Mondale: 'We can win this'

Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale insisted "we can win this thing" as he rallied voters in Democratic bedrock states across the Northeast on Friday, while President Reagan talked about crime-fighting and tried to help GOP congresional candidates latch onto his coattails.

At a rally marred by light heckling, meanwhile, Vice President George Bush said in Parsippany, N.J., that the United States is No. 1 and "there's a lot of idiots that don't understand that."

And Geraldine Ferraro, the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, made her most pointed appeal for women's votes, telling supporters in Los Angeles, "In this contest, we're doing more than changing administrations. We're choosing between justice and injustice for American women."

The four candidates hopscotched across the country Friday as they headed into the hectic final weekend of a campaign that culminates Tuesday when 95 million or more Americans are expected to go to the polls.

Meanwhile, a National Public Radio-Lou Harris survey released Friday indicated that Reagan's lead had narrowed from 19 to 16 points — 57-41 — in the past week. The poll's margin of error was 2.5 points.

Mondale, at a morning rally in Lorain, Ohio, declared, "We can win this thing."

He encouraged unemployed steelworkers and others to exact retribution from Reagan and the Republicans in the voting booth, saying, "They've done it to you. Now you do it to them."

In Boston, before tens of thousands of people gathered on the slopes of Boston Common, Mondale proclaimed himself "a people's Democrat, a full employment Democrat in the people's tradition of Roosevelt, Truman, Kennedy and Humphrey" and derided Reagan as a leader who "doesn't care, doesn't listen and doesn't help."

The crowd appeared twice or three times the size of the throng that greeted Reagan in Boston on Thursday.

The president, addressing thousands of supporters outside a courthouse in Cleveland, took credit for a reduction in crime and contended "a tiny handful of liberal Democrats" in the House had slowed passage of a crime control act.

That act, which eliminates parole for federal crime, stiffens drug penalties and shifts the burden of proof from the prosecution to the defense in insanity cases, was passed in October after a year of party wrangling.

"Our national crackdown on crime has produced the sharpest decrease ever in the history of crime statistics," the president declared. "But this has not been easy, especially with the strong obstacles we faced in the House of Representatives."

Most non-government experts say crime has dropped mostly for another reason — the aging of the outsized baby boom generation born after World War II past the turbulent teen-age and young adult years.

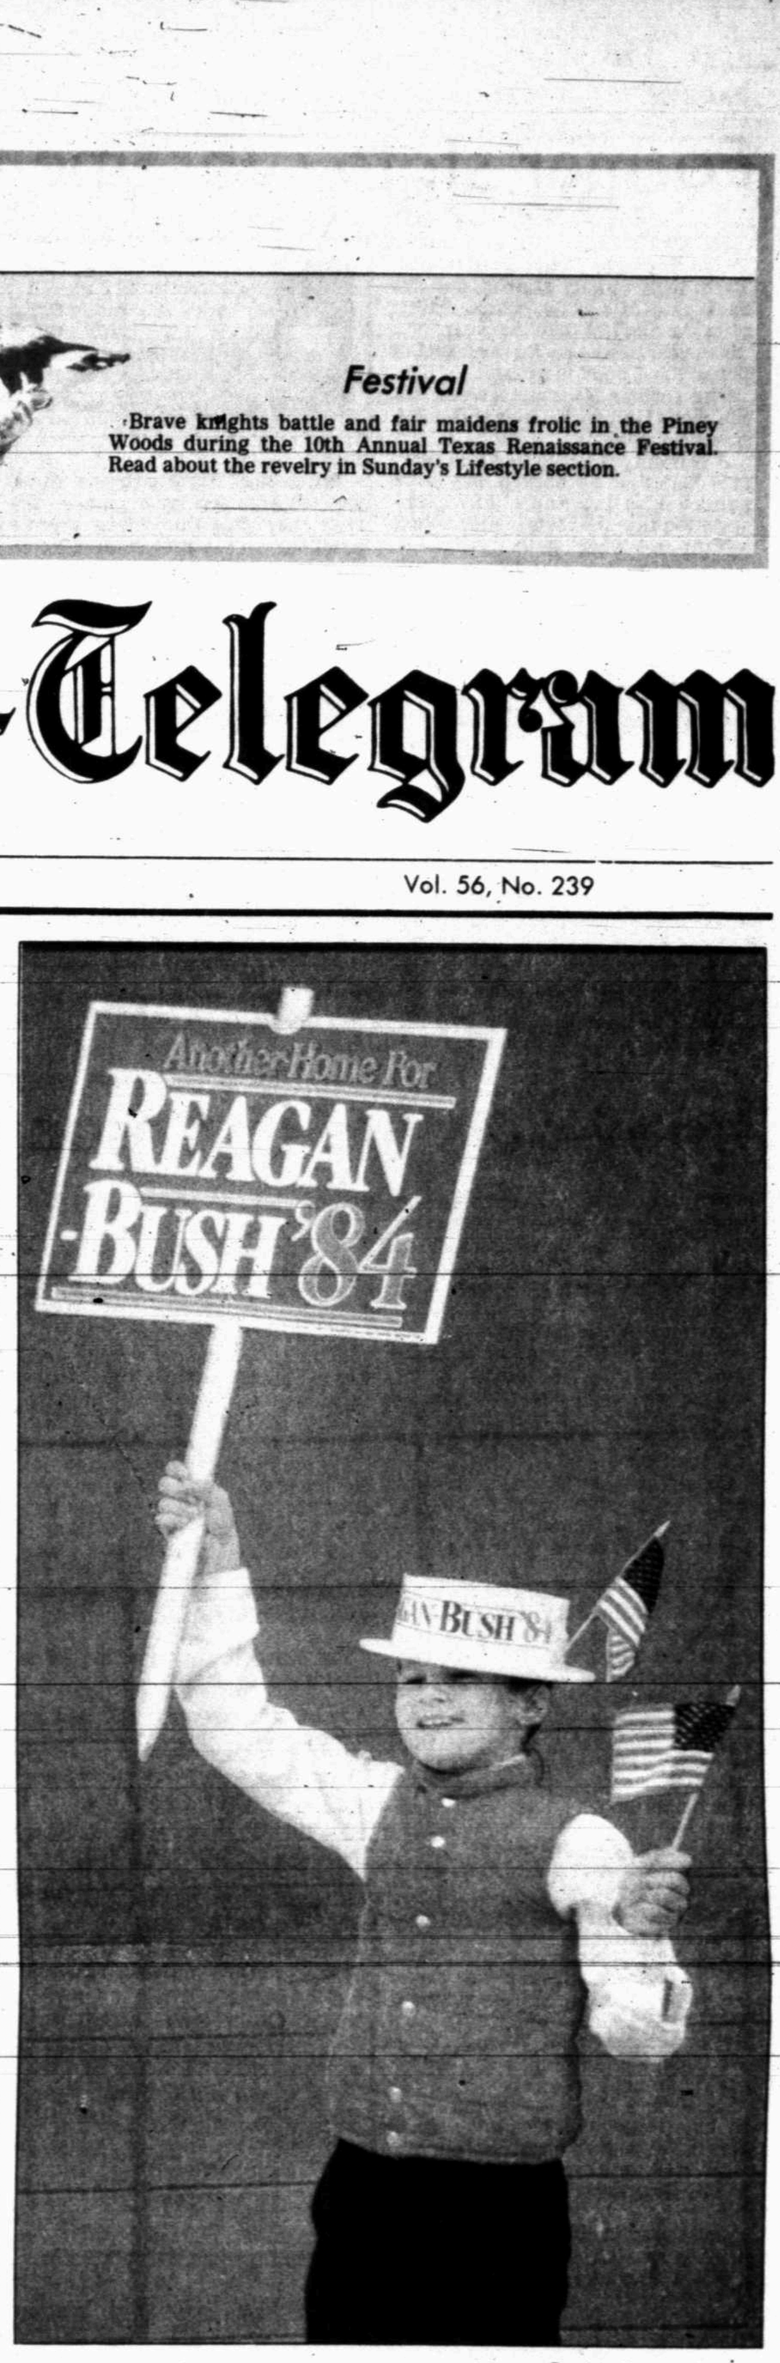

Reagan urged voters to make clear on Tuesday that "the people are in charge, not the Democratic leadership of the House of Representatives." Earlier, in blue-collar Saginaw, Mich., he appealed for four more years for his "second American revolution."

The president's itinerary also took him to Springfield, Ill., where he was tyring to help Sen. Charles Percy stand off a challenge from Democratic Rep. Paul Simon, and then on to Little Rock, Ark., where Republican Rep. Ed Bethune is trying to topple Democratic Sen. David Pryor.

Bush in Parsippany, N.J., voiced harsh remarks at a rally of cheering supporters who turned out to see the vice president campaign for two Republican candidates.

A handful of hecklers chanted "four more days" at Bush as he began his speech on a stage in a hotel ballroom.

Record number absentee votes cast

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Ronny Reed was the last in line Friday to cast an absentee vote in the 1984 Midland County Elections.

The 20-year-old stood patiently waiting his turn in his first presidential election. He'd driven 170 miles from college, arriving in Midland at 4:30 p.m.

The line wasn't any problem to him.

A record 11,240 absentee votes were counted. Since Oct. 17, 1,108 Midland County registered voters have come in to cast their votes at the Elections Administration Office.

"And at least that many called on the phone," Angie Lee of the elections office said with a laugh.

The elections clerks Friday were tangled in a massive line that twisted around their office, in between their desks and finally around the corner to the voting booths, which were petitioned off for absentee voting purposes.

According to Elections Administrator Janeice Builta, "there were no less than 100 in here" during peak times. Because of the cool morning, the line was allowed to snake around the office rather than the block, like they did earlier in the week, she said.

"They were just bodies," Pat Stovall said. "The ones that knew me had to pat me on the shoulder to get my attention."

"You have to say 'excuse me' and go to your computer; you have to say 'excuse me' and go to your desk," Ms. Lee said.

"I'm going home and check in the mirror and see if I've got all my arms and everything," Maxine Morris agreed, laughing.

It was a little different than the 1980 elections, when a total of 7,012 people voted absentee. Only 5,209 cast their ballots in person that year, Ms. Stovall said.

Since the May primaries, more than 11,000 Midland County residents registered to vote, Ms. Builta said. She attributed the high number to more county residents and 400 deputy volunteers out on the streets, in the malls, shops and offices, registering potential voters.

Also, postage-free forms for registering were used this year, making the process more convenient for many, she said.

But because state laws passed in 1975 created more paperwork anyway, Midland County had a little more than usual during the voter registration procedure. With so many opportunities to register, many did so not once, but twice — and three times.

"Two years is too long for someone to keep track of a voter's registration card," Ms. Builta said. "Every one (application) that came in here was scanned so we didn't have duplicates.

"On some you couldn't read the name, some didn't put their address or birthday or if they were born in a different country, where they got their citizenship," she said. "And we had to call every one of them."

Lindsey: Reagan won't be here to press button

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Author Hal Lindsey, Christian leader and spokesman in the Armageddon campaign issue, ends a three-day seminar today at 10:30 a.m. at Midland Christian Center, 2500 West Indiana.

Lindsey's views that this generation will witness a nuclear holocaust that will precede the return of Jesus Christ has made the end-of-the-world a first-ever presidential campaign issue, and the subject of reports in Newsweek, Time, newspapers and television networks.

It has become an issue because many believe President Reagan to be a born-again Christian and perhaps a supporter of Lindsey's Armageddon views.

"I can't vouch for the president's views on biblical prophecy," said Lindsey, who calls himself a New Testament prophet, "but I know he has read at least two of my books, including the 'Late, Great Planet Earth.'"

Lindsey said fears that Reagan might be predisposed to launch a nuclear war because of personal views on the end of the world were totally unfounded.

Hal Lindsey

"If President Reagan is a Christian, true believer, and I believe he is, he will not be here to press the button," said Lindsey. "He will have been raptured or caught up into heaven with the rest of the Christians before Armageddon."

Clements urges Republicans to vote

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Former Gov. Bill Clements spoke from experience when he appeared at a rally and news conference Friday at Chaparral Aviation to urge Republican voters to get out the vote.

"I don't know of anyone who can preach this better," said the Republican who lost re-election in 1982 by a narrow margin. "We've got to count our votes at the poll — not in the newspaper or television. Let's work harder and make sure we're not complacent."

Clements was on the last of a three-day flying "Victory Blitz" around the state to fire up the volunteers for one final push. Accompanying him were his wife, Rita; Eddie (I'm Mad Too) Chiles and his wife, Fran. A second victory tour in other cities was being led by retiring U.S. Sen. John Tower.

Greeted not only by campaign workers but also Midland Baptist Temple students waving flags and wearing hats bearing Reagan/Bush stickers, the Clements group pointed to the youths as one reason to re-elect President Reagan.

"These youngsters is what it's all about — do things for the best interest of those children and the long-term future," said Chiles. Four years ago his popularity grew throughout the state with his radio ads claiming he was mad about the way the country was being run and was supporting Reagan.

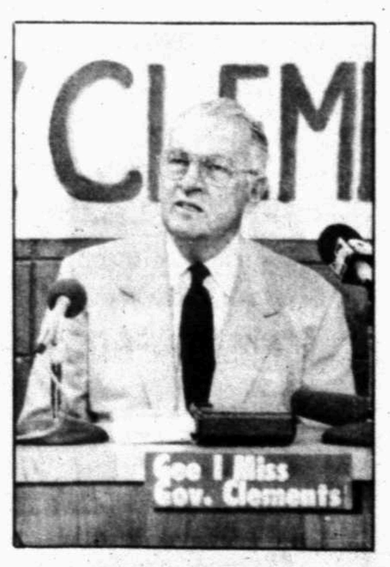

Owner of the Texas Rangers, Chiles compared election day to a baseball game. "It's how you play that ninth inning that counts," he said.

Clements remembered that 1982 election in which he was in the lead when he and Rita went to bed. "You don't know how surprised we were the next morning (after finding out about his loss). The only one more surprised was Mark White.

"If there's a message here it's: Once burnt, twice leery," Clements said.

Volunteers shouldn't pay attention to what the pollsters are saying as to who's in the lead, the group contended. Mrs. Clements said there were 1 million Reagan/Bush voters from 1980 who didn't vote in 1982. "We need to get them out this year. Do door-to-door work. Shove those people to the polls."

It wasn't just the Reagan/Bush ticket she was pushing, but also the Senate race pitting Republican Phil Gramm against Democrat Lloyd Doggett. She noted that when Tower sought re-election six years ago he barely squeaked out a victory.

Former state supreme court justice paroled

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough quietly slipped out the back gate of a state prison Friday after serving less than two years of a seven-year sentence for aggravated perjury and bond jumping.

The former Houston lawyer left the Walls Unit with a new suit and a check for $200.

A prison spokesman had told news reporters that Yarbrough was to be released about noon, but later admitted that the former justice had left through a back gate.

The State Board of Pardons and Paroles voted 3-0 on Aug. 30 to release Yarbrough, according to board spokesman Mike Roach in Austin.

STATE

Roach said Yarbrough was interviewed in prison by a parole commissioner, but that there was no hearing, nor any protests to his consideration for parole.

Yarbrough, 43, was elected to the state's highest civil court in 1976, but resigned in July 1977. He later was convicted of perjury and sentenced to five years in prison. When he failed to show up for his formal sentencing, he was charged and later convicted of bond jumping.

He was arrested last year on the Caribbean island of St. Vincent where he was attending medical school and was sentenced to seven years for bond jumping. The two sentences ran concurrently.

Yarbrough had actually had served one year, four months and 28 days when the parole was approved in August. With good time credits, his total time was three years and six months. Inmates become eligible for parole after serving one-third of their sentence, Roach said.

Yarbrough's perjury conviction came on charges that he lied to a grand jury by denying he told a business partner how to forge an automobile title.

At the time Yarbrough resigned from the Texas Supreme Court, he was facing impeachment proceedings in the Legislature.

Ex-nurse won't work in prison hospital

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Convicted baby killer and former nurse Genene Jones won't be assigned to do any medical work while she is in prison, a corrections official said Friday.

Phil Guthrie, assistant director of public information for the Texas Department of Corrections, said he had no idea how a letter from the department got out asking if Ms. Jones was qualified to work in a prison hospital dispensary.

Dr. William Thornton, chairman of the Bexar County Hospital District board, said Friday he received such a letter after Ms. Jones was convicted of killing a 15-month-old Kerrville baby.

Thornton said his initial reaction was "I don't believe this."

He said he turned the letter over to District Attorney Sam Millsap.

"I never heard anything from anybody after that," Millsap said.

Thornton speculated the letter was sent out as a matter of routine to determine how prisoners can be useful.

But Guthrie said he did not know how such a letter ever was sent.

"She won't be assigned to any medical detail," he said.

Ms. Jones was sentenced to 99 years for killing a Kerrville baby with an overdose of a muscle relaxant.

She was convicted in San Antonio last week of injecting four-week-old Rolando Santos with an overdose of a blood-thinner while she worked at Medical Center Hospital.

She was sentenced to 60 years for that crime.

The former nurse is serving her sentences at the Texas Department of Corrections female unit in Gatesville.

LaRouche's running mate would rather be farmer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Billy Davis, running as an Independent Democrat for vice president, says he doesn't really want the job — he'd rather be a farmer.

Davis, 46, was in San Antonio Friday to campaign for the Independent Democratic ticket, headed by Lyndon LaRouche Jr.

The Laurel, Miss., farmer said the Independent Democrats are part of the established Democratic Party, but they don't want Walter Mondale to win the presidency.

The ticket is on the ballot in 20 states and in Texas is listed as an independent party on the Nov. 6 ballot.

"I don't really want the job — I'd rather be a farmer," Davis said in a news conference at the San Antonio airport.

"But we want to be in a position to influence the administration," he said.

Davis refused to say if his purpose was to ensure Ronald Reagan's re-election. But he did say, "This country can't stand Water Mondale in the White House."

"Ronald Reagan is a moral individual who wants to do the right thing," Davis said. "Unfortunately, his information is wrong much of the time. On his own, his instincts are right but he is controlled by the palace guard."

The president, Davis said, suffers from the delusion that the nation's economy is in a recovery.

Man who dumped baby gets life in prison

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who said he dumped the body of his 2½-year-old daughter in a bayou because he didn't want to be blamed for her death has been sentenced to life in prison.

Larimore Cornelius, 28, of Houston, showed little emotion as State District Judge Thomas Rout announced the sentence Thursday.

"I'm just sorry this is the worst judgement I can pass," the judge told Cornelius.

Cornelius, 28, of Houston, was convicted of murder in the Aug. 30, 1983, death of Monett Yvonne Cornelius. He told jurors he put two car batteries on the child's body and threw it into the bayou fearing he would be blamed for the death.

