

Guard shoots, kills White House intruder

By CHRIS CONNELL

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Authorities said today they are puzzled about what motivated a cab driver who scaled a White House fence and threatened a guard with a three-foot pipe before being shot to death.

Washington police said the intruder, Chester M. Plummer, 30, raised the pipe in a threatening manner and ignored repeated orders of an Executive Protective Service guard to halt on the White House lawn Sunday night.

The guard, Pvt. Charles A. Garland, fired a single shot that hit Plummer in the upper left chest and felled him about 60 feet from the eight-foot fence he had scaled along Pennsylvania Avenue.

Plummer's name was not included on a list of about 38,000 persons considered a potential threat to government officials, said special agent Lewis McClam of the Secret Service. He said the agency is unaware of any grievance Plummer might have had against the government.

"We're trying to find out the purpose, the reasoning" of the incident, McClam said.

The police said Plummer, a 30-year-old Washington cab driver, reportedly had a criminal record, but was not involved in any previous intrusions on the White House grounds.

A police sergeant said Plummer's motive was unknown. After talking with Plummer's parents, the sergeant said, "He never indicated to them he had any qualms with the President." Plummer, a bachelor, was estranged from his parents, he added.

Secret Service spokesman Jack Warner, asked whether the incident would cause any security changes at the White House, replied, "We constantly review our security procedures and find no problems with the outer perimeter at this time."

The White House recently installed crash-proof gates costing $550,000. A man crashed into the old gates in a car on Christmas Day 1974, and in February 1973 an AWOL soldier landed a helicopter on the White House lawn amid a hail of bullets from guards. Last November an unarmed intruder came within a few feet of Susan Ford, the President's daughter, on the first of his three illicit entries onto the grounds.

But no previous incident resulted in death or serious injury.

A dispatcher at the Red Top Cab Co. in Arlington, Va., where Plummer worked, said, "He was really a nice guy. He was quiet."

Plummer was shot several hundred feet from the White House, where President Ford and his family were in their second floor quarters. It was not known whether Ford heard the shot, but White House spokesmen say he was informed of the incident.

An ambulance squad tried to revive Plummer with heart massage on the White House lawn. He stopped breathing en route to George Washington Hospital, where efforts to revive him continued. He was pronounced dead at 11:05 p.m., about 90 minutes after the shooting.

A Secret Service official said, "The individual was observed earlier ... by EPS officers, but did not make any overt attempt at that time to arouse suspicion as to a possible penetration."

Plummer set off an alarm and was "immediately detected" by Garland and another officer when he scaled the fence, and Garland approached him alone, the official said.

Garland, 25, will be placed on administrative leave pending a routine grand jury investigation, the police said. He became an officer last January in the EPS, the uniformed branch of the Secret Service.

Reagan names senator as running mate choice

By DOUG WILLIS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan said today he has selected U.S. Sen. Richard S.

Schweiker of Pennsylvania as his vice presidential running mate if he wins the Republican nomination for president.

Reagan said he knew he was breaking with tradition in announcing his choice for a vice president in advance of the convention.

"Since I now feel that the people and the delegates have a right to know in advance of the convention who a nominee's vice presidential choice would be, I am today departing from tradition and announcing my selection," Reagan said in a news conference.

He refused to answer any questions and left immediately after reading a 350-word statement.

There was no immediate comment from Schweiker.

Reagan, a conservative challenger to President Ford, said that Schweiker, who has a more moderate image, is someone "whose basic beliefs are compatible with my own."

It was not clear what affect Reagan's chances for winning delegates in Pennsylvania. There are 25 uncommitted delegates among the 103 members of the Pennsylvania delegation, according to Associated Press tabulations.

Both Reagan and President Ford have claimed enough delegates for nomination — 1,130 are needed — but continue to battle for each and every delegate as the convention draws near.

Ford has 1,085 delegates, Reagan 1,025, according to the AP survey.

Valentin R. Ortega and his family, granted a temporary reprieve from deportation by the Border Patrol, leave the Pampa police station with friends this morning. The family of illegal aliens will stay in Pampa until Mrs. Ortega, nine months pregnant, delivers her child.

Pregnant alien allowed to stay

By JEANNE GRIMES

Pampa News Staff

The bureaucratic eye closed briefly this morning and a family will be allowed to stay together in Pampa, at least for the time being.

Valentin R. Ortega, 35, his wife, 30-year-old Concepcion Ortega Rodriguez, and their three children are illegal Mexican aliens arrested for deportation to Mexico.

Ortega and his brother-in-law Juan Antonio Rodriguez, 22, were stopped by Patrolman Roger Scott for a traffic violation Saturday. Scott, realizing the pair were illegal aliens, arrested them and this morning Traffic Officer Sue Matthews was sent to 316 Davis to bring in the rest of the family.

Local responsibility for the family should have ended with the arrival of the Border Patrol, but Mrs. Ortega, nine months pregnant, presented a transport problem.

Aside from the medical risks of attempting the long journey into the Mexican interior, there were also legal considerations that gave immigration officials headaches.

Any child born in the United States, regardless of the parents' nationality, is a U.S. citizen and there's no way to deport that child. The mother is allowed to remain in the U.S. to care for the new citizen and any other children she may have that are dependent on her remain also.

The father, who may be able to support his family, is deported however and the family often winds up on the welfare rolls.

Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills added that the family has been in Pampa only a short time (they came here from Kansas or Oklahoma) but they were able to pay Dr. Edward S. Williams and Highland General Hospital in advance for the delivery and hospital stay.

Officials contacted Dr. Williams for his opinion of the travel risks to Mrs. Ortega and were told she had already had some contractions and could have the child almost any time. He recommended she stay in Pampa for delivery.

Contacted by The News for additional information, Dr. Williams' office reported they are unable to put out any information on a private patient.

Friends of the family waited at the police station for the Border Patrol officer to decide who could stay in Pampa and who would have to be sent back to Mexico.

The officer said that many times pregnant illegal aliens come to the U.S. deliberately to have their children, knowing that the government cannot deport them.

But this, according to a friend, was not the Ortega situation.

"The only reason she got pregnant was because she didn't have anyone to take her to get birth control," she said. "She didn't want any more kids."

The Ortigas came to the U.S., she added, to make a better living than they could in Mexico.

Following a conference with the family, the Border Patrol officer granted Ortega a pass to remain in the U.S. until one week after the child is born. Then he is supposed to turn himself in for deportation. Mills said Rodriguez was taken today for deportation.

Mills said that the Border Patrol makes weekly trips to El Paso from Amarillo, sending illegal aliens back. From El Paso, they are flown deep into Mexico.

The illegal alien situation is one that has many agencies concerned, Mills said.

"We are beginning to develop in Pampa an area of illegal aliens," he said, adding that leads to an increase in crime.

Girl sees 3-year-old shoot playmate dead

By TERRY COLVIN

Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Nine-year-old Marie Barcroft thought it was play when a 3-year-old threatened her and her father with a .357 magnum pistol. Then she watched in horror as the youngster turned and killed her 7-year-old friend.

"It was just the awfulest thing I ever saw," said the young South Baltimore girl after her friend's death Sunday.

"Jeffrey just stood there for a moment with a big hole in his stomach and blood all over the place. Then he fell over."

The victim, Jeffrey Krausch, was shot once in the chest from point-blank range, police said. He was pronounced dead at South Baltimore General Hospital shortly after 2 p.m.

Police would not reveal the name of the youngster who shot Jeffrey.

The father of the 3-year-old is a security guard and neighbors said they had seen the gun in his car on previous occasions. But police said the 3-year-old and his 5-year-old brother took the gun from a kitchen table in a house where they and their father were visiting.

Marie was sitting with her father, George Barcroft, on their porch enjoying Sunday's springlike weather when the boy and his brother came out of a nearby house where they were visiting.

He just came up to us and pointed this gun in my face and said, 'I'm going to shoot you and I'm not going to miss.' I thought it was just play," said Marie.

According to Marie, just before the shooting the two visiting children had argued with Jeffrey and a playmate about the younger children poking holes in the Krausch's front lawn.

The Krausch family lives around the corner from the Barcroft family and the house where the two unidentified children were visiting.

As far as the shooting itself, Marie said, "I don't think the little boy knew what he was doing."

He didn't even say nothing to Jeff," Marie said. "He just pointed the gun. His brother cocked it and the little boy pulled the trigger."

The mortally wounded boy fell against the side of his house. Barcroft said he jumped to his feet and screamed at the two younger boys, who ran inside the home they were visiting.

Barcroft then called an ambulance as the youngster's mother cradled her son's head, sobbing. "Oh my baby."

Jeff and I were real good friends. We went to the same school and everything," the girl said.

A spokesman for the city state's attorney said no charges would be filed against the gun's owner. The spokesman would not elaborate.

City park becomes golfers' neighborhood

By TIM PALMER

Pampa News Staff

Pampa's Hobart Street Park is a neighborhood away from home for approximately 35 people here for the Tri-State Senior Golf Tournament.

The dozen-camper caravan sprang up last week as the golfers arrived. Throughout the week the chrome-plated neighborhood will nestle among the park's greenery while taking advantage of its facilities.

"It's great of the city to furnish us a place to stay," Evelyn Smith, wife of an Arlington player, said. "I've never been to a place like this."

A number of her fellow park residents agreed. "We always appreciate Pampa's hospitality," added John Short of Midwest City, Okla., here for his fourth Pampa tournament. He participates in several of the contests on the golf circuit, and finds "one of the nicest ones is this one here in Pampa."

Like Short, several of the camper families keep coming back to the city park.

The campers are lined up like a circle of covered wagons, and the folks on the golf trail usually get together at sundown for community activity.

According to Short, "we get out and cook steaks. Everybody gets together and brings a dish and we have a pot luck-type meal."

The neighborhood has virtually the same members each year. "A lot of people have been here since we first came," Mrs. Smith explained. This is their fourth tournament, too, and she's seen the park community grow. "There are some new ones," she said as she scanned the 12 or more campers. "Last year there were only about six."

Besides the cookouts, the reunited golfers usually have a lot to talk about, or as D.A. Harkrider of Brady, Tex., put it, "we shoot the bull."

During the day, when the men are out on the course, the wives can usually find something to do. "I stay busy," Mrs. Smith said. "There are a lot of activities for the ladies." When she doesn't spend the afternoon shopping, the Country Club offers a wives' putting tournament; and courses are open at Clarendon and at Celanese, west of Pampa.

Those deciding to stay around the camp might take advantage of the park area and its tennis courts. Several of the travelers brought lawn chairs, and their mobile facilities provide on a small scale, all the comforts of home — the Smiths even brought their dog along.

