ASSESSED VALUATIONS OF KIMBLE COUNTY

County Tax Assessor Joe Bissett completed his work of assessing taxes for the year some time ago, and has just completed his report to the State Comptroller.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Bissett, we are able to give the following information as to the assessed valuations of this county:

Residents rendered, 600,669; non-residents rendered, 197,938; unrendered, 16,692; or a total of 815,299 acres for the county, as against the total area which amounts to 1,301 square miles, or 832,640 acres. The difference is taken up in excess in many surveys and in the town sites of Junction and London. Land valuations amount to $2,176,226; banks, $132,000; and personal property is assessed at $1,668,518; all totaling $3,976,744. The most important renditions in the items of personal property, are: 2,284 horses and mules; 11,741 cattle; 116,212 goats and 121,496 sheep. The wagons, buggies and automobiles in the county have an assessed valuation of $122,101.

The total assessment, if all are collected, will amount to $85,656, of which $23,605 is for school bond or local maintenance purposes, throughout the various districts of the county, and $25,848, goes to the State. Of this $25,848, $13,918, is the 35c State assessment for school purposes.

It might be noted in this connection that Kimble is one of the numerous West Texas counties that pays into the State School Funds, considerably more than it receives back, while many of the counties of East Texas get back in the way of scholastic apportionment and State Aid, considerably more than they pay in taxes each year. With 847 scholastics in this county, and with an apportionment of $11.50, this county will receive from the State, $9,740.

John R. Smart was here Monday on business in connection with the Junction Wool and Mohair Commission firm, of which he is president and manager, and of the Cities Service Oil Company, of which he is the Menard agent. In addition to the Junction Wool and Mohair Company, which handles flour, feed, ranch supplies, lumber, etc., and advertises in this paper, Mr. Smart is placing an other ad. for his oil and gas, and will be glad to take care of the needs of his customers in a prompt and business like way.

BANDERA BUS DRIVER MURDERED LAST WEEK.

The Bandera New Era of last week states that Will A. Gray, well known bus driver, was foully murdered last Sunday near Medina, at the intersection of the Medina-Bandera and Center Point roads, near the old Curtis place. Pat Forrest, a young man living near Medina, was arrested by Sheriff Henry Stevens and Deputy Milton Faris, charged with the crime. Forrest was brought to Bandera and placed in jail, but when threats of mob violence became ripe, Sheriff Stevens and Deputy Faris took the prisoner to San Antonio, where he was placed in the Bexas County jail for safe-keeping.

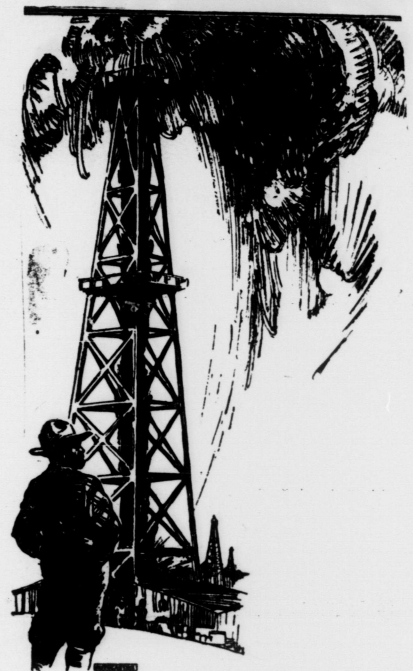

As soon as Dr. J. O. Butler, who had been hastily summoned arrived, an autopsy was held, and it was found that Gray had been most brutally and fiendishly murdered. The body lay on the ground covered with blood and dust. One eyeball protruded from the socket, while the other eyeball was entirely missing. The skull on the right temple and around the right eye had been crushed and broken to pieces and the brain was exposed through a gaping hole, while on the left side of the head around the left eye and temple, another jagged hole was found, and the skull there was broken into fragments and crushed. Between the eyes and on the forehead the skull had likewise been broken, the right cheek bone was crushed and a gaping hole was there. The chin was broken, the teeth of the victim had been knocked in and the jawbone fractured. Several cuts and bruises were on top of the head, and several bruises were on the back. The left collar bone was also fractured. Where the car wheels had passed over the small of the back were dark bruises, and while the back bone was not broken, Dr. Butler is of the opinion that the spinal cord was severed by the impact of the heavy car.

