Negotiators say accord reached on deregulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators, after a stormy session with Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger lasting into the early morning hours, said today they had reached a basic accord on the proposed deregulation of natural gas.

Although sources, who declined to be identified, said there was still a chance the negotiations might break down, most conferees expressed guarded optimism that a compromise may be near. An agreement would break the deadlock stalling President Carter's year old energy program.

They said two relatively minor differences remain to be resolved on the controversial deregulation issue.

But Rep. Harley M. Staggers, D-W.Va., said he hoped that those differences could be settled in about an hour later today. Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who leads the Senate conferees, said the negotiators decided to sleep on it because "some of us are tired."

Another meeting was scheduled for later in the day to take up the issues not yet resolved. Both involve the kinds of gas that will be eligible for deregulation on January 1, 1985, the date conferees have tentatively selected for lifting federal price controls.

The conferees emerged with Schlesinger shortly before 3 a.m. EST after nearly 13 straight hours of closed-door negotiations. Congressional leaders had hoped to be able to finish by midnight Thursday to keep the energy program's first anniversary from slipping by, but missed the self-imposed deadline.

On Thursday, Carter took note that a year had passed since he submitted the energy program to Congress. He declared that "precious time" already has been wasted and urged Congress to wrap up its deliberations on the legislation. The energy package had been stalled by the five-month debate over natural gas deregulation.

Russian jets force Korean plane down; two passengers die

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet jet fighters fired at an Alaska-bound South Korean jetliner and forced it to land after the passenger plane flew over Soviet territory, President Carter's national security adviser said today.

Two of the plane's passengers were dead and two others injured, Zbigniew Brzezinski, the adviser, said. A State Department spokesman said a total of 13 persons were injured, two of them seriously.

Brzezinski, who did not elaborate on the Soviet shooting at the passenger plane, said he did not know the cause of death or the nationalities of the victims. But Japanese sources said one of the dead was a Japanese citizen, Y. Sugano, 45.

In Moscow, U.S. embassy officials said the Soviet government has offered to allow an American civil aircraft to pick up the passengers and crew in Murmansk, 230 miles north of the landing site.

An embassy spokesman said the United States has made no response to this invitation and denied that the United States is playing any middleman's role in the incident.

American sources in Moscow said U.S. officials were informed by the Soviets that the Boeing 707, which landed on a frozen lake, suffered "some damage."

No Americans were reported aboard the plane, which had been bound from Paris to Seoul, with a refueling stop in Anchorage, Alaska.

Japanese sources said Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin was keeping visiting Japanese Agriculture Minister Ichiro Nakagawa informed on the incident.

They said the Soviets told him the pilot, after being intercepted by warplanes, tried for two hours to avoid landing before he was forced down on a frozen lake near the town of Kem, 600 miles north of Moscow and 300 miles south of Murmansk in the Soviet northwest. Kem is 150 miles east of the Finnish border.

The Japanese sources said the Soviet Foreign Ministry informed them the impact was so severe that the ice on the lake was shattered.

The South Korean Foreign Ministry said today that information it had indicated the plane made an emergency landing after it violated Soviet territory but "not deliberately."

A Korean Airlines spokesman said an aircraft would arrive in Helsinki, Finland Saturday to pick up the passengers and crew of the downed aircraft.

The official Soviet Tass news agency said arrangements were being made for the passengers and crew to leave the Soviet Union. Another KAL plane left Seoul today for Helsinki, Finland, to stand by to pick them up.

"Fighter planes of the Soviet anti-aircraft defenses intercepted the violator," Tass said. "In night-time conditions, using revolutions (maneuvers) of the planes and onboard lights, they repeatedly issued orders to the intruder to follow them in order to land at some nearby airfield.

"The plane, however, did not respond to these orders and landed on a lake," Tass said.

Tass said the plane had entered Soviet airspace near Murmansk.

"The passengers and crew of the plane were taken to the nearest populated locality and arrangements are being made for their dispatch from the U.S.S.R.'s territory," Tass said.

Moro's wife makes plea

ROME (AP) — Aldo Moro's wife and children appealed to the government today to negotiate with his kidnappers, but the ruling Christian Democratic Party's chief parliamentary allies urged rejection of his captors' demand for release of jailed terrorists in exchange for the former premier.

Premier Giulio Andreotti's government, which has refused so far to deal with the kidnappers from the Red Brigades, made no immediate comment on the plea. Meanwhile, the cabinet was meeting to discuss an ultimatum received from the kidnappers Thursday.

The family in a statement appealed to the government to "take a realistic attitude and declare availability to ascertain terms" for his release.

It said Moro's wife Eleonora appealed personally Thursday to leaders of the government and the Christian Democratic Party, of which her husband is the president.

Mrs. Moro, her son and three daughters had been publicly silent since the abduction March 16. But they were reported to have urged the government privately to negotiate Moro's release.

The Red Brigades in a communique Thursday said Moro, 61, was still alive but would be executed unless the government agreed by 9 a.m. EST Saturday to negotiate the release of "communist prisoners."

Interior Ministry sources said experts determined the authenticity of both the communique and a photo demonstrating that Moro was still alive. It showed him with a copy of a Wednesday newspaper headlined "Moro Assassinato?"

Il Popolo, the Christian Democratic Party newspaper, said the picture was "evidence" Moro is alive, and "there exists no doubt about the authenticity of the message" that accompanied it.

Christian Democratic officials said the party secretary general, Benigno Zaccagnini, also received another letter from Moro Thursday night, but they refused to disclose its contents. They said the signature appeared to be genuine.

Andreotti and other leaders of the government party had met until 2 a.m. discussing the situation, but there was no word of any decision. Previously they rejected repeated appeals from Moro to exchange him for jailed terrorists, contending that he was acting under duress.

Press reports today said Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga threatened to resign if the government bowed to the terrorists' demand.

The Communists, Social Democrats and Republicans, three of the six parties making up Andreotti's parliamentary majority, called on the government to continue to reject the kidnappers' demands.

Chaplin body theft told

CORSIER SUR VEVEY, Switzerland (AP) — The night of Wednesday, March 1, was a typical one in Corsier-Sur-Vevey, the little Swiss village where Charlie Chaplin, its most prominent citizen, had died last Christmas Day.

Most people had gone to bed after watching a soccer game and "The Factory of Fear," a mystery series, on television. The cafe next to the church had stayed open an extra half hour so the aldermen could have a glass of wine after a regular meeting of the Municipal Council.

Shortly after midnight, the streets were empty as a steady rain fell.

What happened next has been pieced together from the reports of police, judicial authorities and villagers.

Around 2 a.m., Thursday, March 2, a mini truck or station wagon drove up a dead-end road and turned right into the village cemetery. The cemetery's iron gate was open, as it always is. The vehicle stopped on a tree-lined central alley dividing rows of graves. Three or four men — investigators said later it would have taken at least three strong men to do the job — walked to a grave marked by a simple oak cross with the inscription "Charles Chaplin, 16.4.1889-25.12.1977" — Born 16 April, 1889-Died 25 December, 1977.

With picks and shovels, they began what one official of an undertaker's company said was sure to be "very hard work" because the earth was heavy and wet after weeks of snow and rain. They worked for at least an hour before clearing the earth around a plain oak coffin with two silver handles and lifted it out. Marks in the grass later showed that the coffin was dragged for at least 50 feet before it was hauled into the vehicle. This was the last clue investigators were to find on the scene of what had turned into a

Three fire department promotions announced

Three promotions within the Midland Fire Department were announced this morning by Fire Chief Raymond Lewis.

James Roberts, fire marshal, has been named deputy fire chief, a post vacated March 31 when former Deputy Fire Chief John Bourke retired. Bourke had been with the Fire Department for more than 30 years.

Roberts has been with the Fire Department for 18 years. Roberts' position as deputy fire chief became effective today.

Assistant Fire Marshal Herb Bloomer, who has been with the Department for 21 years, will fill the job of fire marshal, vacated by Roberts.

Jerry Petree, inspector, has been named as assistant fire marshal. Petree has been with the Department for approximately five years.

Lewis said Bloomer's and Petree's appointments will become effective Monday.

Polo longtime Midland tradition

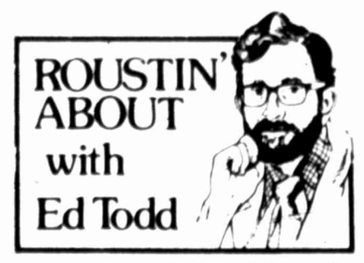

Yes, polo is coming to Midland in a big way this weekend. No polo buff or pony fancier would dispute that.

However, the sport certainly is not new to Midland. It's been here for at least two generations. And Midland landman Henry H. Bettis Jr. has some silver-clad proof of that.

It's in the form of a silver-plated champagne trophy bucket won in 1910 by The Midland Polo Club at the El Paso Fair. Engraved on the three-handled trophy are these names: Henry M. Halff, G. H. Coyle, John M. Cowden and B.A. Palmer.

Bettis is a grandson of the late George Houston Coyle, a polo pony dealer, horse trainer and horse racer who sold ponies to the likes of polo great Tommy Hitchcock Jr. and cowboy humorist Will Rogers.

Coyle, who came to Midland from Dallas in 1909 to groom horses for polo and to play the game here, recalled his daughter, Viola Coyle Bettis, 78, of Brownwood.

"They were playing right on the ranch on Western saddles and on whatever they could get a hold of," she said.

It was in the mid-1920s when Rogers dropped in on Brownwood for a scheduled show and wound up getting in a game or so of polo out on the G. H. Coyle Ranch south of the city. On the field with the humorist were Coyle, his son Carrell C. Coyle, Pete Patterson of Midland, polo pony dealer Jim Minnick of Crosbyton and industrialist Joseph E. Meyer of Newark, N.J. A testimonial to that is a photograph, treasured by Bettis, which depicts the six men on their mounts and mallets in hand.

Some years later, Coyle moved to Cisco. He died in 1940, at age 64, in New Orleans, where he was hospitalized following a fall from a horse in Canada a year earlier.

So much for that scrap of polo history. What's happening at the Midland Polo Club field this weekend will be games between the Tulsa, Okla., team and the Dallas team at 3 p.m. Saturday and then a tussle between the San Antonio team and the Wilson Ranch team of Midland at 3 p.m. Sunday. On the scene will be professional polo players Red Armour of Tulsa, Joe Barry of San Antonio, and

Dispatcher finds no difficulties

After her first week as the first woman dispatcher for the Midland Fire Department, Maxine Maddox said today no problems had arisen with her new job.

"I haven't had any problem with being the only woman member of the department because nobody's really made any big deal about it," she said.

"And it's been pretty slow this week. The calls have been scattered out so that I haven't really been pressed for time — except Tuesday when I got four calls 10 minutes before I got off work."

Prior to joining the Fire Department, Miss Maddox worked as dispatcher for a chauffeur-limousine service. A television show could be responsible for her new job with the city.

"I just thought it would be different and exciting. I watched 'Emergency' on television," she said.

Fire Chief Raymond Lewis has said other women may be added to the force as dispatchers. Until proper facilities are constructed, however, women firefighters are not in the plans.

Miss Maddox will be in training for another five days, after which she will work the midnight shift.

The Fire Department now has five dispatchers who work at the central station serving the six Midland substations.

Hearings held on new policy in education

Public hearings on proposed new policies for the state's special education program for handicapped children were held at Alamo Junior High School Thursday morning and afternoon.

R. A. Montgomery, assistant deputy commissioner for the Texas Education Agency, was in charge of the meetings. He said the purpose of the statewide hearings is to get citizen opinion and comment on the proposed new program.

The document containing the proposals lists many different kinds of handicapped children for whom the state must provide special education.

It defines these youngsters as students from ages three through 21 with educational handicaps, physical handicaps, mental retardation, emotional disturbances, learning disabilities, speech handicaps and pregnancies.

A second group of the handicapped, listed from birth through age 22, have serious visual or hearing problems, or a combination of both.

Montgomery said the state must, by law, provide special education programs for students with any of these handicaps. "But we have a long way to go throughout the state before each one is served," he added.

The most difficult handicaps to serve are those for the severely retarded and for the completely deaf.

Montgomery, interviewed at the afternoon session, said one of the main objections of those attending the morning session was that the new proposals financially penalize the school district that attempts to provide a full range of services to handicapped children. He said citizens have suggested that such schools should receive more in state aid.

Mary Aikey, an educational diagnostician from Andrews, asked for a more flexible rule in the amount of time required in resource team teaching. The new rule proposes that each child get a minimum of one hour of special training per day. Ms. Aikey said some children need only a half-hour and others might need an hour and a half.

If, perchance, you have nothing else to do and if you venerate war planes, you might give a thought to driving or flying over to Pyote — between Monahans and Pecos — to check out a mini-airshow Saturday at the old and abandoned Pyote Army Air Base, otherwise known as Rattlesnake Bomber Base. It was a training field for B-17 Flying Fortress and B-29 Superfortress crews in World War II.

The occasion is the dedication of a museum to preserve what little is left of "Rattlesnake" and the wing-shaped rock gateway to the sprawling field.

The fanfare, to begin at 2 p.m. Saturday, will feature a flyover by three Confederate Air Force warbirds: a P-51D Mustang owned and piloted by Bill Hubbs of Pecos, a British Spitfire owned and piloted by W. Woods of Phoenix, Ariz., and a B-17 alternately flown by John Yates of Scottsdale, Ariz., William F. Wall of Tempe, Ariz., and James Edward Orton of Mesa, Ariz.

What may prove to be the highlight of the day might be a scheduled aerobatic show by the P-51D flown by one of two CAF colonels: Marvin "Lefty" Gardner of Mercedes or Joe Henderson of Brownwood.

But the one thing that might bar low-level aerobatics is this: Huff is not sure fire certain that either of the fellow colonels will be in for the show. But he and a lot of aircraft buffs are banking on it. Huff can do some precision flying in his craft, but "I'm not going to do one (aerobatic show) that close (600 feet) to the ground. I'm not that qualified," he told Roustin' About.

At any rate, just the sight of those old rare birds and the romantic, rumbling sound of their engines should be worth the trip to Pyote by prop jocks and hangar-bound dream fliers.

Incidentally, those wishing to fly over may plop down at the Monahans airport Saturday. From there, pilots and their passengers will be driven to Pyote, (population, 162) for what may be the event of the year.

principles and laws on which the national community and civilized living rest," said a statement from the Communists, whom the ultra-leftist Red Brigades denounce for cooperating with the Christian Democrats.

The Social Democrats said: "Democratic institutions cannot enter into a pact with those who spill blood on the streets day after day."

Some of Moro's friends and some intellectuals and churchmen reportedly have urged the government to relent, and some small political factions to the left of the Communists also have asked the government to negotiate. Il Popolo said "we hope and want that a way out could be found," and "every possible attempt" should be made to save the missing man's life. But the newspaper took no stand on dealing with the kidnappers.

The ultimatum spoke of "hundreds of communist prisoners in the concentration camps of the imperialist state" but did not specify how many must be released. Nor did it specifically demand freedom for the 15 Red Brigades members, including founder Renato Curcio, on trial in Turin. An estimated 400 leftist extremists are in Italian jails, serving terms for arson, murder and other crimes of violence. They include about 150 members of the Red Brigades, Italy's most active urban guerrilla organization.

After copies of the photograph and the ultimatum appeared Thursday in Rome, Milan, Turin and Genoa, authorities halted the hunt for Moro's body in and around Lake Duchessa, in the mountains 72 miles northeast of Rome.

A message Tuesday attributed to the Red Brigades said Moro had been executed and his body dumped in the lake. Divers finally found a body there Thursday, but it was that of a local man who had been suffering from a nervous breakdown.

The communique Thursday said Tuesday's message was a fake manufactured by Andreotti and his "acomplices" as part of a "psychological war" to win public sympathy.

RANKIN—The Upton County 4-H Club named Lerii Fitzhugh Gold Star Girl and Tracy Long Gold Star Boy at its achievement barbecue Monday in the Rankin school cafeteria.

Also at the dinner, the following awards were presented: Stanley Sherrill Achievement Award, Roger Hensick; Achievement, Todd Ratliff; Leadership, Brent Wrinkle; Gardening, Bo Rose, Jr.; Gardening, Michael Northcott; Swine, Michael Peterson; Dress Revue, Lisa Phillips, Sheryl Noble, Phyllis West, Lerii Fitzhugh.

Also: Clothing, Lori Steward, Beverly Hoelscher; Foods and Nutrition, Kristi Bell, Leigh Ann Carlton, Gina Campbell, Julie Hopper; Achievement, Lani Steward; Poultry, Lisa Steward, Cindi Watson; Trophy-Champion Crossbred and Champion Medium Wool, Brent Wrinkle; Trophy-Champion Finewool, Rusty Wilkes; Trophy-Champion Pig, Michael Peterson; Trophy-State 4-H Meet-Trap Shoot 2nd Place, Todd Ratliff.

An estimated 200 people attended the barbecue. Project completion certificates were awarded to 105 4-H members. Adult leader certificates were presented to 46 persons. One special recognition certificate was given to Betty and Herman Stanley for support of the 4-H program.

Scouts in need of old uniforms

The Boy Scouts of Midland are in need of any outgrown or unused Scout uniforms that may be available in the city. Scoutmaster Lee May said Scouts and adults will pick up these uniforms from 1 to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Those having uniforms which they wish to donate may telephone Midland radio stations to give their address.

If a pick up on Saturday afternoon is inconvenient, donors are asked to call Scout headquarters at 684-7171. A pick up early next week can be arranged, according to May.

Hedge to line Odessa highway

ODESSA—In a few years, a hedge of purple sage brush will line the south edge of Highway 80 from Loop 338 to Meadows St. here after 1,200 of the county's "adopted flower" were dedicated in a ceremony Thursday.

El Paso Products Co. is donating the plants and the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation will plant them and maintain them for a year, according to Grace King of El Paso Products Co.

"We're hoping other companies will follow suit," she said. The Oasis Foundation here last year planted purple sage brush in the Highway 80 median and Ms. King added the company is trying to help in beautifying the highways going into Odessa.

The plants were difficult to obtain this year, she said. After the highway department has maintained them for the year, the plants should be large enough to thrive without continuous care, according to the company spokesman.

Hospital board occupied by indigent care policy

Guidelines for providing indigent care occupied much of the attention of the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors Thursday afternoon, as the group considered wording to be used in the policy statement.

A draft agreement calls for care of "needy and indigent" patients, defined as persons who live within the county, are not eligible for government programs to pay hospital costs, and are unable otherwise to obtain funds to pay their bills.

The draft statement would apply only to hospital costs and not fees charged by private physicians. Board attorney Ted Kerr told members the Midland County Medical Society has requested that such fees be included in the guidelines.

However, Kerr said, there is considerable doubt about whether payments to private physicians would be legal under the Texas constitution.

New board member Dr. Michael Burleson suggested consideration of a plan to set up an out-patient facility or nurse-practitioner to handle non-emergency cases. Otherwise, he said, the emergency room is going to become more and more over-loaded with general medical care cases.

Kerr said he would study the law further and examine possible methods to handle doctor payments before presenting a revised recommendation to the directors at their next meeting.

In other action, the board voted to purchase two lots in the 2100 block of Illinois Avenue if the hospital is granted a certificate of need for additional parking space.

Kerr said the land would be purchased from the Midland Area Foundation Inc. at the price paid by the foundation.

Also Thursday, the directors elected E. H. Magruder Jr. president for the coming year; L. Decker Dawson, vice president, and R. L. Pendleton, secretary.

Burleson and Frank Cowden Jr., elected as directors in the April 1 election, were sworn into office by County Court at Law Judge Willie DuBose.

Typical spring weather dominates area forecasts

Midlanders had a right to expect another typical West Texas spring day today as warm temperatures and winds make up the forecast.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal predicts partly cloudy skies through Saturday with the temperatures to reach into the middle 80s Friday, but to drop to the high 70s Saturday. Southwesterly winds of 20 to 30 mph are to diminish to 15 to 20 mph tonight, the weatherman says. A low in the middle 50s is expected tonight.

Area towns this morning reported sunny skies and cool temperatures.

Fair skies and mild temperatures dominated the state weather picture, but the possibility of scattered thunderstorm activity, particularly in North Texas by the evening hours, remains.

Only a few patches of clouds in South Texas and in the Panhandle kept the state from reporting fair skies statewide. Early morning temperatures ranged from the 30s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the 50s in South Texas. Early morning extremes ranged from 42 at Lufkin, Wichita Falls and Dalhart to 58 at Del Rio.

Forecasters called for continued fair skies in South Texas, partly cloudy skies in Northwest Texas and mostly cloudy skies in Northeast Texas. It was to be windy in Northwest Texas.