"Not many hotels will allow that," she said, which is one advantage the park has over other accommodations. "We like the convenience of the mobile home," she continued. "It's like a motel on wheels. We have our own kitchen, bathroom ... it's very comfortable."

But nothing lasts forever. Following the six-day tournament here, the group will split up, either moving on toward greener courses, or like the Jake Watsons of Floydada, returning to the comforts of a regular home.

"I can stand it for a week," she said, standing in her compact environment. "After that I'm ready to go home. I get cramped."

Bunk bed menace

It had to come. Sooner or later, a government agency just had to feel compelled to regulate bunk beds.

The agency involved is the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. It is very concerned about bunk beds.

According to the commission, for instance, last year an estimated 13,500 bunk bed-related injuries were treated in hospital emergency rooms. Of this number, children under 15 years of age accounted for 87 percent and one-third occurred to children under five years of age.

Of the injuries tabulated in 1975, 16 percent involved fractures; eight percent strain and/or sprain; 30 percent contusion and/or abrasion; 35 percent laceration; four percent hematoma and/or concussion; seven percent other.

Most of the injuries occurred to the head or face, followed closely by contusion-abrasions. Overall, the body part most frequently affected in bunk bed injuries was the head.

If you've been leaping into and out of bunk beds with elan these days, unconcerned about the hazards attendant on such activity, do not worry. The worry part is being taken care of by the commission.

You should know, however, the major kinds of injury patterns involved. Types of falls include rolling out of the top bed while sleeping (in some cases there was no guard rail and in others the guard rail gave way); falling out of the bunk while awake and playing (?); falling while climbing the ladder; and falling while climbing on the bed frame without using the ladder.

All right now. We've established the major types of falls. Let's do something about them. (1) Seems simple enough to avoid rolling out of the bed while sleeping or playing by firming up the old guard rails.

(2) Ascertain that the ladder on the bed is sturdy and secure before climbing up or down. (3) Quit that playing in the bunk bed. (4) Quit that climbing on the bed frame without using the ladder. (If this sort of nonsense continues, let it be known you intend to smear all the climbable parts of the bunk bed with axle grease and only those who want to get grease all over them will be stupid enough to try to climb around the bunk beds involved.)

We find it impossible to share the commission's alarm about the bunk bed hazards, perhaps because the dangers seem too easy to prevent.

We think it's water beds the commission needs to worry about. No telling how many drownings are apt to occur this year because of faulty water beds. And consider, if you will, the situation that could develop if the water beds became shark infested.

It's difficult to conceive that, what with one thing and another, one of the most dangerous things we can do these days is go to bed.

A more dangerous thing, it seems to us, is getting out of bed to confront all those government-imposed rules.

We can see no reason for government regulation on this issue, however. So back off, U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

A revealing 'filler'

We have often wondered why those individuals who sing the praises of socialism never seem to get around to comparing socialism, as they imagine it would be, with conditions that exist in countries where the concept has been imposed and is consistently carried out.

Suggest to such individuals that socialism, by its very nature, leads inevitably to regulation of every facet of the individual's life by the political state, even to the most minute detail, and one is greeted by expressions of utter disbelief mixed, as often as not, with outright anger. Their minds, filled to overflowing with theory in the abstract, seem simply unable to comprehend, or even entertain, the reality of the concept when subjected to concrete practice.

Even so, we couldn't help but ponder the ideologue's reaction assuming he happened to read an objective bit of news which appeared in a recent edition in the form of a "filler." (A "filler," in the trade, is a short item used to fill out a column of print.) This one, in particular, was limited to the bare essentials. Dated Nis. Yugoslavia, it read.

"Actor Dragoslav Zikic was supposed to eat during an evening stage performance at a theater, but he was hungry and ate the meal before the show. He was fined two percent of his wages for a violation of work discipline involving a 'requisite object' of the show."

Short, but oh, how revealing!

For Yugoslavia, you see, is a thoroughlygoing socialist state and the theater, along with the actors, is bureaucratically controlled, rather than being a market place venture.

IRS 'goes easy' on Rockefeller

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The

Internal Revenue Service (IRS) remains silent on why it permitted Vice President Nelson Rockefeller to pay "gift taxes" on a $50,000 payment to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger rather than insisting that Kissinger pay the higher federal income tax rate.

Tax law experts point out that the Supreme Court in the Moses Duberstein case said that "a voluntary executed transfer of property from one to another, without any consideration or compensation therefor, though a common-law gift, is not necessarily a 'gift' within the meaning of the statute."

The high court ruled that Duberstein had to pay federal income tax on the transfer of a Cadillac to him from a business friend because he had furnished the names of potential customers to the friend, and that the "gift" Cadillac had to be considered "a recompense for past services or an inducement to be of further service in the future rather than a gift."

The ruling was the governing decision when IRS officials were deciding whether Rockefeller's "gifts" to Kissinger and others were truly "gifts" or were subject to federal income tax by the recipients.

The $50,000 "gift" to Kissinger was made just prior to the time the former director of special studies for the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, Inc. and Harvard professor became chairman of the National Security Council in the Nixon administration.

Other recipients of the so-called "gifts" included former New York State Republican Chairman L. Judson Morhouse ($86,000) and William D. Roman, chairman of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey ($550,000).

The "gifts" to Morhouse and Roman were in the form of "loans" while they were serving in a public capacity, in which it would have been of doubtful legality to have made gifts. These loans were subsequently cancelled and Rockefeller paid "gift" taxes on the transfers, without challenge from IRS officials.

The "gifts" to Kissinger, Morhouse and Roman were admitted only after the Gannett newspapers revealed the Kissinger gift, and Rockefeller immediately took the offensive to assert that he had paid "gift taxes" on the transfers and that it was all quite proper as far as IRS officials were concerned.

The emphasis in the questioning of Rockefeller and others during the Senate and House confirmation hearings centered on the public policy question of gifts by a wealthy man to people in public service. There was no exploration of the details of the transactions and relationships of the parties to determine if the facts did not bring these transfers under the Duberstein ruling.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd (D-W. Va.), a member of the Senate rules committee, noted that the transfer to Kissinger took place as Kissinger was starting work as a public official in the Nixon administration, where his decisions might be useful to Rockefeller's political or economic.

In the House Judiciary Committee, Representative Donald Edwards and Representative Edward Mezey made the same points about "public interest" but did not raise the other relevant question as to why the IRS did not require that Kissinger, Morhouse, and Roman pay income tax on the money received from Rockefeller.

The Supreme Court ruling stressed the importance of close scrutiny of such transfers to determine if they should be treated as "gifts."

"They (the Duberstein and Stanton cases) present situations in which payments have been made in context with business overtones — an employer making a payment to a retiring employee; a businessman giving something of value to another businessman who has been of advantage to him in his business."

Importantly, if the payment proceeds primarily from the constraining force of any moral or legal duty, or from the incentive of anticipated benefit of an economic nature, it is not a gift.

"And, conversely, where the payment is in return for services rendered, it is irrelevant that the donor derives no economic benefit from it."

"I have looked into the one that involved Dr. Kissinger," President Ford said.

"I think to put this in proper perspective you have to recognize that Governor Rockefeller is a very, very wealthy man and that he has been extremely generous with many, many charities over a good many years, and he obviously sought to compensate former employees or friends for whatever services they performed."

It was obviously satisfactory to the Ford administration, which had a political stake in Rockefeller's nomination, but if it was indeed compensation to Kissinger in any respect, then federal income tax should have been paid.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

From ex-Pampans in Indonesia

Editor:
Greetings to all our good friends in the Top of Texas from Surabaya, Indonesia.

I was happy to receive a clipping from Jack Reeve, covering the recent erection of the 96' oil derrick as the first concrete start of the Oil and Gas Museum. I found it hard to believe this had actually taken place. I know so many people who worked so hard toward this goal. A few I would like to mention are: Kay Fancher, Roy Bourland, Thelma Bray, Clotell Thompson, Fred Neslage, and of course, many others. It would have pleased me greatly to have witnessed this in person. Good luck in your efforts to enlarge the museum, only wish I could be there to help.

Here in Surabaya, there are no oil derricks although years ago there were a few. Indonesia

Cities Service, Inc., has production from oil wells in the Java Sea in about 185' of water and located about 55 miles, by helicopter, from Surabaya. Some of these have produced as much as 5,000 bbl oil per day. Now our best wells are producing around 1,200 bbl-day. This is a very costly operation as are all marine operations. It is quite a change of pace from my past experience in the Panhandle.

Jeanne and I certainly miss the many good friends we had the pleasure of knowing and working with in your great city. We especially miss the First Methodist Church, Rotary Club, Chamber of Commerce, our good neighbor and many others. We still miss all of you and tell our new friends all the great things about Texas. A special thanks goes to the many wonderful people who have written and each letter is read many times.

We met our daughters, Suzan and Jan, in Jakarta on June 5th and they had many interesting experiences to relate. They visited Honolulu, Tokyo, Kyoto, Osaka, Hong Kong, Singapore and Jakarta. They had no problems of any kind but did find Japan the most difficult country as so little English is spoken.

We haven't completed plans for their return trip but hope they can go home via Europe. We are trying to cover some of the most beautiful and interesting parts of Indonesia in the short length of time they are here. We spent five days on Bali and it is truly beautiful. You may have that Rockefeller stopped there on his recent Far East tour and also the recent OPEC meeting was held there. They have spent a weekend up in the mountains in the beautiful and wonderfully cool town of Tretes and also saw the famous Wayang Orang dancers. They are planning another long weekend to the famous historical city of Jogjakarta in Central Java.

Indonesia is a very beautiful country with such lush vegetation and reminds us of Hawaii with its many gorgeous flowers and shrubs. All of you would enjoy the fruit and flower markets. Fresh fruit in Java is plentiful, delicious and amazing in its variety and also, very inexpensive.

Sometimes we have found it difficult to make the many adjustments necessary and we wish we were fluent in the language. So far we feel the experiences we have had, the places we have visited, the friends we have made, the good health we have enjoyed have more than compensated for the difficult adjustments.

In closing may I say that friendships are what make life worth living and we value all those made in Pampa. Looking forward to seeing you all in December.

and against 'em

It would be pretty difficult, I think, to live in a community without forming opinions about some of the various governmental bodies and private businesses that regulate, administer, provide services, or otherwise touch the lives of the community's residents.

Newspapering folks are lucky. We can report on such things that appear to be amiss when we observe them in the course of covering new beats.

But most people have few alternatives to carrying around inside themselves all the worries and helpless feelings created when something is being mismanaged to their discomfort, danger or displeasure.

And on the other side of that coin, there are many fine things offered in a community that people often take for granted. There are services provided that go beyond the call of duty and folks too often forget to express appreciation for those.

