$5,000,000 COTTON FUND PLANNED

O'Rourke Denies Receipt Of Pardon Money

SPECTATORS AT EXECUTION NOT DRUNK, HE SAYS

SECRETARY OF COMMISSION APPEARS VOLUNTARILY AND TESTIFIES

(By the Associated Press)
AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 27.—Surprising the house investigation committee by walking in and announcing that he was Frank O'Rourke, secretary of the state prison commission, about whom so much testimony has been given, O'Rourke, voluntarily testified Wednesday. He denied receiving money for the procuring or for the purpose of procuring pardons for convicts, but he said he did help prisoners at their request get into connection with attorneys. O'Rourke was warned that his statements were voluntary and that they might be used against him.

Says Spectators Not Drunk
As to the execution of S. A. and Forrest Robertson, Dallas negroes, O'Rourke countered the testimony of Commissioner Walter S. Hayes, chairman of the prison commission, Warden N. L. Speer and Chaplain A. R. Watson by saying that the spectators were not drunk but were excited over the executions.

He denied that he told James E. Lee of the Ramsey prison farm to see if the boys could get together some money, that ex-governor of Governor J. A. Ferguson was going to visit the system soon with a man on pardon matters.

Sat Down On Whiskey
"The only whiskey I knew anything about when the Robertson brothers were executed was when some Dallas people drove up to the prison and I sat down in a seat and broke a bottle of liquor lying there and got it all over my pants," O'Rourke said.

"An execution is not like a prayer meeting," O'Rourke said. "There is considerable excitement. At the Robertson execution the forty or fifty men there, most of them officers, all wanted to ask questions of the condemned men and I asked them to be quiet."

COURT DISSOLVES BRIDGE EDICT

AUSTIN, Oct. 27.—An injunction against the Texas highway commission to prevent construction of a bridge across the Red river at Burk Burnett, Texas, was dissolved here today by the third court of civil appeals.

The court held that the special act of the Texas legislature authorizing the Wichita county of the state of Texas and the governor to enter into an agreement with the state of Oklahoma, to build the bridge was valid.

The suit was brought by Stanley J. Vaughn and others, owners of a toll bridge across the Red river near the site of the proposed interstate structure.

The state's share of the bridge cost is $144,000. The remainder of the $400,000, the contract price, is to be paid by Wichita county, the federal government and the state of Oklahoma.

Unless the case is appealed to the supreme court, the Austin Bridge company of Dallas will proceed with construction.

Court Order Allows Entrance To Estate

DALLAS, Oct. 27.—An order compelling N. B. Blackstone and W. L. Slaughter to permit R. L. Gibson and others to enter the Hines ranch in Brown county was issued here today by Federal Judge Edward R. Meek.

The plaintiffs alleged that they were owners of the property through the will of R. L. Suggs and that the defendants had established an armed guard around the ranch to keep them off.

Judge Meek set November 2 to appear in court and show cause why the order would not be made permanent.

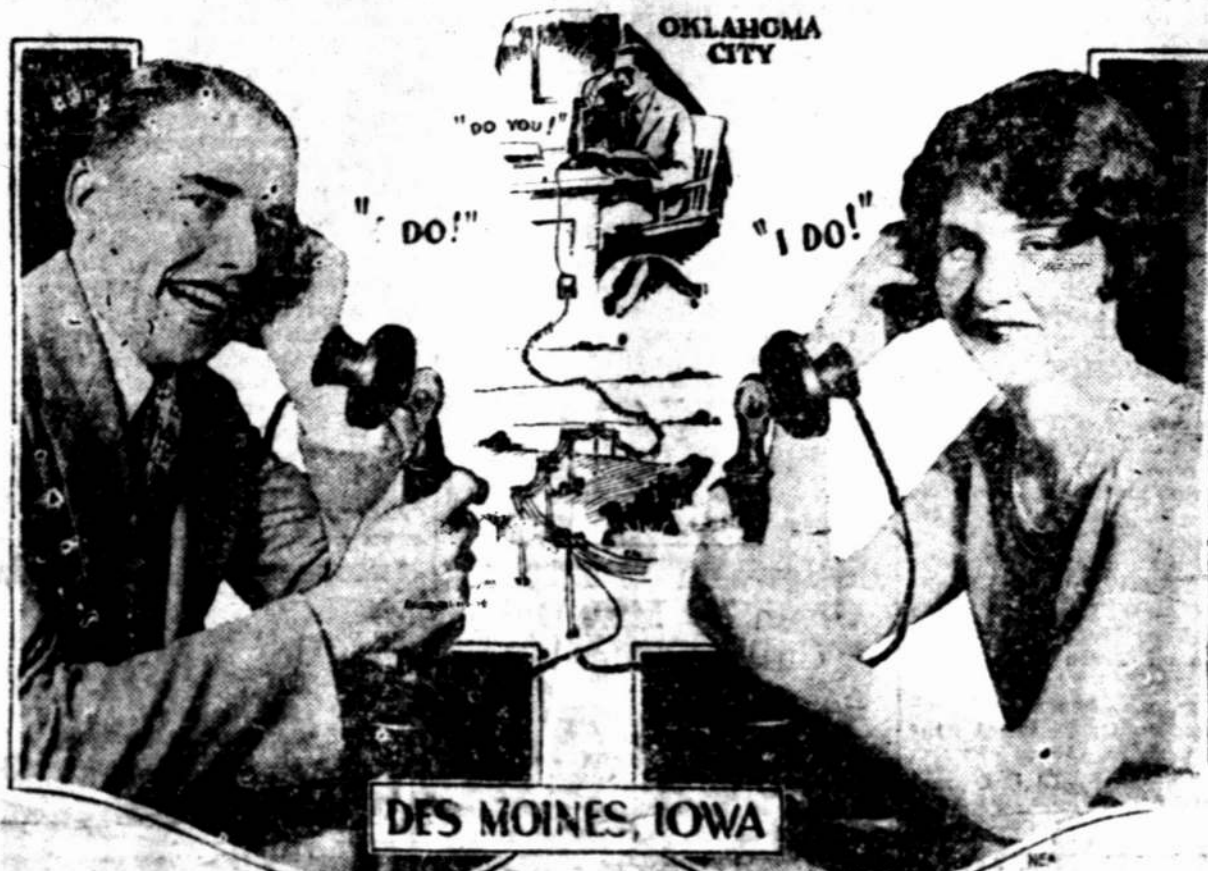

Swift Pays Tribute To Newspaper Men

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—Tribute to newspapers was paid today by C. P. Swift, of Chicago, in his report as chairman of the public relations committee to the convention of the institute of American meat packers.

"The average reporter of today is capable, conscientious and careful," Mr. Swift said. "Men of any other type soon find their way out of journalism, for its demands are exacting and its standards high."

Liquor, Disorderly Houses And Grand Jury Quiz Hold Forth Here Wednesday

Here's One Way to Get Married

Marriage by long-distance telephone, with the toll charges merrily rising while the "Do you's" and "I dos" were exchanged, was the method chosen by Harvey Webster, 19, and Miss Petter, 18, of Des Moines, Ia. They decided the minister, Rev. Paul Clark, relative of the bride, might as well stay right in his study in Oklahoma City.

ROTARY HEARS DISTRICT HEAD

W. C. Edwards Addresses Club On Meaning And Purpose Of International Body

Stressing the 1926 program of Rotary International for a better understanding between nations as a step toward universal peace, Will C. Edwards, Denton editor and governor of the Forty-first district of Rotary clubs, was the principal speaker at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Lubbock branch of his organization, Mr. Edwards, who is one of 50 Rotary governors of districts located in 35 nations, is in Lubbock on official club business, aiding the members of Rotary here in attaining a higher standard.

He pointed out the meaning of service and described Rotary as a service organization. He also quoted Harry Rodgers, of San Antonio, president of Rotary International, as saying that Rotary is the greatest force in the world today toward the establishing of perpetual peace.

Praises Lubbock Club
After discussing local problems with Rotary leaders here and attending a directors' banquet held in his honor last night, Governor Edwards, following his investigation of club conditions here, praised the Lubbock club. "I am not given to applause," he said, "but to flattery, but the Lubbock club is undoubtedly one of the best in the district." He added that the town is as good as the club and believe me, that is a compliment for Lubbock.

He cautioned members here, however, to keep the club's purpose in mind.

Three States Okey Mexico Amendment

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 27.—Without waiting for the federal senate's decision on the proposed constitutional amendment, under which a former president would be allowed to serve another term, the chamber of deputies in the states of Coahuila, Colima and Tlaxcala have ratified the amendment after hasty debate. The legislatures of Sinaloa and Durango have announced their purpose to adopt it.

The federal chamber of deputies has passed the measure and it is now in the hands of the senate. If the upper chamber acts favorably upon it, it will be necessary for a majority of the state legislatures to adopt the amendment to make it legal.

The purpose of the proposed amendment is to permit former President Obregon to seek re-election in 1928.

Real Longhorn Of Texas Type Wanted

DALLAS, Oct. 27.—Wanted, a genuine long horn steer of the Texas variety. The Dallas park board would like to obtain such an animal for the city zoo. The long horn is said to be rapidly becoming extinct.

Flashes Of Life

By Associated Press.

Some Inducement
TEKAMAH, Neb.—There seems to be opportunity for greater prosperity for California. Fellow who has just spent fifty days in jail, of which 14 were on bread and water, gained three pounds. Much of the diet was raisin bread.

Diet Of Iodine
PHILADELPHIA.—Ultra-violet rays used on cows plus a diet of iodine as contained in sea weed are improving milk, and if children drank more of it, also cod liver oil and fruit juices, they would not have rickets. So speakers have informed the international association of dairy and milk inspectors.

Lucky Orphans
NEW YORK.—There's rivalry to feed the poor kids of Gotham with nice red apples. Yakima, Wash., sent a car load for orphans here and the same to eight other communities in the country, prepaid. Not to be outdone, Leray, N. Y., is following suit.

Full Speed Ahead

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y.—Uncle Sam has a new seaplane that has whizzed more than 250 miles an hour, faster than any seaplane ever went before. The exact amount by which the plane in a trial flight surpassed the official record of 245.7 is undiscussed. Lieut. Frank H. Conant flew the 700 horse power craft with a 20 foot wing spread twice over a 1/2 mile course.

