Industry stakes D.C. rig

Oil-patch lawmakers plead for tax changes

■ 'If we think we had a problem in the early '70s . . . — as they would say in Odessa: "You ain't seen nothing yet," ' Rep. Larry Combest says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Against the backdrop of Capitol Hill and a 105-foot oil and natural-gas drilling rig, oil-patch state lawmakers Wednesday bemoaned circumstances that have pushed the energy industry into one of its worst slumps.

But they said that energy legislation being considered by Congress — while far from perfect — will help redress the situation.

"This bill will not solve all of America's energy needs . . . but it is an important step in the right direction and it has been a long time since our government has done anything aimed at trying to produce more job creation in the oil and gas business in this country," said Sen. Phil Gramm.

Gramm, R-Texas, was one of several lawmakers who spoke at a news conference on the Mall organized by the Independent Petroleum Association of America. The Permian Basin Petroleum Association is a member of IPAA, which represents a number of regional oil and gas associations.

Denise Bode, president of the IPAA, sketched the bleak situation the industry is facing.

"In the last 10 months, 45,000 people in my industry who used to work on rigs like this have lost their jobs," she said.

The number of working rigs stands at 610 — compared to 3,000 a decade ago, Ms. Bode said. Since 1982, the energy industry has lost 400,000 jobs and the nation

Baptist ouster of 2 churches stirs concern

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The Southern Baptists' unprecedented decision to banish two churches for accepting homosexuals may give fundamentalists a tool to purge the denomination of dissenting members, moderates said Wednesday.

The action endangered the Southern Baptist Convention's historic principle of congregational autonomy, critics said.

But others attending the convention of the nation's biggest Protestant denomination insisted the case wasn't likely to presage a "slippery slope" of other infringements on local church independence.

"It was a highly unusual case that required highly unusual procedure," said the Rev. David Hankins of Lake Charles, La., chairman of an executive committee

Kentucky's magnanimous madam dies at 87

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — A magnanimous madam who helped feed hungry families and gave her brothel employees one week per month off to spend with their families has died of congestive heart failure at 87.

Pauline Tabor Webster died Monday night at a nursing home near San Antonio. Kentucky's most famous madam moved to Texas more than 10 years ago to live near her son.

"Aside from her commercial pursuit, Pauline was . . . a good friend you could count on," said local historian Ray Buckberry Jr.

He said court and welfare officials often turned to her for help in getting a family some coal or food.

In her 1971 book, "Pauline's," she had "no regrets, no apologies, no complaints" about life as a madam, Webster said.

She got into the brothel business with a party in November 1933, shocking her friends and family. She did this after spending three years as a Depression-era

Watergate files detail Nixon aid to Bush in '70s

By Jeff Gerth with Robert Pear

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In the early 1970s, even as President Richard M. Nixon became enveloped in the Watergate scandal, he helped elevate George Bush to national political prominence.

Now, as the June 17 break-in at the Watergate approaches its 20th anniversary, a review of thousands of files — many made public in the last few years — offers interesting new historical details of Bush's connections to the Nixon

U.S., Malaysia at loggerheads on forests

■ Delegates put finishing touches on environmental pacts.

Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — The United States and Third World nations clashed Wednesday over how to preserve forests, as Earth Summit delegates put the finishing touches on pacts for environmental protection.

The documents were being prepared for the more than 100 heads of state who will gather in Rio by Friday; President Bush is scheduled to arrive today. In Washington, the White House announced that the United States would support one of the summit's key documents, a nonbinding statement of environmental rights and responsibilities called the Rio Declaration.

The United States has become increasingly isolated at the summit, where it is criticized for weakening an accord on world climate and for refusing to sign a biodiversity agreement to protect plants and animals from extinction.

About 400 of the thousands of environmentalists in Rio for the summit demonstrated Wednesday outside the U.S. consulate.

The summit delegates also are finishing conventions on climate control and protecting plant and

Colonel puts some polish on Army as career move

By Darren J. Waggoner

Staff writer

U.S. Army Col. Johnnie B. Hitt assured local recruiters Wednesday that the Army "will not die" despite highly publicized reports of military cutbacks.

Hitt, recruiting brigade commander for 13 states in the central United States, believes opportunities in the Army will increase by 1995.

"The older guys like me will be moving out — retiring or dying or doing whatever old guys do — and the new guys are coming in to take their places. There are a lot of opportunities for advancement. You are today's Army," Hitt told two recruits at the office.

Army cutbacks will be spread out over the next three years and therefore Hitt sees no cause for concern.

"The regular Army will have

Bowl parade is off

DALLAS — The Cotton Bowl Parade will no longer move through downtown Dallas after organizers Wednesday canceled the New Year's Day event, but the mayor vowed to revive the decades-old tradition. The decision by the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association late Wednesday came after NBC which bought the rights to the Cotton Bowl Classic in April, said it would not carry the parade. A Dallas tradition since 1957, the parade has been televised to a nationwide audience by CBS since 1963.

Hess documents

LONDON — Rudolph Hess, the Nazi leader who parachuted into Scotland on a bizarre peace mission in 1941, told British authorities that Adolf Hitler knew nothing about his plans, according to documents released Wednesday. Contrary to Soviet suspicions, the documents give no indication that Hess told the British about the impending Nazi invasion of Russia. Hess parachuted into Scotland on May 11, 1941, following a 900-mile solo flight from Berlin.

Faberge egg sells

NEW YORK — A gem-studded Faberge Imperial Easter Egg, dubbed the "love trophy egg," sold for $3.19 million at Sotheby's auction house Wednesday. The sale was a record for a Faberge egg and for any Russian work of art, said Sotheby's spokeswoman Laura Stewart. The egg was sold to an anonymous collector. The egg was commissioned by Czar Nicholas II, apparently for his wife, the Czarina Alexandra, for Easter in 1905.

No Bush attempt

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton and Ross Perot may be near-regulars on television news and call-in shows, but President Bush still has a few tricks up his sleeve when it comes to talk-show relations. Last week he had Rush Limbaugh, the conservative radio talk-show host, to dinner at the White House and put him up for the evening in the Lincoln Bedroom. Limbaugh, who scourges liberals on a three-hour call-in show carried by almost 500 radio stations, is scornful of "Slick Willie" Clinton and calls himself "totally opposed" to Perot. But he says his night at the White House was not a Bush attempt to buy his support.

FILES: Nixon helped elevate Bush to national prominence in '70s presidency before and after it was overtaken by Watergate.

While the documents in the National Archives hold no major new disclosures, they shed new light on the benefits Bush received from a 1970 campaign financing arrangement by the Nixon White House, known as the townhouse operation because it was operated out of a townhouse in Northwest Washington, that later came under the scrutiny of Watergate prosecutors.

And they provide new evidence of blackmail efforts by the Nixon White House that were little discussed previously.

The documents from the Nixon White House detail the administration's plan to distribute $6,000 in cash to selected candidates, including Bush, then a congressman from Texas who was running for the Senate.

The cash was part of an effort both to help fellow Republicans and gain political "leverage" over the recipients, should they later hold important positions.

Bush lost the Senate race to his Democratic opponent, Lloyd Bentsen Jr. A month later, Nixon named Bush to be the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Then, in early 1973, Bush became chairman of the Republican National Committee.

The documents from the Archives indicate that Bush asked in July 1973 whether party records of the townhouse operation should be burned. After a long fight, the Watergate prosecutor later obtained townhouse records from the White House.

The Watergate prosecutor never charged Bush or any other townhouse recipient with a violation of federal law. Bush was never a target of their investigation.

In the past, he has said that all of his campaign's finances were properly handled. Bush and the White House declined to answer questions about the townhouse operation submitted Tuesday.

In 1970, Nixon and his aides supervised a secret $3 million campaign slush fund run out of the Washington townhouse. The operation funneled money to selected Republican candidates including Bush, who received more than $100,000.

Moreover, the White House documents show that the townhouse operation had a dark side called the "six project," in which the White House chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, ordered that $6,000 in cash be delivered to each of about 15 Republican candidates.

Records from the Nixon White House indicate that one of these small cash donations went to Bush or his campaign manager in 1970.

The Watergate scandal, which began with the break-in in 1972, had its roots in the townhouse operation; both involved some of the same fund-raisers, donors and and campaign finance abuses.

News accounts in the 1970s and in 1980 raised questions about whether Bush reported all the money he received from the operation. At that time, Bush insisted that he had properly reported the money and complained that there was no justification for raising the issue.

Haldeman was in charge of the townhouse operation, and Nixon's personal lawyer, Herbert W. Kalmbach, was its chief fund-raiser. The scheme also involved Nixon's top political strategist, Harry S. Dent Jr., who helped administer the slush fund.

A third man, Jack A. Gleason, worked for Dent at the White House before being moving over to the townhouse operation in 1970.

Kalmbach, Dent and Gleason pleaded guilty in 1974 to violations of federal election law in connection with the townhouse operation.

According to a prosecution memorandum that has apparently not been disclosed before, Gleason told prosecutors in 1973 that "the purpose of these contributions was to set up possible blackmail for these candidates later on."

The Watergate prosecutors concluded that "George Bush received a total of approximately $112,000 from the townhouse operation in connection with his 1970 senatorial campaign."

In a 1974 memorandum, the prosecutors said the White House evidently hoped to gain political leverage over Bush and the other candidates "by placing cash in their hands which they might not report."

Bush has acknowledged receiving $106,000 from the townhouse operation, but has denied that he got the $6,000 in casn.

It has been previously disclosed that the White House tried to blackmail one recipient of townhouse money, Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut, when he was appointed to the Senate Watergate Committee in 1973.

But the newly disclosed records suggest that the White House was trying to gain similar leverage over the other Republican candidates who took townhouse money in 1970, including Bush.

Bush and almost all the other candidates lost, and there is no evidence the Nixon White House made other attempts at blackmail.

U.N. convoy reaches Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — A U.N. team seeking to open Sarajevo's airport reached this besieged capital Wednesday. But a convoy involved in the operation came under fire and one U.N. soldier was injured.

Sarajevo residents spent another day huddled in basements to avoid intense shelling. The U.N. convoy has been charged with reopening the airport so that desperately needed supplies can be flown in.

Sarajevo radio said one person was injured when a U.N. Protection Force convoy was attacked outside Sarajevo after setting out to pick up Canadian Brig. Gen. Lewis Mackenzie, the Protection Force chief of staff.

Mackenzie had just arrived in the Sarajevo suburb of Lukavica, the radio said, quoting Bosnia-Herzegovina Press Agency.

It said the convoy "did not get far. The convoy was attacked near the southwestern suburb of Mojmilo just before 7 p.m."

The convoy returned to Sarajevo, and talks were under way on bringing Mackenzie to Sarajevo today. It said Col. John Wilson, the force's liaison mission chief who was in the convoy, was in constant telephone contact with Mackenzie, who "is well."

Also Wednesday, the United States told its allies it wants to block Serbia and Montenegro from taking over the old Yugoslav seat in the United Nations and other world bodies.

And in Washington, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., suggested President Bush should threaten Serbia and Montenegro with "sufficient military force" unless they yield in the Bosnian fighting. Bosnian leaders have begged the United States to attack Serb fighters.

The U.N. team of about 50 French technical observers drove to Sarajevo in a convoy from the Serbian capital of Belgrade. The 250-mile trip took about 12 hours.

"Their job will be to inspect the airport, and Gen. Mackenzie will first meet the representatives of all sides to try to restore the ceasefire," said U.N. spokeswoman Barbara Shannon Boyd.

Serb militias controlling the airport agreed Friday to allow relief flights to bring in food and medicine for the capital, but fighting in and around Sarajevo later intensified.

Although Sarajevo radio reported that Serbs had withdrawn about a dozen tanks and artillery units, U.N. officials in New York said their observers in the capital reported continued fighting in the airport area.

Sarajevo's 300,000 people — about half its peacetime population — endured another day of artillery explosions and rocket attacks. Bosnian media said 31 people were killed and 129 wounded since Tuesday.

Belgrade TV showed pictures of bodies hanging from cars demolished by explosions, and hospital workers treating elderly people for burns and shrapnel wounds.

"Sarajevo exists no longer as a city," Belgrade radio proclaimed. "It is a heap of rubble."

Flames engulfed numerous buildings, including some in the old Turkish quarter of Bascarsija.

Serbia's Red Cross began handing out free food to pensioners, jobless refugees and others.

Expect low 90s, some clouds

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the lower 90s and southeast winds at five to 15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be partly cloudy with a chance of isolated thunderstorms and a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 63, Wednesday's high reached 90 compared with the record high for that date of 103 set in 1958. The record low for that date is 51 set in 1975.

STATE

Incoming gulf moisture and an unstable air mass prompted more thunderstorms Wednesday across some sections of North and West Texas, and forecasters expected scattered rainfall statewide until this weekend.

The National Weather Service issued severe thunderstorm watches and warnings for northwestern sections of North Texas and the eastern Concho Valley.

Heavy thunderstorms developed near Lake Texoma, with some hail expected. Showers also developed east of Victoria, with some thunderstorms in Mexico, south of Del Rio.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from the 70s and 80s in West Texas through 90s in the far south.

NATION

Rain fell from the Plains to the East Coast on Wednesday. Downpours threatened flooding in parts of the Plains and Tennessee Valley.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the central and southern Plains, the central half of the Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the eastern half of the Gulf of Mexico states, and the southern half of the Atlantic Coast states.

A flash flood warning was posted over part of western Tennessee. Thunderstorms dropped more than 2 inches of rain on southern Fayette County in one hour, the National Weather Service said.

A flash flood watch was posted over sections of southwestern Missouri.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

INDUSTRY: Oil-patch lawmakers plead for change

(From 1A)

is now importing half of its oil, said Sen. David Boren, D-Okla.

"It is interesting that this rig is erected in the shadow of the Smithsonian Museum because at the rate we are going it will soon be eligible to be in the Smithsonian because there won't be any rigs operating in America any longer," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

"It is time for America to wake up. We have lost more jobs in the oil and gas industry in this country than we have in the automobile industry, in the steel industry or in any other domestic industry," said Johnston, D-La.

"We've put together a comprehensive, balanced energy policy and it's time for the Congress to pass it now."

The House and Senate have passed separate energy packages, with the Senate Finance Committee poised next week to consider a package of energy-related tax proposals. The legislation will then have to go to a House-Senate conference committee to iron out differences.

In a press statement, Rep. Lamar Smith, whose district includes part of Midland, said that the IPAA event comes at a crucial time, just days before the Senate begins those considerations.

"Since the mid-1980s, we have paid more than $55 billion for oil from Iran, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and other countries. In short we have sacrificed American jobs for Arabian welfare," said the San Antonio Republican.

Smith said it is crucial that oil-patch lawmakers succeed in conference to strip out the Markey Amendment, a provision many say would create chaos in the natural-gas industry.

The measure, which the lawmakers said they are confident will be deleted, would prohibit gas-producing states from using state regulations to restrict natural gas production and raise prices.

The language, known as prorationing, is one of IPAA's key targets.

Another is repeal of certain provisions of the alternative minimum tax, which IPAA and energy-producing states contend inhibits investment in exploration and production.

The Senate Finance Committee will consider the alternative minimum tax provisions when it meets Tuesday.

The lawmakers cautioned that unless Congress lifts some of its restrictions on the industry, future energy crunches will occur.

"There's going to come a point in this country when we have an energy crisis and people are going to say 'Where were you? Where was the United States Congress?' " said Rep. Jack Fields, R-Houston.

Echoed Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, whose district encompasses a portion of northwest Midland: "If we think that we have had a problem in the early '70s with the embargo — as they would say in Odessa, Texas: 'You ain't seen nothing yet.' " animal species and forestry, and a blueprint for cleaning up the Earth, called Agenda 21. They were expected to work through the night.

Summit organizer Maurice Strong has said Agenda 21's goals would cost $125 billion a year. Delegates were still debating Wednesday on how much developed countries would pay and how the aid should be dispersed.

Industrialized nations want aid to go through the Global Environmental Facility, a World Bank agency which they control. Developing nations want a new agency created that would give them some spending control.

Michael Young, deputy head of the U.S. delegation, said the United States would not contribute money to any fund until the issue of control is settled.

He characterized the developing countries' position as: "Please put a pot of money there, and we will send you a little postcard telling you how we spent it."

Agenda 21 is hundreds of pages long, making it one of the most comprehensive and difficult international agreements ever attempted. Diplomats said its completion would make the summit a success.

In other developments Wednesday:

■ The U.S. Food and Agriculture Organization said some 750 million people — nearly 14 percent of the world population of 5.5 billion — suffer from chronic malnutrition or are threatened with starvation. FAO chief Edouard Saouma called on people in rich countries to change their eating habits.

■ Young said the United States would likely agree to a suggestion by African nations to negotiate a treaty on limiting the deterioration of farmland. But he said the United States had had reservations about the idea.

■ Sen. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., charged the Bush administration with doing a bad public relations job at the summit. "There is a story that simply is not being told," he said, citing U.S. progress in curbing pollution and increasing energy efficiency.

In summit discussions Wednesday, the United States was again at the forefront of discord, this time over forestry provisions of the Agenda 21 document.

The United States does not want to commit itself to providing aid in exchange for protecting forests; Malaysia, which leads Third World nations on forestry issues, insists that the forestry statement explicitly make that link.

The developing countries also oppose terms that they fear might lead to an infringement of their right to use forests as they see fit.

Agenda 21 is non-binding, but whatever moral force it might have would be undermined if the United States were to refuse to sign it.

BAPTISTS: Unprecedented ouster stirs worries

(From 1A)

that led the action.

He said, however, there "is a danger" that other causes might be pushed forward as necessitating such penalties. "There's a ditch on that side of the road. We have to be cautious."

Others took a dimmer view. "We have very seriously violated the autonomy of the local church," said the Rev. Jack Harwell of Atlanta, editor of a moderate-oriented weekly, Baptist Today.

"It's a major break in a wall which has protected one of the most vital principles of our heritage for 150 years," he added.

"I think it becomes a convenient first step for the Southern Baptist Convention to banish other congregations with whom they find themselves in disagreement," said the Rev. John Hewett of Asheville, past moderator of the national Cooperative Baptist Fellowship.

Administration of the 15.2-million-member denomination has come under the control of a fundamental wing after more than a decade of conflict with moderates.

The convention, attended by about 18,000, voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to expel two North Carolina congregations. The Pullen Memorial Church in Raleigh blessed a union of two homosexual men and the Binkley Memorial Church in Chapel Hill ordained a homosexual to preach.

Both congregations voted for the actions after months of discussion.

