Texas Stadium fire

IRVING — A three-alarm fire that raged Wednesday evening at Texas Stadium severely damaged a dozen luxury suites and set about 10 rows of general admission seats ablaze. Irving Fire Battalion Chief Jimmy Sims said the fire damaged seven suites on the lower level and five on the upper level. Three more sustained extensive water damage.

Court grants stay

HUNTSVILLE — Texas prosecutors filed a last-minute motion Wednesday to challenge a Vermont man's execution reprieve issued six hours before he was to be executed for robbing and fatally stabbing an Alabama man.

Judge OKs march

BEAUMONT — A federal district judge Wednesday cleared the way for a Mississippi-based white supremacist group to march through the East Texas town of Vidor to protest integration of an all-white housing project. U.S. District Judge Richard Schell found a Vidor city parade ordinance, which could have been used to block the Saturday march, unconstitutional.

City tries to put scenic biking, hiking trail on track

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A scenic biking/hiking trail amid native greenery and landscaping may provide a gateway between an elementary school, park, church and community services center.

"It's beautification. It's enhancement. It's an alternative transportation form at its best," said George Logan, the city's director of community services.

Reality of the project depends on the city's application for a grant from the Statewide Transportation Enhancement Program fund of the Department of Transportation.

Midland's proposed trail would run about 1.6 miles along the Mulberry Draw from DeZavala Elementary School to Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Community Park.

If the pilot program becomes a reality and a success, hopefully it will be expanded, said Glen Hackler, assistant city manager.

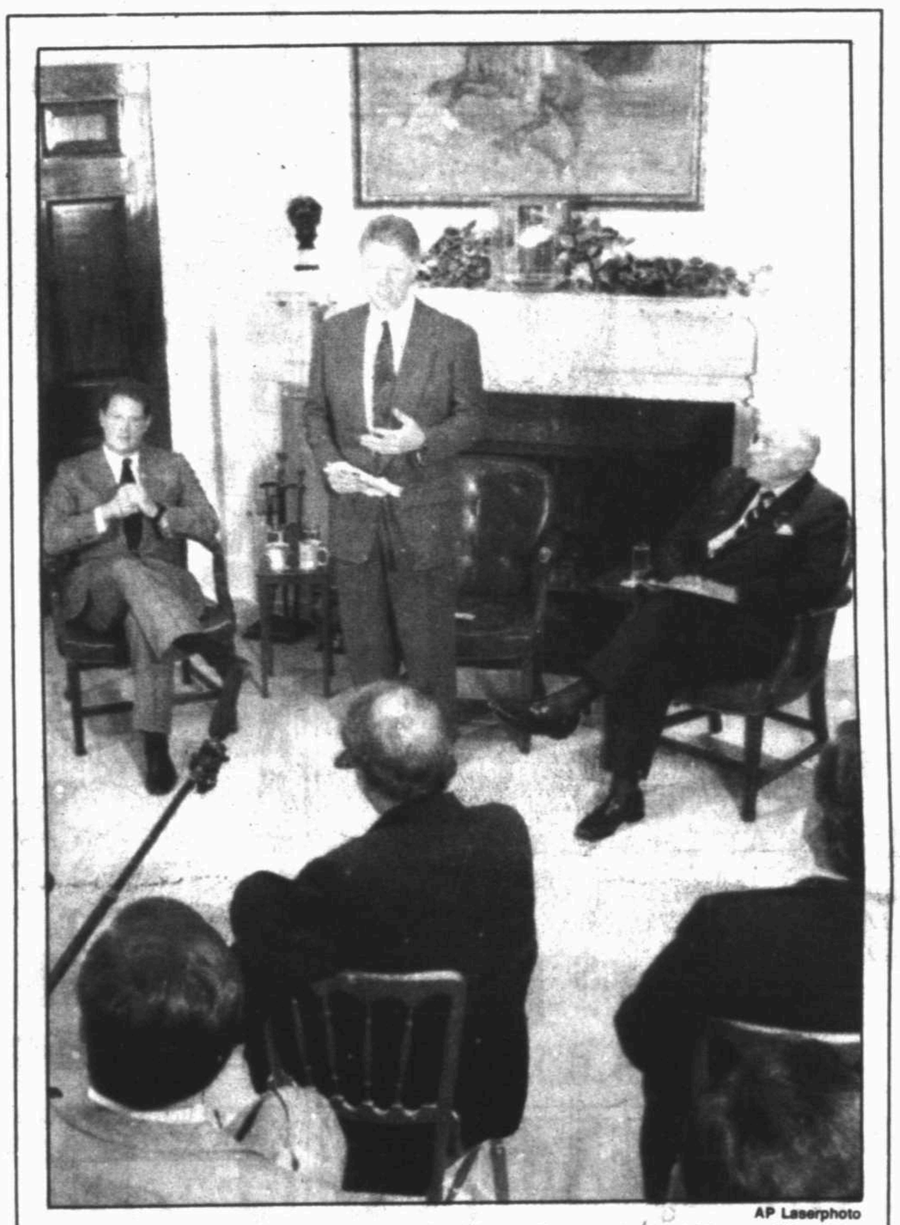

"It's all part of a master plan that could include up to 25 miles of trails in the city," Hackler said.

"I think that a lot of people that bicycle and walk use the streets now. There's an indication in Midland that there's literally thousands of bikers and walkers," he said.

So the plan would offer an off-road, safer alternative to those bikers and pedestrians.

The concrete trails would be wide enough for bikers and walkers — about 10 to 12 feet wide — and would be coupled with native vegetation to control

Vote by U.N. gives Haiti 5 days to yield

■ Security Council resolution mandates oil, arms embargo, freezing of country's assets overseas.

By Paul Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

UNITED NATIONS — The U.N. Security Council reimposed an oil and arms embargo on Haiti on Wednesday because the Haitian army and police were violating the agreement under which deposed President Jean-Bernard Aristide was supposed to return to power at the end of this month.

But the Council has given the Haitian authorities until Monday to reverse the campaign of violence they have unleashed in the capital of Port-au-Prince.

This violence had the effect Tuesday of forcing the United States to pull back a troop ship carrying American and Canadian military advisers for a U.N. peacekeeping force.

Wednesday's unanimous council vote underscores the difficulties that have arisen in returning Haiti to democratic rule. Unless the military in Haiti makes an abrupt about-face, which most diplomats doubt, it is now impossible to conceive of Aristide, 40, a Roman Catholic priest, returning to power in Haiti on Oct. 31.

And it calls into question the $1 billion aid package the United States has helped assemble to strengthen Haiti's feeble economy.

The troop ship Harlan County, carrying 194 American and 25 Canadian peacekeeping soldiers, pulled out of Military chief hedges offer to step down

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The chief of Haiti's military promised Wednesday to step down if lawmakers approve a general amnesty and said U.N. troops thwarted from landing in Haiti could enter if they left their automatic weapons behind.

Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras also called President Clinton "very ill-informed" about efforts to restore democracy in the country.

Cedras spoke at a news conference where he signaled a willingness to return power to ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, but set conditions for the transition that were unlikely to be accepted by the United Nations. Cedras led the army in a September 1991 coup against Aristide.

His statement came hours before the United Nations Security Council voted to impose an oil and arms embargo unless the military leaders adhere to an accord to restore democracy by Monday.

The resolution also raises the possibility of unspecified "additional measures" but did not authorize the use of force. Previous sanctions are seen as having pres-

Low clouds, autumn chill begin exit; highs to rebound into 80s

Staff report

The low clouds, chilly air and damp conditions Wednesday will begin to fade from view today as the last remnants of a Pacific cold front move out of the Permian Basin.

Wednesday's late autumn conditions were caused by the front that moved into the area late Tuesday night, said a spokesman for the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The incoming cold air mixed with the area's warm conditions, resulting in a low-cloud cover that lasted most of the day and provided drizzly conditions during morning hours.

Temperatures were about 10 degrees below normal, with the high reaching only 71. The low Tuesday night dipped to 55.

High court hears arguments in 2 key discrimination cases

By Linda Greenhouse
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court wrestled with two of the term's most important discrimination cases Wednesday, and for many minutes during the two intense hours of argument it was Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg's courtroom.

The newest justice, who spent the first part of her legal career fighting and helping to define sex discrimination, brought some of an advocate's passion to the day's arguments.

One case asks the court to decide what constitutes sexual harassment on the job. The question in the other case is whether the Civil Rights Act of 1991, which strengthened the basic federal law against employment discrimination, should be applied retroactively to lawsuits that

Experiment suggests listening to Mozart boosts intelligence

By Malcolm W. Browne
N.Y. Times News Service

Can it be that the music of Mozart is not only exalting but can also improve intelligence?

An experiment on students at the University of California at Irvine suggests that listening to 10 minutes of Mozart's piano music significantly improves performance in intelligence tests taken immediately afterward.

The finding is being reported Thursday in the British scientific journal Nature by researchers from the university.

The researchers found that after students listened to Mozart's Sonata for Two Pianos in D Major (K. 448), as performed by Murray Perahia and Radu Lupu, their test scores were a mean of eight or nine points higher than the scores the same students achieved after listening to a re-

Officials: Arafat urges Israel to make peace with Syria

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Yasser Arafat urged Israel to make peace with Syria, which he hopes will strengthen his accord with the Jewish state and help end opposition to it within the PLO, officials said Wednesday.

Hanan Ashrawi, spokeswoman for the Palestinian delegation to the Mideast peace talks, said the PLO chairman made the appeal to Yossi Beilin, Israel's deputy foreign minister, during a meeting Tuesday night.

"Arafat insisted on the need to accomplish a comprehensive peace in the Middle East," said Ashrawi, who attended the meeting.

She also quoted Arafat as urging Israel to make some goodwill gestures to Syria to spur the peace process. She did not elaborate.

Arafat and Beilin also discussed means to implement the peace accord between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, said Ashrawi and Danny Sadeh, Beilin's spokesman.

Beilin is in Tunis for a meeting of the committee discussing the fate of Palestinian refugees within the framework of the U.S.-sponsored Mideast peace talks.

Ashrawi said Arafat and Beilin agreed on the need to speed up implementation of the Sept. 13 peace agreement "to maintain the momentum created by the signing of the accord."

Arafat also told Beilin that Israel should make some goodwill gestures to the Palestinians by releasing some of the 11,000 Palestinian prisoners it holds and returning the hundreds of Palestinians it has deported, she said.

Within the PLO, there is fierce opposition to the peace plan, which would begin Palestinian self-rule in the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho, and foresees a permanent accord based on Israeli withdrawal from occupied lands.

Two Marxist Palestinian factions, meanwhile, have formed a joint command to strengthen their challenge to Arafat, a senior official from one group said in Amman, Jordan.

Abdul Rahim Mallouh of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said his group and the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine set up the 14-member command earlier this week. Its base is Damascus, the Syrian capital, he said.

U.S. presidential envoy demands pilot's freedom

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — A U.S. presidential envoy made it plain Wednesday that Washington wouldn't bargain for captured U.S. pilot Michael Durant, as his Somali captors retreated to consider the demand that he be freed at once.

"We will not buy prisoners," said Robert Oakley, the former U.S. ambassador to this Horn of Africa nation.

Oakley did not rule out a U.S. rescue mission to free Durant. But he hinted that Durant's ordeal was almost over.

Somali fighters seized the chief warrant officer after his helicopter was shot down during a fierce Oct. 3 battle that killed up to 18 U.S. soldiers.

Oakley met earlier with members of the Somali National Alliance, the clan-based political group holding Durant and a Nigerian peacekeeper.

The political group is loyal to warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, whose arrest is sought by the United Nations for killing 24 Pakistani peacekeepers in ambushes last June. Aidid's people are blamed for killing at least 121 peacekeepers.

The Somali National Alliance met to dicuss Oakley's request for Durant's freedom and was expected to make a statement shortly, alliance sources said.

The Alliance was reported split over freeing Durant and the Nigerian or insisting the United Nations first free 32 Somali prisoners, including four key Aidid aides.

Oakley, who arrived Sunday in quest of a peace settlement in Somalia, insisted Wednesday that Durant be freed without conditions. He said there would be no bargaining or exchange of prisoners to secure the release of Durant or the Nigerian private captured earlier.

But he added, "I believe that the release of both prisoners would indeed be a very positive sign ... There are some optimistic indications out there." He would not elaborate.

The United States has recently sounded a more conciliatory tone toward Aidid, apparently in hopes of reaching a political settlement here.

A guerrilla war with Aidid's forces has kept about half the U.N. force bottled up in southern Mogadishu. The rest of Somalia is generally quiet and is recovering from the civil war and famine that killed an estimated 350,000 Somalis last year.

As ambassador, Oakley left in 1991 when the overthrow of dictator Mohamed Siad Barre deteriorated into clan warfare and anarchy. Mass starvation resulted, prompting creation of a multinational peacekeeping operation, now under the United Nations, to deliver food to the starving and restore order.

U.N. efforts to capture Aidid, with the resultant civilian and troop casualties, set off a backlash in the United States and elsewhere against the mission.

President Clinton worked to reassure rebellious lawmakers Wednesday about U.S. policy in Somalia, stressing the humanitarian motives. He has said U.S. forces will leave here by March 31. Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., his chief Senate critic on the issue, proposed Feb. 1 as a compromise Wednesday.

Kofi Annan, U.N. undersecretary-general for peacekeeping, cautioned in Mogadishu on Wednesday that the planned U.S. troop withdrawal could wreck the U.N. mission and send the wrong message to warring parties in other conflicts.

U.N. officials fear that other members of the 33-nation coalition will also head for the door once the Americans pull out.

Italy indicated on Wednesday that it would withdraw its 2,600 soldiers early next year. "If the United States leaves, I don't see how we can stay," Italian Defense Minister Fabrio Fabbri said in an interview with the weekly magazine Oggi.

Three Americans, Canadian win Nobel Prizes in chemistry, physics

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — An American and a Canadian won the Nobel Prize in chemistry Wednesday for separate work in genetics that has advanced science's understanding of how the human body works.

Two American scientists from Princeton University won the physics prize for spotting collapsed twin stars whose evidence of gravity waves supported Albert Einstein's theory of relativity.

The chemistry Nobel was awarded to Kary B. Mullis, 48, of La Jolla, Calif., who is writing a book about his discovery, and Michael Smith, 61, of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver.

The winners of the physics prize were Princeton's Russell A. Hulse, 42, and Joseph H. Taylor Jr., 52. Each Nobel Prize carries an award worth $825,000, to be split between the winners.

Mullis went surfing after being told he had won the chemistry prize for inventing a method called the polymerase chain reaction, making it possible to make millions of copies of a single, microscopic strand of DNA within hours.

The technique has become a widespread method of analyzing genetic material. Doctors and scientists use it to diagnose infections, find the causes of hereditary diseases and recover DNA from fossils, an idea carried into fiction in the book and movie, "Jurassic Park." Police use the method to trace criminals through the DNA in a drop of blood or strand of hair.

Mullis said that when he came up with the idea in 1983 while driving at night in northern California, he thought to himself, "This is going to make me a famous guy, if it works." He spoke to The Associated Press.

Smith, director of the University of British Columbia's biotechnology laboratory in Vancouver, shared the chemistry prize for his independent work on discovering the process of site-directed mutagenesis. The technique allows researchers to reprogram a single piece of the genetic code in a strand of DNA to make it perform differently.

Such mutations permit researchers to determine the functions of the myriad proteins in the human body and to engineeer new proteins that could be useful in treating or curing disease.

Outside of basic research, Smith's work has applications ranging from improved dishwashing detergents to antibodies that can be tailored to neutralize cancer cells.

The winners of the physics prize were honored for discovering the first binary pulsar, an orbiting pair of aging, collapsed stars, called neutron stars.

CHILL: Front begins to pass

(From 1A)

The front began moving out of the area Wednesday afternoon, but the exit was too late in the day to provide any temperature increase, the NWS spokesman said.

The low temperatures will be the last the area will experience at least through the weekend, with the predicted highs returning to the lower 80s and the lows climbing back into the upper 50s and lower 60s.

Although early mornings could be cloudy, the chance of rain is slim through the weekend.

This morning should be cloudy, however. Skies will become partly cloudy by afternoon. The high will be near 80 and winds will be south at 10-20 mph. Tonight will have some increasing cloudiness, with a low between 55-60.

Friday will be mostly cloudy early, becoming partly cloudy by afternoon and the high will be in the lower 80s.

Wednesday's high of 71 was 23 degrees lower than the record high for that date set in 1968. The low was considerably higher than the record low of 39 set in 1969.

STATE

The volatile weather of Tuesday night seemed to dissipate by Wednesday, as cloudy skies and a few showers prevailed.

Showers and a few thunderstorms continued along the mid- and upper Texas Coast and in the southeast Wednesday. Other thunderstorms developed over the Hill Country and south-central Texas.

Skies over South Texas were mostly cloudy. Temperatures ranged from 73 at College Station to 93 at Brownsville, which broke a record of 92 degrees set in 1962.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy skies through today with highs in the 80s.

A few showers lingered in the northeast part of the North Texas until noon, but otherwise skies were mostly cloudy Wednesday.

Winds generally were northeast at 10 to 15 mph. Temperatures were in the 70s.

Today's forecast for North Texas calls for mostly cloudy skies with highs in the upper 50s to mid-60s.

Skies were cloudy across the Concho Valley and Permian Basin Wednesday. Otherwise, skies were partly sunny to sunny.

Temperatures were in the 60s and 70s. Winds were east to northeast at 5 to 10 mph except at Guadalupe Pass, where winds were east at 22 mph.

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a chance for thunderstorms over the northeast Panhandle.

Highs will be in the 70s and 80s.

NATION

Thunderstorms spread across the lower Mississippi Valley on Wednesday and a record high temperature in Texas contrasted with record lows around the upper Great Lakes.

Texas thunderstorms produced locally heavy rain overnight, including 4.80 inches at Terrell, 3.89 at Canton and 3.20 inches at Corsicana.

Morning thunderstorms in Texas also produced hail as big as golf balls south of San Antonio; hail as big as softballs was reported late Tuesday and tornadoes caused scattered damage.

Showers and thunderstorms moved eastward during the morning.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the lower Mississippi Valley.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT was 1.07 inches at El Dorado, Ark.

Elsewhere, showers were scattered over the central Plains And northeast Nevada.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Corrections

A story in the Oct. 12 edition of the Reporter-Telegram regarding the probation revocation hearing of Donald Turner incorrectly said that Turner had not posted bond. He posted his $40,000 bond on Sept. 30, the day after he appeared in court to request a bond reduction following his testimony that he didn't have the funds to pay the bond.

In a story in Wednesday's edition about City Council's outcry over unfunded federal mandates, some columns of print were transposed, affecting the logical reading of the article.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the errors.

VOTE: U.N. reimposes oil, arms embargo

(From 1A)

Haitian waters Wednesday and headed for the nearby American naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, after a small but unruly crowd clearly organized by the local authorities, prevented it from docking on Tuesday. The crowd vowed to turn this new U.N. operation into "another Somalia."

America's U.N. representative, Madeleine K. Albright, said Haiti's military ruler, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, and the Port-au-Prince police chief, Col. Joseph Michel Francois, "have chosen a perilous, self-defeating and dishonorable course, riding a tiger that may ultimately devour them, and we urge them to reconsider their actions."

France's representative, Jean-Bernard Merrimee, urged Haiti's military rulers to use the few days' grace given them by the new resolution to carry out the agreement, saying they must give "formal guarantees of full cooperation with the United Nations."

Brazil's representative, Ronaldo Mota Sardenberg, who is this month's council president, said Wednesday's resolution showed the council was determined to see democracy restored in Haiti.

In a report to the Security Council, U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali called on members to reimpose the oil and arms embargo they conditionally suspended in August as part of the agreement worked out with the Haitian authorities in July and to freeze the foreign assets of Haiti's present military rulers.

He said the junta was now clearly no longer complying with the accord reached on Governors Island in New York for a return to democratic rule.

The sanctions were first imposed in mid-June in an attempt to force the island's military rulers to accept the return of Aristide, whom they had overthrown in 1991.

The effect of the oil cutoff, in particular, dealt a crushing blow to Haiti's already crumbling economy and was largely credited with the ruling military junta's decision to agree to Aristide's return in July.

But it may be less effective this time in view of reports Haiti has recently received a large oil delivery and now has supplies to last three to six months.

The council's success in forcing Haiti's military rulers to accept democracy with this limited trade cutoff also contrasts starkly with the failure of the trade embargoes it imposed on Iraq to change President Saddam Hussein's ways or on the former Yugoslavia to end the civil wars in Bosnia-Herzegovina and Croatia.

Under the Governors Island agreement, Cedras was scheduled to leave office Friday and the United Nations was to deploy a 1,200-member peacekeeping force to oversee the return and the retraining of Aristide's military and police.

But Cedras has now said he does not intend to leave because Aristide's amnesty terms for the original coup leaders are insufficiently generous.

In his report to the council, Boutros-Ghali says the quayside riots that prevented the Harlan County from docking are "the culmination of a situation which has been deteriorating in Haiti in recent weeks" with the military and the police creating conditions of near anarchy and failing to cooperate "in the peaceful transition to a democratic society.

HEDGES: Leader makes conditional offer sured Cedras into agreeing to restore Aristide and democracy.

"I am ready to resign for the good of the nation," Cedras said at army headquarters.

Asked whether that would be by Friday, the date which U.N. officials say he had previously given as a deadline to quit, he answered softly: "I hope."

U.N. officials say Cedras verbally gave a Friday deadline for quitting. But Cedras aides say he made no such commitment. The U.N. plan, which Cedras agreed to, states only that he will step down before Aristide's return Oct. 30.

As part of the agreement, Aristide decreed an amnesty for officers accused of human-rights violations, but Parliament has not yet made the decree into law.

"Yesterday I heard President Clinton say that Aristide had fulfilled his part. President Clinton is very ill-informed," Cedras said.

He also said the U.N. plan guaranteed that any foreign troops arriving here as part of a U.N. force must carry only handguns, not the M-16 assault rifles that U.S. medics, military engineers and civil affairs specialists reportedly were to pack.

A senior U.N. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said none of the 53 foreign military personnel or about 50 Canadian police trainers now in Haiti have M-16s.

The U.N. official said Cedras had created the M-16 issue to seek a way out of the international agreement.

Clinton said the Haitian military broke the terms of the agreement by resisting the deployment of 194 Americans and 25 Canadian troops who had come to Haiti this week aboard the USS Harlan County.

Clinton and the Organization of American States said they support re-imposition of sanctions upon Haiti, a tactic that previously has led to concessions by the military.

The Harlan County retreated from Haitian waters Tuesday after Haitian authorities refused to let it dock and protesters vowed to fight foreign troops. Hundreds of right-wing Haitians cheered and fired guns in celebration, while Aristide supporters viewed the departure with disappointment and fear.

On Wednesday, anticipating the restoration of U.N sanctions, Haitians crowded gas stations. It is unclear how much fuel Haiti has.

Sanctions were first imposed weeks after the coup. In June, an oil embargo was imposed to increase pressure on military leaders. But it was lifted in late August after Cedras agreed to the plan.

DEFLECT: Clinton, Senate work to avert clash

forts in that chaotic country and was there strictly for a humanitarian mission.

A predicted showdown over Somalia was delayed while Senate leaders and administration officials attempted to craft a compromise that would endorse President Clinton's redefined policy and planned March 31 pullout date.

"Our policy in Somalia, I believe, is beginning to work. I think the obvious import of what's happened in the last few days is that we're moving in the right direction, and I hope we can continue to do that," Clinton told reporters.

Clinton has faced public and congressional pressure since an Oct. 3 attack on an Army Ranger company by forces loyal to clan leader Mohamed Farah Aidid killed 13 and wounded nearly 80 in the unit. Clinton doubled U.S. troop strength to protect ground forces and dispatched special envoy Robert Oakley to seek the peace in Somalia.

The White House report to Congress calls for military forces to complete their humanitarian mission and pull out by March 31.

A letter from Clinton, which accompanied the report, said the United States could not pull out immediately, "because the United Nations has not had an adequate chance to replace us, nor have the Somalis had a reasonable opportunity to end their strife."

As a compromise gesture, Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., Clinton's chief critic on Somalia, changed his amendment to require the return of U.S. troops by Feb. 1 — not Dec. 31 as he initially proposed. Byrd's amendment would limit U.S. military operations in the African country to protecting existing forces and keeping food supply lines operational.

Democrat and Republican Senate leaders worked much of the afternoon in search of a compromise with Byrd that would allow the Senate to endorse Clinton's policy and deadline.

But Byrd said Congress has a constitutional duty to authorize the use of Americans in battle.

"We have a heavy responsibility to our citizens when we authorize the dispatch of their sons and daughters to defend our nation and to defend our nation's interests in foreign lands," he said.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, predicted the president would prevail in the Senate. He said a compromise resolution "will be generally supportive of the president's position, should pass, and will pass."

MOZART: Students' test scores went up

corded message suggesting that they imagine themselves relaxing in a peaceful garden or to silence.

The effect was only temporary, however.

One of the researchers, Dr. Frances H. Rauscher, said in an interview that all the students were asked about their tastes in music, and that although some liked Mozart and some did not, their test scores generally improved after the music session, with no measurable differences attributable to varied tastes.

The pulse rates of the subjects did not change under any of the test conditions, so physiological arousal was not a factor in the test scores, she said.

"We are testing a neurobiological model of brain function with these experiments, which proposes certain neural firing patterns in the brain," Dr. Rauscher said.

"We hypothesize that these patterns may be common in certain activities — chess, mathematics and certain kinds of music."

The researchers picked Mozart, she said, because of the complex, highly structured and non-repetitive character of his music.

"Listening to such music may stimulate neural pathways important to cognition," Rauscher said, adding, "Incidentally, Mozart himself often scribbled numbers and mathematical expressions on his manuscript scores."

Thirty-six students, half of them men and half of them women, took part in in the experiment. After each listening period they were given standard nonverbal I.Q. tests of spatial reasoning, involving questions about the geometry of paper objects shown as they would look after being folded or cut.

Dr. Rauscher said researchers in her group, including Dr. Gordon L. Shaw and Katherine N. Ky, intended to test the effects of other kinds of music, like rock and the minimalist music of the contemporary composer Phillip Glass, for example. They also plan to test preschool children and subjects with and without musical training.

Does the group expect controversy?

"You bet," Dr. Rauscher said. "But we're not insisting on any conclusions yet."

TRAIL: Project depends on grant application erosion, landscaping, benches and distant markers.

Currently, Midland doesn't have any bike trails, only bike routes on roadways. So the green-ways adjacent to the draws present an opportune resource, officials said.

"It's our only topographic relief in town," Logan said.

The city should know by mid-December whether the money will be available to turn the draw banks into park-like trails.

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, which acts as the metropolitan planning organization for Midland and Odessa, will submit the request to the state's transportation department, according to Jerry Tschauner, director of planning for the commission.

If granted, the project probably would begin in late spring, city officials said.

The state grant of $160,000 will be supplemented by $40,000 of city money to finance the pilot project.

City officials said they would like to see the first grant followed up each successive year to complete a city-wide trail project.

"I think we're in good shape with phase one. I think it will show people how good trails can be done in Midland," Logan said.

The proposed final picture would include trails that would span from the County Exhibit Building on Highway 80 to the Midland Park Mall.

HEARS: Court wrestles with two key cases were pending when it took effect.

