Q. Why are some of the doors at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum locked during an activity? This seems to be a fire hazard.

A. Only one door for every 250 people in the Coliseum is required to be unlocked, said Carl Dorton at the Fire Dept.

Petition drive impact unlikely

Although a local petition drive has drawn more than 600 signatures, K mart officials today said it is unlikely to change their plans to close the Big Spring store.

An official at K mart's international headquarters in Troy, Mich. said it's unlikely the petition drive, initiated this week by a Big Spring resident, will affect the recent announcement of the store's planned July closing.

"If they made the formal announcement, (the closing) is a reality," Director of Customer Relations James McNeerney said from Troy, Michigan today. If the petition drive had been started before the final decision to close was made, it might have received some consideration, he said.

But, he said, "we are always glad to hear from our customers."

Bill Birrell, a semi-retired radio broadcaster who works for KWKT's gospel music hour, said he is pleased with the response he's received from area residents.

Birrell said he hopes to send in the petitions within the next few days. Any petitions that haven't been turned in can be taken to the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce at 215 W. Third St., he said. Anyone desiring to sign a petition also can do so at the Chamber offices, Birrell said.

"I hope to get several hundred more (signatures)," Birrell said, before he sends the petitions to K mart's headquarters in Troy, Michigan.

Three beauty shops asked for petitions on Wednesday, Birrell said, and said petitions also have circulated at Howard College and several businesses.

Officials act to curb flood danger

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

County, city and Colorado River Municipal Water District officials agreed Thursday that cooperation among the three is necessary to attack the hazards posed by high water at Natural Dam Lake.

Local officials have debated since April who is responsible for making improvements at the lake, situated on private property about 10 miles west of Big Spring.

They agreed Thursday to form a committee comprised of two officials each from the three agencies to study ways to prevent or lessen disastrous flooding through Big Spring.

In addition, Union Pacific Railroad Co. also will be invited to participate on the committee, Ivie said. A UP line near Beal's Creek and its Big Spring yard were covered with water during last year's flooding.

The committee plan resulted from a Thursday luncheon at Park Inn, attended by about 20 city, county and CRMWD officials. The meeting was arranged by County Commissioner Bill Crooker.

Crooker said he hoped the group, as leaders of the community, could arrive at a plan to find solutions to the high water dangers at Natural Dam Lake.

Water District General Manager

Owen Ivie summarized the history of Natural Dam Lake and suggested two actions to reduce the chance of flooding.

Ivie suggested lowering the spillway one foot and maintaining a greenbelt along the creek to allow more water to flow through the city.

He said the water could drain through the city easier and quicker if Beal's Creek and its adjacent banks are kept clear of obstructions.

"Our plan is to remove those obstacles," he said, adding that trees and brush inhibited the flow of water during last year's flood.

The area needs to be leveled and kept mowed, he said, adding that it could be used as a park for children in the College Park area.

Ivie added that lowering the spillway an additional foot would allow it to accommodate more water.

He recommended lowering it only one foot because too much water flowing through the spillway would increase the chances of flooding Interstate 20 and the railroad.

A pending lawsuit against the CRMWD doesn't have anything to do with the Water District's position on Natural Dam Lake, said Ivie and John Taylor, president of the Water District's board of directors.

The Water District sent a position statement in April to county and city officials. It stated that any additional measures taken at Natural Dam Lake would be done only after an agreement with the city and county to share expenses.

"We're not trying to cast blame or responsibility on others," Taylor said, adding that he believes it is the responsibility of the appointed and elected officials representing the three entities to seek solutions.

City Councilman Johnny Rutherford said he thought the possibility of mechanically lifting water over the dam should be studied.

"We are leaving ourselves at the mercy of nature," he said.

Kristofferson show tonight

A concert by actor/songwriter Kris Kristofferson to benefit Comanche Trail Park renovation efforts is to begin at 8 p.m. today at the Comanche Trail Park amphitheater.

Kristofferson agreed to the benefit about two weeks ago. He is the first to perform at the newly renovated amphitheater, and the fifth to stage a concert to benefit the renovation effort.

The park will be closed at about 5 p.m. to non-ticket holders, until the end of the concert.

The Whipkey Drive park entrance will be closed during the concert, and the Wasson Road and Highway 87 entrances will be manned, Police Lt. Jerry Edwards said.

Councilman Johnny Rutherford, concert coordinator, has said those already in the park will not be asked to leave.

Tickets will be sold at the park and amphitheater entrances for $12.

Tickets can be purchased in advance for $10 at Big Spring Athletics, the Record Shop, the Chamber of Commerce, Wonder World, A Little Extra boutique, Hester's Office Supply and at Endless Horizons in Midland.

Rutherford has said he expects 2,500 to 3,500 people to attend.

Hart withdraws: 'Angry, not beaten'

By CARL HILLIARD
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (P) — A defiant Gary Hart abandoned the race for the Democratic presidential nomination today, declaring "I refuse to submit myself, my family and my friends" to continued public scrutiny.

"I'm not a beaten man; I'm an angry and defiant man," Hart told a news conference here.

Hart disappointed supporters at the news conference, who cheered briefly when the former senator said, "Hell, no!" after he described a decision to make a quick announcement and quietly leave the scene.

Instead, Hart briefly discussed the controversy that followed this week's revelations of his relations with a model. He then withdrew.

Hart said he thinks he could have won. "I believe I could have been a successful candidate. ... Apparently, now, we'll never know," he said, looking drawn after one of the toughest weeks any presidential candidate has ever faced.

The former Colorado senator decried the emphasis on his private life.

"In public life, some things may be interesting, but that doesn't mean they are important," he said. "I don't want to be the issue. And I cannot be the issue, because that breaks the link between me and my voters," Hart added.

He said that in the final analysis, "the American people will decide what qualities are important to govern the country in the national interest."

Hart said the disclosures about his relationship with Rice had hurt his family. "Frankly, the hardest part about making this decision has been my children," he said. "They're both more angry and confused than I've ever seen them in their lives. And very frankly, they're angry at me, their father. They don't want me to get out of this race."

"And, you know, I believe that there also are a lot of angry and HART page 2A

Bee issue buzzing around councilmen

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

The suggestion to ban or limit bees in Big Spring continues to concern city officials.

City Manager Mack Wofford said this morning that a question exists whether the city can legally ban bees.

The issue was raised when a citizen called, stating the Supreme Court has ruled on such a case in the past, he said.

Officials are researching the matter to determine if the comment is true, and what limitations may exist on the city's authority to ban bees, he said.

They hope to have some information within the next few days, he said.

The City Council is expected to discuss a proposed ordinance prohibiting bees at its work session at 3 p.m. Monday at Big Spring Airpark.

Although the Council at first expressed favor at banning bees outright, some members have indicated they may consider simply limiting them in some manner, Wofford said.

Little citizen input has been heard on the proposal since the Council's last meeting, when it was first raised, he said.

The issue came to Council attention when a number of residents complained that a neighbor's bees were a nuisance and a hazard. At least one had sought medical attention after an allergic reaction to a bee sting.

A group of the residents came to the Council meeting complaining that bees from the neighbor's approximately 18 hives constantly swarm in their yards, forcing them to remain in the house in fear.

Cynthia Clanton, 1909 N. Monticello St., said she is moving from the neighborhood because of the bees kept by Jesse T. Brose, 1906 11th Place.

However, Roger Foster, 2107 Warren St., said the Council shouldn't ban bees "just because of one minor incident."

"It's not just an isolated incident," said Councilman Russ McEwen, who noted there also have been complaints in College Park.

Foster said he has bees on his property because his son asked to raise them. He received his first bees just recently, he said, and it cost $250 to establish a brood hive.

Councilman Gary Don Carey said it may be possible for citizens to request an annual permit to keep bees, which would be granted if the property in question is at least four acres and if neighbors don't object.

Senate act regulates oil imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing pressing national security concerns, the Senate Finance Committee passed a measure Thursday requiring the president to hold foreign oil imports below 50 percent of U.S. demand.

The measure, authored by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, passed by a vote of 12-8 and was attached to the Omnibus Trade Act, which moved out of committee after two weeks of debate and headed for consideration by the full Senate.

"Finance Committee approval of my energy security bill is the first concrete step by Washington to protect this country's economic security in the wake of rapidly rising dependence on foreign oil," Bentsen said.

The Bentsen amendment would require the president to submit to Congress each year a three-year projection of U.S. oil production, demand and imports.

For any year when oil imports are projected to exceed 50 percent of demand, the president would have to prepare a plan for holding the level of dependence below 50 percent and submit it to Congress within 90 days.

Congress would have another 90 days to act on the president's plan. OIL IMPORTS page 2A which could include an oil import fee, energy conservation regulations, incentives to boost domestic production and promotion of alternative energy sources.

A report issued by the Energy Department in March predicted the nation could be importing half its oil by the mid-1990s, and other projections place the date as early as 1989. Current imports are about 39 percent of total usage.

Opponents to the bill describe it as a backdoor way of allowing imposition of an oil import fee.

"I'm very concerned about it. Of course, I spoke against it," said Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., a Finance Committee member.

"I think this is bad legislation and I would think it would be defeated in the full Senate. There will be some impassioned arguments citing national security."

Bentsen said it had been a tough fight in committee and that he expects more tough fights ahead to keep it in the trade bill. But he said the fight would be worth it in the end.

"I don't want to see us go back to the gasoline lines of the 1970s, and this legislation caps our dependence on foreign oil at the 50 percent level to reduce the chances of that happening," he said.

At the time of the 1973 oil crisis, the U.S. was importing 33 percent of the oil consumed domestically.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, introduced a companion bill in the House identical to the Bentsen bill that is currently awaiting action in the Energy and Commerce Committee.

But Bryant said the Finance Committee action indicates to him that the measure will be a part of the trade bill that comes out of the House-Senate conference committee.

"My sense of things is that the proposal will not face a great deal of opposition in the House," Bryant said. "It's not what I'd like. What I'd like is an oil import fee. But at least this forces the president to act in the event our domestic usage exceeds 50 percent."

Matching funds request not yet received by FEC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission has not yet received a request from Gary Hart for matching funds for his short-lived presidential race, and a spokesman said today it is not yet known whether a candidate who drops out before the election year can qualify for taxpayer funds.

The Washington Post reported today that Hart delayed the formal announcement of his pullout by 24 hours to give his campaign time to file the papers needed to collect an estimated $750,000 in matching funds.

Fred Eiland, the FEC spokesman, said that the commission has not yet received any papers from Hart requesting approval for matching funds.

Kevin Sweeney, Hart's spokesman, said today in a telephone interview from Hart's headquarters in Denver that he could not immediately confirm whether the Hart campaign had filed for matching funds.

Sweeney, who returned to Colorado from New Hampshire late Thursday, said, "I have not discussed with any of the finance types close-down procedures. ... I just don't know."

Eiland said the FEC has never been asked to decide whether a candidate who drops out of the race before the election year could qualify for matching funds. It will take at least four votes on the bipartisan six-member panel to approve any such funds, he said.

Sweeney said Hart has raised more than $2 million for the 1988 race. He is seeking permission from the FEC to use some of that money to wipe out $1.3 million in debts left over from his 1984 race.

Last month, shortly after Hart launched his new drive, federal marshals seized nearly $30,000 in receipts from a Hollywood fund-raising dinner to satisfy a creditor from the earlier campaign.

To qualify for matching funds, a candidate must raise $5,000 in individual donations of $250 or less in each of 20 or more states, and must file copies of the donors' checks or money orders and their addresses with the FEC.

To date, two Democrats, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, have qualified for matching funds, and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., has filed the paperwork and is awaiting the FEC's approval.

No candidate will actually receive any matching funds until next Jan. 1. However, for those who do qualify, the FEC will match individual contributions up to $250 raised since Jan. 1, 1987. Individuals can give up to $1,000, but only $250 is matched by the U.S. Treasury.

Hart ended his near-miss 1984 drive for the Democratic nomination with more than $4.7 million in debts.

Gary Hart addresses American Newspaper's Publisher's Association Wednesday declaring he did not do anything immoral. Today he announced his withdrawal as a presidential candidate.

confused voters out around this country. So what I have to say here is both for my children and for those voters."

Hart decried the scrutiny he had received.

"I guess I've become somekind of a rare bird, some extraordinary creature that has to be dissected," he said.

And he said media actions were excessive.

"We're all going to have to seriously question the system for selecting our national leaders that reduces the press of this nation to hunters and presidential candidates to being hunted, that has reporters in bushes, false and inaccurate stories printed, photographers peering in our windows, swarms of helicopters hovering over our roofs."

Drivers can't drink, thanks to state bill

AUSTIN (AP) — With the stroke of a pen, Gov. Bill Clements is putting the brakes on drinking while driving.

Clements, who says he's never hoisted a drink while behind the wheel, Thursday signed into law a bill that prohibits drinking while driving.

"I think it's been long overdue. I'm delighted to see it go on the books," Clements said after putting his signature on the legislation sponsored by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo.

The new law, which takes effect Aug. 31, will not extend to passengers in the vehicle, lawmakers said.

