Crosstown rivals brace for gridiron battle

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

Midland High school junior, Sherieka Carden, 16, told her friend LaKendria Davis she's going to put purple and gold hair extensions in her hair today. She wants to look especially spirited for this morning's pep rally and then later on at the game.

At Lee High school, students have painted a large purple sign on the windows in front of the school. The sign said, "Pound Puppies" and around the letters are little purple paw prints inside maroon circles with lines drawn through them.

A car sitting in the Midland High parking lot proudly proclaims Lee High is Puppy Chow.

It's obvious to anyone that area students are excited for this year's annual Midland High versus Lee High football game. And most quickly acknowledge that they don't necessarily have any special plans other than to enjoy the game, have fun — and win, of course.

"We've already won," proclaimed Midland High sophomore Chad Glidwell, 17,

Bush leads recount by thin margin

By David Royse
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — George W. Bush's lead over Al Gore in crucial Florida shrank to fewer than 300 votes by unofficial count Thursday with allegations of irregularities swirling and ballots from overseas residents still to be counted.

Recount results from 66 of the state's 67 counties gave Republican Bush a lead of 229 votes out of nearly 6 million cast, according to an unofficial tally by The Associated Press. The original "final" margin had been reported at 1,784.

AP called each county election official to get the final recount total for each candidate in their county.

The official recount lagged behind, and Secretary of State Katherine Harris told an early evening news conference that it could be as late as next Tuesday — a week after the election — before the state has certified ballot results from all 67 counties. She also pointed out that it would take even longer — at least until Nov. 17 — to tabulate ballots cast by thousands of Floridians overseas and postmarked by Election Day.

Harris said Bush had 2,909,661 votes to 2,907,877 for Gore, a difference of 1,784.

One election board member, Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford, defended the pace of the recount.

"Nobody ever said that democracy was simple or efficient," he said. "But this is democracy in action." He said anyone wanting simplicity should look to the south, to Cuba, a reference to the dictatorship of Fidel Castro.

The Gore campaign criticized the ballots in use in Palm Beach County as confusing, and asked for a hand count of votes cast

Bush team lashes out against Gore camp

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — Midland's favorite son isn't president, at least not yet. On a day when the American people were expecting some clarification on who will be the next president, it seems there is now only more confusion than before.

While Florida officials continued to recount ballots to verify if Gov. George W. Bush did indeed win the majority of the state's votes in Tuesday's election, a feud seemed to escalate between the Bush camp and the Democratic camp of Al Gore.

At stake in Florida is 25 electoral votes. By all accounts and measures, the winner of Florida will have achieved the necessary 270 electoral votes and would become the 43rd president of the United States.

But who will be crowned victor, or when, remains to be seen.

Protests similar to those in Palm Beach County break out in Austin

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — "Florida equals fuzzy math."

"No president by mistake."

"Mr. Bush, hold your horses."

These were just some of approximately 30 signs that Democratic protesters began waving at 5 p.m. Thursday in front of the Texas governor's mansion, home of Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush. The protests were similar to those in Palm Beach County, Fla. where voters have expressed anger about the discarding of 19,000 ballots and the ballot design

San Jacinto teacher assistant arrested, suspended by MISD

Hernandez

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

A San Jacinto Junior High school teacher assistant was arrested Thursday on charges of aggravated sexual assault against a 13-year-old boy.

Henry P. Hernandez, 36, is accused of assaulting the boy in a north Midland residence on Saturday, Nov. 4. Hernandez and the victim apparently were acquaintances, according to police.

The incident was reported to police by Child Protective Services on Monday, Nov. 6. He was arrested Thursday on the San Jacinto campus by Midland Police Department officers. He was being detained at the Midland County Detention Center Thursday night.

Hernandez, who resides in the 3300 block of West Wadley Avenue, has been suspended without pay by the Midland Independent School District. According to MISD officials, the alleged assault did not take place on campus or involve any students. Hernandez had been with the district for nine years as a teacher assistant in the special education department at San Jacinto.

MISD will make no decision regarding Hernandez's employment until after the police investigation, officials said.

Permian linebacker fighting for his life

By Terry Williamson

ODESSA — Odessa Permian linebacker Joe Beene was expecting to play a football game against crosstown rival Odessa High tonight, but instead, he is in a fight for his life in a Dallas hospital.

Beene

Beene fractured the No. 2 vertebra in his neck and partially severed his spinal cord during a practice session at Permian Wednesday afternoon while trying to tackle a wide receiver.

Beene was air-lifted to a Dallas hospital Thursday afternoon where surgery was performed. The Beene family asked that the hospital not be named.

A distraught Permian head football coach T.J. Mills was only yards away when the injury occurred in practice Wednesday.

"It was just a freak thing that happened," Mills said. "There didn't seem to be anything unusual about the hit. I don't know how it

Funeral services are under the direction of Stanton Memorial Funeral Home and Chapel, 408 N. St. Peter, Stanton, TX, (915) 756-3708.

Lois Kelly

Lois Kelly, 92, of Midland, died on Monday, November 6, 2000, in a Midland nursing home. Funeral services will be at 2:00 p.m. Friday, November 10, 2000, at the Downtown Church of Christ in Stanton with Ben Mereness, minister of Southwest Church of Christ in Amarillo, officiating.

She was born on September 4, 1908 in Palestine, Texas, and married Dale Kelly on September 20, 1929 in Stanton, Texas. He preceded her in death on February 19, 1976.

■ Death Notices/5A

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly moved from Stanton to Hereford, Texas in 1949, where they had a farming interest. Later, a farm home was built north of Panhandle, where they resided until returning to Hereford in 1962. Upon retirement, the Kelly's moved to Amarillo, Texas. Mrs. Kelly was a homemaker and served as a leader in various social clubs. She was a volunteer for the Republican Party and for the Meals on Wheels Program.

Mrs. Kelly was a faithful and active member in the Church of Christ for 61 years. At her death, Mrs. Kelly was in residence at Midland's Manor Park.

Survivors include two sons, John Dale Kelly, Jr. of Panhandle and Charles Kelly of Huntsville, Alabama; one daughter, Patsy Odom of Stanton; one sister, Billie Simmons of Flower Mound; four grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

She was also preceded in death by a grandson, Bobby Odom; two sisters, Jewel Wise and Myrtle Gormley; and one brother, John Sanders.

The family suggests memorials be made to Home Hospice, 1802 W. Wall St., Midland, Texas 79701; or Lubbock Christian University, 5601 W. 19th St., Lubbock, Texas 79401.

Arrangements are under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Casting first ballot has changed my mind about importance of voting

AUSTIN — Sixty years from now I can see myself telling my grandchildren about the first election in which I cast a ballot.

I can tell them how a friend and I arrived at the capitol at 5 p.m. and stood in the same spot on the front row of the guest section for 11 hours, cold, hungry and exhausted expectantly awaiting the election results, rejoicing over them, and then questioning how the networks could make such a huge mistake. A tall guy with blue hair actually paid me $20 for a tube of lipstick so that he could make a sign reading "CNN sucks."

Rendall

I can tell them about the enthusiasm and the excitement such as I had never before seen that swept over the crowd when "George W. Bush Wins the election" flashed onto the jumbotron. The crowd chanted, "We want the President," a request that was to go unfulfilled in the early hours of Wednesday morning. Less than an hour after the first announcement we were booing violently as the CNN correspondent announced that Vice President Al Gore had called Gov. George W. Bush to withdraw his concession and Florida's color changed from red to yellow on the Jumbotron map.

As I write this more than 36 hours later, Florida is still yellow and all of America is chanting "We want a president." Some say this election is exciting, others say it is sad. Some say it is the essence of democracy, others say it symbolizes a destroyed democracy. I don't know, but I guess I would say that in a way it is all of these things.

The only event I can really compare this to is a close football game in its last seconds. Bush's team is up by five, Gore is at quarterback, last play of the game as he attempts a Hail Mary pass that hangs and hangs and hangs in the air. When the receiver finally catches the ball one official calls it complete, the other says the receiver was out of bounds. But this game really matters, even more than the Midland High-Lee game does and there are no impartial officials and no one knows when or how the final call will be made.

The election is sad because no matter what happens half of the country will feel cheated, and those feelings will be justifiable. If Bush wins, Gore supporters will be hesitant to accept him as president, especially if Gore ends up winning the popular vote. After all, he did get more votes; the people have spoken. Isn't that what democracy is all about?

But if Gore wins, it's not fair either. Bush had this election, he was announced the winner. How do 1,200 votes just magically appear when they are recounted? And what about the other close states? And what about Missouri where polls stayed open later and New Mexico where one county's votes failed to be counted?

If nothing else, this election has reminded skeptical individuals that every vote is important. I imagine I could take to the streets for two hours and find 600 people that did not vote. If they lived in Florida, they could have swayed the election one way or the other. I think that is what democracy is all about, people taking advantage of their responsibility to vote so that they may choose the best leader for the job.

However, this election has also brought to light a number of flaws in the system. I think it is absolutely cruel to both parties and irresponsible for the media to announce a winner of the election before the results are official.

I hope that the process changes in the next four years. I think that before a state is given to a candidate, every vote should be counted. I think that exit polling is pointless and very often inaccurate. It is a waste of money and it clearly causes more problems than it is worth. I think I speak for the majority of Americans when I say that I would much rather have to wait a few extra hours to hear results than to have the wrong candidate prematurely announced as a victor.

This brings me to my next point. If the Florida recount is as close as it is expected to be we could have to wait more than a week until all the absentee ballots arrive. The same issue comes into play in New Mexico and Oregon, where all ballots will arrive by mail. It seems to me the process would be much simpler if the ballots had to be in by the day before Election Day. How hard is it to fill out a piece of paper, put it in an envelope and stick it in a mailbox? Doesn't seem too difficult.

Most importantly I think that the country needs a more uniform method of voting. With each county using different ballots and counting methods, discrepancies like the one in Palm Beach are more likely to occur. But unfortunately, or maybe fortunately for the general population, I don't run the country. Not yet anyway. I am barely old enough to vote.

Regardless of the outcome, this election will certainly have an impact for years to come. I remember telling my Dad over the summer that I did not care who won and that it would make no difference. I have changed my mind.

I have realized that in the next eight years I will be finishing my college education, searching for a job, and maybe even getting married. The legislation passed during the next two terms will have more of an impact on my life than it ever has before, I will be a "grown-up" by the time they are over.

Maybe being surrounded by Nader activists on campus protesting everything from the evils of corporate America and the death penalty to the price of gum at Eckerd's has reminded me to stand up for what I believe in. I think it is important that America have a leader with integrity and values to set a tone for the new millennium. Our country is clearly divided, and hopefully our next leader will be one who can unite us.

Textbooks will be rewritten to include the closest election in the history of our nation. I will be proud to say that I was there standing on the front row in the middle of it all, next to the eight-foot-tall guy with blue hair.

I sure do hope the pass is ruled incomplete, but regardless of the call, I am ready for the game to be over. A person can only stand so much suspense.

Company agrees to pay state $500,000 following Health Department investigation

AUSTIN (AP) — An Irving food distributor has agreed to pay $500,000 to the state after an investigation found unsanitary conditions that included birds flying through a warehouse and rodents nesting inside food boxes, Texas Attorney General John Cornyn said Thursday.

The attorney general filed suit against Joseph Sun and Everspring Enterprises in January after a Texas Health Department probe documented rodent, bird and insect infestations among food products, a news release from Cornyn stated.

The state halted the company's sales and placed its products in storage until conditions met state standards. During this detention period, a Health Department inspector's audit found more than 1,000 company invoices documenting sales of food products.

The distributor agreed to pay $500,000 to the state for repeat violations and for selling detained products, officials said.

Telephone calls to Everspring were not immediately answered Thursday evening.

The company distributes fresh and frozen seafood, frozen beef and pork, fresh chicken and vegetables, as well as canned goods. Recipients include Chinese restaurants in North Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, the Health Department said.

GAME: Principals work to ensure good, clean fun

while having lunch in the youth center across the street from Midland High.

For principals David Adams at Midland High and George Cooper at Lee High it's all just fun and games before the big game tonight.

Cooper and Adams said they've been working together to ensure this year's inner-city rivalry game goes without a hitch. Both plan on making sure the students' excitement stays within the realms of good, clean fun.

"It's like you're playing a friend that you know and grew up with," Adams said. "You like to have bragging rights, but after it's over with, you become Midlanders again."

Cooper said although both Lee and Midland High students are excited, this year's game will not have the same heated significance of last year. Both football teams aren't doing as well this year as in the past and the game has no playoff significance (Lee is in the playoffs; MHS is out). Because of this, Cooper said what normally is a week-long bragging rights event is now no more exciting as most games this season.

"It's a big game, but I think a lot of it depends on how you're doing during the season," Cooper said. "I haven't seen hardly any of the hype this year that has been part of the inner-city rivalry in the past."

Both principals want to avoid any incidents like last year's "food fight" in the Midland Park Mall and subsequent fender benders from students trying to get to the food fight. According to Cooper and Adams, their students have been on their best behavior this week and neither has seen any incidents close to last year's melee. Adams said last year's food fight was the past and should be put behind them — this year's game is more about celebration and unity.

"We're trying to avoid any problems," Adams said. "The principal at Lee High and I have worked together. The 'big' rivalry is more or less a small number of kids. It'll be solved on the football field Friday night."

In a show of solidarity, both Lee and Midland High's marching bands will be performing together on the field during the game. Thursday night, students, family members and band instructors braved the cold air and wind to practice on the old Builder's Square parking lot. Lee High Band booster parents James Jones and Karen Cox said they hope this game will bring students together.

Jones and Ms. Cox were among several band booster parents setting up cups of ice water for the students.

"Actually we're trying to bond," said Ms. Cox, whose daughter is a junior in Lee High-'s band. "And it's a good thing. In the past there's been some rivalry."

"I think everyone wants to see a good, clean game," said Jones, whose daughter is a senior in the Lee High band. "Everybody's excited about it. This school works real hard. They're all (students) doing so well."

While most of the students remembered last year's hijinks, most don't expect a repeat of the events. Many Lee and Midland High students knew that their teachers and principals were taking preventive measures to make sure their school spirit didn't wander outside of school in less than exemplary ways.

"The head principal canceled the debate tonight," said Midland sophomore Joseph Muire, 16. "We were supposed to have one but I think he was afraid that something might happen. And they've switched our lunch period around the last few days."

Most of the students were ambivalent about the precautions the principals had taken, but they understood why.

"Regardless of the fact that we win or lose, we're still number one," Sherieka Carden said while working in the youth center.

Despite all the solidarity and good feelings there was one thing no principal, student or parent could agree on — who would win.

"The Bulldogs of course!" Adams said. "It's going to be a very good game. It's going to be one of the tougher games of the year."

Lee High principal Cooper, naturally, had a different opinion.

"Well, we are (going to win,)" Cooper said. "I'm sure Midland High will say they are. We have really good kids. They really enjoy playing each other. After all, they grew up together."

RECOUNT: Palm Beach County agrees to hand count some ballots

there and in three other counties. Palm Beach County agreed to hand-count ballots in three precincts on Saturday.

In the meantime a circuit judge issued a preliminary injunction barring the canvassing commission in the county from certifying the final recount results until a hearing is held Tuesday.

That was in response to a legal challenge filed with the support of Democrats who say a poor ballot design in the county led some Gore supporters to inadvertently mark their ballots for Pat Buchanan.

The court order said the ballot was designed and printed in such a way that voters were deprived of their right to freely express their will.

"We expect legal challenges," said Clay Roberts of the Department of Elections, refusing to comment further.

Harris said that thus far 53 of Florida's 67 counties have forwarded recount materials to the state. She said the board count was behind the AP tally because the board is only reporting "those that are unofficially certified."

It was unclear how many ballots from Floridians living overseas were still uncounted — in fact still unreceived. An informal survey of 28 of the 67 election supervisors found that they had mailed just over 7,000, that a little less than half had been returned and no information was available on how many had been counted. That tally did not include some of the state's largest counties, including Miami-Dade, Broward and Palm Beach.

Harris said she had been glued to her television Thursday watching the unofficial recounts, and "I hope they're going to be a lot more accurate than the other night."

That was a reference to television networks that prematurely declared Gore the winner in Florida and then reversed course and said Bush had won the state — and with it the White House.

In addition to the partial recount-by-hand in Palm Beach County, the board in Broward County arranged a meeting for Friday to discuss the Gore campaign's request for a manual recount there.

With the outcome of the presidential race in the balance, allegations on both sides were becoming increasingly heated.

Gore campaign manager William Daley said courts may find the Florida result "an injustice unparalleled in our history." Bush chairman Don Evans countered, "The Democrats who are politicizing and distorting these events risk doing so at the expense of our democracy."

Midland elections not plagued with discarded ballots

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

In Midland elections, Midland County Elections Administrator Pat Eastup said that she cannot recall of "an instance where we have completely thrown out" any marked ballots.

However, blank ballots which would-be voters had failed to mark have been discarded, Mrs. Eastup said on Thursday as Florida election officials were recounting votes in the contested George W. Bush-Al Gore race for Florida's 25 electoral votes and the nation's presidency.

And those ballots that some voters occasionally complete with their ball-point pens instead of pencils especially designed for the automatic scanners are rejected by the machines.

However, in those cases, Mrs. Eastup noted, election officials duplicate those ballots with the magnetic pencils, and the ballots are then scanned and counted.

"If there is an over-vote, voting for two people in the same race, and if the board (Resolution Committee) can determine the intent of the voter, then the vote in that race is counted," Mrs. Eastup said. "If not, they just lose the vote in that race."

Her office "does not keep tabulations" on those ballots.

But, Mrs. Eastup noted, the other votes on any "over-vote" ballots are counted.

BEENE: Permian player paralyzed from chin down

could have been avoided."

Beene is paralyzed from the chin down. Dr. Weldon Butler, Permian's team physician, said that no long term prognosis could be made at this time.

The operation in Dallas on Thursday was an attempt to fuse the fractured vertebra together. Beene is in critical condition and will have to wait for at least another two days before anything can be done about the spinal cord problem.

Terry Swann, an uncle of Beene, acted as spokesman for the family on Thursday. He said, "We want to thank the community for its support and prayers. The family is asking for continued support and prayers."

Mills said that the injury has been a major blow to Beene's teammates.

"A bunch of them (Permian football players) got to see him today (Thursday) and it was really upsetting for them," Mills said. "We need to pray for Joe and the other kids too. This thing is painful for a lot of people. Our kids are knocked down about as hard as you can get knocked down."

The Beene family has requested that the Permian-Odessa High game, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. today at Ratliff Stadium, still be played. That game will be played.

"We talk to our kids all the time about why we play football," Mills said. "The Beene family wants us to play the game and we will find a way to play it. Our kids are hurting."

The Permian-OHS game has playoff implications for Odessa High.

The Bronchos can gain entry into the state playoffs by beating Permian, coupled with an Abilene High loss to Abilene Cooper. Odessa High has beaten Permian only once since 1964.

The sophomore and junior varsity games between Odessa High and Permian, scheduled for Thursday night, were canceled.

A candlelight prayer vigil was held at the Permian practice field Thursday night for Beene.

Injuries have plagued the Panthers this season and it has left Mills scratching his head. Prior to the Lee-Permian game two weeks ago, Mills talked with the Reporter-Telegram about the injuries in a week where he lost two players in one day to injury while working on goal line situations in practice.

"I've never seen anything like the injuries we've had this year," Mills said. "It seems like we've been carting off players every week and it isn't just the varsity. It's hit our sophomore team and junior varsity, too.

"And it's not like we are running a blood bath over here. There are just some strange injuries happening and I can't explain it."

None of the other Permian injuries this season have been life threatening, however. A player for Midland High, Bill Mims, now deceased, was paralyzed with a football injury back in the 1950s and was often seen at MHS football games, living in Midland his entire life.

Bush wins 47 of 53 Midland voting precincts, ties one

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Gov. George W. Bush won 47 of 53 Midland County's voting precincts and got a 7-7 tie at one polling place in Tuesday's general election.

Overall in Midland County, Bush, the Republican Party's presidential nominee, garnered 31,510 of the 39,911 votes for 78.95 percent of the balloting, according to unofficial returns in the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office.

Al Gore, the Democratic's Party presidential nominee, picked up 7,533 votes or 18.78 percent of the cast ballots.

The count will not become official until the votes are canvassed and approved by the Midland County Commissioners' Court at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Midland County Courthouse, according Pat Eastup, the county's elections administrator.

Prior to that, Mrs. Eastup will make another run to the U.S. Postal Service in case votes from Americans overseas have arrived prior to the canvassing. By law after the general election, there is in Texas a five-day waiting period for those votes, Mrs. Eastup said.

In Florida, where there is a battle for Electoral College votes to decide the president-elect, there is a 10-day grace period for votes from overseas Americans to arrive.

"We will go to the post office the first thing Tuesday morning," Mrs. Eastup said, "and if there is a ballot that we mailed to an American living overseas and if it is postmarked on Nov. 7, the day of the election, then we will count that ballot. If there is no post mark, we will assume they put it in the mail on Nov. 7 or before, and we will count that ballot."

So far, about 90 percent of those mailed-out 1,202 ballots have been returned.

In the overall election, 55.9 per percent or 39,911 of Midland County's 71,388 registered voters cast ballots.

Those Midlanders voting straight party or straight-party crossover voting were Republicans, 15,137; Democrats, 3,871; Libertarians, 89, and Green Party followers, 65.

In 1988 when Bush's father won the presidency, 74.5 percent of Midland's registered voters turned out the vote. Four years later, in 1992 when the senior President Bush lost to Democrat Bill Clinton, 80 percent of Midland's registered voters had cast ballots.

Midland's overwhelming 78.95 percent vote for Bush was dramatically ahead of the 59 percent or 3.79 million votes that Texans gave Bush.

Gore got 2.42 million or 38 percent of the Texas vote.

The Green Party's Ralph Nader got 2 percent — 137,534 — of the statewide vote.

In Midland, Nader attracted 475 votes or 1.19 percent of the cast ballots. Independent Pat Buchanan picked up 107 votes, and Libertarian Harry Browne polled 94 votes.

In Midland County, the Bush-Gore vote according to voting precincts follows:

Precinct 1 (Mostly west and southwest Midland)

that some voters say confused them and led them to cast votes for Reform Party candidate Pat Buchanan instead of Democratic presidential candidate Al Gore.

The presidential election was held Tuesday, but the race has yet to be decided. It is still unknown which candidate won the state of Florida. Bush won the preliminary count by less than half a percent.

Because of this, Florida law mandated that a recount be taken. As of early Thursday evening the recount had not been completed.

The press corps comprising approximately 100 people huddled outside the mansion hoping to hear comments from Bush about the count. But Bush did not make a public appearance or statement.

Instead, protesters took center stage. Chants of "Recount. Revote," were repeated continuously over the course of nearly an hour. Two of the protesters, Walter Timberlake and David Butts, said evidence suggests that Gore did win the state of Florida. If the election is to be fair, the two men argued that Palm Beach voters should be allowed to recast their votes.

"We just want a fair election. This election in Palm Beach County was not a fair election," Timberlake said.

Butts, who described himself as a political consultant, said there is clear wrongdoing on the part of somebody if more than 19,000 county residents, most likely Democrats, had their ballots discarded.

"Whenever you have that kind of number thrown out it shows some kind of institutional problem. It shows that people are being disenfranchised. This occurrence tells you that something is wrong with the system," Butts said.

Butts then turned and pointed at the governor's mansion. "What this bunch is afraid of is that these voters in Palm Beach County will turn it in favor of Gore if they're given the chance to revote."

LASHING: Evans criticizes revote encouragement

(From 1A)

On Thursday following a Gore campaign press conference in Tennessee, the Bush campaign reacted with a press conference of its own. Bush did not make a public appearance. Instead, Don Evans, a Midlander and campaign chairman for Bush, Karen Hughes, campaign spokesperson, and Karl Rove, chief political strategist for the Bush campaign, read a prepared statement and fielded questions from the media.

Their message was in no small way a tongue lashing directed to the Gore campaign. Evans criticized the Gore campaign's efforts of encouraging a revote in Palm Beach County, Fla., where more than 19,000 ballots, in what is considered a Democratic stronghold, were discarded for a variety of reasons.

"They're politicizing this at the expense of destroying democracy," Evans said of the Gore campaign. He suggested that once the recount is completed and shows Bush the victor that Gore should concede defeat.

Ms. Hughes referred to the tone of the Gore campaign press conference as being "shrill." The Bush campaign, on the other hand, Ms. Hughes argued has approached the Florida fiasco in a "calm, thoughtful and responsible way."

Rove accused the Gore campaign of intentionally seeking to mislead the public through unfounded accusations and half truths about the vote tallies in Florida. He said the Palm Beach County voters whose ballots were discarded should not be allowed to revote, as some Gore supporters have suggested.

According to CNN reports, some Palm Beach County residents have said a confusing ballot led them to accidentally vote for Reform Party candidate Pat Buchanan. Too bad, said Rove.

"We have an election day for the purpose of holding an election (on that day)," Rove maintained.

Rove then raised the possibility of recounts being conducted in the states of Wisconsin, Iowa and California — states that were won by Gore but still have votes unaccounted for.

Woman found guilty in illegal alien trial

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

Theresa Wendi Kao was found guilty of 4 counts of transporting aliens for financial advantage in federal court Thursday. Ms. Kao was also found guilty of one count of attempting to smuggle an alien into the country.

Ms. Kao faces three to 10 years in prison and fines of up to $250,000.

Defense attorney Carolyn Thurmond said Ms. Kao was very disappointed in the jury's verdict.

Jeff Parras, special assistant U.S. attorney, said Ms. Kao and her father, Kuo-shu Kao (Peter Kao), were arrested in April in connection with their restaurant, Panda Panda Chinese Restaurant in Odessa.

The restaurant came under suspicion after a September 1999 bust found 11 illegal aliens working at the restaurant, most of whom were Hispanic and Chinese.