Total Abstainers

NEW YORK.—Cunard and White Star crews can't even buy a smoke aboard while their ships are in New York, to say nothing of a drink. Lady Howard, wife of the British ambassador, saw some drinking when a ship was headed up the bay, and precautions were taken, though the bibulous ones bought their liquor at sea.

WOMEN DIE IN SUICIDE PACT

Mother And Daughter Leap From Eleventh Story To Death At New York Hotel

(By the Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Bertha Washburn, 52, and her 32-year-old daughter Dorothy, are dead today as a result of leaping from the eleventh story of the Marlborough hotel for women.

The two women registered under assumed names a half hour before carrying out their suicide pact. They were identified through a doctor's card on which was written "brother knows all about the money."

There was a crash of glass as the mother's body struck a canopy over the hotel entrance. A moment later Miss Washburn, in a nurse's uniform, fell from the balcony of the eleventh story, and landed on a balcony outside her window.

Miss Washburn, seized the girl, but was unable to overcome her struggles. "Let me loose, you fool! Let me loose! I want to go with mother!" Miss Washburn shouted. She then fought herself free and dropped the remaining distance to the entrance canopy beside her mother.

Dr. Don A. Bass, whose card was found in the mother's coat pocket, identified the women. The police said Miss Washburn had been treated recently at the Central Islip state hospital for the insane. The mother was also said to have been suffering from a nervous disorder.

Wild Game Bill Is Vetoed By Governor

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 27.—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson today vetoed senate bill number 394, amending the law governing the zones of the wild game and wild bird shooting as passed by the 39th legislature. It was vetoed because four counties were left out of the zoning formed by the act of the recent special session, and the governor declared that it would be unfair to adjoining counties. The amendment would have affected Cameron, Hidalgo, Starr, Zapata, Jim Hogg, Brooks, Wilbrey, Kibbey, Jim Wells, Duval, Live Oak, Nueces, San Patricio, Aransas, Calhoun, Victoria, Jackson, Wharton, Matagorda, Brazoria, Fort Bend, Harris, Galveston, Chambers, Liberty, Hardin, Jefferson, Orange, Jasper, Newton, Kennedy, Bee, Goliad and Refugio.

Two Men And Woman Held For Investigation On Charges

Moonshine liquor, disorderly houses and drunken car drivers figured in corporation court today, and when they had settled with the city they were, without exception, greeted with requests to appear before the Lubbock county grand jury. Four prisoners spent the night in the city jail, while one city prisoner was taken to the county "house" in order that there wouldn't be too much talking between prisoners.

Liquor has been flowing freely in Lubbock for ten days despite the fact the grand jury is in session and officers are working overtime to rid the city of prostitutes, gamblers, bootleggers and other undesirables who have been running wild for many weeks.

Quiet Until Midnight

The city was quiet until almost midnight when business began picking up. Officers have been watching a house on Avenue J for some time, and when they saw a man enter the building late last night they had reason to believe that he was going on an evil mission. When he entered the building his hands were empty, but when he left a few moments later he carried a bundle. The night officers got busy, arrested the man and the bundle—a well wrapped shoe box containing a fruit jar half filled with "yellow moonshine."

Ordinarily they would have postponed their raid until later, but this was an emergency and a case that could not be overlooked. The man was lodged in the county jail and Mayor Parrish was notified. "We think we have located a supply of liquor," the officers told him.

Confer With Sheriff

The mayor instructed the men to take the matter up with Sheriff Johnston or Deputy Fox and fifteen minutes later Mr. Fox and fifteen minutes in company with the city officers they went to the room of Justice Johnson who issued a search warrant.

The officers approached the house, but found the door locked, but while walking around the building Mr. Fox noticed a half raised window and one

Wolfarth Ginner Loses Finger In Saw

Ben Pointer, ginner at Wolfarth, was painfully injured Tuesday when his hand was caught in the tin saws. Mr. Pointer succeeded in freeing himself from the death-dealing machine, but lost a finger before this was done. He was brought to Lubbock for surgical treatment, and is rapidly recovering.

Liquor Cache Found By Mowing Machine

PORT ARTHUR, Oct. 27.—A moving machine is the latest liquor detector. City employees mowing weeds on a vacant lot in the heart of an exclusive residential district here Wednesday came up on a 10 gallon still concealed in the high grass.

The still was in operation. A quantity of mash, whiskey, copper coils, and other equipment were found. While the grass mowers were notifying police, the still disappeared.

Sold Out!

Sold out! All reservations in the four pullman cars, chartered by the Avalanche-Journal in order to guarantee a special train to Fort Worth for the Matador-T. C. U. football game, have been sold out and many others wishing to make pullman reservations can take potluck by applying to the Santa Fe passenger depot and paying regular pullman rates. However, the special railroad fare of $12.41 round trip, will apply to those riding either chair cars or the additional pullman which will be operated by the Santa Fe on an overflow basis.

The Morning Avalanche and Daily Journal stepped into the breach when a special train was proposed and posted a guarantee of $2,000 to the railroad company, assuring the operation of four pullmans and two chair cars. The train will probably be made up of six pullmans and three chair cars and a baggage car.

WILL HOLD BACK 1,250,000 BALES TO AID FARMERS

MEYER WHO ATTENDS THE TEXAS BANKERS MEET SUGGESTS PLAN

(By the Associated Press)
DALLAS, Oct. 27.—A $5,000,000 corporation to hold 1,250,000 bales of cotton off the market for 18 months or long enough to restore normal conditions was the plan adopted here today by a committee of the Texas Bankers' association for the purpose of saving the cotton situation in this state.

Also Reduce Acreage

This is the machinery through which the association expects to carry out its decision of yesterday to withhold at least 1,000,000 bales, and reduce acreage 25 per cent.

The committee voted in favor of the corporation plan at the suggestion of Eugene Meyer, special representative of President Coolidge, who is traveling through the south in an effort to improve the cotton situation. He arrived here today accompanied by A. C. Williams, head of the federal farm loan commission.

Texas Holds Key

Mr. Meyer said that while banks in Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama have agreed on $1,000,000 corporations of a similar nature, the real key to cotton relief is with Texas.

Under the plan all such cotton corporations are to receive 10 times the value of their capitalization in credit from the federal intermediate credit banks.

COURT REVERSES M'NEAL VERDICT

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 27.—Holding the trial judge had erred in refusing a change of venue, the court of criminal appeals today reversed and remanded the 25 year sentence imposed in Jefferson county on George W. McNeal for criminal assault.

On the first trial, McNeal was sentenced to death, but this was reversed. On the second trial McNeal was sentenced to 25 years.

The court pointed out that about forty witnesses had testified that McNeal on the second trial could not get a fair and impartial trial in Jefferson county. The fact that during the second trial the court room crowd applauded when the district attorney in effect complimented the father of the prosecutor for not taking the law into his own hands was cited by the court as an indication of the prejudice against McNeal.

The court affirmed the five year sentence of E. C. Wheat from Shelby county for murder in connection with the killing of Oliver G. McNeill, June 3, 1922.

Prison Guards Given Notice Of Dismissal

HOLSTON, Texas, Oct. 27.—Wee Collins, H. M. Barber, J. H. Wilkes and S. T. Harrell, guards at Blue Ridge prison farm yesterday were given notice of their dismissal as the result of the escape of 26 prisoners from Camp No. 2 Sunday night.

The men were on duty at the time of the break, according to Captain Henderson in charge of the Blue Ridge unit, who notified them of their discharge Tuesday.

Eight of the escaped convicts have been recaptured.

HOW TO WIN A HUSBAND

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

I don't know a man who doesn't like jam. I believe matrimonial bureaus would do a land-office business in husbands if they put among the credentials of their feminine clients, "She can make good old-fashioned roseberry jam, and for cherry preserves she can't be beat." The "Billy boys" would be elbowing each other out of line at her door.

Have you ever entertained a bachelor who dines at his club or hotel, and who knows no "sneads" save mint gelatinized jelly with his lamb, a paper thin slice of venison apple sauce with his duck, guava with his patties, and with his turkey cranberries the color and consistency of dried blood?

If he asks if there is such a thing as jam to be had, the assistant waiter goes to the waiter, the waiter goes to the captain, the captain goes to the steward, and the steward goes to the management. In three quarters of an hour he is presented with an individual glass the size of a spoon with a rich label that tells him it is orange marmalade. He dips in a tentative spoon and tastes it.

"Just as I suspected," he remarks to the flower holder. "Up till today it has puzzled me to know what they did with the stuff they used to make overdoes out of."

Have you ever noticed your bachelor guest adroitly turn the conversation to jam? He will invariably. He may be Machiavellian enough to make you think you have had an inspiration to offer it to him. But the fact remains: you send to the cellar for his favorite kind and thereafter you carry on the conversation yourself. He is delightedly, subtly and enjoyably occupied.

I am trying to be subtle. I wonder if I am? Well, here it is, girls, if you are in search of a husband, it matters not whether your nose is retreating or your forehead high, your Charleston a bit stiff or your avoirdupois plus, learn to make jam and have him to you.

Mrs. Dyke Cullum complimented her guests, Mesdames Don Webb, of Station, and Conrad Needham, of Mineral Wells, with a Halloween party Tuesday afternoon at her home. The guests were "treat at the door" by a "scarecrow" which presented them with tails. The house was decorated throughout with the Halloween motif and the table appointments carried out the same idea. After five games of bridge, Mrs. Clifton Lindsey had made high score and Mrs. Russell Robertson low score. Each of the honorees was presented with a favor by the hostess. Date pie, nuts, mints and coffee were served.

Guests included the honorees and Mesdames J. P. Giles, H. E. Miller, Maple Wilson, Byron Brown, Walter Tyler, Tom Foster, Louis Moore, W. S. Moss, H. L. Allen, Hub Jones, C. C. Lindsey, Carl Patton, L. P. Day, T. E. Buckner, Guy Croft, of Mineral Wells, L. P. Smith, Vernon Brown, Frank Jones, Russell Robertson, Joe Webb, Allen T. Stewart, R. B. Hutchinson, Fred Caylor and Kenneth Kimbro.