Clements said he believes the measure will reduce highway fatalities.

"Alcohol and automobiles can be a volatile combination. The combination has resulted in deaths, wasted lives and destruction. There is no argument against a measure that seeks to end this unnecessary misery," Clements said.

Current Texas law prohibits driving while intoxicated, but it does not prohibit drinking while driving.

In a report to the Legislature written last year, the House Liquor Regulation Committee said many states have open-container bans.

In addition, 27 Texas municipalities had open-container ordinances. But those had come under question with an attorney general's opinion which said the state's alcoholic beverage code is the exclusive law on transportation and possession of alcoholic beverages, the report said.

Lawmaker dies of AIDS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Jim Wright said today the death of Rep. Stewart B. McKinney from AIDS Thursday illustrates that a way must be found to halt the spread of the deadly disease.

McKinney's personal physician, Dr. Cesar Caceres, said he believed the nine-term Republican Connecticut congressman got AIDS from blood transfusions received during heart by-pass surgery in 1979.

But the Washington Post, quoting knowledgeable sources on Capitol Hill and in the Washington gay community, said McKinney has had homosexual relationships. Homosexual men are at greatest risk for AIDS.

Health bill approved

WASHINGTON — House committee approval of a catastrophic health bill sets the stage for the first major expansion of Medicare in 22 years and strongly suggests a tax-based progressive financing plan will be injected into the program for the first time.

The major additional benefits in the measure, which cleared the House Ways and Means Committee late Thursday, are patterned on a plan drafted by Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen and embraced by President Reagan after weeks of debate within the administration.

Contra rebels 'inept'

BALTIMORE — Former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane says in interviews published today that U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels were "well-meaning, patriotic, but inept Coca-Cola bottlers and clerks."

In two interviews published by The Baltimore Sun, McFarlane described the Contras as incapable of succeeding in combat against the Sandanista forces.

"Their solid figures apparently enjoy substantial support, but they are incompetent."

$20 million fraud traced

PHILADELPHIA — Two companies and six executives cheated the Defense Department of more than $20 million by setting up sham companies and selling it substandard wire, according to federal indictments.

Not all the wire has been traced, but it has caused no accidents as far as officials can determine, U.S. Attorney Edward Dennis Jr. said Thursday.

The schemes, according to Dennis, included relabeling cheaper wire, creating false documents, shipping less wire than ordered, shipping spliced wire instead of a continuous cable, bribing government buyers and setting up fake companies that would submit high bids.

Democrats says race 'wide open'

Democrats in Iowa and New Hampshire said the early presidential contests in their states are wide open without front-runner Gary Hart, and some predicted new candidates would enter the field.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see some of the folks give this thing a major reconsideration," Chuck Gifford, Iowa head of the United Auto Workers, said Thursday as reports surfaced that Hart would drop out of the race today. Gifford mentioned Mario Cuomo as a possibility, but the New York governor denied interest.

Party caucuses in Iowa next Feb. 8 and the New Hampshire primary on Feb. 16 are the first two chances for candidates without front-runner status to emerge from the pack.

"Other than Jesse Jackson, all of the other candidates are in the single digits in the national polls," said Joseph Grandmaison, the New Hampshire Democratic chairman. "And the net effect of that will be that the New Hampshire primary and Iowa caucuses become even more important."

The fresh possibilities available for candidates who have been long shots makes the contest "a jump ball now," according to Lowell Jenkins, last year's Democratic gubernatorial candidate in Iowa, or "a brand new ballgame," in the words of former Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H.

"It just throws the whole process into a new ball game," echoed John Roehrick, vice chairman of the Iowa Democratic Party. "No one can take glee or any satisfaction in an occurrence like this. It's almost like a death."

Gifford, who also is on the Democratic National Committee, said he was worried the party might be losing its strongest candidate. In addition to running ahead of the other Democrats, he noted, polls showed Hart ahead of both Vice President George Bush and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole.

"I expect the major shift we're going to see immediately is to undecided," said Bill Fleming, who runs Gephardt's Iowa campaign. "I expect there will be bump up in numbers probably for everybody."

"It's going to throw it wide open, absolutely wide open," Fleming said. "I think you'll see them all intensify."

Fire and smoke engulf a Burlington Northern train Thursday afternoon 15 miles east of Stevenson, Wa., along the Columbia River Thursday. Railroad officials said 17 cars went off the tracks spilling loaded cargo containers, several of which rolled into the river. Some of the cars fell into the river, said a Skamania County Sheriff's dispatcher.

U.S. to present draft

GENEVA — The United States has finished a draft treaty calling for large cutbacks in strategic nuclear weapons, and planned to present it today during talks with the Soviet Union, a U.S. source said.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, declined to reveal details of the proposal. But President Reagan said last Monday that a draft on strategic missiles would be introduced in Geneva as a way to "intensify efforts to reach agreement on reducing strategic offensive nuclear arms by 50 percent."

Reagan said the draft would reflect agreements reached at last year's summit with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Iceland, and address Soviet concerns expressed since then.

Waldheim files lawsuit

VIENNA, Austria — President Kurt Waldheim on Thursday authorized federal prosecutors to take legal action for slander against World Jewish Congress president Edgar Bronfman, who has accused Waldheim of Nazi war crimes.

Bronfman, who was attending the WJC's meeting in Budapest, said of Waldheim's action: "I don't take his suit seriously. I don't take him as a human being seriously. I take Austria seriously."

Asked if he stood by his statement Wednesday in which he said he would be willing to go to Austria to be sued by Waldheim, Bronfman replied, "Where is your sense of humor?"

He added, "I'll cross that bridge over the Danube when I get to it." He declined to say if he had consulted his lawyers.

Iranians attack ship

MANAMA, Bahrain — For the first time in the Persian Gulf war, Iranian forces attacked a Soviet freighter in the strategic waterway, marine salvage executives reported today.

The attack on the 6,459-ton Ivan Korotoyev at noon Thursday followed Iranian warnings to Kuwait not to seek Soviet and U.S. help to protect its vessels against Iranian attacks in the Gulf.

The Iranians charge that Kuwait aids Iraq, Iran's foe in the 6½-year-old war. The Soviets are Iraq's main arms supplier.

Ten die in Israeli attack

SIDON, Lebanon — Israeli warplanes bombed Palestinian targets near Sidon today, killing 10 people and wounding 25, police said. The Israelis said they earlier foiled an attempt by guerrillas to enter Israel and seize hostages.

Four U.S.-built F-4s and two Israeli-made Kfir fighters made three runs over the Palestinian refugee camps of Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh Mieh in the attack that began at 1:55 p.m. today, police said.

Ambulances rushed casualties to Sidon hospitals. Police reported one hour after the raid that rescuers had evacuated 25 wounded civilians.

Federal judges get guidelines

Something's terribly wrong when a federal judge sentences a dangerous felon to 30 years in prison and the criminal is back on the streets in less than 10 years.

Congress concluded as much three years ago when it created the U.S. Sentencing Commission, which was charged with eliminating the glaring disparity between time awarded and time served.

After 18 months of hearings and study, the seven-member panel has produced sentencing guidelines that, if approved by Congress, are supposed to make punishment more uniform and more certain. Unfortunately, the commission's recommendations are considerably weaker than the ones proposed last September.

For example, federal judges would be allowed far more leeway in criminal sentencing than originally envisioned. Under the revised recommendations, judges will have unlimited discretion to depart from the sentencing guidelines for any "aggravating or mitigating" circumstance, so long as they give their reasons in writing.

This loophole is a sop to the American Bar Association, which complained that strict sentencing guidelines would reduce judges to dispensing assembly-line justice.

The commission also agreed to lower prison sentences than initially proposed, and many of these terms could be negotiated away in plea bargains, with consent of the prosecutor.

Moreover, it recommends that the new system, scheduled to become effective in November, be delayed until August 1988 so judges can try the guidelines on a voluntary basis.

Little wonder that the sole dissenting commission member, Rutgers law professor Paul Robinson, is so cynical. "If Congress asked for Rambo," he says, "what it got was Don Knotts."

In all fairness, the proposed sentencing guidelines are an improvement over the present system. Parole release for federal prisoners would be phased out over five years. Time off for good behavior virtually would be eliminated. And lenient federal judges would be placed on a short leash.

Nevertheless, problems concerning judicial discretion and plea bargaining must be resolved before Congress adopts the commission's guidelines. Otherwise, the laudable objectives of truth in sentencing and certainty of punishment will remain largely unfulfilled.

Shooting club expresses gratitude

To the editor:

On behalf of the Western Sportsman Club, I want to thank all the people who participated in our Fun Day shoot Sunday, May 3. This includes both the Black Powder and the Modern Firearms Shooters. We hope all had an enjoyable time shooting their various firearms and helping a worthwhile charity at the same time.

I also extend a special thank you to those people that donated their time and efforts before, during, and after the shoot to make it a success. Without these individuals' efforts we wouldn't have been able to put on an event of this size.

The competition went very well. Ribbons were won by people shooting all types of firearms plus a good mix of junior and lady shooters.

Says rain is not the city's problem

To the editor:

In reference to the "rain-caused" hole on 11th Street: Aw, come on, we didn't all just get off the turnip truck.

Who is the city street department kidding? We didn't get enough rain to wet the sidewalks. This is just a ploy by the city to keep any lawsuits from being filed — in case the car undercarriage was damaged in the accident.

I am guessing that we must also have had a whale of a rain to tear up Lancaster Street around behind the Safeway store. In fact, it must have rained all up and down 11th Street also — but just along the curb!

I called the city to ask when are we ever going to get the streets repaired where there are so many torn-out areas. They said, "Oh, two weeks." That was a month or more ago. I am losing faith in anything I hear from City Hall.

Today

Today is Friday, May 8, the 128th day of 1987. There are 237 days left in the year. This is "V-E" Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 8, 1945, President Harry S. Truman announced in a radio address that World War II had ended in Europe.

On this date:

In 1541, the Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto discovered the Mississippi River.

In 1846, the first major battle of the Mexican War was fought at Palo Alto, Texas, resulting in victory for Gen. Zachary Taylor's forces.

In 1884, the 33rd president of the United States, Harry S. Truman, was born near Lamar, Mo.

In 1886, Atlanta pharmacist John Styth Pemberton invented a syrup for a beverage that became known as "Coca-Cola."

In 1958, Vice President Richard M. Nixon was shoved, stoned, booed and spat upon by anti-American protesters in Lima, Peru.

In 1973, militant Indians who had held the South Dakota hamlet of Wounded Knee for ten weeks surrendered.

In 1980, Philippine opposition leader Benigno Aquino was released after seven and a half years of detention and allowed to fly to the United States for medical treatment.

In 1984, the Soviet Union announced it would not participate in the Los Angeles Summer Olympics, charging the United States did not intend to ensure athletes' security.

Thought for today: "Oh, the good old times, when we were so unhappy!" — French saying.

Afghans lose billions from CIA weapon sale blunders

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — The CIA has been overcharged, undercut and just plain robbed to the tune of at least $1 billion during its slovenly, seven-year effort to supply weapons to the anti-Soviet guerrillas in Afghanistan.

The incredible waste of more than one-third of the $3 billion in covert funds (half of it contributed by Saudi Arabia) is a direct result of the agency's perverse refusal to adopt even the most elementary accounting procedures — and a cavalier, "hang-the-expense" attitude not seen since the last big covert arms program, in Vietnam.

Arms merchants, corrupt officials and even, reportedly, CIA agents have grown fat on the Afghan arms trade, while the freedom fighters have been starved for modern weaponry to use against Soviet tanks and aircraft.

The CIA has admitted substantial losses. Behind closed doors, agency officials have acknowledged to Congress that at least 20 percent has been skimmed from the program. In a patronizing echo of the old colonial mentality, they shrugged this off as merely the typical cost of doing business in that part of the world, suggesting that greedy Pakistani officials were largely responsible.

Even if this were true, it would still amount to a whopping $600 million loss. But the CIA has boldly misled Congress. Our own conservative estimate is that the diversion of Afghan arms is around 60 percent, or $1.8 billion. One resistance leader told Dale Van Atta on a recent visit to the Pakistani-Afghan border that he doubted that even 25 percent of the CIA's promised arms got through.

To understand how such a well-intended, congressionally supported program could go so far astray, it's necessary to look at the CIA's clandestine weapons supply line to Afghanistan. The wonder is the Afghan rebels have received so much as a Saturday Night Special from the CIA.

One source for weapons was Cairo, where Soviet weapons left over from Egypt's days as a Kremlin satellite could be bought, disguising the American involvement. Another source was Peking, where Chinese copies of Soviet weapons were readily available.

Jack Anderson

Tens of millions of dollars were lost at the point of purchase, because the CIA didn't deign to haggle over price. "These are secret, non-market arrangements," an intelligence source explained. "So there is no set price for the weapons. They can charge whatever they want to, and the CIA will pay it."

The next great, gaping hole in the pipeline is at the port of shipment. Incredible as it seems, our sources say the CIA never has a person at the dock or airport to make sure the weapons paid for are actually put aboard. If the arms dealer chooses to send only half the other, the CIA will never know.

