GERMANS DRIFT TOWARD CERTAIN CIVIL WARFARE

Masses Patiently Wait For Inevitable Civil Strife

BOTH SIDES ARE READY

Government Leadership Is Nothing But Huge Fiasco

International News Dispatch

BERLIN, June 2.—Germany is drifting toward civil war, in the opinion of the most competent observers of today. An almost fatalistic indifference has seized the bulk of the people. Feeling prevails that nothing can avert chaos from arising from the expected civil war of which a fortnight's disorders in the Ruhr and Saxony with 45 dead and 400 wounded appeared to be the forerunners.

Hope for Action.

Millions of Germans, especially those of the nationalist party, hope the crash will come soon so it may be over with and the suspense ended. Their mood is comparable with that of a man facing a critical operation who begs the doctors to hurry because the pain could not be worse than that already being suffered.

The fiasco of diplomatic efforts to settle the Ruhr problem combined with the plunge of the mark and Red riots have reduced the government to a figurehead in the esteem of the people.

Cuno's Star Wanes.

Chancellor Cuno, who a few months was enthusiastically acclaimed the man of the hour, has lost tremendously in prestige due to the fact that England sided with France in the last reparations note and indifferences of the U. S. Hope has centered in Cuno because of his supposed "social relations" with England and America.

Nobody doubts if civil war comes it will be indescribably bloody and ruthless. The left is thoroughly prepared, as was shown in the Ruhr and Saxony, but the right also is ready and determined when "Der Tag" comes to throw everything into the scales in a final and supreme effort. They have nothing to lose. They will play the game of a gambler staking his last nickle on a wild chance of a "grand comeback."

Mark Goes Down.

In the meanwhile, the mark's "dance to death" continues. In less than three months the American dollar has tripled in value, while prices, for the third time in that period, have risen from 50 to 100 per cent. Profiteers are celebrating while the money printing offices are working overtime.

In the meantime, the government fearing another throw-down by the entente, is trying to ascertain what kind of offer would be satisfactory. Great Britain and Italy, unwilling to allow even the appearance of disharmony with France, are meeting all informal feelers and soundings with sphinx-like silence or ambiguous generalities.

That is the situation of this bankrupt, prostrate empire, staggering under a deficit of almost thirteen billions.

Bitterly Disappointed.

"I have not abandoned hope," said Mrs. Phillips today, "but I will frankly say that I was bitterly disappointed when I received information at Los Angeles that I would be taken directly to prison.

"The San Quetin officers need make no especial preparations before a rebellious prisoner. There need be no fear that I will endeavor to escape. My life has been a series of unfortunate mistakes and my escape from the Los Angeles county jail last December was the biggest one of them all."

Huband to Testify.

If Mrs. Phillips is granted a re-

COPS ENFORCE DRY ACT IN N. Y.

Arrests Continue Despite Repeal of State Booze Measure

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 2.—Despite the repeal of the Mullan-Gage state prohibition enforcement act, made effective by Governor Smith's signature last night, police and state officials today continued to arrest offenders of the dry laws and state courts proceeded with prosecutions of offenders arrested up until last night.

The only apparent effect of the repeal was the transfer of prosecutions in cases of new offenders from the state to the federal courts. Predicted withdrawal from the enforcement ranks of city and state police authorities with consequent laxity in the enforcement of the federal dry laws failed to materialize.

Instead, Police Commissioner Enright announced that the police department would continue to enforce the Volstead act and District Attorneys Banton and Dodd declared their offices would continue to prosecute cases already before them.

Commissioner Enright declared that a confere ce would be held next week with legal representatives of the city, state and nation attending to determine the best method of procedure.

"In the meantime," he said, "the police department must go back to the procedure followed under the Volstead act before the Mullan-Gage law was enacted. At that time police enforcement was more effective throughout the city than was possible on the part of the limited number of federal agents assigned here."

Palmer Canfield, federal prohibition director of the state, said he would go to Washington Monday to confer with Federal Commissioner Haynes.

BOYS KILLED AS THEY PLAN BIRTHDAY

Associated Press Dispatch

DALLAS, June 2.—A bolt of lightning, flashing through a tree top snuffed out the lives of David L. Bettison Jr., eight years old, and Harry Wrather, nine, this afternoon, and cut short preparations for David's birthday party later today. Three companions suffered injuries.

The injured and shocked were Clayton D. Browne Jr., 12; Hamlet Harrison, 12; Jack Greenwood, 8. Emma Barnes, negro nurse at the Greenwood home, was slightly hurt.

Boys Scream.

The lightning crackled in front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Harrison, Swiss Avenue, in fashionable Munger Place.

Screams from half a dozen boyish throats and shattering of a tree top simultaneously with the lightning flash and roar of the thunder directed neighbor's attention to the tragedy.

Harry fell prone on the ground from his position at an impromptu soda water stand, erected the day before by two of the boys. David, the birthday boy, crumpled in a heap where he had stood. Clayton and Hamlet, two school boys who owned the stand, were inside it and escaped death.

Woman Shocked.

Mrs. K. M. Lynch, in the neighborhood, said she was shocked by the stroke that killed the two boys. She said she was in her home, using an electric iron. The iron popped and she received a distinct shock, she said.

A negro yardman, working at the Bettison home, was the first to reach the screaming boys around the stand beneath a large elm tree in the parkway in front of the Harrison home.

Mrs. Bettison followed her husband out to where her son lay bleeding in the grass. Unable to stand the strain she fainted a few moments later. Mrs. Wrather also fainted when her son died a few minutes after being brought home.

Neighbors, almost frantic with grief, came from blocks around.

"General" Lee Received $12.50 and Profits, But There Were No Profits Head Of Oil Company Says At Trial

Associated Press Dispatch

FORT WORTH, June 2.—How he and his partner, H. H. Schwarz, organized the General Lee companies numbers 1 and 2 and then sold these companies the leases which were described in the advertising literature as sure to bring immense profits to the investors was told on the witness stand today by Charles Sherwin, defendant with Schwarz and "General" Robert A. Lee in the "oil fraud" case charging misuse of the mails.

Sherwin gave this testimony on cross examination by David Cahill, government attorney. He said the companies were capitalized at $25,000 and $18,000 respectively, and they (Sherwin and Schwarz) took over the entire capital stock in exchange for the leases.

All of this money was taken over by them, he said, together with the remaining capital stock and as payments would dribble into the office after the first drive for stockholders he and Schwarz would pocket the money. As the money belonged to them, he said, there was no use of keeping any books.

While Sherwin and Schwarz realized handsome profits from the first two Lee companies, "General" Lee, the aged defendant who the government alleges is the "goat" of the whole affair, received but $12.50 weekly and occasionally small sums for "tobacco money," accoding to Sherwin's testimony.

He said Lee was to receive 10% of the profits of the company in addition to his weekly salary but as there were no profits for the investors Lee had nothing coming. There were also no "net profits" from the third company, Sherwin said, and Lee received nothing but his salary.

It was also brought out that Sherwin and Schwarz organized the "Old Settlers' Homstead company, a trust estate dealing in royalties, from which no profits were ever derived. The public invested about $8,000 in it, Sherwin said.

DANIELS LEADS ELECTRA ROTARY

Inter-City Relations Are Discussed At Meeting Friday

ELECTRA, June 2.—Dan Daniels of Wichita Falls was in charge of the program conducted by his organization for the Electra Rotary club Friday. Thirty-two Wichita Rotarians were present. The one visitor from the "city that faith built" was Mrs. R. E. (Shep) Shepherd.

After visitors had been introduced by Rotarian H. D. Miller of the local club, Shep Shepherd was called on to lead the singing. It was an incomparable demonstration of Rotary fellowship the way those men sang, and could only be excelled by a crowd of college football rooters.

C. C. McDonnald talked on "Inter-City Relations." He called attention to the changed conditions from the time when cities were places of refuge, surrounded by strong walls, and with locked gates. "There was a time when merchants in one city felt that if a merchant in their line failed in a neighboring city they might profit by getting some of his trade," the speaker said. "Now we know that if one man fails, it hurts every man, tending to make money seek a hiding place. Business is slowed down. So that every man strives to help his fellow."

"If you have wealth," Mr. McDonald continued, "you are responsible for frittering it away. Or if you hoard it up and little children cry for food or ice, it will be held against you in the records of Him who makes no mistakes."

Rotarian McDonnald predicted that in a few years every one would live in cities, and the work of the country be done by machinery, the workmen going back and forth to their daily toil.

A duet by Shep Shepherd and Dan Daniels was enthusiastically encored.

The banquet was served by ladies of the Methodist church in the basement of that building.

OVER MILLION IN 1922 TAXES

Apportionment for School, County and State Not Yet Made

Total tax collections for the county in 1922 amounted to $1,069,146.57, according to the annual report of county tax collector Guy Raley. The report, while still incomplete, is being gotten into shape and has proceeded far enough for the total of the year to be announced. The figures were given out Saturday.

Of this amount, the portions for school, county and state have not as yet been figured out.

The tax rolls for the year showed renditions amounting to $1,378,162.35. This leaves the delinquent tax rolls showing approximately $300,000.

In announcing his totals for the year, Mr. Raley pointend out that the figures quoted included only those collections made up to April of this year and that between that date and the present there had been $25,000 or $30,000 additional collected. Neither do the figures quoted include collections of delinquent taxes prior to 1921, supplementary roll taxes or penalties. Taking all of these into consideration it is probable that about $1,100,000 have been taken in this year.

Two Signs in a Newspaper Office

"Get It First, But First Get It Right."

"Let's Make The Record News An Interesting Newspaper."

These signs hang conspicuously before editorial department members. The first is borrowed from the International News Service. The second is typical of the spirit of The Record News editorial department.

Young enough to be progressive, but old enough to hold a conservative trend in the completed product—The Record News columns are always open to NEWS and ARTICLES that INTEREST PEOPLE in Wichita Falls and this section of the state.

Read today's paper — or read it tomorrow — or go back to the files. You will find it day in and day out printing more NEWS from this section, and from the city at large than any other paper.

During the past two months The Record News has repeatedly scored local news beats of unusual importance—not once but successively. It is not so much a matter of good fortune and accidental when the success is continuous, day in and day out, week in and week out. That's why we put faith in these two signs that hang in the editorial department of The Record News. We believe in these signs.

Week's Activities In Swastika Field Pass All Expectations

TWO PRODUCERS ADDED TO FIELD

Three Wells On Sand And 15 New Locations Have Been Made

BY RALPH SHUFFLER.

OLNEY, Texas, June 2.—The week's activities in the Swastika and Kemp fields in the Olney territory have even surpassed the expectations of the most optimistic operators, and summed up, it simply means that two producers have been added, making a total of four; three more wells are on the sand and 15 new locations have been made, five of which have derricks complete and are rigging up to drill offsets to production.

If locations continue to be made at the rate of more than two a day, in a short time this country will resemble a sieve, and we are confident that the proven territory which now embraces more than three hundred and twenty acres with no outside dry holes will be extended in several directions. That the operators believe the same way is evidenced by the fact that they are putting their money on the barrel head for wildcat acreage and drilling in every direction from this city in a radius of five to 10 miles.

Sun Gets Good Well.

The Sun company has a good well, a thousand feet of fluid standing in the hole and are standardizing before completion. As it stands, however, it is good for 50 barrels per day, and they only cored into the sand three feet. This core hole was filled up when casing was set, still it is making a wonderful showing.

More than half a mile east of the Sun company is the American Refining company well which has been oozing oil over the top of the casing ever since the cement plug was drilled out early in the week. They too are standardizing, but their well is making oil through a wooden plug in the control head and shows considerable gas. It is believed to be one of the best wells in the field.

Swastika 2-A put on quite a little show for a few hours Wednesday when the crew was trying to run tubing. It flowed ten feet higher than the derrick and literally covered the cold drink stand some 100 feet away with oil. This company's discovery well is steadily pumping, and in spite of the fact that they have been running five boilers continuously with this oil, all available storage was filled early this week and two more 500-barrel storage tanks have been erected. Production has to be curtailed and completions are being delayed until pipe line facilities are provided. The Swastika syndicate is erecting derricks for two more wells, one offsetting the Eagle Creek and the other offsetting American Refining company.

Eagle Creek Drills In.

Eagle Creek got the sand early in the week at 1,348, cemented the casing and will start drilling in today, (Saturday). This well should be completed Sunday, and judging from the core, which the writer saw, it is due to make one of the best producers in the field. It is only about 600 feet from the Swastika 2-A, which is without a doubt, twice as good a well as the discovery test.

Lee Wilson, offsetting Swastika 1-B, cored into the sand at 1,394 Wednesday night and are setting casing in cement. Core showed up rich, being same as in discovery well which is 600 feet east. He has made another location offsetting the Sun company on the south, and derrick is completed.

Walling & Clark on the 10-acre lease lying between A and B Swastika leases, got the sand last night, and are setting casing. They are directly between the Wilson well and the discovery and undoubtedly have a well of good proportions. They have made two locations, both offsetting Swastika 2-A; one on the south and the other on the west. Derrick is complete on the south location and under construction on the other.

United Should Hit Sand.

United Royalties are drilling near 1,200, and should pick up the sand Sunday as they are 110 feet lower in elevation than the discovery well. Formations have been corresponding exactly with the discovery and the operators are confident they will get a well, which would extend the proven territory more than a mile to the northeast.

Texas company, offsetting American Refining and between them and Sun well, is drilling around 1,200 and should reach the sand with good luck Sunday. This is proven acreage now, and a good well is expected. These people will have to offset the Sun well, and we are told that arrangements are being made to that effect.

Taylor et al, on the McClure are drilling at 740 and encountered quite a good oil showing at 400. This corresponds with the 500-foot sand which was found in Swastika, and makes their location look good. This is a mile and a half southeast of the field proper, and is being watched with keen interest.

King et al have made a location on the O'Donnell tract lying just west of the McClure and due south of Swastika and are moving a Star machine to the locaton.

LaNeve and ONeill have derrick up and machinery moving to a location on the Hawkins farm, just half way between the Swastika field and the Peter Kemp well. They are located on what geologists agree is a beautiful structure, and are confident of opening up another pool if they do not encounter the Swastika sand, which many agree is the same as the Kemp, and is a continuance of that field.

Featherstone and Ray on the Morrison tract two miles southwest of Swastika are at a very interesting depth, and rumor has it they have a good looking sand. It is being watched with interest, but definite information is unobtainable as to the exact status of the hole.

D'Armitt of Wichita Falls, moved a standard rig onto the Benson tract seven miles east of Olney this week and is rigging up for a 2,000-foot test. This location is about two miles east of the old Miller field which has been producing from a sand at 970 for more than 12 years.

Derrick material is moving from this city today to a locaton by American Refining company interests in the Kemp district, offsetting Peter well on the south, on the Mose Hankins tract. Peter Oils spudded in their No. 2 last Saturday, located 300 feet east of No. 1, and expect to reach the sand in 16 to 18 days with their Star machine. After having been shut down five days, the discovery was placed on the pump again Wednesday, and in the first eleven Since then it has pumped steadily and hours pumped 32 barrels and over, has made an average of 32 barrels a day. The latest gravity test on this oil shows it to be 41.9, which is practically the same as the Swastika. There are five other locations in this territory, but they seem a bit slow in moving materials as interest is at fever heat in the Swastika area, and acreage around the Kemp was placed so high on the start that independent operators have been scared off.

Arthur Yarbrough, artist and sculptor, who is in Wichita Falls for a short time, is exhibiting some very unusual photographic studies which he made in his studio at Oakland, Calif. The studies, in which the artist combines his knowledge of art and sculpture with photography are unusual in their beauty of posture as well as in the photographic excellence.

Several of the pictures are exhibited in the Tipton drug store window, "The Appeal," a study in nude, is an unusual picture posed by a college girl student of the University of California, where Yarbrough studied art. Another study that has drawn comment is "The Slave," posed by a college athlete, showing in marked contrast the physical strength and the cringing character of the slave.

Yarbrough is a young artist who studied four years in the University of California. His work in oil and his models in clay received the praise of his teachers while in school, and he was considered a promising artist. However, he abandoned the older arts after leaving school, taking up futuristic photography and establishing a studio in Oakland. There he has developed his futurist studios to such a point that they have been recognized by critics as unusual. His lighting effects in the photographs and his artistic poses of the models have brought him to the notice of the art critics.

Yarbrough will return shortly to Oakland to continue his work there.

Laurel Gets Best Well of Month In Laredo Field

LAREDO, Texas, June 2.—The Laurel Oil company brought in what is thought to be the best well for this district for the past month, when its No. 2, located on survey 605, Mid Ojuelos field, came in flowing by heads. Casing was set in the caprock at 1,593 feet. Oil rose to about 1,200 in the hole and could not be lowered by bailing. At regular intervals the well flows, and it is expected to make around 300 barrels of oil daily. The total depth of the hole is 1,638 feet. This well was previously reported as producing 100 barrels, but since bringing in has increased its production.

Two other producing wells were added to the Laredo district during the past week, and both were by the Witherspoon Oil company. No. 9, in the Schott-Mirando City field, came in for 100 barrels, and No. 10, in the Mirando Valley field, for 50 barrels.

The Mirando Oil company No. 2 is drilling below 2,100 feet in its deep test, located in the Mirando Valley (discovery) field, and with good indications. The Empire Gas and Fuel company is nearly at the 1,000-foot mark and is running towers. The W. G. Burton test is also approaching the 1,000-foot level, with some showing of gas. The Humble Oil and Refining company is below 1,700 feet in its No. 1 on the Tom East ranch. Another important test that is scheduled to spud in this week is that of Finley, Beatty, Baker & Bailey, located on the C. Gonzales tract, survey 100, about 30 miles northwest of Laredo. A well was commenced in this vicinity a few years ago by the Rio Grande Oil and Gas company, but due to financial difficulties was never completed. The contract calls for a deep test, one to at least 3,000 feet, but production is expected before that depth is reached. The location was made by Walter Smal', geologist.

The A. D. J. Oil company, located south and west of Encinal, is below 2,400 feet in hard rock. The well continues to show heavily of gas and oil and it is believed that the first strata of sand encountered will be productive.

Parker Well Stands 100 Feet In Oil

The Parker test well on the Lake Wilson ranch, in the Peterson district, No. 1 on lease B, is standing with 1,000 feet of oil in the hole, and looks good for a sizable producer. The sand was picked up at 1,580 feet and was scratched with a showing of oil, the fluid rising in the hole quickly.

The well is being standardized and will drill in within a few days. It is about 1,000 feet from the nearest producer in the district, being on the east.

500 ATTEND BIG BARBECUE

Parrish Brothers Give Entertainment at Sunshine Well

Over 500 people visited the Sunshine State Oil and Refining company well on the George Parrish ranch, one and one half miles southwest of the Peterson pool in Archer county Saturday when the Parrish brothers staged a public barbecue. The event was given as a sort of celebration of the bringing in of the Sunshine well, a strict wildcat which opens up a new producing territory.

The crowds began to arrive as early as 10 o'clock in the morning and many were on the ground when the party broke up late in the afternoon. Two beeves were barbecued and ample quantities of cold lemonade were provided.

The picnic was a huge success, it was reported by those in charge of the affair.

PIPE LINE STARTED

OLNEY, June 2.—The pipe line to be built by Wichita Falls and Southern railroad interests from Swastika to load racks, on mile to the north of Olney, is now under construction. A siding is being moved here from north of Archer City and the work will be rushed to completion as early as possible. It will be 1,000 to 1,200 barrels per day capacity and will be overloaded before it is finished. Wells being completed in Swastika field this week will produce more oil than this small line can carry. It will probably later be used to pump fuel oil into the field and a larger line will have to be laid to care for production.

M & V Tank Company Doing Big Business In Swastika Field

OLNEY, June 2.—The M & V Tank company unloaded three cars of material here during the week and have leased trackage and will put up an office building. They are doing a rushing business in Swastika field. Walter Junker of Wichita Falls, is in charge of the local branch.

Kleeden Buys 100 Acres In Archer

26 DERRICKS AT MEGARGEL

Thorough Test Being Given New Archer County Field

MEGARGEL, June 2.—With a total of 26 derricks on the sky line of Megargel, the next several weeks are certain to be of interest to oil men interested in the southwestern Archer county and the corners of the three other counties meeting a few miles southwest of here. This section is getting a test that is thorough and that is going forward at a rapid pace.

Of the 18 derricks in the Swastika field three and three-quarter miles east of town, two of them are above wells already brought in; five are above wells where casing is setting on sand uncovered by the core barrel; and the remainder are above wells either drilling or soon to be spudded in.

The wells now on the sand and not yet brought in belong to the Sun company, the American Refining company, the Eagle Creek Oil company, Clark et al, and Lee Wilson. It seems certain that all will be commercial producers but they have not served to outline the limits of the field. The large number of wells on the sand and of derricks in the field is rather remarkable, considering that the wildcat well which opened the field came in on April 13.

Outside the field, Morrison No. 1 of Charles Featherstone should have its story told next week. Sorelle No. 1 of Batchelder & Knig, two miles northwest of Megargel and Johnson No. 1 of Producers Petroleum company, three miles north of town, both are at interesting depths and are attracting marked attention from the oil men here. Portwood No. 1 of Bob Waggoner in Baylor county four miles southwest of Megargel, is now proving attractive to the oil fraternity.

A number of drilling contracts have been signed up for tests to be put down around Megargel. Several are being worked up around Westover. Leasing activity is at a standstill, but a considerable amount of free acreage is to be picked up for drilling contracts. In Throckmorton county, blocks as large as 2,000 acres can be had for a hole.

The lack of rooming and boarding houses is proving serious to Megargel but it is thought that several houses will go up within a short time to care for the men employed on the various rigs about town. A number of crews operating in the Swastika field had to go as far distant as Olney in order to get quarters.

Megargel has filled practically every vacant room in town and there is a loud cry for more rooms. Additional lots have been laid out just east of town in what is known as the Kreager addition.

Portwood No. 1 of Bob Waggoner et al is showing oil, the location is four miles southwest of Megargel in Baylor county.

Equity Pays Its Regular 3 Pct.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Equity Petroleum corporation, held in the office of the company Friday, the regular three per cent quarterly dividend for the quarter ending June 30, 1923, was declared and ordered paid to the holders of all issued and outstanding preferred stock of record June 30 1923, payable June 10, 1923.

SUNSHINE WELL MAKES 100 BBLS

The Sunshine State Oil and Refining company well on the Ferguson tarct was drilled in Saturday and is making around 100 barrels. The sand was picked up at 1,732 feet.

This swell adds another good producer to those in this territory.

PACIFIC DEEP SAND FOUND IN HEWETT FIELD

The Carter Oil company has brought in a 10,000-barrel well in a sand found at 2,900 feet in the Hewett field, Oklahoma. This is a new sand, one of the largest ever developed in Oklahoma, and proves the field for a lower sand. The Southern States Oil corporation owns nine leases in this field, on which are 72 wells, and the development of this new lower sand should double the value of Southern States holdings there.

USUAL DIVIDEND.

Louisiana and Northwest railroad, owned by Middle States oil, has declared its regular dividend of 1½ percent quarterly, payable July 2, 1923, to stockholders of record June 15. It also announces that it will receive written offers up to noon of July 2, 1923, at the company's office, 383 Madison avenue, New York city, for the redemption of $12,000 face value of its first mortgage gold 5 per cent bonds, due 1935.

The misery and depression caused by a bilious and constipated condition of the system can be quickly removed by using Herbine. It purifies, strengthens and invigorates. Price 60c. Sold by all druggists.—Adv.

Water Shortage Again Being Felt In Electra Field; Producers In

Water shortage is again being felt in the Electra field, although half an inch of rain Monday night will help somewhat. The pipe lines have an ample supply for wells in the proven district. It is only the wildcats that will suffer seriously.

An announcement that the wildcat test of Tal Finley and others on the George B. Ancell ranch, section 10 and block 7, H. & T. C. survey was on top of a rich sand at 1,758 feet created no little interest among the fraternity. The well is four and a half miles southwest of the Planet lease. A producer there would open new territory covering some four miles for drilling. The well is located nine miles south and a little west of Electra, in the southwest corner of Wichita county. It is directly between two dry holes.

Drillers yet contend that the sand is good for commercial production. However, a miniature cyclone Monday night splintered the derrick, and the test has apparently been lost.

Many Good Producers.

The Electra field furnished its usual number of good producers, the best of which was that of the Texhoma Refining company on section 33. Its No. 12-E encountered and passed through 17 feet of saturated lime at 1,792 feet, when the bit penetrated a rich sand. A strong flow of gas shot oil to the top of the derrick. The well is flowing by heads at the rate of 175 barrels a day, and when it is thoroughly cleaned out is expected to increase its output to between 250 and 300 barrels. The Texhoma No. 8-E is on top of the sand at 1,797 feet, with 300 feet of fluid in the hole. This is expected to be a completion within the next few days.

Kruger and Pols are credited with a 10-barrel producer in their No. 5, section 13 on the Waggoner. The drill picked up a sand at 1,600 feet. The same company's No. 1-B is down 750 feet.

The Shamprock Oil company has a 150-barrel producer in its No. 8 Waggoner. This well is in the Gibson survey, and found the sand at 1,920-25 feet. It immediately filled 1,500 feet with oil, and when the swab was started showed for a good producer.

Magnolia is Busy.

The Humble Oil company is running a string of 5 3-16 inch casing with a packer on the sand at 1,645 feet in its No. 6-B on the Waggoner. This same company's No. 13, lease A on the L. P. Douglas is drilling at 1,924 feet, feeling for the sand.

A great deal of development is being done by the Magnolia company on the Waggoner. Honaker and Frances Sumner leases. No. 64-H. & T. C. on the Waggoner is a 40-barrel producer at 1,014-20 feet. On the Sumner, No. 43 is practically ready to be completed in the sand at 1,429-45. It has 800 feet of oil in the hole. Three tests are drilling on the Waggoner. On the Rogers test southwest of Electra this company has rigged up for a deep standard test and expects to start drilling within the next few days. A water main is being laid to the company's wildcat test on the Tuttle land about eight miles northwest of Electra. Everything is rigged up and drilling should start at an early date.

O'Neil Gets a Producer.

John O'Neill's No. 12 Waggoner has set and cemented casing on a sand at 1,916-23 feet, with all indications pointing to a good producer. No. 10 Waggoner is drilling about 1,500 feet. Hockaday and Shaw have set and cemented casing in their No. 4, lease B Waggoner on the sand at 1,925 feet. It will be completed next week.

J. J. Perkins is preparing to place his No. 14 on the pump on the Burnett. This test is from the 1,340-foot sand. No. 3 is a rotary derrick. The Hartford Trust company has a well good for 35 barrels from the sand at 1,500 feet in its No. 16 Burnett. A 40-barrel producer has been completed by the Wichita Petroleum company in its No. 55 Burnett in the 1,000-foot pay. Fisher and Gilliland have a 20-barrel pumper from the 1,444-foot sand in their No. 1 lease B. Fisher; and Stanley McGregor's No. 1 John and Jeff Waggoner is a 35-barrel well from the sand at 1,600 feet.

On the Grace Jennings, J. T. Harrell and associates are standardizing to drill in on their No. 6 well. It is on the sand at 1,480 to 85 feet, and has 20 feet of oil in the hole. Green and Dale, further north of the Jennings, are setting casing on top of the 1,920-foot sand.

No Completions on Hirschi.

No completions are reported in the Hirschi district, although drilling activities are holding up, and some new wells are being started.

The American Refining company on the Ferguson lease in Archer county has completed drilling in its No. 3, and has a 150-barrel producer on the sand at 1,762 feet. Its No. 4 is drilling at 1,200 feet. No. 3 Kemp-Kemper of the same company is making 100 barrels, and No. 2 looks equally as good. No. 4 is drilling around 900 feet, and No. 5 is down around 300 feet. No. 1 Richardson found the sand, and after drilling into it some ten feet, the well looks like a 100-barrel producer.

A number of wells in wildcat districts of Archer county are showing for producers, and promise to add big areas of undeveloped territory. Perhaps the most important of these is the showing of the Artex on the Mrs. Carter land. It picked up the sand at 1,570 feet, and seems determined to give an extension of two miles south to the well brought in last week by the Sunshine State, which was, itself, an extension of a mile and a half, and is producing 350 barrels of oil a day.

Watching Archer City District.

The other well of most importance is the Flowers test some seven miles south of Archer City on the Cowan tract in block 38, Jefferson county school land. This well is preparing to test out a sand which was picked up at 1,175 feet. This showed some oil, but not enough for a producer. It is being drilled a little deeper, when another core will be taken. Bringing in a well here would open up for development all that district south and east of Archer City.

Activity in the Peterson Pool is practically at a standstill, due to water shortage. A number of wells are shut down on different tracts, and many are on top of the sand, unable to complete until water can be secured.

On the McCarty Oil company's lease, that company has two wells on top of the sand, waiting to drill in. These are Nos. 6 and 7, which are in the sand at 1,574 feet. Two other tests are shut down on account of water scarcity.

To the northwest of the McCarty producers, the No. 2 well of John O'Donohoe is on the sand at 1,574 feet and shows for a good well. It will mean a short extension of the field. No. 1, which experienced some casing trouble and passed through the sand at the usual depth, will continue drilling in an effort to pick up the deeper pay.

A great many tests in the Freeman-Hampton pool are feeling the effects of continued dry weather. Several wells were brought in with a number due for completion in the next few days. The best completion was that of the Comet Petroleum company, on their Kemp-Kempner No. 8. This is good for 400 barrels from the 1,700-foot pay.

In the vicinity of the Langford wells, between the K. M. A. and Freeman-Hampton pool, Klimmel & Dillard finished a 250-barrel producer in the usual pay. Two other tests are on the sand, and will drill in at once.

Knox Finley Well Cleaned Out to Be Put on Pump

The Knox Finley well on the Sauer Brothers and Lomax land in Clay county northeast of Wichita Falls, which made several flows Friday and Saturday is being cleaned out and will be placed on the pump within a few days.

The well was swabbed Friday afternoon after being drilled four feet into the sand, and made several good flows, showing lots of gas and throwing the oil half way up the derrick.

W. T. Bunnenburg has made an agreement with Mix and Moore to put down a well on the Bunnenburg farm south of the Finley well. The new well, which will be an offset, will be started at once.

O'DONOHUE GETS ARCHER WELL

No. 2 on Lease A Flows By Heads at Rate of 275 Barrels

John O'Donohue brought in what is thought to be the best well of the week in the Archer fields when his No. 2 well on lease A came in flowing by heads at the rate of 275 barrels daily. The well is flowing from sand at 1,575 feet and is producing regularly.

It is located to the northeast of the McCarty discovery well and is a small extension of the pay in that direction.

Griswold Refinery Makes First Run

ELECTRA, June 2.—The Griswold Oil company has made its initial run from the new refinery which has been constructed east of the old Beaver-Electra plant (now the Constantin), just south of the Fort Worth and Denver railway. The plant was bought some time ago, and was formerly known as the Beacon Refining company at Henrietta. It has a daily capacity of 2,500 barrels.

This is one of the best refineries in the county, the Griswold people having spent some $200,000 in improving it after moving it to Electra.

The Griswold interests are one of the largest independent concerns operating in the Electra field, and have more than enough production to supply their refinery.

THE OLD TIME IDEA

That the natural oil oil trend is north-east and south-west seems to be working out in Archer county. Looking to the north-east from the Peterson pool is the Minchew and to the south-west is the Artex opening up an area over four miles long with wonderful possibilities.

LIBRARY PLAN MOVES ALONG

Only Remaining Action Is Approval By County Commissioners

With the contract already having the approval of the library board and city council, it is expected that the county library project will be brought practically to fruition during the next week. All that is now lacking to make branch libraries in Wichita county an actuality is the endorsement of the county commissioners' court, and this it is expected will be given within a short time.

Judge A. H. Britain, chairman of the committee which drafted the contract, has intimated that he would present it to the county commissioners at an early date, and no opposition is anticipated in this quarter. Members of the city council gave it their official approval at last Monday night's meeting, and Judge B. D. Sartin is confident that his court will readily accept the provisions of the deal as arranged by Judge Britain.

Necessary steps in Electra, Burkburnett and Iowa Park are already being taken for the housing of the libraries proper, it is understood. One of the provisions of the contract is that those communities to profit from the plan provide accommodations for books and other literature, and no time is being lost in arranging for the operation of the plan at as early a date as possible.

City and county officials, members of the city library board, the citizenship mass of Wichita Falls, and that of the county at large are unanimously agreed that the extension of the Kemp library's service will be an excellent thing for the county. The movement also has the hearty approval of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kemp, through whose generosity the Kemp library was made available for Wichita Falls.

By placing the library's control in the hands of the county and providing a system of transportation through which books can be circulated into the three other towns, a much larger percentage of the county's population may reap benefits from the material already on the shelves, and that which is to come. It is hoped eventually to establish branches at other communities within the county—Clara, Fairview and the others. This will, however, be possible only at a later date, after it is demonstrated that the plan as now conceived is practical.

DAVIDSON FEARS LONGER SESSION

Lieutenant Governor Says Legislation Cannot Be Finished By 14th

Associated Press Dispatch

AUSTIN, Texas, June 2.—Doubt as to whether the work now before the legislature will be completed by June 14, the end of the present 30-day session, was expressed by Lieut. Gov. T. W. Davidson today. He said he favored passage of additional revenue measures to meet appropriations as well as reduction of appropriations.

Others Hopeful.

Other legislative leaders, however, tonight expressed belief that the appropriation measures will be passed and another session avoided. Representative Satterwhite of Panhandle, said he believed all the general appropriation bills will be in conference committee by next Sunday, which would give four days for completing of detail work and agreement on final appropriations.

Representative Quaid of El Paso, chairman of the house appropriation committee, also holds the opinion that the legislative work can be completed and a fourth session avoided.

London-Chicago Air Line Planned

Commander C. Dennis Burney.

An airship plying between Chicago and London is being planned by Commander C. Dennis Burney, British airplane expert and inventor. He is said to have the backing of the Vickers and Sheel groups of capitalists in Great Britain and a government subsidy. The time from London to Chicago is expected to be 40 hours and the fare about the same as the steamboat rates.

Arthur Salmon's Rise to Wichita Restaurant King From Cook Four Years Ago Reads Just Like Fiction

Four years ago Arthua Salmon made his appearance in Wichita Falls, cooking in a small restaurant on Seventh street. Recently he threw open the doors of one of the most modern cafes in the state to the Wichita Falls public. The story of the four years in which he made the remarkable progress reads like a piece of fiction.

When Arthur Salmon came to Wichita Falls he was "broke," having only enough money to last him a few days until he managed to find employment in a small "eating house" on Seventh street. That was during the boom, when oil was first discovered in Wichita county, and the young cook worked from 10 to 14 hours a day, furnishing meals to the many drillers and field men who packed the place. He stayed there several weeks.

His first business venture for himself was a restaurant, much the same as the one he had served as cook. With his savings he opened a restaurant on Seventh street in competition with his former employer, and by serving good food soon drew the greater part of the crowd. His first place had a seating capacity of 18. There were no chairs or tables, the meals being served on counters, the men sitting on the 18 stools. The place was far from modern, but it was in this first restaurant that Arthur Salmon made his reputation for service and good cooking.

Arthur was his own cook in his first business. He was likewise the only waiter the place boasted, doing, in fact, all the work in the place, with the exception of the dishwashing, which was done by a negro boy. Arthur's first venture was a success in its way and he was soon forced to move to larger quarters to serve his customers. He did so still doing the bulk of the cooking and working from morning till night to keep up his standard of service and ability. He moved again and then again each time to larger quarters with better equipment, giving added poularity to the restaurant of Arthur Salmon.

On Up the Ladder

Then, 16 months ago, he opened the doors of his White Kitchen, a modern cafe, which was one of the most popular in Wichita Falls, from the start. White from top to bottom, the place was attractive, and with a corps of cooks and waiters trained by Arthur, it was not long before the tables were constantly filled. Although out of the cooking end of the business, Arthur still directed the kitchen. He soon found, however, that even the large building was too small, and in order to be able to serve his trade erected a building on Indiana street for Arthur's White Kitchen, which was opened a few days ago.

The new Kitchen is probably the most modern in the city, and among the most modern in the state. It has a seating capacity of 115 people, and a corps of 25 employes is necessary to give the service that the manager demands. In addition to being one of the most beautifully appointed places in the city, it is the most sanitary, having a special system of ventilation, sewage and refrigeration.

A complete cooling system, consisting of 10 ceiling fans and two big suction fans keep the air in constant motion, cooling and clearing the place of the bad air.

Charcoal Broiler

One of the features of the new kitchen is the charcoal broiler, which is the only one in Northwest Texas. It is a specially built broiler, which enables the cooks to give the meat an added taste and flavor.

The Kitchen has its own bakery, where all bread, rolls and pastry is baked by experts. It has, in fact, practically every known article of use in a modern kitchen, including a mammoth ice box made especially for the place by the Knutson Refrigerator company, which has a capacity of 2,800 pounds of ice.

While the doors of the iKtchen are open and crowds of patrons are being served daily, the formal opening of the new restaurant has been postponed, because of lack of some few fixtures which have not arrived. The date of the formal opening will be announced later.

CAN WE AFFORD TO MARRY

(Alice Winters, in the Woman's Home Companion)

If one were on the outlook for gifs of the times one might find a significance in the statement that 50 years ago the question of youth read, "On how little do we dare to get married?" while today the query reads "How much must we have before we dare marry?"

Perhaps, however, these signs and portents are not much more than quiverings of the minute hands on Time's clock. Probably the reply to the old question in its new form is still "That depends"—on who you are and where you live and what you want.

There are others to discuss dollars and cents ways and means quantities and quotas. This little article takes for its text, "That depends." A minimum there certainly is, below which life in any real and rewarding sense is impossible, and a maximum there is, beyond which discussion of the money question becomes unnecessary; but for the great rank and file of us living in a continual adjustment, a tug and pull between desires and means, between ideals and inabilities. Marriage shares this oscillation. In its upturns, it touches the clouds and partakes of a kind of divinity. It involves the most sacred as well as the most satisfying elements of our lives. In the depressed moments, it falls to the grubby level dealing with laundry bills and struggles with the furnace and the butcher.

First Requisite of Happy Marriage

1. Their own mental and practical preparation.
2. Community standards.
3. Personal standards.

First, what can John and Mary do in preparation? It is no casual or trivial thing, this marriage ceremony that occupies only a few moments, and that yet transforms our destinies—nothing to be entered into gleefully when, off on a picnic the boy and girl say, "Wouldn't it be a grand joke to get married and surprise the bunch!" Fate has a way of treating us as the naturalist treats the moth. She runs a pin through us in a moment and there we are, stuck fast and firm forever.

Marriage is not going to be a success unless it is entered upon with deliberate willingness to make sacrifice, and this willingness must be more than a mere impulse; it must be a dominating motive, and it is clearly intertwined with the monetary question.

