STATE TO SEEK MORE FEDERAL RELIEF AID

To Run Out Of Funds
30 Days Before
Bonds Sold

By Associated Press
FORT WORTH, Aug. 2.—The Texas Relief commission will ask the federal government to advance all relief funds necessary to carry out operations in the state until the legislature can authorize the sale of more bonds and money can be made available.

Giescke, chairman of the commission, announced today that under the best conditions the state will be without funds 30 days before the bonds can be sold.

Three Indicted In Longshore Battle

By Associated Press
HOUSTON, Aug. 2.—Two white men and a negro—all striking longshoremen—were indicted yesterday for murder of three negro independent longshoremen during a gun fight July 15.

The white men indicted were H. J. (Happy) Freeman 37, and C. O. Reeves, 24. The negro was S. P. Brown, 39.

All were named jointly in one indictment listing the names of the three negroes killed in the fight as Frank Roland, Jim Brown and George Hardy.

In addition Freeman, Reeves and Brown were each indicted for assault to murder three negroes—Joe Hardy, Precious Allums, and Will Lewis—all three independent longshoremen and all wounded in the same affray in which Roland, Brown and Hardy met death.

STATE APPOINTS TAX ASSESSORS IN ORLEANS

Carries Out Threats
Made By Senator
Huey Long

By Associated Press
NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 2.—Carrying out Senator Huey Long's threat to take over the tax authority in New Orleans, the state today appointed tax assessors throughout the city to supersede the assessors elected by the city last January.

Backed by the power of mobilized national guardsmen, which already had seized the city voting registration office, William Rankin of the Louisiana tax commission announced the appointment of state tax collectors to take charge in New Orleans.

Long recently announced this would be done as a result of Mayor Walmsley's refusal to recognize the legality of Governor Allen's appointment of two Long lieutenants to fill vacancies caused by the death of two elected assessors.

Walmsley called the action a "new infamy and outrage", and a reprisal move against his city regime.

LANGER STEPS OUT FOR WIFE

Deposed Governor Of North Dakota Indorses Wife As Republican Nominee

By Associated Press
BISMARCK, N. D., Aug. 2.—William Langer, deposed Governor resigned late yesterday as Republican nominee for Governor, setting into motion machinery for endorsement of his wife by the Republican State Central Committee.

The committee, meeting here this afternoon, accepted the resignation and went forward to present Mrs. Langer as the nominee in the fall campaign. Langer sent a brief letter to the committee, controlled by him, announcing his resignation.

Shortly afterward a resolution endorsing Mrs. Langer was presented, rousing cheers coming from committeemen as it was introduced.

Langer was ordered removed from his office two weeks ago by the State Supreme Court, which held him disqualified by his federal court conviction June 17 of conspiracy to defraud the United States Government. The decision made no mention, however, of his qualifications as a candidate.

The deposed chief executive was renominated as Republican candidate by a majority that exceeded the vote of his two opponents in the state primary, June 27, three days after he was sentenced in Federal Court to serve 18 months in a federal penitentiary and pay a $10,000 fine. He has appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

His conviction, with four associates, grew out of charges of conspiracy to solicit political contributions from federal relief workers.

LEGISLATURE TO BE CALLED ON AUGUST 27

To Authorize Issuance Of State Relief Bonds

By Associated Press
AUSTIN, Aug. 2.—The Texas Legislature will be called to meet Aug. 27 in extraordinary session to authorize the issuance of additional state bonds to relieve the unemployment situation, Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, announced late yesterday.

The chief executive previously had set Sept. 10 for a special session, but decided to advance the date after she held a conference with a committee of mayors and county judges.

Mrs. Ferguson said the delegation impressed her that the extended drought and other adverse conditions had created a situation of "real acute alarm."

Texas citizens a year ago authorized the issuance of not to exceed $20,000,000 in state securities to match federal advances for relief purposes. The Legislature has authorized, and the proceeds have been expended, all except $9,500,000 of that amount. The extra session will consider the authorization of further obligations.

The Governor said that until the relief situation had been met, other subjects of legislation would not be opened up. There was a probability that when the administration considered other emergency matters would be presented. It was expected the session would continue for the full 30-day constitutional period.

The session will convene two days after the Democratic run-off primary, when voters are to make a choice for Governor, other state officers and for many places in the Legislature. Undoubtedly, the Legislature would have been called immediately had it not been for pending run-off.

The Governor said the committee of mayors and judges convinced her there was "an increasing demand for relief."

"They showed there is reason for real acute alarm," she said.

Estimates available, she said, revealed that a minimum of $3,500,000 monthly was needed immediately to meet demands made on the relief funds. She said it was virtually certain that it would require $7,000,000 monthly to care for the situation after Oct. 1, and through April 1.

The Governor said Senator Tom Connally would be asked to confer with mayors and county judges to consider the emergency.

Ft. Worth Pastor Holds Meeting In Christian Church

Rev. Eugene C. McConley, pastor of the Morningside Christian church of Fort Worth, will hold a meeting here at the First Christian church, starting Sunday.

Rev. McConley is a forceful speaker and is expected to bring stirring messages. Everyone is urged to hear him every night at 8:15 o'clock.

"Church going is a means of grace and is divinely appointed. It is helpful and restful and is a fine investment of your time," Rev. N. D. Dyer, pastor of the First Christian church here, said in urging everyone to attend the revival meetings.

Fire Causes Slight Damage To Car Here

A small coupe owned by John Bishop was damaged slightly this afternoon shortly after 1 o'clock when the engine caught fire.

A defective gas line was given as the cause of the fire. The fire department extinguished the blaze.

Signing of application forms necessary before cattlemen and farmers will be permitted to sell their cattle to the government under the primary drought relief set-up is expected to get underway in Hall county by Monday, according to word from the office of the county farm agent.

Cattle appraising forms have already been received here, but signing can not get under way until the application forms arrive.

Named Appraiser

A telegram received at the county agent's office this morning stated that W. C. George of Sweetwater had been appointed by the government as cattle appraiser for Hall county. A Dr. Franks of Minnesota has been designated as the veterinarian to serve Hall county cattle producers in carrying out the drought relief program here. Persons living in Hall county were not permitted to act as appraisers or veterinarians.

Mr. George and Dr. Franks are expected to arrive in Memphis by Monday to begin the emergency relief work.

Herds Should Be Cullled

F. D. Porter of Fort Worth, who is the district supervisor for the Amarillo district, which includes Hall county, was in Memphis this morning instructing Clay Crow and O. F. Washam, assistants to County Agent James Jackson, on the emergency program.