According to Parras, one of the Mexican nationals returned to the restaurant after deportation, but sought out Immigration and Naturalization authorities because of working conditions at the restaurant.

Surveillance teams and an undercover agent uncovered a pattern of abuses for financial gain, according to Parras.

"The Department of Labor estimated the aliens were working 12 hour days, six to seven days a week, for about $1.30 an hour," Parras said.

He also said one 17-year-old male testified that he worked 12 hours a day for 17 days straight for $210. That translates to less than a dollar an hour.

During the trial, Parras said the aliens were housed, sometimes as many as six to a room, and the Ms. Kao and her father transported the aliens between the restaurant and their apartment.

Ms. Kao's father, Peter Kao, pleaded guilty to transportation and is awaiting sentencing. He faces up to 10 years in prison and up to 250,000 in fines.

Kao has also reopened the Panda Panda restaurant for business in Odessa.

Border Patrol apprehends 64 in October

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

The Midland-Odessa Border Patrol apprehended 64 illegal aliens in October, according to Len Hall, agent in charge at the local office.

Of that 64, three were from El Salvador, one was from Honduras, and the remaining 60 were from Mexico.

Hall said eight of the 64 are being prosecuted for felony charges, including three for reentry after deportation, three for document fraud and two for alien smuggling.

Hall said one alien smuggling case was identified after a traffic stop by an area law enforcement agency.

Investigators said two people were transporting aliens from Sanderson to Dallas.

In a separate case, agents responded to a report of two undocumented aliens. The investigation revealed a Houston based construction contractor employing 16 unauthorized workers.

Hall said the Midland Odessa Border Patrol office is working more closely with area probation officers to identify and apprehend criminal aliens convicted of felony offenses.

In prior cases, October saw seven sentences handed down to felonious aliens. Four were for reentry, two for document fraud, and one for making a false claim to U.S. citizenship.

Union Pacific offers vintage train ride to promote safety

By Timothy V. Kreitz
MRT Correspondent

Some 3,489 collisions involving vehicles and trains occurred in the United States during 1999, resulting in 1,369 injuries and 402 deaths, according to the National Transportation Safety Board.

Although those numbers have been in steady decline since 1995, the overall statistics are still considered by many to be unacceptably high.

The issue of railroad crossing safety is currently a hot topic in Midland County, where a recent rash of train/vehicle collisions caused several deaths and injuries earlier this year.

In an effort to create public awareness and offer safety tips for helping drivers and pedestrians avoiding the danger of oncoming trains, Union Pacific Railroad in conjunction with "Operation Lifesaver," a federally supported safety program, offered a free train ride and on-board safety presentation to students, police officers and community leaders throughout West Texas this week. The train was in Midland/Odessa on Wednesday and Thursday.

"The number of crossing deaths last year was much less than the 476 we experienced in 1995," said Union Pacific Superintendent Mike McCarthy. "But obviously, we'd like to see that number drop even more." McCarthy explained that by letting people ride on the tracks and observe the mannerisms of both the train and traffic, they would hopefully be able to get a better sense of the necessity for acting responsibly around trains.

"It takes the average train between 5,000 and 8,000 feet to come to a complete stop," said Paul Brooks of Union Pacific. "If you step or pull out in front of a moving train, you are basically confronting yourself with what is, for all intents and purposes, an unstoppable object."

Brooks added that education about train crossings, as well as the enforcement of traffic law are key factors in reducing mishaps and fatalities. "We used to teach the mantra of 'stop, look, and listen,'" Brooks said. "Now we try to emphasize the safety concept more urgently by teaching people to 'look, listen, and live.'"

Midlander Evelyn Gould, who led the charge in getting federal funding for the installation of railroad crossing bars in Midland County, said the awareness program is a good thing, but she remains disappointed that installation of the crossing bars is yet to be completed. "It's good that they want to create awareness," she said. "But it will never replace having those bars."

Installation of the crossing bars was to have originally been completed by year's end, but has been postponed until at least the spring of 2001.

Though the safety presentation was both an informative and interesting experience for many on board, it may have been somewhat overshadowed by the sheer fun of the train ride itself. The train of five completely restored 1940s and 1950s era passenger cars, which had been completely restored to original condition, exuded the sight and sounds of a by-gone era.

Bowie Elementary first-grader Jamaica McLaughlin described the train ride as "very fun" as she and aher classmates sat in the observation dome of the #7015 "Challenger" passenger car, almost too distracted by the uniqueness of the experience to even attempt an explanation of it.

Others in the class of first-graders, like 7-year-old Matthew Yorkman, repeatedly referred to the train as though it were just some kind of grossly oversized school bus, and was perhaps a bit confused by the 5,000-ton anachronism. Most of the grade-schoolers on the train did agree, however, that the 25-mile ride, which began in east Midland and ended at the Ector County train depot, was much more fun than being in class.

McCarthy said that Union Pacific maintains a fleet of about 50 vintage passenger cars, which it houses in Omaha, Neb. The cars range in age from 50 to 70 years old. Brooks added that Union Pacific also possesses several vintage train engines, such as the 1950s era E and F model "covered wagons."

Law enforcement officers were also along for the train ride, but for a slightly different reason than everyone else. Union Pacific's "Officer on the Train" program offers police, troopers and other law enforcement officials a chance to observe the behavior of motorists at railroad crossings from the perspective of the train engineer.

It is hoped that by gaining a better understanding of how drivers interpret and negotiate railroad intersections, police can develop even more improved skills for analyzing such situations, according to Union Pacific officials.

In unusual election, constitutional confrontation looms

By Walter R. Mears
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Step by incredible step, the overtime struggle for the presidency is inching toward the constitutional confrontation both sides declare they do not want. But stopping short of one will become increasingly difficult should the struggle go to court as the Democrats intend.

The rhetoric is hardening, by proxy now as Gov. George W. Bush and Vice President Al Gore wait for the verdict the voters did not clearly deliver. The Florida recount probably won't suffice, with the Gore campaign planning to wait at least until Nov. 17, the deadline for counting of overseas absentee ballots mailed back to Florida.

"We don't think we're on the edge of a constitutional crisis and we don't intend to try and provoke a constitutional crisis," said Warren Christopher, the former secretary of state representing Gore in the Florida recount.

James A. Baker III, also a former secretary of state, there for Bush, said the impasse should be settled without delay. He said it is "important that we complete this, because the presidential election, of course, is on hold, and that affects the position of the United States in a number of ways, particularly internationally."

Christopher called that a self-serving myth. "The presidency goes on until Jan. 20 in a vigorous way and none of our allies are in any doubt as to who's in charge of the government until Jan. 20." President Clinton is.

The two former diplomats were not sounding very diplomatic Thursday in the tense standoff over the 25 Florida electoral votes that will award the White House.

For the present, the uncertainty is unsettling, but no crisis. The stock market dropped sharply on Thursday, perhaps because of it, but then largely bounced back.

"We do not want delay," said William Daley, Gore's campaign chairman. "What we want, however, is democracy fulfilled."

He said that means Gore. The Republicans say it means Bush. Neither party is going to yield to anything short of decisive numbers, and getting to them will be a challenge. Bush's Florida edge had dwindled to only about 350 votes out of nearly 6 million cast as the recounting continued Thursday.

Should it vanish, the Republicans surely would raise their own challenges.

Daley said the Gore campaign already is working "in support of legal actions" in Florida focusing on what they insist was a flawed and illegal ballot in Palm Beach County that led to invalidation of the votes of about 19,000 people there. He said the confusing ballot also led many voters to punch in votes for Pat Buchanan when they were trying to vote for Gore, and contended that cost the vice president about 2,000 votes.

"I would assume the courts will take a serious look at what may be an injustice unparalleled in our history," Daley said.

Once begun, a court struggle would mean appeals by the losing side, and the process could escalate to the Supreme Court. That would engage the judicial branch at the center of a case to settle who would head the executive branch.

Even then, the point of real crisis wouldn't come until Inauguration Day, when Clinton is out at noon, Jan. 20, 2001, and a new president must be in. There is no reasonable way this impasse can take that long, especially given the fact that all parties know the deadline. But reason has not prevailed yet.

Daley said it should be resolved well before then. Baker said it should be resolved now. "They put a demand for finality ahead of the pursuit of fairness," Daley said.

But there are Democratic and Republican versions of fairness.

Daley said the Democrats were collecting accounts of other irregularities in Florida, and were demanding a hand count of ballots in four counties.

In Iowa, where Bush lost by fewer than 5,000 votes, Republicans were considering seeking a recount. Spokesman Ari Fleischer said they might also seek a recount in Wisconsin, Gore's by just over 6,000 votes.

Not since 1876 had a presidential election been so contested after the votes were cast. Republican Rutherford B. Hayes won that only after an electoral commission set up by Congress — and tilted his political way — awarded him the White House by one electoral vote. Democrat Samuel Tilden was counted out in three disputed Southern states — one of them Florida, where a Republican election board overturned his narrow lead.

All that was settled only two days before what was then Inauguration Day, March 4.

Hayes was one of the three presidents who lost the popular vote but won in the Electoral College. It last happened in 1888. This time, Gore was leading the popular vote by just over 200,000 out of more than 100 million ballots cast Tuesday.

House panel wants investigation on networks' early election calls

By Curt Anderson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A House telecommunications panel launched an investigation Thursday into what led news organizations to prematurely call Democrat Al Gore the winner in Florida and whether that depressed voter turnout elsewhere in the country.

The panel's chairman, Republican Rep. Billy Tauzin of Louisiana, told reporters that the call for Gore, which was reversed a few hours later, happened before all polls in Florida had closed and may have deterred Republican voters in states where polls were open much later.

Tauzin said that calling Florida for Gore "may have sent a signal out to Americans that this election was being decided in a way that was not accurate. When they're being told by the networks that it's already over, that's akin to disenfranchising them."

Between 7:49 p.m. and 8 p.m. EST Tuesday, NBC, CBS, CNN, Fox, ABC and The Associated Press all called Florida, with its decisive 25 electoral votes, for Gore. Polls were still open in the western part of Florida, which is in the central time zone, as well as most states in the West.

At about 9:55 p.m. EST, the networks and the AP began taking back those projections based on the actual Florida vote count that showed a tight race between Gore and Republican George W. Bush.

Early Wednesday, the TV networks called Florida for Bush and declared him winner of the presidential election, then were forced to back down on that projection as well. The AP did not declare an election winner. A recount is under way to determine the actual winner.

Tauzin said he is sending a letter to the heads of the TV networks and the AP asking a series of questions about how the projections are made. Although Congress returns for a lame-duck session on the budget next week, Tauzin said hearings would probably not take place until next year.

Central to the probe, he said, is the role of the Voter News Service, a consortium of the networks and the AP that uses voter exit polls and actual results to help make election projections. Other news organizations subscribe to VNS data.

"I don't intend to violate the law or the spirit of the First Amendment," Tauzin told reporters. "The intent is to find out what went wrong in this system."

Tauzin said a depressed voter turnout in the West may have had an impact on the House races in California that Republicans lost and on the national popular presidential vote that went for Gore.

Under a 1985 agreement, the networks have usually held off using voter exit polls to call elections until most polls are closed in a given state. Tauzin said the investigation may determine that "a new agreement" on use of this data is necessary, but he said there would be no effort to restrict its use with federal legislation.

"We should not try to pass laws about how people report elections," he said.

While officials at the TV networks said they had not received the letter, several said they were already looking into how the Florida projections went awry.

"We are conducting a top-to-bottom review of our election night projections to establish exactly what happened," said ABC News spokesman Jeff Schneider. "We will take whatever steps necessary to ensure this doesn't happen again."

NBC News spokesman Barbara Levin said the network is "very concerned about the VNS data and believe the Florida call warrants a careful examination. We will work to get to the bottom of it."

eBay sells headlines

PALM BEACH, Fla. (NYT) — Apparently, opportunity doesn't knock anymore. It points and clicks.

We're talking about the Internet, of course — a world where seemingly anyone can make a quick buck, provided they're cyber-savvy. Consider all the fuss over the presidential election: Some folks are already logging on and cashing in, mostly at the eBay.com auction Web site.

The New York Post's Wednesday edition, with its "Bush Wins!" headline on the front page, is selling for at least 25 bucks. The Florida Times-Union's "It's Bush!" cover will go for more than $100.

South Florida is getting into the auction action, too. At least 17 Palm Beach County residents are auctioning their now-famous, much-maligned sample ballots.

That's right. The ballots they received, for free, in the mail. Some are going for more than $50 on eBay.

"I'm amazed," marvels Eric Pugh, a Jupiter resident who's hawking his ballot on the site. "When I told my friends I was getting bids, they were like, 'What the? You gotta be kidding me!'"

For the uninitiated, eBay.com hosts online "auctions" where cyberfolk can place bids on items ranging from political to personal. Pugh, Sue Gould, Daniel Rose and several other Palm Beach County residents realized the profit potential of their ballots, and put them up for sale on the site.

UT Permian Basin
is pleased to announce its distinguished lecture on Alzheimer's disease and booksigning presented by the best-selling author:
Oliver Sacks

Dr. Sacks is the world-renowned neurologist and best-selling author of astonishing case histories of patients with various dysfunctions of the brain. His best selling book, Awakenings, is a case history of catatonic survivors of an epidemic of sleeping sickness that killed millions in the 1920's. He administered a new drug, L-dopa, and saw them awaken with "an explosive quality, as of corks released from a great depth." Awakenings inspired the movie of the same name starring Robert De Niro and Robin Williams, which was nominated for an Academy Award for Best Picture of the year.

His seven books convey the potential of the human spirit, the potential in people who aren't thought to have any! His inspiring collection of case studies in The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat and An Anthropologist on Mars have brought even greater public attention to neurological conditions that imprison and alter the mind, such as stroke and Alzheimer's, and how these individuals cope with their illness and treatment. His other books include Migraine, A Leg to Stand On, Seeing Voices, and The Island of the Colorblind.

Clinton, Arafat meet in effort to end violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat met for more than two hours Wednesday with President Clinton, then emerged with bitter condemnation of Israel for the wave of violence that has shattered already faint peace hopes.

After a shaking hands with Clinton and a good-bye salute at the White House door, Arafat told reporters in a rain-swept driveway, "I am not the one who initiated the violence."

"My tanks are not sieging Israeli towns," Arafat said, interrupting his interpreter to make sure his views were correctly relayed. "We are facing a very dangerous situation that is really injuring the peace process."

Despite his comments, however, the Palestinian leader said: "I reiterated my firm commitment to making peace" and said the outcome depends on the efforts that Clinton exerts.

Arafat raised with the president his proposal that the United Nations set up an international force to protect Palestinians from Israel. He did not say how Clinton reacted, but the State Department has dismissed the idea all week.

Resuming negotiations with Israel appeared a highly remote possibility.

"We're now in a very difficult cycle," Clinton's assistant for national security, Sandy Berger, said before the meeting. "The president is focused on what he can do in the next few months to try to reduce the violence and resume a political process."

Rejecting any notion Clinton's influence has waned with his term running out, Berger said "the business of the presidency goes on."

Once-optimistic plans to mold a final settlement between Palestinian leader Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak, who comes calling Sunday, are in disarray, shattered by their differences on Jerusalem and five weeks of violence on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip and in Israel.

On Thursday, Israeli combat helicopters rocketed a pickup truck packed with Palestinian guerrillas on the West Bank, killing one and critical wounding another. The Israeli army said the assault implemented a new policy of targeting ringleaders.

Two passers-by were killed and 11 others were injured.

Berger declined to address the incident specifically, but said in a general way that "violence breeds violence and we must find a way to break this cycle. It's important for people on both sides to do all they can to try to achieve that."

Barak said Wednesday on Israeli television that he would seek no resumption of peace talks. "I go to Washington to ensure that the end of violence that was agreed on at Sharm el-Sheik is carried out, if that is possible. That is all," he said, referring to an Egyptian resort where Clinton mediated a truce last month.

"It's still the U.S.'s intention to work with the parties to help them try to achieve what they are in a position to achieve, what the want to achieve," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said Wednesday before Arafat arrived a little after midnight.

Deadlocked election provides live lesson for history teachers

By Anand Vaishnav
N.Y. Times News Service

'It's the exact chemistry of kids and moment that couldn't be better. I'm in my 34th year, and this is as good as it gets. It's magic.'

— Richard Savage, history teacher

As the nation held its breath awaiting results from the unresolved presidential election, at least one group of people jumped at the chance to learn from it: history teachers.

Teachers live for momentous events like the extra-innings presidential race — unexpected current events that inject life into dry subjects like the Electoral College and the oft-heard importance of voting.

It's called a "teachable moment," an unexpected opening that ignites a relevant discussion. Many educators in the Boston area were eager to capitalize on the chance to discuss history — not as someone had written it on the pages of a dusty textbook, but as people were making it, live on television.

"It's the exact chemistry of kids and moment that couldn't be better," said Richard Savage, a history teacher at East Boston High School. "I'm in my 34th year, and this is as good as it gets. It's magic."

Speaking to his American history students, Savage said he was reminded of the face-off between John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon in 1960, when he was 15 years old and stayed up until the wee hours to see who won. Forty years later, many of his students did the same thing, staying awake as late as 3:30 a.m.

"Wednesday night, I was really sleepy. But I said I couldn't go to sleep and let history go by," senior Sugey Terrero said. "I turned on the TV (in the morning) and said, 'Oh, my God, nobody won!' "

The classroom talk shifted to the worthiness of the Electoral College, how elections really could turn on handfuls of votes, and how the closeness of the popular vote could shackle the new chief executive, leaving him with no mandate. (First, Savage had them define what a real mandate is.)

"Whoever it is, the country's going to be torn," junior John Huttunen said.

Even the students seemed somewhat surprised at their own interest.

"When we were young, we really didn't care about elections," senior Rosa Felix said. "Now that we're getting older, that we're getting ready to vote, we care."

The current generation of high school students has had no shortage of great moments in American history to take to class. The Persian Gulf War erupted when they were 8 years old, followed by President Clinton's election, followed by his impeachment, and now the Bush-Gore dead heat.

Liana Tuller, a history teacher at Charlestown High School, said daily news events provide constant fodder for discussion with her students, even without a presidential election. The race provided a chance to explore how they as citizens and voters could make a difference, Tuller said.

That relevance to students' daily lives is something teachers strive for daily, as they try to pique their interest in lessons that don't always, well, leap off the page. But history teachers said they had no problem making the connections Wednesday, sending students scurrying to Web sites for updates and asking them to remember past constitutional and civics lessons.

"It creates a relevance to history that perhaps no other event could do," said Sheldon Obelsky, a history teacher at Arlington High School. "And it has an impact on them."

Americans should join to remember our U.S. veterans

Saturday marks the official Veterans Day or as it was originally known, Armistice Day.

The selection of Nov. 11 is no accident.

In 1918, on the 11th hour of the 11th day in the 11th month, the world rejoiced and celebrated after four years of bitter war, as an armistice was signed. This agreement brought hope that the "war to end all wars" was over at last.

Nov. 11, 1919 was set aside as Armistice Day in the United States, to remember the sacrifices that men and women made during World War I in order to ensure a lasting peace, according to a history provided through the Veterans Affairs Department. On Armistice Day, soldiers who survived the war, traditionally marched in a parade through their home towns. The people of the community turned out to greet those marching in the parade and offer their thanks for the service these veterans had given to our country.

In 1938, Congress voted Armistice Day a federal holiday.

It wasn't much later that the world faced the stark reality that we were again sinking into global conflict. Again, veterans selflessly gave of themselves, protected our nation and reached out to help people around the world.

After the Second World War, Armistice Day continued to be observed on Nov. 11. In 1953 townspeople in Emporia, Kan. called the holiday Veterans Day in gratitude to the veterans in their town. Soon after, Congress passed a bill introduced by a Kansas congressman renaming the federal holiday to Veterans Day. In 1971, President Nixon declared it a federal holiday on the second Monday in November.

Over the next few days schools and organizations will be holding events in celebration of Veterans' Day.

We Americans have grown accustomed to a comfortable existence.

We remain the strongest nation on earth and rarely have to think about potential threats from rival military forces.

But we should never forget the men and women who have fought so hard to guarantee the freedom which we enjoy.

They have truly made the ultimate sacrifice.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Nov. 10, the 315th day of 2000. There are 51 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 10, 1871, journalist-explorer Henry M. Stanley found missing Scottish missionary David Livingstone in central Africa.

On this date:

In 1775, the U.S. Marines were organized under authority of the Continental Congress.

In 1919, the American Legion held its first national convention, in Minneapolis.

In 1928, Hirohito was enthroned as Emperor of Japan.

In 1954, the Iwo Jima Memorial was dedicated in Arlington, Va.

In 1969, the children's educational program "Sesame Street" made its debut on PBS.

In 1975, the U.N. General Assembly approved a resolution equating Zionism with racism (however, the world body repealed the resolution in December 1991).

In 1975, the ore-hauling ship Edmund Fitzgerald and its crew of 29 vanished during a storm in Lake Superior.

In 1982, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev died at age 75.

In 1982, the newly finished Vietnam Veterans Memorial was opened to its first visitors in Washington D.C.

In 1989, workers began punching a hole in the Berlin Wall, a day after East Germany abolished its border restrictions.

Ten years ago: Secretary of State James A. Baker III returned to Washington, claiming success in his week-long diplomatic tour aimed at shoring up the anti-Iraq coalition. Chandra Shekhar was sworn in as India's new prime minister.

Five years ago: Defying international appeals for clemency, Nigeria's military rulers hanged playwright Ken Saro-Wiwa along with eight other anti-government activists. Searchers in Katmandu, Nepal, rescued 549 hikers after a massive avalanche struck the Himalayan foothills, killing 24 tourists and 32 Nepalese.

One year ago: President Clinton decided to delay and shorten a trip to Greece in reaction to growing security concerns and the prospect of violent anti-American demonstrations. Investigators said the flight data recorder from EgyptAir Flight 990 showed things were normal until the autopilot mysteriously disconnected and the Boeing 767 began what appeared to be a controlled descent.

Today's Birthdays: Blues singer Bobby Rush is 66. Actor Albert Hall is 63. Lyricist Tim Rice is 56. Actress Alaina Reed-Hall is 54. Rock singer-musician Greg Lake (Emerson, Lake and Palmer) is 52. Actress-dancer Ann Reinking is 51. Actor Jack Scalia is 49.

Whoever wins to inherit fragmented country

NEW YORK — Elections are supposed to solve problems. Voters choose new leaders and chart new directions. But not this year. The balloting has only made matters worse, a lot worse.

The results on Tuesday revealed a country deeply divided along many critical fault lines, from race and gender to guns and religion. Moreover, the pending recount in Florida is likely to aggravate partisan resentments as both parties struggle to claim control of the White House.

Roberts

At different times on Election Night, both parties thought Florida — and most likely the country — belonged to them. So no matter who wins the recount, the loser will feel cheated. And history shows that those scars heal slowly.

In 1984, we covered a disputed House election in Indiana that simmered for months. Ultimately, the Democratic leadership declared the Democrat the winner by four votes and triggered an angry walkout by aggrieved Republicans. That explosion of rancor was a critical step in forging the GOP unity that ultimately led to their takeover of the chamber 10 years later.

Florida is not the only contest that could lead to a bruising battle. Missouri voters chose Democratic Governor Mel Carnahan over Republican Senator John Ashcroft even though Carnahan had been killed in a plane crash three weeks before. The new governor says he will appoint Carnahan's widow Jean to the seat, and Republicans are threatening to block that appointment, a move that would only deepen the mood of partisan strife now gripping Washington.

Pending the outcome of the Missouri race, and another close contest in the state of Washington, the Senate could wind up evenly divided, or with a slight Republican edge. If George W. Bush eventually occupies the White House, Democratic leaders could be expected to use the Senate rules to make his life miserable.

Conversely, if Al Gore is the ultimate winner, his problems with a GOP-run Senate would be just as bad, perhaps even worse. Republicans would still run the place, and their power to control committees and floor schedules would be a devastating weapon against a new president with an extremely weak mandate.

In the House, Democrats fell just short in their expensive and exhausting campaign to retake control. Democratic leader Dick Gephart has not spoken to Republican Speaker Dennis Hastert since last June, and it's hard to see how their relationship will get any better any time soon.

As the election returns show, the voters are as divided as the politicians. Even though Gore and Bush both ran as centrists, exit polls demonstrate they were appealing to two very different constituencies.

Start with geography. The Democratic states are grouped mainly in three clusters: the Northeast, the upper Middle West, and the Pacific coast. The rest is GOP country, with almost no regional overlap.

Then there is race. Whites and non-whites are living on different planets. Six in 10 Latinos voted Democratic nationwide, and so did nine of 10 blacks. Whites favored Bush by 12 points.

Gender differences were almost as striking. Men voted Republican by 11 points, women favored the Democrats by the same margin. That figures out to a 22-point gender gap, the largest since exit polling started and five points larger than the difference four years ago.

The fault lines go beyond identity to culture and values. White Christians voted heavily for Bush. Four out of five Jews backed Gore and his Jewish running mate, Joe Lieberman. By a margin of almost two to one, voters who attend religious services more than once a week favored Bush. The ratio was reversed for secular voters who never set foot in a sanctuary. Gay and lesbian voters strongly back the Democrats, while straights split pretty evenly.

Both sides made huge efforts in the final days to get out their loyal supporters, and the results are telling. Unions provided the backbone of the Democratic push, and labor households, about a quarter of the total, backed Gore 59 to 37. Non-union families went Republican 52 to 45.

The National Rifle Association was a key component of the GOP coalition and gun-owning households, about half the sample, broke 61 to 36 for Bush. Those who don't own guns split virtually the same way for Gore.

Whoever wins the recount and becomes president will inherit a fractured capital and a fragmented country. With no national crisis providing an incentive for unity, the new president's leadership skills will be put to an immediate and intimidating test.

Looking back at past election squeakers

WASHINGTON — Millions of Americans woke up the day after the general election and still didn't know who would be the next president — Vice President Al Gore or Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

While election squeakers are not the norm, there have been other presidential contests that were tight as a tick. Among these was President Harry Truman's 1948 victory over New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey by 4 percentage points.