"We responded as faithfully as we knew how to requests for pastoral care," said the Rev. Mahan Siler, pastor of the Pullen Church, in a telephone interview. "It's unfortunate that this has been a source for a break in fellowship."

A central Indiana organization called Gays and Lesbians Working Against Violence called the expulsion vote "organized bigotry."

"We're not asking for special treatment. We're asking to be treated equally as God's children," said spokesman Chris Gonzalez. "Every time I think we've made real advances, something like this hits you in the face and you say, 'My God, what's going on?' "

The Rev. Howard B. Warren Jr., a homosexual Presbyterian minister, said the Baptists had moved "beyond homophobia. It is hatred, hatred of 10 percent of God's beautiful rainbow of sexual orientation."

Warren said the Baptists based their actions on a "fantastically horrible homophobic interpretation" of the Bible. Although there are passages that can be cited as decrying homosexuality, the prophets and Jesus say nothing about it, Warren said.

The Rev. Linda Jordan of Binkley Memorial said the church "has been very disappointed with the direction of the Southern Baptist Convention" for several years and the expulsion was no surprise.

The Rev. William Merrell of Lawton, Okla., said the banishments were "an unprecedented response to an unprecedented condition. Nothing comparable has ever been presented to the convention."

ARMY: Despite cutbacks, military 'won't die'

(From 1A)

535,000 people by 1995, so there is obviously still a large number of people and a definite need to train them," he said.

Currently, 640,000 people serve in the Army.

"We understand the government's need to build down the military. The Cold War is over and we agree with the decision," Hitt said. "But, we're saying that if we go any smaller, we can't guarantee the quality of service — the degree of protection if there is an attack."

The Army also plans to cut back commanding operations — a move that will place three more states under Hitt's jurisdiction.

But recruiting operations are continuing at full strength.

"Most of the people we recruit now will complete their time and move on to civilian jobs or school. So recruiting will be continuous," he said. "And they will be highly desired by companies and colleges because they are guaranteed drug-free and are disciplined enough to do their jobs or get the grades."

Hitt believes the military is still a secure career choice.

"Nothing has changed in the way of college assistance and the benefits are still there," he said. "The people we're recruiting now are of the highest quality ever."

Hitt also said the Army will remain effective as long as cuts do not exceed the current projection.

"The Army is just like a General Motors assembly line. If you take away enough components in that line, it no longer functions properly," he said.

Hitt was born in Terrell. He was drafted into the Army in October 1966 and served in Vietnam as a platoon leader and operations officer for an Assault Helicopter Company in the 23rd Infantry Division. Subsequent assignments include operations and staff officer for Army headquarters in Japan; tactical instructor at the Army Engineer School at Fort Belvoir, Va.; aviation officer for the Multinational Force and Observers in Washington D.C.; and plans staff officer at Army headquarters in Stuttgart, Germany.

He also has commanded an Aviation Training Battalion at Fort Rucker, Ala.; an Aviation Company at Fort Bragg, N.C.; and an Infantry Company in the 3rd Armored Division in Germany.

Last August, he gave up his command of the 11th Aviation Brigade after leading it during Operation Desert Storm. He had been in charge of 140,000 soldiers during the Gulf War.

He has received nearly a dozen military awards including the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star and several meritorious service awards.

BRANDS: Companies learn hard way in Wild East

(From 1A)

c: Sure, if you pass out free refrigerators.

There are people who have spent plenty of money to find out these things about Eastern Europe, a moving target of a market filled with 200 million often unpredictable consumers.

Since 1990, the world's biggest businesses have ridden into the Wild East on a rough trail hewn by scouts — advertising agents and market researchers paid to define a consumer kept bottled up by generations of communism.

It hasn't been easy.

"It was like entering a jungle," said Rainer Erfert, chief of the Eastern European operations of Leo Burnett, a Chicago-based ad agency.

Westerners trying to reach Eastern consumers had to define rapidly evolving lifestyles and behaviors, and then try to persuade people to buy things they didn't know they needed.

But the businessmen found Easterners, turned cynics by decades of propaganda, very skeptical of advertising.

"If you take, for example, the very imaginative British advertising, which is very exaggerating, they would not understand it," said Erfert. "They would say, 'Well, you are lying.' "

Andy Bilanksi, head of the D'Arcy Masius Benton & Bowes agency office in Budapest, said many companies have tried to rely on their image alone, a tactic that works in the West. "But people (in the East) want to know the features. Why is a Mercedes better than an Opel?"

While largely embracing Western products, Eastern consumers also have confounded marketers by abruptly reverting to some traditional items.

When the Berlin Wall came down, Western cigarette manufacturers launched huge campaigns in eastern Germany. After a strong initial response, nearly 70 percent of the market shifted back.

"The east German cigarettes were cheap and had a flavor they were used to," said Clemens Pues, a University of Muenster marketing professor.

Even Germany's Reemtsma tobacco company ran into trouble. The firm took its East German brand, Cabinet, reduced the tar and nicotine and jazzed up the packaging. Market share plunged from 30 percent to less than 12 percent, said Christoff Walther, vice president for corporate affairs.

"That's where we made the biggest mistake," he said. "It was too westernized." So Reemtsma made the cigarette stronger, changed the packaging and took out ads saying the company had learned its lesson.

Walther said Reemtsma had done market research before the change, but people "were not used to criticizing products. People said it was good. They said everything was good."

Still, said Walter Zingel, chief of Eastern European operations for the New York-based Bozell ad agency, "When you go in these countries, you realize just how much our system relies on market data."

Zingel has found Easterners often resent condescending ads or commercials that reflect affluent, unattainable lifestyles.

"Some people ran campaigns in effect saying, 'You poor Hungarians are now able to buy OMO, the world-famous detergent,'" he said. "That approach doesn't work." OMO is made by the Austrian-based Lever Co.

Zingel said Proctor & Gamble, the giant consumer goods company, initially had problems selling Poles on Vidal Sassoon's Wash 'n' Go shampoo and conditioner.

The company had not calculated that only 10 percent of consumers used conditioner, he said. "(The consumer) didn't know what the product was worth."

But the problem was soon fixed. "The only thing we had to do was explain the technology of combining the two. We did educational copy. The upshot is it's very successful," said Tom Gresk, head of Leo Burnett's Warsaw office, which handled the Proctor & Gamble account.

Getting products into the stores is another formidable obstacle.

Zingel said the big German ice cream maker Schoeller wanted to launch its products in Hungary but found too many likely retailers lacked refrigeration.

So the company actually distributed free refrigerators to kiosks and gas stations.

MADAM: Woman made 2nd reputation as organic farmer

divorcee trying to support two small sons and an ailing mother by selling cosmetics and hosiery door to door.

The 5-foot-6, 200-plus-pound madam made her employees dress, talk and act like society ladies, and she took them for regular health checkups.

Except when periodic police raids shut Pauline's down, the employees worked three weeks, then were supposed to spend the fourth week with their families.

During this time, Tabor married Paul Webster, bought a 120-acre farm, and made a second reputation as an organic farmer years before that became popular.

She also briefly ran bordellos in Louisville and Columbus, Ind.

"I'm much too busy enjoying my life, my children and grandchildren, my friends, a lovely country home, a healthy bank account, and priceless memories of a happy marriage," she wrote in her book.

"But I would start my business in a distant city, where my private life could remain a secret and my family would be spared a lot of unnecessary grief and notoriety."

Urban renewal tore down the red brick, antique-filled brothel in Bowling Green more than 20 years ago.

Relatives brought Webster's body back to Bowling Green on Tuesday for burial in a family plot.

Survivors include a son, Raymond Tabor of University City, Texas, and a sister, Mary Ryon of Midland, Mich.

Panamanians kill U.S. soldier on eve of Bush's visit

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Gunmen killed an American soldier and wounded another Wednesday, and protesters trashed the downtown park where President Bush was planning to address the Panamanian public.

Three men with assault rifles ambushed the soldiers, who were riding in a humvee multi-purpose vehicle, on a highway connecting Panama City and the Atlantic port of Colon, said civilian and police officials. A 12-year-old Panamanian boy also was injured.

The shooting came amid two days of sometimes violent protests against the Bush visit, and an earlier gunfire attack against a U.S. base that caused no injuries.

Many Panamanians are bitter over damage and loss of life from the December 1989 invasion that Bush ordered to topple Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

After a march with black flags through part of downtown Panama late Wednesday, several hundred demonstrators gathered at Porras Park, where Bush was to speak during a brief visit today en route to the Earth Summit in Brazil.

One group set fire to the red, white and blue bunting around a flatbed trailer that was to serve as a platform for the address.

Police unleashed dozens of rounds of tear gas. Several square blocks were filled with the gas and smoke from garbage set alight by protesters, who also kicked over portable toilets and slashed tree branches, which they tossed onto the burning trailer.

AP reporters and photographers saw at least six arrests. Police beat one man with a pistol and were seen dragging people from buildings.

The U.S. Southern Command, which controls all 10,000 American troops in Panama, clamped down on the movements of soldiers and civilian defense workers, imposing a 9 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew and advising them to avoid areas like the University of Panama, a hotbed of anti-U.S. sentiment.

The Southern Command withheld the names of the soldiers killed and injured in Wednesday's ambush pending notification of next of kin. The Panamanian boy was identified as Uriel Antonio Garibaldi.

At the White House, Bush told reporters: "Anytime an American serviceman is hurt, that's bad. Killed is worse."

The White House said it would not change Bush's plans to stop in Panama today. He is to meet with Panamanian President Guillermo Endara on the first visit here by an American president since 1978.

While the 1989 invasion was welcomed by many at the time, there has been a growing feeling that the act stripped Panama of its dignity as well as its dictator.

On Tuesday, demonstrators smashed windshields of cars thought to be American-owned and set up street barricades near National University. Slogans of "Out With Bush" and "No to Gringos and Gringo-Lovers" were sprayed in red paint around the campus.

On Sunday, gunmen sprayed bullets against a guard station at Albrook Air Base, but there were no injuries. Bush is scheduled to make a brief visit to the base on the edge of Panama City.

But Panama remains generally pro-American.

The U.S. military has been here to protect the Panama Canal since 1911. Newspaper surveys show more than 70 percent of the population want it to stay on past the year 2000, when the troops are supposed to leave and the canal transferred to Panamanian control.

About 12,000 civilian jobs will vanish with the bases. Panama is struggling with unemployment rates estimated at 12 to 16 percent. About half the country's 2.4 million people live in poverty.

Panama has a foreign debt of about $4 billion, among the highest per capita in the world.

Opponents try to oust Saddam

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Prominent Iraqi opposition leaders say Saudi Arabia, Syria and Iran are thwarting their efforts to oust Saddam Hussein and install a democratic government because they disagree on who should replace him.

Iraqi exiles say each of the three countries — which provide funds and safe havens for anti-Saddam groups — has exerted pressure to cancel a meeting of opposition groups scheduled to open next Tuesday in Vienna.

The exiles mostly spoke on condition of anonymity. Some said they feared their foreign backers would cut off aid.

The Vienna gathering is an attempt to forge 45 groups into a broad coalition. The agenda includes discussions of a strategy to overthrow Saddam, election of leaders and endorsement of a parliamentary form of government.

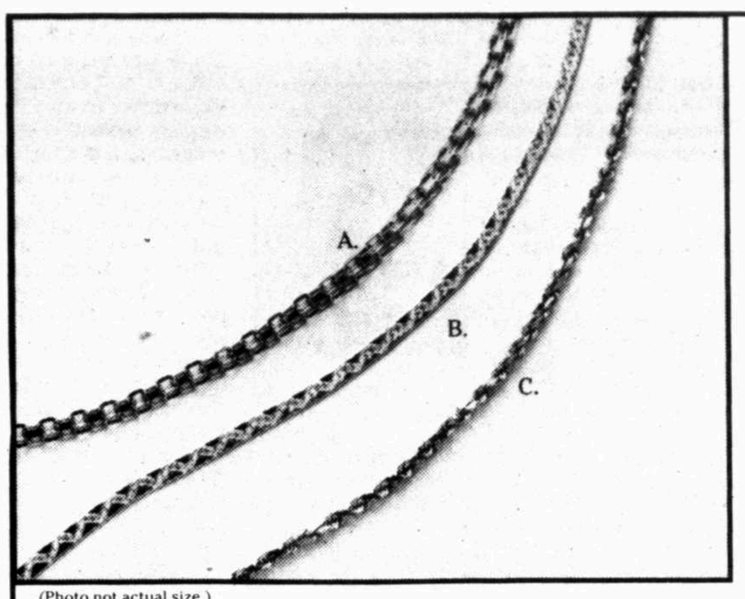

The opposition has had no concrete strategy because of differences over the future shape of Iraq.

Kurds are demanding guarantees of autonomy by any government that takes over in Baghdad.

The Shiites of southern Iraq want an Islamic republic like the one in Iran. Liberals, including Saudi-backed military officers, want a secular democratic state.

A well-placed source, speaking on condition he was not identified further, said many factions were heeding requests from their Saudi, Syrian or Iranian backers to stay away from the Vienna conference.

The Iran-backed leader of the Shiite Supreme Assembly of the Islamic Revolution in Iraq, Ayatollah Mohammed Bakr al-Hakim, said his movement, one of the largest, has not decided whether to attend.

Bar procedures better for public

For years the grievance procedure used in disciplining Texas' 54,432 attorneys has been too slow, too inaccessible to the public, as well as too antiquated. On May 1, however, that all changed when the State Bar implemented new procedures that should remedy most of the problems with the old system.

"In the past we have had court cases linger for several years before going to trial, and (have had) complaints that there was not enough public involvement in the hearing process," said Houston attorney Bob Dunn, president of the State Bar. "The new procedures reflect dramatic changes in both these areas."

Under the new procedures, lawsuits resulting from complaints against attorneys must be heard within 180 days after reaching district court. Before May 1, there was no time limit on when courts has to schedule lawyer discipline cases.

Additionally, an investigatory hearing before a grievance committee is required for every complaint. Both complainants and the accused attorney may attend the hearings, which are now open to the public.

If a complaint is made which cannot be handled through the grievance system, the bar may refer the client and attorney to an alternative dispute resolution or arbitration program being developed. Such disputes, the bar notes, might involve fee complaints or other concerns.

Time limits exist at each stage of the grievance process so that complainants can judge how long a grievance committee might take to resolve a complaint.

"And, contrary to the old rules, complainants as well as attorneys have additional appeal rights at various stages," Dunn said.

The State Bar has a toll-free telephone number for individuals wanting to know how to file a complaint against a Texas attorney. The number is 1-800-932-1900. It is designed to provide the public with information about how to file a grievance and what to expect from the attorney disciplinary system.

In addition to the one-third public members on local grievance committees, half the members of the new group established to oversee the new grievance process are public appointees.

These changes are good because complaints against attorneys have not been handled in a manner that assured accountability. That was an oversight since 250 to 300 attorneys are disciplined each year.

Obviously, the new grievance process will be more costly since it will entail many more hearings than the earlier procedure did, but it is much more open to the public. In that regard it should better serve the interests of all Texans.

GEORGE WILL

We are now the species out of control

WASHINGTON — Well-tailored and well-intentioned, the very model of the modern international improver, Maurice Strong, impresario of the Rio "Earth Summit," intoned: "We have been the most successful species ever. We are now a species out of control."

Will

To which a healthy response is: Damn right, and we're determined to stay that way.

A burgeoning international bureaucracy of rule-writers wants to control the species in the name of that sentimentalists' fiction, the "international community." Their mission is to move nations "beyond sovereignty," using multilateral agreements couched in broad language, the effect of which will be diluted sovereignty and abridged liberty. How much dilution and abridgement will be decided later, by the authors.

The rule-writers of Rio fancy themselves the wave of the future. Actually, they are a late-20th century gasp of a late-19th century invention, bureaucracy. A harbinger of the future may be the mouse that recently roared: Denmark.

Friends of freedom owe much to the 46,269 Danes who made the difference in the glorious defeat — 50.7 percent to 49.3 percent — of the Maastricht Treaty. Denmark's political class casually submitted the treaty to a popular referendum, assuming perfunctory ratification because mere citizens would not have the impertinence to reject what "progressives" consider self-evidently desirable — Europe's political and economic union.

The "deepening" of the European Community — meaning deepened submission of nations to the Brussels bureaucracy — has become, like environmentalism, another value invoked to justify more bossiness by government. Behind the fog of Euro-jargon about "harmonization" and "coordination" there is the spread of soft statism. Its goal is to suck toward the center — to Brussels — powers and rights hard-won over centuries by national parliaments. The casualties of this centralization include government by representation and consent.

Centrifugal forces are being felt in the multiplying fragments of the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia, in Czechoslovakia, in Scottish nationalism and Quebec separatism — and in northern California and southwestern Kansas.

Two weeks ago 27 rural California counties approved a non-binding (but intensely cathartic) measure endorsing secession. They say Sacramento is a distant gaggle of strangers, and the state's vastness and diversity precludes a sense of commonality and community. In Kansas — bleeding Kansas, again? — nine counties, convinced they will pay more for education while having less control over it under a new school finance plan, have voted (again, it has no legal effect) to secede from control by that distant and self-aggrandizing metropolis, Topeka.

Back in Copenhagen, Denmark's foreign minister says, "We must now sit down and find out how we were so distant from our voters." The emotional distance between government and governed defines American politics too, and Clinton, Bush and Perot seem to misunderstand it, each in his own way.

Clinton is identifying more closely with Democratic leaders of Congress, America's most despised institution of governance. He stresses the blessings that will pour from Congress in the springtime of a Clinton presidency, when divided government ends. The strange theory of the Clinton campaign, which needs new theorists, is that voters regret government "gridlock" because it impedes the expansion of government favored by the congressional wing of the Democratic Party.

Bush's incomprehension of contemporary politics is written all over his fading presidency. In an interview in Policy Review, Chris DeMuth of the American Enterprise Institute says:

"Reagan's breaking of the PATCO strike signaled, accurately, that 'no more business as usual in Washington' was more than campaign rhetoric. Bush's agreement to a tax increase he had vowed never to accept signaled, with equal accuracy, that it was back to business as usual. Everyone in Washington, with the possible exception of a few of President Bush's advisers, understood that the 1990 budget agreement was not about solving a particularly knotty fiscal problem, but about whether it was safe to get back to promoting increased federal spending, taxation and regulation."

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

LESLIE GELB

Bush is doing clever job of setting traps

The Bush administration may be brain dead on domestic policy. But it is doing a clever job of setting mini-Star Wars traps for Russia, NATO allies and Congress. And the White House is about to spring those traps.

