City To Open New $100,000 Unit Of Plant

Members Of Commission Will Inspect Airports Today At Amarillo; E. L. Kleit Re-Elected City Attorney

Formal participation of the city in the opening of the new $100,000 unit of the city power plant was authorized by the city commission yesterday afternoon when an appropriation for advertising and other expenses was made. Date of the opening will be June 4, with city officials and the public taking part. Plans also were made for the commission and others to inspect the airports of Amarillo today. The party is to meet at 6 o'clock this morning at the Hotel Lubbock and after breakfast will make a motor trip to Amarillo. D. N. Leaverton, commissioner, said he probably would be unable to make the trip, but the other members are expected to go. Representatives of the architects recently employed to design a hangar, will be in the party.

Re-Elected
Judge E. L. Kleit, city attorney, was re-elected in that capacity. Commissioner George Benson and the city manager were instructed to file into the matter of fire insurance for city property and to report at a future meeting. The city manager also was authorized to enter into a contract for handling of salvage work at the city dump ground.

Following reading of a letter from the chamber of commerce asking attendance of members of the commission at its meetings, the city manager was instructed to advise the chamber of commerce that its members were urged to attend meetings of the city commission. Meetings are open to all and the commission feels that if business men would take a personal interest in the deliberations of the city's governing body, they would more clearly understand the needs of the city. A closer cooperation between the commission and the chamber of commerce is being sought.

Steps Authorized
Legal steps for the taking over of sewer lines in University place, which were constructed by private interests, were authorized. Cost of the project will be approximately $2,304.60.

The commission also expressed its appreciation of the splendid work of the park board in the handling of the city's recreational centers. A general discussion of the city's water supply was held and it was decided that steps to look towards future growth and expansion of the city by increasing the water supply, were authorized.

Mr. Mayfield came up from Tahoka yesterday afternoon and secured a suite of rooms for his father here.

After getting his father settled comfortably, his first task was to prepare a formal statement for newspapers. Then he handled some local details, including a private dinner which friends of the senator gave in his honor. "I was up in Amarillo in 1927 with an oil company and was down here a good deal at that time," the younger man added. "I like Lubbock and this part of Texas very much."

Asked how he liked campaigning, he said, "I like it fine. You meet so many new people. Why, we

How I coaxed him to eat

"ONCE I was worried. Medicine was getting on my nerves. I prepared many appetizing dishes, but John simply would not eat—just 'mimed' at his food. Perhaps sometimes a little grouchy. I began to fear he was 'slipping.' What was I to do? Love, home, happiness, business success—all depended upon an improvement in his condition. The blood-boosting idea suggested itself to me. My Druggist recommended S.S.S. He told me that S.S.S. was a great blood tonic; that it had been successful for over 100 years; that it was made from entirely fresh vegetable drugs and was beneficial to the most delicate system. Also that it would build up the blood and improve the processes by which the body is nourished. I brought home a large size bottle. John agreed to try it. Well, in just a few days I could see the difference. His improvement has been so rapid I'm going to take several more bottles, and not only that, but he is now telling his friends to take S.S.S. It's a fact that when a man's system gets a 'run-down,' it is the resistance to ward

Spring Frock

Not the least interesting of the spring style trends are the new prints which are so very popular. Dark backgrounds are usually chosen, with the design in vivid colors. A dainty printed frock of an interesting Oriental motif is pictured.

The skirt fullness is posed in front in unpressed pleats. A poplin gives movement to the hipline, and attractive neck treatments of two solid color bandings, which is repeated at the wrist, with narrow belt at the normal line, are the featured style points.

Look Out, Primo! The big Lump from Venice is to be tossed to the lions at last. By which we mean that Carrara is to have a couple of large landy hills of George Godfrey next month down in Philadelphia, and it isn't going to make much difference to Primo whether he's in Philadelphia or Land's End, California. The rising young heavyweight from Italy is on the loose.

