami sandwiches," which are " ... bigger and gooder than anybody's!"

The store has a 64-foot bakery counter at one entrance. Across the aisle is a three-sided deli counter where signs urge customers to buy carry-out food: "Lunch for the office bunch?" Order by phone. Sandwiches to go."

At another entrance in the liquor department, chilled wine, beer and soda sit side-by-side with cartons of milk and orange juice.

Eat-in sections at Alpha Beta stores are modernized versions of an operation common to the large California chain 50 years ago. According to Esther Cramer, consumer specialist for Alpha Beta, some of the stores, especially those in the rural areas, had snack counters before the Depression. They were a convenience to farmers who would come to town for once-a-week shopping. Such operations were phased out of most Alpha Betas, but now they are making a comeback to give shoppers in a hurry a place for a quick bite.

"The Hungry Shopper" offers weekly specials: corned beef sandwich with potato salad or cole slaw, a pickle and a "free small soft drink" for the same price as the sandwich alone, $1.59, along with several other sandwiches and the usual prepared foods. For those who don't want to sit down at one of the several tables provided, there are sectioned styrofoam carryout containers.

What must be the most extensive eat-in and carry-out operation in a Los Angeles store selling groceries is found at a membership store called Fedco. It carries dry goods, hardware, just about everything, and the grocery section is relatively small. By comparison the eat-in area is a true cafeteria with tables and a snack bar. Hot dogs, pizza slices and hot soft pretzels are available on one side; a hot food line on the other. Shoppers can buy a Reuben sandwich there for $1.69; a bowl of chili with beans and crackers for 98 cents; a stuffed pepper dinner with salad, potato, roll and butter for 99 cents.

Elsewhere are pizzas to go, baked or unbaked, and a complete counter devoted to several kinds of popcorn and candied apples.

Pre-prepared Poor Boy sandwiches and $1.49 "Pounders" that contain "salami, bologna, Swiss cheese and other assorted meats, sliced pickle and Italian dressing" are available at the deli counter located at the store's only exit. Fried chicken pieces, lasagna portions, manicotti, many of the foods found in large delicatessens, are also sold. The bakery counter is on the other side of the exit.

None of the eat-in operations is likely to give a Sans Souci, or even an Emersons, a run for the money. But then they are not in competition with them. And they certainly are no better or worse than the fast food operations with which they are trying to compete. Though their service is not as speedy, they offer a greater variety of food.

Esther Cramer from Alpha Beta said she is not certain in-store restaurants are the best way to compete with the fast-food business. The rest of the supermarket industry isn't certain either. Less than 11 per cent of all the new supermarkets opened last year have such facilities.

About the expanded deli-bakery there seems to be no such questions. All those visited in Los Angeles offer some kind of catering, often specializing in 6-and 12-inch subs.

Elsewhere in the country, supermarkets are competing with fast-food restaurants on the basis of price. The cost of eating out has risen, on average, about twice as fast as the cost of food at the grocery store.

An ad campaign at Boston's Purity Supreme Supermarkets asks: "Who pays when they do it all for you?" This is a direct reference to the McDonald's commercial. The store's ad says a total dinner for four at a fast-food outlet costs $7.95 compared to $3.72 for the same meal at home. "There's no price like home. You never forget how good home cooking is. Maybe you just forgot how little it costs."

Florida's Publix Supermarkets advertise their fried chicken in a bucket, similar to the one used by a fast-food chain. The bucket contains a $1 sales slip and the ad asks: "Is the price of take-out chicken hard to swallow?"

Their answer: "Maybe it's because you're paying up to a dollar extra for the name on the bucket. At Publix nine pieces of crisp Southern fried chicken cost less than $2.75."

Some food processors are joining in the campaign. Banquet Foods is using an "Eat In and Bank It" slogan for its frozen prepared foods.

At least one observer thinks the food industry may be responsible for the predicament in which it finds itself.

Joan Gussow, chairman of the nutrition education program at Columbia University's Teachers College, told a recent consumerindustry conference that the food industry's advertising probably had driven the public to fast-foot restaurants and carry-outs.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Waiting period 'not sacrosanct'

Dear Dr. Solomon: How long do I have to wait after my baby is born before starting to have sex again?—I asked a friend of mine and she said she had been told it was safest to wait six weeks. It does seem a bit long.—Francie E.

Dear Francie: "Wait six weeks" does happen to be the advice that doctors usually give, but there is nothing sacrosanct about the six. A recent survey of 800 new mothers showed that most of them resumed sex two or three weeks after delivery. Obviously, a big factor is when you feel comfortable. You should check your doctor at the time to see if you have any special problems you should be careful about.

Dear Dr. Solomon: For the past six months, I've had trouble getting a decent night's sleep. I fall asleep all right, but then I wake up three or four hours later in a state of worry, and I can't get back to sleep. Even a nightcap doesn't help. According to my last physical checkup, I'm perfectly OK. Would you have any suggestions about this?—G.

Dear G: If, as you suggest, something is worrying you, then this waking up in the middle of the night is not at all unusual. Insomnia is often a symptom of underlying psychological troubles that are bottled up during waking hours. As a matter of fact, a recent study of 128 insomniacs by Dr. Anthony Kales of the Sleep Research and Treatment Center and the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center in Hershey, Pa., found that 85 per cent of them had emotional problems.

Assuming that something is preying on your mind, I would try to get it out in the open by talking to someone in your family or to a close friend, a minister or a rabbi, or your family doctor. Meanwhile, don'r rely on a nightcap as a solution. Alcohol is a very bad sporific. It can get you to sleep but, as the effect wears off in about three or four hours, you are liable to wake up then—in a state of depression.

The best sleep aid is often a good dose of exercise. Try having a moderate evening meal and, before going to bed, taking a good brisk walk—see it you can doo about three miles in 45 or 50 minutes—provided, of you are in adequate physical shape for this.

To G.Y., Ada, Ok.: You are quite right. The smallest known parasite is a virus. They consist of a central core of nucleic acid and an outer cover of protein and stay with a cell. The virus is whooly dependent on bacterial plant or animal cells for reproduction. The core (DNA or RNA) represents the basic infectious material. The majority of viruses are so small that they cannot be seen by the usual light microscope, although they can be seen with the electronic microscope. Unfortunately, hardly any doctors have electronic miscroscopes in their offices. Therefore, the diagnosis is usually made by your presenting complaints, the course of your illness, and the antibodies that the virus causes to be produced, which can be found in your blood. Common viral diseases include: infuenza, measles, German measles, mumps, chicken pox, smallpox and polio mylitis.

Gas-producing dye developed

By GEORGE ALEXANDER
The Los Angeles Times

CHICAGO — California Institute of Technology scientists have developed a dye which produces hydrogen gas from water exposed to ordinary sunlight.

The development, revealed here at the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society by Cal Tech chemistry professor Harry B. Gray, could become a significant source of energy for the nation some day.

"Hydrogen is an excellent fuel," Gray said, useful for a wide variety of energy and industrial purposes. Although abundant in water, the trick is to break apart the water molecule and liberate the hydrogen.

"That requires energy," Gray said, "and we're getting that energy from sunlight. No one has done this before except with ultraviolet radiation and, of course, very little of this particular solar energy gets through the earth's atmosphere. But with our process, we could generate hydrogen on the roof of a building with ordinary sunlight."

The dye is essential to the Cal Tech process. It is a complex molecule containing a pair of rhodium atoms. When visible light strikes the compound, these metal atoms react to break down the bonds betwen oxygen and hydrogen atoms in the water molecules attached to the dye molecule.

The water is now separated into hydrogen and oxygen and it is a relatively simple matter to draw off the hydrogen gas.

The dye gives the water a blue color at first, Gray explained, but as the rhodium atoms are oxidized, the color changes to yellow. To reverse the system and enable the reaction to continue indefinitely, a way must be found to return electrons into the solution. This has yet to be achieved.

"What we've demonstrated in the laboratory," Gray said, "is the first half of the process. We haven't yet done the second half (returning electrons to the dye molecule) although we have several ideas on how this might be done. We don't regard it as a major problem." Indeed, Gray and his Cal Tech co-workers, Dr. Kent Mann and undergraduate Nathan Lewis, are collaborating with Dr. Mark Wrighton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on a return system. Wrighton has been experimenting with light-sensitive electrodes which generate a strong flow of oxygen gas from dissociated water. It is possible, Gray said, that the Cal Tech and MIT processes could be joined together to establish a continuous, balanced hydrogen-generating system.

At the moment, the Cal Techn professor of chemistry emphasiazed, the process is only a laboratory experiment and a great deal of research would have to be done before any kind of operational system could evolve.

Looking ahead 30 years or more, Gray said, there might be large hydrogen-generating plants located out in the ocean. With some kind of holding facility for the seawater, the rhodium-based dye would be introduced, the sunlight would strike the water, the reaction would occur and equipment would collect the hydrogen gas.

In the past few years, there has been considerable discussion and speculation about the so-called "hydrogen economy" — an economy predicated on large supplies of this fuel. "This is exactly what we need to make the hydrogen economy go," Gray said.

Psychiatric association votes to censure Russia

By BRUCE DUNFORD

HONOLULU (AP) — The general assembly of the World Psychiatric Association Thursday voted to censure the Soviet Union for alleged psychiatric abuses and to establish a committee to review such practices in any nation.

On a vote of 90-88, the WPA's governing body adopted an amended resolution by Great Britain's Royal College of Psychiatrists condemning "the systematic abuse of psychiatry for political purposes in the U.S.S.R."

The General Assembly also voted 121-66 to approve a resolution put forth by the American Psychiatric Association.

The American resolution did not mention the Soviet Union by name, but said the association opposes "the misuse of psychiatric skills, knowledge and facilities for the suppression of dissent wherever it occurs."

About 4,000 delegates from 63 nations are attending the WPA's 6th World Congress here, and each nation has representatives on the General Assembly.

Both resolutions were strongly opposed by Dr. Eduard Babayan, the Soviet Union's delegate to the General Assembly, who called the accusations "a slander."

Babayan, who was forced to surrender the floor because of a time limit on the debate, made repeated calls for the British and American delegates to provide "forensic psychiatric examinations as evidence to support their charges."

Dr. Jack Weinberg, president of the APA, responded that such examinations of political dissidents allegedly being held in Soviet mental institutions have been made impossible by the Soviets.

Earlier, the General Assembly unanimously approved the so-called "Declaration of Hawaii," a list of guidelines for psychiatrists.

The assembly adjourned, but the Congress will continue meeting until Saturday.

Western psychiatrists have reported Soviet psychiatric abuses, and exiled Soviet psychiatrists claim they have documentation of 210 Soviets being held in mental institutions because of their political or religious actions.

Number of immunized kids at all-time low

By HARRY NELSON
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Immunization rates among children are at an all-time low in the United States, the director of the Center for Disease Control told a congressional hearing here.

"We have now reached the point at which epidemics are possible," Dr. William H. Foege told a House of Representatives subcommittee hearing at Childrens Hospital.

He said that while low rates of immunization against polio and measles pose a special threat of epidemics of those two diseases, outbreaks of diphtheria, whopping cough and tetanus also are possible.

Of 52.5 million children in the nation under the age of 15 years, about 20 million require one or more vaccinations to give them full protection, Foege said.

Immunization levels are particularly low in rural areas, central city areas and among the poor, according to CDC statistics.

Rep. Henry A. Waxman (D-Calif.) chairman of the subcommittee hearing, cited some of the statistics. He said 19 million children are not immunized against polio, 15 1-2 million are not protected from diphtheria and whooping cough and 12 million are not vaccinated against measles.

As a consequence, the number of cases of measles in the United States rose 55 per cent this year and rubella (German measles) is up 75 per cent.

"The American public is becoming too relaxed about immunization," Waxman said. "Too many parents are simply not bothering to get their children immunized."

Several public health physicians who testified at the hearing cited sporadic federal funding of national immunization programs as part of the reason for declining immunization rates.

For example, federal funding of those programs dropped from about $17 million in the early 1970s to less than $5 million last year.

Foege said the government's newly announced National Immunization Initiative is budgeted for $23 million next year. The program aims at assuring adequate immunization of 90 per cent of the nation's children by October, 1979, and making sure that 100 per cent of all children born thereafter be immunized each year.

"It would be intolerable for a country spending $139 billion on heatlh to fail in an effort which is cost beneficial, preventive and essential to the health of our children," Foege said.

Dr. Eunice Turrell, student health services coordinator for the Los Angeles Unified School District, asked the committee to "use its influence to provide funding for school physicians and nurses to do the job which legislation mandates they perform."

She was referring to state laws requiring that children be immunized before attending school.

"At present...funding for health services must compete with the educational dollar," she said. "Whenever there is a budgetary deficit, health services are threatened with reductions or actually reduced, resulting in loss of staff and poor morale among those remaining."

During last spring's measles epidemic in Los Angeles, 2,869 cases were reported, more than half of them among school-age children.

Dr. Turrell said schools were reluctant to exclude children from classes because they were not immunized because the schools would lose state financial aid and such action would be "unjust punishment to the students for parental neglect."

In his introductory remarks, Waxman called it "a national disgrace" that two persons died last year in Los Angeles from measles' complications, considering that the epidemic was preventable.

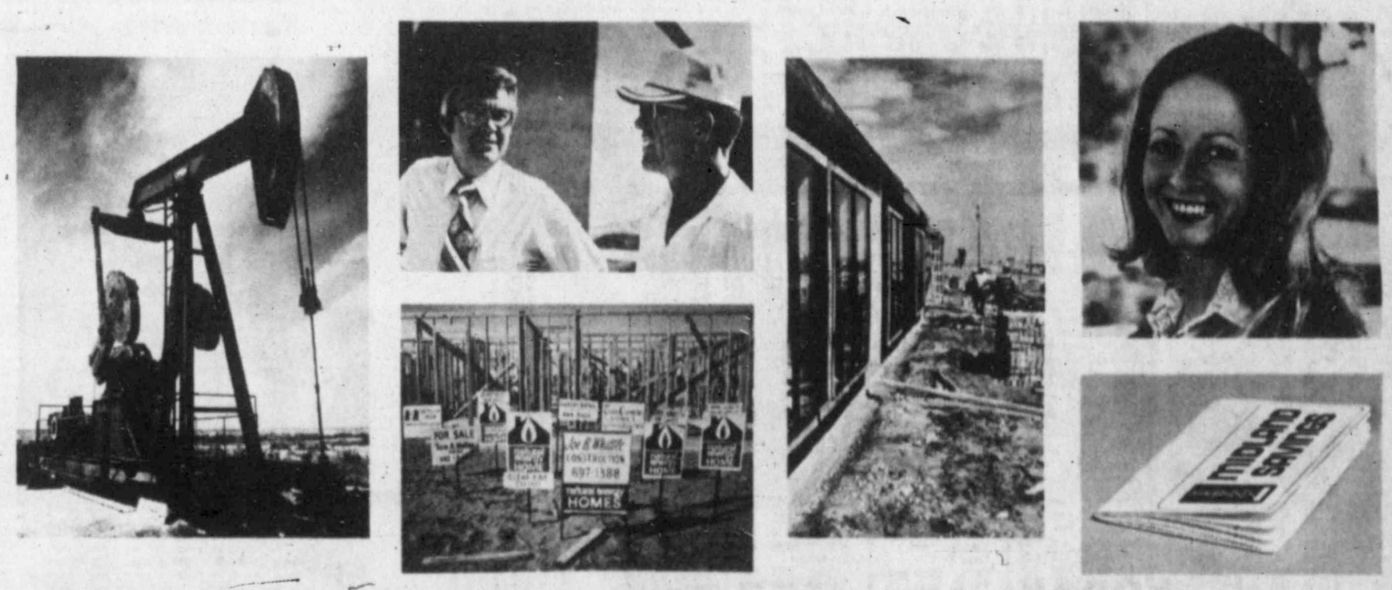

Dr. Gary D. Overturf, chief of communicable diseases at Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center, said 180 persons were hospitalized there in the last 30 months suffering complications of preventable infectious diseases.

Don't keep running when race is lost

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

There is something to be said for the dogged spirit that keeps you running when the race is clearly lost. The word to be said is "Phooey!" Be a gracious winner, not a dogged loser.

South won the first trick and returned a diamond, losing to the ace. Back came a second trump.

South led another diamond, but West won and took the last trump out of dummy.

South eventually discarded his losing heart on dummy's king of clubs but had to lose four diamonds. Down one.

Foreseeing that he will lose the race if East has the ace of diamonds, South sould cash the ace of clubs before touching the diamonds.

East still captures the king of diamonds with the ace and returns a trump to dummy's ten. South discards a heart on the king of clubs and ruffs a club with the king of spades.

SECOND PLAN WORKS

South leads another diamond, and back comes a trump to the queen. The race to ruff a diamond is lost, but South's second plan works. He ruffs another club and gets to dummy with the king of hearts to cash the last club as his tenth trick.

The defenders cannot stop the establishment of the clubs. If they fail to lead trumps at every turn, South can make his contract by ruffing a diamond in dummy.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player bids one spade. You hold: S52; HJ983; AJ82; S963. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts. If you fail to raise now, when you can do so at a low level, you may be shut out of the bidding altogether.

Study says arms pact unlikely

The Washington Post

LONDON — A gloomy assessment of prospects for a new pact to curb strategic nuclear arms came Thursday from the authoritative International Institute for Strategic studies.

The director of the private research group, Christoph Bertram, warned that fast-changing weapons technology has overtaken existing agreements that merely limit the number of weapons.

What is needed, he said, is a Soviet-American deal to meet the problem of quality, curbing military missions rather than the numbers of nuclear arms. He cited as an example the earlier agreement to limit deployment of the anti-ballistic missile.

Instead, Bertram observed, the existing 1972 pact puts a ceiling on the number of permissible weapons. This deal runs out on Oct. 3. Bertram and his staff predicted that Washington and Moscow would agree only to extend it.

The institute staff observed that an ironic consequence of the focus of numbers has been the stimulus for a race in qualitative improvements. The experts said Soviet missiles are now so accurate, they could destroy the American missiles in their silos. The United States, in turn, has improved the accuracy of its missiles to an even greater degree and developed new weapons like the low-flying cruise missile that further complicate agreement.

The IISS is a highly esteemed think tank that produces an annual catalogue of military strength in every country on the globe. The institute's excellent contacts with Western military agencies make its reports a key reference document. Bertram and his staff based their judgments on the new report, issued Thursday.

The United States, said Bertram, has still no fixed policy to cope with the fact that improved Soviet weapons might tempt Moscow to strike first and wipe out the U.S. missiles. Washington, he said, could conclude that such a move is unrealistic because the United States could still destroy Russian cities with untouched missiles launched from submarines.

Since this would then place American cities at risk, Bertram and his staff doubted that it would be the course adopted. Other alternatives listed by the IISS team were developing enough missiles to destroy the Soviet land-based arm or mounting the U.S. nuclear missiles on a track to keep them moving constantly.

The central concern of the annual report is the matchup between the forces of NATO and the Warsaw Pact. "An overall balance can be said to exist today," the study concluded, but "the pattern is one of a military balance moving against the West."

Equal flow of blacks entering, leaving South

By ROBERT C. TOTH
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — An analysis of 1970-75 census data has found blacks moving to the South in at least the same numbers as they were leaving the South, thus halting and perhaps even reversing a century old migration pattern.

Larry H. Long, Census Bureau specialist in internal migration, said he also has found in the data "some evidence" that the "Arkies," who with "Oakies" fled the Dust Bowl in the 1930s, may now be trickling back to the Ozarks from Southern California.

Another study of the figures, by a National Academy of Sciences group, reported these additional population changes:

—Overall migration to the South tripled in 1970-75, compared with the previous five years, to more than 1.8 million people. This also was three times the size of the migration to the west. And for the first time, more people moved from the West to the South than the other way around.

—The West continued to attract migrants from the rest of the country, but at a slower rate than in the 1950s and 1960s. The Rocky Mountain states, however, grew faster than the coastal states for the first time. In fact, the mountain states experienced the fastest growth of any subregion of the country — 3.1 per cent a year, or three times the national average.

—Out-migration from the Northeast and North Central regions was twice as great in 1970-75 as in the previous five years.

The movement of people to the South has been the most dramatic of the population "redistributions" of the early 1970s, Long said in an interview, and it carries considerable sociological significance.

"No one in the early 1960s expected migration from the Northeast to the South, much less this amount," he said. "And in that period, all the problems of Northern cities — unemployment, crime, welfare dependents, broken homes — were blamed on people who were supposedly forced off Southern farms into Northern cities.

"Yet now, with a huge net flow of migrants to the South from the North, there is exacerbation of the big city problems in the north, not the reverse. That has to challenge a lot of those old assumptions."

In the 1965-70 period, the South had a net gain of 713,000 migrants from the North, but a net loss of 56,000 to the West. In the 1970-75 period, the South had a net gain of 1,829,000 including 75,000 from the West.

Among those migrants from the West are the "Arkies" or their descendants, Long suspects on the basis of circumstantial evidence.

First, Los Angeles County suffered a net population loss in 1970-76 of 362,600, or about 5.1 per cent, census figures show. In the same period, Arkansas had a net gain of 106,000, concentrated in one-fourth of its 75 counties. Some of these counties are in the Ozark mountains.

"It's hard to account for all the gain in the Ozark counties if not for return migration from California," Long said. "In the 1950s there was still a strong Ozark-to-California flow. In 1965-70 it was about equal in each direction. Now it looks like the net flow is from California to the Ozarks."

