Inspecting a model home under construction at 1805 Webster St. are David Hail, left, and Neal Hail. Hail Builders, Inc., today announced a plan for two- and three-bedroom houses that will sell for $38,500 and are geared toward families making about $25,000. The new homes will be going up in northeast Midland, forming a new community in a now-vacant area.

Ground broken for 'new community'

Hail Builders, Inc., today dug into the ground at 1805 Webster St. and unearthed a new idea for housing geared toward the lower income family.

During a groundbreaking ceremony at that address, Hail Builders announced the plan for more than 300 houses in the northeast section of Midland designed to sell at $38,500.

This marks the first major plan that has surfaced recently aimed directly at the shortage in lower cost housing and in helping the family whose income falls below the requirements for a typical house in Midland.

Not only is the price lower than the average selling price of a new home in Midland — which hovers around $70,000 — but the plan encompasses a total package that involves a different form of financing to allow a person to qualify at a lower income level.

On top of that, all any applicant needs is $2,500 to move into one of the houses, according to David Hail, a member of the homebuilding family involved in the venture.

"WE WANT to make it as easy as possible for people to get into these houses," Hail said. "Anything over that $2,500, we'll pick up. It's all going to average out."

This $2,500 covers the down payment and pre-paid items. "We're paying all the closing costs," he added.

The new financing plan allows the homebuyer to start his or her monthly payments at a price that is 3 percent less than the current interest rate. Hail explained that it falls under a new program instituted about two months ago known as the Federal National Mortgage Association, or Fannie Mae, Buy Down program.

If the current interest rate is 18 percent, he said, the homebuyer will start his interest payments at 15 percent. It will increase 1 percent per year for three years until it comes back up to the 18 percent level, and will remain at that point throughout the remainder of the loan period.

Based on the interest rate of 18 percent, Hail figured that an applicant would need an income of $25,000, whether it be a one-income or two-income family, and the average monthly payment is estimated to be about $530.

"The graduated payment plan may sound high, but you compare it to other things around town," he said.

Another new aspect to the loan program is that the applicant won't be required to qualify at the higher interest rate, but at the lower figure.

THE THINKING behind this change, Hail reasoned, is that the homebuyer's income will go up over the years to cover the increased interest payment.

These 1,050 square foot houses will be two- and three-bedroom with a stove, hookups for washer and dryer, carpeting, central heating and air conditioning, a carport and one bath.

The first houses will be going up on Webster Street, where a model home is under construction at the 1805 address, and in the 1800 and 1900 blocks of English Drive. The area is bounded by Fairgrounds Road and Scharbauer Drive.

The homes will be decorated in earth tones; however, the buyer won't

O'Connor surviving Senate probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — After one day of parrying with generally friendly and consistently courteous Senate inquisitors, Supreme Court nominee Sandra Day O'Connor has the look of a winner.

At her first day of confirmation hearings Wednesday, several senators tried to draw her into a discussion on her views on such explosive social issues and weighty legal problems as abortion, busing, the death penalty, Supreme Court jurisdiction, citizen access to the federal courts and the rule barring the use of evidence obtained illegally.

They usually failed.

Mrs. O'Connor, the first woman nominated for the nation's highest court, did say that she personally is opposed to abortion. That was something less than condemnation of the so-called pro-choice argument, and she otherwise escaped controversy by repeatedly stating that substantive responses would be improper.

The Senate Judiciary Committee and crowd of onlookers jamming the Senate hearing room thus obtained little insight about what to expect from Mrs. O'Connor during her anticipated lifetime Supreme Court membership.

They did find out that Mrs. O'Connor can sit for long periods of time. When asked late Wednesday if she desired a short break in the questioning, she opted to forge ahead.

They also found out she did her homework. When Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, quizzed her about a recent Supreme Court ruling, Mrs. O'Connor had to correct him. The ruling, she pointed out correctly, dealt with the need to notify parents of certain young girls who seek abortions, not the need to obtain parental consent, as Hatch suggested.

And she showed that she talks like a lawyer, with a particular fondness for inserting between a general statement and a specific one the phrase "to wit."

If confirmed, Mrs. O'Connor has some elemental on-the-job training ahead. For example, she several times Wednesday referred to "Justice Burger."

As someone close to Warren E. Burger is sure to point out, his title is chief justice. Reference to the "chief" is sufficient.

And Mrs. O'Connor once referred to the Supreme Court's "marble doors." She won't find anything but bronze and white oak doors in the marble palace on Capitol Hill.

Mrs. O'Connor appeared most at ease when introducing her family, and couldn't resist making a mother's wish.

Morse murder trial to be in Big Spring

The murder trial of 19-year-old Steve Morse, accused of killing a Midland teen-age girl on Feb. 17, will be tried in Big Spring's 118th State District Court beginning Oct. 12, Judge Pat Baskin of Midland's 142nd District Court said Wednesday.

The trial site was switched from Midland to Big Spring in the wake of pre-trial newspaper publicity which the defense claimed was adverse to its client and which would preclude his getting a fair trial in Midland County. The case was to be tried in Midland on the week of Aug. 17.

Morse is charged with the bludgeoning death of 17-year-old high school junior Karen Wynell Rickey in a field southeast of Midland.

Court-appointed defense attorneys David Lashford and Al Schorre had made the proposal for a change of venue. The defendant, a Californian who had moved to Midland around the first of the year, was employed on a geophysical company's seismographic crew.

The Reporter-Telegram's Aug. 16 report, which became the basis for the change of venue, quoted excerpts of a psychiatrist's evaluation of Morse. The report traced Morse's alleged drug and alcohol abuse and noted his suffering "selective amnesia" due to the "terrible tragic" death of Ms. Rickey.

Baskin said Wednesday that he will preside over the trial, which is to begin with the selection of a jury at 9 a.m. Oct. 12.

Prosecuting the case will be District Attorney Vern Martin and his first assistant, David Joers.

Morse has been held in jail in lieu of posting bond since his arrest here in February.

Jackson claims he 'accidentally' shot Midland grocer

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Lee Roy Jackson, a 34-year-old ex-convict who faces life imprisonment if he is convicted of the March 12 shooting death of Midland grocer William Isaac "Bill" Dennis, 61, testified Wednesday afternoon that he "accidentally" shot the grocer while the two were in a verbal clash.

Jackson, who is facing trial before a six-man, six-woman jury in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court, is being tried for the murder of Dennis, who was described as "a nice fellow" by a prosecution witness, and for unlawfully carrying a weapon in a premises licensed for the sale of alcoholic beverages.

If convicted of either offense, Jackson may be adjudged an habitual criminal and sentenced to life in prison.

Jackson, who claimed that he'd had run-ins with Dennis earlier in March, testified that he had entered Dennis's business known as Bill's Drive Inn Grocery at 1308 N. Lamesa Road shortly before 9 a.m. that day and ordered a pack of menthol cigarettes and a package of minted chewing gum. Jackson said that Dennis slammed the two items on the counter, as he "proceeded to pay" for the gum and cigarettes.

" 'Nigger,' " Jackson said the grocer rebuked him, "I told you from the beginning...that if I (Jackson) didn't like the way he (Dennis) run the business to stay out of it."

Jackson said he had accused the grocer earlier that week of short changing him. Before that incident, the grocer had suspected Jackson of shoplifting and had attempted to search him as he was leaving the store, the defendant claimed. Jackson indicated that he took affront to what he perceived as the grocer's negative attitude toward him.

"We exchanged a few words with each other," Jackson said on the witness stand. "He called me a few dirty names, and I called him a few more names."

Jackson then said the grocer "leaned over the counter to strike me on my face" with what he said he supposed was a club under the counter. Jackson said he had heard "no more than a rumor" of Dennis keeping a weapon in the store.

Jackson said that he became "excited" and "scared," as Dennis was reaching under the counter and a .38-caliber handgun he (Jackson) was holding "discharged."

Defense attorney Edward T. Garza asked Jackson if he had intended to kill the grocer.

"No, sir, I sure didn't," Jackson said. "He kept reaching under the counter and cursing, (saying) what he was going to do to me."

Jackson, who contended that the pistol accidentally fired, did not say at what point he drew the firearm from his waistband.

After Dennis was shot, Jackson said that his "mind was so confused, I panicked, got in my car" and headed for Arkansas, where he was arrested. Stacks of money on Dennis's grocer counter at the time of the shooting went "untouched," earlier testimony suggested.

Further testimony Wednesday disclosed that Jackson has been convicted on several felony offenses, including burglary, theft, escape, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and robbery by assault and has served penitentiary time since the late 1960s.

In his own defense, Jackson said on the witness stand he had been carrying the pistol, which belonged to his mother, since his life was threatened two or three weeks before March 12 by 31-year-old James Allen "Frog" Johnson, who, Jackson said, had killed his brother and wounded his mother in a bar brawl last year.

Jackson said that he had been "in-

Energas, Inc. postpones planned rate increase

Energas, Inc. has postponed its plans to increase gas rates to 63 West Texas communities, including Midland, until a study of the rate proposal is completed.

That study should be done by late September, according to one official's estimate.

Energas had intended for the rate increase to become effective Sept. 4. The gas company, a division of Pioneer Natural Gas Co., had presented the hike to the cities July 31. The proposal called for an 18.5 percent rate hike, which would increase the area's cost of gas by $15 to $18 million per year.

Jerry Searcy, administrative assistant to the vice president of corporate communications, explained Pioneer retained an independent consulting firm to evaluate the company's rates with its income. That study showed the West Texas system of Energas was bringing in $22.4 million less than the cost of service in 1980, he said.

But cities in the Energas system selected its own 13-member steering committee to study the hike. That panel met Aug. 31 and chose McMorries and Associates of Amarillo as engineering consultants, Pampa public accountant Wayne Brown, and the firm of McGuiness, Lockridge and Kilgore of Austin as legal advisers.

The study group has 120 days from the time the new rates were announced to analyze the proposal and come up with its own recommendation. If the cities' proposal isn't acceptable to Energas officials, the case can be appealed to the Texas Railroad Commission.

According to Energas, the average residential customer pays $3.40 per 1,000 cubic feet of gas per month and uses about 9,000 cubic feet per month. Under the new rates, average price would be $4.03 per thousand cubic feet. The increase mean the average bill would jump from $30.32 per month to $35.93.

Energas serves 189,000 customers ranging from Pampa to south of Odessa.

Excessive shortfall jolts Reagan's economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's embattled economic program received another jolt today — a forecast from congressional economists that the budget shortfall for next year will be nearly $23 billion above Reagan's target of $42.5 billion.

Alice M. Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, added that in 1984, the year for which Reagan has promised a balanced budget, there will be a $50 billion deficit.

"It will be very difficult and painful to reduce spending sufficiently to balance the budget by 1984," Ms. Rivlin told the House Budget Committee.

The committee chairman, Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., opened the hearing noting earlier criticisms that Democratic congressional leaders had leveled at the administration's economic plans.

"There is little pleasure to be derived from warnings unheeded," Jones said. "I can only hope that the American people soon will recognize the economic fiasco we face."

While report from the budget office, which provides independent budget data for Congress, indicated a gradual decline in budget deficits over the next several years, the report said "that budget balance will not be attained by 1984 unless the proposed growth of defense spending is curtailed, non-defense spending is scaled back even further or increases in revenues are generated."

Ms. Rivlin said that if the administration's commitment to growth in defense spending continues and the government's benefit payments to individuals which are mandated under existing law are kept at present levels, then "you would simply have to close down the rest of the government" to attain a balanced budget by 1984.

Meanwhile, the report included an economic forecast predicting "substantial improvement in the economy compared with the lackluster performance of recent years."

Reagan, Begin made progress in 'charting course' for Mid East peace

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today he and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin "have made progress in charting a course" for an approach to a Middle East peace in months ahead.

Reagan offered no details in a statement following two days of meetings with Begin, but told reporters, "We will work together to maintain the peace that was concluded between Israel and Egypt and to build on that peace and broaden it."

"The United States stands ready to advance the peace process in any way that is useful," Reagan said, with Begin standing at his side.

U.S. officials had said in advance of Begin's visit that it would be crucial in determining whether there is any life left in the 1979 Camp David accords between Egypt and Israel for achieving a Middle East peace.

Reagan's statement seemed to indicate there was still useful life left in the accords.

However, Begin made no specific mention in his departure statement of any progress toward an approach to peace, although he said Israel favors peace.

Begin stressed the two leaders had agreed in their talks on a common strategy for confronting Soviet aggression in the Middle East. He announced Wednesday that they had decided to work out an agreement for strategic cooperation.

While not yet defined, such an agreement could lead to an expanded U.S. military presence in Israel.

Reagan referred in his departure statement to the need to jointly counter Soviet aggression, but he said other nations in the Middle East also have a role to play.

"We will work together with you and with our other friends in the region to counter Soviet aggression and to strengthen security in all countries," Reagan said.

"The United States will remain committed to Israel's security and well-being," he added.

Neither leader made any reference to their disagreement over the proposed U.S. sale of sophisticated radar plans to Saudi Arabia, which Begin claims would threaten Israel's security.

However, both sides had decided in advance to play down the disagreement to keep it from dominating the news coverage of their meetings, which were the first ever between them.

Reagan told Begin they had "created new bonds of understanding between the United States and Israel, renewed snd strengthened our very special friendship."

Begin said their talks were "very fruitful."

He made clear that the emerging strategic relationship with the United States would not involve U.S. forces in defending Israel. He said there was a "clear distinction between the defense of Israel and the defense of regional and global interests of both nations."

"As far as the defense of Israel is concerned, it is our problem," Begin said. "We will never ask any nation to send its soldiers to defend us."

But the two nations will work together to defend against Soviet threats, he said.

"On this issue we will work together," Begin said. "We will plan together, we will execute those plans together, in agreement both for the benefit of the United States and Israel and for the free world at large."

The proposed accord on a closer military relationship with Israel was announced by Begin and appeared intended to offset any impression that the AWACS sale meant the U.S. interest in Israel's security had declined.

Begin said details on that relationship would be worked out by Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

"There will be ongoing consultations over an extended period," Haig said later. "A number of possibilities are under discussion.

A Defense Department official, who asked not to be identified, said it could include joint military exercises, storing of U.S. military supplies in Israel for use in an emergency and Israeli support in the event of a U.S. conflict with the Soviet Union.

He said use of Israeli bases by the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force "is not on our list" of things to be discussed. He declined to say whether the sharing of military intelligence, such as from U.S. satellites, was under consideration, although other officials haven't ruled it out.

have a choice. Each house will be constructed with solid brick on the front and siding on the rest of the structure. All houses come with a 10-year Homeowners Warranty (HOW), which is backed by the Hail builders, he said.

If someone isn't pleased with the house before moving in, the down payment will be refunded, he added.

"It's just a basic starter home," he noted. "We've tried to keep our costs as low as possible."

One way to reduce costs has come through their designing a lower-cost house. And a second important factor has been their obtaining lots that already have been developed.

"IT COSTS SO MUCH to put in water and sewer lines and streets. To put in this type of housing in an undeveloped area for this price is almost impossible," Hail explained. "The only way we could see to do it was to go on the east side of town and buy the developed areas."

Although some longtime Midlanders have seen a stigma with the eastside, Hail said the thinking may be changing with the new residents from the North and Midwest seeking housing. When completed, the Hails' development essentially will be a new community in east Midland.

"Getting into the home-buying stream is difficult," Hail noted. "People are losing out in two ways with inflation. The purchase price of a dollar is going down and the price of homes is going up. Once you get into the home market, it's a lot easier the second time."

The project was started about six months ago, said Hail, after his company noticed they had no problem hiring workers; but these people wouldn't stay long because they couldn't find housing.

"Our purpose is to provide lower cost housing to help Midland," said Hail.

"We feel fantastic about what we're doing. This is probably one of the most worthwhile things we've done. I sense that we're doing something for Midland and not just ourselves."

Backing the Hail builders in putting together their plan were the City Council and The First National Bank of Midland.

"There has been a true concern among these people to solve these housing problems. And the First National Bank has shown extreme enthusiasm and support for what we're doing," he said.

Proposal selected to upgrade windowpane area

Midland County Commissioners on Wednesday selected a consulting engineering firm's proposal to design the scheme for upgrading a windowpane area in south Midland. The board, during a special session, also opted for the Midland architectural firm of Neuhardt & Babb to work with Dallas architect Jack Wood in planning the proposed Midland County Public Library in The First National Bank's Eagle Plaza.

The commissioners selected Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, consulting engineers, planners and architects, to provide the engineering and architectural expertise in carrying out the three-year $1.6 million improvements in the city-enclosed "rural" neighborhood, which has need for water and sewer lines, paving and improved housing.

"We feel like we have developed a very intimate knowledge (of Midland), especially in the windowpane area, said Kyle Cooper of the engineering firm.

In selecting the firm, the commissioners shut out the engineering firm of Esmond-Haner Inc. of Midland and Odessa. Representing that firm were Bill Rapp and Max Richardson.

Since last spring, Parkhill, Smith & Cooper has been assisting Midland County in gauging the need for improvements in the windowpane area, a half-square mile to three-quarter square mile section between Interstate 20 and U.S. Highway 80 and bordering the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

The area is one of several under-developed neighborhoods surrounded by the city but which are not in the city limits.

The proposed improvements, funded by a Community Development Block Grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), will ineluding water and sewer improvements, paving and drainage, a day care center in the city's Taylor Park, razing dilapidated houses and upgrading others.

In the library project, Midland architects Charles Newhardt and E.W. Babb Jr. will be working with Jack Wood of Wood & Associates in planning the proposed four-story library. The bank has volunteered to contribute $5.5 million toward construction of the library, which will be in the bank's envisioned Eagle Plaza and near the proposed 40-story tower.

PBPC gives priorities to criminal justice programs

The Permian Basin Planning Commission gave favorable comment to all items on the agenda Wednesday in its monthly board meeting.

The board accepted the review and comment of the Regional Development Review Committee on the grant application from the city for Midland Regional Airport and Air Park improvements.

The grants, totaling $2,942,585 for Midland Regional Airport and $2,372,517 for Midland Air Park, will be used for improvements to the runways and lighting at both facilities. In addition, Midland Regional Airport funds will be used to install a control cable to the new air traffic control tower. This will give the tower control of airfield lighting circuits, and a closed-circuit television security monitoring system.

Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation, commented that the airport assistance program, which was to end in 1980, has been extended one year.

"The money must be considered in September," Banks said. "There is $450 million in the assistance fund, but this money is spent all over the U.S."

The board also gave priorities to five new criminal justice programs. Ten 1982 projects were presented to the board, but five were existing programs. The board listed the new programs in order of their priority as: Ward County CCTV, Ector County CCTV, Midland Sheriff's Communication System, Permian Basin Regional Technical Equipment and Crane County Sheriff's Teletype.

Existing programs are Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Lamesa Police Department Juvenile Division, Midland Independent School District On-Campus Suspension and Big Spring Major Crime Task Force. Total cost of these priority programs is $51,463.

In other areas, the board gave favorable comment to approving the 1981-82 Comprehensive Employment Training Act Plan, the grant application from West Texas Opportunities for continuation funding of the Head Start Program and authorization to submit an application for the Three-Year Plan Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging to the Texas Department on Aging.

Police investigate burglaries

Two burglary complaints were under investigation by police today.

In the first, Janet Scott of 3801 Maxwell Ave. told officers a rug and assorted jewelry were taken from her residence. No dollar loss was placed on the items. Entry was gained by prying open a window.

And Kenneth Dickson, 3601 Andrews Highway, said a gold necklace and a jar of change worth a total of $340 were missing from his home. Entry was gained by breaking a window.

No rain expected

Partly cloudy conditions are expected to reign at least through Friday, though no additional rainfall is expected.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport recorded an official trace of precipitation for the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today, bringing the month's total to 0.82 inch and the 1981 amount to 11.16 inches.

Mild temperatures continued to greet Permian Basin residents, with the high Wednesday reaching only 81, compared to the all-time record for the date of 98 set in 1977. The low, meanwhile, dipped to 53, still well off the record mark of 51 degrees established in 1935.

The high should reach the low 90s for the next couple of afternoons, while the low will be in the lower 60s.

Winds are expected to be 5-10 mph tonight and 10-15 mph Friday.

Fugitive Crosson's girlfriend pleads guilty to aiding, abetting his escape

The girl friend of federal fugitive James "Cowboy" Crosson, and another woman pleaded guilty in federal court Wednesday to aiding and abetting Crosson's escape June 10 from the federal ward of Midland City Jail.

Another woman, 21-year-old Katy Havner of Monahans, pleaded guilty to misprision of a felony by having knowledge of the escape but failing to report it to law enforcement or court authorities.

Pleading guilty to helping Crosson escape were the girl friend, Mildred Sue Pittenger, 25, who admitted to driving the getaway car once Crosson sawed through the bars and stole away; and Donna Ruth Dotson, 29, who admitted to helping slip Crosson hacksaw blades on June 8.

Crosson, who was lodged in city jail while he was awaiting transfer to federal prison to serve a 10-year sentence on a drug conviction, and three other federal prisoners escaped and allegedly fled to Mexico.

The three women are to be sentenced by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton at 9 a.m. Sept. 23 in the courtroom in the George Mahon Federal Building.

Ms. Pittenger, an Odessa bar tender, and Mrs. Dotson, a housewife, each could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $2,500.

Ms. Havner could be sentenced to three years in prison.

Jackson says shooting 'accidental'

"Were you in fear of 'Frog,'" Garza asked his client.

formed that I was going to be killed" by Johnson.

On the date of the May 1980 offense, Johnson claimed that he had shot and killed Jackson's brother in self-defense and that the mother and a bystander were winged by stray slugs.