In the attempt to do something about all that, and in an attempt to learn public sentiment on several matters, I have prepared a little survey.

Officials critical of Olympic judges

By JOHN VINOCUR
Associated Press Writer
MONTREAL (AP) — "Frankly," said the U.S. diving official, gesturing at an elderly judge, "that guy wouldn't know a jackknife from a piece of camel dung. But he doesn't hurt us all that much. We can live with him."

In another corner of the city, a Canadian basketball official was talking. "There are guys refereeing here who go back to the days when they didn't even bother running up and down the court. The truth is I could go out with a car and round up 10 guys on street corners in Montreal who could do a better job than half the Asians and Europeans. Yet, under the circumstances, it's the best system we have."

The American gymnastics boss was digging into the officials, too. "Anybody watching on television, without knowing the first thing about gymnastics, could see that there was something wrong when all you had to do was walk across the beam without falling to get a 9.9. It's a political circus, friend."

The comments came from Tom Gompf, manager of the U.S. diving team. Bob Hunt, director of amateur basketball in Canada, and Frank Baer, executive director of the U.S. Gymnastic Federation. They illustrate a general dissatisfaction and a general resignation about the quality of Olympic officiating.

In several Olympic sports, judgment completely determines, or at least markedly affects, who wins and loses. But a look at the officiating in diving, gymnastics, basketball and boxing shows that politics enters into every one. But there is not much to be done about it as long as competitors wear the names of countries on their jerseys.

Politics is built into the system for two reasons. The first is obviously one of human nature: officials tend to score or judge in a way that could help one of their countrymen. They also tend to score or judge in a way that will maintain their friendships with the sports federation leaders in their countries—those people who do the recommending for the officiating posts and, in the end, say who will visit Munich, Montreal or Moscow.

The reason for the politics is that the international sports federations, such as the swimming or gymnastics governing bodies, have their own political coloration. The swimming group, called FINA, is Western dominated and its president is an American, Dr. Harold Henning. Because gymnastics was a stepchild that mainly interested Eastern Europe until just recently, the gymnastic group is Communist dominated.

In each case, the gymnastics and diving panels reflect the coloration of the federation itself, usually with some subtlety, sometimes with less. In gymnastics, the men who pick the judges come from a technical committee made up of representatives from the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Finland, East Germany and Spain. In diving, they come from recommendations made by the International Diving Commission to FINA's executive bureau—both clearly dominated by the capitalist world.

"Basically," said Baer, "the gymnastics technical committee being what it is, Eastern Europe just does what it wants. There's a semblance of fairness, but those people are setting up the judges panels the way they want to."

In the case of an appeal by an American official on a Soviet judge's decision in gymnastics, it would be the technical committee's Czechoslovak chairman who would do the deciding. But, in the case of diving, if a Czech had a complaint, it would be acted on by his capitalist friends.

The result in both sports is a situation where the group in power tends to maintain its medal supremacy.

Traditionally, international basketball officiating has been a horror show from the American point of view because the United States is the only basketball power that rarely plays under international rules.

"The United States and Canada are bothered by the level of the officiating here because our level at home is so far ahead of what it is elsewhere," said Hunt.

But there is nothing much to be done since the international basketball federation has created a system in which each team in the Olympic tournament brings one official and adds them to a group of 10 others from neutral countries. An American official would not be assigned to the pool in which his team is involved, but he might be given a preliminary game in which Russia was playing. A Soviet official handled the United States' narrow victory over Puerto Rico, and the Puerto Rican coach called the officiating atrocious.

In the basketball final, the participants are allowed to reject one of the officials proposed for final.

There has been surprisingly little controversy so far in boxing following accusations of bias and incompetency at Munich in 1972. A jury rates officials as the competition goes on and weeds out those who seemed to be inexperienced or indecisive.

Nuclear industry wants weapons control

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear industry group recommended on Saturday that the United States develop cooperative measures with other nuclear-technology nations to control the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

It said the spread of nuclear weapons capability to still more nations might be hampered if others were discouraged from establishing their own fuel processing facilities.

This could best be done, it said, by providing assurances to nations adopting atomic power that their fuel processing needs will continue to be met by the United States and the other countries which already supply processing services.

The report was issued by the committee on nuclear export policy of the Atomic Industries Forum (AIF). The forum, with headquarters in Washington, describes itself as an international association of more than 600 institutional organizations interested in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Its committee on nuclear export policy is headed by George J. Stathakis, general manager of the nuclear energy programs division of the General Electric Company.

Carl Walske, president of the AIF, acknowledged to reporters that the group, in recommending "confidential diplomacy" where necessary, was in fact proposing that the nations which already have fuel-processing technology establish a "secret blacklist" against its transfer to other nations which they think can't be trusted with it.

Walske also said, in replying to questions, that such cooperation to blacklist the countries could, in theory, become a form of economic cartel by which the present suppliers of fuel processing services could prevent the development of new, foreign competition.

But Walske said he did not think this would happen.

The question of exporting nuclear technology is closely linked with the issue of preventing "nuclear proliferation" — the spread of nuclear weapons to nations that don't already have them.

Non-proliferation is established U.S. policy; but so is the policy of exporting nuclear equipment and materials for peaceful purposes, such as atomic power plant reactors and their fuel.

Although a nation determined to develop nuclear weapons can do so if it has a reactor, the technical knowledge and some money to spend, it is generally believed that development of a major nuclear weapons stockpile would be greatly eased by ownership of fuel processing facilities, which can serve just as well to process nuclear bomb materials in large quantities.

This fear recently turned otherwise routine exports of nuclear fuel to India into a controversial issue before the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, after India achieved a nuclear explosion in 1974 and began developing fuel reprocessing facilities.

Tower predicts Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., says he thinks President Ford will win the Republican presidential nomination and, if that happens, Ronald Reagan would not accept the second spot on the ticket.

Tower, appearing Sunday said on CBS' "Face the Nation," also was asked to evaluate former Texas Gov. John Connally as a vice presidential choice. Tower said: "I think he would be an excellent one."

Tower was asked if Connally would be hurt by the trial, in which he was acquitted of charges of accepting money to influence a milk price decision. "I think the fact that it was a burn rap and the government didn't have a case will probably enhance his popularity," Tower said.

Tower said he feels Ford will have about 1,150 committed delegates when the Republican convention begins in Kansas City Aug. 16. It takes 1,130 delegates to win the nomination.

Campaign workers for Reagan have said Reagan has 1,140 delegates. The latest Associated Press count gives Ford 1,096 and Reagan 1,024, with 138 uncommitted.

Tower said he thinks Reagan is qualified to be president, but "I don't think he's as qualified as President Ford is." And Tower said he accepts Reagan at his word that he wouldn't accept second spot on the ticket.

"I think that the ticket would probably be better enhanced by someone other than Gov. Reagan," he said.

Tower also got in some links at the opposition, charging that the Democrat-controlled Congress has been responsible for big government and big spending. He said Ford's vetoes of appropriations bills have been like trying to stop a runaway horse.

William Henry Harrison was the president with the most children — 10.

Third Russian satellite fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have suffered their third straight failure this year in testing a satellite-destroying system, U.S. intelligence sources report.

The latest failure occurred July 21 when a Russian Hunter satellite failed to stay in orbit, the sources say.

According to U.S. specialists, the Hunter satellite was sent up to try to destroy Russia's Cosmos 839 satellite which had been lofted into orbit 12 days earlier.

American analysts say they do not know what is causing Russia's apparent technical problems.

The Russian effort to develop an operational anti-satellite system dates back about 10 years and has proceeded in fits and starts.

There were only five successful launchings out of more than 20 attempts before testing halted in 1971. Soviet flight tests resumed in February and all three attempts since then have been flops, U.S. intelligence sources say.

The Russian satellite destroyer is said to be a vehicle about 20 feet long, weighing about 2½ tons at launch.

Equipped with five main rocket engines for making orbital adjustments and maneuvering, the interceptor is believed capable of closing in on its target at the rate of 1,300 feet per second. Experts say it can come within 100 feet or less of the target satellite before exploding on radio command from the ground. Intercepts have been made at altitudes between 120 and 550 nautical miles, U.S. sources say.

There are obvious military advantages to being able to knock down or blind an opponent's intelligence-gathering satellite. Spy satellites using cameras, infra-red sensors and various other monitoring devices are particularly important to the United States as a means of keeping track of missile tests, deployments and other military developments inside Russia.

Of special concern are U.S. satellites on guard against possible Russian missile attack.

Dr. Malcolm Currie, the Pentagon's research chief, said last winter that "we are very concerned about satellite vulnerability." He said U.S. scientists are working on ways of assuring the survival of American satellites.

The United States has not tried to develop its own satellite-killing weapons systems since the 1960s.

Police may add three in kidnaping search

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — Investigators say as many as five persons may have been responsible for kidnaping a busload of Chowchilla school children and imprisoning them for 18 hours in a buried truck.

One man is in jail, two more are being sought and authorities said Sunday that two more persons may be named in the nationwide manhunt.

"There has been some talk of a fourth and a fifth person being involved," a law enforcement source told The Associated Press. "But we haven't gotten far enough into the investigation to be sure."

On Sunday, newspapers quoted investigators as saying a middle-aged man may have masterminded the July 15 kidnaping.

The bus carrying 26 children and their driver was stopped at gunpoint as they headed home. They were imprisoned in a moving van buried in a rock quarry 95 miles away in Livermore but escaped unharmed.

Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates said it seemed "logical" to assume that at least four people were involved.

Federal and local arrest warrants have been filed for Frederick N. Woods IV and James L. Schoenfeld, both 24. Woods' father owns the quarry where the van was buried.

Schoenfeld's 22-year-old brother, Richard, surrendered Friday and was being held in the Alameda County Jail.

The federal arrest warrants described James Schoenfeld and Woods as armed and dangerous. The FBI entered the case on the assumption the two men have fled the state. The FBI said unconfirmed sightings of them were reported Sunday in Tennessee, Oklahoma and Illinois.

Meanwhile, an investigator told the San Francisco Examiner that "We're definitely pursuing the possibility that there are other suspects in this case. These others might be the brains behind the whole thing."

And the Oakland Tribune quoted a source close to the investigation as saying there is "a possibility that an older male was involved in the kidnaping, and there are some good leads to back it up."

According to the victims, including 55-year-old bus driver Ed Ray, two of the captors were men in their 40s and 50s. Authorities have refused to explain the obvious discrepancies between those descriptions and the youthfulness of Woods and the Schoenfelds.

Schoenfeld will be transferred Thursday to Madera County for arraignment. Authorities say he will face 43 counts: 27 of kidnaping for ransom and 16 of robbery. Clothing and other personal items were taken from the victims.