Everything in this world must be paid for. Love—the most valuable thing we know—exacts the highest price; the price of sacrifice, sympathy and that tragedy that marches side by side with us when our lives are closely bound to other people's suffering. These are the prices we must be prepared to pay with open eyes. Love is worth it—worth more than any price we can set—if we only think so. But if the desire to get is stronger than the will to give, marriage is not going to work on smooth running machinery. The divorce courts are full of sordid, ugly stories of the shuffling of of all responsibilities, laziness, selfishness, unwillingness to face the knocks and buffets of the daily grind.

The affections may be cultivated. They are not just sent to us by divine providence with no responsibility on our side. They may be killed out just as surely as a plant may be killed by drouth or darkness. The habit of irritation can be fostered, and it chokes love. The habit of nagging can grow or it can be checked, but it destroys tenderness. The habit of self-pity and blaming other people for what goes wrong can be deepened until it kills sympathy.

Training for Job of Marriage

If marriage is anything, it is a partnership to which both partners ought to bring the highest amount of technical skill, as well as good faith for the joint undertaking. There is a sharp differentiation of function between husband and father, and wife and mother, and each has a right to ask that the other shall be trained to his or her job.

This partnership business is a very real thing. It means what the young people of today call a 50-50 proposition. I have taken pains to ask a good many young couples with whom I dared to take such a liberty whether they ever had any rows, and what such rows were about. In nine cases out of 10 they'll say the only troubles were over money matters. And yet when fairly reasonable men and women—and children, too; yes, children—sit together and go over their resources, their necessary expenditures, their proper personal shares in the pooled assets, the proportion to be given for this and that and the other, they can pretty surely arrive at fair and satisfactory adjustments.

WHEAT PRICES CLOSE NERVOUS

Corn Makes Gain And Oats And Provisions Go Up

Associated Press Dispatch

CHICAGO, June 2.—After a heavy liquidation, the wheat market showed rallying power today, helped by a denial from a representative of the department of agriculture that a limit had been placed on the amount of trading in future deliveries.

Prices closed unsettled, ¼ to ⅝ cents net higher, with July 1.10⅜ to 1.10½ and September 1.10 to 1.10⅛. Corn finished at ⅜ to 1¼@1⅝ cents gain, oats ⅛@¼ to ½ cent up, and provisions unchanged to an advance of 2½ cents.

Prospects that the Chicago stock of corn would show a liberal decrease for the week gave independent strength to corn and oats.

Provisions were governed largely by the action of grain values.

BOND MARKET

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 2.—The continued strength of foreign government bonds, which, however recorded only moderate gains, featured today's comparatively dull trading in bonds. Active United States government bonds were firmer with little change in prices. They were bid up slightly in the early dealings, but sold off near the close.

Public utility company liens were quiet, active. Sinclair pipe line 5s, which have been heavy, came in for a gain of 1¼ points. Cuba Cane Sugar 6s gave way 1⅝, but other sugar lines were steady. The major part of the trading centered in railroad mortgages, but fluctuations were confined to very narrow limits.

Total sales par value were $5,972,000.

CHILDREN ON PROGRAM.

Associated Press Dispatch

FORT WORTH, June 2.—Sixty-five children of the Juliette Fowler orphans home of Dallas, furnished the program for the morning session of the Texas Christian missionary convention in session here.

Sam J. McFarland, general chairman of the home board, spoke briefly of the work of the home.

AMERICANS ARE RADICALS

Every American is by nature a radical and a revolutionist. From our earliest childhood we breathe in an atmosphere of radicalism. Were it not for the widespread use of nursing bottles, we might almost be said to drink it in with out mother's milk. . . . We Americans are instinctively inclined to revolt against authority, whether imposed upon us in the sphere of religion or politics or social life. We prefer to be our own guides and blaze out our own trail through the forests of philosophical doubt, we have scant reverence for ancient traditions, for we accept it as an axiom that the new is better than the old.—Selden Peabody Delany, in the North American Review.

BANK CONDITION

NEW YORK, June 2.—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week (five days) shows an excess reserve of $28,061,740. This is an increase of $17,995,970.

STOCK PRICES STILL SAGGING

Curb House Investigation And Failure Of One Affects Market

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 2.—Prices sagged throughout the list at the opening of today's stock market in response to further forced liquidation arising from the recent failure of the largest curb house and unconfirmed rumors that other curb houses were under investigation. This decline, which resulted in losses of 1 to 5 points in a number of leading shares, was aided by some bear selling of steels and low priced oils.

Substantial buying support was forthcoming at the lower levels and the market turned upwards toward the end of the first hour. Shorts lost little time in covering their commitments, closing prices being at or near the highest figures of the day.

During the early reaction United States steel common, which sold ex-dividend earlier in the week, touched a new low for the year at 94¾, but rallied a point before the close. Bethlehem Steel also established a new low at 50 5-8, but crossed 52 later for a slight fractional gain on the day.

Motor and Motor Accessory shares were well bought on reports that production was running two and a half times that of a year ago.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. Demand sterling improved slightly to $4.63 and French francs dropped 2 points to 6.48 cents. German marks established a new low at .0012½ cents, or 80,000 to the dollar. Greek exchange jumped 70 points to 4.20 cents or just double the rate a week ago.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

Associated Press Dispatch

FORT WORTH, June 2.—Small receipts of cattle and calves sold on a steady basis to a fairly good demand Saturday. The count called for only 400 head of cattle and 100 calves. Nothing of much importance was available.

Sales of hogs were made at prices that were fully steady. Two cars went at 7.15. Other deals were around 6.85 to 7.10. Pigs remained steady. Hog house receipts were close to 500 head.

In the sheep house were 1,800 head. The market was steady. Choice shorn wethers brought 6.00.

Packers are purchasing at comparatively good prices all classes of desirable cattle and calves, but the demand does not call for inferior cattle and anything that does not carry sufficient flesh and quality to appeal to killers is having to sell at values that are very unsatisfactory. There is practically no stocker outlet for half-fat steers and the desirable stocker grades are slow. Fat cattle prices are steady for the week, but other kinds are 15 to 25 cents lower. Good calves are 25 cents higher.

Buyers have forced hogs downward and the close is around 10 to 15 cents down. Pigs have lost 50 cents.

Sheep prices are 50 to 75 cents off, but on lambs the market is steady. Receipts are falling below trade requirements.

COTTON FIRM AFTER SELLING

Drop Registered After Opening But Prices Grow Steady

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 2.—A continuation of yesterday's selling movement sent the price of October contracts off to 22.75 in the cotton market during today's early trading. This made a decline of 51 points from Friday's closing quoation and of 224 points from the high price of last Monday. Evidently this was sufficient to attract a good deal of covering for over the week-end, while liquidation tapered off and there was a rally to 23.27 for October in the late trading. October closed at 23.25 with the general market closing firm, net 20 points lower to 7 points higher. The market opened easy at a decline of 10 to 45 points.

Active months soon showed net losses of 51 to 58 points with July selling at 25.40 and December at 22.33. The hope of an improvement in crop conditions during June was encouraged by the favorable appearance of the weather map, while there was also selling on reports of a continued poor demand for cotton goods at first hands, talk of increasing domestic mill curtailment and the unsettled ruling of the stock market. The market was quieter late in the morning with rallies extending to 25.93 for July and 22.94 for December. The close was within 3 to 4 points of the best. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 47,000 bales against 117,000 last year.

Indian Heights Addition

Indian Heights addition is now open for sale and those who have selected lots will kindly arrange for contract of purchase. The terms of sale are one-third cash, balance in one, two and three years. We have been delayed in getting cut of plat, but this will be ready in a few days, giving the location, size and price of each particular lot.

In placing this addition on the market with only 46lots, we are giving this city the only up-to-date addition in the city where prospective buyers may purchase a building site with restriction at a moderate price, and with every prospect of enchancement in value. A lot 50x150 feet in any section of the city will cost from $1,000 to $2,500. The price of lots in Indian Heights will range from $450 to $650 per lot of 50x150 feet with the conveniences you get in other sections of the city.

The fact that these lots are well elevated and unusually large, and few in number, will in our opinion create a demand and after these lots are sold no more lots can be secured in the city that will equal these lots in price and location. 100x150 feet on Grant or Buchanan street will cost you $6,000 without restriction. 200x200 feet in Indian Heights will cost only $3,250, with restrictions and protection.

Look around and see if you can find any other section where you would be in line with the development of the better section of the city. It's the only location left. The highest point; the coolest breeze, the best direction and the spot that will be in greatest demand, and consequently will command the highest price.

This property is going to be sold, because it is the best stuff available and because the price is right, and if you do not want to pay a profit to some one else, get in on the ground floor. You'll want to live in Indian Heights.

Upon a request from Walter Cur[tis], the council ordered the city attorney to draw up a contract between the city and company for [the] installation of a new sewer and water line in the new residential addition west of the city that [is] being opened by Judge W. B. Chauncey, Walter Curlee and others. The lines will be put in at the [expense] of the company in charge of the addition with the understanding that they will be taken over by the city as soon as the improvement pays the required percentage on the investment. Mr. Curtis stated Monday night that the promoters of the addition were anxious to begin work on the sewer and water lines, as the material arrived.

WHEN A GIRL IS IN LOVE.

Pointers for Swains Who Would Know If Suit Is Successful.

A young man in love desires some rule by which he can determine if his affection is returned. There is, of course, the drastic method of proposing. If the girl accepts, she is in earnest; if she doesn't, she isn't.

But if he wishes to be certain before he asks her to marry him, there are several rather reliable symptoms to guide him. The coquette may counterfeit many of these signs, but all; the girl who is genuinely in love cannot conceal them.

Following the premonitory symptoms, such as hectic flushes, brightening eyes, and enhanced cheerfulness at his approach, probably the first unequivocal sign of a girl's awakening interest in a man is her desire to spend the evening with him in her own home instead of seeking entertainment elsewhere.

The woman who is merely playing at love never wishes to do this. She demands to be amused, and the prospect of his undiluted society has no charm for her.

A sympathetic interest in his past is the next symptom. To the person untouched by love, a man's repeated reminiscences are wearisome. The woman who not only listens willingly but also asks for more is hard hit.

The further progress of her malady is shown by her tendency to criticize his clothes and style of hairdressing. When she suggests that a different shaped collar or a tie of a different color would become him better, the astute lover knows that he is regarded with eyes of possession.

Another indication of genuine love is the manifestation of a sincere interest in a man's business. Until a girl is quickened by love she is only mildly interested in stocks and office routine; after that, the favored man's account of them becomes a thrilling romance.

At this stage of the development of her passion a girl is apt to have a violent attack of domesticity. She shudders to think there are women so unnatural as to prefer a career to a husband. Instead of reading novels she does needlework and practices cookery. This is a serious symptom.

Another test is jealousy. In married life perfect faith and knowledge sometimes shut out the monster, but in courtship, with its uncertainties, never. At such a time a girl believes that every woman a man knows is a sly minx who is trying to inveigle him into a flirtation.

The final and most conclusive test of woman's love is her desire to take care of a man. To strike this note means that all that is best and sweetest and most unselfish in her nature has been awakened. The coquette knows no love like that, and she has not the art to simulate it.—Beryl Sage in the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

"WHY IS BEAUTY?"

It is a French school of philosophy which holds that a woman's motive in life is to be beautiful. Sir William Orpen, noted portrait painter, says he has never seen a really beautiful woman.

But this statement revives the old age-old controversy of "What or why is beauty?" Venus de Milo has set the conventionally accepted standard for the feminine form divine and Helen of Troy for the fair countenance.

Were Helen of Troy around today her triumph in beauty contest would be subjected to much closer and more scientific scrutiny than that in force at the celebrated judgment of Paris. Even the Venus de Milo would be unable to avoid a cold statistical valuation of her physical charms were she subjects to the ruthless, truthful recording machine known as a thermometer.

For downright loveliness and for more of it than any other country can boast of, it is necessary only to consider the American theater. Probably that is well, since in no other country is beauty so indispensable as it is here.

HARRISON INVITED TO TELL OF ZONING LAW FOR WICHITA

The University club has invited Hubert Harrison, secretary chamber of commerce to explain the plan and merits of the new city zoning ordinance, which will soon go into effect at the club meeting Tuesday.

It is understood that the new ordinance meets the objections of the old zoning ordinance which made the old one unconstitutional and caused the Supreme court to so declare it.

Mr. Harrison has accepted and will address the University club luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. The general public is invited to hear this address, as it is expected to clear up the difficulties in the old one and enable the city to keep business houses within the business district.

BLOCK ON BROOK TO BE PAVED

Collins-Lucille Stretch Being Torn Up By Street Department

Work of repaving Brook street between Collins and Lucille will be started by the L. E. Whitham Construction company as soon as the present paving is torn out by the city, Mr. Whitham who originally laid the pavement, has offered to do the work at his own expense provided the city would tear up the old paving.

Put down during boom times when materials were practically impossible to obtain and competent labor didn't exist, the paving failed to stand up and has gradually been going from bad to worse.

Will You Have Money When You Need It Most?

We all live fairly normal lives—it's only now and then that something crosses one's path demanding cash—yet when these occasions do come, a few dollars is sometimes vitally necessary.

How sensible it is to save "between times" so that cash will be available when you need it most. Start an account now, deposit a certain amount weekly, you'll be surprised how rapidly it will grow.

Here's Warning That It May Be Economical to Chop Those Weeds

"We have only appealed to people's pride so far by asking them through the newspapers to cut their weeds and many have responded, but it now appears that we are going to have to invoke the powers granted us by ordinance to accomplish the cleaning up of many of the vacant lots."

The statement reproduced above was given out Saturday by Dr. A. H. Douglas, head of the city health department, and explains itself fully. Dr. Douglas stated that notices could be sent out this week to owners of property on which unsightly weeds were permitted to grow and that if these did not bring results, court action would follow. It was also intimated that the city might cut the weeds and then assess the expenses of this against the owners of the lots.

DEADLY TROLLEY CABLE BREAKS

Sparks Fly At Lamar And Eleventh When Wire Snaps

Some short dash records were broken with utter abandon early Saturday night when a trolley wire at Lamar and Eleventh streets snapped, fell to the pavement and whipped around at a great rate, crackling ominously and emitting sparks "a foot long."

No One Hurt.

Fortunately, no one was close enough at the time to come in contact with the business end of the cable. Several cars and a few pedestrians who were in the vicinity, however, started the other way almost at once when flashes of fire started.

Repair crews from the traction company offices were soon on the scene and mended the wire. Traffic on the Southland and Seventeenth street lines was held up for some time because of the break.

OLNEY BUILDS NEW CITY HALL

Other Structures Rapidly Nearing Completion In City

Special Dispatch to Record News

OLNEY, June 2.—The foundation is completed and materials are being placed for the new city hall and fire station which the city is building on the south side of West Main street. It is to be a 25x60 foot brick, with room for the fire truck and a meeting place for the city council and the chamber of commerce as well as an office for the city secretary. It is to be of brick and concrete, and will be a handsome and modern structure.

Two handsome business buildings are nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy within a few more days. One is a 50x100 foot store building, the other is the largest building in the city, a 70x140-foot garage building. Both are of brick, and are the nicest buildings in town.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

Commencement week in the Olney high schools has furnished a variety of entertainment during the past week. The schools have finished one of the most successful terms in their history, and the graduating class this year is unusual in that it is composed of five boys and only four girls.

The baccalaureate sermon was delivered Sunday morning at the Methodist church by Reverend Ward, president of the Decatur Baptist college; Monday and Tuesday nights were given over to recitals by the department of music and Thursday night the grammar school graduation exercises were held at the school auditorium. Friday night the commencement exercises for the graduating class were held at the First Baptist church, and the house was filled to overflowing. An able address to the graduates was made by Hon. Charles I. Frances.

GRAIN HARVEST LIGHT

Cutting the grain crop in this section has progressed very rapidly during the past week, and at this writing is about 60 per cent finished. Threshers will start in some parts of the country Monday. The grain crop is going to be some lighter than average, but there will be quite a bit marketed here. From ten to 15 bushels per acre is the expected wheat yield.

GRASSHOPPERS APPEARING

Complaints are getting more frequent daily that grasshoppers are infesting the cotton fields, and though as yet they have done no material damage, it is feared that unless proper control measures are resorted to immediately they will become a menace. Counties further west and south report serious damage already.

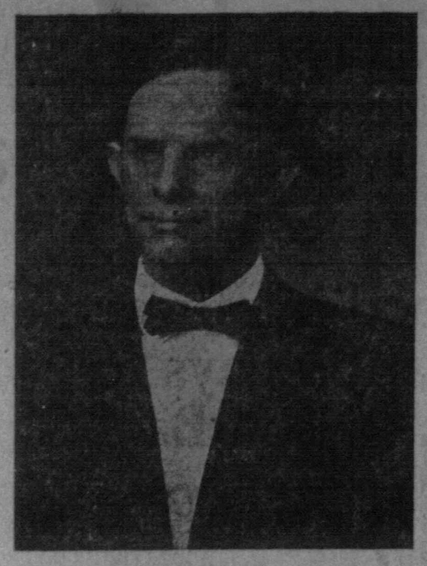

SCOUTS BUILD CABIN.

The Olney Boy Scouts have just about finished the erection of their log cabin at the municipal lake. Now that school is out they will have more time for the work, and it will be finished in another week or so. TRAFFIC LAWS BEFORE COUNCIL

Hodgins Will Ask Heads To Approve New Regulations

At least one matter of importance and possibly others will be up for consideration when the city council meets Monday night in its regular weekly session. The usual mass of routine business will also be on hand.

Chief of Police George Hodgins has intimated that he will ask the council for its approval of his new trafic laws, and a detailed story of these is no small item.

The chief believes, however, that the new regulations as carried exclusively in The Record News last week are of such importance as to warrant careful consideration from the commissioners. Police Commissioner Young also concurs in this belief, and will urge speedy action from his fellow commissioners.

If the new rules are approved by the council they will probably be passed with the emergency clause, making them effective at once.

Although it is not certain, and no announcement to this effect has been made, it is probable that the commissioners will also consider the repaving of Indiana and Ohio avenues. In view of the interest shown at last Friday's chamber of commerce business council luncheon, this item is now one of exceptional importance. Several large property owners on the streets in question have expressed themselves as being decidedly in favor of speedy action.

City officials have for some time been contemplating repaving these two important business thoroughfares, and their interest has now been stimulated by the urgent requests for action. Whether or not any decisive developments come up Monday, or whether the paving will even be mentioned, remains to be seen.

Hearings on paving projects already under way in the residential districts will be continued, and some new stretches may be introduced.

Letting of bids for redecorating the interior of the city hall also may be made.

VICTORY SELLS RICKENBACKERS

Agency for New Car Placed To Handle Wichita Territory

The Victory Motor Co., local Oldsmobile dealers, was appointed as distributor for the Rickenbacher automobile for this section, according to announcement made by J. P. Winterson of the Detroit factory, who is now in the city making arrangements for the delivery of cars and signing the agreements with the local company.

According to Mr. Winterson, the Rickenbacher has had an exceptional growth since its introduction. A total of 5,019 cars were manufactured during 1922, while the quota of sales for this year to date will figure that amount, showing a big increase over 1922.

The car is named in honor of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacher, famous ace of the world war and one of the pioneer automobile racers of the world. Mr. Rickenbacker is vice-president of the company and is active in the sales department of the factory and is head of its advertising policies.

Termed the vibrationless six, the Rickenbacher is noted for its absence of vibration and is advertised as the highest class medium priced car on the market, by the manufacturers. The car is listed f. o. b. factory, Detroit, at $1,485.00.

According to Mr. Winterson, the manufacturers are appointing dealers in every section of the country and expect to have representation in every city of size. The contract signed by L. O. Brown of the Victory company covers a period of five years. Because of the company's policies of selecting only prominent and proven organizations to handle their product, Mr. Brown feels fortunate in securing the Rickenbacher franchise.

While it has not been ascertained definitely, Mr. Winterson states Capt. Eddie Rickenbacher of the company may visit Wichita Falls in the near future on a tour of Texas, which he is now contemplating.

STORY OF GIRL IMPLICATES MAN

Statutory Charges Filed After Arrest By Constables Department

Charges of a statutory offense against a 16-year-old girl were filed Saturday by Assistant County Attorney Wayne Sommerville against a local man who had been arrested a few nights ago. Following statements made by the girl, he confessed to the charges and the charges were filed.

The man is married and his wife has been living here, it was reported.

Street Car Acquaintance.

The arrests were made several nights ago by Deputy Constables Richardson and Humphries as they were patrolling a country road.

The girl has been a student at the Junior high school, she told officers, and went riding with the man after making a casual acquaintance on a street car.

BUILDING HERE SWINGS UPWARD

Permit Totals Reach Half Hundred Thousand During Week

Following a protracted slump that carried building activity in the city down to practically nothing, construction work here took a healthy swing upward last week, building permit totals issued for the period reaching $49,275, against less than $10,000 for each of the two weeks previous.

An inspection of records at the city clerk's office shows that an even dozen new residences were contracted for during the week just closed. This is a pleasing contrast to figures for the middle of May, which showed that during a two weeks' period, four new homes were started.

Five of the new residences started last week are being put up by J. Carruthers at various parts of the city, and four are being erected by Mytinger and Walker. The others are contracts from individuals contemplating using the houses as homesteads.

Twenty-two permits in all were issued and were listed as follows:

J. Y. McQuigg, addition to residence, 1508 Buchanan; $1,500.

Carrie E. Ross, servant house, 2130 Avenue G; $800.

Mrs. Charles Long, garage, 2415 Grant; $100.

R. E. Moore, addition to residence, 1603 Eleventh; $350.

J. R. Kehn, residence, 1900 Sixth street; $2,500.

O. S. Denton, repairs, 1511 Fifteenth; $1,000.

R. J. Hutson, porch, 2102 Buchanan, $100.

Fred Stober, residence, 2126 Avenue J, $5,500.

J. Caruthers, residence, 1801 Taylor, $2,000.

J. Caruthers, residence, 1006 Monroe, $5,000.

J. Caruthers, residence 1711 Garfield, $4,200.

J. Caruthers, residence, 1713 Garfield, $3,800.

J. Caruthers, residence, 1715 Garfield, $2,000.

Mytinger and Walker, 1809 Pearl, $4,000.

Mytinger and Walker, 1519 Britain, $3,700.

Mytinger and Walker 1510 Harrison, $2,700.

Mytinger and Walker, 1644 Lucille, $3,750.

S. H. Adams, garage, 1412 Seventh, $50.

N. Anderson, residence, 1007 Eighth; $750.

Delta Woodbine, residence, 409 Lamar, $2,000.

A. R. Watland, garage, 1311 Fourteenth, $175.

J. F. Hickman, residence, 1820 Elizabeth, $5,500.

VALUATION CUT IS LIKELY HERE

No Figures Available But Decrease Would Not Surprise

A lower valuation for the county and possibly a lower rate is in store for the county tax payers this year, according to the opinion of county officials who are in touch with the tax situation.

No definite figures are as yet available, but it was stated Saturday that there was good reason to expect a lower property valuation as well as a lower tax rate.

June 12 has been set by the equalization board for a hearing of property owners whose valuations have been raised by the board and notices have been sent out to those affected. In only a few instances, it is reported, have valuations been increased by the board over those given by the property owners last year. It has been the desire of the board to hold renditions at as nearly the same figure as 1922 as was possible.

TWO SHRINERS GO TO CAPITAL

Cline and Hawkins Named To Represent Maskat Temple

Only two Shriners will officially represent Maskat Temple of this city at the Imperial Shrine Council in Washington Monday, it was learned Saturday with the announcement that R. E. Shepherd, who was to represent Potentate Collier, would be unable to make the trip. Business matters here are detaining Mr. Shepherd, it was stated.

Walter Cline and L. G. Hawkins of Vernon, are those now in the capital and who will be Maskat representatives to the imperial sessions.

Several other Wichita Falls men will be in attendance at the meetings.

Graham Society and Personals

Special Dispatch to Record News

GRAHAM, June 2.—Society in Graham, despite the hot weather, is taking on a more golden hue with the return of the college students and of visitors from outside points. Attention has been more directly pointed toward the commencement exercises, part of which have already taken place, with the commencement sermon to be preached at the large new First Methodist church this Sunday morning. The best singers of the city choirs have been practicing for the past two weeks for the occasion. The sermon will be preached befitting the opening of the new day for the graduates. On the following night the graduates will receive their diplomas from Superintendent H. B. Cogdell. The special address will be delivered by Dr. Lockhart of T. C. U., Fort Worth.

Graduates Active.

The sweet girl graduates as well as the more manly members of the class have been having their hands full the week preceding commencement. Not only have they been busy with socials and dances but they successfully put over a class play at the high school auditorium, Friday evening, that was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. Miss Martha Mae Morris took the leading role in "Fannie and the Servant Problem," descriptive of the usual troubles encountered with servants, their revolt and final happy ending. Each one of the actors did well, Rufus McAfee took the part of Lord Randlock, the husband of Fannie. Others in the cast were: Ira Wood, Frances Bell, Annie Cornish, Vernon Couger, Mary Margaret McNamara, Erna Husted, Lorraine Milliean, Floyd Lisle, and Grady Nance. Those who took a smaller part were: Ruby Harris, Dorothy Vaughan, Ina Mae Price, Ruby Lee Edens, Kate Robertson, Katie Stringer, Bettrice Scott, Winnie Lisle and Thelma Burns. The proceeds of the play will be given to the school library fund.

The closing exercises of the public schools really began Thursday evening with the graduation of 38 at the East Ward school and 20 at the Shawnee Park school. 58 in all receiving certificates of promotion to the high school, not counting those who were promoted in mid-term. Miss Edith Rubenbering won the gild medal given by Mr. and Mrs. S. Boyd Street to the one in the seventh making the highest average in English for the entire year. The C. L. S. C. medal will be presented Monday evening to the high school student making the highest average in English.

Several Picnics.

Several picnics have marked the past social week. The big picnic given by the Masonic club a week ago set the style and other large bodies have followed suit. The Philathea class of the First Baptist church held an enjoyable picnic in Shawnee park, Friday night. About 50 were present and enjoyed the usual outdoor games, such as Three Deep, Ring Around A Rosy, etc. Cakes, pies, salads, chicken, olives, pickles, water and shrieks were there in profusion.

On the following Tuesday night the B. Y. P. U. of the same church held their picnic at the same place. About 30 members assembled at the church and went to the park at 7 o'clock. Here, again, there was much fun, with the usual accompaniment of good eats.

The DeMolays have been putting on some style in society generally the past week. They began with a dance at the Burkett building last Saturday night with a Jacksboro orchestra furnishing the music. Tuesday night they were out in numbers at the Pump Station Park with their girls and the younger members of the Masonic organization in Graham. They were chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. W. Z. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Akin. On Thursday evening the Burkett building was again taken over by them for a dance. Candles furnished the lighting scheme, lending a subdued glow to the festivities.

Tuts Initiate.

The Ancient Order of Tuts, not to be outdone by the DeMolays staged an initiation ceremony the same night. Members of the order in orange-colored caps, placed five initiates through a gruelling exhibition while blindfolded, before a crowd of spectators. The ceremony was staged on the streets. They wound up the affair by attending the dance along with the De Molays. The following are the new members of the Ancient Order of Tuts, Tomb No. 1, Graham, Texas: Oliver Loving Jr., Earl G. Bateman, Lewis C. Hubbard, Dr. F. I. Warrick, and W. H. Strang. The organization is chartered and is the only one of its kind in existence. W. Z. Allen is King Tut himself.

The Les Hiboux met with Mrs. Henry Criswell Wednesday afternoon. There were six tables of bridge. Mrs. Aline Johnson Ramsey won the club prize. The guest prize was awarded to Mrs. J. C. Lovelace, with the cut prize going to Mrs. C. C. Bloodworth. Delicious refreshments of strawberry ice cream with devil's food and angel's food cake were served.

The Tuesday club met with Mrs. Hubbard of East Fourth street. Six tables were arranged for 24 members and their guests. Mrs. Parker won the club prize, Miss Lois Loving the guest prize and Miss Bladen Garrett, the cut prize. An innovation was introduced in the refreshments of chocolate ice cream with sprigs of sweet peas in the center, and cake.

CLARA PHILLIPS---

trial, her principal witness will be her husband, Armour L. Phillips. To International News he said:

"I am the one who should be punished for this crime. I am the guilty person. There is no legal way whereby I can take her place in prison, but I shall go on the stand and allow the world to heap upon me all the calumny it desires. I am a man of principle. In the country where I was born and raised, we were taught to respect anything that wore skirts. I want to protect any woman in distress. It is going to be a terrible thing for me to go on the stand and tell of my romance with a girl who is not here to defend her name, but there was a romance between Alberta Meadows and myself and the world shall know the facts, dates and places. I will show that my wife would have been justified in invoking the unwritten law, though I deny that my wife is guilty of the actual murder.

Phillips was asked why he did not tell his story at the trial. "I wanted to testify, but Bert Herrington, my wife's attorney would not permit me to take the stand," he replied. "Herrington said he would not let me trample on the grave of a dead girl."

Phillips who boarded the train at Yuma, Ariz., did not accompany Mrs. Phillips to prison, leaving the train at Los Angeles.

"Good-bye Sweetheart," were his parting words.

Bank Clearings For May Increase Over Last Year

Although bank clearings for last week showed a decrease of $383,920.77 over the total of the week previous, the clearings for May, 1923, were over $1,000,000 in excess of those for May, 1922. The drop last week is attributed to the fact that Wednesday was a legal holiday and the banks were not open.

Total clearings for May, 1923, were $9,445,712.39 and for May, 1922, $8,134,218.64. Totals last week were $1,722,016.67 against $2,205,937.44 of the week previous.

By days the clearings were: Monday, $315,820.92; Tuesday, $347,123.01; Wednesday, holiday; Thursday, $290,652.82; Friday, $356,333.32; Saturday, $323,086.49.

HIS WIFE

Equipped with a book in which were pasted clippings of The Record News explaining the milk and ice movement, he was plying the west end of Ninth street. He had obtained something over $5 in small donations when one lady became suspicious and made inquiries at the office. When it was found that such an imposition was going on, the police were immediately notified and Detective Boone and Detective Hendricks sent for him. He was found in the 2600 block on Ninth street and made no resistance when the officers appeared.

Many Are Solicited.

At the station the self-constituted "agent" said he had a sick wife in Pennsylvania and was trying to raise funds to go to her. In his loose leaf note book were some latest leads of a Detroit mail order house and on these were the names of a number of local men and women purported to have contributed to his fund.

The names appearing were Juanita Swniford, Mrs. J. J. Nicholson, Mrs. S. B. Lewis, Mrs. J. C. McDonald, Mrs. D. Mollance, Mrs. P. M. Tidwell, Mrs. Kate McCaleb, Custer Brower, Mrs. W. A. Ellis, B. M. McAfee, B. W. Coulter, Mrs. G. T. Taylor, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. J. M. Ward, Mrs. Chas. Van Hoy, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. Block, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. W. G. Morrison, Mrs. H. C. Pinkston, Mrs. Joe McBee, Mrs. Geo. Blachoff, Mrs. Bremman, Mrs. Helm, Mrs. Reva Newman, Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. E. E. Smith, Mrs. Lee Downs.

Several notations of each were also written in on the page.

The man is now locked up in the city jail pending a decision as to what charges are to be filed against him.

The Record News is making an effort to ascertain the exact amount contributed by each individual seen by the man that the fund may be made good by the paper. He declared that all of the contributions were in small amounts, from 9 cents up. However, it is thought that the collections will total a greater amount.

Man Confesses Oil Field Theft To Keep Pal From Behind Jail Bars

A confession that sent him to jail himself, but that kept an innocent pal from behind the bars, was made Saturday afternoon when an oil field worker appeared before county officials and cleared up the mystery of a recent small pipe theft. The case is one of but little importance, a $1 fine and a day in jail being deemed sufficient punishment, but it had some peculiar angles that attracted attention.

A week or so ago a few joints of pipe disappeared from a company operating in the Freeman-Hampton pool and subsequently a man was arrested and charged with the theft. Saturday, the man now under arrest voluntarily appeared before officials and stated that they had the wrong man.

He then went on to explain that he had picked up the missing pipe, believing it to have been junked, and used it as weights to hold down the sides of his tent.

He said that when he heard the other man nhad been charged with the theft he came at once to get him out of trouble.

TEXAS ON THE MAP

Governor Neff is a maker of phrases as well as a creator of beautiful word pictures. He indulged in poetical fancy in his San Angelo address where he asserted that Texas loomed on the horizon of destiny as one of the four pivotal states of the American union.

He declared New York, the empire state, will always occupy a position of leadership because in its port it has the gateway to Europe; Illinois, with Chicago commanding the trade of the Great Lakes and tapping the commerce of the Mississippi; California, with its Golden Gate opening the paths of the seas to Asia and all the East, is to become powerful in the commercial units of the world while Texas with its 400 miles of coast line and with the greatest production of agricultural and other resources of any state in America, can dominate the trade of Latin America.

Texas will dominate as one of the commercial units when Texas cotton is turned into the finished product in Texas mills; when Texas wool is transformed into the fabrics of civilization in Texas looms; when Texas hides are tanned in Texas factories and then turned into leather goods in Texas shops.

New England is not a producer of hides, not a producer of cotton or wool or mohair, not a producer of coal or iron ore, not a producer of petroleum or gas. Regardless of all this the per capita wealth of New England is staggering and for 70 years these rock bound states controlled the manufacturing industries of America.

CONVICT LABOR

America has an organization known as the International Association of Garment Manufacturers. These manufacturers employ free labor.

They pay excellent wages. They furnish for their employees modern sanitary and living conditions and now they are on the war path. They say thousands of convicts in state prisons are working at low rates of pay for contractors who are making a high rate of profit which this underpaid labor produces. They say contractors are getting the convict labor at an average rate of 70 cents a day with buildings, heat and light included and they assert that the states responsible for the convict system are losing large sums of money every year under the convict labor plan.

They buy the same goods for their state institutions at market prices and let the contractors reap the profits. Now the garment manufacturers of America intend to appeal to the public to make it impossible for the state to give its labor away in this manner.

Florida is on the map. Florida sells its county convicts to the managers of lumber companies and turpentine manufacturers. Alabama sells its county convicts. There are only three or four American states where the labor of convicts is sold to the highest bidder and the progressive and humane men and women of Florida and Alabama are battling to do away with this ancient system of chattel slavery with all its brutalities and all its horrors.

DRUG ADDICTS DECREASING

Federal Prohibition Director Haynes says that the per capita consumption of narcotic drugs in the United States shows an enormous decrease under the administration of the Harrison drug act. This refutes the charge so often made that drug addiction is on the increase. There are many good men and women who are prone to exaggerate evil conditions. Just the other day a distinguished author made the announcement that 1,500,000 boys and girls in the United States were drug addicts. He read it in a magazine. It must be true that many snow birds are selling copy to American magazines. Hectic literature is in demand.

Members of the Retail Merchants' association of Texas in session at Eagle Pass, wired the Texas legislature to defeat all tax bills now pending. What would they do with the rural schools? Close the doors?

Minnesota law makers recently abolished the party convention system and now it is a free-for-all for the seat in the senate vacated by the death of Knute Nelson. Party responsibility has ceased to exist in many American states.

STORY OF A WOMAN'S IDEA AND HOW SHE TURNED IT INTO $5,000

Here is the basis for the $5,000 idea. A Texas newspaperwoman, Florence Stratton, an intimate friend of Mrs. W. P. Hobby, wife of the former governor, took this series of O. Henry articles published in the Houston Post back in 1895 and made a small pot of gold in dividends. Other women, who have ideas and talent, will find the following article about Miss Stratton's $5,000 idea of interest.

O. Henry Rediscovered By Texas Newspaper Woman and Again Gems From His Pen Spread Merriment

Ideas pay royalties.

Women—and men too, for that matter—of a literary mind and who wish to succeed in practical letters should remember this.

This story, the narration of how a newspaperwoman made ideas pay, probably will help others.

It is interesting, because it tells how she made $5,000 from one idea.

Anything that tells how people make money is interesting.

Florence Stratton, several years ago, set about to break into the "syndicate game" one way or another. The "syndicate game" is nothing more or less than the selling of articles for publication in newspapers and magazines. Large concerns furnish thousands of daily features to newspapers throughout the world and in spite of the apparently flooded market, good features are always in demand; for good features build and hold circulation.

Takes "Other Way."

A capable writer herself, a former managing editor and a woman with a number of years newspaper experience, Florence Stratton "took the other way around." That is to say, she decided that everybody was either trying to write or wrting for newspaper feature syndicates. Her entry would be the unusual. She would become a compiler, submit clever and interesting bits of literature, even were she forced to go to the extreme of digging into archives of old newspaper files and unearthing the works of famous writers. Her policy seemed to be that it is easier to sell something that has already been sold to the world than to experiment with the unsold.

That's how she struck upon the O. Henry Gems idea.

This is the series that will bring her $5,000 in royalties before the year is out and probably half as much next year.

Not Her First Idea.

And this is not the first idea she has "put over." Readers of The Record News will recall a series of "Famous Recipes" printed in this newspaper last year. This feature, a group of dishes prepared by people in the public eye, including everybody from President Harding to Charlie Chaplin, is still being sold and royalty checks are still being received by the compiler. Miss Stratton received more than a thousand dollars for this idea.

There are others to come—and they get better all the while. To tell them, however, would not be fair to the young lady.

"How do you do it?" Miss Stratton has been asked.

"Persistence" should be her reply, but she's not that type of person. "Im just experimenting to see what I can do,' she answers and then shoots a question at you: "Do you think my new feature, "Beautful Babies" or "Hourly Helps" will be accepted? I've had a mighty nice letter from Public Ledger and they want me to hurry along with some more recipes."

And how did she get the idea that she could make money out of newspaper features?

She Knows Men.

Several years ago Miss Stratton was managing editor of the Beaumont Journal—yes, a lady managing editor. She wasn't quite the type of an editor that most of us know, but at that she was a good executive, because she knew how to make people work. Just to show how well she could do this it is interesting to recall now that she often encouraged the sporting editor to write "society leads" for the Sunday paper. Hers was the soft, agreeably suggested command—smoothly enticing man through his vanity, telling him just how well he could write anything. And he wrote. However, that is not this story.

In her position as managng editor, Miss Stratton received letters daily offering new newspaper features.

She would go through these, show them to the staff and remark:

"Why didn't we think of that?" It is always "we" with her.

Others passed the thought. She retained it.

And then we hear of her again. This time she had "put over" a series of recipes, written by famous people.

The thought occurred to us: "Why didn't we thing of that?"

And then again:

"O. Henry Gems, a treasure trove of humor from his newly discovered newspaper writings." And a line: Compiled, edited and copyrighted by Florence Stratton.