The jury was to deliberate today in the guilt-innocence phase of Jackson's trial following closing arguments by District Attorney Vern Martin and the defense attorney.

Odessa man sentenced five years probated term for evading taxes

Odessa businessman William H. Hopkins, 54, on Wednesday was sentenced to a five-year probated prison term after he had pleaded guilty in federal court to evading employment income taxes.

Hopkins, who was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, is to serve a six-month tenure at the Permian Community Program Center, an Odessa half-way house where federal prisoners are lodged when they are not working in regular jobs during rehabilitation. The remainder of the term is to be suspended.

Hopkins had pleaded guilty Aug. 25 to one of five felony counts listed in the indictment. He was operating Basin Sheet Metal Supply Co. in Odessa when he had failed to report and account for total employment taxes he withheld from his employees.

The government charged Hopkins with attempting to evade the business employment tax liability by filing fraudulent federal employment tax returns.

The maximum sentence for one count of evading taxes is a five-year prison term or a $10,000 fine or both.

The case was investigated by special agents of the Internal Revenue Service's Criminal Investigation Division in Lubbock.

Parachutist lands on World Trade Center

NEW YORK (AP) — A man parachuted from a low-flying plane onto the 1,325-foot south tower of the World Trade Center today.

The jumper was seized by Port Authority police, who said he identified himself as John Carta, 35, of New Rochelle, an unemployed construction worker who has been parachuting for 12 years.

He told authorities he was a former Green Beret combat soldier.

He refused to reveal the identity of the pilot of the plane or any others involved in the spectacular feat for fear of "getting them in trouble."

The authority said the jumper would be given a summons.

Official flying not fun

WASHINGTON (AP) — The excitement, the romance, the glamour of it all: flying across the country — sometimes even around the world — with the president of the United States.

To an outsider, it may seem attractive. Some, perhaps, even envy the presidential jet set. But what a way to see the sights.

An example in miniature came this week went President Reagan went to New York for Labor Day. He took along his usual entourage: a covey of Cabinet officers, a crush of bodyguards, several scrambling White House aides and a planeload of press, not to mention the flight crews and a variety of support people, from baggage handlers to telephone operators to Marine guards.

Reagan was welcomed by Mayor Ed Koch and Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Vacation is over

Labor Day means the end of vacation for millions of Americans. It is somewhat akin to New Year's Day as citizens ring out the old and ring in the new, putting behind us periods of pleasure and turning our attention to the duties and hard work that lie ahead.

No one knows this better, or is challenged more by it, than Congress and the president. They have before them post-vacation obligations and actions that will shape the course of the country for years to come.

Congressmen are back in their seats this week. No longer can they pigeonhole legislation they were happy to put aside for the summer recess. They will be faced with more of the president's fiscal proposals and again will be asked to wrestle with their consciences as they try to find a happy median between spending and saving the public's money.

It is President Reagan, who ended his vacation a few days before Labor Day, who really will be on the spot. He is caught between a rock and a hard place as he wrestles with a defense budget he has promised to increase and an overall budget he hopes to balance by 1984.

The rock will be represented in the next few days by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. He is the spokesman for an administration that last March proposed increasing Pentagon expenditures, more than doubling them, to $368 billion by 1986. On the other side will be the hardline Budget Director David Stockman, who says you can't have it both ways. He thinks defense funds will have to be cut as much as $30 billion if the budget-balancing act is to be achieved on schedule.

Vacation is indeed over for those who run our government and decide the nation's destiny. We trust their pre-Labor Day respites provided them with sufficient leisure and mental relaxation to do what is best for the nation in this crucial post-vacation period.

Supporting liberation

Egypt's President Anwar Sadat says "the West, and particularly the U.S., should support liberation movements everywhere." The advice seems too sweeping.

Sadat has the Namibian effort for freedom from South Africa mainly in mind, and certainly the U.S. should be sympathetic to peoples seeking to free themselves from foreign yokes. Washington has damaged itself in Third World eyes in the past by supporting colonial powers that tried to prevent the inevitable. And certainly the Communist camp has had too easy a time co-opting independence movements.

But to what extent should the U.S. back independence movements in Afghanistan and Eastern Europe? These cases involve liberation from the Soviet Union, and pose momentous complications.

Moreover, the U.S. often has been burned meddling in the problems of nations that it has not understood very well. One reason the CIA got such a bad name was its excessive readiness to ally itself with quirky factions in other countries.

Presumably Sadat is not referring to "liberation" struggles within independent countries, although that is the label appropriated by every manner of leftist revolutionary. The U.S. should be wary of becoming deeply entangled in armed rebellions. However, with due caution, America should seek to get out in front of social and political change in Third World countries, encouraging extensive reform and the kind of bloodless revolution that can prevent violent upheavals.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 10, the 253rd day of 1981. There are 112 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 10, 1945, Vidkun Quisling was sentenced to death in Norway for collaborating with Germany.

On this date:

In 1898, Austria-Hungary's Empress Elizabeth was assassinated by an Italian anarchist in Geneva, Switzerland.

In 1907, the British colony of New Zealand became a dominion.

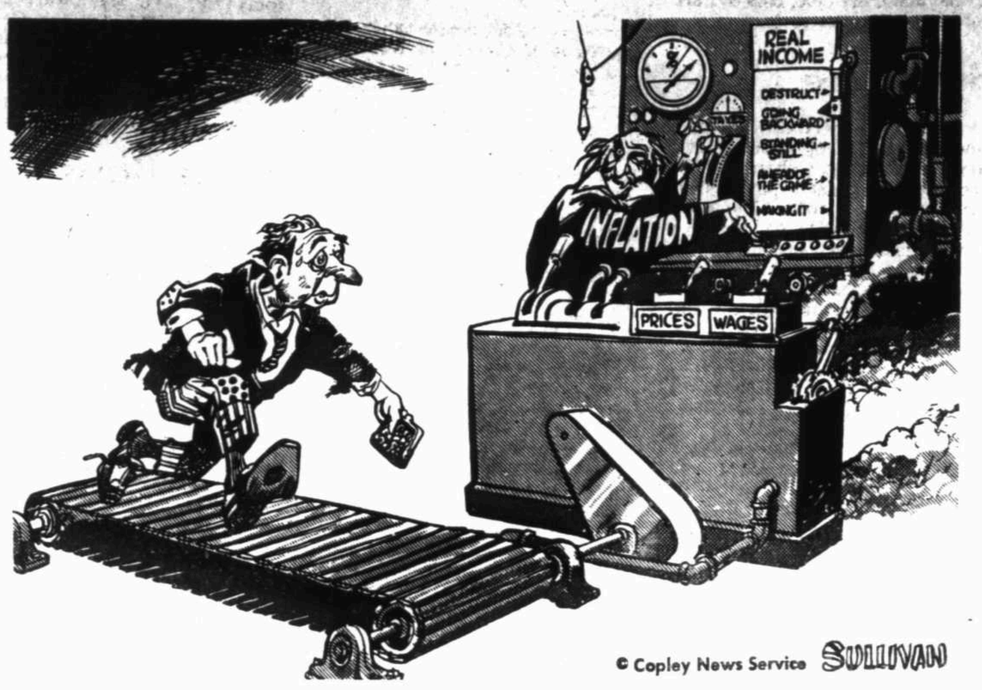
In 1939, Canada declared war on Germany.

And in 1979, British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington formally opened the Zimbabwe-Rhodesia peace talks in London.

Ten years ago: South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu said he would step down if he received less than 50 percent of the vote in a upcoming national election.

Five years ago: British and Yugoslav airliners collided over Zagreb, Yugoslavia, killing all 176 people aboard the two planes.

Thought for today: Keep your mouth shut, your eyes open. — Japanese proverb.



WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Colonial 'divorces' retirement associations

WASHINGTON — A newspaper expose apparently helped to break up a marriage of convenience between the nation's largest senior citizen organization and a major insurance company.

Jack Anderson

In 1977, I reported that the American Association of Retired Persons was misusing its cut-rate mailing privilege to the advantage of the Colonial Penn Group, Inc., one of the leading insurers of the elderly.

Postal investigators are now in the process of deciding whether to bring suit against the old folks' organization for letting Colonial Penn advertise its policies in letters sent out by the association and its affiliated group, the National Retired Teachers Association, at the bargain rate accorded to non-profit institutions.

As I reported four years ago, much of Colonial Penn's profits could be traced to the discount it got by mailing its promotional literature to AARP-NRTA's 13 million members at a rate that was roughly one-fourth that charged to other insurance companies paying the regular commercial postage rate.

Colonial Penn and AARP-NRTA began "divorce" proceedings in early 1979. But postal inspectors have continued their investigation. They've accumulated 500 complaints, testimony from senior citizens and other documents that fill more than 18 file-cabinet drawers. And it's beginning to look as if they're going to take legal action.

"With respect to the Inspection Service investigation of CPG, AARP, NRTA, there is a concrete prospect of future law enforcement proceedings," Chief Postal Inspector Kenneth Fletcher said in a sworn affidavit filed July 14.

He added that the Postal Service "is contemplating bringing a law enforcement proceeding against the parties for the recovery of postage alleged to be owed to the Postal Service as the result of the alleged abuse of the non-profit, reduced-rate mailing privileges of AARP and NRTA for the benefit of CPG."

But Fletcher said no recommendation has been made yet on a possible suit against the two groups and the insurance company.

Meanwhile, Colonial Penn is also the target of an investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission into possible violations stemming from the company's alleged failure to disclose to its stockholders the sweetheart relationship with the two senior citizens' groups.

In an affidavit filed June 16, an SEC enforcement branch chief, William McLucas said, "The Colonial Penn investigation is currently in progress and there exists a concrete prospect of future law enforcement proceedings." Another SEC document reiterates that "future enforcement proceedings are a reasonable prospect."

One indication of the close-knit relationship came in a 1979 report by the Wisconsin Insurance Commission, which said:

"The relationship between Colonial Penn and AARP-NRTA has always been characterized by an unusual interdependence. The two associations have come to depend heavily on funds from the company, legal advice and business services from the company, not to mention their reliance on Colonial Penn as a developer of all programs, be they insurance, travel, employment or membership solicitation."

The marriage of convenience worked both ways, of course. Colonial Penn has sold policies to some 2.5 million members of AARP-NRTA.

A spokesman for AARP told my associate Tony Capaccio the Postal Service document on possible legal action is "news to everybody." A Colonial Penn spokesman said, "We have not been apprised of it." Asked for comment on the SEC probe, he said, "As far as we know it's continuing and we have been cooperating."

STAY 'WAY FROM MY DOOR: The Russians, who lost 20 million people in World War II, are determined that any future war will be fought on someone else's turf. According to U.S. intelligence analysts, a primary goal of Kremlin strategists is to put their military might on the extreme borders of the Soviet Union.

"Because they intend any future European conflict to take place on Western soil, the Soviets stress the need for large, combat-ready forces in-place at the outset of hostilities," says one top-secret Pentagon analysis.

In the past decade, the experts noted, the Soviets have significantly increased their military manpower, tanks, artillery, armed helicopters and air defenses, and have given their tactical air forces increased performance and weapons-carrying capability.

In addition, the Pentagon analysts found that the Soviets are increasing their short-range missile power in hopes of keeping actual fighting far away from Mother Russia. None of these precautions, of course, would have any effect on long-range missiles in an all-out nuclear war.

SHOW AND TELL: When CIA Director William Casey sent 20 cartons of documents on his past business dealings over to the Senate Intelligence Committee, it made an impressive show of full disclosure. But it turned out that the mountain of evidence was a veritable molehill: One box of material, 19 boxes of copies.

Wood-chopping phase of Reagan presidency meets reality

WASHIGTON — Albert Einstein said that chopping wood is satisfying because you see the results of your work immediately. For today's' most eminent chopper, the president, the presidency has been like chopping wood: instan gratification. But before the fields are again white with daisies, he will see gratifications delayed.

George F. Will

Focusing on the economic program has been an excuse for not dealing with such "social issues" (why is the economy not a "social" issue?) as abortion, school prayer, and capital punishment. Soon the economy may make those other issues welcome a respite.

The idea that Reagan "controls" Congress is peculiar. Republicans control the Senate, but anyone who thinks that means Reagan controls the Senate has never met a senator. Was Republican Bob Dole, chairman of the finance committee, more docile regarding Reagan's program than the previous chairman, Russell Long, would have been? Who is leading opposition against the president's plan to sell AWACS aircraft to Saudi Arabia? Oregon's Robert Packwood, a Republican.

Democrats control the House and when the president proposed cutting the Social Security minimum benefit, 174 of 191 Republicans voted with Democrats to endorse the benefit. If Reagan "controls" Congress, why did he not get the "clean" tax bill he wanted, instead of the usual gaudy Christmas tree?

Ironies abound. The man who criticizes federal power has used power to obliterate a trade union. Conservatives, who you might think would deplore a plebiscitary presidency, rejoice because their man used television to incite a blizzard of telephone calls and telegrams to Congress. Most of the callers and senders of telegrams probably knew little about the tax alternative they were stampeded into clamoring for. Imagine what conservatives such as Edmund Burke or John Adams would have thought about that. Fortunately, the use of television as a cattle prod to move a herd of telephoners is not something that can be done often.

Conservatives talk of revitalizing government below the federal level, but new policies adversely affect America's 80,000 other governments, in four ways. Federal aid is declining. Federal tax cuts, especially for business, cut resources in the approximately 40 states that "couple" taxes to federal rates. Federal tax cuts have raised the probability of large federal deficits and borrowing, thereby depressing the bond market, which state and local governments use. (A state utility recently had to sell its bonds by offering yields of 15 percent — tax free. How many local leaders want to commit their communities to 20 to 30-year obligations at today's rates?)

Furthermore, cuts in corporate taxes, as well as creation of tax-exempt "All Savers" certificates, will reduce demand for tax-exempt municipals. All things considered, it is misleading to say state or local governments are "free" to assume the burden of services the federal government is relinquishing.

The most entertaining irony of the autumn is that although Reagan preaches respect for markets, the financial markets are not expressing respect for his program. Even the Wall Street Journal, the Vatican of the Church of Supply-Siders, says the balanced budget of 1984 is "a dream, not a forecast."

The venerable Alan Greenspan, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and currently an "outside" adviser to Reagan, says that in the next six months the administration must calm the financial markets. It must do so, he says, by convincing them that it can pass enough additional large budget cuts to hold down deficits, and hence hold down federal borrowing, thereby (or so the theory goes) holding down interest rates.

But Social Security and defense account for about 60 percent of the budget. Regarding Social Security, remember that in 1980 Reagan's key task was to establish his place in the political mainstream. A key to doing this was his acceptance speech at the Detroit convention, and perhaps the key sentence in it was: "It is essential that the integrity of the Social Security system be preserved." That sentence may be carefully ambiguous, but it was meant to be heard as: No cuts.

Regarding defense, the secretary of defense said, just six months ago: "It is the across-the-board suppression of past defense budgets that is the direct cause of the need now for across-the-board increases....We do not believe we can afford to temporize any longer in the face of the Soviet threat; the time for taking our time has ended."

So has the easy, wood-chopping part of Reagan's presidency.

Fair welcomes local artists

To The Editor:

Two Midland artists have sent letters to the editor about being excluded from a local art sale. This letter is to inform them that there is an art sale which has been held in Midland for the last eight years. The Midland Jayceettes IX Annual Arts And Crafts Fair will be held at the Midland Park Mall November 20-21.

Any artists from Midland or elsewhere may enter as long as they have original works and/or hand-crafted items. All proceeds from this sale go back in the community.

Last year, a wheelchair was purchased for a woman who didn't have the money to purchase one. A scholarship was given to a young man so he could be helped by the Deaf and Hard of Hearing Organization. Recreational equipment was purchased for young adults at the MHMR Center. Many other projects were also conducted to help the community. If you are interested in applying, please write me for an application at P.O. Box 5105, Midland, 79704.

Trapped tennants

To The Editor:

I would like to comment further on Lowell Branum's letter entitled "Robber's roost" in the paper of Sept 6, 1981.

There is definitely a grave "sin" going on in this great city of ours. They do call it "due to increased costs," etc., all kinds of humble-jumble talk. What they are doing is "robbery" and that is a crime I thought. I am a tennant in an older apartment building here in Midland. Our rent has increased every four to six months at a rate of $10-20 per month — until now. Our rent has gone up $90 a month starting Oct. 1. These people are robbing us with their typewriters. We apartment dwellers are trapped — there is no where to go. We have to pay what they say. Where does it stop? How about all you apartment people standing up. Let's get this price gouging stopped! It's getting out of hand now.

Help appreciated

To The Editor:

Not until we had need for any of our police assistance did we think to appreciate it fully.

Two suspects were caught after running from our garage Wednesday afternoon in an attempt to burglarize our car.

I am referring to the quick response we had with Officers Matthews and Rice. Officer Matthews gave chase and helped on his off-duty hours.

Office Rice assumed full responsibility, apprehended the two would be thiefs and found the stolen item for us.

We send out thanks and compliments for alert, courteous and underpaid public servants.

He likes it

To The Editor:

Traditionally one of the attractions of Septemberfest has been the exhibit of the works of artists and craftsmen from all over the Southwest who come to Midland once a year for this special occasion.

It's part of the festival, carnival atmosphere, like the circus coming to town, and for me a large part of the anticipation and excitement of Septemberfest is in the opportunity to visit with these out-of-town artists and see their works. That's a part of Septemberfest that I hope Las Manos never changes.

Urban League head plans to resign

NEW YORK (AP) — Saying it's "time to pass the torch," Vernon E. Jordan has announced he will resign as president of the National Urban League to join a prestigious law firm in Washington, D.C.

Jordan, who has headed the non-profit, non-partisan league since 1971, said Wednesday he will depart on Dec. 31 to work in the nation's capital for the Dallas law firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer & Feld. Robert Strauss, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is a partner in the firm.

One of the nation's leading civil rights spokesmen and the target of a shooting on May 29, 1980, Jordan said neither his health nor the still-unsolved attack in Fort Wayne, Ind., had anything to do with his decision.

"I contemplated a 10-year job from the beginning. Ten years of hard work suggests that it's time to pass the torch," he said. "My resignation is based on the belief that it is time for a change, personally and institutionally."

The 46-year-old black leader said that although he would be "off the front line, from time to time I will speak my piece ... One can resign from the leadership, but not from the troops. I'm still black. I still care. I'm still committed."

A seven-member search committee has been appointed to assist the board of trustees in selecting a successor.

"I leave the leadership of the Urban League with pride in what we have been able to accomplish; disappointment with the halt in progress toward equality; sadness at leaving my colleagues and friends, and exhiliration at the prospect of a new career," Jordan said at a crowded news conference.

Jordan, a frequent critic of the Reagan administration, said there has been a halt in progress by the civil rights movement because of "the vast majority of the American poeple who are reneging on the commitments of the 1960s. And this is being exacerbated by this administration."

Jordan first gained national attention as a 25-year-old law clerk when he led a back student, Charlayne Hunter, through a screaming mob of whites trying to prevent her from integrating the University of Georgia.

Vernon E. Jordan Jr. is shown passing in front of a banner at the Urban League's headquarters after announcing he will resign effective Dec. 31. Jordan plans to become a partner in the Washington, D.C., office of a Dallas-based law firm.

On June 15, 1971, he was named as successor of Whitney M. Young Jr., executive director of the Urban League. The title was changed to president several years ago.

Jordan left his post at the United Negro College Fund to take over the helm of an organization that now operates programs in 118 cities with 30,000 volunteers.

Tickets for Al Langford fete on sale

Ticket sales end Friday afternoon for a banquet honoring retired Midland College president Dr. Al G. Langford. The dinner, sponsored by the college's Board of Trustees and Foundation, will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Midland College Chaparral Center.

"We feel Dr. Langford was a dynamic force in the creation, early development and recent growth of this community's higher education facility," Reagan H. Legg, MC trustee and chairman of the banquet committee, said. "His postive leadership and enthusiasm helped Midland College become one of the finest comprehensive community colleges in the state, and indeed, in the nation. The trustees and foundation members feel this dinner is an appropriate way to express the community's appreciation for his service, and we encourage everyone to attend and help us honor Dr. Langford."

Legg said that the banquet program will be short, with several persons making brief remarks about Langford's service to education.

Tickets are available from the Chaparral Center, Commercial Bank and Trust Co., Western State Bank, Midland National Bank, Texas National Bank and the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

There will be an optional social hour beginning at 7 p.m. The prime rib dinner will be catered by the Midland Hilton.

5 indicted in bar shooting

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A Webb County grand jury has indicted five Laredo men, including three brothers and their cousin, on charges of murder and participating in organized criminal activity in connection with the slaying of three convicted drug dealers in a Laredo bar.

Those indicted Tuesday included Ramiro DeLeon, 33; Eduardo DeLeon, 24; and Pedro Martinez, 24, who were being held in the Webb County Jail in lieu of $500,000 bond. The two other men indicted — Rene Garado DeLeon and Erasmo DeLeon, the brothers' cousin — have not been arrested.

Daniel Timothy Valdez, 27, of Laredo, was indicted in July for murder in the same slayings and released on $250,000 bond.

The men are accused of the June 30 gangland-style killings of Olvido Ortiz, 44, of Corpus Christi; his brother, Ramiro Ortiz, 35; and Daniel Martinez Sifuentes, 49, of Corpus Christi at Jeanie's Bar in Laredo June 30.

The victims had each been convicted on various drug charges, authorities said.