The next flaw is at the port of arrival, usually Karachi, Pakistan. The CIA has no one there either, to check shipments against manifests from Cairo, Peking or elsewhere. As a result, many shipments are "lost at sea" — meaning they are re-routed to arms-hungry nations like Iran, which pay the arms dealers handsomely for the diverted weapons.

The CIA doesn't even have a rudimentary tracking system for its shipments — like numbering the lots so they can be matched up on arrival. There's no way of telling whether an arriving shipment was purchased weeks, months or even years earlier.

Finally, the weapons must pass through Pakistani intermediaries, and the last skimming occurs. But this is probably the least serious, mainly because the pickings by that time are so slim. The best weapons have been stolen long since.

"The biggest problem is not Pakistan," an auditor of the CIA's Afghan arms program told us. "It's Egypt, China and the CIA."

The Afghan arms scandal has been deliberately hidden under security classifications, and overlooked in the hue and cry over the Iran/contras mess. Yet it dwarfs that scandal in both size and the level of incompetence.

For American taxpayers, it is an outrage; for the desperate Afghan freedom fighters, it is a tragedy. They have been reduced to buying primitive small arms from Pakistani tribesmen, fighting Soviet troops with squirrel rifles instead of CIA missiles.

SCANDAL VS. SCANDAL: It's becoming ever more obvious that the Reagan administration supporters on Capitol Hill are hoping the Marine embassy guard scandal can be parlayed into a diversion that will take a little heat off the White House for the Iran/contras arms scandal.

Administration trustees are assiduously spreading the word that more harm was done to national security by the Moscow Marines' romantic dalliances than by the complex weapons transactions of the "other Marine," Lt. Col. Oliver North.

So far, however, Congress as a whole has shown a willingness to let the Marines handle their own mess, and concentrate its energies on the Iran/contras problem.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Consistency is often overrated, but it does give a comforting dependability to government decisions. We wish the Federal Communications Commission would make up its mind about freedom of speech vs. official interference on the airwaves.

The FCC thinks it's OK to step in and keep children from being exposed to suggestive talk, but it doesn't want to step in and keep adults from being exposed to only one side of important public policy arguments.

Leaving the Soviets out in the code

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I didn't find it all that newsworthy to learn that the Russian and American governments often used bugging devices to find out what one another is doing and/or saying.

I always had taken this as a given. Wasn't the first thing Bill Cosby and Robert Culp did when they checked into a hotel room in "I Spy" was to search out the bugging devices, which always were located in the flowerpot?

I also figure both U.S. and Soviet operatives are smart enough to know how to say things in code when they know they are being listened to by the other side.

My stepbrother, Ludlow Porch of WSB/radio in Atlanta, who happens to be an ex-Marine and quite a patriot, was along with me on a trip to the Soviet Union a couple of years ago and we often carried on sensitive conversations in our respective hotel rooms.

We certainly took for granted our rooms were bugged, especially after one KGB "maid" asked him, "How are you enjoying your stay in Soviet Union?"

Before Ludlow could answer, she said, "Please speak directly into flowerpot."

After that, Ludlow and I devised a brilliant code to use each time we knew somebody out there was listening.

Now that we are both safely out of the country, and plan never to go back, here is one of our typical conversations while in the Soviet Union, followed by the translation:

LUDLOW: "Rosebud" in the third race at Pimlico. (I'm so tired of Russian food, I could eat a horse.)

ME: "This little piggy went to market." (Before I left home, I went by the Piggly Wiggly supermarket and picked up a couple of cans of pork and beans for the trip. Want some?)

LUDLOW: "Is a bear Catholic?" (In the name of God, yes.)

LUDLOW (again): "Are you going to watch 'Sanford and Son'?" (Are you as sick as I am of looking at all that junk in Russian museums?)

ME: "Roger. The big polar bear walks late." (Dang right, I'm going over to a bar tonight at a hotel where they are supposed to have ice.)

LUDLOW: "Is the new Sears and Roebuck catalog in yet?" (You got any toilet paper left in your room?)

ME: "Pass the Charmin." (A little but I'm in big trouble when that's gone.)

LUDLOW: "Does Bonzo have the key?" (Do you think President Reagan is correct in thinking these people are a major threat to the security of our nation?)

ME: "A flush beats a straight." (Are you kidding me? A country that still can't master the flush toilet couldn't hit its own foot with a guided missile.)

LUDLOW: Shoot low, boys, they're ridin' Shetland ponies. (Have you noticed how squatty-looking all the Russian women are?)

ME: "The elephants are marching." (They all have big fat ankles, too.)

LUDLOW: "When the bird of paradise flies away, Santa's belly will roll like jelly." (When we finally blow this place, I'm going to be one happy fat man.)

ME: "Hey, Mabel, Black Label!" (I'll drink to that.)

LUDLOW: "Now's the time for all good men to come to the aid of their country." (Isn't it a little silly for two grown men to be sitting here talking like this?)

ME: "The quick brown fox jumped over the lazy brown dog." (You can't be too careful when the security of your country is involved.)

LUDLOW: "Loose lips can sink ships, Jarhead." (That's the first thing they told us at boot camp in Parris Island.)

Texans find business mergers stressful

DALLAS (AP) — When Robbie Griffin learned that her job at Sanger Harris in Dallas would be eliminated because the department store chain was merging with Houston-based Foley's, she exhibited all the classic symptoms of merger-induced stress.

"I was just totally upset and completely a wreck," she said. "We were all crying when the merger was announced, not just because we might get laid off or have to make decisions about our lives. A lot of us cried because Sanger Harris has been our store. We grieved because it was the end of an era."

"It was a totally stressed-out experience," said the former senior assistant manager in the video publications department. "You can't help but take it home with you. You have all these fears that you pour out to your poor spouse who has worked all day, too. You try not to, but you do."

Whether they're forced to move, are laid off or keep their old jobs, employees of companies involved in mergers face a traumatic transition period.

Although she was offered a job with Foley's in Houston, Mrs. Griffin decided she didn't want to uproot her husband and 15-month-old daughter from the stability of their lives in Dallas.

"We have a house and my family is all here," she said.

She decided to stay home with her daughter until the fall, and then go to graduate school. "It's forced me to make some decisions I probably wouldn't have made," she said.

With 278 mergers and acquisitions involving companies in Texas last year, more and more employees are going through what can be an unsettling experience.

Their families go through it with them, said Helen K. Kreller, director of health systems for Enron Corp., a Houston-based natural gas company. She is writing a book on mergers and has been studying the effects of mergers on employees and their families.

"Mergers can change the identity of the individual, the family, the corporation. Anytime you change anyone's identity, the stress is unbelievable," said Ms. Kreller.

The lower down the ladder a person is in a company, the worse the pressures often are, said Ms. Kreller. "Because the people at the bottom are not the ones eliminated first. The tendency is to move the middle management first. When the information filters down, the pain is unbelievable."

Marriages often suffer during the long period of uncertainty and tension that a merger brings, she said, and children may feel insecure.

If one spouse is laid off, the other may have to go back to work. And economic hardship often forces children to change their lifestyles. "I know some high school students who are choosing a university with the idea in mind that they might not be able to attend all four years because their fathers are in danger of losing their jobs," said Ms. Kreller.

"Mergers can change the identity of the individual, the family, the corporation. Anytime you change anyone's identity, the stress is unbelievable."

Parents can help children adjust to the changing situation by laying out the facts for them and being honest, she said.

Being honest is also important within the family of the companies involved in the merger.

"It's very frightening to employees when they see the performance of the company on the stock market changing, when there are rumors. It's very important for companies to let employees know the truth," she said. They can clear up some rumors, even if they can't spell out everything right away, she said.

"Even if people are going to lose their jobs, it's better for them to know. Then they have a life to go on to. As soon as you can give people information it makes them feel they have a bit of power over their own lives."

RepublicBank, Rod Buchen, vice president of human resources, believes the best advice for families facing mergers is to not focus on the things they can't control. "There are so many of them and other people are working on those things. The real way to be happy and maximize your productivity is to focus on the things you can control," he said.

"To the extent that you can control your performance on the job during a time of uncertainty, you have a bigger say in the future than if you just throw up your hands and go with the flow," he said.

Ms. Kreller said companies can help employees maintain self-respect by handling layoffs and transfers in as humane a way as possible.

Huge individual payments made in farmer program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal payments to cushion private companies against a drop in cotton prices last year soared to $728 million, with nearly $90 million paid to one Memphis merchant, according to newly released figures.

More than a dozen of about 900 merchants, mills, cooperatives and others who shared in the program received individual payments of at least $10 million to offset the government-engineered price drop.

"Obviously there are some very large payments there," Agriculture Department aide Michael Masterson said Wednesday after release of the figures, which had been kept under wraps for six months.

Intense interest focused on the program because of the size of the largest payments, providing various types of middlemen with certificates redeemable in government-owned cotton. It seemed likely they would further fuel debate in Congress over federal subsidies paid to agribusiness concerns.

The overall program did not approach the largest subsidies in the nation's $26 billion farm program. But some individual amounts were believed to be among the largest in recent years.

Defenders of the payments say they were deserved because the 10-cent per pound drop in cotton prices was engineered by the government under the 1985 farm law to stimulate exports. Federal price-supports were lowered and the expected jump in shipments to overseas markets quickly materialized.

But the drop in prices would have victimized holders of cotton stocks by slashing the value of their holdings, and thus some payment was needed to buffer them against loss, according to the program's supporters.

"There was no windfall," William Zarfoss, administrative vice president of the Allenberg Cotton Co. of Memphis, Tenn., said in a telephone interview. He declined to give 1986 sales figures for the closely held firm founded in 1921.

Alenberg received $83.56 million from the government's Inventory Protection Program, designed to offset the price drop, and a related but much smaller First Handler Program also aimed at smoothing the transition.

The largest amount, however, went to Dunavant Enterprises Inc. of Memphis and its California subsidiary, W.B. Dunavant & Co., which received a total of $89.77 million in three payments, according to figures released by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, which administers the Inventory Protection Program.

The service withheld publication of the figures for six months after the payments, saying early release would put the companies at an unfair competitive disadvantage in the marketplace.

Those who shared in the $728 million in payments ranged from the top names in the textile and cotton industries to small-town companies that received only a few dollars. A textile subsidiary of B.F. Goodrich received $760,622 and the Texas Department of Corrections received $458,860.

The J.G. Boswell Co. of Los Angeles, closely watched after being spotlighted last year as a potential major recipient of producer and inventory protection subsidies, received $2.16 million in inventory protection payments.

Man's obsession with lottery drives his family into poverty

DEAR ABBY: I have a big problem with my husband. He's constantly buying lottery tickets. We are always broke, and when I beg him to stop buying those tickets he says if I don't quit nagging him, he will divorce me. Abby, I don't want a divorce. We have six children to support and we're already on welfare. My husband spends the welfare money to buy more lottery tickets. So far he's bought over 1,000 tickets and we have won only $2. Please help me.

DESPERATE IN CALIFORNIA
DEAR DESPERATE: Your husband is a compulsive gambler. He's hooked. And it's more than just the desire to make a big killing — it's an addiction. Please encourage him to attend a meeting of Gamblers Anonymous. It operates on the same principle as Alcoholics Anonymous and Overeaters Anonymous. (People try to resist the habit for one day at a time, and encourage others to do likewise.)

I first heard about G.A. over 20 years ago. Wanting to check them out, I went to a meeting incognito in a blond wig and kept my mouth shut. I found a diverse collection of men and women of all ages with a common bond — an addiction to gambling.

Dear Abby

It's strictly confidential. No one is identified by name nor is anyone required to say a word. There are no dues or fees, but they pass the hat to pay for the coffee and cookies. Anyone who wants to attend is welcome to just sit and listen as I did. There is a "leader" — and old-timer who explains the G.A. program and answers questions, but mostly people just take turns telling their stories. And what stories!

I heard the following: "I'm a bookkeeper for a very large company. I started to steal from the company to play the horses. I embezzled over $100,000 and I'm trying to pay it back before I get caught and go to jail."

"I'm a housewife who's so hooked on bingo, I've even stolen money from my kids' piggy banks."

"I'm a cab driver" ... "I'm an airline pilot" ... "I'm a sportswriter" ... "I'm a bellhop" ... "I'm a shoe salesman" ... "I'm a dentist" ... "I'm a plumber," and the list goes on and on.

There are compulsive gamblers all over the world. G.A. has received letters from Arabia, India, Asia, Europe and South America requesting information.

There are approximately 700 chapters in the United States and Canada. They are usually listed in the local telephone directory. To locate the chapter nearest you, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Gamblers Anonymous, P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles, Calif. 90017. Anyone whose family suffers because he or she gambles is addicted.

Please share this information with your husband, and try to persuade him to attend a meeting. And if he sincerely wants to quit gambling, I'll bet my bottom dollar he can. Good luck.

Clinical nurse specialist shares views

Anne Griffin is a clinical nurse specialist and works as an intensive care unit (ICU) staff nurse at the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

She is today's featured nurse for Texas Nurse's Week.

