Yeltsin assures Baker on nuclear weapon control

(AP Laserphoto)

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III, left, gives a time-out hand sign to reporters at an impromptu press conference Monday with Russian President Boris Yeltsin in the Kremlin. Yeltsin assured Baker that the fast-changing Soviet Union's nuclear weapons would be placed under "strict export control."

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin assured Secretary of State James A. Baker III today that the 27,000 nuclear weapons in the fast-changing Soviet Union would be put under "strict export control" to prevent them from falling into the wrong hands.

Yeltsin met with Baker for four hours and then told reporters at a joint news conference that a "single authority" would take charge of all strategic and nuclear arms.

He also said that three of the four Soviet republics with nuclear weapons will destroy those arms, leaving Russia as the only nuclear state to emerge from the splintering Soviet Union.

The three republics that would relinquish the weapons are Ukraine, Byelorussia and Kazakhstan. All four will join the international Non-Proliferation Treaty, Yeltsin said.

Ensuring that nuclear weapons would be kept secure was on the top of Baker's agenda for his five-day visit to what he referred to as the "former Soviet Union."

He also discussed in detail with Yeltsin the international relief effort that is gathering momentum to assist the Soviet people through the harsh winter now taking hold.

Whether Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the embattled Soviet president, would be left with any meaningful role seemed even more unlikely. Yeltsin dismissed reports that Gorbachev might stay on as commander-in-chief of the military.

"I feel ashamed of those commentaries, especially in the Izvestia paper," the Russian president said.

"I would not like to discuss his future," Yeltsin said. "It's up to him to decide."

Promises 'single authority'

Later, Gorbachev told reporters the changes sweeping the country were "very serious, both for our nation and for our partners," including the United States.

Baker praised Gorbachev, saying, "These fundamental changes are due, in no small part, to your efforts."

The Bush administration is interested in "working in partnership with you and others to see these developments proceed in a responsible way," he said.

Yeltsin's session with Baker gave the Bush administration a detailed account of how the new commonwealth is proceeding. Yeltsin said they covered more than 20 issues.

On the issue Baker put at the top of his agenda — safeguarding nuclear weapons — Yeltsin said the republics would jointly exercise control with the aim of achieving "maximum safety."

"We agreed on strict export control over possible delivery or leakage of nuclear weapons or technology to others," Yeltsin said.

Significantly, Soviet Defense Minister Yevgeny Shaposhnikov and Interior Minister Viktor Barannikov participated in the session in the Kremlin's gilt-laden Catherine Hall, traditionally used by Soviet leaders for meetings with high-ranking foreign officials.

Yeltsin said the two ministers had served the "former Soviet Union" and that their posts would now be altered. He said the defense minister would report to the new commonwealth being formed by Soviet republics, but the interior minister would in the future report to the individual states.

The Interior ministry, which includes police and "black beret" special forces blamed for a bloody crackdown in the Baltics early this year, will be put under control of the Russian republic, Yeltsin said.

By the end of the year, Yeltsin said, at least 10 of the 12 republics will be in the new commonwealth, formed originally by Russia, Ukraine and Byelorussia. Yeltsin said.

"We will as equal partners develop this commonwealth," Yeltsin said.

He said Russia will attempt to take over the seat in the United Nations Security Council now held by the Soviet Union.

Yeltsin also urged recognition of Russia as an independent state by the United States. Baker noted that Ukraine has also requested diplomatic, and said he will discuss that with Ukrainian leaders in Kiev on Wednesday.

"I will report back to President Bush and we will give full consideration to these requests," Baker told the news conference.

"Important principles will govern our approach," he said. One such principle was strict controls over nuclear weapons.

The Soviet president criticized Baker in an interview with Time magazine as being "overly hasty" in saying the Soviet Union no longer exists.

Questioning Baker's "loyalty," the embattled Soviet leader said this was a time for cooperation.

Flying here from Washington, Baker praised Gorbachev as a courageous leader. "If it's true that it was criticism then I would regret it," he said of Gorbachev's remarks.

"I don't think anyone has been more supportive of President Gorbachev and, indeed, his administration and what they have done than I have," Baker said.

Earlier, Baker reacted warily to requests for U.S. diplomatic recognition from the former Soviet republics, saying the United States wants to steer clear of internal politics. The request came Sunday from Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev, and seemed to catch Baker off guard.

"We do ask now for full diplomatic recognition of the independent states in this part of the world which created this new commonwealth," he said.

Just before Ukrainians voted for independence, a senior Bush administration official said recognition would be extended "expeditiously" if they did.

But no action was taken to establish embassies and exchange ambassadors. Instead, Bush, Baker and other officials have said they are not taking sides in what they describe as a political dispute between the republics and the central government.

"It is not up to the United States to involve ourselves in these political issues and to try to take any or play any role in it," Baker said.

Baker said he had brought with him "new ideas" to accelerate the reduction of nuclear weapons stockpiled in four republics. Baker has a threefold approach, according to senior U.S. officials who requested anonymity.

Reporter gains exclusive interview with ol' St. Nick himself

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

He is undoubtedly one of the most misunderstood men in America.

Try as he may to spread kindness and a spirit of giving, he is continually blamed for the rampant propagation of commercialism and greed.

He is Santa Claus and he recently decided to speak out on the issue.

"I am deeply saddened by a number of things in modern society," St. Nick said.

"When all of this began, it was with the idea that I could somehow encourage a spirit of doing for others by setting the example. Now, every time I pick up a newspaper or turn on a television, I hear people complain that Christmas is a time of snatch and grab and more, more, more."

Mr. Claus explained that when he first began doing for others, the world was a place badly in need of a good example of giving.

"Originally I was known simply as Nicholas," he said. "As a boy I was deeply saddened by the cruelty toward children that I saw all around me. That was such a long time ago. Of course, there is still plenty of cruelty today, I'm sad to say.

"I got started in the year 319 - or was it 320? - in Turkey. That's where I'm from, you know."

Santa went on to explain that as a young man he dedicated his life to following the Christian way and became a priest.

"I was kind to children," he said. "It was really not such a heroic thing at all. I saw in Scripture where it said, 'Let the little children come unto me.' I tried to be kind to children."

Eventually, Nicholas was granted sainthood by the Roman Catholic Church, which caused him problems during the Reformation.

"Some people said because the Catholic Church had honored me, I was to be stamped out right along with all the problems of pre-Reformation society," Nicholas said. "But all I ever tried to do was be nice to children and to set an example of giving."

"Some began to call me Father Christmas instead of Saint Nicholas to make me seem less Catholic," Mr. Claus went on. "But it didn't really matter what they called me. I never started this for the fame, I did it for the children."

St. Nicholas is Sinterclaus in Dutch, from which English-speaking people derive Santa Claus, he explained.

"I only exist so people will have an example," Santa said. "I never intended to replace the religious significance of the season or promote greed or any of the other things I'm accused of. People must have an example of giving, especially now, in these consumer times."

When he said "consumer" he curled his lip in a manner that suggested more than a little disdain.

"My favorite Christmas letters are from little children asking me to be especially kind to a brother who is ill or a neighbor without much money," St. Nick said, smiling again. "Those children understand who I am and why I'm here. One little girl wrote and said she didn't want anything for Christmas but that her daddy get a job."

"Another precious child sat on my lap and asked if I would help his mommy and daddy love one another again."

Asked what he enjoys most about Christmas, St. Nicholas said he is especially pleased with those who reach out to the needy.

"When people imagine me, they see a man whose entire life is based on doing for others because I love them," Santa said. "We give because it is the right thing to do. But the truth is, I need help. I need people to see that there are children who go to sleep hungry and cold each night. Some of them are right here in Pampa."

"I need them to know there are lonely people out there who need a special touch because they have lost hope. Some will die from the cold this winter, even if it's only the coldness of their own heart."

Wiping a trace of moisture from his eyes, Santa said, "It is no coincidence that as lack of belief in me has risen, so has a shortage of the giving spirit."

"Giving is something that comes from the depths of your being. You must believe in yourself and others to be a giver. A shallow person can't be a giving person. They don't have the make-up for it. A shallow person also has trouble having faith in what he can't see or touch. I pity people like that."

He continued, "You don't have to be rich to give. You only have to be rich in spirit."

Santa said Christmas was never meant as a time to take advantage of a big-hearted senior citizen on a sleigh. Instead, he said, it is a time to do special things for people you love.

"When that only involves spending lots of money, it cheapens the whole thing," Santa stated.

"Some marvelous words were spoken by One who said, 'When you have given unto the least of these, you have given unto me,' St. Nicholas explained. "That is the spirit of Christmas."

"We mustn't get tied up in the prices of things and whether we can afford one present or 20. What a marvelous Christmas it would be if people just spent the whole day going from house to house singing carols to warm the hearts of others. That would warm their hearts, too."

He then recounted how "Silent Night" came to be written by a poor priest who offered it as a present to his congregation when the church organ broke hundreds of years ago.

"Father Joseph wasn't rich," St. Nicholas said. "He hardly had a penny to his name. But he had a heart that was right. And his gift of song lives today as one of the greatest hymns of the season."