Dance tonight

The Sash-A-Way Square Dance Club will sponsor a dance at 8 p.m. today in the M-Squarena, with James Moore calling. The event is open to all area dancers.

Senators angry over jet sale plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are described as angered by President Carter's handling of a plan to sell jet fighters to Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Israel.

Congressional sources predict the sales will be blocked by the House and Senate unless Carter alters the package to increase the sales to Israel in proportion to the arms sent to the Arab nations.

So far, the administration has given no sign of a willingness to alter the details in any way.

Furthering administration problems, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has angered members of the foreign relations committee by cancelling a plan to meet with the panel before the formal submission to Congress of the arms deals.

The administration plans to submit the proposal to Congress next Wednesday. To block it, the House and Senate must approve resolutions of disapproval within 30 days. Otherwise the sales would become automatic.

Although, the committee's members are expressing their anger now, congressional opposition to the package sale has been prevalent since it first was announced more than two months ago.

"I am disappointed," Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said Thursday. He had pressed Vance for the commitment to appear.

Vance is in Moscow on the last leg of an overseas trip.

Sources, who asked not to be named, said committee members were angered, not by the fact that Vance was out of the country, but by the tone of his letter to Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., the committee chairman.

In the April 11 letter, a copy of which the Associated Press has obtained, Vance said the details of the proposed sale were made public Feb. 14. Furthermore, he wrote, "the administration has sought to provide your committee with all the information necessary to assess this proposal. ... I feel confident that your committee has received virtually all of the information provided to policy makers within the executive branch."

What the committee wanted, the sources said, was another opportunity to discuss the package with Vance and possibly to negotiate changes that would make it more acceptable on Capitol Hill.

As announced by the administration, the $4.8 billion package includes 75 F-16 jet fighters and 15 F-15s for Israel, 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia and 50 F-5s to Egypt.

The administration has insisted that the proposal be treated as a package and said if any element is dropped, Carter would cancel everything.

Reports of her death greatly exaggerated

LOS ANGELES (AP)/— Kitty Kallen, a popular singer in the big band era of the 1940s and 1950s, is alive and well despite reports of her death Thursday at a Los Angeles area hospital.

"How did this happen. I'm fine," Miss Kallen, 55, told an Associated Press reporter in a telephone conversation from her home in Englewood, N.J.

The report of Miss Kallen's having died was announced Thursday by the City of Hope Medical Center in Duarte, a Los Angeles suburb. A spokesman at the medical center said the person who was erroneously identified as Miss Kallen had given two names when she was admitted to the hospital — Kitty Kallen and Genevieve Agostinello.

"She said her professonal name was Kitty Kallen," said Saul Abel, public relations director at the hospital. "We had no reason not to believe her."

Bud Granoff, Miss Kallen's husband for 30 years and her one-time manager, said he first learned of his wife's "problem" late Thursday through a frantic call from a friend.

"I thought, 'My God, this can't be,' " said Granoff.

"She was here in the house not long ago. I went to look for her, couldn't find her right away but finally did. I told her 'do you know you have been reported dead at the City of Hope Medical Center?'"

At one time a featured vocalist with the Jack Teagarden, Jimmy Dorsey and Harry James bands, Miss Kallen's hit records also included "I'll Buy That Dream," "It's Been a Long Long Time," Besame Mucho," "Chapel in The Moonlight," and "I'm Beginning to See the Light."

Miss Kallen also won acclaim as an actress. She replaced Ella Logan in the leading role in "Finian's Rainbow" on Broadway and in 1955 made a movie, "The Second Greatest Sex," with Jeanne Crain, George Nader and Bert Lahr.

Rotary program Navajo weaving

Jackson Clarke, an Indian trader from Durango, Colo., was the speaker Thursday noon at the meeting of the Downtown Rotary Club in the Midland Hilton.

"Navajo Weaving — Past, Present and Future" was his subject.

The speaker, introduced by David Grimes, traced the history of Navajo weaving; told how the products first reached the marketplace, and related the increased demand for blankets and other items among traders and others through the years.

Clarke displayed a number of Navajo blankets, rugs, saddle blankets and tapestries, some dating back to the 1840s.

He said the present demand holds, but, looking into the future, the big concern is the steadily declining number of weavers.

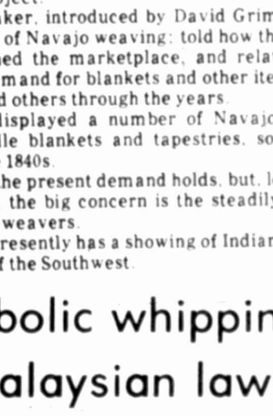

Clarke presently has a showing of Indian lore in the Museum of the Southwest.

Symbolic whippings in Malaysian law

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Moslems convicted in Kedah state of illicit intercourse will be given symbolic public whippings, the chairman of a committee revising the state's Islamic laws says.

"The caning under the proposed law will be humane and will not be similar to the one meted out for criminal offenses by prison authorities," Ahmad Fairuz said. "The caning will not hurt physically or cause any harm to the bodies of those convicted."

Howdy, D&D visitors

The annual convention of Region V, Desk and Derrick Clubs of North America, is being held in the Tall City this weekend, with the Desk and Derrick Club of Midland as the host organization.

The conference, which is expected to attract several hundred delegates, opened today and will continue through Sunday morning. Headquarters have been established in the Midland Hilton.

Region V includes Desk and Derrick clubs of Abilene, Andrews, Big Spring, Borger, Breckenridge, Midland, Odessa, Pampa, Perryton, San Angelo, Wichita Falls, and Albuquerque, Artesia, Farmington, Hobbs and Roswell, N.M.

It is great to have this distinguished group of ladies engaged in various segments of the oil and gas business in Midland on this occasion, and Midlanders are delighted that the D&D members of this vast, highly productive region of West Texas and New Mexico selected Midland as the site of their 1978 convention.

Tall City residents are anxious to do everything possible to see that the stay of the visitors here is most enjoyable and worthwhile. The Midland D&D members have been working for months on arrangements for the session and the convention program they are unveiling undoubtedly will be outstanding. This is the way the Midland club members operate.

Theme of the meeting is a "Gala Cruise" on the S.S. Midland Hilton. The cruise embarks tonight with a "Welcome Aboard" session and a tour of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. In all, there will be five "Ports of Call." Sounds like fun.

An Industry Appreciation Banquet is scheduled Saturday night as a convention highlight. R.B. "Buddy" Hyde Jr., president of Dresser Industries Oil Field Products Group, Houston, will be the speaker.

A great big, cordial, typically West Texas WELCOME is directed to the convention visitors, along with the hope that they will come back to see us at every opportunity.

Tower is due praise

Three cheers for U.S. Sen. John Tower who again voted against ratification of the Panama Canal treaties, in line with the desires of a vast majority of his Texas constituents.

At the same time, Texas' junior senator, Lloyd Bentsen, again voted for ratification and against the expressed wishes of thousands upon thousands of his fellow Texans.

The Tuesday action of the U.S. Senate in giving away the Panama Canal might have been a victory for President Carter, as he put it, but it was a defeat for the United States in the minds of many of its citizens.

Actually, it was a victory for Panama's strongman, Gen. Omar Torrijos, who Tuesday night told his countryman, amidst dancing and drinking in the streets, that "This treaty ends colonialism and I feel proud that I have accomplished our mission."

Worse than this even was his statement the following morning that he was prepared to sabotage the canal if the treaties had not been ratified. We will be faced with this sort of thing from here on out.

The majority sentiment of the people of the U.S. seemed to have been against ratification, yet their feelings were ignored. The President and the 68 senators who voted for ratification will have to live with their actions for a long time to come.

Senator Bentsen, in spite of the protests of opponents, said, "I firmly believe and I think most Texans would agree that ratification of the Panama Canal treaties is in the best interests of our nation's security and clearly in the best interests of our neighbors in Latin America."

Senator Tower, on the other hand, said, "I view tonight's vote with great disappointment and some concern for the future of the Panama Canal. The United States has operated the canal for the benefit of all maritime nations and now we are left with significant uncertainty over the reliability of the operation of this vital waterway in the years to come."

Yes, "significant uncertainty" best describes the situation as it now stands.

CAPITAL GAMES:

GAO would eliminate 'bureaucratic jargon'

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The afternoon newspaper here features a popular column called "Gobbledygook" that highlights some of the government's most outrageous and incomprehensible bureaucratise.

It proves daily what most people suspect is true of federal regulation and report writers: They can't write — at least not in the same language that most Americans can read.

The following gobbledygook item, excerpted from the Congressional Record, is characteristic although somewhat shorter and clearer than most: "Last year, the House was in session 24 of the 38 Fridays when the House was in session."

Usually, it's funny to see how tangled a string of words can become at the hand of a bureaucrat.

But the folks inside government aren't laughing. In fact, a few of them got so tired of being the brunt of jokes that they decided to do something about it.

"It was getting so bad that the only place our reports were being published was in the Washington Star's Gobbledygook column," one official at the General Accounting Office (GAO) lamented.

And for an agency whose only product is reports, that spells trouble. The GAO is the investigative arm of Congress, and it spews out a report every time a member demands a study of a program or problem.

Fed up with being ridiculed and ignored, GAO officials started a course one and one-half years ago aimed at training every writer and editor at GAO in "Producing Organized Writing and Effective Reviewing" — or POWER, as the two and one-half day course is called.

Contrary to public opionion, instructors did not have to begin by teaching bureaucrats the English language. "We don't concentrate on grammar," said course instructor and GAO employee Tim Bowling, "because they already know it."

But Bowling does work on teaching writers to eliminate bureaucratic jargon and irrelevant information from reports and regulations. He shows them how to cut sentence wordiness by half and how to organize information logically.

In trying to weed out bureaucratise and gobbledygook, Bowling and his boss, John Regan, say they first tried to find out why writers twist their sentences and jumble their paragraphs the way they do.

"Some of our students tell us they think the more words they use, the more knowledgeable they sound," Bowling said.

"Others tell us if you understand a paragraph and no one else does, then you're smarter than they are ... and also, no one can tell you when you're wrong," said Sandy Eggart, another GAO writing instructor.

Others believe most writers just need some guidance and an outline of good writing principles to get on the right track.

William Anderson, a deputy director in GAO who teaches an application class in the course, said the 175 writers he supervises all have attended the course. "My life is a lot easier because the reports are smoother from the beginning and don't need so much editing," Anderson said.

President Carter got on the bandwagon recently when he ordered all federal regulators to be "as simple and clear as possible." He said he wants regulations written "in plain English."

"It's nice that the President has decided we should do something about this," one GAO official said, "because we already are."

During his campaign, Mr. Carter recognized gobbledygook as a chronic problem. Not long after he took office, he decided that the way to eliminate indecipherable regulations was to order each Cabinet secretary to review personally each regulation before it was proposed.

"That seems to be attacking the problem from the wrong end," Anderson said. "We're trying to teach our people to write clearly in the first place."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Carter's goal in Rhodesia told

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — President Carter has assigned top priority to bringing the black majority to power in Rhodesia as peacefully as possible.

His national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, told the Cabinet behind closed doors that Rhodesia is one of the world's most dangerous trouble spots. If a peaceful settlenent isn't reached, he warned, it will open the door to Soviet-Cuban intervention.

The United States has taken the position, therefore, that the guerrillas must be included in the settlement. Otherwise, they will resist it and continue fighting, with increasing Soviet-Cuban support.

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, meanwhile, has negotiated his own settlement with moderate black leaders. This excludes the guerrilla group, which the Americans and British are trying to push on him.

President Carter told his Cabinet that he has studied an analysis of Smith's internal agreement. "We shall approach the situation cautiously," he said.

It will take cautious maneuvering, indeed, to bring Smith into line. We have seen the secret minutes of his talks with black leaders. "I have no particular love for the Anglo-American proposals," he snorted at one session. "We have failed to achieve our goal every time we have associated with the British ... The less I have to deal with the British, the better."

Smith hinted to the black leaders that the Western powers secretly approved, even if they couldn't say so openly, of his approach. "I have information to the fact," he said, "that if we were to arrive at a genuine settlement, there will be no objection by the U.K., U.S.A., Western European countries, as well as the U.N."

These countries, Smith claimed, "are reluctant to make public pronouncements about what they would do for fear of public opinion." He explained that the Western countries "are afraid to come up against the view of the Front Line states."

Smith demanded that the whites should have the right to elect one-third of the Parliament, even though they make up only a tiny percentage of the population, in order to safeguard the rights of the white minority.

"We do not accept direct election of white representatives by whites only," snapped Jerimiah S. Chirau, chief of the Zinbabwe United People's Organization (ZUPO).

Smith shot back: "If white representatives are to be chosen by common roll, the blacks can elect puppets. We want to keep white confidence."

The Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, president of the African National Council, broke in: "If we have one nation, a sovereign state with a racial blocking group, this group will play a negative role in what the majority may desire. We can't sell such a settlement."

But Smith wouldn't budge. The white one-third, he insisted, "will provide the necessary experience in government to give a gradual smooth change." Then with a trace of condescension, he added: "If we start with a whole group of people without experience, we will have a bankrupt country and, in turn, have no independence."

Responded Sithole, "Even our participation in the internal talks is being criticized. There are people who think that we need our heads examined."

But in the end, a compromise was accepted. The black leaders agreed to grant the whites 28 of the 100 seats in the new Parliament.

The guerrillas, of course, would be left out in the cold. This is a solution that the United States is now trying to broaden — "cautiously," as Carter told his Cabinet.

WILDLIFE WOES — Close to one billion dollars have been funneled into the states under the Wildlife Restoration Act since 1938 to preserve the natural habitat and the animals that live in it. But a study by the Committee for Humane Legislation contends that most of the money has been spent to benefit the hunters rather than the environment.

Delegates from around the world are now meeting in Geneva to decide how to divide this undersea treasure trove. The United States is represented at this Law of the Sea conference by ex-Attorney General Elliot Richardson. He badly needed legislation from Congress so he could proceed. But at the last minute, the Administration submitted a long list of new amendments to the proposed legislation. This threw a monkey wrench into the delicate, backstage negotiations over the bill. The resulting delay, say our sources, can only be blamed upon the Administration's ineptness.

Sheepishly, the commission withdrew the $60,000 commercials and is now spending the taxpayers' money to produce new warnings.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reprimand prepared against Texas GOP chairman

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Republican national chairman William Brock, serving notice he will not tolerate sanctions imposed by rightwing Republicans against ideologically impure party leaders, is preparing a symbolic reprimand against Texas Republican chairman Ray Barnhart aimed at state party purse strings.

Barnhart boycotted the "Republican jubilee" dinner in Houston April 6 because Sen. Howard Baker, the Senate minority leader, was the main speaker. Furious at Baker's support of the Panama Canal treaty, Barnhart went instead to the party's dinner in Dallas the same night (addressed by Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, a leading conservative.

The reprimand of Barnhart is being worked out privately by Brock and national finance director Theodore Welch. They intend to cut Barnhart out of control over some $300,000 in campaign funds raised at the Houston dinner. Those funds are divided 50-50 between state and national parties.

If as in most other states the Texas state party itself controlled use of the state's half of the $300,000, Brock might have given the Houston dinner committee sole power to allocate the money — cutting off Barnhart entirely. But in this case, the legal instrument for handling the money is a special candidates committee (including Barnhart) that cannot be excluded. So, control of the state's portion will be divided between this committee and the Houston dinner committee (which does not include Barnhart).

Evans Novak

Barnhart's decision to go public against Baker's appearance at Houston angered all kinds of Texas Republicans, not just moderates. "The Reaganites and everyone else in the Texas party say, off the record, that Barnhart was just plain stupid to air his grievance against Baker in the press and then boycott the Houston dinner," one Republican insider told us.

Many Republican elected officials and 1978 candidates are pleased by the decision to make an example of Barnhart. For a dwindling party plagued by ideological differences, disciplining Barnhart serves notice that efforts of one wing of the party to impose sanctions against another is a luxury Republicans cannot afford.

SOVIET NEUTRON 'NYET'

Within minutes of President Carter's decision not to produce the neutron "bomb" at this time, a high official in the Soviet embassy here was ridiculing any chance Moscow would reciprocate by stopping deployment of the dread SS-20 mobile ballistic missile.

The SS-20, based in western Russia and targeted on Western Europe, has been picked by the administration as just the ticket for a Soviet response to Mr. Carter's kindness on the neutron warhead.

When we asked the Soviet official's reaction over Mr. Carter's surprising decision, he said he was delighted. Would the Soviets respond in kind? Certainly, he said: "We, too, will forgo the neutron bomb if the decision of your President really means the bomb will not be produced."

But the Kremlin's military plans do not even contemplate the neutron warhead, a defensive weapon, with little effensive capability.

When we pointed that out to the Soviet official and asked whether ceasing deployment of the SS-20 would not be a fair exchange for the neutron warhead, he ridiculed the idea. "The SS20 has nothing to do with the neutron," he said. That statement should surprise nobody except those who close their eyes to Moscow's drive for military supremacy.

HUMAN RIGHTS DOUBLE STANDARD

The flagrant double standard on human rights prevailing in Congress moved Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois last week to shame his colleagues with an "anti-hypocrisy" amendment — to no avail.

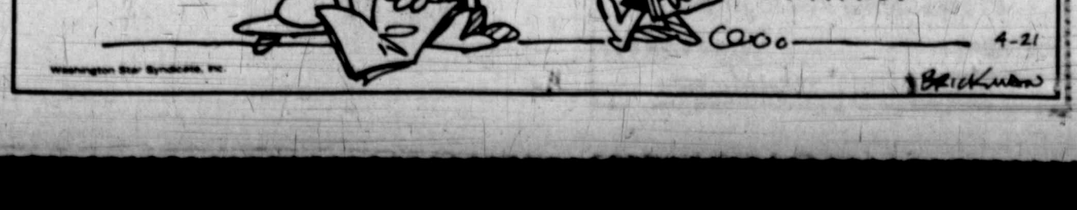

Hyde, a conservative Republican, was irritated that a House Banking subcommittee was about to adopt an amendmemt barring future Export-Import Bank loans to South Africa because of human rights violations, while ignoring repression elsewhere. To heighten the irony, another pending amendment would permit loans to Communist China, even though Peking scarcely sets a model for human rights.

Hyde's question: why single out South Africa? So, he offered an amendment barring aid to all countries listed as less than free by Freedom House. That covers 74 countries, running from Afghanistan to Zaire, and includes South Africa and Red China.

The "anti-hypocrisy" amendment did not faze the subcommittee. Hyde's was the only vote for his amendment. The anti-South African amendment then carried 10-to-5, followed by an 11-to-4 vote in favor of the Chinese amendment.

A footnote: While guilty sometimes of a human rights double standard itself, the Carter administration supports neither the South African nor Chinese amendments; they look too much like a congressional power grab for the State Department's liking.

Search slated today for victims of blasts

By TERRY LEONARD

CLEBURNE (AP) — Authorities face the grisly task today of searching for remains of four persons killed when a series of explosions leveled a complex of three small buildings at a munitions plant here Thursday afternoon.

No other persons were killed or seriously injured, said Don Beeson, Johnson County medical investigator, and Don Samanie, vice president of GOEX Inc., owner of the plant.

It was the second time in less than five years that employees were killed in blasts at the GOEX plant. Four persons died and 29 were injured in a July 10, 1973, explosion.

Firemen said investigators may never know the cause of the blasts that leveled the one story complex where workers washed and screened RDX, an explosive powder used in artillery shells and commercial explosives.

Samanie said the victims were Rosemary Sauble, 37, of Burleson and Billy Clanton, 26, Elwin Brende, 62, and Bobby Trotta, 19, all of Cleburne.

"All they have over there is a big hole," said Johnson County Sheriff Stuart Huffman.

Witnesses said the force of the explosion sheared foilage from nearby trees, shattered windows and buckled garage doors of houses 200 yards away. Mrs. Vernon Weis, who lives more than 300 yards from the center of the blasts, said her house was jarred from its foundation.

The remains of the victims were scattered as far as 400 yards away, authorities said.

Fireman said the explosions sent a column of smoke billowing hundreds of feet into the air. The smoke could be seen in Fort Worth, more than 20 miles north of here.

Authorities, combing the 430-acre site, called off the search for remains of the victims at dark Thursday. Samanie said the search would resume this morning.

Beeson and Dr. Arthur Raines, Johnson County medical examiner, have the grim job of identifying the bodies from collected remains.

Witnesses said there were three explosions, a big one followed by two smaller ones. However, Samanie and Cleburne Fire Chief Red McVicker said there were two blasts.

Mrs. Weis said she was in a bedroom and protected by a wall of her stone house when the first blast shattered her windows, twisted her house on its foundation and damaged the roof. She said the force of the explosion threw her onto the bed.

