Israel, Lebanon sign withdrawal accord

By The Associated Press

Israel and Lebanon signed their U.S.-mediated troop withdrawal agreement today in a two-stage ceremony spanning their border, but Syria threatened to block the accord and punish Lebanese officials who supported it.

"Those who cooperated or surrendered to Israel by accepting the agreement will pay for what they have done," said the government daily Al-Thawra in Damascus, where Syrian leaders adamantly oppose the pact and vow to keep their troops in Lebanon until Israel makes further concessions.

The Israelis say they will not withdraw their 25,000 troops from Lebanon unless 40,000 Syrians and 8,000 to 12,000 Palestinian guerrillas also leave.

The French and Arabic texts of the 37-page withdrawal agreement were signed in Khalde, Lebanon by negotiators Antoine Fattal of Lebanon and David Kimche of Israel, and then by U.S. special envoy Morris Draper as a witness. The ceremony took place at a seaside hotel where the withdrawal negotiations began Dec. 28, and Israeli and Lebanese troops ringed the building to provide security.

The delegates then flew by helicopter to the northern Israeli border town of Kiryat Shmona, the site of other negotiating sessions and a former target of Palestinian guerrilla shelling in the 1970s, to sign the Hebrew and English texts of the pact. Schoolchildren carrying balloons and signing songs lined the streets to welcome the negotiators.

In Khalde, the heads of the three delegations shook hands and posed smiling for photographers at the end of the 50-minute signing ceremony, which came nearly five months after the withdrawal negotiations began in a bid to remove all foreign armies from Lebanon.

Kimche said the agreement ushered in a "new chapter in our history" but warned that "many obstacles still stand in our path and there are many that wish to render the agreement that we are signing meaningless."

"If we sign this agreement with you," Fattal said, "it is because Lebanon has an urgent need for tranquility and order. Its survival is at stake."

But Syria continues vocal opposition

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria claimed today that the Lebanese government had lost its legitimacy by signing a troop withdrawal agreement with Israel and threatened to punish the Lebanese responsible for the accord.

Al-Baath, the newspaper of President Hafez Assad's ruling Baath party, said that by accepting the plan, the Lebanese government "becomes a full partner of Israel and the U.S. in their schemes against the Arab world."

Syria has "numerous and diversified means" to block implementation of the accords, it said, and "nobody in the Lebanese authority will escape punishment whatever his position may be."

The government daily Al-Thawra echoed that view, warning that "those who cooperated or surrendered to Israel by accepting the agreement will pay for what they have done."

Israel has 25,000 troops in Lebanon as a legacy of its June 6 invasion to rout Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas. Syria has 40,000 troops deployed in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and around the northern city of Tripoli. In addition, the PLO maintains about 10,000 troops in Syrian-controlled territory.

In an interview with the Beirut newspaper As-Safir, Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam vowed to maintain Syrian troops in Lebanon as long as Damascus feels the Israelis have an advantage there.

dam vowed to maintain Syrian troops in Lebanon as long as Damascus feels the Israelis have an advantage there.

Syrian Prime Minister Abdel-Raouf Al-Kasm said his government "will do all in its power to prevent the implementation of the Lebanese-Israeli agreement, and the U.S.S.R. stands firmly next to Syria," the official Syrian news agency reported.

But a senior Lebanese official, who asked not to be identified, said he believed the Syrians would not act on their threats.

"We feel we're paying the lowest possible price and getting the maximum possible in the new accord," he said. "We plan to tell the Syrians if they have a better way to do it, we will be willing to discuss it."

The agreement was completed with help from U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz during his Middle East shuttles earlier this month.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, in an interview published in The New York Times today, suggested that Shultz return to the Middle East to help negotiate a Syrian withdrawal. Shultz has said such negotiations were the responsibility of the two Arab countries.

The official English text of the withdrawal agreement stipulates that Israel pull out its forces eight to 12 weeks after the accord takes effect, but it does not give any date for its implementation. The accord also places certain restrictions on Lebanese military operations in the 28-mile-wide security zone created in southern Lebanon.

The Lebanese Parliament voted 80-0 Monday to give Gemayel a mandate to sign the accord. A few hours later, the Israeli Knesset voted to approve it 57-6 with 45 abstentions, but the signed pact may be resubmitted to both governments for final approval.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam threatened that Syria would break relations with Beirut if Lebanon signed the agreement.

Khaddam, in an interview with the Beirut newspaper As-Safir, was quoted as saying that if Syria withdraws from Lebanon, "then the whole of Lebanon would fall under Israeli domination. That is totally impossible and unacceptable."

Government-controlled newspapers in Syria said that if the accord goes through, the government would close the Syrian-Lebanese border, jeopardizing the $5.4-billion-a-year trade between Lebanon and Arab countries to the east and the south.

Al-Baath, the newspaper of Syria's ruling Baath party, said today that by accepting the plan, the Lebanese government "has lost its legitimacy...and becomes a full partner of Israel and the U.S. in their schemes against the Arab world."

The paper said Syria had "numerous and diversified means" to block implementation of the accord and added, "nobody in the Lebanese authority will escape punishment whatever his position may be."

