Panel blocks 'Net indecency law

Judges feel Internet deserves highest free-speech protection

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A panel of judges Wednesday blocked the new federal law against indecency on the Internet, declaring the freewheeling global computer network deserves the highest level of free-speech protection the courts can muster.

"Just as the strength of the Internet is chaos, so the strength of our liberty depends upon the chaos and cacophony of the unfettered speech that the First Amendment protects," the panel of three federal judges unanimously decided in the first major ruling on free speech on the Internet.

The panel said the Internet is entitled to at least as much protection under the First Amendment as newspapers receive.

Ira Glasser, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, one of the parties challenging the Communications Decency Act, was overjoyed. "This is as historic a case as we have had in our history on the First Amendment," he declared.

"This is a victory for anyone who cares about freedom of expression or the future of the Internet," said Bill Gates of Microsoft, another plaintiff. "Technolo-

Disney boycott

NEW ORLEANS — Roger Cheramie of Soda Springs, Idaho, planned to have The Disney Channel removed from his television as soon as he returned home. Mickey Mouse will have no place in the home of Cindy Kettleman, mother of boys ages 2 and 4. They say they will heed the call of the Southern Baptist Convention, which voted Wednesday to urge its 16 million members to boycott the Walt Disney Co.'s theme parks, films, toys — all things Disney.

Budget approval

WASHINGTON — The House narrowly approved a budget eliminating federal deficits by 2002 on Wednesday night after Republican leaders scrambled for two days to quell an unexpected rebellion by freshmen and conservatives. The 216-211 vote narrowly averted an embarrassing public repudiation of GOP leaders by dissidents objecting to a temporary deficit increase in the plan's first year.

Military's exercises turn airport into warlike zone

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The U.S. Air Force's intermittent dispatch of fuel-laden, air-to-air refueling tankers into the skies, the simulated strafing and ground fire, and the booms of bombs and cannon fire are defining Midland International Airport as a warlike military zone.

"It's technology like this ... that is going to prevent war," said Paul Erdmann, Midland's liaison between the Air Force and the airport. "When you are prepared, the bullies won't pick on you."

More than 800 Air National Guardsmen and Air Force regulars, who this week are living out of olive-drab tents on the airport's western edge, sustain and protect flights of the four-engine Boeing KC-135 tankers assigned here for the mission's duration.

Doctors blame TV for public's unrealistic beliefs about CPR

By Daniel Haney
AP Medical Editor

BOSTON — On television, CPR is miraculously effective. Heroic chest thumping and electrical jolts restore young victims of shootings, car wrecks and near-drownings to normal, happy lives.

In the real world, though, cardiopulmonary resuscitation is usually done on old people with bad hearts. And most of the time, they die anyway.

In a medical journal this week, three doctors contend TV's portrayal of CPR is bad medicine for the public.

The problem, they say, is that these hospital and rescue shows are so filled with seemingly authentic detail that people may think the portrayal of CPR is accurate, too. And this complicates the job of doctors who try to convince the terminally ill that they should forgo CPR if their hearts stop beating in the hospital.

"Our concern is the 85-year-old woman with breast cancer who may extrapolate what's happening on TV to her situation, although her chances of successful CPR are extraordinarily lower," Dr. James A. Tulsky said.

CSI plans to expand Midland plant to support growth, meet demands

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Compressor Systems Inc. (CSI) on Wednesday announced plans to expand its Midland assembly plant and create 40 new skilled jobs in the area.

Johnny Warren, CSI chairman, said the expansion, which will add 21,000 square feet to the company's present 16,000 square feet, would enable the Midland plant to accommodate the largest gas compression equipment being manufactured today. It will offer large bay door access; crane capacity will be increased by 270,000 tons.

In addition to the planned expansion, the company recently renovated a 13,000-square-foot adjacent building that had been occupied by West Texas Cat.

"This space will be utilized for fabrication of our small compressor units, particularly screw compressors and piping assembly for all departments," said Scott Matthews, president of CSI, the largest supplier of Ariel and Frick compressors to the natural gas industry.

"This expansion is vital for CSI to continue to support the growth of our key alliances and meet the needs of an expanding customer base," Warren said.

FBI, Freemen position themselves for possible end to 80-day standoff

JORDAN, Mont. (AP) — With the blessing of a jailed Freemen leader, FBI agents and members of the extremist group positioned themselves Wednesday for a dramatic surrender ending the 80-day standoff.

A flurry of meetings took place within the compound, and a 16-year-old girl was brought to the gate and picked up by FBI agents. She was the last child to leave, and a prosecutor said she would be taken into state custody.

Karl Ohs, a Montana legislator who has been acting as a mediator, was flying into Jordan on Wednesday for what he hoped would be the final negotiations this morning.

At a jailhouse meeting in Billings on Monday, Freeman Edwin Clark won approval for the surrender plans from LeRoy Schweitzer, a Freeman leader whose arrest March 25 started the standoff.

"The agreement is moving forward," and the surrender could begin as early as mid-day today, a source familiar with the Cheering as Russian President Boris Yeltsin appears on stage, supporters wave their flags atop a bus stop to escape the sea of people in Moscow's Red Square, Wednesday.

Yeltsin fills Red Square with fans, rock bands

MOSCOW (AP) — Red Square was packed. More than 100,000 Russians crowded near the colorful onion-shaped domes of St. Basil's Cathedral on Wednesday to cheer Boris Yeltsin and a lineup of rock bands four days before presidential elections.

The feel-good campaign event for Yeltsin came just a day after a subway bomb killed four people and wounded 12 in southern Moscow, and truckloads of soldiers warily monitored the crowd.

"I have faith in you people. I have faith in the young generation," Yeltsin told the crowd on Russian Independence Day, a holiday he created four years ago to celebrate Russia's declaration of independence from the Soviet Union.

Yeltsin — who led Russia's drive for independence in 1991 — is in a close race Sunday against a revived Communist Party that wants to restore many of the policies of the former Soviet state.

Communists and ultranationalist Vladimir Zhirinovsky held smaller rallies Wednesday.

Many of Russia's top rock bands were recruited to play at the Red Square event, where Yeltsin received endorsements from various political figures.

Yeltsin's campaign has targeted young people, who are believed to be more sympathetic to his democratic and free-market reforms. He stresses the hardships and repressions of Soviet times, a theme picked up by many of those attending the rally.

"We used to live even worse before," said Dmitry Teryekhin, a 22-year-old subway construction worker, standing in the hot sun near St. Basil's. He said he supports Yeltsin even though he hasn't received his state wages since April.

"When I started working there, nobody owned a car, but now every third person is driving his own car," Teryekhin said.

The government took no chances on poor attendance. At least one Moscow institute received a telegram from local officials ordering them to produce 20 people and two flags for the Red Square event.

Yeltsin's opponents, meanwhile, say June 12 marks not independence but humiliating collapse. They view the fall of the Soviet Union and Russia's subsequent struggles with democracy as a story of decline — decline of the army, industry, culture and the quality of everyday life.

"The Yeltsinites are crooks, they're mafiosi," said 74-year-old Nina Alpatova, a gray-haired high school teacher attending a rally by the hard-line communist faction Workers' Russia.

"They have destroyed everything."

About 1,500 pro-Communist demonstrators attended the rally at Lubyanka Square, in front of the old KGB headquarters. Many carried red Soviet flags and distributed Stalinist or anti-Semitic literature.

A few blocks away, in front of the Bolshoi Theater, about 2,000 people listened to Zhirinovsky denounce the West and the "democrats."

"This is not a holiday for our party. It's a day of mourning for the collapse of the Soviet Union," said Viktor Ivaneyev, a 43-year-old security guard.

Victims' families, survivors of mall explosion share shock, relief

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — The teen-ager chatted happily about the future as she headed for the mall on the eve of Brazil's "Sweethearts Day." She had a new boyfriend, and was buying him a present.

"Today, she was going to bring him home to meet the family," her father, Euclides Breda, said Wednesday. Tears streaked his face as he stared down at her coffin.

Fernanda Breda, a 17-year-old high school student, was among 39 people killed when a gas explosion tore through the Plaza Shopping Center at lunchtime Tuesday, burying shoppers under tons of concrete. Hundreds more were injured.

Rescue teams using sniffer dogs and sensors searched through the night for survivors in the mall in Osasco, an industrial suburb of 800,000 people 10 miles west of Sao Paulo. Bulldozers rumbled in to clear the rubble on Wednesday, and hopes dimmed of finding anyone alive.

Many of the bodies were taken to a city gymnasium for a memorial service. Thousands of mourners filed past to pay their respects, crying and embracing each other in a mix of shock, bewilderment and relief to be alive.

Valdir Tadesco couldn't get over the irony.

His friend Nilson Costa da Silva had at last gotten a loan to buy a house and wanted to celebrate. So he invited his wife, Elisabette, and their daughters Raquel, 11, and Jessica, 3, for lunch at the mall.

"It was the family's happiest moment," said Tadesco, standing beside the four coffins. "Now the family is gone."

Jennifer Trindade Milanesi, 16, and a classmate had asked to leave school early to have lunch in the mall with a friend, Andrea Brito da Costa. The principal said no.

"That probably saved our lives," Milanesi said. "If she had said yes, we wouldn't be here today." Da Costa was killed.

Shopping malls are enormously popular among young, middle-class Brazilians. The Plaza Shopping Center was a shortcut for students of the nearby Antonio Raposo Tavares High School — nine students were reported missing.

Officials said that at the time of the blast there were about 2,000 people in the single-story mall, a 20,000-square-yard complex with 200 stores, three movie theaters and a parking lot on the roof.

Witnesses said the explosion began from below. It buckled the floor, blew two huge holes in the concrete wall and caused a corner of the roof to collapse.

Authorities said the cause was either bottled cooking gas that leaked into a space under the floor or natural methane formed by the landfill beneath the mall.

"It was definitely a gas explosion. What we don't know yet is what kind of gas it was," said Roberto Luiz Ayres, head of the criminology institute that is investigating the explosion.

Although the mall was built barely a year ago, state police said there was no suspicion of faulty workmanship.

Ruben da Silva Eugenio, 19, was in a fast-food restaurant with his niece when the explosion knocked him sideways. He found himself face-down in the dirt.

"I heard concrete crashing down, and a big slab formed a roof over me," the high-school student recalled. "A few more inches and it would have hit my head, but it held firm, and that's what saved my life."

What he saw next, he said, was "a scene from hell."

More than 500 people were treated for injuries. Hospitals taped to the walls lists of those hurt and descriptions of their injuries.

Extended NATO air or ground mission possible in Bosnia, Perry says

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Raising the possibility of an extended Bosnia deployment, Defense Secretary William Perry said Wednesday he would recommend that American forces, possibly including ground troops, take part if NATO decides "further action is needed to preserve the peace."

Hours before arriving for talks with NATO defense ministers, Perry told reporters traveling with him that the allies would wait until autumn to make such decisions.

If NATO does decide a ground force is needed in Bosnia in 1997 to prevent renewed war, his recommendation to President Clinton would be for the United States to be a part of it. He also said it is possible air power alone can do the job.

Perry said "no one is even close" to deciding the size, makeup or location of any follow-on force to the current NATO-led peacekeeping mission in Bosnia. He also said he strongly doubts the Bosnian Serbs, Muslims and Croats would renew their war next year after the 60,000-strong NATO peacekeeping force leaves.

Yet Perry's comments were his most direct on choices facing the Clinton administration and the NATO allies at the Bosnian peace mission's approximate midpoint.

At the White House, presidential press secretary Mike McCurry said the administration has not changed its plan to complete the mission in Bosnia by about December. He said Perry was "just speculating" on decisions NATO might make in consideration of the mission's needs in 1997 and beyond.

"The timetable remains the one that the president as commander in chief has already outlined," McCurry said. "We are far from a point where we can properly assess the need for such a mission."

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., who opposed U.S. participation in the Bosnia mission, said Perry appears to be reneging on the administration's promise to get out by the end of the year.

"This seems like they're setting the stage for an excuse to leave the troops there longer," Solomon said in an interview. He added, however, that he could consider use of limited American air power in Bosnia beyond December.

Clinton said at a news conference with two European Union leaders that he intends to stick to the timetable, a year ending Dec. 20. "Some draw-down can begin" in December, he said.

He called Bosnia peacemaking the most important achievement of the trans-Atlantic alliance. "Much remains to be done, but much has been done," he said. "There is peace, businesses are starting again and some refugees are returning home."

Perry cited two possible means of applying NATO muscle to deter aggression: allied air power, presumably from bases in nearby Italy, and a "rapid-reaction" force of ground troops that might be based in Bosnia or nearby.

He seemed to prefer the air option. That would be a powerful deterrent to renewed civil warfare even without allied ground forces, Perry said.

Those options confront Clinton with a critical decision to extend a U.S. troop deployment he promised would end in December. It already is clear that while the current mission is likely to end officially on schedule, the withdrawal will drag on beyond the first of the year.

Protestants come back to table with U.S. envoy at head of talks

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Bad blood and belligerence have marked the first three days of peace talks in Northern Ireland — and supporters of the IRA haven't even been admitted to the negotiations.

The British and Irish governments Wednesday won their fight to keep the talks alive with U.S. envoy George Mitchell at the helm. But the stage was set for more battles after Protestant hard-liners walked out, before finally returning.

"That was just the first round," warned a red-eyed David Trimble, leader of the largest Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists.

Sinn Fein, the second-largest party on the Catholic side, is barred from negotiations until the Irish Republican Army calls a cease-fire. A previous truce ended Feb. 9 with a truck bomb that killed two men in London.

Negotiations are scheduled to continue Monday.

Trimble's party, which is committed to preserving Northern Ireland's union with Britain, approved a midnight compromise accepting Mitchell as chairman. Protestants have accused the Clinton administration of being pro-Catholic.

The talks are aimed at finding a way to govern Northern Ireland that is acceptable to the province's pro-British Protestant majority and its Irish Catholic minority — and end violence that has killed 3,200 people since 1969.

So far, however, the fiercest arguments have been within the Protestant camp.

The Rev. Ian Paisley and other hard-line Protestant politicians condemned Trimble for returning to the talks.

"You have lied to the people of Ulster, but the people have not been fooled," said a member of Paisley's party, the Rev. William McCrea, interrupting Trimble in a TV interview.

Trimble, a quick-tempered lawyer, momentarily grabbed McCrea by the shoulders, then let go. The two traded barbs all the way to the door.

Many Protestants fear that U.S. involvement will mean pressure to grant concessions to the IRA-Sinn Fein movement, which wants to end British rule and unite Northern Ireland with the predominantly Catholic Republic of Ireland.

ETIMESGUT MILITARY CAMP, Turkey — Four veterans of Bosnia's bloodshed snap to attention.

"On the tank," a military instructor barks in Turkish. The interpreter quickly passes the order along to a Bosnian officer, who shouts in his own language: "On the tank."

The four soldiers spring onto the dark green M-60A3 battle tank and slither down to their posts.

"Five seconds," nods Col. Sadik Yurtsev, the camp's head of military training. "Pretty good."

Much more is being molded here than a crack tank unit. Taking shape is a disciplined and well-equipped army — and with it, a linchpin of the Bosnian peace accord and of American strategy in the wreckage of the former Yugoslavia.

On two camps in the high plains of central Turkey, the first group of 188 fighters is being trained on some of the high-tech weapons promised to the future Muslim-Croat federation army. Eighty M-113 armored personnel carriers. Forty-five M60 tanks with laser-tracking systems.

The $98.4-million, U.S.-made arsenal is the foundation of the American-led program to build the federation military into a serious fighting force.

The plan has two objectives: to create a military force to balance the Bosnian Serb army and, hopefully, to prevent a mini-Cold War from spinning out of control.

By taking charge, Washington also wants to squeeze out any peacetime influence of Iran, which led the network of arms smuggling to the outgunned Bosnian Muslims during the 43-month war.

On May 14, 94 soldiers began three months of training on the M60 tank at Etimesgut base, 12 miles west of Ankara. The same number started artillery training in Polatli, 45 miles southwest of the capital.

"The goal," Maj. Gen. Erol Tutal says at the Etimesgut base, "is that the training here will help close the bleeding wound that has been Bosnia."

"I see it. I got it."

The soldier fixes the sights and fires. The chopper explodes in diamond-shaped fragments. The pale green computer-generated sky is clear.

In a small air-conditioned room, M60 tank commanders and gunners practice on a sophisticated simulator. Images of helicopters, truck convoys, soldiers and other tanks appear on the scopes. "Battle conditions," says Yurtsev.

Many of the soldiers have experience with battle, but none have any with the M60s.

Babic rubs his chin, scarred from a bit of shrapnel. Both he and his father fought the Serbs. His father didn't make it.

"Revenge?" he says, snapping back from his memories. "No, we're not looking for another fight. We just have to show the Serbs we are strong. That's enough."

They all see the irony: getting quality training and guns after the peace deal is signed. With a U.N.-imposed arms embargo during the war, only covert shipments of weapons made it into Bosnia. Now that there is peace, the weapons are coming in.

European leaders are worried that adding more weapons to the Bosnian tinderbox is a dangerous proposition. Europe has refused to chip in for the $800 million the Pentagon estimates is needed to make the federation's army a credible threat.

The soldiers see it differently.

"When we were weak there was war," says a 25-year-old tank gunner, Ino Spahic. "Doesn't it make sense to be strong?"

WEATHER WATCH

Today, slight chance of showers

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a less than 20 percent chance of afternoon showers and thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 90s and winds from the southeast at 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a less than 20 percent chance of rain and a low around 70.

Friday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a less than 20 percent chance of afternoon showers and thunderstorms and a high in the upper 90s.

The high for Wednesday was 97, compared to the record high for that date of 104, set in 1947.

Wednesday's low was 70, compared to the record low of 55 set in 1979.

STATE

Hail up to golfball-size and heavy rains fell Wednesday as fast-moving thunderstorms moved across West and North Texas, with more storms expected by early today.

Rainfalls totals ranged from a trace to more than one inch around Dallas and Fort Worth. Winds up to 60 mph were also reported, the National Weather Service said.

Winds from the storms damaged trees in parts of the Panhandle and hail up to two inches was expected in Fannin and northern Grayson counties of North Texas.

Meanwhile, isolated showers developed along the gulf coast.

Afternoon temperatures warmed to the 80s and 90s across most of the state, contributing to development of thunderstorms. It was a cool 72 degrees at College Station.

Winds were southerly to southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph along the coast and 5 to 10 mph elsewhere.

Forecasters said isolated to scattered afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms can again be expected in much of West Texas through Friday.

High temperatures should range from the upper 80s along the coast to low and mid-90s and near 106 degrees in the Big Bend valleys, while lows should be in the 60s and 70s.

Winds will be southerly to southeasterly at 5 to 10 mph inland and 10 to 15 mph along the coast.

NATION

Storms packing 60 mph winds and golfball-sized hail struck the Plains on Wednesday, while more rain fell in the East.

The West was once again tranquil and warm. Temperatures were over 100 in the desert Southwest.

Severe thunderstorms raced through southern Kansas and northwestern Oklahoma in the early morning hours. Buffalo, Okla., reported hail up to nearly an inch in diameter.

A line of thunderstorms from West Virginia into northern Alabama and Mississippi weren't as severe, but contained significant rainfall, flooding areas of north-central Mississippi and northeastern Alabama. Flooding also was reported in southeastern Kentucky, which was doused by heavy rains since Tuesday night.

Another area of thunderstorms was developing across north-Central Ohio and was expected to move into northwestern Pennsylvania.

Daytona Beach, Fla., measured 3.64 inches of rain in 24 hours. Other amounts included 2.14 inches at Paducah, Ky., and 1.75 inches at Miami.

A weak cold front extended from western Minnesota through eastern Nebraska into northern Colorado and southwestern Wyoming, where it became stationary into southern Idaho.

The tranquil weather in the West was to be disrupted by scattered afternoon thundershowers in the forecast for New Mexico, Arizona and Utah.

Temperatures were in the 60s and 70s along the West Coast.

Convention delegates urge Baptists to boycott Disney parks, toys, films

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Roger Cheramie of Soda Springs, Idaho, planned to have The Disney Channel removed from his television as soon as he returned home.

Huey Bratton of Atlanta said his 6-year-old son would not see the upcoming release of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Mickey Mouse will have no place in the home of Cindy Kettleman, mother of boys ages 2 and 4.

They say they will heed the call of the Southern Baptist Convention, which voted Wednesday to urge its 16 million members to boycott the Walt Disney Co.'s theme parks, films, toys — all things Disney.

Convention delegates said the company has moved too far away from traditional family values by extending health benefits to companions of homosexual employees, hosting gay-themed events at its theme parks and releasing controversial movies with adult themes and language.

"We're through with the mouse until the company cleans up its act," said Gary Hughes, one of more than 13,000 delegates who voted for a boycott.

Although many of the rank and file indicated they would begin their boycott immediately, members of the committee that authored the resolution said the measure would take effect only if Disney ignores their call for changes.

"The sense of the committee is that it's a provisional call for a boycott," said Bill Merrell. "If Disney says, 'We hear you and we want to make an effort to cooperate with you,' I think we would be happy to talk to them and work it out."

The resolution does not specify when the boycott would begin, and Merrell said there was no timetable.

What it does say is, in part: "In recent years, the Disney Co. has given the appearance that the promotion of homosexuality is more important than its historic commitment to traditional family values."

Disney officials said it was baffled by the resolution.

"We find it curious that a group that claims to espouse family values would vote to boycott the world's largest producer of wholesome family entertainment," the Disney Co. said in a one-paragraph statement issued Wednesday afternoon.

Some of the Baptists' objections to Disney have to do with films it has produced or released in recent years.

Disney acquired Miramax Films in 1993, and several films it handled have come under criticism from the Christian right. The controversial titles include "Priest," a movie about a gay Roman Catholic cleric, and "Kids," a look at adolescent sex.