W. D. Dogget witnessed the 1973 blast at the GOEX plant and had just returned to his nearby home when the plant exploded again Thursday. He said the concussion this time was twice as bad as the 1973 explsion.

Mrs. Billie Glass, a worker in the leveled powder room, said she owes her life to her son's illness. She left the RDX section of the plant that morning after school officials said her young son was running a high fever.

Another worker, Patricia Layton, quit two days before the 1973 explosion, but went back to work at the plant eight months ago. She would have also been in the blast area if she had not taken her son to baseball practice less than an hour before Thursday's explosions.

10 paintings stolen from Italian gallery

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Thieves climbed down through a skylight on a rope ladder and stole the Rubens masterpiece "The Three Graces" and nine other Flemish works from the famed Pitti Palace overnight, police reported today.

Gallery officials estimated the value of the stolen paintings at more than $1 million.

It was one of the most sensational of a wave of thefts that have plagued Italy's public and private art collections in recent years. But police said it was the first theft ever at the Pitti.

The theft was discovered when custodians opened the gallery this morning, police said. Anti-burglar equipment is in the process of being installed in the gallery's Palatine wing, where the theft occurred.

A police officer said guards were on duty, "but they have to look after many galleries inside the Pitti Palace and the thieves had from two to three hours to act between one inspection and the another."

The thieves left untouched several priceless works by Raphael and two paintings by Titian on exhibit in nearby halls. The stolen paintings were all exhibited in the Corridoio delle Colonne.

The Pitti Palace, in downtown Florence, is visited each year by hundreds of thousands of tourists from all over the world. It and Florence's other major gallery, the Uffizi, house some of the richest art collections in the world.

The Rubens' work, acquired in 1650 by Florentine Cardinal Leopoldo de Medici, was the most valuable among the paintings stolen.

It was the fourth time this month the European art world has been hit by calamity.

Nursing program switching schools

AUSTIN—The Odessa College licensed vocational nursing program at Big Bend Memorial Hospital in Alpine will be taken over by Sul Ross State University under a plan approved Thursday by the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

The board said Sul Ross could take over the Alpine LVN program — a one-year, non-degree certificate course — with the understanding that the board's approval does not include authorization for Sul Ross to enter into other allied health or health care administration programs.

Additionally, the board stressed that no similar program will be considered for any other four-year college unless similar unusual circumstances of geographic isolation and local need can be demonstrated.

West Bank settlements proceed

By H.D.S. GREENWAY
The Washington Post

JERUSALEM — The earthmovers are at work on the occupied West Bank again, preparing ground for new Jewish settlers, and as usual the diplomatic repercussions are expected to make more noise than the cacophony of the diesel engines.

The area being cleared for prefabricated civilian housing is near Nebi Salah, about nine miles northwest of Ramallah on the road to Tel Aviv.

Because of the diplomatic furor, it is likely that settlement activity in the occupied territories generally will be curtailed, although such a policy probably will not be announced by the government. It is also just as likely that projects that were authorized six months ago — such as Nebi Salah — will go forward without interruption.

The United States has firmly maintained that all Israeli settlements in the occupied territories are illegal and an obstacle to peace. The Israeli government takes the position that Jews should be allowed to settle anywhere in the ancient biblical land of Israel, most notably in Judea and Samaria, the biblical names for the West Bank.

Local Arabs have complained bitterly that the land being cleared belongs to them, and reportedly they have produced documents showing they have paid taxes on the land to Jordan. The Israelis, however, claim the land was always state-owned.

The Nebi Salah settlement cannot be considered a new venture, since it is one of six sites that the Israeli government approved last September as part of a compromise with the Gush Emunim (faith bloc), the nationalistic organization dedicated to settling the West Bank territory captured from Jordan in 1967. Gush Emunim wanted 12 new settlements, and they were allowed to establish six. Settlers have been living in an old British police station next to the site now being prepared on land under the control of the Israel military.

The Nebi Salah settlement was among those which Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan discussed with President Carter in September, when Dayan reportedly assured Carter that the settlements would be restricted to Israeli military installations for the time being. There was some disagreement afterward whether Dayan had said this policy would remain in effect until the end of the year, or for one year.

Although the Israeli government refused to halt settlements on the West Bank, the Israeli Cabinet did decide in February not to begin any new settlements in the Sinai, which by then Israel had offered to return to Egyptian sovereignty in exchange for a peace treaty. The government said, however, that it would continue to beef up existing Sinai settlements. A recent Israeli television report said that 270 more families would be moving into the northern Sinai in the summer. If this report is borne out, it will undoubtedly complicate relations between the United States and Israel.

Construction the Nebi Salah site was about to begin early last month when Defense Minister Ezer Weizman was in the United States and Prime Minister Menachem Begin was about to leave Israel for his talks with Carter. In a now famous telephone call to Begin, Weizman insisted that no land clearing operations start while he was in America. Weizman later denied that he threatened to resign, but he did admit that he "put his foot down quite hard."

But Weizman's objection was connected more to the fact that he was in the middle of delicate talks with the United States, rather than any objection to the Nebi Salah settlement, which had already been approved by the government. Last week, therefore, Weizman lifted the temporary ban and land clearing began.

In spite of the work on the Nebi Salam project, there is some evidence to suggest that Israel may be restricting its settlement policy in occupied territories. There has been a long-standing dispute between Weizman, who believes that settlement activity should be curtailed during negotiations with the Egyptians, and Argicultural Minister Ariel Sharon, who believes that the occupied territories should be colonized as quickly as possible.

According to the authoritittive newspaper Haaretz, the government recently decided to refer all decisions concerning new settlements — including the date of settling, the sites and the expansion of existing settlements — to the Ministerial Defense Committee. Previously, the establishment of new settlements has been decided by the Cabinet, but other questions relating to settlements were within the purview of Sharon's Settlement Committee.

The paper quotes a "senior government source" as saying "this is tantamount to a reduction in the powers of Ariel Sharon in the matter of settlements."

The prime minister's office promptly issued a statement saying there was "no foundation" to the report that Sharon's authority over settlements had been curbed. But, when asked, officials took pains not to deny the main thrust of the story that the Ministerial Defense Committee had been given added authority.

Given that the Ministerial Defense Committee has representatives from all coalition factions, it is likely that the net effect will be to curb settlement activity and that Sharon has, in fact, lost ground.

Carter ready to deal for tax cut package

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is indicating he will do some horse trading after hearing that his $24 billion tax cut plan stands no chance of passing Congress.

At a White House meeting Thursday, key members of the House Ways and Means Committe gave Carter that assessment of congressional sentiment — an attitude that has become increasingly evident.

The committee chairman and two members of the tax-writing panel left the session with the impression, they said, that the president is ready to talk with advisers and key congressmen about a negotiated reduction.

Press secretary Jody Powell said, nevertheless, the administration sees no reason to alter its plan and that Congress will be blamed if the economy suffers from lack of a tax cut.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the committee chairman, told reporters after the meeting that, "The president can now go back and talk to his advisers....Obviousy the bill is going to be a lot different from what he recommended and there has to be some determination of what to do."

Ullman said he would try to hold the net tax cut to $15 billion.

Later, he met again with Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who sat in on the original White House session and who apparently has been assigned to work with Congress on the tax issue.

Ullman said he and Mondale had made progress on a "possible alternative."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., another Ways and Means member invited to the White House session, said he expects Carter to meet with more committee members and "look for a package that can be salvaged."

"The bill is in big trouble," Rostenkowski said.

The committee recessed its meeting until Monday after postponing consideration of a number of Carter recommendations.

The president's $24 billion proposal for reductions was to be partly offset by increases totaling nearly $9 billion. In preliminary decisions going against Carter's recommendations, the committee has eliminated the total increase package plus $1 billion.

Simple arithmetic, should the tax increase portion of the package remain canceled, indicates that the best Carter could hope for in reductions would be about $14 billion.

But both sides are aware that all decisions so far are only tentative and might change significantly before a deal is struck.

Now pending before the committee are motions to ease capital gains taxation rather than tighten it as Carter would like. There also is a move to drop the whole notion of additional tax cuts, while merely keeping in effect reductions of $9 billion enacted two years ago but scheduled to expire.

While Ullman, Rostenkowski and Rep. Joe D. Waggonner, D-La., were giving Carter the bad news, Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., the speaker of the House, said he will push for the president's plan.

"I would have to predict we would have to go with the tax cut," he told reporters. "We'll have to sit down and have a talk."

Botulism cause probably lost

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP)—Health officials may never be able to isolate the exact cause of the botulism outbreak in Clovis that put 33 persons in the hospital, said New Mexico's chief medical officer.

A search of the Clovis dump was abandoned Thursday after it failed to turn up certain food cans from a restaurant where the victims ate.

"We gave it our best shot and couldn't come up with anything," said Jon Thompson, district manager of the Health and Environment Department's enrivonmental improvement division.

The state's top medical official, Dr. Jonathan Mann, had said earlier if the cans were not found, "it may not be possible to completely determine the cause of this outbreak."

The cans, containing food which Mann would not identify, were used at a meal at which five persons became ill, he said.

Mann was back in Santa Fe today saying the botulism had run its course.

"The epidemic in Clovis appears to be over," he said.

Mann said most of the 33 botulism victims are still in the hospital, but added, "There is encouraging news of stabilization in most cases and full recovery." But he said full recovery for most of the victims may take weeks.

The 33 persons stricken with the botulism were among 800 who ate at the Colonial Park Country Club between April 9 and April 13. Mann said the re-opening of the restaurant would be discussed "in the near future."

Troopers sent into strike area after miner killed

STEARNS, Ky. (AP) — Extra state troopers were ordered to the strike-bound Justus coal mine today after a miner was shot to death when he and a companion were ambushed on the way home from work. He was the second miner to be shot in four days.

Police said Donald Buddy Watson of Stearns was dead Thursday when they arrived at the ambush site about eight miles from the mine, which has been racked by violence during a 21-month-long labor dispute. Watson was one of about 30 miners who had returned to work at the Stearns Mining Co.'s mine near this southeastern Kentucky town.

About 150 miners, seeking recognition of the United Mine Workers union as their bargaining agent, have been on strike at the mine since July 1976.

Teacher strike averted

CLEVELAND (AP) — An $18 million shot in the arm from the state averted a strike by city teachers threatened for today, but a state senator has gone to court in an effort to retrieve the funds.

Cleveland's financially teetering public school system paid its 11,000 employees on Thursday for the first time in a month

Suit toughens college funding

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas college coordinating board Thursday got a taste of the possible impact of a suit challenging the property tax used to finance state college construction.

At issue was whether to approve proposed construction that would be financed with the tax or wait until the courts decide a suit by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange.

Peveto sued in state district court here April 5, alleging the tax was not levied equitably from county-to-county.

The board voted to approve construction of a $5.5 million stadium at the University of Texas at Arlington, but only after school officials said other money is available if the property tax can't be used.

UT-Arlington and 16 other colleges and universities share the proceeds from the 10 cents per $100 tax according to their enrollment.

"This institution is at the end of the line on resources available," Dr. Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education, said in opposing Arlington's request.

"By choosing to spend the last of its sources of funds — if Peveto is to prevail — to finance the stadium and not academic facilities," Ashworth continued, "this institution would not have funds available to build nursing and other academic structures."

UT-Arlington President Wendell Nedderman said the school lacks facilities for intramural sports and relies on a high school stadium for conference sports.

"For 19 years, we've given top priority to office and classroom space," Nedderman pleaded. "When are we going to be a balanced university?"

Peveto's suit will tie up the funds during a long court battle, board member Wayne Thomas of Hereford predicted.

"We are out in left field without the advice, counsel or recommendation of the institution's governing board on what priority they would give this project if no ad valorem taxes might be available," Thomas said.

A $9.4 million nursing school facility has the top priority, answered President E.D. Walker of the University of Texas System.

"But there are not sufficient funds now without the ad valorem tax to construct the nursing school," Walker said. "Even if we did not build the stadium, we could not begin the nursing school."

The board approved the stadium, with most members agreeing with Marshall Formby of Plainview that projects should be considered on their merits instead of "trying to outguess what the lawyers are going to do."

Space satellites newest in anti-crime devices

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

U.S. narcotics and immigration officials are considering the use of space satellites to help choke off the rising flow of smuggled drugs and illegal aliens slipping across remote stretches of the nation's international borders.

In field tests conducted for six weeks, General Electric communications experts have demonstrated that a geostationary satellite, orbiting the Earth at 23,200 miles over a fixed spot, could keep crime fighters in constant mobile radio contact with a base station, even from isolated points thousands of miles apart.

Until now, conventional mobile radio communications have been limited to line-of-sight transmissions between sender and receiver — a distance of usually no more than 30 miles. If the terrain is mountainous, as it is along the 1,600-mile U.S.-Mexican border, radio messages may never reach their destination.

A geostationary satellite however, stays fixed in the sky, appearing to be stationary because it travels at the same speed as Earth's rotation. It is in line-of-sight constantly with about 43 percent of the Earth's surface. Hence, even if the satellite is thousands of miles away, it can pick up the relatively weak signal from a federal agent's mobile radio transmitter, amplify the sound and relay it back to Earth at another point.

Using a satellite relay station, an agent could reach a colleague a few miles away on the other side of a mountain or his central office on the other side of a mountain or his central office on the other side of the continent.

The satellite field tests were conducted under contract to the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) and the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) by the GE Research and Development Center, Schenectady, N.Y.

A significant phase of the tests was the ability of a base station, through satellites and an agent's radio transmitter, to pinpoint the roving agent's vehicle to within 600 feet.

The base station used two satellites and a technique called tone-code ranging to fix the car's location.

DEA and INS officials say this unique tracking feature would aid an agent's headquarters in helping him to maneuver through roadless terrain or to identify the location of the nearest backup vehicle. And, they add, it would provide an extra safety margin by helping to pin down the location of an agent in trouble.

Presently, DEA and INS have to install unmanned automatic radio repeater stations on mountaintops to widen the communications range of mobile radios. But lack of electric power often prevents the use of repeater stations in remote regions where smuggling activities are most likely to occur.

DEA's communications network, involving 2,200 vehicles, presently covers only about 7 percent of the U.S. land area. For more effective control of drug smuggling the agency must cover many times this area, in the light of modern-day sophistication and mobility of drug traffickers.

Filling the gap by conventional means would mean the costly installation of several thousand additional repeater stations, each serviced by a long-distance phone line, DEA officials point out.

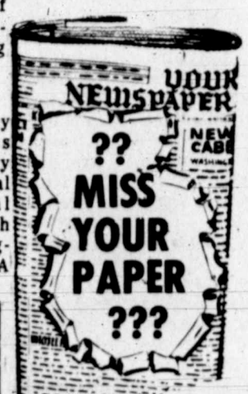

By contrast, the satellite approach would let federal agencies maintain continuous radio contact with their vehicles and agents anywhere in the country at a fraction of the cost for a widened conventional network, they add.

To test their system, GE researchers ran a series of communications and position-fixing tests from a variety of locations. One test included satellite-bounced radio messages from the streets of Washington, D.C., to the lonely, rugged stretches of the U.S.-Mexican border.

The tests used two NASA experimental communications satellites, the ATS-3 hovering over the mouth of the Amazon River, and the ATS-1, poised over the equator south of Hawaii, along with a station wagon equipped with a special antenna and radio transmitter-receiver.

Whale hunt gives journalist taste of Eskimos' life

By ROBERT WELLER

ON THE BERING SEA (AP) — Only walrus hide a quarter-inch thick separates the whaling crew from the icy Bering Sea. At times you can see the water through the skin of the boat.

Leonard Apangalook, the captain, works the sails skillfully to search in silence for the bowhead whale.

Preston Apangalook — the crew is made up of the four Apangalook brothers — is ready to toss the harpoon if a whale draws near.

Paul stands lookout. The other brother, Mike, helps Leonard monitor CB radio traffic in Eskimo dialect on whale sightings.

On a recent trip, I sat in the middle of the boat, ducking the boom each time the sail swung round. Despite several layers of expensive winter clothing, the Arctic cold and cramped conditions made it so miserable I felt I might never be warm again.

The Apangalooks didn't seem to notice the cold, though. And there is an unspoken rule on the whaling boats, especially for guests, that you never ask to go back just because you are cold.

At my side was what looked like a giant balloon made of skin from a spotted seal. All but the seal's head was used, even its feet. The device was attached to a harpoon and meant to float atop the surface and help track the whale underwater after it was hit.

Talk was kept to a minimum aboard the 29-foot boat; the bowhead has sensitive hearing. The quiet, broken occasionally by the sound of ice sliding under the hull, emphasized the sense of purpose.

A controversial quota system, imposed by authorities in fear the bowhead would become extinct, increased the tension. Each Eskimo village, like the Apangalook's town of Gambell, is entitled to kill one whale or wound two, whichever comes first.

Many families will go hungry in Gambell if the hunters wound two whales before they succeed in killing one.

For hours we circled off St. Lawrence Island, less than 30 miles from Siberia. About 20 other crews from Gambell were with us, creating a jagged line across the few areas of open water.

With the white sails and white hulls, it could have been opening day at the yacht club except for the huge ice floes reflecting the sun with blinding intensity. Soon our eyes were locked in a squint.

We saw walrus and seal, and one crew reported two polar bears. But this was a whale hunt! When we spotted several whales at a distance, the Apangalooks got "whale shivers." I felt just plain shivers.

After about six hours without getting closer than several hundred feet from our quarry, it was time for a break. Preston tied the boat up to a pole he'd stabbed into the ice. Suddenly Leonard gestured frantically — a whale was barely 100 feet away.

First we saw the head, almost the same color as the water, moving smoothly toward us. Then the bowhead's massive back broke the surface as it headed straight for us.

"Raise the sail," Leonard commanded.

The scrambling effort to dislodge the light vessel from the ice and raise the sail apparently spooked the bowhead. Barely 10 feet away it dove under us and headed beneath the ice. They said it was a small whale, but it looked big enough to toss us into the drink.

It had seemed close enough for a toss of the harpoon, laden with a gunpowder bomb that explodes if a solid hit is made. But Preston explained that it is the custom to wait until the whale is right next to a boat — assuring a kill.

But that also increases the danger. Bowheads can capsize skin boats.

Had Preston hit the whale, we were to throw out the two floats hooked to the harpoon. The harpoon is not connected to the boat itself because even a small bowhead could easily drag a skin boat down. The floats help the whalers find the mortally wounded whale when it returns to the surface and finish it off.

Leonard, following tradition, took the blame for the lost whale. "We should have just let the boat drift and not tried to raise the sail."

In the excitement, something had changed. "That warmed you up, didn't it?" said Paul. It was true. I found myself looking out intently, no longer attempting to turn my face from the wind.

Later there was talk of how they would explain this to their 66-year-old father, John, one of Alaska's most successful whale hunters. He had flown to Nome to see a doctor a day before the hunt.

Hours later, as darkness began to set in, the CB talk was of who would lower sail first and head home. No one wanted to leave first.

When it happened, it seemed that all the sails dropped at once. Mike turned on the motor, unused during the silent hunt. "When we go home, we go home," said Paul.

He explained that crews never know what to expect as they quit the hunt. "We could end up spending the night on the ice," he said.

The wind was nearly gone as we headed home across the now-placid water, but nothing is easy in the Eskimo world. Several times we got stuck in thin ice and had to rock the boat violently to get through.

But the first full day of hunting by Gambell crews was not a total loss. Whalers from Savoonga, on the same island as Gambell, had gotten a whale more than 40 feet long. Some Gambell hunters traveled more than three hours roundtrip by snow machine to get their share.

The two villages, each with about 400 residents, share their catch. A 40-foot whale will provide about 40 tons of rich red meat. The meat includes muktuk, the favorite Eskimo dish, which is the skin and layer of fat directly under the skin.

Stampede deadline approaches

Women registered in the Cub Scout movement of the Buffalo Trail Council can participate in a three-day holiday, May 5 through 7, at the Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains, according to an announcement from the council.

Reservations and a $10 fee should be sent to Buffalo Trail Council, BGS, Box 1508, Midland, Texas 79701, by Thursday. Check-in time is 4 p.m. May 5 and check-out time is 3 p.m. May 7.

Some of the activities planned for this "Buffalo Gal Stampede" include skits, games, songs, crafts, a history of the ranch by Wayne McBee and "plenty of good food" cooked by Mrs. McBee. There will also be an optional tour of the ranch. The announcement stressed there will be "no dishwashing, no cooking and no children."

Those who wish to participate are asked to bring a bed roll or blankets, personal items, sturdy shoes or tennis shoes and a brown bag supper for Friday evening.

The "Buffalo Gal Stampede" is for women only of all six districts (17 counties) of BuffaloTrail Council. The $10 fee includes five meals, two cracker barrels, insurance and supplies.