Uganda threatens war with Kenya

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Replying to a new veiled threat of war from Ugandan President Idi Amin, Foreign Minister Munyua Waiyaki says Kenya will defend itself if attacked.

"But we have no interest in fighting Uganda," Waiyaki added.

Amin said Sunday that Uganda may be forced "to resort to desperate action" to break an economic blockade he said Kenya is waging against his country. He reported that because of this alleged blockade, Uganda had only enough gasoline to operate emergency vehicles for five days.

Uganda normally gets its petroleum products from the Kenyan refinery at Mombasa. The Kenyans say they have stopped shipments to their landlocked neighbor because Amin owes $54 million for previous deliveries, and other supplies are not going through because the Kenyan truckdrivers are afraid of Amin's army.

The Kenyan foreign minister said no more Mombasa gas and oil will be delivered to Uganda until Amin pays what he owes, and all future deliveries must be paid for in cash.

"We are under no obligation to subsidize the Uganda economy," said Waiyaki, adding that Amin could get his oil and gas from "wealthier countries." Presumably he meant Libya, with which Amin has close ties.

Amin claims Uganda has paid for everything it has received.

Radio Uganda said Amin had sent messages to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and Secretary-General Eteki Mboumoua of the Organization of African Unity asking them to send fact-finding missions to look into his charges.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said that as far as he knew, no such request had been received.

Gearhart body returned Sunday to US

NEW YORK (AP) — The body of Daniel Gearhart, an American mercenary executed in Angola, has been returned to the United States for burial.

The plain wooden box carrying the remains of Gearhart was unloaded Sunday from a Portuguese airliner and placed in a cargo area at Kennedy Airport overnight. It was to be flown to Washington today.

Gearhart, who was 34, was a native of the Washington suburb of Kensington, Md., where his wife, Sheila, and four children still live. No members of the family were on hand at the airport.

Gearhart served with the Special Forces in Vietnam and was working as a mechanic on cafeteria equipment when he got his job in Angola through an ad he placed in "Soldier of Fortune" magazine.

He was captured by Cuban troops within a few days of arriving in Angola.

Funeral services were tentatively scheduled for Wednesday.

Mutscher named judge

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — Former Texas House Speaker Gus Mutscher, convicted of bribery conspiracy in 1972, was released early from probation today, and was to be named county judge at Brenham.

District Court Judge J. Neal Daniel, who presided at Mut-scher's trial in 1972, signed the order today releasing Mutscher from the sentence of five years probation he was assessed in November 1974.

Probation Officer Bill McCay, who called Mutscher a "model probationer," said Mutscher was to be named county judge for Washington County during a commissioner's court meeting today.

Mutscher was indicted by a Travis County grand jury at Austin on charges he conspired to accept bribes at the height of the Sharpstown bank scandals that uprooted state government.

Mississippi uncommitted

By The Associated Press
Mississippi's 30 Republican delegate-votes could have put President Ford within a political inch of the GOP nomination, but the delegation voted to stay uncommitted until the convention. So the Republican presidential contenders keep scrambling for delegates while the Democratic ticket starts writing its policy proposals.

The Mississippi delegates, the only full state delegation still unaligned either with Ford or challenger Ronald Reagan, also reaffirmed on Sunday an agreement to vote as a bloc.

But the gave no clear sign which candidate will win their votes. Both camps lobbied fiercely and both claimed strong support.

Ford has 1,096 delegates and Reagan 1,024, according to a survey by The Associated Press. The winner needs 1,130 and there are 138 delegates still uncommitted. Both candidates claim enough votes now to win the nomination.

Reagan announced Sunday that he would make "a major campaign statement" today. There were no details but one aide said it would be "a positive statement" for the campaign.

As the Mississippi delegates met, Jimmy Carter and running mate Walter F. Mondale prepared for a week-long session in Plains, Ga. with Democratic economic and foreign policy advisers.

Reagan spent Sunday taping television interviews and Ford was on the golf course as their aides lobbied for support in Mississippi.

The White House announced that Ford would meet with the Maryland delegation at a White House reception today and had invited Pennsylvania's 103 delegates for a similar session on Thursday.

All 43 Maryland delegates are committed to Ford and most of the Pennsylvania delegates support the President, but White House press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford isn't taking any chances.

In other weekend developments:

—Carter told Time magazine in an interview published Sunday that his major problem remained recognition. "My major vulnerability is that people still don't know who I am or what I stand for on specific issues."

—Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., saying voters wouldn't be fooled by Carter's "messianic smile," predicted Ford will win both his party's nomination and the general election next November. Tower also praised former Texas Gov. John Connally as an excellent choice for the No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket.

—Independent candidate Eugene McCarthy said he could see no difference between Carter and Ford. He said he hasn't selected a running mate.

Sewage plant to be topic of city meeting

City commissioners hope to get an answer to what they consider behind-schedule progress on construction at Pampa's new $14 million sewage treatment plant.

Chester Green, representative of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Lubbock consultant engineers on the project, is scheduled to appear at the meeting to discuss the matter with city officials.

City officials expressed concern at their last regular meeting that work on the plant was not going at the rate called for in the contract and that it might affect future payments on federal government grant money.

Representatives of the Senior Citizens Center board of directors are expected to ask commissioners for aid in temporarily funding the salary of the center director until further assistance can be obtained on the extension of a CETA grant through the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

Other business on the Tuesday agenda includes: Consideration of an ordinance allowing a Special Use Permit on a part of Block 9 in the Buckler Addition.

Acceptance of an audit report on city books prepared by Nenslett & Doggett for fiscal 1974-75.

Study of the reconstruction portion of the Browning-Cuyler street intersection and consider setting a date to receive bids.

Second and final reading of an ordinance amending the franchise for Pampa Cable TV, Inc.

Appointment of one member to the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority District Board.

Austin man dies when plane hits power line

By The Associated Press
Automobile accidents which claimed three and four lives at one time added to the violent death toll during the weekend.

Altogether there were 10 traffic fatalities, seven homicides, four drownings and one in a plane crash tabulated by The Associated Press for the period between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday.

An Austin man, James Cody Godwin, 31, died Sunday night when his light plane struck a power line and crashed into a pasture about 1½ miles southwest of Troy in Central Texas.

A small foreign car smashed against a utility pole and killed three young Wichita Falls motorists there Sunday night. They were Jessie Martinez, 18; his brother Jerry Martinez, 14; and Gordon Whitaker, 17. Two others in the car suffered serious injuries.

Two Rockport men — Homer Saucedo and Eastevan Reddan

Lara Jr., both 19 — died Sunday as their car hit a tree one-half mile north of Portland, near Corpus Christi.

Clarence Swearington, 41, of Dallas was fatally shot Sunday during an argument with a man at Swearington's home, police said.

The bodies of Paul and Mary Cantrell, both in their late 40s, were found early Sunday at their Baytown home by a daughter returning from a date. Police said the Cantrells apparently had been strangled and their throats slashed. Their wrists had been bound, officers said.

Three Douglas women died Sunday when the car in which they were riding plunged off Texas 21 into Attoyac Bayou east of Nacogdoches. State police identified them as Eula Emerson King, 67; Dennis C. Johnson, 62; and Juanita Martin Mills, 76. Divers recovered their bodies in the car.

A two-car crash near Commerce killed three persons Saturday night. They were R.J. Cunningham, 42, of Campbell and Raymond Lee Russell, 63, and his wife Ophelia, 54, both of Arlington. The crash occurred two miles south of Commerce on Texas 50.

Melvin Fox, 51, of Lufkin drowned Saturday night in the Neches River near Diboll when his fishing boat overturned, authorities said.

Leonard Lake Jr., 20, of Dallas was shot to death Saturday in what police said was an argument over a dice game. Police said they found the victim on the floor of his apartment and arrested a man when he sought medical treatment for a gunshot wound in his hand.

A domestic quarrel ended in the death Saturday of Emil Tyler, 29, of Dallas, police said. He was shot in the chest with a .38-caliber pistol, officers said.

Central Texas authorities said Rigoberto Carrasco, 22, of Ft. Hood was killed Friday night in a two-car collision near Buckholts on U.S. 190 in Milam County.

Senate aides rate their Senate bosses

By ANN COOPER
and GEOFFREY O'GARA
Pampa News
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — If you worked day to day on the Senate floor, odds are you would be impressed with the integrity of Phil Hart, D-Mich., the intelligence of Jacob Javits, D-N.Y., the effectiveness of Russell Long, D-La., and the capacity for hard work of Sens. Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., and William Proxmire, D-Wis.

Legislative aids (LAs) who work side by side with senators, responded most often with these names when asked by the Capitol Hill News Service to identify senators who exhibited each of those qualities.

They were also asked to name senators they'd rank at the bottom of those categories.

In the negative categories, William Scott, R-Va., ran away with the "least intelligent" title, getting 49 of the 84 votes cast. The closest anyone came to that tally was Vance Hartke, D-Ind., who received 36 mentions out of 68 votes cast for "least integrity." Scott led again in the "least effective" category; and the votes were so scattered in the "least hardworking" category that Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., led with only six votes.

LAs help senators research and write legislation, prepare for committee work, and keep track of developments in the political field.

All Senate offices were polled, and several LAs protested that they knew only a limited number of senators, and could base their judgments only on the general opinions of their peers. One aide who refused to answer called the survey "frivolous." With 72 out of 100 Senate offices responding, however, it was clear that a large percentage of LAs were eager to voice their opinions about the politicians in whose shadows they labor.

LAs were reluctant to express negative opinions, particularly in the "least hard-working" category, where 25 abstained. Some were cynical: "How about a quarter of the Senate?" but others felt activity on the floor is a poor gauge of work habits. "Who knows?" said one aide, "maybe they're off doing something important."

No LA was allowed to name the senator he or she worked for, but each could mention up to three senators per category.

Longstanding reputations of some senior senators solidified since CHNS first conducted the LA survey nearly three years ago. A long and active career was likely to gain its senator a place in several categories, whereas few freshmen were mentioned.

For example, Hubert

Humphrey, though he led in no one category, scored well in all four positive areas, and one aide commented: "I couldn't think of anyone who's had his name on more legislation than he's had in the last 25 years." Jacob Javits, another veteran topped the "most intelligent" column and turned up also in the ranks of the "most effective" and "most hard-working."

The disadvantage of Republicans in a Democratic dominated Senate was obvious in the "most effective" category, where no Republican received more than one vote — in spite of the fact that LAs from 27 Republican offices responded.

The only category in which Republicans consistently garnered votes was "most integrity," where Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., got seven votes, followed by James Buckley, C.N.Y., with six, Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., and Clifford Case, R-N.J., with four each. The category was led, however, by a Democrat, Philip Hart, D-Mich., with 33 votes, followed by retiring Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., with nine.