The clinical nurse specialist is a "new role model in nursing that stresses clinical expertise as a basis for leadership and innovation in patient care," Griffin said.

"A clinical nurse specialist has advanced nursing education and clinical competence to deal with nursing care delivery or patient care problems at the bedside. A master of science degree in a specialty area of nursing practice is a requirement."

She explained that graduate education, ten years of nursing experience and a self-directed program of continuing education enable her to:

- Be an expert on bedside nursing care of the medical-surgical patient.
- Serve as a consultant to other nurses as they apply their knowledge and skills in patient care.

- Teach the patient about the disease process, medications, activities and self-care when discharged from the hospital.

- Work effectively with a variety of people and departments to meet the needs of the individual patient in the hospital setting.

- Develop specific teaching programs for nurses at the ward level to increase their knowledge and skills of patient care.

- Evaluate the quality of care according to standards of patient care and standards of nursing practice.

Her major contribution to health care is being an "adult patient education teacher," she said.

"I believe that the patient should have the information or teaching to understand health care needs to the degree that he/she becomes more responsible for treatment and care."

By the Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — Actor James Earl Jones says he chose his role in a coming Vietnam-era film partly because he enjoyed his years in the Army.

"I was in the Army between Korea and Vietnam, and I'm one of the few people who actually liked it," said Jones, who plays a gruff Army master sergeant in "Gardens of Stone." The film stars James Caan and Angelica Huston and is to be released Friday.

Jones has won critical acclaim and a Tony Award on Broadway, where he is appearing in the Pulitzer Prize-winning "Fences," but says he equally enjoys making movies.

"I have no preference between theater and film," he said in a recent interview from his Broadway dressing room. "In film, that's where one makes one's living. You can't make your living as a stage actor."

LOS ANGELES — Oscar-winning actress Sally Field, who has two teen-age sons, is expecting her third child by the end of the year.

The child will be her first with her husband of more than two years, 39-year-old Alan Greisman, publicist Heidi Schaeffer said Wednesday.

The 40-year-old actress' sons, Peter, 17, and Elijah, 14, are from her first marriage, to high school sweetheart Steve Craig. They were divorced in 1973.

NEW YORK — James Brown, Neil Diamond, Linda Ronstadt, Kris Kristofferson and Crosby, Stills and Nash will perform at a Fourth of July "Welcome-Home" concert sponsored by celebrities for Vietnam War veterans.

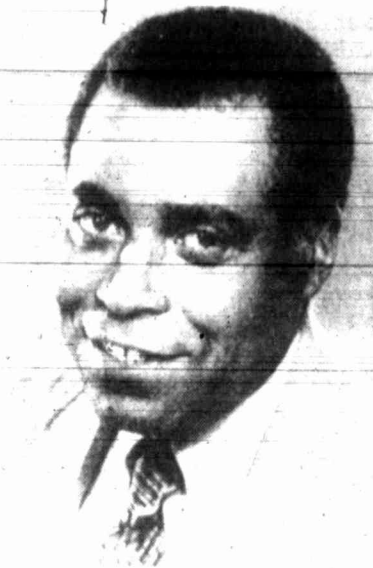

The sponsors of the concert, to be held in Washington's RFK Stadium and shown on HBO, include Jon Voight, John Ritter, Robert De Niro, Gregory Peck, Cybill Shepherd, Pee Wee Herman, Tom Brokaw, Stevie Wonder, Kenny Rogers and Oliver Stone. The money raised will go to veterans' groups.

"I think this is an opportunity for real healing," said Ritter, who portrayed a veteran suffering from the effects of exposure to Agent Orange in the TV movie "Unnatural Causes." He and Voight appeared at a news conference on Wednesday to promote the concert.

"The horrors cannot be undone, but we as a loving people can try to bring them some long overdue attention," said Voight, who won an Academy Award for his role as a paraplegic Vietnam veteran in the 1978 film "Coming Home."

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Linda Marchiano, who as Linda Lovelace starred in the X-rated movie "Deep Throat," is back home two months after undergoing a liver transplant in Pittsburgh.

"I feel absolutely wonderful,"

JAMES EARL JONES

Mrs. Marchiano, 37, said Wednesday as she returned to her home on Long Island. "I'm alive while by all rights I should be dead right now. It makes you take a different outlook on life."

Mrs. Marchiano has said she was held captive and forced to make the explicit sex film 15 years ago.

She underwent surgery March 6 at Presbyterian-University Hospital in Pittsburgh after her liver had been damaged by hepatitis.

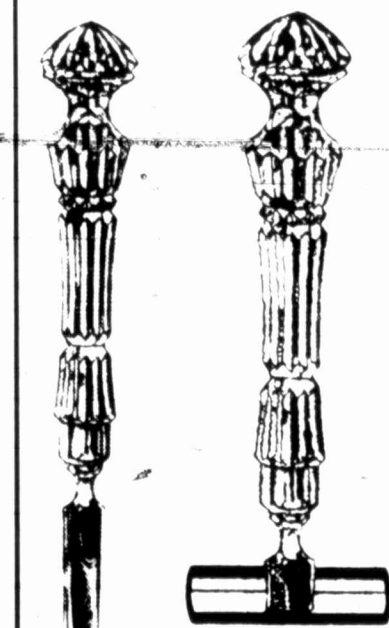

"If I make it through the first year, I'll be excellent," she said.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — For one brief, shining moment, an 11-year-old girl with a brain tumor was swept into the make-believe world of King Arthur by actor Richard Harris and the cast of "Camelot."

The company, appearing in the musical this week in Kansas City, went to Children's Mercy Hospital on Wednesday to see Miriam Harris, who underwent surgery in January and receives radiation treatments as an outpatient. The visit to the Overland Park, Kan., fifth-grader who loves fairy tales was arranged by the Dream Factory, an organization that helps grant wishes to seriously ill children.

Clements taking GOP heat on taxes

AUSTIN — With some Republican lawmakers saying Gov. Bill Clements may have damaged the no-new-taxes cause by declaring his "flexibility" on the question, Clements insists he's only listening to options.

"I'm not making any kind of commitment about what's sufficient and what's not sufficient," Clements said Thursday after a second straight day of meetings with legislative leaders.

"I'm not going to say I'm optimistic. Neither am I going to say I'm pessimistic," Clements said after the session with House Speaker Gib Lewis, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and others.

The three are looking for a solution to the budget impasse which saw the House and Senate approve spending plans that are $2.5 billion and $3 billion higher than Clements wanted.

During a news conference Thursday, Clements insisted he has made no decision about higher taxes. But he also refused to repeat his months-old vow to veto any tax increase that would raise more than $2.9 billion.

"I'm not going to get into that," he said when asked what his veto "bottom line" now totals.

"Look, I'm not going to speculate about what I'm going to sign or not sign. I'm telling you that we are trading ideas and we're exploring all the options," Clements said.

Lewis said after their meeting that Clements may be softening his opposition to taxes greater than $2.9 billion, although Lewis said a solution isn't in sight yet.

Dallas police hearings begin today

DALLAS — Congressional hearings on the use of deadly force by Dallas police are intended to determine if changes are needed within the department, a civil rights leader says.

"This is not to indict the police department itself," said the Rev. Clarence Glover, coordinator of intercultural education at Southern Methodist University and a spokesman on the hearings for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Only two members of the eight-member congressional subcommittee hosting today's inquiry into the Dallas Police Department were expected to attend.

"We're going into it with the attitude that we want to tell our side of the story, and we want to listen to what everyone else says. If they have any ideas for us, we'll consider them," said Assistant Police Chief Lou Caudell, who is coordinating the department's presentation to the panel.

In 1986, Dallas police shot 29 people, 10 fatally. Fifteen of the victims were black, seven Hispanic and seven white. Police and minority leaders said they hope the hearings will be a forum for reasoned discussion of difficult problems.

Bus crash probe still undecided

BEAUMONT — Nobody can probe the wreckage from a fatal bus and tractor-trailer rig collision until attorneys finish arguing about who should be there to do it, a judge says.

A hearing on the matter, which began Thursday, was scheduled to continue today before U.S. District Judge Howell Cobb.

Six people were killed and 19 injured when an eastbound tractor-trailer rig on rain-slick Interstate 10 crossed the grassy median and collided with a westbound bus. Ten of the injured remained hospitalized Thursday, hospital officials said.

Late Tuesday, Cobb issued a temporary restraining order forbidding federal investigators from examining certain wreckage until agreement is reached about how the probe will proceed.

The truck was owned by Graebel Van Lines of Wausau, Wis., and the 45-year-old driver, Wallace Griffin, was released from the hospital after a brief stay.

Griffin told investigators he lost control of the vehicle while braking to avoid slow-moving traffic, according to David Rayburn, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board team probing the crash.

In a petition, Graebel attorneys alleged they were denied access to the wreckage, and that the NTSB planned to move the truck from a Beaumont wrecking yard for tests.

Thomas Kopf, attorney for the NTSB, said both sides so far have been unsuccessful in reaching agreement on the matter.

Spending conferees begin talks

AUSTIN — Senate and House members negotiating a compromise 1988-89 spending bill met briefly Thursday and decided they are not too far apart, but that it may take a lot of talking to bridge the gap.

The 10-members of the influential conference committee quickly agreed not to start serious talks until Monday morning.

"It looks like we have a lot of work to do," said Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple, chairman of Senate conferees.

"When you take the prison issue out, which is going to be a real controversial thing, there's not that much difference," said Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chief House negotiator. "But there are a lot of issues between us to be settled." Rudd predicted it would be the last week of the session before a spending compromise is reached.

"We're not going to be in a hurry," Rudd said. "It's going to be slow for a while."

James Oliver, director of the Legislative Budget Board, told the conference committee there was only an $833.3 million difference in general revenue funds between the Senate bill and the one passed by the House.

One of the main differences, Oliver said, was in prison construction money. The House would take $315.9 million from "bonds or other funds," while the Senate would take $234.2 million from general revenue.

House refuses to send bill back

AUSTIN — A committee chairman says he probably made a mistake in letting it out, but the House has refused to let him take back a bill that would exempt non-profit hospitals from disclosing their financial records.

"We should have taken more testimony. We should have studied it more," Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, told the House.

Wolens is chairman of the House Business and Commerce Committee, which forwarded the Senate-approved bill to the calendars committee, which will set it for floor debate.

Wolens' panel recommended the bill for the uncontested calendar, but he said that had been changed and it would be scheduled for debate with contested bills.

"We didn't know what we were voting on," Wolens told the House. "Why is it so terrible for us to take it back and study it? Maybe I made a mistake as a committee chairman. I'm tending to think I did."

But the House voted 53-73 against sending the Senate-approved bill back to Wolens' committee.

Houston Sen. Gene Green's bill would exempt about 200 nonprofit hospitals from opening their financial records to public scrutiny. The bill also would exempt from disclosure the records of nonprofit, tax-exempt Texas corporations that have religious affiliations.

Woman prompts LULAC dispute

CORPUS CHRISTI — Tony Bonilla, a former national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, has triggered a controversy by appointing a woman judge for membership in LULAC Council No. 1, an all-male organization.