It was a most revolting sight, and while the body was being examined in the presence of the officers, Forrest was seen approaching in Gray's car, coming from his home. As he drove up to the gate, and within about seventy-five feet of where the body lay, Sheriff Stevens and Deputy Faris took him in custody, and for the present will be kept in the Bexas County jail.

Col. Wm. L. Black, pioneer ranchman of the McKavitt country, spent Tuesday night in Junction and left for San Antonio and Austin. He is now living in San Antonio.

Miss Lois Pippin of Everett, Washington, arrived last week, and will be at home with her father, H. Pippin, local manager of the West Texas Utilities Company. She has been with her grand-parents in Washington for several years.

OIL TEST WELL SPURRED IN WEDNESDAY, 16 MILES WEST OF JUNCTION.

This is not the derrick on the Bode Ranch. The Dixie Rig is a standard double steel tubular, 84-feet high, each leg on a 7x7 feet concrete foundation. An 85 H. P. oil engine is used for motive power and all tools are of the best grade. More than 2,500 feet of casing is on the ground and the crews are working 24 hours each day. The drillers are Sam Droppelman and Dave Slater, and the tool dressers are Roy Hodge and Andy Odel.

RECENT RAINS INSURE SPLENDID FALL RANGE

Rainfall that was general over the county and in most of Southwest Texas, amounted to from 1 to 2 inches, will mature late crops and insure improved range for fall and winter. The rains fell slowly, very little running into the streams.

Cotton picking which is the order of the day with the farmers, was slightly interfered with but the benefits far offset the slight losses.

On account of the heavy summer travel, the roads were dusting out badly, and it was impossible for the road men to maintain the highways in a satisfactory manner, but as soon as the rains were over, Sanford Roe, highway section foreman, who is recognized as one of the best road men in the State, had all available men and machinery on the roads, dragging and filling in the places that had been badly worn. The roads in all directions are now in excellent condition.

Messrs. B. B. Ragland and B. L. Smith who represent two firms selling medicine for the stomach worm in sheep, and who have advertised their products in The Eagle, both report more trouble from the stomach worm this year than in any like period in several years. Both report exceptionally large sales, and while the trouble has been general over the country, comparatively few losses have been sustained, where the animals were given proper attention and treated early.

C. M. Breeding, formerly of Junction, but later of Rock-springs, where he and Willis Johnson formed a partnership to do general contracting, write from Sanderson to have his paper changed to that place, as he and Mr. Johnson have a $75,000 contract that will keep them busy there for several months.

Harper Herald, August 25: Quite an enjoyable affair took place at the home of Fred Bierschwald last Sunday. A host of friends and relatives gathered there and enjoyed a sumptuous dinner and spent a delightful evening. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Stockard, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Fairchild and Rev. Wm. Bierschwald.

Rev. J. Virgil Davis, of the Methodist Church, who with Rev. R. W. Fisher, pastor of the Methodist Church at Sonora, is conducting a revival at Roosevelt, asks that announcement be made that he will preach at Copperas Sunday morning and also in the afternoon, and will be in Junction to conduct the night services here.

More and Better Hotels

The mention of Junction's new hotel in this column recently appears to have started something, for in one way or another my attention has been called to the fact that hotels, and good hotels, too, are going up all over Texas as if by magic. Here are just a few to which my notice has been called during the last week:

Hillsboro has just formally opened a four-story, 52-room hotel that cost $150,000; it is described as admirably located on the line of the interurban railway, and the Colorado-to-the Gulf, the Meridian, and the King of Trails Highways.

Harlingen will give over the week of September 14 to celebrating the opening of the Rees-Wilmond Hotel, which is to be a sort of joint celebration of the completion of the hotel and the Southern Pacific's building into Harlingen. The hotel is a big, costly one, in keeping with the Rio Grande Valley way of doing things.

San Benito, also in the Rio Grande Valley, has started construction of a $200,000 hotel, which will have 80 rooms.

Weslaco, in the same section of the State, is to have a $250,000 hotel, a five-story, 100-room structure.

Bay City, in Matagorda County, near the coast, a place which many Texans think was finished 50 years or more ago, but which is really a live town, is preparing to build a $125,000 hotel.

