French paratroopers dropped into Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — French Foreign Legion paratroopers dropped into the center of the rebel-held city of Kolwezi in southern Zaire today to protect foreign residents and "re-establish security" there, French officials announced.

Rebel spokesmen claimed the French intend to help the Zaire government defeat the week-old insurgency.

The paratroops had been shuttling through the airports of this capital city late Thursday and early today headed for embattled Shaba Province.

The chief spokesman for the French government, Pierre Hunt, said in Paris later in the day the airborne legionnaires had been dropped into the heart of Kolwezi this afternoon with a mission "limited to the city of Kolwezi, the protection of French and other foreign residents and the re-establishment of security there."

He did not say how many soldiers were involved, but one French trooper here said about 800 would take part.

An estimated 2,000 Belgians, 400 French citizens, 14 Americans and 100 other foreigners in the Kolwezi area had been trapped behind rebel lines since the invaders struck last week and seized the copper-mining city.

Hunt told reporters the French government decided to send the troops to Shaba Province at the request of the Zaire government "and after consultations with other interested governments."

Those consulted in the planning of a rescue operation for the stranded foreigners included the United States, Belgium and Britain.

Six Belgian airplanes loaded with supplies for Belgian paratroopers have already flown to Kamina, staging base for the planned rescue operation, Belgian diplomats here said. They said 1,000 to 1,200 Belgian soldiers would take part but that the Belgian government had not decided yet whether to go ahead with its part of the rescue mission.

"The French operation might help our purpose," Belgian Premier Leo Tindemans told reporters in Brussels. "If the Kolwezi airport was rendered operational by the French action, we could then limit ourselves to organize an airlift to bring our people and other Europeans out."

Tindemans added, without elaboration: "The nature of the French intervention in Zaire is quite different from ours. Our purpose is uniquely humanitarian." He said he had discussed the Shaba situation with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing twice today.

Jean Baptiste Mpondo, a Brussels spokesman for the rebel Congolese National Liberation Front, repeated a charge that French paratroops had already joined in the fighting on the side of the Zaire government earlier this week, an allegation denied by Paris.

He also said, "The French government made it clear that France's intervention would be to support a friendly government, that of Mobutu Sese Seko, the Zaire president."

The French paratroopers arrived at Kinshasa's international airport Thursday night and today aboard at least six aircraft — four camouflaged C-130 transports and two civilian planes.

The exact number of troops was not known, but about 200 were seen at one point being transferred by truck to a nearby military airfield to await flights to Shaba. One French soldier told a reporter the force totaled 800.

The staging area at Kamina is 130 miles north of Kolwezi.

The Belgian news agency said well informed sources reported the rebels had retaken the town of Mutshatsha, 60 miles west of Kolwezi. The rebels were spreading over the territory around Kolwezi and Mutshatsha, the agency said.

Mobutu appealed to Belgium, Zaire's former colonial master, France, the United States, Britain and Morocco for help after the exiled rebels invaded southern Zaire last week.

Kolwezi, 840 miles southeast of Kinshasa, was taken last Friday by an estimated 4,000 Shaba exiles who returned to their homeland from Angola through Zambia.

Mobutu flew two dozen foreign journalists to the Kolwezi airport Thursday to prove it had been retaken by government forces. Exploding mortars and fire from automatic weapons could be heard at the airport, and the visit was cut short after about 20 minutes when mortar rounds began landing near the strip.

In Washington, Pentagon sources said two planeloads of American aircraft fuel had left for Zaire to be made available for the Belgian airlift. Shipment of medical supplies, communication equipment, petroleum and aircraft spare parts requested by the Zaire government would begin within a week, the sources said.

Property value change protested

By KAY HORD

"Five years ago we formed the Citizens Action Group to protest the revaluation, and nothing happened. This time, unless we can come up with something that is pretty dog gone drastic, they are going to do it to us again in another five years," Norman Zachary said.

Zachary was addressing approximately 150 irate county residents who met Thursday night to protest property revaluation which, they say, may result in tax increases ranging from 300 to 750 percent, and to plan further action.

"It's all well and good if the revaluation is done in fairness, but by what stretch of the imagination do they have the audacity to increase taxes by 500 percent on a house that is not even finished." This is just Bonnie and Clyde," one member of the audience said.

The Midland area residents, most of whom live outside city limits, gathered to decide what action might be taken at the Board of Equalization meeting Monday. This year, property outside the city limits was revalued for purposes of taxation by the Midland Independent School District, Midland Junior College District and for the first time, Midland County Hospital District.

Attorney Bill Kerr told those attending the meeting that the Board of Equalization session Monday will be where the issue will be "won or lost."

"I think you're going to need some good lawyers in this matter," he said.

"You're going to have to go to the Board of Equalization meeting with hard evidence that they are wrong about your property. Just showing that the tax is high or too much at one time is not enough, in my opinion."

"Re-evaluation is a yearly event. The only difference is that this year it's your turn, and last year it was someone else's," Kerr said.

Kerr explained that if the residents are not satisfied after the Board of Equalization meeting, they can file suit in district court, but that chances are slim that the court would rule in the residents' favor.

"I think they (the Board of Equalization) should be asked to adjourn the meeting to give you more time, but you're not going to get anything done by bellyaching," he said.

Residents received notification Wednesday of the increases in their

Student upset, peers say

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Classmates say a 13-year-old A-student, the son of a former presidential press secretary, killed his English teacher because of growing distress in a class where he was criticized, laughed at and given a failing grade.

John Daniel Christian took a .22-caliber rifle from his home Thursday morning, walked into his eighth grade English class several minutes late and, in front of horrified students, pumped three bullets into his teacher, Wilbur Rodney Grayson Jr., 29.

Grayson was struck in the head, right arm and side.

"There's not any question but he shot him," said Roy Minton, the boy's lawyer.

The boy's father, George Christian, White House press secretary in the last three ytars of the Lyndon Johnson's administration, appeared badly shaken when he arrived at police headquarters with two older sons.

State District Judge Hume Cofer ordered the boy held in the county juvenile detention center. Another hearing was set for May 26.

Under Texas law, Christian cannot be tried for murder because of his age. The most extreme action the judge could take would be to adjudge him a juvenile delinquent and commit him to a state reform school until he is 18.

Christian "was tearful and had his head hung when I saw him in the principal's office," said Sgt. R. Bruce of the juvenile detail.

Bruce described the scene at Murchison Junior High School in affluent northwest Austin as "kids walking up the hallway, consoling each other, arm in arm, some heavily in tears."

About 30 pupils were in Grayson's English class for gifted and talented students when he was killed.

The pupils told police that young Christian had been "disturbed with the teacher in the past." Three unnamed pupils quoted in the Austin Citizen said Grayson had angered the boy recently by giving him a failing grade.

Grayson, a graduate of the University of Texas at Arlington, was in his first year of teaching. His wife teaches at Lyndon B. Johnson High School here.

Grayson also was an amateur actor and was nominated for a local award for his performance in Noel Coward's "Private Lives" at Zachary Scott Theater.

City gets trace of rain

Believe it or not, two light showers early this morning dropped a trace of moisture in the Midland area.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said they recorded showers from 5:10 to 5:44 a.m. and again at 7:08 a.m.

The forecast calls for a continued chance of thunderstorms through Saturday. Predictions are for a 30 percent chance of rain today, 50 percent tonight and 30 percent Saturday.

The weather service also predicts slightly lower temperatures through Saturday. The high today should be in the upper 80s. The low tonight should be in the mid-60s, and the high Saturday in the mid-80s. Winds are expected to be southeasterly, calming tonight to 5 to 10 mph.

Andrews, Crane, Rankin and Big Lake reported cloudy skies this morning, while Andrews and Big Spring had partly cloudy skies. Stanton was clear, and Garden City was hazy.

Thursday's high was 92, and the overnight low was 72. The record high for May 18 is 98 degrees set in 1946, and the record low for today is 46 degrees set in 1972.

Frogs hop, but their critics are hopping mad

ANGELS CAMP, Calif. (AP) — It was funny when Mark Twain's fictional frog lost a jumping contest because someone loaded its belly with buckshot, but animal lovers are not amused when life begins to imitate art.

The Fund for Animals, a Washington based ecology group, says it "seriously questions the humaneness" of the Calveras County Frog Jump, considered the Kentucky Derby of frog jumping since Twain immortalized it in a short story.

The protest was issued as frog-owners from around the world traveled to the fairgrounds here for the four-day jump, which began its second day today.

"During the contests the frogs are jumped at, kicked at and yelled at to make them jump farther" without regard to their feelings, suffering or stress, the Fund for Animals said in a news release.

"Frogs sometimes die from the heat ... from not being kept wet, and from the trauma of the contest," the group charged. "One year an announcer stated that all the crippled frogs could be turned in for good ones. How did so many frogs become crippled?"

The group also said some frogs were pan-fried during the event.

Group member Laurie Matthews said the organization was not calling for an end to the frog jump but instead wanted to make sure the frogs are treated humanely during the competition, not as toys. Afterward, she said, they should be returned to the wild.

A tiny statue of a frog commemorates the event where it began in downtown Angels Camp in the Gold

What's a 'Metroplex,' and is it progress?

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

If change is progress, then stepping up may be stepping down and vice versa.

One measure of man's so-called progress — call it development, if you like — is in word usage. Sometimes the usage is confounding.

For instance, ponder on that new word of clouded origin: metroplex. You'll not find it in the standard dictionaries, not even in the unabridged. Just wait. Given enough usage, particularly by the broadcast media, metroplex will be written into the wordbook by Webster's lexicographers. It'll be interesting to see how it's defined.

Metro, referring to the Paris subway system, is there. But the "plex" is caught in a time lag.

Remember back in the early 1960s, when purists protested Webster's third unabridged edition, which accentuated usages of words shunned by the second edition?

Behold that grand old Gothic word "gay." It's in both editions, but there's an added meaning in the revised dictionary.

"People have forgotten that it used to be good to be gay," commented a fellow of letters. "Now it's a no-no."

To be gay is to be "bright and lively," "excited with merriment," and "first-class." Nowadays, the word often pertains to a faction in society that matches likes to likes. The "gay movement" is here.

Even the now-related word "queer" played a nifty role in communicating ideas. It's been taken over by slang. Perhaps even "quaint," too, will be similarly abused.

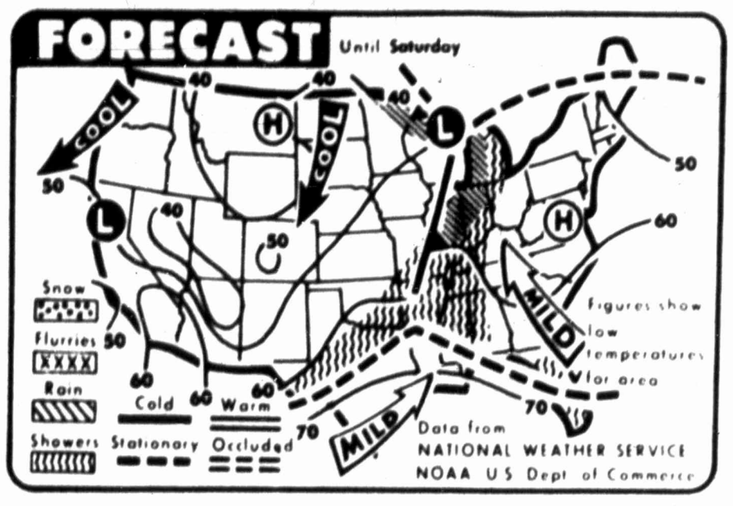

More on "plexes": The State Department of Highways and Transportation is coming out with this one: petroplexes. It has something to do with a traffic-safety campaign.

It, too, may be "written up" by Webster's or by other word experts.

Words are a joy — that's still a good word — with which to work and play. But when their meaning gets cluttered by misuse, something precious is lost: the precise and clear communication of ideas.

That, after all, is what language is all about.

WEATHER SUMMARY

BANDS OF RAIN and showers are forecast today from west Texas and Florida into the Mississippi Valley and north to the Great Lakes. Cool weather, with mostly clear skies, is forecast for the Plains and the West. Temperatures are expected to be mild in the East. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas falling into mobility crunch

Traffic congestion caused by "runaway expansion" in the state's urban areas has led to a slow-down in mobility, B. L. DeBerry, chief administrative officer of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, said in Midland Thursday.

"Texas slowly has been losing mobility since the late 1960s," he said at the noon meeting of the Midland Rotary Club in the Midland Hilton.

DeBerry singled out Houston and the Dallas-Fort Worth areas as being beset with "the mobility crunch."

As possible remedies, he suggested car and van pooling and mass transit systems. Surveys indicate that, on the average, a work car transports 1.2 people. And one bus, if used by those who routinely commute to work by car, would mean "34 fewer vehicles" on the city streets and freeways, he said.

He said each day 411 additional cars enter the traffic flow in Houston.

DeBerry, noting that this is National Transportation Week, based his prepared talk on the slogan "Transportion, America's Lifelines."

He said that 20 percent of the gross national product (GNP) is "generated by the transportation services" and that these services by land, sea and air are second only to agriculture on the GNP scale.

"And agriculture would be paralyzed without transportation," he said.

DeBerry mentioned the "ages" of the 20th century: Plastic Age, Nuclear Age, Air Age, Space Age and "the '60s — the Age of Protests." He called the current period "the darn'dest age ever."

And historians in the year 2078 may reflect on the 1970s and view that decade as "the Age of Transportation, the Age of Mobility," he said.

However, he said that unless the nation makes "smarter use of roads and routes" and unless it turns to an efficient transportation network system, America may be entering an "Age of Stagnation." The choice, he said, is between that and an Age of Enlightenment and Prosperity.

DeBerry, who joined the highway department in 1937 and who became its chief administrator in 1973, talked about Texas' transportation network and of the "interdependence of transportation."

"Everyone benefits from good transportation; everyone loses when transportation is poor," he said.

And good transportation is "taken for granted," DeBerry said.

Re-valuation protested

property valuations.

"I paid $1,300 for my house and land. Last year it was evaluated at $3,700. This time it is $18,300," another resident said.

"Residents of the county are not even allowed to vote for the City Council members, who appoint members of the Board of Equalization (with the approval of the other taxing bodies). This is taxation without representation, and that's what we fought the first war for," one of the participants said.

A.A. Thomas explained some of the avenues of recourse to the residents.

"Under a new bill, which was passed last session (of the Legislature), if an agency wants to increase the taxes, it must hold a public hearing. Also, if you go to court, you do not have to pay the taxes. They are placed in escrow, which usually prevents having to pay a penalty on those taxes," he said.

Ron Britton told residents, "The problem is not the re-evaluation, it's the tax rate. The rate is going to be where we can do something. If they would lower the tax rate then the tax valuation wouldn't hurt you."

Britton charged that the taxing bodies last year did not lower the tax rates in correct proportion to the in city property valuation increases.

Another meeting tentatively has been scheduled for Tuesday to elect leaders and organize action after the Board of Equalization meets Monday.

"Anyone interested in working on this can contact me," Britton said. "I'm going to be fighting them for the next couple of years. If you're interested in a one-night stand, don't call me. This won't be done over night, it's going to take months and even years," Britton said.

Man cleared of robbery charge

A Midland jury Thursday found Joe Cecil Lair innocent of the Feb. 7 armed robbery of the Best Western Motel in Midland.

The verdict came after two prosecution witnesses had been granted immunity from prosecution for their testimony. Jimmy Don Yarborough and Ricky Hendricks, both of Midland, originally refused to testify, claiming their Fifth Amendment right against self incrimination. District Judge Vann Culp ordered the two to testify after granting them immunity.

Yarborough was jailed briefly for contempt of court when he refused to testify after immunity was granted. After about five hours in jail, he decided to testify in the case, thus purging himself of the contempt charge.

Operating room expansion wins approval of hospital directors

Additional personnel in the operating room and a budget to accommodate them was approved Thursday afternoon when the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Directors met.

Eight additional persons will be added to the surgical staff for the remainder of the fiscal year at a cost of $79,000 per year. The total cost on this year's budget and next year's will be $340,000.

The Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees Wednesday discussed adding 11 persons to the surgical staff.

The board decided to send back a proposed contract with Dallas Metroplex Business Interiors Inc. Their initial proposal for coordinating the interior of the new and renovated part of the hospital was $31,000. But the architect already has ordered some items included in the firm's proposed contract, and the proposal was sent back to have the items deleted and the cost lowered.

An indigent care policy was approved by the board. After reviewing some word changes, Frank Cowden Jr. said, "We've been kicking this thing around for four or five months. I think we ought to take this thing and live with it."

The policy sets income guidelines, which taken with size of family, determine who will receive hospital care at no cost to them.

Mrs. John Armstrong presented the Advisory Board's report in which a problem with the pharmacy closing at night was voiced. The pharmacy is open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. But, if a patient needs some type of medication during the night, it must be obtained through the emergency room, and the patient must be billed for it through the emergency room, according to hospital Administrator Wayne Ulrich. Ulrich said he contacted Midland pharmacists and they reported they can not keep their firms open due to potential business hardships involving costs and security.

Dr. Michael Burleson, board member, said the hospital pharmacy's night hours would not be for people to refill prescriptions, but to take care of patients who need medication and can not wait until morning.

The board reconfirmed the anti-discrimination policies outlined in Title VI and Title VII in compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The policies previously had been adopted by Midland Memorial Foundation, said hospital district counsel Ted Kerr.

While considering the "charge-off" accounts totaling $85,000, board member E. H. Magruder Jr. said the hospital should look closer at the names on the list and see what could be done to get the money. Several small charges on the list have remained after the patient's insurance covered their portion, according to Ulrich.

The board went into executive session to consider land acquisitions, but took no action. Wednesday, the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees had recommended purchase of land immediately east of the hospital at a cost of $220,821 for parking.

Lions hear talk on drug abuse

Gregg Robinson, a member of the Midland Police Department assigned to the narcotics division, was the speaker Wednesday noon at the meeting of the Downtown Lions Club in the Midland Hilton.

He said that drug abuse is a pressing problem in Midland — "more widespread than one can imagine."

Marijuana and "pills," he explained, constitute the major problem although a resurgence of "LSD" has been noted of late. Marijuana is everywhere," he said.

The use and availability of heroin also were cited, along with others. Cocaine, he said, is somewhat of a status symbol and has a special clientele here.

"Angel Dust," from the West Coast, has made its appearance here in recent weeks.

The speaker said drugs are readily available here, and all are easy to obtain in and around the high schools.

He explained, however, that a vast majority of the students are not involved in drug abuse.

Robinson said that four full-time officers are assigned to narcotics and that most of their work is with adults.

A question and answer period followed his talk.

Mike Nance was in charge of the program.

Koreagate figure ordered to jail

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hancho C. Kim, a naturalized American citizen, was sent to jail today for six months for conspiring to corrupt congressmen to curry favor with Korea and then lying to a grand jury about receiving $600,000 for the plot.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas A. Flannery ordered Kim to serve three years on each of the two counts but then said the sentences would be suspended after Kim serves six months in prison.

Kim will remain on probation for three years after leaving prison.

Frogs hopping; critics, as well

Rush days when bored miners sought ways to pass the time.

In the frog jump, competitors hop three times on a tarp and the total distance from the starting point is measured. The world record is 19 feet, 3½ inches.

Rules make it illegal to touch a frog once it is placed in the starting circle, but frog-jockeys often stomp on the tarp to urge on the jumpers.

Officials for the contest, where 3,000 entries were expected, could not take the criticism seriously.

"I think we treat our frogs very well," said Linda Whitton, who works in the jubilee's office. "We exercise them, feed them, keep them in a cool place and make sure they are physically fit for the jump.

"We treat them nice and talk to them nice, except when they're jumping, of course," she said with a laugh. "Afterwards they are returned to the pond."

Asked about the allegations that frogs are eaten, Mrs. Whitton said it was "definitely not true. We don't allow any frog legs to be cooked. We don't even talk about it because it might scare the frogs.

"We have a lot of fried chicken, but no fried frog."

WHO's program to assist developing countries

The Los Angeles Times

GENEVA, Switzerland — The World Health Organization has embarked on an ambitious program to aid developing countries which now spend a high percentage of their health care money on pharmaceuticals.

While the United States and other industrial countries spend only about 10 percent of total health care costs for drugs, many undeveloped countries must spend 50 percent of their health budget on drugs.

In fact, total sales of drugs in some developing countries often exceed those countries' entire health budgets, Nakajima said in an interview here.

And, a WHO report said, the situation is getting worse. "The gap between the developed and the developing world in the area of drug manufacture and trade is leading to a situation of increasing seriousness for the developing world," the report said.

Nakajima and Dr. Vittorio Fattorusso, another WHO drug official, were interviewed here during the 31st World Health Assembly. Drug policy is a major topic at the meeting. About 800 delegates from 151 nations are attending.

"In our countries," said Fattorusso, an Italian, "there is concern for the overuse of drugs. In developing countries here is a lack of everything."

One example is chloroquin, an antimalarial drug in great demand in many parts of the world where malaria is making a comeback. A major U.S. supplier no longer makes the drug because there is no demand for it in the United States, Nakajima said. The major supplier today is China.

The underlying problem, WHO officials say, is that pharmaceutical manufacturers appear to pay little heed to the differing health needs and priorities of individual countries.

Because many developing countries lack the technical knowledge to determine which of the tens of thousands of drugs are best suited for their health needs, they have often wasted money on unsuitable drugs.

A special committee of WHO experts has drawn up a list of 200 essential drugs to meet real health needs. They include the usual categories of antibiotics, antimalarials, cardiovascular drugs and so on.

The long-term goal is to get each nation to create its own drug industry rather than to rely on international supply. However, this goal is seen as unrealistic in many developing countries, and another approach is also being suggested.

This would be to point out to the pharmaceutical industry — representatives of which are attending this assembly — that a huge new market exists in undeveloped countries but that the marketing techniques should be vastly different from those traditionally used.

The general idea is to encourage drug companies to cut promotional and packaging costs and to make less profit per unit in order to cut the cost of the drugs. But the firms would be asked to view the whole thing as worthwhile because the potential market is huge.

The concern over drug distribution stems from another basic WHO program aimed at making primary health care accessible to every person in the world by the year 2000.

At present, about 80 percent of the world's population lacks access to health care.

But as Fattorusso said, "Primary health care without drugs is like an army without ammunition — hence our desire to create the awareness and hopefully the international cooperation needed to resolve this problem."

Solons wonder if top brass being muzzled

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Armed Service Committee members are openly questioning whether the nation's top military officers are being muzzled by the White House or are reluctant for other reasons to tell Congress what they really believe.

Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, second-ranking Democrat on the committee, said there is "a feeling more and more the joint chiefs tend to conform, consciously or subconsciously, to the wishes of the president, whether he is a Republican or a Democrat.