One assumption is that the returnees are pensioners going back to enjoy lower living costs as well as familiar surroundings, Long said. But he cautioned that further studies were needed to definitely prove the reverse trend.

On a national scale, migration to the South is far larger and more significant.

UT scientists theorize time

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Animals resembling rhinoceroses roamed the Texas Big Bend 40 million years ago, University of Texas scientists have learned from a fossil discovery uncovered by a New Mexico science teacher.

The remains of titanotheres found there are important because it gives the most complete picture of the animal's body structure and habits.

Titanotheres had short horns on either side of their snouts, the scientists say.

James Baldwin Jr. of Silver City, N.M., discovered the fossils on a visit to the Big Bend National Park in December. He reported the find to Dr. James Wolleben of Sul Ross State University in Alpine, and Wolleben contacted his former colleages at UT-Austin, Dr. John Wilson and Dr. Wann Langston.

The UT scientists found skull parts and a shoulder blade in March. "We suspected the find was a single skeleton," says Langston, "but several weeks later I returned with one of our laboratory assistants and we discovered bones at the site were piled in like jackstraws."

Langston and Wilson later brought back 1,000 pounds of material, including three skulls, several lower jaws and complete limbs.

Langston said it was possible that the site was a catch basin in a gully, and animals which died on the surrounding plains could have been washed into the basin and covered by deposits of rock. Minerals in the sediment which covered the bones has become rock, and there are perfect, although, broken replicas of bones.

1 disability in 20 said caused by medical care

LOS ANGELES (AP) — About one in 20 patients hospitalized in California in 1974 suffered a disability caused by medical care, a malpractice study concluded.

But less than 20 per cent of those disabilities were caused by improper treatment, according to the study. It said the vast majority of disabilities were unavoidable results of correct treatment for whatever was wrong with the patient.

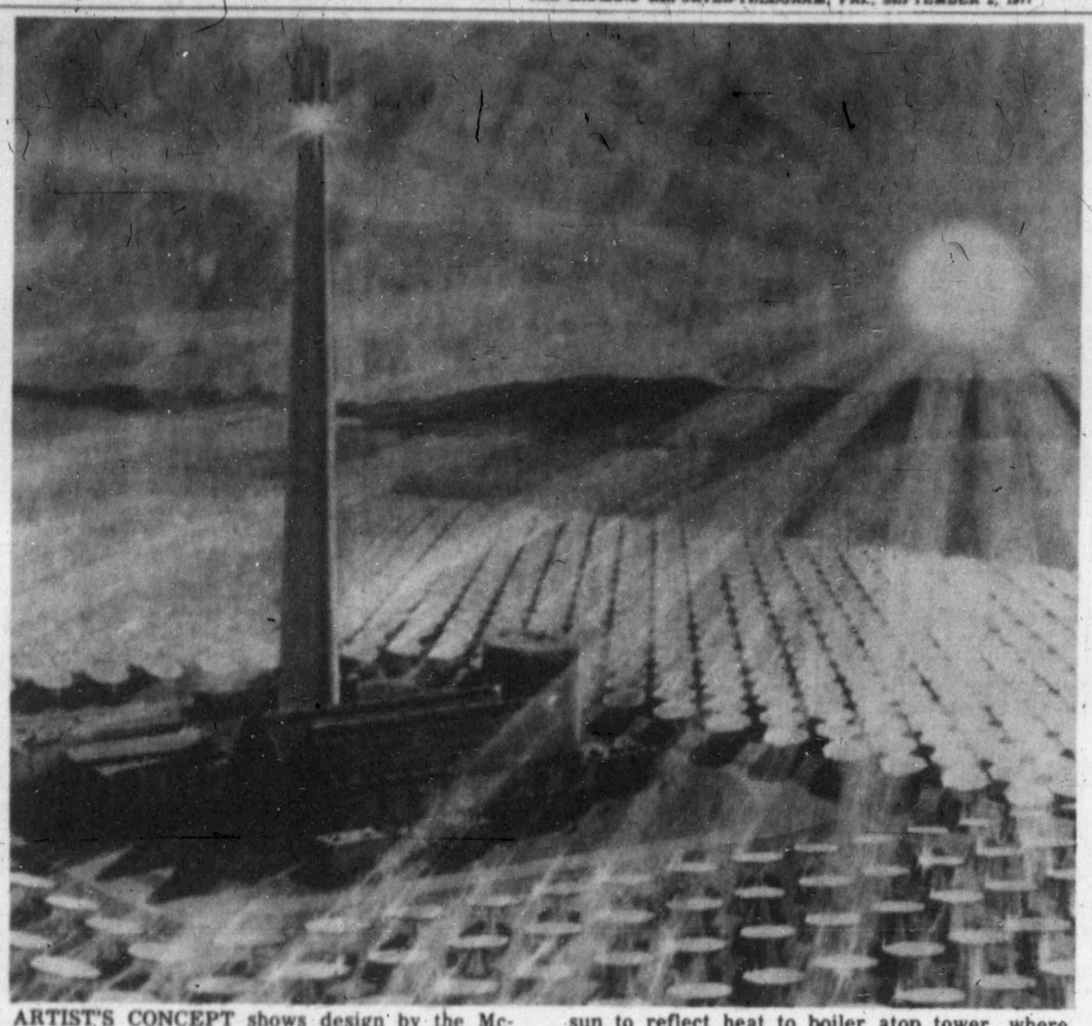

The California Medical Association paid three doctors who are also lawyers $700,000 to conduct the study, which was based on a 1974 sample of 20,684 hospital charts from 23 hospitals.

Expanding the findings to the more than 3 million patients hospitalized that year in California, the report estimated that 140,000 persons suffered disabilities as a result of medical care. Eighty per cent of these were temporary disabilities, and only 5,300 were "lasting:functional disabilities," the report said.

E. Kash Rose, president of the CMA, said Tuesday he was "pleased with the results" because the report showed few cases of poor medical treatment.

The CMA House of Delegates will consider the report this October, when it makes recommendations on how to deal with rising malpractice insurance rates.

The report estimated that 13,600 people died in 1974 from treatment-caused disabilities, but one-fourth of those "probably would have died independently within one year from unrelated, underlying diseases or conditions."

Train fares to rise; train numbers to fall

By JERRY KNIGHT
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Amtrak announced that it would increase fares on most of its passenger routes on Oct. 30 and cancel more than two dozen trains a day, almost all of them in the busy Washington-to-Boston corridor.

Amtrak spokesmen said the decisions were made in a move to erase the system's $50-million-a-year operating deficit.

Fares on most Amtrak trains will go up 2.5 per cent. A few busy routes will post 5 per cent fare increases, while a few fare schedules will remain unchanged.

At the same time, the systm said it would reduce service on four routes, three of them into Washington, D.C.

An average of 22 trains a day will be taken off the Washington-Boston corridor, Amtrak's most heavily traveled route. Several weekend Metroliners, two other Washington-to-New York trains (one Friday, one Sunday) and a number of shorter runs will be ended.

The Shenandoah, from Washington to Cincinnati via Parkersburg, W. Va., will run only four instead of the present seven days a week, as will the Hilltopper, from Washington to Catlettsburg, Ky.

The Chicago-Milwaukee Turboliner will be cut back from four round-trips a day to three, and an additional train which operated only on Sundays will be eliminated.

Previously announced plans to expand service along the East Coast to Florida will be curtailed.

Amtrak said the latest service cut-backs and others in recent weeks are intended to save an estimated $28 million.

More than 1,000 Amtrak employees will be laid off when the cancellations become effective and passenger service to 26 states is reduced, an Amtrak spokesman said.

No estimate of additional revenue from fare increases was available, but the spokesman said it would still not be enough to close the budget gap.

"We think this will be the last of the frequency reductions, but not the last of the cost-cutting measures," he said. Services — such as snack bars and lounge cars — will probably be reduced on some trains and some stations may be closed or operated for fewer hours.

The announcement about fare increases and service cuts was the latest in a series of budget-dictated moves that have taken Amtrak further and further from its original goal.

When Congress chartered the National Railroad Passenger Corp., it was to provide a comprehensive, convenient, low-cost system of railroad transportation.

Soviet rocket scientists well-received on coast

By KEN RINGLE
The Washington Post

CHINCOTEAGUE, Va. — Two weeks ago Sue Lathbury, 35, of Selbyville, Del. was camping with her husband here when two lifeboats filled with Russians landed on the beach of nearby Assateague Island.

The Russians had the Soviet flag mounted on the back of their lifeboat "and that bothered me for some reason," Lathbury said. "I guess my first thought was 'It's the enemy' ... I mean, that's the way we've been conditioned."

The Russians, however — 60 or 70 of them from a Soviet research ship anchored offshore to conduct international weather rocket tests — immediately disarmed them with curiosity and broken English.

"They asked a lot of questions about what kind of work we did and how much money we made," said Lathbury, a print shop supervisor in Selbyville. "They seemed amazed that we had two days off every week. They said they worked seven days. They asked what we did on our days off. My husband made a drinking motion with his arm and they all laughed and clapped at that.

"They were some drinkers ... one guy picked up a full fifth of Canadian Mist and drained it right down, chug-a-lug. Then he rubbed his stomach sort of casual and said 'water good.'"

Lathbury, who said she and her husband have never been to a foreign country and "never thought we'd see that many foreigners" found themselves fascinated by the Russians and made a point to return to Assateague the following Sunday. "There were other people there that time and the Russians seemed much more at ease," she said. "One local guy from Chincoteague brought a picnic he was sharing with the Russians. They were tearing up a chicken and having a good time. They gave us Russian bread which was wonderful," she said.

Capt. Oleg Rostovtsev, commanding officer of the 409 foot research ship, Akademik Korolev, said that, for his part, the visit has been a very interesting experience. "We learned to enjoy your game of frisbee and Americans we meet on the beach learned our ancient Russian game of chekharda (the captain described chekharda as a game in which one team of players locks arms and another team jumps on their backs until the team on the bottom collapses.)

"Please," said the captain, "why aren't you drinking any of our pepper vodka?"

The Akademik Korolev arrived off Wallops Island Aug. 5 after a three-month voyage from her home port of Vladivostok by way of Hawaii and Panama. For most of the stay her 134-member research staff and crew were occupied conducting 22 joint rocket firings with a National Aeronautics and Space Administration team on Wallops Island near here.

The firings were designed to compare meteorological measurements made under identical conditions by NASA and Soviet rockets so as to better calibrate and interpret data exchanged from individual tests in various parts of the world.

Morris Tepper, program manager, said the tests were highly successful, yielding full results on 17 of the 22 shots and nearly full results on four more. He and other Russian and American scientists said the data from the tests, which must now be evaluated, may help explain a puzzling discrepancy in U.S. and Soviet measurements, first noted in 1972, which appears to show the stratosphere and mesosphere 18 centigrade degrees colder in the eastern hemisphere than in the west. At least part of this difference, they believe, may be due to variations in the measuring systems themselves.

But when they weren't firing rockets from their ship, the Soviets were exploring the Eastern Shore. The Russians became so enthused with the Americans they met that they started asking everyone out to the ship for a tour. Coast Guard officials, paling at the prospect of vodka-soaked visitors transferring to and from small boats on a rolling sea, exercised a quiet veto, and the Russians seemed to understand.

"Is not just bureaucrats," explained Boris Lipovsky, a radio electronics supervisor on th Akademik Korolev. "Is for safety."

The Russians' enthusiasm for American games was such, Lathbury said, that "one of the played horseshoe for two and a half hours straight." Frisbees, to which the Soviets were introduced at a NASA-sponsored "mini olympics" at Wallops Island seemed to hold unending fascination for the flight-minded scientists. On a tour of nearby Accomack County many of the Russians carried purchased Frisbees with them, filling them with potato chips at receptions along the way.

NASA and local officials hosted three days of tours for the Russians last week, showing them such local attractions as a poultry processing plant, an old debtor's prison, and a soup factory. The Russians ingested great quantities of the local cuisine, including soft shell crab sandwiches, oyster fritters and freeze-dried deep fried strips of deep sea clams.

They liked it all.

"Many of us have been to cities in the United States before," said Evgeniy Nelepov, assistant to the captain for scientific affairs.

Administration reportedly about to adopt SST policy

By JIM TOEDTMAN
Newsday

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials say that the Carter administration is about to adopt a national policy for commercial supersonic aircraft, something the federal government has avoided for diplomatic and political reasons for almost a decade.

That policy, due to be announced next month, will be a complex, three-part decision that includes:

—A ruling based on technical reports that the Concorde is as quiet as it will ever get. That could set the stage for Concorde flights into any U.S. airport, federal officials said, as long as local regulations did not prohibit landings.

A ruling on whether the British-French Concorde can continue landings at Dulles International Airport 20 miles from Washington, which is owned by the U.S. government. The Federal Aviation Administration's review of the Dulles flights and the recommendation that they be allowed to continue was to be sent to the government printer this week.

—A proposed federal regulation that would require that, after 1985, SSTs meet the current noise standards for subsonic airplanes.

The decision-making process is now in what a White House aide called the "final option stage." Preliminary research and recommendations have been completed by the Transportation Department, the FAA and the Environmental Protection Agency and are now being reviewed by the State Department and President Carter's domestic policy advisers. In the last two weeks, Transportation Secretary Brock Adams, who is expected to unveil the package by Sept. 24, has met with the transportation specialists on Carter's domestic council as well as with EPA Administrator Douglas Costle, trying to reach agreement.

The decisions will remain extremely controversial, and will be compounded by Carter's campaign pronouncement that he opposed the Concorde and more importantly by the inconclusive results of the 16-months trial at Dulles. Former Transportation Secretary William Coleman had ruled last year that Air France and British Airways could make three flights a day starting May 24, 1976, and were to be monitored by a network of FAA microphones and vibration detectors. He had hoped the test would provide data in determining the long-range effect of the Concorde.

But the Concorde has been as noisy as the FAA expected; there has been mild community opposition; and its effect on the earth's ozone layer has been virtually impossible to gauge.

Any hope that the Dulles test might provide clear guidance has vanished, and Adams and Carter now face the same domestic-international conflict that has confronted the past three administratons: domestic energy and environmental concerns vs. intense pressure from two close allies who have spent more than $3 billion developing the plane and continue to lsoe almost $1 million every week the plane flies, a loss the plane's promoters say would be cut if it were permitted to fly out of New York, its prime potential market.

As always, the central question is the unique noise characteristic of the Concorde. The four Rolls Royce engines emit a deep, pulsating, thunder-like roll as it takes off, building up to its 1,350 MPH speed. Even with noise abatement procedures on takeoff, it is two to eight times as loud as current jet aircraft.

"When you have a plane with afterburners, you're going to get noise," said James Robinson, a member of the FAA flight standards team that has virtually completed its certification of the plane as airworthy and safe. "The point is that they've done all they could have done." As Adams said recently, "It involves a fundamental decision for us ...This is a very noisy airplane. We've had a number of other airports that have come in and said, 'We would like to have the Concorde land; we want the commercial traffic.' So what we're trying to do now is determine a standard of really what this airplane can do in taking off and be presenting it around the country to a number of airports, to see really whether it is practical to have the airplane come into the United States."

PETS OF THE WEEK this week at the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals shelter at 5101 Andrews Highway are theae two-month-old male kittens. These kittens, and other animals at the shelter, may be adopted for a fee. The shelter is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday. (Staff Photo)

Reba L. Byers' services set

Reba L. Byers, 47, of 2300 Gulf died Thursday morning in an Odessa hospital following an illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home with Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Byers was born May 21, 1930, in Memphis, Tex. and was reared there. She married Don D. Byers Oct. 21, 1950, in Amarillo. They moved to Midland in 1966.

Survivors include her husband; a son, David W. Byers of Midland; a daughter, Deborah Jean Byers of Midland; her mother, Grace Huggins of Amarillo; and two brothers, Aldon Huggins and Don Huggins, both of Amarillo.

Pallbearers will be Marty Hearne, Dick McBride, Chuck Davis, Al England of Dallas, W. G. "Bill" Brown of Lubbock and Jerry Roberts.

Midlander's brother dies

Larry D. Ogle, 24, of Omaha, Neb., brother of Mrs. Paul (LaHoma) Trammell of Midland, was killed there Thursday in a car-truck mishap.

He was en route from work to home when the accident happened.

Services are pending at Ballinger.

Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Lilburn Ogle of Ballinger, three brothers and three sisters.

Saturday rites set for Johnson

TEXARKANA, Tex. — William M. Johnson, 68, of Bloomburg, former employe of Texas and New Mexico Pipeline of Midland, died Thursday in a Texarkana hospital.

Services will be at 4 p.m. Saturday in the East Funeral Home with burial in Macedonia Two.

Johnson was employed by the pipeline company for 36 years.

Survivors include his wife, a daughter, three sons, two brothers, eight grandchildren, one great-grandchild and several nieces and nephews.

Mrs. S. Lindsey dies at age 70

ODESSA — Sue Lindsey, 70, of Odessa, mother of Mrs. Nell Spencer and Mrs. Richard Pfiffer, both of Big Spring, died Tuesday in a Big Spring hospital.

Services were to be at 2 p.m. today in Easterling Funeral Home with burial in Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Mrs. Lindsey was born April 28, 1907, in Oklahoma.

She married Rich Lindsey in July 1925 in Oklahoma, moved to Odessa from Big Spring in 1948. She was a Baptist.

Other survivors include the husband, three daughters, a brother and three great-grandchildren.

Services set for 'Ted' Floyd

Services for R. W. "Ted" Floyd, 87, of McKinney were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Turrentine-Jackson-Morrow Funeral Home in McKinney with the Rev. Mack Roark officiating. Burial was to be in Pecan Grove Cemetery.

Floyd, a retired McKinney area farmer who was visiting his daughter in Midland, died at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday in a Midland hospital.

Floyd was born May 13, 1890, in Collin County and lived there all his life.

Survivors include a daughter, Miss Roberta Floyd of Midland; a son, Robert Floyd of Arlington; a brother, Lester Floyd of Plano; three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

Texans trickle out of shelters

By RICK SCOTT

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — South Texans slowly trickled out of shelters and sighed with relief today after escaping serious damage by Hurricane Anita.

Anita, a mighty display of nature's raw power, slammed into the northeastern coast of Mexico early today hitting a sparsely populated area after deviating south from a route that originally had placed it on a collision course with the lower Texas coast.

Nearly 10,000 persons took refuge in shelters in Brownsville and other Rio Grande Valley towns.

All but about 40 of the 3,000 residents of Port Isabel, near the tip of Texas, evacuated the town. Among the hardy souls were some eager fishermen who said they were waiting for things to settle down so they could take advantage of the good fishing conditions created by the hurricane.

Late Thursday night winds of up to 60 miles per hour lashed Port Isabel and South Padre Island, a resort area of nearly 4,000 that had been evacuated by noon Thursday.

Today the sun came up over a rosy Gulf of Mexico horizon off South Padre. A newsman on the scene said that early in the morning palm fronds and some aluminum roofing could be seen on the sand and some high waves were still rolling deep into the shore near the abandoned hotels and residences.

Electrical power stayed on all night and street and home lights were left on in the naked town which was still enveloped by a sand storm at 2 a.m.

Authorities did not allow residents to return immediately at daybreak.

The only entrance to the island is through the Queen Isabella Causeway which connects it with Port Isabel.

Some rain was reported along the lower coast and there was the possibilty of some flooding, but the danger of serious damage appeared to be over as Anita spent itself over the Mexican mountains.

Small craft warnings, however, were still in effect for the lower coast.

"We were very, very lucky," said Brownsville meteorologist Al Druemont as he watched Anita on the radar screen veer into Mexico.

"Torrential rains and excessive winds missed us by only 25 miles," he said.

From Corpus Christi to Brownsville, Texans were primed for Anita's onslaught. Homes were boarded up, lowlying areas, including Port Isabel and South Padre Island, were evacuated and emergency personnel were on standby.

South Padre Island, a glistening strip of sand covered with about $60 million in new resort construction, was evacuated early Thursday in the face of tides more than five feet above normal. At one point, it was directly in the storm's path.

The town has a city ordinance requiring evacuation in the face of hurricane danger.

Low-lying portions of the coast near Baytown were evacuated Wednesday.

Lawyer advises Park to 'stay put' in Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer for Tongsun Park says he has advised the South Korean businessman to "stay put" in South Korea where he is safe despite reportedly being indicted by a U.S. grand jury.

Park, who fled the United States last fall, is the focal point of investigations into allegations that the South Korean government waged a massive lobbying campaign in Congress.

Congressional sources said Thursday that Park was named in a sealed indictment handed down by a federal grand jury here. The Justice Department declined to either confirm or deny the accounts.

Park's attorney, William G. Hundley, said his client might go to London to face extradition proceedings, but not until he finds out more about the reported indictment.

"I'm telling him to stay put until we find out what is going on," Hundley said.

The lawyer said in Washington that he had spoken by telephone with Park.

"We agreed that if Justice Department officials would tell us they think they have an extraditable case, he'd get on a plane for London and we'd be glad to litigate the matter."

Congressional sources said the Justice Department had told them that the indictment against Park was presented in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia last Friday. The charges against Park were not known.

Hundley speculated that the Justice Department may have sought the indictment as a maneuver to put pressure on Park to return to the United States and cooperate with investigators looking into alleged influence buying on Capitol Hill.

