Pope's prognosis remains 'strictly guarded'

John Paul II seems 'a little depressed'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, appearing somewhat depressed, was visited by two aides and a Polish nun today in the hospital room where he is recovering from bullet wounds inflicted by a Turkish terrorist. The nun led the group in prayer, officials said.

Dr. Wiel Manni, an attending physician, said the pope appeared a "little depressed" but his temperature returned to normal. "All tests conducted at 5 p.m. — 11 a.m. EDT — show results all within limits," he said. But he said, "the risk of infection is quite high because surgery was of an emergency nature."

The pontiff's two secretaries, the Revs. John Magee and Stanislaw Dziwisz, and the nun, who was not unidentified, spent a few minutes in the ninth floor hospital room, wearing surgical gowns, gloves and masks to protect against infection, said hospital spokesman Giulio Stella.

Stella said a heart monitoring machine was hooked up to the Polish-born pope while other sources said the 60-year-old pontiff was being fed intravenously.

The chief Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, said it was a "miracle" that the bullet which struck the pope in the intestinal area missed vital organs. "It just avoided the aorta, the urethra and the spine and hurt the intestine, something which is repairable," he told reporters.

An American, Ann Odre, one of two women hit by shots aimed at the pope was in more serious condition than first believed, said Deacon Richard Siepka from her hometown of Buffalo, N.Y., after a visit. He said doctors removed her spleen but "everyone is pleased with her progress."

Mrs. Odre, 58, was listed in serious condition with a chest wound. Rose Hall, 21, who once lived in Shirley, Mass. and now lives in West Germany, was listed in good condition with a leg wound.

An early morning medical bulletin said the pope was alert and in good and stable condition when he woke up after 5½ hours of surgery for his bullet wounds. But he was running a slight fever at that time and one of his doctors said he may need another operation within a month.

An official statement said the pope's prognosis was "strictly guarded" because of the risk of infection.

The pontiff, wounded by a gunman in St. Peter's Square Wednesday, spent a "tranquil night" in an intensive care unit after emergency surgery to repair his intestines, said a medical bulletin issued at 8 a.m. today, 2 a.m. EDT. "His mind is alert," it said.

Italian authorities today identified and charged the suspect taken into custody after the shooting. They said he was escaped Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca, convicted in absentia and sentenced to death in April 1980 for murdering a noted Turkish newspaper editor.

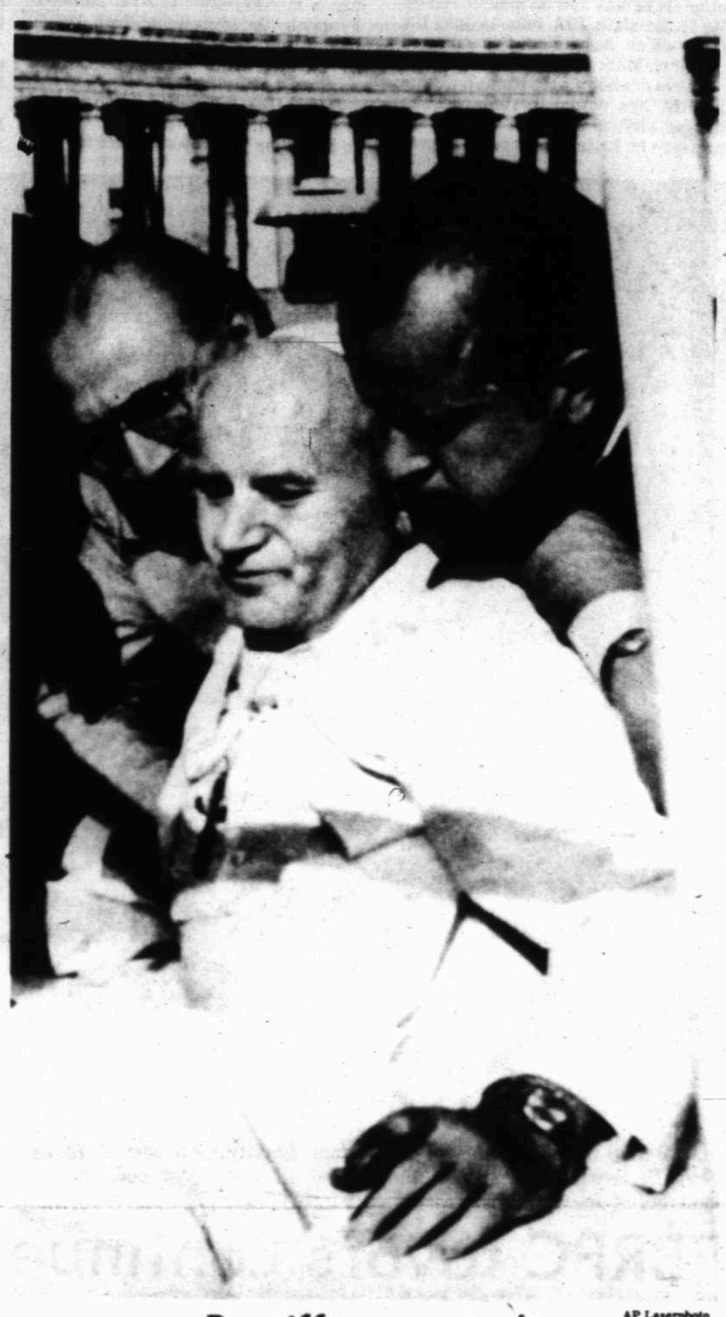

The suspect told police he was a follower of George Habash, head of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization. "I am a comrade of the communist Palestinians," police quoted Agca as saying.

A spokesman at Rome police headquarters said Agca, 23, has started a hunger strike. "He's not eating anything, he is just drinking water. He is a real stoic," the spokesman said.

Agca, who according to witnesses was about 25 feet to the pope's left when the shots were fired, was charged with attempted murder of the pontiff, attempted murder of two women wounded in the attack, illegal possession of arms and carrying false documents, police said. If convicted, he could be sentenced to life in prison. The death penalty is banned in Italy.

According to the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera, the pope murmured, "How could they do it?" as he was being driven to the hospital after the attack, indicating more than one assailant was involved. Initial reports said two people were arrested and third was sought but police later said only one gunman was involved. Doctors at the hospital also said it was unlikely the pope could have spoken since his face was covered with an oxygen mask.

Hospital sources said the pope awoke during the night and exchanged a few words with his private secretary, the Rev. Stanislaw Dziwisz.

Texans gather in special services

By the Associated Press

As Catholics across the state gathered at special services to pray for Pope John Paul II, Texas priests expressed shock over the shooting and asked compassion for his attacker.

"Our prayers should be for the Holy Father, for his recovery, but also for this young man and others like him who are disturbed, or deranged or angry so that they attempt this kind of act," Bishop John J. Fitzpatrick of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Brownsville said Wednesday.

A young man who identified himself as a Turkish national was arrested by Italian police. Authorities in Ankara said the suspect may be a convicted assassin who escaped from a Turkish prison and vowed to kill the pope.

San Antonio Archbishop Patrick Flores, appointed by John Paul as the first Mexican-American prelate of his rank in the United States, said the assassination attempt was "like a bad dream. I don't know who this sick person is who did it, but all we can do is pray that the Lord will forgive him."

Flores asked Catholics to join him in prayers. "The Pope is a teacher, a beacon. He is what the world needs today," Flores said. "He expressed concern for everyone wherever he went."

Meanwhile, Texas priests disagreed on whether the Vatican should tighten its security measures.

Father Maurice Voighty of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Odessa, who had several audiences with the Pope last year while studying at the Vatican, predicted the Pope would not approve tighter security measures if it meant isolating himself from communicants of the church.

"He did not like high security," Voighty said. "He wanted to be with the people. It would be a difficult job for anyone to protect him, but at the same time, I don't think he was afraid of anything happening to him."

"The Pope goes too much by himself everywhere," said Father Waclaw Zajcajkowski, who delivers mass at San Antonio's tiny Shrine to Our Lady of Czestochowa, Poland's patron saint.

"I was surprised when he was in Mexico and many other places that nobody bothered him," he said. "In Rome there are more communists than any other place. He must have guards."

Archbishop Flores said he hoped only that the Pope's wounds would not prove fatal.

"I would hope that this is not a mortal wound. He is definitely a teacher and we need someone like him now more than ever. I am just shocked and horrified," the Archbishop said.

Bishop Raymundo Pena held a special prayer service in El Paso at the Cathedral School, a Roman Catholic boys' school in the downtown area.

Parishioners in the city, which has a large Catholic population, gathered at churches to offer prayers for the wounded religious leader.

In Dallas, Bishop Thomas Tschoepe held a special mass at noon and Wednesday night.

City, chamber ready for clean-up campaign

South and east Midland will serve as the kickoff points for the spring clean-up campaign being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and city of Midland.

The clean-up campaign was announced recently by the two sponsoring bodies. It will follow much the same rules as set down for the fall clean-up campaign, but also will expand upon the idea.

Instead of four days as allowed in the first campaign, this clean-up will involve 10 days. The areas and days for pickup are as follows:

—Area 1; Fairground Road to Big Spring, south of Cuthbert Avenue; pickup May 18-19.

—Area 2; Big Spring Street to Fairground Road, north of Cuthbert Avenue, May 20-21.

—Area 3; Garfield Street to Big Spring Street, north of Cuthbert Avenue; May 22.

—Area 4; Garfield Street to Big Spring Street, south of Cuthbert Avenue; May 26-27.

—Area 5; Midkiff Road and Garfield Street, south of Cuthbert Avenue; May 26-27.

—Area 6; Midkiff Road to Garfield Street, north of Cuthbert; May 22.

—Area 7; Holiday Hill Road to Midkiff Road, north of Cuthbert; May 28.

—Area 8; Holiday Hill Road to Midkiff Road, south of Cuthbert; May 29 and June 1.

For the material to be collected, the clean-up sponsors are asking that residents determine the day for pickup in their area and phone their address and description of the material to the chamber at 683-3381.

The residents then should place the smaller loose trash and small items in three-yard containers. Additional pickups will be provided so that neighbors can have a place for their normal garbage. Items that can't be placed in the containers should be tied or bundled so they can be collected easily.

No back yards, side yards or in-house pickups will be provided, according to the rules. The call to the chamber should be made a week prior to the collection date. This will allow the chamber time to transmit the addresses and items to the city Street Division for scheduling. All bulky items and white goods should be placed next to trash containers.

The city will be using extra refuse collection trucks in the designated areas to provide additional pickup on containers. Also, a loader and two dump trucks will handle items too large for normal collection methods.

If items are to be placed in the alley, the chamber is asking to be called as soon as possible. The campaign is being operated during the preliminary steps for a seal-coating program. After June 1, the Street Division men and equipment will be tied up on the street program and there won't be the personnel available to pick up material placed in the alleys after the collection date in each area.

If the chamber isn't called in advance, the articles won't be picked up, the sponsors stressed.

Reagan: He still wants it his way

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, with the third budget victory in a week under its belt, is telling Congress the president wants personal income taxes cut just as he proposed: 30 percent across-the-board over three years.

"We have seen no other program that will do as much for the economy," Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said as he delivered a no-compromise message to the Senate Finance Committee Wednesday.

He made the statement after being informed by Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., that a majority of the Republican-controlled committee favors tax reductions at levels below those President Reagan advocates.

But Regan left the door open when he added that the administration "will be more than willing to look at" tax cut proposals which would meet the president's goal of ensuring a steady growth of the economy.

Meanwhile, the Democratic-controlled House voted 329-70 for Reagan's $18.6 billion supplementary appropriations bill providing more funds for the military and less for social programs in the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

The bill moved to the Senate adding $11 billion in new military spending while cutting $5.2 billion from housing programs and taking back $1.7 billion previously appropriated for sewage treatment facility grants.

The measure, tighter than the one President Carter proposed before leaving office, also contains language to deny federal funding for abortions except when a pregnancy results from rape or incest or threatens a woman's life.

The House proposed similar restrictions last year, but they were rejected by the Senate, then controlled by Democrats.

"No other program...will do as much for the economy," Treasury Secretary Regan says of Reagan's tax cut proposal.

In other congressional business Wednesday:

— The Senate moved toward a final vote today on the president's record $136.5 billion defense budget after adding $50 million for laser weapons designed to shoot down enemy missiles as they enter space.

The money was championed by Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., who said the Soviets reportedly plan to have such weapons in space by the mid-1980s. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said he expects a corresponding amount to be cut elsewhere in the defense budget.

— The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved the president's request for repeal of the five-year-old ban against covert U.S. operations in Angola after the administration accepted a condition.

The condition says that before such operations in support of anti-Marxist guerrillas could resume "substantial progress" would have to be made in the U.S. effort to help neighboring Namibia win independence from South Africa.

— The House rejected a $3 billion appropriation to buy oil for the nation's strategic reserves. Opponents said the proposal violates budget language adopted last week calling for some form of private financing to pay for the reserves buildup.

— A push by Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y., to reinstitue the partial embargo on U.S. grain shipments to the Soviet Union was rejected 22-10 by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

— The public broadcasting budget for fiscal years 1984 through 1986 was sent to the House floor by the Commerce Committee after Democrats rallied to reject lower spending levels proposed by Reagan.

— The Senate Agriculture Committee trimmed about $1 billion from proposed 1982 farm support programs in an attempt to keep the new farm bill within budget guidelines. The House Agriculture Committee has abandoned efforts to meet the guidelines.

— A House subcommittee voted to finance the Consumer Product Safety Commission for three years as the Senate Commerce Committee approved two years of funding for the agency, which the administration wants to abolish.

When spending, Senate won't buck trend

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senators stuck to tradition in approving a state spending bill without a single amendment.

The Senate voted 27-3 Wednesday to adopt a $26.6 billion two-year budget after rejecting proposals to cut out nearly $484.6 million in a single slice and to trim the number of state holidays from 18 to 12.

Lopsided votes also were cast against an amendment aimed at pro-abortion groups and proposals to require public schools to teach the biblical theory of evolution.

The Senate spending bill is $191 million higher than expected revenue for 1982-83, but a House-Senate conference committee almost certainly will write the final version.

"I assure you I will be working for a bill that can be certified since I don't want to come back in special session," said Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, chairman of the Finance Committee.

Senators traditionally have approved a proposed budget without amendments, choosing to allow a 10-member conference committee to work out differences in House and Senate bills.

The House last week approved a spending bill $170 million smaller than the Senate bill.

Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, referred to Senate tradition in asking, "Which tradition are you going to follow — that of the Senate, or that of parents to consent before dangerous medical drugs can be dispensed to minor children?"

Despite his plea, the Senate defeated Mengden's amendment to ban state funds for any clinic that distributes contraceptives to minor children without their parents' approval.

The two-hour Senate debate included an outburst by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, who shouted, "I object to the hypocrisy of some people getting up and talking as if they have a lock on Christianity.

"The schools are no place to teach religious training," said Parker.

Parker reacted to an amendment by Mengden which would have prohibited the use of state funds for courses or programs that "demonstrate a preference or show bias" toward any theory of origin of the universe, earth or life.

Mengden said he was talking about "scientific data developed by the scientific community — this has nothing to do with the Bible." His amendment failed, 24-4.

Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless, offered an amendment to cut the proposed budget by 5 percent, excluding matching grants for federal funds or general revenue money earmarked for special funds.

"How are you going to build only 95 percent of a roof for a building that some of these colleges need?" asked Parker. "You are cutting some areas where it will just be inconvenient, but in other areas it is a matter of life and death." Meier's amendment lost, 24-6.

Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, tried unsuccessfully to reduce the number of paid state holidays from 18 to 12. He said each agency would be able to choose the 12 holidays it wanted, and this would be "two more than federal employees get, three more than city employees get and quite a bit more than most employers get."

Jones said with each agency selecting its holidays "you could have 200 different state holidays."

Leedom's amendment was rejected, 25-3.

Mengden mentioned the Texas Family Planning Association in an unsuccessful attempt to block any organization that lobbies for or against legislation from receiving state money. The association, which includes state agencies and schools among its members, has supported bills giving women the choice of having an abortion.

New IRA hunger striker carries on

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A new convicted IRA guerrilla began a hunger strike at the Maze Prison today to replace Francis Hughes, 25, who died last Tuesday after a 59-day fast.

Sinn Fein, the Irish Republican Army's political front identified the new hunger striker as Brendan McLaughlin, 29, serving a 12-year sentence imposed in 1977 for illegal possession of arms.

A spokesman for the Northern Ireland Office said McLaughlin refused breakfast Thursday and told prison officials he was now on hunger strike. He is the sixth IRA man to join the fast, which has killed two since it began on March 1.

The overwhelmingly Roman Catholic IRA has vowed to replace each hunger striker who dies to keep up pressure on Britain in its campaign to win political prisoner status for jailed Irish nationalist guerrillas.

The latest round of the campaign was started by Bobby Sands, an IRA guerrilla and member of the British parliament who died May 5 after 66 days without food.

Meanwhile, the body of hunger striker Hughes was carried home for burial today, but not before his hearse was stoned by a crowd of Protestant youths blocking the road.

A Protestant member of the British Parliament from Northern Ireland, John Dunlop, demanded that police ban a military-style funeral planned Friday by the Irish Republican Army in Hughes' home village of Bellaghy in County Londonderry, 40 miles northwest of Belfast.

If the IRA funeral is not banned, Dunlop said, "People will have to look to providing their own protection." A similar military funeral for Sands in Belfast last week was followed by rioting, but not the wide-scale disorder some had predicted.

Skirmishing between security forces and Catholics pressing for union between the British-ruled province of Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland to the south continued Wednesday night, with a clash between police and Catholics in Dublin and a British soldier seriously injured in Belfast.

Three other IRA men remain on hunger strike in Belfast's Maze Prison and a fourth was expected to take Hughes' place today.

The IRA had planned to take the coffin through Catholic west Belfast following Hughes' death.

Police refused to release Hughes' body for seven hours, until his family agreed to take the guerrilla's remains direct to their home at Bellaghy, where he was raised with nine other children on a small farm.

Even after the family agreed — leaving 5,000 IRA supporters angered in the streets — there was trouble.

The hearse, escorted by about 15 police cars and motorcyles on its journey Wednesday night, was halted briefly by anti-IRA demonstrators about a mile from the Belfast mortuary where the body had lain. The crowd, waving British Union Jack flags, pelted the hearse with stones and police had to restrain IRA sympathizers. The hearse resumed its journey undamaged.

When the coffin eventually arrived in Bellaghy early today, pallbearers carried it the final quarter-mile. It was draped in an Irish tricolor.

Detective John Williams of the Lamar County Sheriff's Department, sits on the steps of all that remains of the Emberson Baptist Church in the northeast Texas community after it was hit by a tornado.

Twister hits northeast Texas town

EMBERSON, Texas (AP) — A tornado described as being 300 to 500 yards wide roared through this northeast Texas town, leaving 28 persons injured and 21 homes and a church demolished.

Meanwhile, a discount store ceiling collapsed under the weight of rainwater in Oklahoma and tornadoes demolished homes in several other towns in northeastern Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Only six of the 28 persons injured Wednesday night in Emberson required hospitalization, Lamar County officials said.

Eyewitness Doug Winn, said the tornado was 300-500 yards wide when it roared into the small town.

"It was so big, I never really saw a funnel, just a wall of debris coming at me," Winn said.

He said he, his wife and daughter escaped injury by running into their bathroom. He said they climbed into a bath tub and pulled a mattress on top of them.

Some of the injured were inside a small church attending Wednesday night worship services when the storm struck at 7:25 p.m.

Emberson is located six miles north of Paris, not far from the Texas-Oklahoma border.

In addition to the demolished homes, the tornado also downed power lines and trees across a wide area of the small town.

Authorities in Hugo, Okla., said a roof over a new expansion on a Wal-Mart store caved in Wednesday after two inches of rain fell within 30 minutes. An insurance adjuster at the scene estimated damages to the store at $1 million.

A woman injured her knee when she ducked beneath a pile of shelving as the roof collapsed, officials said. She was treated at a hospital and released.

Another tornado that struck near Dodd City, Texas, destroyed a house and a barn, and houses were damaged by tornadoes in at least two other towns.

High winds felled trees across northeast Texas.

Hail reportedly caused $300,000 worth of damage to Oklahoma's Training School for Boys at Helena, and an Oologah, Okla., man was critically injured in a collision involving a school bus that authorities blamed on a rain-slickened pavement.

Kyle Kilgore, 18, was rushed to a nearby hospital in critical condition Wednesday after he lost control of his car on Interstate 244 in Tulsa and was struck by a Tulsa school bus. The bus was not carrying any children at the time, the Highway Patrol said.

Property damage also was reported in the rural Oklahoma community of Lehigh after a tornado touched down. No injuries were reported.

Baseball-sized hail was reported near Lula, Okla., and other twisters were reported in northeastern Oklahoma.

PBRPC favors continued funding of high school suspension centers

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

The board of directors of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission gave a favorable recommendation to an application for continued funding of on-campus suspension centers for Lee and Midland High schools Wednesday in their regular monthly meeting.

Slated to cost $36,962, the four months of continued funding for the centers received two "no" votes at the PBRPC level.

Questioning Midland Independent School District representative Maridell Fryar, one director asked, "Isn't this just to keep Midland's ADA (average daily attendence) from dropping?" By keeping students who would normally be suspended from school on-campus, the director implied the higher ADA figures would help continued state funding of the school district.

Mrs. Fryar denied the charge. "The primary reason for this program is it has brought the school district an alternative between (keeping a disruptive student in class) and taking the more drastic measure of suspending students off-campus." Many times students are suspended for skipping school, she said, which appeared to be an ironic contradiction of efforts.

"We want to keep them in school and not out committing juvenile offenses while out of school," Mrs. Fryar said.

The current funding grant from the Criminal Justice Division of the Governor's Office expired April 30. This application covers $29,804 from CJD and $7,157 from MISD in matched funds for May and September in addition to "finishing out of regular teacher contracts for four months."

About $1,600 of the funds will go to supplies. A classroom at each of the high schools has been set aside for this program. The classrooms are equipped with 20 individual study carrels, 10 student desks, a large library table as well as bookshelves; overhead, slide and filmstrip projectors; tape recorder; record player and listening station.

Each center will have a director and a teacher's aide.

Some 333 students from grades seven through 12 were enrolled in the program between August 1980 and April 1981.

In other decisions, the board:

—Authorized an application to the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for maintenance of the Midland/Odessa Mass Transit Study.

—Recommended an application to the Federal Housing Administration for an environmental review of Superior Addition subdivision in Midland, as requested by Personality Homes of Lubbock. The initial plan of the developer in the small subdivision is to build three homes in the $70,000-$100,000 range.

—Recommended an FHA review of the County Club subdivision in Monahans as requested by DGK Development Co. of Odessa. The developer plans to build four homes in the $45,000-$60,000 range.

—Recommended continued federal funding of Green Thumb, Inc., a community work group in Gaines and Dawson counties.

—Approved an application to the Criminal Justice Division of the Governor's Office for continued funding of the Regional Police Training Academy for $8,339.

—Recommended approval of continued funding of Head Start programs in Ector County, MISD and Big Spring Independent School District.

—Recommended continued funding for administration and community programming of West Texas Opportunities, Inc., operating in Dawson, Borden, Gaines, Upton, Martin, Ector and Glasscock Counties.

—Recommended approval of a Developmental Disabilities Grant from the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation for The West Texas Epilepsy Association. The grant is for $21,029 and will be matched by $21,028 from West Texas Epilepsy.

—Recommended approval of a funding request to MHMR for the Permian Basin Community Center to provide services for mentally disabled children in Pecos County. Asking for $24,181, the PBCC will match the funds equally.

Area temperatures expected to warm up by weekend

Today's slightly cooler temperatures should return to the mid-80s on Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Skies will continue to be partly cloudy tonight through Friday. There is no precipitation in the forecast.

Northeasterly winds of 10-15 mph will continue this afternoon, changing to the southeast tonight. On Friday winds should pick up to 15-20 mph from the southwest.

Low tonight should be in the upper 50s. This morning's low was 52 degrees. The record low for this date is 41 degrees set in 1953.

The high Wednesday was 86 degrees. The record high was set in 1960 at 102 degrees.

Tornadoes, hail and high winds pushed across northeast Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and northern Louisiana, collapsing the roof of a discount store in Hugo, Okla., and destroying 21 houses and injuring 28 people in Emberson, Texas.

A woman injured her knee Wednesday when she ducked beneath a pile of shelving as the roof collapsed at the Wal-Mart store after two inches of rain fell in Hugo.

Three of the injured in Emberson were hospitalized.

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House of Representatives gave tentative approval Tuesday to legislation by Rep. Joe Hanna of Breckenridge which would limit a city's ability to tax offshore oil operations.