Now is the time for cattle producers to cull their herds and do away with the half-breeds and undesirable cattle, Mr. Porter stated.

Price Range

The price paid on cattle accepted under the program will range from $13 to $20. Twelve dollars will be paid on cows purchased and condemned. Twenty dollars will be paid for cattle two years old and over if accepted, and $15 will be paid for cows from one to two years old.

The price paid on calves will range from $5 to $8, with $4 being paid for calves that are condemned.

In case a cow or calf is condemned, it will be killed at the stock yards and the producer must dispose of the carcass. The producer will be given the hide and the meat.

Start 'Line-Up' Work

A provision is made in all prices on cattle for lien-holders.

In setting the price on the cows, the appraiser's word is final. It was said. A farmer who rejects the appraiser's price may again sign an application form in 30 days, it was stated.

In order to further the emergency program in Hall county as rapidly as possible, a "line-up" man will be sent over the county to instruct the farmers when to have their cattle lined up for bids.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY

"STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE TERRY comes to New York determined to show her home town and especially AMY JACKSON that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been her best friend until HOWARD JACKSON broke the engagement Jane had forced upon him and married Amy. In New York Jane obtains a position in a real estate office and soon is making a large income.

She has an affair with ROGER THORPE who is married but tires of him. When he offers to bear the expense of their child she contemptuously dismisses him. She confides in Amy, realizing she is her only friend. Jane insists on giving her daughter away and Amy takes the child, promising never to reveal its parentage. The baby is named NANCY.

For two years Jane stays away from Marburg. Then, on a business trip, she goes to Amy's home and asks to see her daughter.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIII

Amy and Howard exchanged glances of discomfort, but not of indignation. "We don't mean to be cruel," said Howard. "We can only do what we think is right. Of course a professor's salary is no great shakes, but I have a small personal income. We even have some savings, and Nancy isn't likely to suffer any privations. You gave the child to Amy, Jane. You have not concerned yourself about her since. And we can't let you concern yourself about her now. It would only mean a renewal of—of interest—which doesn't seem advisable."

Jane smiled, her sudden winning brilliant smile. She saw her chance. "You certainly talk like a professor, Howard. You make me feel as small as Nancy. Now look here, you don't want any money from me. That's been made clear enough. But would you mind if I put you in the way of making some money yourself, on your capital I mean, so that you'd not have to pinch or scrimp yourselves for the child? It happens that I can do it, right away. I'll tell you, it's one of those queer unexpected things that come along once in a blue moon. A man named Sears drifted into my office one day and said he wanted to sell a house, a big-untown house, and he wanted to do it quietly, no publicity, and if he could he'd let it go for about a third of what it was worth. I saw he'd been drinking and at first I was just going to ease him out—and then, I decided to look into it."

She was, she thought, retaining her rightful importance. Howard was listening absently. She went on more dramatically: "I dug up the truth a scrap at a time. It was a spite sale. He and his sister are the last of a family that was once quite solidly rich and they live in the house. She's a widow with several children and she's older than he and has been trying to manage him and keep hold of what money and property that's left. He's never done any work. All he wants in life is excitement. He's crazy to go over and get in the war, but his income is all tied up with his debts and he wants a bunch of money for a special reason before he goes. So he made up his mind to sell his equity in the house before his sister could stop him and get away—"

"What was the special reason he wanted the money?" asked Howard.

"Oh that!" Jane tossed it off lightly. "Nothing creditable. The man's rotten, really. It's for some girl he's interested in. He wants to set her up in a dress shop, or beauty parlor, before he leaves, you see. I don't know the details of that. They didn't matter. The point was that he could actually make a legal sale and it's a choice piece of property and after I'd got my fact I made up my mind to buy it myself. It's against the law for a broker to do that unless the buyer knows it, but I explained all that to Mr. Sears and pointed out that it meant one less person to be let in on the deal, and was therefore just that more private. I'm making a very long story, but it comes down to this: Sears has signed the contract of sale and has accepted a small payment, so that binds him. I'm having the real-estate title search now, and we'll close in a couple of weeks."

"And in the meantime I'm arranging for the money. He wants cash, if you please, the whole thing in his hand, and he's going to get it. And I know, positively, that the day after I take title I can sell that equity for three, or maybe four times what I paid for it. Now, do you see? If you want to put even a few thousand dollars into it, I can treble it within six weeks and I'll treat it as part of the investment, not as a loan, and you'll make exactly the same profit. Proportionately, that I will. It will be absolutely your own."

She looked at Howard expectantly.

She enjoyed reciting the Sears transaction. She would have loved to go on and tell about her business, her profits, her sales, peacocking her own ability and cleverness before him. But this was enough to make him see how clever she was in business, and how willing she was to share the great opportunity with her friends.

"I suppose," he said consideringly, "that if this fellow Sears succeeds in selling the house and hands over the money to his girl-friend, his sister and her children will lose a good bit of what they would naturally have inherited, won't they?"

"Of course. That's why the sister tried to hold on to the property. But that has nothing to do with it. He's bound to sell, and if he doesn't sell to me, he will to someone else."

"Or don't doubt it."

There was an odd silence. Jane was amazed by his irresponsible manner. "You don't understand," she said. "This is simply no good. The family's run out. It used to be quite distinguished, I believe. He's going to keep his sister from getting that money because he's so fed up with having her try to control him. If I don't take this sale, someone else will. I can't pass up a good stroke of business for myself simply because there's bad feeling in the Sears family."

"No," said Howard, "I suppose not. But, frankly, it's just a shade too ironic to me to have young Nancy profit by a sale which isn't fair to somebody else's children."

"But that's so—so remote!" (She had started to say "dumb," but changed the word with a stammer.) "The sale will be made anyway I tell you."

"Oh Jane," broke in Amy, "don't let's argue about it. Howard's perfectly right. We don't want money made in a way that's hard on other people."

"But I want to do something for Nancy and for you, too!" cried Jane, "because you've taken care of her and loved her. And this is such a good chance, it may be years before a snap like this one comes my way again!"

"We understand about your good intentions, Jane," said Howard, "And give you due credit for the same. But seriously, the biggest thing you can do for Nancy is to leave her alone and not tangle her

Kresge Baroness Sues for Divorce

Divorce from her Swedish baron, Carl Carlsson Wijk, is sought by the former Catherine Kresge, above, who inherited a fortune of $5,000,000 when her father, dime store multimillionaire, was divorced several years ago. up in any feverish emotional jams. If she ever finds out that she's got two mothers instead of one it might be painful and upsetting. It might give a bad twist to her life we'll bring her up the best we can, you know that, within our own means."