Noting the time, Santa said he must return to his busy schedule.

"I'm counting on people to do what they know is right," he said. "I'm counting on this being a Christmas of love, not of greed. What a merry Christmas it will be."

Bomb disrupts London commuters

LONDON (AP) — A bomb exploded near the country's busiest rail junction before dawn today, prompting British Rail to close all its London stations for hours and throwing the morning commute into chaos.

Twenty minutes before the blast, in which no injuries were reported, a man claiming to represent the Irish Republican Army telephoned a TV station and said a bomb had been planted at a major rail station. No bomb was found during a search of the capital's eight stations.

Also today, the London Stock Exchange was evacuated for two hours following a telephoned bomb threat, Scotland Yard said. A search uncovered nothing suspicious.

The incidents appeared to be part of the IRA's recent campaign in Britain, in which 75 firebombs have been set off since Dec. 1. No one has been hurt, although economic damage has been severe.

On Sunday, the IRA firebombed a bookstore at the National Gallery, one of London's major fine arts museums, and the terrorist group said it would continue to disrupt daily life until Britain ends its rule of Northern Ireland.

If set by the IRA, however, today's bombing would signal a change in tactics from recent efforts, which have been largely confined to incendiary devices set in buildings. The last time the IRA targeted British Rail was on Feb. 18, when it bombed Victoria Station, killing a man.

Scotland Yard said the bomb today exploded at about 6 a.m. on a railroad track about 300 yards north of Clapham Junction station in southwest London, blowing out windows in nearby houses. In the past, the IRA has chosen Monday mornings to bomb train stations and railway lines so as to cause maximum disruption.

A labyrinth of criss-crossing rail lines, Clapham Junction is Britain's busiest rail intersection.

British Broadcasting Corp. said a train full of commuters was just yards away from the blast.

"The flash could be seen through the left of the windows close to the front of the train. After that some of the passengers started running from the front of the train to the rear. ... It happened a few hundred yards in front of the train and it did shake the train and you could see it and hear it very forcibly," commuter Ashley Hosten told BBC radio.

After the blast, police warned commuters not to head into London if the trip was not necessary. All eight British Rail stations in the city were reopened by noon after searches revealed nothing suspicious.

South Texans tire of reputation for being 'litigator's haven'

MCALLEN (AP) — Liberal court awards, some reaching millions of dollars, have Lower Rio Grande Valley residents worried about the region's reputation as a litigator's haven.

Some doctors contend that opportunistic lawyers are flocking to the region that's also becoming known for its liberal judges.

Billboard along major roads leading into the region bear slogans like "Fairness... Yes! Greed... No!" and "Lawsuit Abuse. Will it cost you your doctor?"

Critics say the signs are designed to spur residents to challenge claims from high-profile lawyers in the region.

"On the whole, verdicts in South Texas will be higher than in a conservative area like Dallas," Steve Dietz, a personal injury lawyer who has practiced in the Valley since 1976, told the McAllen Monitor.

However, lawyer Frank Herrera says there's nothing special about the region. He covers South Texas from his office in San Antonio.

"Just because a lawyer comes from here, it doesn't mean there's a (lawsuit abuse) problem in the Valley," he said.

Businesses and health care providers fear the increasing number of high-dollar judgments in valley courts will gobble up profits, jobs and even entire companies.

"I've never seen the level of litigation as we have here," said Bill Burns, administrator at Rio Grande Regional Hospital.

"It's like a feeding frenzy," he said.

Valley residents, after a judge's $10.1 million award to the family of a woman who died at Knapp Medical Center in Weslaco, criticized the judge, the plaintiff's lawyer and the insurance company.

The State Office of Court Administration said the number of personal injury and workers compensation claims filed in Cameron and Hidalgo Counties has increased 138 percent from 1980 to 1990.

District court records show Hidalgo County residents filed 2,218 injury lawsuits — or one for every 173 people — in fiscal year 1990.

Citizens Against Lawsuit Abuse (CALA) was formed more than a year ago to bring attention to the rising litigation.

"Our sole purpose is to promote business and jobs," said Bill Summers, CALA director. "And we think we are losing jobs from some lawsuits that shouldn't have been filed."

About $160,000 has been donated to CALA since it was formed in November 1990.

The Ditto Apparel Inc. of Weslaco laid off 400 employees and moved from the Valley after an increasing number of personal injury claims by employees threatened to break the company.

Burns said his hospital has 15 to 20 lawsuits pending, and Regional's insurance has increased more than 400 percent since 1985.

H&H Foods, one of the Valley's largest businesses, is also at risk.

"We're risking everything we've done for 47 years because we can't pay workers compensation," Libo Hinojosa, chief executive officer of H&H, said.

Scientist: volcano activity bringing brighter sunsets to North Texas horizon

DALLAS (AP) — Volcanic debris from eruption of Mount Pinatubo in the Philippines is producing spectacular North Texas sunsets, a physicist says.

The colorful winter sunsets result from a June eruption, one of this century's largest, that threw ash and sulphur dioxide into the stratosphere, 10 to 20 miles above the Earth's surface.

The cloud of volcanic debris has since drifted around the Earth and gradually spread to northern latitudes. Most of the dust has settled, but the sulphur dioxide combined with moisture to form tiny, micron-sized droplets of sulfuric acid.

"I've been watching and marveling at their brilliance and redness," said Dr. John Hoffman, head of the physics department at the University of Texas at Dallas.

The droplets scatter the red component of sunlight, prompting rich, lingering displays in the sky, the scientist says.

Bands of orange and red appear near the horizon in ordinary sunsets because of dust layers in the lower atmosphere. However, altitude of the sulfuric acid droplets causes a glow before the actual sunset that lasts long afterward.

Each night, the intensity varies because the droplet cloud is denser in some parts of the atmosphere than others. Hoffman said the brilliance should reach a peak in February and March and fade only gradually after that.

"We're in for a good year of this, at least, because these particles are so tiny that they settle very slowly," he said.

Astronauts aboard the space shuttle Atlantis several weeks ago reported the Earth's atmosphere seemed especially hazy from orbit. Many scientists attributed the effect to Pinatubo's eruption.

Clouds from the eruption may also produce slightly colder winters and slightly cooler summers for a year or two because the same particles reflect part of the incoming infrared rays back into space, Hoffman said.

However, average annual temperatures should vary only by a degree or two.

Hoffman said volcanic particles will eventually descend through the atmosphere where they will be absorbed into clouds. One result, several years from now, will be mildly acidic rain.

"But it won't be raining sulfuric acid," he said.

Christmas tree wiring may have sparked fire

HOUSTON (AP) — Faulty wiring on a Christmas tree may have sparked an apartment fire in which a 34-year-old woman and her 2-year-old son were severely burned, authorities have said.

Lavata Woodfork was burned Sunday morning when she ran back into her apartment to rescue her son, Emmanuel Padilla.

Ms. Woodfork was in critical and unstable condition this morning at Hermann Hospital, with second- and third-degree burns over 70 percent of her body, hospital officials said. Her son was listed in stable condition with second- and third-degree burns over 30 percent of his body.

Firefighters said the blaze started about 9:40 a.m. Sunday and was limited to Ms. Woodfork's apartment, although an adjoining unit sustained some fire and smoke damage.

Richard Taylor, arson investigator for the Houston Fire Department, said the fire started at or near a Christmas tree, which was close to a front window in the apartment. Investigators were examining the area to try to determine the fire's cause.

Autopsy shows child died of starvation

FORT WORTH (AP) — An emaciated 13-year-old boy found last month at his parents' home died because he was intentionally denied food, causing his body to virtually waste away, a medical examiner says.

Tarrant County Medical Examiner Nizam Peerwani said Sunday that a final autopsy report on the body of Stephen Hill will be submitted to prosecutors who have filed felony charges against the boy's parents, Jay and Linda Hill.

Peerwani said the final report contradicts a statement by the boy's mother, who told a judge shortly after she and her husband were arrested, that the boy suffered from a rare, life-threatening blood infection.

"This young child didn't suffer from any rare disease or infection," Peerwani told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"All you are seeing is the terminal results" of a child who was not allowed nourishment, the medical examiner said.

The final report, Peerwani said, showed the boy suffered from "severe protein-calorie malnutrition," causing, among other things, "generalized muscular wasting," brain hemorrhages and an "adult respiratory distress syndrome."

He ruled the death was a homicide.

Officers found the boy unconscious and in full cardiac arrest Nov. 3 when they responded to a call to the Hill trailer in White Settlement, a Fort Worth suburb. He weighed about 61 pounds when he died almost two weeks later, Peerwani said.

The parents are being held in the Tarrant County Jail in lieu of $200,000 bond each on charges of injuring a child, a first-degree felony, and on aggravated kidnapping charges, alleging they held him as a shackled hostage in his own home.

The parents told investigators that they kept food from the boy and said they often kept him chained as a form of punishment.

A second child, 12-year-old Douglas, remains in the custody of state officials. He shows some signs of neglect, but to a much lesser degree, officials said.