Smuggler planes crowd nation's busy airways

MIAMI (AP) — Smugglers trading in illegal drugs and aliens are dodging detection in often-antiquated planes that fly without lights, skim low over the ocean and "hide" behind commercial aircraft, say aviation officials.

This illicit air force is operating in some of the nation's busiest air lanes.

While Roger Jones, a Federal Aviation Administration official in Miami, said these planes are still too few to pose a hazard, one air traffic controller told The Miami Herald recently that he wouldn't fly after dark because of the smugglers.

The planes avoid radar detection by flying on the tails of commercial airliners or carrying sophisticated radar scrambling gear that befuddles air traffic control as they cross the nation's southern borders.

"We know for a fact that the aircraft they're flying aren't airworthy," said Milford Conarroe of the Federal Aviation Administration.

"If they know there's a scheduled airline, they'll tuck in real close on him. Airplanes don't have rear-view mirrors. So they'll show up on radar as a single blip. They get within a few feet of them sometimes," Conarroe said from his office in El Paso, Texas, where he works for the Drug Intelligence Agency.

The federal agency, attached to the FAA and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, was set up six years ago to gather intelligence about drug smuggling.

"It's not something that's done every night. But it's one of the techniques," he said of the illegal flights.

The eastern coast of southern Florida is lined with 38 airports between Key West and Stuart. More than 8,000 takeoffs and landings are recorded a day, making the area's airways the fourth or fifth busiest in the nation, according to the FAA. The figures don't include operations at airports without control towers or at Homestead Air Force Base in southern Dade County.

No one knows how many planes carry marijuana and cocaine into Florida each week, but officials insist the numbers are high.

"We just simply say there's a god-awful number of them" said William Small, director of the El Paso center.

The concern is underscored by seizures of illegal aircraft and frequent crashes.

In 1980, out of the 290 smuggler aircraft seized in the United States, 179 were confiscated in Florida.

Besides drugs, more and more illegal aliens, primarily Colombians and Haitians, are being flown into the United States, U.S. immigration officials say.

Officials say drug runners buy old planes that can be ditched after one run or go to government auctions to bid on outdated military planes with special navigational aids.

Connaroe said many of the pilots are unskilled. Although no in-flight collisions have been linked to illegal activities, said Stan Kukla, a Miami air traffic control supervisor, the potential obviously exists.

Funeral directors remove the body of one of six people found shot to death Wednesday in Chicopee, Mass., in what police said was an apparent murder-suicide. The victoms were found in the home of Richard Grochmal.

Martin makes court appearance

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Mike Martin, charged with lying to a grand jury when he denied staging his own shooting, made a brief court appearance today with one of the state's most widely known criminal lawyers.

Martin, R-Longview, appeared for a matter of seconds at a docket call, and his arraignment on aggravated perjury charges was set for Sept. 24. His lawyer, Frank Maloney of Austin, said he will plead innocent.

Maloney, whose past clients included former House Speaker Gus Mutscher, told the herd of reporters and cameramen who trailed him and Martin out of the county courthouse that he might ask that the trial be moved elsewhere.

"No statements will be made by Mr. Martin from now on. ... The publicity has been overwhelming. We are even considering the possibility of a change of venue motion," Maloney said.

He said Martin's plea when he is arraigned before State District Judge Mace B. Thurman will be "not guilty."

Martin earlier had said he might ask for a court-appointed lawyer because he couldn't afford to pay one. Maloney, past president of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, said he was not court-appointed.

Asked if he had volunteered his services without charge in view of Martin's statements that he lacked money to pay a lawyer, Maloney responded:

"You've got to be crazy!"

Martin was accompanied to court by his wife, Debbe, and sat on the second row of the courtroom, behind reporters, as he waited for his case to be called.

Businessman shoots family, then himself

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICOPEE, Mass. (AP) — A businessman who police believe shot five relatives, a pet poodle and then himself behind the carved doors of his $200,000 home was described as a good neighbor who "always had a smile on his face."

Chicopee Police Chief Henry Kulig said police were still trying to determine what happened in Richard Grochmal's sprawling wooden contemporary home in an exclusive section of the city Tuesday night. But he said the deaths "tentatively appear to be a murder-suicide."

Autopsies were scheduled today on the bodies of Grochmal, 52, who owned a trailer park, his 81-year-old mother Stella, his 55-year-old wife, also named Stella, and their three children, Carl, 21, Denise, 19, and Laura Maslak, 23, Detective Capt. Edward Rojowski said.

The bodies of Richard Grochmal and Mrs. Maslak were discovered Wednesday afternoon by Laura's husband of six months, Eric, who told police he became worried when his wife didn't return home to South Hadley Falls after visiting her parents Tuesday night, Rojowski said.

Maslak told police he found his wife's body on the living room floor, and her father was lying dead in a nearby family room with a .38-caliber revolver in his hand.

"Each person was shot in the head at least once. They were dead for quite some time," Rojowski said. The bodies were found in various parts of the house.

Police could establish no motive for the shootings. There were no signs of a struggle, Rojowski said.

Neighbors in the Bridle Path Estates subdivision, on a wooded hill above the Connecticut River, were stunned.

"It's really quite shocking," said Barbara Redfern, whose husband Howard is a former mayor of Chicopee. She described the Grochmals as "perfectly normal parents" and said she talked to them last week, and "everything seemed to be fine with the family."

"They were wonderful neighbors," said Ernest Langlais, who lived next door and occasionally went fishing with Grochmal. "When my sister and I moved in they brought us a welcome cake. I never saw or heard them argue. ...

"He always had a smile on his face," Langlais said of Grochmal. "I can't believe it."

Reagan gives himself a week to decide budget cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — With his mind made up on the range of defense cuts needed to balance the budget by 1984, President Reagan is giving himself a week to decide what to cut from his military buildup program.

Reagan ended a 2½-hour White House meeting with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and budget director David Stockman indicating the range of reductions he favors, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

Speakes said Reagan will not announce a final decision to his Cabinet until early next week. But he said Stockman now has a good enough idea of the president's thinking on defense cuts to begin telling other departments what reductions they must make to keep Reagan's budget on target.

Reagan let Weinberger and Stockman square off in a final formal hearing Wednesday in the White House Cabinet Room. Weinberger has opposed Stockman's proposals for Pentagon spending cuts and the two men left the meeting with differences between them still existing, Speakes said.

The president planned to visit the Pentagon today, but the occasion was primarily ceremonial — to dedicate an 80-foot stretch of corridor in the building in memory of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur.

Six states affected by teacher strikes

By The Associated Press

The opening of school today was canceled in Philadelphia, where 209 striking teachers were arrested, and new walkouts in Rhode Island, New Jersey and Idaho raised the number of states hit by teacher strikes to six.

In Delaware, teachers planned a work slowdown today as school began in two districts in New Castle County.

But despite the strikes, which also affected Michigan and New York, the labor situation in the nation's schools is shaping up as far more peaceful than last year.

The National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers union, said there have been fewer than 30 teacher strikes among its members in the opening two weeks of class this year, compared with 80 this time a year ago. The American Federation of Teachers said its members have conducted seven strikes this school year, compared with 17 a year ago.

THE TEACHERS arrested in Philadelphia were released after being admonished by a judge for violating a court order limiting pickets to four at each doorway. No charges were filed.

The pickets had gathered on the steps of an administration building, shouting "scabs" as administrative workers entered the building.

Fewer than 300 of Philadelphia's 9,751 classroom teachers reported to work Wednesday, prompting School Superintendent Michael Marcase to cancel school for the 213,000 public-school students, officials said.

The students were told that the decision on whether to open the schools would be made day-by-day.

The 22,000-member Philadelphia Federation of Teachers, which includes non-teachers, is striking because it contends layoffs of 3,500 teachers and the school board's refusal to grant a 10 percent wage increase violate the contract negotiated after a strike last year. This year's strike is the fifth since 1970.

NINE OTHER school districts in Pennsylvania had teacher strikes affecting about 26,000 students.

Classes for 3,600 students in North Providence, R.I., were canceled Wednesday when teachers, refusing to work without a contract, boycotted the beginning of classes.

The opening of school for 3,000 students in Penns Grove, N.J., was delayed Wednesday by a strike by 185 teachers, but Superintendent William Barbiers said substitute teachers would hold classes today.

In Wilder, Idaho, 40 teachers struck Wednesday because a new contract had not been signed with officials of the district, which has 540 students. Superintendent Will Brown said classes were operating "just about normal" with substitute teachers.

In Michigan, more than 25,000 students faced another day without classes today because of strikes by 1,865 teachers in seven districts.

In Queens, N.Y., and suburban Long Island, about 350 lay faculty members carried their strike into a second day Wednesday at six Roman Catholic high schools. Opening day was delayed for one high school in Queens where 3,300 students are enrolled. Orientation for 8,700 students at four Long Island schools was held as scheduled and the remaining school, in Queens, is to open Monday.

THIRTY-FIVE ELEMENTARY school teachers struck Wednesday in the Long Island town of East Moriches, N.Y., but school board President Leo Davis said administrators and supervisors took over and the "first day of class is proceeding normally."

Teachers in the Brandywine and Colonial districts in Delaware accepted a recommendation Wednesday from the New Castle County Education Association that they follow "minimal work rule procedures" today. Coaches, for example, were asked to limit activities to regular practices and consider a total stoppage of extra-curricular activities.

Neither Pennsylvania nor New Jersey forbids teacher strikes by law. In Rhode Island, teacher strikes are illegal according to a state Supreme Court ruling, but teachers cannnot be ordered back to work unless it can be proven they are actually on strike.

Strikes by public school teachers are legally banned in Michigan, New York and Idaho.

Striking Philadelphia teachers peacefully walk to a police van Wednesday after they were arrested for contempt of court. More than 200 persons were taken into custody. The teachers are striking to force the city to fulfill its contract and not to layoff about 3500 teachers.

U.S. crime rate rose 9 per cent

WASHINGTON (AP) — There was a murder every 23 minutes and robberies occurred at a rate of one a minute as crime in the United States rose 9 percent last year, the FBI reported today.

The bureau's annual Uniform Crime Report said 13 million serious crimes were reported last year in this country of 227 million, a level 55 percent higher than a decade earlier.

According to the report, criminals escaped apprehension in about four out of five crimes committed in 1980, with an arrest rate of 19 percent for all serious crimes.

Suspected offenders were taken into custody in 44 percent of all violent crimes but only 16 percent of crimes against property, which outnumber violent crimes by nearly 10 to one, the report said.

Arrests were made in 72 percent of the murder cases and 49 percent of the rapes, but only 14 percent of motor vehicle thefts and burglaries.

The report said the nation's overall crime rate rose four times faster last year than the population.

Year-to-year increases in the crime rate are not unusual. The 1980 increase of 9 percent compares with rises of 9.1 percent in 1979, 2 percent in 1978, a decrease of 3 percent in 1977, no change in the rate in 1976 and a 9.8 percent increase in 1975.

The report reflected increases last year in each of the seven categories of major crimes.

Compared with 1979 figures, murders in America rose 7 percent, forcible rapes 8 percent, robbery 18 percent and aggravated assault 7 percent. Among serious non-violent crimes, burglary was up 14 percent, larceny and theft 8 percent, and motor vehicle theft 2 percent, the FBI said.

Murders occurred every 23 minutes in America, on the average, and murders killed 23,044 people — one out of every 10,000 residents of the country.

Seventy-seven percent of the murder victims were male. About 53 percent were white and 42 were black. Pistols, rifles and shotguns killed 62 percent of all murder victims, 19 percent were cut or stabbed, 13 percent were the victims of other weapons such as clubs, explosives and poison, and 6 percent were beaten by hands or feet.

The FBI said law enforcement agencies have little control over preventing homicides, citing data showing that 51 percent of murders in 1980 were committed by relatives or acquaintances of the victims. Sixteen percent involved members of the family and half of those involved a person killing his or her spouse.

Robbery was given as the motive in 18 percent of murders, narcotics in 11 percent, sex crimes in 1.5 percent. Arguments accounted for 45 percent of murders, with romantic triangles alone accounting for 2.3 percent.

Amarillo flood losses to run into millions

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Damages will reach into the millions of dollars at Amarillo businesses flooded when heavy rains that drenched the area last week caused a nearby lake to overflow, a merchants association said.

A more detailed damage estimate was promised today by the Amarillo Emergency Services.

City Manager John Stiff told the city commission that 46 businesses, six single-family homes, five townhouses, four large apartment complexes, and a duplex were damaged by the flooding.

However, William Griggs, a member of the Paramount Merchants Association, said Wednesday the group will not sue the city for damages.

"If we sue the city, we're suing ourselves," said Griggs, who estimated damage to his funeral home at more than $100,000.

But some merchants may file lawsuits on their own, association president Jeff Ghormely said.

Five feet of water covered some city streets and an estimated 500 people left their homes over the Labor Day weekend, including 100 residents of a nursing home.

Gov. Bill Clements on Sunday declared the flooded areas in a state of emergency and ordered about 30 National Guardsmen to the area to protect against possible looting. The Guardsmen still were on duty Wednesday.

An emergency pumping system installed Monday is draining the lake of 10 to 12 inches of water a day, officials said.

State Rep. Chip Staniswallis said representatives of the small business administration will come to Amarillo to assess the damage. He said he didn't know what the chances are that businessmen will qualify for SBA loans.

Soviet officials urge citizen surveillance in crime fighting

MOSCOW (AP) — In a crackdown on crime, Soviet officials are urging citizens to turn in anyone they think might be breaking the law.

The campaign indicates crime is a greater problem than is officially recognized in the Soviet Union. Authorities traditionally have claimed that the Soviet system eliminates most causes of crime in that the state guarantees jobs, food and housing for all.

The Supreme Soviet, the nation's parliament, spearheaded the anti-crime drive in June with a proclamation exhorting the citizenry to combat "hooliganism," or unruly behaviour, in parks, trains, buses and neighborhoods. Soviet newspapers have followed with stories on a variety of misdeeds.

Soviet officials release no crime statistics, but an apparent increase in burglaries, rapes, murders and holdups has alarmed the Soviet bureaucracy enough to launch the campaign. Many Moscow residents seem worried enough to stay off dark streets.

"If I have to go home at night, I don't walk. I ask my daughter to come get me," said one middle-aged woman. She said she feared attacks by drunks.

The press devotes considerably less attention to crime than do the media in other countries, making it hard for outsiders to gauge the range of violent criminal activity or identify dangerous neighborhoods.

Two years ago, the Supreme Soviet passed a decree aimed at reducing all forms of crime. Black marketeering and stealing from state enterprises are widely believed to be more serious problems than the type of violent crimes against individuals which plague many Western countries.

A Moscow policeman who works near Red Square says, "There's no serious crime on my beat. Just a few drunks and rowdies. And they generally clear out fast when they see me coming."

On the other hand, a young Soviet woman who lives in a factory neighborhood says, "Only a fool would walk down my street alone at night. There is trouble all the time."

One center of criminal conspiracy in Moscow, according to the newspaper Vechernyaya Moskva, is the fashionable "Crystal Cafe" in downtown oscow, not far from the apartment building occupied by President Leonid I. Brezhnev. The restaurant is known as a hangout for prostitutes.

Vechernyaya Moskva, adopting the sermonizing tone typical of Soviet crime stories, chided the "irresponsible" families of Evgeny Yevtushik, Vladimir Zharkov and Anatoly Chirkov for allowing them to become "social parasites" who allegedly broke into churches to steal religious icons by night and spent their days in the cafe plotting new escapades.

The same newspaper had nothing but praise for the citizens who helped nab a would-be robber.

The man, described as a "dangerous passenger," boarded a taxi which was already carrying another passenger. The criminal followed the first passenger to his apartment, where he tried to steal a leather jacket, the paper said.

Brandishing a knife, he ran to an apartment occupied by two elderly women, one of whom feigned a heart attack while the other alerted police. The villain was quickly captured, according to the report.

Other articles have openly encouraged people to report suspicious activities to police as a way of deterring crime.

Police, parents, neighbors and coworkers of Gennady Shienkov were taken to task by the newspaper Trud in its coverage of a shooting spree by Shienkov that left two dead and three wounded in the city of Bryansk.

Diablo nuke plant may get license

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant, one of the most controversial in U.S. history, is on the verge of getting an operating license — an action anti-nuclear demonstrators promise will lead to massive protests.

A two-man appeal board of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission gave its approval Wednesday to the California plant's security plan to guard against sabotage.

That approval was the only step remaining before the commission can vote on granting a low-power operating license. The commission is expected to take that vote within 10 days. A low-power license allows the plant to load fuel and operate at 5 percent of capacity for shake-down tests.

Demonstrators are pledging to keep the plant from starting up by blocking all land and sea access to it. They have argued since 1973 that the facility, on the California coast near San Luis Obispo, is too dangerous to operate because it lies only 2.5 miles from an earthquake fault.

The protestors, led by the Abalone Alliance, predict between 5,000 and 10,000 people will converge on the facility to take part in the demonstrations. A July protest rally drew 25,000 people.

A 64-page manual details plans for a land blockade at the plant's four gates and a sea blockade in which swimmers will tread water near the plant's four giant water in-take pumps, hoping that will keep the pumps from being turned on.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. was a leading opponent of the plant, but he has pledged to use the California National Guard if necessary to keep order when the operating license is granted.

Five hundred guardsmen have been put on alert, and troops were already at the plant Wednesday setting up shower, food and laundry facilities for hundreds of California law enforcement personnel.

Pacific Gas & Electric Co., owners of the plant, have made a visible show of their own preparations, which include guard dogs and eight-foot-tall fences. A force of 100 uniformed security guards has been hired, and they have been taking target practice at human silhouettes on a firing range near the plant.

"Diablo Canyon has a set schedule and we will move forward on that schedule. The planned demonstration or blockade will not affect Diablo Canyon in any matter," plant manager Robert Thornberry said Wednesday.

PG&E said it will house the plant's 320 workers at the plant if necessary and has helicopters ready to airlift food and other supplies.

The nuclear fuel has been at the plant and for five years while the utility fought a barrage of legal maneuvers aimed at derailing the facility, which was granted a construction permit in 1967 and applied for the operating license in 1973.

Lowell Thomas lived in a storybook world

By JAMES BROWN
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Lowell Thomas lived a life that most of us only dream about. His long, storied career, which concluded only with his death on Aug. 29 at the age of 89, was a testimonial to the richness of the world we live in and of one individual's lifelong determination to experience as much of it as he could.

Thomas didn't get cheated. In fact, for the mortals who've shaken their heads in wonder at the chronicle of Thomas' many exploits and accomplishments, it might be argued that he packed enough into those 89 years for several lifetimes.

Thomas himself would disagree, of course. For this remarkable man, there was always another project on the horizon — whether it happened to be a book to write, a broadcast to prepare or a country he wished to revisit and explore. His curiosity was boundless — matched only by his uncommon ability to relate his experiences in several mediums and his refusal to succumb to the jaded, jaundiced view of the world that afflicted so many of his contemporaries in their later years. He retained a sense of wonder. And that nourished him — and his audiences — right up until the end.

Most of us remember Thomas on the radio. He was, in every sense of the word, a broadcasting pioneer. He first went on the air in 1925 on historic KDKA in Pittsburgh (the nation's first radio station), describing his participation in the first flight around the world.

In 1930 Thomas began the first regularly scheduled network newscast on CBS — a newscast that ran on the network for an unprecedented 46 years. Typically, Thomas left his CBS post not as any concession to age but simply because he had too many other projects and wanted the time to concentrate on them. He was then 84.

Thomas also broadcast the first television newscast when the medium was still in its experimental stages in 1939. But in those days Thomas preferred the mobility that radio afforded him. He could travel anywhere in the world and still file his news reports. He could also indulge in his favorite leisure activity, Alpine skiing, without being encumbered by the television studio.

Agatha Christie's 'Indians' opens at Theatre Midland

Agatha Christie's mystery "10 Little Indians" opens Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The novel on which "10 Little Indians" was based was published in the U.S. under the title "And Then There Were None." The play, which opened on Broadway in 1944, ran for over 400 performances. It has been an integral part of the professional and community theater repertoire since then.

While the original production was set on an island off the coast of England, the Midland Community Theatre production transfers the setting to the island of Thanatos off the coast of Greece. It has also been updated to the present time. Rather than being ferried by boat, the participants in the mystery will be ferried by helicopter from the mainland to this island retreat.

The guests have been invited to spend their vacations at a mansion originally built by an eccentric millionaire. Suddenly their vacations are turned into nightmares and the paradise illusion is shattered when a voice accuses each and every guest of murder most foul. And then.....

The play is set for nine performances, closing Sept. 26. The director is Ted Strickland, MCT's assistant director.

The production is funded in part by a grant from the HBF Corporation.

U.S. Marine Band performs in Midland

The United States Marine Band, a vital part of the White House social life since its inception in 1798, will perform at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 3 at Chaparral Center.

Tickets, priced at $5, may be purchased at Music Haul, Endless Horizons, Flip Side in Odessa and Chaparral Center. The concert, which features the U.S. band referred to as "The President's Own," is sponsored by the Marine Corps League Permian Detachment.

The USMB, directed by Lt. Col. John R. Bourgeois, is the band that plays for all White House functions, all state funerals, historic celebrations when the president is a guest and acts as Washington's official musical host to all foreign dignitaries and distinguished visitors to the nation's capitol.

Besides frequent appearances at the White House, the band presents weekly summer concerts at the Capitol Plaza, at Jefferson Memorial on the Tidal Basin and evening parades at the historic Marine Barracks.

Once a year in September, the USMB tours the U.S. This annual tour, which makes the band the oldest professional touring organization in the U.S., was inagurated by John Philip Sousa in 1891 when he was the band's leader. perhaps the closest the USMB has come to the Permian Basin area was some years ago when it played Amarillo.