Thomas

In 1960, John F. Kennedy edged out Vice President Richard M. Nixon by 2 tenths of a percentage point. But Nixon won eight years later, defeating Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968 by 7 tenths of a percentage point.

In 1976, there was another close race with Jimmy Carter winning 50 percent of the vote and President Gerald Ford gathering 48 percent.

Now I don't go back this far but the history books tell the exciting story of the 1800 election when the Democratic-Republican electors gave both Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr an equal number of electoral votes. The House of Representatives settled the tie in Jefferson's favor.

It's with some nostalgia that one can look back on the late 20th century squeakers because the players seemed to have so much political savvy, confidence, experience, drive, a sense of purpose, eloquence — and even a sense of humor.

When Truman hit the rails on his "whistle stop tour" in 1948, he went after the "do-nothing Congress," dominated by Republicans. Astonished reporters on the train saw his campaign gain energy as it progressed. The crowds began to grow in size and enthusiasm. When Truman would knock Congress, his supporters shouted, "Give 'em hell, Harry!" That became their rallying cry.

On election night, Truman went to bed before he knew the final count. The next morning he held a triumphal news conference and gleefully hoisted the Chicago Tribune emblazoned with a four-inch bold headline: "Dewey Defeats Truman."

And who can forget the 1960 Kennedy-Nixon race? Both men had served in the U.S. Senate at the same time; their offices were across the corridor from each other in the same office building. Both were strong candidates and showmen.

On election night, the Kennedys gathered at the family compound in Hyannis Port, Mass., to hear the results.

The furniture in the living room was removed and picnic tables were set up with a battery of telephones so that JFK's aides could stay in touch with all parts of the country. Bobby Kennedy ran the command center and the Kennedy women sat on the stairs, reacting to the results with happy shouts or expressions of dismay.

Nixon was at his hotel headquarters in California. Both Kennedy and Nixon went to bed in the wee hours of the morning, not knowing who had won the close election.

As the returns rolled in, showing Kennedy ahead in the close contest, the Kennedy crowd expected Nixon to concede, but he refused and did not do so until around noon the following day. In the early morning hours, Nixon made an appearance in the ballroom of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles and sadly told his supporters "if the trends continue" then Kennedy was the winner. His wife broke up and fled from the ballroom balcony, her face drenched in tears. I believe she felt personally rejected because the Republican Party had campaigned for her to live in the White House and handed out buttons reading "Pat for First lady."

The word from the Kennedy clan was that the morning after the election, three-year-old Caroline jumped on her father's bed and awakened him with a no-doubt prompted welcome: "Mr. President."

Because of the closeness of the vote, Nixon's aides urged him to demand a recount of the votes in Cook County, Ill., a legendary Democratic bastion where allegations of voter fraud were rampant. But Nixon accepted the results. That decision has often been cited as one of Nixon's fine moments of statesmanship.

Whoever wins or loses the current presidential election, none will have the grace and style of the defeated Democratic candidate Adlai Stevenson who conceded to Dwight D. Eisenhower and told reporters: "I'm too old to cry and it hurts too much to laugh."

Texas Lt. Gov. Perry waits for next move

AUSTIN — Shortly after 2 a.m. Wednesday, Texas Lt. Gov. Rick Perry gave a few interviews, believing he was the next Texas governor. A few minutes later, the prospect of Gov. Perry came to a halt as TV networks announced Florida was back in play and the news of a new president would have to wait.

And so now, the eyes of Perry and of the 31 members of the Texas Senate — like the rest of the world — are on Florida, but for much more personal reasons.

Perry and his staff went home a little after 3 a.m. to catch some winks. A Wednesday news conference — where Perry might have dealt with the process of taking over the reins of Texas government — was canceled while Perry remained at home.

McNeely

"We've let him sleep today," said new Perry press spokeswoman Kathy Walt, late of The Houston Chronicle's Capitol bureau.

Republicans in the Texas Capitol, in particular, remain nervous, said one high-placed legislative official.

With Florida — the state whose electoral vote will decide whether Gov. George W. Bush becomes president — the question of whether Perry becomes governor, and whether the state Senate will need to pick one of its members to become lieutenant governor, remains in limbo.

"I don't think they care as much about who's going to be president as what else is going to happen," the legislative official observed. "That's what everyone's interested in in this building."

The most out-front candidate hoping to replace Perry — Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco — was in his Capitol office.

"He's not taking calls from reporters," a spokeswoman said.

But he was making them to senators, one source said. Sibley reportedly was stepping up his efforts to get them to commit to him if Bush indeed moves to the White House.

The second-most-eager prospective lieutenant governor, Republican Jeff Wentworth of San Antonio, acknowledged that he also was contacting his colleagues.

"I've been talking to some folks, in person and by phone," he said. Democratic senators were planning a meeting for today to discuss what they should do. But Republican senators have no such meeting planned. Another question repeatedly asked Wednesday was if Bush wins, would he resign the governorship early to let the Texas transition begin? And if so, when?

Yet another question was whether the senators, like the House members in a speaker's race, would informally choose their new presiding officer before they're actually called into formal session by their president pro tem, Rodney Ellis, D-Houston.

One observer speculated that the choice of a new leader could become deadlocked, and the senators might have to go through several ballots in formal session before deciding.

Over on the House side, Speaker Pete Laney was seen walking into the Capitol with a couple of Republican members. He seemed relaxed after his Democrats retained their 78-72 edge over the Republicans, assuring Laney's re-election as speaker.

So, is he poring over committee appointments, or worrying about redistricting?

"No," Laney said. "We're going to start on freshman orientation."

New cancer drug appears safe, promising

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Eagerly awaited test results on a much-publicized new cancer drug designed to stop tumors by cutting off their blood supply indicate the medication is safe and show promising signs it may help control the disease.

However, the results released Thursday suggest the drug endostatin is unlikely to be the kind of across-the-board cancer cure that many had hoped for.

The drug was tested on terminally ill cancer patients largely to assess its safety.

No dramatic recoveries have so far been seen among the 61 patients studied.

"Some patients benefitted, but many did not," said one of the chief investigators, Dr. Roy Herbst, an assistant professor of medicine at the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston. "These patients were very sick. Most of their tumors are going to grow no matter what you do."

The best results were seen in a 50-year-old man with cancer in his jaw. His tumor shrank by 62 percent in eight weeks.

A tumor in the pancreas of another patient shrank by 19 percent after he had been taking the drug for a year.

In five other cases, the disease remained stable, with the tumor neither progressing nor shrinking.

Despite the lack of cures, the testing provided some evidence the drug may cut off a tumor's blood supply, as intended, offering hope the approach could work better in patients who are less desperately ill.

Blood flow through the tumors became less robust and chemicals involved in blood vessel creation diminished as patients were given increasingly higher doses of endostatin.

No serious side effects were noticed in any of the patients, the scientists said.

While some experts considered the test results "tremendously promising," others were cautiously optimistic.

The recent discovery that angiogenesis, or the creation of new blood vessels, is vital to a tumor's survival has been the basis for the hottest area in cancer research.

Drugs that attack the process are called angiogenesis inhibitors. Endostatin is one of dozens of such drugs, which are at varying stages of development and attack blood vessel growth from different angles.

"Many of them have shown little toxicity, and this is not the first to show a response," said William Li, head of the Boston-based Angiogenesis Foundation, a nonprofit information clearinghouse that tracks research in the field.

"But it's unprecedented at this stage of testing to have such a comprehensive measurement of markers that indicate there might be a benefit," he added.

Tracking the indirect indicators has allowed scientists to see more promising signs earlier in the research than normal, Li said.

Besides M.D. Anderson, the Dana-Farber Cancer Center in Boston and the University of Wisconsin Comprehensive Cancer Center in Madison conducted the studies.

The Boston study was sponsored by the drug's maker, EntreMed of Rockville, Md., while the other two were funded by the U.S. National Cancer Institute.

Some experts predict endostatin and the other drugs will in most cases halt cancer growth, turning the disease from an acute fatal illness into a low-level ongoing condition, like diabetes or arthritis.

U.N. calls for end to U.S. sanctions against Cuba

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly resoundingly criticized the United States on Thursday for maintaining sanctions on Cuba for nearly four decades and urged Washington to lift them as soon as possible.

The nonbinding, Cuban-drafted resolution passed with 167 votes in favor — the widest margin in the nine years that Cuba has brought the initiative to the United Nations. Only the United States, Israel and the Marshall Islands voted against it. Four countries abstained.

The resolution, introduced by Cuban Foreign Minister Felipe Perez Roque, was nearly identical to ones approved in years past, even though U.S. legislation approved last month would allow sales of American food and medicine to the communist island for the first time in nearly 40 years.

But the law bars the federal government or U.S. banks from financing the shipments, meaning Cuba would have to pay cash or get credit from a third country.

Cuban officials say this year's resolution deliberately omitted any reference to the new U.S. law since Havana believes the legislation has toughened, not eased the embargo.

"The alleged authorization for companies to sell food and medicines to Cuba is established under such restrictions and obstacles that render those activities practically impossible," Perez Roque told the assembly before the vote.

Cuba insists on a total lifting of the sanctions imposed in 1962 in an attempt to squeeze President Fidel Castro's government — a call at the core of the resolution.

The resolution also expresses concern at sanctions that affect third countries — a reference to the 1996 Helms-Burton act, which was designed to discourage foreign investment in Cuba by punishing foreign companies investing in property confiscated from Americans.

Mexican election institute rejects claims of fraud

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — Tabasco state's electoral institute unanimously rejected complaints by opposition parties that recent gubernatorial elections were plagued by vote-buying and other irregularities.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party's candidate, Manuel Andrade, was declared the winner of the disputed election after a week of reviewing ballots.

Opposition parties claimed the Oct. 15 vote was marred by the type of election fraud common in Mexico's past, when the ruling party, or PRI, had a tight grip on power throughout the country.

The PRI lost its first presidential race in 71 years in July, followed by its defeat in the race for the governor of southern Chiapas state, a former PRI stronghold.

Current Gov. Roberto Madrazo has hoped to use the Tabasco election to prove his popularity, and boost his informal campaign for leadership of the PRI.

Opposition parties have complained that Madrazo had a hand in Tabasco's alleged election fraud — partly by packing the electoral institute with supporters. Madrazo has denied charges of fraud.

After investigating the complaints, the election institute found that the vote was free and secret. Some votes were annulled, but not enough to change the race's outcome.

Tabasco's electoral institute had ruled that Andrade won by 8,000 votes — about 1 percent — over Raul Ojeda of the Democratic Revolution Party.

Opposition parties have said they will appeal the state electoral institute's decision to federal electoral courts.

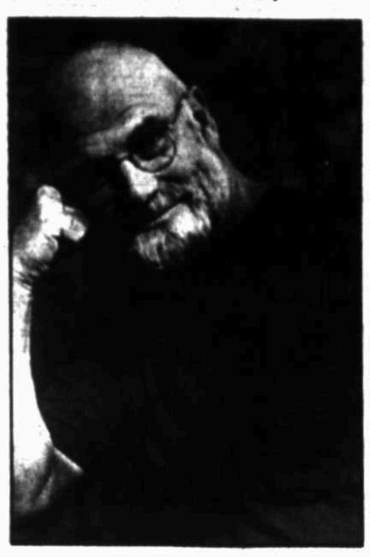
'I think 'Awakenings' has perhaps been read by some hundreds of thousands of people, but the film has been seen by millions. I have some reservations, of course, but mostly I'm very glad that the film was made. I think it not only told the story of these patients and their awakenings, but it directed sympathetic attention to the people no one ever thinks of, the people who are put away in chronic hospitals and put out of mind.'

—Dr. Oliver W. Sacks



Through the eyes of a doctor

Neurologist has had famous actor hanging on his every word, two books hit big screen

By Georgia Temple

Imagine having actor Robin Williams walking and talking and dining with you day after day. While he is with you, he is hanging on your every word and watching your every move. Hard to imagine? Not for Dr. Oliver W. Sacks, who has had the experience in real life.

"At first, we visited patients together," recalled Dr. Sacks. "We chatted together. We hung out. I didn't quite realize all this time he was observing me very closely. And it was only about three weeks later, when we were chatting in the street and I was in sort of an odd position with my hand behind my head, and I suddenly realized that Robin was in the same posture.

"He wasn't imitating me," said Dr. Sacks, who will give a free public talk on aging at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the University of Texas of the Permian Basin gym, Odessa. "What had happened was that he had got all my gestures and postures and tricks of speech and opinions and memories and fantasies. He had got me. And it was like having a sudden, instant younger twin. Uncanny.

"And at that point, we both felt we needed to have some space between us. So, in a sense, he could be liberated from any need to reproduce me exactly but be free to invent a doctor figure, which might have been inspired by me but was very created by him.

"Acting isn't mimicry. The first stage was a sort of mimicry, and the second stage was a real deep recreation according to his own feelings and judgment and experience. Mimicry is a sort of surface reflection whereas real acting comes from deep inside, and this is certainly the case with him and with (Robert) De Niro.

"De Niro was so convincing that ever so often I thought, 'My God. He's not acting. He's got it (the illness).' I was almost terrified of the conviction with which he acted. In a way, I think, I probably paid more attention to De Niro playing the patient because it didn't fill me with a strange, mixed feeling, which I had when I saw Robin portraying me."

Williams and De Niro were brought together in the 1980s with Dr. Sacks through a book the neurologist had written years earlier.

The film depicts a Dr. Malcolm Sayer's discovery of a group of patients who have become human statues wasting away in a remote ward of the Bronx's Bainbridge Hospital. A neurologist, Dr. Sayer is haunted by the silent, still patients and the possibility they could be alive inside. Thus begins the journey traveled in the 1990 film "Awakenings," starring Williams as Dr. Sayer (a.k.a. Dr. Sacks) and De Niro as patient Leonard Lowe.

The "Awakenings" premise was based in fact. The story had its birth in the early decades of the 20th century and a bizarre disease that achieved pandemic proportions between 1916 and 1927.

"These patients are among the few survivors of the great sleeping-sickness epidemic (encephalitis lethargica) of 50 years ago," Dr. Sacks wrote in his book, "Awakenings," first published in 1973.

The film is set in 1969. Dr. Sacks first met his future patients three years earlier.

"In 1966, I started working at this hospital in the Bronx, where I still work," said Dr. Sacks, who lives in New York. "I encountered 80 of these strange, motionless figures, some of whom had been petrified for decades. ... There was nothing much one could do for these patients medically, although they sometimes came too wonderfully and suddenly with music and sometimes in other

In 1967, the drug L-Dopa became available, and Dr. Sacks was tempted to try it out, but said, "I hesitated for two years before giving it because I didn't know what the effects would be. And I also didn't know what it would mean for someone to come to after being out of the world for 30, 40 years. Kind of a Rip Van Winkle thing. Jolted into the 1960s."

As the patients became sicker, Dr. Sacks decided he had to do something. In 1969, just as in the movie, he began administering doses of L-DOPA to the patients.

"Their awakenings were the most amazing and moving thing that I had ever seen in my life," Dr. Sacks said, noting that "the last of the epidemic of sleeping sickness finished in 1927. The last of my patients died two or three years ago.

"Although, interestingly, I just heard from a patient in England, an old lady who had become ill with this as a child in England. So there are still a very few people around who became ill in this very strange epidemic, which appeared out of the blue and disappeared back into the blue and hasn't been seen now for 83 years."

Dr. Sacks, who was born in London in 1933 and educated in London, Oxford and California, had decided early on that the case studies in New York warranted a novel approach and had spoken with the patients about their wishes.

"The patients themselves, many of whom were very intelligent, said, 'Tell our story or it will never be known.' I was very encouraged by the patients to do a sort of biographical book."

A 1973 British documentary came next. The documentary represented Dr. Sacks' first exposure to the world of film.

"I asked the patients how they might feel about being filmed for a documentary," Dr. Sacks said. "They said, 'Show us or it will never be believed.' This documentary has never been shown in America. It's a great pity."

In the early 1980s, he was approached about the film.

"And again I had no experience with this and didn't know how it would work out. And nothing got started until 1987, when a script writer came along and saw some of the patients. Many of the patients were still alive in 1987. On Halloween in 1988, I was sent a script. I was quite nervous. I'd never seen a film script before. I was greatly reassured when these fabulous actors and Penny Marshall came aboard.

"I was greatly reassured by the investigation of the actors, the time they spent with the patients and with me, the time they spent looking at the original documents and also some archival film, which I had been given which went back to the early 1920s. They were obviously determined in a way to get as much authentic information as they could, and I wanted to give them that. I wanted to give them a point of departure clinically, medically and historically. How they might then depart I didn't know."

Dr. Sacks served as technical advisor for the film during the four months of filming. "Many, many things are very accurate, for example, the ball playing sequences" and "some of the musical sequences are taken directly from the documents."

As for the film, Dr. Sacks said, "I don't think a book can be translated into a film. I think it has to be sort of recreated in a way. But I think they were careful, and they tried to enter that whole situation, that complex, complex situation in 1969, when the patients were awakening and all the mixed feelings — sometimes ecstatic, sometimes tormented — of everyone concerned.

"They probably had to have a central figure like Leonard L, where in the book Leonard L. is one of 20 figures I describe. There's no sort of single hero in the book. The patients as a whole are the heroes. They flew in a little laughter and a little violence, but that's Hollywood."

"Awakenings" is not Dr. Sacks' only exposure to having his work turned into a film. The 1999 film "At First Sight," starring Val Kilmer and Mira Sorvino, was based upon Dr. Sacks' story, "To See and Not To See." In this story, a man born blind is given sight as an adult, and Dr. Sacks said the patient "finds it very complicated and difficult."

Dr. Sacks was not as involved in "At First Sight" because he "had not been a central figure in the story. And, of course, I'm not portrayed in 'First Sight.' There's no Robin Williams portraying me. No Sacks-like figure, which made it easier for me.

"I think Val Kilmer and Mira Sorvino did a good job. I think the movie was not noticed as much as it should have been, but I don't really keep tabs on things."

He did feel, however, that "as a neurologist, I would somehow like more neurology and less romance, but I understand the box office may need less neurology and more romance."

Although his involvement was less in the film "At First Sight," Dr. Sacks did spend time on the set during the filming. He recalled being upset with Kilmer the first couple of times their paths crossed.

"Val Kilmer hadn't apparently recognized me or said hello, and I thought to myself, 'What an arrogant bastard.' And only then did I find out that, in fact, he had been wearing opaque contact lenses, and, of course, he couldn't see me as I approached."

Dr. Sacks laughed. "And so again, I was very impressed by the extent to which he would go to try and get himself into the situation of a blind man. I think he sometimes wore those opaque contact lenses all day just to see what it was like being blind."

When Kilmer wasn't wearing the lenses, Dr. Sacks found the actor "very pleasant. I completely misunderstood the situation. And I certainly saw that with De Niro. At dinnertime, he'd still be behaving like Leonard L. He'd have his foot twisted inward like Leonard, like the Leonard persona was still enveloping him."

Dr. Sacks counts himself "lucky" because he's "heard of some ghastly things" happening to other authors' books when they are translated into film. He finds it "best not to make comparisons between forms of expression which really can't be compared." He offered as an example of the different perspective people can have about books and films, John Buchan's "The 39 Steps."

"People rave about the Hitchcock movie of 'The 39 Steps.' I happened to have read 'The 39 Steps' and to know it almost by heart. And I actually can't bear the movie to the extent that it departs from the book. But other people, who don't know the book, say the movie is a masterpiece."

Certainly, the film "Awakenings" accomplished one of the goals of the patients whose lives the illness had so altered.

"I think 'Awakenings' has perhaps been read by some hundreds of thousands of people, but the film has been seen by millions. I have some reservations, of course, but mostly I'm very glad that the film was made. I think it not only told the story of these patients and their awakenings, but it directed sympathetic attention to the people no one ever thinks of, the people who are put away in chronic hospitals and put out of mind."

Sacks to give free lecture on aging at UTPB

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Dr. Oliver Sacks will give a free public lecture on aging at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's gym.

Sacks, who lives on City Island in New York, is a medical doctor, a professor of neurology at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine and the author of seven books, including "Awakenings," "The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat," "Migraine," "An Anthropologist on Mars" and "The Island of The Colorblind." His works have inspired two movies, the 1990 film "Awakenings," starring Robert De Niro and Robin Williams, and the 1999 film "At First Sight," starring Val Kilmer and Mira Sorvino.

The College of Arts and Sciences of UTPB will offer "Alzheimer's Disease Workshop: Current Treatments, Cares and Concerns" in conjunction with Sacks' upcoming lecture. The workshop, which is limited to 40 participants, will be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the university's Visual Arts Studios. Cost is $20 for the workshop. Continuing education credits are being offered for the workshop and the lecture. For more information call 552-2325.

Workshop presenters include Midland Hospice director Carol Armstrong; caregiver Sharron Fires; UTPB psychology members Kay Ketzenberger, Ph.D., who teaches psychology, ethics and assessment, and Spencer K. Thompson, Ph.D., who has performed post graduate work at USC Gerontological Center and the UCLA Neuropsychiatric Center; Chau M. Le, a faculty member of the Family Practice Department at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center in Odessa; and Glyndon Ruth Kimbrough, who oversees a 178-bed Alzheimer's and adult care residential facility in Midland.

My Two Cents: A teen perspective of the movies

By Mike Yager

This week: Charlie's Angels

Having not personally seen the '70s "Charlie's Angels" show for more than about 15 minutes on TV Land a couple of weeks back, I can't verify the new remake's worth in comparison. I can, however, say that if the movie was in any way faithful to the show, I guess I'll have to watch TV Land more often.

Natalie, Alex and Dylan (Cameron Diaz, Lucy Liu, and Drew Barrymore, respectively) are a trio of crime fighters, bomb-defusers, anti-terrorist enforcers, who answer to an unseen millionaire named Charlie. It seems that a voice tracing technology has been stolen from the Knox Corporation as well as owner Eric Knox (Sam Rockwell of "The Green Mile"), and the Angels are hired to reclaim both. Along the way, "Angels" keeps you on your toes, with numerous plot twists, some obvious from the opening, but others definitely will surprise you. Some of the twists and action, though, are brought with the price of originality. By the first 10 minutes of the movie, you see the borrowing of "Matrix"-inspired fighting acrobatics, or the "M:I-2" face swapping trick. Overall, the story is standard action movie stuff, but entertaining action movie stuff, nonetheless.

As far as the acting is concerned, the Angels all carry the movie in their own ways. It's extremely apparent that Liu, Barrymore, and especially Diaz are having a lot of fun, which in turn makes it fun to watch. Bill Murray, as Bosley, also adds a lot to the movie, throwing punchlines into any possibly dull point in the script. Most of the supporting cast is very inspired. Luke Wilson ("Blue Streak," "Home Fries") once again claims the crown of "Hollywood's bumbling, but adorable doofus" as Natalie's (Diaz) love interest, Pete. Matt Leblanc, is excellent as Liu's costar/boyfriend, although he merely transplants his Joey character from "Friends" into the movie (not that I blame him, stick with what works). The only casting gripe I have is that of Tom Green being placed anywhere in the movie. His moron behavior that makes his TV show the "Coup-de-grace" of stupidity, makes his performance in the movie even worse.

All in all, what could have turned into merely a "Girl Power" anthem for 2000, ended up an outstanding action movie that gets points for never becoming entrenched in the boredom that has plagued any Bond movie released in the '90s. I also applaud the producers for not trying to push it into a more lucrative summer release. It's a refreshing change during Oscar-season to have an action packed, incredibly enjoyable popcorn-flick like "Charlie's Angels." Personally, I can't wait till the "Angels" fly again.

Final Grade: A-Bottom Line: Heavenly

PARENT TO PARENT

a family guide to current movies

by Tom Laney

This column rates current movies for parents and others who want help in choosing films that reflect traditional values and are suitable for family viewing. Films are rated in two categories: Entertainment (rated 0 to +4) and Acceptability (rated -4 to +4). I'll add brief comments to clarify the reasons for the ratings. Movies listed are currently playing in Midland and/or Odessa as of this writing.

BLAIR WITCH 2: BOOK OF SHADOWS (R; 2, -3) I've always been taught that a story, whether good or bad, should have a beginning, a middle and an end. The first "Blair Witch" didn't have much of an ending, but this one has none at all. Actually, the beginning and middle aren't too bad, but nothing justifies leaving the audience hanging like this except a promise that it will be answered in the sequel. In this case, we have no such promise — indications are that the next "Blair Witch" will be some sort of prequel to the first. If you want to bother with it, fine, but leave the kids and teens at home — there's a great deal of nudity, violence, occult themes and extensive profanity.

THE LITTLE VAMPIRE (PG; 2 1/2, -1) I was worried about the supernatural content of this film, just as I worried about the "Harry Potter" books. So I read the "Harry Potter" books, which turned out to be excellent, and I saw this movie, which turned out to be more mediocre than dangerous. It's a great lesson in missed opportunities for screenwriters, passing by many opportunities for humor. And I'm still not comfortable with making vampires (or wizards, for that matter) "cool" and attractive to kids. That pro-occult content, however mild, may lead you to skip this one and wait until the Nov. 17 for The Grinch, which is reported so far to be great for kids.

LUCKY NUMBERS (R; 2 1/2, -3) Imagine the ditzy Phoebe from the TV sitcom "Friends" spouting a two-hour stream of "F"-words, and you'll understand my shock and disapproval. Lisa Kudrow is a talented and attractive actress, but she will go down a notch on many people's approval scales when they hear her cussing a blue streak in this film. When did profanity become good writing and good acting? Sex, violence and a particularly cold-blooded murder combine with the extremely offensive language to make this an extremely unlucky number for your family.