SON OF ACCUSED WOMAN HUNTED IN AIMEE'S CASE

DEFENSE ATTORNEY WANTS PRESENCE OF BOY IN COURT HEARING

(By the Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 27.—Robert Wiseman, 19 year old son of Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Schick, confessed imposter in the Aimee Semple McPherson conspiracy case, was the object of a state-wide search today as the preliminary hearing for the Angelus Temple evangelist, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Wiseman was resumed in municipal court. The Wiseman boy has been subpoenaed as a defense witness. His mother denied knowledge of his whereabouts when she was called to the witness stand yesterday. She admitted having sent her son away to prevent him from being dragged into the present hearing. She last heard from him two weeks ago when, she said, he was "300 miles north of here."

Demands Boy's Presence

Defense Attorney W. I. Gilbert demanded the boy's presence in court yesterday when he called upon Attorney S. S. Hahn, Mrs. Wiseman's counsel, to produce him. Hahn's refusal resulted in Mrs. Wiseman being questioned about her son's movements. A subpoena was issued for young Wiseman when Gilbert announced that his testimony would prove material to the defense.

Verbal clashes between opposing counsel during which charges and counter charges were hurled back and forth, enlivened yesterday's court session and at times obscured the trend of the testimony.

The wrangling began when Attorney Hahn charged that detectives hired by Mrs. McPherson were molesting and intimidating his client, Mrs. Wiseman, a co-defendant and the evangelist's accuser.

Says Baying Witnesses Deputy Prosecutor E. J. Dennison stirred up another hornet's nest when he flung the charge that the defense was purchasing witnesses.

Gilbert shouted a denial and accused Dennison of playing to the press. The prosecution retorted by charging

Montreal Welcomes Queen Of Roumania

MONTREAL, Oct. 27. (P.)—Montreal welcomed Queen Marie of Roumania today with an ovation and program of entertainment that kept her busy throughout the day after her arrival here shortly before ten o'clock from Toronto.

Marie and Princess Ileana began their visit here with a call at the city hall where Mayor Martin presented the city's greetings.

Prince Nicholas remained with the party only for the reception by city officials at the station, being whisked away then on a mission of his own design.

Two Dead, Eight Hurt In Shooting In Chicago Theater

CHICAGO, Oct. 27. (P.)—Two persons are dead and eight injured as a result of a shooting that ended when Albert Schmidt, theater owner, turned a revolver on himself with fatal effects.

The second to lose his life was not the target of Schmidt's fire. Detective Sergeant Walter Riley was killed when an automobile collided with a detective squad car speeding to the theater.

Patrons of the house last night were unaware of the shooting until Samuel A. Wertheimer staggered from the basement. Wertheimer, wounded twice, said Schmidt, to whom he recently sold the West Side movie house, asked him to come to the theater. Schmidt turned him into the cellar, he said, and after making incoherent statements about disappointment in the concern began firing.

The seven persons in the automobile colliding with the detective car were injured, but none seriously.

This Season's Coats Have Nothing New In Line, But Manipulation Of Fur And Material Gives Distinction

BY HENRI BENDEL

For NEA Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The most interesting changes in fashion in the last few seasons have concerned the coat. For a long time, the jaunty little two-piece was a staple in the wardrobe, but it was supplanted by the three-piece costume which made the separate blouse and skirt as obsolete as a pompadour.

A later evolution of fashion is a modified ensemble, the costume and coat, separate, but related in feeling, contrasting in color or harmonizing as the material and style warrants. The old hit-and-miss feeling is gone from the mode, but so too is the rigidity of the matching ensemble. This new harmony cannot, of course, be accomplished with one wrap. Smartly dressed woman must possess a coat suitable for every type of frock.

Simplicity in Sports Wear. There are smart sport coats for morning to wear over the simple chic frock of jersey or crepe, smart semi-dress coats for afternoon to wear with the new brocades, printed velvets and chiffons, and there are scores of evening wraps for different types of occasions.

Photographed today is a semi-dress coat, a morning coat, and one of fur for afternoon. Each has its definite place in the wardrobe.

For morning, simplicity is the first law. The lines must be simple and the materials suggestive of quality, but not decorative. The new soft tweeds, kashas, and mannish fabrics are ideal.

The model photographed is of tweed with a large collar of natural lynx. This may be worn for country or sport as well as for the morning shopping jaunt. The business woman could wear it all day, if she affects simple day dresses on the sport order.

For the "In-Between"

The fur model is an excellent in-between coat. It may be worn for afternoon with a simple or a fairly elaborate gown. Its youthful, tailored appearance makes it infinitely more chic than the average fur coat or wrap, so it can rise to any point of elegance required during the day. It combines soft velvet mink and very elegant wool cloth, the cloth being used for the lining and bandings. The sleeves are particularly interesting and so is the pocket, and the standing collar is in keeping with the simplicity of the cut.

The model for semi-dress is of fur cloth lined with cloth and trimmed with a deep square cut vest of nutria fur. Large pointed cuffs of the fur reach to the elbow of the loose, comfortable sleeve.

The use of fur here is a happy inspiration, because it is absolutely new. The coats of this season have nothing new to present in line, but it is in the manipulation of the material and the clever placing of fur that they achieve novelty.

Fur Matches Cloth. Fur lined coats are ideal for sport and for day wear. They come in the most interesting combinations. Fur coats are lined with cloth or velvet quite as often as with the more usual satin or crepe. Furs are dyed to match cloth, and cloth is dyed to match a pelt.

No fur is too humble to be used as trimming this year, but no trouble is too great to achieve a distinctive treatment for an ordinary fur. Rabbit, pony, antelope and many of the inexpensive furs are metamorphosed into the most costly looking pelts.

This season's coat is not extreme in line, but there is a surprising amount of stitching, fold, and manipulation of the fabric. Coats come in all lengths, from three-quarters down to the most practical ones are long enough completely to cover the costume.

This combination of velvet mink and soft wool cloth is suitable with even an elaborate afternoon gown.

To State. A sporty or sport wear is this smart collar of natural lynx.

Being Ready For the Peak Load Is Necessary In Community Building

At any hour of the day or night customers of this company may have electric service, instantly in response to a gesture. That is a necessary part of a public utility service—to be able to meet the demand when it comes.

At some hours there is little demand for service. At other hours the demand is very heavy. Plant equipment must be maintained to meet the heaviest demand.

The community is growing and its needs for electric service are increasing. It is necessary that the facilities of this company be built ahead so that when the increasing demand calls for more service it will be ready for the people.

This feature of our service is important and worthy of being understood by our customers. Through understanding comes cooperation in building the community with good electric service—and the community can not grow without good electric service.

HAINES IS NOT IN A CLASS BY HIS LONESOME

THIRTY OTHER PITCHERS HAVE HURLED SHUTOUTS IN SERIES TILTS

By NEA Service

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—When Jess Haines majestically unfurled his shutout victory over the New York Yankees in the 1926 world series, he was the thirty-first pitcher to accomplish such a feat.

A peek at blankings pitched in the past season series shows that the great Christy Mathewson, with four shutouts, is the master of them all in world series pitching.

"Three-fingered" Brown of the old Chicago Cubs runs Matty a strong second with three shutout victories to his credit. Then comes little Artie Nehf of the New York Giants with a pair, both being 1 to 0 affairs over the New York Yankees in 1921 and 1923.

Haines' blanking of the Yankees was the first world series shutout pitched since 1923, when Nehf turned the Yankees back without a run. Haines' shutout also was the fourth time in world series play that the Yankees have been blanked.

The 1926 classic between the Giants and Athletics brought forth perhaps the tightest pitching ever witnessed in world series play, five shutouts being unfurled, with Mathewson getting three. Matty's first was a 3 to 0 win; his second 3 to 0 and his third a 2 to 0 victory. In between, Joe McGinnity hurled a 1 to 0 win for the Giants and Chief Bender blanked the Giants, 3 to 0, for the fifth shutout of the memorable series.

Two shutouts happened in 1926, when the Chicago White Sox and Chicago Cubs battled it out. Ed Walsh blanked the Cubs 3 to 0, then Brown whitewashed the White Sox 1 to 0. In 1927 it was Cubs against the Detroit Tigers. Brown hurled another shutout, getting a 2 to 0 win over the Tigers.

In 1928 he again blanked the Tigers, this time 3 to 0, for his third world series shutout. This series brought another shutout pitcher to the front, Orvie Overall blanking Detroit 2 to 0.

The 1929 series found the then young Babe Adams leading Detroit scoresless, 3 to 0, in one of his three wins of the series. George Mullin returned by shutting out the Pirates, 5 to 0.

It wasn't until 1933 that additional world series shutouts were pitched. Mathewson getting his fourth and last one, 4 to 0, against Philadelphia. Incidentally all four of Matty's October shutouts were against Connie Mack's Athletics.

Bill James hurled the only 1934 whitewash, blanking the Athletics, 10 to 0, in one of the Boston Braves' four straight wins over the Macks.

Things rocked along until 1917 before more world series scoresless games were hurled. Rube Benton for New York, shut out the Chicago White Sox 2 to 0, then Fred Schupp blanked the White Sox 5 to 0 for the second scoresless game of that series.

The 1918 series found Jim Vaughn of the Cubs shutting out the Red Sox 3 to 0, and Babe Ruth blanking the Cubs, 1 to 0.

Three shutouts came in the 1919 series between the White Sox and Cincinnati Reds. Kerr blanked Cincinnati, 2 to 0; Ring, goose-egged the White Sox, 2 to 0; then "Doc" Elder shut out the Sox, 5 to 0.

In 1920 Burleigh Grimes, for Brooklyn, blanked the Cleveland Indians, 3 to 0, and Walter Mills and Coveleskie blanked the Robins, 1 to 0 and 3 to 0, respectively.

The all-Gotham world series started in 1921 with three shutouts. Mays and Hoyt each blanked the Giants, 3 to 0, and Nehf the Yankees, 1 to 0.

John Scott hurled the only 1923 world series shutout, defeating the Huguenots 3 to 0. In 1923 Art Nehf got his third shutout, 1 to 0, over the Yankees.

Neither Washington nor New York Giant pitchers could apply the whitewash in their 1924 series but in 1925 Johnson of Washington blanked Pittsburgh 4 to 0. In 1926 along came Jess Haines to turn the trick for the Cardinals against the Yankees by the same score.

Summed up, National league pitchers have turned in 21 of the 31 world series shutouts, if that means anything.

Says Harry Greb Had Premonition Of Death

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 27. (AP)—Harry Greb, former middleweight champion of the world, had a premonition of death.

This was revealed today by his brother-in-law, J. Elmer Edwards, a few hours before Greb, who died in Atlantic City Friday, was laid to rest in a grave adjacent to that of his wife.