The Soviet Union charged that Washington imposed the withdrawal agreement on Lebanon by taking advantage of the "tragic situation in Lebanon that has resulted from Israel's aggression."

Syria is an ally of the Soviet Union and has been getting new surface-to-air missiles and other Soviet military hardware to replace what it lost in Lebanon during the Israeli invasion last summer.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens, in an interview today on Armed Forces Radio, said Syria was acting now "as if it won't withdraw" but predicted withdrawal talks between Syria and Lebanon would start after the Israeli-Lebanese pact was signed.

He said Syrian President Hafez Assad "was careful enough not to close the door" in balking at Syrian acceptance of the pact.

Hostage crisis

A student from Brentwood East Junior High School, right, runs from the school as he is released Monday night. A former school employee entered the school Monday afternoon, shot a student and the principal and held 18 students hostage.

Student, principal shot when man seizes school

BRENTWOOD, N.Y. (AP) — A mentally ill man who shot and wounded a student and principal, then held 18 students hostage in a social studies classroom before killing himself, was a loser seeking revenge for his dismissal two weeks ago, officials said.

Robert O. Wickes, whose troubled life ended a few minutes before midnight Monday after a siege that terrified students and their parents, had also been watched by the Secret Service for making threats against the Reagan administration, his lawyer said.

Dressed in Army fatigues and carrying a .22-caliber rifle, Wickes held police in this Long Island community at bay for about nine hours. Many of his student hostages became sick or faked illness to gain permission to leave.

Others were released one at a time in return for a local radio station agreeing to play song requests — including the Beatles' "Penny Lane" — and his own "epistle to the world."

Wickes, 24, described as a paranoid schizophrenic, had been angry at East Junior High since May 5, when he was fired as a substitute teacher's aide because of a fight with Louis Borgos, a 15-year-old student.

He returned Monday, Borgos' first day back after a suspension for the incident, and shot him and Stephen Howland, the school principal.

Howland was released from the hospital several hours after the shooting. Borgos was listed in stable condition.

But Wickes, who vowed he was making his "last stand," carried out his suicide threat, shooting himself in the head with his rifle. He was pronounced dead shortly before midnight.

The siege began in Room 201 about 12:45 p.m. with 18 student hostages. Although the students had called Wickes "the big duck" and often made fun of his clothes and mannerisms, no one laughed at him Monday.

"He walked into the classroom with this gun and tried to push our teacher out," said Angelo Bravo, 15. "But before he could, she grabbed the phone and contacted the office. She said 'Call the police.'"

"He told all of us to get down on the floor. We did. We were all pretty scared," Bravo said.

Just then Howland arrived at the door. Bravo said Wickes turned and shot the administrator in the face.

"Then he told everyone to lift up their faces. He saw Louie (Borgos) and asked: 'How long were you suspended?' Louie said, 'One week.' Then he shot Louie."

The wounded youth, shot in the abdomen, gasped for air. "I'm having trouble breathing. Can I leave the room, sir?" asked Borgos.

Wickes approved and Wilfred Mercado, 15, dragged Borgos to safety. None of the other students were hurt.

After he let half the students go for a variety of excuses, Wickes dug in for the long haul.

He issued the "epistle," which said in part: "I cried and no one heard. So now I cry on you, you dirty swine. You turned your back so now I reciprocated, you see...power wins. Even so, I will paint the road with carnage."

His lawyer, Gerald Lotto, said Wickes was a "paranoid schizophrenic" who had been watched by the Secret Service because of threats against Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State George Shultz.

One hurt in Dallas school robbery

DALLAS (AP) — A masked gunman shot and critically wounded a high school cafeteria manager as she handed over more than $1,000 in cash, police said.

Thelma Katherine Rowe, 64, was in critical condition after undergoing surgery Monday at Presbyterian Hospital, officials said.

The robbery and shooting at Lake Highlands High School, in northeast Dallas, took place at 2:05 p.m., about 40 minutes after the last lunch period, police said. No students were present at the time, according to investigators.

Paula Sanders, a 28-year-old co-worker who was helping Mrs. Rowe count the cash, was not injured.

"It happened very, very quickly," Mrs. Sanders said. "It wasn't more than a minute and a half that he was in there."

Mrs. Rowe was helping the gunman put money into a sack when the gun went off, Mrs. Sanders said.

"To me it didn't look intentional," she said. "Obviously it wasn't going quick enough for him, and he was very nervous."

Police said they did not know how the gunman knew the school's procedure for handling cash.

"He evidently had figured out what he was going to do," said investigator Charlie Royal. "While the woman was gathering up the money, he just shot her, apparently without any real motive at all."

Chamber vice president resigns

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Paul Harvel resigned Monday as executive vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce after serving in the job just 13 months.

He will take the same position in Amarillo, the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce announced.

"I'm very disappointed that Paul is going to leave us because he is very talented and capable," said Midland Chamber President Larry Bell. "However, this was an unusual opportunity for a young man of his experience. I don't think he could have or should have done anything else."

Details of the change have not been worked out between Harvel and the two chambers of commerce, but Bell said he thought Harvel would be leaving Midland in about 30 days.

Harvel was not available for comment before press time.