"I see a growing conformity, a subtle, subconcious process by which top officers want to conform with their boss....If you want to get along you go along," Jackson said.

He addressed his comments to Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, the man President Carter has nominated as the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staffs to succeed the ailing Gen. George Brown.

Also at Jones' confirmation hearing on Thursday, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, said he was concerned "about the impression the administration is trying to muzzle officers." And Sen. Jelse Helms, R-N.C., said there is growing apprehension about whether military leaders are "moving toward being political."

Both Garn and Helms were unhappy that the joint chiefs supported President Carter on the Panama Canal treaties which the Senate approved in recent months.

In reply, Jones acknowledged that "I have been characterized as a team player," and said "there is a special obligation on senior military people how to conduct themselves."

However, Jones said, he has "no inhibition to express myself openly" and would not hesitate to resign if asked to carry out any order contrary to national security interests.

Said Jones: "I have expressed dissent."

"My obligation is to do it without a lot of publicity and fanfare and within the system," he added.

Jackson said the United States would not have a nuclear Navy without Adm. Hyman Rickover, who fought the Navy establishment in the late 1940s for development of nuclear-powered ships.

"We need a few Rickovers," Jones replied, "but we can't afford too many. I agree with you non-conformity has its role." At the same time, he said, senior officers should not make an end run around the White House to win support from Congress for programs they favor.

Jones said senior officers should not make speeches with foreign policy implications, but should not be afraid to disagree with the administration and be candid when Congress asks them for their personal opinions.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., the committee chairman, said there is no opposition to Jones' selection, which the committee is expected to approve on Monday, along with Gen. Lew Allen Jr. as chief of staff of the Air Force and Adm. Thomas B. Hayward as chief of naval operations.

He's a Communist

Afghanistan is a landlocked piece of Moslem world which somehow never has quite made it into the 20th century.

Ninety percent of its 17 million people neither read nor write. Its wool and carpets are known throughout the world, but for sophisticated Westerners, Afghanistan virtually is a code-word for a country that doesn't really count.

This could change, however, as a result of the coup recently which wiped out President Mohammad Daoud and his government and brought a new "revolutionary council" to power.

After days of uncertainty it now is evident that the new man in charge is a Communist, Nur Mohammad Tarak, whose ideological sympathies lie with the Soviet Union.

President Daoud was known for his skill in playing one power off against the other while trying to modernize his country. Well he might have, since Afghanistan is sandwiched between the more powerful states of Iran and Pakistan, on either side, with the Soviet Union bordering it on the north.

But the Russians have supplied most of the arms and training for the country's 90,000-man army. Most of Afghanistan's trade has been with the Soviet Union. While the late president had kept Moscow at arm's length in his foreign policy, the political background of the new leadership suggests those days may be over.

The prospect of Afghanistan marching in step with Soviet policy in South Asia can give no comfort to Iran and Pakistan.

Nor can Communist China, which maintained good relations with the former regime, look with satisfaction on the advent of a pro-Moscow government.

The focus of attention in the Middle East has been on the Arab-Israeli dispute, with concern about how the Soviet Union might exploit it. From remote Afghanistan comes the ominous sound of scuffling at Middle East's back door.

And so it goes in numerous countries around the world.

A wise choice

Last spring, Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub criticized President Carter's decision to withdraw combat forces from South Korea and wound up paying the price for this dissent, as Mr. Carter switched his command from Korea to Georgia.

Now it is apparent that Gen. Singlaub wasn't content to speak his mind only once. His conscience ran over recently, this time before ROTC cadets at Georgia Tech.

Gen. Singlaub disagreed with the President's decisions on the B-1 bomber and the neutron bomb. He also slapped at Paul Warnke, the chief arms negotiator in the SALT talks, and took the minority view on the Panama Canal.

Right quick like he was called up to the Pentagon and asked to resign. He did so, by retiring.

This was the proper thing to do, and it is fortunate that the outspoken major general did not stubbornly insist on staying in the army and speaking out as he saw necessary.

It now would be unfortunate, however, if his opinions were explained away because it was he who spoke them.

There is, after all, a point in his criticisms of Mr. Carter on the B-1 and the neutron bomb, and there is good reason to be wary of the agreement the administration is negotiating in the SALT talks.

Gen. Singlaub now joins those in the civilian population who have been saying the very same thing.

The general is our kind of folks, as they say.

ART BUCHWALD

Free-spending Percival lives it up; and how!

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — If inflation keeps rising the way it is now, this is the kind of story we can expect to read on our society pages by 1981:

"Percival Flagstone, scion of the Flagstone chewing gum fortune and noted playboy, checked into Peppermint Hospital yesterday for a gall bladder operation. In keeping with his reputation for free-spending Percival demanded a private room. He told reporters laughingly, 'I'm going to stay for two weeks and I may blow half my trust fund, but what the hell, I might as well go first class.' When asked what his operation would cost, Percival just chuckled and said, 'If you have to ask what an operation will cost, you can't afford one.'

"The young millionaire has been noted for spending money like water. Last month he took a movie actress to dinner and they both had T-bone steaks. When the papers got wind of it, Percival was indignant and said, 'It's my money and I can do anything I want with it. Just because most people can't afford T-bone steaks is no reason why I can't eat one if I feel like it.'

"Percival was left a fortune of $20 million which his bankers estimate is now down to five. One of the trustees told this reporter, 'The man has no idea that if he keeps spending at the present rate he won't have anything left in two years. He had strawberries for dessert three nights in a row, and he bought two pairs of shoes this year. No matter how much a person has, he can't keep up that pace and not use up all his principal.

"But Percival has no intention of slowing down. He told this reporter, 'There are no strings attached to my inheritance and I'm even thinking of buying a new tuxedo this year. My theory about money is that if you've got it, flaunt it.

"'I was terribly criticized when I bought a new azalea bush for my house last year,' Percival told this reporter, 'but I happen to like azaleas, and although there are only about 100 people in this country who can still afford them we are giving work to greenhouses and florists, and it angers me when the papers make such a big deal of it.'

"Percival just bought a two-bedroom split-level brick house on a quarter-acre of land in Washington, D.C., that is estimated to have cost him $5 million. The estate, which once was owned by a conductor on the Penn Central Railroad, has two bathrooms, one on the top floor and one in the basement. It also has a dining room. 'They say I went wild when I bought it. But I consider it a very good investment. In two years the house will be worth $7 million, and then I wonder how many people will say I threw away my money.'

"'Is it true you're buying a four-door Toyota?' I asked him.

"'I haven't made up my mind yet, but someone has offered me one at a very good price and I might get it. Ever since I was a kid I've wanted a car, and I may sell the AT and T bonds my grandmother left me if I can break the trust. No one said anything when the Rockefellers bought a VW last summer for $2 million, yet when they hear I put in a bid for a Toyota it's a front-page story.'

"'Perhaps,' I said, 'it's because you do everything with a flair. Is it true that after your operation you are thinking of going to London on Laker Airways?'

"'Yes, I am. But it's not just for pleasure. I hope to visit our plant in Manchester while I'm there. Everyone thinks I fly Laker just for pleasure, but many times I use it for business.

"Percival is known for the lavish gifts he gives the women he is seen with around town. Just the other day he bought a 14-carat gold necklace from J.C. Penney for $800,000, and last month he gave a well-known model a rhinestone-covered compact from Montgomery Ward's worth $600,000. 'To me they're just trinkets, but to most of the women I date they're a month's salary.'

"My final question to Percival before he was wheeled into his private room was, 'Percival, you seem to have done it all. You've eaten a T-bone steak, bought an azalea bush, you own a two-bedroom house and you've flown Laker Airlines. Is there anything you still want to buy?'

"He thought a moment and said, 'Well, I've always wanted to own a crate of California lettuce, but even for someone like me that's out of the question.'"

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Soviet trawlers after 'big catch'

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — A Soviet fishing trawler, its antenna bristling, suddenly appeared off the Georgia coast on March 17. An intelligence document suggests it was interested in bigger game than seafish. This was the day President Carter made an inspection tour aboard the USS Eisenhower in Georgia waters.

The Argus-eyed trawler, between catches, had an exclusive view of the president's movements. States the confidential document dryly: "President Carter's recent presence on the USS Eisenhower would naturally peak Soviet interest in the ship's activity." In fact, Soviet spy ships in fishing guise monitor U.S. naval activities around the world. They keep an intense watch, for example, on the Navy's Polaris and Poseidon missile-carrying submarines. Polaris-Poseidon bases in "Charleston, South Carolina; Holy Loch, Scotland; Rota, Spain; and the U.S. territory of Guam" have become favorite fishing grounds for Soviet trawlers, reports a secret Navy paper.

The ubiquitous trawlers known inside the Pentagon as AGIs, have also been patrolling the U.S. eastern coast since 1959. "The Soviet unit currently operating off the U.S. east coast," reports an eyes-only memo, is the AGI 'Zakapate'...She should be relieved in the very near future by another AGI, 'Zakapate.' The story of the Soviet fishing fleet is told in intelligence documents stamped "secret" and we have also had "confidential" access to secret briefings prepared for House Merchant Marine Chairman John Murphy, D.N.Y. The "primary mission" of the fishing flotilla, states the papers, "is believed to be the monitoring of U.S. submarine bases and aircraft carriers ... It is not unusual to observe a Soviet AGI in trail of U.S. aircraft carriers off the East Coast." Of course, the trawlers carry sophisticated electronic equipment more suitable for picking up intelligence than fish. Secret testimony before Murphy's committee has described the fishing Trawlers as the biggest "electronic intelligence collectors on the high seas—the eyes and ears of Soviet naval intelligence."

The latest Soviet spy ships also carry "jamming" equipment. At least 100 of these are scattered among the trawlers that prowl the seven seas.

The Soviet explanation that the trawler fleet is merely supplying seafood for the proletarian table, of course, is the world's biggest "fish story."

The trawlers keep their electronic antennae trained particularly on U.S. military operations. According to the secret papers, the Soviets have used 24 different ships to carry out no less than 84 separate spying missions on U.S. military maneuvers.

The fishing-spying operation, it should be added, is part of a far bigger story — that is, the Soviet Union's growing naval power. Vice Admiral W.J. Moran has described what's happening on the oceans: "What are the Soviets doing? Go back in the history of the United States, back to the whaling ships and the clipper ships. We established our presence in all the ports of the world, and we built our Navy to protect our maritime commerce, just as the British had done ... This had very much to do with the industrial growth of the United States.

"There is a remarkable similarity in what the Russians are doing. They are building beautiful merchant and navy ships, the most modern of our day. They have excellent, well-trained, well-disciplined crews. We are seeing ourselves starting to share the world with our competitors."

The boss of the Soviet navy, Andrei Gorshkov, has put it even better. The Kremlin's aim, he said, is "to effectively utilize the world's oceans in the interest of building Communism."

WASHINGTON WHIRL: President Carter has ordered the Health, Education and Welfare Department to draft regulations barring "unreasonable discrimination" against anyone, young or old, because of age. The new rules would apply to all federally funded projects. At a closed-door meeting, the president urged all his Cabinet members "to assign some of their ablest people to work on this complex and controversial project."

— Ambassador-at-large Arthur Goldberg recently handed President Carter a report on the International Human Rights Conference held in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. The confidential report was entitled, "Lessons from Belgrade." One of the lessons, Goldberg stressed, was the importance of keeping human rights high on the Administration's agenda. Goldberg warned the president not to just "sit by and wait" for the next human rights conference in Madrid but to pursue human rights actively, especially with Eastern nations.

—Members of Congress may insert almost anything they wish in the Congressional Record. This includes not only the speeches they make but some they don't make. Under the latest rules, a tell-tale mark is printed next to speeches that are not delivered but simply inserted. But There's a loophope. A congressman can avoid having his contribution to history marked simply by reading the first three lines aloud. The rest of the speech is printed just as if he had held his colleagues entranced.

NICK THIMMESCH

Fidel Castro's Cuba won't be lured out of Africa

HAVANA, Cuba — The United States cannot rely on dangling a few trade goodies to get Fidel Castro to think twice about his African escapades. The United States would have to take extraordinarily tough measures against Cuba and the Soviets before the Cubans would vamoose from that seething continent.

The Cuban involvement is the tonic Castro feels he must administer to prevent ideological fatigue at home.

It is ideology and a little nudge from the Soviet Union which dispatched some 50,000 Cubans — military, doctors, teachers and technicians — to combat areas in Angola and Ethiopia, to fan out into Zaire and Eritrea, and pose a threat to South West Africa and Rhodesia.

The line in Cuba, as one official told me, is that the revolutionary socialist forces in the world "helped us when we needed it in our struggle against reactionary, imperialist enemies like the U.S., and now it is our turn to help revolutionary liberation forces everywhere."

"It might appear that Ethiopia is quite distant," Castro told cheering multitudes in Havana recently, "but there are no longer any distances in today's world."

Even more recentiy, Fidel proclaimed that "Mengistu (Ethiopian Communist ruler) is the basic link between the Cuban revolution and the Ethiopian revolution," adding that Mengistu "is a staunch advocate of Marxism-Leninism." And last week, Castro hosted Col. Joachim Yhombi Opango, president of the Congo, another Marxist-Leninist, though not as strident.

It seems that President Carter is waking up to the increasing Cuban presence in Africa, though we haven't heard much from Andrew Young yet. In the end, there will be far more fussing about it in the U.S. than in Cuba, because in Cuba the "news" is disseminated long after the fact.

The official organ of the Cuban Communist party, Gramma, devotes acres of newsprint and photos after Fidel has proclaimed the triumph. "We didn't publish articles telling of any difficulties in Angola," explained Elio Constantin, Gramma's deputy editor. "We didn't publish casualty figures either.

"We are in agreement with the revolutions in Africa, but we are not as reponsible as we are painted for everything going on in Africa. We are not stepping up activities around Rhodesia."

The "truth" Constantin frequently speaks of presumably includes the horror stories found in a new official book on the Ethiopian Revolution. One of its revelations claims Emperor Haile Selassie had two young black Muslim girls dressed in white brought to his palace on his birthdays where they were sacrificed and their blood cast into the palace lake. Then, the article went on, "the Emperor bathed naked in that water and drank of it," to prevent him from becoming "old and frail."

Whether this tale is believed by many Cubans is anybody's guess. But Cubans turn out enthusiastically when Fidel gives public speeches on Africa. Afterwards, according to a priest I talked with, there is talk in the neighborhoods about how difficult it is for Cubans in Africa. "Some people are not so pleased," he said, "but they accept it. Others are enthusiastic and even want to go. Nobody really opposes it."

In the U.S., there is occasional chatter that the U.S. can get Cuba out of Africa by lifting the trade embargo. Cuban officials are the first to recognize this as nonsense. "Africa to us," said Wilfredo Cordoba, a top official in the Ministry of Higher Education, "is solidarity with the international revolution. It is becoming part of the political training of our young people who go there."

There is an entire generation of Cuban youth born after the revolution of 1959 who are already described as occasionally unappreciative of the new order and take its benefits for granted. Therefore, they need a mission, and going to Africa to teach, establish medical clinics, build villages or fight imperialists is that mission.

The fact that this mission fits the purposes of the Soviet Union is considered an irrational argument by a demented Yankee visitor.

Still, when Cubans couldn't be tranpported in great numbers or very fast by the Bristol Brittanias they owned, the Soviets came in quickly with Aeroflot passenger planes and then turned over three Illushian-62s to Cubans for their use.

When you press Cuban Communist officials about fighting between other comrade states, Vietnam and Cambodia or Ethiopia and Eritrea (once saluted by Cuba as a revolutionary force), they only say it is regrettable and that they want to play a mediator's role.

They do not admit that Cubans have assisted Ethiopia against Eritrea or that there has been a bloodbath in Cambodia. "We don't publish articles about the Cambodian reports," says editor Constantin. "We publish the truth and only the truth. We might make a mistake, but we never tell a lie."

The "truth" is always told by Castro who sees himself as the charismatic leader of the Third World that in some ways he is. Just as he cast out the imperialistic devils from Cuba nearly 20 years ago — so the Big Story goes — Fidel will play a major role in casting out imperialistic devils everywhere (except in Latin America where he failed).'

Lately, Jimmy Carter has lamented the Cuban adventure. Still, the Cubans weren't saying bad things about him last week, and Castro even complimented him several months ago. Nixon is the President the Cubans really hate, and Kennedy follows closely.

Today the U.S. does little to stop the Cubans in Africa, and it is doubtful that we will. For some reason, we only talk of trade missions and widening relations.

This fainthearted approach led Henry Kissinger to remark recently: "If we are forever blackmailed by the Cubans — a country of nine million off our shores — no constructive (African) policy is possible. What has become of our country when we explain foreign policy by the myth of the invincible Cubans?"

DEATHS

Homer Haygood

BIG SPRING — Homer M. Haygood, 86, a Big Spring resident since 1951, died Thursday morning in a Big Spring hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 3:30 p.m. Saturday in Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home in Big Spring. Burial will be in Colorado City Cemetery.

Haygood was a Watkins products dealer for 16 years in Mitchell County and later worked in civil service in Big Spring.

He was born June 9, 1891, in Walker City. He served in World War I. Haygood was married to Cauty Berry on May 6, 1923, in Seagraves. He moved to Big Spring from Lamesa in 1951.

Haygood had been a deacon in the Baptist church for 55 years.

Survivors include his wife; five daughters, Tavia Marricle and Ethel Head, both of Snyder, Ina Aerl of Waco, Minnie Anderson of Delta, Colo., and Johnnie Gainey of Sweetwater; a brother, Arnold Haygood of Loraine, and 15 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Washington

BROWNFIELD — Services for Fannie Washington, 61, of Brownfield were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Greater New Hope Baptist Church here with the Rev. J. L. Shelman, pastor, officiating. Burial was to be in Mount Zion Cemetery directed by Brownfield Funeral Home.

Mrs. Washington was the sister of Fred Hunter of Lamesa and Dell Deboskie of Midland.

She died Tuesday in a Brownfield hospital after a lengthy illness.

A Rosebud native, Mrs. Washington moved to Brownfield from Temple in 1971. She was a member of the Greater New Hope Baptist Church.

Other survivors include a daughter and three grandchildren.

Maggie Davidson

NEVADA CITY, Calif. — Services for Maggie Bessie Davidson, 75, a 15-year resident of this city and sister of Mrs. James O. Simmons of Midland, were held May 12 in the Bergemann and Son Funeral Chapel here.

Mrs. Davidson died May 10 in a convalescent hospital here.

She was born Feb. 10, 1903, in Oklahoma. She and her husband had resided here since 1963. She was a member of the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

Survivors also include her husband, three sons, a daughter, a brother, another sister, 10 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Edna Murdock

KERMIT — Services for Edna Bell Murdock, 65, of Monahans were to be at 10 a.m. today in Cooper Funeral Home in Kermit with burial in Kermit Cemetery. She was the sister of Nadine Steson and Pauline Sheffield, both of Rankin.

Mrs. Murdock died Wednesday at her home in Monahans.

She was born Feb. 18, 1913, in Whitesboro and had lived in Monahans since moving there from Kermit in 1972. She was a Baptist.

Other survivors include a son, two daughters, three brothers, a sister, 12 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Melvin Tindol

BIG SPRING — Melvin E. Tindol, 79, of Canadian and formerly of Coahoma, died Wednesday afternoon in Canadian.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the First United Methodist Church of Coahoma. Arrangements are being handled by River-Welch Funeral Home of Big Spring. Place of burial is pending.

Tindol had lived in Coahoma from 1934 until last year, when he moved to Canadian in the Texas Panhandle.

He was a dirt contractor and school bus driver in Coahoma for years and later owned a store there.

Survivors include his wife, Christine Tindol; three sons, Grady Tindol of Coahoma, Melvin Tindol Jr. of Canadian and William Tindol of Uvalde; a daughter, Frankie Pelton of Canadian; two brothers, Marcelle Tindol of Houston and Walker Tindol of Odessa; a sister, Marie Miller of Big Spring, 13 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Before coming to Big Spring three years ago, he was executive director of the Family Service Association in Lubbock and held similar positions in Fort Worth and Corpus Christi. He was a member of the United Church of Christ in Lubbock.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Paul (Rosemary) Nielsen of Vancouver, British Columbia; his mother, Mabel Calnan of Honolulu; a brother, Noel Calnan of Honolulu; two sisters, Sheila Alice Dunn and Cecile St. John, both of Vancouver, and eight grandchildren.

Carter family book drawing heated remarks from subjects

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Billy Carter wasn't the only one who took cousin Hugh to task for his new book about the Carter family, Hugh Carter has admitted.

He said Thursday that when he ran into President Carter's mother, Miss Lillian at an airport a few weeks ago, "She got really angry and said, 'You're the scum of the earth.' "

In fact, cousin Hugh said here on a tour to plug his book, the only Carter to thank him for an autographed copy of "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot" was the first lady. He said Rosalynn Carter wrote him that she and the president were reading and enjoying the book.

In Arapahoe, Colo., on Wednesday Billy Carter called Hugh a few names, suggested he belonged in a mental hospital and accused him of lying in the book, particularly about Miss Lillian.

The book cites "family gossip" that Miss Lillian felt Rosalynn was not good enough to marry into the family and that she "hit the ceiling" when her son, Jimmy, announced their engagement.

"I deny I'm a liar, of course," the author said. "Everything in my book is true. You know, the truth hurts sometimes and maybe it's hurting Billy right now."

In fact, Hugh suggested, Billy ought to be kindlier about the whole thing.

"I don't even feel he's a redneck. He's a fine businessman and in my book I praise Billy more than he's ever been praised before," cousin Hugh said.

Class concludes at Greenwood

The Greenwood Lions Club Thursday night concluded a coronary pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) training class which was attended by approximately two dozen persons.

The class had an opening session Monday night and the concluding session Thursday night. Both sessions took place in the Greenwood Baptist Church.

Greenwood is 10 miles east of Midland.

Soviet dissidents draw sentences

MOSCOW (AP) — Two more Soviet dissidents drew stiff sentences today, family sources said, one day after the sentencing of Yuri Orlov.

Zviad Gamsakhurdia and Merab Kostava were sentenced to three years in a labor camp followed by two years internal exile on a charge of "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda."

Orlov was sentenced on the same charge Thursday and received the maximum sentence of seven years in a labor camp plus five years' internal exile, or banishment from Moscow.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Gamsakhurdia and Kostava pleaded guilty to the charge, which Orlov did not, and that Gamsakhurdia said he repented.

Orlov helped set up a civil rights group in Moscow that exposed Soviet violations of the 1975 Helsinki accords. Gamsakhurdia and Kostava founded the Soviet Georgian branch of the group and were tried there.

Health proposal advanced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is not expected to begin a lengthy debate over national health insurance until next year, but four senior members of the Senate Finance Committee have advanced their proposal for helping Americans meet the costs of catastrophic illnesses.