Bourgeois, the band's current director, joined the band in 1958 as a French horn player and copyist member of the arranging staff.

He was appointed operations chief of the USMB in 1968, the liason between the band and the White House regarding musical support of state functions. He was appointed assistant director in 1974. In May of 1979 he was appointed the 25th director of the USMB.

Sadat expects 99.9 percent endorsement of his decrees

By MAGDA EL-SANGA
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat held his fifth nationwide plebiscite today and indicated he expected "99.9 percent" of the 12 million voters to endorse his crackdown on Moslem and Christian militants and political opponents.

Using a ballot headed by a drawing of a Moslem sheikh and a Coptic Christian priest, Sadat asked the Egyptian people to approve the arrest last week of 1,536 religious and political leaders and eight presidential decrees the government said were designed to put an end to religious strife.

The voters were asked to answer "yes" or "no" to the question: "Do you agree to the procedures and principles of national unity and social peace?"

The results should be known by Friday. An overwhelming vote of approval was expected, duplicating the results of the other four plebiscites held by Sadat during his 11 years as president.

Newspapers today carried dozens of advertisements by companies expressing approval of Sadat's action. The papers also reported marches and rallies were held in a number of towns and villages in support of the president.,

But the National Progressive Union, a leftist opposition party, told its members to vote "no" in the referendum. It said the eight decrees were illegal and unconstitutional and were already being enforced.

Sadat defended his crackdown against foreign critics at a news conference Wednesday and shouted angrily in reply to a foreign reporter who asked if he had discussed it in advance with President Reagan during his recent visit to Washington.

"You have no right at all to ask a question like this," said Sadat. "No one makes the decision but me. The decision here is an Egyptian decision."

He accused some of the reporters present of "distorting Egypt's image abroad" and asserted that those arrested "wanted something like Lebanon and Iran to happen in Egypt."

"I shall not permit it," he declared. "Don't fear that we shall have a Khomeini here."

Sadat said he was "defending 99.9 percent" of the Egyptian people "and let us wait until the results of the plebiscite."

The eight decrees Sadat issued last Saturday ordered:

— The disbanding of 13 religious societies and confiscation of their funds, and the banning of politics in mosques and churches.

— The banning of seven publications, three put out by the fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood, two Coptic weeklies, an independent political monthly and the weekly newspaper of the opposition Socialist Labor Party.

— Withdrawal of the government's recognition of Pope Shenouda III, spiritual leader of the world's 22 million Coptic Christians, and the appointment of a five-man committee of Coptic bishops to administer his patriarchate.

— An investigation into the activities of all those arrested and determination of their part in fomenting sectarian strife.

Panda ready to give birth

LONDON (AP) — London Zoo's giant panda Ching-Ching is in her 141st day of pregnancy today and about to give birth "at any time," a zoo official said.

"She is eating more bamboo than normal. Perhaps that is a sign," said zoo press officer Joan Crammond. "The birth could come at any time between 120 and 160 days after the artificial insemination."

Twenty-four scientist and zoo workers are keeping an around-the-clock watch on Ching-Ching to be sure that all goes well for the rare birth in captivity.

Ching-Ching was artificially inseminated with sperm from Chia-Chia, who lives in a nearby enclosure, but has failed to mate Ching-Ching.

McAliskey on way to Paris

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Spanish police put Irish nationalist Bernadette Devlin McAliskey on a plane to Paris today after holding her overnight in Barcelona's airport.

Initial reports indicated she was to be deported to London, but authorities put her on the first plane out in the morning, a Paris-bound flight.

The former British Parliament member was detained by police after she arrived in Spain on Wednesday to begin a five-day speaking tour in support of Irish nationalist hunger strikers in Belfast's Maze prison.

Mrs. McAliskey, a leader of the National H-Block Committee formed to mobilize support for the imprisoned guerrillas, was held because of a 1980 immigration order banning her entry into Spain, a spokesman for the Revolutionary Communist League said.

He said the ban apparently resulted from Mrs. McAliskey's campaigning for leftist candidates in Spain's 1979 general elections.

There was no comment from Spanish officials.

Ten hunger strikers have starved themselves to death since March demanding reforms in Northern Ireland prisons that British authorities have refused to grant, saying they amount to political prisoner status. Six men are currently fasting.

Irish nationalists, led by the outlawed Irish Republican Army, are fighting to oust the British from Northern Ireland and unite it with the Irish Republic.

Cars, buses, trucks and people back up on New York City's Avenue of the America's at 26th Stteet Wednesday during a major power outage that knocked out traffic signals. An explosion at the East River generating station caused the power failure.

NYC paralyzed by power outage

By HENRIETTA LEITH
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Resourceful New Yorkers jumped into jammed intersections to direct traffic, commuters abandoned paralyzed subways, and firefighters rescued office workers from stalled elevators as a power failure darkened Lower Manhattan.

Wednesday's four-hour power outage was only a mild version of the city's two great blackouts, in 1965 and 1977, but still halted business in the area — the nation's financial center.

The blackout was sparked by a 3:26 p.m. EDT transformer explosion and fire in a Consolidated Edison generating plant on East 14th Street, fire officials said. The blaze knocked out two power substations.

Thousands of homeward-bound commuters were delayed for hours as subway trains failed to make their runs or were slowed to cautious speeds because signals were out. Motorists were trapped in intersections after traffic lights were snuffed out. People poured onto the Brooklyn Bridge to walk home. Cabs were scarce and buses jammed.

At Houston Street and Avenue of the Americas, Howard Godnick, a profesional mime, donned a whistle and a reflector safety vest and began directing traffic. He said some irate motorists tried to run him over, but one offered him a beer.

Mayor Edward Koch joined pedestrians on the Brooklyn Bridge, just as he did during the 1980 transit strike, and said New Yorkers were "acting splendidly."

"In this city, when it rains, it pours," he said.

Koch and his aides escorted one woman on the bridge to a nearby hospital after she nearly fainted.

Viginia Barnett, who works in Lower Manhattan, called her husband Archie from East Flatbush to pick her up in his car.

"My husband hates traffic and he'll never talk to me again," she said. "But what can you do? This can only happen in New York."

The New York and American stock exchanges were forced to close half an hour early. No one knew exactly how much the highly-computerized trading was affected by the outage, but it meant early morning overtime today for hundreds of financial district workers to straighten the problem out.

At the Federal Reserve Bank of New York headquarters, there was emergency power for lights, but computers failed for 27 minutes.

Federal Reserve spokesman Richard Hoenig said Wednesday is the day banks settle their accounts for the previous week. "You'll have some funny looking figures and lots of 'as-of' adjustments," he said.

The mini-blackout wasn't as severe as the one in 1965 which knocked out power in the northeastern United States and part of Canada for 13 hours, or another in 1977 which crippled the city for 25 hours.

Wednesday's outage was confined to three sections of Lower Manhattan: the area around Wall Street, the Lower West Side and Herald Square, where the famous Macy's department store is located.

Deputy Fire Chief John Fogarty said the transformer burst its seams, leaking 3,000 gallons of lubricating oil that burned for 2½ hours. Fogarty said the cause of the explosion was not known, but "we lean toward some sort of industrial accident."

Con Ed spokesman Daniel Walden said it might be days or weeks before the exact cause is discovered.

There were no serious injuries reported, although emergency services took care of hundreds of minor problems, like people with heart problems stuck in elevators and pregnant women fainting.

Employees of a Greenwich Village hardware store said they had to fight away prospective customers. Flashlights and candles were sold out by 4:45 p.m..

Tropical storm Gert is 'fairly disorganized'

MIAMI (AP) — A "fairly disorganized" tropical storm Gert moved through the central Bahama islands early today, and forecasters said some strengthening could occur by tonight.

"Storms can strengthen without any trouble as they move through the Bahamas," said Miles Lawrence, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center here. "But so far, this storm is not doing that."

A storm warning was in effect for the central Bahamas and a storm watch for the northern Bahamas.

Lawrence said Gert, packing top winds of 40 mph mainly in squalls, could pass by Nassau early this evening.

"I wouldn't suggest residents of Florida start worrying about this system at this time," he said. "However, maritime interests should monitor the progress of the storm.

"Whenever you have a system this close to the southeastern United States, there's always the possibility that it could strengthen to a hurricane. However, this one isn't doing so," Lawrence said.

Gert broke up temporarily over the mountains of the Dominican Republic early Wednesday before pushing back out to sea. Heavy rains fell on the Dominican Republic and Haiti as Gert moved north.

Lawyers want suppression

ATLANTA (AP) — Attorneys for Wayne B. Williams want a judge to suppress statements Williams made to police when he was stopped for questioning on a Chattahoochee River bridge early May 22.

Williams is charged with murder in the slayings of two of 28 young Atlanta blacks whose deaths are under investigation by a special police task force.

Williams first came to police attention in the early morning hours of May 22 when officers on a stakeout team said they heard a loud splash in the river and spotted Williams' car moving slowly across the bridge.

Williams was stopped and questioned on the bridge that night, and his attorneys have asked Judge Clarence Cooper to prohibit the prosecution from using any of the statements Williams made that night at his upcoming trial. A hearing was set for today.

The 23-year-old black man is charged with the murders of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, the 28th and 26th victims in the string of slayings, which began in July 1979.

Cater's body was found May 24 floating in the Chattahoochee River downstream from the bridge where Williams had been stopped less than 48 hours earlier. Payne's body had been found in the Chattahoochee near the same spot in April.

Williams was released after he was questioned May 22, but on June 3 he was taken to FBI headquarters for 12 hours of questioning about the killings.

After he was released June 4 without being charged, Williams called a news conference at his home and denied any involvement in any of the killings.

OC class to be offered on coupon refunding

Take a few short minutes a day and save as much as 50 percent of your annual grocery bill. Spend more time, and it is posible to save up to 90 percent of that bill.

So says Mitzi Eades, alias "Aunt Trash," who will be conducting a class at Odessa College on "Couponing and Refundng" Saturday. The class will be offered at two different times, from 9-11 a.m. and from 1:30-3:30 p.m. in room 107 of the Composite Technology building at OC. Fee for the class, sponsored by the OC adult and continuing education department, is $4.

Eades of Lake Dallas acquired the nickname of Aunt Trash as a result of her refusal to throw anything away. As a result, during 1980, she bought $42 worth of groceries once for 20 cents, another time $123 worth for 23 cents, and still another time $213 for 19 cents. All in all, she says she received checks, cash, gifts and free products worth over $3,900 in 1980.

DEAR ABBY
Some brides warm to cold cash

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your recent article in which you stated that "anyone requesting money instead of a gift is tacky" is from the 19th century!

When my daughter was growing up, every time I found a "good buy" in china or silver, or whatever, I bought it for her hope chest. Consequently when she marries, she will have the best of everything for less money. So what's wrong with the couple requesting money instead of a gift? Actually, it would save the guests the trouble of shopping and wrapping a gift that will probably be returned anyway.

Those who come to a wedding are there to celebrate the joy of a union of two people in love, so why saddle them with three toasters and six coffee pots?

If our society has accepted "living together" and brides with a six-month bulge walking down the aisle in white, who is to say that asking for money instead of a wedding gift is "tacky"? — IN THE SAME BOAT

DEAR IN: Hold it! Society has not unanimously accepted a) living together, or b) brides with a six-month bulge walking down the aisle in white. And there are many who would rather send a wedding gift than throw money in the pot to help pay for the wedding.

DEAR ABBY: I am a responsible 22-year-old woman living with my parents. I am going away for a month's vacation, and my problem is my parents and my guinea pigs. My parents have told me that the minute I am out the door they are getting rid of my guinea pigs.

I've told them that they won't have to do one thing because I've already made arrangements with a girlfriend to come by every day to feed them and clean their cages.

Abby, they still insist that the guinea pigs are going as soon as I leave. I have explained that the guinea pigs are MY pets and not their property to do with as they please. Also, I said that I think I am old enough to take care of my affairs, but it is obvious that they have no respect for me or my wishes.

If they get rid of my guinea pigs while I'm gone, I will never forgive them. Tell me what you think should be done, and who is right. — NO RESPECT

DEAR NO RESPECT: "Miss Piggy's Guide to Life" might be helpful here. I think you're right, but it's your parents' home and their wishes will prevail. If you want to be absolutely certain that you don't lose your pets, ask your girlfriend if she will look after them at HER place. If that's not possible, find some other temporary home for your guinea pigs.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widower in my early 70s who has been seeing a widow in her early 60s. We've known each other over 40 years. We both own homes, have savings, and both have children.

I want to pop the question, but I also want a pre-nuptial agreement. Would it be out of line for me to state that when I die, my home and half of my savings will go to my son, and anything my new wife and I acquire together, plus the other half of my savings, will go to her?

A friend of mine had such an agreement and thought it showed a lack of love and trust. My deceased wife and I worked for over 50 years together and we planned on leaving something to our son.

Should the fact that I am remarrying affect those plans? What is your opinion? — PRACTICAL IN TEXAS

DEAR PRACTICAL: Your "agreement" sounds more than fair to me. Your lawyer can advise you. And be sure your bride has an attorney to guide her.

DEAR ABBY: I just read about the hostess who resents it when guests ask for a "tour" of the house. Here's the flip side of that one: Hostesses who ask their comfortably seated guests if they want a "tour" of the house.

Being polite, you can hardly refuse, then you have to "ooh and ahh" about every piece of wallpaper, carpet and objet d'art in the place.

It's not bad the first time, but in one particular case, I'm invited there at least once a year, and I've already seen it. What then? —BORED WITH TOURS

DEAR BORED: Politely decline. With all that "oohing and ahhing," you'll never be missed.

CONFIDENTIAL TO C. AND D.: The marriage will work if the dents in HIS head fit the bumps in HERS.

More sharing needed on road

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — Automobile drivers need lessons in sharing the road with motorcycles, say many of the nation's motorcycle riders.

In a poll conducted by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, 91.8 percent of the respondents thought such road behavior should be taught through driver education classes and-or as part of the regular driver licensing procedure. Some 95 percent felt that information also should be included in state motor vehicle manuals.

Savoring antiques

By ERMA BOMBECK

I have always been enamored of antiques.

Show me anything that is ten years older than I am and I'll buy it.

The more children I had, the more respect I had for anything that lasted longer than 15 minutes. At one point in my life, I had grave concern as to where the antiques of tomorrow would come from.

Would anyone find any value in chenille bedspreads with spit-up stains all over them? Would a chest with a decal of Miss Piggy on the drawers, held together with Play-Doh, ever be considered a "find"? Would a dealer ever covet a one-owner playpen inhabited only by a 34-year-old mother during a mid-life crisis?

There is no need for concern. I have just discovered that today's antiques are not the survivors of things that were a part of daily lives. They're the things that were never used at all.

My candidate for antique status in our house is a rocking chair. I bought it when our first child was born because it was "cute." It looked like a rocking chair ought to look like. Everyone said so. It was never meant to hold a person or to rock back and forth. The seat was designed for something other than a human form, the chair was too close to the floor, and the rockers were so short you fell out of it every time you rocked forward.

Every time someone came into the house, they headed for the rocker and had their knees bent to sit down before we yelled, "NOT THAT CHAIR!"

The chair also had other qualities. The wood was hard. The kids couldn't even carve an initial in it or make a scratch on it with a nail. They tried.

Why haven't we gotten rid of the chair, you may ask. If you have to ask that question, you do not know women at all. "Cuteness" will get you anything including a spot in the front hallway.

Besides, there is no doubt in my mind that I am saving a piece of history for generations to come. Someday it will be in a little shop in the window with a sign on it that reads, "200 years old! Mint condition!" and some naive little couple will exclaim, "What a wonderful home that must have come from. It doesn't have a scratch on it. We'll rock our first baby in it."

And that, dear readers, is the logic behind a boot scraper (circa 1700) I bought that scrapes the sole right off the shoe like a saber.

Food pouches: Canned food rivals?

Los Angeles Times photo

Consumers in some parts of the nation are aready seeing retort pouch products, above, in their markets as part of testing under way by Kraft Foods and ITT Continental Kitchens. The products can be boiled in water and ready to eat in five minutes, below, or two minutes in a microwave. An extra bonus is they require no refrigeration and they have a long shelf life.

By DANIEL P. PUZO
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

U.S. infantrymen on maneuvers in Europe are happier at dinner than in previous years as a result of technological revolution in the American food industry. Gone forever are the infamous C-ration cans that were known to contain gastronomical weaponry more feared than much of the enemy's arsenal.

Today, whenever Army personnel are in the field they will reach for a pouch that contains the meal's main course instead of a can. The aluminum pouch is barely an inch thick and surprisingly lightweight. Each one-serving pouch measures eight inches in length and five inches in width.

A soldier can choose from a selecton that includes beef stroganoff, chicken cacciatore and other entrees that would rival the offerings at hometown eating spots.

An extra bonus to the troops is the fact that the pouches need no refrigeration, have a long shelf life and can be prepared in only five minutes in boiling water. If a pot of boiling water isn't convenient in combat, then the pouches could be heated on the warm hood of a jeep, on the hot asphalt of a road or even by body heat in cold climates.

IN THE MILITARY those welcomed additions are known as Meals Ready to Eat; to the American consumer the futuristic containers will be called flexible cans or retort pouches. Regardless of the title, the development of the pouches marks the most innovative packaging process since Birds Eye perfected frozen food.

The U.S. Army Research and Development Lab in Natick, Mass.,first started working on the pouch concept in the late 1940s but the idea became functional only in the last several years.

For military purposes the pouch is significantly lighter than canned food enabling the combat soldier to reduce his weight load. It can be packed more conveniently in clothes or gear and will not corrode. Eventually, both U.S.-and European-based Army infantrymen will be using the pouch, which also has been called on to perform for NASA, the space agency.

Whatever military action the pouch may see will pale in comparison to the war now going on between major food corporations trying to market this innovative food container.

KRAFT FOODS AND ITT's Continental Kitchens are currently testing consumer acceptance of retort pouch products in markets thoughout the nation. Other companies are anxiously watching from the sidelines tyring to determine whether pouch packaging will make canned or frozen foods obsolte.

There are high expectations that the pouch will have great consumer appeal. Current pouch food offerings are mostly main dish entrees, similar to those used by the military, and include salisbury steak, veal scaloppine and sweet and sour pork.

The selection of main dishes is selling for less than $2 in test markets like Atlanta, Phoenix, Ariz., and Seattle. ITT also has produced a line of "deli" items that appeal both to children and adults such as meatballs, Sloppy Joes, and sausage with pepper and onions; all ready to be used as sandwich fillers.

One of the primary advantages that thepouch has over other food containers is its abilit to retain food's natural flavor without preservatives. The process for filling the pouch is similar to the canned food method but differs in the heating and sterilization stages. Because the pouch is so thin it requires much less cooking time during processing than foods in cans. Thus the food is cooked more evenly and the nuances of spices or other ingredients are maintained.

Most surprisingly, the pouch does not require refrigeration. It sits compactly on the shelf and heats in only five minutes compared to the much longer preparation time for frozen food. It can be heated in a microwave oven in less than two minutes.

"The retort pouch is fabulous and the wave of the future," said Richard Knel, director of marketing for ITT's Continental Kitchens in Rye, N.Y. "It will replace a given portion of the canned and frozen-food market because of its unique qualities. The food in pouches is more nutritional, with a better taste and flavor. There also are cost savings vs. those frozen foods. There is no need for freezers, freezer trucks or refrigerated warehouses. The pouch weight is less then that of a can and it requires less shelf space."

It will take some doing for the pouch to just approach, let alone equal, the huge portions of food sales held by canned and frozen products. Consumers spend more than $8 billion on frozen products annually while approximately $10 billion is spent on canned foods.

The pouch may indeed be the container of the future for reasons other than its many advantages. Because the technology is so new, retort pouch food will not be distributed nationally for several years.

Several factors are making the going slow. The machinery producing retort pouch products cannot increase its output without some significant design improvement.

"It is a new technology in terms of both food and packaging," said Stephan Kouzomis, new products manager for Kraft Foods in Glenview, Ill. "The retort pouch assembly is not a piece of machinery that you can just install and start producing. It is like frozen food 50 years ago. They had to develop production lines that could mass produce."

Another barrier to national distribution is a federal regulation that requires all pouches be stored for 24 days by the manufacturer once they are filled with food and sealed. The hold is a way of ensuring that the pouch seams remain sealed and that the food's safety is maintained. Food companies are hoping to have the 24-day holding requirement reduced within the next 18 months. Otherwise, it would be economically impossible to store large inventories for such a long time period.

The final drawback involves introducing a revolutionary packaging material to the consumer. Corporations will have to budget more advertising and promotion dollars than normally required for a new food product.

"Like anything innovative, you have to educate consuers to the benefits and overcome skepticism. People are not used to seeing a meat entree outside of a can that is shelf stable. And explaining it is an educational process that will take time," Kouzomis said.

Wine talk: What's behind a gold medal?

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Gold medal. It's a phrase those in the wine trade love. It guarantees sales, adds prestige to a winery's image ad permits some breast-thumping.

Silver medals are OK, but they are leagues away from a gold.

Summer is wine judging time — gold mining time, as one wine maker calls it — and as soon as results of these competitions are released, there will be a rush to buy the gold medal winners, even though there probably is little difference between gold, silver and bronze.

Wine competitions help guide the consumer to good wines. Rarely if ever will a gold medal winner at a major competition be poorly made. But there are problems with wine competitions. Here are a few:

Are the judges qualified? How is the competition structured? Do the judges have more than one chance to taste each wine? Do judges discuss the wines before medals are awarded? If so, can one judge with a strong personality overwhelm less self-assured judges? How are the wines selected? What percentage of the wines judged receive medals?