Dubbed a "slippery guy," "hard to pin down," who "really plays rough sometimes" by LAs, Vance Hartke, D-Ind., led the voting for "least integrity" with 36 votes. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., with seven votes, and Hugh Scott, D-Penn., with three, trailed him in the category. A large number of LAs refused to respond to this question.

Several senators scored well in the "most intelligence" category, with Javits in the lead with 26 mentions, followed by Buckley with 14. Hart was the choice of 13 LAs, and Humphrey of 12.

Scott of Virginia's domination of the "least intelligence" category was blamed by some LAs on the snowball effect of previous surveys by CHNS and New Times magazine, which first drew attention to the apparently low opinion LAs have for his intelligence and effectiveness. Some LAs were inclined to defend Scott as having gotten a "bad rap," but more typical was the comment of an LA who said, "It's a shame, but I guess he puts himself in that position."

The strong vote for Long as "most effective" came despite the fact that many LAs disagreed with his goals. They expressed begrudging admiration for his ability to get his way. One LA called Long "as good a craftsman as there is," and another remarked, "He's one of the most capable people in the Senate, and one of the most negative influences."

Also named for their effectiveness were Humphrey, with 12 mentions, and Javits, with 11. Next in line were Alan Cranston, D-Calif., with nine, and Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., with eight.

In the "least effective" category, Scott of Virginia led again with 24 votes, followed by James Abourezk, D-S.D., with six, and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., with five. "We would love to have him on the other side of an issue," said one LA of Helms. "His name on an amendment is sometimes all people need to hear."

The votes were scattered widely in the "most hard-working" category, with 31 senators mentioned. Topping the list were Proxmire and Byrd, with 19 votes apiece, followed by Cranston with 12, Humphrey with 10, and Javits with eight.

In the "least hard-working" category there were almost as many senators named as there were LAs responding, and 25 LAs chose not to respond at all. The 47 who voted named 33 senators, led by Goldwater with six votes, Scott of Virginia with five votes, and James Eastland, D-Miss., with four votes.

Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., and his party's vice-presidential nominee, was mentioned in two categories: he received three votes for "most intelligent" and one for "most integrity."

The leaders in most categories did not change from the CHNS survey three years ago, but there were exceptions, notably Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who was named "most effective" in 1973 but finished fifth this time around. Javits, Byrd and Hart all retained the recognition they won three years ago, as did Scott and Hartke in the negative categories.

The star of James Buckley rose since the first survey, with high marks for integrity and intelligence. And Long, who was back in the pack for "most effective" in 1973, moved to the top this year.

Herds of wild horses grow under protection

By BILL MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
RENO, Nev. (AP) — A five-year-old federal law protecting wild horses has done its job too well, leaving government officials and horse lovers to try to figure out how to cope with a steadily growing herd of the animals.

The Bureau of Land Management, the federal agency responsible for enforcing the 1971 Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act, estimates that there are more than 60,000 wild horses across the nation with more than half of them in Nevada.

The wild horse population increases by about 20 per cent a year and officials say it is putting severe pressure on public rangelands, where the horses must compete with grazing livestock and wildlife.

The bureau estimates that 8,000 to 10,000 horses would have to be removed from the range each year to keep populations at the current level. The agency is limited by law on the methods it can use to catch the horses and it says that rounding up each animal would cost $300 to $400.

Ranchers want the horses sharply reduced in numbers — some of them don't care how. Even horse protection groups agree there are too many of the animals. But the groups say they will stick to their vows to see that the horses are protected and, if taken off the range, not mistreated in any way.

"If someone would come forward and offer to work out a compromise that is acceptable, we would sit down with them and talk," says Velma "Wild Horse Annie" Johnston, head of Wild Horse Organized Assistance — WHOA. But, she added, "We have a responsibility to the public not to relinquish the position we've held for all these years."

A New Mexico court ruled last year that the horse-protection law was unconstitutional and said states should have control over wild horses. But the U.S. Supreme Court reversed the decision earlier this month and upheld the right of the federal government to control horses.

The ruling "left us with just about an impossible situation," says Ed Rowland, Nevada state director for the Bureau of Land Management. "The law is virtually impossible to manage as it is now constituted."

The law allows the bureau to keep the horse population at 1971 levels, but gives the agency virtually no tools to use in capturing the animals and removing them from the range.

The only realistic method is "water trapping," in which corrals are built around water holes and the horses are caught when they come to drink. That method has been used to remove about 350 horses from the Stone Cabin Valley in central Nevada, but the bureau says it will not work over the long run on a large scale.

"We're not going to be able to catch the horses except where water is a factor," Rowland says. Where adequate water is available, horses won't come near the traps.

Once the horses are caught, the federal government's "Adopt A Horse" program takes over and private parties can take the animals into their homes for noncommercial purposes. The federal government retains ownership.

"It is a terrifically awkward and expensive program to administer," says Rowland, noting the government must conduct background checks on applicants and regularly check on the welfare of the horses.

Mrs. Johnston and Rowland agree the adoption program is not limitless and eventually the saturation point will be reached where no more horses can be placed with individuals.

