Another Salvadoran conservative slain

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Unidentified gunmen shot and killed a retired army colonel and conservative political leader near his home today and seriously wounded his 4-year-old daughter, relatives said.

Col. Tito Adalberto Rosa, 55, was shot down at 7:50 a.m. in the El Hogar neighborhood on the northern outskirts of the capital, said a relative who asked not to be identified for security reasons.

He was the second political leader gunned down in the past 24 hours.

His killers intercepted his car at a stop sign near his house and fired on him, killing Rosa and seriously wounding his daughter, who was with him, the relative said.

Rosa had been the departmental military commander in Cabanas province north of San Salvador during the 1970s and retired after the Oct. 15, 1979, coup that overthrew the government of Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero.

He had been serving as coordinator of the political campaign of the ultra-conservative Salvadoran Authentic Institutional Party for Cabanas province. The party is one of eight taking part in March 25 presidential elections.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the killing. The Popular Liberation Forces, one of five rebel groups battling the government, has taken responsibility for the slayings of several retired military officers in the past.

Two young gunmen walked up to a conservative legislator Wednesday and shot him dead on a San Salvador sidewalk, while in the countryside 4,000 army troops pressed a pre-election offensive against leftist rebels.

The assassination of Hector Tulio Flores Larin, 46, was the fifth murder of a conservative member of the 60-seat Constituent Assembly in less than two years. There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

The attack coincided with fighting between the army and rebels based in northeastern El Salvador. The troops have mounted a week-long offensive against guerrilla strongholds in San Miguel and Morazan provinces.

Late Wednesday, about 1,500 soldiers recaptured the town of Corinto, held by rebels since November 1982. The army said five soldiers and at least five guerrillas were reported killed and at least 30 soldiers wounded during the day.

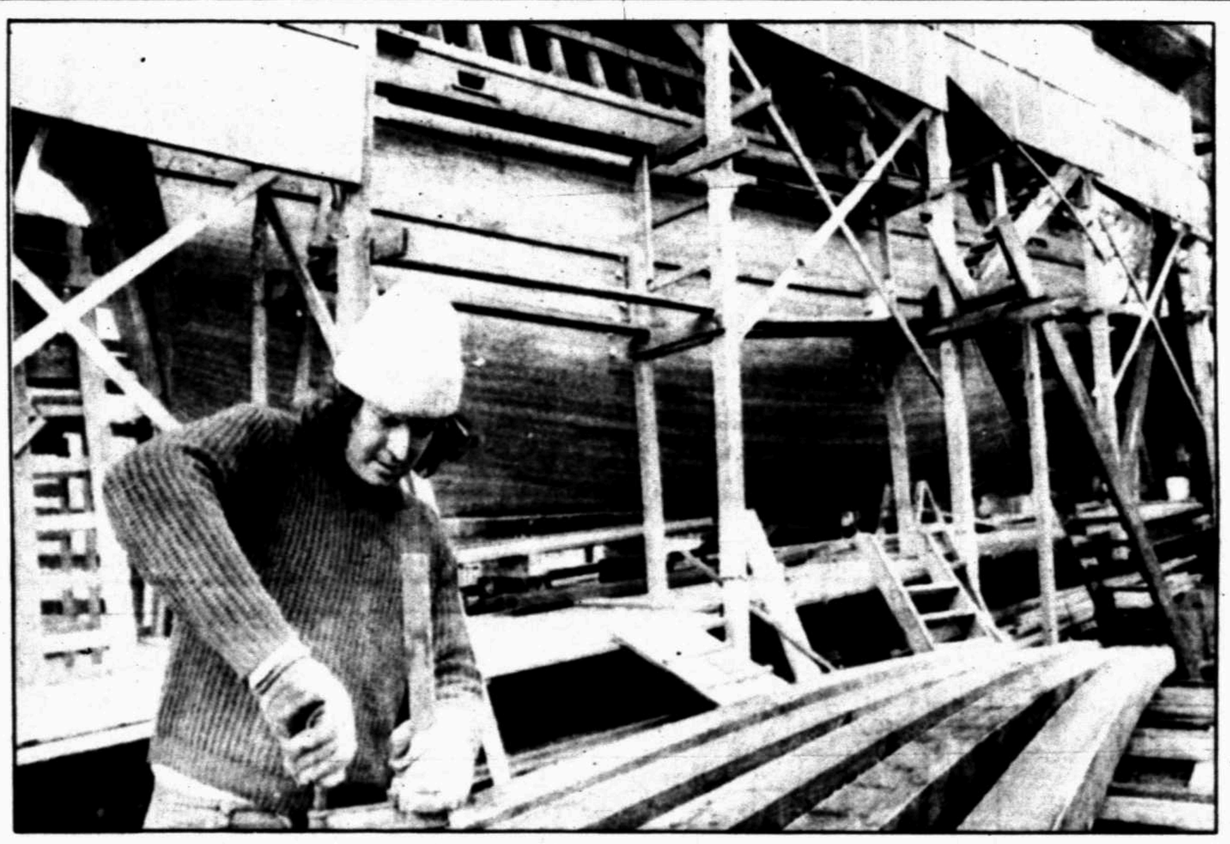

Leftist leaders are boycotting the elections, saying their candidates would be targets for rightist death squads. They have said they will not disrupt the balloting, but army commanders say they expect rebel attacks on election day.

In another development, El Salvador's Human Rights Commission, a private organization, asked the government to release results of its probe into the March 1983 death of commission president Marianella Garcia Villa.

The Defense Ministry said at the time that Ms. Garcia Villa was part of an anti-government guerrilla troop and was with rebels when she was killed.

In Washington on Wednesday, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved requests by President Reagan for $93 million in emergency military aid to El Salvador, plus $21 million in additional aid to Honduras-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force rebels fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The administration accuses Nicaragua of shipping arms to Salvadoran rebels and says its military ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union threaten security throughout Central America.

Working with Godspeed

Recreating the deck beams of the 17th century ship Godspeed at a Yorktown, Va., boat shop is Kenny Cole Jr. The replica will be launched May 12 and will recreate the voyage from England to Jamestown, site of the first permanent English settlement in this country.

Jamestown seeks place in history

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer

JAMESTOWN, Va. — A replica of the 17th-century Godspeed will sail next year from England to America, re-enacting its pioneering voyage in what organizers hope will solve an identity problem for this historic Virginia community.

Residents hope to remind potential tourists that the first permanent English-speaking settlers in the New World arrived here in 1607. The Pilgrims didn't get to better-known Plymouth Rock in Massachusetts until 1620.

"People come to the Jamestown Festival Park and want to see the rock," said Ross Weeks Jr., executive director of the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation. "There is a general lack of clarity on the origins of the United States. It's often said that New England had better PR people than Virginia."

Three small ships — the Susan Constant, the Godspeed and the Discovery — carried 104 men on a five-month passage across the stormy Atlantic to Virginia.

The recreated voyage with just the Godspeed will take three months and a crew of eight.

The three ships were reconstructed for the 350th anniversary of the Jamestown landing in 1957. By 1980, though, the ships were rotting and park officials decided to rebuild the fleet.

The completed 102-foot Susan Constant sits along a pier at the park, but can't be taken to sea because it is weighed down by cement ballast.

The 68-foot Godspeed and the tiny 49-foot Discovery are still under construction and are scheduled to be launched May 12. The Godspeed will undergo sea trials in preparation for its voyage, but the Discovery will not make the trip because it is so small.

The two ships are being rebuilt with $728,500 in state funds. The voyage, however, will be privately funded except for $57,800 in state-paid insurance costs. The trip will cost about $240,000 and about $145,000 has been raised so far, Weeks said.

Plans call for the Godspeed to travel by freighter to England in January or February. It will spend several weeks on display at Ipswich Port, near Otley Hall, family home of the original Godspeed's captain, Bartholomew Gosnold. The ship will set sail on April 1, 1985, from Blackwall, where the original voyage started.

"It gives Virginia an opportunity to re-establish very strong historical ties with England," Weeks said. "Also ... it reminds people that the English settled in Jamestown."

Meese called to testify when hearings resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edwin Meese III, under fire from Senate Democrats opposed to his nomination as attorney general, will return to testify before a Senate panel that reopens hearings on the case Tuesday, it was announced today.

The Senate Judiciary Committee's announcement of new hearings came as one Meese opponent questioned whether the White House counselor will be confirmed to succeed William French Smith as attorney general.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said he thinks Reagan's top domestic adviser should withdraw his name "and save the president and himself further embarrassment."

Metzenbaum, interviewed on CBS, said, "I think that it's a very serious question at this moment as to whether he will be confirmed."

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Joseph Biden, D-Del., said that on Tuesday, the first day of new hearings, the committee will probably call new witnesses to discuss Meese's finances and other questions.

Biden, the panel's ranking Democrat, said there were discussions between White House officials and Senate leaders on reopening the hearings.

"We agreed upon some witnesses now but the White House will have to determine what their position will be" on whether several top White House aides will testify, he said.

Thurmond said Meese has agreed to return, but it was not clear when he would appear.

Sen. James East, R-N.C., opposed the new hearings, saying they amounted to "Washington-style cannibalism."

Meanwhile, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said he was pleased Thurmond, the panel's chairman, has agreed to reopen hearings because he believes there are "several open questions" that Meese must answer.

Teen mother fights eviction

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A teen-ager refusing to leave a home for unwed mothers without her baby says she should have been allowed a "cooling-off period" after signing papers giving the infant up for adoption.

But officials of the Edna Gladney Home for unwed mothers say 19-year-old Barbara Landry made the decision voluntarily, and deny her claim that she was brainwashed into giving up her daughter.

Miss Landry, 19, gave birth Feb. 10. "I didn't want it," she said Wednesday. "It was just a belly there. But after she was born it hit me.

"...You know, with anything you buy, there's still a cooling-off period...a piece of land, a piece of meat you buy at the supermarket. But this is a baby, a life, and I signed my life away."

Officials at the home asked State District Judge Brian A. Carper to evict Miss Landry, but he refused Tuesday to hear the case, saying it was a matter for a justice of the peace.

William Schur, an attorney representing the home, declined Wednesday night to comment on the case, but said no further actions had been filed "that I know of."

"I can't believe they want to evict me," Miss Landry said. "It's all screwed up because I signed those stupid papers. They pressure you. They tell you how good adoption is for you and the baby and then you can make a new life for yourself."

Miss Landry said she left New York in the fall when she learned she was pregnant, making up a story for her parents about being transferred from her job at a race track to another track in Florida.

Area farmers facing deadline

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Although local farmers fear they are facing another bad year, a ruling by a state district judge is forcing them to fork out more money on their laborers.

Farmers and ranchers with one or more employees have until midnight Friday to buy workers' compensation insurance or they face serious liability without common law defenses should they be sued by an injured employee.

Chris King, president of the Midland County Farm Bureau, said the 50 farmers in this county could be sued after that deadline if they don't have workmen's compensation insurance.

"All the farmers in this area carry employers' liability," said King. "It will increase the cost tremendously to add workmen's compensation. I do know it will cause a lot of unemployment. We can't afford the added costs. It will prohibit us from hiring laborers."

The situation was caused by State District Judge Harley Clark of Austin who ruled March 7 that exemption of farm and ranch laborers from workers' compensation is unconstitutional.

Hoot Leonard with the Midland County Farmers' Co-op said it's part of the farm laborers movement headed by Caesar Chavez in California.

Farmers now are paying about 13.70 percent for Social Security benefits on the workers, according to Leonard. This requirement will add another 7.5 to 9 percent to what farmers are putting out for laborers in addition to the salaries.

Los Angeles, despite distance, a 'border city'

BORDER SOCIETY:
Fifth in a series

LOS ANGELES — Although it is 140 miles north of the U.S.-Mexico border, this is a border city.

Los Angeles, with millions of Hispanics, is integrated into the border society far more than San Diego, to the south.

And, while Los Angeles clearly is part of the United States, areas of the city are more Mexican even than the border city of Tijuana, say some residents here.

"I wouldn't say all of Los Angeles is part of the border," said Jose Luis Lopez, an English teacher at Roosevelt High School. "But East Los Angeles IS the border. It is a port of entry. After they get here, they become aware of the other side."

East Los Angeles may be the heart of the border society in Los Angeles, but links to the border run throughout the city, to its outer suburbs and then, some argue, much farther north.

"The band that makes up the border," said Leobardo Estrada, a demographer at the University of California at Los Angeles, "really extends all the way up Southern California just south of Santa Barbara, across to San Bernardino and down into the Imperial Valley. That's the border today."

In Estrada's view, the "border" is a bicultural band across the U.S.-Mexico line where work, commerce, family and language intermingle without regard for international boundaries. Los Angeles is inextricably linked to the border by the volume of movement from here to Tijuana, Mexicali, Ciudad Juarez, the interior of Mexico — and back again.

The border society in Los Angeles is unmistakable.

Banuelos, vice president of the Mexican Chamber of Commerce in Los Angeles, sits back, smiles and contradicts the popular misconception: More than half the population of Compton is NOT black, but Hispanic.

"Urban growth here is strong. The population is growing and it's puro Mexicano," said Banuelos.

Guards scale Berlin wall

WEST BERLIN (DPA) — Two East German border guards have escaped to West Berlin after scaling the Berlin wall, police said Wednesday.

Officials said the two, members of East Germany's frontier security force, climbed the wall early Tuesday after leaving their nearby watchtower under the pretence of investigating a suspicious object in the "death strip" between East and West Berlin.

East German border guards and construction workers began building Wednesday a second wall about 100 yards behind the existing wall dividing Berlin.

West German police said that by early afternoon about 100 yards of the new wall had been completed south of the Brandenburg gate.

In recent years, more and more East Germans were able to scale the old wall completed in August 1961 and flee to West Berlin in spite of renovation work designed to deter would-be fugitives.

Picketer killed; Police say death non-violent

LONDON (AP) — The mineworkers' union said a picketing Yorkshire miner was killed today when hit by a brick outside a coal mine where pickets and non-strikers had clashed. Police were quoted as saying the death was not caused by violence.

A spokesman for the National Union of Mineworkers said the miner, David Gareth Jones, 24, "was killed on the picket line" before dawn outside Ollerton Colliery in Nottinghamshire. "This tragedy obviously exacerbated an already inflamed situation," he added.

Running fights between Yorkshire pickets and police erupted this morning outside a second Nottinghamshire pit, Thoresby Colliery. Police said violence flared after 300 police forced back 300 pickets in order to let local miners through to report for the early morning shift.

The national coal industry strike began Monday in protest against government plans to close unprofitable pits.

Trouble erupted outside Ollerton mine Wednesday night when 300 "flying pickets" from Yorkshire arrived in defiance of an order by the High Court in London to stop blockading mines in other counties. Ten pickets were arrested.

The spokesman quoted Arthur Scargill, militant left-wing president of the National Union of Mineworkers, as saying Jones died "having been hit by a brick in the neck."

But the British domestic news agency Press Association quoted police in Nottinghamshire as saying Jones' death was not caused by violence.

A Nottinghamshire police spokesman who in accordance with British practice declined to be named said Jones, from South Kirkby in Yorkshire in northern England, collapsed while with friends in a street some distance from Ollerton Colliery. He said Jones was taken by ambulance to nearby Mansfield General Hospital where he later died.

Three bus-loads of striking miners from the county of Kent in southeast England arrived Wednesday night to picket three mines in Leicestershire, another Midlands county. But they encountered an equal number of police and failed to turn away many night-shift mine workers.

Scargill said the injunction won Wednesday by the state-run National Coal Board would only stiffen the pickets' resolve to bring all Britain's 174 mines to a standstill. Three-quarters of the mines already are idle.

But a Coal Board official was quoted by the British Broadcasting Corp. as saying the pickets' latest action was a blatant disregard of the law.

The Press Association said street battles broke out Wednesday night outside Ollerton Colliery after local residents emerging from a tavern shouted insults at pickets.It said when pickets were told their parked cars had been vandalized, they began attacking local miners and others at random.

Rival groups hurled bricks and timber at each other, and at least two persons were injured, it said.

IRA leader wounded in attack

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Gerry Adams

LONDON — Protestant extremist gunmen shot and wounded Gerry Adams, leader of the Irish Republican Army's political wing, in an assassination attempt in downtown Belfast Wednesday.

Adams, 34, was hit in the neck, shoulder and upper arm but his life was not thought to be in danger, according to accounts of the incident from Belfast. Four companions in the car taking Adams from a court where he was on trial for disorderly conduct and obstructing police during an election rally last June were also wounded.

Police arrested three armed men a short time later near the scene of the shooting, ramming the gunmen's car before they could get away. Police said an undercover patrol had been following Adams' car.

The outlawed Ulster Freedom Fighters, a Protestant extremist group, claimed responsibility Wednesday night for the assassination attempt.

As president of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political arm, Adams is the most important public figure in the militant Republican movement in Northern Ireland. He officially denies membership in the oulawed IRA, but is widely regarded as its political mastermind. Adams has refused to condemn the IRA's use of violence and has asserted that only "armed struggle" will drive Britain out of Ulster.

The attack on Adams came after a week in which five Protestants were killed in a surge of sectarian violence. The shooting is also on the eve of a speech to a joint session of Congress Thursday by Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald in which he is expected to appeal for an end to support by Americans for the IRA.

Adams was elected to the British House of Commons from a Belfast constituency in last June's election, but like other Sinn Fein candidates has refused to take his seat. Gerry Fitt, the moderate Catholic politician who had represented the area, said Wednesday night that "Adams has become a victim, a casualty of a war in which he believes."

A short time later, youths attacked the home where Fitt formerly lived and set it afire. He is now a member of the House of Lords and resides in London. Britain's press association also reported buses being stoned in other Catholic areas of Belfast and said at least one had been hijacked and set on fire.

Adams has been a target of previous assassination plots and has said that he and his wife must sleep in "safe houses" and vary their movements. His presence at the highly publicized trial, which opened Tuesday, meant, uncharacteristically, that his movements were known. Adams' public appearances are generally unscheduled and he spends most of his time in the Catholic areas of Belfast.

As Adams and the other men were driving away from the court during the lunch recess, a Rover sedan pulled alongside and riddled the car with automatic weapons fire. Although wounded, the driver of Adams' car managed to get to a hospital where all five men were being treated Wednesday night. Their conditions were all described as stable.

Adams was named president of Sinn Fein late last year after serving as vice president since 1978. His involvement with the IRA began in 1971 and he was jailed several times for alleged terrorist offenses. But since beginning a public political career, Adams has adopted a smoother image, puffing a pipe, wearing tweed jackets and having his hair neatly trimmed.

Under his leadership, Sinn Fein has increased its share of the Catholic vote in Northern Ireland elections. Even his bitterest opponents acknowledge that he has a formidable political presence because of his ability to look and sound reasonable while advocating hard-line Republican views including violence.

"There are those who tell us the British government will not be moved by armed struggle," Adams often says. "The history of Ireland and of British colonial involvement through the world tells us that they will not be moved by anything else."

Guerrilla sentenced to prison

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — An army private who admitted involvement in an unsuccessful coup attempt against Prime Minister Robert Mugabe has been sentenced to 16 years in prison.

Simon Mbedzi, sentenced Wednesday, was one of 10 defendants who had fought as guerrillas under opposition leader Joshua Nkomo in the seven-year war against white-minority rule. Five who denied taking part in the attack remain on trial and four have been acquitted.

Two years ago, Mugabe accused Nkomo of plotting to overthrow him, and dismissed his former guerrilla ally from the Cabinet.

The defendants were charged with terrorism and sabotage, and accused of attacking Mugabe's residence June 24, 1982, as part of a plot to install Nkomo in power.

A few shots were fired from an army truck speeding past Mugabe's residence. The defendants were captured in a clash with police in a suburb of the capital.

Nuclear power plant in operation

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's first nuclear power plant is now in operation, nearly a year behind schedule because of a attack by black nationalist saboteurs.

The plant, called Koeberg I, is on the South Atlantic coast 20 miles north of Cape Town. Danie Steyn, the minister of mineral and energy affairs, told Parliament the plant began operations Wednesday and will reach its full generating capacity of 920-megawatts in July.

Students clash with police again

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Students clashed with police for a second straight day during protests against inflation and International Monetary Fund demands for austerity measures.

Hundreds of high school pupils joined students from the Autonomous University of Santo Domingo, who started Wednesday's protest.

Police used tear gas and fired revolvers in the air in an attempt to bring the students under control. Police said they did not know how many people were injured or arrested.

Many junior and high schools in Santo Domingo were closed through today. The university was closed Tuesday and authorities said it probably would not reopen until next week.

A main target of the demonstrations was the government's negotiations with the IMF, which has conditioned the second installment of a $599 million loan on a series of stringent economic austerity measures.

Legislature elects captains regent

SAN MARINO (AP) — The legislature has elected a 27-year-old Communist and a 34-year-old Socialist to share executive power in the world's oldest republic for six-month terms starting April 11.

The Foreign Ministry said Wednesday the new captains regent are Gloriana Ranocchini, a Communist who is the second woman ever elected to the post, and Giorgio Crescentini, a Socialist teacher.

Under the 484-year-old constitution, two captains regent are selected each six months as chief executives of the 23-square-mile enclave in Italy's Apennine Mountains.

San Marino has a population of about 21,000. It was founded in 301 and is the sole survivor of the many independent states that existed in Italy before unification in the 19th century.

Thirteen people killed in shootout

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Thirteen people were reported killed and 28 injured in a shootout between tribal insurgents and government security forces in Manipur state.

United News of India said three children were among the 13 killed Wednesday in Impahl, capital of the remote state bordering Burma.

Group works to consolidate cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A security committee representing four warring factions worked today to consolidate the two-day-old cease-fire that has given Beirut residents their first respite from the sounds of war in months.

Police reported truce violations overnight in some areas along the "green line" that divides Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors, but all were minor and caused no casualties.

Residents close to the frontline said they heard a few shell or grenade blasts shortly before midnight, then only sporadic sniper firing.

The leaders of Lebanon's warring factions, meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, since Monday, proclaimed the cease-fire Tuesday evening and set up the security committee in Beirut to see that it is observed.

Since the cease-fire, there has been a marked decrease of hostilities in Beirut and in the hills east of the Lebanese capital.

A vice president of Cable News Network said, meanwhile, that the television network assumed its Beirut bureau chief, missing for eight days, had been kidnapped.

CNN executive Ted Turner, in Beirut coordinating efforts to find Levin, said Wednesday that three U.S. television networks — NBC, ABC and CNN — sent letters to Lebanese leaders at national reconciliation talks in Switzerland asking that they use their "good offices" to "seek the release of CNN's Jerry Levin."

Turner said that "street talk indicates that he's still alive. We believe he's alive, but no group has come forward to claim responsibility for the kidnapping."

Jeremy Levin, 51, a native of Michigan who uses the nickname Jerry on the air, was last seen by his wife when she left their apartment in the Manara neighborhood of west Beirut at 7:30 a.m. March 7.

The truce committee — made up of representatives of the Lebanese army as well as rival Christian, Druse and Shiite Moslem militias — is charged with creating disengagement zones on both sides of the "green line" and between combatants in Beirut's southern suburbs and the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb.

It agreed on Wednesday to meet in a building in "no-man's land" near the headquarters of the French contingent, the only member of the four-nation multinational force left in Beirut. The Italian and British contingents have withdrawn from the area, and the U.S. contingent has been redeployed to American warships offshore.

The committee has been empowered to form an observer force of retired army and police officers to man the proposed disengagement zones. It also has the task of trying to arrange the reopening of Beirut's airport and harbor.

Both facilities have been closed by fighting since Feb. 6 when Syrian-backed Moslem militiamen seized control of west Beirut from the Lebanese army, a move which marked a turning point in the civil war, forcing a series of defeats on the Lebanese army and eventually sending Gemayel to Syria in an effort to save his government.

Guerrillas raid Colombian town

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Four states in southern Colombia were under a state of siege today after leftist guerrillas slipped into a city undetected aboard hijacked buses and then launched their heaviest attack in a year.

The surprise attack Wednesday by about 100 men and women of the April 19 Movement shattered the government's hopes for arranging a peace treaty with the insurgents.

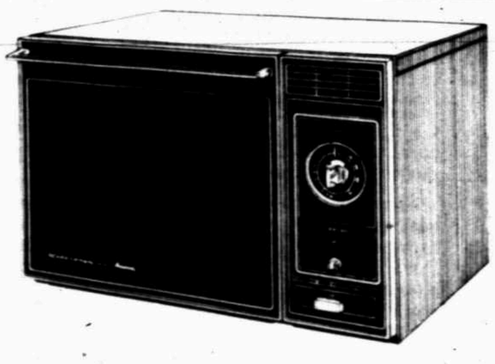

The Defense Ministry said 20 guerrillas and two civilians were killed, along with two guards slain when rebels overran the jail, released all 125 prisoners and armed them with rifles and pistols.

President Belisario Betancur, who has tried to negotiate with the guerrillas, declared a state of siege in the states of Caqueta, Huila, Cauca and Meta, allowing him to restrict civil liberties so government forces can crack down on the rebels.

The attackers eased into the town of Florencia aboard two hijacked buses Wednesday morning, the Defense Ministry said in a communique. It saidthe rebels — wearing civilian clothes and with weapons hidden — fanned out in the city of about 50,000 people and then unleashed fierce, simultaneous attacks with assault rifles, submachine guns, hand grenades and mortars.

Warm weather whisking into the Permian Basin this week almost resulted in another record high Wednesday. With mercury climbing to 85, the temperature barely missed the record mark of 86.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, spring temperatures will continue with a low tonight expected to drop into the upper 40s and a high on Friday reaching into the middle 70s.

Skies should be fair tonight, turning partly cloudy Friday.

Tonight's easterly winds at 5-10 mph are expected to shift southerly at 10-20 mph Friday.