Miramax distributed, but did not make, the hit art films "The Postman," "Like Water for Chocolate," "The Crying Game" and "The Piano." The highest-grossing Miramax releases include "The Crow," starring the late Brandon Lee, and the violent but highly praised "Pulp Fiction."

Southern Baptists also object to the employment of film maker Victor Salva, a convicted child molester, as director of the recent Disney film "Powder."

"What is so deeply distressing to us is that the source is Disney, which has always been so family oriented," said Nancy Victory, president of the resolution committee.

Confusion about when the boycott would begin, or how complete it would be continued as delegates and officials discussed it. Even the Rev. Wiley Drake, who changed the resolution from one critical of Disney to one calling for a boycott, was not ready to drop the company from his life completely.

Drake, whose Buena Park, Calif., church is 6 1/2 miles from Disneyland, would stop buying Disney products, but would continue to go to the theme park.

"We have at least a dozen family passes to Disneyland and I'm not going to throw them away. They cost too much money," Drake said.

Correction

Midland school board trustees approved a student code of conduct Tuesday night requiring that students' shorts and skirts be no shorter than 3 inches above the knee, not 3 1/2 inches as reported in Wednesday's newspaper.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

SPEECH: Judges back freedom on Internet

gy can provide a much more effective safeguard without restricting the free flow of ideas and opinions on the Internet."

The government has said it will appeal directly to the U.S. Supreme Court, but following the ruling, Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said no decision had been made about the next move.

"There are a number of avenues to follow, of which the Supreme Court is only one," Stern said.

Supporters of the law were undaunted.

"This wasn't unanticipated with the direction and liberal leanings of these judges. We fully anticipated it going to the Supreme Court level and ultimately we believe we will be victorious," said Mike Russell, spokesman for the Christian Coalition.

News of the ruling spread quickly on the Internet. Within a half-hour, 4,000 World Wide Web sites linked to a page run by the Voters Telecommunications Watch were trumpeting the news with a graphic that read: "Free Speech!"

"It was like fireworks going off," said Shabbir Safdar of the VTW.

Although Web pages set up by the Christian Coalition, the Family Research Council and the American Family Coalition contained information on the CDA, none had been updated to reflect Wednesday's ruling.

Signed into law by President Clinton on Feb. 8, the CDA makes it a crime to make "indecent" or "patently offensive" words or pictures available online where children can find them. Violators could get up to two years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Other laws already make child pornography illegal and are not affected by Wednesday's ruling.

'As the most participatory form of mass speech yet developed, the Internet deserves the highest protection from governmental intrusion.'
— panel of judges

The law was challenged by 57 plaintiffs, including civil libertarians, computer businesses, online services, newspapers and librarians.

The judges issued a preliminary injunction blocking enforcement. It holds the force of law while two lawsuits challenging the Communications Decency Act wend their way through the courts.

"As the most participatory form of mass speech yet developed, the Internet deserves the highest protection from governmental intrusion," the judges wrote.

If the Constitution protects the print media to preserve diversity in ideas, then "a medium that does capture comprehensive debate and does allow for the expression of all viewpoints should receive at least the same protection from intrusion," U.S. District Judge Stewart Dalzell wrote.

The plaintiffs had contended the law was too vague and feared it may cover materials with serious literary, artistic or intellectual value, including works of art and information on abortion, AIDS, safe sex and breast cancer — material constitutionally protected for adults.

The government, noting that cyberspace images flow on telecommunication lines, had argued that the Internet resembles the broadcast media, which are regulated by the government, and that the law is needed to protect children.

The judges, however, said the Internet resembles neither print nor broadcast but is a "wholly unique medium."

"The Internet is a far more speech-enhancing medium than print," the judges said. "Because it would necessarily affect the Internet itself, the CDA would necessarily reduce the speech available for adults on the medium. This is a constitutionally intolerable result."

And, comparing the Internet with broadcast media, they said that obtaining information on the Internet requires a series of steps more deliberate than "merely turning a dial."

They said education and the use of widely available software to block pornographic sites would be far better methods of shielding youngsters. The judges also noted that about 40 percent of Internet transmissions originate overseas, where the decency law would have no teeth.

The panel appeared to agree with the plaintiffs that the problem of cyberporn was exaggerated by conservative religious organizations, such as the Family Research Council and the Christian Coalition.

"There was no evidence that sexually oriented material was the primary type of content on this new medium," the judges wrote. "Communications on the Internet do not 'invade' an individual's home or appear on one's screen unbidden. Users seldom encounter content 'by accident.'"

They noted that most sexually explicit images are preceded by warnings.

"They used good, sound — almost obvious — First Amendment law," said Robert D. Sack, a First Amendment specialist not involved with the case. "It's hard not to believe that the people who drafted that statute knew that when they drafted it."

Sen. Jim Exon, D-Neb., author of the legislation, said the judges took the "ACLU line that anything goes on the Internet."

The Justice Department said it is reviewing the ruling. "We believe the statute can be applied in a constitutional manner to assist parents in protecting children from sexually explicit materials on the Internet," said spokesman Joe Krovisky in Washington.

The decision was issued by Dolores K. Sloviter, chief judge of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and U.S. District Judges Ronald L. Buckwalter and Dalzell. The law had specified that any challenges must first go to a panel made up of an appeals judge and two district judges.

(From 1A)

Tulsky and colleagues from the Veterans Administration and Duke University watched a season of "ER," "Chicago Hope" and "Rescue 911." They analyzed the shows' handling of CPR in an article in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

They counted 60 cases of CPR on 97 programs. Among their conclusions:

■ On TV, only 17 percent of people getting CPR were elderly. In reality, cardiac arrest is much more common in old people than in any other age group.

■ On TV, three-quarters of the cases of cardiac arrest resulted from accidents, stabbings, lightning strikes and other non-cardiac disasters. In reality, between 75 percent and 95 percent are triggered by underlying heart disease.

■ On TV, two-thirds of the CPR patients survived. In reality, survival is between 7 percent and 15 percent — and that's when patients' hearts stop beating in the hospital. When accident victims arrive in the emergency room in cardiac arrest, survival is close to zero.

Moreover, as dramatic as CPR looks on TV, the shows probably don't convey how gruesome this procedure can be.

"Resuscitation is an ugly thing," Tulsky said. "It's violent. It's not dignified. It may break bones in the chest. It is not the way we would envision that we would want to die."

Or perhaps survive, either. If the heart is restarted after it has been stopped too long, the victim may suffer permanent brain damage, a fate some would consider worse than death.

The report said TV producers have "a civic responsibility to be more accurate."

Dr. Neal A. Baer, an "ER" co-producer, countered in an editorial in the journal that there is no evidence watching these shows directly affects viewers' personal choices about CPR.

He said "ER" often depicts CPR in trauma cases because of its dramatic impact. "If we were to re-enact a minute-by-minute account of actual events in the emergency department," he said, "we would not have 35 million viewers each week."

Baer also noted that "Rescue 911," by its very nature, depicts amazing medical successes. "It is not, after all, called 'Death 911,'" he said.

However, Dr. Gregory L. Henry, president of the American College of Emergency Physicians, said many people's unrealistic beliefs about CPR are a "tragic consequence" of television, especially when they blame doctors if their elderly relatives don't survive cardiac arrest.

"I'm not in the miracle business. I'm in the technical medical business," Henry said. "By and large, your death is pretty much predictable if you have cardiac arrest."

END: 16-year-old leaves Freemen compound

planning told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

However, a senior federal official in Washington said the agreement remained fragile.

"The standoff could end tomorrow, but that's not certain. We take this one day at a time," that official said.

The surrender plan worked out with the FBI was almost derailed on Wednesday when a farmer tried to begin planting on 2,300 acres of land, adjacent to the Freemen ranch, which he had bought at a foreclosure sale.

"It almost blew the whole thing up," the source familiar with the planning told The Associated Press.

Dean Clark was desperate to plant wheat that would be harvested this fall and help him make payments on the property, which the FBI declared off limits after the Freemen threatened to harm Clark if he set foot on it.

The land had belonged to his grandfather, Emmett Clark, who remains in the compound along with Edwin, Dean's cousin. Dean's father, Richard Clark, is jailed in Billings.

The FBI allowed Dean Clark and several other farmers to bring tractors onto the property after he obtained a state court order forbidding the agency from blocking him out. But agents quickly intervened after a half-dozen Freemen rushed to their sentry hill to watch.

Garfield County Sheriff Charles Phipps, who was executing the court order, said Clark agreed to stop planting "because of some of the things the FBI had going on."

Clark's lawyer, Patrick Kelly, said agents asked him to hold off for one more day.

As for the girl, U.S. Attorney Sherry Scheel Matteucci said she would be put in state custody for now. She was identified as Amanda Michele Kendricks, although she also is known as Ashley Landers and Ashley Taylor.

The Freeman compound, 30 miles northwest of Jordan, has been a sanctuary for her mother, Dana Dudley, and stepfather, Russell Landers, of Four Oaks, N.C., who are facing conspiracy charges in Colorado.

On Tuesday, Edwin Clark was flown to Billings by the FBI to meet with Schweitzer, and later was flown back to the ranch on the Montana plains. Shortly thereafter, most of the Freemen met in a barn to discuss the developments.

At mid-morning Wednesday, a car drove onto the compound, picked up two Freemen at the gate and drove them to the Freemen sentry post on a hill overlooking the compound. Four or five other Freemen already were at the sentry post.

The car later returned to the negotiating table at the compound entrance, where it was met by a vehicle used earlier by the FBI to shuttle negotiators to and from the compound. People got out of the shuttle vehicle, and a 20-minute meeting followed, but reporters watching from a distance of more than two miles couldn't tell who they were.

TRAIN: Military uses airport to prepare troops

(From 1A)

The ground troops' alertness and ability to thwart infiltration of the enemy are challenged in an environment unfamiliar to them, Erdmann said.

The guardsmen have converted rows of tents into a camp replete with the necessities of survival: water-purification systems, showers, kitchens, medical stations, sleeping quarters, command-post cluster and a satellite station.

"They leave the comforts of their own base and move to a place (in Midland) that is more spartan," Erdmann said. "Their specialty is air refueling" for jet fighters, ground-attack aircraft, bombers, reconnaissance aircraft, and even other tankers on extended flights in air-defense missions.

The military men and women, whose skills range from healing wounds and preparing meals to flying and maintaining aircraft, are assigned to the 171st Air Refueling Wing (ARW) in Pittsburgh, according to Tom Perry, whose Avion Flight Centre is refueling the aircraft.

Following the Pittsburgh wing's mission this week, the Air Force's 134th ARW out of Knoxville, Tenn., will conduct a readiness mission here.

The dual missions are tabbed "Operational Readiness Inspections." The efficiency and the effectiveness of the refueling wings will be gauged by the Air Force Inspector General's Air-mobility Command.

Perry estimates that the two wings will take on as much as 700,000 gallons of jet fuel during the missions. Guardsmen, equipment and supplies were flown to Midland in heavy airlifters, such as the Lockheed C-5 Galaxy, the McDonnell Douglas C-17, and the Lockheed C-141 Starlifter. The KC-135 tanker, which is the counterpart of the civilian Boeing 707 of 1956 vintage, carries troops and cargo in its upper decks.

"These operations will have significant impact on the local economy," Perry said.

He said that the inspector general's 50-member staff is staying in Midland-Odessa hotels and that the Air Force buys or rents "a great deal of supplies, vehicles and equipment" from West Texas merchants and suppliers.

Residents should not "come too close to the activity," Perry said in a prepared statement.

"Besides disrupting the important training exercises, it is not safe to get too close to operating military aircraft," he said. "For their own safety, as well as part of their anti-terrorist training activities, Air Force security will not allow bystanders near the training area."

PLAN: CSI to expand its Midland plant

In the past few months the company has formed 12 alliances with major gas producers or gatherers that have dramatically increased demand for compression services.

He said the Midland facility would be fully operational by November and that the company is planning to construct two additional service facilities — one in Victoria and the other in Oklahoma City.

CSI operates 11 regional sales offices and 12 area service facilities with more than 140 technical service representatives throughout the nation. The company employs 390 nationwide; 175 work in the Permian Basin.

Matthews said that with the expansion, CSI will employ a total of 215 in the basin. Current employment is about 50 percent Midland and 50 percent Odessa.

"We will be looking for welders, fitters and assembly personnel," Matthews said. "The economic impact will be substantial. Not only will we increase the local payroll, but with the increased volume of work we will be buying much more from local suppliers and sub-contractors."

In the last five years the company has increased employment from 200 to 390 people nationwide. It has increased its horsepower inventory from 130,000 hp to 200,000 hp. Fabrication horsepower has gone up four times to more than 100,000 hp.

Four die in two highway crashes involving suspected illegal immigrants

SPRING VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Two vans packed with alleged illegal immigrants crashed in separate accidents Wednesday in Southern California and Utah, killing four people and injuring 27.

Three men died in Blanding, Utah, on a remote stretch of highway about 10 miles north of the Arizona border. The driver apparently dozed off and oversteered when he awoke, causing the van to roll over and eject all 18 passengers, said Utah Highway Patrol Sgt. Doug Hall.

All 15 survivors were injured and taken to hospitals. Seven suffered serious head and internal injuries and broken bones. The only woman in the van suffered cuts and bruises. Her husband was among the fatalities.

Hall said the route in Utah's San Juan County is a popular corridor for illegal aliens traveling from Arizona and Texas.

The van's driver acknowledged that the passengers were illegal aliens from Mexico heading to Chicago to find work, state trooper Rick Elderidge said.

In the second accident, a van packed with more than 20 alleged illegal immigrants skidded off a highway 15 miles east of San Diego and slammed into a gas station, killing one man and injuring a dozen others.

"People were staggering out of the van, dazed and injured," said gas station attendant Tommy McMullen, 26, who was behind the counter when the van knocked a truck through the front window. "The van just flew up into the parking lot."

About 20 minutes earlier, U.S. Border Patrol agents had tried to stop the van for a routine inspection. But the van sped away, running a stop sign.

Agents ended their pursuit, said Jim Pilkington, spokesman for the U.S. Border Patrol in San Diego. Because it could create a dangerous situation, agents are not allowed to conduct high-speed chases.

The van later missed a turn, skidded off Highway 94 and careened into the gas station, ramming three customers' vehicles. One crashed through the station's plate glass window and narrowly missed the gas pumps, said Art Athans of the California Highway Patrol.

An unidentified 43-year-old man from Mexico died at Mercy Hospital in San Diego of internal injuries. Twelve other passengers were treated at hospitals for minor to moderate injuries, Athans said.

The Border Patrol arrested seven uninjured passengers. It was not known if the driver was among them. At least three people got away on foot. All 12 of the survivors interviewed by agents claimed to be undocumented immigrants from Mexico, Pilkington said.

Four other vehicles overloaded with illegal immigrants in Southern California have been apprehended since April 1, three of them after accidents that also involved fatalities.

Budget that eliminates federal deficits by 2002 squeaks through House

■ 216-211 vote narrowly averts embarrassing public rejection of GOP leaders by freshmen, conservatives objecting to temporary deficit increase in plan's first year.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House narrowly approved a budget eliminating federal deficits by 2002 on Wednesday night after Republican leaders scrambled for two days to quell an unexpected rebellion by freshmen and conservatives.

The 216-211 vote narrowly averted an embarrassing public repudiation of GOP leaders by dissidents objecting to a temporary deficit increase in the plan's first year. Four Democrats voted with the Republican leaders while 19 Republicans opposed the budget.

GOP leaders held the vote open several extra minutes as House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., circulated on the floor, personally appealing to conservatives for support.

"There were so many undecideds that we just didn't know how they were going to go," said Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio. "But at the end of the day, the team pulled together."

Few of the freshmen spoke on the floor. But, in an emotional appeal to defy the leadership, freshman Rep. Mark Neumann, R-Wis., pleaded with Republicans not to repeat the mistakes of past Congresses in promising deficit reduction in the future while allowing deficits to rise in the present.

"I came to this city because I knew the Congresses had to be different if we were actually going to balance the budget," he said. "I ask my colleagues to have the courage of their convictions."

Gingrich and other leaders listened to their complaints for nearly two hours Tuesday night, after postponing a scheduled vote. Kasich met with them for an additional hour Wednesday morning. GOP leaders then spent the rest of the afternoon rounding up votes.

The budget resolution, representing a compromise of plans passed separately last month by the House and Senate, would trim spending by $702 billion over six years, allow a tax cut of $122 billion and produce a $5 billion surplus in 2002. The spending restraints are tougher and the tax cut larger than President Clinton wants.

But it projects increased deficits of $153 billion in 1997 and $147 billion in 1998, up from a deficit between $144 billion and $130 billion in 1996, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

The Senate planned its vote today.

Most of the freshmen and conservatives last month supported the House version of the budget, which also temporarily increased the deficit, but not as much. It had red ink of $148 billion in 1997 and $143 billion in 1998.

However, GOP dissidents — pummeled by Democrats and some facing difficult re-election battles — said they objected to roughly $4 billion in annually approved domestic spending added by the House-Senate compromise. They dismissed pressure from Senate Republicans to moderate their views.

"The poll numbers that I see, particularly in battleground states, show that we're running ahead of the rest of the party," said Rep. David McIntosh, R-Ind.

Democrats watched the Republican disarray with glee.

"The Republican leadership has twisted enough arms and many ... freshmen will support a budget that does exactly what they promised they would not do when they came to Washington, and that was to increase the deficit," said Rep. Rosa DeLauro, D-Conn. "What hypocrisy!"

Clinton's budget allows a slightly larger increase in the deficit than Republicans' — to $156 billion in 1997 and to $153 billion in 1998.

A Tuesday visit to House Republicans by Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., on the eve of his election as Senate majority leader, did not improve their mood. Lott warned them that reopening the agreement could result in even more spending added by the Senate.

Racial intolerance must be fought

Arson attacks on black churches throughout the South in recent weeks are more than an affront to those who cherish the religious freedom we enjoy in this nation. They are a cancer eating away at our very Judeo-Christian heritage and our society.

There should be moral outrage that any group of fanatics in this country would stoop so low as to burn down a church, the symbol of the sanctuary against racial intolerance and bigotry offered through Christianity. Yet in the callous times in which we live it seems relatively few voices are being raised in opposition to this injustice.

President Clinton is absolutely correct to acknowledge the seriousness of these attacks. Racial violence in any form is intolerable, and as a society we must stamp it out.

Ministers in Midland, reacting recently to the arson attacks, noted that although the church buildings have been burned, the churches have not been destroyed and will go on; right will prevail. While that undoubtedly is true, this situation presents a golden opportunity for all Christian churches to band together to stand up to the racial hatred being expressed through the burning of black churches.

Congregations in the burned-out churches should be offered assistance in rebuilding, and a coordinated law enforcement effort should be carried out to identify and bring to justice the individuals responsible for these burnings.

These attacks are attacks not only on religious freedom but on moral decency and respect. We should all fight that form of racial intolerance and bigotry wherever it exists.

Children's rally sold bigger government

If solving America's problems were just a matter of organizing a rally in Washington, D.C., our nation would be in good shape. Beyond the hype and the soundbites, however, these political pilgrimages to the capital rarely prove more than exercises in self-righteous grandstanding, demagoguery and political posturing.

A case in point is (the recent) "Stand for Children," a march spearheaded by the Children's Defense Fund and other left-wing activist groups.

It's about "our overarching moral challenge" of empowering children to be "healing agents of our national and world transformation," CDF President Marian Wright Edelman said.

This crusade for children is nothing but a rehash of the same liberal hokum some activists have been pushing for years.

These groups seek ambitious new spending programs targeting children, more power for Child Protective Services agents, strict gun-control laws, nationalized health care schemes, increased welfare spending, higher minimum wages, tougher federal regulations and a bigger, more intrusive and more expensive central government.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, June 13, the 165th day of 1996. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Thirty years ago, on June 13, 1966, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its landmark Miranda vs. Arizona decision, ruling that criminal suspects must be informed of their constitutional rights prior to questioning by police.

On this date:

In 1886, King Ludwig II of Bavaria drowned in Lake Starnberg.

In 1888, Congress created the Department of Labor.

In 1898, the Yukon Territory of Canada was organized.

In 1927, aviation hero Charles Lindbergh was honored with a ticker-tape parade in New York City.

In 1942, President Roosevelt created the Office of War Information, and appointed radio news commentator Elmer Davis to be its head.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

NATO must act now to check Russia

WASHINGTON — Displaying the spirit that was to produce victory at Trafalgar, Horatio Nelson once held a fire poker and said, "It matters not at all in what way I lay this poker on the floor. But if Bonaparte should say it must be placed in this direction, we must instantly insist on its being laid in some other one." Similar reasoning, with Russia playing Bonaparte's role, is one argument for proceeding quickly with NATO enlargement.

Will

Regardless of the outcome of Russia's presidential election this Sunday, the United States should lessen its tendency to trim foreign policy to accommodate Russian preferences and phobias. Continuing the stall concerning the inclusion in NATO of the new democracies of Eastern Europe sends a dangerous signal to Russia and a demoralizing signal to those democracies.

To Russia's increasingly truculent rulers it signals that NATO's member nations, and especially the United States, can be coerced. To the Russian people, when NATO hesitates to enlarge because enlargement might seem "provocative," that suggests that the lies the Soviet regime told them for 45 years — that NATO is an offensive, not a defensive, alliance — were true.

If Russia's rulers have no revanchist aspirations, they have no reason to resent NATO's inclusion of the new democracies. However, those democracies have reasons to fear Russian revanchism waged by a diplomacy of intimidation backed by overwhelming military superiority. That could produce Finlandization, meaning pliant neutrality, from, so to speak, Stettin on the Baltic to Trieste on the Adriatic.