The present state-federal Medicaid plan would be replaced under the legislation by a new system of benefits that would be taxed a penny for every $2 they pay their workers to cover the program's expenses.

Employers would have the option of deciding whether the employees would be covered by the government's plan or a private insurance package.

Costs were not yet estimated for the measure introduced Thursday by the committee chairman, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., and Sens. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga.; Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn.; and Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The expense and how to meet it are expected to be the major issues of the debate, which will begin after President Carter submits his proposals, expected to more closely reflect the ideas of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., health subcommittee chairman on the Human Resources Committee.

Long's committee has jurisdiction over tax-financed health programs.

The Carter package is expected to propose coverage beyond major medical expenses.

About 18 million Americans lack any medical insurance and millions more are covered only for certain conditions, the Congressional Budget Office has estimated.

FASTER than a speeding bullet, Bill Haehnel explains, lasers are used to transmit telephone calls along glass light fiber. The light fiber, which is hair-thin, is less bulky than the copper cables now being used by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in the Midland area, Haehnel told members of the Kiwanis Club Thursday. Haehnel, a Bell representative, also told of attachments to help deaf, blind and mute persons use the telephone.

Guerrillas shoot mercy workers

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Two Swiss citizens working for the International Red Cross and an assistant were "made to kneel and were shot dead" by nationalist guerrillas near the Mozambique border, the military command announced today.

It said the three were killed Thursday at Nyamaropa near Inyanga about six miles from the border in an area heavily infiltrated with black nationalist guerrillas. The names of the victims were not released.

In Geneva, the Red Cross reported the three had been killed but said they died in a traffic accident. A spokeswoman said she had no additional information but that the three "may have been ambushed."

A Rhodesian military spokesman said the three were traveling in a Red Cross vehicle that was clearly marked when they were stopped by guerrillas.

A Red Cross spokesman here said he could not confirm the account issued by the military.

Betty Carter sings bebop jazz like nobody's business

By MAGGIE STEBER

NEW YORK (AP) — One thing you can say for sure about Betty Carter: Either you've never heard of her or you'd spend your last dime to hear her sing.

She's one-of-a-kind. And those who have heard her sing become true and steadfast fans, bearing just a bit of a grudge that she, one of the first ladies of jazz, is so little known to music lovers, especially those in the black culture whence her music came.

Betty Carter sings jazz born of the bebop era. She got her start 30 years ago at a time when jazz was at its purest and hottest, and she's played with the best. Today, she is one of the few links to that greatest period of creative music in American history.

Betty Carter's music is based on the strongest of foundations, influenced by artists like Dizzie Gillespie, Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Lionel Hampton and Max Roach.

And no one knows her own music better than Betty Carter. Songs like "Seems Like Old Times," "Blue Moon," "Heart and Soul," "Girl Talk," and "Round Midnight" are frequently revisited, the result a bit different each time.

Betty Carter got her start in Detroit in 1947. She had just won a local amateur contest and mustered the courage to stop by the El Cino Club to meet Charlie Parker, there for a week's engagement.

"Charlie Parker was supposed to rehearse one afternoon at the club," she recalls, "and when he walked in, I was the first person he saw.

"He asked me where he could get something to eat. I said across the street, and away we went. That week he let me sing with him. The week before, Dizzie had been in town and I got to sing with him, too. It was an incredible way to start. Those fellas were jazz greats even then, especially Parker."

From Detroit, she moved to New York and joined Lionel Hampton's band. She toured with Hampton from 1948 to 1951. He called her "Bebop Betty," a label she didn't like because it suggested all she did was bebop and scat.

Betty Carter is an independent person, and that's affected both her musical style and her approach to the business. She's her own business manager and records on what to sing."

Indeed, the lady has a tight grip on every facet of her career — from arranging to managing an accompanying trio.

In performance before an audience — she prefers that to recording — she is spellbinding. Her voice trips over some songs in a staccato that takes off with the beat of a runaway metronome — and melts over others like cool molasses.

For the audience, Betty Carter is as much a visual treat as her voice is a sensual one. She's no taller than 5-foot-6, and has a supple body that sings as much as her voice.

Her whole life has been jazz — not the "junk jazz" as one writer describes the fare on commercial jazz radio — but the purest essence of what jazz was and is.

"Jazz was so educational, it was a new approach to the music, so you had to really know your instrument and know how to improvise with it," she says. "At the time I started singing, the thing most on our minds wasn't to make hit records like today. It was to create something. ... "

Then, she says, jazz was spontaneous. "You'd take a known melody and sing it or play it with a different approach. But it stopped with bebop, true jazz. Then free jazz came along and that was mainly for musicians but anyone could play free jazz. It had no connection with the old tunes.

"The idea of pure jazz," she says, "was to take something old and update it, do something different. Everybody walked differently, talked differently, the whole environment had changed and that's what made the revisiting of old tunes new. Free jazz stopped the evolution of the 'newer-than' music, which was what true jazz really is."

Betty Carter is lauded by colleagues, jazz greats like Sarah Vaughan and Ella Fitzgerald, as a singer's singer. But her value to the music form goes beyond that.

She is a walking, living historian who knows those who rose to the top and those who stayed at the bottom. And she is concerned that the history of this basically black music is not reaching black youths.

"No one is giving the music to our people," she says. "They pass off things as being jazz that have no business being in that category.

"Once I went to sing at a drug rehabilitation center in Washington. You should have seen the eyes of those young blacks who really thought that what they had been listening to was jazz. They had no idea they hadn't been listening to pure jazz. It was a shock to me, the looks on those faces, because they sincerely didn't know what pure jazz was.

"And they loved it. It's up to those of us involved in pure jazz to pass it on. Perhaps now it is our most important function."

Champion ropers to compete

TANKERSLEY — Two champion calf ropers will compete in a special "showdown match" scheduled Saturday in the arena at West Texas Boys Ranch here. They will rope eight calves each.

The ropers are Roy Cooper of Durant, Okla., and Barry Burk of Duncan, Okla.

Cooper was the 1977 PRCA calf roping champion, and finished in third place in the National Finals Rodeo.

Burk ranked sixth in the PRCA last year and finished fourth in the National Finals.

There also will be a two-calf average jackpot roping event, with scores of ropers from all over Texas participating. A girls barrel racing event also is scheduled.

The rodeo events will start at 10 a.m. Admission is by donation to Boys Ranch. A barbecue will be served at noon.

The public is invited.

Clandestine support for anti-Cuban forces weighed

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — White House strategists for at least two months have attempted to develop a plan to permit the United States to funnel sophisticated arms and funds clandestinely to African guerrilla forces fighting Soviet-backed Cuban troops in Angola and Ethiopia.

This objective is an underlying motive, according to authoritative sources, behind the frustration expressed by President Carter to congressional leaders on Tuesday. Carter that reached the public.

Visible now is the new Western aid and air-rescue mission to Zaire in the wake of the border-crossing from guerrillas into Zaire's rich copper belt.

That double operation has been launched with unpublicized apprehension by some official inside the Carter administration that it is, as one put it, " first step into the quicksand — on the Vietnam model." Others strongly disagree, insisting that in Zaire the Carter administration is involved only in "aid and humanitarian" objectives.

But apart from what is happening around Kolwezi, there is a web of strategic concerns especially preoccupying Carter and his national security affairs adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Brzezinski, who left Washington Thursday for China, is described by informed sources as at least as "obsessed" with the Soviet-Cuban projection of military power into Africa as was former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger over Angola in 1975-76.

To Brzezinski, what is at stake is a fundamental test of the validity of American-Soviet detente, and he is determine to do anythng he can to thwart the Russians' Cuban "mercenaries" or surrogates in Africa.

In Peking, Brzezinski evidently will encounter similar attitudes. China has its own anti-Soviet involvement and stake in Africa. The New China News Agency reported from Peking Thursday that in a meetiong between Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua and Zaire's ambassador to Peking, "The ambassador informed him of the grave situation of the renewed invasion of the Shabe region engineered by the Soviet Union and executed by Cuban mercenaries," and that Hunag replied that China will "firmly support" Zaire in its "just struggle to repulse the Soviet-Cuban mercenaries..."

Where Brzezinski and Huang will go from there is an open question.

According to soufces in Washington, Brzezinski wants the United States to shake free from the Vietnam War-inspired curbs on presidential power enough to permit U.S. aid for clandestine operations in Africa "to pin down the Cubans" and limit their ability to stretch into other adventures — notably in Rhodesia.

The extent to which President Carter completely shares these perceptions attributed to Brzezinski about what must be done to resist the Soviet-Cuban thrust in Africa is not clear — even to some of the most senior administration officials.

There is burgeoning concern at the top of the administration, (as in Congress) about the scope of the Soviet-Cuban adventurism in Africa, among Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and others, even including many of the pro-Africanists who were dismayed by Kissinger's fixation on the superpower struggle in Africa.

But what is in profound dispute behnd the scenes inside the administration is what the United Staes should, or can, do about it.

Election due to be mostly formality

HOBBS,N.M. — The primary election June 6 in Lea County apparently will be mostly a formality.

Only six races are contested.

Incumbent District Judge D.D. Archer, judge for the Fifth Judicial District, will face Harvey W. Fort, a Carlsbad attorney.

Three persons are seeking the District I Lea County Commission post being vacated by incumbent Troy Fort. Candidates are C.L. "Bobby" Lewis of Crossroads, Idell Pope Savisky of Lovington and Eddie Robinson of Lovington.

Three candidates also are seeking the post of county clerk. They are June Jacobs, Marjoire Northcutt and Jane Rice Smith.

For the District III county commissioner post for District III, incumbent Aubrey Burl Williams of Eunice will face Vern S. Gary of Eunice.

The other contested races are for magistrates in Lovington and Eunice. Division I Magistrate Drayton Wasson of Lovington will face Lovington Municipal Judge Jessie Meil and Harvey C. Markley, a Lovington attorney. In Eunice, Magistrate Millard R.C. Hayes is being opposed by Municipal Judge Lesta D. Burdett.

Summer car repair tips given

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hot weather is on the way and experts say a few minutes spent with your automobile now can help avoid inconvenience and expense later.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that overheating is one of the most common causes of vehicle breakdowns during the hot months.

Besides the inconvenience, overheating can lead to serious engine damage. And many times, the agency says, these breakdowns are caused by the failure of an inexpensive hose or belt.

Such failures could become more common now that many motorists are pumping their own gasoline to save money, and thus are forgoing the checks of radiator, belts and hoses often performed by service station attendants.

So the agency advices motorists to make a special check of these items, or have them checked, particularly before embarking on a trip.

If the belts and hoses are several years old officials suggest replacing them. And they urge you to keep a roll of duct tape in your car; it can often stop a leak until you get to a service station.

If you want to check your car yourself, here's what to look for:

—Look for swelling or bulging hoses, soft spots or cracks in hoses, especially near the ends where the clamps are fastened. Also, look at the hoses with the engine running, but be careful of moving parts and stop the engine before touching the hoses.

—Listen for squeaks or grinding noises from the water pump, which may signal impending failure.

—If you have to add coolant periodically you may have a leak in a hose or your car seems to run hot you may have a thermostat not working.

—If your car seems to run hot you may have a cooling system problem, perhaps a faulty thermostat or a blockage by rust or sludge. Have this checked before you become stranded along a highway.

—Check fan belts for cracks, peeling, splitting or glazing. With the engine off check the belts for tension and look at the underside.

SPEAKING OF CARS — The American Automobile Association reports that New England is the most expensive region to own a car, while the Southwest is cheapest.

Nationwide the cost of owning and operating an auto has held steady at 19.6 cents per mile for the past three months, the auto club said.

Artificial hearts work

BOSTON (AP)—A second patient at University Hospital has been successfully taken off an artificial heart that was implanted to allow his own damaged heart to heal, a hospital spokesman said Thursday.

About 25 patients have received the experimental heart pumps in Boston and Houston over the past two years. But the two University Hospital patients are the first to survive on their own after the mechanical devices were removed.

The second patient, described as a man in his 40s, had the pump implanted in early May when his heart failed after open-heart surgery. Four days later the pump, called a left ventricular assist device, was removed, and the man's natural heart resumed pumping.

Children of divorce may suffer psychologically

BY GINNY PITT

NEW YORK (AP) — Children of divorce. Thousands of them may suffer severe psychological damage because their parents do not know that divorce is not a problem for adults only, a child psychologist says.

Dr. Lee Salk, who went through a highly publicized divorce and custody battle with his ex-wife three years ago, says his children — Pia, 10, and Eric, 16 — came through the trauma unscathed.

During his own divorce, which Salk says is the second most stressful situation next to the death of a loved one, and in his years as a psychologist, Salk has learned much about children and divorce.

He has put what he has learned into a book called "What Every Child Would Like Parents to Know About Divorce." It is aimed not only at parents who are contemplating divorce but at parents who are not.

In fact, Salk believes it can be more damaging to a child to live with two unhappy married parents than one divorced parent.

Staying together "for the sake of the children" places a burden on children and gives them a poor image of marriage — which is likely to make them unhappy adults — he says. But children who are treated with dignity and consideration through a divorce learn that problems can be solved, unhappy situations can be worked out.

In an interview in his Park Avenue apartment, Salk calls his children into the library. They are friendly, spontaneously affectionate children because, Salk says, "they have two loving parents," even though their parents do not live together.

In what was once an unprecedented move, Salk, rather than his ex-wife, was awarded custody of the children. The custody battle, he says, was not based on who would be the most unfit parent but who would be the most fit parent. And that, says Salk, is the way all custody cases should be handled, without regard to parental gender.

Even when there is not custody dispute, children are deeply affected by divorce, Salk says. And he believes the most important thing parents must do is discuss the matter with their children. Shielding or protecting them may cause great harm, he says, and most parents underestimate the ability of children to understand divorce.

The major fears children have about divorce are fear that they are to blame and fear of abandoment, Salk says.

"What did I do tho cause this? This is often the first thing that will come into a child's mind ... It's a human thing ... All of us experience this one time or another," he says.

The fear of abandonment stems from the fear that since the parents have stopped loving each other, they may someday stop loving the child.

Children must be assured that they did not cause the divorce and that their parents will never stop loving them, Salk says.

He also believes parents should avoid "putting each other down" to the children but shouldn't go too far in the other direction, because the children may then become confused, wondering why, if one spouse is such a wonderful person, the other would want a divorce.

Major consideration should be given to children's feelings in working out a divorce, Salk says. Children should not make decisions such as where and with whom they will live — but their desires should be sought and considered when the decisions are made, he says.

Many parents try to shield children by cutting them out of the decision-making process. "Children have to be treated with dignity," Salk says. "They have to be treated as people" capable of participating in decisions which affect their lives.

Salk says no one can generalize about children and divorce to say, for instance, at what age a child is the most or least vulnerable or what socio-economic background spawns the most troubled children of divorce. "I'm highly suspect of anyone who says you can do this," he says. "It's just not possible.

Here are some suggestions Salk advances:

—Don't undermine the child's trust by making promises that can't be kept in order to ease the unhappiness.

—Share feelings with the child, but don't use him or her as a counselor.

—Don't be overprotective, such as sending the child off to camp or boarding school until the divorce is final.

—Avoid placing the child in the position of having to make a choice between his or her parents.

—And don't use the child as a go-between with the ex-spouse.

Federal government attempting to end 'redlining' practice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government decided today to prohibit savings and loan associations from discriminating in mortgage lending on the basis of the age or location of the building.

The action by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is intended to end "redlining" — a practice in which lenders write off an aging urban neighborhood as too risky for loans.

The board also ordered federally chartered savings and loans to ask loan applicants to state their race, sex, marital status and age. If a lender made no loans to minorities, it would "flag potential discriminatory loan decisions" the board said in a statement.

Board member Garth Marston, although voting for the proposal, said he feared the forms for keeping track of minority applications would create too much paper work and cost savings and loan associations money.

When first proposed on Nov. 9, Vice President Walter F. Mondale said it would be "the strongest action ever taken by a federal agency to prohibit mortgage credit practices which discriminate against older neighborhoods."

The U.S. League of Savings Associations says the proposal, which would affect nearly all of the nation's $444 billion savings and loan industry, "could be so inflexible as to force lenders to make unsound loans or to deny mortgage credit to worthy borrowers."

The home loan board's chairman, Robert H. McKinney, said lenders are unduly alarmed, however.

McKinney, a Naval Academy classmate of President Carter, said he just wants to prevent lenders from writing off a neighborhood as risky without looking at the value of a specific piece of property.

Guidelines accompanying the rules do allow savings and loan institutions to consider such physical characteristics as a dwelling's "remaining economic life or exposure to environmental hazards."

"If you make a careful inventory of your city neighborhoods, you will be surprised at the health and vitality and concern of their residents," he said.

The rules forbid mortgage discrimination based on marital status, age or welfare status, prohibitions already covered by existing laws.

Study shows people buying more on impulse

By MARION BURROS
The Washington Post

As more and more women enter the work force and look for ways to save time in the kitchen, food advertising plays on these changing lifestyles by playing up convenience foods.

One thing all the advertising has in common is an emphasis on the time-saving qualities of the convenience products.

Results of a consumer survey conducted for The Food Marketing Institute (FMI) in February showed that shoppers have reduced the methods by which they had been saving money over the last four years. At FMI's annual convention in Dallas last week the strong indication was that people are buying more on impulse, are doing less with leftovers, planning fewer menus-ahead and purchasing convenience foods in record numbers.

But an official of FMI, the association of the retail and wholesale food industry, said, "I am concerned, because all of these figures are now out of date. We don't know if shoppers will go back to their old habits now that food prices are rising so fast again."

At the rate food prices have climbed so far this year the cost factor may become the deciding factor if people start slashing their food budgets as they did five years ago. In that period food prices rose nearly 14 percent annually. At the rate they are going now, the annual rate could reach well over 15 percent this year.

Shoppers' reactions to spiraling food costs in 1973 and '74 were to cut back on the convenience foods they purchased. When the food-price spiral slowed down, many went back to convenience products. They may be forced to revert to their old habits.

Another theme that runs through a lot of advertising for convenience foods is the not-so-subtle suggestion that you can't cook as well as the food technologist who created the commercial product. Reading a list of often unpronounceable ingredients on the package, a cook may be convinced she could never put anything together like that. After all, who keeps carboxymethylcellulose or calcium proprionate next to the curry powder in the cupboard?

Yet foods made at home don't need these emulsifiers, antioxidants, stabilizers, artificial colors and flavors. Home-cooked foods don't have to last for two or three years. Natural ingredients don't have the problems of stabilization and emulsifying which are common to mixtures of chemicals. Top-quality ingredients don't require artificial color and flavoring to look and taste good.

The time-saving aspects of convenience foods are not quite so simple to sort out. Some foods, such as instant rice in a boil-in-the-bag package, take as long to prepare as regular long-grain rice. The meat, poultry and fish helpers save no time at all over making your own "helper." Not only does frozen orange breakfast drink take as long to "prepare" as frozen orange juice, it's no cheaper.

but there is another group of people refusing to use convenience foods because saving time is not as important to them as the cost, safety, nutrition and taste of the food they eat. Not that they would mind finding easier ways to do things. Almost everyone would.

Preparing your own mixes offers all of the qualities these cooks are looking for, along with the convenience. It's just a matter of setting aside the time — at your convenience — to put the ingredients together. Then, just like the store-bought versions, they are ready when you are. And at half the price or less.

HOMEMADE CAKE MIX
(14 cups of mix)

9 cups flour
1-3 cup baking powder
1-4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
2 cups shortening

Sift the dry ingredients together. Cut in the shortening with pastry blender, two knives or fingers until it resembles cornmeal. Store in covered container at room temperature.

Three cups of mix make two 8-inch layers, or 2 dozen cupcakes.

CHOCOLATE-FROSTED CHOCOLATE CAKE

1 1-2 cups sugar
1-2 cup cocoa
3 cups cake mix
1 1-2 cups milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

In a large mixing bowl combine the sugar, cocoa and cake mix. Beat in the milk, eggs and vanilla at medium speed for 3 minutes. Spread the batter in two greased and floured eight-inch round pans. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes. Cool in pans for 10 minutes; turn out on cake racks and cool completely before frosting.

To make cupcakes, fill greased cupcake tins 2-3 full and bake at 375 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes.

CHOCOLATE FROSTING
(2 cups frosting)

3 squares unsweetened chocolate
3 ounces cream cheese, softened
1-4 cup milk
4 cups confectioners' sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Combine cream cheese with milk and gradually add sugar and salt. Stir in melted chocolate and beat until smooth. Enough to frost an eight-inch layer cake.

DEAR ABBY

If marriage valued, he should see doctor

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: If a man is married to a woman who is "cold" or always "too tired" to satisfy her husband's physical needs, he gets a lot of sympathy. And if he should go elsewhere for what he's missing at home, no one blames him. But how about a woman? She can be love-starved for years, and if she as much as looks at another man, she's considered a tramp.

Well, I'm no tramp, Abby. I'm a decent, normal woman who has been married for 16 years to a man who has given me a fine home, children, financial security and companionship. But for the last four years his interest in sex has diminished to nothing.

We are both in our early 40s, and I think we are much too young to consider the physical side of our marriage finished. (Or am I wrong?) I've tried everything to revive his interest in me, but it's hopeless. He refuses to discuss it, and he won't see a doctor. Meanwhile, I'm left frustrated.

I've never been unfaithful in my life. I'm attractive, look younger than my years, and lately I have been wondering if perhaps an affair on the side would save my husband's face and our marriage. Or am I rationalizing? Woman to woman, Abby, what do you think?—DESPERATE IN DENVER

DEAR DESPERATE: Woman to woman, I think you should tell your husband that if he values his marriage he had better see a doctor for a thorough checkup. He could have a physical disorder.

If it's not "physical," it's psychological, in which case therapeutic counseling might help. It is not normal for a man his age to have lost all interest in sex.

DEAR ABBY: You told BUGGED, whose ex-in-laws made a habit of visiting her and her new husband's home every Sunday in order to see the grandchildren, that a once-a-week visit didn't seem excessive to you.

Abby, you are wrong, wrong, wrong!

Visiting every Sunday IS excessive. Once every two months would seem more reasonable to me. Also, why should the ex-in-laws go to their former daughter-in-law's home regularly? If they want to keep up the contact with their son's children, why don't they pick them up and take them to a park, a ballgame or to their home and entertain them? And why must it be on a Sunday?

Please reconsider, Abby. That answer didn't sound like you. Are you on vacation or what?—DISAPPOINTED IN GEORGIA

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: I never go on vacation. That answer was mine and I'll take my lumps for it. You are right. I goofed and several hundred readers wrote to tell me so.