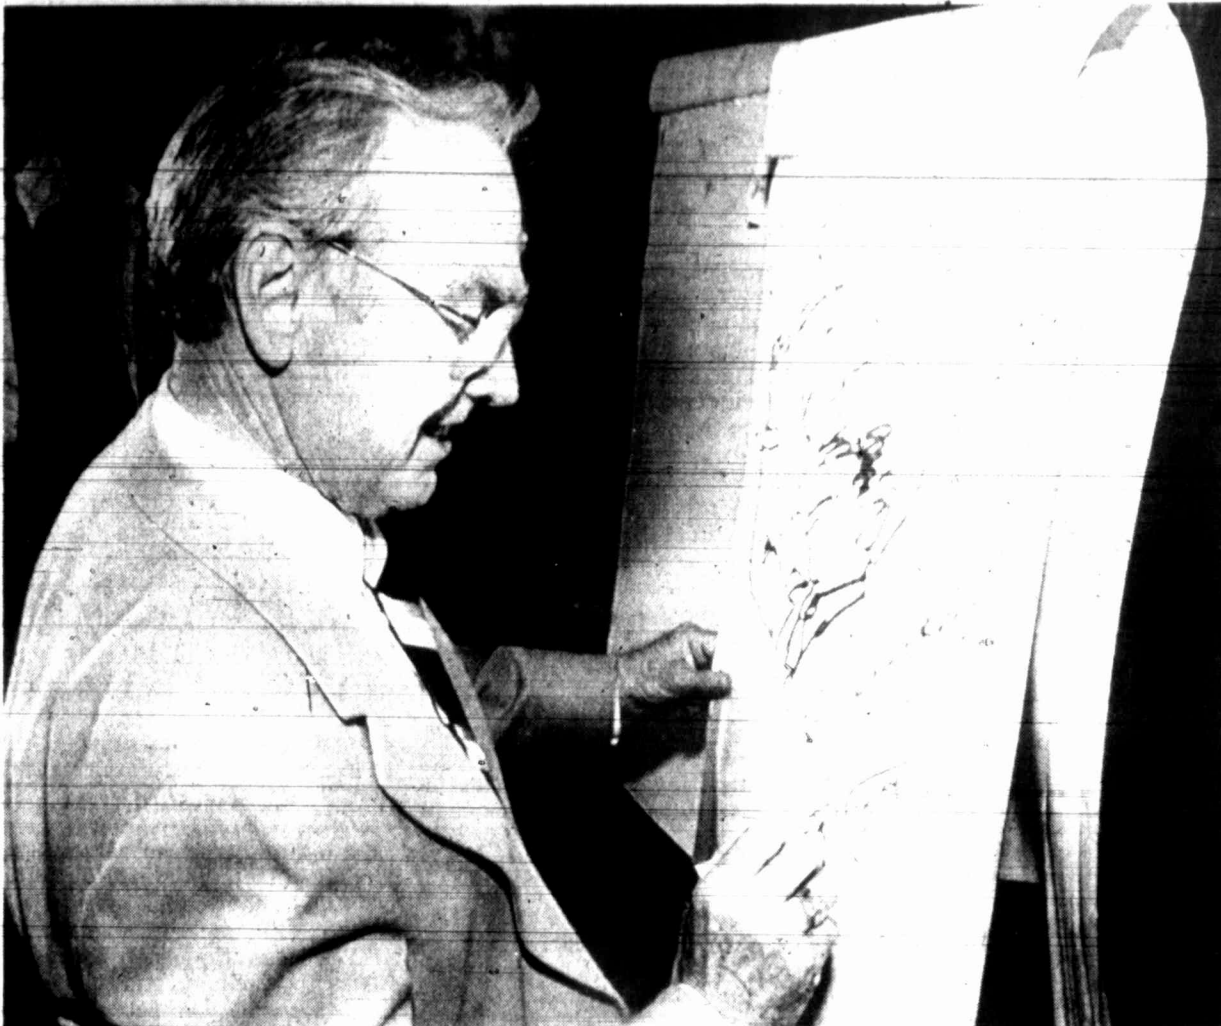

Bonilla's nomination on Tuesday of Hilda Tagle drew criticism from LULAC members of both sexes.

Although several women have applied for membership in that council, the oldest in the civil rights organization founded in 1929, no woman has been accepted for membership in that council. LULAC Council No. 26 in Corpus Christi is all-female.

Under the LULAC constitution, people of either sex are eligible for membership. Traditionally, however, each council can reject a membership application if one negative vote is cast.

The membership application will be considered by a seven-member membership committee, which will make a recommendation Tuesday.

Senate OKs 'Build Texas,' Buddy Holly proposals

AUSTIN (AP) — Two proposals Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby supported as part of a "Build Texas" economic program have cleared the Senate, as well as a "Buddy Holly bill" designed to protect the names of deceased personalities.

The Holly bill would allow survivors of entertainers and other personalities to hold rights to the deceased's name, voice and likeness for 50 years.

The need for the bill was brought to the attention of Rep. Al Granoff, D-Dallas, by Maria Elena Holly Diaz, widow of rock singer Buddy Holly. Granoff's amended bill was returned to the House Thursday on voice vote.

Hobby earlier this month unveiled a $1.1 billion public works program, which he compared to the Depression-era Works Progress Administration.

The plan includes three proposed constitutional amendments to authorize bond sales. Under the plan, $300 million in proceeds would go for prisons and mental health facilities, $400 million for local public works projects and $400 million for water, water quality and flood control.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, said a substantial portion of $960 million in water bonds approved in 1985 already had been committed. His $400 million water bond proposal was sent to the House Thursday on a 30-1 vote.

Sen. Hugh Parmer, sponsor of the local public works proposal, said 750,000 Texans are unemployed, equal to the unemployment figures of the Depression year of 1932.

Parmer, D-Fort Worth, said his $400 million bond measure would make available loans to communities for "critical capital improvements," although Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, said, "To say we can borrow ourselves out of trouble is misleading."

Parmer's proposal was sent to the House on a 25-5 vote.

The third proposal in the bond package was not brought up for debate.

Another proposed constitutional amendment — to authorize the Legislature to create emergency medical services districts — was sent to the House, 31-0.

In other action Thursday, the Senate approved and sent to the House bills that would:

- Allow colleges to consider research in determining faculty workloads.

- Increase from five to eight the maximum number of textbooks approved by the State Board of Education for each grade level and subject taught in public schools.

- Provide more effective tools for the state insurance commissioner and State Board of Insurance to deal with insolvencies among insurance companies.

- Apportion franchise taxes to be paid by banks among the main bank and its branches.

- Define when a person is considered to have left unemployment voluntarily without good cause, which disqualifies the employee for unemployment compensation benefits.

- Validate the creation of the Barton Springs-Edwards Aquifer Conservation District, which would cover a 155-mile square area in Hays and Travis counties.

- Require car rental agencies to inform renters that a standard personal auto policy covers them in case of a collision and additional collision insurance would not be needed.

- Amend the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority Act to seek a "suitable" disposal site rather than the "best" site.

- Establish the Texas Center for Superconductivity at the University of Houston-University Park.

The Senate on a 14-14 vote refused to debate a bill that would create the Dental Hygiene Advisory Committee, which would administer and grade licensing exams. That task is now handled by the State Board of Dental Examiners.

Bill sponsor Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, was asked why dentists oppose her bill, and she said, "Dentists want to control everything in the dental profession."

She said most of the 5,100 dental hygienists are women, and dentist opposition to her bill "is the old traditional technique of men trying to control women."

Guard falls, breaks neck

SAN ANTONIO — An off-duty jail guard died of a broken neck suffered as he attempted to demonstrate safety techniques for a group of school children, officials said.

William Durand, 38, of San Antonio fell off a wooden spool about 1 p.m. Thursday as the guard's 12-year-old daughter and about 125 other elementary school students watched on a ranch in northwest Bexar County.

Industry hones pol skills to blunt Japanese edge

By LARRY BLASKO
Associated Press Writer
A DISPATCH FROM THE FRONT:
WINTER IN SILICON VALLEY
From afar, they make it sound something like George Washington at Valley Forge. Indeed, in the gleaming office buildings and the modest bars and restaurants, there is a sense of siege, but nothing like Bataan or Corregidor. More like a remake of "The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming." Except, make it read "The Japanese" It has been a severe winter for the American semiconductor industry, a winter that has lasted for some 22 months in which Japanese competition and overproduction of those tiny memory whizzes on both sides of the Pacific have created a chaotic market and driven some U.S. firms out of the business.

The federal economic cavalry, wary of an outright trade war, is coming to the rescue at a slow gallop with sanctions that would put a duty on a small fraction of Japanese electronics products. That, coupled with the rising value of the yen and Japan's heavy reliance on foreign trade, has stirred deep-seated fears in Tokyo, over 5,000 miles away.

Will the mere sight of the dust cloud on the far horizon frighten the devils away? Xenophobia is alive and well in this western headquarters of America's largest industry — electronics. When the Pacific-born clouds boil up over the Santa Cruz mountains, some expect Mount Fuji to rise on the horizon.

Not without cause. The Japanese have been dumping their chips at below the cost of manufacture all over the world. Also, despite their promise they would allow U.S. chips to be sold in Japan, they have not done so. In fact the U.S. share of the Japanese domestic market has actually declined since they started making promises. So how can one blame the Americans who remember two bowing, smiling Japanese diplomats in Washington while Adm. Yamamoto was homing in on Pearl Harbor? Tora, Tora, Tora.

But one is forced to look at the other side. Before the Japanese got into the act, the U.S. chipmakers were punching out their product at a quality rate that satisfied the Pentagon, 6,500 failures per million. The Japanese came in with a failure rate of 500 per million. Competition.

World leaders compete to compute

EDITOR'S NOTE — Billions of dollars are being poured into competing U.S. and Japanese efforts to pioneer new computer technologies. The high-tech challenge typifies the race between the economic superpowers. This is the third of a six-part series.

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
PRINCETON, N.J. — Quietly, away from the headline battles over trade, some of the best minds in America and Japan are contending for a 21st century prize, technological leadership in a high-tech world.

In Tokyo, here at Princeton, and at other research centers in between, hundreds of scientists and engineers each day push the "high end" of computer technology, in a race to build the fastest and smartest machines.

"It's a scientific revolution. ... There's a lot at stake. And the Japanese are very tough competitors," says Joseph F. Traub,

For Japan, the race is a crucial test, to see whether its clockwork economy, master of manufacturing technique, can now shift gears, leave behind the smokestacks and take charge in the most advanced of high technologies. Success means dominance of global information industries, and that means world economic leadership in the coming decades.

who runs the national supercomputer center here.

For Japan, the race is a crucial test, to see whether its clockwork economy, master of manufacturing technique, can now shift gears, leave behind the smokestacks and take charge in the most advanced of high technologies. Success means dominance of global information industries, and that means world economic leadership in the coming decades.

American competitiveness may be on the line. But the U.S. effort seems inspired by a more tangible goal: to keep several steps ahead of the Soviets in developing futuristic "smart" weapons.

Except for space, "it is more important that the United States retain world leadership in this area than in any other," said the recently retired chairman of the House Science and Technology Committee, Rep. Don Fuqua, D-Fla.

The research covers two areas: • Stepping up the speed and developing new applications for the ultra-fast supercomputers.

• Designing artificial intelligence systems, computers that grasp and solve problems with inhuman efficiency. The immense calculating power of supercomputers, which now cost up to $20 million each, is used by meteorologists to swiftly predict weather, by oilmen to draw up intricate geological maps, and by chemists to test molecular combinations in the search for new drugs.

Machines with artificial intelligence, on the other hand, can recognize images, understand human speech and provide expert advice in areas ranging from medical diagnosis to factory maintenance.

The military uses of both appear boundless. Supercomputers are now used to design nuclear weapons and jet fighters, and to crack intelligence codes. Computers with artificial intelligence could direct robot tanks or take electronic command of President Reagan's proposed "Star Wars" missile defense.

The two fields are merging in some ways.

Supercomputers have been based on traditional step-by-step computation, through a single powerful central processing unit. They grow faster through advances in miniaturization — more electronic circuits are jammed into the same area.

Researchers in artificial intelligence, on the other hand, focus on "parallel processing," using thousands of small processors in a single machine to work simultaneously on parts of a computational problem. Supercomputer specialists have now begun to adapt this "architecture" to their high-speed machines.

The Japanese, busy catching up in basic computer manufacturing, did not join in supercomputer and artificial intelligence development until the early 1980s. They did it in a characteristically Japanese way, announcing crash programs under the guidance of Tokyo's powerful Ministry of International Trade and Industry. More than $1 billion in Japanese government and corporate funds is going into the effort.

The U.S. government responded with its own programs — the Pentagon's Strategic Computing Initiative, projected to spend $1.2 billion over 10 years, and four university supercomputer centers, financed by an estimated $600 million from the National Science Foundation, state governments and private industry.

The few American supercomputer manufacturers, led by Cray Research and Control Data, still design and build the machines. But hundreds of researchers now linked to the university centers are exploring new uses for them.

In the cool quiet of the Princeton center's 8,000-square-foot computer room, a Control Data Cyber 205 silently searches for oil, explodes gases in an automobile engine cylinder, causes galaxies to collide — all through electronic simulation.

"After Galileo and Newton," Traub told a reporter, "this is the third great revolution, computational science — science not in the laboratory, but in the computer."

The Cyber 205 operates at 400 "megaflops" — a speed of 400 million operations per second. By this summer the year-old center, which is sponsored by a 12-university consortium including MIT, Harvard and Princeton, will have a supercomputer that will churn out the work at 10 billion operations per second — 10 "gigaflops."

Made by a Control Data spinoff company called ETA, that machine will be 250,000 times faster than today's personal computers, so fast it must be kept cool in a liquid nitrogen bath.

The Pentagon work in artificial intelligence — the Strategic Computing Initiative — is carried out by 50 universities and corporations.

They are developing prototypes for an unmanned tank or scouting vehicle driven by computer; a computer "co-pilot" that instantly advises a fighter pilot in evading oncoming missiles, and "brilliant" airborne weapons that search for and recognize targets.

One project is already in operation: a "naval battle management" system installed last year at Hawaii's Pearl Harbor. It collects information about Pacific Fleet readiness and advises headquarters planners on how best to deploy vessels.

Across the Pacific in Japan, "gigaflop" supercomputers are now being produced by Fujitsu and NEC, two of six giant electronics companies in Japan's "Superspeed" project.

The artificial intelligence work, meanwhile, is concentrated at the Institute for New Generation Computer Technology, a think tank of 70 researchers who have taken over one floor of a Tokyo skyscraper. The director, internationally noted computer scientist Kazuhiro Fuchi, said the institute is grappling with broad theory, not applications.