Grand jury returns indictments

A Midland grand jury Thursday returned a murder indictment against 20-year-old Delma Carrasco Mancha in the April 9 stabbing death of Patsy Garcia Martinez.

Miss Garcia, 19, died in Midland Memorial Hospital of stab wounds shortly after an incident in Hogan Park.

Miss Mancha resides in the 1100 block of East Parker Street.

The grand jury also returned 93 other indictments after a two-day session which ended Thursday. Among the indictments were 18 on delivery of narcotics charges, three on robbery charges, seven on forgery charges, five on aggravated assault charges and 15 on charges of theft over $200.

Also included were 12 burglary indictments, five aggravated robbery indictments and one criminal mischief indictment. Indictments also were returned on six subsequent driving while intoxicated charges, one charge of unlawfully carrying a weapon, seven unauthorized use of a vehicle charges, one charge of indecency with a child and 12 possession of narcotics charges.

Houston police official loses job

HOUSTON (AP) — Assistant Police Chief Carrol M. Lynn, charged with obstruction of justice after being arrested by federal authorities April 10, has been fired.

Police Chief Harry Caldwell said Thursday he offered Lynn an opportunity to resign but Lynn "opted not to take it."

Lynn, 45, who had been assistant chief since Dec. 3, 1976, also is a former police chief and the highest ranking Houston police chief ever accused in federal court.

Assistant City Attorney Al Levine said he made Caldwell's offer to Lynn to accept the former chief's resignation. Levine described the offer as "a matter of courtesy."

Lynn has been free on $50,000 bond since his arraignment before U.S. Magistrate Lingo Platter following an investigation by the FBI.

Conviction of the charge carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

In his announcement that Lynn had been served papers of indefinite suspension, the same as being fired, Caldwell said the reason for the firing "is based on the facts in the affidavit filed before the U.S. magistrate in the recent case resulting in his arrest."

In the affidavit filed by the FBI, Lynn was accused of telling former Houston businessman James Vincent Holden that he could have certain charges against Holden dismissed for a fee of $45,000.

The FBI report said Holden made two payments to Lynn, totaling $26,000, but that $25,000 has been recovered.

Al James, director of the Civil Service Commission, said that Lynn, who served with the police department 23 years, will be eligible to receive a pension totaling 36 percent of his base annual pay of $40,239 or some $1,200 a month.

He said Lynn will be eligible to receive his pension payments event if convicted and sentenced to prison on the obstruction of justice charge.

Southwest seeks wider service

AUSTIN—Southwest Airlines has filed an application with the Texas Aeronautics Commission to include service to Amarillo and Beaumont-Port Arthur with Dallas as the connecting point to these cities from other towns the airline serves. MidlandRegional Air Terminal would have flights to these cities through Dallas, if the application receives approval.

The airline is asking to provide non-stop, through and-or connecting service between Amarillo and Dallas; Austin, Houston, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Harlingen and Beaumont-Port Arthur and between Beaumont-Port Arthur and Dallas, Lubbock, Midland-Odessa and El Paso.

The first non-stop operations will be between Amarillo-Dallas and Beaumont-Port Arthur-Dallas.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

'Bunion bump' won't down you

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've had a large bunion for ages. People tell me they now have a perfectly good operation for removing bunions. Do you think it would be safe? Would I have to be laid up for very long?—Serena K.

Dear Serena: Surgery can be helpful in some instances. And it does not mean that you have to be off your feet for a long time. In Current Podiatry, Dr. Milton D. Roven of New York describes a surgical technique that keeps the patient out of bed—the big toe is straightened without the usual wiring. Dr. Roven, past president of the Academy of Podiatry and an authority on what is called ambulatoryh (or walk-around) surgey, says there is very little discomfort of disability. The "bunion bump" can also be reduced without putting the patient to bed.

Of course, only a doctor who has examined you condition can say just what the proper treatment is. If you have not done so already, ask your doctor to refer you to a good foot doctor or podiatrist. Foot health is tremendously important to your general well being, and if you have any persistent foot problem, it is best to have a foot specialist take a look at it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there any clear-cut way of telling if someone is an alcoholic?—Alex G.

Dear Alex: When drinking becomes so excessive and compulsive that it impairs a person's health or his ability to function well at his job and in his social and private life, I would call him an alcoholic. Dependence is an important criterion—drink becomes something the alcoholic needs in order to get through the day and the evening.

There are cases when it's difficult to decide if a person is an alcoholic or a "problem drinker." A recent study done at Tufts University may help in diagnosing these cases. Researchers there found they could correctly identify three out of four alcoholics simply on the basis of other diseases or health problems they had.

Anniversary System #4!

Our $599 system consists of a Marantz 2216B AM/FM receiver, two Yamaha NS-5 speakers, and a B.I.C. 940 belt-drive turntable equipped with a Shure M91ED cartridge.

Step-Up To The Accurate Sound Of Yamaha Natural Sound Loudspeakers!

Here's one of our best sounding systems, built around Yamaha NS-5 speakers. Compare this system's honesty and clarity with others you've heard costing up to hundreds of dollars more! You'll agree that the best stereo values are at Electronic Service Center!

Marantz 2216B AM/FM Receiver
Since the earliest days of stereo, Marantz has been one of the industry leaders. The Marantz reputation was built on legendary models like the Model 7 preamplifier, the Model 9 amplifiers, and the famed Model 10B tuner. Marantz excellence continues through to today with one of the most complete lines of receivers available. Hear it driving NS-5's in our store!

Yamaha NS-5 Speakers
Yamaha NS-5's come from the world's largest manufacturer of musical instruments. Yamaha has been building pianos and string instruments for over 90 years! Little wonder that the NS-5's are widely praised for their accuracy. They're built around a ten-inch acoustic suspension woofer, and a one-inch soft dome tweeter.

B.I.C. 940 Turntable
The B.I.C. 940 bridges the gap between single play precision and the convenience of multiple play. The 940's belt drive isolates the turntable platter from the motor for rumble-free silence. The tonearm is a special low-mass design, equipped with a Shure M91ED cartridge. A special feature of the B.I.C. 940 is the ability to repeat a favorite record up to six times.

Soviet dictatorship loses to language

By KEVIN KLOSE
(c) The Washington Post

MOSCOW — Tampering with the status of a proud people's language — such as that spoken in Soviet Georgia — can sometimes prove too much even for a powerful central authority like the Kremlin.

The Soviet leadership discovered this anew last week when its plans to eliminate Georgian as the official language of the multi-national republican ran into stiff and potentially dangerous opposition. In an unusual reversal, the authorities backed down and restored the designation of Georgian as the republic's official language in its new constitution.

The same thing happened in Soviet Armenia, where Armenian was recently restored to that republic's new constitution in the face of similar protests.

It is no accident that the Georgians and Armenians have made an issue of their languages: as those proud peoples of the Caucasus mountains see it their culture and languages were already highly developed where the Russians, who now run things, were still living in neolithic simplicity, their tribal subsistence darkened further by the absence of a written language.

This sense of cultural superiority and identity, as well as an accompanying worry over ethnic supression, rings forth in the Georgians' own views on the subject of their language.

"More than once (the Georgian language) has faced danger of complete eradication, of being ousted by the languages of great empires," asserts "the Georgian Language," a book published in 1969 by Tbilisi University in the Georgian capital.

"The Georgian people have for centuries preserved their heritage in fierce battles against enemies, they have preserved it intact to our day through vicissitudes of fortune, as the most cherished symbol of their national individuality," S.V. Dzidziguri wrote in that book.

The book asserts the antiquity of the written Georgian language, a unique and appealing script of generous loops and curls that has no similarity to the Cyrillic writing of the Russian language. The book's tone makes clear why the philology department of the university was a strong point of anger for the protests that built through recent weeks and culminated in the march through Tbilisi last Friday.

As hundreds and perhaps thousands of students gathered on the steps of the government center, Georgian Communist Party chief Eduard A. Shevardnadze appeared and reportedly shouted in his native Georgian, "My children, my children, what are you doing?"

"We are not your children!" the demonstrators are said to have shouted back.

Whatever their ire, the notion of a large public demonstration to protest against an official government policy is virtually unheard of in the Soviet Union. No such protest ever occurred in the time of the dictatorship of Josef Stalin and his secret police boss, Lavrenti Beria, both Georgians.

Senegal leader sworn

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

DAKAR, Senegal — President Leopold Senghor was sworn into office this month for his third seven-year term after handily defeating his opponent — to the surprise of no one.

But what did make Africa take note was the fact that Senghor, 71, had had an opponent at all.

After more than a decade of one-party rule, headed by one patriarchal presidential figure, this West African nation was reverting, however cautiously, to a multiparty democratic system.

Senghor, a poet-philosopher and one of Africa's most durable and respected leaders, centralized power in the presidency and absorbed the operation into his middle-of-the-road United Socialist Party after an unsuccessful coup attempt in 1962.

Although technically there never was any legal barrier to opposition parties in Senegal, a propserous, pro-Western country whose economy is based on agriculture, the authority of Senghor and his party was unquestioned. Four years ago he began building the framework for a return to multiparty parliamentary democracy. It was a move with few parallels in post-independence Africa and many observers see it as a sort of test case for Africa. What these observers now want to know is precisely how much freedom the opposition really will be allowed.

At his swearing-in ceremony, Senghor said his government will "remain courteous, patient and parliamen-t(ary)" toward the opposition. But at the same time, without spelling out details, he added that any case of "criminal activity, treason or violence would be dealt with unmercifully."

The Feb. 26 election was conducted without incident in an atmosphere of almost complete freedom of the press. Senghor took 82 percent of the vote. The conservative Senegalese Democratic Party won 17 percent of the vote.

Chunking war smoke clogs sky

Agence France Presse

CHUNKING — Chunking, the wartime capital of Nationalist China in the inland province of Szechwan, has become a major industrial city where thousands of factory chimneys pour dense black smoke into the spring sky.

Chungking's population is 2 million (6 million with its suburbs). The city's old quarters were mostly flattened by heavy Japanese bombing raids from 1938 to 1941.

But some of old China's atmosphere still remains in the river section along the Yang Tse Kiang with its dockers, its boatmen and its barge haulers. And when the visitor penetrates the narrow little streets, crowds of children follow him, and the locals all watch him from behind their windows or from the tea houses where old men, sitting in cane armchairs, play cards and dominos.

In spite of industrial progress, the city has kept much of its character. Built on a breath-catching site, on hills and a rock pierced with thousands of air-raid shelters, the city overlooks the river and resembles its past as a trading center, where opium dens, gambling houses and foreign concessions once flourished.

The cathedral, of blackened stone in the center of the city, was closed on a recent Sunday. A few workmen sat on the small square by the entrance, now covered by a corrugated iron roof. They were playing cards and said their factory was closed because it was a day for resting.

Chungking, 33 years after the end of the war, does not give a provincial impression as does the Szechwan administrative capital, Chengtu. Wood and stucco houses on pilings still remain in the port area, but everywhere else brick and cement dominate the scene.

In Chengtu, as throughout Szechwan, the perfume of old China still lingers. Few foreigners have penetrated to this remote province since the end of world War II.

Chengtu, population 1 million, pulled down its centuries-old ramparts about 15 years ago. But the old, low-roofed houses and narrow streets remain almost as they were.

Young consumers gain 'look' at comic book ads

By STEVE HURST

WASHINGTON (AP) —"Tired of bullies kicking sand in your face?" asks the ad picturing a skinny chap standing meekly next to his buxom, bikini-clad companion. "Send for our body building kit."

Or:

"Just $1.25 for sea monkeys. Cute. Easy to train. Includes a full year's supply of sea monkey food. Just add water and you have instant life." What you get are two ugly brine shrimp.

Or:

"Just 99 cents for 200 stamps to start your very own valuable collection." You get the stamps. You get another batch each month and bills for $9 or $10 dollars.

Or:

"Amaze your friends when you shake hands. This buzzer will startle them." It probably will.

Comic books are full of these come-ons and the Federal Trade Commission wants to take a closer look at just what young consumers are getting for their money.

Advertisers spend about $66 million a year to plug their wares in comics. And it's no wonder, says the commission's William Erxleben:

"Between the ages of 5 and 15 there are 40 million potential buyers. Independent figures show that 82 percent to 92 percent of all children between the ages of 7 and 11 read comic books.

"And our estimates indicate that for every $1 spent on comic book ads, there are $3 in sales. That amounts to a $200 million product industry each year," Erxleben said.

He said the commission worries especially about a child's first contact with the "free enterprise system."

"Children can become very disillusioned with the system and legitimate business should be very concerned," Erxleben said in a telephone interview.

He related a story told by a fellow worker whose daughter had saved for weeks to amass the 95 cents called for by a comic book ad. The pitch was for a machine that would turn plain paper into dollar bills.

"It arrived and the girl put the paper in, turned the crank and nothing happened. She hadn't seen the fine print about putting your own dollar in first, then the plain paper. It (the ad) admitted there was nothing magic involved," Erxleben said.

The big problem, with many of the schemes, he said, is they are run from post office boxes.

"You can chase them all over the country just to find them operating somewhere else shortly."

He said his Seattle regional office will conduct the investigation over the next 18 months and thinks it may have recommendations for the FTC that will "make sure kids are getting a fair shake."

General given asylum

NEW YORK (AP) — Pyotr Grigorenko, a former major general in the Soviet Union's Red Army and a member of the Communist Party for 50 years, has a new home.

Stripped of his Russian citizenship, Grigorenko cried when he learned this week that he had been granted asylum in the United States.

"I would like to return home," he said through an interpreter. "I left my earth and I left my people."

The 70-year-old Grigorenko came to the United States in November to undergo a prostate operation. While here, his Soviet citizenship was revoked.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev said Grigorenko lost his citizenship because of "behavior that has damaged the prestige of the Soviet Union."

The much-decorated military man was a friend of such dissidents as Andrei Sakharov, and had spent six years in psychiatric hospitals for his opposition to Soviet government policies, particularly those involving the government's treatment of the Crimean Tartars.

Maurice Kiley, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Grigorenko's status was temporary and will be reviewed in one year.

"I am very honored that I have been granted asylum here. It is a great privilege," Grigorenko said.

He, his wife Zenaida and stepson Oleh are visiting another stepson, Andrei, a draftsman in Long Island City. His wife and stepson are still Soviet citizens and are here on temporary visas.

Grigorenko said he plans to lecture on human rights, and intends to write his memoirs and a military history of World War II.

Mrs. Shive

BIG SPRING—Services for Mrs. Percy (Ruth) Shive, 82, of Coahoma, were to be at 3:30 p.m. today in Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Shive died Wednesday in a Big Spring hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was born July 21, 1895, in Milam County, and moved at the age of 16 with her parents, the William Wolfs, to Coahoma. She was married to Percy Shive on Oct. 14, 1919, in Coahoma. He died in 1958. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Coahoma.

Survivors include a son, Rex Shive of Coahoma; two brothers, Claude Wolf of Casa Grande, Ariz., and Otis Wolf of New York City; five sisters, Mrs. A. C. Hale of Coahoma, Mrs. H. L. Stamps of Big Spring, Mrs. A. A. Yale of Brownwood, Mrs. Cleve Holden of Casa Grande, Ariz., and Mrs. Bradley McQuerry of O'Fallon, Ill., three grandchildren and two great-grandchilren.

Mrs. Martinez

SWEETWATER – Mrs. Pascual Martinez Sr., 74, of Sweetwater, mother of Ester Cordova of Midland, died Thursday in a Sweetwater nursing home.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in Cate-Spencer Funeral Home. Burial will be in Sweetwater Cemetery.

Mrs. Martinez was born May 1, 1903, in Grand Falls and had lived in Sweetwater most of her life. She married Pascual Martinez Sr. Feb. 21, 1921, in Sweetwater. She was a Jehovah's Witness.

Other survivors include her husband, four sons, six daughters, two sisters, a brother, 55 grandchildren and 33 great-grandchildren.

Zula Tripp

MONAHANS—Zula Blanton Tripp, 86, of Monahans, mother of Mrs. J. C. Lyles of McCamey, died at noon Thursday in a McCamey hospital.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Wilson-Miller Funeral Home here, with burial in a Big Spring cemetery.

She was born June 21, 1891, in Hutto, and was married to Winfield Tripp Aug. 17, 1909, in Roscoe. He died in 1949. She had lived in Big Spring 20 years, and in Monahans the past 49 years.

Survivors also include three sons, two other daughters, 13 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren.

David Evans

MASON – Services for David "Wes" Evans, 81, of Kerrville and formerly of Mason were to be at 1:30 p.m. today in Mason Funeral Home with burial in Long Mountain Cemetery. He was the brother of Lethy Gamel of Midland.

Evans died Wednesday night in a Kerrville hospital.

He was born April 6, 1897, in Burleson County. He married Ethel Blanche Sept. 7, 1919, in Mason. She died June 4, 1954. He then married Opal Green Nov. 11, 1967, in San Antonio.

Other survivors include his wife, five sons, seven daughters, a brother, a sister, three stepdaughters, two stepsons, 45 grandchildren, 19 step-grandchildren, 32 great-grandchildren and eight stepgreat-grandchildren.

Claude Harris

Claude E. Harris of 1602 Hodges St., Midland, died early today in a Dallas hospital. Services are pending at Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Name changing gets OK

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Overturning rulings of three lower court judges and two masters, the New Hampshire Supreme Court declared Friday that a person can change his or her name at will.

The court said a name change is banned only when done for "a fraudulent, criminal or wrongful purpose." The ruling came in the cases of two women who had been divorced, sought to resume their maiden names but were told by Superior Court judges and masters the change would be harmful to the children.

Drug search not over

At least three more persons were arrested Thursday in a two-county drug roundup by Department of Public Safety narcotics and intelligence officers, Midland police and Ector County Sheriff's deputies.

Marshall Odell Whitmire Jr., 28, and Develan Jean Whitmire, 20, both of the 400 block of Cowden Avenue, were released Thursday afternoon on $10,000 bond each. Carl Arlie Chambers, 21, of Odessa also was arrested Thursday and released the same day on $25,000 bond. All were charged with delivery of a controlled substance.

Warrants for four persons in Ector County and five in Midland County today remained to be served.

The round-up is the result of a two-and-a-half-month investigation by Midland and Ector counties and the Department of Public Safety.

Arrests began Wednesday when an Odessa College music professor, Charles Edward Baxley, 28, was taken into custody and charged with delivery of LSD. Arrests continue with DPS officials expecting all but four persons to be arrested within the next few days. The four persons are out of state and "may be hard to find," a DPS spokesman said.

Two Midlanders were arrested Wednesday. Benjamin Aaron Brunston, 21, of the 2300 block of North A Street remains in custody today in Midland County Jail in lieu of $60,000 bond. Brunston was charged with three counts of sale of heroin, and one count each on the sale of marijuana, methaquazline and amphetamine. Marsha Wilson Stilwell, 30, of the 3000 block of West Kansas Avenue was released Thursday on $30,000 bond. She was charged with one count each of sale of heroin and placidyl.

Of the 17 persons arrested Wednesday in Ector County, four still are in custody in Ector County Jail. One of the 17 released Thursday was Rocke Flannigan, 22, a witness who was represented by deposition last week in the inquest into the death Jan. 22 of Larry Lozano in Ector County Jail. Flannigan, charged with one count of sale of marijuana, was released on $10,000 bond.

Chaplin body theft told

macabre mystery — the abduction of Charlie Chaplin's body.

At 1:50 p.m. the village gardener and cemetery gravedigger, Etienne Buenzod, 47, arrived at the cemetery and discovered the empty grave.

Investigators ruled out suggestions that a deranged person might have been behind the theft of the 300-pound coffin. "What about the others who helped?" one detective commented.

They later were to deny a report published in the United States that the body was stolen because Chaplin was born a Jew and that the thieves were against having him rest in a "Christian cemetery."

Investigators also tend to discount reports that a group of frenzied fans might have taken the body of the star of the American silent-movie era "home" to his native England.

They say there is a remote possibility that the coffin was smuggled to neighboring France or Italy.

Investigators lean to the theory that the body was stolen for ransom.

March starts Saturday

Midlanders Saturday are being urged to join a fight — against birth defects.

The first 20-kilometer March of Dimes "Superwalk" will begin at 8 a.m. at Memorial Stadium. Walkers will follow a route which weaves through Midland, eventually returning to the stadium, a spokesman for the local March of Dimes chapter said.

They will collect contribution pledges for each kilometer walked. Funds raised will be used to support research, education, medical service and community programs provided by the Midland County March of Dimes chapter.

The local chapter also plans to purchase an intensive care incubator and transport unit for the newborn nursery at Midland Memorial Hospital, the spokesman said.

The "Superwalk" is being sponsored by KCRS radio station and Burger King.

Further information on the walk may be obtained by calling 682-2573.