DEAR ABBY: Our problem is company who don't know when it's time to go home. When we have people over and they say, "Well, I think we'd better be going now," just to be polite we say something like, "Oh, you don't have to go yet," or, "Stay a little while longer." So they stay. And it's another hour before they make a move to go home.

Abby, please tell your readers that when a host and hostess say, "You don't have to go home yet," they are just being polite and shouldn't be taken seriously. Why are some people so dumb?—DEAD TIRED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR TIRED: Which people? There would be no problem if hosts and hostesses would not encourage their guests to overstay their welcome with insincere coaxing.

Yes, finally there's a camera designed for the amateur that gives professional results. Fixed lens pocket cameras just can't produce the brilliant color, clear detail, and texture that the Pentax ME captures. And the ME is fully automatic; just set the aperture (f/stop) and the camera automatically gives you perfect exposures every time, allowing you to concentrate on composition.

The ME is every bit as versatile as standard 35mm cameras if you want to control shutter speed and depth of field. But the best part is that you don't even have to know what those words mean to get professional photographs.

As your photography needs grow, the ME will still be the right camera. It can accommodate a full range of Pentax lenses featuring bayonnet mounts which allow you to change lenses in a matter of seconds. The ME is also rugged enough to handle a motor film winder which allows you to shoot at the rate of 2 frames per second. Imagine being able to capture a golf player's complete swing, a tennis player's serve or a ballet dancer's pirouette!

Ardan's Complete Camera Department offers you everyday low prices on cameras, film, strobes, accessories, full line of gadget bags, film processing and more!

Reception to honor principal

A public reception honoring Wilburn O. Buttery, Fannin Elementary School principal, will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday in Fannin's cafeteria.

Buttery has served in Midland schools 23 years. He came to Midland with his family in 1955 to teach at Midland High. After four years, he was moved to assistant principal at San Jacinto Junior High School, where he stayed six years. He spent three years as principal at Pease school and was moved to Fannin to serve as principal for 10 years. He will be leaving Fannin to serve as principal of Crockett School.

Buttery is president of the Midland Association for Children with Learning Disabilities, and he and his wife serve as area representatives for Youth for Understanding program.

He is active in the Texas State Teachers Association District 18, of which he has held every elective office and has served on the executive board longer than any other person in the district.

He is a life member of the PTA and past president of the Midland Teachers Credit Union, where he has served on the board seven years. He is a leader and organizer of Parks Center YMCA and active in the YMCA Indian Guide program.

In 1970 he helped initiate the MBI Class, a program for children with "Minimum Brain Injuries" at Fannin. The plan was later expanded to all schools as the Plan A-Resource Room, a program for children with learning disabilities. He also initiated the Reading for Gifted Students at Fannin.

Shirk serves breakfast in bed in elegance

ALLENDALE, Mich. (AP) — The poised young man serving champagne and strawberries to the smiling couple in bed was not from room service at some luxury hideaway.

He was Joseph Shirk of nearby Grand Rapids, sole proprietor of Breakfast In Bed, a new business designed to make the meal an experience in elegance — in your own home.

The contented customers were Beth and Rick Mangold, Shirk's first, who hired the 22-year-old entrepreneur to make their breakfast a special occasion. They weren't disappointed.

Shirk arrived at the Mangold home at 9 a.m., toting all necessary pots, pans, dishes and enough groceries for the four-course feast.

He served strawberries in champagne on a wicker tray bearing a vase of fresh wild flowers.

Next came bagels and freshly squeezed orange juice, followed by poached eggs in avocado halves, topped with Bearnaise sauce.

Fresh fruit, cheese and coffee completed what the Mangolds decided was a great way to dine.

"The whole thing took about two hours," Mrs. Mangold said. "We never felt rushed, and everything was so pretty with white china and flowers. It was really romantic."

Shirk went out of his way to preserve the mood, emerging from the kitchen only long enough to serve the couple, propped against pillows, leisurely enjoying the $25 repast.

The Mangolds, who hired Shirk to celebrate a coming baby, said they never felt awkward in the intimate event, even though Shirk stuck around to collect his dishes.

In the future, however, Shirk said he'll slip quietly out of the house once there's no more food to serve, leaving a trash bag for the diners to put the dirty dishes in. He'll return later to retrieve them from the porch or some other agreed-upon spot.

When this breakfast was over, Shirk disappeared, leaving the kitchen spotless. "He did everything professionally," Mangold said.

Shirk said he'd been nervous, but said he felt it went off with just a single hitch: he had to make the Bearnaise sauce twice to get it right. "But I felt good doing it," he said.

Shirk holds a degree in English literature from Grand Valley State College and has worked as a waiter, actor and college financial aid officer. He said he figured the breakfast in bed idea was a way to enter the food service business. "I plan to open a restaurant eventually," he said.

The idea for his current venture came when a friend praised his efforts when he served her breakfast in bed to celebrate her birthday.

"She said, 'Too bad more people don't get this kind of breakfast treatment,' and I decided they could if I did it for them," he said.

Breakfast In Bed offers four different menus. Others include crepes, omelets and eggs benedict. Shirk is open for business every day.

"If anyone's interested in breakfast in bed, Breakfast In Bed is interested in them," he said.

MIDLAND STUDY CLUB

The Midland Study Club ended the year with a party in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Sale with Deborah Bench, Barbara Guenther and Cherry Stover as assistant hostesses. The husbands and escorts were entertained.

The annual luncheon was held in the Garden Room of Midland Country Club with Peggy Heineman and Barbara Taylor serving as hostesses. Bridge was played before lunch and prizes were won by Fena Berry and Kay Jones.

During lunch the members and guests were treated to a style show by the Cherry Orchard with Jane Morgan, Deborah Bench, Marlyn Butler, Johnnie Moritz, Glenda Henzl and Jeannie Printz serving as models. Cherry Stover described and narrated details of the clothes shown

The officers for the coming year were installed after lunch. They are Pat Henderson, president; Joyce Sledge, vice president; Nancy Norris, treasurer, and Jo Ann McNulty, secretary.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Sat., May 20)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Get in touch with whoever you have any contact and make sure you come to a better understanding with them by showing that you are aware of their interests. By aiding them to obtain their aims, they help you get yours.

ARIES (March 21 to Apr. 19) Meeting with an associate and coming to a fine meeting of minds is wise now. Get into a civic project that can also bring you real benefits.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Ideal time to handle jobs that require precision and neatness and get good results. Come to a better understanding with friends, fellow workers. Enjoy light entertainment in evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make appointments of a social nature early so that later you have a fine time together. Stop feeling sorry for yourself.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you cooperate more with kin, your home life can become more ideal, harmonious. Do some entertaining at home that can alleviate tensions. Pick guests carefully.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Do whatever will gain you the cooperation of associates where joint projects are concerned. Talk over how to be more productive in the future. Relegate evening to the social side of life.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your monetary status well since the planets are favorable for your improving it. Use more orthodox business methods. Gain the advice of experts which can be most helpful to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Push those personal desires now so that you gain them with relative ease. Become part of a group affair that is both pleasurable and beneficial. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Listen to advice given you by a trusted adviser and improve your position in life. You get needed information now that has been difficult before this. Go after it early.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Join a group of friends where you can get much accomplished, have much camaradie. You can gain your desires with relative ease. Beware of gossips who talk too much.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find the right project through which to operate now and gain the advice, support of bigwigs, too. Work on a civic matter that can be fine for advancement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use those good ideas so you can pull yourself out of that rut and make your life more meaningful. Planning a trip to a new place is wise. Much good can come of this.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Follow your hunches and you know which path to follow now that is right for you. Fine evening for enjoyment with kin. Show you are a charming and thoughtful person.

Clean hinge pin stops door creaking

By AL CARRELL

Do you remember the old radio mystery show that started out with the sound of a creaking door opening? Some of us have doors in our homes that sound almost that bad. It may serve as a built-in burglar alarm, but it also is a sure way to let everybody know when you're trying to sneak into the house late. Most of these problems can be solved by cleaning and lubricating the hinge pin. However, often the pin isn't all that easy to remove for cleaning. Most door hinges will have an opening at the bottom of the sleeve through which the pin fits. A large nail can be put into the hole, and a lot of hammering and a little cussing will drive most pins out. If that's not your type of hinge, try grabbing the head of the pin with vise grip pliers and then tapping up on the pliers with a hammer. After you get the pin out, there's a way to make it easier next time. File or cut a V notch into the top of the sleeve on the hinge. This notch right next to the top of the hinge pin will let you put a screwdriver under the head for tapping out the next time.

•

Dear Al:

About the worst thing you can do to lubricate hinges is to use oil. If you put enough on to do any good, this usually results in the oil eventually dripping off the hinge and onto the rug. I used to hold a rag under each hinge until all the oil had finished dripping, but that really took too much time. Then I discovered that petroleum jelly would do the job. It's non-drip, and the lubricating values last much longer. — R.C.

Be sure to clean the barrel of the pin with steel wool before you use the lubricant.

Dear Al:

Lots of doors won't stay open because maybe the house has shifted, and the gravity pulls them closed. There's an easier way to solve the door problem than to jack up the house. Remove the hinge pins and bend them ever so slightly. If you bend too much, they won't go back into the hinges. This will bind the hinge enough so the door will stay in whatever position you place it. But it won't bend enough to prevent your being able to operate it. — C.I.

•

A SUPER HINT — If you've ever installed hinges, you may have found that because the screws didn't go into the center of the opening, they tended to pull the hinge out of alignment as you tightened the screw down. If you have a screwdriver handy that matches the diameter of the hole, place the tip in the opening and tap to make an indentation in the wood. Then replace and tap again to form an X. The center of the X will start the screw straight and at dead center and let you mount the door almost perfectly.

•

Dear Al:

One reason hinge pins can become impossible to remove is because they mistake a paint job for a glue job. The paint gets between the head and the sleeve, and it may take blasting to ever get the thing out. I've found that when it's time to paint, you should drive the pin up about a half-inch. This lets you paint the head of the hinge pin to match the rest of the hinge. When the paint is dry, you can then use a padded block to tap the hinge back in place. — R.S.

HERE'S THE ANSWER

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I would like some information about putting down a plywood subfloor in our attic. I intend to use half-inch plywood on the 16-inch-centered joists that are there. What I want to know is whether the plywood has to be laid any particular way?

A. — While it usually is installed in the most convenient manner to accommodate the size of the plywood sheets and the size of the area to be covered, it is better to place the sheets so that the surface grain of the plywood is at right angles to the direction of the joists. Engineers say this gives the floor maximum strength.

Q. — During the next couple of months, I will be putting up another building near our house. It will be a small, one-story cottage. Since I have done some work of this sort before, I don't anticipate any trouble except for one thing — I have never covered a roof. Since this will be a fairly flat roof, I would like to cover it with hot tar and gravel. Any suggestions?

A. — Have that part of the structure done professionally — or consider a different type of roof. Putting on hot tar and gravel not only requires special skill, it requires special equipment. At its best, it is a tough, messy job.

Q. — I have a considerable amount of wood that has to be sanded. I do not have a power sander and prefer, in any case, to use steel wool. My wife has a large quantity of steel wool on hand that she uses for cleaning pots and pans. Can this steel wool be used on wood?

A. — Not unless it is a type that does not contain soap, as most do. You're better off using the type of steel wool that you can purchase in a hardware store. It does not contain soap or water, which can raise the grain of the wood and, in some cases, warp it. And you can purchase it in various grades of coarseness, enabling you to choose the proper kind for the job that has to be done. A very fine steel wool is best for the preparation of the wood prior to the application of a clear finish. Also, be sure all grit particles are removed from the wood before applying any kind of finish.

Q. — In some wood finishing that I expect to do this summer, please give me some advice about the use of a sealer. After removing all the old finish from furniture, I intend to apply a stain and then varnish. At which point during the operation is the sealer applied?

A. — The sealer usually is applied over the stain and before the final finish is put on. However, some wood finishers use a sealer both before and after the application of stain, a procedure which I also have utilized. When the sealer is put on before the stain, it helps the stain to "take" more evenly. However, there is a school of thought which feels this is an unnecessary step in most applications.

(The techniques of applying varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.

Four of six new nurses recruited from other English speaking countries are in town at work at Midland Memorial Hospital. Members of the hospital staff say they were badly needed to relieve a one-time critical shortage in local nurses. Nurses come to Midland

By SUSAN RUTHERFORD

Midland Memorial Hospital's critical shortage of nurses has been relieved.

After a search through various English-speaking countries of the world, six new nurses have been recruited to take over duties at the hospital.

And four of these nurses are presently working at the hospital--either undergoing orientation or preforming actual duties in the hospital's various departments. Of these four, one nurse is from England and three are from South Africa.

Sue Jewell, 23 from England, and Maria Dewet, 29, Hilda Lambrechts, 32, and Venice February, 28, from South Africa, are working hard at becoming acclamated to Midland's people, climate and geography. All are interested in U.S. travel and all are interested in gaining professional experience in U.S. medicine. They have been here from six days to two months.

A few of their observations:

That patients in Midland's hosital are more aware of their rights and what they should be getting for their money than patients who are treated through socialized medicine, such as in England. British patients "do what they're told and don't ask for consultations," according to Britisher Sue Jewell.

That the modernization of equipment in this country makes nursing much easier than in South Africa, for example. Maria stated that she was accustomed to using the old sterilizers, which wasted much time that could have been given to patients. So much here is pre-sterilized and packaged for convenient and immediate use.

That hospital bills are high in this country.

And that our city is not laid out for people who must go everywhere by foot, such as these four nurses who must rely on foot power for shopping and setting up their new homes here.

Farewell party given Midlander

A farewell party was given in honor of Kim Temple, 12, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Weinzel of 3609 Imperial. Hostesses were Gaye Weinzel and Patty Johnson.

Attending the party were Debbie Belden, Dana Tompkins, Amber Price, Cheryl Limmer, Kelli Petree, Lauren Thurman, Michelle Urzi and Shelia Matheson.

Miss Temple will be leaving Midland for California.

Burglarproof tips told

Copley News Service

Even if you've tried to burglarproof your house with the best locks money can buy, chances are good a wily burglar could figure out a way to steal from you.

No neighborhood is immune to the work of burglars and today many persons consider the likelihood of losing belongings to thieves as just another part of their residential lifestyle — along with house payments, property taxes and yard work.

But those persons who do lose treasured items to criminals don't have to lose their shirts, too.

Losses can be minimized.

Ways to minimize loses were outlined by a group of specialists participating in a recent symposium on burglary.

They offered tips on protecting anything from a Stradivarius violin to a surfboard.

For openers, they advised:

— Keep detailed records of all valuables.

Store these records in a spot that is both "burglarproof" and fireproof, preferably off the premises...

— Verify the worth of objects such as jewelry, silver or art pieces with a legitimate appraiser — and get documentation from him.

— Use this documentation in assembling your home owner's insurance plan.

— Know exactly what is in your home and what your home owner's policy covers.

— Install the best locks possible on doors and windows. To determine the proper kind of security hardware, contact the police department's crime prevention unit or a legitimate locksmith before purchasing security equipment.

— Mark valuables. Use engraving instruments such as those available through the police department to mark anything from a silver tray to a color TV.

Determining how well you are protected by your home owner's insurance is a good place to start to minimize loses.

Delza Martin, manager of the personal insurance department for Barney and Barney, said most consumers can't possibly understand every nuance of their policy — even some lawyers don't — so they shouldn't be bashful about questioning their insurance agent at length about coverage.

Some home owners think their belongings are covered when they're really not, she warned.

For instance, she said that unless jewelry and furs are specifically described and insured at appraised value on a policy, coverage for loss through theft of these items is limited to $500, no matter what their value.

Martin said this coverage is obtained by adding a "personal articles floater" to the home owner's policy, a section that also can extend to specifically-insured valuables ranging from coin collections to fine art objects.

"The thing is to get the item appraised and listed on your policy, then you can get full value," she noted.

Dick Walsh, an independent insurance adjuster, said an inventory list before the loss "is beautiful."

By "accurate listing of items," Walsh said he meant a full description of the object, data concerning its date of acquisition, its current value and where it is located in the house.

BRIDAL PARTY

Denise Davis, bride-elect of Robin Hilliard, was honored with an old-fashioned "Pound Party" in the Flame Room of Pioneer Natural Gas Co.

Special guests were Mrs. M. K. Davis, mother of the honoree, and Mrs. John Hilliard, mother of the bride-groom-to-be.

Corsages of miniature salt containers, sugar and flour were presented to the honoree and special guests.

A country theme was used in the decorations in green and white with sacking trim. Country-styled games were played.

Hostesses were Barbara Lasater, Sharon Crozier and Mona Miller.

Brezhnev: An aging, sickly man who always worries

By MURRAY SEEGER
The Los Angeles Times

BONN — A rapidly aging man who drinks too much. A sick man who must frequently be medicated. A man profoundly worried about the future.

These are some of the personal conclusions about Leonid Ilyich Brezhnev, Soviet chief of state and head of the Communist Party, reached by West German officials during his recent visit to Bonn.

The four days Brezhnev spent in West Germany were the first that he has spent outside the highly protective borders of the Soviet Union in nearly a year. Diplomatic observers from all countries were understandably curious to measure just how effective a world leader he still is.

The curious included not only the leaders of the Western world, with whom Brezhnev is involved in long-term negotiations on the fundamental issues of war and peace. The leaders of the Communist states allied with Moscow, many of whose political careers rest on their personal connections to Brezhnev, also were keenly interested.

These interests in Brezhnev's health are vital because the Soviet Union, in its 60-year history as the first Communist state, has never solved the problem of orderly leadership success.

Brezhnev has gathered more personal power than any previous Soviet leader except Josef Stalin, and the danger of disruption in any changeover of authority following his departure has grown correspondingly.

The conclusions of those who dealt with him in Germany are that he is an old 71 years but still effectively functioning as the boss of the state and party apparatus. But the German observers also gathered a vivid impression of his physical and mental limitations.

According to officials who met with Brezhnev, he was able to function in public steadily for about 90 minutes at a time before he excused himself to receive medication.

This was described in German as a "spritz," an innoculation of some drug that appeared to perk him up and enable him to continue his activities. This revivifying treatment was administered both during business discussions and social functions.

While he performed relatively well during the short working sessions that were scheduled, Brezhnev was constantly surrounded by aides who appeared to watch him apprehensively.

"They seemed to circle around him waiting for something to happen," one diplomat commented. "Fortunately, nothing did."

Following instructions from Moscow, Bonn scheduled only two major banquets, one with Brezhnev as host and the other with President Walter Scheel. A small lunch for 12 was held in Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's private home in Hamburg just before Brezhnev returned to Moscow.

At the first meetings with Scheel and Schmidt that Brezhnev had on Thursday, May 5, he reportedly consumed a prodigious amount of Polish vodka — more than a bottle in total. That evening he drank another half bottle of vodka and more than a bottle of wine, according to German sources. He had clearly reduced his addiction to cigarettes, however.

His schedule demanded 90 minutes' rest after meals. At Gymnich Castle where he stayed, Brezhnev slept in a room next door to his personal physician. A miniature clinic brought from Moscow was too fast for the tires on the heavy Mercedes, producing the most dangerous incident of the visit — a highway blowout.

Brezhnev, who apparently wears a heart pacemaker and suffers from emphysema and a slow-acting form of leukemia, refused to ride in helicopters and was instead driven at high speeds in a heavily armored Mercedes-Benz limousine.

The 70-mile-an hour speed normal for Brezhnev's Rolls-Royce in Moscow was too fast for the tires on the heavy Mercedes, producing the most dangerous incident of the visit — a highway blowout.

Brezhnev impassively transferred to another car and continued his journey to Bonn.

In his meetings with the German leaders, Brezhnev, wearing glasses and a hearing instrument, read from prepared briefing papers. He then generally sat stony-faced while the hosts responded.

"The Germans had to look to his aides to see if they were nodding or shaking their heads to see if there was any agreement," another diplomat reported.

"Brezhnev, even though he didn't say very much, seemed to be in charge. But we wondered how long he would last," a German said.

The other key Soviet figures were long-time Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Andrei Alexandrov, the chief of Brezhnev's personal staff.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Pill danger discussed

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there anything you have come across about the Pill increasing one's risk of having a heart attack?—Bertha T.

Dear Bertha: Some English studies indicated that women using the Pill had more non-fatal heart attacks than those who didn't (fatal heart attacks were not covered). But an American researcher, Dr. Anrudh K. Jain of the Population Council in New York, has gone over the British data and concluded that the real factor is smoking plus the Pill.

The Pill alone, Dr. Jain reported in a recent issue of the "American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology," didn't make any real difference in the heart attack rate of the British women who were studied. But smoking--without the Pill--did. And smoking combined with the Pill made a very big difference: women in this category had almost 12 times as many heart attacks as non-smokers not on the Pill.

Dr. Jain thinks that cigarettes and the Pill have a "synergistic" or multiplying effect on each other in increasing the risk of a heart attack. If you want to take the Pill, he says, don't smoke.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The school our children go to--the whole community, in fact--is on a big safety campaign, telling everyone not to do this and not to do that. It seems to me the whole thing is being overdone. Soon, people are going to be so hamstrung that they won't be able to do anything at all. How do you feel about these super-safety drives?—K.D.

Dear K.D.: I think if you looked at the statistics on all the unnecessary accidents that happen to people--in the kitchen, around the house, with small children, driving, you name it--you would agree that these safety campaigns are needed. Accidents, after all, are the fourth leading cause of death in the United States, right after heart disease, cancer and stroke.

However, some safety advice isn't all it should be. For instance, there is a booklet called "Safety with Beef Cattle" put out by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. It contained such pearls: as "The best way not to have an accident is to prevent it," and "Hazards are one of the main causes of accidents" and even "Be careful that you don't fall into the manure pit." This little masterpiece has, fortunately, been withdrawn. But it serves to point up how good intentions can, on occasion, be carried to absurd lengths.

(Dr. Solomon has authored several best-selling books on diet and weight loss. For his booklet, "Plain Talk About Weight Loss," send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope in care of this newspaper, to WEIGHT LOSS BOOKLET, P.O. Box 2000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.)

SONY. YAMAHA Bolivar
Enjoy A Lifetime Of Musical Pleasure With Carefully Selected Stereo Components By Yamaha, Sony, And Bolivar!
This system is good enough to continue to satisfy the most critical music lover. It's built around carefully selected high performance stereo components, perfectly balanced to each other. By whatever standards you choose—be they accuracy, clarity, flexibility, or volume, this system has what it takes to please you now, and tomorrow!
Yamaha CR-420 AM/FM Receiver
The new Yamaha CR-420 AM/FM Natural Sound receiver makes Yamaha performance, dependability, and craftsmanship available at a new low price. Power output: 22 watts RMS per channel, 8 ohms, 20 Hz to 20 kHz, less than 0.05% distortion. The "feel" of the front panel controls reflects Yamaha's traditional attention to detail and human engineering.
Bolivar 18H Speakers
The Bolivar 18H is a 3-way system built around an eight-inch woofer, five-inch mid-range, and a two-inch cone tweeter. Smooth transition from driver to driver, accomplished by a sophisticated crossover network, yields dividends of rich, uncolored sound. Efficient design accomplished by portec loading of the woofer. Tennesse Hickory finish.
Sony PST-2 Turntable
The Sony PST-2 is the least-expensive quality direct drive turntable available. It offers the performance you'd expect from units costing up to a hundred dollars more, plus the convenience of automatic tonearm pick-up and shut-off. Direct drive design reduces moving parts to a minimum, for improved future reliability. Installed in the PST-2's tonearm is an Ortofon FF-15E Mk II—one of our favorite high performance models.