Texas Gun & Knife Assn. sets show Dec. 21-22

AMARILLO — The Texas Gun & Knife Association will hold its third and final Amarillo show for 1991 on Dec. 21-22 at the Amarillo Civic Center.

Celebrating its 12th anniversary, the Texas Gun & Knife Association presents shows to cities across Texas.

Collectors and exhibitors throughout the area come to buy, sell and trade some of the most unique guns, knives and accessories ever made.

In addition, the show offers a selection of wildlife art, historical artifacts, Indian memorabilia, "Texana" items and a display of gold and silver jewelry.

Don Hill, association president, is a staff writer for Knife World Magazine and designs knives in his spare time. He is well-known by exhibitors and is at each show to visit with the public.

The show will be held from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 21, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 22.

Lake Meredith group plans open house

FRITCH — Lake Meredith National Recreation Area/Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument will be holding its annual Christmas Open House Thursday.

Superintendent Patrick C. McCrary said the open house would be held at the National Park Service Headquarters in Fritch from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Thursday, with the public invited to attend.

McCrary said 1991 had been a good year for the Park Service as they come off their 75th anniversary. He asked that all their friends come by for the open house and join the National Park Service employees for refreshments.

He also extended his appreciation for those who have supported Lake Meredith National Recreation Area/Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument and wished everyone "a joyous holiday season."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Hostages' release a gift for everyone

Whenever a hostage or a political is released, it is always an occasion for rejoicing. Thomas Sutherland, Terry Waite, Joseph Cicippio, Alann Steen — those names ripple across the country, as Americans welcome home their brothers, husbands, fathers, fellow citizens, the last to come out of those hellish precincts in bombed-out Beirut. When the name of Terry Anderson joined those — it was a little special in newsrooms and wire service bureaus across the United States, for Anderson was one of us, a fellow journalist.

If such attention seems unfair to the others, as it surely is, consider first that a good many journalists, especially those laboring in overseas posts, often place themselves in harm's way; they could be nabbed on foreign sidewalks, or worse, at a moment's notice, subject only to the calculations and caprices of terrorists. That is, of course, true of missionaries and teachers as well, but consider more-over that, because of a journalists' entree to the world media, his kidnappers will arbitrarily assign more value to him. There was never much doubt that Terry Anderson would be the last to be summoned for that drive from Beirut to Damascus, there to bask in the glare of civilization, to see freedom again.

Throughout his more than six years of captivity, longer than any of the others' imprisonment, Anderson seemed, alas, to be just a bit more of a cause celebre than the others. That had to do with more than his membership in the media; it had much to do with the steady determination of his sister, Peggy Say, who worked with families of the other hostages to keep the issue before Presidents Reagan and Bush.

We must be careful how we say this, for she is not blameworthy: By keeping most of the focus on her brother, an enterprise for which she had tons of media assistance, she no doubt perpetuated his stay as a prisoner. That makes for an excruciating dilemma in future hostage-takings. Public pressure and international publicity also count, lest a hostage be forgotten.

Say also — again, don't misread us — may be considered a significant factor in the events that led to the Iran-Contra scandal of the Reagan years. By most accounts, the former president was adamant about not capitulating to hostage-takers, but Say's incessant pleadings, perfectly understandable, evidently led to Reagan's loss of judgment. Listening to his heart, he signed off an arms-for-hostages deal.

In the end, massive geopolitical changes had more to do than sleazy deals with the final hostage release, the captors in at least one case actually apologizing for what they had done. The Persian Gulf War, in which America became the world's undisputed superpower, changed the complexion of that region, as does the walk-up to the peace talks, in which the Arab states appear ready to clear the field of any unnecessary issues such as the hostages. Israel's gallant prisoner releases, in multiples of 10, paid off. Finally, the collapse of Soviet communism, of which the terrorists were clients, closes the books on this unhappy saga.

Rejoice with us, then, that these men can enjoy freedom again.

Sweet are uses of diversity

WASHINGTON — In that strange land known as Political Correctness, events are moving toward a useful showdown. By the end of January — by next spring at the latest — we should get some idea of the limits of the new racism within the federal government. I say, high time.

The story is complicated, but it merits a few minutes of your time. For nearly a century, the nation's colleges, universities, graduate schools and post-secondary trade schools have operated under various programs of accreditation. About 80 accrediting bodies have come into being, among them six regional associations.

The most influential of the regional bodies is the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools. It exercises absolute powers of accreditation over roughly 500 schools in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Until a few years ago, Middle States confirmed its supervision largely to academic questions: Was the faculty adequately qualified? Was the library up to reasonable standards and the school responsibly financed? The accrediting associations rarely made a ripple in the news.

Then emerged the new and potent doctrines of political correctness. Since then, nothing has been the same. Middle States abruptly began pursuing aggressive policies that amounted to a kind of academic extortion. Member institutions were told bluntly that unless they toed the line of "diversity," they would lose their accreditation.

In the world of higher education, accreditation is a matter of life or death. Unless a school is accredited by one of the federally recognized associations, such as Middle States, its students are ineligible for student loans and Pell grants. Their academic credits may not be transferable. The institution itself becomes ineligible for other federal programs.

In the eyes of the Middle States, sweet are the uses of diversity. Among the rules governing accreditation is a rule that an institution "must have a governing board which includes a diverse membership." In 1987 Middle States fired an ominous shot over the bow of Westminster Theological Seminary in suburban Philadelphia.

Obedient to its own sectarian canons, Westminster's board is composed of ordained Presbyterian elders. Church law forbids the ordination of women. This religious stricture made no impression upon the zealots of Middle States. Westminster was put on notice: Either put women on your board or Middle States "would have no choice but to remove accreditation."

At about the same time, Middle States swung its compulsory weight at the Bernard Baruch College in New York. Baruch's sin, threatening its accreditation, was a lack of sufficient diversity in the faculty. Despite heavy coercion, the college had failed to make a "visible, statistical change" in minority representation. The threat was unmistakable: Get a sufficient quota of blacks, or else.

As it turned out, Baruch more or less caved in. Westminster held firmly to the chauvinist doctrines laid down by Paul in his letters to Timothy: "I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over men, but to be in silence."

The two cases set off a national uproar. The uproar led to a decision last spring by Lamar Alexander, secretary of education, to give Middle States a small taste of its own medicine. The association then was petitioning for renewal of its authority to operate. Alexander asked his staff to let him have a report on the whole controversy. Was Middle States exceeding its authority? Should the accreditors themselves be discredited?

The staff report became public on Nov. 18. It was not good news for Middle States. The staff concluded that in the application of its diversity standards, Middle States "has raised serious questions as to its overall reliability..." True, Middle States had taken some steps to alleviate concerns, but the staff was uncertain whether the association would vigorously implement its proposed amendments.

Instead of renewing Middle States' petition for recognition for the customary five years, staff suggested only one year. As a stiffer alternative, Middle States could be recognized for one year with a stipulation that in this period the association could not deny any school accreditation "on the basis of diversity standards."

A departmental advisory committee will consider the issue in January. Alexander will make a final decision thereafter. My hope is that he will find Middle States guilty of inexcusable arrogance and treat this tyrannical outfit exactly as it has treated others.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Dec. 16, the 350th day of 1991. There are 15 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Dec. 16, 1773, the Boston Tea Party took place as American colonists, disguised as Indians, boarded a British ship in Boston Harbor and dumped more than 300 chests of tea overboard in a protest against tea taxes.

On this date:

In 1653, Oliver Cromwell became lord protector of England, Scotland and Ireland.

In 1770, composer Ludwig van Beethoven was born in Bonn, Germany.

In 1809, Napoleon Bonaparte was divorced from the Empress Josephine by an act of the French Senate.

In 1905, the entertainment trade publication Variety came out with its first weekly issue.

In 1916, 75 years ago, Gregory Rasputin, the monk who wielded powerful influence over the Russian court, was murdered by a group of conservative noblemen.

In 1944, the World War II Battle of the Bulge began in Belgium.

Japanese look to rest of world

A trusted observer, John F. Bergstrom, has returned from Japan with some interesting snapshots:

Seventy-five percent of Japan is mountainous, uninhabitable, and yet 120 million people are crammed into that tiny 25 percent.

And because the Japanese have exhausted their domestic labor force, they are importing outsiders from South America to fill manufacturing jobs and further compound traffic congestion.

Cars move bumper-to-bumper during daylight hours.

Japan's train system is timely, runs beautifully — where train service is available. If you are going where the train is going, you will go comfortably.

At all levels — top management to the assembly line — Japan's workers are not flexible in the face of any quick change or unexpected problem.

Private housing for the average Japanese is almost unobtainable. One-twenty-fourth of an acre of land in the Osaka area is $150,000 American money. And the most basic house you can build on that land will cost another $250,000.

Paul Harvey

Labor costs in Japan are 90 percent of what they are in the United States.

The Japanese want to and do deliver good service with careful attention to detail. Service in top Tokyo hotels is some of the best in the world.

They know and build quality products very efficiently. Their finish levels are superior to America's and as good or better than Germany's. The grout lines between tiles in any bathroom are perfectly uniform. The gasket in an engine is measured to microscopic tolerances. Even a cardboard box is beautifully proportioned, assembled and finished.