Hanna's House Bill 411 would restrict home rule cities from annexing offshore waters beyond 3.8 miles from the shoreline.

The bill is a response to an annexation by the city of Port Arthur, which annexed offshore to the 10.3-mile state line to collect tax revenue from offshore operations.

Rep. Frank Collazo of Port Arthur, who proposed an amendment to extend the limit to five miles, said cities along the coast provide numerous services to accommodate offshore operations and deserve some revenue in return.

Hanna and other supporters of his bill called Port Arthur's action "greedy."

Hanna noted that Port Arthur is the only city the bill would affect. Corpus Christi and Galveston both have annexed only two miles into the Gulf, although they could go as far as 10.3 miles, or three marine leagues.

Rep. Leroy Wieting, from the coastal town of Portland, said, "It makes no sense whatsoever to arbitrarily draw a line 3.8 miles out in the Gulf."

Wieting proposed an amendment to extend the limit to five miles, which also was tabled.

Before the vote, Wieting noted that all home-rule cities have extra-territorial jurisdiction within five miles of their city limits on land and coastal cities "should have the same right as they do inland."

The bill, which passed second reading by a 99-44 vote, must receive final House approval before going to the Senate.

Hail, wind damage costly

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Property losses during the recent hail and windstorm in the Dallas-Fort Worth area might have been the most ever caused by such a storm, according to the Texas Insurance Advisory Association.

Tom Lee, general manager of the association, said Wednesday the damage could add up to $150 million.

"We've never had this much insured loss from a catastrophe, without a tornado as in Wichita Falls or a hurricane like Celia. Hail and windstorm losses are common, but not on this scale," he said.

TIAA is a group of property insurers that advises the State Board of Insurance.

Police arrest two burglary suspects

Police today said they responded to a call from a neighbor and arrested two men who were in the process of burglarizing the Frank See Chevrolet Co. shortly before 10 p.m. Wednesday.

One of the suspects is a 16-year-old Midland High school student. The other suspect's identity was not available by press time. Formal charges are expected later in the day.

In other police activity during the past 24 hours, an employee of the Big Cheese Pizza restaurant at Wadley and Garfield streets told officers someone broke a window on the west side of the establishment late Wednesday night and took $1,200 to $1,500 from a safe. The thief apparently knew the combination to the safe, as there was no sign of forced entry.

Police, Fire Roundup

A minister with the Permian Church of Religious Science, which is located in the Sandpiper Motel, 3838 West Highway 80, said two speakers and a cassette tape player worth a total of $250 were stolen from the church Wednesday.

In auto burglary complaints, Linda Minor of the Desert Inn Motel told police a purse containing $50 in cash and assorted credit cards was removed from her vehicle while it was parked at Taco Villa, 2100 W. Wall. Will Sutton of Spencer, Okla., said a "fuzz buster" and a pair of tin snips worth a total of $299 were stolen from his vehicle while it was parked at the Travel Inn Motel.

Also, Mrs. Rick Virgil of 700 N. Main reported the theft of a Clipper Mason saw from a pickup truck.

Sheriff's deputies today were investigating the disappearance of a $1,500 parrot belonging to Robert Inman, 610 W. Cuthbert. The bird disappeared Wednesday and it wasn't immediately known if it was stolen or if it simply flew away.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a portable toilet behind a building in the 3800 block of Andrews Highway about 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Marijuana treatment not ideal for glaucoma

Dear Dr. Solomon: The daily papers have been carrying a number of articles about the use of marijuana for cancer patients who are receiving chemotherapy. At the moment, however, I am more interested in the treatment of glaucoma. Is there anything new in the use of marijuana for this condition? — Hugh

Dear Hugh: In discussing the use of various medications, I have frequently mentioned the trade-offs that often have to be made between the effectiveness of a drug and the adverse side effects that may occur. The use of marijuana in the treatment of glaucoma illustrates this dilemma.

While some of the components of the marijuana plant have been found to reduce the intracular pressure which is characteristic of glaucoma, there are too many undesirable side effects, including rapid heart action and problems with color vision and ability to adapt to the dark. Moreover, it appears that marijuana cannot reduce intraocular pressure without also making the patient high. In other words, if the marijuana is to be effective in treating the glaucoma, the patient will have to be stoned all day. As you can see, this would not be a very practical solution to the problem.

Some researchers have suggested that a glaucoma patient who uses marijuana over an extended period of time may eventually lose his or her sensitivity to the drug; however, this theory is still debatable.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I went for my annual physical examination shortly after taking on a new jew job which involves a lot more responsibility. Except for an increase in my blood pressure, I checked out OK. Is it possible that the stress I feel on my job could be the cause of the higher blood pressure? — Paul

Dear Paul: Social and psychological factors can indeed cause a person's blood pressure to rise. In many individuals, stressful situations — whether resulting from job pressures, financial problems, marital friction, illness, or a death in the family — have been found to coincide with periods of increased blood pressure readings. I suggest you have your blood pressure checked once more after you've been on the job for a while. If it still is high, your physician may want to begin a course of treatment.

Cult sticks by condemned Corvair

FRANKFORT, Ill. (AP) — It was a funny-looking compact car with the engine in the rear, condemned by Ralph Nader as "unsafe at any speed." General Motors quit making them a dozen years ago.

The Corvair, like Ford's Edsel, fell victim to a throwaway society.

But thousands of the little Chevrolets have survived, pampered and polished by members of a Corvair cult who say it's really the only way to go.

One of them is Larry Claypool, who was only five years old when the first Corvair rolled off the assembly line in 1960 and too young to get a driver's license when they went out of production in 1969.

At Claypool's auto repair shop in this rural Will County community near Chicago, there are Corvairs in various states of disrepair scattered all over the lot and two ramshackle sheds stuffed with rare Corvair parts.

In his home there are Corvair movie reels, Corvair photo albums, Corvair postcards and two shelves lined with trophies he won in Corvair cult races. Claypool owns seven Corvairs.

Is Claypool's brain running on empty?

Nader, the consumer advocate, denounced the Corvair as "unsafe at any speed" in his 1965 book of the same name. Chevrolet reacted by gradually phasing out production.

Claypool says Corvair enthusiasts were undaunted and business at his repair shop, The Vair Shop, known by Corvair drivers all over the Midwest, has improved every year since he started in 1972.

"In the beginning, people tried to tell me, 'Oh they don't make them any more, what are you gonna do in two years?'" he said. "Well, the number of Corvairs on the road falls with every passing year, but at the same time fewer and fewer places are fixing them, so I keep a good business. I'm backed up two months in orders."

Nader said the Corvair oversteered in sharp turns and its rear wheels tucked inward when the car slid sideways, increasing the danger of a roll at high speeds.

But in 1971, two years after the car's termination, a federal study found the Corvair no more dangerous than other contemporary cars when driven at reasonable speeds. Consumer Guide magazine subsequently judged the last model year to be a good used-car buy.

Claypool belongs to the Corvair Society of America, a group of 7,800 Corvair owners with 100 chapters around the nation and in Canada, Sweden and Iceland, with names such as Association of Corvair Nuts (Rochester, N.Y.) and Choo Choo Corvairs (Chattanooga, Tenn.).

The national organization puts out a monthly magazine, Corsa Communique, and stages yearly conventions featuring car rallies and parts swaps.

The Chicagoland Corvair Enthusiasts is part of Ice Challenge Events, a group of five Chicago car clubs that makes an annual winter pilgrimage to Twin Lakes, Wis., for ice races.

"The Corvairs do real well because with their rear-mounted engines, their traction (on ice) is great," Claypool said.

Charles R. Bell, a Chicago taxi driver, says a Corvair he owned from 1965 to 1975 was the best Chevrolet ever made. "I drove it to Arizona and back three times," said Bell, 59. "No kind of weather stopped it. It was the sorriest move I ever made to sell it. I can tell Nader that to his face."

Claypool says he helped his older brother buy a new 1969 Corvair for a pittance a few weeks after they went out of production.

A couple of years later, Claypool found an abandoned, 1961 Corvair station wagon. He located the owner and bought the car for $10.

"Then I got my driver's license and started picking Corvairs up regularly for $50 or so, fixed them up a little and resold them."

Two dank, gloomy sheds are treasure troves of rare Corvair parts Claypool has collected. There are turbochargers, tinted windshields, adjustable telescopic steering columns, chrome trims, wire wheel rims, original upholstery and accessories such as tissue dispensers, mounted clocks and trailer hitches.

Claypool now runs a mail order business in parts.

He says Chevrolet still stocks many parts but many dealers are unwilling to provide service for a long-defunct vehicle. However, he says, in recent years small independent firms, with names like Corvair Underground, have formed to specialize solely in reproduced Corvair parts.

"Many of the reproduced parts are better than the originals because now more care goes into making them," Claypool said.

'King' now seen on 1956 kinescopes

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum is now showing 1956 kinescopes of the late singer Elvis Presley during his early career.

The kinescopes show Presley making appearances on the Ed Sullivan, Milton Berle and Steve Allen television shows.

The kinescopes come from the holdings of the Country Music Foundation, which operates the Hall of Fame and the museum. They were unveiled Tuesday at a reception.

Presley, of Memphis, Tenn., was considered a "rockabilly" singer — a hybrid of rock 'n' roll and country music — early in his career.

•

ATLANTA (AP) — Former America's Cup yachting champion Ted Turner says he's giving up professional sailing to concentrate on his business interests in television.

"I'm all through...I just don't have the time (for sailing) since I'm now trying to improve the quality of television," said Turner.

Turner, 42, is chairman of the board of the company that runs Atlanta-based Cable News Network. He also owns the Atlanta Braves and Atlanta Hawks.

Turner said his 63-foot aluminum ocean racer, Tenacious, is up for sale. He said he will still do some recreational sailing with his son.

Turner filed suit Monday against President Reagan, White House aides and the three major television networks in a dispute over CNN's limited access to presidential news conferences.

Recently he also urged a congressional probe of "sex and violence" aired by the networks.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sylvester Stallone says Philadephia won't get to keep his gift. The actor says he's taking a 6-foot-8-inch statue of "Rocky," a boxer he played in two movies, back to California.

The statue — which shows Rocky with his gloved hands extended upward — was placed at the top of the steps to the Philadelphia Museum of Art five days ago during filming of a scene for a new film, "Rocky III."

Stallone said last Dec. 10 that he would give the city the statue, sculpted by Tom Schomberg.

But art commissioners viewed the gift as commercially motivated and said the statue could be left on the museum steps only during filming.

They suggested it should stand at Philadephia's Spectrum sports arena.

Stallone reportedly became angry when he read about the bruhaha.

"He didn't mean for the statue to be crammed down anyone's throat," said an unnamed source quoted by The Bulletin Wednesday. "Whether it stays or not doesn't matter to him."

"I'm sorry that got blown out of proportion," Stallone said at a news conference Tuesday. "Basically, it was a prop built for the movies. We've already made plans to take it back to California and put it up there."

City Representative Richard Doran said he was surprised that the actor planned to repossess the statue:

"If they would reconsider, we would be delighted to have it."

•

ROME (AP) — Austrian film star Helmut Berger was released on "provisional liberty" Tuesday night, 48 hours after his arrested on charges of insulting police and driving with an expired license, police reported Wednesday.

Berger, 37, a Rome resident, was driving his car at high speed in the city's northern section Monday night.

The actor allegedly cursed two police officers who stopped his car.

Berger has starred in a number of films, including the late Italian director Luchino Visconti's "The Damned," "Ludwig" and "Family Portrait."

Miss Texas, Diana Durnford of El Paso, center, took second place honors in costume competition at the Miss USA Pageant in Biloxi, Miss. She was topped by Miss Massachsetts, Jo Ann Savery, left, and followed by Miss Illinois, Leslie H. Renfrow.

Costumes judged

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — The scallop-shell costume worn by Miss Massachusetts, Jo Ann Savery of East Bridgewater, has won her first place in costume competition at the Miss USA Pageant.

Miss Savery's garb was made from the shells found on the beaches of her state.

Taking second place in the costume judging Wednesday night was Miss Texas, Diana Durnford of El Paso, who wore a rhinestone ranger outfit with ostrich feather chaps. In third place was Miss Illinois, Leslie Renfrow of Chicago, whose costume represented the Fermi National Accelerator, a nuclear research facility in her state.

Swimsuit and evening gown competition for the 51 contestants will be held Sunday, and the nationally televised finals are scheduled for May 21 in the Mississippi Coast Coliseum.

Honorary pallbearers will be James Burton, Ralph Hanson, Horace Henderson, Carl Clay and Milton Porter.

Mrs. F. Underwood

STANTON — Services for Mrs. Foy Flurry Underwood, 82, mother of Mrs. Thomas Nelson of Midland, are set for 3:30 p.m. Friday in the Callaway-Smith-Cobb Funeral Home in Marlow, Okla. Burial will be in Marlow Cemetery. Local arrangements were handled by Gilbreath Funeral Home in Stanton.

Mrs. Underwood died early today in the Martin County Hospital here. She was born July 18, 1898, in Bellville, Ark., and had lived in Stanton for the past seven years. Prior to that she lived in Wichita Falls.

She married Harry E. Underwood July 6, 1922, in Chickasha, Okla. He died in 1973. She was a member of St. Mark's Methodist Church in Wichita Falls.

Other survivors include two daughters, a sister and six grandchildren.

Violence befalls man of peace

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

He preached peace, but met violence. He extolled goodness, but encountered wrong. He defended the nobility of each human life, but his own was assailed. He presided at the prime center of Christianity yet there, at that shrine to love and compassion, came the attack on him.

These are among the ironies in the shooting of Pope John Paul II Wednesday as he mingled so typically with an admiring throng in the plaza of St. Peter's.

A "terrible contradiction," Bishop Louis Gelineau of Providence, R.I. called the affair, an armed assault on a man who so passionately upheld peace and harmony among peoples, who honored life, who personified to millions the caring love of his faith.

"It is particularly a tragedy to have violence occur in the life of a person who is constantly calling for disarmament and peace in the world," said Bishop John Marshall of Burlington, Vt.

That odd combination, the paradox of it, was noted by many people, in and out of the church.

"You would think the pope would be one public figure that might be isolated from such a murderous attack," observed old-time Republican leader Alf Landon, 93, of Kansas City, Mo. "But even he is not immune."

While the possibility of it always exists, it's hard to conceive that it "would happen right in the Vatican," said Bishop Thomas Larkin of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Yet there, at that geographical and historic hub of a worldwide faith in Christ, the "Prince of Peace," the gunfire cracked and the man known as Christ's "vicar" on earth fell.

To many Catholics, it was like a blow at their own spiritual beings and faith itself, since the pope is its chief representative. The emotion is similar to that felt personally in attempts on the lives of presidents or kings who symbolize a whole people.

Throughout the vigorous ministry of this most-traveled pope in history, John Paul has been called an "ambassador of peace." He has constantly stressed the urgency of reconciliaion among nations and groups, of human brotherhood, the preciousness of each life, and the deadly evil of modern arms and violence.

"On my knees, I beg you to turn away from the paths of violence and return to the ways of peace," he pleaded in violence-wracked Ireland. He had made similar pleas in many lands and to the United Nations, condemning the arms race as imperiling human existence.

The awfulness of it is that a man "who has spent himself in working for peace in our world is now the victim of senseless violence," said Archbishop John Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Not only had John Paul preached peace, but also justice, decrying the gaping chasm between rich and poor, condemning the oppressive trampling of human rights in the world, proclaiming the worth and significance of every life.

However, if there was paradox in the shooting of the pope, there also was some paradox in his policies. Although generous, open and affectionate in personal manner, he was staunchly orthodox in application of church discipline and doctrine.

The "paradoxical pope," a recent article called him.

For all the pope's complexities, and his magnetism and natural warmth, the attack on him defied the total thrust and force of the man and his office, a beacon for peace, equity, non-violence, love, kindness and understanding among the diverse children of the earth.

The shooting was the sort of "senseless violence against which the pontiff himself has so valiantly witnessed," said United Presbyterian chief executive William Thompson.

Commented Cardinal Humberto Medeiros of Boston: "If this man, so strong a force for goodness, justice and peace, is attacked, who then among us is safe?"

Yet, like the attack on the pope, Christianity itself is a paradox, seeing in a death on the cross the hope of real life.

The Word of God tells the Christian to spread the gospel throughout the world. With todays space age technology, "word processors" are helping to make that difficult task a bit easier. If you are a Christian, ask God how He would have you to respond to this need. For more information write to

Signs of progress signaled in coal talks

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since union miners voted down a contract with the soft-coal industry a month and a half ago, labor and management are signaling some progress in negotiations to end the nationwide strike.

At the conclusion of Wednesday's four-hour bargaining session here, spokesmen for the United Mine Workers and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, bargaining arm for some 1,100 coal companies, talked more optimistically of the chances for agreement.

The two sides planned to continue contract talks today as the strike, which has cut national coal production in half, entered its 49th day.

"It's beginning to get serious," said Bobby R. Brown, president of Consolidation Coal Co. of Pittsburgh and chief BCOA negotiator.

The two sides resumed bargaining last Thursday following a 2½-week hiatus during which the industry vowed not to hold talks until the UMW was willing to "bargain seriously."

Asked if this meant UMW negotiators were responding to the industry's exhortation, Brown replied: "You'll have to choose your own word."

UMW President Sam Church said, "We're making a little progress."

He told reporters that Wednesday's negotiations centered on the union's demand for contract language that would limit the conditions under which unionized coal companies could have certain work done by non-union subcontractors.

In rejecting a tentative three-year contract by better than a 2-1 margin on March 31, rank-and-file miners complained bitterly that union leaders were agreeing to contract changes that would undermine UMW security.

The question of subcontracting — along with the issue of royalty payments on purchases of non-union coal — represented the major union security issues to miners, some of whom burned copies of the earlier contracts in protest.

Church said the two sides talked at length about the union's so-called "wage-standards" provision, in which union coal companies would have to pay non-union labor at rates comparable to those of miners covered by the UMW contract.

The provision is one of seven issues that Church and his fellow negotiators brought back to the bargaining table following rejection of the earlier accord, saying those demands must be met to assure approval by the rank and file this time around.

In discussing the "wage-standards" proposal, UMW spokesman Eldon Callen noted last week that in a case involving Amax Coal Co. of Indiana, a federal appeals court held that the union could not force its employers to hire only UMW workers.

Callen said the UMW was prepared to propose a contract clause providing that if coal companies "do any of this ... they've got to pay wages" that are comparable to those of union members.

"If we were to strike on that illegal issue," the spokesman said at the time, "every coal company could file suit for lost productivity and we'd be out of business in four days."

Church said there was no discussion Wednesday of the royalty payments, which the UMW had been receiving since 1964 as a penalty payment for each ton of non-union coal purchased and processed for resale.

Among the other demands set forth by the union was an end to mandatory overtime.

"I'm always optimistic," Church said, but he reiterated that hard bargaining was ahead. He said, however, that he hopes to be able to announce a settlement "someday."

"We're getting down to hard bargaining," Church said. "It's pretty tough, but we're still working. We're still working around the same proposals" the union presented to the industry representatives on April 17.

The talks broke off April 17, with Brown serving notice on the union that negotiations would not resume until the UMW moderated its demands.

Railroad tracks damaged by explosives, power lines cut

By The Associated Press

Utility crews worked to restore electricity to a large non-union coal mine in Maryland after nine power poles were cut down with saws. Meanwhile, Kentucky State Police blamed striking miners for two small explosions that damaged wooden railway ties and loosened some spikes.

By Wednesday, power still had not been restored to the Mettiki coal mine, which has continued operating despite a nationwide strike by the United Mine Workers union. The strike entered its 48th day today.

The Western Maryland mine lost power early Tuesday when the poles were severed, causing "thousands of dollars" worth of damage, according to sheriff's officials in Preston County, W.Va., a rural area near the Maryland border where the poles were located.

Dick Roschli, Potomac Edison district manager, said utility officials hoped to restore the mine's power today after repairing the poles.

When asked if he believed the incident was related to the strike, Roschli said, "You can surmise that. I don't know that for a fact."

Meanwhile, Kentucky State Police said an attempt to blow up railway tracks probably was linked to the UMW strike and was similar to earlier attempts at sabotaging lines that carry coal trains.

Authorities said two small explosions were set off along Chessie System railway tracks near Martin, Ky., late Tuesday night. The blasts damaged a small number of wooden ties and loosened some spikes, state police said.

Three other railroad bridges in Kentucky were dynamited in the same area last week, authorities said.

Incumbent holds narrow lead in UMW's largest district

By The Associated Press

Incumbent Jack Perry held a narrow 43-vote lead today over his nearest rival for president of District 17, the largest in the United Mine Workers union, and UMW officials predicted it could take weeks to decide the final outcome.

"It's still too close to say anything," said Don Barnett, a UMW election official.

With eight of the district's 106 locals still to be counted, Perry led Raymond Thompson, 2,196 to 2,153, Barnett said.

Union officials usually take eight to 10 days to make final tabulations after all the votes are in, Barnett said. Candidates can also ask for recounts if the margin of victory is less than 200 votes, which would add another week to the process, he said.

"I just don't know how this is going to turn out," Perry said from Washington, D.C., where he and other members of the union's bargaining team were meeting with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association on ending the union's strike.

Perry's supporters say he would have been an easy winner had he not helped negotiate the proposed contract that was rejected by the union's rank and file in March.

Four years ago, Perry defeated Thompson by more than 500 votes for the presidency of District 17, which covers southern West Virginia.

In the northern part of the state, Carroll Rogers won the presidency of District 31, defeating Earl McCardle 2,629 to 1,183. Ernie Justice ousted incumbent District 30 president Robert Carter in eastern Kentucky by 2,027 to 900.

A sad, bloody trend

The statistics are tragic, almost unbelievable.

Yet they're true. More than 4,000 people died on Texas highways last year, many in one-vehicle accidents. Most of the victims of traffic accidents, according to the Department of Public Safety, were under 30 years of age. And many of them committed fatal errors by being guilty of one or more of the following: Drinking while driving, driving too fast or not wearing a seat belt.

The number of traffic fatalities in 1980 increased by some 3.5 percent over the previous year. Sadly, that isn't an uncommon occurrence. In fact, 1980's statistics marked the fourth year in a row for a new high in the fatality column.

Should the traffic fatality count in Texas be so high? Well, there doesn't appear to be a reason for it, other than recklessness on the part of some drivers. Texas historically has enjoyed one of the finest highway systems in the entire nation. The Department of Public Safety typically does an outstanding job of keeping those highways patrolled and motorists safe. And, for the most part at least, the state's weather is not so formidable as to render travel unsafe.

Perhaps society has failed to stress — and to recognize — the dangers of automobile travel. There is a major responsibility that goes with the privilege of operating a car on the highways of the nation and the state. Maybe we have been too keen on the privilege bit and not keen enough on the responsibility bit.

It's time to start stressing driver responsibility — responsibility to oneself and responsibility to society. That way maybe this bloody trend can be reversed and travel on Texas' highways can once again become safe.

The answers are coming

The feisty lady prime minister of Dominica, a tiny nation in the Caribbean, supplied testimony that helped a federal grand jury indict a group of mercenaries aiming to overthrow her government.

It was a bizarre conspiracy in which six of the 10 armed men have active links to the Ku Klux Klan. The 78,000 population of Dominica, a have-not little speck on the map, is virtually all black or mulatto, hardly the kind of folks the KKK would want to help. This curious case may well be more conspiratorial than it seems.

The prime minister, Miss Mary Eugenia Charles, was freely elected last summer, deposing her Socialist opponent, ex-Prime Minister Patrick John. Apparently the opposition conspired to stage a coup but Miss Charles got wind of the plot and arrested John and his main supporters. A few of them blabbed in jail, where they remain.

The mercenaries, armed to the teeth, practiced for months in a wooded area north of New Orleans. Their mission was to spring the prisoners in Dominica from jail and make John prime minister. The plan called for a seaborne invasion with great firepower.

But who put up the money for this wierd scheme which also required skilled seafaring knowledge for a voyage of 2,000 miles? Dominica is close to the pro-Castro island of Grenada, whose bearded Prime Minister Maurice Bishop staged his own Marxist coup a year ago and has opened air transport facilities for Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Sooner than later we may get some answers.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Are you following the saga of the wife of Gov. Carey of New York? They have discovered two more of her ex-husbands — Artistotle Onassis and Judge Crater.

●

Evangeline Gouletas-Carey originally claimed two ex-husbands, then changed the number to three. When you are governor of New York and you apply for a marriage license, you have to use the long form.

