Tape indicates fire in Flight 592 cabin

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Six minutes into the doomed ValuJet Flight 592, the cockpit door opened and there was conversation about fire in the passenger cabin, the plane's voice recorder indicated Monday.

Robert Francis, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the passengers also had problems getting oxygen before the plane crashed in the Florida Everglades, killing all aboard.

"It appears that the cockpit door opened," Francis told a news conference. "There were verbal indications from the cockpit there was fire in the passenger cabin. There was also an indication from the cabin that there were problems obtaining oxygen."

Francis said the tape contains 30 minutes of recorded material, the normal capacity. He said the tape is in good shape but the sound quality is poor and is "very very difficult to decipher."

Francis said a group of experts are listening to the tape but added, "At this stage we have not had the opportunity to do enough work on the tape to say how much help its going to be."

"It's not going to be a question of hours but of days" before the experts know if there is more to be learned from the tape, he said.

Earlier, in Miami, NTSB spokesman Mike Benson said of the voice recorder: "It takes time to handle and get information out of it and experts need to sit down and listen to it very carefully. We want to make sure we know what we have."

Benson said the black box found in the Everglades muck on Sunday was in good condition, but could not

New spill in bay

HOUSTON — The company responsible for an oil slick that workers contained in Galveston Bay on Monday has a history of trouble with barges buckling and breaking open. The Buffalo 286, a 27-year-old barge owned by Buffalo Marine Service Inc., dumped thousands of gallons of oil in the Houston Ship Channel late Sunday before limping into a port about five miles away. On March 18, a barge belonging to the same firm buckled and spilled more than 5,000 barrels of fuel oil into Galveston Bay./1B

Students in Palmer Drug Abuse Program's Totally Awesome Sober Kids program prepare to put an award necklace around the neck of Stephanie, 14, as PDAP counselor Sonny Blake looks on. The program supports youths who have someone close to them dealing with drug or alcohol addiction. It tries to keep youngsters from becoming isolated, prone to crime.

Task force seeks to reduce violence among youths

Editor's note: This is the last of a three-part series examining gangs.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Reducing violence among Midland's youth is the mission of a local task force.

The Midland Introspective Task Force on Violence has been meeting since February 1995 to find ways to reduce youth brutality.

"Violent crime is the virus of society," said Midland attorney Terry Rhoads at a recent task force meeting.

Rhoads, planning chairman for the United Way, and an attorney with Cotton, Bledsoe Tighe & Dawson, said, "Midland already has a number of programs in existence, but no one program can solve all the problems that exist. We strive to find ways to impact the greatest number of kids."

Rhoads spoke at two recent task force meetings attended by members representing various agencies that serve youth.

"If you ask 20 people the cause of youth violence, you will receive 20 different answers," according to a statement from the task force.

"From abuse and neglect to a permissive society, these responses all represent part of the whole answer. ... This task force has concentrated on solutions that are effective for a broad segment of juveniles and are prevention-oriented."

"We're not looking to work with kids who are already wrapped up in gangs," said Sonny Blake of Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP).

"We're trying to reach kids before they get into gangs. And, in Midland,

Yeltsin, Chechen rebel leader sign cease-fire accord

■ Pact appears timed to help Russia's president in a tight race before June 16 elections.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Three weeks before he faces the voters, President Boris Yeltsin staged a "May surprise" Monday: a pact to stop the fighting in the grinding 17-month war in Chechnya.

The unexpected cease-fire agreement, which takes effect Saturday, was signed in the Kremlin Monday night after three hours of talks between a Russian government delegation headed by Yeltsin and a team of Chechen rebels who had just flown in from the battlefields of the secessionist republic.

"This is a historic day and a historic moment," said Yeltsin, who is bound to benefit in the June 16 presidential election from the sudden progress toward ending what has been a seeping wound on Russian society.

'We decided the main question: peace in Chechnya.'
— President Boris Yeltsin

Yeltsin has a big stake in seeing this cease-fire stick, unlike the unilateral call he made to stop fighting in March. Not even his own Russian soldiers, who first rolled into Chechnya in December 1994 to break the republic's bid for independence, honored that pledge.

It had been uncertain as late as Monday morning whether the Chechen rebel leader Zelimkhan Yandarbiyev would bring his delegation to the Moscow meeting arranged by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, which has been trying to mediate an end to the war for a year.

But the bearded intellectual and Chechen ideologist did show up, wearing a fez-shaped Persian wool hat, dark blue shirt and tie, and green military camouflage jacket.

"We will offer Russia a variant at talks which will make it possible to stop the war and save the face of a great power," Yandarbiyev told reporters before boarding the plane for Moscow.

A key development in making these talks possible was the death last month of top rebel leader Dzhokhar Dudayev in a Russian rocket attack, apparently as he was trying to arrange peace talks on his satellite telephone.

Defendant flees; victim's family in agony

By Michelle Boorstein
Associated Press

PHOENIX — It was going to be an open and shut case, police told Rose Marie Maher.

The driver who hit her daughter's car was legally drunk, traces of drugs were found in her system, and she had admitted drinking at a bar.

Just take care of the funeral, they said.

Angela Maher, who had founded a Students Against Drunk Driving in her high school in 1990, was on her way to bring home a friend from a Scottsdale bar when she was killed in July 1994. The irony of her death wasn't lost on friends and strangers, who streamed into town for the 21-year-old's funeral.

"Angela wasn't the kind of person you'll ever forget. You could ask anyone who ever ran across her path," said Rose Marie Maher.

Struggling with her grief, Mrs. Maher began seeing a counselor. She traveled to Nebraska for what would have been her daughter's college graduation. And she waited for the trial.

It never came.

Ten days before jury selection was to begin last September, the driver fled. Left behind was a family grieving over the loss of Angela and its faith in justice.

To the Mahers, Gloria Schulze's disappearance was the final insult in a case they say was carelessly handled.

A month passed between Angela's death and Schulze's arraignment on manslaughter and drunken driving charges. The charges did not bar her Israelis ask: What price peace, security?

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Thepaz family is afraid of Palestinian suicide bombers. So afraid that Nili Thepaz has told her six children not to ride the city buses, where bombs exploded twice this year.

Despite her fear, Mrs. Thepaz will vote for Shimon Peres in Wednesday's election. She believes the prime minister's assurances that peace is within reach.

Her husband Micky thinks she is too trusting. He will vote for opposition leader Benjamin Netanyahu, who has vowed to make security his top priority, even at the risk of paralyzing peace talks with the Palestinians.

The debate in the Thepaz home in a middle-class Jerusalem neighborhood mirrors the key question of the election: Can Israelis have both peace and security, and if so, at what price? A Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza? Some form of Palestinian control in Jerusalem?

Considering the weighty decisions to be made, the campaign has been one of the dullest in recent memory.

Peres and Netanyahu have been glossing over their positions to win over undecided voters. Polls show Peres ahead by 4 percent to 7 percent, but the margin has been shrinking.

Sometimes the differences seem to disappear altogether, leaving voters confused.

Motorists driving along the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway have to strain to distinguish between the blue-and-white banners strung between trees. Their script and format is nearly identical.

"Israel is strong with Peres," reads one.

"Netanyahu — making a secure peace," reads another.

A satirical puppet show on Israel's Channel Two Television recently lampooned the cloned campaigns. In the skit, Netanyahu and Peres meet secretly to compare preparations for their TV debate.

"What's your answer for the first debate question?" Netanyahu asks Peres.

"Peace and security. And yours?"

"Peace and security."

"Great."

The candidates exchange a conspiratorial slap on the back.

Nili and Micky Thepaz both said they don't think the candidates differ much in ideological terms. Whereas Israeli politics once were divided by the idea of land-for-peace deals, most people now accept such deals as inevitable, though they differ on the specifics.

The low-key tone of the campaign was dictated largely by the assassination of Yitzhak Rabin, who was killed at a Tel Aviv peace rally six months ago by a right-wing Jew opposed to his land-for-peace policies.

As a result, large assemblies in town squares and soccer fields — a campaign staple in the past — were canceled for security reasons. Candidates appear only before handpicked audiences.

Peres, a veteran campaigner who used to be shouted down and pelted with tomatoes, wasn't heckled even once.

Perhaps Israelis just didn't have the stamina for a turbulent election campaign after the emotional roller-coaster ride that began with the Rabin assassination Nov. 4. The murder was followed by four suicide bombings by Islamic militants that killed 63 people in February and March, then a two-week war in Lebanon in April.

"People are weary and tired," said commentator Susan Hattis Rolef. "We've been living in an especially tense pressure cooker."

Gadhafi: Western imperialism rules

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Col. Moammar Gadhafi came to Cairo University on Monday preaching a potentially unsettling message: Revolution, revolution, revolution!

Since Friday, the Libyan leader has met President Hosni Mubarak, Egyptian parliamentarians, ministers, union officials, and even desert tribesmen. On Monday, his listeners were professors and students.

"We cannot say that any of us have independence," Gadhafi told the audience of about 200 at Cairo University, Egypt's largest and most prominent institution of higher education.

"The cultural, economic and political colonization is still there," he said. "The military colonization is still present."

Wearing a white headdress and brown Arab-style cape, he insisted that Western imperialism still rules the Arab world and that Arab youth must revolt and take over power, Libyan-style.

Gadhafi was a 27-year-old lieutenant when he seized power in Libya in 1969. Since then, he has sought to carry out a radical democratic experiment in which all power is in the hands of popular committees.

The MISD Bond: OUR KIDS WILL PAY

- $110,000,000 would more than double the total tax-supported debt in Midland -- city, county, airport, hospital, college, and schools combined!
- MISD alone would owe $286 million with interest -- with payments stretched out until 2025, when today's 5th-graders will be 40 years old!

MISD BUDGET FACTS

	'95-'96	Since '88-'89
number of students	23,007	up 19%
cost per student	$4,600	up 41%
total budget	$106m	up 67%
plant & maintenance	$14.4m	up 89%
capital spending	$5.9m	up 168%
property tax rate	$1.39	up 53%

- MISD's revenue is up $5,300,000 per year due to the 12% rise in property valuations since 1994 -- enough to pay for a reasonable $50 million bond without a tax increase.
- MISD knows they could not win a fair election. Why else hold mobile voting only at schools, carefully scheduled to attract parents to special events? Why else spend taxpayer funds to lobby for the bond? That's against the law!

NATO troops can use 'robust' response in Bosnia, but don't SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) - Indicted war criminals remain free and in power. Bosnian Serb mobs repel visiting war refugees, even stoning foreign troops to drive them away.

Despite the "robust" response allowed under their rules of engagement, NATO forces in Bosnia generally are avoiding confrontation instead of implementing the Dayton agreement.

Unlike some other members of the Bosnian peace force, Americans have not allowed themselves to be pushed around while escorting returning Muslim refugees.

But that's as far as the force goes, and that's not enough for some influential locals, who blame political considerations back home — particularly in an election year — in the United States, the largest contributor to the peace implementation force.

"Force has become such a low priority that it's been perceived to be unrealistic as an option, and that's dangerous," said Muhamed Sacirbey, the Bosnian ambassador to the United Nations. "The key issue for American politicians is body bags with Americans."

NATO spokesmen say military and political factors determine the peacekeepers' reaction to each situation. An aggressive stance, such as hunting down popular Bosnian Serb leaders accused of war crimes, could inspire further Serb resistance to the NATO-led force's presence and the Dayton accord.

"A factor which clearly has to be considered on all these occasions is the effect that it may have on the peace agreement as a whole," British Maj. Simon Haselock said Monday.

Almost halfway through their yearlong mission, more than 50,000 NATO troops commanded by U.S. Admiral Leighton Smith have achieved significant goals such as separating warring armies and repairing previously impassable roads and bridges.

But other provisions of Dayton, the complex military-political plan for ending the war, are unfulfilled.

One example is freedom of movement, which would allow hundreds of thousands of refugees to return to areas they inhabited before the war, often now controlled by the enemy.

Increasing attacks threaten Rwanda's fragile peace

BUGERAMA, Rwanda (AP) — The 48 prisoners were asleep in the small village jail when the grenades came through the windows. The men clawed at the mud walls in a futile attempt to escape. Only two survived.

It is still unclear who staged the May 20 massacre and why. What is clear is that it was another episode in a new surge of violence that is threatening Rwanda's fragile peace.

Two years after more than 500,000 people — mostly minority Tutsis and moderate members of the Hutu majority — were hacked, beaten and shot to death in Rwanda, hostilities between the ethnic groups are once again translating into increasing violence.

Hutus — who controlled the Rwandan government until the genocide and many of whom have now fled to refugee camps in neighboring countries — sense that the Tutsi-led government is on the defensive, and they are becoming more organized and more daring.

Tutsis — who now control the government and the military — are striking back at Hutus, accusing them of being infiltrators or sympathizers. They say the dreaded Hutu interahamwe militias are back, operating out of refugee camps.

The deadliest episode in the new wave of violence was the May 20 attack on the jail.

Officials first said the Hutu prisoners, who were being held on suspicion of participating in the 1994 genocide, had died when Hutu comrades from a refugee camp in neighboring Zaire had tried to break them out of jail. But the jail's flimsy wooden doors were kicked in only after the attack was over.

The officials now say the Hutu militants were trying to prevent the prisoners from talking to authorities, and killed them to silence them.

But the United Nations is also investigating, and has not ruled out the possibility that rogue soldiers from the new, Tutsi-dominated Rwandan Patriotic Army may have staged the attack in retaliation for earlier Hutu raids.

Human rights reports indicate that attacks by Hutus and retaliatory strikes by the predominantly Tutsi army have increased this year, and that the number of people killed each month has doubled since January.

In March and April, more than 273 people reportedly were killed in 87 different incidents. Human rights groups say 135 were killed by government forces and 69 by rebels, with the killers of the other 69 undetermined.

Some of the worst violence has occurred in Cyangugu province, where Bugerama is located.

This southwestern corner of Rwanda, wedged between Zaire and Burundi, is close to refugee camps holding thousands of Hutus, including members of the former Rwandan army and militia.

U.S. to make sure Iraq oil-sale gains won't go to military

KUWAIT (AP) — The United States will make sure that returns from limited Iraqi oil sales will not be used to strengthen President Saddam Hussein's military machine, the top U.S. military commander said Friday.

"We are absolutely committed to ensure that (the agreement) is not used to circumvent the intent of it, which is to provide humanitarian assistance to the people of Iraq, who have suffered so much under Saddam Hussein," said Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"We will make sure that none of that money ... is diverted to such things as improving his military capability," the general said.

Shalikashvili, in Kuwait on a tour of Mideast countries, would not elaborate on how the United States intends to carry out that promise.

The United Nations and Iraq agreed last week that Baghdad will sell oil worth $2 billion over an initial six months to buy desperately needed food and medicine. Rigorous U.N. controls are to be put in place to ensure Saddam does not skim money to buy weapons or help his supporters.

The deal comes nearly six years after the United Nations imposed sweeping economic sanctions against Iraq to punish it for invading Kuwait in August 1990.

WEATHER WATCH

Basin again to flirt with 3-digit heat

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high between 95 and 100 and southwest winds at 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low near 65.

Wednesday is expected to be mostly sunny with a high near 95.

After an overnight low of 58, Monday's high was 93 compared with the record high for that date of 101 set in 1985. The record low for today's date was 48 set in 1947.

STATE

Memorial Day was mostly sunny and hot across Texas, although thunderstorms formed near a dry line between Austin and College Station.

As a result of the dry line's passage, western sections had clear skies, low humidities and westerly winds at 10 to 20 mph. South and East Texas were cloudier, humid and warm with southwest winds at 15 to 25 mph.

Temperatures were quick to rise in the dry air behind the dry line. By 4 p.m., temperatures were generally in the upper 90s to near 100 degrees.

East of the line, readings were in the 90s. However, there was cooler air in the Panhandle and readings at 4 p.m. ranged from 77 degrees at Dalhart to 100 degrees in Fort Worth and Del Rio.

The forecast for North Texas is for today to be mostly clear in the west and partly cloudy in the east with a slight chance of thunderstorms. Highs will range from 93 degrees in the east to 98 in the west. Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms in the north. Lows will be from 67 in the west to 74 in the southeast.

South Texas is to be partly cloudy with highs of 80s along the coast to 90s inland. Lows in the mid- to upper 70s.

Forecasters said West Texas will have mostly sunny days and fair nights through Wednesday. Highs will be in the 80s and 90s with readings of 105 to 110 in the Big Bend. Lows in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

Thunderstorms brought heavy rain and tornadoes from Texas to the Great Lakes and into the Appalachians on Monday, and heavy snow blew through the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Tornadoes were reported during the afternoon in southwestern Arkansas, causing scattered damage and power outages, as thunderstorms rolled across the state.

A microburst, a violent thunderstorm downdraft measured at 125 mph, destroyed 13 homes late Sunday in the Kansas City, Mo., suburb of Lee's Summit and damaged nearly 100 others.

A half-dozen tornadoes hit southwestern Kansas during the night, damaging farm property.

And a twister near Claremore, Okla., tossed empty railroad freight cars onto their sides. They were part of a train parked on a siding in a rural area. Hail as big as softballs hit central Oklahoma and Kansas had hail up to 2.75 inches in diameter.

Heavy rain fell before dawn in northern Texas, accompanied by wind gusting to 78 mph.

Farther north, heavy snow blew through the Black Hills of western South Dakota, closing one scenic highway to holiday weekend travelers, and rain contributed to lowland flooding elsewhere in the state

The wet snow was blown by wind gusting to 40 mph. "Down around Crazy Horse, it's really bad; heavy snow. Even around Mount Rushmore, we're advising no travel in that area," said state patrol Sgt. Chuck Hofman.

In the Midwest, heavy rain during the night caused minor road flooding early Monday in western and central Illinois.

To the east, thunderstorms accompanied by high wind and downpours swept into West Virginia on Monday, knocking out power in parts of three western counties.

In the Southeast, showers and thunderstorms moved through sections of the Carolinas during the night. Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered up the East Coast from Virginia into upstate New York.

In the West, showers were scattered over northern Nevada.

Monday's temperatures around the Lower 48 states ranged from morning lows of 25 at Grand Canyon, Ariz., and Alamosa, Colo., to an early afternoon reading of 100 at Cotulla, Texas. The lowest wind chill was 15 at Alliance, Neb., and the highest heat index, based on temperature and humidity, was 113 at Homestead, Fla.

Legal-immigrant clauses slow bill on illegal aliens

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As House and Senate negotiators prepare to iron out the last details of a bill whose chief target is illegal immigration, a battle with the White House is looming over provisions that would drastically restrict public assistance to legal immigrants.

The bill would allow for the deportation of legal immigrants who exceeded tough new requirements and would do more to hold immigrants' sponsors financially responsible for them.

Supporters say the legislation would slash the number of immigrants using government programs like prenatal care, Medicaid and supplemental security income, and would make public assistance less of an attraction for coming to the United States.

"The American people want people to come to work," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. "They do not want people to come to go on welfare."

Indeed, the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, said last week that 25 percent of elderly supplemental security income recipients were legal immigrants.

Critics say the legislation takes a reasonable approach too far by effectively cutting off taxpayin ; immigrants from the very types of programs — child care, job training, English classes and college loans — that enable them to stay off welfare and increase their chances of success in the United States.

"Latinos with green cards are able to move out of poverty into a higher standard of living, but they can't do it if they can't learn English, if their babies aren't born healthy, if they can't join job-training programs and if they can't go to college," said Lori M. Kaplan, executive director of the Latin American Youth Center, an agency here that serves 5,000 mostly Hispanic and Vietnamese youths and their families.

Republicans and Democrats have been competing this year to be seen as being tough on illegal immigration, and the current bills would nearly double the size of the Border Patrol, increase penalties for smuggling aliens and restrict asylum. But divisions in the Republican Party caused several broader proposals for limiting legal immigration to be dropped from the legislation, and many Democrats oppose the limits on public assistance that remain.

'Latinos with green cards are able to move out of poverty into a higher standard of living, but they can't do it if they can't learn English, if their babies aren't born healthy, if they can't join job-training programs and if they can't go to college.'

— Lori M. Kaplan, Latin American Youth Center

House and Senate negotiators are set to begin working out differences in their two bills. President Clinton said earlier this month that the Senate bill in particular "goes too far in denying legal immigrants access to vital safety net programs." The president has raised the possibility of a veto, although his strongest objection has been to a proposal in the House bill involving public education for illegal immigrants.

Doris M. Meissner, the commissioner of the immigration and naturalization service, said the legislation's proposals on legal immigrants were problematic. "Yes, a sponsor's responsibilities have to be tightened up," Ms. Meissner said in an interview. "But this is incredibly overreaching and would be impossible to enforce. It's going to create a serious second-class-citizen problem."

Emilio Monzon is the kind of immigrant the legislation's critics cite. After coming to the United States to escape the civil war in his native El Salvador, Monzon nine years ago qualified for two federally financed programs where he learned typing, computer skills and English.

At night, he mopped floors in a Washington nursing home for $5 an hour to help pay for his further schooling. By 1994, Monzon was teaching the same classes at the Latin American Youth Center that he once attended, winning citywide acclaim for placing young immigrants in clerical jobs. Monzon, who became a citizen last year, is now working on a college degree in computers.

"I'd love to continue teaching and work in my own business some day," said Monzon, 37, surrounded by desktop computers in a classroom at the youth center, where he teaches each Saturday.

But under the provisions in the House and Senate immigration bills, Monzon would probably have been deported years ago for being a drain on society.

He says he has never accepted a dollar of food stamps, public-housing aid or any other traditional welfare. But he did attend the job-training classes for low-income people for more than 12 months in his first five years as a legal immigrant. And under the pending Senate bill, that is ground for deportation. (The House bill has a seven-year standard.)

"This isn't a handout," said Ms. Kaplan, Monzon's employer. "Learning Windows 95 so you can get a decent job is not welfare."

Backers of lower levels of legal immigration say the changes are necessary. "We're admitting too many immigrants who are too poor and too poorly educated," said Dan Stein, executive director of the Federation for American Immigration Reform. "It's very difficult to understand why poor immigrants who need all this training should be admitted at all."

Underlying this debate are two basic questions: Do legal immigrants receive more in public assistance than citizens do? And should immigrants receive public assistance at all?

The second question is one of philosophy, dividing even members of the same party. But the first question also defies objective answer: each side supports its view using different definitions of public assistance and different census information.

The Urban Institute, a research organization, says that 95 percent of immigrants do not receive welfare.

say if it may have gaps because of loss of power on the DC-9.

The data recorder — found two days after the crash that killed 110 passengers and crew — stopped 50 seconds before the flight ended.

"I can't address if it was a different power source or not," Benson said.

A police diver had found the elusive voice recorder Sunday just before the searching was to be suspended because of an approaching thunderstorm. The outer case of the recorder was damaged by the impact but was intact.

The tape could provide details on what happened in the cockpit as the planed nose-dived into the swampy Everglades, as well as other sounds that could indicate what went so wrong with the DC-9.

Taped conversations from the airport control towers indicated there was smoke in the cockpit. Investigators said Sunday that fire damage had been found on an aluminum frame of a passenger seat, indicating flames had reached into the cabin.

It takes at least 500 degrees to melt the frame, opening the possibility that passengers may have been incapacitated or dead before impact. Benson said investigators would be speculating to make that type of conclusion at this time.

"We are still very much in a fact-finding mode," Benson said. "We are not anywhere to begin analysis."

On Memorial Day, with the voice recorder found, there were fewer searchers at the crash scene. Investigators, though, are not through scouring the site.

A chicken-wire mockup of the front cargo area at a nearby airport continues to be reconstructed as parts are recovered. A 49-foot hoe was supposed to begin dredging the impact crater over the weekend, but that has been delayed to at least Wednesday.

"There are having a problem getting it out there," said Ed Munn, a detective with Metro-Dade police.