Justice Ginsburg prodded and challenged the lawyers on both sides of the cases, offering plain-spoken alternatives to their sometimes convoluted legal formulations that managed to make her own point of view quite clear.

In the sexual harassment case, for example, she broke in as the argument stalled over such questions as whether to define sexual harassment from the point of view of a "reasonable woman" or "reasonable person," or whether the employer's conduct should be measured by some objective standard or on the basis of its impact on the woman bringing the suit.

Justice Ginsburg asked why sexual harassment should not be defined simply as conduct that, on the basis of an employee's sex, makes it more difficult for one person than another to perform the job.

"How about just saying that?" she said. "Is it really more complex? The terms and conditions of employment are not equal if one person is being called names and the other isn't."

Sexual harassment could be found if "one sex has to put up with something that the other sex doesn't have to put up with," she said at another point.

To one lawyer who was arguing that the Civil Rights Act of 1991 should not be given retroactive effect because it would be unfair to subject employers to the higher damage limits of the new law, she said that there had been no change in the law's underlying principle.

"Thou shalt not discriminate," she said. "That rule has been there all along. All that has been done is to make the price tag higher."

"You're not really suggesting, are you," she said to the lawyer, Glen D. Nager, that because the old law provided only limited remedies for discrimination, employers had felt free to disregard it.

Nager, representing two employers in the retroactivity case, said he was not relying on that argument to win his case. But he said that employers did make "informed judgments," depending on the possible penalties for losing lawsuits, about how much money to spend to train their work force to avoid discrimination.

Since the 1991 law made new remedies available for successful civil rights plaintiffs, including compensatory and punitive damages, Nager said that clients of his law firm had been calling for advice on holding seminars for their employees.

The old federal law against employment discrimination limited the remedies to injunctions against continued discrimination and back pay for lost wages.

Justice Ginsburg was scarcely the only member of the Court to take an active role in Wednesday's arguments. Every justice asked questions with the exception of Justices Harry A. Blackmun and Clarence Thomas.

Justice Antonin Scalia made his own view on the retroactivity issue abundantly clear.

German minister dissolves office involved in scandal

BONN, Germany (AP) — The health minister dissolved a federal office Wednesday that was accused of covering up 373 cases of people contracting the AIDS virus apparently through tainted blood.

It is one of the worst health scandals in Germany's post-World War II history, and Health Minister Horst Seehofer is fighting for his political life. A similar scandal in France put a top official behind bars and helped bring down the Socialist government.

Seehofer said Wednesday that abolishing the Federal Health Office would cut red tape and clarify official responsibilities. Parliament must approve his decision. The office is an independent agency responsible for medical research and public health care.

The ARD TV network said prosecutors have opened a criminal investigation of two senior health officials fired last week in connection with the scandal. They were the agency's head, Dieter Grossklaus, and Manfred Steinbach, a health ministry secretary responsible for liaisons with the Health Office.

Prosecutors will try to determine if the two were responsible for anyone getting the AIDS virus through HIV-tainted blood transfusions.

Of the 373 cases, all but 13 were reported to the Health Office by doctors and blood companies before October 1985, when the government began testing blood supplies.

Seehofer said an inquiry would determine the extent to which officials knowingly prevented news about the cases from getting out, in order to protect companies whose blood supplies might have been recalled.

In France, officials were charged with knowingly distributing tainted blood through the state blood bank. In Germany, whose blood supplies are distributed by private companies, responsibility is more diffuse.

Grossklaus has said he informed Seehofer of the AIDS cases. Seehofer denied this Wednesday, but promised a full investigation.

About 5,000 people have died of AIDS in Germany, 400 because of blood transfusions made before testing for the virus began. It's not clear how many of the 400 are among the apparent tainted-blood cases allegedly covered up by the Health Office.

Troops want to complete mission, rescue Durant

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. troops bloodied in the battle that caused outrage back home say they want to stay to complete their mission and Americans should understand that making peace costs lives.

They also want to rescue captured Chief Warrant Officer Michael Durant.

"It seems everybody just wants us home. But us, as soldiers, as American soldiers, we can't leave until we have our own back, until we have our brother back," said Ralph Scott, a 21-year-old specialist Ranger from Champagne, Ill.

Nine comrades around him nodded and "yeahed" their agreement in a session with reporters on Wednesday.

"Every one of us here, man, the whole platoon, would volunteer to go save him," added Lt. Curtis Crumb, a Richmond, Va., native who is a first platoon commander in the 10th Mountain Division from Fort Drum, N.Y.

President Clinton's envoy to Somalia, Robert Oakley, said there were "optimistic indications" that Durant would be freed soon, but did not rule out a mission to rescue him.

All these soldiers are in the Quick Reaction Force, which saved more than 90 Rangers pinned down in street fighting on Oct. 3 after fighters loyal to warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid downed two U.S. helicopters.

As many as 18 Americans and one Malaysian died in the daylong battle, and Aidid says more than 300 Somalis were killed. The heavy U.S. casualty toll brought pressure on Clinton to withdraw his troops from the U.N. force.

Capt. Drew Meyerowich said the troops probably could have gotten to the scene of the crashes 1½ hours earlier if they had had armored cars and had not had to wait for tanks and armored personnel carriers from Pakistani and Malaysian contingents.

He said he realized after a Sept. 5 rescue mission that they needed the armor. He knew that a request had been made to Washington, but did not know on Oct. 3 that it had been turned down by Defense Secretary Les Aspin.

"Yes, we felt vulnerable, and we had no U.S. armor present at the time," Meyerowich said. "But what choice did we have? Ninety Rangers were pinned down and two helicopters crashed, and we were the only ones who could go in to rescue them."

Clinton has resisted pressure from Congress to pull out of Somalia, but set a withdrawal date of March 31 and sent reinforcements and heavy armor to protect the American troops until then.

The soldiers spoke to reporters in their "day room." Some wore shorts and T-shirts decorated with their regimental emblem, a snarling red dragon, and others were in desert fatigues and carried their rifles.

When the Rangers are not in readiness for a rescue mission, they train with incoming troops and spend a lot of time caring for equipment that gets blocked by sand in this semi-desert nation. They relax by reading, playing video games and shooting basketballs.

The troops said they were not getting credit for a job well done, and disputed reports the mission was bungled.

"What we're doing here, it's a good job," said Spc. Gregory Januscheidis, 25, from Long View, Wash. "We shouldn't spoil it now" by withdrawing.

"Aidid is a criminal and a terrorist responsible for the deaths in famine, by starvation, of thousands of innocents," said Staff Sgt. Richard Roberts, 29, of St. Louis.

"We came to help people here and we succeeded. But the political tyranny that is reigning in all parts of the world, that's not over. If America goes home now, who can do the job? If we go home the United Nations mission will probably fail and Somalia will probably go back to where it was, or even worse," Roberts said.

"If we want to alleviate these problems, it's going to cost lives. People in power, if they want to do something about it, they have to pay the price and, in this case, the price is lives."

Surgeon Has Opened Facilities for Total Eye Care

Dr. Patrick Kelly Riggs, M.D. is announcing the opening of the Riggs Center for Diseases and Surgery of the Eye in Midland with secondary offices in Monahans and Pecos. The spacious new facility in Midland, over 3,000 square feet, is located at 3000 N. Garfield, Suite 215, and offers state-of-the-art equipment in a fresh setting of modern medical efficiency. There are four examination rooms and an operating room for minor surgical procedures, including Radial Keratotomy. The minor surgical room is equipped with Argon and Neodymium YAG lasers. In addition, Dr. Riggs has supplied Ward Memorial Hospital in Monahans and Reeves County Hospital in Pecos with the most advanced equipment available in order to provide his services to those people who live in Monahans, Pecos and the surrounding areas.

Dr. Riggs is an ophthalmologist certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology, with specialty training in cornea and external disease. Besides concentrating on small incision/sutureless cataract surgery and refractive surgery for the correction of nearsightedness and astigmatism, he offers a full range of ophthalmic services.

He received his undergraduate degree from Texas A&M University where he graduated with the highest honors, Summa Cum Laude. While working his way through college as a welder in a refinery, he majored in Biology with a minor in Chemistry. Because Dr. Riggs was among the top ten individuals within the College of Science, he was selected by the Dean of the College to receive a scholarship his junior year.

Following graduation he worked in the plastics division at Exxon Research and Development. His assignment there was to determine the structure of certain plastic polymers. Dr. Riggs felt that the study of plastics would be useful in his later career as an ophthalmologist in the research and development of intraocular lenses. Concurrently, he was obtaining his Doctor of Medicine degree from the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston, which has the largest medical center in the world. In medical school Dr. Riggs continued to excel academically. In the surgical rotation he was ranked in the top 10% by his written examinations and by his professors, among whom was Dr. "Red" Duke.

After graduation from medical school, Dr. Riggs went to Virginia for his internship in general surgery. Then he completed the basic science course in ophthalmology at Stanford University School of Medicine. His residency training in ophthalmology took place at the Eastern Virginia Graduate School of Medicine where he was selected by the staff physicians to be chief resident his last year. During residency Dr. Riggs continued his interest in research and development. Working in conjunction with fellow residents, he developed a topical drug for the treatment of eye disease.

Following residency Dr. Riggs was fellowship trained in cornea and external disease. Since then he has worked as a consultant in practice management and as chief surgeon in a large eye care center where he supervised the work of other surgeons. He has taught numerous surgeons the art of small incision/sutureless cataract surgery and the techniques necessary to achieve better results with corneal transplantation.

During the course of practice, he realized that there were many ways in which to manage a health care delivery system. He found himself dissatisfied with his level of understanding of the health care delivery system in our country as well as in other countries. Plagued by this discontent he sought further knowledge in a one-year course in Hospital Administration at the Kenan School of Business, University of North Carolina. Dr. Riggs finished that study in May 1993 and then chose his practice site and home in Midland, Texas

Dr. Riggs is a native Texan, born and raised in Pasadena. He chose to practice in Midland not only because he enjoys the regional dry climate, but also because he realized there is a shortage of ophthalmologists in West Texas. He would like to make his services convenient to all.

The Riggs Center is open six days a week. In addition, Dr. Riggs is available 24 hours a day. The area wide phone number is 915-570-0288. Dr. Riggs has the staff, resources, and training to provide the most advanced techniques.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your co-workers may not be able to keep up with you. Refuse to let them hold you back. Although living on the edge sounds exciting, be certain you can handle it. You will need to be especially alert and organized as 1994 gets under way. Heed mate's cautionary words. Pursue your goals with zeal, but keep all business dealings strictly aboveboard. Cutting corners could jeopardize your reputation for excellence.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Lillian Gish, fashion designer Ralph Lauren, actors Roger Moore and Greg Evigan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A stroke of good luck ensures success today. Heed the warning you receive from a good friend. Romance looks promising. Show your tender, sentimental side.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do whatever you can to finalize financial arrangements. Do not let someone's cajolery give you a false sense of security. Diplomacy will help you avoid arguments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may not be able to reason with a hostile or jealous co-worker now. Give this person plenty of time and space. Postpone presenting new ideas to those in authority. Conduct further research.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent time for investing in gold, silver and jewelry. Consult the experts. Your privacy is particularly important to you now. Let family members know exactly how you feel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day for setting and attaining business goals. A leisurely lunch with a loved one will bring contentment. Display a more tolerant attitude at work and you will win new allies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Routine employment activities will occupy much of your day. Certain restrictions can be overcome if you recognize them in time. Discard clutter at work and home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep a low profile at work while looking for ways to increase efficiency. You may decide to enroll in a new course of study. Steer clear of all get-rich-quick schemes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A childish misunderstanding could slow things down early today. Seek a reconciliation so that the weekend will not be a disappointment. Money could be the underlying problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Confusion could cause some distress this morning. Family members may press you to participate in a variety of household projects and social events. Be candid if you prefer doing something different.

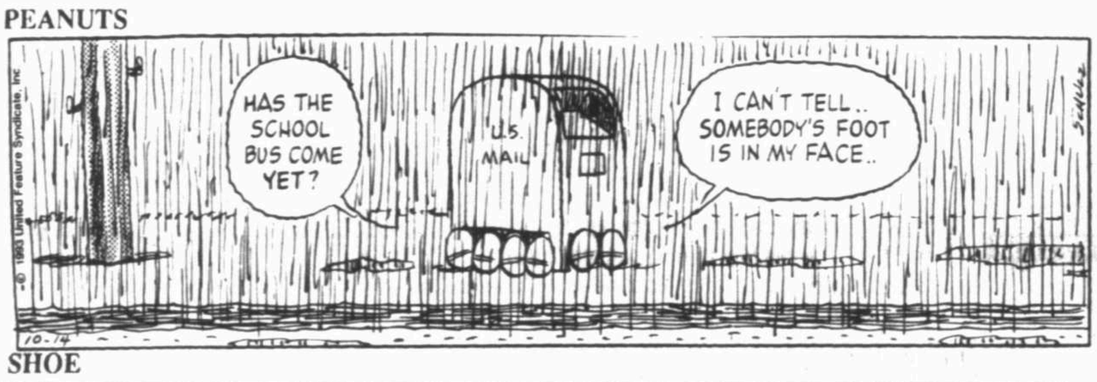

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although this is not a very good day to close property deals, you will get an opportunity to turn your ideas into extra income. Take the lead where domestic issues are concerned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study a financial proposition very carefully. You may find that there are too many strings attached to make it really attractive. Show greater consideration for your mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may be able to turn a hobby into a source of income. Loved ones will welcome the extra cash. Share a rare experience with those closest to your heart. Keep secrets.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will be the center of attention at both children's parties and adult functions. Well-mannered and charming, they are also highly original thinkers. Wise parents will not laugh at their daydreams. These clever Libras have a knack for making their dreams come true. Friendly and generous, they are blessed with many friends and admirers.

In theory, all finesses are equal. Each stands a 50 percent chance of succeeding. That, however, does not mean you should take a finesse just because it's there. When faced with more than one finesse, it can make a whale of a difference which you take first. Consider this deal from a side game at a North American championship some years ago.

North certainly was wearing bidding boots on this occasion. To all intents and purposes the bidding went one club—six clubs and South was lucky that the contract had some play.

West led the ten of diamonds, covered hopefully by the queen. When East produced the king, declarer won the ace and considered the situation. There were finesse positions in both black suits. Which one has priority?

The answer to one question should provide the solution to declarer's dilemma: If the trump finesse succeeds, will that guarantee the contract? The answer is no. Declarer will still have to finesse spades successfully or else lose a spade and a diamond.

If the spade finesse were to succeed, however, declarer would be playing for an overtrick. The finesse would be repeated if necessary and a diamond could be discarded on a spade.

Simple and logical. Declarer crossed to the ten of hearts and ran the jack of spades. When that won, the spade finesse was repeated and the ace of spades took care of dummy's diamond loser. Although the club finesse lost, declarer did not begrudge the defense their one and only trick.

After years of breakups, makeups, Marla, The Donald have baby girl

NEW YORK — After the affair, and the divorce, and the breakup, and the reunion, and the next break-up, and the sequel, there was a happy ending Wednesday for The Donald and Marla: a baby daughter.

The little bundle of joy — the fourth child for Trump, the first for Maples — arrived at 12:50 p.m. in an undisclosed Florida hospital, Trump spokeswoman Norma Foerderer said. Trump was with Maples for the delivery, and their daughter weighed in at 7½ pounds, she said.

The couple named her Tiffany Trump. The name, selected by The Daddy, is a reference to his art of the deal: Trump's purchase of the air rights above Tiffany's cleared the way for his Trump Tower on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue.

"He's thrilled," Foerderer said. "He said it was a miracle. He's very, very happy."

The baby, who came five days before the due date, follows years of love and war between Trump and his blond mistress. His affair with Maples led to his split with wife Ivana in 1990 and their divorce two years later.

He and Maples have since gone through a highly public series of breakups and makeups but have never married. Maples had been staying at Trump's Palm Beach, Fla., estate awaiting the baby's arrival.

PARIS — Sultry actress Sharon Stone, who steamed screens in movies like "Basic Instinct" and "Sliver," tried on a new role Wednesday: a racy bride on the fashion catwalk.

Flashing a wide, cherry-red lipsticked smile, Stone modeled a white miniskirted bridal dress in a show of the new summer collection by designer Valentino.

The outfit also featured criss-cross suspenders on either shoulder, white lace-up high-heel shoes and a broad white hat with netting to the floor.

Off the catwalk and at the Ritz Hotel, Stone was flanked by eight bodyguards who kept admirers at bay.

NEW YORK — She made her name as a dumpy everywoman, but Roseanne Arnold has no apologies for the plastic surgery that's made her look better and feel better.

"We're not in a perfect feminist world, and we never will be. And even if we were, I'd still have plastic surgery," the 41-year-old star of TV's "Roseanne" says in November's Ladies' Home Journal.

Arnold says she has undergone breast reduction surgery, a nose job and a facelift. She's also dieting and exercising.

"It makes you feel really good about yourself. I mean, you have flaws that bother you, and to erase them is great. It was like reversing years of abuse that I've done to my body. I feel like I'm starting over," she said.

And what of her fans who saw a rotund Roseanne as a role model?

"Nobody can be fat philosophically," she said. "People are fat for protection, I think. And it was so hard for me to let go of those pounds. But I notice the braver I get, the more weight goes off."

HUNTINGTON, Ind. — The Dan Quayle Center and Museum has attracted more than 7,000 people since it opened five months ago — but not Quayle himself.

That will change Saturday when Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, finally dedicate the museum that honors his vice presidency.

The dedication will be part of a big Huntington weekend for the Quayles. Both also will receive honorary doctor of law degrees Friday from Huntington College.

Quayle, who grew up in Huntington, now studies business competitiveness issues for the Hudson Institute, an Indianapolis-based conservative policy research center.

NEW YORK — Police apologized Wednesday to Whitney Houston and Bobby Brown, whose limousine was mistakenly stopped at Kennedy International Airport by nine gun-waving officers looking for drug couriers.

Charles Knox, superintendent of the Port Authority police, delivered the apology personally in a phone call to Houston's office. His call reversed the department's previous statement, which challenged the singer's version of what happened Sept. 30.

"I offer my deepest apologies . . . for the unfortunate and unwarranted stoppage of their vehicle," Knox said. "Both the Port Authority police and Ms. Houston have always agreed this was a case of mistaken identity."

Knox said he is investigating.

Appeal important on center's closing

State district judges in Midland are correct to appeal a ruling by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Community Justice Assistance Division (CJAD) to close the Midland Community Restitution Center.

District Judges Dean Rucker, who serves as administrative judge for the Midland Judicial District, John Hyde and George "Jody" Gilles are scheduled to make their appeals to the Criminal Justice board Nov. 5 in Austin, hoping to convince the board to reverse CJAD's earlier decision and to allow the center to re-open.

The judges and other officials with the restitution center feel understandably slighted. "We were not afforded even minimal due process," Judge Rucker told Midland County Commissioners recently. The reason for the shutdown: Supposedly it was the Midland County commissioners' failure to authorize installation of a $15,000 smoke and fire alarm system, although some officials privately assert the decision may have been more for political reasons than anything directly attributable to Midland County.

Dimitria Pope of Austin, director of the Community Justice Assistance Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, contends, "We did not stop funding on the mere basis of not having a fire-alarm system installed." She says that failure, however, is indicative of management problems that apparently go deeper.

If there are problems, they need to be spelled out more clearly than anything we've seen to this point. And they have to be fairly significant ones since closing the restitution center will end a program the State of Texas has worked on since 1985 at a cost to the taxpayers of $8 million.

Since the end of the restitution center would effectively remove one of the alternatives that has been available to district judges locally for dealing with individuals charged with crimes, it's imperative that the matter be pursued. It would not be fair to those convicted of crimes nor the community at large to merely forget about the restitution center.

Britain's Major might surprise many

LONDON — Prime Minister John Major sits at the long table in the Downing Street cabinet room, his disposition, like the weather, sunny but not very. He sometimes speaks with an asperity born of exasperation about invidious comparisons of him to his predecessor, including comparisons by his predecessor, Margaret Thatcher, whose memoirs, just now being published, are, regarding him, like the weather: chilly.

Will

Some of his Conservative Party colleagues now fault him for the very blandness that they considered a virtue when, three years ago, they put him in her place. They were weary of her ferocity that did not spare her friends, and they worried that she would lose the next election. Major won it, in spite of a severe recession, because of Labour's itch to tax "the rich," including many who do not feel eligible for that label.

Today, after 14 years, the longest run in power of a British party in this century, the Thatcherite agenda of tax cuts and privatization seems banal, and he seems boring.

Major's conservative credentials are attested by what his critics deplore, an insufficiency of theory about Britain's "national purpose." There was time when conservatives thought like Prime Minister Harold Macmillan who, when asked if he could give the people a sense of purpose, replied that people seeking that should consult their clergy, not their politicians.

In an age when the clergy talk like politicians, politicians supposedly must have policies with sacramental power. Major does subscribe to Thatcher's agenda of policies to promote the "vigorous virtues" of self-reliance and striving through entrepreneurship. Thatcher used the privatization of public housing and nationalized industries not only to shrink the state but to expand the share-holding, property-owning public. Major pointedly plans to venture where the Iron Lady would not, privatizing the rail and coal industries.

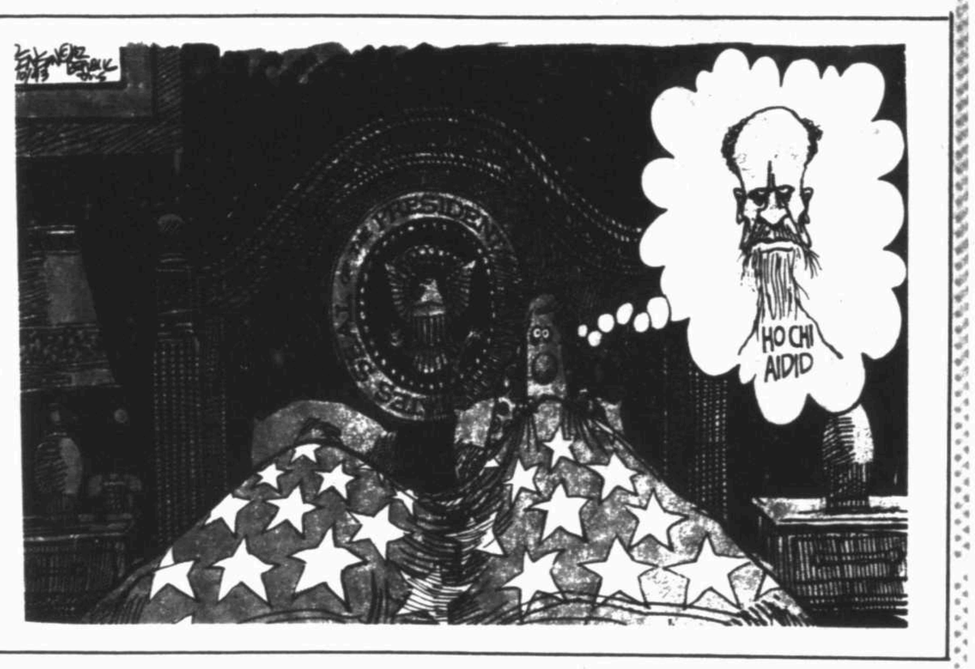

However, some restless conservatives now want an agenda of government action to redress the supposed excesses of Thatcherite individualism, to strengthen society as a sustainer of values. In Britain, as in America, the fear that society is fraying has focused attention on crime and immigration. And it is a British trait to turn, more readily than American conservatives do, to the central government for agendas.

Why? One conservative MP suggests a "picture postcard test" of national identity. If you purchase postcards in Paris, they are apt to be of the Eiffel Tower, Notre Dame, the Opera. In Rome they probably will be of the Coliseum and Forum. But in Britain the cards of choice will be of the houses of Parliament, Buckingham Palace and Number 10 Downing Street.

Major defends his vision of a Europe of sovereign states, and he attacks corporatist responses to problems markets should solve. A Europe of collectivist, supranational entities is, Major believes, unrealizable in the short term and unattractive in the long term.

His plans for his own long-term political survival rest on two assumptions: the British have never been socialist and Labour still is. But given Labour's record of rarely missing an opportunity to miss an opportunity, Major may be more durable than those conservatives who are currently so condescending toward him suppose.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Health plan receives special treatment

The teaser on the cover of Time? Well, I mean, you had to laugh — even in the supermarket where the thing lunged off the newsstand, almost into your basket. "Clinton At The Top of His Game," said lordly Time.

Murchison

And, yes, maybe for the first time since Henry Luce died, Time has it right. "Game." That's what we're watching in Washington as the administration pushes the Hillary health-care plan.

The purpose of this exercise in public relations overkill cannot be to make America's health care system the best in the world; it is that already. The purpose cannot be just to extend health insurance to the uninsured, because the vast majority are insured right now; yet that same majority would be folded, like it or not, into the Clinton plan, at increased cost to many of them.

So what is the purpose of trying to engineer the biggest social change in our history? To create something by which to remember the Clintons, as Franklin Roosevelt is remembered for the New Deal, Lincoln for the Gettysburg Address?

If this is the way of it, the Clintons could hardly ask for finer cooperation than Beltway Washington is affording. The old town last week was stricken with Hillary fever. The principal symptom of this mortal affliction is a dazed, worshipful look whenever the first lady testifies to the superior merits of the health care program that is her baby.

Veteran senators and representatives, knowing the mother's pride, cooed and chucked the little tyke under the chin. The media made goo-goo noises. Gosh, the first lady was wonderful! Goodness, she knew her stuff!

No one could stump her. In fact, no one tried. There were no disputatious questions. Practically everything tossed her way was pure softball. Chelsea, had she been there, could have hit each and every pitch out of the park. House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, oozing familiarity, predicted that Mrs. Clinton might become president in her own right. (She needs to?)

You would hardly have guessed from this elegant byplay that the first lady and her husband the president are proposing, on the basis of a plan whose costs are yet unknown, whose feasibility and constitutionality are conjectural, a radical reordering of an industry that is one-seventh of the economy.

Clinton at the top of his game? His or hers, what difference? Nothing could be craftier than deputing Mrs. C. to press the case for the plan on Capitol Hill, where the first lady's sex and rank afford her immunity.

Let's get serious, all right? No one jumps, rhetorically speaking, down the first lady's throat, never mind how loosely she might talk. (And she talked plenty loosely to Congress.) How would Rep. Klutzki like it beamed to his district, via the evening news, that he had impugned the first lady's intellectual integrity, in the same way he might rough up a male envoy from the White House? It wouldn't look good.

Feminism implies the minutely metricated equality of man and woman. Actually, the last thing Mrs. Clinton wants, when she sits down to testify, is equality. What's the use of being a woman in national politics if it doesn't earn you — as it certainly earns her — automatic deference from male chauvinists who would talk very differently to fellow chauvinists than to a lady who apparently is also quite a legal eagle?

Both Clintons, it would appear, are at the top of their games. The question is, how much longer? There comes a point when all the charm, all the erudition of the first couple fail to override facts: e.g., a good way to increase layoffs is to mandate higher health care costs for business. There is likewise the doctors' increasingly loud — and logical — complaint that tighter controls on the marketplace in medicine spell fewer choices for everyone. Such considerations as these the first couple haven't yet acknowledged; but in the health care game, it's only the first inning, and the clock moves on, second by second.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Let's retire behemoth central government

An economist was testifying before a House Ways and Means Committee studying tax policy and economic growth. I was watching him on C-Span.

