Nexus of area's '93: Abortion, oil top news stories

Some Midlanders might be tempted to call 1993 "The Year of the Ongoing Story."

There was no one major compelling news event that overshadowed all others. There was no Jessica McClure in the well. No Ku Klux Klan rally. No Clayton Williams seeking the governorship.

Instead, the top stories tended to be those that began quietly and slowly grew larger and larger with each passing day. A classic example is the Reporter-Telegram's No. 1 story of 1993 — Planned Parenthood's decision to add abortion services and the resulting controversy.

But there were others, too.

The onging oil-price saga — would the price rebound and, if so, when? — was another example, as was the special grand-jury report that stunned many local residents when it discussed in detail the problem of teen-age drinking and drug use in Midland.

But whether it was the abortion controversy or high winds that ripped through downtown Midland, 1993 was an eventful year. Following are the Top 10 stories compiled by the Reporter-Telegram editors.

1. Abortion controversy

It started out simple enough. Planned Parenthood of West Texas announced on Feb. 22 that it planned to add abortion services at its Midland clinic by year's end.

But things did not remain simple for long.

The conflict between local pro-life and pro-choice forces was to escalate into the year's biggest story. From the "It's a Baby, Ya'll" yard signs to a heavy dose of letters to the editor, everyone, it seemed, had an opinion on the subject.

But it didn't stop there.

There were candlelight vigils, news conferences on the courthouse

Golfers lead sports

The Midland Lee girls won the school's second state golf championship with two of the most incredible days of golf that the state tournament in Austin has ever witnessed. The team of Kami Fuller, Paula King, Kim Fisher, Heather Albright and Jennifer Dixon put together a state record two-day score of 297, but the championship came in a most bizarre way./1C

Of fires, floods

The Great Flood of '93 — with its death, destruction and distress that tested Midwest mettle in nine states — was named the top news story of the year in a survey of news executives by The Associated Press. Runner-up among the 300 respondents in the 57th annual survey was the apocalyptic image from a wind-swept Texas prairie — a botched raid of a religious cult, a 51-day standoff with a self-proclaimed Lamb of God and an inferno that left more than 80 dead. The Waco fire barely topped the No. 3 choice — the fledgling presidency of William Jefferson Clinton. The remainder of the Top 10 included, in descending order: Terrorism comes home to America with the World Trade Center bombing; the Somalia mercy mission turns horribly wrong; two bitter Mideast foes shake hands but peace remains elusive; a free trade agreement among the United States, Mexico and Canada; health care reforms; political crises in Russia; and the bleeding wound of Bosnia.

Rotten in Russia

MOSCOW — Goodbye to 1993 and good riddance to what was, for most Russians, a thoroughly rotten year. It was a year that left Russians numb with shock and disappointment, a year in which the birth rate sank and the death rate rose, a year of poverty and crime, a year in which almost nothing seemed to go right./5C

The year in TV

In many ways, 1993 was like every other year: too many reruns and commercials; too many good shows (meaning those you happen to like) getting zotzed; too many broken New Year's resolutions to cut back on your viewing.

NAFTA kicks in; cities vie

Texas anticipates business boost from pact

■ As of today, about half of all American exports to Mexico will enter duty-free. Tariffs on remaining goods will be eliminated over 15 years.

Associated Press

Today brings a moment many in Texas business have been anticipating for years — implementation of the tariff-lowering North American Free Trade Agreement.

While Jan. 1 brings some immediate changes, the benefits will best be seen over time. And Texas cities are jockeying to reap those long-term rewards.

"This is going to be a new and very important area to the Texas economy in the '90s," said Texas A&M University economist James Christian.

"This is not going to happen overnight. NAFTA's benefits may trickle at first before they cascade. But I think you're going to see these developments occur almost in an upward sloping straight line throughout the balance of the 1990s."

The trade agreement eliminates tariffs and other barriers to the movement of goods, services and investment among the United States, Canada and Mexico. As of today, about half of all American exports to Mexico will enter duty-free. Tariffs on the remaining goods will be eliminated over 15 years.

Some economists have suggested exports will be the key to a thriving Texas economy of the future. Texas' $18 billion in annual exports to Mexico is about 45 percent of the U.S. total, around $40 billion.

Initially, the spotlight may be on increased activity in the Rio Grande Valley. But Dallas, San Antonio and Houston also plan to take key roles.

David Dean, a Dallas attorney and chairman of NAFTA initiatives for the Greater Dallas Chamber of Commerce, said the Dallas-Fort Worth area is well-positioned geographically and has good infrastructure, including air, rail and road access. Dallas also is working

Year's events toss 10 faces in public eye

By Mitchell Landsberg

A farmer, a soldier, a child. They spent their year on far-flung continents, their paths never close to crossing. But happenstance — tragedy, disaster — threw them into the public eye in 1993. They were among the newsmakers of the year.

Others included two presidents, an attorney general, a foreign minister, a basketball player, a holy man and a manicurist. Here are their stories:

Sheik Omar Abdel-Radman

Bobbitt

In his cell at New York's Metropolitan Correctional Center, Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman has few visitors and abundant time for contemplation. Among his musings, he told reporters recently, is this:

"How can we conspire against America while the American people were very generous to us and they accepted us here? . . . How can we conspire on this nation while we are here enjoying their water and their food?"

It is a question that others might well ask. At this point, it is a question for the courts.

Sorry world: Apologies are rage around globe

By Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Who's sorry now? Just about everybody everywhere these days.

After years of silence, Japan, Russia, South Africa and the United States all apologized in 1993.

"Once it starts, every group with a grievance wants an apology," says Donald McHenry, a former ambassador to the United Nations and professor of diplomacy at Georgetown University.

■ Japan made its first official apologies this year for World War II, after decades of resistance.

■ Russia apologized for Soviet abuse of Japanese prisoners.

AP

■ South Africa's government apologized for apartheid.

■ And the United States told Hawaii it was sorry for overthrowing Queen Liliuokalani a century ago.

So what's an apology worth, especially one that comes years after the fact and is made to improve relations or gain some other political advantage?

Etiquette expert Judith Martin, author of the Miss Manners column and an expert on when to say you're sorry, says, "You wouldn't think it would be worth anything, either privately or in an international context. This is a very practical, bottom-line world.

"But the fact is, it makes an enormous difference."

Apologies validate the suffering of people who have been wronged, Martin says. "Satisfaction of the soul is a very deep human craving," she explains.

Japanese Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa's recent apologies for Japan's forcing tens of thousands of women to serve as prostitutes for its soldiers, and for the brutal occupation of its Asian neighbors, came only after years of official silence.

It was the first time Japan had fully

'93 losers heart-breakingly apparent, winners too thin

By Jerry Schwartz
Associated Press

It was not a good year for children.

A 2-year-old boy was abducted from a busy Liverpool shopping mall and killed by two 10-year-olds. Seven homeless boys were massacred on the streets of Rio de Janeiro. Three children died as a result of tainted hamburgers in Washington State.

At year's end, in Petaluma, Calif., there were tears for Polly Klaas, a little girl plucked from her own bed by a murderous intruder.

And kids were consumed in Waco by David Koresh's inferno.

"Do not do this to those people! This is not the way to end it!" cried FBI agent Byron Sage, as the first flames emerged.

Police investigates referee-rigging claim

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Police will investigate charges that soccer referees were told to rig the outcome of key games in Brazil, including qualifying rounds for the national championships.

Sergio Cabral Filho, a member of the state legislature, had pledged to fans a panel would be formed after a yearend recess.

"Fans of the Flamengo club (in Rio) alone number 20 million and they save hard-earned money to attend games," he said. "This public cannot be ripped off."

But the Rio Soccer Federation president, Eduardo Viana, lobbied successfully to delay the formation of the investigative panel, prompting police to get involved.

"I detest public opinion," Viana said. "The people could all be shot by machine guns, for all I care. ... I'm the son of a factory owner, the elite, and I'm a right winger."

Officers will examine how public funds subsidizing soccer were used and will question referees, State Police Chief Nilo Batista said Thursday at a news conference.

Referees earlier this month said the president of the Rio soccer federation instructed them to rig results of state championship games.

Another referee said he was instructed to guarantee a tie in a game so both teams would qualify for the national tournament's second division in 1994.

Wagner Canazaro, director of state soccer referees, was suspended three days ago by a sports court.

High wage earners, some retirees face tax increases in 1994

By Jim Luther
AP tax writer

WASHINGTON — High wage earners and better-off retirees are about to be hit with a new tax increase. But most workers with steady incomes could actually pay less in 1994 than they did this year.

Millions of low-income families are getting an expanded tax break that rewards them for staying off welfare. And taxpayers will pick up a smaller share of the tab for businesses' fabled "three-martini lunches."

These are among several tax changes that take effect on Jan. 1, most growing out of a plan that President Clinton and fellow Democrats pushed through Congress last August in an effort to cut the federal deficit by $500 billion over five years.

Other changes, which "index" elements of the tax system to prevent inflation from raising taxes, occur automatically each year under an earlier law. It is these changes that will reduce next year's tax burden for workers who earn the same as they did in 1993.

The well-to-do will pay the biggest share of the tax increase, but they will not be stung so badly as this year, when Congress raised their tax rates retroactively to cover all 1993 income.

About 1.2 million people whose wages or self-employment earnings exceed $135,000 will pay $6 billion a year more to finance Medicare hospital insurance. The old law applied the 1.45 percent tax (2.9 percent for self-employed) only to the first $135,000 earned in a year. The new law taxes all wages and earnings from self-employment.

Another major tax increase — about $5 billion a year — will be paid by the 5.5 million Social Security beneficiaries with the highest incomes. This will affect only retirees and disabled people who already pay some tax on a share of their benefits.

Starting Jan. 1, up to 85 percent of Social Security benefits are subject to income tax if the recipient's total income, including half the benefits, exceeds $34,000 for a single person or $44,000 for a couple.

Singles with total incomes between $25,000 and $34,000 and couples in the $32,000-to-$44,000 range will continue to be taxed on up to 50 percent of their Social Security.

The American Association of Retired Persons calculates, for example, that a single retiree who is paid $12,000 by Social Security next year and has other income totaling $30,000 will pay an extra $196 in tax. A couple with $20,000 Social Security and $40,000 other income would pay $400.

Most of the huge middle class need not worry about a federal income tax increase this year. The new law's only bite for most was a 4.3-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase, which went into effect Oct. 1 and has been partially offset by falling oil prices.

In fact, the Coopers & Lybrand accounting firm calculates that a typical family in the $50,000-a-year range will pay $143 less income tax in 1994 than in 1993. A $30,000-a-year single person could pay about $85 less.

That is because the personal exemption and standard deductions have been increased slightly and the tax brackets widened to tax more income at the lower rates. This is done each year to prevent taxpayers from being squeezed into a higher bracket simply because they received a cost-of-living raise to offset inflation.

Some other changes taking effect Jan. 1:

■ Social Security tax: The 6.2-percent tax will apply to the first $60,600 of wages, up from $57,600 in 1993.

■ Working poor: The earned-income credit, which can be worth up to $2,364 to a low-income working family, will be expanded.

More police officers lose lives in 1993

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventy-two police officers were killed by gunfire in 1993, more than half of all those who have died in the line of duty, the National Association of Chiefs of Police reported Friday.

The killings, based on preliminary figures for the year, add to 2,278 shooting deaths of law enforcement officers recorded by the association since it began maintaining records on line-of-duty deaths in 1960.

The association said it expects the 1993 fatality list of 139 law enforcement officers, including the 72 killed by firearms, to grow as final reports are received from the nation's 21,000 law enforcement agencies.

"Regretfully, we can expect that, when all this year's tragedies are tabulated, the total deaths for 1993 will exceed the 1992 figure and surpass the recent mark set in 1991," said Dennis R. Martin, the police association's president.

Final figures for 1992 showed 160 line-of-duty deaths, including 70 from gun shot wounds.

In 1991, there were 143 such deaths, and 75 officers were felled by gunfire.

FACES: 10 newsmakers who mattered in '93

is charged with leading at least 15 men who allegedly planned a series of bombings, kidnappings and murders. Most of the schemes were thwarted, but one — the Feb. 26 bombing of the World Trade Center in Manhattan — resulted in the deaths of six people and injuries to more than 1,000. It also shattered the notion that the United States was immune to terrorist attack.

Now Abdel-Rahman is being held without bond pending a trial in Federal Court. The sheik, who was acquitted in Egypt of charges stemming from the 1981 assassination of President Anwar Sadat, has been described by the U.S. State Department as the spiritual leader of a terrorist organization bent on installing an Islamic fundamentalist government in Egypt.

He denies it; his goal, he has said, is to demonstrate that Islam is not "a terrorist's religion."

Lorena Bobbitt

She was, hands down, the year's strangest celebrity. Lorena Bobbitt won fame — and courted it — after she sliced off her husband's penis with a kitchen knife in their Manassas, Va., apartment.

"I lifted the sheets and I cut it," she testified in November at the trial of her husband, John Bobbitt, on a charge of marital sexual assault.

Ms. Bobbitt became something of a cause celebre after the June 23 incident. She claimed that John Bobbitt had repeatedly raped her, and that the last of these rapes had sent her over the edge.

It was Thelma and Louise wrapped into one petite, 24-year-old package, a victim of domestic violence who had struck a blow — or a slice — for women everywhere. If she was not quite the toast of the town, she was at least the object of sympathy and curiosity. She posed in a bathing suit for Vanity Fair and was interviewed by television's Barbara Walters. There was talk about a television movie.

But she was unable to persuade a jury that she was a victim, not just an assailant. Her husband was acquitted; she still faces a January trial on a charge of malicious wounding.

And John Bobbitt, whose penis was reattached, has said he forgives her. Still, he conceded, "it would take a lot to get us back together."

Bill Clinton

Bill Clinton's 1993 was like a trip to the Grand Canyon. It was a long way down, and a long, hard way back up.

There was a sense of excitement and vitality in the air when Clinton was sworn in on Jan. 20 as the nation's 42nd president. Six months later, he was being written off as a failure — "The Incredible Shrinking Presidency," Time magazine scoffed; "Bumblin' Bill," the New York Daily News blared.

Clinton and his administration looked indecisive and hesitant overseas in Bosnia, Somalia amd Haiti, at home in appointments such as Zoe Baird, Kimba Wood and Lani Guinier.

But he plugged along, and what stands out in retrospect is Clinton's doggedness, his ability to shrug off failure and move on, just as he had in the Democratic primary campaign the year before. Only one event, the suicide of his close friend and White House counselor Vincent Foster Jr., really seemed to shake him. "There are a lot of things that we're not in control of, and a lot of mysteries that we don't understand," Clinton said.

Michael Durant

He was sent to Somalia to save lives, but somewhere along the way, Michael Durant saw that notion turned on its head. Durant, an Army helicopter pilot, spent his last days in Mogadishu hoping desperately that his own life would be spared.

The 32-year-old from Clarksville, Tenn., was captured on Oct. 3 during a furious battle with the forces of Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid. Eighteen Americans died, and television cameras captured scenes of cheering, dancing Somalis dragging one American's lifeless body through the streets.

That scene, and television footage of a battered Durant being held captive, helped reverse American public opinion — and policy — toward Somalia, where the United States had a led a U.N. mission to end a devastating famine.

Irma Hadzimuratovic

Irma Hadzimuratovic's achievement in 1993 was giving a human face to the war in Bosnia. It very nearly cost her her life.

Irma, then 5, was wounded on July 30 by shrapnel from Serbian shelling that pierced her spine and abdomen. The wounds left her paralyzed and critically ill.

Doctors in Sarajevo lacked the facilities to treat her properly, and complained that U.N. delays kept them from sending her for care elsewhere. Without it, they said, she would soon die.

With time running out, the doctors brought her case to the attention of reporters, who brought her plight to the world's attention. Irma offered graphic evidence of what was at stake in the former Yugoslavia. What was at stake was Irma's life, and the lives of children like her.

With international indignation mounting, British Prime Minister John Major arranged to have her flown to London. In a hospital there, she recovered from meningitis, but remains paralyzed from her spinal injuries and cannot breathe without a ventilator.

Her outlook, like that of her shattered homeland, remains clouded.

Floyd "Shorty" Hutson

In a lifetime of farming alongside the Mississippi River, Floyd "Shorty" Hutson had seen it all. He had seen bad weather and he had seen floods, but nothing in his experience — nor in the experience of his father or his grandfather, who also farmed this land — could have prepared him for what happened last summer.

"Act-of-God stuff" is how Hutson describes it.

After a wet fall and a snowy winter, it had rained hard through April, through May, through June. It rained through July. By the middle of that month, Shorty Hutson was living on an island.

Shorty and his wife, Kay, live on 225 acres of land near Niota, Ill., which sits along the Mississippi not far north of Hannibal, Mo. In the middle of the land is the family homestead, surrounded by the dikes Hutson had built over the years. The dikes had always held before, and they did again this year, with help of 10,000 sandbags and 21 pumps, the latter steadily pouring seepage back into the river.

Michael Jordan

Was there anything Michael Jordan couldn't do? He could put a basketball in a basket in ways that hadn't been conceived. He could thread his way through a brick wall and score on a whim. He could fly.