FLEES: Family loses daughter, chance for justice from driving or leaving the state.

"There's still an open wound, as long as Gloria Schulze isn't found," said Angela's brother, Donald Maher, 27, of Sacramento, Calif. "There's no closure, so there's no real healing."

Mrs. Maher's voice breaks as she speaks of the wedding, the children, the things Angela will never have.

"So that's my daily routine. I cry and I pray to God that they find (Schulze)," she said.

Schulze, 31, had no prior criminal record, so prosecutors felt there was no reason to put her behind bars or to take her driver's license.

She kept working at several temporary jobs and lived alone in a house her parents owned in northeast Phoenix.

Her final pre-trial court conference came on Sept. 15. Schulze was a no-show and a warrant was issued for her arrest.

"Hindsight is a hell of a lot better than foresight. She made all of these court appearances, and then all of a sudden she's gone," said Bill Fitzgerald, spokesman for the Maricopa county attorney's office.

But there had been red flags. Early in the month, Schulze missed a urine test — one of three a week she was ordered to undergo. She skipped at least four more urine tests after that and a Sept. 11 appointment with a counselor.

Prosecutors say they weren't told of Schulze's missed appointments, but the head of the court agency supervising her says there was no reason to call.

"I see the regular course of business of an officer," said Gary Graham, judicial administrator for the court's criminal department. "I don't see any impropriety."

The same day Schulze skipped her court conference, her mother filed a missing person's report at the police department.

Carolynn Schulze had been visiting Phoenix since Sept. 13, and couldn't get in touch with her daughter, she told police. But when officers showed up at Gloria's house to investigate, her mother refused to let them in.

Gloria's attorney had advised Carolynn Schulze not to let police in without a search warrant, said Scottsdale police Sgt. Brian Freeman.

Within two weeks of Schulze's disappearance, two cars registered to her that were left behind when she disappeared were sold. A month later, so was the house.

Her parents did not return messages left by The Associated Press at their home in Mission Viejo, Calif. Larry Kazan, Gloria Schulze's attorney, did not return messages left at his office in Phoenix.

Police got about 30 phone tips after the case was profiled in April on NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries," but say no sightings of Schulze have been reported.

"This is a woman who obviously has some feelings of guilt, and can't handle it any other way but to run," said Fitzgerald. "And that's got to be a scary way to live, always looking over your shoulder."

The Mahers are not sympathetic.

Angela, a senior at Creighton University in Nebraska, was in Arizona to celebrate her mother's 57th birthday. She had been home only a few hours when her friend called for a ride.

"It was an unwritten rule with Angela — you need a ride, don't hesitate to call," said Donald.

ACCORD: Yeltsin pulls surprise before election

(From 1A)

Dudayev led the small Caucasus Mountains republic into its blood-stained odyssey toward independence, and was replaced by Yandarbiyev, who became the first rebel leader to venture to Moscow for talks.

Yeltsin, who looked jubilant at Monday's apparent breakthrough, said the two sides had agreed to exchange hostages and prisoners of war within two weeks.

"We have solved the main question of peace in Chechnya," he insisted, even though seemingly irreconcilable issues remain over the future of the land-locked Chechen province.

The Chechens still demand full independence, while the Russian leaders are willing only to grant the republic elements of self-rule within the framework of the Russian Federation.

Experts from both sides continued meeting into the evening Monday, and more talks were scheduled for Tuesday.

Questions also remain whether Yandarbiyev can knit his fractious band of fighters into quiescent support of peace, even temporarily. Field commanders have undertaken rogue terrorist attacks on Russian towns twice in the past year, and another such assault could spoil both the cease-fire and the glow it is sure to cast on Yeltsin's re-election campaign.

In recent months Russians have cited as the country's most serious problem the war in Chechnya, in which an estimated 30,000 people have been killed, mostly civilians. Yeltsin's ratings began improving after he announced his plan to end the war — even though it quickly was overshadowed by new fighting — and he repeatedly has promised over the past several weeks to personally journey to Chechnya to lead peace talks.

The most recent polls give Yeltsin a broadening lead over Communist Party candidate Gennady Zyuganov, with one showing the spread at 33 percent to 26 percent and another at 31 percent to 27 percent. If no one wins a simple majority in the 11-candidate contest, a runoff will be held, probably on July 7.

The need for Yeltsin to travel to Chechnya now appears less pressing, though he still may decide to go to underscore his own courage and appear as the commander-in-chief bucking up remaining Russian troops on the eve of the election.

Report: Spending rate drops for health-care expenditures

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's rate of spending on health care increased in 1994 at a slower rate than the previous year, a new report says, but there's no proof yet that "the long-term surge in health care costs is over."

The increase, 6.4 percent over 1993 levels, was the smallest in more than 30 years.

Health Affairs, a journal published by Project HOPE, reported Monday that the amount spent in 1994 on hospital visits, doctors' and dentists' fees, nursing homes, pharmaceuticals and other health care totaled $949.4 billion. Project HOPE is an international health education organization based in Millwood, Va.

While still substantial, the 6.4 percent rise compares with a 7 percent 1992-93 increase. The percentage of cost rises was in double digits or near double digits in each of the preceding five years, 1988-1992.

"It is still too early to state categorically that the long-term surge in health care costs is over, just based on this two-year analysis," said Katharine R. Levit, an author of the report. "Indicators for 1995, however, show little change from the 1993-94 trend."

The estimates were made by the Office of National Health Statistics in the Health Care Financing Administration, which is part of the Department of Health and Human Services.

The report also found that:

- Per person spending on health rose from $3,331 in 1993 to $3,510 in 1994. That compares with $2,688 in 1990 and $141 in 1960.
- Medicare spending grew to $166.1 billion in 1994, up 11.8 percent over 1993.
- Spending on hospital care, the largest single component in health costs, ran to $338.5 billion in 1994.

GANGS: Not in Midland?

Civic, religious leaders try to gang up on issue

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Civic leaders and church pastors met in April for a workshop called "Gangs in Church" that discussed ways Christians and church groups can prevent the spread of gangs.

"Agencies that deal with youth and gang members are asking 'where is the church?' " Albert Ibarra, Outreach Director of Teen Challenge said.

The gang lifestyle is a belief system and telling a gang member to leave a gang is like telling a Christian to leave his church, Ibarra said.

Many youths join gangs for respect, Detective Phillip Parton said.

In his dealings with gang members while on patrol, he had to respect them to receive respect in return, Parton said.

When Parton went to gang hangouts, he would confront gang members positively, because the next time "I may be taking them to jail."

Gang members will accept rules as long as they are treated fairly, but they won't accept idle threats, he said.

"When you set a rule, you make sure you mean it and follow through with it. You have to deal with them on a one-on-one basis."

He told pastors they can't preach from the pulpit and then say Jesus loves them as they're walking out the door. "They see right through that. You have to spend time with them," he said.

> 'Kids live for today, they don't think of the future. But they are our future and we are losing them.'
> — Detective Bernie Kraft

Bats, guns, knives and other gang paraphernalia taken by the police gang unit was displayed at the workshop.

"The police can't do it all," Detective Bernie Kraft of the gang unit said. "We need the help of the community and the churches."

Kraft said he has arrested gang members between the ages of 10 and 25. Arresting them is sometimes the only way to reach them, he said.

"However, I don't always have time to talk to a kid after he's been arrested and by then, it's already too late," Kraft said.

Pastors, youth leaders and Christians need to visit community centers and schools to keep them from being violent and to see that the needs of these centers are met, Kraft said.

Schools are a recruiting place for gangs, he said.

"In school, they are always being asked to join a gang and our kids are afraid. They don't know what to do and they don't know how to say no," Sheriff Gary Painter said.

"They make a choice and they try to live by it the best they can," Painter said.

City government cannot solve the problem of gangs, Mayor Bobby Burns said.

He encouraged prayer and Christians to meet with youth individually.

"Kids live for today, they don't think of the future," Kraft said. "But they are our future and we are losing them."

Answer these questions to gauge activity near your school

From Staff Reports

Is there gang activity near my school?

The National School Safety Center provides the following assessment for citizens to determine the extent of gangs and gang-related activities in the vicinity of a school campus. Each "yes" answer scores the number of points listed at the end of each question.

1. Do you have graffiti on or near your campus? (5)

2. Do you have crossed-out graffiti on or near your campus? (10)

3. Do your students wear colors, jewelry, clothing, flash hand signals or display other behavior that may be gang-related? (10)

4. Are drugs available near your school? (5)

5. Has there been a significant increase in the number of physical confrontations or "stare downs" within the past 12 months in or around your school? (5)

6. Is there an increasing number of weapons in your community? (10)

7. Are beepers, pagers or cellular phones used by your students? (10) (This question does not apply for school districts such as MISD that don't allow students to bring any of those items to school.)

8. Have you had a drive-by shooting in or around your school? (10)

9. Have you had a "show by" (display of weapons) at or around your school? (10)

10. Is the truancy rate of your school increasing? (5)

11. Are there increasing numbers of racial incidents occurring in your community or school? (5)

12. Is there a history of gangs in your community? (10)

13. Is there an increasing presence of "informal social groups" with unusual names like "Woodland Heights Posse," "Rip Off and Rule," "Females Simply Chillin," or "Kappa Phi Nasty?" (15)

Total point values. The following scores indicate the level gang activity.

0-15 points: No significant gang problems.

20-40 points: An emerging gang problem.

45-60 points: A significant gang problem for which a gang prevention and gang intervention plan should be developed.

65 points or higher: An acute gang problem that merits a total gang prevention, intervention and suppression program.

VIOLENCE: Task force sub-committee agrees on three main objectives kids are faced every day of their lives in school with joining gangs."

Trenna Tankersley, task force member and Insight counselor for Midland Independent School District, said the conflict resolution sub-committee of the task force has agreed on three main objectives that "ensure Midland's children are taught the skills to resolve conflicts through non-violent means."

Those objectives are:

- To develop or expand programs designed to reduce youth violence and to ensure that Midland children are taught to deal with conflict.
- To help various youth organizations develop peer mediation and mentoring programs.
- To expand and develop programs where youth assist each other.

"Conflict cannot be avoided," Ms. Tankersley said. "It is a natural human state."

She said peer mediation has worked well in MISD.

It "is used when a neutral party is brought in to solve a problem without the intervention of adults," she said.

She said peer mediation programs are offered at Bush Elementary School, Goddard, Alamo and San Jacinto junior high schools, both Midland and Lee freshman high schools, and Midland High School.

She said a program where high-school students serve as mentors to elementary-school students is successful but limited because only one class is offered.

The Peer Assistance Leadership (PALs) class only has 20 spots, and, "We've had 90 kids sign up for one class at each high school," Ms. Tankersley said.

That means about 140 students aren't able to take the self-esteem-building course.

A parent at the April task-force meeting suggested parental involvement is important in keeping students from getting into trouble.

"We once held a meeting on drug prevention and sent out flyers to 500 families (in southeast Midland)," Blake said. "We had tons of kids show up and two parents.

"The root of the problem is that parents are not around. ... Some kids don't have a good family structure. They might have both parents in prison. I know of a grandparent raising a kid who has gotten kicked out of every after-school program."

Jon Farr of the Boys & Girls Club said agencies that work with youth are strapped for help.

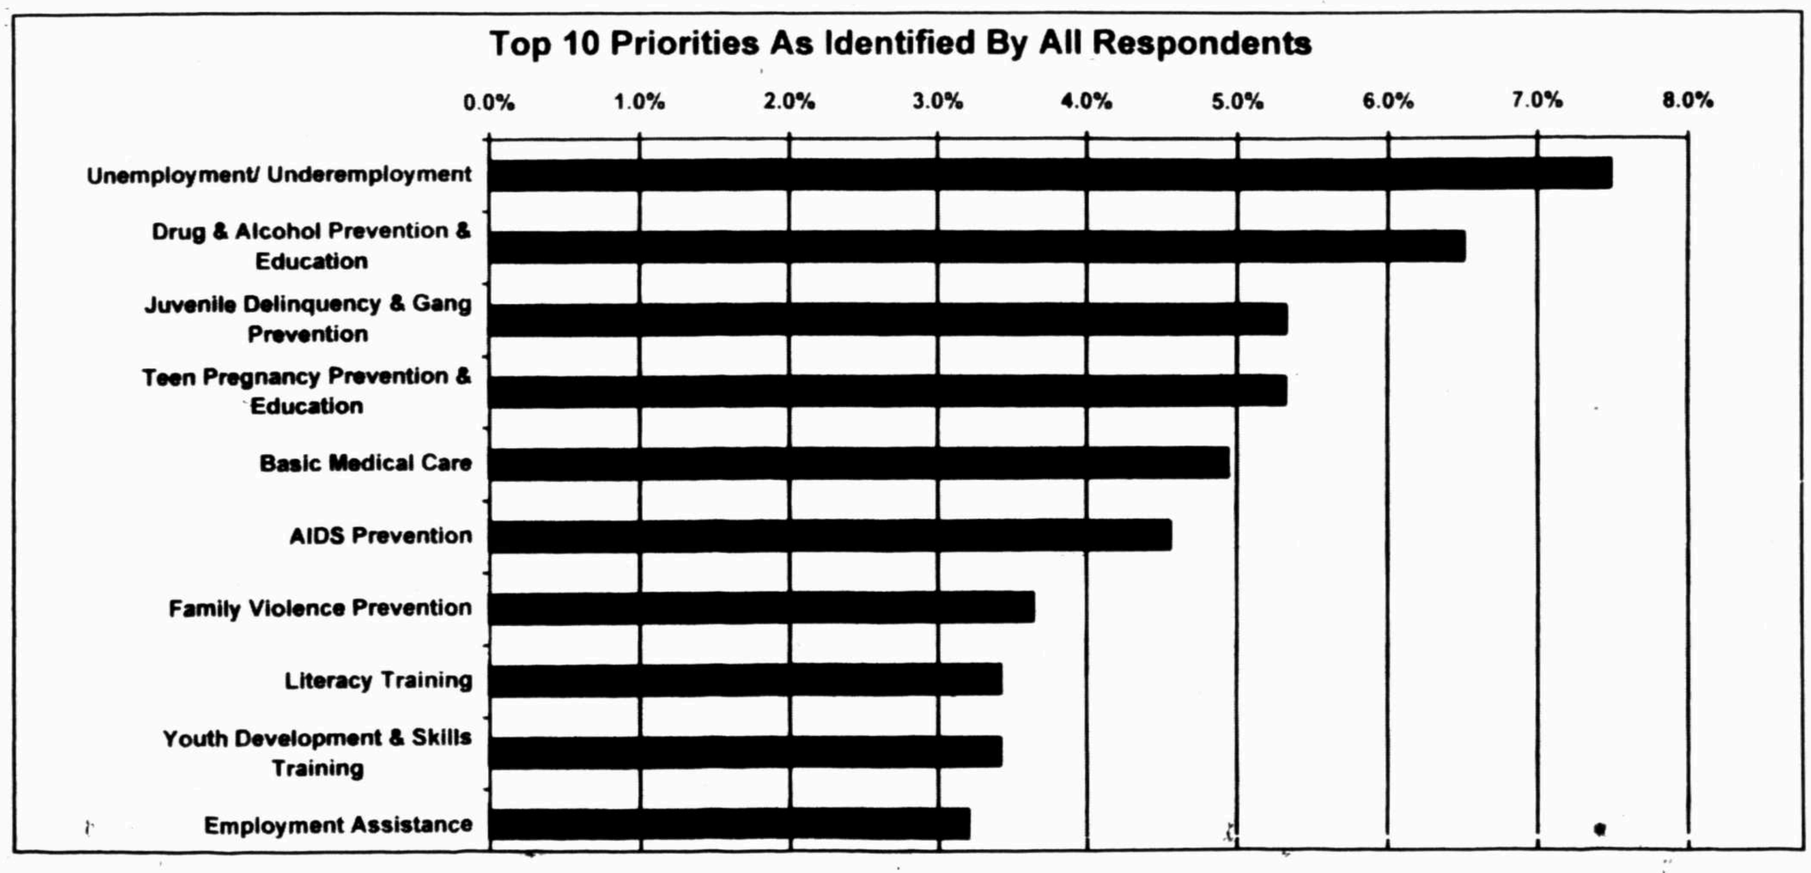

"We really need adult volunteers," he said. He suggested that people who want to do something about violence and gangs consider volunteering at least one hour a week to such organizations.

Blake said PDAP is collaborating with the Boys & Girls Club. He said one support group is for adolescents dealing with substance abuse in the home. The group, Totally Awesome Sober Kids, is a chemical dependency prevention program for children between the ages of 6 and 17, who have had, or now have, someone in their family abusing drugs and/or alcohol.

He said that is just one small alternative to get kids off the streets. "Unfortunately, school is going to be out soon, and we are going to have all of these kids hitting the streets," Blake said at the April meeting.

"We have to tell kids what they can do to get a euphoric feeling and feel good without getting high," he said.

"We need to come together as a community to beat this virus called violence," Rhoads said. "It takes relationships, resources and time. It takes a kid hearing someone say, 'I can help.' "

The Midland Introspective Violence Prevention Task-Force undertook the project of stopping community violence in response to a 1993 Midland survey where residents rated drugs and alcohol prevention and juvenile delinquency and gang prevention high on their list of needs to be dealt with.

Honorees selected for their fine efforts

Seven outstanding individuals were honored recently in Midland for their devotion and service to the oil and gas industry. The awards were presented during the 1996 Energy Awards Banquet.

The recipients were Robert O. Anderson, retired chairman of Atlantic Richfield Co.; Bill Collyns, former editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram and executive director of the Midland Chamber of Commerce; David Garlick, director of policy and research for the Texas Railroad Commission; Robert Graebner, Milo Backus and M.E. Trostle, who all were members of Geophysical Service Inc. and helped to bring 3-D seismic imagery into the industry; and Scott Sheffield, chairman of Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. All were honored for their work which had a significant impact on the oil industry and the Permian Basin region.

Lifetime achievement awards were presented to Anderson and Collyns, and they also were most deserved.

The point is, each of the seven men had a definite and significant impact on the oil and gas industry in the Permian Basin, and the result has been the vibrant, growing region this is today.

The honors bestowed on the men are the basin's way of saying thanks and that all their hard work was truly appreciated.

The federal government makes another mess

They're working on an important principle up there in Congress -- but they haven't got it down yet.

The principle: When the almighty federal government puts itself in charge of economic decision-making, what you get is a mess.

Anderson

■ a 3-to-1 vote in the House for temporary repeal of President Bill Clinton's 4.3-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax hike.

■ exemptions and exceptions in a bill to raise the minimum wage.

Take the gasoline-tax matter first. Congress, in election years, loves to lighten burdens. The gasoline-tax increase, levied at Clinton's instance, isn't the biggest burden ever laid on the long-suffering American taxpayer, but with prices rising, this uncalled-for exaction smells worse than it would otherwise.

It smelled bad enough when Congress enacted it. The idea, frankly, was to bring in more money. A competing idea, advanced by the then-minority Republicans, didn't meet with the White House's approval. The idea, roughly, was to make do with such money as the government had at its disposal -- around a trillion and a half bucks -- and not ask the taxpayers for more. This notion failed. Up went the tax; up went gasoline prices. Finally, with the recent run-up in gasoline prices, this imposition on the taxpayers' budgets and good nature came to be generally recognized.

This is a good thing, certainly. But other things need recognition, beginning with the dismal effects of too much taxation. Taxation there obviously has to be -- taxation imposed, however, in recognition of the truth that taxes slow the great engine of economic growth. In other words, leave something for the taxpayers, buster.

That's a message the feds have yet to assimilate. They think -- certainly the Clinton administration thinks -- that imposing added costs on business is no big deal.

The mass media notwithstanding, cutting taxes and spending is a virtuous cause. Whatever lightens the taxpayers' economic burdens is virtuous, you might say. The only trouble with cutting the gasoline tax is doing it in isolation from other taxes, such as capital gains and inheritance, that need dramatic slashing, if not elimination.

Then there's the other debate in Washington -- the one centering on whether to raise the minimum wage. The minimum wage -- a contrivance of the unions, designed to eliminate the competition of "cheap labor" -- sets a floor under wages. Oh, what a wonderful-noble-compassionate idea! we are supposed to exclaim.

Reduce that great idea to practice and the minimum wage causes pain and stagnation. If you're a small businessman and the federal government says you have to pay more for labor, does that make you want to hire more people? Clearly not. Every time the minimum wage goes up, unemployment follows.

This is why the Republican Congress hopes to hem in any increases passed out this election year with an exemption for small business and the newly hired (who wouldn't get the full wage for 90 days or so).

Here again is dawning recognition that the massive hand of government crushes, even while lifting up. Unfortunately, it's dangerous recognition. To act on it would mean offering some voters less than some politicians think it advisable to offer in an election year. The Democrats are kicking up a shrewd fuss.

CHARLEY REESE

Dole's decision to leave office is tactically sound

For those of you interested in the tactics of the presidential race, Bob Dole made a very smart move in resigning from the Senate. The Democrats had him in a box, and now he's escaped.

As majority leader of the Senate, Dole was in a no-win situation for a number of reasons. First, the Republican majority in the Senate is not a conservative majority, and enough Republican liberals side with Democrats to weaken Dole considerably.

Reese

For example, it was almost impossible to muster the 60 votes necessary to cut off a filibuster (a refusal to end debate on a bill). That meant the Democrats could, by filibustering, prevent just about any bill from passing. By threatening a filibuster, Democrats could force concessions from Republicans.

This situation is not Dole's fault, but he would, and has, as majority leader been blamed for being an ineffective leader.

Second, the majority leader's position is not a good bully pulpit. As majority leader, Dole is forced to defend a collective work product whose provisions he personally may not even like. But as long as he had to work with other senators, he could not afford to directly criticize his fellow Republicans.

Now that he is outside the Senate, Dole can say what he personally believes and what he personally wants to accomplish without regard for that collection of giant egos we call a Senate.

A third reason for getting out of the trap of the Senate is that it tied Dole too closely to House Speaker Newt Gingrich. As majority leader, Dole was obligated to try at least to get Gingrich's bills passed. The Democrats have already begun to campaign against "Dole-Gingrich."

Despite that some hard-core Republicans like him, Gingrich in a general election situation is a political liability. His negatives with the public are much greater than Clinton's are. That's in part because of Democrats, but in a large part it is because of Gingrich, whose ego often causes him to suffer from foot-in-mouth disease.

If I were a Dole campaign advisor, I'd tell Gingrich to run the House and stay the heck out of the presidential campaign. Dole needs to project Dole's vision (if any) of America and not be saddled with Gingrich's.

Finally, being majority leader just takes too much time. While Dole was wrestling with legislation, constantly being ambushed and potshotted by Democrats, President Clinton has been free to fly about the country campaigning at the taxpayers' expense.

All incumbent presidents do that. Clinton flies from photo op to photo op, from speech to speech, while Dole was hidden away in the Senate arguing and cajoling other senators.

Free from his Senate duties, Dole can also "act presidential" and fly from photo op to photo op and from speech to speech. He is no longer saddled with the work product or the failures of the Senate. He is no longer tied directly to Gingrich.

As a tactical move, Dole's resignation is a big winner, and I'm frankly surprised Dole was smart enough to do it. More than likely, his inner circle convinced him that he was sinking fast where he was. Even so, it is always encouraging to see a man who can recognize when he's in trouble and take action in an effort to get out of it.

None of this means Dole can beat Clinton. But it does mean he has a better chance now than he did while he was stuck in the Senate.

It is far too early to make any predictions about the vote in November. These days, things happen fast, and nothing is more fickle than public opinion. George Bush went from approval ratings in the 90s all the way to defeat, and it's conceivable Clinton could sink, too. At any rate, Dole can now at least make it a horse race.