The pleasant overnight low of 55 missed the record low of 22, set in 1962, by 33 degrees.

STATE

Patches of fog and drizzle developed for the third straight day over the eastern half of Texas as an area of high pressure pushed in moisture from the Gulf of Mexico.

Forecasts called for most of the fog to burn off, but the haze was expected to linger across the coast into Friday, reducing visibilities to under one mile and creating hazardous conditions for ship traffic.

Partly cloudy skies were noted over the South Plains and the Edwards Plateau, while fair skies were the rule over the Panhandle and Trans Pecos.

Pre-dawn temperatures were in the 30s in the Davis Mountains, while the mercury was hovering in the 50s in the Panhandle and South Plains. The rest of the state reported readings in the 60s and 70s.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 38 at Marfa to 73 at Brownsville.

Winds were generally from the south and southeast at 10 to 20 mph.

The forecast called for cloudy to partly cloudy skies over most of Texas. Widespread thunderstorms were possible Friday.

NATION

Relief came to the Northeast today as a winter storm that dumped up to 2 feet in some parts of Maine and left five people dead in New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut gave way to a warming trend.

But T-shirt weather in the northern Plains was short-lived as another snowstorm threatened the Dakotas today.

Although most of New England expected sunshine and milder temperatures today, a winter storm warning continued across northern Maine, where light snow and strong winds lingered.

Residents of Albany, N.Y., were recovering from the second-worst March snowfall in that city's history, with expected temperatures as high as the mid-50s for the next few days.

FORECAST

Fair tonight with a low in the upper 40s. Partly cloudy Friday with a high in the middle 70s. Easterly winds at 5-10 mph tonight, shifting to southerly at 10-20 mph Friday.

Los Angeles still 'border city'

The successful businessman is president of the supermarket Cali-Mex de Compton, where 60 percent of the goods on his shelves are imported from Mexico. The Mexican goods are there, he says, because the demand is there.

According to the 1980 census, more than 2 million Hispanics reside in Los Angeles County. Some figure the number at twice that, given an annual growth rate of 5 percent and an uncounted population of Latin American refugees and Mexican undocumented workers.

"The reason Los Angeles is more of a border city than San Diego," said Ron Ambrus, general sales manager of KWKW, "La Mexicana" radio, "is that you haven't got any people down there."

The Hispanic population of Los Angeles is greater than the entire population of San Diego County.

A major reason so many Mexicans choose to live and work in Los Angeles is that it is a home away from home.

"When a Mexican arrives in Los Angeles, he looks for what he knows, for what is familiar," said Armando Roqueblave, manager of Canada, a Mexican shoe store on Broadway in the heart of the city.

In Los Angeles, "the familiar" is present in Spanish-language radio and television, Mexican movies, magazines, theater and music groups, soccer leagues, foods and even in shoes from Canada — the Thom McAnn of Mexico.

Another, perhaps more important, reason why Mexicans choose to live and work in Los Angeles — and the reason many often leave again — is family.

"More than half of us here in Los Angeles have direct contact with Mexico," said Banuelos. "We have family ties in Mexico and we have a longing to be in Mexico."

Family ties — grandparents visiting grandchildren, workers making trips home, aunts and uncles on vacation — account for a great deal of the movement from here to the border and back.

Much of the flow of workers to and from the border is illegal, and so it is difficult to quantify. But the legal flow of relatives, shoppers and tourists can be charted in automobile and bus traffic and in commerce — particularly in the loss of business and tourism after the 1982 Mexican peso devaluations.

Greyhound carries about 2,500 passengers each month from Los Angeles through San Diego to Tijuana, and Transportes Rapidos carries slightly fewer. El Paso Limousine makes daily trips from Los Angeles to El Paso, Texas, and its sister city across the border, Ciudad Juarez.

Art Moncada, who ran a commuter bus line in 1983, says his vans carried about 2,000 people each month from Los Angeles to downtown Tijuana or to the Tijuana airport, and half were repeat passengers.

Moncada said the passengers were tourists, workers returning home to Baja California for the weekend and residents traveling south for shopping or family visits.

Scores of bus "pirates" make their living soliciting business outside the Greyhound terminal, offering to drive commuters in their vans to Tijuana for less than the bus price.

Leticia Sanders of Palmdale travels from Los Angeles to Tijuana and back about once a week.

"I go to the dentist in Tijuana. They are a lot cheaper and they do a good job," Ms. Sanders said.

"And I am trying to see if I can open a small sewing business down there. I have cousins there. I enjoy going back and forth."

Ms. Sanders said that, at first, her American husband did not like her traveling to Tijuana alone, but when he saw that the dental work which would have cost her $6,000 in the United States cost $1,300 in Tijuana, "He said, 'OK, go ahead.'"

City market caters to needs of Spanish-speaking customers

By MARJORIE MILLER
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — From the center of a fruit stand that is brilliant with apple red, mango orange, avocado green, a vendor's deep voice swirls out to shoppers at Grand Central Market: "To-ma-tes, to-ma-tes," he sings in Spanish.

At a nearby stall, another aproned vendor picks a senorita out of the crowd and, in accented English, beckons: "Can I help you? Porque no?"

The giant market on Broadway is a harmony of sound and smell, color and movement, unlike a modern American supermarket.

Near the entrance, men lean against a counter cantina laughing and gossiping over a Miller or Dos XX beer. Inside, shoppers stop for empanadas (meat pies) or fresh fruit juice.

Grand Central Market is a fish market, with fresh shrimp, squid and sea bass.

It is a butcher shop, with steaks and chops, chorizo sausage, lamb heads and pansa (stomach) for Mexican menudo.

It is a vegetable market where prickly pears, yucca and chilies of all shapes and hues join common salad ingredients.

The dairy cases are a United Nations of cheeses: Queso Costa Rica, Crema Salvadorena, Crema Guatemala, Crema Mexicana and Tenemos queso Nicaraguences (We have Nicaraguan cheese) read the signs on one glass case.

Scales sway over the counters, fresh-baked breads cool on the shelves; overhead fans hum in circles.

The shoppers, from all of the Americas, carry their own woven and plastic bags that grow and bulge at each stall. Women with children, men in hats, downtown workers on their lunch break fill the narrow aisles, often bumping into each other lightly, ignoring the safe distances usually maintained between supermarket shopping carts.

Ignacio Lopez Rayon, an undocumented worker returning home to live after one and one-half years here, took a commuter bus to the Tijuana airport.

"I'm going to see my family," said Lopez, wearing a smile of anticipation and a felt hat from his native state of Durango.

To Moncada, "This is more of a border city than San Diego. It is a bilingual city, everywhere you go. The police department, social services, telephone company, you name it, it's bilingual.

"The culture just doesn't go away because it is continuously fed through the border," he said. "It's not the same as with the Polish, the Italians and the Irish because their strings were cut."

On Santee Alley, in the center of the garment district, brightly colored print dresses hang from stalls, billowing like flags in the breeze.

An ice cream man pushes a three-wheeled freezer, Helados Poncho, from which he sells fresh fruit paletas, or Popsicles. The ring of his bells and whine of his voice fill the alley, along with the commotion of shoppers.

At the corner, an open truck with the name Produce Madujano is stacked with the tropical fruits and vegetables essential to Mexican cooking: mangoes, tamarinds, cactus and cilantro.

Many of the retail and wholesale store owners are Iranians, Lebanese and Koreans, others are Jewish, and all share at least one common language — Spanish.

"I'm not fluent in Spanish, except when it comes to clothes," said Hassan Farhat, Lebanese owner of Ali's Sportswear at the tail end of the garment district. "Everybody has to have someone who speaks Spanish."

Farhat said his business also has dropped 40 percent since the peso devaluations.

"We depend on the Latino trade. We never had any recession with the Latino trade until the money devalued in Mexico," Farhat said.

"Mexican merchants used to come from Mexico. They don't come anymore. But also the wholesalers from Chula Vista, Calif., and Calexico, Calif., were shopping here. They're not here anymore because they don't have the business from Mexico."

He said, too, that many Mexican residents of Los Angeles have stopped taking or sending clothing to relatives in Mexico.

"They are sending money for the family to buy there rather than send a gift," Farhat said.

Erwin Pittock, manager of A and A Wholesale, said that most merchants in the area specialize in tops and dresses made out of Georgette fabric, a crepe material popular among Mexican women. He said the devaluations put many newer clothing stores out of business.

"Before the peso went crazy, you couldn't find an open building here," he said. "As soon as that hit, a lot of people went out of business and the rents came down."

Each morning in wealthy West Los Angeles, scores of Mexicans line Sawtelle Boulevard between Olympic and Pico. Looking tired in the early daylight, they gather in groups curbside and on the corners.

The men are quiet or speaking Spanish, rocking on their heels, waiting. They are workers hoping for a job.

In time, trucks will pull up looking for gardeners, house painters, plumbers or warehouse workers. They scramble for the trucks, each trying to outrun the others. The lucky ones jump on, certain of a day's wage.

The unlucky ones look for another truck and another until, dejected, they return to a nearby hotel room. They wait for the following day, when again they will gather curbside, hoping for work in the early morning light.

They pass the days and weeks and even months this way, with periodic work. They save and send money home, until they decide to return to Mexico. Sometimes they come back to Los Angeles again, and again.

Beatriz Johnston is a reporter for the Los Angeles-based, Spanish-language daily La Opinion.

"I am from Laredo.... No, I'm from (across the border in) Nuevo Laredo. I always get mixed up," Ms. Johnston said, laughing and shaking her head.

"I am the perfect border person. My father was North American and my mother is Mexican. I was born in Mexico (Nuevo Laredo), but grew up here (in the United States)."

Ms. Johnston, who studied journalism at the University of Southern California, said she returns to the border occasionally.

"My father is buried in San Diego. Every once in a while we go to the border. We go to Tijuana. We buy Mexican bread on one side and visit my father on the other."

She said she feels "at home" when she goes to Tijuana, even though she has never lived there.

"People here (in Los Angeles) are very alienated from themselves and others. In Mexico, there is almost like a brotherhood. I miss that. When people look at you there, it is sincere. Here, it is perfunctory," she said.

But Alberto Macias, a native of Tijuana and colleague of Ms. Johnston's at La Opinion, said he feels Los Angeles has become more Mexican than Tijuana.

"Especially among the youth in Tijuana, American influence is very important. Here we all watch (Spanish-language) Channel 34, but there the youth watch television and listen to radio from San Diego," Macias said.

"Kids learn English slang in Tijuana almost automatically. Here, on Broadway, all you hear is music in Spanish — music which we hardly ever listen to in Tijuana."

Macias, 35, said he has lived in Los Angeles for 16 years and that his mother makes monthly trips from Tijuana to visit him.

"I have always liked it here, but I don't feel American," Macias said. "But also I am not nationalistic about Mexico."

From Tijuana to Los Angeles, Matamoros to Brownsville, Oaxaca to Tijuana and on to San Diego's North County — and back again. Across a vast and largely barren land, the border society is woven together with yarns of history, family strings, business ties and with the constant movement of people back and forth across the border.

It is a fertile and fluid society, a culture fed by the customs of two nations, one young, the other old; one Anglo, the other mestizo; one rich and one poor. It is a society of two countries that is becoming inextricably linked at the border.

Teen won't leave home without baby

She said she finally told her parents Feb. 8 that she was having a baby, and they agreed — after the initial shock — to help her raise the child.

She first saw the baby Feb. 14, four days after giving birth.

"I was crying the whole time I was with her," she said. "I was so confused. I wanted her, but I couldn't afford it.

"I don't know why, but I signed (the papers) and then went to my room and cried all day. But they told me it was the best thing for the child and for me."

Eleanor Tuck, executive director of the home, said the papers Miss Landry signed are irrevocable. She said Miss Landry was fully advised of alternatives to adoption, and denied using pressure tactics.

Workers' compensation ruling to take effect on area farms

But under the new ruling, King said, the employer liability policy covering farmworkers as approved by the State Board of Insurance states it won't pay claims of injured farmworkers if they are covered by the workers' compensation law.

As farmers enter the spring planting months, King said that this year "looks like it will be one of the poorest years for us. There's no moisture."

Leonard pointed out there was no rain in the fall months that would put moisture in the soil for spring planting. Normally, farmers follow the theory that if there are no fall rains there won't be spring ones either.

"We're hoping that sign will fail this year," said Leonard.

If not, this will be the fourth consecutive bad year for farmers. He said 1981 was fine in terms of crops but the prices were depressed. Even farmers who produced good yields only broke even.

"Now, many of us farmers have borrowed way more than what our equipment is worth. We can't even pay the interest on it.

"Signs don't look real good this year," he said.

King added that the Texas Farm Bureau will continue to oppose removal of the exemption of farm and ranch employees. The Texas Attorney General also has indicated his office will appeal the ruling.

Further information about this ruling and the workmen's compensation can be obtained by calling Thurston McCutchen with the Midland County Farm Bureau, 683-5466, 1348 S. Fairgrounds Road.

Teacher's drug trial delayed

From Staff Reports

The trial of suspended Midland school teacher Maria Rosario Flores Luna, charged with delivery of heroin, was postponed today in Judge Pat Baskin's court. Her case stemmed from a lengthy narcotics investigation that resulted in 15 indictments by Midland and Ector County grand juries last January.

The next criminal jury panel is set for March 27, so the case will be heard then or during a following jury week. The attorneys and Baskin determined the trial would have taken longer than they initially had expected.

Ms. Luna is being represented by attorneys Tony Chavez of Odessa and Kit Bramblett of El Paso.

Ms. Luna, a 26-year-old fourth-grade teacher at Jane Long Elementary School, who was suspended without pay shortly after her Jan. 6 arrest, had been expected to plead guilty this morning and to ask a jury to set punishment.

The penalty range is 5 to 99 years or life in prison and a fine of up to $10,000. She could also receive probation.

Law enforcement officers who conducted the investigation say the alleged drug transactions took place away from school and did not involve the sale of narcotics to children. She had worked for the school system five years.

Other suspects in the case include 31-year-old Heradio Luna Jr., who is charged with delivery of cocaine; a 28-year-old rural Midland man charged with possession of heroin; a 16-year-old Midland girl charged with possession of marijuana; and two Odessa men charged with possession and delivery of heroin.

It is not known when their cases will go to trial. The drug investigation was conducted by Department of Public Safety narcotics agents. Midland police and sheriff's deputies assisted in the arrests.

'Dream dress' made for Stormie

By ANNE McADAMS

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — It's the kind of dress that every little girl and even some big girls dream of, like those found in a "once upon a time" story where the beautiful princess falls in love with the handsome prince and they live "happily ever after." The princess in this story is Stormie Jones.

Stormie doesn't know it yet, but she is about to have one of her wishes come true.

Mrs. Odie Smith of rural Sulphur Springs has designed Stormie a pink dress made entirely of lace and satin ribbon. The lace dress is a result of many, many loving hours of hard work in a mobile home that sits next to the Smith home. It is the sewing room where Mrs. Smith creates dreams.

She says her work was blended with deep concern and "lots of prayers" for the 6-year-old Cumby resident who underwent double transplant surgery on Valentine's Day.

Stormie was the first person to undergo the simultaneous transplants. She was discharged Wednesday from Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh, but hospital officials said she would have to return to the hospital several times a week for blood tests.

Showing Stormie Jones' pink lace dress to the girls who inspired it, granddaughters Jennifer and Jeana Smith, is designer Mrs. Odie Smith of Sulpher Springs.

"I was busy making dresses for my granddaughters for a pageant they are planning to participate in when the twins came up with the idea of making a new dress for Stormie," Mrs. Smith said. "The girls have been praying every night at bedtime for Stormie and for a quick recovery. Although they have never met her, the girls feel as if they know her well. We have talked about her surgery and they ask about her condition every day. They wanted her to have a dress just like theirs, so I made one."

Mrs. Smith didn't purchase a printed pattern to make the dress. She used newspaper and designed the pattern and dress herself.

"I stayed up night after night trying to figure out how to make the collar," she said. "I would wake up in the middle of the night thinking about the dress. One day it just fell together. Since I didn't have a pattern it took me longer to make the dress. I could see it in my mind but I had to make a pattern before I could begin."

The dress, which is made out of approximately 125 yards of pink lace and satin ribbon, would probably retail for $250. But what's a pretty dress without the accessories? The twins, Jennifer and Jeana Smith of Sulphur Springs, pooled their allowances to buy white patent shoes and leotards to go with the elegant dress. They also found dainty hair ribbons to match.

But this is not the end of the story, the twins and their grandmother now plan to make this "little princess" an Easter basket to match her new dress. The Easter basket, which will be covered in the same pink lace used to make the dress, belonged to Jennifer.

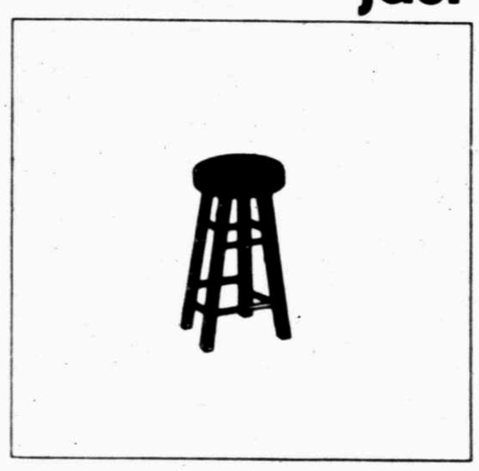

"It was my Easter basket year before last and I wanted Stormie to have it," Jennifer Smith said.

"We want Stormie to get well soon, and come home," Jeana Smith added.

Prospective jurors remember De Lorean

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tall and silver-haired, automaker John Z. De Lorean stands out in the crowds he draws to a courthouse. But he also stands out in the minds of many potential jurors as the man they saw on television "involved with cocaine."

John De Lorean

With the search for a jury entering its third day today, De Lorean's attorneys, Howard Weitzman and Donald Re, were predicting a long selection process, complicated by last November's broadcast of a secret FBI surveillance tape in the De Lorean case.

"That's him over there," some prospects said Wednesday, pointing to the 6-foot-4 automaker across the federal courtroom, where he is on trial for allegedly trying to distribute 220 pounds of cocaine to save his faltering sports car company in Northern Ireland.

"I saw the FBI tapes," one man volunteered, insisting he had "not focused" on the broadcast and had only a vague memory of it. "All I remember is they were pouring champagne and Mr. De Lorean commented that this cocaine was more valuable than gold."

The tape, which will be evidence at the trial, was part of an FBI "sting" operation in which De Lorean, 59, was photographed talking with agents who posed as drug dealers, in a room with a suitcase full of cocaine.

"A picture is worth a thousand words," one juror declared. "It's kind of hard to put that aside."

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, apparently disturbed by the number of prospects declaring De Lorean "probably guilty," began instructing everyone in the defendant's right to a presumption of innocence.

De Lorean was arrested Oct. 19, 1982, at a Los Angeles hotel. He is charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine in a plan to save his failing car company in Northern Ireland.

By the end of Wednesday's session, 10 of 23 prospective jurors had survived questioning about the pretrial publicity without being ousted. But they faced more grilling later on other subjects.

Several jury candidates, whose names were withheld by the court, said De Lorean would have to prove his innocence despite the judge's instructions otherwise.

Fight for nomination shifts to Midwest

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

Gary Hart told Michigan voters Wednesday that trade protectionism would be "economic surrender" while Walter F. Mondale accused Hart of advocating "dangerous defeatism" in foreign policy as the fight for the Democratic presidential nomination shifted from the South to the industrial Midwest.

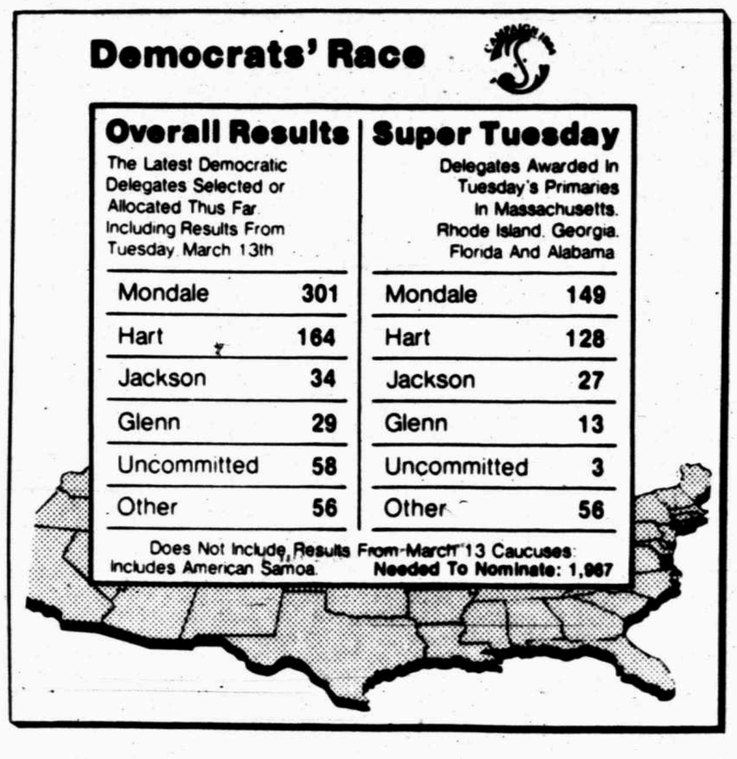

Michigan and Illinois are major battlegrounds in the next six days in what now looks like a long war for the nomination after Hart won three primaries and Mondale two in Super Tuesday primaries.

Mondale picked up another victory Wednesday night in Delaware, where Democratic caucuses gave Mondale nine delegates to four for Hart and one uncommitted.

The counting was torturously slow in four states that held caucuses on Tuesday, but Hart was ahead in tallies in Washington and Nevada. He and Mondale were neck-and-neck in Oklahoma. Mondale was the leading candidate in Hawaii, but an uncommitted slate of delegates took a majority of the vote.

THE RESULTS LEFT Mondale ahead of Hart in national convention delegate strength, although that margin will narrow with final results from Washington. With Delaware's results added to the total, the former vice president had 341 delegates to 197 for Hart.

Peter Hart, Mondale's pollster, said they have "dug out of an avalanche" that followed Hart's victory in the New Hampshire primary on Feb. 28. But Mondale's campaign will lay off some staff to "reflect a campaign that is lean for a marathon," said campaign manager Robert Beckel.

White House chief of staff James A. Baker III acknowledged that Republicans wouldn't mind seeing a long struggle for the Democratic nomination with Mondale emerging as the winner. "I wouldn't say that we would be totally unhappy if that happened," he said in response to a question during a Cable News Network interview.

Mondale looks strong in Michigan because strong support from the United Auto Workers should help in the complicated caucus system there Saturday.

"I THINK IT WOULD be very difficult to win," Hart said during his only visit to Michigan this week.

"We think we've got an awfully good situation this weekend," Beckel said of the six caucuses and a primary scheduled Saturday and Sunday.

But Illinois looked much tighter as both men were there Wednesday for campaign appearances. Hart will spend most of the next three days in the state pumping up support for the March 20 primary.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio spent much of Wednesday pondering whether to withdraw from the battle, after failing to make the kind of showing he had hoped to in three Southern primaries and facing a campaign debt already above $2 million.

Former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern did pull out of the race — after a poor finish in Massachusetts — and was considering whether to endorse another candidate and how best to be an influence in the Democratic Party.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson did better than many expected in Georgia and Alabama balloting Tuesday, but he expressed disappointment with other black leaders who supported Mondale and other candidates for failing to band together to end "plantation politics."

Delaware Democrats planned caucuses Wednesday night to kick off their delegate selection process, while North Dakota's two-week window for such events opened the same day. The two states will send 18 delegates each to the national convention.

Hart defended his labor record before Michigan auto workers while claiming as much support among rank-and-file union members as Mondale, who has the endorsement of the AFL-CIO and the National Education Association.

The Colorado senator was asked repeatedly about his opposition to legislation requiring that Japanese cars be made with parts manufactured in the United States and his vote against the 1976 financial bailout of Chrysler Corp.

Engineer must attend clinic, prison

LIVINGSTON, La. (AP) — An engineer accused of being drunk and letting his chemical-laden train derail, starting a fire that burned two weeks, must spend a year in prison and attend a substance-abuse clinic, a judge has ruled.

District Judge Kenneth Fogg on Wednesday also fined Edwin Peyton Robertson $5,000 and put him on active probation for five years in the fire that forced 2,700 people to evacuate.

In the September 1982 accident, Robertson, 44, was also accused of letting the train attain a dangerous speed and turning the controls over to a woman who was along for the ride.

FBI probes breeding papers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The FBI is investigating allegations that breeding papers for Tennessee walking horses were falsified and that Tennessee Walking Horse Celebration judges in Shelbyville were bribed, a newspaper reports.

"I can confirm there is an ongoing investigation going back to last year," FBI agent Cecil Moses in Birmingham, Ala., told the Nashville Banner in a copyright story Wednesday. "It involves irregularities in the Tennessee walking horse industry."

Moses said the investigation had spread "coast to coast," adding the FBI hopes to finish in time for the next walking horse celebration in late August. The horses are famous for their high-step prancing.

Couple makes deal with killer

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A couple whose son was beaten to death have agreed to a $100,000 settlement from his killer in exchange for not opposing his parole, but their attorney concedes they may never get any money.

Mark Jay Baker, 28, pleaded guilty in October 1978 to beating Karl Marcus Chancellor, 20, with a shotgun barrel during a robbery. He is eligible for parole next year after several years.

In a settlement approved Tuesday to settle a wrongful death suit, the victim's parents, Lee and Jean Chancellor, agreed not to oppose parole. Baker has no money, but his lawyer, Stuart Parker, said his client "will make efforts to pay the $100,000 whenever he gets out of jail."