And then, on Oct. 6, at the pinnacle of his career, he did the one thing no one expected. He packed his Air Jordans and walked away. "I have achieved a lot in my short career. I just feel I don't have anything else to prove," he said in announcing his retirement from the Chicago Bulls.

Nothing to prove and, perhaps, no one to prove it to. The man that Jordan considered his greatest influence and closest friend — his father, James Jordan — had been shot and killed by roadside bandits in North Carolina in late July, and Michael Jordan took it hard.

Janet Reno

This was a defining moment of 1993: Attorney General Janet Reno at the podium, her expression grim, her bearing resolute, taking full responsibility for government action that led — directly or indirectly — to the deaths of 87 cultists near Waco.

"I don't do spin stuff and I'm not distancing anybody from anything. I'm telling you exactly what happened," Ms. Reno said.

The attorney general would later be criticized by some people for failing to carefully consider the FBI's plans for tear-gassing the Branch Davidian compound. But a government investigation absolved her of blame for the fiery holocaust at the ranch where cult leader David Koresh and his disciples were sequestered.

And somewhere along the way, Ms. Reno became a star.

to establish the International Dispute Resolution Center.

The Port of Houston wants to increase already strong Mexican shipping. The Greater Houston Partnership is helping sponsor a NAFTA expo in Houston in February.

And San Antonio intends to build on its location and centuries-old ties with Mexico. "We're positioning San Antonio as NAFTA City, U.S.A.," Tom Frost, chairman of the San Antonio-based bank holding company CullenFrost Bankers Inc., told The Dallas Morning News.

Christian and John Hockenyos, a principal at Texas Perspectives Inc., an economic consulting and publishing firm in Austin, said they believe the benefits will be felt all all along the I-35 corridor, from Dallas-Fort Worth south through Laredo and down to Monterrey, Mexico.

At least 180,000 manufacturing jobs will be created in Texas as a result of increased trade with Mexico over the next 10 years, Hockenyos said. Firms also will get new opportunities to export professional services, he said.

Hockenyos said the import of cheaper goods also could lower prices for U.S. and Texas consumers.

"We think Texas is a big, big winner," he said.

From trucking to waste disposal, Texas companies are entering the Mexican market.

Dallas-based Southland Corp., which owns the 7-Eleven convenience store chain, and Plano's J.C. Penney already are building stores in Mexico.

Paletas Manhattan bought the exclusive rights to sell Blue Bell in Mexico three years ago.

SORRY: Apologies become rage in foreign affairs worldwide

(From 1A)

acknowledged its wartime role even to its own people.

"I was deeply impressed by the prime minister's frank attitude, which past Japanese prime ministers have not had," South Korean President Kim Young-sam said. "We must open a new era."

It was important for the victims that Japan finally took moral responsibility for its brutality, says Charles Doran, professor of international relations at Johns Hopkins University's School for Advanced International Studies.

"If people have been wronged," he said, "at the very least they want to have this recorded as a fact."

But apologies are rarely made to make people feel better, at least in the hard-boiled, Realpolitik world of foreign policy.

Apologizing makes sense only when a past incident gets in the way of current relations, some analysts say. Every "sorry" has an ulterior motive.

Japan wants to improve its political and economic relations with the rest of Asia. Russia is looking for full acceptance into the international community. South Africa hopes to minimize the backlash when its black majority takes power.

And the federal government's apology to Hawaii?

"Personally, I'm looking at this as a new beginning for the Hawaiian spirit," said Sen. Daniel K. Akaka, who sponsored the bill.

Perhaps because Japan and the United States already have robust economic and political relations, they have never apologized to each other for Pearl Harbor or Hiroshima, though both countries have made noises of regret.

Tokyo's relations with its Asian neighbors, on the other hand, have been plagued by fears of Japanese expansionism and bitterness over past brutality.

Apologizing carries tremendous cultural weight in Japan, says John Curtis Perry, a Japan specialist at Tufts University.

"The Japanese love apologies," he said. "When you apologize it's very wrong for the recipient not to accept."

In the end, though, actions speak louder than apologies. Regrets over apartheid would be meaningless without the dismantling of South Africa's racist system, and Japan's apologies will mean less to its neighbors than its military and economic policies.

YEAR: We must list children among the biggest losers of 1993

(From 1A)

But 51 days after the standoff began with an inept raid and the deaths of four federal agents, this is exactly how it ended — with an apocalypse, ignited by a messianic madman. The Branch Davidian compound was in ashes, and Koresh and more than 80 adherents were dead.

Among them: at least 17 children.

So we must list children among the losers of 1993, a year when the losers were heart-breakingly apparent and winners were harder to come by.

The victims were innumerable — six Long Island Rail Road commuters, gunned down by a man with a lethal chip on his shoulder; four shot dead in an Oxnard, Calif., unemployment office; eight foreign visitors to Florida; abortionist Dr. David Gunn, shot by an abortion opponent.

In Somalia, Marine Pfc. Domingo Arroyo, 21, was the first to die in a mercy mission that went terribly wrong; in early October, Americans watched in revulsion as another U.S. soldier's body was mutilated and dragged through the streets of Mogadishu. Enough, President Clinton said — we're leaving.

We didn't even go to the former Yugoslavia. Instead, the United States and other powers sent ultimatums and humanitarian aid, and the death toll rose to more than 200,000 men, women and children, and the misery was unending.

"Boredom! Shootings!!! Shells!!! People being killed!!! Desperation!! Starving!! Misery!! Terror!!! This is my life, the life of an innocent 11-year-old schoolgirl," wrote Zlata Filipovic, in a diary published in 1993.

For an instant — at 12:18 p.m. Friday, Feb. 26 — international terror visited the United States. At that moment, a bomb planted in a Ford Econoline van ripped through Level 2 of the World Trade Center's parking garage, leaving a 200-foot-by-100-foot crater.

Six people died and 1,000 others were injured. Thousands struggled to find their way down as many as 100 floors, though smoke and darkness.

Seventeen kindergarteners from P.S. 95 in Brooklyn and their teacher, Anne-Marie Tesoriero, were stuck in an elevator for five hours. They whiled away the time by singing the "Barney" theme song: "I love you, you love me . . ."

Within days, the arrests began — Muslim fundamentalists, allegedly led by a blind cleric, Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman. Authorities alleged a conspiracy to murder and kidnap and to bomb other New York landmarks.

Somehow, the arrests made Americans feel more vulnerable, not safer. Had the terrorist genie been let out of the bottle on these shores?

This was the nation that Bill Clinton had inherited barely a month before.

Clinton was neither a winner not a loser in 1993 — or rather, he was both.

Inaugurated on a sun-dappled Washington day — his 14-minute speech a remarkable feat for a man who tends to use 10 words where three might do — he immediately fell into a series of misfortunes.

A promise to admit gays to the military ran into a political buzzsaw, transforming it to a policy of "don't ask, don't tell" and satisfying nearly nobody. Two successive choices for attorney general, Zoe Baird and Kimba Wood, were caught up in controversies over aliens they employed in their households.

Congress tossed aside his economic stimulus package; a fancy haircut on the Los Angeles Airport tarmac brought derision; he dropped Lani Guinier, his nominee for assistant attorney general for civil rights. And his popularity rating fell to 36 percent, a record low for a new president.

But then . . .

His ultimate choice for attorney general, Janet Reno, could have been destroyed by the Waco fiasco, but emerged a hero by accepting responsibility. His budget passed. His Supreme Court nominee, Ruth Bader Ginsberg, won almost unanimous applause. He won the fight over the North American Free Trade Agreement, with a little help from Al Gore and Ross Perot. At long last, the Brady bill became law.

The economy didn't catch fire — in recent months alone, companies like Philip Morris (14,000 jobs) and Xerox (10,000 jobs) announced cutbacks — but low interest rates kept the recovery going.

And Clinton drew strength from his wife. Hillary Rodham Clinton revolutionized the concept of first lady. Sure, she planned the White House redecoration. But she also quarterbacked the administration's most important project — a health care proposal breathtaking in its complexity and ambition.

It was in Clinton's backyard that Yasser Arafat and Yitzhak Rabin shook hands, signing an accord in which the Palestinians renounced warfare against Israel and the Israelis promised autonomy for the Palestinians.

"Enough of blood and tears. Enough," Rabin said.

Of course, it wasn't so simple — violence escalated, wrangling persists.

But at least war is something a leader can do something about, unlike accidents, such as the derailment of Amtrak's Sunset Limited into an Alabama bayou, killing 47 people; unlike natural disasters, such as the Southern California fires that burned 200,000 acres and 1,000 homes, or the earthquake that killed nearly 10,000 people in India.

And unlike the flooding that inundated the Upper Mississippi Basin. More than 40 people died, tens of thousands were forced from their homes, millions of acres of prime farming soil were washed away. The water covered 17 million acres, an area roughly twice the size of New Jersey.

Some called it a once-in-500-years flood — and it seemed to last 500 years.

"We just can't take it anymore," said Cristina Hein, a Des Moines computer operator. And Bill Clinton hugged her. "Hang in there," he said.

There were heroes amid the flood waters — neighbors and volunteers from far away and even prisoners who loaded or piled sandbags, or helped clean up.

But in 1993, these uplifting stories were often lost amid the dreck.

Michael Jackson, accused of molesting boys, checked into drug rehab; three TV movies retold the story of Amy Fisher and Joey Buttafuoco; Heidi Fleiss, the Hollywood madam, became a celebrity (for 14 minutes); a video game, Mortal Kombat, ended with the victor ripping the heart out of the vanquished.

Prince Charles and Diana were exposed in embarrassing taped conversations; Howard Stern turned his rant into a best seller; MTV's Beavis and Butt-Head set new standards for moronity; a group of California boys, the Spur Posse, was accused of keeping score of how often they scored with girls; with the slice of a knife, Lorena and John Bobbitt made domestic and medical history; Jack Kevorkian continues to made another kind of medical history.

Meanwhile, real history marched on.

In Russia, Boris Yeltsin battled hard-liners. South Africa continued down the road to democracy. Japan struggled with a limping economy, and voted out the incumbents of nearly four decades. Italy was ripped by scandal, and shocked by the bombing of its great museum, the Uffizi. Colombia terminated drug lord Pablo Escobar.

And in the Midwest, a long battle for a little girl came to an end. Jan and Roberta DeBoer wanted to adopt the 29-month-old girl they called Jessica; Dan and Cara Schmidt, her birth parents, wanted her back, though Cara had once renounced her rights to her daughter.

The Schmidts won. The last time we saw Jessica, she was sitting in a car seat in the back of a van, wrested from one set of parents to another.

Statistics reveal other side of 1993 business

By Stefan Fatsis
AP business writer

NEW YORK — "A few honest men are better than numbers," Oliver Cromwell wrote in 1643. Here it is 350 years later and there's still a dearth of the first and a surplus of the second.

The British revolutionary's feelings notwithstanding, what follows is an unscientific and arbitrary — but, naturally, revealing — look at some of the mind-numbing numbers that shaped high finance and commerce in 1993:

I'VE BEEN MOVED — OUT: Give or take a technician or two hundred, International Business Machines Corp. employed 302,000 people at the end of 1992. Twelve months, one chairman and several billion dollars in losses later, the world's biggest computer company employs 255,000. That works out to 128.767 departures a day in the past year.

SLIP-SLIDING AWAY: It wasn't a great year for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which pulled a Nero, fiddling as Rome burned. With a global glut of oil already pushing prices downward, the cartel refused to cut back production to meet demand. Crude oil prices sank further, from $19.59 per barrel at the end of 1992 to $14.17 on Thursday, the last day of trading in 1993.

PUMP ME UP: Consumers only wish they saw some of the benefits from the lower crude prices. The American Automobile Association says one gallon of self-serve regular unleaded gasoline cost $1.103 in late December 1992, barely higher than $1.091 in the group's most recent survey.

CALL YOUR BANKER...: 1993 was a year to refinance the mortgage; rates fell to 25-year lows. The average 30-year fixed-rate mortgage was 7.20 percent this past week, compared with 8.14 percent in the last week of December 1992. In mid-October, the rate bottomed at a checkbook-smacking 6.74 percent.

...AND YOUR BROKER: Once again, stock prices climbed to record levels, but this time with little of the enthusiasm you'd expect from a bull market. The Dow Jones average of 30 big stocks ended Thursday at 3,775.88. It finished 1992 at 3,301.11. A broader measure, the Standard & Poor's 500 index closed Thursday at 468.64, up from 435.71 on Dec. 31, 1992.

The biggest growth on the New York Stock Exchange belonged to Intelogic Trace, which rose about 670 percent from 47 cents a share to $3.62½.

BONDS AWAY: What goes up in the stock market comes down in bond yields. The Treasury market rallied too, sending yields on 30-year government bonds tumbling to 6.34 percent from 7.39 percent. Yield on three-month Treasury bills fell to 3.03 percent from 3.15 percent.

THE ONLY INFLATION WAS GRADE INFLATION: The consumer price index was 2.9 percent in 1992, 2.8 percent in the first 11 months of 1993.

SCHOOL DAZE: If you want to learn to trade those bonds, run the company that trades them, or the one that makes the paper on which the bonds are printed, then the Harvard Business School might be the place for you. Bring your credit card. Tuition for the 1993-94 school year was $19,750, up from $18,500 the previous year. Total first-year expenses for a single student? $36,270 for the current school year, up from $34,640.

Molestation case heats up for Texas man

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A bond reduction hearing has been set for Monday for a Texas man police say has admitted attempting to abduct an 11-year-old girl in St. Louis County and molesting children in other states.

St. Louis County Prosecuting Attorney Robert P. McCulloch said Gary Stufflebean of Spring confessed during an 11-hour interrogation that began the night of Dec. 16 when he surrendered.

"He said there'd been several over a number of years," McCulloch said Thursday. "I don't really know that he explained it or rationalized it."

Stufflebean, 37, didn't supply dates or times, so police in as many as a dozen states are scurrying to find if they can link their unsolved sex abuse cases to him.

Police in Minnesota, for example, have sent police here a composite drawing of their suspect, hoping it resembles Stufflebean. Some officers said they don't think it does.

Prosecutors plan to present Stufflebean's confession at Monday's hearing that was requested by Stufflebean's attorney, Charles M. Shaw. Stufflebean is being held on $500,000 bond. He is accused of attempted kidnapping and sexual abuse in an attack Nov. 8 on an 11-year-old Maryland Heights girl.

Police said Thursday that Stufflebean was still a suspect in the killings of Angie Housman and Cassidy Senter, both of north St. Louis County. Angie, 9, was abducted after getting off a school bus near her home in St. Ann on Nov. 18. Her body was found nine days later at the Busch Wildlife Area in St. Charles County. Cassidy, 10, was abducted on Dec. 1 a few blocks from her home near Bridgeton. Her body was found on Dec. 9 at a vacant inner city lot.

Authorities tried to debunk a voice stress test that Stufflebean took to try to clear himself as a suspect in the slayings. "I doubt it was done properly," Florissant Police Chief Robert Lowery Sr., head of the Major Case Squad, said.

Stufflebean passed the test, proving he was innocent of the killings, Shaw said.

St. Louis County Police Maj. Jerry Adams, commander of the task force hunting the child killer or killers, said officers had gone to other states to check on tips about Stufflebean.

Shaw said police "know good and well he's not a suspect" in the killings.

NEXUS: Top news events began quietly, slowly grew larger

(From 1A)

square, "life-chains," a "cemetery of the innocent," and "information rallies" that attempted to win support from the "undecided" ranks.

And, because most of the early public displays came from the pro-life side, pro-choice advocates organized a group of their own, called People's Choice.

Its purpose, according to organizers, was "to combat the misinformation forced on the community by those who oppose reproductive freedom."

But as 1993 drew to a close there were no indications that this story, or controversy, would disappear.

If anything, it would seem that both sides were becoming even more set in their positions. Indeed, as Midland enters 1994 the pro-life-/pro-choice conflict remains a major news story. And as long as the issue persists, the controversy will remain.

Beliefs are not being altered.

2. Oil price decline

For almost two years there was a certain optimism that seemed to exist throughout Midland. Oil prices remained steady, new retail outlets were locating in the Tall City and new housing starts continued to show surprising strength.

Then on Nov. 30, the dreaded headline appeared in the newspaper. It read: "Crude prices plunge $1.07 to 3-year low."

Suddenly, that guarded optimism was replaced by uncertainty.

What did the drop in price really mean? Would it last? Was a dramatic rebound on the horizon?

There were even fears this decline could be a repeat of the 1986 crash. Others, however, viewed the drop has a short-term phenomenon and that the price would soon begin to inch its way back up toward the $20 mark.

But as of this week that rebound had not occurred. Indeed, the price continued to hover around the $14 mark.

And, as Midlanders enter a new year, all they can do is wait. And hope. For as all local residents know, the city's economic fate is in the hands of oil prices.

So the waiting continues.

3. American Airlines pulls out

American Airlines announced in April that, in efforts to streamline operations and forge a return to profitability, the company would pull its four daily Super 80 flights out of Midland International Airport.

AA ceased servicing the local area with its 142-passenger jets on July 1.