ANOTHER VIEW

Nation may see more budgetary gridlock soon

It appears our nation is headed for at least another six months of budgetary gridlock in this election year. ...

The Republicans, who came out looking like the bad guys in the battle over this year's federal budget, have already said they do not plan to negotiate with the Democrats on next year's budget.

President Clinton, meanwhile, has threatened to veto any Republican budget initiative for the 1997 fiscal year that does not include some Democratic plans. ...

In the past, the art of politics was getting the other guy to agree with you and then to make him think it was his idea to do so.

The art of politics was the art of compromise.

Now national politics seems to be largely a game of disagreement and gridlock.

Instead of decisive leadership, we can expect to see more gridlock at the federal level that will continue to cripple our government when what we need most is a compromise that will allow government to move forward.

In an election year, it seems, all we can realistically expect to get from our major political parties is more gridlock without a solution.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 28, the 149th day of 1996. There are 217 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 28, 1934, the Dionne quintuplets — Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne — were born to Elzire Dionne at the family farm in Ontario, Canada.

On this date:

In 1533, England's Archbishop declared the marriage of King Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn valid.

In 1863, the first black regiment from the North left Boston to fight in the Civil War.

In 1892, the Sierra Club was organized in San Francisco.

In 1937, President Roosevelt pushed a button in Washington signaling that vehicular traffic could cross the just-opened Golden Gate Bridge in California.

In 1937, Neville Chamberlain became prime minister of Britain.

In 1940, during World War II, the Belgian army surrendered to invading German forces.

In 1972, the Duke of Windsor, who had abdicated the English throne to marry Wallis Warfield Simpson, died in Paris at age 77.

In 1977, 165 people were killed when fire raced through the Beverly Hills Supper Club in Southgate, Ky.

In 1984, President Reagan led a state funeral at Arlington National Cemetery for an unidentified American soldier killed in the Vietnam War.

In 1985, David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut, Lebanon, was abducted by pro-Iranian kidnappers (he was freed 17 months later).

In 1987, Mathias Rust, a 19-year-old West German pilot, landed a private plane in Moscow's Red Square after evading Soviet air defenses.

Ten years ago: Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole served notice she intended to withhold up to 10 percent of federal highway money earmarked for Arizona and Vermont, saying those states failed to adequately enforce the 55 mph speed limit. (Vermont was later excused; Arizona was fined $510,000.)

Five years ago: Ethiopian rebels seized control of the capital of Addis Ababa, a week after the country's longtime Marxist ruler, Mengistu Haile Mariam, resigned his post and fled. U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and other NATO defense chiefs agreed to create a rapid reaction corps as part of a broad plan to reshape the Western alliance in the post-Cold War era.

One year ago: An earthquake with a magnitude of 7.5 devastated the Russian town of Neftegorsk, killing at least 2,000 people. Bosnia's foreign minister and three colleagues were killed when rebel Serbs shot down their helicopter.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Carroll Baker is 65. Los Angeles Lakers executive Jerry West is 58. Singer Gladys Knight is 52. Singer John Fogerty is 51. Singer Gary Stewart is 51. Actress-director Sondra Locke is 49. Rapper Chubb Rock is 28.

MIKE ROYKO

May-December marriages can become costly

A fast survey I just took shows that most of my acquaintances think Larry Fortensky is a man lacking character, spine and true grit.

Of course, I had to explain to several who Larry Fortensky is, since they don't keep up with the great issues of the day.

Royko

And in case you are unfamiliar with Larry Fortensky, he is Elizabeth Taylor's most recent ex-husband, her seventh, I believe. Eight, if you count Richard Burton, who married her twice. Shows what booze will do.

Fortensky, 44, is a strapping construction worker who Ms. Taylor, 64, met in the Betty Ford Clinic, where they were both trying to deal with bad habits.

But since the Betty Ford Clinic has no remedy for Ms. Taylor's habit of getting married, the two fell in love or whatever and in 1991 were married.

Alas, the bloom is off the whatsis, and they were recently divorced. When they split, Ms. Taylor said they needed their own "space."

Having one's own space is important. But they were living in Ms. Taylor's huge mansion, not some tiny bungalow.

And the mansion has all sorts of extra bathrooms, the one true measure of wealth and space. If Congress really wanted to make the tax law fair, it would be based on how many toilets a person has.

So you would think that in so big a house, Elizabeth and Larry would each have enough space so they'd never hear a distant toilet flush.

But Larry moved out, and Ms. Taylor agreed to give him $5,000 a month.

Now, Larry has returned to court to plead that $5,000 a month -- or $60,000 a year -- isn't nearly enough. He says that he now has to live in an apartment he doesn't like and can't afford to maintain the lifestyle to which he had become accustomed while Ms. Taylor's hubby.

That's what prompted my informal survey: Does Larry deserve more money from Ms. Taylor?

The results show that he is fortunate that those I surveyed are not a judge or a jury. Their responses were peppered with words like: "Leech ... parasite ... shameless ... freeloader ... lazy ... moocher."

One man who had been divorced said: "I left with only my shirt on my back and my golf clubs. And I felt fortunate because I feared that she might soon sprinkle arsenic on my oatmeal."

A woman said: "Shame on him, a young guy like that. I read that Elizabeth had to have a hip replaced. And who knows how many times the poor thing has had her face replaced?"

The consensus was that there is something unmanly about a relatively young, healthy guy asking that he be supported in a luxurious life by an aging woman.

There was a time when I would have agreed with them. But times change, and I am totally in sympathy with Larry and his needs.

Just think of the many times we have read about rich, elderly men who have married younger women. There is nothing wrong with that. One of the incentives in our capitalistic system is that great wealth permits you to cast out your loyal but sagging wife so you can frolic with a young dolly.

But when these May-December marriages end, we think nothing of the large sums -- frequently in the millions -- that these aging rogues must pay to the departing lovely.

The general attitude is that the geezer wanted one more fling at youth and a lusty young bod, so now let the lech pay for his pleasures.

Why should it be different in the case of Elizabeth and Larry?

At their palatial wedding attended by all sorts of celebrities and two former presidents, you can bet there was a lot of snickering about what was higher: Larry's IQ or his ... well, you know.

No, she had her way with him and his bulging biceps and whatever. Now she is casting him aside like a squeezed lemon. And after his husbandly efforts, which I have to assume were adequate, she wants to pay him less than she pays the fellow who mows her grass.

My survey shows that while we pay lip service to the concept of female equality, we give little thought to the question of female equality of responsibility. My dictionary defines lecher as "a man given to lechery." See? There is no word for a female of the same inclinations. No, booby, in true sexual equality we have not come a long way.

I have to admit that I sympathize with Larry because I am in a similar position.

In my columns, I have referred to my wife as "the blond," which gives the impression that she might be a sprightly, youthful creature.

Truth is, she's a 96-year-old toothless hag who has one tiny tuft of bleached blond hair on her bald pate. And she spends most of her time sitting in a rocker, sipping pink gin and exchanging filthy jokes with her foul-mouthed pet parrot.

But she is rich. And I've become accustomed to filching her earrings and other baubles, pawning them and living the good life. That's why I've never held a real job.

And, like Elizabeth and Larry, the so-called blond once threw me out and got a divorce. This left me penniless.

But I returned, cleverly taking advantage of her failing sight by wearing a hairpiece and posing as the Orkin man. She fell for me again, we wed and we have been together since.

It isn't easy. But a man's got to do what a man's got to do.

Elizabeth Dole lends splash of color to campaign trail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The name's Rainbow.

So said the Secret Service in 1976 in assigning a security nickname to Elizabeth Dole. If that sold her short as a professional woman, it said plenty then and since about her relationship with Bob Dole (nicknamed Ramrod).

Twenty years and four national campaigns later, she's still the splashy color to his grayness.

He's the dark suit standing on the podium before the fixed microphone. She's the sunny yellow dress with the body mike that frees her to roam the aisles.

That's the way it was in Salisbury, N.C., on a visit to her hometown in one of the Doles' few campaign appearances together. Mostly they travel apart — "ships in the night," she says — on some endless voyage.

She roamed Oprah-style again at a $1,000-a-plate Beverly Hills fundraiser the day after Dole said he was quitting the Senate. She talked at some length about how her crusty husband had sobbed at a meeting before the announcement.

In wintry New Hampshire, it was Elizabeth subbing for a snowbound Bob at a party fund-raiser that drew all available GOP primary candidates. She went table to table, the Pat Buchanan entourage lighting up like the Dole crowd as she toured the big room — a grace note in a race then crackling and nasty.

"She was able to do what a lot of women (in politics) can't do, which is to exude confidence in her abilities and yet a warmth and ability to reach out," says Johanna Schneider, who was press secretary to Mrs. Dole at the Labor Department.

"She had a tremendous rapport with audiences, probably better than I had seen with anybody."

These days her journey is for him and she gives scant clues to the woman behind the exuberance, presenting, as one scholar put it, "wisps of soft-focused photographs."

Mrs. Dole, former transportation and labor secretary and now Red Cross chief on leave, is capable of putting her husband to sleep talking policy — no easy feat for a man who watches legislative proceedings on TV to relax.

Those "best before" dates on food, the air bags in cars and hot dogs that aren't quite as fatty as they used to be are a sampling of the now-humdrum legacies where she left a mark in two decades in government.

But when a would-be first lady campaigns, people inevitably look at bearing and temperament at least as much as what she's done.

In Mrs. Dole, 59, they find the product of an old-time Southern upbringing, nights she said were spent "in a haze of satin and chiffon," as well as a woman who has negotiated the peculiar fog of Washington decision-making.

Girl dies after being trapped in tub

LAKEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Hundreds of horrified classmates watched as a 16-year-old girl pinned by suction to the bottom of a whirlpool drowned at a post-prom party early Saturday.

Students said Tanya Nickens struggled to free herself from a grate at the bottom of the 3-foot-deep tub for at least five minutes, while others tried to pull her from the gurgling water.

The Lakewood high school student and about six of her friends had just hopped into the tub when she ducked under water, witnesses said. The suction jets were turned on at the same time and she became trapped against the grate, said Kevin McHugh, manager of the club where about 300 students were attending the supervised, alcohol-free party.

Jon Soto, 16, said he and another boy jumped in but could not pull their friend out. Soto said he inhaled and tried to force air into the girl's mouth underwater.

A lifeguard jumped in and another called for emergency help before a worker went to the basement to shut off the jets, McHugh said.

Nickens was pronounced dead at Jersey Shore Medical Center.

Stephen Nickens, the girl's father, said the club should have had an emergency shutoff near the tub, instead of in the basement.

Recruits learn about tolerance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A group of Los Angeles County Sheriff's recruits make their way down a dimly lit corridor. Whispered epithets spew from the darkness: "Faggot." "Spic." "Jungle Bunny."

Welcome to the "Whisper Gallery," a curving hallway that leads to the Simon Wiesenthal Center's Museum of Tolerance, a $50 million hands-on exploration of racism and hate. Officials are hoping that giving recruits a taste of its high-tech exhibits and dramatic re-enactments will make them better deputies.

Law enforcement agencies are mandated by the state to teach cultural awareness to their recruits, and most use a state-run program.

However the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department depends primarily on the Museum of Tolerance to educate trainees on the nature and origins of prejudice and discrimination, said Sheriff's Sgt. Randy Olson.

"We recognize that we have a very diverse community and we better get on board," he said, referring to the multicultural county that has become known as America's new melting pot.

As an added benefit, the L.A. County Sheriff's Department hopes the cultural training program will stop hefty civil judgments it has been forced to pay because of alleged police brutality.

Abortion issue caught up in election politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's veto of a ban on late-term abortions has given the volatile subject renewed attention that the president's opponents are in no rush to end.

The Roman Catholic Church is condemning the medical procedure from the pulpit. Anti-abortion groups are using Clinton's veto to energize supporters nationally. Republican nominee-in-waiting Bob Dole said the president's veto "pushed the limits of decency too far."

And sensing a good wedge against Clinton, Republican leaders aren't hurrying to schedule override votes.

"Bill Clinton is so much on the extreme end of the abortion issue with this veto that this is probably the strongest abortion issue out there, politically speaking," Ed Gillespie of the Republican National Committee said.

An aide to House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said he sees little possibility of a veto-override vote before midsummer because of the press of other business and attempts to line up votes.

The House passed the ban by more than the two-thirds majority needed to override, the Senate vote fell far short. Even die-hard abortion opponents say an override there is a long shot.

Those who stand with the president are feeling pressure.

A case in point: the rebuke of Sen. Christopher Dodd, head of the Democratic National Committee, by a parish priest in Connecticut, his home state. The Rev. George Parker of St. Joseph Church in Thompson, Conn., returned Dodd's $5,000 donation, plus interest, because Dodd supports legal abortion and opposed the ban of what critics call "partial-birth abortions."

"The money was considered blood money," Parker said.

Kate Michelman, director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said Republicans are trying to determine "when is the most propitious time for a veto override to highlight the issue, give it the best resonance against the president in terms of a campaign issue."

"They're going to try to keep the issue of the right to choose confined to issues like late-term abortions rather than on the central question: Who should make the decisions at any stage of pregnancy?" she said.

The bill would be the first to ban a specific abortion procedure since the Supreme Court in 1973 granted women the right to abortion. As described by the ban's supporters, it would prohibit a procedure that involves partially extracting a fetus, legs first, through the birth canal, cutting an incision in the barely visible skull base and then draining the brain through a suction tube, causing the skull to collapse.

The Catholic Church has taken the lead in pushing for an override of the veto, Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valle called Clinton's veto "shameful."

Clinton urges all Americans to overcome divisions on Memorial Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton honored the nation's war dead Monday by asking Americans to overcome their divisions and remember that they are joined by common bonds and common purpose.

"Today is a time to remember what joins us as one America," the president said at a Memorial Day address under drizzling, gray skies at Arlington National Cemetery.

He recalled that the practice of honoring America's fallen began near the end of the Civil War, when America was a divided nation.

Clinton also asked Americans to remember those who lost their lives on behalf of their nation during peacetime. He spoke of Commerce Secretary Ron Brown, who died in a plane crash while on a mission to Bosnia in April, 14 people killed in the crash of two Marine helicopters at Camp Lejeune, N.C., three weeks ago, and Adm. Jeremy Boorda, who committed suicide this month.

"They are American heroes, too, and we are all in their debt," he said. "We know our country is strong and great today because of them."

He paid tribute to Americans serving today in or near Bosnia, Haiti, Iraq, Liberia and the Central African Republic.

"On this Memorial Day, let us draw inspiration from the spirit that surrounds us, to give those who still defend our freedom and security in the military today the support they need and serve to fulfill their important mission," he told some 3,000 people at a white marble amphitheater on the cemetery grounds.

At Tuzla Air Base in Bosnia, about 150 U.S. troops gathered to hear a gospel choir sing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and pray for the two soldiers killed in the peacekeeping operation this past year.

In an election year when the political rhetoric focuses on the issues that divide the country, Clinton stressed that Americans are "descendants of a common creed ... partners with a common purpose; to keep our nation free and strong."

But politics was near the surface for a president who has always had an uneasy relationship with veterans because he avoided military service during the Vietnam War.

While Clinton was laying a wreath before the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington, his presumed Republican opponent in November, Sen. Bob Dole, was participating in a wreath-laying ceremony in Clifton, N.J.

Dole pointed to the differences in their service records, commenting, "I can't change his record and he can't change my record." Dole, who was gravely wounded in Italy during World War II, told reporters. "These are facts. I am proud to have served my country."

Clinton has been dogged recently by criticism from veterans and Republicans, because his lawyer suggested — in legal papers — that the president's status as commander in chief can be used to delay a sexual harassment suit.

Five Medal of Honor winners took out a full-page ad in the Washington Times on Monday to condemn that idea, saying "To retreat from the call to arms and then later embrace its code when it is convenient is an outrage to all who served."

The White House accuses Republicans of deliberately misinterpreting the issue for political gain, saying Clinton attorney Robert Bennett only mentioned the military exemption as an example of how a president can delay a civil suit.

The Arlington observance was mirrored in New York City. Representatives of Canadian, Mexican and British naval forces, in town for the annual Fleet Week festival of ships, joined in a service at the USS Intrepid Museum, the aircraft carrier anchored in the Hudson River.

Elsewhere around the nation, rain and cool temperatures canceled many Memorial Day observances.

Drizzle and fog mirrored the mood of Shirley Hilton. She said a memorial service at Dulaney Valley Memorial Gardens in Timonium, Md., didn't relieve the pain the day brings her.

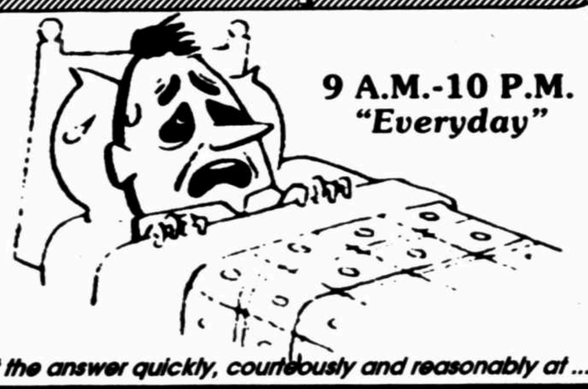

"I'm beyond sympathy now. I want answers, and I want action," said Mrs. Hilton, 57, of Glen Burnie, Md. Her husband, Airman 1st Class Robert Hilton, was lost in the Gulf of Tonkin off Vietnam when his plane went down three decades ago. His body has not been recovered.

"All I want is to put a flower on his grave. It's not like I'm asking for something that doesn't belong to me," said Mrs. Hilton.

Barge leaks oil into ship channel

HOUSTON (AP) — Workers scrambled Monday to contain an oil slick from a barge that buckled and ruptured in the middle of Galveston Bay.

The Coast Guard said the spill was contained by late Monday afternoon and was expected to be cleaned up easily with little damage to the environment.

The damaged, 27-year-old barge is owned by Houston-based Buffalo Marine Service Inc. Two months ago, a 275-foot barge belonging to the same company similarly buckled and spilled more than 5,000 barrels of fuel oil into Galveston Bay.

The vessel buckled about 10:45 p.m. Sunday in the Houston Ship Channel, north of Galveston and east of Clear Lake, said Coast Guard Lt. Emile Benard.

"There was no collision," Benard said.

Although the vessel carried about 667,000 gallons of intermediate fuel oil, only one or two of 12 tanks ruptured, Benard said. Each tank holds 2,500 barrels, roughly 105,000 gallons.

By Monday afternoon, it was still unknown how much had spilled.

The oil, which has roughly the consistency of chocolate syrup and can take weeks to dissipate, was estimated to be spread over an area three miles long and a half-mile wide.

The Buffalo 286 barge was outbound on the ship channel, headed to Port Arthur, when the Sunday accident occurred. Immediately afterward, the barge was able to reach a port about five miles away, where it was encircled with protective booms to contain the spill.

Frank Gonynor, a spokesman for Buffalo Marine, said the company did not immediately know what caused this incident.

"We are cooperating with the government," Gonynor said. "We are as interested — and even more interested — to find out why this happened."

After the previous spill, oil remained in the Gulf of Mexico for weeks and resulted in tar balls that washed ashore in Corpus Christi up to a month later.

"This spill is a lot different," Benard said. "We don't expect any of this to get out (into the gulf)."

The key difference is that winds are helping contain the oil in the channel; last time, the wind blew it into the gulf.

The Texas General Land Office was deploying air boats, response vessels and teams to identify environmentally sensitive areas, such as bird and wildlife sanctuaries.

Insurance lawsuit

AUSTIN — Attorneys representing Texas Farmers Group on Monday said their client's double rounding of insurance premiums cost motorists $10.8 million, one-tenth of the amount sought by plaintiffs' lawyers. Six South Texas motorists are suing Farmers and subsidiary Mid-Century insurance companies and Allstate Insurance Co. They contend the companies overcharged Texans by $109 million over 10 years through illegal calculations. Basin residents gather to honor lost comrades

More than 100 people gathered at the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial Monday morning to remember those who died for their country.

The Memorial Day ceremony was among two held in Midland. The other was at Fairview Cemetery and sponsored by American Legion Post No. 19.

Memorial Day, first recognized as a day to honor soldiers who died during the Civil War, has evolved to become a day to remember all Americans who lost their lives for their country.

Vietnam veteran and former judge Robert Hollmann, of Odessa, publicly remembered those who died for their country including the "buddies" whose names adorn the wall at the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial. The wall contains 225 names of men from 30 counties who died in the Vietnam War.

"For those of us who went, they are more than names on a wall," Hollmann told the crowd. "These names are engraved on our hearts. They will be there the rest of our lives."

John Philbeck, president of the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial committee, also recognized the "ultimate sacrifice paid for the price of freedom" and the chance for veterans and others to remember and reflect at the site on Memorial Day and every day.

"This is place where they (visitors) remember. This is a place where they dream. This is a place where broken hearts and broken spirits start to mend," he said.

The ceremony was also marked by a posting of the colors by the Odessa Recruiters' Color Guard, the national anthem sung by Horace Doyle and Antoine Lathan, prayer by the Rev. Hadley Edwards of Hollowell United Methodist Church, taps played by John Blevins of Wayland Baptist Church and various songs played by bagpiper Cliff Sherrod.

Judge works to maintain law and order

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

He wears a robe all day, but he's definitely not lounging around.

Judge John Hyde oversees the cases that come before him in the 238th District Court, making rulings and determinations following the letter of the law while being as fair and impartial as the law requires.

The 53-year-old judge began his career as an attorney in 1967. He graduated from Hardin Simmons University in 1964 and the University of Texas Law School in 1967.

He passed the bar exam in 1967 and was drafted into the U.S. Army where he spent one year stateside and one year in Vietnam.

He returned to Texas in January 1970 and began working in the Midland city attorney's office, where he served until 1975. He then went into a private practice until he was appointed to his current position in 1990.

He filled an unexpired term before being elected to the judgeship later than same year.

While most of his days are fairly structured, he seldom has an 8-5 day.

"We have pretty well-planned days," Hyde said. "The days begin checking the docket with the cases set for that day."

He said cases start quickly, with one of three things: the two sides can settle the case, there can be a problem with the scheduling or trial or pre-trial starts.

He said one of the most anxious moments of his job involves bringing in jury panels, making sure they are qualified and dispersed to other courts.

"That type of process is unsettling to a jury because they'd rather be home or on the job. So, I'm a little anxious until they're seated," Hyde said.

As a judge he has to make sure a case is set and brought to trial and ensure that the trial moves in an orderly fashion.

Often, he said a case may have been anticipated to end in five days but it may take seven days to complete. So it is his responsilibity to help

Additionally, a judge is charged with knowing rules of the law and applying those rules fairly to all the litigants in a case.

One of the best aspects of the job is the resolution of conflict, he said.

"To be able to preside over matters of significance in people's lives and hopefully bring closure and a fair resolution" is rewarding, Hyde said.

As a judge, he said the question he is asked the most is why defendants are entitled to bond.

"They are entitled to a reasonable bond because the Constitution mandates it," he said. "Sometimes it is unpopular, but it is still my responsibility to set it within the framework of the Constitution."

He said the most difficult cases to hear are those of child abuse.

"I was aware of the drug problems and violence, but the sheer number of two things surprised me," he said. "The high rate of felony DWIs and the tremendous number of sexual and physical abuse of children in our community.

"I was close to the courthouse for 20 years and until you keep charge of the docket and see the numbers, well that was a startling statistic," Hyde said.

But, despite all this, he said he loves his job.

"Overall, its a very enjoyable job. I like the responsibility and challenge," the judge said.

SPILL: Houston Ship Channel hit again

(From 1B)

The only place oil was known to have washed ashore was Atkinson Island, a sandy, uninhabited area of the channel. Sand helps bunch the tar and makes it easy to scoop up. Aerial footage showed it to be well contained.