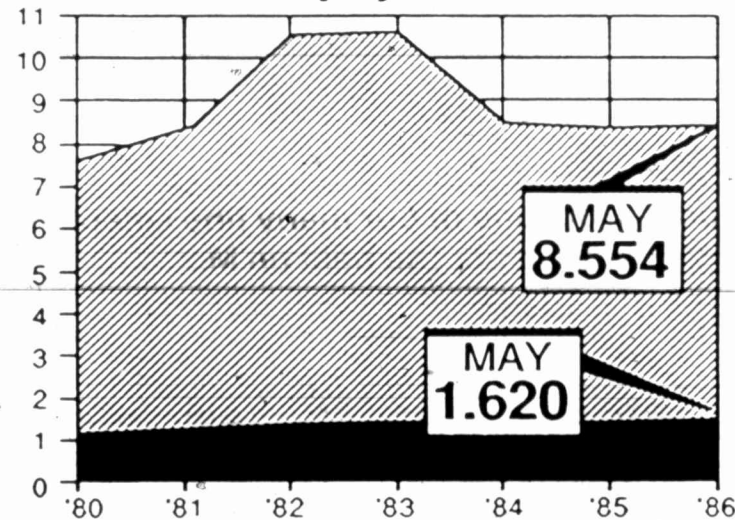

"We are trying to build a new technology ... new architecture. From there, industry can find applications," Fuchi said.

Instructor alleges cheating on FAA controller exam

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An instructor at the Federal Aviation Administration's air traffic control training school alleges that answers to the final exam were available to students, but school officials today said the charge was old and false.

"The allegations that there is a cheating ring or that there is a crucial test being passed around is unfounded," said Bobbi Mardans, a spokeswoman for the FAA's Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center in Oklahoma City.

The Washington Post, in today's editions, quoted the unidentified instructor as saying a packet of answers to the exam was available to students who attended the Oklahoma City academy between August and March.

Howard names coach

Former Texas Tech assistant Jerry Kassins is the new Howard College head basketball coach.

Kassins said his first priority will be to talk to the recruits already committed to Howard College. Assistant Coach Scott Horstman, who will remain with the college as Kassins's assistant, said earlier in the week he was concerned that some of the recruits were considering leaving after Larry Brown left Howard. Brown is now an assistant coach at South Alabama.

The 48-year old coach said he plans to visit the recruits and talk to their parents and coaches.

"As far as I'm concerned, if the kid's been signed, I'm going to take it for granted that he's coming to Howard College," Kassins said.

Kassins comes to Howard from the University of Portland, a Division I school in the West Coast Athletic Conference (WCAC). Kassins was the interim head coach at the school, after being the first assistant this past season.

Prior to going to Portland, Kassins was an assistant under Gerald Myers at Tech from 1983-1986. During that period, Tech won the Southwest Conference in 1985 and won the SWC tournament in 1985 and 1986. Tech also participated in the NCAA tournament in 1985 and 1986.

Kassins said he knows many Texas high school coaches from his days at Tech.

"My first goal will be to contact kids in Texas and make a concerted effort to get kids in Texas," Kassins said.

He added, however, that he is recruiting several prospects from California.

"I've already been on the phone with some coaches and kids," Kassins said.

Kassins's basketball philosophy sounds familiar to Brown's.

"I'd say my philosophy is a philosophy of trying to play the best defense possible with the most pressure possible with the athletes we have. I like to create offense off the defense, and get the ball down the court as fast as we can, but at the same time, to get good shots."

"I like to keep the pressure up on offense as well as defense," he said.

In lieu of Brown's departure after one year, Kassins was asked about his coaching ambitions.

"As far as my ambitions, I think no further than to try and compete in this conference with athletes who play in such a way and carry themselves in such a way as to appeal to the people of Big Spring," he said.

Kassins said he'll run a disciplined program, but one in which the players can "feel at home."

When asked if he contacted Howard first or if Howard contacted him, Kassins said: "You'd be surprised to find out how fast news travels (in the coaching profession) — it travels fast."

Before coaching at Tech, Kassins was the head coach at Alamosa High School in Alamosa, Colorado, which competed in the highest classification in Colorado. In 17 years as a high school head coach, Kassins compiled a 286-136 record, including seven state tournament berths and one state championship.

A native of South Dakota, Kassins played football and basketball at Huron College in South Dakota, and was a four-year letterman and an all-conference football player.

Kassins received his Master's Degree from Adams State College in Colorado. He is married to Patricia Ann Kassins, and has two children, Christopher, 7, and Lindsey Marie, 5.

And, by the way, Kassins likes the three-point shot.

PBA tournament on tap

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

Highland Lanes owner Harold Aberegg said Wednesday he expects a "full house" at the Southwest Regional Professional Bowlers Association tournament this Saturday and Sunday at Highland Lanes.

"If they want a spot, they better get here," Aberegg said.

Aberegg said 96 bowlers are expected to compete for $7,000 in prize money, with a first prize of $2,000.

Aberegg said he put up $5,000 to host the event, and he said he expects to be reimbursed by business at the lanes.

Because Highland Lanes is the host, it was given five house slots for local bowlers. The local bowlers who qualified in a bowl-off were Tom Davis and Mark Fort of Big Spring, and Scott Pope and Bill Theobald of Midland.

Aberegg said he will fill the fifth spot, because he wrote down a higher score than the others could possibly have bowled.

Aberegg said he was hosting the tournament in order to promote bowling and generate money for the city.

"In other words, we'd like to make a bowling city out of Big Spring," he said.

The Southwest Region consists of Texas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Arkansas, New Mexico, Kansas and Louisiana, said Big Spring bowler Phil Ringener.

Aberegg said there is at least one regional tournament per month. He added that this is the biggest tournament yet to be held at his lanes.

All bowlers will bowl an eight-game qualifying block on Saturday, and a four game block Sunday. The pros begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday and 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

Aberegg said the top 12 bowlers will then compete in an 11-match round robin, to begin at 2 p.m. Sunday. The winner should be determined by 5 p.m., he said.

There will be a pro-am tournament Saturday night in conjunction with the regional tourney. The entry fee is $35 per person for men and women, and entry blanks must be received before 6 p.m. tonight, with the spots to be filled on a first come first serve basis. If all the spots are not filled, you may enter at the tournament.

Each bowler will bowl three games with a different pro partner in each game. First place will receive approximately $1,000, to be determined by the number of entries. For more rules for the tourney, contact Highland Lanes.

Ringener will be crowd favorite

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

When asked for an "unbiased" assessment of his chances in this weekend's PBA Southwest Region bowling tournament, Big Spring's Phil Ringener said "six to one."

But if you press the matter, Ringener gives hint that he thinks his chances are a little better than that.

"I feel like I'm bowling real good right now," Ringener said. "I'm going to go in thinking I'm going to win it. If you go in thinking you're going to finish second, there's no telling where you're going to finish."

One thing's for sure — Ringener's not bowling just for the fun of it. This is his job, his livelihood. He is a touring professional bowler.

"It's what I do for a living," he said.

In his best year, Ringener won $38,000. He said all his travel, hotel and food expenses are tax deductible.

Ringener grew up bowling at Bowl-A-Rama, which his father owns. He's been on the tour several years, and has plans to continue.

The summer season begins in Las Vegas on June 5, and Ringener has that and six other events on his schedule.

As you may remember,

PHIL RINGENER
...local favorite

Ringener qualified for the television finals in a PBA event in Cleveland this spring. With a national audience looking on, Ringener just missed advancing to the second television go-round — had one more pin dropped, he would have continued bowling. Instead, he lost 244-243.

It was the Big Spring bowler's fifth time to make the TV finals. He said he's averaged 230 in those five appearances, but he's yet to win a match.

Though Ringener was the house pro at Highland Lanes before going back on tour this winter, he considers Bowl-A-Rama his home lanes. Nevertheless, having bowled at Highland Lanes should give him something of an edge this weekend.

"Being at home's going to be a little advantage — I hope. I've never bowled at home," he said, laughing.

"You can say I've bowled at Highland Lanes, but when the tournament director walks in, he puts the shot where he wants it, and it's like a different house," Ringener said.

He explained that the tournament director will oil the lanes, and that this has a big effect on how the ball rolls and on what the scores will be. Ringener agreed that it's sort of like how golf tournament directors place the holes on the greens.

Ringener said he'll be in the "B" group Saturday morning, which will allow him to watch the first group and get an idea of how the lanes are oiled.

That will be one advantage in Ringener's favor, and he'll have others. For one, he'll wake up from his own bed and ride to the tournament through his own streets.

Perhaps most importantly, he'll have the house on his side.

Cards beat Padres in football score

By The Associated Press

There isn't enough kerosene in the world for the St. Louis Cardinals' arson squad to blow a 14-run lead, but they gave it a good try.

The Cardinals' bullpen is loaded with flame-throwers these days when what they really need are some fire extinguishers.

"Have you ever seen anything like that? I never have," Manager Whitey Herzog said Thursday after the San Diego Padres scored five runs in the seventh inning and five more in the ninth before the Cardinals secured a 17-10 victory. "I wonder what was the biggest blow lead in the final inning in history? This one had all the makings."

Herzog saw his relievers blow eighth-inning leads of 5-2 and 7-1 earlier this month. And despite Thursday's scare, the victory lifted St. Louis back into first place in the National League East, one-half game ahead of the Chicago Cubs, who lost to San Francisco 11-1. In the only other game, Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh 6-3.

If you think Herzog has problems with a bullpen that has allowed 24 earned runs and six homers in its last 16 1-3 innings, consider the plight of Larry Bowa, San Diego's rookie manager, whose club has a 7-23 record.

Skeeter Barnes, in his first at-bat of the season, hit a three-run homer and Jack Clark hit a solo shot among 17 St. Louis hits. The game was scoreless until Clark's seventh homer touched off an eight-run fourth inning, six of them against Andy Hawkins, 0-4. Clark and Willie McGee each had two hits in the inning, with McGee's second single capping the scoring.

Barnes, recently promoted from the minors, connected in the eighth inning off Greg Booker. Winner Bob Forsch blanked the Padres until he was chased in the seventh, when Stanley Jefferson and Bruce Bochy homered for San Diego. John Kruk hit a three-run homer off Ray Soff in the ninth.

Giants 11, Cubs 1.
Rob Wilfong hit a two-run homer in his second NL at-bat to open the scoring in the third inning and Mike LaCoss allowed seven hits in 6 2-3 innings and struck out a career-high nine batters in his first start since April 12.

Wilfong, the fifth player to start at second base for the Giants this season, homered off Ed Lynch in the third inning after LaCoss was safe on third baseman Keith Moreland's throwing error.

With their team losing 11-1 to the San Francisco Giants, members of the Chicago Cubs covered their faces in the dugout Wednesday night in San Francisco. Actually the players were shielding their faces against the winds that howled through Candlestick Park.

Wilfong, who hit 38 homers in 10 American League seasons, was signed as a free agent on Tuesday and called up after playing two games in the Pacific Coast League.

The Giants made it 3-0 on Matt Williams' RBI double in the fourth. Bob Melvin drove in two runs with a fifth-inning double and doubled home another run in San Francisco's three-run seventh. Jeffrey Leonard and Candy Maldonado hit consecutive home runs off Frank DiPino in the Giants' three-run eighth. The Cubs' only run came on Ryne Sandberg's fifth-inning homer.

The victory moved the Giants into a virtual tie with Cincinnati for first place in the National League West although the Reds lead by 12 percentage points. After three days atop the NL East, the Cubs fell to second place, one-half game behind St. Louis.

The loss was the Cubs' first of the season in seven night games. They are 9-3 on the road.

Dodgers 6, Pirates 3

Rick Honeycutt allowed eight hits in 8 1-3 innings and struck out a career-high 10 batters. Honeycutt, who has made 36 starts since his last complete game on Sept. 10, 1985, also drove in a run with a squeeze bunt while Mickey Hatcher had three hits, including a solo homer and run-scoring single.

Twins finally win game against left-hander

After losing to two Baltimore lefties, the Twins thwarted a third left-hander and beat the Orioles 5-2 Thursday.

"We're not looking back. We're going to the future," said Twins Manager Tom Kelly, whose team opens a three-game series tonight against the New York Yankees at Yankee Stadium. Until Thursday, the Twins had not fared well against Baltimore southpaws. Rookie Eric Bell held Minnesota hitless until the ninth inning of a 5-4 Baltimore victory Tuesday night, and Scott McGregor hurled a three-hitter as the Orioles shut out the Twins 6-0 Wednesday night.

But Minnesota salvaged the final game of the series in a dual of losing left-handers. Twins starter Frank Viola snapped a four-game personal losing streak while winless Baltimore starter Mike Flanagan fell to 0-5.

It was the only game played

Thursday in the American League. "I knew my ability," said Viola, 2-4. "I knew I would come around."

Viola went 7 1-3 innings, allowed six hits, struck out six and walked two. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth inning to pick up his seventh save.

"He put hitters on the defensive instead of pitching defensively," Twins catcher Tim Laudner said of Viola's comeback.

Twins' outfielder Kirby Puckett said Viola's teammates had confidence he would bounce back.

"You knew Frankie was going to be all right," Puckett said. "All he had to do is throw his game and everything would be fine."

Kelly agreed with his players' assessment of Viola.