Hutchison asks for public disclosure

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ray Hutchison challenged Bill Clements today to reveal fully his business dealings, along with any of his firms, while deputy Secretary of Defense.

Hutchison, in a hot race with Clements for the Republican nomination for governor, stressed the public disclosure should include any connections between Clements' Sedco Inc. and Sedco Maritime Inc. with the OPEC nations and with any claims filed against the Department of Defense.

"If there are things that need to be discussed they should be discussed by Republicans in this primary, not wait until the Democrats discuss them in November," Hutchison said.

He stressed he was not making any charges and said he did not have any personal knowledge of any wrongdoing or irregularity. "This is just a request for public disclosure of his financial and business involvements," Hutchison said.

Hutchison made the request at the same time he made public his 1976 income tax return and a statement of his financial condition.

Hutchison said he had an adjusted gross income of $70,705, most of it from his law practice, in 1976 and paid $23,294 in personal income taxes. He predicted his 1977 return, when completed, would be substantially the same.

Lowly lamb can become gourmet fare

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Face it, the closest most Americans get to lamb is wool socks.

For many reasons, a sirloin lamb steak just never has attained the popularity of a beef porterhouse.

You can put the blame where it probably belongs. On lamb itself. It tastes different.

And if you don't fix it right, serving it hot and trimming the fat well, it can taste just plain bad.

But cooked well, the lowly lamb becomes gourmet fare.

Lamb breast is one to two inches thick and quite fatty. It can be boned and rolled to make pot roast or it can be trimmed of fat and cut into riblets. Here's a hearty dish that uses riblets from lamb breast.

LAMB WITH LENTILS

Three and one-half lbs. lamb breast, cut into two-rib riblets
3 large onions, sliced
2 cloves garlic, minced
One and one-half cups celery cut into three-fourths-pieces
1 tbsp. salt
One-fourth tsp. pepper
One-fourth tsp. dried oregano
Water
1 cup dried lentils
One-half cup packaged precooked rice
3 large carrots, sliced one-fourth-inch thick
One-half cup coarsely snipped parsley

In Dutch oven, in a little fat if necessary, brown lamb well. Drain all fat. To lamb add onions, garlic, celery, salt, pepper, oregano and one cup water. Cook, covered one hour and 15 minutes.

Rinse lentils in cold water; arrange with rice and carrot slices around lamb. Add two cups water; cook, covered, one hour or until all are tender. Arrange on platter; sprinkle with parsley. Serves four.

Sirloin steaks and whole-leg steaks can be cut from the leg of lamb. Sirloin steaks can be broiled. Whole-leg steaks take well to this orange sauce.

BAKED ORANGE LAMB STEAKS

2 lamb leg steaks, about one-half-inch thick
1 tsp. salt Baked
2 medium-size oranges, sliced
2 tbsps. brown sugar
One-half tsp. ginger
One-fourth tsp. cloves
1 tsp. dehydrated mint flakes
One-fourth cup melted butter

Arrange lamb in shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with salt. Top with orange slices. Combine remaining ingredients; mix well. Pour over lamb and oranges. Bake at 325 degrees for 40 minutes or to desired doneness. Serves four.

LAMB STEAKS TERIYAKI

One-half cup soy sauce
1 tbsp. brown sugar
One-fourth tsp. ginger
One-fourth tsp. nutmeg
2 tbsps. lemon juice
2 sirloing lamb steaks, one and one-half-inch thick

Combine all ingredients except lamb, blending well. Pour over steaks; refrigerate three hours or overnight. Drain steaks, reserving marinade. Broil three to four inches from heat, five to six minutes on each side or to desired doneness, basting often with reserved marinade.

The two most popular cuts of lamb for roasting are the rack, which consists of ribs, the rib "eye" muscle and backbones; and the whole leg. Two racks (or three) can be sewn together, shaped into a crown and trimmed to form a crown roast.

While lamb used to be roasted to 175 to 180 degrees, it generally is served more on the rare side now with 140 degrees as rare; 170 degrees as well done.

Figure about 30 minutes per pound (325-degree oven) for a bone-in leg; the same for a crown roast. Always test with a meat thermometer, however, and allow for a rise in temperature of about five to 10 degrees after the roast is removed from the oven and allowed to "rest" for 10 to 20 minutes.

Meat for six meals was sliced from a whole leg of lamb. First slice off four sirloin steaks (top left), then with a little more cutting you get (going from clockwise) cutlets, kebobs, stroganoff and stew meat, with fondue cubes in the center. (Copley News Service Photo)

LEG OF LAMB WITH COFFEE GRAVY

2 cups coffee (brewed)
One-fourth tsp. allspice
One-half tsp. cinnamon
Two-thirds cup honey
1 leg of lamb
3 large oranges
One-third cup chopped maraschino cherries (about 15 cherries)
4 tsps. flour
One-fourth cup water
Fresh mint sprigs
One-third cup brandy

Combine coffee, allspice, cinnamon and honey; mix well. Place lamb on rack in shallow roasting pan. Roast in oven at 325 degrees for 2.5 to three hours or until meat thermometer registers desired degree of doneness.

Baste lamb with coffee mixture frequently during cooking period.

Meanwhile, cut oranges in half crosswise. Scoop out pulp; reserve shells. Chop pulp and combine with cherries. Spoon into reserved shells. Arrange around lamb during last 20 minutes of cooking period.

Remove lamb and orange cups from roasting pan; reserve drippings. Combine flour and water; mix well. Skim fat from drippings. Blend flour mixture into drippings in pan; cook over low heat, stirring constantly to scrape up brown bits. Cook until thickened. Arrange lamb and orange cups on platter. Garnish with mint. Heat brandy; pour over orange cups; ignite. Serve lamb and orange cups with coffee gravy.

Self-examination aids survival

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Routine breast self-examination can markedly improve a woman's chances of surviving at least five years after a diagnosis of breast cancer, according to the results of a study involving 248 women in Vermont.

The study revealed that women who examined their breasts monthly had about a 15 percent better five-year survival rate than women who never performed a breast self-examination, according to researchers at the University of Vermont and the Vermont Regional Cancer Center.

The researchers contacted the 339 women whose cancers were diagnosed at general hospitals in the state during a 23-month period. And 73 percent of the women agreed to participate in the study, and report whether, and how often, they had examined their breasts before the diagnosis of cancer.

AT WIT'S END

One potted condition deserves another one

By ERMA BOMBECK

The winter of '78 is slowly becoming a bad memory but the challenges are still there. Thousands of them. They're called potholes and make every outing as adventurous as riding in an open convertible through a mine field.

A network newscaster the other night quoted a rather impressive statistic right down to the number of how many potholes there are in the country. I don't know a pothole-counter personally, but I suspect they're a lot like bird watchers who call in their sightings on a day-to-day basis. ("Harvey Gravel here, reporting a two-footer on U.S. 1 that would make your teeth rattle!")

The big problem is what do we do now. Light a caution light on them each evening and hope God thinks it's a candle? Plant trees in them and make the environmentalists happy? Or turn them into test grounds for shock absorbers?

One very imaginative judge in a small Ohio town is trying one solution. For every drunk who appears before him, he sentences him to filling in potholes. As he observed, "They have something in common. One potted condition deserves another."

It's probably oversimplification, but I think I have the perfect solution to the gaping holes dotting the roads and streets of our nation.

If it were up to me, I'd assemble every two-year-old in the country and announce, "I want all of you to take a nap. Under no condition are you to go out into the traffic and play. No one... repeat... no one is to take a bucket and shovel and fill up the holes in the street. Your mommy likes the hole just the way they are. She does not want you to shovel dirt into them, or stamp on them with your shoes on. If you want to dig new ones, fine but under no cirmunstances are you to till up the holes. Understand?"

Within two days there is no doubt in my mind that every single pothole in the country would be firmly packed with a compound that would handle truck route traffic.

Generally, the nation is inclined to underestimate the power of two-year-olds. Actuallyk they're a vital force who could eliminate war, save the forests, and unearth sources of new energy if given the chance.

There's no doubt in my mind that when Noah built his Ark, somewhere in the neighborhood was a two-year-old who had been told, "Don't you dare turn on that garden hose and get everything wet!"

Women ignoring new federal credit law

By GEORGE DEWAN
Newsday

Women who use credit cards listed in their husbands' names appear to be largely ignoring a new federal law allowing them to establish their own credit identities. This fact bothers many who feel that by not taking advantage of the law, women who use bank an oil company credit cards and joint department store charge accounts are only hurting themselves.

Under regulations carrying out the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, credit-granting organizations were required to mail notices to customers by last Oct. 1, informing all users of credit cards of their right to have credit information in credit reports reported in the names of both husbands and wives. More than 310 million such notices went out, according to the Commercial Credit Co., and they contained simple forms to be signed and mailed back if the separate listing of both names was desired. Overall, only 9 percent of women sharing joint accounts requested that their names be listed separately, according to a survey done by the company. Only 16 percent of major bank card users responded. Nationwide, retailers averaged 7 percent. Response from oil company card holders was 3 percent. A more-up-to-date and complete survey of cardholder response is expected to be released soon by the Federal Reserve Board.

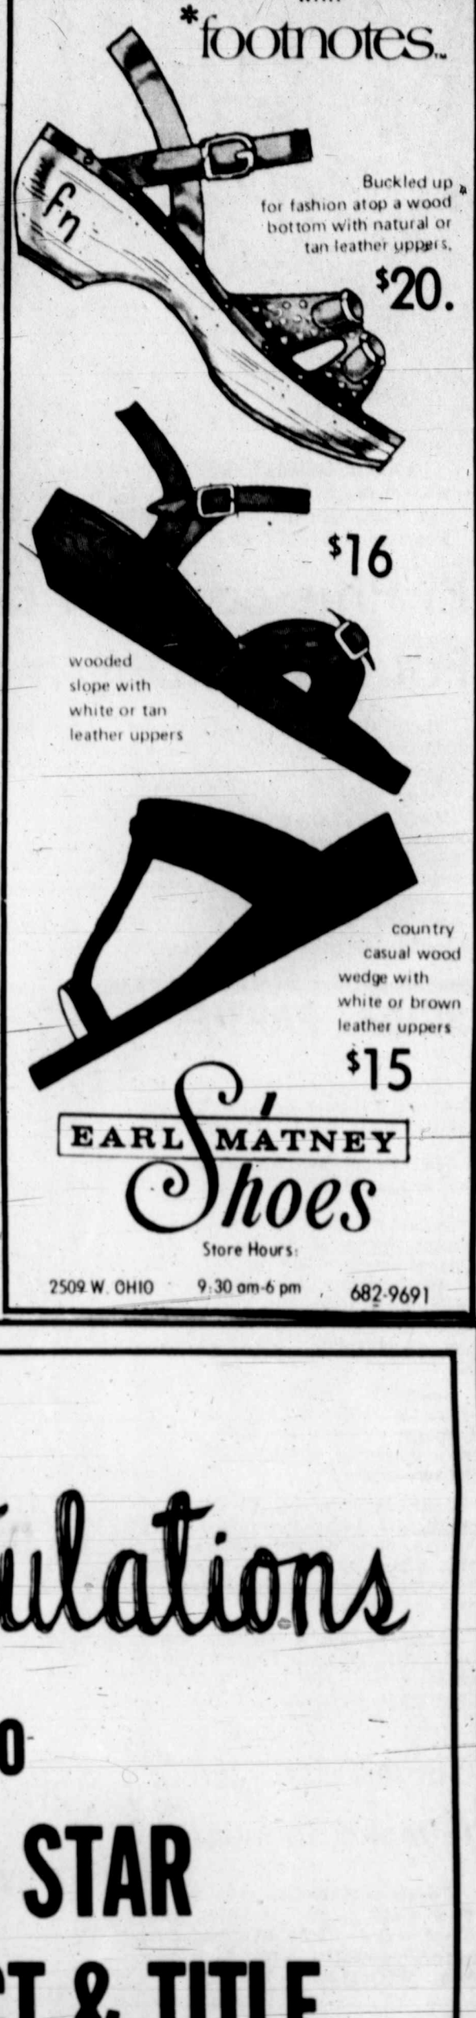

In connectin with its survey, Commercial Credit said it interviewed women in 18 cities. "A majority of the women contacted had little or no awareness of their credit rights or of the importance of having credit in their own names," a spokesman said. "Married women were most apathetic. Many felt no need to establish separate credit identities since they could use their husbands' credit cards. Others were hesitant for fear of wounding their husbands' ego or causing them to think they were preparing for a separation or a divorce."

We urge them to do it," said Shoshana Cardin, chairwoman of the Maryland Commission for Women. "Women have not yet begun to respnd. One, they threw the notices away. Two, they did not understand that this was not applying for credit, but just a credit history. It's still a threat. Women who discuss this with their husbands feel this is threatening to their husbands. I think there is a great psychological barrier, whether the woman is employed out of the home or not.

The primary intention of the new law was to have credit information on joint accounts reported in the names of both husbands and wives. A major reason for this was to ensure that credit histories would be available for women who became divorced or widowed. For accounts established on or after June 1, 1977, which the applicant's spouse was permitted to use or was contractually liable for, such reporting became automatic.

How community property works

By E.J. DEMSON, J.D.
Copley News Service

You're planning to move from a frigid Northern state and retire in a community property state in the Sunbelt. How will your estate property be valued and distributed after your death?

Q. How are values of real and personal property arrive at in the administration of an estate so as to be acceptable to a probate court? My wife and I retired to Arizona (a community property state) from a non-community property state and brought our savings and other property with us.

A. Within three months after his appointment, the executor or administrator of the estate (now called the personal representative) will prepare an inventory of property owned by the deceased at time of death. The inventory will show fair market value of each item, its status as community or separate property, and any encumbrances against it (Az Probate Code, Sec. 14-3706).

The personal representative is authorized to employ disinterested appraisers to determine the fair market value of property (Az Prob. Code, Sec. 14-3707).

About bringing property to a community property state: The Arizona Supreme Court in the Stephens case (36 Az. 235) ruled that property acquired in a non-community property state remains separate property when brought to a community property state.

Q. My brother and I inherited our parent's home. My mother, who survived my father, put the home into joint tenancy, naming my brother and I as joint tenants.

However, my brother has not been heard from since we got a Christmas card from him in Ireland nine years ago. We have tried unsuccessfully to locate him.

Now I want to sell this home, which is in Texas where I live, but I can't get his signature. Would the court allow me to sell the home without his approval?

A. Presumsption of death arises in Texas law from an absence without contact for seven years. If your brother should be found alive after you sell the home, the law says he can claim his half of the proceeds in a claim against you (Ver. Tex. Stat. Sec. 5541).

Often the court suggests that one-half the proceeds in such a case be deposited in a savings account for another seven years. You may reapply for the money at the end of that period.

Q. My wife and I, both over 65, are retired and living in Idaho. Under the Federal Tax Reform Act of 1976, what deductive credit for current income are we allowed in our joint income tax return?

A. The new "credit for the elderly" is no longer restricted to retirement income. The credit now applies to all income, including earned incone.

For a married couple 65 or over, filing a joint federal tax return, the credit allowed is $3,750. For married people filing separately, it is $1,875 (Act, Sec. 503-37 C.D.).

Jailed on birthday

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Ricardo Riddick spent part of his 23rd birthday in a supermarket chimney. The rest of the day he spent in jail, charged with attempted burglary.

Police said Riddick became stuck at about 2 a.m. Friday when he tried to climb down the 28-foot-tall brick smokestack at Forston's Supermarket. He was too big for it, they said, and got stuck about 15 feet down.

When the store owner, E. Earl Forston, opened up at 8 a.m., Riddick was shouting for help.

"I heard him hollering, 'Somebody help me! Today's my birthday, and I don't want to spend it in a chimney,'" Forston said.

Forston called police, and police brought firemen, who climbed to the roof and yanked Riddick from inside the chimney. Then the police took him to jail.

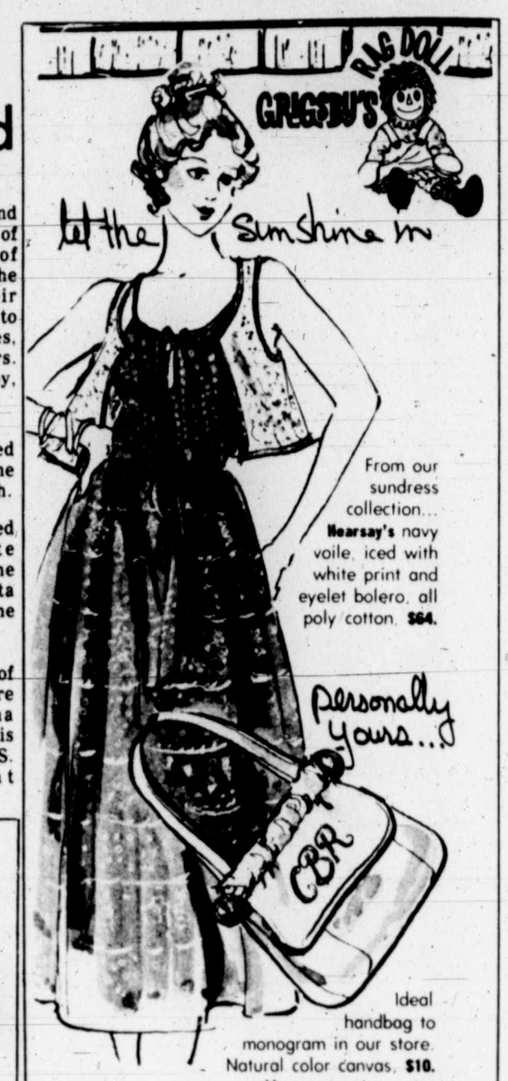

Couple engaged

DENTON — Mr. and Mrs. James E. Hogue of Denton, formerly of Midland, announce the engagement of their daughter, Julie Diane, to Charley Micheal Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charley A. Jones of Roy, Utah.

Miss Foster and Stanley Shanks will be married May 27.

Special guests were Mrs. Lynn E. Foster, mother of the honoree; Mrs. Charlie Shanks of Big Spring, mother of the bridegroom-to-be; Mrs. Gus Meissner, grandmother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. A. H. Tate of Tarzan, grandmother of the bridegroom-elect.

Decorations were in yellow and white, the honoree's chosen colors. Corsages of yellow and white daisies were presented to Miss Foster and the special guests.

Hostesses were Mrs. Clyde Chynoweth, Mrs. James Perry, Mrs. Paul Adams, Mrs. Robert Christensen, Mrs. Clarence Tucker, Mrs. Gerald Mendenall, Mrs. Robert Jefferies and Mrs. O. J. Jensen.

Out-of-city guests included Carla Shanks of Big Spring, Marie Hanna of Stanton, Mrs. Ben Lippe and Mrs. Fred Schuman of Odessa.

THE MARRIAGE April 14 of Lane Amanda Robb to Roger Dale Linton is announced by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Robb, 2813 Maxwell St., and Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Linton, 3332 Fannin St.

Garden club plans to make donations

Donations to the Lancaster Garden Center and to the American Land Trust were decided upon at a meeting of the Pyracantha Garden Club in the home of Mrs. Charles Bradley.

Co-hostesses with Mrs. Bradley were Mrs. H. H. Lanford and Mrs. Chester Powers.

Mrs. E. V. Mitchell reported the club will furnish a floral arrangement for the monthly birthday party at Trinity Towers.

A delegate to the District I convention held in Lubbock, Mrs. R. D. Hardman, announced that Midland will host the 1979 convention.

Mrs. Bradley gave the lesson on "Vegetables In Your Flower Bed," after which she conducted a tour of her vegetable and flower gardens for the members.

Parliamentarian speaks to club

The special guest speaker of the evening was Suzanna Johnson, when the Midland Business and Professional Women's Club met in the Midland Woman's Club.

Mrs. Johnson is a registered professional parliamentarian and works with groupsof all types to amend bylaws or prepare club bylaws. She also teaches parliamentary procedure. During the 26 years she has resided in Midland, she has been very active in community affairs. She is a past president of the Texas State Association of Parliamentarians and now is employed full-time by Alan Leeper.

Other special guests were Betty Ness, Lottie Tunnel and Anita Blackford.

Party honors Kelly Dodson

Kelly Shane Dodson was honored on her ninth birthday with a "Hobo Party" given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James "Doc" Dodson, 1004 Stanolind St.