Expansionism is in Russia's national DNA. Richard Pipes, the Harvard historian, calculates that for approximately 150 years, from the middle of the 16th century to the end of the 17th, the Muscovite state's territorial acquisitions year by year averaged an area equal in size to modern-day Holland.

Henry Kissinger notes that a nation spanning, as even post-Soviet Russia does, 11 time zones (St. Petersburg is closer to New York than to Vladivostok, which is closer to Seattle than to Moscow) should not feel claustrophobic, yet Russia still manifests "creeping expansionism," exemplified by the two Russian divisions in Georgia. The Brezhnev Doctrine held that wherever socialism had been planted by Soviet power, there the Soviet Union had a right to preserve it. The doctrine of today's Russian rulers may be that wherever Russians are, there Russian power can go.

Partly to propitiate nationalists, Yeltsin cashiered his "liberal" foreign minister Andrei Kozyrev, but even Kozyrev asserted a Russian right of military intervention in all countries containing Russian minorities. Kissinger says that includes at least 14 states of the former Soviet Union, including the Baltic States.

Given Russia's history and current dynamics, the tardiness of NATO enlargement makes it understandable that Czech President Vaclav Havel says, "The danger of another Munich is looming over Europe." In Prague, "Munich" is not a mere metaphor. For Prague, the appeasement policy made at Munich in 1938 was the decisive event of this century. Prague is the last place that the specter of Munich would be frivolously invoked, and Havel measures his words.

Spain's traditional isolation from main currents of European history — "Africa begins at the Pyrenees" was a familiar jest — was deepened by almost 40 years of Franco's rule, but admission to NATO accelerated Spain's entry into modernity. For 40 years Prague, Budapest and Warsaw were isolated from Europe's democratic civilization. Prague is west of Vienna and closer to Dublin than to Moscow. But NATO, attempting to appease an irritable Russia, has not yet even decided when to decide about admitting the Czech Republic and the other new democracies. This, Rodman reasons, is one explanation for the demoralization of pro-Western forces and the resuscitation of neo-Communists in central Europe.

NATO has been one of modern history's huge successes. The only invasion of the territory of a member nation by armed forces of another nation occurred in the South Atlantic — the Falklands. NATO's first actual combat operation occurred in February 1994 — against Serb planes over Bosnia. What would be enlarged with NATO would be Central Europe's prospects for two fragile things, deterrence and democracy.

As Medicare sinks, blame the chicken people

"So, you gonna do your kids a favor," Slats Grobnik asked, "and maybe jump off a bridge or stick your head in the oven?"

What a morbid thing to say. Why would I do that?

"Didn't ya hear? In a few years, Medicare is going broke. Either that, or our kids are going to be paying 99 percent of their paycheck just to keep us in high blood-pressure pills."

Royko

"Nah. That's not what the experts say, and who's gonna argue with the experts?"

It is the job of experts to spread alarm, or nobody would ever notice that they are experts.

"Maybe, but this country has got a health problem."

Actually, our health is better than it has ever been. Prudent diet, moderate exercise, miracle medication, amazing surgery.

"Yeah, that's the problem. We ain't croaking as fast as we used to. You ever been to Florida?"

As often as I can.

"Then you seen all the chicken people."

No, I've seen unsightly bodies on the beach.

"I mean the people who walk like chickens. You see 'em everywhere, doing that funny walk with their arms pumping to keep the old heart ticking. And they pop their blood-pressure pills, their cholesterol pills, their happy pills."

Yes. The health-conscious geriatric crowd.

"Right. Then they go out for the early-bird dinner special and they gum their chicken without skin or fish and salad with a no-fat dressing."

"That's what I mean. Look at our fathers and our grandfathers. What did they eat?"

Ah, they were the last of the meat, gravy and potatoes guys. Fried eggs and greasy bacon for breakfast, a thick salami sandwich for lunch, and fried pork chops for dinner.

"And did you ever see them have a white wine after work?"

They'd have been tossed out of the tavern. The standard cocktail was a Jim Beam shooter with a beer back.

"How about jogging?"

The only time they ran was to catch a streetcar or a thief. Or to escape from a cop.

"What about exercise machines?"

As I recall, the equivalent of exercise machines was lifting furniture when they helped a relative move.

"How about smoking?"

It was the thing to do. Bogart smoked. So did Bacall. It was cool.

"So people lived right?"

No, today's dietitians and doctors would say they lived totally wrong.

"Then those experts are wrong. People lived right because they had enough bum habits to make sure that they croaked before they cost their kids big bucks to keep them hanging around."

That is a rather callous attitude.

"Maybe. But I heard some experts on TV talking about a war between the generations. Is that what we want -- a war in the streets, old geezers swatting at Yuppies with their canes, and the Yuppies whacking killer golf balls at the geezers?"

Do you really believe the young would turn on their elders?

"Sure. Why not? They already think the geezers have made the world miserable for them."

But that is unfair. Who do they think paid for all the fine suburban high schools, and many in the city, that they attended? Who do they think paid for the many state colleges that did not exist when the geezers were young?

"You want gratitude? Toss your dog a Yummy bone."

Look at their size. It is the nutritional food we earned and fed them. Examine their sturdy straight teeth. Who paid for that? And we are no longer living in fear of nuking or being nuked. Who fought, wheeled, dealed and paid the taxes for what is, by historical standards, a time of great peace and stability?

"You still want gratitude? Give the carwash guy a $5 tip. And you're ducking the big issue -- who's gonna foot the bill to keep millions of geezers doing the Florida chicken walk?"

The solution is obvious: Clinton, the young, will defeat Dole, the elderly, and will retain the White House for a second term, Newt will nauseate the voters into electing a Democratic Congress, and the Democrats will once again show their economic creativity by zapping the upper brackets with a tax hike. And we will all live happily ever after.

"Until next time the bill comes due."

Programs are Trojan Horse for social agenda

We would all do well to listen to the real nationally respected educational authorities.

Dr. Thomas Sowell (senior economist at the Hoover Institute) wrote in his book, "Inside American Education," "Tucked under the banner of self-esteem, decision-making, drug prevention, sex education, enrichment for the gifted and talented and multiculturalism are programs all designed to reshape students' attitudes. These programs, among others, elevate feelings over thought, undermine accepted moral and cultural standards, and attack the authority of parents."

William J. Bennett (former U.S. Secretary of Education) said, "The real concern is when those in the education establishment use O.B.E.: 1. to do away with objective measurable criteria, 2. to do away with the traditional subject-based curriculum in favor of an emphasis on things like general skills, attitudes and behaviors; and 3. advance their own radical social agenda. Increasingly O.B.E. is applied to the realm of behavior and social attitudes — becoming in effect, a Trojan Horse for social engineering, an elementary version of the kind of "politically correct" thinking that has infected our colleges and universities."

MISD board at fault for bond failure

The eight people in Midland responsible for the failure of the bond issue are Dr. Baressi and the seven members of the school board. Let me list some of the reasons: absolute fiscal irresponsibility, a board under investigation, "Celebrations" social studies curriculum, outcome-based education, creative SAT statistics, whole language reading program (word-guessing), absence of a phonics-based curriculum, creative spelling, forced busing, failing test scores, rising drop-out rates, escalating violence and a total lack of accountability.

When these people really want to do something "For Every Child" they will attack these problems with the same tenacity they used trying to sell the bond issue to the community.

Ticket news outlets for illegal parking

With three local news stations competing for audience, it's no wonder that they will try anything to get the best story. Some examples are following a school bus on a morning route to monitor compliance with the law, following customers at Wal-Mart to see if they put their carts back, and also having sales clerks intentionally give back too much change testing customer honesty. To what extreme should the reporters go to get their story?

On Tuesday - June 4, 1996 at around 11:30 a.m., my wife and I drove to the Administration Building of ECISD. Upon driving into the parking lot, there were three cars, one from each local news station, parked in the fire lane. We thought that there must have really been something exciting that just occurred for these people to have to park there. As we walked in, we couldn't believe our eyes - all the reporters were sitting in the lobby just waiting! What gives them the special privilege of breaking the law to park in a fire lane? We counted at least 20 available parking spaces.

We called each news station to see if the vehicles had a special parking permit, and each station stated that no special permit existed. Had the fire lane been occupied by other vehicles, would they have parked in the handicap section? We strongly feel that it is unfair for them to park anywhere while all citizens must obey the law. We strongly urge the police department to issue citations for these types of violations.

President apologizes for first time about 'bureaucratic mess-up' on FBI files

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton apologized Wednesday for the first time for the White House's collecting FBI files of Republicans: "I would never condone or tolerate any kind of enemies list," he declared.

With presidential rival Bob Dole comparing the action to Watergate "tricks," a contrite Clinton said the private files were obtained from the FBI in 1993 because of "an honest bureaucratic mess-up."

"I am sorry that it occurred, and I believe that we will correct it," the president told reporters. "And I think the FBI will correct it on their end as well, so that nothing like this will happen again."

But Republicans continued to question the White House's motives.

"This story has better legs than Marilyn Monroe," said Ed Gillespie, communications director for the Republican National Committee. Independent prosecutor Kenneth Starr is investigating the matter.

The White House said last Friday it had collected the FBI files on 341 people, including prominent Republicans, as part of an effort to update security records. A junior military aide worked from an outdated Secret Service list, and his effort was not used for political purposes, the White House says.

The FBI materials were the same summaries of background investigations that normally go to the White House after a background check, not raw FBI files. Nevertheless, they contained some confidential information, Justice Department officials said Wednesday.

An internal investigation by FBI General Counsel Howard Shapiro found that the White House request was handled by a relatively low-level employee at the bureau, one official said. Shapiro concluded that higher-level approval should be required in the future, the official said, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The massive collection of FBI files became public after Rep. William Clinger announced that the White House obtained the agency's file on former travel office chief Billy Dale seven months after he was fired.

Clinton was quizzed on the matter during a news conference with Italian Prime Minister Romano Prodi, the head of the European Union, and Jacques Santer, head of the European Commission.

Santer reiterated his criticism of the U.S. sanctions against Cuba, but said, "There is much more that binds us together than pulls us apart."

The three leaders reaffirmed the allied commitment to Bosnian elections in September. "I think we have never had such a deep, strong and fruitful cooperation in such a difficult job," Prodi said.

Clinton also faced new questions about whether the U.S. deployment in Bosnia would be extended beyond the self-imposed deadline of a year, which expires Dec. 20. Defense Secretary William Perry raised the possibility of an extension while heading to a meeting of NATO defense ministers.

"I believe that we should stick with our timetable," the president said.

The U.S. mission does not include "running down" accused war criminals, Clinton said. But if Americans were to come into contact with someone wanted for war crimes, the president said, "I would expect them to do their duty."

On other points, Clinton:

■ Urged Greece and Turkey to resolve their differences. "The future of the region ... will be immeasurably brighter if they resolve their problems, and immeasurably darker if they cannot," he said.

■ Struck back at Republicans who said his trip earlier in the day to South Carolina was political. The president, who visited the site of a burned church, said, "We should not turn this into a political issue. It isn't political, and it isn't partisan."

In role of citizen-candidate, Dole targets 'liberal-pretender' Clinton

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Liberated from his Senate duties, an energized Bob Dole returned to his native state Wednesday, offering himself as a citizen-candidate ready to listen to America and oust "the great liberal pretender" from the White House.

"Yesterday my constituency was Kansas, today my constituency is the whole of America," the newly ex-senator told a crowd of hundreds in the blistering afternoon sun.

On a three-day "heartland tour" — his most ambitious campaign swing since the frentic primary season — Dole made his first stop in Ohio, a key battleground in the contest against President Clinton.

"It's a contest that I intend to win," Dole told a Toledo luncheon.

Dole cast his trip as an ex-senator as yet another re-birth for his campaign, although he's been at it for more than a year. He was traveling in a campaign jet freshly — and symbolically — renamed "Citizen's Ship." Previously, it was known as "Leader's Ship."

The presumptive GOP nominee planned to hit eight cities over three days, a mix of easy Republican marks — including his native Kansas — and key battleground states for the fall campaign.

"It's my first day as a non-senator, private citizen; and Ohio is a very key state. ... We're gonna get to work," Dole told reporters.

He promised a luncheon audience of Toledo business leaders: "Now that I'm free from the United States Senate, I'm going to do a lot of listening to Americans; that's what's going to happen in the real campaign."

And he labeled Clinton as "the great liberal pretender," setting the stakes in November's election sky high.

"It is a contest for the direction America will take for the next generation and into the next century," he declared.

In his speech, which was tailored to business interests, Dole promised unspecified tax cuts, but cautioned that "you can't have a tax cut without spending restraint." Dole later told reporters he has no tax plan right now, and would announce one closer to the Republicans' August convention "but not before."

He also stressed his differences with Clinton over a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget.

Dole lost track of his own breakneck campaign schedule as he tried to make the point that eliminating the deficit would lower interest rates for homeowners and business owners.

"It's true in Toledo, it's true in Richmond, Va., it's true in Topeka, Kansas — or wherever we're going to be," Dole said. Later Wednesday, Dole was headed to Branson, Mo.

Senate GOP picks Lott as new leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans overwhelmingly chose Trent Lott on Wednesday to succeed Bob Dole as majority leader, picking a Newt Gingrich ally and continuing the ascendency of the GOP's more aggressive conservatives.

Lott, who at 54 is already a 23-year veteran of Congress, won a lopsided 44-8 ballot of GOP senators over his senior colleague from Mississippi, Sen. Thad Cochran.

He immediately pledged to pursue the familiar Republican agenda of balancing the budget, shrinking government and trimming taxes and spending.

"The torch has been passed," Lott said, referring to Dole's Senate resignation Tuesday to campaign fulltime for the White House. "But the flame is the same."

Still, the vote symbolized the clout of Congress' swelling ranks of newer GOP lawmakers eager for quick action, and the dwindling influence of veteran Republicans who revere Capitol Hill's tradition of patient consensus building. It also capped the evolution that took hold nearly two years ago in the House, when avuncular GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois retired and was replaced by the fiery Gingrich, a close friend and one-time House colleague of Lott's.

In a brief interview, Gingrich — now House speaker — said Lott was his mentor when he was rising through the ranks.

"He's a terrifically energetic and courageous guy, and a part of the Reagan Republican movement," Gingrich said. "I'm delighted."

■ More national news/6B

Lott and Cochran, who is 58, have similar conservative ideologies, but Lott is garrulous and outgoing to Cochran's more softspoken, gentlemanly approach. Lott, a senator for seven years compared with Cochran's 17, is also seen as the more assertive and ambitious of the two. And he is being counted on by many of his GOP colleagues to unhesitatingly draw election-year contrasts with Democrats.

"There's likely to be a more aggressive tone" in the Senate, said freshman Bill Frist, R-Tenn.

All day long, Lott said his job was to reach out to Republicans of all stripes — and to Democrats — to move bills through the Senate, a chamber whose rules allow even one disgruntled member to slow legislation to a crawl.

"My approach is going to be, 'Let's see if we can find a way to work things out,'" he told reporters.

Some Democrats reacted with expressions of hope for cooperation. Others expressed optimism that they had found a juicy new political target.

"I begin this day and this new period ... with great expectations, with optimism, with the belief that we can ... come together," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

"The Republican Party is now completely led by extremists," said liberal Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich. "The Senate is about to become a replica of Newt's House."

In fact, few consider Lott to be quite as ideological or unyielding as Congress' newest class of GOP freshmen. However, he is partisan enough that as a House freshman in 1974 he was one of President Nixon's staunchest defenders during the Judiciary Committee's impeachment proceedings.

And he is ambitious enough that he leapfrogged more senior colleagues when he became GOP whip — the No. 2 job — after just eight years in the House and six years in the Senate. He captured the Senate whip job from Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming, a Dole friend.

Teenager testifies he didn't know it was officer at mall

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A Midland teen took the stand in his own defense Wednesday, hoping to avoid a conviction on charges of delinquency for felony murder.

Rafael Carlos Carillo and Antonio Salazar, both 16, are alleged to have broken into a back door at Beall's department store, contributing to the sequence of events that left their alleged accomplice, Marco Antonio Sanchez, dead on the morning of Oct. 25, 1995, Carillo and Salazar are being tried together before Midland County Court-at-Law Judge Al Walvoord.

While on the stand, Carillo was questioned about a sack of stolen merchandise that he maintained was left at his house by Sanchez.

Asked why he did not know that the merchandise was stolen, Carillo said, "I didn't really pay attention to it — I just left it alone."

He was then asked why he took no action after he did find out the items were stolen.

"He was a co-worker, and I didn't want him to talk about me at work," Carillo said.

The two teen-agers are alleged to have been in the process of burglarizing the store in the Midland Park Mall when a police officer arrived in response to a silent alarm.

A grand jury determined that Sanchez attacked the officer with a crowbar and the officer was justified in firing the shot that killed him.

Carillo testified that on the night in question he was very drunk and was under the influence of alcohol when he gave a statement about their activities during the early morning hours. Carillo also maintained that the written statement was inaccurate.

He testified that he, Salazar and Sanchez walked by the mall building and Sanchez had a crowbar taken from Carillo's trunk. When questioned why he was doing this, Carillo testified that they were taking a walk.

"I was still kind of confused about his intentions," Carillo said.

Carillo testified that when the police officer arrived on the scene he did not know it was a police officer.

Carillo testified that he told this person "that we are a maintenance crew and we were here to fix the lights."

"Now you know that wasn't true — why did you say that?" said court-appointed defense attorney J.K. "Rusty" Wall.

"Because I was scared," Carillo responded.

■ City calls 150-day moratorium on permits for communications towers while developing guidelines for compliance with Telecommunications Act.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

To make way for technology, the city is developing guidelines for the placement of communication towers for cellular telephones.

A 150-day moratorium on issuance of special use permits — for all broadcasting towers and transmitting stations — has been called by the City Council while guidelines are being developed.

"Our concern is we want to be progressive in responding to technology needs ... but at the same time concerned about the siting of these towers," Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

The concern was prompted by the passage of the Telecommunications Act of 1996 and an anticipated increase in requests to erect towers in Midland, officials said.

Previously, no specific stipulations were attached to the issuance of specific use permits for communication towers. But because the Telecommunications Act requires that denial of permits be explained in writing by municipalities, the city needs guidelines to base its reasons for approval or denial, officials said.

Furthermore, the Telecommunications Act — aimed to better accommodate new technology — coincides with the growing business of cellular telephones.

The industry projects the number of cellular towers in the United States to go from 18,000 last year to 100,000 by the year 2000. And in Midland, one projection has 20 towers within the city by the year 2000 — quadruple the number currently.

Within the last two months, the city of Midland has received a specific use permit application for up to six tower sites, and inquiries from two other companies about filing for permits.

Because of the limited number of transmission frequencies — assigned by the Federal Communications Commission — the cellular telephone industry has learned to make the most of a single frequency through "sectoring."

"So they can utilize the same frequency in different locales, they want to lower the towers but have more of them," Hackler said. Higher towers pose the problem of transmissions bleeding into other areas.

Oftentimes transmission equipment is placed on tall buildings rather than towers. But the need for multiple locations in sectoring requires erecting towers where buildings of sufficient height aren't available.

That means concerns for nearby residential neighborhoods and other considerations. The moratorium does not withhold permits for towers in certain commercial and industrial zoned districts.

At the first of two required readings by the City Council to implement the moratorium, a concerned citizen said the current process — which includes a public hearing — required for a special use permit was adequate. The council unanimously disagreed.

Sporting clays event to begin this weekend

Cramer

From Staff Reports

Northeast Midland will resound to the reports of shotgun blasts this weekend when the Texas State Sporting Clays Championship makes its debut in West Texas.

The championship, which is due to attract more than 230 shooters from around the state and nation, kicks off Friday and continues through Sunday as competitors vie for trophies — gold coins each worth $300 — in a number of categories based on shotgun gauge.

Sporting clays is a relatively new sport in the United States, according to Ralph Cramer, owner of Windwalker Sporting Clays, which is hosting the event.

"It's been here for about eight years ... It's the fastest growing shotgun sport in the states," Cramer said.

After two months of testimony, A-1 Mobile Homes trial goes to jury for deliberation

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A federal jury of eight women and four men will begin deliberating this morning in the conspiracy and bank fraud trial of 11 people charged in a scheme worth millions of dollars.

Closing arguments concluded late Wednesday in the A-1 Mobile Homes case in U.S. District Court in Midland.

The case involves almost a dozen people accused of defrauding several financial institutions in a scheme to obtain money by submitting false information in connection with the financing of mobile home purchases.

The charges stem from incidents beginning in November 1986 up to February 1990, according to court documents.

A-1 Mobile Homes was a franchise business involving the retail sale of mobile homes in Bryan, Nacogdoches and Waco.

On trial now are Max Waylan Cain, Billy Wayne Cox Jr., Mason Booth Long, Alice Marie Barber, Sammie Davis, Darrell "Paul" Freeman, Gene Trout, James "Mike" Caldwell, Tammy Denise Morrow, Larry Wayne Meinzer and Patrick "Rick" Malmstrom.

According to the indictment, Cain was the vice president of several savings and loans in Midland and Odessa and was in charge of mobile home lending.

Cox owned several franchises of the business, and

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Norwest Mortgage and Champions School of Real Estate have teamed up to offer state-required continuing education courses for Realtors.

Allan Hancock, regional trainer for Norwest and an instructor for Champions for the last 11 years, visits Midland-Odessa one day a month for five consecutive months to teach five three-hour courses.

Realtors must have 15 hours of continuing education every two years in order to keep their licenses. Earlier this year the Texas Association of Realtors discontinued offering its courses.

The five courses Hancock teaches are Real Estate Licensing, Rules and Regulations, the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act and Agency, Environmental Issues and Law Update.

Teaching the third course Wednesday at Mission Dorado Country Club, Hancock focused on finance, which he said has undergone a number of changes.