In point of public interest, this stands out as the Battle of Luce of the Century. The big black fellow from Liverpool, whose right name we are told is Feab 6, Williams, scales around 225, against Carrera's 270. Godfrey has been the leader for years of the little band of brutes known as Dark Menaces in the boxing world, and he never has had a crack at the white man's champion.

Now he is to have a shot at the man who has achieved more publicity in his noisy trek across the country than almost any foreign boxer that has come to these shores. It will be a big show.

A Chance for George
Here is an opportunity for Jimmy Dougherty of the Baron of Liverpool, who holds the deed to the Godfrey property, to show skeletons one and all that Feab is a great fighter. If Feab fails to eliminate the Rhinoceros as a heavyweight possibility, we can write the Pennsylvania Senate bill off the books.

Will Be No Fun
It is possible for Carrera to win from the Black Shadow. He may weather the Godfrey storm, but he'll never be the same, if he gets past this one. Back in 1923 Rico beat Godfrey over the 10-round route. For months afterward Rico was a sick man.

Nocturnal Baseball Has Advantages And Drawbacks, Gayle Talbot Observes

Battle of Giants for June 23
Night Games May Be Played in Texas Loop

By GAYLE TALBOT, JR., Associated Press Sports Writer
DALLAS, May 22. (AP)—Nocturnal baseball, if it comes to the Texas League, might prove a financial blessing to the boys who sign the salary checks, but it is hard to say the innovation will find no great favor with two groups—the paid performers, themselves, and a score or more of sport scribes over the state.

The prospect of a "leisure" estimate for five months each year, short hours and good pay, has caused many a farm boy to get his name on the dotted line. Many Texas League players in recent years have been somewhat noted for their social activities after the hours of night had fallen, so to speak. When they transform the thing into a kerfuffle circuit there will be very little of that. Ten o'clock of an evening might be just a starting time for the night ones of New York, but it is bed time in the average Texas city.

Consider The Scrib
Then, consider the poor newspaper fellow, who must toil long after the hour has been made. He is pressed to make it to his usual ground of banquets, governor's reception and such as it is. He never will get anywhere they turn on the lights—if they do.

Another little item that the club owners will have to take into consideration before they start entering to a sleepy frolic is the reaction of the neighbors. A sizeable crowd, enthusiastic at a timely knock, can be heard, roughly, for a mile. Mrs. Plummer, who resides early, might not like to be awakened every time the home boys pull a nifty play.

One Advantage
One good thing for the players—their wives included. The road, however, will mix the antics of the gardener as he staggers about wondering where the sphere, lodged in the sun, will hit him. One of the high lights of the 1929 season was when Paul Senterling of Beaumont let a long fly crack him on the head.

So far as the records reveal, El Paso was the first Texas city to go in for night sports in a large way. The city's high school stadium, illuminated electrically, was illuminated three or four years ago and has been the scene of many night football games. Only a few weeks the Texas School of Mines eleven played a nocturnal practice game with the University of Arizona. Big crowds were attracted by the novelty at first, they say, but that has worn off now and attendance is just about what it used to be.

Only one team ever managed to play a slick one on the miners under the arc. Learning beforehand that a white football would be used, the Temple Normal eleven backed itself in white jerseys. It was a petard or trap before the miners got to where they could follow the ball, and then only because the muddy field blackened the Normalites' jerseys.

The School of Mines probably closed up a book when it decided to enter the proposed West Texas Conference, sponsored by Texas A&M. There would have been more prestige for the group in winning a title in such a school than in having a successful season against scattered members of the Big Game and Arizona. That Mack Saxon, the former Texas University star, has built up a strong athletic organization at the Pasa City school was disclosed when the miners held the crack St. Edwards' eleven to a tie and only played the Saints in a game at El Paso last fall.

Chicago and Pittsburgh each made 13 hits today, but the champions batted timely while the play of the locals was loose and the Cubs evened the series by taking the game 12 to 5. Steve Swenson was to start the game for Pittsburgh but was taken to a hospital in the morning suffering from acute appendicitis.