Unrest, not unity, Indochinese condition

BANGKOK, THAILAND (AP) — When Indochina fell to Communist forces three years ago, many Asians and Westerners predicted a powerful united bloc would emerge, bent on spreading revolution through Southeast Asia by force of arms.

Today, the onetime Communist allies in Cambodia and Vietnam are locked in a fratricidal border war. Laos, which some observers hesitate to call a national entity at all, is infested by estranged bedfellows: thousands of Vietnamese troops, Soviet civilian and military advisers and armed Chinese road bwilders.

And most recently China and Vietnam, which proclaimed "militant solidarity" during the Vietnam War, have publicly admitted to disputes over refugees and tension along their border. Western intelligence reports say some blood has already been shed.

Diplomats and scholars see potential for further fragmentation of the Communist forces in the region because of intensified Sino-Soviet rivalry, conflicts over oil and other resources of the South China Sea and revival of historic ambitions and enmities.

These conflicts, together with internal economic and security problems in Vietnam; Cambodia and Laos, appear working to the advantage of Southeast Asia's non-Communist nations.

Thailand, once called "the next domino" and a "front-line state," has in the words of one analyst emerged as "the bright light by comparison to Indochina."

Thailand and its partners in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations — Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines — also were heartened by Vice President Walter F. Mondale's assurances during his recent trip to the area that Washington has not abandoned its former allies as some feared.

"The map is changing rapidly," says a senior European diplomat who expects China to forge closer ties with Thailand and other non-Communist countries, keep Cambodia in its sphere of influence and try to reduce Soviet influence in Vietnam and Laos.

This diplomat and other Indochina watchers theorize that China, having put its own political house in order, has decided to warn Vietnam that it has tilted too far in the direction of Moscow and been too aggressive toward Laos and Cambodia.

Another veteran diplomat says Vietnam appears to have "miscalculated" by failing to keep up its subtle diplomatic tight-rope walk between Peking and Moscow at a time of internal economic difficulties and fighting with Cambodia.

There have been sporadic reports in recent months and even some Vietnamese admissions of troop buildups, skirmishes and a "loudspeaker war" along the Sino-Vietnamese frontier. A crackdown on free enterprise by Hanoi has led to the exodus of an estimated 2,000 to 15,000 Chinese to China, which expressed its concern officially last month.

Landlocked Laos, at the heart of the Indochinese peninsula, exemplifies the Communist fragmentation in its extreme form.

By various Western and Thai estimates, the Vietnamese have between 26,000 and 50,000 troops in the country as well as advisers at the highest levels of the Vientiane government. The Soviet Union has 500 to 1,000 personnel in the country while the Chinese for years have been building a network of strategic roads and gaining influence over the northwest.

In addition to the various conflicting foreign influences and anti-Communist insurgents, the Laotian Communists are plagued by a serious food shortage and other severe economic problems. The World Bank rates Laos one of the poorest countries in the world, with an estimated annual per capita income of only $90.

Personal lobbying now paying off for Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citizen Jimmy Carter once said the way to reform government is to be bold, take your case to the public and make allies among those who might be your enemies.

That strategy seems to be working for President Jimmy Carter as he presses for fundamental changes in the federal government's rigid personnel system.

He has proposed far-reaching changes. He has drawn unexpected support from organized labor. And he has missed few opportunities in recent weeks to stump for his proposals.

His remarks at a "town meeting" in Spokane, Wash., on May 5 were typical.

"It's become impossible to reward good service, to give promotions and salary increases to those who really do an outstanding job," Carter said. "It's almost impossible to discharge or demote someone who occupies a position in the federal government and refuses to do their job."

He has preached that basic text, with variations, at two personal meetings with members of the House Civil Service Committee, the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee and the Congressional Hispanic Caucus; in telephone conversations with congressmen; at news conferences in Washington and Portland, Ore., and at the Spokane town meeting; and at an anti-inflation pep talk to representatives of the National Retail Federation in Washington. He has ordered his Cabinet members to lobby for his proposals, which he wants passed this year.

There are plentiful signs that Carter's personal lobbying is paying off. A Senate subcommittee began action on the proposals Thursday. Subcommittee action is also promised in the House around the end of the month. Even the staunchest defenders of pay and job protections for civil servants have kind words for at least the principle of reform.

This is surprising, given the changes the plan would bring. It would make it easier for governmental bosses to fire employees for inefficiency. It would end job tenure and institute performance bonuses for the top 9,000 civil service executives. About 72,000 middle-level managers would be forced to earn pay raises that now are virtually automatic. Able-bodied World War II and Korean veterans would lose the lifetime preference that forces the government to keep them on when firing better-qualified non-veterans during personnel reductions.

The plan is opposed by veterans groups and by civil service employee organizations, but it has the backing of the AFL-CIO and of the largest and most influential of the federal employee unions, the AFL-CIO American Federation of Government Employees.

The plan gives the unions concessions they have sought for years, including an independent federal labor-management relations authority and an expanded role for union grievance procedures in settling employee complaints.

These are relatively modest; federal unions still would not have the right to strike or to bargain over pay. But the compromise survived even Carter's limitation on this year's federal pay raise, which angered the AFL-CIO but didn't prompt them to abandon the civil service proposals.

All this seems to follow a strategy laid out in Carter's 1975 autobiography, "Why Not the Best?"

He said that while governor of Georgia he learned that changes "cannot be made timidly or incrementally" or they are doomed to be nibbled to death by special interest groups.

But he said these groups "retreat into their dark corners when exposed to public scrutiny and debate."

"I have also seen staunch allies emerge from among those who would ordinarily be expected to oppose such change," said citizen Carter.

Carter's plan is certainly bold, and he has pushed for maximum public exposure. He has also found an unexpected ally in organized labor.

Briscoe paroles seven from area

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Seven persons sent to prison for crimes committed in the West Texas area have been released by Gov. Dolph Briscoe upon the recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Two other persons had paroles revoked.

Releases were:

Richard D. Geary, convicted June 30, 1975, in Ector County of burglary with intent to commit theft, and theft over $200, paroled to Harris County after serving and earning four years and eight months of a 10 year sentence.

David P. Mendoza, convicted Aug. 17, 1977, in Ector County of burglary with intent to commit theft, paroled to Ector County after serving and earning one year and one month of a three-year sentence.

Rudy Sanchez, convicted June 24, 1975, in Midland County of voluntary manslaughter, paroled to Midland County after serving and earning five years and two months of a seven-year sentence.

Terry D. Smith, convicted Aug. 20, 1974, in Howard County of burglary of a residence, forgery by check, felony theft, burglary, credit card abuse and two counts of possession of a controlled substance, paroled to Harris County after serving and earning six years and 10 months of a 10-year sentence.

Vernon W. Wattles, convicted Aug. 26, 1975, in Ector County of delivery of methamphetamines, and burglary of a habitation with intent to commit theft, paroled to Ector County after serving and earning four years and 11 months of a 10-year sentence.

Roy L. Wilson, convicted July 15, 1977, in Reeves County of burglary of a vehicle, paroled to Reeves County after serving and earning one year and six months of a three-year sentence.

David C. Zapata, convicted Feb. 11, 1977, in Ector County of robbery, paroled to Tom Green County after serving and earning five years and one month of a 10-year sentence.

Paroles were revoked, due to unsatisfactory adjustment for:

John Paul Chaffin, sentenced in Culberson County to two years for theft over $200. Chaffin began serving his sentence Aug. 9, 1976, and was granted parole March 3, 1977.

Doris Jean Henry, sentenced in Howard County to five years for forgery by passing. Henry began serving her sentence Aug. 2, 1975, and was granted parole July 21, 1977.

Gasoline cost should remain fairly steady

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline prices should remain fairly steady this summer in all areas of the country except the West Coast, Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary said today.

O'Leary said he does not anticipate the surge in prices this year that sometimes occurs in the summer months as more Americans take to the road.

"There is a general feeling that supplies are easy except on the West Coast, where refinery capacity is strangled," O'Leary told reporters.

"I would think this is not going to be a bad summer for the American driver. But it will be a bad summer from the standpoint of conservation," O'Leary said.

On a related topic, O'Leary denied that the administration is holding its gasoline price-decontrol plan hostage to President Carter's embattled proposal for a tax on domestic crude oil.

He said the administation still plans to lift the remaining price controls from gasoline — a carryover from the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74 — but is waiting for the right time.

"We want to submit it (to Congress) in a climate where it can pass," O'Leary said. He said discussions with key members of Congress have indicated that if the decontrol plan were submitted at this time, there would be a floor fight and the measure would probably be rejected.

There have been reports that Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, in meetings with officials of the oil industry and its allies in Congress, had linked gasoline decontrol with passage of the crude oil tax.

Gas plan may have enough votes

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed compromise on natural gas prices today appeared to have finally picked up enough votes to be approved by the congressional conference committee working on President Carter's energy bill.

A formal committee vote is expected next Tuesday. The proposed compromise calls for lifting federal price controls from domestically produced, newly discovered natural gas in 1985.

Congressional staff aides today predicted the compromise will be approved, ending the six-month deadlock on the energy legislation that Carter submitted in April 1977.

The apparent breakthrough resulted from a late push by the White House amid reports that negotiations were on the point of total collapse.

Sources who asked not to be identified said Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger shuttled back and forth between three holdout House conferees late Thursday until he had the necessary votes for the compromise lined up.

The three, Reps. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, Charles Wilson, D-Texas and Joe Waggoner, D-La., would give House leaders the 13 votes needed to win approval for the compromise among the 25 House negotiators.

The other House members of the conference committee are divided into two camps: liberals who oppose ending price regulation and Republicans who feel the bill doesn't go far enough to end price regulation.

Aides to the three House members confirmed today that the congressmen had reached agreement as a result of Schlesinger's efforts and will now vote for the compromise with a modification.

Up until today, House conference leaders had been two or three votes short of mustering a majority of the House members on the committee, although a majority of Senate conferees has already indicated support for the basic plan.

"That gives them 13 votes," said Candy Shy, a Wilson aide. And, she said that she didn't think the modification backed by Schlesinger — involving gas prices in the intrastate markets of producing states — "will lose any votes" among those previously backing the compromise.

Although any changes in the basic compromise reached after months of closed-door bargaining could upset the works, both House and Senate aides this time said they didn't expect that would happen.

Debra Jacobson, an aide to Eckhardt, said the latest proposed modification would guarantee a higher price for intrastate gas — short of deregulation — for gas under contracts in producing states which don't expire until after 1985. The new proposal would allow intrastate prices on already-discovered gas to increase after 1985.

The intrastate market — gas produced and used in the same state — is now free from any price controls. The compromise would extend price controls for the first time for gas not eligible for deregulation in 1985, such as gas which is not newly discovered but under an existing contract.

Although Eckhardt had supported the original compromise, Wilson and Waggoner said they felt it amounted to federal intrusion into a market that has been free of federal price controls.

But several propsals made by Wilson and Waggoner had failed to pick up Eckhardt's support. All three are needed for the 13-vote margin necessary for approval.

HOW TO LIVE!!
$20,000 to $30,000 Per Year
It Limits You To:—

( ) $45,000 to $75,000 House
( ) 2 Late Model Cars
( ) 1 Boat (if the gas to run it)
( ) College Education for 3 to 4 Children
( ) A Few Swinging Weekends in Las Vegas
( ) Time To Enjoy It all

Strange as it seems, few people have the appetite for this kind of income. Many have the talent but not the courage or the confidence to pursue it.
We are looking for aggressive, money-motivated people to join our firm. For the competitive, commissioned, sales-oriented individual who hates travel, wants regular hours, can stand to earn $20,000-$30,000 per year while growing into management. To Our Customers, The Used Car They Buy Is A New Car.

In many cases, a family budget just won't stretch to include a brand new car. And this is where a quality used car makes good sense.

As far as we are concerned, that used car is really a new car to the family that buys it.

And we take extra care to make sure our used car customers enjoy every bit as much satisfaction and pride as our new car customers.

OWN YOUR OWN Hunting & Fishing Lease

Deer-Turkey-White Bass-Ai-Rams

You select the amount of acreage that you want (minimum 5 acres). This 8200 acre ranch was owned by the same family nearly 80 years. It's the Smith Ranch, located in some of the most beautiful hill country in Texas. The ranch has over 5 miles of Colorado River frontage and lies across from LEMONS CAMP and GORMAN FALLS Ranches.
Some of the finest fly and spin fishing for white bass and catfish. The deer and turkey hunting is excellent (spring turkey hunt on this ranch); some 14 miles of spring fed creeks on this ranch. One spring pumps approximately 1,000 gallons per minute. You've got country here that can produce big bucks.
Lots of livebaks and buck brush with deep canyons combined with all this water is something to see.
We recommend you make an appointment so that we will know when you're coming in and we'll devote the time to you. We offer good terms. By owner.

Lee's Maroon sneaks to narrow 6-0 victory

By BOB DILLON

Defense was the name of the game in Memorial Stadium Thursday night.

Coach Gil Bartosh's Robert E. Lee Rebels wound up spring football drills as the Maroon squad took a hard-hitting 6-0 victory over the White unit.

The only touchdown of the night came on the Maroon's first posession when they marched 72 yards in nine plays to score with Gary Butler at the quarterback slot.

The Maroons kicked off to the Whites and held them and put the ball into play at their own 28 following a 31-yard punt by Jody Sessom.

Ricky Johnson gained 20 yards on the first play for the Maroons and then Butler hit Elmer Montgomery with a 14-yard pass to start the drive. Butler had gains of eight and nine yards and then from the White 22-yard line, the lefthander, fired a pass across the middle to tight end Michael McCrea, who went into the end zone untouched for the score. On a fake extra point attempt, Johnson just missed picking up the two-point conversion when he was met by White linebacker Jeff McCowan in front of the flag.

THE WHITE TEAM was again unable to move the ball in its second posession even though McCowan, running at the fullback position, had gains of five, three and five more before Tony Thurman fumbled with Anthony Johnson recovering at the White 37.

Scott Collins and Dwight Washington came up with key defensive plays for the White team with Washington throwing Butler and Rick Johnson for losses of eight and seven yards.

Rodney Taylor, 235-pound tackle for the Maroon sqaud misfired on a 42-yard field goal attempt after the Whites shut the Maroons down, but moments later, early in the second period, quarterback Steve Waldron fumbled with the Maroon's Tom Williams recovering at the White 47.

Mark Thompson ripped off a seven-yard gainer for the Maroons, but on the next play, he fumbled with Herb Pearce pouncing on the ball at the White 30. Thurman was hit hard by both Wade Cartwright and McCrea on the next play, but managed to hold on to the ball. Sessom got off a booming 43-yard punt and the game moved onto a defensive struggle the rest of the way.

LATE IN THE second period, McCowan put one of the hardest hits of the evening on the Maroon's Ricky Johnson as he separated the ball carrier from the ball with the hit.

Just before the first half ended, Montgomery picked off a Waldron pass and returned it 40 yards, almost going all the way on the interception.

It was strictly a defensive struggle the rest of the way as the two teams kept knocking heads through the second half.

"I was really surprised at the defense. Both sides were hitting hard and we feel like the inexperience at quarterback on both sides showed up, but that will improve by next fall," said Bartosh afterwards.

"We had the teams divided up evenly and when we get the best defensive players on the same unit this fall, we should really be tough defensively. I'm not worried about the offense, because it will come around."

"WE HAVE A LACK of depth in the enterior line and this could pose a problem for us this coming season, but I couldn't be more pleased with the defense by both units," added Bartosh.

Bartosh was wanting to view the game films before singling out any individuals, but you could tell he was pleased with the play of McCrea, McCowan, Pearce, Washington, Montgomery, Butler and the punting of both Sessom and Bill McPherson. McPherson got off to a slow start, but his last two punts were equal to those of Sessom as far as hanging time and distance.

"I guess that we divided them up too evenly, because we didn't see an awful lot of offense, but then the defense had a lot to say about that." Bartosh went on to say that the youngsters put in a good effort and didn't hold anything back on defense.

Lee returns to football workouts in August in preparation for the Sept. 8 season opener in Memorial Stadium against Snyder.

THE ROBERT E. Lee Stonewall Brigade junior varsity football team also wound up its spring drills Thursday evening in Memorial Stadium with the White team posting a 12-0 victory over the Maroons.

Quarterback Michael Lentner hit a touchdown scoring pass to Jay Stewart in the first quarter and the other White TD came in the second period when Don Hicks took the ball away from a Maroon ball carrier and skipped 30 for the score.

Wade Colburn recovered a fumble for the Whites in the third period at the White 13 to turn away the Maroon squad, but the Whites had another apparent TD called back right at the end of the game when tailback Mark Landers zipped 15 yards for the score only to have it whistled back on a penalty.

Jeff Hicks picked off a Maroon pass during the contest which saw the two units play eight-minute quarters like they did last year in freshman ball.

Transfer Barry Corley from Crane, stood out for the Maroon team at a quarterback slot in showing lots of poise with some fine running. He hit Leonard Williams with a 31-yard pass late in the second period and also had runs of 11 and 13 yards right before the half ended.

Rebels seek clincher

By BOB DILLON
R-T Sports Writer

WICHITA FALLS --The pressure is on the Wichita Falls Coyotes today.

All Robert E. Lee's Rebels have to do is win one of two games to advance into the regional round of the state Class AAAA baseball playoffs against the Arlington Sam Houston Texans.

Lee took a 12-8 slugfest from Wichita Falls in Midland Tuesday and only needs one win today to move into the next round of playoff action. The Coyotes must sweep a pair of games from the Tall City team in order to eliminate Ernie Johnson's hard-hitting crew.

The Rebels are hitting .334 as a team going into today's game which starts at 4 p.m. at Hoskins Field. If a third game is necessary, it will follow and it doesn't matter if the third game is played after dark, because Hoskins Field is a lighted ball park.

Johnson would just as soon wrap up it in the first contest, and he was to send either lefthander Gary Gibson or righthander Craig Van Horn to the mound to face the Coyotes.

THE COYOTES, with their backs to the wall, were going once again with ace righthander Eric McDougle, who is 13-5, but is the one who was the loser in Midland on Tuesday as the two playoff foes had 26 hits between them with Lee picking up 15 and Wichita Falls 11.

Lee's starting lineup will include Doug Schmidt at first base; Don Rasure at second; Steve Pitts at shortstop and Terry Willis at third, if Van Horn is on the mound. The outfield will be made up of Todd Clements in left, Pat Moore in center and John White in right with Richard Josefy the designated hitter and Clay Calhoun the catcher.

Wichita Falls will counter with Mark Massie at first; David O'Neil at second; Kerry Hargrove at short and Tobey Stone at third. In the outfield, it will be Dan McDonald in left; Ruben Nieto in center and Wes McKenzie in right with Ricky Ledford catching and Dwain Coffey the designated hitter.

If a third game is necessary, Hargrove will pitch with McDougle moving to the shortstop position for the District 6-4A champions

THE REBEL ATTACK is led by Moore who is hitting .407. Next comes utility outfielder Tyler Alcorn with a .400 average followed by Josefy's .390 average. Van Horn is hitting at a .370 clip and Calhoun is hitting .351. Clements owns a .344 mark and Schmidt is hitting .333 and White .306.

Van Horn is 5-0 on the mound and Gibson is 2-4, but the senior southpaw is the top strikeout thrower with 57 strkeouts in 44⅓ innings on the mound.

Sam Houston is resting after sweeping a pair of games from Fort Worth Western Hills by scores of 5-0 and 4-1 on Monday and Tuesday.

Lee takes a 22-8 mark into today's game or games with the Coyotes while the Red River crew is 17-6 on the year.

Cubs lose, 5-2, but Buckner rolls

LITTLE ROCK—The Arkansas Travelers scored five unearned runs in the seventh inning to defeat the Midland Cubs, 5-2, before 1,476 fans here Thursday in the opener of their five-game Texas League series.

Midland took a 2-0 lead into the seventh on Jimmy Buckner's third-inning home run, his second of the year, over the right centerfield barrier and added another run in the fourth when Brian Rosinski lashed out his first of three hits and scored after an error on Brian Keatley's single to center. Rosinski went to third on the hit and when third baseman Dave Boyer, son of St. Louis Cardinals' manager Ken Boyer, threw wildly into right field trying to get Keatley at second, Brian scored.

The Cubs' Herman Segelke had a shutout going into the seventh when a couple of errors opened the door for a five-run inning as the East Division leaders batted around.

Gene Dotson doubled home two runs, Terry Kennedy, the son of Chicago Cubs' general manager Bob Kennedy and one of the top draft picks last June, singled in another run while Dave Bialas contributed a run-producing double during the rally.

The other run came when left fielder Buckner and centerfielder Eric Grandy collided while going after a fly ball by Dave Boyer.

THE CUBS' downfall came when they stranded 15 men on base, leaving the bases loaded in the first, fourth and sixth innings against Arkansas starter, Jim Otten, who is making a comeback after suffering arm trouble.

Buckner extended his hitting streak to 15 straight games, and has hit safely in 31 of his last 32 games. He had a 16 game hitting streak earlier this year, and can pass that mark tonight if he hits safely in both games.

One of the pitchers Midland will face in tonight's doubleheader is Pat Darcy, 11-5 for Cincinnati in 1975 and a veteran of two World Series appearances that fall. Darcy came to the Cardinals' organization in the Mike Caldwell trade, but underwent arm surgery and spent last season in Class A ball in an attempt to recover the form that took him to the majors.

Lubbock Christian faces tough test

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Top-ranked William Carey College of Mississippi goes up against Lubbock Christian again today, hoping for a trip to the national NAIA tournament in St. Joseph, Mo.

William Carey beat LCC 4-3 Thursday in an 11-inning thriller decided by catcher Jim Zelidonia's sacrifice fly.

Should LCC win today, a second game will be played immediately, with the winner advancing to the nationals.

Daughter of 'Little Mo' is now on her very own

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Cindy Brinker thanks her mother for introducing her to tennis, but now the daughter of the late champion Maureen "Little Mo" Connolly is on her own.