Here are some examples of how fair judgings are run:

The Orange County (Calif.) Fair tries to be all things to all people: it accepts donations from any winery wishing to compete, and buys current vintages off local shelves.

Judges are either wine makers or winery principals. Four-person panels rate wines in three categories — under $5, $5.01 to $10 and over $10.01. Judges get one shot at a wine, but may retain any wine as long as he or she wishes.

There is no discussion among judges for medals. A panel decides from the judges' scores.

This year, about 35 percent of all wines judged at Orange County received medals, 10 percent of them gold. One drawback: by evaluating only similarly priced wines, the results become unwieldy. For example, there were 15 different Johannisberg Riesling categories.

The Los Angeles County Fair accepts samples from any winery wishing to compete. Only donated wines are judged. Thus, there is a dearth of entries from such premium wineries as Heitz, Chateau Montelena, Robert Mondavi, Ridge, Rutherford Hill, Stag's Leap. To them, anything less than a gold is harmful to image.

This year 167 wineries have entered 1,438 wines, and 32 judges will evaluate everything in three days.

Members of five-person panels sit in separate booths. No talk is permitted. Judges first retain or reject samples, then get a second shot at retained wines. Medal evaluations are made in caucus. with each panel member giving a recommendation. One judge says arguments can get pretty heated.

The Sonoma County (Calif.) Fair judging is open only to wines crushed in Sonoma County. Panelists are chosen from among wine writers, sommeliers and full-time wine educators.

Wines are entered by wineries, and are picked up randomly from wine tasting rooms so no winery can package "ringers." That guarantees that the wines judged will be those available for sale.

Five-person panels judge first on a retain-or-reject basis. Later the retained wines ae evaluated for medal purposes. In the medal round, each judge has a vote.

Last year, just 11 of the 338 wines got gold medals, 3.2 percent, and only 30 percent of all wines got medals.

At last year's Amador (Calif.) County Fair, so many wineries got medals — nearly two-thirds — that even the judges were shocked. Of 58 wines tasted, 17 gold medals were awarded. Tnis year things were slightly better: 90 wines tasted, three golds. But 44 wines got medals.

Judgings are valid measures of good wines, but nothing guarantees that a gold medal winner will be a better wine than a silver or a bronze.

A salad for all seasons

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

We're not sure exactly when it showed up on the culinary scene, but our guess is that it was in the 1950s. Now it is part of mainstream American cooking. How do we know? The recipe for it is in "Betty Crocker's Salads," published in 1977 by Golden Press. If any cookbooks reflect the dishes many cooks in the United States have taken to their hearts, they are those signed with the pseudonymous name of Betty Crocker.

We're talking about the salad that is composed of fresh oranges and sweet onions (red or Spanish) that, I believe, originated on the West Coast.

Since it first appeared, there have been many variations of it. For example, it's had avocado added to it. Now we've combined the orange and onion salad with another comparatively new salad — one made with rice. We found this combination delectable to serve with a platter of sliced chicken, turkey, lamb, fresh pork or ham.

WEST COAST RICE SALAD

1 cup converted-style rice
Orange Honey Dressing, recipe follows
1 medium-size ripe but firm avocado
1 cup thinly sliced celery
Membrane-free sections of 2 seedless oranges (chilled)
1 small red onion (2 ounces), thinly sliced and separated into rings (chilled)

Cook the rice according to package directions, omitting butter. Stir the Orange Honey Dressing into the hot cooked rice. Let stand at room temperature to cool. Peel, seed and dice (½ inch) the avocado; stir into rice with the celery. Mound rice mixture onto serving plate; surround with orange sections and onion rings. Serve at room temperature. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

ORANGE HONEY DRESSING

½ cup vegetable oil
Grated rind of 1 orange
½ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon white wine vinegar
1 small garlic clove, minced or crushed
Salt and pepper to taste

Shake or whisk together the oil, orange rind and juice, honey, vinegar, garlic and salt and pepper. Makes about 1 cup.

Copycat cooking: Chile sauce

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I've been using your Green Tomato Relish recipe which we enjoyed during winter and am looking forward to making more this year. But now I wonder if you have a copycat version of the best commercially prepared chili sauce made with ripe tomatoes. I have tried several recipes, but none of the homemade chili sauces tasted as good as our favorite bought brand. — KENTUCKY COOK.

DEAR KENTUCKY COOK: It's hard to copycat good commercial chili sauce. But in the opinion of a group of tasters the following recipe comes as close as possible to the best of the bought brands. Hope you agree. — C.B.

CHILI SAUCE

4½ cups distilled white vinegar
2 tablespoons whole cloves
3 cinnamon sticks, broken in half
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 tablespoon whole allspice
15 pounds (about 45 medium) tomatoes
3 cups sugar
½ cup chopped onion
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 tablespoons salt

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's directions.

In a medium saucepan, bring to a boil the vinegar, cloves, cinnamon sticks, celery seed and allspice; remove from heat and reserve.

Peel, chop and measure tomatoes. Into a 6 to 8-quart saucepot turn ½ the tomatoes, 1½ cups sugar, the onion and cayenne. Bring to a boil; simmer 40 minutes, stirring often. Stir in the remaining tomatoes and the remaining sugar; boil 40 minutes, stirring often. (Adding the tomatoes and sugar in two steps helps preserve the red color.)

Strain reserved vinegar mixture; discard spices. Stir vinegar and salt into tomato mixture; cook to desired consistency — about 30 minutes. Pour into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch head space. Adjust caps.

Process in boiling water bath canner for 15 minutes.

Makes about 6 pint jars.

Note: Avoid using utensils of zinc, iron, brass, copper, aluminum or galvanized metal when making chili sauce as these react chemically with both acids and salt in the chili sauce mixture.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Smart granny shares diaper changing innovation

DEAR HELOISE:

My grandbaby was coming to visit. Remembering how it hurt my back to lean over the bed to change his diaper, I looked around for a better place that would be nearer the height of a changing table.

Then I thought about my washer and dryer. They are set side by side in the bathroom (what could be handier?). They are the perfect height and there's plenty of room for extra diapers, lotion, etc.

I folded a blanket and laid it on top of the washer and dryer, then put on a clean towel — a nice padded changing table.

Baby's Mom loved it, too. — Juaketa Stout

+ + +

Might be a good idea to put a sheet of heavy plastic or oilcloth between the blanket and towel to protect the blanket from wet spots. Just don't use a flimsy plastic that would be dangerous for the child. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: When our 7-year-old grandson was visiting us, he climbed up to the attic to take a peek.

When he looked inside, he exclaimed, "Our attic doesn't have fertilizer like yours does!"

He was referring to the insulation... oh, what a joy they can be! — Donna Floyd

KITCHEN SCALES

Dear Heloise: For a fast, easy and neat way to measure shortening, peanut butter, etc., place a piece of waxed paper or foil on the kitchen scales.

Measure in a normal measuring cup, pour out onto the paper and weigh. Mark the ounces on your recipe.

Next time you measure, all you have to do is spoon it onto the scales until you reach the correct weight, i.e., one cup measures 8 ounces, ½ cup measures 4 ounces. — Lucy Bobb

MARK THE SPOT

Dear Heloise: I carry a checkbook in my wallet and often write checks in stores.

When I do, I like to keep my records up to date. Sometimes it took too much time to find my space in the record book, so I put a paper clip on the page I'm using and now I can quickly flip right to it. — M.M.R.

PLASTIC BAGS

Dear Heloise: One of my kitchen cabinets is over the counter next to my sink, and the dish drainer is directly under the cabinet.

So-o-o, whenever I have a plastic bag to rinse or air out, I pop it upside down and close the cabinet door on the end of it.

If it's wet, it drips onto the drainboard. — Millie Kendig

TWO FOR ONE

Dear Heloise: The other day I finally got around to trying your formula for cleaning dishwashers. It works great, but my real reason for writing is this:

I've got some plastic dishes which we use in our motor home, and the cups were hopelessly stained from coffee and tea.

After putting them in the dishwasher during the cleaning process, to my complete surprise and delight, they came out looking like new.

What an easy way to do away with ugly stains. — Arlene Hofmann

+ + +

Of course, we all know it's a "no-no" to put plastic dishes in the dishwasher as a daily routine. That caustic dishwasher detergent will eventually take off the glaze, but it's great for a "once in awhile" cleaning to remove those stubborn stains. — Heloise

+ + +

If you have a hint you want to share or a problem you want to solve, write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. She'll use your hint if it's good. If she hasn't a solution for your problem she'll probe around until she gets an expert's recommendation. Sorry, she can't reply individually but watch for your letter in her column.

DEAR SHERRI: This is it.

C.V. WOOD'S WORLD-CHAMPIONSHIP CHILI

1 (3-pound) stewing chicken
1½-quart water or 4 (10¾-ounce) cans chicken broth
½ pound beef suet or ½ cup oil
¼ cup finely chopped celery
7 cups peeled, chopped tomatoes
2 teasp.
4 pounds flank steak
6 long green chiles, peeled
1 tblsp. ground oregano
1 tblsp. ground cumin
½ teasp. MSG, optional
1 tblsp. black pepper
4 teasp. salt
5 tblsp. chili powder
1 teasp. cilantro
1 teasp. thyme 1 cup beer
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
5 pounds thin center cut pork chops
3 medium onions, cut in ½-inch pieces
2 green peppers, cut in ½-inch pieces
1 pound jack cheese, shredded
1 lime

Cut stewing chicken in pieces. Combine with water in large pot and simmer 2 hours. Strain off broth and reserve chicken for other use. (Canned chicken broth may be substituted.) Render suet to make 6 to 8 tablespoons drippings.

In 2-quart saucepan, combine celery, tomatos and sugar. Simmer 1 1-2 hours. Trim all fat from flank steak. Cut in 3-8 -inch cubes. Boil peeled chiles for 15 minutes or until tender. Remove seeds and cut in 1-4 -inch squares. Mix oregano, cumin, MSG, pepper, salt, chili powder, cilantro and thyme with beer unti all lumps are dissolved. Add tomato mixture, chiles, beer mixture and garlic to chicken broth. Pour 1-3 of suet drippings into skillet, add 1-2 pork chops and brown. Repeat for remaining pork. Add pork to broth mixture and cook slowly for 30 minutes.

Brown flank steak in remaining drippings about 1-3 at a time. Add to pork mixture. Cook slowly $bout 1 hour. Add onions and green pepp3rs. Simmer 2 to 3 hours longer, stirring with wooden spoon every 15 to 20 minutes. Cool 1 hour. Refrigerate for 24 hours.

Reheat chili before serving. About 5 minutes before serving time add cheese. If you are reheating only a part of the chili, use 1-6 pound cheese to each quart. Just before serving, add lime juice and stir with wooden spoon. Makes 6 quarts.

THE BUTCHER

A few block scraps: Money-saving meat tips

By MERLE ELLIS

A natural result of the meat cutting process is an ever-present pile of lean trimmings that accumulate on the butcher block. These little bits and pieces of meat — too small to qualify for stew, let alone steak, but too good to be discarded — become the most popular and money saving meat of all . . . hamburger

Much of the same kind of miscellaneous accumulation, I find, has resulted from writing this column. Over the months and years, bits and pieces of material of all kinds, along with a few personal prejudices have piled up. Each is too tiny to call a column, but too meaty to throw away. Here, then, are a few block scraps, if you will, offered in the hope that you can use them, like hamburger, to save a little money on your meat bill.

Be very careful of "family packs"! Over the years supermarkets have conditioned us to believe that we save money if we buy the large economy size. It started years ago in the grocery department with things like oatmeal, syrup, rice and potatoes, and we probably did save some by buying in quantity. But recently the meat department has gotten into the act with "family packs," "maxi-packs," "economy packs"; large trays with six or eight steaks, a dozen pork chops or enough chicken pieces for an army, labeled to convey the idea that if you buy big you save money.

Unfortunately, in many markets you don't. I have seem family packs of six steaks priced higher per pound than the same cuts packaged individually. Don't be led into believing you're saving money when you're not — always check the price-per-pound.

Never buy calves liver in a market that doesn't have a good-sized display of veal in the meat case. Calves liver comes from veal, and veal is expensive and in rather short supply. There is only one liver per veal, which means that real calf liver is in even shorter supply. Many veal suppliers refuse to ship calf liver to any market that does not order veal. And even when a market does, the liver is on a quota system: One carcass, one liver. Therefore, chances of getting real calf liver in a market that doesn't handle veal are really rather slim.

Don't ask the butcher in any modern American supermarket to grind anything special for you. You're fooling yourself if you think that what comes out of the grinder is what went in. A half-pound to a pound of meat remains in the head of a large commercial meat grinder after each grinding. Any meat the butcher grinds for you will push out whatever is left in the head from the previous grinding. Your meat is going to be mixed with who knows what. You would be much better off to take whatever cut you want home and grind it yourself.

So much for "be careful . . .," "never . . .," and "don't . . ." Here's a "do." If you haven't already done so — do try fresh ground pork. With the increase in the cost of ground beef in the past few years, many markets are beginning to display fresh ground pork — not sausage, which is seasoned, but simply lean ground pork. It really is very good cooked and served just as you would ground beef. The price, at least at present in most markets, is less than ground beef — but hurry. McDonalds might discover it, pay Miss Piggy a fortune to promote it and the price would go up!

Swiss chef excels at French cooking

By SUZY PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

CRISSIER, Switzerland (AP) — "I'll bicycle to Vallorbe to pick up the frogs' legs," said Switzerland's No. 1 chef, Alfred (Fredy) Girardet.

Vallorbe is about 18 miles away — uphill — from the Girardet restaurant in Crissier, near Lausanne, and the chef wasn't joking. He will do anything to procure good produce, and loves to ride a bike for exercise.

"The frogs' legs come from Hungary, since France doesn't furnish enough anymore," he said. This Swiss, considered by many to be the world's best "French" chef, has won phenomenal success in only 10 years. His daring creations delight both feisty food critics and the public, who have to book for dinner two months in advance.

Gourmets swoon over dishes like scalloped angler fish with oysters, or cassoulet of fresh truffles and cardoons (a vegetable of the artichoke family); or feuillete pastry with rabbit liver and leeks.

The Gault-Millau guidebook awards Girardet the supreme accolade of four toques and a grade of 19 out of 20 — shooting him into the gastronomic galaxy of France's top chefs.

Michelin would probably give their top three stars. "But they don't come to Lausanne," explained 45-year-old Girardet, taking a break from lunch preparation. With sandy blond hair, dark blue eyes and suntanned face, the 6-foot chef looks like a movie or ski-slope star. He does ski cross-country, but he mainly likes to cook.

Except for Heidi-style food like cheese fondue and smoked meats, nobody ever thought much of Swiss gastronomy — until Fredy Girardet came along.

Today he's probably the chef most admired by his French peers. Michel Guerard, Paul Bocuse and others have dined at his restaurant, to emerge delighted, even awed.

Chef Jean Troisgros, who shares three-star honors with his brother Pierre for their Roanne restaurant, has high praise: "What Fredy invents is beautiful; he is the only chef to unfailingly season food perfectly, to turn it out neither raw nor overcooked. He is also the only one who has never copied anybody else."

The daring Girardet tours de force (imagine serving mounds of parsley simmered in butter to accompany game hen, or mussel salad with wild boletus mushrooms) might once have been termed "nouvelle cuisine." But like many other food lovers, Girardet doesn't much like that term.

"I'd rather talk about good or bad cooking," he said. "Today we're trying to offer lighter dishes more in tune with the fast-paced life everybody leads."

Faultless ingredients are a must in this style of cooking, and Girardet goes first class. Cream and vegetables come from the best Swiss farms. Fresh fish arrives daily from Brittany, via Paris and Geneva by plane, then to Crissier by truck.

No wonder eating here is not cheap. But most connoisseurs agree it's worth the price. The set menu offers seven courses, wine included, and costs 110 Swiss francs ($55.)

Girardet's dazzling inventions don't mean he goes out on a creative limb.

"The best cooks have a solid, classical technique. You can't just go around throwing raspberries on fish and thinking that's brilliant new cuisine," he says.

Copycat cooking: Chinese noodles

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Somehow or other, during all my eating exploration in Chinatown restaurants in New York and other large cities, I had never happened on a dish that consisted of noodles tossed in a peanut sauce. But recently, when I finally tasted this delicious combination, I realized it would be easy to copycat and my readers might enjoy having this simple, thrifty recipe.

To bone up on this sort of noodle dish, I looked into "Florence Lin's Chinese Regional Cookbook" (Dutton). I also phoned Florence, a friend of long standing, to check up on a few details. To sum up:

The name of the dish I copycatted is lo mein with peanut sauce, "Lo" means "tossed" and "mein" means "noodles." (Lo Mein is the Cantonese spelling; lao mien is the Mandarin.) Lo mein is simply a procedure in which cooked noodles are tossed with other ingredients. The other ingredients vary widely.

For example, in her "Chinese Regional Cookbook," Florence Lin gives a lo mein recipe that calls for noodles, roast pork, scallions, bean sprouts, soy sauce and oyster sauce. I found the noodles tossed with the peanut sauce a happy combination.

Florence told me that lo min may beserved hot or at room temperature as the main dish for a light meal. She says the lo mein with peanut sauce is delicious accompanied by a salad of crisp greens and cucumber with a Chinese-style dressing. Fresh fruit and sweet but light cookies make a fine dessert for this menu.

LO MEIN WITH PEANUT SAUCE

8 ounces fresh Chinese-style egg noodles,
5 tablespoons peanut oil
1 teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
¼ cup finely chopped scallions
1 clove (any size you like) garlic, minced
½ cup chunky peanut butter
4 teaspoons soy sauce
1½ tablespoons red wine vinegar
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon ground ginger

Boil the noodles in 2 quarts boiling water until just soft — usually 3 to 4 minutes. Drain and rinse with cold water; drain well — there should be about 4 cups. Cool to room temperature. In a medium skillet in the hot oil, over moderately low heat, stir the red pepper flakes for a couple of minutes; add the scallion and garlic and cook until the scallion is wilted but not browned — several minutes; set aside off heat. In a small bowl stir together the peanut butter, soy sauce, vinegar, sugar and ginger until blended. Stir in the scallion mixture, including the oil in the skillet; toss with the noodles, coating evenly. Makes 4 main-dish servings.

Chinese laundry has made comeback in China

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese laundry has returned to China.

The private laundry, which once symbolized Chinese family enterprise abroad, has made a comeback in the socialist motherland which once panned all private business as wicked "capitalist tails."

This capital city's first reported private laundry — once a contradiction in terms — is run by an industrious middle-aged woman in a mud-brick house with a white Lotus brand washing machine.

Huang Xiu Hua, 47, quit her job at a state-owned laundry two years ago to start her own business with personalized service. In less than one year she has more washing and mending than she can handle and wants to hire assistants.

People come from miles around to have Madame Huang stitch and launder their clothes. She now makes more than 100 yuan, about $66 in U.S. curreny, a month — 30 yuan more than her state laundry wages.

"And I'm my own boss now and set my own hours," the tiny woman said, puffing a cigarette which she'd rolled with expertise. "Young people wouldn't like this kind of work, but I would like to hire more middle-aged women to help me out." She figured she could pay them about 50 yuan a month.

Hiring per se is still fobidden as exploitation of labor, but relatives can work in a private business and apprentices can be taken on for pay.

Madame Huang is another symbol of emerging and officially encouraged private enterprise in China. She has one of 13 family-run enterprises in the eastern city district. They include watch and pen repair shops and a home repair service started by six retired construction workers.

Soon, 17 more families will be trying to get rich with the blessings of the state. Just down the street workmen are putting the finishing touches on a stove for a new Shanghai noodle shop.

Peking now has 4,015 licensed private businesses, according to government statistics. They include restaurants, bicycle repair shops, barbers, hairdressers and pedicab drivers.

The capitalist spirit, however, still has a long way to go. In 1956 Peking had 42,000 households engaged in individual business. In 1960 individual economy was wiped out in a "communization" campaign. The returning "capitalist tails" were lopped off during the cultural revolution.

Because of unemployment and the need for more services, however, China again is encouraging entrepreneurs. Business applications in general are approved, red tape is being eliminated and the city tax bureau has reduced the profits tax from 5 percent to 3 percent.

Last year Madame Huang paid less than $2 in taxes. She bought a sewing machine and the tiny Lotus washing machine, which stands in the bedroom shared by her three children.

The machine is so small she can wash only one padded jacket at a time. She can wash four of the heavy garments in a day. She charges the equivalent of $4 for each winter jacket and $1.50 for light garments.

Madame Huang is a capitalist angel for dozens of people who are tired of long waits and indifferent and sometimes rude service at state-run enterprises.

"I cater to people's personal needs," Madame Huang said. "If someone wants his garment soon, I can rush it" — for a price, of course.

Bullock gets into scuffle

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock says he was looking "into a not-so-happy situation" involving his son when he allegedly got into a scuffle that led Austin police to search and detain him.

Bullock said he went to the home of Allen H. Burns, an ex-employee of the state controller's office, because of an undisclosed problem that involved his son.

Police Lt. Ernie Hinkle said that's where the reported disturbance occurred Tuesday.

Witnesses said Bullock, Burns and perhaps two other people were involved in a scuffle, in which someone allegedly had a gun.

Officers arrived at the house about 7 p.m. but found no one.

Hinkle said Bullock was stopped in a taxicab on Interstate 35 and searched for a weapon. None was found, and Bullock was not arrested, he said.

"I went there (to Burn's house) to look into a not-so-happy situation that I felt might involve my son Bobby," Bullock said in a prepared statement.