Defense attorney Joe Cannon said the father didn't kill the child, but that he put her on the floor during a tantrum and she hit her head.

"This is a pitiful, sad man," Cannon said. "I doubt if this man will ever smile or be happy again in his life."

Cornelius said he "didn't murder that baby."

"I just sat the baby on the floor, and she throwed a tantrum and leaped back," he said.

The father said he put the child on a bed, and then he and his wife, Tressie, took their two other children to a nearby malt shop. The parents drank wine while deciding what to do.

Cornelius testified he became scared and wanted to hide the body so he would not be blamed.

When they returned home, he said, he attached two 12-volt car batteries to the child's body and put it in the trunk of his car. Then he put his wife and other children in the auto.

Cornelius said they stopped on a bridge in southeast Houston and he dropped the body into Buffalo Bayou. The family then fled to Louisiana, he said.

The body was found in 28 feet of water Sept. 15, 1983, after police received a tip from a relative of Cornelius.

Testimony indicated the the child had been beaten previously, and Harris County Children's Protective Services took the child from the family in 1981. The child was returned a few month later.

Assistant District Attorney Ira Jones said the medical examiner testified the child landed on her buttocks so hard that her spinal column lodged in her brain. A basal skull fracture was the cause of death, the examiner said, but he could not say when the child died.

Mrs. Cornelius was not charged in the girl's death.

Jones said the other children are living with an aunt.

Diablo Canyon licensed to operate at full power

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission granted a full-power operating license on Friday to the controversial Diablo Canyon plant, clearing the way for it to produce power 16 years after construction began.

"All the regulatory agencies have approved it, and the courts have upheld it. As far as we are concerned it is time to get on with it," said Dick Davin, a spokesman for Pacific Gas & Electric, the plant's operator.

The $5.1-billion plant on the California coast midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco has been delayed by construction problems, discovery in 1973 of a nearby offshore earthquake fault, and legal challenges by opponents, who vowed Friday to continue their court fight.

Over the years, thousands of protesters have been arrested in demonstrations outside the plant gates.

Cost of the plant multiplied nearly 12 time since PG&E estimated costs of $430 million for the two units when construction began in 1968.

The NRC permit for operation of Unit 1 was authorized Aug. 2, but its delivery was delayed Aug. 17 by the U.S Court of Appeals in Washington, responding to a petition filed by opponents. On Wednesday, the court lifted that stay, and PG&E engineers activated the nuclear power plant to bring it to 5 percent capacity test levels.

Officials of PG&E estimate a full program for start-up would take 75 to 100 days, and the plant could be producing electricity for commerical use by early 1985.

Barring further delays, the NRC decision will allow the plant to operate for the first time above 5 percent of capacity. The permit, which is dated from the 1968 construction start for the plant, is good until 2008.

"Obviously, the issuing of the permit is anti-climactic. They have let the plant go ahead without determining if it is safe," said Nancy Culver, a spokeswoman for the Mothers For Peace group, longtime opponents of the plant.

On Tuesday, Mothers for Peace plans to file two motions with the U.S. Court of Appeals, Ms. Culver said. The first will ask the court to accept a letter written by NRC Commissioner James K. Asselstine to Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass. Mothers for Peace wants the letter to become part of the court record.

In the letter, Asselstine accuses his four NRC counterparts of disregarding commission rules "solely for the objective of avoiding delay" in licensing. Asselstine was the sole dissent when the NRC voted to grant the full-power license on Aug. 2.

Mothers for Peace also will ask the court to secure transcripts of a closed NRC hearing in which the commission decided to deny the plant foes a new hearing on the possibility of an earthquake and an accident occurring at the plant simultaneously, Ms. Culver said.

NRC Chairman Nunzio J. Palladino said the fact that Asselstine lost the vote on licensing the plant "is not a valid reason for him to castigate the majority, impugn their motives..."

NRC spokesman Greg Cook said earlier that the first tests of the Diablo Canyon feed water pumps will be conducted at 8 percent power. Moved up to 15 percent, the reactor will produce electricity for the first time, Cook said.

Additional tests would be conducted at 30, 50, 75, 90 and then 100 percent power, he said. After running for 100 hours at full power, the reactor will be shut off and all systems checked, he said.

"Then we begin producing commercial electricity," he added.

Wounded burglar escapes when police not available to arrest him

WILTON MANORS, Fla. (AP) — A burglar wounded by his 79-year-old victim got away after two citizens hauled him to the police station but no officers were there to arrest him.

"This isn't like the old movies of the '30s when you used to see them get a call and all the police squad cars would go rolling out of the station," said Police Chief Bernard Scott. "It would cost the taxpayers $175,000 to hire officers to staff the station 24 hours a day."

Keith Falling, one of two men who took the bleeding suspect to the police station, called the incident "a comedy of errors."

"I think we did our job by bringing him in," Falling said. "It's just too bad there was no one there to take him."

Police say an officer arrived at the station a minute after getting the report.

On Wednesday, a man broke into the home of the elderly man, police said. The burglar ordered the victim to lie face down.

As the thief was ransacking the house, the elderly man crawled to a closet, pulled out a 12-gauge shotgun and blasted the intruder in the left shoulder. The culprit fled.

A few minutes later, Robert Abbey, a maintenance man at a nearby housing complex, said he was confronted by a man.

"He said, 'Please help me.' He told me he was shot by a couple of guys he tried to rip off in a drug deal," Abbey said.

The left side of the man's chest was drenched with blood, and he asked to be taken to a hospital or a police station, Abbey said.

But Abbey didn't have a car available, so he asked Falling to drive. Falling agreed and gave the man a towel to control his bleeding, he said.

In the meantime, Abbey and Falling noticed wads of money stuffed in the man's back pockets and decided to take him to the police station, they said.

According to Falling and Abbey, the bleeding man was outside the station for at least a minute after the two men alerted police aide Pat Steiger, who was inside. The aide refused to go outside the station, the men said.

"I said to her that this guy was shot and he was bleeding and he was starting to leave, and she kept asking me for my name and then his name and description," Abbey said. "She wouldn't come outside, even when I told her he was taking off."

"The first time she asked us to describe him, I said he's 10 feet away, come and describe him yourself," Falling said. "The second time she asked, I said he's 15 feet away. He was walking away slowly."

Woman, two daughters slain; Son missing

WAGSTAFF, Kan. (AP) — A woman and her two daughters were found slain at their rural home on Friday, and authorities were searching for a suspect who may have taken the woman's 8-year-old son hostage.

The woman's father found his daughter's body just inside the front door of the house, and later returned with neighbors and found the bodies of the two young girls in a back bedroom, said Miami County Undersheriff Bob VanGoethem. The three victims were dressed in nightclothes, he said.

Roy Ackle Jr. identified the bodies as his sister Jean Young Andrews, 28, and her daughters, 11-year-old Tiffany Massey and 10-year-old Tamara Massey.

The undersheriff would not confirm the names, but said the victims had been either shot or stabbed.

Authorities were searching for a male suspect and the boy, saying the youth was in "a possible hostage situation." VanGoethem would not release the name of the suspect.

VanGoethem said the killings probably occurred between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 6:45 a.m. Friday when the bodies were discovered.

Mrs. Andrews had married Aug. 11, and the family had lived in the one-story frame house on five acres of land.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for today from the Virginias through Florida, for the Midwest, from Michigan, to parts of Kansas and Nebraska, the Pacific Northwest and Wyoming and Colorado.

Midland temperatures will return to upper 70s

Temperatures will return to the upper 70s today and Sunday, so Midlanders will enjoy at least one more warm weekend before the cool weather returns.

Today will be fair and warmer, with a high in the mid 70s and winds from the south at 10-20 mph. Tonight will again be fair, with a low in the upper 40s, while Sunday will be fair with a high in the upper 70s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Friday's high of 61 was 24 degrees below the record for the date of 85, set in 1946, while the overnight low of 46 was 17 degrees above the 1951 record of 29.

STATE

Low clouds covered the eastern half of the state Friday, except for fair skies along the Red River Valley, while clear skies ruled the western half from the Panhandle to the area east of the Pecos.

The only precipitation reported was in the lower Rio Grande Valley where light drizzle fell in the afternoon, the National Weather Service said.

A ridge of high pressure built in Texas Friday afternoon after a cold front departed in the morning. The weather service said this ridge kept northerly winds over the eastern two thirds of the state, averaging between 10 and 20 mph and occasionally gusty over the south. South and southwest winds 10 to 20 mph were common west of the ridge.

Temperatures in the 50s and 60s prevailed except for 70s in far west Texas.

The forecast for North Texas was partly cloudy through Sunday with highs in the upper 60s to mid 70s and lows tonight mainly in the 40s.

West Texas should have fair skies through Sunday with highs ranging from about 73 in the Panhandle to the mid 80s in the Big Bend valleys. Lows should be from 35 in the Panhandle to high 40s in the south, with daytime temperatures lower during Sunday than on Saturday.

NATION

A powerful storm system producing strong, gusty wind whipped across much of the Northwest on Friday, while heavy rain fell over northern California and cold air pressed out into the Plains.

USDA: Turkey dinner up by 7.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average cost of a typical Thanksgiving dinner will be 7.5 percent higher than a year ago, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

According to the department's calculations, a turkey dinner with stuffing, potatoes, gravy, vegetables and other side dishes will cost $8.35 each for six people. That doesn't count second helpings and leftovers.

Last year, the same food cost $7.77 each for six servings. The costs for three earlier years were $7.92 in 1980, $5.38 in 1974, and $3.37 in 1964.

Betty Peterkin of the department's Human Nutrition Information Service said turkey prices were lower in 1983 and 1984 than they were in 1980. Also, she said, coffee prices came down after 1980.

The report said Thanksgiving menu costs were based on foods for which U.S. average prices are available from the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, going back 20 years.

"This is just one example of a Thanksgiving menu," the report said. "Your traditional meal may differ. Some items that you may associate with Thanksgiving dinner — cranberries and pumpkin pie, for example — were not included in the menu because they were not priced by BLS."

The dinner's cost rose only 5 percent in the four years since 1984, but jumped 47 percent between 1974 and 1980, the report said.

Serving sizes used in computing the dinner costs included one-half cup each of fruit cup, stuffing, potatoes and carrots, three ounces of lean turkey meat without skin, one-fourth cup of gravy, one medium baked onion, five small celery sticks, two cucumber slices, two tomato wedges and one green pepper ring from the vegetable relish tray.

Also, one roll with one teaspoon of margarine, one-eighth of a nine-inch pie with one-fourth cup of ice cream, and a cup of coffee.

"This meal provides over 1,100 calories — plenty for some people but not for others," the report said.

The department's menu for six people and its cost for one serving each, for specified years, in dollars, included:

1984 1983 1980 1974 1964

Winter fruit cup 1.16 1.10 1.12 0.80 0.59

Stalin's daughter returns to U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW (AP) — Josef Stalin's only daughter, reviled in the Soviet Union when she defected to the West in 1967, has returned home with her 13-year-old American-born daughter, the news agency Tass said Friday.

Soviet authorities have restored to Svetlana I. Alliluyeva the citizenship revoked in 1970, and granted Soviet citizenship to her daughter, Olga, Tass said. It did not mention that she was the daughter of Stalin, the Soviet leader who died in 1953.

Svetlana had lived in the United States from 1967 to 1982, and then moved to Britain. She and her daughter are American citizens.

She had vowed never to return to the Soviet Union, and left behind two children from previous marriages, Josef and Yekaterina, who said they were shocked and hurt by her decision. There now are two grandchildren.

Svetlana, 59, was known in the Soviet Union by the last name of Alliluyeva, her mother's last name. She married Olga's father, American architect William Wesley Peters, in 1969 and the couple were divorced in 1973.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said the U.S. government was aware of the Tass announcement, but did not have any independent information. He said he did not have any information indicating Svetlana might have been forced to return to the Soviet Union.

Romberg could not say whether her U.S. citizenship would be jeopardized.

The Tass announcement did not say when or why Svetlana returned to Moscow. The government newspaper Izvestia carried the report and an announcer read it on the evening television news program.

Attempts to contact Svetlana in Moscow failed. Her children had lived in her old apartment across the Moscow River from the Kremlin after her defection until six or seven years ago, a neighbor told an Associated Press reporter Friday.

Svetlana defected in March 1967, after being allowed to return the ashes of Brajesh Singh, to India. She had lived with Singh in Moscow and later referred to him as her husband. But Soviet officials had refused to sanction her marriage to the Indian.

In an interview in March with the London Observer newspaper, Svetlana said that she missed her children and grandchildren in the Soviet Union.

"It is sometimes very hard," the newspaper quoted her as saying. "I have not seen my son and daughter for 17 years and I have a grandson and granddaughter I have never seen. Sometimes it's an almost superhuman effort not to drop everything and run and get a ticket to go and see them."

However, Svetlana gave friends at her home in Cambridge, England, no clue she was leaving.

"There was no hint whatsoever she was going to go back to Russia. If she has gone permanently, I will be flabbergasted," said Cambridge University professor Donald Denman, one of her closest friends in England.

Denman said Olga is "140-percent American."

LINDSEY

Lindsey added that, in his view of Bible prophecy, the final war, or nuclear confrontation, before the return of Christ could not possibly come in Reagan's term because, a charismatic world ruler must first rise up in Europe, establish his rule in Rome, and proclaim himself God in the rebuilt Temple at Jersualem before the Armageddon campaign.

"These will all be clearly, identifiable events that will take place in a period of three-and-a-half years before Armageddon," said the 55-year-old Lindsey, who lives in Palos Verdes, Calif.

He said the Bible describes Armageddon as being a war like no other war the world has seen or will ever see again. "It is described as so destructive that except for the return of Christ, all life on earth would be wiped out. It sounds nuclear to me, but I don't say it has to be nuclear."

Lindsey believes the Armageddon conflict will be a battle of Pan Arabic force, Russia, Red China, Iran, Ethopia and Libya aligned against Israel, and that Russia will be totally destroyed in the first wave of the conflict.

"Armageddon is not a single battle. It is a campaign, a series of battles, but the vortex of the campaign will be the Ar of Migeddo (hill of Migeddo) in a plain that is a land link of the Middle East. Countless campaigns throughout history have been waged in this region, said Lindsey.

His critics, however, have contended that Bible prophecy cannot be used to foretell the future or predict the exact hour or day of the second coming of Christ.

"I don't pretend to be able to predict the exact time when the end of the world will come," he said. "The Bible says that no man can predict the hour or the day, but it does say we will know the season or the age in which the end of the world will begin to be seen. I believe we are in that age. I think that time is short."

He said he was not alone in his thinking about the end times, that non-Christian experts in science and military agree with him. "I really don't see how the world can last much past the year 2000," said the former tug boat captain, turned Bible scholar.

He said Christians must stop spending money on grandiose buildings and concentrate all effort and money toward telling the unsaved about the second coming of Christ.

"It's difficult to have a sense of urgency about the end of the world now, because this controversy has been going on for so long, and it is still a controversy. There are many in the church who do not share my views of prophecy," said Lindsey.

CLEMENTS

Even if Reagan won re-election in Texas by a percentage of 10 to 11 points it might not be enough for Gramm to pull out a win, according to Clements. "If his (Reagan's) win gets down to 55 percent, then there's a gap of about five points and I don't know if that's enough to carry Gramm." And he declined to forecast what Reagan will pull out of Texas voters.

Although polling results have shown more women and Hispanics going Democratic, Clements said the Republicans have worked to draw in those minorities. Of the 1 million new voters registered in Texas, their political leanings were split between Democratic and Republican.

"I'm highly skeptical of polls," said Clements, but they show that slightly more women are leaning to the Mondale/Ferraro ticket. Offsetting that may be the men, which polls show are overwhelmingly supporting the Republican ticket.

The question in the election at this point is "which party can get their new registration to the polls. I'm satisfied we can do it and so will they (Democrats). I'm not sure how they do it," he said, pointing to the 95 to 97 percent voter turnout in some minority precincts in Houston.

Watching the group leave on the plane for its next stop in Lubbock, Fred Jones of Midland, chairman of a minority precinct, said the blacks are going through a transition period. Back in 1932 when Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected president, they all went Democrat, he said.

"The Republican percentage is small in my precinct but it's going to be much better," Jones said.

Unknown men assault Midlander

From Staff Reports

A Midland man was assaulted outside his apartment early Friday morning by two unidentified men, according to police reports.

Daryl Ray Smith, 34, of 4700 Boulder, Apt. 903, told police the two men attacked him in the parking lot at about 1:30 a.m. after he got out of his vehicle. They beat him about the head and upper body, causing small cuts and abrasions, before Smith escaped.

There are no suspects in the case.

In other police reports Friday, Carla O'Hara of 4405 N. Garfield, Apt. 622, reported the theft of $1,150 in jewelry from her apartment Wednesday. Among the stolen items were a diamond ring worth $500, a diamond engagement ring worth $400, diamond earrings worth $200 and a diamond pinkie ring valued at $50.

Ricky Seeker of 3204 W. Shandon told police his home had been burglarized Saturday night while he was at a Halloween party. Stolen was a gold watch worth $525, a diamond necklace worth $400 and Seeker's checkbook.

MONDALE

Several minutes into his address, amid no audible heckling, Bush said he had been campaigning across the country and, in a rising voice declared, "I see hope and optimism everywhere and under this president's leadership, strong principled leadership, America is back with pride, patriotism and prosperity."

Peter Teeley, Bush's press secretary, said later that the vice president's sharp-tongued remark was directed at hecklers standing in front of him.

ABSENTEE

Reed, the last in line although another 47 behind him were turned away beginning at 4:52 p.m., had gone through some hassles himself.

A junior business major at Sul Ross State University, Reed is still registered in Midland County. Not wanting to miss classes Tuesday, he mailed his application to vote absentee Oct. 22.

He received the ballot Friday.

"If I'd mailed it from Alpine, it wouldn't get here until Thursday," the 1982 Midland High School graduate said. "So I thought I'd drive in and mail it from here. But when I came in, they said it'd be better if I just signed an affidavit and voted absentee now."

The long drive and the wait when he got there added to the importance of voting, he said.

"It kind of bothered me that I had to go through all that, but I'm excited," he said, grinning. "This is the first time in a presidential election that I get to vote."

Georgia town home for both Union, Confederate veterans

FITZGERALD, Ga. (AP) — Beth Davis is looking for a few fast-talking Yankees to help relive history in this south Georgia town.

Founded after the Civil War as a refuge for Union veterans fleeing a depression and drought, Fitzgerald united former enemies in fulfilling the dream of a visionary newspaper man.

"It has been called the magic city," said Mrs. Davis, director of the Blue & Gray Museum, which houses artifacts from the town's past. "It sprang up like magic."