Gelb

President Bush will meet with an ambivalent President Yeltsin next week and try to extract more leeway from the 1972 treaty restricting missile defenses. The Pentagon is busily luring wary allies with lucrative contracts. Key congressional Democrats, playing their own tricky game, are being sucked into the very traps they are trying to avoid.

Maybe, as the Pentagon desires, the United States one day will need and be able to develop a mini-Star Wars system of space-based sensors guiding rockets to thwart small missile attacks. Or maybe, as Sen. Sam Nunn and Rep. Les Aspin say, the United States can and should buy an Earth Wars system of ground-based missiles to insure against such threats.

But the time to make such commitments is not now — neither for a mini-Star Wars system with a possible $100 billion price tag nor for an Earth Wars system at about $40 billion. All this would be on top of the $30 billion already spent on missile defenses in the 10 years since President Reagan's famous Star Wars speech.

Vigorous research and development, yes. But not the $5.4 billion requested by the Pentagon or the $4.3 billion just approved by the House for next year alone. Here is why:

The need for defenses is fuzzy and theoretical. The Pentagon itself knows better than to worry about accidental Russian missile launches. Those missiles are under the tightest lock and key. As for renegade Russian commanders, Robert Gates, the director of central intelligence, has said the experts "do not believe there is a concern about an unauthorized launch."

He has also testified that no would-be nuclear countries, like Iraq, will be able to threaten the United States with missiles "for at least another decade." As for an attack by terrorists, it is hard to figure out why they would choose cumbersome missiles when suitcases would do.

Nor is it at all clear that the United States now possesses the technology to deploy an effective Earth Wars system by 1997, as Nunn proposes. A senior Pentagon official recently wrote a memo arguing that meeting that target would lead to enormous waste. He recommended waiting until 2003, and the Pentagon announced Friday a delay until 1998. Mini-Star Wars technology is even more remote, though the Pentagon will not concede this.

Administration officials are determined to protect the future of mini-Star Wars beyond Bush. To this end, they seized the idea of seducing Moscow into a joint venture. They offered technological goodies. They conjured up nightmares of nuclear attacks by former Soviet republics. Never mind that these neighbors have agreed to abandon nuclear capabilities.

Yeltsin seems ambivalent. He does not want to be left out of the advanced-technology game and see Russian nuclear punch neutralized. Yet he has no money for such costly common causes.

NATO allies are also in a quandary. Britain and France still want new offensive missiles in order to remain nuclear powers. And if the United States gives the promise of an impenetrable shield to Russia, British and French parliaments would never approve money for ineffectual missiles. Yet, these allies cannot oppose missile defenses outright and thus jeopardize industrial links to new U.S. technology.

Nunn's predicament is no less severe. He desperately favors Earth Wars as insurance against accidents and future Iraqs. But most Democrats will not support him. So he has had to turn to Republicans, which has meant endorsing their dubious demands to develop mini-Star Wars.

Aspin seems mostly on the right track. He would move toward Earth Wars deployments but only when and as the technology proved reliable. And while he backs space-based sensors, he opposes space-based rockets.

ANOTHER VIEW

Bush team should redefine U.S. role

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization's primary reason for being went out with the Cold War. Now its members, especially the United States, are desperately trying to redefine the military alliance's role in a post-Cold War world.

NATO foreign ministers meeting this week (June 5) in Oslo, Norway, successfully did that. They took the historic decision to deploy NATO forces beyond the territory of its members as part of peacekeeping operations throughout all of Europe and the Soviet Union. Long a contentious issue within NATO, the move is overdue, especially in the face of a major war raging in the middle of Europe.

It is certainly within NATO's security interests, not to mention its capability, to take this critically new role in conflicts from Yugoslavia to the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabak. NATO has well-trained manpower and high-tech weapons intended to repel Red Army hordes coming down the Fulda Gap.

The move also puts teeth into the European security forum, the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. This organization includes the U.S. and Canada, all European countries and the republics that comprised the former Soviet Union. Currently it can issue declarations on security and confidence-building measures but has no means to enforce them. Under the NATO initiative, forces and equipment would be sent on peacekeeping missions upon request by the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Moreover, this move assists the peacekeeping efforts of the United Nations, which, no thanks to a deliquent U.S., is strapped for cash in carrying out its peacekeeping activities in Croatia, Cambodia and elsewhere.

Not surprisingly, the U.S. is a major advocate of the new move. Keeping NATO alive means the U.S. retains its vital link to the European continent. But the U.S. must realize that this new role does not bestow upon it the same clout it enjoyed as NATO's nuclear guarantor. Europeans want, and should have, a greater say now in their own security. Their rejection of the Bush administration's request to use NATO forces to enforce newly imposed U.N. sanctions against the Serbian aggressors in Yugoslavia is evidence of that. So is the effort by France and Germany to forge ahead with a joint military force that will serve as the core of a European army.

By having correctly defined NATO's role, the task now lies with the Bush administration to redefine the role of the U.S. within NATO.

The owl debate continues as Bush sleeps

It hasn't received much publicity, but one night last week at midnight a rare spotted owl was seen sitting on the branch of a tree overlooking the President's bedroom. In accordance with Mr. Bush's environmental policy, the Secret Service decided to shoot it. But since the owl is an endangered species they held off until they could get a ruling from the Justice Department as to whether it was legal or not.

Buchwald

While the President slept, senior presidential staffers, including the Vice President, gathered in the Situation Room at the White House to discuss what to do about the owl.

Dan Quayle, who represents the endangered business interests in the country, felt that it would be a mistake to save the owl. He said, "We would be sending the wrong message to Rio if we allowed a spotted owl to sit in a tree. I speak for every large lumber company in America when I say that we can't allow environmentalism to hurt the family."

One of George Bush's political advisers took issue with Quayle. "We've been selling Bush as the 'environmental President.' We wouldn't look very good to the Audubon Society if the Secret Service turned a submachine gun on the bird. We could use the owl to our advantage by saving it."

Quayle responded, "But as long as it remains there we will be prevented from cutting down the White House tree."

One of the President's press spokesmen said, "I have no problem with killing the owl, but what's our cover-up story when the press asks why we violated the law?"

"We'll blame it on Democratic politics. I'll bet Bill Clinton has killed a dozen spotted owls in his lifetime."

The press spokesman announced, "I just received a memo from Bill Reilly, our EPA man in Rio. He says that the U.S. has become the villain of the conference and if we don't sign a treaty — any treaty — we're going to be in deep spotted owl droppings. What do I do about the message?"

"Leak it to the press," Quayle urged. "If the Brazilians pelt us with rotten eggs we'll go up 10 points in our polls."

The Secret Service man said, "Here's my problem. If we shoot the owl now, we're going to make a heck of a racket and wake up the President. If we wait until morning, the owl may fly away and we won't have another chance to get him."

One of the President's handlers asked, "How did the owl get into the tree in the first place? Spotted owls live outside the Beltway."

Quayle said, "Ross Perot could have flown the bird in on his private plane. I don't trust him any more than I trust an endangered snail darter."

The press spokesman yelled, "Of course! It's another Ross Perot dirty trick. He's counting on us to kill the spotted owl so that his managers Ham Jordan and Ed Rollins can claim we don't care about rare species that prevent us from getting a jump-start on the nation's economy."

A White House adviser said, "I don't think we should decide what to do about the owl until we talk to the President."

"We can't wake him. He's going dolphin fishing in Maine the first thing in the morning."

Coalition picks ex-diplomat to be prime minister of Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A former diplomat and businessman who led Thailand out of a political crisis last year was named prime minister Wednesday in an effort to head off a possible repeat of bloody pro-democracy protests.

After his surprise appointment, Anand Panyarachun said he would serve four months to prepare the country for parliamentary elections following the turmoil of last month's riots over military interference in the government.

The majority coalition in Parliament had nominated one of its pro-military leaders for the top government post, and democracy activists had warned his appointment could trigger new protests. Many Thais blame the coalition, along with the generals, for the crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

Anand's appointment appeared to calm the opposition, but activists said much needs to be done to install real democracy.

"Given the choice, it is a pleasant surprise for a lot of people. But Anand has many problems ahead of him," said Surin Pitsuwan, a member of Parliament for the opposition Democrat Party.

Prinya Thevanaruemitrkul, a leading pro-democracy activist, said news of Anand's appointment brought loud applause at Thammasat University, a center for the anti-military movement.

King Bhumibol Adulyadej was seen by some analysts as having had a hand in picking Anand, who won respect for his interim civilian government after a coup in 1991. Although legally he has only a ceremonial role, the highly popular king pressured the army to halt its crackdown last month.

The violence killed at least 40 people and possibly many more, and public outrage forced the resignation of Prime Minister Suchinda Kraprayoon, a former army chief. The bloodshed shook the foundations of Thai society and sparked a drive for ending the military's dominant role.

Lawmakers on Wednesday gave final approval to constitutional amendments designed to lessen the military's political influence, including requiring prime ministers to be elected members of Parliament rather than outsiders like Suchinda and curtailing the powers of the military-appointed Senate.

"Any society that has gone through a trauma needs to restore its balance," Anand told reporters. "We have to keep in perspective our priorities: Organize a free and fair election. (I have to do) my best to make Thailand tick once again."

Political leader Somboon Rahong, the nominee of the six-party governing coalition, had been expected to become prime minister, and he had even announced his confirmation by the king.

Yeltsin: Arms cuts would give advantage to U.S.

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. proposals for deep cuts in Russia's land-based nuclear arms would leave Washington with a strategic advantage, President Boris Yeltsin was quoted as saying Wednesday.

Yeltsin, meeting with top military commanders, said no common ground has been reached in efforts to draft an arms reduction accord for the U.S.-Russian summit next week in Washington, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

It quoted Yeltsin as saying Russia was holding firm on the idea of strategic parity, and that all unresolved questions would have to be negotiated during the summit.

Yeltsin said the United States was suggesting Russia eliminate all its land-based, multiple-warhead missiles while the Pentagon would make less severe cuts in sea-based strategic forces, according to ITAR-Tass. Such a proposal would give the United States an advantage, the report said.

ITAR-Tass quoted Yeltsin as saying Russia wants strategic nuclear weapons reductions to be down to 2,000 to 2,500 for each side by the year 2000. This is a longstanding Yeltsin proposal. Each side now has about 10,000 warheads.

A U.S. official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press the Russians have agreed to scrap some land-based, multiple-warhead missiles.

This would be on top of the 50 percent reduction in Russia's SS-18 arsenal required by the START missile reduction treaty. But the official also said the Russians were unwilling to part with additional SS-18 and SS-24 multiple-warhead missiles until the START treaty is carried out over seven years.

Interfax news agency quoted Yeltsin as saying he sent Bush a letter Wednesday, but it did not disclose the contents.

Austria may abandon policy of neutrality

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Under pressure from industry and the European Community, Austria is quietly giving up a 37-year policy of neutrality.

In a memorandum to be delivered this week to the 12 governments of the trading bloc, which it seeks to join, Austria has pledged to take part in a new European security system. There is no mention of neutrality.

Austria was allied with Nazi Germany during World War II and was occupied by the Allies — France, Britain, the United States and Soviet Union — for a decade after the war ended. It regained its independence after promising the Soviet Union it would be neutral.

The Vienna weekly magazine Profil disclosed the memorandum and said it came in response to Sweden and Switzerland, two other neutral European countries, which have waived neutrality in an effort to join the EC.

Those two nations were neutral in both World Wars without any written pledge. But Austria's parliament enacted a law in 1955 committing Austria to "permanent neutrality" in the East-West confrontation.

Now, more than two years after the collapse of communism many Austrians feel the neutrality policy is irrelevant.

The EC has indicated Austria would have to surrender neutrality to join the trade bloc.

Truck wreck tests emergency response

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

About once a month, tractor-trailer trucks carry missile fuel through Midland on Interstate 20, headed for the White Sands Missile Range near Alamogordo, N.M.

On Wednesday, there was a traffic accident with serious consequences — but it was only a test.

City and county officials, law enforcement authorities and emergency aid agencies played out a tractor-trailer accident scenario Thursday, testing their response skills and planning in case of a real disaster.

"It's like insurance on your home or your car, you never know when you'll need it," said Bill Clanton, city secretary and public information official for the emergency planning team.

At the command center, located in the basement of the Police and Communications Center, the clock on the wall said 5:46 a.m., although the time was actually shortly after 9 a.m. It was simulated time — all part of the scenario to create a fake emergency as realistic as possible.

Officials of local governments and emergency support agencies were busy listening to radios, taking notes and making plans.

According to the disaster scenario, a truck carrying nitrogen tetroxide had crashed into a pick-up along an access road to Interstate 20 at Midkiff Road. Extremely hazardous fuel was spewing out onto the road.

"The (missile fuel) trucks have a military escort team," explained Army Reserve Major John Miller, a liaison to the emergency management team. "They have cellular communication capability, and when the 'accident' happened, they called 911."

That call set the fake emergency into motion. It was classified as a level IV hazardous materials emergency — the most severe.

A map showed the "accident site," although on-the-scene transmissions were actually coming from a room upstairs.

Because of the danger of inhaling the fumes of the toxic fuel, residents had to be evacuated and the highway closed. Many people were hurt and at least two died.

School buses were used to transport evacuees. Schools were used as shelters. Memorial Hospital and Medical Center filled with casualties.

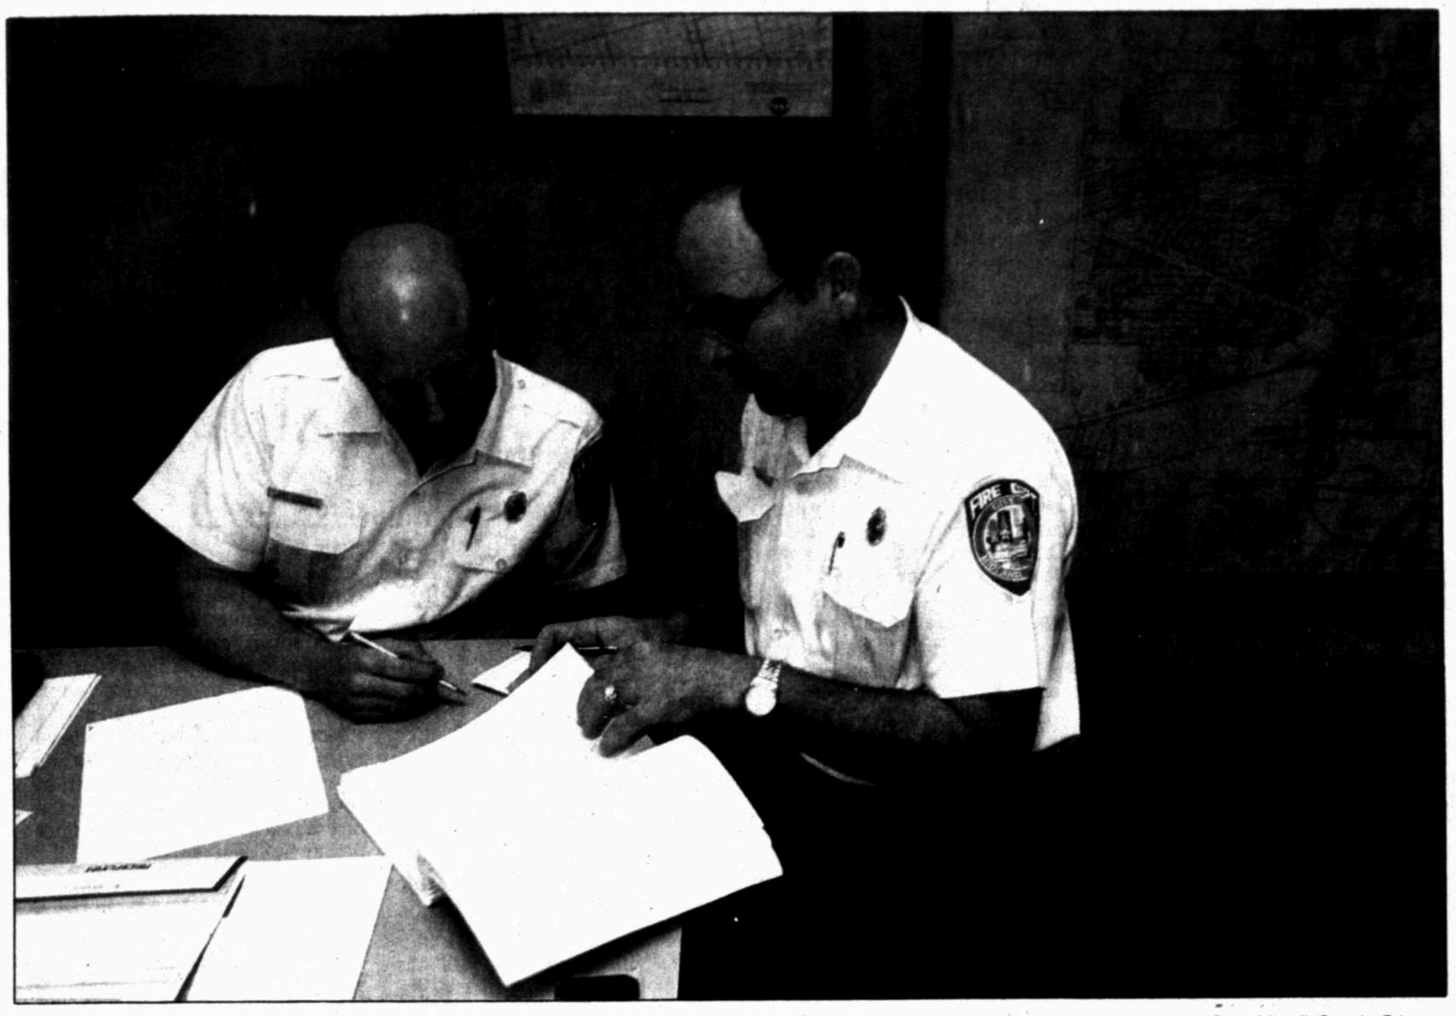

City firefighters and police contained the spill and conducted the evacuation. A special military force cleaned up the fuel.

"Overall, it went really well," said Bill Shipman, the city's emergency management coordinator. "We had more response this time from the city and county than we've ever had.

"We had a few complaints about communication, but you're always going to have those."

Shipman said the city, required by law to hold the simulated disasters each year, may conduct some smaller exercises to prepare for next year's event.

Thursday's "disaster" was under control by noon, so local leaders could return to their offices to confront real problems.

Program provides food for the needy

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

There are food lines in Midland in 1992 — a time of affluence for a few and cautious-to-hard times for others.