The Midland chamber's executive committee will meet later this week to appoint a search committee, Bell said. That search will probably take 60 to 90 days.

Grant Billingsley will oversee chamber operations in the interim. He is the chamber's general manager and director of economic development.

It was Billingsley who stepped in about 18 months ago during a similar search following the death of chamber executive vice president Fred B. Tyler in 1981.

One of Harvel's most important legacies to the Midland chamber is the creation of a president-elect position for the organization, Bell said. W.P. "Bill" Franklin is serving in that role for 1983-84.

Harvel also instituted broader participation in each chamber committee from its members. As a result, Bell said he sees no problems with continuity or stability of chamber programs.

"With the support of the staff, which is involved in every phase of the chamber's activities and committees, the process can continue without a great deal of interruption," Bell said.

Harvel informed Bell Monday morning of his decision, before driving to Amarillo that afternoon.

Harvel was named to the Amarillo post earlier in the day by that chamber's board of directors, which selected him from a field of 11 finalists.

The Amarillo chamber has about 2,000 members.

"Through various references, we found him to be one of the better chamber 'execs' in the country and we initiated the first contact with him," said Don Renner, general manager of the Amarillo chamber.

Renner has been serving as interim executive vice president of the Amarillo chamber since Jan. 1, following the retirement of the previous executive vice president.

Harvel came to the Midland chamber in March 1982 to replace Fred B. Tyler, who died Sept. 26, 1981. He had held the same position with the Enid, Okla., Chamber of Commerce. He has 14 years experience in chamber work, primarily in Arkansas and Oklahoma.

During his brief tenure in Midland, Harvel emphasized strengthening the chamber's conventions and visitors bureau and improving airline service to the East and West-coasts from Midland Regional Air Terminal.

More advertising dollars and additional staff were allocated to attracting convention business to Midland in 1982. An audio-visual, multi-screen color presentation about the city's virtues was commissioned and is now being shown to potential convention groups around the state.

According to Bell, the chamber is still working on improving air service for Midland, but that goal has been delayed by the turn of events in the local and national economy, which has affected air travel in general.

Other changes during Harvel's tenure included establishing Clean Midland Inc., a program to help residents keep the city clean, and adding an additional person, Randle Lee, to the chamber's economic development department.

Crowd cheers Houston daredevil

HOUSTON (AP) — Spectators gasped as a masked climber made a springboard for himself 68 stories up the side of a glistening office tower, then leaped toward the pavement — only to open a parachute and drift safely down.
"Let him go. Let him go," hundreds of onlookers chanted as the daredevil, later identified as 21-year-old David Adcock, was grabbed by police after his unauthorized climb Monday up the 71-story Allied Bank Tower.
With a flourish before the dramatic fall, the climber in a blue fright wig unfurled the U.S. and Texas flags and left them flying in the breeze on the building's side.
He then pulled a large board from his knapsack and inserted it into a slot of the building. Then he stood on the board, waved to spectators below and jumped.

"I feel great. I feel great," he shouted.
The climber, whose ascent took about 15 hours, made a dash for freedom into a nearby parking garage after landing. But four officers quickly grabbed him and whisked him through the spectators.
"He seems like a pretty nice guy," said M.A. Peaco, one of the officers.
Adcock was charged with evading arrest and criminal trespassing, said Kay Burkhalter of the district attorney's office.
Bond was set at $10,000 on each charge because Adcock was serving 18 months probation for a similar offense last year on the West coast, Ms. Burkhalter said, adding that details were not immediately available.
Adcock's mother, Carol Stanley of Houston, said her son leaped from El Capitan in California's Yosemite National Park last summer and "promised me he would never do it again." In Monday's incident, she said, he had refused her offer to post bail.

Adcock was Houston's second "urban mountaineer" in less than three months. On March 14, Ron Broyles, a Hollywood stunt man, scaled the 75-story Texas Commerce Tower, the tallest skyscraper west of the Mississippi River.
In addition to the wig and mask, Adcock wore a blue and white cap with a Texas flag on the front and a blue jumpsuit.
Ms. Stanley said her son told her he was making the suit for a masquerade. "I guess maybe his home ec (economics) teacher would be proud," she said.
The climber first noticed making his ascent at about 5:30 a.m., used three suction cups in his assault on the city's second-tallest building, which is under construction but partially occupied.

The cups — two on his hands, attached to a harness around his waist, and a third which he used as a stirrup, where the type used by glass handlers. A vacuum is created by pumping with one's thumb, said the building's property manager, Tom Laughlin.
Adcock explained during his climb that he was spiraling the building rather than going straight up, to ensure that he covered 1,000 feet — since the building is just 970 feet.
"We ain't got no big buildings in Dallas and I had to climb one, so I came here," the climber shouted.
Laughlin said he was not surprised by the attempt to scale the building.
"I've kind of been expecting it" since Broyles climbed the Texas Commerce Tower, he said.