The appraisal process is almost completely computerized now and virtually paperless, with software packages that allow the appraiser to transmit information directly to the lender, he said.

The paperwork burden has shifted from the loan processor to the loan originator, he said. Advances in software packages and hardware allow the loan originator to gather virtually all documents and eliminate the need for external verification from the applicant's employer and financial institution.

"The biggest benefit to the consumer is faster loan approval," Hancock said. "Instead of taking weeks the way it once did, approval can take days or even hours."

Approval may come faster, but it is also more accurate because the computers force the lenders and Realtors to execute more accurate applications, he said.

Norwest has even developed a software package that allows the builder or Realtor to interact with the mortgage company, verify a potential home buyer's qualification or check the status of a loan application, he said.

Homes and mortgages are even being sold on the Internet, he said.

In the beginning of an insidious strain of conspiracy to confound mankind, there was instant coffee.

It was in the forefront of a futile attempt to make honest any instant brew or instant meal. It is hardly possible. It failed and continues to falter.

Cowboy coffee — savory, barely palatable or just spitting-out bad — can only be made honestly from scratch. That is how camp cooks prepare biscuits and gravy and the rest of the vittles, including peach cobbler: from scratch, the proper term and noun.

No real cowboy, or cowgirl, for that matter, would dare pour a cup of instant coffee. No chuckwagon is designed in spirit for such a travesty.

Not even cowpokes of radio, stage, and silver screen would press their veracious lips to a tin cup of anything instant, especially coffee, no, sir, and no, ma'am. Not Tom Mix, not Gene Autry, not Roy Rogers, not Hoot Gibson, not Will Rogers.

It's gotta be real.

Scratch. That's what chickens and guinea fowl and other birds seeking grub called seed, bugs, and worms do. Scratch. They work for their place at the dinner table.

So do all of their kinsfolk from the plains-sprinting chaparral and the bloom-hovering hummingbird to the insect-chasing purple martin and flycatcher.

They toil just like the turtles and terrapins below. There is no instant meals or snacks in their native habitat.

They take no shortcuts.

But people, creatures who allege to be capable of thought and reason and logic, are the most irrational of all of God's critters not because they are bestowed with knowledge of good and evil and because they can discern right from wrong.

No, they have the gift, the curse, to rationalize and to stack cards to produce desired results with the cleverness of the economist who manipulates statistics.

The frightful horror in instant drinks and instant foods and instant success (as in winning the sweep

Thanks be to God that there still is extant today men and women who investigate before rendering opinions and judgments. There are many, not just scientists, who seek truth based on research, thought, and the counsel of wise people.

And in these days of instant news and condemnation before investigation, there is much suffering and woe. In many instances, there is no reflection in the haste to disseminate and to ingest news.

Instant?

The drought certainly isn't instant. And there is no instant remedy. That heavenly nectar called rain will come in its season and in its natural order and in time.

Instant? Pshaw!

Legislation protects teacher evaluations

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' new education law keeps any performance evaluation of a teacher or school administrator secret from the public, Attorney General Dan Morales said in a legal opinion released Wednesday.

Lawyers for the Round Rock, Mercedes, Sunray, Ector County and Poolville school districts had asked Morales whether certain documents fell under the law's confidentiality provision.

Morales said the individual requests for rulings would be addressed separately.

The law includes teacher and administrator appraisal processes that will be recommended by the education commissioner or adopted by local school boards.

But Morales said the confidentiality provision goes further.

He said his office concluded "that the Legislature intended to make confidential any document that evaluates the performance of a teacher or administrator."

TEEN: Defendent says he didn't know officer

(From 1B)

Carillo, attempting to flee, scuffled with the officer, but the defendant maintained that he still did not know it was a police officer.

In cross-examination, County Attorney Mark Dettman walked Carillo through his written statement.

Reading the statement, Dettman said, "I stood by the door and Tony and Marco were burglaring the room."

"Is that true?" Dettman said.

"Yes sir," Carillo responded.

"And your words?" Dettman said.

"My words," Carillo said.

Dettman will be putting prosecution witnesses on the stand as the trial continues today.

The youths are being charged with delinquency for felony murder under state statutes that hold accomplices responsible for a death that occurs during the commission of a felony, said Assistant County Attorney Danna Gallegos who is prosecuting the case with Dettman.

Failing a conviction on this charge, attorneys for the prosecution are also charging the defendants with the lesser included offenses of burglary of a building and aggravated assault, she said.

The defendants have not been certified as adults and face determinant sentencing in juvenile court.

Through the determinant sentencing guidelines, the youths could face up to 40 years of incarceration.

If sentenced to prison time, they would first go to the Texas Youth Commission until their 18th birthdays when they would receive a hearing to determine if they should be released or kept at TYC until their 21st birthdays.

If incarcerated beyond the age of 21, the youths would be transferred to state prison.

Greenville tries to recover from national attention after burning of black church

GREENVILLE, Texas — This northeast Texas community, wrenched by three days of unrest following fires at two black churches, worked Wednesday to polish its image as a prosperous city struggling to correct its tortured racial past.

The latest of five suspicious fires was still smoldering as Mayor Sue Ann Harting called an afternoon news conference to complain about the racial spotlight being focused on her community of 23,000, which is 40 miles northeast of Dallas.

"It's unfortunate that a very few people can draw the attention of the country because they can do such a negative act that is frightening and it can terrorize the community," Harting said.

Across the South, suspicious fires have burned or damaged 30 other African-American churches, but Texas had escaped the attacks until the two churches in Greenville were set ablaze late Sunday and early Monday, officials said.

No one was injured in the latest Greenville fire, which began about 9 p.m. Tuesday and gutted the interior of the former Greenville Hotel and Trailways bus terminal. The two-story white brick and wood structure had been vacant since the late 1970s, when it served as a rooming house.

Fire Chief Robert Wood called the blaze suspicious. The building is owned by an Austin, Texas, man, according to tax records. Previous fires in the community damaged two churches, a car wash and a vacant house.

The hotel sits on Lee Street, where a sign proclaiming, "Greenville: blackest land, whitest people," hung across the street until the 1960s.

Police Chief Barry Paris said the sign is from "an era gone by."

"I was raised in this area and that sign had been there for a long time," he said. "And that's an era gone by, that we have to put behind us because it's not like it was then.

"In the time that I grew up here, (the sign) was not racial. And years later that became an issue."

'It's unfortunate that a very few people can draw the attention of the country because they can do such a negative act.'
— Sue Ann Harting, Mayor of Greenville, Texas

Paris emphasized that city officials are not prepared to say the fires are part of any racist campaign.

"From my point of view, there's not any pressure from our citizens to determine as much if it was a racial thing as who's doing it, who's destroying our town," he said.

The police chief said numerous residents have called him with concern about the presence of members of the New Black Panther party in Greenville and asking whether some scheduled events should be canceled because of the turmoil.

"And my response is I don't believe that we ought to be held hostage by what's going on in our community. We need to get on with our lives and not live in fear," Paris said. "This (racism) is something that's in our country that we have to deal with."

Paris said several people have been questioned as witnesses or possible suspects in some of the fires, although authorities have not filed any charges and are awaiting test results from evidence collected at the churches.

Greenville native Brenda Dickerson, 42, said the fires need to end. She labeled the blazes the work of a copycat arsonist seeking to tie Greenville with the arsons at black churches across the South.

"They've seen all those things in other towns and now here little Greenville is," Dickerson said. "I really wish it would stop. Last night, my daughter was afraid to sleep in her own bed, thinking someone was going to come and mess with the house and she's 11 years old."

On a utility pole about a half block from the smoking hotel, someone tacked a T-shirt with the words "Stop Hate," acronyms for "Start Turning Off Prejudice," and "Heal Attitudes Through Education," which also were printed on the shirt.

The New Light House of Prayer suffered $60,000 damage when it was set afire. A second black church, the Church of the Living God, had minor fire damage about four hours later. Both fires were ruled as arson.

Early Sunday, someone also broke into a carwash and sprayed the letters "KKK" on a bay before setting a small fire. Then Sunday night, the letters "KKK" and "KIX" were carved into the No. 1 green at Wright Municipal Golf Course.

Three Greenville men were detained early Monday and questioned by federal officials in connection with the New Light fire.

They were fined for misdemeanor alcohol offenses and released Tuesday although Paris said they remain suspects in the first church fire.

"We just weren't prepared to go and ask a grand jury to indict them at this point because it would have been an injustice for us to hold them any longer," Paris said Wednesday.

REALTORS: Classes keep current

(From 1B)

Lenders are also developing the capability to help with the down payment and prepaids or those homeowners who are short of cash or whose income is just short of qualifying.

"For a slightly higher interest rate, we can pay all the closing costs and prepaids. Or for someone is a little short of qualifying from an income point of view, we can offer what we call a flex fixed rate, which is like an adjustable rate mortgage but with the advantages of a fixed rate mortgage and starts out with a low rate," Hancock said.

Prodded by the Clinton administration and state and community officials, Norwest and other lenders have developed a number of community home buyer.0 programs that offer low down payments or down payment assistance and liberal qualifying requirements.

"There is certainly a push to expand home ownership," Hancock observed. "It's rooted in our economy — home ownership is a major component — but it's also rooted in our fundamental national values.

"Private property and home ownership are a top priority across all ethnic and age groups. It's just such an underlying principal in this country."

A-1: Jury deliberations begin

(From 1B)

Long was his partner in charge of setup, delivery and service of the mobile homes.

Ms. Barber and several other defendants were salespeople or managers with the businesses, according to court records.

The numerous defense attorneys began their closing arguments Monday afternoon.

More than a dozen other people have already entered guilty pleas in the case and the investigation is ongoing, according to FBI Supervisor Tom Kirspel.

The indictment alleged that the defendants fraudulently obtained or attempted to obtain money from the savings and loans by submitting false documents and information in connection with customers' purchases and financing.

Among the alleged false information were credit applications, sales contracts, inflated down payment figures, inflated purchase prices, inflated income of the borrowers, employment history and payment sources.

The trial started April 8 in federal Judge Royal Furgeson's court.

CLAYS: Competition begins this weekend

(From 1B)

During a sporting clays event, each competitor walks through a designated course shooting at a set number of clay "birds" that are launched from "traps" mounted on towers and the ground. The person with the most number of hits is the winner.

As with golf, no two courses are the same and according to Cramer, Midland's course ranks with the best Texas has to offer.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce's Convention and Visitors Bureau helped Cramer stage the event, which traditionally has been held in San Antonio, Fort Worth or Houston.

"This puts Midland in the national spotlight," said Jon Andrews, chairman of the chamber's sports committee. "Besides the immediate (financial) impact, it puts another item on our sports resume."

Admission is free for spectators. For more information call (915) 458-3324.

POLICE REPORTS

Man arrested

The brother of an alleged drug ringleader was arrested Tuesday on charges of witness tampering, according to a Midland police spokesman.

Hipolito Brito, 42, was arrested at 1514 S. Dallas St. without incident, authorities said. He is being held without bond pending an initial appearance before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton on Friday.

Brito is the brother of Pablo Salinas Brito, who was arrested May 31 by federal authorities on suspicion of leading the Brito drug trafficking organization.

Hipolito Brito is suspected of assaulting a potential witness in the drug case and arranging for the assault of another person — whom he thought might be a witness — who was housed in the Midland County Detention Center.

Vehicle fire

Two vehicles were destroyed and two more were damaged in a fire at Sagewood Apartments, 3316 Caldera Blvd., early Wednesday morning.

Fire officials said the fire started with one vehicle but because of wind spread to another vehicle parked next to it. The heat from the two burning vehicles damaged two more vehicles.

Fire officials are investigating the blaze, but are not sure of its cause.

Charges released

The 29-year-old man who led police on a chase along Midkiff Road on June 7 will be charged with the accidents of two vehicles, including the damage of a police car. But charges of the pursuit and other traffic violations have been dropped after examination results showed the man was having a diabetes attack, police said.

Police at the scene said the man's blood sugar levels were below normal and he had told them he hadn't been drinking.

The man was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center for examination, police said.

Drug bust

Two El Paso women were arrested Tuesday at Midland International Airport and charged with the possession of marijuana.

Sosa

Rendon

Information given to Midland narcotics detectives led to the seizure of 75 pounds of marijuana found in the suspects' luggage, police said.

Laura Sosa, 21 and Christine Rendon, 33, had flown into Midland from El Paso, police said.

Ms. Sosa's bond has been set at $750,000 because she also has a residence in Juarez, Mexico, and police fear she may have fled across the border. Ms. Rendon's bond is set at $50,000.

Both are in custody at Midland County Detention Center.

Man sentenced

A Midland man faces 20 years in prison after a jury found him guilty Wednesday afternoon of indecency with a child.

Guadalupe Morgan Gonzalez, 42, of Midland was found guilty by a jury for the April 29, 1995, assault on a girl.

Gramm angry about proposed abortion plank

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Sen. Phil Gramm threatened on Wednesday to boycott the Republican National Convention if abortion foes prevail in ousting fellow GOP Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison from the state's delegation.

Gramm, a one-time presidential hopeful and vocal opponent of abortion, said he won't serve as a delegate if Hutchison is denied a spot at next week's state GOP convention in San Antonio.

"I think that Senator Hutchison should be and will be a delegate and if she weren't a delegate, I wouldn't be a delegate," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"Kay and I are partners," said Gramm.

Texans United for Life director Bill Price has been leading the movement to keep Hutchison off the slate of delegates Texas will send to the national convention this summer — an action Gramm termed "outrageous."

"She should not be a delegate," Price said Wednesday, citing her support for abortion with some restrictions.

Although her position has angered anti-abortion forces, it has won her few friends with abortion-rights groups, who are peeved by her qualified support. In 1994, the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League dubbed her a "Great Pretender," saying she masquerades as a supporter of abortion rights.

Hutchison, Gramm and Gov. George W. Bush are expected to be at-large delegates for GOP presumed presidential nominee Bob Dole. Texas' 123-member contingent includes 33 at-large delegates.

"She's the show-stopper," Price said of Hutchison. "If her name is on the list, then we'll be asking the delegates to vote against that slate."

Similar controversies have arisen in other states like Alabama and Washington but Hutchison would be the highest-ranking official to be targeted for exclusion from the national convention.

Most Texas delegates have signed a pledge to retain the current anti-abortion language in the GOP platform and to oppose any vice presidential candidate who favors abortion rights, Price said.

Hutchison refused to be drawn into the fray, saying Wednesday she had no response to Price's comments. She does plan to attend the state convention.

Texas Republican chairman Tom Pauken likewise sought to avoid the controversy although he acknowledged abortion will be the most fractious issue debated next week.

"My goal is to see that we have a delegation that everybody's comfortable with," he said. Asked if that includes Hutchison, the staunchly anti-abortion Pauken said: "I'm just not going to get into individual names."

Unlike Hutchison and Pauken, Gramm didn't hesitate to wade into the controversy, which has bedeviled Dole in recent weeks. After striking a balance that appeared to soothe both anti-abortion and abortion-rights factions, Dole angered social conservatives this week by saying he wants to attach a "declaration of tolerance" to the abortion plank.

In an unusual break with abortion foes, Gramm called Price and his supporters "a very small faction of people, and I don't think they are reflective of our party."

Added Gramm, who challenged Dole for the nomination: "Bob Dole won the Republican nomination. I obviously had another preferred outcome. But the idea that now other people should be telling him who his delegates ought to be, I just think it's outrageous."

Gramm and Bush, who will be a temporary co-chairman of the national convention, have cautioned that it would be a mistake for the Texas delegates to draw a line in the sand over the eventual GOP vice presidential nominee's position on abortion.

New Dallas exhibit recalls legacy of Bonnie and Clyde

DALLAS (AP) — Around sundown, they would drive to some secluded spot outside Dallas and wait. Soon another car would come speeding down the road, dust billowing behind. It would pull up beside theirs, and everybody would get out. There would be hugging and kissing, talk and laughter.

"My mother always made red beans and corn bread and fried chicken," the woman recalls. "It was like a picnic."

She never was afraid, she says. "We didn't think of danger. I guess we were all too danged ignorant to know. Clyde didn't think nothing about it, and we didn't either."

On the evening of Nov. 22, 1933, they were waiting on a hill where the Irving Mall is now. The other car — a stolen Ford V-8 — came speeding up the road, as usual. But this time it didn't stop.

"Clyde slowed down, then drove on by. Later he said he had a hunch there was somebody out in that field," she says. "He played his hunches a lot. He'd think something, and usually that's what it was.

"He had no more than passed us when they opened fire. I was stupid. I was young. I thought it was a bunch of firecrackers going off. It was a streak of fire across the sky. Then I thought, 'Well, I guess they're shooting at Clyde.'"

Marie Barrow was 15 years old. She and her family had come to the hill to visit with her older brother, Clyde, and his girlfriend, Bonnie Parker. When the Dallas County sheriff and three deputies opened fire with their machine guns, Marie was the only occupant of the waiting car who didn't duck to the floorboards.

'People just will never let them die. I really don't know why..'
— Marie Barrow, younger sister of famous bank robber Clyde Barrow.

"I told Mama, 'They didn't get him. I saw him go over the hill.' But they had wounded him. A bullet went through his leg and into Bonnie's."

Her brother was the notorious Clyde Barrow of West Dallas, leader of the Barrow Gang, which also included his brother Buck and Buck's wife, Blanche, and Clyde's girlfriend, Bonnie, a former waitress, along with several other gangsters from the area.

For more than two years, Bonnie and Clyde crisscrossed the South, the Southwest and the Midwest in stolen cars, robbing banks and businesses, breaking out of jails and trading gunfire with "the laws," as they called the police. During the chase, they killed between a dozen and 18 officers and other citizens, depending on whose account you believe.

Then a friend betrayed them, and on May 23, 1934, "the laws" gunned down Bonnie and Clyde in a roadside ambush near the tiny town of Gibsland, La.

Clyde was 25 years old, Bonnie, 23. Despite their often-expressed wishes to be buried side by side, their graves are in separate Dallas cemeteries.

"I think Mrs. Parker should have buried them together like Bonnie asked her to," Marie Barrow says. "She promised she would. I guess she was a little hot after Bonnie got killed. You know, somebody drags your daughter off and gets her in trouble. But maybe Bonnie was as bad as Clyde was."

During their brief and violent careers, they upstaged such notorious Depression-era outlaws as John Dillinger, Pretty Boy Floyd and Machine Gun Kelly. Even before their deaths, they became legend, endowed by the press and the popular imagination with almost superhuman dash and cunning.

Since their deaths, dozens of books and numberless newspaper and magazine articles have been written about them. At least six movies for theater and TV — all of them wildly and willfully inaccurate — have portrayed them either as murderous monsters or as romantic fighters against an unjust and oppressive society.

"I don't guess people will ever let them die," Ms. Barrow says. "I really don't know why."

Through June 30, on the J. Erik Jonsson Central Library's seventh floor, a special exhibition called "Desperados," an exhibit of documents, photographs and artifacts related to Bonnie and Clyde will be on display in the Texas/Dallas History and Archives Division, seventh floor of the J. Erik Jonsson Central Library, 1515 Young St.

Homeowners' tax burden growing

AUSTIN (AP) — Homeowners are paying a growing share of school property taxes, according to a state report that comes out as a gubernatorial committee prepares to hear the public's thoughts on property tax relief.

There is "homeowner unrest about increased appraisals. It's widespread," Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer, who heads the Citizens' Commission on Property Tax Relief, said Wednesday.

The first hearing by the panel, which was appointed by Gov. George W. Bush, is Friday in El Paso.

Public school property taxes in Texas rose more than 3 percent, to $9.3 billion, in fiscal year 1995, said the report from Comptroller John Sharp.

Residential property taxes made up 43.52 percent of the total, or $4 billion. Single-family homes accounted for most of that at $3.6 billion, or 38.72 percent of all school property taxes.

That's up from fiscal year 1994, when residential properties made up 42.29 percent of school taxes, or $3.8 billion; and single-family homes, 37.75 percent, or $3.4 billion.

Business property taxes make up a bigger portion of total school property taxes. In 1995, they added up to $4.5 billion, or 47.95 percent.

But that's down slightly from 1994, when business property taxes made up 48.95 percent of the total, or $4.4 billion.

Homeowners' share of school property taxes has been on the rise for years.

In fiscal year 1992, business property taxes made up 52.47 percent of the school tax total, while residential property taxes made up 37.72 percent.

Overall, this is the smallest percentage increase in school property taxes since fiscal year 1992, said Debbie Wheeler of the comptroller's property tax division.

The increase was 8.1 percent between 1991 and 1992; nearly 6.2 percent between 1992 and 1993; and 4 percent between 1993 and 1994. Ms. Wheeler said school districts' reasons for setting taxes at a particular rate would vary around the state.

As for the increase in the share of taxes paid by residential property owners, Ms. Wheeler said that's mostly due to increased values.

Single-family home values have gone up nearly 7 percent in Texas as more people move into the state, and low interest rates and high rents prompt interest in home ownership.

Bomer said he has received several letters from homeowners and that he expects to hear from them at public hearings.

He noted news reports about angry homeowners — such as those in Williamson County, north of Austin — who have received their latest appraisals and are upset with higher tax bills.

Our Plan C covers Medicare Part A and B deductibles...

In response to the continued rise in Medicare costs that's concerning so many seniors in Texas, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas, Inc. is introducing a Plan C Medicare Supplement policy.

Our Plan C, like the Plan C other insurers offer, covers both your Medicare Part A and B deductibles, foreign travel emergencies and skilled nursing copayments.

FOR LESS THAN MANY OTHERS

But there are important differences. Price, for one thing. If you're between 65 and 74, our coverage could be more affordable than many other well-known plans.

And because we're a local company, we can concentrate on giving Texans the thoughtful, attentive service they expect and deserve. Service that's exceptional because it comes from fellow Texans.