Collision injures women

Two Midland women were injured Thursday afternoon when their cars collided at the intersection of Midkiff Road and FM 858 about 5:30 p.m.

Helen Brewer Settle, 42, of Box 1147 Meadow Lark Lane was listed in critical condition, and Trucilla Wellman Tiner, 38, of 3116 Kessler Ave. was listed in satisfactory condition early today at Midland Memorial Hospital.

According to reports, Mrs. Settle was eastbound on FM 868 approaching Midkiff Road, and Mrs. Tiner was northbound on Midkiff Road when the two cars collided.

CAMERA, MONEY TAKEN

A camera and four silver dollars valued at a total of $404, were taken from the Royce Brookmole residence, 2501 Maxwell Drive between 7:45 a.m. and 4:15 p.m. Thursday, according to police reports.

Police said all of the bedrooms had been ransacked, but only the camera and coins were taken. The silver dollars were the only coins taken from a box containing several coins, according to police. There was no sign of forced entry.

STEREO, SPEAKERS TAKEN

A stereo and two speakers, valued at a total of $304, were taken from the Eddie Ramos residence between 7 and 11 p.m. Thursday, according to reports.

Entry to the residence was gained by tearing a screen and opening an unlocked window, police said.

The stereo and speakers were taken from the living room, according to reports.

34 in area file suit against IRS, agents

Thirty-four individuals filed suit this morning in federal district court in Midland against the "Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service and other unknown, unnamed internal revenue agents."

They seek to have the federal income tax laws declared unconstitutional in a jury trial.

Franklin M. Nicholson of Odessa filed the suit, representing the other 33 co-plaintiffs.

Attached to the "petition for redress of grievances and petition and complaint of deprivation of inalienable constitutional rights", were a list of 25 reasons given which Nicholson said support his view that the laws are unconstitutional.

Among the allegations were that "no one can understand the income tax law or code," persons are not taxed equally, the 1040 form is vague and violates protections against self-incrimination, Federal Reserve Notes are not dollars and the 16th Amendment was not passed legally.

In his petition, Nicholson accused the IRS of "use of torture methods to extract confession" and using "slave procedures."

The other 33 coplaintiffs include nine individuals or couples from Midland, three from Odessa, two from Andrews, one from Monahans, one from Florida, one from Arkansas and one from Oklahoma.

Those from Midland are Anador R. and Shirley F. Gutierrez of 2607 N. L St., Wilbern and Floretta Peden of 2607 Cimmaron St., Alexander Labowski of 801 W. Griffin St., James T. and Cynthia L. Newton of 2316 W. Storey Ave., Bruce E. and Jamie S. Fatterson of 3317 Andrews Highway, Albert J. and Suella J. Green, whose address is listed as a post office box, Jamem V. II and Jenalee Kelly of 4103 Pleasant St., Daryl A. and Anita P. Rogers of 2713 Franklin St. and Don Williams of 2703 tessler St'

The $15 filing fee was paid with Federal Reserve Notes, the U.S. clerk said.

Youth indicted for involuntary manslaughter

A 17-year-old Midlander has been indicted on a charge of involuntary manslaughter by recklessness in the death of Rhonda Wishert, 15, who died Aug. 14 after being injured in a car-motorcycle accident, Midland County officials said Thursday.

Curtis Scott Lemmons, 17, of 4321 Harlowe Drive was indicted Tuesday, but his name was withheld until his arrest.

Midland woman given 4 years

A Midland woman Wednesday was sentenced to four years in prison after she pleaded guilty to forgery in 238th District Court.

Delouse Merrit Piggs of 1929 E. Pecan St. pleaded guilty to the charge which related to an April 25 incident.

Construction worker hurt

A 23-year-old construction worker received back injuries when he reportedly fell from a scaffolding at Midland College about 8 a.m. today.

Tommy Pittman of Odessa was listed in satisfactory condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital.

According to reports, Pittman was working at the college's Chaparral Center construction site when he fell from a height of 25 feet.

Health Facilities Commission for a new facility.

"And they are not willing to renovate Midland Memorial," he added.

During a question and answer session at the forum, Dr. Brian Mohr, a Midland cardiologist, said he was offered $60,000 a year to work for a private hospital firm.

He said he turned them down because of their attitude toward treatment of people.

Indigent care is another reason Johnson cited against the hospital district.

Johnson said "members of the community have been told that if they vote for the district, they will not have to pay a cent for hospital care."

Johnson said indigent care will increase if the district is approved.

Victims of shootings, fights and "DWI accidents" is where most of the indigent care money is going, he added. But Johnson agreed an indigent care plan is important and would be needed in a private hospital.

"I could not say how to take care of the indigents," Johnson said.

Allison said the county currently provides $100,000 a year to Midland Memorial for indigent care, but it excludes victims of violence.

As a result, he said, the hospital ends up with $500,000 to $600,000 a year in indigent care, which patients pay for in increased room rates.

"The patient is paying room rates of $10 to $15 a day higher than hospitals with indigent support," Allison said.

In studying the hospital situation, said Allison, many alternatives were studied, but none were satisfactory.

One alternative was the sale of private bonds, but the hospital did not take enough money to retire the debt, Allison said.

Another alternative, he said, was to give the hospital to a church foundation. But that was not satisfactory because churches also seek contributions from the community.

As a result, Allison added, churches are having trouble getting enough funds.

The Baptist foundation, which Allison said is one of the largest in the area, is considering handing one of its hospitals to a hospital district.

Allison said there are no state or federal funds for the hospital.

Finally, the trustees considered giving the hospital to the county.

"However, said Allison, "we would have a situation like that in Odessa with a new facility that can't deliver a baby."

The object of the bond issue will be to relocate the CCU-ICU directly across from the emergency room, expand the obstetric-gynecology unit, increase operating rooms from six to eight, create public and patient-staff corridors and elevators and to renovate the old structure, according to Allison.

"The renovation is needed so that 30 people don't have to share a bathroom. We are running at capacity now because we can't mix sexes, smokers and non-smokers and diseases," Allison said.

Allison cited the recent emergency at the Texas Instruments plant as illustrating the need for hospital expansion.

"They had one room available that night. It was fortunate that none of the TI employes needed hospitalization," Allison said.

Allison also said the improvements were needed in order to recruit more doctors to Midland.

"People now not be go out of the community cause of the hospital, but because they can't get a certain doctor. Many times you read of a person with a head or chest injury going to Odessa because they can't get a special doctor here," Allison said.

In beginning his part of the forum, Allison said the hospital trustees invited Taxpayers' Association members to a meeting before they determined their position on the hospital district and bond issue election.

"But we were turned down," Allison said.

Attorney says Park will return to London to face 'any charges'

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — South Korean businessman Tongsun Park will voluntarily return to London from Seoul to face any charges the United States wants to try to extradite him on, his attorney, William G. Hundley, said Thursday.

Hundley said in an interview that Park, a central figure in the Korean influence-buying case who is reportedly under secret indictment, would not hide out in South Korea, a nation with which the United States has no extradition treaty.

Accusing the Justice Department of "playing James Bond," Hundley said:

"If they'll stop playing games and tell me if Park is being charged with an extraditable offense, I'll fly him back to London and we'll litigate it. I'll guarantee that."

Hundley's comments came on the heels of the disclosure Wednesday night that the 42-year-old freewheeling Asian entrepreneur had been named in a secret indictment returned last week by a federal grand jury here. Sources said bribery or fraud was the most likely allegation.

While some officials believe a strong criminal case can be made against Park himself, they said a primary purpose of the indictment was to force Park's eventual return to the United States as a government witness against U.S. politicians he may have bribed. If Park should agree to cooperate, the indictment might then be dropped, sources said.

The indictment came several days after Park left London, where he had been living for almost a year, to go to Seoul. Park said he went there to visit his ailing mother.

At a press conference in Seoul last week, Park broke a 10-month silence by saying he would not allow American investigators to question him.

Park has been under investigation on charges of dispensing hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash payments and gifts to congressmen to win U.S. support for South Korea. He has denied allegations that he was a Korean government agent.

Hundley, who was a top official in the Justice Department in the 1960s, said he had been unable to get confirmation from department officials Thursday that Park had been indicted.

But Hundley said he was "reasonably certain" of the indictment, which was confirmed to reporters by congressional and executive branch sources.

Hundley would not offer to fly Park back to Washington, where Park has long avoided a subpoena for his testimony in the Korean influence case. Rather, Hundley said Park would return to his new base of operations in London to fight any extradition proceedings.

"We hired a solicitor (lawyer) there six months ago, thinking they (the Justice Department) would try to extradite him," Hundley said.

He challenged the department to "establish probable cause" that Park had committed a crime by sending witnesses to London to testify at extradition proceedings. He acknowledged that such a process could take months.

Prices rise, production slows

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy's slower second-half growth rate is bringing an easing of price increases but also is slowing production, which means fewer jobs are being created.

The nation's unemployment rate has hovered at about 7 per cent of the work force since April, showing little change after dropping steadily from its 1976 high of 8 per cent last November.

Joblessness edged down to 6.9 per cent in July after standing at 7.1 per cent in June. There are indications it may have increased again last month.

The Labor Department was scheduled to release the August figures today.

Earlier this week, the department announced a resumption of "extended" jobless benefits for about 200,000 workers in 38 states who have exhausted their regular state benefits.

The decision was prompted by a slight increase in the insured unemployment rate, which tends to be lower than the overall national jobless rate because many workers in the general labor force aren't eligible for unemployment benefits.

The number of new claims for jobless benefits has been increasing in recent weeks.

Economists say the sharp expansion in the economy during the first half of the year is being followed by a slower rate of growth, and this means fewer jobs are being created to accommodate the increase in the labor force.

The Commerce Department estimates that the nation's economy grew at an annual rate of 7.5 per cent in the first three months of the year, then slowed to a rate of 6.1 per cent in the next three months. Officials are predicting an annual growth rate of about five per cent during the second half of the year.

From the consumers' point of view, the development has a favorable side since it has also resulted in an easing of the inflation rate, currently running between 6 and 7 per cent.

Wholesale prices, a precursor of prices consumers eventually pay, have fallen at a 2.6 per cent seasonally adjusted annual rate over the last three months.

Supermarket prices already have begun to reflect the declines at the wholesale level. While this has been a welcome development for shoppers, it's a different story for farmers who have experienced a steady erosion of income as a result.

Salvation Army aiding in relief of hurricane

Two Midland Salvation Army workers remained in Brownsville today as part of a contingent of rescue workers sent to the coastal city to help with disaster relief in anticipation of Hurricane Anita.

Salvation Army Capt. Robert Vincent and Capt. William Thomas left Thursday in a rescue van equipped with communications equipment and emergency food provisions, Ben Petersen of the Midland Salvation Army said.

Capt. Vincent would have headed emergency relief operations had the hurricane struck the area, Petersen said.

It was not known today if Vincent and Thomas would continue into Mexico to aid with rescue operations there, Petersen said.

Bill Lynch, national field representative from the Midland Chapter of the American Red Cross, had taken an emergency van from Odessa to a central staging area in South Texas Wednesday night, said Maurice G. Cole, Midland Red Cross director.

Rain may soil weekend fun

Midlanders planning picnicking, golf or other outdoor activities for the Labor Day weekend run little risk of being rained out after all, the weatherman said today.

Mostly fair weather is expected through Monday with continued warm afternoons, although there is a slight chance for thunderstorms during the weekend.

The low tonight is expected to be near 70, and the high Saturday in the mid-90s, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

Winds are expected to be from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph tonight.

Skies this morning were reported clear in Andrews, Lamesa, Rankin, Big Lake, Big Spring and Crane.

THE BACKFIELD IS crowded in this practice game of flag football which previews the Midland Junior Football Association sponsored by the city Parks and Recreation Department. To make this year's program a success, however, more coaches, officers, and persons to provide transportation are needed. A meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday for coaches and others at the Parks and Recreation Department, 300 S. Baldwin St. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Midland's version of that ancient German celebration of beer, food and fellowship—Oktoberfest—unfolds Sept. 9, 10, and 11 at the Museum of the Southwest.

Even the Germans don't wait for October to start cutting the sausage and slipping into the lederhosen, and the museum's "Septemberfest" will combine high art with primitive crafts to take advantage of Midland's balmy September weather.

Pretzels, strudel, sausage, barbeque, popcorn, pickles and corn-on-the-cob will ease hunger pangs suffered while strolling among the tree-shaded exhibits and demonstration booths, and a clown-face make-up booth will be among the more popular features.

Mexico bears Anita's brunt

By TOM FENTON

TAMPICO, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Anita, with winds swirling at 155 miles per hour, slammed into the thinly populated coast of northeastern Mexico early today, lashing the residents of La Pesca and Soto la Marina with torrential rains and vicious winds.

Anita struck the Mexican coast after veering away from the heavily populated resort areas of the Texas coast late Thursday.

The principal town in Anita's path was Soto la Marina, with a population of 2,500. Communications were faulty and there was no immedate word of any casualties.

Anita, the season's first hurricane, was centered only about 10 miles off the coast early today at latitude 24.1 north and longitude 97.5 west and was expected pass inland by 4 a.m. It roared in from the Gulf of Mexico at about 12 mph.

Artemio Alfaro, municipal treasurer of Sota la Marina, said, "There are strong rains and hurricane-force winds, but up to the moment we haven't received any reports of damages or injuries.

"All the people in La Pesca have been evacuated to Soto la Marina and they are being sheltered in schools, churches and the theater."

Mexican authorities sent in two truckloads of food, added Alfaro.

National Weather Service radar in Brownsville showed that Anita, labelled an "extremely dangerous" hurricane and pushing tides of 12-15 feet, was whipping the area with winds estimated at about 125 mph by one meteorologist.

La Pesca, a tiny coastal fishing village, and Soto la Marina bore the brunt of Hurricane Ella in 1970.

Brownsville, some 100 miles to the north, recorded winds of 45 mph and "moderate" rain.

The leading edge of the storm dumped torrential rains along about 200 miles of the Mexican coast. Water covered some Tampico streets, and the highways north of Tampico and Ciudad Victoria were reportedly flooded.

"This is a sparsely populated area, but some communities are so isolated, that it is possible they may not have heard warnings and may not have a chance to get out," Al Druemont, Weather Service chief meteorologist in Brownsville, said late Thursday.

"If a storm of this intensity hit an unsuspecting community. . .it would kill a lot of people," added Druemont.

In San Fernando, a small town of about 15,000 located 20 miles inland in a marshy area, soldiers, police and volunteers evacuated about 2,000 people Thursday afternoon.

"They're using trucks, pickups, army vehicles and cars to carry people to shelters," said Jose Luiz Gonzalez, a volunteer manning the San Fernando police department.

Mexican troops, aided by police and navy units, evacuated about 35,000 persons from Matamoros, across the border from Brownsville, Tex., and about 60 miles north of San Fernando.

"The evacuation is proceeding in an orderly manner," said Brig. Gen. Edmundo Castro Villareal, commander of the military district stretching from Tampico to the U.S. border. "The Ministry of Defense has given us the authority to take whatever measures are necessary during the emergency."

The general said the national railroad system had been placed at the army's disposal.

Castro Villareal said military and police patrols had been set up in the evacuated areas to guard against looting. He said refugee centers were stocked with about three days of food.

Doctors, nurses and other Red Cross personnel were on standby, said Jesus Nava, the Red Cross administrator in Matamoros.

Marselina Saldivar, left, keeps watch over her four grandchildren as they curl up against her for a short rest. They were among many families seeking refuge from Anita in Brownsville's Central Junior High School as the season's first hurricane approached from the Gulf of Mexico.

Forum enlivens hospital issue

By GEORGE M. JOHNSTON

If a hospital district is formed in Midland, it will lead to socialized medicine, said Fred Johnson of the Taxpayers' Association of Midland Thursday night.

But Jim Allison Jr., Midland Memorial Hospital trustee, said a hospital district is the only way to provide good medical care in Midland County.

Both men appeared at a forum, sponsored by the Midland League of Women Voters, on the Sept. 17 hospital district and $10 million bond issue election.

Johnson said his group wants to get taxing control back to the people and to encourage them to vote on the tax issue.

"If another tax is brought upon us, where will it end?" Johnson asked.

It appears that instead of officials serving us, we will serve them," Johnson added.

Johnson said he, and members of the Taxpayers' Association, do not see why the proposed renovations to the hospital were not made when the west wing was completed in 1973.

"We have heard in the papers that the distance between the emergency room and intensive care unit is a hazard, and we all believe this, but in the last renovation why didn't they place the emergency room closer to the elevator?" Johnson asked.

Allison said the west wing was the first part of a three-part plan to add to the hospital, and plans did call for placing the CCU closer to the emergency room.

However, the last two phases were never constructed because of a lack of funds, Allison added.

The west wing was also planned under a zero population growth for Midland, and because of the city's rapid growth, it was crowded when it opened, Allison said.

According to Allison, the hospital trustees determined $10 million would be needed to bring the hospital up to standards, including an addition to and renovation of the hospital.

"The trustees obtained a private fund-raising firm to see if the money could be raised," Allison said.

The firm surveyed 400 persons, who contributed 80 to 90 per cent of all funds in the past, and those people said the money could not be raised. They suggested a hospital district instead, Allison said.

Johnson said his group believes there are other ways to improve the health care without a hospital district, and the people of Midland have not had time to study the proposals.

Johnson produced a letter from the Hospital Corporation of America (HCA), which owns hospitals in Big Spring and Carlsbad, N.M., which said company officials have a definite interest in building a hospital in Midland.

The letter also said capital funds are available now to start construction in the immediate future.

According to Johnson, company officials of HCA said the room rates for their best rooms are $85 a day and as low as $65 a day, considerably less than Midland Memorial Hospital's rates.

However, Allison responded by saying he talked with HCA officials Thursday, and they indicated their room rates were considerably higher than the Midland hospital.

Allison also said a private hospital firm would probably not offer indigent care because a firm tries to make a profit.

Allison said a private firm was one hospital district alternative studied by the trustees, but he said those firms build very "economical" physical plants much like apartments in northwest Midland.

"You could not expect a building like that to last 25 years, plus the firms are not interested in taking indigent care," Allison said.

Allison said after the meeting that a private firm would not be able to get a certificate of need from the state

Not all cottonseed the same says farmer

LAMESA — There's seed bin upon seed bin of different varieties of cottonseed.

And large-scale cotton farmer Ronnie Culp ought to know.

"I'm not a one-variety man," he said in the heat of the day in his cotton patch at the Arvana community. "I like to plant many varieties." He must know the difference.

But his tractor drivers, who may not, might not have cottoned to all of that stop-and-go planting last May.

On a small scale, they planted 50 varieties of seed just to see how each fared on an experimental plot on Culp's dryland farm.

"They planted 49 feet and changed seed," Culp said. And they did that so many times that, to hear Culp talk, it bordered on aggravation.

Merely, Culp was cooperating with Dawson County Agricultural Agent Joe Ed Wise in testing out the varieties.

The net worth of the effort will be told come picking, er, stripping time. To be weighed with the bales will be a myriad of factors: the ever-changing weather, the soil condition, the bite of disease, and the farmer's care in tilling the soil. Farmers, researchers, county agents and others will be checking out the vigor of the plants and all-important yield.

Some 80 Dawson County farmers and other cotton partisans were milling around in a niche of Culp's farm. They were on a farm tour. None was trampling.

Cotton specialist Lavon Ray of Lubbock, on the fringes of Culp's experimental patch, was telling this 'n' that about the tests that are coming into bloom.

He really wasn't, but Ray seemed almost apologetic about the touring folks "having" to leave the caravan of pickup trucks and cars just to do some row walking.

"I'm responsible for getting you off the turnrows" and into the patch, he said. "I think on a farm tour you should get off the road."

Naturally.

At another stop, on the Bill Meares farm at Hancock, the touring folks saw only a fraction of the cotton varieties that they had seen (or glanced over) at Culp's place.

Meares said he couldn't tell one variety from another. He planted six strains of cotton seeds on his experimental acreage.

Meares said he couldn't tell one variety of cotton from another.

"No, to tell you the truth," Meares said he couldn't tell which was what. "To turn anybody loose out here, you can't tell the difference. Sometimes you think you can."

Fellow farmer Fred Bell said he can tell . . . sometimes. He pointed to the shape, the curl, of a cotton bur and then noted the firmness and shape of the lint itself.

At still another stop on the tour, farmer Bennie Lybrand said the county agent last spring brought him a bunch of cottonseed varieties to plant and mark.

The new varieties are "grown up" now, and their bolls are just are about ready to open and to be plucked.

"I didn't know what they were, and I still don't know what they are, to be honest with you," Lybrand said.

Just as the good and faithful farmer that he is, Lybrand deep plowed, broadcast the fertilizer and herbicide, and then started planting on May 6.

And the rains, such as they were, came sparingly.

Not that it'll make any difference to the unwary, but the new varieties and the old reliable ones cropped up together.

Honestly, it's hard to tell which are the more vigorous and fruitful.

DEATHS

Reba L. Byers' services set

Reba L. Byers, 47, of 2300 Gulf died Thursday morning in an Odessa hospital following an illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home with Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Byers was born May 21, 1930, in Memphis, Tex. and was reared there. She married Don D. Byers Oct. 21, 1950, in Amarillo. They moved to Midland in 1956.