The town's original Northern families have been assimilated into the Southern culture — so much so that in recent years the Blue & Gray Memorial Association, which sponsors Civil War dramas, found itself in the midst of a crisis. There weren't enough non-drawling actors for Yankee roles in the plays.

"People ask me, 'What did you do with all the Yankees?' " chuckled Mrs. Davis, 75. "And I tell them, 'We made Southerners out of them.' "

But a recent influx of industries from the North, and the people who accompanied them to Fitzgerald, should help to restore authentic accents, she said.

"The first thing I tell them when they visit the museum is, 'Oh, we're going to recruit you for our next drama,' 'cause we need those Northern voices."

The town, which celebrates separate Confederate and Union memorial days, got its name from Philander H. Fitzgerald, who was an Indianapolis pension attorney for veterans and was publisher of the widely read "American Tribune" newspaper, according to Mrs. Davis.

During the early 1890s, a drought turned the Midwest into a dust bowl, and a depression soon afterward added to the hardship.

"The veterans had to do something. They were running out of food," Mrs. Davis said. "So they wrote Mr. Fitzgerald and he came up with the idea of a colony in the South."

Georgia had sent trainloads of food and cattlefeed to help the drought-stricken region, so Fitzgerald wrote William J. Northen, the state's governor at the time, about establishing a colony, she said.

With Northen's support, Fitzgerald organized the American Tribune Soldiers' Colony Co., selling shares for $10 each to raise funds to buy land.

The company eventually bought 100,000 acres of virgin pineland around a small turpentine settlement, and the land was parceled out to the shareholders.

"The colony started with just a handful of people in the fall of 1895, but by December they had 2,500 and by the spring of 1896, 8,000," she said.

As a concession to their Southern neighbors and to some Confederate veterans who had bought shares in the company, the settlers named some of the town's streets for Northern generals, such as Grant and Sherman, and some for Southern generals, like Lee and Jackson, she said.

But the Union vets refused to compromise on a name for the new town."Fitzgerald was the only name that would suit them. They liked him."

A DOZEN REASONS
WHY I AM TOUGH ON CRIMINALS

These kids are a dozen reasons why I am tough on criminals.

People say I am a tough law enforcement officer . . . tough but fair.

I am not quite ready to excuse the criminal because he had a so-called deprived childhood, or is a victim of society.

I am tough on criminals because I know how the victims suffer. I live with the victims.

The Midland County Sheriff's Department has accomplished much since I was elected eight years ago.

There is much more to be done, and I hope I will be able to do it. With your help, we will.

Registered voters in Texas up by more than 1 million

AUSTIN (AP) — More than one million additional Texans have registered to vote since the 1980 presidential election, the secretary of state's office says.

The figures do not include tabulations from four of the state's most populous counties.

The incomplete figures received last week from Secretary of State Myra McDaniel show Texas has 7,841,309 registered voters compared to 6.6 million in 1980. Ms. McDaniel predicts the final tally will be close to 9 million.

Ms. McDaniel said the figures from the metropolitan counties of Dallas; Bexar, which includes San Antonio; Harris, which includes Houston; and Travis, which includes Austin, are not expected until later this week.

The number of registered voters, however, has increased by 713,651 since the May primary without those four counties, she said.

"We've had one of the best organized voter registration drives in the state," Ms. McDaniel said. "The volunteer effort that was made was the best I've seen."

Ms. McDaniel, the state's chief election officer, said since the registration process is non-partisan, it is impossible to tell which political party gained the most from the registraion drives.

"I believe this tells us that there's a group of folks out there who have not voted before and may not be as firmly committed to a particular party as those who were already registered and vote regularly," she said.

With the increase in voter registration, Ms. McDaniel forecasts a heavy voter turnout but she said it was too early to predict what percentage of the voters will go to the polls on Nov. 6.

The Democratic primary for U.S. Senate last May showed that one or two voters really do make a difference, she said.

Ms. McDaniel referred to the May 5 primary which drew to a close with U.S. Rep. Kent Hance chalking up 31.23 percent or 455,768 votes, State Sen. Lloyd Doggett gaining 31.36 percent or 454,807 votes and former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger tallying 31.14 percent for a total of 454,497 votes.

The June 2 runoff between Hance and Doggett was an even closer battle with Doggett edging out Hance by 509 votes.

Dan McClung, a political consultant to the Texas Democratic Party, said Republicans outregistered Democrats in six counties, including Dallas County. He said the parties were even in Harris County.

"The Democratic Pary registered more voters in every other county in the state," he said. "There's just more Democrats down here to register."

He said about 10,000 volunteers were involved in registered voters at shopping centers or contacting them by phone or mail.

"At a minimum, I'd say 70 percent of the voters will turn out," McClung predicted. "We'll win by as much as we need, the rules say all we need is one vote. It's going to be a close one."

Sixty-seven percent of the registered voters in Texas went to the polls in 1980 when President Reagan carried the state. In 1982, 49.3 percent voted in the governor's race.

William C. Velasquez, executive director of the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project, said over 1 million Hispanics are registered. He said his group has registered 185,000 of them.

"The major reason for the increase is the number of registration drives," he said.

Velasquez predicts 60 to 65 percent of the Hispanics will vote on Nov. 6 and that 80 percent of those going to the polls will vote for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket.

"From history, you can predict what will happen," he said. "Reagan got the most Hispanic votes of any other president but I believe there will be an erosion. It will go back to the traditional Democratic candidates."

A spectator leans in for a closer look at the Constitution, on public display at the National Archives in Washington, D.C. Soon two-thirds of the state legislatures may demand a national convention to amend the Constitution.

Two more states could change Constitution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The documents, bearing the seals of 32 states, stand on their sides in the middle drawer of R. Scott Bates' filing cabinet, across the hall from the Senate chamber.

Two more, and Congress will face a prospect it has never faced before. Two-thirds of the state legislatures will be demanding a national convention to amend the Constitution.

The documents call for limiting the convention to one subject: a requirement that Congress, as most state legislatures must do, balance its budget by spending no more money than the government takes in.

Proponents say they hope to reach their goal of 34 states next year, despite recent setbacks in California and Montana, where state courts removed the issue from the Nov. 6 ballot.

Opponents say they think the movement has spent its strength, and argue that the amendment would hamstring the federal government, which must deal with crises not faced by states.

They also argue that a constitutional convention called by Congress could break the bounds imposed on it and take up other amendments dealing with subjects like school prayer or abortion, or rewrite the whole Constitution.

"I don't know what would happen then, nor does anyone else in America know," says Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause, a citizens' lobbying group that opposes the amendment.

On the other hand, law professor John T. Noonan Jr. of the University of California, in a paper published this year by the Taxpayers' Foundation, says, "When two more states join their sister-states' call, Congress will be under a peremptory duty" to call a limited constitutional convention.

Many supporters of the idea, however, believe Congress will propose an amendment itself rather than call a convention.

"I think Congress will act because they won't want this done by a group that they won't have any input into or any control over," says Republican Montana state Rep. Jack Ramirez, a Billings lawyer who is a chief backer of the measure in his state's legislature.

The Constitution provides two ways for amendments to be proposed, by a two-thirds vote of both houses of Congress or by a convention called at the behest of two-thirds of the legislatures. Either way, they must be ratified by legislatures of three-fourths of the states.

All 26 amendments adopted so far, as well as those that haven't made it, such as the Equal Rights Amendment, have originated with Congress.

More than 300 applications for a constitutional convention have been submitted by the states, however, in the nearly 200 years since the Constitution was adopted.

Since 1976, a campaign spearheaded by the National Taxpayers' Union has pushed resolutions for a balanced-budget convention through legislatures from Alaska to Alabama and New Hampshire to Texas.

The last one was Missouri's, which Bates, the assistant legislative clerk of the Senate, tucked into his file on July 20, 1963.

Bates' files also contain 20 applications dealing with abortion, 10 on busing for school integration, three on organized prayer in public schools, one on repeal of the federal income tax and others dealing with restraints on federal judges, presidential item-veto power, state laws versus federal regulation and the withholding of federal funds.

Once before, in 1912, the number of such demands reached 30. The subject that time was direct election of senators, previously elected by state legislatures. Congress yielded and adopted the 17th Amendment, subsequently ratified by legislatures in the required three-fourths of the states.

Girl 'Beats It' to buy concert tickets

CLEVELAND (AP) — Kathy Chinchar decided to "Beat It" from school to buy tickets to a recent Michael Jackson concert, but school officials didn't find the idea a "Thriller."

A picture of Kathy clutching tickets to front-row seats for the show appeared in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. She was among 1,000 people in line when the tickets went on sale.

Railroad fans buy line to save it, sell stock to finance its upkeep

EAST STRASBURG, Pa. (AP) — The train to Paradise leaves from here every day nine months out of the year, but for railroad fans it's heaven on earth right here in this tiny hamlet in the heart of Pennsylvania's Amish farmland.

The mournful whistles of operating steam locomotives, the acrid smell of burning coal, a museum full of vintage railroad equipment — and even a motel made up of more than two dozen retired cabooses — combine to attract more than 300,000 passengers a year to the 4.5-mile right-of-way of America's oldest operating short line railroad.

The Strasburg Railroad, originally chartered by the Pennsylvania legislature in 1832, now carries mainly tourists between here and Leaman Junction, in nearby Paradise. But it also moves about 90 carloads of freight each year between a local factory siding and the mainline tracks of Conrail and Amtrak at Leaman Junction.

According to Ellis R. Bachman, the railroad's vice president for administration, the line faced abandonment in 1959 in the face of competition from trucks, and severe damage to its track from heavy storms.

When the line's owners filed papers to abandon the line, Bachman recalls, "local railfans decided to buy it and play trains."

To raise the $18,000 needed to buy the line at its scrap value, stock was offered at $450 a share, but there were few takers and "the community laughed at the effort," Bachman remembers.

Just as the project was about to die for lack of support, someone hit upon a gimmick. "Buy stock," prospective investors were told, "and we'll make you a vice president."

The gimmick worked, and the line was saved from abandonment. It had a president, 23 vice presidents, and an aging gasoline-powered Plymouth locomotive in such disrepair that the Interstate Commerce Commission wouldn't allow it to operate. Its track was overgrown with weeds.

In his history of the line, William M. Moedinger recalls that "beneath the vegetation was four-and-a-half miles of railroad track of sorts, with a gauge of approximately four feet, eight and one half-inches, give or take an inch here or there."

Having saved the line, the newly minted railroaders set out to clear the track, replace rotting ties and rusting spikes, and began to scrounge for additional rolling stock so they could "play trains" in earnest on weekends with their refurbished Plymouth locomotive.

Slowly, steam locomotives and other new equipment joined the line, and as the word spread, the stockholders' friends clamored for rides and gradually tourists and railfans began to find their way to East Strasburg, as the line built up its rolling stock.

Loss of legs doesn't stop veteran

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — "Flop" Jackson sails down the corridors of the courthouse.

He careens into an elevator and out again on the fourth floor, breezing into the treasurer's office to find Sadie Stockwell at her desk.

"Speaking of the devil," barks the secretary with a smile.

The man with no legs grins. He steers his motorized cycle-chair next to Stockwell's desk.

He is heading home to watch the Olympics, he tells her. He just dropped by to say hello.

The 75-year-old man, a former county treasurer for 12 years, is hardly known by his given name. But that's fine with him.

"Do you think I would run for office, by gosh, without letting them know that W.W. Jackson was 'Flop?'" he asks. "Not on your life."

He tugs at a rather prominent ear to explain his nickname.

A FOOTBALL line coach at first gave him the nickname Flop-Ear, then shortened it to Flop, he says. The name stuck.

Flop sits now in the courthouse coffee shop. Long-time acquaintances stop to shake his hand. No one expresses sympathy for the man who six months ago lost his second leg because of an arterial blockage. No one really dares.

"I'm not handicapped," Flop announces as he balances himself in his chair with his arms. "I've just got some things I can't do anymore."

Some years ago, a woman made him mad after spotting him in a grocery store. At the time he had just one leg. She walked up to him and told him she felt sorry for him.

"I liked to fell over," Flop says, rearing back to emphasize his amazement and instill a little drama into his words.

"'Feel sorry for me?' I says, 'You don't even know me or a darn thing about me. I don't need any of yours or anyone else's sympathy.'

"I says, 'If you want to know, I'm one of the richest men in this town. And I don't mean financially.'"

FRIENDS ATTEST to his humanistic wealth.

Flop's love for youth and his involvement with Boy Scouts and Little League have cemented a number of friendships.

Flop continues to work with Boy Scouts in Angleton's Troop 13 even though he retired as troop leader some time ago.

Charles Batson, the current troop leader, says Flop communicates well with the kids.

"That has really meant more to him than anything," Batson says about Flop's involvement with youth. "He associates well with young people."

Flop's 12-year job with the county has left him with plenty of friends at the courthouse.

County Treasurer Susan Neighbours says she was worried when Flop had his surgery last February. Now she says he brightens her days with his frequent visits.

"He's a phenomenon," she said. "He's just amazing. I think it's wonderful, his attitude that they are not through with him yet. He's an inspiration."

Flop said he developed that attitude when he was in St. Luke's Hospital 16 years ago after having his first leg amputated.

HE WAS A MASS of misery, he said, but a nurse's aide told him to snap out of it because the Lord still had plans for him.

"She said, 'you haven't completed what he asked for you to do yet,'" he said. "I thought about that. She was right. So I just told the Big Boss, by gosh, if he didn't want me to live, he would have to tell me."

Flop tried to locate the nurse who gave him the determination to keep fighting. But he said he was never successful.

When he lost his second leg, he said he got a little depressed at times. But he would always look around and see someone he wouldn't trade places with if he could.

"Sure, I'd like to be physically fit like I was in the '30s and '40s and '20s, all that stuff," he said. "But it isn't so."

While he was in therapy at St. Anthony's in Houston after his last surgery, he said there was only one other person on the floor he could even talk to. He said he just doesn't understand people who don't try.

"One thing, there ain't no use crying about what you don't have," he said. "If you can't do anything about it, just go find some way to do the best you can and keep going."

Flop does keep going. The odometer on his motorized cycle-chair says he has traveled 139 miles going "anywhere I take a notion to go."

HE AND HIS wife have ordered a van that they plan to equip with a lift so they can start pulling their Airstream and traveling.

Next year is their 50th wedding anniversary, he said. They plan to celebrate by touring Europe with their children and grandchildren .

Flop said he hopes the airlines will allow him to fly his chair-cycle, which is a motorized three-wheel cycle with an armchair and connecting handlebars.

"This thing here makes me absolutely mobile," he brags.

Even though he drives it down the street, he admits it isn't licensed.

"I can't find any license for it," he laughs. "What would you license this as? (Tax Assessor-Collector) Ray Cornett doesn't seem to have any answers to the question."

Flop moved to Brazoria County in 1933, the year after he graduated from Sam Houston State University. He was an athlete and got a job in Sweeny coaching and teaching social studies.

HE SAID HIS athletic training has a lot to do with the determination that has become the guiding force of his character.

IN 1970, Flop ran for county treasurer and won. He said he had received a letter from retiring Treasurer Odell Robinson, urging him to run for the office.

Flop said he didn't want any part of it but when other people started pushing him he decided to take a shot at it.

"It paid good money and I was restless and bored," he said.

Flop admits his background was limited.

"I had no qualifications that I could put on paper toward your vote for treasurer," he said. But he surrounded himself with good people, he said, and was hard-headed enough to get the job done.

West Columbia banker Dooley Galloway was one of his main advisors, he said. He also hired Sadie Stockwell.

"I says, well, give Ms. Stockwell and Dooley Galloway credits for brains," he laughs. "I was just the trigger man."

FLOP RETIRED as treasurer at the end of 1982.

Reagan quit reading Doonesbury because 'it's not on comic pages'

CLEVELAND (AP) — President Reagan said Friday he has "stopped reading Doonesbury," the comic strip that has been highly critical of him and Vice President George Bush, "because it isn't on the comic pages any more."

Asked about the "Doonesbury" strip for Sunday, which apparently mentions Reagan's divorce from actress Jane Wyman, the president said, "What makes that any different from any other day?"

Speaking to reporters before boarding Air Force One for a campaign flight to Springfield, Ill., Reagan also was asked if he had seen the "Doonesbury" strips critical of Bush.

"No," he said. "Because it isn't on the comic pages any more."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, asked whether Reagan's reply was serious or facetious, said he did not know.

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Dozens of the world's leading avant-garde poets have gathered for a nine-day festival of poetry and music.

The literary figures scheduled to attend the seventh annual One World Poetry Festival, which began Friday, included such internationally known writers such as Russian Yevgeny Yevtushenko and Amira Baraka, the prominent Afro-American playwright formerly known as LeRoi Jones.

American Ken Kesey, author of the novel "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," was also scheduled to give readings.

Lesser-known experimental poets will perform as well, including a "group of absolute weirdos" who will read their "way out" poetry to background music provided by the Blue Murder rock band, said festival spokesman Victor Way.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — He's no rock star, but Olympic gold medal gymnast Mitch Gaylord is attracting huge crowds, screaming fans and swooning teen-agers.

"It's more like a concert crowd," Gaylord said. "Screaming...from beginning to end."

Gaylord has been traveling around the country for the last three months with the '84 Tour of America's Gymnastic Champions. The troupe also includes Peter Vidmar, Bart Conner, Tim Daggett, James Hartung, Scott Johnson and Jim Mikus, and two members of the women's team, Julianne McNamara and Tracee Talavera.

He has a pinup poster out, and with the help of his brother Chuck, who trained actor Kevin Bacon for his role in "Footloose," he will soon publish an exercise book.

• • •

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Television news anchorwoman Brenda Williams is to return to work on the KMBC evening news Monday after dropping an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission complaint against the station, officials said.

Ms. Williams' old contract expired Sept. 13. Ms. Williams, who is black, said in her EEOC complaint that she was a victim of race and sex discrimination.

In January, a federal court jury in Joplin awarded Ms. Williams' predecessor, Christine Craft, $325,000 after finding that Ms. Craft had been defrauded by Metromedia Inc., the former station owner, involving expectations about her professional appearance.

Ms. Craft also had alleged discrimination but a judge rejected that claim.

• • •

BOSTON (AP) — The Massachusetts Appeals Court refused Friday to grant an injunction to erotic dancer Chesty Morgan and a Stoughton lounge in their legal battle against the town's board of selectmen and police.

The selectmen voted to suspend the license of the Sport Lounge on the grounds that Ms. Morgan's performance violated a town bylaw.