The Nut Cracker

Harvard's bridge whist team recently trounced Old Eli's card sharks two nights in a row. O'Goofy asks if the Crimsons fans uprooted the table legs and tore up the luncheon napkins in their victory.

Both teams found it necessary to use substitutes in the lineup. Bags took Allen's place in the Harvard lineup after the latter had bid five no trump and was thrown for a severe loss.

IT HAPPENED THAT LUTHER WAS OUTSTANDING FOR YALE BOTH NIGHTS. SEVERAL TIMES HE ELECTRIFIED THE SPECTATORS WITH LONG STAINS IN SPADES AND ONCE HE ELUIDED THE ENTIRE CRIMSON TEAM FOR A GRAND SLAM AFTER A DARING CLUB FINESSE.

In Akron the other night Young Irish, a lightweight, rose up from a nine count and smacked the 300-pound referee to the canvas. According to O'Goofy, who was a witness, the audience immediately hummed a couple of bars from "My Wild Irish Right."

The Poor Richard Club, organization of advertising experts in Philadelphia, had as an after-luncheon speaker the other day a fellow named Shires, who plays baseball for the White Sox. Shires said, among other things that his advertising "sold" well to everyone but a Mr. Coniskey.

Mr. Shires evidently has forgotten that a Mr. Traflet, a professional football player, would not fall for his pugilistic ads.

So, John McGraw has traded Ralph Judd to the Cardinals for Clarence Mitchell. That's the only thing Judd needed to insure his success as a big league pitcher.

Mr. Judd had the gallery early this afternoon, but it began to drift away to join the Carlton-Peep shooting just as the two began speculating over par golf where in the first nine Carlton had been only one hole and Peep but one.

Ossie Carlton Loses To Peek On 17th Green

FAVORITE IN STATE AMATEUR GOLF TOURNAMENT DOWNED BY GALVESTON GOLFER; BUD MCKINNEY WINS AGAIN

RIVER OAKS COUNTRY CLUB, HOUSTON, May 22. (AP)—Ossie Carlton, the favorite, picked up late today when hope was dead and Gaston Peck, Galveston, took his place among the semi-finalists in the 34th annual Texas Amateur golf tournament.

Carlton fought a losing fight and at the 17th hole—the 35th for the day—when he could have done no better than par the hole and lose, he shook his head, clasped the sturdily Peck's hand and picked away the ball. It seemed a relief to the Galveston player, whose hands, for all his stocky strength, were shaking with nervous fatigue as he bent to brush a twig from the green.

The others who came through to the semi-finals were young Bud McKinney of Del Rio, who downed Clyde Cunningham of Houston, 5 and 4; W. C. Hunt, the veteran Houston Country club man, who beat Leonard Atwell, a fellow club member, 3 and 2; and Omer Crisman of Orange, whose greater stamina finally disposed of the champion, George Rotan of Houston, 2 up.

McKinney will meet Peck tomorrow and Crisman will have Hunt to fight. Hunt's continued great form had developed into the talk of the tournament. He was the medalist. Rotan was favored over Crisman and had been picked by many to go into the final.

Gallery Is Divided
Bud had the gallery early this afternoon, but it began to drift away to join the Carlton-Peep shooting just as the two began speculating over par golf where in the first nine Carlton had been only one hole and Peep but one.

The consensus was that Carlton's driver cost him the match. His putting was excellent, better than Peck's, but the Galveston man had control of the long shaft better and beat Carlton near the green.

Max Schmelzing was born Sept. 28, 1905. He is 6 feet and 1 inch tall.

American Hopes On French Clay Courts Brighter

PARIS, France, May 22. (AP)—America's chances in the French clay court doubles championships increased today with the straight-set advance of Helen Wills Moody and Elizabeth Ryan to the women's final and of Bill Tilden and Arthur Cohen to the men's quarter-final round.

At the same time the United States forces suffered their first defeat through the defeat of Ben Jacobs and her Belgian partner, Jeanne Sigar, by the English combination of Joan Fry and Ernie Trude Harvey. British teamwork prevailed at 6-3, 6-3, in a quarter-final tilt.

Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan were victorious over Mme. Bordes and me. Huetrotin of France, at 6-2, and thus qualified to encounter Miss Fry and Miss Harvey next. Tilden's cannonball service was being terrific execution as he and en downed Antoine Gentien and Georges Glasser of France at 6-1, 12-6, 6-2, the American champion rolling up a total of 17 aces.

Two-Day Event To Benefit Park Improvements

LAMESA, May 22. (Special)—Plans for improving the Lamesa athletic park were discussed here this week by the Lamesa Lions club which is planning a two-day rodeo May 30 and 31 as means of financing the improvements. The rodeo is being directed by Charlie Cooper, chief West Texas rodeo manager, who has over twenty head of famous wild cattle and horses. Besides the rodeo, the Lions club is planning an Independence day celebration for more funds to provide Lamesa with an improved athletic field. The club will probably erect bleachers and will probably re-construct the present grand stand.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

My words shall be of the uprightness of my heart; and my lips shall utter knowledge clearly. The spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.—Job, xxxiii, 3, 4.

LOOKING AHEAD

WHEN Lubbock, in the face of opposition from cities more centrally located, won by an overwhelming majority the 1931 convention of the Texas Retail Merchants association, it was brought off forcefully again that "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon Us."

A new city, in a new section—boasting a record of growth which has found its way to the front pages of metropolitan newspapers everywhere—Lubbock has a distinct appeal to Texas and if we interpret the time correctly this city will soon become one of the convention centers of the state.

More large conventions than ever before will find their meeting places in Lubbock during 1930. The way we have started promises that 1931 will see an even larger number. Thousands of visitors will thus be attracted to the South Plains and its capital, and by word of mouth the name and fame of Lubbock will be extended.

The Morning Avalanche learns from an authoritative source that the 1931 West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention is Lubbock's, almost for the asking. Throw in a few more large gatherings and the city will again be confronted with one of its crying needs—a municipal auditorium.

We do not suggest voting a bond issue for an auditorium any time soon. In the past several years citizens here have voted generously to provide funds for projects of a public nature, all of them of more immediate need than the auditorium. At least one more issuance of bonds—to cover construction of a new jail and criminal courts building—must be approved before any action is proposed for the auditorium but the question continues to attract attention.

Some day Lubbock is going to build an auditorium. The need keeps bobbing up and will continue to bob up until the time when the people feel the urge of sufficient nature to care for the problem. With convention after convention selecting Lubbock the necessity of an auditorium will rapidly become acute and we had best be thinking about it as we go along.

HALF A BILLION A YEAR

New the railroads are crying, "Too much government!" It is a periodic protest. The president of one of the great trunk lines says something ought to be done to curb government activities which are "over-extended, over-organized and over-manned, the outgrowth of piecemeal legislation without any well-defined, conscious national policy."

Government costs, he says, have been increasing about half a billion dollars a year for the past five years.

There are some elementary facts that should be better understood. Among these are the obvious ones that government costs money and the government has no money that it does not take from the people.

Few enlargements of government come from the government itself. They come in response to the pleas or the demands of private interests or citizen organizations.

The notion is general that anything can be got through the government. And along with this runs the fallacious idea that what the government does for a group or a locality, costs nothing. If you want a job done without paying for it yourself, put it on the government. It is an easily persuasive suggestion.

"We want recognition, give us at least a bureau, if not a department with a member in the president's cabinet," is the reiterated demand of one organization after another.

And when the demand becomes loud enough and appears sufficiently influential, it gets hearing in Washington and perhaps action. And the first action to be undertaken is securing an appropriation. That is the government reaches down into the pockets of the people and takes out the money to do the new job the people, or a part of the people, want put upon the government. The governmental plant grows but it sucks its nourishment from the resources of the people. Taxes are its sap.

When Lindy tries for a new record and fails it will be news.

Owing to the late spring the new tariff will not bloom until June.

What any city gains in population it may easily lose in comfort of living.