Uvalde builders have accepted the plans for a three-story brick hotel to cost $125,000. Marathon is going to have a new hotel, the cost of which is not stated, but which the whiter says will be "modern, up-to-date and ample."

The Big Springs Herald still carries a front page streamer, which says, "The Greatest need of Big Springs is a First Class Hotel; Let's Get It."

All of which goes to show that Texas is prospering, else it would not be building expensive hotels. It takes money to build modern hotels and a paying patronage to sustain them.

Brownsville Bond Issue

Brownsville is Texas' southernmost city. It was once regarded as a sleepy, lifeless burg with manana spirit from which it could never be aroused. But something awakened the old town about a decade ago, and since then it has been trying to make up for its long sleep. Its latest proposal is for a $500,000 bond issue for storm and sanitary sewer lines, and street building. The city is to put $300,000 into street paving on a plan of requiring the landowners to pay two-thirds of the cost. In that way more than a million dollars in improvements will be made with its half million dollar bond issue. All of which proves that Brownsville is now much alert.

Olney's Construction Program

Olney is in Young County, of which Graham is the county site. Its newspaper is The Enterprise, with Ralph Shuffler as the guiding spirit. There is something in the name of the paper and the editor that suggests activity. That Olney is active is shown in the fact that it now has on hand a $250,000 construction program, of which half will go into a high school building and the other half into improvements of Olney Lake, into a sewage disposal plant and other public improvements that go to make a small city a desirable place in which to live.

Teachers Are Resigning

Following the announcement that the scholastic apportionment had been reduced to $11.50 after the tax reduction, thirty-five Travis county rural teachers resigned. School teachers feel that, however much they may love their work, they can't afford to teach 5 or 6 months in the year at salaries of about half that paid ordinary day laborers. The people of Texas want good rural schools, taught by competent teachers, and they are able and willing to pay fair salaries for satisfactory service.

Another Texas Railroad

If the Interstate Commerce Commission will agree to the proposal, a railway will be constructed from Ardmore, Oklahoma, to Lubbock, Texas, according to a statement recently issued by the promoters of the line. The road will extend through Wilbarger, Foard, Cottle, King, Deikens and Crosby Counties to Lubbock and will help in the development of a section with rich agricultural resources.

Brown County Oil Wells

Brown County has a new oil field seven miles out from Brownwood and it gives promise of being the best yet developed in that county, which has become the leading oil county of the Central Texas territory. It begins to look like all of Brown County is underlaid with oil and that the only thing needed is right development. Most of the oil found is in shallow territory ranging from 2 or 3 hundred to 1,600 feet in depth.

Community Fairs

Community fairs have become quite popular in Texas. The expense of such fairs is small, the essential thing for their success being the co-operation of the people of a community. The community spirit created by the people joining together to make the community fair a success is worth a great deal to any people. People who work together over their common problems usually come to like each other. The community spirit is worth much to any people. Texas needs more of it—a return to the old neighborly feeling of pioneer days. Let's cultivate it and restore it. The community fair is a good beginning place, and from there it may be extended to the county and the State.

Ward County Stone

The stone with which to build San Antonio's new court house is being quarried in Ward County, near Barstow, on the Texas Pacific railroad. The stone is being furnished by a Houston company and is to be dressed at Cisco. It is a very beautiful red stone, the original court house at San Antonio being constructed of stone from the same quarry. It is the same stone seen in many of the stations along the Texas Pacific railroad. Texas has building material in enough varieties to meet any architectural taste.

Publicity Agents Wanted

With Marcellus Foster writing about the enticements of Hollywood and O. O. McIntyre telling about the allurements of Broadway, and both of them using the columns of Texas newspapers every day, this State is badly in need of some real press agenting.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By E. R. Waite)
Curtis A. Hodges, General Manager and Managing Editor of the Indianapolis News, says: That Elias Howe died in poverty because, though he had the inventive genius to create the sewing machine, he did not have the ability or the opportunity to market it. He had to wait until one woman bought and told another, and such primitive and painfully slow word-of-mouth advertising could never build the market, his invention deserved.