Ms. Morgan and the lounge argued that her performance is a form of "protected expression" that is beyond the reach of the town government to impede because of the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Gaye's father gets five years probation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Marvin Gaye's father was sentenced to five years probation Friday for killing his son in a shooting that the judge said was the victim's "own fault."

Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer said imposing jail time would have been a "death sentence" for ailing, 71-year-old Marvin Gay Sr. Gay, who had pleaded no contest to voluntary manslaughter, could have received a 13-year prison sentence.

The judge said Gaye provoked the shooting which led to his death during a family argument on the eve of his 45th birthday.

"This is one of those tragic cases in which a young life was snuffed out. But...the young man who died, although tragically, provoked this incident. It was his own fault," Ringer said.

Gay thanked Ringer profusely following the sentencing, saying he was "sorry" for what defense attorneys had claimed was a case of self-defense.

"I love my son, I love my son and I wish he could come through that door," said Gay in a lengthy, rambling speech to the judge.

Gay, who underwent surgery to remove a walnut-sized tumor at the base of his brain following his arrest, continued to address the court in a barely audible voice. His daughter and granddaughter watched from the audience.

Gay's wife, who had filed for divorce about the time of the April 1 shooting, was not in court Friday.

Ringer agreed with a probation report that recommended no jail time because of Gay's health. "Sending him to prison or requiring any additional time would impose a death sentence," he said.

Gay had served 80 days in custody before being released on $30,000 bond. He pleaded no contest on Sept. 19 to voluntary manslaughter following a plea bargain that reduced the charge from first-degree murder.

Marvin Gaye was known for such hits as "Sexual Healing" and "I Heard It Through the Grapvine."

Ringer said there would be no fine or community service required and suspended the original murder charge. He said he based his decision on the county probation report that also had been agreed to by the prosecutor, Deputy District Attorney Dona Bracke.

Defense attorney Arnold B. Gold argued in court for the probation, saying his client's physical health had deteriorated since the slaying and that it was a case of self-defense.

"No one can suffer any more than Mr. Gay is suffering for that loss," Gold said.

Outside court Friday, Ms. Bracke said she was "satisfied," with the sentence although she did not think Gay had been justified in shooting his son.

"No, I don't think it was self-defense, but I think the feelings he had at the time are enough to knock it down (to a voluntary) manslaughter," she said. "Sending him to county jail for another three months — what purpose would that serve?" Ms. Bracke asked.

The younger Gaye, who added a "e" to his name at the beginning of his singing career, was shot twice in the chest at the family home in South-Central Los Angeles.

Gaye had been visiting at his parents' home when that argument broke out.

His father insisted the singer threw him across a room while the elder Gay was looking for an insurance policy, but Gaye's mother said her husband came after their son and shot him at close range.

Ms. Bracke said the probation report had recommended a suspended three year prison sentence, plus two years for use of the gun, also to be suspended. The judge, however, issued a six-year suspended sentence, which could be imposed if Gay violates terms of his probation, Ms. Bracke said.

The judge also ordered Gay to seek psychiatric counseling.

The no contest plea is the criminal-law equivalent of a guilty plea, but cannot be used against the defendant in any subsequent civil action.

Station symbol of the past

SHAWNEE, Okla. (AP) — Separated now from the traffic of a state highway, a symbol of times past, Doug's Texaco station is still a landmark in Seminole County.

Farmers and cattlemen know about Doug's — the station's seldom called anything else — and often just stop to talk.

County commissioners use the location of the store as a point of origin for giving directions.

And, generations of children remember Doug's as the country store and gas station, occupied by a tall and kindly gentleman who sells the best-tasting candy and the coldest soda pop.

A selection of candy is displayed in an antique, wooden and glass front case. The old, oversized cash register isn't used anymore, but rests, silent and dignified on the sturdy pine wood school desk. Bills are figured on a notepad, and change is given from a smaller register, or from Villines' pocket.

Doug Villines opened the store in Wolf — about eight miles south of Seminole — now on the old Oklahoma 99 — more than 30 years ago. A new highway, built about eight years ago, bypasses the store, but part of the old roadway still exists.

Villines, 73, is satisfied now with the slower pace and to "just let the time pass."

"I don't never get in no hurry. I was born two miles from here and I never did live over 10 or 12 miles from here," says Villines. "I might just die right here."

The station almost cost him his life once.

On a cold mid-December day in 1979, two large men, armed and wearing ski masks, entered the small station. The pair demanded money.

"I thought it was a joke," Villines recalls, adding that he joked with the man holding the gun. "I bet that made him so mad, me making fun of his holdup."

After knocking Villines to the floor and taking the money from the cash register, the robbers wanted the "rest of the money." Villines started to get up and hand over his wallet. Snatching the wallet, one of them knocked him back to the floor.

Before leaving, one of the robbers fired a shot intended "not to leave any witnesses," Villines believes. He was conscious as the robbers left, but thought it best to play dead until they had gone.

The bullet grazed the center of his head, leaving a burnt path across his gray-white hair.

Another December — Christmas Eve in 1965 — Villines saw the station burn.

"That was the worst Christmas I ever had," he says.

The station, then a Stephens Oil Co. operation, was rebuilt by the company. Doug's was also a Fina station. It has been a Texaco station since 1972.

Before buying the service station from his brother-in-law in 1952, Villines was a farmer. He married Vivian, his wife of 54 years, in June 1930.

"Everybody was worried about how we were going to make it (in the Depression years). I was a one-horse farmer, some of them said. We saw a lot of it," he said.

Hindu rioters attack trains, beating, burning Sikhs

WORLD

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Hundreds of Hindu rioters attacked New Delhi-bound trains Friday, beating and burning to death dozens of Sikh passengers in the aftermath of the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

The brutality was reminiscent of the communal carnage during India's partition in 1947, when Hindus and Moslems slaughtered each other by the hundreds of thousands.

"Kill all the Sikhs!" the mobs shouted, according to one of the hundreds of stranded Sikh travelers huddled together Friday at the New Delhi railway station, afraid to continue their journeys without an armed escort.

United News of India reported that at least 55 people were killed on trains bound for the capital. The news agency said 27 were killed at two railway stations in Ambala north of New Delhi in Haryana state, 17 on the Pink City Express from Ajmer-Jaipur, four on the Bombay-Delhi Rajdhani Express, four on the Rajdhani Deluxe and three on the Jhelam Express from Jammu.

Many Delhi-bound trains were canceled or stopped short of the capital following the massacres. It was not immediately clear whether all the killings were carried out by revenge-seeking Hindus.

"Whenever trains came in, bodies of Sikhs are taken off," said Balvinder Singh, a Sikh who arrived here on a train from the Sikh holy city of Amritsar Thursday afternoon, but chose not to continue to Bombay out of fear for the safety of his wife and two children.

"I am not scared," he said. "If we are organized we can fight these bastards but we have families with us."

More than two hours after the Rajdhani Express arrived at 2 p.m., the bloody bodies of four Sikhs were still left unattended in full view of passengers waiting to take the train on its return journey.

The body of one, shoeless and partly covered by a blue sheet, lay on a luggage cart outside a car. Blood still oozed from a head wound.

The bodies of two other Sikhs lay side by side, their legs entangled, on the connecting platform between two cars. About a dozen people clustered outside, craning for a view.Other people sat by idly, chatting or munching food as they waited to board the train.

A few cars back, a dead Sikh lay face down on another between-cars platform, his entire back charred by fire.

Asked why the bodies had not been removed, a deputy station superintendent said, "We have to manage the stretchers, ambulance and police."

Asked how many dead Sikhs had been brought in Friday, he said, "Many more."

The Hindu rioting was sparked by the assassination of Mrs. Gandhi on Wednesday, an act laid to two of her Sikh bodyguards. More than 500 people have been killed in three days of violence.

Sikhs, who are easily identifiable because of their turbans, beards and long hair, are a small religious minority in Hindu-dominated India. But in northern Punjab state, where they form a slight majority, extremists have killed hundreds of Hindus over the past three years to press their demands for greater religious and political autonomy.

Sidharth Bhatia, an Associated Press reporter based in Bombay who was on the Rajdhani Express, said about 20 people broke into his car with iron rods and stones at the small Tughlakabad station on the outskirts of the capital.

He said they dragged a Sikh out of his seat by his long hair, beat him mercilessly with rods, pulled him outside, killed him and set his body on fire.

Davinder Singh, a physician who was on the Rajdhani Deluxe train, said six people were killed, three of them burned alive. Almost all Sikhs have the name Singh, which means "lion" in Punjabi.

Several passengers said they hid in toilets during the onslaught. Women said their money and jewelry were looted.

"We shouted for help and nobody came," said Kharam Singh Muttur, whose shirt collar was splattered with the blood of one of his injured companions.

He said a mob of 500 to 600 stalked through the train for an hour while police watched from the platform. They did not flee until army troops arrived, he said.

As many as 1,000 stranded Sikh passengers from all over India were camped out in the waiting rooms and on the concrete platform at the New Delhi station, afraid to continue their trips and preferring the safety of numbers. They said they had unsuccessfully sought armed escorts on trains.

"We have no protection," said one young Sikh. "We are afraid to leave because death is waiting for us outside."

Peres says agreement reached

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The government reached agreement with business and union leaders Friday on a three-month freeze of wages, prices, and taxes, Prime Minister Shimon Peres announced.

He said it was a major step toward solving Israel's economic crisis.

The accord was reached in a five-hour meeting after weeks of often bitter negotiations. No date was announced for implementing the plan, but Israel Television said it was to go into effect Monday.

The key provision was to reduce inflation compensation for salaried workers. Many economists view the wage-indexing system as a major cause of the wage-price spiral.

Manufacturers will freeze dividends and profits they pay shareholders.

"This agreement is an important step forward in healing the economy," Peres told a news conference after initialing the pact.

But he warned that further steps would have to be taken to revive the economy, which is suffering from an annual inflation rate that some projections say will reach 900 percent by the end of this year.

The 20 officials from government, labor and business who attended Friday's session said some details had yet to be made final and the pact had to be ratified by the Cabinet, the Central Committee of the Histadrut trade union federation, and the Manufacturers Association.

The Histadrut represents about 80 percent of Israel's 1.4 million workers.

Besides a soaring inflation rate, Israel's economic burdens include a $24 billion foreign debt; a trade deficit that totalled $5.3 billion in 1983 but has improved slightly this year, and dwindling foreign currency reserves of $1.9 billion that can cover only two months worth of imports.

The agreement was the first major test of the Peres-led bipartisan government, which listed dealing with the economy as its No. 1 priority when it took office Sept. 14.

Finance Minister Yitzhak Modai said the agreement was meant "to give us time and to pave the way for future economic moves." He said these would include further cuts in the government's $23 billion budget. It has already been cut by $1 billion and a reduction of up to $1 billion more is planned.

The size of the spending cuts was not specified. Nor was anything said about cuts in the 30,000 government jobs — initially mentioned as part of the government's belt-tightening program.

Modai did not say how the government would keep prices from soaring once the agreement expired. Economic observers said the freeze was designed to soak up the public's spare cash and lower consumption by limiting buying power.

Yisrael Kessar, who heads the Histadrut, said the agreement "was not all we wanted." But he welcomed the government's "understanding for the need to share the burden fairly."

Lee makes playoffs; Permian beats Dogs

Rebs top OHS, 21-7

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Lee Rebels planted their feet in the state playoffs for the second consecutive year at Memorial Stadium Friday night with a 21-7 District 4-5A victory over Odessa High, but it's outright heresy the way they did it.

Quarterback Dirk Bergoon went to the air for 141 yards, completing three of five passes, one of which went for a 78-yard touchdown to a wide open Tyrone Thurman and another for 44 yards to Walter Jones that set up another score.

Bergoon had passed for only 270 yards in eight previous games. Is he trying to change Lee's image? And on Homecoming night too. Vistors must have thought they were in the wrong stadium.

"I don't know about that, but it sure was fun," said Bergoon. "Really, we didn't throw any more than we usually do. We just completed what we threw. We didn't throw anything special. All three passes we completed are plays we work on all the time."

BERGOON put Lee in command early in the game when he hit Thurman with his 78-yard bomb with 4:39 still left in the first quarter. Thurman was behind the OHS secondary and when that happens, you can turn out the lights. That means a waltz to Cuthbert Street.

"It was just an 88 curl pattern, but Ty broke open," said Bergoon.

Then on Lee's next possession, Bergoon dialed Jones with a 44-yard pass to the OHS one-yard line. That was a pass of beauty as he laid the ball just over Jones' head in full stride. It had to be that way or it would have been incomplete.

"That was just a play action pass with a fake to (fullback) Randy Ellis," said Bergoon. "That's another play we work on and every time I throw that pass in practice, the ball hits Walter in the face mask. I just knew that was going to happen again, but he caught it."

Those were the two big plays of the game against a stubborn Odessa High team. OHS has been in every game except one against San Angelo and they fought the Rebels on pretty even terms.

THE BRONCHOS came right back and made it 14-7 in the second quarter when quarterback Jeff Campbell hit Chris Awalt with a perfect 43-yard scoring toss, but Lee answered with a 10-play, 68-yard drive that ended with Bergoon covering the final eight yards on a busted play.

"We had an audible called at the line and Ellis didn't hear me and went the wrong way," said Bergoon. "I didn't have anyone to pitch to, so I just ran."

And when Bergoon did something on this night, it usually turned out to be the right thing to do. It was his best night of the year.

The two teams fought to a scoreless deadlock in the second half, but stingy Odessa and Lee defenses had a lot to do with that. OHS has played everyone on even terms this year and Lee coach Jack Tayrien expected this kind of battle.

"We beat them as bad as anyone has except San Angelo. They have a very good football team and I knew they would come over here with nothing to lose and play us hard. They gave us a lot of different looks on defense, so we threw the ball. We made some good plays and some bad plays, but we won and that is what is important," said Tayrien.

And important it was. Lee will face Plainview, a 34-14 winner over Amarillo Caprock Friday night, in two weeks. Next week's regular season game with Midland High will not have any bearing on the 4-5A standings. Lee has cinched second place and Permian first.

"I feel great about getting this one behind us. We'll be in the playoffs, but we feel next week's game with Midland High is a big one because

Panthers stay unbeaten

ODESSA — Odessa Permian punter Dal Watson had to pay the price for his team's 50-7 lead in the fourth quarter Friday night against Midland High.

With that kind of lead, few coaches, unless they are really mad at their opponent, have their starters still in the ball game. Permian's John Wilkins wasn't mad, and his starters were long on the bench.

That left Watson nearly unprotected each time he punted the ball in the fourth quarter as the Bulldogs came pouring through the Permian line to take advantage of his situation.

The first punt was blocked by Midland High's William Hernandez and recovered in the end zone by Brent Barton. The second was blocked by Watson's own blocker and Midland High recovered at the Permian 15. It too was turned into a touchdown. The third traveled 18 yards and set up a third MHS TD.

That was all the punting Watson had to do against the Bulldogs Friday, three times for 18 net yards as Permian posted a 50-35 victory over Midland High to clinch a record fifth consecutive District 4-5A title.

"That happens," said Wilkins about the problems the back-up players were having. "Hell, you're way ahead and the kids know it. When you get that far ahead, you start relaxing. Still, you don't like to see it happen."

Watson wasn't the only one who had problems with the kicking game in the final five minutes and 51 seconds. Permian's kickoff return unit was having troubles as well.

After the Bulldogs scored twice late to cut the lead to 50-21, they came back to get the onsides kick twice for another pair of TDs and a respectable 50-35 final score.

THE GAME didn't start out like a one-sided affair. In fact, the Bulldogs jumped out to a 7-6 lead early in the first quarter.

Permian came up with the first points in the game on their second possession when the Bulldogs started having problems with their own game, problems that lasted througout the night.

MHS punter Jesse Renz couldn't handle the deep snap from center Brad Edgar and, after scrambling for the ball, had to fall on it on the Bulldog 13. Three plays later Watson scored the first of his three touchdowns, a six-yard run. Alfred Clark's extra point kick was no good for a 6-0 score.

The Bulldogs fought back with a 76-yard drive which was kept alive by Darrell Davis, who caught a critical fourth and nine pass from quarterback Matt Marcum for a first down on the Permian 15. Two plays later, Davis caught Marcum's 13-yard TD strike. Richard Fry came in to kick the extra point to give the Bulldogs the brief lead.

What followed was onslaught of Panther scoring. Rich Fletcher, after Greg Anderson returned Midland's kickoff 62 yards to the 36, scored on a five-yard run and then caught the two-point pass from quarterback Alton Holloway to regain the lead.

Watson came up with his second six-yard TD run of the night fro a 21-7 score followed by a safety when Renz lost control of a second bad snap, this time in the end zone.

Reagan County Owls nip Greenwood, 28-26

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

BIG LAKE — All good things must come to an end.

Unfortunately, when the final gun sounded here after a stunning 28-26 comeback win by Reagan County over Greenwood, that's what happened. The District 8-AA showdown was a classic, and an end didn't seem to fit.

Junior quarterback Bobby Gunnels officially ended the game with 21 seconds remaining on a fourth and inches quarterback sneak for the winning touchdown. But as the game ended, all attention was directed towards Eldorado.

With the McCamey Badger's 15-8 win over Eldorado, the district race is a muddy picture indeed. In fact, without much imagination one could envision a five-way tie for the top spot after next week's results. All playoff spots are still in the air, and the results of the road to the post-season won't be decided until this week.

Greenwood could have clinched a playoff berth with a win, but now must face Eldorado in a must-win game at home Friday.

The Owls, meanwhile, need a win at Wall this week to sew up a playoff spot. That would complete the Big Lake turnaround for first-year coach Ronnie Reeger. A year ago the Owls were 2-8.

THE WINNING points came as a direct result of a turnover, Greenwood's only of the game. In all, the

TV ruining UT's rep

Controversy has marked two of Texas' games this season, both involving passes, and both calls would seem to have gone in the Longhorns' favor.

Some may say Texas wouldn't be No. 2 in the nation, if it weren't for "favorable calls", but I'm sure Fred Akers would just as soon do without the help. All the controversy isn't doing the Longhorns' reputation any good.

The first instance of a "favorable call" came in the Oklahoma game. Barry Switzer protested that an Oklahoma interception late in the game that would have preserved a 15-12 Sooner lead and insured victory was highway robbery, Texas style. The officials, suggested Barry, had stolen the game from Texas...and what made it worse was that the official making the call came from Switzer's own conference, the Big Eight.

LAST SATURDAY, there was another controversial play which kept SMU from tying or possibly winning the game. It was a pass in the end zone and it looked like pass interference. In fact, the TV people assured us it was, just as they had labeled the play in the Oklahoma game an interception.

I checked with an official who has worked on the big time level and asked if there was anything in either play that didn't meet the eye since he would have viewed the plays from the standpoint of someone who might have been faced with the task of making the call.