We've made our supplement coverage as simple for you as possible. Eligible Texans 65 and over are accepted immediately. You have the freedom to choose your doctor. We do the paperwork for claims made in Texas, so filing and processing is taken care of promptly and efficiently.

This combination of service and value is what has made us such a success for more than 50 years. And it's why Standard and Poor's, the well-known credit rating service, awarded us an "A" rating for our financial position and ability to pay claims.

Don't let increasing Medicare deductible and copayments worry you a minute longer. Simply call today to find out more about our Plan C and our other Medicare Supplement Plans (A, D, and F), as well as all the extra value you get from a company of Texans serving Texans. Or send in the coupon below.

Paratrooper gets death sentence for sniper attack on his own unit

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A misfit Army paratrooper was sentenced to death Wednesday for a murderous sniper attack on his own unit during morning calisthenics.

Sgt. William Kreutzer Jr., 27, was convicted Tuesday at a court-martial of premeditated murder and attempted murder for killing an officer and wounding 18 other soldiers as they lined up for a four-mile jog in the dark Oct. 27.

Kreutzer showed no reaction when the military jury's sentence was read after four hours of deliberation Wednesday.

"He got what he gave," said Staff Sgt. Matthew Lewis, who was wounded in the attack. "The simple fact of the matter is you're responsible 100 percent for what you do."

The attack took place as 1,300 members of the elite 82nd Airborne Division assembled on an athletic field. Kreutzer opened fire with a rifle from a foxhole in the woods, using tracer bullets and especially deadly hollow-point rounds.

■ More national news/3D

Defense attorneys argued that Kreutzer had a personality defect and that he was driven to the breaking point by teasing and practical jokes played on him by others in his machine gun squad.

According to testimony, Kreutzer talked about wanting to kill members of his squad during 1994 duty in the Sinai Peninsula because they put sand in his boots and rigged cords to trip him on his way to the latrine at the night.

The defense also said that Kreutzer, who loved guns and had no social life, was called names like "Crazy Kreutzer" and "Silence of the Lambs."

A former member of Kreutzer's squad testified that the night before the attack, Kreutzer warned that he was loading up his weapons to mow down his brigade in the morning.

Arizona sketch artist uses power of her pen to solve tough cases

By Norman Peckman
Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — The innocent victims of crime stand behind Kim McCall and tearfully glance over her shoulder at what they see forming on her glossy sheet of paper. When McCall puts her hands to work, she knows the job she's doing may lead to the capture of a criminal.

The 14-year veteran of the Tucson Police Department painstakingly sketches the faces of those who steal, rape and kill. The faces that haunt crime victims day in and day out.

It's those faces that McCall tries so hard to accurately depict. She pencils in every detail told to her by the victim, hoping the sketch will eventually lead to an arrest of a suspect.

Recently, composite sketches have caught the public's attention because of sketches of "John Doe 2" in the Oklahoma City bombing case, and the Unabomber case.

Those high-profile sketches have been plastered across nightly news casts and newspapers throughout the nation.

McCall's path to becoming TPD's composite sketch artist began nearly six years ago, when she was selected to attend an FBI training course in Washington, D.C.

"I'm a sculptor. So they figured if she can sculpt, she can draw," McCall remembered her colleagues saying when she was picked to become the police sketch artist.

The choice seemed natural, because McCall has had a passion for drawing since her childhood.

"I used to draw constantly as a kid. I went through reams of paper. Any animal that presented itself, I would draw. I lived out in open range, so if you walked out the door, you could trip over a cow," she said.

After successfully completing her training course, McCall came back to Tucson with the serious mission of drawing composite sketches for sexual assault, robbery and homicide detectives.

"When I do a composite, it's always at the request of an investigator and it's usually a last-ditch effort.

"It's used primarily to narrow down a field of suspects, not to get a photo likeness of a suspect," said McCall, who's drawn dozens of sketches for TPD.

> 'The hardest thing for me is when I know what (the victims) want and I'm not understanding.'
> — Kim McCall, of the Tucson Police Department

When called upon, McCall will travel to wherever a victim feels most comfortable giving a description of his or her assailant.

Then she will go through the FBI's Facial Identification Catalog asking victims to pick out noses, eyes, mouths and other facial features that match the suspect's.

After a victim finishes that task, McCall will begin drawing a face according to the features selected by the victim.

"I come across victims who know exactly what the guy looked like and they remember him, and you just need to pull it out of their head. And then I get the victims who say they don't remember a thing.

"But a lot of times as a face starts evolving on the page, things start coming back to them," said McCall.

For example, in McCall's last sketch, the victim couldn't remember anything about the suspect's eyes, nose or mouth. All he could remember was the shape of the robber's face and his hairstyle.

Not ready to give up sketching the robber, McCall said she began drawing the outline of his face. Suddenly, all the other details of the man's face started falling into place.

"By the time I finished it, he (the victim) was pretty pleased with the drawing," said McCall, who usually allows herself about 90 minutes to complete a sketch.

While drawing sketches is always a difficult task for McCall, the toughest drawings for her are those involving child victims.

"There's so many drawings that are rough, but children are always, always rough, no matter what kind of case it is," she said.

However, one advantage McCall has noticed while working with children is their innocence and honesty.

"Children do surprisingly well because they haven't learned stereotypes yet. Different races have features that may not be present on an individual, and adults may see things that aren't there. But children don't," she said.

The most difficult aspect of McCall's job comes when she is unable to translate onto paper what a victim sees in his mind.

"The hardest thing for me is when I know what (the victims) want and I'm not understanding. I'm not doing what they want. It's frustrating for them when I'm not drawing what they want. When I'm not translating what they want," McCall said.

But when she grasps the victim's vision and is able to get it on paper, that's when the victims usually begin to cry, because they recognize the suspect's face.

"When I look over and see my witness crying, I know I've done a good job. But then it's hard to come back down and go back to work," McCall said.

Oklahoma quilters put talents to work to help city's homeless

By Christine Meyer
Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Push, tug, pull. Another stitch on a quilt.

Just like her mother before her, and her grandmother before that, her old hands manage another stitch through a bright piece of fabric.

The tapestry comes together, weaved with stories of love and frustration. There are memories with each tug and pull.

Now by name, these quilts are different. They're called "ugly" — but that's just a catchy title because to most eyes, they're not ugly. These quilts for homeless families are made with that same love and those mismatched scraps of cloth.

Old hands pull thread and tie a knot.

"I've made hundreds of quilts," says Jaunethia Springs. "I don't like those fancy patterns. Those are too hard." She's not boasting. She can count the friends, nieces, nephews, brothers, sisters and grandchildren who have her quilts. Generations have kept warm with her handiwork.

She smiles and adds, "That's what they ask for, a quilt or a peanut butter cake."

Young hands cut and pin.

Celeste Smith-Warah quickly grabs the needle. Her hands have the strength to give the thread a solid tug. She is telling a story about her grandmother and the quilts that were all made by hands to keep her warm.

"It got to where they were falling apart, we used them so much. We couldn't piece them back together," Ms. Smith-Warah says. She smiles as she remembers the comfort of her grandmother's quilts. "I don't think there are any pieces left."

The quilters labor on because they have a deadline to meet. They cut and sew one weekend. Tack and quilt on another. They want to have 20 quilts done by the time the winter's chill hits Norman. They want to help keep the homeless warm this winter.

The idea came from a story that appeared last fall in Family Circle magazine. Denese Miles and Becky Aguilar tossed around the thought of starting the "Norman Community Quilters." They talked to another friend, Elaine Hunter, who runs Food and Shelter for Friends. She knows about the need for warm quilts because her United Way agency houses homeless people and feeds thousands in its soup kitchen.

Ms. Aguilar brought volunteers from her agency, RSVP, into the patchwork. Friends and family join the effort, and anyone who walks through the shelter's door on a quilting day is put to work.

One Saturday each month, it is the perfect mix of young and old, stories and memories and sharing spirit.

They see blocks cut from donated material. Strips sewn together to make a large quilt. Add a sheet for the backing, a blanket or bedspread for the filling and the work is almost done on another treasure.

The next step is to "tack" it: sew together the top and bottom layers with thread and strong knots placed all over the quilt. Add the cross-stitched message from the quilters and the third quilt is done.

"We want to make 20 quilts by this winter, and I think we can do it," says Ms. Miles. "Each one will have a special cross-stitched message from the ladies. We have no idea where the quilts will end up, but we know whoever has them will have our warmth and our love."

Actually, there is one "ugly" thing about every quilt. After it is folded in half to make a sleeping bag, Ms. Miles adds men's ties to the bottom. The ugly, out-of-style ties hold the rolled up package together.

Ms. Miles said they always need more pairs of hands, even if you've never quilted before. They can use ties, material, blankets, anything to make the project a success.

After a short break, there is a fourth quilt to get to — one that Ms. Springs pieced together the weekend before.

So the tea glasses are set aside, the cake is put up, and it is back to the table. There are blocks to cut seams to press, seams to sew.

Tug, pull, another stitch.

Presidential call

DENVER — The Colorado Avalanche, who crossed the border this season after 16 seasons in Quebec, received a congratulatory phone call from President Clinton on Wednesday for winning the Stanley Cup.

Avalanche goalie Patrick Roy was quick to return the praise, commending the president on his golf game.

"On behalf of my teammates we heard you finally broke 80 on the golf course and we just wanted to congratulate you," he said.

Replied Clinton: "Well, I hear I'm almost good enough to play with you."

The president called the Avalanche's win "a great thing for Denver and the state of Colorado." And, as is his wont with championship sports teams, he invited the Avalanche to the White House.

Playoff MVP Joe Sakic, in turn, invited Clinton to Denver to watch the Avalanche next season.

CFL on ESPN

TORONTO — There may no longer be American-based teams in the CFL but the league still has a U.S. television contract.

ESPN and ESPN2 will broadcast 11 regular season games and three playoff games this season as part of a two-year deal announced Wednesday.

All of the regular-season games will be shown on tape delay of from four days to two weeks. ESPN2 will show the Grey Cup championship game live.

Henley denies plot

LOS ANGELES — Former LA Rams cornerback Darryl Henley denies conspiring to murder a judge and an ex-cheerleader who had roles in the cocaine case in which he was convicted, his attorney said.

"Darryl is very troubled and concerned and upset at the government's continuing efforts at targeting him and family members and friends, and he denies all allegations," defense attorney David Reed said.

Henley, 29, was accused of trying to put together cocaine and heroin deals from his jail cell to finance the contract killings for $100,000 apiece. He and three others were named in the 13-count indictment.

"It's extremely unfortunate if these charges are true," Assistant U.S. Attorney Marc Harris said. "And we think we've got the evidence to support them."

Seattle rains on Bulls' parade

By Chris Sheridan

Game 4
Bulls 86
Sonics 107

SEATTLE (AP) — History is on hold and the debate will have to wait. The Chicago Bulls couldn't close out the Seattle SuperSonics on Wednesday night.

The Bulls, looking to sweep the NBA Finals and lay claim to the title of greatest NBA team ever, instead had their party ruined by the Seattle SuperSonics in a 107-86 loss that was stunning for both its unexpectedness and its lopsidedness.

Seattle, given almost no chance of forcing a Game 5, came out loose for the first time in the series, extending it to Friday.

The Sonics jumped out to a 21-point halftime lead, frustrated the Bulls into a stream of mistakes and sent Chicago's three superstars to the bench in the fourth quarter to ponder a wasted opportunity.

"We played basketball for 48 minutes — that's what you have to do," Kemp said. "If we come out Friday with the same intensity, it should be the same result."

Now, the Bulls will have to suit up at least once more to try for a clinching victory that will never been as special as a sweep would have been.

Shawn Kemp and Gary Payton, the Sonics' two All-Stars who never clicked at the same time in the first three games, finally got the job done together

TANISHA MILLS: CAUGHT AT THE TAPE

Trials and error

■ Despite numerous awards and titles, former Midland Lee sprinter TaNisha Mills will try and rebound from narrowly missing the 1996 U.S. Olympic Trials.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Being so close to your dream you can touch it and then having it snatched away.

That happened to former Midland Lee standout TaNisha Mills as she fell a few spots short of a trip to Atlanta and U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials which will be held there this weekend.

Mills, who runs for Rice University, had provisionally qualified for the women's 100- and 200-meter sprints, but with a provisional mark, the waiting game takes over. A ticket for one of the 32 spots comes after all automatic times are taken and then the top provisional times are selected. Mills just missed out.

"Right now, I am not feeling that awesome," said Mills from her residence in Houston. "It is a great achievement to know I am in the top 40 (in the nation). Life is like that and things get out of whack.

"I know I can go faster. I was hoping to do that at the Olympic Trials. I would have like to see what I could have ran."

In the 100, Mills, who blistered the track to an 11.44 in College Station, missed the automatic qualifying standard (11.40) by .04 of a second. The three remaining spots were taken from runners who had run 11.41.

In the 200, Mills ran a 23.44, but that again just fell short of the automatic standard (23.30). Four provisional qualifiers will be taken to fill the spots. Though the field is not set and there is still a very outside chance of her being added, it looks like she will miss the a spot by .1 of a second.

What might have been the most frustrating part of it was that Mills says she was never informed by Rice coach Vic-

MLB council forces Schott to step down

By Murray Chass
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Marge Schott, suspended in 1993 for her disparaging ethnic and racial remarks, agreed Wednesday to relinquish her role as managing general partner of the Cincinnati Reds through the 1998 season after another series of questionable comments.

Schott's decision, which was announced Wednesday night, came after a week of back-and-forth negotiations between her lawyer and lawyers for Major League Baseball. The executive council, which rules baseball in the absence of a commissioner, had given Schott an ultimatum at a meeting last Wednesday — step down voluntarily or be suspended.

The council, which is made up of four owners from each league and the two league presidents, had been prepared to suspend her for at least two years. The members held a telephone conference call late Wednesday afternoon that lasted for 30 to 45 minutes, agreeing to accept Schott's decision, then announced it nearly four hours later.

"Mrs. Schott today has acted in the best interest of the game, the city of Cincinnati and her fans, who have meant so much to her during her 11 years in baseball," Bud Selig, the acting commissioner, said in a statement.

Schott, 67, will retain her ownership in the Reds but will not be involved in the day-to-day decisions of the club. She will immediately turn over control to John Allen, the club controller, for up to 60 days. During that time, Schott and Leonard Coleman, the National League president, will seek a mutually agreeable managing executive to run the Reds through the 1998 season.

The council, of which Selig of the Milwaukee Brewers is chairman, suspended Schott in 1993 for her insensitive racial and ethnic remarks. At the time, she was warned not to repeat her conduct, and the council concluded that she had done just that in recent television and magazine interviews.

Rain making Oakland Hills a tougher course

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. — Nick Faldo's eyes became narrow slits when he talked about Oakland Hills Country Club. The whir in his head was almost audible as he tried to formulate a strategy and store it away.

Angels snap home skid with 3-2 win over Diablos

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Diablos 2
Angels 3

For the first time since May 13, the Midland Angels won a game at Christensen Stadium, ending a nine-game home losing streak by beating the El Paso Diablos 3-2 Wednesday night.

Jose Monzon, a reserve catcher who was making a rare appearance as the designated hitter, singled in Derrin Doty with the winning run in the eighth inning, and Angel relief ace Mike Freehill was just good enough to earn his fifth win of the season against no losses.

Monzon turned a failure into hero status with his eighth inning, two-out single that snaked its way into left field with Doty on second base after a sacrifice bunt by Jamie Burke. Monzon left the bases loaded with two outs in the sixth inning by striking out in a 2-2 tie against El Paso starter Steve Whitaker, but he made good on the second chance in the eighth.

"It's tough when you don't get a chance to play every day and face some pitchers with some nasty stuff. I've only been playing every four or five days," Monzon said of the strikeout in the sixth, "but (Midland manager) Mario (Mendoza) gave me another chance and I got the base hit."

That set up a win situation for Freehill in the ninth. Freehill doused a major fire in the El Paso

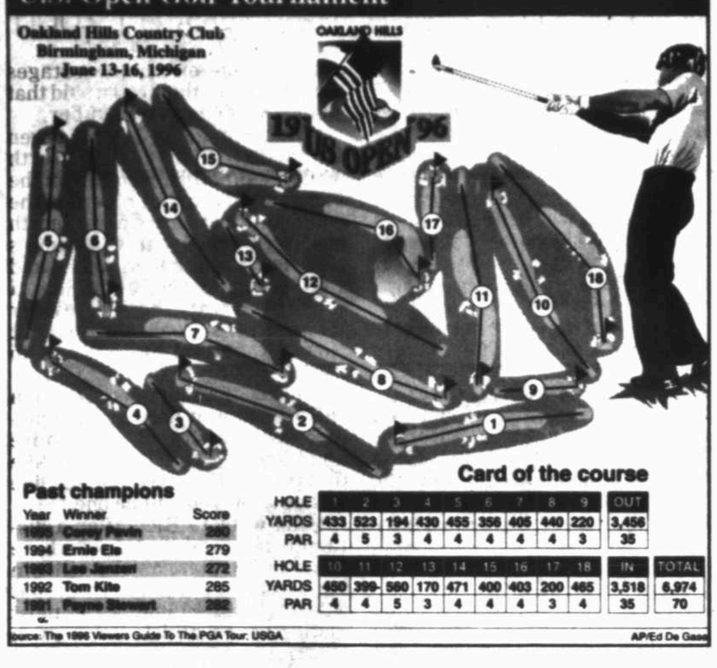
U.S. Open Golf Tournament



OPEN: Par might win this year's event

(From 1C)

on an already wet Oakland Hills course made that even more true. Patience and precision will win this Open.

"There are nine holes where we are hitting more than 5-iron in," Faldo said. "You know, 5s, 4s, 3s and 2s. Unless it dries out, we got all sorts of things."

Forget about drying out. The deluge that drenched Oakland Hills on the eve of Thursday's start of the Open made one tough golf course even tougher.

Oakland Hills was closed and work crews from 25 other courses in the area were brought in to pump off water that was 2 to 3 feet deep on some fairways and filled many bunkers. But officials expected Thursday's play to start on time.

"The golf course is going to play long now," Tom Watson said as the deafening drone of rain on the roof of the press tent nearly drowned out his words. "Very, very long."

Seven of the par 4's measure 430 yards or longer, and they will play every inch of it with soggy fairways that will yield no roll. And hitting out of the already thick rough will now be like trying to play the ball out of wet cement.

"The rough is so deep that anytime you hit into it, the chance of hitting the ball on the green is virtually nil," Watson said. "With all this rain it's virtually cabbage."

Driving the ball in the fairway will be even more important than it already was. And getting long-iron approach shots within two-putt distance on the humpbacked greens will be crucial.

"Some of the pin positions, you are going to have to hit a career shot just to miss the green in the right place," Faldo said, no doubt thinking about where those places are.

Watson, who said the soft, spongy greens will be very difficult to putt when they are marked up by the shoes of 156 golfers, thinks par will be a good score.

"It's going to take a lot of guts to win this golf tournament," said Watson, who showed a bit of guts two weeks ago when he won the Memorial, his first victory in nine years.

The nasty weather makes Watson a contender here. He drives the ball in the fairway, hits his long irons with precision and the reduced speed of the greens should help his shaky putting.

"It's going to be a week of churning out a lot of pars," said Faldo, who is trying to become the first player since Jack Nicklaus in 1972 to win the Masters and the U.S. Open back-to-back. "Just play sensible and keep churning out the pars and hopefully pick up a few chances here and there."

And each drop of rain that fell made the course play all that much longer for short-hitting Corey Pavin, the defending champion.

"It is a real big golf course," Pavin said. "I can't really think of a golf course that I have played that is a harder course than this one."

In the five U.S. Opens played at Oakland Hills, only one player finished 72 holes under par. That was 1985 winner Andy North, who shot a 1-under-par 279.

Rockies take NL winners bracket

The Northern Rockies defeated the Northern Braves 11-0 in four innings to take the winners' bracket of the Joe Mowles Memorial Tournament on Tuesday at Bluebird Park.

The Rockies are the only undefeated team left in the National League tournament and will await the winner of the Losers' bracket. The championship game will be Saturday at 10 a.m. at Bluebird Park. An 'if' game will played at 6 p.m.

Eric Winston had the shutout win for the Rockies and also had a home run. Drew Winston added a triple while Chad Owens and Brett Stevens smashed doubles in the winning cause.

In losers' bracket action on Wednesday, the North Central Angels stayed alive with a 11-9 win over the North Central Rangers. Cory Jensen was credited with the win. Matt Elder had a homer for the Rangers while Cody Harris and Jacob Cooper had triples for the Angels.

The Rangers got doubles from Chris Cotton, Adam Bielamowicz, Kelly Brashear and Matt Morgan. Bryan Dumas and Matt Morgan had two-baggers for the Angels.

The Northern Giants also will live to play another day after their 9-4 win over the Western White Sox. Blake Ary picked up the win for the Giants, who got a bomb J.B. Crume. Justin Stevens had a double for the Giants as did John Hendrix and Tony Madrid for the White Sox.

Chase named NAIA All-American

Midland's Allen Chase was named to the NAIA academic and baseball All-American teams.

Chase, who plays second base at Sul Ross University, was named to the NAIA Academic All-American teams, with a 3.8 grade point average.

Chase was also named to the honorable mention All-American team after leading the Lobos to the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association crown. He hit .505, picking up 24 doubles, four triples and five home runs. The junior also had 56 RBI and hit for the cycle once.

Albright makes WWTGA semis

AMARILLO — Midland's Trina Albright has reached the second flight semifinals of the Women's West Texas Golf Association's Championship at the Tascosa Country Club.

Albright defeated Jimmie Bevers 6-up with five holes to play in Wednesday's second round and will take on Bridget Sewell in the semifinals. The semifinals will take place Thursday and the finals will be on Friday.