They were pushing her out, closing themselves away from her, not unkindly exactly, but inexorably. She struggled to understand them, they baffled and evaded her.

"Are you afraid I can't swing this deal?" she asked. "Or that everything isn't exactly as I've told you I'll have my secretary send on the contract of sale, and pictures of the house and records showing what other property in that neighborhood has sold for recently. And I'll put up security for whatever money you'd invest. I'd make the whole thing absolutely safe for you."

"Opposition always was a tonic for you, Jane," said Amy, smiling, "but this time you're headed the wrong way. We don't doubt your truth, nor yet your ability. I'm perfectly certain that you'll buy Mr. What's-his-name's house and sell it at a grand profit. But count us out on it. We can't do it."

Jane wondered if perhaps they actually didn't have any money saved and didn't want to let her know.

"I'm sorry you feel that way," she said aloud, "but if you change your mind while I'm here, it won't be too late. I wish you would change your mind." She preened a little, conscious of her elegance, the soft rich red of her dress, the dark luxurious furs, in this plain room. The covers of some of the chairs were worn, one of the lampshades, a cheap paper thing, had a scorched place on its side. She didn't feel quite so much out of it when she noticed these blemishes. There was a difference in Amy and Howard, too. They weren't so distant. "How long are you going to be here?" asked Amy.

"Not long, only till I get Aunt Rosa's affairs straight again. It's not as bad as she thought. She was only sick and blue—that lad Trainor in old Mr. Massey's office had got on her nerves. But I settled him, this afternoon, and Aunt Rosa perked right up."

Amy began to laugh. She could not help it. "Oh Jane, you're priceless. I'd have love to hear you dealing with Jimmy Trainor—he is so fresh and thinks he knows it all!"

Jane laughed, too, and began to pull on her fur coat. Howard helped her and she was intensely conscious of his nearness. She contrived to touch his hand. She really was coming out on top, just as she had planned from the first. Everything was lighter, pleasanter. At the door she paused. "Do tell me how you happened to name—her—Nancy?" She nodded upward toward the nursery.

"Howard chose it," said Amy. "It's a name he specially likes."

Jane glowed with gratification. "I'm so glad," she said to Howard. "It's a name I specially like, too."

When the door had closed behind her flourishing exit, Amy pointed an accusing finger at her husband. "You fraud, you faker," she jeered. "Suppose I'd have told her the truth, that you wanted to name her Axelina after that old

You have noticed that on some days there is more advertising in your newspaper than on other days.

Thursday, for instance, we carry many messages to help you with your over-Sunday shopping. Certain department stores have their favorite days for advertising certain merchandise.

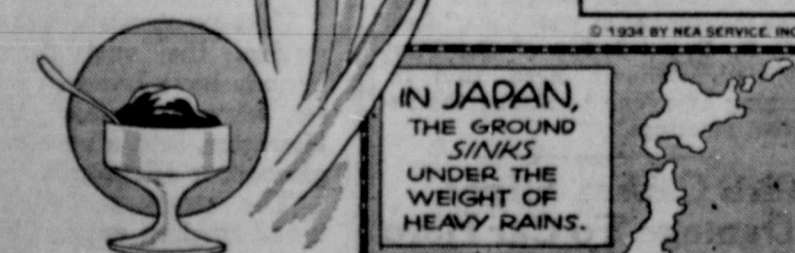

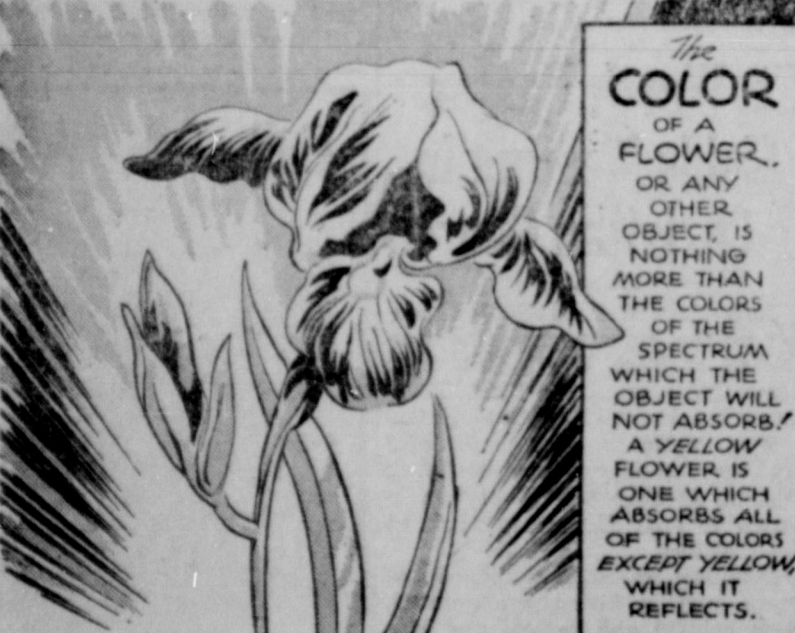

But—here's the tip—on days when the paper seems "thinnest," you sometimes discover the biggest bargains. It stands to reason that some advertisers prefer to run their announcements on days when the advertising columns are less crowded. And thus by looking sharp on the seemingly dull days you encounter surprises!

Lakeview Defeats Salisbury in First Game of Tour

WINS OPENER OF OWN CLASSIC, 14 TO 5

Double Elimination Schedule Underway Today

BY STAFF CORRESPONDENT
LAKEVIEW, Aug. 2.—Lakeview took the first game of the baseball tournament here from Salisbury yesterday, 14 to 5, in a game that turned out to be a slugfest.

This was the only game played in Lakeview yesterday. Misunderstandings were responsible for the postponement of other contests.

Continues Today

The tourney goes on today. Lots having been drawn this morning, the teams will engage in play throughout the day.

A two-game elimination will be effected. Salisbury will be the first team to play another defeated team. Such a game will probably take place this afternoon.

Pile Up Big Lead

In yesterday's game, the local lads availed themselves of weak Salisbury fielding during the second and third innings to pile up a lead that withstood heavy fire at various instances.

Coy Davis, starting and losing hurler for the Marines, retired after two innings. Ted Barnes hurling one inning and Garvis Davis doing heroic work for the remainder of the game.