"That bodes well," said Bob Mann, a spokesman for the General Land Office's oil spill prevention and response division. "As of now, it looks like a good possibility that no beaches, no environmentally sensitive areas are going to be impacted to any significance."

Mann said bird scare cannons were being discharged about every 20 seconds to divert the water fowl. There had been no reports of oiled birds.

About 100 representatives from federal and state agencies and contractors were on the scene. Eight shallow water skimmers were removing the spilled oil.

Benard said nearly all traffic into and out of the ship channel was halted pending the cleanup, causing about a 20-barge backup early Monday afternoon. By late afternoon, some large commercial vessels were traveling slowly out of the channel.

Gonynor said the company was able to move quickly to contain Sunday's spill because of its recent experience with the previous accident. The cleanup for that slick was $5 million, he estimated.

To determine the cause of this accident, the barge must be placed in dry dock. Benard noted that Buffalo Marine's previous accident is still under investigation.

Insurance compainies dispute figure in double rounding lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorneys representing Texas Farmers Group on Monday said their client's double rounding of insurance premiums cost motorists $10.8 million, one-tenth of the amount sought by plaintiffs' lawyers.

Six South Texas motorists are suing Farmers and subsidiary Mid-Century insurance companies and Allstate Insurance Co. They contend the companies overcharged Texans by $109 million over 10 years through illegal calculations.

"Texas Farmers and Mid-Century stand by their position that they followed (Texas Department of Insurance) instructions on how to calculate auto insurance premiums," said Tom Rogers, an attorney for Texas Farmers and Mid-Century.

"However, we felt it was important to clarify that (plaintiffs' attorney John) Cracken has been playing fast and loose with the facts by throwing his $100 million figure around," Rogers said.

Officials for the two companies, which together insure an estimated 30 percent of the state's drivers, have said they were following state regulators' guidelines.

Before 1991, state insurance department officials told insurers to round twice, once after they were calculated and again after they were divided into payments.

An analysis by the accounting firm of KPMG Peat Marwick, provided by the insurance companies' lawyers, shows its clients' calculations between 1992 and 1995 cost consumers $10.8 million. It does not address Allstate's double rounding.

Peat Marwick's analysis is based on the four years before Cracken's lawsuit was filed, which the companies' lawyers said was governed by Texas statutes of limitation.

Vonunteers help out South Texas town

By Jeanne Russell
The Monitor (McAllen)

PROGRESO — Jack Parmenter may wear blue jeans and a pale blue guayabera, but he still carries a briefcase.

"I haven't worn short sleeves since I was 11 years old," the retired bank executive said, leaning back in a chair at his office in Progreso's City Hall.

On March 19, Parmenter volunteered three months worth of his services to the city of Progreso. Since then, he has shown up at city hall at eight in the morning three days a week, ready to dive into boxes of unsorted receipts and bank statements.

Parmenter functions as finance manager for the city, reconstructing records and creating a financial ledger for a city that had not kept books since it incorporated five years ago.

Progreso, plagued by political infighting and fiscal folly, has had a troubled childhood. Its former mayor pro-tem was arrested on theft charges for holding money earmarked for colonias in her private bank account. The fledgling police department struggled financially and could not pay some of its officers. Amid rumor, scandal and debt, the department shut its doors for good. When an independent auditor came in to check the city's financial status, he could not conduct the audit because no receipts or records had been kept.

In the space of just two months, though, Parmenter has made agreements with debtors and helped edge the city back toward the black.

"I've constructed a general ledger, which to my knowledge they've never had before," Parmenter said. "By the end of this fiscal year, the city will be in good financial shape."

With the help of Parmenter and some federal grants, a group of aldermen elected in the past two years has bold plans, including paving Progreso's streets and creating a permanent police force.

Mayor Arturo Valdez received notice recently that the city had won a federal grant for $95,000 for police services. He now hopes to get a grant for $35,000 from the Environmental Protection Agency for a building inspector to check electricity, plumbing and building codes and collect fees.

Mayor Pro-Tem Josefa Martinez said she plans to start a city newsletter in June to keep residents informed about what's going on in the community.

The tiny border city of Progreso, with its 2,000 residents living mostly in colonias, incorporated almost five years ago. Residents pay no city property taxes.

The city brings in about $10,000 in monthly income from sales tax, permit and franchise fees and rent on a building behind City Hall, city officials said.

Fees sometimes prove tough to collect with only one city employee, the city secretary.

Progreso has a post office, but no library, police or fire department. The city has about 22 businesses, some run from private homes.

In March, Parmenter read an article in the newspaper about Progreso's troubled finances.

"I thought I'd contact the mayor and ask if he needed some help," Parmenter said.

"I had experience in bookkeeping, auditing and computers," he said, "and that's what he needed, I think."

Valdez said Parmenter's offer came at the ideal moment.

"He saw how we were struggling, and he thought he could give us a helping hand," Valdez said.

To understand how far Progreso has come, one needs to know its past.

When Martinez, the mayor protem, took office in January 1995, she vowed to bring spending under control.

"We were close to $30,000 in debt," she said.

The city's efforts to fund a police department with traffic ticket revenues had sent the city spiraling into debt.

"At one point, we weren't even paying our officers," she said. "We were living on borrowed money."

The city council tried cutting the number of police officers from 14 to four. Then, they tried to conduct an audit.

"Papers were misplaced," said Martinez. "Invoices were misplaced. Minutes weren't there. Bank statements weren't there."

Although the independent auditor could not complete the audit, he did charge the city about $10,000, which only added to the pile of unpaid bills.

In February 1996, the city council disbanded the police department.

The bills remained.

"One of the things that was hurting us was that we weren't paying our bills," Valdez said. "No one wanted to give us credit."

However, the fiscal future is considerably brighter these days.

"We're paying our bills right now," Valdez said. "Now we're developing a line of credit."

Parmenter, 68, said the challenge drew him to Progreso.

"It's lived up to my expectations," he said of the city's efforts to regroup.

The special talents he brings to his volunteer efforts have their seeds in the Midwestern tradition of hard work.

He started his career in 1948, at the Central National Bank in Des Moines, Iowa, supporting his grandmother, who had raised him since he was 14.

From assistant cashier, he worked his way up to senior vice president and cashier for the First Trust and Savings Bank in Cedar Rapids.

Parmenter installed the first bank computer system in Iowa, wrote personnel manuals and designed data processing systems.

"I didn't realize I'd go as far as I did," he said. "I could have gone further, but the routine got boring."

He moved to McAllen in 1993, after he and his wife, Marcia Parmenter, visited her mother, a Winter Texan in Mission.

"We came down to visit for a couple of weeks and Jack fell in love with the Valley," Marcia Parmenter said. "He just loved the climate."

But the retired Parmenter wanted to find a productive use for his time and talents, so he offered his time and services to help land Progreso in the black.

"Jack has given us a clear picture of all the city's financial failings," Martinez said. "We've taken tighter control over our finances."

But Parmenter credits the city council for Progreso's turnaround.

"I'm particularly impressed with the loyalty the mayor and this council have to this city, and their pride in the city," Parmenter said.

His work for the city of Progreso may soon come to an end, though. Valdez and Parmenter plan to sit down and talk about the future on June 13, when Parmenter's 90 days ends.

"We just take it one day at a time," Valdez said. "I don't know whether we can afford to create a position for him right now."

Marcia Parmenter said moving costs, coupled with cuts in Social Security and Medicare, had strained their own finances.

"We're both in a situation where it would be nice to get more of an income," she said.

Before volunteering for Progreso, Parmenter looked into jobs as the city manager of Alamo and Hidalgo.

Now, more than ever, he feels ready to take on such a job — for pay this time, he said.

But Parmenter will not move on until he completes two tasks.

On Saturdays, Parmenter's wife joins him at City Hall, where, along with the mayor, they clean, paint and repair the building.

And he plans to leave bookkeeping instructions in the city's computers, he said.

"I'll be writing up a systems operation manual," Parmenter said. "So all they have to do is follow it."

Texas curriculum gets rewrite for first time in ten years

AUSTIN (AP) — For the first time in more than a decade, Texans are taking a hard look at what students are expected to know.

Educators, parents, curriculum specialists and business representatives already have teamed up to compile a first draft of essential knowledge and skills for various subjects.

Now they're working on a second draft that incorporates feedback from educators, business people and others. Beginning in August, more Texans will get a chance to comment on the revised draft.

The key difference from current subject requirements is a subtle but important shift in focus: Rather than specifying what educators should teach, it will detail what skills students should have, said Geoffrey Fletcher, associate commissioner for curriculum and assessment at the Texas Education Agency.

"The language you will see should focus on what students should know and be able to do, as opposed to what the teacher will do to the student," Fletcher said.

"This is the first wholesale look at the entire curriculum that we've had since the early '80s," he added. "It's been 12 years, which happens to be about the lifetime of a student in school."

The purpose of the effort is to ensure students can demonstrate "the knowledge and skills necessary to read, write, compute, problem solve, think critically, apply technology and communicate across all subject areas," Education Commissioner Mike Moses said in a letter to school superintendents.

The rewrite is expected to be adopted by the State Board of Education next year, then will go toward forming the basis for statewide tests and the adoption of instructional materials.

The rewrite might be implemented in different subjects at different times, depending on the extent of curriculum changes, Fletcher said.

For subjects with big changes, it may take longer to inform parents of the expectations and to give teachers professional development they may need, he said.

Senate Education Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, describes the effort's goal as simple.

"I hope the end result is when our graduates go out into the world, they can write a simple declarative sentence at least," Ratliff said.

He said when he gets letters from high school students who've been instructed to write their senator, "Sometimes I just want to hold my head with the grammar — or lack of grammar — and the spelling and the sentence structure and so forth.

"And so I hope that the end result is first, the people in industry and business will begin to see a high school student that exhibits a high school education. Second, I hope we're preparing students so when they go to college, they don't have to spend the first year getting them up to college level."

People involved in the process say the rewrite fits with a state philosophy to clearly define expectations, then allow schools to design programs to meet them.

"This is no attempt at all to dictate methodology. It is an effort to crystallize and clearly focus on the state's expectations," said Nancy McClaran of the Texas Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

Ms. McClaran said the process actually began with hearings a couple of years ago at which thousands of Texans testified on what they believe students should know.

"We want to be sure what we're expecting of students is what they really need when they leave school and go into the world," she said.

The Texas Education Agency has posted the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills documents on the Internet at http://www.tea.state.tx.us/teks. The public comment period, for a revised draft, will be in August and September.

Students invest wisely; make about $1.8 million with investment fund

FORT WORTH (AP) — Many students at Texas Christian University are investing their time as well as the school's money to learn how to manage a stock portfolio.

A group of handpicked students works on the Educational Investment Fund year-round, deciding if and when to hold stocks and when to fold them.

The fund was established in 1973 with a donation of Alcon Laboratories stock worth about $600,000, given by William C. Conner, a cofounder of the eye-care company and a chairman of the university's board of directors.

The fund was the first in the country to be controlled entirely by students who vote whether to buy, sell or hold various stocks. Since its inception, more than 500 students have managed the fund, making about $1.8 million.

Each year about $70,000 is taken from the fund and donated equally to Texas Christian and the Baylor College of Ophthalmology in Houston. The two institutions have garnered about $1.2 million from the students' management skills.

All the years haven't been good on Wall Street and the students have experienced major fluctuations, including the 1987 crash when assets plummeted 11 percent.

Student adviser Stanley Block, who has worked with the fund since the beginning, said the early days were the most difficult.

"Our first two years were the worst two years in the post-World War II market period. The students really got a learning experience and I hope they've overcome their pessimism," he said with a laugh.

Students at the beginning also watched their Alcon stock drop at one point from $36 a share to $12.

"We sat there open-mouthed watching our original grant go down to one-third of its value," Block said. "We were put in the position of having a very generous gift and watching it diminish in an astonishing rate."

The original five students never saw anything but the market go down, but ultimately Nestles of Switzerland bought Alcon at a nice return.

Lapsed taxes have cost treasury $2 billion so far this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has lost almost $2 billion this year because it isn't collecting industry taxes that died due to haggling between Congress and the White House. The losses are mounting daily.

Beneficiaries range from petroleum and chemical companies, no longer paying millions into the Superfund for toxic waste cleanup, to airline passengers saving a few bucks each after a federal tax on air tickets expired.

Two other environmental taxes have lapsed. One hit gasoline and other fuels to pay for pollution from leaking underground storage tanks, and the other targeted crude oil to finance cleanups of major oil spills.

The government stopped collecting Superfund taxes in January because lawmakers were unable to fashion a compromise on reauthorizing the toxic cleanup law acceptable to the Clinton administration.

The tax generated about $4 million a day, mainly from petroleum and chemical companies. That means almost $600 million in revenue has gone uncollected in the first five months of this year, the Environmental Protection Agency said.

A $3 billion surplus already exists in the Superfund account, enough to cover about 18 months of cleanup. EPA officials warn the cushion is not large enough, and cleanup programs soon will be hindered.

"Fees collected from oil and chemical companies are essential to our ability to clean up toxic waste sites," EPA Administrator Carol Browner said. "The loss of these revenues is unfair and will soon jeopardize communities waiting for cleanup action."

Republican leaders like Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, strongly oppose reinstating the tax until agreement is reached for overhauling the Superfund law.

'Fees collected from oil and chemical companies are essential to our ability to clean up toxic waste sites.'

—Carol Browner, EPA administrator

Archer believes the program has not worked. His spokesman, James Wilcox, said Archer "will not institute any type of tax again until the issue is resolved."

Some lawmakers and tax experts say the failure to collect the taxes is making it harder to balance the budget, because both the airline and environmental cleanup funds are counted as revenue in calculating the deficit. In addition, Republicans in the House have pushed through legislation for temporary repeal of a 4.3-cent increase in the gasoline tax enacted in 1993.

If agreements can be reached to reauthorize the lapsed taxes, lawmakers could recover some revenue losses by passing retroactive laws.

The biggest cumulative loss so far is from the tax on airline tickets, which cost the Treasury $1.3 billion through the end of April, officials said. The tax lapsed after President Clinton vetoed the GOP's balanced budget plan. It is paid by consumers, so airlines probably have realized little direct benefit.

A nickel-a-barrel tax for the oil-spill fund lapsed at the end of 1995 because the fund reached its ceiling of $1 billion and the administration and Congress couldn't agree to raise the ceiling.

The White House argues $1 billion is too little to deal with a major spill. It wants an increase to $2.5 billion.

The government also stopped collecting in January a gas tax of one-tenth of a cent per gallon to help pay for the repair of leaking underground storage tanks. The tax into the so-called LUST fund expired automatically when it wasn't renewed, but the EPA argues the money still is needed to help pay for cleaning up leaks from buried gasoline, diesel and other fuel tanks around the country.

U.S. declines opportunity to help out African nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — As African countries descend into chaos, many analysts contend that President Clinton has not fulfilled his early promise to help African nations "identify and solve problems before they erupt."

"Clinton has never quite lived up to his own challenge," said Chester Crocker, President Reagan's top Africa adviser for eight years.

Among other critics, Crocker believes the administration has erred too far on the side of caution in dealing with ethnic violence in Liberia, Rwanda, Burundi and elsewhere.

Crocker, citing the examples of Haiti and Bosnia, said, "You don't always pay a price for doing the right thing."

Twice in the past six weeks, the administration has flown Americans and other foreigners to safety from African countries in profound turmoil, first in Liberia, then in the Central African Republic.

As French troops try to restore order in the Central African Republic, a former French colony, the Clinton administration has shied away from a similar role in Liberia despite historically close U.S.-Liberian relations. Since early April, conditions in Liberia have become progressively more desperate, its population terrorized by killers and looters.

The violence in Liberia pales to that of Burundi, where ethnic tensions that already claimed hundreds of thousands of lives in recent years in Burundi and neighboring Rwanda are believed escalating. A European diplomat quoted in a cable by former U.S. Ambassador Robert Krueger warns that "a million may die" if the world gives up on Burundi. The cable was leaked last week to The Washington Post.

U.S. involvement in Burundi has been limited largely to issuing appeals for power-sharing arrangements among rival ethnic factions. The administration also has promised equipment — but no troops — if the United Nations decides to intervene.

State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said the United States must choose with care where to intervene abroad. More than the conflicts in Africa, he said, the situations in Bosnia and Haiti lent themselves to U.S. intervention.

There are constraints: the federal budget deficit, a Congress with isolationist tendencies and a propensity to cut foreign aid, an overextended United Nations. Not least is the perplexing problem of how to deal with conflicts occurring within rather than between nations.

Seldom has Africa commanded priority attention from the United States, but the national security adviser, Anthony Lake, promised shortly after Clinton took office to end past indifference. Some administrations, he said, "have taken years to figure out where Africa is on the map."

DEAR ABBY

'Don't sweat small stuff' is happy wife's good advice to couples

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I celebrated our eighth wedding anniversary recently. He is 70 and I am 56. He had been married for many years and was a widower when we met. I had never been married. Abby, I lived 48 years without a husband, so I know how to appreciate the loving sweetheart I have now.

Van Buren

When I see letters about husbands and wives picking each other apart over trifles, I just shake my head. If they'd had to wait as long as I did, they wouldn't waste time fighting over insignificant issues like whether a toilet seat should be up or down, or whether he picked out an appropriate gift.

We may not always agree on everything, but we would never wound each other and ruin a loving marriage with harsh, cutting words. Life is too short ever to go to bed mad.

Having my husband sit across from me at dinner and sleeping next to me at night is the greatest gift I could ever ask for. I thank God for him every day, and I let him know how much he's loved. Thanks for letting me express my feelings. — THE HAPPIEST WOMAN IN OHIO

DEAR HAPPIEST WOMAN: Thank you for a day-brightener. You and your husband must be a delight, not only to each other, but also to those around you. I hope your letter reminds couples everywhere to take a second, more appreciative look at the person sitting across the breakfast table.

DEAR ABBY: My friend "Lucy" has been dating "Mark" for two years, and they just got engaged.

After several outings at the beginning of their relationship, I decided that I didn't like Mark. I thought the way he treated Lucy and me was rude and obnoxious. I told Lucy that I wouldn't socialize with Mark anymore and told her my reason.

Now that Lucy and Mark are engaged to be married, however, she keeps pushing me to meet him again, saying I never gave him a fair chance. I stand by my decision. When she asked what would happen when she married him, I told her I would be cordial, but if she expected me to come over for dinner or to play bridge with him, I wouldn't. I don't like Mark and he doesn't like me.

Then Lucy dropped a bomb. Abby, she says if I won't accept Mark, then I am abusing her and our friendship. I was floored. How am I supposed to respond to that? — ABUSER OR ABUSED?

DEAR ABUSER OR ABUSED: You are abusing neither Lucy nor the friendship. Your opinion of him clearly hasn't influenced her decision — Lucy and Mark are now engaged. Since tolerating Mark is now a condition of your continued friendship with Lucy, you must decide whether you're willing to pay that price.

DEAR ABBY: I need advice on how to handle a well-meaning friend who continually asks me how much money I spend on things I wear and also purchase for my home. I find this very rude on her part.

She has been a good friend for many years, but her questions about the cost of everything are really getting on my nerves. How do I get my point across without losing her friendship? — NO NAME, INITIALS OR TOWN

DEAR NO NAME: Try this (with a smile, of course): "I will forgive you for asking, if you will forgive me for not answering."

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Food is best bait you can use if you'd like to see your children

Editor's Note: Erma Bombeck died April 22. As a farewell tribute to this well-loved columnist, the Reporter-Telegram will publish some of her classic columns for several weeks. This column originally appeared July 19, 1990.

My husband said the other day, "We haven't seen our kids in a while."

Bombeck

"You want to see your kids?" I asked. "I can arrange it."

"You're not going to call and tell them we're changing the will again, are you? We've overdone that one."

"No, no. At least one of them will be here tonight for dinner. Trust me."

Sure enough. At 6 p.m. we heard a key in the door and our son walked in. My husband was astounded. "How did you do that?" he asked.

"It's easy. I defrosted and cooked two thin pork chops for dinner."

That's the way it's been ever since they got their own apartments. I cook enough spaghetti to feed Sicily and no one shows. I nuke two small pieces of leftover pizza for dinner and they fly in from out of state.

How do they know I've cooked for two? It's one of the great mysteries of child raising. Kids were equipped with radar long before it went commercial. They knew when there were bananas hidden behind the popcorn popper in the pantry. They knew when there was a candy bar in the meat keeper in the refrigerator. It was not possible for a leftover piece of pie to survive a child in search of breakfast. When a dish rattles, they hear it, no matter where they are.

When you think about it, mothers set themselves up for it. We dedicated our lives to feeding our kids. Nobody went hungry. I fed a cold; I fed a fever. If an infant cried, I stuffed a bottle in her mouth. If a child fell off a bicycle, I promised him ice cream.

"You may not graduate? Have a piece of cake."

"Your car was totaled? Have you had lunch?"

"You're not overweight. You're too thin. Eat!"

We have created an image for ourselves of being able to feed a crowd on a pound of hamburger and bring forth food when the cupboards are bare. It has always been. My grandmother would scurry when we pulled into the driveway. She'd open cans with one hand and set four more places at the table with the other. My mother did the same thing when five of us parked in front of the house at dinnertime.

Now that I think about it — maybe they just wanted to see us.

THE ABC'S OF BETTER HEALTH CARE.

Attorney with AIDS files lawsuit claiming his firm 'marooned' him

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Among the 32,000 panels of the AIDS Memorial Quilt, among the testimonials to fallen friends and colleagues, one panel attests to the heartache of a San Francisco law firm.

With this 3-foot-by-6-foot rectangle, the firm of Heller, Ehrman, White & McAuliffe remembers two dozen staffers who have died of AIDS.

It is also, say members of the firm, a mark of Heller, Ehrman's AIDS consciousness. For years, it has fought AIDS discrimination, and organized AIDS workshops for its more than 200 employees in San Francisco — long an epicenter of the disease.

But don't tell Andrew Mead that Heller, Ehrman is some sort of paragon.

Mead says he is trapped in a real-life version of the movie "Philadelphia"; his high-powered career at Heller, Ehrman withered, he says, when he told his bosses that he was HIV-positive. And now he has filed a million-dollar discrimination suit.

The firm's chairman, Robert Rosenfeld, is outraged: "One claim calls into question everything you've done for years and years and years."

Mead, 38, acknowledges that Heller, Ehrman's reputation is such that his suit has come as a surprise to many. "I'm hearing a lot of shock (and) outrage, verging on disbelief," he says.

It was that reputation that drew Mead to Heller, Ehrman from the first.

Mead grew up in Nashville and, after his father died, put himself through college and Harvard Law School. He skipped graduation in 1983 to take the first phase of the California bar exam and started working immediately for Heller, Ehrman.

As his career progressed, he averaged more than 2,000 billable hours of work a year. He was doing corporate law, apparently headed for a partnership, and making six figures.

Then, in late 1991, he revealed his illness.

Mead claims that his superiors took him off two major cases and declined to assign more, despite repeated requests for work. His billable hours dropped to double digits.

"(They) basically marooned me, transferring me first from one person to another, from one department to another, and finally sticking me in the administrative department with very little to do but make-work," he says.

Although he has shown few physical signs of AIDS, even today, Mead claims that his bosses feared the image of a lawyer with "hair falling out or skin lesions."

"With big firms, there's always a lot of competition for the best clients. And any little thing that can present even a cosmetic variation in your presentation to clients strikes fear in them," Mead says. "They go to great lengths to cultivate images."

Beginning in 1992, he began collecting memos, hand-written notes and phone messages. Much of it, he says, will prove his claims that a new attorney was hired to pick up his clients, that junior associates assigned to him to help with the "grunt work" were taken away and that he was relieved of his duties on the firm's committees handling sexual harassment and recruiting.