Grizzard

The economist was asked, "Should the American people be paying more taxes?"

"Yes," he replied, "if they are to expect the same level of governmental services they are currently getting."

The thought hit me: OK, so what if we decided we don't need the current level of governmental services?

What if the individual states got together and said, "Let's start handling things on our own?"

Missouri, the Show Me State, might ask, "You mean dissolve the central government, like what happened in the Soviet Union?"

"Something like that," might be the reply to Missouri. "We tell the federal government just to make sure we've got a good military in case Canada decides to attack North Dakota, and we'll take it from there."

"But what would the president do?" pesky Missouri would continue.

"Be commander in chief and play a lot of golf," would be a terrific answer.

Isn't that what the founding fathers had in mind in the first place, a weak central government?

Under my plan the states could even handle maintaining their own domestic tranquility. That's what state patrols are for. If they needed any help, they could ask for volunteers from Rotary Clubs.

Cut out about 99 percent of what Washington does and wouldn't that drastically affect taxes, spur economic growth and help reduce the federal budget?

Of course it would. Couldn't we do without the following:

The Park Service: Give the parks back to the bears. They were there first anyway.

The Federal Aviation Administration: The airlines could stop serving food on flights and use the money to pay for their own flight controllers. Who likes airline food anyway?

Education: Each state takes care of its own schools. American students can't find South America on a map or their butts with both hands, anyway. Don't do your homework in Georgia and you have to wear one of those silly beanie caps with the propeller on top like the freshmen at Georgia Tech. In California the state burns your surf board.

Federal Grants: Want $50,000 to find out why kudzu grows so fast? Forget it. It just does.

The Postal Service: Who writes letters anymore anyway? Airfreight it, fax it or simply pick up the phone and call.

Endowments for the Arts: Wanna put on a show? Sell tickets.

All Other Governmental Agencies and Services: Will the last person leaving the office please turn out the lights.

Of course there remains the question of what to do with all those federal employees who, under my plan, suddenly would be out of work.

Congress could open a law firm handling accident claims. Everybody else could join the circus. They will already have had a great deal of experience.

Lewis Grizzard's column is distributed by Cowles Syndicate.

Coleman school shines bright

I was part of a team of three educators from North Carolina who visited the Coleman Alternative School. We were made to feel special by Ms. Helen Lackey, Gilbert Garcia, Director Jimmie Kelly and the entire faculty staff and students at Coleman High School. The enthusiasm of the teachers, students, staff and community seemed to permeate throughout the school. The program at Coleman is exemplary of what is innovative and effective in our ever-changing school society.

Senators should vote 'SAFE'

Later this month, our U.S. Senators, Phil Grahm and Kay Bailey Hutchison, will consider legislation before the committee to help educate Americans about the serious risk associated with alcohol consumption. The Sensible Advertising and Family Education Act ("SAFE," S. 674), would require a series of seven health and safety messages in all alcohol advertising, and an 800 information number in print ads.

This bill will help fight the war on drugs by balancing the wholesome and exciting images in over a billion dollars of advertising for America's leading drug. By helping to prevent alcohol problems, these messages will contribute to lower costs for health care and law enforcement. They will reinforce school and community-based education programs and buttress parental attempts to teach their kids about alcohol.

Taming the impact of alcohol advertising on our young people is one vital part of a comprehensive effort to reduce the massive toll of alcohol on our society. Warnings in cigarette ads since 1964 have played a measurable role in reducing smoking and changing community norms about tobacco use. If the senators truly care about the lives of our young people and the health of our community, they should vote for "SAFE" in committee and later on the Senate floor.

Viewer respects KMID's rights

I have never seen "NYPD BLUE" and doubt that I would be inclined to watch. With 35 other choices available on the cable there are a lot of programs I pay to have accessed but rarely watch as I have only facilities to comprehend one program at a time. I have them for alternate choices and someone else hopes I will watch, buy the advertised product, and overall be entertained and educated in the process. When these alternate programs fall into lower ratings, they are frequently discontinued for lack of support and should be called business judgement and it is not censorship.

No broadcast station, independent or network affiliate has positive answers as to who will or will not watch what at any given time so they have to use, hopefully, good programming judgement in what they offer and do not offer. Again this is called business judgment and it is not censorship.

I respect Channel 2's rights to delete any program they feel is not in the best interest of their station. The manager has that decision and that decision is his.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Utah lawmakers curb sale of firearms to minors

SALT LAKE CITY (NYT) — Like starting to drive or date, owning a gun has been a rite of passage for teen-agers in Utah, a state where many schools once closed during deer hunting season to accommodate the sport.

But a recent wave of violence has horrified residents of famously prim-and-proper Salt Lake City, where street gangs were unknown only a decade ago, and prompted what was long scorned as downright unpatriotic: gun control.

In a special session of the Utah Legislature, called this week to address gang violence that has more than doubled in the past year, lawmakers outlawed the sale of firearms to minors, unless accompanied by adults. And last month the city of Salt Lake imposed a five-day waiting period on the purchase of weapons by anyone 25 years of age or under.

"Ten years ago everyone had a knee-jerk reaction to anything with the scent of gun control," said Gov. Mike Leavitt, a Republican. "But the insanity of 13- and 14-year-old kids running around with handguns has caused all of us to rethink some things."

Less than 12 hours after the Legislature adjourned, two teen-agers were shot and wounded today by gang members outside a Salt Lake City high school.

The stricter measures in Utah, which follow a recent ban on handguns among minors in Colorado, appear to signal a dramatic political change in the heart of gun country, the American West.

"The tide is turning," said Susan Whitmore, a spokesman for Handgun Control Inc., a Washington group that calls for stricter gun laws. "We are losing 14 children a day in this country to gunfire. And people in the West are as alarmed about it as people in the rest of the nation."

The call for a crackdown on gangs reached a pitch after two attacks last month, when a 17-year-old suburban resident was shot to death in downtown Salt Lake City as he drove home from a rock concert, and a 20-year-old man was critically wounded by gunfire at the state fair. Police have charged members of street gangs in both shootings.

In July, two teen-agers were hit with gunfire as they stood in front of a Hardy's restaurant, an attack that has also been linked to gang warfare.

Salt lake City police say drive-by shootings have occurred as often as five times in a single week. The leaders of the street gangs have largely been recent arrivals from Southern California, Police Chief Rueben Ortega said, adding, "In some cases, these were people whose families had moved here to get away from all that violence."

Enraged by the violence, hundreds of Salt Lake City residents have formed mobile units that cruise the streets to spot gang activity and report to the police.

Just two years ago, when a young Provo man, Brian Watkins, was slain in a New York City subway, many Utahans denounced the dangers of places like New York and gave thanks for the calm of Salt Lake City.

But the upsurge in crime in salt Lake City has pierced old notions about street violence being the exclusive province of faraway big cities. "We're still comparatively safe here," said Mayor Dee Dee Corradini. "But we're at as crossroads. And we want to get a handle on things before it gets worse."

The city government passed its ordinance calling for a five-day waiting period in defiance of Utah law, which prohibits any gun measure that is stricter than the state's.

■ More national news/6B

Some gun dealers have promised a lawsuit over the new bill, which goes into effect in November. But Mayor Corradini said the city will argue in court that "our duty to safeguard our citizens" transcends the state gun laws.

The violence has prompted some soul-searching even among the staunchest proponents of gun ownership, such as Harmon G. Williams, a retired president of Browning Arms, the Ogden gun maker.

For most of his life, he said, he viewed such measures as "absolutely unnecessary," but now supports outlawing handguns for minors.

The Utah gun control prohibition on sale of firearms to minors, except when accompanied by a parent, goes further than the federal law because it covers private sales — that is, between individuals. The federal law covers only licensed dealers.

Fund-raiser pleads guilty, gets 52-month prison term

BOSTON (AP) — The chief fund-raiser for Paul Tsongas' presidential campaign pleaded guilty Wednesday to cheating the campaign and friends of Tsongas out of nearly $1 million.

Nicholas A. Rizzo Jr., 59, was sentenced to four years and four months in prison, with no chance of parole.

U.S. District Judge Joseph Tauro also ordered Rizzo to pay $600,000 in forfeitures and $899,000 in restitution. But Tauro acknowledged restitution was unlikely because Rizzo appeared to have no assets.

Rizzo admitted to mail fraud, money laundering, campaign finance violations and uttering false statements. As part of a plea agreement with prosecutors, the government dropped 22 of 46 counts.

According to prosecutors, Rizzo opened a bank account in the name of the Tsongas campaign, without the candidate or campaign workers knowing about it. He then diverted some regular campaign donations to the account, and used the funds to write checks to himself, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors said Rizzo used the money to pay off bank loans and gambling debts. The thefts were detected after the campaign was over.

Tsongas cited financial difficulties when he dropped out of the presidential race last year after some poor showings in Democratic primaries. The former Massachusetts senator was $500,000 in debt at the time.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Brian O'Connor said Tsongas had been unaware of Rizzo's actions and wasn't a target of the investigation.

"Mr. Tsongas is hurt as anyone would be who had a friendship betrayed," O'Connor said.

Rizzo also was a fund-raiser for the presidential campaigns of Jimmy Carter, Walter Mondale and Richard Gephardt.

Rizzo admitted obtaining large loans in 1991 and 1992 from Tsongas' business friends, saying the money would be used for the presidential bid. Instead, he pocketed the money.

"I take responsibility for it," Rizzo told the court. "They were loans that were made that I told the individuals I would be responsible for."

Rizzo's lawyer, Eugene Patrick McCann, described his client as a victim of the recession.

McCann said Rizzo constantly made business deals and borrowed money in advance of future earnings.

Under the original 46-count indictment, Rizzo faced more than 300 years in prison, $13.9 million in fines and forfeiture of his personal property.

Retired bishop publicly declares his homosexuality

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — Confessing that he has been struggling with his sexual identity for 45 years, the retired Episcopal bishop of Utah has announced that he is gay and is moving to San Francisco.

Bishop Otis Charles, 67, is believed to be the first bishop of a mainline American church to publicly declare his homosexuality.

"I will not remain silent, invisible, unknown," Charles wrote in a letter to his fellow Episcopal bishops. "The choice for me is not whether or not I am a gay man, but whether or not I am honest about who I am with myself and others."

Charles, the father of five grown children, said he first told his wife, Elvira, about his homosexuality in 1976. They eventually separated.

"To say that the years since 1976 have been painful is totally inadequate," said Charles, who led the Utah diocese from 1971 to 1986. "They have been wrenching for us and for our family."

In an interview Wednesday, Charles said he plans to live with a community of Episcopal Franciscans in San Francisco and pursue a ministry emphasizing spirituality and ritual.

"My choice of San Francisco was to be close to my grandchildren," he said, "and to live in a city with an active and articulate gay community."

Charles, who recently retired as the dean of the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge, Mass., made his announcement as the Episcopal church is struggling with its latest controversy over the ordination of openly gay and lesbian priests.

Conservative Episcopalians have mounted a campaign against the election of a San Francisco priest, the Rev. James Jelinek, as the new bishop of Minnesota.

Jelinek, the rector of St. Aidan's parish in San Francisco, has declared his intention to ordain homosexuals as priests.

His election by Episcopal clergy and laity in Minnesota has already overcome its first hurdle, and must now be approved by the nation's Episcopal bishops.

The Rev. Todd Wetzel, director of the Episcopalians United, said his 22,000-member organization is saddened by Charles' announcement and Jelinek's election.

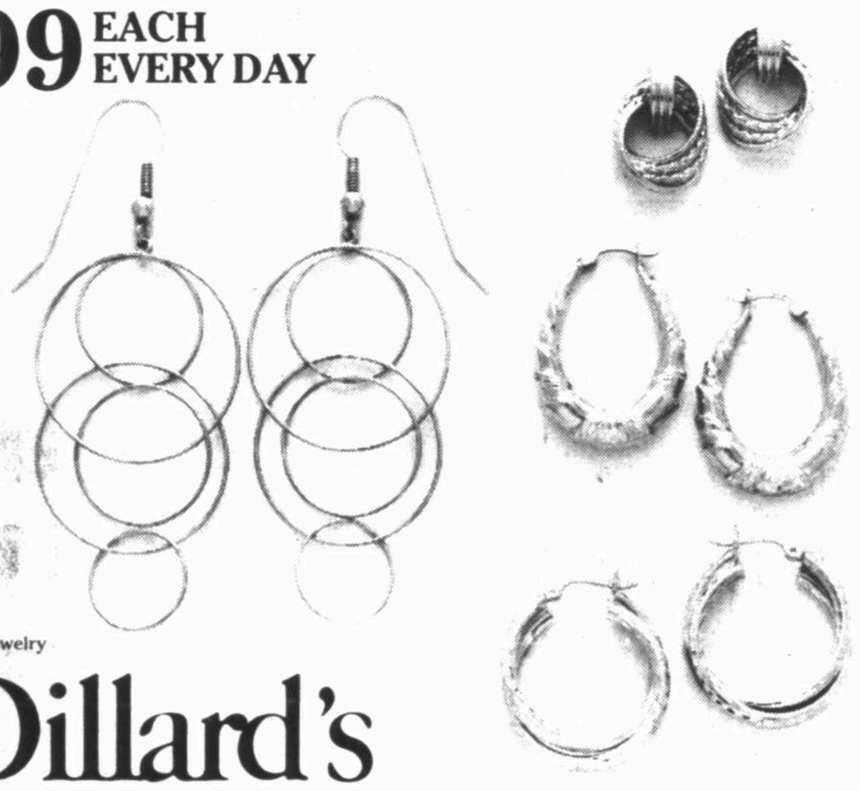

"Our church constitution makes it clear that physical sexual expression is appropriate only within the lifelong, monogamous union of husband and wife," Wetzel said.

Wetzel also criticized Jelinek's history of performing church blessings of same-sex unions in his San Francisco church.

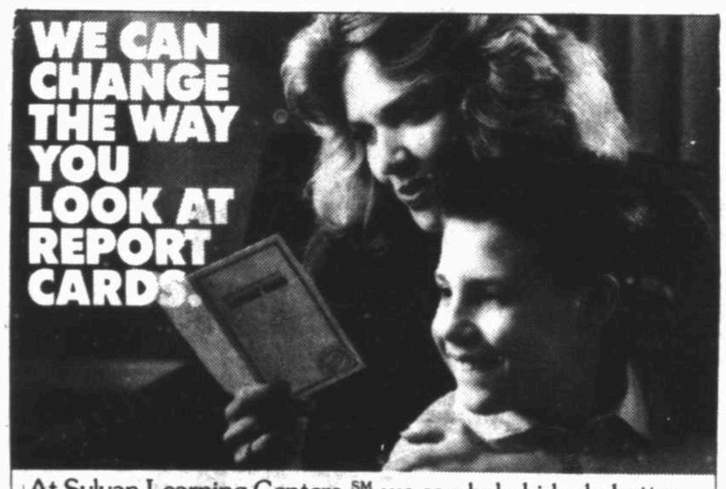

Episcopal Church spokesman James Solheim said that despite a 1979 church resolution opposing the ordaining of homosexuals, there is "no binding, canonical policy" that applies to the entire U.S. church.

Episcopal Bishop William Swing, leader of the San Francisco-based Diocese of California, estimated that 95 percent of his fellow bishops will not ordain "practicing" gays.

School helps children to crest

■ Hillcrest specializes in teaching children with dyslexia and Attention Deficit Disorder.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Blurting out the wrong answer in class is no cause for embarrassment. Neither is fidgeting at the desk or reading aloud in a painfully slow manner.

That's because all students at Hillcrest School have problems that may interfere with their learning in a typical classroom setting.

The private school, which opened in September, specializes in teaching children with dyslexia and Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD). It serves grades kindergarten through ninth.

"When students make a mistake. We say: 'It's OK.' We validate them," said Betty Starnes, Hillcrest executive director.

She said the school's 32 students are of normal intelligence, but may have problems with social skills, attention span and learning blocks.

"We use a multisensory approach to

Appeals ruling casts shadows on gun-free act

Scott W. Wright
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Alfonso Lopez, a senior at an inner-city San Antonio high school, strode into class last year with books, paper, pen — and a deadly secret. Tucked in his waistband was a pistol. Stuffed in his pockets, five bullets.

When caught, Lopez said he was to receive $40 to deliver the gun to another student for a "gang war." Authorities charged him under the Gun-Free School Zones Act, which makes it a felony for those 18 years or older to carry or fire a gun at a school or within 1,000 feet of a school. A judge sentenced Lopez to six months in prison.

But in a ruling some say is a setback for Texas schools, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last month threw out Lopez's conviction and cast doubt on whether the 1990 federal law can ever be used again.

"It's irritating," said John Cole, president of the Texas Federation of Teachers. "That law was a very powerful tool, and now it appears it has been taken away from us."

However, a three-judge panel said the federal government has limited authority to regulate schools and that "if Congress can thus bar firearms ... then it could also similarly ban lead pencils, sneakers ... or slide rules."

The problem is, some educators say,

TASB honors board member

Staff report

The Texas Association of School Boards (TASB) recently named Midland school board trustee Gary Willis as a master trustee.

Willis

He was among 29 school board members — representing school districts across the state — earning the designation.

He is also a graduate of Leadership TASB, a 30-hour program certifying school board members who have demonstrated leadership ability on their respective boards.

Program graduates studied educational reform, school governance and valuing diversity.

Willis has also been named to the Special Committee on School Revenue and Funding. The committee is made up of trustees from around the state. It will meet next month in Austin.

TASB president Jim Nelson said "the work of this committee will be of critical importance for both the association and for public education in Texas."

Midlanders to find books at bargains

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Books will turn into bait tonight when Midlanders are drawn to the Midland County Exhibit Building for the 26th annual Friends of the Library Book Sale.

The sale will include about 50,000 used hardback and paperback books, ranging from the classics to obscure works and from records and talking books to garage-sale items offered by the Midland Genealogical Society.

"It's a lot of work," Friends member Bob Angevine said of collecting and arranging the donated books for the sale, which is for the benefit of the Midland County Public Library.

"But it's really satisfying, especially on Thursday night (at the early-bird sale). People find bargains on books .... It's a wonderful community project that supports the library," he said.

The sale opens at 6 p.m. today, when early-bird admission is $2 a person. There is no admission charge for the other three days.

Except for volumes classified as better books, books will be selling for 50 cents for hardbacks and 25 cents for paperbacks.

Sets of books, such as old encyclopedias, are priced higher.

Sale hours are to be from noon to 9 p.m. on Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, and from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday, when most books will be sold for $1 a yard. Better books, which range in price from $1 to $100, will be marked down to half price on Sunday.

"We are going to have a terrific book sale this year," said Bill Larsen, who helped organize the sale.

"Just looking around, there's a whole bunch of books I'd like to have in my library, but there's a space problem."

Books are displayed spine-up, according to category, on 140 heavy-duty long tables. Categories include

Attorney announces candidacy for congressman

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

San Antonio attorney Rolando Rios, who gained notoriety for his work on education and political access issues, announced his candidacy Wednesday for the 23rd Congressional District.

Rios, a Democrat, announced his intentions during a press conference at Midland International Airport with a group of about 20 supporters present.

He will challenge Republican incumbent Henry Bonilla.

The candidate is best known for his specialization in political access litigation in Texas, challenging election structures that have violated the Voting Rights Act by denying constituents an equal opportunity to elect the candidates of their choice.

Rios said he wanted to run for office to provide citizens of the 23rd District someone who would listen to their desires and reflect that in legislation and voting.

Rios described his campaign as "a positive campaign based on what the citizens of the 23rd District most want and need from their congressman — effective representation and an independent voice who listens to their concerns and ensures that government works for them, not against them."

"I will listen to the citizens of the 23rd District to learn about their concerns and to be for the people of this district what they have been lacking — a strong independent voice who will care about their concerns and who has a proven record of success," Rios said.

Despite his criticism of Bonilla, Rios stressed that his campaign will be positive and contrasted himself with his opponent.

"For the last year, the people of this district have suffered from a congressman who has toed the Republican party line to the exclusion of all else, even when the Republican party leadership's position was in direct contrast to the needs of

For birds, there's no other way to fly but with grace

Birds fly, and they fly with much grace.

Gracefulness, after all, is a critical part of being a bird whether it's a hummingbird, sparrow, mockingbird or another songbird, kite, hawk, eagle, osprey, falcon, dove, turkey vulture, duck, owl, crane, heron or guinea fowl.

Todd

There's no other way to fly but with grace. It's too hazardous and thrilling not to be a thing of beauty in the air. Otherwise, the bird — or you as a pilot in a mechanical flying machine — would end up stalling and falling out of the sky like a winged and bleeding duck doomed to Earth to fly no more.

Of course, some birds, like the kiwi and ostrich, don't fly at all. They just traipse or bully around and explore.

It's a sad thing for a flightless bird, including a would-be soaring creature with clipped wings, not to be in flight and not to be where it is most natural and full of grace and admired by grounded critters. After all, it is the ground dwellers who surely wish they had wings to fly away and explore the blue heavens and the beauties of the land and waters from above.

Among nature's gifted and specialized fliers is the speckled guinea fowl — a pheasant-like bird with wattles, a bony helmet called a casque, and a hauntingly pale purple face.

They are fascinating fliers and startling racket-makers. Alerted and screaming harshly with their high-pitched, cyclic cry, the bird can just about clean out your ears and sinuses. Fortunately, they could almost scare the pants off of any burglars sneaking and snaking around the home place.

We — the Todd family — have a flock of guinea fowl who mostly are confined to a dome cage in which the matriarch, Queenie, rules the castle.

Occasionally, Queenie and her adopted brood of 12, now all just about grown, prance, dance and shuffle out of their home and, savoring succulent green weeds, pick and eat the fodder with relish. They often seem to have their fill of their staple — a mix of corn and grain called scratch.

Now that the older birds have accepted the younger birds, they pretty well forage and fly together like a united force — like the family they are.

Before my wife, Anne, and I became a family at midyear, the guinea fowl lived in town. At first, a couple of years ago, there were seven guinea fowl, including Queenie, whom I got at the feed-and-seed store for the price of buying feed.

They survived the seasons, the hot and the cold, the city's animal-control agents, and some of the neighbors who, I suspect, might have gotten a bit perturbed by the rapid, racket, yells of the birds, who

POLICE REPORTS

Store robberies

ODESSA — Odessa police took three men into custody Friday who officials believe have been involved in a series of robberies that have occurred in Odessa during the past two weeks.

Vernon Terry McGee, 24, was in Odessa City Jail on three counts of robbery, according to a police report. His bond was set at $45,000, officials said.

James Anthony Fields, 36, and Anthony Ray Bernard, 21, were both in custody at Ector County Jail, according to the report. Fields was charged with two counts of robbery, with his bond set at $35,000, officials said. Bernard was charged with one count of robbery and his bond was set at $20,000, officials said.

The three men were arrested in connection with several convenience store robberies that occurred from Sept. 26 to Oct. 8, according to the report.

During the robberies, a black male would buy an item or ask for change in an attempt to get the store clerk to open the register, police said. Once the register was open, the black male would strike or shove the clerk and remove the money, according to the report.

Investigators indentified the three males involved in the robberies and arrested McGee, Fields and Bernard after a robbery at the Merit Store, 4525 E. University St., on Oct. 8, according to the report.

During the arrest, one of men fled on foot from officers and was apprehended a short time later, according to the report.

Oct. 13

Burglary of a residence: Jimmy Long reported that $112 and a small television set was taken from 401 E. Texas Ave., #227, at 8:39 a.m.

Theft: Beto Benitez reported the theft of a homemade single axle trailer valued at $300 at 1223 Cottonwood St. at 10:17 a.m.

Vandalism: Bill Pettit reported an estimated $900 worth of damage done to his vehicle by a beer bottle at 2811 W. Loop 250 N. at 9:20 a.m.

Vandalism: Blaine Bushman reported that paint had been poured on the carpet and walls at 2900 Roosevelt Ave., #B, at 11:31 a.m. Entry was gained by breaking a window and damage was estimated at more than $750.

HELP: School specializes in dyslexia, ADD

all subjects and Alphabetic Phonics for reading," Ms. Starnes said. As an example, she said a middle-grade classroom of students might count aloud, and do oral-to-written, and listening-to-written exercises.

Funded entirely by private donations, the school is divided into lower grades (kindergarten through second grade), middle grades (third, fourth and fifth), upper grade (sixth) and senior grades (seventh through ninth grade). The school has no third-graders enrolled this year.

The school, located at 1201 E. Illinois Ave., is situated in a two-story house that is trimmed in lacey white iron grillwork. It has a homey setting.

"It doesn't look or feel like a school, which makes students more comfortable, especially those who have had bad experiences at a school," Ms. Starnes said.

To add to the familiarity, class schedules are posted. "Students always know what comes next. Most of them are not comfortable with changes or surprises," she said.

The school day begins with a core or homeroom class. Students meticulously check off a supply list each morning to make sure they have everything they need for the day. They have file folders for uncompleted and completed homework to take home, and a call-a-friend sheet in case they have problems with assignments.

"We try to eliminate the guesswork out of these children's lives," Ms. Starnes said.

"Approximately one out of 10 children are diagnosed with dyslexia," the school director said. "They can become frustrated by their failures (in a typical classroom)."

Wade Howell, 14, who has been diagnosed with ADD, said he "carpools" to the school with other Odessa students. Formerly a student at Bonham Junior High School, Wade said "teachers get one-on-one" at Hillcrest.

"I used to have problems keeping up," he said. "Now there are 32 kids in the whole school where I used to have that many in one class."

Rather than just having teachers write assignments on the board or copying down notes, Wade said "here if you don't understand, teachers come around and explain it again."

"They may not explain it to the whole class if the whole class doesn't need it. The teacher comes to you and explains and we learn at our own pace," Wade said.

Wade said rotating electives such as music appreciation, art appreciation and physical education are offered.

Gaston Montaldo, 15, a former San Jacinto Junior High School student, said Hillcrest "trains you better. There are fewer kids. You can concentrate better and there are no fights."

He said the main difference is teachers are more than willing to repeat things twice, "and they don't get angry when they do."

"I do miss the fun things of bigger classes, like paper airplanes," he said, laughing.

A faster reader, Gaston said he is in a reading comprehension class rather than in Alphabetic Phonics.

Students attend 50-minute classes, but activities may change every 10 minutes. The average class size is five to six students, but never more than eight to a teacher.

Hillcrest teacher Cheryl Sims, an educator for 15 years who has also taught in Canadian public schools, teaches fourth-, fifth- and sixth- grade English, math, history and elective courses. She trained in the Alphabetic Phonics program at the Dallas Southwestern Multisensory Center.

She said the difference in teaching at Hillcrest is that "we take the child first before the curriculum. We meet students where they come in and see what it takes to get them to be successful and go from there. Every child is different and I'm always learning something new about education from them."

Ms. Sims said the students often "need a lot of review. You might have taught them a concept one semester, and if you don't review it before going on with another concept they might forget."

She said working with students who are active keeps her active. "We try to plan our lessons so activities change every five to 15 minutes within the 50-minute level.

"We have certain times where students may be at a lesson at the board, sitting in a small group, or reading at their desk. It's too much of a challenge for some of these students to have to sit for long periods of time."

As for the teacher's style of teaching, "I don't sit down in the classroom," Ms. Sims said.

"I get to know my students really well. What is rewarding for one child might not be rewarding to another. I learn — not only their needs — but what motivates them," she said.