Survivors include her husband; a son, David W. Byers of Midland; a daughter, Deborah Jean Byers of Midland; her mother, Grace Huggins of Amarillo; and two brothers, Aldon Huggins and Don Huggins, both of Amarillo.

Pallbearers will be Bill Bass of Austin, Dick McBride, Chuck Davis, Al England of Dallas, W. G. "Bill" Brown of Lubbock and Jerry Roberts.

Midlander's brother dies

Larry D. Ogle, 24, of Omaha, Neb., brother of Mrs. Paul (LaHoma) Trammell of Midland, was killed there Thursday in a car-truck mishap.

He was en route from work to home when the accident happened.

Services are pending at Ballinger.

Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Lilburn Ogle of Ballinger, three brothers and three sisters.

Saturday rites set for Johnson

TEXARKANA, Tex. — William M. Johnson, 68, of Bloomburg, former employe of Texas and New Mexico Pipeline of Midland, died Thursday in a Texarkana hospital.

Services will be at 4 p.m. Saturday in the East Funeral Home with burial in Macedonia Two.

Johnson was employed by the pipeline company for 36 years.

Survivors include his wife, a daughter, three sons, two brothers, eight grandchildren, one great-grandchild and several nieces and nephews.

Mrs. S. Lidnsey dies at age 70

Floyd, a retired McKinney area farmer who was visiting his daughter in Midland, died at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday in a Midland hospital.

Floyd was born May 13, 1890, in Collin County and lived there all his life.

Survivors include a daughter, Miss Roberta Floyd of Midland; a son, Robert Floyd of Arlington; a brother, Lester Floyd of Plano; three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

Texans 'lucky' storm missed

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Pointing to a radar screen that showed Hurricane Anita lashing the coast of Mexico, National Weather Service meteorologist Al Druemont said early today, "We were very, very lucky."

South Texans, almost 10,000 of whom sought safety in refugee shelters, breathed a sigh of relief as Anita's swirling 155 mile-an-hour winds and torrential rains veered away from the Texas coast and crashed into Mexican coastal towns about 100 miles south.

Some remained apprehensive, however. The National Weather Service said the hurricane warning for the Texas coast would be discontinued later today.

"Torrential rains and excessive winds missed us by only 25 miles," said Druemont, who said the Weather Service's Brownsville office recorded only a half inch of rain and 45 mile-an-hour winds.

Winds estimated at more than 100 mph and sheets of rain buffetted the 2,500 residents of Soto la Marina, a Mexican coastal village, as Anita, labeled an "extremely dangerous" hurricane crashed ashore early today.

Druemont said it would be "extremely rare" if Anita, the season's first hurricane, didn't move inland and dash itself to death on the Sierra Madre Mountains.

From Corpus Christi to Brownsville, Texans were primed for Anita's onslaught. Homes were boarded up, lowlying areas, including Port Isabel and South Padre Island, were evacuated and emergency personnel were on standby.

South Padre Island, a glistening strip of sand covered with about $60 million in new resort construction, was evacuated early Thursday in the face of tides more than five feet above normal. At one point, it was directly in the storm's path.

The town has a city ordinance requiring evacuation in the face of hurricane danger.

Low-lying portions of the coast near Baytown were evacuated Wednesday.

"Considering the 155-mile-anhour winds that were within a hundred miles of us, we have been extremely lucky," said Brownsville city official Gene Fernandez, who said the only real damage was to a water main. Electricity was out in some buildings for a short time.

"I wouldn't put it past Anita to come back through here," said one grandmother, who sat out Hurricane Beulah in 1967.

Andres Moran, who sought shelter with his wife and child, added early today, "I was getting ready to go, but I'm not sure. It might come back. I feel lucky, but it's real bad for Mexico. I feel sorry for them."

There was a festive air, however, for the hundreds of children in the shelters.

"I'm really disappointed. I waited up all night and nothing happened," said 14-year-old Julio Nevarez.

Bank officer confirms renewed Lance dispute

By JOHN F. BERRY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Federal bank examiners are engaged in a new dispute with the First National Bank of Calhoun, Ga., over Office of Management and Budget Director Bert Lance's check-writing practices, the president of the bank confirmed Thursday.

The president, John Davis, said Thursday night that the bank examiners believe his bank is continuing to permit Lance to overdraw his personal checking account there, in violation of an earlier agreement to cease overdrafts to Lance.

The bank heatedly disagrees, Davis said.

The Washington Post learned Thursday that federal investigators believe that Lance has been shuffling checks between accounts in the Calhoun bank and the National bank of Georgia in Atlanta.

Federal examiners say they believe they have evidence that the value of checks outstanding on these two accounts has sometimes exceeded the funds on deposit in both, two independent sources have said.

These sources said that Lance appeared to have overdrawn his accounts by amounts totaling tens of thousands of dollars in recent months, while serving as OMB director.

These overdrafts are new ones, not found in the original investigation of Lance's affairs by the comptroller of the currency, these sources said.

Davis, president of the Calhoun bank, and William E. Green Jr., executive vice president of NBG in Atlanta, both denied this Thursday night.

In addition, Alex Smith, an Atlanta lawyer who represents Lance, confirmed Thursday that within the last few days he contacted an official he would not name in the comptroller's office after hearing of possible new allegations involving check overdrafts. Smith said he was told "there were no new charges" and that he would be informed if new charges were going to be made.

Davis said "there has never been an occasion" when he could not cover a check Lance had written on his Calhoun account. The Calhoun bank covers many Lance checks by telephoning the NBG in Atlanta and asking for a transfer of funds form Lance's account there, Davis said.

Green of NBG said: "I'm not aware of any time his (Lance's) account was overdrawn." He said he had not examined Lance's statement recently, and "it would take more than a newspaper story to cause me to pull (examine) it," but Green insisted he would be informed if Lance's account had been significantly overdrawn.

Lance was chairman of the Calhoun bank until early 1975, when he became president of the NBG.

Both Davis and Green said Thursday night that bank examiners had returned to their institutions last week for further examinations of their records of Lance's banking practics.

Sources with access to the working of the Calhoun bank and the renewed federal investigation of Lance's affairs disputed the assertion that no serious overdrafts had occurred in recent months.

These sources said it appeared that Lance was exploiting the several days it takes for a check written on one of these two banks to clear the other one to raise what amounts to interest-free loans.

And in some cases, the sources alleged, Lance exploited this arrangement to write checks worth more than he had in both banks combined — in effect "kiting" checks, which would be illegal.

The sources said this was how Lance has been using the two accounts:

He would write a check on the Calhoun Bank that goes back to Calhoun for payment. If cashing the check would cause his account there to be overdrawn, a person in the Calhoun bank who has a checkbook on Lance's National Bank of Georgia account writes a check from that book and deposits it in Calhoun to avoid the overdraft.

That check then proceeds through the check-clearing system back to Atlanta — which takes several days at least. Sometimes, the sources said, there have been sufficient funds in Atlanta to cover checks of this kind. But on other occasions, the sources said, Lance's account in Atlanta did not have enough money to pay the check, so that account became overdrawn.

The executives of the two banks gave a different explanation for the complicated system. They said Lance wrote checks on Calhoun which sometimes exceeded his cash balance there. When this happened, they both said, an employee of the Calhoun bank telephoned the Atlanta bank and asked for a deposit from Lance's account there to cover the check.

Why didn't Lance just write the checks on the Atlanta bank in the first place, Davis of the Calhoun bank was asked. He replied:

"Bert Lance grew up here, he's always taken his checks to the Calhoun National Bank, he's always done that no matter where in the world he was."

Green of NBG answered the same question: "I can't tell you why except he feels closer to the Calhoun bank, but he keeps his money in NBG."

White House spokesman Jody Powell said of this arrangement last nigh: "It's Bert's understanding and the banks' understanding that this was being handled in a perfectly proper way."

Davis of the Calhoun bank said the dispute with bank examiners was a technical one. According to him, the bank believes tht the uniform commercial code grants it 24 hours in which to decide how to deal with a check it receives for payment — whether to pay or bounce it. Davis said the transfers from Atlanta to cover Lance if he writes a check exceeding his balance in Calhoun are arranged within that 24 hours.

Field examiners dispute that interpretation, Davis said. Two lawyers for the banks said the comptroller of the currency in Washington, John G. Heimann, has not taken a position in the dispute.

The other sources with access to the renewed federal investigation dispute this benign interpretation of the situation. They say Lance appears to have committed serious, previously unpublicized transgressions.

Collision injures women

Two Midland women were injured Thursday afternoon when their cars collided at the intersection of Midkiff Road and FM 858 about 5:30 p.m.

Helen Brewer Settle, 42, of Box 1147 Meadow Lark Lane was listed in critical condition, and Trucilla Wellman Tiner, 38, of 3116 Kessler Ave. was listed in satisfactory condition early today at Midland Memorial Hospital.

According to reports, Mrs. Settle was eastbound on FM 868 approaching Midkiff Road, and Mrs. Tiner was northbound on Midkiff Road when the two cars collided.

CAMERA, MONEY TAKEN

A camera and four silver dollars valued at a total of $404, were taken from the Royce Brookmole residence, 2501 Maxwell Drive between 7:45 a.m. and 4:15 p.m. Thursday, according to police reports.

Police said all of the bedrooms had been ransacked, but only the camera and coins were taken. The silver dollars were the only coins taken from a box containing several coins, according to police. There was no sign of forced entry.

STEREO, SPEAKERS TAKEN

A stereo and two speakers, valued at a total of $304, were taken from the Eddie Ramos residence between 7 and 11 p.m. Thursday, according to reports.

Entry to the residence was gained by tearing a screen and opening an unlocked window, police said.

The stereo and speakers were taken from the living room, according to reports.

Administration reportedly about to adopt SST policy

By JIM TOEDTMAN
Newsday

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials say that the Carter administration is about to adopt a national policy for commercial supersonic aircraft, something the federal government has avoided for diplomatic and political reasons for almost a decade.

That policy, due to be announced next month, will be a complex, three-part decision that includes:

—A ruling based on technical reports that the Concorde is as quiet as it will ever get. That could set the stage for Concorde flights into any U.S. airport, federal officials said, as long as local regulations did not prohibit landings.

'A ruling on whether the British-French Concorde can continue landings at Dulles International Airport 20 miles from Washington, which is owned by the U.S. government. The Federal Aviation Administration's review of the Dulles flights and the recommendation that they be allowed to continue was to be sent to the government printer this week.

—A proposed federal regulation that would require that, after 1985, SSTs meet the current noise standards for subsonic airplanes.

The decision-making process is now in what a White House aide called the "final option stage." Preliminary research and recommendations have been completed by the Transportation Department, the FAA and the Environmental Protection Agency and are now being reviewed by the State Department and President Carter's domestic policy advisers. In the last two weeks, Transportation Secretary Brock Adams, who is expected to unveil the package by Sept. 24, has met with the transportation specialists on Carter's domestic council as well as with EPA Administrator Douglas Costle, trying to reach agreement.

The decisions will remain extremely controversial, and will be compounded by Carter's campaign pronouncement that he opposed the Concorde and more importantly by the inconclusive results of the 16-months trial at Dulles. Former Transportation Secretary William Coleman had ruled last year that Air France and British Airways could make three flights a day starting May 24, 1976, and were to be monitored by a network of FAA microphones and vibration detectors. He had hoped the test would provide data in determining the long-range effect of the Concorde.

But the Concorde has been as noisy as the FAA expected; there has been mild community opposition; and its effect on the earth's ozone layer has been virtually impossible to gauge.

Any hope that the Dulles test might provide clear guidance has vanished, and Adams and Carter now face the same domestic-international conflict that has confronted the past three administratons: domestic energy and environmental concerns vs. intense pressure from two close allies who have spent more than $3 billion developing the plane and continue to lsoe almost $1 million every week the plane flies, a loss the plane's promoters say would be cut if it were permitted to fly out of New York, its prime potential market.

As always, the central question is the unique noise characteristic of the Concorde. The four Rolls Royce engines emit a deep, pulsating, thunder-like roll as it takes off, building up to its 1,350 MPH speed. Even with noise abatement procedures on takeoff, it is two to eight times as loud as current jet aircraft.

"When you have a plane with afterburners, you're going to get noise," said James Robinson, a member of the FAA flight standards team that has virtually completed its certification of the plane as airworthy and safe. "The point is that they've done all they could have done." As Adams said recently, "It involves a fundamental decision for us ...This is a very noisy airplane. We've had a number of other airports that have come in and said, 'We would like to have the Concorde land; we want the commercial traffic.' So what we're trying to do now is determine a standard of really what this airplane can do in taking off and be presenting it around the country to a number of airports, to see really whether it is practical to have the airplane come into the United States."

PETS OF THE WEEK this week at the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals shelter at 5101 Andrews Highway are theae two-month-old male kittens. These kittens, and other animals at the shelter, may be adopted for a fee. The shelter is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday. (Staff Photo)

Gas-producing dye developed

By GEORGE ALEXANDER
The Los Angeles Times

CHICAGO — California Institute of Technology scientists have developed a dye which produces hydrogen gas from water exposed to ordinary sunlight.

The development, revealed here at the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society by Cal Tech chemistry professor Harry B. Gray, could become a significant source of energy for the nation some day.

"Hydrogen is an excellent fuel," Gray said, useful for a wide variety of energy and industrial purposes. Although abundant in water, the trick is to break apart the water molecule and liberate the hydrogen.

"That requires energy," Gray said, "and we're getting that energy from sunlight. No one has done this before except with ultraviolet radiation and, of course, very little of this particular solar energy gets through the earth's atmosphere. But with our process, we could generate hydrogen on the roof of a building with ordinary sunlight."

The dye is essential to the Cal Tech process. It is a complex molecule containing a pair of rhodium atoms. When visible light strikes the compound, these metal atoms react to break down the bonds betwen oxygen and hydrogen atoms in the water molecules attached to the dye molecule.

The water is now separated into hydrogen and oxygen and it is a relatively simple matter to draw off the hydrogen gas.

The dye gives the water a blue color at first, Gray explained, but as the rhodium atoms are oxidized, the color changes to yellow. To reverse the system and enable the reaction to continue indefinitely, a way must be found to return electrons into the solution. This has yet to be achieved.

"What we've demonstrated in the laboratory," Gray said, "is the first half of the process. We haven't yet done the second half (returning electrons to the dye molecule) although we have several ideas on how this might be done. We don't regard it as a major problem." Indeed, Gray and his Cal Tech co-workers, Dr. Kent Mann and undergraduate Nathan Lewis, are collaborating with Dr. Mark Wrighton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on a return system. Wrighton has been experimenting with light-sensitive electrodes which generate a strong flow of oxygen gas from dissociated water. It is possible, Gray said, that the Cal Tech and MIT processes could be joined together to establish a continuous, balanced hydrogen-generating system.

At the moment, the Cal Techn professor of chemistry emphasiazed, the process is only a laboratory experiment and a great deal of research would have to be done before any kind of operational system could evolve.

Looking ahead 30 years or more, Gray said, there might be large hydrogen-generating plants located out in the ocean. With some kind of holding facility for the seawater, the rhodium-based dye would be introduced, the sunlight would strike the water, the reaction would occur and equipment would collect the hydrogen gas.

In the past few years, there has been considerable discussion and speculation about the so-called "hydrogen economy" — an economy predicated on large supplies of this fuel. "This is exactly what we need to make the hydrogen economy go," Gray said.

Psychiatric association votes to censure Russia

By BRUCE DUNFORD

HONOLULU (AP) — The general assembly of the World Psychiatric Association Thursday voted to censure the Soviet Union for alleged psychiatric abuses and to establish a committee to review such practices in any nation.

On a vote of 90-88,the WPA's governing body adopted an amended resolution by Great Britain's Royal College of Psychiatrists condemning "the systematic abuse of psychiatry for political purposes in the U.S.S.R."

The General Assembly also voted 121-66 to approve a resolution put forth by the American Psychiatric Association.

The American resolution did not mention the Soviet Union by name, but said the association opposes "the misuse of psychiatric skills, knowledge and facilities for the suppression of dissent wherever it occurs."

About 4,000 delegates from 63 nations are attending the WPA's 6th World Congress here, and each nation has representatives on the General Assembly.

Both resolutions were strongly opposed by Dr. Eduard Babayan, the Soviet Union's delegate to the General Assembly, who called the accusations "a slander."

Babayan, who was forced to surrender the floor because of a time limit on the debate, made repeated calls for the British and American delegates to provide "forensic psychiatric examinations as evidence to support their charges."

Dr. Jack Weinberg, president of the APA, responded that such examinations of political dissidents allegedly being held in Soviet mental institutions have been made impossible by the Soviets.

Earlier, the General Assembly unanimously approved the so-called "Declaration of Hawaii," a list of guidelines for psychiatrists.

The assembly adjourned, but the Congress will continue meeting until Saturday.

Western psychiatrists have reported Soviet psychiatric abuses, and exiled Soviet psychiatrists claim they have documentation of 210 Soviets being held in mental institutions because of their political or religious actions.

Number of immunized kids at all-time low

By HARRY NELSON
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Immunization rates among children are at an all-time low in the United States, the director of the Center for Disease Control told a congressional hearing here.

"We have now reached the point at which epidemics are possible," Dr. William H. Foege told a House of Representatives subcommittee hearing at Childrens Hospital.

He said that while low rates of immunization against polio and measles pose a special threat of epidemics of those two diseases, outbreaks of diphtheria, whopping cough and tetanus also are possible.

Of 52.5 million children in the nation under the age of 15 years, about 20 million require one or more vaccinations to give them full protection, Foege said.

Immunization levels are particularly low in rural areas, central city areas and among the poor, according to CDC statistics.

Rep. Henry A. Waxman (D-Calif.) chairman of the subcommittee hearing, cited some of the statistics. He said 19 million children are not immunized against polio, 15 1-2 million are not protected from diphtheria and whooping cough and 12 million are not vaccinated against measles.

As a consequence, the number of cases of measles in the United States rose 55 per cent this year and rubella (German measles) is up 75 per cent.

"The American public is becoming too relaxed about immunization," Waxman said. "Too many parents are simply not bothering to get their children immunized."

Several public health physicians who testified at the hearing cited sporadic federal funding of national immunization programs as part of the reason for declining immunization rates.

For example, federal funding of those programs dropped from about $17 million in the early 1970s to less than $5 million last year.

Foege said the government's newly announced National Immunization Initiative is budgeted for $23 million next year. The program aims at assuring adequate immunization of 90 per cent of the nation's children by October, 1979, and making sure that 100 per cent of all children born thereafter be immunized each year.

"It would be intolerable for a country spending $139 billion on heatlh to fail in an effort which is cost beneficial, preventive and essential to the health of our children," Foege said.

Dr. Eunice Turrell, student health services coordinator for the Los Angeles Unified School District, asked the committee to "use its influence to provide funding for school physicians and nurses to do the job which legislation mandates they perform."

She was referring to state laws requiring that children be immunized before attending school.

"At present...funding for health services must compete with the educational dollar," she said. "Whenever there is a budgetary deficit, health services are threatened with reductions or actually reduced, resulting in loss of staff and poor morale among those remaining."

During last spring's measles epidemic in Los Angeles, 2,869 cases were reported, more than half of them among schoolage children.

Dr. Turrell said schools were reluctant to exclude children from classes because they were not immunized because the schools would lose state financial aid and such action would be "unjust punishment to the students for parental neglect."

In his introductory remarks, Waxman called it "a national disgrace" that two persons died last year in Los Angeles from measles' complications, considering that the epidemic was preventable.

Dr. Gary D. Overturf, chief of communicable diseases at Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center, said 180 persons were hospitalized there in the last 30 months suffering complications of preventable infectious diseases.

Woman jailed for mate's death recalls marriage

The Washington Post

They met in her 18th year, she and William Pratt. She had been living with her Great-Aunt Amy, a lady as old as her grandfather, a very Victorian lady who would poke her finger into young Peggy's stomach to make sure she was wearing a girdle.

Aunt Amy had plans for her great-niece. Her plans were that Peggy would go up to Wilson Teacher's College, thereby equipping herself for a profession that would allow her three summer months off a year to accompany her aunt on her travels.

"She kept her own daughter from marrying," the great-niece recalls, but gently and without rancor, "and she had the same plans for me."

And so when William Pratt came along, "tall broadshouldered" William Pratt, and offered her an engagement ring, Aunt Amy made him take it back, and forbade Peggy to ever see him again.

"The one-eyed mechanic," sniffed Great-Aunt Amy whenever she spoke of him, for William Pratt had lost an eye as a teenager, and was working for his father who owned a car-repair shop. And she also warned her great-niece that he was very domineering.

"I've been domineered all my life," Peggy retorted. But that was the only time she ever sassed her aunt back. "Aunt Amy," she says now, "was the family tyrant." Now, thought Peggy Pratt, now she'd be her own boss.

Anyway, two months after having met him, on a day when she really was supposed to be in teacher's college, Grace Margaret Melton eloped with William Pratt, and was married to him in Baltimore.

"I had one small moment of rebellion," Margaret Pratt says wistfully.

No. Actually, she had two. And like the first, the second act of rebellion could hardly be called small.

Because on the morning of Oct. 23, 1976 — 36 years to the month after they were married — Margaret Pratt walked into her sleeping husband's bedroom and shot him in the head.

"I saw him breathing," she says in the hesitant monotone that is her voice only when she speaks of that day. Briefly her lips quiver, but she masters them too. "A very strange sound ...I thought — I felt — he was suffering at that point."