And the real tragedy of his failure was that for another generation women had to wear out their eyes, impair their their health and waste countless hours at sewing by hand, when the machine they had waited for since the beginning of time had already been invented for them.

This tragedy can never happen again. As soon as an invention is perfected, it is made known and made available in every town and hamlet, every city and on every farm in the land—at once—through advertising. Look at the radio, the automobile, the vacuum cleaner, the electric refrigerator!

Advertising is a public utility. It is the art of making known. It is mighty in the public service. It conquers time, it banishes distance, it saves incalculable treasure, it speeds production and prosperity, creates national distribution and makes life richer and better, and it pays for itself by reducing the cost of making, distributing and selling goods.

An advertisingless world would speedily revert to feudalism.

ARE THE LEGISLATURES ENTIRELY AT FAULT?

Chester I. Lon, president of the American Bar Association, in an address at the annual meeting of the association in Denver, Colorado, said:

"Courts of America are unable to function properly under present conditions. The public has lost confidence in the courts, both criminal and civil, all because of the 'straight jacket' with which the judiciary has been encased through efforts of ill-advised and misguided legislators of the country."

It is probably true that the Legislatures in the various states have passed some ill-advised laws which hamper the courts in some degree, but the most of the laws complained of were introduced by lawyers, passed upon by a committee composed of lawyers in the Legislature and signed by governors who followed the profession of law before they got into politics.

Members of the American Bar Association, or of any other organization composed of lawyers, cannot hide behind the Legislatures, or find in them a defense of the profession against the charges made by the people of this country. The deplorable condition of our courts and the disgraceful methods of procedure and practice are largely chargeable to the lawyers themselves. The people know this to be true, and so do the lawyers.

The law does not require an attorney to hide out a witness or wink at perjury. It does not require a lawyer to seek delays and reversals on unimportant technicalities, nor does it require a judge to grant the delays or force him to reverse or remand cases on such technicalities. The statutes do not command lawyers to put on vaudeville stunts with all the accessories of the stage in order to influence juries, nor does it prohibit the judge from ruling against stunts which reflect upon the dignity of the court. Legislatures have never, by enactment, made a "bag of tricks" more effective in winning a case than a complete knowledge of the law. As a matter of fact, most legislation touching upon the subject of courts and matters related there

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Ballad of Captain Kidd

CAPT. WILLIAM KIDD, perhaps the most famous pirate of all time, was hanged at Wapping, England on May 23, 1701. Popular feeling, evidently sensing what was established as historical fact 200 years later—that an innocent man went to his death at Execution dock that day—immediately made a martyr of him and he became the hero of a popular ballad which, like so many other ballads, grew and grew as each singer added his contribution to it. There are known to be at least 24 stanzas to the ballad, and possibly more. It is a typical example of balladry and perhaps the most famous of all ballads in which a pirate is the hero. Curiously enough William Kidd was always called Robert Kidd by the populace, and here is a part of the ballad as it was then sung:

My name was Robert Kidd, when I sailed, when I sailed,
My name was Robert Kidd, when I sailed,

My name was Robert Kidd, when I sailed, when I sailed,
God's law I did forbid, and so wickedly I did, when I sailed.

My parents taught me well, when I sailed, when I sailed,
My parents taught me well, when I sailed,

My parents taught me well, when I sailed, when I sailed,
To shut the gates of hell, but 'gainst them I rebelled, when I sailed.

I'd a Bible in my hand, when I sailed, when I sailed,
I'd a Bible in my hand, when I sailed,

I'd a Bible in my hand, when I sailed, when I sailed,
By my father's great command, and sunk it in the sand, when I sailed.

I spied the ships of Spain, as I sailed, as I sailed,
I spied the ships of Spain, as I sailed,

I spied the ships of Spain, as I sailed, as I sailed,
I fired on them unawares, 'Till most of them was slain, as I sailed.

I'd ninety bars of gold, as I sailed, as I sailed,
I'd ninety bars of gold, as I sailed,

I'd ninety bars of gold, as I sailed, as I sailed,
And dollars manifold, with riches uncontrolled, as I sailed.

To Execution dock I must go, I must go,
To Execution dock, I must go,

To Execution dock, I must go, I must go,
But I must bear the shock, and must die.