"For the last month or so, Harry has been rather despondent," Edwards said. "He spoke often of death and seemed spiritless in many ways. When he discussed matters pertaining to the future, he would preface his remark with 'If I live, I may do it.'"

He Quits Pirates Cold

FRED CLARKE

The fifth member of the Pittsburgh Pirates to fall by the wayside as the result of internal dissension was Fred Clarke, of Winfield, Kansas, old time star and later manager, who was brought from his retirement in the wilds of Kansas in 1925 to assist Manager Bill McKeehan, who was also recently released. Clarke's knowledge of inside baseball was given the credit for the Pirate victory last year.

Climate Plays Little Part In Intersectional Games

BY ERNIE NEVERS

All-American Fullback, 1925.

(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

Two things, the forward pass and intersectional games, have made for nation-wide interest in football.

The pass gave to the game its biggest thrill and made for greater uncertainty, an element on which every sport thrives.

Intersectional games have created a rivalry between east, west, north and south that has done much to make football popular, not only with the undergraduate and alumnus but with the masses as well.

In a sense, the colleges of the Pacific Coast are responsible for intersectional games on a big basis.

Ten years ago football on the Pacific Coast wasn't so much. California was the first to make rapid strides. The success of California soon spread to the other institutions.

When it became apparent that coast football compared very favorably with the brand played in the east, middle west and south, negotiations were opened for games with the leading teams of these sections.

For a time the coast eleven enjoyed unusual success in these intersectional games, making it seem that there was little room for choice between the style of game played in the various sections. If there was an edge, the results of those games favored the coast teams.

All of which leads up to the point I desire to discuss—what effect have climatic conditions on the intersectional games staged on the coast?

Do the long trip and the climate seriously handicap eleven from the other sections?

In the early years of these games, I am of the opinion that the travel and weather conditions played havoc with the invading teams. In a measure, I believe, trainers and coaches were responsible for such a state of affairs.

At first the thought was that the results could be attained by arriving only a day or two prior to the game. This didn't work out very well because it gave the players little chance to get acclimated or time to remove the travel kinks.

Now, most coaches and trainers seek to arrive on the scene as early as possible, taking advantage of every bit of time allowed them by their colleges.

I always have believed the question of climatic conditions was greatly overstressed. Only in games played at Los Angeles are invading teams liable to be handicapped because of excessively warm weather.

Conditions are much the same as in the east for games scheduled at Berkeley and Palo Alto, or in the north at Washington or Oregon.

When coast teams play Southern California at Los Angeles they are up against it just as are teams from other sections of the country as far as the climate is concerned.

The success that teams from the east, middle west and south have attained in recent years in games played on the coast rather refutes the idea that climate and travel are insurmountable handicaps.

At first the thought was that the results could be attained by arriving only a day or two prior to the game. This didn't work out very well because it gave the players little chance to get acclimated or time to remove the travel kinks.

Now, most coaches and trainers seek to arrive on the scene as early as possible, taking advantage of every bit of time allowed them by their colleges.

CLARK BREAKS WITH PIRATES AND QUIT'S JOB

FIFTH MEMBER OF CLUB GIVES OVER TO STRIFE ON INNER CIRCLES

(By the Associated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 27.—Fred C. Clark, who 29 years ago piloted the Pittsburgh Pirates to four National League pennants and one world's title, has severed his connection with the club.

From his home in Winfield, Kansas, Clark yesterday notified officials that he had resigned as vice president and a director of the club.

Internal Dissension Cited

Thus the man to whom was given much of the credit for Pittsburgh's successful fight for the National League pennant in 1925, Joining Manager Bill McKeehan, Max Carey, Babe Adams and Carson Bigbee in the ranks of those whose careers with the Pirates have been terminated directly as a result of internal dissension that developed last summer.

That dissension arose when Clark's presence on the bench in the role of advisor to McKeehan brought strenuous objection from some of the players, chief among whom, it was said, were Carey, Adams and Bigbee.

Predictions Held True

After these three had been dismissed from the club, Clark announced he never again would occupy a seat in the dugout. It was freely predicted at that time that he would not care to remain with the club for long after charges that his presence on the bench hindered McKeehan, had been leveled against him. McKeehan was released recently and has been succeeded by Owen J. (Donie) Bush, manager of the Indianapolis, Ind., American association club.

Clark, as manager of the Pirates from 1900 to 1915, won National League pennants in 1901, 1902, 1903 and 1905. He rejoined the club in 1925.

"Best in South!"

GEORGE COLE

George Cole of Bauxite, Ark., star half-back on the University of Arkansas football team, has received the distinction of being "the greatest half-back in the south." The statement was made by Coach Homer Hazel of the University of Mississippi, after the Razorbacks of Arkansas had defeated "Ole Miss," 21-6, for their first conference victory. Coach Hazel was for two years an All-American during his football career at Rutgers. Cole is a midget backfield man, weighing but 150 pounds, and is serving his second year on the Razorback varsity.

Victor Hugo's apartments in the Place des Vosges, Paris, now a museum, are to have 250,000 francs spent upon them by the Municipal Council.

Billy Evans Says

Collins and Hornsby

Unquestionably the two greatest second basemen to grace the major leagues in the last 20 years, all things considered, are Eddie Collins of the Chicago White Sox and Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals.

This is all the more unusual when you consider that it was several years before either star discovered that second base was his forte.

Connie Mack used Collins at short, third and right field before he definitely decided that second base was his proper spot in the infield.

Hornsby played every position in the infield and took a whirl at the outfield before he settled down at second.

Both soon developed into stars, and each already has shown unusual ability as a manager. Hornsby winning a National League pennant in his second year.

Other star players have had somewhat similar experiences.

Not For Sale

During the final regular series of the year at St. Louis with New York, George Sisler, manager of the Browns, pitched the last two innings of the game that ended the season.

It so happened that I worked the first game Sisler pitched in the majors. He had come direct from the University of Michigan.

He had plenty of stuff, including a fine curve, but of course lacked experience. He soon developed into a star southpaw. Then he was shifted to first base, so his team could make daily use of his ability to hit the ball.

In the final St. Louis game he showed he still possessed the fast-breaking curve, for he struck out the first two men to face him.

Yet, after the game when I asked Sisler if he would like to go back to pitching, he replied:

"I should say not. I'll take first base for mine."

Anent Babe Ruth

Then there is Babe Ruth, who became the American League's greatest southpaw and after reaching that dizzy height as a pitcher took to outfielding and making home runs.

Ruth is the most colorful figure that ever has played baseball. I doubt if the game will ever see another just like him.

The world series of 1924, by the way, has caused Ruth to suffer a change of opinion as to his greatest thrill. Back in 1924 I sat next to Ruth in the press box at Washington as the Giants and the Senators waged an extra inning battle. New York finally winning in 12 innings.

During every inning after the ninth I noticed that Ruth was mighty nervous. I finally asked the reason.

"You know I pitched the longest world series game ever played, 14 innings, and it looks as if these guys might break it," he said.

Babe's Greatest Thrill

Ruth then proceeded to tell me that the pitching and winning of that extra inning game was the greatest thrill of his career.

He made it emphatic that no home run that ever bounced off his bat gave him quite the joy that came from the 14-inning victory over Sherry Smith of Brooklyn.

Just before the fifth game of the present world series at St. Louis I dropped around to the New York bench for a chat with Manager Huggins. I first bumped into Ruth, wearing a smile that was a mile wide. Before I had a chance to congratulate him on his three homers, he said:

"What did you think of that sock into center field bleachers? I sure did bust that baby."

Remembering our conversation about the 14-inning game, he had pitched in the world series, I replied:

"But what about that 14-inning game?" He didn't allow me to get any further.

"That game is no longer the big thrill of my career. The home run into the center field bleachers gets the call now."

I might add it was one of the greatest thrills that I, a rather blasé umpire, ever got out of a ball game. I didn't think any human being could hit a ball so far.

But, then, Babe isn't human.

Rickard Denies Dempsey Is Signed For Tunney Scrap

NEW YORK, Oct. 27. (AP)—Denying that he had signed Jack Dempsey to a contract for a bout with Gene Tunney, Tex Rickard today expressed doubt that Dempsey would don the gloves again.

"He's got so much money that the game may not have the old appeal to him," the promoter said. "He may not like the idea of training hard. Unless he is enthusiastic, it would do him more harm than good to return to the ring."

"I have no intention right now of sending Dempsey into the ring against Tunney in Gene's first start as a heavyweight champion next year. Dempsey should go through one or two trials before tackling another title bout for the double purpose of assuring himself and the public as to his fighting form and condition."

Trouble again between Tex Rickard and the New York boxing commission looms. The commission insists that Tunney must defend his title every six months like any other title holder. Tex says Gene will fight again next September.

CAMPUS REBELS

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

JUDITH MARTIN, new teacher at Pendleton University, makes friends with ERIC WATERS, sophisticated senior, MYRA ALDRICH, spoiled beauty, who is in love with Eric, and DR. PETER DORN, earnest young astronomy professor.

Myra turns against Judith when she learns that Eric has kissed Judith on a bet, before he was introduced to her.

Eric and Judith dine at a roadhouse which is raided. They escape in a rainstorm to a cabin where Judith finds a night's shelter, while Eric walks back to town. Next morning Eric returns with his car, bringing fresh clothing for Judith, which he has asked Myra to pack for him. She reproaches him for telling Myra of the escape.

The following night, when Judith returns from the movies with Will Wetherell, Will warns her to be careful of Myra.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

"What do you mean?" asked Judith in a voice that attempted to be casual but shook in spite of her. "I don't know what I have to fear from Myra."

Wetherell peered at her in the shadow of the campus trees. "She's fighting mad at you for snatching Eric, and she doesn't fight fair—in a case like that, any more than any other woman does."

Judith was silent. Wetherell rattled on. He had dropped the subject of Myra and returned to his favorite topic, himself.

"What's that on your front steps?" he asked, as they turned in at the Stedway walk. A man and a girl were sitting on the porch steps.

"Just us," called Myra's shrilly sweet voice. "And this is Dr. Dorn. I think you both know him. We've had the most gorgeous session at the observatory."

"And we've had a session with Pola Negri," cried Will. Dr. Dorn was looking at Judith. "It's a pity Miss Martin was too tired to come. It was a good, topsy-turvy evening—no moon and no clouds. The stars of Saturn and the red spot on Mars were clearly visible. But perhaps she found the movies less fatiguing."