Then she shot him again. And by the time she went to the police and they found William Pratt a day later in the Silver Spring apartment, he was dead.

Now Peggy Pratt says that what she really meant to do was kill herself, which is why she spent the whole day after the murder contemplating suicide by the grave of her beloved dog, Junior, in the Shenandoah Valley. And that she had killed her husband because she wondered "how would he survive without me ...because he had grown to let me handle everything. I think that's what I was thinking." And some of Peggy Pratt's friends have told her they believe she killed her husband out of compassion. And Peggy Pratt, therefore, pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity for, "It's my feeling I certainly was not functioning with my normal mind."

And the Montgomery County jury found her guilty of second-degree murder — "malice" without premeditation. And her lawyers are appealing the case.

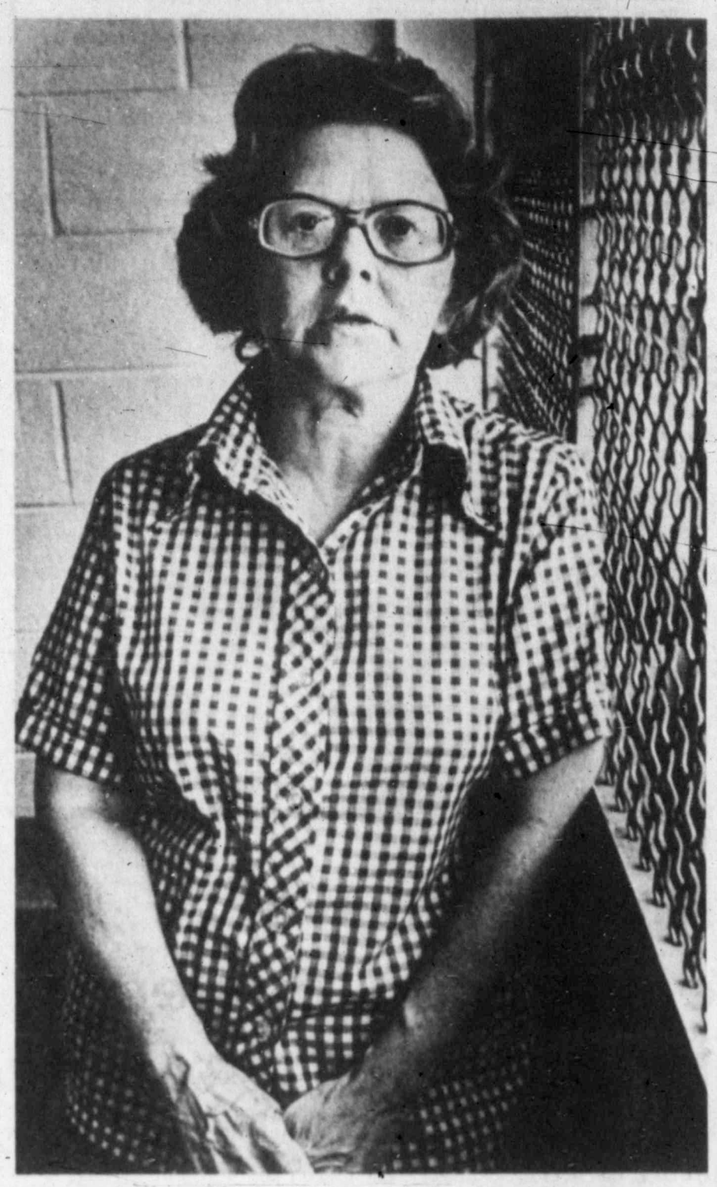

But one thing's for sure. This was, as Peggy Pratt says with irony in her smile, "just not a thing Peggy Pratt would do. I always got upset if I ran over a pigeon." And this is also not an instance of violent acts precipitating violent deeds. This is a passive story of repression, suppression and sludge-like despair, and — like Peggy Pratt — nothing is simple here, because she is not the sort of person who makes things simple for herself.

"You know that quotation from 'Hamlet'?" she asks. "That (resolution is) 'sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought.' Well I'm that kind of person. I've never done anything on impulse except eloping. And that was a mistake."

She laughs suddenly, sardonically, evidently remembering her second impulsive act. "Whenever I've done anything on impulse," she concludes, "it's always been a mistake."

There is nothing unusual about Peggy Pratt except her intelligence. She has an IQ of 131, a revelation that emerged during the battery of tests she took at Springfield Hospital only after the murder.

Seeing her stunned expression, a psychiatrist asked, "What's the matter? Don't you believe it?"

Margaret (Peggy) Pratt

But Peggy Pratt never thought she was extraordinary in any way. "What the hell have I done with my intelligence all these years?" was what she was thinking.

For the rest, though, she is a small woman, just 5 feet and slightly plump — characteristics heightened by her prison wardrobe of jeans and a blue-checked shirt.

"I'm not 20 pounds overweight," she laughs. "I'm just four inches too short." She is ...yes ...amazingly cheerful considering she is in the Montgomery County Detention Center, considering she will eventually go to Jessup, considering she got 15 years (seven of which were suspended) — and she will, possibly, be paroled in two years.

"I don't see why I couldn't be paroled in two years," she argues gravely, "I'm not the type of person who makes waves, who makes trouble."

And there she's almost right. All her life Peggy Pratt has really never been a troublemaker.

"My problem," she says, and she knows the terminology because now she's reading up on it, "My problem was in not really asserting myself early on. Just letting myself be bored ...

"I had been thoroughly brainwashed into being what little girls are supposed to be and what wives are supposed to be."

Her husband loved football. She became a Redskins fan. Her husband happened to mention once that they couldn't eat out because of her crochet classes; she stopped teaching crochet. Her husband thought confiding marriage problems to an outsider was disloyal; she confided little to friends and never saw a psychiatrist. Not her real fears about his spending habits; not the deep recesses of her mounting, almost paralytic depression these last years.

"I'd sometimes kid to my friends that I'd jump off a bridge somewhere," she says.

But Peggy Pratt did have one close confidant. Her dog, Junior, part Labrador retriever, part anonymous. "I'd tell my troubles to Junior." Abruptly she laughs. "Oh God! Now they'll still think I'm crazy. But he was my companion for 16 1-2 years. I used to kid and say I'd run away to the Shenandoah Valley with Junior. My friends had a farm there and Junior used to love to romp there."

But all kidding aside, Peggy Pratt kept most of herself to herself.

"That was my problem. So that about 15 years ago I began to develop stomach problems. So that if I got a call saying my son had broken his arm, immediately I got these pains." And her husband, for his part, suffered a heart attack in '63. And he had cataracts. And then, incipient diabetes. And she had a very bad back.

But none of this is in her face. Peggy Pratt's face is a round moon of serenity, barely lined, and innocent of the makeup that is forbidden by the jail. She is 55, a grandmother ("Grandma," one of her four grandchildren wrote, "Come see us when you get out of prison.") and seemingly untouched by life. The sort of woman who does indeed say, "When the laughter stops you're in touble."

But then you see the way her thin lips twitch when she speaks of that last morning. Then her eyes glaze over into a vacant stare, and she passes her hand distractedly over tight waves of auburn hair.

"My husband once told me," she says, "that we had very little in common except we both loved our dogs. That was one of his more astute moments."

In situations like this, friends are forever saying, "No. I never noticed anything wrong with the marriage." Which, as it happens, is exactly what the Pratt friends are saying now. "Peggy," said one who heard some seemingly minor complaints over the years, "I don't see that that's so bad. I have the same problems." That friend remembers Bill Pratt being proud of his wife's teaching crochet.

Yet another says, "He was a very demanding, self-centered person. I don't think he was any worse than other people's husbands."

So there is no way Bill Pratt can be made into an ogre. That is not the way he is remembered. That is not the reason for the murder. And that is not the way Peggy Pratt perceives him. How she perceives him is quite intriguing. "He had some very good qualities. He didn't run around or gamble." And also, "He had one great virtue. He had no objection to my going to the theater. As long as I was there when he was home."

But she married young. She married because Bill Pratt "could stand up to" her great-aunt. And she married, envisioning a life of "reading together, sharing a favorite poem. I don't think you ever get over that."

Her favorite music was Rimsky-Korsakov's "Sheherazade." Her favorite poem: "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

And Peggy Pratt really did have to get over that. William Pratt wasn't much for reading, having one glass eye and one clouded over with cataracts, and later, a detached retina.

"For a young man, he really got most of the diseases people get when they're old," she says. "He seemed to grow early, mature early, and grow old early. He seemed to be living his life too rapidly."

That was how it was in the beginning. "During the early years it was a difficult adjustment," she says. "Because I had the foolish idea you live happily-ever-after-kind-of-thing. But I didn't get a great deal of companionship. He want out a bit with his buddies. And he wasn't too interested in raising children."

And yet they had two fairly early in their marriage: a girl and a boy. Her husband took over the car repair shop when his father, William S. Pratt Sr., died. Peggy Pratt raised the children, did the housework, did the cooking.

"Anyway," she continues, "my husband was an only child and he'd been spoiled. He wanted my full attention ...In the beginning it resulted in the fact that I couldn't go out. The only times I went out was to the pediatrician or to the doctor for allergy shots. I was told that I was nagging."

She found out she had asthma, she was allergic to ragweed, to mold, to dust, to the samp in their house. She'd empty ashtrays before people stopped smoking, make sure all books were aligned precisely on the shelf. And when the gastritis began she "lived on Maalox."

Gradually her husband began spending a lot more time at home. "But when TV came in and we had air-conditioning, we hardly went anywhere. He would sit and watch the Redskins. And I didn't learn to drive until my daughter was 15."

She mulls that over moodily. "I really should have learned to drive earlier. Because my husband wasn't interested in taking the children to the zoo or museums — all the places I loved to go. But I was scared of driving. I didn't have whatever it took to solve my problems."

One day her husband fell ill. He'd brought home bakery goods over the weekend, despite his incipient diabetes, and his blood sugar was up. All week long he suffered from dizziness. He tried to work, but after an hour, he had to be driven home to their Silver Spring apartment.

All week long she was doing the bookkeeping, getting his prescriptions, running to the bank, paying bills, taking care of her mother-in-law's affairs, doing the cooking.

"I only realize now how bad a state I was in ...I seem to have run myself ragged. I couldn't read, couldn't concentrate, and I couldn't sleep. And when I couldn't sleep, I saw all the things whirling round and round. All the worries, anxieties. And then — toward the end of the week — suicide."

On Friday, Oct. 22, she returned home from the office with her husband's .32-cal. automatic pistol in her purse.

It was still in her purse when she went to bed at 10 p.m. and could scarcely sleep at all. Two hours, at the most. During the course of the night she took a total of six tranquilizers.

The problem is, she really doesn't remember a great deal about that night. The problem is, "I try to interpret to people. But the problem is by trying to do that I'm thinking logically — which I wasn't at that time." So there are a lot of "I presumes" and a few "I must haves"; and a great deal of avoidance.

"I was presumably wrestling with myself over suicide," she says of that night. "I must at some point have felt I couldn't leave him behind. He didn't know where the bank books were. I'd done all the charges for the business, the checkbooks. He really didn't know how to do any of it. How would he survive without me? I think that's what I was thinking."

'Recipes '77' deadline Sept. 15

Readers of The Reporter-Telegram will have an opportunity to win cash prizes by submitting their original recipes for publication in a special cookbook supplement to the newspaper.

"Recipes '77" will be published as a tabloid supplement to the Oct. 23 (Sunday) edition of The Reporter-Telegram. It will feature scores of recipes submitted by readers.

First prize winners in each of eight categories will receive $25.

A grand prize winner to be selected from the eight first prize winners will receive an additional $75.

The categories of recipes will be: (1) Salads; (2) Meats; (3) Casseroles, vegetables and side dishes; (4) Outdoor cookery; (5) Breads; (6) Cakes; (7) Pies and (8) Microwave.

Winners will be announced in "Recipes '77" on Oct. 23.

Deadline for entries will be Sept. 15.

All entries will be judged by a panel of professional home economists not connected with the newspaper.

The judges will select the three best recipes in each category, and the entrants will be contacted and asked to prepare their dishes and take them to Texas Electric Service Co. at a specified time for tasting.

All entries will be published either in "Recipes '77" or in subsequent Thursday editions of The Reporter-Telegram.

Readers are asked to submit only one entry per category.

Entries should be typed or neatly printed, and all measurements and instructions clearly stated.

Each entry should be clearly labeled at the top with the entrant's name, address, telephone number, the name of the recipe and category stated.

The contest is open to everyone in The Reporter-Telegram's retail Trading Zone except employes and agents of The Reporter-Telegram and their families.

She still needs him for ketchup bottles

By JANE GLENN HAAS
Copley News Service

Some women get married for money. Some hitch up giddy with thoughts of love.

I got married to have someone around who could open ketchup bottles.

Not that I ever admitted that to hus, of course. He bought the whole schtick of June, moon, spoon, etc., and rarely, if ever, even uses ketchup.

But after 13.5 years, things have a way of surfacing. So I 'fessed up.

I bought a ketchup dispenser with a pump (squeeze bottles seem so crass), plunked it on the kitchen table, looked hus square in the eye and said, "Hus, you've been replaced."

"You're going to do your own thing?" hus asked, sadly.

"I am woman," I replied. "I'm invincible; I'm never going to cook a pot roast again."

Hus put a plop of ketchup on the cocktail sausage on top of his Ritz cracker, munched and mused:

"A man is good for something. Without me, you'll have to cut the grass by yourself. Now we get to take turns."

"Well," I weakened...

He thrust on... "Without me, you'll have to carry out the compacted trash alone. Every week."

Then hus leveled me with masculine logic.

"Someone," he said, "has to be around to open the ketchup when your dispenser runs dry."

"Relationships," I admitted, "have been based on less."

So I turned in my NOW button...and turned on the pot roast, still woman, still invincible, and still preferring ketchup to mustard, thank you.

Deborah Walker weds Rhoades in evening Baptist ceremony

Deborah Jo Walker of Midland and Eddie Dwayne Rhoades of Midland were married at 7 p.m. Saturday in Crestview Baptist Church with Rev. Kenneth James officiating the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Donald F. Walker of No. 9 Keeneland Drive and Mr. and Mrs. John Rhoades of 4617 Erie St.

Attendants to the bride were Elizabeth Tucker of Midland; Danita Walker, the bride's sister-in-law of Midland, and Alva Jean Walker, the bride's sister-in-law of Andrews.

Heather Lynn Walker, the bride's niece of Andrews, was flower girl. Stuart Lee Walker, the bride's nephew of Andrews, was candlelighter.

Attendants to the bridegroom were Leonard Warren, Harlin Rhoades and Ronny Carruth, all of Midland. Ushers were Rick Munday and Monty Carruth, both of Midland.

Music was furnished by Mrs. Schuler, organist.

When presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of re-embroidered Chantilly lace designed with a scoop neckline and Empire waistline. The A-line skirt ended in a lace edged hem. The wing sleeves ended in a lace-pointed hem. The bodice, sleeves and skirt were highlighted with seed pearls and crystals.

Her fingertip veil was beaded with Chantilly-flowered appliques and attached to a lace-covered Juliet cap. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and apricot and white carnations attached to a family Bible.

After a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents, the couple left for a wedding trip to Cloudcroft, N.M. They will reside in Midland.

DEAR ABBY

New bride wants eight hours of sleep

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Ron is 21 and I am 19. We're newlyweds, and our problem is the TV in our bedroom. Ron likes to lie in bed and watch TV until midnight every night, and some nights he watches it until 1 a.m.

I want to turn off the TV at 11 p.m. because I have to get up at 7 a.m. for work, and if I don't get eight hours of sleep, I am very crabby the next morning. Ron gets up at 7 a.m., too, but he says he doesn't need as much sleep as I do.

Anyway, I can't fall asleep while the TV is on, and Ron refuses to turn it off at 11.

How can this problem be solved? Don't suggest earplugs because I've tried them, and they bother my ears.—CRABBY

DEAR CRABBY: You have two choices. Separate rooms, or a 50-50 compromise. (Turn the TV off at 11 every OTHER night.) But remember, although a compromise makes a good umbrella, it's a poor roof.

DEAR ABBY: I work for a large corporation and for the last few weeks, my boss has been acting very secretive. I walked into his office yesterday, and he quickly slammed his desk drawer shut. Then I noticed smoke coming out of the drawer, but I didn't say anything.

He supposedly stopped smoking three months ago, but I know he's at it again because I've seen him in the hall with a cigarette in his hand. He tried to hide it, but I'm sure he knows that I saw him.

I'm afraid he might try to ditch another burning cigarette in his desk drawer, forget about it and burn up the building.

Don't you think he's acting very immature for a 55-year-old executive?

Should I write him an anonymous note and ask him who he thinks he's fooling?—ON TO HIM

DEAR ON: No. Anonymous notes are also immature. But do tell him that in the interest of safety for others, he should refrain from placing lighted cigarettes in the drawer.

DEAR ABBY: Is marriage contagious? It seems to be an epidemic around here. I'm 21, male and single, and one by one, all my friends are getting married.

My first love went away to college, and during the first quarter, she fell in love with a theology major, and they decided to get married. Now she's pregnant, and I don't know whether to cuss or pray.

Another old girlfriend is soon to marry the drummer of a rock group. Other good friends, male and female, are headed in that direction.

Why would anyone want to end the fun of being young and footloose by getting hitched so soon? All of them are under 21. Is marriage a contagious disease? I hope not.—SINGLE IN SEATTLE

DEAR SINGLE: Marriage in a sense is "contagious"—like divorce, shacking up or growing a beard; some people get the courage to do it because their friends have made the move.

But you're safe. Anyone who suspects that marriage is a "disease" is probably immune.

Club marks birthday

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP)—A local society to study Shakespeare celebrates its 90th birthday this year.

The Shakespearian Society was organized in 1887 by Lorraine Pratt Immen, who invited the group to meet in the ballroom of her home.

"Forty women showed up to form a class to study Shakespeare," said Lorna Wilson, historian of the society.

In the early days, the society met twice a month, and there were elaborate affairs, taking the form of luncheons or dinners with husbands.

Membership, maintained mainly by word of mouth, now stands at 24, and the club meets about twice a year.

Miss Salman marries Michael Ray Childers

Zona Elise Salman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Salman of Midland, and Michael Ray Childers, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Childers of Midland, were married at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in the garden at the home of the bride's parents.

The Rev. W. P. Brian officiated for the double ring ceremony. Hazel Russell was the pianist.

Joan Salman, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bill Procknaw of Lubbock was best man. The bridesmaid was Debbie Boswell of Paris. Dixie Watkins of San Antonio was the groomsman, and Tom Childers, brother of the bridegroom, and Don McGregor were the ushers.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding dress of candlelight lace styled with a fitted bodice and V-neckline. The floor-length flared skirt was accented with tulle flounce and sash. Her veil of illusion was shoulder length and was held by a band of gardenias. She carried a bouquet of gardenias.

A reception was held following the ceremony.

After a trip to Mexico City and Acapulco, the couple will reside in Lubbock.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents in the Colonial Room of the Ramada Inn. Mrs. Loyd Lenert was hostess to the bridesmaids' luncheon in her home.

Converting closet creates space

By CAROLE EICHEN
Copley News Service

More and more people are turning their second bedroom into a den or study which, with the help of a convertible sofa, also can double as a guest room.

However, in many modern apartments, the second bedroom is small, and space is at a real premium. If the closet isn't needed for clothes storage, it offers immediate potential for enlarging the living area of the room.

You don't have to be a master carpenter to convert the closet into something more useful and aesthetically pleasing.

One idea is to remove the closet doors and build three shelves into the alcove. The shelves should be spaced so that they are different heights, leaving a wide ledge at the bottom.

The wood for the shelves doesn't have to be expensive. Instead of staining the shelves, you can cover up a lot of flaws in the woodwork by applying a leather-like vinyl on the lower ledge, on top of the shelves and behind them. For accent, use upholstery nails to trim the fronts of the shelves.

The old closet now becomes a bookcase or a smart room accessory where you can display antiques, artwork and other collectibles.

There can be many variations on the same theme depending on your individual requirements.

If the room is too small for a conventional desk, build one into the closet.

You can remove the closet doors completely or replace them with folding doors which can be closed to conceal the work area. Above the ledge which is used as a working area, you can create shelves with pigeonholes to hold letters or other office supplies. On top, shelves can be created to serve as bookcases for your library.

It's not too difficult to install built-in overhead lighting or you can illuminate the area with a conventional desk lamp.

To open up the room and keep it light and airy, you might consider installing mirrors on the back wall of what was formerly the closet. Then add brackets which can hold glass shelves for displaying your accessories.

You will be surprised how these newly created alcoves can add character and interest to a normally plain square room and make the den a special place to spend evenings at home curled up with a good book.

And, should the landlord object, just save the original closet doors and return the alcove to a storage area before you move out.

Wootan, Buchanan recite vows in double ring park ceremony

Mrs. Bruce D. Buchanan

Linda Cheryl Wootan and Bruce David Buchanan were married Saturday in the gazebo at Wadley-Barron Park. The Rev. O. N. Reed of Travis Baptist Church officiated for the double ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Wootan of 211 Peach St. are the parents of the bride, who is attending Midland College. She is employed at The Ram. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Buchanan, 3511 W. Illinois St., also is attending MC and is employed by Texaco Inc. He is president of the Baptist Student Union at MC.

The couple is residing at 1204 W. Texas St.