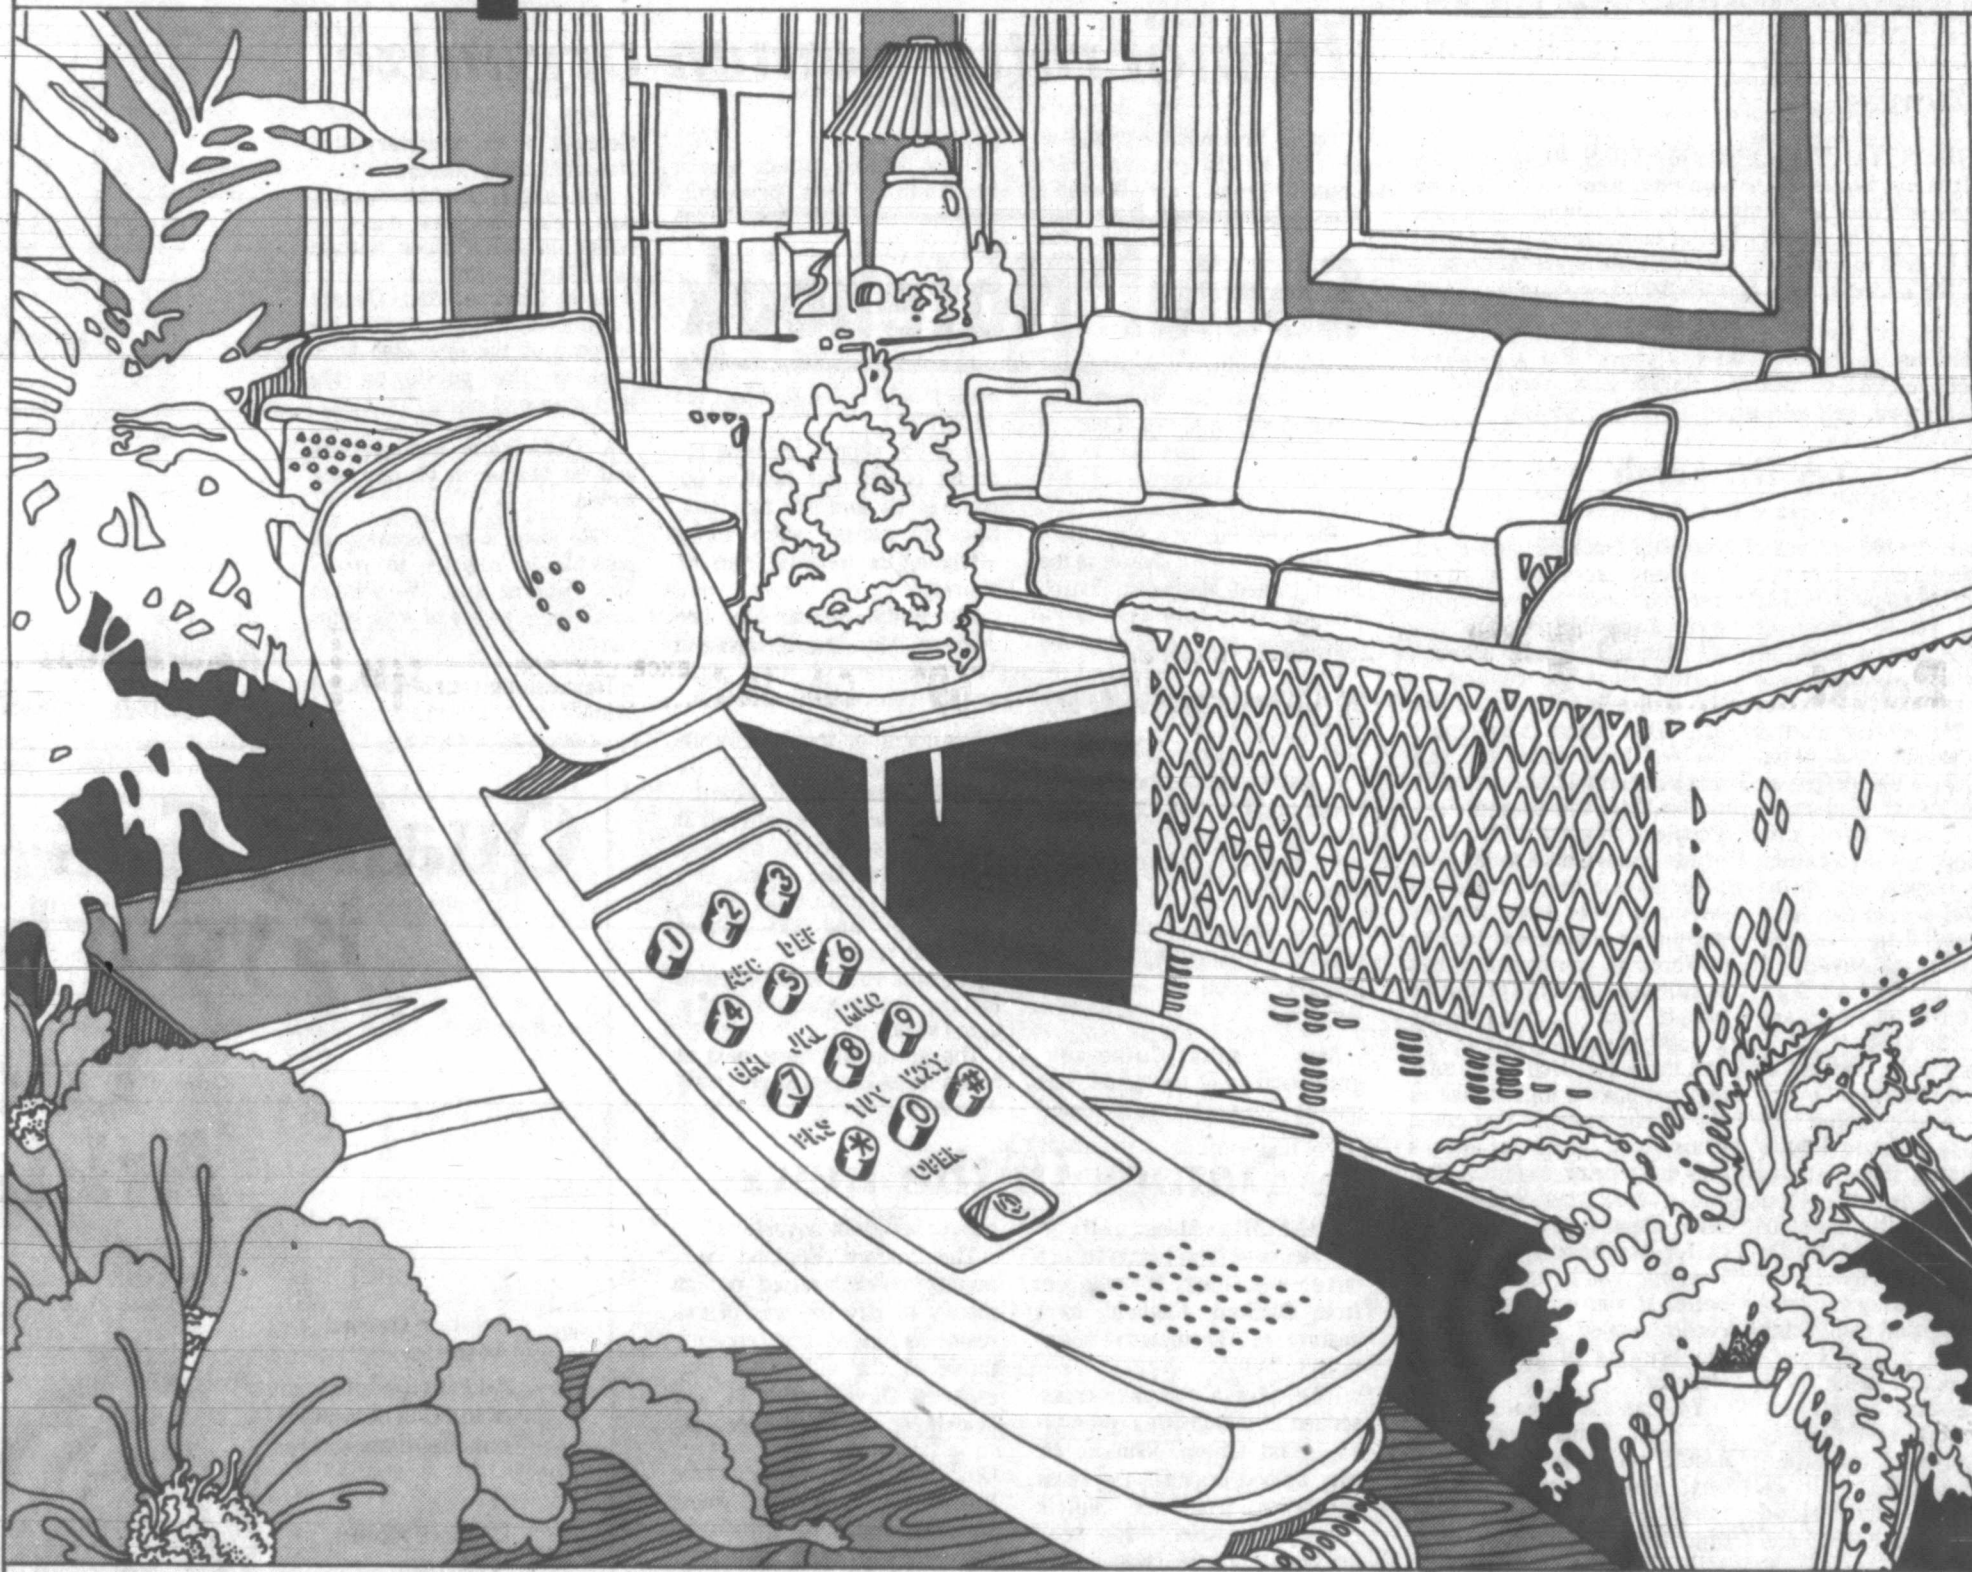

The only alternative, said Mrs. Johnston is destruction of the animals. "When the saturation point is reached and the time comes that some horses have to be destroyed, we can say we've done everything humanly possible to avoid it," she said.

The law permits the killing of horses when no other means of reducing the excess population is available. Current laws do not allow the sale of excess animals or their removal from one area to another.

One bill now pending in Congress would allow the bureau to sell or donate excess animals, with the condition that they receive humane handling and are disposed of humanely.

Water buffalo earns more

TALKHA, Egypt (AP) — Financially speaking, Mussad Hagry would be better off if he were a water buffalo.

His take home pay would be 30 times more than it is now, and he would get free food and shelter, which he doesn't get now.

For Hagry is the lowest man on Egypt's economic ladder, a day laborer, who is an immigrant in his own country, his sunup to sundown efforts can be had for 40 cents a day, of which he has to pay half for food and drink provided by his employer.

It costs $6 a day to hire a water buffalo, frequently used in agricultural or construction projects. This condition represents unfinished business for the Egyptian revolution of 24 years ago, one of whose basic aims was to make a man worth more than an animal.

Struggling to propel the country out of poverty, the government has concentrated on establishing industries, and most of the nine-million member labor force now earns substantially more than a Hagry or the water buffalo.

But there are still two million day laborers like Hagry, according to a study by the Ministry of Social Affairs, representing 22 per cent of the labor force. Most are jobless for more than 12 days a year. The hard-pressed government is only now getting around to giving them some help.

Every morning, seven days a week, he rises at dawn when the crew boss bangs on the hov-el he sleeps in. He washes in untreated water from the Nile River and then has breakfast, a crust of bread and a glass of sweet tea.

Then with a straw basket and hoe he and the rest of the crew head for the muddy construction site near this Nile Delta town, 78 miles northeast of Cairo, to dig an irrigation canal.

Under a hot sun he works until noon. Lunch is a piece of cheese, bread, an onion and another glass of tea. Then it's back to work until sunset.

Like millions of Egyptians who lived on the banks of the Nile for centuries, Hagry accepts his fate with patience and says it is God's will.

Hagry is 34 and married but he is lucky to see his wife, who lives in Upper Egypt, once a year. The rest of the time he shifts around looking for work, moving on to a new place when his services are no longer needed.

East Germans lead with 26 gold medals

By BOB GREEN
AP Sports Writer
MONTREAL (AP) — The East Germans are leading, the Americans are on the rebound and the Russians are busily denying rumors one of their premier athletes is among the missing at the XXI Olympic Games.

American forces, down but not out after one of its worst days in Olympic history, turned Dark Saturday into Sunny Sunday with a gritty comeback that was sparked by one of the most dramatic moments of the Games — Shirley Babashoff's last-gasp winning anchor leg in the women's final swimming event, the 400-meter freestyle relay.

That victory, the continued dominance of the men swimmers, and a couple of gold medal performances by track and field men — including Edwin Moses' world record run in the 400 hurdles — served as the highlights of the American revival that came just in the nick of time.

East Germany, however, won five of the eight men's rowing finals, got a medal in every race and swept past the troubled Russians into the gold medal lead with 26. They also have 17 silver and 10 bronze, a total of 53. Russia leads in total medals with a 24-24-22 gold-silver-bronze count. The United States, which won only 10 of the 104 medals distributed Friday and Saturday, collected 18 of 66 Sunday and has a 21-21-16 count.

And there was more trouble for the Russians, who will host the 1980 Games in Moscow. They've twice been accused of attempting to influence judges and had one of their modern pentathlon athletes kicked out for cheating. This time the problem involved unconfirmed reports that Valeriy Borzov, winner of both the 100 and 200 meter dashes in 1972, either has defected or been kidnapped.

The Russians denied it. Mikhail Efimov, the Russian Olympic press attaché, said Borzov was in the Village "and everything is okay with him."

A spokesman for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said they investigated and were assured the Russian sprinter "is in good hands."

The reports were fueled by Borzov's absence from the 200 trials and the sudden cancellation of a speaking engagement by his coach. The Soviet press attaché said Borzov was withdrawn from the race because he had aggravated an old injury and added that he will compete in the 400-meter relay later this week.

The schedule today includes five track and field finals, with the Americans hoping for a one-two finish from Dave Roberts, Gainesville, Fla., and Earl Bell, Jonesboro, Ark., in the pole vault. Medals also will be awarded in the men's 200-meter dash, 10,000 meters and javelin and the women's 800.

The men's basketball team, apparently headed for another showdown with the Russians, plays Canada in a semifinal game. Russia plays Yugoslavia in the other. The winners meet for the gold medal which the Russians won in a controversial final in Munich in 1972. The American women could gain a silver against Czechoslovakia.

Also on the schedule are finals in fencing, cycling, judo and the men's platform diving. Swimming ended last night. And it ended on a high note for the deeply frustrated American women who were facing their first gold medal shutout since 1952. It was averted by an almost superhuman performance by 19-year-old Shirley Babashoff, of Fountain Valley, Calif., and three of her teammates.

It was a last-gasp thing. Going into the last event, the Americans hadn't won. Miss Babashoff had collected three silver medals, including one in the exhausting 800 meters just an hour earlier. They were facing the broad-shouldered East German women, winners of all but one event.

And the American girls won it by the touch of Miss Babashoff's fingertips over the East Germans in world record time of 3 minutes, 44.82 seconds.

"I'm very happy with all my medals," Miss Babashoff said. "I did my very best in every race. In the relay, I just got a little more help."

The help came from Jill Strickel, Hacienda Heights, Calif., Kim Peyton, Portland, Ore., and Wendy Boglioli, Ocean City, N.J., each of whom clocked her own fastest time for 100 meters.

But it was the outspoken Miss Babashoff who provided the heroics. Only an hour after the 800 meters she came back to swim the anchor leg and just held off East Germany's Claudia Hempel.

Petra Thumer of East Germany had to swim a world-record 8:39.63 to beat Miss Babashoff in the 800. Shirley was timed in 8:37.59 and Wendy Weinberg, Baltimore, was third in 8:42. Ulrike Richter of East Germany won the other women's final last night, clocking 2:13.43 for the 200 backstroke with teammate Birgit Treibers and Nancy Garapick of Canada second and third.

Elena Vaytskevichskaya of Russia won the women's platform diving with Deborah Wilson, Columbus, Ohio, third.

The American men, even more dominant than the East German women, reeled off two more in a string of victories that became almost routine.