Out-of-city guests were Mrs. D. K. McMullan of Big Lake, grandmother of the honoree, and Mrs. Joe Emery and Stephanie of San Angelo.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER
(Sat., April 22)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The Full Moon gives you the chance to get a new view and a new attitude where problems and ventures are concerned. Be open-minded to changes and new arrangments, but be careful not to upset the present harmony that now exists in your romantic and social life or problems soon follow.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make new agreements with partners and come to a better understanding with outside allies. Be careful in the handling of your romantic life or you could lose out where it is most important.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Put across ideas that make your work more efficient and commands a greater income in the future. Know greater security. Don't jeopardize your position with mate by some foolish action.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can enjoy pleasures alone now since another may not be willing to get along with you. Get your talents recognized by a bigwig who can help you to commercialize on them. Show your cleverness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to make your home life more ideal, harmonious and comfortable. Start an uptrend there now. Study a new and promising venture, even though kin may not think much of it.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you encourage a partner now, you can get him or her to go along with some plan you have. Explain it thoroughly for best results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take care of obligations early and use tact with creditors. Try to understand the points of view of others and don't argue with them. Use reason and all will be fine for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Put those ideas to work that will help you advance and think more of your own welfare. Be fair with loved ones but don't go overboard with money. Teach to be less extravagant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Tackle accumulated tasks and clear the slate for bigger things ahead. You get good ideas that should be discussed with a trusted adviser.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec 21) Fine time for being with good friends and also for extending your circle of acquaintances. Know what your personal aims are and how to reach them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact the most powerful persons you know and make them aware of your finest capabilities. Gain their support for them. Getting into civic affairs can be very good for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Put those ideas across that will help you to develop, but be conscientious. Plan to do some traveling.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care of chores before you think of entertainment. A loved one is favorably disposed toward you now, so make the most of this mood.

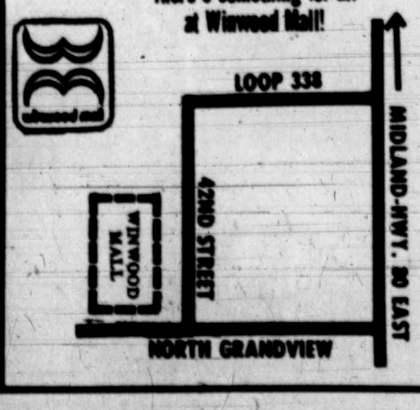

Welcome summer in this cushioned sandal on the soft, flexible crepe sole. Comfort supreme! White, tan or brown leather.

A woman's woman, Jill is also 'just Jill'

By SALLY QUINN
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Jill Clayburgh is a woman's woman. She is every woman's idea of what she would like her best friend to be. She is comfortable, friendly, open, intimate, straight, smart, funny, confiding . . . She doesn't mind laughing at herself, exposing her vulnerabilities, empathizing.

All this is not to say that she isn't attractive. She isn't beautiful in the classic sense, but she has such an appealing face and such an inner glow that she becomes prettier as she talks. What keeps her from being really beautiful is a lack of definition about her features, a fuzziness which makes her seem unclear as a face, compared to someone like, say Jane Fonda, who, though not perfectly beautiful either, has such clear strong features you think she is.

Clayburgh doesn't act like she thinks she is beautiful. Rather she acts confident and at ease with what good looks she does possess.

She is not the kind of woman other women are necessarily jealous of, regardless of her talent, her success, her looks, because she's not the kind of woman who goes after other women's men. You get the feeling that if she's your friend she's not going to go after your man. Instead, because she knows how much it hurts, she'll listen for hours to your problems and share hers with you, hashing tirelessly over relationships on the phone until you've both got cauliflower ears, then be right back at it with you the next morning. She's the kind of woman you want to have around when you break up with the man you love.

This could be, in part, because she has been through so much herself. She lived with Al Pacino for five years before he walked out on her with little warning, much like Erica's experience in "An Unmarried Woman" where she loses her husband of 16 years.

Clayburgh admits that probably the most painful moment in her life was when Pacino left her. "I went through it all," she says, "self-loathing, loathing him, pain, anger, fear.

"I still remember my song with Al now," she says with a slighly wistful shrug. "It's too Late, Baby."

And now she can say with a believable casualness, "we're still friends; we see each other now and then." And she says, defensively, that she is probably the only person alive who really liked Pacino's negatively reviewed film, "Bobby Deerfield."

There is a certain determination in her voice, however, when she says, "I'd rather not live with an actor again. It's too hard."

Part of the reason her breakup with Pacino was so hard "obviously had to do with the fact that he was just becoming a big success and I hadn't made it yet." (Pacino had just finished "The Godfather"; the role that sent him to stardom).

Ironically, it is Clayburgh who is the big star now and Pacino's career which is on the decline.

And she is. Sort of.

Her latest movie, "An Unmarried Woman," is a huge success and the reviews have been spectacular. She is in constant demand and has been since her last two successes, "Silver Streak" and "Semi-Tough." She has become, after 15 years of hard work as an actress both on the stage and in movies, a major figure in the film industry. Hundreds of scripts have been pouring in and she says she sometimes reads 10 a day. But so far, she hasn't found anything since "An Unmarried Woman" that she likes, or thinks is right for her. So for the last 11 months Jill Clayburgh has not worked.

And she's worried.

"It's like what movie can I do now," she says, "after 'An Unmarried Woman?' Yet I don't want to get into that syndrome of 'I'll never work again.' But you do something just because you want to work and everybody says, 'Why did you do that horrible movie?' Well, you don't think it's going to be horrible, obviously. But now the pressure is really terrible on me to make a wonderful movie with a wonderful director and be wonderful. And that kind of pressure keeps you from taking risks. I guess," she says, "it would probably be more valuable for me to fail. I would grow more. And it would be better than just sitting around and repeating myself. I could wait five years before I found a part as good as this. And I would really hate to get into that. It's a real problem."

It's not that big a problem though. And anyway, Jill Clayburgh has had enough problems in her life that she can handle this one.

She takes a large bite out of her croissant, munches pensively for a moment and then laughs. "I felt once this movie came out," she says, "that I would, as Woody Allen would say, meet a higher class of people. It's just a question of time. Right now a lot of good directors are tied up."

She thinks, though, that she's had just about enough vacation. "For the first six or eight months," she says, "I was very happy. I went skiing, I read books, I listened to music, I talked to my girl friends on the phone. I talk a lot on the phone. I cooked a lot. I stayed home a lot — though you wouldn't know it judging from the mess in my apartment. I jog about an hour and a half a day or go to the gym. I waste a lot of time talking to David (playwright David Rabe, the man she lives with) and I unsuccessfully tried to learn tennis. It's only been in the last month or so that I've been a little buggy."

"But you know," she says, "I had done two pictures in a row and I was really exhausted. I hadn't spent time with my own life. I needed to sleep, to see my friends and most importantly, to spend time with David."

When Jill Clayburgh walks into the lobby of the Sherry Netherlands hotel for an interview no one recognizes her. In the dining room, the maitre d'hotel refuses a larger table, insisting that "two women always mess up tables," showing instead a small cramped table in the corner.

DEAR ABBY

Death bed promise creates problem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that I, a 62-year-old man, am actually writing a letter to Dear Abby, but I have a problem I cannot solve. How do you or your consultants (perhaps a minister or psychiatrist) feel about deathbed promises?

The situation is as follows; I am very much in love with a 60-year-old widow. I am a widower. Our children are grown and independent. This widow and I both had good and faithful spouses. I lost mine two years ago, and she lost hers three years ago. We met by accident. Neither of us was looking for anyone.

After keeping steady company for a year, we are very much in love and want to marry. However, my wife, on her deathbed, asked me to promise her that I would never marry again. I made that promise, and now I feel guilty because I want to marry. What obligation have I to a dead spouse, and what should I do?—FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: First, shed those guilt feelings. Deathbed promises are almost always made under emotionally charged circumstances. Your only obligation is to yourself. Go ahead and marry the lady, and the sooner the better. Life is for living.

DEAR ABBY: I had a buffet dinner party at my home recently to which 12 of my relatives were invited. (One was my mother.)

The party was scheduled for 6:30. At 6:25 my mother arrived with a giant pot of turkey soup. I was caught by surprise. My dinner was already prepared and there was no way I could have served my mother's turkey soup. For one thing, I don't have enough soup bowls or spoons to serve 12, and even if I had, turkey soup wouldn't have been appropriate with the meal I planned.

I politely told my mother that I would put her turkey soup away and save it for another time. She was miffed and let me know it. Was I wrong, Abby? She keeps bringing it up to me that I wouldn't let her serve her turkey soup. How can I make amends for my gross error?—IN THE SOUP DOWN SOUTH

DEAR IN: You weren't wrong. Tell your mother you gobbled up her turkey soup later and it was delicious.

DEAR ABBY: Our car was damaged by a drunken driver who works at the same factory as my husband. The estimated cost of having it repaired is $700.

My husband didn't want to have the other man booked for drunken driving, so instead of calling the police to report it right away, my husband called the man's wife to take him home and sober him up.

The wife couldn't sober him up, so she came back to the scene of the accident and told the police that SHE was the driver of the car, instead of her husband. My husband backed her up.

My husband and I have been going round and round about this. I told him that he was dead wrong to have agreed to such a thing—the police should have been notified at once, and if they booked the other man for drunk driving, it might teach him a good lesson. I don't think drunken drivers should be protected.—DISGUSTED

Tamers choose officers

Mrs. Harry W. Hugly was elected president of the Lion Tamers Club for 1978-79 at a business session held following a salad luncheon in the home of Mrs. Art Oestman, 2202 Whitney St. Mrs. Hugly succeeds Mrs. Carl O. Hyde in the office.

Other officers are Mrs. Steve G. Scott, vice president; Mrs. Leland H. Franke, secretary, and Mrs. Al Dirnberger, treasurer.

The report of the nominating commitee was submitted by Mrs. Horace Robb, chairman.

Co-hostesses at the luncheon were Mrs. Bill Collyns, Mrs. Henry Libby, Mrs. Robb and Mrs. Windell Thomason.

Mrs. George Weis received a commission as Commodore in the Ebb Tide Fleet, presented by Roy A. Minear, the fleet's executive officer. The Ebb Tide Fleet includes a group of Lions and Lion Tamers who are campaigning for the election of Ebb Grindstaff of Ballinger as president of Lions International.

As the program highlight, Mrs. Minear showed a color film, "Treasures of Tutankhamun." Mr. and Mrs. Minear and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bridges of Stanton were among a group of Midland and area residents who viewed the King Tut Treasures in the Los Angeles County Museum of Art last weekend.

Mrs. Bridges was a guest at the luncheon.

Scientists find body's 'classroom'

By BOB CORBETT
Copley News Service

One of the most fundamental questions in modern medical research is just how the body learns to distinguish between self and non-self.

The question underlies a whole series of problems: how the body's immune system fights off bacterial, viral and other forms of infection; why transplanted organs are rejected, and the nature of auto-immune diseases in which the body actually attacks itself. Many scientists believe that cancer results because of a failure of the body's immune or defensive system to recognize the alien nature of the cancer cell.

Now, researchers at the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in La Jolla, Calif., and the Southwestern Medical School in Dallas believe that they have uncovered the "classroom" where the body learns to recognize both itself and dangerous foreign invaders.

In the current issue of the Journal of Experimental Medicine, the team reports that the classroom actually is the thymus gland, a small winglike gland located in the chest just above the heart.

Scientists have known for a long time that there is a connection between the thymus and the body's immune system. It's the place young stem cells produced by the bone marrow go to mature into T (for thymus-derived) lymphocytes, the "killer cells" of the immune army.

The research team, headed by Dr. Rolf M. Zinkernagel of Scripps, now believe that a series of three experiments covering the last four years demonstrates conclusively that the thymus has a teaching function as well as a maturing one.

The first of the three crucial experiments was conducted by Zinkernagel and Dr. Peter Doherty back in 1974. In these experiments, the scientists demonstrated that the T-cells would only attack cells that had both foreign and self markers on their membranes.

In a second, more recent experiment, the investigators destroyed by radiation all of the immune system machinery except the thymus gland. They then rebuilt the immune system, using stem cells from a cross between an A and B strain of mice.

They reinjected the AB lymphocytes developed by new cross-breed into mice, which still had their A-type thymuses, and had been results showed that the AB lymphocytes would attack and destroy only the virus-infected A cells.

In the third and most crucial of the tests, the scientists again irradiated a cross-breed AB strain to destroy their immune mechanism.

The news can wait until hand is over

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Many years ago the Greeks won a big tournament from the Persians and sent one of their players out with the final score. He was so excited that he ran all the way to his home town newspaper and died as soon as he gave them the scoop. This was mighty poor bridge, and I have a hand to prove it.

East takes the king of diamonds and returns a trump. It's customary to lead the top card of a doubleton to tell partner what is going on, but this is a poor idea when giving partner the information costs you the setting trick.

WRONG CARD

If East returns the jack of hearts, South's queen forces out the ace. Now West cannot return a trump since that will cost him a trump trick. And if West fails to return a trump, South will ruff a diamond in dummy.

Dilemma is the word the Greeks had for this, but East can remove both horns of the dilemma by returning the deuce rather than the jack of hearts at the second trick.

West does not know what is going on when he wins with the ace of hearts. But West must return his low heart anyway; his ten is useful only if East has the jack.

East does produce the jack of hearts, forcing out the king. West wins a second trump, and East wins a second diamond.

The moral is: Play to defeat the contract. If your partner wants to know what is going on, he can read the newspapers the next day.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with two hearts (forcing to game), and the next player passes. You hold: S-J64; H-A106; D-Q10863; C-73. What do you say?

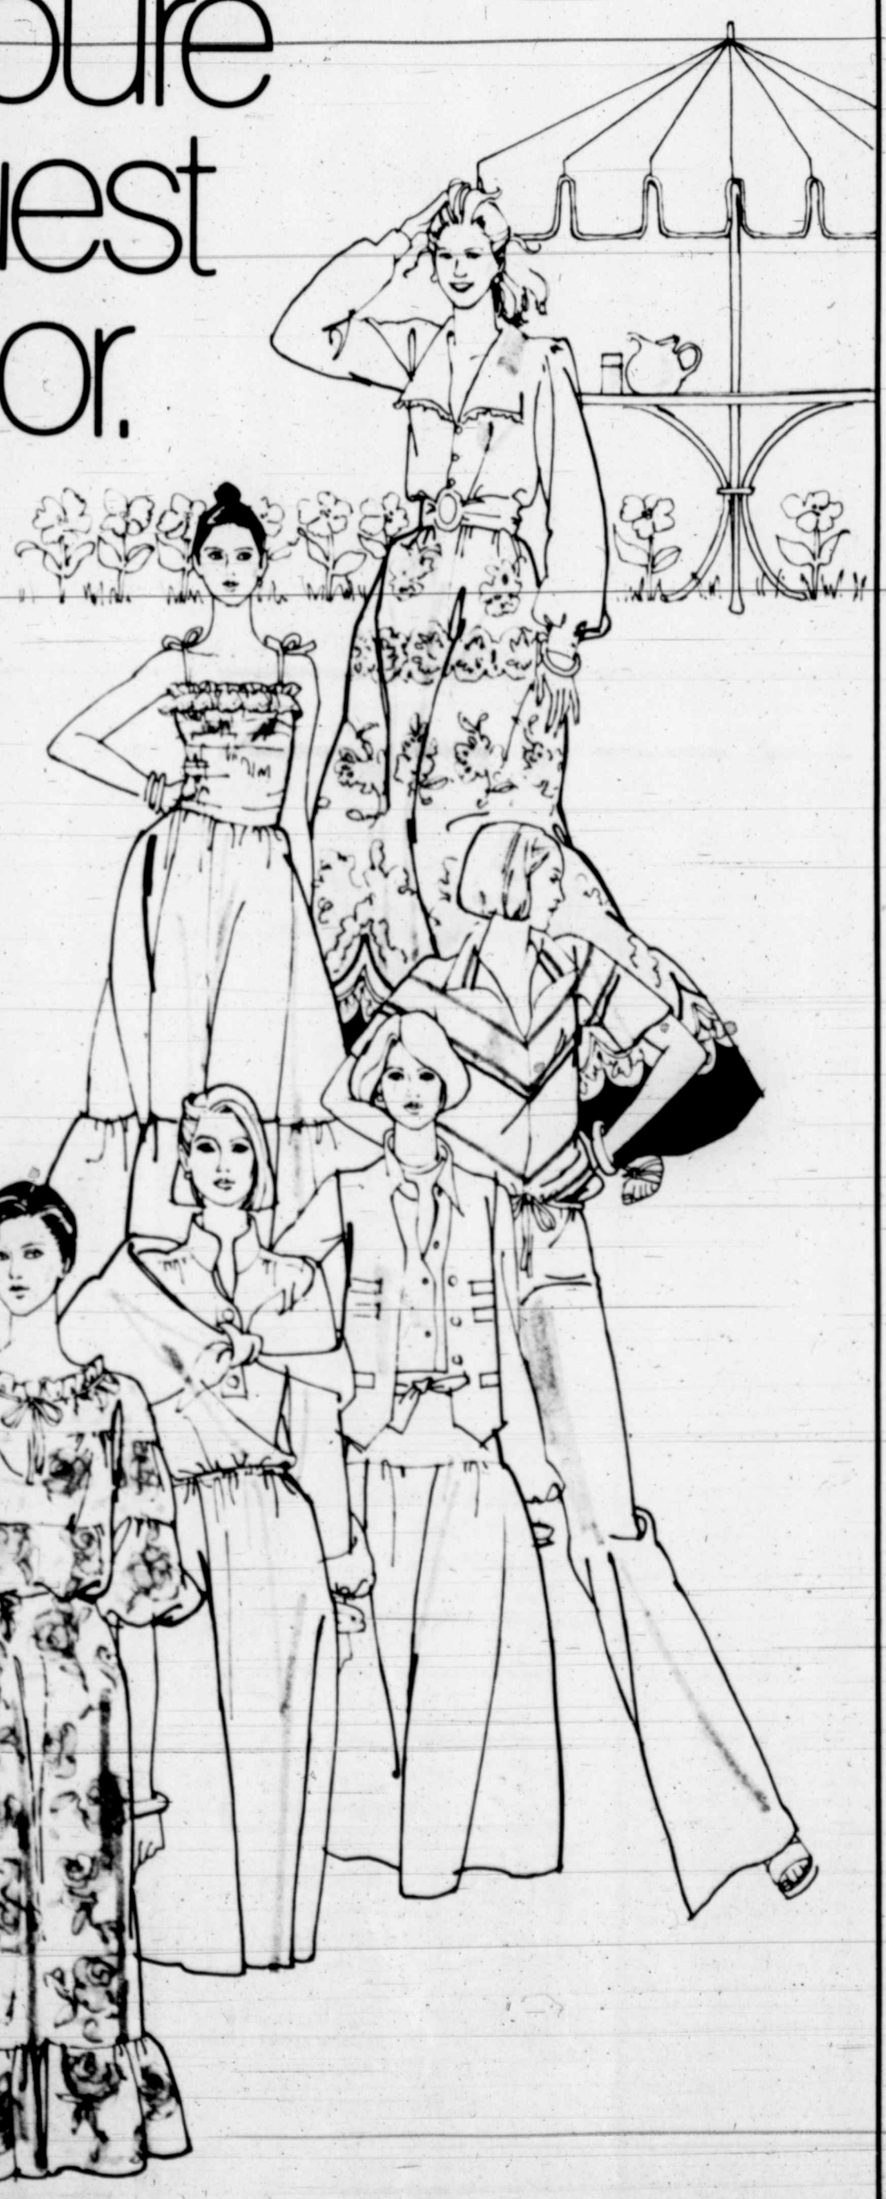

ANSWER: Bid 2 NT, the negative response, showing a poor hand. If you had the king of diamonds instead of your queen you could afford to raise to three hearts since then you would have the values for a positive response.

Rejuvenated Randall revives Cubs' attack

BY TED BATTLES

"I'll give Billy credit for that one. He told me to swing for the base hits and the homers would take care of themselves," Aaron Randall grinned after his game-winning home run against El Paso Thursday night sent a Chamber of Commerce night crowd of 1,370 at Cubs Stadium home happy.

Randall was referring to Chicago Cubs roving batting coach Billy Williams who has been working with him this week. The results have been gratifying. In the last four games, the Grambling grad has cracked out 10 hits, three coming last night, but his sixth inning blow over the centerfield fence was his first homer in that stretch.

Thanks to lefthander Tom Butler's shutout relief pitching over the final three innings, the solo wallop stood up, in what up until then had been a wild swinging scoring orgy in which El Paso's Danny Goodwin threatened to single-handedly demolish the Cubs. He hit two homers good for four rbi.

Goodwin's three-run smash over the left field barrier to highlight a four-run sixth climaxed an El Paso rally which saw the Diablos overcome a 9-3 Midland lead after two innings to tie it at 9-9.

"BILLY HAS been stressing hitting down on the ball and keeping my head steady so I get a better look at the pitch and it has worked," Randall, who has raised his average from below .100 to .357 with a seven-game hitting streak, explained.