Contractor quizzed on use of steel

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — State officials quizzed a contractor about whether it used $375,000 worth of foreign-made steel in a state Capitol project, even though Pennsylvania has a "buy American " law for state construction.

The contractor, Emco Mechanical, skipped a meeting Wednesday with angry lawmakers who represent unemployed steelworkers, but met with state officials. The General Services Department issued a terse statement latter saying only that it would continue to investigate.

The steel in question is drainage pipe installed in a new office complex being attached to the state Capitol. Officials say they asked Emco in October to document the steel's origin, but received no response.

Program aims to stop attack

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Detectives say they believe three or four different people are responsible for a series of sexual attacks against about 15 boys and girls on the East Side since mid-December.

Police Commissioner John B. Myers unveiled an eight-point program Tuesday aimed at getting people who live and work in the area to keep a close watch and report any suspicious activities.

Painter's chance

Gary Painter's election filing dilemma should be resolved Monday by the Texas Court of Appeals in El Paso. It should be resolved in Painter's favor.

Painter is the young man who wanted to run for sheriff of Midland County in the upcoming Republican Party primary election. On Feb. 6 Painter resigned his job as a deputy of Sheriff Dallas Smith and went to see Republican Party Chairman Bill Shaner to file. That's where Painter's problem arose; Shaner was out of town and there was no one around to accept his application for candidacy.

Now Painter hopes to convince the court to order Shaner to accept his application. We agree wholeheartedly with his request; Painter has been wronged.

Shaner has told reporters he was not in town that day because his regular job called him away. That's completely understandable. When work calls, we all respond. He also noted he had been in town and available to accept filings most of the rest of the filing period. That's great, but it's not enough.

Had Shaner merely been out of town on one of the previous filing dates, it likely would have been no major point of controversy. It possibly would have created an inconvenience for some of those individuals wishing to file on those dates, but they probably would have been able to file later.

Not so with the party chairman being unavailable on the last possible filing day. In effect, that shortened the filing period by a day — an extremely crucial day because in many situations potential candidates may not decide to file until the last minute.

Shaner contends a county chairman is the only election official who can accept an application for candidacy. But John Steiner, director of the legal section of the Secretary of State's Elections Division, told the Reporter-Telegram earlier this week the local party organization's executive secretary can accept filings.

That wouldn't have helped Painter, though, because the Midland County Republican Party didn't have an executive secretary at the time the man tried to file.

Obviously there is confusion among local party officials in regard to what is legal procedure for filing. That's a serious situation, as Painter's case illustrates. Local party officials need to get clarification on legally acceptable proceudure and follow it.

It's understandable that party officials may be required to leave town from time to time for various reasons, ranging from job demands to such unpredictable events as deaths. With an alternate official on hand to accept filings, no problems should arise.

But what about Gary Painter? The answer's obvious. He met all the requirements to file except one he could not control. His name should appear on the May 5th Republican Party ballot.

Another View:

Secretary's temper

Secretary of State George Shultz finally lost his temper with congressmen who wanted to reduce or eliminate aid to El Salvador.

Good. For too long, those who would hand Central America over to the Marxists have so skillfully manipulated the media that it appeared they had a monopoly on righteous indignation.

Or, at least, what has passed for righteous indignation, since there is little that is right in their cause.

It's about time that someone in the Reagan administration did some table-banging in defense of Central Americans who are fighting to remain free of the Moscow-Havana-Managua axis.

Shultz exploded the other day after listening to some members of the House Appropriations subcommittee for Foreign Operations threaten to curtail aid to El Salvador.

The secretary of state, whose anger was more justified and certainly more righteous than that of the typical congressman because he has some idea of what is happening in Central America, told the legislators they wanted to simply "walk away" from a vital area of the world "because there are problems."

"I really don't understand you people," Shultz told subcommittee members.

He isn't alone. Apparently, Shultz had heard too many lectures by congressmen who can't understand why all human rights abuses haven't ended overnight in El Salvador.

The infuriating thing is that those who portray themselves as humanitarians by shouting about El Salvador's human rights abuses offer no alternatives other than turning their backs and letting the Marxists stamp out all human liberty forever.

Equally angering is the insinuation that those who support the Salvadoran people opposed to communism don't care about human rights violations.

The Reagan administration has been doing plenty of shouting about Salvadoran death squads. But it has been doing most of its talking to the government of El Salvador, not to American television cameras.

"There are problems (in El Salvador)," Shultz said. "We all know that. What you're telling me is that because there are problems, let's walk away."

Shultz got a lot of attention by losing his temper. Perhaps others who are angry with those in Congress who would stand by in the name of "peace" while all of Central America is plowed under by the same "agrarian reformers" that buried Nicaragua should display their tempers.

Especially on election day.

JACK ANDERSON

Shultz disillusioned with Saudis

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz is a disillusioned man. He has finally come to realize that his faith in Saudi Arabia was badly misplaced. His old friends the Saudis let him down in the long months of haggling over Lebanon.

Jack Anderson

The Reagan administration fondly believed that if U.S. pressure forced the Israelis to withdraw from Lebanon, the Saudis would make sure the Syrians pulled out, too. Both the United States and Saudi Arabia figured that the power of the purse would be enough to pressure Israel and Syria into leaving Lebanon.

After great pressure from the United States and political backfire at home, Israel did pull back from much of the Lebanese territory it had seized in the 1982 invasion.

The Saudis failed utterly to "deliver" Syria, despite the $1 billion-plus they give to President Hafez Assad each year. Assad is no Saudi puppet; far from it. The Saudi aid is actually "protection money," intended to prevent the overthrow of the royal family by Syrian surrogates.

Assad, therefore, knew that the Saudis would not cut off aid to Syria. But Shultz was a former executive of the Bechtel Corp., which has had many construction contracts in Saudi Arabia.

He bought the Saudi line: They would guarantee Syrian cooperation if only the Israelis would pull out of Lebanon.

The kowtowing to the Saudis is documented in State Department files. Sources with access to the classified files have described the contents to my associate Lucette Lagnado. Perhaps the most telling incident occurred in November 1982.

The Palestine Liberation Organization forces had just been evacuated from Beirut, which was regarded as a triumph of American diplomacy.

What wasn't disclosed was that the Saudis paid for the evacuation. Delicate negotiations between Washington and Athens had resulted in an agreement that the PLO troops would be taken from Beirut in Greek ships. The Saudis pledged $5 million for the job; the United States gave assurances that the Greek ships and crews would not be harmed by Israeli troops.

But there turned out to be several thousand more PLO soldiers who had to be evacuated than had been anticipated. Whether it was overcrowding or the lack of fastidiousness (to be expected of combat troops), the PLO fighters trashed the evacuation ships pretty thoroughly.

The Greeks wanted an additional $4 million to cover the damages. And the American secretary of state set out to wheedle the money from the Saudis.

In a fawning letter prepared by the U.S. Embassy in Riyadh for Shultz' signature, Saudi King Fahd was thanked effusively for providing the money that was "crucial" to the success of the PLO evacuation. The Shultz letter added: "I regret that it is necessary for the U.S. government to impose once more on your majesty's generosity in this matter."

As one source observed: "That was typical of our relations with the Saudis."

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Charges that Iraq is using poison gas in its war with Iran should come as no surprise to my readers. In a column on Nov. 3, 1980, shortly after the war erupted, I reported U.S. intelligence experts' warnings that Iraq had begun acquiring chemical weapons from the Soviets in the mid-1970s. "The Iraqis have been doing well enough with conventional forces — so far," I wrote. "But if the fortunes of war should change dramatically, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein may decide to stave off disaster by resorting to chemical weapons." That seems to be just what happened.

— The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee has complained to the Federal Election Commission about the National Conservative Political Action Committee. This is the combative, right-wing political commando outfit, better known as NCPAC, that compiles "hit" lists of Democratic candidates in election years. The Democrats have submitted evidence that NCPAC may be closer to President Reagan's re-election effort than the law allows.

— The scary news about EDB should not blind consumers to the dangers of other chemicals that might replace it. Methyl bromide can cause damage to kidneys and the nervous system. Carbon tetrachloride has caused cancer in laboratory animals. Carbon disulfide has caused reproductive problems in lab rats; longterm exposure may cause heart disease. Ethylene dichloride can damage the kidneys and is an animal carcinogen.

— When Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was asked by Wisconsin Gov. Anthony Earl how every single item in the defense budget could be critical, Weinberger began, "The next battleship to be renovated is the Wisconsin." Unimpressed, Earl commented afterward: "He was clever, but unresponsive. He has a quick wit, but there's still no substance in what he said."

GEORGE F. WILL

With Helms at helm why go on?

CHICAGO — Illinois, where men are men and I am from, stretches farther north than Cape Cod and farther south than Richmond. Unlike those dinky New England states and secessionist Southern states, Illinois is a fit place for a political showdown of national importance. But Sen. Charles Percy must wish that Walter Mondale had succeeded in making the Democratic presidential contest boring by now.

George F. Will

Percy, 64, who is seeking a fourth term, is the only Republican senator this year facing opposition in a primary. And although polls show him shellacking his challenger, Rep. Tom Corcoran, by 50 percentage points, there is interesting uncertainty about who will vote in the Republican primary. If enough liberals and independents choose to participate in the Democratic presidential and Senate primaries, Percy will be left alone in the Republican primary with hard-shell conservatives. It will not be a sight for the squeamish.

The Democratic Senate primary is a four-way race with no one having 25 percent of the vote in a recent poll. Paul Simon, a five-term congressman, holds a slim lead. Much liked and respected, he is 55, looks 35, and has been in Illinois politics for, it seems, 105 years. He was a newspaper publisher at 19, state legislator at 25, lieutenant governor at 40. I remember him talking to my high-school civics class.

Roland Burris, the state comptroller, is black and from downstate. His candidacy will provide evidence as to whether Harold Washington's achievement in becoming Chicago's mayor signaled a general awakening of Chicago's black community. But black Chicagoans, like all Chicagoans, care much more about who is mayor than senator. Phil Rock, president of the state senate, was chairman of the state Democratic Party. Alex Seith ran well against Percy in 1978, when Percy felt it necessary to broadcast a commercial that can best be described as abject. The commercial was an apology for being too liberal, and out of touch.

Percy's career illustrates the fate of one kind of Republicanism during two decades.

When he entered politics in 1964 — a year-long "night of the long knives" in the GOP — he was identified with the party's "Rockefeller wing." This, in spite of the fact that at the pre-convention showdown he kept his word: He said he would vote as a delegate for the winner of the Illinois primary and did so, voting for Barry Goldwater rather than Pennsylvania's Gov. William Scranton, who entered the race when Nelson Rockefeller left it.

In 1964 Percy ran for governor and was pulled to defeat by Goldwater. Percy, unlike many Republicans running that year, did not hide when Goldwater entered his state. But by campaigning with him, he angered liberals who called him unprincipled, and conservatives who knew he was uncomfortable.

He won a Senate seat in 1966, when Nelson Rockefeller, George Romney, John Lindsay and Ed Brooke made the "Rockafeller wing" seem formidable. Today Percy and Maryland Sen. Charles McC. Mathias are the remnant.

Twenty years after Percy lost his first race because of Goldwater's undertow, he is running perhaps his last race, and he is filling the air with commercials that place him as close as possible to the man who burst into national politics with a speech for Goldwater. Ronald Reagan came here to address a Percy fund-raiser and called Percy "the Illinois advantage."

That phrase is Percy's attempt to escape yet another peril, that of being chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. That high-visibility position seems to convince many voters that the holder of it is neglecting mundane things, such as them. The last two chairmen (Fulbright of Arkansas and Church of Idaho) have been defeated in re-election bids.

Percy insists that Illinois, unlike Idaho and Arkansas, is linked to the world economy in ways that make his chairmanship useful. But he knows that of the 16 members of the committee six years ago, seven have been defeated — four Democrats (Church, McGovern of South Dakota, Clark of Iowa, Stone of Florida) and three Republicans (Case of New Jersey, Griffin of Michigan, Javits of New York). Three (Stone, Case, Javits) were beaten in primaries.

If Percy loses now or in November, and if Jesse Helms is re-elected in North Carolina (his political obituaries have been written prematurely), Helms would be chairman of Foreign Relations. It is not too late to turn back, Gary and Walter: Are you sure you want the job if Jesse is there and being as assertive in foreign policy as you say senators have a right to be?

ART BUCHWALD

Don't put words in His mouth

I don't talk to God as often as I should because I know how busy He is these days. But every four years, during the presidential campaign, I do check in to make sure what the candidates are saying about Him is true.

Art Buchwald

The other night after hearing President Reagan say for the umpteenth time that God had been expelled from America's classrooms, I asked Him, "Are You banned from America's schools?"

"Not that I know of," God replied.

"President Reagan said that kids can't pray in school."

"If they can't, they're sure doing it," God said. "I hear schoolchildren's prayers all day long. Of course I hear more from those who haven't done their homework, or have been caught committing some infraction that will send them to the principal's office. And there is a lot of praying when report cards come out, and when college test scores come in. And then I hear from almost every child as graduation gets near. I can't understand why President Reagan said I've been banned from the classroom."

"I think what he was referring to was the Supreme Court decision which forbade organized prayer in public schools at the beginning of the day. Did that decision bother You?"

"On the contrary. I don't believe in people praying if they don't mean it. Fortunately in America people can pray anytime, anywhere they want to."

"Well, why would President Reagan say You were banned from public schools, if You weren't?"

"I have no idea," God said. "People are always dropping my name in order to get votes during an election year. Frankly I wish the president would have checked with Me first, before he misspoke."

"Do you believe it's a good idea to have separation of Church and State?"

"I believe it's an excellent one. Your country has survived for over 200 years without getting Me mixed up in your government, and when you look around you seem to have more freedom of worship than any other place on the face of the globe. There are certain countries which I'd rather not mention, where the leaders use My name to commit some of the most heinous crimes known to mankind."

"How would You feel about forced voluntary prayer in the schools in the morning, so if kids didn't want to pray they wouldn't have to?"

"It would bother me. All My children are very fragile and it would cause tremendous friction between those who prayed and those who didn't. I would prefer that schoolchildren pray when the spirit moves them, and not when a teacher tells them to. What your president should know is that God is everywhere, and when he states I am no longer in the public schools, he doesn't know what in the devil he's talking about."

"Then You didn't tell him You wanted prayers officially back in the schools?"

"I certainly did not," God told me. "But I did talk to him about the asbestos problem.

"The asbestos problem?"

"It's very serious. A great many schools have asbestos peeling off the ceilings and walls and it's getting into the schoolchildren's lungs, and they can die from it. I suggested the president institute a crash program to see that the little children were protected from this terrible disease. But to My knowledge he hasn't mentioned it yet. If I were the president of the United States I'd be much more concerned about the health of America's children, than what time of day they could pray."

"Well, thanks for Your time," I said. "I didn't want to bother You, but I was afraid if I was against mandatory prayer in public schools You would think I didn't believe in You anymore. Could I put this conversation on the record?"

"Be my guest. There is too much talk by politicians about what I want and don't want, and as God, it really ticks Me off."

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1875, the Roman Catholic Archbisop of New York, John McCloskey, was named the first American cardinal, by Pope Pius IX.

In 1963, the United States proposed a "hot line" communications system between Washington and Moscow in an effort to prevent war.

Inmate: Shaving Autry's mustache took 'last bit of dignity'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Prison officials who shaved off James David Autry's mustache before he was executed with a deadly combination of drugs took "the last little bit of dignity he had," says a fellow inmate who knew him well.

Autry, 29, was told Friday his mustache had to go, said Charles Bass, who tried to cheer the condemned man in his last days.

After Autry refused, prison officers did the task for him, Bass said.

"He said they told him, 'You can sit down peacefully or we can do it the other way.' So he sat down," said Bass, who himself came within seven hours of execution in August 1982 for the 1979 slaying of a Houston city marshal.

Autry took great pride in his thick black mustache, Bass said.

"He was very proud of it. It was like taking the last little bit of dignity he had," Bass said.

Prison spokesman Charles Brown said department policy says all inmates must be clean-shaven. He said officials allowed Autry to grow the mustache on the condition he later shave it.

Autry, who was executed early Wednesday for the April 1980 slaying of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk, was moved Friday from his regular cell at the Ellis Unit to a cell near Bass.

Autry was not allowed to leave his cell for three days because he refused to shave. The restriction was lifted Monday.

During the two-hour recreation period Monday, Bass said, he and Autry passed the time walking and talking.

Autry talked about court decisions, his family, the Texas parole board, Gov. Mark White and Shirley Tadlock, a 31-year-old mother of three who began corresponding with Autry after his near brush with death in October, Bass said.

"He told me he was thinking about writing a letter to his father. Even though they had disagreements all his life, he wanted him to know that he still loved him," Bass said.

In his last days, Autry sometimes became depressed and would put on headphones and pace in his cell, said Bass, who was given several of Autry's belongings before he left Death Row, including his tennis shoes and a white sweatshirt with the sleeves cut off.

"He never said it was hopeless, but I think he was resigned to the fact that he wouldn't get a stay. He never said it verbally. It was just something you could tell by his attitude. He tried not to think about it," Bass said.

Bass said that he gave Autry two cards — a birthday card for his mother and another greeting card for Mrs. Tadlock, who lives in Dallas.

Autry wrote a note in each, then left the cards with Bass to mail, Bass said.

Autry came within 30 minutes of being executed in October. Knowing what he would have to endure, Autry dreaded having the needles inserted into his arms again, Bass said.

Bass said Autry told him that in October the needles were not inserted properly and caused him pain. "That was the only thing that really hurt him," he said.

On Monday afternoon, guards took Autry into another cell, then went back and conducted a "shakedown" of his living quarters, Bass said. When they left, things were strewn everywhere.

A prison officer later said they had been told that Autry had "something in his cell and they didn't want him to try to take his life," Bass said.

He said that two or three guards often walked by Autry's cell and ask "How you doing?"

At 5:23 a.m. Tuesday, the guards took Autry and a small box filled with his belongings down to the day room, where they were searched.

Midland, Odessa on magazine's list of towns 'most cruel' to animals

In the United States, cruelty to animals is often a source of tourist entertainment and of profit, and in the March issue of Town & Country magazine, Midland-Odessa have been named to a list of some of the cruelest towns in America.

Money is raised for charities, the magazine says, through such allegedly amusing diversions as chasing a frightened greased pig, playing basketball from donkey-back as the scared animals are tugged and pushed before a screaming crowd, and keeping raccoons on a spinning log while dogs snap at them.

In Alaska, a dog sled race is considered a wholesome civic event, though dogs sometimes are driven to exhaustion and death. In California, pen-raised turkeys, which can't fly, are sent down a chute. "Hunters" shoot them as they hurtle off the chute. These, and other events like them, are considered outgrowths of "specie-ism" on our part, according to those who work against cruelty to animals.

Just like sexism or racism, "specie-ism" is the exploitation of one group by another regardless of morality. Author Richard Ryder defines it as the belief that we are entitled to treat members of another species in a way in which it would be wrong to treat members of our own species.

Leghold trapping, factory farming methods, trophy hunting and redundant medical experiments on animals are all part of the "specie-ism" in our society, claims Friends of Animals president Alice Herrington.

Cleveland Amory, founder and president of the crusading Fund for Animals, lists in Town & Country the following nominees for the cruelest towns in America:

Midland-Odessa: These twin cities are the source of thousands of jackrabbits which are shipped out of state to training centers for greyhound racing, where they are run down by the dogs to condition them. The rabbits are trapped at night using floodlights to momentarily freeze the animals. Sometimes the rabbits are stuck into the dogs' cages, where they are torn apart, the taste of blood supposedly stimulating the dogs to run faster.

Copper Harbor, Mich.: All year long, bears are encouraged to feed at the town dump without being molested. Then, at the start of the hunting season, the bears that have developed a trust of humans are shot like fish in a barrel by alleged "sportsmen" who go home proud of their trophies.

Specie-ism is "the belief that we are entitled to treat members of another species in a way in which it would be wrong to treat members of our own species."

— Author Richard Ryder

Forksville, Pa.: An annual festival sponsored by the Pennsylvania Fish and Game Department features a weekend of raccoon hunting at night, while by day bow hunters shoot wild pigs imported from the Georgia swamps to provide "sport."

Karval, Colo.: This town claims to have the biggest coyote hunt in the state, in which dogs are turned loose to run down coyotes.

Mud Lake, Idaho: The town has a community event every few years in which some 50,000 rabbits are clubbed to death by farmers and townspeople. Sometimes the rabbits are "pitched" through the air and clubbed in a macabre version of "rabbit baseball."

Pribilof Islands, Ala.: Every summer, thousands of adult seals are driven over land, herded into a compact group, and clubbed to death. This seal killing is supervised by the government, for the benefit of a private fur company.

Sand Lake, S.D.: Site of a wild bird slaughter in Sand Lake National Wildlife Refuge, where some 1,500 hunters surrounded a lake and killed tens of thousands of geese.

Sweetwater, Texas: Annual rattlesnake round-up held in the fall, attracting thousands, in which snakes are dug out of the burrows to be killed with clubs and hoes.

Studio's producer visualizes Kentucky version of 'Dallas'

HENDERSON, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky millionaire horse breeder and plantation owner Wilson Calhoun so far is just a character in the mind of Hollywood producer Howard W. Koch.

But if Koch is successful, Calhoun will be the hero of an ABC television series called "Kentucky" — which he describes as a cross between CBS' steamy soap, "Dallas," and NBC's frontier saga, "Centennial."

The producer for Paramount studios has received the go-ahead from ABC to draft a script for a two-hour pilot show that could air this fall.

Filming would begin this summer if the script is approved. And, depending on the audience response, a regular series could be on the air by next January.

"What it basically is is a modern story with flashbacks," Koch said in a telephone interview from his Hollywood office. "It's the saga of the Calhoun family from the time of Daniel Boone right up to the present."

Calhoun, Koch said, is a 60-year-old, twice-widowed, fifth-generation native of the Bluegrass State. He manages his 3,000-acre estate near Lexington between big financial dealings that take him to New York, Chicago and occasionally to an exotic foreign country.

He has two sons and a daughter and the plot will get rather tangled, Koch said. "It's a high-rolling set. It's about power and how power works and how power corrupts.

Fictional heroine keeps Japanese in suspense

ENTERTAINMENT

TOKYO (AP) — President Reagan said she was a model for Japan's economic success. Chinese leader Hu Yaobang spoke of her "cheerful endurance." Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone has compared his political tribulations to her many trials.

She is Oshin, the fictional heroine of Japan's all-time most popular TV drama, a woman who in 83 years suffers every imaginable hardship and setback on her road to success. To millions of Japanese, she has come to represent both Japan's own rocky path to affluence and the old-time values lost along the way.

Oshin leaves the air at the end of this month, after appearing on the public Japan Broadcasting Corporation, NHK, twice a day, for 15 minutes at 8:15 a.m. and 12:45 p.m., over 297 episodes in the past year. During that period the melodrama received viewer ratings as high as 63 percent — in November when Reagan and Hu visited Japan. It was an unprecedented rating for a TV serial.

She also leaves behind an "Oshin industry" of movies, books, toys and records and a public debate over what Japan has sacrificed in its phenomenal rise to economic prosperity.

"I wanted to write a personal history of women, and at the same time regain something I have lost in the past," Oshin scenario writer Sugako Hashida told an audience at the Foreign Correspondents Club of Japan.

She said the drama was inspired by her mother's experiences and many letters received from women who had lived through the turbulence of 20th-century Japan.

The drama opened with 83-year-old Oshin, now the successful operator of a supermarket chain, reminiscing about her past and saying that "somewhere along the way, I feel I've lost something."

She was born in 1901, the same year as Emperor Hirohito, to a starving family in northern Japan. The action starts when she is 6 and the family is so destitute that her grandmother tries to commit suicide and her mother attempts to induce a miscarriage by wading into an icy winter stream.

She left home — on a river raft in a snowstorm — to work as a servant at a timber dealer's home for a year, in exchange for a bag of rice for her family. Thus began a cycle of grief and relief that has left this nation of soap opera devotees crying for more.

Mistreated by a mean housemaid, Oshin escaped into the snow after being unjustly accused of theft, and was rescued by a kindly hunter who later was shot as an army deserter.

Several tragedies later, Oshin married in Tokyo, only to have the family shop destroyed by the "Great Kanto Earthquake" in 1923. She and her husband moved to his family home in Saga, southwest Japan, where Oshin was persecuted by a cruel mother-in-law who ordered Oshin to work in the rice paddies late into her pregnancy. She lost the baby.

She also lost another son in World War II, and her husband, plagued by guilt over his wartime role, committed suicide. Through all of this, Oshin was uncomplaining, unselfish and hard-working, virtues which finally paid off in her postwar success as a supermarket entrepreneur.

NHK spokesman Koichi Murakami said Oshin engendered such success because the heroine "appealed to human qualities which are on the wane today."

One private survey found that Oshin fans, mostly housewives, said they tuned in every day because they learned about life from her experiences and "felt a humanity missing in today's society."

Women are not the only enthusiasts, however. Yoshiro Inayama, 80, head of the powerful Japan Federation of Economic Organizations, is said to have wept over Oshin's tribulations. Former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, much criticized after being convicted last year of accepting bribes from Lockheed Corp., reportedly has referred to himself as a "male Oshin."

The drama has also spawned "Oshin tours" to areas depicted in the story, and Oshin dolls, songs, candy and sake. An NHK guidebook to the drama sold 400,000 copies, and an animated cartoon of Oshin's childhood came out this month.

The town in northern Yamaguchi Prefecture where Oshin was born has erected a statue in front of the railroad station in the likeness of 11-year-old Ayako Kobayashi, the first of three actresses to play the role. Saga Prefecture, where the mother-in-law lived, has complained that her nastiness has done irreparable damage to that area's image.