The food lines are for the poor, the unemployed, the disabled, the struggling.

And there are a few grateful people who volunteer to help dole out sacks of government-surplus groceries to individuals and families.

It's not much — about $10 worth or so per month — but it helps.

Sharon Langley, 35, volunteers her time with West Texas Opportunities to help disburse food to the poor "because once upon a time when I needed help, there was help for me."

In Midland, about 580 poverty-level families are signed up for the program.

Earl G. Farrington, who, at 64, is retired and disabled, is grateful for the monthly groceries.

"Every little bit helps," Farrington said. "It's all appreciated."

"These old boys that are living on Social Security and some of us are having a hard time," he said Wednesday morning at the Texas National Guard Armory food pick-up station.

Farrington was among Midlanders — young, middle-aged and older — who picked up sacks of groceries: butter, canned tomatoes, flour and either canned pork or peanut butter. In past years, cheese was a staple food item in the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program.

Farrington, who is a retired oil-field painter, and his wife own their house.

"If it wasn't for that, having that house paid for, we couldn't make it. We couldn't stand no payments."

Farrington, who grew up on a Martin County farm near Lenorah, said he had quit school in his youth "to take care of Momma and Daddy. We've had it a little bit rough down the line." The drought of the 1950s put him out of the farming business.

Detrich Massingill, a 24-year-old Midland County student, was in line for her mother. She especially wanted cheese. "That's what my mother sent me down for."

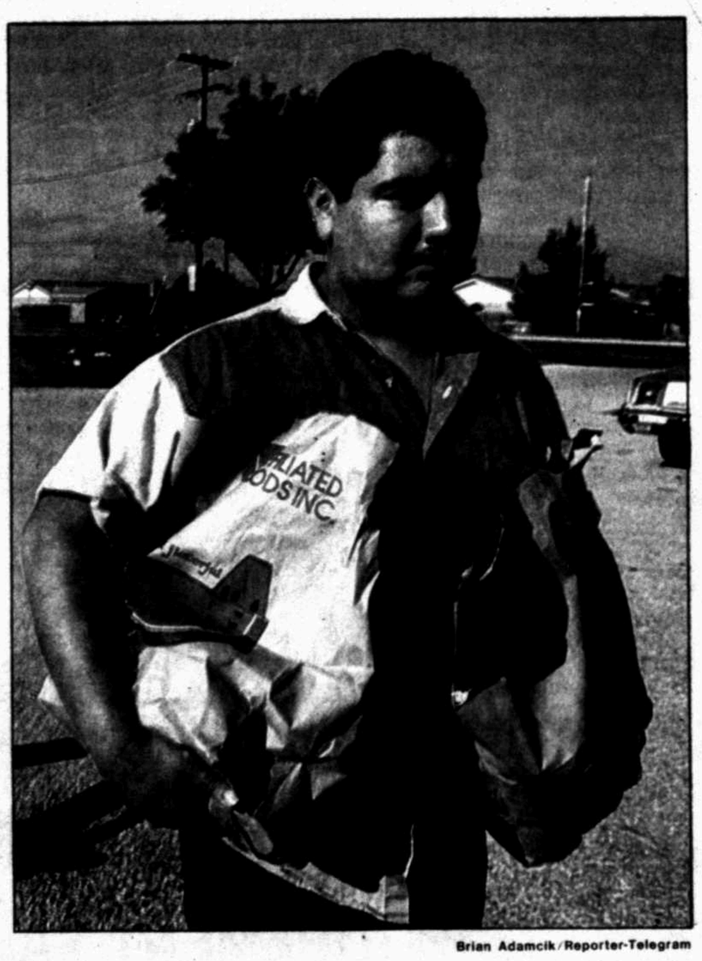

But Ms. Massingill was pleased with the flour and other groceries.

"It helps us bake, because we bake a lot."

Tyra Jones, who is the Midland County director of West Texas Opportunities, which administers the food program, said she could identify with Ms. Massingill "because she is a struggling college student. I have been there."

The program serves many people: older folks surviving on Social Security checks, parents and families in the Aid-to-Families-with-Dependent Children program, the disabled, the poor, and the unemployed.

PBRPC supports plan updating long-range road improvements

■ Communities are required to outline road and transportation projects in order to be eligible for federal funds.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

Work on the main lanes of Loop 250 and reconstruction of some well-used city streets are among the projects in a long-term improvement plan for the area.

The Midland-Odessa Regional Transportation Study (MORTS) includes $30 million in road and transportation work throughout Ector and Midland counties. It is a long-term planning document, but does not signify that funding for the proposed projects is available.

"It lays out each fiscal year's work for our plans," said Gary Watson, a staffer at the Texas Department of Transportation's Odessa office.

Planning using the MORTS is required for the local communities to be eligible for federal money, Watson said.

The document was supported by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Wednesday — a group of area elected officials that assists with long-term planning for the region, among other duties.

The MORTS, a 20-year document, is updated every year.

Along Loop 250, the document calls for two miles of main lanes to be constructed in 1995. The work would extend from west of Midland Drive through the Midkiff Road intersection and include the overpasses.

Funding — expected to come mainly from the state — has not yet been approved, however. Cost for that continuation of the loop construction is estimated at $5,503,000.

Other proposed improvements include reconstruction of Big Spring Street from U.S. 80 to Wadley Avenue in 1993, and from Stokes to Interstate 20 the same year. Those projects total $750,000 in state money.

Midland Drive, in 1993, is hoped to be reconstructed from Andrews Highway north to Wadley Avenue, at a cost of about $650,000.

Seminar to offer ideas on better management of students, workers

A boss drives. A leader leads.
A boss relies on authority. A leader relies on cooperation.
A boss says "I." A leader says "We."
A boss creates fear. A leader creates confidence.
A boss knows how. A leader shows how.
A boss creates resentment. A leader breeds enthusiasm.
A boss fixes blame. A leader fixes mistakes.
A boss makes work drudgery. A leader makes work interesting.

"Boss management" practiced by teachers, administrators — or anyone in the management field — is wrong, according to Alex Rose, Insight Counselor for Midland Independent School District.

Even school counselors can take a lesson in changing their management styles, she noted.

Ms. Rose said Midland school counselors are willing to help students, but students aren't always willing to accept their assistance.

"What we are doing isn't working. Teachers and counselors are more managers than anything else. Managing people is our number one job. But, in order to get students to buy into what we want we've got to have strategies," she said.

Enter Dr. William Glasser with his control theory, which addresses "Managing Students Without Coercion."

Glasser, a Los Angeles physician and author of several books, will offer his theory on managing students and people in a seminar, scheduled from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. on Aug. 12 at Midland Center.

Midland ISD and Region 18 Education Service Center are co-sponsoring the summer seminar.

Glasser is known for developing reality therapy, a method of counseling that has its basis in the idea that people are responsible for what they do.

"Managing without coercion doesn't mean that there won't be consequences for behavior," Ms. Rose said. "Instead, responsibility and self-evaluation will be stressed."

Glasser defines his reality theory as a method of counseling "based on the belief that we all choose what we do with our lives and that we are responsible for these choices."

Rather than punishing people for misbehavior, Glasser contends that people who behave irresponsibly need to be taught a more responsible way to behave.

In his Aug. 12 seminar "The Quality School: Managing Students Without Coercion," Glasser will offer strategies to manage people in a way which could improve the quality of their lives.

Tucker to file complaint with U.S. Justice Department

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Indicted former sheriff's investigator Ronnie Tucker said Wednesday he will ask the U.S. Justice Department to look into the Texas Attorney General's Office investigation methods.

Tucker claims the state attorney general's probes into his work as an undercover "sting" specialist are a witch-hunt that has sabotaged his 22-year law-enforcement career.

Investigations headed by Shane Phelps, an attorney general's prosecutor, have resulted in six indictments against Tucker for theft, misapplication of funds, and perjury in Midland, Monahans and Dallas.

Two of those indictments have been dismissed.

"The complaint will allege official misconduct and official suppression (of evidence) by the Attorney General Office," said Tucker, 44, at a press conference in the Midland County Law Enforcement Building.

The complaint is to be filed with the Office of Public Integrity, an agency of the U.S. Department of Justice.

It was Tucker's third Midland press conference since May 18, when he attacked perjury charges lodged against him by a Midland County grand jury.

Phelps presented evidence to that grand jury.

Ten days later, Tucker pleaded not guilty to those charges in state district court in Midland. Afterward, in the Midland County Courthouse lobby, he lambasted Phelps and the Attorney General's Office for their means of investigating West Texas law enforcement.

"It's got way beyond prosecution now (and) far into persecution," Tucker said.

Tucker, who is now ranching in the Panhandle, said that "harassment" against him has "reached such a level" that he may be forced to file a lawsuit to salvage his reputation.

"It looks like the only option I have left is to possibly file a lawsuit of my own to try to get my good name back and end the witch hunt by the Attorney Gener-

Perot ahead of Clinton and Bush in eatery's Frijole Poll

GALVESTON (AP) — Ross Perot was piling up the frijoles Wednesday in an informal restaurant poll that judges candidates' fortunes by how many beans bearing their names are pitched into wine carafes.

Restaurateur Manuel Corrella says the Frijole Poll, conducted at Corrella's Corral Mexican Restaurant, has picked the presidential election winner in every election since 1976.

On the local level, the Frijole Poll has identified the victor in every hotly contested Galveston mayoral race since 1973, when the poll was instituted by Corrella.

Perot was trouncing President Bush and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton in the poll after two weeks of bean-dropping. Wednesday, Perot had 184 beans compared to 81 for Bush and 57 for Clinton.

Corrella emphasized that he's not recommending how anyone should vote in November. But he said current standings in the Frijole Poll indicate Perot could win big in Texas, if not nationwide.

"It tells me there are a lot of people out there who are not happy with the present situation," Corrella said.

"This vote cuts across all lines," he said. "These are not stereotype voters. They come from all different segments of the community and all over the country. As far as I can see, I would think Perot's going to win unless he does something silly like some other politicians have done."

The tally is sometimes known as Don Sancho's Bean Poll, named for a smiling, sombrero-topped mannequin that has been a fixture in the restaurant for several years and presides over the poll.

Corrella will continue to conduct the poll until time for the election. He said he believes it will reflect each candidate's standing with the voters just about as well as any of the other better-known polls.

"It's about as accurate as any," Corrella said.

But Corrella said he couldn't tell if Perot would keep up his runaway lead in the frijole census.

"Who knows? Don Sancho don't open his mouth, and he's very credible. Maybe if the candidates keep their mouths shut and listen to the people, they may do better," Corrella said.

MANAGE: Doctor to suggest strategies

(From 1B)

tions schools, Ms. Rose said Glasser's talk is geared toward more than just educators.

"It is intended for business managers, social workers, law enforcement, mental health care professionals and anyone who has to manage people," she said.

More than 350 people have already signed up for the event. Ms. Rose said enrollment will be closed at 500. The seminar will feature a talk, role playing and question-and-answer period.

"Glasser is well known and we have people signed up from Dallas and Austin to attend," she said.

Glasser, a board-certified psychiatrist, has written books on methods of psychotherapy, including "Reality Therapy," "Stations of the Mind," "Positive Addiction," "The Identity Society," "Mental Health or Mental Illness?" and "Control Therapy." He also wrote "Schools Without Failure," "Quality School," "Control Theory in the Classroom," and "Quality School: Managing Students Without Coercion."

In his "Quality School" book, Glasser writes: "Our traditional system of managing students sends a clear message that low-quality work is acceptable. . . . control theory contends that no one can make anyone do anything — it is the job of the manager to manage so that the workers or the students can easily see a strong connection between what they are asked to do and what they believe is quality."

Glasser contends that "better teaching is better managing."

Ms. Rose agrees. "Our system has to change," she said. "It cannot succeed through 'boss management,' particularly within our schools. Kids are not buying into our agendas."

She said Glasser has modeled some of his concepts after Dr. Edwards Deming, an American who taught the Japanese to achieve high-quality products at low cost following World War II.

Ms. Rose said that cooperative methods and self-evaluation will shift some of the responsibility for the student's success onto the student.

Glasser says that "Just as there is nothing wrong with American workers, there is nothing wrong with our students. It is the way we manage them that must be changed."

'The seminar will give managers and teachers the tools they need to look at the way they manage people and offer procedures to manage them in a different way," Ms. Rose said.

The seminar is open to the public. Admission is $40. Coffee and pastry will be served at 8:30 a.m.

Persons may earn five LPC credit hours or AAT credit for attending the event.

For reservations or more information call 567-3226, 689-1595 or 689 1081.

1-vehicle accident kills woman

Staff report

OZONA — A 29-year-old woman died at the scene of an accident early Wednesday morning on Interstate 10 in Sutton County, Department of Public Safety officials said.

Dung Thi Bui, of Fountain Valley, Calif., was thrown from a 1992 Toyota van at 3:30 a.m. after the driver fell asleep at the wheel and the vehicle rolled two times. She was pronounced dead at the scene.

The driver, Thoa Thi Bui, 25, is in serious condition with severe lacerations at Hudspeth Memorial Hospital in Sonora, officials said.

Seven other members of the same family also were injured.

A 70-year-old male and a 64-year-old female are listed in serious condition at the hospital with bruises and lacerations.

Two other males, age 19 and 34, are listed in good condition, officials said. And three others, including another 19-year-old male, a 27-year-old male and a 21-year-old female were treated and released from the hospital.

COMPLAINT: Tucker seeks probe into attorney general's office investigations

(From 1B)

al's Office," Tucker said.

In late May, Phelps had moved to dismiss theft and misapplication-of-funds indictments brought against Tucker in Monahans.

About that time, Phelps said Tucker would be re-indicted in Dallas, where he suggested the case against Tucker would be stronger.

Tucker said Phelps was bluffing.

Tucker

But this week, a Dallas County grand jury indicted Tucker for "theft by a public servant."

The Monahans and the Dallas indictments arose out of the same August 1989 reverse-sting operation in which Tucker, then an agent for then-Ward County District Attorney Hal Upchurch, had arranged a sting in which he collected $275,000 for the sale of 500 pounds of marijuana to Jeff Cahill of Sherman. Subsequently, Cahill was convicted and was sentenced to prison for 10 years.

Though working for Upchurch, Tucker said that he was not a commissioned peace officer at that time.

Of the $275,000, Tucker said he, in an agreement among Midland, Ward and Grayson county lawmen, took the standard 25 percent (or $68,750) of the proceeds and gave it to the informant as a fee.

In subsequent forfeiture proceedings in court in Monahans. the remainder of the money was divided among the Midland, Monahans and Sherman law-enforcement agencies.

But a day or two after Tucker had paid the informant in Sherman, Tucker met the informant at Dallas Love Field, where the informant gave Tucker half — $34,375 — of the informant's fee and stuck it into his boot.

Tucker said he invested the money in criminal investigations.

There was no theft, he said.

"I don't know who the money is supposed to be stolen from," Tucker said.

Tucker accused Phelps of manipulating grand juries to win indictments against him.

"He thrives in the darkness of secrecy of the grand jury," Tucker said of Phelps. "He can't stand the light of day."

Phelps, who earlier warded off Tucker's accusations, was out of his Austin office on Wednesday and was unavailable for comment. Phelps, in addition to being an assistant Texas Attorney General, is a deputized assistant Dallas County District Attorney.

"I will not enter into a plea-bargain (agreement)," Tucker said of the Dallas indictment, "and I am making plans to defend myself in court. So far, the state has used three counties to get the charges against me, and if these fail, they only have 251 counties to go."

"With the pressing issues facing the state of Texas, you have to wonder what the attorney general is trying to do," Tucker said. "For more than 20 years in law enforcement, I always thought we were all the 'good guys,' but now I have to wonder who Attorney General Dan Morales is trying to protect."

ROAD: PBRPC OKs document

(From 1B)

In 1994, plans call for adding two lanes to State Highway 158 from four miles south of I-20 to the Glasscock County line. That project is estimated at about $3 million.

Then in 1995, the widening of Fairgrounds Road may be extended both north and south of the project now in progress.

Currently, workers are widening Fairgrounds from Maple Street south to U.S. 80. If long-term plans are carried out, the road would eventually be four lanes wide from the Garden City Highway north to Loop 250.

Both additional phases of the work would total just over $1 million.

Among other planning commission business, members heard a plea from John Philbeck, president of the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee.

Philbeck asked commissioners to help him locate complete, accurate information about area Vietnam veterans listed as killed in action (KIA) or missing in action (MIA). He is part of a group trying to raise funds to build a memorial at Midland International Airport honoring veterans from the entire region.

By the end of the month, Philbeck said, about half of the memorial's $500,000 cost should be pledged or collected. Groundbreaking is hoped to take place on Veterans Day, Nov. 11.

FOOD: Volunteers sack government surplus

(From 1B)

"A lot of people have lost their jobs, or their hours have been reduced, and they are just trying to make it," Ms. Jones said.

Not all food recipients are elated with their monthly sack of groceries.

"Every once in a while, we get somebody who picks up a sack and says, 'Is this all?' " Ms. Jones said."I get my reward ... (from) those who are so appreciative" and who know that "every little bit helps."

Elsie Mae Coley, at 83, said that every day "I thank the Lord that I know who I am."

"I am here (for groceries) because my son is out of work," Ms. Coley said.

"If he's working, there is no need to come out here and get what other folks need," Ms. Coley said. "It's just wrong to take what other folks need" if you are faring well and aren't in need of food. "I believe in Christianity."

Minister tempted by lure of the lottery

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tempted by the lure of the lottery, a North Texas minister now has a chance, however slim, to win $1 million.

The Rev. Richard Hand, a minister at First Christian Church of Bowie, was selected Tuesday as the second of three alternates for next week's $1 million drawing, the Texas Lottery's first grand prize.

But he will be able to participate only if two of the seven finalists selected before him are disqualified.

"Pardon me if I'm still underwhelmed," Hand said Tuesday. "It doesn't mean a thing until they put the money in your hot little hand."

The names of seven persons were selected Tuesday for the drawing to be held June 18 in Dallas. The three alternates were added in case any of the seven finalists are disqualified.

Hand, along with first alternate Stacy Walker of Houston and third alternate Dan Dada of Garland, will be in line to take any of the seven's place should one of them be disqualified for working for the Texas Lottery or its contractors, for being a live-in relative of someone who is employed by the Texas Lottery or its contractors, or for possessing a ticket from a stolen pack.

Hand, a Texas Christian University divinity school graduate, said he doesn't expect any repercussions from his congregation of 100 for buying a ticket. Some churches consider gambling a sin.