Judith had no chance to reply, for Myra spoke, a little too glibly. "Yes, Judith, you'd have loved it." She turned to the professor. "But you must excuse her. She must be very tired. You see, she didn't come home last night."

For a moment, nobody said anything, but Judith thought she heard Will whistle faintly.

"Yes," said Dr. Dorn, "one never sleeps so well away from home." His voice was casual.

Wetherell put his hand on Judith's arm and led her up the steps and into the house.

"What?" he exclaimed, when the door had shut behind them. "What'd I tell you about that little fellow? Holy Mackerel, that was a hot shot! Before his ribs, the professor, too. She was hinting at the Schooner today, that there were things she could tell, if she would! But I didn't think she'd go so far as that."

Judith spoke cautiously. "What do you mean, Will?"

Wetherell was obviously trying to read her face. "Look here, Judy. You can't fool me. I know what she meant when she said you didn't come home last night. Anybody but an unworried sap like Dorn would have caught it. Lucky for you he didn't."

"After all, Will," said Judith, coldly, "it depends on what kind of mind you have, whether Myra's speech was an insult or not. I must say I prefer the mind of 'an unworried sap' to one like yours. Better scrub it up a bit before you go to bed."

Wetherell leaned against the newel post, looking at her. Now he smiled and held out his hand. "It's all right, Judy. You know I'm for you. But watch Myra Aldrich. This is only a sample of her tactics, with the main campaign to follow. Guess I'll toddle along now. My bedtime. Good night."

"Miss Martin—please call Mr. Waters, Red 214," said a note on the Stedway telephone pad when Judith came home next day.

She paused by the telephone, and after a moment of indecision called the number.

Eric's voice was debonair. "Hello, Jude. What say dinner at the Sigma Psi house tonight? Clean up night. Everybody asking guests."

"Eric's staging a benjo hike, by moonlight to Lover's Leap afterwards. Thought we might like to trot along, as the hazy moon rise, and sob a few sobs to Wetherell's ukulele. Is it a go?"

Across the hall a wavy mirror in the hallway showed Judith her reflection. Her face was smudged and there were drooping lines about her mouth.

She turned back to the phone. "I'll come, Eric. I've had enough of stress and strife this week, and I'd like to be gay for a little while."

"Right! You'll enjoy the Lover's Leap jaunt. All sentimental souls do. Better stick some oysters in your pocket for the hike."

Judith went upstairs with a lighter step. Near the top of the flight, she started back against the wall. Myra was standing against the railing above, she tossed her head when she saw Judith. "I'd like my week-end bag, please," she said sullenly.

Judith handed her the bag. "Thank you very much, Myra." She turned away to the dresser. It seemed to her that Myra lingered a moment by the table, on the verge of speaking. Then she heard the door slam.

It had been many days since Judith had had the time for a really elaborate toilet. She spent two hours over her dressing tonight, luxuriating in the warm bath and the fragrant creams and powders that stood on her dressing table. She brushed her hair until it gleamed, and rubbed a piece of ice over her face to bring back the color that the day's fatigue had stolen.

At six o'clock she was slipping into a dress of sapphire blue, and kicking off the mules that were to be replaced by the high-heeled satin slippers that lay on the bed.

When Eric gave the Sigma Psi whistle under her window, she was wrapping a pair of walking shoes in heavy paper.

She found him standing at the foot of the stairs, his blond head hatless and ruffled by the wind, and his face uplifted eagerly for her coming.

"Hurry up, Eric," he cried, and she tossed the walking shoes down for him to catch.

The fraternity house was ablaze with lights when they drove up the driveway under its hospitable pillars. They could hear laughter and syncopation from a phonograph as they ran up the steps. "I wish I had gone to a school where there were sororities," she said. "These Greek letter frats at least mean comfort and social graces—big fireplaces and grand pianos, in place of boarding house parlors."

Eric nodded. "We have pretty good parties now and then. Hope this dinner won't be too tame. You're rather thrilling tonight, Jude, and I'd like to get all the credit coming. Hope you make the brothers' girls look like a parcel of frumps."

A freshman opened the door for them and Judith found herself in a great square hall filled with young men in dinner coats, talking, smoking and wandering about. Heels tapping in the Charleston sounded from a little morning room which evidently housed the drunken victrola.

Someone dashed off with her wraps to the chaperone's room, and Eric led her into the living room. The hush that fell upon groups as her blue and copper glory passed was flattering.

A youngster in a flame-colored dress brought her heels abruptly to earth from the transports of a wild clog dance on the hearthstone. Judith recognized her as a member of her freshman English class. There were other co-eds ensconced here and there about the room, in deep chairs and divans. They looked at Judith curiously when the dancer cast an embarrassed glance in her direction.

"Keep it up, Connie," called Eric. "Judy isn't a school-marm tonight. She's just a sweetheart of Sigma Psi." Judith blushed under the shout of approval that went up from the men.

A familiar head seen over the back of a big armchair turned, and Judith saw Dr. Dorn staring at her.

"There's your friend, the professor," said Eric, in a low tone. "He's an alumnus of our frat and faculty patron too. Pity he hasn't sense enough to turn down duty invitations."

over, not to be self-satisfied and urged that they keep up the good work of Rotary here. "There are plenty of stars to go around," he said, "and I advise you to hitch your wagon to one of them."

He Raps 'Iconoclasm'
In discussing criticism of Rotary International he paused for a moment to issue a short but powerful verbal barrage against H. L. Mencken and Sinclair Lewis, noted writers, who continually criticize Rotary movements and American city life. Mencken and Lewis, Mr. Edwards said, are commercial iconoclasts and

I call your attention to the fact that they are known as Rotary at so much per word."

Mr. Edwards and his guests Mrs. Nell H. Wright and Mrs. W. L. McKnight. Among other visitors were President Arthur E. Dugan of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Dugan of Littlefield and business men from Littlefield, Brownfield and Littlefield who were here to discuss the formation of Rotary clubs in those places.

Was in Politics
In his talk Mr. Edwards, who is editor and publisher of the Denton Record-Chronicle and who was a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor two years ago, pointed out that the Rotary organization has grown from one to 2,416 clubs in 21 years and that during that time only one charter has been withdrawn. The organization, now in 25 counties of the world, will enter six more in 1927, he said. Hubert L. Allen, president of the club here, had charge of the program.

2 MEN AND WOMAN HELD BY POLICE WEDNESDAY

that was not blinded by a curtain. He threw his flash light through the window and located a man and woman in bed. The officer commanded the woman to unlatch the screen, and she complied with the request, but when she saw it was a "law" she tried to rebuke it. She was too late, however, and the officer entered the building via the window route. Both the man and woman were taken into custody and spent the remaining hours of the night in the city jail. Today they were examined by the grand jury. Just what charges the city will file against them is not known, and it may be they will only be forced to settle with the state.

Two Charged As Drunk
Night patrolman Otto Williams arrested two men highly charged with "white lightning." They also spent the night in the city jail. They were charged with driving a car while intoxicated, and may be called upon to face trial in district court. Both were carried before the grand jury.

"We are going to rid Lubbock of undesirables," said Chief May today, "and we are going to see to it that drunken car drivers stay off of our streets. The penalty for this offense is very severe, and none of us enjoy seeing a man or woman sent to the penitentiary, but if they will not respect the laws of our land and continue to ignore life and property we have only one choice. We are going to clean up the city."

Big Home Coming Jubilee Is Planned For Cardinal Idol

ST. PAUL, Neb., Oct. 27. (AP)—Residents of this town of less than 2,000 persons, were hosts today to one of the largest gatherings in St. Paul's history, here to kill the fatted calf and pay tribute to Grover Cleveland Alexander, whose crafty right arm swiped the punch that gave St. Louis its first world's baseball championship.

It was a gala day, not only for Alex, his mother, and friends, but for many who remembered Alex when he piled up and down telephone poles splicing and tying wires.

To the tune of some of the best bands in this part of Nebraska, Alex and a Howard county baseball team against a nine from the nearby town of Ord. A big pavilion dance will be held this evening with a barbecue, fireworks and all that goes to make a home coming complete.

Mrs. Margaret Alexander, Alex's 76-year-old mother who has been feverishly busy preparing for her son's return, declares that the names of Babe Ruth, Tony Lazzeri and other Yankee fence busters really started on his baseball career by throwing stones at knot holes in the Alexander barn to startle the horses.

Neff Defends Pro Law In Gotham Talk

NEW YORK, Oct. 27. (AP)—The New York state prohibition referendum was attacked last night by Pat M. Neff, former governor of Texas, speaking before the New York Methodist men's council.

The only people who want legalized light wines and beer, he said, are "a little band of people who get profit out of it and a little handful of people who get a kick out of it." He suggested that those who desire full personal liberty should go to Africa.

Borger Incorporated By Large Majority

BORGER, Texas, Oct. 27. (AP)—Citizens of Borger, Isom and Edison (Creek) townships, chose Tuesday to incorporate the three oil field villages into the city of Borger by a vote of 96 to five. The 101 votes cast, is not to be considered indicative of the population, as the bulk of residents of the three places have lived in the county less than the six months required for voting.

John Miller was named mayor of the temporary city government. I. Fleig and Dr. W. T. Malone were elected commissioners. They will serve until April, when the regular election will be held.

12 Moros Killed In Clash With Troops

MANILA, Oct. 27. (AP)—Twelve Moros were killed in a fight today between Philippine constabulary troops and a band of Moro outlaws in Lanao province. There were no casualties on the constabulary side.

The constabulary was attempting to arrest three Moros who recently murdered Otto R. Seltzer. The outlaws took refuge in a cave, or fort, which the constabulary stormed.

Sesqui Must Close On Sunday, Ruling

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 27. (AP)—Dismissing exceptions to its former ruling closing the Philadelphia Sesqui-Centennial on Sundays, the United States circuit court today reaffirmed its previous decree and issued an injunction to enforce its closing order. Unless the Sesqui-Centennial exposition association obtains a stay of execution from the supreme court the exposition must be closed on Sunday.

Asylum As Home Too JUDGE ANNULS MARRIAGE Much For This Woman

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 27. (AP)—The honeymoon ended for Mrs. Fred M. Wells when she beheld the grandeur of her husband's homestead, she told superior Judge Hollzer yesterday.