Mrs. Hashida said she never intended to portray perseverance as an unquestioned virtue and was "frightened" by politicians who seek to make the values represented by Oshin into national policy.

"I only wanted to remind people how poor this major economic power was only 70 or 80 years ago," she said.

Supersalesmen sell cities, states, nations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They come like supersalesmen, hawking their products. But instead of shoes or cars or jet planes, they're selling cities, states and sovereign nations.

They are the mayors and governors and heads of state who are trying to lure Hollywood filmmakers. They offer every-aid imaginable: the help of film commissions in seeking locations; easy permits and police assistance; tax breaks and cheap extras.

The latest emissary to Hollywood is the Right Honorable Edward Phillip George Seaga, Prime Minister of Jamaica. He and his staff were here for a whirlwind visit sponsored by 20th Century-Fox. During a single day, Seaga and company had a breakfast press conference, a meeting with Universal bigwigs, lunch with independent producers, a conference with the MGM-UA brass, a cocktail reception at Fox, followed by dinner with Fox Chairman Alan Hirschfield and other studio chiefs.

The press breakfast was heavily guarded by U.S. Secret Service as well as Jamaican security. The mastermind of the visit was Chuck Ashman, head of Fox's licensing and merchandising, who said it arose from his visit to Jamaica last Christmas. Why would Fox sponsor the visit of a head of state?

"We're an international company and we like to maintain good relations all over the world," Ashman explained. "We have helped entertain Queen Elizabeth of England, the Scandanavian princesses, the King of Nepal, and other important visitors."

But won't Hollywood unions attack another campaign to lure away production?

"Oh, no, we're not talking about pictures that could be shot on the lot," said Ashman. "These would be pictures that would already be set for location. If we can find better terms in Jamaica or anywhere else, it's to our advantage."

Mack St. John, a spokesman for the 24 locals of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, which represent most of the studio crafts, described the prime minister's visit as "an obvious attempt to lure jobs away.

"The Hollywood (IATSE) locals are concerned not only about Fox and Jamaica but other production companies who are seeking advantages for filming out of state." One of those advantages can be cheaper, non-union labor.

St. John cited a recent meeting with film commission officials in Mobile, Ala., "at which representatives of one studio told them how to lure work away from Hollywood.

"The behind-the-camera workers for the past 50 or 60 years have made this industry what it is. But now the unions are averaging 30 to 40 percent unemployment."

Seaga's breakfast included warmed grapefruit, eggs benedict and a videotape extolling the Jamaican wonders for potential filmmakers: "Quaint churches are constant reminders of the country's strong religious heritage...the Wild West still lives in Jamaica...Filmmakers continue to marvel at the skin tones that abound here...the constant 90-degree temperature will make you forget the snow in your driveway."

The tape listed some of the films that have been made in Jamaica: several James Bond films, "Papillon," "Swiss Family Robinson," "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," "Our Man Flint," "Island in the Sun" as well as TV specials by Harry Belafonte, Shirley Bassey and Anne Murray.

Blacks with small farms in Texas find they have tough row to hoe

AP Laserphoto

Roy Stafford and his wife clean chickens on their two-acre farm in Dallas County. Farming has always been Stafford's dream. Texas is home to as many as 5,000 black farmers.

DALLAS (AP) — As 65-year-old Roy Stafford surveys the weed-infested pasture on his tiny 2-acre farm in Dallas County, two Hampshire pigs — the last in a mud-sodden stye — snort heartily at him. A rooster, strutting nearby, crows incessantly.

"Farming has always been my dream," Stafford says wistfully. "I always hoped some day I'd be able to buy a farm big enough to put horses and hogs, chickens and turkeys, and even grow a garden. Looks like that dream is not coming true. But I'm still hoping."

It's a tough row to hoe for Stafford and other black farmers like him who have small farms in Dallas County and Texas. The state is home to as many as 5,000 black farmers, the fourth largest population of black farmers in the country. For most of them, though, these are difficult times.

"I was hoping one day I'd get out of debt so I could buy me a tractor and make me a living," says Stafford, who grew up on a farm near his home in Seagoville, but who has been unable to make a full-time living from farming for 40 years. "I'd get out of debt and have to go right back in."

Plagued by all the problems that afflict most who have small farms — poor markets, rising operation costs, difficult credit — many black farmers complain "institutional racism" makes it even more difficult for them to win loans and market their goods.

Consequently, the number of black farmers throughout the state is rapidly declining.

A 1982 Civil Rights Commission report of "The Decline of Black Farming in America" found that 57 percent of the country's black farms have been lost in the last decade.

"That," observes Hope Shand, research director of the Rural Advancement Fund, a non-profit group dedicated to preserving family farms, "is a rate of loss 2½ times greater than that from white-operated farms. If the present trends continue, black family farmers will be virtually extinct by the end of the century."

Although no recent census counts are available to set the precise numbers of black farmers in Texas, agriculture officials estimate their numbers between 3,200 and 5,000. Fifty years ago, says Dr. Alfred Parks, an agricultural economist at Prarie View A&M, there were almost 86,000 black farmers planting crops or raising cattle in Texas.

Today, most of the black farms are scattered throughout East Texas, where the average black farm is nearly four times smaller than the average white farm, Parks says. Freestone County supports the largest number of black farms — with 163 of 980 farms.

"Black farmers and ranchers have unique problems," Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said recently. During this year's State Fair, Hightower's department sponsored a special conference to discuss the plight of black farmers. "They've been the first to lose their land, the last to get desperately needed credit, and too often, they are shut out of normal marketing channels."

Generally, agriculture officials say, Texas' black farmers are "limited resource" farmers who work properties averaging only about 80 acres.

For many, the difficulty in obtaining credit from banks and federal institutions is a major threat to their existence.

Thalidomide used in other nations, not United States

Dear Dr. Solomon: I seldom miss one of your columns, but my neighbor read an article of yours in which you said that the drug that cause all those problems with birth defects back in the '60s is still being used. Is this true? I find it hard to believe. — Mrs. G.R., Hutchinson, Kan.

Dear Mrs. R.: Thalidomide, the drug to which you refer, is being used in other countries. It was never approved for use by the Food and Drug Administration for use in the United States. Moreover, it is not being used to treat morning sickness in pregnant women, which is the way it had been used until it was linked to birth defects.

Physicians at University Hospital in Nottingham, England, report using thalidomide for patients with Behcet's syndrome, a condition characterized by painful ulcers on the mouth and genitals. Apparently, the drug has also been used by physicians in Turkey for this purpose.

The physicians justify the use of thalidomide because of the seriousness of the patient's condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there anything new on the birth control pill you can take after having sexual relations? I heard some time ago it was being studied, but I haven't seen anything lately. — Cecile, Macon, Ga.

Dear Cecile: Tests conducted in Germany show the morning after contraceptive to be safe and effective in 98 percent of cases. Minor side effects include nausea and vomiting.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard of tight shoes causing ingrown toenails, but I went to my doctor because of an ingrown toenail and he told me it could be caused by tight socks. Is this possible? — Chuck, Austin, Texas

Dear Chuck: Either tight shoes or tight socks can exert sufficient pressure to cause toenails to become ingrown. Cutting into the corners of a nail can also cause the edge to grow under the skin.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My obstetrician has told me that amniocentesis at my age (I am 30 years old) is not needed. My feeling is that if there's no risk to it, why not have it? I am not asking you to agree or disagree with my doctor, but I would like to know what the possibility is of having a spontaneous abortion if a woman has amniocentesis. — Jo, Boston, Mass.

Dear Jo: The risk of spontaneous abortion from amniocentesis performed by a skilled physician is a fraction of one percent.

Final lap for '84 Bulldogs this weekend

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

AUSTIN — While Jesse Marsh has rarely seen a state swim meet that his Midland High swimmers have not been personally involved, it has been a while since the Bulldog coach has had a boys' team with 1984's string of successes.

First, MHS made a strong showing at its' own Invitational in January. Then the Bulldogs netted a District 4-5A title. Two weeks ago, MHS overcame a small pool at a secondary site (Monahans), uncertainty about the performance of young swimmers Ricky Perkins, Paul Harris, and John Brenner, then beat top-seeded El Paso Eastwood on the final event to eke out of a one-point, Region I championship.

As a result of the Bulldogs' surprise strength in the 400 meter freestyle relay that made the difference against Eastwood, Marsh takes his strongest boys' team in the Texas state meet Friday and Saturday here at the beautiful University of Texas swim center.

THAT RELAY team and a youthful group of underdogs have qualified for the state meet as Midland High's first Region I titleists since 1975. It has been an improbable road to Austin, even though Marsh says his charges aimed for big things in 1984.

"We set our goals pretty high," said the MHS mentor in his 14th year at the school. "We hoped to be district and a regional champs, but we didn't have any idea that kids like Ricky Perkins would come along. Paul Harris and John Brenner had to come through for us."

State Swimming Meet

Come through they did, and each played roles in getting MHS this far although only Perkins of that bunch of kids has qualified for Austin (as a member of the free relay unit). Midland's relay team is Perkins, Andrew Jordan, David Hartman and Mike Seay. Seay and Jordan will try to add to MHS' point total in the 100 and 50 freestyle (Jordan) and Seay will compete in the 100 butterfly and the 200 freestyle.

MARSH IS realistic about the under-manned Bulldog chances at Austin. Reminding that the state of Texas is a hotbed for swimming talent, Marsh warns "Team-wise, we're not even looking at that. Just getting to the finals is an accomplishment."

After the Friday prelims which begin at 5 p.m., 12 will qualify and move on to Saturday's finals. After those 12 race, the top six will move on to the championship finals while the remaining six compete in the consolation finals. Marsh and MHS are aiming for a good round of prelims, simply hoping to get into Saturday's rounds.

If MHS can do this, "Anything can happen," says Marsh. If MHS can get to the championship finals, a Tall City tanker could bring home gold. Jordan has been MHS' most consistent threat this year, but he is seeded no better than seventh in either event.

MHS will pull out all the stops, as several swimmers are expected to go the skinhead route. By removing body hair, especially on the scalp, drag is reduced and times can improve, sometimes dramatically.

Although the meet's importance has caused a certain degree of fear and loathing and general anxiety, Marsh and his charges long for the challenge. On the sidelines, the Bulldogs can look for moral support from Harris, Brenner, and the rest of the swimmers. Although they won't compete in the state meet, each contributed to the MHS run for the roses.

DIVER DOC White was one of the best the District 4-5A had to offer, and although he did not qualify to dive in Austin, White's heroics at the Region I meet summarizes the MHS competitive drive.

White dislocated a finger in Monahans, and rather than succumb to the pain, he completed his required dives, moving up to third place in the process. When MHS won by a single point over Eastwood, White's unselfishness served to exemplify the resilient Bulldogs.

MHS has the odds against them once again in Austin, but MHS hasn't met the form chart yet. MHS is known as the Bulldogs, but dog-paddling won't be offered in Austin. Good thing, because MHS would then have to play the favorite's role. After Austin, Marsh would like to see just that.

Georgia quickly bows out

Lamar eliminates New Mexico

By The Associated Press

Georgia, a Final Four team in the NCAA basketball tournament last year, was among those bounced out of the 47th National Invitation Tournament as first-round action began Wednesday night.

The Bulldogs were beaten 74-69 in overtime by Tennessee-Chattanooga in one of six first-round games played at regional sites across the country. In other action, Notre Dame defeated Old Dominion 67-62, Tennessee drubbed St. Peter's of New Jersey 54-40, South Alabama edged Florida 88-87, Lamar beat New Mexico 64-61 and Southwestern Louisiana tripped Utah State 94-92.

First-round action continues with seven games Thursday night and three more Friday night.

LAMAR ODEN scored seven of his 13 points in overtime to lead Tennessee-Chattanooga past Georgia. Tennessee-Chattanooga bounced back after blowing an 11-point second-half lead.

Oden's layup with 1:03 to play put UTC ahead 70-69 and a breakaway basket by Maurice Head 32 seconds later gave the Moccasins a three-point lead.

Vern Fleming, Georgia's all-time leading scorer, missed a shot with 17 seconds left. Oden was fouled on the rebound and calmly hit two free throws to put the game out of reach.

Tennessee-Chattanooga guard Willie White led all scorers with 24 points, while Fleming pumped in 20 for Georgia.

Ken Barlow scored a game-high 21 points and Tom Sluby added 19 to lead Notre Dame over Old Dominion Sophomore center Tim Kempton, who missed Notre Dame's last six games due to a leg injury, came off the bench to play 27 minutes and pull down a game-high 11 rebounds.

Old Dominion had four players scoring in double figures, with Charlie Smith and Mark Davis scoring 16 points apiece.

After falling behind 33-29 at halftime, Old Dominion caught up and passed the Irish early in the second half. A foul shot by Kenny Gattison and consecutive jumpers by Charlie Smith put the Monarchs ahead 38-37 with 14:48 to play. But a baseline jumper by Sluby at 13:36 put the Irish up for good.

Willie Burton scored 12 points and sparked a late rally as Tennessee beat St. Peter's.

Tennessee led by as much as four points early in the second half before the Peacocks went up briefly at 38-35 with 6:44 remaining. Then the Vols took control.

Burton hit a field goal, made a pair of free throws, then drove down the court for another goal, putting the Volunteers ahead 41-38 with 4:54 remaining. The Vols added 13 points to their victory margin as they were fouled six times.

MICHAEL GERREN scored his season-high 32 points and Dexter Shouse added his year's-best 24 points to help South Alabama beat Florida. Gerren, who hit 15 first-half points, scored 11 of them in the Jaguars scoring blitz of 12 straight points.

Two of the points came after Florida forward Ronnie Williams and Coach Norm Sloan were tagged with consecutive technical fouls, and Shouse made two-of-three free throws. Sloan was hit with another technical late in the game.

Lamar's prolific shooting combination of Tom Sewell and Jerry Everett held off a free throw-filled second-half New Mexico rally as the Cardinals took a 64-61 victory.

Sewell led the Cardinals, with 29 points, including a layup with 26 seconds left that sealed Lamar's triumph. Everett chipped in 20 points. New Mexico, which finished its best season since 1978 with a 24-11 record, got a pair of 21-point performances from forward Tim Garrett and guard Phil Smith.

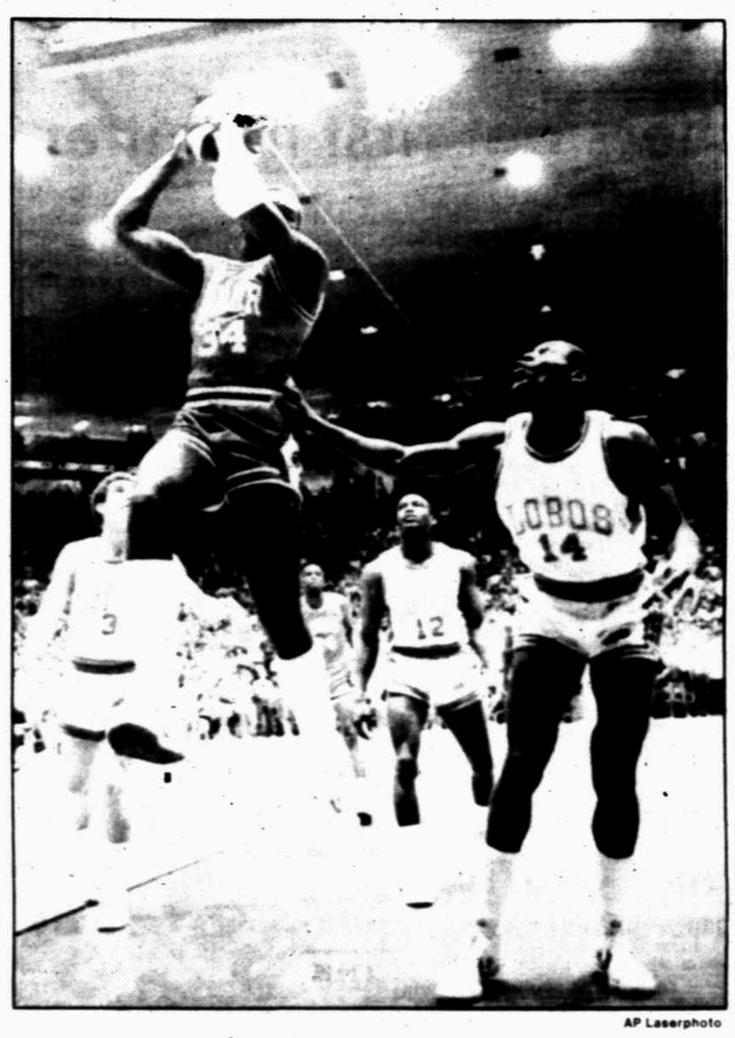

The victory improved Lamar's record to a tournament-best 26-4.

Guard George Almones grabbed a rebound and sank a basket with two seconds left to lift Southwestern Louisiana over Utah State.

Utah State appeared in control of the game, leading 92-84, with 4:39 to play, but two missed free throws and a crucial turnover paved the way for the Cajuns' victory.

Graylin Warner, who scored back-to-back baskets to tie it at 92 with 1:29 to play, paced Southwestern Louisiana with 31 points. Almones added 21 points, eight assists and six rebounds for USL.

MHS hosts Pecos today

From Staff Reports

Midland High got off to a fast District 4-5A start Tuesday when they defeated Odessa Permian in the league opener for both schools at Memorial Stadium-Diamond.

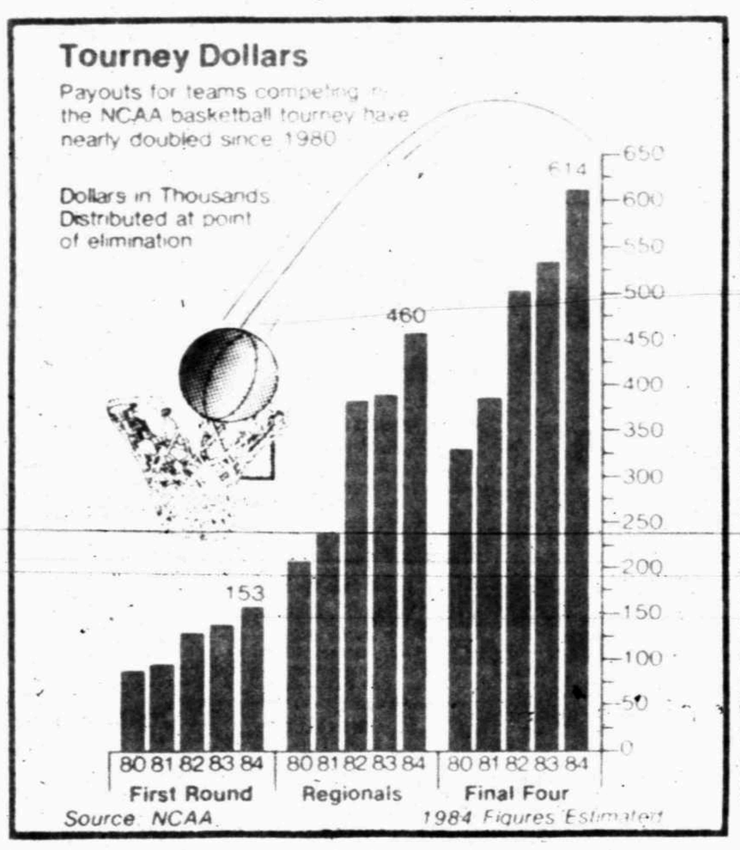

Today, the Bulldogs have a chance to work on one of the areas where they seem to have a few problems: Run production. Midland High hosts Pecos at 4 p.m. and a little more offense is hoped for to go along with the defensive and pitching performances that paced MHS to victory Tuesday. That win raised the Dogs season record to 3-5 with one loss coming because of a lost coin flip in the Pre-District Tournament at the start of the year.

As a team, the Bulldogs managed to collect eight hits for a .304 average. They were led by Steve Wootan with a 2-for-3 performance at the plate and a five-hit, five-strike out stint on the mound.

Friday, Midland Lee, a 1-0 winner over Odessa High Tuesday, will travel to Lubbock to face Coronado at 4 p.m.

Like the Bulldogs, the Rebels used good defense and sound pitching to overcome a lack of offense to gain the victory. Rebel pitcher Bryan Willis allowed only five hits and relied on the defense to keep him out of trouble.

Both Midland High and Lee return to district action on Saturday when the Rebels host 0-1 San Angelo at Lee Diamond and the Bulldogs travel to Big Spring to face the Steers, also 0-1. Both games are slated for 2 p.m. starts.

NCAA Basketball

By The Associated Press

It will be the fastbreaking Runnin' Rebels of Nevada-Las Vegas against the patient Trottin' Tigers of Princeton when the NCAA Basketball Tournament resumes tonight on four fronts.

Princeton will bring a bit of Ivy League culture to the tournament when the Tigers, seeded 12th and last in the West following their 65-56 preliminary-round triumph over the University of San Diego, oppose 13th-ranked UNLV in the opener of a first-round doubleheader at Salt Lake City. The nightcap pits Louisiana State against Dayton.

While UNLV's average of 83.7 points a game was fifth highest in the nation as the Rebels ran to a 27-5 record, Princeton's yield of just 49.2 points a game put the Tigers at the head of the defensive class. But they captured defensive honors thanks in large part to a deliberate style of attack.

"Rather unusual," is the way UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian describes it. "In fact, there's not a team in the western United States that plays in their style."

Will UNLV make Princeton run or will Princeton make UNLV walk?

"I really think the day is gone when you can make a really good basketball team run when they don't want to run," says Tarkanian. "I don't think you can do it. We don't play that way every game. We don't come out and pressure people every game and I don't think we can force Princeton into running."

Coach Pete Carril of 18-9 Princeton said he was "not worried about UNLV's offense. I know they are going to score. I'm worried about their defense. It's been very underrated for years. Jerry said it's tough to get us to go up-tempo, but I know he's going to try to do it."

LSU IS in the NCAA Tournament for the first time since the 1981 team went to the Final Four. But Coach Dale Brown said his club "never seemed to peak at any one time this season. We won some close games and lost some close games. We have to get a tempo. When we do that, we're capable of beating anyone in the country and at any time."

The home-court advantage in tonight's play belongs to Alabama-Birmingham and Memphis State. In the Mideast, UAB meets Brigham Young at the Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center after 17th-ranked Oregon State faces West Virginia.

After finishing fifth in the Sun Belt Conference during the regular season, UAB made the NCAAs the only way it could — by winning the conference tournament on its home floor.

MEANWHILE, THE Midwest section finds Fresno State vs. Louisiana Tech, followed by Memphis State vs. Oral Roberts at Memphis' Mid-South Coliseum.

In the East, 20th-ranked Temple meets St. John's and Auburn goes against Richmond at Charlotte, N.C.

The first-round continues Friday night with four more doubleheaders — Virginia Commonwealth-Northeastern and Virginia-Iona at East Rutherford, N.J.; Louisville-Morehead State and Villanova-Marshall at Milwaukee; Illinois State-Alabama and Kansas-Alcorn State at Lincoln, Neb., and Nevada-Reno vs. 15th-ranked Washington and Miami of Ohio-Southern Methodist at Pullman, Wash.

BYU, runnerup in the Western Athletic Conference, is led by Devin Durrant, the nation's third leading scorer with a 28.3 average.

Memphis State will be the crowd favorite at home, but the twin bill also includes unheralded Louisiana Tech, which snapped Lamar's 80-game home-court winning streak in capturing the Southland Conference postseason tourney.

AT CHARLOTTE, Temple and St. John's play for the right to meet top-ranked North Carolina in the second round.

But, says Temple's Granger Hall, "Every player on the team will tell you, our coaching staff will tell you this — we're taking one game at a time. You can't put the cart before the horse. Who's gonna pull the cart?"

St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca picked North Carolina as his favorite for the championship.

Ump polls fans on close calls at first

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Ron Luciano knew the American League had it in for him when it assigned him to Arizona for spring training every year.

"Arizona," the ex-umpire harrumphed. "Nobody goes there. Even the owners of the the clubs that train in Arizona go to Florida."

Still, Luciano coped. He found ways to amuse himself. There was, for example, his traditional poll of the fans.

"There would be a close play at first base and I was never good at making decisions anyway," Luciano laughed. "So I'd turn to the fans and say, 'OK, how many for safe? How many for out?' I let the fans make the call."

That did not always sit well with rookies trying to make the teams. Luciano recalled one kid who was in camp with the Chicago Cubs. "The Cubs. They always tried to go 30-0 in spring training and then they'd figure, 'This year, we're champs.' What they'd forget was that the other clubs weren't trying. Anyway, this kid hit a grounder in a game against Milwaukee. It was close and I did my poll. The kid went nuts, jumping up and down and screaming. Cecil Cooper said to him, 'Take it easy. That's how he does it.' "

The Brewers' first baseman couldn't calm the kid. He continued yelling, not the least bit intimidated by the 6-foot-4, 300-pound ump. But Luciano resisted throwing him out of the game.

"Run him? In spring training? C'mon."

Luciano figures that being an umpire is like being a king. The job does not prepare you for anything else in life. So now he writes. His first book, "The Umpire Strikes Back," was a bestseller. Now he's back with another called "Strike Two," the further adventures of umpires past and present, including even the Foreign Legion handling spring training in Arizona.

"Arizona is a penalty," Luciano said. "But I adored it. There was no pressure. Every year, I told them, 'Don't send me back there,' and every year they would."

After 10 years, umpires can pick their own spring assignments. When the league asked Luciano's preference, he was ready with a reply.

"I told them Arizona and it made them furious."

WINS AND losses in spring training are not treated with quite the same intensity as they are in the regular season. Take the case of Tom Murphy, a journeyman relief pitcher.

"Murphy was with the Brewers, pitching the bottom of the ninth in a tie game against the Cubs," Luciano said. "First pitch, the umpire calls a strike. He yells in, 'Looked low!'