All About It.

How did she do it? Why it was simply an idea at first; the thing dawned upon her and the more she thought of it, the larger grew the light of its possibilities.

Through her newspaper connections she had met the publishers of the Houston Post. So she went up to Houston, explained her idea and when she left the office of the Post she had secured exclusive privilege to reprint as a daily newspaper feature, all the writings from the pen of O. Henry when he was connected with that newspaper.

And then she sold her idea—for $5,000.

Some women are just like that.

FINDS O. HENRY

FLORENCE STRATTON.

The only request she made in granting use of this picture was this, according to Bob Waite, her social secretary: "In regard to the story, there is one point on which she is sensitive, and I thought I might tip you off. She detests the title of 'society editor' and I would advise the soft pedal."

Miss Stratton is the new discoverer of O. Henry, having resurrected his treasure gems of humor from an old newspaper file, for which she is receiving handsome checks.

AUSTIN RECALLS O. HENRY HOAX

AUSTIN, Texas, June 2—The Florence Stratton discoveries of new O. Henry material has provoked old-time intimates of "Will" Porter to reveal his authorship of two newspaper stories, each of which was a hoax still remembered in Austin.

The first of the O. Henry stories, never reprinted, but written in all the brilliant style and exhuberant fancy of the gifted story-teller, had a quick and startling effect. The day it appeared, hundreds of Austin people armed themselves with picks and shovels and hastened to Pease park, a level spot in the bed of one of the creek's flowing through the city of Austin, and there began feverishly digging for buried Spanish gold.

The story, with every detail perfected, to make it appear real, and to point out the location, was so written that it left little to the imagination.

Spanish families, fleeing before the Indians, had buried immense treasures of gold coin and jewelry, under the cliff ledges at the edge of Pease park. Staid Austin business men, old and dignified, young and venturesome, were lured to the search, and for several days excitement was high in Austin, with momentary expectation of a rich strike.

The other typical Eugene Field "plant" dealt with a situation so familiar to O. Henry that it bore every ear-mark of a detailed news story. About the time, numerous forged patents to Texas land had appeared. One day a Texas newspaper appeared with a story of startling import to every land-grant holder. The story related that the night watchman at the land office building (where Porter was employed as draftsman) had been overpowered, the great vault entered by burglars, who had stolen valuable records showing title to great quantities of Texas land. That title to any tract of land in the state granted by the government, might be placed in question, was apparent.

According to friends of the famous writer, his authorship of the hoax stories was never known by the public, and it is probable that Porter watched the excitement with a great deal of mirth.

TWELVE WOMEN

The difficulty of choosing the 12 living American women who have contributed most in various fields of endeavor is indicated by the length of time required by the National League of Women voters to make the selection. It would have been easy to pick 50 or 150; it is elimination that is hard in a world of conflicting opinions. As each name comes up there is always somebody who is sure that it would be unfortunate to drop it.

Yet some names are so obviously needed on the list that there are no argument about them. Such is Jane Addams, internationally known as a settlement worker and philanthropist. Nor is there likely to be any argument over Mrs. Wharton, Mrs. Fiske, Louise Homer or Cecelia Beaux. Being artists these four are better known than Anna J. Cannon, astronomer, Florence Sabin, anatomist; M. Carey Thomas, educational expert; Anna Botsford Comstock, natural Historian; Julia Lathrop, expert on the welfare of children; or Martha Van Rensselaer, dean of women at Cornell and an authority on home economics. The names of women scientists are not household words as yet.

The name of one woman in politics rounds out the list—that of Mrs. Carrie C. Catt. On the whole, it is a good list and a fair one. Another could be made which would include younger endeavor in the same fields, but keeping to the established reputations it would be hard to better the league's choice.—From the New York World.

JOHN SILVER.

Stevenson has given us in John Silver a figure of romance possibly unequaledin its subtlety by any creator since Shakespeare and Webster. A wonderful creature is John Silver and subtle must be the actor that can present him. Henry Irving could have done it, and Mr. Bourchier approaches Irving's standard in the weird last act of the stirring play. Ask any boy if Silver is wholly bad and he will instantly answer "No," and the boy is right. Jim in the story saw through him and loved him. Yet Silver from one point of view is a monster and a ruthless murderer, from another he is a self-seeker and disloyal to his own men, and he is undoubtedly afraid, not of death on the field or on the sea, but of death in Execution Dock. He is almost as bad as David, that great romantic Semitic figure. Yet like David, he is a figure that no one will hear a word against. Why? Because he is, in a sense, the incarnation of romance—J. E. G. Montgomery in the World Contemporary Review.

NEW GEMS BY

O. HENRY

A Treasure Trove of Humor From His Newly Discovered Newspaper Writings.

A RIGHTEOUS OUTBURST.

He smelled of gin and his whiskers resembled the cylinder of a Swiss music-box. He walked into a toy shop on Main street yesterday and leaned sorrowfully against the counter.

"Anything today?" asked the proprietor coldly.

He wiped an eye with a dingy red handkerchief and said:

"Nothing at all, thank you. I just came inside to shed a tear. I do not like to obtrude my grief upon the passers-by. I have a little daughter, sir; five years of age, with curly golden hair. Her name is Lillian.

"She says to me this morning: 'Papa, will Santa Claus bring me a red wagon for Christmas?' It completely unmanned me sir, as, alas, I am out of work and penniless. Just think, one little red wagon would bring her happiness, and there are children who have hundreds of red wagons."

"Before you go out," said the proprietor, "which you are going to do in about 15 seconds, I am willing to inform you that I have a branch store on Trains street, and was around there yesterday. You came in and made the same talk about your little girl, whom you caled Daisy, and I gave you a wagon. It seems you don't remember your little girl's name very well."

The man drew himself up with ignity, and started for the door. When nearly there, he turned and said:

"Her name is Lillian Daisy, sir, and the wagon you gave me had a rickety wheel and some of the paint was scratched off the handle. I have a friend who tends bar on Willow street, who is keeping it for me till Christmas, but I will keep a flush of shame on your behalf, sir, when Lillian Daisy sees that old, slab-sided, squeaking, second-hand, left-over-from-last-year's-stock wagon. But, sir, when Lillian Daisy kneels at her little bed at night I shall get her to pray for you, and ask Heaven to have mercy on you. Have you one of your business cards handy, so Lillian Daisy can get your name right in her petitions."

RAW MATERIALS AND FINISHED PRODUCT

There are signs, glowing signs, of an expansion of the textile industry in Texas. Texas has a limited number of cotton mills. Texas produces 30 per cent of the cotton crop of the world. Texas mills consume less than two per cent of the cotton produced under Texas skies.

Texas has a population similar to that of North and South Carolina. Texas has an ideal climate, all the fuels, all the transportation facilities, nearness to the market and all the other essentials to become one of the foremost manufacturing states as she is today the foremost of the agricultural states.

Is it necessary to sell Texas to Texans? Is it necessary to sell the great natural resources of Texas to Texans? Is it necessary to convince them that the potential wealth of cotton, wool, mohair and hides is something tremendous and that three-fourths of this potential wealth goes into the pockets of those who are not producers of the raw materials of manufacture?

There appears to be a rainbow of promise in the heavens. There appears to be signs of awakening on the part of Texans who are men of millions and Texans of comfortable fortunes with money for investment. Waxahachie has a successful textile establishment; Hillsboro has a prosperous cotton mill; Sherman has recognized the necessity for engaging in the manufacture of cotton goods; Belton has a yarn mill that is a dividend maker; McKinney has prosperous mills; Dallas and Waco have mills which have been very successful; Corsicana has a cotton mill that is one of the successes of the state; there are textile concerns in other cities and towns which have made money for their investors.

There is a coming establishment at New Braunfels where local men and local capital are uppermost — but Texas has only 175,000 spindles while North Carolina and South Carolina have millions of spindles and Carolina money and men made their success possible. There are many projects planned.

Marble Falls has launched one. Thirty years ago men of vision bought land and erected a building by the falls. This project failed because of the strenuous financial times which came on at that period and the machinery was never installed. Now upstanding citizens of Marble Falls are going to make another effort to make their city the center of textile industry.

James A. Greer is one of the editors of the American Wool and Cotton Reporter. Boston is the publication seat of this trade or technical journal. Greer is a southerner He was born in Alabama. He was a cotton mill operative at the early age of 16. He climbed the ladder by burning midnight oil. He is an encycolpedia of cotton mill facts and figures.

Speaking of earnings he asserts that year in and year out American cotton mills have averaged 36 per cent dividends to their stockholders. He carries these statistics with him. He has all the yearly reports of the hundreds of mills in Amerrico. There is one cotton mill in Texas, he says, that twice in its history, has paid a special dividend of 200 per cent after the payment of a regular dividend of 12 per cent.

There is another mill that is putting in new machinery on its net earnings of last year. He gives as the reason for the large dividends made and paid by the southern mills as the nearness of the mills to the cotton fields, superior quality of labor, absence of long freight hauls, the mildness of climate, accessibility to deep water ports and the markets of Mexico and South America. Did you know that there are 123 cotton mills in Mexico? It is a fact. Rogers W. Davis says so and his concern keeps an agent in the Aztec republic.

Did you know that the Mexican boll weevil had invaded India. India is a cotton producing country. Well, the Mexican invader, known as the boll weevil, has made his appearance in the cotton patches under East Indian skies and the growers are in a panicky frame of mind.

How did he get there? Well, during the world war he ensconced himself in American cotton and made the trip from the ports of Texas to the ports of India.

These textile experts from other states who are syping out the land in Texas do not hesitate to declare that the time is ripe for expansion, in a large way, of the textile industry in this state for the reason that Texas has a population of more than 5,000,000; that her cities are growing rapidly, that labor must be provided for the young men and women who must earn their own bread, that the men of millions and the men of lesser fortunes in Texas are the men who must launch and build manufacturing industries if they would have the state keep abreast of the times and take advantage of the marvelous natural resources of the commonwealth.

They say flatly that the New England cotton mills are not going to move to Texas; that the mills from east of the Mississippi river are not going to move to Texas, but that the clock has struck the hour for Texans to move forward as manufacturers as well as agriculturists.

Lieut. Gov. T. W. Davidson says there are 181 men in the legislature and no two think alike about solving the present crisis. Then Texas needs a legislative expert.

CREAMERY HELP TO FARMERS

Co-operative Scheme At Electra Works Out Beneficially

The Electra creamery as a co-operative and beneficial market to the farmers of Wichita county is described in an article in the First National Bank News monthly publication of the First National bank of Iowa Park devoted to agricultural development of that section of the county.

Explaining the creamery scheme in detail the article says:

Oftentimes the farmer complains, and not without cause, that he does not have a good market for his products; an increased production of pork, butter, or eggs may not better him very much financially if the market goes against him. Sometimes the market will break in his favor but rarely does the farmer have a steady and satisfactory market.

However we know of two farmers near Iowa Park who are taking advantage of a good steady market in the disposition of an important farm product—a product which is not as important in this immediate section as it should be—namely cream.

At various times during the past there has been a considerable quantity of cream shipped from this point, but it was all shipped a hundred miles or more, and the market was sometimes satisfactory and sometimes weak. Those shipping seem to have become fewer and fewer all the time, and at present we know of none shipping cream any great distance.

But there is now a better market available for the farmers in this section, and it is a very satisfactory market to which to ship cream. By "satisfactory" we mean there is no better market in the state, and not many as good for the handling of cream and turning it into butter on practically a cost of operating basis. A better price and the short distance to this market are two big factors in making it a satisfactory one for any farmer in this section who wishes to sell cream. This creamery is located at Electra, which makes a very short shipping distance as it is only a little more than a half hour's drive on the paved road, if one wishes to deliver his cream, as L. L. Kuntz has been doing for over two months. Recently J. E. Hobson began sending his cream to Electra also. Mention was made in our March issue of a better price for cream being realized from the Electra creamery by Mr. Kuntz. Lest there should be some misunderstanding as to the nature and purpose of the Electra creamery, it seems that a brief account of its organization would not be amiss.

About a year ago, Mr. Johnson, manager of the Electra chamber of commerce and agriculture, realizing the benefit which the farmers would receive from a monthly or semi-monthly cream check, got the business men of Electra interested, and soon they were laying their plans for a creamery. With the assistance of County Agent Guy Jones, the farmers became interested and before the passing of many weeks the creamery began to change from a vision into brick walls, housing new machinery. More cows were gotten in and purchased by the farmers, and about the middle of January, this year, the new plant started operating.

The organization is similar to a co-operative one, and yet it is not strictly co-operative. Business men of Electra, as well as many of the farmers, are stockholders. The manager is a capable butter-maker, who used to operate a creamery in Illinois, and who has taken blue ribbons on butter at the Illinois State Fair. The price paid for cream is the same to the non-stockholding farmer as that paid to the farmer who is a stockholder, and the same to an Iowa Park farmer as to an Electra farmer.

The creamery has been operating four months and is turning out an excellent product. Iowa Park merchants recently began handling Electra butter, and some of it was served at the Business Men's luncheon at the Helton hotel a few days ago. All present will attest as to its quality.

Thus the purpose of the establishment of the Electra creamery was to help the farmers in that territory, and when the farmers are helped to get on a cash basis, the business man is indirectly benefited. The creamery is carrying out its purpose; the Electra farmers who are selling cream are more than pleased with their new institution. We recently heard that a farmer near Electra was induced by an agent of an outside creamery to ship his cream their way. To make a long story short, two weeks later this farmer was taking his cream back to the home institution. It took him just two weeks to learn that he had a better market close at hand.

The Electra creamery is operated, not with the idea of making a profit, but to make expenses, cover depreciation costs, and pay the rest to the farmers in cream checks. This is why the farmers in this section will find it to be a steady and satisfactory market.

WOOL MARKET IN TEXAS OFF

Only Few Sales Reported In New Mexico And Other States

By B. N. TIMMONS
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Wool marketing in Texas, New Mexico and other wool marketing states is falling off to an alarming degree, according to reports to the department of agriculture. Buyers are not willing to pay the prices asked by growers, field agents report to the department.

Clips of wool consisting of the liner grades constituted the bulk of sales in Texas during the last week. A considerable portion of the wool is moving to warehouses. The prevailing prices reported are six and seven months' fine wool, 50c; 12 months' fine wool, 55c to 57½c; six and seven months' medium wool, 40c to 45c; 12 months' medium wool, 45c to 50c. It is stated that practically the bulk of contracting is over.

Only a few sales are reported in New Mexico. The shearing season is just beginning, and growers have announced their intention to ask 45c for their wool. No wool pools have been reported thus far. There is no material change noted in the Arizona wool situation from the previous week. The movement of the northern clip is now under way.

Shearing in Oregon is probably 40 per cent finished. Fleeces are slightly heavier than last year. There is no material change in the situation, except that the market is reported rather slow, as mills have filled early requirements. Some growers are continuing to hold for higher prices.

The situation in Montana is reported as unchanged, compared with the preceding week. A few sales of wool have been made at 50c to 52c per pound. A deadlock has apparently arisen between wool buyers and growers, the latter indicating their confidence of better prices by holding and asking prices higher than the buyers are willing to pay. From all reports received, it is evident that only a small percentage of the total clip has been sold to date.

What Iowa Park Farmers Are Doing

Special Dispatch to Record News

IOWA PARK, June 2.—What the farmers in this section are doing is told in the current issue of the First National Bank News, published monthly by the First National bank of this place.

Some items of interest follow:

Jas. L. Barbour made his first cutting of alfalfa during the second week in May. Mr. Barbour has 10 acres in alfalfa, which proved to be more profitable than his wheat crop last year. On 155 acres he made 850 bushels of wheat. The 10 acres of alfalfa made 835 bales in two cuttings, which was worth 80c per bale at the very minimum. (Alfalfa sold as high as $1.25 per bale on the local market last winter). The expense of harvesting and threshing his wheat crop was much greater than that of cutting and baling the alfalfa. Of course, Mr. Barbour fed a part of the alfalfa at home, but had it all been sold, it would have netted him a greater cash return than did the 155 acres of wheat.

Geo. Dorris has also been growing alfalfa for the past two years. From six acres last year he made the same yield per acre as Mr. Barbour. He pastured his this spring longer than Mr. Barbour, but his is about ready for cutting. The quality of hay produced last year was excellent.

Of course, alfalfa cannot be expected to do well on upland farms around here. The fields of these two farmers are lowlands lying along a creek. Similar fields of from five to 10 acres can be found on many of our farms, which would be more profitable put into a "patch" of alfalfa than in wheat or cotton. Alfalfa will make good pasture for part of the year; it is a legume and a soil builder.

W. C. Williams recently purchased a pure-bred Duroc-Jersey sow and eight pigs from R. M. Hall. Mr. Williams sold his grade stuff when he made this purchase, and says he is going to have some nice stuff from this litter of pigs for show at the Texas-Oklahoma fair this fall. They will get skimmed milk, as Mr. Williams milks several Jersey cows, and we expect to stop by once in a while and watch them grow.

SUPREME COURT'S BOOZE ACT WILL BE STRICTLY APPLIED

Associated Press Dispatch

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Strict application of the recent supreme court decision barring liquor from territorial waters of the United States has been practically decided upon by treasury officials who hold out no hope of meeting the views of the foreign powers through regulatory provisions.

Nothing short of legislation, officials said tonight, would ameliorate the difficulty in which the government finds itself in an international way. Modification of the Volstead act by the next congress it was indicated, therefore probably would be asked.

Spudders Maul Steers in Opener, 11 to 1

STAUFFER HOLDS BATTERS IN PALM OF HIS HAND WHILE TWO STEER HURLERS GET POUNDED

Three Dallas Batters Fan At Fast Ones In Fourth; Conley Fails to Halt Wild Hitting Of Salmites As Scores Mount Up.

By DON WELDON

Stauffer showed the Steers a few things in handling a baseball yesterday afternoon when he held the batsmen to seven hits, while the Spuds trimmed them to the tune of 11 to 1. He kept the Dallas gang in the palm of his hand throughout the flat-sided affair, and not an earned run crossed the plate, the one score being counted when Wano reached third on Cotter's error, scoring on a hit.

The Steers touted Hurler Conley, failed to show the stuff which his reputation would make one expect the end of the fifth after the Spuds had the end o the fifth after Spuds had enjoyed four innings of smashing his offerings to the corners of the lot. They took everything he had to offer and if hard and long smashes had all been scores the scorers would still be counting.

The carnage started in the second after the Spuds had let one inning go by without counting, and continued in every inning but the fourth, when they failed to get around. Grigsby started things by a hit to right field that put him on and White finished the good work with a terrific smash that sent the second of Conley's offerings flying into a maze of mosquito bushes a few yards on the far side of the green fence. The ball cleared the left field barrier by several feet being one of the longest hits this season. And Grigsby and White trotted around for the first two.

Four Score In Third.

In the third the local gang got next to the Steers moundsman for a quartet of markers that gave a real impetus to the scoring. After Bescher failed to get on, Coombs got two bases for a long drive to left field, Tanner being walked to first on four balls. Cotter sent them in with a two-bagger and then crossed the plate on an overthrow at first when Grigsby hit to right. Grigsby counted a few seconds later when White sent a long flyer to right. Berger was out attempting to stretch a one base hit.

In the fourth, Stauffer gave the visitors a lesson in swinging, and the fans an exhibition of the prettiest hurling seen here in many days, when he sent fast ones by the first three men up, sending them all out fanning. They were unable to connect solidly, and the ball did not go in front of the plate after being pitched.

Cotter Scores.

Cotter came across in the fifth just to keep the good work going and in the sixth Berger hit safely and scored on Bescher's smash to right. Bob going out trying to steal second. Two more came in the seventh, when Cotter and Grigsby were sent home by White's hard two-bagger to deep center. Freeman was being touched almost as easily as Conley, and the Spuds made it lucky 11 when Bischoff hit to first, was sacrificed to second, and sent home on Bescher's single. Although Bob had no trouble in getting on bases, he found it hard to slip by the Steer receiver and was again nailed as he tried to make second.

Steers Count One.

The only one the visitors were able to get across came in the ninth after two men were out, on an error at first. Aside from the one counter, they were never dangerously near scoring, being for the greater part held in subjection by the Spudder twirler, who showed all the class of a mound veteran.

Three double plays, two by the Spudders and one by the Steers, let the fans in on some fast fielding. White, Berger and Cotter featured in the first, a pretty bit of play when they sent Wano and Mathes to the benches. In the second, by the locals, the play was from Tanner to White to Cotter, and Donohue and Segrist took the trip. Both came in the first two innings. Dallas imitated the stunt when Massey, Mathes and Wano sent Coombs and Tanner off the field.

His nibs, a new ump, made his appearance in yesterday's battle, when Fanning handled the balls and strikes. The new official did some good calling and kept his one arm waving busily doing the work of two calling the good ones and the bad ones, as they whizzed past. He worked with Kane, an old man in the game.

Hastings Man Captains Sooners

HASTINGS, Okla., June 2.—David Phillyrs, arts and science junior, Hastings, was recently honored by being elected captain of the university of Oklahoma baseball team for 1924. David has earned two letters on the varsity at third base for the last two years.

The Oklahoma team has just finished a very successful season, placing second in the Missouri Valley conference with a percentage of .667. This is best record the Sooners have made since their entrance into the conference. Phillyrs played in every scheduled game until the last of the season when he was forced out on account of an injured knee.

Phillyrs is a graduate of the Hastings high school class of 1919. He is a member of Delta Pi, social, and Sigma Delta Psi, honorary athletic fraternities at the university and is also a member of Cubs club, journalistic society. In addition to his baseball activities, he played forward on the freshman basketball team of 1920.

Firpo, Wild Bull of Pampas, Is Real Puncher, Edgren Says

By ROBERT EDGREN

The hardest punchers among the world's heavyweights just now are Jack Dempsey Luis Firpo and Jess Willard. Not far behind is "Tiny" Herman, little known, but likely to become prominent as soon as he has a chance to land his weighty right on someone more famous than Al Reich.

Tom Gibbons, who fights Dempsey for the world's championship among the oil wells up in Montana, July 4, is also a lusty walloper. So is Harry Wills, the big black challenger; and Jack Renault doesn't toss any soft pillow when he lets his right go.

Altogether, it's a long time since we have had such a collection of hard hitters among the heavyweights.

Hitherto the heavy sluggers have been scattered. John L. Sullivan was famous for his terrific right. Jim Corbett had no punch to back his unusual speed and skill, and the result of that lack showed in his many defeats.

Tom Sharkey was a terrific hitter with no science at all, and he beat Corbett, McCoy, Ruhlin and other clever boxers. Peter Maher had a terrific wallop, and was always ready to knock out anyone. He nearly knocked Fitzsimmons out in the first round of their fight across the Rio Grande.

Jeffries was a great puncher. Tommy Burns could both box and punch. Jack Johnson was a wonderful boxer and seldom took the risk of letting everything go into a punch, but when he did he could hit as hard as anyone.

Jess Willard always has been a cautious boxer, but in several fights he uncorked a knockout punch when he was hurt. Although lightly built, Gunboat Smith was a knockout king in his time.

Every Real Champ a Puncher

Jack Dempsey's punch is worth a long paragraph by itself. There never has been any other heavyweight who combined speed, judgment, ring craft and hitting power as Dempsey combines them. In the matter of speed, he has even the old champion, Fitzsimmons, outclassed, and he is nearly Fitzsimmons' equal in craft and judgment. As for his punch, either right or left is annihilating, and he uses one hand as well as the other, according to his opening.

Every real champion has been a hard puncher. A man without a punch has no change to hold the title.

Firpo's chance to win the world's heavyweight championship is figured almost entirely on his terrific right-hand punching, although he is now developing an effective left that will give him a better percentage before long.

Jimmy De Forest is working on that left. Firpo landed one on McAuliffe May 12. McAuliffe said it was Firpo's left that nearly paralyzed him, so that he couldn't get away from the following right hander that knocked him out.

There is a lot of discussion about what figure the punch will cut when Firpo and Willard meet.

Willard's Three-Punch Assortment

Willard has three good punches, a hard, straight left, a wicked right that curves downward because his target is always below him, and an uppercut that is delivered at a range of from three to four feet inster of close in, the way Jack Johnson and other boxers have used it.

Floyd Johnson says: "Firpo can be knocked down, because he has been knocked down, and if Willard reaches him with that uppercut Firpo is going to find himself sitting on the floor."

Johnson also told me that Willard's straight right is a crushing blow, and that Willard "knocked him cookoo" with that right in the second round of their fight and between straight rights and right uppercuts never gave him a chance to recover.

"I had a plan of battle for Willard," Johnson said, "but he kept me so dazed that I never remembered it."

Johnson thinks that if Willard could cut loose aggressively at the beginning of the first round, he'd have a chance to knock Firpo out.

That isn't Willard's way of fighting. He never went to work in a fight until three or four rounds had passed, except when Luther McCarty pressed him so hard that Willard was fighting his best in the second round.

Willard can't change his instinctive ring action. It is natural for him to stall and box and take no risks that he can avoid until he thinks he has his man measured. But for that waiting habit he might be champion today. If he went in for quick results, like Dempsey, he might get in the first hard punch and follow it up for a quick knockout.

"Make It Snappy," Says Firpo

This is where Firpo figures as a likely winner over Willard, and Jack Dempsey, a most dangerous opponent within a few months.

Firpo has just what Dempsey has—an intense desire to win in the shortest possible time. It's dangerous to lead at Firpo. He counters every time, and throws everything into the punch.

There's one great difference between Dempsey and Firpo as punchers. Dempsey weaves and slips in close, the way Bob Fitzsimmons used to, evading blows to come close enough to sway his whole body into short drives for body or head, with the forearm lined behind the blows. Every one of his famous knockouts have been delivered in this manner.

Firpo hits best at long range. He plunges ahead with the blow and drives it so fast that blocking his glove is almost impossible. He hits when no lead is expected, as he seems to be out of hitting range. His headlong plunge carries him within hitting distance while his arm and shoulder are going out toward the target.

It is the opposite of Fitzsimmons' trick. Fits used to lean back from the waist and shuffle in until he was two feet nearer than he seemed to be. Then as his body swung forward with the punch he was well within range.

Can Firpo "Take It?"

Firpo's blow is crushing in its impact. While he doesn't hit as fast as Dempsey, and doesn't sway and weave so that blow follows blow, right and left, in rapid succession, one of his blows is likely to be enough to win.

I think he is one of the hardest hitters I've ever seen in the ring, and one of the most dangerous because of his countering instinct. As Firpo's weight—214 pounds when trained fine—puts him 30 pounds over Dempsey and just half way between Dempsey and Willard, and as the weight is all bone and muscle, it would be absurd to say he won't be dangerous to Dempsey if he beats Willard for the title matches.

Willard will probably land blows enough to show whether Firpo can take punishment as well as he gives it. That's the only question about the "Bull of the Pampas" that hasn't been fully settled by his few fights.

As for the effectiveness of Firpo's hits, I quote two of his victims, Bill Brennan and Jack McAuliffe.

"He hit me as if he was crushing rocks in a stone yard," said Brennan, whose head was covered with bumps after the fight, and who spent several days recovering in a hospital. "He hit me with his left and parred my spine so that I was half paralyzed and then I saw the right coming and couldn't move," said McAuliffe, "and that's all I remember."

"Bull' a One-Punch Bird

Firpo is one of those birds who doesn't need more than one punch, if that one lands right. Of such stuff are champions made. Dempsey is that way, but Dempsey is such a lightning fast thinker that he sometimes gets in a couple of extra hits. After seeing Fred Fulton knocked out by Dempsey, I went to the dressing room and asked Jack is he remembered how the knockout occurred.

"Yes," said Dempsey, "I really knocked him out with the left in the body, but as he doubled over I brought the left up and chucked him on the chin for good measure, and that knocked his head over just into position for a short right, so I let him have that, too."

Three blows delivered within about a second and a half! That's how Dempsey's fighting brain works.

And I wouldn't be at all surprised to see Firpo develop into just such a hitter. He has the one thing that makes a knockout artist—the desire to work fast and finish in a punch, if possible.

Firpo also has the coaching of Jimmy De Forest, who is to the boxing game of today just what Spider Kelly was years ago.

HUNTER LYON LEADS IN SHOOT

He Tops Single Event And Joe Pate Comes Out High In Doubles

Friday afternoon the Wichita Falls Gun club held its weekly shoot at the traps back of the base ball park. The weather was ideal and a good crowd was out. The clay targets sailed out of the traps in perfect form, but the keen eyes of the shooters caused most of them to stop in mid-air.

Hunter Lyon took the honors in the singles event, and Joe Pate was high in the doubles. Several new shooters were out to enjoy the sport, and the old heads were there to get in trim for the coming registered shoots. A number of the local shooters will leave Sunday morning for Denison where they will participate in a registered shoot there Sunday afternoon.

George Whiteman, Spudder right fielder, left yesterday afternoon to join the Oakland, California club in the Pacific Coast league. He was given his release by the Spudder skipper, and immediately signed to handle the right garden for the westerners.

Whiteman held down the right field position creditably here for a while, but was put on the bench when his hitting took a slump. Grigsby took his place and has kept up a barrage of hits that have earned him a permanent booth, and as a result Whiteman was not needed.

Criqui, Frenchman, Knocks Out Kilbane In Sixth Round

HERO OF WAR IS NEAR CHAMP

He Out-Boxes and Beats American to Punches In Short Fight

Associated Press Dispatch

POLO GROUNDS, New York, June 2.—A lithe-limbed, panther-like warrior of France, bearing the scars of the fight of fights, boxed and punched his way to a dramatic victory and a world championship here today.

Eugene Criqui, ex-poilu, who came back to the ring after his jaw had stopped a German bullet at Verdun seven years ago, rose to the greatest heights of his pugilistic career when he knocked out Johnny Kilbane, veteran American holder of the world's featherweight crown, in the sixth round of an international battle before a crowd estimated at 25,000 in the Polo grounds.

Battle of Veterans

It was a battle between master ring men, veterans of two continents, but in the end Criqui's greatest stamina and punching ability carried him to triumph. Kilbane, who had held the world title for 11 years, had a shade the best of the defensive fighting, but at critical moments he was unable to stem the tide of Criqui's cyclonic attack.

The finish came with sensational suddenness in the sixth round and when Kilbane's generalship appeared to have baffled the former poilu's fiery onslaught.

Time after time he had weathered a storm of rights and lefts to the head and body, but Criqui was not to be denied. Starting from his corner in the sixth round with determination in his features, he feinted, then whipped a terrific left to the body that staggered the champion. Kilbane drew away, expecting another left, but Criqui shot in a right cross to the jaw and sent the American back on his heels and toppling to the canvas.

At the count of six Kilbane tried to rise and succeeded in getting to one knee, but, groggy and weak, he fell back and Referee Jack Appel tolled off the count of 10.

It was only the second time in his long ring career that Kilbane has been counted out. In 1917, when at the height of his career as featherweight king, he went out of his class to meet Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, and was knocked out in the third round.

Dramatic ringside scenes followed Criqui's sudden triumph. The challenger himself, almost stunned by the quickness of his victory, was quickly seized by his jubilant seconds. Freeing himself for a moment, however he rushed to the fallen title holder's corner and kissed Kilbane on each cheek.

Dramatic Scenes

Then, as the crowd enthusiastically acclaimed the new champion, Criqui was carried from the ring by his manager, Robert Eudeline and several poilu comrades in uniform who had escorted him to the ring before the bout to the strains of the "Marseillaise." It was several minutes before a way back to the dressing rooms could be cleared.

The principals in the most picturesque international boxing event since the Jack Dempsey-Georges Carpentier battle two years ago, Kilbane and Criqui were a marked contrast. The champion, grey haired and 34, was all smiles as he clipshed through the ropes and went through the preliminary ceremonies. Criqui, however apparently in finely drawn condition, was silent and unmoved, a look of determination on his face such as it might have worn before the zero hour as he waited in the front lines at Verdun in 1916.

Both Fight Brilliantly

Both Criqui and Kilbane fought brilliant defensive battles from the start, but the lithe and hard hitting Frenchman kept up an aggressive fire to the champion's head and body that gradually had telling effects.

Kilbane clinched repeatedly to stem the ex-poilu's firey assault, but Criqui landed hard and effectively nevertheless. The Frenchman had Kilbane showing signs of distress as early as the third round.

Both set a fast pace and in the fifth Criqui drew blood from the champion's nose. Criqui's determined assault in the final round ended with a left to the body and right to the jaw that felled the champion for the count.

Criqui's victory provoked enthusiastic outbursts of applause. It was the first championship victory for an invading pugilist since George Carpentier captured the light heavyweight title from Battling Levinsky several years ago.

Kilbane had held the title since 1912, when he captured it from Abe Attell in California in 20 rounds.

KILBANE SAYS HE WAS CAUGHT OFF BALANCE

NEW YORK, June 2.—Describing the manner in which he lost his world's featherweight title to Eugene Criqui of France, Johnny Kilbane declared:

"The blow came as a surprise to me, as I was just opening up. The body blow struck me off balance and I could not escape the punch to the jaw that floored me.

"I was all confidence and in wonderful shape. Criqui is a marvelous boxer and a terrific puncher. I wish him nothing but success as the new champion."

Criqui, the new title holder, after receiving the congratulations of compatriots who besieged his dressing room, modestly described how he attained the height of featherweight-dom.

"Kilbane," he said, "gave me a hard battle. He is one of the cleanest boxers I ever met. I saw my opportunity in the sixth round and after staggering him off balance with a left to the body, I swung the right. It landed. That was all."

NEW FEATHERWEIGHT CHAMP.

Eugene Criqui, who put Johnny Kilbane to sleep in the sixth round of the bout yesterday afternoon, taking the crown of the featherweight champion. The knockout upset all the dope on the fight, as Kilbane went into the ring the favored fighter.

The Fight By Rounds

ROUND ONE

They met in a clinch from which Criqui broke with a left to the ribs. Criqui was on the offensive but Kilbane was elusive. Kilbane pecked Criqui's nose with straight lefts. Criqui fought coolly and worked for an opening in the champion's defense. Kilbane hooked a light left to the jaw.

ROUND TWO

Criqui was cautioned against hitting low. Criqui sent a straight left to the ribs and hooked lightly to the jaw. Criqui worked hard but had trouble getting inside Kilbane's defense. They exchanged light lefts to the jaw at the bell.

ROUND THREE

They started swinging heavily and each landed a right to jaw. Kilbane smilingly held off the Frenchman, and countered his swings with light left taps. Kilbane was fighting a purely defensive battle. Criqui swung heavy rights and lefts to head.

ROUND FOUR

Criqui forced the fighting and they engaged in a lively exchange to the head. Kilbane sent a straight to the chin and Criqui returned with a right to the head. They traded swinging rights to the jaw. They sparred for a bit. Kilbane was defending himself with open gloves.

ROUND FIVE

Criqui crossed a right to the chin as they fell into a clinch. Criqui hooked right and left to body. Kilbane stopped smiling after straight lefts to stomach and left hook to jaw. Criqui was boring through the champion's defense. Criqui's blows snapped like a flash and Kilbane aware of the danger grew serious in his fighting. Kilbane spat blood.

ROUND SIX

Criqui dashed from his seat and shot a straight left to the ribs. They sparred for a minute and the Frenchman's reconstructed jaw set determinedly as he stood flatfooted and swung both rights and left to the head. Kilbane's eyes began to blink but the old champion fought back and attempted to get way. As he swung his body to the left to escape a left hok Criqui's right snapped against his jaw. Kilbane rolled over under the ropes. He shook his head and manged to get to his knees at the count of six. Then a pained expression in his eyes appeared and he sank back clutching the ropes and heard the count of ten. One minute and 54 seconds of the round had passed when the Poilu was proclaimed the champion of the world.

Wheezes From The Press Coop

By Don Weldon

Well, well, well. Aain't it awful!

* * *

The Steers came way up here to play baseball and then let Stauffer tell them where to get on and off—first base.

* * *

Stay in there Stauffer,
Our hat—we doff 'er
To you.
The next guy to meet 'em
We hope will just treat 'em
Like you.

* * *

Eleven to 1. Aint it a g-g-grand and glorious feelin'?

* * *

Conley failed to show his stuff, if he had it yesterday. He sure did look bad with the Spuds pounding that ball all over the park. The best he could do was to throw the pill over and step out of the way to let it pass. The gang hit all he offered.

* * *

Grigsby hit the apple
And landed on first base,
Then Whitie hit a homer,
And well nigh stopped the race!

* * *

Double plays seemed to be the word of the day yesterday. The Spuds got twice as many as Dallas. Dallas got one.

* * *

That hot one in the fifth nearly got over Mathes head, but he reached up and got it in the tips of his fingers, with his bare hand. He made a perfect throw to first and got his man, too.

* * *

The Steers got a few hingles in the first few stanzas, but couldn't get them at the right time. Stauffer knew just when to make them stop hitting the pill and they didn't cause any trouble, although in the first he let the bases get filled in a careless moment and had to fan one to save a score.

* * *

Three Dallas boys picked up their poles
And started out to bat;
Stauffer fanned em one by one—
Now what do you think of that?

* * *

That was in the fifth when Stauffer got tired of throwing them over and sent Allen, Conley and Lingle back to the bench.

The Spuds aren't bothered a bit about the game today. The Steers don't look bad and it looks like another one for the local gang when they line up this afternoon. They couldn't lose—because Salm says they're going to take four straight.

* * *

A new umps made his appearance at the meeee yesterday. His name is Fanning and just because he only has one arm is no reason that he isn't master of the park. He called a good game Saturday, behind the plate, working with Kane.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC GRANTS INCREASE OF $75,000 YEARLY

Adolpho Luque, champion hard-luck pitcher of the National league, has found out how to win—shut out the other team. He let them down with five hits and kept them from scoring.

Man Who Would Buy Fleet Swaps Bricks With Lasker

BUFFALO, June 2.—The possibility, existed today that John W. Slack of Silver Creek, who bid $1,000,000,000 for the government's merchant marine fleet, would withdraw his bid.

Slack, in a statement, intimated he might withdraw the offer. He said he had not been in New York yesterday to meet commissioners of the shipping board, as reported.

"Due to the business methods of Chairman Lasker, we are now in the position where we may go ahead with the proposition and unmask Chairman Lasker's batteries completely, or we may withdraw with considerable grace and eclat," said Slack.

"The question we have to decide is whether or not we are willing to involve others in financial responsibilities."

Slack mentioned Henry Ford in his statement but said nothing definite as to whether Ford is to become financially interested in the bid.

Since Chairman Lasker characterized Slack's bid as a summer dream, Slack, in his statement declared Chairman Lasker's methods constitute a nightmare.

MICHIGAN WINS BIG TRACK MEET

Records Broken In Hotly Contested Outdoor Events

Associated Press Dispatch

ANN ARBOR, Mich., June 2.—What probably was the most bitterly contested meet ever staged in the West, Michigan triumphed over Illinois, 57 1-2 to 57 in the western conference outdoor track and field championships on Ferry Field today. The last event on the program—the mile relay race—gave the Wolverines the half point necessary to win the championship.