Despite bouts of fatigue, Mead didn't want to retire. He says he told his bosses that he still wanted to be considered for partner status. But, if that wasn't possible, he wanted to cut back on his frequent travel to Los Angeles and New York.

Finally, in 1994, a frustrated Mead took disability leave, ending his 11-year career with the firm.

'Mission: Impossible' breaks Memorial Day records

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Mission: Impossible," the Tom Cruise remake of the TV espionage series, grossed an estimated $56.9 million over four days, a record take for Memorial Day weekend, industry sources said Monday.

The previous record of $37.2 million was set by "The Flintstones" in 1994.

Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc. also projected that "Mission: Impossible" will break a record with $75 million in earnings in a six-day period, from Wednesday through Monday. That would surpass the six-day record of $74.1 million held by "Jurassic Park."

"We are ecstatic with the performance of this movie," said Barry London, vice chairman of the motion picture group at Paramount Pictures Corp.

Cruise co-produced the film, which also surpassed the three-day May debut record of $41 million earned by "Twister," by taking in $45.4 million Friday through Sunday.

Together, "Mission: Impossible" and "Twister," which took in $37.1 million in its third week, led the film industry to its biggest Memorial Day weekend ever, according to Exhibitor Relations.

In fact, this weekend's top 10 films outperformed all 89 movies tracked through Memorial Day weekend last year, the company said.

The top 10 films Friday through Monday took in $119.7 million, compared to $116.7 million for the 89 films.

The figures are preliminary estimates of ticket sales Friday through Monday. Final figures are due out Tuesday.

1. "Mission: Impossible," $56.9 million.
2. "Twister," $37.1 million.
3. "Spy Hard," $10.6 million.
4. "Flipper," $5 million.
5. "The Craft," $2.7 million.
6. "The Truth About Cats and Dogs," $2.7 million.
7. "Primal Fear," $1.5 million.
8. "The Birdcage," $1.2 million.
9. "Toy Story," $1 million.
10. "Heaven's Prisoners," $950,000.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Handle a relationship with care if you want it to become serious. A summer romance could lead to an autumn engagement. New profits come from recycling a previous project. A sideline business may be the key to a golden financial future. 1997 could feature a move to another city. Guard against acting hastily. Weddings that take place next spring will enjoy special blessings. Listen to your strong inner voice. You are on the right track where your work is concerned.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: singer Gladys Knight, actress Sondra Locke, Olympic pentathlon legend Jim Thorpe, James Bond creator Ian Fleming.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A valuable social or professional alliance is shaping up nicely. You profit from an unusual pairing. Bring your ideas to the table; influential people will approve.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Rely on proven information and team resources to help you move ahead with a pet project. Accept an outsider's help even if some risk is involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): There are no shortcuts to easy street. Steer clear of risky investments. A loved one will see you in a different light if you admit a mistake. The days of emotional repression are over.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Refuse to let a postponement or wild goose chase depress you. Use any spare time to get your personal affairs in better order. Your fiscal forecast is strong.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Addressing a sensitive issue immediately will lead to accord. Do not lose your temper if a decision-maker reneges on an agreement. A power play could be in progress. Stay out of the line of fire.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Business travel is favored, especially one-day trips. A meeting regarding a creative endeavor goes well. Weigh your options as far as your home life is concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A long-term business deal could become a sure thing. An impromptu meeting will prove beneficial for all concerned. A neighbor asks for a favor. A commitment to exercising regularly will restore your vitality.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A cash influx makes you feel more confident about the future. Invest this money wisely. You can update your professional image by buying some new clothes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A business trip is a possibility. Make careful plans. Otherwise, important details could be overlooked. A co-worker shares valuable tips. Repay the favor when you can.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It pays to get in touch with your feelings. Any sacrifices you make now will prove worthwhile. Postpone asking for favors while you focus on strengthening key relationships.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Faulty communications could mess things up. Break away from stifling conditions. Let the other person take the lead in a new relationship. Curb spending while you accumulate money for investment purposes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If a relationship is faltering, get at the root of the problem. Friends may not be as supportive as you expect. You come to an important realization.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1NT	Pass	2◇	Pass
2♡	Pass	4♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇

Study the bidding and play of this hand from a rubber bridge game, then decide whether anyone erred and, if so, who?

North's two diamonds was a transfer to hearts. By jumping to game in hearts next, most experts would expect responder to have mild slam aspirations. A hand with game-going values but no interest in slam can be shown by a direct jump to four hearts, or a four-level transfer if that is in your armory.

West led the jack of diamonds. East captured the queen with the ace and then shifted to a low spade. Declarer played low from hand and West's jack won. After cashing the king of spades there was no way for East to gain the lead to score the ace of spades. Declarer was able to get two spade discards from the board on the king of diamonds and a high club, and the game rolled home. Did anyone do anything wrong?

Yes, West could have defeated the contract by leading the king of spades and continuing with the jack, which would have resulted in a third round spade ruff, but who would make that lead? And East could have overtaken the king of spades with the ace and given partner a ruff, but that would not have been a great success had West started with three spades. There was an error, however, and West was the guilty party.

East would not have shifted to a low spade at trick two with nothing in the suit. Therefore West should have played partner for the ace and to make sure of defeating the contract, should have won the spade with the king and returned the jack. East could not misread these plays, and the ensuing ruff would have scuttled the contract.

Actor Charlie Sheen says his party days are over — he's found religion

LOS ANGELES — Actor Charlie Sheen — known for partying and court testimony about his yen for prostitutes — says his wild days are over.

"There is such a thing as too much fun," he said. "It gets redundant. How many times can you wake up and struggle to remember your name, her name and where you are?"

Sheen says he's a born-again Christian now, following a shoulder healing by a holy man.

"I knew people would scoff at Charlie Sheen finding religion, but it's important to me," he said.

The 30-year-old son of actor Martin Sheen plays a radio astronomer who uncovers an alien plot to take over the world in the new sci-fi thriller "The Arrival."

"I'm happy to be back and I'm just counting little victories."

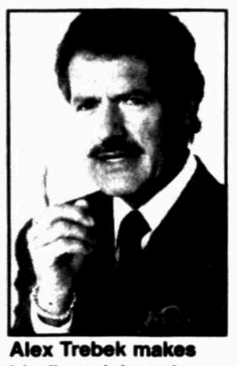

Counting his victories is better than dwelling on his testimony at the trial of Hollywood Madam Heidi Fleiss, when he admitted to spending more than $50,000 on prostitutes.

It's also better than fretting over his past substance abuse problem, or his marriage that ended in divorce court after less than six months.

INDIANAPOLIS — Like 17 drivers at this year's Indianapolis 500, many celebrity race fans were rookies.

"This is my first visit to the 500, and I'm not very knowledgeable about racing," Alex Trebek, the host of television's "Jeopardy" game show, said Sunday.

Alex Trebek makes his first visit to the Indy 500.

David Letterman and Paul Newman, who have been involved in auto racing for years, skipped this year's Indy 500, opting for the inaugural U.S. 500 in Michigan.

Most of the sport's big name drivers competed in the U.S. 500 to protest new qualifying rules at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

In addition to Trebek, other celebrity first-timers at the Speedway included Jonathan Silverman, star of the series "The Single Guy," and Barry Williams, who portrayed Greg Brady on "The Brady Bunch" television series.

LOS ANGELES — Billionaire Ross Perot's big ears have been the target of political cartoonists and comedians for years.

Steve McElroy to unveil paintings of "Ross and Me."

Now a former associate of the former presidential candidate will unveil 16 abstract, cubist paintings called "Ross and Me" that detail his rocky relationship with the Texas tycoon.

"The viewer may walk away struggling to decide whether Perot is a business genius, ruthless scoundrel, nutty opportunist or a combination of all three," inventor Steve McElroy said recently.

"He's not all bad, but he's not all good."

McElroy, 38, invented a one-size-fits-all plastic lid called Total Top. Perot gained a 50 percent partnership in Total Top Inc. in 1988. While McElroy severed their relationship in 1995, Perot has recently claimed they are still partners.

The paintings, accompanied by passages from McElroy's diary entries, are to be displayed this summer at galleries in Los Angeles, McElroy said.

NEW YORK — Seems more people prefer the gospel sounds of Andy Griffith to the urban angst of Alice in Chains.

Over the past few weeks, a gospel album by the actor has been climbing the popular charts. This week the disc hit No. 78 — above Seattle grunge stars Alice in Chains.

"An album of traditional, American hymns by one of America's best-loved stars makes a perfect match," says Scott Hughes, marketing chief of Griffith's label, Sparrow.

Griffith's album has sold nearly 90,000 copies, according to SoundScan.

Bianca Jagger is said to be madder than heck about a new book, "Did She or Didn't She? Behind the Bedroom Doors of 201 Famous Women," by Mart Martin (Carol Publishing; $12.95), that links her with a number of famous guys and makes certain assertions about her active sex life.

Jagger's lawyer, Kenneth Caruso, told New York magazine that these claims are "defamatory."

STORM TRACKER FACTS

The first unofficial day of summer didn't feel like the summer-like weather of last week. With highs in the low 90s, some welcome relief from the heat wave finally came to the basin and made for a nice Memorial Day. The bad news is that the heat will be back today, as temperatures are expected to zoom to the upper 90s and low 100s. The drought continues across West Texas.

May Is National Mental Health Month

Texans now can receive FREE information about pertinent mental health questions

May is more than just the last month of spring, it's also National Mental Health Month! In conjunction with this special month, The Texas Psychological Association encourages all Texans to take a moment and think about their own mental health.

Most people believe that good mental health is just as important as good physical health. In fact, a recent survey by the American Psychological Association found that 84 percent of those polled feel psychological health is more important for overall physical fitness. However, more than half of the 1,000 folks surveyed don't know when it's appropriate to seek a mental health professional, and a whopping 68 percent said they wouldn't know how to seek help if they felt they needed it!

To counter this confusion, the APA and TPA have teamed up for a massive public education campaign entitled, "Talk To Someone Who Can Help." Included in this campaign is a toll-free telephone number people can call to receive a free brochure that answers basic questions about seeking mental health treatment. The brochure can be obtained by calling the APA toll-free at 1-800-964-2000, or Texans can receive a free faxed copy by calling the TPA at (512) 454-2449.

For computer buffs, the APA's Internet site is found at http://helping.apa.org.

Unbridled's Song ill

NEW YORK — Unbridled's Song, a beaten favorite in his last two races, continued his tale of woe Monday after he was diagnosed with a lung infection that could sideline him until August. The revelation came one day after Unbridled's Song lost by 2 1/2 lengths to Jamies First Punch in the Peter Pan at Belmont Park. Unbridled's Song finished fifth as the favorite in his previous start, the Kentucky Derby on May 4. "He's still in the ball game, but it may take a little time," trainer Jim Ryerson said.

Ripken at third?

SEATTLE — An era is expected to end Tuesday night in exactly the same place it started nearly 14 years ago. On July 8, 1982, rookie Cal Ripken moved from shortstop to third base during the Baltimore Orioles' 7-4 victory over the Mariners at the Kingdome. He hasn't played anywhere but shortstop since.

Until today.

When the Mariners and Orioles begin a two-game series, the future Hall of Famer and arguably the best shortstop in major-league history probably will be at third base with Manny Alexander playing shortstop.

Orioles manager Davey Johnson has been mulling the moves for more than a week. Regular third baseman B.J. Surhoff is on the 15-day disabled list, recovering from a sprained left ankle suffered in a game against the Mariners on May 17.

A source close to the Orioles said Johnson wants to make the position switch in a game "as far away from Baltimore as possible."

The Kingdome qualifies.

Even so, Johnson is keeping his options open. He told Baltimore reporters, "You will know when the lineup is posted."

The 35-year-old Ripken, a two-time American League Most Valuable Player and 13-time All-Star, has been listed on the Orioles' lineup card 2,220 consecutive games. The past 2,173 had "SS" behind his name.

Imagine how strange "3B" will look.

"It will be disappointing," 20-year-old Mariners shortstop Alex Rodriguez said.

Bulls make clean sweep of Magic

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — No one was going to deny Michael Jordan — certainly not the Orlando Magic — and he carried the Chicago Bulls into the NBA Finals with him.

Jordan scored 45 points Monday as the Bulls dethroned Orlando as Eastern Conference champions by completing their sweep of the wounded Magic, 106-101

"It's been a long road, with a lot of expectations along that road," Jordan said. " We're not done yet, but it feels good to get back this far."

The NBA Finals will begin Friday in Chicago if Seattle wraps up its Western Conference series against Utah on Tuesday night.

Jordan, who led the Bulls to titles in 1991, 1992 and 1993 before retiring, returned last season only to make numerous mistakes in a second-round loss to Orlando.

Memories of that bitter defeat motivated him for this season, when he won his eighth scoring crown and fourth MVP and led Chicago to an NBA-record 72-victory season.

"It was extra incentive," Jordan said. "We saw the challenge after last year. We stepped in front of it, we faced it and we conquered it. It was not an individual thing. I think the team has gratification, not just Michael Jordan."

Yes, but it was Jordan who did something about it Monday.

"He played the way we needed him to play to walk out of here with a win," said Scottie Pippen, who had only 12 points on 4-of-11 shooting but contributed eight assists. "This is revenge for him to be able to prove he's still able to carry a team.

"I knew he had the rhythm and I kept trying to get him the ball. He kept making big shots for us. He's the one who didn't allow the Magic to build any type of cushion."

After three below-average games this series, Jordan was sensational in the clincher. He was 16-of-23 from the floor, kept the Bulls in the game when they

Third-seeded Andre Agassi shoots a backhand back to Spanish qualifier Jacobo Diaz in Agassi's 6-1, 6-7 (9-7), 6-4, 6-4 first round win at the French Open Monday in Paris.

Big 3 survive in opening round at French Open

■ Agassi, Sampras have some trouble but advance to second round; Seles makes easy work of her first opponent.

By Stephen Wilson
Associated Press

PARIS — Andre Agassi struggled with his temper and a rookie qualifier. Pete Sampras won a match many thought he might lose. Monica Seles made a stirring return on a court dedicated to her idol.

On a dreary, rainy opening day at Roland Garros, the big names overcame injury worries, tricky opponents and emotional moments to move safely into the second round of the French Open.

Sampras, the men's top seed, served 23 aces and beat Sweden's Magnus Gustafsson 6-1, 7-5, 7-6 (7-5) Monday for his first victory on clay this year, setting up a second-round clash against two-time champion Sergi Bruguera.

"I'm trying to play on my terms, be aggressive, not be so passive like I have been in the past," said Sampras, who has never advanced past the quarterfinals in Paris.

Agassi, No. 3, received a warning and a point penalty for audible obscenities — one strike away from disqualification — before taking advantage of a rain delay to subdue Spanish qualifier Jacobo Diaz, 6-1, 6-7 (9-7), 6-4, 6-4.

"I have a tendency to make it more difficult on myself than it needs to be," said Agassi, who had 77 unforced errors.

Seles, playing her first French Open since her stabbing in Germany three years ago, dedicated Court A to the 1920s French star Suzanne Lenglen. She then returned to the same court, sore shoulder and all, and easily beat French wild card Caroline Dhenin, 6-1, 6-1, in 52 minutes.

"The French Open has always had a very special place in my heart," said Seles, who won here three straight times from 1990 to 1992. "Going out there and thinking that this court is named after somebody that I really loved, now I'm

Seles makes triumphant return to Paris

■ Choking back tears, three-time French Open champion returns to one of her favorite courts for the first time since she was stabbed three years ago.

By Christopher Burns
Associated Press

PARIS — Choking back tears and cheered by a standing ovation, Monica Seles returned to the French Open on Monday for the first time since she was stabbed three years ago.

Bodyguards kept close watch as she signed autographs.

"I think today it was very emotional at first because it's my first time really playing back in Europe' in a Grand Slam, said Seles, who won three straight French Opens before the stabbing in 1993.

"It has always been a very special place in my heart," she said. "The French fans have really been great to me from the beginning, from the first time, like from 1989."

Seles played her first match Monday on Court A, but not before she participated in a ceremony renaming it for Suzanne Lenglen, the 1920s French tennis star Seles admired.

"Thinking that this court is named after somebody that I really loved, now I'm playing my first match coming back on it, it's in some way a new beginning," said Seles, now 22.

Before French TV cameras on the court and at the news conference afterward, Seles was close to tears.

She nervously urged "no one get injured — be careful" as she signed autographs for a crowd of admirers while two dark-suited bodyguards maintained order.

Seles was still a teenager when in April, 1993 a deranged fan attacked her at a tournament in Hamburg, Germany, putting her out of competition for 27 months.

"To me it's unbelievable that I wasn't here since '92. A lot of years have gone by," she said.

She returned last August, winning the Canadian Open, becoming a finalist at the U.S. Open and winning the Australian Open this year. But an injured shoulder forced Seles to withdraw from last week's Madrid Open and there were doubts how long she could last here.

Her first-round opponent 22-year-old Caroline Dhenin of France, had said she would try to take advantage of Seles' left shoulder. It didn't work, and Seles crushed her 6-1, 6-1 in 52 minutes.

"I just have to make the best of it, take it a day at a time, a match at a time," Seles said.

"Sunday was the first day I served easily," said Seles, who expected she'll be taking "some heavier medication that is going to at least take the pain away."

SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE

NCAA track, golf all that's left of league

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — All that stands between the Southwest Conference and extinction is this weekend's NCAA men's golf championships and the NCAA outdoor track and field meet.

Hopefully, things will go better at those events than this past weekend, which featured a series of disappointments in baseball, tennis and women's golf.

Texas bowed out of the baseball NCAA regional it hosted on Saturday, then, on Sunday, Texas Tech was eliminated in the semifinal of its home-field regional and Rice came up 10 runs shy of a first College World Series trip.

In tennis, Texas Christian's unseeded tandem of Ashley Fisher and Jason Weir-Smith reached the men's finals before losing in three sets, while Texas' sixth-ranked duo of Cristina Moros and Farley Taylor took only four games in losing the women's finals.

In women's golf, a missed 40-foot putt on the 18th hole Sunday left Texas a stroke shy of forcing a three-way tie, leaving the Lady Longhorns third. Kelli Kuehne finished ninth, 10 strokes out of first.

Each defeat seemed tinged with the same sorrow and bitterness that brought the league to within weeks of being broken up.

On July 1, Texas, Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Baylor will officially join the Big Eight to form the Big 12; TCU, Southern Methodist and Rice will be part of the Western Athletic Conference; and Houston will join Conference USA.

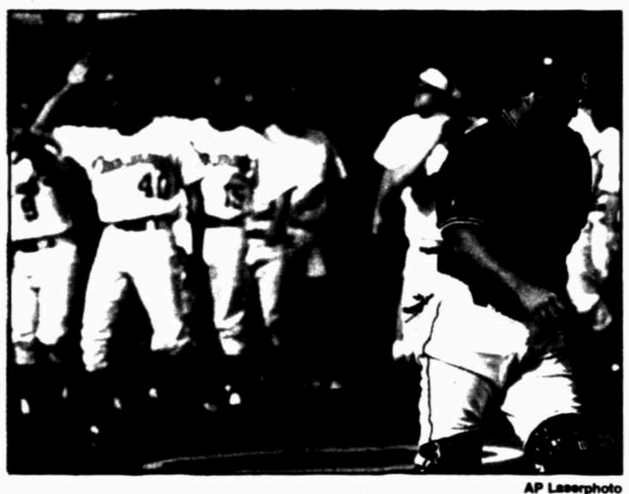

The Owls got off to a good start Sunday by eliminating defending national champion Cal State-Fullerton, which had eliminated Rice en route to last year's title.

But Wichita State led 9-0 midway through the fourth before Rice closed within 9-6 in the bottom of the fourth and fifth. The Shockers scored seven more runs while shutting out the Owls over the final four innings.

Defeat came even more painfully for the Red Raiders.

Playing before the largest crowd ever at Dan Law Field, Tech was an out away from a 10-7 victory over top-ranked and top-seeded USC only to allow six

Indy-car, CART will keep battling

By Joseph Siano
N.Y. Times News Service

INDIANAPOLIS — For a guy who walked into the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with a cane Sunday morning, Buddy Lazier sure got around fast once he arrived. But Monday, on the morning after winning his first Indianapolis 500, Lazier was back in the slow lane.

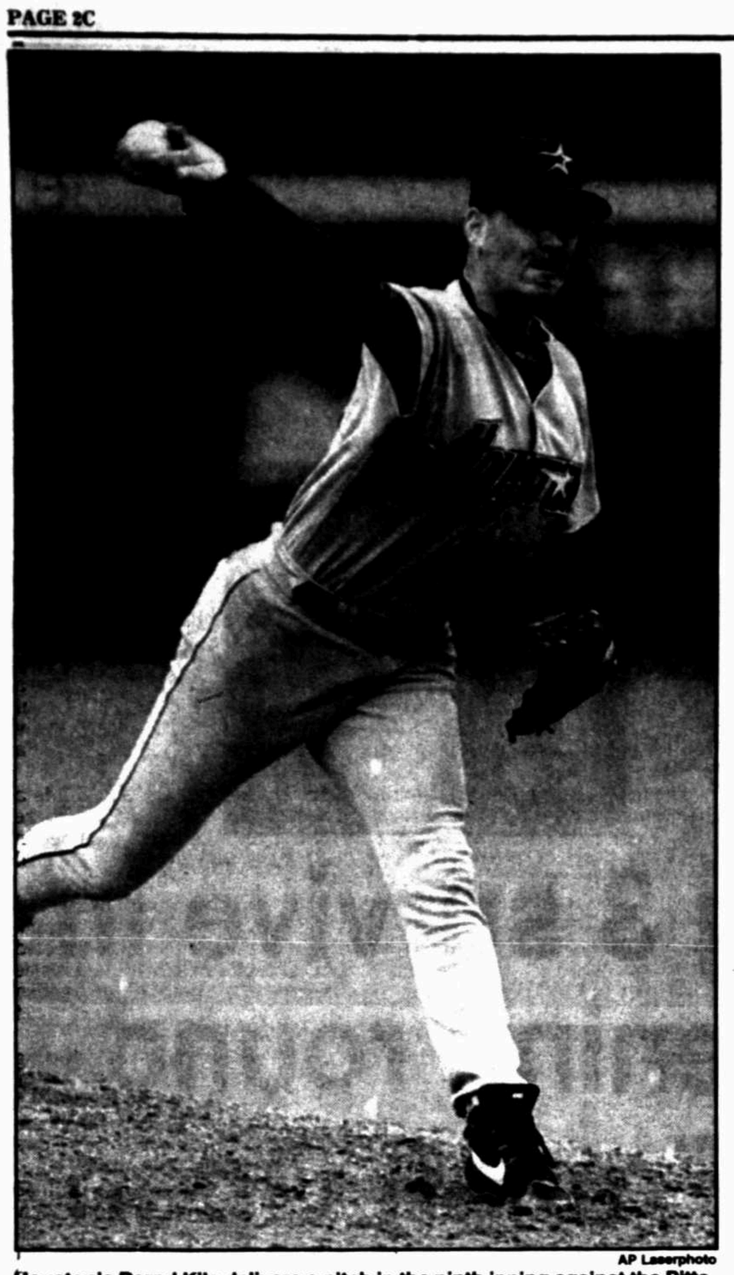

Feeling the effects of a broken back suffered last March, and a victory celebration Sunday night, Lazier must have been happy that the winner's photo session at the Indy was rained out Monday morning. "He's having a tough time getting out of bed," his car owner, Ron Hemelgarn, said Monday.