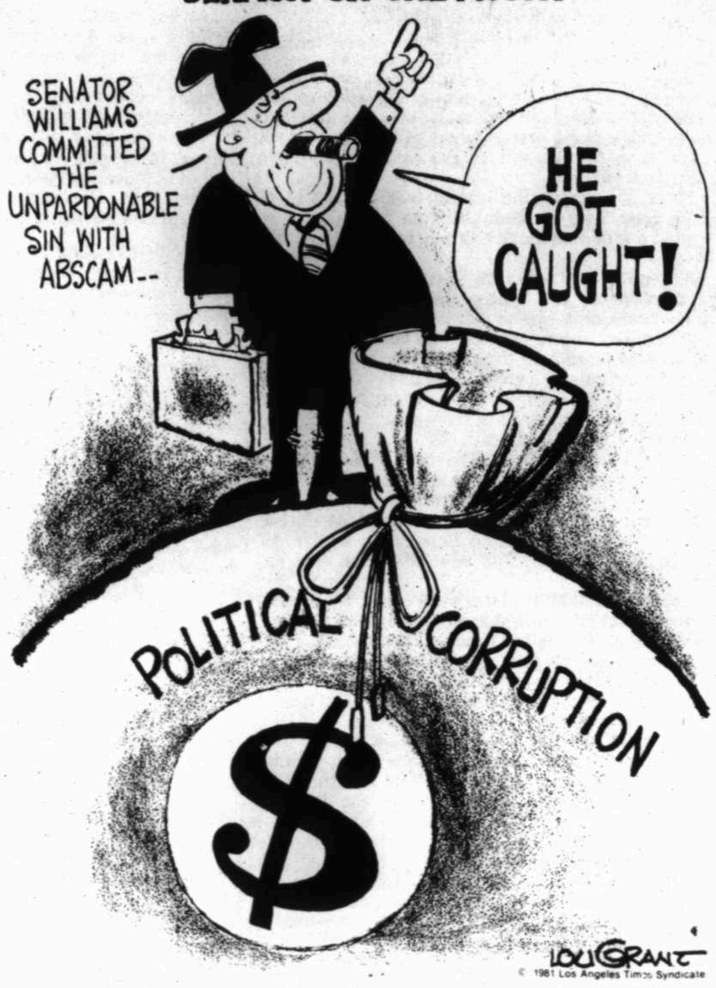

●

She claimed one to be deceased, a man who later made a statement denying it. None of this affects Mr. Carey's ability to govern, only his ability to answer the question — "How's the family?"

●

The Careys could use a little privacy and we all wish them well. As the saying goes, marriages are made in heaven — and annulled in Albany.

ART BUCHWALD

Right to keep, bear arms not a 'light' responsibility

● Art Buchwald ●

"What the devil are you reading?" I asked Robinson.

"The Constitution of the United States," he replied. "You never know what you're going to find in it. Listen to this, "A well-regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms should not be infringed."

"So?"

"There is something here that we've all overlooked, which may solve constitutional problems of dealing with handguns. This is the admendment the National Rifle Association always uses to justify the ownership of guns."

"We all know that."

"Let's follow it to its logical conclusion. Anyone who wants a gun can have one. However, the buyer must sign up and be sworn into an organized, well-regulated militia to get his or her weapon."

"But why would we want a well-regulated militia in this day and age? There are no more Redcoats around."

"To fight crime and make the streets safe again," Robinson said excitedly. "Look, we all know there are not enough police to do the job. What we need to protect our citizens are foot soldiers, willing to patrol the streets after dark. People who wish to bear arms should be willing to protect the law-abiding citizens of this country."

"It sounds like you have a plan."

"I do," he replied. "When a person purchases a gun, he is immediately sworn in to his local militia.

"Then the gun owner is given a month's intensive training in the use of arms by qualified members of the National Rifle Association.

"Upon graduation from the course, he or she would join the active militia force in the neighborhood. The unit would be divided into two sections; half patrolling from sundown to sunup on odd nights, and the other half patrolling on even nights of the week. Saturday patrols would be turned over to owners of Saturday night specials."

"How long would they have to stay in the militia?" I asked.

"As long as the person wanted to bear arms. If he or she decided the patrolling was a drag, that person would have to turn in the weapon."

"But wouldn't this constitute a vigilante force which is dangerous in a democratic society?" I asked.

"Not if we abide by the constitutional amendment, as it is written. The key words here are well-regulated. This means that members of the militia would have to answer to the legal authorities for their actions. The militia persons would be subject to military discipline and be required to conform to all the rules and regulations of our armed forces. Although they would not be paid, we would give them ribbons to wear on their chests after a certain number of patrols, and of course PX privileges. To make sure they don't take advantage of their status, they would not be permitted to patrol in areas where they don't reside. We certainly wouldn't want strangers patrolling other people's neighborhoods."

"I can't see the NRA objecting to your plan," I told Robinson.

"No one can object to it. We know the police would welcome the manpower, and the people who own guns would feel they were doing something worthwhile.

"It's a good plan," I said.

"What do you mean 'good'? It's a great plan, and exactly what every founding father who had anything to do with the Constitution had in mind."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Defense contract system wastes tax dollars

● Jack Anderson ●

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's cruise missile program is a classic illustration of the cavalier attitude toward the taxpayers' money that characterizes so much of the nation's defense spending. Here, as part of a continuing series on Defense Department extravagance, are the details of the fouled-up project:

Already the cruise program is at least $13 million in the red this year, and the missiles are beset by engine malfunctions, according to a classified Pentagon document.

What makes this so troubling is that the deficiencies arise from the defense contract system itself, which rarely requires contractors to operate on a competitive basis. Poor performance and outlandish profits are built into the system.

In just the past 12 months, defense contractors made "excessive profits" totaling $80 million, according to the now defunct Renegotiations Board.

In that same period, the Pentagon laid out $70 billion for procurement of weapons and services. Of that astronomical sum, almost $46 billion, or 65 percent, went to contractors who were the only bidders for the job. Only eight percent of all defense contracts were awarded as the result of advertising for bids.

The cruise missile is intended to become the mainstay of the U.S. nuclear arsenal. Capable of being launched from land, sea or air, the missile is small enough to be deployed in hard-to-spot locations, yet it can evade enemy radar and deliver a nuclear warhead 1,500 miles away.

Of the nearly 30 companies involved in the cruise program, only one — General Dynamics — has given the Pentagon its main progress report for 1980. And General Dynamics, with a $2 billion chunk of the program, has charged the government $325,000 for status reports it has never delivered. Yet a Pentagon spokesman insisted to my reporter Sharon Geltner he was "not aware of any contract irregularities."

Duplication abounds. Vitro Labs and McDonnell Douglas, operating under broadly worded contract terms, have wound up doing essentially the same computer work.

Overcharges are unconscionable. One cruise contractor, for example, charged the taxpayers almost $1 million for a special data list that should have cost about $40,000. When confronted with this discrepancy, the company blandly blamed it on a "typographical error."

A relatively minor, but widespread, boondoggle results in the government paying twice for the same contract. This happens when an employee quits a defense contractor and forms his own one-man software company. He then charges his old employer or another company for the "right" to his contract — at the going rate of $40,000 per contract.

Tardiness is epidemic. Navy testing of launch-control centers was stalled because the software was delivered six months late. In 1979, McDonnell Douglas admitted to other contractors in a private memo that it would have to "slip" (delay) the schedule three months because it couldn't have the launch hardware ready.

In fact, performing a job on time is so exceptional that a confidential memo of Vitro Labs reported on a project meeting on Sept. 27, 1979: "Everyone was very much impressed with the Vitro team, and as a matter of fact were shocked we got out there on schedule."

The basic trouble with the cruise program, as with most defense projects, is that cost-plus and sole-source contracts — vague on the government's requirements and wide open on budgeting — give contractors no incentive to do the job right and on time. In fact, the system encourages irresponsibility by stretching out the length of a contract and increasing the profits as the cost goes up.

The United States, meanwhile, has fallen dangerously behind the Soviet Union in military power. President Reagan has sound reason, therefore, to increase defense spending. But it doesn't help the armed forces to waste the taxpayers' money.

DOG STORY II — Last fall, I reported on the peculiar circumstances surrounding the shooting of a pet Irish setter by a White House detail on a motorbike training exercise in the Maryland countryside. The uniformed guards, who are part of the Secret Service, claimed they had been attacked by the setter and two other dogs. So, according to the official account, one guard fired in fear for his life.

Now the dogs' owner, Karen E. Jones, who lives on a farm next to the government-owned training area, has obtained an official report on the incident under the Freedom of Information Act. Jones got no compensation for her dead dog, Blarney, but the government billed her $2.10 for the report it sent her.

One interesting facet of the Secret Service investigation was that Jones herself was not interviewed, because it was decided she could not "contribute any information that would be material." Her insistence that the dog was not vicious, of course, would have contradicted the guard's claim that he was attacked.

The report also states that the dog was 15 yards away from the officer when he fired — rather a long distance to cause fear for his life, as the officer had claimed.

Even more interesting was the report's explanation of the most gruesome part of the incident — the beheading of the dead dog with a machete so it could be tested for rabies. The Secret Service originally said the test was needed because an officer cut his finger while moving the dog's body. Now, it turns out, the officer cut his finger while helping a ballistic expert remove bullet fragments from the dog.

And why was a ballistics expert called to the scene? To "see what could be learned ... from an ammunition effectiveness standpoint."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, May 14, the 134th day of 1981. There are 231 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 14th, 1948, the independent state of Israel was proclaimed as Britain ended its rule in Palestine.

On this date:

In 1787, a convention met in Philadelphia to draw up the United States constitution.

In 1804, Meriwether Lewis and William Clark set out from St. Louis on their exploratory expedition to the Pacific Coast.

In 1972, Okinawa reverted to Japan after 27 years under U.S. jurisdiction.

In 1975, the United States announced that Marines had recaptured the U.S. merchant ship Mayaguez, which had been seized by Cambodians.

One year ago: Some 30,000 students poured into the streets of downtown Seoul, South Korea, as anti-martial law protests mounted.

Today's birthday: Opera singer Patrice Munsel is 56 years old.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

A 'national liberation movement' by any other name ...

● William Giandoni ●

Moscow supports "national liberation movements," not international terrorism, the Soviet ambassador to Mexico says.

That's enough.

That's all the observer of the Latin American scene had to hear from the mouth of Ambassador Rostilav Sergev to be confirmed in the conviction that the Soviet Union does indeed have a hand in much of the turmoil in the Western Hemisphere.

By Moscow's definition, all Marxist rural guerrilla and urban terrorist groups in Latin America are engaged in wars of national liberation.

Some of the organizations, notably the Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN) in Nicaragua and the Farabundo Marti Liberation Front (FMLN) in El Salvador, actually incorporate the words "national liberation" in their names.

True, of course, that there are non-Communist political parties that call themselves National Liberation. Two such are elsewhere in Central America, in Costa Rica and Guatemala.

The National Liberation Party in Costa Rica is a left-leaning social democratic group, whereas Guatemala's is a right-wing party that got its start combating Marxist-Leninist infiltration during the regime of President Jacobo Arbenz in the 1950s.

But when the communists refer to a "national liberation movement" they are talking about a Marxist organization that is trying to overthrow a non-Marxist government.

The euphemistic label is a wasted effort in most of Latin America. Latins know the guerrillas and terrorists for what they are, but Europeans and Americans appear generally to ignore that the national liberation movement in the news these days really are Soviet-supported organizations that seek to impose Marxist dictatorships on Nicaragua and El Salvador.

That the confusion is widespread is obvious.

For instance, "Catholic Peace and Justice Commissions" are springing up in the United States and organizing campaigns against U.S. military assistance to the government of El Salvador.

They allege that increased military aid to the Salvadoran government associates the United States with the actions of the security forces, which remain uncontrolled, and strengthens the power of the right-wing forces in the military.

But they choose to ignore the alternative which is nothing more or less than the defeat of the right-wing forces and the triumph of a totalitarian Marxist movement.

What is all the more amazing, though, is the fact that Catholics, including even the director of the United States Catholic Conference, the Rev. J. Brian Hehir, and the archbishop of Washington, D.C., the Most Rev. James Hickey, should be speaking out against the current ruling junta in El Salvador.

The president of the junta, Jose Napoleon Duarte, a graduate of the University of Notre Dame, is not only a practicing Catholic but internationally recognize as that Central American republic's most prominent Catholic layman. Along with former Chilean President Eduardo Frei, Duarte is one of the top leaders of the Christian Democrat movement in the Americas.

To suggest that the government of which Duarte has been the most important civilian participant ordered, or somehow failed to prevent, the killings of three U.S. Catholic nuns and a lay worker last December is beyond belief, if only because at that time Duarte was actively engaged in an effort to convince Pope John Paul II of the good intentions of the Salvadoran junta.

Obviously, one source of Catholic confusion in the United States and Europe is the sharp split in the Catholic church in El Salvador. The late Archbishop Oscar Romero, the ranking prelate there who was murdered as he said mass in San Salvador in March 1980, and the apostolic administrator, Bishop Arturo Rivera y Damas, long preached in favor of a more activist role for the church there. At the same time, though, the other four bishops in El Salvador are opposed to the "theology of liberation," as the Christian-Marxist theory is often termed.

That Rivera y Damas apparently has had something of a change of heart was suggested during the visit he made to Washington in early April when he told a press conference that the Salvadoran people accept the current junta as "a lesser evil."

That sounds logical.

Salvadoran Catholics, as well as those elsewhere in Latin America, are well aware how quickly the Marxists silenced the church once they consolidated their hold on Cuba, for example.

Well before the Soviet ambassador spoke out in Mexico City, Salvadorans knew that Moscow supported their "national liberation."

SS hikes may be postponed this summer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security cost-of-living increases would be postponed this summer, a year earlier than proposed just two days ago, under a new cost-saving step being considered by the Reagan administration.

A plan to delay paying the 11.2 percent increase from July until October is among several proposals being weighed by President Reagan's budget office to offset a growing budget deficit for fiscal 1981, which ends Sept. 30, according to one knowledgeable source.

Postponing the raise, averaging $37 a month for the nation's 36 million Social Security recipients, would push the cost to the government out of the 1981 budget year and into 1982.

A deferral of the increase would cost a typical recipient $111 and save the Treasury between $3 billion and $4 billion in fiscal 1981.

The administration source, who asked to remain anonymous, said the politically sensitive proposal has not yet been sent to President Reagan for his approval, but a decision is expected shortly.

If the president does endorse a postponement, he would have to submit it to Congress to change a law that automatically provides for annual cost-of-living increases based on the Consumer Price Index to protect retirees from inflation.

Word that the administration may postpone the increase this summer was disclosed Wednesday, just one day after the administation announced an unprecedented plan to reduce Social Security benefits to save an estimatd $53 billion by 1986.

That program ran into stiff Democratic criticism on Capitol Hill on Wednesday, with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. calling it "a rotten thing to do" and predicting it has little chance of passing Congress.

"I can't image that there are so many stonehearted people in the Congress of the United States to pass this type of legislation," the Massachusetts Democrat said at his daily news briefing. "He (Reagan) gave a solemn pledge to the voters of America that he was not going to touch Social Security."

Claiming phones in congressional offices around the country were "ringing off the hook" from constituents enraged by the proposal, O'Neill said:

"I'm not talking about the politics of the matter, I'm talking about the decency of the matter. In terse language, it's a rotten thing to do."

The plan announced Tuesday also called for postponing annual cost-of-living increases from July to October, but not starting until 1982. The Senate has voted to back such a delay next year.

An immediate delay in the cost-of-living increase is part of "an urgent review" begun Wednesday by the Office of Management and Budget to find savings in 1981, the administration source said.

The review began after budget director David A. Stockman estimated that a $55 billion deficit that had been projected for 1981 last February has now swelled to more than $60 billion.

One reason for the growing deficit is the recent spurt in interest rates, which has driven up federal payments on the national debt beyond what the administration had estimated.

In an interview Wednesday, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan declined to comment specifically about a deferral of the Social Security increase this summer.

"There are ... any number of items that the budget group is going to take a look at," he said. "At this time, it would be premature to say that any one of them would be adopted or is feasible because they've (the budget group) just got to work."

Although there are only 4½ months left in the fiscal year, Regan said the administration is determined to "come as close as possile" to holding this year's deficit to $55 billion by finding new budget savings.

"This is one of the calls by the president: lower the water, don't raise the bridge," he said of Reagan's insistence that federal spending be held down.

Reagan previously asked Congress to trim $6.4 billion from the 1981 budget, reductions that have been overshadowed by the congressional debate on the president's more dramatic plan to reduce spending next year by almost $50 billion.

Girl testifies about alleged rape attempt by Garwood

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An 8-year-old girl says she was afraid to tell her parents when Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood allegedly tried to rape her last summer because the former prisoner of war threatened to "get me ... if I told somebody."

"I thinked he would kill me," the first-grader told a Superior Court jury Wednesday in Garwood's sex-molestation trial. Testimony was to continue today.

Garwood, 35, who gained national attention last February when he became the first American convicted of collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam, is charged with first-degree sex offense, which carries a mandatory life sentence upon conviction.

He also is charged with attempted rape, attempted first-degree sex offense and taking indecent liberties with a minor.

The young girl, fidgeting nervously on the witness stand, said Garwood had taken her out in his car last Aug. 7 to get an ice cream cone, when he pulled off on a deserted road and began to molest her.

Garwood had just returned to the United States after 14 years in Vietnamese prison camps and was living in Hubert, about 12 miles outside of Jacksonville. He had become friends with the child's family, who also lived in Hubert.

"What happened after you got your ice cream?" asked prosecutor William H. Andrews.

"He took me to a road. It had trees and it didn't have no houses," the girl answered.

The child said Garwood then fondled her, forced her to fondle his genital area, tried to force her to perform oral sex and attempted to rape her. She said at one point, Garwood got a magazine from under the car seat and showed it to her.

"It was a naked book. It had naked ladies in it," she said.

Earlier Wednesday, the child's father, Michael J. Gallen Jr., testified that Garwood was a frequent visitor to the Gallen home and was "like a big brother" to the child.

He said he and his wife did not find out about the alleged incident until about three weeks later when Garwood came for a visit.

"He was visiting our home, and my wife and my daughter found her (the child) crouched down between the stove and the door. She was scared to come out while he (Garwood) was there," Gallen said.

He said that's when he went to the Onslow County Sheriff's Department and demanded an investigation.

Garwood was convicted by a military court-martial Feb. 5 of collaboration and hitting another prisoner in Vietnam.

He was sentenced to a dishonorable discharge from the Marines, demotion to private and forfeiture of all pay and allowances from the date of conviction. He is on leave pending appeals.

Connecticut Senate OKs handgun bill

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The state Senate reversed itself Wednesday and approved a bill to control handguns after an opponent spoke of the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II and changed her vote.

"I ask reconsideration of this bill in consideration of the violence that has taken place many thousands of miles away from here against a man of peace, the pope," said Sen. Margaret E. Morton, D-Bridgeport.

Without debate, the Senate approved the bill, 18-17. On Tuesday, it had defeated the proposal, 19-17. The measure was approved in the state House of Representatives on April 30, and the Senate vote sent it to Gov. William A. O'Neill for signature or veto.

The bill would provide a mandatory minimum one-year sentence for anyone convicted of carrying a handgun without a permit. It includes a list of specific exceptions and gives judges some leeway to declare that general "mitigating circumstances" exist and justify waiver of the minimum sentence.

The governor's news secretary, Larrye deBear, said after the vote that O'Neill has not taken a stand on the bill.

The bill prompted more than one hour of Senate debate Tuesday.

Later Wednesday, the House of Representatives approved an even stricter anti-gun bill, 148-3, and sent it to the Senate. That bill, with a provision removed that would give judges some discretion, would impose a mandatory five-year sentence on anyone convicted of using a gun to commit a serious crime.

The attack against the pope was not mentioned during the House debate.

Shortly before the Senate convened, a man identified only as a state employee was seized while he was walking into the Capitol building during a demonstration by unionized state workers because he was carrying a .357 magnum handgun in a belt holster.

He showed a permit for it and was released, but state police said the shooting of the pope minutes before the man was spotted was one reason they questioned him.

After Wednesday's vote, outside the Senate chamber, Mrs. Morton said, "I thought it was the right thing to do in view of the shoting.

'It would have been very cold-hearted not to do what I could do to see that this step was taken."

She said that after the pope was wounded in Rome, "rather strong pressure was put on me" to vote in favor of the bill.

The pressure, she said, came from Lt. Gov. Joseph J. Fauliso and en. Howar Owens, D-Bridgeport, chief Senate sponsor of the bill.

"They told me I was the key, the only one that could do it," she said. "I don't believe today any more than I did yesterday that this is the answer, but now we're going to say to the judge, 'This is mandatory.'"

She argued Tuesday that the strict law would not attack the causes of violence in society, saying it might be used to discriminate against the poor, blacks and Hispanics. Mrs. Morton is black.

On Wednesday, one handgun control opponent, Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, R-Manchester, was absent, but the importance of his vote was nullified because Fauliso said he was prepared to break a tie by voting in favor of the bill.

"Things have been developing very fast," he said. "It's not a cure-all, but certainly it's a step in the right direction.

"It will send a message to the people. If we can save lives with this legislation, then we have conferred a benefit on society," he added.

Wounds on child slaying victim puzzling

ATLANTA (AP) — "Puzzling" abdominal puncture wounds, inflicted after death, were found on the latest victim in Atlanta's string of 27 slayings of young blacks, and fibers found on the body match those discovered on other victims, authorities say.

The fully clothed body of 17-year-old William Barrett was found early Tuesday, about the time he was reported missing, in woods off a dead-end road in suburban DeKalb County, officials said.

Police have no suspects in the case, the 27th killing assigned to a special Atlanta-based police task force investigating the deaths of young blacks and the disappearance of a 10-year-old black boy.

A police source who asked not to be identified told The Associated Press on Wednesday that after Barrett was strangled his body received puncture wounds in the abdomen.

It was apparently the first time in the string of slayings dating to July 1979 that violence was inflicted on a victim's body after death.

"It's not like mutilation, though," the source said. "It's just a couple of puncture wounds." The wounds were inflicted after the youth's death with "a sharp object like a knife," he said.

Investigators considered the wounds "puzzling" and were not sure what significance to attach to them, the source said.

"It may mean a different murderer; it may mean something else," the source said. "Anything that we would say now would be pure speculation."

DeKalb County Public Safety Director Dick Hand refused to comment on the report of punctures, but he said Barrett's death is linked to other recent deaths by "trace evidence" retrieved by police. Barrett resembled several recent victims in race, sex, age, background and in the way he died, Hand said. An autopsy Tuesday indicated the youth had been asphyxiated, like 15 other slain young blacks.

The "trace evidence" as well as the circumstances of Barrett's death led Hand and Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown to turn over the case to the task force, Brown and Hand said in separate news conferences Wednesday.

Hand and Brown refused to comment on what trace evidence was found.

But Georgia Crime Lab Director Larry Howard, whose lab is studying the material, said fibers found on Barrett's body were similar to those discovered on some of the earlier victims' bodies.

He would not identify the cases or say how many were linked to Barrett's case by the fibers.

Howard said there also were fibers found in some other cases that failed to match those from Barrett's body.

Examiners were able to find tiny pieces of fibers on Barrett's body, found along a highway, because the body was found soon after Barrett died, Howard said.

"Any time you get a fresh body, it's easier. And anytime you don't find a body in water, it's easier," said Howard. Seven of the last eight victims were found in or near rivers.

When a body decomposes, he said, any fibers on the surface "sink into the tissue and they're no longer visible."

Most recent victims were missing at least a week before their bodies were discovered and, Hand said, "We've got extra evidence that we would not have found if the body had not been discovered so quickly."

Like many other slain youths, Barrett hailed from a black, lower-income neighborhood and "was on the streets a good deal," Hand said.

Barrett also also had an arrest record that included burglary and theft, authorities said.

Auto sales up 7.2%

DETROIT (AP) — Auto sales by U.S. manufacturers were up 7.2 percent in early May but according to one analyst the improvement is unsatisfactory considering last year's sales disaster.

"They (sales increases) are measured against the May performance a year ago when the sales reached their lowest ebb since the boom ended in March 1979," Arvid Jouppi, a Detroit-based auto analyst for John Muir & Co. said Wednesday. "To be 7 percent ahead of that is not at all satisfactory."

The automakers reported they sold 135,323 cars in the May 1-10 period compared to 141,990 in the 1980 period. Because the 1980 period had one more selling day, the percentage comparison is based on the rate of sales per day.

Jouppi said interest rates, which have been increasing in recent weeks, "are proving to be very effective in delaying automobile sales."