Strikes Out 10

Hoover, hurling for the winners, did a neat job of it, fanning 10. His support was wobbly at times.

Batting honors for the game were divided between Hoover, Stephens, and Barnes. Stephens hammered two home runs out into the mesquite.

A contact was made even more remarkable by the number of bases stolen during the game, especially by Salisbury.

Record Sales For Six Months Shown

The Jacques Manufacturing Company has announced a record number of sales of K. C. Baking powder in Texas during the past six months.

The statement said that "more K. C. baking powder was shipped to the retail trade in Texas during the first six months of this year on orders sold by our salesmen than during any similar period in the history of our business."

This increase was recorded despite the fact general business conditions have not been up to normal.

Cabness Gets Idea For Baseball Team That Can Neither Lose Game Nor Make Errors

At last Memphis has a baseball team that probably will never lose a game nor make an error.

W. R. Cabness has announced the formation of the Memphis All Stars. Some of the players he has already chosen include Max King, R. S. Greene, Major Wood, Tommie Potts and Lyman Robbins. Other members of the club will be announced the later part of this week, Manager Cabness said.

The newly formed club will be unique in the history of baseball inasmuch as it is impossible for the All Stars to lose a game.

Here's the way it happened: Cabness heard a story about an ideal baseball team and decided that Memphis should have just such an organization.

The story: A visitor was being shown through the insane asylum by one of the guards. He noticed one of the inmates swinging his right arm in a circle and making gyrations generally attributed to a baseball pitcher, but he had no ball.

"What's that fellow doing," he asked the guard.
"He thinks he's pitching a baseball," the guard replied.
"Gee, I'd sure like to catch for him," the visitor observed.

Big Prizes Offered By Tri-State Fair

AMARILLO, Aug. 2.—Despite the drought, the Tri-State Fair this year is offering and guaranteeing more than $15,000 in cash prizes.

There will be no discounting and every cash premium awarded will be paid in full, said Wilbur C. Hawk, manager of the fair association.

O. L. "Ted" Taylor also is back on the job as secretary-manager of the fair association.

The 1934 catalogue of the fair is now ready for distribution. Copies of the catalogue, listing liberal premiums and several new divisions, will be mailed upon request in writing to Mr. Taylor, box 2454.

Both the president and secretary-manager have had years of experience in building the Tri-State Fair into the largest attraction of its kind in the Southwest.

The Tri-State Fair this year as usual will feature a free gate. It will begin on Saturday, September 15, and end on the following Saturday, September 22.

Horse Races Daily
There will be horse races for seven days with legalized wagering. The fair association has spent thousands of dollars in improving and enlarging its racing plant.

The Sam B. Dill and Tom Mix circus will be another big attraction.

There will be a clean carnival company, with sensational rides and many other features.

The cattle division of the fair will be enlarged this year according to Secretary-Manager Taylor.

O. L. "TED" TAYLOR

"Short Horns of milk stock will be exhibited this year for the first time, too, and there will be an exhibit of Jerseys," said Taylor.

For the swine division the fair association has set aside $2,000 in cash premiums.

Prizes in all other divisions are equally liberal.

The automobile building will be jammed with the latest models for a motor show during the fair.

With liberal prizes fine displays are assured for each of the exhibition buildings.

Idle this week-end in the three-city league while Quanah plays at Childress, the golf team of the Memphis Country club will invade Pampa Sunday for a group of matches with members of the Pampa Country club.

There they will meet a newly acquired golf interest, brought on by obtaining of the services of Del Love, former Amarillo professional at the Indian Hills course.

Local golfers who wish to make the trip to Pampa are urged to get in touch with R. S. Greene as soon as possible.

HARRY GRAYSON

PHILADELPHIA, July 31.—Henry Louis Gehrig, now rolling toward his 1450th consecutive game, makes other baseball iron men appear to have been made of putty.

The best previous record was Everett Scott's 1307. Gehrig's may never be broken.

Nothing stops the Yankee first baseman. He has played with broken and chipped bones, bad tonsils and colds, and bounced right back after being knocked out by pitched balls.

The other day in Detroit Gehrig had such a cold between his shoulder blades that he scarcely could swing a bat, but prevailed upon Joe McCarthy to permit him to take one turn—his first as a leadoff man—and singled to launch a four-run rally.

Gehrig spent the following afternoon "bunting" balls against the left fence.

Triples Follow Kayo

Hungry Lou performed for several weeks this season with the bone of his big toe chipped. Knocked unconscious for 10 minutes by a pitched ball in an exhibition game at Norfolk, he banged out triples the next day at the Yankee Stadium.

Five minutes were required to bring Gehrig to when Earl Whitehill beamed him in 1933, but he finished the contest.

Gehrig was commencing to believe that he was to go on and on without another mishap of any kind when that happened, for he slipped through the 1931 and '32 campaigns without a scratch.

Handicapped to .379

Gehrig suffered most in preserving his phenomenal record for durability in 1930, when he chipped a bone in his left elbow in the first game of the grind, and played throughout the entire season with a sore arm. To make matters worse, he broke the little finger of his right hand in the last two weeks.

The throbbing whip and proud pinky handicapped the husky German to such an extent that he hit only .379. It was just as well for enemy pitchers that he wasn't all in one piece.

Gehrig submitted to two operations that fall. The "mice" were removed from his precious throwing arm, and an attempt was made to straighten the little finger. The latter remains crooked.

Hungry Lou stuck in there throughout 1929 with bad tonsils, which he lost no time in losing with the sound of the closing gong.

Yanked For Merkle

Gehrig hurt his right shoulder badly in bumping into the shade of the Boston dugout in chasing a foul in 1926, and had to be treated by a physician daily to remain in the thick of things in July, 1927.

He breezed through 1928, the Yankees' third straight pennant-winning year without as much as a dab of iodine, however.

Gehrig has participated in every game played by the New York club since the late Miller Huggins assigned him to first base in June 1925.

"The start of my record came close to being held up late that season," beams Hungry Lou. "Hug was not yet convinced that I could hit left-handers, so started Fred Merkle against Whitehill in Detroit. But I got in when a right-hander finished for the Tigers."

"I blessed right-handers in my early days. Now I blast both right, and left-handers."

Too Soft For Irish?

Joe Mulligan, a young right-hander plucked from the campus of Holy Cross by the Boston Red Sox, may within another season or two give the Cols something to cheer about in baseball.