Before the relay was decided Michigan had a margin of 2 1-2 points over Illinois with Iowa virtually certain to win the relay and Michigan's chances doubtful in the race. But the "fighting Illini" living up to traditions of their name, upset the calculations, flashed to the tape a winner and broke the "big ten" record for the event. The meet resulted in a shattering of a worlds record that has stood for 25 years—in fact it was smashed twice today, and six western conference records were cracked. Charley Brookins, a curly brown haired youth from the University of Iowa, was the world record performer. In his trial heat of the 220-yard low hurdles he clipped a fifth of a second off the world's mark, leaping the barrier in :23 2-5 and finally win the event in the record breaking time of :23 1-5.

The "Big Ten" records to fall were made in the pole vault, broad jump, 220 yard dash, 220-yard low hurdles and the javelin.

Third place honors in the scramble of points today went to Wisconsin with 27 points, while Iowa was fourth with 26. Notre Dame was next in order with 14 1-2; Minnesota 13; Chicago 10 1-2; Northwestern 7; Washington university of St. Louis 4; Ohio State 3 1-2; Missouri 2; Drake 2, and Purdue 1. The individual honors were divided between Wilson of Iowa and Brooker of Michigan, each of whom scored nine points.

Wind, Hail and Rain Does Damage In Tillman County

DAMAGE DONE BY LIGHTNING

Home of County Commission Hit; Seed House Is Destroped

Special Dispatch to Record News

FREDERICK, Okla., June 2.—Wind, hail and rain, accompanying a severe electrical storm, did heavy property damage in Tillman county, particularly in Frederick and adjacent territory, Thursday night. It is estimated that the damage will mount into the thousands.

The hail beat cotton crops into the ground and did some damage to wheat, although the grain stood better than was expected and the crop is far from lost.

The Frederick Cottonseel Oil company's seed house was destroyed, and a refinery building nearby wrecked. The roof was torn from the Merchants' display building at the fair grounds, and the fence surrounding the grounds blown away.

Lightning struck the home of County Commissioner Mark Anthony, a mile east of here, tearing a jagged hole in the roof over Anthony's bed. The Anthonys had taken refuge in the storm cellar.

The smokestack of the Williams-Miller gin was blown down, doing damage in the boiler room as it crashed, and other damage was done to the gin building.

Residences throughout the city were damaged by water which was blown into them by the driving wind. Plasterers have days of work before them. A barn on the W. McCann place in town was destroyed, and plate glass windows littered the business section of the town Friday morning.

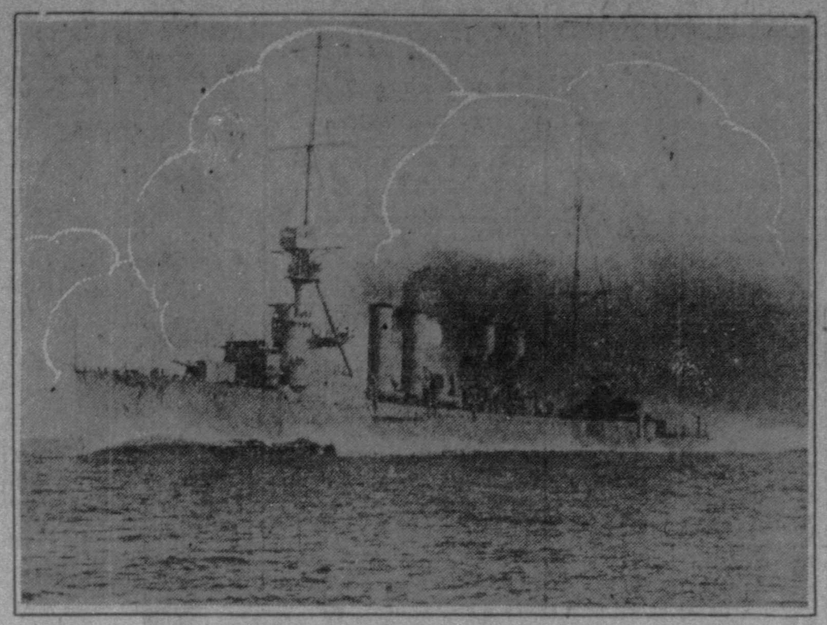

The rain accompanying the storm measured one and a half inches, the greater part of which fell in 20 minutes.

Damage to crops in this county is in the main confined to the immediate locality of Frederick, Grandfield escaping with a heavy rain, and other towns in the county reporting but little hail. The hail fell in showers. Peach, apricot and grapes are badly damaged. Cotton in many places is washed away, and this will necessitate the third replanting.

Friday morning telephone wires were down toward the south, and many of the rural lines were in trouble.

This is the third terror-inspiring and property-damaging storm of the week, the first being in the Grandfield region, the second most severe in the Davidson section.

GRAHAM CITY HALL RENOVATED

Fourteen Drunks Arrested; Revival Service Will Begin Today

GRAHAM, June 2.—The city hall is being renovated this week. The C. L. S. C. library and the chamber of commerce are located in this building, as well as the oil and gas supervisor.

A fire alarm was turned in from the east part of town Wednesday morning, but the fire had already been put out before the arrival of the department.

Sheriff Cambern and Deputy Sheriff Blackie DeGrafftenried went over to Oil City and Herron City and arrested 14 drunks. Each of them paid cash fines in city court.

A. B. Casburn has finished the partition placed in the large court house auditorium. The new room has been made already for the county demonstrator and his department. A room was also fixed up in the third story for the jury room.

The Presbyterians, Baptists and Christians were victors in the Sunday school league race the past week. The Presbyterians showed a complete reversal of form and defeated the highly touted Methodists by the score of 14 to 5. In a game which was to settle a tie game, the Baptists defeated the Methodsts by the score of 10 to 6. Several double plays were made by both teams. The next evening, the Christians walloped the Baptists, putting them in the lead for the league pennant. The standing of the teams up to date is as follows:

	P.	W.	L.	Pct.
Christians	5	4	1	.800
Methodists	5	3	2	.600
Baptists	5	2	3	.400
Presbyterians	5	1	4	.200

Revival services will begin at the First Methodist church Sunday, June 3rd. The services will probably not begn until Sunday evening and with the omission of Monday evening, on account of the commencement exercises to take place in the church bulding. Dr. Luther B. Bridgers of Gainesville, Georgia, will do the preaching, with H. S. Jenkins of East Point, Ga., directng the singing.

The Civic league met at the First Methodist church Monday. Several members were added to the list. The league has had a hand in many of the improvements of the city. They improved Court House park and almost entirely made over Shawnee park into one of the most popular places in the city. During the summer months their meetings will be held in Shawnee park every two weeks.

Mrs. F. F. Parrish and children came in Sunday to make Graham their home. Mr. Parrish, who is cashier of the Guaranty State bank, has been here some time, but his wife and children remained in Cisco until school was out.

The first prize is a five-passenger Buick. Other prizes are a victrola, a radio set and an all-steel kitchen cabinet.

Speeches of commendation for the manner in which Judge Dickey had directed the destinies of the chamber during his tenure of office were made by members of the directorate and others.

Other officers elected were Brad Staggs, vice president; Sloan Fortenberry, treasurer, and O. T. Liles, secretary. Those who will compose the directorate the next twelve months are W. H. Chilson, real estate and loan dealer; R. J. Brown, ranchman; W. E. Edwards, editor, The People's Review; T. H. Marberry, president Merchants' and Planters' bank; L. R. APPROACH TO ATHENS

To every one sensitive to historical suggestion, to every one to whom beauty makes the supreme appeal, the first sight of Athens becomes the moment of a lifetime.

To the right rises Hymettus, famed now, as in ancient days, for the honey which the bees rifle from its flowers; to the left and nearer, the island of Salamis, with its deathless memories; a bowshot away, Psyttalia, where Aristides and his band cut down the flower of Persian chivalry, after the naval battle of Salamis; still farther to the left, the ranges of Parnes, extending in a full, voluptuous curve toward the east.

As one sweeps this panorama with glasses, the city reveals itself more clearly, wearing "like a garment the beauty of the morning" and out-topping all, the Acropolis, with the Parthenon as its diadem.—Alexander Wilbourne Weddell in the National Geographic Magazine.

Iowa Park Man Inventor

P. G. Kildow manager of the Motor truck line of Iowa Park, has been working on a device for more than two years and on April 1 received from the United States patent office a patent on the article, which he had spent so much time on. The machine that he patented is called a "pump rod elevator." Its greatest value is an accident preventive and time saver. It has a locking device on pump rod elevator to prevent so many accidents caused by the oil type elevators becoming detached from the rods on top of the derrick and falling on the workmen; also the rods falling from the top of the well and breaking tubing, etc.

There was an accident two years ago in this county, caused the old type sucker rod elevator, which the company he was working for than $600. Had the present sucker rod elevator locking device been installed instead of the old type this accident could have and would have been prevented.

During January of this year an accident occurred on the Ruyle farm, north of Iowa Park, where the rods slipped out of the elevator and dropped 1,700 feet to the bottom of the well. The field superintendent stated that this accident alone cost his company more than $5,000. The above pair of locking elevators would have prevented this accident. There is no more equipment used with this elevator than the old type. The time saving one derives from the use of the Kildow Safety elevator comes when you know this elevator is going to stick to the place you put it.

The elevator as patented consists of a bail and block very much like the old style, except at one turnover of bail there is an excentric which operates the locker and remains locked till unlocked by man. This dveice automatically locks isself when placed on squares of sucker rods.

Booze Battle Will Be Staged In Illinois

CHICAGO, June 2.—Repeal of the Mullan-Gage prohibition enforcement law in New York has definitely drawn battle line between the association against the prohibition amendment and the Anti-Saloon league and the next combat between the two organizations will take place in Illinois, F. Scott McBride, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league said today.

The Anti-Saloon league of Illinois, Mr. McBride said, is strengthening its forces for that battle.

It is now the purpose of the supporters of the association against the prohibition amendment, Mr. McBride asserted, to go into the legislative districts of the state and win enough members of the next legislature to repeal the Illinois prohibition act.

TO THE MILLIONS

It is estimated that on a single occasion at least a million persons hear the president deliver an address through the use of a radio. The mere statement is a sufficient indication of the immense advantage the president today enjoys over any of his predecessors. He can talk to the whole hemisphere when he chooses, and may be heard over the ocean as well.

In the early days of the republic, when newspapers were few and presidential messages took many days to travel, a speaker confronting a small audience might comfort himself with the reflection that posterity, at least, would ultimately receive and consider what he had to say. He could not in person declare his views simultaneously in Alaska and Florida, and even the isles of the Southern seas.

The reaction of public opinion, to be sure, is not instantly audible. But by the power of radio the minds of all the people who "listen in" may be stimulated in the consideration of problems that effect the commonweal the country over. This new agency of communication is a valuable popular training in listening; it is an educative medium, whereby the government may declare its policies or disseminate assembled facts, to the general advantage.—From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Wedding Of Miss Ethel Owen Culminates Many Love Affairs

Popular Couple Are Married At Home Of Bride Saturday

Society was intensely interested in the first June wedding of the season, which took place Saturday at high noon at the home of the bride's father, John W. Owen, when Miss Ethel Owen was married to Britt Cranfill. The great uncle of the bridegroom, Dr. J. B. Cranfill, a Baptist minister of Dallas, officiating.

An improvised altar was arranged at the end of the living room around the fireplace and mantle of ferns, potted plants and gladioli, where the impressive ring ceremony was read, and the entire reception suite was elaborately decorated in sweet peas and other blossoms.

Miss Gay Gwynn, the maid of honor, preceded the bride, who entered on the arm of her father, and wore a charming afternoon gown of pink chiffon with real lace bertha, carrying a shower bouquet of pink rosebuds.

The bride was lovely in an imported gown of blue chiffon over pink satin with blue velvet band trimmings, and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. She also wore a handsome diamond and platinum bar pin, a gift from the groom.

The bride is one of Wichita Fall's most attractive and popular and has been reared in this city. She is a graduate of the local high school in the class of "21," and afterwards attended the State university. On account of her exceptional sweet personality, she is a social favorite.

Mr. Cranfill is one of the city's most promising young oil operators, coming here from Dallas, where he is a member of a prominent family.

Following the ceremony, which was witnessed by intimate friends of the young people, an informal reception was held and punch served.

Mr. and Mrs. Cranfill left for California for their wedding trip, and upon their return will reside in the Kemp hotel.

Mrs. Cranfill's going away gown was a [illegible] model with black [illegible]

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. McMillen and [illegible] Kosse, Texas, Robert Seay of Houston, C. [illegible] Worth, David [illegible] Pettit of Dallas, and [illegible] of Dallas, a brother of the groom.

Many charming prenuptial affairs preceded the wedding, among them a Kappa affair given by Mrs. Landon H. Cullum, a sorority sister, on Tuesday afternoon.

SHOWER FOR POPULAR YOUNG PEOPLE

On Friday night, the Epworth league of the First Methodist church, South, gave a surprise shower, honoring Miss Myrtle Bowman and Mr. Murrell Hopper, whose wedding will be solemnized this evening at the church at 6:45. The party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Cole. Mrs. Cole is a sister of the bride-elect.

The guests assembeld at the church, leaving there at 8 o'clock. The front lawn of the Cole home, at 1808 Eleventh street, was used for the gathering place, several games being played in the course of the evening, among which were "Overhead Pillow Relay," "Bird In the Nest," "Folding Chair Relay," and "Parcel Post Relay." After this the women gathered in the center of the lawn, where numerous packages were discovered. Upon being opened, beside a number of other useful gifts, a set of China dishes appeared. The parts had been bought individually, but for some mysterious reason, they all matched perfectly in design.

Refreshments, consisting of pineapple sherbert, were served to the following: Mrs. T. A. Winkleman, aunt of the bride-elect, and her daughter, Miss Ethel May, of Rogers, Ark.; Rev. and Mrs. J. J. GIRLS! BE SURE YOU'RE REALLY IN LOVE, THEN MARRY YOUNG

Five Brides-to-Be Gather Around and Litsen Eagerly to Mother Experience

Alta Heacock, a woman, who has dared to write about the commonplace things of life, and who, according to Record News readers, has really made a remarkable success of it, wrote the editor last week:

"I was called out last week by five girls who are about to wed. They wanted to ask my advice. Should they marry young and let finances take care of themselves, or should they wait until they had gathered more of the worldly goods?"

What do you say?

Alta Heacock says marry young, if you really love. She must believe this, or she couldn't write it as impressively as she does in this story, which we recommend to you.

After you've read it, write your sentiments to the editor—and your opinion of Alta Heacock's article.

Spring unlocks the doors of our hearts and our memories. It is as though a certain magical door swings open then, allows us to pass through and tarry for perhaps an evening, and then closes tightly for another season. There was an evening not long since when this happened to you.

There were 10 of you. Your hostess, a young wife of three years standing, a widow, whose husband had drifted out into the Great Silence after a few years of intense happiness together, five bright, fearless-eyed young women, thoroughly modern and successful in the business and social affairs of your little old home town, your little girl daughter and yourself.

The girls had voted against games for the evening. Your hostess was rocking her little flaxen-haired 2-year-old baby to sleep, while cuddled up between you and the Woman Alone, on a big davenport, your own little girl daughter, with her head in your lap and holding tightly to your hand, had curled herself up for a nap, the after-dinner conversation being entirely beyond her depth. One of the girls had slipped to some cushions on the floor, and the others had curled themselves up with unconscious grace, in the big easy chairs to—just talk.

You knew you were going to have a delightful time, for each of those five girls were engaged to be married to worthy young men, and you knew they were vitally interested in weddings and home-making, two subjects especially dear to every feminine heart.

You had been discussing the immediate marriage of one of the girls when the Woman Alone said softly, with the blur of tears in her voice:

"Today is the anniversary of my marriage."

You reached out and patted her hand with a little murmur of sympathy and, for a long moment, no one spoke.

Then the soon-to-be-bride said:

"If it were all to do over again, would you marry as young as you did with what worldly goods you had then, or would you wait until you could enjoy the material comforts that you have today?"

In a breath you three older women said:

"Don't wait."

And you added, "You'll miss too much, if you do."

Then they asked you, with more married years to your credit than either of the others, to open that magical door that separates and to tell them of your heart's experiences. Very simply, as one always does when they talk of the things nearest and dearest their hearts, you told them.

"The world has a place for marriage. The custom is as old as time itself, and as new as radio and freshly arrived as babies.

"The whole country is full of pleasant little homes with vegetable and flower gardens, little children playing under shade trees, long lines of clean clothes fluttering in the wind, little cars in little garages—all commonplace enough, but all built on the big underlying motives of love.

Girls, Wed At Early Age, Says Woman Writer

"Each of you want to be all that a woman can be in the life of a man loved, wanted, consulted and LAUGH ED at. And don't worry about being discontented afterward. Each of has chosen home-making as our profession out of all the this old world had to offer you're going to be so busy successful in it as you have everything else—so busy ing and loving, that there room for discontent and ment.

"A very vital reason much younger marriages and youth fact that adjusting in a little easier to make room its doors are one-third the minds are like new home, there to grow hard- to the outside. In the passage of concrete, they are no sacrifice to or and more very real hardship time. Thistle of years.

"So now we are looking back the old eyrie that I tell you long I've been married, and you that an endless procession of Sun- dinners with ice cream, garden parties, planning for Christmas, picnic lunch and dinner, going to get to buy shoes and other little things for the baby, and later on for the little school girl, but—all those commonplace things that seem to have no romance but which go to make up life, have all been done TOGETHER.

"As for finance, some way or other it will be taken care of, if you have faith, a saving sense of humor, and if you love enough. And oh, the funny, delicious, absurd things that you are going to enjoy in the meantime."

And you told them of the time that the brand new, shiny cook stove refused to cook for your first company dinner, of the first time you cooked rice and had enough for all the neighborhood, and the time when hot muffins and jam butter were the only things left for a meal when the housekeeping stipend of less than a dollar a day had been exhausted.

"Our first mark of affluence was when, after saving and planning, we had enough money to bu yand pay for a good driving horse and buggy. Somewhere in a little box there is a picture of us, leaning back with looks of the most ungodly vanity, plainly written in our countenances over the new possession.

"Later on custom demanded that we have a car. It was little and new and shiny, with a red dashboard and a brass collar around the radiator (you know the kind), but it was five-passenger, we could take our friends, and it would RUN (most of the time.) And the glorious fun and the trips we had.

"And each new thing that has been added in the way of furniture or other household furnishings has been so wonderfully enjoyed, displayed in different lights and places, and finally, after serious family discussion the BEST abiding place has been finally decided on.

"And the first little home we bought! Pathetically shabby it was frayed and battered, having doors and windows as its only recommendation to modernity, but—there were wonderful trees surrounding it, and a little rundown-at-the-heel garage that would shelter our little car, and it brimmed over with love and happiness and hospitality. And it is doubly precious in memory, for that was the place where the third member of our little family joined us"—and you and the younger mother exchanged an understanding smile and each of you hugged a little sleeping child closer to your hearts.

"Of course there have been trials. There was a fire that remorselessly gobbled up everything in the world we possessed at one time, two serious illnesses on my part, but youth and love weathered the gales and were only made richer by the experience.

"It's true that the home nest has stretched out its walls, and is now the house of our dreams, but it's dearer for all the years that we longed, and worked, and planned together for it.

"And, girls, don't wait. Start right in and follow the road the rest of us have made for you, in our search for the sun and moon and stars. There's always your dreams and the fulfillment of their promise seems ever just around the next corner in life.

"And family life, with all its intimacies, absurdities, and even its love is a matter of long, prayerful, busy, happy years. And when the calm, rose-lit days come, when there is a wing of white at each temple, then you will know fully the joys of those early years together.

"Women are just like that."

(Left to right)—Mrs. Harrison Bachman, Mrs. Ollie T. Ebrhart and Mrs. Owen Wilson Swint. Mrs. Ebrhart and Mrs. Swint are sisters of Mrs. Bachman, from Nashville, Tenn., who have been her popular house guests for the past month. Both women have made frequent visits here and will be remembered by many friends as Misses Kathleen and Laura Carter. Mrs. Swint has returned home and Mrs. Ebrhart and small son, R. T. Jr., are remaining a while longer. Many lovely social affairs have been given in their honor.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

An unusually appreciative audience of about 200 persons listened to the delightful program which formed part of the evening's entertainment at the birthday party given by members of Circle Four of the Floral Heights Missionary society at the lovely home of Mrs. Jeff Waggoner Thursday evening.

Chairs for the guests were placed on the prettily lighted lawn, and the spacious porch attractively decorated with ferns and roses, proved a pretty setting for the program.

Tables for "42" were arranged, and many champion players were in evidence throughout the evening.

Instead of the usual decorations of lighted candles for each year adorning the birthday cake, were smiling little Miss Pennies together with their older sisters, Misses Nickles, Dimes and Dollars, whom they had invited down to this glorious birthday celebration. Pink and white brick ice cream with wafers were served.

Social Gossip Reviewed By Peggy Peidmont In Her Characteristic Way

WHAT a bouquet of rosebuds we saw Friday night, Kitty, all gathered into a posy, whose sweetness permeates every line in this letter. What size girls you ask, and how many of them graduates? Not a one I answer, all of them of the sub-deb age but wearing cunning little nursery costumes and appearing in a quaint Mother Goose cantata at the Floral Heights Methodist church Friday night. The performance given under the direction of Mrs. John C. Kay for the benefit of the "debt smashers" fund was a decided success, the church was crowded at the two performances afternoon and night. Mother Goose and her family and the school teacher and her pupils gave the big show, preceded by readings by Robert Trevathan and Virginia Allen.

Lillian Conn was the teacher, and her dignified demeanor and costume portrayed her part to perfection. Her pupils were Samuel Black, Eugene Hopkins, Mary C. Boone, Francis Gaskin and Ruth Johns. Louise Key was "Mother Goose" and her family consisted of Frank Hunter, W. H. Gaskin, Jr., Bob Martin, William and Katherine Kay, Edwin Conn, Ethelyn Gaskin, Fred Schmann and Martin Johnson.

I BELIEVE, Kitty, that I'm going to indulge myself in this letter to you with some Little Theatre talk. The subject seems timely as we have been hearing good news from one of our Little Theatre folk who has been studying a long time in the city of Chicago. In a letter to her former teacher, Mrs. E. L. Fulton, Elvia Allman, whom we all remember as one of the most talented girls in dramatic art here, was to be presented in the Fine Arts building in recital Saturday evening. We have not had time to hear how she came out, but we know she did well for herself. In this same letter, Elvia said she took the leading role in "Just A Neighbor," recently presented by the Coach House players.

With the closing of many schools, plans which have been put into execution, and two more young Wichita Falls girls will join Elvia in Chicago and take up further their dramatic work. Anna Mae Cato who has been such an efficient assistant to Mrs. Fulton this season, will soon leave for Chicago and will study under Madame Yung, the well known dramatic art teacher. Toodie Darr also plans to turn her face from the sunny south, and take up strenuous work in the dramatic art center.

* * * * *

urn your thoughts, Kitty, from the girls down this way to some of our absentees who have been away at school all the year but who are on the eve of returning home. There is Margaret Duncan, Ethel Moran and Elizabeth Thompson, all at State university winding up their work for the term with proms, home-coming parties and fetes of every description. Adele Marcus, an ex-student is there stopping at the Kappa house.

Mrs. C. W. Snider left Thursday night for Dallas where she met the local girls returning from Ward-Belmont and in the party were Helen Snider, Margaret Fisher, Gertrude Hines and Elvia Killingsworth. Fay Boyd was met in Dallas by her parents, and went to Lancaster, for a short visit and attended the dance at A. & M. She is expected home about Tuesday.

ALONG with the graduates and brides, and of the latter we have had more than our quota, two this week, Ethel Raney who was wed to Lester Randolph and Ethel Owen whose marriage to Britt Cranfill took place yesterday, probably proving the most interesting of the group, because of the popularity of the brides, several large parties and Sunday school class parties have been given.

Eula Fultz entertained the members of the Philathea class of the First Methodist church with Ethel Andree, Mildred Corkhill, Valree Fisher, Anna Byman, Mary Byman, Eula Fultz, Ruby Harrington, Lylan Ward, Birdie Simmons, Octavia Zetzche, Gladys Zetzsche, Eva King, Lura Lyle, Mary Underwood and Miss Carter present. The affair proved very delightful and the ice course served at the close of the evening cleverly carried out the class colors of pale blue and white. Eva King and Lura Lyle will be hostesses to a social evening, June 11.

KITTY, you of course, know that all the world loves a lover, and that in the spring time, men's thoughts turn lightly to love so what could be a more ideal season or what could be more fitting than that the world's ideal lovers should be again reconciled at this season of the year.

A cable from gay Paree says that Paris is stirred as Italy's warrior-poet, Gabriel d'Annunzio and the great actress he jilted, Ida Rubenstein, once called the world's ideal lovers, have again been reconciled and plan to give a love feast.

The artistic and theatrical world of France and Italy are wildly excited over the greatest romantic episode since the ending of the war, says the report. As a result of this new flaming of an old love, Ida has returned post haste from her African tour without having killed a single lion, while Gabriel has abandoned his plan to enter the monastery and is hurrying to Paris to rejoin his love.

"Gabriel will be here probably next week to be present at the first performance of his work, 'Phedro' in which Ida will appear as the central figure.

* * * * *

A REPORTER approaching Mlle. Rubenstein to ask her to confirm the report that she and the Italian poet who had jilted her nine years ago, had made up, said that her face literally lighted up with the divine glow of love and that the divine dancer answered: "The scars on my years are healed, I am a new woman and I can hardly believe that this bliss has descended upon me."

The information goes on to say that d'Annunzio's picture was prominently displayed everywhere in her studio in the Latin quarter and that the altar that she reared to her lost love had disappeared.

Rubenstein has prepared a great "love feast" to take place on the first eve of her appearance as d'Annunzio's heroine. To this feast will be invited only "spiritual souls who understand and appreciate the great passion."

The love course of the actress and the poet has been an unusually troubled one. Late last year Ida came, an humble and hungry heart crying out for love, to the villa of Gabriel on Lake Garda, but was refused admittance by the poet. Thereupon, according to rumor, Ida announced that she would seek solace in the wilderness and fitted out an expedition to kill lions in Africa. At the same time d'Annunzio announced that he would join the Trappist Monks in the monastery in the Alps.

* * * * *

NOW all has changed. Since the reconciliation which some say came by letter, and other by a dream of the poet, the great Italian dramatist has thrown himself into his work with terrific speed, turning out many novels, plays and articles and appearing to the public gaze again after his self-inflicted solitude.

To a friend, the report says that d'Annunzio said recently: "You see before you a man remade. D'Annunzio returns to the world."

And as usual, Kitty, Paris and Italy and the world must thank a woman for the renaissance of genius.

I have talked to you at length, dear friend, about graduates, brides and love, and when they all get thru with me, you may expect a letter weekly, Kitty. If you don't hear, just send a nosegay with the brief note—"Thinking you're a dead one, will some one please put this on the desk or door step of

PEGGY PIEDMONT."

Heart and Home Problems Solved By Mrs. Thompsun

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: We are two high school girls, both 20 years old. We have been keeping steady company with two traveling men for about a year. After going with them a few times we fell very deeply in love with these young men and had set the date for a double wedding to which our parents had given consent. But now several old gossips have told our parents there was a reason for our plans of hasty marriage, which is certainly untrue. But our parents listened with believing ears. Both our men friends and we girls have tried to make them see things differently, but instead of listening they have made us break our engagement and our hearts are broken as we had our wedding clothes all made and had planned on living together.

We love these men so much we cannot give them up. They have told us many times they would never marry unless they married us. Please advise us what to do to make our parents see differently, as there is nothing to this tale which has been started.

NO RELATION TWINS.

There was a time when traveling men were regarded with suspicion because their actions were open to inspection only part of the time. The man would go from city to city as a stranger and he could do almost as he pleased without having it become known. Of course, a traveling man still has the same opportunities, but people are beginning to recognize the fact that good men as well as bad are on the road.

It is only natural that your parents should be apprehensive about your marrying traveling men. Probably the only thing that would convince them of the worth of the men you love is to postpone the time you are to marry and in the meantime give your parents more of an opportunity to become acquainted with your fiances. If you wait a year and the men are still faithful to you, it is probable that they sincerely love you.

Don't be foolish in this matter. If the men fascinate you, but you know them to be lacking in good moral standards, give them up, because they will never bring you happiness.

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: I am a married lady 22 years old and have been married several years. My husband travels and is gone two and three months at a time.

There is a young fellow who asks me to go riding with him. Do you think it is all right for me to go with him as long as he does not make love to me? I like to go with him because he is very nice and I enjoy his company so much.

MRS. M. W. Y.

Naturally you are lonely since your husband is gone so much of the time. It would not be right, however, for you to go riding with the other young man. Although it seems perfectly safe in the beginning, you would be playing with fire and sooner or later some one would get burned and perhaps both of you. Go places with married couples as much as you like, but do not accept invitations from single men.

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: We are two girl chums and are very good-looking. We are in love with two boys about our age, 17 and 18. We very seldom see these boys and we would like to have their company. Please advise us what to do?

VIRGINIA AND BETTY.

There is nothing for you to do, because it is not a girl's place to pursue boys. If they are interested in you they will seek your company.

SPORTS—RIDING, MOTORING, BRIDGE

Generally speaking this is a busy, workaday world but it has its days of play and the vacation season is at hand. Whether it be spent at home or at the seashore or mountains it is sure to be enjoyable if one rides, motors, or enjoys games of bridge on wide cool verandahs. These three costumes are very smart and up-to-the-minute for these particular sports. Two are Goiflex models. The riding habit at the left is made of Donchester tweed and is suitable for cross country riding. It would be very effective in either brown or gray. At the right is a tailored motor coat of plaid velour. The sleeves are wide and loose and the cuffs are finished with a binding of material darker than the coat. The collar and edges of the front are also bound and it is fastened with a single large bone button. It may be worn over the riding suit if one motors to and from the stables or may be used as an extra wrap over the tailored suit when driving.

The gown in the center is suitable for any formal afternoon affair. It is made of cool gray Suzanna crepe, a material which is very popular this season. The skirt is draped and held in place with a woven girdle which suggests that the Egyptian influence is still felt. The blouse is long and sleeveless. A large picture hat may be worn with it at the more formal affairs.

CIVIC LEAGUE TO MEET FRIDAY

The Highland Heights Civic league will meet at the home of Mrs. Lee Downs, 2206 Grant Friday afternoon. A parliamentary drill will be held at 2 o'clock.

CLASBY GLEANERS HOLD SOCIAL SESSION

The last social session of the Clasby Gleaner class of the First Baptist church of the summer season was held at the church Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Sloan, the class president presided at a short business meeting after which an interesting program pu Night" was enjoyed.

Mrs. A. B. McIver read the Scripture on events in the night during the life of Christ and His disciples. Mrs. Ada Moore gave a very impressive talk on meditation and communion with God in the night. Two beautiful solos, "Silent Night, Holy Night," and "No Light There" were sung by Mrs. Jerry Schaefer with Mrs. S. J. Ashmore at the piano.

Little Miss Vanita McIver gave a reading "No Night in Heaven" which was very much enjoyed.

After the program, the class repaired to the class room which had been beautifully decorated with greenery and cut flowers. A number of canary birds lent their beauty and song to the occasion.

A contest on "Birds" was enjoyed and was followed with a "Bird" game led by Mrs. W. E. Priddy.

The meeting closed by singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

The following members were present: Mesdames J. J. Lory, W. B. Beach, H. G. Karrenbrock, Mary V. Gibson, Ada Moore, W. E. Priddy, J. M. Wilhite, R. W. Morgan, W. M. Mackechney, E. L. Ramey, A. B. McIver, J. D. Sloan, H. F. Williams, A. E. Jones, J. T. Brooks, W. R. Bourland, M. W. McGinnis, and little Misses Dones Carter, Peggy Miller and Vanita McIver.

FANNIN MOTHER'S CLUB MEETS

Members of the Fannin School Mother's club met at the school Thursday afternoon in an enjoyable session. Mrs. Rowsey in a few well chosen words thanked the principal of the school, S. L. Butler, for his co-operation with the club in their work and especially for his work in connection with the establishment of the cafeteria.

Refreshments were served during a social half hour to Mr. and Mrs. Butler, Mesdames Lamance, Martin, Bowman, Marsh, Rowsey, Cowart and Eads.

MANMADE WORLD

To those who either rejoice or lament—as the case may be—over the supposed fact that this is the woman's age, that the male has been entirely superseded, we commend a study of the following figures given out by an eastern sociologist that bear on this debatable subject:

Of the thousands upon thousands of sermons preached in this country last Sunday women preached not more than 170.

Of the pleas made in all the courts in the United States only one in every 190 is made by a woman.

Of all the newspaper editorials not more than one in 30 are written by a woman.

It is estimated that 95 per cent of the successful inventions and of "opinion making ideas" still emanate from masculine minds.

So, according to Mrs. Gilman, the well known educator, we continue to live in a man-made world.

On the other hand, 90 per cent of the education of our children is in feminine care and in the whole country 11 million women are earning their living independent of masculine support.

Man still appears to be the chief factor in molding public sentiment. Perhaps, however, this is but another case where the hands are the hands of Esau, but the voice is the voice of Jacob.—From the Los Angeles Times.

SECURITY BENEFIT ASSOCIATION PICNIC

About 30 members of the Security Benefit association Wichita Council No. 2261 held an enjoyable picnic in Scotland Park Thursday evening under the supervision of Mrs. Hattie Cates.

The affair was planned some time ago to take place on the date mentioned, the members meeting at the Labor Temple at 6:30 o'clock where cars were provided them to the park.

An old fashioned basket lunch was served.

Mrs. Cates, who is the assistant district manager for the association is here now in behalf of the local council and much credit is due her for the work which has been accomplished.

On last meeting night a class of eleven were received into membership and it was planned to make these social meetings semi-monthly affairs.

The next one to be Tuesday evening June 7 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Rowe, 109 Sixth street.

Besides a program, refreshments will be served. Members and their friends are invited to attend.

Society Personals

Mrs. E. Leverich is leaving to spend the summer in Chicago and Pennsylvania. Her small daughter, Irene, will accompany her.

Mrs. Saul Lebenson and her daughters, Nathalie and Helen Sylvia, are leaving for New York city, where they will spend the month of June. Nathalie will then enter a summer camp in Maine for the remainder of the season, while Mrs. Lebenson and Helen Sylvia will visit other points in the East.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Dolman are leaving overland for Long Beach, Cal., where they will make their home.

TOOLS AND WEAPONS

Handling a tennis racket, a fencing foil, a pair of boxing gloves, attracts more social consideration than throwing a weaver's shuttle pressing a graving tool or swinging a hammer.

The outlines of these gestures however, are not very different, but the quality of appreciation bestowed on each is wide apart, indeed, the less useful being the more honored.

There are few championships in the world for the handling of a tool. Universal competition is organized in the skilled use of death dealing weapons, for pugilism, for wrestling, for the sword; in short, for all forms of combativeness.

MEMORIAL DAY SERVICES HELD AT CHILLICOTHE

Special Dispatch to Record News

CHILLICOTHE, June 2.—Memorial Day was observed in a very impressive manner at the Baptist church Sunday morning.

The church was decorated in pot plants and the national colors.

Seats reserved for the American legion, auxiliary and all ex-service men were marked with small flags.

At the close of an anthem rendered by the choir the legion and members of the auxiliary headed by the president, Mrs. Alleene Berry and Punch Stuckey made their entrance to the strains of the national anthem.

The male quartette composed of Messrs. McKinnon, Rowe, Barnes and McDonald rendered a very appropriate number. Rev. C. E. Lancaster, pastor and ex-service man, delivered a tribute to "Our Soldier Dead."

It was a beautiful tribute full of love and appreciation for those who gave their lives.

At the close of this splendid address the audience engaged in 30 seconds of silent prayer in memory of the departed soldiers, and the choir closed the service by softly singing "Gathering Home."

The crowd, joined by other churches, went immediately to the cemetery, where wreaths were placed on the graves of every soldier by members of the legion and auxiliary.

USEFUL SPARROWS

A world famous hotel makes a feature of reed birds on toast at $3.50 a portion on its menu. A noted ornithologist and member of the Audobon society said recently that he had sold 150 sparrow traps to this hotel, and that these traps are in constant use. Make what deduction you will.

Our finding is that the hotel in question is doing a great work. If it is employing 150 sparrow traps it is cutting down the number of the obnoxious and destructive vermin known as the English sparrow at an encouraging rate. If it is finding this activity profitable, we, personally, have no complaint to make about it. Its epicurean customers insist that the reed birds are delicious, and worth the money.

With no more insinuation than is necessary to make the point, we suggest the trapping of sparrows as a pleasant and profitable sport for both city and rural residents. Alive, the birds are a liability. Dead, they may become an asset. Alive, they drive away other birds which are invaluable for their constant war upon insect pests, for their songs and beauty. They themselves have no beauty, no song and no usefulness. Dead, they cease to occupy space which should be occupied, by beautiful insectivorous songbirds, and may ocupy space on toast or in a casserole.—From the Chicago Tribune.

OUR ORIGINS

Selden Peabody Delany in the North American Review.

James Russell Lowell was once asked by Guizot, the brilliant French historian, how long he thought the American republic was likely to endure. Lowell replied: "So long as the ideals of its founders continue to be dominant." He went on to explain that by their ideals he meant also the traditions of their race in government and morals.

What were the distinctive ideas of the founders of this republic, the traditions of their race in government and morals We can best answer that question by a study of origins. Four separate strains were clearly discernible among the colonists; the Puritan, the Continental Protestant, the Anglican and the Roman Catholic. There was also a free thinking element represented by such men as Thomas Paine, but this was a negligible factor in the founding and early development of the republic Puritans, Protestants, Anglicans and Roman Catholics were at that time, however, in substantial accord in their ideals of government and morals. They brought with them to America the fundamental principles of the civilized tradition of Christendom. They believed firmly in necessity of religion, the right of private property, the indissolubility of marriage. They taught their children to respect the authority of their parents. They maintained a fervent love of their country, which to them was synonymous with the love of freedom. Their steadfast devotion to law and order was never considered inconsistent with a jealous regard for popular rights and an ineradicable belief in democracy. They looked upon popular education as almost a panacea for every social and political ill. In the administration of the law they endeavored always to safeguard the rights of every individual.