He said, "There's no doubt about it. The Oklahoma player intercepted the ball, but there was interference before that that wasn't called. It would have nullified the interception," and put Texas in position for a possible victory instead of a tie.

Of the SMU game, he said there was obvious interference, it was suggested that since the receiver was between the official making the call and the defensive player, perhaps he didn't see it. "There was still a back judge who had a clear view."

In both cases, the impression was left by TV that Texas had been the beneficiary of bad calls and, deservedly so or not, that was the viewers took away with them.

"Hey look," said the official, "Nobody is going to purposely make a mistake, especially when he's on TV and knows the world is watching him. If a mistake is made, it's an honest one. But even so, if an official makes too many honest mistakes, he not going to be retained by the conference."...

LAST WEEK in the colleges, you could have gotten rich betting the SWC choices, 5-0...the rest 10-3 and the pros 3-2-1. For the year, the percentage on the colleges is .660 against the line...the pros, they're just for fun.

The ball slips away, but officials ruled Midland's Darrell Davis broke the plane of the goal line before dropping the ball after taking a pass from quarterback Matt Marcum in 4-5A action at Odessa.

STANTON—Wall's Hawks staved off a couple of last ditch bids by Stanton to hang on to a 13-12 District 8-2A win here Friday night.

Stanton scored with 1:38 left on a nine-yard pass from quarterback Kevin Glaspie to Wayne Delao, but the pass for two was incomplete.

The Buffs got the ball back at midfield, but three passes fell incomplete and Ward Dierschke then picked off his third interception of the night on fourth down.

Wall had gone ahead 13-6 with 4:21 to play on a two-yard run by fullback Curtis Schwartz.

Stanton scored in the first period on a two-yard run by Kevin Glaspie with 9:01 left and the score stood up until the third period when quarterback Randy Krupala hit Dierschke with a 34-yard TD pass and Richie Bain kicked the decisive point.

Tailback John Gugg carried 17 times for 86 yards and fullback Danny Koonce had 82 yards in 15 attempts as Stanton amassed 238 yards rushing.

The win gives Wall a 2-2 record in district and 2-6 overall. Stanton is 0-4 in district and 2-6-1 for the season.

The winning TD in the fourth period came on a two-yard pass from quarterback Steve Hernandez to Michael Urita and Willmon converted.

San Angelo, 7-2 on the year, three TD runs from Bowman and his teammates helped add a lot of offense as the Bobcats had 556 total yards of offense. BULLDOGS

With 3:17 left in the half, Permian made it 30-7 when Watson scored from one-yard out and Clark added the PAT. After interception Marcum deep in their own territory, the Panthers drove down field late to score their fifth TD, a five-yard pass from Holloway to Diron New. Clark made it 35-7 at the half.

ON PERMIAN'S second possession of the third quarter, Clenon Williams busted the longest play of the night when he rushed around right end on his way to a 73-yard score. Clark added the PAT and it was 44-7. Marcus Lott finished the Panther scoring with 11:29 remaining in the game on a one-yard run. The PAT failed, 50-7.

Watson was the Panther's only starting player left in the game after their final TD and that was only for punting. Even the problems he had weren't enough for Midland High to get back in the game, but the Bulldogs still tried.

WATSON'S FIRST blocked punt gave up the TD with 5:51 left in the game. Jeff Alsup hit Allan Foret for a 14-yard touchdown pass after the second block and hit Foret again for the two-pointer to cut the lead to 50-21.

After recovering an onsides kick, passing to Davis for 19 yards before he fumbled it away and then holding Permian after the turnover, Midland High took the third Watson punt at the Panther 45 and Marcum didn't wait around. On the first play, Marcum led Foret perfectly behind the Panther defense and Foret took it into the end zone. The pass for two failed, 50-27.

Midland High then recovered a second onsides kick and, after two plays, Marcum hit Tim Hickey from 52 yards out. Mike Stanton scored the PAT on a pass from Marcum for the 50-35 final score.

The Bulldogs tried one last onsides kick, this time Permian recovered with 1:10 left on the clock.

"Well, our kicking game fell down some and we were never able to stop their offense," said Midland High couch Doug McCutchen. "Their offense was awesome tonight. They executed well."

And about the comeback late in the game, McCutchen said, "It was too late but we were extremely proud of our team. Not too many teams can come back from 50-7. They kept some enthusiasim and kept coming back. I think our young men showed a lot of character. Regardless of who is out there against them, it takes a lot of character to come back like that."

REBELS

you don't want to lose momentum going into the playoffs," said Tayrien. "It was a goal to get back into the playoffs and we have done that and it's just a great feeling."

Plainview has clinched first place in District 3-5A with its victory over Caprock. Plainview is open next week since the Bulldogs play only a nine-game schedule due to the odd nine-team league. They now have two weeks to prepare for Lee.

Jones led all rushers Friday night with 70 yards on 15 carries, but he did have a 62-yard run called back on a penalty. Thurman, who had 135 yards rushing last week, had 59 yards on 13 carries, but his 78-yard TD reception made up the difference.

OHS TOSSED in a two-quarterback backfield as Jeff Wright threw four passes from a running back position and completed two for 34 yards. Campbell threw for 84 more yards on a three of six night and one interception was hauled in by Kevin Witt. Pool Webb had a fumble recovery for Lee.

Lee is now 8-1 on the year and can equal the school's best regular season record with a win over Midland High next week. Lee's 1976 team finished regular season play with a 9-1 record, the only other Rebel squad to do so.

Lee was 8-2 a year ago and parlayed that mark into a state finals berth, ending the season with a 13-3 record, the overall best mark by a Lee team.

RANGERS

Owls would fumble twice and Greenwood once. On each occassion, the benefitting team took the miscue in for TDs.

The first half had been almost even, with the Owls going in 15-14. But Greenwood staked their claim in the third period. Ranger Steve Heryford pounced on a fumble from Tim Tatum at the Owl's 21, and the Rangers took advantage of the night's first turnover. The score came on Chad Longley's pas to John Ellis from the three.

Longley had a fine night, hitting 7-10 before making a few desperation throws very late in the game.

The Longley-to-Ellis strike put Greenwood ahead 20-15 going into the final frame.

The Rangers cranked up a drive early in the fourth that stalled on their own 46. Longley got off a booming punt that returner Terry Thompson flopped at, and Ranger Mark Graham recovered at the Owl seven.

Two plays later, Roger Smith bashed over the left side and the Rangers led 26-15. Smith, who had 115 yards, scored twice.

The Owls immediately went for gold. Thompson ran the kickoff back to near midfield. Gunnels threw three straight misses deep, but on fourth and ten connected with Tim Thompson on a 29-yard gain. Two plays later fullback tatum found a gap on the left side and rolled 19 uncontested yards into the end zone.

There was still over five and a half minutes remaining and the Owls had closed to 26-21.

Then Greenwood made its only real mistake of the night. It proved to be a costly error.

Reagan County kicker Robert Saldibar's boot was a high arching shot. Ranger tailback Terry O'Steen ran up onto the ball, and lost it. The loose ball bounced around several white-shirted Rangers, but it was Reagan's Mike Townsend, a sophomore, who covered the pigskin at the Ranger 37.

And then the Owls got stingy. They ran the ball down to the one to set up Gunnels' final score. Five minutes and 21 seconds elapsed before the Rangers got the ball back. And by then it was too late.

The winning drive lasted for 14 plays, and except for Gunnels' 10-yard run on a naked bootleg left that moved the ball to the three, no play went for over three yards. Every play was on the ground, too, and the 28 points came against the district's toughest defense to score upon. The Rangers have already blanked five foes.

"I just told them to hang with it and in this case it worked," said the Owls' Reeger. "We've done some things we're proud of."

Greenwood boss Joe Longley was also proud of his squad, tasting defeat for only the second time this year. "We played with a lot of heart," he said. "I couldn't be any prouder. They would not give up."

Three times the Rangers stopped RC on their last drive, but on the fourth plunge Gunnels had just enough room for the winner.

"They're a bunch of fighters."

And the fighting isn't over.

BC's Flutie nears offensive record

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

College Football

Doug Flutie is closing in on major college football's total offense record and closing out his career against Penn State — which probably makes him happy and a little sad at the same time.

Boston College's diminutive passing star needs only 142 yards by land or by air when the ninth-ranked Eagles visit Penn State today to break the mark of 9,723 held by former Brigham Young quarterback Jim McMahon.

Despite Flutie's heroics against the Nittany Lions the past two seasons, the career passing yardage record will have to wait a few more weeks. The 5-foot-9 senior has thrown for 8,937 yards but still trails Purdue's Mark Herrmann (9,188), Stanford's John Elway (9,349), McMahon (9,536) and Duke's Ben Bennett (9,614).

IF FLUTIE could have faced Penn State every week, he might have broken both records as a freshman. In 1982, he riddled the Nittany Lions for 520 yards through the air. Last year, he settled for 380 as Boston College beat Penn State for the first time in their 12-game series.

In fact, Flutie began his career in the fourth quarter of the 1981 Penn State game, hitting 8 of 18 passes for 135 yards and a touchdown.

"When you're with Doug for three years and you practice with him and play with him, nothing's amazing any more," said wideout Gerard Phelan, Flutie's favorite receiver. "You thank God he came to Boston College and he's part of our team."

NO. 1-RANKED Washington entertains California, while runner-up Texas visits Texas Tech and No. 3 Nebraska is at Iowa State.

Fourth-ranked Brigham Young is home against Texas-El Paso, No. 5 South Carolina is at North Carolina State, sixth-ranked Miami visits Louisville, No. 7 Oklahoma State is at Kansas State, eighth-ranked Georgia entertains Memphis State, and No. 10 Oklahoma is home against Missouri.

In the only pairing of AP Top Twenty teams, No. 11 Auburn visits No. 13 Florida. Elsewhere in the Second Ten, Virginia is at No. 12 West Virginia, No. 14 Florida State at Arizona State at night, Mississippi at No. 15 LSU, Indiana at No. 16 Ohio State, Wisconsin at No. 17 Iowa, No. 18 Southern California at Stanford, Texas A&M at No. 19 Southern Methodist, and No. 20 Texas Christian at Houston.

BOSTON COLLEGE has struggled since a three-week layoff, rallying to beat Temple, losing to West Virginia and holding off Rutgers 35-23 last week.

"Rutgers was a game we had to win — and we did play well enough to do it," said Coach Jack Bicknell. "For the most part, I was pleased with our offensive effort.

"Penn State is coming off a difficult loss (17-14 to West Virginia). I can guarantee you they will be ready to play this week. D.J. Dozier is a truly exceptional tailback and they've got a whole teamful of talented and physical players. On top of this, they are always tough in their home stadium. What else can I say?"

Meanwhile, Washington winds up its home season (the Huskies then face Southern Cal and Washington State on the road) against a 2-6 Cal team that has actually run more plays, gained more yards and generated more first downs than its opponents. Washington, however, leads the nation in scoring defense (8.6 points per game) and is fifth in total defense.

"California is known as a passing team and a lot depends on the physical status of (quarterback) Gale Gilbert (sprained ankle)," said Washington Coach Don James. "He certainly has the ability to spark an offense. I understand he was dressed for the USC game so, with a week's rest, I expect we'll see him."

THE HUSKIES will have a new starting quarterback — Paul Sicuro replacing Hugh Millen, who fumbled twice and was intercepted three times in the first half against Arizona last week.

"Nobody believes it, but we look at the remaining season as an opportunity to win three football games," said California Coach Joe Kapp.

Like Washington, Texas is a heavy favorite over Texas Tech. The Longhorns are unbeaten in their last 23 regular-season games and have won 17 consecutive Southwest Conference games. Coach Fred Akers, however, is concerned.

"Looking at our schedule, it is easy to see that this conference race is not over by any means," he said. "Texas Tech is always tough in Lubbock and they have played very well at times this year. I guess they have as much speed and ability at the tailback position (Robert Lewis, Timmy Smith) as anyone around."

Meanwhile, Tech's Jerry Moore said that "Texas has played the toughest schedule in the nation (including Auburn, Penn State, Oklahoma, Arkansas and SMU) and come out of it undefeated. It goes without saying it will be a tremendous test."

Nebraska is coming off a 62-14 rout of Kansas State and faces an improving Iowa State team that lost by two points to Oklahoma and tied Missouri in its last two outings.

Coach Jim Criner knows the Cyclones will "need a super effort in this game. Nebraska is the top team in our conference (Big Eight) and they present us with a real challenge. We'll have to play as well as we have in the past two games. And we need more offense. We're returning some players who have been injured, so that should help us."

Brigham Young's winning streak stands at 19 games, longest in school history and tops in the nation. The Cougars have won 13 straight over Texas-El Paso and play their remaining four regular-season games in the state of Utah.

South Carolina (7-0) will try and match a school record against N.C. State. Eight games is the most that any South Carolina football team ever has won in one season.

"It feels great to be 7-0 at this stage, but we can't forget how we got here," said Coach Joe Morrison. "We didn't play well against East Carolina (a 42-20 triumph last week), but were able to win the football game, and that's the important thing. But we have to realize that we can't play like that again and hope to come out on top. Our players have handled the pressures of being unbeaten and the rankings well the past two weeks, and there is no reason why they can't continue."

BATTLES—

The Others...

Army plus seven over Air Force—Black Knights of Hudson aren't in Falcons' class, but maybe they can keep it close.

Penn State even over Boston College—Come on, Doug Flutie, make me sorry I said this.

Florida minus 2½ over Auburn—It's at Florida and Gators have won more impressively than Poly.

Maryland minus four over North Carolina—It's a good thing the Tar Heels don't play Elon on Guilford this year.

Oklahoma minus 4½ over Missouri—No comment after remarking last week that OU would beat Kansas by 30 even without Danny Bradley.

Oklahoma State minus 22 over Kansas State—Wildcats should be no chore for Cowboys, but OSU lacks killer instinct.

Michigan over Purdue, even—Unless soneone tells Boilermakers they are playing Notre Dame.

South Carolina minus nine over NC State—Wolfpack held Clemson to one point win last week, so Gamecocks should be alerted.

Stanford plus seven over USC—These West Coast games seldom make sense.

Syracuse minus 3½ over Pitt—As bad as Syracuse might be, they're still good enough...

Virginia plus seven over West Virginia—This could bring a complete severing of diplomatic relations with Ron Jaap, who wasn't too enchanted last week when I picked Penn State.

Wisconsin 13½ over Iowa—Talk about living dangerously...

Michigan State minus 14½ over Northwestern—Well, there goes Wildcats' Rose Bowl hopes.

The Pros...

Giants plus seven over Cowboys—It all depends on which Giants the Cowboys are playing, the ones that beat Dallas 28-7 and Washington or the one that has been a punching bag for everybody else.

New England plus five over Denver—Broncos coming off an emotional win over Raiders.

Raiders minus two over Bears—This could deteriorate into a gang fight.

Seahawks minus 5½ over Kansas City—Looks like money in the bank.

49ers minus 10 over Bengals—It's hard to believe Bengals were in the Super Bowl just two or three seasons ago.

Miami minus seven over Jets—Air Shula strikes again.

Steelers minus 13 over Houston—It wasn't too long ago that these two teams played in pro football's toughest division.

It's Teacher vs. Student

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — The student, Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker, meets the master, University of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman, in the Astrodome tonight and you can check your morning sports page to see who won.

And if the score reflects a TCU victory, you can truthfully say that Wacker did it with mirrors.

The surprising Horned Frogs lead the nation in total offense using a mirror image of the veer offense that Yeoman fathered so many years ago (1964) and Wacker learned as a young coach in yearly visits to Cougar spring practices.

"We've never played a team that runs the veer any more like ours," said Yeoman, who beat his former student 28-21 last year in their first meeting.

Yeoman would prefer his Cougars remain the standard-bearer for the option offense, but he still takes pride in the fact that the offense he, his staff and players invented, is back on top.

"I thought they said the veer was dead but it looks pretty much alive to me," Yeoman said. "I just die laughing when people say it's dead and here the veer is leading the nation in offense."

Yeoman never tires of talking about the veer and has proven it over the years by working patiently with coaches like Wacker who are interested in learning how to average 561 yards per game as the Cougars did in 1968.

Yeoman even printed up copies of his play book and sold it, wanting to share his discovery with others.

"If you are involved with something, it's nice to see it do well and flourish," Yeoman said. "There is a great feeling of accomplishment thmre."

Wacker's copy of Yeoman's play book was worn and frayed by the time he reached TCU but it has proved a potent weapon with running back Kenneth Davis pulling the trigger. Davis is the No. 3 rusher in the country and the Horned Frogs went into Saturday's game averaging 497 yards per game, tops in the nation.

"What we have learned, we learned from Bill Yeoman and his staff," said Wacker, who fielded national championship teams at Southwest Texas State and Texas Lutheran before coming to TCU. "No staff was more helpful in setting up the things we do."

But for all his recognition as an offensive genius and his heavy clinic schedule, Yeoman modestly claims there is no real secret to the veer's success.

Chaps face Sul Ross JV

Only tuneup before tourney

From Staff Reports

Midland College launches its basketball season against Sul Ross State JV's at 7 p.m. today in the Al Langford Chaparral Center.

It will be the Chaps first and only tuneup before the eight-team Chaparral Classic beginning Thursday and continuing for three days.

Only five sophomores return to this year's MC team as Coach Jerry Stone leans heavily on incoming freshmen for his depth.

The returnees are 6-9 Teviin Binns, 6-2 Vernon Coleman, 6-3 Chuckie Graves, 6-4 Lawrence Chumbley and 6-0 Zeak Williams.

"I really don't know what to expect," says Stone. "Two of our big freshmen won't be eligible until next semester. We've been using them in all the practiecs and scrimmages with other teams, so I'm not sure how we'll look without them tonight. When they become eligible we'll be a different looking team."

One of the most improved players is Binns, who scored 28 points in leading the White team to a 62-51 win over the Green in a sneak preview intra-squad scrimmage for the fans Thursday night. Coleman had 10 points for the White while Wayne Sam, 6-2 205 from Wilmington, Calif., popped in 12 points for the Green, all from the outside. Sam could provide MC with an ingredient that was lacking last year.

Derrick Lewis, 6-7 from Fort Worth Southwest, and Graves each had 10 for the Green. Lewis is one of the freshmen who will not be eligible until after the holidays.