Miami man became father and grandfather same day

MIAMI (AP) — Uncle Luis was born first — 8 pounds, 10 ounces. His niece, Carmen Maria, arrived 18 hours later — 6 pounds, 11 ounces.

And the twin blessed events meant that shoe store owner Julio Delgado became a father and a grandfather — all in the same day.

"You know, I have eight children," Delgado said Tuesday. "But the day I got Monday, I would not change for any in my life. A father and a grandfather in the same day! You know, I am crying now."

Delgado's 19-year-old daughter, Carmen Maria Ruiz-Castaneda, was at Mercy Hospital for the birth of her new brother. She went home after her mother, Conchita Delgado, gave birth at 1:37 a.m. on Labor Day.

Around 7 a.m., however, she woke her husband.

"We turned around and went back to the hospital," said Norman Ruiz-Castaneda. And so did family doctor Luis Fernandez Rocha, who had delivered Luis six hours earlier.

Defense in Layton trial not sure of next move

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A member of Larry Layton's legal team, which first decided to offer no defense at his trial and then backed away from the strategy, says no decision about Layton's defense is official "until the jury hears it."

The attorney, Tony Tamburello, declined to comment on why the jury in the conspiracy trial of the former Peoples Temple member hadn't been told of the defense plans. It remained unclear today whether Layton's attorneys would offer a defense.

On Tuesday, assistant U.S. public defender Frank Bell told U.S. District Court Judge Robert Peckham that the defense would rest its case without calling any witnesses.

"We do not believe the (prosecution) evidence has established the charges in the indictment beyond a reasonable doubt, therefore we are not going to offer any further evidence," he said.

But later, after a private, hour-long meeting with attorneys, Peckham dismissed the jurors without telling them about the defense decision to rest its case.

Peckham planned to hear fnal arguments Wednesday afternoon on whether Layton should be allowed to tell the jury about the circumstances surrounding the confession he signed in Guyana in which he claimed responsiblity for the Nov. 18, 1978, deaths of Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and four others at a remote jungle airstrip.

Layton's attorneys say the confession, which was read before the jury by a Guyanese police official last week, was made under duress. In a pretrial hearing, Layton said he was forced to sign the confession by Guyanese officials who beat and threatened him.

Layton, 35, is charged with conspiring to murder Ryan and to harm State Department official Richard Dwyer while Layton was a member of the Peoples Temple cult at Jonestown, Guyana. Ryan, three journalists and a temple defector died in the attack and Dwyer was wounded.

Tamburello said Layton had completely supported the idea of offering no defense.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Canned soup has high salt content

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend and I had lunch at one of those fast-food places recently. When he started salting his French fries, I suggested he go easy because too much salt can be harmful. His response was that each item in my lunch, which consisted of a hamburger, pie and milkshake, contained more sodium than his French fries. I find this hard to believe, and that accounts for this letter. Is there any basis for my friend's claim? — Craig, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Craig: Although not all fast-food chains are exactly alike, it is not surprising that even salted French fries may contain less sodium than the same chain's hamburgers, milkshakes or pies. The explanation is that sodium is found in a wide variety of food elements, inlcuding dough, pie crust, pickles and processed cheese. Many people who should be on sodium-restricted diets, and are careful not to add salt to the foods they eat, are often unaware of this.

The fact that salt is not added to food does not guarantee a low sodium intake. Some canned soups and vegetables, for example, have sodium levels hundreds of times higher than that found in fresh foods. Canned soups, in particular, may contain as much as a thousand milligrams of sodium per serving, more than anyone needs in a single day.

Dear Dr. Solomon: After suffering some discomfort for a while, I went to my doctor and he told me I have a duodenal ulcer. However, instead of giving me medicine, he told me to stop smoking and to cut out alcohol — or at least to cut down on the amount I drink. What kind of treatment is this? He could have at least given me some medicine. — Roy, Akron, Ohio

Dear Roy: Treatment does not necessarily mean giving a patient a prescription. I counsel many of my own patients about how they can change their lifestyles to avoid illness, and this often is much more effective than any medicine could possibly be for them.

For many patients with ulcers, giving up cigarettes and cutting down on their consumption of alcohol are the best kinds of treatment. According to a study by Dr. A. Sonnenberg of Zurich, Switzerland, moderate use of alcohol, a young age and no smoking were more important factors in healing ulcers than was medical treatment. Incidentally, the women who were studied responded much more rapidly to this form of treatment than did the men.

Dr. Sonnnenberg suggests that the best way to treat duodenal ulcers in cigarette smokers is to get them to stop smoking. For non-smokers, he recommends a placebo.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Kidnappers release hysterical hostage

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Kidnappers who threatened to cut off the head of a woman they held for ransom became frightened when they learned police had been notified and released their hysterical hostage unharmed, officials said.

Carol Joy Smith, 20, the daughter of former state district judge Charles B. Smith, was freed Wednesday morning about 15 hours after she was abducted by two men who threw a blanket over her head at a Galveston shopping center.

"She said they hauled her up three flights of stairs, tied her up, gagged her and threw her in a bathtub. We don't know much more because she is hysterical," said Galveston County Sheriff Joe Max Taylor.

He said authorities are seeking two men who in a series of telephone calls demanded $20,000 ransom in $50 bills, but released their hostage before any money was paid.

"They apparently got scared off and decided to abort it," said Galveston County Sheriff Joe Max Taylor.

Smith said his daughter overheard the kidnappers say, "There are pigs on the judge's tail."

Taylor said Smith followed telephoned instructions of the kidnappers and withdrew the $20,000 in $50 bills from his bank Wednesday morning.

"They told me if they did not get the money they would cut her head off and deliver it to me," Smith said.

Smith was sent from place to place to await calls from the kidnappers at various pay telephones, including one near the Houston Astrodome, Taylor said. But before the kidnappers collected the money, Taylor said his men told him Smith his daughter had been freed.

Taylor said she was released unharmed at a shopping center in Clear Lake, south of Houston, at about 11 a.m.

"The kidnappers had stated in a gruff voice they would kill her and send her head back in a bucket" if Smith did not follow instructions, Taylor said.

The sheriff said the kidnappers allowed the woman to talk to her parents Wednesday morning and afterward Smith's wife, Joyce, telephoned authorities and reported the kidnapping.

"I couldn't believe it," Smith said. "I said, 'Is this a joke?' Then they put her on the phone and she was crying. She said, 'Oh, Daddy.' They said, 'Now are you convinced?'"

Smith said he was first told to go to a restaurant and await instructions. There he received a call from the kidnappers on the pay phone at 8:45 a.m.

Panel discussion begins Health-Welfare program

The Midland Health and Welfare Association kicked off its 1981-82 year with a panel discussion Wednesday.

The public is invited to attend the association for sack-lunch programs at Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. A St., the second Wednesday of each month until May.

Future topics will include "The Mexican-American as Professional and Client: Cultural Alternatives to meeting Human Needs" on Oct. 14; "Helping Professionals and Politicial Realities: The Making of New Realities" on Nov. 11; "The Revitalization of an Agency: Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Midland" on Dec. 9 and "The Coordination of Social Services on the Community Level" on Feb. 10.

Most of the association's 41 members are helping professionals such as public health nurses, visiting teachers, caseworkers and agency directors.

Focus of this year's membership drive will be volunteers, concerned citizens, agency board members and agency advisory committee members who play a vital role in providing quality health and welfare services in the Midland community.

Further information can be obtained by telephoning John Young, 683-4241.

Oil-powered Mexico taking different way more

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Backed by its oil power, Mexico is demonstrating a new independence in foreign affairs that is bringing it into more frequent conflict with the United States.

The most recent instance was Mexico's recognition with France on Aug. 28 of anti-government leftist coalitions in El Salvador, where the regime is supported by the Reagan administration.

The joint declaration was one of France's few involvements in Latin American affairs since it was run out of Mexico in the 1860s and one of Mexico's more outspoken gestures since it adopted non-intervention as a cornerstone of its foreign policy in 1930.

The Mexican-French initiative angered nine Latin-American governments, including the military dictatorships in Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Guatemala, Honduras and Paraguay. In a joint statement, they expressed "grave concern" that it gave support to "subversive extremist groups" in El Salvador. Some of the nine have guerrilla problems of their own.

The United States is arming and bankrolling El Salvador's fight against the leftists, and the Mexican action seemed to bear out the prediction Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda made when President Reagan was elected: that any U.S.-Mexican confrontations likely would not be over bilateral issues but over the role of each nation in the Third World, especially Latin America.

Mexico has become increasingly independent of the United States over the years. But the huge oil discoveries and President Jose Lopez Portillo's personality are making other governments listen more to Mexico.

The oil wealth became apparent about the time Lopez Portillo took office in 1976. It has increased 12-fold since then, with proven gas and oil reserves today of 72 billion barrels, fourth largest in the world.

In his State of the Union speech Sept. 1, the president called the United States' projected neutron weapon "the worst that humanity has produced" and reiterated Mexican support for revolutionary governments in Nicaragua and Cuba.

Mexico wants to "influence events, not just invoke principles," he said.

Mexico took a seat on the U.N. Security Council for the first time in 1980 and since last April has split with the United States on four key votes involving Africa and the Middle East.

A constant theme of Lopez Portillo's speeches has been the Mexican demand for respect and equal treatment from the United States. Many Mexican schools still depict the United States as a domineering, land-grabbing big brother and stress the loss of nearly half of Mexico to the United States in the 19th century.

He also said Mexico wants to avoid being linked to one superpower or the other when it takes a stand on a regional issue, a position Mexican officials concede may be hard to understand in the United States.

Mexico, despite the wishes of the Carter administration, refused to permit the late shah of Iran to return here after he went to the United States for medical treatment. This was seen by many at the time as an attempt to enhance Mexico's status with the rest of the Third World.

At times Mexico went its own way even before the oil wealth became known and developed. In 1964, it was the only member of the Organization of American States to refuse to break relations with Cuba.

In 1975, Mexico's U.N. delegation voted with the majority in the General Assembly to condemn Zionism as a form of racism, causing a Jewish-American travel boycott that cost the Mexican tourist industry millions of dollars. The Mexican foreign minister flew to Israel to try to explain away the vote, and then-President Luis Echevarria brought down a group of Jewish-American leaders for the same purpose. Such apologies would be unthinkable today.

One top-level diplomat here, who asked not to be identified, suggested there is more than oil to Mexico taking its own path.

"Oil is a tool," he said. "Oil opens doors. But the drive is Lopez Portillo's, oil or not. It is his personal predilection not to be caught between two powers. You have to give a lot of credit to his personality.

"Mexico's move to leadership depends on a general growing up. Its decision to take a seat on the Security Council had nothing to do with oil. Before now Mexico didn't want to seek responsibility because it didn't want to get caught in the middle.

"It is recognizing that things are happening in the Caribbean and Latin America. Mexico is friendly with Cuba, but I think it also is worried about Cuban influence."

$6 billion plant pricetag based on sister project

HOUSTON (AP) — Based on the price of a nearby plant, the Allens Creek nuclear project could eventually cost six times original estimates, two nuclear power opponents said Tuesday.

Bryan Baker and John F. Doherty called for a halt to the planned project, telling a sidewalk news conference it should be canceled "in the name of common sense and in the interest of its rate payers and stockholders."

The Allens Creek project, scheduled to lie 45 miles west of Houston near Wallis, could cost $6 billion, nearly six times the original 1979 estimate, they told a group gathered outside Houston Lighting and Power's downtown headquarters.

The two men, intervenors in the ongoing Nuclear Regulatory Commission hearing on granting the utility a construction permit, said they based their statements on cost escalation at the South Texas Nuclear Project under construction near Bay City.

That facility, being constructed by Houston Lighting and Power and three partners, has roughly tripled in price from its original estimates.

Houston Lighting and Power spokesman Don Beeth retorted that "whatever Allens Creek costs, it will still be the cheapest electricity." He said there is no chance the utility will cancel plans for the project.

Steelers concerned about loss to KC

Face Miami on national television tonight

MIAMI (AP) — Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw says there was a time when National Football League observers wouldn't have been so concerned about the Steelers season-opening loss to the Kansas City Chiefs.

BUT WHEN you're coming off a 9-7 season and you failed to make the playoffs for the first time in nine years, such alarm is understandable, the 12-year veteran says.

"If we were coming off a good year, people would just say, 'Hey, this is still a great team.' But we're coming off a bad year, and I don't think they're overreacting so much as being a little bit concerned," said Bradshaw. "In football, it's so important to get off to a good start. Well, we didn't, and now everybody's scratching their heads and wondering."

Pittsburgh fumbled eight times, losing five, and Bradshaw threw two interceptions as Kansas City upset the four-time Super Bowl champions 37-33 last Sunday. Chiefs linebacker Thomas Howard scored the winning touchdown when he scooped up a Bradshaw fumble and raced 65 yards late in the fourth quarter.

The Steelers, with 15 veterans back from their four titles years and 18 others who played in at least one Super Bowl, will try to get back on the right track tonight when they meet a young Miami Dolphins team that's also struggling to regain its former NFL prominence.

GAMETIME FOR the nationally-televised matchup at the Orange Bowl is 7:30 p.m. CDT. A crowd of better than 65,000 is expected for the seventh meeting ever between the American Conference rivals.

The Dolphins, who were 8-8 in 1980 and haven't won a playoff game since Super Bowl VIII on Jan. 13, 1974, are coming off an impressive 20-7 triumph over St. Louis.

Second-year quarterback David Woodley tossed a pair of touchdowns and the Miami defense yielded only 61 yards on the ground against the Cardinals. The Steelers will face Woodley with third-year pro Dwayne Woodruff at left cornerback, in place of the injured Ron Johnson.

Shula, who is six victories shy of becoming the fourth coach in NFL history to win 200 games, said his club will be looking to establish consistency in its ground attack. Dolphins runners piled up 144 yards on 33 carries Sunday, but 46 of them came on a Tony Nathan run late in the game.

"We would have hoped the running game would have been more productive early," said Shula. "We weren't pleased with the production offensively."

THE STEELERS, who have not lost the first two games of any season since 1970, have never beaten the Dolphins in Miami, although the club did win two of its Super Bowl titles in the Orange Bowl.

Miami has compiled the second best record of any NFL team — 14-7 — during ABC prime-time telecasts, while Pittsburgh is 10-10 with four consecutive losses.

There are a dozen games Sunday with Atlanta at Green Bay, Houston at Cleveland, Los Angeles at New Orleans, the New York Giants at Washington, Tampa Bay at Kansas City, Buffalo at Baltimore, Chicago at San Francisco, Cincinnati at the New York Jets, Denver at Seattle, Detroit at San Diego, New England at Philadelphia and St.Louis at Dallas.

On Monday the Oakland Raiders travel to Bloomington to meet the Minnesota Vikings.

In other NFL news Wednesday, New England's Sam Cunningham ended a 19-month holdout, agreeing to terms with the Patriots. The veteran fullback must now pass a physical examination before signing the contract, terms of which were not revealed.

THE CINCINNATI Bengals also added a running back, signing free agent Elvis Peacock, a former No.1 draft choice by Los Angeles, but released in the Rams' final cut this year.

The Denver Broncos will be without speedy wide receiver Rick Upchurch from two to three weeks because of a sprained knee.

The Dallas Cowboys will be without the services of Mike Hegman for about four weeks. The veteran linebacker underwent surgery Wednesday to repair a small bone in his right forearm which was broken in the Cowboys' opening game against the Washington Redskins.

Reggie Kinlaw, the Oakland Raiders starting middle guard, underwent knee surgery that will sideline him at least two months

McEnroe struggles to down Krishnan at Open

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a washday miracle and a rare event in the tennis life of John McEnroe.

"It was the most tired I've ever gotten without sweating a drop," the defending champion said after underestimating and dragging through his match in the U.S. Open tennis championships against Ramesh Krishnan of India. "It's really wierd to play a match where your shirt is perfectly dry."

MCENROE STRUGGLED with lethargy, sporadic winds and an unexpectedly tough opponent before winning 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-2.

"It was just an off-balance type of affair," the 22-year-old McEnroe said. Rarely in his pro career has he played so unaggressively.

He advanced to Saturday's semifinals against 15th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis, who defeated Bruce Manson Wednesday night, 6-4, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

McEnroe beat Gerulaitis, a fellow New Yorker, in the final here in 1979.

Two more men's quarterfinals were to be played. Second-seeded Bjorn Borg met No.9 Roscoe Tanner today. It was their third year in a row meeting in the quarterfinals here. They are 1-1.

Tonight, fourth-seeded Jimmy Connors will play the other quarterfinal against No.8 Eliot Teltscher.

Teltscher defeated Brian Gottfried, the 16th seed Wednesday, 6-4, 6-0, 5-7, 1-6, 6-3. Teltscher was serving at 5-4 in the third set, but lost his next seven service games before rallying.

The women's semi pairings are set.

Defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd will meet fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova Friday, and third-seeded Tracy Austin will play No.11 Barbara Potter.

Navratilova beat Anne Smith 7-5, 6-4 Wednesday. Austin came from 0-3 down in the first set to beat No. 6 Sylvia Hanika 6-4, 6-3.

And Potter, a 19-year-old making her first semifinal in a big tournament, defeated 17-year-old Barbara Gerken, an amateur, 7-5, 7-5.

MCENROE, THE No.1 player in the world, who beat Borg in the Wimbledon final, never appeared fully involved in his match with Krishnan. "I wasn't moving my feet," he said. "I was just standing there."

But his lack of energy was not the only cause for the extended battle.

Krishnan, a 20-year-old who was the 1979 Wimbledon junior champion, has graceful, effective strokes. He played some deftly disguised drop shots and some streaking passing shots that were as lovely to look at as they were hard to return.

He is not a big hitter, although he hit deeply enough to keep McEnroe back much of the time. And he certainly does not possess a powerful serve. McEnroe noticed.

"This guy serves 10 miles an hour," McEnroe said aloud on court at one point. Asked about it later, he smiled impishly and said:

"What can I say? It's an accurate quote. He just dares you to do something with it. He doesn't even try to hit an ace. He just gets it in."

Nonetheless, Krishan beat him 12-10 in the first-set tiebreaker and was even with him through the second set.

McEnroe won the second tiebreak 7-4.

He was able to break Krishnan only once in the third set and twice in the fourth.

Krishnan was efficient and impassive for most of the match. But from 2-2 in the fourth set through 2-5, a period during which he lost 12 straight points and two service games, he looked downhearted.

MCENROE WON the final game with an overhead, two aces and a service winner.

McEnroe, who is bidding for a third consecutive Open title, had no excuses for his uncharacteristic performance. He said he was not sick or hurt.

"It's really hard to express," he said. "The pressure of being No.1 and people are talking about the record. If it's on your mind, I think it affects you a bit."

If he wins the tournament, it will be the longest string of victories for a man in the American championship since Bill Tilden won his sixth in a row in 1925.

Potter, an articulate, aggressive player from Woodbury, Conn., was having no such problems.

She said she has as much chance as the other three female semifinalists of winning. "One would have to say the pressure is on Tracy and the others now," she said confidently.

Potter is the only one of the four who came up through the minor leagues of women's tennis, the Avon Futures tour. She honed her skills there and has made a steady rise in the rankings. "It didn't happen overnight, you know," she said.

Austin was in the stands watching her match against Gerken Wednesday. Had Potter noticed?

"No comment," she said quickly, grinning. Austin has won all of their seven pro encounters.

Navratilova was looking forward to renewing her rivalry with Lloyd, who leads their head-to-head record 28-13.

NAVRATILOVA, WHO has not lost her service once here, said she feels a sense of relief now, having gotten through the first five rounds and such opponents as Smith and No.14 Kathy Jordan.

Navratilova in years past has come here as the No.1 player. "Now I have nothing to lose, which is nice for a change. I don't like being an underdog but ... when you are No.1 you have no place to go. You just keep fending people off. You can't go any higher."

Team Canada rips USSR, 7-3

By The Associated Press

Beating the Soviet Union didn't surprise Team Canada. The score did though.

"I don't know what happened to the Russians tonight," said Guy Lafleur after the Canadians scored five goals in under five minutes early in the third period Wednesday night and downed the Soviet Union 7-3 in the final round-robin game of the Canada Cup tournament.

THE TRIUMPH allowed Team Canada to finish first in the round-robin portion of the tournament.

"They certainly played a lot better against us in the exhibition game when we beat them 3-2. But we played as a team and we won as a team," Lafleur added.

Team Canada will play the United States in Montreal and the Soviet Union will meet Czechoslovakia in Ottawa in semifinals Friday, with the winners meeting in the championship game Sunday in Montreal.

Canada capped an undefeated march through the round-robin portion of the tournament with its most decisive victory over a Soviet team in recent years. A crowd of 16,001 at the Montreal Forum roared its approval as Team Canada left the Soviet defense a shambles.

IN OTHER games Wednesday, Czechoslovakia defeated Sweden 7-1 in Ottawa to kill any hope the Swedes had of squeezing into the playoffs, while Finland and the U.S. tied 4-4 in Montreal.

"I thought we'd been playing aggressively in the whole series," said Rick Middleton whose goal snapped the 2-2 tie in the third period and led the Canadian onslaught. "We've had lulls at certain times but, tonight, we seemed to keep the pace longer."

Marcel Dionne, Denis Potvin, Mike Bossy and Butch Goring all scored after Middleton to turn a close game into a runaway. Wayne Gretzky and Lafleur scored in the first and second periods to give Canada a 2-0 lead before Igor Larionov and Sergei Shepelev evened the score with second-period goals. Sergei Markorov added a meaningles goal late in the game.