The same could be said for the rest of Indy-car racing, after a day in which both sides in a major power struggle butted heads with competing 500-mile races. If someone had to be declared a winner Sunday, it was probably Tony George and his Indianapolis Motor Speedway, which scored a clear but inelegant decision over Championship Auto Racing Teams and its U.S. 500 in Brooklyn, Mich.

There were plenty of sloppy moments at Indy, including spins by the rookies Mark Dismore and Paul Durant that could easily have triggered major wrecks. And botched pit stops were the norm. But the race had an exciting fin-

Houston's Darryl Kile delivers a pitch in the ninth inning against the Pittsburgh Pirates in the Astros' 5-3 National League victory Monday afternoon in Pittsburgh. With the win, the Astros reached the .500 mark for the first time since May 10.

Biggio gets hot, Astros win with Kile

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Craig Biggio got hot, and, suddenly, the Houston Astros did, too. A coincidence? Hardly.

Biggio tripled, doubled and homered in his first three at-bats Monday to back Darryl Kile's effective pitching and Houston ran its winning streak to four by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3.

The Astros reached .500 (26-26) for the first time since May 10. The Pirates have lost seven of eight and 16 of 20 and are a season-low 12 games below .500.

Biggio, 8-for-14 during the Astros' first sustained streak in weeks, needed a single to become only the fourth player to hit for the cycle in the Astros' 35-season history. But he walked in the seventh, then was two batters away from batting again when Houston was retired in the ninth.

■ NL Roundup

Rockies 5, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS — Ellis Burks and Larry Walker homered in the first inning and Eric Young had three hits and an RBI as Colorado beat St. Louis.

The streaky Rockies have won nine of 11, including four straight over the Cardinals, after losing seven in a row. Royce Clayton homered for the Cardinals, who have lost two straight after winning five in a row. St. Louis fell to 9-13 at home.

Marlins 6, Reds 2

MIAMI — Al Leiter (7-4) allowed both runs and three hits in eight innings to win for the first time since his no-hitter against Colorado on May 11.

Jeff Conine hit his ninth homer and his third in two days. He also singled home two runs in Florida's four-run first against John Smiley (4-5), who gave up seven hits and five runs in four innings.

Braves 9, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Ryan Klesko hit his second career grand slam and Tom Glavine won his fifth consecutive decision, leading Atlanta over Chicago.

Glavine (6-3) is unbeaten in eight starts. He allowed one run and four hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked one, increasing his career record against Chicago to 11-5.

Atlanta won for the eighth time in 11 games and is 21-6 since April 26.

Amaury Telemaco was pounded for eight runs — three earned — and seven hits in 3 2-3 innings. Chicago has lost five straight and eight of nine.

Padres 4, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Joey Hamilton pitched eight strong innings and scored the go-ahead run in the eighth to lead San Diego over Montreal.

Hamilton (8-3) opened the eighth with a single off Jeff Fassero (3-5) and Wally Joyner broke a 3-3 tie with a two-out double down the first-base line, chasing Fassero.

Hamilton allowed three runs — all in the fourth inning — and six hits. He struck out four and walked one. Trevor Hoffman finished for his 10th save.

San Diego has won five of six while Montreal has lost four straight and 10 of 12.

Rangers slide by Indians, 3-2, in ninth inning

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Kevin Elster scored from first on Darryl Hamilton's double, sliding under catcher Sandy Alomar's tag in the ninth inning Monday night to give the Texas Rangers a 3-2 win over the Cleveland Indians.

In the ninth, Lou Frazier singled with one out off Jack McDowell (5-3) and stole second on a pitchout. Frazier got caught off second by shortstop Omar Vizquel on Elster's grounder for the second out.

Hamilton followed with a double down the right-field line that bounced into the corner. Right fielder Manny Ramirez chased it down and threw to second baseman Carlos Baerga, whose relay throw to the plate arrived as Elster slid beneath Alomar's tag.

Roger Pavlik (7-1) pitched a six-hitter for the Rangers, striking out five and walking none.

■ AL Roundup

Royals 5, Tigers 4, (13)

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Detroit Tigers stretched their losing streak to 12, the team's longest in seven seasons, wasting a two-run lead in the ninth inning and falling to Kansas City in 13 innings.

Detroit (12-39), which has lost 32 of 36, led 4-2 in the ninth but made three errors, including two on one play by third baseman Travis Fryman. Still, the Tigers lowered their major league-worst ERA from 7.13 to 6.99.

Blue Jays 5, White Sox 4

TORONTO — John Olerud hit a grand slam to help rookie Marty Janzen win his first major league start, and Toronto ended Chicago's eight-game winning streak.

Olerud hit his second career grand slam in the third inning to back Janzen (3-0), who gave up three runs and five hits in seven innings. Mike Timlin gave up an RBI single to pinch hitter Dave Martinez with two outs in the ninth, but struck out Frank Thomas with runners at the corners for his eighth save.

Red Sox 10, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jose Malave had four RBIs, including his first major league homer, and Troy O'Leary added a three-run homer as Boston continued its mastery of Oakland.

Malave, called up from the minors last Thursday, had a two-run homer, a two-run double and a single in five at-bats. Malave, who turns 25 this week, got his first major league hit on Sunday.

Career saves leader Lee Smith sent to Reds

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — Career saves leader Lee Smith is bound for Cincinnati's bullpen, but not as the Reds' closer.

Smith, who holds the major-league record with 471 saves, was traded Monday to the Reds — his seventh team — by the California Angels for left-hander Chuck McElroy.

Smith, 38, said earlier this season that he would ask to be traded or would retire if he wasn't the Angels' closer.

But he won't be Cincinnati's stopper, either.

"I'm not going to promise him that he's closing," Reds manager Ray Knight said. "I respect and trust Jeff Brantley too much. He's my closer. We'll go with Brantley when he's fresh and have Smith to complement him. There's no reason both of them can't get saves."

Knight expects Smith to be content with that role.

"If I communicate right up front from the very beginning what it is, he'll accept it," Knight said.

Brantley went into Monday's game against Florida with a 2.92 ERA and 11 saves in 13 chances.

Smith was en route to Miami, where he'll join the Reds on Tuesday, and was unavailable for comment. He had no saves with a 2.45 ERA in 11 innings this season with California.

Smith was placed on the 15-day disabled list in April after offseason surgery to repair a ruptured tendon in his right knee, injured when he slipped during a hunting trip.

In Smith's absence, Troy Percival was nearly flawless as the Angels' closer. The 26-year-old Percival had 13 saves and a 1.74 ERA in 19 games.

"I think when the whole thing happened, you had two guys down there who were forced into one role," Angels manager Marcel Lachemann said. "I don't think he forced the trade. I just think the situation dictated that something had to be done. I hope he goes to Cincinnati and does what they hope he'll do and help them win their division."

Smith makes $2.1 million and McElroy $817,000. The Angels agreed to pick up the difference in their salaries this season, the Reds said.

McElroy had a 2-0 record and a 6.57 ERA in 12 1-3 innings.

Seay, Thompson ace Green Tree

Staff Report

Ron Seay and Brock Thompson recorded holes-in-one over the Memorial Day weekend at Green Tree Country Club.

Seay's came on the No. 2 West on Monday, where he used a 5-iron to ace the 170-yard hole. It was witness by Wayne Potter, Frank Petro and Foy Cox.

Thompson got his ace on Sunday, using a pitching wedge on the 140-yard No. 6 West. Witness was Kathy Thompson.

DETROIT (AP) — The Russian unit kept the Detroit Red Wings alive Monday night.

With linemates Vyacheslav Kozlov, Igor Larionov, Sergei Fedorov each scoring and goaltender Chris Osgood making clutch saves, the Red Wings staved off elimination and defeated the Colorado Avalanche 5-2.

Doug Brown and Greg Johnson had the other two goals for Detroit while Mike Ricci scored twice for Colorado.

Colorado leads the Western Conference finals 3-2, with the best-of-7 series shifting to Denver on Wednesday night.

If the Red Wings win there, Game 7 is Friday night in Detroit. The last time the Red Wings won three straight was in mid-April when they captured their final four regular-season games for an NHL-record 62 victories.

The last time the Red Wings rallied from a 3-1 playoff deficit was 1992 in the first round against the then-Minnesota North Stars. Only 13 teams in NHL history have overcome a 3-1 deficit since the seven-game format was adopted in 1939. Eleven of those comebacks have occurred in the last nine years, two by Detroit.

The Red Wings haven't won the Stanley Cup since 1955, the longest drought in the NHL. Last year, they were swept in the Cup finals by the New Jersey Devils.

Ricci's two goals came on power plays, tying a franchise playoff record set by Michel Goulet against Montreal on April 21, 1985.

Colorado, which outshot Detroit 28-26, had won its last four road games, two in Chicago and two in Detroit, and was 6-2 on the road during the playoffs. But the Red Wings are 9-2 when scoring first in the playoffs.

This time they scored the first two goals in a 1:04 span of the first period.

Fedorov got things started with one of his crowd-pleasing dashes up the ice. He passed to Brown, who came around the backside and centered the puck. Kozlov, slipping in front of Joe Sakic, tomahawked the puck into the net with a backhander at 11:35 of the first.

Twenty-three seconds later, Osgood made perhaps the game's key play, making a big save on Peter Forsberg from close range. If the Avalanche had been able to tie it so quickly, it might have changed the complexion of the game.

Instead, the Red Wings still had the lead and quickly added to it.

Colorado goalie Patrick Roy moved out and to his left to stop a shot by Vladimir Konstantinov, but that left the net open and Larionov easily tucked in the rebound for a 2-0 lead at 12:39.

In the second, Osgood made a glove stop on Sakic's shot from the right circle, but Ricci punched in the rebound for a power-play goal at 2:10.

The Russian unit answered again for Detroit. Fedorov, standing in the left circle, redirected Paul Coffey's shot from just inside the blue line, and the puck sailed under Roy's glove and into the net at 4:18 for a 3-1 lead.

But Fedorov was late getting back on Colorado's next power play, allowing Ricci to skate in alone on Osgood to score off a 2-on-1 break with Sandis Ozolinsh, cutting the lead to 3-2 at 8:00.

Brown made it a two-goal lead again when he pushed his way inside Sylvain Lefebvre and redirected Coffey's shot from the left point over Roy's left shoulder and into the net.

The biggest roar at Joe Louis Arena was reserved for Vladimir Konstantinov's hip check that sent Claude Lemieux flying with 5:01 left in the second period. Lemieux was back with Colorado after serving a game suspension for his sucker punch of Kozlov in Game 3.

Builder's Choice

Builder's Choice simplifies building and remodeling

The exciting thing about building or remodeling is getting to watch your dreams take shape. Each board, each fixture installed gets you a little closer to enjoying just what you want.

The hard part is making all those trips to stores, choosing appliance colors and fixtures. It seems nobody has everything, and what they do have is in a box so you have to guess what it will really look like in your home.

Once you've decided, you have to arrange to have your choices delivered and hope they get there when the contractor is ready for them.

Builder's Choice has greatly simplified this procedure in their showroom. It's the one stop for lighting fixtures, kitchen and bath plumbing fixtures and kitchen appliances.

Want to match colors on everything including the kitchen sink? At Builder's Choice, kitchen and bath fixtures are displayed as they would look in a home...allowing you to see if that sink color really matches your refrigerator choice. "This way, there are no surprises," says manager Shelley Van Hoff.

They have an extensive selection of the top brands; Kohler, Price-Pfister, Moen, Delta and Grohe.

These are all quality fixtures; there are no plastic or non-metallic parts to corrode or break quickly. Many are brass and cast brass. Price-Pfister, Grohe and Kohler have even replaced the old washer and seat in their faucets with a new ceramic disc. This disc won't corrode in our hard water and it adds tremendously to the life of the faucet.

The most popular colors—currently whites, almonds and biscuits—are readily available at Builder's Choice. They can get other colors in time to meet just about any contractor's deadline.

All of Builder's Choice' selection, display and service comes at prices that are more than just competitive. "Our prices are as good or better than the mass retailers,"

Shelley Van Hoff
Manager
Builder's Choice

The store also works extensively with interior designers."A designer may narrow it down to two options and let the homeowner make the final choice. Here, it's easy to see what your choices will look like," Van Hoff points out.

While browsing the collection is encouraged, the staff is ready to answer any questions.

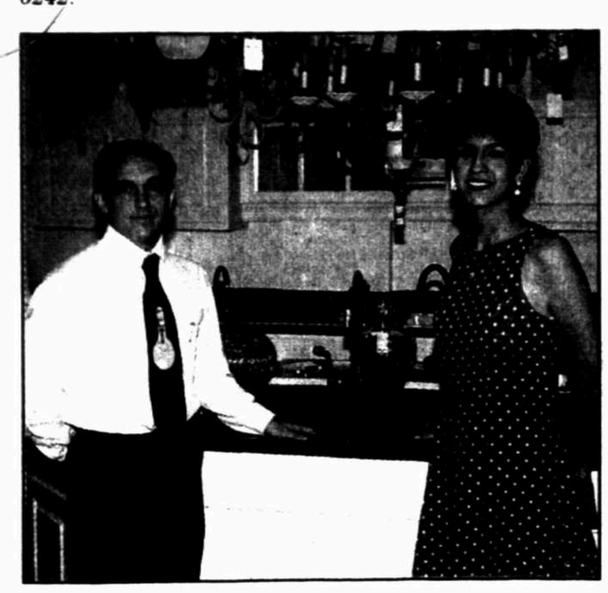

"Rock, JoAnn and I have been here a good while," says Van Hoff. "We all work hard at staying abreast of current trends, both in designer fashions and product advancements. We also keep our diplays updated with the newest products."

Once you've made those selections, Builder's Choice can coordinate with your contractor to deliver them when and where they're needed.

All this selection, display and service comes at prices that are more than just competitive. "Our prices are as good or better than the mass retailers," Van Hoff says.

Come by and see for yourself why so many people are choosing Builder's Choice—not just builders.

Builder's Choice displays a wide selection of plumbing and lighting fixtures, as well as appliances and ceiling fans. The store is located in the Cornerstone Shopping Center at Loop 250 and Midland Drive. They are open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday. The phone number is 520-0242.

Pennyrich: one step cure for swimsuit phobia

By Donna Fitme

It's that time of year again. Many of you are compiling a list of excuses for avoiding the pool.

1. I just love to dust and summer's the best time.
2. I want to get a head start on my taxes for next year.
3. I need to plan my Thanksgiving menu and get my Christmas cards addressed, you know how time flies. (You wish, then you could stop thinking up reasons for bypassing the pool.)

I understand. I've made lists like this myself. (You didn't think I stole these jewels from Cathy's comic strip memoirs, did you?)

The truth is, last year I couldn't wear my old swimsuit. Too small? Naaaa, no way, I'm the same size I was on my wedding day (or was that the first time I received a Mother's Day card?) Any way, that wasn't the issue. The fact was I had worn my trusty old swimsuit so long that it could be easily mistaken as a large piece of avocado green velcro. And, the elastic, well, I think it had some elastic somewhere, sometime.

Nonetheless, I could not bear the thought of shopping for a new swimsuit.

Now, admit it, you can't stand it either. While skirt lines go down and then up, swimsuits go up and down at the same time. Up at the bottom and down at the top. We're embarrassed to look at the racks, let alone paste one of the suits on and go out in public.

Last year, I finally faced my problem and went out to search for new swimsuit.

And, ladies, do I have good news for you! I actually found out that the Pennyrich Shop stocks swimsuits that will please your mother and your husband, all at the same time.

You don't believe it? Well, go see for yourself at The Pennyrich Shop in Old Town.

Jo Smith stocks a wide variety of swimsuits with stylish colors and nice designs. But, get this, the manufacturer has actually used more fabric than you find in a sweater for a chihuahua.

Jo Smith stocks Robby Len swimsuits at The Pennyrich Shop, 311 Dodson Street. The selection includes missy sizes 8-18 and women's sizes 18-26 in a wide variety of designs.

Ms. Smith offered several tips on selecting a swimsuit you won't want to cover up all the time. (Though she has some nice ones, cover ups make it hard to swim.)

1. Get the right size. It's not time to be an optimist. Those who squeeze into a suit this month may be shopping again next month. Do get a snug fit, so shoulder straps (yes, these suits actually have shoulder straps) will stay in place. The Pennyrich Shop has missy sizes 8-18 and women's 18-26.
2. Choose a style that makes you look your best. Power netting for tummy control and supporting cups are key items. Beyond that preferences vary, so Pennyrich stocks solids, florals and geometric prints. Several are available with skirts.
3. Make sure the suit is made to last. Then, if you decide shopping for a swimsuit isn't such a horrid task, you can add to your wardrobe not just replace it. "Robby Len is the only brand I stock simply because I don't have complaints about those suits. I don't want customers unhappy after they've worn a swimsuit three times," Ms. Smith said.
4. Maintain your swimsuit. Pool and spa chemicals are hard on fabrics. It's wise to invest in a suit that is "aquacized," that is, chlorine resistant. Rinse your suit after each wearing. Ms. Smith uses Jeunique Eco-Clean cleaner, a natural organic cleaner available at her shop.

So, ladies, it's time to face your problem. Leave those excuses behind and dive into a new swimsuit from The Pennyrich Shop, this year. Once you've discovered the figure-friendly selection at this incredible little shop you'll actually enjoy shopping for a swimsuit.

Pennyrich Bra and Lingerie Shop, located at 311 Dodson St., is open Monday-Friday, 10 a.m.- 6 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m.- 5 p.m. Special appointments can be made by calling 683-1045. Owner Jo Smith began selling Pennyrich Bras in 1974. Since then her shop has grown into an award-winning distributor for Pennyrich and Jeunique bras, along with bras for all types of formal wear, mastectomy products, lingerie and Rejeuvametics skin care products by Jeunique.

Pennyrich offers comfortable bras

Along with flattering swimsuits, the Pennyrich Shop continues to offer a wide variety of bras and prostheses for mastectomy patients.

"I carry more than 300 bra sizes, from a 26 Junior to a 46KK. The biggest mistakes women make are getting the wrong support design and the wrong chest size. These can lead to pain, because the breast weight isn't being adequately supported," said owner Jo Smith.

Pennyrich also offers help for women who have had mastectomies and need to be fitted for a prosthesis. Smith is very adept at putting customers at ease, and respecting their privacy for fittings. She can also assist qualifying clients in filing for Medicare benefits.

A special fitting appointment can be made by calling 683-1045.

Enjoy a quiet moment at Mrs. Olsen's Coffee & Bookstore

"This world is too much with us," wrote poet William Wordsworth, over 100 years ago. With the hustle and bustle of our times, it's really nice to be able to get away from the world to enjoy a few moments browsing for good books and enjoying a cup of special coffee, cappuccino, espresso or tea.

Mrs. Olsen's is really the kind of place where "Everybody knows your name." "We do get to know our customers," said new owner Kristen Gould. "If your favorite author has a new release, I'll try to let you know about it." The same goes for a favorite blend of coffee or tea.

It's easy to share the feeling with a friend. Mrs. Olsen's can put together gift baskets with anything in the store; books, coffees, teas, and gift items. In fact, you can set a price range and they'll take it from there. "We enjoy being creative," said Ms. Gould.

They ship anywhere, and gift wrapping is free on items purchased at the store.

Mrs. Olsen's Coffee and Bookstore is located back in the corner of Oak Ridge Square, Garfield and Wadley. Along with their selection of popular current titles, they have a wonderful variety of coffees and teas, flavored, decaf and regular. They are open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The phone number is 570-5282.

Blackmon Mooring uses patented process to clean ducts

There's hidden dirt in your house

After you've meticulously cleaned the West Texas dust from the carpet, the drapes, the bedspreads, vacuumed and dusted everything possible, there can still be a major source of dust and dirt in your home. In fact, a study by the Environmental Protection Agency revealed that indoor levels of air contaminants are often higher than those outdoors. Who is the culprit in circulating this hidden dirt?

It's your central air conditioning system. Dust, pet dander, pollen and mildew collect in the ducts, registers and cooling coils over time. These particles rob your system of efficiency and can contribute to allergy problems.

"Many people think their filter is trapping all the dirt," said Andy Jencks, Manager of the Midland office of Blackmon Mooring Steamatic. "In reality, how well your filter does depends on what kind it is and how often you change it."

"The basic fiberglass filter only traps about 20 percent of airborne dust and dirt, and then only the largest particles. The rest sails through to clog the blower, cooling coils, ducts and registers...and back out into the air," he continued.

This problem is multiplied if the filter doesn't fit right or is not changed regularly.

Blackmon Mooring Steamatic's patented source removal process can greatly improve indoor air quality by removing these contaminants from their hiding places. Trained professionals will remove and clean supply and return registers, diffusers, ducts and cooling coils.

Blackmon Mooring uses a portable machine to loosen and then collect the dirt from your system. This portable equipment is more convenient for the homeowner than truck-mounted machinery because there are no long hoses stretching through the house and no doors left open during the process.

To clean flex ducting, Blackmon Mooring uses a gentle compressed air system to loosen and collect the dirt.

For a badly clogged system, a thorough cleaning can improve airflow and efficiency by up to 70 percent—which can save money on operating costs as well as reduce allergies.

Most systems need cleaning every two to three years. Jencks listed three signs that your system may need cleaning:

1. There is dust around the supply registers (where the air comes out).
2. There seems to be little air coming out of the supply registers.
3. You haven't changed the filter since the Beatles broke up.

A good way to avoid problem three is to correlate cleaning or changing the filter with paying your electric bill. "There really is a connection," said Jencks. "The less often you change the filter, the higher your bill is likely to be."

To help you reduce future problems with airborne particles, Blackmon Mooring makes durable high efficiency electrostatic air filters. These filters are washable, come with a lifetime warranty, and are available to fit any size system.

Let a Blackmon Mooring Steamatic professional give you a free estimate on cleaner air today.

Blackmon Mooring Steamatic, founded in 1948, offers a wide variety of home services. They clean air ducts, carpets and furniture. They do restorations from fire and water damage, deodorization and many other services. Call them at 520-8121. There is no extra charge for after hours flood or fire restoration.

Blackmon Mooring Steamatic cleans dust and dirt from your ducts using patented equipment.

Steamatic's Neg-air machine is portable, meaning it is more efficient, and there are no hoses stretched through your house during the duct cleaning process.

Prices gain

Energy trading was light on the New York Mercantile Exchange amid a lack of news and position squaring before the long weekend, said Tim Evans, an analyst with Pegasus Econometric in New York City.

July crude gained 9 cents to $21.32 a barrel.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar surged to the highest level against the yen in more than a month Friday after a senior Japanese Finance Ministry official doused widespread expectations of higher interest rates in Japan.

But the dollar ended lower against the mark, which also derived strength from a sell-off in yen. The dollar was mixed against other currencies.

In New York, the dollar traded at 107.80 yen, up from 106.93 yen Thursday and the highest level against the Japanese currency since April 18. The dollar also traded at 1.5420 marks, down from 1.5425 marks Thursday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Thursday: 1.2665 Swiss francs, up from 1.2655; 5.2190 French francs, down from 5.2235; 1,558.92 Italian lire, down from 1,560.00; 1.3740 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3743.

The British pound traded at $1.5120, unchanged.

Stocks inch up

NEW YORK — Stocks tip-toed higher Friday, lifting some indexes further into record territory, as bond prices firmed and trading slowed to a crawl before the long holiday weekend.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose just 0.74 to 5,762.86, finishing the week with a gain of 75.36. The blue-chip barometer, which set new highs Monday and Wednesday, was up nearly 37 points at the start of Friday's trading before trailing lower.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a slim margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled a sleepy 329.14 million shares, down sharply from Thursday's 431.32 million.

The NYSE's composite index rose 1.31 to 383.74, barely topping Wednesday's record finish at 383.69. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 2.51 to 678.51, edging Wednesday's record high at 378.42. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.27 to 613.95.