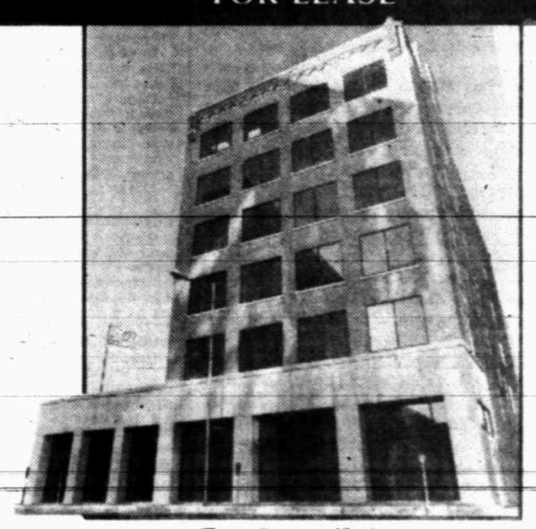

The Chaps will play tonight without freshman Leland "Pookey" Wigington, 5-5 guard from Inglewood, Calif., who suffered a knee injury in practice Wednesday.

MC last year finished with a 21-12 record and just missed making the Region V playoffs for the first time in several seasons.

Horns invade West Texas

TCU faces UH on TV

Associated Press

No. 2 ranked Texas, snorting fire and brimstone after some less than inspiring performances the last three weeks, stampedes into Lubbock's Jones Stadium at 2 p.m. today to face the young, tentative and still inconsistent Texas Tech Red Raiders.

The Steers, befitting their ranking, are 14 point favorites over the Raiders, who are 4-3-0 after a 20-17 win over Tulsa last week. The only blemish on the 5-0-1 Steers' record is a 15-15 tie with Oklahoma. However, the Steers had to hang on for dear life to stave off Arkansas, 24-18, and then posted a controversy filled 13-7 win over SMU last week.

Texas is 3-0 in SWC and Tech 2-2.

A full-house is expected (50,000-plus) at Jones Stadium, where the Steers are 9-4 over the Raiders. The series is 27-6 in favor of Texas.

Texas Tech knocked off 26-3 in 1974 in Lubbock, knocking the Horns out of the SWC title and beat Darrell Royal's last UT team 31-28 in 1976.

The Raiders and their freshman quarterback Aaron Keesee will be shooting at a 17-game Texas winning streak in SWC games.

MEANWHILE, the rest of the SWC is wondering if "Success will spoil the "smash-mouth" Texas Christian Horned Frogs?

Can they come back to reality after breaking into the Top Twenty for the first time in 22 years?

Can they beat the University of Houston for the first time, EVER?

The next chapter in their amazing SWC odyssey is in the Astrodome at Houston on today at 11:30 a.m. on Raycom TV.

Off to their best start in 26 years, the freshly ranked No. 20 Horned Frogs will be trying to beat the Cougars for the very first time in nine tries.

TCU, which adopted "smash-mouth" football as their 1984 motto, leads the nation in rushing, total offense and scoring.

And the Frogs have a bowl on their minds.

"Being in the Cotton Bowl would be nice, but after four years of pure hell, it'll be a thrill to be in any bowl besides the toilet bowl," said TCU safety Byron Linwood.

IT WAS Linwood's halftime speech that was credited with TCU rallying last week for a 38-28 victory over Baylor.

TCU is a field goal choice over Houston, which last week was knocked out of first place in the SWC race by Arkansas.

In other games, Southern Methodist is a 13-point favorite over Texas A&M at Texas Stadium; Arkansas is a 30-point selection over Rice; and Baylor is a touchdown choice over New Mexico in Waco, the final non-conference matchup of the year.

"We have found we can play with anyone," said TCU running back Kenneth Davis. "There is no goal that's out of our reach right now, except being 11-0."

TCU's only loss was to SMU earlier in the season.

Horned Frog Coach Jim Wacker is wary of the Cougars.

"There stands Houston, a super football team and one that's probably madder than a hornet after their game in Arkansas last week," said Wacker. "When Gerald Landry gets that Houston Veer to humming, it's a sight to behold. He is a magician."

Texas leads the SWC with a 3-0 record, followed by TCU and Houston at 3-1.

Arkansas, SMU and Texas Tech are tied with 2-2 ledgers followed by Baylor 2-3, Texas A&M 1-3 and Rice 0-4.

BOWL OFFICIALS have been following Texas, TCU, Houston, Arkansas and SMU.

The Aloha Bowl has taken a sudden interest in the Mustangs, but Coach Bobby Collins said his team is in a "must" situation against the Aggies.

"I don't think anyone is going to come running for us if we don't win," Collins said. "The challenge is to see how we respond after the (13-7) loss to Texas."

He added "I really think we will bounce back and be a better team."

Lacy holds 139-pin PBA lead

From Staff Reports

CLEVELAND—Midland bowler Charles Lacy took the lead in the Greater Cleveland Open Friday, coming from 71 strokes back to lead by 170 strokes over Jeff Ballinger of Columbia, S.C.

Lacy has a 216.8 average for 34 games and is 14-1-1 in match play with a pinfall of 7809. Ballinger had 7639 pins after the day session.

After Friday night's session, Lacy still had a 139 pin lead and a 19-4-1 match record as he bids for his first tour victory.

If the Texan keeps up his present pace, he will break a Professional Bowlers Association record.

The final round will be televised at 2 p.m. today on NBC-TV and Lacy will be the top seed against the other three finalists, Mike Alby, Indianapolis, last year's winner here; Gary Skidmore, Albuquerque; and Guppy Troup, Neptune Beach, Fla.

Lacy needs just one win today to wrap up the $23,000 first place prize, which would double his tour earnings.

The Question Box

By RAY CORIO
N.Y. Times News Service

QUESTION: With his team down by 2 points and only a second left in the game, a pro basketball player is fouled and awarded two free throws. He misses the first one, but just after he lofts his second foul shot, one of his teammates lines up along the foul lane, leaps, snares the ball in the air and puts it into the basket before he touches the floor. Is the basket credited to the teammate, and if so, is it worth 2 points instead of 1, thereby tying the score?

There are no points awarded on this play because the shot by the teammate is not permissible and the ball will be given to the opponent out of bounds for the game's final second. On free-throw attempts, no player from either team is allowed to catch or deflect the shot until the ball has struck the basket rim. The ball is dead and the opponent also will take possession if the ball hits neither rim nor backboard, or if it hits only the backboard without touching the rim.

QUESTION: Who were the members of the starting five for Golden State when the Warriors won the National Basketball Association championship about 10 years ago?

The Warrior team that won the title in the 1974-75 season generally started Clifford Ray at center, Rick Barry and Keith Wilkes (now Jamaal Wilkes) at forward, and Butch Beard and Charles Johnson at guard, with Jeff Mullins, Phil Smith, Derrek Dickey and Gus Johnson as the chief reserves. Barry (30.6 points a game) and Wilkes (14.2) were the top scorers. The team, coached by Al Attles, won the Pacific Division title with a 48-34 record, fourth best in the league; then eliminated Seattle in six games and Chicago in seven before sweeping the Washington Bullets in four games for the title.

QUESTION: Since divisional play was instituted in baseball in 1969, has any team swept all three games of the league championship series and then won the World Series in four games?

Only the Cincinnati Reds of 1976, managed by Sparky Anderson. They eliminated the Philadelphia Phillies for the National League pennant and then swept the World Series from Billy Martin's Yankees. The next closest to achieve the feat was the Baltimore team managed by Earl Weaver in 1970. The Orioles beat Minnesota in three straight for the American League pennant, then won the first three games of the Series from Cincinnati before losing the fourth one and winning the fifth for the title.

QUESTION: Is Tim Lollar, the San Diego Padre pitcher, a son of the former major league catcher Sherm Lollar?

They are not related, but they do have something in common: Both were with the Yankees early in their major league careers — Tim late in the 1980 season and Sherm during the 1947 and 1948 seasons. Sherman Lollar, who also was with the Cleveland Indians and the St. Louis Browns, spent 18 years in the big leagues, the last 12 with the Chicago White Sox, and finished his career with a .264 batting average, plus a .308 mark for eight World Series games. He died in 1977.

QUESTION: On appeal plays in baseball involving runners who miss bases, does someone get credit for the putout? How about assists?

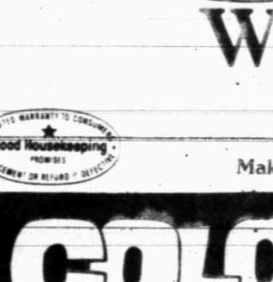

The putout will go to the player who tags the base and assists will go to the other fielders involved in getting the ball there, since the out is considered a continuation of the play. An example: A runner misses first base on a double to right and the first baseman calls for the ball after the right fielder has thrown it to the shortstop. The first baseman gets the putout, and the right fielder and shortstop get assists.

Streep meets Sting

Double Oscar winner Meryl Streep, and Sting, singer for the rock group The Police, come face to face recently while shooting a scene from the movie "Plenty." Miss Streep plays the pivotal role of Susan Traherne in the movie, directed by Fred Schepisi, from a screenplay by David Hare and based on his award-winning play. The movie will be released in 1985.

Joan Collins parodies 'Alexis' role in new made-for-TV 'Cartier Affair'

ENTERTAINMENT

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's "The Cartier Affair," reminiscent of both a 1930s-style screwball comedy and a French farce, is the funniest movie of the new television season.

In fact, as the November sweeps open, NBC might find itself laughing all the way to the Nielsen ratings bank.

"The Cartier Affair" is a caper film, but it's also a hilarious spoof of Hollywood.

Joan Collins, of ABC's red-hot "Dynasty," plays a parody of herself as the star (Cartier Rand) of a nighttime soap opera. David Hasselhoff, the hunk from NBC's "Knight Rider," pretends to be gay to get past Cartier's jealous lover when he's hired as her male secretary. He's really there to set her up for a jewelry heist to pay off a debt to a "Mr. Big" he met in prison (Telly Savalas).

Naturally, Hasselhoff's Curt Taylor is doing this under duress and falls in love with Cartier. But since he's supposed to be gay he can't reveal his true feelings. Cartier's randy maid figures she can solve his "problem," while Curt's old girlfriend, who has not one social grace, turns up in time to turn a formal dinner party into a shambles.

"It's not pie-in-the-face comedy," said executive producer Leonard Hill. "A lot depends on style. It's more like a Preston Sturges screwball film than 'Meatballs.'"

The first showing of the movie to the network might have been a scene right out of the film. "Not one network executive laughed. They were too busy looking to see if the boss laughed first," said Hill, a former ABC vice president.

He said he wasn't sure Miss Collins would accept the role because it is a self-parody.

"I kept waiting for her to say Alexis would never approve of this," he said. "But Joan's a true iconoclast. It was also a risk for David. They got along well on the set, but when it got down to the love scenes David chickened out. We were trying for something a little spicier for foreign sales and the videoscassettes. Joan was agreeable, but David said, 'I'm newly married. I can't do a nude scene with Joan Collins.'"

The project originated as "The Cartier Heist," written by Michael Devereaux. It never got off the ground, although Miss Collins was interested in it.

When Hill came into the picture, he read the script and felt it had the nucleus of a good movie. He took it to NBC and was given three weeks to come up with an acceptable script. He hired Brad Buckner and Eugenie Ross-Lemming, who had worked on "Scarecrow & Mrs. King," to do the rewrite.

"They completely changed it," said Hill. "So the project was literally resurrected from the dead."

Hill's instinct as a programmer tells him that "The Cartier Affair" is a risk, but that it could also pay off big in the ratings.

"One thing you learn in Programming 1-A," he said, "is that you always start off a sweeps month with a blockbuster movie. It used to be a big James Bond movie or a theatrical feature starting Clint Eastwood or Burt Reynolds.

"But something happened on Sunday, Feb. 11, 1978. CBS trotted out the biggest film in its inventory, the CBS network premiere of 'Gone With the Wind.' NBC had the premiere of the Oscar-winning "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." And at ABC we had a TV movie that I had fought hard to get made. It was called 'Elvis.' Of course, 'Elvis' killed them in the ratings and that started the trend toward relying on TV movies and miniseries."

"The Cartier Heist" will be up against "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" on ABC and regular programming on CBS.

Pilot: You learn as you get older or you don't get older

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — One of the most popular stars on television is a sleek hunk of power and muscle — the helicopter. Like many of Hollywood's high-priced celebrities, the chopper needs to be handled carefully, says the stunt pilot for CBS' "Airwolf" and "Magnum, P.I."

David Jones, a former Marine fighter pilot, has been flying helicopters for 25 years, the last 17 in the entertainment business. He says his own maturity and improved camera equipment and techniques have lessened the risks of flying for filming.

"We all learn as we get older, or we don't get older," he said.

The issue of safety above the set was raised in the filming of "The Twilight Zone" movie, when actor Vic Morrow and two children were killed by a helicopter crashing on them after a powerful special-effects explosion.

Involuntary manslaughter charges were filed against director John Landis and two other filmmakers. A hearing on a motion to dismiss the charges is scheduled for next week.

Jones would not comment about that case, but he knows how filmmakers can disregard safety in search of the more perfect shot.

"A director might say something ridiculous, like hover over a spot while bombs are exploding underneath," said the pilot whose film credits include "Tora, Tora, Tora," "Apocalypse Now" and "The Planet of the Apes." "He doesn't realize that the explosion could blow you out of the air."

Jones says there's no need for macho risk-taking when there's optical hocus-pocus.

"By using a long (telephoto) lens, the camera makes it look like the helicopter is part of the explosion, when it's really not that close," said Jones. "At the exact second, the helicopter sneaks off. It's all really an illusion."

When he was breaking in to the business, Jones took some silly risks. "But after seeing enough film, I realized that you couldn't tell the difference between one inch and one foot, so why go over the bomb blast? Just let the camera do the work."

TV's now-standard shots of speeding helicopters landing in moving trucks also employ video trickery. First, the director takes a wide shot of the vehicles moving at breakneck speeds, then switches to a close-up of the helicopter. Meanwhile, it's imperceptible to the viewer, but both vehicles have slowed to the same snail's pace, making the moving truck an easy target.

Educators develop new techniques to treat autism

FREEPORT, Texas (AP) — Hers is a typical elementary school classroom with tiny chairs, oversized black pencils, bright posters with cheery slogans.

Beneath a smiling Mickey Mouse, she sits at a low table, tracing the letter "J" on a ditto sheet. Next to her, a teacher's aide looks on, reaching occasionally to correct the pretty, dark-haired girl's wandering scrawl.

"No, Jennie that's not a 'J'," says Donna Clark, taking the girl's hand and pushing it through a left-handed fishhook. "Now make me a 'J', Jennie. Can you make me a 'J'?"

Jennie leans back, rolling her eyes toward the ceiling, smiling. She takes the pencil and draws a wobbly "J."

"Good girl!" Ms. Clark says, rumpling Jennie's hair. "Good girl."

What might appear to be a day in the life of a pre-schooler learning the alphabet changes abruptly when the student is examined more closely.

At 12, Jennie Garrison should be reading, not groping for individual letters. At 12, she should be deeply entrenched in her first year in junior high.

But Jennie is a student at the Brazosview Special Education Campus and she is there because she has been diagnosed as autistic.

BY STRICT definition, autism is a profound biological brain disorder occurring in the developmental years affecting the way sensory input is received. It causes severe problems of learning, communication and relationships with others.

In laymen's terms, Brazosview psychologist Richard Roy says, it is difficult, and sometimes impossible, for autistic children to organize what they see and hear into something meaningful.

To an outsider, this mental disarray gives the impression that the child is making random, meaningless actions, he says.

"We basically started finding out about autism because we had youngsters seemingly learning more information than they were giving back out," says J.B. Berryhill, Brazosport ISD director of special education. "The kids apparently could absorb information, they just couldn't do too much with it."

This one-way barrier is said to be neurological in nature and, at present, has no known cause. But it can be broken through.

In Jennie's case, responses can be evoked if the teacher or parent amplifies both voice and action in a repetitious manner.

An example is the method Kelly Carnes, Jennie's speech teacher, uses during a lesson.

MS. CARNES often has to shout to make Jennie respond. At times, she must physically draw the child's head around to force eye contact. But it works.

"I've been working with Jennie for four years now and you should see the progress," Ms. Carnes says. "She surprises me sometimes by responding to a big word that I didn't think she'd even catch."

More than that, Ms. Carnes helps instill a feeling of self-respect in Jennie and other autistic children. She treats them first as people, then as handicapped.

"Her weight goes up and down and when we walk down the hall together, I tell her to 'suck it in' and she does," Ms. Carnes says. "She knows what I'm talking about."

And recently, help has arrived from an unexpected corner. Jennie and other autistic children seem to be more interested in inanimate objects than in people, Berryhill says.

This behavior, formerly the cause of extreme frustration among teachers and parents, is now being used, via computers, to get through the autistic child's mental "barrier."

"THEY LIKE gadgets and we'd like to see if we can take their fascination with computers and teach them to interact with the computers," Berryhill says. "The computer will become the link between the mind of the child and the mind of the teacher."

At Brazosview, teachers are just becoming familiar with the computerized instruction. But already several students who exhibit autistic tendencies have made progress punching buttons and watching messages flash on the video displays.

In addition to the new computer applications and one-on-one instruction, autistic students spend time in other special education classes, where they learn to socialize with students of similar ages.

Jennie, for example, attends regular music and physical education classes.

"The important thing to remember is that these children are individuals first, autistic second," says Monte Parker, director at the Autistic Treatment Center in San Antonio. "What may work for one student might not for another. There is no overall formula for success."

Currently, behavior modification, such as teaching Jennie to respond to stimulus, is the most common approach in dealing with autistic children, Parker says.

"TWENTY YEARS ago, autism was considered an emotional disorder, caused by what they called 'refrigerator mothers,' career women who didn't give their children enough love," Parker says. "This was supposed to leave the kids with no desire to take part in the world."

Ernest Caruso of Quincy, Mass., rests on a headstone at Mount Wallston Cemetery, awaiting his chance to buy a plot.

They waited all night to buy cemetery plots

Associated Press

QUINCY, Mass. — What better place to sit all Halloween night than among the tombstones of a cemetery?

Scores of Quincy residents did just that, as they waited at Mount Wollaston Cemetery for a first-come, first-served grave sale: $600 for a two-grave plot, limit four graves to a customer.

"I want to be buried here at Mount Wollaston," said Beverly Reinhard, who arrived at 3 p.m. Wednesday to become first in line. "I wouldn't be caught dead anywhere else."

By the time the cemetery's first sale in 11 years began at 8 a.m. Thursday, about 200 people, each clutching a numbered ticket to determine their priority and some seated comfortably on lawn chairs, were in the cemetery.

"It is kind of a strange place to spend Halloween," said police Capt. William Murphy, who reported no trouble or spooks at the cemetery during the night.

By the end of the day, all 312 plots in a new section of the city-owned cemetery were sold, with 12 potential customers turned away, said cemetery superintendent J. Vincent Smyth.

An elderly man who got his plot first inquired about the price, then remarked, "I need one, fast."