Goalie Don Edwards faced 23 Soviet shots. Vladimir Myshkin, who gave first-stringer Vladislav Tretiak a rest, was tested 33 times.

The Soviets finished the round robin in second place with seven points. Czechoslovakia finished third with six points, while Team U.S.A. had five.

Cedeno suspended

ATLANTA (AP) — Houston Astros first baseman Cesar Cedeno's indefinite suspension by National League President Chub Feeney is being appealed by the Major League Players Association.

Cedeno, however, did not play in the Astros' 9-0 loss to Atlanta Wednesday night.

CEDENO CHARGED into the stands here in the first inning of Tuesday night's game, and was ejected for it. He said a fan had been heckling him for two nights and that the insults were of a personal nature.

Cedeno's agent, Tom Reich, said in New York that the suspension was unfair. "It's being done without any process. I thought there was due process in baseball.

"What precipitated Cedeno's fight was that he was abused for two days by one person," Reich said. "The guy called him murderer and killer."

Rice - Texas highlight SWC week end

DALLAS (AP) — The first Southwest Conference game of the season is played this weekend in Austin — Rice vs.Texas. Once a mid-October bash with a perennially-surprising ending, it heads a five-game slate that also includes Jerry Moore's debut as Texas Tech head coach in a game at Colorado and Arkansas' season opener at home against Tulsa. Baylor and SMU, which opened their seasons last Saturday, are at home against Bowling Green and North Texas State. Houston, Texas A&M, and TCU, who played their first games last Saturday, have the week off.

SATURDAY'S GAMES in order of starting times:

TULSA (0-1) at ARKANSAS (7-5 in 1980), 2 p.m. CDT — Arkansas' defensive secondary and offensive line were hit hard by graduation, but defensive end Billy Ray Smith is among the best defenders in college football, and running back Gary Anderson and quarterback Tom Jones add experience and talent. Tulsa had surprise going against Kansas last week until 48-yard pass interception by Roger Foote off Kenny Jackson gave Jayhawks 14-11 victory. Razorbacks hold 40-15-3 all-time lead in series that started in 1919.

TEXAS TECH (5-6 in 1980) at COLORADO (1-10 in 1980), 2:30 p.m., CDT — Texas Tech coaching debut of Jerry Moore, head coach at North Texas State last year. Moore inherits seven offensive and seven defensive starters from '80 team. Veteran quarterback Ron Reeves returns for senior season. Colorado is attempting to rebound from recent doldrums under third-year coach Chuck Fairbanks. Buffs relied heavily on passing last year and quarterback Randy Essington, split end Ricky Ward (25 receptions for 428 yards return). Buff defense allowed 41 points per game in '80. Tech is 2-0 vs. Colorado and 13-3 vs. Big Eight since joining the SWC in '60.

RICE (5-6 in 1980) at TEXAS (7-5 in 1980), 7 p.m. CDT — One of most interesting series in SWC annals has seen Texas post 15 straight victories to take 46-20-1 series lead. Texas touted as strong SWC and national contender with veteran team, Owls building on '80 season that was school's best in seven years...Rick McIvor installed as Texas QB after splitting time two years, transfer Michael Calhoun succeeds four-year starter Randy Hertel for Owls...game also offers other outstanding individuals, among them TEs Robert Hubble of Rice and Lawrence Sampleton of Texas, DTs Clenzie Pierson of Rice and Kenneth Sims of Texas...Texas returns nine offensive and eight defensive starters.

NORTH TEXAS STATE (0-1) at SMU (1-0), 7:30 p.m., CDT — Mustangs dominate this rivalry with 22 wins and a tie in 25 meetings, NTSU's wins in '33 and '77...Bob Tyler's debut with Mean Green resulted in 28-6 setback at Kentucky last week while Mustangs rolled out 504 yards in 48-0 whipping of UT Arlington...SMU tailbacks Eric Dickerson (164 yards) and Craig James (136 yards) put 300 combined rushing yards on the books to rank first and sixth, respectively, in the nation...Mustangs also lead nation in rushing offense (379 yards), total defense (30 yards), and rushing defense (17 yards).

BOWLING GREEN (4-7 in 1980) at BAYLOR (0-1), 7:30 p.m. CDT — Defending SWC champion Bears seek to atone for 18-17 loss in opener that saw Lamar win on 42-yard FG with eight seconds left...first meeting between teams and first regular-season meeting ever between teams from SWC and Mid-American Conference. Falcons, return six offensive and eight defensive starters. Falcon offense sparked by vets QB Greg Taylor and RBs Bryant Jones and Tom Clendenning...Bears' SWC-leading offense and defense of '80 both took beatings in Lamar loss as SWC leading rusher Walter Abercrombie was held to 50 yards on 16 tries and defense yielded 354 yards.

Net deadline Sept. 21

A deadline of Sept. 21 has been set for teams to sign-up for the eighth annual Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament, sponsored by the Midland National Bank. The event benefits local youth development tennis programs.

THE TOURNAMENT is scheduled for Sept 25-27 and is limited to 64 teams, according to co-chairpersons Yvonne Garton, Iona Vasicek and Carolyn Hopper. Teams will be accepted in order of application and players may register by calling Mrs. Garton at 683-1529 or Mrs. Vasicek at 682-8866.

An entry fee of $15 per team provides funds to support the Midland Junior Tennis Association's tennis program, which is for all young people in Midland. This past year the program provided free tournaments for 16-year-old players and under and financed a summer instruction program at Park Center YMCA and the Boys Club. New rackets and balls were provided to both summer programs.

TEAM SPONSOR tickets at $15 each will also be available to those who wish to support the program, but who do not wish to play. The ticket purchase is a tax deductible contribution. Team and sponsor tickets will be available from tournament committee members Celeste Fasken, Jean Henderson, Mary Ann Weisepape, Pat Innerarity, Linda Powell, Connie Scharbauer and Linda Atlee.

THE TOURNAMENT starts Friday, Sept 25, and will be played on courts at Midland Lee, Midland High, Racquet Club and Midland Country Club. Friday's play will determine flights. Flight play will begin Saturday, Sept. 26. A loss on Saturday sends a team to the consolation bracket. Finals will be played Sunday, Sept. 27.

Trophies will be presented to winners, runner-ups and winners of the consolation bracket. The event is open to players from all over the Permian Basin.

Owls, Badgers top menu

Rangers look for first win

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

The Midland area football season opened last weekend with no major surprises. Eyebows were probably raised over the 76 points Reagan County and Crane scored in the Owls' win and the easy Andrews win over Seminole.

Other surprising happenings were Sterling City's big victory over Greenwood and Lamesa's lack of offense in its lose to Lubbock High.

The other area games went about as expected. Stanton lost a close one to highly rated Tahoka while McCamey and Rankin rolled to easy wins.

Here's a look at his week's menu.

Reagan Co (1-0) at McCamey (1-0)
This game could be one of the most interesting contests of the week. Both clubs opened with big wins. Reagan County dumped Crane 42-36 while McCamey slipped by Iraan 27-12.

RC head boss Richard Davis says, "This will be a exciting ballgame. Each team has a good running game and have good defenses."

McCamey boss Larry Nabors added, "It should be a real good but I don't expect a real high scoring game."

Davis isn't as sure about the scoring, "With two clubs so much alike it could be a defensive and then you could see both teams running up and down the field putting points on the board."

Both teams head into the clash in good health. Reagan County's only injuries suffered in the Crane battle were the usualy bumps and bruises according to Davis while Nabors said the Badgers were in excellent health.

Offensively, both clubs live on the run. RC rolled up 423 yards on the ground last week at Crane. Tailback Gregg Fisher pounded out 240 yards on 25 carries while fullback Tolin Burleson tacked on 100 yards in 18 attempts and quarterback Michael Ortiz pocketed 83 yards in 12 tries.

McCamey was lead by halfback Robert Arana with 90 yards on 14 carries while fullback Donald Mann added 73 yards on nine rushes and quarterback Jerry Stacy toted the ball nine times for 71 yards. David Acosta added 57 yards on 14 attempts.

If you expect to see a passing game, you might as well skip this game. In their opener, RC threw the ball three times and completed two for 12 yards. Although Daivs did say, "We have been working hard on our passing game this week."

McCamey threw three times against Iraan and competed two for 14 yards.

Defensively, McCamey was tough as nails against the run and pass while the Owls pass defense surrendered 192 yards to the Golden Cranes. Davis explained, "We weren't putting any pressure on the passer. We have been working on that and expect to do a better job."

Davis noted the the Owls are already ahead of last year offensively. In 1980, it took the Owls four games to accumulate 435 yards of offense and they were eight games deep in the season before scoring their 42nd point.

Marfa (0-1) at Rankin (1-0)
Marfa could have its hands full trying to pin the Red Devils. The Shorthorns opened the season on a sour note, losing to Alpine 23-0 while Rankin buried Eldorado 33-0.

The biggest chore facing the Shorthorns will be finding a way to stop the Devils running attack. Fullback Dennis Black churned out 239 yards in 25 totes in the Devils' win last Friday. If Marfa can stop Black, Rankin still has Terry Turner, Bo Rose and Ronald Plegens as offensive weapons.

On defense, Rankin is traditionally strong and it appears that 1981 will be no different.

Brownfield (0-0) at Lamesa (1-0)
Brownfield will be playing its first game of the year under its new head coach James Rust. Rust took Class AAA Pittsburg to the state title last year.

Lamesa will be looking to develop some offense. In their lost to Lubbock High, the Golden Tors rushed for only 25 yards against the Westerners and picked up 79 through the air. The Tors also lost two fumbles in the 7-0 loss.

Whiteface (0-1) at Greenwood (0-1)
The Rangers will be trying to cut down on errors when they entertain the Antelopes at home Friday.

Greenwood mentor Joe Longley stated, "We have been working on our execution. In last week's loss (34-18 to Stefling City) we just made too many errors. We are a young team and are learning each game."

Whiteface opened its season with a 20-2 loss to Meadow. The Antelopes could generate only 87 yards rushing and didn't complete a pass. Defensively, Whiteface allowed Meadow 196 yards on the ground and 12 through the air.

Britt Hoy was Whiteface's top runner with 27 yards in seven attempts. Rusty Trull added 24 yards and James Waltrip netted 24, both on nine carries.

Longley stated, "I wasn't terrible disappointed in our offense against Sterling City. We gained 290 yards of offense and could have arond 350-400 but our young receivers dropped some passes."

Homer Lopez was the top Ranger runner with 79 yards in 10 attempts. Larry Dickerson, Todd Brooks and Kyle Longley scored for the Rangers.

Coahoma (1-0) at Stanton (0-1)
Coahoma invades Stanton off a convincing 30-0 thrashing of Wall. Stanton gave up a 70-yard touchdown bomb in the last 2½ minutes of play to fall to Tohoka 14-10.

The Bulldogs will be looking to reverse last year's 20-18 loss to the Buffs. In 1980, Coahoma took an 18-0 lead only to see the Buffs score 20 points in the fourth quarter to bag the victory.

Stanton is still bothered by some minor injuries. Although Tailback Kevin Newman gained 79 yards against Tohoka he was suffering some minor aliments. Coach Steve Park expects Newman and quarterback Wally Hazelwood to be closer to 100 percent of the Bulldogs.

Crane (0-1) at Monahans (1-0)
The Golden Cranes could be a stern test for Monahans. The Loboes, preseason picks to win Distict 2-AAAA, huffed and puffed before downing Kermit 15-6 last week. Crane fell to Reagan County 42-36 when a fourth-quarter rally came up short.

Monahans will have to be aware of Jeff Pinkston's throwing ability and the running of Gilbert Ramirez. In the loss to Reagan County, Pinkston pass for 192 yards and two touchdowns while Ramirez carried the ball fo 99 yards an two scores.

First year coach Ricky White hopes his Golden Cranes can tighten their defense. In their loss, the Cranes gave up 423 yards on the ground. Crane also had a fumble returned 28 yards for a score and an intercepted pass was ran back 40 yards for another six-pointer.

Midland High (1-0) at Andrews (1-0)

Fanning: Life will get better when Expos win

Is it time to break up the Chicago Cubs?

By The Associated Press

Although his team has given up 21 runs in two games since he took over as manager of the Montreal Expos, Jim Fanning knows his life will get better ... when his team wins a game.

"We scored enough runs to win, but we were a little shabby on defense," said Fanning after Montreal gave up five runs in the eighth inning to lose 11-8 to the Philadelphia Phillies Wednesday night.

Fanning, who took over the Expos after Dick Williams was fired, lost his first game 10-5 on Tuesday night.

Gary Matthews greeted Montreal reliever Charlie Lea with a three-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning to climax the five-run rally.

Despite the consecutive bombings by the Phillies, Fanning is a long way from losing his enthusiasm.

After talking to the media, the new manager walked back into the quiet locker room for a pep talk before the team left Philadelphia for a three-game series in Chicago.

Garry Maddox had three hits and three RBIs for Philadelphia, giving him eight RBIs in the last two games. Mike Schmidt hit his 25th homer, most in the majors, for the Phillies.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 3

Bobby Bonds hit two home runs in a game for the second time in three days as Chicago swept the three-game series and handed St. Louis its fifth straight loss.

The Cubs, tied for second place in the NL East with the Mets and Expos, 1½ games behind the Cardinals, already led 3-0 in the second inning when Bonds hit his first homer, a two-run shot. He added a solo homer in the fourth.

Winner Mike Krukow, 6-8, surrendered all three St. Louis runs in the sixth, but only one of them was earned because of a throwing error by shortstop Ivan DeJesus.

Braves 9, Astros 0

Phil Niekro scattered eight hits for his 41st career shutout for Atlanta, but he said he stifled Houston on an assortment of pitches rather than relying on his staple pitch, the knuckleball.

"I didn't have my good knuckler," said Niekro, 7-5. "I was wild with my knuckleball, so I used a fastball, a slider and occasionally a screwball. I probably threw pitches other than the knuckleball 85 or 90 percent of the time."

The Braves provided Niekro with a 5-0 lead in the first two innings on Glenn Hubbard's two-run single and Bob Horner's three-run homer, the 100th of his career.

Rafael Ramirez contributed four hits and three RBI to the Braves' 15-hit attack.

Reds 5, Padres 4

Johnny Bench hit the game-winning single for Cincinnati with two outs in the ninth inning and also blasted his fourth homer in the four games he has started since coming off the disabled list last week.

The Reds trailed 4-2 going into the ninth before rallying for three runs. Ken Griffey had an RBI grounder and Dave Concepcion hit a run-scoring single to tie the game, setting up Bench's decisive hit.

Bench, who suffered a broken ankle early in the season, hit a solo homer in the sixth, the 362nd of his career, putting him ahead of Joe DiMaggio on the all-time list.

Mets 5, Pirates 3

Hubie Brooks hit two run-scoring singles and Terry Leach won his first major-league game with 31-3 innings of scoreless relief pitching to lead New York over Pittsburgh.

Leach, 1-0, came into the game in the fifth inning and allowed only two hits before giving way to Ray Searage, who retired the last five batters for his first major-league save. Giants 6, Dodgers 3

San Francisco took leads into the bottom of the ninth and 10th innings at Los Angeles before making the final margin stick in the 11th on Johnnie LeMaster's tie-breaking single and Dave Bergman's two-run homer.

The Giants led 2-0 before singles by Steve Garvey, Jay Johnstone, Mike Scioscia and Rick Monday tied the score in the ninth. Jack Clark and Garvey traded homers in the 10th.

The victory snapped a four-game winning streak for Los Angeles, which also had won 30 of the previous 41 games with the Giants at Dodger Stadium.

The Sockers won 3-1, finishing the best of three in the NASL playoffs. Floyd looks to be man to beat in Fund

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — If practice rounds are any indication, Ray Floyd may be the man to beat in the Pleasant Valley Jimmy Fund Golf Classic.

Floyd, who also happens to be the leading money winner on the PGA Tour this year, said he was confident, relaxed and ready for the $300,000 event which opens today.

HIS 5-UNDER-par 66 Wednesday during a pro-am tuneup attested to that.

"I'm very excited because this proves I'm back, striking the ball well again," Floyd said. "I've really played well all year, but I picked up some kind of a bug and became weak. So I took a couple of weeks off in August, played one tournament and then took last week off.

"I relaxed and played some fun golf at home in Florida and now I feel strong again. I just wish I could take that round (66) and move it back a day or two. I'll take that kind of round anytime."

While winning three tournaments and finishing in the Top 10 12 times in 20 tournaments this year, Floyd, 41, has won $346,385, pushing his career prize money over $1,770,000.

His 15 victories in nine years on the Tournament Players' Association tour include the 1977 event at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

"It seems I get good results here," Floyd said. "I've won once, had one clean second and tied for second and generally have done well. I really haven't had a bad tournament here. So, now I come back thinking I can't play badly here."

WITH FLOYD shooting for Player-of-the-Year honors, Tom Kite checked in here for the first time since 1978 with another personal goal.

Kite, third among the money winners this year with $335,324, will be out to improve on his lead for the Vardon Trophy. He leads with an average 69.68 strokes per round.

Kite shot a 69 in the pro-am, then startled some observers by saying he wouldn't be satisfied with four of the same in the 72-hole tournament on the 7,119-yard course.

He explained that the total would be only eight strokes under par, not good enough to win. He noted that Wayne Levi was 11 under last year before being forced into a playoff and winning.

OTHER FORMER PGA champions here in the field today were Lou Graham, John Mahaffey, Buddy Allin, Roger Maltbie, Victor Regalado, Lanny Wadkins, Bruce Devlin, Dave Stockton and Tom Shaw.

Lee Trevino, who has won countless fans in stops here, was back to bid for his Pleasant Valley title as the sentimental favorite.

Ovett upset in mile run

RIETI, Italy (AP) — Sydney Maree has overcome the International Amateur Athletic Federation, but that was nothing compared to beating Steve Ovett.

Maree, the former Villanova star, ran the fifth fastest mile ever and handed Ovett his first loss in a mile event in more than four years Wednesday with a clocking of 3 minutes, 48.83 seconds in an international track and field meet.

Ovett, who set a world record in the mile of 3:48.40 Aug 26 only to see that mark shattered two days later by British compatriote Sebastian Coe, finished second Wednesday in 3:50.23.

Coe's world record is 3:47.33 and was set at the Ivo van Damme Memorial meet in Brussels, Belgium.

Coe and Ovett also hold the third and fourth fastest times in the mile. Coe ran a 3:48.53 in setting a world record at Zurich, Switzerland Aug. 18, while Ovett was timed 3:48.80 in a race in 1980.

Just two weeks ago, a race involving Ovett and Maree was unthinkable. British track officials, fearing political problems, had told Ovett not to run against Maree on two occasions because Maree, who is black, is a South African national.

Boston edges Tigers in thriller

By Associated Press

When it comes to poise, you can't beat Ralph Houk's boys.

For the 25th time this season, the Boston Red Sox came back to win a game Wednesday night, a 6-5, 11-inning thriller over the Detroit Tigers.

Gary Allenson singled home Rick Miller from second base with the go-ahead run in the 11th as the Red Sox won for the 14th time this year in their final turn at bat. The victory enabled the Red Sox to leave Detroit with two victories in three games and boosted them toward a three-game weekend series with the New York Yankees starting Friday night.

The Texas Rangers also made a nice comeback Wednesday night, scoring seven runs in the ninth inning to pull out a 9-4 victory over the Oakland A's.

Elsewhere in the American League, Kansas City defeated California 7-3, Cleveland tripped Baltimore 8-5, Seattle turned back Chicago 3-1, Minnesota stopped Toronto 3-1 and New York beat Milwaukee 5-2 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 5-3.

With the score tied 4-4, Miller led off the Boston 11th with a single and took second on a bunt by Julio Valdez. Dave Tobik, 2-1, the fourth Tiger pitcher, issued Jerry Remy an intentional walk before yielding Allenson's single. Carney Lansford walked with the bases loaded off reliever Aurelio Lopez to force home Boston's eventual winning run.

Bob Stanley, who came on in the ninth for Boston starter Frank Tanana, improved his record to 8-6 with the victory. He got relief help in the 11th from John Tudor, who recorded his first save after the Tigers scored their fifth run on a triple by Kirk Gibson and a double by Lance Parrish.

Rangers 9, A's 4

Bill Stein's three-run homer highlighted Texas' seven-run ninth. The A's committed two costly errors to help the Ranger cause.

Mark Wagner and Bump Wills opened the rally with singles off reliever Tom Underwood, 3-6, and Mickey Rivers walked to load the bases. Wagner scored when Al Oliver forced Rivers at second, and Wills came home to tie the score when a hard grounder went through third baseman Dave McKay for an error.

Steve Comer, 6-1, who pitched the last 22-3 innings, was the winner.

Royals 7, Angels 3

Willie Wilson had three hits and John Wathan, George Brett and Hal McRae all collected two as Kansas City whipped California and handed the staggering Angels their sixth straight loss.

Renie Martin, 4-5, picked up the victory in relief. He entered the game with two out in the fourth after left-hander Larry Gura, who had a 2-1 lead, dislocated the little finger on his pitching hand fielding a grounder.

The Royals struck for two runs in the first inning off loser Dave Frost, 1-6, and never lost their advantage.

Indians 8, Orioles 5

Von Hayes, one of five Cleveland batters with two or more hits, drove in two runs as the Indians defeated Baltimore. Beaten 9-2 and 14-5 by the Orioles in two previous games, the Indians took a 7-0 lead before Terry Crowley clubbed a three-run homer in the Baltimore fifth off Bert Blyleven, 11-6. Blyleven left after seven innings because of a stiff shoulder, after scattering four hits.