The maid of honor was Vicky Orf. Mark Bodnar was best man. Robin Wootan of Lenorah, niece of the bride, was the flower girl, and Joseph Daniel Buchanan, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. Bodnar also was guitarist for the ceremony.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress of cotton and polyester seersucker. The bodice had a square neckline and was tucked, accented with baby satin buttons. The cuffs on the long sleeves and neckline were inset with lace and satin buttons. The skirt was tiered from a peplum waistline. She carried a bouquet of daisies and orchids with baby's breath.

A reception was held in the park following the ceremony.

The couple and out-of-city guests were entertained with a barbecue at the home of the bride's parents Sunday.

Doll bought at auction proves good investment

FORTUNA, N.D. (AP) — Ten years ago Judy Clark thought she was getting a bargain when she bought an old doll at an auction for only 25 cents.

Though the doll turned out to be damaged, that purchase has since proved to have been a good investment.

"I've already made more than $1,000 this year making and dressing dolls in my free time," said Mrs. Clark, whose hobby as a doll maker stems from the one she acquired in that musty antique store.

When she examined it closely she discovered that the doll had a broken nose. But rather than throw it away or resell it, she decided to mend it herself.

"I've made or dressed close to 200 dolls since I repaired that first broken nose," declares Mrs. Clark, whose husband, Air Force T. Sgt. Jim Clark, is assigned to the 780th Radar Squadron, Fortuna Air Force Station here.

Mrs. Clark, who works full time at the station as the Publications Distribution and Housing Officer, now spends much of her spare time making and collecting dolls. She has one that was made in the 1890s and five others that date back to the turn of the century.

"Dolls from that era are usually worth several hundred dollars, depending on their condition and scarcity," she says.

Many of her dolls she constructs from scratch by pouring porcelain into molds to form the head and body, then adding glass eyes and wigs and dressing them.

"It seems like I've spent a fortune on 'do-it-yourself' books since I first bought that injured doll," Mrs. Clark says. "One of the first things I did was join a doll-collectors' club, which had about 3,000 members. Eventually I learned to dress dolls for other people in exchange for kits which contained heads, arms and legs to use in making dolls for my own collection."

A few years later, when the Clarks were assigned to Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., Mrs. Clark enrolled in a porcelain and china-painting course at the base ceramics shop. "Shortly after that, I bought some molds and then really got into doll making," recalls the native of Bishop, Calif.

Mrs. Clark notes that although doll making is practically a lost art, it has experienced a recent revival.

"There are close to 3,000 people who make dolls as a hobby in the United States," she says. "Though doll collecting isn't considered that popular, virtually every youngster has at least one doll in the toybox. And just look at the number of adults who still have their first doll tucked away or on display."

Mrs. Clark sells the majority of her dolls as fast as she can make them, most of them to an exclusive doll shop in California. "But I sell some dolls on a special-order basis," she says. Her going retail rate averages $65.

Changing lifestyles call for casualness in table settings

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A trend to smaller rooms emphasizes the need for a style of living that limits objects we might think are indispensable. It is one reason Inger Elliott, a multifaceted talent — designer, photographer, author — is thinking "multiple design concepts," such as table settings that upset traditional ideas.

"With limited space, we do not have room for a ton of dishes. Cookware and dishes should have multi uses," she explained, in discussing a line that "takes you from breakfast to midnight."

She has eliminated clutter by introducing cookware and tableware at the irreducible minimum for busy working people and gourmet cooks. There are 20 pieces in the stoneware dinnerware collection and seven porcelain on steel cookware pieces, which can go from freezer to oven to table.

Cups with rims instead of handles may be grasped easily when you want to drink, and may be used also for flowers, sugar, juice, mustard. Lunch plates are rounded off so that "you can break an egg in the plate if you wish, and they can be used as trivets." A combination tray-platter or centerpiece may be used in the oven or on top of the stove. There are large mugs with handles for soup.

Ovenpots become casseroles or ice buckets or may be used for flower containers, and even lids are designed for multi use as vegetable dishes, salad service, and for broiling a steak or grilling potatoes.

Such tableware can be fashionable as well as functional, so there is a classic look about the white, blue or sienna ware, a sort of Oriental simplicity. Her design inspiration often comes from the Far East. In fact, it helped launch her business, China Seas.

"We were the first to design and import batik for yard goods," she said. Later, the group — she and her associate designers — was into screen prints and wallcoverings for the trade, and there are designs on sheets, towels and comforters. She likes to work with sheets because "you can have good design at limited prices."

She does not work exclusively with designs of the Orient. The group has done about 40 designs — dresses, neckties, umbrellas and the like — for the garment center.

Childless wives are happier, says team of sociologists

By LARRY BARTLETT
Copley News Service

NEW ORLEANS—Motherhood may be losing its status as an American ideal.

A team of sociologists at the University of New Orleans has found that women tend to be happier in a childless marriage, even though husbands are most often contented when there are children in the home.

UNO research assistant Linda Geiss, together with Dr. Dennis McSeveney and Dr. Hugh Floyd Jr., bases this conclusion on data from surveys conducted throughout the United States by the National Opinion Research Center.

Hundreds of couples, young and old, were asked to rate their marriages as "very happy," "pretty happy" and "not too happy." The UNO team analyzed this data by categorizing the respondents according to age, sex and parental status, classifying the respondents as "current parents," "post-parents" (those whose children have grown up and left home) and "non-parents."

They found that the highest percentage of all wives reporting "very happy" marriages were childless, while the smallest percentage of those with happy marriages were mothers.

"Of the childless wives of age 30 or younger, 83 per cent said they were 'very happy' in marriage, while only 62 per cent of mothers in the same age group reported very happy marriages," says Geiss.

"In age group 31-50, there was a wide discrepancy between the amount of marital happiness reported by males and females. Of the childless females in this age group, 72 per cent said they had very happy marriages...but only 48 per cent of the males in this age group reported the same degree of marital happiness.

"We wondered why so few childless husbands — as compared with childless wives — were happy," she continues. "Then, we looked at the employment status of their wives and found that the men with working wives were even more unhappy...only 39 per cent of these husbands said they had very happy marriages. However, 83 per cent of employed wives in the age group 30-50 said they had very happy marriages. We hypothesize that the discrepancy had to do with differences in marital role expectations."

Mine union gets warning

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A spokesman for the nation's coal operators warned the United Mine Workers Thursday that it faces the "beginning of the end" of nationwide coal bargaining unless the union can guarantee an end to wildcat strikes.

The warning from Joseph P. Brennan, president of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, came as the UMW Health and Welfare Funds suffered yet another after-shock from its most recent wave of unauthorized work stoppages.

The funds, which earlier ordered a cutback in health benefits, had to take out a short-term loan because income from production royalties was insufficient to cover $20 million in pension payments due in September.

Brennan, in a speech to the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce, said the wildcat strikes — which idled up to half the union's 175,000 working members before they started to wind down last week — have "eroded the integrity of the contract which is the cornerstone of labor-management relations" in the coal industry.

Speaking of this fall's negotiations for a new three-year contract between the UMW and BCOA, the industry's bargaining arm, Brennan said:

"1977 is a year that will mark either a new beginning of the historic cooperation between labor and management in coal, or it can well mark the beginning of the end of a national coal labor agreement."

Brennan's threat raised the possibility of company-by-company bargaining or a return to the regional bargaining that characterized the industry before to moved toward national contracts in the late 1940s.

The UMW's share of coal production has declined to roughly 50 per cent in recent years and loss of the national contract could sharpen the decline, according to both labor and industry sources.

The situation poses a "threat to the very existence" of the union, said Brennan, a onetime UMW official.

Brennan said this year's negotiations must include "some type of contractural mechanism to control and ultimately eliminate the wildcat strike without resorting to gimmicks and institutionalizing work stoppages" — a thumbs-down on many miners' and union leaders' demands for a contract-sanctioned right to strike over local grievances.

Brennan did not specify what the "contractural mechanism" might be but hinted at denial of health and welfare benefits to those who engage in wildcat strikes.

Since the present contract was approved in 1974, wildcat strikes have cost $340 million in lost wages and $108 million in royalties to the health and pension funds, Brennan said.

At a press conference after the speech, Brennan said non-union forces out to "further their own ideology" may be behind the strikes. He did not elaborate. UMW President Arnold Miller has made similar allegations.

The current strike continued to wind down Thrusday, with about 20,000 miners still out, according to industry tallies. Both union and industry sources said they expected the back-to-work trend to continue.

New Mexico probes, Texas strike reported

Wildcat sites have been staked in Roosevelt and Eddy counties, N.M., while a shallow strike offset is planned in Eddy. Production was reestablished in a West Gaines field and extenders finaled in Scurry and Dawson. Also, an outpost is planned in an Edwards pool.

Colorado Interstate Gas Exploration, Inc., Midland, intends to drill No. 1 Dorsey Nash, a 7,000-foot venture, in Roosevelt, 25 miles north and slightly west of the Peterson (Pennsylvanian) field.

Drillsite is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 17-1s-32e, 1½ mile west of Floyd. There is no nearby production.

EDDY TESTS

Northern Natural Gas Co., Midland, No. 1-A Moutray Communitized is scheduled as a 10,000-foot wildcat in Eddy, three miles southwest of Lake Wood.

Location, 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 5-20s-26e, is ¾ mile east of the firm's No. 1 Moutray, an active wildcat, and 3¼ miles northeast of the Bubbling Springs, West (Morrow) gas field.

Also in Eddy, Belco Petroleum Corp., operating from Midland, will drill No. 5 Martin as a ⅜-mile southwest offset to the Cherry Canyon gas pay opener in the Carlsbad, South field.

It has a projected depth of 3,400 feet, and spots 2,210 feet from south and 990 feet from west lines of section 20-22s-27e, in Carlsbad townsite.

The discovery, Belco No. 2 Martin, finaled in September 1975 for 193 barrels of oil per day, through a 24-64-inch choke and perforations at 3,255-3,280 feet.

GAINES REOPENER

W. Ridley Wheeler Estate, Fort Worth, has completed two wells to reestablish production in the Carter-New Mexico (San Andres) field of extreme West Central Gaines County, Tex.

No. 2 Taylor gauged a 24-hour potential of 41 barrels of 31-gravity oil and 18 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 707-1, through perforations at 5,087-5,104 feet, after 2,000 gallons of acid.

A former producer, completed by Great Western, it was reentered last March. Total depth is 5,585 feet, and it is plugged back to 5,122 feet, in 4½-inch casing set at 5,557 feet.

Location is 1,650 feet from north and 330 feet from west lines of section 15, block A-9, PSL survey, eight miles northeast of Hobbs.

No. 2 Granberry, one location north of the depleted original opener, and ½ mile north of No. 2 Taylor, had a daily potential of 16 barrels of oil and 58 barrels of water, producing through perforations at 5,150-5,231 feet. Gravity of the oil is 31 degrees, and gas-oil ratio was 625-1.

SCURRY EXTENDER

Coronado Minerals Co., Houston, No. 1 J. A. Hood is completed as a 1¼-mile southeast extension to the Earnest (6,500 sand) field of Scurry County, four miles southwest of Hermleigh.

The daily potential gauge was for 25 barrels of 40-gravity oil and 32 barrels of water, producing on the pump through perforations at 7,146-7,172 feet, following 1,000 gallons of acid, plus 49,000 gallons and 92,000 pounds of fracture material.

Slated as a wildcat, it was drilled to 7,640 feet, and plugged back to 7,172 feet.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 154, block 3, H&NC survey.

DAWSON WELL

Collier-Diamond "C" Oil, Inc., operating from Midland, completed No. 1-A E. V. Carnett as a seventh well in the Block 35 (Dean) field of Dawson.

It pumped on 24-hour potential test, 36 barrels of 38-gravity oil and one barrel of water, through perforations at 8,593-8,605 feet. It had been acidized with 1,000 gallons and fractured with 64,100 pounds of sand.

Location is 1,320 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 38, block 35, T-5-N, T&P survey, seven miles southeast of Lamesa.

EDWARDS OUTPOST

North American Royalties, Inc., Midland, staked site for No. 13-38 Baker, a one-mile north outpost to the Roy Baker (Canyon) gas field of Edwards County, 14 miles north of Rocksprings.

It is projected to a depth of 3,500 feet, and spots 467 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 38, BS&F survey.

D. Salter transferred

Texas Oil & Gas Corp. has announced the promotion of David Salter, former Midlander, to District Landman for its Kansas District, in Wichita, Kan.

Salter joined the company in September 1976 as Landman, later serving as Senior Landman for the West Texas District in Midland.

Before joining Texas O&G, he was employed by Texaco Inc. in Midland. He earned his B.A. degree in Management from Texas Tech University at Lubbock.

Discoveries finaled in Fisher, Runnels

Strikes finaled in Runnels and Fisher County areas.

Jamses K. Anderson, Inc., Dallas, completed No. 1-B Eager, A Gardner sand oil strike in Runnels, 5½ miles northeast of Winters, finaled to flow 75.69 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 2.3 barrels of water on 24-hour potential test.

It finaled through a 16-64-inch choke and perforations at 4,431-4,443 feet, after 750 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio was 1,744-1.

Drilled to 4,448 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set one foot off bottom, and it is plugged back to 4,443 feet. Top of the Gardner sand was picked at 4,430 feet, under ground elevation of 2,029 feet.

Location is 467 feet from south and 1,667 feet from west lines of George W. Stell survey 345.

The Petroleum Corp. of Texas, Breckenridge, No. 6 Steele, Noodle Creek pay opener in the Royston (Flippen) area of Fisher, finaled to pump 41 barrels of 36-gravity oil and 288 barrels of water per day, with production through perforations at 2,922-2,926 feet. The section had been acidized with 6,000 gallons.

Drilled to 3,067 feet, 4½-inch casing is set on bottom.

RRC denies SGP request

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The railroad commission this week refused to allow Southwestern Gas Pipeline Inc. to abandon service to Brazos Electric Power Cooperative Inc.

Commission examiner Glenn Johnson said it would not be in the public interest to do so.

The commission directed Southwestern to inject enough gas into the Lone Camp gas reservoir to assure that it can deliver up to 15 million cubic feet of gas a day through September.

The commission said it would conduct a hearing within two months on complaints by Brazos about Southwestern's rates.

The commission voted to permit Lone Star Gas Co. to add a four-cent surcharge for each thousand cubic feet of gas it delivers to customers in Wichita Falls until it has collected $283,965.

That is the amount the commission says the city owes Lone Star in back payments.

Cabot moves Oil division

HOUSTON — Cabot Corp., with a regional office in Midland, has moved its Oil and Gas Division offices from Pampa to Houston.

Cabot's new offices, which have responsibility for the management of the firms oil and gas exploration and production, and for its gas processing and gathering activities are located in One Houston Center, Suite 1000.

Boyd D. Taylor is vice president and general manager of the division. Other top personnel include J. Henry Tanner, exploration manager; Joe M Daniel Jr., operations manager and J R. Blankenship, controller.

Oil shale transforming village into boom town

By MICHAEL SEILER
The Los Angeles Times

CRAIG, Colo. — There are people here who remember Craig when it was a friendly little place on the edge of nowhere.

But, since 1970, the population has climbed from 4,000 to more than 10,000; hardhats mingle with the traditional Stetsons down at the Rancho Deluxe bar and country music joint; and the city has put up stoplights and one-way street signs through town.

There's a 16-officer police force in a town that just three years ago didn't have a cop to call its own; the schools are overcrowded; parents are worried about drug pushers and hookers working the streets after dark; and the most common style of architecture is rectangular Early Moibile Home.

Once a small agricultural town isolated in the Colorado plains west of the Rockies, Craig has suddenly become the archtypical Western boomtown of the 1970s, thanks to the energy crisis and the Carter administration's pledge to lessen America's dependence on foreign oil.

There is shale oil and coal and uranium here in abundance, and the nation's need for them is beginning to transform Craig and dozens of other little Western communities.

The quality of life here will never be the same. And as goes Craig, so, perhaps, goes the rest of the American West.

Concern for towns such as Craig was evident at recent Washington hearings of U.S. Senate subcommittee on regional and community development where a bill that would authorize federal assistance to Western energy boomtowns was under consideration.

The proposed legislation would provide federal grants, loans and loan guarantees to help Craig and other communities weather the initial impact of an energy boom.

The money would be used to build more roads, schools, parks, hospitals and other public facilities. It also would go to hire more police, teachers and mental health workers.

If any sections of the American West need this kind of help, none are likely to need it more than Craig and the rest of northwestern Colorado.

The four-county area, covering 1,400 square miles and inhabited by only 100,000 persons, has enough oil shale to meet the nation's need for oil for an estimated 80 years, according to testimony at the hearings last month.

It has 29 billion tons of unmined coal, enough to operate all of America's power plants for 20 years, and rich reserves of natural gas and uranium.

This vast reservoir of mineral riches around Craig has been barely tapped. Work began two years ago on a $500 million, 760-megawatt power plant, and since then, several new coal mines have opened in the vicinity.

The plant and the mines have created new jobs, caused a rise in prices of goods and services, produced traffic jams in a town that a few years ago had only two stoplights but now has five, and created a housing shortage.

But, somehow, Craig has survived its transformation and people here are generally optimistic about the town's future and resigned to the loss of those all-but-intangible qualities that make small-town living pleasurable.

Bob Sweeney, editor and publisher of the local Daily Press, is as experienced and keen a social observer as Craig has. He has lived here all his life and started the paper 18 years ago.

There are things about Craig's boom that bother him.

"A lot of my friends and fellow businessmen have left," he said. "I think maybe 75 per cent of the downtown businesses have changed hands in the last three years. The original owners took the opportunity to sell their businesses at a good profit."

And Craig's sudden growth has resulted in an instability in city government, with old-time leaders discovering they didn't want the hassles of administering a government hard-pressed to provide services to the rapidly expanding city.

"Everyone in this town has resigned in the last year or two," Sweeney said. "The mayor, the police chief, councilmen, the water and parks superintendents, and the new high school principal, who left after two weeks because he couldn't find a house he could afford — they all went."

Sweeney has the feeling that "the overall quality of life here has deteriorated."

"I used to let my kids walk downtown to the movies, and my daughter sold papers on the street at night; not anymore. She'd be propositioned and some guy would try to sell her marijuana."

And the quality of service from private businessmen has gone downhill, he added. "It used to be you called the plumber and he'd come right over. Now, it takes a week if he comes at all and he charges big-city rates."

But, on the other side of the ledger, there have been improvements. Sweeney is happy with better commuter airline service, a new FM radio station to balance off the town's one AM station that plays only country-western music, and a successful fundraising effort to finance a $15,000 TV translator so that Craig residents can now pick up the signal from a public television station more than 100 miles away.

Pecos area gets probe

Pecos County gained a wildcat and a reentry operation is scheduled for Upton County. A gas extender finaled in Crockett.

Amoco Production Co. No. 1-FD University has been planned as a 5,500-foot Pecos wildcat, in the Taylor-Link area, one mile west of Bakersfield.

Drillsite is 2,080 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 13, block 18, ULS.

Gulf Oil Corp. filed permit application to reenter and clean out to original total depth of 11,550 feet for testing as a wildcat, at No. 1-A L. G. Davis, Upton failure, eight miles north of Crane. It will be reentered as No. 1-A Louie Bob Davis, et al.

It originally was drilled by Gulf in 1967.

It is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 4, block 42, T-5-S, T&P survey, 1¾ mile north of the Block 42 field.

Queen production was extended one mile northeast in the Onlaw field with completion of C. F. Lawrence & Associates, Inc., Midland, No. 1-66-E Halff, Crockett project, 5½ miles southeast of Iraan.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 740,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 1,117-1,149 feet. The pay section had been treated with 15,000 gallons of acid.

Application to drill the test was as a project in the Fergus (upper Grayburg) field in District 7-C.

Location is 1,167 feet from south and 4,250 feet from east lines of section 66, block 1, I&GN survey.

Hill seeks settlement in Crystal City case

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John Hill met today with representatives of Crystal City and LoVaca Gathering Co. in an effort to settle the gas company's $700,000 claim against the small South Texas city.

Only an order by U. S. Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell prevented LoVaca from shutting off Crystal City's gas this week.

Hill said he involved himself in the dispute only in the hope that some "unexplored avenues of settlement" might be found.

He acknowledged, however, that it appears "that a settlement is pretty well out the window."

The problem arose after Texas courts held that Crystal City must pay LoVaca the rate established by the Texas Railroad Commission, that is, the full cost of gas plus 5 cents per thousand cubic feet. Crystal City had insisted on paying only the price established in its gas supply contract with LoVaca, 36 cents per thousand cubic feet.

Unlike other South Texas cities that opposed the higher rate, Crystal City did not set aside a reserve in case it lost in the courts.

Present market price of natural gas is approximately $2 per thousand cubic feet.

Hill said the city wants to avoid having to make a down payment on its $700,000 debt if at all possible.

In addition, Crystal City would like to delay any payment until March, after the municipal budget has been set.

One avenue that Hill suggested was to recruit a financial consulting firm in the San Antonio area or elsewhere to analyze Crystal City's taxing and spending to determine if there might be untapped sources of funds with which to pay the debt.

Hill said such a service would have to be performed "pro bono" — that is, for free.

"I'd have to say please, pretty please," Hill told reporters.

Crystal City's representatives said they were willing for reporters to attend the meeting, but newsmen were excluded after LoVaca attorney Joe Jaworski said, "We're here to settle a litigation. It seems to me it would be pretty hard in open forum."