Reagan again calls for 'deterrent'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says a nuclear holocaust that would mean "the end of the line for all of us," will inevitably engulf the world unless the two superpowers reduce the number of warheads pointed at each other.
Reagan coupled his statement on the need for arms control Monday with a plea for congressional approval of the huge MX missile, weighing 192,000 pounds, carrying 10 nuclear warheads and with a range of 8,000 miles.
"I know it sounds silly — to build a missile in order to get rid of missiles," said Reagan. "But we're very dangerously close to not having the deterrent that we need to keep the other fellow from using his, or at least using them for blackmail."
Speaking to an audience of business leaders, Reagan expressed frustration that some critics have questioned whether he is as committed to arms control as he is to the MX.
"I do want arms control," Reagan said.

"I can't believe that this world can go on beyond our generation and on down to succeeding generations with this kind of weapon on both sides, poised at each other, without someday, some fool, or some maniac, or some accident triggering the kind of war that is the end of the line for all of us," the president said.
He added, "I just think of what a sigh of relief would go up from everyone on this earth if someday — and this is what I have, my hope way in the back of my head — if we start down the road to reduction, maybe one day in doing that, somebody will say, why not all the way. Let's get rid of all these things."
Reagan spoke on the eve of today's meeting by the House Appropriations Committee, which was slated to vote on whether to release money already approved — but frozen last year — for the Pentagon to develop and test the MX.
Last week the Senate Appropriations Committee and the House Appropriations defense subcommittee voted by large margins to permit the money to be spent. The full Senate may begin debating the issue late this week.

In advance of that debate, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., announced formation Monday of a "national mobilization" campaign to halt congressional approval of the MX missile. Former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance also urged scrapping the MX on Monday, in testimony before a House defense appropriations subcommittee.
Reagan's statement about the possibility of a nuclear war was more pessimistic than opinions expressed last week by members of a presidential commission that evaluated U.S. strategic forces.
Brent Scowcroft, the head of the commission and onetime White House national security adviser, was asked during an appearance before the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee whether chances of a nuclear war are better or worse than they were 10 years ago.
"On the whole, I'm fairly optimistic" that such a war can be avoided, Scowcroft replied. Former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger, another commission member, answered the same question by saying, "I am highly optimistic" that war can be avoided.

By contrast, he said, the Soviet Union deployed more than 1,200 warheads last year on intercontinental ballistic missiles.
"So, we've had a price, or paid a price for our past unilateral restraint and indecision," said Reagan. "Our self-restraint has left the Soviet Union with far less incentive to negotiate arms reduction."
He said the "growing imbalance in strategic forces has weakened the credibility of our nuclear deterrent."
The United States, said Reagan, must "modernize to the point that there is a deterrent, that he (the Soviets) knows the damage to himself would be too great to risk pushing the button. And then, with that taken care of, we start down to an equal and verifiable limit on both sides."
He said Congress, in deciding the fate of the MX, will "determine whether or not our deterrence — the key to peace in the nuclear age — will be strengthened."
Urging the businessmen to lobby their congressmen, Reagan said, "lean on them, do anything you can to persuade them that we must have this."

No breakthroughs anticipated in arms talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The United States opened a new round of arms talks with the Soviet Union today, but its latest offer to set equal limits on nuclear warheads in Europe already had met with Soviet criticism.
American analysts say they don't expect any breakthrough in the 18-month-old negotiations until the Soviets are confronted more directly with the scheduled December deployment of a dozen U.S. ground-launched cruise missiles in Britain and West Germany.
Today's meeting was at the Soviet mission and chief U.S. delegate Paul H. Nitze spoke first, outlining the new offer. The next session will be Thursday in the American office, with top Soviet negotiator Yuli A. Kvitsinsky starting the discussion.
A U.S. official who spoke on condition he remain anonymous described the new round of talks as a "dialogue in which we are trying to get a mutually acceptable equal number of warheads. There is no hidden agenda."
Nitze will ask Kvitsinsky to suggest where to place the ceiling, he said. American strategists are thinking in terms of about 300 warheads on both sides.
But Kvitsinsky already has criticized the U.S. proposal as no real departure from President Reagan's initial "zero-option" plan, and administration officials predict little headway in the new round of negotiations.
The Soviets want to prevent any new U.S. missile deployment in Europe and say 162 missiles possessed by Britain and France should be included in any count of nuclear arms available to the West.
Reagan initially wanted the Soviets to scrap all of their SS-20 rockets, but is now willing to settle for an interim agreement in which the Soviets would retain a fraction of them.
Neutralizing the Soviets' triple-warhead mobile SS-20 missiles was the principal goal of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization when it approved the American missile deployment.

The plan calls for deployment of 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Britain, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Italy beginning in December 1983 unless significant progress is made in disarmament negotiations.
The United States would be able to match the number of warheads on the SS-20s between its Pershing 2 and cruise missiles.
Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov has called for cross-the-board equality in missiles, warheads and bombers, including the 162 French and British missiles along with the U.S. rockets.

For the next 15 hours, many of the youths stood in line for identity checks and more than 100 were bused off to jail.
On Monday the government announced that 304 "common criminals" in La Victoria and two other Santiago slums had been arrested, bringing to 621 the number jailed since Wednesday. It also asked criminal courts to charge 10 leaders of the copper miners union, which orchestrated the protests, with "inciting subversion."

national protest" that marked the first widespread demonstrations against Gen. Augusto Pinochet's 9½-year-old military government.
In La Victoria, a local taxi driver, 22-year-old Andres Fuentes, was shot to death in the doorway of his home by a policeman apparently provoked by youths throwing rocks from behind flaming barricades in the streets.
The incident was only one of many confrontations throughout Chile during the day, but in La Victoria it brought a painful sequel.