The Nasdaq composite index, which on Thursday set a new high, fell 0.77 to 1,247.88 as investors secured some profits on some recent high-flyers.

Dow marks century of highs and lows

By Joyce M. Rosenberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average, the index that charts the victories and defeats of the nation's stock market, celebrates an achievement of its own Sunday by turning 100 years old.

The index of blue chip stocks was first published on May 26, 1896. There were 12 issues on the list that day, and they closed at 40.94. A century later, the index that now comprises 30 stocks celebrated its approaching birthday last week by making a run at 5,800.

The Dow is Everyman's key to the stock market.

"It's the only thing we've got that people all over can understand," said Yale Hirsch, a stock market analyst and publisher of the Stock Trader's Almanac.

"Talk to people all around the world and mention the Dow is up 50 points. They know what you're talking about."

The Dow was first compiled by Charles H. Dow, who with Edward Jones founded the financial publisher Dow Jones & Co. in 1882. At first the companies on the list were "smokestack" companies.

As the years passed, and the country gradually shifted from manufacturing to more of a service economy, companies like the retailers Sears and Woolworth and financial firms like J.P. Morgan and American Express made the list.

From time to time, some analysts point out that the Dow reflects just 30 of the 16,000 publicly traded U.S. companies, and that there are many days when the blue chips and the broader market move in opposite directions.

Many pros pay more attention to broader measures like Standard & Poor's 500-stock index.

But the Dow still gets all the notice; it's often the only index reported on TV news shows. When it's on the verge of a new milestone, or tumbling 100 points, financial journalists as well as market watchers think it's a big deal.

Hardly anyone knows how many points the S&P lost in the Oct. 19, 1987 crash, but they're more likely to remember that the Dow lost more than 500 points that day (For the record, the S&P lost 57.86 points.)

"It's more understandable. You can see 30 stocks; 500 is confusing," said Steven Adler, president of the ASM Fund, a mutual fund whose performance is linked to the Dow, Moreover, "when you look at the two indexes, they perform alike. Why confuse yourself with 500 when 30 do the trick?" he said.

The market watchers themselves use the Dow as a marker, whether they're making predictions (Adler is talking about the Dow reaching 7,500 by the end of 1997), or relating war stories.

Yale Hirsch recalled 1974, the middle of a bear market. "It was the worst market since the '30s," he said. He studied the performance of stocks over the years, and found that in many bear markets, when the market hit bottom, "it took no time for it to come back to the point where it fell off the cliff."

So, in December 1974, when the Dow was just below 600, "I predicted a 33 percent move in the Dow in four months. I said we'd have a Dow at 800 by April, but lo and behold, I'm into March, and there's April, the market's scooting up, and April 4-6, we hit 800. It was fabulous!"

As the Dow and the stock market have grown, so have the Dow's moves. In 1956, when the Dow had its first close above 500, 15 points in one day was a big advance, representing 2.8 percent of the Dow's value.

But with a Dow at 5,700, a 2.8 percent move means about 160 points.

The Dow originally was calculated by totaling the prices of all the component stocks, then dividing by the number of stocks. Over the years, this number has shrunk to reflect stock splits, spinoffs, new Dow components and other reasons. Now it stands at 0.34599543, which in effect makes it a multiplier.

The Dow first reached 1,000 on Nov. 14, 1972. Its first close above 2,000 was Jan. 8, 1987; 3,000 was April 17, 1991; 4,000 was Feb. 23, 1995, and 5,000 last Nov. 21.

Most of the names on Charles Dow's list are unfamiliar to anyone who isn't a student of American corporate history. The first 12 were:

American Cotton Oil, American Sugar, American Tobacco, Chicago Gas, Distilling & Cattle Feeding, General Electric, Laclede Gas, National Lead, North American, Tennessee Coal & Iron, U.S. Leather and U.S. Rubber.

The current Dow stocks, which are chosen by editors of The Wall Street Journal, a Dow Jones publication, are:

AT&T, AlliedSignal, Alcoa, American Express, Bethlehem Steel, Boeing, Caterpillar, Chevron, Coca-Cola, Disney, DuPont, Kodak, Exxon, General Electric (the only one of the original 12 to be on the list today), General Motors, Goodyear Tire & Rubber, International Business Machines, International Paper, McDonald's, Merck, Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, J.P. Morgan, Philip Morris, Procter & Gamble, Sears, Texaco, Union Carbide, United Technologies, Westinghouse and Woolworth.

Poka Lambro wins area PCS licenses

Staff Reports

Poka Lambro Telephone Cooperative Inc. has won licenses at a Federal Communications Commission auction to provide Personal Communication Services to nine markets in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

PCS has been described as the next generation of cellular, mobile telephone services that can additionally compete with local phone service. Poka Lambro paid $4.4 million for the 18-county Lubbock Basic Trading Area license and expects to deploy the service in mid-1997.

In addition to the Lubbock license, Poka Lambro bought licenses in the Texas markets of Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Abilene and San Angelo. Also, the company seized licenses in Hobbs, Clovis and Roswell - including Ruidoso - New Mexico.

The auction began December 18, 1995 and ended Monday after 183 rounds of bidding. It was similar to a previous auction conducted by the FCC last year where Poka Lambro purchased licenses for Spokane, Washington and Billings, Montana as well as a second permit for Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands. The cooperative sold the Spokane-Billings license for a profit earlier this year and is under contract to sell the Guam license.

Dallas firm plans mobile phone with Internet access

DALLAS (AP) — You may soon be able to simultaneously cruise the Information Superhighway and the concrete highway.

Two companies are working on a cell phone with a tiny screen that would let mobile users access e-mail and faxes and visit World Wide Web sites on the Internet.

Northern Telecom Ltd., which has its principal U.S. operations in Richardson, will join with Sun Microsystems Inc. of Mountain View, Calif., to incorporate Internet access software and chip technologies into future cellular, residential and business telephones.

The companies expect to have prototypes available later this year and products on the market by mid-1997.

The Northern Telecom-Sun device would use Sun's Java programming language, which enables software designers to write small application programs known as "applets" that can safely move from computer to computer over the Internet.

Greyhound to roll out wraparound ads

By Katie Fairbank
Associated Press

'We have over 2,000 buses, so this represents a major revenue opportunity for us.'
— Stuart Robinson, vice president of marketing, Greyhound Lines

DALLAS — Rolling daily down the back roads of America, Greyhound has encouraged people to ride. Now, the company wants them to read.

The national bus line plans to wrap advertisements on the exterior of its buses for $4,000 per month per bus. Greyhound, which has seen its earnings falter recently, hopes the ad revenue will lift its bottom line.

"We have over 2,000 buses, so this represents a major revenue opportunity for us," said Stuart Robinson, vice president of marketing for Greyhound Lines.

The program is expected to be officially announced toward the end of June, but prototype buses were rolled out Thursday at the company's annual meeting to show the concept to stockholders.

The prototypes advertise Greyhound with one bus showing a basket full of greyhound puppies and an offer of half-price fares for children. A second bus pictures the company's racing greyhound logo outstretched across a rural highway landscape.

The buses are fully wrapped by the advertising, including a one-way film over passengers' windows. The vinyl design lasts as long as two years, according to John Gannon, an account representative with 3M Commercial Graphics, which adheres the design to the bus.

Inside the bus, the windows still allow visibility but look as if they are coated by a fine screen that cuts glare.

The bus wrap advertising was accepted last year on school buses to raise extra revenue in New York City and it is seen already on many transit buses. Greyhound's marketing niche will be the first on a national scale.

"The major difference is that transit is restricted to a specific city. Our buses go over 130,000 miles a year," said Robinson. "That gives advertising exposure over a rural population."

The company has signed one seven-bus account with Readers Digest and has six pending, Robinson said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Tax-protected retirement plans best shelter for money

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: I am a 36-year-old single homeowner. I contribute $100 every other week into a 457 retirement plan offered by my employer, a local government agency. A co-worker and I have been studying dividend-reinvestment plans with the thought of becoming investors.

Right now, I have $50 a month available to invest. Am I better off increasing my 457 contribution, which gives me a tax-shelter benefit, or investing in a DRP? Or using a discount broker on a monthly basis to purchase shares of a company?

In short, do the tax benefits of the 457 plan outweigh anything a DRP or direct purchase of shares could offer?

A: In general, investors should put as much money as possible into a tax-protected retirement plan before looking elsewhere for investments. Tax deferral is one of the foundations of succesful investing.

Currently, the maximum that employees can contribute annually to 457 plans -- which are sponsored by state and local governments and some nonprofit organizations -- is $7,500. There is a move afoot in Congress to raise that cap.

You say you have a total of $5,200 annually to invest. So you probably should put it all into the 457. However, you might consider investing elsewhere if you expect to need money soon, perhaps to buy a house, start a business or pay tuition bills.

That is because you cannot borrow from a 457 account, and rules for withdrawing money due to hardship are quite stringent -- although there is no penalty for withdrawing cash if you leave your job before you turn 59 1/2.

Many DRPs offer investors a chance to buy stock directly from the company with a small initial investment -- sometimes you can purchase just one share to get started -- and then to reinvest dividends to buy more shares. And there now are almost 1,000 company-sponsored DRPs that accept cash contributions to buy additional shares.

Q: Is it possible to invest in a DRP as part of a self-directed individual retirement account? I have been told that this is impossible.

A: About 15 individual companies offer IRAs in their DRPs.

In general, it is the larger companies with direct-investment plans that permit you to open a self-directed IRA, buying their stocks directly, without using a stockbroker. Some of the companies assess annual IRA fees, however.

Q: We are trying to get a few dollars more for our retirement income and were advised to try a mutual fund managed by a major securities and insurance company. We would invest about $14,000 and receive monthly dividends.

Is there anyplace we can get unbiased information about this fund?

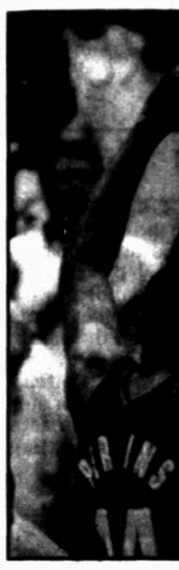

A: The mutual fund's prospectus, which is a disclosure document, is just the thing you are looking for. Every mutual fund is required by law to update its prospectus at least once a year.

Study the prospectus before deciding whether to invest.

Consider investing in a true no-load mutual fund -- one that has no sales charge, no redemption fee and no 12b-1 fee constantly eating away at share value.

Seattle's Sam Perkins (14) and Shawn Kemp celebrate the Sonics' win over the Utah Jazz after Utah's John Stockton missed a three-point shot at the buzzer, giving the Sonics a 3-1 advantage going into Game 5.

Jazz face elimination on home floor

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Are the Jazz jinxed?

In its third Western Conference finals in five years, Utah once more faces elimination after losing a critical playoff game at home.

Seattle's 88-86 victory here Sunday to take a 3-1 lead in the series continued a Jazz skid in second home playoff games. Utah now stands 10-13 in such matchups, including consecutive setbacks to Houston in last year's first round and 1994's conference finals.

"There's always been something," coach Jerry Sloan admitted Monday. "You've got to have everything perfect to win (in the playoffs). It just takes one little thing to throw you off."

In Sunday's Game 4, it was John Stockton's 3-pointer, which hit the front of the rim as the horn sounded. After coming so close to knotting the series, now Utah must try to become only the sixth team in NBA history to rebound from a 3-1 deficit in the best-of-7 series.

The odds, beginning Tuesday in Seattle, are long, but not impossible, the Jazz insist. After all, Houston pulled it off against Phoenix last year and went on to win the league crown.

"We'll see who's coming to play in Seattle," Sloan said. "We're not eliminated. We do have our backs to the wall, but I'm anxious to see how we play."

His players were still struggling with the disappointing morning after following a brief practice at Westminster College.

"We're not in a great mood because we lost a game we probably should have won," said Karl Malone, who led the Jazz with 25 points Sunday. "But it's not over with.

"You overcome it (a 3-1 deficit) by thinking of just one — one game, right now. We've shown a lot of pride and character. We're going to play our guts out."

Bryon Russell, whose 24 points off the bench led Utah to a 96-76 victory in Game 3, hoped for another big night in Key Arena. But he acknowledged the sting of Sunday's loss was hard to shake.

"I'd rather have been blown out. Now, we can sit here and think about what went wrong and what could have been," Russell said. "We have to win it. We just have to come out and play hard, physical."

Jeff Hornacek, who had 19 points Sunday, said the difference in the series thus far has been Seattle's willingness to gamble — and Utah's failure to punish the Sonics for doing so.

"To their credit, defensively they have taken us out of our plays at the end of the games," he said. "They've taken some risks with traps that paid off for them."

Hornacek says the Jazz may have to take such chances, too, if they want to stave off summer vacation.

"If we can get Game 5 and come back home, we have the advantage. And if there's a Game 7 (in Seattle), there would be pressure on them after losing two."

For Antoine Carr, all the talk of momentum and strategy wears thin. He sees the Jazz task in simpler terms. "There's nothing else to do but get it on," he said. "If you're nervous or scared now, you don't belong here."

LOCAL SPORTS

Zebras zap another title

LUBBOCK — Midland's Zappin' Zebras 10-under girls won the Texas Invitational Cup here over the weekend, giving them their fourth soccer tournament title of the spring season.

The Zebras outscored opponents 30-0 on the way to the title. The tournament shutout came against teams from all over the West and North Texas region. Laura Hambrick was in goal and Shaderla Evans was at sweeper, but the whole team allowed very few shots on goal.

The Zebras defeated the Lubbock Intimidators 4-0 in the championship final. To get there, the Midland team ripped off wins against the Wichita Falls Ponytails, 3-0; the Lubbock Magic, 9-0; the Amarillo Blockers, 7-0; the Ponytails again, 3-0 and the Amarillo Roadrunners, 4-0, in the semifinals.

The Zebras utilized a balanced scoring attack as 10 of the 12 girls on the team scored.

FRENCH: Courier, Pierce, Hingis advance

playing my first match coming back on it, it's in some way a new beginning.

"Maybe somebody was looking at me from above," she said. "Hopefully she (Lenglen) was watching me play today. It would mean a lot to me."

Among other winners Monday were men's No. 6 Yevgeny Kafelnikov, No. 7 Jim Courier, No. 10 Wayne Ferreira and No. 12 Alberto Costa. Among the women advancing were No. 5 Iva Majoli, No. 6 Anke Huber, No. 12 Mary Pierce, No. 14 Amanda Coetzer and No. 15 Martina Hingis.

The only seed eliminated was men's No. 16 MaliVai Washington, who was forced to retire with a thigh injury while trailing 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 3-0 against Franco Squillari.

French favorite Henri Leconte, playing his 15th and final French Open, lost 6-1, 6-1, 6-4, to Thomas Johansson. As the center court crowd gave him a long standing ovation, Leconte sobbed into his towel. He then climbed the umpire's chair to grab the microphone and say farewell.

"I will remember this day all my life," Leconte said.

Sampras had a surprisingly easy time against Gustafsson, a former top 10 player now ranked No. 34. Despite the cool, wet conditions that slowed the court down and made the balls heavier, Sampras dominated with his big serve, hitting 18 service winners to go with his bundle of aces.

Sampras showed no signs of the back spasms which affected him last week in Dusseldorf. The only medical treatment he needed was for a bloody nose during the third set.

"I haven't played a lot of clay court tennis this year," Sampras said. "To come out and win in straight sets, I'm pretty pleased. It's a good start for me."

Sampras said he was still trying to come to terms with the loss of his coach Tim Gullikson, who died May 3 from brain cancer.

"It's been really difficult," he said. "I'd rather not comment too much on it. I'll probably start tearing up. It's tough to talk about."

Sampras next meets Bruguera, the 1993 and 1994 champion who is unseeded this year after a series of injuries. Sampras said it's the toughest Grand Slam draw he has ever faced.

But Sampras, who lost in the first round last year, said he hasn't written off his chances of winning his first French Open — the only Grand Slam title to elude him.

"I don't feel like an underdog," he said. "I feel like I'm the one expected to win — not the favorite to win the tournament, but really someone that could be very dangerous."

Agassi found a dangerous opponent in Diaz, a 19-year-old former French Open junior champion playing his first match on the regular tour. Diaz is ranked No. 261 and has won only $1,255 in his career, compared to nearly $12 million for Agassi.

The shaven-headed Agassi drew a warning from chair umpire Wayne McEwan for audible obscenity while losing the second set tiebraker.

FEUD: Two sides still split over requirements ish and a clean start.

The same could not be said for the U.S. 500. The big-name CART drivers, who had predicted disaster at Indy because of the 17 rookies in the field of 33 drivers, could not get past the start without a 12-car wreck that stopped the race.

But Sunday was more of a sideshow than a decisive battle in the war between CART and George's Indy Racing League.

"I think the expectations of Armageddon are somewhat overstated," Andrew Craig, CART's president, said last Friday. "I think this is going to be a far longer process. In the long term, this will be about determining championships."

And after Lazier's pain wears off, his major hurdle will also be the IRL's biggest challenge: How to keep from fading out of the consciousness of the fans and sponsors.

The next time Lazier and his IRL compatriots compete again will be Aug. 18 in Loudon, N.H. That means the IRL essentially disappears for two and a half months, while the drivers and teams that ran in the U.S. 500 head for Milwaukee this weekend for their next race. By the time the next IRL race takes place, CART will have run seven races, all of them on network television.

'I think expectations of Armageddon are somewhat overstated.'

— Andrew Craig, CART president

So, for major corporate sponsors who don't want their product's names to evaporate in the summer heat, CART suddenly looks a lot better after Memorial Day than it might have before.

The task facing George and the IRL is to expand the schedule, widening the league's exposure on the calendar and in major urban markets. It is the only way to attract the corporate sponsorship that will sustain the teams and race promoters who must ultimately survive without the infusion of millions of dollars of George's money that helps sustain them now.

"We will likely announce races a year ahead of their scheduled timing," George said Sunday after the Indy 500. "We expect to fill some holes in June and July. You should look for some announcements coming very soon."

For some of the more underfinanced IRL teams, the announcement cannot come soon enough. They will be forced to buy new cars and new engines next year, at $260,000 a car and $75,000 an engine.

And even though Cary Agajanian, a top IRL official, promised "interesting financial packages" for any team that couldn't afford the new equipment, corporations eventually have to be persuaded to step up.

Anyone making plans for next Memorial Day weekend should also consider the following: That new equipment, mandated by IRL rules that take effect next year, effectively eliminates any reconciliation between CART and the Speedway for the 1997 Indy 500, unless CART agrees to live by the speedway's rules — a concession that appears unlikely.

"I think there is room for two series," Hemelgarn said Monday morning. "I really don't see it ever coming back like it was before."

SWC: Two chances left for league to shine straight runs, the final three on a full-count homer by Jeff Inglin.

(From 1C)

"What makes this so disappointing is I feel we let our fans down," Red Raiders coach Larry Hays said.

TCU's Fisher and Weir-Smith could've joined a list of dramatic champions as the unseeded pair reached the men's doubles finals against top-ranked Justin Gimelstob and Srdjan Muskatirovic of UCLA.

The Horned Frogs won the first set in a tiebreaker (7-3), then dropped the next two 6-4. The third set was tied at 4 with both teams holding serve when the Bruins finally broke serve. One of their points in that pivotal game came when Weir-Smith was assessed a double-fault because his hat blew off. UCLA went on to win the final set 6-4.

"Right now, it's really hard to be excited about being in the finals, especially when you're up a set and a break in the second," Weir-Smith said. "We were happy to be in the finals, being unseeded, but it's very disappointing to lose."

Moros and Taylor had reached the women's finals by dropping the first set and winning the final two of their previous three tournament matches.

It briefly looked as if they may do it again as Moros and Taylor fell 6-1 in the first set then led 3-1 in the second.

But the nation's top-ranked tandem of Florida's Stephanie Nickitas and Dawn Buth corrected themselves and took the next five games for the sweep.

"We just never got in a rut, so everything was kind of on the positive side," said Nickitas, who used to team with Moros to form the world's top-ranked junior doubles combination.

And now there are only two events left.

SWC champion Texas Tech will not be going to the NCAA men's golf championship, Wednesday through Saturday at the Honors Course in Chattanooga, Tenn. The Red Raiders were eliminated during the regional tournament.

Four other SWC teams did qualify for the trip to Chattanooga, though — NCAA regional champ Texas A&M, along with Texas, SMU and TCU.

The track meet, in Eugene, Ore., will wind up being THE final event featuring an SWC member as it begins Wednesday and lasts through Saturday.

BULLS: Jordan scores 45 to lead Chicago struggled in the first half and helped them overtake Orlando in the third quarter.

(From 1C)

Now his Bulls are 11-1 in the playoffs and back in the finals for the fourth time in six years. And they have beaten the Magic seven straight times.

"I thought coming into today we did a more-than-respectable job on Michael," Orlando coach Brian Hill said. "He got his guys involved throughout the series, which was critical for him to do, to not approach this series as he was going to win it by himself.

"But when he had to — and today I thought he had to because we shut down everybody else — he went out and got it done. That's the greatness of Michael Jordan."

Hill expects that greatness to carry the Bulls to the title.

"Very honestly, I don't think Michael's going to be denied," he said. "This is all about a testament to his will and his excellence ... and their excellence as a team."

The Magic became the first team since the Chicago Stags (1948-50) to be swept from the playoffs three straight years. Orlando lost 3-0 to Indiana in the first round in 1994 and 4-0 to Houston in last year's NBA Finals.

But despite injuries that sidelined starters Nick Anderson and Horace Grant as well as top reserve Brian Shaw, the Magic played Game 4 with a desire that many felt they lacked.

"I thought we answered any questions anybody had about the heart and will of our team," Hill said.

Still, Penny Hardaway called the sweep "really sickening."

"We are a better team than what we displayed," he said. "Even though we had injuries, it's still hard to take that and live with it."

Led by Hardaway and Shaquille O'Neal, who finished with 28 points apiece, the Magic opened with a 15-4 burst and were still up 73-65 with 3 1/2 minutes left in the third quarter.

But the Bulls then went on a 15-3 run, with Dennis Rodman scoring five points and Jordan and Pippen getting four each, to take the lead for good.

Chicago led 80-76 when Jordan went to the bench for a rest with 9:55 to go and increased that to 88-81 when he came back about three minutes later thanks to Toni Kukoc's 3-pointer, Ron Harper's three-point play and Luc Longley's 15-footer.

"Looking at Michael's eyes, I'm sure we could have rode him all the way," Pippen said. "But it's good that other guys started to step up."

Upon returning, Jordan immediately made an impact, hitting a 20-footer and a 3-pointer for a 95-85 lead, and the Magic never threatened.

Brooks Thompson, Orlando's first guard off the bench in place of Shaw (neck spasms), scored 17 points. Anthony Bowie started for Anderson (sprained wrist) and had eight points.

Once again, however, nobody could help the Magic at power forward. Grant, who excelled against Chicago in the playoffs last year, missed the last three games with a hyperextended elbow.