The Japanese, dealing with American diplomats or American businessmen, can speak perfect English when they want to. When they don't want to, they use "the language barrier" as a device for delay.

There remains strong filial affection in Japan, child to parent and parent to elder family member. Children do not, however, have the same selfless allegiance to their employment as their parents have had. Many young do not want to work 12-hour days as their fathers do.

There is a general lack of respect for women in society and in the workplace. Women are to be found nowhere in management.

Respect for authority at all levels is obvious. In a business meeting no one sits down before the controlling manager sits. At mealtime, no one picks up a fork until the senior person present begins to eat. Interruptions just never happen!

Bergstrom's analysis of his own snapshots is that the Japanese have done all they can with what they have. Now they must look to the rest of the world for expansion of manufacture and markets.

Once foe, Japan is admirable friend

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

You are probably tired of hearing where your elderly friends and relatives were on Pearl Harbor Day, so I'll make this quick: I was a sophomore at Princeton, and at about 2 p.m. was stretched out on a sofa in my room in Brown Hall, reading Thurmond Arnold's Bottle-necks of Business, which was required for an economics course I was taking.

The guys next door had tuned their radio to a football game, which was annoying but endurable. The trouble was that some announcer kept interrupting, to say something I couldn't quite catch — something about "Pearl Harbor." Finally, I got up and turned on my own radio — and the rest, as they say, is history.

That night the Princeton Senate, which was simply an extracurricular organization, convened in special session, and I had the honor, as chairman of its Foreign Relations Committee, to introduce the resolution declaring war on (we wanted to be precise) "the Empire of Nippon."

Being just five months past my 18th birthday and enrolled in the ROTC, there was no doubt what lay ahead for me. I had been a passionate "interventionist" anyway, as far as the war was concerned, so I welcomed the new development.

I had, of course, no doubt whatever that Japan's surprise strike at Pearl Harbor was the deepest sort of treachery, and totally unjustified. Only many years later did I realize that FDR, by joining with the British, French and Dutch in a 100 percent embargo on oil shipments to Japan in July 1941, left Japan no choice but to attack or surrender. As Secretary for War Henry Stimson confided in his diary, "the question was how we should maneuver (Japan) into ... firing the first shot without allowing too much danger to ourselves."

Unfortunately Roosevelt assumed Japan would lunge southward — toward the Philippines and Indonesia (the latter being the only source of oil within Japan's reach), and was caught badly off base when she opened, instead, with an attack on Hawaii that left most of our battleships at the bottom of Pearl Harbor.

In any case, we were in the ar at last, and the ultimate outcome was a foreordained conclusion.

The postwar resurgence of Japan and the Japanese people, under the brilliant guidance of Douglas MacArthur, is one of the great stories of the 20th century. As a young lieutenant stationed at Air Force headquarters in Calcutta in 1944-45, I would cheerfully have shot any Japanese soldier who got within pistol-range. But on many visits to Japan, in the 1960s and thereafter, I came to admire the Japanese people immensely. Their success has been the product of discipline and hard work, and they have earned every bit of it.

As for the danger of a resurgent Japanese militarism, my strong impression is that the Japanese themselves are, at least subliminally, well aware of that possibility, and eager to forestall it. At times they seem almost to be pleading with us not to insist that they rearm. They would rather compete economically — and why not?

No doubt the Japanese government and people have been reluctant to allow foreign businesses to compete on equal terms in their tight little islands, but this problem is diminishing and in time will cease to matter. What the world, including the U.S., really fears from Japanese competition is its sheer efficiency.

Here are 125 million highly intelligent, hard-working, homogenous people, huddled on a few islands almost devoid of raw materials and therefore compelled to make their livelihood by processing imported materials and selling the finished products. If they can do this better (never mind more cheaply) than an American work force that is growing forever more poorly educated and less highly motivated, what is our complaint? Physician, heal thyself.

Letters to the editor

City is competing with her business

To the editor:

At the risk of sounding like sour grapes, in regard to our new city-financed recycling business: We have many parks in our city which have been provided by precious civic-minded persons for the enjoyment of the citizenry.

Why not have the new regime of city management extend to all our parks the privilege of progress? Can we have our own variety store in one, our own jewelry store in another and perhaps a family restaurant in yet another?

The city can compete with the private sector in all endeavors as they did in the real estate market.

Those of us who have been in the recycling business for years have to pay for our advertising in the newspaper. The city gets front page coverage — was it a paid advertisement? It didn't say so.

We work for small potatoes to supplement our income. This competition is not appreciated.

If, as they said in the newspaper, their main concern is saving the landfill, I really hope they will have all the trash trucks dump in Hobart Street Park and retrieve all the recyclables from them before they carry the trash to the landfill. That really should save the dump.

I shall converse with Bill Sarpalis to see if my taxes to the city are really to be used to set up my competition.

Veterans are proud of their VA markers

To the editor:

It is with great pride that the Pampa VFW membership extends hearty congratulations to the outstanding Pampa Harvester football team. Their accomplishments prove that the "indomitable spirit" is alive and well here in Pampa, Texas. Job very well done, coaching staff and players. WE'LL GET 'EM NEXT YEAR!!!

In other matters, it has come to the attention of this office that the problem of VA markers has once again arisen out at Memory Gardens Cemetery. As some may remember, this same situation arose this past summer. At that time, VFW Commander Maness and I had a cordial meeting with Mr. Waite, owner of Memory Gardens. At that time, Mr. Waite assured us that if a veteran insisted that he wanted his VA marker set in concrete, he would yield to the veteran's wishes. (The cemetery would rather have the markers set in $240 granite bases as opposed to $40 concrete ones.) We came away from the meeting satisfied that the problem had been solved.

Shortly thereafter, Mr. Waite wrote a letter to the editor stating that the policy of the cemetery would be granite bases for VA markers. Needless to say, that change of heart was very disturbing to Commander Maness and I as we thought we had Mr. Waite's word to the contrary. As the cemetery is a privately held entity, we learned that it was within his authority to make and/or change rules governing the cemetery as long as it doesn't break any existing state or federal laws. This being the case, we were at a loss as to any further steps to be taken.

Now it has come to our attention that the new policy of the cemetery will be to remove existing VA markers that are set in concrete at which time they are judged, by the cemetery, to be deteriorated. Then the families of the deceased veteran will be given the option of paying an additional $240 for a granite base or not having the VA marker reset.

At this time, I am working on the problem, and I would appreciate hearing from everyone who has received notice of the above-mentioned situation. It is my sincerest hope that a satisfactory solution can be arrived at to avoid the hardship of forcing widows on fixed incomes and family members from being forced into making a very difficult and potentially expensive decision. To most, if not all, veterans, that VA marker is a very important symbol of their service to their country, and as such, it is a marker of distinction they have displayed with great pride.

I am asking assistance in this matter from all interested parties in the hope that a proper and acceptable solution can be arrived at.

Economic growth deserves thought

To the editor:

As a stranger visiting my two aunts in Pampa for a period of ten days, I read with interest the articles written by Bear Mills on economic development.

I realize that I will not know all of the factors that would affect the decisions of a local, informed citizenry on such a controversial issue as economic development; however, may I offer a viewpoint from our experience? I can fully appreciate the research and effort that Bear Mills has expended to give your readers enlightenment. An informed public is an enlightened public, and one needs to see all facets of an issue to be truly informed.

Some of what I am writing may seem negative but may provoke your citizens to become less apathetic and more educated about issues that will impact the long-term future of their area.

Some of the things that need to be considered are: What will be the cost locally of each new job created? What will be the impacts on the local resources such as water supplies, air quality, housing, schools, etc.? Will city and county services need to be expanded to provide adequate police and fire protection? Usually, growth in population and industry requires growth in local bureaucracy, which then increases tax burdens.

It seems easy enough to vote a tax increase but next to impossible to get that tax rescinded. Another question, will the new industry find the job skills in your local work force or will many of the workers be brought in from outside? For example, in our California coastal community, when the petroleum industry needed a new offshore oil platform, they had it built in Korea and towed to the West Coast by Dutch seagoing tugs.

Texas has much expertise and equipment to have done the job, but the money went foreign for many reasons.

In our area, our sewer systems are so overloaded that we are now being taxed heavily to expand and improve that necessity. We are being encouraged to replumb our houses to use the gray water for our yards instead of further taxing the sewers. Our water supplies are so scarce that all new homes now are required to install low-flush toilets and restrictive showerheads. Part of the price of economic expansion.

This new prison can be an asset to your area, but may I urge a word or two of caution. We have found that the three state penal institutions in our county have caused some problems. When a person is incarcerated for any length of time, his or her family generally wants to come and live close by. Sometimes an undesirable element is introduced into the area by either family or associates from the inmates' former environments.

Another factor, which took enactment of a state law in California to effect, might not apply in Texas, but I will mention it. When a prisoner is paroled or released, it is essential that he not be allowed to live in your county unless he resided there prior to his conviction. You see, since his family has already been disrupted once, they are usually reluctant to relocate again.