The company replaced the Super 80 flights with the 42-passenger, turbo-prop American Eagle eight times daily.

Bill Thurmon, AA's general manager at the airport, said one reason for the pullout was that the local load factor of 34 percent on its Super 80 flights was "not making any money" for the company.

In late December, the area was rife with rumors that AA would return its Super 80 service to Midland, with perhaps one or two flights a day. As late as Wednesday, however, Tim Smith, a spokesman with the airline's corporate office in Fort Worth, denied those rumors.

"There are no plans to return Super 80 service to Midland-Odessa area, and there are no plans in the foreseeable future," Smith said. "The rumors appear to be incorrect at this time."

4. Missing teen's remains identified

More than two years after disappearing from her Midland home, police on Nov. 4 positively identified the skeletal remains of Elizabeth Henry.

Forensics experts determined the remains had been at the site for approximately two years. Upon discovery of the bones at the site northwest of Midland near FM 1788, Midland police re-opened the Henry case and classified it as a homicide investigation.

Ms. Henry was a 17-year-old student at Midland Lee when she was allegedly kidnapped from her Apollo Court home on Aug. 19, 1991.

5. Windstorm whips Midland

A bizarre spring windstorm struck fast and without warning on May 1, a Saturday when local residents were out in full force at the annual Celebration of the Arts.

Several injuries resulted shortly before 6 p.m. that day, when winds abruptly rose to 70 mph, destroying the downtown arts celebration. Flying debris caused three people to be transported to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. Five others received treatment at the scene.

Thousands of Midlanders were left without power as the gusts ripped up power lines and supplanted utility poles across the city. Two hours after the windstorm, TU Electric officials estimated that 4,000 were without power in the city.

6. Grand jury report cites high incidence of substance use among local teens

A 33-page study released in February by a Midland County grand jury showed severe alcohol abuse by underage Midlanders.

The report, which drew criticism from parents and law-enforcement officials alike, said that as many as half the high school athletes in both Midland and Greenwood are caught in alcohol-related violations each year.

The report also detailed the ease with which alcohol can be obtained by minors, pointing out that as many as 50 percent of local retail stores sell to those not of age.

The special grand jury, commissioned by 238th District Court Judge John Hyde and 318th District Court Judge Dean Rucker, based their conclusions on more than 90 hours of testimony from 106 individuals over a nine-month period.

7. Six-inch deluge drowns Midland

A two-hour period shortly after midnight Aug. 24 left Midlanders with as much as 6 inches of rain in some areas.

The torrential downpour, combined with high winds, hail and lightning, damaged homes and businesses across town and flooded several houses near the pond at Wadley-Barron Park. No weather-related injuries were reported.

The deluge temporarily washed out parts of Loop 250, Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street, and kept other streets closed throughout the next day.

8. Grand jury issues no-bill in hog-tying incident at county jail

A Midland County grand jury issued no indictments in August in the July 10 death of an inmate in the Midland County Detention Center.

Tomas Gonzales, 41, of Stanton, died four days after being "hog tied." A preliminary autopsy showed Gonzales, who was serving a driving-while-intoxicated sentence, died of a combination of asphyxia and alcohol withdrawal, although the official cause of death was unavailable.

Hog-tying is a controversial but legal restraint method in which a subject's hands are handcuffed behind his back with his legs bent at the knees and feet held either on his thighs or buttocks.

9. Three lottery winners in Midland

It took a while to learn of their identities, but on Nov. 24, Midlanders Clyde W. Turner and Morris E. Hays stepped forward to lay claim to $17 million, the amount of the Texas Lotto drawing on Nov. 6.

Turner and Hays, seeking to avoid undue publicity as a result of their winnings, spent almost three weeks in consultation with lawyers and accountants to establish a trust fund for the winnings.

The combined established trust the two men set up will receive an annual payment of $790,000 each Nov. 15 for the next 19 years.

Earlier in the year, Midland's Mary Gay became the first West Texan to win big in the Texas Lottery.

Ms. Gay, 78, drove to San Angelo for the Texas Lottery drawing on June 10 with a chance at winning no less than $10,000, but came home with a cool million instead.

"I knew I would win $10,000," she said. "But honey, when I opened that, my number just came up."

10. Zsa Zsa comes a callin'

With her usual entourage of paparazzi mysteriously absent, movie star Zsa Zsa Gabor came to Midland to prove her innocence in a breach of contract lawsuit.

She left Midland having been found guilty, but the actress's cordiality was undying, according to local hotel workers.

Ms. Gabor and her lawyer, Melvin Belli, promised they would appeal the $200,000 judgment a Midland federal jury ruled against her.

Hollywood Fantasy Co. and its owner, Leonard Saffir, claimed Ms. Gabor backed out on a March 1991 agreement that called for her to mingle with vacationers acting the part of movie stars.

Doctor: Older women deserve birth freedom

NEW YORK (AP) — The Italian doctor who helped a 59-year-old woman become the oldest on record to give birth says there is nothing wrong with giving older women the same reproductive freedom as men.

"This is a big victory for women. Women are discriminated against. Men can be 100 and have children. This is why the entire male world is against me," Dr. Severino Antinori said.

Menopause has long stood between older women and childbearing. But Antinori has erased that natural barrier by implanting women who are no longer menstruating with donated, fertilized eggs.

Critics contend that middle-aged mothers won't live long enough to rear the children they bear, and that they are too old for the emotional and physical strains of pregnancy.

But Antinori said the ability of middle-aged men to look after their children isn't questioned to the same extent.

He said the right of any woman to have children transcends ethical debates.

"It's an individual freedom that no one can touch," he said in an interview Thursday in New York City, where he was spending the New Year's holiday with his wife and daughters.

The debate over engineering births expanded Friday with reports out of Italy that a black mother gave birth after being impregnated with an egg from a white woman that was fertilized with sperm from her white husband. Critics said the birth was a first step toward people choosing specific characteristics for their children.

After the 59-year-old British woman gave birth to twins on Christmas Day, British Health Secretary Virginia Bottomley said the treatment would not be allowed in Britain for postmenopausal women. Others in the British medical community have also come out against the technique.

The British public, too, appears disapproving. Surveys by Britain's two largest tabloids, the Daily Mirror and The Sun, found a majority against the treatment. Neither paper gave the number of people they surveyed.

Among Antinori's supporters is Dr. Robert Edwards, a professor at Cambridge University who designed the technique leading to the birth of the first test-tube baby in 1978.

In a piece published in 1993 in the British medical publication "Human Reproduction," Edwards notes that women who no longer are menstruating do not appear to have greater physical risks in pregnancy than women who conceive naturally. And he wrote that using eggs from younger women helps avoid risks to the fetus common with older mothers.

Gays become major focus during year

By Kim I. Mills
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The dispute over gays in the military, a large march on Washington and several high-level Clinton administration appointments brought the gay rights movement unprecedented scrutiny in 1993.

Even before 1993, gay activists had proclaimed it "The Year of the Queer." And it was precisely that — to the delight of some and the horror of others.

The March on Washington for Gay, Lesbian and Bi Equal Rights in April was the largest such gathering ever. One of the demonstrators' demands was the right to serve openly in the armed forces.

Gay people almost got that wish in 1993. But Bill Clinton, a president more sympathetic than any of his predecessors to gay rights, couldn't — or wouldn't — totally reverse the 50-year-old policy aimed at keeping homosexuals out of the military.

Clinton, who as a candidate for the White House had promised to lift the ban by executive order, found strong resistance in the Pentagon and Congress. After months of hearings, negotiations and angst, Congress passed and Clinton signed a policy that gays dubbed as "ban-plus" because it may be more onerous than the original prohibition.

The policy said in effect that no one could be denied membership in the military because of his or her sexual preference, but that there could be no homosexual conduct.

The judicial branch was more receptive to arguments against the prohibition.

A federal appeals court in California found the original ban unconstitutional and ordered gay naval Petty Officer Keith Meinhold reinstated. The Justice Department is appealing.

Lawyers to ask non-attorneys for some advice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest association of lawyers plans to solicit the ideas of non-lawyers in 1994 about ways to improve the courts and the legal profession.

Atlanta lawyer R. William Ide III, president of the American Bar Association, spelled out a plan Friday for assembling a "public jury" to consider reforms of the legal system.

The "jury" — drawn from civic organizations and associations of public officials, with most members coming from outside the profession — will meet May 1-3 at a conference session near Dulles Airport in Virginia. The ABA, with 375,000 members, represents about half of U.S. lawyers.

"It will be the yellow pages of Washington in terms of bringing police chiefs, fire chiefs, criminal justice administrators together with civic and religious leaders and various policy groups," said Mike Scanlon, ABA spokesman.

Participants will consider reform recommendations on such issues as using arbitration and mediation instead of trials; prejudice in the jury box; poor communications between lawyers and their clients; and the impact of the surge in arrests likely to result if Congress votes to put 100,000 more police on the streets, as President Clinton has proposed.

The recommended solutions will serve as the agenda for commissions being organized in each state by bar associations and other policy groups to press for legal reform.

Some proposals will require action by state legislature and Congress and some can be put into effect by state bar associations.

In a year-end statement to state and local bar associations, Ide announced the plan and deplored the state of the nation's system of justice.

S. African leaders urge people to hold course after shootings

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Shocked by a shooting spree that killed four and wounded five, black and white leaders on Friday called for the nation to make sure violence won't prevent the end of apartheid.

Two militant black groups claimed responsibility for the Thursday night attack in which black gunmen opened fire at a pub popular with university students in a liberal, mostly white section of Cape Town.

The attack heightened fears that violence, which already has claimed thousands of lives in recent years, will intensify as groups opposed to political reforms try to disrupt the nation's first multiracial election on April 27.

It darkened the hopes raised by Nelson Mandela and President F. W. de Klerk, who flew to Oslo just weeks ago to receive the 1993 Nobel Peace Prize for their efforts to end South Africa's longstanding racial conflict.

"I'm just very deeply shocked, really shattered, because somehow one was thinking that this kind of carnage was a thing of the past," said Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, who won the 1984 Nobel prize for his peace efforts.

De Klerk called the attack "barbaric" and urged South Africans to "stand united" in condemning such violence.

Mandela's African National Congress, the nation's leading black group and the expected winner of the April vote, said such "acts of naked terrorism" only helped those trying to block free and fair elections.

It also said the political violence that kills people in black townships every day should get the same attention as the Thursday attack, in which most of the dead and wounded were white.

There were 20 to 50 people in the Heidelberg bar and restaurant when several attackers wearing civilian clothes burst in, witnesses and police said. A rifle grenade shot in first failed to explode, and the gunmen then opened fire with automatic weapons.

"All hell broke loose," said Steve Hamilton, who had stopped there to buy cigarettes. Immediately after the attack it was "dead quiet" in the bar, he said. "Then everybody started going mad."

The attack killed three women and a man, and injured five people, police said.

Police offered à $60,000 reward for help in capturing the gunmen. They said the identities of the attackers remained unknown.

The South African Press Association received telephone calls from men claiming responsibility for the attack on behalf of the Azanian People's Liberation Army (APLA) and the Azanian National Liberation Army (AZANLA).

Both groups say blacks should rule South Africa without whites.

Greece OKs brief visit by Russian

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Unwelcome in much of Europe, Russian nationalist Vladimir Zhirinovsky was allowed to briefly slip into Greece with the premier's personal approval, sources said Friday.

Athens earlier denied it had admitted the controversial legislator-elect.

Zhirinovsky, whose far-right Liberal Democratic Party received 24 percent of the vote in Russia's recent parliamentary elections, has angered Russia's neighbors and other European countries by professing expansionist goals. He had accused Greece of imperialist aims in the Balkans.

Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs George Papandreou allowed Zhirinovsky and his three bodyguards to enter Greece without passports on Monday, according to Foreign Ministry sources who asked not to be named.

Papandreou contacted his father, Premier Andreas Papandreou, before ordering border post officials at Promachonas, on the Greek-Bulgarian frontier, to let the group in, the sources said.

Zhirinovsky entered the country from Bulgaria and drove to Salonica, Greece's second biggest city, where he went on a five-hour walking tour.

He returned to Sofia, Bulgaria, the same day and was expelled hours later for insulting the Bulgarian president, who later called Zhirinovsky a "pure fascist."

Greek government spokesman Evanghelos Venizelos earlier had denied that Zhirinovsky made such a visit. But upon returning to Moscow this week, Zhirinovsky also said border guards got the premier's approval to let him in.

During his Bulgarian visit, he accused neighboring Greece and Turkey of planning to conquer the Balkans and described Romania as an "artificial state" founded by Italian Gypsies.

He also was barred this week from visiting Germany, where the media labeled him the "Russian Hitler." Zhirinovsky has alarmed Poland and the former Soviet republics by saying they should come under Russian rule.

Air Canada to eliminate Pate on plate

MONTREAL (AP) — Air Canada has agreed to stop serving French pate to its first-class passengers, and an animal rights group claimed victory for the ban.

Pate du foie gras is produced by force-feeding ducks and geese to expand their livers.

Many birds die as a result, said the Washington-based animal rights group People for Ethical Treatment of Animals, which has urged major airlines to stop serving pate.

The Montreal-based airline has agreed to ban the delicacy on its flights starting in May, PETA spokesman Dan Matthews said.

He said Air Canada would be the first top airline to stop serving pate, "and we're very thrilled they acted this way."

Air Canada spokeswoman Lise Chevalier confirmed the airline's decision on Friday, but could not provide details on why it was made.

PETA has over 400,000 members in the United States and Canada.

Johnson a Jag?

DALLAS — Jimmy Johnson, who took the Dallas Cowboys from 1-15 to Super Bowl champs in five seasons, says he's "intrigued" at the chance to build the expansion Jacksonville Jaguars from scratch.

But that doesn't mean the Dallas coach is seriously considering leaving the Super Bowl champs.

"I was asked about Jacksonville and what I said instead of the standard line was that anytime you have a job, you're willing to listen to other opportupities," Johnson said.

It's not likely the Jaguars would get the permission of Cowboys owner Jerry Jones to approach Johnson, who'll make about $1 million in each of the next five years from Dallas.

Johnson has often said offensive coordinator Norv Turner would be a good candidate to coach an expansion team.

Jacksonville team owner Wayne Weaver said, "We really haven't talked to anyone about our coaching situation. We're trying to put together a list."

DALLAS — A season that began with adversity is ending the same way for Notre Dame. That could be trouble for Texas A&M.

The Fighting Irish are battling the departure of two assistant coaches, injuries to two All-Americans and the frustration that a No. 2 ranking may be all they can achieve in Saturday's Cotton Bowl rematch.

But adversity has been No. 4 Notre Dame's ally this season and could be the motivation needed to rebound from the devastating season-ending loss to Boston College.

Cotton Bowl Classic

"What scares me is that this is the first game since the Michigan game where we do not have the momentum, the enthusiasm that just kept us on the roll," Irish coach Lou Holtz said Thursday, referring to an upset victory over the Wolverines in the second game.

"We were a football team that was not supposed to be very good on offense, but we got the momentum, we played on enthusiasm, and we don't have that now."

The Aggies do.

In a reversal from last season, No. 7 Texas A&M (10-1) enters the Cotton Bowl on a roll, winning its last nine games. A year ago, the Aggies were unbeaten but lost tailback Greg Hill after he was accused of taking money for work he didn't do from a Dallas alumnus.

Notre Dame, which won its final six games in 1992, beat the Aggies 28-3. Texas A&M is eager to erase that painful memory.

"Because of the fact that last year ... we went out and I would say we were totally embarrassed, our players were embarrassed, that has served to create perhaps a more intense focus than what we may have had a year ago," said Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum.

But the Irish have thrived on adversity.

They began the season with a brand new backfield and no proven players to step in. Freshman quarterback Ron Powlus won the starting job, then was lost for the season when he broke his collarbone one week before the season opener.

Two days later, Holtz and the university were scalded in the book, "Under the Tarnished Dome: How Notre Dame Sold Its Soul for Football Glory."

Questions about the book's allegations dogged Notre Dame until its win at Michigan, when an unlikely push toward a national title began to unfold.

The unheralded Irish raced to a 10-0 record, a win over powerful Florida State and the No. 1 ranking before the last-play-of-the-season loss to Boston College.

Holtz admitted Thursday he is frustrated. He is trying to prepare his team without defensive coordinator Rick Minter, who left this month for the head coaching job at Cincinnati, and Holtz's son, Skip, will leave after the

Vikings earn playoff spot, beat Redskins

By Matt Yancey

WASHINGTON — Jim McMahon is back in the NFL playoffs. And this time it's the Minnesota Vikings he's taking with him.

McMahon's 11-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Carter was just enough to beat the Washington Redskins 14-9 Friday and assure the Vikings a playoff spot for the second straight year under coach Dennis Green.

With their 9-7 record, the Vikings will likely face the loser of Sunday's Cowboys-Giants game in a wild card matchup. A loss Friday would have given New Orleans or Philadelphia an outside chance of taking the berth away from Minnesota.

The 34-year-old quarterback, who took the Bears to the playoffs three times in the '80s and went there with the Eagles three years ago, completed 19 of 32 passes for 225 yards Friday, enabling the Vikings to close the regular season with three straight wins for the first time since 1974.