Tension prevails at scene of Chilean raid

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Until last week, the people of La Victoria felt forgotten victims of Chile's recession. Today they are angry about an army-led raid that turned their muddy slum into a focus of political tension.
"There is a climate of tension and indignation here that makes me fear the worst is yet to come," said the Rev. Pierre Dubois, a French priest in the neighborhood 10 miles south of downtown Santiago.
The confrontation began last Wednesday, during a "day of ing to identify the congregations. Apparently unaware that the bodies had been found, Hamilton returned to the motel Monday morning for the "resurrection," Johnson said. He was arrested while waiting for a key to the padlocked room.

Frequently quoting passages from the Bible, Hamilton appeared "very calm and very cognizant of what he had done," Johnson said.
"He believed his actions were justified because the Lord had given him a command," he said. "He has a real strict but twisted interpretation of the Bible."
The family had lived at the motel since September, but the managers told Hamilton on Thursday that they would have to leave for failing to pay rent, Johnson said.

Mrs. Hamilton was found in the shower stall and the infant had been wrapped in a blanket and put in a closet.
"They had a maid service go by once a week but they apparently thought the stench was just from bad housekeeping," Johnson said.
Managers were away from the motel and did not return phone calls.
Hamilton told investigators he beat his son to death Feb. 12 and strangled his wife two months later because she had been influenced by other church members he was convinced were practicing voodoo, Johnson said.

The Harris County Medical Examiner's office said Monday night that no ruling on the cause of death had been made yet because the bodies were so badly decomposed.
Johnson said he was uncertain whether Mrs. Hamilton had tried to leave after the death of her son.
"He had certain rules that he made her live under — her methods of dress, eating habits, her contacts with people on the outside," Johnson said. "We don't know whether she was a disciple of his or just exactly why she didn't leave."

'Preacher' charged in deaths of wife, son

HOUSTON (AP) — A self-described preacher with a "twisted" interpretation of the Bible admitted strangling his wife and fatally beating his infant son, hoping to cleanse them of demons and return weeks later for their resurrection, a detective says.
Benny Hamilton was charged Monday night with two counts of murder and held in the Harris County Jail without bond, said Kay Burkhalter of the district attorney's office.
The decomposed remains of his 27-year-old wife, Marilyn Ann Hamilton, and their 10-month-old son, Steve Christian Hamilton, were found Friday at a southeast Houston motel where the family had lived eight months, homicide detective Ken Johnson said.

"He believed they were possessed by demons and under the influence of witchcraft and was convinced the Lord wanted him to kill them to get rid of the evil spirits," Johnson said.
"He said the Lord also assured him that they would rise from the dead on May 16 and that it would be the miracle of the 20th century," he said.
Hamilton, 36, claimed he had worked as a "wandering or guest" preacher at two churches in the Houston area, Johnson said, declining to identify the congregations. Apparently unaware that the bodies had been found, Hamilton returned to the motel Monday morning for the "resurrection," Johnson said. He was arrested while waiting for a key to the padlocked room.

Frequently quoting passages from the Bible, Hamilton appeared "very calm and very cognizant of what he had done," Johnson said.

SHREVEPORT — The Midland Cubs were held to two hits in seven innings by Shreveport's Dave Wilhelm as the Captains downed the Cubs 4-2.

Wilhelm threw a no-hitter earlier this month. Midland scored one run in the eighth and ninth off reliever John Violette, who finished up to earn the save.

Trey Brooks accounted for one of the Cubs runs with a solo shot in the ninth. Carlos Gil fell to 3-3 as he went the distance for Midland.

Bryan Snyder hit a two-run homer in the first for Shreveport and John Stevenson, the TL's leading batter with a .421 average, drove home two runs with singles in the fifth and seventh innings.

Rebel's King is now Queen

Lee High School's Yshun King will be attending Howard College where she will play basketball for the Hawk Queens according to coach Don Stevens.

The 5-foot-8 King started three years for the Rebels and helped lead the team to a district championship last season. She was named District 4-5A sophomore of the year followed by all-district selections her junior and senior years.

"Yshun is a great athlete," Stevens said. "She is strong, quick and aggressive with the great coordination and leaping ability. Her natural talent should enable her to improve into a good college player."

As a senior, King scored 12.5 points and grabbed 7.9 rebounds-per-game in leading the Rebels to a 24-6 record.

SCRATCHPAD

NFL's Raiders get bonus baby; Rash may scratch Sunny's Halo

The Los Angeles Raiders picked up a free agent only hours before the NFL college draft with the arrival of Alexander Trent LoCasale. Al LoCasale, the team's executive assistant, and his wife, Jananne, released an "All-Star Talent Report" on their second son.