Midland's Jo Dickson will compete in the Championship Flight consolation semifinals. After a first round loss on Tuesday she defeated fellow Midlander Ann Drake 3-and-2 on Tuesday.

Becky Hakes will play in the first flight consolation semifinals. She defeated Hallie Snyder 4-and-3. In the same flight, Flossie Larsh just missed the consolation semifinals with a 5-and-4 loss to Ida Goad.

In the third flight, Susan Pickard will compete in the consolation semifinals after her 4-and-3 win over Sandy Bynum. Miriam Jones fell 2-down to Marsha Sanders in the fifth flight's second round.

Pat Dougherty defeated fellow Midlander Sherrin Evans in the seventh flight's consolation play to advance to the semifinals while Hazel Pierce lost a 3-2 match to Sherri Sargent in the second round.

Midland golfers win in Merkel

Lindgren shot a 73 to take first place in the boys' 12-13 age group.

Winchell's 100 took top honors in the girl's 12-14. Mindy Winchell tied for first in the girls' 15-18 division with a score of 79, but was awarded second after a scorecard playoff.

Jacques-o-mania begins for Canadian GP

Associated Press

Formula I Canadian GP

MONTREAL — Jacques-o-mania has officially begun.

Jacques Villeneuve, the new star of Formula One motor racing, was greeted by a media throng of about 200 — including 18 TV cameras — to mark his return "home" Wednesday for the Canadian Grand Prix.

All over the city, giant billboards of the 25-year-old sensation in his Williams-Renault racing suit were hyping Villeneuve's first Formula One race on the track named after his late father, Gilles Villeneuve.

Two Montreal TV stations carried his press conference live, with reporters peppering the soft-spoken driver with questions in English, French and Italian for an hour in a reception hall at the Museum of Fine Arts.

Villeneuve, who craves privacy but understands his commercial obligations, admitted it was all a bit too much.

"I always love coming back to Montreal, but this time, it's different," he said. "On every corner, every five meters, there are billboards with my picture.

"I don't really feel like I'm at home. I feel like an object — a rat in a cage."

Villeneuve, who was born in Iberville, Quebec but grew up mainly in Europe, has helped to sell out the race even though organizers have doubled the seating capacity to 60,000. Including standing room, up to 90,000 are expected for the race.

Most will have eyes glued on Villeneuve, last year's IndyCar and Indianapolis 500 champion who already has a win in Nurburgring in his first six F-1 races this year.

"It's been a good start," Villeneuve said. "There were some good races — I got a win — and some not-so-good ones, like Brazil and Monaco, where I made some mistakes."

Villeneuve is tied with Ferrari's Michael Schumacher for second place in the driver standings with 26 points, still very much within reach of Williams teammate Damon Hill, who leads with 43 points.

Indictments against Irvin thrown out

By Janine Zuniga
Associated Press

DALLAS — Prosecutors vowed Wednesday to seek new indictments quickly after drug-possession charges against Dallas Cowboys star Michael Irvin and two topless dancers were thrown out on a technicality.

State District Judge Manny Alvarez dismissed the charges because a member of the grand jury that indicted the All-Pro receiver lived in Tarrant County, not Dallas County.

"This particular grand juror honestly believed that he lived in Dallas County," First Assistant District Attorney Norm Kinne said. "He was just barely across the line."

Because the case is still pending, Alvarez cautioned that a gag order was still in effect.

Irvin, who had been scheduled to stand trial June 24 on cocaine and marijuana possession charges, left the courthouse without comment following the pre-trial hearing. He had faced up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

The Cowboys also wouldn't discuss the matter.

Kinne said his office plans to resubmit the case stemming from a March 4 drug bust at an Irving motel as soon as possible.

"It will be taken back to another grand jury quickly. I'd say within a week," he said. "And we expect a quick indictment."

The three likely won't be called to testify before the new panel, Kinne said, adding that he expects grand jurors would need only 20 minutes to hear the case.

Grand jurors met for several days before handing up the initial indictments April 1 against Irvin, 30 and topless dancers, Jasmine Jennipher Nabwangu and Angela Renee Beck, both 22.

The three, along with former Irvin teammate Alfredo Roberts, were found in the motel room with drugs, police said.

A grand jury indicted Irvin, Beck and Nabwangu on a charge of marijuana possession, a misdemeanor.

Irvin and Beck were also charged with felony possession of at least four grams of cocaine.

Nabwangu was charged with having less than a gram of cocaine, also a felony.

Also during Tuesday's pretrial hearing, a police officer testified that Irvin appeared to be under the influence of "some substance" when police entered the Irving motel in response to a disturbance call.

Officer Matthew William Drumm said Irvin's "eyes were red and bloodshot and it appeared to me he had an extreme case of cottonmouth — dry mouth."

Seahawks' Blades refuses to take stand in murder trial

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Seattle Seahawks receiver Brian Blades declined to take the stand Wednesday in his manslaughter trial as the defense rested its case without calling a witness.

Closing arguments are set for Thursday.

The prosecution concluded its case by staging a courtroom scuffle that seemed to contradict the state's argument about the 1995 shooting death of Brian Blades' cousin, Charles Blades.

Prosecutors had characterized the shooting as a crime of anger, while the defense said the death was "a tragic accident."

As prosecutor Peter Magrino engaged in a mock scuffle with Broward County Sheriff's Office firearms expert Carl Haemmerle, Brian Blades' unloaded semi-automatic pistol inadvertently went off.

The defense has claimed that the gun fired accidentally, killing the drunken Charles Blades who was trying to play peacemaker between his two cousins — Brian and his younger brother Bennie Blades, a safety with the Detroit Lions.

The defense's case hinges in part on the contentions the Walther PPK .380 is a gun that could easily go off.

The shooting happened in the early morning hours of July 5, following an Independence Day celebration.

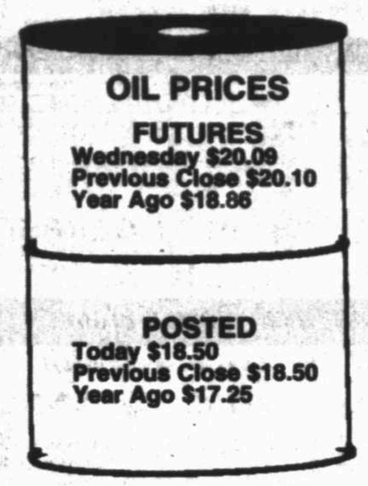
BUSINESS BRIEFING



Prices steady

July crude dipped one cent to close at $20.09 a barrel.

July natural gas was up 0.7 cent to $2.434 for each million British thermal units

Gasoline prices fell after an industry report suggested demand this summer may turn out to be weaker than the record forecast by the Energy Department.

Gasoline stockpiles slipped 863,000 barrels to 205.8 million barrels last week, the American Petroleum Institute said yesterday, a smaller drop than most analysts expected.

The decline came even as refinery output fell and a second straight week of below-average imports. While consumption rose to 8.1 million barrels a day from 7.7 million barrels a day the week before, it's still not at the record 8.2 million barrels a day average use forecast by the DOE.

Dollar slumps

NEW YORK — A late afternoon slump in the U.S. Treasury market nudged the dollar lower against the German mark and Japanese yen Wednesday.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 109.05 Japanese yen, down from 109.43 late Tuesday. The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 1.5325 German marks, down from 1.5347.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday: 1.2631 Swiss francs, down from 1.2645; 5.1990 French francs, up from 5.1980; 1,552 Italian lire, up from 1,549.60; and 1.3669 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3655.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5355, up from $1.5350.

Stocks pressured

NEW YORK — Stocks succumbed again to the worsening mood of the bond market, surrendering most of their gains Wednesday despite a tame inflation reading and an upbeat report on semiconductor orders.

The Dow Jones industrial edged down 0.37 point to close at 5,668.29, retreating from an afternoon gain of more than 36 points.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 4.71 to 1,235.47.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by a slim margin on the NYSE, where volume totaled 390.89 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.87 to 358.68, the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 1.93 to 669.04, and the American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 0.02 to 597.55.

Pickens to step down as CEO of Mesa

■ Forty years after founding company, Pickens says it's time to find new CEO.

By Katie Fairbank
Associated Press

DALLAS — T. Boone Pickens is stepping down as chief executive of Mesa Inc., the natural gas company he used to launch corporate raids in the 1980s, but had to defend from hostile bidders in the 1990s.

Forty years ago Pickens founded the natural gas company with a $2,500 stake. On Wednesday, the 68-year-old told his employees that it was time to begin a search for a new chief executive.

Pickens

Pickens earlier this year brought in Fort Worth investor Richard Rainwater with more than $1 billion in lower-cost financing to fend off a hostile takeover bid.

In return, Rainwater got a 32.5 percent stake in Mesa, with a possibility of garnering up to 64 percent. Also, out of seven board seats Rainwater got four. Pickens will occupy one of the remaining three.

Pickens said that after a chief executive is named, he will remain a big shareholder and continue to hold his board seat.

"I will remain on the job until that process is completed," said Pickens, who owned 7.8 percent of the company as of Wednesday. Rainwater and Pickens will work together to hire the new chief executive.

No timetable for the search has been set.

"No one likes to see the founder, chief executive officer and leader leave. But everyone knew this day was coming," said Mesa spokesman Jay Rosser. "It's a sad day."

Pickens said in a letter to his employees that he is proud of what the company has become.

"It is because of your efforts and commitment that, despite the challenging financial pressures of recent years, we have not only succeeded in holding Mesa together, we have made significant improvements ..." he wrote.

Pickens hasn't said what he plans to do once a new CEO is found.

"Boone has an incredible work ethic. I imagine he will be very active in investments of some type," said Rosser.

Mesa saw a profit in April for the first time in seven years, due to stronger winter demand and better natural gas prices, both of which Pickens called, "God sent."

Mesa also may see a profitable second quarter this year, Pickens said.

Inflation rate nudged up by energy costs

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer inflation was up 0.3 percent last month, pushed higher by another jump in gasoline prices and the biggest increase in the cost of natural gas in nearly 14 years.

The Labor Department reported Wednesday that the May increase in its Consumer Price Index was a tad slower than the 0.4 percent gains registered in both March and April.

But the slight slowdown failed to soothe inflation jitters in the bond market, where investors are convinced that a rebound in economic activity is going to push the Federal Reserve to begin raising interest rates, possibly as soon as the July 2-3 meeting.

Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond, a key determinant of long-term borrowing costs, climbed to 7.19 percent, the highest level in more than a year and up from 7.12 percent on Tuesday.

Stocks fell victim to the worsening mood of the bond market, giving up an early afternoon gain of more than 36 points to finish the day with the Dow Jones industrial average down 0.37 at 5,668.29.

"The issue is not whether the Fed will tighten but when," said Robert Dederick, chief economic consultant at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "I think the economy is going to show enough strength that the Fed will be concerned about inflation."

Dederick said he still believed that the most likely window for Fed action was the August meeting, but other analysts argued that the central bank will want to move sooner to get the credit tightening out of the way before the presidential campaign begins to heat up.

Mark Vitner, an economist at First Union in Charlotte, N.C., said any Fed move should be viewed as a pre-emptive strike rather than a response to actual inflation.

"If you look past the temporary runup in energy prices, the outlook for inflation really hasn't changed very much," he said.

For the first five months of this year, consumer prices are rising at an annual rate of 4.1 percent, sharply above the 2.5 percent increase turned in for all of 1995.

But excluding food and energy, the so-called core rate of inflation was rising at an annual rate of 3 percent, matching the increase for all of 1995.

Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch, said the core rate of inflation shown in both the CPI and Tuesday's report on wholesale prices showed that underlying price pressures continue to remain at the lowest rates since the early 1960s.

Analysts said there were signs that the sharp jump in energy prices seen so far this year was already abating as ample world supplies of oil have sent crude prices down by $5 per barrel, a change they predicted motorists would soon start noticing at the pump.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

More mom than pop, JoJo's Eatery in the sunrise side of the historic T.S. Hogan Petroleum Building squarely in downtown Midland is a throwback to home-style cooking and home-owned business.

It is a tidy, snappy, upbeat, friendly operation owned and operated by blue-eyed JoAnn Mamay, who opens up the diner at 5:05 a.m. each weekday with a pot of coffee and shuts down just before suppertime.

"I want that first pot of coffee to walk," Ms. Mamay said. "I make good coffee; I don't want to see the bottom of that cup."

After that initial brew, she gets into bacon-frying and biscuit-making, including those pungent buttermilk biscuits and her rich-and-spicy Bunker Hill "cow-patty" biscuits that are rolled in butter, cinnamon, and sugar.

"There is nothing that hits the floor that gets back on the table," observed John Reid, a JoJo's regular customer who offices in the 12-story, 1929 Petroleum Building. "This is a clean place" of top-choice, made-from-scratch foods from those generous three-to-four-inch buttermilk biscuits to steamy chicken-and-dumplings.

Ms. Mamay, who opened up the place in 1993 as a soup-and-sandwich shop, has since expanded to breakfast fare and for lunch to hamburgers, chicken-fried steak, vegetable-beef stew, beans-and-rice, chilidogs, and the chicken-and-dumplings fare.

"I make everything that I make here from scratch (except) I don't go kill chickens" for her Tuesday's chicken-and-dumpling fare and Friday's chicken soup.

The open-kitchen cafe has the charm of old ceiling fans, original 1929 terrazzo-tile floor which has the "character" of time and usage more than luster, nine-foot-high ceilings, live trees, shrubs, and ivy, rounded tables around which "you can always get in one more chair," and a copy of the architect's elegant ink rendering of the Gothic-influenced Petroleum Building. The edifice was built when Midland was a cattle town heading into petroleum's wheelings and dealings.

In 1929, Midland's population was about 5,000. Today, it's nudging 100,000.

"It is still is a small town," suggested Ms. Mamay, who is delighted in Midland. She grew up on a New Mexico cotton-alfalfa farm just north of El Paso and later lived "back East" in Connecticut, in Artesia, N.M., and in Dallas.

"I'm a farmer's daughter," reflected Ms. Mamay. "I've chopped cotton before" and was "so proud" of that cotton which she once picked. But the farmer's daughter got her fill of cotton and was "so glad to get away from that farm."

And that husband-farmer, who later strayed from the cotton fields, ended up working for Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot on New York's Wall Street.

"By the time I turned 40," Ms. Mamay said, "I wanted to settle down in my life, work in the garden and flower bed, and do my volunteer work. But it didn't work out that way. You do what you have to do."

Ms. Mamay returned to the Southwest.

"It's gorgeous back East," she allowed, "but once you have lived in the desert, it's something you can't get out of your system. There's something (appealing) about the desert."

By 1979, she was in Artesia, N.M., selling new, luxury automobiles, but the "market fell out of big cars" since more people wanted more fuel-efficient cars. Business slowed down, and she was bored.

"I had to do something more fast-paced."

So, in 1980, Ms. Mamay moved to Midland, where she got a secretarial job working for Mabee Petroleum Company in the old Petroleum Building where she now operates JoJo's Eatery.

Between then and now, she headed over to Dallas to manage condominiums, returned to Midland where she manicured nails in the Tower Barber Shop for awhile, and then shifted into the eatery business.

"It's kind of strange to go from manicures to food, but it's fun," she said. The finger-and-toe nail business, like the big-car business in an earlier time, crept along.

While she enjoyed "the old-timers" who frequented the barber shop and their version of Midland's history, "I got tired of sitting around, doing nothing. If you are going to work, you might as well be productive."

And so she is.

"The restaurant business is fast-paced. You've got an hour and a half to make your money (during noontime) because people want in and out. It's kind of rough."

But she likes it.

Her JoJo's Eatery business started out with soup-and-sandwich fare and then expanded to hamburgers and "entrees everyday to supplement our soup people."

Chicken-and-dumplings continues to be a best-seller.

Most of the stuff is good," Ms. Mamay figured, "and I'm sure if it wasn't, they'd let me know. Very seldom do you get anybody miffy. I like the people that come in - good people."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Foreign stocks can reduce volatility in portfolio

BY BILL DOYLE

Q: With the stock market so high now, where can I invest money for growth without being exposed to the risk of a major correction?

A: Investing in stocks is a time-tested way to make your money grow. However, as you suggest, the stock market can suffer significant corrections. Predicting when that will happen and how severe it will be is impossible to do accurately and consistently.

Doyle

When you say that "the market" is high, you're implicitly referring to the U.S. stock market -- much in the same way that New York City residents sometimes refer to their city as "The City."

The U.S. stock market is not the only one that is open to you. Investing in foreign stock markets can help to reduce the risk and volatility in your stock portfolio.

Individual foreign stock markets do not always move in tandem with ours. For example, when the U.S. stock market plummeted 35 percent in the fall of 1987, many foreign stock markets held more steadily, and some actually rose.

International and global mutual funds offer a relatively safe and rewarding way to invest in stocks outside our country's borders.

There are other time-tested growth investments in addition to stocks, including real estate and small businesses. In many parts of the United States, real estate is "on sale" and worthy of consideration -- just be sure that you can handle the responsibilities and headaches that come with being a landlord.

While riskier, starting, buying or investing in a small business is another proven way to build wealth. According to Forbes magazine, more of the world's richest people built their wealth through small business ownership than through other investment vehicles.

Q: I have two mutual fund individual retirement accounts and a rollover IRA with a brokerage firm. I will be eligible to begin drawing from them later this year but have no need to do so yet. When I am ready in a few years, can I begin drawing down the mutual fund IRAs without touching my rollover brokerage IRA?

By April 1 of the year after you turn age 70 1/2, you must begin making withdrawals. The required withdrawal amount may come from any of your accounts.

Some people prefer to hold onto their brokerage IRAs longer because they contain individual securities which, if sold, would incur a brokerage commission.

Q: Since I am now 70 1/2, I plan to begin taking my required IRA distributions. Most of my holdings are in investment-grade corporate bonds. I told my broker that I intended to open a regular, non-retirement account and simply wanted to transfer the required amount to this regular account. I wanted to know how to do this without incurring the brokerage commissions that would be charged if I sold the bonds to make the distribution. As the bonds won't mature for a number of years, I didn't want to sell them yet.

I've learned that you can do a "distribution-in-kind" and have the bonds withdrawn from the IRA and placed in a regular account. There is no commission charge for this distribution, because the bonds are not sold. I had never read of this and thought perhaps other retirees in a similar position might appreciate the information.

A: Thanks for sharing a great strategy for making required retirement account distributions without incurring unnecessary brokerage commissions.

Just because you must make a retirement account distribution doesn't mean that you must sell the security and distribute cash.

Not surprisingly, brokerage firms don't promote that strategy, since it cuts into their commission income.

Bill Doyle had a number of columns prepared prior to his death. The Reporter-Telegram will continue publishing them for the next several weeks.

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Thr: The stock's ticker symbol.
How to use: The ticker symbol can help you get information about a company. Two important uses: Most services that provide stock quotes over the phone require the ticker symbol. Second, stock brokers and analysts can recognize stocks more easily with a ticker symbol.

Generally, ticker symbols resemble the company name although some – BUD for Anheuser Busch Cos. and FON for Sprint Corp. – are more related to what a company does. Tickers on the New York and Amex usually don't exceed three letters. On Nasdaq, they go up to five letters.

The names you see in this paper are abbreviations of the company name supplied by The Associated Press. Companies can help determine what their abbreviation will be. Overall, AP tries to use an abbreviation that will most closely match the full company name.

Stich survives Joyce in Queen's Club match

Associated Press

LONDON — Michael Stich of Germany survived a dogged challenge by Michael Joyce at the Queen's grass-court tournament Wednesday, and came away with a 7-6 (7-4), 6-7 (7-5), 6-2 victory in the second round.

No. 3 seed Goran Ivanisevic had an easier time against Martin Damm of the Czech Republic, winning 6-2, 6-2, and next will play Stefan Edberg for a place in the quarterfinals.

Edberg overcame young Australian Sandon Stolle 7-6 (8-6), 6-3, after Stolle had won both their previous meetings. The No. 5-seeded Stich plays David Wheaton, a 7-5, 4-6, 6-3 winner over fellow American Steve Bryan.

Stich, playing his first match since losing to Yevgeny Kafelnikov at the French Open on Sunday, struggled to shake off Joyce, his tenacious American opponent.

"It's a mental thing. I don't have a big interest in playing tennis right now. I'm still trying to work out what happened in Paris," said Stich, who finally made his breakthrough against Joyce by breaking to lead 4-2 in the final set.

"I didn't really enjoy playing out there today, but I played well when I had to. I played well at the French, and now Wimbledon is my next goal."

DFS Grasscourts

BIRMINGHAM, England — Second-seeded Nathalie Tauziat rallied from 0-6 in the second-set tiebreaker to overcome Thai qualifier Tamarine Tanasugarn 4-6, 7-6 (8-6), 6-3 in the second round of the DFS grass-court tournament.

"We need luck sometimes and today I think was a good day for me," Tauziat said. "When she lost the tiebreaker I thought I would win the match because she was upset. I was very lucky."

Top-seeded Brenda Schultz-McCarthy of the Netherlands had an easier time, winning her second-round match 6-3, 7-5 against countrywoman Petra Kamstra.

No. 4 seed Linda Wild was the highest seed to lose. Kristine Radford of Australia defeated Wild 6-7 (7-5), 6-2, 6-3.

Two other seeded Americans won and moved into the third round.

No. 6 Lori McNeil defeated Dutch qualifier Seda Noorlander 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, and No. 10 Meredith McGrath downed Tina Krizan of Slovenia 6-3, 6-3.

Heineken Open

ROSMALEN, Netherlands — Jan Siemerink of the Netherlands advanced to the quarterfinals of the Heinken Open grass-court tournament with a a 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Brett Steven of New Zealand.