"I had gone to a convenience store here to pick up a few things, and I just had some change in my pocket that I was tired of hearing rattle around," he said.

Judge denies seeking a bribe to expedite trial

EDINBURG (AP) — A state district judge has been accused in a court document of seeking a bribe in exchange for expediting a multimillion-dollar civil case.

Judge Homer Salinas has angrily denied the allegations and asked a Department of Public Safety investigator to look into the charges.

He told investigator J.M. Rodriguez to "do whatever you have to do," and gave him "unlimited permission to tap any and all of my phone calls," according to court transcripts.

Salinas could not be reached for comment.

A motion for recusal says a McAllen businessman claiming to represent Salinas allegedly solicited payment for the judge from Ralph and Mary Lindsay, two plaintiffs in the civil case.

The motion made reference to a taped conversation between the Lindsays and J.J. Avila, who allegedly told them the lengthy trial would continue to be delayed until the bribe was paid.

The bribe was to be 2 percent to 5 percent of the amount recovered in the suit by the Lindsays and Multi Communications Inc., according to the motion filed by plaintiffs' attorney Thomas Sims.

Avila, the owner of the McAllen Athletic Club, denied involvement.

Salinas denied having any association with Avila.

"The minute I received word that this person unknown to me, J.J. Avila, apparently solicited a bribe for somebody I brought it to the attention of law enforcement authorities," Salinas told The (McAllen) Monitor in Wednesday's editions.

The motion to recuse Salinas from the suit will be heard today in Brownsville.

The case involves claims by plaintiffs that an agent purporting to represent Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and New York Life Insurance Co. promised them $60 million in "self-liquidating" loans that required no repayment.

Doctors separate girls who were joined at chest

HOUSTON (AP) — Two 13-month-old twin girls who had been joined at the chest since birth were improving Wednesday but remained on ventilators after being separated in a serie of surgeries, doctors said.

"Everything seems to be very stable," Dr. Michael Nihill, the pediatric cardiologist who oversaw the operations, said. "Both girls have started to breathe a little on their own, but their respiration is not normal yet. If they progress well, we could have the ventilators turned off maybe by (today) or Friday."

The Texas girls, Tiesha and Iesha, whose last name and hometown have not been released at the parents' request, were separated in an eight-hour series of surgeries Tuesday that involved at least a dozen physicians.

The twins had been joined from the chest to the navel, with connective tissue between their hearts, a fused liver and a shared belly button.

"The question of the moment is how well they can breathe," Nihill said at a news conference Wednesday. "We have to see how rigid the chest becomes to support ventilation."

A polypropylene mesh material was inserted in the chest cavity of each girl to help substitute for missing breast bone, said Dr. David Ott, the cardiologist who separated the girls' hearts.

Nihill said the material will solidify over the next few weeks, becoming more rigid like cartilage, and allow the girls' own tissue to grow around it. The rigid mass will allow the girls sufficient room to inflate their lungs. For now, their chests remain tight, requiring the use of the ventilators, Nihill said.

The girls were born by Caesarean section at another Texas hospital April 19, 1991. Nihill said tests showed the girls both had fully functioning organs and so they were allowed to grow for a year before the separation was attempted.

Six weeks ago, Dr. Samuel Stal, chief of plastic surgery service at the hospital, installed three balloon-like catheters into the girls' shared chest cavity to begin "tissue expansion." A saline solution gradually inflated the balloons to help the skin stretch and grow to provide an extra flap to cover their new chests.

Doctors said the extra skin allowed physicians to close each girl's chest.

Nihill said the girls were "just waking up and moving around" Wednesday and still were sedated, so there had been little reaction from them.

"The family is very relieved that this waiting period is over and the children are alive," Nihill said.

Jurors debate punishment for convicted rapist, murderer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jurors heard from character witnesses Wednesday as they began deciding punishment for a man convicted of raping and beating to death a Cibolo girl who clutched a Bible and begged for mercy.

The punishment phase will resume this morning.

Rolando Rodarte, 24, was convicted of capital murder Tuesday night after jurors deliberated about six hours.

He had been charged in the Oct. 26, 1988, slaying of 16-year-old Donna "Dee-Dee" Friesenhahn.

Authorities say the girl begged for her life while holding her white Bible as she was being raped and attacked with a fence post.

The teen-ager died after being struck more than 20 times on her head, testimony showed.

Another man, Ty Wesley Gonnerman, 18, was convicted last year of murder. He is serving a life prison term for the killing.

House begins showdown debate on balanced-budget amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House launched its long-awaited debate on a balanced-budget constitutional amendment Wednesday as both sides sought support from a dwindling group of wavering lawmakers. A cliffhanger showdown vote is expected today.

House Democratic leaders opposing the amendment hunted for legislators willing to brave the possible consequences of a "no" vote in an election-year in which the government seems likely to run a record $400 billion deficit. Lawmakers and lobbyists said there were about two dozen undecided members.

President Bush, who has made the measure a priority, also pursued support and took a swipe at lawmakers as well. In a taped address offered to local television stations, he said, "The deficit is what's real. Congressional inaction is what's real. A constitutional amendment mandating a balanced budget is what's needed."

Bush also postponed by one hour his scheduled departure Thursday morning for Panama and the Earth Summit in Brazil so he could hold a breakfast with members of Congress leading the fight for the amendment.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater noted that the House vote on the measure is scheduled for later Thursday, and he said "the president wants to make this last-minute attempt to rally our forces" before it.

As the vote neared, fear of the amendment's consequences was producing strange bedfellows. Labor unions and groups representing the elderly, worried that the measure would spark deep cuts in Social Security and Medicare, found themselves allied with the conservative U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which feared the plan would lead to tax increases.

On the House floor, amendment supporters said federal debt — now totaling nearly $4 trillion — had grown huge enough.

"Nothing short of a change of constitutional dimensions will change the government's attitude toward spending beyond its means," said the chief sponsor of the leading version of the amendment, Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas.

Opponents countered that a constitutional amendment would not ease the standoff between Bush and Congress over tax increases and spending cuts that has helped swell federal red ink. Those decisions would be left for the future.

"What happens if the Constitution doesn't work," asked Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif. "Should we go and ask for a papal edict? Or maybe we should ask for leeches to be placed on every member who doesn't do the right thing? Or maybe we ought to ... have a bomber fly over the Capitol and threaten to drop a bomb."

Bush offered to visit the Capitol to shower attention on the amendment, but decided not to after sponsors urged him to focus instead on five or 10 wavering members, said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, sponsor of one balance-budget plan.

Instead, with Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and White House Chief of Staff Samuel Skinner at his side, Bush met with lawmakers in the Oval Office.

At least one, Rep. Jim Olin, D-Va., said he was unconvinced by Bush's claims that the budget could be balanced simply by economic growth and a slowing of the growth of benefit programs like Medicare.

"I don't think he was very persuasive," said Olin, who switched last week and now opposes the measure.

Stenholm's measure would forbid the government to spend more money than it expects to raise, unless three-fifths majorities in the House and Senate vote to do so. Another exception would occur if the country were in a major military conflict.

The amendment would also require the president to submit a balanced budget, something Bush has never done. It would take effect in 1998.

To join the Constitution, the amendment would have to be approved by two-thirds votes of the House and Senate, and then by 38 states.

Stenholm said he had "290 solid" votes — the number needed if all 435 House members vote. But House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and his Democratic captains hunted votes in meetings and telephone calls with the two dozen undecided lawmakers.

Report: Court gets runaround in search for Demjanjuk information

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A federal appeals court asked the Justice Department twice about claims of a cover-up in the John Demjanjuk investigation but never got an answer before it reopened his extradition case, a newspaper said Wednesday.

Demjanjuk, 72, a former auto worker from the Cleveland area, was convicted in Israel in 1988 of being the sadistic "Ivan the Terrible," a guard at the Nazi death camp Treblinka during World War II.

Demjanjuk, a native Ukrainian who moved to the United States after the war, insists he is a victim of mistaken identity and has appealed the conviction. The Israeli Supreme Court is reviewing the case.

A Justice Department spokesman told the Akron Beacon Journal the report requested by the Cincinnati-based 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals wasn't ready.

The 6th Circuit last week began reexamining the extradition order that sent Demjanjuk to Israel, saying the order "may have been ... based on erroneous information."

Demjanjuk's U.S. citizenship was stripped in 1981 after he admitted lying on U.S. immigration forms. He had been ordered deported to the Soviet Union, which then included Ukraine, but Israel requested his extradition in 1983. Demjanjuk was sent to Israel in 1986 to stand trial.

Defense attorney Yoram Sheftel bases Demjanjuk's appeal on recently obtained depositions by Treblinka guards who said during war crimes trials in the Soviet Union that the gas chamber operator known as "Ivan the Terrible" was a man named Ivan Marchenko. Most descriptions of Marchenko do not fit Demjanjuk, Sheftel says.

The prosecutor has argued that even if the high court overturns that conviction, he also has proved Demjanjuk was a guard at the Sobibor concentration camp and must be convicted of genocide because all Ukrainian guards participated in atrocities.

But Sheftel said the U.S. order extraditing Demjanjuk says he must be tried for "specific deeds by Ivan the Terrible" at Treblinka.

The five-judge Israeli appeal panel hasn't said when it will rule.

Defense attorneys in the United States and Israel, along with Demjanjuk supporters such as U.S. Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio, have alleged that the Justice Department knew all along that Demjanjuk might not have been "Ivan," but withheld the information.

The newspaper reported that Leonard Green, clerk of the 6th Circuit, asked the Justice Department in a Jan. 7 letter about an internal investigation of the Demjanjuk case. Green wrote at the request of Chief Judge Gilbert S. Merritt, the newspaper said.

Green said Merritt wanted to know when the Justice investigation would be completed and wanted a copy of the report. He also requested copies of materials recently filed with the Israeli Supreme Court.

On May 4, Green wrote again, complaining that the Justice Department had not responded, the Beacon Journal reported.

Dean St. Dennis, a Justice Department spokesman, told the newspaper that a response to the court's request is nearly completed. "The department will fully respond to the court in a brief consistent with the circuit's order," he said.

Department officials didn't return a call Wednesday from The Associated Press seeking further comment.

Vereen still in critical condition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The vehicle that struck Ben Vereen was driven by a music producer who lives near Vereen and has worked with him, authorities said Wednesday.

Doctors for the critically injured actor studied the results of medical tests performed after about four hours of surgery Tuesday. The nature of the tests wasn't disclosed.

"He had a restful night. He's still in critical condition. He's still conscious and communicative," said Richard Elbaum, spokesman for University of California, Los Angeles, Medical Center.

The 45-year-old entertainer is best known for his portrayal of Chicken George in the miniseries "Roots" and his Tony Award-winning Broadway performance in "Pippin."

He was hit early Tuesday while he walked along Pacific Coast Highway near his Malibu home by a Chevrolet Suburban driven by record producer David Foster, police said.

Foster, who lives near Vereen in Malibu, has collaborated with some of the music industry's top stars, including Michael Jackson, Barbra Streisand, Chicago and Manhattan Transfer.

Sheriff's investigators said Vereen and Foster worked together two weeks ago during an AIDS benefit, but there were no details.

Heart Association calls for ban on passive smoking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Heart Association on Wednesday urged that secondhand smoke be treated as an environmental toxin that should be banned from the home, office and all public places.

The group also dismissed claims by the Tobacco Institute that there is no clear evidence linking Environmental Tobacco Smoke, or ETS, with health problems of the lung and heart.

"In terms of carcinogenicity, there is nothing even close," said Dr. Homayoun Kazemi, a physician who helped prepare an AHA paper on the topic. "The second-closest (environmental) cause of lung cancer would be asbestos."

The paper contained no new scientific data, but rather summarized what its authors said was an overwhelming amount of evidence that exposure to the smoke of others increases a person's chances of getting lung cancer, heart disease or emphysema.

The group said it is contacting Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan and William K. Reilly, director of the Environmental Protection Agency, to urge them to toughen federal smoking standards and increase funding for education about the risks of smoking.

Educating the public about the dangers of secondary smoke will receive special attention, the group said.

Dr. Aubrey E. Taylor, another physician who helped draft the paper, said that since a landmark 1964 Surgeon General's report highlighting the health dangers of smoking, there have been thousands of studies showing secondary smoke increases the risk of heart and lung disease.

"I don't think in 1992 we have to debate whether Environmental Tobacco Smoke causes disease," added Kazemi. "The evidence is there."

That statement was sharply challenged by the Tobacco Institute, which insisted that "less than 100" studies have been done on the effects of secondary smoke.

"The weight of the scientific evidence continues to show that there is no link," said Tom Lauria, a Tobacco Institute spokesman.

He said that seven of 12 studies on cardiovascular disease show no connection between those problems and secondary smoke, while 29 of 36 studies on lung cancer also fail to establish a link.

Anticipating that reaction, Dr. Lee B. Reichman, president of the American Lung Association, said "asking them about the effects of Environmental Tobacco Smoke is akin to asking the fox about conditions in the chicken coop."

The paper was released at the same time as a public opinion poll that found that nine in 10 people think secondhand smoke is harmful. The poll, based on a Gallup Organization sample of 1,067 adults, was commissioned by the association, the American Lung Association and the American Cancer Society.

Pat Robertson backs off bid for UPI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Religious broadcaster Pat Robertson dropped his $6 million bid to buy United Press International on Wednesday, and officials said the 85-year-old news service might shut down by the weekend.

Robertson made a substitute offer of $500,000 merely for UPI's name and two small parts, the only firm proposal he was willing to make after examining the company's books. But the company rejected the offer.

U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Francis Conrad had approved the sale of the entire news organization to Robertson a month ago but gave him 30 days to lower his price or back out of the deal.

Robertson said Wednesday that the economics of continuing to operate UPI as a full-service news operation "just don't seem to make a great deal of sense."

After a hearing before the bankruptcy judge in New York Wednesday afternoon, UPI's attorneys said the company was negotiating with several other potential buyers.

But a shutdown could occur as early as this weekend if no buyer is found for the cash-short company. "If additional funds for UPI's operations are not found, UPI will terminate operations on Friday, June 12, at midnight," the company said in a statement.

"Someone has to come in by Friday," said Cary Samowitz, a lawyer for UPI creditors. "And Friday is going to be cutting it close."

UPI, founded as United Press by E. W. Scripps in 1907, has a long record of providing newspaper stories, photographs and broadcasting services. It has won nine Pulitzer prizes for reporting and photography.

It became United Press International in 1958 when it merged with William Randolph Hearst's International News Service.

Robertson said in Washington that instead of buying all of UPI, he was instructing his attorneys to try to negotiate the purchase of "but one or two of the assets of this organization, including its name."

After that offer was turned down, Robertson's lawyers asked the bankruptcy judge to order UPI to accept it. Conrad refused but said they could file a written request for such an order.

"We gave it our very best shot," Robertson said at a packed news conference in Washington earlier Wednesday.

Failure to strike the smaller deal would mean he would get back a deposit of $900,000. He would not recoup the $300,000 he spent to keep the service operating for the past month.

He said he had been interested in buying UPI's radio network, but it needed expensive technology upgrading.

UPI, which has lost money for three decades and now owes its creditors $60 million, is operating under bankruptcy protection for the second time in recent years.

Robertson, who made an unsuccessful run for the presidency in 1988, already owns the Christian Broadcasting Network.

Spices do not aggravate bowel problems, study shows

By Jean Carper

If you have diarrhea or spastic colon (irritable bowel syndrome), is it OK to eat red and black pepper? Doctors have long warned patients with bowel problems away from hot spices. The theory was the pepper speeds up peristalsis, the bowel movements that propel contents along. And thus, could worsen diarrhea and spastic colon.

Carper

Now gastroenterologists at Our Lady of Mercy Medical Center in the Bronx, N.Y., dispute this. If anything, they say, pepper slows down such bowel activity. In tests, they had 16 healthy adults take pepper in capsules — about one teaspoon of red cayenne pepper and three-quarters of a teaspoon of black pepper. Then they measured intestinal activity.

Their conclusion: Pepper did not stimulate peristalsis and the urge for bowel movements in any of the subjects. In most, it delayed the time it took contents to pass through the bowel.

The researchers say some long-held beliefs about spices and GI (gastrointestinal) problems may not be scientifically valid. They specifically point to recent research indicating hot spices do not retard ulcer healing, may not spur stomach acid secretion and, in fact, may protect stomach lining from damage.

Prostate cancer and diet

If you're worried about prostate cancer, there's good reason to go easy on animal fats, especially in milk and dairy products. So cautions Italian researcher Carlo La Vecchia in a recent survey of research in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

Here's some of the recent evidence he noted:

Among Seventh Day Adventists, drinking one or two glasses of milk a day nearly doubled the risk of prostate cancer, compared with drinking less than one glass. Three glasses or more boosted the odds about 2½ times. Eating lots of cheese, eggs and meat also increased prostate cancer chances.

A study at Buffalo's Rosewell Park Memorial Institute found a strong link between prostate cancer and whole milk, but not skim milk. More than three glasses a day of high-fat milk hiked risk two and a half times. Meat fat also was incriminated.

A study in California and Illinois revealed prostate-cancer patients ate more cheese and cream. A Minnesota study implicated ice cream.

Bottom line: Cutting back on animal fats, notably dairy fats, may help save you from prostate cancer.

Low-down on calcium

Attention, older women: Don't skimp on calcium, cautions Robert P. Heaney, M.D., Creighton University in Omaha, Neb. Calcium will not build bones probably after age 35, but it will help retard bone loss, he says. And that can help prevent fractures.

Indeed, a recent study of 300 postmenopausal women showed that raising the calcium intake from a daily 400 mg to 900 mg "abolished age-related bone loss in women six or more years past menopause."

Further, another study found that both women and men who got more than 760 mg of calcium a day had 60 percent fewer hip fractures than those getting less than 400 mg.

Higher calcium doses may add more benefit up to a point. But it appears postmenopausal women can probably get full bone protection from 900 to 1,000 mg of calcium a day, says Heaney.

And if you already have the bone-thinning disease osteoporosis? You still need calcium to block further weakening of bones, says Heaney. In studies, a calcium intake of 1,500 mg day, partly from supplements has completely stopped bone loss in such patients, he notes.

Arthritis-triggering foods

If you think your arthritis comes and goes depending on what you eat, you may be right. Evidence is growing that diet can affect rheumatoid arthritis, says British authority L. Gail Darlington, M.D.