Come all ye, young and old, see me die, see me die,
Come all ye, young and old, see me die,

Come all ye, young and old, see me die, see me die,
You're welcome to my gold, For by it I've lost my soul, and must die.

Take warning now by me, for I must die, for I must die,
Take warning now by me, for I must die,

Take warning now by me, for I must die, see me die,
And shun bad company, Lest you come to hell with me, for I die.

BOLL WORM CONTROL.

(By A. R. Reppert, Entomologist, A. & M. College.)

Complaints of heavy damage from boll worms are now reaching our office. An unusually heavy infestation may be expected on account of the excellent corn crop over most of the State which was late and served to breed unusually large numbers of the pests, which is the same as the corn ear worm, and it is now turning to the cotton.

At the time this worm is noticeable to the farmer it has grown to the size at which it bores into the cotton boll, and at this time secures very little of a surface covering of poison, and so is not easily controlled. At the time it first hatches as a very small worm when it ordinarily escapes observation, it feeds on the leaf surface and may then be very well controlled by applications of arsenical poisons as advised for the leaf-worm. Continued control, however, requires that repeated applications must be made at intervals of about a week.

Usually damage from this insect does not exceed five or ten percent. Where the damage is not more than this, it is doubtful if the saving made by applying the poison will repay the cost. Evidently the damage will be much more this season and probably control may be undertaken with profit. Where control measures for leafworm was applied, they will, of course be effective against the younger boll worms.

KILLING MOSS IN TANKS.

How to kill moss accumulating in tanks is a frequent inquiry received by M. R. Bently, Agricultural Engineer, who says that in most instances the moss is probably plant growth known as algae.

This growth flourishes in the sun light and does not grow in the shade, and therefore Mr. Bently recommends that in case of small wooden or metal tanks that a cover be built over the top to cut out the sun light.

Algae in open earthen tanks may be killed with a dilute solution of copper sulphate but will grow again in 30 to 40 days unless the treatment is repeated. The proper solution to use is about one ounce copper sulphate to 7,500 gallons of water. The copper sulphate crystals should be dissolved in a small quantity of water and then this concentrated solution should be poured into the tank. There is no danger of killing or injuring livestock with such a dilute solution.—Exchange.

GOOD BUTTER.

How we enjoy good butter!
Hard to get some times, but easy to keep fresh and sweet if you will follow this suggestion:
Your refrigerator has all the refinements of the modern cold storage plant if you will use it properly. Due to the fact that cold air is heavier than warm air, there is a continual circulation up from the food compartment and down over the ice. In passing downward over the melting ice the air is cooled and washed. The pure soft water from which ice is made is highly absorbent. It picks up the odors, gases and food impurities carrying them out through the drain. Butter being a delicacy, very susceptible to odors, should therefore be placed in the region of the lowest temperature and purest air, which is the lowest part of the refrigerator, or if you have a three door type, it is directly under the ice.

ADVERSITY.

Sleep was an elusive nymph, and until the first gray rays of daybreak, I lay restless and awake. Instead of starting over again, as I had planned, after my confession of events and an expression of sincere regret for the manner in which I had flirted with Barrington Pierce, Curtiss' anger had just the opposite effect. Instead of being conscious-stricken, as I had been before, I now felt justified for my conduct in the past, and too, instead of the condemnation I had felt for Barry, I now clothed him with an aura of romance. The beautiful phrases he had used in declaring his regard for me, I kept repeating to myself. Lined up against Barry's fervent compliments the austere way in which Curtiss had greeted me, seemed most unkind.

It was now early morning—the sort of fresh dawning that promises a day of sapphire and gold. I dressed and decided to go for a walk. As I slipped out of the front door I met Curtiss coming up the brief concrete drive. Evidently he had not taken off his clothes.

"I went down to the corner for cigarettes," he explained. "And you?"

"I'm going for a stroll in the park," then noticed the lined, gaunt look about his eyes; I invited him to come along.

Paris had hardly begun to stir. We swung along at a brisk pace, walking in silence, until we reached the near-by park. The flowers, too, were aware of the pristine loveliness of the dawn and had opened wide their petals in a spirit of happiness, derived from the frolic they had had the night before with fairies, brownies, and elfin sprites! By common consent we seated ourselves on a bench beneath the sun-flecked branches of an avenue of planes.