Anything a pitcher with a tag like Mulligan does these days ought to be news in a game in which McGinnity's and Donovans have given 'way to the Gomezes and Ostermuellers.

Wins In Upset Over Champion

In a surprising victory over the national champion, Miss Caroline Babcock won the Seabright Cup which she holds in the above photo made immediately after her victory over Miss Helen Jacobs, 6-4, 6-2. Miss Babcock, ranking No. 5 woman player, completely outplayed the champion on a wet and treacherous court as thunder showers descended on the Seabright, N. J., Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club.

NEWLIN

BY MRS. FRED HEMPHILL

A light rain fell in the Newlin vicinity Friday afternoon, but it has been followed by the hot, dry winds and sand of the past few days and has had very little effect.

Misses Jewel and Opal Grimsley are visiting this week with their aunt, Mrs. Bess Hemphill.

Rev. Emmitt Evans began a revival at Gilpin Sunday. The revival was to have been held by Rev. Sidney Johnson of Lela. However, he is ill and could not conduct the meeting.

Irish names are becoming as scarce among the stars of baseball as they are in boxing.

Perhaps it is because both sports have grown too soft for them.

THANKS, FOL

I am very grateful for the fine vote given me in today's election, which placed me in the run-off. I have the intention to see every voter in Precinct 1 before August 25th and to solicit the support of every voter who did not support my candidacy in the first primary. It is possible for me to lead this race in the last election. Thanking you, I am sincerely,

Pictures Tell Story of Uprising in Austria

Recapture Radio Plant

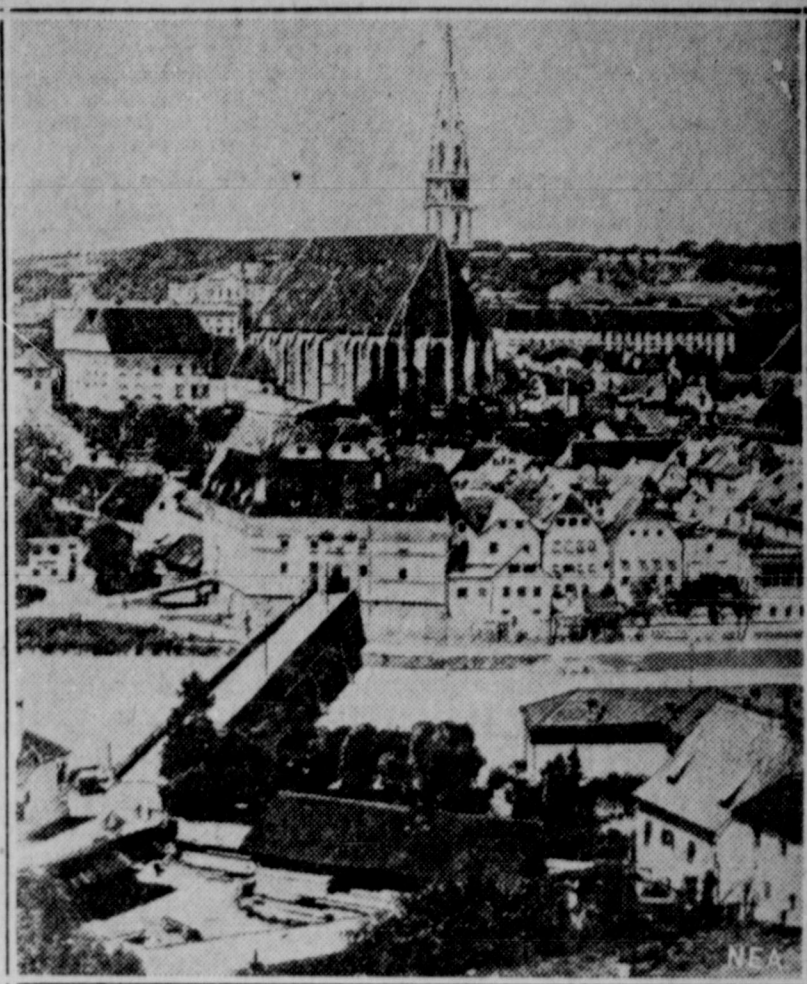

Men are shown in this picture, transmitted to the radio, after they had recaptured the Vienna radio Nazis and were transferring prisoners taken in the The Nazis, in a surprise rush, seized the station and port that Chancellor Dollfuss had resigned, after the shot had been shot down in the onslaught.

Engelbert Dollfuss Lays In State

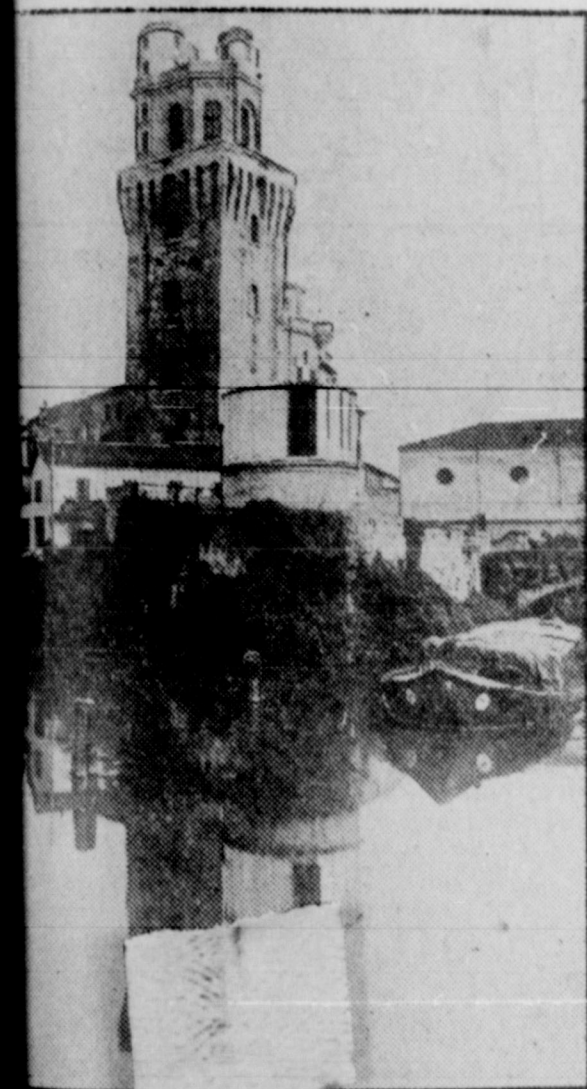

Austria's grave political crisis was over for Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss as his diminutive body lay in state in the famous Yellow Room of the Chancellery in Vienna. The scene pictured here in a photo transmitted by radio to the United States represents a sharp contrast, with its flickering tapers and silent guards, to the widespread confusion and excitement which resulted from the slaying of the Austrian leader.