For the Redskins (4-12), it was a sorry end to their most dismal season in three decades. For the third time in four games, they failed to score a touchdown. And the only question left for them is whether rookie head coach Richie Petitbon will keep his job a second year.

The Redskins' only scores were on field goals of 37, 35 and 34 yards by Chip Lohmiller, who missed on two other attempts, another 35-yarder and one from 53.

MIAMI — Tom Osborne has the highest winning percentage among active Division I-A coaches, and Bobby Bowden has the second highest victory total. However, they may be best known for what they haven't won — a national championship.

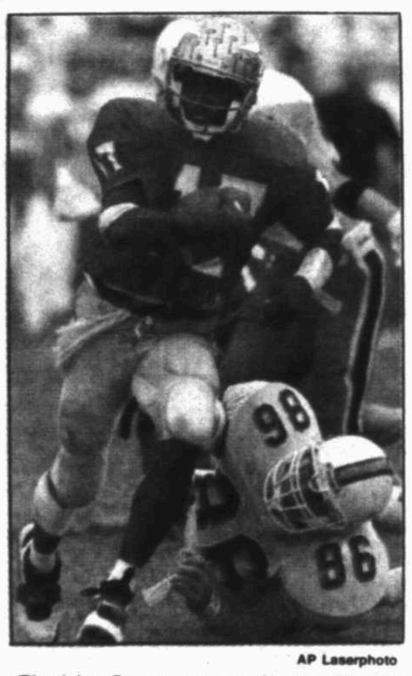

Barring a tie, that will change for one of them when Bowden's top-ranked Florida State Seminoles play Osborne's No. 2 Nebraska Cornhuskers in the Orange Bowl on New Year's night.

After six straight years of finishing No. 2, No. 3 or No. 4, Bowden admits he is "obsessed" with winning a national title.

"I think about it more than I ever have," he said.

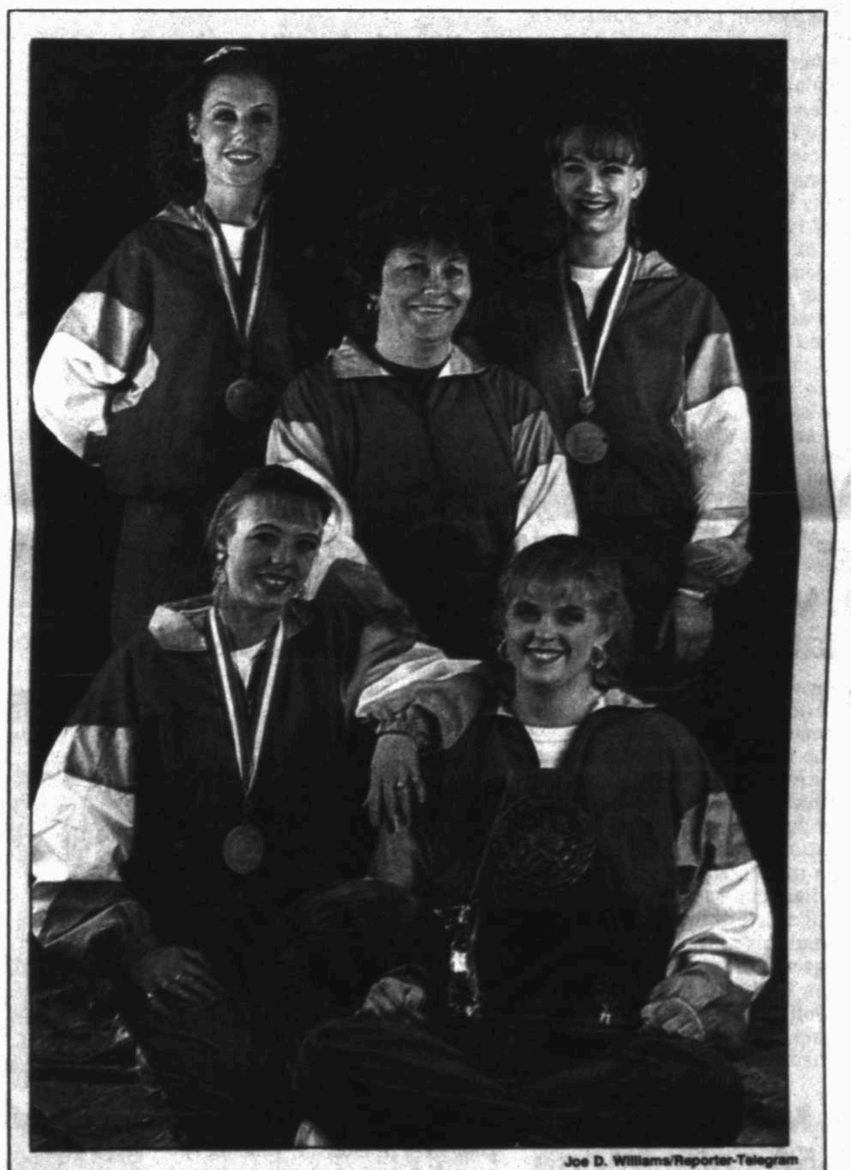

Osborne, who just missed a national championship when his team lost to Miami 31-30 in the 1984 Orange Bowl, said

SHREVEPORT, La. — Virginia Tech defenders Lawrence Lewis and Antonio Banks scored 23 seconds apart today as the 22nd-ranked Hokies beat No. 21 Indiana 45-20 in the Independence Bowl.

Indiana (8-4) trailed only 14-13 with 35 seconds left in the first half before Virginia Tech (9-3) broke open the game on two freakish plays.

On the first, John Paci took the snap at the Tech 49 and soon the entire Tech defensive line joined him in the backfield.

DeWayne Knight broke through the line first but slipped. George DelRicco grabbed Paci but couldn't bring him down. Knight jumped on the two of them as Paci tried to throw, and the ball came loose.

Next into the fray was J.C. Price, who tried to sweep the ball up, but wound up hitting it towards the Indiana goal line. The ball bounced right into Lawrence Lewis' hands as he trailed the play; he caught it in stride and scored to make it 21-13 with 23 seconds left in the half.

When the Hoosiers got the ball back, Paci completed a 9-yard pass to Eddie Baety, who did not get out of bounds. The clock ran out, but the official ruled that Indiana had called timeout with one second left.

After calling the Hokies back from the locker room, Bill Manolopoulos came on to try a 51-yard field goal. The kick, partially blocked by Jeff Holland, was caught by Antonio Banks at the 20 yard-line and he ran it all the way back for a touchdown to make it 28-13 at halftime.

Maurice DeShazo found Antonio Freeman for a 42-yard touchdown pass to make it 35-13 with 9:37 left.

Midland Year in Sports

From 1B

in with significant local and national interest.

It has been a major chore trying to thin out all the sports events of the year into the Reporter-Telegram's Top 10 sports stories for 1993.

But here is our Top 10 list as voted on by the sports staff of the Reporter-Telegram:

1. Lee girls win state golf crown

The Midland Lee girls won the school's second state golf championship with two of the most incredible days of golf that the state tournament in Austin has ever witnessed.

The team of Kami Fuller, Paula King, Kim Fisher, Heather Albright and Jennifer Dixon put together a state record two-day score of 297, but the championship came in a most bizarre way.

Albright, who had never shot better than an 85 in tournament play, shot a final round one-under par 70 after a first round 94. The 24-stroke swing was the difference in first and second place in the tournament.

2. Lee football back in playoffs

Midland Lee's absence from the state football playoffs was a brief one.

After nine consecutive years of winning a state playoff berth, the Rebels failed to make the state playoffs in 1992. They have now been in the playoffs in 10 of the last 11 years.

The Rebels did it with a dramatic 17-14 victory over Abilene Cooper on the final night of regular season play, cinching a playoff berth. Drama never seemed to stop with a 14-7 win over San Angelo and a 21-21 tie with then No. 1 ranked Odessa Permian.

Lee won two playoff games before losing to Lewisville, 44-30. Lee also set a single game scoring record in the area playoffs with a 79-14 win over El Paso Bowie as Marlon Henry tied Farris Strambler's single game touchdown record of six in that game.

3. Mustangs win state grid crown

Three-peat was the key word for the Midland Christian Mustangs in six-man football.

The Mustangs won its third consecutive state TAPPS six-man football title with a sound 74-34 win over Jesus Chapel. The undefeated Mustangs rolled over opponents with many games decided before the final gun on the 45-point rule.

MC's state crown was even more special this season since the Mustangs won the championship on its home field. MC had to win three playoff games to win the championship. The first two victories came in Abilene.

4. MHS girls lift 4-5A cage image

The Midland High girls basketball team went a long way in establishing a new credibility for District 4-5A basketball.

The Lady Dawgs won the 4-5A championship and then defeated El Paso Andress, 59-51, in the area playoffs to end 4-5A's 20-game playoff losing streak. It was a major step for the 4-5A's girls.

MHS was eliminated in the region quarterfinals, 45-43, by Amarillo Tascosa. District 4-5A has now lost 21 playoff games in a row to District 3-5A, but the MHS girls showed that streak may not last much longer.

In addition, MHS' Amy Alcala became the first sophomore in league history to be named 4-5A's most valuable player as she set a school season scoring record.

5. UIL decides against Permian

For the second time in four years, Odessa Permian was shot down by the University Interscholastic League for rules violations.

Permian was eliminated from the state playoffs for playing an ineligible player, who had transferred from cross-town rival Odessa High without sitting out the mandated one year, according to UIL rules.

The UIL ruled against Permian prior to the state playoffs, but a court injunction kept the Panthers alive through bi-district, which was a victory over Lubbock Coronado. A federal court decision a week later in El Paso went against Permian, allowing Coronado to stay alive.

The court injunction that allowed Permian to stay for one week in the playoffs caused Odessa High to miss the playoffs.

6. Salmon wins top rookie honor

A Midland Angels' graduate hit the big time in a big way in 1993.

Tim Salmon, who played the outfield for the Angels in 1991, was named as the American League Rookie of the Year. He was the first member of the California Angels to ever win that award.

Salmon hit .283 with 95 RBI and 31 homers in his rookie season at California. His numbers would have been even greater if he had not missed the final 2½ weeks of the season with a broken left ring finger.

7. MHS sweeps Region I swim

The Midland High swim team was the first to ever win Region I swim titles for both girls and boys in the same year.

The MHS boys won the Region I title by 72 points over Amarillo Tascosa while the MHS girls nipped Midland Lee, 51-50, to gain the title.

The San Angelo girls had previously won the District 4-5A championship, so the region victory by the MHS girls was a mild surprise.

It was the second year in a row that the MHS boys had won the Region I crown.

8. Stallings sets state 800 record

Track standout Jeremy Stallings of Stanton bid farewell to the state track meet with an overall state record of 1:49.2 in the 800 meters.

Stallings qualified for the state meet all four years he was in high school, winning three consecutive state 800 championships and one 1600 title.

He is now attending the University of Florida on a track scholarship as a freshman.

9. MC golf team third at nationals

The Midland College golf team continued to bask in the national limelight, placing third in the NJCAA national golf tournament.

MC finished 17 strokes behind national champion Scottsdale. George Wallace State was second.

The Chaps have finished third or better in the national tournament for four years in a row, winning the title in 1992. MC was also third in 1990 and second in 1991.

MC won 14 tournaments last season.

10. Andrews has best grid year

The 11-2 Andrews Mustangs completed its most successful year ever in football, winning two playoff games in the same season for the first time in the school's history.

Andrews lost to Stephenville in the Class 4A quarterfinals.

Also, Andrews coach W.T. Stapler hinted that this might be his last season at the school. He talked about retirement, but has not declared his final decision.

NFL Tie-breakers

NEW YORK (AP) — NFL procedures to break ties in standings and determine playoff sites:

DIVISION TIES

If, at the end of the regular season, two or more clubs in the same division finish with identical best won-lost-tied percentage, the following steps will be taken until a champion is determined. The same steps are used to determine the sites of postseason games.

Two Clubs

1. Head-to-head (best won-lost-tied percentage in games between the clubs).
2. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the division.
3. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the conference.
4. Best won-lost-tied percentage in common games, if applicable.
5. Best net points in division games.
6. Best net points in all games.
7. Strength of schedule.
8. Best net touchdowns in all games.
9. Coin toss.

Three or More Clubs

1. Head-to-head (best won-lost-tied percentage in games among the clubs).
2. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the division.
3. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the conference.
4. Best won-lost-tied percentage in common games, minimum of four.
5. Best net points in division games.
6. Best net points in all games.
7. Strength of schedule.
8. Best net touchdowns in all games.
9. Coin toss.

NOTE: If one team wins multiple-team tiebreaker to advance to playoff round, remaining teams revert to step 1 of applicable two-club format, i.e., either in division tiebreaker or wild-card tiebreaker. If two teams in a mutiple-team tie possess superior marks in a tiebreaking step, this pair of teams advance to the top of the applicable two-club format to break the tie. One team advances to playoff round, while other returns to original group an step 1 of applicable tiebreaker.

WILD-CARD TIES

If necessary to break ties to determine the three wild-card clubs from each conference and the site of one of the two first-round playoff games the following steps will be taken:

1. If the tied clubs are from the same division, apply division tiebreaker.
2. If the tied clubs are from different divisions, apply the following steps.

Two Clubs

1. Head-to-head, if applicable.
2. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the conference.
3. Best won-lost-tied percentage in common games, minimum of four.
4. Best average net points in conference games.
5. Best net points in all games.
6. Strength of schedule.
7. Best net touchdowns in all games.
8. Coin toss.

Three or More Clubs

1. Apply division tiebreaker to eliminate all but the highest ranked club in each division prior to proceeding to a step 2. The original seeding within a division upon application of the division tiebreaker remains the same for all subsequent applications of the procedure that are necessary to identify the three wild-card applicants.
2. Head-to-head sweep (Applicable only if one club has defeated each of the others, or if one club has lost to each of the others).
3. Best won-lost-tied percentage in games played within the conference.
4. Best won-lost-tied percentage in common games, minimum of four.
5. Best average net points in conference games.
6. Best net points in all games.
7. Strength of schedule.
8. Best net touchdowns in all games.
9. Coin toss.

NOTE: If two clubs remain tied after a third or other clubs are eliminated, the tie-breaker reverts to Step 1 of the appliacble two-club format. When the first wild-card team has been identified, the procedure is repeated to name the second wild-card, i.e., eliminate all but the highest-ranked club in each division prior to proceeding to step two, and repeated a third time, if necessary, to identify the third wild-card. In situations where three or more teams from the same are involved in the procedure, the original seeding of teams remains the same for subsequent applications of the tiebreaker if the top-ranked team in that division qualifies for a wild-card berth.

Wisconsin hopes to badger UCLA

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Wisconsin's offense is push and shove. The Badgers knock opponents down or stand them up with an offensive line bigger than many in the NFL — basic football that has delivered them to the Rose Bowl.

80th Rose Bowl Game 1994

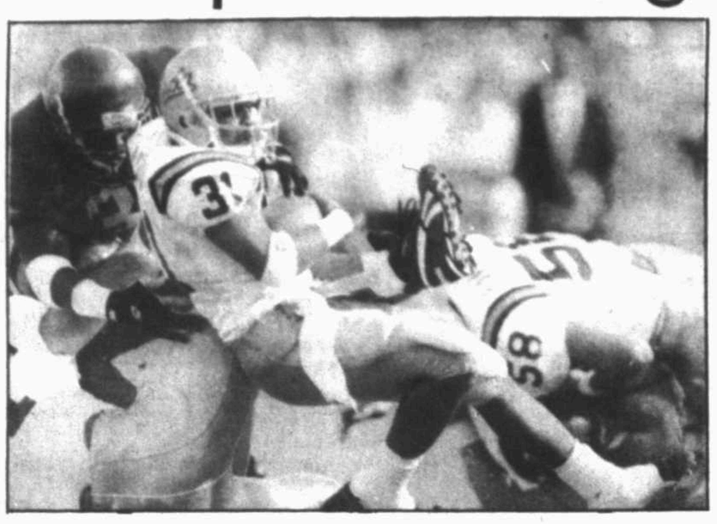

"We're not a fast-break team. We go out there and just grind it out," said Joe Panos, a senior tackle and one of three Badger offensive linemen named first-team all-Big Ten.

"Our deal is to get the running game going, keep it close and try to wear them down. We're not flashy. We don't go out and talk a bunch of trash. We just go out and do our job."

And when the hole opens as it has against every defense they've faced this season, the Badgers can spring Brent Moss, who gained 1,479 yards, to run over defenders or Terrell Fletcher, who had 932, to run around them.

They can let 23-year-old sophomore quarterback Darrell Bevell, who completed 69 percent of his passes, throw medium- or short-range to receivers Lee DeRamus or J.C. Dawkins and tight end Michael Roan.

"Everything starts up front by being physical," says offensive coordinator Brad Childress. "If your run game is constant, you mix in the pass and keep people on their heels. If you are beating them up front, you can do what you what to do."

UCLA running back Ricky Davis will try to provide some ground offense for the J.J. Stokes-oriented attack of UCLA's in the Rose Bowl today.