The intention of the school is to catch students up so they can return to their former schools.

Tuition is $550 a month. "It doesn't cover the entire cost of educating a child," Ms. Starnes said. She said that Hillcrest's development director, Lynn White, raises funds for the school.

The school has five teachers, including Trinity School teacher Jane McMillan, who teaches at Hillcrest part-time.

Other teachers are Ms. Simms, Emmet Headly, Greta Rigney and Reggie Gardner.

Ms. Starnes said the school is modeled after the June Shelton School and Evaluation Center in Dallas, a school that initially served dyslexic children and later included those with ADD.

"Hillcrest is a transitional school," Ms. Starnes said. "When ready, students return to their former school. We give them the nurturing, tools and skills to go back."

She said the whole intent, embodied in the school name is to help children climb a hill. "It's a struggle, but when they get to the top and crest the hill, they can spread wings and fly."

the citizens of South and West Texas," Rios said.

He characterized Bonilla as a "tool of the Republican party" and said his actions have "betrayed" his constituents.

Efforts to reach Bonilla were unsuccessful.

Rios said education will be one of the centerpieces of his campaign, noting he led "the fight which forced lawmakers to reverse decades of inequity in the higher educational system and provide South and West Texas with their fair share of funds for higher education."

"When I filed that lawsuit . . . I knew we were fighting against the powerbrokers in the Capitol and against the institutions that had ignored us for decades," Rios said.

"But, I also knew that we were right and that it was crucial not just to the people of this area, but to all of Texas that I succeed."

He also emphasized his intentions of bringing increased economic development to the border region. He said the Higher Education South Texas Initiative was already having a strong impact on local economies.

"The economic impact of this act is staggering," he said. "Not only were millions of dollars in funding brought to our area without a tax increase, but the local economies will see an immediate impact from the jobs created by construction and new employment opportunities."

Health-care reform and crime prevention are also strong points for his campaign, Rios said.

Regarding health care, Rios said he supports revamping the current system and searching for ways to provide health security, retaining personal choice of physicians and maintaining the quality of health care.

Rios said he is in favor of campaign reform to limit the amount of campaign contributions received from outside a candidate's district.

He is a graduate of St. Mary's University and received his law degree from Georgetown University Law Center. He served in the military during the Vietnam War and was honorably discharged as a disabled veteran in 1971. Rios has won numerous community service awards and is a member of several professional organizations.

The congressional election is set for November 1994. Primary elections will begin in the spring.

TODD: There's no other way to fly but with grace have the sweetest and most melodious whistling songs when they are at peace with themselves and with the world.

They congregate in trees, where they are safe from most prey, especially dogs, coyotes, snakes, big cats and other roaming creatures with canine teeth and claws.

They are scratchers — like poultry. And they have a reputation of ridding whatever pastures and yards they roam of fleas, ticks, snakes, mice and rats.

And guinea fowl are protective of one another and of fellow birds. Once, I recall, the guinea fowl teamed up like a squadron of pursuit aeroplanes and attacked the feisty terrier who was chasing loose bantams. They threw body blocks and pecked away at the dog to save the bantams from more fright and from a bloody death.

Queenie and the other guinea fowl survived that attack and counterattack.

And sometime before I met Anne, I had given the surviving guinea fowl, save Queenie, to a fellow named Jack who lived in a country setting where the birds and their progeny live today.

After I moved out to the country to be with Anne, we expanded our guinea-fowl flock twice over to total 14. One has since died and is buried near the castle.

Every now and then, we let the birds out to roam, to fly around from barn to rooftop, and to forage.

This we did the other day while Anne, her mother Hazel, and I watched over our flock and mixed the bird-watching with other chores.

The guinea fowl get along just fine with our goats, who like to mill around in the birds' home and eat their grain.

Near sunset as we were rounding up the flock, three of the 13 were missing. Soon, one showed up at entrance to the large domed cage. Another, wandering into a neighbor's backyard, was attacked by a bird-dog and lost some blood and feathers, and survived.

The 13th bird was gone or so we thought until "Mom," called Hazel, spotted the silhouette of the graceful bird atop another neighbor's chimney.

Playing guardian of the guinea fowl, I, gaining permission, got on the rooftop and right up to the neighbor's chimney until the bird took flight to a nearby shed and then, as if called home, took flight again and glided right up to our awaiting Mom, who took the wandering bird home after its evening flight.

Birds fly to be at home.

anthropology, show business, music, physics, science, hobbies, chemistry, English, education, politics, war, law, history, sports, literature, philosophy, religion and reference.

There are also collections of fiction and children's books.

"I think we have a good collection of quality books," Friends worker Mary Mann said. "We have an excellent classical-records section."

The expanded better-books section includes a pre-Civil War unabridged Noah Webster's dictionary for $50 and "autographed, first-edition, and collectible" books, said Mary Hughes, who works with Mrs. Mann each year in collecting and classifying the donated books. "We have more better books than we have ever had."

There are fewer petroleum-related technical books than there were last year, but there is a "good selection of field-trip guides and field-study books," Bill Stewart said.

"Just about all the major authors (from William Shakespeare and Mark Twain to Tom Clancy and Stephen King) are represented here (in better books)," Karon Wilson said.

Michael Mitchell, who assisted the Friends in setting up the sale, said that the display of books is "amazing, really amazing. I work at the church and I'm going to see if I can incorporate a book sale back in my hometown (Corpus Christi)" to benefit the church.

Donna Perrigo, who is in charge of the genealogical society's Trash-to-Treasure garage sale, said miscellaneous items in the sale will include coffee-makers, radios, rocks, dishes, mail boxes, baskets, paintings, pine cones, lamps, candles, toys, dolls, irons and heaters.

RULE: Court's decision casts doubt on act today's students aren't just packing their lunch when they head to class — they're packing guns, knives, razor-sharp metal stars and pepper Mace.

A recent Louis Harris poll of students nationwide found that 15 percent of the 2,508 respondents ages 10 to 19 said they had carried a gun recently. One in 25 said they had taken a handgun to school in the past year. Nine percent said they had shot a gun at someone.

"It is a horrendous problem," said Ginny Markell, who heads the National Parent Teacher Association's health and welfare commission. "Violence is on the rise even in small school districts that used to be considered safe."

Indeed, the ruling comes at a time when the state's school districts, urban and rural alike, seem to be under siege. Administrators are locked in turf wars with well-armed students to keep playgrounds from becoming battlegrounds.

In Dallas and Houston and at least one Austin school — the Alternative Learning Center — metal detectors greet students in the mornings.

Increasingly, the halls in many metropolitan schools and even some smaller districts such as Athens and Edgewood are patrolled by uniformed security guards. Other districts use undercover officers.

Dallas school district officials also equipped classrooms at 11 schools with video surveillance cameras, and some teachers in Corpus Christi have requested similar devices.

Yet it is difficult to find exact numbers to document the rise in violence that so many educators say worries them. The Texas Education Agency does not keep statistics on shootings at schools.

Districts that do track it, such as the Austin school district, provide a disturbing glimpse at the spread of America's gun culture into Texas classrooms.

"Crime is bleeding into our classrooms from the streets," said Capt. Robert Havican of the Austin Independent School District police. He says it's standard for the 15 officers who work patrol to wear bulletproof vests.

DEATHS

James Jackson

Graveside services for James H. Jackson of Midland are to be at 2 p.m. Friday at Anton Cemetery in Anton. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Jackson died Tuesday at a Stanton care center.

He was born May 19, 1912, in Granger and graduated from high school in Anton. He farmed in Anton, Whitharrel, Ropesville and Smyer until 1952. He moved to Pampa, where he worked for the Pampa Independent School District until his retirement in 1977. He had lived in Midland since 1985.

He was preceded in death by several brothers and sisters.

Survivors include a son, H. Joaquin Jackson of Alpine; two daughters, Dorothy Gail Moring of Midland and Jimmie Sue Shadden of Shallowater; six grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to the American Heart Association, 3525 Andrews Highway, Suite 208, Midland, 79703.

Martha Bricker

ROCKDALE — Services for Martha Annie Bricker, 83, of Lexington and mother of Verna Dawson of Midland, are to be at 2 p.m. Friday at Phillips and Luckey Funeral Home in Rockdale. Burial will follow in Lexington Cemetery in Lexington under the direction of Phillips and Luckey Funeral Home.

Mrs. Bricker died Tuesday at a Rockdale hospital.

She was born Aug. 11, 1910, in Austin. She married James V. Bricker on July 25, 1928, in Burnet. She lived in Lexington for the past two years, having moved from McDade. She was a homemaker.

She was preceded in death by her husband on Sept. 10, 1989.

Other survivors include a son, Joe Bricker of Lexington; four other daughters, Earline Burns of Austin, Juanita Graham of Boerne, Lois Richter of Rogers and Margaret Newman of Lexington; a sister, Loraine Robinson of Crockett; 21 grandchildren; and 42 great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers are to be Randy Burns, Tommy Dawson, Pat Bricker, Charles Graham, Craig Newman and Clayton Richter.

Police arrest Odessa woman on charges of embezzlement

Staff report

ODESSA — An Odessa woman was arrested Monday following the return of an 184-page indictment charging her with embezzling more than $180,000 from Medical Center Hospital.

Nelda Baker allegedly took the funds between June 14, 1989, and Jan. 8, 1991, according to court documents. Ms. Baker was in charge of billing and collection of laboratory fees for the hospital, according to court documents.

Court documents alleged Ms. Baker deposited some patients' checks into an account she opened at a local bank rather than in the hospital account.

Hospital administrators were notified of an accounting discrepency a few weeks after Ms. Baker left her position at the hospital in 1991, the charges alleged.

Court documents indicate law enforcement officials became aware of the alleged embezzlement after Ector County sheriff's Deputy Carl Rogers investigated Ms. Baker's job history earlier this year.

Rogers was investigating the death of Ms. Baker's husband, Tony Ray Baker, who was shot to death at an auto parts store on March 25, 1992.

The murder has not been solved.

Ms. Baker remains in the Ector County jail in lieu of $200,000 bond, officials said.

District Attorney John Smith didn't return calls made to his office on Wednesday.

TRUSTEE: TASB honors Willis

(From 1B)

The TASB supports a finance system for Texas public schools that uses a broad-based system of state revenue as the primary basis for school funding and uses the local property tax for supplemental funding, rather than having local taxpayers shoulder much of the burden of financing public schools.

The special committee will try to propose such a financial solution in a series of meetings.

Judge moves cult members' trial from Waco to San Antonio

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal judge granted a defense motion Wednesday to move from Waco to San Antonio the trial of 11 religious cult members accused of killing four federal agents.

The trial is scheduled to begin Jan. 10.

Defense attorneys had said they couldn't get a fair trial in Waco, which is located about 12 miles west of where religious zealot David Koresh holed up with his Branch Davidian followers and held authorities at bay for 51 days.

The standoff ended April 19 when an FBI tank and tear gas assault on Koresh's compound ended in a fire that led to the deaths of Koresh and as many as 85 followers.

The move was ordered by U.S. District Judge Walter Smith of Waco, who is presiding over the trial.

Defense attorneys had pushed for Austin to reduce the distance from Waco. Austin is about 100 miles south of Waco, while San Antonio is 181 miles south.

But Smith said both federal courtrooms in Austin are assigned to sitting judges and the Branch Davidian trial would cause too much disruption.

Some of the court-appointed attorneys have said they may have to step down from the case because the move will be too costly.

But the majority of attorneys felt the case should be moved from Waco based on a theft trial earlier this year against Branch Davidian Rita Riddle.

"About three-quarters of the jury pool in that trial had strong feelings against the Davidians," said attorney Rocket Rosen, who is representing Branch Davidian Kevin Whitecliff. "So that kind of closed the door on Waco, Texas."

Ms. Riddle was convicted and sentenced to probation. Her case, which involved a theft charge that was pending before the siege, is on appeal.

She is not one of the 11 charged with murdering four Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents during a shootout Feb. 28 at Koresh's compound. Six Davidians also are believed to have died in the gun battle that ensued when 100 agents attempted to serve search and arrest warrants for Koresh on weapons charges.

"Based on the publicity and the follow-up publicity to the Branch Davidian incident, I think it was pretty obvious to everyone we couldn't get a trial in Waco in which the jurors had not formed an opinion about the case," said attorney Gerry Morris, who represents Branch Davidian Woodrow Kendrick.

"People in Waco may have felt some pressure as jurors because their city has been identified with the incident. They may have felt as if their city, to some extent, was also on trial," Morris added.

Morris and Rosen said the government will have an advantage with the case in San Antonio because the U.S. attorney's headquarters for the western district of Texas are located there. The lead prosecutor in the case, Ray Jahn, has tried several cases in San Antonio.

Texas Dem pulls out of race, Maddox moves in WASHINGTON (AP) — One Texas Democrat bowed out of next year's Senate race against Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison while another moved closer Wednesday toward a possible bid.

Rep. Martin Frost told reporters during a news conference in his Capitol Hill office that he won't launch a Senate campaign and instead will seek re-election next year to his Dallas-area House district.

"I think my seniority in the House is very important for North Texas," Frost said, noting that he's the highest-ranking Texas Democrat in the House leadership.

Earlier this year, the eight-term member became chairman of an influential House administration subcommittee that controls the purse strings for all House committees. Frost also gained promotion in the whip organization, which helps round up and count votes as well as chart strategy.

Frost also suggested that "it's pretty clear" former Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox will enter the race and that both men would have competed for the same base of support. "I think Jim Mattox will be a strong candidate," Frost said.

Three other Democrats on Capitol Hill — Reps. Mike Andrews of Houston, John Bryant of Dallas and Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs — are mulling challenges to Mrs. Hutchison.

The political landscape was altered last month when Mrs. Hutchison was indicted on charges she used her previous office as state treasurer for personal and political gain and destroyed records as part of a cover up. Trial is scheduled to start Nov. 29.

The filing deadline for the March primary is Jan. 3. So far, only one Republican, Stephen Hopkins of Burnet, has announced a challenge to Mrs. Hutchison for the GOP nomination. Hopkins finished seventh in a field of 24 candidates in the May 1 special election. He was fourth among the GOP candidates, taking 1 percent of the vote.

Frost's news conference came the day after a Mattox spokeswoman told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that Mattox is "as serious as a heart attack" about a Senate race.

"We are on the move," said Elna Christopher, who was Mattox' press secretary in the attorney general's office. "He has talked to a lot of people and will continue to do that in the next couple of weeks or so."

A former legislator, congressman and attorney general, Mattox unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for governor in 1990 in a heated contest with Ann Richards.

He considered running for the Senate earlier this year when Lloyd Bentsen resigned to become treasury secretary, but backed out after virtually every major Democratic constituency group lined up behind Richards' appointment: interim Sen. Bob Krueger.

Mattox eventually cast his support behind Krueger, who was drubbed at the polls June 5 by Mrs. Hutchison.

Chapman, a five-term member, said that in the last three weeks he has "moved distinctly closer to a Senate race and I am very seriously considering it."

He said his decision-making isn't based on Mrs. Hutchison's indictment and predicted he would come to a decision before the start of her trial. "You'd drive yourself crazy trying to figure out what may happen there," he said of his possible rival's legal troubles.

Spokesmen for Andrews and Bryant said their bosses still are weighing their options and haven't come to any decisions.

Spring fashions shown

By Suzy Patterson

PARIS (AP) — Designers Karl Lagerfeld and Claude Montana reveled in swingy, fun clothes as light as air in shows Tuesday of ready-to-wear fashion for next summer.

At Chloe, Lagerfeld kicked off with breezy mythological damsels, a kind of ode to a Grecian urn.

Starting with fluid bloomer suits with baby-doll tunics and sock-leggings over sandals, Lagerfeld moved into all sorts of outfits inspired by Greek vases.

There were little pastel jumper tops over micro-dresses with long sleeves, T-shirts with ruffles, amusing shorts outfits with a wispy skirt blowing around one side, shorts showing on the other.

Bare-midriff outfits in soft knits with flowing cape-like jackets in tender mother-of-pearl pastels came out with the antique touches. Footwear were flat sandals.

This was a welcome change from Lagerfeld's own "skin-dress" show, which many found over the top in obvious sexual suggestiveness.

Here, too, some nudity showed under the transparent mousselines and water-thin silk crepes, but presumably only for the runway.

A good dose of prints in hazy pastels, some antique colors like terra cotta and Pompeii red, and flashes of gold made a fresh contrast to abundant black and white.

There were a few crumpled-paper jackets, but paired with soft outfits and lacy-lingerie outfits, they looked gorgeous enough for Aphrodite's wardrobe.

Montana — master of the sharp scissor and glacial silhouette — has softened up.

Some think he's feeling tender since his marriage: he showed his first nifty black-white, full-skirted minisuit on his bride of several months and favorite model, Wallis.

Plenty of black-and-white details in flared skating-skirt outfits popped up, as did a million ways to wear flared short tuxedos. Short bloomers and baby dolls looked rather naughty.

Besides short skirts, Montana showed a few cigarette pants and terrific pajamas. Typical of the ethereal look were lean white crepe pants topped by a flowing white organza dressing gown.

Flowing pants ran the Montana show, in caramel or sandy beiges, plus the ubiquitous black and white. Other colors included river green to hot-sunny reds and yellow or subtle red-black iridescence in sheer fabrics.

Montana's marvelous variations on tops included flounced tunics, flyaway cape-jackets and a flowing double sailor blouse. Little knits, silk T-shirts and flying panels helped the clothes move in today's rhythms.

At Balmain, Oscar de la Renta kept things commercial and sober, but beautifully so. The Dominican-New Yorker is still geared to Big Apple pragmatism rather than Parisian flights of fancy.

This message in ladylike simplicity is what the French would call "bon chic, bon genre," a sort of Gallic preppy.

Softness here came out in a few little pleated navy georgette silk dresses — above the knee, as were all his skirts.

Andre Courreges, 70, singled out Jean-Charles de Castelbajac to design his ready-to-wear for the first time.

Castelbajac did a bang-up job, both emulating Courreges 1960s style — futuristic at the time — and doing his own thing, from metal-fastened dungaree styles to shorts with rope belts.

Local girl wins pageant award

Janie Jewel Snodgrass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Snodgrass of Midland, was named winner of the photogenic award at the 1993 Miss Texas Teen All American Pageant last weekend in Dallas. The winner of the pageant will represent Texas in the 16th annual Miss Teen All American Pageant in August in Miami, Fla.

Miss Snodgrass is a student at Midland High School where she is a member of the bowling class.

Her sponsors were Greg and Gordon Daman of Sonic Drive-In, Mr. and Mrs. Snodgrass, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fino, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Munoz of Auction Action Midland 2, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fino, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Powell and Max Munoz Jr.

Invitations' dress codes confuse issue

By Erma Bombeck

All of you will sleep better tonight knowing that ambiguity lives.

It has been kept alive by writers of invitations to events who tell you at the bottom of the card what the dress code is going to be.

Bombeck

A "Black Tie" affair does not necessarily mean men have to wear a black tie unless they want to look like the waiters. They can come in a white one or a plaid one to match a cummerbund. The black-tie rule does not apply to women at the event, unless the affair is the Emmys, where the women dress like men. The biggest decision a woman has to make is whether to wear a drop-dead short dress or a drop-dead long dress.

"Women Formal — Men Optional." This will be an occasion where the women arrive and look like they were dressed for the ball by Professor Henry Higgins, and the men all look like they came straight from work. I don't know of a single man who will opt for an evening entombed in starch when he can choose to breathe.

I like the invitations that say "Attire Optional." This leaves it pretty wide open. The idea of entering a roomful of naked people who opt not to wear anything boggles the mind.

"Casual" is the command that drives people crazy. According to the dictionary, it is apparel appropriate for wear on informal occasions. Not dressy.

I wear "casual" to scrub the toilets, paint the living room, clean out the garage and pick up dry cleaning. Do I want to look like a wino at Barb and Harry's barbecue? It's like a "come as you are" invitation. People never do that either.

I've arrived at "casual" events where people looked better than I did at my own wedding. There were others who looked like phys-ed teachers who had just taught three classes in a row.

Recently, hostesses have begun to play around a bit with the dress code. Now I am seeing "Western Chic" and "Desert Chic." Those are misnomers if ever I heard them.

I went to a Desert Chic party once wearing a pair of slacks and a blouse with fringe on it. The hostess was wearing a feathered cowboy hat from Neiman Marcus that cost more than our first house.

Telling people what to wear is pretty dumb anymore, given the individuality and the choices. If you're going to invite me to something, come over to the house, look through my closet, and then tell me what to wear. I'd feel better about it.

DEAR ABBY

Gay brother can be best man at wedding

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Confirmed Bachelor" wrote to tell you that his sister wanted him to give her away at her wedding, but the family of her groom-to-be didn't want him there because he was gay. You advised him to wish her well, but stay away.

Van Buren

I have a different suggestion. "Confirmed Bachelor" may be saddled with this brother-in-law for the rest of his life, and avoiding his sister's wedding is no way to build familial relationships. What if he went to the wedding and was gracious and loving to all concerned, proving that any fears and prejudices are unfounded?

By and large, prejudice is based on ignorance, and I believe that most people can be won over by a loving presence. Very few people who believe homosexuality is incompatible with the worship of God have worshiped side by side with lesbians or gays.

I think "Bachelor" has a golden opportunity here. Change doesn't happen overnight; it might take a long time, but he can show his mettle and attempt to open communication with his new family — or confirm their idea of his inappropriateness by not participating in the wedding worship service.

Either way, it's going to be tough for him. I wish him well and promise him that not everyone in the church is against him. — PRESBYTERIAN MINISTER IN TEXAS

P.S. Abby, I wrote to you in 1974, asking what to do about my weight problem. You suggested Overeaters Anonymous, and told me about its reliance on a higher power. Well, I was 14, and not ready to hear that. But it stayed with me. I finally attended my first meeting in 1987, and I just had my sixth birthday of abstinence from binge eating. The program was a large reason for my entry into the ministry, as I got in touch with my own higher power. Thanks for planting that seed. It has truly flowered.

DEAR MINISTER: Your insight and answer concerning the gay brother were right on. Your P.S. was an A-1 bonus for me. Thank you for writing. Your letter made my day.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you out of concern and confusion. I have been dating a very special young lady for 11 months. She is 23, twice married, and has a 2½-year-old daughter.

I am 29, have never been married and have no children. Four months ago, I purchased a home, and she and her daughter have been living with me. I am supporting her (financially), as well as her daughter, while she completes her college education.

Now the problem: She is pressuring me almost daily to marry her soon. She says she needs a commitment from me — although neither she nor I is dating anyone else.

She tells me that other men want to date her, and are willing to give her a commitment of marriage immediately. I think she is telling me this to make me jealous, and I must admit, it hurts me.

I do love her, and plan to marry her eventually, but not right now. I don't want to lose her, but I don't like the pressure she is putting on me.

I tell her I need more time, but she thinks it's just an excuse. It's not an excuse; it is how I feel. What should I do? — CONFUSED AND CONCERNED

DEAR CONFUSED: It's much easier to get into a marriage than to get out of one. (And cheaper, too.) More important, if she really loved you, she wouldn't even consider marrying anyone else — much less dating him. Call her bluff. I doubt very much if she will leave you — but if she does, you could be lucky.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me, before I contribute to family bickering! Am I alone in thinking that a child's major special occasions should be acknowledged on — or perhaps a day or two before — that special day?

I am on my second set of in-laws who cannot find the local post office. It is always the same: "We will give Sarah her gift when we see you next."

I have never lived close to my in-laws, nor do I see them often. None of them could plead poverty. Even a card would have meant a lot to my daughter on her graduation day. It would have meant they at least thought of her. This "when we see you" business has gone on all my daughter's life, but when her high school graduation passed unnoticed, it was the last straw.

For years I have sent cards and gifts — usually separately, so there was more to open — to children I seldom see, but of whose every celebration we are notified. I keep my own announcements to the absolute minimum. I never send any kind of announcement or invitation unless I am reasonably certain that the party to whom I am sending it would accept, or truly want to know about the occasion.

Abby, two questions: Don't they think each child should be made to feel appreciated? And who do they think buys THEIR children's gifts? — SARAH'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: People who do not acknowledge the special occasions of family members are either thoughtless, disorganized, lazy, cheap — or all of the above.

WORTH REMEMBERING: "I've never been poor, only broke. Being poor is a frame of mind. Being broke is only a temporary inconvenience." (Mike Todd)

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Black is trendy jewelry color

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — In a season when black is the color of fashion and jewelry is being underplayed, the most appropriate jewels to wear are black.

Black jet beads add a subtle glow to velvet, chiffon or lace for dress-up evenings. There are Victorian-style chokers to wear with romantic blouses, long flapper-style beads to go with sexy mini-dresses, and stick pins and brooches for dandy jackets.

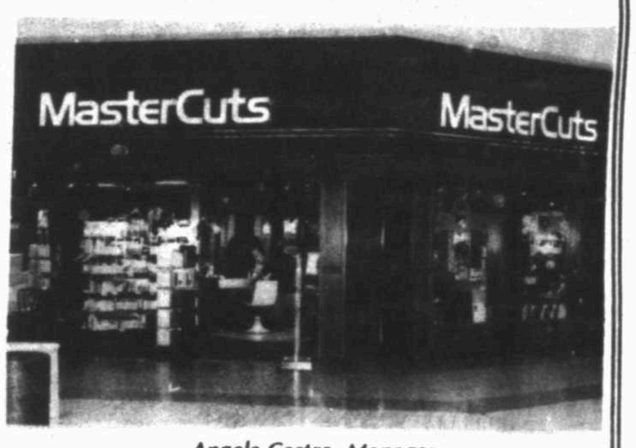

"As far as jet necklaces go, the most popular are very short or very long," said Carolee Friedlander, who designs under the Carolee label. At Saks Fifth Avenue, 60-inch strand is $80; a six-strand choker, $125.

Barneys New York has chokers and earrings of black glass by Ericson Beamon and antique jet crystal chokers by Marie Ferrar ($50 to $500).

Maria Calderara's jet multistrands ($180 to $275) are at Bergdorf Goodman. Henri Bendel has Gaetano Fazio's chokers and earrings ($50 to $465).

Report: Average salaries for teachers up 3.2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teachers from around the country are applying for jobs in Hartford. The average salary for school teachers in Connecticut is the highest in the nation — $48,918 a year — and the city pays even more.

The American Federation of Teachers reported Wednesday that public school teachers around the country were paid an average $35,104 in 1992-93, up 3.2 percent from the previous year.

That's the highest average salary ever, the AFT said. But taking inflation into account, the union figured that teachers earned about $56 more than the previous year.

The AFT said the 3.2 percent raises teachers received in 1991-1992 and again in 1992-93 represented the smallest increases in 35 years.

Salaries were generally higher in the Northeast, and lower in the South, though the most poorly paid teachers in the nation were in South Dakota, according to the survey.

Teachers there were paid $24,291, just 69.2 percent of the national average.

At the opposite end of the scale is Connecticut.

"A lot of people are calling and applying because of our salary," said Ted Obieglo, a Hartford schools official. The average annual salary in Hartford is about $54,000.

Obieglo said applications for teaching positions have come from as far away as California and Florida, but the school district expects to hire fewer than 30 new teachers for the current school year.

California, with an average teacher's salary of $39,922, ranks ninth in the nation. Florida ranks 27th, with an average salary of $31,172.

"Salary is certainly a very strong attractor," said Charles Marshall of the Association for School, University and College Staffing. The Chicago-based organization helps place new teachers.