Darlington and colleagues at Charing Cross and Westminster Medical School in Epsom find that specific foods trigger "allergic" flare-ups of joint pain, soreness and stiffness in some patients. The British doctors recently reported that 19 percent of 70 rheumatoid patients treated with diet have been free of arthritis symptoms and medications for one and a half to five years. They got better when they stopped eating certain foods.

Here are the top 10 offending foods most likely to provoke arthritis flare-ups, according to Darlington: corn, wheat, bacon/pork, oranges, milk, oats, rye, eggs, beer, coffee. In fact, corn and wheat induced symptoms in more than half of a group of arthritis patients. The culprit in wheat may be gluten.

Not all arthritis is linked to diet, but there is "sufficient orthodox evidence" now to make doctors suspect a connection in at least "a subgroup of patients," says Darlington.

Doctors warn against whole milk for infants

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Responding to reports of iron deficiency in infants, the American Academy of Pediatrics recommended last month that children under 1 year old not be given whole cow's milk or low-iron infant formula.

The only acceptable alternative to breast milk during the first year of a child's life is iron-fortified infant formula, the academy's Committee on Nutrition declared.

The recommendation is almost identical to a policy statement issued more than 20 years ago but changed in 1983 out of concern about the high cost of iron-fortified formula.

'Horns lose pair

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas baseball team has lost two top middle infielders to the major leagues.

Second baseman Robert DeLeon, a junior from Sugarland, signed a professional contract with the San Diego Padres and reported Tuesday to the team's minicamp in Phoenix. He gave up his final year of college eligibility.

His likely replacement, Chance Sanford of San Jacinto Junior College, signed with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I feel I'm ready to go," DeLeon said. "I feel I've proven myself. I think I can go compete at a higher level and give it a try."

DeLeon played one season with the Longhorns. He and Sanford became the first two of at least 12 Texas players or recruits who were drafted to sign.

Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson, who also is losing first-round pick Calvin Murray and fifth-round choice Chris Abbe to the pros, faces possible losses of pitcher John Dickens and such recruits as pitcher Rich Ireland and outfielders Shea Morenz, Trey Beamon and Armann Brown.

Ben Johnson fails

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Ben Johnson failed again Wednesday to run fast enough to qualify for the Olympics, and he is down to his final shot at making the Canadian team.

Johnson finished fourth in the 100 meters at the San Antonio track and field meet and was clocked in 10.43 seconds.

The sprinter has vowed to redeem himself after his use of steroids cost him his record-setting 100-meter victory at the Seoul Olympics and got him barred for two years.

In order to make the Canadian team, Johnson will have run the 100 in at least 10.28.

Portland's Clyde Drexler, right, goes for the ball after bumping into Chicago's Scottie Pippen during the early stages of the Trail Blazers' 93-88 victory Wednesday night in Game 4 of the NBA finals.

■ Portland overcomes a dismal start to pull even with Chicago in their best of seven series with a 93-88 victory.

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Portland Trail Blazers evened the NBA Finals despite themselves Wednesday night. Starting horribly and trailing almost the entire game, they won as Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls came unglued.

Jerome Kersey pulled out of a slump and joined Clyde Drexler with 21 points as the Trail Blazers rallied for a 93-88 victory and a 2-2 tie in the best-of-7 series.

Drexler gave Portland its first lead at 83-82 with 3:35 left when he slapped the ball away from Jordan, raced down the court and and scored on a layup over the Bulls' superstar. Jordan scored 32 points for the Bulls, but none in the final 10 minutes as he missed his last four shots.

Chicago turned the ball over five times in the final quarter, with no turnovers for the Blazers, who trailed 10-0 in the opening minutes and came into the championship series tagged as the team that would self-destruct.

Now, they go into Friday night's fifth game on their home court dead even with the defending champions.

The Trail Blazers, overcoming a combined 17-2 deficit in the opening minutes of each half, improved their playoff record to 9-1 at home this year. Wednesday night's victory snapped a four-season, nine-game home losing streak in the Finals by the Western Conference champion.

The streak included five consecutive losses by the Trail Blazers at Portland, three against Detroit in the 1990 championship series and two against Chicago.

Previously, the Western Conference hadn't won a Finals home game since the Los Angeles Lakers captured Game 7 against Detroit in 1988.

The task probably won't be easy for the Blazers, even at home. While the Bulls are 13-7 in this year's playoffs, they have yet to lose consecutive games and won both of their previous Game 5s.

The Bulls scored only three points after John Paxson's 3-pointer tied the score 85-85 with 2:35 remaining. Jordan then missed on two consecutive possessions and the Blazers took control with two free throws each by Cliff Robinson, Terry Porter and Drexler in a span of

Survivors vie for 5 baseball championships

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The four-month quest for high school baseball bragging rights climaxes today and Friday with 20 teams from across the state vying for their class championship.

Nine teams will be playing in the 44th annual University Interscholastic League semifinals for the first time, including Class 5A's El Paso Coronado, three 4A teams and two 3A schools.

Five teams have fought their way to a second-straight tournament, including defending champions Robstown — which goes up against Big Spring in the Class 4A semis — and Valley Mills.

The two-day, single-elimination tournament will be played at various Austin locales including Disch-Falk Field, the site of all five Friday finals.

El Paso Coronado, 27-9, enters its semifinal against Freeport Brazoswood with an attack led by eight batters hitting above .400. One of those, junior Rocky Coppinger, averages .484 and leads the team with a 9-3 pitching record.

Brazoswood, 27-3, enters its third-ever UIL tourney appearance having won 17-straight games. The Buccaneers have not been semifinalists since 1984.

The other side of the 5A bracket pits 20-6 South San Antonio and 29-9 Lufkin. Both teams have storied tourney pasts with a combined 20 semifinal trips, but none since 1976.

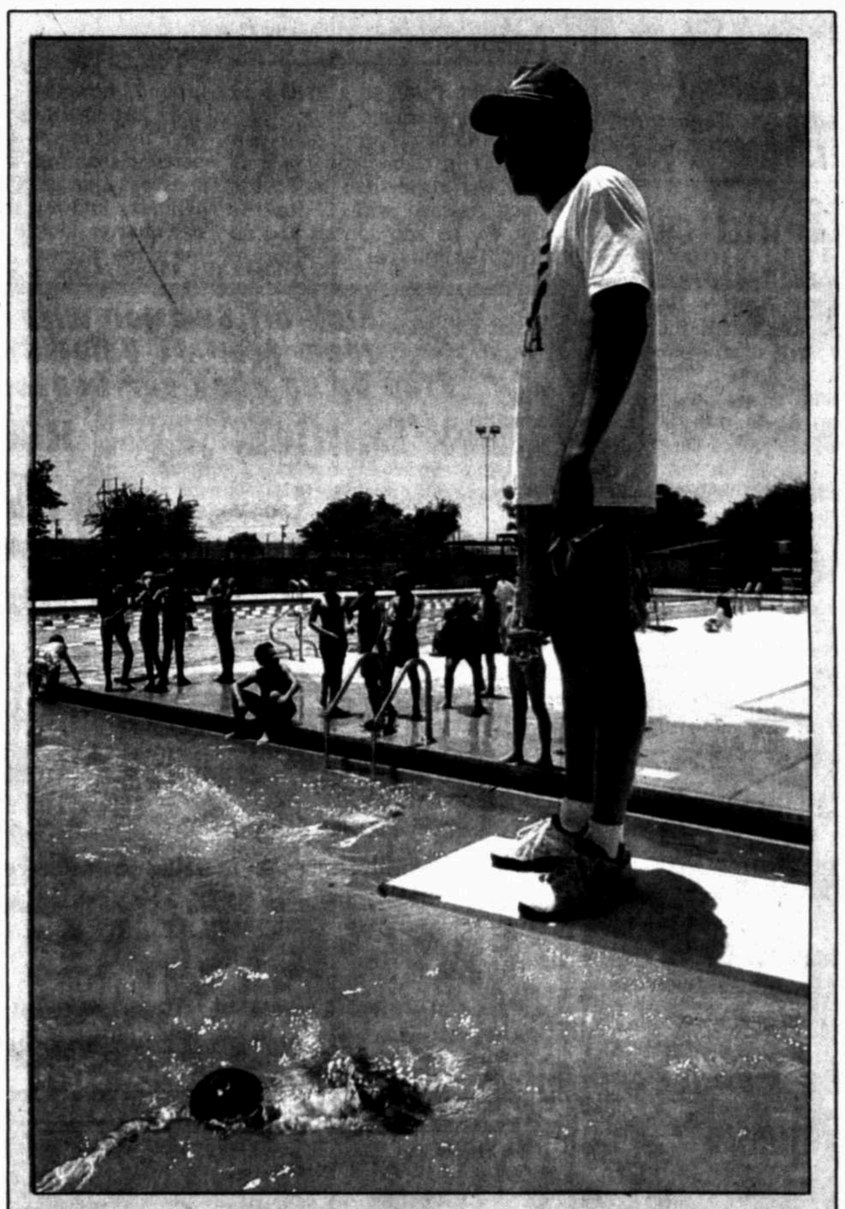

Defending champion Robstown has experienee on its side in the Class 4A title chase, making its fifth appearance in the last six years. The 27-6 Cotton Pickers have won 13 of their last 14 games.

They will face 15-13-1 Big Spring, which opened the season with five losses and lost five-straight again late in the season.

Bridge City and Denison will meet in the other 4A semifinal. Each has won 27 games and both are making their first tourney trips.

Bellville, 23-3, and 24-4-1 Hallettsville will debut against each other in a 3A semifinal.

The league is offered to any kid between the ages of six and 15, who can swim 25 yards. Costs vary from pool to pool, and the program runs through July 25.

Chaps remain in 7th place at Scottsdale

■ Odessa College makes the biggest leap at the national JUCO golf championships.

Staff report

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — There was a whole lot of shaking going on in Day 2 of the National Junior College Golf Tournament here at McCormick Ranch Country Club Wednesday.

However, the Midland College Chaparrals, who placed second last year, didn't take advantage of the jumps in the standings that some of the other teams experienced.

The Chaps did improve from Tuesday's round of 299 to 298, but remained in seventh place with a 597 total.

On the other hand, Odessa College improved four strokes from 298 to 294 to move from fifth place into sole possession of second place and only two strokes behind second day leader Florida Community College, who leads the pack with a 590 total. The Wranglers are now in good position to make a run at the title with two rounds left to play.

Host Scottsdale Community College, the first day leader at 292, was 12 strokes worse Wednesday stumble to sixth place and one stroke ahead of Midland College.

Grant Thomson led MC with a 72 Wednesday to move to 147 for the tournament, which is good for a tie for seventh place in the medalist race. Western Texas' Ryan Teague owns a two-day 145 to be a part of a four-way tie for the medalist lead.

MC's Steve Armstrong stands at 75-151 and is followed by Darren Griff, 78-152; Shaun Bishop, 76-150; and Guy Redford, 75-155.

Western Texas College of Snyder stands in 11th place with a two-day 612 team score.

Trevino early for Senior Players Championship; 'Golden Bear' shuns own design for better idea

By Harry Atkins
AP Sports Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. — America's golfing legends, Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino, aren't only getting older. They're getting stranger, too.

Try to figure this one out.

The Senior Players Championship, one of the biggies for the geriatric set, begins Thursday at the TPC of Michigan. The new course was designed by Nicklaus and used for the first time last year.

Nicklaus designed the course for Ford Land Development Co. His fee reportedly was $1 million. Nicklaus also is a spokesman for Ford's luxury car, Lincoln, and appears in Lincoln television commercials and print ads.

Yet, Nicklaus won't be here this week. He prefers to practice at Pebble Beach for the U.S. Open, to be played on the Monterey Peninsula next week.

Trevino said last year he didn't like the golf course in Dearborn. He's never been a fan of Nicklaus designs. They generally favor players who hit a high fade, like Nicklaus.

Trevino is a slasher. He learned the game on the windswept plains of Texas, where they hit low shots that will roll.

Further, Trevino represents Cadillac, one of Lincoln's main competitors.

Yet, Trevino not only is playing in this tournament, he showed up early. That's something he almost never does.

What gives?

"Usually I don't get to a tournament until the night before it starts," said Trevino, who hit town Monday. "But I've got a bone to pick with that course."

In 1990, when the tournament was still played at nearby Dearborn Country Club, a lush and easy layout, Trevino was runner-up to Nicklaus.

Last year, playing the new course for the first time, Nicklaus was never a factor. He tied for 22nd. But Trevino was in the hunt until the wheels somehow came off during the final round.

Trevino took a three-shot lead into the final round, but failed to hold it.

Jim Albus, then a club pro from Long Island, was able to win the title despite a bogey-double bogey start. Trevino never made a birdie all day, went belly up with a ball in the water at the 17th and finished with a 78.

"I played extremely well, but I didn't putt well," Trevino recalled. "I had it all over the flag for 16 holes. On the 16th, I hit the prettiest 7-iron you'll see right over the flag. It bounced over the green. I chipped to 4 feet, and I missed the putt and it put me two shots behind Albus.

"I was so frustrated that I tried to make eagle on the 17th. I used driver from the tee and then a 7-wood and put it in the water. It was a very frustrating thing, and it wasn't the greens. They were perfect. It was my stroke."

Trevino, who has won five times on the Senior circuit this year, has no desire to battle it out with the flat bellies on the regular PGA Tour.

"This is a big tournament for us," he said. "This is our tournament. It's a very difficult golf course, and you want to be ready when you go in."

Nicklaus, who hosted his own Memorial Tournament last week in Dublin, Ohio, obviously feels the same way about the Open, especially about Pebble Beach.

It's his favorite golf course.

Nicklaus won the Open there in 1972 and lost in 1982 when Tom Watson chipped in for birdie on the 71st hole. Nicklaus also won the U.S. Amateur there and three Bing Crosby Clambakes at Pebble Beach.

Plus, Nicklaus was hired by Pebble Beach's owner to restore the course to its original condition.

Eagle athletes take TCAL title

Midland Baptist School has captured the 1991-92 overall TCAL Texas State Division 1-A All-Sports title, according to the league office.

The Texas Christian Athletic League (TCAL) recognizes top yearly schools in each size division of the private school association. Sunnybrook Christian School of San Antonio won the II-A Division. Harmony Baptist of Weatherford was runner-up to Midland Baptist in 1-A.

Competing for the first year in the association, Midland Baptist athletic teams won state championships in girls basketball, boys cross country, boys golf and boys track. Eagle teams were runner-up in girls volleyball and placed fourth in boys basketball. The four state championships marked the best sports year in the history of the school.

In addition to team honors, Midland Baptist volleyball starters Sera Ares and Hillary Schuessler were tabbed All-State. Ares and Josh Brooke were All-State in basketball. MB girs coach Tammy Seirman was selected All-State team coach.

The Eagles captured eight individual state track titles and second place finishes in boys cross country and golf.

The TCAL has also awarded Midland Baptist two state championship competitions next year. The school will host the state volleyball tournament Oct. 29-31 and the state track meet in late April.

Stan Brooke, Midland Baptist principal, has also been selected to sit on the TCAL advisory board for the coming year.

Sale of Mariners approved in principle

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The sale of the Seattle Mariners to a Japanese-led group was approved in principle Wednesday in separate votes by the American and National leagues, who then set a formal vote for a joint session on Thursday.

AL president Bobby Brown said the sale received the necessary three-quarters majority during his league's session, and NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney said there was no significant opposition in her league. Under baseball's rules, a final vote can take place only during a joint meeting of both leagues.

"We have reason to believe our three-quarters majority will be easily reached tomorrow," Brown said.

NL president Bill White, who usually refuses to meet with reporters, did not attend the news conference that followed the 3½-hour meetings.

"We passed it in principle during a voice vote," Feeney said.

The group buying the club is headed by Hiroshi Yamauchi, president of Ninendo Co. Ltd. of Kyoto. Yamauchi says he has no interest in baseball but is buying the team as a gift to Seattle. Nintendo of America Inc. is located in suburban Redmond, Wash.

Baseball owners have opposed non-North American investment, but allowed the sale to go through when Yamauchi agreed to limit his power to decisions involving the team's sale or relocation, and the dissolution of the partnership purchasing the team. Yamauchi is contributing approximately $75 million of the $125 million raised by the buyers.

"The offshore interest has investment but not much to say about how the franchise is operated," Brown said.

John Ellis, the chairman of Puget Sound Power & Light Co., will become the team's chief executive officer. Brown acknowledged that Ellis could have discussions with Yamauchi about the team's operations, but said that Ellis had the power to make final decisions.

'It's the most powerful group that's ever been assembled in Seattle.'

— Fay Vincent

"You know and I know that in any organization there are discussions in the way decisions are reached, and we can't control how that's done," Brown said.

Jeff Smulyan, who heads the group that puchased the team from George Argyros in September 1989 for approximately $77 million, said his group will break even on its investment. Although Yamauchi's group is paying Smulyan approximately $106 million, Smulyan said the Mariners operated at a loss during his tenure.

"We don't make any money significantly, but we do OK," Smulyan said.

Under Smulyan, the Mariners topped 2 million in attendance for the first time, but still did not take in enough revenue to satisfy Smulyan's bankers.

"Someone asked, 'What would we do differently,'" Smulyan said. "I said, 'Take more partners.'

"We've learned a lot about running a club," he added. "I'm very proud of the people we assembled and the things we did."

Control of the team will pass from Smulyan to Ellis in approximately 30 days, after the final documents are drafted and approved by the ownership committee. That panel voted 7-0 Tuesday to recommend approval of the sale.

Commissioner Fay Vincent, who did not attend the news conference, said during an informal session with reporters that he was pleased with the outcome of the deal, especially the inclusion of local businesses in the partnership that is purchasing the team.

The local group includes Ellis, Christopher Larson of Microsoft Corp. and John McCaw.

UIL: Big Spring takes on Cotton Pickers in semifinals

(From 1C)

Hallettsville has won 17-straight games, seven by shutouts. In the Brahmas last five games, they have surrendered only two runs.

Graham, 26-2-1, also is hot, having won their last 18 contests to earn a 3A semifinal berth against Queen City, making its second-straight tournament appearance.

The 22-4 Bulldogs, last year's 3A runners-up to Falfurrias, have won 10 games in a row and 15 of 16.

One Class 2A semi pits two teams who were one win away from the last year's finals. China Spring, 25-2-2, and 23-8 Elkhart both lost in 1991 semifinals in Austin.

The winner will square off against the Holliday versus Shiner victor. Holliday, making its second trip in three years, is 20-3 and riding a 12-game win streak, while the Comanches reached the semifinals for the first time since 1981 at 19-8.

The A semifinal between defending champion Valley Mills and Detroit pits two teams with many similar traits: both are nicknamed the Eagles and each is led in hitting by players who double as star pitchers.