I knew that when Curtiss spoke it would not be to refer to the unpleasant misunderstanding through which we had passed. He had the splendid faculty of not repeatedly returning to unhappy events. Finally in a calm, steady voice, he broke the silence.

"Sallie."

"Yes, Curtiss."

"I'm broke."

I looked up quickly from the dew-drenched grass. "What do you mean, please, Curtiss; don't joke."

"I'm not, and for your sake, I wish to Heaven I were joking. It's true. Riley, from the company had dinner with me last night. He brought in the last straw that broke the camel's back. You see, I'd been receiving warnings all along that the Riviera's investments were heading towards a loss, but I had no idea things were so bad until Riley came last night with minute report of the facts."

"But, honey, I don't understand. Sympathy now replaced any resentment I might have felt for his harsh behavior when I had returned from the DeWights."

"Well, you see, sweetheart, we had invested heavily in property along the Riviera. Hotels, apartments, and even villas with modern conveniences and such. It was a tremendous expenditure, but I had faith in its returns and invested heavily myself. There was one reason only that kept it from making us a million once the season was at its height. A condition that it was impossible to figure out."

"What on earth could it be?" I asked.

"Florida," he replied; "you see the unheard-of exodus to Florida has left the Riviera as desolate as Main Street. Our hotels are waiting to be leased. The shutters of our pretty pink villas are closed tight, the rich Europeans are in America this year and are apt to be for several years to come, or at least until the novelty wears out. It isn't smart for them to seek the Riviera any more. From past statistics, when Nice, and Monte Carlo and Cannes were the most fashionable watering places in the world, we estimated that we could work up a tremendous business with a chain of modern hotels. And we could have done it if Florida had stayed put!"

"Do you mean you haven't any money at all? Curtiss why didn't you tell me last night?"

"Oh, I didn't want to tell you at all, but after thinking it over all night, I decided that it would not be fair to keep you in the dark. Besides," he was slightly embarrassed, "it will possibly make a great change in our plans."

"Of course it will, Curtiss; I feel perfectly terrible about not being there last night when you came home with no one to share your troubles with at all. Don't worry though, dearest, because Dad will help us out."

"That's fine of you, Sallie, to think of soliciting his help, but I couldn't stand that. I can't even let him help you and maintain my self-respect. You're so used to luxuries, though, that it's going to be hard sailing for you at first."

"You mean we can't have our lovely, great big, beautiful house in Florida when we get back? Has it gone that far?" I asked.

He smiled. "I knew you couldn't understand anything about finance. We'll have very little until I get on my feet again, and you'll probably have to economize for the first time in your life. But if you love me you won't mind living very simply for a while, will you, sweetheart?" He looked searchingly into my eyes as if his very life depended on the sort of answer he would find.

"No, indeed!" I exclaimed; "we'll just change the plans for our house and have an adorable small one, and not have many servants; maybe just two, or, at the most not more than three—and I won't get that lovely pink coat when I return to New York. I'll get the quiet simple one of squirrel. Oh, I'd just love economizing, Curtiss. It'll be such fun!"

Perplexity covered his face. "But, Sallie, I'm afraid it will have to be even more meagre than that. I know it's hard for you to understand right at first. You see we'll have to stoop to the ruins, as it were, and build again, but it will be easy with your help."

"I'll tell you what let's do," I suggested; "get sketches of Marie Antoinette's playhouse in the garden of the Petit Trianon and have it copied for our home. You know that's where she used to go and pretend that she, too, was poor. We'll have to stay here longer, though, if we do that, and we can't go to Venice as we had planned."

"Listen, Sallie!" said Curtiss, "it's breaking my heart to tell you this, but we can't copy Marie Antoinette's house or anything one-half as elaborate as that, and we aren't even going to Venice, I'm afraid, because it's absolutely imperative that I return to the States. I have an offer from a firm in Birmingham and so I've decided to go there and start all over again. It's close to Miami, Soals and is also the steel center of the South. On account of the new developments it should be a splendid place for my line of work. I have two other propositions, one in China and the other in Peru, but I can't take you to places like that. So we will sail on the 'Leviathan' next week."