Siemerink, seeded No. 5, will face Jonas Bjoerkman of Sweden, who ousted Sjeng Schalken of the Netherlands 6-1, 4-6, 6-2.

Stephane Simian, who upset favored fellow Frenchman Arnaud Boetsch in the first round, added a straight sets victory over Slovakian Jan Kroslak 6-1, 6-4.

Simian next will play Leander Paes of India, whose stamina carried him to a three-set victory over Canadian Daniel Nestor.

FINALS: Sonics avoid sweep with win

to bring about the upset.

Kemp scored 25 points on 12-for-17 shooting, grabbed 11 rebounds and came up with the night's best highlight-film material — an array of slam dunks in the face and on the shoulders of the Bulls' superstars.

Payton, playing with a coolness that seemed to disappear in a trash-talking rage in Games 1, 2 and 3, had 21 points, 11 assists, a pair of steals and three huge 3-pointers in the first half that gave the Sonics the confidence they needed.

The Sonics did it with defense, too. They held the Bulls to 11 second-quarter points — tying a 24-year-old NBA Finals record for fewest points in a period — scored 25 points off 18 Chicago turnovers.

As for Michael Jordan, his coronation night turned into an evening he'd rather forget. He shot just 6-for-19 from the field, committed four turnovers and was whistled for both a technical foul and a flagrant.

He spent the final 3 1/2 minutes on the bench alongside Scottie Pippen and Dennis Rodman, none of whom had a night worth remembering.

Pippen shot 4-for-17, including 1-for-8 on 3-pointers, and Rodman's eight offensive rebounds were tempered by yet another postseason technical foul and a glum demeanor that mirrored the Bulls' collective mood.

"We can't play any worse than that," Rodman said. "When you got a ball that's slipping out of your hands, and throwing up 3-point shots. ... It's only one game, we're gonna come back Friday. It gives the people some excitement, and hopefully we'll come back and be all right."

Hersey Hawkins scored 18 points, Sam Perkins came off the bench to score 17 and Detlef Schrempf had 14. The inspirational lift the Sonics needed was provided by Nate McMillan, who shook of a painful nerve injury that had sidelined him for most of the series and had eight points, three rebounds and three assists.

McMillan also connected on a tide-turning 3-pointer in the third quarter after Chicago had pulled within 13. It was followed by a 17-5 run that sealed the Sonics victory and turned the rest of the game into garbage time.

Seattle came out ready to play in the first quarter, scoring 18 of the first 27 points, including a pair of 3-pointers by Payton and one by Hawkins for a nine-point lead with 3:45 left. Rodman picked up a technical just 4 1/2 minutes in, apparently for making a gesture at referee Joe Crawford, and Seattle led 25-21 after one.

Seattle captured the momentum again right at the start of the second period, going on an 11-0 run marked by Payton's third 3-pointer and a fast-break dunk by Schrempf for a 36-21 lead. Consecutive jumpers by Jordan appeared to break Chicago's slump, but the Sonics closed the half with a 12-5 run for a 53-32 lead at the break.

Chicago had an 11-4 run at the outset of the third quarter to pull within 14, and a pair of foul shots and a technical foul shot by Jordan with 1:38 left got the deficit down to 13, 75-62.

But McMillan hit a wide-open 3-pointer from the top of the key 13 seconds later, and Jordan was called for a flagrant foul with 56 seconds left for hacking David Wingate on a fast break.

Wingate made both shots and Kemp tipped in a miss on the ensuing possession. Perkins had a left-handed slam in Rodman's face with six seconds left in the quarter to built the lead back to 21 entering the fourth.

The Bulls trailed by as many as 27 and never got closer than 18 the rest of the way.

The Bulls never really got into a groove offensively. Chicago's 11 second-quarter points were the fewest for that quarter in NBA Finals history.

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — The guard from Generation X took it to basketball's grand master Wednesday night.

With his Seattle SuperSonics on the brink of a humiliating NBA Finals sweep at the hands of the game's best player and what might be the best team of all time, Gary Payton wouldn't quit.

The brash, gum-popping, diamond-loving playmaker outplayed Michael Jordan, and denied, or at least postponed, what might have been the Chicago superstar's finest moment.

Jordan, in a quest to complete his triumphant return to the game by leading the Bulls to their fourth NBA title in six years, was just 6-for-19 from the field with four turnovers, three rebounds and two assists.

In frustration, he also was called for a technical foul and a flagrant foul.

After missing his first three shots, all 3-pointers, he wound up 7-for-15 overall and 3-for-6 from 3-point range for 21 points. He also had 10 assists, two steals and just one turnover.

And "The Glove," as Payton is known, finally lived up to his billing as the NBA's defensive player of the year.

Payton had been matched against Jordan sporadically in the first two games out of fear of foul trouble. On Wednesday night, Seattle coach George Karl decided to start Payton on Jordan.

The matchup set the tone for the night. Payton, his long arms flailing, fronted Jordan, making it tough for him to get the ball.

Jordan, named to the all-defensive team for the seventh time this season, guarded Payton much of the night. Twice on the baseline, Payton drove around Jordan as if he was frozen in time, tossing in easy layups to the deafening roar of the Key Arena crowd.

Payton was helped by the return of his favorite backcourt teammate, Nate McMillan, who had missed virtually the entire series with a nerve problem in his back. The Sonics also rediscovered the 3-pointer, making 9-for-17 blowout that was just as overwhelming as Chicago's 108-86 rout of the Sonics on the same court Sunday.

Her recent comments, especially one that Adolf Hitler was good in the beginning, provoked an outcry from various groups and further embarrassed baseball. In a statement anticipating council action Wednesday, Phil Baum, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, called for a "full-scale effort by the commissioner's office to find a buyer for the club" so that "her pernicious influence" could be removed from baseball.

"Nazi sympathizers, blatant racists, foul-mouthed public figures and pinch-penny owners have no business being in Major League Baseball," Baum said.

Schott, who became a limited partner in the club ownership in 1981 and then assumed the position of managing general partner on Dec. 21, 1984, was the only woman in direct control of a major league club.

As wife of an aging Gene Autry, Jackie Autry ran the California Angels for years before Disney bought 25 percent of the team this year, but she was not the owner of record.

Rangers rough up Brewers

Associated Press

AL Roundup

ARLINGTON, — Mickey Tettleton homered twice, Damon Buford hit his first career grand slam and Roger Pavlik earned his ninth victory as the Texas Rangers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 13-6 Wednesday.

The Rangers broke the game open with a six-run fifth inning that was aided by two walks and two errors.

Texas opened the fifth with a 4-2 lead against Milwaukee starter Angel Miranda (3-4). The Rangers loaded the bases with the help of fielding errors by first baseman John Jaha and shortstop Pat Listach. Reliever Kevin Wickander issued consecutive walks to Warren Newson and Kevin Elster to force in two runs before Buford hit his first home run of the season and seventh of his career to give the Rangers a 10-2 lead.

Pavlik (9-1) allowed five runs and five hits over 5 1-3 innings. He struck out two and walked three.

Blue Jays 7, Yankees 4

TORONTO — Carlos Delgado hit a three-run homer and Marty Janzen scattered eight hits over seven innings as Toronto snapped a six-game losing streak with a victory over New York.

Janzen (4-2), acquired from the Yankees last season for David Cone, gave up three runs, struck out five and walked two as the Blue Jays beat New York for just the second time in 18 games.

Orioles 10, Tigers 7

DETROIT — Brady Anderson's tie-breaking double in the ninth inning helped Arthur Rhodes remain undefeated and gave Baltimore a win over Detroit.

Rhodes (7-0) worked 2 2-3 of no-hit relief for starter Scott Erickson to take the win. He walked one and struck out three before Randy Myers pitched the ninth for his 13th save.

Roberto Alomar was 2-for-4 and is now batting .399.

Angels 4, Royals 3, 10 innings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Tim Wallach tied the score in the eighth inning with a solo homer off Jeff Montgomery, then homered off Montgomery in the 10th to lift California to a 4-3 win, giving the Angels their first three-game sweep in Kansas City in five years.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 2, 12 inn.

CHICAGO — Mike Stanley's sacrifice fly with the bases loaded and one out in the 12th inning scored Jose Canseco and gave Boston a 3-2 win over Chicago.

Athletics 9, Indians 6

CLEVELAND — Brent Gates' three-run double broke a 5-5 tie in the sixth inning and helped lift Oakland past Cleveland.

Steve Montgomery (1-0), recalled earlier in the day from Edmonton of the Class AAA Pacific Coast League, pitched two innings of relief for his first career victory in five major league appearances. Mike Mohler pitched three innings to earn his fifth save.

Mariners 5, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Dan Wilson's two-run, two-out double in the seventh inning snapped a 2-2 tie and rookie Bob Wolcott won his fourth game in his last five starts as Seattle beat Minnesota.

Ken Griffey hit his 22nd home run of the season in the top of the ninth to make the lead 5-3.

Rockies shut out Astros

Associated Press

NL Roundup

DENVER — Marvin Freeman threw seven shutout innings and combined with three relievers on Colorado's first shutout at Coors Field as the Rockies defeated the Houston Astros 8-0 on Wednesday.

The shutout was the Rockies' first in 103 games at Coors Field and third at home in franchise history.

Freeman (4-3), who won for the first time since May 5, had five no-decisions in his last five starts. He struck out three and walked one, and singled and scored a run.

Ellis Burks went 4-for-5 with three RBIs, and Vinny Castilla, Jayhawk Owens and Andres Galarraga hit solo home runs for the Rockies, who have won 14 of their last 18 at home.

Houston starter Shane Reynolds (8-4) went seven innings, giving up nine hits and five runs as he lost for only the second time in his last six starts. Reynolds made his first career start in Denver.

The Astros, who are 3-13 against Colorado in Denver, had runners in scoring position in each of the first four innings. Freeman worked out of the first three innings with groundouts.

Reynolds retired the first five batters he faced before Castilla hit his second homer in as many games and his eighth of the year to give Colorado a 1-0 lead.

Owens extended the lead to 2-0 in the fourth with a two-out homer. The 424-foot homer was his second of the year and first since April 28.

Phillies 4, Cubs 3

PHILADELPHIA — Sid Fernandez allowed only two hits in 5 2-3 innings and Gregg Jefferies and Todd Zeile hit consecutive home runs as Philadelphia ended a six-game losing streak with a victory over Chicago.

Fernandez (3-4) struck out nine and walked two in his first start since going on the disabled list May 19 with a sprained ligament in his left elbow. He had a perfect game after four innings but Sammy Sosa led off the fifth with a double.

Ricky Bottalico allowed one run in 1 2-3 innings for his 15th save.

Frank Castillo (1-9) gave up four runs and five hits in three-plus innings and lost his seventh straight decision as the Cubs' four-game winning streak was snapped.

Mets 3, Braves 2

NEW YORK — Greg Maddux's winless streak reached five starts, his longest drought in five seasons, and Mark Clark pitched New York past Atlanta.

Maddux (5-5), coming off one of his worst outings ever, gave up eight hits and three runs — two of them earned — in seven innings.

Not since Maddux went seven starts without a win in 1991, the season before he began a string of four straight Cy Young Awards, has he gone so long without a victory. Since his last victory, he is 0-2 with three no-decisions.

Expos 8, Marlins 0

MONTREAL — Jeff Fassero allowed five hits in eight innings and Sherman Obando homered and drove in three runs, sending Montreal Expos over Florida.

Fassero (6-5) struck out five and walked none to win his third straight start as Montreal took the three-game series 2-1, sending Florida to its eighth shutout this season. Mel Rojas pitched the ninth.

Montreal jumped out to a 4-0 lead off Al Leiter (8-5), who worked just 2 2-3 innings in his shortest outing in 14 starts this season.

ANGELS: Doty, Ortiz both go 2 for 4

(From 1C)

eighth. The Diablos scored a run on an RBI single from Brad Seitzer off Angel reliever Anthony Chavez that tied the game at 2-2. Chavez, then, gave up a single to Danny Perez and walked Jonas Hamlin with only one out. Freehill got the Angels out of the jam by getting Todd Dunn to ground into a double play.

Things weren't as easy for Freehill in the ninth. He walked Lauro Felix and Hector Ortega, back-to-back with one out, but got Cecil Rodriques to fly to left and KOed Darrell Nicholas on strikes to win the game.

"It was a poor outing for me," Freehill frankly stated after the game. "Walking two batters in the ninth inning isn't what you look for in a late inning reliever. I'm just glad things turned out OK for the team."

The tight-fisted game was a battle between El Paso's Whitaker and Midland starter Matt Beaumont for much of the game. Beaumont gave up a run in the fourth inning when Bobby Hughes connected for a solo homer. Hughes has four RBIs in his last two games at Christensen.

Midland answered in the bottom of the fourth when Bo Ortiz slammed his eighth homer of the season to lead off the inning. Midland led 2-1 in the sixth when Edgar Alfonzo scored on a double by Doty, but El Paso tied it up in the eighth when Beaumont left the game, but was charged with the run.

Both Whitaker and Beaumont deserved better fates, but both came away with no decision. Both Whitaker and Beaumont pitched out of a bases loaded jams in the game.

ANGEL DUST: Midland's last win at home came against Arkansas on May 13... El Paso's Gabby Martinez, a shortstop, was thrown out of the game by home plate umpire Jeff Patterson in the second inning for arguing over a third called strike. Martinez threw his batting helmet onto the playing field on his way to the club house. Expect more of this in the days to come since these two teams will play each other 10 more times in the next 10 days... Mendoza shook up the Midland batting order while trying to end the nine-game slide at Christensen. Ben Molina and Monzon, both catchers, were put in the batting order while Ty Boykin got a start at first base, replacing Leon Glenn, and Derrin Doty moved back into the starting lineup in right. Jamie Burke played third as Midland All-Star MVP Aaron Guiel was given a rest. Usual DH Ralph Bryant was also benched Wednesday...

YOUR HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A powerful individual will join forces with you. Thrilling progress can be made in business and financial ventures. Those who go back to school next fall will find greater success on re-entering the job market. Being too opinionated in job interviews is risky. Record your thoughts in a journal. Colleagues are eager to reveal what they know. Use this information judiciously. Take the first step toward repairing an important relationship. Apologize for a slight.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: "Home Improvement" star Tim Allen, tennis player Bettina Bunge, conceptual artist Cristo, basketball player Sarunas Marciulionis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not let a demanding friend jeopardize your financial stability. Be kind but firm. Offer moral support, not cash. A teen-ager in need of guidance will benefit from your encouragement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Financial complications are possible. Keep spending in check. A business acquaintance could try to mislead you. Be careful what you sign. If necessary, consult a lawyer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Continue to build your cash reserves and savings. A new friend makes you aware of certain employment opportunities. Job security is the key to financial stability.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A dream could fuel a desire to travel abroad. Your mate or partner proves understanding. Setting up a better work schedule will give you greater flexibility.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stop spinning your wheels and concentrate on what you do best. Presenting original ideas to the right people will make a big difference. Put romance on hold while giving your career goals top priority.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could run into a former love today. Are you ready to try again? You could be pleasantly surprised. Patronize the best restaurant in your price range. An older person's advice is worth heeding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look for someone who can understand your deepest emotions. A joint financial matter is quite complicated. Seek the help of an accountant or banker.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Worrying about your career or finances all the time could affect your love life in a negative way. Say what you think in a work-related situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your sensitivity to other people's needs will not go unnoticed. Handle an unresolved situation with kid gloves. You may need additional insurance coverage if you have a new addition to the family.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Trouble may be brewing at home. Try to handle things without throwing your weight around. Issuing an ultimatum to loved one will probably backfire.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Other people may try to blame you for their blunders. Get all promises in writing. A potential romantic partner helps you rediscover your sense of humor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be patient at work. A pay raise or promotion could be in the offing. The more you know, the more money you will make! Show you are willing to learn new skills. Versatility is essential.

Opening lead: King of ◇ How you play one suit more often than not depends on the number of losers you have in others. Here is an example first reported by the late Terence Reese.

South wisely decided that the hand would play better in a suit contract than three no trump. Five clubs is actually the best game contract, but four hearts is not unreasonable if declarer is an accomplished technician.

Suppose that South were to win the opening diamond lead in dummy and immediately take the heart finesse. That loses, and a diamond continuation forces declarer down to the same trump length as West. Now declarer can't draw all the trumps or else, when South surrenders a club, the defenders can cash at least two diamond tricks. No matter what South does, the contract will go down to defeat.

Correct technique is for declarer first to test the crucial side suit to find out how many tricks must be lost there. When both defenders follow to the ace and king of clubs, leaving declarer with just one loser in that suit, South can afford to concede two trump tricks. All declarer has to do is cash the ace and king of hearts and, when both defenders follow, the contract can be claimed.

Declarer abandons trumps in favor of surrendering a club. The diamond return is ruffed and declarer simply continues leading clubs. The defenders can ruff whenever they please, but there is no way they can get more than two hearts and a club.

MTV Movie Awards

This is the only awards show that honors the movies that young adults love most. It's a star-filled night, where actors and actresses vie to see who wins the awards for the Best Screen Kiss, Best Action Sequence, Most Desirable Male/Female Actor, Best Villain and Scariest Scene–to name only a few of the offbeat categories.

LONDON — It's a perfectly modern divorce: Rock star Bob Geldof gave his house to his ex-wife, and he'll move into her lover's place down the road.

Geldof and Paula Yates, who have three daughters, divorced last month after 10 years of marriage.

"After three days of complete bloody nightmare in the High Court of Justice, Bob and Paula have with collective sighs of relief arrived amicably at a half-decent solution to their housing arrangements," they said in a statement.

Geldof, 41, who organized the Live Aid concert in 1985, agreed to give his London house to the 36-year-old Ms. Yates. In exchange, he gets a home owned by INXS rock star Michael Hutchence, whose baby Ms. Yates is expecting.

Geldof has a second home in Kent, outside London, where he is living with 25-year-old French actress Jeanne Marine.

BOSTON — Barry White, the velvety voice of romance, responded to an $1,800 come-on.

A radio station had a plane buzz the stage at a White show Tuesday night with the message, "Barry: Call the Two Chicks at WRKO." The message included the phone number.

White called as he left the stage at the Harborlights tent on Boston Harbor.

The request was from Leslie Gold and Lauri Kramer, hosts of a talk show called "Two Chicks Dishing." Gold and Kramer got their interview, and even got the singer to do a couple of promos for the show.

"He was great. He said he didn't know he had fans like this and wondered who hired a plane to fly over his concert," said producer Nancy Shack.

PHILADELPHIA — Israel's lame-duck Prime Minister Shimon Peres and King Hussein of Jordan will share the $100,000 Philadelphia Liberty Medal for their pursuit of peace in the Middle East.

The award, announced Tuesday, will be presented during the city's Fourth of July festivities at Independence Hall.

Hussein and Peres first held secret peace talks in 1987. Peres, winner of the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize for his role in the Oslo peace accords, lost an election last month to Benjamin Netanyahu.

They have been separated since August. Ms. Brown, Miss America 1971, asked for custody of their two children.

The couple were married on St. Patrick's Day in 1979 by the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, seven months before Brown was elected governor.

Brown Jr., made his fortune as owner of Kentucky Fried Chicken and is now in a venture with Kenny Rogers' Roasters.

LOS ANGELES — "10" star Dudley Moore has filed for divorce from wife No. 4.

Moore, 61, cited irreconcilable difference Tuesday in seeking a divorce from Nicole, his wife of two years. She is 29 years his junior.

Ms. Moore told a London tabloid last year that Moore had moved out of their house in Newport Beach. At the time, Moore denied the story.

Moore was arrested in 1994 for investigation of abuse after a disagreement with his bride-to-be. Moore accused her of refusing to leave his beachfront home; she claimed he pushed and struck her.

The couple married the following month.

The show on Tuesday was the second awards show held in as many days during International Country Music Fan Fair Week, when some 24,000 hard-core fans flock to Music City for concerts and autograph signings.

WHEN IN TOKYO...

Share in the joy of a Japanese Wedding

By Jennifer Merin

TOKYO (AP) — Break away from the Ginza, Imperial Palace, Ueno Park and other regular tourist stops in Tokyo and glimpse an elaborate ritual dear to the hearts of the natives: the Japanese wedding.

You may not have to stray far, because many of the most extravagant ceremonies take place in top tourist hotels, orchestrated by resident wedding planners. If there are no weddings at your hotel, ask the concierge for the address of a nearby "wedding plaza."

The plaza, also known as a wedding town, is a commercial space dedicated to providing all of the planning and accouterments for a proper wedding. It provides everything from the makeup artists and hairdressers to flowers and photos to banquets and souvenirs. Plus all of the bridal attire. Japanese brides rent their bridal costumes, from traditional kimonos to wedding gowns to cocktail dresses. Bridegrooms rent their wardrobe changes, too.

The most popular months for Japanese weddings are April, May and August. Last year, there were more than 800 weddings — as many as eight simultaneously — at one hotel, the Four Seasons Tokyo, at an average cost of $75,000 to $100,000 apiece. Even in pricey Japan, that buys a lot of pomp and flowers.

The best vantage point for wedding watchers generally is an armchair in the lobby or a bench in the ballroom area. Otherwise, stroll the nearby halls and enjoy a show that has as much spectacle — and nearly as many acts and costume changes — as Kabuki, Bunraku and Noh theater.

You won't have to pay $35 to $100 for a theater seat, and the wedding script is easier to follow than most traditional Japanese drama. There will also be some familiar scenes reminiscent of "Queen for a Day" and the Miss Universe Pageant.

The wedding ceremonies and related festivities take place in a progression of settings — Shinto shrine, Western chapel, formal gardens, reception rooms and banquet hall.

However, don't let public displays mislead you. While you're welcome to watch, you are not a wedding guest. Ceremonies are serious and private, closed to all but family and friends. Don't enter the shrine or chapel during services or wander into dinners or receptions, even if you are drawn to the long-winded speeches.