Every young fellow should put aside about a million dollars for his hope chest.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

WHEN SENATORS RAISE GREAT ROW OVER FILTERING OF THEIR FILES IT MEANS BUT LITTLE IS MISSING

By CHARLES F. STEWART Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 22.—If U. S. senators really are as spied upon by secret service agents as they think they are, Moscow itself can hardly be much worse, as a hotbed of espionage, than the Capitol, and the neighboring big buildings where the members of the upper house have their offices, here in Washington.

Indeed, maybe Moscow is not so bad in some respects. The Russian cheka has a reputation for neatness. From all accounts, the folk it has under observation never know they are being watched until it comes time for the sleuths to pounce on them.

Here the investigators of a suspected senator's correspondence files do not even bother to put his letters back where they belong, after examining them.

Moreover, there is only one cheka. The person who is snooped on in Russia, if he discovers it at all, knows positively who the snooper must have been—a cheka operative.

In Washington it is liable to have been any one of several different varieties. Illustratively, "My best guess," Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee told me, just after his office had been paved over, in the course of the fight he was waging against confirmation of Judge John J. Parker's appointment to the U. S. supreme bench, "is that justice department agents were looking for something. It is scarcely likely prohibition representatives were hunting for liquor, because it is well known I am a teetotaler."

Still, the senator was not quite certain.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, was so much annoyed, during one period, by investigators, who actually carried away his correspondence before he was through with it, that his secretary finally left a note in plain sight, requesting at least the return of the papers.

They were returned, too. Shortly afterward the entire missing batch of letters was found one morning outside the North Dakota's office door, carefully bundled up and addressed to him.

Some share of the snooping, to be sure, may be the work of purely irresponsible prowlers, rather than those of the official type.

Nevertheless, it is a coincidence, at any rate, that senators who are causing especial irritation to one administrative department or another are just at the height of such activities, particularly apt to discover evidences of clandestine visits to their suites in the Senate Office building.

The politically extremely orthodox Senator Smoot, for instance, who recently reported his quarters as showing signs of an unauthorized call between night-fall and daylight, is rather hard to imagine as the object of executive departmental suspicion. The turbulent Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, whose files were jimmied and ransacked a few days later, is not a bit difficult, however, to visualize as having upset plenty of departments. Even the comparatively innocuous Senator William E. Brock, of Tennessee, another recipient of some mysterious visitant's attentions, was on the anti-administration side of one of the current session's judicial controversies.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, to whom attaches the unique distinction of once having been the object of what looked extremely like an attempt by the spoozers to frame him with perjured testimony on criminal charges, probably has ample justification for believing that he has been spied on by nearly everyone in the espionage business—governmental and private.

Other senators may imagine more or less of it. Senator Wheeler can point to this experience of his own in which it came bodily out into the open and fought him with an indictment and faked evidence.

So it is not all imaginary, anyway. Accusations of official espionage are not at all new. Senator "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman made them as long ago as the administration of President Roosevelt, at any rate.

Of course spying was rampant during the war.

DISPROVES TALES OF HARM DONE BY ALUMINUM COOKING WARE

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Fever is generally considered to be a manifestation of the reactions of the body to disease.

Sometimes heat developed in the body controls germ activity. In the attack on general paresis by the malaria injection method, one of the results of the injection is to produce fever, and it has been suggested that in the treatment of conditions similar to general paresis the production of fever is the important factor.

It is possible to produce fever in the human being by injecting any foreign protein substance. When such injections are made, the reactions are sometimes severe. Attempts have been made by the workers in the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company to develop some system of raising the temperature of the body without injecting anything into the body.

Doctors C. M. Carpenter and A. B. Page have been developing a method of raising the temperature by the use of short wave lengths in several oscillations. In this method the energy is concentrated between two condenser plates made of aluminum covered with hard rubber to prevent arcing should the patient or any attendant come in contact with the plates.

The person whose temperature is to be raised is suspended on cotton tapes stretched across a wooden frame and surrounded with celotex so that there is a fairly tight air chamber around the body. The plates are placed at each side of the celotex box and the waves produced by the oscillator oscillate through the body from one side to the other.