Cindy, 20, an entrant in Seventeen Magazine's Tourament of Champions, plays tennis because she loves the game.

"Actually, Mom discouraged me from playing tennis," the University of Virginia senior says. "When I was seven, Mom taught me the fundamentals and then made me quit. She didn't want me to try to follow in her footsteps. Our family had a healthy attitude, not pushy. If you do something somebody else wants, it makes for an unhappy situation.

"But we used to have outstanding tennis players visiting our house to take lessons from Mom," Cindy continues. "Patty Ann Reese was there and it was exciting to go to the courts and watch Mom drill her. Then Patty would hit with me afterward. So would Virginia Wade and Ann Hayden Jones. Ann won her first Wimbledon title on June 21 (1968), the day Mom died. I thought it was sort of a memorial.

"I was only 12 at the time and I idolized those playess. It was only natural that I would get into the game."

Cindy was 11 when she became serious about tennis again and now says, "I think we were born with something. Our family was goal-oriented, high energy and success. We had to channel our energy as our parents did. I idolized Mom and Dad."

Norman Brinker was an Olympic equestrian before marrying the tennis champion and Cindy says her younger sister, Brenda, goes more for riding than for tennis. The two daughters joined their parents on horseback outings.

Maureen Connolly won three consecutive United States and Wimbledon titles beginning when she was just 17. She was 19 when she was hurt in a horse riding accident and forced to give up tennis. She died of cancer at 34.

"I'm an incurable optimist," Cindy says now. "Maybe that accident in San Diego had its blessing."

Little Mo suffered severe leg injuries in the accident when she was thrown from her horse in a traffic accident. She couldn't return to tennis. Cindy said her parents had been dating but were drawing apart because of their sports interests.

"Both were going their own way and Mom had signed with Jack Kramer and his professional group. When she could no longer compete in tennis, she could look at marriage. So she was able to get marriage and enjoy motherhood."

Although the former champion coached her daughter in tennis, there was the natural impatience of mother for daughter, so Cindy had other coaches. When she began competing, there was the anticipated pressure for the youngster as people expected her to emulate her mother.

"I entered tournaments and stories were about me and not about the top seed in the event," she says. "I never tried to use my name and the publicity bothered me. People thought I used my name, but actually it has made things tougher for me.

"I don't want glory because of my name. People who think I was born with that 'golden spoon' are wrong. I have to be extremely careful. I have to be respectful of myself and the Brinker name. There are other things besides playing the game.

"But if I had to do it all over again, I'd still want to be her daughter even though I had her just 12 years rather than a lifetime."

Searls takes PBWGA crown

ODESSA — Luisa Searls and Billie Mae Hartman, both of Sunset Country Club of Odessa, captured top honors recently in the Permian Basin Women's Golf Association tournament played on their own course.

Searls won low gross honors with a 74 while Hartman had low net with a 65. Gegle Klug won low putts with 27.

JoAnn Riley of Ranchland Hill Country Club won low gross in the first flight with a 79 while Odessa CC's Ann Brister won low net with a 63. Ginny Elmore and Tris McNabb tied for low putts with 29.

Ranchland's Judy Mobley won second flight low gross with 89 while Ranchland's JoAnn Adkins had low net with a 61, and Bonnie McGueen had low putts with 32.

Nancy Milner, 95; Sylva Alvarado, 64; and Dorothy Vaughn, 32, won third flightThonors, respectively.

Odessa College sweeps net titles

ODESSA — Midland College's dreams of the Women's National Junior College tennis title went down the tubes here Thursday at the Odessa Country Club as Odessa College swept the doubles, singles and team crowns for the second year in a row.

The Chaparrals needed two things to happen Thursday, and they didn't get there way on either. MC's Ann Layman needed a victory over OC's Sandy Collins in the singles finals, and the Chaps also needed for OC to lose in the doubles finals to earn a share of the national title. Neither happened.

Collins won the national singles title with a 6-3, 6-1 victory over Layman. Collins didn't lose a set in the entire tournament.

In the battle for third place, Midland College's Joann Hall dropped a 6-2, 6-2 decision to Navarro's Elizabeth Lovinsin.

In the doubles competition, Collins teamed with Debbie Phillips for a victory over Indian River's Carol Ferguson and Heather McCarroll in straight sets.

Layman, Hall and Blanca Barriga all won All-American Junior College honors for advancing as far as the quarterfinals of the national tournament. Layman, MC's only All-American last year, ends her play in Midland. She will attend the University of New Mexico next fall. Barriga will also be leaving, and will attend New Mexico State University this fall. MC also loses Hall, who may return to her home in Australia.

Gearldine Sayers is the only member of the Chaps' national unit who will return to Midland College next fall.

Midland College will host the women's national tournament next year. MC was the host of the tournament last year.

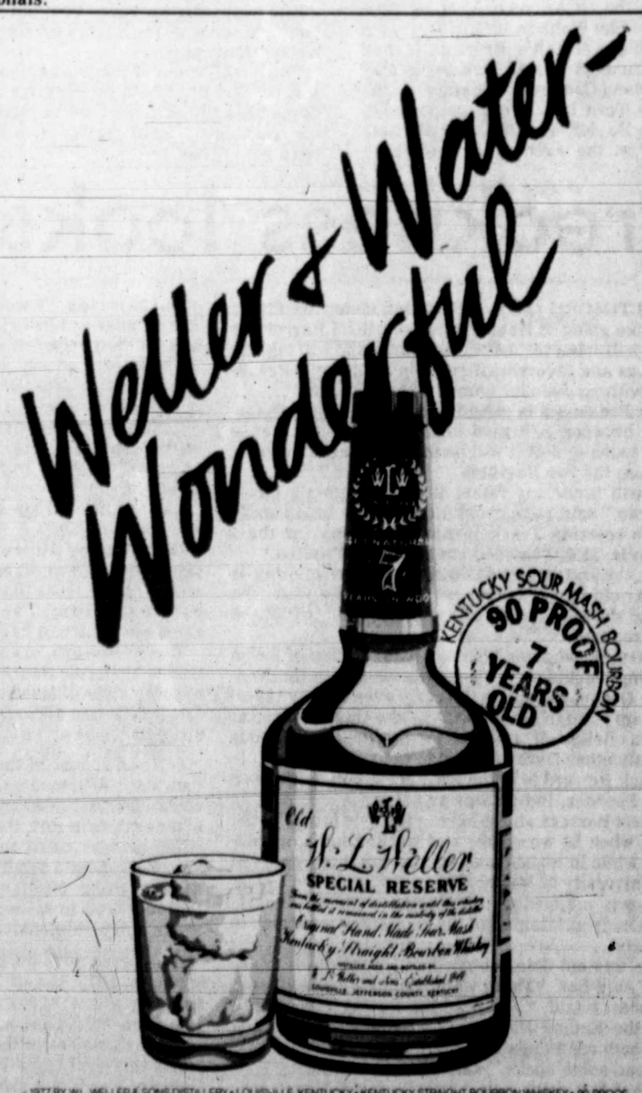

Henry captures distance title

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Hammer throw and 10,000-meter run championships were decided Thursday in the 27th NAIA Track and Field Championships.

Garry Henry of Pembroke State, N.C., ran away from the field in the 10,000-meter run, winning in 30:22.82.

Canadian Harold Willers tossed the hammer 55.40 meters (181-11), good enough to win and a career best mark for the Simon Fraser freshman from Vancouver.

Western New Mexico's Jack Willey set a long jump record and led the decathlon after five events. Willey piled up 3,798 points with the aid of a 7.36-meter (24-1¾) leap, a 10.8 victory in the 100-yard dash and a 1.98-meter (6-6) high jump that was also a winner. He also competed in the shot put and the 400-meter dash.

Nicklaus, Player capture golf lead

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — The approaches of Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player to the Memorial Golf Tournament are vastly different.

Their results — at least temporarily — are identical.

Nicklaus is performing in only his eighth tour tournament of 1978. Player, meanwhile, has elected to play 10 consecutive weeks.

The sport's two superstars solved the water-logged Muirfield Village layout — the $8 million course Nicklaus designed and built — for five-under-par 67s and a tie for the lead after Thursday's opening round.

Five straight rainy days forced officials to let the select international field of 105 use preferred fairway lies, the third time this year.

It may have been the reason for a tournament record of 27 sub-par scores for a round. Nicklaus and Player were at odds over that.

"When the fellas get their hands on the golf ball and tee it up," said Nicklaus, "you're going to have good scores."

Player scoffed at the notion.

"I don't think it made any difference. The players are just getting better, my friend," he said.

Non-winner Rex Caldwell, last with 315 here in 1977, fashioned a 68 this time, one shot off the pace, and tied with Tom Kite and Jim Simons.

Thirteen players were bunched three strokes apart. Ed Sneed, Lon Hinkle and Curtis Strange had 69s. Bobby Wedkins, Mike Morley, Mark Hayes, Andy North and Alan Tapis were at 70 going into today's second round.

Roger Maltbie, the inaugural winner here in 1976, was in a 14-player logjam at 71. So was U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, the Memorial runner-up last year.

Some of the game's glamour names failed to whip par.

Tom Weiskopf matched it, but Tom Watson struggled to a fat 40 on the back side, including two straight double bogeys, for 73. Hale Irwin also took a 73. Arnold Palmer had a 77.

Nicklaus said his tournament record of 281 may be endangered "if they get their hands on the ball for four days. And I don't think the greens are fast enough to become a problem."

Nicklaus explained his five-birdie, no-bogey round easily. "Today was the best driving round I've ever had. I was in the center of the fairway, unlike me," he said.

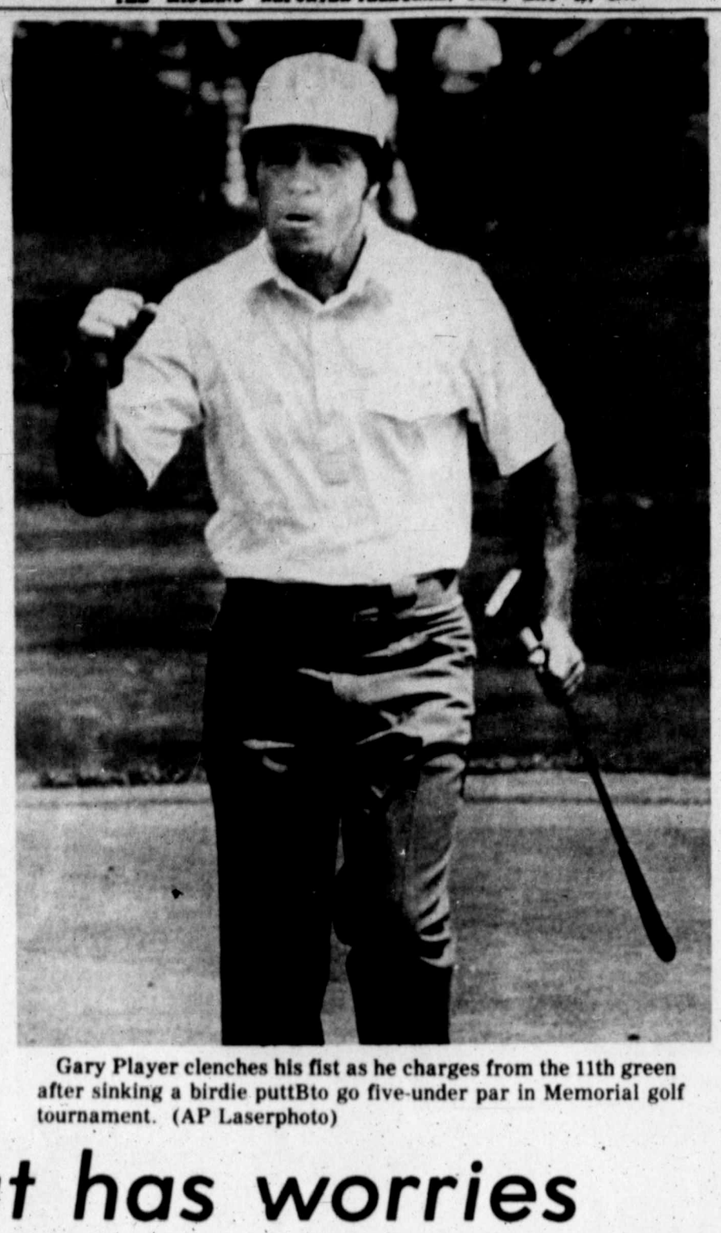

Nicklaus added, "I can't understand why I drove the ball that well. I'm not that good a driver."

He missed only two greens. His five birdie putts were from 15 feet or less.

Player conceded he played well except for his only bogey at 16. "I hit a five-iron to the right, chipped up six feet and missed it," he said.

Player said he will play five more tournaments before flying home to his South Africa ranch, an uncustomarily heavy schedule for him.

"If I lived in this country," he said, "I'd probably play 40 tournaments a year. Playing 15 tournaments in a row, I'm sure, is easier than what I have had to do — fly back and forth from home."

Gary Player clenches his fist as he charges from the 11th green after sinking a birdie puttBto go five-under par in Memorial golf tournament. (AP Laserphoto)

Olympic group gives LA chance

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — "The ball is now in our part of the court," said Anton Calleia, personal assistant to the mayor of Los Angeles, the aspiring city for the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

"Now we have the chance to work out an acceptable agreement that will give us the Olympic Games in our city in 1984. I am hopeful we shall be able to do that."

Calleia made it sound easy. But Los Angeles has some rethinking to do before July 31 to meet the requirements of the unyielding International Olympic Committee.

Thursday, the IOC awarded the 1984 Games to Los Angeles provisionally. The award will be withdrawn if by July 31 Los Angeles has not agreed to sign a contract, worded in the IOC's way and in line with its rules.

Mayor Tom Bradley, who led the delegation here, now has to persuade his City Council to agree to a contract that honors the IOC rules while protecting Los Angeles against financial loss.

This week's drama alternated between the ancient Herod Atticus Theater, where the opening of the IOC session was held, and smoke-filled rooms of American style hotels. Day and night, the lawyers of the two sides tried to reach an agreement — and failed.

The IOC insisted on the observance of its Rule 4, under which Los Angeles and the U.S. Olympic Committee would be jointly responsible for the finances of the Games. Los Angeles said it would not sign a contract involving a third party, only an agreement between itself and the IOC.

Both before and after Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, announced the decision Thursday, there were signs the two sides were talking in different languages.

Bradley had said earlier in the week that a compromise had been reached and a major breakthrough achieved.

Killanin said there never was any compromise, and Los Angeles merely backed down and agreed to observe Rule 4.

The mayor claimed he had agreed with the IOC on a plan for Los Angeles to insure itself against a deficit. Killanin said the insurance plan played no part in the talks and was an internal matter for Los Angeles.

"It is no concern of the IOC," Killanin said. "We only require a contract that honors the Olympic charter."

Sam Bretzfield, a member of the Executive Committee of the Southern California Olympic Committee, said, "I dare say the rules of the IOC can be bent a little, just as our rules can be bent a little. We can reach an agreement."

Killanin insisted, with all the emphasis he could summon, that the IOC rules cannot be changed. He had the backing of the 26 Olympic sports federations, which unanimously urged the IOC not to change one letter of the Olympic charter in awarding the Games to Los Angeles or any other city.

If Los Angeles' fails to meet the IOC's requirements by July 31, the IOC will look for a new host city for 1984 and probably will choose one at next year's session in Montevideo, Uruguay. If Los Angeles meets the IOC requirements, the IOC Executive Board has the authority to confirm the award of the Games.

Montreal, Munich, Mexico City and New York are reported ready to step in. But Killanin refused to discuss them, saying that would be grossly unfair to Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, the citizens of one place are happy. Sarajevo, the Yugoslav town where Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated and World War I was sparked in 1914, was given the 1984 Winter Games.

The IOC granted the Olympics to Yugoslavia for the first time. It rejected rival bids by Sapporo, the Japanese host city of 1972, and Sweden, which wanted to spread the Games around four areas.

Sneva is fast, but has worries

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Sneva doesn't relish the idea of going to work Saturday.

The 29-year-old Sneva, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway track record holder, the only driver officially to clock 200 miles per hour or more around the 2½-mile oval, snuck a searing lap of 203.1 m.p.h. past the timers Thursday in practice.

The speed, recorded only on hand-held stopwatches, re-established Sneva as the driver to beat for the pole position when qualifying begins Saturday for the May 28 Indianapolis 500.

But he wasn't exactly ecstatic about it.

"That's what makes the group happy," he said blandly.

Told that his lap time of 44.3 seconds almost makes current speed charts obsolete (most only go to 44 flat), Sneva responded, "I'd much rather make 'em good again.

"If we were smart we wouldn't be doing this."

Sneva has emerged — since posting a track record of over 202 m.p.h. at Ontario Motor Speedway last March — as one of the most vocal critics of the escalating speeds posted this year in Indianapolis type racing.

"We're actually looking at a more dangerous situation now than we were in 1973 when they slowed down the top speeds for safety's sake," explained the former schoolteacher. "The top speeds aren't that much greater now; the increase is all coming in corner speeds."

Officials counter that technical advances in the past five years have equalized the dangers.

Other drivers complain that the situation is ruining chances of close racing on the big tracks, like Indianapolis.

Sneva, who tours public schools across the country preaching highway safety for the Champion Spark Plug Co., predicts trouble is ahead for the U.S. Auto Club championship division unless something is done about the lap speeds.

Sneva's lap, which illustrates why the hit-and-miss practice timing system here is considered unofficial, became the sixth drivers over 200.

Last year, only three drivers — Sneva wasn't one — topped 200 in practice runs. But Sneva was the only one to make it in qualifying, the only time lap speeds are considered official, with a best lap of 200.545 m.p.h.

Sneva's speed Thursday was just a tick slower than teammate Mario Andretti's 203.482 m.p.h., the best of the month. However, since Andretti is not expected to return for qualifications due to a Formula One schedule conflict, Sneva now is the fastest driver at the track.

Even though he doesn't like the speeds, he does like being the fastest.

Canadiens hang heads after loss to Boston

BOSTON (AP) — "You better send some flowers," whispered defenseman Pierre Bouchard, surveying the Montreal Canadiens' dressing room. "It's like a funeral in here."

That's because Montreal knew the Boston Bruins had outskated, outworked and outscored them Thursday night in Game 3 of the National Hockey League's final playoff series, beating the Canadiens 4-0 and cutting their lead to 2-1 in the best-of-seven set.

"We couldn't have played a better game — for them — if they had asked us to play it," said Montreal left wing Steve Shutt, openly frustrated and annoyed by his team's performance.

"We weren't skating. We didn't work hard enough. When you get outworked, you don't deserve to win," said Canadiens defenseman Larry Robinson. "It's not so much what they did as what we didn't do."

The Canadiens didn't mount their normal free-skating, high-pressure offense because the Bruins wouldn't permit such an attack in this, their first home game of the series. They stopped Montreal patterns in the neutral zone, which is 10 feet shorter at Boston Garden than in the Canadiens' Montreal Forum home, and allowed their opponents just 16 shots on goalie Gerry Cheevers.

"The report of our death was premature," said Bruins Coach Don Cherry. "I think some ankles were broken jumping off Montreal's bandwagon tonight."

"We got some breaks, got two early goals, and played simply the best game we've ever played," added Boston center Peter McNab.

The early goals came on defenseman Gary Doak's 55-foot slap shot just 59 seconds into the contest and a five-footer by Rick Middleton at 5:11. Middleton intercepted a Rejean Houle pass at center ice, then took a feed from Jean Ratelle before speeding around defenseman Guy Lapointe and cutting in front of goalie Ken Dryden for his tap-in.

"You can't score a goal and relax against them," said Middleton. "You've got to keep going after them and keep scoring."

That's just what the Bruins did, adding third-period goals by McNab and Terry O'Reilly to end Boston's 12-game winless streak against the defending Stanley Cup champions.

Cheevers recorded the eighth shutout of his playoff career, snapped Montreal's nine-game playoff winning streak, handed the Canadiens their first playoff shutout since May 13, 1971, and drew ovation after ovation from the crowd of 14,602.

"We kind of got whipped tonight," said Dryden, who faced endless Boston pressure and stopped 32 shots. "They did everything right. Whether we assisted in our own downfall is our problem, not theirs."

"Before the game," said Cherry, "I told them, 'If you lose tonight, it's over. I could sweet-talk you guys and say they still have to win four games, but really, there's no way you'll beat the Canadiens four straight. If we don't shoot the works, we're done."

Instead, they've very much back in contention.

Paul Silas seeks another ring

SEATTLE (AP) — Paul Silas, a 14-year National Basketball Association veteran, already has two championship rings in his collection.

But the Seattle SuperSonics' reserve forward says that beating the Washington Bullets for this season's title would be the highlight of his career.

"If we win the next series," said Silas, "it's going to be the biggest win of my career. We came this far, I don't see why we can't go all the way.

"I'm looking to win the championship ... because we can."

The Sonics, dismissed as even a playoff possibility after a 5-17 start this season, capped their long climb to the Western Conference championship with a rousing 123-108 victory Wednesday night over the Denver Nuggets.

The victory gave Seattle a 4-2 edge in the best-of-seven series with the Nuggets and propelled them into the NBA final against the Bullets, champions of the Eastern Conference.

Game 1 of the best-of-seven championship series will be played Sunday at the Coliseum, where the Sonics have won 20 straight games, including eight in the playoffs.

"They (the Bullets) came through a lot of adversity, too," said Silas. "It should be a good series. They have as much, or more rebounding strength. We possibly have a little more quickness."

Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens, who took over last Nov. 30 when the Sonics were mired in the Pacific Division cellar, has downplayed the home-court advantage in recent weeks. But he admits that having the edge against the Bullets "is super. The home fans are great. They get your adrenalin going."

"They give you the lift at the right time. You make a great play and the fans yell and it lifts a player up. I think pressure is what you bring upon yourself. We've won games on the road. We've proved that in the playoffs," added Wilkens.

Marvin Webster, the Sonics' 7-foot-1 center, who along with Silas came to Seattle from Denver in an offseason trade, said: "I think it'll be a very physical ball game Sunday. But I think we can handle 'em."

A nuetral observer, who is very high on the Sonics' chances against Washington, is Denver reserve guard Mack Calvin.

"I can't see Washington beating Seattle," Calvin said. "The Sonics have got momentum and a good basketball team that is playing together. Under pressure they have a lot of poise."

Nuggets forward Bobby Jones said much of the Sonics' success comes because "they are masters of taking advantage of the fast break, on any kind of mismatch."

"It'll be a rough, tough, rock 'em, sock 'em series," predicted Sonics guard Fred Brown.

Pan Am plans larceny

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Center-fielder Bobby Rutledge is the larceny leader on a Pan American baseball team whose members would rather heist your billfold than beat you to death with their bats.