Detroit, 14-7, making its first tournament appearance, is paced by shortstop Michael Barley's .528 average. The senior also has won five games, which is tied for the team's best.

Valley Mills, 18-2, also has received five victories from its shortstop, Donnie Sadler. The sophomore is hitting .470 average, second to catcher Michael Sexton's .536.

Tournament rookies Baird, 14-3, and Flatonia, 20-6, meet in the other A semifinal.

NBA: 'Blazers 9-1 in home playoff games

(From 1C)

1:06, giving Portland a 91-85 lead with 1:16 remaining.

Robinson came off a poor performance in Game 3 to score 17 points and Porter had 14. Scottie Pippen finished with 17 for the Bulls, but he and Jordan had no other teammates in double figures.

Kersey had the biggest turnaround, however. He had averaged just 10 points a game in the first three of the Finals, on 40.6 percent shooting, and a flagrant foul by him on Chicago's Scott Williams midway through the final quarter looked like it might bury the Blazers. But the Bulls could not capitalize fully and the Blazers would not fold.

The Blazers fell behind 10-0 in the first 3:08 of the game and spent the entire first half trying to catch up, twice pulling within one before Chicago took a 48-45 halftime edge.

Portland started the second half almost as poorly.

Cowboys sign fifth-round pick

Associated Press

DALLAS — Safety Gregg Briggs, the first of the Dallas Cowboys' two 1992 fifth-round draft choices, was signed Wednesday along with free agent guard Todd Jones.

Briggs of Texas Southern made 42 tackles and intercepted one pass in his only season at the school. He had transferred from Arkansas-Little Rock in 1991.

Briggs' signing gives the Cowboys six of its 15 draft choices under contract.

The 6-2 and 295-pound Jones of Henderson State, played this spring for Orlando of the World League. He played on the team's offensive line, which held opponents to 10 sacks this season.

McGriff ignites Padres' attack

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Fred McGriff homered for the second-straight game and hit an RBI double as the San Diego Padres beat Houston 5-1 on Wednesday, completing a three-game sweep and sending the Astros to their fifth-straight loss.

NL

Craig Lefferts (7-4) allowed six hits in eight innings but failed for the second-straight game to pitch his first career complete game. The converted reliever also went eight innings Friday in a 3-2 loss to the Atlanta Braves.

Larry Andersen, who hadn't pitched since he was hit on the forearm by a line drive on April 27, worked the ninth.

Braves 2, Dodgers 1

LOS ANGELES — Steve Avery allowed five hits over eight innings and the Atlanta Braves beat the Dodgers for their 10th victory in 12 games.

The Braves went ahead for good in the sixth when David Justice snapped a 1-1 tie with a sacrifice fly that scored Otis Nixon.

Avery (4-5) struck out six and walked three in raising his lifetime record against the Dodgers to 6-1.

Giants 6, Reds 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Bud Black pitched three-hit ball for eight-plus innings and Will Clark and Robby Thompson provided home run support for San Francisco.

Black (3-1) took a two-hit shutout into the ninth, but a single, a walk and a fielding error cost him the shutout and brought Jeff Brantley on to preserve the left-hander's first career victory in four decisions against the Reds.

Pirates 2, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA — The Pittsburgh Pirates used two walks, a single and an error on Philadelphia's Len Dykstra to score an unearned run in the 12th inning.

Bob Patterson (3-0) pitched two-thirds of an inning. All of Patterson's victories are over the Phillies.

Cubs 4, St. Louis 2

ST. LOUIS — Chicago's Greg Maddux allowed three hits, Sammy Sosa had two home runs and slumping St. Louis played terrible defense.

Maddux (6-6) held the Cardinals hitless through five innings before Ray Lankford doubled to right with one out in the sixth.

Expos 8, Mets 2

MONTREAL — The Mets made six errors to tie a club record, and Mark Gardner beat them for the first time in nine starts.

Gardner (4-5) allowed two hits, struck out four and walked three in five innings to raise his record against the Mets to 1-4.

The game marked the fourth time the Mets have made six errors, the last April 15, 1980 against the Expos.

McGwire pounds homer No. 200

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Mark McGwire hit his major league-leading 22nd homer and became the fifth-fastest player to reach 200 career homers, lifting the Oakland Athletics to a 5-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Wednesday.

AL

McGwire, whose homer came in his 2,852nd career at-bat, got to 200 faster than everyone except Ralph Kiner, Babe Ruth, Harmon Killebrew and Eddie Mathews. Kiner, the all-time fastest, did it in his 2,537th at-bat.

Harold Baines also homered in support of Ron Darling (6-3), who limited Milwaukee to seven hits in seven innings to win for the fifth time in his last six decisions.

Rangers 5, Mariners 3

ARLINGTON — Juan Gonzalez homered for the fifth time in his last four games and Dickie Thon added a two-run homer to key a five-run third.

It was the sixth victory in seven tries this season for Texas over Seattle.

Jose Guzman (6-3) scattered six hits and walked one in seven innings in winning his fourth straight decision. Jeff Russell finished for his 16th save.

Orioles 3, Red Sox 1

BALTIMORE — Rick Sutcliffe allowed one run in seven innings and Mike Devereaux drove in two runs to lead streaking Baltimore past Boston.

Sutcliffe (9-4) allowed six hits in winning a fourth straight start for the first time since 1989. His nine victories are tied for the American League lead.

Blue Jays 10, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Joe Carter homered, tripled, doubled and drove in four runs and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the New York Yankees 10-3 Wednesday night to complete an impressive three-game sweep.

The Blue Jays outscored New York 28-7 in the series and rapped 15 hits in the finale, including two homers, three triples and four doubles.

Indians 4, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Glenallen Hill's second home run of the game and fourth in two days gave the Cleveland Indians an 11-inning victory over Detroit.

Hill and Brook Jacoby led off the 11th with successive homers off Mike Munoz (0-1).

Royals 7, Twins 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Brian McRae had three hits and drove in three runs, leading Kansas City past Minnesota.

McRae has hit in 11 of his last 14 games and is batting .352 in the stretch.

White Sox 3, Angels 2

CHICAGO — Shawn Abner's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 12th inning scored George Bell on a close play, lifting Chicago over California.

Diablos eliminate Angels

Staff report

EL PASO — Craig Faulkner's Texas League single in the bottom of the ninth inning sent the Midland Angels to their third consecutive loss and out of the Texas League West's first half race, 3-2, to the El Paso Diablos here Wednesday night.

With one out in the ninth and the score knotted at 2-2, Faulkner hit a bloop single to centerfield that fell just in front of the diving Jim Edmonds, who tried to make a game saving catch.

Vince Castaldo, who led off the inning with a single, scored all the way from first base when the ball got past Edmonds.

The loss eliminated Midland from any hopes of winning the first half title in the Texas League West. The Angels fell 9½ games off the pace of the league leading Diablos with nine games left in the first half race. Midland came into this series trailing El Paso by 6½ games with 12 to play.

Midland has three games remaining here with El Paso and six games, beginning Sunday in Midland, with San Antonio to finish the first half.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your ability to size up people and situations stands you in good stead now. Save money for investment purposes. An exciting career opportunity will arise next December. A move to another city or state is possible early in 1993. Have more faith in your mate or business partner. A positive attitude will bring new financial gains next March. Focus your energies on building a child's confidence.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Quarterback Joe Montana, auto racer Jackie Stewart, actor Gene Wilder, actress Adrienne Barbeau.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An abrupt change at work could cause some anxious moments. An older person comes to your rescue. Remember to reward this person's thoughtfulness in tangible ways.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be more receptive to suggestions from an older person who has your best interests at heart. The financial picture shows continued improvement. A candid chat with your mate brings new peace of mind.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You should be able to achieve great things in the work arena now. Team resources can and should be tapped. Trips bring positive results. Make an important decision before day's end.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): This should be a high-profile day for you. You are able to talk your way to a rewarding new collaboration. Beneficial changes will follow. Mail a long-overdue letter or package.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Financial matters can go haywire now — think about what you are doing. You thrive on conversation and travel. Do not be a dead weight. Call a truce in a relationship; compromise.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Double-check important details and decisions. A give-and-take attitude will help you move mountains. Sweet talk can enhance a romantic relationship, too, if you are sincere.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pay your debts and you will gain a key advantage. Be open to newcomers and their suggestions. Wave the white flag of surrender and call a truce with your romantic partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your intuition serves you well. A domestic squabble can be resolved if you make the first move. Strive to achieve new understanding with an older person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seek experts' advice on investments. You may need to increase your insurance coverage if your family has grown. A kind word will work wonders with a sensitive person.

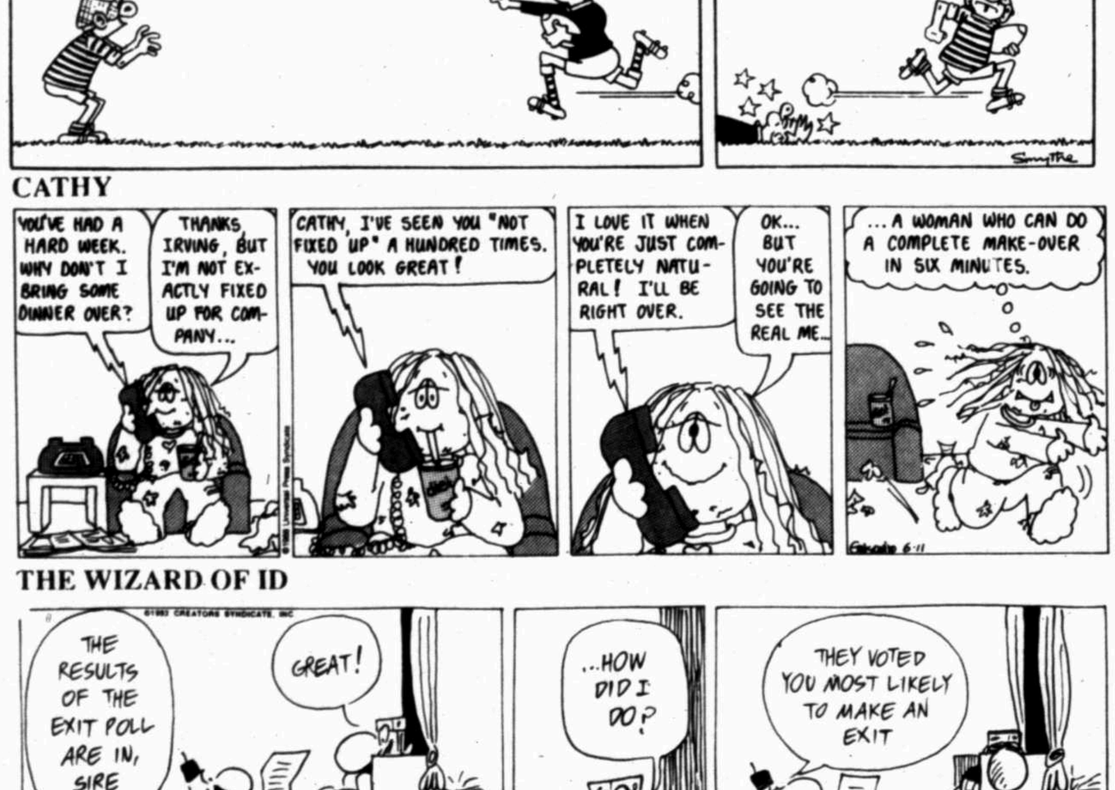

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The barriers could come tumbling down where an employment or financial situation is concerned. Hold firmly to familiar ground and methods. Trying to mix business with pleasure would be a mistake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Full steam ahead! You are able to talk your way into a wonderful financial deal. Avoid answering someone who asks too many personal questions. Rocking the love boat is risky now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A promising career or financial enterprise would benefit from your efforts. Showcase your special talents. There will be plenty to discuss moneywise.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are courageous in every way. Even as youngsters, they are unafraid to make decisions and deal with the consequences. Intellectual and practical, these Geminis tend to distrust emotional displays. Encourage them to open up to their loved ones. They make excellent lawyers or business executives, with an ability to be somewhat single-minded in pursuit of their goals.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

Hold-up plays are a fascinating field that has not been explored deeply enough. We are indebted to Gerry Fox of Napa, Calif., for this hand.

North-South reach a normal three-no-trump contract after a routine auction. When North's two club major-suit inquiry failed to unearth a fit in partner's hand, three no trump was the automatic rebid.

West leads the queen of clubs. Should you hold up once, twice or not at all? If you do hold up, do you do so on the first tricks or later in the play?

Yes, you should hold up. Not just once, but twice. And on the first two tricks! That guarantees the contract as long as the danger hand, in this case West, has no more than one of the two aces you have to force out to come to nine tricks.

To see why the double hold-up is necessary, let's suppose you refuse the first club, win the second and go after your better major, hearts. East can win the first heart and return a club, and now a second hold-up will not help—West overtakes and removes your last club stopper, and the defenders will come to three clubs and two aces.

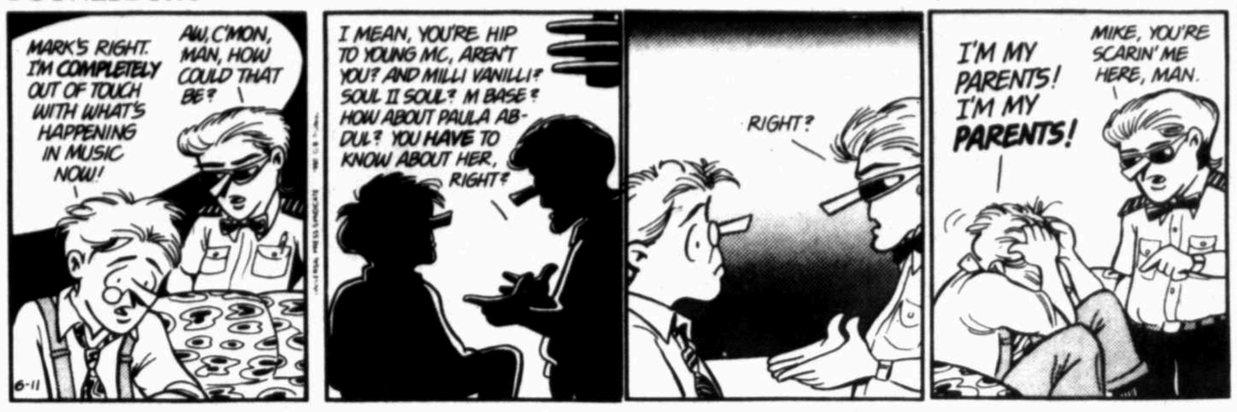

But notice what happens if you hold off on the first two club leads and win the third. If you force out the ace of hearts, East has no club to return and you're safe; if you choose instead to attack spades, West can win the ace and remove your last club stopper, but then has no entry to cash the setting trick.

Danish royal couple celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Queen Margrethe II on Wednesday celebrated her 25th wedding anniversary, after telling Prince Henrik she would marry him all over again.

"If I should again stand in the church, knowing all that those 25 years would bring, I would give you my 'yes' again," Margrethe said at a candelit banquet Tuesday.

The French-born Henrik replied, "I'm sure that the next part of the cruise with you will give me as much happiness as the previous."

Margrethe and Henrik appeared Wednesday morning in dressing gowns at a window of their summer home in Fredensborg, north of Copenhagen. Sons Frederik, the crown prince, and Prince Joachim were among singers outside serenading them with tributes to the institution of marriage.

Later, thousands of flag-waving Danes cheered the royal couple and tossed flower petals at them as they rode through the capital in an open carriage. Horsemen escorted them to a welcome at city hall from lute players dressed as Vikings.

Britain's Prince Charles attended the banquet but left for home early Wednesday. His wife, Princess Diana, had remained in London. That troubled royal pair is the subject of speculation about the future of the 10-year marriage.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Sandy Smith of Ottumwa, Iowa, is a devout fan of country singer Ricky Van Shelton. But the jumping and gyrating Billy Ray Cyrus met her approval, too, though it took some doing.

"This is country music?" Smith asked rhetorically Tuesday at the International Country Music Fan Fair after she first set eyes on the 30-year-old Cyrus, the current sensation from Kentucky with his hit record "Achy Breaky Heart."

Smith was among more than 24,000 visitors to the Fan Fair this week here for the shows, the picture-taking, the autograph collecting and seeing stars.

Van Shelton, Ricky Skaggs, Johnny Cash, Clint Black and Winona Judd all have booths. So does Travis Tritt, who displays a 20-foot-by-8-foot guitar that actually plays.

Tritt was voted "star of tomorrow" this week by country music fans. His hit records include "Here's a Quarter (Call Someone Who Cares)," "Anymore" and the current "Nothing Short of Dying."

The weeklong festival, which ends Sunday, allows fans and stars to mingle, in the friendly style of down home country music.

DETROIT — Mayor Coleman Young was in the hospital Wednesday getting tests, his second overnight hospital stay in six months, though this time it was planned, a spokesman said.

Young

Young, 74, entered Sinai Hospital's cardiac care unit Tuesday as part of a routine physical examination and was expected to be out Thursday or early Friday, mayoral spokesman Bob Berg said.

"No one likes to be in the hospital," Berg said. "But you do what the doctor tells you to."

Young, mayor since 1973 and Detroit's longest-running chief executive, was hospitalized last December for heavy breathing and an irregular heartbeat. He was ordered to exercise more and eat less.

He has long suffered emphysema, though he gave up smoking in 1980.

Berg said Young has been feeling good lately.

Young's term expires next year. He hasn't said whether he would seek reelection.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Garth Brooks is anxious to get his $400,000 home remodeling project finished before his wife delivers their first baby.

The country star and his wife, Sandy, have been living in a mobile home during construction. The baby is due next month.

"We are battling the arrival of the baby," contractor Fred Stephenson said.

To speed things along, Brooks held off on plans to add a $420,000 roping arena and a building with racquetball and basketball courts until the 7,000-square-foot house is finished, the Nashville Banner reported Tuesday.

Brooks' "No Fences" album has sold 5 million copies and his "Ropin' the Wind" was No. 1 on the country and pop charts.

MINNEAPOLIS — Businessman Harvey Mackay, who made a new career writing timely best-sellers on how to succeed at work, said Wednesday he will get more than a million dollars for a book on how to get and keep a job.

Mackay, 59, said his third advice book, tentatively titled, "Shark Proof: Get the Job You Want, Keep the Job You Love, in Today's Frenzied Job Market" will be published by HarperCollins next January.