CHARLIE'S ANGELS (PG-13; 2 1/2, -2) The Angels are back, and they've brought us a fun martial-arts romp through an implausible script. This great cast is preferable to the old one, with Bill Murray adding his unique humor to the character of Bosley and Tim Curry as a nasty villain (although Christian Slater is just too creepy for words). The corny and campy camera work and effects will take you back to the '70s. But leave your kids at home in the present. Full though brief and obscured female nudity, lots of sexy outfits, sexual themes — you know, Hollywood's current idea of suitable fare for kids — will do nothing to help your kids grow up to be angels.

THE LEGEND OF BAGGER VANCE (PG-13; 3, -1) In order to review this movie fairly, I had to try to forget how much I hate watching golf. For me, only watching paint dry could be more boring. But Robert Redford's directorial magic made it not just tolerable but actually entertaining. The great cast (particularly Will Smith) and script make this a fine film for adults and older children, but the PG-13 is deserved for sexual content (without nudity) and language.

BEAUTIFUL (PG-13; 2 1/2, -1) This is almost a good comedy. It could have been funnier (and more heart-warming) if director Sally Field had not chosen to try to insert her feminist agenda. Several dark moments, including a disturbing scene which threatens child sexual abuse and backs off at the last moment, and some bad language, make this an adult film.

FILMS TO AVOID: Scary Movie (will this awful film never leave?); The Ladies' Man; Nutty Professor II: The Klumps. These are raunchy, sex-filled, dirty movies which nobody under 17 should see under any circumstances.

FAMILY FILM STATISTICS REVISITED: Of the 30 films currently playing in Odessa, 12 are rated "R," 15 are rated "PG-13," 3 are rated "PG," and none are rated "G." The 13 Midland films include: 4 "R," 8 "PG-13," 2 "PG," and no "G" films.

COMMENTARY ON FILM RATINGS: As I've said before, I'm alarmed that most parents don't really understand the different ratings and what they mean. I would like to offer a simpler and more accurate explanation of the ratings as follows:

G: NO objectionable content.

PG: SOME mildly objectionable content WILL be present.

PG-13: STRONG objectionable content WILL be present.

R: EXTREME objectionable content WILL be present; anyone under 17 MUST be accompanied THROUGHOUT THE MOVIE by a parent or a court-appointed legal guardian. You may NOT simply purchase your child's ticket; you must watch what you are exposing them to.

NC-17 Patently adult content. NO ONE UNDER 17 WILL BE ADMITTED UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES.

Please don't assume that PG or PG-13 films are OK for all ages just because kids can legally buy tickets to them. My purpose in reviewing these films for you is to help you protect your precious kids from the harmful content of the majority of today's films.

Next time, we'll look at some more new releases, including "Men of Honor," "Red Planet" and "Little Nicky." PLEASE find out more about "Little Nicky" before taking your kids anywhere near it. Check it out on screenit.com Friday morning. As always, I recommend three good Web sites for information on new movies: www.screenit.com, www.gospelcom.net/preview, and www.upcoming-movies.com. Don't hesitate to check out any of these sites for further information, or e-mail me with your comments and questions at: tlaney@apex2000.net. Thank you for all the positive comments I've received so far. It's a pleasure to be of service to you.

THE MOVIE GUYS'

Black Gold Review

By David R. Allen, MC drama instructor, and Tim Jebsen, MCT executive director

A gusher: good to excellent

Dry well: Fair to poor

"The Legend of Bagger Vance," a new movie starring Matt Damon and Will Smith, opened in theaters across the country this past weekend, including Midland.

TIM: Sports movies are often a mixed bag. Some have focused on the actual sport — last Christmas' "Any Given Sunday" is a good example. Some have used a sport as a metaphor for life — "Field of Dreams" uses baseball as a framework for the relationship between a father and son. Thus, when the previews first appeared for the golfing movie "The Legend of Bagger Vance," I was very excited — as a moviegoer and a golfer — to see this film.

DAVID: Adapted from the novel by Stephen Pressfield, "The Legend of Bagger Vance" tells the story of a golfer trying to recapture the promise of his youth — a great talent shattered by the trauma of World War I. Like Tim, most golfers may share an interest in this movie because of the golf. Others may enjoy Redford's style as a director. Featured in his style is his abiding love of the land. Through beautifully photographed landscapes, like those in "A River Runs Through It" and "The Horse Whisperer," Redford sets his characters in a place of great strength and beauty, a place in which they can find the strength and beauty within themselves. However, great photography of beautiful landscapes in and of itself does not make a great movie.

TIM: Overall, I was disappointed by the results of the adaptation of this book. After the first 15 minutes, I felt that it had already spent too much time on the exposition, which is a bad sign. Jack Lemon — the narrator of the story — starts the movie off on the right track, and it's great to see Lemon on the big screen again, especially since he is such an avid golfer. The actual golf scenes were fine, but felt manipulated by digital effects and camera tricks. Kudos to Bruce McGill and Joel Gretsch, who played Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones with class and style.

DAVID: Usually when you read a good book you look forward to the movie version. In "The Legend of Bagger Vance," we have an example of a movie that will make you want to read the book. In editing the story down to a filmable size, Redford and his writers, Pressfield and Jeremy Leven, left out what we can only imagine to be the best part — the characters. Most of them only exist to serve the interests of the story, including surprisingly, Bagger Vance himself. The resulting script is so shallow that it provides nothing with which the actors can work.

TIM: The performances by Damon, Smith and Theron were fine, but uninspired. I felt that Damon and Smith had been cast for their star appeal, rather than the fact that they were right for the part. The movie tries hard to be a "great" movie, but unfortunately it tries too hard. If you're a big fan of golf, you might enjoy this movie. Otherwise, pass and wait for something better to come along. A dry well.

DAVID: While I liked the film a bit more than you did, Tim, it was a sub-par effort by Redford. While Savannah rarely has looked prettier and the game of golf rarely has looked as magnificent, the result is far from satisfying. By focusing so much on the sense of place and time rather than on the characters, Redford left himself deep in the rough without much hope of making the green much less the hole. In the end, "The Legend of Bagger Vance," is an only slightly damp dry well.

ONE ON THE AISLE

By Pamela C. Allen

'Arsenic and Old Lace' 'With an Everlasting Love'

Midland Community Theatre's November production, ARSENIC AND OLD LACE, opened with a bang on Friday night. Presented in the Davis Theatre, this joint production between Midland College and MCT was masterfully directed by David Allen from MC. From the beautiful split-level set to the excellent casting and well-appointed costumes, this was a show that lets you know why MCT is one of the top community theaters in this country.

Even though there were a few line fumbles during the opening, it didn't detract from the quality of the cast. The few newer members of the ensemble were brought up to the level of the more seasoned players in the cast.

Charming and consistent throughout were the Brewster sisters: Abby Brewster played by Katherine Allen and Martha Brewster played by Jane Moore. Both were fun to watch as they innocently relayed to their nephew Mortimer, played by Rick Strange, why there is a dead man in the window seat. I particularly loved Jane Moore as Martha, she really reminded me of the little old lady who cares for Tweety Bird in the cartoons, capable of being so sweet and capable of hitting the cat with the umbrella in the same scene.

Some of the standouts in the cast are Katie Schrank as Elaine Harper the Rev. Harper's daughter, engaged to Mortimer, and Jim Painter, convinced he is Teddy Roosevelt as he digs the Panama Canal in the basement. Painter is the president right to the end. David Willis as Lt. Rooney, the harried police lieutenant who has to deal with the craziness, was very comfortable in his role — good job David.

In the casting of this show, there didn't seem to be any compromises, the cast chosen was perfect for the roles. But some seemed to have found their niches. Cody Tumlin, with all his scene-stealing mugging usually in any role, has found a role that is as enjoyable to watch as it seemed for him to do. As Dr. Einstein, Tumlin all but steals every scene that he is in. He has that rat-like Peter Lorre quality about him.

Audience members: WE DON'T NEED TO HEAR YOUR PHONE MUSIC! How Rude!

All in all, well worth the price of admission. Call the delightful ladies in the box office at 682-4111 or 570-4111 soon, it plays through Nov. 19.

WITH AN EVERLASTING LOVE is a family holiday presentation by the Globe of the Great Southwest is Kay Arthur's allegorical novel brought to the stage by Marty Nystrom, who also composed the music for the production. This play is not the traditional Christmas story. It instead brings us the "biblical message of love, repentance and forgiveness."

In a small village in Israel, the story takes us into the lives of the poor young girl and her turning her life around with the knowledge of the love of a young man she has never seen but only has heard his words of love. She loses her faith in this love because she still hasn't seen him, but she is forgiven and marries the son of the richest man in the village.

Is is easy to follow this allegory. Christianna played by Kindell Carter does beautifully as the young, poor girl who is poor in spirit. Her soprano voice complements the lovely music. Shaddai is the personification of the loving Father God, strongly played by Darrell Ward, who picks this girl to be the wife of his son Joshua (Jesus), played by Darrell Moon, and Eleazer, played by Kalynn Robinson, represents the Holy Spirit, who delivers the words of the son to Christianna. I loved Darrell Ward's song, sung to his son, about the meaning of love and was delighted to hear him sing.

The music in this show is as fun, in part, as it is well done. The women of the town sing about their men, and the men sing about the women and their gossiping. I think it is the women who get the final say in that battle. The duet between Joshua and Christianna, Moon and Carter, about their everlasting love, is one of the prettiest in the show. This production is marked by strong voices and some excellent costuming.

I don't know where these exquisite robes come from, but the rich detail is excellent, especially on the daughter of Belial (Satan, played by George Melonakos), Athalia, played by Candice Voake. It is a red and gold piece fit for a queen.

WITH AN EVERLASTING LOVE is a very good production to start off the holiday season, it is as they say "the reason for the season." Take your family or your Sunday school class, even the most jaded of us will get the message. Call the Globe's box office at 580-3177. It will play again tonight and Saturday night.

Opening tonight at Permian Playhouse in Odessa is RAMONA QUIBY. Call their box office at 550-5456 for dates and tickets. and Opening for 2 nights the 11th and the 12th at Lee High School is ANYTHING GOES. Call the Drama Department for tickets.

Support the Arts in the Permian Basin, you'll be glad you did!

Older people also worry about sexually transmitted diseases

By Melinda Deslatte
Associated Press Writer

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — Worrying about sex is not just for young people anymore.

Day and night, people with sex on their minds call the American Social Health Association. And workers are finding that older Americans are also falling prey to an active, misinformed grapevine.

Sexually transmitted diseases are becoming a big problem for people over age 50, particularly those recently divorced or widowed who haven't dated since they were in their early 20s, said Tracey Adams, community outreach and promotions manager for the association's AIDS hot line.

"Condom negotiating skills and how to say 'no' are not necessarily something they've ever had to deal with," Adams said.

Factor in e-mail rumors, suspicion and garbled information, and the association's employees spend a lot of time reassuring people and setting them straight. Employees travel across the county, trying to educate not only teen-agers and young children, but adults as well.

"There's a large perception that everybody already knows how HIV is transmitted or prevented, but it's important to remember that everyone doesn't already know," Adams said. "Anyone who is 20 probably has more HIV knowledge than anyone who is 50."

Without a blink or a blush, more than 100 workers field the phone calls, giving often explicit answers to the most intimate questions.

"This time of year, we're going to get a lot of calls about mosquitoes, with people asking, 'Can I get HIV from mosquitoes?'" Adams said.

HIV cannot be transmitted by mosquitoes, but Adams said people don't necessarily believe her when she tells them.

"I did a program in a church in Virginia, with about 65 people on a Wednesday night. I was surprised about how much they knew about HIV transmission and prevention, but there was also disbelief," she said. "They were saying, 'You say it can't be transmitted by mosquitoes, but how do you know for sure?'"

Seniors are the age group with the fastest-growing AIDS rates — up 22 percent between 1991 and 1996, compared with a 9 percent increase among people age 13-49, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported in December.

About 72,000 Americans age 50 and over have been diagnosed with AIDS. Between 800,000 and 1.2 million people nationally are already infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

No one knows how many seniors are infected with HIV because not all states require HIV reporting and because older people are thought to be tested far less often than their younger counterparts.

In an unassuming building amid Research Triangle Park's office complexes and technology plazas, ASHA operates for the CDC three of the world's largest hot lines for sexually transmitted diseases, logging 850,000 calls a year. The staff at the National STD Hotline, the National AIDS Hotline and the National Herpes Hotline answers questions about AIDS, chlamydia, gonorrhea and syphilis.

"We're the first line of defense against STDs and HIV," said Ami Israel, director for the STD and AIDS hot lines.

The hot lines started in New York City and moved to Research Triangle Park 12 years ago when the association moved from Palo Alto, Calif., Adams said.

"We really get all sorts of calls, questions from kids doing reports, health care professionals trying to find information about treatment, people who think they might have an STD or HIV, or people who have recently contracted AIDS or an STD," said Ted Fitzgerald, English service manager for the STD and AIDS hot lines.

"It's still really hard to talk about sexually transmitted diseases. It's very personal," Fitzgerald said. "That's really the service we provide. We're going to be this safe place for people to call and get information."

Hot line employees spend so much time talking about sex that some say they will never think about relationships in the same way again.

"Working here has really changed my perspective," Adams said. "Those HIV statistics are pretty scary. They're pretty bleak."

Adams said so much attention has been focused on AIDS that other sexually transmitted diseases often are viewed too lightly.

"Nationally, I don't think people realize syphilis is still a problem, or that chlamydia is at record proportions," she said.

ASHA estimates that more than 3 million people in the United States will contract chlamydia each year and 70,000 will get syphilis. Both can be cured if caught in time.

Longterm looking 'better' for Most older Americans

By Alexandria L. Rose

According to a recent federal report, "Older Americans 2000: Key Indicators of Well-Being", older Americans are on average living longer, healthier, and more prosperous lives than ever before. Edward L. Schneider, M.D., dean of the Andrus School of Gerontology at the University of Southern California states, "Clearly there are areas that we need to catch up on but overall I think we're doing quite well."

The report's good news:

■ People who are 65 now can expect on average to live another 18 years.

nMedian net worth for households headed by older persons increased about 70 percent from 1984 to 1999, while poverty declined from 35 percent in 1959 to 11 percent in 1998 in the same households.

■ Seventy-two percent of older Americans consider their health good, very good or excellent.

■ Education took a huge leap. Older Americans who graduated from high school went from 18 percent in 1950 to 67 percent in 1998. College graduates rose also during this same period from 4 to almost 15 percent.

Rose

■ There are 35 million Americans 65 or older, comprising almost 13 percent of the U.S. population.

■ Individuals 85 and older are the fastest-growing segment of the older population.

Other findings of interest include:

■ The racial and ethnic makeup of the older population is changing, with the percentage of non-Hispanic whites in the total population expected to decline to 64 percent in 2050 from 84 percent today.

■ Social Security provides over 80 percent of the income of older Americans.

■ Living longer has been accompanied by increased risk of chronic diseases. For example, 60 percent of people 70 or older report that they have arthritis.

■ The aging of the population will increase the demand for long-term care in the community and raises the question about who will provide this care and how will it be financed.

Not all the news in the report is positive. The report notes that certain segments of the older population, women and minorities, lagged behind in categories as: nhousehold net worth of older blacks at $13,000 in 1999, compared with $181,000 for older whites.

■ life expectancy at age 65, with blacks almost two years behind whites.

neducation, with substantial differences among racial and ethnic groups, such as high-school graduation rate of 72 percent for older whites, compared with 29 percent for older Hispanics.

■ poverty, with the rate for women 13 percent, compared to 7 percent for men.

The report on "Older Americans 2000" was issued by the Federal Interagency Forum on Aging-Related Statistics as the first in a Series to be updated every three to five years. The information for this article was found in the November 2000 AARP Bulletin.

DEAR ABBY

Mom says it's never too early to answer questions about sex

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am responding to your recent letters about the importance of teaching your children about sex.

When I was a child, my parents thought if they didn't allow me to do anything, I would never get into trouble. Sorry to say, I did things my parents would still "die over" if they ever found out.

Van Buren

My mother took me to get birth control when I was 14 after she discovered I was having sex and had contracted a sexually transmitted disease. That was the beginning and end of any discussion about sex with her. My father thought if he didn't allow me to talk to boys on the phone or to date, I'd never have the opportunity to have sex.

He was wrong. Long before my first sexual encounter, I wish I had been told the importance of waiting.

I am now the mother of an 8-year-old daughter.

I have talked to her since she was 5 or 6 years old about relationships and waiting until marriage to have sex.

Many people feel this is too early, but when you see what children are exposed to on TV today, it's best for a parent -- not another child -- to clearly explain what they're seeing.

I pray that by talking openly with my daughter and letting her know I trust her, she will in turn trust and talk to me -- and never experience what I went through. -- BEEN THERE IN TENNESSEE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Your prayers stand an excellent chance of being answered. Frank and honest communication usually cements relationships.

When young people do not have it at home, they turn to outside sources that are not always reliable.

They want parents who trust them and who expect the best from them — not fear the worst. (And even more important, they need parents who take the time to listen to what they have to say.)

I'm sorry your relationship with your parents was poor. However,

I'm pleased that you were able to learn from your parents' mistakes and to pass those benefits along to your daughter.

DEAR ABBY: Holding back truth is lying. Dr. Kilgore wrote that he doesn't believe patients should be told they are dying.

The good doctor is a general surgeon, not a psychiatrist. Doctors are highly trained "mechanics" paid to correct physical problems and to keep patients informed at all times.

There have been horror stories about terminally ill patients who didn't have the chance to close out businesses or get their financial affairs in order because some physician failed to disclose the truth about the patient's chances of survival.

The result was that the estates the patients had worked long and hard to build dwindled away from lack of attention.

Personally, I would be very annoyed if a doctor to whom I was paying good money didn't tell me the complete truth about my condition.

A few malpractice cases given widespread publicity might go a long way to convince physicians not to play God. — TELL ME THE TRUTH

DEAR TELL ME: I agree.

Racking up miles at Midland Park Mall

By Lana Cunningham

Through dust storms, snow or rain, the cold of winter and the heat of summer, David Hoff is there. In and out and down the long stretches, he is racking up miles walking at Midland Park Mall.

As president of the Mall Walkers, he recently called an early morning meeting and handed out jackets and information about a new walking program.

Walking had not been part of his lifestyle until he suffered a heart attack and had bypass surgery 13 years ago.

"I thought I did a lot of exercise," he said. A racquetball player, he never thought a heart attack was in his future. "It will sneak up on you," Hoff said with a laugh.

After recovering from surgery, Hoff's doctor told him to start walking.

His wife, Ruth, who did aerobics, joined him. Not long after, he heard about Midland Park Mall starting a walking club, and the couple joined.

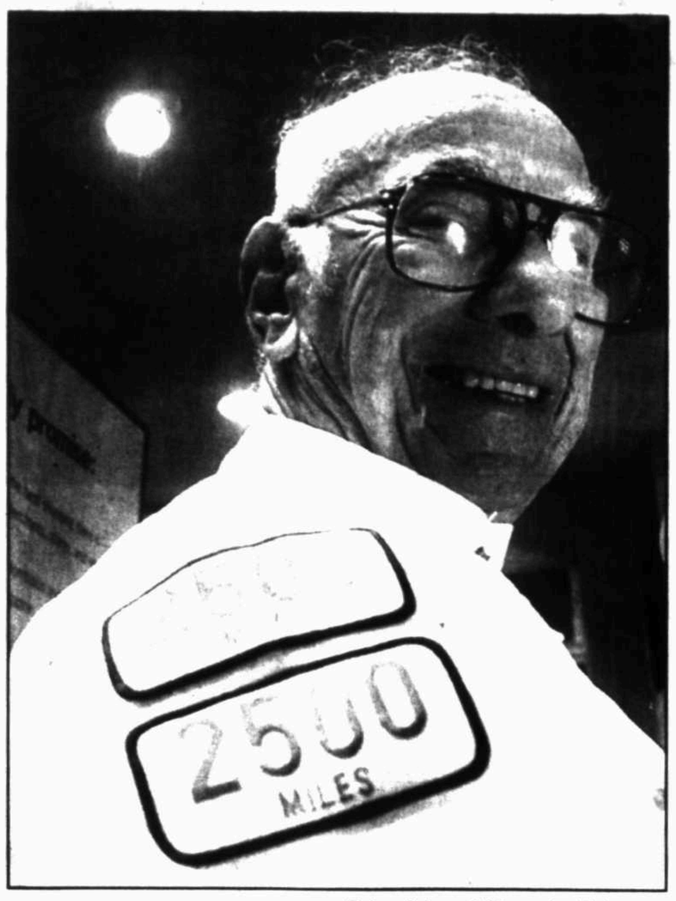
"We helped get the program going," he said. "We joined pretty quick, but we weren't the original members." Today, the organization has between 150 and 200 members.

At Monday's meeting, Hoff and his wife reported their total mileage had hit the 10,000-mile mark.

Each day, they walk 3 1/2 miles in the mall or on the streets, averaging 50 to 60 minutes for the exercise.

"Health made me stick with it," Hoff said. "Walking makes me feel better and healthier. When we go on a trip, we can walk all the steps and keep up with all the sightseers. Many others can't do that. That itself is worth the walking."

The program, which is sponsored by the mall and Midland Memorial Hospital, continues to invent new ways to keep the walkers involved.



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
David Hoff

"Last year, we had a contest to see who could walk from Midland to Lubbock, Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Houston, Wichita Falls and El Paso, Hoff said of the mileage involved in each trip. "Only one person made it all the way."

The mall's doors open at 6:15 in the morning to accommodate walkers who like to get an early start on their exercise and don't want to face the dark of night, heat of day or cold wind of winter.

Heading up a walking club wasn't a priority when Hoff moved to Midland in 1952 to start a business. Unlike most people who moved to Midland after being offered a job, Hoff and his wife had stopped in the town of about 20,000 people on their way back to Arizona after visiting family.

"It fascinated me that everyone wanted to give me a job, and I wasn't even looking for one," he said with a laugh.

The couple returned to their Arizona home, then moved to Seattle where Hoff worked for awhile.

"When it doesn't rain in Seattle, it's beautiful," he said. But the rain that seemed to fall 11 months of the year was too much for the family. Hoff remembered Midland and its sunny, dry climate, and the family came.

With a degree in metallurgical engineering, he started an electronics company "before there really was electronics. R. A. Henderson was my partner." They started with a "hi-fi" store, then expanded to two-way communications and installations. Later, Hoff went into the vending business, then sold it 10 years ago. Today, he dabbles in real estate.

"The people here were really something," he recalled. "The people were so nice.

I think they still are to some degree.

When I came back to live, people were very helpful and willing to do things I didn't think they would do for others. Even my competitors were helpful, as was First National Bank."

The Hoffs moved to Midland with their daughter and son, and later had twin girls.

The four children grew up here and graduated from high school. One lives in San Antonio; the others are in Houston.

"I said when we moved here we would only stay seven or eight years, and then I wanted to move to a bigger community to raise our kids," said Mrs. Hoff. The couple stayed; the children left.

Rain or shine, the Hoffs are hoofing it on Midland's streets or in the mall.

And no matter where they travel, they find a mall to get in their miles.

"Almost every mall in the country has a walking program" and, like in Midland, the doors open early for the walkers.

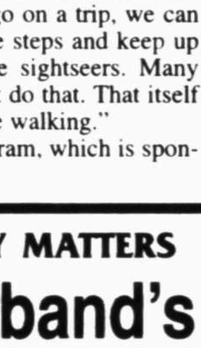
"If you sit down," Hoff said philosophically, "you're not going to feel so hot."

FAMILY MATTERS

Husband's shopping spree may be bad news

By Jim May

DEAR FAMILY: I am having a hard time trying to get my husband the stop spending so much money. He says that the last two years have been so hard that it's time for him to get his. I think he's right on that but a new truck, a new boat, and a new gun all in one year is too much for us. Now we have maxed-out one credit card and are starting on two more.



May

What's so weird about all of this is that most of our married life I have been the one spending too much. Until we hit such hard times if the kids needed something I got it for them. We had such bad money problems that I stopped and started telling them no a lot more. Now he's the one with the problem.

What can I do to get him to stop spending?

I want to help him and he does deserve it but we just don't make enough to cover all his spending.

I don't want to be his mother trying to tell him what to do. he's a really good husband and father. BIG SPENDER'S WIFE

DEAR BIG: You should be worried. The unfortunate thing about money is that unlike the federal government, none of us can deficit spend forever. A simple equation must be honored: "INCOME must be greater than or equal to EXPENSES + DEBT PAYMENTS." DEBT PAYMENTS represent the total of all debt — short-term (for example, credit cards an auto) and long-term (for example, mortgage). A simple way for me to keep all of this straight is to think of money as "beans" So I just picture a pot with beans being poured into it (INCOME) and beans being lifted out of it (EXPENSES and DEBT PAYMENTS). If or when you hit the bottom of the pot there are no more beans! Something has to be done.

It turns out that money is one of the most difficult things for the couple to discuss. There probably are a number of reasons for this but if it is a problem then it often is much larger than just spending more than one makes. In my little story, "beans should not have feelings attached to them, it's "beans-in and beans-out" but often times the beans represent much more than "just beans."

You might find the following suggestions from the January/Februray 1999 issue of Psychology Today, to be helpful to you in trying to discuss the situation with you husband:

1. Find a non-stressful time when money is not a loaded issue (not tax season, please) and when the kids are not around. Agree on the ground rules: no interrupting each other; no long tirades; after one person shares a difficult piece of information, the partner will try to "mirror it back" verbally before responding.

2. Take turns sharing your childhood messages about money. How did your parents save it, spend it, talk about it?

What specific money messages did you get and how might they be affecting your today?

3. Share your old hurts, resentments and fears about money.

4. Mention your concerns and fears about your partner's money style. Then acknowledge what you admire about their methods. In reality, positive statements help to make partners feel safe enough to give up the negative aspects of their behavior.

5. Talk about your goals for the future, short-term and long-term.

6. Share your hopes and dreams.

7. Consider making a shared budget or a spending plan together by merging the hopes and the goals with costs.

8. Set a time to have the next money talk. Aim for weekly conversations in the beginning and then monthly ones.

I would add the following to those suggestions:

Record the actual expense — money spent — by categories for the year. I am always amazed at how little most of us really know about how and how much we spend. A simple check register program like quicken, sure makes generating an Income and Expense statement easy - the "beans in" and "the expense beans out" count.