The worries of the quarrel we had had the night before seemed petty indeed, compared to this. Not to return to my old home and to live away from my father and friends. I wondered if Curtiss realized what a tremendous sacrifice he was asking me to make?

BRASS BUTTONS

For so many years that they are almost past counting the British fighting man wore brass buttons on his uniform. Bright brass buttons, polished and polished and polished, gleaming brighter than gold in the sun. And in the brightness of those buttons was reflected the pride of the British soldier in his country and himself.

War came in 1914. Twentieth Century efficiency in the War College looked at those bright brass buttons and frowned. How foolish, said the experts, to send a man into the field with that kind of gleaming target stuck on his breast for the enemy to spot afar. Away went the bright brass buttons, covered up under a drab coat of bronze varnish. And away went the buffer and the can of metal polish that for so many years had been a necessity in the kit of every Tommy.

And with the buffer and the can of polish went a large slice of the vaunted morale of the British fighting man. For generations in the British army the meticulous shining of those buttons had epitomized the iron discipline that required every British soldier to look as well as act like a soldier. When he quit shining his buttons, he quit shining his shoes, quit cleaning his clothes, quit washing his face. Discipline slumped and morale slackened. And for want of a brass button to shine, the driving force of those great British armies wavered and slowed.

So came swiftly the order from headquarters. And off came the bronze varnish. Back came the cleaning rags and the buffers and the polish. And rain or shine, through mud and dust and filth—through grimy billet and stinking trench, the British Tommy shined his way back to glory and to victory.

Well trimmed lawns and hedges; well kept flower beds; neat, clean buildings with shining, clean windows and well scrubbed floors; tools and equipment bright and orderly and well tended—these things intrinsically have no part in the production of the kilowatts of electric energy you use. But they have a very important part in the morale and the efficiency of the organization that day and night, is serving you.

This company believes in BRASS BUTTONS!

MORE TO GOVERNOR'S OFFICE THAN SALARY OF $4,000 PER YEAR.

It may not look like much of a job to be governor of Texas with a salary of only $4,000 a year, but look what you get on the side.

A house that would probably rent at around $200 a month and an expense account of $38,186 a year paid by the State.

The State pays the servants at the mansion, makes all repairs, add new furnishings, and pays fuel, light, ice, telephone and water bills. These little items amounted to $5,500 in 1925, of which $2,000 went to the servants, fuel, lights, ice, etc., and repairs and new furnishings cost $2,000.

The grounds maintained by the State include a large poultry yard well stocked with turkeys and chickens. Flowers

THE OBLIGATIONS OF MOTHERHOOD.

(By Wesley Peacock, Ph. B.) It is popular to blame the boys and girls of today for their flippancy, their resistance to restraint, and their disregard for parents and teachers. It was popular to do the thing two thousand years ago.

It is true that young people today are more immoral than formerly, if immoral means not following the customs and conventions generally accepted and observed by society. But I do not believe that a higher percentage of our young people of both sexes are immoral than they were before the war, if by immoral is meant promiscuous sin. If temptations to sin have multiplied ten times in ten years, knowledge, the power of resistance, the resources of self-protection, and the spirit of chivalry have also multiplied ten times.

"Psychology of Childhood" by Misses Morsworthy and Whitley of Columbus University, has helped me most in rearing my children, because from its study I have learned:

1. That my children with their physical traits are reproductions of myself, and therefore to study and to help them I have learned to study and to help myself. I have taken greater care to acquire habits of neatness, cleanliness, and orderliness that I might inculcate in them a daily routine making for health and sanitation.

2. That my children are humans, and not little angels, with inheritances of original nature replete with dynamic potentialities that find expression every minute of the day, and that appeal to mother for detection, direction, and development with not a moment of precious time to lose in their training.

3. That my children acquire their life habits, their impulses, and their peculiarities from their infantile emotional experiences, as well as their childhood emotional experiences, and that I must regulate their emotions while I direct their instincts.

4. That my children are my children by design, and not by accident, and that nature by imposing upon me the obligation of their maintenance also confides in me the trust of rearing them for this life and for the next; and that under no pretense may I transfer to another person or institution this sacred trust.

Flowers from the State green house.

CELEBRATE ROB MORRIS' BIRTHDAY.