But he said there was a "rather depressed market" for teachers. "I'm finding that if people can move, they're willing to cross many state lines to get a job," he said.

The AFT survey found that only two states — Maryland and Wyoming — reported that the average teacher's salary had actually dropped in the 1992-1993 school year — less than 1 percent in both cases.

West Virginia reported the largest increase — 10.7 percent.

F. Howard Nelson, AFT's associate director of research and author of the study, said the trend this year, however, is for salaries to increase.

For example, he said, salaries in Maryland were going up all around the state, while teachers in the District of Columbia were getting their first pay raise in two years.

The union compared teacher's salaries to those paid to lawyers, accountants and other professionals and found that the educators came out on the bottom. But teachers earned 13 percent more than the average government worker in 1992.

"For all of the talk about teacher's salaries and education reform and change, you haven't seen anyone say you have to pay teachers more," said Jewell Gould, AFT's director of research.

Gould said 40 percent of education expenditures go toward teacher salaries.

The survey found that the 10 states with the highest teacher salaries were Connecticut, $48,918; Alaska, $46,799; New York, $44,999; New Jersey, $43,355; Michigan, $42,256; Pennsylvania, $41,515; Rhode Island, $40,548; District of Columbia, $40,228; California, $39,922; and Massachusetts, $39,245.

The states with the lowest average salaries were: South Dakota, $24,291; Mississippi, $24,367; North Dakota, $25,211; Louisiana, $26,074; Oklahoma, $26,355; New Mexico, $26,463; Utah, $26,997; Idaho, $27,011; Alabama, $27,490; and Montana, $27,617.

When cost-of-living is taken into consideration, teachers in Michigan fare the best, while those in South Dakota remain at the bottom.

FBI appoints female, Hispanic assistant directors

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In an effort to counter past and present accusations that the FBI discriminates against women and minorities, FBI Director Louis Freeh on Wednesday appointed the bureau's first female and Hispanic assistant directors.

Freeh said the promotions will help the FBI "show the diversity that we have to show to do our job effectively."

Freeh named Burdena Pasenelli as assistant director in charge of the finance division, devoted primarily to budgetary matters. He named Manuel Gonzalez as assistant director in charge of the personnel division.

Pasenelli, a Washington State University graduate and a former Seattle police detective, has been in charge of the bureau's Anchorage, Alaska, office since last year.

Gonzalez, who knows Freeh from the days when both were street agents in New York in the late 1970s, is a New York native who is currently the No. 2 agent in the bureau's Miami field office.

Freeh also announced the appointment of Paul Philip, a black, to head the bureau's training division, which runs the FBI academy in Quantico, Va. Philip is the second black agent to serve as assistant director. The first was John Glover, who was assistant director for the inspection division from 1982 to 1986 and who later retired.

On the FBI's new organization chart, assistant directors will be the third level of supervision at the bureau below Freeh and the No. 2 official, Deputy Director Floyd Clarke. Each assistant director is responsible for a specific area of concern, from criminal investigations to counterintelligence.

Of the 10,320 agents in the bureau, 620 are Hispanic, 520 are black and 158 are Asian-American. Approximately 1,200 are women.

The appointments come just six weeks into Freeh's tenure and represent his attempt to put his own imprint on the insular world of the FBI.

Earlier this week, Special Agent Suzanne Doucette said FBI officials had ruined her career after she went public with accusations of sexual harassment against a superior in the Tucson, Ariz., office. She was placed on unpaid administrative leave two weeks ago and has filed a lawsuit.

The bureau has been plagued by charges of racism in recent years. Freeh's predecessor, William Sessions, made affirmative action one of his top priorities during his five years at director.

When Hispanic agents won court rulings in 1988 and 1989 on a class-action lawsuit that alleged job discrimination, Sessions refused to appeal and instead worked vigorously to hire and promote more minority agents. But the bitterness still lingers.

An Hispanic agent who participated in the lawsuit and asked not to be identified called the appointment of Gonzalez a "disappointment" because Gonzalez testified at the 1987 trial in El Paso, Texas that the FBI did not discriminate.

Gonzalez was promoted over two senior Hispanic agents who were among the 350 participating in the class-action suit, the agent said. "It's still the status quo," the agent said. "Manny Gonzalez is part of the good old boy network."

Black agents also alleged racially biased treatment by bureau officials and threatened to sue. Last week a federal judge in Washington approved a settlement between the bureau and 300 black agents involving greater job transfers and promotions.

Church of Scientology gets long-sought tax exemption

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The federal government said Wednesday that it had agreed to grant a tax exemption to the Church of Scientology and more than 150 of its related corporations, ending one of the longest-running tax disputes in American history.

"This puts an end to what has been an historic war," said Marty Rathbun, president of a Scientology organization that received a tax exemption. "It's like the Palestinians and the Israelis shaking hands."

Officials at the IRS and the Scientology group declined to spell out the details of the settlement and would not explain why it had finally been reached after four decades of costly and bitter court fights.

People familiar with the group's closely held finances said the tax exemptions could save the organization at least tens of millions of dollars in taxes annually.

The exemptions were granted as part of a larger settlement between the government and the Scientology organizations that ends legal disputes that go back to the founding of the church 39 years ago. Church officials said the settlement would close more than a dozen pending lawsuits.

IRS officials said the decision granting the Scientologists tax-exempt status does not change the existing standards for determining when an institution is to be considered religious for tax purposes, and that the ruling would not affect how other groups are treated.

But some tax lawyers who have advised organizations seeking tax-exempt status said that the ruling would make it easier for them to argue their cases.

The church's California branch at one point had a federal tax exemption but lost it 26 years ago, and most of the other related organizations never had exemptions.

For decades, the government has said that although Scientology can be considered a religion, its affiliated organizations had operated as businesses for the financial gain of the church's leaders, most notably L. Ron Hubbard.

Hubbard, who founded the group in the 1950s after his book "Dianetics" became a best seller, responded to the IRS challenge by making anti-government statements that became part of the church's dogma.

Prices slump

Crude oil futures declined on the New York Mercantile Exchange after the American Petroleum Institute reported a rise last week in U.S. crude stocks.

West Texas Intermediate for November delivery fell 7 cents to $18.64 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $17 a barrel.

November contracts for natural gas rose 5.4 cents to $2.205 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Car sales jump

DETROIT — Sales of cars and light trucks built in North America climbed 8.7 percent in early October, compared with lackluster sales for the period a year earlier.

"These are decent numbers, and I think they'll get better as we get deeper into the fall," said David Healy, an auto industry analyst with S.G. Warburg & Co. in New York.

A combination of low inventories and higher prices for newly arriving 1994 models may be slightly slowing sales, he said. But as inventories rise, the consumers will return to showrooms, Healy predicted.

Some dealers were still complaining that they were not receiving enough vehicles to keep up with demand. Inventories are generally low in the late summer and early fall, as dealers begin to stock new models.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar finished mixed Wednesday in light trading as the currency markets focused on weakness in the French and Belgian currencies.

Gold prices were down in the United States and up in Europe. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $366.20 a troy ounce, down $1.60 from Tuesday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 105.95 yen, down from 106.00 yen on Tuesday.

In New York, the British pound was trading at $1.5225, cheaper than $1.5330 on Tuesday.

Dow gains

NEW YORK — Cable and entertainment stocks soared Wednesday after announcement of one of the largest mergers ever, the combination of Bell Atlantic and Tele-Communications Inc.

The broader market, however, didn't experience the feverish trading. The Dow Jones industrial average gained a modest 10.06 points to close at 3,603.19. In an even broader measure of market activity, declining issues outnumbered advances about 10 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 290.90 million shares, up from 263.94 million in the previous session.

Bell Atlantic, TCI Cable to merge

Mega-deal consummates 'perfect information-age marriage'

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bell Atlantic Corp. is buying Tele-Communications Inc., the nation's largest cable TV operator, and an affiliate in a mega-deal consummating the "perfect information-age marriage."

The merger dramatizes the rapidly changing communications landscape being reshaped to deliver voice, video and computer data through a single connection into the home.

"With the combination of cable properties and wire and wireless telephone businesses, we will immediately create one of the world's largest informaton distribution companies," Bell Atlantic Chairman Raymond W. Smith said Wednesday in announcing the deal.

Bell Atlantic, a regional phone company, will acquire TCI and Liberty Media Corp., also a cable provider, in two phases for a price that could exceed $30 billion.

After the merger, Bell Atlantic would have more than 22 million telephone and cable customers in 59 of the top 100 U.S. markets.

"Financially, the synergies are terriffic," said John C. Malone, TCI's chief executive officer. "The combination of the two enterprises will dramatically increase the cash available right now."

TCI is in the middle of a $3.3 billion stock-swap acquisition of Liberty Media, which figures in a battle over Paramount Communications Inc.

In the Paramount battle, cable shopping channel QVC and Viacom Inc., another cable operator, have made competing bids for the entertainment company. TCI is backing QVC, and some have questioned what role the merger with Bell Atlantic would have on that deal.

Viacom said it raised troubling questions about Malone's power.

On Wednesday, the companies showed off Bell Atlantic's prototype Stargazer interactive, multimedia television system.

Through Stargazer, subscribers would be able to use their TVs to "travel" through a graphically produced on-screen mall, using a computer mouse-like device. Shoppers could "enter" a record store on the screen, listen to music selections and make purchases — without ever leaving their armchairs.

Such technology is seen by many as the future of communications. Bell Atlantic, TCI and Liberty Media hope to be a big part of it.

"In short, we think this is the perfect information-age marriage," Smith said.

Many had presumed phone companies and cable operators would be opponents in the scramble to offer interactive services. But recent regulatory actions have allowed phone companies to become allies of the cable industry.

The sheer size of the Bell Atlantic-TCI merger, however, could raise new questions at the Justice Department and the Federal Communications Commission, which will review the deal.

Wall Street seemed pleased with the Bell Atlantic announcement.

Woolworth plans to slash 13,000 jobs, 720 stores

NEW YORK (AP) — Woolworth Corp. is slashing 13,000 jobs and closing or redesigning 970 stores, a bold move that will end a century-old dime store tradition in many North American communities.

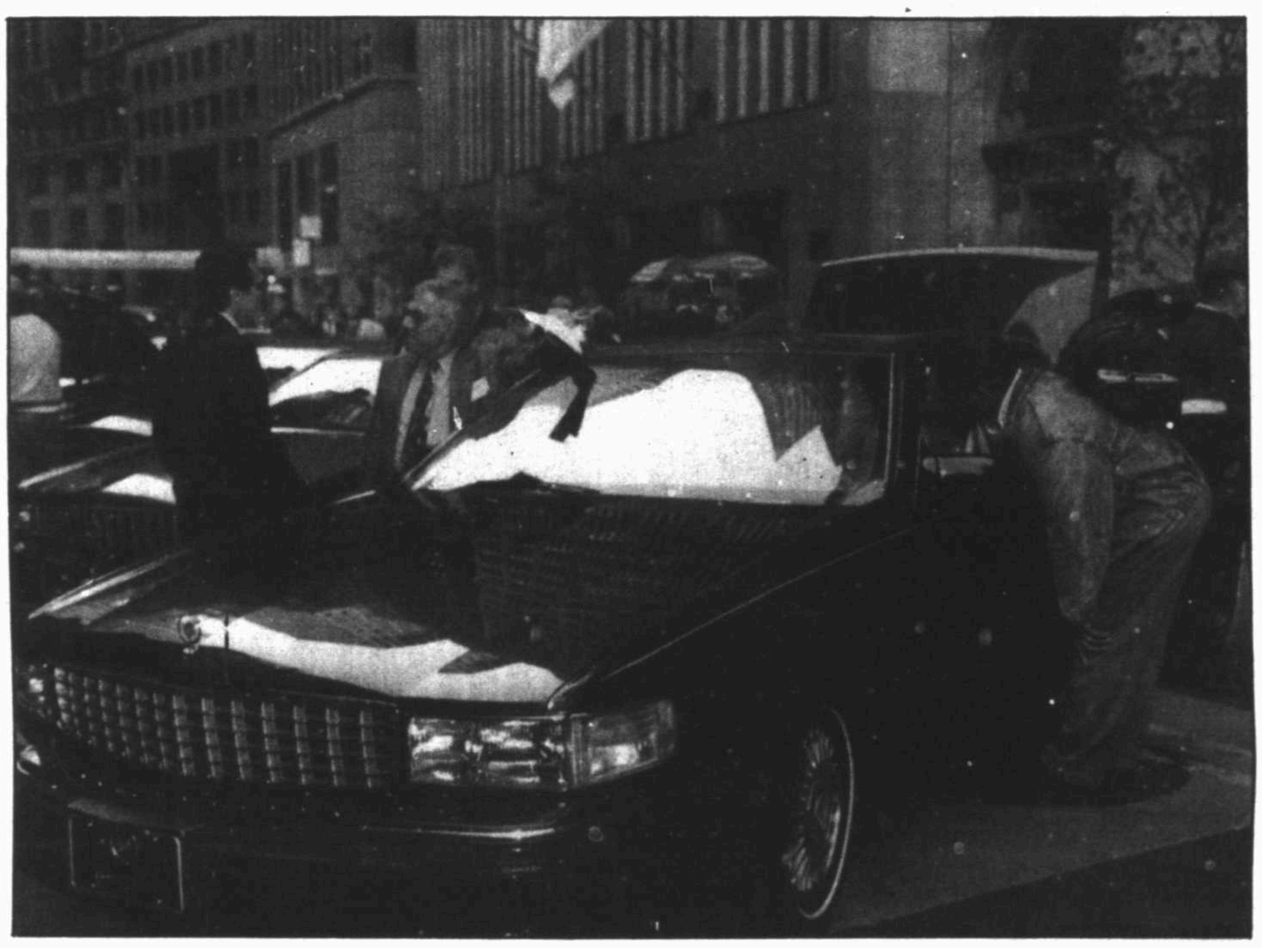

The plan announced Wednesday accelerates Woolworth's transformation from a homespun variety-store chain into an urban-centered specialty retailer.

Woolworth Chairman William Lavin blamed the closings on unfavorable economic conditions, increased competiion and less consumer spending. The restructuring marks the second time in as many years that Woolworth closed hundreds of unprofitable stores.

Woolworth said it will focus on its profitable Foot Locker stores and expand its World Foot Locker athletic chain, RX Place deep-discount drug stores and the Northern Reflections women's apparel stores.

Some 250 of the 970 targeted stores will be reconfigured into these and other more profitable formats. The rest will be closed. In Canada, about 100 Woolworth stores will be converted to the popular The Bargain Shop concept introduced in 1991.

All told, about 10,000 jobs in the United States will be eliminated and 3,000 in Canada — about 9 percent of Woolworth's total work force.

Shell begins another round of cuts, layoffs

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. on Wednesday said it has started another round of layoffs, but denied a report that 20 percent of the company's approximately 25,000 employees could be affected.

Company spokeswoman Kitty Borah said the cutbacks are part of Shell's ongoing efforts to reduce costs and streamline operations. Two years ago, Shell announced plans to eliminate up to 15 percent of its work force, or about 4,700 people.

"Although progress is encouraging, additional improvement opportunities are being pursued," Ms. Borah said. "In this regard, further restructuring is continuing in various business and administrative units."

Greenspan rebuffs lawmakers' talk of reforming Fed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan bluntly rejected a congressional move to make the nation's central bank more politically accountable, calling such efforts "assaults" that could lead to economic instability and recession.

But supporters intent on reforming the nation's most powerful economic institution let it be known they intend to push forward.

Greenspan squared off Wednesday with House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, who is spearheading the most concerted effort in three decades to overhaul the Fed, which critics charge is undemocratic, secretive and dominated by white, male bankers.

Gonzalez's bill would require the 12 Fed regional bank presidents to be selected by the president rather than bank-dominated local boards. It would also force more timely public release of Federal Reserve policy actions, provide greater congressional oversight of the Fed's budget and xpand opportunities for women, minorities and nonbankers to serve as regional bank directors.

Greenspan, however, rejected all the proposed changes, saying they were either not needed or, in the worst case, would subject the central bank to greater political pressures.

Efforts to spur economic growth without regard to inflation, Greenspan said, could "lead to instability, recession and economic stagnation."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Custodial account spending must benefit minor

By Bill Doyle

Q: What is a "custodial" account for a child? Can the custodian sign checks, etc., if necessary? Is a joint account preferable?

Doyle

A: A custodial account is a rather simple arrangement through which an adult holds bank deposits or securities for a minor in the method set up by "gift to minors" legislation, which has been enacted in all 50 states, or the newer "transfer to minors" legislation, which applies to many states.

The account is registered in an adult's name, as custodian for the minor's name. Everything in the account belongs to the minor — not the adult custodian.

The custodian can write checks on the account, because he or she has a fiduciary responsibility to manage the account — always for the benefit of the minor. The custodian cannot use the money for anything else. For example, a parent who is custodian of such an account is prohibited from tapping the account to pay for things that are parental responsibilities, such as food, clothing and shelter.

Although some parents might violate these rules, they do so at their own risk. When a youngster who has a custodial account reaches the age of majority, he or she can demand an accounting from the custodian and even haul the custodian into court.

A joint account is not necessarily preferable. A minor cannot legally own stock in his or her name, even in a joint account.

Q: I have several stock certificates, registered in my grandmother's name, my father's name and my mother's name "as joint tenants with right of survivorship." My grandmother died in 1966, my father in 1970 and my mother in 1986. I have all three of their death certificates and my mother's will, leaving everything to me.

I have been advised it will cost about $10,000 to probate the will, but the stock is worth only about $5,000. Is there any way I can get the stock transferred to my name without all that expense?

The stock's transfer agent says I need to have my grandmother's, father's and mother's signatures guaranteed. But how can I do that? They are all gone.

A: You won't be faced with the impossible task of getting signatures from beyond the grave. Rule 10.04 of the Securities Transfer Association shows you have everything you need to have that stock put in your name: the three death certificates and your mother's will.

When stock or other assets are in joint tenancy and one or more of the tenants — owners — dies, the surviving tenant becomes the sole owner. At the death of the last surviving joint tenant, ownership passes to that tenant's heirs — you, in this case.

You can get things squared away through the court in the county where your mother lived when she passed away. Contact the clerk of the court there and arrange the necessary procedure, which can vary somewhat from state to state. Your expenses should be relatively minor, nowhere near $10,000.

Q: I am aware that the large federal estate tax bite kicks in when an estate is over $600,000.

In a hypothetical estate in excess of that amount, if the will designates that $600,000 is to go to the heirs named and the remainder is to go to specific charities, will the estate tax still apply to the amount over $600,000?

A: Probably no. Charitable deductions in a will reduce the size of the taxable estate.

However, if you are planning such a move, you would be wise to consult an expert tax and estate attorney. Otherwise, you might run afoul of complicated rules placing a ceiling on charitable deductions.

Also, remember that a spouse can leave to the surviving spouse who is an American citizen unlimited amounts free of the U.S. estate tax.

Analysts: Bribery sometimes can work wonders in Mexico

By Susana Hayward
Associated Press writer

MONTERREY, Mexico — At a Chamber of Commerce meeting here last year, a speaker asked 400 Mexican businessmen if they ever paid a bribe. They answered with a roar of laughter.

Nearly all had.

Corruption is a way of life — and a way of business — in Mexico, from rigged elections and winning a government contract to getting a telephone and paying a traffic fine.

Some business people say corruption will blunt the impact here of the North American Free Trade Agreement by scaring off foreign investors. Others say the foreign influence may help Mexico overcome the time-worn practice.

In a recent example of such corruption, Nuevo Leon State Sen. Jorge Padilla created a furor when he presented leaked documents to the state senate showing the low bidder on a major dam project was given only one-quarter of the job.

Padilla, of the pro-business National Action Party, said a U.S.-Mexican consortium bid low on four water treatment plants for the Cuchillo Dam, Mexico's largest.

The government awarded it a contract for one plant. A Mexican company with a higher bid got two contracts, a Japanese company a fourth.

"That's what a foreign investor will find when he comes to Mexico," said engineer Alfredo Corella. "The government broke all uniformity of the plants by spreading it among four companies who use different technologies."

Corruption is so ingrained that many Mexicans hesitate at calling it corruption. It's more a system of favors, of who you know to help you out

Sociologist Maria de los Angeles Pozas observed, "Corruption shows the deficiency of a system. It's a means to cut through red tape when the system fails to meet the real demand. It's a curse we have suffered for many years."

The bureaucracy is bogged down with red tape and inefficiency that can make the simplest of tasks a major undertaking. Lines are long, office supervisors often absent, multiple forms and approvals are usually required.

"It's very difficult to get permits, phone lines, electricity — in short communications," explained furniture store owner Jose Luis Cuandro.

But if you pay a bribe, "something that took three months to do suddenly takes only one day."

Governments have campaigned against corruption for decades here — with mixed success. Mexico's elections are still widely criticized, but flagrant fraud is rarer now.

Hundreds of state and federal police have been fired for corruption or torture.

The last Mexico City police chief is behind bars and his successor has promised a cleanup, ending the policy of selling assignments to potentially bribe-heavy spots. But traffic cops still commonly accept bribes.

Enrique Zambrano, president of the Chamber of Industry and Manufacturing in Monterrey, argues that corruption is not confined to Mexico

Padilla agrees. "American businessmen are not all that scrupulous. Business is business. He'll learn faster the crooked way of doing business in Mexico.

"In the United States, it's illegal to trade with inside information. In Mexico, no one trades without inside information."

East Asia roars despite recessions elsewhere

By Carl Hartman
Associated Press writer

Report by World Bank cites good educational systems, stable governments, low taxes.

WASHINGTON — Economists often call the successful economies of East Asia "tigers" or " dragons." What makes them roar? Good schooling and strong government, says the World Bank.

Despite a slowdown that hit most of the rest of the world, East Asia produced 8.9 percent more goods last year than the year before, according to a World Bank report released Sunday.

Asian economies were roaring ahead at more than three times the pace of U.S. production, which increased only 2.6 percent.

Since 1965, seven East Asian nations — Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore, Thailand, Malaysia and Indonesia — as well as the British colony of Hong Kong have increased their wealth at an average annual rate three times higher than Latin America and more than 20 times higher than southern Africa, said the report.

According to the report, called "The East Asian Miracle," East Asia is the only area that has made its people richer while narrowing the gap between rich and poor. The fastest growing economies are the most equal: Japan, Taiwan, South Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore.

The report noted the East Asian emphasis on primary and secondary education.

"When it comes to improving the distribution of wealth, better education is more important than just amassing it," said Michael Bruno, the bank's new chief economist.

Government policies foster stability by keeping prices from rising too fast and currency cheap enough so that exports sell, the report said.

John Page, who led the team that made the report, added some other recommended fundamentals at a news conference:

—Not too many taxes on farmers, who make up the biggest part of the Third World population.

—Safe and secure financial systems.

—Open doors for foreign technology.

Investments are also important, Page said.

"In that sense there is no East Asian miracle," he said. "People in these economies have simply studied harder, worked harder and saved more than people in other countries."

Page left open the question of whether democratic or authoritarian governments are more successful in promoting prosperity, pointing out that over 30 years there has been a great range of governments in the seven countries and Hong Kong.

Some Japanese let 'Bath Robot' take over wash jobs

TOKYO (AP) — Rubber Duckie, meet the Bath Robot. The computer revolution has spilled over into that most private of sanctuaries: the bathroom.

Bath Robot provides a completely automated shower experience — something like a car wash for people.

"It's a great feeling," said Takashi Miyoshi of Fuji Shoko, one of five companies that spent four years developing the government-funded robot. "But you have to do your own shampooing."

Bathers sit inside a 5-foot, 4-inch high cubicle for the computer-controlled treatment, which starts with a three-minute sauna. Next comes a spray of hot water, a jet of liquid soap, more hot water to rinse the suds off, and a cool, drying breeze.

The robot originally was designed for workers who come home too exhausted or drunk to bathe themselves, Miyoshi said. But developers now hope Bath Robot will be used by the handicapped, sick and elderly.

The robot, called "basu-robo" in Japanese, is scheduled to go on sale next month for $46,000.

Shroud of mystery drapes Lenin's tomb

By Candice Hughes
Associated Press writer

Rumors fly around Moscow that Lenin's mummified body might be taken from tomb, buried.

MOSCOW — The goose-stepping sentinels are gone from Lenin's tomb. The Lenin Museum is closed. Could it be the Great Man's body is headed for the grave?

Since his death in 1924, Vladimir I. Lenin — yellowing, decomposing bit by bit — has lain under glass in a chilly vault inside the red granite mausoleum.

It was Josef Stalin's idea to turn the founder of the Soviet state into a Communist relic. Lenin would have been appalled. He wanted to be buried next to his mother in a St. Petersburg cemetery.

Some say it was Stalin's way of twisting the knife — albeit posthumously — in his rival. Others say Stalin wanted a magnificent tribute in Red Square.

Whatever the motive, the imposing tomb became the symbol of Soviet power.

For decades, Kremlin-watchers studied the line-up of dignitaries who reviewed the troops from it on important holidays, trying to deduce who was in and who was out of the Communist Party hierarchy.

The tomb's symbolic power remains potent. President Boris Yeltsin tried to weaken it this week by removing the ceremonial guard.

Now the city is abuzz with rumors the body will be buried.

Officials say no decision has been made.

"This problem is being analyzed," said Yeltsin's chief of staff, Sergei Filatov.

On each side of the tomb's bronze doors, a tiny spray of flowers lay Friday where the stone-faced guards once stood.

In front, where the masses once lined up for a glimpse of the corpse, a lone, elderly couple stood.

"There will never be another like Lenin," Viktor Ivanovich Ivanov said quietly as he put his arm around his weeping wife. "He was a pioneer."

The museum has long been a gathering place for hard-liners who pine for the glorious days of the Soviet Union, as seen through their nostalgia-misted eyes.

On October 8, die-hards like Ivanov were handing out leaflets calling on people to "defend" the tomb and the museum. "We must preserve these holy places for the sake of all humanity!" it said.

The discussion drew in people of virtually every political persuasion — democrats, fascists, Communists, anarchists, nationalists.

Should Lenin finally get a decent burial? Should he be left on display? Was Yeltsin right or wrong to remove the guard? Was he a fool, a trickster, a democrat, a tyrant, a traitor, a hero?

There were as many answers as there were participants.

Faces reddened, tears flowed, voices were raised, spittle flew.

Mavs sign Mash

DALLAS — Jamal Mashburn, the star forward from Kentucky and No. 4 choice in the NBA draft, has agreed to a contract with the Dallas Mavericks and will begin practicing tonight.

The team would not disclose terms of the contract Wednesday, although pubished reports said it was for about $32 million over seven years.

The Mavericks said Mashburn will be available for their exhibition opener on Friday night against Atlanta at Reunion Arena.

About two weeks ago it appeared a deal with Mashburn was imminent. But that quickly changed when Anfernee Hardaway, taken No. 3 in the draft, signed a 13-year, $65 million contract with Orlando. That came one day after Larry Johnson signed an $84 million, 12-year deal with Charlotte.

Coleman sued

LOS ANGELES — The family of a 2-year-old girl injured by an explosive thrown by outfielder Vince Coleman, will file a lawsuit Thursday or Friday in Los Angeles Superior Court.

Attorney Darrell J. York, representing the family of Amanda Santos, said today the complaint would name both Coleman and outfielder Eric Davis, and possibly others whom he did not identify.