Reentry Set In Motley

Jack F. Grimm, Abilene, plans to reenter and clean out to 1,500 feet, No. 1 Frank Eiring, as a wildcat in Motley County, 15 miles northwest Matador.

Originally drilled to a total depth of 8,990 feet, it was plugged and abandoned in November 1976.

Location is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 66, block T, A&B survey.

Cloud-seeding issue explosive, man says

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A Panhandle man told the Water Resources Board at its first meeting Thursday there will be violence over the issue of cloudseeding to suppress hail.

Earl Cosby of Tulia, in Swisher County, said he served in the air corps in Europe in World War II and he knows the seeding is being done outside authorhzed limits.

"I'm telling you there's going to be violence over this by somebody," Cosby said, his voice shaking.

Cosby said he personally opposed violence. He pleaded with the board to take another look at the whole program.

In Swisher County, the vote in a recent election on the issue was 98.22 per cent against seeding, he said.

"Fellas, if that's not a clearcut indication of what the public wants; I think you better go home and figure out what to do next," he said.

Board member George McCleskey of Lubbock said, "I think what this man has told us about violence is accurate."

Bruce Bigelow, acting board counsel, said he cannot yet certify election results in Panhandle counties because election officials failed to send him precinct maps so he could tell which ones are in the target or operational areas of two seeding permits.

Bigelow also told the board it had inherited the lawsuit filed against the old Water Quality Board regarding the Edwards Aquifer in South Texas.

An Austin district judge ruled against allowing Atty. Gen. John Hill to be a plaintiff in that suit, but San Antonio still is in it, Bigelow said.

The Water Quality Board wrote separate pollution standards for different counties over the aquifer, and Hill contended the standard had to be the same for all to be legal.

Except for natural attrition, the new board has a policy of retaining all employes of the Water Development Board, Water Quality Board and Water Rights Commission, which have been merged in the new board.

Sahara Desert to cover earth?

By ROBERT SOBEL
Newsday

"In the space of 176 years the Lower Mississippi has shortened itself 252 miles. That is an average of a trifle more than one mile and a third per year. Therefore any calm person, who is not blind or idiotic, can see that in 742 years from now the Lower Mississippi will be one mile and three quarters long, and Cairo, Ill. and New Orleans will have joined their streets together."

So wrote Mark Twain in "Life on the Mississippi" slightly more than a century ago. The author was ridiculing the extrapolators, those people who try to extend present tendencies into the future. And the quote was thrown at me by one of the leading extrapolators of our day, Furnifold Carteret.

Carteret pontificates from his Strom King Mountain retreat, and always for huge sums. This is the man whose column, "The Informed Source," was the most popular feature of the old Wall Street Gazette. Tiring of securities analysis, Carteret began writing for scholarly magazines in the late 1960s. In one article he predicted that the Sahara Desert would cover the entire world by the year 2198, and by then the population would be so large that we would be standing on each other's shoulders. Americans would while away their hours watching television, re-runs and munching McDonald hamburgers, said Carteret, and many believed him.

The article captured the attention of a Swiss banker who worked for the Arabs, and a delegation traveled to visit Carteret (see the essay in the March Financier, "Muhammed Comes to the Mountain") and shortly thereafter the seer went on the Saudi Arabian payroll, where he is to this day.

I went to see Carteret last week, and found him busy at work, constructing his familiar scenarios of the distant future. Although unwilling to talk about some matters, he was quite open on others, and we began with a discussion of the market today.

"Prices are unduly depressed," he opined, "and I feel certain the Dow Industrials will reflect the basic underlying strength of the economy once short-term uncertainties are clarified."

"What would be your strategy?" I asked.

"This is the proper time for prudent investors to accumulate sound equities on a buy-and-see basis. Many excellent stocks are at bargain prices, waiting to be taken up by customers who are able to look beyond the current malaise."

Would the analyst be willing to make specific suggestions?

"Well, it seems evident to me that Americans will continue to use automobiles for the foreseeable future. Also the experience of business will require further computerization. This much is certain."

Does this mean that Carteret likes General Motors and IBM? He winked and wagged his finger at me. "You said that, not me."

What did the analyst predict for energy supplies and policies?

It was obvious he felt at home with this question. "I would say that explorations for oil and natural gas will continue, and these will be costly. Americans will use more coal in time, and I expect news on the solar energy front. Atomic installations will grow in number and size, unless stopped by the antinuclear coalition. Finally, you may tell your readers that the price of energy will rise."

"As for the President's energy program, it will not be as effective as he expects it to be, but it will have an impact. I would say that this will be mixed, but in the end the problems will remain."

Carteret also had something to say about the international situation. "I expect a continuation of tensions in the Mideast. There will be armed conflict in the area though I wouldn't care to say just when. That this will affect the market is obvious, though a more precise statement must await future developments."

Carteret noted that all of this depressed me, and so he began painting a more cheerful scenario. Space travel will be conventional by the year 2089, he thought, by which time cancer, heart disease, and stroke will have been eliminated. Energy will be cheap and easily available a half century later By the year 2400 we will have learned to leave our bodies to take celestial voyages, and a time travel device will be marketed in the following century.

All this was quite dazzling, but the interview as a whole was disturbing. "Look Mr. Carteret," I said. "All I'm getting from you are cliches and evasions about today's problems but certainties regarding what will transpire centuries from now. What's the use of this kind of prediction?"

That's when Carteret quoted Mark Twain to me.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Harte-Hanks Newspapers Inc. officially changed its name to Harte-Hanks Communications, Inc.

Robert G. Marbut, president and chief executive officer, said that daily newspapers still are the major portion of the company's operation, but "HarteHanks Communications, Inc., more accurately reflects the character of our company today and its long-term direction."

Cartoonist named Nixon Scholar

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Political cartoonist Paul Conrad of the Los Angeles Times, whose depictions of Richard M. Nixon have been less than flattering, was named to be a Nixon Scholar this fall at Whittier College, the former President's alma mater.

As holder of the Nixon Chair from Sept. 7 to Oct. 5, the two-time Pulitzer Prize winner and author of two books will conduct an undergraduate seminar on the history and purpose of editorial cartoons.

The lectureship was endowed by Nixon supporters five years ago, while he was still in office. It was set up to bring five distinguished scholars a year to the campus from various fields.

A spokesman for Whittier College agreed that the selection of Conrad "presents a bit of an irony," but she said she hoped it would not be taken as a slap at Nixon.

"It could only happen in America," commented Conrad, who conceded he refused to believe the offer until he received it on Whittier College stationery.

Smith calls critical provisions in plan 'crazy suggestions'

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith termed key provisions in the British-American peace plan for Rhodesia "crazy suggestions" today but did not reject the proposal yet.

"It seems to me that the plan is not only ill conceived, it is rushed," Smith told a news conference. He accused Britain of "seeking revenge" for his declaration of independence in 1965.

The 8,000-word blueprint for ending Rhodesia's five-year guerrilla war and transferring power to the black majority next year was presented to Smith Thursday by Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Secretary David Owen.

Owen, before he and Young flew to London Thursday night, told reporters he was "not full of optimism." But Young predicted "a gradual buildup of appreciation of what is good in this package and what is bad in the current situation."

"I believe when people are face to face with death they come to their senses," the chief American delegate to the United Nations added.

Smith told his news conference he was "no more optimistic" about a settlement emerging from the British-American plan. But he said he would make a thorough study of the document before reaching a final decision.

The provisions of the plan he termed "crazy suggestions" were those calling for a Briton to head an interim government during the transition to black rule and the formation of a new national army which he said would be based on the guerrillas of the Communist-backed Patriotic Front.

"I think it's a very cunning scheme to ensure that the Patriotic Front will be the next government of Rhodesia," he said.

Meanwhile, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, the leaders of the Patriotic Front, said the proposals "contain aspects which are unacceptable."

Smith made it plain to reporters that he would hold out for a settlement more favorable to the whites.

Strengthened by his landslide victory in a general election Wednesday, Smith said he would pursue his previous plan to negotiate a settlement of his own with black moderates "as a second string to the bow — a wise precaution."

The British-American plan, made public on Thursday but leaked last week, calls for Smith's government to surrender power to an interim government headed by a British resident commissioner, a U.N. peacekeeping force to enforce a cease-fire in the war between the Rhodesian army and the black guerrillas of the Patriotic Front, "free and impartial elections on the basis of universal adult suffrage" and a new constitution "providing for a democratically elected government, the abolition of discrimination, the protection of individual human rights and the independence of the judiciary."

The British government nominated Field Marshal Lord Carver, 62-year-old former chief of the British General Staff, to be the resident commissioner.

British newspapers were not optimistic about the success of the plan. The London Daily Mirror said to ask Smith "to surrender on the very day he has just won all 50 white seats in the Rhodesian parliament is expressing a naive belief in the powers of Father Christmas." The Financial Times said the British-American plan lacked "a crucial ingredient — evidence of acceptability to any of the parties most directly concerned, both white and black."

Bar packs in 'presidential' clan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — "I really can't tell you how Sarsfield's distinguishes itself from other bars in town," pondered presidential appointments secretary Tim Kraft. "But possibly one of the reasons our crowd likes it is that you know they won't press charges for vandalism or indecent exposure. Listen, any bar that would put up with our gang for 48 hours deserves a medal."

Last December Richard Evans, former Muskie advance man and owner of Sarsfield's, realized the new members of the Carter administration were going to need at least one thing that he could provide: a bar of their own. He also realized that most Carter people didn't know about Sarsfield's and, in fact, wouldn't know one bar from the next unless someoe told them.

So Evans decided to throw a party. Billing it a "transition bash" he served up fried chicken and barbecued ribs instead f peanuts, offered cut-rate drinks and invited all the new Carter crew to drop by his bar one Sunday and party.

So they did. And now, seven months later, they are still dropping by Sarsfield's, having made it the unofficial Carer team hangout. Susan Clough, the President's personal secretary, says Sarsfield's longevity as Top Bar is already extraordinary. "In Atlanta," says Clough, "our crowd usually lasted about four months with one bar before we'd move on to another."

Since December Evans has noted their patronage by holding other special Carter parties, even though he says it is not the parties, but Sarsfield's "very laid-back" atmosphere that keeps the White House coming back.

His point of view is concurred in by Terry O'Connell, local politicla consultant whom Kraft credits with having first turned him on to Sarsfield's.

"Sarsfield's is not a political bar," says O'Connell, who is currently in New York managing Bella Abzug's mayoralty race. "You go there because people leave you alone — whether you work at the White House or don't work at all, it doesn't matter. You can sing or dance or jump on the bar or pour ketchup on chairs or drop trou or do whatever you want and nobody will say anything. It's one of the few places left in town where you can really get down and get crazy."

"Sarsfield's," sums up O'Connell, "is an ongoing '60s fraternity party."

Sarsfield's is also not in Georgetown, which to Scott Burnett, director of the President's speaker's bureau, is practically its biggest plus. "Sarsfield's is just a run-of-the-mill bar, but one reason I got tehre is because I'm never going to Georgetown. Bars in Georgetown are too loud, too expensive and besides, most of us here at the White House don't like the New York-Washington types who hang out in Georgetown. We prefer to stay by ourselves. After you've worked 11 -or 12-hour days you don't want to be hassled. So Sarsfield's is good because you can sit in the basement and converse or go up stairs to the bar and get crazy."

The heavy action at Sarsfield's is centered in the main-floor bar, which on almost any night is similar to the Phi Delta House in the middle of a two-day binge.

A long oak bar — lit by the obligatory Tiffany lamps and presided over by 6 foot 6 chief bartender Rod Hayden — dominates the room, which is typically packed with people either standing or dancing on the postage stamp dance floor.

If there is any dress code at Sarsfield's it is not to dress in anything much spiffier than blue jeans. Except on week-ends, when a live deejay from Nard's Oldies bug Goodies comes in, the jukebox provides music while the bartenders literally romp behind the bar often making customers wait for their drinks until they finish a boogaloo.

Carter putting Lance, canal off for holiday

By RICHARD E. MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is putting Bert Lance and the Panama Canal behind him, tuning in some country music and heading for the hills.

He set aside time today to say howdy in the Oval Office to Willie Nelson and Emmy Lou Harris, who are country and western singers. An aide said they worked in the Carter campaign.

Then the President summoned a helicopter to lift him out of Washington later in the day, away from its criticism of Lance and its opposition to his Panama treaties and into the quiet of the Catoctin Mountains of Western Maryland.

There, at Camp David, the presidential retreat, he will spend Labor Day weekend. It is Carter's eighth visit to Camp David. He likes to shuck his business suit, climb into blue jeans and stroll through the woods around the presidential lodge.

Carter arranged to leave the capital as suggestions mounted Thursday that he replace Lance as budget director because of questions about Lance's dealings as a Georgia banker. A lengthy probe by the comptroller of the currency has cleared Lance of any crime.

But Congress opens hearings next week on "unsafe and unsound" banking practices the comptroller said he found in Lance's affairs. At the same time, published reports have raised more questions about Lance's transactions.

The suggestions that Lance leave government came from Republican National Chairman Bill Brock and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho. The senator opposed Carter in the Democratic presidential primaries last year.

Brock challenged Carter to replace Lance or admit violating a pledge to govern without apparent impropriety. Church said Lance would serve Carter well by withdrawing from his administration.

Support came from Lance's home state. Georgia Gov. George Busbee said critics have denied Lance even the right to reply given to persons "accused of rape, child molestation or anything else."

Busbee said Lance will remain in Washington "for a long time as part of the Carter administration."

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter's pledge against even the appearance of impropriety has not been broken. Powell said anew there is no evidence that Lance has done anything to merit being "run out of government."

Ladies swimming class slated

A ladies swimming class will be held starting Sept. 12 at the City of Midland Pool, North "A" and Wadley streets.

The program consists of land flexibility exercises, water exercises, and swimming instruction. The main objectives of this program are to help overcome a fear of the water, proper relaxation and breathing along with stroke techniques. Participants may enter one or all of the activities, working at their own level to increase cardiovascular and cardiorespiratory fitness.

'Band-Aids' won't ease U.S. unemployment ills

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Meany says the Carter administration is applying only "Band-Aids" to ease the country's unemployment problem.

In his annual Labor Day message, released today, the AFLCIO president chided the administration for what he said is its failure to develop a comprehensive plan to put people to work in good jobs at decent wages.

"There are public service jobs, housing programs, mass transit programs, public works, school aid — but they are essentially Band-Aids for specific problems and just don't come to grips with the more general problem of mass unemployment," Meany said.

Meany, organized labor's chief spokesman, renewed his appeal for congressional enactment of the Humphrey-Hawkins Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act.

The measure, now in legislative limbo, would require the planning and coordination necessary for the government to reduce unemployment among adult job seekers to 3 per cent in four years and to keep it within that figure.

It is now about 6 per cent.

The AFL-CIO has joined with civil rights groups and state and local officials in proclaiming next week "Full Employment Week."

A series of rallies and demonstrations across the country are planned to drum up congressional interest in the bill, opposed by most business groups on grounds that it would be inflationary.

"We consider full employment is both achievable and practical," Meany said. "We think that a job opportunity for every American able and willing to work is an essential human right."

By the same token, he said the rights of workers to form unions free of employer interference and coercion must be strengthened.

Meany said President Carter's labor-law reform proposal, aimed primarily at eliminating illegal employer attempts to delay union organizing efforts, would end the "economic terrorism" practiced by some companies.

The proposal is bitterly opposed by the business community, which has labeled it a "power grab" by organized labor.

Rockefeller said senators should "go ahead and ratify it based upon their own understanding that it is a reasonable and fair and secure treaty for the United States."

INVESTORS
Oil and gas lease, 400 acres, North Louisiana, undeveloped. Geologist 40 years ago stated, the character of the underlying Strata, that it would be great possibility of oil and natural gas to accumulate in the foldings of the Strata under this land. 35 years ago, gas was plugged short distant north of this property. United States land surveyor years ago set aside in the Sections for valuable minerals. I have known this property over 75 years, always known for valuable minerals therunder and thereon. Wonderful opportunity for the firm or individual prospecting for oil, gas and other minerals. Property located 3 miles South of Arcadia, Louisiana, Bienville Parish, Section 31, 32, 36, Township 18 North, Range 5 West.

UIL will not investigate charges

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Bailey Marshall, director of the University Interscholastic League in Austin, stated Thursday that it will be up to the District 5-4A Executive Committee to investigate the recent charges of rules violations against the Abilene, Odessa and Big Spring high school football teams, and decide what course of action, if any, should be taken in the matter.

The three schools have been charged with violating Rule 24 of the UIL code, which prohibits the use of contact equipment after the season or before Aug. 19. The accusations come not more than a week after the Midland Lee High School football team was found guilty of the same rule, and declared ineligible to compete for the 1977 district football title by the 5-4A Executive Committee.

Speaking by phone Thursday, Marshall admitted that he had received a pair of letters — one anonymous and one from a Don Luttrell of Midland — charging three schools with violating Rule 24, as well as a pair of films which supposedly shows contact equipment present while Odessa and Big Spring went through workouts. Marshall added, however, that he has forwarded the material to Dr. James Nevins, Supt. of the San Angelo school district and chairman of the 5-4A Executive Committee, and it will now be up to the committee to investigate further.

"It will be up to the district executive committee to do what is necessary," Marshall explained. "They will act on each case individually."

Marshall added, "The only way the League would step in is if they (the committee) rule that one or all of the schools have commited a violation, but don't penalize them. Then, we would have to step in because whoever won the district this season could be disqualified for setting aside a league rule."

Marshall said that probation would be considered strong enough penalty to keep the UIL from getting involved.

Odessa and Big Spring were implicated in the letter sent by Luttrell to the UIL, which was accompanied by the two films. The films were reproductions of some original footage shot by KMID-TV of the two schools' practice sessions during the first week of drills.

The original film was obtained by Rosemary Acree, wife of Lee High football coach Jim Acree. Later, without KMID's knowledge, a copy of the films was nade by a group which included Luttrell, and sent to the UIL offices.

Abilene was implicated in an unsigned letter to Marshall, which indicated the Eagles had used contact equipment during workouts last January. It was later learned the Louie Spinks, the head coach of Abilene, had been put on probation last March for one year by the Texas High School Coaches Association after Spinks admitted to having blocking dummies on the AHS field. The incident, however, was never reported to the UIL in Austin or the 5-4A Executive Committee.

Shorty Lawson, athletic director of the Abilene school district, admitted that he was informed of the alleged infraction by the Eagles, but took no action besides what the THSCA handed out to Spinks.

"No formal complaint was made about the violation, so we made no formal move to report it'" Lawson said. "We were of the opinion that we'll clean up our own house, and that's what we did."

Lawson was in attendance at the executive meeting in Big Spring last Wednesday, when the group voted to disqualify Lee from competing for the district title.

Nevins contacted representatives from all of the 5-4A school districts Thursday afternoon and informed them that there will be another Executive Committee meeting "probably during the first part of next week."

Meanwhile, concern has been growing in Midland as to how Rosemary Acree obtained the tapes of Odessa and Big Spring practice sessions from KMID-TV.

Wednesday, KMID sports reporter Cleve Hardman explained that Mrs. Acree had called him and said that a Midland school board member wanted to see the film of the Lee practice session, and she asked if she could come out to the station and get it.

"Then we found a note from her that said 'the man said I could have films of two other teams working out and I'll have them back to you tomorrow'" explained Hardman.

Mrs. Acree admitted Thursday that she took the films from the KMID offices. "I did take the film. I did leave a note. And I did replace the film," she added. "I am not sure what happened to it during the interim."

The film was taken at approximately 2 p.m. Sunday afternoon, she said, and returned around noon on Tuesday. It was during that time that the copy was made.

"I just walked out there and got them," Mrs. Acree said of the films. "It's open all of the time and the news people are usually out there. When I got there, I found a man who was back in a room with a bunch of machines and I asked him for Cleve (Hardman) and he said he wasn't there.

"I knew where the film was because they let me dig the other time when I went to get the film of Lee for my husband to take to the meeting in Big Spring. After I got it, I placed a note on the secratary's desk to Cleve telling him that I took the two films and would return them. So, I certainly did nothing sneaky."

Mrs. Acree explained that the reason she got the tapes in the first place was because a group of men and women — which included Don Luttrell — approached her and told her of the alleged violations by Odessa and Big Spring.

"They wondered how anybody would ever know about it (the alledged violations) and said that Channel 2 had probably destroyed the tapes. I told them that they were wrong and that Cleve would probably let us have them. After I got them, I gave them to one of the men."

Mrs. Acree re-iterated the fact that she feels she has done nothing wrong. "I got public news to people and got it back. I did nothing undercover."

She admitted that her husband knew nothing of the whole affair until she told him of it early Thursday morning.

Midland Cubs lose ground in TL loss

SAN ANTONIO—Mike Rushde drilled a two-run homer in the eighth inning and Tommy Myers followed up with a solo effort in the ninth as the San Antonio Dodgers whipped the Midland Cubs 6-3 in a brawl-scarred Texas League game here Thursday.

Tempers flared when the Dodgers' Mark Hance was thrown out at the plate in the second inning. Both benches emptied for a two-minute free-for-all, but no one was ejected from the game.

El Paso defeated Amarillo, 7-4, Thursday to move two games ahead with two games remaining in the season. Midland will have to win both games here and El Paso would have to lose their remaining two games for a tie.