Statistics have proven that in California, there is a 66 percent recidivism. In other words, 66 percent will go back to prison because of parole violations or further crimes. We surely don't want those further crimes happening in our communities along with our normal crime rate. Sounds hard-hearted, but that is just the way it is, until our prison systems become more effective in rehabilitation of its citizens.

Thank you for allowing me to comment. I trust that I have not sounded too negative. We all want dynamic, thriving communities in which to live, but we must weigh heavily the cost and especially the cost to those on fixed incomes. I will watch with interest your January election.

English language bill needs support

To the editor:

The U.S. English Organization has set July 3, 1992, as a target date for the House of Representatives to vote on Language of Government Act, H.R. 123. It is hoped all of the congressmen in this area will support this important legislation.

One of the major problems in making English the "official" language of the United States is that often this program has been called "English only." This is an erroneous designation of a program intended to eliminate a "Babel" of official languages in the United States.

Making English the official language would in no way infringe upon the use of a different language except in "official matters." We have only to look to Canada to observe how divisive two official languages can be. We read often in the press the conflicts that exist between the English and French speaking populations that continually vie to make their language predominant. We do not want this divisiveness to exist in our United States.

Everyone is requested to urge your congressional representative and senator to vote for H.R. 123 and request that they sign on as a co-sponsor of this important legislation.

'Majority rule'? Not in America

To the editor:

While cleaning out my desk a few days ago, I came across an article that I cut out of the news some years ago, and I was so caught by its current remarks — at least, it SEEMS to fit the state of our country now — that I thought others might find it interesting.

The U.S. is demanding that other nations allow "majority rule"! We demand that the "majority" be allowed to rule in South Africa and Rhodesia. We call it a matter of "social conscience" that the majority rule and prevail! I don't get it. The majority certainly does NOT rule in the United States.

Seventy-six percent of the American people do NOT want to give away the Panama Canal, but we will (and did, too). Seventy-seven percent of Americans of all ages think public school children should be allowed to pray in school, but they cannot! Seat belts, a 55 mile an hour speed limit and foreign aid, put to a vote by public opinion pollsters, are ALWAYS voted down by the public! Yet, our federal government continues to do what IT wants rather than what the people want.

Whatever happened to "government BY the people"??? This arrogant, autocratic thumbing of their noses at what WE, the people, want is doing a lot more harm to a lot more people than Saccharin and other food additives. The majority of the American people do NOT want pornographic movies, do NOT want the metric system and certainly do NOT want members of Congress voting generous payraises for themselves!!! YET, ALL THESE THINGS COME TO PASS at the behest of a government which insists IT knows better than WE do!

It is our government's position that an elitist group of unelected bureaucrats has the authority to DICTATE to the majority! If that is a fact, then, in the name of all that's consistent, let's stop preaching to the Rhodians, South Africans or Russians. They feel the same way about it.

Whenever pollsters put it to a vote in the USA, we the people are overwhelmingly opposed to illegal immigrants usurping American jobs, making taxes complicated, providing a burdened welfare system, and many immigrants refusing to learn the American language and then DEMANDING their rights!

Come on, now. Our government lets sex offenders run loose to repeat their crimes. WE object! Yet, our government goes right on. Americans vote two to one for capital punishment, yet the state governors seek to veto it. Most Americans oppose daylight savings time, yet are required to accept and adapt. Americans are 84 percent opposed to discrimination against blacks, whites and others, yet educators and employers are in court now and ordered to ignore the "whites' rights"! Ninety million workers are the majority, but 13 million shirkers are getting the gravy!

Who can honestly say the majority rules in the USA???

Sounds a lot like the present, doesn't it? We haven't done much to fix it yet!

Truck carrying radioactive material crashes and burns on Interstate 91

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A tractor-trailer carrying radioactive material crashed and burned on an interstate early today, but authorities said none of the hazardous substance was released.

Three people were injured when the truck collided with a car and wooden packing for its cargo burst into flames on Interstate 91 near two large downtown hotels, police said.

Bridges and interstates leading into downtown were closed as a precaution, causing a huge traffic jam.

The truck slammed into a guard rail and burst into flames about 3 a.m. in an attempt to avoid the car that drove onto the interstate going in the wrong direction, said state police Sgt. Richard Catellier.

A fire dispatcher said the truck was carrying about 11,000 pounds of uranium dioxide from the General Electric plant in Wilmington, N.C., to the Vermont Yankee nuclear plant in Vernon, Vt. But fire spokesman Bernie Welz said officials later said the 11,000 pounds included the containers and the radioactive substance.

"The radioactive material is in steel containers so the hazard for leak is almost nil," Welz said.

Flames destroyed wooden crates surrounding the containers and pallets they rested on.

Firefighters let the blaze burn itself out. The flames on an elevated section of the interstate along the east bank of the Connecticut River were visible from surrounding hotels and office buildings.

Mayor Mary Hurley declared the situation under control about 9 a.m.

The uranium dioxide fuel consists of highly radioactive pellets contained in rods. They are packed two to a casing in double-lined steel, which is wrapped in soft material designed to cushion impact, then packed in wooden crates, said James Sinclair, director of external relations at Vermont Yankee.

Grandma sees madness in parenting method

DEAR ABBY: This is my first letter to you, although I have been reading your column for many years. I need an outside opinion.

I am a grandmother in my 70s and have just returned from visiting my daughter, her husband and their three darling children — all under the age of 5 — and I'm upset with some of their parenting methods. For example:

They lock the doors to their children's bedrooms at night because "the children might get out of their beds and roam around the house and we may not hear them."

If one child deserves punishment, all three are punished. And if one child says a naughty word, all three are given hot sauce in the mouth.

Abby, I know these parents love their children very much, but are these methods of disciplining them wise? Please understand, it is not my intention to interfere.

GRAM

DEAR GRAM: Children's bedroom doors should not be locked. Should a flash fire occur, it would be a nightmare.

Punishing all the children when only one has earned the punishment is a good way to make siblings grow up to hate each other.

Children who use "naughty" words should not be punished with hot sauce in the mouth — they should be taught the proper and acceptable word to use instead of the "naughty" word.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I had to write in response to "A Very Disappointed Trampoline Owner" who was upset because he had to buy more insurance to cover himself if he was sued by neighbors whose kids sneaked into his yard and jumped on his trampoline.

You suggested he build a fence and put a lock on it so children couldn't use the trampoline unless they were supervised.

Abby, if "Disappointed" wanted to give his children a fun toy, he may as well have given them a chain saw, because a trampoline is no less dangerous. Supervision doesn't ensure safety.

My sister is a quadriplegic today because of a trampoline mishap she had years ago. She was a trained college gymnast who had spotters watching her when she did a back flip on the trampoline and broke her neck! She never left the trampoline, or hit the sides.

"Disappointed" is afraid an unsupervised child will get hurt and sue him. What happens if his own children get hurt? There will be no one to blame but himself. If he really loves his children, he'll get rid of the trampoline. You may use my name. JENIFER WOETZEL, WELCH, MINN.

DEAR JENIFER: I am genuinely sorry about your sister's tragic accident. Because you cared enough to write, millions of readers are now alerted to the potential hazard of trampolines.

DEAR ABBY: More about "dinner" and "supper": So you'll know where I'm coming from, I live in Winona, Minn., a small city in the heart of the Mississippi's famed Hiawatha Valley.

Here when we eat our evening meal at home, it is virtually always "supper" and is our principal meal of the day.

However, when we go "out" to eat, we never call it "supper." Nobody here ever goes "out" for "supper," but everybody goes "out" for "dinner" now and then.

You might have to shoulder more responsibility where your work or career is concerned in the year ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not criticize the work of another today; it will not help this individual's performance. In fact, this person could lose interest completely and even do a worse job. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you haven't managed your resources wisely of late, you might not have the money necessary to participate in something fun with your friends. Instead of brooding, don't let this happen again.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The restrictions you might experience today will not be fully the fault of the individuals with whom you'll be involved. Don't make matters worse by blaming them.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If the world looks a trifle gloomy today, switch your thinking to the concerns of others instead of dwelling exclusively on your own self-interests.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are presently operating on a stringent financial budget, don't try to keep up today with the spending habits of friends who don't share your predicament.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Meaningful objectives may not be easy to come by today, because in order to achieve them, it might require more effort than you're prepared to expend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Jumping to conclusions today could severely impair your probabilities for success. It will not be easy to get back on track — if you start off-course.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're presently under obligation to a friend, save yourself embarrassment today by mentioning the matter first before this individual has to remind you of it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) People you are closely affiliated with will have a considerable influence on the outcome of events today. Be certain you do not team up with losers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Developments that pop up today which you haven't planned for could overwhelm you. Don't view what occurs through a magnifying glass; it will only make mountains out of molehills.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In a convivial setting today, there's a chance you might run into one of your least favorite people. Don't let this individual dampen your gregarious inclinations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Make every effort to sidestep volatile issues today that might ignite sparks between you and your mate. If they are introduced, the day could turn into a bummer.

Cowboys shoot down Eagles to clinch wildcard berth

Dallas in playoffs for first time since 1985

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kelvin Martin, a survivor of Dallas' 1-15 season two years ago, made a definitive statement that the Cowboys no longer are losers.