For years Wisconsin's offense sputtered and the defense was so worn out that it never left the field. But now, behind an offense that averaged 465 yards, the Badgers are in Pasadena for the first time in 31 years and will be facing UCLA on the Bruins' home field.

"Since I've been here — and I'm a fifth-year guy — the defense has carried the whole team, basically," said safety Reggie Holt, one of a handful of fifth-year players who joined the Wisconsin program before coach Barry Alvarez.

"It's great now to sit back and see our offense perform. The better they perform, the more rest we get. So it's great, because the offense has definitely been scarce around Wisconsin."

Victories were really scarce around Madison, Wis., when in 1990 Alvarez took over a program that won six games in three years under Don Morton who featured a veer offense that often moved sideways or backwards.

And in Alvarez's first two seasons, the Badgers still had trouble moving the ball in the right direction. Wisconsin was 1-10 and 5-6 before Alvarez made a change at offensive coordinator, replacing Russ Jacques with Childress.

There was improvement last season but still not enough. The Badgers were driving for a winning field goal in their 1992 season finale, a victory that would have put them at 6-5 and into a bowl. But so typical of their performance since their previous postseason appearance in 1984, they fumbled one play before the attempt. Suddenly, 6-5 became 5-6.

But this season with an offensive line centered around 6-foot-4, 290-pound junior center Cory Raymer, who was forced to start four games as a freshman, the Badgers began to get some paybacks.

Left tackle Mike Verstegen, a 6-6, 300-pound junior, has started 28 straight games. Junior guard Joe Rudolph, at 6-2, 285, was also first team Big Ten. Panos, at 6-3, 290, transferred to Wisconsin three years ago from Wisconsin-Whitewater where he was a defensive linemen. The baby of the line is 6-3, 280-pound sophomore Steve Stark.

"It was a matter of maturing,' said Alvarez. "Many of these guys had to play before they were ready because they were all we had. Now for the first time since we've been here we've got guys who have the strength and have played in the league and been successful."

But can the Badgers, with a 9-1-1 record, push around a UCLA defense that is quicker and as athletic as any they have faced this season? The Bruins allowed only 124 yards rushing a game this season and Wisconsin averaged twice that much.

HUSKERS: National crown on line tonight

winning a title has never been his top priority.

"Maybe as the game approaches, I'll understand what we're involved in and I'll get carried away," he said. "When that happens, I'll let you know."

Osborne said he thinks there's too much emphasis on being No. 1, "whether it's pingpong or dominoes or football. It's almost to an unhealthy degree where if you're not No. 1, you're nothing."

But Bowden said a championship trophy would make his life a lot easier.

"For me, it would be relief more than anything," he said. "I don't think it would be true for my players, our fans or our university. For them, it would be the accomplishment of winning a national championship. Of course, I'll relish a little of that, too. But the big thing would be, they can't ask me about it anymore."

Nebraska defensive lineman Terry Connealy said he and his teammates would love to win a national title for Osborne, who has won 81 percent of his games in 21 seasons as the Cornhuskers' coach.

"He's had some awfully good teams and some awfully good years, but he's never won it all," Connealy said. "He doesn't talk about it much, but I'm sure it would mean a lot to him."

Florida State players feel the same way about Bowden, whose 238 victories rank him second behind Joe Paterno among active major college coaches.

"He's one of the premier coaches of all time," receiver Matt Frier said. "He never comes out and says he wants a national title, but the way he prepares us ... shows how badly he wants it. He wants us to leave with it, and we want him to leave with it."

Bowden said he'll play for the win if it comes down to a two-point conversion. Because the Seminoles (11-1) lost to Notre Dame, they probably can't win the title with another blemish on their record.

"I don't think anybody would vote for us with a tie," Bowden said.

Osborne went for the win in the final minute of the 1984 Orange Bowl, even though a tie likely would have given the Cornhuskers the national title. The two-point conversion pass failed, but Osborne said he has no regrets.

"We could have tied Miami and probably won the national championship, but it would have been a hollow championship," he said. "It might have gotten people off my back, but it would have been too big a price to pay."

If they weren't meeting in the Orange Bowl, Bowden would be rooting for Osborne to win the title.

"I've always had a lot of respect for him," said Bowden, who is 5-2 vs. Osborne. "He would be one I'd want my son to play for."

One of Bowden's sons, Terry, coached Auburn to an 11-0 record this season. But the fifth-ranked Tigers are a long shot to win the championship because they can't play in a bowl due to NCAA probation.

"I keep reminding my son Terry, he ain't won (a title) either so he better not be saying anything about me," Bowden said.

'Pack accustom to underdog role in game

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Some coaches would be fuming, complaining about a lack of respect for their programs.

North Carolina State's Mike O'Cain, however, isn't bothered by being a two-touchdown underdog to No. 23 Michigan in today's Hall of Fame Bowl. The Wolfpack (7-4) thrive in that role.

Hall of Fame Bowl Tampa Bay

"We've been underdogs all year, so it's not new to us," the coach said Friday.

"I guess maybe it gives us a little motivation. But whether it'll be enough, I don't know," he added. "Maybe the thing that will motivate us the most is that some people don't give us a chance."

The matchup in Tampa Stadium pits the size and strength of Michigan (7-4) against the speed and quickness of North Carolina State, which tends to play best under adversity.

The Wolfpack came from behind in the fourth quarter to win four games this season. They lost two others by less than a touchdown when rallies fell short in the closing minutes.

"It got to the point where if we were behind we felt like we would win the game," quarterback Terry Harvey said. "That's the character of this team."

Neither team has played since Nov. 20, but the layoff has been easier for Michigan, which finished the regular season with a three-game winning streak that included a 28-0 victory over Ohio State.

North Carolina State received its Hall of Fame Bowl invitation after a 62-3 loss to Florida State.

"This is a tremendous opportunity for us to redeem ourselves," O'Cain said. "Right now, the only thing most people remember about us is the Florida State game."

It doesn't surprise or concern Michigan coach Gary Moeller that his Wolverines, who started the season with expectations of contending for the national title, are solid favorites in the first-ever meeting between the schools.

He said the team has practiced well since arriving in Florida and won't be overconfident.

"I don't think it helps us (being favored), but it shouldn't hurt," Moeller said. "We've been favored in about all our games and we've lost four. Hopefully, we've learned a lesson about those things."

To upset the Wolverines, North Carolina State will have to contain a balanced offense featuring the running of Tyrone Wheatley and passing of Todd Collins.

Offensively, O'Cain said the Wolfpack will have to be able to run the ball.

Sanders considers giving up football

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons' disappointing season has Deion Sanders thinking about giving up football for awhile.

Sanders, a cornerback with the Falcons and outfielder with the Atlanta Braves, said next season it may be baseball only.

"Maybe it's time to put all my focus on baseball and give that everything I've got so that I really have a great season," Sanders said.

The Falcons (6-9) close the NFL season Sunday against Phoenix. Like some of his teammates, Sanders has been critical of the team's management.

Sanders said Falcon officials showed a lack of commitment to winning last week when they failed to work out contract extensions for several key players, including guard Chris Hinton and wide receiver Michael Haynes.

The Falcons were 0-5 before Sanders joined them immediately after the Braves lost in the National League playoffs. He helped spark the Falcons to six victories in eight games, including wins over Dallas and San Francisco.

The Falcons fell out of the playoff picture with losses to Washington and Cincinnati the past two weeks.

Last season, Sanders signed a three-year contract worth $11 million with the Braves. He is expected to assume a full-time role as center fielder and leadoff hitter with the departure of Otis Nixon to the Red Sox via free agency.

Cavaliers want return to early season form

MIAMI (AP) — Virginia has ganged up on quarterback Symmion Willis, and the sophomore isn't complaining a bit.

Carquest Bowl

Willis has been battling a confidence crisis for several months, and he hopes to use the Cavaliers' game against Boston College in Saturday's Carquest Bowl as a turning point.

Willis, a first-year starter, moved to the top of the nation's passing efficiency ratings as Virginia won its first five games.

It all seemed too easy, but in retrospect, it wasn't.

"Maybe we gave him too much to do too soon," offensive coordinator Tom O'Brien said.

Willis, who threw for 13 touchdowns and just three interceptions in the Cavaliers' first five games, was picked off 11 times and threw for only six scores in their last six games. Not surprisingly, Virginia lost four of those six games to finish the regular season at 7-4.

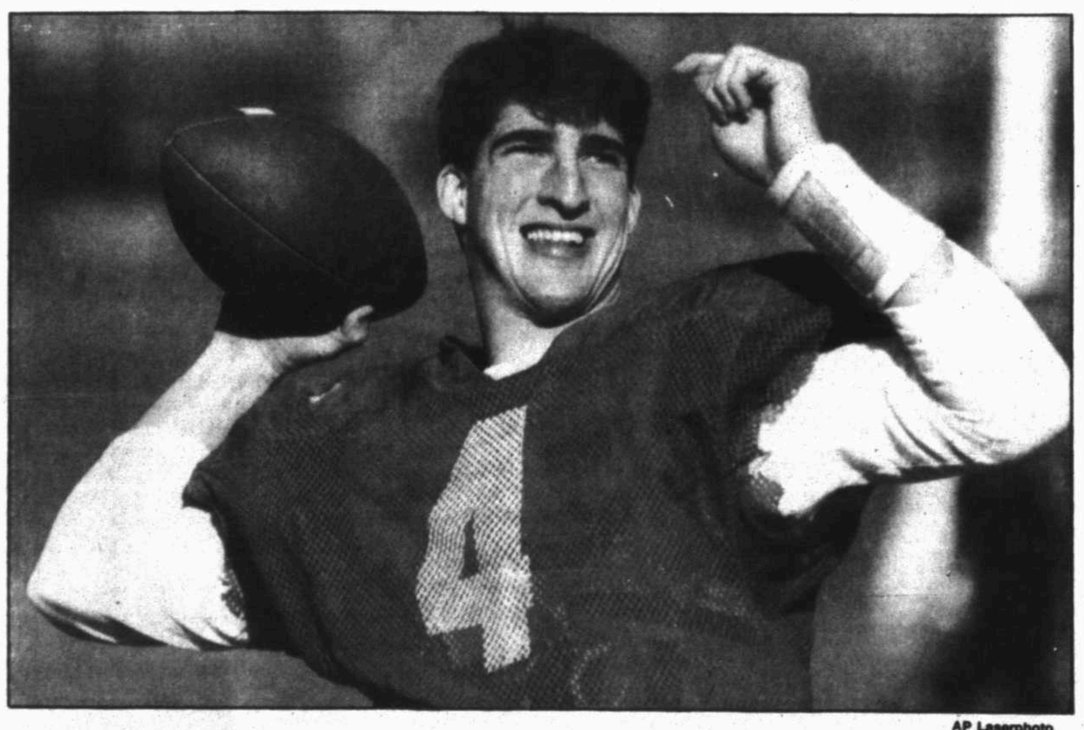

In Virginia's regular-season finale, a 20-17 loss to Virginia Tech, Willis completed just 11 of 28 passes and was booed before he was replaced in the third quarter. Willis was 26th in the final Division I-A passing efficiency ratings.

"We had to let him know that he's got some help, that he isn't in this alone," wide receiver Larry Holmes said. "Symmion's got all the talent in the world, but it's awfully hard to win football games by yourself. Several of us just tried to sit down with him and encourage him to get back to using what had worked earlier in the season, and that was utilizing all the other weapons that were on the field with him."

Willis appears to have gotten the message.

"Everyone was real supportive," he said. "I think I was trying too hard at the end of the season to win games by myself. I think I got away from distributing the ball to our great supporting cast. I was trying to make plays that weren't there.

Willis traced part of the problem to late-season injuries that sidelined the Cavaliers' top three receivers: Holmes, Patrick Jeffers and Aaron Mundy.

Texas A&M quarterback Corey Pullig makes his second Cotton Bowl start today.

Pullig waltzes into big dance confident

■ Slocum expects better performance than 1993 Cotton Bowl.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — No matter how cold it for Saturday's Cotton Bowl, the heat will be on Texas A&M's Corey Pullig to play the game of his career against Notre Dame.

"I've talked to Corey about this game and he has got to play well for us to be successful," Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "We've got to be walking over to that interview tent after the game saying 'Corey played the game of his life.' If we do that then we'll win."

Pullig was a wide-eyed freshman in last year's 28-3 loss to Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl and the quarterback never got the Aggies untracked.

The Fighting Irish controlled the ball and the A&M offense managed just 51 snaps.

"Corey had difficulty pulling the trigger when we had receivers open last year," offensive coordinator Bob Toledo said. "I don't know if he was intimidated but he wouldn't let the ball go. He's a lot more confident now. ... If he plays poorly we will be in trouble."

Pullig realizes what's at stake but says "I don't think I have to carry the team. I think the main thing for me is to get the ball to the right guys.

"At least, I'll know what's going on out there. This won't be my first dance."

Pullig was heavily recruited by Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz. At one point, Pullig gave Holtz an oral agreement but later changed his mind so he could play closer to home. It made Holtz angry and he said so at last year's Cotton Bowl.

"I had a lot of distractions last year and that recruiting thing was one of them," Pullig said. "A lot of recruits change their minds. I wasn't the first one. At least this Cotton Bowl I will be focused to the job and not worried about hard feelings."

Pullig has thrown 17 touchdown passes and hit 59 percent of his passes this year.

"Corey has really come on the last several weeks," Toledo said. "I figure we've got to score 24 points or so to win. So, that means Corey will have to have a big game."

Slocum said Pullig has to have the kind of game Rick Mirer did in the last Cotton Bowl.

"My good buddy Norv Turner told me the difference in last year's game was the two quarterbacks," Slocum said, referring to the Dallas Cowboys' offensive coordinator. "We had a true freshman starting his fifth game. The other team had Mirer, a first round draft pick in the NFL. That was a pretty big disparity in leadership. For your offense to be successful, it all starts with the quarterback."

bowl for the top job at Connecticut.

The dim championship hopes, the loss of his coordinators and injuries to center Tim Ruddy and cornerback Bobby Taylor have made December a miserable month for him. Ruddy is expected to miss Saturday's game, but Taylor probably will play.

Holtz also is perplexed by his inability to gauge his team's attitude amid the distractions.

"I've never gone into a game where I had less of a read," he said. "You put it all together, and I can't tell."

Gators want to satisfy sweet tooth

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The first time Errict Rhett ever left the state of Florida, he was a high school senior and went on a recruiting trip to West Virginia.

That December day in 1989 when he arrived in Morgantown, there was something else new waiting for him.

"It was the first time I had seen snow," Rhett recalled Tuesday. "I just wanted to touch it, to see what it felt like."

"But, man, it was so cold. I didn't have the right kind of jacket because it was warm and sunny when I left home. I think I had a windbreaker or something like that," he said.

Needless to say, Rhett turned right around and went back to West Hollywood, north of Miami. Later, he enrolled at Florida and this year broke Emmitt Smith's school record for career rushing yards.

Of course, cold weather is not always the first thing that comes to mind when some folks think about West Virginia.

"Barney Fife, right?" Mike Collins said, smiling.

Collins, a top defensive back for the Mountaineers, was born in Huntington, W.Va., and has heard the putdowns his whole life. This week, he's hearing them again as his third-ranked team prepares to play No. 8 Florida in the Sugar Bowl on Saturday night.

Collins and others on the team believe that those impressions contribute to the reason why West Virginia, even at 11-0 this year, is not considered a national power on a par with Florida State or Notre Dame.

"I think that might be part of the problem, the way we're perceived," he said. "We're not all wearing those Jed Clampett hats. There are stereotypes that go with every area and West Virginia is labeled as hillbillies, hicks."

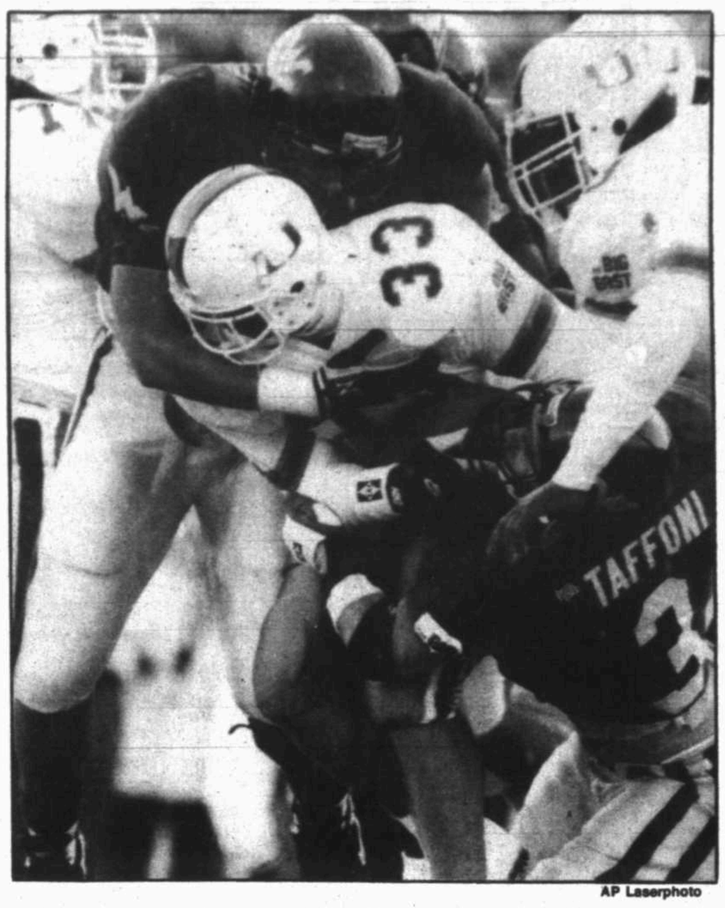

For the record, ol' Barney was a deputy in the make-believe town of Mayberry, N.C. But Don Knotts, the actor who played the part, really was a native of Morgantown and graduated from West Virginia.