"After we were married Mr. Wells told me we would drive in to visit his father on our honeymoon trip," Mrs. Wells related. "After a long ride he turned in at a drive-way which led up among an imposing group of buildings. I was amazed at the size of the estate."

Mrs. Wells admitted she was surprised to see so many people on the grounds, but it was not until the groom asked for his father that the truth dawned upon her.

"Judge, we were in the insane asylum at Patton," she explained.

Mrs. Wells said she investigated and learned that Wells was on parole from the institution when she married him. Judge Hollzer annulled the marriage.

MANY CALLED BY GRAND JURY TO TELL "SECRETS"

SERIOUSNESS OF BUSINESS BEING SHOWN MANY WHO FELT IMMUNE

Lubbock people who have been successful in evading the "law" are losing their cunning, and more than one individual has been taught the seriousness of a grand jury. People who have been enjoying life in an easy manner without thought of punishment have been forced to go before this body and bare secrets they thought would never be divulged.

A few notorious characters have left town, but their stay this time will prove rather expensive for the grand jury is not going to cease its activities until evil doers are brought to justice.

Recesses are taken, but they last for only one or two days, and about the time a fellow begins thinking he has made an escape he is served with a paper requesting his presence before this inquisitorial body. At one time today there were 14 witnesses in waiting at the court house and another in the grand jury room. During the morning some 30 people were examined, and while the grand jury has not made public its findings it is safe to say that many bills of indictment will probably follow.

"Lubbock has been a haven for law breakers," said Judge Mullican when he charged the grand jury and instructed the members as to their duties. "This must not be, and you gentlemen can rid Lubbock of these undesirables if you will let it be known that you intend to see that the laws of the land are enforced."

City officers are working hand in hand with Sheriff Johnston's men and wholesale arrests will likely follow deliberations of the grand jury.

St. Louis Desire To Be Largest City Beaten In Ballot

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 27. (AP)—Despite defeat of the annexation proposition in a special election yesterday, the greater St. Louis conference will continue its campaign for merger of the city and St. Louis county. H. K. Wagner, president of that body, said today.

Under an enabling act which provided for holding the election, the scheme of annexation cannot be voted upon again for five years, but officials of the greater St. Louis conference asserted this provision would not prevent the organization from placing the proposition on the initiative referendum in 1928. They plan to do so.

The proposed merger suffered overwhelming defeat at the hands of the county voters, although the proposition raised a majority of 7 to 1 in the city. The county voters rejected the proposal by better than a two to one vote.

The city vote was: For, 54,558; against, 8,667. In the county the figures were: For, 10,772; against, 2,049. A majority in both city and county was necessary for passage. Jones was discovered in a creek. The latter had been shot four times.

Birger was reported last night moving his wife and women relatives from his home in Harrisburg. "We are going to get even and we are going to work fast," he told newspaper men. The Birger gang is reported to have an armored truck and a number of machine guns. Little is known of the strength of the Shelton group. The two factions formerly were united in the Ku Klux Klan, but are said to have split over liquor operations.

STILL SEEK JURY IN WAGNER TRIAL

MERIDIAN, Oct. 27. (AP)—Twenty-one veniremen were called to Lauderdale circuit court today before the first panel of 12 jurors was accepted by Judge R. M. Bourdeaux in the trial of Kenneth Wagner, circus trick shot and alleged slayer of five men, who went on trial in a special term of court today for the murder of Murdock McIntosh, a deputy sheriff of Greene county in December, 1924.

As soon as the first panel was completed the judge turned the veniremen over to the prosecution for examination.

Martin Miller, prosecuting attorney questioned each of the 12 men in regard to whether they believed there were cases in which a defendant should be hanged or allowed to go free. He also asked if they would vote for the death penalty if they believed the defendant guilty of murder in such cases.

A number of the veniremen were excused when they said they were opposed to capital punishment.

Wagner displayed no nervousness and smoked several cigarettes during the morning.

Plans For Proposed New Line Given I.C.C.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27. (AP)—The San Antonio and Arkansas Pass Railroad, a part of the Southern Pacific system, filed with the interstate commerce commission today plans for the construction of a new road running from Harrison to Brownsville.

The large area of agricultural land would be served.

The map filed by the railroad showed its projected line to make a southerly detour from Harlingen into Brownsville, passing near but not entering the towns of San Benito and Odessa.

Describing the purpose, the application said that the line would serve Point Isabel, now under development and give a new entrance into Brownsville. The agricultural territory in Cameron county, into which the route passes was declared to be susceptible of increased development and to be in need of additional rail transportation.

HERRIN FACTIONS RESTING TODAY

HERRIN, Ill., Oct. 27. (AP)—Two warring factions in "bloody" Williamson county rested on their arms today in a tense atmosphere created by the slaying of two men in the latest renewal of hostilities in the county.

After the bodies of William McQuay and Ward Jones were found yesterday, gangs headed by Charles Birger and the Shelton brothers were reported heavily armed and ready to fight to settle bootleg business quarrels. McQuay and Jones were members of the Birger faction. McQuay's body was found on a lonely road riddled with machine gun bullets, while that of Jones was discovered in a creek. The latter had been shot four times.

Birger was reported last night moving his wife and women relatives from his home in Harrisburg. "We are going to get even and we are going to work fast," he told newspaper men. The Birger gang is reported to have an armored truck and a number of machine guns. Little is known of the strength of the Shelton group. The two factions formerly were united in the Ku Klux Klan, but are said to have split over liquor operations.

Ponzi Must Answer To Bay State Charge

AUSTIN, Oct. 27. (AP)—Charles Ponzi financial wizard, must go back to Massachusetts, as far as the Texas courts are concerned. The court of criminal appeals today denied Ponzi a writ of habeas corpus and remanded him to the custody of the Bay State authorities.

Ponzi, from his cell in the Harris county jail has been fighting extradition for four months. Two hearings were held before Judge George Miriam A. Ferguson before she honored the requisition of the governor of Massachusetts for Ponzi to return and serve a seven to nine year sentence for being a common and notorious thief in connection with his financial schemes operated in Boston six years ago.

Answering contention of the defense that Ponzi's seizure was violative of the treaty between the United States and Italy to the effect that an Italian ship in the waters of the United States for all practical purposes is Italian soil, and vice versa, the opinion written by presiding Judge Morrow pointed out Ponzi was not arrested by authority of the United States or by the state government. The opinion declared that George Lacy, the Harris county deputy sheriff who arrested Ponzi, was a trespasser.

"The fact that he comes into custody by the trespass of an individual accords him no immunity from justice."

To Seek Rehearing
HOUSTON, Oct. 27. (AP)—A motion for rehearing before the court of criminal appeals in the Charles Ponzi case will be filed within 15 days, according to Attorney Henry Kahn, one of his attorneys. This will prolong Ponzi's stay in the Harris county jail another month or six weeks in all probability. In the event of another unfavorable decision in case the rehearing should be granted final action in the matter would come much later still.

NEW HIGHWAY FOR PLAINS REPORTED

Although the state highway commission is reported to have a new highway out of Lubbock, Division Engineer Geo. A. Field here has not been formally notified by the commission. Word was brought to Lubbock yesterday by G. H. Seerest and Calvin Henson of Morton, who have just returned from Austin.

The new road will lead west out of Lubbock through Smyer, Levelland, Whiteface, Morton and Goodland; thence to the New Mexico state line, the two men said. The New Mexico Highway Commission has agreed to designate a connecting highway from Elida.

This will give Lubbock and other South Plains citizens almost an air-line highway to Roswell, and will shorten the distance almost 100 miles. The new highway will also open one of the richest agricultural sections on the South Plains and Eastern New Mexico.

Preacher To Tell Of Human's Faults

"Wiggle-tails, tad-poles, and monkeys" will be the subject of Rev. W. Y. Fox's message at the First Baptist church Friday night, and the minister will endeavor to show the saved people of Lubbock the predicament they are now in.

This evening at 7:30 o'clock he will use as his subject "How to Win People to Christ." This sermon will be of special interest to church members who have grown negligent, and ones who are not enjoying their salvation, it is said.

The house was comfortably filled last night, and his sermon to women was one of the best he has preached during the present revival. Several people surrendered their lives to the service of God at the close of the service, and five of this number united with the church.

All Day Singing To Be Held Next Sunday

With promise of visitors from Lubbock, Morton, Amherst and Littlefield an all day singing bee will be held at the new brick school building, located half way between Bula and Enochs, on next Sunday, October 31. It was given out here today.

Special trained voices will be numerous in the gathering and dinner will be served on the grounds.

More Money Assured For County Schools

An addition of $21,007.50 to the state apportionment for the education of Lubbock county school children has been made through the increase in the per capita tax, recently signed by Governor M. A. Ferguson. This addition makes the total county apportionment from the state total $117,542.

In addition to this sum the county has in application for additional aid, which was granted last year to the extent of $8,978. This special aid should be greater this year. Superintendent of Schools P. F. Brown believes.

Oregonian Denies Charges Of Graft

PORTLAND, Oregon, Oct. 27 (AP).—Emphatic denial of the charge made by George Putnam of the Capital Journal, Salem, that the Portland Oregonian received $35,000 from the Portland Electric Power company for opposing Senator R. N. Stanfield in the Oregon campaign, was made to the Associated Press today by Edgar B. Piper, editor of the Oregonian. Mr. Piper said he favored an immediate investigation.

Lorenzo Sets Dates For Poultry Display

The Second Annual Crosby County Poultry show will be held on December 16, 17 and 18 at Lorenzo and more entries than have ever been made at a South Plains poultry show are expected, Rev. Aubrey Ashley, pastor of the First Methodist church of Lorenzo, said while in the city today.

Rev. Mr. Ashley, who was the judge of the poultry department of the Panhandle and South Plains fair here, will also be in charge of the Crosby county show.

CITY BUSINESS COLLEGE MOVES INTO NEW HOME

INSTITUTION OUTGROWS OLD QUARTERS; ELKS HALL NOW USED

Enjoying a phenomenal growth of their business in spite of the fact that they were "pioneering" this territory in their undertaking, Guy M. Witt, president, and Joe F. Witt, vice-president, owners and managers of the Lubbock Business college, have moved from their old location, 1616½ Avenue I, to the Elks clubrooms, at the corner of Avenue I and Thirteenth street. The new location gives the college much more room and permits the partitioning off of the various departments.