Chrysler Corp. said it sold 15,662 cars in early May, up 38.9 percent from 12,694 in 1980, and Ford Motor Co. announced sales of 33,356 cars, up 22.5 percent from 30,638.

General Motors Corp's sales fell 2.3 percent in the period to 79,600 from 91,695 last year. Volksw)gen of America reported a 14.4 percent drop in sales to 2,605 cars from 3,425.

Convicted murderer being questioned

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A convicted murderer who once claimed he had killed 42 people as a "hit man" for a motorcycle club is being questioned in the death of a prison inmate who was beaten to death in an exercise yard, authorities said.

Idaho State Prison Warden Darrol Gardner said the inmate, David Jensen, was beaten on the head with flashlight batteries wrapped in a stocking while he was exercising Wednesday in a maximum-security unit.

Jensen, 23, was rushed to a local hospital but died about three hours later, Gardner said.

The warden said the attack apparently occurred when Jensen and Thomas Creech, who is serving a life term for murdering two drifters, were let out of their cells for their one-hour daily exercise.

He said guards noticed Jensen unconscious and spotted Creech covered with blood.

Creech, 30, was placed immediately in an isolation unit and then taken into Boise Wednesday night for questioning by Ada County authorities.

Gardner said he did not know the motive for the attack.

Jensen was serving out a three-year term for grand larceny at the maximum-security prison after escaping from a minimum-security facility where he originally was sent.

In 1978, prison officials said Creech threatened another inmate with a toothbrush with a metal tip attached. No charges were filed in connection with that incident.

During investigations after his 1974 arrest, Creech claimed he was a "hit man" for a motorcycle gang and had killed 42 people. Law enforcement authorities said they couldn't verify the claims, although he was questioned about slayings in Oregon, Nevada, Wyoming and California.

Creech also has pleaded guilty to a murder charge in Oregon and faces a life sentence there if he ever is released from prison in Idaho.

Vatican's latest medical bulletin

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Here is the text of the medical bulletin on the condition of Pope John Paul II prepared at 8 a.m. today — 1 a.m. CDT — by attending physicians and released by the Vatican. The Associated Press translated it from Italian.

"The pope passed a tranquil night. His mind is alert. The monitoring of his diverse vital functions continues.

"At 0800 (1 a.m. CDT) the respiratory frequency is 22 breaths per minute. Blood pressure is 130-90 millimeters of mercury. Cardiac frequency is 105 beats per minute with regular sinus rhythm. Body temperature is 37.3 degrees centigrade (99.14 fahrenheit).

"The first hours of the post-operative period passed in a satisfying manner."

President's turn to pray for Pope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six weeks ago, after Ronald Reagan was shot, Pope John Paul II expressed his "deepest sorrow" and prayed for the American president. Now, it's Reagan's turn to pray.

Reagan was in the White House on Wednesday morning when he was told by presidential counselor Edwin Meese III that the pontiff had been shot and wounded during a general papal audience in St. Peter's Square.

The shocked president told Meese, "I'll pray for him," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

Within 10 minutes after hearing of the shooting, Speakes said, Reagan called Cardinal Terence Cooke in New York and "expressed the sorrow of the American people and expressed his personal concern" for John Paul.

Speakes said he was the first in the White House to hear word of the shooting, from a wire service machine in the White House press room. He then told Meese.

At the Capitol, the Senate was in session, discussing a military spending bill, when Sen. Barry Goldwater rose to speak.

"I have the sad feeling that I should report to my colleagues that an attempt has been made on the pope's life in Rome. We have no further details," the Arizona Republican said.

Minutes later, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said, "I am sure every member of the Senate joins with me in expressing our outrage of that event and offer our hopes and prayers for the pope's recovery."

Baker's comments were echoed throughout official Washington.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, a Roman Catholic who has lost two brothers to assassins, called the incident "a shot that has gone to the soul of the world. The greatest symbol of peace in the world has been struck down by this latest act of mindless sorrow." Kennedy went to mass after hearing of the attack.

Late Wednesday afternoon, a number of Reagan administration officials and congressmen joined about 1,000 other people at St. Matthew's Cathedral,

Buffalo woman still serious

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Ann Odre, a 58-year-old carpenter's widow, paid $1,899 for a church-sponsored trip to Europe to fulfill her life-long ambition of seeing the pope.

Today she was reported in serious condition at Santo Spirito Hospital near the Vatican, with a chest wound suffered Wednesday when gunshots rang out in St. Peter's Square in Vatican City, injuring Pope John Paul II. He was conducting his weekly audience before 15,000 people.

Doctors at the hospital said today that they had operated on Mrs. Odre for more than four hours, removing a bullet that damaged her pancreas and intestine. U.S. Embassy officials and members of her tour group visited her today.

Mrs. Odre's daughter, Joanne Kenjarski, left Buffalo hours after the shooting to be at her bedside. Mrs. Kenjarski's husband, Thomas, stayed with their three children, taking what solace he could from the confusing early reports about his mother-in-law's condition.

Kenjarski said officials of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Buffalo and the office of U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., told him that Mrs. Odre had suffered "one superficial wound in the left breast," that she was "in serious condition," and that she was to be operated on.

Describing the reports as sporadic, he said they had been "very uplifting," and he planned to remain in Buffalo "unless some grave thing happens."

Neighbors were stunned.

"Anything to do with anything religious, she was involved in," said Lorraine Kwiatkowski, a cousin. Michael Hyland, a friend of the Kenjarskis, said Mrs. Odre "always wanted to see the pope."

Mrs. Odre ran a beauty salon until she gave it up when her husband died about 10 years ago.

She had been "looking forward to this for a long time," said John Kogut, another cousin.

Her tour included trips to Lourdes, France, and the Vatican.

World prays for speedy recovery

By MARGARET GORDY
Associated Press Writer

A world shocked by the rising shadow of terrorism voiced outrage and horror over the shooting of Pope John Paul II, as worshippers of many faiths prayed for the recovery of the Pole who became the pilgrim of peace.

"I cannot imagine anything worse than to try to take the life of the one who has always defended life," said Archbishop Paulo Evaristo Arns of Brazil, the world's largest Roman Catholic country.

Grief and disbelief over the assassination attempt broke religious, national and political barriers.

Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, titular head of the Protestant Church of England, said in a telegram sent to the Vatican minutes after the attack Wednesday that she was "horrified and shocked."

ISRAEL'S PRIME MINISTER Menachem Begin, a Jew, called the pope's injuries "horrible, horrible news." Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, a Hindu, said Indians "pray for his recovery."

President Reagan, still recovering from the attempt on his own life March 30, told a White House adviser, "I'll pray for him."

"What's happening in the world?" Vice President George Bush asked. "What kind of madness has been let loose?"

The pontiff was reported in stable condition today following the shooting Wednesday, which came during his traditional Wednesday mass audience in St. Peters' Square at the Vatican.

Police seized the alleged assassin, a man who claims he is Turkish, and may be the same right-wing Turkish terrorist who threatened the pope's life in 1979 only days after he escaped from a Turkish prison where he was being held for assassinated a leading Turkish newspaper editor.

U.N. SECRETARY-GENERAL Kurt Waldheim said the shooting of the pope "illustrates the need for the world to rise up in indignation against violence and terrorism."

In Beirut, where Moslem soldiers from Syria exchange fire with Lebanese Christians almost daily, Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, a Moslem, said the attempt on the pontiff's life has "jolted the conscience of all believers."

In Northern Ireland, where violence between Protestants and Catholics has cost more than 2,100 lives since 1978, Roman Catholic Cardinal Tomas O Fiaich said he was "deeply shocked and disturbed. Protestant leader Rev. Ian Paisley was not available for comment. But his wife Eileen said although Paisley had frequently denounced the Vatican, "the fact that my husband is opposed to the papacy would not mean that he would hold with anything of this sort."

China's 2 million Catholics, who reject the authority of the pope, lit candles and attended special masses. "We are opposed to assassinations of all kinds," said Rev. Liu Fu-ting of Peking's Immaculate Conception Church. "We pray for the pope's speedy recovery."

IN THE PHILIPPINES, where a knife-wielding Bolivian wounded Pope Paul VI in 1970, a national television announcer broke down in sobs as she reported the shooting. A weeping Merci Henares then asked parents not to let them children to go "pow pow pow" with toy guns and to guide them toward more positive things, "so this kind of thing can stop."

Millions of Catholics knelt in churches throughout the world to pray for the pontiff's health. Poland — where until 1978 the pope, was Cardinal Karol Wojtiyla, archbishop of Krakow — took the shooting hardest of all.

"Your Holiness," Poland's Communist leaders said in a message read over national television: "the news of the criminal attack on your life has deeply moved our nation."

"It's a tragic, tragic time for Poland," one man in the street said. "What have we done that God is punishing so severely?"

POLISH LABOR LEADER Lech Walesa, who has frequently sought the pope's advice "as a father" since founding the first independent union in the Communist bloc, interrupted his 7-day tour of Japan to pray for John Paul's recovery. Japanese officials said Walesa stayed up most of the night waiting for news of the pontiff's condition, and might cut short his visit.

East German Communist Party chief Erich Honecker sent the pontiff a telegram expressing his "deep shock" and best wishes for his recovery. But the Soviet Union which has frowned on the Vatican's influence on Poland's overwhelmingly Catholic population, reported the assassination attempt without comment.

Newspapers denounce attack

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Italian newspapers, including sports dailies, carried emotional accounts under banner headlines today of the assassination attempt against Pope John Paul II.

"For a precedent to this horrible crime one must go back to the most dark Middle Ages when papacy was the stake of temporal power struggle," Milan's conservative daily Il Giornale Nuovo wrote. "Our hope is that the attempt was the work of a crazy person. But ... in reality the sacrilege grew in an atmosphere of emotional and ideological tensions which made it possible."

L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican daily, issued an extra edition with a front-page banner headline, "Hour of Hope and Prayer for the Health of the Holy Father."

Pope considered love his shield

VATICAN CITY (AP) — When Pope John Paul II was elected pope in October 1978, he made it clear he considered open access to the faithful at the Vatican more important than guaranteed security.

Wednesday he was shot.

"He knew the danger, but his paramount concern was unhindered access to his flock," a Vatican security official said.

Italian police identified the pope's assailant as Nehmet Ali Agca, 23, of Turkey.

Just before the pontiff's 1979 visit to Turkey he received a death threat from a Turkish terrorist with a similar name. Turkish authorities believe it was this man, escaped murderer Mehmet Ali Agca, who shot the pontiff.

POPE JOHN PAUL II ignored Agca's initial threat. "Love is stronger than danger," he said at the time. "I am in the hands of God."

Only one Vatican bodyguard, chief of security Camillo Cibin, walked ahead of the pope Wednesday as he stood in a slow-moving white jeep that passed through the crowds awaiting his weekly general audience at St. Peter's Square. As usual, none of the 15,000 people waiting for him in the sun-drenched piazza had been subjected to security checks.

The shots rang out from about 25 feet away and the stricken pontiff was rushed away to a hospital.

"It's impossible to guarantee security when the pope goes into the piazza to greet people," said the Rev. Kazimiro Przybatek, a Polish Jesuit responsible for visits of Polish pilgrims to the Vatican.

THE VATICAN SECURITY force is made up of the 90 Swiss guards, most of whom are armed only with ceremonial spears, and less than 50 gray-suited security agents — most of them former Italian policemen. They are more concerned with crowd control during Vatican ceremonies than with forming a tight ring of security around the pontiff or with stopping suspicious looking people for questioning or searches.

That was the way John Paul II wanted it.

Italian police flank the pope in motorcycles and patrol cars during his frequent trips outside the Vatican. But he usually plunges through the shield of vehicles into the crowd, lifting babies and shaking hands.

ABROAD, THE PONTIFF is heavily guarded by the host country's security forces, but insists on traveling in an open car so he can wave to the hundreds of thousands thronging his route to greet him. The 6-foot-4, 225-pound Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus, president of the Vatican Babnk, also acts as a bodyguard and often clears the pope's path for him. But the Cicero, Ill. cleric doesn't perform that extra duty in Rome.

It was not the first time the pontiff's life was endangered.

Philadelphia Cardinal John Krol revealed Wednesday that John Paul's life was threatened during his October 1979 visit to the City of Brotherly Love.

"We were standing and waving (in a motorcade), and at one point, the Secret Service said 'Please, down,'" Krol told a new conference.

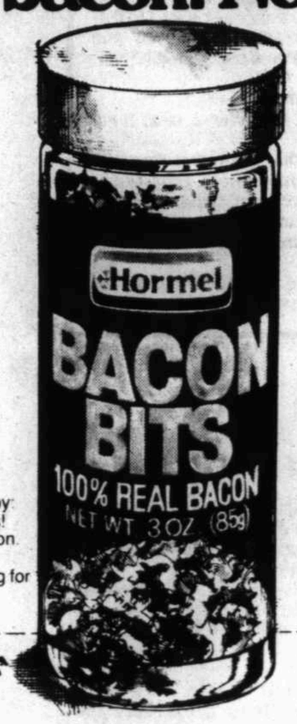

He said the Secret Service had "received some kind of threat that they were not able to check out," adding: "they were not inclined to elaborate."

Violence also marred the pope's visit to Pakistan earlier this year. A bomb exploded at the national stadium in Karachi only minutes before John Paul II arrived to say Mass. One spectator was killed.

Turk formally charged in attempt

ROME (AP) — Italian officials today formally charged an escaped Turkish terrorist in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II. Mehmet Ali Agca, 23, had threatened the pope's life once before.

Police said he was charged with attempted murder of the pope, attempted murder of two women who also were wounded in the shooting, illegal possession of arms and carrying false documents.

A spokesman at Rome police headquarters, where magistrates spent the night interrogating Agca, said he was identified as the Turkish rightist after fingerprints arrived from Interpol.

AP Laserphoto

Nehmed Ali Hagca, arrested and charged with the attempt on the Pope's life, is shown being escorted by a policeman in a corrider of Rome police headquarters early this morning.

The police spokesman said Agca had started a hunger strike. "He's not eating anything, he is just drinking water. He is a real stoic," the spokesman said.

Detectives reportedly said Agca carried a handwritten document when taken into custody moments after the shooting Wednesday in St. Peter's Square that said he intended to kill the pope to protest U.S. and Soviet imperialism.

Police said when taken into custody the man claimed he was Turkish, gave his name as Nehmet Ali Agca, and said repeatedly he "couldn't care less about life."

Turkish authorities quickly announced they believed he was in fact Mehmet Ali Agca, a rightist terrorist who threatened the pope's life before John Paul visited Turkey in 1979.

Agca escaped from prison after confessing he assassinated a noted Turkish newspaper editor, Abdi Ipekci. The terrorist later was convicted in absentia by a Turkish court and sentenced to death.

In a letter Agca sent to a Turkish newspaper one day after he escaped from prison and two days before the pope arrived in Turkey, he threatened to kill "the spiritual leader of the Roman Catholic Church."

It was not known if Agca was a Moslem, the religion of 98 percent of the Turkish population.

First reports from Rome's police headquarters said the man spoke fluent English and told authorities he was born Jan. 9, 1958.

Wednesday, the swarthy, short-haired suspect, sharply dressed in a white shirt and sports jacket, mingled with the excited crowd to await John Paul's appearance for the weekly mass audience in St. Peter's Square.

Shots rang out as the pope drove across the square, standing in an open white jeep. The suspect tried to flee, but people in the crowd grappled with him and helped two policemen make the arrest.

The Italian news agency ANSA said police found the suspect was carrying a handwritten and signed document that read: "I am killing the pope to protest against the imperialism of the Soviet Union and the United States, and against the genocide they are committing in El Salvador and Afghanistan."

ANSA said Turkish police put out an Interpol warning seven days before the assassination attempt, warning of Agca's imminent arrival in Italy.

Police sources said Agca arrived Saturday at Milan's Malpensa Airport from Spain on a charter flight, using a false passport.

He was in Rome the next day, registering at a dingy pension near Piazza Cavour, less than half a mile from Vatican City. Police found a loaded pistol clip in the room he occupied.

The Italian news agency said the police also found a "program" to attack the pope next Wednesday if a first assassination attempt failed.

ANSA said authorities' first attempt to check Agca's movements in Italy apparently failed because he used a false passport under the name of Ozgun Faruk.

Turks worried attack will hurt nation's image

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The arrest of a Turkish man after the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II left many Turks worried that their country would shoulder the blame.

"Just as we are trying to boost our image — now this happens," one man said in Istanbul.

Ali Sirin, a bakery employee, said the outside world might believe that Turkey was somehow connected to the attack.

"Now how can we convince them that Turkey has nothing to do with this kind of senseless act?" he asked.

Turkish authorities believe the man taken into custody in the Vatican City after the shooting Wednesday is Mehmet Ali Agca, a fugitive rightist terrorist. He gave his name to Rome police as Nehmet Ali Agca.

The generals who seized power in Turkey in a bloodless coup eight months ago emphasized a return to law and order after five years of political terrorism from the left and right that took more than 5,000 lives.

Turkish authorities in Ankara said a military court condemned Agca to death for the slaying of Abdi Ipekci, editor of the respected Istanbul daily Miliyet, in February 1979. Agca escaped from prison before his trial and was sentenced in absentia.

Networks reacted in a more cautious manner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Network television news, once again called upon for instant delivery of an unfolding crisis, responded to the shooting of Pope John Paul II with more caution than it applied to the coverage of President Reagan's shooting in March.

Still, there were conflicting reports.

For example, it was reported that the pope had been hit by three bullets, but no less than seven different versions of where those bullets struck were reported — the hand, below the left ear, the abdomen, the stomach, the chest, the shoulder, the arm and back.

Doctors said later the pope underwent surgery for multiple wounds, but it wasn't clear how many bullets hit the pope. One bullet went through his abdomen and exited through his back and there were also wounds on the right forearm and a finger on the left hand, said Dr. Francesco Crucitti, one of the doctors who operated on the pope.

The varying reports can be blamed on the confusion and shaky sources always present on a story of this magnitude. With television journalism, some of the sifting process is done before the public.

During the coverage of the assassination attempt on President Reagan on March 30, there were televised reports that White House press secretary James Brady had died of a gunshot wound in the head. The report was false. Brady is recovering in a Washington hospital.

CBS' big news stars, Dan Rather and Charles Kuralt, were helping to entertain network affiliates, in Los Angeles Wednesday for their annual convention, when the story about the pope's shooting broke. Rather dashed across town to the local CBS News bureau, where he picked up the anchor from Bob Schieffer in New York.

Latin American nations grieve for wounded Pope

By The Associated Press

Latin America, with the world's largest Roman Catholic population and some of its worst terrorist attacks, mourned as one continent the shooting of Pope John Paul II.

Political and religious leaders grieved, not only for the pontiff, but for the world decline in moral values they said allowed the assassination attempt to occur.

"At times like this I can think of only two things to say," said Archbishop Ivo Loscheiter, president of the Brazilian Council of Bishops. "First, let us pray to God for the health of our pope. Second, let's pray that he has mercy on this crazy and violent world we live in."

In El Salvador, where at least 18,000 people have died in political violence in the past 1½ years, President Jose Napoleon Duarte called the attempt on the pope's life "an execrable crime."

Salvadoran Archbishop Oscar Romero himself was felled last year by an assassin's bullet.

Vicar-General Monsignor Ricardo Urioste said the attack on the pope "symbolizes the state of violence into which all humanity has fallen," and his assailant "must be sick, as all assassins are."

Venezuelan President Luis Herrera Campins called the assassination attempt "a sign of the moral disjointedness that plagues this troubled world."

In Argentina, where thousands of citizens have died or disappeared during the past decade in a power struggle between the right and left, Foreign Minister Oscar Camilion expressed "the solidarity of the Argentine people as part of the Christian world, apart from sectarian distinctions, in the face of the (assassination) attempt."

Two Britons and four Austrian flight crewmen are taken from the Houston Federal Courthouse after their arraignment on charges of violations of the Neutrality Act, which prohibits unauthorized shipments of firearms outside the U.S. The six were arrested Tuesday as a plane at Houston Intercontinental Airport was about to be loaded with $1.2 million worth of military weapons. The weapons were headed for South Africa.

Dealer's tip lead to gunrunners' arrest

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. agents, who arrested six foreigners as a jetliner was about to be loaded with $1.3 million in arms for South Africa, launched their investigation three weeks ago after a tip from an alert firearms dealer, Customs officials say.

The dealer introduced the suspects, who were apparently trying to circumvent a UN arms embargo against the white-minority government of South Africa, to undercover Customs agents posing as gun dealers, federal officers said Wednesday.

The agents accepted $1.3 million from the suspects, used it to buy the guns they wanted, and then arrested the three Britons and three Austrians as the weapons were about to loaded on a chartered jetliner for a flight to South Africa, Customs spokesman Charles Conroy and Senior Agent Norman Buselmeier said.

Conroy said the intended use of the weapons was not known.

The two men named as the actual buyers of the firearms, Peter Towers, 51, and John Parks, 43, both of Great Britain, were held today in lieu of $1.5 million bond each.

"They were middle-men who came to the United States to buy firearms," Buselmeier said.

The other four defendants were crewmen on a chartered 707 jetliner that was seized along with a large cache of guns, grenade launchers and ammunition in a raid Tuesday night at Houston Interncontinental Airport.

Conroy said the firearms dealer, who had previously been a U.S. Border Patrol agent, recognized as fraudulent the suspects' "end of use certificate," a document required in international arms transactions. It said the arms were bound for the Republic of Sudan.

Undercover agent Don Winkler said in an affidavit filed along with charges against the defendants Wednesday that Towers gave him a purchase order from the Armaments Corp. Ltd. of South Africa. Winkler said he posed as "an international arms dealer capable of getting the fraudulent end user's certificate through the U.S. State Department Munitions Licensing Division."

Winkler said Towers gave him a letter of credit for $1.3 million drawn on a Dallas bank. Conroy said the letter of credit was cashed by Colt Industries of Hartford, Conn., which supplied the guns to Customs agents.

Officers arrested the suspects and seized 1,146 M16 fully automatic rifles and carbines, 100 grenade launchers, 111 .45-caliber pistols, 89 9mm pistols, 50 assorted smaller handguns and 15,000 M16 magazines of ammunition.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike Brown asked for bonds of $5 million each on Parks and Towers. He said all six defendants "could be called international vagabonds" and in previous cases "South Africa will post bond in cash and the defendants are never seen again."

Bond for the pilot, George Bellamy of Great Britain, was set at $500,000, and bonds for the other three crewmen, all Austrians, were set at $100,000 each. A bond reduction hearing was set for next Wednesday afternoon.

The six suspects were accused before U.S. Magistrate H. Lingo Platter of conspiring to export firearms without a proper license in violation of the U.S. Neutrality Act, which is punishable by fines of $100,000 and two years in prison.

The airplane belongs to Montana Austria Airlines, a charter service. In Vienna, the company's manager, Hans Joerg Stoeckl, said verbal authority from U.S. officials had been received Monday for a Houston-Johannesburg flight.

Stoeckl said he had sought documents from the company chartering the plane to prove the cargo would not violate the 1977 UN Security Council action imposing a permanent arms embargo against South Africa.

Alleged violations close hospital doors

PERRIS, Calif. (AP) — Preliminary findings by a coronor show that the causes of death of some of the 11 elderly patients whose bodies were recently exhumed differed from the causes listed by the hospital where they died.

That small Riverside County hospital, where 25 elderly patients died in March and April, was closed by the California Department of Health Services on Wednesday because of dozens of alleged health and safety violations.

The county coroner indicated preliminary findings from some of the bodies exhumed last week showed the causes of death listed by the hospital were wrong. Earlier, autopsies on six patients who had died but had not yet been buried indicated that wrong causes of death — usually heart failure — also were listed for them.

The 36-bed hospital filed for bankruptcy in federal court in San Bernardino on Monday to head off efforts by creditors to liquidate its assets.

Hospital Administrator Jean McCormick was unavailable for comment, but Deputy Attorney General James Lahana said she was "very cooperative" as the final patients were moved from the hospital to other Riverside County facilities Wednesday morning.

Health officials filed a 40-page accusation with the state Office of Administrative Hearings Los Angeles, seeking permanent revocation of the operating license for Community Hospital of the Valleys in Perris.

The health department charged the hospital with improper record-keeping, insufficient emergency room staffing, lack of required medical review procedures, failure to check the qualifications of staff physicians, failure to record and protect pharmaceutical supplies from unauthorized removal and "conduct inimical to the health and welfare of the hospital's patients. ..."

The state also alleged that outdated and possibly contaminated items were available for use in the operating room, and medical gas cylinders and systems were not maintained in a safe manner.

Many charges paralleled those made in recent days by Patricia Christensen, a former director of nursing at the hospital, and by Robert Diaz, a male nurse who had worked at the facility and was questioned by investigators. Diaz was never identified as a suspect and has not been charged in the case.