Hayes walked during Cleveland's three-run outburst in the second, against Steve Stone, 4-5, and had RBI singles in the fifth and seventh.

Mariners 3, White Sox 1

Tom Paciorek smashed a two-run homer and Joe Simpson added an RBI single to give right-hander Bob Stoddard his second major league victory in as many starts as Seattle beat Chicago.

The 24-year-old Stoddard pitched 62-3 innings, yielding seven hits. Chicago's only run came on a homer in the seventh by Wayne Nordhagen. That brought in Larry Andersen, who finished up for Seattle to pick up his fourth save.

Dennis Lamp, 5-4, was the loser.

Twins 3, Blue Jays 1

Fernando Arroyo, Jack O'Connor, and Doug Corbett combined on an eight-hitter to lead Minnesota over Toronto. Arroyo, 6-7, gave up just six hits and struck out five before needing relief help in the eighth.

The Twins scored a run in the fifth on an RBI groundout by Sal Butera. In the sixth, Hosken Powell singled and scored all the way from first when Rob Wilfong singled and George Bell overran the ball for an error. Wilfong took third on the play and scored the Twins' third run one out later on a sacrifice fly by Tim Corcoran.

Yankees 5-3, Brewers 2-5

Jerry Mumphrey's two-run homer and the six-hit pitching of Tommy John carried New York over Milwaukee in the opening game of their doubleheader.

The Brewers came back to win the second game as Cecil Cooper slugged a three-run homer, Ben Oglivie hit a solo shot and Mike Caldwell and Rollie Fingers combined on a six-hitter.

Texas is hunter's paradise

How fortunate we are living in Texas and claiming ourselves as hunters. Did you know that our Lone Star state offers more bird and animal hunting than most any other state in the nation?

No, our chances of bagging a bugling elk or a bull moose aren't as great as some of the northern states, but we've got an elk herd established here in Texas and, who knows, there may be a stray moose or two living on the outskirts of Midland.

It's probably not wise, but you can hunt something legally in Texas 365 days a year. And, when hunting seasons get started it's very possible to kill as many as 15 different game bird and animal species in one day. But, that would take some traveling.

Yes, let's brag! Texas has got nearly everything. Let's take a look at what we've got in the way of game birds and animals.

Whitetail Deer: Texas is the No. 1 state in the union for whitetail deer. The population is now nipping at the four million mark with more on the way. Annual hunter harvest in Texas stands somewhere near 400,000. And that's not enough animals harvested.

The whitetail, probably Texas' No. 1 game animal is distributed throughout most of the state. Only the regions in the Western Trans-Pecos and Panhandle are void of whitetails. But in the norther Panhandle regions and just easy of the High Plains, whitetails have established themselves in huntable numbers.

The Hill Country in the Edwards Plateau region is the most populated region in Texas. However, trophy bucks are uncommon due to overpopulation. The South Texas brush country is where the trophy Texas whitetails inhabit.

Mule Deer: There are two separate herds of mulies in Texas. The Trans-Pecos region is where the Desert Mule deer live. These hearty animals propose quite a challenge to hunters as they inhabit the rocky, cactus-infected desert-type terrain. The other mule deer herd, the larger Rocky Mountain mulies, lives just off the Texas High Plains in the rugged Palo Duro Canyon land bottoms. These animals sport great racks and are relatively easy to hunt. The Palo Duro herd has tripled in the last 15 years.

Antelope: Although Texas is not gifted with the great pronghorn antelope herds that Wyoming and New Mexico has, we still have a huntable population in Texas and every year one or two makes the record books. Huntable populations, by permit only, are undertaken in the Trans-Pecos region and the northwest corner of the Texas High Plains.

Aoudad Sheep: The only state in the union which supports a huntable free-roaming herd of aoudad sheep, other than New Mexico, eight Texas Panhandle counties now harbor a population of an estimated 4,000 sheep. The largest free-roaming aoudad herd was first stocked in this region in 1957 and has grown to great populations. In the last 15 years, an open season has been underway for the aoudad and now, this great animal is challenging the Rocky Mountain Goat or the Dall Sheep as the toughest animal in North America.

Javelina: This little pig-like creature is so plentiful in the South and Central Texas counties that some counties don't even have a closed season on them. Other than the far south stretches of New Mexico, these little pigs are almost Texas native. They are plentiful and present quite a hunting challenge.

Wild Turkey: There's two species of wild turkey in Texas. The most abundant, the Rio Grande turkey is found throughout much of Texas. By far, these are the most sought after game bird in Texas and do pose problems for hunters. They are smart. The other turkey in Texas is the Eastern Wild Turkey, which has been stocked in the East Texas piney woods. Texas ranks first in the nation for the number of wild turkeys harvested each year. The habitat is perfect for the wiley turkeys in Texas.

Squirrel: Both the fox or red and gray squirrel are considered game animals in Texas. These little creatures are found throughout most of the wooded areas of Texas, with the larger fox or red squirrel found in central of south Texas, while the cat or gray squirrels stick to the piney woods region.

Pheasants: Kansas and Nebraska can't brag about their pheasant hunting any longer. Yes, they still have ample pheasant populations, but now the High Plains of Texas is challenging their pheasant populations. Just in the last 10 to 20 years, the High Plains Chinese Ringneck pheasant population has boomed. Although limits in Texas pheasant counties are not as generous as the northern states, the populations will still run them a close second.

There's also another huntable pheasant population in Jefferson and Liberty counties and portions of Matagorda and Wharton counties. These coastal counties offer decent pheasant hunting from Nov. 14 throgh Dec. 13.

Quail: No where but Texas! There's blue scaled quail in the western sectors of Texas and bobwhites all over. There's no other state to compare with Texas for excellent quail hunting. Texas populations are the greatest and limits the most generous. I couldn't outline a certain region of Texas to say where the best quail hunting is. It's good everywhere!

Varmints: This includes cottontail rabbits, jackrabbits. Plus coyotes, foxes, bobcats, raccoons, ring-tailed cats, skunks, weasels, prarie dogs, wolves, mountain lions and a host of other predator animals. Texas has a variety of animals to choose from when varmint hunting. From the top of Texas to the tip, varmint animals of all kinds, shapes and sizes are there for the Texas hunter.

Waterfowl: We probably can't claim the best duck and goose hunting in North Ameica, but we could say we've got the second best overall. Duck and goose hunting is fabulous throughout most of Texas, with the Texas Gulf Coast regions being the best. But, we've also got the nation's most outstanding sandhill crane hunting. And only in the western sections of Texas. More cranes are harvested in Texas each season than any of the other six states which claim open crane seasons.

And mourning and whitewing doves. We could go on and on. But find a state that has better mourning and whitewing dove hunting and I'll purchase you a set of out-of-state hunting licenses.

Snipes' chances against Holmes looking bleak

NEW YORK (AP) — The word is that Renaldo Snipes has two chances in his fight against undefeated World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes.

"Yeah, I know, slim and none," cracked promoter Don King. "Well let me tell you this. Kenny Norton had no chance against Muhammad Ali and he broke his jaw. George Foreman had no chance against Joe Frazier and he knocked him out."

King has put Holmes and Snipes together for Nov. 6 — an interim bout for the champion while he marks time awaiting a $10 million March date against Gerry Cooney. The site and television arrangements still must be finalized before the Snipes-Holmes purses can be set but it's a cinch the numbers won't begin to approach the income a Cooney-Holmes fight will generate.

Holmes says he doesn't quite understand that. "They're willing to pay me $10 million to fight Cooney," he said. "Who has he fought? What's the difference between him and Snipes? The only difference is the color of their skin."

"Forget Cooney-Holmes," said the unbeaten 25-year-old Snipes. "That fight will never come off. Forget about it. Mike Jones knows I have a chance. They know they blew it."

King offered a word of warning to those who believe Snipes will be just a pushover for Holmes, who will celebrate his 32nd birthday three days before the fight.

Celts, Jays still fighting

BOSTON (AP) — Red Auerbach, general manager of the Boston Celtics, met here July 2 with Danny Ainge for negotiations and would need about another half day of talks to decide if they could agree on a contract, a Celtic's attorney said Wednesday.

The Celtics are barred from further negotiations with the Toronto Blue Jays' third baseman by a temporary restraining order that was extended Tuesday in New York by federal Judge Lee Gagliardi. That expires Sept.18 and was issued in a suit brought by the Blue Jays.

Another suit, brought by the Celtics, seeks to block Toronto from interfering with the National Basketball Association team's negotiations with Ainge, a star basketball guard from Brigham Young who was chosen by Boston in the second round of the NBA draft on June 9.

On Wednesday, federal Judge Rya Zobel took under advisement here the question of whether the issue should be heard here or in New York.

Earl Cooley, the Celtics' attorney, and Douglas Parker, counsel for the Blue Jays, agreed that the case should be heard in one court and that Zobel's decision could be expected within 10 days.

Parker said that he expected her to consult with Gagliardi and that they would reach consistent verdicts.

Cooley told Gagliardi Tuesday that the Celtics' rookie camp opens Sept.28. The baseball season ends Oct.4, and Cooley said Wednesday the question of whether the Celtics can negotiate with Ainge probably would be resolved by then. The Celtics' first regular-season game is Oct.30.

Voice muzzled

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox' most controversial voice is muzzled for the time being. The American League club says broadcaster Jimmy Piersall is indefinitely suspended for making remarks about players' wives during a television show.

"It was another incident in a series of incidents, none of them involving baseball, but which nevertheless was an embarrassment to our organization," White Sox Chairman Jerry Reinsdorf said Wednesday night.

WIN THE WAR AGAINST SHINNERY.

For decades, the rangeland of West Texas has been covered with brush troublemakers like sand shinnery. Battling these brush problems has been all uphill for ranchers. Until now.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, September 11, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Two very famous literary figures were born on this date: English novelist D. H. Lawrence and American short-story writer O. Henry. Romance may move you in new directions in the months ahead, but it will be your relatives who have the greatest influence on your actions. New employment opportunities open up. Be persistent in following up on interviews. A practical attitude works wonders where a business venture is concerned. Get busy and build a nest egg for the future. Although you are highly creative, your natural modesty sometimes prevents you from voicing your more imaginative and daring ideas. Be bold! Prominent people are impressed by your originality.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Teamwork is absolutely essential now. State your views in a frank but calm manner. An enthusiastic associate will spur you on. Reject superficial answers and seek the underlying causes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Contractural obligations may be featured. Trust your intuition! Be generous with someone less fortunate than yourself. A special appearance may be required for civic affairs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Obtain the latest available information when negotiating contracts. Friend or relative may be able to help. Protect your valuables. What has been humdrum in the past could take on an aura of intrigue.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Influential person lends financial support. A personal relationship faces new challenges. Additional responsibilities bring happiness and a deeper sense of fulfillment.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22): Move ahead with confidence. a major readjustment is necessary to develop a better balance between your career and domestic responsibilities. Settle overdue accounts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Expect changes in office and business procedures. Check the fine print before signing contracts. The mail brings long-delayed checks. Correct an uncomfortable situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Review your financial situation. Do not launch any new ventures right now. Evening hours may include some socializing for business purposes. Put your best foot forward.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An excellent day for linking yourself to new projects. Rely on your own efforts to carry you through. Distant affairs are more lucrative than in the recent past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be willing to compromise with mate or partner. Otherwise, a disagreement could spill over into the weekend and spoil your fun. Keep your mind on business during office hours.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A sense of duty helps you make the right choice. The confusion that has marked a family situation can be cleared up now. Someone special makes you feel attractive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not let office backbiting affect an important work relationship. Operate only on firsthand information. This is a good time to set up a payment schedule for bills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Investigate the cost of a technical course. Appreciate the joy that love brings you. Be patient with those who may be going through difficult times.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

We have remarked before that "obvious" and "correct" are not necessarily synonymous. Here's another deal to prove our point.

Since North had a near opening bid, he could not imagine that his side would be in any trouble when he raised his partner's one no trump opening bid to game. West made the text-book opening lead of the top of his club sequence and declarer noted that a successful diamond finesse would give him nine running tricks. So, declarer won in hand and ran the queen of diamonds. East won and returned a club to knock out declarer's remaining stopper, and it began to dawn on declarer that he was in a spot of trouble. He tried the spade finesse, but West grabbed the king and three more club tricks to defeat the contract one trick.

Declarer could have done better by running his diamonds before deciding on whether he wanted to finesse in either hearts or spades, but that was a minor error. Had he considered what would happen if he lost the diamond finesse, he might have come up with the winning play.

Between his hand and dummy, declarer was sure of three club stoppers if East could be kept off lead. Furthermore, if declarer banks everything on the diamond finesse and it loses, he has only eight tricks and will still need a successful finesse in one of the major suits. Therefore, it is essential to develop a ninth trick before East gains the lead.

That is a simple goal to attain. Declarer should win the first trick in dummy and take either major-suit finesse! Even if this loses, West cannot persevere in his club attack without ceding declarer another trick in the suit. He has to shift, and give declarer the tempo that puts him ahead in the race. A ninth trick has already been developed in a major suit, so declarer can afford to win any return and take the diamond finesse, even if it loses to East. When East returns a club, declarer simply wins the king and cashes out his tricks for his contract.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Brokerage firms, banks redeem bonds

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I own a corporate bond that matures next month. Is it necessary to deal with a broker in order to redeem the bond? I wrote a letter to the bank acting as trustee for the bond issue, requesting information about the proper procedure for redemption. I received the following reply, in full, "We neither buy nor sell bonds."

A. To redeem a bond when it reaches maturity you must present it to the trustee. The trustee is then required to pay you the redemption price — the face value of the bond.

You can handle this as a do-it-yourself project by delivering the bond in person or through the mails. If you go the latter route, make sure you use registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, and enclose instructions about where you want your check for the redemption proceeds sent.

Frankly, it's less worrisome to have a brokerage firm or bank handle this for you. Brokerage houses and banks handle bond redemptions for customers all the time. You may or may not have to pay a fee for that service.

If you do use a broker or a bank, turn in your bond in plenty of time for it to reach the trustee by the maturity date. Then, when the bond is redeemed, the redemption price can be wired to your brokerage firm or bank and credited to your account without any undue delay.

That curt reply you received from the bond trustee is a real grabber. It's true that the trustee does not "buy or sell" bonds. But, as trustee, it's supposed to act in the interest of bondholders. Sending you that short-shrift letter certainly violates the spirit of trusteeship. I suggest you write the president of that bank, citing how some subordinate was insubordinate.

It's possible that the trustee and-or paying agent changed after the bond was issued. That happens in some — not too many — cases. If it happened with your bond, the bank should have told you and then directed you to the successor paying agent.

Assuming that bank is still the paying agent for that bond, take your complaint to the "issuer" — the company, city or whatever other entity borrowed money by issuing the bond.

Q. Recently, I sold two bonds. The sale of one was accomplished without any problems. But my broker called and said the purchaser of the other bond asked for a "legal description" and that would cost $25.

I protested that the bond was in "bearer" form and, if I found it on the street, I could cash the coupons and redeem the bond at maturity, without proof. My broker said a request for a "legal description" is quite usual. Is that so?

A. My experts in the bond business say it happens sometimes, but not often enough to be called "usual." You ran into a situation where the buyer wanted some assurance that you were the rightful owner of the bond you sold. Some purchasers of bonds insist on that. Most don't.

MR. DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

For information about mutual funds, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address your requests to William A. Doyle, care of this newspaper.

+ + +

Q. I bought a bond with interest coupons attached. Printed on the bond are the words "principal and interest payable at the office of" a big bank in a nearby city. On each coupon are the words "interest payable at the office of" the same bank.

On the date the first interest coupon came due I took it to that bank. The teller, bank manager and others I spoke to refused to cash the coupon, because I did not have an account at that bank. I say they should have cashed the coupon for me.

My own bank, at which I have an account, did cash it for me. But to say I'm ticked off is putting it mildly. A person can't be expected to have an account at every bank just to cash interest coupons. To whom should I complain?

A. From what appears on that bond, the bank at which you had problems is both the trustee and interest paying agent for that bond issue. Under the "indenture" — the agreement under which the bond was issued — that bank is required to cash the interest coupons.

Two killed in explosion at Idaho mine

RIGGINS, Idaho (AP) — Rescuers hampered by poisonous gases today recovered the bodies of two men killed in an explosion at an Idaho mine and were trying to reach a third miner believed trapped, authorities said.

One man was rescued late Wednesday about seven hours after the blast at the Warrier Mine, one of many reopened recently in a renewed search for gold and silver in west-central Idaho.

"We just heard from our deputies at the scene," Idaho County Sheriff Bud Walkup said in a telephone interview today. "Two dead and possibly a third. They're still trying to reach the third man."

Rescuers donned air masks and battled poisonous gas as they searched for the miner.

The mine is located on Marshall Mountain 38 miles south of Riggins.

Rocky Wilson, 33, of Riggins, was taken from the mine about midnight after serchers made their way into the remote area.

Reached at the McCall hospital, Wilson declined to talk about the incident.

"Any information will have to come from my supervisor," he said.

"We're not sure, but there could be others in there," Walkup said in a telephone interview. "We don't know anything more. We believe one more is there for sure."

The cause of the blast was not immediately known, Walkup said.

'Raiders' tops summer fantasy movie bonanza

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Raiders of the Lost Ark" led a smash 15-week summer movie season with more than $125 million in box-office revenue as movie-goers flocked to see several fantasy-adventure films.

"Raiders" took in $5.41 million during the four-day Labor Day weekend to boost its 12½-week total to $125,254,773, said a Paramount Pictures spokeswoman who asked not to be named.

The film, about a swashbuckling archaeologist and his girlfriend racing the Nazis to recover the Ark of the Covenant, was still playing in 1,144 theaters in the United States and Canada. It increased its gross 24 percent from the previous weekend, she said.

The second place summer money winner was "Superman II," launched a week later than "Raiders." It had grossed $101,449,746 through Tuesday. In third place, but hardly an also-ran at $71,850,123, was "Stripes," the Bill Murray "you're-in-the-Army now" comedy.

The all-star cast of "The Cannonball Run," about a cross-country car race starring Burt Reynolds, attracted $59,871,942 in 11½ weeks in up to 1,670 theaters through Tuesday.

In fifth place at $46,436,983 was "The Four Seasons," a comedy-drama about three couples' shared vacations starring Alan Alda and Carol Burnett. It was the only non-fantasy-adventure film to make this summer's top 10 grossers.

Rounding out the top 10 were the latest James Bond movie, "For Your Eyes Only," estimated at $40 million; the Dudley Moore-John Gielgud comedy "Arthur," $39,011,690; "Cheech and Chong's Nice Dreams," $35,445,499; "Clash of the Titans," $31,585,559; and Bo Derek's "Tarzan, the Ape Man," $30,920,417.

Total returns for August and the first week of September have yet to be calculated by the Motion Picture Association of America, but summer box office tallies through July had been running up to 30 percent ahead of 1980.

Some late entries provided a kicker to the end-of-summer box office dash. "Endless Love" had taken in $23,315,700 for Universal through Labor Day, while "First Monday in October" had plopped $8,201,232 into Paramount's coffers in its first 18 days. "An American Werewolf in London" had drawn $15,067,621 in 18 days.

Some disappointments this summer included Fox's "Zorro, the Gay Blade," which grossed only $8.25 million; the R-rated animated feature "Heavy Metal" which had just over $11 million in its first 17 days; "Under the Rainbow," with $16,263,406; "Wolfen," $10,091,918, and "Honky Tonk Freeway," which had taken in less than $1 million.

CBS still dominating Nielsens

NEW YORK (AP) — With less than a month to go before the start of the 1981-82 prime-time season, CBS continues to build momentum for another run at the No. 1 position.

Ratings from the A.C. Nielsen Co. for the period ending Sept. 6 showed CBS in first place for the 16th consecutive week — and three CBS programs among the four highest rated.

Though ABC had more programs than CBS among the Top 10 — four — the network that dominated prime time until late in the 1979-80 season, finished in last place in the latest week surveyed.

CBS' rating was 14.4 to 14.1 for NBC and 13.5 for ABC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 14.4 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the country were watching CBS.

CBS scored, as it has so often in recent months, with "M-A-S-H," "House Calls" and "Dukes of Hazzard."

The rating for "M-A-S-H" was 22.1. Nielsen says that means of the nation's homes with television, 22.1 percent saw at least part of the show.

ABC's "20-20" was the only new program among the 44 most watched. The ABC magazine tied for 20th place with CBS' "60 Minutes," which was composed entirely of repeat segments.

'Loud splash' made officers suspicious

ATLANTA (AP) — A police officer testified today that he stopped Wayne B. Williams near a Chattahoochee River bridge because a "loud splash" made the officer "pretty suspicious."

Carl Holden testified at a Superior Court hearing on a pre-trial motion to suppress statements Williams made after he was stopped May 22. The 23-year-old black free-lance cameraman is charged with murdering two of the 28 blacks whose deaths are being investigated by a special police task force.

Defense attorneys said evidence seized May 22 should be suppressed because officers lacked "probable cause" to halt or question Williams. Prosecutors told Judge Clarence Cooper no evidence was seized that day, and therefore defense attorneys cannot argue an unreasonable search or seizure occurred.

Holden said Williams gave permission for a search of his car after he was stopped on an interstate highway near the bridge. The officer said he did not search the car, nor see any other officers do so.

He said a police recruit on stakeout below the bridge radioed to officers above about 3 a.m. that he heard "a loud splash." Another recruit at one end of the bridge saw Williams' car heading toward him, Holden said. The car went down the road, turned and came back across the bridge, he said.

Holden said he and an FBI agent stopped the car, and Williams produced his driver's license.