A woman cheerfully left the cemetery office after buying hers and set off in the direction of her lot. She remarked, "I'm going to check my piece of real estate."

A latecomer was told one of the few plots left was near a drain.

"It's the story of my life," he said, as he agreed to the purchase. "I'm going down the drain again."

Guy Chella, 69, who said he usually went to bed after the 11 p.m. television news, arrived at 2 a.m. His parents, his wife's parents, his brother and two sisters are buried in the cemetery.

Collection of collections keeps old hobbyist busy

Associated Press

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — He sits in a small room, surrounded by the fruits of many hobbies — more than 50, he says. And the evidence of his dedication to them is everywhere.

Watercolor paintings are stacked in a corner, a stamp collection occupies many binders in a bookcase, sheet music is spread across the piano. Various letters lie waiting for the postman, and the bookshelves are taken up with the accumulations of a lifetime.

The collections are amazing, but no more so than the man himself, now "80-plus" years old. Despite the limitations of age and the effects of a stroke several years ago, J. Neal Griffith keeps busy with his hobbies.

He doesn't mind being old, he says, "except for the inconvenience."

He can play the piano with only one hand now, and that limits his repertoire to a left-hand arrangement of "Londonderry Air." His painting is likewise limited, but recent works include a series of posters done for the bicentennial of the Methodist Church.

He taps out letters with one hand on his typewriter, and still works on an extensive stamp collection begun 60 years ago. In the last two years, he's written two books — one a biography of Linton Park, a renowned artist, and the other a compilation of original verses and sketches.

In the presence of these lifelong avocations, Griffith settles into a chair and recounts the story of one of his most prized possessions, an extensive autograph collection recently donated to the library at Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

"I've collected stamps for 60 years, and through them, I got interested in postmarks," he explained. "One night, I was sitting listening to the radio out at Clearfield and they said they were going to have a number played on the radio program by a young artist. I liked it real well."

The young artist was George Gershwin, and the number he played was "Rhapsody in Blue." The impression Gershwin's music made on Griffith, coupled with a postcard from Blue, Ariz., marked the start of a 40-year hobby that resulted in more than 7,000 autographs.

"I had on my desk a postcard from Blue, Ariz., and I thought, 'I wonder if he'd autograph that,'" Griffith said. Gershwin obliged.

A month later, Griffith said, he read an account of George Washington Carver's work in a Sunday school paper. The article dealt with Carver's experiments with peanuts and sweet potatoes and their effect on nutrition in the South.

After a futile search for a "Peanut" postmark, Griffith settled on a card from Sweet, Idaho, which Carver signed.

One signature led to another, and Griffith began to actively seek out autographs. A director of U.S. post offices helped him match the individuals with a suitable postmark.

"After a while, it just got into the business that whenever I saw a person's address, I'd look up to see if I could find a card for them," he said.

A card from Homer, N.Y., went to baseball great Babe Ruth because "he was 'King of Swat,' the home run king." Another went to film actress Greer Garson when she starred in "Pride and Prejudice."

The manufacture of imitations is a major industry. Everything is available from imitation meat to diamonds with such brilliance they fool everyone except a wife who knows you can't afford a real one that size!

People imitate people. Ever hear someone say, "I'm as good as he is"? The standard for living is God. "Therefore be imitators of God." Ephesians 5:1

Expert gives new theory on dinosaurs' extinction

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — One of the world's leading fossil experts says dinosaurs died out gradually over millions of years because they couldn't find food during a cooling of the Earth, an idea that contradicts the theory that the beasts were annihilated by a sudden catastrophe.

William A. Clemens, a professor of paleontology at the University of California at Berkeley, said in an interview that 10 years' research convinced him the prehistoric creatures became extinct during a period of 5 million to 7 million years.

Clemens, a curator of the university's Museum of Paleontology, developed his theory by studying fossils at "Bug Creek" in eastern Montana.

"We've got the most refined record of what happened at that time than any place in the world," Clemens said. "We've got one window to see what happened in a global situation...What we see through our 'window' suggests gradual change" for the immense reptiles that ruled the planet for more than 150 million years.

Clemens planned to present his theory today at the annual meeting of the Society of Vertebrate Paleontology.

His hypothesis contrasts with another, backed mainly by geologists, that contends a huge cloud of dust was raised by an extraterrestrial body smashing into Earth. The cloud so changed the environment that dinosaurs vanished in a relatively short span — within a few thousand years or less.

Walter Alvarez, a geology professor at the university, said he believes a space-born catastrophe killed the dinosaurs. The theory stems largely from the discovery of iridium in rocks formed around the time when the dinosaurs disappeared, known as the Cretaceous-Tertiary boundary period.

Iridium is found in asteroids as well as on Earth.

Alvarez and others say an asteroid smashing into Earth would have kicked up so much dust that the sun would have been blotted out, causing a temporary collapse of the food chain.

In March, Alvarez wrote in Science magazine, "We have an enormous amount of evidence showing that an asteroid or comet hit the Earth 65 million years ago...and was in some way responsible for the extinction of the dinosaurs, and many other kinds of animals and plants."

Clemens says that theory fails to explain the survival of so many other species, including fish, lizards and turtles, and the early ancestors of today's mammals.

"The asteroid hypotheses," said Clemens, "calls for such severe changes in the environment in a matter of a few days, months or years...you just (would) expect other kinds of animals to almost totally go extinct...there would have been devastation in the (geological) record, and there isn't."

But Alvarez said Thursday he supports the catastrophe theory today more strongly than he did when it surfaced four years ago, and he is convinced "that an impact did occur."

Alvarez said the material Clemens used is not new.

"Bill Clemens appears to be using the same information available (to him) in 1980...I don't see anything new," he said.

Clemens said only two kinds of animals died out in the period — dinosaurs and flying reptiles. Marsupials almost became extinct.

Iraq rebuilds nerve gas stockpile, U.S. officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq has rebuilt a substantial stockpile of nerve gas and other chemical weapons for possible use against Iran in their four-year-old war, U.S. officials said Friday.

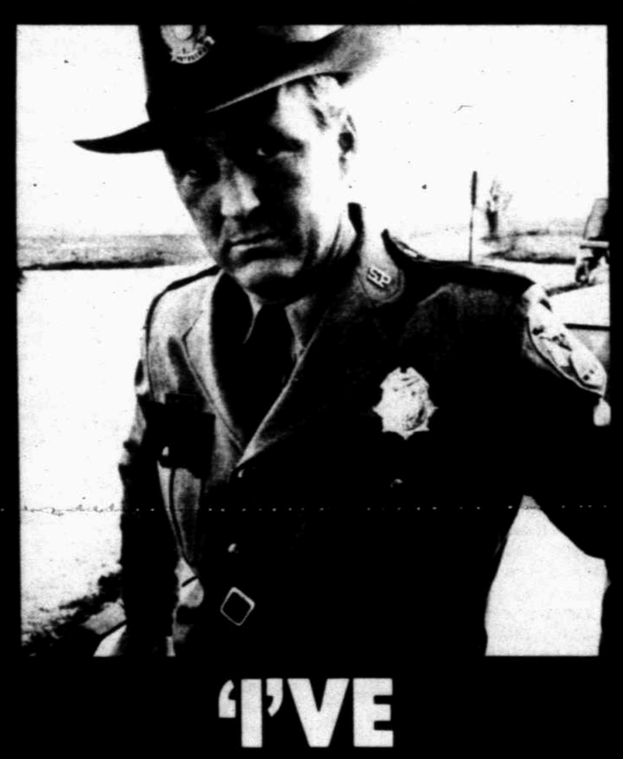

The United States previously alleged that Iraq used chemical weapons, including deadly nerve gas, to help turn back a major assault by Iranian ground troops last March.

The Iraqis used almost all their stocks of chemical weapons at that time, but since then have massed "significant stocks" of gas weapons in preparation for another Iranian attack, said the officials, who spoke only on condition that they not be identified.

The Iraqis have stockpiled mustard gas, which was widely used in World War I, and the nerve gas Tabun, a far more potent chemical agent which they used against Iran last March, the first time it is believed that nerve gas has been employed in combat, the officials said.

Responding to charges by the United States and Iran, the United Nations investigated and the U.N. Security Council condemned the use of chemical weapons in the war, although it did not name Iraq specifically.

For its part, the United States imposed strict controls on the export to Iraq or Iran of any compounds that could be used to make chemical weapons.

"I'VE NEVER UNBUCKLED A DEAD MAN!"

"No matter how tough a policeman thinks he is, he's never ready for the first highway fatality he sees. Mine was here 11 years ago. I had a 6-year-old die in my arms. It still wakes me up some nights. She'd be about 17 today if her mother had made her wear her safety belt. Safety belts can save more than 16,000 lives each year. In those 11 years I've never unbuckled a dead man."

Old church preserves Christ's language

RELIGION

By EARLEEN F. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — When Jally Ibrahim was a little boy, his parents spoke to him in Aramaic, the language used by Jesus in this same city nearly 2,000 years ago.

Today the 41-year-old jeweler remembers little of the ancient tongue.

"I use it only in church," said Ibrahim, a member of Jerusalem's dwindling community of Syrian Orthodox Christians.

Every Sunday morning, the resonant tones of Aramaic pour forth from a small, stone chapel inside the Church of the Holy Sepulcher as a priest, grey-haired deacons and young altar boys recite the prayers and liturgy of their ancient sect.

But only the grandmothers and the grandfathers, like 72-year-old Joseph Khazmo, still speak Aramaic as a living language, one in which they discuss the daily marketing and neighborhood gossip in Jerusalem's old, walled city.

"I speak Aramaic with people my age," Khazmo said. "But with my children, I must speak Arabic. They do not know Aramaic."

"The problem is school," Ibrahim said, sipping coffee in his small shop on the Via Dolorosa, which Christian tradition says is the route taken by Christ on his way to Calvary. "We no longer have our own school, where our children can learn to read and write Aramaic."

The decline of the Aramaic schools coincided with the Arab-Israeli wars since 1948 and the tremendous upheaval of people in this city which is sacred to the world's three great monotheistic religions — Judaism, Christianity and Islam.

In 1948, when the new state of Israel was born amid the flames of war, the Syrian Orthodox community in Jerusalem numbered about 2,000 families. But its school, in which all 12 grades learned English, Arabic and Aramaic, was in West Jerusalem, the Jewish sector of the city.

Most of the Syrian Orthodox families in the western part of the city fled to Jordanian-ruled East Jerusalem, and many continued on to Europe, Australia and the United States.

A new school, for the six primary grades, reopened in East Jerusalem. It closed in 1967, during the war when Israel captured the West Bank of the Jordan River and more people fled.

Today, Jerusalem's Syrian Orthodox community numbers only 100 families, about 360 people.

POSITIVE THINKING

'Know thyself' beginning of wisdom

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Socrates said, "Know thyself." That is the beginning of wisdom, the beginning of power. Do you really know yourself? Are you aware of the potential within you? Chances are that you, like most of us, are living on only a portion of the power you actually have.

Once we had in this country a great psychologist, William James. He said that there's in all of us what he called the first layer of fatigue. We drive and work until we come to this point and then we say, "I am so tired. I haven't the energy to go beyond this." All our activity, therefore, is within the limitation of this first barrier of fatigue. We operate below it. But William James said that there is within us, beyond the first barrier of our fatigue, an illimitable force. So, if we have sufficient knowledge of ourselves, we can come up to this barrier of fatigue and then drive through it into an area of new energy and power.

"The people who do really great things in this world," said William James, "are those who drive past the first layer of fatigue."

Watch a man or woman running a race. You can see them beginning to tire; their legs become heavy. Then, as the crowd cheers them on, all of a sudden you see them get a new access of strength. The legs are no longer leaden. Ther speed picks up. "That," William James would have said, "is on the other side of the barrier of fatigue."

I remember years ago in Syracuse University tutoring a boy who was failing. I was working with him because the athletic authorities wanted him for the football team. His popularity with the cheering section was not equaled by the faculty, and something had to be done about his marks.

"I can't get this stuff," he said. "I just haven't it in me."

"Listen, Fred," I said, "you are a big, fine-looking, husky specimen of man. Don't tell me you are all body, all bone, with no head. You can handle anything taught in the classroom."

"What would you do about it?" he asked glumly.

"Do you know what I would do if I were you?" I answered. "I would quit being defeated. I would quit being negative. I would quit seeing myself as mentally ineffective. Tell you what, Fred. Get some faith, faith in God and in yourself, too." And I added, "If I were you I would get converted. Get God into your head. He can make something of you that will make you as spectacular in the classroom as in the stadium."

"How do I get God into my head?" he asked.

I thought a minute than said, "O.K., just commit the following to memory and say it every time you go to class. But you've got to study, too. 'That which is impossible with men is possible with God. All things are possible with God.'"

"O.K.," he said, "I'll do it." And he did, sincerely.

Some time later he came to see me. "I'm scared to death," he told me.

"What is the matter?" I asked.

"Look at this paper!" He held it out to me. "See there, I got 85 on that examination! It can't last."

"Boy," I said, "you are only just beginning to discover your power."

What had happened? He had gone beyond that barrier which self-doubt had set up. He had penetrated his negative level and found on the other side new power. Actually this man got the feel of scholarship so much so that he became a good student. We can break through our barriers.

Grace Chapel to screen Schaeffer's film series

The film series, "Reclaiming the World," by the late Dr. Francis Schaeffer, will be shown at Grace Chapel at 7 p.m. Nov. 9-10.

A noted philosopher and author, Dr. Schaeffer released this series of intimate conversations in which he applied the basics of biblical truth to contemporary issues. In a series of 10 episodes, Dr. Schaeffer discussed how Christians can reclaim the world as they challenge their society with basic spiritual guidelines and principles. He shared why he was a Christian, the present effects of humanism on our lifestyle and the challenge of the separation of church and state in the first portion of the series.

In the second portion, Dr. Schaeffer discussed God's authority and our responsibility in the world; what is the church; and the nature of conversion and evangelism as he challenged his audiences to reclaim a proper scriptural perspective on the institutional church.

The third portion challenges all Christians to reclaim a sense of their own personal lives. In two episodes, Francis is joined by Edith Schaeffer as together they discuss how to live with suffering and sickness, and how God has led them in a worldwide ministry to young intellectuals who search for a base upon which to frame their beliefs in life.

The film showings are free and open to the public. Total length of the 10 episodes is five hours. For information concerning the place ofmeeting or additional details concerning the series call 694-3413.

White slams unaired GOP ad

Associated Press

A Republican advertisement rejected in El Paso tried to "intimidate" Hispanics by warning them about a list of illegally registered voters who could be arrested if they tried to vote, Democratic Gov. Mark White said Friday.

White slammed the ad, which has not aired, as "the most cynical activity since the Watergate era."

Texas Republican Party spokesman Byron Nelson said the ad, proposed by a volunteer arm of the party, had been rejected by state GOP officials because of its "tone."

According to a translation of the Spanish ad, distributed by White, the ad said:

"Pay attention to this important announcement. The election security officials have identified over 300 illegal registration cards. There will be a list with the names of those people at the polling places, and the penalty for voting illegally is imprisonment and/or fine.

"If you are legally registered, please vote. But if you are not a citizen of the United States or if you are not registered legally, do not vote. You will be identified."

Gwen Pascoe, El Paso County assistant elections supervisor, said Friday, "We're not aware that we have any illegal voter registration cards."

White showed a KINT-TV, El Paso, contract that said the ad would be paid for by Victory '84, a Republican organization.

KINT station manager Jose Silva said he refused to produce the ad because it might be misleading to viewers.

Nelson said the ad had been given "preliminary approval" by GOP officials.

"But when it got up to us we rejected it. When we reviewed it, we said, 'No, absolutely not,'" said Nelson. "No money was ever sent. No spot was ever done."

"We did not like the ad. We did not like the tone," he said. "It never would have aired with our money."

White called the ad part of an "organized campaign, tied to the Texas Republican Party, (GOP U.S. Senate candidate) Phil Gramm and others involving threats and intimidation tactics aimed at minority voters in our state."

The ad is part of "crass and reprehensible tactics here in Texas to keep people in certain communities from exercising their constitutional and hard-fought right to vote," he said. "If it is not a federal crime under the Voting Rights Act, it is at best the most cynical activity since the Watergate era."

Democrat Lloyd Doggett, Gramm's opponent in the Tuesday election, called the ad "the same old Phil Gramm, ultra-right wing, Republican campaign that says Hispanics are good enough to die for our country...but they're not good enough to select the candidate for the U.S. Senate."

Gramm said, "I repudiate any effort to intimidate any voter. I hope the governor is as committed to opposing vote fraud as I am."

Doggett made several campaign stops Friday, including Galveston, Austin and Waco.

In Austin, his hometown, he said his polls show he goes into Election Day "in the same position Gov. White did when he went in behind" Gov. Bill Clements in 1982. White won an upset victory despite polls giving Clements a healthy lead.

"It's going to be just a squeaker," Doggett predicted.

The National Rifle Association, backing Gramm, said in a Friday release Doggett has tried "to portray the flounder on firearms and hunting issues."

Like the flounder, Doggett tries "to give a different look on each side — one for Texas firearms owners and hunters, and another for the gun control advocates in the ranks of his supporters," the statement said.

The NRA called Gramm "responsive to the concerns of Texas sportsmen."

Texas Baptists decide not to oppose women's ordination

Delegates:..passed a resolutionon "appreciation of women" in which they expressed support for "those women who labor for the Lord and the churches in places of special service to which God has called them."

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Baptists have decided not to back the Southern Baptist Convention in opposing the ordination of women, claiming all believers are equal in the sight of God.

While not endorsing the idea of women serving as ministers, delegates to the convention passed a resolution on "appreciation of women" in which they expressed support for "those women who labor for the Lord and the churches in places of special service to which God has called them."

Delegates to the Baptist General Convention of Texas voted Thursday to affirm the "autonomy of local churches." They also declared that "all believers, whether ordained or not, have equal status in the Kingdom of God."

That feeling emerged in a conciliatory resolution that draws on the Baptist tradition of congregational independence and the universal "priesthood" of believers.

Both votes came on the final session of a generally harmonious, three3-day annual meeting of the 2.4 million-member state convention.

At the national convention of Southern Baptists this summer in Kansas City, Mo., fundamentalists successfully introduced a resolution denouncing ordination of women on the grounds that Eve caused the fall of mankind by tempting Adam.

That resolution only expressed an opinion and could not halt any ordinations, which in the Baptist church are handled by individual congregations.

But the Texas convention declined to join in the negative view.

And in a press conference after his re-election Wednesday as president of Texas Baptists, the Rev. Winfred Moore of Amarillo said the fundamentalist who now serves as president of the Southern Baptist Convention should not be re-elected to a second term.