There's enough to entertain you in the public areas. If members of the wedding notice you as they scurry past, they'll bow, Japanese style, and continue on their way. Some will indicate pleasure that you, a Western tourist, are interested in their wedding.

Your "fly on the wall" perspective is more like being back stage than in the audience. You'll be witness to the bustle from dressing rooms to shrine to dressing rooms to chapel to dressing rooms to gardens to dressing rooms to receptions and banquets.

Wardrobe changes are a big part of the day. The bride begins her special day in a white or multi-colored silk kimono. She is escorted by a professional "wedding mother," since most young women haven't learned to walk on "geta," the traditional wooden platform shoes, or in the multi-layered tightly-wrapped kimono.

For the chapel ceremony the bride dons a Western-style bridal gown, and the wedding mother clears the way for impressively wide skirts and impossibly long bridal trains. The bridegroom, who wore samurai-style attire for the Shinto ceremony, appears at the chapel in tails. Guests wear tuxedos and long gowns or cocktail dresses.

Wedding watchers, particularly women, are fascinated by the makeup and hairdressing. Wigs and headdresses are de rigueur, including the "tsunokakushi," a headdress meant to hide a woman's horns of jealousy.

Wedding party photo sessions include the usual poses in formal gardens and on staircases. The difference is that it is OK for a tourist to ask the bride to pose with him. She'll be flattered, and the tourist will have an unusual souvenir.

THE LITTLE ENGINE THAT COULDN'T... CAN

By Allan Turner
Hearst News Service

RUSK, — For many of its 100 years, the Texas State Railroad was the little train that couldn't.

It couldn't make a profit.

It couldn't be sold.

Born in a wave of turn-of-the-century boosterism to serve the East Texas iron industry, the prisoner-built 30-mile line between Rusk and Palestine was an embarrassment almost from the start. It lost money like steam, and when the iron business cratered, it was reduced to hauling tomatoes and animal feed.

For a time, it didn't run at all, quietly rusting and rotting in the dogwood-flowered hills of Cherokee and Anderson counties.

"The TSR never was a profit-maker for any operator," said Rusk historian John Templeton. "The TSR was a sure thing on paper, a born loser in fact."

Today, though, the little railroad that couldn't has become the nation's longest, narrowest state park, and its vintage steam engines have chugged their way into the hearts of Texans and would-be Texans around the world. More than

Guests go on a Viking adventure

By Jennifer Merin

OSLO, Norway (AP) — "It's good we didn't have lunch before the boat ride. Otherwise, we might have lost our mead," Ragnar Hansen, a 14-year-old Oslo youth, said. "This adventure gives us a strong impression of how strong our Viking ancestors really were."

The boat ride is a simulated sea voyage at VikingLandet, an interactive museum and theme park based on Norway's Viking era, about A.D. 750 to 1050. It begins and ends in a huge cave that smells of old ships and the sea, with about 30 visitors sailing on a stormy Atlantic to ancient Vinland, the Viking name for North America.

VikingLandet is set on 5 acres adjacent to Tusenfryd, a popular amusement park about 30 minutes from downtown Oslo. When visitors step into the park they step back in time, entering a re-created Viking community. They are encouraged to get into the Viking spirit by wearing period costumes, available in sizes ranging from toddler to tall man.

Those who board the ship can help hoist the sails or just sit tight. While a film on a wrap-around screen depicts hardships of Viking life and navigation, passengers are rocked and bounced about on stormy swells. Mist and lightning flashes, smells of old ships and the sea, the threat of attack from another boat and stereo sound effects enhance the experience.

Back on shore, visitors are immersed in

CAN: Railroad celebrates 100th anniversary

(From 1D)

40,000 passengers have ridden the restored railroad since it resumed operation 20 years ago under the aegis of the Texas Department of Parks & Wildlife.

Recently, the railroad celebrated its 100th anniversary with the christening of Engine No. 300, a recently refurbished 83-ton locomotive built in 1917. It will be one of two engines pulling trains on the line this summer.

At the celebration were hundreds of hard-core railroad enthusiasts, a group operations superintendent Mark Price noted with a hint of bemusement, "live and breathe trains."

"I know of avid rail fans who go out and videotape passing box cars," he said. "They'll do this for hours. Then they'll go home and watch it."

THOUGH SUCH railroad love may seem extreme, Price said, the appeal of steam is undeniable.

"Recently, we fired up an engine," he said. "It was about 40 degrees, clear but damp, and the steam just rolled out. It was just beautiful. The steam pouring out — these are living, breathing creatures. When they're moving, there's constant moaning and groaning. You feed and water them — it's almost as if you were dealing with a living animal.

"With the whistles and bells, it gets addicting. It can go to your head."

The Rusk-to-Palestine railway, with its five antique engines, the oldest built in 1901, is the envy of others in the antique railroad field.

"It's crucially significant to the portrayal of its era," said John Dundee, executive director of the Galveston Island Railroad Museum and Center for Transportation and Commerce. "There is almost no other place in the country to see what you can see there. Steam train excursions are becoming a rarity and that's a pity. They are so much a part of our heritage."

The trains, departing from stations in Rusk and Palestine, make their 90-minute runs on varying seasonal schedules from March to November.

Though praised today, for much of its existence the Texas State Railroad has been a steaming, huffing white elephant — a classic example of how not to run a railroad.

In the heady 1890s, when it appeared that the Rusk area would rival iron mining and smelting centers throughout the nation, building the short rail line to woodlots and mines seemed a magnificent idea. Commercial smelters long had exploited the region's ample supplies of low-grade ore, and foundries at the segregated state prison in Rusk used African-American inmate labor to make water pipe, bathtubs and construction materials. The dome of the new state capitol building in Austin was manufactured by Rusk inmates in the 1880s.

DESPITE SOME concern over the Texas iron industry's future, Cherokee County-born Gov. James Hogg and other boosters in 1894 called for creation of the railroad to bolster prison operations.

By 1896, said Templeton, chairman of the Cherokee County Historical Commission, the first 4.73-mile segment to the mines was completed. Inmates were paid 50 cents a day for the backbreaking chore of clearing right of way through dense forests and laying track.

If a short industrial railroad was good, backers reasoned, a complete line to Waco would be better.

By 1909, the line had reached Palestine.

That's as far as it got.

Thus joined by rail, Rusk and Palestine seemed the commercial center of the East Texas universe, with a combined population of their counties topping 50,000. With the line in place, Rusk residents now had access to Palestine's International & Great Northern railway connection and Palestine residents had access to the Cotton Belt in Rusk.

But the Texas State Railroad nonetheless was an almost immediate disappointment.

The railroad lost $11,300 in fiscal year 1907-08, Templeton said, and continued to lose ground. In 1910, the state tried to sell the line for $529,190 — its book value. "The offer drew exactly zero response from commercial railroads and forced the state to continue operating a losing venture," Templeton said.

Then things got worse.

In 1913, advances in smelting technology led to the closing of the furnace at the Rusk prison. Four years later, the prison became a facility for the mentally ill. And although a Beaumont company tried to run the prison smelter on a contract basis, the plant closed for good in 1921, Templeton said.

After another unsuccessful attempt to sell the railroad, the state leased it to the Texas and New Orleans Railroad, which ran between Dallas and Beaumont. T&NO operated the line until 1961, dropping daily passenger service in 1936 and daily freight service in the late 1950s. For a time, the train operated only when there was enough cargo to justify the run.

Later, the tracks were used by a timber company. The state's rolling stock and engines long since had been sold.

BY 1969, the Texas State Railroad was dead.

But its memory and romance lived, and for three years locals made do with stories until efforts to convert the railroad into a state park succeeded in 1972.

Its current shop superintendent, Blair Lavell, 68, a reticent man who oversaw the eight-year effort to refurbish Engine No. 300, admitted that some find the Texas State Railroad a "boring" railroad.

"They had a wreck or two," he said, "but there were no spectacular crashes.

ONE EARLY engineer developed 11th-hour doubts about the soundness of his bridge across the Neches River and paid with his life.

"He was out on the bridge waiting for the first locomotive to come across it," Lavell said. "But, when the engine moved onto the trestle, the bridge began to shake violently. That would happen when those heavy engines moved across. But he apparently thought the whole thing was about to fall down and jumped overboard and was killed."

Another — associated with the park in its early years — suffered a heart attack, Lavell said, when he first laid eyes on the hopeless rusted hulk of a steam locomotive he had cheerfully obtained from the Army.

When the state parks officials took control of the railroad — initial plans called for converting it into a hike and bike trail — they found themselves saddled with a blessing and a curse. While they acquired right of way through one of the most scenic and historic areas of the state, they also became owners of a cheaply built railroad sadly in need of repair.

State prisoners again were brought in to fix the roadbed and a campaign was launched to acquire locomotives and coaches.

Today, four of the park's five steam engines regularly are used for the run, and the park maintains a shop in which most repairs and restorations are performed.

ROLLING STOCK includes seven commuter coaches used by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific in the 1920s, a wood-paneled library coach from the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and a 1910s open-air observation coach from the International & Great Northern.

"Some of the purists are critical of us for painting our locomotives," Lavell said, alluding to the deep maroon of some of the engines. "They expect them to be all black. But this is all authentic. The B&O (Baltimore & Ohio) painted its engines blue. The T&P (Texas & Pacific) was green. I think the Southern painted some engines green."

In addition to the steam engines, the Texas State Railroad owns three 1940s-era diesel locomotives, which are not used on the line.

"They are beautiful antiques," operations superintendent Price said, "but a decision was made that running diesel would just diminish the railroad. We want to be known as a 100 percent steam railroad."

The Texas State Railroad operates March 23 through Nov. 16, observing varying schedules depending on the season. Adult admission is $10 one-way, $15 round-trip. Children's fare is $6 and $9. Two-dollar discounts apply on all fares in June, July and August. Train cars are not air-conditioned or heated. Reservations are recommended. Telephone: (903) 683-2563.

VIKING: Guests can feast on a Viking banquet, view sights

(From 1D)

Viking life, its intrigues of the state and heart, economic dealings and heroic deeds. Dramatized vignettes, written by Torill Thorstad Hauger, a novelist whose stories are set in the era, unfold throughout the park.

In a large hall, guests may feast on a Viking banquet — sour cream porridge, roast meats and fish and bark bread, with mead to wash it down. At the Kaupangen, or trading place, they can watch artisans at work and shop for pewter mugs and jewelry and other Viking crafts. A boat builder is at work on the launching dock, and the blacksmith is in his shop making armor and weapons and shoes for Icelandic ponies.

A lesson on herbal medicine awaits at Ravengirl's House. At Tingplassen, or parliamentary court, all free Viking men and unmarried women gather to debate laws and deal out punishment to those found guilty of theft or murder. A man found guilty of killing a freehold farmer was fined 190 cattle. At Leikvollen, young men train with bow and arrow, sword and spear for combat in Viking raids.

Visitors may even visit a burial mound to see how the Vikings laid their fallen comrades to rest.

IF YOU GO:

VikingLandet is open weekends and holidays in May, daily from June through mid-August and weekends through mid-September.

The park in suburban Vinterbro is reachable by shuttle bus or public transit. Shuttle buses (about $5 per person) from Oslo Central Station to Tusenfryd stop near VikingLandet's entrance. Public buses (about $2.50) to Drobak, Route 541, stop at the park entrance.

Park admission is about $15 per adult, $8 per child under 55 inches in height. It includes costumes and access to all attractions. Park food, a la carte, averages $10-$15 per meal. Combination tickets for VikingLandet and Tusenfryd are about $20 per adult and $13 per child under 55 inches. Combination tickets must be bought prior to entry at either park.

DEAR ABBY

Accepting in-laws can create loving family

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was offended by your response to "Nameless, Of Course," who was upset that her former brother-in-law's new wife had "corrected" her when she introduced them as "my brother-in-law and his wife, JoAnn," by injecting, "He WAS your brother-in-law."

Van Buren

You were way off base to label the new wife as a "petty, insecure woman." I think that label better applies to the former sister-in-law.

As the wife of a former widower, I know you were correct when you stated that marriage is more than the joining of two individuals; it is also the joining of families. But Abby, if joining families is a goal, why would you condone this obvious exclusion of the current wife? If "Wayne" is her "brother-in-law" and "JoAnn" is "his wife," apparently HE is still considered a part of the family, but SHE (the newcomer) is not! She felt she was treated as an intruder, hence her strong public corrections. No one likes to be on the outside looking in, particularly when her spouse is on the inside while she stands out in the cold.

I have watched some of my husband's former in-laws struggle with this. Those who seem to have the greatest difficulty are the ones who have not accepted the death of my husband's first wife. My husband reacts to this by seeing as little as possible of his former in-laws, who continue to live in the past and cannot accept his new life — or me.

My mother-in-law handles these situations in the classiest, warmest way I've ever seen. At 79 years young, she has dealt with a lot of "comings and goings." In her eyes, everyone is an in-law. Her brother died at age 39, and his widow is now on her third husband. Mom always introduces them as "my sister-in-law and brother-in-law," and we refer to them as "aunt and uncle." Now that's a beautiful welcome into the family. Ours is a large extended family with many in-laws, and our family events are truly special because everyone feels included.

"Nameless" should take the hint, back off, and accept JoAnn as the newest member of the family. That way, she would gain a sister-in-law, and her "former" brother-in-law would have the family support he and his new wife need in order to succeed in their new life together. — AM THERE, DOING THAT

DEAR AM THERE: You are very perceptive. Your letter illustrates the importance of being compassionate and accepting of new in-laws. The reward is having an extended, loving family. I appreciate your input.

DEAR ABBY: I am a receptionist in a large, busy medical office with lots of people coming in and going out, and phones constantly ringing.

Which person should I take care of first? The one on the phone, or the patient who is waiting patiently in front of me?

I try to take care of everyone in a timely manner, but there are days when it's impossible to please everyone. —OVERWHELMED

DEAR OVERWHELMED: After determining it is not an emergency, ask the person on the phone to please give you a telephone number, and say you will return the call when you are free. Then, deal with the person who made a trip to the medical office.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and I have been reading your column for years and we value your opinion.

She and I were discussing a common courtesy. The example we used was saying "Good morning," or "How are you?" to everyone, including people you don't like.

Mother says she does this all the time — it makes her feel good, and lets people know that she acknowledges their presence.

I say that although it makes her feel good, it is hypocritical to do so, as it gives the people she doesn't like the wrong impression and encourages continued conversation she may not want.

We would like your opinion. — BETTY IN CARLSBAD, N.M.

DEAR BETTY: Saying "Good morning" or "Good afternoon" or "Good evening" is a gracious, friendly greeting. However, some people say, "How are you?" intending it as only a greeting, but it may be taken literally, and in return one may get a litany of symptoms. So it's safer to stick with "Good morning," "Good afternoon" and "Good evening."

Clinton visits burned church; critics call it campaign stunt

GREELEYVILLE, S.C. (AP) — President Clinton promised more federal help to investigate arson fires at Southern black churches but said Wednesday any lasting solution rested on Americans reaching across racial lines to "show the forces of hatred they cannot win."

Clinton chided Republican critics who said his visit to one of the arson sites was little more than a campaign stunt, the president contending that it was the GOP that was politicizing the issue.

And several black leaders rebuked Clinton's GOP critics, who included Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour, House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas and South Carolina Gov. David Beasley.

Richard Allen Leonard, a South Carolina African Methodist Episcopal Church elder, said those questioning Clinton's motives were "mean and cruel and spiteful people" who did not want racial harmony.

"No KKK, no skinheads, no Nazis, no nasties, no Republicans, no pharisees — nobody turn us around," Leonard said.

Two-time Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson said Republicans "are sending signals, they are sending messages" by trying to repeal affirmative action programs and cut federal financing for agencies that enforce anti-discrimination laws. He specifically criticized House Speaker Newt Gingrich and presumptive GOP presidential nominee Bob Dole.

"We challenge those wearing blue suits in high places: Stop race baiting to gain election," said Jackson.

Clinton, however, chose far more conciliatory language after touring the ruins of the Mount Zion AME church and then kneeling for prayer in a new church built in a cornfield about a mile from the rubble.

"We must keep this out of politics," Clinton said, praising the bipartisan effort in Congress to pass legislation making it easier to prosecute such arsons.

Barbour renewed the debate later Wednesday in calling the president's trip "shameless, transparent politics."

Clinton, responding at a later news conference, said the Republicans were "turning into politics what is a very serious matter," and that does not serve the country well.

Recalling his own upbringing in Arkansas during the days of segregation and then the civil rights movement, Clinton delivered an emotional appeal in South Carolina for racial and religious tolerance.

"Every house of worship in America must be a sacred place," Clinton said. "Any place where people gather to worship according to the dictates of their conscience should be protected from violence."

Roughly 1,500 people — nearly three times the population of tiny Greeleyville — gathered near the corn stalks outside the new church on a steamy June day.

"We see in the rebuilding of this church that the false idols of hatred and division did not win," Clinton said.

Mount Zion AME is one of 32 black churches across the South that have been burned in the past 18 months, including four in the past 10 days. Federal investigators have not established a link between any of the fires, but have speculated many could be copycat episodes. Two suspects are charged in the Greeleyville fire, which occurred a year ago.

Quoting the scripture and the late Martin Luther King, Clinton said the rash of fires was proof that for all the progress in bridging America's racial divide, "we have to march on until victory is won."

The new church is to be officially dedicated Saturday. Its paster, the Rev. Terrence Mackey, told Clinton: "They didn't burn down the church — the church is in our hearts. They burned down the building."

Clinton, in turn, presented the congregation with a plaque for the church that read, "We must come together as one America to rebuild our churches, restore hope, and show the forces of hatred they cannot win."

Clinton said he had asked Attorney General Janet Reno to convene a meeting today of U.S. attorneys, FBI agents and officials from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to coordinate investigations under civil rights and other laws and determine if additional resources were necessary.

Already, Clinton said, 200 federal agents were working on the cases, in addition to state and local authorities.

Clinton also instructed the Treasury Department and the U.S. Marshals Service to issue guidelines on steps churches can take to protect themselves from arson. He also told the Department of Housing and Urban Development to help states use Community Development Block Grant money to assist with church rebuilding. And Clinton called on Congress to appropriate an additional $10 million so the federal government could guarantee loans for rebuilding efforts.

But he said there was only so much government could do.

"Americans must lead the way, for this is first and foremost an affair of the heart," Clinton said. "And our heart must be purged of any temptation to go back to the kinds of division that cost us so dearly, especially here in the Southern part of our country."

On Capitol Hill, lawmakers asked for an immediate vote on a resolution condemning the burning of African-American churches. And Rep. Jim Lightfoot, R-Iowa, chairman of the Appropriations Committee panel in charge of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said he planned to add $12 million to the ATF budget to help stop the fires.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Discoveries of how cells fight off cancer have led to the development of a possible test to tell how aggressive a patient's lung cancer is — and perhaps even predict who is most susceptible to tumors.

The test, created by Dr. Antonio Giordano of Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia, is supposed to detect levels of a protein important for stopping cancer's uncontrolled cell growth.

The test is not yet available — a Pennsylvania company is preparing to do additional studies required for Food and Drug Administration approval.

But Giordano says the test is a first step. Ultimately, he hopes new findings on the different molecules involved in a cell's life cycle, including this Rb protein, will lead to a genetic therapy for lung cancer.

"That is many years away," acknowledged Giordano, who plans next month to report findings on 200 patients given his Rb test. He gave a preview Wednesday at a meeting of biotechnologists.

More immediately, if additional studies prove the test works, he said doctors may use it to help decide how aggressively patients should be treated.

"I understand ... this is still evolving," said study participant Norman Gross of Wynnewood, Pa., who says his moderate levels of the Rb protein may be one reason his lung cancer has been in remission for a year. "But I just wanted to know" the results.

Lung cancer kills 160,000 Americans a year, and cigarette smoking is the chief cause. Research indicates numerous carcinogens in tobacco smoke can injure genes that, when activated by a mutation, can stimulate the growth of cells that are precursors to cancer.

But cells have built-in safety mechanisms that are supposed to detect such mutations and stop them. These tumor suppressor genes control cell division — unless they are mutated so they don't work either.

"Can the lack of a single suppressor gene cause cancer? Yes," said Dr. Carlos Cardon-Cardo of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Institute in New York.

The most well-known suppressor gene is p53, but the retinoblastoma gene may be equally important, he said. Originally identified as the cause of a rare eye cancer, mutated Rb genes now have been discovered in breast, prostate, cervical and lung cancers.

Simple cells divide until eventually they are dedicated to a particular function in an organ. Defective Rb appears to allow those "differentiated cells" to start reproducing again, opening a path to the uncontrolled cell growth of tumors, said Dr. James DeCaprio of the Dana Farber Cancer Institute in Boston, who is experimenting with Rb in mice.

Adding the Rb gene to human lung cancer cells in test tubes can "arrest their growth in a dramatic way," Giordano said.

So he used an antibody to the protein the Rb gene produces to measure how active the gene was in lung cancer patients.

"There was a strong correlation between aggressive disease and low expression" of the gene, he explained. So people with low levels might benefit more from stronger — and riskier — therapy, he said.

Additionally, smokers who have low Rb levels probably would be the most at risk for getting lung cancer, he added.

The Rockland Co. of Gilbertsville, Pa., said it plans to seek FDA approval to sell the test within 16 months.

It was unclear how much additional research Rockland will need. Just last December, FDA's scientific advisers rejected a test kit to detect breast cancer patients' levels of a gene believed to spur tumor cell growth. Although several hospitals already offer such a breast test privately, the panel said a study of 244 patients was too small to approve wide sales.

Giordano's eventual goal is to increase patients' Rb levels, to fight growth of existing cancer cells and perhaps even lower susceptible people's risk of getting sick.

But "getting the healthy gene in will be complex," he conceded.