"Aaron has been a lot more selective in swinging at pitches and it has made a big difference," Manager Jim Saul observed.

"Billy stressed that I should be more patient and wait for my pitch and concentrate on getting base hits," Randall went on, "If I did that, he said the home runs would come, and he was right. That's why I credit this one to Billy."

Strangely enough, Ken Schrom, in relief, gave up only one of the Cubs' 10 runs, but it happened to be Randall's homer, which was enough to tag him with the loss

Midland, winning its third in four starts against the Diablos, exploded against lefthander Ralph Botting for five runs in the first inning after El Paso had taken an early 3-0 lead. Nine men came to the plate as Midland banged out five hits including a run-scoring triple by Steve Macko, a double by Brian Rosinski and a two-run triple by Eric Grandy.

The Cubs struck for four more runs on six hits in the second as Kevin Drury started it with a double and Macko, Duane Gustavson, Randall, Greg Keatley and Rosinski added singles.

Goodwin started the Diablos on the way back with a solo homer off starter Ron Davis in the fourth. In the fifth Steve Whitehead doubled and scored on singles by Bob Slater and Floyd Rayford. That set the stage for the four-run sixth and ultimately Randall's game-deciding homer.

Every batter in the Midland lineup except third baseman Javier Fierro contributed to the Cubs 15-hit attack, bringing their total for two nights to 30.

CUBS QUICKIES: Tonight is two-bit beer night at Cubs Stadium and Jack Ledbtter,0-2, will be seeking his first win for Midland. Jim Dorsey will go for the Diablos. Sunday Dorsey had a no-hitter for seven innings against Amarillo and a three-hitter with two out in the ninth before the roof gave way and he wound up a 15-7 winner...The Cubs stole eight bases Thursday with Drury and Macko swiping two each. Jimmy Buckner got one, raising his season's total to six...In addition to his homer, Randall also had a double and he could have had a four-hit night if third baseman Scott Moffitt and first baseman Rayford hadn't combined for a sparkling stop and out-saving scoop to retire him in the eghth.

Girls vie in region track meet

LUBBOCK--The quest for state track berths began here today at the Texas Tech University oval as the AAAA-AA Region I girls track meet got underway.

A few field event finals started at 9:30 a.m. today and the running preliminaries started at 1:30 p.m. Saturday's finals begin at 9:30 a.m. with the rest of the field events while the running finals start at 1:30 p.m.

The Midland High girls will be seeking state berths in three events, but only the mile relay team will compete today in the prelims.

Jana Trolinder, Nan White, Margaret Christian and Susan Shoemaker comprise the Pack's mile relay unit. Midland's 4:21.4 won a second place in the District 5-4A meet in Midland last week to qualify for the regionals. The two top places in each event will earn a state berth in Austin in two weeks.

Midland's Wanda Caldwell and Donna Repman will try to earn state berths Saturday in the 880-yard run and mile run, respectively. There will be no prelims in either of those events today.

Caldwell won an 880 regional berth with a second place 2:33.7 in the district meet while Repman won her berth with a second place 5:53.1.

Lee, MHS JVs win

By BOB DILLON

Midland, Midland Lee and Odessa all captured opening round victories Thursdayin the Midland Junior Varsity Invitational Baseball Tournament at the Memorial Stadium and Lee diamonds.

Midland's Bullpups, meanwhile, took an exciting 6-5 win over the Odessa Permian JV and OHS took an 8-7 win over Big Spring in the other game.

Lubbock Coronado, the other team in the tourney, drew a first round bye and will face Midland High at 12 noon Saturday in the semifinals.

Big guns at the plate for Lee were Larry Latch and Mark Thompson. Latch smacked a double while Thompson contributed a triple for the winners. Second baseman Gary Wood went two-for-three at the plate as Lee pounded out 11 hits.

Whalen plans to pitch Kenny Maxwell in Saturday's game with Odessa at 10 a.m. in the other semifinal game.

Crane had one player, Jerry Rives with two hits as the Class AA outfit had a hard time solving the slants of Denny.

Midland's attack was led by Garland Burge, Tommy McMann and Rick Ankerholz as the Bullpups had nine hits to Permian's seven.

Paul Cox had a pair of doubles for the Pups of Coach Stan Moore while Burge went three-for-three. McMann had two hits in three trips to the plate for the winners who have an 8-6 record on the year going into Saturday's game with Coronado at 12 noon at the Lee diamond.

The finals are set for 4 p.m. at the Lee diamond Saturday. Trophies will be given for first second and consolation finals.nine hits to Permian's seven.

Sam Driskill went all the way on the mound and struck out eight Panthers. The loser was Danny Hererra and he too was tough in striking out 10 Pups.

Paul Cox had a pair of doubles for Midland.

Odessa won its game on a three-base error by the Big Spring left-fielder when Jerry Burbosa had a bad-bounce single over third. He scored on the miscue to give OHS the win.

Permian gains an automatic spot in the consolation finals Saturday at 2 p.m. when it will face the loser of the Coronado-Midland game.

Top polo players vie in Midland this week

The sport of kings comes to Midland Saturday and Sunday when the Texas League of the National Polo Association hosts its High Goal tournaments at the Midland Polo Field.

Only three players in the United States carry nine-goal ratings and Midlanders will have an opportunity to see all three in action this weekend.

Nine-goaler Red Armour will lead Tulsa against Dallas Saturday afternoon at the Midland Polo Field. On Sunday, another nine-goaler,Joe Barry, will ride with the San Antonio Petama team against the Tommy Wayman-led Midland Wilson Ranch team.

Other members of the Midland team include Fortunato Gomez, seven goals; Dickie Cernadas, Argentina, and William B. Wilson, well-known Midland rancher and oilman. Willie B. has played polo internationally in such countries as Argentina, Columbia, Guatemala, Mexico, England and the state of Hawaii. He recently returned from India where he played on the world's oldest polo field in Calcutta.

The Midland Polo Field will be open to the public for these matches with general admission and box seats available. Those wishing to attend may contact Clarice Fisher, 684-5567. Musical entertainment preceding the matches will begin at 2 p.m. each day. The Midland Polo Field is located north of Midland on Garfield Street.

Gary finds world of milk, honey

Player wasn't referring solely to the 7-shot rallies that brought him titles in the Masters and Tournament of Champions in his last two starts, nor to the 8-under-par 64 that gave him the first-round lead Thursday in the $200,000 Houston Open.

The 42-year-old South African was talking about the entire American tour.

"IT'S THE greatest in the world," said Player, who annually competes on five continents and has claimed 113 titles worldwide.

"Everything is done to perfection here — the administration, the greens keepers — everything. If you want a ruling, there's a man there to handle it. The courses are prepared better than any place in the world. This is the top of the game.

"Truly, it is a tour of milk and honey.

"It is a thrill to me to play on courses as well prepared as this."

He wasn't alone. The beautifully-conditioned, 6,997-yard Woodlands Country Club layout combined with some ideal playing conditions — a warm, windless Texas spring day — to produce some of the lowest scores of the season.

TRAILING Player by a single shot was Australian Bob Shearer, whose 65 marked the best round of his two-season American career. With those two in the lead, it was the 10th time in the last 13 rounds on the American tour that foreign players had led or shared the lead.

PGA champion Lanny Wadkins and Bob Murphy were another shot back at 66. The group at 67, 5 shots under par, included Andy Bean, Randy Erskine, Orville Moody and George Burns, who generally plays well in this event.

Defending titleholder Gene Littler was in a group at 68. Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino shots 70s. Johnny Miller matched par 72.

Player, bidding to become the first man in two seasons to win three straight events, was followed by his wife and son on his course record-matching romp and has two more of his children with him.

"IT MAKES all the difference in the world, having your family with you," he said. "It's torture playing tournaments all around the world and being away from your family for months at a time.

"The American players really aren't away that much. They can hop on a jet on Sunday night, be home in two hours, be with their families Monday and Tuesday and still get out to the next tournament.

"What a difference it would have made in my career if I'd been able to do that."

With his family watching, he reeled off a string of three birdies beginning on the fifth hole, all on putts in the 12-15 foot range. He holed a 10-footer on the ninth to turn in 31, then got another 10-footer in the cup on the 11th.

He holed from across the green, dropping a putt from the right edge that traveled about 50 feet, on the 14th and took the lead alone on the 16th. His pitch shot touched the hole but failed to drop for an eagle. He had a tap-in to go 8 under for the day — then had to hole another 10-foot putt to preserve it after landing in two traps on the next hole.

Bosox wipe out Brewers; Dodgers sack Astros, 5-1

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

When the Milwaukee Brewers opened the season by battering Baltimore for 40 runs in three games, Manager George Bamberger, who spent many seasons in an Orioles uniform, cracked that "things could be worse. I could still be their pitching coach."

Bamberger was singing a different tune Thursday after the Brewers received a taste of their own medicine.

"They wiped us out and I just want to get out of here," he said after the Boston Red Sox bombed the Brewers 10-4 with a 16-hit attack and scored 26 runs in sweeping a three-game series at Fenway Park. "They're the best hitting team in the league," Bamberger added.

THAT WAS the only American League game played since New York-Toronto and Detroit-Cleveland were rained out. In the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Houston Astros 5-1 and the San Diego Padres blanked the Atlanta Braves 2-0 while St. Louis-Pittsburgh and MontrealChicago were washed out.

Butch Hobson, called "the best No. 9 hitter in baseball" by Texas Manager Billy Hunter, belted a three-run homer and Fred Lynn, who had four hits, lined a two-run shot in the third as the Red Sox breezed to their seventh consecutive victory and a 6-0 home record behind Bill Lee's seven-hitter.

"Hobson and Lynn certainly are hitting the ball, but so is everybody," said Manager Don Zimmer. "It doesn't surprise me in the least. I knew we could hit the ball. Seeing Lynn get four hits, Butch a long homer, Carlton Fisk and Jerry Remy get three hits apiece and others drill the ball doesn't surprise me.

Virtually overlooked was Carl Yastrzemski's 2,735th career hit, a fourth-inning double that moved him into a tie with Goose Goslin for 32nd place on baseball's all-time hit parade. With 936 extra-base hits, Yaz is 20th, two behind Eddie Mathews.

Milwaukee pitcher Moose Haas suffered a partial tear of the flexor muscle in his right elbow and will be sidelined for a month or more.

Dodgers 5, Astros 1

Steve Yeager's three-run double broke a tie as Los Angeles scored four times in the sixth inning and snapped Houston's four-game winning streak behind Doug Rau's eight-hit pitching.

Padres 2, Braves 0

Randy Jones pitched a three-hitter with ninth-inning help from Rollie Fingers and Bob Davis rapped a two-run fifth-inning single off Phil Niekro, who allowed only two hits.

"I had a nice smooth tempo going, so I just took my time and didn't force things or try to push myself," said Jones, the 1976 Cy Young Award winner who is battling back from arm surgery. "Everything seemed to fall into place today."

Despite Niekro's 0-4 record, Davis said he "had the great knuckleball. The bottom was falling right out of it."

Anthony holds lead in PBA pin tourney

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Earl Anthony, winner of the most Professional Bowlers Association titles, carried a 90-pin lead into the final day of match play in the $150,000 Tournament of Champions.

Anthony said it would be a thrill to capture his 30th career championship in this, the biggest of the PBA tournaments.

Wings have Canadiens cornered

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Those Montreal Canadiens who do not wear helmets might be well advised to keep them handy as their National Hockey League quarter-final playoff series continues tonight against the Detroit Red Wings.

It's not a matter of steppedup body contact or protection against flying sticks and pucks.

It's a simple matter of practicality, because Games 3 and 4 in the best-of-seven series will be played at the Detroit Olympia, where the fans salute their heroes not with confetti, not with streamers ... but with occasional showers of octopi.

"I DON'T think of them as anything other than an identification of the fact that the playoffs are near and that we're in them," said Ted Lindsay, the first Detroit general manager in eight years able to talk about the playoffs and the Red Wings in the same sentence.

"They never hit anybody or anything like that," said Lindsay, who played in Detroit for a dozen seasons and thus has ducked his share of eight-legged creatures hurtling through the air.

"Marcel Pronovost said he used to take 'em home and cook 'em, but I, uh, well, I never believed him."

Pronovost has other things on his mind right now, since the former defenseman coaches the Buffalo Sabres, who trail the Philadelphia Flyers 2-0 in their quarter-final matchup. That series continues at Buffalo Saturday night.

In action tonight the New York Islanders take their 2-0 lead to Toronto and the Boston Bruins bring their 2-0 lead to Chicago.

While those teams are going at it, the Canadiens and Red Wings will snap the 1-1 tie produced by Montreal's 6-2 victory in the opener and Detroit's 4-2 triumph Wednesday night.

IT SHOULD be noted that at the last Red Wings home playoff game, against Atlanta, an informal count totalled 11 octopi being scraped off the Olympia surface.

"I wonder if the guy was saving them all the years we didn't make the playoffs?" mused Lindsay, who added the creatures "never cause much of a delay — not the kind that could turn a game around.

"They never squished or squashed or anything. A guy came out with a shovel and picked 'em up and that was that."

Budd Lynch, the Red Wings' publicity director, claims the air-borne seafood is a tradition that dates back to the 1950s.

"It was started by the Cusmano brothers," he recalled. "They owned a restaurant and a grocery store.

"There's all kinds of versions of how it got started. The most popular says it came when the Wings won a semifinal in four straight games and a final in four straight games and one of the Cusmano brothers said, 'They won eight games and an octopus has eight tentacles,' or something like that."

Spinks arrested again

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Police said World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Leon Spinks was arrested early today after he failed to produce a driver's license and was under investigation for possible drug violations.

Spinks and his companion were still in police custody shortly before 7 a.m. No formal charges had been immediately filed, a spokesman said.

The arresting officer, Francis Corona, said officers seized two small bags or sacks, one containing a white powder substance and the other possibly marijuana.

Corona said the white powder substance was found in a small sack inside the 24-year-old boxer's hat after he tossed it on the roof of his car while being questioned. The other sack was in his clothes. Corona said both substances would be analyzed.

A female companion with Spinks, identified as Charlene Gunn, 26, was also arrested, Corona said, for interfering with an officer and for possible drug violations. Corona said a substance, also believed to be marijuana, was found on Miss Gunn.

Corona said the Spinks was stopped after police saw him drive into a restaurant parking lot around 4 a.m. with his lights off.

It is the second time Spinks has been arrested in his hometown of St. Louis since returning home after winning the heavyweight title from Muhammad Ali earlier this year in Las Vegas. He was previously arrested on a traffic violation.

A's barricade Mesa

Andy MacPhail just arrived in Midland from Scottsdale, Ariz., a couple of days later than scheduled. Andy's special assignment after spring camp had been deserted was to move what was left of Chicago's bag-and-baggage to Mesa, the Cubs' new spring home.

"Only trouble, the A's wouldn't move out and it took a couple of days to get that straightened out."

Billy Williams, Chicago Cubs roving batting coach, for one approves the Chicago shift from Scottsdale to Mesa, he took spring training in both places while with Chicago and later with Oakland and says there is no comparison...

"Will the woman who left the car there, please move it."

Lee girls close in on state golf berth

LUBBOCK— The Midland Lee girls' golf team is within 18 holes of a state tournament playoff berth after recording a first round second place 382 here Thursday in the Region I girls golf tournament.

Amarillo High leads after the first round with a 363 total, but the top two teams earn state berths. Lee's junior varsity squad is in fourth place heading into today's final 18 holes with a 412. Lubbock Coronado is third with a 397, 15 strokes behind the Lee varsity.

Sheryl Guthrie paced Lee with an 88 while Wendy Goodwin carded an 89. Gayle Rowan had a 102 while Sally Reavis managed a 103. Paige Worrell posted a 111. Odessa Permian's Jackie Daiss leads in the medalist chase with a 79.

In AA action, Kermit led the first day chase with a 412, six strokes ahead of second place Canadian while Dalhart is still in the running with a 420.

In Odessa, Region I action ended in the AAA and A competition with Rankin's girls winning the region A title with a two-day 782. Memphis took second with a 797, and both teams will advance to Austin in two weeks.

Memphis' Tina Foxhall won the A medalist honors with a 163 while Jamie Gossett of Rankin had a 177. Kim Rose of Rankin also aided with a 192. McCamey was fifth in the team race with an 815 as Beth Compton led the way with an 184. Stanton had an eighth place 949 with Lesa Angel firing a 184.

Boger won the AAA title with a 719 score while Fort Stockton placed second with 777. Borger's Kathy Kaplan won medalist honors with a 165.

Lee's JV was paced by Teresa Stoltz with a 101 while Gail Watson had a 102. Others were Kim Lewis, 103; Brenda Heath, 106; and Angel Willis, 112.

Gilliam given OK by grand jury

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A grand jury has declined to indict former professional quarterback Joe Gilliam on robbery and drug charges, authorities said.

Thomas Shriver, district attorney general, said Thursday night he had submitted to the Davidson County grand jury charges of robbery and possession of drugs for resale, but the jury declined to indict Gilliam on either.

The onetime standout play caller at Tennessee State University once was a member of the Pittsburgh Steelers and New Orleans Saints in the National Football League. He was cut by the Saints in 1977, however, after what team officials said was an unexcused absence from training camp.

The robbery charge against Gilliam stemmed from the Dec. 12 robbery in Nashville of a bank official, who told police the robber took $44. Police later arrested Gilliam at his home and accused him on the drug possession charge after officers said they found marijuana and drug paraphernalia in his home.

Gilliam was unavailable for comment Thursday. Vincent said he was out of the city visiting a relative.

Knicks' task hopeless?

NEW YORK (AP) — Lonnie Shelton, the rugged forward of the New York Knicks, was asked what it would take for his club to beat the Philadelphia 76ers.

"Maybe we just can't beat them," he said quietly.

Spencer Haywood, another Knicks forward, was not about to give up although his club is one loss away from elimination from the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"A couple of them might get sick," he suggested.

That isn't likely to happen before Sunday's fourth game of the best-of-seven quarter-final playoff series, which Philadelphia leads 3-0. A fifth game, if necessary, is listed for next Wednesday in Philadelphia.

If the first three games of the series are any indication, it shouldn't be necessary.

"When it comes to awesome talent, the 76ers have it," said Knicks Coach Willis Reed, whose club played well but was soundly beaten 137-126 Thursday night.

New York shut down Philadelphia's running game, which had produced an awesome 48 fast-break baskets in the series opener. So the Sixers unveiled their long-range bombers and hit 59 percent of their shots—many from beyond 20 feet.

The main gunner was reserve guard Lloyd Free, who singlehandedly took command of the final period with his high-arching "rainbow" jumpers from 20-25 feet. The Knicks trailed 103-93 going into the fourth quarter, but Free then scored 18 of his 29 points to keep Philadelphia's lead in double figures the rest of the way.

"I want to prove I can be an all-star in this league, even coming off the bench," said Free, who has nicknamed himself "All-World" and wears a gold chain saying "World" around his neck.

Free says he doesn't really mind being the third guard behind all-star Doug Collins and playmaker Henry Bibby. "I realize I'm not going to start on this team unless someone gets hurt, but that's okay. I can still play my game."

Free's game is shooting as soon as he can and as often as he can, although he says he's tried to restrain himself recently.

"I've been playing a controled kind of game, not even looking to score," he said. "But today Darryl (Dawkins, the Sixers' reserve center) said he'd set some picks for me and told me to go ahead and shoot.

"Those are my shots," he said of the rainbows from the head of the key. "I know I can hit them, so I take them."

Free hit 10 of 16, a remarkable figure considering the distance. His teammates kept pace: George McGinnis was 10 for 17 for 29 points, Julius Erving was 12 for 19 for 28 points and Doug Collins was 10 for 18 for 21 points.

That more than offset a 29-point effort by New York's Bob McAdoo, who emerged from his scoring slump, and a 20-point game by Haywood. Guard Earl Monroe was poked in the eye twice and limited to seven points in 20 minutes.

The Knicks hit 48 percent of their shots, but never challenged after the first half.

"It seems they adjusted their offense from the first two games, but not their defense," said Erving. "And defense is the thing. You have to come out and stop us. We're not going to mess around and beat ourselves, that's for sure."

"In a loose, shoot-out game like tonight, we're as good as anybody in the league," agreed Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham. "The pace was up and down and there was a lot of 1-on-1, and we have the talent for that."

Cunningham then said he was giving his club today off.

"After winning three in a row, there's no point in practicing," he reasoned.

BILL WALTON, Portland Trail Blazers' star who has been out of action since February, finally resumed workouts Tuesday and is expected to start against Seattle tonight with the Blazers trailing in the NBA series, 0-1.

Lynn is back and slugging

BOSTON (AP) — Fred Lynn, the Boston Red Sox' slugging center fielder, is healthy again, terrorizing American League pitchers in the fashion that earned him the American League's most valuable player and rookie of the year awards in 1975.