The Rev. Charles Stanley of Atlanta was nominated to head the Southern Baptists by a conservative element that believes in the infallibility of the Bible and has won control of most denominational offices.

Moderate Baptists do not believe strictly in the Bible's inerrancy, but say it is the infallible word of God.

Moore, whose name has often been mention as a candidate to oppose Stanley if he seeks a second one-year term, says the two groups are not that far apart theologically and could be unified under the right leadership.

Moore said Stanley has lost support of the moderates by allowing himself to become involved with the conservative element to the exclusion of others.

"We need somebody (as national president) that both sides would accept and follow," Moore said at the news conference. "Charles Stanley is not the man."

Stanley responded Thursday to Moore's charges. In Dallas for a speaking engagement, Stanley said he has not decided whether to seek a second term, but added that if he is not the man to unite the divisions within the Southern Baptist churches, he would like to know who could do it better.

"I would just ask (Moore) who he had in mind."

Stanley also criticized recent statements made by two seminary presidents who have denounced political tactics of the fundamentalists. Roy Honeycutt, president of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky., recently called for a "holy war" against fundamentalist takeover of Baptist insitutions.

In other matters Thursday, delegates to the state convention:

— adopted a record $60 million budget for the coming year.

— decided to change the name of Dallas Baptist College to Dallas Baptist University.

— urged the Texas Legislature to reject "pari-mutuel race track gambling bills, lottery, casino and dog racing pari-mutuel gambling ... (and) any other gambling bills that are proposed."

Austin to buy manure-generated power

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White praised the city of Austin Friday for agreeing to buy a sizeable amount of electric power that will be generated from manure left in Panhandle feedlots.

"This contract will contribute substantially to creation of a competitive electric generating industry for Texas, a goal of the state and its leaders, resulting in lower costs for consumers in Austin and around the state," White said during a Capitol ceremony.

"Texas agriculture has energy to burn and that's no B.S.," said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, who presented White with a plastic bag of manure direct from a cattle feeding lot.

Austin Mayor Ron Mullen and Dallas businessman Ed Cox Jr. signed a contract for Austin to purchase 100 megawatts of power annually produced by Cox' Valley View biomass electric generation plant near Hereford. The plant will be fueled by manure collected from feedlots throughout the Panhandle.

Hightower said the energy contained in the one-pound bag of manure more than equaled the energy in a bag of lignite of the same weight.

Mullen stressed that Austin will not have to pay a cent until the power is delivered to Austin.

White congratulated the Southwest Public Service and Central and Southwest utility systems for allowing the Valley View power to be transmitted over their lines.

White said he had informed the Public Utility Commission that he wanted to know about all instances of noncooperation before the 1985 Legislature begins.

Prison guard knifed through bars of cell

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas prison inmate reached through the bars of his cell and stabbed a guard with a homemade knife early Friday, a prison spokesman said.

Brian Coon, an officer at the Coffield Unit near Palestine, was stabbed in the stomach about 4:55 a.m. as he was serving meals to inmates in their cells at the prison's administrative segregation section, spokesman Charles Brown said.

Brown said Coon, 20, was treated at Anderson County Memorial Hospital for a wound made with a 12-inch knife. Texas Department of Corrections officials and sheriff's department officers were investigating the assault.

Coon became the eighth person in two days to be assaulted in a Texas prison unit, Brown said.

Another inmate, Charles Forsythe, 30, was hospitalized with a broken collarbone after a section of roof collapsed Thursday at a garment factory at the Eastham Unit near Lovelady, chief prison spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

"Apparently, a connector holding a beam at a reinforcing support column gave way," Guthrie said.

Guthrie said the roof sagged, dumping metal and concrete into the factory at the unit, near Lovelady. A section about 40 feet by 60 feet was sagging into the factory, he said.

About 260 inmates and nine prison employees were working in the factory at the time.

"It could have been real bad," Guthrie said. He said the connector failure was being investigated by the prison's construction division.

About 160 inmates were still locked in their cells Friday after six Coffield Unit prisoners stabbed three others, Brown said.

The three injured were stabbed in front of the unit cellblock at about 7 p.m. Thursday after prison officers opened the cell doors for supper, Brown said.

Six inmates suspected in the attacks were placed in detention, and prison officers recovered five homemade knives, Brown said.

Computer buff gains access to prince's electronic mail

LONDON (AP) — A teen-age computer buff gained access to the personal electronic mail of Britain's Prince Philip and showed a reporter how he could falsify a key financial market table, a London newspaper reported Friday.

The Daily Mail said its reporter watched the unidentified youth infiltrate a state-owned telephone company computer Thursday night to browse over the prince's mail, including a message of congratulations for him to pass to Princess Diana on her 23rd birthday last July 1.

The "hacker," jargon for computer eavesdropper, also breached the private files of a London stockbroker, and altered another display to give a false reading of the dollar-pound exchange rate, the daily claimed.

Reporter Peter Sheridan said he sat in a west London apartment Thursday night and watched the 19-year-old use a $250 personal computer and an ordinary television set to change the computer files of British Telecom's Prestel Information Service.

Earlier this week, the youth and two of his friends gained access to the computer's secret user access codes, the paper said. It did not say how the system was breached.

British Telecom said Friday that the company had been aware of a breach of computer security for over a week, that Prestel had issued new codes to information providers, and that all customers had been advised to change their passwords.

"We did take all steps to seal that breach," said a company spokesman, who spoke on condition he was not identified. But he could not explain how hackers could have entered the new system.

The spokesman said he would not comment on the reported incidents because the company was still investigating.

The paper said the hacker left a false message purporting to be from Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, to the Prestel systems editor saying, "I do so enjoy puzzles and games. Ta ta! Pip pip!" and signed, "HR Hacker." HRH stands for His Royal Highness, the prince's official title.

A Buckingham Palace spokeswoman, who also insisted on anonymity before speaking, confirmed that Philip owns a Prestel account, "but we don't know anything about this alleged incident."

The paper said the hacker took less than a minute to break into the files of London stockbrokers Hoare Govett and read a message from a client wanting confidential advice on investing $1,200 in British Telecom, which is to begin selling its stock to the public later this month.

It published a photo of a message he flashed to Prestel falsifying the Financial Times newspaper's foreign exchange rates. It said "FT Newsflash, 1 (pound) equals $50." The British pound is actually worth slightly under $1.25.

Mobster to be sent to U.S., media reports

ROME (AP) — Italian authorities decided Friday to send a key Mafia mobster turned informer to the United States to face drug-related charges, Italian media reported.

The Italian news agency ANSA and state-run RAI television, quoting unnamed judicial sources, said jailed crime boss Tommaso Buscetta would leave for the United States as early as next week. They said he would face charges in connection with ties fo the American Mafia's drug trafficking networks.

ANSA also said Buscetta might cooperate with U.S. officials investigating the secret crime society's connections in the United States.

However, another Italian news agency, AGI, quoted judicial sources as denying the extradition had been cleared, instead saying that Buscetta would remain in Italy "at least for the time being."

AGI said without elaboration that the U.S. extradition request would have to be cleared first with the Brazilian government. American authorities had sought Buscetta's extradition from Brazil before that South American nation sent the crime boss to Italy on July 15.

U.S. Embassy officials contacted by The Associated Press said they knew of the report but refused to discuss Buscetta's extradition.

The Justice Ministry released no public statement on the extradition. Justice Ministry officials in charge of the case were out of their offices and could not be reached despite repeated telephone calls.

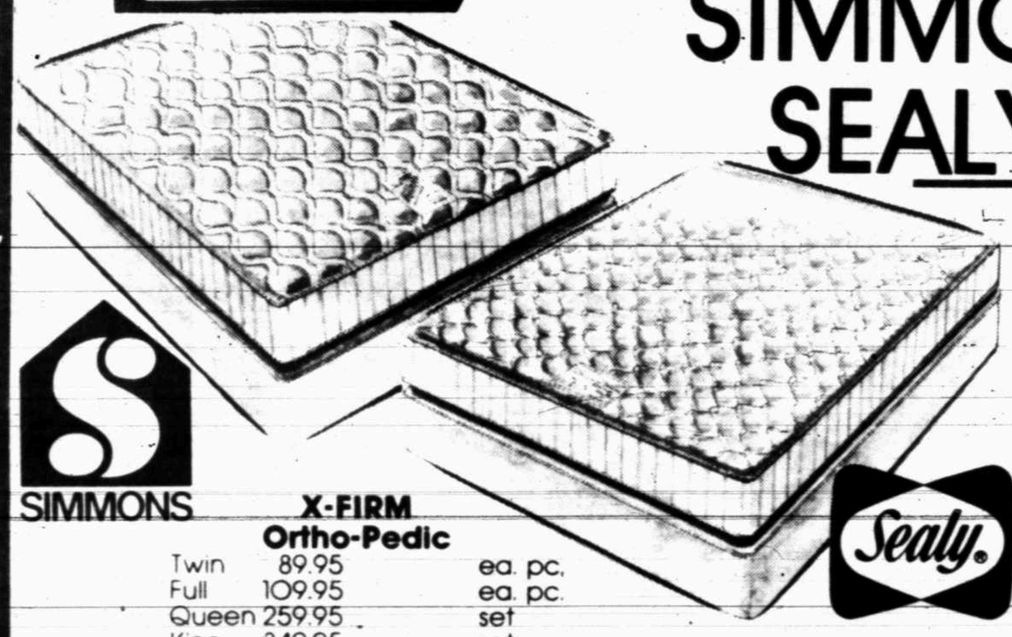

Buscetta's confessions have triggered massive anti-Mafia crackdowns that U.S. Attorney General William French Smith has called "the single most devastating assault" to date on the crime syndicate.

In two major sweeps in Italy in late September and October, police arrested more than 100 Mafia suspects and issued warrants for nearly 250 others, most of whom were already being detained in Italian jails.

And the testimony by Buscetta, a 56-year-old Sicilian, has put American authorities on the trail of other mobsters in the United States.

Child playing with matches starts fire that kills girl, injures others

LONG BEACH, N.Y. (AP) — A child playing with matches caused an apartment house fire that killed a 4-year-old girl and injured more than a dozen others, and forced evacuation of more than 200 people, fire officials said Friday.

Fire Marshal Robert Doran did not say which child may have been playing with matches but concluded the fire was caused by "a juvenile playing with matches," said Fire Department Supervisor Charles Parker.

The late night fire moved up from the second floor and there were "people screaming for help, trapped on the upper floors," said Fire Chief James Moriarty. "It's nothing short of a miracle there are not more injured or dead."

PCB-laden gasoline dumped in river

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Floating booms were placed across a creek to stop up to 2,000 gallons of PCB-laden gasoline from flowing into the San Gabriel River and Long Beach Harbor, and authorities said they had not found the source of the spill.

"Someone went out there and dumped the chemicals there," Los Angeles County fire spokesman Frank McCarthy said late Thursday. No serious injuries were reported, but several people in the neighborhood complained of headaches and throat irritation, he said.

Tests showed the spilled liquid contained polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCB, a colorless, odorless liquid used in various industrial processes that has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

Paper to stop taking Playboy ads

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The staff of The Daily Californian student newspaper has voted to refuse advertisements from Playboy magazine, a move that means a possible loss of $3,500 through the end of the school year.

An editorial in Wednesday's edition of the paper said the staff, which voted 25-11 to discontinue the ads, "proved unwilling to compromise a moral aversion to sexism."

Daily Cal advertising manager Elizabeth Constantine said the paper charged $500 for each of the ads, which ran once a month. The newspaper, although staffed mostly by University of California students, is not university-affiliated.

Bible groups banned from schools

HUDSONVILLE, Mich. (AP) — The local board of education, warned by state officials that "Bible clubs" during school hours would spur legal action, has banned the study groups from six elementary schools.

The board unanimously voted Thursday night to withdraw permission for Bible Centered Ministries to conduct the Bible clubs during the noon hour.

The board had voted Oct. 11 to continue the Bible clubs despite the threat of an injunction similiar to one issued by U.S. District Judge Richard Enslen against the Tri-County School District. He ruled that the Howard City-based district violated the constitutional principle of church-state separation by allowing the clubs to meet on school grounds at noon.

Tax protesters held without bail

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Two tax protesters were ordered held without bail after authorities seized "substantial caches of explosives," firearms, ammunition and tax protest literature from their homes.

U.S. Attorney James M. Rosenbaum said the investigation by a federal task force was set up when authorities learned of threats against Internal Revenue Service employees in the Bemidji area.

Wilhelm Ernest Schmitt, 55, of Bemidji, and Roger Luther, 46, of rural Nevis, appeared Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Brian Short. Schmitt was charged with assaulting a federal officer and resisting arrest, unlawful possession of an unregistered automatic weapon and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. Luther was charged with unlawful possession of three unregistered firearms.

Ex-federal official sentenced in murder plot

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A federal judge Friday sentenced a former Agency for International Development official to 10 years in prison for plotting to kill a Saudi Arabian sheik.

Judge Albert V. Bryan Jr. imposed the prison term on Walter Reed Martindale III, who insisted on his innocence but told the judge he was "willing to accept any sentence you wish to give me."

Martindale, 41, was convicted last month of passport and firearms violations as part of a plot to assassinate Mohammed Fassi, a member of the Saudi royal family.

Paul R. Kramer, Martindale's lawyer, asked Bryan to impose a sentence of probation and community service among Vietnamese refugees — since the defendant had worked for AID in Vietnam before the communists took over that country.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Justin Williams said Martindale planned a "cold-blooded and ruthless act" that deserved a substantial prison term.

Martindale was allowed to remain free on $25,000 bond pending an appeal that Kramer said he would file.

The judge technically gave Martindale a 21-year prison sentence on seven counts but said only 10 years had to be served.

Martindale, of Fairfax County, Va., was arrested a year ago after taking a semi-automatic rifle to London. As a result of that arrest and Martindale's subsequent conviction, the federal government launched an investigation that resulted in the indictment that outlined the murder plot to kill Fassi.

Kramer, the defense attorney, told Bryan that Martindale served in Vietnam while in the military and returned to that country as an AID official. Just before the communists took over, Kramer said, Martindale "led a column of people who served the United States and were in imminent danger through the lines" enabling them to be evacuated.

Martindale was "one of the last to leave in a helicopter from the top of a building," he said.

The judge, however, said Martindale's exemplary record does not excuse his conduct in the murder plot.

Baby sitter, twin 2-year-old boys found shot to death

ARLINGTON, Kan. (AP) — Twin 2-year-old boys and their baby sitter were found shot to death in a creekbed in thick woods, three days after they disappeared leaving lunch untouched on the stove, authorities said Friday.

The victims were identified Friday as 18-year-old Tammey Mooney and twins Andy and James Vogelsang, who disappeared from the boys' home Monday afternoon, Reno County Sheriff Jim Fountain said.

Authorities closed off the densely wooded area to prevent anyone from trampling the evidence after the bodies were found Thursday night.

"It's hell. It's just living hell. Everybody's just broke down and nobody knows what to do," a friend of the Mooney family, Larry Travis, said Thursday night.

The boys were wearing sleeper pajamas when they disappeared. There were no signs of foul play in the house, but their shoes and jackets were left behind and a lunch the baby sitter had been preparing was untouched on the stove.

The three victims probably were killed Monday afternoon, Fountain said.

"The evidence is going to be terrifically hard to get out because of the undergrowth," Fountain said, noting weeds and grass in the area were chest high and higher. "We don't want anybody to mess up the crime scene. We want to try for a quick arrest."

The bodies were discovered by Randy Smith, of Arlington, and his wife, about 1½ miles from the Vogelsang's residence, said Fountain. Smith had volunteered to search the area because he had been hunting there for five years and "knew it better than anyone else," Fountain said.

Smith is the brother-in-law of Miss Mooney's brother, Roy, family members said.

Arlington, population 634, is about 60 miles northwest of Wichita.

Officer charged with extortion, racketeering

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A police chief inspector has been suspended "with intention to dismiss" after being implicated in a pattern of police extortion by a former officer who pleaded guilty before his trial on corruption charges.

Philadelphia Police Commissioner Gregore J. Sambor said Thursday he suspended Eugene J. Sullivan on the basis of testimony by former vice officer George Bowie, who admitted taking bribes from operators of illegal video poker machines and and said he passed the money on to Sullivan.

Bowie pleaded guilty Thursday to charges of racketeering, conspiracy and extortion before U.S. District Judge Daniel H. Huyett 3rd.

Bowie, 37, has agreed to testify in the trial of seven former officers, scheduled to begin next week. He had been scheduled to stand trial with the seven officers.

The officers have been charged as part of a continuing, three-year federal investigation into police corruption in the nation's fifth largest city. Sixteen former officers, including the one-time No. 2 policeman in the city, have been convicted or have pleaded guilty in the past year.

Sullivan, 62, a 35-year veteran of the police force, holds the top civil service rank in the department.

"It is one of those things that are the unhappy portion of a person's job," Sambor said of his notice to Sullivan that the inspector would be suspended for 30 days and then dismissed.

Sambor said he could lift Sullivan's suspension if Bowie's allegations "are not reaffirmed" by court testimony.

The commissioner said the action was justified in light of the circumstances.

"To me, sworn testimony in court is incriminating evidence," he said. "It is evidence, and as such I feel that I am compelled...to take those steps."

Bowie was among 15 current or former policemen indicted in April on charges resulting from the federal investigation.

Seven of those indicted, including former Deputy Commissioner James J. Martin and former Chief Inspector Joseph DePeri, were convicted in August of racketeering and extortion. The others were to have gone on trial in September, but their trial was rescheduled.

During the trial of Martin and his six codefendants, admitted numbers banker and video poker machine distributor Lester Barry said he made payoffs to Bowie and other officers.

To Lease or Not To Lease

Reasons To Lease:

1. Leasing is convenient – you only pay for what you use and not for the full price of the car.
2. There is no used car to dispose of at lease end.
3. Leasing frees your cash and you can use your available bank line of credit for other purposes.
4. Lessee – leasing for business purposes will have the benefit of simplified tax records.

MOVE in for $500, assume loan, nice 3 bedroom house. 1802 E. Magnolia. $33,000. 697-0969.

If you're looking for a house to be a home, look at me! My kids have all grown up and moved. I have 4 bedroom... No music playing, no laughter. A lovely kitchen with double ovens, stainless steel countertop stove, brick wall... No one cooks much anymore. My dishwasher is hardly ever used. I have ceiling fans in every room. I have a covered, carpeted, screened-in patio that use to rock with parties; big shade trees, a barbeque grill and a rock water fall for fun in the backyard... Now it's all quiet. Just 2 old grumpy people sit around here. Please, look at ME! I'm under $70,000. 684-8412, 697-1858.