The New York Mets have said Coleman will never again play for the team, and the Dodgers in August traded Davis to Detroit.

Agassi out

PARIS — Andre Agassi has pulled out of next month's Paris Open because of a wrist injury and won't play for the rest of the season, his manager told the Association of Tennis Professionals.

An ATP spokesman said Agassi's brother Phillip, who also is his manager, said the player was examined at UCLA Medical Center by a hand specialist. Agassi missed several tournaments earlier this year with a wrist problem and the current injury is similar to that one, Phillip Agassi said.

He added that his brother would miss the rest of the year.

Clock error found

NEW YORK — The NFL said Wednesday two mistakes occurred with the clock in the final minute of Sunday's 24-20 victory by the Los Angeles Raiders over the New York Jets.

The Jets were leading 20-17 as the Raiders, who had no timeouts left, drove downfield in the final minute. The winning score, a 1-yard touchdown run by Nick Bell, came with 4 seconds remaining in the game after the clock stopped at 32 seconds and then was reset at 7 seconds.

After a review by NFL director of officiating Jerry Seeman, it was determined the clock operator, who is employed by the NFL, erroneously failed to start the game clock when the ball was snapped with 32 seconds remaining.

When the officiating crew noted the error, the league said play was properly stopped to reset the clock at 7 seconds and to synchonize it with the official time kept on the field, kept by the line judge.

At that point, the game clock should have been started by the referee's signal before the ball was snapped on the Raiders' touchdown run. When the referee failed to signal, the clock did not start until the snap.

The league said Seeman would review the proper procedures with all NFL officiating crews and clock operators this week.

The Jets could not be reached for comment.

Arkansas player found dead

■ Razorbacks mourn Shannon Wright, who police say apparently killed himself.

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Senior middle linebacker Shannon Wright of Arkansas apparently killed himself early Wednesday, hours after he moved some of his belongings out of his girlfriend's residence.

Wright

Wright, 22, had battled an alcohol problem throughout his career.

Andy Cox, a graduate assistant coach at Arkansas, said Wright and the girl broke up last week. "It wasn't a knock-down, drag-out," Cox said. "There wasn't any animosity.

"He thought he wanted to marry her and she said she wanted some time," Cox said in a telephone interview. " ... it will make you crazy when you're young."

Wright, a two-year letterman for the Razorbacks, started all six games this year and was the second leading tackler on the team with 19 unassisted tackles and 25 assists.

As a true freshman from Fort Smith Southside High School, Wright made 36 unassisted tackles and 17 assists for a 1989 Razorback team that went to the Cotton Bowl. He didn't finish the 1990 season and then sat out the 1991 season for disciplinary reasons. Former head coach Jack Crowe allowed him to return in 1992, but he was used in a backup role.

Arkansas coach Danny Ford said Wright's death was a shock to everyone associated with Wright. "He has been a tremendous fighter and, as coaches, we thought he was in a great frame of mind," Ford said. "From our perspective, everything about Shannon Wright has been very positive. He was the most well-liked and respected player on our team by his teammates and coaches.

"We are stunned and saddened," said Arkansas Athletic Director Frank

Phillies go from worst to first, take pennant

By Alan Robinson

PHILADELPHIA — They went from worst to first and now the Philadelphia Phillies have beaten the best.

Tommy Greene outpitched baseball's best pitcher and the refuse-to-lose Phillies again outplayed baseball's best team to beat the Braves 6-3 in Game 6 of the NL playoffs Wednesday night and win their first pennant since 1983.

Dave Hollins, Darren Daulton and Mickey Morandini had two-run extra-base hits off Greg Maddux and Morandini had an even bigger hit that didn't show up in the box score as the Phillies pulled off the impossible and kept the Braves from their third straight World Series appeaerance.

Moon benched

HOUSTON — Things are getting desperate for the Houston Oilers.

Suffering through a miserable 1-4 start, the Oilers on Wednesday benched Pro Bowl quarterback Warren Moon and elevated Cody Carlson to start Sunday against New England.

It was Moon's first demotion in 10 seasons with the Oilers.

"My pride's a little hurt. My ego's a little hurt. I think a lot of people, both media and fans, finally got what they wanted," the quarterback, obviously bothered by the move, said after practice.

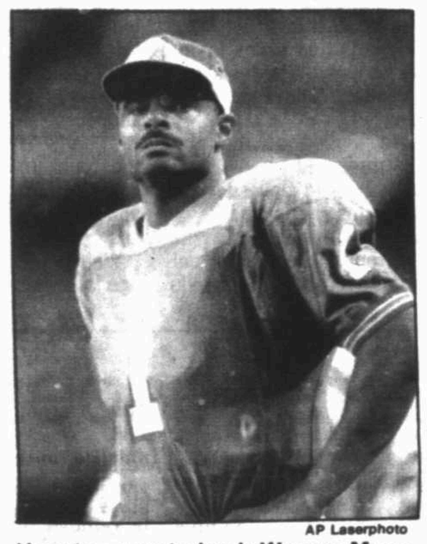

"It's a difficult day for me, something I've never been through before. As for what happens now, I'm going to do all I can to help this team."

Moon, who threw three interceptions and lost a fumble during Monday night's 35-7 loss to Buffalo, was benched for the second time in three games during the third quarter.

"I kind of expected something might happen this week," Carlson said. "We needed to change some things. Maybe that's what they (coaches) were thinking. I don't think this is the whole answer."

The Oilers (1-4) are suffering through their worst start under head coach Jack Pardee, whose job is also in jeopardy. Their run-and-shoot offense has sputtered and the defense, under new coordinator Buddy Ryan, has been ineffective.

Rankin dons battle gear for Wildcats

By Mike Butts
Staff writer

Football coaches never admit any good can come from a loss. But Rankin's Raul Sanchez came close to making such a confession this week.

Rankin got its first loss of the season Friday in a 14-0 decision against Class 2A Eldorado. With it the Red Devils' fell from the state's No. 1 Class A ranking and ended a 14-game regular season win streak. They'll need to come back strong Friday in their District 8-1A opener at home against the team most consider their best league competition — the Wink Wildcats.

"A loss is a loss and its hard to get over," Sanchez said. "But I'd rather lose one in non-district (than in district) to wake us up. It brought us back down to earth."

Not that the Red Devils, with a senior-dominated squad that features nine 12th graders on offense, had lost their heads over their top ranking.

"We're realistic and our kids are mature enough to know there are lots of good football teams in this state," Sanchez said. "There are lots of good football teams in this region and I don't know if we're in the top three or four."

But the Rankin coach senses his team will bounce back from Friday's loss.

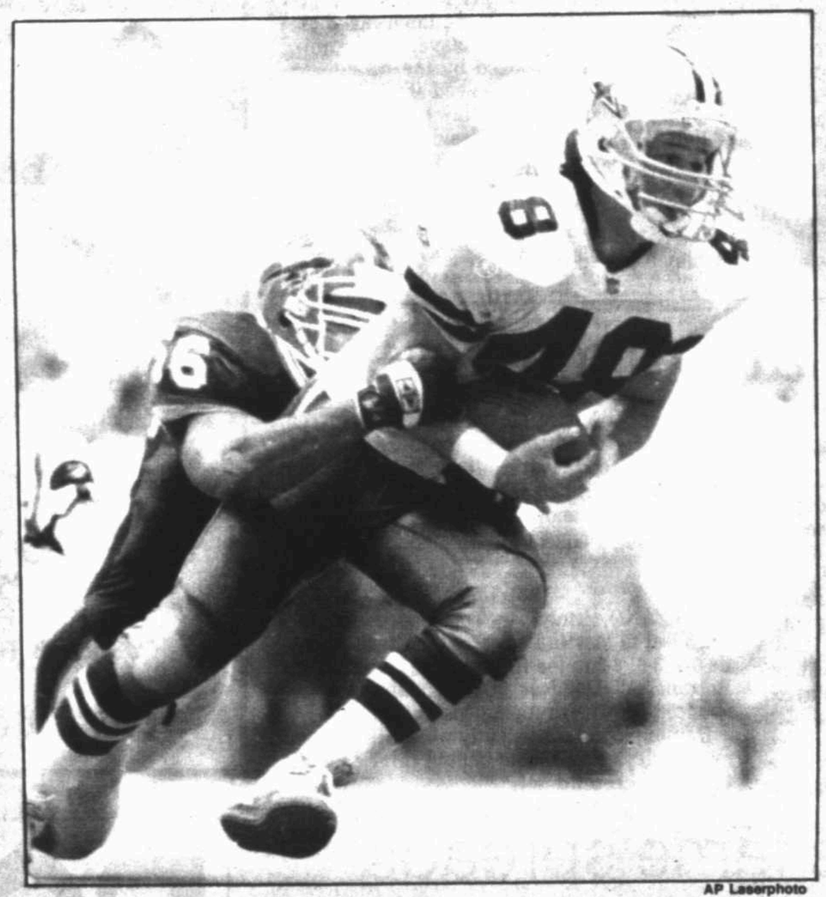

"We take a loss pretty hard, but I have no doubt that we're going to rebound," said Sanchez, whose 5-1 team fell to No. 8 this week. "Last week we played a hard game but mentally we weren't cued in to every situation."

Eldorado matched Rankin's strength — speed and quickness — well. The Red Devils will face a different problem against Wink (3-2).

"It's gonna be size and strength against probably quickness and a little speed," Sanchez said. "They outweigh us by about 20 pounds (on average) in the line of scrimmage."

Wink's Sam Scott, in his second year as head coach, lost his son and standout quarterback Shae to graduation last year. Sanchez said the Wildcats run the ball about 90 percent of the time. Last season they had a more balanced attack. Wink has won three straight

Dallas Cowboys fullback Daryl Johnston's blocking has been a big factor in the two NFL rushing titles his teammate Emmitt Smith owns.

'Moose' is loose

■ Fullback Johnston answers to his nickname almost anywhere now.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The calls drifted down from the Hoosier Dome rafters in a low rumble each time Dallas Cowboys fullback Daryl Johnston touched the ball against the Indianapolis Colts.

"Mooo-ooo-se," they said.

"How," asked running back Emmitt Smith incredulously, "did they know to do that?"

"I thought they were booing at first," Johnston said. "I was surprised to hear it away from home."

Johnston, whose blocking has helped Smith to back-to-back NFL rushing championships, does look like a runaway moose on the main street of a small town as he bulls upfield on one of his few carries or swings out wide to take a pass.

Merger could make SWC stronger

Dear Southwest Conference:

I am writing to you today as a long-time fan of the league.

I remember the days when Texas had a quarterback named Marty Atkins, when a rose was from Tyler and the only way to keep up with the Joneses was to name them "Lam" and "Ham." When TCU had Bob Lilly and the year they were simply "Unbeelievable."

Petitt

I remember when Grant Teaff ate the worm in '78, when Houston entered the conference with a gritty defensive lineman named Wilson Whitley.

I remember when Rice could not win a football game, when Emory Bellard was coaching a wide load of a running back named George Woodard at A&M.

When, before the Pony Express arrived, SMU was throwing to wide receiver Emanuel Tolbert. And when Texas Tech was going to bowls almost every season. When Jim Carlin was coaching Joe Barnes, Andre Tillman and Dan Irons. When converted tight end James Hadnot was wearing out opposing defenses on the same field a "Golden Palamino" named Anderson ran over and around defenses just a few years before.

It is with this in mind that I ask you to consider combining resources with other teams around the country to make the SWC stronger.

In other words, I feel the urge to merge.

In the world of corporate sponsors and big business, it makes sense to unite several strong athletic programs with the league.

Some would like the SWC to merge with the Big Eight, but the basketball powers of the Big Eight don't want any part of the SWC. Why clutter up your schedule with trips to Autry Court and Daniel Myer Coliseum to play in front of 2,000 in January when you could travel to the Maui Classic or face a Big East or ACC team on national television?

Consider teams like Louisville and Tulane. Both are basketball powers, but they have become strong football schools (case in point the Cardinals' 41-10 trouncing of Texas three weeks ago.) The Cardinals are being courted by the Alamo Bowl in case the SWC doesn't have its third place team finish with the manadatory six Division I wins. Tulane would give the league another large television market to use as a chip in the politics of intercollegiate athletics.

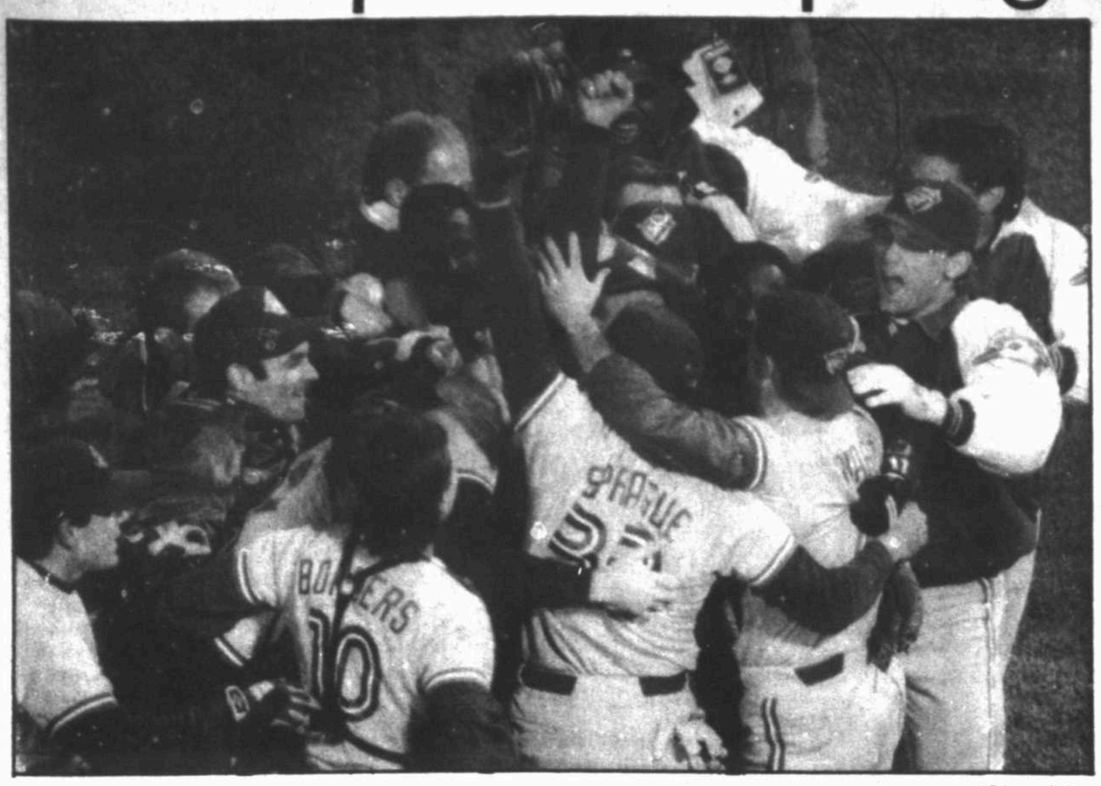

With these two schools the base would be set so that the league could then go to the Big Eight and try to pry away schools like Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Missouri and Kansas.

That would give the league enough teams for a

AP Laserphoto

The Toronto Blue Jays celebrate their 6-3 win over the Chicago White Sox Tuesday in Chicago. The Blue Jays face the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday in Toronto in the World Series.

TORONTO (AP) — The very first team the Philadelphia Phillies faced this year was Toronto, and they went on to sweep all four games from the Blue Jays.

That, though, was in spring training, where the clubs work out five minutes from each other. Doing it in the World Series may not be so easy.

The first all-artificial turf Series since 1987 starts Saturday night at SkyDome. It matches the Blue Jays, bidding to become the first champion to repeat since the 1977-78 New York Yankees, against the Phillies, who rebounded from finishing last in the NL East in 1992.

The Blue Jays bring a relentless lineup that wore down Chicago in six games of the AL playoffs. The offense, at least for the first two games in Toronto, will include designated hitter Paul Molitor.

When the series shifts to Veterans Stadium, where the DH is not used, Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston will have to decide whether to put Molitor at third base, replacing Ed Sprague, or on the bench.

This will not be the same Toronto team that fans saw last October. Molitor, Rickey Henderson and playoff MVP Dave Stewart — once cut by Philadelphia — are now with the Blue Jays, while Dave Winfield, David Cone and a dozen others are gone. Also missing will be Jack Morris, injured and unable to play.

The Phillies, who knocked off the two-time NL champion Atlanta Braves in six games in the playoffs, come in with a cast that includes Lenny Dykstra, Mitch Williams and John Kruk.

Dykstra and pitcher Danny Jackson are the only Phillies with much World Series experience. Philadelphia has not reached the Series since 1983, when it lost to Baltimore. By beating the Braves, the Phillies prevented a rematch of the 1992 World Series.

Neither Gaston nor Phillies manager Jim Fregosi has set his rotation. But with both playoff series over by Wednesday, each team will be able to set up its pitching the way it wants.

Stewart, Juan Guzman, Pat Hentgen and Todd Stottlemyre, all right-handers, started for Toronto in the playoffs. They'll face a Phillies' lineup that includes the left-handed bats of Dykstra, Kruk, Darren Daulton and others.

Stewart pitched briefly for the Phillies several years. He got into four games after being traded from Texas to Philadelphia in late 1985, and was cut by the Phillies on May 9, 1986. He was out of baseball before signing with Oakland two weeks later, starting his climb toward becoming the best playoff pitcher in history.

The Phillies started MVP Curt Schilling, Tommy Greene, Terry Mulholland and Jackson in the playoffs. Jackson, who beat Toronto in the 1985 playoffs while with Kansas City and Mulholland are lefties, and the Blue Jays were just 22-25 during the regular season in games started by left-handers.

A few of the Blue Jays have played against the Phillies in regular season games. Joe Carter, Roberto Alomar and Tony Fernandez each spent time in the NL, all with San Diego. For the Phillies, platoon outfielders Pete Incaviglia and Jim Eisenreich, along with Jackson, played in the AL.

The Blue Jays and Phillies, however, saw plenty of each other this spring in Florida. Toronto trains in Dunedin and Philadelphia in Clearwater, and their complexes are closer than any other two separate facilities in spring training.

Just call Colts' Emtman 'Mr. Rehab'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Steve Emtman felt his knee pop and knew at once his season had ended prematurely, for the second year in a row.

The Indianapolis Colts defensive tackle, the first player taken in the 1992 NFL draft, went down in pain during Sunday's loss to Dallas.

"I guess you can call me Mr. Rehab," he said in a telephone interview from his bed at Methodist Hospital. "It's just so damned hard to believe I'm here again."

Last year, Emtman's rookie season ended after nine games when he tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee. This time, as he moved to his right to chase the Cowboys' Emmitt Smith, he planted his right foot on the Hoosier Dome's artificial turf. The knee couldn't withstand the pressure.

"I knew it instantly," Emtman said. "Last year, I felt a pop. This time, I felt three distinct pops right in a row ... crack, crack, crack," he told The Indianapolis Star.

He tore the anterior cruciate and medial collateral ligaments, as well as the patella tendon.

"All I could think of was, 'Not this again.' I knew it was over," he said. "The first thing that went through my mind as I was laying on the ground was, 'Why me?' You start to wonder, 'Did I do something wrong?'

"But I've looked at the play maybe 100 times and I know there was nothing I could have done to prevent it. It just happened."

Emtman underwent surgery Monday to repair the medial collateral ligament and the patella tendon. He anticipates another two or three operations, then months of rehabilitation.

"Right now I'm just really, really disappointed," he said. "I thought I was just about all the way back with the left knee and I was looking forward to finally living up to all the expectations. But now I'm back down at the bottom. It's so upsetting because I worked too hard to have something like this happen again."

He plans to work just as hard to get his right knee into playing shape.

"That's all you can do. This is the hand I've been dealt," said Emtman. "I'm down right now, and I know it's not going to be an easy road."

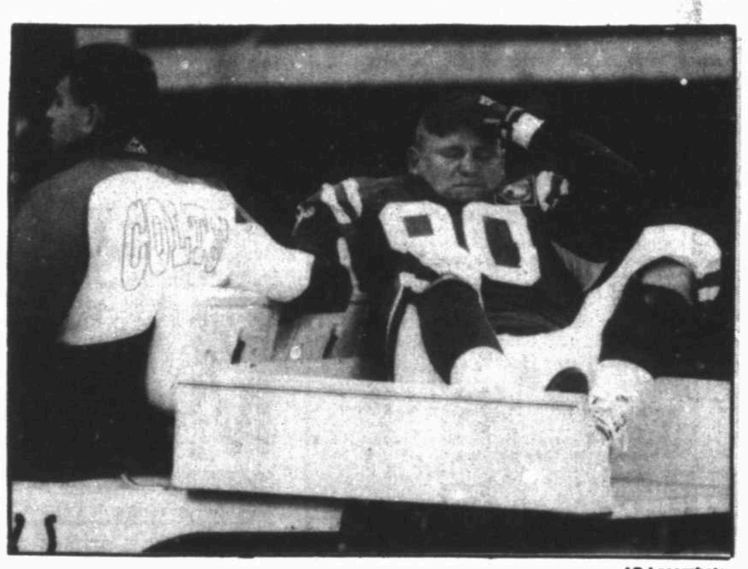

Whenever such extensive damage is done to the knee, a player's career hangs in the balance.

"To a lot of players that may be true," he said, "but I'm not going to give up. I have to be strong about that. I don't know if I'll play again next year or in two years, but I will play again. I'm going to play a full season before I retire. I don't care if it takes me 20 years."

He said he probably will be on crutches for three months.

"In my mind, at the start of next year, I want to be where I was at the start of this year. Whether that's realistic or not I don't know," he said.

"I've been very blessed to be able to do some of the things I've done and to be where I'm at right now. This? Well, it's nothing a little bit of hard work won't take care of."

'Assassin' gets suspended sentence

■ The fan who stabbed tennis star Monica Seles avoids a jail term.

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — A tennis fan who stabbed Monica Seles out of an obsessive love for her rival, Steffi Graf, walked away free Wednesday when the court that convicted him gave him a suspended two-year sentence.

Guenter Parche, 39, an unemployed East German who had been detained since the April 30 attack at a Hamburg tournament, could have received a three-year, nine-month jail term.

But Hamburg District Judge Elke Bosse said she took into account a psychiatrist's testimony that Parche had a "highly abnormal personality" that could have diminished his ability to reason.

She noted that Parche had shown remorse for his attack on the world's top-ranked woman player, and that "His confession was absolutely believable."

Seles and others in tennis were outraged over the decision.

"I was shocked and horrified to learn that the assassin who stabbed me received a suspended sentence in Germany today," Seles said in a statement released by spokeswoman Linda Dozoretz.

"What kind of message does this send to the world? Mr. Parche has admitted that he stalked me, then he stabbed me once and attempted to stab me a second time. And, now, the court has said he does not have to go to jail for this premeditated crime. He gets to go back to his life, but I can't because I am still recovering from this attack which would have killed me.

"Because I still cannot play tennis, I am not traveling now; but I fear for my fellow athletes, public figures and other potential victims of senseless crimes who have to go out today and tomorrow, knowing that a criminal who commits such an act will not be punished."

Martina Navratilova, another former No. 1 player, was similarly shocked by the ruling.

"You guys need some serious help with the laws here in Germany," she said at a tennis match in Filderstadt.

"Forget the fact it was Monica Seles, it has cost her millions of dollars, and it was done on television."

Mitchell gets AFC honor

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Scott Mitchell, who led the Miami Dolphins over Cleveland after Dan Marino sustained a season-ending injury, was rewarded on Wednesday by being named the AFC offensive player of the week.

Mitchell's first pass after Marino went down with a ruptured Achilles tendon was intercepted and returned 97 yards for a touchdown. He rebounded by throwing two TD passes.

Chang earns 2nd-round win at Seiko Super

TOKYO (AP) — Michael Chang turned back a late charge by South African Christo van Rensburg for a 6-3, 6-4 victory Wednesday in the second round of the $1 million Seiko Super tennis tournament.

Van Rensburg, facing a match point on his own serve at 5-1, cut Chang's lead to 5-4 before the third-seeded American served out the match in 1 hour, 36 minutes.

Ninth-seeded Ivan Lendl, a first-round loser in nine tournaments this season, beat American compatriot Tommy Ho 6-3, 6-4 in another second-round match on the artificial court of Tokyo Metropolian Gymnasium.

Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia, the fifth seed, put in only 50 percent of his first serves but 15 were aces as he beat Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden 6-3, 7-5.

■ Tennis Roundup

"I played generally good today but I felt pain in my right leg toward the end of the second set," said Ivanisevic, ranked 11th in the world.

Against van Rensburg, ranked No. 122 in the world, Chang scored service breaks in the sixth game of the first set and third and fifth games in the second set.

Asked about his chances of winning this tournament, Chang replied, "A lot of great players have won in the past. I will try to take it match by match and point by point."

Seventh-seeded Petr Korda of the Czech Republic, a finalist in the Australian Indoor on Sunday, beat Australian qualifier Michael Tebbutt 6-4, 6-4 to advance to the third round.

Fourth-seeded Andrei Medvedev of Ukraine edged Jacco Eltingh of the Netherlands 7-5, 7-6 (7-5) and Alexander Volkov of Russia, the eighth seed, trounced American Steve Bryan 6-1, 6-4.

Bolzano

BOLZANO, Italy — Top-seeded Michael Stich lost to Martin Damm of the Czech Republic 6-4, 3-6, 6-2 in the first round of the $315,000 Bolzano ATP indoor tournament, then announced he was dropping his coach.

Damm played consistently while Stich netted easy volleys and double-faulted three straight times in the third set.

MOOSE: Cowboy Johnston's fame spreads

(From 1C)

moose-like moves during his rookie season out of Syracuse in 1989. Babe Laufenberg, former Cowboys quarterback, said "he looks just like a moose minus the antlers."

At home games in Texas Stadium, Dallas fans delight in moose calls on the rare occasions Johnston touches the ball.

But for his fame to spread all the way to Indiana was stunning to the "moose" himself.

"This is something," said Johnston. "Maybe I could do something with it commercially. But a moose doesn't usually get much respect. Hey, how about Moosehead Beer? The NFL wouldn't let me do that, though. We can't endorse beer products."

So Johnston will have to be satisfied blocking for Smith and receiving a Rolex watch like he did last year, running the ball an average of twice a game, and catching a few of Troy Aikman's passes.

Johnston is a throwback to the old single wing fullback who blocked for a living.

"Emmitt carried the ball 373 times last year and Johnston had a physical collision at the point of attack every time," said offensive coordinator Norval Turner. "We wouldn't do without him."

Occasionally, Johnston will lumber out of the backfield and catch a touchdown pass, as he did last week in Dallas' 27-3 victory over the Colts.

"I heard those moose calls right after D.J. caught the pass," Aikman said. "This guy is a weapon and I'm glad to see him getting a little recognition. There's nobody who deserves it more. He means a lot to our offense. He makes the blocks and he's a big part in our passing game."

AREA: Rankin tries to rebound from first loss games after starting off 0-2. It has shut out its last two opponents — Marfa 44-0 and Monahans JV 20-0.

(From 1C)

"We feel like we've played decent defense all year long," Scott said. "(But) we're very sporadic on offense."

The Wildcats spread their rushing attack between fullback Shane Haynes (71 carries for 436 yards) and tailback Mike Moranda (72 for 377). Quarterback Tommy Smithhart has rushed 50 times for 300 yards.