Overlooking Scenes of Uprising

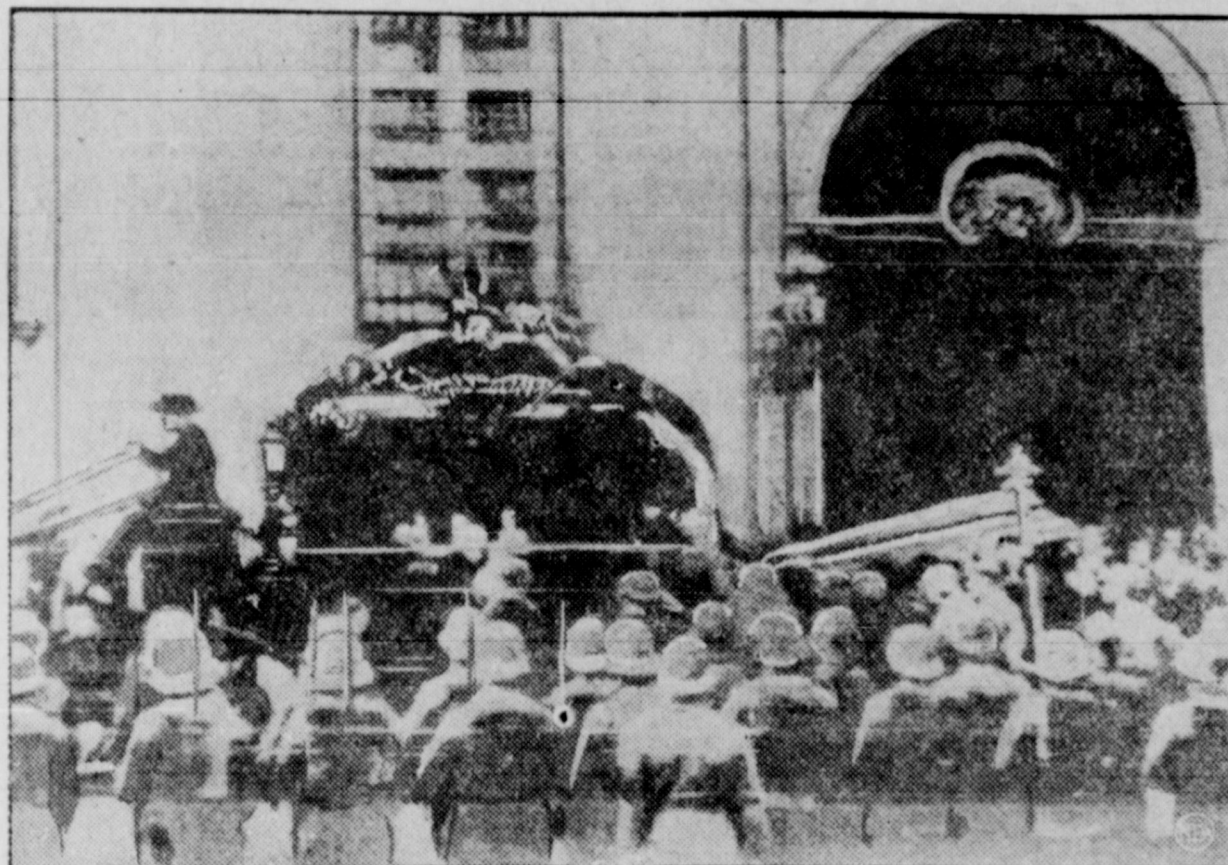

Sanguinary civil warfare between the Austrian Fascist regime and Nazi terrorists, which took a heavy though difficult-to-estimate loss of life, was centered in Styria. Here's a typical industrial center.

War Takes Heavy Toll

Waterfront Padua, Italy, lies a threat to the hundreds of miles from the trouble—less concentrated Italian army and air the military orders issued by Premier Mussolini.