Clampett, the "poor mountaineer who barely kept his family fed," was not a character from West Virginia, either. The Beverly Hillbillies hailed from Arkansas before striking it rich.

On the subject of misguided notions, John Denver had it wrong, too.

Denver, who sang the national anthem when Mountaineer Field opened in 1980, had a big hit with his tribute to the state, "Almost Heaven." But in the song, he placed the Blue Ridge Mountains in West Virginia, rather than rightfully in Virginia.

Still, that Mountaineers school mascot, who runs around with a buckskin suit, a coonskin cap and a musket doesn't do much to dispel the image.

Miami, Arizona seek respect

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Miami and Arizona, a pair of 9-2 teams knocked down in the rankings by late-season upsets, hope victory in the Fiesta Bowl will give them momentum heading into the 1994 season.

The 10th-ranked Hurricanes have 14 consecutive winning seasons and national titles in 1983, 1987, 1989 and 1991. The No. 16 Wildcats are playing on New Year's Day for the first time since the 1949 Salad Bowl.

"Our guys feel like this is an opportunity for them to take the next step," Arizona coach Dick Tomey said.

The Wildcats credit their 8-7 loss last year at Miami with starting a renaissance which carried them from 4-7 in 1991 to their first nine-win regular season since 1975.

"It changed the whole personality of the team," Arizona quarterback Dan White said. "There's no such thing as an 'almost' win. You either win or lose, and we lost, but it did give us a lot of confidence."

Miami won when Wildcats kicker Steve McLaughlin missed a 51-yard field goal on the final play. Still, Miami lost the No. 1 ranking it had held since the previous season. Even though the Hurricanes got back to No. 1, a 34-13 loss to Alabama in the Sugar Bowl ended Miami's 29-game winning streak.

"The Hurricanes beat some tough teams last year, but that Alabama game, that's all they remember," defensive end Kevin Patrick said. "So this year we go into this game knowing that you're only as good as your last game."

Linebacker Rohan Marley said the Hurricanes overlooked Arizona because they had won 36-9 the previous year at Tucson, Ariz., and had to play Florida State the next week. In addition, the Wildcats were 1-1-1 following a tie against lowly Oregon State.

This year, the Wildcats have their attention.

"This is a very big game for us," Marley said. "We can't take this game lightly, just because it's not a national-championship game. It's a game that sets the tempo for next year."

Florida State beat Miami 28-10 in the fifth game of the season, and Big East Conference rival West Virginia upset the Hurricanes 17-14 in the 10th.

Miami enjoyed its greatest success as an independent, able to soften the schedule with teams like Cincinnati, Toledo and San Jose State.

"Everybody said, 'Miami's in the Big East. It's not a conference until they get beat.' Well, now it's a conference because we got beat by West Virginia," Hurricanes coach Dennis Erickson said.

Arizona won seven straight before a 37-17 loss to UCLA. California beat the Wildcats 24-20 to prevent Arizona from winning its their first Pac-10 title.

Lions to open passing game against Vols

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — When Kerry Collins completed consecutive passes at a door prize giveaway during a Citrus Bowl luncheon, coach Joe Paterno mixed sarcasm with praise.

"You have just seen something historic," Paterno said Thursday. "You have just seen Penn State hit two passes back-to-back. That might be the first time we've tried two passes in a series this year, right, Kerry?"

The comment was made in jest, but it wasn't far from the truth. When Collins has been good, he's turned in some of Penn State's top passing performances.

When he's been bad ... well, consider that last year against Notre Dame one of his passes went into the band. Against Ohio State this year, nothing worked offensively and much of the blame went to the trouble Collins had passing in bad weather, resulting in only 1,600 yards.

"We have given him better support and we've had kids make big receptions and we've given him better protection," Penn State offensive coordinator Fran Ganter said, describing the four-game winning streak the Lions put together to clinch the Citrus Bowl bid.

"We did a bad job against Ohio State. It wasn't that he was doing a bad job. He was running for his life."

The No. 13 Nittany Lions (9-2) play Tennessee on Saturday. The sixth-ranked Volunteers are 9-1-1 behind the passing of Heath Shuler, who threw for nearly 2,400 yards in 1993.

"This game isn't Shuler vs. Collins, and I don't want to get into that situation," Paterno said.

There's no comparing the quarterbacks.

"We're talking two different offenses here," Collins said. "They'll line up with no one in the backfield and we'll always line up with two or three."

The Tennessee offense gives Shuler more targets.

Despite the differences in the quarterbacks, each team has nine victories. Penn State runs first, then passes. With Tennessee, Shuler makes it difficult to tell what the Volunteers want to do.

"They have a quarterback who can orchestrate great plays that we have to be prepared for," defensive tackle Lou Benfatti said. "The way to stop them is to hit them early and get them shaken up."

Two Giant starters to play against Cowboys

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Offensive tackle Jumbo Elliott and inside linebacker Michael Brooks will start Sunday in the New York Giants' showdown with the Dallas Cowboys depite injuries that would keep them on the sidelines in a lesser contest.

Elliott's back, which knocked him out of five of the last six games, is so tender that coach Dan Reeves wouldn't predict how long he would last. The only thing Reeves was sure of Saturday was that the Pro Bowl tackle would start and be replaced by Eric Moore if the back locked up.

"You never know," Reeves said. "We've got to be worried a little, but he'll go as far as he can as long as he can."

Moore presents another problem. He sprained his right ankle against Phoenix and has hobbled around practice all week. Although Moore said it won't prevent him from playing, Reeves said Moore's injury appeared more serious even than Elliott's.

More than that, Moore's injury also leaves a void at guard.

Should both Elliott and Moore prove ineffective, seldom-used Clarence Jones might see his first non-mop-up action of the season at left tackle.

If the 11-4 Giants were not playing a game of such magnitude — the NFC East title and home-field advantage throughout the playoffs are at stake — Elliott said he probably would not play.

"Yeah, I'd probably sit," he said. "It's something that'll get better, but not right now. We've just got to try to win.

Couple recovers Aggie mascot

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas A&M University mascot Reveille VI, a 4-month-old collie, was found Friday safe and sound near Lake Travis after having been abducted in Dallas prior to debuting in the Cotton Bowl.

Travis County Sheriff's Deputy Rick Dugger said a couple flagged him down about 1 p.m. after they saw the dog tied up to a sign near a marina.

"She was real friendly," Dugger said. "She came right up to me and let me pet her. It didn't seem like she had been mistreated."

"It was tied up to a sign," Dugger said. "It was tied out in the open, out on a point like they wanted someone to find him."

Dugger had been in the area checking on an anonymous tip on the dog's whereabouts.

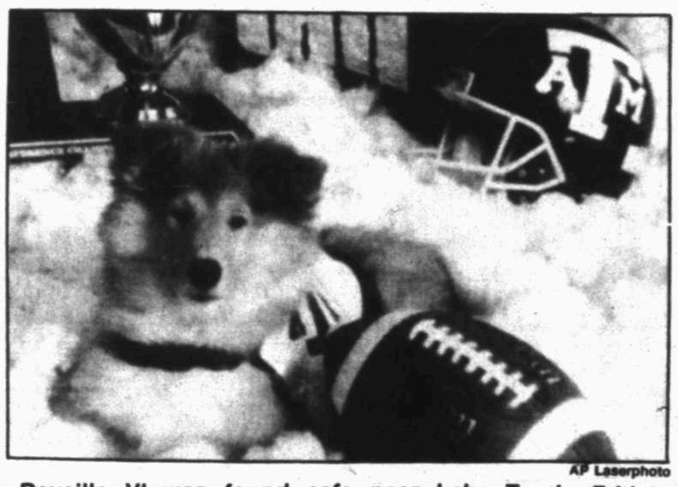

Andy Saenz, a spokesman for the sheriff's department, said no arrests had been made in the abduction and that local authorities planned to turn over their information to Dallas officials.

He was glad the puppy was found. "We do whatever the public asks us to do. If it's go look for a dog, we'll go look for a dog."

The stolen pet was scheduled to make its debut in place of the retiring Reveille V during Saturday's Cotton Bowl game in Dallas between Texas A&M and Notre Dame.

But she was taken Sunday morning from the Dallas home of Cpl. Jim Lively, the sophomore Aggie Corps of Cadets member responsible for the puppy.

A group of University of Texas students calling themselves "The Rustlers" took credit for becoming the first to steal the A&M mascot. They told the Austin American-Statesman they'd been plotting the capture for three months.

Police arrest two Louisville football players on felony assault charges

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Two University of Louisville football players were arrested Friday on felony assault charges.

Warrants charging Tom Carroll and Chris Hampton in connection with the Christmas Eve beating of a 23-year-old Louisville man were issued on Thursday. Arraignment was set for Saturday morning.

Carroll, a senior, and Hampton, a junior, are charged with beating Kevin Netherton, in the parking lot of the Golden Nugget Lounge in suburban Louisville. Both played for the Cardinals in Tuesday night's Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn.

A misdemeanor assault charge also was filed against Carroll for allegedly hitting a 23-year-old woman, Laura Probus, in the same incident.

Head football coach Howard Schnellenberger, reached while vacationing at his home in Miami Lakes, Fla., said he has spoken with the two players but took no other action "because I was not aware of any major incident."

Schnellenberger said he thought it was inappropriate to take action until charges were filed. He said he will investigate further when he returns to Louisville and take any appropriate action then.

Louisville Police Detective Joe Carroll, who isn't related to Tom Carroll, said Netherton was beaten unconscious and was treated at Audubon Regional Medical Center for injuries that include a fractured nose, swelling of both eyes and contusions on the right knee.

He was not kept in the hospital overnight but is expected to undergo more tests next week.

Probus suffered a cut inside her mouth and a swollen jaw.

Probus said that in sworn affidavits filed Thursday, she said Carroll hit her jaw when she tried to intervene between Carroll and Netherton as Carroll was threatening her friend. Netherton then tried to intervene, and he was beaten by both Carroll and Hampton, she said.

Probus said that she had seen Carroll earlier in the bar but that to her knowledge, neither she nor Netherton had any contact with either player before the incident in the parking lot.

Netherton and Probus said they filed charges so long after the incident because they weren't able to go to court earlier.

Netherton said he had been in bed much of the time until Thursday, and Probus said she was in Memphis for the Liberty Bowl.

Louisville lists Carroll as a 6-foot, 3-inch, 260-pound starting lineman from Columbus, Ohio, and Hampton as a 6-foot, 2-inch, 250-pound second-team lineman from Louisville. Netherton is about 5-11 and weighs 170 pounds.

Carroll was arrested after a fight in 1991 and was temporarily suspended from the team. He pleaded guilty to misdemeanor assault and received a 30-day suspended sentence and two years of probation.

Bradley takes plunge

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — At 7-foot-6, there aren't too many people Philadelphia 76ers center Shawn Bradley looks up to.

But his 5-foot-3 wife is one of them.

Bradley, the stilt-legged, multimillion-dollar rookie, who is struggling through his first NBA season, credits the former Annette Evertson with keeping his spirits up.

"I would not even want to think what things would be like without her. Things would be ... awful," said Bradley, 21. "I have told her, 'Annette, I doubt I could handle this without you.'"

Annette Bradley, 25, guards Bradley off court the way Patrick Ewing does on — but with an eye toward clearing his path, not blocking it.

She waits for him after games in the corridor outside the stadium locker room, flashing him a smile and snuggling into his ribs. Her words are all encouragement and love.

"Give yourself time," she tells him. "You are a great ballplayer."

Sitting in the stands before a game, she does not hesitate to tell fans who might boo Bradley that the big guy is her husband and she would prefer to hear them yell "Shoot."

Bradley was in the audience when his future bride, a nanny, was speaking at a Philadelphia Mormon church about her missionary experience in South Florida.

"It was love at first sight," Bradley said.

A Mormon and a native of Utah, Bradley delayed entering the NBA to volunteer for two years of missionary service in Australia. After a two-month relationship, they married in September.

"I knew Annette is who I wanted," Bradley said, "and I could not settle for it being less than forever."

Her response to his proposal: "What took you so long?"

"What has happened between Shawn and I just leaves me speechless," she added.

No one expected Bradley to be sensational his first season.

Woody, Soon-Yi while away old year with friends in Venice

VENICE, Italy — Woody Allen and Soon-Yi Previn whiled away the old year with a few friends and hundreds of journalists.

Mobs of reporters and photographers clogged narrow streets along the Venetian canals Friday to follow the actor-director and his girlfriend, the 22-year-old adopted daughter of Allen's former companion, actress Mia Farrow.

After going shopping, Allen joined Ms. Previn and some other American friends for lunch at Harry's Bar, where they ordered pasta.

CORPUS CHRISTI — Since playing a battered wife who killed her husband in the 1984 TV movie, "The Burning Bed," Farrah Fawcett has taken up the cause against domestic violence.

Farrah Fawcett takes domestic violence cause home.

Thursday she took the cause back home.

Almost nine years since her last visit to her hometown, Fawcett, 46, appeared at a hospital and on a telethon that ran "Burning Bed" and raised about $324,000 for the Women's Shelter of the Corpus Christi Area.

"It feels great to be back," said Fawcett, who also stayed around for a private New Year's Eve fund-raiser.

INDIANA, Pa. — Jimmy Stewart may be a national treasure, but the self-effacing 85-year-old balked at anyone creating a museum about him — until they picked a modest spot: the third floor of his hometown library.

Now Stewart says he'll even donate his 1984 Academy Award for lifetime achievement.

"If you know Jim, he's not one for a lot of fuss," said Bill Moorhead, a friend who is on the board of the Stewart Museum Foundation. "He's very humble. What we have now is what he desires."

In a few weeks workers will start to prepare the Indiana Free Library for the future James M. Stewart Museum.

The foundation's president, Jay Rubin, visited Stewart at his Beverly Hills, Calif., home in November. He said the only award Stewart wouldn't give the museum was his best-actor Oscar, won in 1940 for his role in "The Philadelphia Story."

For years, Stewart's dad, Alex, kept the Oscar in the window of the family hardware store in Indiana, and the statuette will remain in the Stewart family.

NEW YORK — Comic and actress Rosie O'Donnell gets her laughs wherever she can. Lately, that means tapping into her home computer.

O'Donnell, 31, parlayed a gig as host of "Stand-Up Spotlight" on cable television's VH-1 into roles in the movies "A League of Their Own" and "Sleepless in Seattle." Now she has discovered a new audience through the American On Line computer program.

"You hook up with your phone and you plug in to somewhere in middle America," the January issue of W magazine quoted O'Donnell.

"If you say something funny, they write LOL (laughing out loud) . . . I'm living for those LOLs."

BERLIN — Chancellor Helmut Kohl sent 85th birthday greetings Friday to Nazi-hunter Simon Wiesenthal and praised him for work that keeps the world "alert against every form of extreme rightism and anti-Semitism."

Wiesenthal, who survived Nazi concentration camps during World War II, founded his Jewish Documentation Center in Vienna. The center's work led to the capture of Holocaust architect Adolf Eichmann and hundreds of other war criminals.

Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel also sent a congratulatory message to Wiesenthal in Vienna, and several German newspapers published stories on him. The Munich-based Sueddeutsche Zeitung said Wiesenthal, despite the many honors he has received, remains "deeply hated" by old Nazis and their sympathizers.

Wiesenthal told the Berlin daily Tagesspiegel that he still hopes to see two aging Nazis brought to justice during his lifetime. They are Alois Brunner, a deputy to Eichmann and organizer of the transport of Jews from several European countries to death camps, and Anton Burger, a concentration camp commander and organizer of the shipment of Greek Jews to death camps.

Various reports list them as either dead or in hiding.

Channeling in the year past

■ With names like Beavis and Butthead, shows like "NYPD Blue" and battles between Letterman and Leno, '93 was a busy year for TV.

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — What was TV all about in 1993? Just picture this scenario:

FADE IN on a pub named Cheers. The gang wants to watch David Letterman — but who can find him in the new 500-channel universe? As the frustrated barflies tussle for the remote control, U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno bursts in and upbraids them for fighting. Dan Rather is on hand to cover the melee, feeding details to his new co-anchor Connie Chung back in New York. "Courage," he signs off as Sam and Rebecca make whoopee on the counter.

FADE OUT.

Dave ... "Cheers" ... the coming video bounty ... Dan 'n' Connie ... outcries over sex and violence.