"They feel like they're on a roll," Sanchez said. "They probably feel like they're catching us at the proper time."

Rankin won last year's game in Wink 14-7.

The Red Devils veer offense is led by quarterback Jo Jo Guerra and running backs Roy Abalos and Baylor Walker.

With Sanderson dropping out of the district to play six-man football, the Wink contest is one of only four district games for Rankin.

"What (that) does is probably put more importance on this game," Sanchez said. "Because it's the first district game and Wink has as good a football team as anybody (in the district)."

Scott anticipates Rankin won't have any hangover from its first loss.

"We're going in expecting they're going to bounce back and play the best ballgame they've played all year," Scott said. "We'll find out (Friday) how good we are."

In other area games STANTON (2-1 in district, 4-2 overall) goes for its third District 6-2A win Friday at home against Coahoma (0-3, 2-4). The Buffaloes got an important district win last week on the road against Ozona. But they will probably need to upset undefeated Wall at home in their last game to get into the playoffs unless Iraan (2-0, 5-1) falters.

At 4-1-1 GREENWOOD (1-0 in district) easily has the second best record in District 6-3A. Crane and Kermit are 2-4 and Sonora and Colorado City have one win apiece. The Rangers travel to No. 7-ranked Reagan County (6-0) but even with a district loss they look to be in excellent shape to make the playoffs.

MIDLAND CHRISTIAN (5-0) comes off an open date to host Grandfalls. Grandfalls dropped 11-man for six-man this season and is 3-1-1 in its initial six-man year.

"They are playing really well for their first time out," Midland Christian coach James Blake said. "They average about 175 pounds and that's pretty good size for six-man. They're ... going to be a real challenge for us."

ANDREWS (2-0, 6-0) tries to maintain its hold on first place in District 3-4A at Pecos (1-1, 5-1). Pecos was a soft 5-0 before bowing to Monahans last week 24-0.

With its loss to Andrews last week, BIG SPRING (1-1, 4-2) looks like it will play for a second-place playoff berth. The Steers host Sweetwater (1-0, 3-2) this week. Sweetwater appeared to be down from last year's district co-championship finish. But the Mustangs blasted improved Lake View last week 51-3.

With a four-point loss to Robert Lee and a one-point loss at undefeated Sterling City, GARDEN CITY (0-5) is starting to play competitively. The Bearkats open District 8-1A play at Fort Davis (2-3).

LAMESA (0-1, 0-6) has only been involved in one close game — a 28-20 loss to Lake View Sept. 10. The Golden Tornadoes have struggled offensively with only 50 points this season. They host Wolfforth Frenship (0-1, 4-2) Friday.

PETITT: SWC matchups

(From 1C)

two division — north and south — format and with television markets Houston, New Orleans, Kansas City, Dallas-Fort Worth and Oklahoma City, they would be able to conjure up a playoff game for a bowl, such as the Southeast Conference that could be made-for-television.

After all college athletics is big business.

Sincerely,
Ima Phann

A look at this week's SWC matchups.

Houston 24, SMU 16: The Cougars have too much talent for SMU to sneak up on Houston. Former prep standout Chuck Clements may start for U of H.

Tulane 30, TCU 14: I'll pick the Green Wave to add fodder to my merger proposal. The Wave will have eight on the defensive line until TCU signal caller Max Knake can go deep.

Texas Tech 32, Rice 28: Alamo Bowl officials will be in Lubbock for this game. Rice must win three of five down the stretch to qualify for the post season. It is homecoming at Tech and a win would sooth what has been a disappointing season.

Texas A&M 24, Baylor 11: The Aggies have football's version of the triplets with Rodney Thomas, Leeland McElroy and Greg Hill. This will be 60 minutes of smash-mouth football.

Lions might check out Moon

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Could a quarterback like Warren Moon or Bernie Kosar be in Detroit's future? Lions' coach Wayne Fontes isn't saying.

Yet it was obvious Wednesday that he might be interested.

For the record, neither Moon nor Kosar has been offered to the Lions. And they haven't dangled any fishing lines in the water.

Cleveland owner Art Modell has said the Browns won't part with Kosar, although he's been lifted three times for Vinny Testaverde and Testaverde will start Sunday. And the Houston Oilers are struggling with 37-year-old Moon, who has thrown 11 interceptions.

So it was only natural for reporters to ask Fontes, who has rotated Rodney Peete, Andre Ware and Erik Kramer, if he would be interested in making a deal for Moon. First, he tried to duck the question. But the more he thought about it, the more interested he sounded.

"I'm going to bypass the Warren Moon question," Fontes said. "Right now, we're getting ready for the Seattle Seahawks. When this game is over, if there is interest, then I'd sit down and discuss it.

MOON: Loses job to longtime backup Carlson

(From 1C)

Pardee had hinted after the Buffalo game that something was needed to spark his team.

"It's a very desperate move, no question about it," said offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride. "We know there are so many other contributing factors, but right now we're just grasping for anything that might turn this around."

Added Pardee, "Warren is ready to play. We were just looking for something to try to win this game. To make a move like this does not mean all the blame goes to Warren. Plenty of people contributed to the situation we're in."

Moon signed with the Oilers in 1983 and has since won 61 games as a starter, more than any other Houston quarterback. He has completed 2426 of 4197 passes for 31,300 yards with 180 touchdowns and 156 interceptions since arriving in Houston from the Canadian Football League.

"It's not a great day for me, but I've had a lot of other ungreat days and I hope to have some more good days," Moon said before abruptly ending an interview.

Wednesday's demotion came amid rumors that Moon would be traded before next week's NFL deadline. The Oilers have denied any efforts to deal him.

The quarterback will earn $4 million this year. He has two years remaining on his contract, which will pay him $3.25 million next season and $3 million in 1995.

Wide receiver Haywood Jeffires, a close friend of Moon's and one of his favorite targets, said he supports the move, but he added that "anybody would be crazy to say it didn't hurt."

"You always look to your best player when things aren't going right," Jeffires said. "You hate to see that when it's your quarterback, but maybe it will be a spark that we need.

"It's not a player's decision. We're not saying something to get behind either one. We'll be behind Cody 100 percent."

The last time the Oilers beat New England, 31-6 on Sept. 25, 1988, Carlson started in place of Moon, who was out with a fractured shoulder.

Moon this season has completed 97 of 171 passes for 1,131 yards with five touchdowns and 11 interceptions. He also has been sacked 15 times and his quarterback rating is among the worst in the league at 59.9.

Carlson this year has completed 19 of 34 passes for 266 yards with no touchdowns and one interception. That pickoff was against Buffalo, when he hit 9 of 15 passes for 95 yards.

WRIGHT: Trouble followed freshman season

(From 1C)

Broyles. "All of us had been encouraged by Shannon's growth as a person during the past few years."

Officers, responding to a 911 call at 6:09 a.m., found Wright behind the wheel of a vehicle in the driveway of a residence, Police Chief Richard Watson said.

"Wright was reported to be a friend of the occupants of the residence," the police report said. "The victim suffered an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head. The weapon used in the shooting, a .22-caliber revolver, was recovered at the scene."

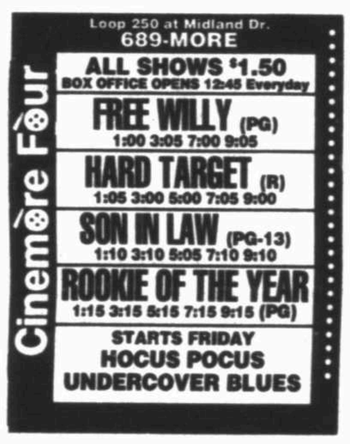

A final ruling on the cause of death is pending analysis of evidence submitted to the State Crime Lab, the report said.

Cox, who is working on a doctorate in counselor education, said he and Wright ate together Tuesday night and then moved a television and some clothes out of the residence. He said they talked again at the dorm shortly before the midnight curfew.

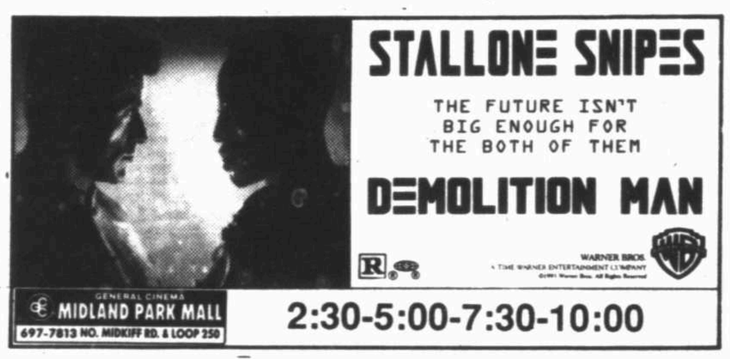

"He was fine," Cox said.

Asked if there was any indication that Wright was contemplating suicide, Cox's voice broke and he said, "Maybe he did and I just missed it."

National Businesswomen's Week
October 18-24, 1993

PHOTO

(Sample of ad)

Join us in honoring our area business women! If you know a special woman worthy of recognition for a job well done, (or if you ARE ONE YOURSELF) let us and the rest of Midland know about her.

On Sunday, October 17th, we will feature photos and biographical information of some of Midland's most successful women. It's something you will want to be a part of!

To make sure you or that special business woman you know is included in this year's section, simply provide the information needed below and send it in by Thursday, Oct. 14th.

A special time will be designated to take photos of those women who may need a more current one for this feature.

310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just wa t to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.

National Businesswomen's Week

PHOTO

(Sample of ad)

Join us in honoring our area business women! If you know a special woman worthy of recognition for a job well done, (or if you ARE ONE YOURSELF) let us and the rest of Midland know about her.

On Sunday, October 17th, we will feature photos and biographical information of some of Midland's most successful women. It's something you will want to be a part of!

To make sure you or that special business woman you know is included in this year's section, simply provide the information needed below and send it in by Thursday, Oct. 14th.

A special time will be designated to take photos of those women who may need a more current one for this feature.

More buyers demand dual air bags in cars

DETROIT (AP) — The federal government may have gotten the auto industry to think about making dual air bags standard equipment. But buyers demanding the inflatable protection made car companies take action.

An estimated 17.7 million air bags will be installed on new 1994 cars, a 122 percent increase from 1993 models.

About 90 percent of all 1994 models are arriving at dealer showrooms with at least a driver's air bag. Sixty-three percent of new cars have driver and passenger air bags, according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

Ford Motor Co. will offer dual air bags on 13 of its 19 car models and joins Chrysler Corp. as the first to offer a driver's side air bag on a full-size pickup truck this fall.

Former Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca is credited with the marketing genius behind making driver's air bags standard equipment. In the late 1980s and early '90s when Chrysler didn't have much in the way of new vehicles to show off, it pitched safety via the air bag.

It was the first to offer a driver's air bag in all its cars and trucks, well ahead of the competition and far ahead of government mandates.

A study by Lehman Brothers Inc., a Wall Street brokerage firm, suggests that Chrysler was able to hold its market share because it had a safety advantage.

The safety performance of air bags, tucked away in the steering wheel for drivers and usually concealed in the dash above the glove compartment for passengers, are well documented:

— The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety found that between 1985-1991, there were 28 percent fewer fatalities in frontal crashes in cars with air bags than in cars with manual seat belts alone.

— The institute also found that air bags are responsible for a 25 percent to 29 percent lower likelihood of moderate or severe injuries and a 24 percent reduction in hospitalizations compared with automatic seat belts.

— The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration found that in more than 1,200 investigations involving air bags, they did not find a single case in which the air bag failed to inflate.

However, air bags are not compatible with small children. Automobile magazine reports that with air bags deploying at speeds between 100 and 200 miles per hour in five-hundredths of a second, the impact could severely injure or kill a child in a rear-facing child seat. The best solution, according to experts, is to place the child in the back seat, properly restrained.

Ford and General Motors Corp. — which was the first domestic automaker to offer air bags in the 1970s — have all but caught up with Chrysler in offering driver's air bags and have surpassed it in getting dual air bags into their cars.

For 1994 models, Ford expects to offer 92 percent of its cars with dual air bags, GM is expected to have two bags on 68 percent of its cars and Chrysler will equip 43 percent of its cars with dual air bags.

Chrysler is expected to retake the lead for 1995 models with 93 percent, but Ford and GM will be close behind at 92 percent and 90 percent respectively. By 1996, all of the Big Three expect to have dual air bags in 100 percent of their cars — two years ahead of the government requirement.

In light trucks — pickups, minivans and sport utility vehicles — the Big Three all will offer dual air bags by 1998, a year ahead of the federal requirement. Getting there will be slower, as engineering will require waiting for redesigned models to fit air bags. Chrysler's minivans will have dual air bags for 1994.

Consumer acceptance of air bags, which automakers once doubted, has exploded into a full-fledged demand. Car dealers report that questions about air bag availability are asked frequently by many prospective buyers.

A 1991 survey by Louis Harris Associates indicated that 44 percent of motorists at that time said they would pay $500 extra for an air bag-equipped car. That compared with 29 percent in 1990. Eighteen percent of the buyers of the Ford Taurus, the best-selling car in the United States in 1992, shelled out an extra $500 for a passenger side air bag.

Adding the air bags and in some cases antilock brakes to new cars has driven up sticker prices.

Ford hinted about the cost in releasing its 1994 prices, saying that making the passenger air bag standard and other changes on Taurus led to a $440 increase, less than the $500 option price of the second air bag in a 1993 model.

Jack Sherman gears up for quick service

Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo-Buick-Mazda is gearing up their capacity to perform even quicker services. Services such as tune-ups, oil and filter change and brake services are now done while you wait. In fact, they are so confident about the speed of their service that they have made a promise to their customers: Oil and filter changes will be made in less than 29 minutes or the next one is free.

This kind of service is possible because of the extensive facilities that Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo-Buick-Mazda has at its disposal. Their impressive facilities enable them to perform many repairs that independant operators are not capable of because they do not have the equipment.

The highest technical level a technician can attaian is the status of Master Certified Technician. Jack Sherman has 11 Master Certified technicians on staff, probably the highest number of any dealership in the Permian Basin.

The training levels of Jack Sherman's staff are not just impressive on a local level, but also on a national scale. The shop foreman, Jerry Griffith, was recently invited to the industry's National Advisory Council because he was among the 40 top-scoring technicians in the country. Out of a competitive field of 36,000 technicians this was a very impressive achievement.

Other technicians at Jack Sherman have attained similar standards of excellence, which is testement to the training and committment they have.

Jack Sherman Automotive headquarters is located at 4100 W. Wall St. For more information call 694-9601.

Some are skipping used car lot for auctions

TAYLOR, Mich. (AP) — Sylvia Burke was feeling confident.

Most of the swollen crowd at the Detroit Auto Auction was far more experienced at bidding on used cars than she was, but she had psychology on her side.

"The dealers, they've got to make some money on it, so they won't go higher than the car is worth," she said.

They didn't, and Burke's bid on a 1989 Chevrolet Cavalier got her the car for less than $2,500. The secretary in the Detroit Police Department said she would retire her 1984 Plymouth Horizon in favor of the Cavalier.

It was Burke's second auction purchase in three weeks. She recently spent $800 on a 1988 Ford Taurus for her son to drive.

"In the last three weeks, I've spent $3,000 for two cars," she said as she wrote out the check for her latest purchase. "That wouldn't cover the down payment for one new one, would it?"

Burke, like others looking for reliable used transportation, are skipping the used car lots and showing up at auctions to compete with car dealers for the same cars that cost hundreds more at retail.

It takes guts to play the auction game, more than passing knowledge of what cars are worth, and the willingness to be disappointed.

"When people come here, they think they're going to get great bargains," general manager Robert Lalain said. "Not everyone is going to walk away with a car. It's the idea they can come down here and buy a car at wholesale, that's the trigger to the whole thing."

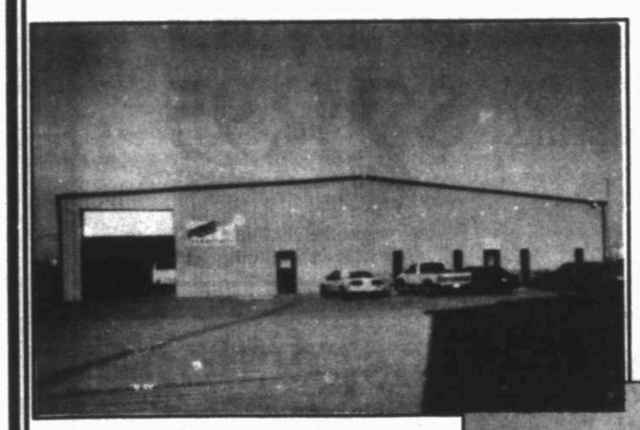

Auctions are still mostly held exclusively for dealers to get rid of their trade-ins and for manufacturers to resell the thousands of cars coming back from daily rental companies.

More and more, however, auction companies are being pushed to open some sales to the public. Banks that repossess cars are often required by law to sell them in public sales. The auctions need to keep the banks — often their largest customers — happy.

On a recent Friday, NBD Bank had the majority of 105 cars, trucks, motor homes and boats entered in the public version of the Detroit Auto Auction.

Even before auctioneer Dan Stone began his rapid-fire oratory, punctuated with the slapping of a piece of rubber hose on the wooden podium, activity was brisk.

Midland Tire and Brake are under-car specialists

Located at 2210 West Front, Midland Tire and Brake specializes in under-car services.

Since the company was founded 19-years ago, Midland Tire and Brake has held firm to its committment of customer satisfaction.

According to the general manager, Pat McDaniel, "service is a product as much as tires and brakes." It is this kind of attitude that has built up a loyal clientele that regularly brings their vehicles to Midland Tire and Brake for servicing and inspections.

Midland Tire specializes in all of the ride-orientated and related services such as brakes, shock absorbers, tires and alignments.

Working on the basis that a car is useless without properly functioning tires and brakes, Midland Tire and Brake emphasises that regular preventative maintainance will improve safety levels and increase the life of the vehicle.

Midland Tire and Brake has worked very hard over the years to provide the very best quality of cutomer service that they can, building up a high degree of customer trust and loyalty.

Midland Tire specializes in all of the ride-orientated and related services such as brakes, shock absorbers, tires, alignments.

Midland Tire and Brake is a family-owned local company with a firm committment to the Permian Basin. This is reflected in their realistic understanding of peoples needs.

Under-car inspection is part of preparation for winter

Fall is the season to prepare for the wear and tear of Old Man Winter on your car. When preparing for a long season of driving on snow, water, ice and loose gravel, a lubrication and check of your car's steering and suspension is a good precaution.

Water can get inside many steering and suspension parts, say Art Frank, assistant director of training at the Moog Technical Training Center in St. Louis, Mo. He says, "That's the main reason for regular inspections and lubrication; once water gets into a part such as a tie rod, the contamination can create premature wear. Keeping the parts lubricated and full of grease reduces the possibility of contamination."

This is also a good time to check on irregularities in the way a vehicle handles, says Frank. he points out, "A vehicle's chassis problems don't happen overnight. They take time to develop and surface. Pay attention to how a vehicle handles. Does the steering feel loose? Does the vehicle pull to either side? Does it shimmy or vibrate at certain speeds? Does the ride seem harsh when you his a bump?"

According to Frank, "When the vehicle is on the lubrication rack, a complete undercar check-up can pinpoint problems such as premature tire wear, splits in the rubber bushings, or worn shocks and springs."

Based on industry research, four out of every seven vehicles need repairs; 57% of the vehicles in for a check-up need alignment. Also, 31% of vehicles in for repairs show ball joint wear and 20% of all vehicles brought in for alignment need idler arm replacement.

Looseness in the steering, coupled with excessive tire wear, may indicate the need for steering linkage replacement, says Frank. "Tight" steering, excessive movement in any direction, or a popping or rubbing noise can be a sign of worn upper strut mounts. Ball joints also should be checked for looseness and damage to their dust boots.

An undercar inspection should include a check for looseness, off center or worn bushings. The combination of age, oil and heat — particularly after a long, hot summer — can cause the rubber bushings to crack, distort and wear. Bushings in such condition should be replaced.

With cooler morning temperatures coming on, a vehicle may exhibit signs of 'morning sickness' in the form of sluggish steering. " While this symptom usually disappears as the engine warms up, it is a good warning sign that your car's rack and pinion system could use a check up," says Frank.

Within the rack and pinion system's control valve are Teflon ring seals which wear grooves in the aluminum housing over the course of driving. When the seal contracts in cold weather and pulls away from the grooved housing, a loss of assist in steering can result. The deeper the grooves, the longer the warm-up period. This problem is easier to detect in colder weather, but drivers should be aware it can happen in any climate.

Bellows boots used to keep contamination from rack and pinion systems, as well as CV (constant velocity) joints on front-wheel drive vehicles, need to be inspected for cracks, wear and deterioration before water, snow and ice become a factor on the road.

"The accumulation of snow and ice around a CV boot can easily lead to a tear and eventually damage the CV joint it should protect," says Frank. "Replacement of a boot is far less expensive."

A suspension inspection should include a check of springs, shock absorbers and struts. However, Frank emphasizes, "Contrary to the belief that shock absorbers carry most of the weight of the vehicle, the springs are the primary suspension parts that support the weight. New shocks or struts will not fix a weak spring problem."

If new springs are needed, you have options: install replacements similar to the originals, or install variable-rate springs. Frank says, "Variable rate springs have an advantage in that they automatically increase their resistance as weight or pressure is increased. This results in a smooth, comfortable ride when loaded or empty, and improve handling."

Frank recommends inspecting and replacing springs at the same time shock absorbers or struts are installed, if the need is found.

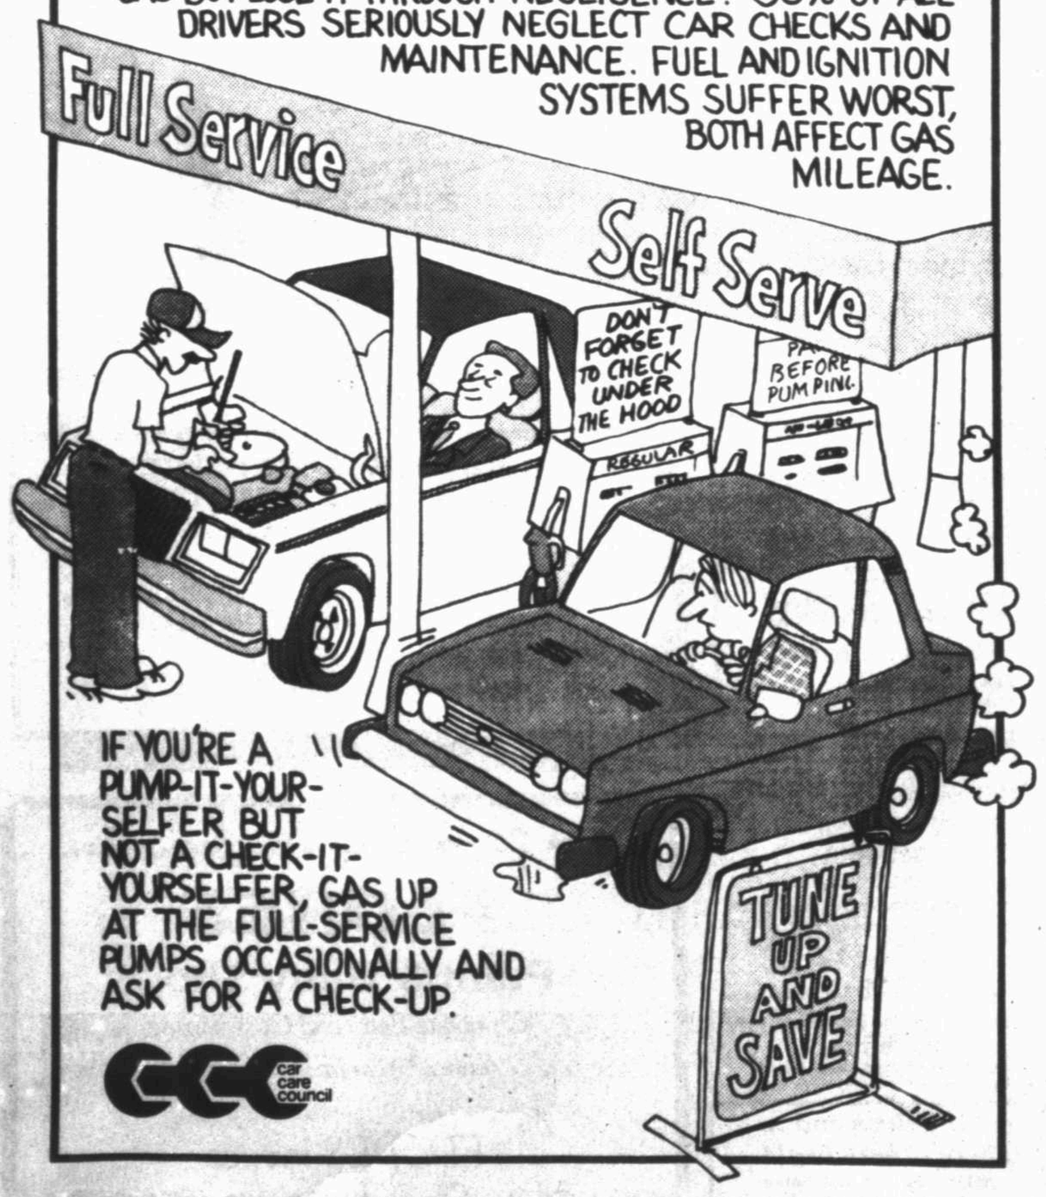

Mileage, road conditions, weather and driving habits will all affect the service life of alignment, component parts and tires. A comprehensive inspection of your car's steering and suspension systems in the fall might make the difference in winter driving — both in your pocketbook and in improved driveability under hazardous road conditions.

Permian Toyota offers world-class satisfaction

A service department is only as good as the people who provide the service.

Permian Toyota has a department second to none, because of the committment to customer satisfaction that the staff has. Ever since the company was founded more than 20 years ago, the bonus has been on quality of service. Reflected by the quality of Toyota vehicles themselves, Permian Toyota is one of the few foreign-car businesses in the Permian Basin that has a complete service for new and used parts, body and service.