"He's very capable of winning 20 games," Kelly said. "He's one of our main shooters and he has to contribute for us to win."

Gary Gaetti had three hits and drove in two runs for the Twins, who moved to within a half-game of first-place California in the AL West.

The Twins scored two runs in the first inning. Al Newman walked, and scored on Dan Gladden's double. Gladden then scored on a ground out by Puckett.

Baltimore cut the lead to 2-1 in the sixth inning when Cal Ripken

Jr. scored on a sacrifice fly by Nelson Simmons. But Minnesota scored three runs in the seventh to take a 5-1 lead.

Newman led off with a double to left, went to third on Gladden's single and scored on a single by Puckett. After Puckett stole second, Tony Arnold relieved Flanagan. Gaetti then singled to center, scoring Gladden and Puckett.

The Orioles scored their final run in the eighth when Ripken doubled and came home on Ray Knight's single.

Flanagan gave up eight hits, five runs and three walks in six innings.

Norman leading Nelson golf

IRVING (AP) — It had been a long time coming, but Greg Norman finally got the first round he'd been waiting for.

"Isn't it nice? It's only taken five weeks," Norman said after a 6-under-par 64 on Thursday had given him a share of the first-round lead in the $600,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

"I've been playing well but, except for the Masters, I haven't really been a serious threat in anything I've played in," said Norman, who dominated world golf last year.

This year he has fallen well behind his 10-victory pace of 1986. He's won only once this season, in Australia.

Larry Mize's pitch-in playoff birdie beat Norman in the Masters playoff and only some weekend heroics — a 66 in the Heritage, a 65 at Houston, a 67 last weekend at Las Vegas — brought him respectable finishes.

A 341-yard drive on the par-5 seventh hole — Norman's 16th of the day — set up a 3-iron shot that provided him with a 4-foot putt for an eagle-3 that tied him with Payne Stewart.

Stewart, who has lost tournament playoffs in Texas in each of the last three years, also got around the TPC course at Las Colinas without a bogey.

"I come to Texas expecting to play well. I'm relaxed," Stewart said. "I just know if I do my job, I'm going to be there on the weekend."

Norman and Stewart shared a one-shot lead over Gary Hallberg, Fred Couples and Gary Krueger, all tied at 65 after a day of exceptionally low scoring.

"The golf course was reasonably docile," Norman said. "The winds were gentle. But if we don't get rain and the greens firm, scoring could go up."

The group at 66 included Ben Crenshaw, D.A. Weibring, Mark Wiebe, Tom Byrum, Keith Clearwater, Steve Elkington and Duffy Waldorf.

Formula for getting to state not logical — but it works

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

ACKERLY — Jay Fryar and his coach Wes Overton may not have the most logical method of getting to state, but it works.

No, their methods probably won't ever appear in Track and Field News, but Overton and his star field event performer are going to Austin next weekend. Fryar, a junior, will be Sands' only representative in track, competing in the high jump and long jump.

Fryar earned the honors by finishing second in both events at the Region I-A meet in Levelland last weekend. Fryar tied for first in the high jump at 6-5, but finished second via a jump-off with Sander's Brent Schlinke. In the long jump he went a career-best 22-0 to finish two inches behind winner Justin Bednarz of Wilson.

At the start of track season, it was a well known fact that the 6-0, 180-pounder had a good chance to go to state in the high jump. Although he jumped a school record 6-4 last year, a knee injury right before the district meet kept him from making a good showing. At district he jumped 6-0 and finished fourth.

Last year the long jump was an event he competed in to score points. Last year he didn't crack the 20-foot barrier. He really had no intentions of going big places in that event.

This year was no different that last. Fryar worked hard on the high jump and running events, and spent very little time in the long jump.

And while some coaches prefer their athletes to work on their events at least four times a week, Overton only has Fryar practice the high jump twice a week.

"I never worked on the long jump, just in the meet," he said. Overton explained his coaching logic.

"The only time Jay looked at a long jump pit was during the meet. The pit we have here is terrible. It's very hard and it's hard on Jay's legs. So we never worked on it."

Now Overton has himself a state-bound double performer, and Fryar is as surprised as anyone.

"I knew I had a good chance of going to state in the high jump, but I really didn't think much about the long jump. It really freaked me out when I realized I was going in both."

But Fryar almost didn't have the chance to go in two events. That's because he and his coach almost decided to bypass the long jump at regional.

"We talked about just running through the pit and scratching three times," said Overton. "At all the meets Jay usually spends his time running from the high jump to the long jump. Since he hadn't worked on the long jump that much, we were going to just concentrate on the high jump."

Sands Mustangs high jumper Jay Fryar gets set to go over the bar during a practice session at the Sands track field earlier this week. Fryar will compete in the high jump and long jump at the state meet.

"At one time time I was just standing in the middle of the field with my high jump shoe on my right foot and long jump shoe on my left foot, just waiting for them to call my name," said Fryar of his adventure at the regional meet.

Fortunately, Overton and his pupil decided to try the long jump. "When he jumped 21-7 on his first attempt I knew he had a chance and we decided to keep jumping," Overton said.

Fryar went 22-0 on his next jump and it held up the rest of the way for a second place finish. He then went on to jump 6-5 in the high jump, which was good for second place but three inches under his career-best.

At Austin, Fryar won't have to worry about running back and forth from one event to another because the long jump is Friday and the high jump follows on Saturday.

"He probably won't know how to act, not having to do both at the same time," joked Overton. "Really, I think it will be an advantage though. I think it's better having the long jump on Friday since the high jump is his better event. He'll have time to get the butterflies out by Saturday."

Fryar won't compete in a state qualifier's meet this weekend. "He'll get some rest this weekend," said Overton. But will Fryar concentrate on the long jump more in the upcoming week?

"No, not really. I hate to change now," Overton said. "We'll keep the same routine. We'll work on the high jump Monday and Tuesday and take off the rest of the week. That way we'll keep the spring in his legs."

After all, why tamper with success?

Lakers, Rockets win in routs

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Golden State Coach George Karl said it wasn't really an NBA playoff-quality performance — by either team.

But the Los Angeles Lakers, who beat Karl's Warriors 116-101 Thursday night to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven series, mostly disagreed.

"We played four quarters of basketball and didn't try to win it in one quarter," said Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 25 points.

"We sustained the offense for 48 minutes; we really had a team effort."

"I expected the Warriors to come out and play a tough game, and they did."

The 40-year-old Abdul-Jabbar, in the playoffs for an NBA record 16th year, scored 12 points in the final quarter as the Lakers finally shook off the tenacious Warriors.

"Kareem really was aggressive and he got us back up again," said Laker guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who scored 23 points, had eight rebounds and eight assists.

The series now shifts to Oakland, where the Warriors beat the Lakers in both meetings during the regular season, for afternoon games Saturday and Sunday.

Houston beat Seattle 102-84 in the only other playoff game Thursday night. Seattle leads the series, which resumes Saturday at Seattle, 2-1.

Tonight, Atlanta travels to Detroit with that series tied at 1-1.

and Boston takes a 2-0 lead to Milwaukee.

Karl said he was disappointed with his club's intensity in the second loss to the Lakers.

"I think we beat ourselves," he said. "I don't think either team played very well; it wasn't a good NBA playoff game."

"We're the underdogs. We've got to come out and battle and we didn't do that."

"Now we've got to win both games in the Bay Area. We did that against Utah (in the first round), but the Lakers are a great team."

"We're going to have to play great basketball."

James Worthy had 20 points for the Lakers, while Joe Barry Carroll led Golden State with 22.

The Lakers, who won all three regular-season games against the Warriors at the Forum but lost by 10 points and by 15 points in three games in Oakland, figure they'll have it tough again in Northern California.

"They'll come out with a lot of passion," Johnson predicted of the Warriors.

"It's their crowd and they always play well against us up there."

"It will be the toughest game of the series," Abdul-Jabbar predicted. "I expect them to be fired up."

Golden State, which lost the opener 125-116 when the Lakers broke loose for a 49-point third quarter, was able to keep Los Angeles from making any sizeable runs in the second game.

two outs to almost tie the game. The game ended with Ross Roberts striking out the last batter with the bases loaded. Roberts pitched the whole game and got the win. Wes Hughes was the losing pitcher for the Ponies.

The Cards got hits from Chris

Martinez, Danny Fiero, Chris Alexander, Johnny Rodriguez and Roberts. Jason Henderson, Steven Cantu, Torbin Lancaster, Danny Ybarra, Felix Rodriguez and Hughes all got hits for the Ponies.

The Ponies are 4-1-1 for the season while the Cardinals are 2-3.

Pokes RB has surgery

DALLAS (AP) — Cowboys running back Robert Lavette underwent arthroscopic surgery Thursday at Baylor Hospital to repair torn cartilage in his right knee, a spokesman for the NFL team said.

Lavette, a fourth-round 1985 draft pick from Georgia Tech, can resume running in 10 days and begin regular off-season training in three weeks, spokesman Dave Pelletier said.

Alabama loses center

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama junior center Derrick McKey applied for the NBA draft after being declared ineligible for his senior season because of dealings with an agent, school officials said today.

Athletic Director Steve Sloan said McKey "made an error in judgment" that will block him from playing his senior season.

Earlier this week, the 6-foot-9 center said he wanted to stay in school for his senior year rather than turn professional. Underclassmen have until midnight tonight to apply for the NBA draft.

McKey led Alabama to the Southeastern Conference title last season, and was named the conference's player of the year. He could not be reached for comment this morning.

Sloan did not disclose the name of the agent involved with McKey. But a Mobile radio station, WKRG, reported that McKey signed a contract with New York agent Norby Walters.

MAJOR LEAGUE

Cardinals 10, Ponies 9

In action at the National League field, the Cardinals held off the Ponies for a narrow win.

The Ponies, down 10-5 in their last at bat, scored four runs with two outs to almost tie the game. The game ended with Ross Roberts striking out the last batter with the bases loaded. Roberts pitched the whole game and got the win. Wes Hughes was the losing pitcher for the Ponies.

The Cards got hits from Chris

Martinez, Danny Fiero, Chris Alexander, Johnny Rodriguez and Roberts. Jason Henderson, Steven Cantu, Torbin Lancaster, Danny Ybarra, Felix Rodriguez and Hughes all got hits for the Ponies.

The Ponies are 4-1-1 for the season while the Cardinals are 2-3.

Edmonton Oilers Mark Messier (11) fires the puck past Detroit Red Wings goalie Greg Stefan to put the game out of reach in the final minutes of the third period Thursday during the Stanley Cup semi-finals game in Edmonton. The Oilers won the game 3-1, tying the series at one game each.

Oilers even series, 1-1

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — With Wayne Gretzky bottled up for the second straight playoff game by the Detroit Red Wings, it was time for the Edmonton Oilers' other superstar to shine.

"When it was 2-1, late in the game, we made a mistake and gave Mark Messier too much room," Detroit Coach Jacques Demers said. "We got caught pinching (bringing defensemen into Edmonton's zone) and it was over with. Give Messier an inch, he's going to take it. We said before the series that we're as scared of Mark as we are of Wayne Gretzky."

Messier scored twice Thursday night, the first giving Edmonton momentum and a 1-0 lead 52 seconds into the game, the second clinching the contest with 1:22 left, as the Oilers evened their Stanley Cup semifinal series at one game apiece with a 4-1 victory.

"He's a big key," said Detroit goalie Greg Stefan, who made 31 saves but was caught off-guard by both Messier wrist shots. "We've got to stop that guy. We can't let him shoot. When he's on his game, he's a tough hockey player. That's their team: when Gretzky isn't going one night, they've got Messier going on another line."

The Oilers, who were stunned 3-1 in Game 1 Tuesday night, wanted to get off to a better start in the second game of this best-of-seven Campbell Conference final series.

"We thought it was important to go out and try to get the lead," Messier said. "We were pretty well prepared tonight. It was important for everybody to think they have to take charge. We have so many talented guys that sometimes we get caught waiting and watching for somebody else to do it."

Messier is neither a waiter nor a watcher. Said Gretzky, assisted on a goal by Jari Kurri with 2:32 left in the first period that gave Edmonton a 2-0 lead: "You need that big goal and Mark got that big goal. That really got us going, really gave us a little bit of an explosion."

The Oilers are expecting a big explosion Saturday night when the series resumes in Detroit. Monday night's fourth game also will be played at Joe Louis Arena.

The Oilers, who also lost Game 1 of their first-round series against Los Angeles before winning the next four and then sweeping Winnipeg out of the next round, have won all four of their playoff road games.

Messier's first goal, the 50th of his playoff career, came after he made an end-to-end rush before surprising Stefan with a 20-foot wrist shot.

From that point on, Edmonton, the NHL's highest-scoring team during the regular season, was often able to skate freely through the neutral zone that the Red Wings had so thoroughly controlled in Game 1.

Kurri's short-handed goal capped a 2-on-1 rush with Gretzky. That moved Kurri past Stan Makita into ninth place on the all-time playoff goal list with 60 and past Yvan Cournoyer into 13th place on the overall playoff scoring list with 128 points.