Mackay's two earlier books, "Swim With the Sharks Without Being Eaten Alive" and "Beware the Naked Man Who Offers You His Shirt," have sold more 7 million copies worldwide.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell early Wednesday but rebounded to end higher despite petroleum industry statistics showing supplies of crude and refined fuels increased last week.

Market strategists said they had little explanation for the contrarian behavior. But some said the increase reflected purchases by traders who needed to repay borrowed oil, which created what's known as a short-covering rally.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the price of benchmark West Texas Intermediate for July delivery rose 19 cents a barrel to $22.51.

Lower-grade sour crude for July delivery rose 19 cents a barrel to $15.47.

Natural gas, which often behaves differently than other energy products, settled at $1.619 per 1,000 cubic feet on the New York Mercantile Exchange, down 1.5 cents from Tuesday.

TI contract

DALLAS — Texas Instruments has won a nearly $12.6 million military contract for containers to store and ship anti-radiation missiles.

U.S. Rep. Sam Johnson announced Wednesday that TI will make containers for the High Speed Anti-Radiation Missiles.

Work on the 2,500 containers, which will be used by the Army and Navy, will be done at TI's Lewisville facility. The job should be completed by August 1994.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly higher Wednesday in techically driven trading.

The dollar rose at the expense of the German mark, which came under profit taking after a week of steady gains. The mark has drawn repeated support from Denmark's rejection of the Maastricht treaty for European political and economic union.

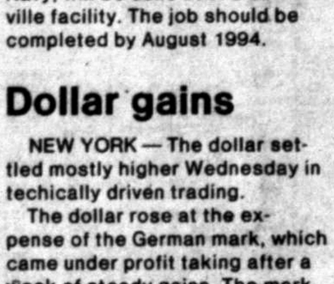

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 127.42 yen, up 0.19 yen from Tuesday's close.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.8335 from $1.8325 late Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's rates included: 1.5925 German marks, up from 1.5915; 1.4520 Swiss francs, down from 1.4550; 5.3590 French francs, up from 5.3550; 1,204.25 Italian lire, up from 1,204.00, and 1.1928 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1924.

NEW YORK — The stock market suffered another broad setback Wednesday, faced with persistent selling after taking its sharpest drop in two months the day before.

American moves set up 'bloody fight'

■ Airline's chairman is at center of industry's storm, threatening three other carriers in backruptcy court.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — When American Airlines chairman Robert L. Crandall overhauled the pricing system at the nation's largest airline two months ago, executives of rival carriers tuned in to a satellite feed to hear his announcement.

Almost immediately, the other airlines matched Crandall's new, simplified fare system to avoid losing passengers to American. But some questioned his move — which led to a massive fare war that ended last week — and whether Crandall was trying to make American profitable or become the industry's pricing dictator.

The answers may come out in federal court, where at Continental Airlines has accused American of antitrust violations. American itself has gone to court, charging Continental and rivals Northwest and America West with hindering its business by filing or threatening to file lawsuits over the fares.

American has asked a federal judge to rule that its pricing practices are legal and proper.

Crandall is viewed by some airline analysts as a brilliant industry leader who might whip some sense into the rarely sober world of ticket pricing. George James, chairman of Airline Economics Inc., a Washington-based avation consulting firm, said American's new fare structure is just what the industry needs.

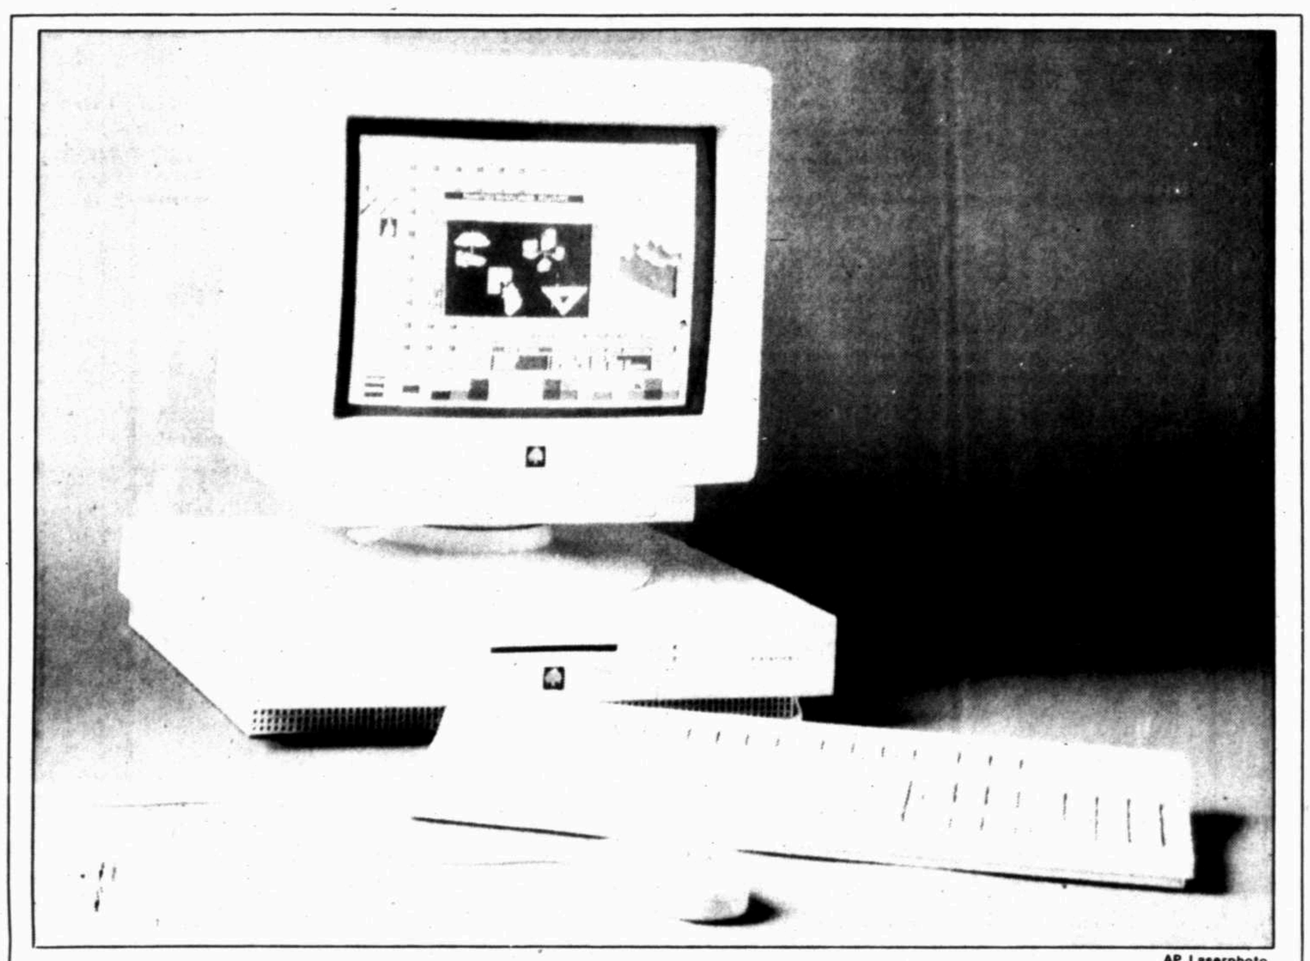

But Crandall's detractors say he is a sharp-tongued strongman who once was caught trying to fix prices and will stop at nothing to impose his will on the airlines.

The American chairman disputes charges that he is engaged in predatory pricing. He says American is being unfairly attacked by failing airlines who can't handle competition.

"Everybody's been waving their arms and flapping and shouting about predatory pricing," Crandall said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

However the issue is resolved, Crandall's bold changes in the way airlines sell their tickets set the stage for yet another bloody fight in a crippled industry that has lost about $6 billion and three carriers — Pan Am, Eastern and Midway — over the past two years.

The storm threatens three other carriers operating in bankruptcy court — Continental, Trans World Airlines and America West, as well as non-bankrupt foes Northwest and USAir.

Bank profits soar to new record high

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bank profits soared to a new record in the first three months of this year, but regulators said Wednesday much of the improvement was driven by a decline in interest rates that probably won't last.

The nation's 11,806 commercial banks earned $7.6 billion, up 36 percent from the same period last year, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said. That topped the old quarterly record of $7.3 billion set in the first quarter of 1989.

Ninety-three percent of banks were profitable, compared with 89 percent in the first quarter of 1991, and 73 percent reported earnings gains.

"The industry clearly is in better shape than it was a year ago," FDIC Chairman William Taylor told the Senate Banking Committee.

But, he, Federal Reserve Board member John P. LaWare and Acting Comptroller of the Currency Stephen R. Steinbrink warned that many banks continue to be troubled by a high level of sour commercial real estate loans.

Recovery in that sector will be slow, particularly in the Northeast and Southern California, they said.

Regionally, 44 states recorded improved earnings. However, in California, where real estate problems hit later than in other parts of the country, profits slipped to $271 million from $750 million a year ago, a decline attributed to depressed results at five big banks

Survey rates housing affordability

WASHINGTON (AP) — Southerners saw the value of their homes grow fastest in the first quarter of 1992, a survey said Wednesday. But the South — along with the Midwest — still had the most affordable housing.

The Northeast and the West, particularly California, continued to be the least affordable regions, according to the survey by the National Association of Home Builders.

Nevertheless, Manchester, N.H., in the costly Northeast was the most affordable metropolitan area in the United States from January through March. It had a rating of 90.6 percent on the association's Housing Opportunity Index.

The most affordable areas in other regions were Saginaw-Bay City, Mich., in the Midwest, 89.3 percent; Brazoria, Texas, in the South, 87.9 percent, and Greeley, Colo., in the West, 80.9 percent.

The index represents the percentage of homes sold in the quarter that could have been purchased at prevailing interest rates by a family earning the area's median income.

San Francisco, in the West, remained the least affordable area with a 9.3 percent rating. In other regions, the least affordable markets were the Aurora-Elgin suburbs of Chicago in the Midwest, 60.9 percent; the Wilmington, Del., metropolitan area in the South, 55.1 percent, and New York in the Northeast, 14.5 percent.

The survey, including 325,519 sales of new and previously owned houses in 169 markets, showed prices rising fastest in the South.

Thirteen of 51 metropolitan areas there, seven of them in Florida, posted price hikes of more than 10 percent over the same quarter of 1991.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

DRPs bypass brokers, their commissions

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am interested in buying shares of stock in three particular companies. How can I go about it? Can I write to each company, asking for a prospectus? I don't have a broker, nor do I particularly want one.

Doyle

A: Although the vast majority of all individual stock purchases are handled by brokers, there are methods for cutting out brokers and their commissions.

The most popular way is through the dividend reinvestment plans (DRPs) offered by approximately 1,000 American corporations. As the words indicate, a DRP is an arrangement in which you do not receive checks for dividends on stock you own. Instead, that money is used to purchase additional full and fractional shares.

Most DRPs allow plan participants to make occasional – but not mandatory – additional payments to buy still more shares. Those "optional additional investment" features vary greatly, depending on the provisions of each DRP. Typically, a participant can send in anywhere from $10 to $5,000.

It stands to reason that an investor is required to be a company stockholder in order to take part in the company's DRP. In most cases, you must make your first purchase through a broker. After that, you deal directly with the company or its DRP agent, usually a bank.

However, a relatively small number of companies permit all DRP transactions – including the first one – to be done directly. That can reduce or eliminate costs, because the fees on most DRPs are much lower than brokerage commissions.

Evergreen Enterprises, P.O. Box 763, Laurel, MD 20725, which publishes a $28.95 directory listing extensive details on DRPs, lists nine such companies: Central Vermont Public Service, Exxon, W.R. Grace, Johnson Controls, Kroger, PMC Capital, Procter & Gamble, Questor and Texaco.

Evergreen also notes that some public utilities allow customers to purchase company stock when paying monthly bills. And a handful of banks provide for purchase of their stocks through checking account deductions.

Write to the shareholder relations departments at the headquarters of the three companies in which you are interested and ask if they have DRPs. If they do, you will receive a prospectus from each company. Read the prospectus carefully before deciding if you want to become a DRP participant.

Q: Other than going through a broker or being in a dividend reinvestment plan, is there any other way to buy stock?

A: It's not easy, but it can be done. Stocks are capital assets. They can be bought and sold pretty much the same as anything else. The trick is getting buyer and seller together. That's normally done by brokers in organized markets.

Let's say you want to buy 100 shares of XYZ Corp. stock and you know someone who wants to sell 100 XYZ shares. Assuming you agree on a price, you two can make a deal.

The seller must fill out the assignment form on the back of the stock certificate. His signature there must be "guaranteed," usually by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company.

The certificate goes to the stock's transfer agent, which destroys it and issues a new certificate to you while entering your name on the books as the owner of 100 shares.

Q: I don't understand the headings on newspaper stock tables. What do "PE," "Sales," "Hi-Lo," "Close," and "Chg" mean?

A: OK, back to basics. PE means price-earnings ratio, the relationship between a stock's price and its earnings per share. Sales tells you the number of shares, in hundreds, traded that day. Hi is the day's highest price; Lo the day's lowest price; Close the last price of the day. Chg is the difference between that day's closing price and the closing price on the previous trading day.

Topping off with a vest is fall's treat

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The vest, a familiar piece of men's clothing, has started showing up in force in the women's departments of stores.

A vest makes sense because it can replace a summer jacket, finishing off an outfit. It is also a good way to experiment with the coming fall fashion trend of dressing like a man.

Bergdorf Goodman's new fifth floor has a selection of one-button vests, overscaled to the boxy proportions of a blazer. Made of tie-print rep silks, with plain black silk backs, they are equipped with fabric tapes to tighten or loosen the shape.

The vest looks best, however, hanging square and straight. (The other day the Bergdorf buyer had one on over a white T-shirt, a trim black leather belt, black twill riding pants and ballet flats. She looked great.) The Bergdorf versions all cost around $100.

Other stores have vests of an overtly feminine variety. Replete with lace patches and ribbons or decorated with dangly bits of costumy gewgaws and such, these generally cost under $250 apiece, though many are now on sale.

For women who want to try the vest idea but don't want either the masculine adaptations or those with frank frivolity, it would be worth the wait for Tapemeasure's simple white crocheted version. It will cost around $42 and should be at Bloomingdale's in two weeks.

AT WIT'S END

Childhood words of wisdom aren't aging well

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

Now that my kids are adults, I seem to have lost some of the mystique I had when I raised them. They were magic times when everything I told them was written in stone. If I knew then what I know now, I would never have talked so much. How was I to know that they had memories like elephants and would one day challenge me on everything I ever said?

"Remember when you told us not to play with matches or we'd wet the bed?" asked my daughter.

"Of course I remember," I said.

"I was 25 years old before I'd light the stove to make dinner," she said. "Why did you tell us that?"

"The worst thing she ever told us," offered a son, "is that if we swallowed our gum, our insides would stick together. For years, I had this picture of a giant bubble gum ball sticking to my rib cage."

"The one I remember is when you told me if I put my hand outside the car window, it would blow off. If I had just seen a hand fly by on the highway, I'd have believed it."

"It could happen," I said stubbornly.

"Mom! Where did you get those stories? Like, 'When you grow up you'll thank me for being so strict.' Right. Like we're going to throw ourselves at your feet and say, Thank you! Thank you for letting me sit on a hard chair right through puberty because you found a set of dirty dishes under my bed. What? Are you crazy?"

"I'll never know how you kept a straight face when you told us our eyes would freeze if we crossed them. I always wondered why there were no telethons for frozen eyes."

"Parents are weird," observed our son. "You used to threaten us to go to sleep by telling us a bat was going to fly in the window and suck the air out of us. You expected us to sleep after that!"

"You weren't easy children to raise," I said numbly.

I never thought I'd lose my credibility. All those years I thought they were being molded by my wisdom.

"Listen to this," said our daughter. "She never allowed me to sew anything on Sundays. She said anything I stitched on Sunday, I'd have to take out with my nose on Monday. Mom! You're too much. I'm going to wash my hair."

"If you go to bed with wet hair you'll die of pneumonia," I said mechanically.

"There you go again. Colds are transmitted by a virus. I've never seen anyone die from washing her hair."

"You're young yet," I snapped.

DEAR ABBY

History teaches hard lesson on easy money

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Could you please answer this question we are baffled over at work:

Why doesn't the U.S. Mint simply print enough money to just pay off our government's debts, feed the hungry and house the homeless? We know there must be a logical answer. We just don't know what it is. — BAFFLED

Van Buren

DEAR BAFFLED: According to an official at the U.S. Treasury Department in Washington, D.C., who wishes to remain anonymous: "The amount of money printed has to be related to the economic activity of the country. If the government were to print enough money to pay all the nation's bills without regard to the goods and services being produced by the country, it could cause rampant inflation."

The amount of currency printed at the U.S. Mint is directed by the Federal Reserve System, the central bank of the United States.

The gold bars stored at Fort Knox, Ky., and the gold and silver stored in a depository at West Point, N.Y., are "symbolically important," according to my source at the Treasury Department, but the nation's output is more important to economic stability.

Germany in the 1920s is a textbook example of printing money "willy-nilly," which resulted in a crippling currency debacle, acute economic distress and, ultimately, the rise of Adolf Hitler.

DEAR ABBY: A new friend of mine talks very loud. When I talk to her on the telephone, I have to hold the receiver at least six inches from my ear.

I don't think she's hard of hearing because her 10-year-old daughter talks just as loud as her mother. They constantly yell at each other. Since I don't know this woman very well, I don't know how to tell her to tone down her voice a little. I don't want to offend her or hurt her feelings. What should I do? — FRIENDLY NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: When you know her better, it would be a kindness to tell her that she is speaking exceptionally loud, and even suggest that she have her hearing tested. (Usually, people who talk loud are hard of hearing.)

Your new friend's daughter talks "just as loud" because children often imitate their parents. The child could also have a hearing loss.

DEAR ABBY: The letter you received from "Doc in Faribault, Minn.," about the college-graduate cashier who couldn't make change for a $5 bill, brought to mind a similar experience I had a few months ago while shopping for shoes.

I was standing in line with my purchase, ready to pay, when something went wrong with the cashier's computer. She didn't know what to do, so she tried to call her manager for instructions, but his line was busy. Another clerk told her to use the hand calculator, but she didn't know how to figure the tax, so I told her to multiply .0825 by the purchase price, and add that to the total.

She was very grateful, but I wonder how long the line would have been had I not been there. It makes one wonder what the schoolteachers are teaching nowadays. And how do the students graduate when they learn so little? — AMAZED IN ESCONDIDO, CALIF.