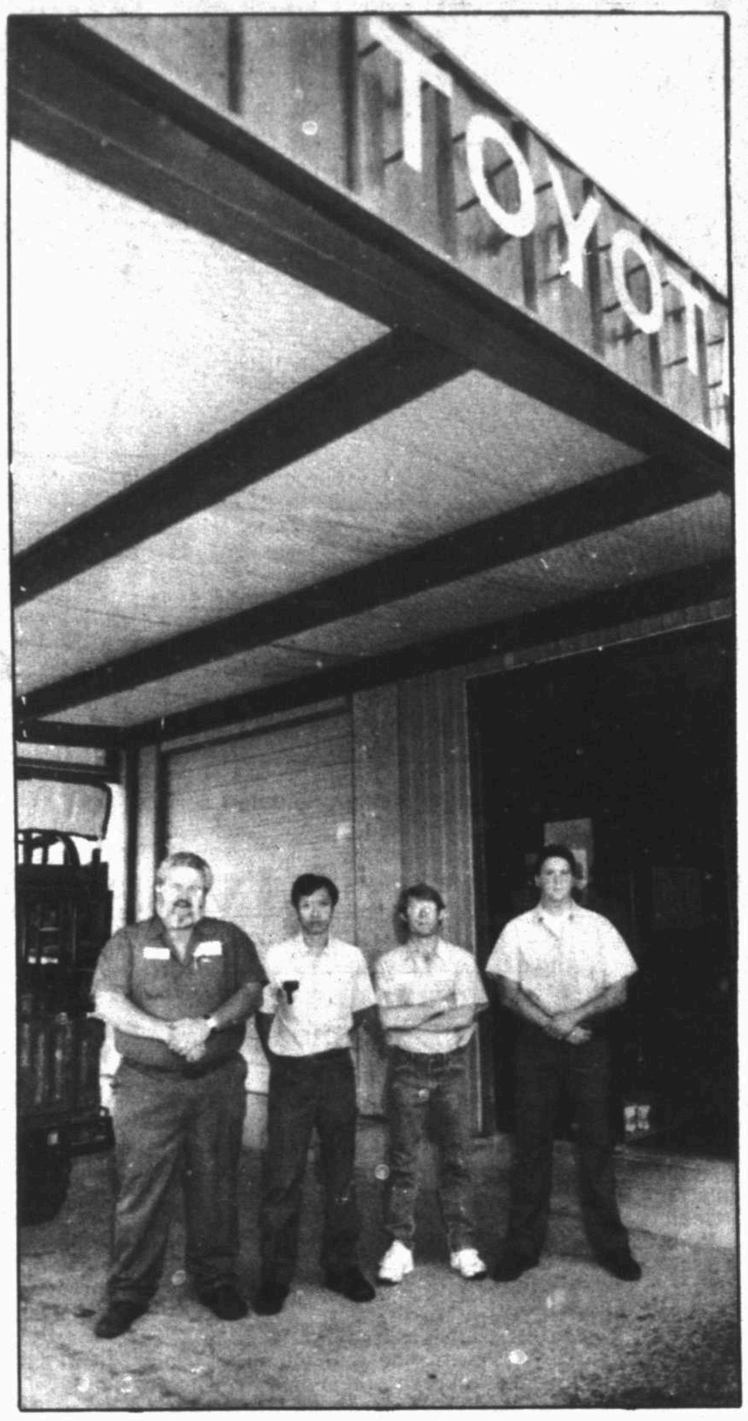

Attention to service is evident at Permian Toyota where state-of-the-art equipment such as laser frame machines and highly qualified staff such as master technician Chhin Chau are ready to put automobiles back in peak condition.

Mike Lauderdale, the parts and service manager, runs the service department, which has thousands of different spare parts in stock. With a computerized inventory system to keep track of it all, they ship parts all around the world.

Toyota and Permian Toyota are aware of how important continuous education is, which is why staff are kept up to date of all changes and improvements that could possibly affect Toyota's vehicles. This helps to keep the service not just service-orientated, but also safety-conscious.

Permian Toyota is also a leader among dealerships in helping to protect the environment. They encourage people to bring in their used oil for recycling and they have a freon recycling machine that stops emmissions that can occur while air conditioning systems are serviced.

For quality service, expert knowlege and technicians who have been very highly trained, stop by Permian Toyota at 3110 W. Wall St. in Midland, or call them at 563-5666 or 694-3691.

Quality, custumer satisfaction are Honda's two primary goals

According to service manager James Hoffman, quality and customer satisfaction are the two primary goals at Performance Honda, Jeep, Eagle and Isuzu. They are committed to going the extra mile to make sure that customers are satisfied with the services and products purchased from them.

Performance Honda has two experienced service advisors, Andy Wallace and Homer Jackson to look after customers. Their expertise is in customer satifaction and they are equipped to handle any type of automotive service.

Continuous training and education is a high priority for Performance Honda. All members of the service team, whether a service advisor, one of the six technicians or a cashier, undergo regular training sessions to keep abreast of the changing automobile business.

State-of-the-art equipment and manufacturer's technical training assure that the technicians and service advisors have the most accurate and up-to-date technical information possible. This ensures that repairs to customer's vehicles are performed accurately and as fast as possible. In fact, most services and repairs are completed the same day.

In short, the service team at Performance Honda, Jeep, Eagle & Isuzu subscribe to the idea that "an ounce of performance is worth a pound of promise."

For more information about Performance Honda and its service department call 697-3293 or 563-2919 or stop by 4040 W. Wall St. They are open from 7:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Read manual for cable safety

A precautionary message in your owner's manual or on top of your battery tells how to connect jumper cables safely to prevent sparks and a possible explosion. An additional statement might warn about the dangers of using substandard-quality cables.

These can produce a situation similar to connecting a thin, poorly insulated extension cord to an electric heater. The wire could heat up, eventually melting the insulation and causing a short circuit. In household wiring, a fuse or circuit breaker would probably prevent a fire. But in the case of jumper cables, inadequate strands of wiring leading to melted insulation would be a real hazard.

New life-long coolant could make changing antifreeze less hassle

DETROIT (AP) — Changing antifreeze could become less of a hassle with a new long-life coolant being introduced by BASF Corp., maker of Zerex antifreeze.

Zerex Extreme guarantees cooling system protection against boilovers, freeze-ups and corrosion for four years or 50,000 miles.

The longer lasting antifreeze costs about $10 a gallon compared with $8 a gallon for traditional antifreeze.

Air Purifier

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — Toyota is test-marketing an air purifier for its 1992-93 Camry sedans that reduces the amount of airborne pollen, tobacco smoke, dust and microscopic particles inside the car.

The system works independently of the heater and air conditioner. A two-speed switch on the console between the front seats controls the unit, which removes, filters and returns interior air through color-keyed vents mounted on the rear-window shelf between the rear speakers.

The trunk-mounted filtration unit features an activated charcoal filter that is replaced every year or at 10,000 miles.

Toyota has sold more than 2 million of the units in Japan, where it has been available for nearly nine years on a variety of vehicles.

The air purifier sells for $449 with replacement filters at $60 each.

Toyota is test-marketing the air purifier through dealers in Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware.

Tattoos to Go

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Want to dress up your car or truck with a little color or a graphic pattern?

Autograf-X says its auto tattoos are the first car decorations that can be applied without glue. Designs and arrangements are printed on clear film that sticks to a car through an electrostatic adhesion process.

Autograf-X is removable and reusable with soap and water but won't peel or lift at high speeds or in bad weather.

"Our research and development department discovered a large market of people that wanted to customize their car without permanent adhesives or paint, but there was no product like this on the market," said Lance Funston, president of L.T. Funston & Co., which makes and sells Autograf-X.

Three styles Autograf-X are available: Super Graf-X, an auto striping system; Pixelating Graf-X features geometric pixels; and Splash Graf-X creates and air brush look with a splash of color.

Available since May in auto and discount stores, each set sells for about $15.

Maintenance Guide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Automobile Dealers Association is offering a consumer brochure that describes the value of timely vehicle maintenance and repair.

It points out the differences between having work done on your car at your convenience and at your inconvenience.

"Car owners should understand what role they can play and what role their dealer's service department can play in maintaining their cars," said James Lust, president of the association representing 19,000 franchised new car dealers. "Once they do, they can retain the highest possible value in their vehicles."

The eight-page pamphlet covers maintenance schedules, different types of service outlets, the advantages of proper and timely maintenance and service and what consumers can do if they're unhappy with that service.

"At Your Service" is the sixth in a series of consumer education brochures. Others include "Buckle Up Baby!" which offers pointers on child safety seats, "Excuse Me!" which covers safe driving, and "Your Money, Your Car," covering new car buying tips.

Each is available free from the NADA Public Affairs Department, 8400 Westpark Drive, McLean, Va. 22102.

Dotson Nissan specializes in fine automobiles and friendly family orientated service.

Dotson is 'different type of dealer'

For more than 25 years, the Dotson Nissan Corp. has become well-known around town for a number of different reasons. One reason is that there is something very special about Dotson Nissan that sets it apart from other auto businesses in the area.

Fred and June Dotson have been in the business of car-sales and car-care for more than a quarter of a century and during that time they have come to a very important conclusion: customers like to be treated well.

This is the first thing one notices at Dotson Nissan — customers are treated almost like family members. The reason for this is simple: Dotson Nissan is very much a family organization, with three generations of Dotson working in the business. Service is polite, quick and efficient. To the Dotsons and their staff, customers are very important and are treated as such.

Unlike many others, Dotson Nissan deals exclusively with one manufacturer. They believe that this helps them provide a better service because they can specialize in one line of vehicle.

Unlike many others, Dotson Nissan deals exclusively with one manufacturer. They believe that this helps them provide a better service because they can specialize in one line of vehicle.

All of the technicians at Dotson Nissan are factory trained by Nissan. This gives them complete and up-to-date information and knowledge about all of Nissan's vehicles.

Dotson Nissan is the third-oldest Nissan dealer in Texas. They have remained successful because subscribe to a number of ideals: individual consideration for each and every customer who comes through the door and they are big enough to service everyone who needs their services but they are small enough to retain a family atmosphere.

The Dotson Nissan Corp. is known through its advertising as a company that cares about issues such as animal welfare. It is this caring attitude that helps make them popular with their customers, both at the point of sale and in service.

For more information about Dotson Nissan's complete range of quality vehicles and services, call 694-9558 or stop by their location at 3917 W. Wall St. in Midland.

Choosing mechanic: Check experience, ask right questions, match car's problem

DETROIT (AP) — Picking the right person to fix your car calls for some guesswork and gut feelings.

But there are a few things to look for that can make the selection easier, according to Champion Laboratories, which makes Champ, Lee and Lee Maxi filters.

The first steps are to pick the right mechanic for your car's problem; second is to check for the mechanic's experience; and third is to ask the right questions.

Garages, like specialty stores, have their limitations, the company says. Basically, they come in four subgroups — dealerships, specialty shops, mass marketing stores and independents.

Dealerships can handle just about everything, from an oil change to a major engine or transmission overhaul. They have the tools to diagnose and treat just about any problem and their mechanics usually have formal training or certification. The down side is that their hourly labor rates reflect the overhead.

Speciality shops do what the name says — specialty work in one area, such as brakes, oil changes or radiator repairs. Prices at specialty shops are usually lower but they are usually out of their comfort zone if asked to fix a problem unrelated to their specialty. The good specialty shops will say so and might recommend another specialist for the problem.

Mass marketing stores usually offer auto service as a convenience. Personnel may be less experienced and the work performed usually is limited to replacement of groups of parts such as tires, shock absorbers or brakes. Diagnostic equipment may be lacking but prices are often reasonable and parts are of good quality.

Independent mechanics often have the expertise to handle all types of repairs but may lack specialty tools or expensive test equipment required for the computerized diagnostics that are a part of newer vehicles. The cost is often reasonable and the service personalized.

Once you've picked the type of repair facility you want, look around the shop. Examine the walls for diplomas or certifications that indicate special training. Ask about the training. If it's lacking, a mechanic may fall into the "replace it till it's fixed syndrome." That can get very expensive.

Even amid grease and oil, a shop should be clean, well-kept and maintained. Vehicles being repaired should have seat and fender covers.

Regardless of what mechanic you pick, he can't fix a problem until he has a clear idea of what he's looking for. You don't need to know proper parts names or terminology, but you should be prepared to answer questions.

ARC cares for ailing vehicles

ARC stays abreast of all the latest legislation as well as the new technology that is constantly being introduced into the field.

If there were a pill to ease the pain of dealing with auto repair, Allstar Repair & Collition (ARC) would be it.

Having spent more than 15 years in the business of repairing damaged automobiles, ARC is more than just another body shop.

ARC has always been firmly committed to the environment and now that the new state environmental laws have been passed, they have seen their own philosophies become law.

The new laws, which are due to take effect on Jan. 1, will require all body shops to be licensed to handle hazardous waste. Included in these regulations are those that control paint emissions and exhaust filtration. Body shops will also be required to provide employees with training in the use of hazardous chemicals.

Failure to comply with the new laws will be an offense, but one practical consideration is that insurance companies will not recognize body shops that do not have state licenses.

ARC stays abreast of all the latest legislation as well as the new technology that is constantly being introduced into the field.

Most modern cars are built on a body construction; the result of this is that repairs required highly specialized equipment operated by expert technicians.

ARC is among a small number of technically advanced body shops that are capable of restoring unibody cars to factory specifications.

At ARC, all damage is repaired to factory specifications on their state-of-the-art collision repair system.

ARC takes considerable pride in their ability to match factory finishes as part of their restoration process. Special attention is taken to exactly duplicate paint texture, gloss and hue.

ARC's attitude toward the environment is just part of their long-term committment to their customers, because as Alan Frasier, the company president said, "when you take your car to a body shop, you want to be sure that it's a shop thats going to be around next year."

For more information about ARC's range of competitively priced services that feature computerized estimates and lifetime warranties, call 682-1364.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION LAST & LAST...

TIPS FROM TRANSMISSION SPECIALISTS:

- AFTER STARTING THE ENGINE, ALLOW IDLE SPEED TO SLOW TO NORMAL BEFORE SHIFTING.
- AVOID HOLDING ONE FOOT ON THE BRAKE, THE OTHER ON THE ACCELERATOR.
- NEVER ROCK YOUR CAR MORE THAN A FEW TIMES WHEN STUCK IN SNOW. ROCKING OVERHEATS THE TRANSMISSION.
- CHECK TRANSMISSION FLUID REGULARLY.
- IF FLUID HAS TURNED BROWN OR SMELLS BURNT, CHANGE FLUID AND FILTER.
- IF YOU NEED TO ADD FLUID, CHECK FOR LEAKAGE.

NOTE: IF YOU ARE A "SEVERE SERVICE" DRIVER (TRAILER TOWING OR OTHER ABNORMAL LOADS) CHECK YOUR OWNER'S MANUAL FOR SPECIAL SERVICE REQUIREMENTS. CONSIDER INSTALLING AN AUXILIARY TRANSMISSION COOLER.

New light improves vision when driving, cuts down on hazards

Winter driving presents a unique set of challenges for all motorists. Along with harsh weather conditions and slippery surfaces, nothing impairs driver safety and comfort more than poor road visibility. The problem is two-fold: low light conditions created by shorter days and bad weather, and weak headlights. Standard headlights approved for use on American roads deliver a low light output and have poor beam control. Part of the fault is headlight design, and part of it is U.S. regulations.

Low standard light output

In America, most of our road information is overhead and many of our roadside signs are not "reflectorized." As a result, our headlamps are designed with "scatter light" to illuminate the signs. To prevent the scatter light from blinding other drivers, low-beam light output is reduced. That's why there is such a big difference between low-beam and high-beam performance.

Motorists often switch on their high beams to improve road visibility. But, high beams cannot be used in traffic and must be turned off when another vehicle approaches. Because high beams are substantially brighter, drivers often experience a "lights-out" sensation while their eyes adjust to the difference in light. When driving on an unfamiliar road, this can be a very uncomfortable and scary moment. Since little can be done to change the weather or the length of the day, the only solution is "better lighting."

Some U.S. drivers upgrade their vehicles with more powerful and more expensive European halogen headlamps. These "conversions" are not legal for U.S. highways and cannot be used on late-model vehicles with aerodynamically designed headlamps. Using fog lamps to get more light is impractical — they only improve lighting in front of the vehicle, not on the road ahead.

Maximum legal lighting

A new lighting innovation recently introduced by Hella, a world leader in automotive lighting, offers a truly effective solution. The Hella XL Auxiliary Halogen Low Beam Headlamp, specifically designed for American motorists, uses precision beam control and maximum legal light output to provide a 100-percent increase in light distribution. This tremendous improvement is made possible by Free-Form (FF) Reflector design, an advanced new technology pioneered by Hella.

This new light not only creates a wider beam pattern (131 feet vs. 49 feet), it also projects a significantly longer "finger" of light ahead of the vehicle (722 feet vs. 426 feet). Where regular low beams create a bright spot in front of the car with sudden darkness at the edges, Hella's XL creates a wide blanket of light with soft transitions that dramatically improve night vision.

Hella XLs are SAE/DOT approved for legal highway use and are designed to work with a vehicle's existing low beams. They do not blind oncoming drivers and can be left on all the time. Many motorists who have used the headlamps say the light feels like a high beam that they never have to turn off.

At Rogers Ford, customer satisfaction is top priority

Customer satisfaction is the No. 1 goal at Rogers Ford, according to service manager Wiley K.Meador. "We're willing to go the extra mile and do whatever it takes to make sure our customers are satisfied with the products and services they purchase from us," he said.

Two service advisors, Diane Robinson and Jay Lee, join dispatcher Ross Jones and cashier Tami Howard to form the customer service team at Rogers Ford.

Meador said training and education of Rogers Ford employees is continuous. Whether the employee is a customer service advisor, service writer or technician, "Ford bends over backwards to help us help them be better employees," he said. All employees who have contact with the public go through a commitment course that is part of the Quality Care Professionals Program, Meador said.

Ford's commitment to customer satisfaction is summarized by their Quality Care statements. "We're giving it everything we've got. You want your car to have the best care possible. We do too. That's why we have improved our Quality Care service to ensure that your car gets the special care it needs, when it needs it. After all, who knows your Ford better than we do?"

"Our technicians aren't just experienced, they're trained," he said. "With hundreds of formal instructions under their belts, they're up on the latest techniques for fixing your Ford. They have even taken classes to improve their listening skills so they can understand you better.

"Our Technical Service Hotline lets technicians get advice directly from the factory engineers who created your car. And we only use Ford and Motorcraft original parts for all your repairs," he said.

"Believe it when you see it. Join the the millions of satisfied customers who have found out about the advantages of Quality Care service. Stop in anytime. After all, we are family," Meador said.

In addition, there is a strong commitment to provide employees with the best equipment possible to do their jobs. Meador said that Rogers Ford recently purchased a new diagnostic machine for $35,000.

Rigid customer satisfaction standards are followed at Rogers Ford with a mission statement to match. "All dealership personnel will treat every customer as a potential lifetime purchaser, communicating a professional image that embraces honesty and concern for customer wants and needs," it reads.

Service standards include seven key actions:

- Appointment within one day of the customer's requested service day.
- Write-up begins within four minutes of arrival.
- Service needs courteously identified, accuratly recorded on Repair Order and verified with the customer.
- Vehicle serviced right on the first visit.
- Service status provided within one minute of inquiry.
- Vehicle ready at agreed time.
- Thorough explanation of work done, coverage and charges.

Meador said that Rogers earned silver awards in the Quality Care Profesisonal Program in both 1991 and 1992. "We hold second place in the Dallas District (a group of 26 dealers) Customer Service Index," he said. This standing is based on 30-day surveys.

All Rogers Ford customers are asked to rate the level of their satisfaction with every service experiene. In addition to the five customer service employees, about 20 technicians work in the service department at Rogers Ford.

Meador said that the average tenure of his employees is about eight years, although some have been with the department even longer. Meador has been with Rogers for 11 years.

" This is another factor that contributes to a high level of customer satisfaction," he said said.

With technology changing so quickly, a considerable investment in training time is required in order to work effectively.

Meador added, "Once a person begins a career with one manufacturer, he or she usually stays with it."

This is not only good for the dealership, but in the long run for the customer as well.

Prepare your car for cold, winter months

Today's smaller, more efficient car engine runs approximately 25 percent faster that the large V-8 that was the standard 10 years ago.

It also runs hotter and in a compact engine compartment that has little space for air to circulate.

Carmakers and suppliers have improved parts' technology to meet greater heat and wear demands.

Gates Rubber Co. advises owners to emphasize preventative maintenance of the cooling system and hoses to avoid problems this winter:

- Add 50-50 mixture of antifreeze and water to prevent overheating in the summer and to provide freezing protection down to - 34 degrees.
- Check coolant levels often; drain system and add fresh coolant every two years.
- Check hoses — upper radiator hose, lower radiator hose, bypass hose, heater hoses — every six months.
- Immediately replace hoses that show obvious signs of wear, such as cracks, cuts, stiffness, bulges, excessive softness or abrasions.
- Even if they don't show signs of wear, hoses should be replaced every four years.

Friendly Pontiac's qualified and experienced staff, such as James Turner, use sophisticated computer equipment to help diagnose problems.

Friendly Pontiac combines many years experience

The entire organization at Friendly Pontiac, Chrysler, Plymouth is dedicated to complete satisfaction.

"Our objective is to expertly perform all necessary repairs to the vehicles as scheduled and deliver to customers within the promised time," said Gary Luse, service manager.

The factory-trained technicians service many customers daily and are sympathetic to their needs. They recognize that the customer is a part of their daily work and not an interruption to it.

With over 100 years of combined factory-trained experience at Friendly Pontiac, customers can count on quality service for routine maintainance or warrenty work.

"General maintainance is one of our continued programs to help the customer keep the value of the vehicle up," Luse said. "And we are competitively priced too."

For routine maintainance they offer a $19.95 lube-and-oil change that includes a manufacturer's filter and Pennzoil oil. Committed to quick service, Friendly Pontiac guarantees a lube-and-oil change within 29 minutes or it's free.

"We haven't lost a free oil-change yet," Luse added.

While the car is being serviced, the technicians check every Chrysler, Plymouth and Pontiac for factory recalls that haven't been repaired yet. If a problem is discovered, they will call the customer for authorization to repair it.

Once repairs are completed, the service information is put into a computer system. With a complete history of repairs readily at hand, customers can rely on a friendly, no-hassle account of their warrenty status and service record.

In addition, Friendly Pontiac uses high-tech diagnostic equipment and stocks only factory parts. The experienced technicians are qualified to work on all models, along with servicing their factory brands. They are also licensed for Texas safety inspections.

No appointment is nececessary at Friendly Pontiac, Chrysler, Plymouth's service department, located at 3705 West Wall, or call 684-7101 for more information.

They even offer a shuttle service within the Midland area to customers who need transportation while their car is being serviced.

Friendly Pontiac, Chrysler, Plymouth, is open 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Visa, Mastercard and American Express are accepted.

'Our objective is to expertly perform all necessary repairs to the vehicles as scheduled and deliver to customers within the promised time.'

The large repair shop and offices of Discount Tire are located at 3100 North Loop 250.

Discount guarantees low prices

Discount Tire is celebrating its third anniversary and they have a lot to celebrate. "Business is excellent, much better than projected," said store manager Mark Norman.

In addition to their current range of tires, Discount Tire has launched a brand new line of Goodyear tires. The store already carries Michelin, B.F. Goodrich, General, Lee, Pirelli and Yokohama tires among other brands. Prices are guaranteed to be the lowest in town.

Discount Tire Co. also specializes in the sale and installation of custom wheels. Norman said that in addition to the obvious cosmetic value of custom wheels, they are considerably lighter yet more sturdy than the wheels that come as standard equipment on most vehicles.

Norman and his staff offer several free services at Discount Tire. Among them are free tire inspections and free tire repair regardless of where the tire was purchased. Flats will also be repaired free of charge regardless of the tire's origin.

Norman says that he guarantees his prices to be the lowest in town. In fact, he said that he can adjust his prices almost daily to beat the competition.

He also said that the National Tire and Rubber Retailers in America's magazine rated Discount Tire as the No. 1 tire dealer in North America for the fourth year in a row.

After the company was founded in 1960, Discount Tire's corporate officers realized that "people don't really want cheap tires, they want tires that they can afford." The company began selling more brand name tires, then it began promoting the best brands at good discounts.

The result was that Discount Tire's sales went from approximatly $70 million a year in the early 1980s to more than $500 million a year to date.

They did this by putting a lot of emphasis on people as well as quality products. All of Discount Tire's personnel are well-trained, friendly and efficient.

They offer outstanding service and all of their work is guaranteed.

Discount Tire is located at 3100 North Loop 250. Hours are 8:30 a.m to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. For more information call 694-0098.

Auto log book pays dividends

Logging, defined as the act of entering information in a log book, is done by pilots, fleet operators, the military and virtually anyone to whom vehicle performance and dependability are essential.

Maintaining a log book is a good idea for private owners too, says Care Care Council, who suggest that setting up and maintaining an auto diary is a simple procedure.

Essentially there are six types of entries, according to the Council:

1. Gasoline fill-ups and mileage;
2. Addition of various fluids such as engine oil, coolant, power steering fluid and at what mileage;
3. Maintenance services performed: what, when, by whom and how much it cost;
4. Services performed other than routine maintenance, i.e. body repairs or paint, accessories installed, etc.;
5. Insurance and/or registration information;
6. Basic part numbers and/or specifications that may not be readily found in the owners manual (belts, hoses, headlamps, spark plugs, filters, etc.

Take care of engine for fall or face expensive repairs

Your car ran fine all summer with no sign of trouble, so why bother with it this fall?

Here's why: The cost of overhauling an engine can run into thousands of dollars; automatic transmission repairs also are expensive. Cooling system neglect could be the problem.

This system performs several functions:

- it keeps the engine running within specified temperatures;
- it cools the automatic transmission;
- it circulates hot water through the heater.

Temperatures inside an engine may soar to between 4,500 and 5,000 degrees — enough to melt an engine block in a matter of minutes if it weren't for the cooling system.

Cooling systems are challenged because of today's engines that run much hotter, added emission control systems, smaller radiators and crowded engine compartments.

To avoid problems with rust, dirt or mineral deposits, the system should be cleaned every year or two:

- remove radiator cap when engine is cold;
- open petcock at bottom of radiator and drain coolant;
- close petcock and fill radiator with water;
- start engine and turn heater control to hot
- add cooling-system cleaner and idle engine for 30 minutes (or whatever instructions say)
- stop engine and allow it to cool for five minutes;
- drain the system;
- close petcock, fill radiator with water and let engine idle for five minutes;

Littlefield Automotive specializes in repairing European cars

After more than 16-years of repairing and servicing European automobiles in the Permian Basin, Littlefield Automotive has added Lexus, Honda and Acura to their list of credentials.

The extensive list of Eropean automobiles Littlefield services include: Mercedes Benz, BMW, Audi, Volvo, Volkswagen, Porsche, Saab and Jaguar. While other car-care companies may claim that they service all types of automobiles, Littlefield Automotive specializes in repairing European vehicles only.

Committed to excellence, owners Ronnie and Hayden Littlefield recently hired a specialist technician to repair Jaguars. While the Littlefields recieved their training at Mercedes Benz factory schools, the most recent member of the team, Sean Kendrick, recieved his training in Austin.

"We do it all — from the front bumper to the rear bumper," Hayden said. "We're equipped with the latest equipment to handle all types of repairs, such as a four-wheel alignment machine for independant suspension, a computer tire balancer, Sun diagnostic equipment and an exhaust gas analyzer."

Along with the distinction of being Bosch auto-parts specialists, the Littlefields recieve up-to-date service bulletins and have access to Bosch technical training schools, allowing them to keep up with the latest automotive advances.

Littlefield Automotive always keeps a large supply of European car parts in stock, but, if by chance they do not have a particular part, they will do whatever they can to get it with the minimum of inconvenience to the customer.

"I can call to order a part in the afternoon and recieve it overnight," Ronnie said. They only use high-quality parts for their repairs.

While most car owners think that have to take their vehicles to the dealer in order to maintain the vehicle's warrenty, Hayden points out that the Magnuson-Moss Warrenty Act gives car owners the option of having their car serviced by any independant service station.

However, he pointed out that in order to keep the car's warrenty valid, the car should be serviced regularly and good records should be kept.

All services performed at Littlefield Automotive comply with manufacturer's manuals and specifications, and they offer them at a resonable price. They are also a certified state inspection station.

Located at 1810 W. Front St., Littlefield Automotive is open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.