Lynn, a former Southern California star who spent just 1½ years in the minors, won a starting job in spring training three years ago and led the Red Sox to the pennant with a .331 average, 21 homers, a league-leading 47 doubles and 105 runs batted in.

He "slipped" to .314, 10 homers and 65 RBI as a sophomore in 1976. Then, although on the disabled list for the first month because of a severe ankle injury last year, he ignored season-long pain. His average dropped to .260, but he had 18 homers and 76 RBI.

"I did a lot of work during the winter to get the ankle in shape again and, aside from a few minor things, I'm feeling okay now," Lynn said Thursday after drilling his third homer and three singles, helping the Red Sox to a seventh consecutive victory in a 10-4 romp over the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I DON'T see any reason why I can't hit .300 or better if I'm healthy," Lynn said. "I know I can hit and I'm surrounded by good hitters on this ball club. This is the best start (8-3) since I've been here, and that's very important. Everybody's swinging the bat.

"I just hope we can keep up the pace, not go into a slump. It's not really a problem if one or two guys go into a slump, I guess, but we have to avoid team slumps like we had a couple of times last year.

"We know we can win. It's important that we keep up the pace. Being where we are now (just percentage points behind Detroit for the AL East lead) beats being .500."

Boston Manager Don Zimmer, who played 12 years

IT TOOK 16 YEARS TO DEVELOP THIS PICTURE

Our children are the future of Texas and we can't neglect them any longer.

The Texas school system ranks in the lowest third in the nation in many vital areas.

If our children are to compete on an equal basis with students in other parts of the country we must improve our educational system.

If we want our children to be able to realize their dreams, hopes and aspirations, we must give them the tools with which to build their future.

As former Chairman of the Southern Methodist University Board of Governors, I know how to make education in Texas one of the best in the nation.

We must prepare our children today for the future we all face tomorrow.

Today. For Tomorrow!

Monday swinging one of hottest bats in NL

By TOM HARRIGAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "You can tell everybody the back's all right, but they want to see you moving around," says Rick Monday, the latest success of the Los Angeles Dodger rehabilitation program.

To see Monday moving around, look at the National League's list of hitting leaders. The center fielder had severe back spasms for more than three months of the 1977 campaign, but has recovered to be one of the hottest hitters in baseball early this season.

Other Dodgers who have come back to stardom after serious injuries in recent years were pitcher Tommy John and outfielder Dusty Baker.

John became a 20-game winner after surgery to literally rebuild the muscles in his pitching arm. Baker had a serious knee injury prior to a big season in 1977.

"THE FANS had seen Tommy and Dusty come back. It was a help perhaps, keeping them from getting down on me," Monday said.

"The medical staff that the Dodgers have is second to none, in my estimation. They're the best, and they're also available," Monday added.

To demonstrate his return to strength, Monday is the first first major league baseball player to reach six home runs this season. He hit two homers as the defending National League baseball champions beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-4 Wednesday night. He also is leading the National League in runs batted in with 15, and is batting .425.

"People might think I was the biggest con artist going if I said everything was all right, but was hitting .137," Monday said before Thursday night's game against Houston.

Monday said he was a part-time player for a long time in 1977.

"I would play one or three innings, or take a few swings in the batting cage, and WHOMP — the spasms hit me again."

National League pitchers might not be convinced he's recovered. Hurlers sometimes challenge a batter if they think he might be below par.

"Most of the pitchers are still waiting to see if I'm for real. Let 'em sleep. I get up early," Monday said.

"PEOPLE DON'T think you're really injured," Dodger teammate Baker added, as Monday was talking about fan reaction to his injury last year. Baker went through a nearly identical injury problem when he first came to the Dodgers from Atlanta in 1976 and immediately tore ligaments in his knee.

It was Baker's health that worried Dodger fans last spring. He also showed them, hitting with 30 home runs and driving in 86. With Baker, Ron Cey, Steve Garvey and Reggie Smith, the Dodgers became the first team in baseball history with four players hitting 30 or more homers.

It might have been five in the 30 club if Monday had a healthy season. He had 15 homers and 48 RBIs with a .230 batting average, more than 35 points below his average in 10 previous major league seasons.

Monday had 26 and 32 homer seasons among his five years with the Chicago Cubs, in a park that home run hitters relish. In five previous seasons with the Kansas City and Oakland A's he averaged 17 homers a year.

Lynn is back

"Some people may think he had a bad year in 1977, but I think he had a pretty good year considering he played on one leg," Zimmer said. "Now, though, he looks like the Lynn of old, doing everything at bat and in the field.

"He reminds me of Stan Musial in a way. He goes to all fields like Musial did. He hits the ball over, uses all fields.

"Can he hit .350? I don't like to put pressure on any of my players, but I'll say he's got the potential to do something like that."

Cardinals fight for Otis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals were expected to file a formal protest today over the signing of a five-year contract with the Washington Redskins by fullback Jim Otis.

The protest, The Associated Press learned, will be a grievance over terms of a pay package put together to keep the Redskins from forfeiting a draft choice under terms of the National Football League's new collective bargaining agreement.

A source in Washington told The AP that Otis, one of 12 Cardinals to play out their option years last fall, has agreed to a contract paying him a total $299,000.

But while the yearly average of the total is just under the $60,000 for which St. Louis would receive a third-round draft choice as compensation, it was learned that the terms were structured to include pay of $30,000 in 1981 and 1982 — both below what will be NFL minimums.

WANTED
Need dependable, semi retired couple to manage 50 unit apartment, husband must be able to do minor plumbing, heating, painting, air conditioning. $500 per month, plus 2 bedroom apartment. Bills paid. Reply by letter giving experience, age, references and telephone number. Starting May 1. Reply to Box A 15 c/o Reporter Telegram, P.O. Box 1650 Midland, Texas 79702.

$1200.00 Per Month Plus
Manager Trainee needed to fill $50,000.00 per year position. It normally takes only 2 to 3 years to become a manager. $14,400.00 is your guaranteed annual salary while you learn; however, for those who survive, the first year average compensation is $20,100.00 due to additional sales commissions. 90 to 95% of your time will be in sales during the 2 to 3 year training period.
The qualifications are tough-please don't apply unless you meet each and every qualification.
1. Impeccable integrity and references.
2. 4 year degree from accredited college or high school diploma coupled with 2 years of heavy, retail manager experience.
3. Willing to work over (60) hours per week (no Sunday or out of town work.)
4. Willing to take polygraph test.
5. Willing and capable of taking instructions.
6. Not have any prior heavy sales experience such as Real Estate, Automobile, Mobile Homes, Vacuum Cleaners or Etc.
We have an extraordinary benefit plan including a retirement profit sharing plan. We don't list with employment agencies and request they don't refer "candidates" to us.

New wells potential; Sterling gets stepout

New producers have been potentialed in Schleicher, Sutton and Eddy counties, and a stepout to production has been spotted in Sterling County.

SCHLEICHER WELL

HNG Oil Co. of Midland completed its No. 1-104 Johnson 1⅜ miles southeast of the Henry Speck (Canyon) field of Schleicher Countyl, four miles southeast of Eldorado. It also is 2½ miles southwest of the Eldorado (Canyon) pool.

Operator reported a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1,470,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Production is from the pay behind casing perforations from 6,525 to 6,528 feet. The zone had been fractured withd 14,000 gallons.

Total depth is 6,861 feet and 4½-inch casing is set at 6,822 feet. The plugged back depth is 6,806 feet.

SUTTON WELL

ddddAmoco Production Co. No. 2-K Edwin S. Mayer Jr. has been completed to extend the Sawyer (Canyon) field of Sutton County one mile west.

The well potentialed for a calculated, absolute open flow of 300,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 6,420 to 6,666 feet. The pay was acidized with 3,000 gallons and fractured with 50,000 gallons.

Location is 1,596 feet from north and 1,380 feet from east lines of section 14, block D, GC&SF survey.

EDDY WELL

Yates Petroleum Corp. No. 2-6 Yates has been completed one-mile east of the Atoka, West (Morrow) area of Eddy County, N. M., 3.5 miles northwest of Dayton.

It completed for a calculated, absolute open flow of 1,260,000 cubic feet of gas per day, natural, through perforations from 8,488 to 8,520 feet.

Total depth is 8,730 feet and 5½-inch casing is set at 8,716 feet. Plugged back depth is 8,646 feet.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 6-18s-26e.

STERLING TRY

HMH Operators of Midland spotted its No. 2 Sara Bade Estate ⅜ mile southeast of the upper Cisco discovery of gthe Parochial-Bade multipay field of Sterling County, 12 miles west of Sterling City.

The 8,000-foot project is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 16, block 22, H&TC survey.

Project spotted

Holly Energy, Inc., No. 1 Talbert will be drilled 4,000 feet southeast of the depleted discovery of the Hokit, Northwest (lower Wolfcamp gas) field in Pecos County.

The 7,200-foot test is 2,000 feet from north and west lines of section 1, block 206, Mary Timmons survey, and eight miles southwest of Bakersfield.

Explorers slated, well potentials

Two wildcat operations have been announced for Stonewall County, another has been spotted in Nolan County and a Devonian well has been completed in Yoakum County.

Dow Chemical Co. No. 1 Bailey Clark is to be drilled as a 6,700-foot wildcat in Stonewall County, six miles southwest of Aspermont.

Drillsite is 560 feet from north and 1,880 feet from west lines of section 232, block D, H&TC survey and three miles southwest of the Fuzz (Strawn) field.

RE-ENTRY TRY

Cleary Petroleum Corp. has announced plans to re-enter its No. 1-135 Bryson, 6,236-foot failure in Stonewall County, and cleanout to 4,600 feet for wildcat tests.

The project is in the Schick field area and 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 135, block D, H&TC survey and three miles north of Aspermont.

NOLAN WILDCAT

A 7,200-foot wildcat will be drilled one mile east of Maryneal in Nolan County. It is Wintershall Oil & Gas Co. of Houston No. 1 John Adams.

The explorer is 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 172, block 1-A, H&TC survey and 2¼ miles north of the Group, West (Strawn) field. Elevation at ground level is 2,571 feet.

YOAKUM WELL

J. C. Williamson and R. E. Williamson of Midland have reported potential test for their No. 1-105 Edwards, new well 1¼ miles southwest of the lone producer in the Fields (Devonian) field of Northwest Yoakum County.

The well finaled for a daily flow of 206 barrels of oil per day, through an 11/64-inch choke and from open hole at 11,914-11,943 feet.

Gravity of the oil is 43 degrees and the gas-oil ratio is too small to measure.

Total depth is 11,943 feet.

The well is 660 feet from south and 990 feet from west lines of section 105, block D, J. H. Gibson survey, abstract 116, 15 miles northwest of Plains.

STERLING OILER

Amarex Inc. of Oklahoma City, Okla., has reported completion of its No. 2 Welch in the Jameson, Southwest (Strawn oil) area of Sterling County.

The well, 1/2 mile east of production, was finaled for a daily flowing potential of 81 barrels of 40-gravity oil, through a ¼-inch choke and perforations from 7,268 to 7,316 feet. The pay was acidized with 1;500 gallons and fractured with 56,000 gallons.

The oiler is 1,984 feet from north and 1,011 feet from west lines of section 168, block 2, H&TC survey and 10 miles northeast of Sterling City.

Total depth is 7,420 feet and 4½-inch casing is set at 7,417 feet.

TOM GREEN TEST

Simpson-Mann Oil Producers of San Angelo No. 2 Jones is to be drilled as a 1,200-foot project ½ mile north of production in the Dove Creek, East (Clear Fork 1075) field of Tom Green County, six miles southwest of Knickerbocker.

The project is 2,318 feet from north and 1,513 feet from east lines of section 22, block 20, H&TC survey.

Huge crowd expected for D&D club meeting

More than 500 persons are expected to be on hand Saturday night for the Desk & Derrick Club's Industry Appreciation Night Banquet in the Midland Hilton.

The banquet is one of the major events of the Desk and Derrick Clubs Region V annual meeting which gets underway tonight with a "Welcome Aboard" meeting and tour of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library & Hall of Fame.

Registration began this morning and will continue to 7 p. m. Signups will resume at 7 a. m. Saturday at the Midland Hilton.

R. B. "Buddy" Hyde of Houston, president of Dresser Industries Oilfield Products Group will be the banquet speaker.

Hyde began his career with Dresser as a sales and service engineer for the old Magnet Cove Barium Corp. (Magcobar) in 1949 following his graduation from Texas A&M Univerity with a degree in Chemical Engineering.

He has served in the Magcobar organization in a variet of management positions—district manager in Utah and Oklahoma, chief service engineer, manager of engineering and marketing services and manager of the Research and Engineering Department.

In 1968, he was promoted to manager of U.S. and Canadian Operations, a position he held until 1969 when he was promoted to executive vice president. In June 1972, Hyde became president of the Oilfield Products Division and this year was named presided of the Oilfield Products Group.

The theme of the annual meeting is "Gala Cruise" on the U.S. Midland Hilton. The cruise will embark at 7 p.m. today at the museum.

The business session will be opened at 8:30 a. m. Saturday following a 7:30 President's Breakfast in the Midland Hilton.

Joyce O'Bannon, with American Quasar, is the general arrangements chairman for the meeting. She and William H. Collyns, editor of The Reporter-Telegram, will make welcoming remarks. They will be followed by Clarke Straughan, area manager of the Compton Corp. in Midland. He will speak on the "Oil and Gas Story," a television film being prepared for national showing on a major network. Straughn is on the board of directors of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and is a member of the West Texas Geological Society and the Permian Basin Landmen's Association.

The business session will continue until noon Saturday.

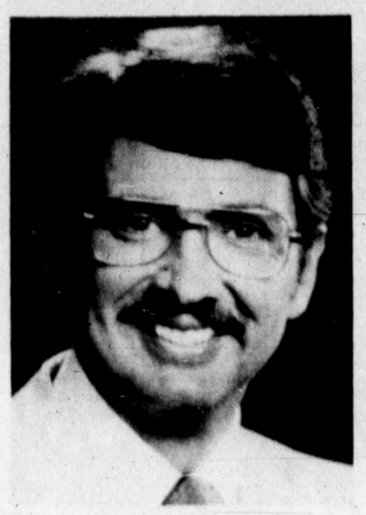

At 1:30 p. m., Dixie Lee, Association of Desk & Derrick Clubs president from Bartlesville, Okla.; Murrell Jones, ADDC first vice president of Borger, and Lilly Wright of Ponca City, Okla., ADDC past president, will form a panel for a Town Hall meeting. This event will continue to 2:30 p. m.

The banquet will begin at 7 p. m. Saturday.

The Sunday morning session will open in the Midland Hilton with Dr. Ray Bristol of the West Texas Pastorial Counseling Center as the guest speaker. The final business session will follow his address.

Deanna Wauhob of Shell Oil Co. is president of the Desk & Derrick Club, host for the meeting.

Cities in Region V include Abilene, Amarillo, Andrews, Big Spring, Borger, Breckenridge, Midland, Odessa, Pampa, Perryton, San Angelo and Wichita Falls in Texas and the New Mexico cities of Albuquerque, Artesia, Farmington, Hobbs and Roswell.

Deadline extended

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams told Texas Thursday that he will let the state seek an amendment to the deepwater port license offered previously to Seadock Inc.

The telegram to Bob Casey, chairman of the Texas Deepwater Port Authority, said the April 20 deadline would be extended to allow the state time for the amendment application.

Operators announce Basin oil gas work

A former Devonian well in the Halley field of Winkler County will be re-entered and tested for completion in the Strawn zone that produces in the Halley, East field.

The project is Shell Oil Co. No. 4-B Sealy-Smith, 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 91, block A, G&MMB&A survey and nine miles southeast of Wink. It will be tested above 10,470 feet.

BORDEN TEST

Lario Oil &Gas Co. No. 1 T. S. Conrad is a new 7,500-foot operation in the Gartner (Pennsylvanian reef oil) pool of Borden County, 3.5 miles northeast of Vincent.

It is 5/8 miles northeast of the only producer from that pay in the field and 467 feet from south and 2,173 feet from east lines of section 70, block 20, Lavaca Navigation Co. survey.

PECOS PROJECT

A dry hole in Pecos County will be re-entered and tested as a project in the Abell (Montoya) field.

The re-entry is Masten Oil Corp. No. 1 J. B. Cotten, 660 feet from northwest and 660 feet from southwest lines of section 10, block 3, H&TC survey, 28 miles northeast of Fort Stockton.

It is the former Coastal States Gas Producing Co. No. 1 Cotten, plugged and abandoned in 1974. It is 1,200 feet north of Abell (Montoya) production. The old total depth is 6,243 feet. It will be cleaned out to 4,920 feet.

EDDY PROJECT

Amoco Production Co. No. 1 Brady-Federal is a 9,800-foot field area project in Eddy County, N.M., six miles west of Carlsbad.

It is ½ mile northwest of Pennsylvanian production in the Hackberry Hills (Canyon) field and 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 1-22s-25e.

NEW POTENTIAL

H. B. Rhoads of Midland has filed a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 890,000 cubic feet of gas per day for his No. 1 Maxine Riely, Ellenburger detrital discovery in Sutton County, 24 miles northeast of Sonora.

The production is through perforations from 4,276 to 4,306 feet.

Earlier, the operator had reported a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 3.7 million cubic feet per day. That report was in error.

The discovery is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 22, block 5, TW&NG survey and one location southwest of the discovery well and lone producer of the Valliant (Ellenburger oil) pool.

GAS EXTENDER

Hytech Energy Corp. of Midland has completed its No. 2-87 Rocker B ⅝ mile northeast of production in the Ela Sugg (Wolfcamp) field of Irion County, 31 miles northeast of Big Lake.

The well finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 6,750,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 7,496 to 8,029 feet after a 2,000-gallon acid treatment and a 50,000-gallon fracture job.

UPTON TESTS

John L. Cox of Midland staked locations for two more projects in the Spraberry Trend Area field of Upton County, 14 miles north of Rankin.

His No. 1 Taylor will be drilled 1,320 feet from north and east lines of section 54, block Y, TCRR survey.

Cox No. 1 Church is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 29, block B, CCSD&RGNG survey.

Each of the projects will be drilled to 8,700 feet.

UPTON WELL

John L. Cox of Midland No. 1-B Neal is a new well in the Spraberry Trend Area Field of Upton County, 12 miles northeast of Rankin.

On 24-hour potential test it pumped 49 barrels of 38-gravity oil and 31 barrels of water, through perforations from 6,909 to 8,375 feet after a 30,000-gallon fracture treatment.

Total depth is 8,450 feet and 4½-inch casing is set at total depth.

Purchase plan told

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Charter Co. of Jacksonville has offered cash and securities to purchase a Texas oil refining company which is attempting to reorganize under federal bankruptcy laws, a Charter spokesman said Tuesday.

Commonwealth Oil Refining Co. of San Antonio, known as CORCO, reported when it filed a petition for reorganization on March 2 that it had lost money four of the past six years.

Charter, a holding company with interests in petroleum, communications, insurance and mortgage banking, had sales of about $1.5 billion last year, ranking 197th in size among the nation's industries.

The Charter spokesman said a merger with its subsidiary, Charter Oil Co., has been proposed to CORCO's board of directors. He said Charter would pay cash and securities to settle CORCO's $180 million in senior debt.

In addition to its oil refining operation, CORCO owns a petrochemical complex in Puerto Rico.

Seaport announced

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government-owned Petroleos Mexicanos will construct a Pacific coast deep seaport at Salina Cruz in the southern state of Oaxaca, general manager Jorge Diaz Serrano has announced.

Diaz Serrano said the port will take vessels of up to 250,000 tons.

France has problem

BREST, France (AP) — The Brittany coast of France has a new pollution problem — what to do with more than 13 million gallons of coagulating oil spilled by the tanker Amoco Cadiz and cleaned up from the beaches.

Supply Ministry officials here said Wednesday that the goo, much of it mixed with sand, salt water and seaweed, is held in hastily dug plastic-lined pits, railroad cars and tankers here.

SCRAM-LETS®

That Intriguing Word Game with a Chuckle

Edited by CLAY R. POLLAN

PONPIL

FOGNAL

According to a recent XBC news report, many high school graduates can't read or write. I didn't believe it until XBC displayed a connect-the-dots ——.

❷ PRINT NUMBERED LETTERS IN THESE SQUARES 1 2 3 4 5 6 7

❸ UNSCRAMBLE LETTERS TO GET ANSWER

SCRAM-LETS ANSWERS

Popiin -- Tempo -- Plaid -- Flagon -- DIPLOMA

According to a recent XBC news report, many high school graduates can't read or write. I didn't believe it until XBC displayed a connect-the-dots DIPLOMA.