Jim Montgomery, Madison, Wis., took the 100 freestyle in 49.99 and became the first man to crack 50 seconds. Jack Babashoff, Shirley's brother, was second in 50.81. Rod Strachan, Santa Ana, Calif., won the 400 individual medley in 4:23.68, another world record. Tim McKee, Newton Square, Pa., was second in 4:24.62.

In all, the American men won 12 of the 13 swimming events, set world records in 11 of them and accumulated 12 gold, 10 silver and 5 bronze medals in the strongest performance in the history of the Games.

They were kept from a sweep only by the victory of Scotland's David Wilkie over John Hencken, Santa Clara, Calif., Saturday night in 200 breaststroke.

"We aren't going to cry about that," said 6-foot-6 John Naber, Menlo Park, Calif., who collected four gold medals and a silver.

Hencken's loss came just as the American team seemed on the verge of collapse with the East Germans and Russians taking advantage of one of America's worst days ever to run up a big lead in medals.

But track and field victories by the lanky, 6-foot-2 Moses and massive Mac Wilkins in the discus Sunday, along with the United States' first individual gold in three-day equestrian, by Tad Coffin, helped greatly to restore American prestige.

The 6-foot-4, 250-pound Wilkins, from Eugene, Ore., won the discus with a heave of 221-5, well off his own record but good enough to win. Wolfgang Schmidt of East Germany was second and John Powell, San Jose, Calif., third at 215-7.

Moses, who has been running the 400-meter hurdles for over a year, scored easily in world record time of 47.64 with delighted Mike Shine of Penn State second.

Alberto Juantoreno of Cuba won the 800 meters with another world record, 1:43.50 and Rick Wohlhuter of Chicago was a disappointing third.

Anneget Richter of West Germany won the other track final, the women's 100, with a time of 11.08. Americans were shut out of medals in that one.

Coffin, from Stratford, Vt., and Mike Plumb, Chesapeake City, Md., finished one-two in the individual standings in the three-day equestrian and the Americans won the team title easily. Princess Anne of Great Britain finished 24th.

The United States got only one medal in men's rowing, a silver by Cal Coffey, Jewett City, Conn., and Mike Staines of Philadelphia in the coxed pairs.

James Lee, an Army enlisted man from Manchester, Pa., provided a surprise silver in the middle-heavyweight weightlifting with a combined hoist of 797.5 pounds. David Rigert of Russia won with 841.5.

In Saturday's events, East Germany won four of the six women's rowing events, and the United States got only two medals, a bronze by the eights with cox and a silver by John Lind, Long Beach, Calif., in single sculls.

Kate Schmidt, Pacific Palisades, Calif., was third in women's javelin and picked up America's only medal in the opening day of track and field competition. American men were shut out in the shot and the 100 for the first time in decades. Hasely Crawford of Trinidad won the 100 in 10.06 and Uda Beyer of East Germany took the shot at 69 feet, 3-4 inch.

Pate wins Canadian Open

WINDSOR, Ont. (AP) — Is Jerry Pate the next Jack Nicklaus?

There are many who would argue there may never be another golfer as good as Nicklaus — who has won 75 tournaments in his fabled career.

But the way Pate has blossomed as a rookie on the Professional Golfers' Association tour this year, one can't help but speculate.

Pate, the 22-year-old Floridian who won the U.S. Open last month, added the third national championship to his collection Sunday by running away with the $200,000 Canadian Open.

He fired an Essex Golf and Country Club course record of seven-under-par 63 in his final round for a 13-under 267 total, beating Nicklaus by four strokes. The $40,000 top prize brought Pate's winnings to a rookie-record $128,482. He joined the tour last fall.

It was the fourth time Nicklaus was runnerup in the Canadian Open, the only national championship he hasn't won. Last year he lost to Tom Weiskopf in a sudden-death playoff.

Like Pate, Nicklaus won the U.S. Open as a rookie, in 1962. He is a two-time U.S. Amateur champion, a title Pate grabbed in 1974.

"It would be pretty tough to be on top like he always is," Pate said of Nicklaus. "But I'm gonna try."

Nicklaus shot a 65 Sunday. Yet Pate, a former All-American from the University of Alabama, turned on the afterburners and destroyed Nicklaus. Lyn Lott, third-round leader Bob Wynn and everyone else.

Pate — youngest to win the tourney — shot 69-67-68 the first three days for a tourney total of 207.

Besides Nicklaus at 271, Pate's closest challengers were Lott at 274, Ed Seead at 275, Wynn and Bob Eastwood at 277. Wynn, who had an eight-under 202 after 54 holes, shot a five-over 75 in the finale over the class, 6,696-yard course.

Only 17 golfers from the final field of 79 shot par 280 or better for the four days.

Seniors practice

Registration closes at 5 p.m. today at the Pampa Country Club at the 42nd annual Tri-State Senior Golf Association Tournament.

Today will be free for practice rounds for the anticipated 175 entrants, and tomorrow is the official qualifying round.

A golf clinic by Pampa pro Hart Warren will be from 6 to 7 p.m. today for golfers and their wives, and a hospitality hour will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Country Club.

The championship flight will determined from tomorrow's qualifying round, and those top players will play three more rounds this week before the winner is decided on Friday.

Defending champion at the tournament, back again this year for competition, is J. Carroll Weaver of Sinton, Tex.

Susie Berning wins $50,000 Keystone open

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A new putter and new contact lenses gave defending champion Susie Berning the edge and a par 72 to win the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open here.

It was her first win since the Lady Keystone last year, and her first Ladies Professional Golf Association win since the U.S. Open in 1973.

Mrs. Berning, of Crystal Bay, Nev., topped the field Sunday by three shots as she posted a 54-hole total of one-under-par 215 at the 6,222-yard Sportsman Club course.

Pat Bradley, of Westford, Mass., and Sandra Haynie, of Dallas, Tex., finished tied for second at 218. Miss Bradley birdied the final two greens for a 72 while Miss Haynie, the first day leader, shot a final round of 73.

The new contact lenses made a tremendous difference, said Mrs. Berning, who has had vision problems for some time. A Harrisburg optometrist fitted her late Saturday night. "They gave me good depth perception and everything was much clearer."

After losing two shots to par with a 37 on the front nine, Mrs. Berning birdied the 12th and 18th holes for a two-under 35 on the closing side.

In putting together rounds of 72-71-72 — her three best of the year — she three-putted only one green and didn't have a double bogey for the tournament. Mrs. Berning said her chipping and putting was the big difference.

Deadlocked for fourth place were Laura Baugh, Delray Beach, Fla., and Debbie Austin, of West Palm Beach, Fla., with 219. Baugh posted a 75 and Austin a 73 on Sunday.

Judy Kimball, of North Platt, Neb., only a shot off the pace at the 36-hole mark, skied to a final 77 to fall out of contention.

Astros turn tables on San Francisco

HOUSTON (AP) — After being shut out twice by San Francisco within two days, the Houston Astros decided to turn the tables.

Rookie Mike McLaughlin's brilliant six-hit pitching effort coupled with Greg Gross' 10th-inning sacrifice fly, lifted the Astros to a 1-0 triumph over the Giants Sunday.

McLaughlin, 1-0, struck out two and walked only 1 in gathering his first major league victory. Ed Halicki, 9-13, trying to become the first National League pitcher to hurl five shutouts this season, took the loss.

Ed Hermann led off the 10th for Houston with a single preceding pinch runner Wilbur Howard's stolen base. Rob Andrews was intentionally walked and after Roger Metzger fouled out, Halicki walked pinch hitter Ken Boswell, loading the bases. Gross followed with his sacrifice fly to left, ending an 18-inning scoreless streak for Houston.

"I was just trying to hit the ball hard, but I sure didn't want to hit a line drive, Gross said. "Fortunately, I got the ball up. We've been running into some good pitching recently, but today we got some of our own."

The 22-year-old McLaughlin, playing in only his second major league game, retired 30 of the 32 San Francisco batters he faced with no Giant runner reaching as far as third base.

"I had a good breaking pitch and a good fast ball today," McLaughlin said. "I could have gone another couple of innings. It feels good the way I can come up and do the job."

For the Astros, who have scored only five earned runs in their last 49 innings, the strong pitching job from McLaughlin was a must.

It's a long ways to Montreal from Round Rock for sprinter

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

AP Sports Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — It's been a long way from Round Rock, Tex., for Johnny Jones.

Round Rock was where they held his district high school track meet in the spring. Now, officially, he's the world's sixth fastest man.

Four years hence this 18-year-old, quiet-spoken young man with a flaming afterburner could be Uncle Sam's No. 1 sprint hope at the Olympics in Moscow. Or he could be a No. 1 draft choice in the National Football League. Or he could be who knows what?

"I don't do just a whole lot of dreaming," said Jones, who will be the second man on America's sprint relay Friday. "I try to keep my head on and not let the pressure get to me." Jones ought to know about pressure. It's all he has ever known.

"I've been playing football and running track since I was in the fourth grade and I just haven't really done a lot of relaxing since then," he said at the Olympic village housing the U.S. Olympiad XXI athletes.

The 6-foot, 170-pounder was the target of a wild rush by college football recruiters. He could take his choice. You want a track scholarship? You got it. You want to play both, Johnny, it's yours.

Jones, who scored 45 touchdowns his last two years in high school, appreciated the way Texas Coach Darrell Royal laid his cards on the table.

"I liked the school and I liked the man," said Jones. "I think I can participate in both sports. I want to play pro football some day. And I want to come back to the Olympics. I don't think I have to give up one to do the other."

Jones, who finished sixth in the 100 meters Saturday after a poor start out of the blocks, has impressed Frank Medina, who happens to be both the University of Texas and Uncle Sam's Olympic trainer.

"Johnny has it all... class... lots of class," said Medina. "At this state he is more fluid than Bobby Morrow."

Morrow ran wild at the Olympics in 1956 with gold medals in the 100 and 200.

"I never really heard of Morrow until somebody sent me a clipping on him," said Jones. "He must have been something."

Dr. Mathew Branch said, "I think Johnny is such a strong person that he can be a world class sprinter... at the very top in a few years. But I think the pressures of playing two sports might be too great for him. Even O. J. Simpson had to give up track."

Another U.S. official, who asked not to be named, said, "Johnny is a great prospect but if he wants to be a world class sprinter he can't play football. Football players usually hurt their knees, don't they?"

Jones made it clear he wants to play halfback for Texas this fall and start, if possible, because, "I'm going to work, work, work. I'm not ever going to give up on football."

"Just because I run track doesn't mean I'm frail or anything. I can block. We ran the Wishbone-T in high school just like Texas does."