Consider this statistic: Rutledge, left-fielder Leonard Tyrone and right-fielder Bert Carcia have stolen 134 bases this year. Rutledge is the prince of pilfering with 75 successful steals in 84 trips.

Rutledge needs just one more steal to tie the NCAA record set by Stetson's Mike Wolfe in 1975.

Pan American's Broncos turned road runners were scheduled to play Southland Conference champion Louisiana Tech in a 5 p.m. game today while Baylor and Mississippi State were on the agenda for an 8 p.m. game in this NCAA South Regional double-elimination baseball tournament.

The losers in the first-round games meet at 1 p.m. Saturday and the winners at 8 p.m. Sunday's games, if necessary, are at 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Baylor swept through the regional last year and into the College Baseball World Series in Omaha, Neb., and pitcher Burl Coker was responsible for the Bears' success.

But Coker was hit on the arm by a throw while attempting to beat out a bunt last week in the Southwest Conference tournament.

"Burl will be out of the tournament and we just hope he'll be back for a designated hitter role if we survive the regionals," said Baylor Coach Mickey Sullivan.

Preakness looks tight

BALTIMORE (AP) — "Working under my father was like going to Harvard," says Albert Barrera, a college dropout turned horse trainer who will take on dad Laz and favored Affirmed in Saturday's Preakness with an outsider named Track Reward.

The Preakness is considered to be another "shootout" between Affirmed and Alydar. But it has a fresh touch in that it will be the first stakes meeting between the two Barreras.

"I will invite my father into the winner's circle with me," said 24-year-old Albert with a broad smile before entering Track Reward Thursday for the 1 3-16-mile, $150,000-added Preakness at Pimlico.

But the Barrera most likely to do the inviting is 53-year-old Laz, a two-time trainer of the year who will be shooting for his 20th stakes victory of 1978 in the Preakness.

Affirmed, who has beaten Alydar in five of seven meetings including a 1½-length victory in the Kentucky Derby, was made the early even-money favorite, with Alydar second at 7-5. The third choice, at 8-1, was Believe It, who was third in the Derby and is the only other Derby starter in the field.

Track Reward is in the longshot group, with Noon Time Spender, Indigo Star and Dax S.

Albert Barrera started going with his father to the track when he was three and worked for him summers while in high school and during three years at the University of Miami, Fla.

He was majoring in languages with a minor in psychology at Miami, but the race track was thick in his blood.

"He was not doing so good so I went down to see him," said Laz. "There were Racing Forms all over his room. I said, "You read the Racing Form and I read the Racing Form, so you come with me and we'll both read the same one."

"I had some books," said Albert, smiling.

"What I'm doing now I love," added Albert, who has been training on his own and has a stable of about 20 horses. "I wouldn't change it for anything. The foundation I have he (his father) gave me. That was the best college I could have had."

The father and son, who have opposed one another in non-stakes races, are extremely close and Albert is a great admirer of Laz.

"I think my father devotes 99 per cent of his time to his horses," said Albert. "He doesn't like to pass up anything. He likes to keep watch on everything ... including me."

Laz has offered his son no advice concerning the Preakness.

Realistically, Albert sees the race the way most people do. "To me it looks like a three-horse race, and my horse looks like the fourth," he said. "It was hard to stay away. I've been training long enough to know anything can happen."

Track Reward, owned by Aisquith Stable and ridden by Bernie Gonzalez, did not race last year and has won three of eight starts in 1978. Last Sunday, he finished fifth in the one-mile Withers at Aqueduct on a sloppy track which Albert said the colt didn't like.

Of course, none of the other Preakness contenders can touch Affirmed's credentials. The Harbor View Farm chestnut, ridden by Steve Cauthen, won seven of nine starts in 1977, finished second twice to Alydar, when he was voted the 2-year-old champion. This year, he is 5-for-5 and has won more money, $887,027, at this stage of his 3-year-old season than any thoroughbred in history. A victory Saturday would make him a millionaire.

If all seven go to the post under 126 pounds each at 5:40 p.m. EDT, the 103rd Preakness would be worth $188,700, with $136,200 to the winner. ABC will televise from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Alydar's defeat in the Derby was his first in five starts this year. As a 2-year-old, the colt, owned by Calumet Farm and ridden by Jorge Velasquez, won five of 10 starts with four seconds.

Carol Mann recalls 1961

JAMESBURG, N.J. (AP) — Carol Mann, a veteran of 18 years on the LPGA tour, laughs when recalling her rookie season back in 1961.

"My father figured out that I earned 15 cents an hour based on my winnings that year," said Mann, who earned $2,165.50 that year. "It's unbelievable — the total prize money for 1961 was $186,000, this year it's $3.5 million."

Mann will be competing in the first round of a $100,000 LPGA tournament at Forsgate Country Club beginning today.

She says she has never regretted being a golfer, despite the traveling, and the nomadic life.

"It's unfortunate because of the work I'm in I have to travel," said the 6-foot-3 blonde. "But that's secondary. The traveling is a means to an end."

Mann said if not for golf, she would have been a doctor.

"If I had been strong enough, financially and mentally, to get through medical school, I would have wanted to be a doctor," said the 37-year-old. "But golf is my first love.

"If I had been a doctor I would have married, had kids and probably been divorced. I'm happier this way," said Mann.

Mann has her work cut out for her this weekend. Nancy Lopez, the tour's top money-winner and the winner of last week's Greater Baltimore Classic, is playing the best golf of her career and is the early tournament favorite.

Others entered include tournaments winners Jan Stephenson, Jane Blalock and Hollis Stacy.

Mann is off to a slow start in 1978, winning just $5,000 in four tournaments. However, she still retains her zest for the game.

"Each week is different," said Mann. "There is the beauty and challenge of the golf course — and that can keep you going. Like Forsgate requires you to make shots that other courses don't."

Mann, says, mental preparation is the key to her game now.

Rivers leaves doghouse

By The Associated Press

Mickey Rivers went from the doghouse to the penthouse in one quick jump.

Rivers, whose feud with New York Yankee Manager Billy Marting made headlines last weekend and resulted in his consignment to the bench, made a more positive kind of headline Thursday night.

Thrust unexpectedly into the lineup when Roy White pulled up lame against the Cleveland Indians, Rivers responded with a tie-breaking triple and two runs scored.

His contribution resulted in a 5-3 victory for the Yankees and no doubt ingratiated him with Martin.

"He was told before the game he'd be playing Friday," Martin said. "He was ready to play. He didn't say a word. He's a good ballplayer."

It was Rivers' first appearance in the lineup since last Sunday's 10-9 loss to the Kansas City Royals, a game which stirred up the controversy between Martin and Rivers. Martin was upset over what he considered Rivers' lack of hustle, although the outfielder claimed he was bothered by an injury.

"The leg is still hurtin' me," Rivers said Thursday night. "It's the same situation. It started hurting about a week and a half ago.

"I don't think I was at fault (for losing to the Royals)," he added. "This is supposed to be a team game and no one individual wins or loses the games. Anybody can have a good day and anybody can have a bad day. Some days you hit and some days you don't. You can't expect so much from a person every day."

The Yankees scored three runs in the sixth to erase a 3-0 deficit. White led off with an infield single and pulled a leg muscle on the way to first. Rivers replaced him and went to second on a single by Thurman Munson. Lou Piniella then tripled home both runners, chasing Cleveland starter Don Hood. Chris Chambliss greeted reliever Dennis Kinney with a game-tying single.

Kinney later walked Willie Randolph with two out in the Yankee seventh. Randolph stole second and came home on Rivers' triple to right-center. Munson then brought Rivers across with a double.

Undefeated Ron Guidry won his fifth straight game with ninth-inning relief help from Rich Gossage, who posted his fifth save of the year. Guidry gave up six hits, including Andre Thornton's two-run homer in the fourth inning. It was the first homer off Guidry in 122 1-3 innings.

Rangers 6, A's 4

Juan Beniquez drove in four runs and had four hits as Texas beat Oakland. Texas catcher Jim Sundberg ran his consecutive game hitting streak to 17 with a fifth-inning single. The streak, longest in the American League this season, tied a club record.

Beniquez delivered singles in the first and fifth, each of them scoring two teammates.

Twins 8, Royals 6

Mike Cubbage, Butch Wynegar and Jose Morales knocked in two runs apiece to lead Minnesota over Kansas City. The Twins scored five runs in the third inning on a two-out rally keyed by a two-run single by Cubbage and Morales' two-run pinch double.

Kansas City starter Dennis Leonard, one of three 20-game winners in the American League last year, was knocked out in the five-run third. Goeff Zahn was the winner with relief help from Tom Johnson and Mike Marshall.

Brewers 8, Tigers 7

Sal Bando's eighth-inning sacrifice fly scored Paul Molitor as Milwaukee, after squandering a five-run lead, struck back and snapped Detroit's four-game winning streak.

Molitor led off the eighth with a bunt single and reached second on the play on a wild throw by third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez. After Cecil Cooper sacrificed Molitor to third, Bando lofted his fly to right, breaking a 7-7 tie.

Orioles 5, Blue Jays 3

Doug DeCinces drove in three runs with two homers and Pat Kelly smashed a two-run double to pace Baltimore over Toronto.

DeCinces, who has driven in all eight of his runs this season on homers, connected in the fourth following a walk to Eddie Murray to tie the score at 2-2. His solo blast in the eighth, hit fifth home run of the season, provided the Orioles with their final run.

Angels 9, White Sox 5

Don Baylor smashed a grand slam home run and right-hander Chris Knapp won his fifth game as California defeated Chicago.

Baylor's homer, his 10th of the season and second career grand slam, climaxed a six-run rally in the third inning when the Angels chased loser Francisco Barrios.

CFL captures television pact

VANCOUVER (AP) — The Canadian Football League has signed an agreement with a United States communications firm which will televise up to 30 CFL games this season in the U.S., commissioner Jake Gaudaur said Thursday.

Gaudaur said the CFL will receive $100,000 from Total Communications Systems Ltd. of Pittsburgh, even if the project doesn't get off the ground.

He said the company has plans to send the games into an estimated 12 million American homes through transmitting stations and cable systems.

The agreement is for one year, with a two-year option.

"The deal has a great deal of potential for both sides," said Gaudaur, noting that the CFL has worked out a profit-sharing arrangement with the company. "The league is extremely hopeful that this television package will help bring in new revenues and also make recruiting easier through exposure of our game in American communities."

Johnstone misses best part of win

By The Associated Press

Jay Johnstone sits on the Philadelphia bench most of the time and waits for something to happen.

Something did happen Thursday night: Johnstone started in left field against the Houston Astros in place of the slumping Greg Luzinski. Hitting only .154 going into the contest, Johnstone got four hits in four trips to the plate, drove in a run and scored twice.

Oddly enough, however, when the Phils finally beat Houston 8-5 in the ninth inning, there he was on the bench again.

With the game tied 5-5, Manager Danny Ozark lifted Johnstone for pinch hitter Jose Cardenal. Cardenal singled and wound up scoring in front of pinch hitter Jerry Martin's ninth-inning, three-run homer.

"You have to go with the percentages," Johnstone said, "and Jose has been hitting the ball well. There have been times when Danny has left me in the game. In Chicago, against (Ramon) Hernandez, he left me in and I hit a home run. The next inning he pinch hit against Hernandez, so you never know."

Luzinski has complained of problems with his contact lenses and did not have a hit in 10 trips as the Phils lost the first three games of the four-game set at Houston. Still, Ozark insists the Bull is not in his doghouse.

"Greg Luzinski is one of my finest hitters and RBI men," said Ozark. "If I see Greg needs a rest, I'll certainly play Jay."

The Phils scored four runs in the first inning. Mike Schmidt doubled two runs home, Johnstone singled home Schmidt and Bob Boone singled home Johnstone. In the third, the Phils scored when Johnstone doubled and came home on Boone's single.

The Astros struck for three runs in the third, and Bob Watson singled home runs in the sixth and eighth innings to tie the game.

"You have to look at it this way," said Johnstone. "There's so much talent on this team, and so much experience, that my role is to play when I'm called on. We have a history of having some injuries, so I just have to wait my turn."

The eight runs that Philadelphia scored in the Astrodome Thursday quadrupled their production in the previous 27 innings against Houston. Reliever Gene Garber, 2-0, got the win in relief of Larry Christenson, and Astros reliever Joe Sambito, 2-1, was the loser.

Reds 3, Expos 2

George Foster singled home the winning run in the eighth inning after Ken Griffey had tied it with a two-run double. Fred Norman, 5-0, and Pedro Borbon, who tossed the last two innings, held Montreal to three hits.

Expos pitcher Steve Rogers, 4-4, had a four-hit shutout going into the eighth and wound up allowing seven hits. Ellis Valentine homered for Montreal in the second.

Mets 8, Braves 7

Steve Henderson, who had four hits, drove home Lenny Randle, who scored five times, with the winning run for the Mets in the 10th inning. Willie Montanez, who had four RBI, tied the game with an opposite-field double in the seventh.

Skip Lockwood, 2-3, got the victory in relief of Pat Zachry. The victory was the first this year for the Mets in extra innings at home.

Finley remains unpredictable

By SKIP BAYLESS
The Los Angeles Times

DETROIT — Reporters who cover the Oakland A's say they never know how Charles O. Finley, the club's not-so-benevolent dictator, will answer his telephone. Nor can they anticipate which question might prompt Charles O. to compliment them, curse them or hang up on them.

Lately, Finley has been answering, "State your name, your business and cut the BS." When a reporter called after Oakland's 15-0 humiliation here Sunday, he expected no more than the final words of Finley's standard greeting, Predictably, Finley was unpredictable.

"Home of the brave," came the raspy, foghorn tones from Finley's apartment in Chicago. Though his team, the youngest in baseball, had just taken maybe its worst beating, Finley was in a loquacious mood.

"Two out of three from Detroit isn't Bad? Is it?" Finley demanded, referring to his team's victories Friday and Saturday. "Hell, no, it isn't. Ask me anything. Ask me anything in the world. I won't lie to you."

FINLEY HAD reason to display the "cocky confidence" he looks for in players. He's back rocking baseball's boat again, something which seems to tickle him almost as much as counting his money. Though they're the youngest, his employees are among the winningest — and, equally important to Finley, the likely lowest paid. They lead the Angels by 2 1-2 games in the American League West.

Finley refused to pay free-agent rates to keep the stars of his 1972, '73 and '74 world championship teams and watched as the A's fell into last place last year. But, horsetrading through spring training, Finley pieced together a band of minor leaguers and once-weres who seem more excited about getting to play than making money.

Now the owner seems to be in his glory. He's trying to prove to the other owners that he can win without paying five or six players a million or more. So, far, he's succeeding.

And off he went, rambling for nearly two hours about the other owners' "stupidity," about "His Highness," commissioner Bowie Kuhn, about his trading technique, about his health and thoughts of selling the A's to the highest bidder, about his latest brainstorms: designated runners, making three instead of four balls, a walk, and putting headphones on manager Bobby Winkles so finley can talk to him during games.

Finley was variously pompous, profane, charming, funny, abrupt, didactic, philosophical. And, almost always, slightly outrageous.

The reporter had spent the weekend talking with A's players, coaches and others, and inevitably many discussed Finley. Some call him "The Man," some call him "The Genius," some call him other things. But most ended up saying "Who knows what Charlie's going to do next?"

THE ONE thing no one seemed to have an answer for was this: How could a man who didn't play anything but semi-pro baseball have the savvy to put together such an effective team? How did he know that Mitchell Page, John Henry Johnson, Dave Revering and Tony Armas, recent minor leaguers, were ready to play with the big boys? How did he know that Pete Broberg and Joe Coleman and Elias Sosa, journeyman pitchers, could be a combined 11-2 right now? How did he know shortstop Mario Guerrero and catcher Jim Essian could be two of the league's premier defensive players?

How could he pull off an 11th-hour trade which transformed a team picked for last into one thats first? How did he get seven players — six of whom have contributed — from San Francisco for Vida Blue?

ASKED ABOUT his sagacity, Finley at first was cagey, "I — uh, we — do our homework," was all he would say. Finley is actually a one-man band, a combination owner-general manager-coach who has a hand in every decision, down to what time the batboys show up. But he tries to give the appearance of delegating authority.

Actually, it is Finley who does his homework. Though a member of a scouting pool, he seems to do most of it himself — letting his fingers do the walking. He spends most of his day on the phone, calling other owners and general managers, asking about one player, and, oh, by the way, picking up information on another.

His 10-foot-long desk is piled high with baseball publications and he absorbs background on both major and minor leaguers. Living in Chicago, he watches the Cubs or White Sox on TV when he isn't listening to the A's games, which are broadcast to him over the phone by underlings.

Some baseball executives who have dealt with him say they made one mistake: they tried to deal logically with an illogical man. Finley plays by one set of rules: his own. To try to figure him out is usually to lose.

After persistent questioning, Finley surrendered this little secret: he tries to put at each position a player who is just slightly above average. That way, egos don't collide and players began to compliment each other, with nine pretty good ones meshing to form a very good team.

"Tell me this," Finley said, trying to make his point. "What has Don Baylor done since he left to become a millionaire? Or Joe Rudi? Or Sal Bando? Or Gene Tenace? Or even Reggie Jackson? Almost any of them.

Not much, I'll tell you. No, but you put that kind of aggregation together, and they'll shine a little brighter."

But Finley was quick to say that he is not bitter that some left to make their fortunes. Instead he directed his ire at other owners.

"Hey," he said, "if I were an outstanding ball player and had the opportunity to become a millionaire, you can bet your ass I'd take advantage of it. No, I blame everthing on the stupidity and idiocy of the owners in entering into the last contract with the Players' Association (permitting fre agency). I called all of them and told them the handwriting was on the wall. But no, they left the barn door open.

"And now the rich are going to get richer and the poor poorer."

Because of poor attendance — the A's are averaging under 5,000 at home — Finley puts himself in the "poor" bracket. To improve his finances, he tried in an unprecedented '76 move to sell Rudi, Rollie Fingers and Blue for $3.5 million. Bowie Kuhn blocked the trade, and later vetoed an attempt to sell Blue for $1.75 million and a minor leaguer.

TWO HEADS are better than one except when you're playing for opposite teams. Dean Smith, left, of the Houston Hurricane and Keith Weller, right, of the New England Teamen collided for this heads up action in NASL contest. (AP Laserphoto)

Nicklaus seeks immortality

By JIM MURRAY
The Los Angeles Times

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Some people think the surest way to immortality is to get elected president. Others seem to think being Zsa Zsa Gabor's fourth husband will do. Some want to conquer Europe, solo the Atlantic, go to the moon, swim a channel, rob Brink's or break the bank at Monte Carlo.

Jack Nicklaus wants to own a golf tournament. This is a switch because most guys could go to heaven happily knowing they had won three U.S. Opens, five Masters, four PGAs, two British Opens and two U.S. Amateurs. In fact, I know some people who could die happy if they could break 100.

BUT WHEN Jack goes to that Great Clubhouse-in-the-Sky, he wants to leave not just a string of birdies behind but his own special monument, 18 holes of bewildering doglegs and par threes over water, mogulled greens, an Instant Major Championship.

Lots of guys get golf tournaments named after them — guitar players, crooners, old-time golfers. But Jack Nicklaus didn't want just to slap his name on some regular tour event out in Oklahoma or West Texas or the California desert, he wanted immediate tradition, St. Andrews set down in the middle of an Ohio cornfield. He set about his task with the dedication of an 11th Century emperor bulding a cathedral. He bought the land, cleared the course, named it Muirfield, after his first British Open win, built spectator mounds, and set out to build his own cathedral among golf courses, a Chartres of golf with everything but the stained-glass windows and incense.

Jack believes that if there's one thing he does better than play a golf course, it's design one. It's a common sight to see Nicklaus, on the spoor of a U.S. Open win, stop at a certain hole, and frown at it just as he's about to pick up a club to bring it to its knees. "There shouldn't be a dogleg here," Nicklaus will scold. "This hole would open up better if it went right to left." Sometimes, you think Jack would be happier with a rake and a shovel and a surveyor's transit in hand than a 9-iron. They ruined a great greenskeeper when they taught him how to putt, goes the gag in the locker room.

SO, JACK wasn't about to just let them take the Memphis Open and rename it The Jack Nicklaus and Donny and Marie Memphis Open. If he was going to have a tournament — and he was — he was going to have the kind that would begin dripping with tradition right from the start, and in five years take a place in the pantheon of golf that it took the British Open a century to reach.

It was an audacious idea. But there was precedence. The man Jack Nicklaus admires most in the lore of golf, Bobby Jones, did it with the Masters in just about 20 years. People think the Masters has been around since Stonewall Jackson but it was in 1934 that Bobby Jones bought a nursery in Augusta, rounded up a carload of millionaires, and put on a tournament that is today ranked in a quintet with the U.S. and British Opens, PGA and U.S. Amateur as a major.

A tournament becomes "major" because it is won by a major player five years out of five. Bobby Jones insured this by inviting only "major" players to his tournament — and then filling out the field with assorted stockbrokers, creaky amateurs, and occasional fossils who had won the Open or something in the Stone Age. The Masters never really had any mystery winners, they were always the registered Who's Who of Golf — until the changing times forced Bobby Jones' succesors to insert tour players in the field. The tour players took it over for a while — until Gary Player came along and began to win it annually.

NICKLAUS SAW to it that his tournament began to get class winners: he wonIit himself last year. This gives the tournament the fine "bottom" a major tournament has to have. The rest is up to the course. Jack began to locate the holes in places the one-putt cactus players can never reach with a drive and an 8-iron. His course, like Augusta, is artfully designed never to reward a poor shot or punish a good one.

It's a daring notion. But Jack was never one to flinch at a long par five.

The Masters was helped along by a corps of writers who liked being at a tournament where Snead-Hogan-Demert-Nelson-Palmer-Player-Nicklaus always won, and you didn't have to come up on deadline Saturday night and hear some despairing scrivener bawl out, "Who in the hell's Butch Baird? And what in the hell's he doing shooting 66s? Anybody got anything on him? What's he look like?" Herbert Warren Wind and a host of British writers brought an almost mystical glow to their copy when writing of Bobby Jones' tournament.

Nicklaus has called his tournament The Memorial, and it annually honors giants of golf's past (this year, Francis Ouimet). The Memorial has a nice, portentous ring to it. It sounds like something that has been around since wooden shafts.

THERE IS a bull market in major tournaments, anyway. The commissioner of golf, Deane Beman, is struggling to elevate two tournaments — the TPC (Tournament Players Championships) and the World Series of Golf (which he has grandly taken to calling The Championship). He is coincidentally striving to cut down on the influence of rival championships like the British.

There probably will be room for another major — particularly if the Masters declines in stature with the deaths now of both Bobby Jones and Clifford Roberts, and the fact that Presidents now come from and not to Georgia.