The college was begun here six years ago and for the past five years has been located at 1616½ Avenue I. An average attendance of 60 students per day is now the record of the institution and for the past three months at least one student has been placed in a paying position every day.

Extensive improvements are being made on the new quarters, Joe F. Witt said today. In addition to the Messrs. Witt, Miss Mary Peters acts as superintendent and holds classes in secretarial and shorthand work while A. L. King is in charge of the bookkeeping work and also the instruction in business law. The change of location was made necessary by the rapid growth of the school.

Wife Of Ex-Senator Joseph Bailey Dies

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Ellen Murray Bailey, wife of Joseph Weldon Bailey, former United States senator, died last night at the family home here after a lingering illness.

Mrs. Bailey was born in Oxford, Miss., but had been a resident of Texas many years. She was Senator Bailey's comrade through all his political battles and was considered one of the most charming women in Washington society while her husband was in the house, and later in the senate. Her health failed shortly after the Baileys moved here from Gainesville in 1920.

Funeral arrangements awaited word from her son, Weldon Bailey of Tucson, Arizona. Another son, Joseph Weldon Bailey, Jr., of Dallas, and Senator Bailey were at the bedside when Mrs. Bailey died.

Editorials

ONE FOR THE BOOK

We sit down to write an editorial.
Like the ordinary editorial writer
we are generally at a loss as to what to write about when we start, so we figure for a moment or two, trying to find a suitable subject.

And again, like the ordinary editorial writer, the first thing that we think of in the way of a subject is to "jump on" somebody, or something,
with both feet.

But, after gravely considering the matter we change our mind and decide that, after all, there are plenty of things to commend and so we'll differ
today from the ordinary editorial writer and put somebody or something on the back.

So we hit upon the treasury department of the United States. That much maligned organization which has been buffeted from pillar to post yet which, without making a noise, has well, day in and day out.

The treasury department comes in
for its share of the credit for relief work following the recent hurricane in Florida.

That makes four "executive departments" and one "miscellaneous" governmental branch as the congressional directory classifies them, which can be definitely accounted for as having co-operated in the task of rescue in the stricken district.

The Red Cross—miscellaneous.
The department of agriculture
which, through its weather bureau, gave first warning of the tempest days before it struck the Florida coast and actually saved many lives and much property at points where the threat was taken seriously and everything possible was done to "cut down" in anticipation of it.

The war department—with planes and much material.
The navy department—with bluejackets, marines and radio service.
The treasury department—through the coast guard and the public health service, which played a vital part in preventing an epidemic of typhoid and other diseases, as an aftermath of the disaster.

Governmental departments, bureaus and commissions are often accused of pulling in opposite directions, of jealousies and of general inability to work together. Certainly gave a fine example of team work after the catastrophe in Florida.

Now that we've patted the treasury department we feel better—really we do. Of course we don't suppose it makes a great deal of difference and Mr. Mellon will probably never know about it. But all the same we feel rather peaceful—and comfortable—and no doubt will have a better digestion than if we'd bounced on somebody.

A LITTLE BOY NO LONGER

Jackie Coogan's hob is gone. The Coogans have seen the writing on the wall for a long time. They know Jackie's baby days were numbered, and that the time would come when that bob of his, instead of being the symbol of sweet babyhood, would bring forth raucous jeers as the rabble yelled, "get a haircut, Jackie!"

Parents who own no million dollar chicks shed a little tear for the Coogans not so much because their treasure child grown up may not mean treasure, but because they no longer have a little boy.

Marshall Pilsudski was obliged to get up from writing his reminiscences to make the march on Warsaw. It not only interrupted the memoirs, but will necessitate writing several additional chapters.—Des-Moines News.

Congress now is asked to under-thing more than the distribution of

LINES FROM THE Old Masters

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embattled farmers stood
And fired the shot heard 'round the world.

The too long, since in silence slept,
In the conquering silence sleeps,
And Time the ruined bridge has sweet
Down the dark stream which sensual creeps.

On this green bank, by this soft stream
We set today a votive stone:
That memory may their deed redeem,
While like our sires, our sons are gone.

Spirit that made those heroes dare
To die, and leave their children
free,
Bid Time and Nature gently spare
The shaft we raise to them and thine.

—R. W. Emerson, Concord Hymn.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING and BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The coffee shops of Manhattan's "Little Rumania" buzz with chatter now that Queen Marie has come from the homeland.

In the second-story halls along the byways of the East Side the choruses may be heard, practicing the folk songs they will sing to her.
And if, perchance, the queen ventures over to their colony, she will find much to remind her of home.

True, the outward appearance of "Little Rumania" is largely American, but inside all is different—Rumanian food, songs, gossip, books, celebrities.

"Little Rumania" centers on Second avenue, just where the Russian and Hungarian districts break off at Houston street. Its shop windows are full of colorful and gaudy wares, much, I am told, as are the streets of Bucharest.

And, again, like Bucharest, few of the shop keeps are Rumanian.
There are Greeks, Hungarians and Germans. Jewels glisten in the windows, flashy evening dresses are displayed, the colors are loud, but attractive.

The pastry shops serve rich dainties,
the coffee houses are crowded,
and down Houston street a maestro of a Rumanian orchestra plays, and is sometimes heard above the clatter of plates and the babble of voices.

Just around the corner is a Carnegie library with one of the finest collections of Rumanian books.

And in Broome street is a cluster of cafes where chefs pride themselves on their menu and where go folk of all races who prefer quiet and cuisine to the din and rattle that accompanies eating in most New York dining places.

The homes of the Rumanians, I am told, are models of comfort and luxury. Their culture ranks highest among the colonies and their rejection of Americans is, I presume, due to an instinctive objection to the blatant and cheap.

This culture finds an outlet in several clubs which have far greater distinction than one would imagine from a casual glance at their exteriors.

The love for the homeland is quite as noticeable as that of any visiting Californian. Yet thousands of the residents are Jews, who fled political persecution. No race in America keeps in closer touch with home politics, and the coffee shops perpetually echo with chatter on political goings on in the Balkans. They follow closely the literature, music and art of Rumania, giving little heed to that of their adopted land. They have produced some of the most eminent teachers of the American universities and many of the finest musicians.

They have their own burying ground and their poor are taken care of by a communal charity.

Queen Marie will have no reason to blush for her children in America. "There's no distinctive as the queen herself, if you please."

GILBERT SWAN.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

FEWER MARRIAGES, MORE DIVORCES—ARE WE BECOMING A NATION OF BACHELORS?

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer
WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The fewer marriages we have these modern days, the more divorces are recorded.
That, at least, seems the obvious deduction from the marriage and divorce statistics Director of the Census W. M. Stewart has just finished compiling for 1924.

W. M. Stewart

In that year 1,178,318 couples were married, or 45,606 fewer than in 1923.
Divorces, however, numbered 170-952 in 1924, as compared with 165,096
in 1923.

As population increases, one would imagine that the number of marriages would increase, too.

And so it has since 1887, until 1924,
with the exception of 1894 and 1904,
when there were slight slumps respectively from 1894 and 1902. These Director Stewart attributes to financial panics.

But times were all right in 1924.
"Prosperity" was the slogan on which President Coolidge was re-elected that year. The only conclusion Director Stewart can draw is that it was a period during which wedded bliss had,
for the time being, lost something of its sentimental appeal.

In 13 out of the 48 states the number of marriages did increase even in 1924. What brought the total down was the decline in the other 35.

Now, why was there an increase in those 13?

Director Stewart's interpretation is that the 13 have marriage laws which are not very strict, while they adjoin states which are very strict indeed.

The divorce rate Director Stewart's figures show, has increased steadily without a single slump and out of all proportion to the increase in population, for more than 50 years.

The spread between the states, however, is very wide—from 22.34 in Nevada to none at all in South Carolina
in 1924.

Of course the explanation is that South Carolina has had, since 1878, no law permitting divorce, while the Nevada law makes it so easy that the Reno divorce colony—made up from every corner of the United States—is nationally known.

Twice as many wives as husbands obtain divorces.
"It may be," says Director Stewart,
"that husbands give occasion for divorce more often than wives, but it also is true that, in some states, a greater number of legal grounds for divorce are allowed to wives than to husbands."

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

Bob White

By ARTHUR N. PACK
President, American Nature Ass'n.
It is spring, and Bob White is calling from a fence post beside the road.
It is a cheery call, and base indeed
would be the man who would harm
Bob as he sends forth his challenge.
For the white call serves a double purpose: it tells Mrs. Bob that here he is on the job, and it proclaims to other Bobs, in no uncertain terms, that this is his domain, and that he will resist with all his might their intrusion.

Some suppose that this loud call is Bob White's only method of voicing his emotions, but this is far from the truth. Let his brown throated sweetheart wander near his perch and he drops down into the thicket and with the softest and most persuasive of calls pursues his wooing.

The gentleness and beauty of Bob White has led to attempts in some states to have him put on the list of song birds, that he might be protected at all times of the year. Though there is much virtue in this view, it has not found wide acceptance, for sportsmen dearly love to track Bob and his brood.

This sport has long ago resulted in his extirpation from many parts of his range, especially where the climate conditions were so severe that he had all he could do to maintain his race
when unpersecuted.

What a tragedy for poor Bob, for those of us who love him alive, and for our children who may never know his cheerful challenge!

Helpful Health Hints

HAIR AND SKIN TELL IF BODY NEEDS REPAIRS

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene,
the Health Magazine

The hair of the healthful child normally is plentiful and should have a luster, which is due to the presence of sufficient oil.

It is sufficiently pliable to permit
its being kept in various positions.
It may be long or short, fine or coarse, straight or curly, according to hereditary factors which are not amenable to control, except such as may be brought about by the use of heat or of stiff waxes, such as are now sold in every cosmetic department.

A Signal of Danger
In certain diseases, such as result from deficiency of the thyroid gland,
secretion, the hair becomes scanty,
dry and brittle. In such instances, treatment with oil or waxes of any kind is only temporary, and will not cure the underlying deficiency, which is primarily responsible. Certainly a child in this condition should have the best possible medical attention immediately.

Another symptom of a lack of proper thyroid secretion is an extreme dryness of the skin in general.
A normal skin is slightly moist, clear and smooth. In such diseases as rickets, or tuberculosis, the skin seems to be overmoist much of the time.