The members of the Eastern Star and invited guests celebrated the birthday of Rob Morris, the founder of the organization, Tuesday evening with a social on the pretty lawn of the Worthy Matron, Mrs. A. W. Loeffler.

The lawn was prettily decorated and lighted with Japanese lanterns, pot plants and flowers, also added much floral charm to the setting.

Delicious punch was served from an improvised well that was draped with green crepe paper, which proved to be the most interesting spot on the lawn; a pretty decorated birthday cake was also served.

A most entertaining program of readings, piano and vocal solos was enjoyed by a large crowd.

ADAMS-MAY

The Yoakum Herald of last week carried the announcement of the marriage of Mr. W. F. Adams Jr., and Miss Selma May which occurred recently in Austin at the University Presbyterian Church.

The groom is a member of a prominent family of Yoakum, and a member of the law firm of Adams & Adams of that city. After graduating from the University of Texas, he was editor of the Yoakum Daily Herald before joining his father in the practice of law.

The bride is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. May of London, and has a host of friends in that community as well as throughout the county. After completing her school work she went to San Antonio for a course in nursing, and later to a hospital in Yoakum where she continued her courses. She is a very accomplished young woman and has a wide circle of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams will be at home to their friends at 408 East Hugo street, Yoakum.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES.

"The Law Breaker." The pastor preaches on this theme at 8:15 Sunday evening. The theme for the 11 o'clock sermon will be, "Why Pray?" There some three or four hundred people in Junction that do not attend Sunday School or preaching. Why do they not go? One reason is of course, they do not want to go, and another reason is those of you who claim to be God's children that are so world ly spending your time on the rivers on Sunday, or gambling or cursing or making your tongue run in high about some one or caring nothing about the church of Jesus Christ and His cause, that you disgust some people that might come. Then another reason is that many people who love God and His cause are just unthoughtful about inviting people to come to church and Sunday School. Let every one of us co-operate in our church work and fulfill the commission of our Lord of Preaching and teaching and baptizing as He has commanded us to do.

The men had a good meeting at the pastor's home Monday evening. We are planning on having a "get-together meeting" just for a sociable hour together each month. Watch for the date of the next meeting. If you helive in your church you will be there Sunday at both services.

No excuse can keep one from church if one really wants to go. "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." "He that believeth on the Son of God hath everlasting life." J. A. Dekle.

Mrs. Hanks received a letter Tuesday from Louis Domingues, stating that he would be here for the Water Carnival at Price's Camp on next Tuesday, given for the Presbyterian Church building fund. He had previously advised that he would be unable to get here.

Remember the date—September 11th. This is the date on which the ladies of the Parent Teachers' Association will have lots of fine home made candy for sale on the streets of Junction. Several delicious cakes will be given away. Don't forget about this.

From the above, it is evident that the buying public still consider the Ford Car the best buy for the money. Not only does the Ford sales in Texas amount to more than all other cars combined, but it leads its nearest competitor by nearly two to one, and its next nearest by about twenty to one.

The question has been asked us numbers of times if it were true that Ford Plants were "shut down." If you have heard this rumor, we ask you to study the above figures carefully, and you will soon be convinced that Ford Plants are still "wide open," and that there is no indication of a "shut down."

IN KIMBLE COUNTY—During the month of August there were 21 new cars and trucks registered. Of this number 10 were Fords. Everywhere on our highways you note the preponderance of NEW FORDS. They get the hardest usage and the least care, but they furnish the best and cheapest transportation known.

Here are some more figures, and we ask you to read them:

"Another million mark in Ford production was passed on July 21 when motor No. 14,000,000 came off the assembly line at the Fordson Plant of the Ford Motor Company. Only a little more than two years ago, June 4, 1924, that the famous Ten Millionth Ford was produced, an event which was celebrated by driving the car across the country from New York to San Francisco on the Lincoln Highway. In the twenty five and a half months elapsing since that time Ford output increased 4,000,000."

Just think of it! almost two million cars every twelve months! Now some more figures: Since January, 1926, one million Ford cars and trucks have been sold and delivered by Ford Dealers. We can give you some more interesting figures, but this will give you enough for one time and should convince you that Mr. Ford is not asleep.

The moral is: Compare these figures first, then compare the selling price of cars; then count your money, and your bank account and buy a Ford and save the difference.