But, Bobby Jones had the good manners to retire before he built his championship. He had the good taste never to come closer than 10 shots of the lead in his tournament. It's pretty hard to get sentimental about a host who is still around saying, "You're away" all the time. Until and unless Jack can design a whole bunch of par-fives he can't birdie, there may be a lot of foot-dragging on upgrading his tournament to a level with the British. But, if I know Jack, he'll never pick up. If a guy can win 16 major championships, he ought to be able to make just one.

Old olympic facilities to be games' focal point

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Los Angeles ultimately gets the Olympics, the city plans to make the same 1932 Olympic facilities the focal point of the 1984 Summer Games.

The Los Angeles Coliseum, constructed solely for the 1932 Games, is one of the many existing structures Los Angeles plans to use in July, 1984.

Mayor Tom Bradley has emphasized that while the city looks foward to the XXIII Olympiad, it doesn't want to go broke in the process. A spartan Olympics, that's the goal.

Los Angeles believes this can be accomplished by utilizing the dormitory facilities at the University of Southern California and UCLA for its Olympic village.

The coliseum will serve well for track and field. Also, there are other existing facilities, none of which are more than than about 30 miles away from the downtown area. The city believes these will be good sites for the 16-day extravaganza.

For basketball, there's the 15,605-seat sports arena next door to the Coliseum. For boxing, the 18,700-seat Forum in Inglewood and the 10,500-seat Olympic Auditorium downtown are proposed.

Equestrian sports would be contested at Santa Anita Park in Arcadia, located on a 400-acre site with seating for 40,000 and stabling facilities for 1,700 horses. The Long Beach Convention Center Exhibition Hall, seating over 6,000 with floor area for 14 fencing strips, is the proposed venue for fencing.

Soccer sites include the 100,000-seat Rose Bowl, the Coliseum, East Los Angeles Stadium and Long Beach Veteran's Stadium. UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, with 10,379 permanent theater-type seats, would be used for gymnastics and is a possible site for handball, as is the Anaheim Convention Center.

The Cal State-Los Angeles gymnasium, with seating for 4,170, is the proposed venue for judo. The modern pentathlon competition would be held where the related Olympic competitions take place.

Whittier Narrows Recreation Park is planned to be used for the Olympic trap and skeet shooting events. Proposed sites for volleyball include the 12,000-seat Long Beach Arena and the Long Beach City College men's gymnasium, seating 3,460.

The Shrine Auditorium, a 6,889-seat facility, is planned for weight lifting. The Forum and the 6,000-seat Pasadena Center Exhibition Building are proposed wrestling venues.

Synchronized swimming competition would be held at the East Los Angeles College Swim Stadium or the Belmont Plaza Pool in Long Beach. Water polo competition is planned at the Los Angeles Swimming Stadium, a 5,500-seat facility that was the site of swimming competition in 1932.

As expected, a number of new facilities will be necessary, but that number likely will be few. An archery range with temporary seating is proposed in the Sepulveda Basin recreation area near the existing archery range.

Fans' ballpark passions second only to game

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Washington Post

Ballparks are a passion among baseball fans second only to the game.

True arrival at a big-league ballpark begins with the first glimpse of green grass, and not a moment before. The sighting of a light tower in the distance, peering down perhaps over the heads of houses, does not count.

Maybe the butterflies begin then. Tiny smiles begin cropping up spontaneously. The Oh-I'm-not-really-excited walk carries you through the parking lot as the delightful suppression of pleasure builds.

EVEN THE tucking away of the rain check in the wallet, the vendors' cries and the double-time hike up the stadium ramp are just an overture.

At old Griffith Stadium in Washington the first slash of grass appeared as you passed the louvered grandstand behind first base.

It lasted just a flash, before the crowd, pushing along, swept you past. But in that moment, captured like a freeze frame, you could see the white bag, the coach's box and that scimitar of dirt called the right side of the diamond.

THOSE NEXT several seconds — between first glimpse and full view — were a bona fide arrival as the sense of anticipation, carefully kept under control, suddenly welled up and exploded like a home run cheer.

Doubtless, there are better places to spend summer days, summer nights, than in ballparks. Doubtless.

Nevertheless, decades after a person has stopped collecting bubblegum cards, he can still discover himself collecting ballparks. And not just the stadiums, but their surrounding neighborhoods, their smells, their special seasons and moods.

Boston's Fenway Park is best on the worst days, in raw misty spring and foggy fall. The streets around the Fens are crowded, narrow and damp. Taxis blow their horns at the herds of jay-walking Soxers on Lansdowne.

INSIDE, THE emerald field, the royal-blue and blood-red stands, the green bleachers and WALL stand silent under tarp and drizzle just as they did generations ago when Babe Ruth nnited for a Northeaster to shift so he could pitch for the home town team.

Yankee Stadium smells best in October when the armada of hot pretzel sellers rings the walls, plucking at the sleeves of the three-piece suit crowd that shows for the World Series.

The scalpers and freaks crowd near the ticket windows, one selling tickets, the other trying to steal them. The Stadium is more than faintly criminal. Poverty and violence live just a block away.

But Yankee Stadium digests that squalor like a gouty ward healer, belches and bellows, "Play Ball."

No park approaches Yankee for bad manners and arrogance. "Be glad you're here," say the white outfield facades. "Get movin', buddy," say the surliest cops on earth.

If Yankee Stadium knows how to be itself only in the midst of turbulence, Baltimore's Memorial Stadium is most comfortable itself with a lonely mid-week crowd of a few straggling thousands.

The brick-and-wood dowager of 33rd Street likes her solitude. No fireworks, no traffic jams, no loud noises, no tasteless getting and spending.

The team that has won more game than any other in the last 21 years gives nightly seminars in "Baseball, Played Properly." Prof. Earl Weaver, proponent of pitching and percentages, sits in his dugout during infield practice and watches the crowd arrive, ones and twos at a time.

"Nice turnout," he says tonelessly, years beyond sarcasm.

The sedate white clapboard houses on 36th Street stare unblinkingly in from beyond the center field fence. The sun goes down purple and gold, the stars come out, the best rock 'n roll in the big leagues drifts and echoes around the park.

THIS IS indeed baseball played properly, with only those who truly care in the quiet stands, a grove of pine trees beyond the outfield fence, and Weaver's tomato plants growing in the bullpen.

A continent away, in Chavez Ravine, baseball is played profitably. The most beautiful ballpark in the world and the tackiest hard sell go hand in hand, one accenting and exposing the other.

Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles would be heaven, that is, if St. Peter weren't at the golden gate trying to sell cheap wrist watches.

Chavez is fragrant with L. A. sundown, palm and begonia. The red clay mixed with the infield dirt, the blue of the walls, and the perpetually filled stands create a rich triple threat of aroma, color and noise.

It is difficult to introduce 50,000 fans individually during a nine-inning game, but the Dodgers never stop trying. If it isn't sufficient to see Frank Sinatra and Don Rickles in the clubhouse, or Walter Matthau and Harvey Korman sandaled and cutesy in the hot dog line, the scoreboard has to keep up three hours of non stop listing of every person in the crowd with a birthday, anniversary or a bad cold.

"A Dodger Welcome to Heinrich Hilmer of La Jolla."

Some ballparks are made for daylight; others should only come out at night.

THE GREATEST charm of Chicago's Wrigley Field is what it lacks: lights. If the truth be told, Wrigley is not a terribly attractive ballpark. Quaint, sure. Beautiful, not really.

The catwalks, the ivied brick outfield walls, the ancient hand-operated scoreboard, the pennants above the center field fence to show the league standings and whether the Cubs won or lost — all those things sound better than they look.

The bleacher bums are sufficiently demented. Day baseball is what God intended; and the whole shebang is photogenic. And it's nice to be able to see home runs bounce off people's front doors and watch them come out to see what the mailman wants.

But let's blow the whistle a bit. Wrigley Field ain't all it's cracked up to be.

From ground level the field looks ratty, the dugouts are embarrassingly cuddy and the locker rooms are almost shabby.

However, when the sun is bright, the air crisp, and your seat seems closer to the diamond than the on-deck hitter, all is forgiven. So what if the neighborhood is deteriorating, the parking is impossible, the scoreboard is unreadable, and it is impossible anywhere in the park to find out what the actual score of the game is?

The fences in the power alleys are so close you're certain the next man will hit a homer; you're so close to the umpire you can hear him cough; and, suddenly, the crowd decides it will sing a song.

Wrigley Field is great.

But it's not as great as the hideously named Royals Stadium in the Harry S. Truman Sports Complex in Kansas City. For $70 million the Royals should have come up with a bettr name, something like Waterfall Park. But no price could have built a better modern-style stadium.

HOWEVER, please go at night.

By day the two-stadium Truman Complex looks like a gaudy, colossal toy that some giant child left in the middle of nowhere.

When the sun goes down and the multicolored outfield water fountains start spouting and the clear midwestern moon starts shimmering on the steel and Tartan turf, even that gauche 12-story high Royals-crest scoreboard with the crown on top starts looking classy.

If you're going to shoot 50,000 gallons of water in the air and dazzle it with colored lights, the time to do it is after dark.

Royals Stadium is that rare park that looks stunning from inside, outside and above. The most distressing tendency of other newly built stadiums is that they look like the Mother Ship from Close Encounters on the outside, then bore you to tears once you get inside.

Riverfront and Three Rivers stadiums are by far the two most conspicuous and jubilant buildings in the towns of Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

Both are built on the water and from a distance look like blazing riverboats. Both were built with architecture, rather than baseball, in mind. They'll put you to sleep by the fifth inning if the game isn't close.

The Reds' infield is mottled with wear, the second-deck outfield pavilions are monotonous and all the stands are set inexcusably far from the field.

BASEBALL ALWAYS suffers when it is played in a cookie-cutter football stadium, like the ones in Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Kansas City had the right central ideas: limit seating to 40,000, but bring the fans close to the action; leave a center field vista open and enhance it if posssible, thereby creating an amphitheatre, rather than a claustrophobic cylinder.

Several rules of stadium building should be carved on every owner's forehead. Old, if properly refurbished, is always better than new. Smaller is better than bigger. Open is better than closed. Near beats far. Silent visual effects are better than loud ones. Eye polution hurts attendance. Inside should look as good as outside. Domed stadiums are criminal.

For every old park, like Cleveland's decaying Municipal Stadium, which is a punishment to all the senses, there is a regal Yankee Stadium, a glistening Fenway Park, or a dignified Memorial Stadium.

For every new atrocity, like Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium, with its juvenile scoreboard, its rock-hard phony turf and its baby-doll Bicentennial figures perched in center field, there is a new standard of classicism like Royals Stadium.

Britain hit by violence

By WILLIAM TUOHY
The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — Britain, the nation that gave the world many of its sports as well as the concept of sportsmanship, has been plagued this past year by violence in connection with its national game — soccer.

The violence has occurred inside soccer stadiums and has spilled out onto the streets and into the fans' special trains.

British supporters attending matches on the continent have been so unruly that several European countries have threatened to ban games between their teams and British clubs. British fans are generally conceded to be the most unruly in Europe.

Official commissions have been established to investigate the problem, but so far none has come up with any practical way to handle the violence that accompanies the game that is known outside the United States as football.

"It is an immense problem," a government official said. "It is damaging and embarrassing at home. And we've gotten a terrible reputation abroad. No one seems to know what to do about it."

Sir Harold Thompson, chairman of the Football Association, has called for more police and stiffer penalties for those convicted of "soccer hooliganism."

"I think the government has got to take action against these people," he said. "They should have learned better at home. But now it's a matter of taking disciplinary measures."

Each Saturday the 92 teams in the various divisions of British football take he field. And each Sunday the newspapers carry accounts of the latest outrages accompanying the matches.

Irate fans have roughed up players from the opposing teams and officials as well. Often they—battle among themselves.

Bottles and bricks have been thrown inside the stadium. On one occasion recently fans threw steel darts at fans on the other side.

After the matches, visiting crowds, often filled with drink, rampaged through the streets, wrecking bars and looting shops.

Last weekend, fans of two London teams, Chelsea and Millwall on the subway trains bringing them home.

"Passengers were terrorized," a transport company official said. "The train was so damaged we had to take it out of service. It will take three months to repair."

The soccer hooliganism is a far cry from the decorous behavior at cricket matches or the Wimbledon tennis tournament — even rugby games. In those sports fair play and good manners are still the style.

Many observers blame the violence at soccer games not so much on the nature of the sport as on the boring life of the young, rootless fans. The Saturday afternoon game is a high point for them.

"It's not a football problem," Alan Hardaker, secretary of the Football League, said. "It's a disease of the country. Parliament must make up its mind whether it wants law and order or not.

"These thugs have got to be made to realize that violence just doesn't pay. These kids are bored. They've no ideas of entertaining themselves. And the parents have opted out of all responsibility. Yet all we get are bunches of sociologists pontificating about the problem."

The sociologists tend to be more sympathetic, suggesting that the soccer matches are simply a way for bored, lower-income young males to blow off steam.

One recent report suggested that the typical "soccer hooligan" has much in common with the teddy boys of the 1950s, the mods and rockers of the 1960s, and the skinheads and punks of the 1970s.

So when 50,000 or 60,000 young fans gather at one of the big weekly games, the stage is set for trouble and violence.

The visiting fans pile off their trains and head for the stadium. They wear the colors of their team, often in long scarves. They sing team songs and chant team cheers for clubs that range from Northern Ireland (Belfast), to Wales (Cardiff), Scotland (Glasgow) and the London area (Tottenham and Queen's Park).

Desmond Morris, an anthropologist and author of "The Naked Ape," who is also a director of the Oxford United club, calls soccer hooliganism "ritual rudeness." He believes it has "quasi-religious elements and trappings of church-going as it used to be: the chanting, special costumes, rhythmic clapping and the rest."

The situation is compounded by the nature of the soccer stadiums. In American arenas almost everyone is seated, but most British spectators stand on upward sloping aprons called "terraces."

The fans are free to mingle. A group of spectators will stake out a portion of the terrace as their own turf. If a fan of the other team enters that turf, violence is usually the result.

Increasingly, the more mild-mannered fans are avoiding the Saturday games because of the threat of violence.

According to Hardaker, the league official, "the hooligans are whiting away the foundations of the game. It's cost the clubs dearly to fight it, and if it continues, some clubs will go to the wall. It'll kill the game."

Only about a dozen clubs in the league operate in the black now.

It has been suggested that the sale of alcohol be banned, and this has been tried with limited success in some matches. But the poorer clubs, which need the money they earn on the sale of beer and liquor, have resisted.

Ghost of gold medals past is throwing discus again

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The ghost of gold medals past showed up in California a couple of weekends ago to remind Mac Wilkins that, yes, Al Oerter really is throwing the discus again.

Oerter had a rather ordinary 192-foot toss in the meet at UCLA and, as expected, Wilkins won easily. But the presence in the competition of the 41-year-old, four-time Olympic champion cast a long shadow over Wilkins and the others training for the 1980 Games at Moscow.

"Yeah, I'm back," Oerter said brightly.

Yeah, Wilkins and the others noticed.

"I am working for the Games," Oerter said. "I'm very intent and, based on what I've seen, I think I have a chance."

He is a throwback to another time, a track and field relic who was packed away in mothballs after capturing his fourth straight gold medal in 1968 at Mexico City. He was 31 then and he walked away from the sport a champion. And, for seven years, he stayed away.

"There were three reasons that I quit when I did," Oerter explained. "I was hurt. I had neck and rib problems all the time. That was No.1. No.2 was that everybody was setting goals for me. They were other people's goals, not mine. And third was my family. My daughters were growing up and I wanted to be with them more."

So the discus and the Olympics got along without Oerter for a while. In 1972 at Munich, Ludvik Danek of Czechoslovakia won the gold. His winning throw was 211 feet, 3 inches, 15 inches less than Oerter had achieved in winning the gold medal at Mexico City four years earlier. In 1976, at Montreal, Wilkins brought the gold back to the United States with a throw of 221-5. By then, Oerter had decided to start throwing again.

"I knew what I had to do, what kind of regimen I would need to follow," he said. "I had the plan. All I had to do was do it."

At first, there were problems. "When I started throwing again, it was as if I had never done it before," he said. "I kept hurting myself, pulling a shoulder or a calf. For six or eight months, I had trouble. I couldn't work. What do you train if everything is pulled?"

Oerter's body rebelled for a while, but eventually cooperated. And soon, the plan began delivering. It included distance goals. For 1976, he wanted to reach 180 feet and made 181. For 1977, the target was 200 feet and he hit 205.

"If I could throw 200 last year, then the plan is working," Oerter said. This year, the goal is 215 and his best so far is 203. "I think 215 is achievable by August," he said.

The UCLA meet was important to Oerter. "I had to see what Wilkins and the others were doing," he said.

It also served the purpose of getting Wilkins and the other discus throwers to think about the return of a legend. "They welcomed me back and they took me seriously," Oerter said. His presence just adds one more thrower competing for the limited number of spots — three — on the team. "I'm just another guy in the pack," he said. "One more guy they'll have to compete against for a place."

Oerter occasionally has been accused of psyching his opponents. He denied the charge.

"The discus is all physical, not mental," he said. "If I beat a guy, I have to outthrow him, not outpsyche him."

Still, Oerter made it a point to have a friendly little chat with Wilkins after the meet in California. "He said, 'I know you won't pull any punches in the (discus) circle and I won't either,'" Oerter recalled.

In the meets ahead, Oerter said he would work on technique. "I never had that," he said. "I did it all on strength. Wilkins is a great technician. Watch his intensity in the circle."

Now, however, Wilkins must be starting to watch Oerter, who is out to reclaim his discus domination.

Can Oerter win a medal? He shrugged at the question. "Who knows? If I get into the Games, anything can happen."

By his own reckoning, Oerter is an Olympic long shot. He figures the odds are 2-1 that he will qualify for the trials, 25-1 that he will bring home a bronze medal, 100-1 for a silver medal and 500-1 for a fifth gold.

Roy Boe gets call

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Roy Boe, principal owner of the New Jersey Nets basketball team and hockey's New York Islanders, has been ordered to appear in State Supreme Court May 23 to answer allegations that he overstepped his powers as general partner of the hockey team.

Justice Bernard McCaffrey on Wednesday ordered Boe to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court.

KANG KANG, rear, and Lan Lan, female Panda bear, rest in their cage Thursday morning after Uneno Zoo officials in Tokyo said the two bears succesfully mated. The bears are gifts from the late Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai. Thursday's mating raised hopes for offspring which will take approximately 150 days. So far, only Chinese have bred Pandas in captivity. Space colonies? scientist says yes

MOSCOW (AP) — A leading Soviet astrophysicist forecasts that within 250 years it will be possible to construct a vast "artificial biosphere" in outer space capable of supporting 10 billion people, more than twice the world's present population.

According to Iosif Shklovsky, such a system of space colonies could have an overall surface area hundreds of thousands of times greater than that of the earth — and thus be able to capture and utilize huge amounts of solar energy.

Shklovsky, a corresponding member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, looks farther into the future to predict that 2,500 years from now mankind will have fully colonized the solar system and been ready for expansion into other reaches of the earth's galaxy.

Writing in the current issue of the journal "Social Sciences," Shklovsky said he based his forecasts partly on the apparent feasibility of plans being developed in the United States for orbiting large satellites to beam solar energy down to earth in the form of microwaves.

A U.S. coalition of aerospace companies, research foundations and educational institutions recently called for a large-scale effort aimed at launching the first of these satellites by 1995.

In addition, Princeton University Professor Gerald K. O'Neill, head of a group of physicists and engineers starting to design such solar satellites, has estimated that a space colony accommodating 100,000 or more people could be built by the year 2025.

Shklovsky argues that expansion into space was inevitable because of mounting population and environmental pressures upon the resources of the earth itself.

Only the colonizing of space would offer a long-term solution, Shklovsky contended, because it had been proven mathematically that adopting a "global balance" strategy of limited growth could only delay but not avert a world crisis.

Ancient history unveils criminal

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's never too late to investigate a murder. See if you discover the murder that took place in today's hand, exhumed from a 1939 par contest conducted by British expert Terence Reese.

East took the ace of diamonds and returned a heart. South stepped up with the ace of hearts and led a club to dummy's king. Then he discarded two hearts on high diamonds.

Declarer next led a trump to the king and returned a trump. East took three trump tricks, defeating the contract all by himself.

You now have all the clues to the bridge murder. Who was the criminal? Decide for yourself before you read on.

MURDER WILL OUT

South murdered the hand by bidding four spades.

If South bid three notrump at his third turn, North could correct to four spades with strong spades and unbalanced distribution. But when South bid four spades there was no way to retreat to three notrump.

If South did bid three notrump he would indicate doubt about the strength of the spades. Since North likewise has doubtful spades he would be happy to pass three notrump.

Regardless of the lead against three notrump, South can set up dummy's diamonds to add to his own club tricks. The defenders would be lucky to get three tricks.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: S-Q1054; H-J9; D-KQ1095; C-K4. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. You have 11 points in high cards and 2 points for the doubletons. Avoid opening a borderline hand without a single ace.

Students often sharply satire religious preferences in polls

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A tongue-in-cheek streak shows up in the attitudes of college students toward religion. When classifying themselves religiously, they occasionally put some sharp satire into it.

At least that is the case found in a check at one big campus.

"East Indian Southern Baptist Jew," one student jotted on a religious preference card, perhaps indicating his international inclusiveness. Others listed themselves as devotees of these ideals:

"Hermitism," "Accumulationism," "Porsche Fanatic," "Polytheistic-Hellene leanings with Albigensian overtones."

The far-out, quirky and obviously invented classficlations were reported on optional religious preference cards received from students by the Rev. Gus Schultz, Lutheran campus minister at the University of California at Berkeley. Other peculiar listings:

"Hedonist," "Ticcado," "Llamarianism," "Frogonian of the Latter Day Saints," "Holy Roller Buddhist-Ordained," "Pagan," "Anti-Moonie Existentialist," "Bokononist," "Mithraist" and "Orthodox Hendrixonianism."

Several listed themselves as "agnostic," either of the plain kind or with curious variations such as "Judeo-Agnostic," "Protestant Agnostic," "Agnostic Satanist," "Seventh Day Agnostic" and a double doubter who termed himself a "Skeptic-Agnostic."

One student, verging on sacrilege, listed his affiliation as "First Fundamentalist Christian Church of the Prolonged Suffering and Gooey Death."

The Rev. Martin Marty, religious historian of the University of Chicago, summarized the odd designations in a recent issue of "Context," his weekly commentary on the interaction of religion and culture.

He notes that mainline church denominations predominated as usual in the optional student listings, but that the off-beat, concocted categories were scattered among them.

It mirrors a typically sardonic bent among the young, and perhaps a current anti-institutional mood. For many, Marty says, religion nowadays is "not a denominational game" in the traditional western sense.