Mrs. Christensen joined the hospital in February and, she said, was rebuffed when she became concerned over several deaths and implored hospital officials to call in outside authorities. She said she was fired after cooperating in the outside investigation.

U.S., Russia at odds over plane boarding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are giving contradictory accounts — in unusually harsh language — to describe what happened when U.S. authorities boarded a Russian plane and seized three cartons just before the jet was to fly to Moscow.

U.S. technicians were examining the material today to see if it really is defense-related, as they suspected when they raided the plane. If not, the cargo will be returned to the Soviets and Americans officials will be forced to explain their actions.

The Russians say 35 armed Americans threatened the crew, tampered with the cockpit, ripped open and stole some luggage and seized three cartons of non-strategic material that had been cleared by U.S. Customs.

The Soviets call the raid at Dulles International Airport "criminal, barbarous," deliberate and a provocation.

The American government dismisses the charges as "absurd."

It says U.S. inspectors suspected that the Soviets were trying to ship "certain high-technology, defense-related items" which had not cleared Customs or been licensed for export.

A Justice Department source said Wednesday that Customs officials first thought the three crates might contain radar equipment.

The Customs Service and the Soviets both say an aircraft navigation radio receiver and a shipment of radiation-detection equipment were seized during the raid Tuesday.

The Soviets say a third crate was taken, containing an encyclopedia of railroading purchased in a Washington bookstore.

Customs Service spokesman James A. Parker said Commerce Department experts were examining the seized electronic gear to see it had strategic importance and he expected a decision to be made today.

Said the Soviets, in a protest note delivered to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and read at a news conference — in itself a rare event — at Aeroflot's Washington offices:

"A few minutes before the boarding a large group of FBI agents surrounded the plane. They forced their way into the plane and actually captured it, having removed from the cockpit the Soviet crew by rough force. ...

"What has taken place is yet another example of the flagrant disregard by the American authorities for the centuries-old norms of international law, for elementary notions of decency, and show that terror and banditism have been elevated in the United States to the status of official policy."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the incident had no relationship to American-Soviet foreign policy.

Speakes said the goods were on board "without an appropriate valid export license," and the search abided by international norms. Diplomatic baggage and safety were not jeopardized and the Customs officers were accompanied by Aeroflot crew members, he added.

He said the Soviet charges, first carried by the official news agency Tass, "are colorful but absurd. We categoricaly deny them."

Soviet and Aeroflot spokesmen said armed FBI agents physically threatened the five Aeroflot crew members and used knives to rip open luggage, including diplomatic baggage that is supposed to be immune from examination.

They also said the American agents tampered with cockpit equipment, posing a threat, although the plane landed safely in Moscow.

Parker denied there were 25 FBI men and 10 Customs agents, as the Soviets alleged. There were 11 Customs agents and seven FBI agents, he said.

Valentin Kamenev, press counselor in the Soviet Embassy here, said the seized materials had been processed, documented and cleared by Customs.

Paul Burton, a spokesman for the manufacturer, Norden Systems, confirmed that the radio receiver had been properly licensed for export.

The Customs Service said attempts to divert critical technology to foreign governments have increased significantly over the past several years.

Boys charged in deaths of two young cousins

NEW YORK (AP) — Two boys, aged 7 and 9, have been charged in the drowning deaths of two 4-year-old cousins in a drainage basin near the Atlantic Ocean.

The two unidentified suspects, both from the Far Rockaway section of Queens, were charged with juvenile delinquency early this morning and released in the custody of their parents.

Police would not say specifically what led them to charge the two boys in the deaths last Sunday of Furquron Evans and Jabril Broomfield at in the Norton Basin drainoff of Jamaica Bay.

Neighborhood youths throwing rocks into the basin around 4:30 p.m. last Sunday found the bodies of the two youngsters lying face down in about four feet of water. They told fishermen who called police.

At that time, police specualated that the drownings were accidental and that the cousins might have slipped off a cement bulkhead and fallen 10 feet into the water.

But the parents of the boys insisted that there had been foul play.

Police said this morning that information developed in the community led to the arrests of the two children.

...CHRISTMAS IN APRIL worker Kim Modisett, director of the Human Relations Council which operates the CIA program, reports that goal has been crossed, with $42,000 being raised. Goal this year was a record $40,000.

Of the 133 houses on the list, 130 were worked on during the CIA workday and 30 have not yet been worked on.

She said that the workday brought out approximately 2,000 volunteers and around 50 groups whih made repairs on roofs, windows, doors, structures, poches, painting, water heaters. Minor plumbing was also done on leaking faucets, commodes, kitchen sinks and bathroom sinks. Minor wiring repairs were also completed, she added.

"A big help was given by the Elcor Corporation, who donated a truckload of shingles," she said. These were used on approximately 15 roofs.

A highlight of this year's program was the presentation of the 1981 Governor's Award for Outstandin Volunteerism in Texas to Bobby Trimble. He received the award from a list of 370 nominees.

In addition, the CIA program received national television coverage on NBC News.

Ms. Modisett reports that the 30 remaining homes on teh list will be repaired this summer with CETA-Manpower. "CETA-Manpower will provide youth manpower, plus an xperienced supervisor carpenter, and CIA will provide the materials," she said "Here again, the labor is volunteer."

CIA is in its ninth year of operation, having been responsible for the repair of some 600 omes since 1973. All recipients are elderly (60 years or older), or handicappd, own their own home, and are on a low or fixed income.

CIA receives no federal funds or United Way funds.

"This has been our biggest year," said Trimble. "The board of directors of CIA and the recipients are grateful to each and every volunteer. Without volunteers, CIA coul not happen..."

He believes that bears will inherit the earth

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

CHEAT MOUNTAIN, W.Va. (AP) — Joe Reiffenberger sometimes wonders how many tombstones it will take before his black bears are safe in the mountains they once ruled.

As West Virginia's bear officer, Reiffenberger has spent years tending to the animals' problems and giving them a voice in the outside world. With peppery jokes and a homey philosophy, he has fought to save the bears from extinction.

"The sheep farmers up here hate bears. But I tell them that everything's going nylon and the bears will inherit the earth," Reiffenberger said.

In remote sections, a fear of bears that stretches back to pioneer days survives, turning the shy creatures into howling monsters, Reiffenberger said.

"People are becoming more tolerant. We're finally learning. The old hatred is disappearing as the old pioneer ethic dies out. But every tombstone still increases a bear's chances," he said.

A stocky, powerful man who roars about having to play nursemaid to a bunch of "danged" bears, Reiffenberger talks about the animals as so many wayward children. But the indignation is a facade and the deep, growly voice always gives way to a laugh and a joke about his bears.

"I'm a lousy bureaucrat. I'm a good philosopher," he said. "That's the problem."

With a steady stream of jokes, Reiffenberger will tell you about bears — their personalities and habits — naming his favorites, and recalling when one had cubs or wandered into a town.

"Bear is an awful intelligent creature. Each one has a differant personality and there are some weird bears," he said. "I guess I sound possessive about them."

Reiffenberger once gave mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a bear. During a program to tag hibernating bears, a dart gun was accidentally fired twice while game workers were creeping up on a bear in a cave.

As the powerful anesthetic began to slow the animal's breathing, Reiffenberger breathed air into its lungs. His efforts were rewarded with a growl that led to a hurried retreat from the cave.

"Bear is a powerful individual," said Reiffenberger, recalling the incident. "He don't smell too good either."

Bears are proud and intelligent creatures who must be treated with respect, Reiffenberger said. When transmitters were put on some bears as part of a study on their habits, each one was given a name.

"It seemed so impersonal just to number them. The first time we put a bug on one was when Nixon was having his little problem, so we called it 'Watergate.' Then we called them things like 'Gannymede.' I wasn't going to have any of this 'Rover' stuff."

Some of bears loved the radios and seemed to show them off,while others uickly found ways to remove them. "If one was too tight I knew that bear would come down and die on the courthouse steps. Make a federal case out of it," he said.

Dealing with bears often depends on the animals' whims.

A project to gauge the bear population in West Virginia with an intricate system of counting stations and chemical baits ended when the bears walked around the stations. After a year of preparation, the census counted some squirrels and raccoons and a fox.

"Bears are secretive," Reiffenberger said. "If you want to prove a theory about bears, you just can't go with what of one them does. You have to get 86 of them to do it."

While bears are strong individualists, their behavior is shaped by regional differences, Reiffenberger said. Bears have learned to adapt to the different customs and habits of the humans in the regions they live in, he said.

DEAR ABBY

Some like them plump

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When I was married I weighed 115. (I am 5'4".) Fourteen years (and three children) later, I weigh 136. I've tried diets, and taking it off isn't bad, it's keeping it off that's hard for me.

I'm neat and clean and dress well. I kno my husband is not ashamed of me because he keeps telling me he likes me just the way I am.

My sister, who lives on black coffee and cigarettes to keep her weight down, tells me that all men want their wives to be thin. She says my jusband says he likes me just the way I am because he doesn't want to hurt my feelings.

I'm in perfect health. Dieting makes me irritable and nervous, but I would make an effort to lose weight if I thought my husband really wanted me to. Abby, do you think all men like thier women thin? — PLUMP IN PAWTUCKET

DEAR PLUMP: — No. Your sister can't speak for your husband or any other man. Some men like their women plump. The bottom line is how do you like yourself.

DEAR ABBY: I know a man who took his wife and recently widowed sister-in-law to a baseball game. No sooner had the three of them sat down in their reserved seats, when a nice-looking gentleman and his young son came in and sat right beside them. The man who had brought the two ladies happened to know the nice-looking gentleman, so he introduced him to the women.

The gentleman, who happened to be a widower, had the seat right nest to the widowed sister-in-law. The two of them hit it off extremely well. Eight months later they were making wedding plans!

Not until then did the widow learn that her brother-in-law had bought all five tickets, and seated her next to his friend.

Wouldn't you say this was a lot better than trying to arrange a blind date? — DANNY IN DALLAS

DEAR DANNY: Much! Had the brother-in-law asked his friend if he wanted to meet a nice widow, the friend would probably have said, "No, thanks, I know enough widows."

And if he had asked his sister-in-law if she wanted to go out with a nice gentleman, she probably would have asked, "How tall is he?"

A high-tech look for a condo bedroom

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I have a small bedroom in my condominium which I want to furnish in a very contemporary manner.

I have built-in cabinets in the closet so the only furniture I really need is a bed and nightstands. If I have room, I might like a desk and chair but that is not extremely important to me.

How might I create a high-tech look in a small bedroom? — T.B.

A. You might start with the bed and build a bed frame of plywood to which you apply slabs of mirror. Build the frame so that the mirror section cantilevers out over the base, leaving enough room for lighting underneath to give the frame a floating feeling. Push the bed up into one corner to maximize space in your room.

If you wish to soften the room slightly with some elegant handcrafted materials, consider a woven drapery which is matched precisely with a wallcovering to give the room a feeling of continuity. Soft or bold colors may be utilized, depending on your preferences.

Top your bed with plenty of pillows and a comforter to coodinate with your color scheme.

Eliminate the need for end tables by constructing the bed frame so the mattress fits between two panels which can serve as night stand and as seating space.

If room permits consider a high-tech looking desk — choosing such materials as glass or lucite on a lightly scaled frame. Both functional and aesthetically pleasing in contrast might be a desk chair with French country design.

Q. My new living room has terrazzo tile floors in a honey brown and the walls are a light honey paneling. My furniture is rather formal mahogany of the 18th and 19th centuries (some antiques and some reproductions).

I love our new home but the living room is a bit too dark and casual for my tastes and my furnishing. What might I do to enhance the room? — T.C.M.

A. Try lightening the walls by either glazing them or painting them a pale pastel or a creamy, off-white. This should enhance your mahogany pieces through the contrast it will provide.

Add handsome rugs to the floor, at least in conversation areas to soften the tile. Oriental rugs or simulated Orientals would be interesting, providing they blend with the patterns and designs of your upholstered pieces.

If your upholstery needs recovering, consider plain fabrics with interesting textures and let the pattern be established in your rugs and other accessories.

Q. We've recently bought a run-down cabin by the seacoast which we plan to visit on weekends. The floor is concrete. The walls are a combination of plaster, wood paneling and old brick — all in very bad shape.

I need to put up curtains and furnish the rooms economically with what we already have or can buy at secondhand shops. I'd like everything to be as easy to care for as possible. — P.C.

A. Paint is probably the most economical and simple decorating tool for you to use to update and freshen your cabin.

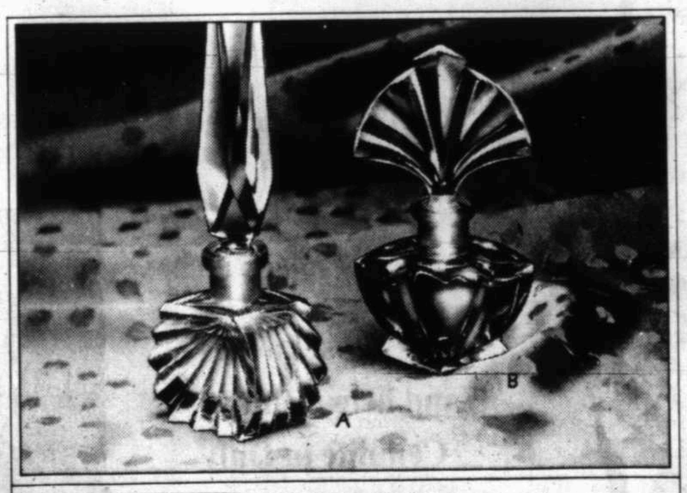

First clean the floor very carefully and use rust colored, industrial-type paint throughout. Replace the peeling plaster, refinish the wood paneling and repair the brick if you feel it is worthwhile. If the walls are beyond repair, cover them all with a coat of cream-colored paint.

Choose a navy blue, rust and cream-colored fabric for curtains you make yourself and hang on navy blue rings and wooden drapery rod. Paint some of the secondhand furniture navy blue. Reupholster furniture in the blue, rust and cream fabric.

Choose furniture that you buy with an eye to the ease of recovering. Captain's deck chairs, for example, could have fabric backs and seats made of your print fabric. Repeat the same colors throughout.

Chinese chicken recipes without the soy sauce

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Several students in the Chinese cooking classes my friend Dee Wang gives told her they would appreciate having some recipes that do not call for soy sauce, so savory but high in sodium. Members of their families and some of their friends are on sodium-reduced diets, and Mrs. Wang's pupils want to cook these special dishes for them.

Dee, author of "Chinese Cooking, The Easy Way" (Elsevier-Nelson), developed a sodium-reduced recipe for Sesame Chicken with a Tart Lemon Sauce. When we tried it in my kitchen, it worked perfectly. When I served it as part of a buffet supper at my house, I added a bowl of Chinese Duck Sauce to the table for those eaters who enjoy that sweet lagniappe with a Chinese dish.

CHINESE SESAME CHICKEN
WITH TART LEMON SAUCE

2 whole chicken breasts, skinned and boned (1¼ pounds, scant)
1 egg white, from a large egg
1 tablespoon dry white wine or dry white vermouth
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
Tart Lemon Sauce, recipe follows:
Corn oil for deep-fat frying
¾ to 1 cup sesame seeds
Lettuce

Cut the chicken in 1-inch pieces. In a medium bowl with a fork beat the egg white until it is slightly foamy; beat in the wine and pepper. Add the chicken; toss to coat evenly. Set side.

Prepare the Lemon Sauce.

Add enough corn oil to a deep-fat fryer or wok (non-automatic or electric) or to a heavy 3-quart saucepan to have the utensil one-third full. Over medium-high heat, if range-top utensil is used, heat the oil to 375 degrees; if electric utensil is used heat the oil to the same temperature.

Spread sesame seeds on a platter or on a sheet of wax paper and dip chicken pieces into seeds to coat on all sides. With a metal spatula, lift chicken pieces carefully so seeds adhere and fry the pieces in the hot oil, a few at a time, until tender and golden — 1 to 2 minutes. Drain on brown paper or on several thicknesses of paper toweling set on a heat-proof platter or in a shallow baking pan and keep warm in a low oven.

Arrange chicken on a lettuce-lined platter. Remove lemon slices from Tart Lemon Sauce and garnish Sesame Chicken with them. Over medium heat, stirring gently, heat the Tart Lemon Sauce and pass with the chicken.

TART LEMON SAUCE

In a 1½-quart saucepan stir together 1 tablespoon cornstarch and 2 tablespoons corn oil; gradually stir in, keeping smooth, ¾ cup white rice-wine vinegar and 1-3rd cup room-temperature honey. Over medium heat, stirring constantly, cook until clear, slightly thickened and boiling. Stir in 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind and the thin slices from an unpeeled lemon. Makes about 1 cup. Set aside.

Fountain fever

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Claiming that it has more beautiful and numerous fountains even than Rome, Kansas City has an outbreak of "fountain fever" every time a new one is proposed.

When preparations to construct a modern fountain in the city's northland were proposed, more than $100,000 in private donations was contributed.

Three dozen school children and teachers converged on Kansas City Mayor Richard L. Berkley's office to deliver a "Fountain Fever" button and spur the campaign to raise additional funding to attain the summer 1982 completion date.

"I couldn't be more pleased to help kick off this kind of a campaign," Berkley said. "The fountains in our town are one of its loveliest assets."

AT WIT'S END

Perils of guarantees

By ERMA BOMBECK

BOMBECK'S LAW: You show me a carpet that lasts a lifetime and I'll show you an ugly carpet.

From my mouth to God's ears, let my voice go forth that never again will I buy ANYTHING with a lifetime guarantee.

I mean it. That kelly green plush carpet seemed like a great idea at the time, but how could I have possibly known that I was going to live this long?

There isn't a spring goes by that I don't look at that carpet and repent. Wouldn't you have thought someone would have warned me about it? Some floor-coverings spiritual advisor who set me down, patted my hand and said, "I know, dear, you think you love that carpet now, but what do you know about it? I mean really!

"You're seeing it for the first time in the full blush of its youth. You're enamored with one another. You want to spend the rest of your life running your fingers through it, caressing it in front of the fire, vacuuming it, and showing it off to your friends.

"But what will happen in a few years when you grow tired of one another? When it grows lint and every three hours yells, 'Clean me! Clean me!' or when you find you cannot live without a blue chair and you must choose between the two of them.

"Will your fervor for the carpet remain when every time you look at it you are reminded to clean out the refrigerator?"

But there was no spiritual carpet advisor, and I'm stuck with it in a loveless marriage.

Kelly green carpets never die. You can't kill 'em. Goodness knows I've tried. Our house flooded once, rotting away the baseboards, ruining the wallpaper, and warping the doors. The kelly green carpet never so much as showed a water mark.

Several years ago one of the kids set a hot iron on it and left a scorched imprint. It healed itself.

Moths never touch it. Dragging furniture over it does nothing. Stains never stick. It never shrinks. It just endures.

My mother figured out that the carpet probably has done more to keep my marriage intact than anything else. She's probably right. My husband and I would have parted years ago, but with my luck, I'd get custody of the you-know-what!

Former teacher marketing hot dogs

By STEVE GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — In 1976 Judy Holste forsook teaching school and pushed her way into the hot-dog business with a single cart. Today she has 20 of the stainless-steel wiener wagons and a corner on the sidewalk fast-food market in downtown Portland.

"There I was in rain, sleet, snow and wind," she says. "Me, my push-cart and a big grin. I had five pairs of thermal underwear, one for each day of the week.

"Next spring I had cart No. 2 and No. 3 and in November 1978, No. 4 and 5 arrived."

As the business blossomed, so did the red canopies over the expanding fleet of push-carts, proclaiming "Judy's Hot Dogs." With the inevitability of paperwork resulting from a burgeoning business, Judy retired from the streets to the office while keeping the big smile.

"We call her Miss Judy now," said one of her vendors as he inserted a steaming, spicy beer sausage into a bun.

That bit of information was enough to broaden the smile even more. "Somebody's trying to pull your leg," she said as she cuddled her newborn daughter, Kristen. "Nobody around here ever has called me Miss Judy."

When she started, she says, the stainless-steel carts cost $2,500. Now they're up to $4,000. Besides heating the sausages and buns, the carts provide hot pretzels and a choice of two soft drinks, dispensed into paper cups.

Reviving the hash-slinger's art

By DICK BRAUDE
Associated Press Writer

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — Warren Jones' Apple Tree Diner has lasted long enough to enjoy the revival of roadside eateries, where slinging hash not long ago was a dying art.

Jones, a short-order cook, bought the 60-year-old Apple Tree last December after leasing it for four years. The aging but well-preserved diner attracts 300 customers a day, many of them regulars.

But recently, Jones feared the bright red dining car might become a museum piece. The land under the Apple Tree was sold out from under him — to a credit union.

Pressure from some influential customers apparently encouraged the credit union to back out, and Jones now hopes to buy the land himself.

Temporarily faced with the nearly impossible task of trying to relocate, Jones found that some people still think all diners are greasy spoons that attract riff-raff.

"They don't know what diners once were like," he said. "These days, you don't even see many short order cooks; everything in the fast food places is cooked by computer."

Jones, 31, of Norton, Mass., is only the fourth owner of the diner, named for orchards once located in this town, one of Boston's oldest suburbs.

Made by the Worcester Dining Car Co. — which manufactured only 650 such diners — the Apple Tree still has its original marble counters, tiled floor and walls, brass fixtures, and wood paneling.

Located in the county seat, the Apple Tree is a lure for judges and lawyers.

"One day," Jones recalled, "we had three Superior Court judges sitting side by side. Sometimes we have three generations of the same family at the counter."

On weekends people are lined up to get in.

The diner serves 30 dozen eggs, 15 pounds of bacon and 400 cups of coffee daily. Then, there are the lunch specials of stuffed chicken, beef and chicken pies made by Ona Jones, Warren's mother.

While he works 12 hours a day, seven days a week in the diner, she cooks in the basement of a nearby house.

"I've made a lot of friends through this place," Jones said. "They appreciate a square meal for their money. And I won't turn anyone away. If someone's down and out, I'll give him something to eat."

Diners got their start in the late 1800s, when horse-drawn lunch wagons were driven to factory gates. Soon, the horses and wheels were removed, and customers chowed down at windows of the stationary eateries.

By 1910-15, the wagons had inside counters. The Apple Tree was built around 1920.

"This is one of the oldest of its kind left unchaged," said ones. "Diners are being destroyed every day."

The diner boom era was the 1930s. Sleek stainless steel diners, modeled after plush railroad dining cars, were popular — apparently too popular.

"Too many of them," said Jones, "like fast-food places."

By the 1950s, when the quick-burger era dawned, diners had faded. Survivors were grimy leftovers in the shadows of failing factories.

A revival began in the 1970s, partly for reasons of nostalgia. Jones said some passers-by stop in just to talk about diner history.

Several part-time countermen and women work at the Apple Tree. Jones' mother handles the financial records.

A full-course lunch of stuffed chicken or homemade pot pie can be had for under $2.50.

Jones has no problem with vandalism. Neighborhood people keep an eye on the diner after it closes in the afternoon.

"Too many people have to eat junk at fast food places because there's nothing else around," Jones said.

"I'm staying in business to preserve diner history and make a decent living. What I've got here is a big, beautiful antique."

Make your own bouquet of silk roses

By ELLEN APPEL
Copley News Service

There may be no substitute for real roses when it comes to beauty, elegance, and sheer luxury ... but everyone is between bouquets some of the time. For those times, why not have a silk bouquet ready to set on the mantle.

Like real roses, silk roses can be beautiful, elegant, and luxurious. As fashion accessories, silk roses actually have the advantage. Unlike real roses, they won't wilt before the clock strikes midnight.

No matter how you use them, however, whether in a bouquet, on a sunhat, or pinned to a lapel, silk roses are indeed sensational. Here are directions to make them:

MATERIALS: Scraps of silk or silk-blend fabric, green floral wire, green floral tape, needlenose pliers (optional), white glue, scissors, pencil, paper, spray starch or sizing, tiny ball of absorbent cotton, iron.

PETAL PATTERNS: Draw petals on paper as follows: 1. Draw one large petal, about two-and-one-half-inches-wide and two-and-one-half-inches-long. 2. Draw one narrow petal, about two-inches-wide and two-and-one-half-inches-long. 3. Draw one circle, about two-and-one-half-inches in diameter. 4. Cut the shapes from paper.

CUTTING OUT PETALS: 1. Iron silk on wrong side. Spray with starch or sizing, and iron again. Repeat until fabric feels fairly stiff. 2. Trace ten large petals, six narrow petals, and one circle on the "bias" of fabric. (The bias is diagonal to the weave.) 3. Cut shapes from fabric.