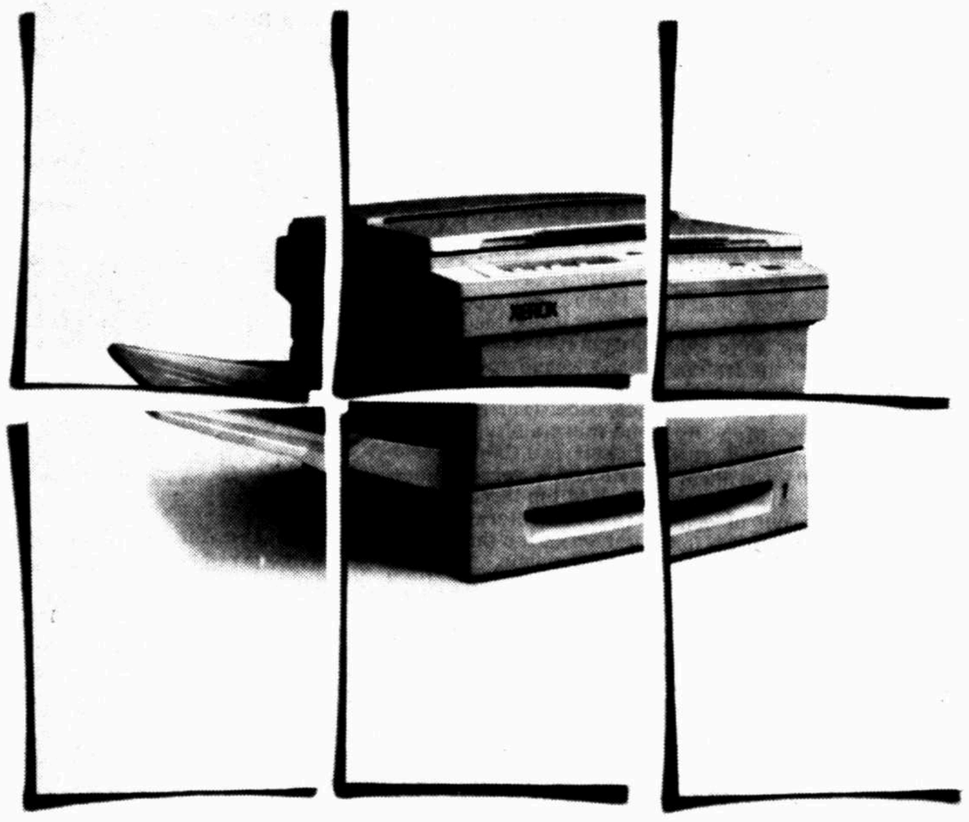

Without Grant to contest him, Rodman dominated the boards. He had 14 rebounds Monday, giving him a 15.8 average in the series, as the Bulls won the rebound battle all four games.

"To a man, we would have liked to have beaten the Orlando Magic with their best players on the floor," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "It doesn't ring as true as it would have. We beat the Orlando Magic, but it wasn't the Orlando Magic."

O'Neal was 6-of-9 from the line but still finished at 36 percent for the series and 39 percent in the postseason as Orlando set a record for lowest free throw percentage (.543) in a playoff series. Houston, which shot .567 against Utah in 1985, had held the mark.

Notes: Despite another sweep, Hill should return, Magic vice president John Gabriel said. "Brian has done a great job. This team had a tremendous season and a great playoff run until this series. He's going to be back next year." The future of O'Neal and Grant, both seeking huge free-agent contracts, is less certain. ... If the Western Conference finals go six games, the NBA Finals wouldn't start until Sunday. And if Utah forces Seattle to a seventh game, the championship series wouldn't begin until June 5.

What do you expect for $99?

Take another look. It's Xerox.

You wouldn't expect to lease a terrific little copier for just $99 a month, would you? But you can. In fact you can get a reliable Xerox copier complete with the Xerox Total Satisfaction Guarantee. You'll also get three years of warranty service included. Now doesn't that sound like great expectations.

USA softball team makes whirlwind tour through Texas

By Stacy Feducia
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — They stumble off a bus, road-weary and worn out from day after day of practice, play, practice, play, practice, play.

One day blurs into another. Ballpark after ballpark. Town after town. Autograph after autograph stretching like their cursive signatures into the wee hours of the morning.

Life of a minor-league baseball player?

Not hardly. Try the 1996 Coca-Cola USA Softball Tour. The country's gold-medal hope for the Summer Olympic Games is barnstorming in a city near you.

"We've had one day off in the last month and a half," pitcher Michele Smith said. "That's a grueling schedule for anyone like a businessman or salesman, but it's even more so for us since we're playing games, too."

The 20-member national team was put together in April and shortly thereafter took off on a whirlwind tour of 21 cities starting in Sacramento, Calif., on April 26-27 and winding up in Atlanta on July 4.

At the end of their 10-day Oklahoma and Texas tour, the team stopped in Fort Worth for doubleheaders Saturday and Sunday at Gateway Park against local junior college and all-star select teams.

"We've definitely gotten a lot closer the last 10 days," infielder Leah O'Brien said. "After five days on a bus, everything starts to run together. We've got the little inside jokes now. We've even started making up silly songs: 'We are the All-American team. We never get to sleep.'"

Rest is definitely in short supply.

The team practices during the week in Columbus, Ga., before heading to games at tour stops on the weekends. The players have stayed on the road through two stops in Oklahoma and five in Texas because the softball College World Series is taking place at their ballpark in Georgia.

A typical day consists of promotional appearances at sponsor IGA supermarket locations to sign autographs, followed by an afternoon doubleheader, followed by another autograph session.

While the promotion appearances have been spotty with fans, all but one of the games has sold out, said Mike Cosentino, account executive for Lang and Associates, the marketing company that is handling the tour for Coca-Cola.

At Saturday's doubleheader against the Texas Power 18-and-under all-stars and the Ranger College varsity team, an estimated 6,000 fans showed up.

This morning at 11, the team will conduct a free skills clinic for youth softball players at Gateway Park.

"The thing that keeps you going is stepping out on that field every night," infielder Sheila Connell said. "The hardest thing we do is the thing we enjoy the most: signing autographs after the games. We may be out at the ballpark until midnight or 1 in the morning, but it's worth it to see those kids."

After beating nine of their past 10 opponents on the 10-run rule, the U.S. softball national team beat Texas Power, 3-0, Saturday on a 19-strikeout no-hitter by former UCLA star Lisa Fernandez.

Fernandez had a perfect game going until the top of the sixth, when she hit Texas Power's Vanessa McConnell with a pitch.

In the second game, former Pasadena Dobie star Christa Williams struck out 15 in no-hitting Ranger College, 12-0.

Alabama draws No. 1 seeding

■ College World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Alabama, the regular-season and tournament champion in the top-rated conference in the country, received the top seed Monday in the 1996 College World Series.

Alabama (49-17) will represent the Southeastern Conference in its third CWS appearance and open the 50th Division I national tournament Friday against eighth-seeded Oklahoma State (45-19), an 18-time CWS qualifier, at 3:05 p.m. CDT.

Clemson (49-15), making its eighth appearance, is seeded fourth and will meet No. 5 Miami (47-13), a two-time champion and 15-time CWS visitor, at 7:05 p.m. Friday.

In the lower bracket, No. 2 Florida (48-16) is making its third CWS trip and will meet No. 7 Florida State (51-15), a 15-time CWS entrant, at 12:10 p.m. Saturday.

No. 3 Wichita State (54-9), a seven-time qualifier and 1989 champion, meets No. 6 LSU (48-15), eight-time CWS qualifier and two-time champ, at 6:35 p.m. in a rematch of their 1993 tournament championship. LSU won that title 8-0.

The committee had to consider what to do with three teams from the SEC — LSU, Florida and Alabama — and three teams from the same state — Florida, Florida State and Miami.

Ron Maestri, chairman of the NCAA Baseball Committee, said the committee tried to avoid conference matchups or repeats of regular-season meetings.

"There's not a whole lot you can do," he said. "You try not to match up people. I think we've got one game where we have two teams who played each other this year. It was very, very difficult. This is as evenly matched a situation I think we've had in a long time."

Florida and Florida State are the only two first-round foes to have played each other in the regular season. The Gators claimed two wins in a three-game series in late February and early March.

Maestri said regular-season, conference tournament and regional play was taken into consideration when the committee selected the seeds in a conference call.

"This is probably one of the strongest fields the College World Series has ever had," he said.

He noted seven of the committee's eight top regional seeds are in the tournament. Only Oklahoma State, a No. 3 regional seed, was not its regional favorite.

Rocca holds off Faldo to win Volvo

Associated Press

VIRGINIA WATER, England — Costantino Rocca of Italy fought off one of Nick Faldo's famous final-round charges with a 69 Monday and won the $1.5 Volvo PGA by two strokes.

Faldo, who overwhelmed Greg Norman on the final round at Augusta to sweep to his third Masters title, made up three strokes on Rocca by the 15th.

But, Faldo was unable to get birdies at 17 and 18, both par 5s. Rocca, maintaining his poise and making no mistakes, birdied the 17th and headed for the final hole one stroke in front.

He pitched his third shot on the 18th to within 12 feet. Then, he curled in a birdie putt to finish the tournament at 274, 14-under par, for his first victory in three years.

Faldo finished with a 68 to tie for second place with Scotland's Paul Lawrie, who had a 70.

Rocca, who had not won a tournament since the 1993 French Open, was the only player to break 70 in every round. His scores were 69-67-69-69.

"In a newspaper in Italy Nick Faldo gave an interview and said that he would be happy if I won a major," Rocca said. "The thought came in my mind when we were tied."

"I had all the pressure inside because I had not won for three years. It's a long time, so to win here is very special," the Italian said in an emotional news conference.

Zimbabwe's Mark McNulty started the final round tied with Rocca at 11 under and three ahead of Faldo. But three bogeys in a row from 13 pushed him out of contention and he finished with a 73 for a share of fourth place.

Arizona wins NCAA softball title

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Arizona, behind Jenny Dalton's three-run homer in the first inning, won its fourth NCAA softball championship Monday with a 6-4 victory over Washington.

Carrie Dolan (35-6) picked up the victory for the Wildcats (58-9), giving up 11 hits and striking out four. Heather Meyer (25-4) took the loss for Washington.

Dalton's first-inning homer scored Alison Johnsen and Andrea Doty. Arizona built its lead to 5-0 in the second when Johnsen doubled in Doty and Brandy Shriver.

The Wildcats' final run came in the top of the fourth when Lety Pineda singled in Johnsen.

Washington (59-9) scored all four of its runs in the bottom of the fourth. Michelle Church and Mindy Williams had RBI singles, Jeanine Giordano scored on an error and pinch-hitter Leah Francis singled in Williams.

Dalton set a series record by scoring seven runs in the series, and Johnsen tied the series record for stolen bases with four.

Washington had 47 hits in four games, breaking a record held by UCLA with 43 hits in five games in 1992.

Schroeder wins Trans-Am

LAKEVILLE, Conn. — Dorsey Schroeder, the pole-sitter, won the SCCA Trans-Am Championship at Lime Rock Park and became the first two-time winner on the Trans-Am circuit this year.

Schroeder drove a Ford Mustang Cobra and swapped the lead for a good part of the race with Canadian Ron Fellows in a Chevrolet Camaro.

Fellows dropped out of contention when his car suffered a broken rear-differential and eventually wound up 18th.

With Fellows out of the way, Schroeder cruised to a 15.186-second margin of victory over Greg Pickett, in a Camaro.

Pickett's second-place finish, his 43rd top-three effort, put the Trans-Am veteran in a tie for all-time series top-three finishes with Mark Donohue.

Lukas gets win on track

NEW YORK — D. Wayne Lukas said he would make Honour and Glory a miler, and Honour and Glory made Lukas look like a prophet.

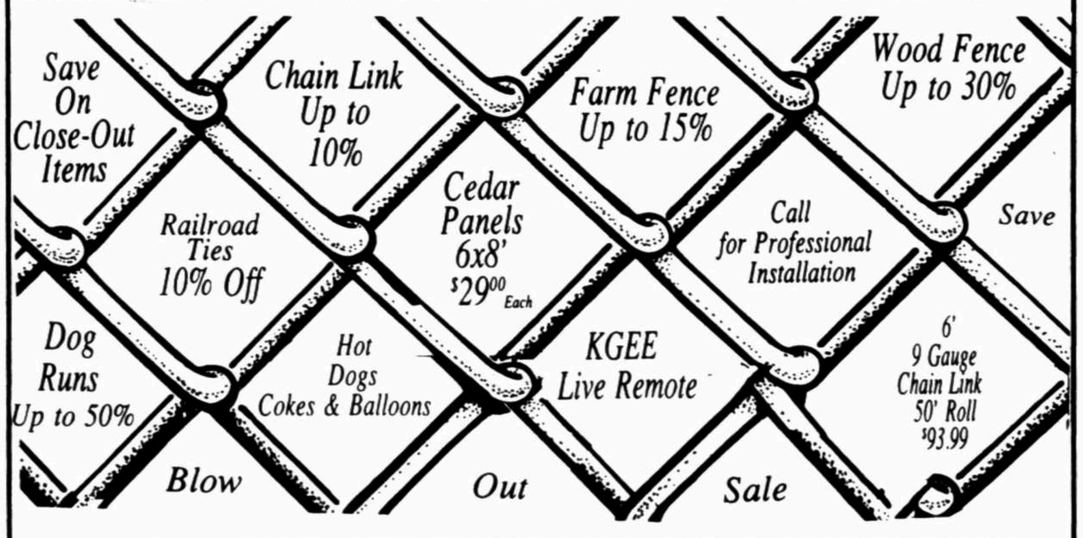

Honour and Glory, ridden by John Velazquez and trained by Lukas, won the Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont Park on Monday, breaking the stakes record and nearly the track record for a mile as well.

"It was a great kick to win this race," owner Michael Tabor said, and it took quite a kick to win it.

Honour and Glory's time was 1:32 4-5, one-fifth of a second better than the stakes record by Conquistador Cielo in 1982. After breaking down the time to hundredths of a second, the finish was only two-hundredths of a second off the track mark of 1:32.79 by Williamstown in 1993.

Buddy Lazier signs an autograph for 4-year-old fan Chris Evrard during an interview session after Lazier won his first Indianapolis 500.

Lazier's Indy feat a medical marvel

By Mike Harris
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Buddy Lazier is not only the newest Indianapolis 500 winner, he's a medical marvel.

Nine weeks ago, Lazier lay in a hospital bed unable to feel his feet and hands. Three weeks ago, when the 28-year-old arrived at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway for the start of practice, he was walking with the aid of a cane, and in constant pain.

After racing 500 miles Sunday, dealing with the 'G' forces of cornering speeds above 230 mph and winning the biggest race in the world and more than $1 million. Lazier was almost able to ignore the pain. Almost.

"It was really, really hard getting out of bed this morning," he said after climbing gingerly up the two stairs to the interview table at the speedway.

"I'm under strict instructions that when I can break away to go back to Colorado to my special hospital bed at home that I'm to spend a week completely off my feet," Lazier said. "Then we'll have a crucial decision to make. I may have to have an operation to relieve some crushed discs that are pressing on some nerves. I don't completely understand it, but they tell me it's not a big deal."

Lazier has multiple fractures of his lower back and pelvis from a crash in March at Phoenix International Raceway. Luckily for him, the new Indy Racing League doesn't have another race until Aug. 18 at Loudon, N.H.

The IRL, started by speedway president Tony George, is locked in a bitter feud with Championship Auto Racing Teams, which ran its own race Sunday at Brooklyn, Mich. Most of the stars of the Indy-car world were at Michigan, but Lazier insists that took none of the joy from his first Indy-car victory.

"Every race you enter, you're just racing against the guys who are there, trying to beat them," he said. "This one is special. This is the Indianapolis 500. Those guys who were out there yesterday were great drivers."

It was the first time in 54 starts in an Indy-car that Lazier has finished better than seventh. Still, he says this victory was no shock to him.

"I've had my own personal successes before," he said. "Running year-old cars and not always the best equipment, whether you finish fifth or 15th, it's a good feeling if you get the best out of what you have. This was certainly the best car I've ever had."

Before arriving at the speedway for the start of practice, the hobbling Lazier wasn't even sure he could get into a race car.

"I was a little fearful to come out and run the car on the edge, which is what you have to do," Lazier said. "The anticipation of that first lap (at speed) was terrible. I just kept thinking about it and it kept speeding up in my mind. But, after the first quick lap on the first day on the track, there was nowhere near the amount of terror I thought I was going to feel and I knew we had a chance to win the race."

He drove his purple Reynard-Ford nearly to perfection Sunday, charging from third to first late in the race, with some of the fastest laps run on the 2 1/2-mile oval all day, including one over 234 mph.

"About halfway through the race, exhaustion started to set in and my body started to go to sleep," Lazier said. "That was when some nerve issues started to kick in. I kept talking to the guys in the pits and they just kept telling me to stay focused and keep working.

"We were just running on the ragged edge the last 16 laps. I was scaring myself every lap. I came ridiculously close (to the walls) a couple of times. But I had to give it everything I had because I knew I could win."

There's no hint of an end to U.S. 500

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — The way the Indy-car people are talking, Jimmy Vasser won't become the answer to this trivia question: Who was the only man to win the U.S. 500?

There's no hint of halting their march into a bold — some might call it destructive — new world, a world that includes two 500-mile races on Memorial Day weekend.

Hey, the Cleveland Browns moved to Baltimore, didn't they? Boston Garden and Chicago Stadium were demolished, weren't they? Was there any reason to expect that an event as replete with tradition as the Indianapolis 500 would be immune to the changing times?

Apparently not.

"We are committed to run this event in the future," said Andrew Craig, president of Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART), not showing any sign of making Sunday's inaugural U.S. 500 the only U.S. 500. "This event will not go away. We will continue to run this event well into the future."

With Indianapolis Motor Speedway president Tony George showing no inclination to back down, either, this could be the start of a new Memorial Day tradition.

Two races. One-thousand miles.

Two winners. Or no winners — except, perhaps, the NASCAR drivers who figure to get a boost in their popularity from the Indy-car rift.

"There were an awful lot of fans that came to support our cause," said Vasser, who drove his backup car to victory after a 12-car wreck on the pace lap. "We were forced to have this race. It was a huge success and I'm sure it will be in the future, as well."

CART officials announced the crowd at 110,879, boasted that they sold out of souvenirs and said the response from the fans was largely favorable. Some sign-carrying spectators registered their protests against George for reserving 25 of the 33 spots in the Indy 500 for regulars of his fledgling series, the Indy Racing League. Others simply longed for a simpler time, when all the best racers gathered in Indianapolis for the month of May.

"We sat around the campfire and talked about old Indys," said Don Ley, who drove 650 miles from Minneapolis.

CART tried mightily to get people talking about a new tradition. They commissioned an impressive new trophy, a recreation of the Vanderbilt Cup, and offered up $1 million to the winner. They draped red-white-and-blue banners throughout the Michigan track to give it that Memorial Day feeling. And when Vasser came across the finish line, nearly 11 seconds ahead of Mauricio Gugelmin, the starter waved both the traditional black-and-white checkered flag and the American flag.

"We don't decide it was a better race (than Indy)," Craig said. "The fans will decide that. But from what I saw here today, the fans loved it. I had many come up and thank me."

Of course, they were cheering at Indianapolis, too. But both sides surely must know there's hardly ever been an instance in sports when two feuding entities were better than one united organization.

"We are not adverse to running again in the Indianapolis 500, but it doesn't seem like that will happen," Craig said. "The U.S. 500 was not an easy event to stage. We announced it on Dec. 18 and in a very short order of time, we put on an event of world stature."

Go for a ride you'll never forget!

Information For Homeowners

Warnings About Financing

Before talking with home improvement contractors, you should know that in Texas, a home owner cannot legally use a home improvement loan to pay off other financial obligation or receive a cash "kickback" from a contractor.

Do not be tempted by a smooth-talking salesman: if you are, you may lose your home.

For your protection, when signing the required notarized truth in lending statement, be sure the date you sign your name and the date on the contract coincide. You will have three days from that date to cancel the contract if you have second thoughts about the deal.

Finally, do not sign a completion certificate until the contracted work has been completed and you are satisfied thoroughly.

Taking time and care when selecting a home improvement contractor is important. Not only are many home improvement projects expensive, they also affect the value of what is perhaps your most significant investment.

The road to finding the contractor who is right for you can begin in a number of different places. Friends, neighbors, relatives or business associates are all good sources who can recommend contractors for you to consider. Their personal experience with a home improvement contractors can offer valuable insight that you cannot get anywhere else.

You can also call the Better Business Bureau for a list of contractors in a number of different industries.

10 Sensible Suggestions

Here is a list of steps to follow as you talk with various contractors and compare their bids.

1. Find out if the contractors you are considering have a business address and telephone number. Check a current telephone directory to see if the contractors are listed. This will tell you if a contractor has been in business for about one year or more
2. If you get several different bids, make sure they are based on the same specifications.
3. Be certain that the quality, brand, grade weight, color, and size of materials to used are stated in the contract.
4. Always get receipts for any money paid. If full payment is made in cash, be sure to obtain written verification of payment from the contractor with a list of the labor and material charges covered by the payment.
5. Check to see if the guarantee or warranty is disclosed. If not, get it writing. Take time to read the guarantee or warranty, and ask yourself if the following questions: Is the entire job under warranty or only certain materials? Is labor included? Who will honor the guarantee, the dealer or the manufacturer? Remember, a guarantee is only as good as the firm standing behind it.
6. Does the company provide liability and workman's compensation insurance to protect you in the event of an accident on the job? Insist on seeing a statement of coverage from the contractor's insurance agent.
7. Be sure the contract provides for a completion date and contains all topics discussed and promises made.
8. Ask the contractor for the name of the bank where he or she has a business account. Also, ask for a list of customer references. Contact the bank, and ask the references what their experiences were with the contractor.
9. If you are about to spend a great deal of money to improve your home, have an attorney review any contract or agreement before paying any money or signing you name.
10. remember to get copies of anything you sign, including the contract and completion certificate.

Midland Reporter-Telegram CashBack Game Rules

No purchase is required to play or win a prize in the Midland Reporter-Telegram CashBack Game. There are 456 winners, $5,550 in prizes including a $1,000 grand prize. Any U.S. resident, 18 years of age or older can enter except employees of The Hearst Newspapers and CashBack Card Inc., their promotion agencies and members of employees' immediate families.

How to play. If your CashBack Card number matches the number in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified pages, you win a $10 CashBack Card rebate check. Use it to buy anything you wish at any participating CashBack Card merchant. If you don't have a CashBack Card, you can get one by subscribing for 13 weeks or more to the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Call 688-2700 to subscribe.

If you have misplaced your CashBack Card, call 688-2700. We will send a replacement card without cost.

But you don't need a CashBack Card to enter the CashBack Card Second Chance Sweepstakes and by entering you could win one of the unclaimed daily prizes for the CashBack Card Game grand prize, a $1,000 CashBack Card rebate check. Use them to buy anything you wish at any participating CashBack Card merchant.

Here is how to enter the CashBack Card Game Second Chance Sweepstakes: Hand print your complete name and address and a daytime phone number on the CashBack Card Game Second Chance Sweepstakes entry form or on a 3" x 5" plain piece of paper and mail to: CashBack Card, Second Chance Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702-1650, so that the entry arrives before the deadline, June 16, 1996. Enter as often as you wish but mail only one entry per envelope.

How to claim a prize: Each day, March 18-June 16, 1996, five different randomly-selected CashBack Card numbers will appear in Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads. If the number on your CashBack Card matches the one in the newspaper, you win that prize provided you claim the prize within one week of publication. Claim your prize Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.- 4 p.m. at the Midland Reporter-Telegram office, 201 East Illinois, Midland, or call 688-2700.

Winners may be required to sign and return an affidavit of Eligibility/ Release of Liability/ Prize Acceptance. The acceptance of a prize constitutes permission to use the winner's name or likeness or both for the purpose of advertising, promotion and trade without further compensation to the winner.

All prizes will be awarded. Except for the grand prize, winners can collect only one prize. No responsibility is accepted for any lost, delayed, illegible, incomplete, mutilated, postage due or misdirected entries. Entries become the property of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. None will be returned. Federal, state, and local taxes, if any, are the responsibility of prize winners. Decisions of the judges in all matters pertaining to the CashBack Game are final and binding on all participants and the sponsors reserve the right to modify the rules at any time. Odds of winning depend on the number of entries received. Void where prohibited. ©1996 Midland Reporter-Telegram. All rights reserved.