PROPER HOUSING

Cement, lumber, and the necessary sorts of steel are being produced as never before. There are not enough men to work on all these new buildings, and not enough cars available to handle the freight. The building trade, one of our main lines, is so busy that Secretary Hoover has rightly urged the federal government to lay off on its construction program until the situation is eased. Uncle Sam can come in later if there is any danger of depression. With house production at full tide, rents are not getting lower. New housing will cost $9 per month per room, and more, around our big cities. People don't care about the old shacks, and that is a good sign; but why do the new houses cost so much? England is timid about government housing and lest it merely force up the prices of building materials. Rents do not seem to learn a thing from the low prices of farm products and automobiles.

With all our resources and our skill, we ought to be able to do better than that for the folks who need homes. Better business is good, more houses are good; but these two benefits will not work their full blessings for us until the costs and rents involved are lower in comparison with other things. Housing is still a challenge to our powers, not a triumph for the common welfare.—Collier's.

Devout Seminole Translates Bible Into Creek After Arduous Study

Few people know that almost the complete Bible has been translated into the Creek and Muskogee language and that in the church services held by the Seminoles and Creeks (which are usually begun at midnight and continued until 5 o'clock in the morning) a Bible is used written in their own language.

We picked up one the other day and looking through it endeavored to discover who the translator of the different books was. But the book gave no information. It showed to be printed by Robinson and Lockridge of New York City, but the compiler or the translator was not mentioned. So we went among the older Indians of the Seminoles to discover who compiled and translated the books of the Bible into the Creek, Muskogee and Seminole languages.

Authority Is Sought.

Old Simon Brown, a full-blooded Seminole, more than 87 years old, is recognized as high authority on the Bible, and while he does not preach but seldom, yet he is often called into the different meetings of the Seminoles to explain and discourse upon the different books of the Bible. He speaks no English, but is fluent in his own tongue. So we gathered the following from old Simon:

Two of the books of the New Testament were partly transated prior to the civil war, the books of Matthew and John. Who did this work has long been forgotten. After the civil war David Winslett, who was a very devout man, a full-blood Creek Indian started a movement to establish a national school. He worked energetically upon this project for a number of years, and finally the Creek council or law making body, passed a tribal law establishing a school at Tallehassee for instruction in Eglish and Creek.

He Studied Hard.

David Winslett was the first person to enroll in the new school upon its establishment. Prior to the time of his entering the school he had no education whatever, but he bent himself to his labors, always with the view in mind of translating the Bible to the Muskogee tongue. In the passing of the years he acquired an excellent education, and then took up the task of translation.

Of the Old Bible he only translated two books, the book of Genesis and the book of Psalms. But the New Testament he translated in full. Old Simon knew David well, talked with him at times while he was translating the Bible, and through his friendship acquired much of the knowledge of the Bible which he now has and which he is able to pass on to his people.

He says that one time upon visiting his friend Davis Winslett, he found him hard at work and some time elapsed before he was even noticed by the translator. All the time he sat patiently, without noise, awaiting the period when Winslett would become aware of his presence. Finally David turned to him and bruskly asked him to procure food for him, as he had had nothing to eat for sevral days because of the necessity of pursuing his translation.

How He Worked.

Simon immediately procured food and placed the same before David, who ate sparingly of it and set the balance of the food aside, presumably for some future meal. He then immediately set to work again and no further attention was paid to Simon Brown, who soon departed. Many years were occupied in the completion of the translation. Simon stated that more than 12 different revisions were made by Winslett, before he was satisfied in a degree, and that he was still engaged in the work when he died.

But the work of Winslett has been accepted, and while he never lived to see his translation published, yet his twelfth revision was on the press at the time of his death. Such is the story told by Old Simon, and many and quaint are the little incidents he gives in connection with this most important work for the Muskogees and Seminoles.

One Great Preacher.

Simon stated that of all the Indian preachers he had ever heard deliver their sermons, Sam Checotah was by far the best. Checotah was a Methodist, and at one time was the principal chief of the Creeks. Much advancement was made under this good man, and many tales are told of his endeavor to adopt the government system of the whites for the Creeks. In this he was opposed by Espiechee, a recalcitrant chief of the western portion of the Creek nation, and a great battle was fought between the opposing forces at Flatrock, near Okemah, in Okfuskee county, Okla. This battle was about a standoff, and soon after the government took charge and stopped what is now known as the "Green Peach" war of the Creeks.

Simon Brown stated that Thomas Purman was another powerful preacher of the early days and next in brilliance to Checotah. Purman was a Presbyterian. Simon stated that when Purman was to deliver a sermon, Indians from hundreds of miles away attended.

Simon Is Thrifty.

Old Simon Brown is an unusual Seminole. While he is past 86 years of age, he is still hale and hearty. All his life he has shown a degree of financial genius that many white men of excellent training would envy. During his recent years he has been guardian for many of the younger Indians of his vicinity, and in each and every case, at maturity, Simon turned over money and all the property that had come into his hands. Simon states that only in rare instances, and that where an outstanding small interest of some nature belonged to his ward did he make a guardian's sale.

The same conservative methods marked the conduct of his own financial affairs, and today he is one of the really wealthy Indians of the Seminole nation. An incident occurred recently which showed the character of the man. During the hard years of 1920 and 1921 some of the business men of Wewoka owed Simon much money and he came to them for payment. They explained to him that they had been unable to collect, and were therefore unable to pay.

The Golden Rule.

He sat in silence a long time, and then nodded his head, saying: "All right; if I press you for payment, you will press my people, and it will be bitter hard for them, so I will extend your notes until the times grow better." It seems that Simon had learned to a great extent the "Golden Rule."

Recently his house burned and he lost all his papers, many of his notes, all of his clothing, and his false teeth. The business men of Wewoka, hearing of this, made up a purse and had a set of teeth made for the old man. He was highly delighted with this, and said he was glad, not for the money, but because his white friends thought of him in the time of his trouble.

Simon is but one left of many of his kind who have passed on to their reward. A man of sterling principles, Simon will soon be called on to the resting place of his fathers. It is too bad that many of his excellent qualities can not be inherited by some of the younger generation who spend their time drinking "choc" and learning the grafting ways of the white man.

AMERICANS ARE RADICALS

Every American is by nature a radical and a revolutionist. From our earliest childhood we breathe in an atmosphere of radicalism. Were it not for the widespread use of nursing bottles, we might almost be said to drink it in with out mother's milk. . . . We Americans are instinctively inclined to revolt against authority, whether imposed upon us in the sphere of religion or politics or social life. We prefer to be our own guides and blaze out our own trail through the forests of philosophical doubt. we have scant reverence for ancient traditions, for we accept it as an axiom that the new is better than the old.—Selden Peabody Delany, in the North American Review.

'BACKBONE' TO BE SEEN HERE

Strand Will Show Picture Of Thrills Commencing Thursday

Presentation of "Backbone," the Distinctive Pictures special feature which is announced for the Strand theatre, commencing Thursday, is an event of triple significance. It is the first of the 1923 program of 12 big pictures to be made by the Distinctive Corporation, now famous for the merit of its output; it marks the screen debut of Alfred Lunt, celebrated young actor of the legitimate stage; and it is the first of the Distinctive product to be distributed by the Goldwyn Corporation by the terms of a new arrangement between these two dominant companies.

"Backbone" is the type of picture for which there is an ever-growing demand—straight from the shoulder drama, unspoiled by false touches, powerful in story, intelligently directed and entertaining throughout. It is a fine vehicle for the screen debut of Lunt, who made himself famous overnight for his part in the Booth Tarkington comedy, "Clarence," and who combines ability to act with a tremendous amount of good looks—the kind of good looks that'll make the women want to come back and see him again.

In addition to Lunt, the picture has as the feminine lead the dainty and beautiful Edith Roberts, who has been building up a retinue of admirers acros the continent since she was 13 years old. The cast supporting these two stars is considered one of the most distinctive ever asembled for a single picture, and includes such well-known actors and screen favorites as William B. Mack, Frank Evans, George MacQuarrie, Marion Abbott, James D. Doyle, Charles Fang, L. E. LaCroix, Hugh Huntley and J. W. Johnson.

The story deals with the fulfillment in the twentieth century of the love of two young people woh lived generations ago in olden France. In proving that romance never dies, Clarence Budington Kelland, who wrote the romance originally for the Saturday Evening Post, has evolved an absorbing tale in which all the elements of mystery, criminal cunning and honest "backbone" come into conflict.

Andre de Mersay and his granddaughter live in regal splendor in the little lumbering town of St. Croix, Maine. They are the last of a long line of de Mersays. The first of their family to come to America was a youth who had been banished from France, after his sweetheart had been stolen and forced into marriage with the minister of state. In parting, the two young people vowed that such a sacrifice as theirs was not in vain—that some day their love would be fulfilled.

Yvonne de Mersay cherished the memory of this old love affair. Upon her return from a visit to France she finds that her grandfather has been taken mysteriously ill and is being holden from her by the old man's busines manager and his co-conspirator, Doc Roper, a horse doctor. John Thorne, a stranger, arrives in St. Croix and announces he must see old de Mersay at all costs. In an interview with Yvonne, Thorne lets it be known that he has some knowledge of the old de Mersay love affair, but he will not explain how much he knows, how he came by the knowledge or why he is seeking de Mersay. His presence inystifies both Yvonne and the conspirators, who are trying to get de Mersay's property into their hands.

Yvonne is strangely attracted to Thorne, and is about to seek his assistance in gaining access to her grandfather's sick room when she learns that he, too, is seemingly an enemy. Then she sets about fighting everybody around her. She breaks into her grandfather's room—to find it empty. How she is nearly killed for her daring, how Thorne saves her and who he proves to be are revealed in a series of swift-moving, breathless episodes.

Edward Soloman directed the taking of "Backbone," on which the Distinctive Pictures Corporation spared no expense. Special dancing masters were engaged to stage the ballroom scene in ancient France, and costumes of the period were made from designs by Adrian, the 19-year-old genius who has made a name for himself in the theatrical world.

HIERS COMING IN BIG COMEDY

Empress Books "Sixty Cents An Hour" For This Week

The largest insurance ever taken out on a Ford automobile, it is said, was a policy for $10,000 taken out on one of the machines at the Paramount West Coast studio for use in scenes of "Sixty Cents An Hour," a Paramount picture starring Walter Heirs with Jacqueline Logan featured in his suppprt which will be shown at the Empress Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Appearing early in the picture, the flivver is carried through to the last scenes, and pictured in several close shots.

Because it would be hard to duplicate the flivver, in case it was stolen or destroyed and because it had been registered in so many scenes and would have to be duplicated in such event, Director Joseph Henaberry realized that it was of utmost importance that it be insured "to the limit."

The estimated value of the Ford, which is old and has seen hard use, is about $250, just $9,750 less than the insurance carried.

The cast chosen for "Sixty Cents An Hour" is exceptionally strong. Jacqueline Logan, who so charmingly portrayed the leading feminine role in Heirs' first picture, "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," is featured as leading woman. Ricardo Cortez, recently discovered while dancing at Coconut Grove, will play the heavy role, his first big part under his new contract with Paramount.

Others in the cast are Charles Ogle, Lucille Ward, Robert Dudley, Guy Oliver, Clarence Burton and Charles Tate.

"Driven" Called Hit of Decade By Movie Critics

Accorded unstinted praise by cinema critics noted for their failure to enthuse greatly over most feature productions, "Driven" has just justified to the fullest measure the faith that Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures corporation had in it when he broke a precedent of six years' standing and purchased a production made outside of Universal City.

It is an epic of life in the Blue Ridge mountains, a cross-section of a phase of American life that one knows exists, but scarcely can imagine. It is the story of a mother who forgets everything, even family and tribal loyalty, and sells out her husband and three sons to insure happiness for the one real human being in the brood—a timid, shy lad, who longs for the better things of life and who, by some freak of fate, was born into this strange family.

A magnificent cast was gathered by Director Brabin. There is Burr McIntosh, one of the most finished and popular actors on either stage or screen, doing excellent work as the brutal father; Emily Fitzroy, a noted figure on stage and screen in both America and England, and playing with consummate artistry the part of the Spartan mother; Elinor Fair, young and beautiful, as the sweetheart of timid Tommy, and Charles Emmett Mack, the young Griffith find, and loaned for this production by his distinguished mentor, as "Tommy."

Then there are such other well-known players as Ernest Chandler, George Bancroft and Leslie Stowe. The picture is beautiful from a photographic standpoint, having been "shot" in the exact locale of the story—the heart of the Blue Ridge mountains.

"Driven" opens an engagement at the Empress theatre soon. Manager Ford is confident that it will meet with the same success here as it has in other cities where it has been shown.

"Manslaughter" Favorite Picture Of Wichita Falls, So Say Fans

The verdict is "Manslaughter."

Wichita fans seem to like real, red-blooded stories better than any other kind, according to the results of the questionnaire printed in last Sunday's Record News. Harold Lloyd's "Safety Last," along with human appeal stories like Jackie Coogan's "Daddies," Wesley Barry's "School Days," Laurette Taylor's "Peg o' My Heart" and Charles Ray's "Tailor Made Man," followed. But movie-goers like action, romance, dramas of love—and suffering, best of all. "Robin Hood" and "When Knighthood Was in Flower" stood high in favor, and some one who seemed fond of costume productions scribbled "The Three Musketeers" on the margin.

"Blood and Sand," "The Sheik," "Nice People," "Prodigal Daughters," "Clarence" and "One Exciting Night" seemed the choice of many of the flappers, while men love "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The Hottentot," Betty Compson's "To Have and to Hold," "Back Home Broke," and one ardent admirer of Connie Talmadge asked why "East is West" wasn't on the list.

The "Mrs." who sent in lists liked Jackie and Freckles, Charlie Ray, the Gish Girls, Mary Pickford and Thomas Meighan almost unanimously, as did the juveniles. Three small boys who sent their list in the same envelope expressed their profoundest admiration for Doug and Tom Mix.

Get last Sunday's paper and see how this stacks up with what you like in films. The movies influence our lives far more than we dream. More than one girl who has never been outside of the Burk oil fields could don a silver decollette and ostrich plumes and attend a formal ball with all the grace of a princess, because she has "been there" so many times in the movies. We see beauty, culture, refinement, greed, crime, squalor, hate, suffering, passionate wild love, tender true, unselfish love, poverty with the happiness it holds for those who are brave and wise enough to find it, riches with the discontent they bring to a money-mad world, and we are left to draw our own scale of values.

One evening we spend in Persia with romance, laughter, love and beauty. The next we are braving storms, starvation, pitiless cold, peril and mental torture, in the heart of Alaska. Then we swallow a lump as we watch two big tears tremble and fall slowly down Jackie's cheeks as he sits by an ash can in an alley in New York. We sit in the blazing sun in the door of a hut in the jungles of Africa, then in the misty moonlight, down the narrow Paris street clangs on stone; our coach dashes past the Tuileres and draws up to the Tavern, and we alight in our tri-colored cocked hat and high boots and roar for a night's lodging and a flagon of red wine.

So you see, we are extremely traveled and very well read for busy every-day folk—and occasionally we go to the movies!

LON CHANEY COMES TO GEM MONDAY IN BIG SEA STORY

Lon Chaney has done as much as six ordinary persons to keep barbers in California busy during the last few months. In every picture in which this famous character actor has played during that time it has been necessary for him to appear with his hair cropped close.

When Mr. Chaney was engaged to portray the role of captain of the "Carolyn Frances," in the Metro screen version of Ben Ames Williams' great sea story, "All the Brothers Were Valiant," he thought that at last he had found a picture in which he could let his shorn locks sprout to a respectable length.

Mr. Chaney was discussing the merits of the play with Irvin V. Willat, who directed it. The picture will be at the Gem theatre Monday.

"I think it will be a good idea for you to keep your hair clipped short," said Mr. Willat. "You're a rather sinister character throughout the largest part of the picture and I think your clipped head adds to the effect. It offers a contrast with the hero. Villains sometimes have a lot of hair—usually on the upper lip."

So every few days Mr. Chaney visited a barber and had a pair of clippers run up and down the sides and across the top of his head.

"I could tell by the look on people's faces when I entered a barber shop," he said, "that they thought I must be a little bit queer, me with my hair scarcely three-eighths of an inch long, asking for a hair cut. I call it the 'Penitentiary trim.'"

This photoplay is an Irvin V. Willat production.

In addition to Mr. Chaney, the cast includes Billie Dove, Malcolm McGregor, Robert McKim, William Mong, Curt Rehfeld and others. Julian Josephson prepared the senario. Robert Kurrle did the photography.

Constance Binney Stars At Strand In "A Bill of Divorcement" Monday

Should a young woman be bound for life to a husband who has been pronounced hopelessly insane? British law refuses, as for centuries past to recognize incurable insanity as a basis for divorce, but during the recent electoral campaign a modification of the statute was advocated throughout. This all-important question is the basis also of the story, "A Bill of Divorcement," which, as a stage play, ran for a year in New York and is now packing houses in Chicago, and of the Associated Exhibitors feature of the same name starring Constance Binney, to be seen at the Strand theatre Monday.

Three years ago London was startled by the news that Lieutenant-Colonel Norman Cecil Rutherford, D. S. O., had gone to the home of a brother officer, Major Miles Careston Seton, and shot him dead. Colonel Rutherford was adjudged criminally insane and sent to an asylum for life. The efforts since made by Mrs. Rutherford to free herself constitute a record that has stirred England deeply. The courts, however, denied her application for a divorce and finally, only a few weeks ago, the House of Lords upheld their findings. Lord Birkenhead uttered the following moving opinion:

"It is an unfortunate situation that the plaintiff should be tied for life to a dangerous, violent homicidal lunatic. To some this may appear a harsh and inhuman result, but such my lords, is the law of England."

Whereupon Mrs. Rutherford appealed to the reason of her countrymen, and, more especially, her countrywomen. Just how much was accomplished in the campaign will not be known until the proposed amendment comes before Parliament for action, but all reports indicate that the entire British community was so moved that relief legislation cannot long be delayed.

And such a case is not peculiar to England, for the divorce laws of the United States, differing as they do in every state, do not universally grant divorces in the case of insanity. Thousands of men and women are bound by a cruel and unsympathetic law to life partners incarcerated in asylums!

In "A Bill of Divorcement" almost the same situation as that confronting Mrs. Rutherford is presented, though in the story the author has shown how a law granting the release of such a woman so bound had already been enacted. No less interesting and vital are other questions that are posed under these conditions: Should the wife, who after many years, has secured a law granting the release of divorce and become engaged to a man she has learned to love sincerely, abandon her plans for marriage if the husband, who has been pronounced incurable, returns on the eve of the wedding day, apparently cured? Should the young daughter of this household sacrifice her own happiness that society may be protected against the strain of insanity, that her mother may find contentment at last, and that her returned father may have companionship?

The always attractive Constance Binney, as the daughter, answers one of these questions in "A Bill of Divorcement," the screen version of which follows the stage story by Clemence Dane so closely that the dramatic qualities of the famous play are said to have been heightened rather than weakened in transference to the film. Fay Compton, renowned for her beauty and talent, plays the part of the mother, and the remainder of the cast in the Denison Clift Art Production is declared to be adequate.

Women Live For Love; Men Kill For Love—All in Olympic's Big Picture, "Where Pavement Ends"

Where the pavement ends, there romance begins. There is no pavement in Wallou—and there is much romance—romance which develops conflicts, love which is fraught with danger. This is the kind of romance bred beneath the wanton sun of the South Seas, where the fullness of nature engenders passionate love and passionate hate. Here men—and women—are elemental. Here women live for love and men kill for love.

Love came to the lonely daughter of a missionary. It was love that transcended all the conventions of her puritanical training—a clandestine love, breathing the air of secret places on the clean, white beach under the soft moon of the Southern seas. And every meeting was in the shadow of danger, for herself and for her lover. If her father knew that her heart belonged to an island chieftain! If Gregson, the trader, knew! Gregson had sworn he would have her for his own, and if he realized Matauri's love, it would mean death!

Here is romance—romance and conflict—romance that is vital.

And Rex Ingram has developed to the fullest every phase of this thrilling story, just as would be expected of this master director. With "Where the Pavement Ends," opening at the Olympic Monday for four days, he has added another extraordinary picture to that long list of outstanding films which includes "The Four Horsemen," "The Conquering Power," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Trifling Women." The new photoplay is perfect in detail, and it has that distinction and artistic finesse which are Mr. Ingram's peculiar qualifications for the directors' Hall of Fame.

John Russell, author of the story, expressed himself as truly amazed at the way Mr. Ingram had transferred the elusive South Sea atmosphere to the screen, and the way in which the story characters had been made to live. Mr. Russell himself acted in an advisory capacity during the filming in Florida. He spent some time in the tropical islands, and he was able to give valuable advice on details of customs and physical characteristics.

Mr. Russell said that Ramon Novarro so well represented his young South Seas chief that hereafter when he thinks of Motauri it will be in terms of Navorro. Mr. Novarro's superb characterization will add much to his growing popularity as one of the most handsome and talented young actors on the screen. He has already won fame for his excellent work in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Trifling Women." And many a feminine heart will flutter anew when he appears in this new picture. He is the symbol of romance.

Male hearts, too, will flutter when beautiful Alice Terry appears framed in those glorious South Sea settings. Miss Terry's popularity, which has been growing steadily since her appearance in "The Four Horsemen," will certainly reach tremendous proportions when movie-goers have a chance to see her in this new picture. She is an actress of rare charm, beauty and magnetism, and she has histrionic ability of the highest order.

The scenes in the picture are magnificently beautiful. The expert camera work, the wild tropical beauty takes you into far-away places of leisure and romance. And here is the perfect story of romance in the perfect setting—a story of a man who knows South Sea life. John Russell's book, "Where the Pavement Ends," is a group of "marvelous tales, full of life in the raw, full of primitive emotions and melodrama, of vigorous action, of adventure and daring, and love—and living"—so thinks Harry Hansen, critic of the Chicago Daily News. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says it is "the best book of short tales by any debutant since Kipling's 'Plain Tales.'"

"Grub Stake," Alaska Melodrama, Plays At Empress Late in Week

Nell Shipman's new picture, in which she appears in the Empress theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday is called "The Grub-Stake" and was written by the versatile star. The title is an attractive one although not everyone knows its literal meaning. Webster's dictionary gives grub-stake as United States slang and it means "to supply a prospector with an outfit on condition of sharing in his finding, and the outfit and supplies so provided."

Grubstake! What a world of meaning in the term! To thousands of men it has speeled death; to other thousands a hazardous living, and to fortune's favored few, untold wealth.

There are many rich men in this country who made their fortunes by grub-staking some poor prospector, starting him out into the wilderness alone to wrest from Mother Earth the secret of her hidden treasure. Sometimes the prospector struck it rich and made himself and his partner wealthy. Sometimes he did not come back, and a lonely grave or some whitening bones told their tale. Sometimes he returned without gold, but hopeful; the lure of the dim trail, the certainty of the pot of gold at the rainbow's end still calling him on in the face of danger, privation and disappointment.

"Grub-stake me, partner, and I'll bring home the bacon!" "Grub-stake me, mister; I know where it is, and I'll make you rich!" So the cry has come echoing down from the early gold camps, from the California of '49, from the Northwest and Southwest, wherever gold was to be found, and there were men to search for it.

Gaining their stake, perhaps, and hurriedly collecting an outfit, rushing out into the wilderness to prospect or joining a frantic race to the first at some new "strike," and then—success or failure. An endless fight against the earth they had come to rob; death in a hundred horrible forms or stark madness just as fortune is within his grasp. Or a blind failure made a return to Dawson to renew the cry, "Grub-stake me, partner!"

Such a man is old Malamute Mike, a character drawn from real life by wave rolling, always banner, al-Nell Shipman in the new picture, always just too late, he gets his stake but fails to find the fortune. But Faith, the girl in the story, tricked by the man who promised to "grub-stake" her, boldly takes her grub-stake from this man who would not "play partners, fair and square" with a woman, battles with the wilderness and makes her strike of gold and love. The telling provides a big human story full of incident and excitement.

Crude or Refined?

As a user of natural gas, you want a clean product. You cannot use gas mixed with water or other liquids.

Gas coming out of the earth is mixed with other vapors. In days gone by these condensed in the pipe lines and formed a liquid that obstructed the lines and had to be drained out at frequent intervals.

Destructive and Expensive

This liquid contained a considerable amount of gasoline, and it destroyed the rubber gaskets in pipe lines, adding greatly to the loss by leakage, increasing the expenses of operation and decreasing the quality of service.

But with the recent great demand, it has been possible to save this gasoline instead of wasting it. Now it and other liquids are taken from the gas before gas is delivered to you.

The result is a cleaner gas, with no appreciable loss of heating power, that does not gum up the burners and clog the pipes.

TUT YOUNG; LOOK AT THIS

People Inhabited Pacific Coast Million Years Ago

LOS ANGELES, June 2. — The phebistoric man who roamed California and Arizona, lived 997,000 years before King Tut-ankh-Amen was born.

This is the statement of Samuel Hubbard, explorer and retired business man of Oakland, who recently unearthed the petrified body of a feminine giant about 12 feet in heighth, estimated at one million years old, in the Grand Canyon of Arizona.

The giant was well proportioned. The skeleton of what appears to have been a baby was found buried near by.

Find Body of a Giant.

The petrified body of a giant man 15 feet tall, possibly the mate of the giant woman was covered in recent years by a landslide in a canyon.

These giants, according to Hubbard, possessed a fine mentality. They ate the tender, raw flesh of young elephants, fish, game and birds. More than likely they draped themselves with becoming costumes, because their visible tracks in the Grand Canyon indicate that they wore moccasins not unlike those worn by Indians.

"Bancroft, the historian, in his 'History of the Pacific Coast,' refers to the Quinames, giants who inhabited Mexico, and I believe these giants wandered or were driven from Mexico and perished in the district which is now the Grand Canyon," said Mr. Hubbard on his arrival in Los Angles on the way to his home in Oakland.

New Evidence in Writing.

"Wall writings which I found in the Grand Canyon—writings on which I base my archeological deductions—offer a wide range for scientific speculation," he continued. "I find, for example, that the Ibis—the sacred bird of Egypt—existed on this continent at the period when lived the prehistoric giants. At the same time the Ibis lived in Spain, as shown by wall writing in that country. It is possibly therefore, logically to deduce that there was migration of animal as well as human life between the two lands.

"There being visible to us no land means of direct migration between Spain and America, we then must accept the theory of Alantis which some archeologists believe, was sunk about 12,000 or more years ago.

Bears Out Alantis Theory.

"Bearing out the theory of Alantis having connected what is now Mexico with what is Spain, is the familiar facial characteristic between certain races of Spain and the North American Indian. The wall writings, too, of Spain and those I have studied again in the Grand Canyon are virtually the same in execution and design.

"How long ago this was can be reckoned by the fact that the Colorado river has cut a gorge 4,000 feet deep since that giant died, for the giant was originally buried on a cliff 60 feet high. The body was undoubtedly carefully prepared for burial having been placed in lime impregnated water.

"Ancient civilization as revealed in the tomb of King Tut-ankh-Amen is a modern period of history compared to the ancient civilization of the Pacific Coast. It was 28 years ago when I made my first exploration in the Grand Canyon. Continued investigations there have convinced me that the canyon holds archaeological secrets of vast importance.

"Scientists have steadfastly refused to believe me and have scoffed at the proofs I have offered. They declare that the ancient people were pigmies and not giants. One learned professor exclaimed in amazement and ridicule, 'Why, Hubbard, if your discoveries are what you say they are, you have upset the whole theory of geology.'"

CHAMPION GENE SARAZEN CORRECTS GOLF FAULTS

Champion Warns Against Over-Reaching

BY GENE SARAZEN,
World's Champion Golfer.

Before I take up the instruction of the back swing I want to illustrate and to call attention to a very common mistake many golfers make in addressing the ball. It is that of standing too far away from the ball, as pictured here.

Now, to keep the left arm practically straight during the swing does not necessarily mean you must extend it in this manner. As you can readily perceive, I am overreaching for the ball and could never hope to get a good shoot from this position.

Stand up to the ball naturally. I gave the figures of my stance recently—35 inches between the ball and the right foot, and 37 inches between the ball and the left foot, inasmuch as I use the open stance. I have a pretty long driver and would suggest that the stance be confined to that distance at least.

The chances are you would hit the ball with the toe of the club—if at all—if you addressed the ball in the manner pictured here. Keep the body fairly erect. Have the left arm vertually in straight line with the club, but not rigid, as it is in this position. Above all, take a comfortable position when you address your shot, and don't strain by overreaching. The ball in this picture is at least a foot beyond the line from which I ordnarily address my drive.

NOTARY PUBLICS QUALIFY FRIDAY

Notary publics of the county were qualifying for service at a rapid rate in the county clerk's office Friday, June 1 being the date on which the notary commissions became effective. Over 750 residents of the county were named by the last legislature to serve as notaries, and although the number qualified Friday was large, it was stated that less than half had been authorized thus far for service.

The complete list of notaries was received here from the secretary of state some time ago.

CASTLES FOR SALE

Scarcely a day passes without news of the sale, at a price that would have seemed ridiculously small fifty years ago, of castle rich in historic associations. Their condition is sound, yet they are frequently bought, not as residences, but for the sake of panels, doors and fireplaces, which being stripped from a discarded shell and sold separately, yield a profit on the price paid for the whole building. Everywhere great houses have fallen from fashion, not only because they are expensive to maintain and difficult to staff, but because the manner of life which made them desirable and even necessary has itself given way to a less spacious habit. Following the flow of labor, pleasure and entertainment have moved toward the towns. Still men go dilberately into the countryside to fish, to shoot, to hunt, but their going is today an outward expedition, not a somecoming for the pavements, not the pastures, are the basis of their life. They do not now, as once they did, come reluctantly from their estates in rumbling coaches to do occasional business in parliament or counting house, but rather reckon jealously the few uncertain days when they may escape the streets' uproar and make a swift descent on hill and heather. They have come to consider life from the inside, instead of from the outside of the city, wall, and it is little to be wondered at that castles in his own shires should present to a modern Englishman a prospect almost as remote as castles in Spain.—From the Continental Edition of the London Times.

PIGGLY WIGGLY TO GROW HERE

Three More Stores To Be Opened And One At Burkburnett

Three new Piggly Wiggly stores will be built in Wichita Falls within the next two months, according to C. S. Wyatt, who has purchased the local stores from the Piggly Wiggly corporation.

In addition, there will also be one established in Burkburnett as a branch of the local system.

Wyatt purchased the two stores already here two weeks ago, and promptly began plans for three others, which he will build as soon as he can procure suitable locations. All of the new stores will be suburban, and will serve the customers who are unable to come to town conveniently for their groceries.

Lease Signed

The lease for the first store, to be erected on the corner of Tenth and Van Buren streets, was signed yesterday, but will not be delivered until in the late summer, because of earlier leases. The other stores have not yet found suitable locations, but will be made soon. All three will be completed within two months and opened to the public.

The manager of the new stores began his career with Piggly-Wiggly five years ago at a salary of $20 a week, ending the five years as a director in the company and district manager of a district in which there were 143 stores. With headquarters in Chicago, where 97 of the stores were located, he managed the vast territory, handling 457 employes.

He has just returned from a meeting of the directors held at Memphis Tenn., Tuesday, at which time the affairs of the company were adjusted. Following the meeting, he resigned a sa director to come to Wichita Falls.

"I have come to Wichita Falls to live and die," said Dyatt. "I like the city, and I am going to buy a home and live here."

Wyatt was raised at Dallas and is a native Texan, having lived here practically all his life. He states that he has picked Wichita Falls as the most prosperous and likely city in the state, and that he will stay here.

The two stores on Indiana and Ohio streets are being entirely remodeled and repainted, making them among the prettiest stores in the city.

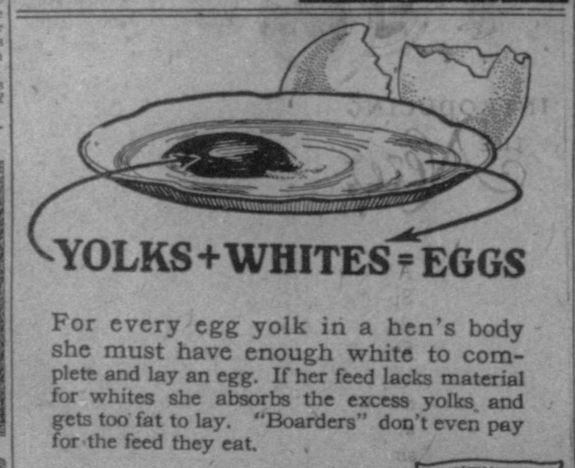

STREETS FLOODED BY HEAVY RAIN

Special Dispatch to Record News

ELECTRA, June 2.—Streets were flooded last night when more than half an inch of rain fell in a few minutes. It was accompanied by a high wind and an electrical display of intense brilliancy. However, no damage was done.

This will provide water for drilling purposes, but will add little to the depleted supply in the city reservoir. More than 200,000 gallons is being pumped now from the auxiliary plant near Red river, and it is expected that twice that much will be available, within a week. So that the local crisis in so far as water is concerned has been weathered.

FORD MAKES HIS STRAW FOR CARS

Great Loads Of It Goes Into Manufacture Of Steering Wheels

DETROIT, Mich.—Invisible, yet daily gripped in the hands of millions of persons, straw from the farm of Henry Ford is literally scattered to the four corners of the earth.

Strange as this announcement may seem, it is true. Out on the Ford farm at Dearborn, Mich., operated entirely by Fordso ntractor power, there was no use for the great loads of straw annually harvested there with the grain, until the Ford Motor company, given to doing unusual things, found a use for it.

The straw is used as an ingredient in the composition of Fordite, a material of flint-like hardness and a development of the Ford Motor company, from which steering wheels are made, and the Fordite plant at Highland Park supplies these steering wheels for all Ford cars and trucks, wherever assembled throughout the world—in the United States, Canada and abroad—and also for use on Fordson tractors.

The Fordite plant, begun about four years no something as an experiment, is at present producing an average of 8,500 of these steering wheels daily, under the manufacturing schedule of three eight-hour working shifts, six days a week. Subjected to the most minute inspection and given the most exacting tests, they are the strongest and most durable steering wheels produced, of everwearing quality, a bright, lustrous black and superior in many ways to wooden steering wheels.

The straw from the Ford farm, which is sufficient in quantity for only about nine months' manufacture, after which straw must be purchased outside, is utilized, following a shredding process, as a binder in making that part of Fordite, which forms the core of the steering wheel, insuring a rim of exceptional strength. The daily consumption at present is about a ton and a half.

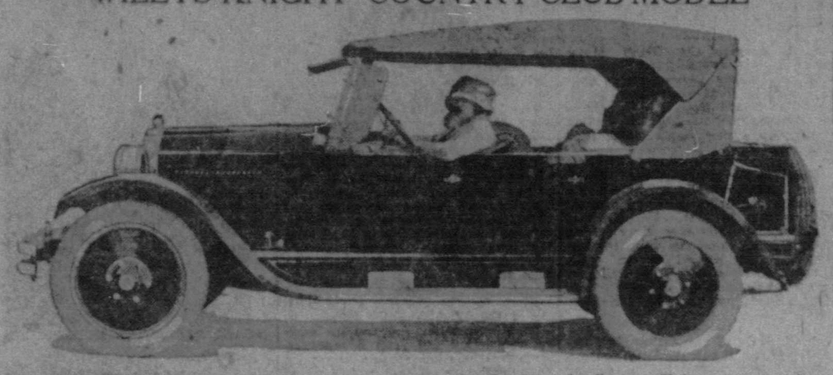

Manufacture of Fordite begins with the raw materials. In preparing the core stock the straw, rubber base, sulphur, silica and other ingredients are mixed in batches of 150 pounds each, which then o to the rubber mills, where they are mixed between heated rollers for a period of 45 minutes. By that time the substance is ready for the tubing machines, into which it is fed in small strips, and from which it emerges through a small, round die, 15-16 of an inch in diameter, much as sausage from a sausage grinding machine. As it comes out, it is cut, on the bias, into lengths of 52 inches and then is ready to be rolled into the outside covering of fine rubber-like substance.

After the core has been wrapped into the covering, which is of equal length and seven and a half inches wide, affording a double cover, the whole is secured in circular form and sent to the steel molds the exact size of a steering wheel.

Held fast in these molds under hydraulic pressure of 2,000 pounds to the square inch, these Fordite steering wheels are subjected to a heat treatment of 68 pounds of steam for a period of 50 minutes. Hot as they come from the steam ovens, they are soft and pliable, but within a short time after they are placed on the cooling racks they assume a flint-like hardness that remains.

Next, the Fordite steering wheels go to the finishing room, where they are smoothly trimmed and polished. The pressed steel "spider" or cross piece, is then placed in the wheel and securely fastened on a machine which in one operation bores a small hole and in the next screws in the screw. The steering wheel is then ready for shipment and assembly on the car. Manufacture of these wheels is only a part of the work done in the Fordite plant. In addition it turns out a daily average of 9,000 front spring pads, 150,000 commutator insulator buttons, 9,000 magneto contact insulators, 7,500 cut-out insulators, 8,000 motor starter insulators, 8,000 generator insulators, 8,00 dash terminal blocks, 6,000 battery cable bushings, 10,000 hood block bushings, 20,000 tail light wire bushings, 3,200 battery covers, 6,500 rear panel lugs, and 10,000 cable insulators for metal dashes.

WILLYS-KNIGHT COUNTRY CLUB MODEL

The Willys-Knight Country Club model, an entirely fresh creation from the factories at Toledo, Ohio, is a car that stands out distinctly as a car distinguished in its particular field—that of the sports type, with a suggestion of real live country drives over the hills to the country club house. The very appearance of this model associates it with the better things of life as clean outdoor sports, the open Country and all that goes with it, and there is an elegance about the Country Club that cannot fail to impress the man who is out after a car that has beauty, character and engineering perfection happily harmonized in one exceptionally pleasing combination.

Equipment Complete.

The appointments of the Country Club are unusually complete and include five Fisk cord tires, oversize 32 by 4 1-2, five disc wheels, Brussels floor carpets front and rear, double bar bumper in front, windshield wings, automatic windshield wiper, eight-day clock, electric gasoline gauge on the dash, commodious trunk on the rear, trunk bars, scuff plates on the running boards, motometer, visor, special nickeled head lamps, Spanish morocco upholstery and khaki top. Nothing has been omitted that would give the Country Club an honest right to be called exactly what it is, and every piece of equipment on the car serves a definite usefulness beside adding charm to the general appearance.

Attractive Finish.

Gleaming nickel head lamps, heavily nickeled bumper, nickeled windshield stanchions, scuff plates on the running boards nickeled, and nickeled trunk bars play up the deep Cavalier Maroon of the body and the weatherized khaki top with red bindings and welts. The upholstery of genuine Spanish Morocco leather is another distinction that sets off the beauty of the Country Club model.

Nine-Year-Old Willard Battery Brought In, Repaired and Used

"Among Our Friends," the little booklet recently published by the Willard company contains a few letters from enthusiastic Willard owners.