It had been possible to raise the temperature of a man five degrees in one hour with this apparatus. Indeed, it would be possible to raise the temperature much higher than 104 to 105 degrees, but this has not been done because of the possible dangers.

When the temperature of the body is raised rapidly by such a device, the person begins to have a fast pulse and to breathe more rapidly. Usually the blood pressure falls. In some instances high temperatures were maintained for one hour without apparent distress or fatigue to the patient.

It is believed that the development of the heat in the body is due to the resistance made by the body to the condition of the current. The evidence thus far available from studies in some 25 human beings and of many laboratory animals indicates that the heat within the body makes it less favorable for the multiplication of germs and that the increased rate of the various chemical processes in the body aids the resistance to disease and infectious agents.

NATALIE CONVERSE tries to conquer her jealousy over her husband, ALAN. But they quarrel over BERNADINE LAMONT, a night club hostess, when she asks him to look after her son, BOBBY, whose father had saved Alan's life during the war.

Annoyed at Natalie's attitude, Alan seeks sympathy from his secretary, PHILIPPA WEST, who is waiting for the opportunity to widen the breach between husband and wife.

Phillipa plans several things to arouse Natalie's suspicion and one day Alan finds her packing to leave him. Wounded pride prevents her from seeking a reconciliation. After she goes, the house seems desolate to Alan and he seeks consolation with Phillipa, who plays her part cleverly.

Natalie regrets her hasty action. She hasn't told her family of the break and promises to take her younger sister back to New York with her. Still she will not write to Alan, hoping he will beg her to return.

Natalie's silence merely arouses his resentment and spurs him on in his affair with Phillipa. They go about together constantly and, when Phillipa fears that he does not intend to propose marriage, she tells him that her parents object to her going with a married man.

F. S. Roundtree Scores Forty-First Legislative Group

THE 41ST LEGISLATURE

The personnel of the house of representatives was composed of seven preachers, a few farmers, a few business men and a large majority of lawyers. When they came together they were much out of sorts on account of the way the general election went on the 8th of November. They were mad at the preachers on account of the part they played in the general election.

A bill was offered to make it unlawful for preachers to hold office in Texas. This bill was voted down but it showed a bad spirit and an unwise movement. A bill was offered to make it unlawful for women to wear shoes with heels over one inch high. This little bill died a-borning in the committee; but it shows how unwise some men are.

Half Race Bill

A large sum of money was spent trying to pass a horse racing bill; but this bill was consigned to the wastebasket. A bill was passed by both houses to bar all Hoover Democrats from the democratic primary.

General Dan's blue pencil put the fixin's on this spite bill. These Lilliputian legislators made large appropriations for various things and much of it was vetoed by the governor.

The worst spirit was shown when the house of representatives refused to investigate two contest cases.

Rev. H. H. Wallace of Marshall served in the Fortieth legislature and was nominated in the democratic primary for the Forty-first legislature without opposition. When it was ascertained that he would not vote for Al Smith, democratic committee met without a quorum being present, committed the high-handed act of taking Rev. H. H. Wallace's name from the record. Investigation was refused by the legislature.

The other contest case was from Hidalgo county, E. M. Smith vs. W. R. Montgomery.

The constitution guarantees to every man the right of petition. All of these representatives had taken an oath to uphold the law and constitution. The trouble in both cases was that Rev. Wallace and E. M. Smith were counted as Hoover Democrats.

E. M. Smith's petition in part is as follows: "Your petitioner submits that action of the house in passing Mr. Beck's motion to declare Montgomery elected is in open and notorious violation of all the sections of the constitution mentioned, and especially of articles 3063, 3064 and 3065 of the revised civil statutes providing the method of contests for a seat in the house of representatives."

Why, I'd be lost without you, Phillipa, he bent on dead-ly. I didn't know what to do. You mean that we're really got to give up all these excursions and dinners together, and the... do you?" Phillipa remained silent, her head averted.