Create a workable budget and remain solvent.

Then, most importantly, STOP charging and live within your mans. A budget is only a plan — the control point to accomplishing the plan is at the point of spending or charging.

Should you fail at this process or the numbers not work at all, contract a non-profit credit counseling service. Do something before it is too late!

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

Garth officially files for divorce from Sandy after 14 years

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country superstar Garth Brooks has filed for divorce after nearly 14 years of marriage.

Brooks, 38, cited irreconcilable differences with wife Sandy in a complaint filed Monday. According to court papers, the couple has been separated since March 1999.

They have three daughters, ages 8, 6 and 4.

A spokeswoman at his record company acknowledged the couple was divorcing last month, after Brooks told Billboard magazine he regrets his failed marriage.

Brooks has sold more than 100 million albums, making him the best-selling artist in country music history. He recently announced he would retire after releasing an album next year to spend more time with his children.

ROME — Pope John Paul II returned to the university hospital where he has often been a patient and thanked officials for arranging the visit "without having to admit me."

The pope visited Catholic University on Thursday for the opening of its academic year, saying it "was particularly dear to me for what it has represented in difficult moments of my life."

His stays at the hospital date to 1981, when he was shot in the abdomen by a Turkish gunman. He had surgery for a colon tumor in 1992, for a broken leg in 1994 and for an inflamed appendix in 1996. He also suffers from symptoms of Parkinson's disease.

CAMAS, Wash. — Tonya Harding has reunited with the man she once attacked with a hubcap.

Harding said she's undergone anger management treatment and quit drinking since the attack on Darren Silver. Now, she said, she likes to be "the woman at home."

"Darren and I have worked out all of our problems," she told the tabloid TV show "Inside Edition."

"When I was apart from him, and not being able to see him, I realized how much I really, truly loved this man — and my heart was truly broken."

In May, she pleaded guilty in to disorderly conduct and malicious mischief for fighting with Silver outside her home after drinking. She was ordered to serve three days in jail and perform community service.

Harding is writing a book about her experiences with the working title, "To Hell and Back."

She first gained notoriety for her role in the 1994 knee-clubbing attack on rival skater Nancy Kerrigan.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wayne Newton and Tony Orlando met to see if they could settle lawsuits against each other without going to trial.

The two once shared a theater in Branson, the country music mecca in southwest Missouri. Orlando sued Newton in April 1999 for more than $15 million, accusing him of wrongly throwing him out of the business in 1998 and damaging his reputation.

Newton countersued for $20 million, saying Orlando had disseminated false information about him.

The case is scheduled to go to trial next spring, but the federal judge handling it ordered the singers to explore a settlement.

No settlement was reported from the Wednesday meeting.

ATLANTA — National Book Award winner Ha Jin is leaving Emory University at the end of the academic year to join the faculty of Boston University.

Jin and his family are moving to be close to his son, who will attend college in the Boston area next year, said Emory spokeswoman Deb Hammacher.

Jin, 44, has taught creative writing courses at Emory since 1993.

"We're very thankful for the time he's been here," Hammacher said.

Jin vaulted from anonymity to win the National Book Award and the Pen/Faulkner Award for Fiction for his 1999 novel "Waiting," which tells the story of an army doctor who is in love with a nurse but can't divorce the peasant woman with whom he has an arranged marriage.

Jin came to the United States from China in 1985 for graduate school and said the military assault on Tiananmen Square convinced him he couldn't go back.

MILWAUKEE — The BoDeans rock music group claims a Boston brewery is way off-key with its malt products of the same name.

Band members Kurt Neumann, Samuel Llanas and Robert Griffin filed suit this week against the Boston Beer Co., brewers of BoDean's, BoDean's Twisted Tea and BoDean's Twisted Lemon Tea, a malt-based beverage designed to appeal to people who don't like beer.

The lawsuit seeks to stop the company from capitalizing on the band's name or doing anything to give the impression that the drinks and band are connected.

"One ad includes a representation of guitars hanging on defendant's BoDean's malt liquor bottles," the lawsuit said.

The Milwaukee-based band seeks unspecified monetary damages.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Nov. 10, 2000:

Allow greater opportunities to come toward you. You often push away others and opportunities. Be aware of others' feelings. As a result, your relationships will gain. You need to let others carry the ball and responsibilities. They need to discover what problems they might run into. If you are single, admirers surround you, but you might not always make the right choice. Keep on working at it. If attached, a relationship heats up if you give this person the space to try new ideas. Try to be more vulnerable. TAURUS plays devil's advocate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You have the power and control to sort through any problem. You don't have to agree with another. You simply need to figure out what you want from a situation. Confusion surrounds loved ones or friends. Keep your eye on your long-term objectives. Tonight: Treat another to dinner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You could be incredibly strong when it comes to what you want. Your focus is on work and gains. You are more than willing to work long and hard. Listen to others and be creative with solutions and answers. You cannot change another. Tonight: Smile, and you'll get what you want.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Step back when dealing with confusing plans, information and work. You could be hearing gossip more than news. Loosen up and don't get uptight. You might want to test the creative waters, but it's smarter to be an observer. Tonight: Stay calm.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Don't come to any financial conclusions. Opt not to make a purchase. You could be misled. All the information coming forward might not be precise or as you would like it. Listen to someone carefully. A family member expresses strong needs. Listen. Tonight: Get together with friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ You might not see what is triggering a boss, but you need to work with this person. Debate doesn't get you far. Evaluate what you expect from associates and how you feel. Think hard about a loved one who might confuse you. Tonight: Initiate a discussion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Reach out for those at a distance. You might think that another simply doesn't understand a project. Research also adds a new element that forces you to regroup. Make calls. Recognize that you might need to spend some money on yourself. Tonight: Work as late as you need to.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Your actions come back to you. Carefully pick and choose your words with a loved one. This person might not always agree with you, but he does care. One-on-one relating reveals strains and pressures in a relationship. Decide what you want and expect here. Tonight: Out with your sweetie.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Another clearly holds the cards. You might need to discuss basic matters, but you find yourself blocked. Another expresses deep feelings when you give him space. For once, sit back and let someone else make choices. Reveal your inner thoughts and feelings. Tonight: Follow another's plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Get into your work, and you'll accomplish a lot. Follow your intuition with another. You know what works well as you try to get others mobilized. Carefully review a situation that could affect your productivity. If you're not comfortable with another, say so. Clear out problems. Tonight: Easy does it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Take charge and handle a personal matter. Your creativity and savoir faire make a big difference in your finances, but know when to say no to a risk. Tonight: Let off steam.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Be sensible with others and ask for what you need and want. You can be as direct as you need to be with someone at a distance. This person understands you and where you are coming from. Listen to a close associate or family member. You could feel tense about a discussion. Tonight: Play it low-key.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Discussions enlighten you about a close associate or partner. Another discussion could set you back on your heels. Evaluate what is going on with a child or loved one. You might not have the answers, but you do know how to talk to this person. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

The bidding:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
Pass	Pass	Pass	1◇
1NT	2◇	3♣	3♡
Pass	3♠	Pass	5◇
Pass	Pass	Pass

A conventional bid led to an unfortunate early defense. Declarer did not allow the defense to recover.

By partnership agreement, West's one no-trump showed clubs and a major suit. Even with that weapon in our arsenal, we would have preferred a takeout double since the West hand is suitable for play in any one of the three unbid suits. The rest of the auction was natural, with North's three spades suggesting three no-trump as a final contract.

East's club bid persuaded West to select the ace of that suit for the opening lead and play another club. Declarer ruffed the continuation, cashed the ace and king of spades, then ruffed a spade high. Declarer returned to dummy with the king of trumps and ruffed a club to complete the elimination of the black suits.

A trump to the queen extracted the last enemy fang, and it was time to start hearts. Declarer led the nine and, when East followed low (covering would not help — declarer would play the jack and arrive at the same ending), declarer ran it to West's queen.

The defender now had a choice of ways to commit suicide. A heart return would be into South's ace-jack tenace, and a black suit would allow declarer to discard a heart from dummy while ruffing in hand.

Without a club lead, alert defense can defeat the hand. East can win the first club lead and return a heart, assuring West of two tricks while that defender still has safe exit cards. Or a shift by West to a trump or spade at trick two would have the same result. Declarer does not have the entries to execute the endplay. Try it if you do not believe us.

Israel targeting organizers of recent violence

BEIT SAHOUR, West Bank (AP) — Israeli helicopters swooped down on a pickup Thursday and fired rockets at a Palestinian gunman the army had been tracking for days, an attack Israel said signals a new policy targeting organizers of recent violence.

The killing of Hussein Abayat, described by Israel as the "terrorist mastermind" responsible for the deaths of three of its soldiers, came on the day President Clinton launched his latest attempt to salvage the peace process, meeting with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat in Washington.

Two women passing by were killed in the attack in this bucolic village bordering Bethlehem and 11 people were wounded, including another well-known Palestinian gunman.

Despite Prime Minister Ehud Barak's earlier pledges not to take pre-emptive actions — a policy he had said would destroy prospects for a return to the negotiating table — the move was a concession to army chiefs who have been eager to strike the Palestinians with greater force.

"It was a pre-emptive strike by intention," Deputy Defense Minister Ephraim Sneh told The Associated Press. "For sure it is a signal. If the game is a guerrilla war, we are the champions of the world."

More than 180 people have been killed in six weeks of clashes, the vast majority of them Palestinians. But targeting leaders raised the stakes, and the Palestinians swiftly pledged retaliation.

Two Israeli children are stopped by Israeli police officers at the crossing between Jerusalem and the West Bank town of Bethlehem Thursday. A group of Jewish settlers protested a ban on praying at Rachel's Tomb, a holy site that is maintained as an Israeli enclave in the Palestinian-controlled town.

Hassan Asfour, a senior Palestinian negotiator known for his good relations with the Israelis, told Palestinian television he had warned them that "the long arm cannot reach out without having its fingers cut off."

Abayat was a commander in Fatah, Arafat's faction of the PLO, and a leaflet signed by the group appeared in Bethlehem on Thursday night calling Israeli army chief Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz a "wanted man."

Clinton was meeting with Arafat on Thursday and with Barak on Sunday, probably his final effort to salvage a peace process he cultivated so carefully for seven years.

The president's national security adviser, Sandy Berger, declined to discuss the specifics of the incident Thursday but said: "Violence breeds violence and we must find a way to break this cycle. It's important for people on both sides to do all they can to try to achieve that."

Mofaz predicted a rash of violence in the immediate future, but said the time had come to show Israel's power.

"In the short run, this response will increase the activity of armed Fatah men in the area," he acknowledged to Israel radio. "But in the long run, everyone who wants to harm Israeli army soldiers and citizens of Israel must know that he won't be spared."

Senior Israeli military staff appeared almost eager to share details of the attack — a sign that it was intended as a warning.

"We have been watching him for quite a long time, looking for a good opportunity, whenever he is preparing some new attack," Maj. Gen. Giora Eiland, the army's operations chief, told the AP.

Lutheran church admits its silence during Holocaust, apologizes to Jews

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Finland's dominant Lutheran church on Thursday apologized for decades of silence about the Holocaust, pledging to do more to raise awareness of the Nazi extermination campaign against the Jews.

"The church admits it was silent over the Holocaust and apologizes to the Jewish community," bishops and other church leaders said during a synod.

The synod, held at the seat of the Lutheran archbishop in Turku, 100 miles west of Helsinki, came days after a memorial was unveiled for the only eight Jews extradited by Finland to Germany — its wartime ally — in 1942 and later sent to the Auschwitz concentration camp.

Finland's Evanglical Lutheran Church, which has about 85 percent of the population as members, has not suppressed information about the Nazi massacres of some 6 million Jews but acknowledged it has not done enough to promote awareness.

"As a church, and as individual Christians, we cannot ignore the question which confronts us time and again and in new contexts, namely how guilty we are before God and people simply by having being silent over the discrimination and the violence," according to a statement issued by the synod.

The church said it will increase teachings about Jews and the common roots of Judaism and Christianity.

At the memorial ceremony on Sunday, Prime Minister Paavo Lipponen apologized to the Jewish community over the extradition of the eight Jews. Only one survived the war.

The Finnish church, which also participated in the unveiling, said Thursday that "the extradition of even one Jew was a sin."

The Jewish community applauded the stand.

"It is positive. It is very welcome," said Gideon Bolotowsky, president of the Jewish community in the capital.

Finland, attacked by the Soviet Union in 1939, sided with Germany in 1941 to 1944 against Josef Stalin's Red Army. It cut its ties with the Nazis when making peace with the Soviets in 1944 and expelled German troops from the country.

Finns saw German help as the only means of survival against its huge eastern neighbor. But it was an uncomfortable alliance and Finns were not involved in purges against the Jews.

China's ancient civilization proclaimed older amid dispute

BEIJING (AP) — China's ancient civilization has just gotten a little older — officially at least.

A government-funded study released Thursday pushed back the dates of China's earliest dynasties, shedding light on the origins of Chinese civilization and adding fuel to a controversy over the influence of politics on scholarship.

The fruit of the biggest research project China has conducted into its early civilization, the findings could be significant, if they are accepted.

They document the emergence of early Chinese kingdoms from the prehistoric New Stone Age and edge China's verifiable history to more than 4,000 years ago — a 1,200-year jump.

"The results solve a batch of knotty questions long left uncertain in our country's historical chronology and fill in the blank spaces in our country's ancient annals," project director Li Xueqin said, unveiling the report at a news conference.

But the project's origins immediately raised questions about its likely findings among scholars in China and abroad — even before the research began.

Dubbed the "history project," the study was commissioned in 1995 by Cabinet member Song Jian, a physicist by training. The government made it a national priority in its five-year plan that ends this year.

The project's stated mission was to fix dates for three dynasties: the half-documented Zhou, the shadowy Shang and the myth-shrouded Xia.

But critics said Song pressured the researchers to prove China has a 5,000-year history, to equal claims made by other ancient civilizations.

"There are factors of national prestige involved," said David Nivison, a retired Stanford University scholar who has made dating China's early dynasties a 30-year preoccupation. "Establishing the Xia as history, not legend, gives China a validated, authenticated history that rivals Babylonia or Egypt."

"I think they're all wrong," said Nivison, in a telephone interview.

History has long been an instrument of pride and power in China.

Dynastic historians rewrote records to glorify patrons and demonize enemies.

In the last 51 years, the communists have cited peasant uprisings against corrupt rulers to justify their revolution.

More recently, they have urged scientists to prove early humans developed in China, not in Africa as commonly held.

Politics aside, the history project focused serious science on questions debated for 2,000 years.

It brought together 200 Chinese historians, archaeologists, astronomers and specialists in seven other fields — an unprecedented marriage of the natural and social sciences for China, project director Li said.

They used fast-spinning electrical fields to shave atoms off tortoise shells and ox shoulder blades — ancient tools for divination — to date them more accurately.

They used computers to calculate the dates of eclipses mentioned in inscriptions on 3,000-year-old bones and bronzes and in texts disputed for centuries.

In the end, Li said, the project pushed past the last accepted definite date in Chinese history — the death of a Zhou king in 841 B.C.

It fixed the dates for earlier Zhou kings and the last Shang rulers going back to 1300 B.C. and broadly outlined the earlier period, setting the Xia's origins to 2070 B.C. — the middle of the well-excavated prehistoric Longshan culture.

"This work not only furthers a good foundation for accurately dating the Xia, Shang and Zhou. It more importantly gives a basic point of origin for tracing back the origins of Chinese civilization," said Li, an expert on early Chinese history with the government's Chinese Academy of Social Sciences.

Nivison disagreed.

"I've seen their chronology and maybe they've got two dates right," said Nivison, who has his calculated his own set of dates for events in ancient Chinese history dating to 2026 B.C.

Human rights activists take up battle for rioting inmates

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A prominent Kosovo Albanian human rights activist crossed cordons of Serb inmates Thursday to reach ethnic Albanians stranded by prison riots that have engulfed five prisons and threatened to undermine Yugoslavia's new government.

Flora Brovina, who had been Kosovo's most prominent political prisoner before being freed last week by new Yugoslav President Vojislav Kostunica, walked into a central Belgrade detention center to talk to Kosovo Albanian prisoners.

"I promised the mothers and relatives that I would go back inside the prisons," she said. "I wanted to see with my own eyes and report back to the parents."

The riots at some of the biggest detention centers in Serbia, the main Yugoslav republic, have threatened Kostunica's new pro-democracy administration because of the perception that a loss of control of the prisons is an indication the government's grip on the entire society is weak.

The riots began Sunday in Sremska Mitrovica in northern Yugoslavia after Serbian inmates learned authorities were considering amnesty for ethnic Albanian prisoners accused of being involved in the independence movement in Serbia's southern province of Kosovo. Outraged Serb inmates claimed discrimination.

The riots spread, engulfing five prisons and thousands of inmates.

Brovina's visit has tremendous resonance for Kosovo's Albanians, who have argued there will never be peace in Kosovo until ethnic Albanians being held in Serb prisons are released

She also visited the Nis prison, 110 miles south of Belgrade, to offer her support for some 300 Kosovo Albanian prisoners who are being held separately for their own safety because they chose not to take part in the uprising.

As she came out of the Nis prison, one of the major facilities involved in the uprising, Brovina demanded better living conditions and medication for the Albanian prisoners, who she said were cramped into two floors of one building, with little air and no food for three days.

"There are ill among them, those who need insulin," said Brovina, who is also a physician. She added that Kosovo Albanian prisoners had not joined the riots and were in a separate pavilion, guarded by a group of Serb inmates.

Yugoslavia's chief of state security, Rade Markovic, also accompanied Brovina, apparently in order to guarantee her safety.

Meanwhile, another prominent human rights campaigner, Natasa Kandic, also visited inmates in Nis.

Kandic, who is a Serb, said inmates spoke of "abuse at the hands of the prison management, physical maltreatment, beatings and ... horrible and insufficient food."

The Nis warden condemned the women's' visits, saying they were encouraging the protests.

"It's inciting them to mutiny," Miodrag Djordjevic said. The prisoners remain in control of most of the prison's buildings.

Belgrade's leading daily Glas Javnosti quoted Justice Ministry sources on Thursday as saying the riots had been masterminded from outside the prison, allegedly involving the highest echelons of ousted strongman Slobodan Milosevic's secret service.

Ivica Dacic, a leading Socialist official, said the inmates' actions were "completely normal and understandable."

"When you release Flora Brovina and others for political or financial reasons, you can expect other prisoners to rebel and demand amnesty," Dacic said.

Politics aside: MHS battles Lee

Bulldogs, Rebs knock helmets in final loop tilt

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Everybody knew it was coming, but with Monday's wintry weather and a presidential election which doesn't seem to want to end, a few Midlanders might have been caught by surprise.

Still, unlike an official announcement of which presidential candidate won Florida, the Battle of Midland is here — ready or not.

Midland Lee and Midland High will play at 7:30 tonight before a Memorial Stadium crowd, which should be a sellout by game time.

It will be the last game of District 4-5A action for both, although Midland Lee (7-2 overall and 3-1 in district) still has games to play after tonight. The Rebels clinched their 17th playoff spot in the last 18 years after last week's win over Abilene High.

This week, Lee goes after the district title — the fifth title (shared or outright) in John Parchman's six seasons at Lee.

"You know you have qualified for the playoffs, but you feel like you have unfinished business to take care of," Parchman said. "This (the district title race) is that unfinished business."

The end of district is bad news for the Midland

Rebels own advantage in District 4-5A finale

Let's take the final regular season walk through District 4-5A as three city championships go on the line tonight.

Lee vs. MHS Numbers: Lee owns a 27-10-2 lead in the overall series, and the Rebels have won 11 straight. Lee has also won 22 of the last 24 meetings between the two teams.

Williamson

Howard Watch: Midland High quarterback Chris Howard has passed for 1,292 yards this year, three yards short of being MHS' second all-time leading single season passer. He will move past Matt Marcum (1985) with four yards. He needs 253 yards to replace James Welborn (1,545 yards in 1983) as MHS' all-time leader.

Benson Watch: Midland Lee's Cedric Benson needs 230 yards to turn in his third consecutive 2,000-yard rushing season. Benson, with 7,322 career rushing yards needs 261 yards to move into eighth place on Texas all-time rushing list, passing the 7,582 yards by David Overstreet of Big Sandy (1973-76).

Cooper-AHS Numbers: Abilene High owns a one-game winning streak in this series, but Cooper has won eight of the last nine and owns a 27-11-1 lead in the overall series. Cooper is already in the state playoffs and can win an outright 4-5A championship if MHS upsets Lee. The Rebels will win an outright championship with a win over MHS and a Cooper loss to Abilene High.

OHS-Permian Numbers: Odessa High is hoping for a win by Cooper over Abilene High and a win of its own against Permian, the formula for a state playoff berth. However, Permian owns a 36-4-1 record over OHS and the Bronchos have beaten Permian only once since 1964.

Big School, Small School: If Abilene High gets in the playoffs, Lee will go to the Big School playoff division, like last year. If Odessa High gets in, Lee will be in the Small School division like it did in 1998. Lee coach John Parchman has mixed emotions. There is one more game to play in the Small School division (six to win a state crown), but Parchman feels the Big School road may be tougher this year with the likes of Duncanville, Lewisville and Aldine Eisenhower in the Big School run. There just seems to be fewer "crushers" in the Small School division.

Last week in the District 4-5A Picking Game, we were 2-1, missing the MHS-Permian outcome. That brings us to a 31-8 (.795) mark for the season. In an effort to keep the mark at .800 or better over the last 10 years, here's how tonight's games will go down.

Midland Lee 35, Midland High 14: One only has to look back at last season to see how dangerous this pick is. However, the fact that MHS had a chance to win a playoff berth the last two years with a win over Lee and that chance is gone this year, you have to feel like the Rebels have the emotional advantage in this one.

Abilene Cooper 30, Abilene High 21: The wings of the Eagles were clipped 61-14 by Lee last week and AHS may have a tough time regrouping in time to win this one. With wins and losses aside, this is the quarterback matchup between Cooper's Jordan Neal and Abilene's Kevin Goodman. Going into the season, it looked like Goodman would be 4-5A's top Midland Lee senior shortstop Crista Hargrove will cast her lot with the Division I softball team of Stephen F. Austin State University today.

The first day for NCAA signings arrived on Wednesday, but Hargrove is waiting until her dad, Bryan, can be in Midland for the signing. Bryan Hargrove works for Exxon-Mobil in Houston and is home only on weekends.

"I wanted my dad to be here, so that's why I'm signing on Friday," Crista said Thursday afternoon. "My family is moving to Houston this summer. My dad has been working there since last January, and they are waiting for me to finish high school before moving the family.

"It's been hard on the whole family, but I didn't want to move just before my senior year."

Hargrove chose SFA over Southwest Texas State and the University of Texas-Arlington.

"I made a visit to SFA the last weekend in October," Hargrove said. "The coach (Ruth Wright) told me on that Monday that they would take me. I liked the school, the coach and the players."

Crista will also be reunited with a long time friend when she arrives in Nacogdoches. Yvette Bass, another Lee grad, is in her first year at SFA.

"Yvette and I have always been good friends and played summer ball together with the West Texas Tornados," Hargrove said. "We will be the only two West Texas players on the team."

Playing college softball has been a dream for Hargrove.

"I never knew what college I wanted to go to, but ever since I started playing softball at age five, I've wanted to play college softball," Hargrove said. "I'm really looking forward to the opportunity."

Hargrove is also looking forward to the

MC claims home debut

By Oscar LeRoy

All the No. 1 Midland College Lady Chaparrals needed to do Thursday night against Temple Junior College was to catch a little fire.

After a sluggish first half, a 19-2 run in the second half sparked the Lady Chaps to roll past the Lady Leopards, 85-59, in the Midland College Chaparral Classic.

"I don't think we were playing real good team defense in the first half," said Midland College coach Ron Jones about his team's slim 39-36 lead at the half. "Things got a little bit better in the second half and I think our depth just kind of wore them down."

Temple stayed with the Lady Chaps and even traded leads with MC during the first 20 minutes of play. The biggest advantage the Lady Chaps had in the first half was 33-25 with 6:02 left before the break. The biggest reason the Lady Leopards stayed with the Lady Chaps in the first half was due to turnovers. The Lady Chaps turned the ball over 15 times in the first half and had 23 for the game.

"We're inconsistent right now and that's expected at this time of year," said Jones, whose team improved to 4-0 after the home opening win. "We turned the ball over a lot and I think we would've gained control of the game a lot earlier if we had taken care of the basketball. Some of the things we're trying to do with the basketball is good but we're just not executing very well."

The second half got much better for the Lady Chaps as they started to execute their offense behind the play of 5-foot-5 sophomore point guard Kanedria Wilson, who had 12 of her game-high 17 points in the second half.

"We were kind of sluggish in the first half and we had to come back and get it together," Wilson said. "(In the second half) I had to pick it up. We were down, we were sluggish, and as a leader, I have to pick it up. I just tried to come out in the second half and try to give this team a boost."

Fuchs goes for state gold

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

GARDEN CITY — Before the Region I-A cross country meet, Michelle Fuchs said a first-place finish would be the perfect way to cap her high school career.

Having completed that, what does Fuchs say about adding first-place finish at the UIL Cross Country State Championships, which will be held Saturday at Round Rock's Old Settlers Park?

"It would be a dream come true," Fuchs said.

Fuchs, a senior, knows the state dream well. She has made three previous trips to the state meet — finishing 36th, 12th and 29th in her freshman through juniors years.

■ UIL Cross Country

It is not a resume which would have many thinking gold, but her road to Round Rock wasn't never quite like this.

She dominated her team's district meet, winning for the first time ever.