Martin's 85-yard punt return for a touchdown was the go-ahead score in the Cowboys' eventual 25-13 win over the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday.

That win put the Cowboys in the NFL playoffs for the first time in 1985 by clinching a wildcard spot.

The Cowboys improved their record to 10-5 with their fourth straight win. The Eagles, whose six-game winning streak was stopped, are 9-6, and they must beat Washington here next week and hope that San Francisco loses its final game and New Orleans its last two.

With his team trailing 10-8 in 45 seconds into the fourth quarter, Martin caught Jeff Feagles' punt.

"When I caught the punt I saw that everybody on the punt coverage team had broken down and came to a standstill," Martin said.

"I just tried to break through a small crack. I found a crease and after I split the first wave it was just a matter of beating the kicker. The punter got my foot, but luckily I kept my balance."

Eagles coach Rich Kotite said the play was the turning point of the game.

"We had him surrounded but we just missed a couple of tackles that let him get loose," he said.

At halftime, it appeared that the Eagles were about to dismantle Dallas for the second time this season. In September, Philadelphia won in Dallas, 24-0, getting 11 sacks and holding the Cowboys to 90 total yards.

On Sunday, the Cowboys had a total of 56 yards in the first half against the Eagles defense, ranked No. 1 in the league. Quarterback Steve Beuerlein had completed only two of 17 passes for 17 yards.

Their only scores had come on a 50-yard field goal by Ken Willis and a safety on the ensuing kickoff, scored when the Eagles fumbled the ball into their own end zone and were tackled recovering it.

But Beuerlein revived the Dallas offense in the second half, completing seven of 14 for 128 yards and one touchdown and setting up another field goal. The offensive line that was shredded for those 11 sacks three months ago allowed just one Sunday.

The Dallas defense sacked Eagles quarterback Jeff Kemp seven times.

Beuerlein tried to explain the turnaround.

"At halftime I said that while things weren't going so well I felt good. I said I've settled down," he said. "I just felt under control. I was off in the first half but I wasn't taking sacks and I wasn't intercepted."

On the first play of the second half Beuerlein passed 17 yards to Michael Irvin. "That gave me a lot of confidence," he recalled.

Coach Jimmy Johnson, whose team handed the NFC East champion Washington Redskins their only loss so far this season, said he told his team at halftime that they were one play away from the lead.

"We knew we had to hang in there and be patient," he said. "Sooner or later we would make the big plays. These guys have done a heckuva job from where they were a few years ago. We have to look at where we are now."

Kemp, who started in place of the injured Jim McMahon, completed 18 of 37 for 150 yards and a touchdown. He was intercepted twice.

The Cowboys won the toss and took the wind, gusting up to 35 mph. It worked as the Cowboys jumped to a quick 5-0 lead on the field goal and safety.

Emmitt Smith, who had 75 yards in 25 carries, got 33 of his yards on the 38-yard drive that set up the Cowboy field goal.

But the Eagles did them 5 points better when they got the wind in the second quarter. Kemp hit Maurice Johnson for the backup tight end's first pro TD. A 37-yard field goal by Roger Ruzek to make it 10-5 at halftime.

Oilers overcome elements for victory over Cleveland

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sooner or later, the Houston Oilers are going to have to take their run-and-shoot offense into a cold, windy, snowy stadium in a must-win situation. Like Buffalo in January.

When they do, they can think back to Sunday's game at Cleveland Stadium.

Despite a temperature of 29, 20-mph winds and occasionally heavy snows, Warren Moon threw for 250 yards and two touchdowns as Houston rallied to beat the Browns 17-14. Moon drove the Oilers 82 yards through a snowstorm to the winning touchdown, a 2-yard pass to Haywood Jeffries with two minutes left.

"We just thought we had to win this game, regardless of the weather," Moon said. "We practiced on a wet field and in some high winds, so things fell into place."

The rap on the run-and-shoot has always been its questionable effectiveness in bad conditions. It's a proven commodity indoors, where a passing game can thrive, but it may be a different story when a slippery field slows your receivers or the bitter cold numbs your hands.

Moon admitted the cold temperatures Sunday bothered him because he was playing with a sore right arm.

"It was bruised all week, with some swelling," he said. "I got hit on it early today, and it was sore and stiffened up some. I had to keep warming up to keep it from getting stiffer."

The weather seemed to play no part on the winning drive. Moon completed six passes — setting an NFL single-season record for completions in the process — and Lorenzo White had a 20-yard run that took the ball into Cleveland territory.

The touchdown came on third-and-goal from the 2. Moon wanted to throw right, found no one open, then looked left to Jeffries, who caught the ball in front of Alfred Jackson at the goal line. Replays confirmed the ball crossed the plane.

"It was a big play by Lorenzo White on that run. That helped loosen things up for us," Moon said.

With one game remaining, Moon has already completed 382 passes this season, four better than Dan Marino's 1986 NFL mark of 378.

"I knew I had a chance at it, but I didn't know exactly what I needed," Moon said. "It means more that we won a football game."

The Oilers (11-4) matched the team record for wins in a season and kept alive their hopes for a first-round bye in the playoffs. Cleveland (6-9) was mathematically eliminated.

The Browns nearly turned Sunday's game back around in the final two minutes. Bernie Kosar, who passed for 258 yards, took Cleveland from its own 18 to the Houston 1 with eight seconds left. Kosar's own 11-yard scramble was stopped just short of the goal line.

The Browns tried one pass, but Kosar just threw the ball away immediately when he saw Webster Slaughter stuffed at the line of scrimmage.

Matt Stover then tried a potential tying field goal from 19 yards out — shorter than a routine extra point — but hooked it wide to the left as time expired.

Pampa downs Edmond to win Sweet 16 Invitational

EDMOND, Okla. — Pampa held off Edmond in the fourth quarter Saturday night to win the inaugural Sweet 16 Invitational, 77-70.

The Harvesters are now 11-0 while Edmond suffered its first loss after three victories.

Cederick Wilbon, named the tournament's most valuable player, canned 29 points to lead the way for the Harvesters in the championship game. Jeff Young contributed 17 points and all-tournament pick Dwight Nickelberry added 10 for Pampa.

The Harvesters built a 15-point bulge (60-45) after three quarters, but the Bulldogs rallied to cut the lead to 3 (67-64) midway in the fourth quarter. Edmond would not get any closer as Pampa scored the next six points, including four on foul shots by Wilbon.

Matt Zabel led the Bulldogs in scoring with 17 points while David Smith and Clifford Crenshaw chipped in 16 points each.

Others scoring for Pampa were David Johnson with 8, Randy Nichols 6, Brent Skaggs 3, Paul Brown 2, and Ryan Erwin 2.

In the girls' division, Pampa's Nikki Ryan was named to the all-tournament team.

The Lady Harvesters lost to Mustang, Okla., 53-51, in the third-place game Saturday afternoon.

The Harvesters return home to host Amarillo High at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse. Both Pampa boys' and girls' teams play at Dodge City, Kan. Friday with the girls' game starting at 5:30 p.m., followed by the boys' contest at 7 p.m.

Saints set to gamble against Raiders

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Milton Mack and Mark Lee figure they're marked men when the New Orleans Saints play the Los Angeles Raiders tonight. Saints linebacker Rickey Jackson said his team needs to gamble a little to protect those cornerbacks.

Mack and Lee were pressed into duty after the Saints lost four cornerbacks in eight days. Mack came off eight weeks on injured reserve and the practice squad. Lee was acquired off waivers from San Francisco two weeks ago.

The Saints could not get to Dallas quarterback Steve Beuerlein at all last week in a 23-14 loss to the Cowboys — New Orleans' fourth straight defeat.

Pat Swilling leads the NFL in sacks with 15 and Jackson has 9 1/2. But opponents are double-teaming Swilling and Jackson and handling the interior rush man-to-man.

"We've got to come up with something," Jackson said. "At this point, you've got to take a chance instead of not doing anything different."

"Right now, we're rushing four guys a lot of times. We've got to come up with some more five-man rushes. We've got to do something to turn this around. We've got to find a spark somewhere."

Both teams go into tonight's game with 9-5 records. Los Angeles has locked up at least a wild-card berth in postseason play.

The Saints blew a four-game lead in the NFC West and they're struggling to stay alive for any sort of a playoff spot.

Florida State surprises North Carolina in Seminoles' first ACC contest

College basketball

By The Associated Press

The only thing wrong with Florida State's ACC debut was that it's all downhill from here.

Without two players suspended for fighting in the last game, the Seminoles played their first game in their new conference in the friendly confines of the Dean Dome against No. 5 North Carolina.

The experts penciled them down for an 0-1 start. Wrong.

Behind Sam Cassell's 22 points, Florida State started life in one of the nation's premier basketball conferences with an 86-74 victory over the Tar Heels on Sunday.

"Florida State's had some great wins in the NCAA tournament to get to the Final Four," coach Pat Kennedy said, "but I would have to say this probably ranks among the greatest moments and greatest victories in the school's history."