If there are difficulties in the digestion of some foods, the child may have an eczematous eruption. If it is especially sensitive to the eating of other foods, it may develop redness, or itching of the skin, or blis-ters.

THE LYING MIRRORS OF MAYFAIR

The meanest mercantile in the world
lives in London.
In "The Parade of Fashion," a weekly column furnished by the Associated Press, the news comes that slightly convex mirrors have been placed in a women's department store in the British capital that tend to make plump girls appear slim when they are trying on new frocks. The deception has worked on a number of occasions, but the deception is discovered as soon as the customer reaches home and appears in the new garb before her own mirror.

If there is anything that would encourage profanity among the fair sex—a threat among the plump contingent of the fair sex—this sort of thing ought to do it. But the store that tolerates such a practice of deception is doomed to fail. Good will is the thing that counts in business these days.

Plump women like to be kidded into the belief that they appear to be slim, but they want no lying mirrors around them when they go shopping.—Temple Telegram.

"I don't think much of that kind of hospitality," Eric said, looking shortly.

The white-haired Dresden, china chairperson of the Sigma Psi house, came down the stairs with mingled steps, and the guests were brought one by one to be presented to her.

Justice was standing by the little old lady when the song sounded from the dining room. The president of the chapter gave the champagne to Eric and Judith followed with Eric to the larger of two long tables shining with silver and white linen.

The pale, mischievous, freckled man who held Judith's chair pushed it against her knees too soon, so that she sat down suddenly, before the freckled man, had been seated.

She glanced apologetically at everyone else laughing with her, save Eric and the black-haired woman, whose glances looked for a long moment before the poor wretch escaped to answer a ringing telephone.

"Shame, Eric," whispered Judith. "He didn't mean to do it."

"Awful loud," rejoined Eric. "It's time he got some manners."

chasing his eyes bent on Judith. She seemed almost shyly to avoid him. But Connie, the "lonely" freshman, was making up for Judith's neglect by embarrassing him with attentions.

"Connie's trying to win a passing grade in astronomy out of old Dorn," said Eric.

The champagne then broke in. "Do tell us about the dean's plans," professor Dorn—had he going to follow up his coup of last night and clear out all the other university places around Ellington?

Judith looked up quickly, her breath catching in her throat.

The old woman went on. "I have always felt that that oldhouse was one of the greatest blots on the town. I am sure none of my boys ever go there. What a relief to know that the place is to be closed at last!" Her white head nodded unambiguously.

Dr. Dorn seemed uncomfortable. "The place did no good, I do say," he began, when Will Westcott came through the folding door and made for a vacant place at the old table.

SAINT AND SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"I hear you have quite a nice, large family, Mr. Cluny," Mrs. Lane remarked tactlessly, in an endeavor to bridge the painful gap left by Mr. Lane's unceremonious withdrawal from the interview.

The delicate, waxen cheeks of the aristocratic old man flushed faintly, but his voice was as urbane as ever as he answered. "Myself—first marriage was blessed with three children, two of whom survive. My son, Alexander, is a corporation lawyer of considerable note, and his son, my namesake, young Ralph, is an assistant district attorney. My son has a daughter, Ellen, a sophomore in Bryn Mawr."

"Now, ain't that nice?" Mrs. Lane smiled and nodded and patted the baby on her bosom. "And your daughter, Mrs. Seymour Albright—is one of the society leaders of Marlboro, isn't she?"

Cherry sprang from her seat beside Faith on the piano bench, and darted across the room, to nestle close against her mother's shoulder. She knew she made a lovely picture—so tiny and young in her demure white taffeta dress—but the words whispered were not the charming, filial expressions her curved, ripe young mouth seemed to be saying. "Mummy, darling, please, for heaven's sake, don't say 'ain't' again. He'll think we're as common as pig tracks."

"It ain't—nice to whistle in public, Cherry," her mother buried her head in her hand in an amused smile at Mr. Cluny. "She's nothing but a baby, Mr. Cluny. I hope I'm not partial to any of my children—all good obedient children. If I do say so, as shouldn't—but Cherry—so little and sweet and popular—why Mr. Cluny, she's that popular you wouldn't believe it! You—you'll be good to her, my little baby girl won't you, Mr. Cluny?"

"Oh, Mummy, you're embarrassing the poor darling to death!" Cherry laughed and patted her mother's cheek fondly. "Of course he has to say he'll be good to me. If he isn't, I'll pull a Maggie stunt on him!" And she made them all laugh by setting a bud vase from the library table and brandishing it before Mr. Cluny's thin, pointed nose as if it were a rolling pin.

"I sympathize fully with your concern for your daughter's happiness," Mr. Cluny intoned propiously, when his nose was no longer threatened, and Cherry had again perched herself on the arm of his chair. Mr. Lane being no longer present to reproach her.

"That being that," Cherry laughed and crinkled her nose deliciously, like an impudent, naughty child. "My boy friend—she tugged at a forelock of the carefully arranged, thick white hair with irreverent fingers. "And I want to go out and celebrate. Supper at the Marie Antoinette. Mummy, imagine."

The sublime impudence of her treating the most distinguished criminal lawyer in the state as if he were a lovesick young calf of a lover. And how he lapped it up. Faith thought disdainfully as his old legs began to move about the room with jerky, unaccustomed alacrity, as if they wanted to prove that there was life in the old boy yet. No wonder he wanted her. Faith told herself, she made him forget his years, flattered him more than any person had ever done, because she treated him as if he were an equal. "I certainly trust you will use your influence with your husband to bring about a more graceful acceptance on his part of a situation which I am convinced will mean happiness to all concerned." Mr. Cluny's legs could no longer caper but his voice was still the voice of a pompous, legal-minded old man.

"Oh, Mummy'll bring him around. Don't worry," Cherry laughed lightly, as she clung to his arm, dancing on the tips of her silver slippers.

Faith, darling, bring me my white flannel coat, won't you? And that hand-painted white silk scarf? As if she had a dozen silk scarves!

When Faith, hardly able to keep back the tears, had watched the tiny, lovely little figure and the tall, stiff jointed old man walk arm in arm to the limousine and enter, assisted by a uniformed chauffeur, she turned back into the living room to help Mrs. Lane in her slow, painful journey to her bed room.

"Well, what do you think?" Mrs. Lane quavered, the polite, simpering smile wiped from her heavy cheeks and lips, her gray eyes filled with tears.

"I think it's a crime!" Faith cried passionately. "It's breaking my heart! Don't let her do it, mother. Please! Think what it will mean to Cherry—yoked with that waxen-faced, stiff-kneed old man, who simply wants to drink new life at the fountain of youth. She's so young, mother. You said so yourself—just a baby! Not quite nineteen."

"I don't want her to marry a poor man," Mrs. Lane sighed heavily. "You don't know what I've been through. Faith, married to a failure like your pa, I'd rather see my daughters in their graves than to see them go through what I've suffered. It won't be for long—he can't live many more years." "Oh, I don't know what I'm saying. He's a nice, friendly, polite man—did you ever see such manners?"

—and he's rich. Faith, she'll have everything in the world she wants." But Mrs. Lane lifted the end of her lace fichu to wipe away the fast-falling tears.

"Except thrills," Faith was frankly crying, too. "And you know, mother, Cherry lives on thrills. Even if he lives only five or six years, as he certainly has every chance of doing—maybe twenty—he'll have tarnished her youth, made her cynical and hypocritical and maybe unfaithful!"

"Faith! Do you realize what you're saying?" her mother demanded sternly. "Oh, my heart! That awful pain!" she groaned, laying a puffed hand on her vast bosom, her face contorted with agony.

"Poor mother! Lean on me. We'll soon be there. Just a few more steps, dear. Shall I call dad?"

"No," Mrs. Lane gasped, letting her great weight bear down upon Faith's supporting arms. "Oh, there's the door bell!"

But Mr. Lane had heard it too, and came from the kitchen, where he had retired to read his paper or to think heaven knows what terrible thoughts of his daughter's folly.

"Bob's here, Mother," she told the sick woman in a tender, soothing voice. "He wants to see me. I'll send dad in to sit with you until you feel sleepy. But you mustn't scold him about tonight, or talk about it. It will just upset you, make your heart misbehave. Good night, dear. I know you've tried to do your best for all of us—Cherry, too."

"He is old," Mrs. Lane whispered, with fright in her tired voice. "May-be—"

Miss Nell Shropshire received a broken hip, and her companion, Mrs. Howard Pierson, sustained bruises and other slight injuries late Monday afternoon, when they were struck by an automobile driven by Mrs. Howard Stonehocker, 2110 18th street, at the intersection of Broadway and Avenue G.

Blinded by the sun as she turned the corner Mrs. Stonehocker's car ran over Miss Shropshire and picked Mrs. Pierson up on the bumper as the two women were crossing Broadway, going north. Mrs. Stonehocker immediately halted her car and then rushed the injured women to a hospital for treatment.

Quarry Co. Elects
Officers At Alpine

ALPINE, Oct. 27.—Officers were elected for the year, for the Jordan Marble Quarry company of Alpine, at a recent meeting of the stockholders in San Antonio, which John Young, managing director of Alpine, attended. Mr. Young has just returned from the San Antonio meeting, and reported the following newly elected officers: Raymond Woodward, San Antonio, president; J. H. Savage, San Antonio, vice president; Mr. Booth, San Antonio, secretary-treasurer.

The Jordan Marble Quarry company owns a tract of solid marble of a very high grade of 450 acres, on which is the Jordan Marble Mountain which is leased to the Marble Mountain company of California for 99 years. Several carloads of the marble has been shipped out, and development is steadily going forward. A new quarry has been recently opened up and a red marble in a very beautiful shade is being quarried. Other quarries are being constantly established, and enough marble has already been quarried to keep constant shipments going to California markets, when the road to the nearest shipping point has been completed.

Building Program At Olney Is Widespread

OLNEY, Texas, Oct. 27.—Since the first of this year 84 new homes and four large business buildings have been erected in Olney, while three public buildings are now under construction.

This building program, however, has failed to completely take care of the growing population. The public utilities have reported that large, monthly increases in the number of customers have taken place since January 1 of this year.

Dick Arnett of St. Joe, Mo., is in the city visiting relatives for a few days. Mr. Arnett is well known to many of the Lubbock citizens having been a citizen of Lubbock at one time. He will also visit his father and mother at Colorado City, while in this section.