Body of Dollfuss Taken From Assassination Scene

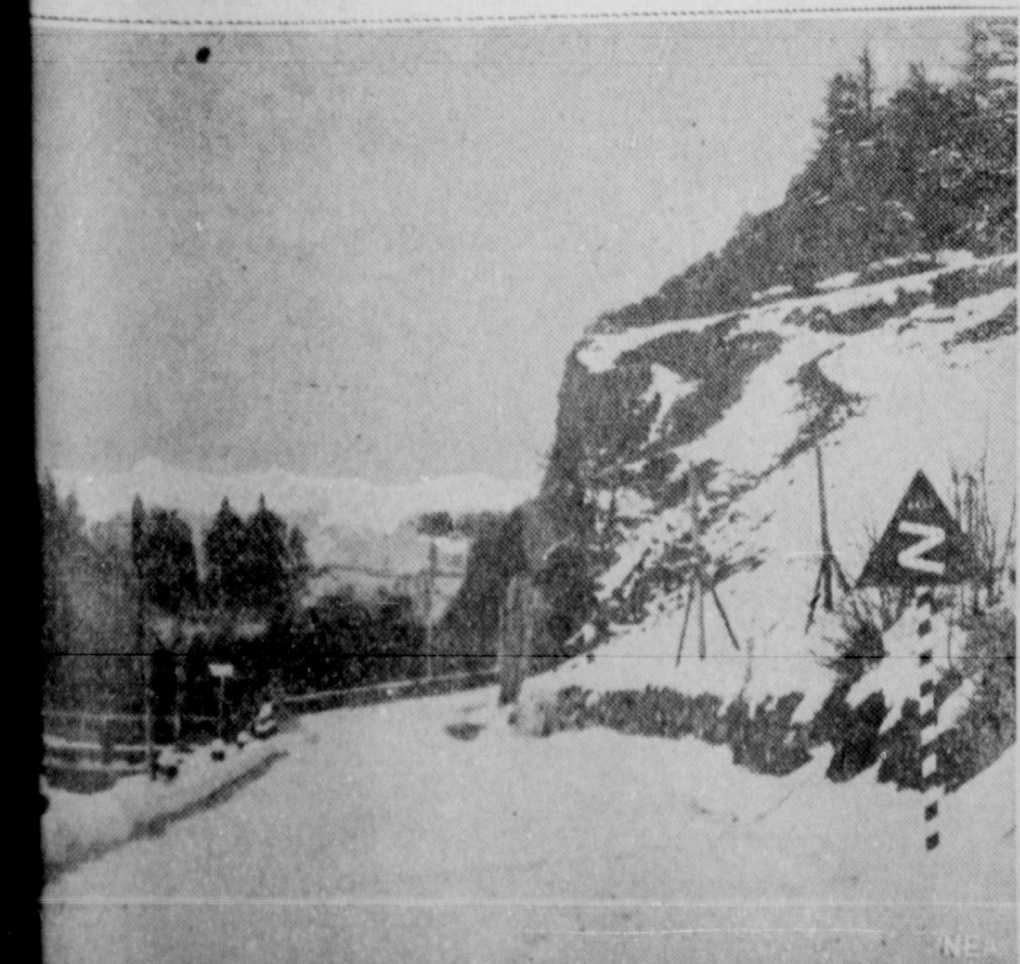

While files of Heimwehrmen form the guard of honor, the casket containing the body of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, assassin victim in the Austrian uprising, here is being carried from the chancellery, where he met death, to a flower-decked hearse for removal to the Vienna city hall. The photo was transmitted from Rome.

Guard Casket Of Dead Leader

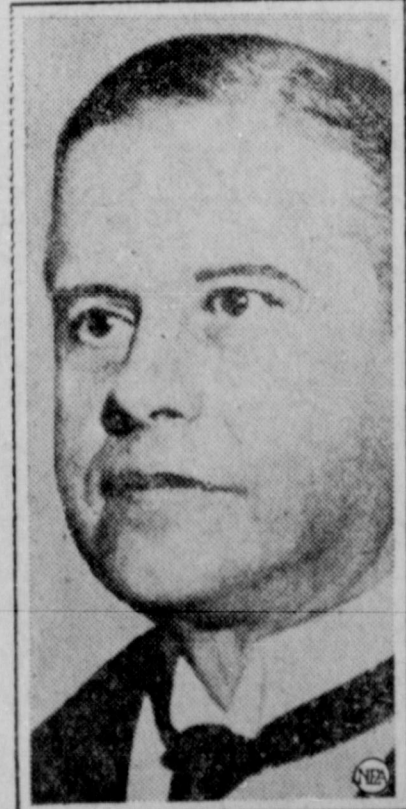

Five close friends of the late Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria stood guard at the casket during funeral ceremonies for the slain leader. This radiophoto shows the scene, witnessed by 60,000 in Vienna.

Way To Austria Guarded By Italian Troops

Entrance to Austria is the Brenner Pass Road (shown here) over which Italian should intervention in the neighboring country's troubled affairs be deemed necessary by Premier Benito Mussolini.

Envoy Sees Nazi Deed as Suicide

Assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss likely will be the death blow to the Nazi party in Austria, in the opinion of Edgar L. Prochnik, above, Austrian minister to the United States. In Washington, Prochnik is keeping in close touch by cable with the situation.

German Frontier Watched Fearfully

Austria's embattled Fascist regime turns fearful eyes on the German frontier, beyond which exiled Austrian Nazis are known to be mobilized. Here's the mountain-encircled border town of Obersiebenbrunn, through which Nazi invaders from Munich would pass.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC

Any erroneous reflection upon the character, standing or reputation of any person or corporation, which may appear in the columns of this paper, will be gladly corrected upon due notice of same being given to the editor personally at the office 617 Main Street, Memphis, Texas.

WE'VE HAD JUST ABOUT ENOUGH

PUBLIC servants or commanders of the people? That's the question we wish to have answered in regard to certain office holders at Austin. When did they obtain the right to tell the taxpayers of this state where to head in? When did it become outrageous for Texas citizens to send delegations to Austin in an attempt to get what they feel belongs to them?

A delegation visited the state highway commission Tuesday. These men were justly seeking assurance that unpaved gaps in the Panhandle's highways will be filled in.

But the astute body that is the state highway commission become angered by the visit.

"You are a lot of boosters," said Chairman Wood, "and you don't have anything to boost. If you got the roads and the money according to the taxes you pay, you wouldn't get any roads."

If that is the light in which we are looked upon down state, why do they object so vigorously to the formation of a new state in the Panhandle? It is because of the taxes we do pay into the treasury, for which we get little or nothing in return?

Members of the delegation, which represented 26 counties in northwest Texas, pointed out that while the Panhandle has 40 percent of the unpaved federal highways in the state, it is receiving only four percent of the 12 million dollar federal loan.

Judge W. R. Ely of the commission replied: "If you have 40 percent of the unimproved mileage on federal highways, there are a lot of roads which have been designated which don't amount to anything."

He was told that the only federal highways in the Panhandle are transcontinental roads and that they are considered among the main highways of the nation.

In answer to the chairman's claim that there isn't any tourist traffic this year, the declaration was made that the tourist traffic is heavier this year than ever except in the Panhandle and that the Panhandle is losing this trade because its roads aren't paved.

Judge Ely also charged that the delegation was "trying a lot of politics on us."

It was asserted the federal loan is to be placed about the state on a per capita basis, which means that most of the money will go to East and South Texas centers that already have highways paved in every direction, from one end of the section to the other.

The Panhandle, with its beautiful, new Palo Duro park and its routes into New Mexico, Colorado and the west should receive most of the western traffic from the southeastern United States. Yet this territory is avoided.

So long as this condition exists, this territory will be a blank spot on tourist maps. The Palo Duro park will never become one of the leading scenic attractions as it should.

We've had about enough of this kind of treatment. Eventually, if it continues, the group at Austin will kill the goose that lays its golden eggs.

Some day the people of the Panhandle are going to copy the examples of laborers and go on a "strike." If the taxes were to cease coming in from this part of the state, down-state elected and nominated officials might look differently upon their fellows who have been treated as subjects entirely too long.

Some day there is going to be a fight to the finish. Most Panhandle people will welcome that day.

OUTLAW'S FAREWELL

BEFORE the case of John Dillinger lapses into obscurity, it is worth while to have a final glance at the verdict of the coroner's jury which examined into his death. The verdict reads as follows:

"John Dillinger came to his death from the wounds of bullets fired from a revolver or revolvers, all in the hands of one or more government agents. The agents are to be highly commended for their efficient participation in the occurrence."

In its laconic brevity and salty expressiveness, this verdict has a tang not unlike those which used to be recorded in the wild west of frontier days. It tells the whole story in two sentences. Short and grim it is a fitting epitaph for a gunman.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, August 2—Weekly Blue Eagle is now in its seventh issue, has gained a circulation of 65,000, and long ago jumped from four tabloid-size pages to eight.