"I thought you were too much my friend to desert me when I need you most," Alan reproached her. "More than that, I even began to think you might care for me in a different way. A moment ago, when you said you knew what love was, I had a wild idea that you were thinking of me. But I'm getting it right now. You want to drop me that you won't be giving me any encouragement. It's hurting my conscience. That's what you mean when you spoke of the way you feel, isn't it, Phillipa?" Phillipa stared up at him. "No, it isn't a complete fool, Alan." Her voice and expression told him what she wanted him to be.

"Phillipa!" He took her in his arms, and if his kisses might not have satisfied her, they were all that Phillipa asked.

"It wasn't my conscience that was hurting me," she breathed at last; "I was afraid I would weaken, and cry on your shoulder some-thing when you least expected it." Phillipa pulled her arm. "Don't same me if I was afraid to believe in my luck," he said. "I couldn't think of any reason why a girl like you, with a world of men to choose from, should become interested in a job some other woman had thrown away."

Phillipa made a mental note to teach him to refrain from such casual mention of Natalie once she was in a position to assert herself. "Don't be absurd, Alan," she said. "You know that a girl in New York doesn't meet many men, unless he's on the stage or in society."

"Well, let me tell you that there are quite a few girls who would give their new long hair to get a sound look from Geoffrey Norman," Phillipa sighed. "Poor Geoffrey," Alan remarked. "I suppose he told you he was going abroad with his mother?" Phillipa smiled enigmatically. "I saw him before he left," she admitted with a slight show of reluctance.

"He left without saying a word to me," Alan told her. "I didn't know he had been around." Phillipa properly appeared his abandonment as a mild criticism of Geoffrey.

"He didn't stay long," she said defensively. "And, I forgot, he told me to tell you he was in, and sorry not to see you."

"Why didn't he see me?" Alan demanded, observing her closely. "She pretended to be upset. Why... I... I suppose he hadn't seen me," she stammered.

Alan laughed. "Phillipa, you're hiding something from me," he accused. "What happened? You may as well tell me, because I think I can guess."

"Then guess," Phillipa advised.

"You'll see how good I am," Alan asserted. "Geoffrey came in, ostensibly to see me, but he got dejected at your desk, and when he was through there, he didn't feel like talking with anyone else. It's my guess that you refused him, Phillipa."

"He's a dear boy," Phillipa said tearfully.

"If I were to advise you without consideration for myself, I'd tell you that you've made a great mistake," Alan asserted.

Phillipa looked at him with in-teresting wonder. "But Alan," she differed. "How could I say you to him when I'm in love with you?"

"Not according to your head," Alan said. "You should have said yes to his money and position," he replied.

"It surprised him a trifle, when Phillipa nodded her head in assent."

"Yes, I might have," she said gravely; "for Geoffrey's a darling. He doesn't have to be married for his social importance. Yes, to be honest, Alan, I think I would have accepted him, if it hadn't been for you."

Alan wasn't altogether pleased with her statement. "I'm not sure I like to hear you say you would be willing to marry for money, under any circumstances, Phillipa," he told her.

"I didn't say that, Alan. I said Geoffrey was a darling. I think I might have mistaken my liking for him for love if I hadn't known what the real thing is."

Alan was pleasantly mollified. "Geoffrey is a fine kid," he agreed. "I hope no girl will marry him for anything but love," Phillipa remarked. "He doesn't deserve such a fate."

"You believe in love, don't you?" Alan queried teasingly.

Phillipa thought it a tactless question. It showed his experienced view of the grand passion too clearly. It was unimportant to her that she did not love him, but she resented his apparent realization that he was not desperately in love with her.

But she could not afford to quarrel with him yet.

Her eyes grew soft as a veiled moon as she looked up at him and said: "Of course I do, Alan."

Alan was touched by the wistfulness in her tones.

"Perhaps," he said impulsively, "you can teach me the real meaning of love, Phillipa."

Only a tear, winking in Phillipa's eye, answered him.