"A blue-chip prospect all the way," the report said of the 1-foot-7 1/2-inch, 8-pound-14-ounce wide receiver-cornback born 1:22 a.m., PDT, April 26. "A bonus pick for the Raiders. A real sleeper at this stage. Slippery and elusive. Great hands and moves, has all the wiggles, tough to cover," said the announcement, which also listed his primary weakness ("tendency to allow himself to be held") and his strength ("loves contact").

Horse Racing

Kentucky Derby winner, Sunny's Halo, is being hampered by a case of ringworm rash and may be scratched from Saturday's Preakness, the second jewel of the Triple Crown. "We might not be able to start him," trainer David Cross said, "but things look much rosier now. The rash hasn't spread since Sunday I believe we have it under control now." Cross said that various antibiotics had been tried after consultation with three specialists and his own veterinarian.

UT News

Sports Information Director James Ramsey of the University of Texas has announced his retirement, effective Aug. 31. Ramsey, who reached retirement age of 62 in February, will relinquish the job he has held since January 1961. Bill Little, an assistant sports information director at UT since 1968, is a leading candidate to replace Ramsey.

Football

The USFL, moving toward its goal of a 16-team league by next year, awarded an expansion franchise to San Diego Monday.

The Minnesota Vikings and St. Louis Cardinals will play the first American professional football game in Europe when they meet in a pre-season game at historic Wembley Stadium in London on Aug. 6. Wembley Stadium was opened by King George V in 1923 and was the host stadium for the 1948 Olympic Games. "It's a rare opportunity for both fans and players to be part of some thing that has never been done before," said Vikings Coach Bud Grant. "We have a responsibility to show off our sport in the best possible light, and we want to make sure the players are as ready as possible to do just that. We want to show those fans over there just how enjoyable American pro football can be."

Baseball

Darrell Evans of the San Francisco Giants and Luis Leal of the Toronto Blue Jays have been named their leagues Player of the Week.

Evans hit .440 with two doubles, three homers and seven RBI as the Giants won five of six games during the week. His slugging percentage for the week was .800 and he had an on-base percentage of .533.

Leal, a right-hander, earned two victories in two starts, allowing only three hits in 14 innings, including five no-hit innings against the Cleveland Indians. Leal's ERA for the week was 0.64.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices lapsed into a broad decline Monday after hopes for lower interest rates suffered a setback. Financial issues that normally respond quickly to changes in interest-rate expectations posted some of the day's biggest losses.

50 years of Arab production remembered

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — The Arabian American Oil Co., the historical backbone of the "special relationship" between Saudi Arabia and the United States, Monday celebrated the 50th anniversary of the start of Saudi oil production by inaugurating a new ultramodern research and control center in the presence of visiting King Fahd.

After half a century in business, Aramco today remains probably the soundest pillar of that relationship, having largely escaped the political strains resulting from what is widely viewed here as the strong pro-Israeli "tilt" in U.S. policy toward the Middle East.

Aramco originally was a partnership between four U.S. petroleum companies and the government of a nonindustrialized desert kingdom. Its earnings have placed the four companies among the largest seven U.S. industrial corporations, according to the annual Fortune magazine survey. To the Saudis, Aramco has provided perhaps the world's largest single money faucet — at times as much as $250 million a day in oil revenues.

Although now 100 percent owned by the Saudi government, Aramco still bears the same name it was first given back in 1944 and its president, chairman and many other top officials remain American. Even the formal agreement by which the four American partners — Exxon, Mobil, Texaco and Soconal — turned over effective ownership to the kingdom in 1976 has yet to be signed by the king.

This mutually beneficial agreement was enhanced by continuing cooperation between the U.S. companies — often backed up by Washington diplomacy — and Saudi leaders headed by the ruling royal house of Saud.

"Aramco, unlike most multinationals, knew how to cooperate with the host government," remarked Ismael Nuwab, the company's Saudi head of public relations.

The only hint of top level change at Monday's ceremony came when oil minister Sheikh Zaki Yamani said that a Saudi would take over before the end of the year from Aramco's current president, Hugh Goerner, who is due to retire. The leading Saudi candidate for the post is Ali Naimi, presently Aramco's executive vice president.

The ceremony, inside a giant complex of granite and glass-covered walls housing the Middle East's most advanced computerized oil research center, took place within eyesight of the kingdom's first oil well known as "Damman No. 7" which is still producing 12,000 barrels a day.

Since Standard Oil of California (Socal) signed its first concession for exploration on May 29, 1933, Aramco has produced more than 46 billion barrels of oil and grown to become the world's largest producing company with a daily capacity of roughly 12 million barrels.

Its present output has been slashed to a third or less of that, however, because of the world oil glut, creating the first serious financial squeeze on the kingdom's coffers in a decade and a sharp cutback in its mammoth $235 billion five-year development plan. The government has announced a budget deficit of more than $10 billion this year, though outside analysts estimate it could run twice as high.

There was hardly an air of crisis or even deep concern Monday, however, as the king, accompanied by Crown Prince Abdullah and various other royal family members, toured the interior of the heavily guarded complex which also contains a master control center for all of the kingdom's oil and gas production as well as the eastern province's electrical power.

The king is here on his first visit to this politically sensitive region since his accession to the throne 11 months ago. Site of the kingdom's entire oil wells, it has a large Shiite population which is daily subjected to exhortations to revolt from Iran's Islamic fundamentalist religious leaders.