Last week at Mae Simmons Park in Lubbock, Fuchs won her fifth race of the year in very impressive fashion. She ran roughshod over a region field, winning by

Baker earns NL manager award

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — After winning the National League Manager of the Year award for a record third time Thursday, Dusty Baker thought about the San Francisco Giants' failure to win the World Series.

"Nothing balances losing, especially when you wanted to go all the way and the fans and everybody else wanted you to go all the way," he said. "It's been an emotional roller coaster, sort of. You go from being real good one week then real bad the next, then a couple of weeks later back to good again."

Baker, whose team lost to the New York Mets in the first round of the playoffs, received 30 of 32 first-place votes, one second and one third for 154 points in voting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Tony La Russa of the St. Louis Cardinals was second with 59 points, getting one first, 16 seconds and six thirds.

Bobby Cox of Atlanta was third with 41 points, followed by Bob- by Valentine of the Mets (16) and John Boles of Florida (15).

San Francisco went 97-65, finishing 11 games ahead of second-place Arizona, the largest margin among the six division winners. The Giants then lost 3-1 to the Mets.

"We just want to continue this excellent run that, hopefully, we're in the beginning of," he said.

Baker also won the award in 1993 and 1997. In the American League, La Russa is the only three-time recipient, winning with Chicago in 1983, and with Oakland in 1988 and 1992.

Baker said he really couldn't enjoy the accolades.

"Not until we have a championship in San Francisco," he said. "It's cool. But team things are cooler."

After the playoff loss, Baker signed his fourth two-year contract with the Giants, a $5.25 million deal that made him one of baseball's highest-paid managers.

As late as July 1, the Giants trailed Arizona by 6 1/2 games. But in their first season at Pacific Bell Park, the Giants pulled ahead in the second half and finished with a 55-26 home record, matching the Mets for the best in the major leagues.

"These guys believed in me, and I believed in them and they believed in each other," Baker said. "Without them I wouldn't be sitting here."

Indians offer Ramirez $118 million contract

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Unwilling to meet Manny Ramirez's demand for $200 million over 10 years, the Cleveland Indians offered the free agent outfielder a seven-year contract worth more than $119 million.

The Indians faxed Ramirez's agent, Jeff Moorad, a counter-proposal Thursday averaging about $17 million, according to a baseball management source speaking on the condition he not be identified.

The source said the Indians' counteroffer was for seven years and that the per-year value was "slightly more" than the $17 million per season average the Toronto Blue Jays will pay first baseman Carlos Delgado beginning next season.

An Indians spokesman confirmed the counterproposal was sent to Moorad but refused to discuss its contents.

Moorad said late Thursday night that he received the Indians' latest offer and that he would spend Friday in his Newport Beach, Calif., office analyzing it before resuming talks with the Indians.

"It's certainly a necessary step in any kind of process that would have Manny re-signing with the Indians," he said.

Asked if he thought the newest proposal was fair, Moorad said: "I'm not going to characterize it."

Moorad would not comment on any specifics of the deal, but said that if the sides did not come to an agreement by Friday at midnight, the chances of Ramirez re-signing with the Indians would lessen.

Cleveland is the only team that can discuss salary with Ramirez through Friday. After that, Ramirez, who had 122 RBIs in just 118 games last season and 432 the past three years, is free to negotiate salary with any team.

Last week, Moorad sent a complex proposal to Cleveland owner Larry Dolan that would be the richest in sports history and make Ramirez baseball's first $20 million per year player.

Since getting the offer, the Indians spent nearly a week analyzing both Moorad's package and their own economic situation. Cleveland general manager John Hart said he "imagined" the team would make a counterproposal, and Thursday the Indians decided to see if Moorad was willing to come down in price.

Moorad rejected a $75 million, five-year offer from the Indians in July. He has maintained throughout the negotiations that Ramirez, 28, wants to stay in Cleveland and he would seek a "career contract" for his client.

Earlier this week, Moorad said there were six teams — three in each league — who expressed an interest in talking to him about Ramirez. He had already scheduled meetings with two of those teams for early next week.

Strawberry to stay in jail for another week

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Darryl Strawberry was jailed for at least another week by a judge who warned him Thursday to resume his treatment for colon cancer "or you are history."

Judge Florence Foster also told the New York Yankees slugger that he would get no more chances to end his repeated drug use, and his next violation would land him in prison.

"If you can't make it on the outside, I'll find a place where you can get treatment on the inside," she warned.

Before a courtroom crowd that included former teammate Dwight Gooden, the judge ordered Strawberry to resume chemotherapy — treatments he halted last month when he said he had lost the will to live.

"You have got to get the therapy or you are history," Foster said.

Prosecutors wanted to send Strawberry to prison, but Foster refused.

She sentenced him to 30 days. With time served and other credit received under Hillsborough County jail rules, Strawberry could be free in about 10 days, although an exact date was not set at the hearing.

After he is freed, Strawberry will be outfitted with an electronic monitor that will alert his probation officer if he again leaves a drug treatment center.

Strawberry said he felt the impact of his first prolonged time behind bars and was ready to sober up.

"I can't run from myself any more," Strawberry said. "I've got to take responsibility for myself in recovery."

Strawberry told Foster the time he's already spent in jail has taught him a lesson.

Less than a week ago, he told the judge he'd used drugs and stopped his chemotherapy because he wanted to die.

Strawberry is under two years' house arrest for 1999 charges of drug possession and soliciting a prostitute. His Oct. 26 arrest for breaking house arrest was the third time he'd violated his probation.

Assistant State Attorney Robin Fuson said he thought the sentence, which was recommended by Strawberry's probation officer, was too light. Fuson expects Strawberry to be in trouble again.

"I hate to sound cynical, but I am," Fuson said. "Very few people complete these sentences."

Strawberry's defense attorney argued that the 38-year-old couldn't get adequate care for cancer while in prison and needed to be returned to drug therapy to fight his addiction.

Jonathan LaPook, the doctor who first detected Strawberry's cancer and has orchestrated his treatments, said Strawberry's cancer is extremely fierce and the best hope for him is aggressive, new chemotherapy treatments that can only be provided at top cancer centers.

The doctor described Strawberry's drug addiction and cancer as intertwined diseases that need to be treated simultaneously. He has recommended that Strawberry seek treatment in Minnesota at the Mayo Clinic and at Hazelden Foundation, a drug treatment center there.

LaPook said Strawberry has no time to further delay his chemotherapy and said the slugger is down to "one good shot" in fighting the disease.

Mariners win bid for Japanese outfielder

By Josh Debow
AP Sports Writer

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. — The Seattle Mariners agreed to pay more than $13 million for the right to talk to a player few have seen play. Starting this weekend, teams will bring out the real big money.

As baseball's general managers laid the groundwork for trades and signings at their annual meetings this week, the only major move came Thursday when the Mariners won the bidding rights to Japanese All-Star Ichiro Suzuki.

The winning bid of $13,125,000 would be paid to Suzuki's Japanese team — the Orix BlueWave — only if the Mariners sign the outfielder to a contract by 9 p.m. EST on Dec. 9.

"There's always a risk with any player you sign be it an amateur, a professional free agent or a player from another professional league," Mariners GM Pat Gillick said. "Our people felt he was worth the risk. That's why we made the bid we did."

Suzuki, 27, hit .387 this season to win his seventh straight Pacific League batting title. Suzuki is a career .353 hitter with 118 home runs and 529 RBIs in nine seasons in Japan.

Suzuki would be the first Japanese position player to make it in the majors.

"He can do everything except hit with power," said Gillick, who envisions Suzuki as a right fielder. "He is more of a contact, slash type hitter. He's a very good defensive outfielder with an above average arm. He has hit for a number of years in Japan. I'm confident he can do it in the U.S."

Suzuki is expected to sign with the Mariners because of their large Japanese population in Seattle and the presence of Kazuhiro Sasaki, who won the AL Rookie of the Year in his first season after leaving Japan.

"He enjoyed his stay in Seattle and I think that will help quite a bit in negotiations with Ichiro," said Gillick, who will begin talking with agent Tony Attanasio in the next few days.

The money Seattle agreed to pay for the rights to Suzuki will look like a bargain as soon as stars such as Alex Rodriguez, Manny Ramirez, Mike Hampton and Mike Mussina are free to negotiate financial terms with any team, starting Saturday.

"There is nothing magical about Saturday," said Mets GM Steve Phillips, who is involved with all four top free agents. "It's a process not an event."

The Toronto Blue Jays started the offseason spending spree last month when they signed Carlos Delgado to a $68 million, four-year contract deal.

Most of the teams that are talking seriously with the big free agents are among baseball's biggest spenders.

The New York Yankees are believed to be the favorite for Ramirez. The Mets are the leading contender for Rodriguez. Cleveland and Boston are battling it out over Mussina, and Atlanta is targeting Hampton.

Stanton freshman makes big difference by running

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

STANTON — When freshman Ezekiel Bryand answered the prayers of cross country coach Leah Burns and came out for the team, he was not ear-marked as a "difference maker."

But that is just what he has been for the Buffaloes, who return to the state cross country meet for the second straight year.

In cross country, five finishers are needed to compile a team score at meets. This put Stanton in an odd situation at the beginning of the season. The Buffaloes had four runners, albeit a solid four. J.D. Ramos, Abel Wilson, Aaron Hernandez and Robert Saenz could stack up with just about any core in Class 2A.

Four, no matter how great, does nothing for a program when the district and region meets roll around. Last year, Stanton won its district, region and placed fifth at state, but unless someone stepped up, they were running against each other as individuals, not as a team.

That someone was Bryand, a freshman who looks as though he got in the wrong line when students were signing up for fall sports. "Zeke," as he is nicknamed, looks like a smallish fullback, which would be fitting in some ways. Stanton is, by recent successes, a football community.

"He is not a long distance runner," Burns said. "He is not a runner but has the biggest heart, and he has done what we have asked him to do every weekend. That has made the difference in getting those five guys there instead of one or two."

At district, Stanton was crowned champion, thanks mainly to first, second, third and fourth-place finishes by the other four. Bryand just sealed the deal by finishing. He placed 11th. Stanton moved on

When it came to defending a title last week at regionals, the Buffaloes were no match for top-ranked Holliday, and a superhuman effort by Bryand wouldn't have changed that. Stanton easily took second in the team race and grabbed an automatic qualifying spot to the state meet.

"All we have asked was for him to finish," said Ramos, one of two seniors on the Buffaloes' squad. "He was the only one who would run with us this year. You can't be picky with what you get. We didn't have a team before he came along."

Having that talent at the top is why Stanton is the closest thing the Permian Basin has to a cross country power. Ramos, who qualified for the state track meet in the mile last year, took sixth at the regional cross country meet. Wilson and Hernandez finished eighth and ninth respectively.

Having a team is why they are grateful. If not for Bryand's 69th at regionals, Stanton would be carrying three to Austin instead of five.

Saenz, the other freshman, finished 11th. He would have been left behind as the top three teams and top 10 individuals qualify for the state meet.

"It is so much better when you can take five guys instead of one, two or three," Burns said. "This season has not been easy at all, especially what the freshmen have been through, especially Zeke. He has been running every weekend, and we have not known where he is going to place or how he is going to place or if he is going to place."

Bryand doesn't see himself playing the role of hero during the long practices when his lungs are burning or during the meets when he is finishing more than two minutes behind the rest of the team.

"If I was up there, we would have a chance to win state," Bryand said.

It might be easy for him to think that. Actually, it might be easy for anyone to think that. Stanton was fifth last year, and a good nucleus returned this year. However, there is a huge "BUT."

"I got on so we could have five guys," Bryand said. "I have never run this far before. I ran 1 1/2 (miles) in junior high."

Next year, three runners — Hernandez, Saenz and Bryand — will return to the Stanton lineup. Bryand says that he will attempt a fall double of cross country and football. Still, there will be three back, leaving Burns to find another two to replace Ramos and Wilson.

"We have no idea what the future of the team is," Burns said. "We have two freshmen and a really strong junior, but we don't have anybody coming up (from the eighth grade) to run. I guess we will be scrounging the halls again like we did this year, hoping somebody will run.

"They have seen what Zeke has done and seeing what he is getting to do now. It makes a big difference."

State bound

The Stanton boys will try to improve on last year's fifth-place finish at the Class 2A Cross Country Championships Saturday at Old Settlers Park in Round Rock more than 16 seconds. Her previous best finish at regionals was fifth.

Expect seniors J.D. Ramos and Abel Wilson to be up with the leaders. Junior Aaron Hernandez and freshman Robert Saenz are also runners to watch.

"Having such a phenomenal year makes it easy to be motivated," Fuchs said.

Having company in Round Rock can't hurt Fuchs' chances either. This year, Fuchs has plenty. The Garden City team continued a standout season with a second place showing in Lubbock, earning a state berth.

"I think we ran pretty well, but we didn't do our best," Garden City coach Shana Kirkland said. "We didn't do bad by any means. We ran well. We ran good enough to qualify."

Kirkland hints that Garden City could have its best meet ahead of them. Looking at the team's progress this season, it is easy to see why. The team's first meet win came at the district meet. The Lady Bearkats followed with a second at region.

"We are peaking at the right time," Kirkland said.

Fuchs is one of three seniors on the team — M'Lynn Niehues, a state qualifier in track, and Summer Eoff are the two others. Otherwise, Garden City is as young as you can get. Jessica Hoch, Allison Jansa, Noemi Guerrero, Anna Flores and Leslie Jansa are all freshmen, and getting state experience in their first varsity season of their high school career."I have always dreamed of going to state, but it is like 'whoa'," Hoch said. "I have heard (Fuchs and Niehues) say going to state is an incredible feeling. You are running with the best of the best. I am kind of shocked we will be there. I am still kind of speechless."

Hoch, 14, finished 26th at regionals, 14 spots behind Niehues and three in front of teammate Allison Jansa, giving Garden City four runners in the top 30. If the team expects to contend for a medal (and possibly a team title) against region champion Whiteface, Miles and two-time defending state champion Alvord, this type of pack running has to continue.

"We have to run our race," Hoch said. "We have to stay together."

"The seniors are a good group of leaders and have pulled them (the freshmen) along this year," Kirkland added. "They will have them ready to run at state. I guarantee that."

Kirkland could also have guaranteed that they will all be following Fuchs as will most of the field.

"She is the leader of our team, and we will try to follow behind, Kirkland said. "But not too far."

Jackalopes begin weekend 'badly' with loss to El Paso

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

The El Paso Buzzards have a reputation of being a very stingy hockey team. The last time they played the Odessa Jackalopes, last Friday in El Paso, Odessa eked out a 1-0 win.

So when the teams met again Thursday night at the Jack Shack, the last thing Odessa coach Don McKee wanted to see was the Buzzards taking a 3-0 lead.

But that's what the Buzzards did. They got a hat trick from Brent Scott and held off a third period rally by the Jacks to win, 4-2.

"This was a very, very weak performance by us," McKee said after rattling off a long list of breakdowns by his players.

"This is supposed to be a big weekend for us, and we've started it off badly," McKee said. "Some of the hockey players need to give their head a shake. Some of the players need to perform better than they have been performing."

The Jacks fell to 5-3-1, and they have now lost two straight after winning four straight. Fortunately for any Jacks who were left frustrated by Thursday night's outcome, they get to play the Buzzards again tonight, this time in El Paso.

"We got one at their place, and they got one in ours," forward Derek Laxdal said. "We've got to go back to their barn and make it a 2-1 series."

While the Jacks missed several opportunities to score, El Paso went up 3-0 when Scott scored his second goal of the game with 3:44 elapsed in the third quarter.

Minutes later, the Jacks tightened up the game with two goals in a span of 36 seconds. Matt Hoffman scored at 5:07, and Tim Hill scored at 5:43 to put the team within 3-2. The Jacks put more pressure on El Paso in the third, but it proved to be too late.

"You can't win a game in 20 minutes," Laxdal said. "We did the same thing against New Mexico; got down 3-0 then made a game of it. But in the games we've been winning, we've played 60 minutes."

The Jacks were at a disadvantage in the final minutes of the game, thanks to penalties. Adam Doyle was given a game misconduct with 2:24 left, and the Jacks had to pull their goalie just to have five skaters.

El Paso's Scott got his hat trick by scoring an empty-netter with 12 seconds left, snuffing out any last chance the Jacks might have had.

Note: The small crowd at the Jack Shack was treated to a hockey rarity: a penalty shot. Late in the second period, Odessa's Konrad McKay was hauled down from behind on a breakaway, and he was awarded a penalty shot. But El Paso goalie Jeff Levy made the save on a low center shot.

upcoming spring softball season, her last at Midland Lee.

"I'm really glad that I was able to get the college decision out of the way before the season starts," Hargrove said. "It will take a lot of pressure off of me and make me more relaxed. Of course, I'm a pretty relaxed person anyway, but I won't have that hanging over my head during the season.

"I want to really work hard this spring and get ready for the college game. I want to get better at hitting and work on my defense. I just want my whole game to improve."

Hargrove will have started for Lee in four consecutive seasons, joining the team as a freshman.

"High school has gone by so quickly for me," she said. "I can't believe it's almost over, but I'm looking forward now to playing in college."

The Lady Rebels have been in the state playoffs in each of her four seasons, but had their earliest playoff exit in the history of Lee softball last season when they lost to El Paso Hanks in the area round.

"Actually, we had a good season last year, we just let that one game slip by," Hargrove said.

Hargrove plans on majoring in psychology with a minor in biology on the way to a physical therapy degree.

Bell to compete for AQHA title

Midland's Amy Bell is competing this week in the American Quarter Horse Association's World Show in Oklahoma City.

During preliminary rounds on Tuesday and Wednesday, Bell placed third in the Hunter Hack class and sixth in the Working Hunter class, putting her in the World Championship Finals in both classes on Saturday.

Only the top 15 riders in the world in each class advance to the finals. As a qualifier in these two classes, Bell and her gelding, New Found Money, will also compete for the title of All Around Champion.

Bell is a sophomore at Tarleton State Uninversity in Stephenville where she is majoring in equine industries. She is the daughter of Ellen and Larry Bell of Midland.

Soccer players honored

Three Midland soccer players, now playing for Schreiner College, were honored for their play in the NAIA Sectional tournament.

Freshman keeper Brandice Zachry, a Midland Lee graduate, and defender McKi Southern, a Midland High grad, were picked to the all-Sectional team.

On the men's side, senior forward co-captain of the Mountaineers, Scott Kamis, another former Bulldog, made the all-Sectional team, scoring two goals in the tournament, one against eventual champion Northwood University.

Blast '87 takes win

Midland's Blast '87 boys soccer team defeated the Amarillo HPD, 2-0, last weekend in Odessa.

Steven Cervantes and Derek Darrow scored the two goals for Blast.

Trinity's Nathan Pirtle sheds a would-be tackler in the Chargers' game versus Watagua Christian last week. Pirtle, a senior, joins Clint Adcox and Jeehoun Yi as big reasons for Trinity's success in its first season of 11-man football.

Big play backs lead Chargers

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Going into the playoffs, it was a given that the Midland Trinity Chargers had some talented running backs rushing behind a talented offensive line. What may have not been known is what kind of big play abilities the backs would have in last Friday's 55-19 win over Watauga Harvest Christian in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial School Class 3A bi-district playoff game.

Pirtle

The first big play came from Clint Adcox in an 80-yard burst down the far sideline for a score early in the first quarter. The second big play came just five minutes later as Nathan Pirtle busted through for a 78-yard touchdown run. Pirtle added another 4-yard run for touchdown, and the Chargers led 21-0 after the first quarter. For the game, the Chargers rumbled for 478 yards on the ground with Pirtle gaining 309 yards on 24 carries and four touchdowns. Adcox ended the night with 141 yards on 15 carries and two touchdowns. It was just all in the day's work for the Chargers' running backs and their offensive line.

Adcox

"Most of our touchdowns have been after we've driven down and scored on either short yardage situations or after we've passed the ball," said Trinity head coach John Wilkins, who will lead his 8-2 Chargers into the TAPPS 3A quarterfinals against Giddings State School 2 p.m. Saturday in Eden. "We've had runs of 20-25 yard runs but it was nice to get runs of 80 or 67 yards, it adds a whole other dimension. I knew we would win the game, but I didn't know we would have that type of big play capability, which is a good thing."

"Under the conditions, we came through it and did a good job," said Pirtle, who scored four touchdowns aganst Watauga Harvest.

"I felt like we stepped up and showed what we could do," Adcox said. "(After the 80-yard run) we started clicking from there."

Backs Pirtle, Adcox and Jeehoun Yi have been the biggest benefactors of the job the Chargers' offensive line has done. Pirtle, a senior, has 1,000 yards on 100 carries. Adcox, a junior, has accumulated 918 yards on 118 carries. Yi, a sophomore, has 462 yards on 49 carries. This three-headed monster backfield may only be getting tougher and meaner the more they advance in the TAPPS 3A playoffs.

"Our backs have a nice blend of speed, quickness and power," Wilkins said. "All three backs bring a little different deal to the table. Jeehoun doesn't carry the ball as much the other two but his contribution is that he's a wonderful blocker. Of course, Pirtle brings size and speed to the table, and Adcox is a slasher, who gets to the hole quick and is a tough kid with decent speed."

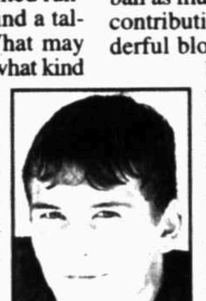
The trio also recognizes the work the offensive line has done this season.

"The offensive line is probably the reason why we've gotten so many yards," Yi said.

"They've really done a great job this year," Adcox said. "Every game, they've opened up the holes for us."

"It all starts and ends with them," said Wilkins about his frontline players. "Everybody in our classification has got some skill people, but having a good offensive line makes a big difference."

At the beginning of the year, there was no question that Pirtle was going to be the featured back after rushing for more than 1,000 yards the last two years. But when Pirtle went down with a foot injury early in the season, Adcox was asked to step up. Adcox went from alternating with Pirtle to being the featured back and showed what he was capable of doing.



Yi

"We knew Clint had the ability, it was just a matter of getting him some opportunities," Wilkins said. "We've been using him at both tailback and fullback, and we're going to continue using him in both positions."

Adcox goes back to the offensive line as the reason for his success during the time Pirtle was out of action.

"I've done all right but the offensive line really stepped up and helped me a lot," Adcox said.

Now with all three healthy backs in the backfield, the Chargers hope to make their first run at a state championship in 11-man football. Trinity just has to win two more games to reach the TAPPS 3A state championship game in Waco on Nov. 25.

"I feel pretty confident about the playoffs," said Pirtle, the offensive MVP of last year's Texas Christian Athletic League state championship game. "We still have the momentum from last week. It'll be good to reach the state championship game again."

"We're not going to be satisfied until we reach the state championship game, because that's where we should be," Yi said.

FINALE: Lee chases 4-5A crown

(From 1C)

High Bulldogs (4-5 overall and 1-3 in district). The playoff drought will reach 49 straight seasons, no matter the outcome of tonight's game.

Browning says there is still something to play for. The first thing is pride. The second, a fact which most likely has gone unnoticed, is that MHS can still do something which hasn't been done since 1976.

"If we win this week, we end up 5-5, and that would be the first time in almost 25 years that a Midland High team would have done that for three consecutive years," Browning said.

If Midland High needed more inspiration, here it is. The Bulldogs haven't beat the Rebels since 1988.

Playing for pride is one thing, but playing to make or change history is another.

So, yes, there is more to play for than bragging rights for a year, which in this town is worth a great deal.

All of this makes tonight's game more than just another game on the schedule, no matter what Mother Nature and George W. Bush have done to the pre-game hype and intracity mischief.

"It is the crosstown rivalry," Browning said. "They will be ready to play."

Another question is will Browning's team be able to stop Cedric Benson, the back who has earned almost as many accolades in his three-year career as he has rushing yards? Benson, a senior, has rushed for 1,770 yards and 26 touchdowns. He is third on this season's Class 5A chart.

"Obviously, we are trying to keep Cedric from breaking the big one," said Browning, whose Bulldogs are one of two 4-5A teams which Benson hasn't rushed for 300 yards against (Odessa High is the other). "He has done it against everybody."

Midland High does step forward with something that no one else has going into this week and that is the top defense in the district. Expect that ranking to be tested.

"One of our goals (at the beginning of the season) was to have the No. 1 defense in the district, and we have a chance to do that," Browning said. "We are playing the No. 1 offense and will have to play well. The defense sees it as a challenge."

Whether the Bulldogs are up for it depends on more than desire. Linebacker Michael Forrest is listed as questionable as is defensive end Michael Glasscock. Last year, Glasscock dressed but didn't play. Forrest did play.

"We don't know what they are going to do defensively," Parchman said. "Until we figure that out and find something we can do, our defense has to play consistently."

Parchman went on to say that he feels good about the way his team has been playing as of late.

Offensively, they are putting up numbers (an average of 428 yards and almost 32 points a game during the last three games) the 1999 Rebels would be proud of.

"Lee has hit its stride the last few games," Browning said.

Midland High has been suspect offensively, but don't expect the Bulldogs to hold anything back in the finale. Last year, a more wide-open Bulldog attack totaled 425 yards and 28 points versus Lee.

"It is the last game of the season. We don't need to hold anything back," Browning said.

In the Battle of Midland, would you expect anything less.

Injuries: Lee - LB Robert Rogers is out (broken leg), OL Lorenzo Orosco is out (broken leg); OL Heath Jones is out (leg injury). MHS - Punter-kicker James Gripp is doubtful (ankle); OL/DL Michael Glasscock is doubtful (knee); LB Michael Forrest is doubtful (back)...

Lee Notes: QB Nick Hand has rushed for 257 yards and passed for 325 yards... RB Shawn Murphy has rushed for 210... TE Eric Winston has caught six passes for 151 yards... P/K Michael Wynn has a punting average of 41.6 yards and had recorded 48 points... DBs Ashley Jackson and Tim Norman have three interceptions each...