"Now he's the pitcher and he's complaining about a strike. So he gets ball-ball-ball-ball. Man on first. He makes a pickoff move you never saw before. 'Balk!' Very good. The runner's now on second. Now he's throwing fastballs down the middle. The batter rips one for a single and the game's over. The first one out of there was Murphy."

Now, about balks.

"I never called a balk," Luciano said. "Call it? I couldn't spell it. I didn't understand the rule. One time, Gene Mauch came running out hollering at me. 'Balk! Balk! He's bending his knee!'

"So I start watching the pitcher. He throws over to first. Never bent his knee, but here comes Mauch again, yelling, 'Balk! He moved his shoulder!'

"I told him, 'Gene, I didn't see it. I was busy watching his knee.' "

The balk rule, Luciano said, is about as confusing as the rule covering batting out of order. "In umpire school, Don Denkinger taught batting out of order. John McSherry covered balks."

What was Luciano's specialty?

"Big."

Mariner pitchers get first no-hitter

By The Associated Press

The Seattle Mariners posted the first no-hitter in their history with a 14-0 exhibition victory over the Oakland A's Wednesday behind three minor league pitchers and Dave Beard.

Seattle's staff had yielded 37 runs and 46 hits in the past three exhibition games before the four pitchers combined to toss the Mariners' first no-hitter in the seven-year history of their franchise.

Mark Langston of the Mariners' Class AA team in Chattanooga, Tenn., pitched the first four innings, Bob Babcock of Class AAA Salt Lake City went the next two, Lee Guetterman of Class A Bakersfield, Calif., went another two and Beard got the last three outs.

Langston walked one, Babcock walked one and hit a batter, and one batter reached base on an error as Seattle second baseman Jack Perconte let the ball get through his legs.

Seattle had 13 hits, led by Ricky Nelson with two doubles and four runs batted in. Phil Bradley and Bob Kearney each had a triple and single to drive in two runs.

In other exhibition baseball action, Joe Carter, Richie Hebner and Bill Hatcher each doubled in a six-run Chicago seventh as the Cubs defeated the San Diego Padres 10-2.

Pete Rose and Gary Carter stroked run-scoring singles in the third inning to lead the Montreal Expos to a 2-1 decision over the Baltimore Orioles.

The Milwaukee Brewers scored six unearned runs in the second inning, three on a triple by Charlie Moore, to beat the San Francisco Giants 7-6.

Alex Trevino doubled in the winning run in the 14th inning after Wayne Krenchicki tied the game with a double in the 10th to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Harry Spilman's grand slam home run highlighted a five-run Houston 10th, snapping a 1-1 tie and carrying the Astros to a 6-3 decision over the Texas Rangers.

A fifth-inning error by third baseman Mike Schmidt with the bases loaded allowed two runs to score, giving the Minnesota Twins a 3-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Rookie Buddy Biancalana ripped a two-run single in the bottom of the 10th inning to lift the Kansas City Royals to a 4-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dwight Evans knocked in four runs with two homers as the Boston Red Sox pounded out 18 hits to beat the Toronto Blue Jays. Terry Harper collected three hits, including an RBI double, and scored a run as the Atlanta Braves defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0.

Golf handicapping same as horse racing

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Picking a winner — or a potential winner — in golf is easy, said Tom Watson.

"A lot of people think it's tough, the hardest thing to do in sports, to pick a winner in golf. But it's not. It's really pretty easy," Watson said before teeing off today in the first round of the $400,000 Bay Hill Classic.

"You do just like the handicappers do in horse racing," Watson said, spreading an imaginary form chart on the table.

"You just check who's been playing well recently, the last two or three weeks.

"What the player did in Tucson doesn't matter. That's too far back. You have to know what they've done in the last couple of weeks.

"The players who have played USING WATSON'S what-have-you-done-recently theory, the most logical picks in the 117-man field would include Andy Bean (second and sixth in his last two starts and a former winner here), Bruce Lietzke (first and third in his last two and a notorious streak player), and Tom Kite (a winner last week).

And, of course, there's Jack Nicklaus, a runnerup last Sunday and a strong contender in four of his last six starts.

"He's in a period where he's playing well without winning," said Kite. "Sooner or later he's going to do it."

Other major figures include the host Palmer, PGA champion Hal Sutton, Masters titleholder Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Ray Floyd, defending champion Mike Nicolette, Craig Stadler and Fuzzy Zoeller.

Texas nips ASU, 3-2

Texas 3, Arizona St. 2

AUSTIN (AP) - Darren Loy homered and David Denny hit a two-run double to give third-ranked Texas a 3-2 victory over No. 1-ranked Arizona State Wednesday night.

Eric Boudreaus struck out the Sun Devils' Bob Grandstaff with the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh to preserve the fourth victory for Texas hurler Bruce Ruffin.

The victory enabled Texas, 21-3, to sweep a rain-shortened series, 2-0. A nine-inning game that was scheduled to follow Wednesday's seven-inning contest was canceled because of rain. Arizona State, which fell to 22-9, had earlier swept a three-game series on its home field.

Barry Bonds hit a solo home run for Arizona State. Randy Rector was the losing pitcher.

Texas Christian 8, Oklahoma City 2

FORT WORTH — Mark Strickland allowed two hits in three innings as Texas Christian defeated Oklahoma City 8-2 Wednesday.

OCU took the lead, 2-0, in the top of the third when Mickey Kazmierski hit Rick Worley with a pitch. Worley moved to second on a sacrifice and scored on a single by Shane Sanders.

TCU tied it, 2-2, in the bottom of the third on Jeff Shafer's single. The Frogs scored two more runs in the inning, added one in the fifth and three in the eighth.

Strickland replaced Kazmierski in the fifth, picking up his first win of the season. Hightower, who went seven innings, took the loss for OCU.

TCU upped its record to 9-5. OCU dropped to 12-6.

Texas Tech 6, Oklahoma State 4

STILLWATER, Okla. — Tommy Dobyns' home run in the top of the ninth scored the winning run in Texas Tech's 6-4 win Wednesday over Oklahoma State in the first game of a non-conference doubleheader, but John Farrell gave up only two hits in the nightcap, giving Oklahoma State the win, 11-0.

Texas Tech is now 14-8. Oklahoma state's record is 11-7.

MHS girls out to hold lead

From Staff Reports

The Midland High girls' golf team begins the second round of the 1984 District 4-5A competition, and they occupy first place with the three top scores from the first leg played in San Angelo last week.

MHS' Darla Smith, Kristie Raney and Stacy Owens rank 1-2-3 after the first round among medalists, and consequently MHS was able to post a 16-stroke advantage over the nearest foe, San Angelo.

The MHS linksters totaled 386 strokes at San Angelo's Bentwood Country Club, a lead the Bobcats are trying to dent today. The round began this morning at 9:30 at Green Tree Country Club.

Smith leads all competition with a first-round 90, followed by Raney's total of 91 and Owens' 94. Angelo's Sherry Weatherly is the lone threat to the lead not from MHS with a first-round 99.

Lee's Lesa Burnett is the other Midlander in the hunt, also at 99 entering today's second round.

Lee also holds the fourth place team total of 481, 95 strokes behind MHS.

Only four teams from the district have girl golfers, so the Abilene and Odessa schools are not competing. Big Spring is currently in the third place spot with a total of 473.

MHS coach Mary Baird says "I'm happy with where we are now", not surprising considering her team now is atop the standings, and the three leaders are Bulldogs about to compete at GTCC, Midland's home course.

Big Spring will host the final round of the three-site round-robin.

Sixers edge Bucks for sixth straight victory

By The Associated Press

With the National Basketball Association playoffs getting ever closer, the defending champion Philadelphia 76ers seem to be getting their act together.

They made it six in a row Wednesday night, using Andrew Toney's 12 fourth-quarter points to edge the Milwaukee Bucks 92-91.

Toney, who hit only two of 13 shots in the first three periods, put the 76ers ahead 90-89 when he scored on a rebound with 1:27 left in the game. Milwaukee's Marques Johnson scored with 43 seconds left, but Philadelphia's Julius Erving hit a short jumper six seconds later for the winning points. A shot by the Bucks' Junior Bridgeman that went in was ruled to have come after the buzzer.

Bullets 103, Celtics 99

Ricky Sobers hit two free throws to give Washington the lead for good with 1:56 left as the Bullets, who led most of the way, had to rally to snap Boston's six-game winning streak. Washington led until Robert Parish's long jumper gave Boston a 95-94 lead with 3:26 to play.

After Sobers' free throws put the Bullets in front, consecutive jumpers by Greg Ballard and Frank Johnson boosted the lead to 102-97 with 51 seconds to play. Jeff Ruland led Washington with 20 points, Ballard added 18 and rookie Darren Daye had a career-high 16.

Nets 108, Suns 102

Kelvin Ransey scored 11 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter as the Nets surged from behind in the closing moments to register their ninth victory in their last 10 games. New Jersey held Phoenix without a field goal over the final 4:39 while outscoring the Suns 13-2.

The Nets trailed 100-95 when Ransey started their comeback with a three-point play, and a basket by Mike O'Koren, who had a season-high 20 points, tied the score.

NBA

O'Koren gave the Nets the lead for good on a jumper from the top of the key with 1:01 to play.

Nuggets 125, Pistons 121

Denver's Dan Schayes sank two free throws with 21 seconds remaining to snap a tie. The free throws were Schayes' only points of the second half. Alex English scored 37 points and Kiki Vandeweghe 32 to pace the Nuggets. T.R. Dunn added two free throws with two seconds left for the final margin.

Kansas City 101, Atlanta 93

Eddie Johnson scored 27 points and LaSalle Thompson added 24 as Kansas City handed slumping Atlanta its ninth loss in its last 10 games. The teams entered the fourth quarter tied at 73, but the Kings took the lead for good by scoring the first five points of the period.

Mavericks 105, Clippers 101

Brad Davis gave Dallas the lead midway through the fourth quarter with a jump shot, then hit five points down the stretch as the Mavericks held off San Diego in a game marred by five technical fouls and two ejections. The victory lifted the Mavericks into a tie for the Midwest Division lead with Utah.

Jordan, Tisdale unanimous picks

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan, North Carolina's clutch performer, and sophomore sensation Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma were unanimous choices on the 1983-84 Associated Press All-American college basketball team, which was announced Wednesday.

Joining them on the first team are Jordan's teammate, Sam Perkins, and 7-foot juniors Patrick Ewing of Georgetown and Akeem Olajuwon of Houston.

The selection was done by a 10-member panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Ten points were given for a first team selection, five for the second team and three for the third team.

Jordan, Ewing and Tisdale are repeaters from last year's team. Last year Perkins was on the third team and Olajuwon was a honorable mention choice.

The selection of top-ranked North Carolina's dynamic duo of Jordan, a 6-6 junior guard-forward, and Perkins, a 6-9 senior, marked the fourth time two players from the same team were chosen first team All-America.

The others were Alex Groza and Ralph Beard of Kentucky (1949), Bill Walton and Keith Wilkes of UCLA (1974) and Scott May and Kent Benson of Indiana.

Jordan, a Wilmington, N.C., native who has been a standout since his freshman season, paced the Tar Heels' in scoring with a 19.6 average on 55 percent accuracy from the field. The Atlantic Coast Conference's Player of the Year, also averaged 5.4 rebounds and made 49 steals.

Perkins, from New York, hit 60 percent from the field in averaging 17.5 points and leading the 27-2 Tar Heels in rebounding with a 9.5 average. He also had 66 blocks in helping North Carolina go unbeaten in the ACC regular season.

Tisdale, 6-9, the first freshman in history to make first team All-American last season, put together another strong season this year as the seventh-ranked Sooners' only returning starter, averaging 26.8 points on 58 percent shooting and 9.6 rebounds. He registered 74 blocked shots.

The Tulsa, Okla., native was picked the Player of the Year in the Big Eight for the second straight year. Oklahoma posted a 29-4 record and captured the Big Eight regular-season championship.

Ewing was the co-Player of the Year in the Big East Conference with St. John's Chris Mullin. Ewing, a native of Jamaica who went to high school in Cambridge, Mass., guided the Hoyas to both the regular-season and postseason league titles and the No. 2 ranking in the nation with a 29-3 record.

In addition to his standout defensive work (118 blocked shots), the Georgetown center averaged 17.2 points on 67 percent shooting from the field and 10.1 rebounds.

Olajuwon, a native of Lagos, Nigeria, averaged 16.3 points on 67 percent shooting from the field, 13.8 rebounds and had 189 blocks — 16 against Biscayne — in leading No. 5 Houston to a 28-4 record. He earned the Southwest Conference's most valuable player award, leading the Cougars to the league's s regular season and postseason titles. He has been playing basketball for only five years and late last season blossomed into a top performer.

Kentucky's Sam Bowie, who came back this season after sitting out two seasons with a leg injury, made the second team along with Devin Durrant of Brigham Young, Michael Cage of San Diego State, Leon Wood of Fullerton State and Mullin.

Keith Lee of Memphis State, Lorenzo Charles of North Carolina State, Melvin Turpin of Kentucky, Michael Young of Houston and Alvin Robertson of Arkansas formed the third team.

Vaive, Bullard score 50th goals of season

By The Associated Press

For Rick Vaive, scoring 50 goals is getting to be a yearly thing. For Mike Bullard, it was just a matter of staying healthy.

Both Vaive and Bullard got to the half-century mark Wednesday night with a pair of goals. Vaive connected twice in a 3-3 tie between his Toronto Maple Leafs and the Minnesota North Stars. Bullard's two goals came in a 7-6 Pittsburgh Penguins loss at Los Angeles.

"A lot of people said the first year was a fluke, and the second year I did it, they thought it might be a fluke also," said Vaive. "But I think I've finally proven none of the years has been a fluke."

Vaive staked the Leafs to a 2-0 lead in the first nine minutes. He beat Minnesota goalie Gilles Meloche on a breakaway during a Toronto power play at 1:38 and scored again at 8:46.

But the visiting North Stars, who clinched the Norris Division crown with the point earned from the tie, rallied to overcome a 3-1 deficit on second-period goals by Brian Bellows and Al MacAdam just 92 seconds apart.

Still, the tie moved Toronto to within four points of fourth-place Chicago in the battle for the final Norris playoff berth.

"I was looking for a sound game from the team," said Minnesota Coach Bill Mahoney. "In March, we've had five wins and a tie. We're playing close to playoff hockey, and that is our main objective."

"Our backs are to the wall," said Vaive, "so it shouldn't be hard to get up for games."

Alan Bester made 45 saves in the Toronto net.

Kings 7, Penguins 6

Los Angeles won its second in a row after a 10-game losing slide. Bernie Nicholls had his 40th goal of the season and two assists as the host Kings built a 7-2 lead and held off a spirited Pittsburgh rally led by Bullard's goals. The Penguins have lost six in a row.

Bullard scored 36 goals as a rookie in 1981-82, then got only 22 last season in 57 games after missing the first 20 games of the campaign with mononucleosis.

"Bullard is phenomenal," said Penguins Coach Lou Angotti. "He's a heck of a player. If we can get a couple of players to support our cast, he'll be even better. He's not a selfish hockey player. When he had about 35 goals, he was passing off too much. I had to tell him to take more shots."

Bruins 4, Red Wings 2

Mike Krushelnyski led visiting Boston with two goals, while defenseman Ray Bourque contributed a goal and two assists. The Bruins remained four points behind first-place Buffalo in the Adams Division. Detroit is tied with St. Louis for second in the Norris.

"Detroit's never given us an easy game," said Boston goaltender Pete Peeters, who made 25 stops. "But we're getting back into the style of game we played last year, keeping the score down and trying to play good defensive hockey. And when we do, we seem to win."

The crowd of 17,802 at Joe Louis Arena lifted the Red Wings' home attendance to 616,446, breaking the single-season mark of 604,177 set in the 1979-80 season. The Wings are averaging 16,661 fans per contest this season.

Rangers 6, Flyers 3

Reijo Ruotsalainen, Ron Greschner and Mike Allison all scored within a 56-second span of the third period to break open a 3-3 deadlock in New York. The Rangers had trailed 3-1 before staging a rally late in the second period to tie it. Rookie Peter Sundstrom scored twice for the Rangers and fellow freshman Dave Poulin replied with a pair for Philly. The Rangers lead the Flyers by three points in the race for third place in the Patrick.

Sabres 4, Flames 2

Buffalo scored twice in the final minute of the second period to stun the host Flames. John Tucker and Jerry Korab shattered a 1-1 tie and the Sabres extended their unbeaten streak to five. Tucker and Korab also had assists and Mike Foligno added a goal and an assist.

Jets 6, Black Hawks 4

Host Winnipeg blew open the game with five first-period goals, two by Dale Hawerchuk, as the Jets crept within a point of third-place Vancouver in the Smythe Division. The Jets' scoring burst drove All-Star goalie Murray Bannerman from the net in favor of Bob Janecyk.

Capitals 3, Devils 3

Mike Gartner had two goals for Washington, which is unbeaten in seven games but had a six-game winning streak halted. The Capitals are three points behind the first-place Islanders in the Patrick sector. They have not lost to New Jersey in 13 meetings since the Devils moved from Colorado.

Ex-Chicago publisher jumps to New York

By the Los Angeles Times, Washington Post News Service

James Hoge, the publisher of the Chicago Sun-Times who resigned when the paper was purchased by Rupert Murdoch, Wednesday was named publisher of the New York Daily News, Murdoch's primary rival in New York.

The appointment is ironic and to some extent unexpected, as Hoge's new employer is the Chicago-based Tribune Co., owner of his across-the-street rival for the last 25 years, the Chicago Tribune. In addition to the Daily News and the Tribune, the Tribune Co. owns six other papers and several other media operations.

Hoge succeeds Robert M. Hunt, 56, as publisher. Hunt, a director of the Tribune Co. and News publisher for five years, will become chief executive officer of a new Tribune Co. subsidiary for marketing advertising nationally.

Hoge, 49, is among the most highly regarded newspaper publishers in the United States and there has been speculation that Hoge might be an Illinois political candidate. He rose from cub reporter to editor of the Sun-Times before becoming publisher in 1980. The paper won six Pulitzer Prizes under his leadership.

When the Sun-Times was put up for sale by the Field family last year, Hoge headed a group of Chicago business people trying to buy it. The group's counteroffer was rejected in favor of Murdoch's higher bid in November.

He resigned as publisher, along with three key executives, three days before Murdoch took charge Jan. 9.

At the Daily News, Hoge will lead the country's largest general-interest daily newspaper, with a circulation of 1.4 million. He also will have the title of chief executive and chairman of New York News Inc., the Tribune Co. unit that owns the Daily News.

Arthur E. Wible Jr., executive vice president and director of sales at New York News, will hold the title of president and chief operating officer. The changes are effective April 23.

Hoge takes over the Daily News just as it appears to be recovering from a financial crisis that nearly killed it.

Overweight with staff and out of shape to handle the growing competition from Murdoch's New York Post, the Daily News found itself with more than $100 million in annual advertising revenues, yet losing $1 million a month after expenses. It lost $12.7 million in 1981 and $14.4 million in 1982.

The Tribune Co. tried for months in 1982 to sell the paper, and threatened to shut it if it could not. After an offer from Texas financier Joe L. Allbritton collapsed in the eleventh hour, however, the company agreed to keep it going in the hope of winning massive labor concessions from its 11 unions on its own.

In fall 1982, Hunt won union agreements that reportedly saved the paper about $50 million annually for three years and eliminated about 1,340 of the paper's 5,000 jobs.

In 1983, the Tribune Co. says, the Daily News earned $21.7 million, its best operating income record in the paper's 64-year history.

Auto sales up again in March as inventories continue decline

By The Associated Press

U.S. automakers say their sales at the beginning of March rose 31.5 percent from a year ago, and the Commerce Department reports that businesses sold products in January three times faster than they stocked them, signaling further economic growth.

General Motors Corp. paced the automakers' latest sales gains for the first 10 days of March, reporting a 36.6 percent increase. Ford Motor Co. sales rose 25.5 percent, and Chrysler Corp. sales climbed 17.6 percent.

The six major carmakers sold a combined 211,240 vehicles in the latest period, up from 160,167 a year earlier. Car sales for the year so far are up 40.4 percent.

The sales — at an annual rate of 7.7 million — were at a lower rate than the 8 million-plus figures of January and February. But the dip was "one these random things. These sales are strong, and they (carmakers) have been moving production schedules up. On the whole, people are in a buying mood," said David Healy, an industry analyst with the investment firm Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

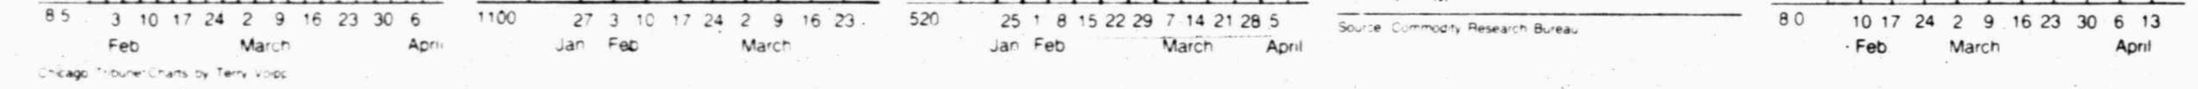

The Commerce Department said the value of inventories held by manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers in January climbed 0.4 percent, to $522.7 billion.

But the restocking lagged behind a brisk 1.3 percent increase in sales to $402 billion — the sixth straight month that a new sales record was established.

With sales rising more than three times faster than inventory rebuilding in January, the ratio of stocks to sales fell to a record low of 1.30 months, meaning it would take that long for inventories to be sold off at the current sales pace. The December ratio had been 1.31 months.

The low ratio, analysts said, spells good news for future economic growth because businesses will be prompted to buy more to restock as the year progresses. And those additional orders could translate into higher production levels.

William Dunkelberg, chief economist for the National Federation of Independent Businesses, said the new report and a report Monday that businesses plan to boost capital spending by 13.6 percent this year were strong signs of continuing economic growth.

Lawsuit to recover investment losses filed against J. David Co.

By Copely News Service

SAN DIEGO — A lawsuit to recover J. David & Co. investment losses from persons and institutions that worked for and with founder J. David "Jerry" Dominelli — former employees, accounting and law firms and the like — was filed Tuesday in Superior Court here.

Dr. W. Robert and Sally McMurray filed a fraud suit against individuals and institutions that are not primary parties in the bankruptcy or criminal grand jury proceedings.

The suit asks for $1.45 million in general, punitive and treble damages, as well as attorneys' fees. The McMurrays' original investment was $120,000.

Among those accused of liability in the collapse of the J. David Interbank trading operation are Nancy Hoover, the companion of Dominelli; Mark R. Yarry, Dominelli's key lieutenant; brokers Maurice Altshuler, Robert Kritzik, John Brockington and Ted Pulaski; money handlers Deborah Hart and Joy Paulk; administrator Christ P. Kalabokes; venture capitalist Gerald F. LaKarnafeaux; lawyer Michael A. Clark; and public relations specialist George Mitrovich.

In addition, the lawyer who filed the suit, Michael J. Aguirre, said that accounting, law and advertising firms as well as brokerage houses that reaped commissions from Dominelli's activities, are expected to be added as defendants later.

Lawyers expect a wave of such secondary suits — in part because one of the law firms and several of the brokerage houses that had relationships with J. David and its principals have lots of assets and insurance coverage.

Kevin P. Jasper of Jennings & Campbell, the firm representing investors collectively, also said that he is looking into possible culpability of secondary entities. "We're investigating — looking into the potential liabilities of other principals and agents," he said.

However, if investors recover a sufficient amount from bankruptcy proceedings, the firm won't pursue the secondary liabilities, he said. The investors were informed of this strategy at a letter mailed by Jennings & Campbell March 2.

The McMurray suit alleges that J. David was actually selling securities that should have been registered in the United States and subject to U.S. laws. According to the suit, the claim that the Interbank trading took place offshore, and that the money was moved offshore, was a ruse to avoid the U.S. regulatory apparatus. "The gist of the suit is the failure to qualify securities under the law of California," said Aguirre.

Also, "omissions and misrepresentations" were made in the selling of the participations in Dominelli's Interbank fund, the suit charges. There are also allegations of "unfair business practices, fraud, breach of fiduciary duty, legal and professional malpractice and negligent misrepresentation."

The suit alleges that the defendants misled the investors by saying "that Dominelli was buying and selling commodity futures contracts and Interbank currencies ... when in fact no such trading was taking place and plaintiffs' funds had been converted and diverted to purposes other than trading."

It also alleges that the unnamed lawyers and accountants were guilty of malpractice.

LaKarnafeaux, who headed J. David's venture capital operation and was a partner in Group J. David, said he was not involved in J. David Interbank operations "in any way" and thinks that a number of the other defendants were also not involved. "I think he (Aguirre) will find that the remoteness of many of the defendants from the Interbank situation was very great," said LaKarnafeaux.

Owners testify against X-body

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 62-year-old former Alabama schoolteacher has told a federal court she does not drive her 1980 Chevrolet Citation on long trips or in heavy traffic because she fears the left rear wheel will lock when she applies the brakes, throwing the car into a spin and out of control.

Helen Pollard of Gadsden, Ala., who bought her X-body car on May 11, 1980, testified in U.S. District Court on Tuesday that she has had several incidents, at least three of which she described as so serious she couldn't maintain control of the car.

"I was frightened to death," Mrs. Pollard said in describing one of the instances in which her daughter and two grandchildren were in the car.

She said the car turned 90 degrees and slid down the road when she applied the brakes, even though she said she was traveling no more than 15 miles per hour.

"When the car was spinning, I held on for dear life because I had two or three of the most precious things in my life in the car with me. I thought I was going to kill my daughter and grandchildren," she said.

On another occasion, Mrs. Pollard said she was driving to school early when she applied the brakes as she was about to make a turn at an intersection.