Officially called the Exploration and Petroleum Engineering Center, the huge new complex on the north side of Aramco's sprawling American-style compound will be used among other things to study ways of increasing the rate of recovery in Aramco's numerous oil fields. The aim is to improve scientific management partly by making use of colored computer models of each deposit.

In his speech, Naimi stressed the importance of the center's work in this field, noting that "even a modest increase in the oil recovery factor" could boost the Saudis' recoverable reserves by more than all of those remaining in the United States, presently estimated at roughly 23 billion barrels.

Right now the kingdom's reserves are put at 165 billion barrels, more than one-quarter of the world's total. But the average recovery factor, or the percentage of oil that can be extracted from any given field with today's technology, is only 30 to 35 percent.

Head of TWPC advises women to get involved

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

As one who says she grew up in a culture with different rules for females and males, Lena Guerrero of Austin looked for a way to uplift women and found politics.

Now, she is seeking to involve other women in her cause.

"I grew up in South Texas in an area that was stricken with poverty and unemployment, in an area that I felt had little recourse for itself unless its people stood against those things...they could do something about," Ms. Guerrero recalled in a Monday news conference in Midland, where she spoke to Texas Women's Political Caucus. "(There) as a little bit of anger, because I grew up in a culture that separated women from men, and boys could do anything and girls couldn't."

"I think a combination of those things said to me that if I were here to live life, then I should perhaps be involved in effecting the changes needed for a good life...I couldn't think of a single thing that is not affected by politics in one way or another."

Now nearing the end of her one-year reign as chair of the state TWPC, Ms. Guerrero said she has kept busy organizing local TWPC chapters and encouraging further political participation by women.

"We've been told for a long time that (a political women's caucus) just wouldn't come together in a place like the Permian Basin, and we proved it wrong," said the owner of an Austin advertising agency which specializes in political consulting and political media relations.

Women, said Ms. Guerrero, are making continued strides in the state political process. "Our most recent successes were in November. We felt it very important to elect a woman to a statewide position and (current State Treasurer Ann) Richards was our targeted, number one candidate. Our goal was not just to elect her but be able to prove that then women (who) voted substantially for Ann in the November election made a difference."

They did, she said. "(Richards) was the second highest vote-getter in the state of Texas. Exit polls...found that somewhere about 155,000 more women voted in the state in 1982 than men, and we feel like (we had) significant impact...having a woman on the ballot."

TWPC, she said, currently is involved in lobbying the legislature for passage of legislation regarding child support, teen-age pregnancies and rape. Additionally, TWPC is "working seriously with the governor's office — and very successfully, I think — to appoint women to significant positions, on boards and commissions, on the state level."

The state chairman said that women across the nation "have been able to prove...that we are as able, as capable, as organized, as significant to serve in the public process" as men.

While some political analysts once observed that wives merely echoed the votes of their husbands, such is not always the case today, she said. "I think that husbands and wives...continue to discuss politics in the home. I think that more and more women are becoming more politically involved and more politically aware of the issues that involve the candidates. And I think more and more women are perhaps even affecting the vote in the home to the men."

Ms. Guerrero added that she believes 1984 presidential candidates "will have to talk about, as Ronald Reagan did, appointing a woman to the Supreme Court, about appointing a woman to the cabinet, about involving more women in the process and bringing more women to the forefront of solving problems for America."

Trucker fighting ticket

Can subpoena other tickets

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

A Midland man fighting a truck traffic ticket he received March 17 must be allowed access to the disposition of other tickets issued on Missouri and Louisiana avenues the week of March 14, a Municipal Court judge ruled Monday.

Judge Michael A. Abrams II ruled against a motion by the city which asked the judge to quash a subpoena for information regarding the legal outcome of the citations.

Abrams also ruled the city must produce additional arguments before he will consider quashing two other subpoenas by the defendant, one calling for access to the tickets and the other summoning city Councilman Tom Sloan as a witness concerning Midland truck ordinances.

Charles "Buddy" Kniffen said he's fighting the ticket "for the principle of the thing," because a 1960 ordinance prohibiting trucks with a standard maximum load capacity of more than one-half ton from traveling on Missouri and Louisiana was randomly and improperly enforced during the week of March 14.

He said the ordinance is "extremely vague and ambiguous" and had not been enforced for more than 20 years.

The defendant was cited for "knowingly driving off a truck route" while traveling in a one-ton delivery truck in the 1700 block of Missouri March 17.

Kniffen, terminal manager for Merchants Freight Lines, said trucks were ticketed by size rather than load capacity and added that some residents — who are exempt under the ordinance — were improperly ticketed. He said some of the tickets were later waived, while others were enforced.

He also maintains that Sloan, who lives on Missouri, used his influence to gain enforcement of the ordinance on the street bordering his home.

Sloan said he asked the police to enforce the ordinance, but only because it would help prevent undue wear on residential streets and help nurse the city's street-repair budget.

Assistant City Attorney Jack Connors, arguing in favor of the quash motions, said the status of the citations and access to the tickets are "immaterial to the defendant's defense. It's irrelevant who else got a ticket for the same offense Mr. Kniffen got a ticket for."