It's certainly the best in their Atlantic Coast Conference history.

"We said we had a game plan we felt could really work," Kennedy said. "And it did. We just tried to make the kids believe it."

The ones who had trouble believing were the 19,505 fans in Smith

Center as Florida State (4-1) took a 46-39 halftime lead and built it to a 64-46 advantage with 10:43 to play.

The Seminoles then worked the clock, but North Carolina (6-1) was able to get within 71-67 with 3:37 left only to go cold from the field and not score again until 42 seconds were left as Florida State made 9 of 11 free throws.

In games involving ranked teams on Saturday it was: No. 1 Duke 88, No. 18 Michigan 85 in overtime; No. 2 Arizona 66, New Mexico 54; No. 3 UCLA 84, San Diego State 64; No. 4 Ohio State 114, Howard 53; No. 6 Oklahoma State 82, Wichita State 54; No. 7 Kansas 104, DePaul 75; No. 8 Connecticut 94, Texas 77; No. 9 Kentucky 94, Arizona State 68; No. 10 Utah 75, Northridge State 58; No. 11 St. John's 86, Manhattan 50; No. 12 Seton Hall 64, St. Peter's 44; No. 13 Georgia Tech 90, Georgia State 72; No. 14 Indiana 99, Central Michigan 52; No. 15 Michigan State 91, Detroit 75; Iowa State 98, No. 16 Iowa 84; No. 20 Alabama 105, Old Dominion 67; No. 21 Missouri 90, UNLV 78; and No. 23 Georgetown 98, District of Columbia 48.

Cassell, Douglas Edwards and Ray Donald were each suspended for one game for being ejected for their part in a wild melee with Florida A&M last weekend. Cassell successfully appealed his case as tapes showed he was not involved in the fracas.

"I used to really love North Carolina. But I didn't want to attend North Carolina," Cassell said. "I felt I always wanted to try to beat Coach Smith, for some reason, because he had all the top-notch players. I just wanted to try and beat them."

North Carolina had welcomed the Seminoles to the conference by giving them a game ball in a pregame ceremony.

"What a great psychological thing, giving them that game ball," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "We surely showed our hospitality."

Chuck Graham had 19 points for Florida State, which had been a member of the Metro Conference, while Charlie Ward had 18, Andre Reid 12 and Rodney Dobard 11.

North Carolina's Hubert Davis scored all of his 21 points on 3-pointers, making seven of 12.

"We weren't real sharp. They were extremely sharp. I congratulate Pat for having them so ready," Smith said. "They came in and played loose and played well."

No. 1 Duke 88, No. 18 Michigan 85, OT

The defending NCAA champions had to go an extra five minutes to beat the team with the freshman class considered one of the best ever recruited. Duke's Bobby Hurley scored four of his 26 points in overtime, and it was his three free throws with 31 seconds to play in regulation that forced the overtime at 76-76. Michigan (4-1) had led by as many as five points in the last two minutes. Visiting Duke (5-0) only made one field goal in the overtime, but the Blue Devils made their last 15 free throws. Chris Webber, the best of the freshmen, led the Wolverines with 27 points and 12 rebounds before fouling out in the overtime.

No. 2 Arizona 66, New Mexico 54

The Wildcats (4-0) handed the Lobos (3-5) their fifth straight loss at home and held them to a season-low 36 percent shooting with an effective 1-3-1 zone defense. Khalid Reeves led Arizona, which had offensive problems of its own, shooting 46 percent, with 16 points. Ike Williams and Willie Banks each had 13 points for New Mexico.

No. 3 UCLA 84, San Diego St. 64

The visiting Bruins (4-0) blew open a close game with seven minutes to play despite missing center

Don MacLean, who had the flu. Sophomore Shon Tarver led UCLA with a career-high 26 points. Joe McNaull had 19 points and 13 rebounds to pace the Aztecs (1-5), who trailed 61-57 with 7:14 to play.

No. 4 Ohio St. 114, Howard 53

The Buckeyes (5-0) started the game with a 29-8 run and things only got worse for the visiting Bison (1-5). Jim Jackson scored or assisted on 20 of the points in the opening run. Jackson, who played just 26 minutes, had 21 points, a career-high nine assists, seven rebounds and five steals. Julius McNeil led Howard with 11 points.

No. 6 Oklahoma St. 82, Wichita St. 54

The Cowboys won their 20th in a row at home for their first 9-0 start since 1969-70. Byron Houston had 25 points for Oklahoma State, which started the game 2-for-9 from the field. Claudius Johnson and Michael Wiggins each had 11 points for the Shockers (2-2).

No. 7 Kansas 104, DePaul 75

The meeting was the first between the schools since 1947, and it turned into the Jayhawks' 22nd consecutive home victory. Rex Walters, a transfer from Northwestern, led Kansas (5-0) with 24 points. The loss was the worst for DePaul (3-3) since a 35-point setback to UNLV in the 1989 Preseason NIT.

No. 8 Connecticut 94, Texas 77

The Huskies (5-0) kept up their impressive defense in their first road game of the season. Texas (4-4) entered the game averaging 93.6 points per game and was held to 38 percent shooting. Scott Burrell led Connecticut with 26 points, while Benford Williams of the Longhorns had 31.

No. 9 Kentucky 94, Arizona St. 68

As usual, Kentucky's success came from beyond the 3-point line as Dale Brown made four 3-pointers in an 18-3 second-half run to spark the Wildcats (6-1) to the home victory. Arizona State (4-3), which had won its last three games, never got closer than 67-45 with 9:31 to go.

No. 10 Utah 75, Northridge St. 58

The Utes (8-1) went on a 17-4 run with nine minutes to play to break open a close game as the visiting Matadors lost for the eighth time in as many games. Reserve Jimmy Soto led Utah with 19 points. Josh Grant, last season's WAC player of the year, missed his second straight game and sixth season as his recovery from offseason knee surgery continues to be slow.

Corey captures first world title; Murray takes all-around crown

National Finals Rodeo

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Bareback rider Clint Corey claimed his first world title and Ty Murray capped the most successful season in the history of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association as the final round of the $2.45 million National Finals Rodeo ended Sunday.

Corey, who three times before had finished as runner-up to the bareback riding champion, claimed his first world crown with $107,350.

Murray smashed records this year en route to his third straight all-around championship, including the most money won in a season — $244,231. He actually won about $260,000, but is allowed to count earnings from only 100 rodeos.

Calf roper Fred Whitfield, the 1990 PRCA rookie of the year, won a world championship with $115,040 in 1991 earnings. Whitfield clobbered the record for total time on 10 rounds with a cumulative total of 91.7. He also broke the NFR calf roping earnings record with $70,609. With the title, Whitfield becomes the first black cowboy ever to win a PRCA timed event world championship.

Robert Etbauer of Goodwell, Okla., won his second saddle bronc riding title, setting a 10-round record of 766 points and a season-earnings record of $129,408, including $72,855 at the finals. He opened the NFR with wins in the first four rounds, overcoming a $33,000 lead by his brother, Billy Etbauer.

Bull rider Tuff Hedeman of Bowie, Texas, won his third world championship when he rode eight of 10 NFR bulls and pushed his season total to $111,071.

Ote Berry of Checotah, Okla., won the world steer wrestling championship, with earnings this year of $116,674. Berry won the final go-round in a time of 3.7 seconds.

Redskins register 34-17 triumph over out-of-the-playoffs Giants

By RICHARD KEIL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — No Washington Redskins dares talk about it for fear of bringing on a jinx. But New York Giants defensive lineman Leonard Marshall, who has postseason experience aplenty and the kind of perspective that prompts candor, is forthcoming about how far the Redskins can go.

"They are destined for the Super Bowl," Marshall said Sunday after the 14-1 Redskins registered a 34-17 triumph over the 7-8, out-of-the-playoffs Giants.

He wasn't the only one thinking that way.

"I wish them the best of luck in the Super Bowl," said Giants linebacker Steve DeOssie, who obviously expects the Redskins will win the two NFC playoff games that precede that contest. "They are a team on a roll."

But the "We'll Take 'Em One Game At A Time" Redskins were singing their familiar refrain.

"I was really proud of our guys because they had a good attitude," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said. "They have a tremendous amount of respect for the Giants, and they played them hard."

They should. Sunday's victory marked the first time since 1983 that the Redskins have swept their season series against the Giants. And despite their two wins this year, New York has still won seven of the last 10 meetings between the clubs.

But the Redskins, who have wrapped up the NFC East title and home-field advantage through the playoffs, played like a Super Bowl contender. By contrast, embattled Giants coach Ray Handley offered a surprisingly harsh self-assessment following another bitter defeat for the defending Super Bowl champions.

"Obviously a coach is responsible for discipline, and our discipline has just gone all to hell," Handley said. "By that, I mean simple execution ... the fundamentals have gone to hell."

The Redskins used a hurry-up offense to score one first-half touchdown and scored two other touchdowns after Giant turnovers to take a 24-10 halftime lead and take control of the contest.