"I lightly touched the brake, then touched them again," she said. "The car went out of control, spun across the intersection and went into a ditch and up an embankment. I just held onto the steering wheel for dear life.

"No one was on the highway — I'm so thankful for that," said Mrs. Pollard, who came away from the accident with only a bloody nose. "If anyone else had been on the road, it would have been a tragedy. While the car was skidding, I had absolutely no control."

Mrs. Pollard, who has sued GM over her Citation, was the first witness in a lawsuit the government has brought against General Motors Corp., alleging a braking defect in 1980 model-year X-cars.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is seeking $4 million in penalties and the recall of 1.1 million cars, many of which are suspected of having rear brakes that can lock up in moderate-to-hard stops, causing the car to spin out of control.

GM has denied that the cars have safety defects.

In opening arguments of what is expected to be at least a six-week-long trial, Lawrence A. G. Moloney, a Justice Department lawyer representing NHTSA, told Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson the government will prove that the X-cars are defective and that GM knew it before they were put on the market.

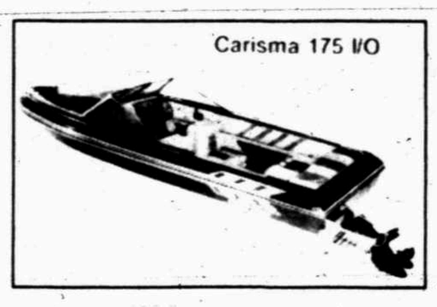

"The evidence will show that GM did obtain knowledge of safety-related defects and did not inform its customers or the government or has failed to adequately repair those defects.

"From the evidence, it is clear the X-cars out on the road today constitute a danger to the public and should be recalled immediately," he said.

Questions tend to cause resentment

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Those lists of questions and answers that officers should be prepared to answer at their company's annual meeting seem to get larger and more detailed each year.

And, it appears, more personal than corporate.

Each year of late, corporate shareholders seem more able and willing to sting the chairman and his aides with questions about "perks," bonuses, big pensions, and contracts that protect executives against job loss.

Be prepared, says the firm of Arthur Young, one of the so-called Big Eight, to answer questions of this sort:

How much were the top officers reimbursed for travel and entertainment expenses? Did auditors review these expenses? Did the audit committee?

What is the total compensation of top executives? What perquisites do they receive (e.g. use of company boats, airplanes, apartments, automobiles)? Were any loans to top executives forgiven?

Why has executive compensation increased without a corresponding increase in dividends? Has the company considered reducing executives' salaries or bonuses during periods when earnings decline or dividends are reduced?

Are questions of this sort simply the result of better informed and more active shareholders? Or is there, as many critics maintain, a developing sense of resentment about the state of corporate governance?

James C. Treadway Jr., a Securities and Exchange Commission member, suggests there are reasons for throwing the darts, one of them being an increase in deception through financial statements.

In some instances, he mantains, the use of "cooked books" and other types of deception represent a failure of corporate stewardship, "a breakdown in management's accountability to shareholders."

Although not referring specifically to annual meetings, he says, "there are some tough questions that need to be asked with frequency, but are not being asked..."

If there is a tinge of resentment in shareholder questions, conceivably it could result from a feeling that officers are protecting themselves rather than the company.

Ward Howell International, an executive recruiting firm, recently surveyed 560 large companies and found nearly one-half protected their top officers with employment contacts last year, up 40 percent from 1982.

The survey found one of the more popular contracts was the so-called golden parachute, which compensates executives should they lose their jobs because of a takeover. Some of the contracts were worth more than $10 million.

One of the most devastating commentaries on executive privileges comes just in time for annual meetings, courtesy of the March-April issue of Harvard Business Review and Joseph E. Muckley, the author.

"Those persons fortunate enough to achieve high status in our corporate society should think more of their responsibilities and less of their perquisites," wrote Muckley, former chief financial officer for Martin-Marietta Corp.

Muckley, now deceased, served on at least 11 boards, during which he came to the conclusion that the following should be eliminated: Directors' pensions, automatic post-retirement consulting deals, and free legal, tax and financial counseling for executives.

How, he asks, can a company justify paying directors $40,000 a year and then provide them with a $15,000 a year pension?

How can a company justify paying a $1 million-a-year chairman an additional $133,000 for an apartment "so he can be more accessible to headquarters?"

Why should the $500,000-a-year chairman of a large company be allowed to earn $196,000 a year for attending 119 directors' meetings — "running around the country collecting scalps and wampum" — while his own company suffered three straight years of losses?

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Owning residence provides security

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My widowed mother, 63, is contemplating selling her house. She will clear about $60,000 and is thinking about renting a condominium where she can have some activities and be around other folks of her age. Her monthly income is about $700. Do you think it would be wise for her to rent, rather than purchase the condo?

Doyle

A. The answer has to be a qualified "no." If she can get along on her present income, she should be able to live just as well in a condominium she owns as she does now in her house. As long as she doesn't pay more than $60,000 for the condo, her financial situation won't change.

By not buying the condo, she would have money on hand. However, she would have to invest that money at a rate high enough to meet her rent payments. That might be difficult and, as rents rise, her next egg would diminish.

This really boils down to the fact that some ownership, whether a house, a condo or any other form, provides great security — both financial and mental. It's the best investment the average family or individual makes.

And Watch For Great Things To Come!

NOW YOU CAN PUT YOUR IRA ON THE NYSE.

And that makes a big difference.

Until now, most bank IRAs have been invested in savings certificates. But suppose you want greater investment flexibility?

Opening a First City Self-Directed IRA is the answer.

Then you can begin investing your IRA funds in stocks, bonds and covered call options carried on the NYSE and other major exchanges. Plus, you can save up to 70% on broker commissions since you make your own investment decisions.

Here's how it works: Once your account is open, simply call First City Brokerage Services,sm whenever you want to trade. An experienced trader will handle your order quickly and efficiently. Then at the end of the month, you'll receive a statement of all trades, as well as the value of securities held in your IRA.

All uninvested IRA funds earn a high rate of interest in a First City Money Market Savings Account.

And like any of our IRAs, you can invest as much as $2,000 annually, and earn up to $1,000 a year in tax deductions.

In addition, you have until April 16, 1984 to open the IRA and apply your entire contribution toward the 1983 tax year.

Rollover IRAs are also available. If you have an IRA elsewhere, or have recently received a lump-sum distribution from a qualified plan, you can invest these assets in a First City Self-Directed IRA.

To open your account, stop by First City, or phone First City Brokerage Services at 1-800-392-8989 (685-5292 in Midland), and we'll mail you our sign-up kit.

Then you'll have an IRA that can be invested more ways than ever before.

Neglected neighborhood

W.J. "Sonny" Cooper, 56, far right, is proposing a program to upgrade his run-down and neglected neighborhood in far southeast Midland. Junk and used cars and parts, top left, are in plentiful supply in this southeast Midland neighborhood. The outhouse, above right, is not totally out of date, though out of style, in thewindowpane area. The weathered door, above left, is typical of many dilapidated houses in the windowpane area.

Resident of southeast Midland wants area improved

The plasterboard is falling off W.J. "Sonny" Cooper's weathered shabby house. But the place is his.

A blanket is stuffed in a gaping hole in the ceiling of the two-room house in a run-down, junk-smeared neighborhood in far southeast Midland.

"I used to have a cat," he said, "and she kept the rats out."

Cooper hangs his shirts from a nail in the living room, listens to nostaglic "oldies but goodies" music such as "Blue Velvet," "Merrily We Roll Along," "King of the Road" and Big Band sounds. He saves the tobacco from the butts of his spent Pall Mall cigarettes for rolling later on.

"Wherever particular people congregate," he smiled in noting the logo on the cigarette pack.

Cooper is frugal and concerned.

"Indeed," he said, "I want something done about it (the dilapidated conditions of the neighborhood). I can handle it, but I feel sorry for those poor people over there...This is not an affluent society by any means."

Though bordered by the city limits but coming under Midland County's purview, the windowpane area is laid out in street fashion. Most of the east-west roads are paved with asphalt; others aren't.

Parts of the neighborhood are bogged down in litter, junk and waste — from old tires and discarded cars to barrels, pipe, wheels, hub caps, appliances, carcasses of burned and ravaged mobile homes, drab plywood houses and abandoned plank shanties. A television antenna looms atop an old windmill tower devoid of the wheel of blades. Just north of the area are the waving United States and Texas flags on the grounds of Midland Freshman School. In the background is the downtown Midland skyline.

There are open cesspools, overturned outhouses, pits and debris-speckled lots dotted with mesquite shrubs and trees.

MANY HOUSES and yards are in squalor. Others are well kept, quite respectable and bespeak the good life; they are in the minority and are apart from the shanties.

"Most people have water wells out here," said the slender, frail-looking 5-foot-10 Cooper. "They have no water from the city. You have to have your own privy or dig a cesspool."

Cooper, 56, shares his well water with his neighbors but doesn't drink the water. "I buy distilled water for dietary purposes," he said. "If I have the money, I'm going to buy water to drink and cook with.

"I haven't had my water checked," he said. "It's hard, but it's all right."

Cooper, a disabled veteran and a former U.S. Air Force air controller and radar technician, had contacted Midland County Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis to suggest that his neighborhood be the subject of governmental funding to clean up and improve the area.

Seminar focuses on needs of elderly

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

"All of us are in the aging process. It is just a matter of where we are in that process."
— The Rev. Dwight A. Anderson

Rev. D. Anderson

Dr. C. U. Wolf

The biggest challenge facing society today is understanding the needs of the elderly, according to Donald V. Hafemann. "Society has never really had to deal with the aging process before. People died before aging became a problem."

As senior pastor of Grace Lutheran Church and now chaplain at the Lutheran Home of the Permian Basin, Hafemann said too often the elderly are looked upon as useless.

Last year, persons at least 65 years old outnumbered the teenage population for the first time, he said.

"And we're going to have this more and more. With the advances of medicine, we're all going to have longer lives."

During a two-day seminar this week, initiated by Hafemann and sponsored by Lutheran Social Service of Texas, some of those attitudes were explored by mostly elderly and middle-aged area residents.

"AS A PASTOR over the years, I've found one of the greatest concerns to people is what to do with a surviving mother or father," Hafemann said. "Too often, I think, they try to make decisions for people rather than letting them make it themselves."

Vignettes of typical situations, evidently experienced by several in the audience, judging from the sighs of frustration and sympathy, were shown via filmstrips supplied by the Rev. Dwight A. Anderson, LSST vice president for Residential Services.

Council OKs search for oil, gas on golf course

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Drilling rigs and pump jacks won't become hazards on Hogan Park Golf Course, but they could provide a scenic backdrop for Midland's 113,515 golfers who walk the course each year.

On Tuesday the Midland City Council approved a bid from Parker and Parsley to look for oil and gas on four designated drill sites in Hogan Park. The company is paying the city $226,240 in bonus money "just to go in and look" for oil, said George Logan, director of parks and recreation.

The City Council has final say on where that money goes, according to Logan, but he's crossing his fingers it will go to his department. If so, "our feelings are we should spend the money at Hogan Park until it's fully developed. We felt we should spend the money where it's being made. I want to make Hogan a very, very pretty area in town, something to be proud of."

Logan added the area eventually will be developed into a Metropolitan Park and fully landscaped — the way it was originally designed.

The Parks and Recreation Commission has developed a list of priorities with the top one being to put in cart paths at the golf course. Estimated cost is $50,000 to $60,000.

Next on the list of priorities are:

—Design and specifications for a new nine holes to make it a 36-hole golf course. Cost for design is estimated at $10-20,000. Construction is projected to begin in 1985-86, but no price tag has been attached yet.

—Update Cubs Stadium seating in three phases, spending $40,000 in each phase. This would involve removing the wood seats and replacing with aluminum.

—Repairing the east road at Hogan Park.

Logan said the leasing came about as the result of a telephone call made one day to City Hall asking the possibility. "I don't know who it was that called," he said, but when asked his opinion he thought it was "great."

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said the city had selected the drill sites. "We didn't want one in the middle of a fairway. They can only drill on those sites."

Logan said two drill sites are in the rough areas of the golf course and two will be on the new nine holes. "But we can design around that," he said.

"We plan to landscape attractively around these oil and gas wells as they come into play."

These sites should conform to a new ordinance which restricts how close a drilling rig can be set up to a residence. "These sites will be at least 1,720 feet from the city property line. They will have to follow fencing requirements."

The parks and recreation director is confident these will be producing wells. "There's oil and gas just north of that; they've hit oil."

If oil and gas are found, it will mean the city as a royalty owner will be receiving income indefinitely. "As long as the oil flows, we'll be in great shape," Logan said.

Parker and Parsley was the only bidder for the oil and gas leases. Poe said he didn't know why the city's offering didn't attract more companies, but he noted that the company "has nearly every tract up there."

Logan was excited about the council's action. "If the city is innovative enough to use oil and gas to keep the tax rate down, I as a taxpayer like it. This is one more progressive idea the council is using."

Ex-federal employee concerned about annuity

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

William Adams

William Adams is gravely concerned that the funds set aside for the retirement years of federal employees will be drained to nothingness.

"We don't have a pension; we have an annuity," Adams, president of the Texas chapter of the National Federation of Retired Federal Employees, said Wednesday in Midland.

"We bought and paid for that annuity, and now the (Reagan) administration is trying to welsh on it."

Adams said until the 1950s, federal employees paid 7½ percent of their income into the annuity, which now is built up to $107 billion, without the benefit of federal matching funds. Then, the federal government started matching the funds. "We put $11 billion more in the fund than we took out last year, he said.

"It's all loaned back to the government at 6 to 7 percent interest," he said.

Adams said President Carter "destroyed the Civil Service Commission." He said Donald J. Devine, director of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, and Budget Director David Stockman are not trying to salvage the retirement system.

"They're trying to make this (fund) a political plum." Adams said Reagan "is going to completely politicize" the system.

The old but successful system, founded in 1921, is being dismanteled in what Adams views as a virtual futile — but not hopeless — effort to save the ailing Social Security system.

"They are not going to save the Social Security system until they completely revise this system," he said.

Adams, who lives in El Paso and has been retired from U.S. Naval Air Systems Command for 12 years, is concerned that the annuity he and millions of retirees have built up will be drained and will vanish.

"I won't even know if I'll have an income five years from now."

Problem is knowing how to move out of the slums

Most everyone with any semblance of awareness knows that America the Great is flawed. Midland is part of the Big Picture.

Both are lands of opportunity; the struggling class can soar or sink.

Midland has a potful of foundered souls who, by the city's more affluent standards, live in junkyards.

It seems every town today has a blighted area of shacks and trash. Just as surely, every town has its silk-stocking row and a broad middle class of folks who dream of vast wealth and dread the lost or misplaced hope of the destitute.

Midland has saints and drunks, do-gooders and those who don't give a hoot about anything or anybody. Oftentimes, that unfortunately includes themselves.

There are security-conscious people who, after voiding themselves of self-respect and hope, seek comfort in the familiar. They are fearful of moving one iota up or one iota down on the comfort-economic scale.

No one wants to be poor?

Maybe not. But wants have virtually nothing to do with the reality of the socio-economic strata.

But who can speak for the poor and deprived? The comfort class rich often do, but what do they know or really care?

"If they'll just help themselves, I'm all for 'em," a distant observer with the marks of affluence might say about the hopeless poor.

One problem is just wanting to help yourself and the next is knowing how.

Selected sections of Midland's far southeast side are a blight.

In it, you will perceive lost hope and sheer existence. You would serve your concept of "the real" Midland to tour the area. No one will bite you. The place is not rolling in happiness and the promise of a good life. But there are signs of improvement: A new building is being built next to an old Catholic church. Another church building is boarded up. Parts of the neighborhood are tidy and relatively well to do.

For whatever reason, some people gravitate to slums and breed more slums. They may not like it, but it's "home."

It's Utopian to envision a land of across-the-board comfort and affluence. But, it seems, there always are people who have empathy for the poor and who wish them well. Some even give of themselves, such as those bound in the Christmas-in-April program for repairing and sprucing up houses. Others, now, suggest that the federal government pitch in and rectify the conditions. They, too, are dreamers.

By the magic of money and its power to command performance, a slum can be turned into a nice, tidy, all-American neighborhood which the chamber of commerce would be proud to call its own.

For awhile.

Unless the people who live in the former blight are themselves transformed by their own thought and action, the niceties of the neighborhood will return to the former state. The slums will reappear and so will the destitute and the do-gooders who dream of Utopia across the tracks and then, devoid of hope like the poor denizens, lose hope.

Fire damages business

From Staff Reports

Fire of undetermined origin heavily damaged a southside business late Wednesday morning.

Firefighters used 2,500 gallons of water extinguishing the blaze, which broke at B&C Enterprises, 1007 S. Jackson, about 11 a.m. Firemen remained on the scene more than an hour.

In a burglary complaint to city police, Kathrine Coleman of 1308 E. Maple said stereo equipment and two gold rings worth a total of $5,600 were taken from her residence after someone entered it through a kitchen window Wednesday afternoon.

Seminar focuses on needs, desires of elderly

There were the responses of two adult women discussing their 75-year-old mother's surprise decision to remarry; a brother and sister at their father's funeral, planning what to do with their mother because she couldn't possibly live alone in the family's farm house; a couple discussing their neighbors, Harry, who was about to retire and move to Florida, and his younger wife, Lois, who worked but had no knowledge of Harry's plans on moving; and those of two elderly women at a family reunion, discussing their lively cousin Alice who was touring South America with a very young man.

There are six needs for the older person, according to Dr. C. Umhau Wolf, adult educator in aging and author of Ten to Get Ready, a book on pre-retirement plans.

Because an elderly parent's methods of coping have been developed through the years, that person should never be yanked from his home by his children following the death of a spouse. "You may not like those ways (of coping), but remember, that's why they've survived. If you try to change that, you may kill them because you're destroying their coping mechanism."

EXPRESSION IN elderly people is important — even if you can't understand what they are saying. "They have feelings and are still human. If it's too quiet in a nursing home, you know it's for the benefit of the staff," Wolf said.

The elderly need to have a sense of usefulness. "Everyone has to contribute a new meaning to something." Also, a sense of belonging is important — especially for those who are left alone after death or divorce has claimed children or a spouse.

Another need is the sense of control over one's life. The elderly, who have lost control over time, eating, sleeping or their bladder especially need to feel they still control some part of their life.

The final need is for something outside of one's self, whether it be God, faith, religion, service or love. Those who focus only on themselves are shallow and tend to drive others away with constant complaining of personal problems.

"These are the needs of older people but they are actually the needs of human beings," Wolf said. "We might change it to the 'hopes and fears' of people. We hope we can keep all six of them without interference from God, health, Social Security, neighbors, spouse or children. The fear is that God, health, Social Security, the neighbors, spouse or children will gradually take it away or take it all away at once. Once we've lost all of those, we're dead. We may still be breathing, but we're dead."

WOLF READ A poem in which an elderly mother asks God to help her adult children understand she has to do what she can for herself as long as possible. She remembers the times when she faced risks for them — when they climbed the first tree or first rode a bicycle.

"To hold them would've hurt them/ Now our roles are reversed."

Wolf referred to the point of interference on the part of an adult into his or her parent's life as a comfort level. "Rather than it being right or wrong, it should be how comfortable is my mother and how comfortable am I (with the decision.)"

There are no simple answers to questions concerning one's aging parents and when to start controlling parts of their lives, he said. There are, however, alternatives. He cited day care services offered by churches for members of the congregation, groups of elderly who meet to maintain the grounds or do other tasks which give all involved a sense of meaning and belonging and providing informal home health care or hospice services. If the services are provided by churches to members of the congregation on a limited volunteer basis, no federal or state licensing is necessary, he said.

A final poem read by Wolf said the blessed are those who honored the elderly, rather than patronized them; realized growing old is still growing; knew aging was not a sin; encouraged the elderly to make plans for the future and respected the elderly's desires to take care of themselves.

THE BLESSED also are those who realized the elderly still need to physically and emotionally receive and give affection; are still interested in the present and talk about the past to enlighten those around them; realize senility can be reversed and is not always senility; and don't talk about the elderly in front of them like they weren't there — even if they are comatose.

The blessed are those who realize death is a fact of life and do not insist on hooking the elderly up to machines and tubes, mechanically keeping them a lingering, heart-beating corpse.

A larger but less populous former windowpane area in south central Midland got benefit of paved streets, water and sewer lines, a day care center, and the repair of run-down houses and the razing of others in a three-year $1.6 million federal grant. That area late last year was annexed by the city. The commissioner considered that the city someday might annex Cooper's area if it is vastly upgraded and becomes acceptable to the City Council.

"I WOULD LIKE to see my neighborhood improved," said Cooper, who said many of "these people can't afford to pay taxes" and are older people who "are not quite senior citizens.

"I don't know how they exist," he said. "They live from pillar to post, I suppose."

In touring the area, Davis seemed appalled. "You don't know what you have to be thankful for until you see some things."

He sighted a couple of youngsters amid junk.

"It's pretty bad," the commissioner said. "The people right there don't have a chance in life."

He observed, though, that "every town has its good and bad sides."

In the more blighted part are an estimated 125 houses, shanties, shacks and trailer houses. Many are abandoned. It's an across-the-tracks area where 22-year-old Margie Bennett grew up as one of 12 children. Her father is in the junk business.

"We have to get this place cleaned up," she said.

"Well," she said of the neighborhood, "I don't really like it, but there's nothing I can do about it."

Some residents, however, were already making a dent into the blight by removing old junk cars and debris.

"It's a pretty good neighborhood — friendly," said Miss Bennett.

Cooper said he does not want "to infringe on the way a person wants to exist.

"However they want to live is fine with me, but I'm willing to help."

Across from Cooper's 503 E. Longview Ave. house is a wrecking yard concealed by a five-foot high sheet metal fence "thanks to Mrs. (Lady Bird) Johnson (and the first lady's Beautification Program) few years back."

COOPER, WHO WAS born in 1927 in Midland, is divorced, a former roustabout, a "jack of all trades" and has mowed yards. "I've done it all. I haven't washed any dishes, except my own." He has eight children and 13 grandchildren. In his living room are photographs of his parents and children, a Bob Hope calendar depicting the entertainer's tours to American troops overseas and a portrait of "my lover gal. She's out resting in Fairview Cemetery now. She was a wonderful lady...a grand old lady." His dear friend, Henrietta, died at 80.

"Gosh," said the articulate and soft-spoken Cooper, if you've got family, you've got everything. "I'm happy."

"There's never a dull moment around here, never, never," said Cooper, who was sporting a blue cap with "Damn, I'm Good" in red lettering and red-white-and-blue suspenders.

"Out here in this part of the country, we're all brothers," allowed Jimmy Tilley, one of Cooper's many friends.

Despite his destitute surroundings, Cooper said he enjoys keeping up with current and world events. "I like Gary Hart (Democratic Party contender for president). I wish we'd get out of Lebanon and the Middle East."

A couple of other regular visitors, Matt Stephenson, 24, and Cecil Higginbotham, were also present. "I've turned down living in the north part of town," said Stephenson, who off and on lives with Cooper. "The people down here are so much fun to be around."

Hugh Cooper, Sonny Cooper's brother, considered the blight of the neighborhood.

"The city won't have us," he lamented, "and the county is trying to give us away."

FOR NOW, Sonny Cooper said his main concern is cleaning up and improving the neighborhood.

"I wish something could be done to help those poor people out there. They (many) don't even understand the language.

"I'm nobody, really," said Cooper. "I care about people. I can manage. I love people, all kinds of people."

As long as governmental money is available to fund installation of water and sewer lines and upgrading the housing, those funds should be sought, he proposed.

Davis said he would seek funding.

"It's my intention to press for a multi-deal, water and sewer (funding)," Davis said. The federal neighborhood improvement funding is administered through the Texas Community Development Program.

"It's a meager existence out here," Cooper said. "It's better than they would have in Mexico."

Odessa policeman injured

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An Odessa police officer was injured Wednesday night when a gun discharged as he was taking it from a man allegedly attempting suicide.

Reports indicate that Officer C.A. Burns' left index finger was injured as the gun a 20-year-old Odessa man was threatening to commit suicide with went off. Burns was treated and released from Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

Burns had been pursuing a pick-up truck driven by the suspect after two women the officer met at the 7-Eleven store at 8th and Golder at 11:48 p.m., Wednesday told him the man had been following them in the truck and they were frightened.

The two cars stopped at 600 W. 13th St. where the suspect, who has been charged with attempted suicide, got out of his truck, according to reports. Burns reported noticing the man pointing a .357 magnum pistol at the right side of his head as he and the suspect exited their vehicles.

Burns called for back-up assistance, then he and Officer W.R. Thornton attempted to talk the man into giving up his gun. After several unsuccessful attempts, Burns reported he grabbed the pistol at which time the gun went off.

Additional charges of unlawfully carrying a weapon and assault on a police officer are pending on the suspect, in the city jail Thursday morning on $200 bond.

Panel suggests raise for new teachers

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Select Committee on Public Education, which already has approved more than a dozen recommendations to reconstruct the Texas school system, today will be asked to favor extending the school day to eight hours.

The blue-ribbon panel began voting on its final blueprint for a revamped education system Wednesday, unanimously recommending a 36 percent raise for starting teachers and voting 14-6 in favor of replacing the elected State Board of Education with governor's appointees.

"We all have one goal and that goal is to provide the finest educational system possible in this country," Gov. Mark White told the panel. "I believe the people of Texas will applaud the work of this committee."

The committee, chaired by Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot, also approved competency testing for all teachers in Texas but tabled consideration of requiring basic skills tests for both students taught at home and their parents.

It also unanimously voted, in principle, to recommend establishing a "career ladder" for teachers, requiring annual achievement testing of all three million school children in the state and placing the University Interscholastic League under the domain of the Board of Education.