SHAPING THE PETALS: 1. Wet petals. 2. Let petals dry to slightly damp. 3. Holding each petal in both hands, use your thumbs and fore fingers to stretch the petal's center. 4. Using fingers or needlenose pliers, curl outer edges of petals back (a). 5. Let petals dry.

STARTING THE FLOWER: 1. Glue a tiny ball of cotton to the wire. 2. Daub glue around cotton ball. 3. Wrap silk circle around cotton so that it looks like a silk lollipop.

CENTER PETALS: 1. Glue a narrow petal to the stem, near the base of the "lollipop." 2. Wind petal tightly around the stem, folding back the top edge (b). 3. Glue remaining narrow petals to stem, one at a time. Start each new petal opposite last petal. Wind each petal tightly, folding back top edges.

OUTER PETALS: 1. Glue large petals to stem, one at a time. Start each new petals at a different place on the stem. Instead of winding tightly this time, let them fall open gracefully. 2. Stretch floral tape, and wind around the flower's base. 3. Wind floral tape around remaining length of stem.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Polishing pointers for fingernails

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm forever polishing my fingernails at the last minute and always end up smearing at least one.

I've since found out that you can smooth out that rough place by using polish remover.

Use the brush of the polish you painted on your nails. Remove the excess polish by pressing on the side of the bottle.

Dip the brush into a little polish remover and carefully go over your damaged nail. There's enough remover on the brush to smooth out the polish, but not enough to remove it.

Your fingernail will look pretty once again and you won't have a build-up of polish. — Josie K.

It does work — and in jig time you're on your way. — Heloise

BUTTONS, BUTTONS

Dear Heloise: Buttons are forever popping off my blouses and skirts. Wonder why...?

Now, when I sew on a button, I stitch a tiny button on the underside of the garment, directly behind the front button.

REACH FOR THE SKY

Dear Heloise: Being a little on the short side, reaching cobwebs in corners of the ceiling is next to impossible.

After putting my thinking cap on I came up with the idea of putting my feather duster handle into the end of a curtain rod. It fit perfectly.

Instant extension, not to mention NO cobwebs! — Hazel Emerson

DOWN TO SIZE

Dear Heloise: Thanks to you and all the all-knowing dear hearts who write to you each day.

One hint I've learned that's saved me many steps with my toddler children is to take full advantage of my lower cabinets.

All plastic cups, glasses and bowls and everyday dishes that the smaller children use are stored on these shelves within easy reach of the children.

I've also put the cereal on a lower shelf so my 7-year-old can fix his own breakfast on Saturdays during those early-hour cartoons.

They are able to reach the necessary dishes for setting the table, as well as reach a drinking glass for those many drinks of water throughout the day. — Mouise Ellis

+ + +

Not only are they saving you steps but they are learning independence and responsibility at the same time.

Give them a hug for me. — Heloise

Cucumbers are in peak supply

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

There's a seasonal jump in market supplies of cucumbers from May through July. Budget-minded cooks may find it useful to make the most of them.

Cucumbers make delightful side dishes or fresh relishes. A fine new cookbook, "Applehood and Motherpie" by the Junior League of Rochester, N.Y., reminded me of this fact. When the book recently came across my desk, I was happy to see a recipe not often come on — one I recognized as being popular in Canada when I was growing up there. This salad-relish is great to serve with a platter of cold sliced meat and poultry — from smoked tongue to turkey. It's delicious, too, with charcoal-grilled hamburgers or steak sandwiches for outdoor parties.

PEGGI GODWIN'S CUCUMBER SALAD

4 cucumbers
1 sweet Spanish onion, sliced
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
½ cup vinegar
½ cup oil
Celery seed

Pare cucumbers. Score lengthwise with tine of fork, all around cucumber. Slice cucumbers thinly. Put in salted ice water. Add sliced onion. Let stand 1 to 2 hours. Cook sugar and water over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Cool. Add vinegar and oil to cooled sugar syrup, and mix well. Drain and rinse cucumber and onion slices. Pour vinegar and oil mixture over them to cover. Sprinkle with celery seed. Refrigerate overnight. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

Season nears for picking blackberries

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

With the approach of summer, the countryside in much of America abounds with bushes laden with a purple-black globule that in my opinion is one of the most delicious of all berries.

The blackberry is rarely found in supermarkets, but many farms sell them and a foraging tour of rural areas in New York, New Jersey and other states is sure to uncover this fragrant fruit which makes a pie that many find as good as the famed blueberry version.

The blackberry has long been popular in England, where the season peaks in September instead of June as in the United States. To this day, many English farmers' wives go blackberrying every year and turn their find into puddings and jams. Homemade blackberry wine and cordials also used to be served in many country homes.

When North America was first settled there were few blackberries to be found, since the land was heavily wooded. As our forefathers cleared the forests for pasture, blackberries spread and seedlings of different species began to thrive.

Then, as the population grew, burgeoning towns and cities forced the berry hunter to look farther afield. This led to an era of commercial cultivation.

By 1841, a plant that was less thorny and which bore larger fruit was exhibited before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Eventually other varieties appeared, including loganberries, boysenberries, youngberries, dewberries.

By 1875, dewberries had been discovered in West Virginia and transplanted to Ohio. At about this time a breeder in Morgan City, La., came up with the youngberry and in Santa Cruz, Calif., loganberries and boysenberries went on the market.

These sweet, juicy berries do not store well and should be eaten as soon as possible after being picked. Here's a recipe for blackberry pie.

BLACKBERRY PIE

1 quart fresh blackberries, washed and drained
1½ cups sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
Juice of half a lemon
1 ounce brandy
1½ tablespoons all-purpose flour
Pastry for 2-crust, 9-inch pie, unbaked
1 tablespoon butter

Mix blackberries with sugar, salt, lemon juice, brandy and flour. Fill pastry-lined pie pan. Dot with butter. Adjust top crust. Bake in preheated 450-degree oven for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 25 minutes longer. Serves 6-8.

Fish can be delicious and nutritious

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Why is it that so many people think they don't like fish?

Whatever the reason, "I don't like fish," is an all too-common refrain.

Too bad. Fish is delicious. And good for you. And in some cases, cheap — at least cheaper than beef and other meats.

So what's the problem?

Maybe it's just that

● FOOD ●

people haven't really gotten comfortable with fish cookery.

Methods for cooking fish often are less than precise.

The chief thing to avoid is overcooking. Overcooked fish resembles soles — of shoes, not the famous fillet — and is about as edible. Fish should barely flake when it is done.

Older recipes say fish should easily flake with a fork when it is cooked through, to but my taste, the fish is too dry by then. If the flesh no longer is translucent in the center, but just beginning to turn opaque, then it is done.

Generally, fish can be cooked using the same methods as meat: frying, broiling, grilling, poaching and baking. Fat fish, such as mackerel, may take better to smoking than these methods.

Several excellent cookbooks are available, including the fish volume in the "Good Cook" series by Time-Life, and "The Fish-Lover's Cookbook," by Sheryl and Mel Landon.

Don't hesitate to ask fish merchants for their ideas, too.

Here are some ideas to get you started.

Sole Bercy: This version uses white wine, and can be used for a large variety of flat fish. Butter a heavy frypan and add about one-fourth cup each, chopped shallots and parsley. Add flat fillets of fish and pour about an ounce of white wine over them.

Dot the surface of the fish with butter and bake it in a preheated 300-degree oven for about 5 minutes, basting the fish once or twice. When the fish can be flaked with a fork it is done. Watch it carefully so it does not overcook, and serve it immediately.

Sand Dabs: Flatfish such as sand dabs, if they have been frozen, can be soaked a few moments in milk to add moisture. Small sand dabs are best sauteed, then topped wth freshly melted butter.

Rinse them briefly in cold water and soak them a few minutes in milk. Melt butter in a heavy skillet. Drain the fish briefly, then sprinkle them with a little flour.

When the butter is hot but not brown, saute the fish until they are golden (about 2 minutes). Carefully turn the fish and saute them until the other side is golden.

The fish may be seasoned with salt and pepper, then drizzled with a little melted butter. It's that simple.

COD ROMAN-STYLE

2 lbs. fresh cod in thick fillets, skinned
Salt
1 large green pepper
2 tbsps. flour
Corn oil
3 to 4 tbsps. olive oil
2 medium onions, thinly sliced
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 lb. tomatoes, fresh or canned, peeled, seeded and coarsely chopped
Fresh ground pepper
2 tbsps. chopped, fresh parsley

Cut the fish into 2-inch squares. Remove any bones that remain. Sprinkle the fish with salt and let it stand 30 minutes to draw out the moisture.

Meanwhile, cut the green pepper in half, remove the core and seeds and cut the pepper into thin strips. Drop the strips into boiling water seasoned with a little salt. Cook them for 1 minute after the water again begins to boil. Drain the peppers, run cold water over them and drain agan. Set them aside.

Pour off any liquid that has accumulated around the fish. Pat the fish pieces dry with paper towels. Shake the fish pieces in a bag with the flour to coat. Turn them into strainer and shake to remove excess flour.

Pour one-fourth inch of oil in a skillet. Heat the oil and fry the fish quickly over high heat on both sides until it is golden brown. Remove the fish from the pan and keep it warm.

In another large skillet, heat the olive oil. Saute the onions gently until they are pale gold. Add the garlic and tomatoes and cook them slowly for about 5 minutes.

Add the reserved green pepper, cover and cook until the vegetables tender. Gently add fried fish and cook the mixture over low heat, uncovered, for 7 to 8 minutes. Add salt and pepper to taste. Sprinkle the fish with chopped parsley. Makes four to six servings.

SWEET AND PUNGENT MAHIMAHI

2 lbs. mahimahi fillets
One-fourth cup flour
Two-thirds cup thinly sliced onion
3 tbsps. melted fat or oil
One-fourth cup thinly sliced green pepper
Three-fourths cup vinegar
Three-fourths cup water
One-half cup sugar
One and one-half tsps. powdered ginger
1 tsp. salt

Thaw the fish if it is frozen. SKin the fillets and cut them into serving-size portions.

Roll the fish in flour. Cook the onion in the fat in a 10-inch frypan until lightly browned. Remove the onion and fry the fish in the same skillet at moderate heat for 4 to 5 minutes, or until the fish is brown. Turn it carefully.

Spread the green pepper and onions over the fish. Combine the remaining ingredients and pour them over the fish.

Simmer the mixture for 10 to 15 minutes, or until the fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Makes six servings with about 235 calories each.

Year of the squash: A backyard view

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

Even the most serious of backyard gardeners enjoys a little levity from time to time and something of the lighthearted approach is taken by the National Garden Bureau in designating 1981 as the year of the Squash.

The garden bureau, which is composed of seed growers and marketers throughout the United States and Canada, is the same organization which declared last year as the Year of the Cucumber, prompting numerous memorable puns.

Among the slogans we can expect to be exposed to this year are such urgings as: "Reach out and squash someone," and, "Put a little squash in your life," with riddles like, "Put a zucchini in your tank and what do you get? – Squashahol, of course," tossed in for good measure.

Now, so far as this backyard gardener is concerned, they didn't have to go to all the trouble of designating a special year for this vegetable because I wouldn't go a season without planting at least two or three varieties, both the summer and the winter types.

And I'm not alone in my admiration for the squash. Every fall, community newspapers throughout North America publish photographs of local gardeners posing proudly beside mammoth specimens of squash and pumpkins, some of the behemoths tipping the scales at hundreds of pounds.

I suspect that having this year designated as Year of the Squash will prompt many more home gardeners to get into the annual bigger-is-better sweepstakes, with neighbor pitted against neighbor to come up with the biggest specimen in the whole blamed territory.

I'm going along with our family's long-standing favorites — the yellow crookneck and the zucchini in the summer varieties and the Golden Hubbard and Spaghetti Squash in the winter varieties.

It's interesting to note that squash are among the oldest of cultivated vegetables, dating as far back as 6000 B.C. Native to North America, the name squash is believed derived from the Massachusett Indian word "askutasquash" which is translated as meaning "eaten green" in reference to the fact the fruits were harvested and eaten before they were mature.

Summer squash include those that are customarily eaten at an immature stage when the seeds aren't fully developed and the rind is still tender. Winter squash are those harvested and eaten when they are fully mature, after the rind has hardened, and they can be stored for winter use.

While many classes of squash were known in North America prior to 1880, it was the period from 1880 to 1900 that saw the development of many new and improved squash cultivars. But even with the improvements made by plant breeders during that period and since, some of today's popular types actually differ little from those that were available in seed catalogs some 150 years ago.

An example is the Acorn squash which was listed as a cultivar about 1830. Hubbard was introduced by a seedsman around 1855, Yellow Bush Scallop, Yellow Crookneck and Cocozelle, all of which you'll find in this year's catalogs, were common in 1865.

However, thanks to the efforts of the plant breeders, today's offerings generally have improved plant and fruit characteristics, along with early maturity and greater yields, as those newspaper photographs attest.

One reason for the popularity of the squash is its versatility as a comestible. It may be used as a vegetable, as a dessert in puddings and pies and in some instances the seeds can be roasted and eaten. And in some parts of the world, the male squash flowers are dipped in batter and fried — fritter flowers!

Still another plus factor is the fact they are low in calories and fat but high in other nutritional goodies such as potassium.

Toss another hippoburger on the grill for guests

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Writer

LOCKPORT, Ill. (AP) — Toss another hippoburger on the grill, Virginia, we've got company. At least I think they're going to stay.

Yes, Virginia, anybody can buy hippopotamus. And some people even prefer lionburger, buffaloburger or camelburger cookouts with rattlesnake snacks.

Hippo roasts and steaks are $5.95 a pound, and ground hippo is $4.50 at Czimer Foods Inc., which provides as much as five tons of exotic animal meat weekly for the nation's discriminating diners.

Art Czimer, 72, says 75 percent of the business is in wholesale shipments to restaurants and hotels throughout the country. The rest mainly is with customers who are allergic to chemicals in processed meats. Hippopotamus is a good mover, he says.

How about a nice ostrich roast or steak at $14.95 a pound? Sure, the price is $2 more than a year ago, but what hasn't gone up?

Camel cookouts are becoming popular, with a roast and camelburger going for $5.95 a pound and a steak for $7.95. The price has not changed in a year.

The business is headed by Art and his two brothers, Rudy, 68, and Rich, 66. Their Hungarian father opened a butcher shop in Chicago in 1914 and exotic meats became a specialty after World War II.

Ostrich is their slowest seller.

"There's less to an ostrich than about anything else," says Czimer. "The thighs are all you can use from them. Their body is just a cage. But now and then somebody wants ostrich and we have 'em.

"Camel sells pretty well, but a camel's hump being one of the world's greatest delicacies is hogwash. There's no meat in it — just a big lump of hard fat."

The price of buffalo filet mignon also has increased $2 in the last year, to $12.95 a pound. But you can get a boneless rump roast for $4.95 and buffaloburger for $3.25. Beef roasts are retailing for around $2 a pound and ground beef chuck is selling for about $1.69.

Lion is another good seller — roast or steaks at $6.95, ground $4.75. Lion prices have remained steady.

Tigers and alligators are on the endangered species lists, so that meat no longer is available at Czimers.

"We also can't locate elephant carcasses anymore," says Czimer. "We have about 100 sources for our animals and we don't divulge them — we don't want our competitors to know. Most of the sources are game farms in this country. The government knows about the sources but doesn't control them.

"Their only interest would be if poaching is involved, or something like that," he says. "Our invoices are open to them — everything is strictly legal. No endangered species are involved."

Czimer says one of the most popular items is rattlesnake. "We can sell all we can get," he says. "We just received 1,000 pounds from Texas and are selling it for $6.95 a pound. People love rattlesnakes barbecued, fried or made into a pate."

In addition to various game birds, especially pheasant and quail, venison and buffalo are the most popular, Czimer says. Also in demand are elk, bear, moose, reindeer, antelope, caribou, wild goat, llama, wild boar, and imported wild hare. Currently, beaver legs are a good buy at $3.25 a pound.

"I have no favorites and I don't know what wild meat taste is," Czimer says. "Each kind of meat has its individual flavor. Sure, we send out now and then for fried chicken or pizza. The grandchildren go for it."

Fishing out the best quality of trout

By MERLE ELLIS

Not many years ago, the fish display in most supermarkets consisted of little more than a row or two of fresh fish in the meat case — if, indeed, there was any at all — and perhaps a limited selection of frozen fish, fish sticks and fish filets in the frozen food case.

That is changing, and changing fast. There is a growing interest in fish and, thanks to modern processing and packaging technology, a growing availability of good fresh fish in all parts of the country.

It used to be that fresh fish was available only on a very regional basis. Fresh salmon could be had only on the Pacific coast and pompano only in Florida and along the Gulf Coast. These days, that is no longer the case. I have seen both of those fish offered fresh in markets as far inland as Dayton and Omaha.

It won't be many years before there will be as much fresh fish in your butcher's meat case as there is fresh meat; maybe even more. For that reason we will, in this column, be talking more and more about fish as time goes by. Today, we'll speak of trout.

Rainbow trout once were the gastronomic province of only the luckiest of anglers or the wealthiest of gourmets, but not any more. They are still not cheap, but they are available, fresh, in meat markets all over the country, and at fairly reasonable prices.

Rainbow trout are easily identified by the broad reddish "rainbow" band that runs along the side of the fish from head to tail. The reddish band blends into a dark olive green on the back and to white or silver on the belly. The rainbow is more distinct on older fish. On the young, farm-raised trout that you find in the supermarket, it will be less noticeable.

Virtually all of the trout available today are farm-raised, most of them in the clear, cool waters of spring-fed streams in Idaho. A strictly controlled natural diet assures a trout with a distinctive delicate flavor as good as, or better than, the ones in the wild.

To be sure you're getting the best and freshest rainbow trout, look for bright, clear eyes (all fresh trout are sold with the head and tail intact). Also check for firm, elastic flesh that springs back to the touch. Fresh trout should have a well-cleaned body cavity, scales coated with a thin, gelatinous substance, and, of course, no objectionable odor.

Many people bypass trout because of the bones — they do have bones. But removing the bones either before or after the fish is cooked is really a rather simple procedure and one well worth learning. Boneless trout are available in many markets, but at a considerable premium over those that you bone yourself.

To bone a trout before cooking, open the body cavity of the fish and slide the blade of a sharp, thin boning knife under the rib bones along one side. Following the contour of the rib cage, cut first out toward the belly to loosen the ribs, then down to the backbone on one side of the fish. Be careful not to cut through the flesh along the backbone. Do the same along the other side of the fish.

Then cut through the backbone at the tail and, holding the bone in one hand, slide your knife along the bone from the tail to the head. Sever at the head end. Remove any fine bones along the belly by scraping the bones away from the center. Presto! A boneless trout — head and tail intact, perfect for broiling or frying. Or stuff with a dressing, fold back to its original shape and bake.

Let's hear it for Speakes

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's nothing quite like watching a White House spokesman squirm when he is reluctantly sending out the word that the president might shave a particularly popular program.

So let's hear it for Larry Speakes, the deputy White House press secretary who spent several uncomfortable moments during the past week explaining how President Reagan might do just that.

The subject at hand was Social Security.

On Friday, when it began to look more and more as though the president would in some way recommend that cuts be made, Speakes came under increasing pressure to explain what options Reagan faced and which way he was leaning.

"What I do not want to see come out of this briefing is that the Reagan administration is going to cut Social Security. I have not said that," Speakes told reporters at one point in a long go-round on the subject that afternoon.

Headline on Tuesday: "Reagan Backs Cuts for Some Programs in Social Security."

In White House parlance, the word was "adjust," not "cut," the reasoning being that if current beneficiaries' checks were not being reduced, no cuts were being made.

Thus, in that view, the decision to penalize workers who in the future decide to retire before age 65 did not count as a cut — although it was cutting government costs.

And when there was an undeniable reduction in benefit increases now given retirees — by delaying a scheduled cost-of-living raise — the spokesman was hard pressed to maintain even a semblance of a denial.

At the heart of Speakes' problem was the president's promise of Feb. 18: "The full retirement benefits of the more than 31 million Social Security recipients will be continued along with an annual cost-of-living increase."

As the questions flew about whether Reagan was standing by that promise, the spokesman referred to the president's "social safety net" of public assistance programs intended to protect the undefined "truly needy."

He said: "What we're having to do is on the social safety net there are many programs, and we will have to make adjustments in these programs to protect the programs themselves."

Bill Plante, a CBS correspondent, harked back to his days as a war correspondent and said he thought this sounded familiar.

"We're going to have to destroy this village in order to save it," he told Speakes. "I've run into this before."

At another point, reporters tried to clarify just how much the administration thought it had to save to meet its overall budget figures.

"You're saying that you need to find $8 billion in savings in Social Security, is that what you're saying?" Speakes was asked.

"In the entire safety net," he replied.

But then another White House official, policy analyst Jim Pinkerton, said: "We're going to cut the budget, but we're not going to affect the safety net. We're going to make changes which preserve benefits for the truly needy."

Reporter, to Speakes: "Well, now, didn't you just say that you had to find $8 billion in savings in the safety net?"

Speakes: "No, you said that."

Reporter: "No, you said it."

Speakes: "I didn't say in the safety net."

When the details of the president's decision were made public, Speakes was pressed to acknowledge that Reagan was indeed cutting the program.

The delay in granting the cost-of-living increase became a "pause," as in "it's our proposal that we have a one-time pause in instituting the cost-of-living next year. That seems to minimize the impact on the elderly."

Finally, asked whether he would deny that the Social Security recipients would indeed get less in their checks than they otherwise would have, had the president not acted, he replied: "No, I don't deny it."

"You're walking a fine line. You're walking a tightrope," he said in a conversation later in the day.

"It was a question of not building apprehensions in the press and the public," the spokesman said. "I did not misrepresent anything."

Yankee town wants to keep Rebel bell

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer

Did Yankee soldiers pluck Jefferson Davis' dinner bell from his Mississippi plantation during the Civil War, pack it in a cracker barrel and haul it north to central Wisconsin?

The 85 villagers in Saxeville, Wis., named for the officer who led the town's young men into battle, aren't sure, but they want to keep the bell in their town park anyway.

Historians in Vicksburg, Miss., aren't sure either, but they want the bell. And they're prepared to send a "Confederate solder" to get it.

"We're not totally convinced it is the Davis bell, but tradition and legend usually have a smattering of truth," said Gordon Cotton, director of the Old Courthouse Museum in Vicksburg.

"And I can't imagine anyone taking a bell and hauling it all the way to Wisconsin if it did not have historic value."

Cotton said legend has it that Union soldiers looted the Davis Plantation in 1862 and hauled away the two-foot high bell — possibly to Saxeville.

Cotton acknowledged, however, that there are some discrepancies in the legend because the plaque at the base of the bell says it was taken in Corinth, in northeast Mississippi. Davis' plantation was on the Mississippi River across the state.

Leon Pantenbug, a native of Ames, Iowa, who has been in Vicksburg since Decembey, thought up the idea of bringing the bell to Vicksburg as a promotion for the museum.

"I talked with a few people, and they were most receptive down here," said Pantenburg, who said five of his ancestors fought for the North. "Someone suggested we mount a calvary raid and go and get it, and that seemed like a good idea to Cotton and me."

Both Cotton and Bertram Hayes-Davis, a descendant of Davis' and president of the Davis Family Association, sent letters to Saxeville explaining why the bell should be returned.

The letters suggested that a "Confederate soldier" would be sent to Saxeville for a transfer ceremony. Then the bell could be shipped back to Vicksburg via the Mississippi aboard the steamboat Delta Queen.

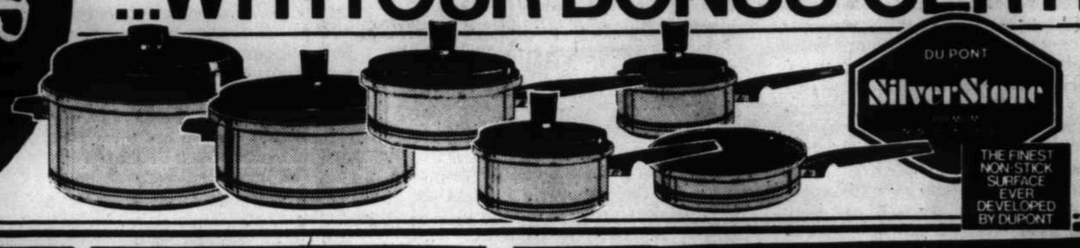

"Waxeville finally replied to our letters on March 2," Pantenburg said. "They formed a committee and decided the bell should remain in their community beause there was no proof it actually was the Davis bell."