This NRA house organ is so well edited as to offend NRA critics little chance for ridicule—which is too bad, because I would like to poke a little fun at it myself. The most extraordinary thing about "The Bleagle"—as it's called, of course—is that it never mentions the name of Gen. Hugh Johnson. Or of anybody else in NRA.

Editor Bill Lawson decided it wouldn't quite do to play up Johnson's name and nobody else's and that to throw the sheets open to other NRA prima donnas would invite so much jealousy and accusation of personal publicity with a fellow trying to get out a newspaper.

Of course a prominent business man or trade association executive doesn't have much trouble crashing "The Bleagle." Just let him throw an armful of posies at NRA and its effect on his industry and he'll be quoted with his name and correct middle initial.

The weekly is sent free to all code authorities. NRA state officials, trade associations, and persons who ask for it. By attempting to publish all the official, authentic NRA dope, it saves a great pile of correspondence.

Texts of all executives and administrative orders, summaries of interpretations—including those affecting the candlewick bedspread industry—are carried, with explanations of the most important ones.

Also there are hearing schedules, business charts, lists of new code authority members, pleasant little business items about payroll increases, price increases and reductions, personal testimonials and snappy little news notes such as how the dress code people have distributed 50,000,000 NRA labels.

Originally, "Bleagle" carried cartoons portraying the Blue Eagle as the king of birds, inspirational editorials, and columns of epigrams from "the Administrator." But those have been cut out. While other papers were screaming the Dolfloss assassination, the big Page One "Bleagle" scoop, as headlined, was:

"NRA Plan Not Theoretical."

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

You may feel quite safe when you eat oysters, because the oyster industry is fairly well under control form a health standpoint. But beware of the kind of mussels you choose, for so far little consideration has been given to the problem of poisoning from the eating of this type of shellfish.

Mussels are found in most inland streams in the United States and are frequently eaten by people who have no knowledge of the danger.

In the summer of 1933, there were at least 15 cases of severe poisoning in California and Oregon after the eating of mussels. One man died in less than three hours after eating such food, but the others were saved by prompt medical attention.

In an epidemic of such poisoning in 1927 in San Francisco—12 cases occurred. No case of mussel poisoning has ever been reported during the cold months.

Origin of the poison in the mussel has not been definitely established. But it is believed to be similar to the poison found in certain mushrooms. Symptoms are about the same as those which follow mushroom poisoning, with paralysis, unconsciousness, and death.

Of course, there is also trouble with the stomach, such as vomiting and irritation of the bowel. In a few cases, the nerves are affected, with itching and eruptions on the surface of the body.

You should not eat mussels or any food from a stream without knowing that the material is safe. State boards of health have repeatedly issued warnings against use of mussels as food. In summer the danger seems to be much greater than in winter.

The trouble is that no one seems to be able to tell the poisonous mussels from the safe ones. The facts have not been worked out in regard to this type of shellfish even as well as they have been worked out regarding mushrooms.

The poison in a mussel is not one that can be destroyed by heat, for cooking does not stop action of the poison.

The poisoning is, however, controlled to some extent by adding a tablespoon of bicarbonate of soda to each quart of water in which the mussels are cooked.

The safest rule is not to eat this type of shellfish under any circumstances, because there is no control over it and the danger of sudden fatal poisoning is too great.

"Dr. Watts says you are perfectly well, and just wasting his time always coming in for examinations."

Market On Cotton Is Subjected To Usual Liquidation

NEW YORK—Cotton closed from five to nine points higher yesterday after a day of nervous fluctuations during which the market sought to weigh off the indicated poorer prospects for the crop against the possibility of government action on one hand and lack of encouragement from the standpoint of consumptive possibilities on the other.

The market was subjected to the accustomed pre-bureau liquidation against the August 8th governmental crop estimate.

Hall county was listed as one of the counties in Texas to receive primary drought relief last Saturday, following requests from county heads. The requests were made necessary because of the shortage of grass and the surplus cattle here.

New Wage Scale Proposed To End Driver's Strike

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 2.—Immediate termination of the truck drivers' strike was proposed today by the Employers Advisory committee, which recommended a wage scale of 50 cents an hour for drivers and 40 cents for other workers of certain classification.

The plan was announced simultaneously with the sporadic picketing by strikers, resulting in the beating of four truck operators and disabling several vehicles.

Eight pickets were arrested.

Letters From The People

Dallas, Texas,
July 30, 1934.

The Democrat,
Memphis, Texas.
My Dear Friends:

Now that the campaign has been concluded I want to express to you and your very splendid paper my deep and abiding thanks for the many courtesies extended to me and for your generous support and friendship.

In a state-wide campaign reliance must be had on one's friends. Because of the short time which I had to make the campaign of the entire state it was impossible for me to see more than a small percentage of the people; but for the generous attitude of the press I should have been greatly handicapped in reaching the people.

Be assured of my deep sense of appreciation.

Sincerely,
TOM CONNALLY

HUNTER CLUB IS ORGANIZED AT AMARILLO

Panhandle-Wide Organization To Be Worked Out

Special to The Democrat
AMARILLO, Aug. 2.—The organization of a Panhandle-wide Tom F. Hunter for Governor club has been started here this week with Fred Seale as chairman. Plans are being formulated to carry Mr. Hunter's campaign into every county of the Panhandle in the coming run-off primary. An organization with a chairman and a group of supporters working for Mr. Hunter's election will be set up in every Panhandle county.

Mr. Seale, who was active in the Hunter campaign during the time preceding the first primary, called attention to Hunter's strong showing in this section in the face of a Panhandle candidate for governor.

"The Hunter organization has not been very active up to the present, because we have felt that with a local favorite in the field that we owed the people of this section the opportunity to vote for their choice in the first primary without too strong a plea for our candidate," Mr. Seale said.

"However, it is with pride that we point to the results in Hunter's home town. The three Wichita Falls candidates for the office of Governor voted in the same precinct. Hunter carried that precinct, lead in the City of Wichita Falls and in Wichita County. He lacked only a small number of votes of getting a clear majority over all five opponents in the county. We are especially pleased with the strong showing he made in the Panhandle, and recall to mind the wonderful support accorded him in this section two years ago when he was unknown to people here.

"Mr. Hunter has at heart the best interests of all the people of Texas, and we are sure that this fact will be recognized before the end of this run-off campaign.