But the panel has yet to place a price tag on its sweeping recommendations.

White said he will convene a special session of the Legislature this summer to act on the panel's recommendations for the future of Texas schools.

"There is a crystal clear message now that we're looking for academic achievement in the schools," said Perot. "We're talking about radical and revolutionary changes."

Chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education, H. Ross Perot, left, and Gov. Mark White, listen during committee hearings Wednesday in Dallas.

White said abolishing the 27-member elected State Board of Education and replacing it with a panel of nine appointees subject to Senate confirmation was a reflection of unhappiness with the way education has been handled in the past and a necessary step "to achieve the changes this committee is devoted to."

"We are in the condition we are in today because of the way we have been doing things for the last 25 years," White said. "The question is, which way can you best move the ship forward?"

Panel member Will Davis of Austin, also a state Board of Education member, said the Legislature in 1949 switched to an elected board to make education less political in Texas.

"I must speak against delivering the public schools to what I believe is a partisan political system," Davis said. "An appointed board, in my opinion, would disenfranchise many segments of our society. An appointed board would cut them off."

Panel member Ed Small of Austin questioned how White, who advocated election of the three-member Public Utility Commission, instead of appointment, could propose the opposite for the Board of Education.

"It surprises me we would change the rhetoric for this particular board," Small said.

White said he sought improvement in both boards.

"Just as I was for changing the Public Utility Commission, I think we need to make changes in the education system," White said. "One of the big problems in the past was everyone was responsible and therefore no one was responsible."

Under the recommendation approved Wednesday, the minimum salary for a teacher in Texas would be raised from $1,110 per month to $1,520. The UIL recommendation would transfer authority over the governing board for Texas scholastic athletics from the University of Texas Board of Regents, which currently appoints UIL members, to the Board of Education.

Members of the commission, who spent several months touring Texas and interviewing educators, at times bickered over the wording of proposals up for votes.

At one point late in the day, Perot joked, "Anybody want to pick a fight on number six?"

The panel will meet through Friday in a Dallas hotel ballroom.

Midland JA program ranks third in nation

Midland Junior Achievement ranked third nationally in the quality of its high school program, national Junior Achievement Inc. announced this week. Behind Dubuque, Iowa, and Danville, Ill., the ranking is up from fourth place last year.

There are 166 fulltime Junior Achievement franchised areas in the U.S. The ratings are based on the percentage of companies meeting qualification requirements for Company of the Year competition. The criteria include a minimum gross sales amount, minimum wage rate, profit, 80 percent attendance and retention of beginning members.

Of the 61.5 percent of qualifying local companies last year, the Midland Company of the Year was counseled by Gulf Oil Exploration and Production Co. It ranked better than all other JA companies in Texas.

Midland JA membership is more than 10 percent above last year and 22 percent above the previous year. The figures are the highest in nine years.

One company counseled by Chevron USA has already made $14,400. It is still producing and selling the Midland Millions board game and has more than doubled the previous all-time record annual sales for a Midland JA company.

Midland's other JA division, Project Business, recently expanded operations to include Midland Christian School. Fifty freshman history classes receive this free enterprise instruction in Midland.

YMCA offers CPR training for families

For families in which each member is constantly going their own way, there is an alternative to attending cardiopulmonary resuscitation classes.

The Midland YMCA now is making house calls through a new program that teaches and certifies the entire family in CPR in the family's home.

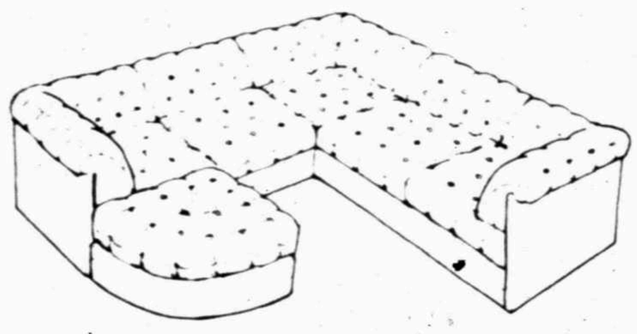

No fee will be charged for the Race for Life CPR course, but there is a $25 fee for transportation and $1 each for books. No prerequisite is required but participants must be at least 13 years old and be part of the immediate family living at the same home address.

The two-hour Red Cross CPR class will teach participants one-man CPR and how to save a choking victim.

To sign up for appointments or for more information, call the Alamo YMCA at 694-2528, or come by 901 N. Midland Drive.

Recalls issued on hazardous cribs, pacifiers

By LINDA ANDERSON

Every so often some manufacturer, either voluntarily or involuntary, will recall a product. Products may be recalled because they are a potential hazard to health. In some cases, they may have actually been the cause of serious injury or death.

The following are some of the more recent notices of product recall I have received in the mail:

— LI'L SQUEAKER PACIFIERS. According to press information issued, "In cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, Evenflo Products Company, Ravenna, Ohio...announced the voluntary recall of 'Li'l Squeaker' pacifiers. CPSC laboratory tests indicate that on some pacifiers from Taiwan it is possible to pull the pacifier from its shield which could present a potential suffocation and choking hazard.

"The suspect pacifiers can be identified by 'Taiwan' printed on the under side of the shield, or by 'Made in Taiwan' printed on their blister cards. The shields are orange, blue or yellow, round, and have three vent holes. There is a white squeaker on the handle end of the pacifier. Approximately 16,000 pacifiers were sold during October, November and December, 1983. 'Li'l Squeaker' pacifiers made in Hong Kong are not involved.

"Consumers are advised to return these pacifiers to their place of purchase for a full refund. They may also be returned directly to Evenflo Products Company, 771 North Freedom Street, Ravenna, Ohio 44266, for a full refund including postage.

— BASSETT CRIBS, CANDLELITE AND MANDALAY MODELS. According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission information, these two models of baby cribs have been involved in several babies' deaths.

According to the press release, "A crib that has been the subject of an intensive recall effort since 1978 was involved in two additional strangulation deaths in the past year." The two babies, a 13-month-old girl and a 15-month-old boy, died when they "allegedly became entrapped" in the cutout pattern of Candlelite cribs' headboards.

"The recalled cribs are: Candlelite (Pine Finish Model 5127, and Maple Finish Model 5028) and Mandalay (Yellow Finish Model 5126 or 5621, and White Finish Model 5225). The affected model numbers may be found ink-stamped near the bottom of the inside of the headboard.

"The Candlelite crib, along with another model known as the Mandalay, were the targets of an extensive recall effort by Bassett (Furniture Industries Inc.) and the Consumer Product Safety Commission from 1978 through 1980 after seven infants died of strangulation allegedly as a result of the headboard design."

The cribs, manufactured between 1974-1977, have been associated with nine known deaths. About 7,400 of the cribs were sold. The information continues: "Bassett is presently voluntarily sending another warning poster to 42,000 pediatricians across the country for display in their waiting rooms. The Commission notes that pediatrician posters are extremely effective in warning the consumers of childrens hazards.

"Owners of the recalled cribs are urged to unscrew the four corner posts immediately. Taking off the corner posts alone may not eliminate the hazard. Consumers must also contact Bassett, toll-free, at 1-800-368-3324 (in Virginia, call collect: 703-629-7511, extension 340) for a free modification kit. If a consumer is unsure whether his crib is a Candlelite or Mandalay, he should contact the company for clarification without delay. Further information may also be obtained by calling the CPSC toll-free Hotline at 1-800-638-CPSC. A teletypewriter number for the hearing impaired is 1-800-639-8270."

Fast food salad chemicals stir questions

By SONJA HEINZE

Q: I was pleased to see that some fast-food restaurants started salad bars, as I'm not a meat eater but often go with friends to these establishments. Then someone told me they wouldn't eat the salad in fast-food places because they spray everything with chemicals (I believe he said sulfites) to keep it from getting discolored and wilted. Is this allowed, and how powerful a chemical is this? One doesn't know what to eat anymore, or where.

A: Denny Lynch, Wendy's director of corporate communications, informs us of the following: "Our lettuce is chopped fresh each day in every store and no preservatives are added to the lettuce.

"Please be assured that Wendy's does not add any sulfiting agents to any of the salad-bar ingredients."

Lynch went on to say, "However, a few manufacturers add these sulfiting ingredients during the processing of some salad-bar items in order to maintain the quality of the product during transportation. These ingredients are garbanzo beans, pickled cherry peppers and avocado dressing."

A handy poster put out by the Center for Science in the Public Interest lists many food additives and tells which to avoid, which to be cautious about and which are safe. Under sulfur dioxide and sodium bisulfite (the sulfiting agents), it says:

"Sulfur dioxide (a gas) and sodium bisulfite (a powder) prevent discoloration of dried apricots, apples and similar foods. They prevent bacterial growth in wine and other foods. These additives destroy vitamin B-1, but otherwise are safe."

These sulfiting agents are listed in the poster under the "Caution" category.

Readers may obtain a poster by writing to C.S.P.I., 1755 S St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009. It costs $3.

Q: I received a booklet in the mail from an organization that is trying to relieve the suffering of animals. In the booklet it states, about chickens: "Birds are de-beaked, their beaks clipped off by a hot blade. Of course the process is painful, but with a blunt beak the bird can't injure other birds or itself as easily." Is it true that this is done on large poultry production farms?

A: "The issue raised by one of your readers concerning the practice of 'de-beaking' chickens is perhaps one of the least understood by the non-agriculture community," says Stephen Pretanik, director of science and technology at the National Broiler Council.

"Even the terminology leads to confusion. A more appropriate term," says Pretanik, "would be beak trimming."

Pretanik explains that many people do not realize that chickens have a natural tendency for feather picking and cannibalism.

"This tendency exists," claims Pretanik, "whether chickens are allowed to roam free outdoors or are raised in large commercial houses. A chicken will pick at the feathers of another chicken, and if blood is drawn, other chickens will join in causing serious injury, if not death, to the bird. Once this has started in a flock, it is very difficult, if not impossible, to stop."

In order to prevent this, Pretanik states that commercial producers employ beak trimming, which entails trimming only the point of the beak to leave it blunt. This is generally done with a hot blade which cauterizes the cut tip to prevent infection.

"Since a chicken's beak is made of the same material, keratin, found in hair, feathers, hooves and human fingernails," says Pretanik, "this practice produces only a very mild temporary stress on the bird."

Pretanik adds that the bird is still able to eat, drink and function normally, but is unable to injure other birds by pecking at them.

Page Smith, co-author along with Charles Daniel of "The Chicken Book," and a professor of history at the University of California in Santa Cruz, explains that modern chicken technology overcrowds the birds, and they in turn "fought back passively by various forms of neurotic behavior, such as excessive pecking."

Instead of giving the chickens more room, the beaks are cut. Smith feels that "it is one of the most scandalous maimings of domestic animals."

Growth shows greater need for facilities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fastest growing population groups in the 1980s will be children under six and people over 80 years of age, a combination which will mean greater need for care facilities, a congressional committee says.

The House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families said in a report Wednesday that th population under six will rise by 3.3 million during this decade, from 19.6 million in 1980 to 22.9 million in 1990. This contrasts to a 6.5 percent decline in the under-six population in the last decade, the report said.

The committee estimated that 1.7 million women, or 26 percent of mothers of children under six not now working, would seek employment if they could find affordable child care.

It also reported that a growing proportion of children live with just one parent who must work outside the home, making child care a necessity.

"The population of children under 10 from single-parent households is expected to rise by 48 percent between 1980 and 1990, from 6 million to 8.9 million. This increase of roughly 3 million children means that nearly one out of four children under 10 will live in a single-parent household by the end of this decade," the committee said.

The 1990s will be the first decade to begin with a majority of mothers (55 percent) in the labor force, the report said. "This represents a percentage increase of over 80 percent since 1970, when fewer than one-third of all married mothers of children under six worked."

The report also said that between 1980 and 1990 "the 80 and over population, those most often in need of dependent care services, will rise from 5.2 million to 7.5 million."

"Even among those elderly who are not poor, rising health care costs will make payment for dependent-care services difficult. Health expenditures for the elderly not covered by Medicare now average almost 20 percent of their total annual income," it said.

The population shifts and economic pressures portend a sharp increase in the demand for dependent-care services among the growing elderly population, the report said. "For those receiving no services, but remaining at home, basic daily needs such as diet and personal hygiene might suffer," it said.

Most women hold 'traditional' jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sally Ride became the first American woman to fly in space. Sandra Day O'Connor donned the robes of a Supreme Court justice, and for the first time, talk of a female vice president of the United States gets serious attention in presidential campaign debates.

Yet, women now hold only eight of 75 active astronaut positions at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. They constitute 52 of 677 federal judges and 24 of 535 members of the House and Senate.

From 1972 to 1982, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, women expanded their ranks in such traditionally male-dominated occupations as medicine, law, management-administration and college teaching.

But most of the more than 40 million working women remained in traditional women's work, comprising the bulk of bank tellers, school teachers, nurses and librarians, and few men crossed over to jobs historically held by women.

"IT TAKES an awful lot of movement (of women into traditionally male jobs) to show any change in trend," says Harvey Hamel of the bureau's Division of Employment and Unemployment Analysis.

Avril Madison, executive director of Wider Opportunities for Women, Inc., a private organization which provides job training consultation for some 140 independent women's groups in 35 states, said the latest figure "graphically illustrates that sex segregation and discrimination in education, training and employment are very much alive and well in the United States."

Ms. Madison said she is pleased that women have been able to move into such fields as medicine and law, but added that these advances were possible "only when the primary criterion for employment was a graduate professional degree."

Among the findings in the federal employment and earnings records:

—Women comprised 99.1 percent of the nation's approximately 4 million secretaries in 1982, compared with 99.2 percent a decade earlier. Among some 71,000 registered nurses, they held 95.6 percent of the jobs, down from 97.6 percent in 1972.

—Females made up 35.4 percent of college and university professors, up from 28 percent in 1972. But women held 98.5 percent of the preschool and kindergarten jobs, and continued to occupy the vast majority of teaching positions in public education.

—The ranks of female miners expanded from 0.7 percent to 1.4 percent, while women held 6.7 percent of the police officer and detective jobs, compared to 2.6 percent in 1972.

—Women increased their ranks among doctors and dentists from 9.3 percent to 14.6 percent, and among lawyers and judges from 4 percent to 15.5 percent. In managerial and administrative positions, women moved from 17.6 perent to 28 percent.

THE BUREAU revamped its list of occupations in 1983, providing a much more precise definition of the various job categories. Thus, 1982 was the most recent year for which comparisons could be made.

According to the latest government labor force statistics, in January women comprised 43.6 percent of the some 103 million Americans with jobs. In 1972, women held 38 percent of all jobs.

Thousands more women are preparing to move into the high-paying, high-prestige jobs of law and medicine.

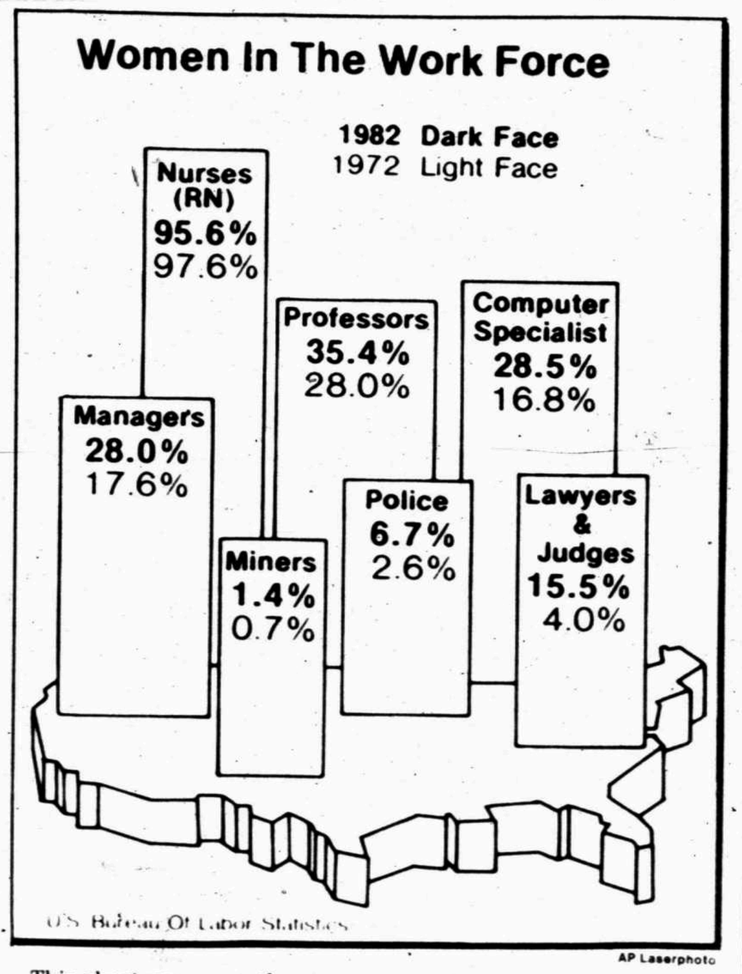

In the 1982-83 school year, women held 19,627 of 66,886 medical school seats, representing 29.3 percent of enrollment, according to the American Medical Association. In the 1972-73 academic year, women constituted only 12.8 percent of the some 47,500 enrollees.

The American Bar Association said that of some 127,200 people enrolled in approximately 170 law schools last year, 47,980 were women. In 1979, the earliest year for which the ABA has such figures, women occupied 38,627 of some 123,000 seats in law schools.

WOMENS' EARNINGS continued to lag well behind those of the some 55 million working men, according to a recent Bureau of Labor Statistics report. Women who held full-time jobs in 1983 had average weekly earnings of $260, compared to $393 for men, according to the survey published last month. Even in occupations where the worker held a management position or practiced a particular specialty, that report said, men outdistanced women by $551 to $370.

Such statistics underline the issue of "comparable worth" — the concept that a woman should be paid as much as a man for work requiring similar skills and education. Recently a federal judge ruled that the state of Washington violated the Civil Rights Act by permitting the development of a sex-segregated public employment work force with wide disparities in compensation for jobs of comparable value.

The Reagan administration has been weighing whether to join the state of Washington in an appeal of that decision.

AP Laserphoto

This chart compares the percentages of women holding various occupations in 1972 and 1982. From 1972 to 1982, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, women expanded their ranks in such traditionally male-dominated fields as medicine, law, management-administration and college teaching, but more than 40 million working women remained in traditional women's fields.

Dr. Spock's baby book revised again

Hearst Feature Service

At 3 a.m., when the baby is shrieking with gas pains, spewing vomit, turning blue or otherwise terrifying his shellshocked parents, Ben Spock's words are as soothing as a summer breeze.

"Trust yourself. You know more than you think," begins Dr. Spock's time-tested classic, "Baby and Child Care."

Forty years after Spock first offered that advice, his child-rearing manual ranks as the most widely-read book since the Bible, with an estimated 28 million copies sold worldwide.

Medical advances and social change have forced revisions in the so-called Baby Bible, but Spock's message that parents should follow their own instincts remains timeless, according to a Seattle physician who has been tapped as Spock's heir apparent.

"Ben Spock modestly feels that most parents are very capable of doing a very good job of bringing up their children without the help of experts. That's my attitude, too," says Dr. Michael Rothenberg, who is collaborating with Spock on the 40th anniversary edition of "Baby and Child Care."

The joint venture, to be published in 1985 by Simon and Schuster Pocket Books, will be the fifth edition and fourth revision of the book. About 85 percent of the 1986 edition will be reworded, but the tone will be unchanged.

"The book will sound exactly as it's always sounded. The style will not be changed one iota," said Rothenberg, 57, whose friendship with Spock goes back 30 years, when Rothenberg was a medical student under Spock at Case Western Reserve in Cleveland. Rothenberg now is professor of pediatrics and psychiatry at the University of Washington School of Medicine and is in the Department of Child Psychology and Behavioral Medicine at Children's Orthopedic Hospital.

Rothenberg, who considers Spock his mentor, already has agreed to work on the next two revisions of the book, with new editions spaced six to eight years apart. Considering Spock's advancing years, the arrangement constitutes a kind of passing of the crown.

"Ben saw his 80th birthday coming up and, despite the fact that he continues to be in pefect condition, he's a realist and said, 'I'd like the book to go on after I die.'" Rothenberg said.

Grandmothers love to click shutters

By ERMA BOMBECK

I opened up my desk drawer the other day and realized I have 37 billfold-sized pictures of small, dimpled babies sitting on shag rugs and in bathtubs chewing on something and looking adorable.

They have one thing in common.

All of them have grandmothers with camera hands who are my age or younger and who have seen fit to rub it in.

It isn't bad enough I have to tromp through miles of toys at Christmas with these women, listen to how they threw their little angel arms around Grandma's neck and said, "I wub you mamaw," or shuffle through 30 pounds of Polaroids. I also have to be reminded that if my kids don't get off the dime — and soon — I will be the only grandmother who can't feed herself.

A mother in Austin, Minn., wrote that she had had it with grandmothers cornering her with the latest snapshots, so she took a picture of an aerosol can of furniture wax and a bottle of detergent. Now whenever they turn to her and say, "Where are the pictures of your grandchildren?" she whips out the picture and says, "Here they are . . . My Pride and my Joy."

Since I began writing about the reluctance of young people to give their mothers the revenge they so desperately need, scores of women have written wanting answers to the problem. Why are young people putting off having babies?

A statistic sticks in my mind from somewhere that out of a group of young married surveyed, nearly 80 percent of their parents were still married and in fact were considered by them to be role models.

It's only a question, then, of did that vast group of non-grandparents frighten their children with their perfection? Or their imperfection?

Speaking only for myself, I'm sure it was my perfection.

Who could possibly measure up to all the good times I had mothering? Taking a birthday cake hot from the oven at 11:24 at night and stuffing it into a yawning mouth saying, "Eat! In 36 minutes, it won't be your birthday anymore."

Washing the dog in tomato juice when he encountered a skunk. Sitting through a concert of "battling French horns." Spending three months to make a pair of slacks that the kid wouldn't wear because they looked homemade. Knocking out a wall in the dead of winter to make room for a ping-pong table that was only used to throw books on after school.

I think young people suspect why those role models have stayed married so long. Revenge!

Toy labeling important

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — All toys should be labeled to tell parents what age group should play with them, and why others should not, according to the chairman of the United States Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Commission chairman Nancy Harvey Steorts has called on the nation's toy makers to provide more detailed labels on their products.

Some manufacturers are already doing this, she said, citing such labels as "not recommended for children under three because of small parts."

"I would like to see this practice expanded throughout the industry," Mrs. Steorts told a recent convention of the toy industry.

Toys have become safer in recent years and the number of injuries has declined, but the commission still received reports of 123,000 toy-related injuries in 1982, according to Mrs. Steorts.

"Age labeling is a key way that the industry can help make toys safer for the individual child," she said, and particular emphasis should be placed on toys for children age 6 and under.

Some parents allow small children to play with toys intended for older ones because the parents are not aware of the potential dangers, she explained.

"Most parents think age recommendations on toys relate only to the physical and intellectual development of children and, being parents, they often believe their children are precocious enough to play with toys meant for older children," Mrs. Steorts explained.

"They do not realize that this practice may present a danger of injury to their young children."

Toddlers can choke on small parts that come off toys, she noted. Other toys may pose hazards because they are hard to operate, use electricity, fire projectiles or contain sharp points or edges.

Some toys now carry age labels, but there are conflicting approaches among the different manufacturers, Mrs. Steorts said.

Overall guidelines are needed to help parents, she said, and she is inviting manufacturers to work with her the Consumer Product Safety Commission in developing them.

Real estate education demand brings rip-offs

Copley News Service

More people are buying and obtaining financing for homes and investment properties in 1984 than has been the case for years.

The upward curve in sales of new and existing (previously owned) homes is dramatic. And the number and variety of mortgage loan plans available to finance those properties has never been greater.

This increased activity has sparked a strong demand for real estate education — a demand from consumers as well as real estate professionals. For the most part, that's good and healthy. But there is a dark side to the picture.

Viable real estate educational functions, such as those sponsored by realtor associations, local boards of realtors and major real estate firms, are a positive contribution to the total real estate market. It helps everyone — consumers and practitioners.

However, such an intensified demand will inevitably bring opportunists out of the woodwork. These are the fast-buck artists.

In the current market, these operators are sometimes after big bucks from persons motivated to learn about real estate investment opportunities. The takers of these highly promoted courses are usually novices, lured by the dream of quick and easy profits.

Take the case of Charles Meng in Nevada, for example. He recently wrote to this column, telling us about a weekend seminar he unfortunately attended. It cost him a cool $7,500.

After paying the fee and attending the session, Meng concluded the information communicated was useless. He is now trying to obtain a refund from the seminar promoters.

"Even if I am unable to procure a return of my funds," he told this writer, "I can at least try to stop this blatant rip-off and prevent others from falling victim to this type of useless seminar."

What kind of a pitch could produce an incentive to write a $7,500 check for a weekend seminar? Here are a few quotes from the promotional brochure:

"You will be taught how to locate and acquire distress-foreclosure situations, many times well in advance of public announcements. Our acquisition methodology is used time after time so you may accumulate many properties, which can be used as leverage in buying additional properties. Thus, you can build large amounts of equity with minimal cash outlay, thereby creating exceptional profits."

Like most real estate investment seminars of this type, the brochure copy stresses that participants will learn "how to acquire property with little or no cash." And, of course, the fee might be tax deductible.

Sound good? It's all yours in a few weekend seminar sessions. Your check for $7,500, please.

Meng fell for it. The resulting benefits: zip.

DEAR ABBY

Older man trouble for 13-year-old

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 13-year-old girl and I don't want to brag, but people tell me I've got a great body. I don't care for guys my own age. They are so immature; they seem like babies.