MHS Notes: RB Tony Joseph has rushed for 621 yards... T.J. Barber has 328 yards rushing... QB Chris Howard has thrown for 1,292 yards and six touchdowns... WR Lamar Hickey has caught 37 passes for 424 yards... DB Ray Johnson has three picks... P/K James Gripp has a punting average of 39.9 yards. He also has 28 points...

Series Notes: Midland High hasn't defeated Lee since 1988. That is an 11-game losing streak... The last time MHS defeated Lee, Dwane Roberts scored five touchdowns for the Bulldogs... Lee leads the series, 27-10-2...

Last Year's Game: The score of last year's game was 35-28. Lee's T.J. Glover picked off an MHS pass late in the fourth quarter to seal the win for Lee, which went on to win its second straight state title... One note to last year's game. MHS running back Jimmy Smith had more yards rushing than Lee's Benson (237-191). No running back has out-rushed Benson this season...

Game Notes: The game is almost a sellout. There are a handful of tickets left on the Midland High side... An all-you-can eat barbecue will be offered for anyone interested and hungry. Tickets are $7 for adults and $5 for children. The proceeds go toward the booster clubs of the Midland High baseball team and Midland Lee tennis team...

TV/Radio: KODM (FM 97.9) and KCRS (AM 550) will broadcast the game on the radio. KMID-TV will televise the game by tape delay. The broadcast is set to begin after the 10 p.m. news...

A title to play for: Midland High's Matt Bose and Midland Lee's Mark Gonzales will battle for the 4-5A lead in tackles. According to the team's tackle charts, Bose has 118 tackles. Gonzales also has 118. Both figures do not count the tackles for a loss...

Speaking of defensive titles: According to the 4-5A statistics, the Midland High defense will take a 91-yard advantage (not a two-yard edge as previously reported) over Abilene High in the race for the top defense in District 4-5A. This week, MHS has to stop Lee, which is averaging 361.8 yards a game. AHS goes against Cooper, which is averaging 355 yards a game...

Benson Notes: During his career, Cedric Benson has rushed for 7,321 yards and 98 touchdowns... Also, Benson has smashed the 100-yard barrier in 29 straight games and scored a touchdown in 32 straight games... Benson has rushed for 200-plus yards in 14 career games... He has rushed for three or more scores in 22 games...

MHS Record Book: Chris Howard has thrown for 1,292 yards and stands in third place on MHS' single-season passing list... He needs 254 yards to pass James Welborn (1,545 yards in 1983) and move into first on the single-season list... Lamar Hickey has 37 receptions this season. He needs five receptions to pass Allan Foret (41 receptions in 1983) and move into first place on the single-season reception list...

WILLIAMSON: Mojo wins

quarterback, but Neal has been super impressive. Neal's brand will stand tall if he can pass Cooper to this win.

Odessa Permian 14, Odessa High 8: I hate to rain on Odessa High's parade, but this loss is very costly for the Bronchos, eliminating any state playoff hopes. We are still wondering if Mojo's magic over OHS is still a given with T.J. Mills now at Permian. This is Mills' first OHS-Permian game.

Sooner Heupel tests Heisman hopes on A&M

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M's Wrecking Crew defense claims to have no fear of Oklahoma Heisman Trophy candidate, quarterback Josh Heupel. Maybe it should.

Heupel administered the third worst defeat in Aggies' history, 51-6, last season in Norman, Okla., and he's only gotten better this season, leading the No. 1 Sooners to the top of the BCS rankings.

"We aren't worried," said Aggies linebacker Jason Glenn, the team's sack leader with five. "If he does win the Heisman congratulations to him, but that doesn't mean anything to me. You respect him but you can't say you're afraid.

"If you let him put fear in your heart, the game's already won by Oklahoma."

It's the biggest game so far this year for the Sooners (8-0, 5-0 in Big 12), who vaulted to the No. 1 spot with consecutive victories over ranked Texas, Kansas State and Nebraska. "The more you win, the bigger they get," Sooner coach Bob Stoops said.

The Sooners will face the Aggies (7-2, 5-1) in raucous Kyle Field Saturday before 86,000-plus fans in what could be the largest crowd to see a football game in the state of Texas. The Texas-Texas A&M attendance last season of 86,128 is the record.

At stake for the Sooners is a possible national championship matchup in the Orange Bowl and a Heisman Trophy for Heupel.

The Aggies have more modest goals. A victory would keep them in the running for the Big 12 South title and a chance to play in the conference title game.

Heupel holds the key for the Sooners. He's been unstoppable this season, ranking fourth nationally in passing and total offense, operating Stoops' pass-oriented offense to near perfection.

"We've noticed the way he deals with pressure," Aggies linebacker Roylin Bradley said. "A lot of quarterbacks when they get a lot of rush and people in their faces, they'll break down, but he doesn't make bad passes.

Heel or toe doesn't seem to matter for Heupel. He's dissected every defense he's faced this season. Heupel hit 31 of 50 passes for 372 yards and scored six touchdowns, three passing and three running in last year's victory over the Aggies.

Now he's better.

"This year, people have tried everything and it hasn't worked. You have to mix it up. You can't do any one thing and expect to stop them," A&M defensive coordinator Mike Hankwitz said.

For all their efforts, defenses have forced Heupel into only five interceptions this season.

"I think he's smart to start with," Aggies coach R.C. Slocum said. "He's got a very accurate arm and he makes precise passes. I've not seen him in a game so far where it looks like he's out of control."

Although confident, Heupel said Texas A&M — ranked No. 6 nationally in scoring defense with a 13.1 average per game — could pose a challenge to the unbeaten Sooners.

"They mix up their fronts and their coverages, they disguise them well," Heupel said. "They've done a great job all year and don't give up big plays. They want to make sure they are very active. But that's not something we haven't seen during the course of the season."

Oklahoma quarterback Josh Heupel (14) will be the man to stop Saturday when the Sooners take on the Texas A&M Aggies in Kyle Field. Heupel is a Heisman hopeful and a win in Kyle against a good Texas A&M defense could put him over the top in the voting.

Giants could get win over favored St. Louis squad

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

A few weeks ago, the St. Louis Rams probably would have been favored by a touchdown or more against the New York Giants — even in the Meadowlands.

This week, without Kurt Warner and Marshall Faulk, the Rams are just two-point favorites against a team that has an identical 7-2 record. And even two might be too much.

Consider:

— The Giants are second in the NFL against the run. The Rams, at home, gained just 31 yards on the ground in their loss last week to Carolina.

— The Giants have the second-best rushing offense in the NFL. The Rams are 24th against the run, meaning the Giants could control the clock.

— The swirling winds in East Rutherford, N.J., befuddle most visiting quarterbacks — although Denver's Brian Griese threw for 327 yards against the Jets last week.

— Jason Sehorn, who was just returning to form when he broke a rib three weeks ago, should be back, shoring up a shaky New York secondary.

— The only winning team the Giants have beaten is Philadelphia (twice, by a total margin of 32 points.) On the other hand, the Rams have beaten just one team with a winning record — Denver.

With all that, the Rams are the Rams and the Giants are still the Giants until proven otherwise.

Still ...

Ags look to avenge last year's rout

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. — The outcome was staggering, really.

Here was Oklahoma, unranked and having lost its past two games, rolling over No. 13 Texas A&M, 51-6. Hadn't the Aggies beaten Oklahoma by a combined score of 80-7 in the previous two years?

"We were embarrassed last year," coach R.C. Slocum said of last year's game, the third-worst loss in program's history. "We've always taken a lot of pride in playing defense here. But they executed, made the plays they needed to make and they thoroughly beat us."

The Sooners scored the first six times they had the ball in last year's game. Josh Heupel threw three touchdown passes and scored three other times on sneaks.

The teams meet again Saturday in College Station. This time, Oklahoma is 8-0, ranked No. 1 and leads the Big 12 South Division at 5-0. Texas A&M is 7-2, ranked No. 23 and is 5-1 in the division.

A victory would put the Aggies in a tie for first place in the division and knock the Sooners out of the national championship picture. Oklahoma, conversely, needs to win to keep its conference and national title hopes percolating.

"They're probably going to come out with a different game plan than they did then," Oklahoma center Bubba Burcham said. "I'm expecting to see different things, because everything just seemed to work. It was one of those things where we had a play called and they had a defense called and it just happened to work where it was the right one."

The defeat was A&M's worst since a 46-0 loss to Baylor in 1901. Oklahoma held the Aggies to 230 yards, after having allowed more than 500 to Texas and Notre Dame in its previous two games.

"We're probably a little more capable offensively than we were this time last year," Slocum said. "Defensively, we may not be as well equipped as we were."

Slocum said his secondary is by far the youngest in his 12 years at A&M. That could mean trouble against Heupel, who was 31-of-50 for 372 yards in last year's game. But Heupel said what happened in that game will have no bearing on what takes place Saturday.

"Last year is exactly that, it's last year," said Heupel, who has completed 68 percent of his passes and is averaging 313 yards per game passing. "It does absolutely nothing for us, it does nothing for them. These are two different teams, two much-improved teams from a year ago."

The Aggies have allowed just 13 points per game, which leads the conference and ranks sixth-best nationally. They rank fifth in the Big 12 in pass defense, allowing 191 yards per game, and they're fourth in the league in total defense, one notch below Oklahoma.

Slocum said he doesn't expect his players to have revenge in mind Saturday. Instead, he said, the result from last year should serve as motivation to play better this time around.

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops said there's no way the Aggies could be more motivated than his team.

"We've got a lot here on the line," he said. "Our players understand that. Our players understand that we're 8-0 right now and this is going to be a major factor in the conference race, and they're hungry for that. We haven't had it in a while. So there's no way anybody's going to be more motivated than our players."

Houston, 3-6, takes on East Carolina

Associated Press

GREENVILLE, N.C. — The last two weeks have been tough for East Carolina, both on and off the field, but one last home date offers the Pirates a chance to brighten the mood, and perhaps keep their postseason hopes alive.

ECU (5-3) takes on Conference USA opponent Houston (3-6) at noon Saturday.

After their last outing, a 16-13 home loss to Alabama-Birmingham, the Pirates' hopes of postseason play seemed virtually out of reach. But when Southern Miss suffered its first conference loss Saturday, 49-28 to Louisville, ECU's prospects brightened.

Now, ECU and Cincinnati both have two C-USA losses, and Southern Miss and Louisville have one each, Louisville's at the hands of the Pirates.

If Louisville wins its last two conference games, the Cardinals will win the conference outright. But if they stumble against either Army or Houston and ECU defeats Houston and Southern Miss, the Pirates could still find themselves at the top of the standings.

"I think we've come down to kind of a one-game football season for East Carolina," ECU head coach Steve Logan said this week.

The Pirates will be playing Saturday without backup quarterback Richard Alston, who was suspended indefinitely after being arrested on counterfeiting and drug charges last Friday.

Under new head coach Dana Dimel, the Houston offense has made the transition from a running attack to a scheme that emphasizes the air game.

"Three and four wideouts is the norm, drop-back passing is the name of the game," Logan said. "Their quarterback has started every game he's ever been at Houston, he's a good player. Pro people have their eye on him. They're trying to throw the football and win football games."

Senior quarterback Jason McKinley has started in 39 consecutive games, giving him the nation's longest starting streak among Division I-A quarterbacks. McKinley has thrown for more than 300 yards in five of the Cougars' nine games this season. The recipient of many of those passes has been sophomore wide receiver Brian Robinson, who caught 11 passes for 154 yards against Tulane last week.

Tech RB applies for medical red-shirt

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech running back Ricky Williams has applied for a medical redshirt, hoping to return for his senior season in 2001.

It is up to the Big 12 to approve the application.

"Clearly, Ricky meets all criteria for a medical hardship," said Shane Lyons, associate compliance director for the Big 12. "The filing of paperwork to the Big 12 Conference is a formality."

Williams suffered a season-ending knee injury in the team's 1999 season opener. He has said this would be his last year to compete, despite qualifying for the redshirt a year ago.

Williams has spent this season struggling to get back to playing at his full potential.

"It would be better for the team if I were 100 percent, and I will be next season," Williams said in a statement released late Wednesday. "I talked it over with my family and we feel this is the right decision," Williams said.

Williams suffered an anterior cruciate ligament injury in the third quarter of Texas Tech's 1999 season opener at Arizona State.

Williams currently leads the team with 390 rushing yards and is fourth on the all-time rushing list at Tech with 2,904 career yards.

"Ricky has improved with each game," Texas Tech head coach Mike Leach said. "He's a great team leader. The coaching staff and the team are excited to have him back."

Butkus Award finalists chosen

ORLANDO, Fla. — Juniors Keith Adams of Clemson and Rocky Calmus of Oklahoma, and senior Dan Morgan of Miami were picked Thursday as finalists for the Butkus Award, presented to the best linebacker in college football by the Downtown Athletic Club of Orlando.

The finalists were chosen by the 28-member Butkus Award selection committee with the winner to be announced Dec. 8.

No. 24 Georgia Tech shuts out Virginia

Associated Press

ATLANTA — This time, there was no stirring comeback, no thrilling finish.

George Godsey directed No. 24 Georgia Tech to touchdowns on its first three possessions and the Yellow Jackets thoroughly dominated Virginia in a 35-0 victory Thursday night.

Godsey, the nation's seventh-rated quarterback, completed his first nine passes and finished 29-of-37 for 323 yards, including a 33-yard touchdown to Kelly Campbell and an 18-yarder to Nate Curry.

Joe Burns had TD runs of 17 and 3 yards, finishing the night with 120 yards. Campbell ran 50 yards for another score.

Georgia Tech (7-2, 5-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) was already bowl-eligible but likely clinched its fourth straight postseason trip, which hasn't happened since the 1950s.

Virginia (5-4, 4-3) must win its final two games against North Carolina State and Virginia Tech to extend its streak of seven-win seasons to 14 in a row.

The Georgia Tech surrendered only 290 yards in its first shutout since a 38-0 victory over Maryland in 1993. Virginia was blanked for the first time in more than 16 years, stretching back to a 55-0 loss to Clemson opening the 1984 season.

The ACC series usually produces wild, high-scoring games. The last four meetings had been decided by a total of 20 points, each team winning twice.

Virginia won 35-31 in 1997 and 45-38 a year ago, sandwiched around Georgia Tech's 41-38 victory in '98, making this only the second series in ACC history where both teams have scored at least 30 points three straight times.

But the Yellow Jackets thoroughly dominated, piling up 627 yards. They didn't even have to punt.

Aikman practices, likely to get start

Associated Press

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman practiced again Thursday, making it likely he will start Sunday against the Cincinnati Bengals.

Aikman's practice Wednesday marked his first time on the field since aggravating a back injury on Oct. 29. He felt fine afterward and said a better indication would be whether he'd be able to practice Thursday.

Backup Randall Cunningham did not practice for a second straight day because of fluid buildup in a knee. He remains listed as probable.

First alternate juror selected in Carruth case

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Attorneys in the Rae Carruth murder trial agreed Thursday on the first of four alternate jurors to be picked.

The first alternate is a white woman in her 50s who works as a bookkeeper for Kmart.

Prosecutors dismissed two more black men from the jury pool. The first said he is morally opposed to the death penalty, while the second said he doesn't believe in the death penalty but could support it as a juror.

Prosecutors tried to have the second man removed "for cause," meaning he couldn't follow the law in this case, but the judge denied their request. Prosecutors then used one of their challenges to remove him.

The dismissals of the two black men prompted new complaints from defense lawyer David Rudolf, who has alleged racial bias by prosecutors during jury selection.

On Tuesday, Superior Court Judge Charles Lamm ruled prosecutors had not acted with bias in excusing eight of 11 black prospective jurors up to that point.

The jury is composed of seven white men, three black women and two white women.

Carruth is black, as was the former girlfriend he is charged with killing.

Carruth, a former wide receiver for the Carolina Panthers, is charged with first-degree murder in the death of Cherica Adams, who was eight months' pregnant with his child when she was shot last November.

Adams' baby son was delivered by emergency Caesarean section and survived. She died a month later.

Vikings' Cris Carter fined $5,000

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Minnesota Vikings wide receiver Cris Carter was fined $5,000 Thursday for kicking a player during last Monday night's game against the Green Bay Packers.

Carter was fined for kicking Packers defensive back Antuan Edwards, though he was not penalized on the play. Carter was on the ground as he was surrounded by Edwards and seven other Packers.

Carter is the third Viking to be fined this season. Randy Moss was fined $25,000 for grabbing an official's elbow Oct. 29 at Tampa Bay, and Talance Sawyer twice was fined $7,500 for an illegal hit on Detroit Lions quarterback Charlie Batch and a helmet-to-helmet hit on Chicago quarterback Cade McNown.

Assault charge dropped against Stubblefield

FAIRFAX, Va. — A charge that Washington Redskins defensive tackle Dana Stubblefield assaulted his wife was dropped Thursday.

Prosecutors abandoned the charge less than an hour before the trial was to begin. The accusation stemmed from a domestic dispute in September.

"Simply, a crime was not committed," said Peter Greenspun, Stubblefield's attorney. "Kim and Dana Stubblefield are pleased that this case is now concluded."

Stubblefield was arrested at his home in Great Falls, Va., on Sept. 20 after an argument about luggage escalated and Kim Stubblefield called police. Police said there were no signs of physical injury and that Kim Stubblefield declined medical treatment.

Crude surges

NEW YORK — Heating oil futures vaulted at the New York Mercantile Exchange Thursday, leading crude and gasoline futures higher.

Analysts said the rally was sparked by a report from the International Energy Agency, which said that, with winter approaching, it had "serious concerns" about low inventories of distillate fuels, which include heating oil.

The agency warned that falling inventories of heating oil and diesel fuel in the Pacific make it "increasingly unlikely" that stocks in major consuming markets will be rebuilt ahead of winter.

OPEC increased October production by 280,000 barrels a day compared with September, but tight supplies were expected to generate continued volatility in the oil markets, the IEA said Thursday.

December crude futures marched higher in sympathy, up 61 cents, or 2 percent, to an intraday high of $33.96 cents a barrel at the close. December unleaded gasoline futures ended up 0.24 cent to 87.66 cents a gallon after trailing most of the day, despite inventories being at their lowest levels in recent years.

Natural gas for December delivery gained 10.7 cents to $5.445 per 1,000 cubic feet. In London, Brent crude from the North Sea was up 84 cents to $32.16 per barrel.

Lingering concerns about last winter's supply crunch during a cold snap — and subsequent price spikes — drove buyers Thursday amid thin volumes, traders said.

Adding to concerns over tight supplies, some market participants said Iraq may yet use its oil exports to gain a political advantage.

Dollar down

LONDON — The euro surged against both the dollar and the yen following the European Central Bank's unilateral intervention in foreign money markets Thursday, but the embattled single currency quickly gave up its gains to fall back to pre-intervention levels.

The intervention had an immediate impact on the euro-dollar and euro-yen rates, sending the euro up against both currencies. Following the ECB's move, the euro climbed from 85.60 cents up to 86.30 cents, and from 91.85 yen to 92.80 yen.

The euro's jump, however, didn't last long and the single currency fell back to its pre-intervention levels again.

In other European trading, the confusion around the results of the U.S. presidential elections pushed the U.S. dollar down against most other currencies Thursday.

Dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Wednesday, included 107.43 Japanese yen, down from 107.58; 1.7732 Swiss francs, down from 1.7759; 1.5438 Canadian dollars, up from 1.5410.

Based on euro rates, the dollar is worth 2.2798 German marks, down from 2.2870; 7.6461 French francs, down from 7.6702; 2.5687 Dutch guilders, down from 2.5768; 2,256.99 Italian lire, down from 2,264.11.

Gold up

Gold closed in London at $264.70 bid per troy ounce, up from $263.95 on Wednesday. In Zurich the bid price was $264.45, up from $263.95. In Hong Kong, gold fell 70 cents to close at $264.25 an ounce Thursday.

Wholesale inflation up in October

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Wholesale inflation edged up in October as sharply higher costs for food and natural gas swamped the biggest drop in car prices in 10 years. Even with the advance, economists believe the Federal Reserve will leave interest rates unchanged next week.

The Producer Price Index, which measures inflation pressures before they reach store shelves, was more subdued last month, climbing a seasonally adjusted 0.4 percent after jumping 0.9 percent in September, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

Prices for goods other than food and energy — which can swing widely from month to month — actually fell by 0.1 percent in October, following a 0.3 percent rise, suggesting that inflation was in check. It marked the first decline in the "core" inflation rate since January.

"Inflation at the producer price level is still tightly under wraps," said William Cheney, chief economist for John Hancock.

While economists believe that energy prices will moderate over the next six months, that may be of little comfort to consumers who are likely to face astronomical heating bills this winter.

The Federal Reserve has boosted interest rates six times since June 1999 to slow the economy and keep inflation under control. Given signs that the Fed's rate increases are working, many analysts believe the central bank will leave interest rates unchanged at its Nov. 15 meeting.

The 0.4 percent rise in the PPI was twice as big as many analysts expected, but the decline in the core rate was an even better showing than the slim 0.1 percent increase they anticipated.

In another report, new claims for state unemployment insurance jumped last week by a seasonally adjusted 35,000 to 344,000, its highest level since early January 1999, suggesting that the nation's red-hot labor market is cooling a bit.

A government analyst blamed temporary layoffs in the automobile industry for most of the rise. Some plants shut down temporarily and others decreased production to trim inventories, given moderating demand arising from the slowing economy, said Paul Taylor, chief economist for the National Automobile Dealers Association.

On the inflation front, wholesale prices this year have been rising at an annual rate of 4.1 percent, compared with a 2.9 percent gain for all of 1999. The pickup in this year's prices largely reflects surging energy costs.

In October, energy prices rose 1.4 percent after leaping 3.7 percent in September. Residential natural gas prices posted their biggest increase since June, rising 5.2 percent. Residential electricity prices rose 0.8 percent.

More expensive natural gas prices reflect tight supplies and extraordinarily high demand from consumers, said Mark Zandi, chief economist for the consulting firm Economy.com.

The pickup in electricity prices stems from more expensive natural gas and oil costs, which are used to fuel electric power plants, Zandi said. Those higher costs are being passed along to consumers in the form of higher prices, he added.

Crude-oil prices have risen sharply this year as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries limited production and U.S. supplies shrank. But economists expect prices to moderate as oil-producing nations boost output.

After soaring in September, prices for gasoline and heating oil fell last month by 1.8 percent and 3.4 percent, respectively.

But food prices rose 0.8 percent in October, the biggest increase since April, following a 0.4 percent rise the month before.

Economists blamed the higher food prices on a number of factors including the lingering affects of a drought that had hit parts of the country and more expensive fuel costs to transport goods from farms or ranches to processing sites and warehouses.

Pinnacle CNG shows off year-old natural gas compressor facility

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Homegrown Pinnacle CNG showed off its manufacturing facility on Industrial and some of the natural gas fueling station components it manufactures.

"We started Pinnacle six or seven years ago and we hoped to sell our compressors here," said Jack Brown, a partner in Wagner & Brown Ltd., Pinnacle's parent company, "but there hasn't been any demand here."

The company's strongest market, he said, is California, and Pinnacle is just entering the Arizona market.

Pinnacle, using what Brown says is advanced technology, some of which it has patented and some that is proprietary, to build natural gas compressors and dispensers that go into compressed natural gas fueling stations for fleets.

Among the company's largest customers is United Parcel Service, for which Pinnacle built a refueling facility in San Ramone, Calif. that has been in operation more than five years without missing a day of operation, he said.

According to Drew Diggins, operations manager with Pinnacle, 320 UPS vehicles a day are refueled at Pinnacle CNG fueling stations in northern California.

As the company showed off its year-old facility, it displayed a compressor about to be shipped to Thousand Oaks, Calif., where it will become operational December 1, refueling cars for the City of Thousand Oaks.

Dennis Clayton, director of economic development for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, pointed out that "In economic development, it's a proven fact 70 to 80 percent of the new jobs and new wealth are created by existing businesses. This is a prime example.

He added, "This is a good example of a long-term, established group in the oil and gas industry taking the initiative to diversify its own business and offset the volatility of the oil and gas industry. They're taking advantage of technology, using computer-based operating systems and being enterprising in inventing new systems to improving existing technology. Plus, it creates additional jobs and shows the commitment of the company to stay here and expand at home."

Brown and Diggins said that the company, which shipped two of its compressors to Germany, is talking with British Gas, the world's largest distributor of natural gas, to supply equipment for fueling stations throughout Great Britain and stretching into South America.

The company, Diggins said, is also talking with Petro Vietnam, where the Vietnamese government wants to see all cars running on CNG, and with the New York Transit Authority, which could hire Pinnacle to build 12 fueling stations in New York City.

Brown said California and Arizona have established incentives and grants to fund the fueling stations, programs Texas has yet to begin. And without such assistance, he said, "it's hard to convert to CNG."

Diggins said that Pinnacle's roots date back to 1990, with the enactment of the Clean Air Act.

"We looked at how it would impact the industry, and came to Mr. Wagner and Mr. Brown and told them it might represent opportunity," he said. "We have the engineering staff, the gas reserves and the desire, let's develop specialty compressed natural gas facilities that can fuel cars at the same rate as gasoline or diesel."

The company's staff did just that, he said, development technology that will fill a CNG-fueled car at the rate of 6 to 12 gallon-equivalents per minute, compared with about 4 GPM for gasoline or diesel.

Mexico's Fox hopes to expand trade to Canada, Europe

By M. Ray Perryman

Vicente Fox has brought Mexico more than new political leadership; he has ushered in a new era of trade opportunities for our southern neighbor. Fox commanded world attention by becoming the first opposition party candidate since 1929 to be elected Mexico's president. Since his election, Fox has quickly set an ambitious economic agenda: he wants to create more jobs for the Mexican people by stepping up trade activities with other countries. As a globetrotting, free trade advocate promoting Mexico's trade readiness, he has already made stops in the U.S., Canada, Central and South America, and — notably — the European Union.