After Bob Probert scored off a power-play scramble in the second period to make it 2-1, Detroit came close to tying the game with 5½ minutes to play when Mark Kumpel beat Oilers goalie Grant Fuhr but hit the inside of the post. And then it was Messier time, as he whistled another wrist shot past Stefan.

Jari Pouzar added an empty-net goal with 29 seconds left.

Detroit, which has lost 14 of its last 15 games to Edmonton, is looking for its first Stanley Cup final appearance since 1966.

"We're not concerned with their dress. We accept the alcoholic, the drug addict and unwed mother. We want to bind up the broken and bring them to Jesus."

— Arnold Tonn

Arnold Tonn watches his wife, Mona Lou, practice for the Sunday service recently. The couple owned Fox's Pawn Shop and have transformed the shop into Spring Tabernacle church — a place for people to worship "just as they are," said Arnold.

The Tonns

God's pawns in game of life

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Lifestyle Editor

Imagine: A dingy, dusty pawn shop filled with greasy tools, guns, jewelry, stereos, TVs, guitars and other second-hand junk.

Imagine now that same setting transformed into a church. That's the evolution of Spring Tabernacle, 911 W. 4th St., which began as a ministry in a back room of Fox's Pawn Shop, owned by Arnold and Mona Lou Tonn since 1974.

This is no typical church with rows of pews and stained glass windows. Rather, it's an old storeroom featuring freshly painted walls and new carpeting.

Fifty-three chairs — some purple, gold, black and brown in all shapes and sizes — form the 'pews' in this modest setting, which reflects the make-up of the people.

One lady brought her favorite easy chair, because it makes her feel more at home while she's attending services, Mona Lou said. Others have brought cushions for the folding chairs and have their favorite places marked.

The remains of the pawn shop are just a memory, but without it Spring Tabernacle would not exist.

"The Lord laid it on my heart to witness to the people who came into the pawn shop. I became concerned about the people who were lost," Arnold said.

Although there are many churches in Big Spring, the Tonns believe their church reaches community members who wouldn't feel comfortable in a structured, denominational church.

"I don't mean to put anyone down, but some of them don't have the proper clothes and care," Arnold said.

He explained that many of his members are experiencing tough times and need a place where they can worship "just as they are."

"We're not concerned with their dress. We accept the alcoholic, the drug addict and unwed mother. We want to bind up the broken and bring them to Jesus," Arnold said.

He admits that his Christian concern wasn't alone so intense.

"We've been Christians for years," Arnold said. "But most of the time I was serving myself or the Devil — doing what I wanted to do instead of what God wanted me to do."

The couple began preaching at the Bennett House, now Golden Plains Care Center, on Sundays in 1966. They also worked at the Sunday school outreach at Baptist Temple for 19½ years, and spent time ministering at the Veterans Administration Medical Center on Sunday nights.

Although their lives seemed to include God and ministry, the couple didn't feel they were serving the Lord completely, Arnold said.

"Mona Lou had an experience at the VA. She became concerned that we weren't where we should be in our lives to minister to others. She got a desire to reach for more and was baptized with the Holy Ghost on Sept. 20, 1985," Arnold said.

"I saw a change in her. I began to ask the Lord to baptize me with the Holy Ghost. I also received baptism — in November 1985."

Arnold was quick to add that although he has been spirit-filled, he doesn't think he's better than anyone else.

"I'm just better than I was and closer to the Lord."

His real concern for others began with his two children.

"Everywhere we went I requested prayers for them because they were lost. I was praying and God revealed to me that I was only concerned about my children and not His, too. He put a burden on me for the lost people."

Arnold immediately began witnessing to everyone who came into the shop, he said. "So many people who came into the pawn shop had never been approached by a minister, he said.

"As I began to witness to different ones, they accepted the Lord. One person in particular had been on drugs. I got him out of jail and brought him back to the pawn shop. He accepted the Lord and repented. We began to help his family. He wanted to change his family, too."

The idea to have services in the back room of the pawn shop began as a dream one night, Arnold reported.

"At 3:30 a.m. I woke up. I had a dream about us holding services in the back of the pawn shop."

"We decided to pray about it," Mona Lou added.

The day after the dream, two people approached the Tonns with contributions for their ministry, Arnold said.

"But we didn't have a ministry! I had had a dream the night before, but that was it," Arnold recalls. "They said the Lord had laid it on their hearts to give to our ministry."

The couple admits that they really didn't want a church — they just wanted a place for people to worship.

But the need they saw was too great to deny.

The ministry began in their home with Friday night prayer meetings.

"We became filled with the love of Jesus. We just wanted to help others. We saw many people saved and filled with the spirit."

After the couple began conducting services in the converted pawn shop, they ended the services at their home.

Church services are Sundays at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. and Wednesdays at 7 p.m. Children's church is Sunday at 10 a.m.

What began as a simple ministry has blossomed into a 60-member congregation, the couple noted.

"We've never encouraged anyone from another church to come here. There are lots of people in Big Spring who need a church to go to. We get people from all walks of life and love prevails here."

Arnold said people have assumed that he quit the pawn shop business to get into the church business.

He refutes that assumption, explaining that he couldn't devote as much time to the Lord if he had the pawn shop too.

"We lift up Jesus and he sends them (people) here. We never pass the collection plate." Rather, one is available near the back, "and people give generously."

He reported that he doesn't expect anyone to make a contribution to the ministry — unless they want to.

"We just want to lift up Jesus and give him the credit. If anything comes from Spring Tabernacle, it's because of God. He helped us begin with nothing."

Married 34 years, the couple has only one regret: "That it didn't happen to us years ago," Arnold said.

Religion roundup

By the Associated Press
ARLINGTON, Va. — About 100 bishops representing four Methodist denominations have appealed to American people and their leaders to reclaim firm standards of integrity.

"No society can endure when basic codes of morality are violated," the bishops representing more than 14 million Methodists said in a "statement to the churches and the nation."

Urging people to "reclaim the simple and ordinary principles of right living" and asking government leaders to fulfill their responsibilities "with the integrity of the public trust," the bishops cited signs of moral decline, saying:

"The sad state of much in intercollegiate athletics, misconduct within religious communities, charges of cheating with inside information in the stock market, graft and misuse of public funds, are all symptoms that 'winning by any means' is becoming a way of life."

Referring to funneling of aid to Contra rebels in Nicaragua at a time when Congress had stopped such aid, the bishops said:

"The integrity of government is compromised when private individuals and groups are allowed and encouraged by public officials to circumvent the legitimate functions and laws of government."

WASHINGTON — Deploing

"Hebrew Christian" groups that try to convert Jews to Christianity, Episcopal Bishop John T. Walker told an interfaith meeting at Georgetown University.

"Aiding these groups is demeaning to both Christians and Jews. If we truly believe that Jews are the people of God, we should not lend support to groups that seek to convert Jews to Christianity."

OSLO, Norway — A Norwegian researcher says the more people earn, the less religious they are, and that the low-income, most religious people are the most satisfied with their financial situation.

Sociologist Trude Nergaard noted those factors in a report of recent studies. "Religiosity in Norway," she said twice as many low-income persons see themselves as religious than those of high income.

Also, she said, twice as many of the most religious consider themselves happy as do those in the higher-income, less religious group.

ST. LOUIS — Contributions to Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod congregations rose by $49 million, or 7 percent, in 1986 to a total of $715 million, although membership declined by 9,000 to 2,723,756, the denomination reports.

Nazarenes plan special services

The Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster, will feature Dr. R.L. (Dick) Strickland and The Light Company at special services May 8-14. Strickland will be highlighted May 8 and 9 at 7 p.m. and May 10 at 10:45 a.m. and 6 p.m.

He is an ordained minister and evangelist from Springfield, Ohio. His messages are Christ-centered, dynamic, practical and pertinent to the times, directing the gospel to problem areas like money, marriage, mysteries, memories, motivation and ministry.

Services May 10-14 will be targeted for children and teens by Willie and Mavis Watts of The Light Company. They minister through the use of puppets, illustrated sermons, felt-o-graph story telling and dynamic child interest ideas.

Youth to conduct free car wash

The youth group of College Baptist Church will conduct a free car wash at Cousin's Convenience Store, 4th and Gregg streets, May 9 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Members of the group have sold advertisements to sponsors who have pledged 5 and 10 cents per car washed.

Proceeds will be used to sent the youth group to Six Flags in June and to camp in July.

Everyone is invited to bring their car for a free wash.

TV ministry has inherent problems

FORT WORTH — Those people who are wringing their hands in glee about the demise of TV ministries are very premature, said Texas Christian University religion professor Dr. Ron Flowers.

Although some individuals involved may suffer, Flowers does not believe the damage will be fatal to the ministries as a whole.

Many criticisms the TV ministries have faced are partially a result of the medium itself, said Flowers.

"The need to raise money in order to keep broadcasting has shaped the TV ministries because more and more time, energy, effort and inventiveness have gone to the fund-raising side of it," explained Flowers.

The need to keep the message simple is another restraint of the broadcast medium.

"One of the reasons the people who are most prominent on TV are fundamentalists is because they have tended to take a simplistic approach to religion," said Flowers. "I don't mean that in a critical way but simply in a descriptive way and that's why fundamentalism lends itself to the TV format."

Missionary from Africa to speak

SAND SPRINGS — Ron Bostick, former missionary to Africa, will speak at Salem Baptist Church at 11 a.m. on May 10.

He and his wife live in Abilene while they are on furlough from the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. The couple's next assignment is in Australia.

A pot luck lunch will be served after the service.

Haney to preach on Mother's Day

Don Hal Haney will minister at a special Mother's Day service on May 10 at 10:30 a.m. at the Living Water Christian Fellowship, 600 E. FM 700. Haney is a Big Spring native. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.O. Haney of Big Spring.

He recently returned from a five-week ministry tour of Southeastern Australia. He ministered at 29 concerts from the rural to the metropolitan areas of Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide.

Revival services begin May 10-14

GAIL — The First Baptist Church of Gail will conduct revival services May 10-14 featuring John Stepp, evangelist, and Gary Newman, singer. The revival will begin with Sunday school at 9:45 and services at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Services will continue each night at 7.

Steppe of Garland is a former missionary of Brazil and professor of New Testament and Greek at Criswell Bible College.

Newman is a graduate of Criswell Bible College and is the pastor of Tyland Baptist Church in Tyler.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a Saturday to do those things and see those persons who have proven stalwart and satisfactory in your life. Use caution in any undertakings today.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan your activities so that arguments will not surface. Partners could be in an irate mood, so maintain your poise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study your appearance and see how best to improve it. Your mate may be a little testy today, so be careful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get busy improving your home. Tonight you may find your fondest pleasures lacking in excitement.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Though the conditions at home need a bit of adjustment, invite guests in tonight.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) A business situation arises that lets you forget a different business worry, but by handling one you solve the other.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You need to study a personal matter more before you can start any action on it. Avoid a greedy friend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A private affair can spoil your morning if you let it. Show consideration for your mate and try not to disturb this person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A new contact could prove trying. Your mate may be demanding, but remain pleasant and poised.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you are conscientious in handling an outside affair you get good results. Be your independent self now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) It is wise to dig up further facts connected with an important matter, so wait before moving ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan how to be more precise where your accounts are concerned. Show more loyalty for your mate.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Avoid long talks with an associate since this could result in an argument. You find it hard to keep promises now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will need to learn patience. This child will want everything to proceed exactly as desired, so teach this one to be more objective and learn to cope with life's vicissitudes. A profession allowing the expression of this humanitarian is the best choice.

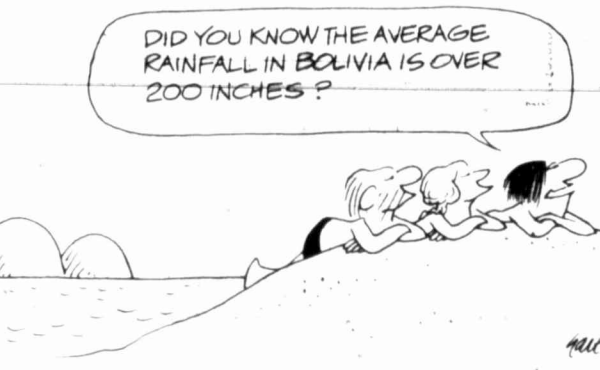

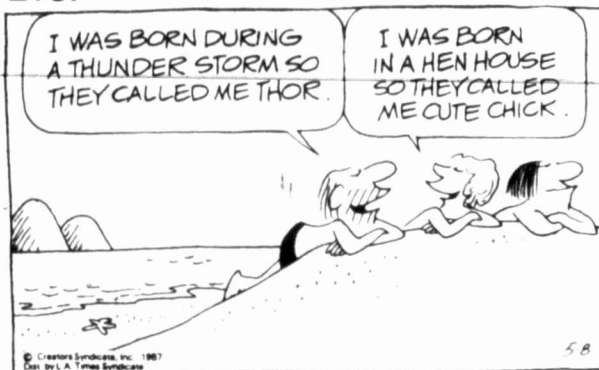

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