Mrs. Vernon Jorgensen, a member of the Saxeville committee, said she could understand why the Mississippians wanted the the bell.

Neiman like his paintings

NEW YORK (AP) — A handlebar mustache hugs his thin, tanned cheeks, framing a dark-skinned cigar, sometimes lit, sometimes not.

His paint-splattered tennis shoes, toes up, rest easily on the coffee table. Long streaks of white — or is it paint? — glitter from his black head of hair, neatly combed.

Looking every bit like a LeRoy Neiman painting is LeRoy Neiman, one of the most widely distributed living American artists, and one of the most disdained by the art world. He's loved and hated for the same reason: he's a mass producer.

His brushes and pencils have captured Muhammed Ali in the boxing ring and Leonard Bernstein in the symphony hall. Louis Armstrong with his trumpet and Steve Garvey with his baseball bat.

He chronicled the Winter Olympics last year for ABC-TV and carted a sketchpad into the playgrounds of the rich and famous to study the world at play.

He thrives on commotion. At an inaugural party, at the Camp David Peace Treaty signing, on a couch amid the hubub of a Hollywood party, in a Las Vegas showgirls' dressing room.

Neiman seems to be everywhere, more like a photographer than a painter, capturing tomorrow's history. At age 53, he's still working at breakneck speed. His following is growing. But his detractors remain.

"He makes modern art for people who hate art," says New York Times art critic John Russell. Critics have called his work "cheezy" and "tacky."

Part of the reason for this dislike is the type of people Neiman paints and calls his friends — boxers, athletes, gamblers and entertainers. Another is his commercial savvy. His work appears on posters, magazine covers and every month in Playboy magazine.

You'll get no apologies from Neiman.

"Sure I'll do a poster or a magazine cover, but only if I'm interested in doing it and they use it exactly as I give it to them," he says. And he turns down $1 million a year in offers to design belt buckles, T-shirts and other bric-a-brac, he says.

Interviewed recently in one of four apartments that serve as his studio and home on Manhattan's Upper West Side, Neiman talks and talks — about his work, his critics and his friends.

Drying on an easel is Wayne Gretzky, of the Edmonton Oilers hockey club. Just a painting. A group of Canadian businessmen commissioned it.

On another wall: gamblers at a baccarat table, in dark red hue. "Baccarat Rouge," Neiman calls it. No one asked him to paint it. He just did. He'll probably sell it eventually. But he'd like to keep it around.

Other Neiman originals are stacked in drawers in his studios. One day maybe they'll fetch from $20,000 to $100,000 apiece, as have many of his other paintings. But it's getting more difficult for Neiman to let go.

"After all these years, I've never had a house to hang my paintings in so I've just kept 'em around for sixmonths orso and then sold 'em.

"Some I really regret selling."

He bought back a few as reminders of his accomplishments. But the others hang in some 40 museums, countless business offices and private homes.

"I just feel an obligation to release my paintings and sketches," he says. Not modest. But not boastful. "To keep them would be like hoarding money. Paintings should be for others' eyes. And when people love what you do, you have a special feeling all the time."

Thirty-five years of his work is on display in New York City's Hammer Gallery until Saturday. But earlier this month, the morning after opening night, Neiman was in Los Angeles. Sylvester Stallone, a favorite subject, wanted a painting for "Rocky III."

Athletes fascinate him because "they affect people in a positive way," boxers because "boxing reflects man's fight in life."

Neiman himself donned boxing gloves in his younger days. But, he confesses, "I wasn't that good or anything." Now work is his favorite play. "I don't do sports much. I'm injury-prone."

He has lived in New York with his wife, Janet, for 20 years. But his roots are in the Midwest. He grew up in St. Paul, Minn., studied at the Art Institute of Chicago and taught there for 10 years.

While in Chicago he met Hugh Hefner, then just a man with an idea. When Playboy was launched, Neiman began drawing "Femlin," the mostly undressed woman who frolics on the joke page of the magazine. It was his first national forum.

He went all over the world, hobnobing with the rich at their yacht clubs, casinos and watering holes. And he produced en masse. Sketch after sketch. Painting after painting.

Whether in watercolor, etching, pencil or oil, Neiman's subjects, almost always, are people.

"It's a nice feeling to go out in the world and look for excellence — the best in man," he says. "My subject is very valid. It's about people, and about life."

Former madam still mum on customers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — She was one of the South's most famous madams.

Her house on Clay Street attracted bankers, lawyers, politicians and college students, who always got a discount.

The business thrived for 40 years and then urban renewal forced Pauline Tabor Webster to close her doors in Bowling Green. The next year her husband died.

"Fate dealt me two bad blows, honey, but I survived," she said. She sold her farm for $160,000 and auctioned many of her priceless antiques for $100,000. The others are neatly displayed at her new home just outside San Antonio, Texas.

"I've been down here since the first of the year, leading a quet life. My son, who retired from the Army, is close by and I'm a happy woman. Got a few aches and pains. They don't slow me down, honey."

Mrs. Webster, 76, alternates between a walker and a wheelchair and still drives a car to the malls or boekstores.

"I've been looking for my book. Found one man who had a paperback edition of my autobiography but he wanted $15 for it. That's inflation, honey."

She has one copy of the red-velvet hardback version of "Pauline's," which sold for $9.95 and included a gold-tasseled bookmark and lock and key.

"I turned down $50 for it. If you've got the book, save it cause it's going up in value. There aren't many women like me around any more."

She's never reluctant to discuss her past but carefully avoids mentioning names of her former customers. "A lot of those men were pretty prominent in their day," she said.

During the Great Depression, she sold cosmetics and silk hosiery but couldn't pay the bills and decided to try a different line of work.

She went to Clarksville, Tenn., learned the business from a madam there and returned to Bowling Green to open her house. Four weeks later, she had banked $3,000 after expenses.

A 14-foot statue of Francisco "Pancho" Villa, the famed Mexican revolutionary, rides across the international bridge between El Paso and Cuidad Juarez, Mexico. The statue is a gift from Mexico to the state of Arizona. It will be placed in a Tucson park. Hundreds of people turned out Wednesday morning for the exchange of the statue from Mexican to American hands.

NATO pledges to help U.S.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO defense ministers gave the United States a vote of confidence by honoring a 1978 Carter administration request for a three percent annual increase in defense spending and a new Reagan administration plea for help in defending Western interests in the Middle East.

A communique released at the end of the two-day session Wednesday said the ministers had decided to honor the spending pledge because of "an unrelenting buildup of Soviet military strength across the spectrum."

Britain, West Germany, and some of the smaller of the 14 countries in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization had criticized the three percent goal as a burden in view of the recession sweeping Western Europe.

U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said the alliance ministers had also agreed to help the United States develop a Middle East-targeted Rapid Deployment Force.

NATO's 1949 charter forbids use of its allied command structure for activities outside Western Europe. But Weinberger noted the individual governments could offer assistance to the force in areas such as facilities, overflights and the use of airfields.

"I have no doubt whatever that the countries whose vital interests would be affected by denial of access to the oil fields would certainly want to provide the facilities necessary to assist repulsing such an invasion," Weinberger said.

'Pancho' Villa silently visits El Paso

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Mexican revolutionary Francisco "Pancho" Villa silently rode his horse into El Paso Wednesday, bound for Tucson, Ariz.

As traffic backed up on the international bridges between El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, a flatbed truck carried a 14-foot bronze statute of Villa into the United States, the country where Villa wreaked havoc more than 65 years ago.

The $260,000 statute, the work of Mexican sculptor Julian Martinez, is a gift from Mexico to the state of Arizona. It is destined to be the centerpiece of a park in Tucson dedicated to Villa.

Villa was born a peon 103 years ago in San Juan del Rio, Durango. He became a bandit and then a revolutionary as his troops helped Francisco Madero overthrow Mexican dictator Porfirio Diaz in the Revolution of 1910.

Sentiment in the United States turned against Villa during the ensuing struggles for power among the rebel leaders. Then in 1916, his troops killed 15 American mining company employees in Mexico and then raided Columbus, N.M.

Those actions led President Woodrow Wilson to order Brig. Gen John Pershing and an expeditionary force to hunt down Villa, but the Mexican revolutionary evaded capture. Villa was gunned down in 1923.

Three years later, Villa's body was desecrated and his head was stolen and never recovered.

Ironically, the statute of Villa also lost its head. After it left the Mexico City foundry, the head was knocked off while passing under a bridge and had to be rewelded.

After his arrival in Juarez, it was discovered that Villa's horse had come up lame — a fissure had developed in one of it's legs. The fissure was repaired in Juarez before Villa continued his journey.

Villa received a farewell party on the bridge Wednesday as Mexican officials turned him over to representatives of Texas and Arizona. Mariachi bands played and crowds turned out to see the revolutionary off.

"Everybody stopped to see the statue," said Jon Garrido, director of the El Paso Department of Economic Development. Garrido was asked by Gov. Bill Clements to oversee the transfer and to make sure Villa got to Tucson in one piece.

Garrido said some roundabout routes would be used during the journey because of the statue's height.

"There's one bridge on Interstate 10 that is just too low," Garrido said. "So, we're going to take him around through some little towns in Arizona and then on to Tucson."

The statue was expected to arrive in Tucson on Thursday, he said.

For the short trip across the western tip of Texas, Villa was accompanied by three state Department of Public Safety squad cars as El Paso city police halted traffic for the passage.

The Texas officials turned the statute over to New Mexico state trooper in Anthony, which lies along the Texas-New Mexico border. Garrido said the statue would have police escorts for the entire trip.

Striking doctors trickle back to work in Kenya

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Striking government doctors, who have paralyzed medical service in hospitals across the country for the past week, began trickling back to work today after the government said they would not be arrested.

Hundreds of doctors in state-run hospitals, health centers and clinics walked out on strike last Thursday demanding higher salaries and better terms of service.

Local newspapers reported that several people died at hospitals across the country for lack of medical attention.

South African minister, Haig meet today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is attaching urgent priority to settling the issue of South African control over the mostly-black territory of Namibia, officials say.

That view was certain to be expressed today during a meeting between Secretary of State Alexander M. Jr. and South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha, the officials said.

Botha's visit here was preceded by intense U.S. diplomatic efforts to get the Namibia negotiations back on track following January talks in Geneva that ended when the South African delegation walked out.

Before today's meeting, U.S. officials said privately that Haig would inform Botha that the Reagan administration attaches urgent priority to bringing about an internationally-accepted settlement in the mineral-rich territory.

As officials here see it, South African control over the area has caused general instability throughout the Southern African region and contributed to the continuing presence of some 20,000 Cuban troops in Angola, Namibia's northern neighbor.

The Reagan administration's interest in promoting a settlement is based on the prospect that an end to South African control in Namibia would lead to the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Marxist Angola.

One of Cuba's announced reasons for maintaining the troops is to protect Angola against South African military attacks on SWAPO bases there. Angolan officials have said the troops will no longer be needed once a Namibia settlement is achieved.

South Africa has refused to go along with a United Nations settlement plan because of alleged U.N. sympathies for the South-West Africa People's Organization, Namibia's main black nationalist guerrilla group.

Since 1977, the United States and four NATO allies have been acting as intermediaries in the conflict, hoping to work out a settlement that would satisfy black African aspirations and ease South African fears that an independent Namibia would threaten its security.

U.S. officials said they were encouraged by a statement Monday by South African Prime Minister P.W. Botha that South Africa would be able to "live with" a SWAPO government provided it came to power through constitutional means.

Chester Crocker, the assistant secretary-designate for African affairs, visited a dozen countries in Africa and Europe last month to explore ways of breaking the Namibia impasse.

In addition, Haig met in Rome 11 days ago with the foreign ministers of the four NATO countries involved in the search for a settlement.

The ministers issued a statement calling for ways to strengthen the existing United Nations plan by adding to it "measures, including constitutional arrangements, with the aim of enhancing prospects."

U.S. officials believe South Africa may go along with a Namibia independence plan if there are prior assurances that anti-SWAPO forces will have a fair chance once the territory elects its own government.

Last month, France and Great Britain joined the United States in vetoing a black African-supported resolution in the United Nations to impose mandatory economic sanctions against South Africa.

Hispanics opposed to program

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Hispanics oppose President Ronald Reagan's proposed "guest worker programs" and want to discuss their objections with Mexico President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Tony Bonilla, national executive director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said Hispanics have officially requested a meeting with Lopez Portillo prior to the Mexican president's meeting with Reagan next month.

Bonilla made the announcement Wednesday on his return from a meeting of the U.S. Hispanic-Mexico Commission in Mexico City.

Bonilla is a member of the commission set up by Portillo last year to address issues of common interest between Hispanics and Mexicans.

Ten U.S. Hispanic groups are represented on the commisson and Portillo appointed the Mexican secretary of labor, director of population, director of work studies and other Mexican officials to represent Mexico.

"The LULAC position was made clear to the commission; that we oppose the guest worker program. The position of Mexico was that it was approached by the Reagan Administration, but has not made the final decision on adopting such a program and is studying various alternatives," Bonilla said at the Houston airport.

He said the Hispanic representatives requested to meet with Portillo prior to the Mexican president's scheduled June 8-9 meeting with Reagan, "so we can elaborate on our reasons for opposing the guest worker program."

He said the Hispanic representatives hoped to hear within a week to 10 days whether Lopez Portillo would agree to the meeting.

Introducing Southwestern Bell's new

CUSTOMER GUIDE

Take a close look at the front of your new telephone directory. This year it features a new Customer Guide section chock-full of information to help you get the most from your telephone service.

In the past, the directory Call Guide Pages served as a helpful calling reference, offering information from in-state Long Distance rates to local dialing instructions. But the new Customer Guide offers more — more information, more money-saving value, more practical help for your telephone needs.

For example, there is a section featuring money saving tips that can advise you about deposits, payment plans and how to save money when making calls.

The Customer Guide has helpful information on doing business with the phone company, too, like local bill payment locations and an outline of your rights and responsibilities as a consumer.

Best of all, the new guide features a wide variety of money-saving telephone tips, from ways to save on Long Distance to reducing installation costs by shopping at a nearby PhoneCenter Store.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, May 15, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Wonderful British actor James Mason celebrates this birthday with you. Concentrate on improving your relations with others and this will be a year of great promise. Nip trouble in the bud by making intelligent concessions. Employers would be wise to do something to make their employees happier. Greater financial success depends on everyone pulling together as a team. Go slow where a new romance is concerned. Your warmhearted nature could lead you to mistake infatuation for love. Generous and idealistic, you are happiest when working for the benefit of mankind. Avoid giving so much time to strangers that you short-change your family.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Postpone budget decisions until next week. Business will enjoy more favorable influences then. Romance is delightful for those who are willing to make a commitment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Catch up on phone calls and routine tasks. Family activities hold special appeal now. Signal your approval to mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Unexpected schedule changes could be part of the picture. Do not let them throw you for a loop! A happy weekend restores your sense of humor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Business negotiations can be rewarding. Be careful not to neglect routine duties. Discuss new idea with a few close friends before presenting it to influential associate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The element of surprise is the key to success today. Keep your own counsel. Stubbornness could get in the way of progress. Plan to entertain at home this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If friends are arriving, get your home in order. Keep your social plans flexible. Choose your confidants with great care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If others become emotional about a subject, it may be time to back off for a while. Resume the discussion later, when tempers have cooled. Follow your intuition.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go all out to be charming and you will get your way. Finances undergo a change for the better. Be optimistic when looking to the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can combine business with pleasure as the weekend draws near. Extra cash may come your way. Romance enjoys favorable influences. Today will be a day of contrasts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Domestic duties may infringe on business hours. Be sure boss understands if an emergency occurs. Put savings where you will get the greatest return. Romance is part of today's plan.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20—Feb. 18): This pleasant, productive day lets you wind up the work week on a happy note. Others are full of vitality and inspire you to match their fast pace.

PISCES (Feb. 19—March 20): A better day for mental pursuits than physical endeavors. You may be feeling a bit restless now. Concentrate on work today so that you can spend a carefree weekend.

Bridge administrators do not have to be great bridge players. But there are a number of exceptions. One is Tommy Sanders of Nashville, Tenn., recently elected as a member of the Board of Directors of the American Contract Bridge League. Not only is he an expert player who will captain the U.S. team in this year's world championship, but his wife, Carol, will be a member of the U.S. Women's Team.

At the recent North American Spring Championships, Sanders became declarer at a four spade contract on the auction shown, during the quarter finals of the Vanderbilt Team Championship. In view of their perfectly balanced distributions, North might have forgone the use of Stayman in the hope of finding a 4-4 major fit and South might have bid three no trump at his third turn. Note that a no trump game is easy from the South seat unless West is inspired enough to lead a diamond—which would be our fourth choice.

A diamond lead would also scuttle four spades, but West chose to lead a club. East won the ace and shifted to the king of diamonds. Declarer ducked one round, then won the diamond continuation with the ace. His dim hopes of bringing in the contract improved slightly when he cashed the ace-king of trumps and felled West's queen. The scene was set for an end play.

Declarer drew a third round of trumps, cashed the king-queen of clubs and ace-king of hearts, and now had two routes to success. He could lead a diamond, which would leave East on play with nothing but diamonds. On the forced return of that suit, declarer would ruff in one hand while sluffing his losing heart from the other.

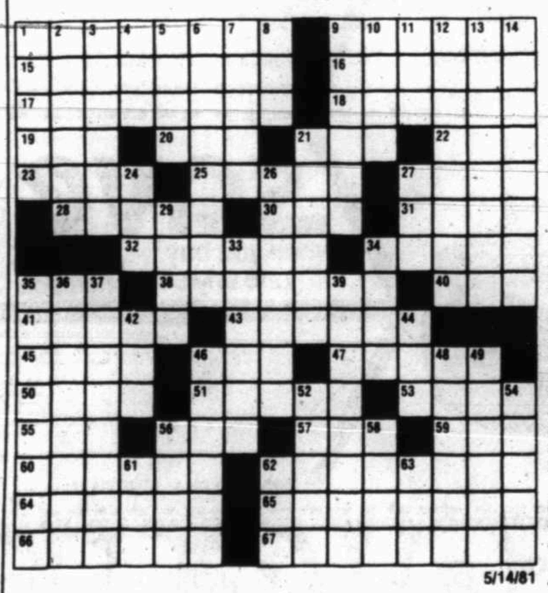

Sanders chose an equally successful method. He led another heart, forcing West to win. Now West was left with nothing but hearts and clubs, and whichever suit he led would permit declarer to ruff in one hand and discard his losing diamond from the other.

Team brings home bacon

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Although they're not eligible for the NFL or NBA drafts and never show their prowess under the lights at Kyle Field, the members of one Texas A&M University interscholastic team has just brought home the bacon — the 1980 national Meat Judging championship.

" When we go to different parts of the country to compete, we sometimes tell people we are there to play softball or something, " said Homer Recio, captain of the 1980 team. "They think we're crazy when we say meat judging and that we stay in a cooler all day."

With a large number of returning team members, the 1981 Aggie Meat Judging team expects to do well in competition that has just begun and ends next spring.

The Aggies evaluate meat for USDA grades, quality as well as yield. Contests begin in the early morning hours inside a chilly meat locker and end in the afternoon with written evaluations.

Government busy harvesting estimates

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's harvest prediction season for the government.

The Agriculture Department recently releases its first major crop forecast of the year, with a record 1981 winter wheat crop expected.

The report, prepared by Crop Reporting Board officials behind locked and guarded doors, also included revised production estimates for oranges and a few other crops.

Winter wheat accounts for about three-fourths of total wheat produced in the United States. It is planted in the fall and is harvested the following year, beginning about now in some of the early-planted Southern areas.

The estimate was the first since the department made its initial winter wheat forecast last Dec. 23. At that time the Crop Reporting Board said production could reach 1.98 billion bushels, exceeding the previous record of 1.89 billion harvested in 1980.

Counting spring-planted wheat, last year's total wheat crop was a record of 2.37 billion bushels, the only major grain crop to do well in 1980. Yields of corn and soybeans were reduced sharply by drought and hot weather.

Farmers planted a record 63.9 million acres to winter wheat last fall, 11 percent more than they planted for the 1980 crop. The previous record was 61.2 million acres planted in the fall of 1948.

One of the big questions answered in part by the May report is how the crop fared during the winter. Drought has prevailed in some areas, notably in the Great Plains, where most acreage is located.

The remainder of the annual U.S. wheat crop is planted in the spring for harvest later the same year. It includes durum wheat, which is favored for spaghetti and other pasta, and other spring wheat grown mostly in the North, including North Dakota, the biggest producer of both kinds.

In a survey earlier this year, durum wheat producers indicated they also would boost planting sharply from 1980, with the indicated acreage up 11 percent. But producers of other spring wheat said they planned to cut this year's acreage by 3 percent.

The Crop Reporting Board from now through next November will issue new estimates almost every month on the major U.S. farm crops. Another revised estimate of the winter wheat crop will be issued on June 10.

However, because of their planting schedules, the first estimate of spring wheat — which will provide the first all-wheat total — will not be ready until July 10. That report also will include the department's first field estimate of 1981 corn production.

Committee can't comply with spending limits

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee is giving up its attempt to draft a 1981 farm bill within strict spending constraints, opting instead for farm price supports that possibly will be billions of dollars over budget.

"We're dealing right at the moment with a bill that has to be reconsidered," said Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., a member of the House leadership. "It doesn't comply with any budget at all."

But in the Senate, where the same struggle between reduced spending and higher price supports has been raging, the Agriculture Committee pared some $1 billion Wednesday from farm support programs passed just two weeks ago.

The cutbacks, including the major reduction in dairy price supports that President Reagan sought, brings that version of the four-year farm bill "reasonably close" to the 1982 spending targets Congress will adopt, officials say.

"There are things about this bill the administration will object to," Deputy Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng said. "It's not a victory, but on the other hand it certainly isn't a loss."

The bill denies the administration the nearly unrestricted discretion that it had sought in setting price supports.

The House committee's bill calls for moderate increases next year in price support loans for most commodities, but they would be escalated yearly based on increased production costs.

It also provides for direct government payments to farmers when the average market price for a commodity is lower than a set target price. Reagan has opposed both the target prices and annual adjustments to support prices.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, the committee chairman, and others said Wednesday that the higher price supports being approved will have to be reduced in coming weeks to meet spending targets.

"The danger in that," warned Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., "is that you may provide some false hopes to farmers that in a few weeks will have to be turned around."

In the Senate, after initially coming up with a 1981 farm bill that exceeded next year's spending targets by $1.2 billion, the committee's Republican majority, led by Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, began work on a plan that would provide some increased price support but with limited government expense.

"This committee has already been held up to ridicule by everyone in the country for simply breaking the bank," Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said. "We've got a bill here that might sell."

But Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., accused his colleagues of disregarding the impact of their decisions on farmers' income.

"Net farm income and the value of these commodities has really been ignored in the hustle-bustle about meeting the budget," Melcher said.

William Lesher, the Agriculture Department's economics chief, said farm income under the committee bill will be "roughly the same" as it would have been under the administration's proposal calling for broad price support discretion.

The reduction in dairy supports, which accounted for nearly half the budget overrun, was the key to the committee's completion of work on the bill.

The panel put minimum support levels for the next four years at 70 percent of parity, the same level Reagan wanted them set at. Supports could rise to 75 percent if government dairy stocks decline substantially.

Parity is the price a commodity must bring to give producers the same buying power they had in 1910-1914.

On other commodities, the committee eliminated annual adjustments in support prices, which the administration strongly opposed, and provided only a modest increase in supports from this year to next.

Fertilizer use sets record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Generally favorable weather in March resulted in record fertilizer use, according to The Fertilizer Institute.

The institute, an industry organization, says domestic "disappearance" of fertilizer totaled 8.5 million tons, an increase of 44 percent from a year earlier.

As a result, total domestic use since last July 1 — the first nine months of the fertilizer marketing year — was up 5 percent from the same period in 1979-80, said Edwin H. Wheeler, institute president.

Study says farmers pay record real estate taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study shows that farmers paid a record $3.23 billion in real estate taxes in 1979. That was 7 percent more than the previous high set in 1977.

The study was published by the Agriculture Department' Economics and Statistics Service.

Nationally, farm real estate tax collections were one-third larger than in 1971, double what they were in 1966 and triple the amount paid in 1959.

A GREAT BALLPLAYER CAN MAKE IT TO THE HALL OF FAME. NEWSPAPERS CAN MAKE HIM A LEGEND.

© 1981 The Hearst Corporation

Rookie of the Year—1951. Most Valuable Player—1954 and 1965. Most home runs for the year—not once, twice or even three times. But four times. And finally, the number three all-time home run hitter.

Accomplishments like these have gotten Willie Mays into baseball's Hall of Fame.

But newspapers had a lot to do with getting him into America's hearts and minds.