The Bequelin Battery company, Willard dealers at Greene, Iowa, recently came across an old Willard battery in a rather surprising manner.

Following is the letter from this service station:

"Several days ago a man brought to our shop the remnants of a battery, as we thought, and he told us he had dropped it on the floo rof his garage and wanted it repaired.

"It had a broken case and two broken jars and looked to be very old It was a Willard threaded rubber, the type that had the wide connectors. The number plate was gone, so we could not tell what type it was called, but it was the same as our SJR-4 of today.

"We questioned the customer and found this was the original battery that came in his Studebaker car, nine years ago.

"Upon examining it, we found that the plates were in very good condition, insulators were as good as new, and there was very little sediment in the bottom of the jars. In fact, the battery looked as if it was good for two or three years more.

"We repaired this battery and sent the customer away happy once more, a lifelong booster for Willard."

NEW FORD RECORD

The Ford Motor company during the week ending Tuesday, May 15, set up a new production record by turning out 39,303 cars and trucks for domestic use, it is announced by the Ford News. This exceeds by 250 the previous hiah weekly record of 39,053 established the week before.

The hihest day of the week was May 9 when a new daily production mark of 6,615 cars and trucks was reached.

The Lincoln division of the company produced 185 cars during the week ending Tuesday.

FISHER BUILDS FOR OAKLAND

$2,000,000 Factory Will Have Charge Of All Oakland Finishing

All bodies for the Oakland Motor Car company, Pontias, Michigan, will be built in the huge $2,000,000 Fisher body corporation factory which is being built within three quarters of a mile from the Oakland plants in Pontiac.

The foundation and walls are nearly completed and it is planned to start turning out the Oakland bodies in this factory early in August. It is stated that this new industry in Pontiac will give employment to approximately 2,500 men.

The location for the new factory is on a 26-acre site and rails, ties and spikes have already been placed on the ground to build the 800-foot spur track of the Grand Trunk railroad.

The factory will be partly one and partly two story construction; of saw-tooth design and built of brick with metal fireproof sash. The contract calls for the completion of the factory building within 90 days.

The building of Oakland bodies in Pontiac eliminates the haul from the factories of the Fisher body corporation in Detroit. All Oakland open as well as closed bodies will be built in this new plant.

48,628 EMPLOYED BY DURANT MOTORS

When Durant motors was incorporated, in January, 1921, this country was in the throes of depression. Millions of men were jobless; factories were idle; business men were fighting against failure.

With the utmost faith in the future, W. C. Durant undertook to finance one of the greatest industrial enterprises ever undertaken in America.

How great a part his activities played in bringing back prosperity to the country in general is problematical, but this much is certain:

His faith in the future has been justified.

The enterprses which he conceived are today furnishing employment to 48,628 persons.

Based on an average of fre persons to a family, these employment figures indicate that a quarter of a million persons are being supported by Durant Motors Inc., its divisional and affiliated companies.

Manufacturing activities for Durant enterprises are being carried on in 77 cities, and in 10 of these cities the number of persons working exclusively on Durant products is in excess of 1,000.

Clarence, Paralytic Chewing Gum Salesman, Joins Auto Fraternity

Clarence has joined the automobile fraternity.

His three-wheeled bicycle has been thrown in the discard, and now, regally enthroned in his one-manpower machine, he speeds around the streets easily, comfortably and quickly.

You've all seen Clarence, and many of you have purchased some of his chewing gum, lead pencils or some of the other things he sells. Usually he can be found on Eighth street, just in front of the Penny store. Sometimes he stands on Indiana, near Ninth. Frequently he is a visitor around the Central fire station, where he is accepted as one of the bunch.

And always, as heretofore, his three-wheeled bicycle was standing nearby.

When Clarence was a youngster he was stricken with an illness that left him permanently crippled. He is able to move about but his limbs have been so affected that walking is difficult. His arms too, were left drawn and incapable of any considerable movement. His voice was also affected.

Clarence early solved the transportation problem by finding a bicycle and having a third wheel attached to keep the thing upright. Once mounted, it was possible for him to pedal along at a fairly lively rate of speed. And by practice he found the particular way in which he could mount his wheel with a minimum of trouble.

Not long ago, Grover Bullington noticed that Clarence and his bicycle were, at best, an inconsistent combination. The boy had frequently had repairs on his machine at the Bullington shop, so Mr. Bullington set about devising some new means of locomotion for him.

The result has been a miniature automobile. Clarence furnishes the motive power himself and with the pedaling system arranged like it is he can make more speed with much less effort than was possible with the old velocipede. Mounting and dismounting is also a greatly simplified proposition. The car is equipped with wire wheels, pneumatic tires and is neatly painted. All the work was done at the Bullington shops by mechanics at the place.

And now Clarence has attacked his chewing gum sales campaign with renewed vigor. His new red automobile is inspiration enough to put pep in anyone and for the crippled boy, for him whom life has enough trials anyway, it is a real blessing.

The building was built by Gullahorn and Beard for Mr. Brown, and is complete in every respect, with spacious room for displaying of cars, and with plenty of light through the large plate glass windows installed.

In one section of the building will be the shop and parts departments, with the remainder of the building given over to the salesrooms, offices and accessory departments.

BIG DEMAND FOR ALL FORDS

300,000 Cars And Trucks Called For By Dealers During May

DETROIT, Mich.—The general prosperity now existing throughout the country is strikingly reflected in the demand for Ford cars and trucks.

Dealer requirements for May, just announced at the office of the Ford Motor company, calls for 300,000 cars and trucks, and orders making up this great total came from every section of the nation.

The company's huge manufacturing facilities are being utilized to the utmost in an endeavor to increase the daily output to the dealer's orders may be filled as quickly as possible.

The proportion of increase in the demand for Ford products is about equally divided between commercial centers and rural communities, reflecting not only better conditions in the cities, but likewise a growth of prosperity among the farmers.

A feature of the dealer requirements is the large number of Ford one-ton trucks. Sales of Ford trucks have been mounting every month this year, establishing new high marks and May has proven another record-breaker. While business converns everywhere are daily turning to the use of the Ford truck in increasing numbers, the sales records also show that farmers are availing themselves of the advantages and economy of motor truck transportation to a greater extent than ever before.

Among the speakers for the evening will be C. C. McDonald and a speaker from Dallas, yet to be announced.

Note in Bottle Tells How Woman Put Man to Death

Associated Press Dispatch

AURORA, Ill., June 1.—A water-discolored note found today in a bottle that had floated down the Fox river and was washed ashore here, hinted that the perfectly proportioned young man whose nude and mutilated body was found in a snow grave west of Geneva February 13 last, had been done to death at the behest of a woman. The body was never identified, the hands having been chopped off and the face burned beyond recognition by a fire built around the head. Geneva, near where the body was found, is ten miles north of Aurora on the Fox river.

The note read:

"Say Dee:

"Don't tell mother about Frank being killed that way. It would kill her. I went to see him at the undertaker's at Geneva. He looked terrible, but I never let on that I recognized him. They still think he was a booze runner. The Lord will punish her, is all that I have to say."

There was no signature to the note which was written on the back of a bridge whist score tab and appeared to be in the handwriting of a woman.

Blowouts On Auto Row

One of the most attractive of the many attractive automobile salesrooms in the city now, is the Lockhart Chevrolet company which recently remodeled its quarters. While all work is not as yet completed, the new room with it's staircase to the business offices, and convenient, well lighted, departments, is one of the best arranged salesrooms to be found in this section.

To J. A. Kemp, of this city, goes the honor of receiving the first new Willys-Knight Country club model received here by the Overland Motors company, local Overland and Willys-Knight distributors. Frank Quiesser of the company states the "Country Club" was delivered to Mr. Kemp upon arrival here and is one of the most attractive models introduced by the Willys-Knight factories. The car is not as yet in full production, only a few cars being allowed to various Overland dealers over the country.

Upon the taking over of the corner room next to the company's present location, Seventh and Scott, the Dixon Motor company, will have one of the largest floor spaces given over to an automobile agency, in the state. Thirty-seven thousand five hundred feet of floor space will be at their disposal, ipeluding the company's used car department, paint shops and top factory on Indiana avenue. Charles Nolen of the local Buick company, states the architects are at work now on the floor arrangements for the new building and the remodeling work will begin at once. Voelker and Dixon, the architects, are making many attractive plans for the arrangement of the salesrooms and accessory departments.

Among the sales made by the Lloyd Weaver company, for the past two weeks are a Hudson speedster to H. S. Stribling, a speedster to J. H. Kennedy and to James White, an Essex coach.

L. L. Dixon of the Dixon Motor company, who attended the State Automotive Dealers association, as delegate for the local association, is expected to return Monday. Mr. Dixon is spending the week-end in Dallas, driving up a new Buick model from that city.

Keim Motor company, local Studebaker dealers, report a splendid month of sales, delivering a record number of new cars in May. Mr. Keim of the company states they are receiving more regular shipments from the factory than for several weeks past. However, certain models are still slow in arriving and many orders are now on the hook, awaiting the arrival of cars.

A. B. Huff of the Arthur Huff Motor company, local Oakland dealers, returned from Dallas Friday, driving a new Oakland coupe, which was delivered Saturday to R. B. McDonald.

Bill Robertson of the Parmenter Motor company, is in Fort Worth on business connected with the local Durant and Star organization.

Herbert Kerr of the Lloyd Weaver company returned Thursday from Dallas, driving a new Packard roadster.

M. A. Bundy of the Bundy-Strong Auto Supply company, wholesalers, states his salesmen on the road are meeting with excellent success this month and closing many new orders. "Both locally and on the road," Mr. Bundy says, "sales are holding up remarkably with the prediction that the summer months will eclipse the splendid records of our spring sales."

Frank Keim and J. C. Morris of the Keim Motor company, journeyed to Archer City Friday, May 25, where they attended a meeting of the Studebaker owners of the section, arranged by the local Studebaker dealer of that city. Mr. Keim states it was a splendid meeting and one that was greeted with aporoval by all who attended.

"Just as Studebaker owners are everywhere," Mr. Keim stated, "the owners residing at Archer are strong boosters, and without exception had many interesting remarks to make regarding the performance of their cars. We were royally entertained and everyone present voted the meeting a huge success."

Plans for the Tuesday night meeting of the Wichita Falls Automotive Dealers association are rapidly nearing completion and from advance reports by the committee in charge, a great gathering of automobile men will be at the Kemp. A banquet will be served and addresses will be given by several prominent speakers, on matters of interest to the automotive fraternity.

Gentlemen: Today I received our oil run checks covering the wells for which we purchased your new gas-tight storage tanks on approval, with the understanding that unless these tanks did not raise the gravity of our crude 41 per cent and above we would not have to accept them, and I am pleased to find that in every instance the gravity was not only increased from 36 per cent to 41 per cent and above, but there was a perceptible increase in the production for the month. Therefore, I now am pleased to hand you our checks in the amount of $3940.00 and $130.00 in payment of the attached invoices, which kindly receipt and return for our files. Very truly yours,

RULING RECEIVED ON NEW GAS TAX

Dealers Must Collect For Months Of May And April

All filling stations, jobbers and refiners of gasoline were advised Saturday of the ruling of the state comptroler regarding the proposed policy of collecting the one-cent tax on gasoline, recently passed by the legislature.

According to the telegram, the tax must be paid by the gasoline dispensers for the months of April and May.

Considerable comment on the action was prevalent Friday, the majority of the dealers stating their disfavor of the legislation. The announcement that collections would be made for April and May, came as a surprise to many of the dealers, who were under the opinion that the recent bill of the legislature, an amendment to the first bill, rescinded the original plan.

PEERLESS NAMES EXPORT MANAGER

Announcement of the appointment of Col. Fred Cardway as manager of its export department, with offices at 342 Madison avenue, New York, is made by the Peerless Motor Car company. Col. Cardway resigned not long ago as vice-president and general manager of the Packard Motors Export corporation.

The decision of Peerless to re-enter the export field on a larger scale than ever before is a natural result of the steadily increasing demand for Peerless cars abroad ever since the introduction of the new models last fall, combined with the increasing recognition in foreign countries of the tremendous advantages of American cars of high quality over those made in other countries.

During the war Peerless delivered hundreds of trucks to the British government for army, navy and air forces.

Col. Cardway has had considerable success in the automobile export field, particularly in South American and European merchandising. He is one of the most widely known Americans among motor car dealers abroad.

New Gas Station Opened Here Saturday

The company will be distributors for Firestone tires, Triolene oil, and Lone Star gasoline.

What You Can Do In An Oakland Car

Around the rim of the United States, across the continent and half way back again—that's the length of a tour that could be made in an Oakland car absolutely protected against excess oil in the combustion chamber. This is the conservative minimum written distance guarantee—15,000 miles—that is given by the Oakland Motor Car company in every car sold today. So far this guarantee has cost the Oakland company less than one cent per car to make good.

Chandler Pikes Peak Motor Also Is Noted For Its Lasting Qualities

Since the beginning of the year much emphasis has been placed upon the performance ability of the phenomenal Chandler-built Pikes Peak motor which, following its exhaustive tests on the highest automobile highway in the world, has been conquering the hardest hills throughout the entire United States.

Noted for its performance as the Chandler is, it is no less renowned for its longevity.

Proof that the Chandler Six is built for long as well as hard usage is contained in the May number of the Chandler bulletin in which is published the roster of the Chandler 100,000 Mile club.

Although the club was started less than a year ago, it now has 91 members from all regions of the United States and one in Madrid, Spain. These members all have been enrolled on their own initiative, no organized effort having been made to find other Chandler owners whose cars have been driven in excess of 100,000 miles.

Each of the members of this unique club has a distinctive club emblem on the radiator of his car.

Eleven motorists who were enrolled in the club last month reported having driven their Chandler cars an aggregate of 1,150,000 miles—an average of 228,444 miles each.

Included among these eleven were six who acquired their qualifying mileage in more than one Chandler, some of them now operating their fifth or sixth.

Among those who were enrolled in the club during the last six months, the highest record reported was that of H. F. Shafer, of Los Angeles, who has driven his single Chandler car 172,000 miles.

Another member, Stephen F. Yule, of Quincy, Mass., reports that his Chandler had been driven 114,000 miles up to two years ago, since when he has not carried a speedometer, but the car is still doing heavy road duty.

That the new Chandler has a chassis that is well able to withstand the remarkable power of the Pikes Peak motor is apparent when it is recalled that its former chassis was still further increased in strength when the new motor was brought out, the only part that remained unchanged being the rear axle which had been redesigned a year previously and which had proved itself 100 per cent perfect.

Out of the entire production of Chandler cars last year not a single case of rear axle failure was reported.

Orders More Oaklands

A. P. Ten Brook, Kansas City branch manager, and H. E. Mahaffey, Minneapolis branch manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, visited the factory of the company at Pontiac, Mich., this last week to order more cars.

EVERITT SELLS INTEREST IN BODY PLANT TO BROTHERS

DETROIT, Mich.—B. F. Everitt, founder and president of Everitt Brothers Body company, announces that he has disposed of his interest in that concern to his two brothers.

Mr. Everitt, who is also president and general manager of Rickenbacher Motor company, states that his chief reason for retiring from the body building branch of the business is his belief that the Rickenbacher company demands and deserves every minute of his time.

"I am now certain," says Mr. Everitt, "that in the Rickenbacher product, we have developed a car that has a wonderful future as well as a mighty satisfactory past and present. It is my ambition to make this one of the leading concerns in the industry."

G. D. and R. S. Everitt, who from the first have been the other partners, will now become sole owners. They propose, however, to admit as a stockholder and director, George Washer, one of the most skilled body men in his line.

For the past seven years Washer has been superintendent of Everitt Brothers body plants, and his reception into the company is in recognition of his ability and loyalty.

Among the men who pioneered the automobile industry, B. F. Everitt is one of the best known. Many men now famous and worth millions in the automobile body business began an apprentices in his shops.

Champion Plug Favored In Ford

"The fact that Champion X has been the standard spark plug for Ford cars and trucks for more than 10 years, and for Fordson tractors since the day they were introduced, is a distinct tribute to the dependability of Champion spark plugs," says F. B. Caswell, director of sales of the Champion Spark Plug company, of Toledo.

"This preference for Champion on the part of the Ford company is definitely due to the fact that in hundreds of tests conducted by Ford engineers, Champion X has always demonstrated that it is a better spark plug.

"What is true of Ford cars is just as true through the entire range of motor cars.

"It is significant that Champion is regular equipment on both Locomobile and Rolls-Royce the highest priced cars made in this country, and that more than 70 per cent of the makes of cars selling for $2,000 and up the Champion equipped.

"In Europe, also, Champion is being awarded a marked preference, and is regular equipment on Minerva, Peugeot and Lorraine Dettrich, three of the best-known cars made on the other side.

"That the American motorist fully recognizes the Champion claims superiority is indicated by the fact that today more than 65 per cent of all spark plugs made are Champion, the actual production of the Champion plants being in excess of 100,000 per day."

QUICK ACTION BRAKES
EXTRA LARGE AND EXTRA SAFE

In the construction of Dodge Brothers Motor Car, every consideration has been given to the owner's safety.

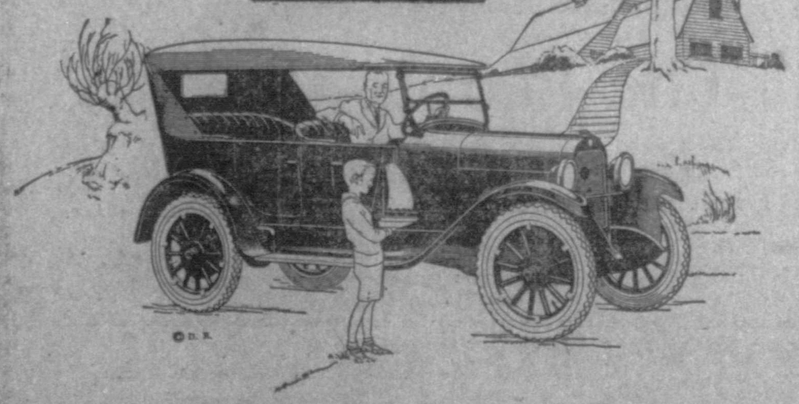

This is particularly evident in the brakes, which, with their 14-inch drums and 2¼ inch lining, are appreciably larger than the average. The extra surface thus provided develops greater friction when the brake bands contract over the drums—and it is this friction which stops the car.

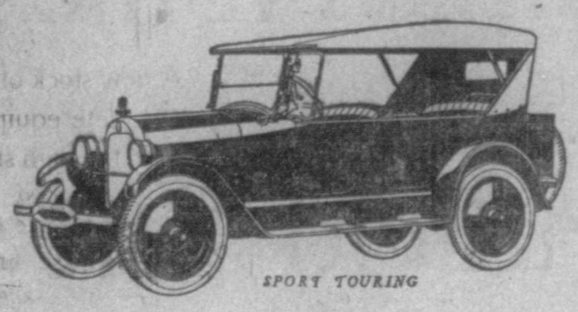

Connecting levers are designed to transmit the maximum of power with the minimum of effort. The slightest pressure on the brake pedal has an immediate effect. This pressure is distributed evenly between the two rear wheels by a highly efficient equalizer, which prevents skidding because it retards both wheels simultaneously.

And the brake bands grip evenly all around the drums. This protects the lining against irregular wear and enables the driver to stop quickly, quietly and safely.

Going Fishing? Record News Logs Good Trip For You

GOOD CATCHES AT BYERS LAKE

This Tells Kind of Bait, Where and How To Catch Big Ones

With the coming of summer, one's thoughts naturally turn from business and routine affairs to some shady pond or lake, where with a pipe in mouth—or, if it perchances to be a woman, with some modern fiction in hand—one may live the entire day in spring happiness.

One is willing to sit all day, if in the end they are awarded by a swift jerk of the pole, then a straining of the line, the buzzing of the reel, the grand fight with the elusive fish—and then, whether successful or otherwise, determination to try again the next day.

In the past, when a person living ing in Wichita Falls wished to fish, it was necessary to make a long trip in order to get to some suitable fishing place, but those times are gone forever, and all that is now necessary is to prepare a quick lunch, crank up the old car and drive for not more than two hours and find fish in abundance.

Large Catches Nearby

Local fishermen report that large catches are being made off Bugs Point at the lake. Recently 16 large cans of baby bass were placed in Lake Wichita, and in a few years that place will be regarded as one of the best fishing resorts in the state.

Fishermen also are reporting large catches in the Wichita river. This place has been used for a number of years, and will continue to be popular. But the majority of fish caught in the river are mudcats, with a few other varieties. There is still yet another fishing place that has come into prominence this year and, according to local sportsmen, is the best fishing place from every standpoint in this part of the state. That is Byers lake, better known as Horseshoe lake, situated about two miles out of Byers and 29 miles from Wichita Falls.

Byers lake has every requirement for a natural fishing place, with suitable camping grounds, plenty of timber for fuel, plenty of water, and near enough to a store to get supplies. The lake is in the shape of a stream more than it is a lake, as it circles in and out over a great deal of territory.

Use Rod and Reel

Although fish may be caught in this body of water by merely using a pole and line, it is the best plan to use a rod and reel. The big fellows stay in the center of the body of water, and unless one has a boat it is impossible to get a line out when not using a rod and reel.

Perch, yellow and channel cat, bass, buffalo and several other kind of fish are in the water in large quantities, and range from small size fish to some weighing seven and eight pounds. If a throw-line is placed in the water at night, it is almost a certainty that a nice mess of fish will be on it the next morning.

You can fish from a boat

Several different kinds of bait have met with success in Byers lake, but "stench bait" seems to draw the fish better than any other. Minnows and worms will also serve the purpose if the "stench bait" is not obtainable.

Although one may drive directly to Byers without going through Petrolia, it is the best plan to take the last route, in order to save confusion. For the benefit of those who are not acquainted with the roads in this district, the Record News has logged the route. It accompanies this article.

Take This Along, It Tells Every Turn in the Road

The following is The Record News log or road route from Wichita Falls to Byers lake:

Starting from The Record News, on Tenth street, drive to the first crossing east and then turn to the left for three blocks. On Seventh street turn to the right for one block, which will place you on the corner of Ohio and Seventh street, next to W. B. McClurkan store. Here set your speedometer back to 00.0.

0 to .2: Go east on Seventh street, crossing the tracks and turn to the right one block west of the ball park.

.2 to .3: Go south for two blocks and turn to the left.

.3 to .9: After making the last turn, proceed east on the straight road. Pass several little stores, and at .9 miles you should come to the road branch. Take the one to the right for 50 yards and then turn to the left.

.9 to 2.7: Pass brickyard excavation pit, then pass over a bridge passing by a small store and garage.

1.7: Jog left.

2.7 to 3.1: Proceed down this road.

3.1: Turn to right.

3.1 to 4.3: Pass over Four Mile hill. Drive slowly, as it is impossible to tell whether a car is coming around the cliff. After passing over the hill, the road makes a jog to the left.

4.3 to 6.7: At 5.6 miles you will pass a sign in regard to Petrolia, and at 6.3 miles you will pass over a railroad track. At 6.7 miles make a turn to the right for 50 yards, and then turn to the left.

6.7 to 9: This long lane goes in a straight direction for nearly two and one-half miles, the road growing heavy all the time. At 9 miles the road branches. Turn to the left. The right leads you to Henrietta.

9 to 11.1: At 9.8 miles you will strike a few yards of rocky road. The bumps are deep. After the rock stretch of road, pass over a little bridge and pass a school house.

Leaving the school house, proceed up the road and cross the track at the station of Dan, which consists of one store.

11.1 to 12: Passing the store at Dan, proceed on up the road for nearly a mile and turn to the right, taking precaution at the bridge at this junction.

12 to 13.1: Turn to the left after passing over the bridge.

13.1 to 13.9: Turn to the right.

13.9 to 14.8: In this stretch of the road there is an oil derrick in the distance. Turn left before you reach derrick.

14.8 to 16.4: Turn to the right at the entrance to Ashland's ranch and proceed down the road.

16.4 to 18.6: At 18 miles watch for a bad ditch, as the road makes a sharp turn, and there is danger of driving into the deep ditch. Turn to the right at the ditch for .1 mile and then turn to left.

18.7 to 21.5: This stretch of the road will lead you into Petrolia. Continue on the same road, going out of Petrolia to the north.

21.5 to 26.5: After leaving Petrolia, follow the main road, which runs beside the track for the main part and two and one-half miles out you will strike a gravel road, which will go into Byers.

After passing through Byers, follow the main road toward the Red river and at about two and one-half miles north of Byers the road branches, one leading to the Red river and the other, which you should take, turns to the left.

Proceed up this road for a few hundreds of yards and you will see a body of water to the right in the shape of two horseshoes, which is Byers lake, your destination.

If you wish to camp, do not make the last named turn, but pass the little store and go toward the river for a few hundreds of yards and turn in at a gate to the left. Follow this lane, and it will lead you to the body of water on the opposite side from the road.

THEN START FISHING.

Governor Makes Address Without Uttering Word

International News Dispatch

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., June 2.—Governor Len Small today delivered a speech to a graduating class without uttering a single word. His address was given in the sign language. The class was composed of the graduates of the Illinois school for deaf at Jacksonville, who paid a visit to the state house.

Walter Mannen, president of the graduating class addressed the governor first in the sign language and praised the administration road building program and the management of the state institution from which the class just graduated.

When Governor Small who is familiar with the sign language, began his silent address the graduates broke into vigorous handclapping.

THE BOOK WITHIN US

You know the saying there is a book in each of us, if only we would write it. Has it occurred to you to ask the sort of this proverbial book? Clearly what is meant is an autobiography, one's own life story, for that is the material lying to all our hands. The number and vogue of such books are notable today, and the broad explanation of this is no doubt the growing curosity of everybody toward the problems of life. We are not content to take it as something so ordained that we must just accept or leave. We want to know all about it; if possible we want to make it a better thing and to that end we want to read real life stories.—James Miline in the London Graphic.

95,000 MILES BY ST. JO HORSE

And He's Still Going Strong Declares Owner Of Ginger

Special Dispatch to Record News

SAINT JO, Tex., June 2.—Around the earth at the equator three times, and then some more—95,000 miles to be exact.

That is the record of R. Allred and "Ginger," Montague county's justly notable pair, who have been delivering mail out of Bowie on route 1 for the past 18 years. Thrice around the globe and some more left over—quite a sizeable mileage for a man and a horse to roll up.

Mr. Allred recently figured up his traveling total and mentioned it casually at the Montague County Rural Mail Carriers association, which met here last week. He had come in with no intention of creating a mild furore, but when it was found that his 18 years of service had resulted in the stupendous total of 95,000 miles, he was quite as much an object of interest as anything else at the association meeting.

"Ginger," referred to above, is of course none other than the four-legged motive machine that has been hauling Mr. Allred's mail wagon for all these years. Up until the time he accepted employment as one of Uncle Sam's emissaries, he was a prominent figure on the dirt tracks of North Texas. In front of a racing sulky, it is reported that he was one of the fastest ponies Montague county ever turned out. It was in his second and third years that he was thus occupied, and since that time he has been Mr. Allred's unfailing companion on the long drives out of Bowie and over Route 1.

Even a suggestion that "Ginger," by virtue of his extended service, was about ready for the pension department brings derisive howls from Mr. Allred.

"He may be old," the boss declares, "but his name still fits him, and we're going to cover that route many, many more times before either one of us is through."

An Indispensible Pair

And the careful attention the horse has had at Mr. Allred's hands is readily apparent in his appearance. He looks as indeed his master claims, to be fit for years more of service.

The country folk of Route I have come to regard the venerable pair as an indispensible part of Montague county landscape. "It wouldn't look natural," one of them declared, in remarking on the work Mr. Allred and his horse have done, "if we didn't see them coming around right on the dot. But we aren't worrying about that. They'll still keep coming for a long time yet."

Through heat and cold, wet weather and dry, by night and by day, Mr. Allred and Ginger have been plying their way for these last 18 years, inspired by that tradition of the United States postal department that "whatever comes, the mail goes through."

LILIAN

By ARNOLD BENNETT,

Author of "The Pretty Lady," "The Price of Love," Etc.

LEADING CHARACTERS:

Lilian Share—left almost penniless by her father, begins work in an "all-night" typing establishment.

Miss Grig—who usually is the one to stay at work all night is ill and it falls to Lilian's lot to keep watch. Lilian is dismayed at the prospect and is so terrified when a watchman at a nearby excavation climbs to the office to borrow a match that she is shaken with sobs when Felix Grig—owner of the establishment comes in. He endeavors to comfort her and she is flattered by his attention.

Lord Mackworth—of beautiful manners and beautiful clothes calls with a manuscript to be typed. She agrees to leave it at his address first thing in the morning and to telephone him in order to awaken him.

It was after Lilian had made some tea and was taking it that she had the idea of a mighty and scarcely conceivable transgression, crime, depredation. None of the machines in the clerks' room was in quite first-rate order. Why should she not abstract Miss Grig's own machine for the high purpose of typing Lord Mackworth's brilliant article? It was nearly a new one.

The one objection to Lilian's nefarious scheme was the fact that Miss G's machine ranked as the Ark of the Covenant, and the rule forbidding the profane to lay hands on it was absolute and awful.

Lilian feared lest her own machine might give a slip toward the end of a page, throw a line out of the straight and spoil the whole page.

Miss G's machine was in the small desk beneath the window in the principals' room. Having reflected, she decided to sin. If Mr. Grig was awake she would tell him squarely that her own machine was out of gear. She would put his own theory of her powers into practice upon himself. She would be quite unscrupulous; she would stop at nothing.

She entered and picked up the heavy machine. Soundlessly she left the sleeper. Triumphant, unscrupulous, reckless, she did not care what might happen.

At work on the article, exulting in the smooth excellence of Miss G's machine, she felt strangely happy. She forgot that she was beautiful and born to enchant. She was oblivious of both the past and the future. A moral exaltation, sweet and gentle, enerfised, upheld, and exhilarated her.

She heard the outer door open. The threatened interruption annoyed her almost to exasperation. It was essential that she should not be interrupted, for she was like a poet in full flow of creation.. Footsteps, someone moving hesitatingly to and fro in the ante-room! She would not budge. If urgent work had arrived, she did not want it, and would not have it!

Then she caught voices. The visitor had got into the principals' room and wakened Mr. Grig. The voices were less audible now, but a conversation seemingly interminable was proceeding in the principals' room. At length the visitor went and Mr. Grig came with a manuscript.

"Here's something wanted for 11 o'clock in the morning. It's very urgent."

"I'm afraid I can't put this aside, Mr. Grig," she said gravely.

"It's an article by Lord Mackworth for tomorrow's Evening Standard, and it has to be at the Standard office by half-past eight, and I've promised to have it delivered at Jermyn Street by 6:00."

"Yes, that's all very well, but—"

His attitude of helplessness touched her. She smiled in her serious manner.

"If you'll leave it to me to see it, Mr. Grig," she said soothingly, and yet a little superiorly, "I'll start it anyhow. And I'll leave an urgent note for Miss Jackson about it."

She held out her hand for the wretched manuscript. Mr. Grig yielded it up, pretending unwillingness and uneasiness, but in reality much relieved.

"I think I may as well go home now," said he. "I'm a bit anxious about my sister. You'll be all right, I suppose."

"Me!" she exclaimed kindly. "Of course, Mr. Grig. I shall be perfectly all right."

She finished Lord Mackworth's article, read it and re-read it. Not a mistake. She made out the bill. She typed the address on the envelope.

At the end she had ample time to make a start on the other work, but she could not or would not bring herself to the new task.

She was content to write a note for Gertie Jackson, shifting all the responsibility on to Gertie.

VI.

Reaction.

"Hello, hello! Who is it?"

"Is that Regent 1067?"

"Yes."

"Is that Lord Mackworth?"

"Speaking. Who is it?"

"Grig's Typewriting office. I'm so sorry to wake you up, but you asked us to. It's just past six o'clock."

"Thanks very much. Who is it speaking?"

"Grig's Typewriting Office."

"Yes. But your name? Miss—Miss—?"

"Oh! I see. Share. Lilian Share—S-h-a-r-e."

"I've got it. Share! I wanted to thank you personally. It's most extraordinarily good-natured of you! Most! Article finished?"

"It's all finished and will be dropped into your letter-box in about a quarter of an hour from now."

"You're just going home, then? You must be very tired."

"Oh, no! I sleep in the day time."

"Well, I hope you'll have a good day's rest." A laugh.

"And I hope now I've wakened you you won't turn over and go to sleep again." Another laugh, from the same end.

"No fear! I'm up now. Out of bed." A laugh.

"Good-bye, then."

"Good-bye. And thanks again!"

Lilian hung up the receiver, smiling. Nothing could have been more banal, more ordinary and nothing more exquisite and romantic than the telephone conversation.

The secret charm of it was inexplicable to her. * * * She saw him standing in the blue-and-crimson pyjamas by the bedside, a form distinguished and powerful. * * * She revelled in his gratitude. * * *

How nice of him to ask her name so that he might thank her personally. He did not care to thank a nameless employe. He wanted to thank somebody. And now she was somebody to him!

Outside, an icy mist floated over wet pavements in the first, dim, sinister unveiling of the London day! Lilian wore a thick, broad, woolen scarf which comforted her neck and bosom, and gave to beholders the absurd illusion that she was snugly enveloped, but the assaulting cold took her in the waist, and she shivered. Her feet began to feel damp immediately.

No. 6a Jermyn street was just round the corner from St. James's street. Lilian hesitated a moment and relinquished her packet into the brass-bordered litter-slit. She heard it fall. She turned away with a jerky gesture.

She had not walked 10 yards when a frightful lassitude and dejection attacked her with the suddenness of cholera. Scarcely could she command her limbs to move.

The ineffable sadness, hopelessness, wretchedness, vanity of existence washed over her and beat her down. Only a very few could be glorious and she was not and never could be of the few! She was shut out from brightness—no better than a ragamuffin looking into a candy window.

VII.

Fate

The next morning Lilian left her lodging at the customary hour of 8:15, to join one of the processions of workers that converged upon central London.

She had slept hours on the previous day and night and life seemd simpler, more promising and more agreeably exciting than usual.

She had convinced herself that the Irish lord would call at the office in person to pay his bill; the mysterious and yet thoroughly understood code that governs certain human relations would forbid him either to post a cheque or to send his man with the money.

Her only fear was that he might already have called. But even if he had already called, he would call and call again, on one good pretext or another, until. * * * Anyhow they would meet. * * *

As the train roared through Down street station, she jumped up to fight her way throught straphangers toward the platform, in readiness to descend at Dover street.

As it happened the train stopped about a hundred yards short of Dover strete, and would not move on. Half an hour elapsed; then, as inexplicably as it had stopped, the train started.

Miss Grig was crossing the anteroom at the moment of Lilian's entry.

"You're 25 minutes late, Miss Share," said Miss Grig coldly. She looked very ill.

"So sorry, Miss Grig," Lilian answered, and offered no explanation.

Useless to explain! Useless to assert innocence and victimisation! Excuses founded on the vagaries of trains were unacceptable in that office, as in thousands of offices.

"Come into my room, Miss Share, will you please?" said Miss Grig.

Lilian, apprehending she knew not what, thought to herself bitterly that, lateness for a delicious shopping appointment or a heavenly appointed to lunch at the Savoy or to motor up the river—affairs of true importance—would have been laughed off as negligible, whereas lateness at this filthy office was equivalent to embezzlement. And she resolved anew, and with the most terrible determination, to escape—at no matter what risks—from the servitude and the famine of sentiment in which she existed.

VIII.

"A Nice Old Slating."

Miss Grig's Christian name was Isabel; it was somehow secret, and never heard in the office; and Felix if he ever employed it, coould only have done so in the sacred privacy of the principal's room. Although by general consent an authentic virgin, Miss Grig had not the air of one.

Rather full in figure, she was neither dessicated nor stiff, and when she moved he rsoft body took on flowing curves, so that clever and experience dobservers could not resist the inference, almost certainly wrong, that in the historic past of Isabel lay hidden some Sabine episode or sublime follw of self-surrender.

She went wrong in the matter of clothes, aspiring after elegance and missing it through a fundamental lack of distinction, and also through inability to concentrate her effect. Her dresses consisted of ten thousand details held together by no unity to conception.

The contours of her visible garments gave the impression that the concealed system of underskirts, cache-corsets, corsets, lingerie, hose and suspenders was of the most complicated, innumerable and unprecedented variety.

The purchase of the typewriting business by Felix had changed Miss Grig's life from top to bottom. It had transformed her from a relic festering in sloth an dfrustration into the eager devotee of a sane and unassailable cult.

The buiness was her perversity, her passion. It was her mystic husband, the spouse to whom she joyously gave long nights of love. Apart from the business, and possibly her brother, she had no real thoughts. The concern as it existed in Lilian's time was her creation. She would sacrifice anything to it, her own health and life, even the lives and health of tender girls. Yes, and she would sacrifice her conscience to it. She would cheat for it!

Lilian found her seated, alone in fluent dignity at the great desk.

"Yes, iss Grig?"

May I enquire?" asked Miss Grig in grave accents not of reproach but of pain, "why you did not put in an appearance yesterday, Miss Share?"

"Well, madam." Lillian answered with surprise and gentle rebuttal. "I stayed here all the night before and I was so tired I slept all day. . . I didn't wake up until it would have been too late to come."

"But you knew I was ill, and that I should count on you upper girls to fill my place. What if you were tired? You are young and strong. In a crisis we don't think about being tired. We just keep on, my dear Lilian."

The address: my dear Lilian' caused misgivings in the employe's bosom. Lilian knew that it was Felix and not Miss Grig who had admitted her to employment, and that Miss Grig had been somewhat opposed to the engagement. She also guessed that Miss Grig objected to her good looks, and was always watchful for an occasion to illustrate her theory that a girl might be too good-looking. Miss Grig had been known to deviate without warning into frightful inclemency.

The culprit offered no deefnse. Theer was n odefense. Assuredly she ought to have run up on the previous evening. Nevertheless, while saying naught, she kept thinking resentfully: "Here I work over 20 hours on end and this is my reward—a slating. This is my reward—a nice old slating!" She was ready to cry.

"And there's something else, Miss Share (Now please don't cry!) When Mr. Grig came up the night before last to tell you that I was unwell, you ought not to have allowed him to stay. You know that he can't stand night work. Men are not like us women—"

"But how could I posibly—" Lilian interrupted.

"You should have seen that he left again at once. It would have been quite easy—especially for a girl like you. The result is that he's been a wreck ever since. It seems he stayed till four o'clock and after. I tried my best to stop him coming at all; but he would come. . . . Please, please, think over what I've said! Thank you."

Lilian felt all the soft, cruel, unopposable force of Miss Grig's individuality. She vaguely and with inimical deference comprehended the secret of Miss Grig's success in business. Youth and beauty and charm, qualities so well appreciated by Felix, so rich in promise for Lilian, were absolutely powerless against the armour of Miss Grig.