Padres waive Dave Kingman

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Power hitter Dave Kingman was been placed on waivers earlier this week by the San Diego Padres of the National League, club owner Ray Kroc confirmed Thursday night.

In confirming Thursday that Kingman was placed on waivers earlier this week, Kroc added: "That's common practice. The last waiver list I saw had 100 names on it. It's a probing procedure. It establishes where interest lies."

George Burns still unhappy despite taking Buick lead

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — George Burns has already won over $100,000 on the Professional Golfers Association tour this year, but the 29-year-old former Maryland football player still isn't happy.

"I've had sort of an attitude problem," the second-year pro said following a blistering eight-under-par 64 that gave him a one-shot lead Thursday in the first round of the Buick Open.

How, Burns was asked, could one win $100,000 playing golf and not be happy?

"Well, I haven't won on the tour yet, and that's the name of the game out here," replied the 6-foot-2, 210-pounder. "I was so down I was going to skip this one—withdraw," he said, "but my father insisted that I play here, since I had committed. And now I'm glad I did."

Burns' sparkling score over the par-72, 6,902-yard Flint Elks Country Club layout wiped out the mark of 65 set in 1975 by pro George Cadle when the Buick was a satellite tour event.

The event resumed tour status this year after an eight-year absence, following renewed interest by the sponsor.

Age does't bother Morey

NEWTON SQUARE, Pa. (AP) — Dale Morey says that in golf you never ask a guy his age, only if can he play.

Since Morey is 58 years old, he knows something about age in golf. He'llstee it up with Methuslah, or the kid next door.

For example, Morey recently won the Seniors International, a synonym for old geezers. Now he's seeking the nation's top amateur prize, usually reserved for the young set.

And who is to say the 6-foot-1 one-time pro basketball playeer won't win the 77th annual U.S. National Amateur Championship in full swing at Aronimink Golf Club in suburban Philadelphia.

The lean 170-pound Morey fought intense heat, high humidity and an opponent 36 years his junior Thursday. Would you believe the heat, humidity and 22-year-old Jack Holmes of Aiken, Ga., all lost?

It was a victory in the best Morey tradition. He rallied on the final two holes to even the match, and then outshot his younger opponent on the second sudden death hole. It had to make every guy over 50 who still wields a golf club stick out his chest with pride.

Nothing Morey does on the golf course really surprises anybody. He lives on a house on a golf course in High Point, N.C. Every night he steps out and jogs a mile or two to keep those legs strong.

"Yeh, I guess I struck a blow for the old folks," said Morey, not too anxious to talk about age. "They need a blow. There are so many good, young players out there."

The balding Morey, who roomed with baseball's Alvin Dark at LSU some years ago, knows he isn't kidding anybody about his chances of winning the nation's No. 1 amateur golf prize.

Bulldogs, Tascosa face season's first grid battle

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

In the glorious lingo of Broadway, it's another opening to another show as the Midland High Bulldogs raise the curtain on the 1977 football season tonight, hosting Amarillo Tascosa at Memorial Stadium.

The Dogs, who begin their second season under the direction of Coach Jerry Hopkins, were given a legitimate chance to win their first 5-4A title in history when all of the pre-season polls hit the streets a few weeks ago. But with Lee already ruled ineligible for the district title, and three more schools now under the gun, their chances look better every day.

Hopkins has had only last Saturday's pre-season scrimmage with Snyder to use as an indicator, but he's a lot more confident than he was a year ago at this time, when both he and his players were still feeling their way around in a new system.

"We've been coming around nicely," he said with a smile Thursday, "and with the exception of a few uncertain areas, we're pretty solid at this point."

One of those "uncertain areas" is the Pack's punting game, where Hopkins will be going with an untested sophomore, Tracy Gann. The coach had a lot of praise for the youngster, but admitted it's going to take some game experience before he gets his feet on the ground.

On paper, the Pack is rated a heavy favorite going into tonight's game. Tascosa is coming off a 2-8 season, and there is not too much hope for improvement this year.

"We played good defense all of last season," explained Rebel coach James Harris, "but we just couldn't get the ball in the end zone. We had a very young offense."

Now they have a young defense. Tascosa has lost eight starters from a defensive unit that held the opposition to two touchdowns or less in all but one of the Rebels' games last year. And to make matters worse, Harris does not have a proven quarterback to direct his offensive attack, and will go with 165-pound senior Harold Cliver, who has very little game experience.

Tascosa was hurt even more last weekend, when starting center Richard Lay was injured in the Herford scrimmage and will be out of tonight's lineup. His replacement, 145-pound Charles Stafford, will have the unenviable task of lining up opposite Midland's 230-pound all-district middle guard, Ricky Goode in a re-match of David and Goliath.

Goode anchors a solid defensive line, which was impressive in Saturday's Snyder scrimmage, and will be the 'Dogs strong point going in. Goode is flanked on the sides by 220-pound tackles Billy Walker and Paul Boruff, with Greg Coldeway (170) and Byron Hixon (165) at the end positions.

Midland seniors Doug Atnipp and Joe Mowles have been battling hard for the starting quarterback position, and Hopkins has given the nod tonight to Atnipp. The 170-pounder who will double as the rover on defense against the Rebels, did not see any action in the Snyder scrimmage because of a bruised shoulder, but has been practicing all week.

"We didn't put him through all of the contact work," Hopkins explained. "But he's been throwing all week, and we think he's ready. We will use Joe (Mowles) quite a bit, however, since Doug is gonna be going both ways."

Neither Bulldog quarterback will be calling his own plays though.

"What we plan on doing," Hopkins said Thursday, "is messenger our plays in with our offensive backs."

Midland has a bevy of talented running backs, and Hopkins will be rotating them throughout the entire contest. Brentley Jackson, a 195-pound senior will be starting at fullback, with Walter Bryson, a 170-pound junior and Alvin Price, a 155-pound senior manning the halfback slots, but senior Gerald Dedrick and juniors Robert Montgomery and Jimmie Zachry will be shuffled in and out all night.

Hopkins is not taking Tascosa lightly, especially after the scare the Rebels gave them last year before the Pack pulled it out, 14-7.

"They're not too big," he admitted, "but they're scrappy. And sometimes those can be the toughest kind of teams to beat."

DOG BITES: Midland has stayed relatively free of injury during the pre-season, and only one player will not be suited up tonight. That's junior halfback Randy Moore, who dislocated his knee cap on the first day of workouts and is probably through for the year. . . The Pack's new uniforms have got to be seen to be believed. . . Tascosa's coaching staff scouted Midland's scrimmage with Snyder and walked away impressed with the 'Dog defense. . . Harris is trying to get some more life insurance for Stafford, his 145-pound center, before he faces Goode.

Lee girls lose twice to Pecos in volleyball

PECOS — The Lee High volleyball team opened the season on a disappointing note here Thursday, as both the Rebel junior varsity and varsity squads were beaten.

The varsity was beaten by the Eagles, 15-5, 15-3, and the Lee junior varsity were also defeated, 15-10, 15-8.

Coach Linda Weikel, who is building around just two letterwomen, said that the varsity score wasn't indicative of the game, but that her squad made just too many mental mistakes.

The letterwomen are Diane Cravens, a senior and Julie Ochsner, a junior. Other members of the Rebel varsity include Virginia Frazzell, Sheryl Guthrie, Debbie Korthauer, Caren Sharp, Terry Reyes, Melinda Cravens, and Shelli Speck.

Lee will be home Tuesday for their second encounter, entertaining Seminole in the Rebel gym. The junior varsity contest gets underway at 6 p.m. and the varsity at 7.

College season begins

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Rutgers, coming off a perfect campaign and boasting the nation's longest winning streak, begins its quest for national recognition tonight when it meets Penn State in the first college football game of the 1977 season.

Rutgers has everything to gain and virtually nothing to lose except an 18-game winning streak that dates back to a 34-20 defeat against Lehigh in 1975.

Penn State, meanwhile, has precious little to gain against a club that finished no better than 17th in the 1976 national rankings despite an 11-0 record and was overlooked by almost everyone except its 11 victims.

But Penn State doesn't see it that way, even though Coach Joe Paterno must keep his players from looking past Rutgers to Houston, Maryland and Kentucky, its next three opponents. All went to bowl games last season, while Rutgers, with its unblemished record, was bypassed by everyone except the fledgling Independence Bowl, an invitation the Scarlet Knights rejected.

"We know its going to be a tough football game, but we are happy to be playing Rutgers," Paterno said. "Rutgers has a fine program and we think they are doing things the right way—playing with people who belong in school.

"I've known Coach Frank Burns for years and have great respect for him. They seem to be developing their program the way we have and we think it is a good series with the state university of a neighboring state."

A crowd of 60,000 is expected in 76,000-seat Giants Stadium for the eighth meeting in the series—Penn State leads 6-1— but the first since 1955. While Penn State has been a fixture in the national rankings—the Nittany Lions have had 38 consecutive non-losing seasons, an NCAA record—Rutgers has been playing the Princetons, Bucknells, Connecticuts, Columbias, Colgates, Lafayettes and Lehighs.

However, tonight's contest begins a three-game series with Penn State, and Alabama joins the schedule in 1980-81.

"It's a big, big game for us," said guard Dan Pfabe. "We know we have something to prove against Penn State. Starting the season with Penn State in Giants Stadium throws us in the pressure-cooker again, but it just always seems that we can take the heat and come out the winner."

Although Penn State failed to crack the 1976 rankings with an unaccustomed 7-5 record, the Lions are No. 13 in The Associated Press preseason poll, while Rutgers is not among the Top Twenty.

But from listening to the coaches, it doesn't seem like that's the case.

"We haven't beaten anybody yet," said Paterno. "We should wait until we beat somebody before we say how good we are. All we've done so far is talk."

"We've had some very good practices," said Burns. "The team has a way to go yet, but I'd have to say I'm basically happy the way things have gone so far."

Burns hopes he can say that after the game.

"I would rather have opened the season with someone else and played Penn State later in the year," he said, "but when you have a chance to play them you have to do it."

The Penn State-Rutgers meeting is the first of 843 major college games this season. Only 19 of them will be played this weekend and 16th-rated Mississippi State, which entertains North Texas State Saturday, is the only ranked team besides Penn State to see action.

Other Saturday day games include Alabama State at Jackson State, Memphis State at Mississippi, Norfolk State at William & Mary, Alcorn State at Central Michigan and Dayton at Miami of Ohio.

Saturday night finds Wofford at The Citadel, Western Carolina at Jacksonville State, Memphis State at Mississippi, East Carolina at North Carolina State, Texas-Arlington at Southwestern Louisiana, Middle Tenmsee at Tennessee State, Southern Mississippi at Troy State, Eastern Illinois at Illinois State, Eastern Michigan at Northern Illinois, West Texas State at Wichita State and Southern Illinois at New Mexico State.

Staubach will miss Oilers game

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini won't be punting and Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach won't be playing at all Saturday night when the two teams meet in the Astrodome in a National Football League exhibition game.

Danny White will again fill in for Staubach, who is recovering from a leg injury in hopes of being ready for the Cowboys' final preseason game Sept. 8 against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Pastorini, who starts a controversy almost every time he opens his mouth, reacted to the waiving of two prospective punters Thursday by saying he would not handle Oiler punting chores unless he got extra pay.

Oiler Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips said he never had any plans to use Pastorini as a punter and signed free agent Rich Sanger to punt against the Cowboys.

Phillips says he understands his quarterback.

"They (some of Pastorini's statements) don't always come out like he means them," Phillips said of his disgruntled signal caller, who has asked repeatedly to be traded. "He may say he's not going to do it but it's what he does that counts. He'll do whatever is necessary to help this team.

"He is one of the few guys in the league that if you say, 'Dan we really need you to play split receiver for three plays or make a tackle on the kickoff,' he'll do it. You just have to ask him."

After hearing that punter Danny Lee, who had been used in Houston's previous exhibition games, had been cut along with Mike Green, another punting prospect, Pastorini however had said he wanted more compensation.

"This is my option season and I don't intend to risk my career by punting," Pastorini said. "You're naked back there. Anybody that wants to can put me out and all it's gonna cost them is a 15-yard penalty."

Phillips said he is sticking to his preseason plan of finding a punter. "We don't want to take the change of the quarterback getting hit and also losing the punter like happened last year," Phillips said.

Pastorini doubled as the Oiler punter last season until he was sidelined for three games with broken ribs. His career average is 39.9 yards per punt but it dipped to 36.7 last year.

Dallas comes into the game with a 2-2 exhibition record while the Oilers are 1-3 after Monday's 17-3 victory over San Francisco.

Oiler running backs Ronnie Coleman and Fred Willis, starters last year, will be starting for the first time as a unit this season. Coleman has been recovering from hepatitis and Willis is recuperating from a shoulder injury.

Rookie running backs Tim Wilson and Rob Carpenter, among the biggest surprises of the Oilers training camp, have handled starting duties in previous games.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry will start Robert Newhouse and Preston Pearson in the backfield with White but rookie sensation Tony Dorsett won't be on the sidelines too long.

Dorsett showed why the Cowboys made him their first round draft choice last week when he rushed 99 yards in Dallas' 23-21 victory over Baltimore.

Red Sox nip Tribe

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox learned simple arithmetic the hard way: .500 ball at home is not good enough.

The Red Sox finished a 5-5 stand at Fenway Park with a 31 victory over the Cleveland Indians Thursday, but there was little to cheer. The stand cost them three games, as they fell 3½ behind the first-place New York Yankees in the American League East.

"We have to snap out of this win one, lose one habit," veteran Carl Yastrzemski said before the Red Sox left on an eight-game road trip, a tough journey which could determine the team's pennant hopes.

"We're going to have to win two out of three in Texas and four out of five in Toronto on this trip," Yaz said. "We're going to have to get some good pitching and good hitting. There's still plenty of time to make a good run at it.

"The Yankees have played good baseball. No one can deny that. But they could go into a spin the same as we did. You never know. We have five games left with the Yankees and we have to do well on this road trip to give ourselves a chance."

"We've been struggling and it's a must that we have a good road trip," Manager Don Zimmer said. "That's all there is to it. There's only one month to go and every game is important."

"We just have to have a good road trip," said second baseman Denny Doyle. "We can't have another (1-6) disaster-like we had the last trip. We have to forget about the Yankees, take all games one at a time and win them one at a time."

Yastrzemski, steadily moving up on baseball's all-time leaders in a several offensive departments, led the way as the Red Sox beat Cleveland Thursday. He had a double and two singles, drove in a run, scored once, stole a base and threw out a runner at third to kill a possible big inning.

In the only other American League game, Milwaukee blanked Detroit 1-0, behind the pitching of Jerry Augustine and Ed Rodriguez. Augustine pitched 82-3 innings of five-hit ball before Rodriguez got the final out, earning his second save of the year. Ed Kirkpatrick doubled in the Brewers' run.

Bullpups nip Lee, 20-15

By BOB DILLON

Halfback Billy Applin rushed for 151 yards and scored three touchdowns Thursday night to pace the Midland Bullpups to a 20-15 victory over the Robert E. Lee Stonewall Brigade in junior varsity football action in Memorial Stadium.

While Applin, a 175-pound sophomore was impressing the fans for the Pups, Bill McPherson a 6-1, 180-pound junior quarterback and transfer from Denton, was doing some things well for the Brigade.

McPherson tossed a pair of TD passes to end Tommy Williams during the exciting contest which was the season opener for both teams.

Applin showed the fans what he could do on the very first play from scrimmage when he skipped 60 yards for a TD for the Bullpups. John Schwartz booted the extra point and Coach Stan Moore's Pups led, 7-0, with 11:46 left in the opening period.

On Lee's first posession, McPherson hit end Joe Windsor with a 46-yard pass, but Applin picked off a McPherson aerial moments later at the Midland 14.

Midland quarterback Tommy Sommers cranked up the Pups again and moved them from their own 35 to the Lee 21 where McPherson, playing safety, picked off a Sommers pass to blunt the drive.

Mark Carr of MHS pounced on a Lee fumble moments later at the Lee 38 and on the next play, Applin scooted 38 yards to pay dirt to make it 13-0. Schwartz' kick made it 14-0 with 5:44 left in the second period.

A 23-yard pass from McPherson to Williams, got Lee on the move and five plays later, he dialed Williams' number again and Williams broke a tackle and stormed into the end zone from 13 yards out. McPherson split the uprights to make it 14-7 with 1:46 left in the first half.

Midland could have taken a bigger lead into the dressing room at halftime, but Applin dropped a sure TD toss from Sommers late in the second period.

Curtis Deary gave the Pups a break in the third period when he intercepted a McPherson pass at the Lee 34. Five plays later, Applin scored from 18 yards out, but this time, Schwartz' kick was low, making it 20-7 with 8:18 left in the period.

Lee came back in the final minute of play in the last period with McPherson hitting Wade Cartwright on passes of 39 and 28 yards to the MHS seven where he hit Williams with no time left on the clock for the score. Lee tacked on two points when it faked the extra point with Tony Thurman racing in for the two-pointer and the final 20-15 score.

Cliff Barnett, McPherson, Windsor, Steve Carter, Craig Ellis and Dennis Reeves, stood out on defense for the Stonewall Brigade while Steve Mills, Applin, Jeff Robnett and Chris Sliger, all played well for the Pups.

End Jerry Hollums latched on to several passes from Sommers as the Pups showed a balanced attack.

Midland doesn't play again until Sept. 15 when the Pups travel to Monahans for a 7 p.m. contest with the Lobo JV while Lee plays Pecos here at 7 p.m. next Thursday in its next outing under the guidence of Ernie Johnson and Tim Whalen.

Wade, Evert advance

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Virginia Wade turned away the adventuring Renee Richards; Chris Evert thrashed her first-round opponent.

And the two top male seeds, Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors, flicked away their rivals like pieces of dust, despite injuries that delayed their first appearances.

Dr. Richards, the 43-year-old transsexual who went to court for the right to play here, got her chance Thursday, but lost to the Wimbledon champion, 6-1, 6-4. The second set gave ca[illegible]rm as Dr. Richards took the fourth and fifth games before Ms. Wade regained her service.

Miss Evert disposed of Sharon Walsh of Mill Valley, Calif., 6-0, 6-1, and looked as though she were doing little more than a light workout in the 90-degree muggy air.

Top-seeded Borg overcame an aching shoulder to eliminate Trey Waltke of St. Louis and defending champion Connors, whose back had ailed him for several days, set aside Jasjit Singh of Grossinger, N.Y., 6-2, 6-0.

Borg, Connors and Miss Evert faced second-round opponents today. Borg was to meet John James of Australia, while Connors plays Bob Lutz of San Clemente, Calif., tonight. Miss Evert was to battle Pam Whytcross of Australia.

Dr. Richards clearly was nervous as Ms. Wade bounced about the court accurately returning and delivering piercing volleys.

But she was smiling and dignified after the match as she said, "I can't think of losing 6-1, 6-4 as a victory of any kind, moral or otherwise. But it was certainly a big experience for me."

"I'm in very good condition," she said. "But it's not all physical; it's partially mental. And nervous exhaustion can take its toll physically just the way running from side to side does during a match."

Dr. Richards has had an emotionally torturous year since she underwent an operation to change her sex. The Open is the first major tournament she has been allowed to enter as a woman. A state Supreme Court judge said the chromosome tests required of her before were discriminatory.

And Dr. Richards stood in some awe of her opponent.

"Virginia got all of the short balls," she noted. "I just wasn't able to keep her back on the baseline, either with my ground strokes or my serve."

Miss Evert, starting her first major tournament since losing startlingly to Ms. Wade in the Wimbledon semifinals, was frank about her feeling that the Open will be essential to maintaining her dominance in the women's field.

"It means a lot to me," she said. "I'm really psyched for this. Ever since the day I lost Wimbledon, I've been looking forward to coming here."

Fritsch boots Rams

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Place-kicking specialist Toni Fritsch booted a 22-yard field goal on the final play of the game to bring the San Diego Chargers a 26-25 victory over arch-rival Los Angeles Thursday night in their National Football League pre-season meeting.

The triumph brought revenge for quarterback James Harris, traded by the Rams to the Chargers after last season. Harris threw three touchdown passes this time plus a key toss in the winning drive.

The Harris touchdown passes covered 24 yards to Chuck Bradley, and 7 and, 34 yards to the fleet Johnny Rodgers, who also joined the Chargers just this season.

On the closing drive, Rodgers returned a kickoff 31 yards to the San Diego 38 and also caught a 16-yard pass from Harris that moved the Chargers to the Rams' three-yard line.

San Diego's Chargers, coached by Tommy Prothro, who was fired as the Rams' coach five years ago, grabbed a 14-0 lead and led by one point at the half, 17-16.

The Rams, quartebacked by Joe Namath, scored a touchdown in the third quarter to move ahead 22-17.

The long Harris-to-Rodgers pass sent the Chargers ahead before Tom Dempsey kicked a 35-yard field goal with 9:17 gone in the fourth period, boosting the Rams to their 25-23 lead.

Then came Dempsey's kickoff to Rodgers and the march that brought revenge for Harris and Prothro and the third victory in five preseason outings for San Diego.

Los Angeles, the Western Division champs of the NFC last season, dropped to 1-4 in this preseason.

Pat Haden, the 1976 rookie who took over from Harris as the Rams' starting quarterback late in the season, threw two touchdown passes, 32 yards to Terry Nelson and 9 yards to Harold Jackson.