Perryman

Mr. Fox is encouraging an aspect of economic growth already important to his country. Mexico's economy has enjoyed major trade expansion over the last decade; in fact, foreign trade has been a key driver in the country's economic growth. Mexico has attained international status as the first Latin American world trade power, claiming 43 percent of the region's exports and 38 percent of the area's total imports. Over the last 10 years (1989 to 1999), Mexico has almost quadrupled its exports from $35 billion to $137 billion; at the same time, imports increased by 300 percent — from $35 billion to $142 billion. Manufactured goods led this expansion with sales of $122 billion in 1999.

This massive export growth had one primary audience; about 88 percent of Mexico's exports in 1999 were destined for U.S. consumers. Part of the reason for this concentration comes from the ballooning two-way trade under the NAFTA agreement, from $88 billion in 1993 to over $226 billion last year. The export sector is growing faster than any other sector in the Mexican economy and is the foremost creator of new jobs. In addition, those working for a company that exports much of its production receive higher pay in general than employees of non-exporting companies within the industry. During the past six years, the growth of exports has contributed to over half of Mexico 's expansion in gross domestic product (GDP).

Another huge economic motor oiled by NAFTA is that of foreign capital (or direct) investment. These monies are central to the continued development of Mexico, and more than 60 percent of the current flow comes from firms in the U.S. and Canada. Among the many stimulative effects of foreign investment are generating new jobs, encouraging technology transfer, training workers and administrators, and indirectly creating myriad opportunities through the chains of production suppliers. Companies with foreign investments in Mexico create one out of every four jobs. The booming activity within the maquiladora industry is a visible manifestation of these investments.

Now Mexico is looking to expand trade with Europe. Following nine rounds of talks since November 1998, European Union and Mexican officials announced a free trade treaty effective July 1, 2000. As with NAFTA, the accord calls for gradual reductions in tariffs on products exchanged between the two regions. Prior to the treaty, duties averaged 17 percent on Euro-Mexican trade-compared with an average of 2 percent on NAFTA trade. This treaty will expand trade opportunities still further for Mexico.

Broadly interpreted, the plan directs Europe to give duty-free entry to Mexican goods and services by 2003; in turn, Mexico agrees to be an open market for European goods by 2007. It also contains provisions to add stability to Mexico's investment climate.

Clearly, the economic engines of exporting and foreign investing are at the core of Mexico's economic growth and job creation. As the EU accounts for one-fifth of the world's trade (involving $1.6 trillion annually), accessing the commercial potential of the European Union would channel tremendous resources into Mexico. If the intent of this landmark trade agreement is reached, foreign money will likely flow into Mexico at an unprecedented pace.

The diversity gained by industries that are encouraged to export will strengthen the country's internal economy, generate more and better jobs for the citizens, and lessen Mexico's vulnerability to a U.S. economic slowdown — thus benefiting all. The EU-Mexico free trade treaty may go down as one of the greatest economic achievements of the new millennium.

Dr. M. Ray Perryman is President and Chief Executive Officer of The Perryman Group (www.perrymangroup.com). He also serves as Institute Distinguished Professor of Economic Theory and Method at the International Institute for Advanced Studies.

Baylor remains realistic

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

WACO — While Dave Bliss knows his toughest challenge is changing the perception of Baylor basketball, the coach is also realistic in the early stages of the process.

These Bears probably aren't ready to be contenders for the Big 12 title.

"A lot of people are going to have to play down for that to happen," Bliss said. "It's not that we aren't going to try to compete for the title, but to have that as our only goal would be somewhat foolish."

Still, Baylor made some impressive improvement in Bliss' first season, especially considering the situation he inherited.

The Bears were 6-24 and lost all 16 of their Big 12 games the season before Bliss was hired. Then there were the 10 lettermen who left, forcing the new coach to rebuild with junior college transfers and highly touted freshmen.

Last season in Bliss' debut, Baylor was 14-15 — the 8 1/2-game improvement being the 10th best in Division I basketball — and won four Big 12 games. The Bears even won a game in the Big 12 tournament, beating Nebraska in the opening round.

"I think we got some momentum started last year just because we were better than we were the year before," Bliss said. "It wasn't necessarily what we thought we might be able to do. I was still disappointed that we didn't do some things better."

This may be the biggest challenge for Bliss, who had NCAA tournament teams at Oklahoma, SMU and New Mexico, where he was for 11 years before coming to Baylor. He has 14 20-win seasons in his 25-year career.

Times have changed, and so have the rules. And that can make for a slower turnaround, especially for a rebuilding team in a conference like the Big 12.

"It used to be that you could do it a little faster. You could outwork people in the old days," Bliss said. "Now everybody's pulled back to working x-number of days recruiting and x-number of calls a week. What it does, it makes it easier for the haves to do that.

"The other aspect is now, as opposed to maybe in the '70s or '80s, everybody's pretty good."

Even though in only his second season, this is already Bliss' team. None of 13 scholarship players on the 2000-01 roster played for the Bears two years ago.

There are only two seniors, guard DeMarcus Minor (11.4 ppg, 4.4 rpg) and forward Terry Black (11.2 ppg, 7.7 rpg), former junior college transfers who are also the only returning starters.

Minor senses a different tone this season, and believes the team gained confidence with the strides made last year.

"We feel like we are really going to shock some people," Minor said. "We have no pressure, which is really dangerous because when people don't expect anything from you, that's when you surprise them."

Minor should get backcourt help from sophomore Wendell Greenleaf (4.1 ppg) and junior Chad Elsey, a transfer from SMU who will be eligible to play Dec. 16 — in the team's fifth game. Elsey started 30 games at SMU as a sophomore in 1998-99 and averaged 13.4 points a game.

Another transfer, Greg Davis, will likely start at a forward, but a dislocated left shoulder in the preseason slowed his progress. He started as a sophomore at New Mexico for Bliss, then sat out last season at Baylor after transferring. A pair of 6-foot-8 freshmen, Michael DeGrate and Logan Kosmalski, are expected to get playing time.

Sophomores John Flippen (7-2) and Steve Othoro (6-10) will likely man the post. Flippen had 35 blocks in 28 games last season.

Scouting Bears

Coach: Dave Bliss (2nd year at Baylor, 14-15; 26th year overall, 479-286)
Last year's finish: 14-15, tied for eighth in Big 12
Welcome back: Guards DeMarcus Minor and Wendell Greenleaf, forward Terry Black and center John Flippen.
Wave goodbye: guard Tevis Stukes, forward Jamie Kendrick and center Ben Echols.
Strengths: Minor, who had his best games late last season, is expected by Bliss to be more of a take-charge player. Experienced transfers in junior guard Chad Elsey (from SMU) and forward Greg Davis (from New Mexico), both starters with their previous teams.
Weaknesses: Lack of winning tradition. A lot of new players will be on the court.
Quotable: "It's not that we aren't going to try to compete for the title, but to have that as our only goal would be somewhat foolish," Bliss said.

Young Aggie leaders return for 2nd round

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Bernard King and Jamaal Gilchrist learned a tough lesson as bug-eyed freshmen at Texas A&M last season: There is no cruise time in college basketball.

"In high school, because you were sometimes better than everyone else, you could play 20 minutes and then cruise," Gilchrist said. "We know what to tell the freshmen that are going to be playing this year. We will tell them to just play hard and don't ever stop.

"This year, we know what it takes."

The painful part might not be quite over for coach Melvin Watkins as he begins his third season of rebuilding the Aggies into a program that can compete among the Big 12 powers.

At least he's seeing signs of life.

"I'm seeing things in practice that I haven't seen in two years," Watkins said. "We are making plays for more than one or two people. Last year we relied so much on Bernard and now we have the offense going to others in practice."

The Aggies had no such luxury last season, when the brunt of the team's fortunes rested on true freshmen King and Gilchrist and resulted in an 8-20 record. There were a few highlights, such as an upset of No. 12 Oklahoma State.

But, after beating the Cowboys, the Aggies lost nine of their final 11 regular-season games and were eliminated from the Big 12 tournament by Colorado in the first round.

King earned Big 12 freshman of the year honors after averaging 16.9 points. He was the only freshman in the country to average at least 15 points, four rebounds and four assists per game.

Gilchrist was the team's second-leading scorer and led the team in steals and free throw percentage.

The Aggies' biggest problem was that King was their primary weapon, whether he was double- or triple-teamed.

"I feel like this year will be more than a one- or two-man show," King said. "Double-teaming is something I'm used to from high school. I'm the type of player that if I'm double- or triple-teamed, I'll get the rock to someone else."

King was the only Aggie to average in double figures.

"If we have to depend on Bernard as much this year, we're in trouble," Watkins said.

The Aggies didn't play very good defense last season, allowing their opponents to hit 46.3 per cent from the field.

"Everything this year has been based on defense," King said. "Last year, we slacked off on defense. This year, it's our goal. You couldn't play the whole game last year because we didn't have the bench. Now if you need a (rest), you can get a sub, rest and get back out there."

Watkins still will be forced to trot out freshmen and sophomores this season but he's looking forward to signing top players and bringing them along slowly.

"The sign of a good program is when you don't have to have your freshmen come in and pull the load," Watkins said.

Now they're depending on sophomores.

"That's a little desperate too, but it's better than the freshmen having to do it," Watkins said.

The Aggies expect true freshman Nick Anderson, a forward from Baton Rouge, La., to be another immediate contributor. Anderson was selected by Big 12 coaches as the preseason freshman of the year.

He averaged 23.7 points, 14.6 rebounds and 6.2 assists, 7.4 blocks and 3.4 steals last season, leading Southern Lab High to its fourth straight state championship.

Sophomore center Andy Slocum, who started 14 games last season, also returns +along with seniors Carlton Brown and Aaron Jack.

Aggie Hoops

Coach: Melvin Watkins: (third year, 20-35)
Last year's finish: 8-20.
Welcome back: Sophomore guards Bernard King and Jamaal Gilchrist, center Andy Slocum.
Wave goodbye: forward/guard Jerald Brown.
Weaknesses: Watkins is entering his third season as coach but he still must face a lack of depth. Last season, freshmen King and Gilchrist had to play too many minutes. They are still the foundation this season as sophomores.
Quotable: Jamaal Gilchrist: "In high school, because you were sometimes better than everyone else, you could play 20 minutes and then cruise. We know what to tell the freshmen that are going to be playing this year. We will tell them to just play hard and don't ever stop. This year, we know what it takes."

Rockets down Grizzlies

HOUSTON (AP) — Steve Francis scored seven of his 19 points in the fourth period to lead the Houston Rockets to an 85-78 victory over the Vancouver Grizzlies on Thursday night.

Maurice Taylor led Houston with 21 points, with Cuttino Mobley contributing 15 and Walt Williams 13.

Shareef Abdur-Rahim was the top scorer for Vancouver with 17, followed by Michael Dickerson with 16, Othella Harrington with 12 and Mike Bibby with 10.

A pair of 3-point shots by Williams and four points each by Francis and Mobley sparked to an 11-6 run for Houston to open the fourth quarter and gave the Rockets 77-69 lead with 3:51 left.

Vancouver cut its deficit to four, 77-73, with 3:07 left, but never got closer.

A 3-point shot by Francis with 1:48 remaining made it 82-74 and allowed Houston to coast to the victory.

Vancouver scored seven straight points, five by Dickerson, to take a 55-47 lead with 4:31 remaining the third period. Houston rallied to tie the score 63-63 going into the fourth quarter after a 3-point shot by Williams and a driving layup at the buzzer by Francis.

MC: Lady Chaps beat Temple

(From 1C)

12 points, while freshman Delfiah Gray added 11.

With only five sophomores on the roster, the Lady Chaps expect it will take a little time for the team to gel.

"We have a lot of young players and it'll take them a while for them to get into the groove of things, but once we get it going, we're going to be a good team," Wilson said.

The Lady Chaps next take on Barton County, a 76-54 winner over Cochise College, at 6 p.m. today.

"They went to the national tournament last year and had a great season," said Jones about Barton County. "They're undefeated right now; they execute well and shoot the ball well. They play solid and it's the time of year where you've got to play harder than the opponent and win with defense, and I told the team that we're not winning with defense right now."

Classic Notes: Other games on tap today at Chaparral Center will be New Mexico Military Institute taking on the Yavapai (Ariz.) College men at 2 p.m., the Temple Junior College women facing Cochise College at 4 p.m., and the No. 4 Midland College men taking on Western Oklahoma at 8 p.m. in their home opener.

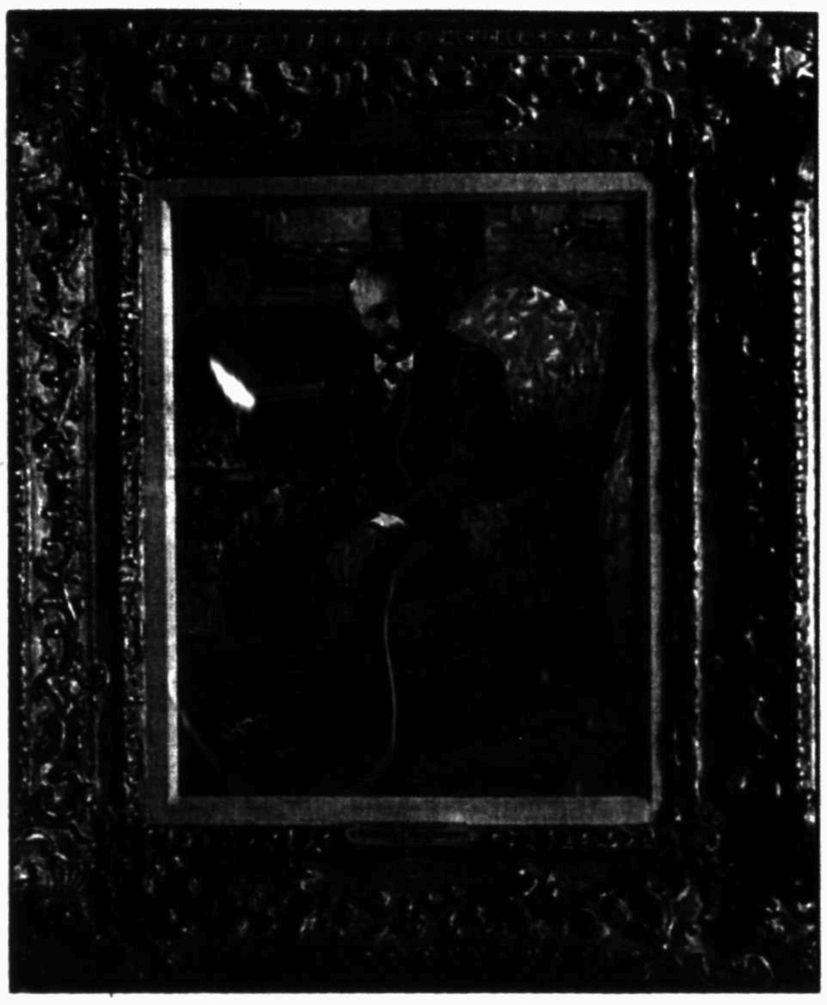
DON'T MISS A CHANCE TO VIEW THE WEITZENHOFFER COLLECTION

The Single Most Important Gift of French Impressionist Art to a Public University

November 14, 2000–January 14, 2001

Clara Weitzenhoffer

The Weitzenhoffer Collection, virtually unexhibited for the past 50 years, will be on display for public viewing for the first time at the University of Oklahoma's museum of art beginning Nov. 14. The collection of French Impressionist paintings known to only a handful of scholars comprises 33 works of art, including 22 paintings by such artists as Degas, Gauguin, Monet, Pissarro, Renoir, Toulouse-Lautrec, Van Gogh, and Vuillard. The Weitzenhoffer Collection is another example of OU's academic leadership.



Vincent Van Gogh's Portrait of Alexander Reid (ca. 1886-88)

The collection is on view through Jan. 14, 2001, at the Fred Jones Jr. Museum of Art on OU's Norman campus. After its premiere two-month public display, the collection will not be on view again until an addition to the museum is completed.

Announcement of the gift, which represents the single most important collection of French Impressionist paintings ever given to a public university, was made in September. The gift was the result of a bequest by the late Clara Weitzenhoffer. She and her husband, Aaron Weitzenhoffer, were pioneer Oklahoma civic leaders.

OU'S ACADEMIC LEADERSHIP

Aaron Weitzenhoffer

• OU ranks at the top per capita in the nation among all comprehensive publicuniversities in the enrollment of National Merit Scholars.

• OU has the highest ranked student body at a public university in the history of Oklahoma. OU's 1999-2000 freshman class included over 290 State Regents Scholars, more than four times the number at the school in second place. State Regents Scholars rank in the top one-half of 1 percent in the nation in test scores.

• OU also ranks in the top five public universities in the United States in the graduation of Rhodes Scholars.

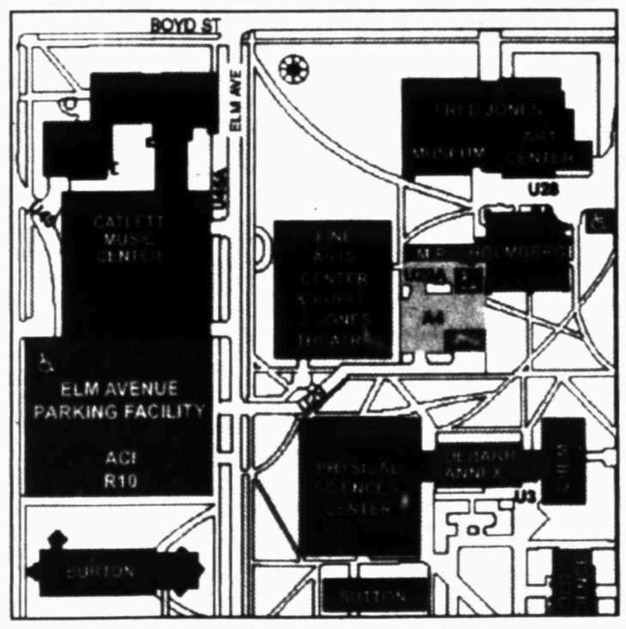
• The University of Oklahoma's Reach for Excellence Campaign just concluded with more than $514 million raised, placing OU in the top four in U.S. history among completed campaigns at public universities.

• The University also experienced one of the nation's most rapid increases in its donor base, which has risen from 17,000 in 1994 to more than 71,000 during the campaign.

• The Reach for Excellence campaign has pushed OU into the top 15 public universities in endowment, per capita, and almost tripled the number of faculty endowments.

• The University has established an Honors College with one of the strongest programs among public universities in the United States.

• The University of Oklahoma has the largest international exchange program among Big 12 universities and likely among all U.S. colleges and universities, holding 119 reciprocal agreements with universities in 51 nations on all continents.



The Fred Jones Jr. Museum of Art is located at 410 W. Boyd St., at the corner of Boyd Street and University Boulevard in Norman, Oklahoma. Exit Main Street downtown off I-35. Turn right on University Boulevard to Boyd Street. Parking is available in the nearby Elm Avenue Parking Facility. For group reservations to view the collection, call the museum at (405) 325-3272

Longhorns face life without Chris Mihm

By Jim Vertuno
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — The big man in the middle is gone. Texas can only hope its NCAA Tournament chances didn't leave with him.

For three years they had watched Mihm turn from a gangly freshman into a lottery draft pick.

"We'll be quicker," says coach Rick Barnes. "With Mihm, you were making sure you ran everything through him. We'll have more balance probably."

Mihm led Texas to a 24-9 finish and to the second round of the NCAA tournament last season. The Longhorns were a Top 25 fixture during the regular season and finished second in the talent-laden Big 12.

But Mihm's departure and the expired eligibility of hot-headed forward Gabe Muoneke leaves the Longhorns looking elsewhere for scoring and rebounding punch.

Barnes will depend heavily on junior forward Chris Owens and a slew of new players to step up.

Owens, at 6-9 and a muscular 245 pounds, came on strong late in the season when he replaced Muoneke in the starting lineup. Owens averaged 9.4 points and 5.6 rebounds last season.

The Longhorns also expect a lot of offense from transfer swingman Maurice Evans, who averaged 22.9 points as a sophomore at Wichita State in 1998-99.

Those two must show some defensive savvy as well. For Barnes, winning starts with defense, and the Longhorns don't have Mihm's shot-blocking and big body to clog up the middle anymore.

"Chris Owens and Maurice Evans know they can't get by just on their offense," Barnes said. "They have to do it on the defensive end, too."

Depth at guard will be a problem when the season starts Nov. 13 against Navy in the preseason National Invitation Tournament. Sophomore point guard Roosevelt Brown broke a bone in his hand, and shooting guard Darren Kelly is academically ineligible for the fall semester.

Kelly, who averaged 10 points last season and hit 45 percent of his 3-pointers, won't be allowed to play until after final exams in December.

"As a coach, you've got to look at it as a positive, that it will give some other guys a chance to develop quicker," Barnes said. "I can't plan on thinking he's definitely coming back. I've been doing this long enough to know there are no absolutes."

At forward, sophomore William Wyatt, and freshmen Brian Boddicker and Jason Thomas, will be expected to contribute early. All of them are strong and should help maintain the Longhorns' reputation as one of the most physical teams in the Big 12.

Barnes' challenge will be getting all the new players used to each other and a new system. He expects to substitute early and often as he develops a starting lin·up for conference play, which starts in January.

"With all the young guys out there, the scorer's table will probably look like Grand Central Station early in the year," Barnes said.

Longhorn Look

Coach: Rick Barnes: (3rd year, 43-22; 14th year overall, 245-156)

Last year's finish: 24-9, second in Big 12, lost to Louisiana State 72-64 in NCAA second round.

Welcome back: Forwards Chris Owens and William Wyatt, guard Darren Kelly.

Strengths: With Owens and Wichita State transfer Maurice Evans, 'Horns are still strong and athletic despite the loss of Mihm and the bullish Gabe Muoneke. Although Mihm was a force inside, Texas should be able to spread around the offense without him. Freshmen forwards James Thomas and Brian Boddicker have shown they can be physical.

Weaknesses: The double-trouble defensive muscle of Mihm and Muoneke will be missed. Depth is an early problem at guard. Kelly is academically ineligible for the fall semester and Roosevelt Brown broke a bone in his hand.

Quotable: "With all the young guys out there, the scorer's table will probably look like Grand Central Station early in the year," said Barnes, who expects to subsitute early and often as he tries to solidify his starting lineup before the Big 12 schedule starts.

Texas Tech men say added depth will count for more

■ New energy, more talent could help the Red Raiders make improvements.

By Pam Easton
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech's basketball team has found new energy and determination after adding six players, including five freshmen, who could help overcome depth problems which plagued the Red Raiders last year.

The catch: lots of inexperience coming off a losing season when the Red Raiders finished 12-16 overall and 3-13 in the Big 12.

"We're cautiously optimistic," Tech head Coach James Dickey said. "We are going to have to rely on some young guys this season and it depends on how fast they rise to the occasion"

It also depends on how fast returning players such as 6-foot-11 center Andy Ellis and 6-8 forward Cliff Owens can get back into their game after sitting out most or all of last season with injuries.

Ellis dislocated his shoulder as he blocked a Nebraska player. He missed the remaining 13 games after averaging 16.9 points and 8.9 rebounds.

A losing streak gripped the Red Raiders following Ellis' loss on the heels of a controversial 88-86 loss to Texas A&M when a final basket by the Aggies was counted, not counted and then counted again.

"We felt like last year we were in a position to make a run at the tournament," Dickey said. "But losing that ball game to A&M and then losing Andy during the following game at Nebraska — it was downhill from there."

Ellis' injury was just one among many as the beat-up Red Raiders continued a season in which they had already lost one player because of scholarship limitations imposed by the NCAA.

Owens, a starter, was redshirted because of ankle surgery. During his junior year, the forward had led his team with seven rebounds a game and secured an average of 10 points.

"I think depth hurt us a lot last year," guard Ron Hobbs said. "We had guys who were playing a lot of minutes and they were getting pretty banged up."

And each time another got injured, Owens said he could see the strain in his coach's face as he looked to the bench for a replacement.

"There were many times when you saw Coach Dickey look at the bench and he had his hands tied," Owens said. "It's tough to sit there watching and know you could be helping."

But after spending last season on the bench, Ellis and Owens are determined to get the newcomers up to speed.

"You have got to treat them like your little brother," Ellis said. "You've got to treat them like you love them to death because you know they are going to screw up, but you don't want them to do it too often."

By taking an approach that is firm but understanding, Ellis and Owens think their talented recruits, including 6-8 guard Jamal Brown from Fort Scott Community College in Kansas, might just be able to pull off a winning season.

"I want us to win 20 plus games and get in the NCAA tournament," Dickey said. "We're a young team to win the conference, but I would like to be a factor in the conference race."

With Ellis and Owens back, Dickey thinks his team will be competitive.

"You can look at Cliff and tell he's a lot bigger than all of us," Ellis said looking out to the court toward Owens. "He and I can play a two-man game, causing the other team to have to decide who they want to cover.

"It's a big help knowing you're going into a season with that kind of freedom."

That freedom is what Owens needs going into his final season as a collegiate player. He says most think the team won't be competitive this year, but he thinks otherwise.

"In a couple of years, I'll just be a fan," Owens said. "I want to get it done this year.

"We've just got to hit the ground running and all the new guys want to play. They want to win. That's something you'll take any day because we are all playing to make each other better."

Raider Report

Coach: James Dickey: (10th year, 157-105)

Last year's finish: 12-16, 3-13 Big 12.

Welcome back: Guards Ron Hobbs, Moses Malone, Jr.; centers Andy Ellis and Johnny Phillips; forwards Cliff Owens and Jayson Mitchell.

Wave goodbye: Guards Rayford Young and James Ware; forwards Mario Layne and Brodney Kennard.

Strengths: Depth and talent. Return of 6-8 Owens after undergoing knee surgery and sitting out all of last season.

Weaknesses: Inexperience of six new players, including five freshmen. Center Andy Ellis sat out 13 games last season and wasn't able to practice much this preseason due to a hand injury.

Quotable: "We're cautiously optimistic," Tech head Coach James Dickey said. "We are going to have to rely on some young guys this season and it depends on how fast they rise to the occasion"