Those were the main themes distinguishing a year of television that, in too many ways, was like every other: too many reruns and commercials; too many good shows (meaning those you happen to like) getting zotzed; too many broken New Year's resolutions to cut back on your viewing.

But even if you did cut back, odds are nearly 50-50 you caught the hysterically hyped 98-minute "Cheers" last call. Some 42.4 million TV homes tuned in May 20 to honor the passing of this sitcom.

"We're closed," Sam said in the final moments of

1993: A Jurassic year for movies

By John Horn
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — 1993 was the biggest year ever at the movies, but don't give all the credit to "Jurassic Park."

Earlier this week, North American movie ticket sales surpassed 1989's record gross of $5.03 billion. While Steven Spielberg's dinosaur drama had a lot to do with the new mark as the highest grossing movie ever, other less remarkable films are equally responsible for the year's record box-office take.

■ Related stories/2,3C

The new record was set with the help of higher ticket prices, since admissions are going down.

Still, there are several similarities between 1989 and 1993, and a comparison highlights the essential elements for record business.

BLOCKBUSTERS: Without the staggering $337 million gross of "Jurassic Park," 1993 ticket totals still would have been pretty good. But films this popular have a spillover effect, boosting business across the board.

When a blockbuster rolls through town, audiences rediscover the fun of simply going to the movies. A hit film doesn't necessarily crush the competition, and can actually help other titles.

This is especially true for families, who don't consistently patronize movies. Since both "Jurassic Park" and 1989's "Batman" appealed to family audiences, the spillover effect was magnified.

Patrons trying to go see a blockbuster often are met by sold-out theaters. Rather than go home movieless, these customers frequently will buy a ticket for another movie at the multiplex.

This was certainly the case in 1989. "Batman" made $251.2 million to help set that year's record. On the same late June day "Batman" premiered to sold-out houses nationwide, Disney opened "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids."

Skeptics said it was suicide.

But "Honey" grossed a strong $130.7 million.

MASSIVE MOVIES: The key players in both the 1989 and 1993 records were the solid smashes that took in more than $100 million.

The 1993 hits included "The Fugitive" ($179.3 million), "The Firm" ($158.3 million), "Indecent Proposal" ($102.9 million) and "In the Line of Fire" ($102.2 million).

Several films released in late 1992, furthermore, collected much of their haul in 1993: "Aladdin," "Home Alone 2: Lost in New York," "A Few Good Men" and "The Bodyguard."

The 1989 mark was set with the contri-

Fighting the purple reign of terror

I kid you not, this is what our 4-year-old got for Christmas:

A Barney stuffed animal dressed in a Christmas stocking cap.

Patterson

A talking Barney.
A Barney that doesn't talk.
A Barney cassette.
A Barney video.
A Barney board game.
A Barney shirt.
Barney pants.
Barney socks.
Barney sheets.
A Barney pillow-case.
A Barney suitcase.
Something called Barney shoe-string grips.

And if all those Barneys weren't enough, she also got a stuffed Baby Bop, Barney's just-as-irritating, best friend companion.

Thanks to Santa Claus and an assortment of well-meaning relatives, our 4-year-old kid can now sleep with, sleep in, sleep on and sleep around Barney.

She even dressed up like Barney on Halloween.

All these Barneys do not include the fact that she already had yet another stuffed Barney, as well as (get this) Barney panties.

(Barney panties are a bit bizarre for my taste, but hey, I'm 34, what the heck do I know? But to draw a comparison, I wouldn't be caught dead in a pair of Letterman underwear.)

We've got so much purple in the house, my wife has ordered a ban on the consumption of grape Kool-aid for the next year.

If our 4-year-old were to cut herself, she'd bleed purple. 'Course, then we'd have to go out and buy Barney Band-aids.

Over the Christmas holidays, the flu spread through our house like it has most everyone else's. As sick as our little girl was, we were relieved to find she does not hurl purple.

According to an article in New York's Newsday, 1994 will bring a Barney radio program, a Barney network TV special, as well as the premiere of Barney's daily television program in Japan, France, Israel, Germany and throughout Latin America. In 1995, Barney will have his own feature film.

I'll just say it right here and get it over with: I'm sick and tired of Barney. Sick, sick, sick. Tired, tired, episode No. 275.

(From 1C)

But with 11 years of "Cheers" in reruns, it'll be Happy Hour forever.

In stark contrast to that down-to-earth Boston tavern were soaring promises for the future of TV. It was virtual this and cyber that. Interactive television! Digital and high-definition! So many viewing options lying in wait you'd have to hire other people to watch it all for you!

Firing the pistol for this mad dash down the information superhighway was John Malone, boss of Tele-Communications Inc., who announced last December that the cable giant would eventually provide its customers with 500 television channels.

"Television will never be the same," Malone said.

Since then, other cable and telephone companies have announced plans for dazzling new services.

Both Paramount and Warner Bros. studios have promised new networks as soon as next fall.

Great, respond forward-looking viewers. But in the meantime, many look with dismay at their higher cable bills — this, despite congressional legislation meant to reduce cable rates.

Its detractors called it "soft-core porn," and indeed it was punctuated with the occasional rough word and steamy bedroom scene. But ABC's "NYPD Blue" blew through the controversy, which was largely orchestrated by the Rev. Donald Wildmon, a Tupelo, Miss., minister and activist.

"I expect 'NYPD Blue' will be on six to eight weeks, max," Wildmon said the day after the show's Sept. 21 premiere. Not long after that, the series had established itself as one of the season's biggest hits.

Of course, official Washington viewed "NYPD Blue" and other network fare with a jaundiced eye as the broadcasting industry came under increased criticism for excessive displays of violence — and under increased threat of government regulation.

No fewer than nine measures were introduced, including a bill to limit the hours when violent programming can be shown and one to make mandatory the new voluntary labeling of violence.

In October, Reno testified to a Senate committee that while government intervention was not the best option, "if significant voluntary steps are not taken soon, government action will be imperative."

Meanwhile, Beavis and Butthead emerged as the favorite cultural scapegoats. The two teenagers were stupid, gross and destructive — and irresistible to youngsters. But then these stars of the hit MTV cartoon series got themselves in a jam: An Ohio mother of a 5-year-old who started a fire that killed his younger sister accused the show of turning her son into a firebug.

Another notable couple resulted when Connie Chung joined Dan Rather at the "CBS Evening News" anchor desk. The former top-rated nightly newscast had fallen to No. 2, and observers scoffed at CBS' initial insistence that journalism, not ratings, was the reason for bringing aboard the telegenic Chung.

Her first night was June 1. She wore red. Rather wore charcoal gray. Since then, more often than not, the newscast has been No. 3.

Neither ratings nor much of anything else has plagued David Letterman, leader of the yack pack.

What came to be known as the late-night war left veteran Arsenio Hall bruised by tough new rivals; "Tonight's" Jay Leno humiliated by NBC; and Fox's newcomer Chevy Chase D.O.A.

New year to bring more sequels, remakes

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Remakes and sequels are in. Big-budget spectacles are out. Westerns are in. Heavy drama is out. That's the forecast for what Americans will see at movie theaters in 1994.

Hollywood enters the new year with high hopes, coming off a 1993 that broke the all-time box-office record set in 1989 with $5.03 billion. Forget the fact that "Jurassic Park" was largely responsible for the record and that holiday business was $100 million behind last year. At least 1993 pointed the way to continued prosperity.

"The year's product was a reaction to the summer of 1991, when business was bad," observes Art Murphy, who tracks theater business for the Hollywood Reporter. "The producers said, 'Something's wrong,' and they started exercising better quality control. It took a year and a half to turn things around.

"Now we are seeing a more diversified product, mostly family oriented, meaning 'nondirty.' Last year, 'Indecent Proposal' was the strongest in content. The norm was films like 'Sleepless in Seattle' and 'The Fugitive.' The trend will continue into 1994."

Not all movie executives are euphoric about the state of the business.

"My sense of the industry is that we continue to do what we have always done, with no real agenda," said John Calley, longtime Warner Bros. production chief and now president of United Artists.

"I'm particularly worried about the impact of the vast number of releases. There's not time enough for films to establish themselves; three weeks later another one is jumping on them.

"I'm worried that there is not enough market for so many films. Not only that, there's not an available pool of talent. And there's no real sign that we are developing any more talent. I find that frightening."

Despite such concerns, the major studios and independents probably will release more movies in 1994 than at any time since the booming 1940s. The lack of creativity is reflected in the large numbers of sequels and remakes. On next year's menu are these familiar items:

"City Slickers II," "Major League II," "The Mighty Ducks II," "White Fang II," "Three Ninjas Kick Back," "Highlander III: The Magician," "The Next Karate Kid," "The Naked Gun 33 1/3: The Final Insult," "My Girl 2," "That's Entertainment! III," "Beverly Hills Cop III" and "Clear and Present Danger," continuing the adventures of Jack Ryan (Harrison Ford).

Also in the copycat mode are these remakes: "Mary Shelley's Frankenstein," "Angels in the Outfield," "The Getaway," "Miracle on 34th Street," "Black Beauty."

Warren Beatty and Annette Bening play the troubled lovers in "Love Affair," which has an intriguing genealogy. Charles Boyer and Irene Dunne starred in Leo McCarey's 1939 "Love Affair," which McCarey remade in 1957 with Cary Grant and Deborah Kerr as "An Affair to Remember." That was the movie which provided the theme for "Sleepless in Seattle."

With hits such as "The Addams Family" and "The Fugitive," producers realized gold could be struck in TV film vaults. Next year will bring updates of "Lassie," "The Shadow," "Maverick," "Car 54, Where Are You?" "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" and "The Saint."

The Steven Spielberg hit factory has three in the works: "The Flintstones," "The Little Rascals" and "Casper, the Friendly Ghost."

Outdoor fans can delight in a wagonful of Westerns in 1994, "Dances With Wolves" and "Unforgiven" having blazed the trail.

FILM: Year-end flops almost prevented record box office

(From 1C)

butions of "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade," "Lethal Weapon 2," "Back to the Future Part II" and "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids." Academy Award-winner "Rain Man," released in 1988, made most of its $172.8 million in 1989.

TICKET PRICES: Movie admissions are falling, and the 1993 record was set with far fewer ticket sales than in 1989. After hovering around 1 billion tickets a year, admissions are starting to decrease. Film fans are watching more movies on videocassette and pay-cable television; everyone else is staying away.

Theater owners have kept revenues up by raising ticket prices. While reserved tickets in some big cities now cost $8 apiece, the national average is just over $5.10. In 1989, the average ticket cost $4.45.

Ticket prices have more than doubled since 1979, according to the Motion Picture Association of America. Admissions have declined from 21.6 million a week to a little more than 18 million a week.

Ticket prices can't be raised up too quickly, however, since $2 video rentals have become more and more attractive.

DRY SPELLS: With a string of box-office flops at year's end, the 1993 record almost wasn't. The grosses were hurt by both cold weather and the calendar. With Christmas falling on a Saturday and Christmas Eve on a Friday, last weekend's returns were flat.

With the exception of "Mrs. Doubtfire," the late-season film crop performed poorly. The disappointments included "A Perfect World," "Wayne's World 2," "Geronimo: An American Legend" and "Heaven and Earth."

Outside of that, the month-to-month revenues were remarkably consistent.

The 1989 record was helped by the late release "Look Who's Talking."

FEWER FLOPS: Yes, 1993 was the year of "Last Action Hero." Equally colossal flops didn't surface, however. In 1989, "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen" and Sylvester Stallone's "Lock Up" were among the few catastrophes.

Avoiding such bombs — especially those counted on to be quite popular — is imperative the next time the record falls.

TRAILERS: "The Graduate" screenwriter Buck Henry is teaming with actress Nicole Kidman ("Far and Away") for a new movie about an obsessed journalist who uses sociopathic teens to advance her career. Titled "To Die For," the film is scheduled to be produced next year, directed by Gus Van Sant ("My Own Private Idaho").

PATTERSON: Enough is enough

(From 1C)

tired.

I much prefer Mister Rogers coming into a room, singing, "It's a Beautiful Day in the Neighborhood," while taking off his black loafers and putting on his Keds, although what was wrong with his black loafers I suppose we'll never know.

Or, I prefer my Barney to be the skinny type. The kind that carried one bullet in his pocket, nipped things in the bud and provided one of the funniest sights ever on television when Thelma Lou would muss up his hair and leave lipstick prints all over his scrawny little face.

That Barney was the stuff of which real heroes are made.

This purple concoction, this annoying, goofy, sing-songy, Big Bird-wannabe, was created in the Dallas suburb of Allen. At first a simple creation that was to be solely for the benefit of the 2-year-old daughter of Barney's creator, the purple dinosaur (who wouldn't last five minutes in Jurassic Park before he was lunch for a T-Rex) is now worth a half-billion dollars.

So irritating has Barney become to parents everywhere, an "I Hate Barney" club has been formed to offer an outlet to those grown-ups suffering from Barney overexposure. The "I Hate Barney" theme song is, "I Hate you, You hate me-/Let's hang Barney from a tree."

Crude? Yes. Callous? You bet. But it's time parents were given a way to work through the madness that the purple onslaught has wrought.

Studies have shown that passive smoke is dangerous. Those same researchers would no doubt find that it is altogether possible that an adult living in a house with as many Barney items as can be found in ours can expect some sort of mental illness to set in shortly after the first of the year.

What's next? Barney computers? Barney macaroni and cheese? Will Texas A&M students in the year 2005 bury their last Reveille and choose Barney as their mascot? And don't look now, but isn't that Oprah Winfrey crawling into a Barney costume to film, "The Color Purple II"?

It's time we stand up and unite, parents. It's time we clinch our purple little fists and demand enough is enough. If we don't, stories of Barneycide are sure to begin cropping up in newspapers everywhere.

Hey, now there's an idea.

Homeowner Shocked When Furnace Cleaning Saved 40% On Fuel In One Month
Family Narrowly Escapes Carbon Monoxide Poisoning From Faulty Furnace
Warmer Times
January FURNACE EMERGENCY SAFETY UPDATE
Amazing New Tune-Up Guarantees Your Furnace Won't Break Down ...Or This Service Is FREE!
No One Else In My Field Makes You This Bold Guarantee!
PERMIAN BASIN - Now you can have your furnace rejuvenated to "Factory Fresh" condition. And I guarantee it won't cost you a penny! In fact, you'll make a profit.
As you already know, your furnace gets dirty; out of alignment; less efficient; and wears out with age. What you probably don't know is that it wears out about twice as fast as it should!
In fact, most furnaces die in "middle age" and use 1/3 to 1/2 more fuel than they need to.
But I've created a fascinating solution to this problem that will make your home more comfortable, safer and save you a pot full of money...with a special offer I hope you'll find irresistible.
$120 Worth Of Service For Only $59!
Now, I know what you're thinking..."What's the catch? Where's the gimmick? Are you completely nuts?"
But there's a method to my madness. I have two reasons for letting you get this much service for 50 cents on the dollar.
First, my business is normally slow during January. And I decided that rather than lay off my top technicians, (and add to the unemployment statistics) I would strip out everything but my raw cost and keep my technicians busy. Second. I'll actually make money on this in the long run anyway. Most people who sample my service like it so much they use me again at my normal prices (which, by the way, are great compared to my competition).
So, both of us win. You'll just win sooner than I will.
Anyway, doesn't it just make sense to get this service so your family doesn't have to live with the uncertainty of an unsafe furnace?
Double Risk Free Money-Back Guarantee
Get your furnace restored to "Factory Fresh" condition for only $59 and here's my guarantee to you:
Guarantee #1. If your furnace breaks down this winter and needs repairs for any reason, I'll refund your $59...no questions asked!
Guarantee #2. If this amazing tune-up doesn't save you at least $100 (giving you a profit) in lower fuel usage this winter. I'll also refund the $59 with no hard feelings.
Since it can cost you thousands of dollars to replace your furnace; and, since you can make a guaranteed profit when you consider the fuel savings and since you have absolutely no risk; doesn't it just make sense to give my tune-up a try?
It's easy, just call Carol and she will schedule a "Champion Technician" to your home.