After Matt Bahr's 36-yard field goal gave the Giants (7-8) a 3-0 first-period lead, the Redskins went to a hurry-up offense and scored on their second play when quarterback Mark Rypien hit Gary Clark for a 65-yard scoring strike.

Clark, who ran a turn-in out of a no-huddle formation, caught the ball at the New York 40, bounced off free safety Myron Guyton and broke a tackle by cornerback Perry Williams and raced into the end zone.

"That was just a throw, and Gary Clark did the rest," said Rypien. "Gary's been coming up big every game, and it looks like this is really his year."

On the hurry-up, Rypien said the Redskins used it because the Giants typically keep them bottled up offensively.

"We needed to get going and get going early," Rypien said. "We use it when we're struggling a bit, but we did it this time to keep that from happening."

"The tackling," Handley said later, reflecting on that play in particular, "was abysmal."

The pass to Clark was the first long gain of another big day for Rypien, who completed 9 of 19 passes for 230 yards and three touchdowns before leaving the game in the fourth period with a torn fingernail on his passing hand.

"He had a heckuva day, and he's really had a heckuva year," Gibbs said of the NFC's top-rated signal-caller entering the game. "I'm really proud of him because he's kind of proved himself every day."

But before Rypien led Washington to its 14th victory in 15 games, it was Giants quarterback Phil Simms' chance to shine.

After the Giants got the ball at the Washington 43 following a 25-yard Kelly Goodburn punt, New York took a 10-7 lead with 13:34 remaining in the half when Simms ran the ball in from the Washington 1.

The scramble, which capped an eight-play drive, came on the third play of the second quarter. Simms was 9-for-12 for 95 yards in the first 15 minutes of play.

But then Washington's opportunistic defense took over.

On New York's next possession, Simms fumbled a snap from center and free safety Danny Copeland, coming on a blitz, fell on the ball at the New York 17. Rookie running back Ricky Ervins ran 15 yards to the 2, and two plays later, Gerald Riggs plunged into the end zone to give the Redskins a 14-10 lead with 9:16 left in the first half.

Copeland set up Washington's next touchdown, a 22-yard pass from Rypien to tight end Terry Orr, when he picked off a Simms pass at the Washington 32 on New York's next possession. A 37-yard pass from Rypien to Art Monk preceded the touchdown that gave Washington a 21-10 lead with 6:31 remaining in the first half.

A 36-yard field goal by Chip Lohmiller with 1:02 left in the first half gave the Redskins a 24-10 halftime lead. On the play before Lohmiller's kick, Washington blew a chance to go up 28-10 when a wide-open Ricky Sanders dropped a Rypien pass in the end zone.

After Lohmiller kicked another 36-yarder with 4:42 left in the third period to give Washington a 27-10 lead, New York's offense finally got back on track.

The Giants used just 3:02 and five plays to move the ball 80 yards and cut the Redskins lead to 27-17 when Simms hit Mark Ingram with an 18-yard touchdown pass.

It was the first time in the past three games that the Redskins defense, ranked third in the NFL coming into the game, had allowed any second-half points.

However, the Redskins scored on their next possession to up their advantage to 34-17 when Rypien connected with Clark on a 50-yard touchdown pass.

The scoring drive was a typical one for the Redskins on this day, as they needed just four plays to get into the end zone.

Washington's other three touchdowns drives took two, two and four plays, respectively.

The 34 points scored by Washington is the most that New York has yielded this season.

Briscoe boys edge by Hedley to win Samnorwood tourney

Briscoe slipped by Hedley, 67-66, Saturday to capture the boys' championship in the Samnorwood Invitational.

Jimmy Nelson, a 6-1 sophomore, hit two foul shots with no time on the clock to give Briscoe the narrow margin of victory.

Briscoe had to overcome adversity to win the game. Starter Kevin Shields left the game in the first quarter after spraining an ankle. Danny Nelson, another starter, is out with mononucleosis.

"It was a hard-fought game and we trailed most of the way," said Briscoe coach Jerry Brown. "We got into foul trouble the second half and we had to use kids off the bench."

They did a super job."

Dallas Fillingim led Briscoe in scoring with 28 points. Travis Goad and Nelson added 14 points each.

Hedley led by 4 points (50-46) after three quarters.

Hedley was led by Kevin Johnson with 32 points.

Briscoe boosted its won-loss record to 11-2.

Kristy Case scored 21 points in leading Groom past Samnorwood, 52-37, in the girls' finals.

Karen Babcock added 17 points to Groom's scoring attack.

Groom sped to a 16-point lead (28-12) at halftime.

Mithlo was high scorer for Samnorwood with 20 points.

Lakers rally to defeat Sacramento

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Sam Perkins had 23 points and 13 rebounds and A.C. Green came off the bench with 20 points and 10 rebounds as the Los Angeles Lakers used a third-quarter rally to defeat the Sacramento Kings 110-94 Sunday night.

The Kings led 57-50 at halftime before Los Angeles tied the game at 59-59 on Sedale Threatt's jumper with 7:43 left in the third quarter. Behind Green's 10 points, the Lakers outscored Sacramento 26-8 in the first nine minutes of the period for a 76-65 advantage.

Los Angeles, winners of 42 straight regular-season games against the Kings at the Forum since Oct. 20, 1974, went on to lead by as many as 18 points in the fourth quarter.

The victory improved the Lakers' record to 15-7, good enough for a one-game lead over idle Golden State in the Pacific Division.

Sacramento, which got 23 points from Mitch Richmond, made 15 of 21 field-goal attempts and got 11 points from Spud Webb to lead 35-24 after one period.

The Kings extended the margin to 55-41 on Duane Causwell's layup with 2:34 left in the first half, but the Lakers scored the next seven points in 49 seconds, capped by Perkins' 3-pointer with 1:15.

James Worthy scored 18 points for the Lakers, who held the Kings' Lionel Simmons to 10 points, eight under his average.

Deb Richard of Ponte Vedre Beach, Fla., runner-up in 1990, urges her putt along on the 12th green Sunday during the second round of the LPGA Match Play Championship at the Makai Golf Club in Princeville, Hawaii. Richard settled for par and defeated Kristi Albers three and two to advance to Monday's semifinal round.

Richard advances to semifinals in World Match Play Championship

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii (AP) — Betsy King and Deb Richard need one more win apiece to face each other again in the final of the $500,000 LPGA World Match Play Championship.

King, the defending champion, took on Chris Tschetter in this morning's semifinals after defeating Dawn Coe 2 and 1 Sunday. Richard, who placed second last year, beat Kristi Albers 3 and 2 in the quarterfinals to face Michelle Estill. The third-place and championship matches were to be played later in the day.

The tournament was in danger of being cancelled after play was postponed Saturday because of torrential rains and flooding on Kauai Island that left three people dead and caused more than $7.1 million damage. But play resumed at the par-72, 6,212-yard Princeville Resort Makai Course after the weather improved.

"The day off yesterday didn't really hurt my game. It worked out OK," King said. "The greens are fine and the balls are holding well. The fairways are still wet in spots. The course recovered very well."

"The course is remarkably good after the rain," said Richard, who felt the postponement hurt her.

"After the rain delay, I was very sluggish," Richard said. "I was not overly pleased with how I struck the ball. This was a day the putter really came through for me."

Richard was 2 up after paring the second and fourth holes.

Albers battled back, claiming the par-4, 375-yard sixth hole with a birdie, but Richard took the par-4, 390-yard seventh hole with a birdie of her own. She clinched the match with a 10-foot birdie on the par-3, 180-yard 16th hole.

King fell one hole behind when Coe birdied the par-5, 495-yard third hole, but drew even with a birdie on the seventh.

King claimed the next two holes with birdies and took the 13th with a par before losing the 16th with a bogey. King held on to win by half-ing the 17th.

Estill made it into the semis by defeating Tina Barrett 4 and 3, while Tschetter downed Martha Nause 1-up.

Hill captures final Senior Tournament of 1991 golf season

DORADO, Puerto Rico (AP) — Mike Hill should have known better than to doubt Lee Trevino.

After all, Trevino correctly predicted that Orville Moody — the longest shot of them all — would win the 1969 U.S. Open.

And last year after he had become the leading money-winner in American golf, Trevino predicted Hill could become a dominant figure on the Senior PGA Tour.

"I didn't believe him," Hill said. But he fulfilled Trevino's prophecy Sunday by scoring his fifth victory of the season and joining Trevino as the only two Senior PGA Tour players to top $1 million in single season earnings.

He came from behind on the final nine holes, made up a two-shot deficit and won the season-ending Champions tournament with a closing 67 and a 202 total.

"No question about it," Hill said, "this is, by far, the biggest thing that has happened to me in golf."

His victory over Jim Colbert enabled Hill to (1) lead the Senior Tour in money-earnings, (2) lead the seniors in tournament victories for the year and (3) made him the leading candidate for Player of the Year honors when the senior players vote later this month.

And, like Trevino a year ago, Hill's total for the year surpassed that of the leader on the regular PGA Tour. Hill won $300,000 — $150,000 from the tournament purse and another $150,000 in a season-long bonus pool — and finished the year with $1,065,657. Corey Pavin led the regular tour with $979,430.