And yet Lilian was not cast down. On the contrary, she was quite uplifted and agreeably excited, and her brain was working on lines of which Miss Grig had absolutely no notion whatever.

Miss Grig, obviously truthful, had said that she had tried to prevent her brother from coming to the office on the last night but one. Miss Grig had been ready enough to let Lilian stay till morning without a word. But Felix had told Lilian that he had come to the office to warn her, at his sister's urgent request. Why had Felix lied?

The answer clearly was that he had had a fancy to chat with Lilian alone, without Lilian's suspecting his fancy. And in fact he had chatted with Lilian alone and to some purpose. . . . The answer was that Felix was genuinely interested in Lilian. Further, Miss Grig suspected this interest.

Finally, Miss Grig herself had confessed, perhaps unthinkingly, that Lilian was not without influential attributes. The phrase, "especially for a girl like you," shone in the girl's mind.

To Lilian's practiced sense, there was throughout the office an atmosphere of nervous disturbance. She felt sure that before the end of the day the electrical fluid would concentrate itself in one spot and then explode in a tense, violent, bitter and yet only murmured scene between two of the girls in the large room—unless, of course, she herself and Millicent happened to get across one another.

Gertie Jackson came in. She was a tall, well-made girl of 28, and she held herself rather nicely. She was cheerful, and of an agreeable temper—as placid as a bowl of milk. She loved her work, regarding it as of real importance and she seemed to be entirely without ambition.

Lilian's attitude toward her senior colleague was in various respects critical. In the first place, the poor thing did not realize that she was growing old—already aproaching the precipice of 30! In the second place, though possessed of a good figure and face, she did nothing with these great gifts.

She had no desire to be agreeable; she was agreeable unconsciously, as a bird sings; there was no merit in it. She was not uninterested in men; but she did not talk about them; she twittered about them.

To Lilian, she had the soul of an infant. And she was too pure, too ingenious, too kind, too conscientious; her nature lacked something fundamental, and Lilian felt but could not describe what it was—save by saying that she had no kick in either her body or her soul.

And now Gertie straightened herself, stuck her chest out bravely, according to habit, and smiled a most friendly greeting. Behind the smile lay concealed no resentment against Lilian for having failed to appear on the previous evening, and no moral superiority as a first-class devotee of duty. What lay behind it, and not wholly concealed, was a grave sense of responsibility for the welfare of the business in circumstances difficult and complex.

"Have you seen Miss Grig?" she asked, solemnly.

"Doesn't she look simply frightfully ill?"

"She does," admitted Lilian, "she ought'nt to be here!"

"No!" Gertie agreed. "No! And she isn't going to be here either! Not if I know it! I shall see that she goes back home at lunch-time. She's quarreled already with Mr. Grig this morning about her coming up."

"o you mean at home they quarreled?"

"Yes. He got so angry that he said if she came he wouldn't. But she came all the same."

"Miss G. must have told Gertie all that herself," Lilian reflected. "She'd never be as confidential with me."

"We must do all we can to help things," said Gertie.

"Of course!" agreed Lilian.

Nevertheless, Lilian appreciated profoundly the heroic madness of Miss G. in defying commonsence and her brother for the sake of the beloved business. Gertie saw in Miss G's act nohting but a piece of naughty and sick foolishness. But in contemplating Miss G. Lilian uneasily realized her own precariousness. Miss G. was old and plain (save that her eyes had beauty), and yet was fulfilling her great passion and was imposing herself on her environment.

Miss G. was doing. Lilian could only be; she would always remain at the mercey of someone, and the success which she desired could last probably no longer than her youth and beauty. The transcience of the gifts upon which she must depend frightened her—but at the same time intensified anew her resolves. She had not a moment to lose!

IX.

Collapse.

The two girls had not settled to work when the door of the small room was pushed cautiously open and Mr. Grig came in— as it were by stealth. Evidently he was secreting himself from his sister.

He shut the door, and in the intimacy of the room faced the two girls.

"Is she in there?" he snapped..

"Yes," they breathed. "Oh! Mr. Grig, she ought never to have come out in her state!"

"Well, d—n it, of course she oughtn't!" retorted Mr. Grig. "Didn't I do everything I could to keep her at home?"

"Oh! I know you did!" Gertie agreed. "She told me."

"Look here, one of you must go to her and tell her I'm waiting in a taxi downstairs to take her home, and that I shall stick in it till she gives way, even if I'm there all day. You'd better do it, Miss Jackson!"

"Yes, do, Gertie! You go," Lilian seconded the instruction. Then "What's the matter, Gertie? What on earth's the matter?"

Mr. Grig stepped out of the room on tip-toe.

A long time elapsed. Then the door of the principals' room opened, and Lilian, discreetly passing, saw the backs of Miss Grig and Gertie Jackson. They seemed to be supporting each other in their progress towards the outer door. How had Gertie managed to beat the old fanatic?

After a little pause she went to the window and looked at the pavement below. The taxi was there. Two foreshortened figures emerged from the building. Mr. Grig emerged from the taxi. Miss Grig was induced into the vehicle, and to Lilian's astonishment Gertie followed her. Mr. Grig entered last.

At 3 o'clock she was summoned to the telephone. Mr. Grig was speaking from a call office:

"Miss Jackson ill, too, the doctor says," he announced grimly. "So she has to stay here, a nice handful for me. You'd better carry on. I'll try to come up later. Miss Grig said something about some accounts—I

Lilian replied with soothing sympathy and allegiance and went with dignity into the principals' room, now for the moment lawfully at her mercy.

In the evening, Lilian, after a day's urgent toil, was saturated with bliss. She had dismissed the rest of the staff at the usual hour, firmly refusing to let anybody remain with her. Almost as a favour Millicent had been permitted to purchase a night's food for her.

Just as the clock of St. George's struck 8, it occurred to her that to be found by Mr. Grig in Miss Grig's place might amount to a grave failure in fact; and she removed all the essential paraphernalia to the small room.

She was positive that he would come. She would hear the outer door open; she would hear his steps; and he would see her, faithfully laboring all alone for him.

For this hour she had made a special toilette, with much attention to her magnificent hair. She looked spick and span and enchanting.

Nor was she mistaken. Hardly had she arranged matters in her own room when the outer door did open, and she did hear his steps. The divine moment had arrived. He appeared in the doorway of the room.

He had a marvelous charm and his expression was less worried. He was almost too good to be true. She greeted him with a smile that combined sympathy and welcome, fidelity and womanly comprehension, the expert assistant and the beautiful young Eve.

"I do hope you aren't thinking of staying, Mr. Grig," she said next.

"I'm not going to stay. Neither are you," replied Mr. Grig, curtly. "We'll shut the place up."

"But we're supposed to be always open! Supposing some work does come in! It always does—"

Tears came into Lilian's eyes. She had expected him, in answer to her appeal to him to depart, to insist on staying with her. She had been waiting for heaven to unfold.

And now he had decided to break the sacred tradition and close the office. She could not master her tears.

"Don't worry," he said, in tones charged with tenderness. "You've been splendid. But I had to promise Isabel I'd shut the office tonight. She's in a very bad state, and I did it to soothe her. You know she hates me to be here at nights—thinks I'm not strong enough for it."

"That's not her reason tonight," said Lilian to herself. "I know her reason tonight, well enough!"

But she gave Mr. Grig a look grateful for his exquisite compassion, which had raised him in her sight to primacy among men.

On the way to the Dover Street tube she did not once glance behind her to see if he was following.

X.

Great Joy.

A fortnight passed. The two patients were getting on well. Mr. Grigs attendance grew more regular, but he did little except keep the books and make out the bills; in which matter he displayed a facility that amazed Lilian, who really was not a bit arithmetical.

One day, entering the large room after hours, Lilian saw Millicent typing on a machine not her own. As she passed she read the words: "My darling Gertie. I simply can't tell you how glad I was to get your lovely letter."

And it flashed across her that Millicent would relate all the office doings to Gertie, who would relate them to Miss Grig.

She had a spasm of fear, divining that Millicent would misrepresent her. In what phases had Millicent told that Lilian had sat in Miss Grig's chair. Was it not strange that Gertie had not written to her, Lilian, nor she even thought of writing to Gertie? Too late now for her to write to Gertie!

A few days later Mr. Grig said to Lilian in the small room:

"Your're very crowded here, aren't you?"

Two new girls had been put into the small room, being of a superior sort and not fitted to join the rabble.

"Oh, no!" said Lilian. "We're quite comfortable, thank you."

"You don't seem to be very comfortable. It occurs to me it would be better in every way if you brought your machine into my room."

An impulse, and an error of judgment, on Felix's part! But he was always capricious.

"I should prefer to stay where I am," Lilian answered, not smiling. What a letter Millicent would have written in order to describe Lilian's promotion to the principals' room!

Often, having made a mistake, Felix would persist in it from obstinacy.

"Oh! As you like!" he muttered huffily, instead of recognizing by his tone that Lilian was right. But the next moment he repeated, very softly and kindly: "As you like! It's for you to decide." He had not once shown the least appreciation of, or gratitude for, Lilian's zeal. On the contrary he had been in the main, querulous and censorious.

But she did not mind. She was richly rewarded by a single benevolent inflection of that stirring voice.

She seemed to have forgotten that she was born for pleasure, luxury, empire. Work fully satisfied her, but it was work for him. The mere suggestion that she should sit in his room filled her with deep joy.

In next Sunday's installment Lilian suffers a loss and finds a consoler.

The Civic Improver and The Customary Reward

By George Ade

Mr. Foster plugged for the common weal.

He was strong for that brotherhood of man stuff.

The day was counted lost whose low-descending sun saw nothing put over for the betterment of the race.

Inasmuch as Mr. Foster lived in a mildewed settlement that needed a good many things, including some first-class funerals, his assignment was no tapioca.

For every pansy in this conservative town there was 14 turnips.

You know—the cracker and milk buddies who shave their own necks.

Good moral men who needed the vacuum cleaner.

Mr. Foster's ambition was to shoot a little tobasco into all of the Amoses and Ezras and get them to do something for their home town.

He had a gaudy chance.

When a piece of money ran up against one of these wads, it said good-bye to the vain world for quite a spell.

Mr. Foster was always, on his toes, shouting "Come on, fellows!"

But the slackers and drifters and side-steppers and those who were lame above the neck-band, and the dark-minded doubters, and the swabs that were willing to let well enough alone did not rally to the call with any degree of ginger.

They had to be pushed.

Mr. Foster ever and anon brought out a new assortment of propaganda and started some kind of a campaign.

He kept at the city fathers until they gave him an ordinance requiring every householder to tidy up the alley and chop down the weeds and plant For-Get-Me-Nots around the garbage can.

In a short time some of the leading political economoists were being summoned by the police.

Probably 70 per cent of the population thought that clean-up week was a grand idea but the other 30 put the boob's curse on the instigator and balled him out as a blamed nuisance.

It was the same when he began to Vox Populi the newspapers and demand a new palais de justice.

Long, mournful howls began to float in from the rural districts when the bond issue was proposed.

It required years of nagging, but now the county has an imposing edifice of stone with a precinct captain looking out every window.

The building is surmounted by a gilded weather vane and a debt about the size of the German shortage.

It was a proud day for Mr. Foster and all the paupers when the corner stone was laid.

Everyone seemed to be elated except the tax-payers.

You should have seen the streets of Nubbinville before Mr. Foster circulated his petitions.

The residence district looked ever so flossy after Mr. Foster got through with it but those who had to unbelt for the special assessments left a trail of blood out of the treasurer's office.

Mr. Foster was one of those nervous fuss-budgets.

He seem to think he was wasting time unless he could throw a spasm.

For him life was just one quiver after another.

He would stand at the corner of 4th and Main, with his hands on his hips, and look in four directions and try to think of some new way of jacking up old Sleepy Hollow.

It was our hero who delivered the grand coup de swat to the gin palaces.

He put the town so dry that even a stranger had some trouble in finding a cold one lying on a piece of ice.

Mr. Foster was no bigot. He could do a little mopping up on the quiet but he considered the saloon an evil influence for everyone except himself.

Mr. Foster Saw That the Will of the People Had Been Thwarted.

The local option hurrah no sooner got under way than Brother Foster was right at the head of the push chewing a clove and beating a drum.

Where once the beer garden smiled, the aerdome gave 90 minutes of movie mush for the small sum of a dime.

Traveling men hated to Sunday in the town and the working classes were very sober and unhappy.

When the buzzing benefactor flopped Demon Rum to the sward, with both shoulders down and then sat on him, Sister Crusinberry, Sister Hackleforth and Sister Frothingham all gave him the Chautauqua salute and said wasn't he a nice man.

He was aces and eights with the female vigilantes until he heaved a public opinion and gave a position in his office to a comely grass widow whose goings-on had caused more or less whispering.

Mr. Foster took the advanced stand that a single married woman had to keep on paying her board, even if she had played tag with one or two of the minor commandments.

But the leafy avenue of Nubbinville sheltered many ladies who never had sinned or even been urged.

Their idea of keeping the town free from scandal was to condemn all joyriders to boiling oil.

An actor getting $150 a week and made up around the eyes can help an unfortunate who has stubbed her toe and get away with it.

A good many thing that look reasonable on the stage cannot be put across in a real estate office.

Mr. Foster was humane and hated to see a blonde starve to death.

She was more of a blonde than a typist but she could spell a word right every once in a while and she was grateful.

Mr. Foster carried an approving conscience but he certainly crabbed his rating with Sister Crusinberry and Sister Hackleforth and Sister Frothingham.

They had nothing on him but in any town where the volunteer detectives are well organized, a lack of evidence never yet headed off free discussion.

They could not get his number, so instead of giving him a clean bill they decided he was a fox.

Just while all the pious Maudes and Myrtles were taking a hack at him he broke out in a new place and got on the trail of the gamblers.

Up certain dim stairways were so-called clubs.

Each of these social organizations consisted principally of an ice-box and a kitty.

Many citizens who had been entirely sorrounded by purifying influences for years seemed to prefer these joints to prayer meetings and lectures.

They sat in several nights a week.

The marks were all trying to catch even and the sharks were all trying to send his own brother-in-law to the chair.

The Nonpareil Pleasure club, where the deuces run wild and the extra joker helps to complicate guess work, was right in the shank of a delightful evening when the big bomb fell in the trench.

The district manager of a life insurance company was about to tilt Mr. Purvis, the hardware man (the one who organized the boy scouts,) when in stepped the professional nemesis and a regiment of cops.

The members were peeved beyond expression.

A good many of them seemed to think that if you own stock in a national bank you can't be pinched.

When you take a man of family, who has credit at all the shops and some drag in society, and give him a step-along in the blue wagon you are simply advertising for trouble.

What cared fearless Foster.

Every time he heard the bugle sound and saw a dangerous task ahead, he began to heave under the vest and his temperature went to 100.

Little knots of men stood about and discussed the outrage.

If a trusty leader would have offered himself it would have been a case of away to the blasted oak and a limp form hanging in the moonlight.

The moral element stood by the busy little reformer, except those whose relatives were pulled.

If you will visit the nifty burg of Nubbinville, you will find the Y. M. C. A. established in a scrumptious home and a modern hospital in one of the quite suburbs.

Mr. Foster always maintained that a resident should not be compelled to go away from home to get salvation or have his appendix removed, so he maced the misers and made them dig.

Did the promoter enhance his personal popularity by shaking down the skinflints?

Oh, possibly not! When he started up street with a subscription blank, he was just as popular as spinal meningitis.

It seems inevitable that when a spotless benefactor starts out to disinfect the universe, he must but into politics sooner or later.

Mr. Foster was given to panting because the plain people were being thimble-rigged and hornswaggled and short-changed by the bottle-browed bosses and their hungary hirelings.

If Mr. Foster had stood on any public throughfare and checked off the plain people as they moped by, he would have noted that they were not very deep behind the ears or gleamy in the eyes.

The plain people are worth dying for until you bunch them and give them the cold once-over, and then they impress the impartial observer as being slightly bovine, with a large percentage of vegetable tissue.

The cleanser and sterlizer did not need the salary and he was all hooked up with his own plans, but when he put his ear to the ground and heard the imaginary cry for help from thousands of lowly plebes, who were getting the short end of every divvy, he said it was time for sacrifical devotion, so he came out as a candidate for the legislature.

His card appeared in the evening paper, and early next morning earnest men might have been seen standing over grindstones and sharpening up their snickersnees.

Mr. Foster thought he was popular because he had been militant, constructive and altruistic.

The poor simp had not made a close study of the average citzen who wears a 6 1-2 hat and likes to whittle, or he would have known that the popular Johnny is one who never stirs up the animals.

Among the managers of the party machine were many ex-barkeeps, former poker players, perjuring tax dodgers, and amateur high binders who had been waiting for years to take a poke at the lily-white samaritan.

They passed the word out to the roughnecks and when the convention assembled, it promptly nominated for the legislature a two-fisted hick who raised bull dogs for a living.

Mr. Foster saw that the will of the people had been thwarted.

He decided it was about time some one put a crimp in the professional yeggmen, so he came out as bold as you please, and announced himself as an independent candidate.

His dope was that the sovereign voters would scan his record and find that he had been in the forefront of every movement for the common good and then rush to his support en masse.

It is quite true that the citizens got a line on his past performances, and this is what the investigations netted him:

Sixty per cent of the residents remembered with gratitude his efforts to clean up the overgrown village. The other 40 still nursed a grudge.

Perhaps 30 per cent of the male population continued to dream of the happy days—roght foot on the rail, cheese sandwich in left mitt, a scuttle in the in the right.

At last they were to have a chance to throw the boot into the gink who had first driven them out into the desert.

Did the poker players and their friends circulate quietly and do the rapping? Possibly they influenced only about 10 per cent of the electors, but they certainly lined up the sporting element.

The lady Pinkertons had not forgotten about the hussy who worked in the office.

A good many of them told their husbands not to shame their sons and daughters by voting for a satyr.

Inasmuch as these husbands were already sore at Mr. Foster on three or four outside counts, and a little jealous on account of the blonde, the women had no trouble in organizing about 15 per cent of the registered voters on the moral issue alone.

Estimating that Mr. Foster had offended 30 per cent of the citizens by his demand for street improvements, 60 per cent by his agitation for a new court house, 15 or 20 per cent by his sandbagging for the Y. M. C. A. and hospital, and possibly 25 per cent more by various activities scattered over a period of years, one only has to step to the adding machine and do a little finger work to discover that Mr. Foster's name was Dennis X. Mud with about 240 per cent of the highminded seers to whom he had entrusted his cause.

When the returns were all in, the man who had converted Nubbinville from a mud puddle to a beauty spot looked at the figures and decided that he had been running on the single tax ticket.

Did he become embittered and rave about being knifed by those whom he had pulled out of the ditch?

Not-a-tall.

He simply said, "Oh, Scissors!" and took a vacation.

Turning the business over to a pet nephew, he moved out to a bungalow near the country club which he had forced on the reluctant community.

After saving humanity for years, he took off his soldier clothes and enlisted for a never-ending battle with Colonel Bogey.

Once in a while the town needs some one to grab hold and organize public sentiment and get results.

The committee which has been named for that purpose gets together.

The members sit around a table and look at each other, benumbed and helpless-like, just as sprightly as a congress of jelly fish.

They know that they need a pace-maker with pep and ideas, and they long for the friendly aid of good old Foster, the guy that they harpooned in 18 different places.

Sometimes they ask him to come back and be the village Patsy once more, but he nearly always has an engagement with the pro to go out and overcome a slice.

MORAL: If you have to be burned at the stake, be a good fellow and collect your own fire-wood.

TWELVE GREATEST WOMEN

Here are the 12 greatest American living women in the opinion of a special committee of the National League of Women Voters, appointed to select such a list:

Jane Addams, philanthropist.
Cecilia Beaux, painter.
Carrie Chapman Catt, politics.
Anna Bothford Comstock, natural history.
Minnie Maddern Fiske, stage.
Louise Homer, music.
Julia Lahtroy, child welfare.
Florence Rena Sabine, anatomy.
M. Carey Thomas, education.
Martha Van Rensselaer, home economics.
Edith Wharton, literature.
Anna J. Canton, astronomy.

In making public these names, the committee declared it was "humanly impossible" to know who the really greatest women in the country were and that the eselection had been made on the basis of those who had contributed most in their fields to the better ment of the world.

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

Making Air Travel Height of Luxury

By F. A. Collins

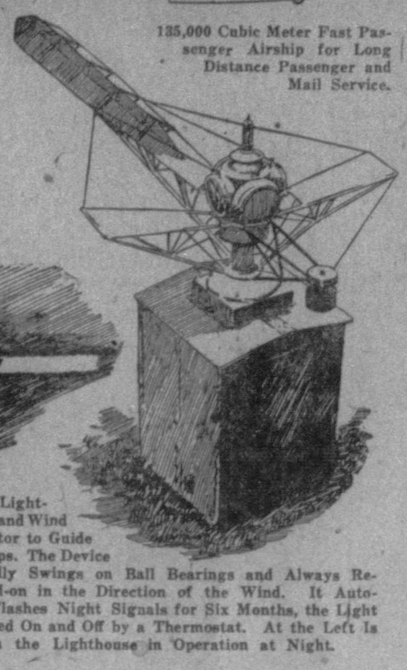

IT will soon be possible to enjoy all the luxuries of modern travel high in the air. The great air liners of tomorrow are to be fitted with luxurious drawing-rooms, dining salons, staterooms and decks like a great steamship. The latest designs of airships have a surprising amount of cabin space, and the rooms set aside for the comfort of air travelers are more spacious than those of a private railroad car or even many steamers.

As the air passenger of tomorrow steps aboard the aerial greyhound he will be shown to a luxurious stateroom which he may have all to himself. It is furnished with a comfortable bed, not a bunk; upholstered chairs, bureaus and tables. The room will be lighted by a broad window, not a port hole, which will command marvellous views of the earth far beneath. The drawing-room of the airship is roomy and luxurious. Comfortable chairs, lounges and cozy corners are found on every hand. The walls are lined with bookcases and plenty of broad windows. The decorations are amazingly elaborate and artistic.

These spacious and elaborate cabins have been designed for the great 175,000 cubic meter fast-passenger Zeppelin airships. They have long since passed their experimental stage. One of them made 195 regular commercial flights in 98 days, carrying 1380 passengers, besides large quantities of mail and baggage. The average speed in flight was 62 miles an hour. Much faster time has been made by other airships.

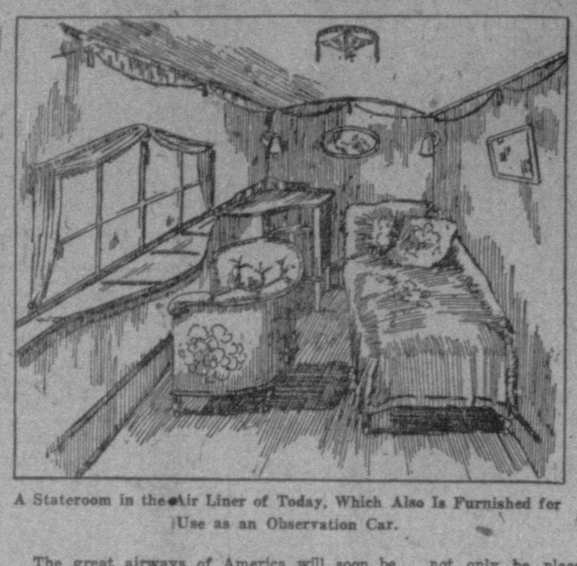

It is estimated that these luxurious air liners will cross the Atlantic in two and a half days. A careful survey has also been made of the air route from Chicago to New York. Judging from the past records, it is believed that this schedule could be maintained with 90 per cent. regularity in the winter and with practically 100 per cent. of the time in the summer months, making for the year an average of 96 per cent. efficiency. The great air liners would fly back and forth on a regular schedule of twelve hours between the two cities.

Giant air craft designed for flying the Atlantic and the American continent are now being built. Such air craft have sailed for 5000 miles under difficult conditions without coming to earth. It is believed that the new airships can sail from Europe to America, return to Europe and again fly to America, thus crossing the Atlantic Ocean three times without once coming to earth. The speed of such craft has been increased from forty to nearly ninety miles an hour. The United States already has a great hangar ready to house the giant airships. Under the direction of the Government land lighthouses are being built to guide the air pilots across the country. In the near future such air travel will be a commonplace.

It Automatically Flashes Night Signals for Six Months, the Light Being Turned On and Off by a Thermostat. At the Left Is Shown the Lighthouse in Operation at Night.

A Stateroom in the Air Liner of Today, Which Also Is Furnished for Use as an Observation Car.

The great airways of America will soon be safeguarded by land lighthouses just as the seacoast is provided with sea beacons. The first of these signal devices has just been installed at Dayton, Ohio. It is a very different looking device than the familiar sea lighthouse. It is so designed that its warning signal can be seen by the air pilot from a great distance, whether far to one side or directly above it.

The new lighting device tells the sky-pilot all he needs to know in order to make a safe landing. It not only indicates where the landing field lies, but indicates the direction the wind is blowing down near the ground. The land lighthouse consists of a square metal structure which holds the apparatus for keeping the light going, and the necessary supply of fuel. On top this little house swings an immense arrow with a broad surface painted pure white. At the head of the arrow are two side surfaces large enough to be visible from a great altitude. The arrow swings so smoothly on a pivot that it constantly sweeps around to the changes of the wind.

At night when the sky-pilot is in danger of losing his way, bright lights shine upon the white surfaces of the arrow which make it clearly visible for a great distance. A remarkable feature of the new land lighthouse is that it works automatically, without being touched by human hands, for six months or more at a time. The powerful lights are controlled by a delicate thermostat, which is affected in turn by the light. Now, when the sun sets and darkness comes on the thermostat quickly turns on the light, which shines upon the white top of the arrow. In the morning when the sun rises the light is automatically turned off.

The new land lighthouse is illuminated by gas supplied from tanks in the little metal house beneath. A supply sufficient to run the light for six months or more is kept on hand. It is only necessary for the men who keep the light going to visit the station once in several months. In the old-fashioned lighthouses along our coasts it is necessary for a keeper to be on the job constantly, and if he falls for a single night to keep the light burning, serious accidents may occur. The important lights are therefore tended by two or even three men. The automatic self-operating light opens a new era in such signals.

It is only a question of time when these land lighthouses will be very common the country over. They will not only be placed on all the landing fields, but will mark the airways across mountains and valleys from one coast to the other. The most powerful of these lights are visible to aviators flying aloft for at least thirty miles. They will be placed at regular intervals so that a flier can always keep on his course no matter how black the night. These powerful lights will lend a new interest to our landscapes.

How the MODERN AIRSHIP Rivals the OCEAN LINER For COMFORT

How QUININE Affects the HEARING

QUININE in certain doses produces marked effects on the auditory apparatus, including a degree of deafness. The disadvantages of the watch-tick as a test for minimum audibility are obvious, nor is the tuning-fork free from error. A. G. Pohlman and F. W. Kranz describe their method for determining minimum audibility as a function of pitch, pointing out, however, the extreme importance, in work on minimum audibility, of bearing in mind the variable factor of attention.

It was found, according to the London Lancet, that a 25 gr. dose of quinine sulphate taken in 5 gr. gelatin capsules at hourly intervals does not materially influence the acuity of hearing. A 45 gr. dose, taken in 15 gr. doses one half-hour apart, produces in five hours pronounced tinnitus—defined as a subjective sound like locusts singing in the trees—a more marked sensation of fulness in the ears, and a pronounced decrease in acuity, particularly for high-pitched sounds (1000-1800). A total dose of 75 gr. taken in sub-divided doses within a few hours, also produces a pronounced decrease of acuity, appearing to affect the lower part of the scale (256-1000) more markedly than the upper (1000-1800). It would, however, be difficult to be sure of the amount of the drug absorbed. It was found that the amount of actual loss of acuity of hearing was not proportionate to the loudness of the tinnitus. After hearing returned to normal, the tinnitus continued for at least 24 hours.

To KEEP COOL by CANNED COLD

SCIENTISTS at the Bureau of Standards in Washington have just discovered how to produce a temperature of 425 degrees below zero, freezing hydrogen, the most difficult of all gases to condense, except helium. This degree of coldness, which was the result of experiments in charge of Dr. C. A. Kanott, a chemist, broke all records at the government's experimental laboratory, being 115 degrees colder than liquid air.

Practical minds at once sought to turn the "canned blizzard" achievement into channels to benefit suffering humanity when the mercury mounts to 110 degrees above, under a summer sun.

The experiment was accomplished by compressing hydrogen under a high pressure. The result left the gas "warm"—about 200 degrees below zero—after which it was chilled with liquid air, at 310 below zero. An expansion process which followed produced the record coldness.

Dr. Kanott says that extreme cold has a curious effect on gases and metals. Some metals, which under normal conditions resist the flow of electricity, lose this resistance entirely under low temperatures.

Experiments with liquid air permitted extraction of oxygen and hydrogen from the ordinary atmosphere leaving helium which could then be collected and utilized. Helium freezes under temperature of approximately 447 degrees below zero, a degree not yet accomplished at the Bureau of Standards.

"The experiment with hydrogen was conducted to satisfy our curiosity," explains Dr. Kanott. "We can't visualize what the accomplishment will lead to—but undoubtedly there will be far-reaching consequences from a scientific and practical standpoint.

"By condensing gases we are able to separate various elements and make minute studies of the properties and the constitution of matter. We are getting down to the basic elements that go to make up the universe."

Are WOMEN HEALTHIER and STRONGER Than MEN?

NATURE, it would seem, is more careful of girls than of boys, with the result, as vital statistics show, that women live longer and are healthier than men. Every disease, with one exception, is said to be more dangerous to boys than to girls. For, while many more boys are born than girls, fewer reach maturity. There is, for the boy babies, what Darwin called "a struggle for the survival of the fittest," which extends right through the nursery days.

Few people know how fierce is this battle which the boy must fight in order to make good his place in the world. For some reason some have the idea that the chances are about equal between the sexes, but figures taken from official reports will show how incorrect such a view is.

For example, there has not been one year since 1831, according to a medical authority writing in London Answers—that is, since these figures were first collected—in which the death-rate of women has not been less than the death-rate of men. Just glance at this table, which was taken at random:

Year.	Death-rate for Men.	Death-rate for Women.
1896.....	18.1 per 1000	16.1 per 1000
1905.....	16.3 per 1000	14.4 per 1000
1911.....	15.6 per 1000	13.7 per 1000
1921.....	13.0 per 1000	11.3 per 1000

"Our world grows steadily more and more healthy," this writer goes on to say, "as these figures show; but always woman reaps the chief benefit. Not only that, but she 'keeps her lead' in the most astonishing way. The difference between 18.1 and 16.1, the figures for 1896, is 2; the difference between 13.0 and 11.3, the figures for 1921, is 1.7. In other words, there has been only the smallest fractional change in woman's 'health handicap' during a quarter of a century. Yet in that time the death-rates for both men and women have fallen by five points.

"But it is not only the general death-rate which shows this strange advantage that women enjoy. In the case of almost every disease she fares better than man. When she is a small girl the difference is often very great. For example, in the year 1921, sixty-six boy babies out of every million people alive died of measles; only fifty-three girl babies out of every million died of this disease. Influenza and scarlet fever also were much more severe among boys and men than among girls and women.

"It is much the same with accidental and violent forms of death. As a general rule, almost three times as many men commit suicide each year as women.

"There were, too, many more fatal accidents to men than women, both in trains and in the streets. If a man and a woman are riding in a train which comes to grief the man has more chances of being killed than the woman. This is, indeed, a great mystery. But it is a fact.

"Stranger still, there are always many more deaths from 'old age' among women than among men. On the other hand, being a woman has a few special risks. There is the chance—very remote—of being murdered. Nearly twice as many men as women are murdered.

"On the other hand, women's clothes are very much more apt to catch fire than those of men, and statistics show that three times as many women are burned to death as men.

"The ordinary woman has a much better chance than the ordinary man—as, indeed, is shown by comparing the numbers of widows and widowers.

"Is there any explanation of this remarkable state of affairs? A short time ago a very ingenious one was suggested. Nature, it was said, loves hardy, vigorous men. Consequently, while she makes man much stronger than woman in a physical sense, she makes him weaker in regard to disease. The result is that only the toughest boys grow up to manhood.

"On the other hand, toughness is not so needful in women. Their work is in the home or in sheltered occupations, and they can usually take care of themselves in a way which is impossible for their brothers and husbands.

"Unfortunately this explanation does not fit all the facts. Because, even when women lead outdoor lives and share in all the hardships of men, they still remain healthier.

"The last few years have brought millions of girls to work in offices and other places, where once only men worked. Yet, as I have shown, there has been no change in the figures of the death-rates. The truth would seem to be that women are really born stronger.

"It is well known, for example, that men stand pain far less heroically than do women. A man will face death without flinching; but his nervous system is not to be trusted when he has to face toothache. In other words, he is more highly strung than his sisters—though his sisters do not very often realize this. A delicate instrument is easily broken. Most doctors have seen cases in which, in the presence of some great strain or shock, a husband has broken down while his wife remained quite calm. Indeed, I would go so far as to say that this is the general rule."

SPANISH MOSS for MATTRESSES

IN the bayou districts of Louisiana there has been developed a unique industry from which the state derives an income of $3,000,000 yearly by converting the picturesque but tree-destroying "Spanish moss" into a cheap substitute for horsehair for use in mattresses and upholstery. Each year Louisiana ships from 2000 to 5000 carloads of ginned moss, bringing from 6 to 11 cents a pound.

Collecting Spanish Moss in Bayous of Louisiana.

Spanish moss is the name given by Spanish settlers to an epiphyte or "air plant," gray in color, which hangs from the tree branches in the South, looking like enormous beards. Although like an ordinary parasite in that it grows over the tree, it does not derive its nutrition from the tree, but from the air.

The best Spanish moss grows to a length of four or five feet. Most of it is gathered after cypress trees are felled for the sawmills. A writer in Popular Science Monthly gives the following description of the method of gathering the moss: In the bayou district, moss gatherers float under trees in flat boats and drag the air plants down with long poles. Then they carry the moss in bundles to their homes, where they heap it in big piles, sprinkling these with water, which causes the outer bark to rot off. After it has been thus cured, the moss is sent to a ginnery, where it is run through a set of double rollers equipped with teeth, a fan blower and a baler. The rollers crush the sticks, teeth comb out the moss, while blowers dry the moss and blow away the trash.

How INDIAN WOMEN Make TAPIOCA From the CASSAVA, a POISONOUS PLANT

ARE you who are accustomed to the delicious puddings made from tapioca able to tell its source? Probably not one person in a thousand knows that tapioca is made from the tuberous root of the cassava plant, a tropical shrub about six feet in height.

Describing the preparation of tapioca, Charles W. Mead of the American Museum of Natural History says: Two species of cassava are cultivated: the bitter cassava and the sweet cassava. The first, the more useful of the two, contains hydrocyanic acid and cannot be eaten in its natural state, but its harmful qualities are quickly dissipated by heat. This is the variety from which tapioca is made. The sweet variety is innocuous and is used as a table vegetable. Both the bitter and sweet cassava had their origin in tropical South America. The former has been introduced into many tropical countries and is very extensively cultivated in the western part of tropical Africa and in the Malay Archipelago. Its starch, in the form of tapioca, is a staple export from these regions as well as from Brazil and other South American countries. This starch is sold also under the name of Brazilian arrowroot. The roots are sometimes sliced, dried and grated, to be made into cassava bread.

The juice expressed from the poisonous cassava is converted into a beverage by heating and fermentation, and by evaporation and concentration, with the addition of various aromatics, it becomes "cassareep," the favorite condiment of the South American Indians. Cassareep is imported in considerable quantities into Holland and Britain. It is the basis of the favorite West Indian dish called pepper pot.

In making tapioca, the Indian woman takes a large piece of cassava root in both hands and rubs it back and forth on a board studded with hundreds of sharp pebbles until the root is reduced to pulp. When a sufficient quantity has been grated, the next step is to press as much water out of it as possible. For this purpose a long, narrow tube of basketwork, called a tipiti, is used. This basket work press has a loop at either end. The pulp is forced into the press, which is then hung up by one of the loops. Through the lower loop is inserted a long, stout pole which in turn is run under some convenient object that serves as a fulcrum. The woman thereupon sits on the free end of the pole, her weight stretching out the press and forcing the liquid through the interstices of the basket work. This liquid is caught in a pottery vessel and is then prepared in the manner stated above.

The wet mass is taken from the press and spread on a very large, flat dish of pottery having a raised rim, under which a fire is built. If stirred rapidly, the preparation is prevented from caking into large masses and quickly agglomerates into small, irregular pellets, the tapioca of commerce.

Does Your SENSE of TOUCH Ever PLAY You FALSE?

DID you know that besides optical illusions, there are illusions of feeling? The proof is very simple. Take a small round pellet about the size of a pea. Cross the middle finger over the first finger in such a way that the tip of the middle finger is on the thumb side of the first finger. Now insert the pellet between the crossed fingers and roll it about the surface of the table. You will be astounded to find that you distinctly feel two objects about half an inch apart.

The explanation of the experiment, according to Popular Science Monthly, rests in the fact that the pellet is touched by the opposite sides of the two fingers, and, consequently, two sensations of touch arise instead of one.

Mountains Under the Sea

NOT many people know that just as there are mountains on dry land, so there are mountains beneath the sea, some of them as high as the peaks in the Alps and the Andes.

One of the biggest of these submarine mountains is Laura Ethel, situated in mid-Atlantic. It is over 12,000 feet high, its summit being less than 200 feet below the surface.

So often has this mountain been explored by oceanographers, with the aid of sounding apparatus, that its characteristics are as well known as those of Ben Nevis or Snowdon, although it has never been seen.

In the same locality is another great sea mountain, Mt. Chaucer, first discovered seventy years ago. Its summit is only just over 100 feet below the surface, while its height is 10,000 feet. The summit of another peak, Mt. Placentia, is only 30 feet below the surface.

A mountain range whose peaks are named after members of the Royal Family, is another little-known feature of the Atlantic bottom. Every one of its ten peaks is higher than Snowdon.

The real "Davy Jones's locker" is to be found at the foot of the Faraday Hills, in the South Atlantic. It is estimated that at the base of the highest peak in the range, Sainthill, there lie no fewer than five thousand wrecks.

Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Warren's Dominant Sister Brings Rancorous Discord to a Sunday at Home

"This won't stick!" whined Bobbie, at his favorite diversion of pasting pictures in an old blank book. "No wonder, it's all hard." His mother got the bottle. "Helen haven't you any decent mucilage? How do you expect him to use this?"

"I'll try to soften it," propitiatingly. "It gets hard so quick."

"Not if you keep the top on," combatted Carrie. "Don't you know how to keep mucilage?" with her most exasperating, instructive air. "This is no good anyway. Haven't you any library paste?"