(Condensed movie reviews by Los Angeles Daily News film critics. The rating system for the film list is: 4 stars — Don't miss it; 3 stars — worth your while; 2 stars — Has it moments; 1 star — If you must)

N.Y. Times News Service

ADDAMS FAMILY VALUES: Marginally funnier than the first "Addams" movie, which ain't very. A baby and Joan Cusack as its homicidal nanny are the new additions here, but the only inspired comedy comes from 13-year-old Christina Ricci, who turns Wednesday's sojourn at summer camp into a dementedly clever coming-of-age satire. Anjelica Huston, Raul Julia and Christopher Lloyd don the usual, arch masks. Barry Sonnenfeld directs again, his comic timing still off, decimated by hyperactive pacing. PG-13. Rating: ★★½

THE AGE OF INNOCENCE: Their similar obsessions with repressed emotions and New York tribal rites make Martin Scorsese and Edith Wharton an unexpectedly perfect match. His compulsively detailed adaptation of her novel about 1870s high society is a moving tragedy, all the more devastating for its ruthless, polite demeanor. Daniel Day-Lewis falls in love with a worldly countess (Michelle Pfeiffer) on the eve of his perfectly arranged marriage to the perfectly trained Winona Ryder. His passion is strangled in the prettiest possible way. PG. Rating: ★★★★

BATMAN: MASK OF THE PHANTASM: Like the TV show it was spun off of, this feature-length cartoon has terrific, Deco-Expressionist designs and very clunky animation. The story's no great shakes: a caped avenger is killing off Gotham City's aging gangsters and Batman is being blamed. Only the Joker knows the truth; meanwhile, the crimefighter's alter ego, Bruce Wayne, re-encounters a long-lost love. PG. Rating: ★★

BEETHOVEN'S 2ND: Even animals are discovering family values, or so it appears in this sequel to the 1992 hit about a smart, messy Saint Bernard and the suburban family that takes him in. This time, Beethoven finds a mate and sires four adorable purebreds, who are nursed by his young owners after the mother is whisked out of town by her mean, dog-hating custodian (Debi Mazur). Charles Grodin as hapless homeowner George Newton is, as ever, a joy to behold, and with puppies this adorable, who needs hip? PG. Rating: ★★½

THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES: They look like the Clampetts. They act like the Clampetts. But the cast of this big-screen remake of the beloved '60s sitcom just ain't funny like the TV show clan was. There's one inspired exception: Lily Tomlin's assistant banker Jane Hathaway reaches a height of comic gooniness that is nearly extraterrestrial. Penelope Spheeris ("Wayne's World") directed in a manner that redefines the concept of broad. PG. Rating: ★★

COOL RUNNINGS: A thoroughly winning comedy about born losers if there ever were ones: the Jamaican Olympic bobsled team. Four guys from the Caribbean island actually made it to the '88, Calgary winter games, and this quite fictionalized account manages to be absurd and genuinely uplifting at the same time. The four sledders are played by a gold medal team of American and Trinidadian actors — Leon, Doug E. Doug, Rawle D. Lewis and Malik Yoba. John Candy has never been better as their alternately embarrassed, proud and unbelieving coach. PG. Rating: ★★★

GERONIMO: AN AMERICAN LEGEND: Wes Studi plays the legendary Apache war leader, and Gene Hackman, Robert Duvall and Jason Patric are some of the conflicted white guys trying to stop him. Walter Hill directs excellent battle sequences but does not build up any narrative momentum, despite an admirable attempt to avoid judging anyone as a clear-cut hero or villain. PG-13. Rating: ★★½

JURASSIC PARK: Steven Spielberg's dino-spectacular is not the religious experience many expected, but it's a pretty good, sci-fi chase movie. Something goes wrong at an island amusement park whose main attraction is genetically engineered, live dinosaurs. The big lizards, realized by a superb combination of full-sized robots and computer-generated graphics, have infinitely more charisma than their underwritten human prey, played by Sam Neill, Laura Dern, Jeff Goldblum and Richard Attenborough. PG-13. Rating: ★★★

MALICE: The title describes what the filmmakers offer the audience — minus much aforethought. The movie starts out as a dull, trashy, serial rapist thriller, then turns into a misogynistic, trashy, insurance scam mystery, with nothing that really connects the two plot lines. Of course, you never know what's going to happen next because the story's schizophrenic — and devoid of a single honest moment, to boot. Alec Baldwin, Nicole Kidman and Bill Pullman star. Harold Becker ("Sea of Love") directed. R. Rating: ★½

MRS. DOUBTFIRE: Robin Williams in drag sounds a lot funnier than he turns out to be in "Mrs. Doubtfire," the production debut of Williams and wife Marsha Garces Williams. Overly long and sentimental, the story of an out-of-work San Francisco actor who disguises himself as an elderly British matron so that his ex-wife (Sally Field) will hire him to baby-sit for their three kids never makes much of its opportunities for comedy (although Harvey Fierstein does shine in a teensy role as Williams' cheerful gay brother). Overstated direction by Chris Columbus ("Home Alone") doesn't help any; better rent "Tootsie" if you're looking for a good cross-dressing time. PG-13. Rating: ★½

THE NIGHTMARE BEFORE CHRISTMAS: Tim Burton's puppet-animation musical is a clever comedy of misperception. The dedicated ghouls who stage Halloween every year take over Christmas with the best intentions, but with macabre misunderstanding of the holiday's subtleties. Although you never get past the fact that you're looking at puppets, they're always great to look at, sort of like Dr. Seuss characters putting on a German Expressionism exhibit. Danny Elfman (Oingo Boingo, "The Simpsons") wrote the show tunes. PG. Rating: ★★★

THE PELICAN BRIEF: A New Orleans law student's theory about who ordered the contract killings of two Supreme Court justices reaches all the right people with deadly results in Alan J. Pakula's solid but uninspiring adaptation of John Grisham's best-selling political thriller. Julia Roberts is lovely as the student and Denzel Washington is well-cast as the investigative reporter she hooks up with, but both characters are sadly underdrawn, and Pakula's practiced thriller riffs are getting a bit frayed around the edges. PG-13. Rating: ★★

A PERFECT WORLD: Clint Eastwood directs Kevin Costner as a 1960s escaped convict and himself as the Texas Ranger who isn't overexerting himself to catch the criminal. The movie is mostly about Costner's character driving back roads and bonding with his hostage, a fatherless 8-year-old boy. Definitely eccentric, and not Eastwood's best, but it contains some of his best directed moments and turns into a thoughtful meditation on child rearing and the ways we justify killing. R. Rating: ★★★

THE REMAINS OF THE DAY: The "Howards End" team strikes again with an even more severe study of British repression. Anthony Hopkins is the buttoned-down butler who's so professionally servile he can't even recognize his basic emotions. Emma Thompson is the spirited housekeeper who tries to crack his walnut heart. Director James Ivory and scripter Ruth Prawer Jhabvala set the main action in the '30s, about a decade ahead of Kazuo Ishiguro's source novel, the better to dramatize the Nazi appeasement taking place upstairs. Beautifully made and acted, it's a little too strangled to pack a "Howards"-like punch, but it's still a marvelously intelligent and compassionate work. PG. Rating: ★★★½

RUDY: A true-life sports story that doesn't have an honest moment in it. Sean Astin plays the puny, dumb, working-class kid whose only goal in life is to dress out and sit on the bench for one Notre Dame football game. It takes years, inordinate effort and a lot of pain, but the conclusion is never in doubt. Rudy's sense of priorities, however, always are. One-dimensional acting and equally flat writing doesn't help, though you could give it points for modesty and efficient, if soulless, manipulation. David Anspaugh ("Hoosiers") directed. PG. Rating: ★★

SISTER ACT 2: BACK IN THE HABIT: In the original, Whoopi Goldberg played a tacky Las Vegas lounge singer who revitalizes the stodgy convent where she is forced to pose as a nun to hide from the mob. This time, she tackles a stodgy inner-city parochial school with song, dance and attitude. Bill Duke navigates the formula smoothly, and the ever feisty Goldberg gets lots of support from a huge cast headed by Maggie Sullivan as Mother Superior, James Coburn as a nasty lay school administrator, and Kathy Najimy as the ever perky Sister Mary Patrick. PG. Rating: ★★

Alternative heads up '93's best albums

By Dave Ferman
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

THE BEST

1. "Where You Been" by Dinosaur Jr. The perfect marriage of J. Mascis, the dour, downtrodden Everyguy, and J. Mascis, the amp-frying guitar hero.

2. "Too Long In Exile" by Van Morrison. More loose-limbed and lively than most anything he's released in the past decade, "Exile" merges Morrison's love for Delta blues, organ-driven jazz and gospel with his commingling of secular and sacred love and devotion.

3. "What It Is" by Stephen Bruton. Shot through with great one-liners, soulful singing and impeccable playing, this solo debut by Fort Worth's legendary guitarist and songwriter is the story of a man celebrating the good times, the bad times and all the possibilities still ahead.

4. "Siamese Dream" by Smashing Pumpkins. Billy Corgan's coming-out party was a travelogue of self-doubt and introspection ... and monstrous hard rock riffs laid over one of the most assured rhythm sections around.

5. "Thirteen Years" by Alejandro Escovedo. With echoes of both Los Lobos and Jimmie Dale Gilmore, this is a mostly somber reflection on making your way in the big ol' world. With its repeating musical theme and clear-eyed lyric edge, it can capture your dreams.

6. "Vs." by Pearl Jam. This is everything any fan could have hoped for, and more. Sharper, angrier and at times more tender than "Ten," this is the sound of a band facing the hype and shooting past it.

7. "Everybody Else Is Doing It, So Why Can't We?" by the cranberries. Led by the astonishing voice of Dolores O'Riordan, this Irish band takes pop's simplest structures, adds in understated orchestration, and emerges with an extended meditation on the yin-yang of love and attraction.

8. "Hey Man ..." by George Clinton. Funk's great visionary returns to remind us why so many rappers have sampled him.

9. "Superstar Car Wash" by Goo Goo Dolls. Metallic, witty power-pop with hooks galore ... guilty-pleasure rock doesn't come any better.

10. "In Utero" by Nirvana. A much better CD than "Nevermind," and a rigorously honest, up-to-the-minute look at rock stardom in the '90s from a guy who never wanted the job in the first place.

THE WORST

1. "Bat Out of Hell II: Back Into Hell" by Meat Loaf. Loaf, with long-winded songwriting partner Jim Steinman, hurls up 75 minutes of endlessly repeated choruses, bad pseudo-metal and clunky, bloated tales of lost boys, golden girls and rock 'n' roll dreams.

2. "Both Sides" by Phil Collins. Collins is making much of this being a real "solo" solo effort, and it sounds like he could have used a little help. Or a lot of help. Or at least a couple of cups of strong coffee.

3. "Lethal Injection" by Ice Cube. This CD opens with Cube (in the guise of a doctor) shooting a "Mr. White" (in other words, any white person) in the head. It goes downhill from there. Mean-spirited garbage, plain and simple.

4. "Muddy Water Blues: A Tribute To Muddy Waters" by Paul Rodgers. Nothing more than Rodgers climbing on the blues revival bandwagon in an attempt to kick-start a long-cold solo career.

5. "Coverdale/Page" by Coverdale/Page. The lyrics are mindless, David Coverdale is obvious and screechy, and this failed supergroup reeks of two old geezers desperately reheating past glories to keep their bank accounts fat.

6. "Cyberpunk" by Billy Idol. A colossal mistake, and the stake in the heart of Idol's consistently declining solo career.

7. "Pork Soda" by Primus. A numbing, endless hodgepodge of time changes, obtuse lyrics and Les Claypool's oddball vocals. There's a lot of talent here, but you'd have to go back to the band's previous CDs to find most of it.

8. "Alive III" by Kiss. If you ever wondered how low struggling, '70s, hard rock outfits can sink, this should serve quite nicely as Exhibit A.

9. "Songs of Faith and Devotion: Live" by Depeche Mode. That's right, the same songs from the less-than-a-year-old studio CD, with nothing more than audience noise added in. Can a band treat its following with less respect?

10. "Delbert McClinton" by Delbert McClinton.

Top singer ushers 1994 into Sarajevo

By Paul Alexander
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Gunfire rattled outside as Barbara Hendricks was asked if she was nervous about coming to Sarajevo to sing for peace on New Year's Eve.

"Of course," the highly acclaimed soprano said. "I have two small children at home who aren't exactly thrilled. I understand the risk and I think it's worth it. I've always had a guardian angel."

Miss Hendricks, an Arkansas native who now lives in Switzerland, performed a special New Year's Eve concert at Sarajevo's TV building, that began at 11 p.m. with a local choir and musicians.

It was broadcast live in Europe. Sarajevo residents could watch if they had their own generators or if a mortar-damaged utility line was repaired in time.

The concert was organized by the French Association for Humanitarian Action founded by Bernard Kouchner, the former French minister of health and humanitarian action.

There was also an appeal throughout Europe for people to place candles in their windows in solidarity with the people of Sarajevo. The appeal has been broadcast on numerous European television networks.

A world-renowned singer, Miss Hendricks has appeared in opera and symphony houses all over the world and made nearly 50 recordings. She was nominated Goodwill Ambassador for Refugees at the United Nations in 1987.

Miss Hendricks said the performance was also part of a program called The First Hour of the First Day of the First Year. Its goal is to serve as a witness to suffering and inspire action to prevent it from continuing.

"I hope we will be able to leave some hope behind," said Miss Hendricks, bundled up in a heavy coat and scarf for a news conference in a frigid, unheated building.

Under the direction of Michel Tabachnik, the New Year's Eve program featured works by Mozart, Schubert and Dvorak "that speak of peace," Miss Hendricks said. There also were some Bosnian songs.

The selections have been limited by the availability of musicians.

"The orchestra is not complete and neither is the choir because of the war," she said. A 26-year-old trombonist was killed last week.

The concert was sponsored by Radio-Television of Bosnia-Herzegovina and a group called Festival Sarajevo, which has arranged other musical and theatrical performances.

Organizers said the goal was to show solidarity with the country's besieged cultural scene.

Two years ago to the day, Miss Hendricks was performing in Dubrovnik, Croatia, just a couple of hundred miles away "and you were living in peace," she said.

With luck, Miss Hendricks said she wouldn't be back for an encore performance.

"My hope is that we won't have to be here the same time next year doing this," because that would mean the 20-month-old war would have ended.

The war has taken about 200,000 lives.

Russians leave tough year behind them

By Candice Hughes
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Goodbye to 1993 and good riddance to what was, for most Russians, a thoroughly rotten year.

It was a year that left Russians numb with shock and disappointment, a year in which the birth rate sank and the death rate rose, a year of poverty and crime, a year in which almost nothing seemed to go right.

When the Pravda newspaper asked Russians what color they associated with 1993, 42 percent in the year-end poll said gray and 21 percent said black.

Two years have passed since the euphoria of the Soviet collapse. Things are a mess and it looks like they'll stay that way for a long time. Russians now say it may take generations to rebuild — too late for the elderly, not soon enough for today's children.

Some people have carved out a new and promising life amid the confusion. They started businesses or new careers, traveled abroad, saw opportunities where others found only gloom and doom.

But they are a minority.

When the Mnenie polling firm asked Muscovites how their lives had changed in 1993, only one out of three said things were better.

It was a year in which a handful of rich got conspicuously richer. With 900 percent inflation, everyone else seemed to get poorer by the minute.

Prices weren't the only thing that skidded out of control. So did violence.

"Russia weeps bloody tears and prays for an end to the disgrace of lawlessness," one Russian Orthodox leader, the Metropolitan Gedeon, said.

It was a year of fear and suspicion, a year of murder, kidnapping, theft, extortion, gangland shootings, bombings — and a year of political strife that erupted into open warfare.

The Russia of 1993 was a far — and agonized — cry from the good old, bad old days, the days of state-imposed order and predictability.

Many Russians took refuge in nostalgia, many cast their votes for a firm hand. A man some call a Russian Hitler, Vladimir Zhirinovsky, was the top vote-getter in the Dec. 12 parliamentary elections; the Communists didn't do badly, either.

It was also a year that saw Russia's post-Soviet romance with the West turn sour.

The spectacle of capitalism in its crudest form — sleazy products, price-gouging, swindles and scams — sickened many.

So did the West's unquestioning support for President Boris Yeltsin after he summarily disbanded parliament, then attacked the building with tanks and troops after hard-liners rioted in the streets.

The president's October shootout with his political foes stunned Russians. For many, it was a turning point. Fragile hopes for democracy withered. Russians now speak openly of their fears of all-out civil war.

As 1993 sputtered to an end, Yeltsin and his reformers looked on the bright side.

The president praised voters for approving a new constitution. Finance Minister Boris Fyodorov said the ruble was stronger and inflation was lower.

Mikhail Gorbachev, who resigned two years ago as president of the Soviet Union, was less charitable. He called 1993 a year of "mutual shock therapy."

"At first the government shocked the people with its economic program," he told the Rabochaya Tribuna newspaper. "Then the people shocked the government in the elections."

Thousands of Haitians face starvation due to embargo

GONAIVES, Haiti (AP) — Fuel shortages caused by a U.N. embargo have halted food aid shipments to northern Haiti, threatening hundreds of thousands of the nation's poorest and youngest people with severe hunger or even starvation.

Haiti's biggest food aid provider, U.S.-based CARE, had already dropped 115,000 people, mainly children, from a hot-food program because of previous delivery problems. On Thursday, it distributed its last grain and cooking oil for another program that targeted 300,000 more people.

Warehouses in this central port are nearly empty.

WHAT WILL YOU BRING?

"I wonder what the New Year will bring?"

How often we hear that question voiced as we teeter on the edge of a new year. Like toddlers, we know not what is ahead. Yet, we too have guidance and protection...in the form of God and His Holy Word. In the twenty-third Psalm we are assured, "He leads me beside still waters...even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I fear no evil; for Thou art with me..."

It is true that we cannot know what the coming year will bring, but we can determine what we will bring to the New Year...the sacrament of regular worship each Sabbath, the strength of the Scripture, and the calm that comes from a childlike trust in our Heavenly Father.

White Protestants from conservative religious homes are more than twice as likely as white Roman Catholics to marry in their teens, East Tennessee State University researchers found in a study of religious heritage and teen-age marriage.