Connors also argued that Sloan's presence as a witness at the upcoming trial was not necessary for the defendant's defense.

But Kniffen said Sloan's knowledge and concern about city truck ordinances make his testimony pertinent to the case. He said the tickets are necessary to show that the ordinance was improperly and unevenly enforced.

Abrams said the disposition of traffic tickets, recorded on the Municipal Court docket, is public record. He instructed the court to assist Kniffen in obtaining the appropriate information.

He said the city must submit written arguments regarding motions to quash the remaining two subpoenas.

"As I read the law," Abrams told Kniffen, "you are entitled to these things and the city is asking for something very unusual." Abrams also told Connors that he believes Kniffen "has a right to that information."

Abrams said the city should submit its written arguments within a week. He also gave Kniffen until the end of the month to offer written statements in support of his subpoenas.

A trial date originally was scheduled for May 11. Citing time needed to answer subpoenas, the city was granted a continuance on an earlier motion and the case is set for jury trial July 19.

From sliding into bases to sliding his bow, Randy Brice, 11, had no time to change clothes before appearing in a concert performed by fourth through sixth graders at Al G. Langford Chaparral Center Monday night. Randy, son of Ron and Linda Brice of 2905 Rebel, cut a Little League baseball game early to make his concert. About 325 students from the Midland Independent School District performed in the "Spring Strings" show. Randy is a fifth grader at Rusk.

A giant helium-filled balloon carrying a payload of scientific equipment dwarfs a workman as it rises from a launch station near Palestine. Two balloons, which scientists hoped to use to measure ozone and other chemicals in the stratosphere, were damaged Monday, cancelling the international scientific inquiry.

Study of ozone layer has been canceled

PALESTINE (AP) — The failure of two $55,000 helium-filled balloons damaged sensitive equipment worth more than $1 million and canceled a mission to study the Earth's ozone layer, the space agency said.

One of the 800-foot-high, 450-foot wide balloons wrapped around some trees on launch Monday and the second began leaking halfway through its ascent.

Launches of two other balloons Monday afternoon then were scrubbed, said Keith Hazlewood, engineering director for the National Balloon Launch Center, run by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Each of the balloons carried two tons of scientific instruments to measure ozone in the stratosphere, along with dozens of other chemical compounds that could be depleting ozone levels.

An investigation was under way into the failures, which were not particularly unusual, Hazlewood said in a telephone interview Monday night.

"NASA funds this balloon facility as a moderate risk facility and 85 to 90 percent rate is acceptable," he said. "The launch today is part of the 10 or 15 percent of failures we have every year."

Ozone protects the Earth from the sun's ultraviolet radiation. Some chemicals — notably fluorocarbons used as refrigerants and propellants in some aerosol cans — can deplete the ozone.

The tests are part of an international inquiry into the causes and extent of ozone damage in the stratosphere. Scientists from around the world have gathered at the Palestine facility.

The balloons were being launched simultaneously Monday morning when holes were spotted in the lower part of one of them, said Bob Kububa, head of operations.

The balloon's $1 million payload was not yet airborne, but its safety cables snapped, dumping the equipment on concrete, Kububa said. The balloon then blew into some nearby trees.

The second balloon climbed to 70,000 feet, 60,000 feet short of its destination, then began leaking, Hazlewood said.

That balloon's payload descended by parachute and was recovered in good condition near Center, about 100 miles to the east, he said.

The gondola of the first balloon sustained heavy damage, said Bob Watson, science coordinator for the project.

Farmer testifies against nuclear waste dumping site

HEREFORD (AP) — A Panhandle farmer says that this small agricultural town could erupt in guerilla warfare, if federal officials decide to bury high-level nuclear waste under some nearby farmland.

"There are people, ordinary God-fearing people, who will fight you to their final breath to keep the dump site from opening here," Dale Kleuskens told U.S. Energy Department officials at a hearing Monday night.

Farmers and cattlemen in this rich, agricultural region oppose the waste site, and about 600 area residents attended the hearing in the Hereford High School auditorium.

The Deaf Smith County site is one of nine the Energy Department is considering for the $8 billion project, which would be used to bury almost 1.5 million pounds of nuclear waste each year a half mile underground.

A second hearing is scheduled today in nearby Tulia, which is also under consideration for a waste site.

The government plan would bury the waste in shafts drilled near the Ogallala aquifer, which supplies irrigation water for the High Plains.

Witnesses: Sharp upset

OZONA (AP) — Several witnesses have testified that capital murder defendant Michael Eugene Sharp was upset and angry just before and after a Kermit woman and her two daughters were kidnapped from a car wash.

The testimony came Monday in Sharp's trial for the June 1982 slaying of Brenda Kay Broadway, 31, whose body was found in a remote grave.

Lee Armijo of Jal, N.M., testified that Sharp, 29, was "very upset" when he left a Kermit nightclub on June 10, just hours before the trio was abducted.

Sharp, a business client of Ms. Armijo, had asked her out "three or four times" before she agreed to meet him June 10, she said. But Sharp stormed out of the club after she refused to accompany him to Odessa, said Ms. Armijo, a sales representative for a Kermit welding company.