"I gave him a tube this morning." Helen's quiet retort concealed her flaming mutiny. "He squeezed it all out and threw it down the dumb waiter."

In the pantry her hands fairly trembled as she ran the hot water over the bottle.

She was sick—sick all over with suppressed resentment. Every nerve tense with antagonism, her head hot, throbbing, her hands and feet like ice.

Her sister-in-law's censorious know-it-all attitude always rankled. Today it was unbearable and incessant stream of dominant criticism.

All through dinner and all through the long afternoon, the very air had been charged with discord.

Controlling the tremor in her voice, Helen called from the pantry door,

"Warren, come here a moment!" Then, when he strode in, "Dear DONT ask her to stay for supper! I've a splitting headache—I just can't—"

"Well, you don't have to fuss—just set out some cold stuff?"

"But they were here for dinner—surely that's enough. She almost drives me wild! She's done nothing but find fault. I'll be ill if she stays!"

"Now what's all this about? Every time Carrie comes, you get all worked up. If my sister can't come here without your throwing a fit—"

"Oh, you don't know how hard I try to control it! I try not to mind what she says. I try not to argue, but everything I say she disputes. Dear, she just POISONS me!"

"Huh, just your imagination. You look for trouble every time she comes."

"Oh, I don't! You never notice the things she says! The moment she entered, she began to criticize. Didn't you hear her? Asked if we were cooking cabbage—said the whole place smelt like it!"

"Why, Carrie didn't mean anything by that," with a dismissing shrug. "Just her way. If you're going to get unset over every little thing—"

"No—no, that was just the beginning. She's kept it up ever since. Sh-sh, here she comes!"

"I'm so thirsty—that soup was all salt!" Carrie took a glass from the pantry shelf. "You use too much salt, Helen. Makes your bones brittle. Look how that faucet drips—needs a new washer."

"It doesn't drip if you turn it all the way," Helen tried to seem intent on the softening mucilage.

"Oh, you only painted the woodwork in here?" a critical glance about. "The walls certainly need it. I'd have them white—this stuff always looks dirty."

"We'll do that in the spring," Helen jabbed the brush in the bottle.

"You keep all those old magazines! Don't you know they bring mice?"

"The Salvation Army's coming for them," a vehement stab at the mucilage.

In the library Helen started to cut pictures from the fashion magazine By devoting herself to Bobbie she hoped to avoid further controversy with her sister-in-law.

But Carrie, not content with Warren for an audience, persisted in dragging Helen into the conversation, only to combbat and argue her every remark.

"I don't wanna paste no more," fretted Bobbie.

"Would you like to play dominoes?" suggested Helen.

"No. Don't like domonoes. I'm hungry. Want some cake."

"No, Pettie, you can't have any now," admonished his mother. "Aunt Helen will give you some for supper."

They were going to stay! Helen's scissors slashed the fashion plate.

"Oh, look what you've done," bawled Bobbie. "You cut off her head."

"Here's another. Now that's all—Aunt Helen must go get supper."

"Ain't Nora goin' to get it?" alert at the prospect of food.

"No. Nora went out after dinner. Aunt Helen must do the work now."

"Work? You don't call Sunday supper work?" flouted Carrie. "Last Sunday we had the Duncans. I got supper for eight of us. Didn't take me any time, but, of course, I have everything systemized."

"Pick up all the scraps, Bobbie," ignoring Carrie's remarks. "Yes, you can come out in the kitchen, if you'll be quiet. Aunt Helen has a headache."

"You're always complaining, Helen. I'm never here that you haven't some ache. It's a bad habit to get into."

"YOU never complain, I suppose?" unable to suppress this retort. "You never mention your sciatica?"

"There's nothing imaginary about sciatica. If you had it as I do, you'd be in bed. Last week I suffered so with my right side that I—"

But Helen hurried out to the kitchen, leaving Carrie to detail her symptoms to Warren's grunted unresponsiveness.

It was only a quarter of six, but since they were staying for supper, Helen was determined to have it early, hoping they would leave soon after.

"Gimme a piece of cake," begged Bobbie, as she opened the ice-box.

"Well don't get the crumbs all over," cutting a slice from the chocolate cake. "Keep it on the little plate. No, Pussy Purr-Mew won't eat cake."

Cold roast lamb, the potatoes warmed over, the peas and carrots made into a salad, some canned pears and cake. Would that be enough? Oh, yes, there was that jar of pimento cheese—and she would open a bottle of olives.

"Gonna have lemonade?" demanded Bobbie, as she cut a lemon.

"NO. Aunt Helen uses lemon juice for the salad instead of vinegar."

"Why do you?" his cheeks bulbous with cake.

"It's better for your tummy."

"How'de you getting along?" Carrie swished in. "Anything I can do?"

"Oh, no thank you," nervously. "You stay and entertain Warren. I'll have everything ready in a few minutes."

"Let me mix that salad dressing—you always make it too sour. Where do you keep your oil? This it? Italian? French oil is much the best."

"We don't like it as well," forcing back a sharp retort.

"Is that what you mix it with?" taking down the egg beater. "Oh, it's all rusty—it's been put away wet. I can't use this."

"Don't bother, Carrie, PLEASE don't!" every nerve taut. "You go back to the library. You'll get something on that new gown."

"Oh, I never get anything on my clothes," airily. "Is this salad washed? Why do you always get Romaine? We like lettuce much better."

"Well, we don't!" Helen emptied the peas into a stew-pan.

"When ARE you going to get this glass pot in?" taking out the salad bowl. Carrie examined the cracked glass in the cupboard door.

"For Bobbie to break again?" Helen stirred the peas with needless vigor.

"Did he break it? Oh, the time he had the mumps. But you didn't mean to—did you, darling? That was a mean old ball."

"Bobbie, don't pull at that ice-box handle," cautioned Helen. "It's loose now."

"It's been loose ever since I can remember," scrutinizing a nick in the salad bowl. "You never have anything fixed, Helen. I don't let things run down. It's much more expensive in the end."

Helen wanted to scream. Instead, she drove the cork down in the bottle of olives she was opening.

For the next half hour Carrie's invidious criticisms were continuous.

Supper at last on the table, they finally sat down, Helen all a-quiver with nervous tension.

"This ain't high enough," Bobbie squirmed fretfully in his chair.

"Here, mother'll fix it," doubling under him Helen's best sofa cushion. "You'd think Aunt Helen would keep a little high-chair for you."

"Any fat for Bobbie?" Warren was carving the cold lamb.

"No, he mustn't have fat. Is that knife sharp? Doesn't cut like it."

"Never have a decent knife to carve with," grunted Warren.

"Why don't you have your butcher sharpen it? Helen, you ought to keep a list of things to be done, as I do. It's the only way to keep things up. I—"

"If you'll excuse me," Helen rose from the table. "I'll go lie down. I've a headache—I don't care for any supper."

"You give way to those headaches too much. You ought to try—"

But not waiting for the rest of Carrie's advice, Helen almost ran into her own room and closed the door.

On the bed, she buried her face, her hands gripping the pillow.

If she had stayed at the table another moment she would have shrieked.

How would it end? How much longer would she endure these Sunday visits from his maliciously aggravating sister?

It was effecting her health! Just such efforts at suppression had left her weak and nervous for days.

And Warren WOULD not see it.

She had not moved, her face was still hidden, when the door opened.

"Well, we're off! I want to catch that 7:40. The 9:10 makes us so late. Now, you'd better eat something. No sense giving away to a headache. Really, Helen, you pity yourself too much. I told you—"

"Oh, please, Carrie, not any more now. I just CAN'T stand it!"

"Can't stand what?" acidly. "What do you mean?"

"Nothing, only if you don't mind just going!"

"Well I must say, Helen, you certainly ARE queer! You never want to be told ANYthing. You never will take advice. Whenever I try to help, you fly off like this."

"Better hustle if you want to make that 7:40!" called Warren.

"Right away. Come on, Bobbie, brush your coat—that cat's always shedding. Well, good-bye Helen. Don't baby yourself so much and you'll be a lot better off!"

Mr. Dooley on Old Age

By FINLEY PETER DUNNE

"I'm gettin' old," said Mr. Hennessy. "I had me sixtieth birthday, yisterday."

"I wudden't have said ye were within 10 years iv 60," said Mr. Dooley. "I bet Hogan last year that ye were 71. But I might've known betther. Whin a man gets to be over 70 he boasts iv his age. Whin he passes 80 he's very liable to lie about it. An' whin he's 90 he will throw his wig in th' face iv anny man who insinyates that he ain't th' oldest man in th' wurruld.

"Wan iv th' most savage combats I've iver had in this place was between old man Casey an' Hogan's father. They's both about 82. There's a month or two's difference between thim, but in champeenship records iv this kind a month counts like inches in th' broad jump.

"A man iv 80 looks down on a man iv 85, receives his callow opinyons with a supercilyous smile, an' if he talks too much tells him to shut up.

"To hear these two athleets discuss their scores ye'd think they were Matt McGrath and Pat Ryan talkin' about th' hammer throw. They started in be conceedin' that Mathusalem was not in their class at all. Their gin'ral idee was that he had died iv cholery infantum. But whin it comes to camparin' ages nayether wan iv thim wud admit that th' other come within five years iv bein' as fine a man as himself.

"They proved their age be th' historical ivints they'd seen. I niver knew before that night that Misther Hogan was at th' battle iv Waterloo or that Misther Casey had been wan iv Robert Immitt's pallbearers. Misther Casey was muttherin' somethin' about bein' an aidy campy f'r King James at th' battle of th' Boyne whin his grandson who's in th' fire department come to take him home.

"Whin he had gone ol' man Hogan says to me: 'Young man, that fellow is an imposter. Don't ye iver thrust him. He's claimin' to be 90 an' I bet he's not a day over 70 if he's that.' 'How old ar-re ye, Misther Hogan?'

"I didn't miss th' ball be much—"

Says I. 'I was bor-rn on th' eight day iv March, 1840, he says.

"It's pleasant to think that on'y very young men an' very old men pritind to be older than they ar-re. Th' attimpt iv a young fellow to wheedle th' hair into growin' on his upper lip an' Misther Hogan pritindin' he is 90 ar're th' same idee. They know ye can't amount to anything onless ye ar-re old.

"Iv coorse ye'er son an' Misther Hogan have a diff-rent theery iv what old age is old age. Ye'er boy thinks that whin a man gets to be 40 th' neighbors ought to take him out in th' alley, put a bag over his head, and hit him with a hammer. Old man Hogan ain't sure that a man ought to vote onless he is at laste 80. It's about that time iv life that th' bones ar-re hardened, th' head closes up an' stops growin,' an' a citizen is fit to be enthrusted with th' jooties in life.

Old Age a Sign of Immortality.

"'Tis strange how you look down on thim that are younger thin us. It's th' same with a man iv 60 as it is with a school boy iv 16. Nayther iv thim thinks th' fellows under him amounts to annything. It shocks me to read that so manny valyable lives shud iv been enthrusted durin' th' war to Gin'ral Grant, who was on'y 40.

"During the last republican convintion I was partyred to see th' son iv an old frind iv mine come out on th' platform to make a speech. I thought th' convintion had took a recess an' they'd brought him in to entertain thim with a raycitation, or maybe he was a boy soprano.

"Says I to mesilf: 'Poor little fellow, it's too bad to make him do such thricks. Infant prodjidies niver come to anny good end. His mother ought to be ashamed iv hersilf.' But whin he spoke I discovered that the little rogue had a voice like a thrombone an' instead iv singin' 'Silver Threads Amongst th' Gould, he was debatin' a pint iv order again' a vitrin iv politics who looked afraid iv him.

"I afterwards larned that th' spiled darlin' was th' father iv a family, th' head iv a dillygation, th' author iv siv'ral iv th' most consarvitive planks in th' platform, an' called Elihoo Root 'Elihoo,' th' same as I do, who ar-re his akel.

"Middle age is th' only age. If I live to be a million I'll be as old as I was whin I was 50. I reminber well th' day whin Father Time laid his hands on me. He'd been foolin' with me hair f'r some time, whitenin' th' edges iv it an' pullin' out a spear or two iv vigytation now an' thin.

"But I give him no heed till he got tinsil iv warnin' me through me head an' made an attack on me legs. I mind well th' day whin I got me notice I was no longer immortal.

"I've told ye that in me time I was a gran' futball player. I suppose I cud kick a futball as far as anny gun in th' wurruld end fire a shell. 'Twas f'm watchin' me kick that th' navy got their idee iv long-distance shootin'.

"Wan day I was out in the lots an' I see a bunch iv fellows playin' at futball. Says I to thim: 'Stand aside boys, an' lave an ol' champeen show ye how to do it. I'll kick it to'rds th' west so it won't fall into th' lake. Some iv ye had bethter get on a car now an' go afther it.'

"Thin, whin all was r-ready, I threw off me coat, took a short run, an' give a mighty kick. I didn't miss th' ball be much, th' spectators said not more thin a yard or two, but I missed it, an' a man f'm Barnum's circus come around th' nex' day an' offered me a large sum iv money if I cud repeat in public th' back summersault that I done. He said it was th' most clarin' act he had iver witnessed.

"Dock O'Leary, who attinded me, said I landed on me occyput. 'I niver knew I had wan,' says I. 'It's extthreme density has saved ye'er life,' says he. 'Am I mortally injared?' says I. 'Can ye pull me through?' says I.

"I can put ye on ye'er feet, that's all,' says he. 'Ye'll niver be th' same man ye were,' says he. 'Ye have a common an' incurable disease. I have it mesilf. Ye're middle aged. It's lucky f'r ye that 'twas on'y turyin' to kick a futball that brought this on ye,' he says. Ye might have fallen in love,' he says. 'I can fix up ye'er leg,' he says, 'but I couldn't do much with ye'er heart,' he says.

"It was a gr-reat shock to me, an' f'r a year or two I cast a gloom over ivry assimbly that I wint into. I thought I see a greedy glint in th' eye iv Gavin, th' undhertaker, whin I passed his place. Whin Mulligan, th' marble cutter, came around to see me I thought he was mixin' basines with pleasure. I made me will, cuttin' off me nearest rilitives. But grajally th' fellin' wore off an' I become young again. I ain't arrived yet at th' time when I will boast iv me age, but I don't mind tellin' ye I'm—"

"I know how old ye ar-re to a second," said Mr. Hennessy.

"O, do ye?" said Mr. Dooley. "Well niver mind. Anyhow, old age isn't the worst thing that happens to man. If he hasn't as many expectations as he had, he hasn't so many years. A young fellow is warn'd about a thousand things that don't bother an old man at all. Whin we get along in years we lose a lot in apptites, but we don't miss thim. If we have no hopes we have pleasant mim'ries.

Years of a Boss—Under Two or Over Fifty.

"Havin' larned that I cudden't kick a futball, I no longer wanted to kick it. I'm willing to stand on th' side an' look on while me frindly mim'ry tells me pleasant lies about how good I was in me day.

"I no longer jump of a movin' car. I have th' full value iv me nickel out iv th' heartless monopoly be holdin' th' car while I get down wan leg at a time. If I go to cross th' sthreet to see Hogan an' a flock iv autymobiles comes along, I say to mesilf: 'I don't want to see Hogan at all. I'll go to see Hinnissy.'

"I can visit th' ladies without fear iv entanglement, f'r if I'm hopeless they're harmless. I'm lookin' for'ard to th' day whin I'll become avaricyous. Fr'm what I've seen and heard, avarice is a fine, absorbin' passion, and many an' ol' fellow is as happy with his arm around his bank account as he was sleigh ridin' with his first girl.

"An' best iv all, I want to be a boss, an' no man can be a boss who's undher two or over fifty. It's a fine thing to be able to set back in a chair an' have people appeal to ye f'r an opinyon on something that ye don't know annything about an' thin watch thim get into throuble whin they follow ye'er advice. Manny a man that cudden't direct ye to the dhrug store on th' corner whin he was 30 will get a respictful hearin' whin age has further impaired his mind.

"Besides it don't seem that there ar-re anny old men nowadays. It used to be that a man iv 50 was thought to be too seenile f'r anny useful wurruk. But nowadays ye'll see dashin' young la-ads iv 65 full iv Boolgarin' butthermilk wallopin' a golf ball aroun' th' lot.

"They take bethter care iv themselves thin they used to. In th' old days whin their teeth wint they followed immejately afther. But in our time they live long enough afther their nachral set ar-re gone to think iv their foster teeth as their own.

"Very few old men iver get hurted in accidents. They take no chances. It's th' same as with sailors at sea. Thim that know how to swim ar-re thim that get drowned."

"Why," said Mr. Hennessy, "ye'd give annythin' to be 25 again."

"I wudden't" said Mr. Dooley. "Why shud I want to grow old again?"

Potash and Perlmutter

By Montague Glass

POTASH & PERLMUTTER DISCUSS THE LIFE OF A CLUBMAN

ABE

MAWRUSS

"Yes, Mawruss, if club men was to get served to them at home the kind of foods which is served to them at their clubs, y'understand, they would kick up a terrible row with their wives and threaten that if things didn't improve they would eat downtown in future at their clubs," Abe Potash declared one day recently, "which, Gott sei dank, Rosie would be home tomorrow from visiting her sister in Chicago and I wouldn't have to use any more time of the two weeks' card Charles Lickman give me to the Clionian club."

"Why, I always thought the cooking was so good at the Clionian club," Morris Perlmutter observed.

"So it is, for a club," Abe replied. "Take for instance the coffee at the Clionian club, Mawruss, and you wouldn't believe how much better it is than the coffee at the Knitgoods club, which whereas the coffee at the Knitgoods club tastes like it would have been made out of the scraping from old briar pipes mixed with stove polish and blacking y'understand, you couldn't really say what the coffee at the Clionian club tastes like, except that it don't taste like coffee."

"But Lickman said the special dollar and a quarter dinner served on a blue plate was always good," Morris remarked.

"About the blue plate being good, I couldn't say,—not being in the china and glassware business, Mawruss, but it don't make no difference what color the plate is, Mawruss, when someone serves me goulash and canned peas, it could be resting on solid gold even and that wouldn't soften the blow so far as I am concerned."

"Why should they serve you canned peas now, when fresh peas is on the market?" Morris asked.

"In a club dining-room, Mawruss, they serve canned peas at every season of the year with every kind of food," Abe observed. "In fact even if they had fresh peas on the bill and you was so crazy about them for a change, that you ordered one big portion of them without anything else, they would serve the fresh peas on a plate together with a side order of canned peas in a saucer."

"But the bedrooms ain't so bad," Morris said. "Anyhow that's what Lickman told me."

"About the bedrooms I couldn't say," Abe continued. "I couldn't get a bedroom on account they was all occupied by non-resident members who were regular occupants of the bedrooms. In fact some of them non-resident members of the Clionian club has been occupying them bedrooms on and off for over two years, so the steward told me—only giving them up for one night every two weeks so as to get around the by-law covering the case."

Stationery and Towels for the Homes.

"Then how can they get away with calling themselves non-resident members?" Morris inquired.

"Well, practically every New York club has a rule that a man whose home is over 40 miles away from New York city, can come in as a non-resident member, and some of the non-resident members of the Clionian club ain't what you would actually call home-bodies," Abe replied. "And even at that, Mawruss, if New York City should annex any more territory in the way of a strip extending less than one mile into Westebester county, it would right away change the class of membership of several of them non-resident members, so that it would jump their annual dues fifty dollars."

"But I thought that members of clubs was supposed to live up to the rules," Morris said.

"So they are, Mawruss, but club rules ain't enforced so particular that the club treasurer is going to hire a taxicab for the express purpose of checking up the forty mile qualification for non-resident members living in Westchester county, or the New Jersey suburban towns," Abe said.

"Also, Mawruss, club members lives up to the rules more in the spirit than in the letter, and the spirit of club rules varies in percentage just as it does in imitation Gordon gin, so that under a rule which says that newspapers must not be removed from the club lounge, y'understand, the place to look for morning papers in any club after nine o'clock, is on the floor of the dining room.

Furthermore, Mawruss, I never knew that Eddie Jonas was a member of the Clionian club till I read about it on a towel in the bath room of his flat on 115th street."

"And yet I remember when Eddie Jonas got into the Clionian club, he seemed to consider that it was an honor or something," Morris said.

"Sure I know," Abe agreed, "A whole lot of club members are so proud of belonging to a club that they steal the club stationery and take it home to write personal letters on it."

As For the Conversation

"Well, I suppose they figure that they should ought to get anyhow a little stationery for their money," Morris observed, "which I joined a club once by the name of the Capitol Athletic club on account there was a membership drive and I had taken on pretty near 10 pounds in less than four months. The entrance fee was $200 and the annual dues a $150, and before I could even look at the gymnasium, got the grippe and lost not only the 10 pounds I gained but three or four pounds besides.

"The consequence was, Abe, that six months after I joined, I went into the club one day and bought a 30c cigar, and after figuring that the cigar had cost me $350.30, I sent in my resignation.

"A hundred and fifty dollars a year is too much to pay for the privilege of going out and spending your evenings at a place which is pretty near as comfortable as your own home would be if you kept boarders and had to be polite to them when you didn't feel like it. I can neglect my wife and children for less money and with more enjoyment by playing pinochle at private houses, and at the end of the year when I figure up my losses, I don't have to add to them twenty dollars for a Christmas fund."

"Furthermore, Abe, I long ago came to the conclusion that I ain't cut out for a club member," Morris continued. "I've got to be a good enough mixer with people I don't like during business hours, without I should inconvenience mystelf in the night time by trying to be popular with people who ain't going to buy a dollar's worth of goods in return. Also I spent one evening at the Clionian club with Charles Lickman a couple of months ago and while I enjoy a little intelligent conversation once in a while, Abe, two hours entirely devoted to the current price of Scotch whiskey, y'understand, is to my mind about a hundred and twenty minutes too long."

"Well, the conversation ain't improved any since you was there, Mawruss," Abe declared. "Once in a while some member will vary it by telling a story which disgusted me as long ago as Cleveland's administration, but on the whole, Mawruss, the talk in the Clionian club don't get no farther away from the price of booch than by some member telling about how he had a friend who met a man in an extra-fare club smoker who had a friend go blind from buying for two dollars pint of rye whiskey from a bellboy in a prominent Chicago hotel.

"In fact, Mawruss, my opinion is that if the prohibition amendment should get repealed, eighty per cent of the members of the Clionian club wouldn't have a word to say for themselves."

"And yet, Abe, a lot of married women has got the impression that their husbands has a very lively time in the clubs they belong to," Morris said.

"Well, that's because they don't admit women to clubs, Mawruss," Abe said, "which if they let down the bars and allowed a married member of the Clionian club to take his wife there for dinner on some off night, y'understand, it might disrupt the home Mawruss, because ever afterwards when he said he was going down to the club, she might get the impression he was going out to have a lively time, but not at the club. Only last Sunday, I spent the entire afternoon in solitary confinement at the Clionian club, and I guess that between two o'clock and dinner time I must have read ten times over how Eddie Jones was posted for $221.50 and also the entire Sunday paper including the advertisements. In fact, it wasn' ttill old Mr. Lilienthal came in and told me the particulars about his wife's last sickness that I had anything in the way of human conversation at all, and that's what it is to spend Sunday in a New York City club."

"Why is it then," Morris inquired, "that a whole lot of business men is so crazy to join a club?"

Abe shrugged his shoulders.

"For that matter," he concluded, "why is it that a whole lot of clubs is so crazy as to let them join?"

If club men was to get served to them at home the kinds of foods which is served to them at their clubs, y'understand, they would kick up a terrible row with their wives.

As I annoint for gliding
My elbow and my knee,
I swear to hang a record
Up, for posterity.

Swear I, this spun out dancing
Floats on the rim of craze,
And here's the lad to end it
And dance six nights and days.

Six nights and days of reeling
And I shall reel no more.

THE breeze blows in from the blue Mediterranean, bringing the sound of laughter from the beaches to the big house near Mentone. But the house is silent and the rich man after years of struggle and disappointment is quiet in death. And the beautiful woman who kneels by his bedside is in tears. But let us go back to the day before his death.

Apparently his relatives, even his own children, are more interested in his money, for while he tosses fitfully in bed they are bringing strange charges against him in far away America, and he his countered in the legal battle. The man is George Jay Gould; this is the bedside battle for the millions his father, old Jay Gould, the empire builder, left behind.

Here are the surface facts in the latest moves of the great human chess game:

1. The brothers and sisters, nephews and nieces of George Jay Gould bring action asserting that at least partly through his maladministration the great estate has fallen away in value from $75,000,000 to $25,000,000.

2. His children and grandchildren file an answer in the estate accounting proceedings declaring that the three children of his present wife are not entitled to share the family fortune. They intimate, but do not state, that he is the father of the three children of the beautiful woman hovering by his bedside, who has been his wife for only a year.

3. George Gould retaliates by bringing action against his brother Frank, revealing intimate details of the brother's life and declaring that Frank Gould violated the provisions of his father's will by marrying without the consent of his brothers and sisters.

This may seem merely like the private and complicated squabble of a band of rich people. It is more than that, it is the epic drama of one of America's greatest fortunes, which has affected at least indirectly most of the people in the United States. Like most dramas it is significant when seen in relation to its background.

No longer ago than 1912 one distinguished writer called the Gould estate "an American dynasty that promises to endure for centuries."

But since then the dynasty, minus the strong directing hand of Jay Gould, has been crumbling so rapidly that its dissolution seems at hand. The diminishing gold of the Goulds seems to carry a curse, and the members of the family fight tooth and nail for the remaining shekels and reveal the scandals of their private lives without thought of public opinion.

Aristocratic names are spread across the sky—the Duchess de Talleyrand, Lady Decies, Anthony J. Drexel, 3d, and the children of the famous Count Boni de Castellane, to mention only a few. They are all Goulds.

The story of the partial dissipation of the family millions is one of ruined railroads, of lives sacrificed, and of the thousands of Americans who were forced to ride on the "starved" railroads. It is an indictment of the vanity and lack of public responsibility of a small group of men and women. Head and shoulders above all others stand two figures—old Jay Gould, the tricky founder of the fortune, and his oldest son, George, once called the sick man of Wall Street.

To understand the bedside battle for the Gould millions one must go back to the day when—

*** *** ***

Jay Gould was a boy of fifteen, working in a country store. He got up at 3 o'clock each morning to study surveying, and worked from 6 A. M. until 10 P. M. in the store. He was a little swarthy fellow, fiercely energetic, intensely religious, a genius for work.

In 1868 he arrived in Wall Street, with very little money. He bought a broken-down railroad in upper New York State for ten cents on the dollar, built it up and became president. He was small, almost feminine in voice and manner, shrinking from contact with men. But within the short period of fifteen years he made his great fortune, acquired railroads, by methods which, to say the least, were questionable, turned Wall Street upside down and inside out during short periods, broke the hearts and wrung the pockets of hundreds of men, and died at the age of 55, a nervous wreck.

It has been written, "Wall Street was the limited area of Jay Gould's activities, the stock ticker his one productive force."

While he controlled the Erie Railroad that line was called "the Scarlet Woman of Wall Street." In manipulating the stock of the road he corrupted legislators and judges, as he admitted during court investigations.

In his spectacular attempt to corner the gold supply of the United States he precipitated a nation-wide panic on famous Black Friday and betrayed his closest friends. During the panic fortunes accumulated through years of self-sacrificing toil were swept away in a moment and crazed men were reported to have screamed of Gould, "Lynch him!"

Then Wall Street took its revenge by breaking the constitution of this strange, venomous little man. He died saying he was the most hated man in America.

*** *** ***

The Gould system of railroads was left behind and a will by which Jay Gould attempted to assure the continued family control of the vast estate. He made one serious mistake, however—in judging the business ability of his oldest son, George, who was made the dominating trustee.

It was said of George, "His pre-eminent characteristic is indecision of character." Nevertheless, for some years the oldest son did well in managing the estate. He is credited with honestly trying to remove the Gould stigma from the railroads and not until he was taken up by New York society did the period of alleged neglect of the roads come. Then it was seen that the Gould lines in the western and southwestern part of this country were "starving" because earnings were appropriated as dividends. The development of the Gould-controlled Western Union telegraph lines was held back and the building of subways in New York was delayed because of Gould traction lines.

Thus the American public suffered, while Anna Gould was marrying Count Boni de Castellane and Count Boni was going through $10,000,000 of the family fortune. And Frank Gould was living splendidly in Paris. And Howard Gould was marrying Katherine Clemmons, the actress.

But the Gould control was slipping. Harriman was looming on the railroad horizon, the Rockefellers were closing in on the family's 15,000 miles of railroad. George Gould realized that he must fight if he would control the estate.

With his back against the wall he put up a desperate but losing battle against the Harriman interests. He attempted to build another link of the Wabash railroad, which was to touch Pittsburgh. This was the territory of the Pennsylvania Railroad and brought that powerful line into the fight as his enemy. So when the lease of the Western Union Telegraph Company for rights along the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks expired, the Pennsylvania refused to renew the lease and before Gould could get a restraining injunction, chopped down hundreds of telegraph poles. And strange accidents occurred as George Gould attempted to carry his costly railroad into Pittsburgh. Railroad bridges, in the process of construction, suddenly collapsed, killing workmen; a tunnel under a mountain caved in and was found to be built over an abandoned mine.

Finally George Gould, beset by debts and the colossal costs of his fight, surrendered. And in 1916 came an accounting suit brought by his relatives, wherein a Supreme Court decision removed him as the dominating trustee because of alleged misconduct with the funds of the estate.

Shorn of his financial power he retired to his American country home, also spending much time in Europe. The family legal feuds continued, suits and counter suits. And the fortune continued to dwindle. It seemed as if time, too, were taking revenge against old Jay Gould.

About a year ago came George Gould's second marriage, some months after the death of his first wife, the beautiful Edith Kingdon. His bride was Guinevere Sinclair, who had come to this country about ten years ago with an English musical comedy company. At the time of the marriage she was said to be a widow, and she had three children.

George Gould took his bride to Scotland for the honeymoon and they lived at his Inverness castle there. For a time all went well; Gould and his beautiful young wife were happy. They were photographed together on hunting and shooting trips; they seemed to have sidestepped the family bad luck.

Then Gould was stricken with pneumonia and rushed to the warm climate of Mentone on the Riviera. The condition was alleviated and he seemed on the road to recovery when another blow came. His son, George Gould, Jr., and his wife, who were living at the Mentone villa, separated and young Mrs. Gould took apartments at Monte Carlo. This is said to have aggravated the father's illness, but George Gould, Jr., made the break between himself and his bride final by obtaining a divorce at Nice.

Now, in the midst of the relapse, comes the culminating blow. Numerous relatives, including Gloria Gould, his beautiful daughter, and his grandchildren, have taken action to prevent the three children of his present wife from sharing in the estate. They say they have not sufficient knowledge to form a belief as to whether the children are the children of George Gould, but they declare they are not his children "in the meaning" of the Jay Gould will, because they were born while his first wife was still alive!

In reply George Gould filed the counter suit alleging that the second marriage of his brother Frank to Edith Kelly, an actress, in 1910, and his third marriage to Florence Lacaze, another actress, in February of this year, were without the consent of his brothers and sisters and violate the "matrimonial clause" of his late father's will, and that Frank's share in the Gould fortune should be reduced one-half in accordance with the penalty provided in the will.

Still another development shows still more of the family fortune going to outsiders, this time in the person of former Justice Edward W. Hatch of the Supreme Court of New York, who will act as referee and hear the new estate accounting proceedings. The taking of testimony is expected to take up two years of the learned jurist's time and he will receive $65 an hour, or about $100,000 in all.

Frank Gould, the youngest son of old Jay, left America years ago to spend his money in Paris and develop a reputation not exactly enviable. He has borne his share of the brunt of family legal battles, and when his second wife, Edith Kelly Gould, brought an action against him following their divorce, she charged that during a certain period of their marriage he was habitually intoxicated, "becoming so practically daily," and that he would not take a bath more than once a month. Both these charges he denied.

So the complicated Gould battle moves on, gathering more complications, like a snowball rolling downhill.

Her Hero Dog Saved Her From The Deadly Quicksand

The Epic of Pearl, Who Through a Long Terrifying Night in a Swamp, Gripped His Little Mistress's Collar --Adding Another Link to the Chain of Canine Achievements.

Florence Coderre, the 12-Year-Old Brookfield Centre, Mass., Girl Who Owes Her Life to Her Shepherd Dog, Pearl.

This Is Pearl, Who Saved Florence Coderre from a Terrible Death in Quicksand. Below Is Hero, a Newfoundland Dog Who Saved 92 Lives by Carrying a Line from the Sinking Mail Ship, "Ethie," During a Storm Off Curling, N. F.

By Winifred Van Duzer

WHY," asks Mr. Kipling, "give your heart to a dog to tear?"

And he goes on to philosophize rhythmically upon the trouble which, in the natural course of events lies in a human being's life—sufficient trouble without a deliberate extending of invitation to more via affection given to a dog. Not that the dog isn't worth the affection, according to the poet. What he gives in return for a pat on the head and a crust and a bone and a chance to sleep on the doorstep is love, loyalty, protection, understanding, sympathy and about all the other emotions of any real and unselfish value there are in the soul.

The difficulty lies in the fact that at the outside few more than fourteen years cover the time when one may listen for the pattering of a certain set of feet and await the thrust of a certain cold, damp muzzle. Fourteen years! And when they're over your world is very still and empty and you feel the fangs and claws of memory tearing your heart.

Yet in compensation it's quite likely that you'll have the knowledge of great deeds. Your property rescued, perhaps from theft or fire. Your youngster's life saved. Your own life saved. Deeds of heroism exceeding in daring and complete forgetfulness of safety most of those performed by humankind!

That's why we give our hearts to dogs to tear!

*** *** ***

Which brings us to the story of twelve-year-old Florence Coderre and her dog Pearl. Pearl is a small mongrel shepherd dog with the heart of a thoroughbred. He is soft brown and white, with gentle brown eyes.

Florence and Pearl live in Brookfield Centre, Mass., on the highway about midway between Worcester and Springfield. It was on an afternoon following school one day recently that Florence started off alone to gather May flowers for her teacher. Then she looked around to see Pearl at her heels, and she stopped to order him back. But Pearl merely wagged his tail and stayed close at her continued commands to "go home."

Her path led along a treacherous swamp of the Quaboag river and she wandered on without a thought of direction, finally leaving the path altogether in her search for the partly hidden flowers. Suddenly she realized that she had stepped into a quagmire. She pulled herself out, only to flounder in again. This time she started to sink and gave way to panic, sending scream after scream into the gathering dusk. But she was several miles from any house and no one answered.

In the meantime Pearl realized that something was wrong. He is a sensitive dog, and now he was painfully alert, quivering in every muscle as he saw his little mistress helplessly sinking until the mud was above her knees. In the midst of her panic he came close and thrust his damp nose against her hand. And Florence threw her arms around his neck and clung to him frantically.

Then began the long struggle against approaching death. The little girl went down below her waist, but held on to her pet's neck. Pearl spread himself out flat close to her and at times sent up loud howls of distress.

It was now pitch dark and the cold of the mud had numbed the little girl so that she was fast losing her strength to cling to Pearl. She was going still farther down, too, in spite of the dog's efforts. The moment came when she lost consciousness and her fingers relaxed. Then Pearl showed his resourcefulness.

He snuggled still closer, got a good grip on her collar with his teeth, and held on. For nearly fourteen hours he continued to hold on, while the night passed and morning came.

In the meantime an alarm had been spread from Florence's house. State policemen and a band of neighbors had been searching the woods and fields all night and Napoleon Coderre, the girl's older brother, was with them. When morning came Napoleon suddenly thought of the swamp along the Quaboag river and he left the others to go there alone.

Pearl heard his distant cry. He released his grip on Florence for a moment and let out an answering howl. And in a moment Napoleon had arrived and was dragging his sister back to firm ground.

Florence and Pearl were carried home. And when they reached the house and Florence was tucked in between warm blankets first aid was administered impartially to both!

*** *** ***

Up in Sanford, Maine, there is another dog hero, now receiving deserved tribute for a heroic rescue. His feat does not match Pearl's as an exhibition of endurance, but it does give him a place in the canine hall of fame.

This wise mongrel is Chuck, a bright-eyed, black and white spotted terrier, who was the special joy of five-year-old Laurence Watts, and the household pet of the boy's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Watts, who live deep in the woods five miles from Sanford.

Trees surround the little home, and beyond the trees there are thickets and more thickets and more trees. It is quite like the end of the world up in that part of the country.

So it isn't any real wonder that when Laurence and his brother, Charlie, decided to go rabbit-hunting they strolled farther than they intended and found themselves lost. Mother and daddy were at work in the worsted mill in Sanford and there was no one to call them in.

Supper time came and brought home the parents. The evening wore along and brought alarm. A searching party found Charlie with comparative ease, where he had fallen asleep under a tree. But there was no trace of the younger boy. Then began the organizing of searching parties and bloodhounds were sent all the way from Bangor and from Boston to trail the little chap. On the second day a company of coast artillery appeared and, with hundreds of volunteers, began the work of beating the woods for miles in every direction.

But meanwhile another brother, Walter, thought of Chuck, who had been spending the day whimpering about the door. "Go and get him!" he said to the dog. There was a black and white streak which headed straight for the brook and then ran wildly up and down the banks, finally plunging through the water to the other side. There was a long journey, then, through the trees and a joyful bark over a little bunch of wilted wildflowers, lying on the ground.

*** *** ***

It is not given to many dogs to save lives by the wholesale. But a huge Newfoundland is honored and acclaimed throughout St. John's, N. F., because he saved ninety-two lives, all on one night! "Hero" is the brave fellow who fought his way through breakers to the shore of Curling, N. F., a life-line in his teeth, from the coastal steamer Ethie upon which passengers and crew had given themselves up for lost.

Boats could not negotiate the heavy seas and an effort to shoot the line ashore failed when it became caught. Men did not dare attempt the swim to release the line and the ship's officers were in despair until they thought of Hero, the mascot of the crew. Hero had shown his prowess in heavy seas, but he had never before breasted waters as angry as the ones which at that moment were pounding the steamer to pieces.

However, he was brought on deck, shown the direction of the line, and he started toward shore. He swam bravely and true to direction while the 92 people on the Ethie watched his fine dark head, a mere speck appearing and disappearing in the foaming swells. Finally he reached the point where the line was caught among jagged rocks and there was a breathless moment while he wrestled with it. He pulled it loose and true to his training and his intelligence continued on to shore with the rope between his teeth, where eager hands seized it.

The result was a life-saving device rigged up.

"Saved," the Famous Painting by Landseer, Which Was One of the Many Tributes the British Artist Paid to the Courage and Loyalty of Dogs.

Then another long journey, and finally a little spotted figure bending over an exhausted youngster, lapping face and hands and yelping with joy. One by one the ninety-two were hauled to safety, and the brave dog has become an institution throughout the North.