The guy I really like is a graduate student at a college near here. He's 23. I'm not supposed to date, so I have to do a lot of sneaking to see him, and then it can only be on the weekend in the afternoon because I have to be home by 5:30.

Well, last Saturday I was over at his apartment. I kept asking him what time it was, and he kept checking his watch and lying to me. I didn't get home until nearly 7:30 and I got chewed out and grounded for two weeks! He wants to see me again. Half of me wants to see him and the other half is afraid to.

What should I do? I can't talk to my mother. She'd kill me. — SCARED IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR SCARED: Listen to the half of you with brains in it and don't see this guy again. He's selfish, dishonest and doesn't really care about you. To sum it up, he's bad news.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, children and I were visiting my sister and her husband (out of town) at their invitation.

Just as we were sitting down to dinner, which was already on the table, a couple of neighbors en route to their own home from work stopped by to say hello. My sister invited them to join us for dinner, but they said they could stay only a minute. However, they did accept my brother-in-law's invitation to have a cocktail.

My sister had put a lot into her dinner, which was getting cold, and the children were getting hungry. When these neighbors were on their second cocktail, I said to my sister, "Our dinner is getting cold."

The couple left rather hurriedly. Then my brother-in-law said to me, "That wasn't very nice. You practically told them to leave." My sister sided with her husband.

Abby, do you think I was out of line? And how should this have been handled? — STRAIGHTFORWARD

DEAR STRAIGHT: Yes, I think you were out of line. As a guest, it wasn't your place to get rid of the drop-ins. Your sister should have said, "Since you can't have dinner with us, please sit and have your cocktails while we have our dinner — it's already on the table."

DEAR ABBY: I want to enlist the help of all those good people who are as enchanted by the open friendliness of a child as I am.

When you pass my child on the street, please do not stop to chat or give him a penny.

Help me to teach my child that a stranger is a stranger — good or bad. Please don't place the burden of distinguishing between the two on him. Help him to follow my rule: Never become friendly with strangers.

You might help me save his life. — MRS. R. IN DALLAS

DEAR MRS. R.: It's sad to be living in such scary times, but your point is well-taken and well worth the space in this column.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Cribs concern commission

WASHINGTON (AP) — The children's furniture industry stood up the Consumer Product Safety Commission, with only two manufacturers responding to 50 invitations to a meeting on crib safety standards.

William L. MacMillan of the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association sent the commission a letter saying his group saw no need for Tuesday's session. He said it has scheduled a meeting in June to discuss crib safety.

Commission Chairman Nancy Harvey Steorts insisted that wasn't enough, saying waiting from now until June was "much too long a period of time."

"I challenge them to proceed on a voluntary program immediately," she said. "We're talking about the safety of little children ... its my strong belief that they need to proceed immediately."

At Tuesday's session the commission staff reported it investigated 167 crib incidents from 1980 to 1983, including 34 deaths involving such failures as screws coming loose, slide latches breaking and joints coming unglued.

In addition to the deaths there have been 22 incidents cited as "potentially fatal entrapments," seven injuries that required medical care and 47 minor injuries, officials said.

Joel Cunard of Hedstrom Co., a Bedford, Pa., crib maker, told the commission his company is anxious to cooperate in developing safer products. Hedstrom is not a member of the juvenile products group, he said, and it "takes exception to any cessation of work toward development of voluntary safety standards for crib hardware."

The association's suspension of such talks in January drew an angry response from the commission, although the juvenile product-makers denied that they were abandoning safety efforts.

At the time, attorney Aaron Locker said the group had merely paused in its discussions to see what action the commission was considering.

State laws mandating child car seat safety

CHICAGO (AP) — Parents across the country are a lot more conscious these days of law enforcement officers observing them as they travel the nation's roads, says the National Safety Council.

It reports that 42 states and the District of Columbia now have laws requiring infants and small children to be protected by child restraints, designed for the very young, when they are riding in motor vehicles.

The state laws are far from uniform in their requirements, T. C. Gilchrest, president of the Council, notes.

Three states cover only infants through 1 year of age. Two other states protect children through age 3, and 10 states through age 4. Four states have occupant restraint requirements for children through age 5. One state calls for protection of children through age 9 and another state law applies to children 40 inches or less in height.

Alaska, Idaho, Iowa, Louisiana, South Dakota, Texas, Utah and Wyoming do not have child passenger protection laws. American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands do not have them.

Gilchrest offers these safety tips for parents with young children:

— Find out exactly what your state law requires; write to the Secretary of State and ask for free information on the child safety seat law in your state. Or, call your local police department or sheriff's office.

— Read the manufacturer's instruction on how to use the child safety seat. The National Transportation Safety Board has reported that, in 53 accidents investigated in which young children were hurt 28 safety seats involved were improperly used. There appears to be widespread misuse of the infant carriers and child safety seats. You must fasten the safety harness around the child and then secure the seat to the vehicle itself.

— Young children are safest when strapped into the middle of the rear seat. If placed in the front seat, it is safer to strap them in facing backwards. "In the United States," Gilchrest said, "more infants and children are killed or crippled while riding in motor vehicles than are killed or crippled by the seven common childhood diseases."

Vase forgery growing

Hearst Feature Service

An ever-hungry market for the remarkably popular art deco glass of Rene Lalique, the French artist who won global renown for his contribution to the 1925 Paris Exposition Internationale des Arts Decoratifs et Industriels Modernes, has led to the manufacture of clever imitations of his vase designs.

The forged versions of vases from the 1920s and 1930s, when placed next to the genuine article, are highly convincing from a distance: identical in form and comparable in color. But closer examination, according to an article in the March issue of Connoisseur, reveals a waxy sheen of "newness" on the vessel's surface and a lack of the crispness in surface detail that is so characteristic of Lalique glass.

The fakes conform to conventional patterns of forgery, copying the most popular and striking designs in the most desirable colors of black, amethyst, ruby, bright green, sapphire blue and charcoal gray. Even the all-important bold-letter signature, "R. LALIQUE," has been etched with a stencil.

"But here the forger blundered," Connoisseur reveals. "The forged signature does not conform precisely with any Lalique mark on record and is therefore a dead give-away to anyone familiar with Lalique."

The extra effort is apparently worth it. These newest forgeries, which first cropped up last summer, sell for 50 to 75 percent of the real thing. And one-of-a-kind Lalique light fixtures and wall plaques command at least $40,000.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, March 16, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Happy Birthday to you, former First Lady Pat Nixon, Jerry Lewis, U.S. Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan (D-N.Y.), "CHIPs" star Erik Estrada and golf's Hollis Stacy. Also born on this date: our 4th U.S. President, James Madison of Virginia. The months ahead lead you to the brink of great success. A former employer wants you back. The offer includes lots of attractive perks. Think about it. Procrastination can be costly, especially in May, June. Refuse to step over the line between right and wrong. Will power is a tremendous asset. Creative people stand ready to help you rescue a favorite project. Be appreciative.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An opportunity to travel arises. Domestic matters require careful handling. You are adroit at settling conflicts and smoothing ruffled feathers. Romance looks great. Do not rock the boat.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An old project can be recycled to make big bucks. Resist a high-powered salesperson's pitch. Adding a room to your present home may be the best answer to a space shortage.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your creative powers are at their peak today. Learn to loosen up at social events. Your closest friends are relying on your efforts. You take any new responsibilities very seriously.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get an early start at work. You can do a lot for a friend who feels lost and confused. Follow your instincts. Do not take someone's casual comments personally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your work is excellent but you will make fewer mistakes if you take more breaks. A Capricorn brings new sunshine into your life. Be careful not to take him/her for granted.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Give influential people more time to accept your ideas. In time, they will come around. Platonic relationships enjoy better influences than romantic alliances today. Participate in group activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Restraint is a valuable asset today. Choose your words with care. Be careful not to underestimate someone. Romance is pleasant but uneventful. Be subtle when trying to influence others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make a decision only after careful deliberation. Attention to detail prevents costly and time-consuming mistakes. Postpone any work that can be handled better later on. Avoid arguments with loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New responsibilities bring new rewards. Coax secrets out into the open. Share confidences only with mate or partner. Refuse to become involved in a get-rich-quick scheme.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Limit purchases to necessities. A last-minute hunch could pay off handsomely. Someone who is aggressive is in your corner. Count on him or her to promote your best interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Value the information and knowledge you possess. Others try to get you to part with it. Do so for a fair price. Entertaining at home can be both fun and inexpensive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Member of opposite sex tries to insist that you make a commitment. Avoid entering a permanent alliance until you are sure you want to. Help a teen-ager with a weighty problem.

'Lottery' returns to ABC

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — A tire company salesman who bought a second ticket because he thought his first one was incorrectly punched won a pair of $2.6 million shares in Massachusetts' record-setting Megabucks lottery.

Fantasy becomes reality.

A stripper, a bus driver and a meter maid also won multi-million dollar lottery prizes in recent weeks. But these lucky ticketholders were figments of somebody's imagination on ABC's dramatic series, "Lottery."

Reality becomes fantasy.

With 16 states and the District of Columbia reportedly now conducting lotteries and numerous newspapers running sweepstakes games, a TV series about get-rich-quick dreams is clearly in tempo with today's times, even though a religious organization from Nashville recently initiated a sponsor boycott, claiming "Lottery" was a 60-minute commercial for gambling.

"In difficult economic times, what's better than having fun with fantasies?" said executive producer Rick Rosner.

"Lottery" returned to ABC's lineup earlier this month after taking a vacation from the ratings war, in which it had been soundly, and predictably, thrashed by "Dallas" last fall. Evidently, sexual whimsy is more appealing than financial whimsy.

Now on Thursday nights, "Lottery" is again up against formidable competition in CBS' "Simon & Simon" and NBC's "Cheers."

The first program about big-money handouts was "The Millionaire," in which a never-seen billionaire selected unsuspecting folks to receive his cashier's checks for $1 million, tax free. The show ran from 1955 to 1960.

Inflation being what it is, one winner in tonight's "Lottery" gets a check for $4 million, before taxes.

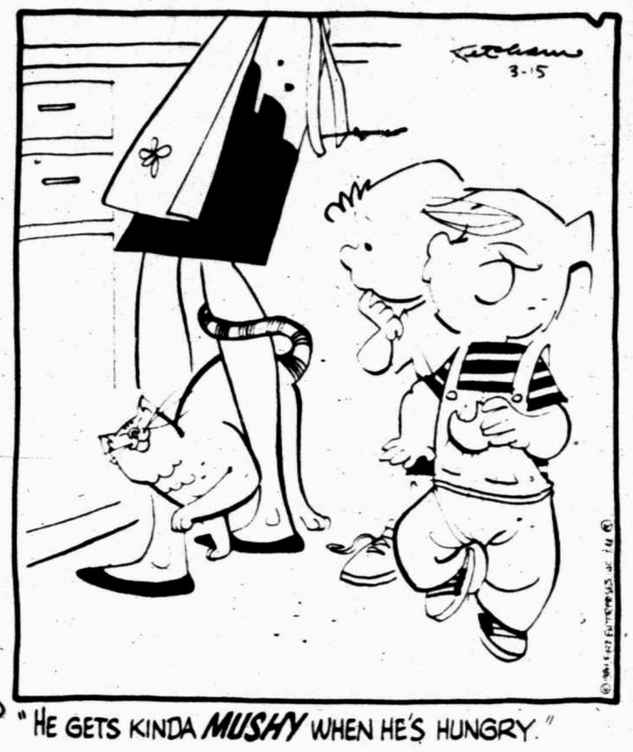

"Lottery's" vignettes about the triumphs, trials and tribulations of the week's instant millionaires often capture sympathetically amusing family situations.

"ABC told us that if we got 20 shares (20 percent of the hour's viewing audience) against 'Dallas,' it would be gold," said Rosner. "We got at least a 21 share every week but one. Still, they pulled us off for 'Blue Thunder' (a helicopter show)."

ABC's vision of "Lottery" was limited. "They wanted each episode to look similar to the pilot, but we said every winner can't be happy and delighted," said Rosner. "For some winners, it causes problems."

In researching the series, Rosner contacted lottery winners and found them to be "normal people whose lives aren't radically changed."

2 ◇	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

To appreciate this hand, cover up the East-West cards with your thumbs. Then read along and decide what you would do each time you are confronted with a problem.

South's response of one no trump was a one-round force. His three club bid showed a weak hand with a long club suit, so North would have been better advised to pass three clubs than to try for game with no real fit for his partner's suit, even though he had not shown the full strength of his hand.

West leads the queen of hearts. What do you play from dummy? Since the ten will probably prevent the opponents from running the suit, it is correct to rise with dummy's ace. You are pleasantly surprised when East drops the king. What now?

Obviously, you must lead a club, and correct technique is to lead the nine. East plays low and your king loses to West's ace. Back comes a diamond. Your play?

You insert the jack from the board and it loses to East's ace. A diamond return brings the queen from West. Continue, please.

When this hand was played in a Masters Individual tournament, South was Bridge World Editor and North American internationalist Edgar Kaplan. He made his earlier play of the nine of clubs pay off when he led a club from the table and finessed the eight. When that held, he had more than enough tricks.

No, Kaplan's play was not a lucky shot — it was virtually a sure thing. Why? West could have shut out declarer's club suit by simply holding up the ace of clubs for one round. So why hadn't he done so? There could be only one reason — he held a singleton ace of clubs!

Egyptian groups file lawsuits over film portrayals

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Groups of Egyptian lawyers, bakers and peasants have filed three separate law suits against local filmmakers for allegedly ridiculing them on the screen.

The legal actions coincide with a suit by the Egyptian Movie Syndicate against officials of Columbia Pictures for a film on the late President Anwar Sadat, which Egyptian officials consider distorted and offensive.

The Culture Ministry has banned all Columbia Pictures films from being shown in Egypt.

The case is before the court with the next session set for Saturday. Columbia chairman Patrick Williamson and five other officials face a minimum two years imprisonment if convicted, although they are not expected to appear in Cairo and probably will be tried in absentia.

Some Western diplomats see the lawsuits, all filed in the past three months, as a sign that Egyptians, traditionally a proud people with a 6,000-year history, are becoming increasingly sensitive about what they consider ridicule of their way of life on the screen.

The first case was filed by a group of lawyers against the star, writer, director and producer of the comedy hit, "El-Avocato," or "The Lawyer." The lawyers claim that the film, which stars popular comedian Adel Imam as a crooked attorney, is an insult to the entire legal profession.

They have asked that the court award damages and ban the film from further showings in Egypt.

The court has agreed to view the film in a private session next Tuesday.

The publicity surrounding the case apparently inspired a group of peasants from the village of Kharbata to take similar action against another of Imam's films, "El Motasawel," or "The Beggar."

In the film, Imam plays a naive peasant from the village of Kharbata who travels to Cairo. The film humorously shows the country bumpkin trying to cope with life in the big city.

In the latest action, a group of bakers from nine different provinces has gone to court to seek damages of a half million dollars and a ban on the film "Al-Fourn," or "The Bakery."

Adel Adham plays the role of a baker who drinks alcohol, which is forbidden under Islam, smokes hashish and behaves more or less like a petty tyrant.

Faced with the prospect of escalating legal actions, the Movie Syndicate, a non-government organization representing the industry, has condemned the spate of lawsuits.

"It is ridiculous that every group starts a court case every time a film focuses on a certain part of society," said syndicate chairman Saad el-Din Wahba in a statement.

"In every group, there's good and bad. No one is perfect. And if a film focuses on a bad lawyer or doctor, that does not mean that all lawyers or doctors are bad."

The syndicate's position, however, did not stop it from going to court against Columbia over the Sadat film.

In last Monday's court session, syndicate lawyer Shawky el-Sayed claimed that Columbia executives were "a group of Zionists" and that their portrayal of Sadat was "a crime."

Egyptian officials, including President Hosni Mubarak, have accused the film's American producers of distorting Egyptian history and the role of Sadat, in seeking peace with Israel.

The film has not been publicly distributed in Egypt, but many Egyptians who have seen private copies say it contains numerous factual errors, depicts an assassination attempt that never took place and has a pro-Israeli slant. They say the film implies that Sadat went to Jerusalem in 1977 out of gratitude for then-Prime Minister Menachem Begin's tipping him off to a reported plot against him.

One Western diplomat, who asked not to be identified, said he has detected "a certain sensitivity" among Egyptians about what they perceive as foreign criticism, be it by an the outsider from another country or another social class.

'Golden boy' of films has new home far from Hollywood's glitter

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD — After more than half a century, the home of the Oscars has moved away from the Los Angeles area — not the film industry itself, but the crafting of the golden Academy Award statuettes.

R.S. Owens & Co. of Chicago got the Oscar account this year after Dodge Trophies and Awards Co., which had been making the awards since 1931, closed its plant in suburban Carson and stopped making trophies.

"Dodge recommended Owens to us," said Bruce Davis, program administrator for the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts & Sciences in Beverly Hills. "They (Owens) had been lusting after the business."

Like Dodge before it, Owens will not profit from Oscar, a fairly costly fellow made of britannia — a blend of copper, tin and antimony — and then plated with nickel and 24-karat gold. Each statuette has its own serial number.

At the Academy's request, the cost of making an Oscar has never been disclosed.

"Publicity is our profit," said Owen Siegel, chairman and chief executive of Owens, speaking in a telephone interview from his Chicago office. "If we had to make a (financial) profit, we would have to double the price."

Owens already makes the Emmy, Clio, Sugar Bowl, Sun Bowl, Miss America and Miss Universe awards.

Dodge still maintains a warehouse in Georgia, Siegel said, but would have had to contract out the Oscar job. Also, the Georgia operation is non-union, and Davis said the Academy prefers to deal with union shops because the motion picture industry is heavily unionized.

After becoming the Academy's official licensee for the Oscar statuettes in September, Owens acquired the Oscar molds from Dodge and has already made some improvements in the award, Siegel said.

The molds were refitted to eliminate line marks at the base, a stronger epoxy lacquer is being used to keep Oscar's gold plate gleaming and "we have better color control" on the black nickel base, Siegel said.

Two crowned heads visiting North America

By The Associated Press

Two of Europe's crowned heads have been meeting some of North America's royalty of science and government — with King Juan Carlos of Spain talking politics with Quebec Premier Rene Levesque and Swedish King Carl XVI Gustaf breakfasting with U.S Nobel laureates.

Juan Carlos

Juan Carlos, traveling with Queen Sofia and Spanish Foreign Minister Fernando Moran Lopez, arrived by air from Ottawa on Wednesday on his first official visit to Montreal.

"I met a man who was very agreeable, very warm and apparently well briefed on the political situation here," Levesque told reporters after a half-hour tete-a-tete with the king.

Meantime, in California, the Swedish monarch and his 17-member Royal Technology group met with 10 Nobel laureates from Stanford University as part of a five-day West Coast trip.

Carl XVI Gustaf

The king was taken by limousine on a 10-minute tour of the campus before stopping at the home of Stanford Provost Albert Hastorf, where he was introduced to the Nobel winners.

His trip, planned by the U.S. National Academy of Engineering and the Royal Swedish Academy of Engineering Sciences, is to strengthen cooperation among the Swedish and American technological communities.

NEW YORK (AP) — What does Michael Jackson have in common with Fred Astaire? Pop videos like Jackson's "Beat It" have brought dance back to the prominence it had in Astaire's heyday, says a top choreographer.

Michael Peters, who has choreographed videos for Jackson, Billy Joel, Lionel Ritchie and other pop singers, says those TV visuals showing the singers dancing to their hits have done wonderful things for the business.

"I think they have put dance back in a prominent position on the par of all the other production elements, you know, as in the old musicals of the '30s and '40s where dance was really the star," Peters said Wednesday on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — An $850,000 out-of-court settlement has been reached in the case involving a cosmetic surgeon who performed a face lift on comedian Totie Fields which was blamed in a lawsuit for her fatal heart attack two years later.

Trial of the suit against Dr. William T. Keavy of Stamford was scheduled to begin in federal court Tuesday, but was canceled when the settlement was reached, said Stuart Schlesinger, an attorney for Miss Fields' husband, George Johnston of Las Vegas.

The settlement does not constitute an admission of liability, said Keavy's lawyer, Peter C. Fleming Jr. of New York.

Miss Fields died in 1978 at the age of 48.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Penny Marshall kept "pretty composed" the day after being threatened by two men dressed as Japanese Ninja assassins who broke into her Hollywood Hills home, according to police.

Ms. Marshall — who played Laverne De Fazio in the TV series "Laverne and Shirley" — was shaken but unharmed in the Tuesday night incident.

Police arrested the two intruders after Ms. Marshall, 39, hit a "panic button" silent alarm when she heard noises from the back of her house as she prepared to go to bed.

The men — identified as Anthony Pierson, 18, and Daniel Sheppard, 19 — wore black pajamas and hooded masks like those Lee Van Cleef uses in his NBC-TV series "The Master," police said. Both were held on $20,000 bail pending investigation of one count of burglary.

Her agent, Mike Menchsel, said the actress is continuing to work on a movie for ABC-TV called "Love Thy Neighbor."

Robert Young

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran actor Robert Young says he doesn't know how much rest he'll need now that he's returned home after being stricken on the set of a television film sequel to his "Marcus Welby, M.D." series.

"He's going to be OK" the actor's wife, Betty, told reporters at St. Joseph's Medical Center in Burbank, where the 77-year-old Young was taken Wednesday.

"I guess I just came back to work too soon" after a bout with the flu, said Young, his face still covered with pancake makeup used on the set. "I just wasn't ready."

Los Angeles County paramedics were summoned to the Univeral Studios set of "The Return of Marcus Welby, M.D." after the actor complained of dizziness and difficulty breathing.

Universal spokesman Ben Halpern said the flu had stricken several cast and crew members.

Young, who made more than 80 films during Hollywood's Golden Age, also played the easygoing Jim Anderson, title character of the hit 1950s TV series, "Father Knows Best."

NEW YORK (AP) — Scaffolding that will surround the Statue of Liberty during a 30-month, $39 million refurbishing project has reached the lady's toes, six stories above Liberty Island.

The 300-ton aluminum scaffold should reach the top of the statue by the end of April and is expected to remain in place until May 1986.

Although the 12-acre island will remain open to visitors, the statue will be closed intermittently as crews replace 1,600 wrought-iron bands that hold its copper skin to its frame, replace the torch and install an emergency elevator.

The statue's 100th anniversary is Oct. 28, 1986, but the project is supposed to be complete by July 4 of that year, when tall ships from around the world will sail into New York Harbor to honor the statue.

MOSCOW (AP) — Garri Kasparov of the Soviet Union won the third game of his world chess challengers' match against countryman Vasily Smyslov, the official Tass news agency said.

The victory Wednesday came on the 41st move, Tass said.

The first two games of the match, which started Saturday in Vilnuis, Lithuania, ended in draws worth a half point to each player. Kasparov now leads the match by a score of 2-1.

The winner of the 16-game match will play world champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union.

CBS, ABC tied in weekly Nielsen race

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Riding the popularity of the soap operas "Dallas" and "Dynasty," CBS and ABC deadlocked last week in the first prime-time network ratings tie of the season.

NBC, whose sole entry in the Top 20 for the week ended March 11 was "The A-Team" at No. 5, was a distant third in the A.C. Nielsen ratings.

With six of its shows — "Dallas," "Simon & Simon," "Magnum, P.I.," "60 Minutes," "Knots Landing" and "Falcon Crest" — in the coveted Top 10, CBS had a 17.0 average for the week.

But ABC earned an identical 17.0 with assists from "Dynasty," "Hotel" and "Dark Mirror," a TV film in which Jane Seymour played identical twins with opposite personalities.

"Dallas" narrowly edged "Dynasty" as the nation's most popular show, with 22.4 million viewers tuning into the CBS saga compared with 21.7 million for the ABC soap.

NBC's overall rating for the week was 13.4. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute, 13.4 percent of all households with televisions were turned into an NBC show.

New programs generally had a rough time last week.

On ABC, "a.k.a. Pablo" — Norman Lear's series about a struggling Mexican-American comic — landed in 37th place. "Two Marriages," a family drama that returned to ABC after premiering last summer, was No. 66.

The CBS cooking-show comedy, "Mama Malone," was No. 54.

Occupying the ratings cellar, in descending order, were CBS' "Mississippi" and four NBC shows: "The Master," "The New Show," "Legmen" and, in last place, the news magazine "First Camera."

CBS continued to lead in season-to-date ratings at 18.2. ABC was next at 17.4, and NBC trailed at 15.1.

CBS maintained its dominance of the evening news, with a 13.9 rating. NBC moved into second place with 10.9, and ABC was third with 10.6.

Mushers head for Iditarod finish line

SHAKTOOLIK, Alaska (AP) — Dean Osmar of Clam Gulch held on to his lead in the 1,135-mile Iditarod Sled Dog Race from Anchorage to Nome, with pressure from Joe Garnie of Teller and five other mushers close behind.

Soggy trail conditions were taking their toll on the teams Wednesday as the end of the long run approached. A winner could reach Nome as early as tonight or early Friday morning.

With 171 miles to go and $24,000 in first-prize money awaiting the first musher in, Osmar pulled out of Koyuk at 10:20 a.m. on a 48-mile run to Elim with 13 dogs in harness.

The 36-year-old commercial fisherman had started this year's 12th Iditarod at Anchorage on March 3 with 18 dogs.

From Elim, the trail skirts along the shores of Norton Sound through Golovin, White Mountain and Safety to the finish line on Nome's Front Street.

Since leaving Anchorage, Osmar has mushed an average of about 87 miles a day, over a trail softened by unseasonably warm temperatures.

Garnie left Koyuk five hours and 20 minutes behind Osmar, with 12 dogs hitched to his sled.

Still running the 58 miles from Shaktoolik to Koyuk at last report were a foursome of experienced mushers, with race founder Joe Redington of Knik in the lead.