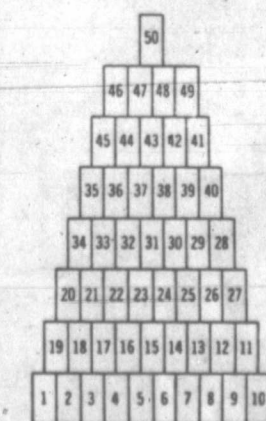

Jones said he can't wait for America's shot at the gold medal in the sprint relay.

"I've been getting a lot of letters, my mother (Mary Jones), and my high school coach (Scott Boyd) are here," said Jones. "Coach Royal sent me a telegram and I thought that was nice."

"But back in June if you had told me I would be in the Olympics I just might have found it a little difficult to believe."

Hearings focus on funeral industry

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Hearings under way in Washington on proposed federal regulations for the funeral industry have focused new attention on a subject many people would rather forget: death.

Ignorance in this area is expensive, however. And more and more people are turning to memorial societies offering advance information and planning that can cut funeral costs by hundreds of dollars.

Memorial societies are non-profit organizations seeking simplicity and economy in funerals. The groups arrange with local undertakers to provide simple funerals for members at specified costs. They also offer information on different types of services available and on alternatives to burial, including cremation and donation of the body to medical research.

The society's aim is to prevent a family having to make a decision while burdened with grief. "Often it (the funeral) becomes an expense that devastates the relatives for years," the Rev. Mr. Smith said.

The New Haven group is one of more than 100 organizations affiliated with the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies, Inc. The association has chapters in almost all the 50 states with an estimated membership of half a million people.

The National Funeral Directors Association, representing about 14,000 of the nation's 22,000 funeral directors, estimates that the average funeral in 1974, the latest year for which statistics are available, cost $1,207. That does not count expenses for the cemetery or crematorium, flowers or a grave marker. It said the average funeral director earned $18,700 in 1974.

Rebecca Cohen, executive secretary of the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies, said savings to members vary, but generally average about $500.

Alternatives to the traditional earth burial also can cut costs. Miss Cohen said. Bequeathing the body to science is the least expensive, but consumers should check with local medical authorities to determine needs. Cremation is another inexpensive option, Miss Cohen said, with charges generally ranging from $150 to $300.

The Federal Trade Commission accused the funeral industry last year of engaging in a series of deceptive practices and has proposed regulations to govern the business. The FTC started a three-week series of hearings on the proposed rules in Washington last week after similar sessions in New York, Chicago, Seattle, Los Angeles and Atlanta.

The proposals by the FTC staff would, among other things:

—Require funeral homes to provide consumers with more information about specific costs such as those for caskets and burial vaults.

—Require funeral homes to give prices over the telephone.

—Ensure compliance with state laws prohibiting embalming without survivors' permission.

—Prohibit practices which tend to cut competition, such as restrictions on price advertising.

The industry has been battling the proposals, arguing that the FTC unfairly singled out funeral directors for regulation. Several funeral home operators said that unethical practices cited by the FTC — such as bait-and-switch tactics — are the exception rather than the rule.

The address of the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies is Suite 1100, 1828 L St. Northwest, Washington, D.C. 20036. The National Funeral Directors Association is located at 135 W. Wells St., Milwaukee, Wis., 53203.

Scientists repair Viking arm

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — With Viking 1 back to almost-perfect health, scientists are preparing for this week's search for life on Mars — man's first scientific analysis of another planet's surface.

On Sunday, scientists unjammed the lander's sampling arm, in which a pin from a protective covering had become stuck for several days.

Now, with the arm unjammed, the experiment will take place according to schedule on Wednesday, the lander's eighth day on Mars, Viking Project Manager James Martin said Sunday.

The telescoping device is to reach out and scoop up 50 cubic centimeters of Martian soil — enough to fill a shot glass. The analysis of that soil is the key to Viking's search for life as well as its attempts to find out about the planet's evolution.

Unjamming the pin represented a major step toward a successful mission, but it did not remedy everything that had gone wrong with Viking 1. A seismometer to measure and locate marsquakes, the equivalent of earthquakes, was still out of operation after several attempts to repair it from earth.

"There's been no new word on the seismometer," Martin said, "and I frankly don't hold out much hope for success."

Scientists unjammed the pin by recreating the problem on an identical lander here and developing a command to free the pin.

There were several anxious hours between the issuing of the command and Viking's response. The craft finally sent back pictures showing the arm in the correct position, and then close-up shots of a small section of the red, rocky Martian surface.

There, the scientists spotted the pin and knew the arm was again in working order.

Two slain in Baytown

BAYTOWN, Tex. (AP) — Paul and Mary Cantrell returned from a dinner with neighbors to find a strange car parked at their home in an exclusive West Baytown neighborhood Saturday night. A few hours later the Cantrells were dead.

Police investigating the slayings of the electrical contractor and his wife, both in their late 40s, report the couple's daughter returned from a date shortly after midnight to find her parents with their throats slashed and apparently strangled.

Sgt. Johnny Deel said the Cantrells' bodies lay sprawled, with wrists bound, in the den of their house. There were blood stains on the outside sill of an open window, on the patio and in the front yard, he said.

Deel said the couple had been out to dinner with neighbors, who later told police the Cantrells spotted a strange car parked outside as they all returned home.

Reagan urges strike intervention

WASHINGTON (AP) — As negotiations in the California cannery workers' strike continue, Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan is urging President Ford to impose a cooling-off period in the dispute, which could imperil California's vast fruit harvest.

The two sides in the 6-day-old strike spent 13 hours with an official of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service on Sunday, and the talks were scheduled to resume this morning. A mediation service spokesman had no report on whether negotiators made progress Sunday.

Reagan, a former governor of California, urged Ford on Sunday to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act immediately in the strike.

Reagan said the walkout "at the peak of fruit harvesting season threatens to bring disaster to California agriculture and fuel a new round of inflated food prices."

"I respectfully request him to act now in the national interest," Reagan said in a statement directed at his GOP rival. There was no immediate response from the White House.

After Saturday's lengthy round of talks, the chief federal mediator said the discussion was centering on money.

Late Saturday James Searce, national director of the mediation service, said he had asked both sides to review their positions in the light of the proposals already made.

The 30,000 cannery workers represented by the Teamsters Union went on strike last Tuesday. The talks moved to Washington Thursday.

California Processors Inc., representing the cannery operators, has offered wage increases ranging from 93 cents to $1.43 an hour over three years. But the unions have asked for increases of $3 an hour over three years. Wages currently average $4.93 an hour.

Growers say they expect the crop to peak in about a week and estimate they could lose $2.5 billion if the strike lasts indefinitely.

The walkout has closed 70 California canneries that process peaches, apricots, pears, tomatoes, grapes and other fruits.

HEW announces reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — David Mathews, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, announced Saturday what he called sweeping reforms of the department's rulemaking process to give the public a bigger voice in forming social policy.

To appear in Who's Who

The biography of Kenneth D. Gage, son of K.R. Gage of 639 N. Faulkner, will appear in the 10th annual edition of Who's Who Among American High School students, 1975-76. Gage is a 1976 graduate of Pampa High School and was a member of Future Farmers of America and the Rodeo Club. He was president of FFA his senior year. Gage won several awards for livestock exhibitions in stock shows around the state, including the Top O' Texas Stock Show in Pampa. Fewer than 4 per cent of American high school students are featured in Who's Who every year.

Lawyer's trial for theft begins

EDINBURG, Tex. (AP) — Jury selection was to get under way here today for the burglary and theft trial of lawyer Nago Alaniz of Duval County. Alaniz, of San Diego, is accused of burglarizing the Duval County Conservation and Recreation District office and stealing records that were being sought by a federal grand jury investigating the income tax returns of the late Duval County political boss George B. Parr.

The slender, dapper Alaniz has been hospitalized at Houston for treatment of a foot infection, but a court-appointed doctor examined him and determined he was physically able to stand trial.

District Court Judge Darrell Hester of Brownsville, who ordered the trial moved here to Hidalgo County on a change of venue motion, says he will provide Alaniz a foot stool so he can keep his left foot elevated during the trial.

Prosecution of the case will be handled by Asst. Texas Atty. Gen. Neal Duval and Dist. Atty. Arnulfo Guerra of Roma.

Alaniz will be defended by lawyer Dick Deguerin of Houston, a law partner of Percy Foreman.

The project has been Mathews' highest priority since he left his job as president of the University of Alabama a year ago to become a member of the Ford cabinet.

Under the new procedure, HEW will first publish a notice of intent to prepare regulations and seek public guidance before it actually writes rules.

"We will not put forward a major proposal until the people affected by it have had their say," Mathews said in a statement.

The secretary has expressed concern that HEW wields enormous powers in a vacuum when it writes voluminous regulations to implement a law passed by Congress, with little if any legislative debate and no public comment until basic decisions have already been made by bureaucrats.

In the past, regulations prohibiting discrimination against females and protecting the privacy of students' records have created so much controversy that Congress has had to amend the laws to make its intent clear.

Mathews said he believes that HEW's rulemaking powers are at least as potent in terms of human impact as the department's $128 billion budget and 135,000 employees.

Under the previous system, when the need for a regulation arose, the department consulted largely with the groups having a special interest in a given program and then proposed a regulation which often reflected their common preconceptions," he said. "The public at large was shut out of the process."

Effective today, HEW will open the process by framing the issues for the public and laying out available options. Once these are on the table, we will work to stimulate the widest possible public discussion," he said.

Mathews said HEW will use town hall meetings across the country, advertisements, public service announcements, news releases, mailed notices, publication in the Federal Register and other devices to get the word out when a new rule is in the works.

Three get immunity for Hoffa testimony

DETROIT (AP) — Three more witnesses are scheduled to appear Wednesday before the grand jury that for nearly a year has been studying the disappearance of former Teamsters Union boss James R. Hoffa.

Hoffa disappeared last July 30, and the court appearance of the three, all affiliated with Union City, N.J. Teamsters Local 560, comes just two days before the anniversary.

Karen Schnable, a Local 560 secretary, and business agents Paul Ciampi and Armand Castelletto are being granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony.

Government prosecutors have said in open court that they plan to question the witnesses on the whereabouts last July 30 of Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano and Local 560 official Salvatore Briguglio.

Provenzano, secretary-treasurer of Local 560, is one of the men Hoffa believed he was on his way to meet the day he disappeared. Provenzano has denied he had an appointment with Hoffa that day. He says he was playing cards in Local 560's gameroom. Briguglio is one of three men federal prosecutors say an informant named as Hoffa's abductors and presumed killers.

CALGARY (AP) — The world championship women's softball tournament, which was to have been held here in 1978, has been canceled because the federal government threatened to withhold funds for the event if Taiwan and South Africa were invited.

It is expected the tournament will be awarded to Australia.