Baseball star, Willie Mays, tries to get a peek at an article about himself. Taken from one of our current TV commercials.

Newspapers nicknamed him the "say hey kid," from his favorite expression. Remember reading about the time he played so hard in the heat, he passed out at Crosley Field? And how about the pictures of him making spectacular catches over his shoulder?

We at Hearst are proud to have had a small part in spreading Willie's fame.

We're in the newspaper business. We publish 13 of them, coast to coast. From the Midland Reporter Telegram to Albany's Times Union and The Knickerbocker News.

But Hearst is a total communications company. We also publish 20 magazines like Good Housekeeping and Cosmopolitan. And we distribute them in 30 countries, in 8 languages.

We publish countless books. Best sellers from Arbor House like "Come Pour the Wine" and from William Morrow like "Rage of Angels." And "The Thorn Birds" and "Ashes in the Wind" from Avon.

We operate 3 television stations and 7 radio stations in major markets like Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Milwaukee. We're even launching cable TV networks.

King Features, home of "Popeye" and "Blondie," is Hearst too. And that's not to mention other industries we're involved in. Like forest products, ranching and real estate.

But basically, if you can read it, watch it or hear it, chances are Hearst is involved in it. We inform you, entertain you, challenge you.

And every day our newspapers bring you the most vocal sports coverage. On a printed page.

Cubs' McClain tames Drillers with five-hitter

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

There's an old baseball homily that warns "those walks will kill you." Joe McClain verified it for himself Wednesday night at Cubs Stadium.

Walks didn't exactly kill the righthander from Johnson City, Tenn., but they ruined his shutout.

Slump-busting Tom Grant and the rest of the Cubs furnished enough stickwork, 11 hits, coupled with seven Tulsa free tickets to first, to propel Midland to a satisfying 8-3 win over the Drillers to give the Bruins a 2-1 lead going into tonight's 7 p.m. fourth game of the five-game Texaw League series.

MCCLAIN had a 6-0 three-hit shutout perking as he entered the seventh when his control deserted him and for a while it looked like he'd be lucky to finish.

Two walks and a single loaded the bases and then runs scored on Don Scott's grounder to second and Mike Jirschele's two run bounder up the middle before McClain settled down to get the next two batters on infield grounders.

"I just got cold," McClain, now 3-3 was to explain. "We had a long fifth inning in the dugout and I just stiffened up. I lost three or four that inning, which is exactly what I didn't want to do.

"With a big lead like that, you want to make them hit the ball, not walk them."

For six innings, McClain had good control with a slider mixed in with his fastball and an occasional change up and except for the brief letdown in the seventh, his five-hitter was about as close to perfection personified as you'll find on a windy Wednesday in Cubs Stadium, this side of Fernando Valenzuela. In completing his fourth game of the season, Joe, who lost 1980 with a chronic finger blister, didn't allow a runner beyond first base in eight of nine innings.

MEANWHILE, the Cubs erupted for four runs in a six-hit second against Tulsa starter Tony Fossas, 1-4, to take command and never really relinquished their grip on the game.

It didn't exactly start out as a robust inning. Craig Kornfeld bounced a single through the left side, Randy LaVigne beat out a nubber down the third base line and Mel Hall outlegged a bunt to set the table. Javier Fierro then plated one run with a fly, Grant, Mike Diaz and Jack Upton then singled home th others. There might have been more if Hall hadn't bee caught between second and third on Grant's single to right.

In the fifth, Grant went to left for a homer that rode the win after Fierro opened the inning with his first hit since returnin to Midland from Iowa.

In the seventh, the Cubs answered Tulsa's three-run chal lenge with two runs. Diaz singled, Upton doubled the run in an Carmello Martinez walked. That brought in lefthander Ron Car ney in relief of Dave Crutcher. He gave up a walk to Mike Shepston and a sacrifice fly to LaVigne.

GRANT'S HOMER was his ninth of the season, just a bit more than a month old, and that puts him within one of his 1980 total o 10. It also shook that "2-for-13 slump", giving him five hit in his last nine trips, raising his average, which had nosedived to .421 to .429.

"Slump? It wasn't so much that I wasn't hitting as it was tha they were making good pitches to me," Grant said.

As for the homers, it's something he prefers to just le happen. "I didn't have any goals going into the season Homers are something I don't like to think about."

However, once they happen, he remembers. Of the six he has hit here, the lefthander has driven two over the left field fence, going with the pitch, two down the right field line, one to right-center and one to center.

As for the possibility of a call to Iowa, Tom thinks not. "I hac a good year here last year and they knew what I could do when they put me here this spring, so I don't expect to be called up. I have some things to improve on."

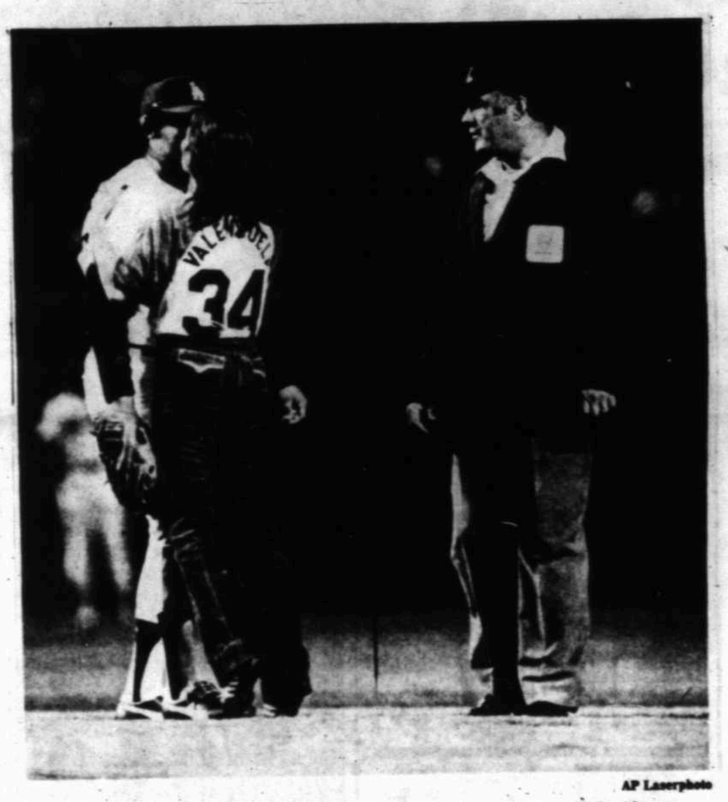

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Lefthander Craig Lefferts, 3-3, will be going for Manager Roy Hartsfield tonight...Craig pitched a 10-0 shutout in his last Cubs Stadium start...McClain received errorless support with Carmello Martinez making two on-the-run barehanded scoops and throws to nip runners on successive plays in the third, Upton committed larceny on Tracy Cowger in the second while Fierro in the fifth and Grant in the ninth made circle worthy plays....Tulsa first baseman Pete O'Brien did what amounted to a cartwheel in handling Grant's

Midland righthander Joe McClain puts a lot into his slider. Wednseday he used 131 pitches in beating Tulsa, 8-3, on five hitter.

Valenzuela reaches for record as Freddy Fever soars

AP Laserphoto

This is the kind of thing you've got to put up with if you are a 7-0 rookie and pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers. Is that envy in umpire Paul Pryor's look as Norma Ecnevarra interrupts play to plant a kiss on Fernando Valenzuela's mouth.

By TOM HARRIGAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It sounds like a Hollywood script, the story of the meteoric rise to superstardom of a poor young Mexican who can throw a strange screwball that's likely to put him in baseball's history books.

The stage is set for Thursday night when fabulous Fernando Valenzuela, the bull-chested rookie pitcher for the Los Angeles Dodgers, attempts to tie a major league record for eight consecutive victories at the start of the season.

The baseball world has gone bonkers over the 20-year-old newcomer they call El Toro, Mr. Zero, El Incredible and the Titan del Pitcheo.

The feats of Fernando, which dominate conversation in his native Mexico and in Southern California, is a crash course in Spanish superlatives.

A "FABULOUS Fernando Fan Club" sprang up this week. The Dodgers have ordered 35,000 Valenzuela bumper stickers, 15,000 Valenzuela pennants and 10,000 Fernando dolls.

"It is not true that when you wind the doll up it pitches shutouts," one sportswriter reported.

An article about Valenzuela's home village in one Mexican newspaper was headlined, "Titan del Pitcheo," the Titan of Pitching.

A newspaper contest to give Valenzuela a nickname came up with "El Toro." Dodger press releases have called him "Senor Cero," or Mr. Zero. Some broadcasters refer to him as "El Incredible."

Television crews and newspaper reporters have bounced over bumpy dirt roads to Valenzuela's home village of Etchohuaquilla, Sonora, Mexico, making pictures of his family of 17 who live in a four-room house with dirt-rock floors in the bedrooms.

PROUDEST of all the area's Mexican-Americans.

A young woman with Valenzuela's name and number 34 on her sweatshirt got past security guards to reach the mound during Fernando's last home appearance and planted a hard kiss before running off.

"Everyone's kissing him for what he's doing," said another admirer, Leticia Parejo, 20, of Los Angeles. "It's also a good thing for the Mexican-American people, I think. We need someone up there."

Tillie Castaneda, 56, of Pasadena, said she hopes the young pitcher's success helps produce greater opportunities and acceptance of Mexican-Americans.

"That's what we pray for — that our people DO something," she said.

In a game with all reserved seats sold out nine days ago, Valenzuela faces Montreal Thursday night on his triumphant return home from a long road trip. The Dodgers were making arrangements to bring his parents to Los Angeles to view the game.

A victory Thursday night would tie the major league record of eight consecutive victories in starting roles at the opening of a season, set in 1945 by the Boston Red Sox' Dave Ferris.

Still officially a rookie since he was a Dodger only three weeks in 1980, Valenzuela's record so far this season is 7-0. He has pitched six complete games, five shutouts and has an unheard-of earned run average of 0.29 per game. In other words, in the games he has pitched so far this season, only .29 runs per nine-inning game have been scored off his pitching. The major league record ERA of 1.00 for a season was set by Dutch Leonard of the Boston Red Sox in 1914.

VALENZUELA, a left-hander who began playing in Mexican semi-pro baseball at age 12, has been befuddling National League batters with a mixture of above-average fastballs, wrist-twist screwballs and excellent control. The screwball looks like a fastball until it drops left around home plate — the opposite of a lefty's curveball.

Valenzuela, who can't speak English but smiles a lot, has a strange pitching technique. He says he's unaware of it, but at the height of his windup, he looks away from the plate, seeming to train his eyes on the peak of his cap.

"We think he has notes written up there," said Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda."

Catcher Mike Scoscia, Valenzuela's regular receiver, says, "I have heard him use three English words. "They are food, beer and light beer."

"I speak a little Spanish, but I haven't had to go to the mound," Scoscia added. "If I do, I'll just say, 'Food, beer and light beer.'

Despite the language barrier, when the Dodgers go on the road they send Valenzuela ahead to hold news conferences, through an interpreter. He's good box office.

LAST FRIDAY night, he drew almost 40,000 people to Shea Stadium in New York, where ordinarily the Mets might have expected about 15,000.

Valenzuela was discovered by Los Angeles scout Mike Brito in 1978 while he was pitching for Vera Cruz of the Mexican League at age 17. The Dodgers purchased the youht's contract for a reported $120,000, outbidding the New York Yankees.

Valenzuela was offered a multi-year contract with the Dodgers this year. But his agent Antonio DeMarco said it was decided to stay with the one-year contract only slightly bigger than the major league minimum of $30,000.

Current baseball rules bind him to the Dodgers for six seasons. But in this day when $1 million-a-year superstar salaries are proliferating teams try to keep even their rookie salaries equitable.

"Next year's contract will bring him every dollar he deserves," DeMarco said.

Moses' needle costly

Celtics only one away from title

By ALEX SACHARE

HOUSTON (AP) — A needle from Houston center Moses Malone has injected new life into the Boston Celtics, shaking them from their lethargy and sparking them to within one victory of the National Basketball Association championship.

And tonight, in Game 6 of the best-of-seven playoff finals which they lead 3-2, the Celtics will try to wrap up their 14th NBA title and end the Rockets' hopes of becoming the first team with a losing record in the regular season to wear an NBA crown.

Malone's brash comments after Houston's 91-86 victory in Game 4 Sunday, that the Celtics were not all that good and that he could take four guys off the streets of his hometown of Petersburg, Va. and beat Boston, have become the cause celebre of this championship series, adding zest to what had been a rather dull playoff.

"WHAT MALONE said got our blood boiling," declared Rick Robey, the Celtics' reserve center, after Boston got its running game untracked for the first time in this series and romped to a 109-80 victory Tuesday night in Boston Garden.

"None of us appreciated his comments," added rookie Kevin McHale of the Celtics. "I think he was just blowing smoke because they had won their second game Sunday. If we win the championship, I don't think he'll have much to say. We'll see him Thursday."

Malone, meanwhile, stood by his words Wednesday and even threw more fuel into the fire.

"I spoke from my heart and I still believe it: Boston is not that good," he declared. "Philadelphia should have beaten them (in the Eastern Conference finals, when Boston rallied from a 3-1 deficit to win).

"I'VE GOT a lot of pride. I was raised in the ghetto and I grew up believing you should say what you believe. I don't mean this to be disrespectful of anyone who plays for Boston, but I just don't think they are that good.

"It doesn't make any difference if I get Boston riled up. I'm a proud man and I say what I feel. If we play like I know we can play, we will beat them. If they beat us, it will be because we just aren't working."

As for tonight's game, Malone predicted, "They aren't going to drink champagne. They'll be drinking Gatorade to try to get their strength back."

When it was suggested to some of the other Houston players that Malone's sounding off might have been akin to waving a red flag in front of a bull, forward Robert Reid responded, "I've never seen a bull win a bullfight yet. I'm pretty sure it fired them up, but if that's what Moses says we back him up. Whatever he says goes."

"That's right," agreed guard Allen Leavell. "He's the biggest and baddest man on the floor. Whatever he says goes."

THE ROCKETS will need Malone at his biggest, baddest best tonight if they hope to send the series back to Boston for a seventh game on Sunday.

Malone was contained to 20 points and 11 rebounds the last time out and Houston needs more from him than that, because a dominating Malone is vital to the Rockets' slow-paced game.

Boston, meanwhile, has no intention of getting into a war of words.

"We haven't talked about anybody since the start of the season," said forward Larry Bird, "and we're not about to start now. We just want to play basketball and end this season with a championship."

Chap women third in golf

Fat Man's hopes ride skinny horse

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Fat Man is in town with his skinny horse.

The Fat Man is Johnny Campo, trainer of Kentucky Derby winner Pleasant Colony, who is at Pimlico for Saturday's 106th Preakness Stakes.

While the Derby May 2 drew 21 starters, Pleasant Colony's presence wasn't expected to reduce the Preakness field considerably. As many as 15 may be entered this morning for the 13-16 mile second leg of the Triple Crown.

They include Woodchopper, Partez and Classic Go Go, the 2-3-4 finishers in the Derby. Other possibilities were Pass the Tab, Flying Nashua, Bold Ego, Double Sonic, Top Avenger, Bare Knuckles, Thirty Eight Paces, Highland Blade, A Run, Paristo and Escambia Bay.

Pleasant Colony, a Virginia-bred owned by Buckland Farm, is an unlikely looking champion, appearing gaunt compared to his rivals on the Pimlico grounds.

The colt has a red mark on his left flank, reportedly from knocking over some chemicals in his stall, and has several hairless spots on his right flank, apparently results of a virus suffered this winter in Florida.

The usually loqacious Campo won't talk much about the marks on the colt, saying they happened before the took over the horse March 16.

"He's just losing some hair,just like you and me lose hair when we get older" said Campo,a 5-foot-7, 250-pounder taking off his cap to show a balding pate.

Common use of force in football comes as surprise

By BOB OATES
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

During the Frank Kush trial in Arizona this spring, Colorado football coach Chuck Fairbanks and other college coaches testified that the use of physical force against players is commonplace.

Their testimony was particularly surprising to those who were learning that Fairbanks and numerous other coaches apparently approved of Kush's conduct throughout his years as the hard-bitten, free-swinging coach at Arizona State.

Kush admitted at the trial of a $2.2-million damage suit brought against him by punter-defensive back Kevin Rutledge that he had punched and kicked players, grabbed them by their face masks and slapped their helmets.

But a jury found in Kush's favor, 5-3, in both phases of the case, ruling that he did not punch Rutledge during a 1978 game and that he did not interfere with Rutledge's scholarship contract by harassing him into quitting the team.

"Sometimes you have to spank them," Fairbanks testified. "I have slapped a helmet. I have grabbed a face mask. I might have even used a clipboard once. But just because you strike them doesn't mean you...want to hurt them. You're just trying to discipline them. You physically discipline a player to either motivate him or get his attention."

IS THIS a majority view in 1980s football? There is some evidence that it is.

After Kush's trial, a reporter talked to football people in all sections of the country and several of them agreed that helmet-slapping and face mask-grabbing happen in many football practices, much as physical force of some kind is used once in awhile almost everywhere.

But the instances are few at most universities and the practice is diminishing.

Of The other football players interviewed, many cited the Kush trial testimony of a hockey coach — Herb Brooks of the gold-medal winning United States Olympic team — and said his views typify those of most footbhall coaches.

Brooks, supporting Kush, testified that "discipline is the most important thing on any team. In these sports (hockey and football) you're going to be faced with immense contact in game situations, and you better get used to it."

In other words, in a physical game, those in charge must coach physically. That seems to be a rather general view in football and hockev

Brooks: "You're trying to find out 'How bad does he want to play?' Is he going to take that next step? Or is he going to fold under pressure?"

"Herb Brooks summed it up for all of us. To get a successful football team you've got to apply a certain amount of physical and mental pressure. It's just unfortunate that some of the finest coaches we've had — Vince Lombardi, Woody Hayes and yes, Frank Kush — come unglued once in awhile. But the fact is that a physical approach (by the coach) helps you prepare as a player. I doubt if there's a coach in the country who hasn't put his hands on a player at some time or other. I've done some of it myself. What you're doing, basically, is giving a young athlete a better chance to succeed," a Big 10 coach said.

The Kush case has raised several questions:

—In 1980s football, how widespread are physical attacks by coaches on players?

—How much physical force by football coaches (if any) is acceptable?

—Now that Kush has been cleared by an Arizona jury — one of whose members said afterward, "I realize football is a violent game (and) a football player should be able to take that rough treatment from his coach or whoever" — will there be an increase in coaching violence?

Answering the last question, most of the players, coaches and other football people interviewed for this story replied in the negative. Virtually all predicted a continuance of what they called a trend toward diminishing use of force.

Said Vince Gibson, coach of Tulane: "When I was a young coach 20 years ago in the old Bear Bryant era, it was customary to grab them and shake them (football players), but we've all had to change. The players themselves have changed so much from the yes-sir-no-sir days. They're so independent now. When you told your boy in the old days to take out the garbage, he said, 'yes sir.' When you tell him today, he says, 'Why?' "

A PLAYER, All-Pro safety Nolan Cromwell of the Los Angeles Rams, says that players are probably different now but suggests quietly that force is still present on the college level and on most pro clubs.

In four seasons at Kansas, Cromwell said, he wasn't struck, but, "I'm sure helmet hitting happens almost everywhere."

At Tulane, the football program will be spotlighted this season because one of Gibson's assistants, Bill Maskill, was on Kush's staff in 1979 and was a co-defendant in the Rutledge suit with Kush.

Kush was fired Oct. 13, 1979, significantly, not for hitting Rutledge but on grounds of assorted cover-up activities afterward. Kush is now in Canada coaching the Hamilton Tiger Cats.

Gibson and Maskill "haven't even talked over" their 1981 Tulane plans for physically handling players, Gibson said.

"We haven't had to," Gibson said. "There just isn't much of that anymore, and I think one reason is integration. Twenty years ago when most players were white, they were used to being hit. They were hit by their daddies at home, by their teachers at school, and by their coaches on the playing field. They expected to get hit whenever they didn't shape up. But black kids don't expect it. They aren't used to it. and it isn't very smart to hit a white guy if you don't hit a black guy."

Gibson sees one other explanation for the steady trend toward less physical abuse.

"When I started as a coach, most kids went out for three or four sports," he said. "They weren't as motivated for football, and frankly, I used to be one of those grabbers and shakers myself. But every young athlete is a specialist today. Even in high school they play football the year around, hoping for college and pro careers. The only reason to ever hit a kid was to get him going, to motivate him, and it simply isn't as nece sary now."

"The dividing line was the 1960s," Robinson said. "If you were raised in the '40s or '50s or earlier, you'll remember that when a kid came home claiming the teacher or a coach hit him, the parent said 'Good. You must have deserved it.' The difference today is that they sue.

A typical player's view of contact and force is slightly different. Rams safety Johnnie Johnson, a Texas product, said, "I don't go for (coaches) grabbing a face mask. That's one of the more sensitive areas." He said this as if he knew about it first hand. Then he said: "When the game starts, there's a rule against it .... About the only thing that seems OK to me is a slap on the fanny to get you going."

Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys: "You never hear Kush's successful players complaining about him. For many years, I've watched a lot of coaches at a lot of football practices, and I've seen them use every conceivable method to get their players' attention, as they say. If it involved a slap or anything else of a physical nature, it was done strictly foreffect — not for pain or punishment."

Owner holds key to increased Little pension

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The owner of the St. Louis Cardinals holds a key vote on the league's retirement board that could lead to a higher pension for former Cardinals placekicker Steve Little.

Little was paralyzed from the neck down in an October automobile accident just 14 hours after he was cut from the team.

"I'm making an appeal to Mr. (Bill) Bidwell to at least consider giving him $2,000, or more than $500," Cardinals linebacker Mark Arneson said Wednesday.

Bidwell, two other owners and three players on the Bert Bell Players Retirement Board meet Friday in Houston to review Little's pension.

In December, the board voted 3-3 to give Little the minimum $500 monthly pension, with the three owners voting against a higher figure.

A 4-2 vote could send the issue to arbitration.

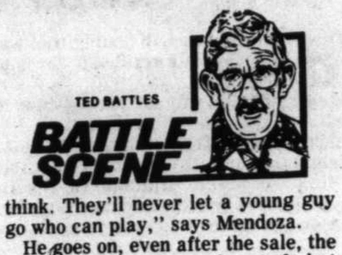

Little was paralyzed in the automobile accident which occurred on a rain-slick St. Louis County highway as he drove home after losing his job in a "kick-off" with Neil O'Donoghue.

The pension fund awards a minimum of $500 to a player injured off the field and a maximum of $2,000 for a football-related injury.

Little, who spends the week in a Little Rock hospital and weekends at home, faces hospital bills which will deplete his $250,000 insurance and monthly bills for care estimated at $1,000.

Arneson said the owners are fearful of setting a precedent by awarding the maximum $2,000 to Little.

Valenzuelas are hard to get out of Mexico

If there are any more in Mexico like Fernando Valenzuela, the Dodgers' impossible dream, chances are you'll never know about him. Take Mario Mendoza's word for it.

In discussing the Valenzuela phenom with Dallas writer Randy Galloway, the Texas Rangers' shortstop said there could be more like Fernando south of the Rio Grande, "But, if there are, it'll now be harder than ever, and cost more money than ever, to get them out."

THE MEXICAN League gets first crack at native players, which doesn't sound unreasonable, "but," says Mendoza, "when a player is good enough to attract attention by the American teams, the directors of the Mexican teams immediately ask for so much money, it scares them off."

That's one reason there aren't more Mexican players in the major leagues. "The player will want to be here (U. S.), but he can't because of the contract. He's stuck. And when they get a good young player down there, they'll do everything to make sure he stays stuck."

Fortunately for Fernando and U.S. fans, Valenzuela didn't know what a screwball was when he was in Mexico and was regarded as only a "pretty good prospect.

MENDOZA played with Fernando a couple of winters ago, but said this year's rookie sensation wasn't the same pitcher he is today. "They sent him down to one of the minor league clubs. He wasn't ready. He didn't have his screwball, just a good fastball and curve."

That's when the Dodgers happened along, offered $125,000 to a club that needed the cash, so presto, Valenzuela was in the U.S.

"I know the way those directors think. They'll never let a young guy go who can play," says Mendoza.

He goes on, even after the sale, the club tried to do Valenzuela out of what was due him. "The rule is that the player is supposed to get 25 percent of the purchase price, so Puebla owed Fernando $30,000. The winter after he was sold, he was on my winter league team and still hadn't received his money. I knew the scout who signed him, Mike Brito, and I called Mike and told him we needed to know exactly how much the Dodgers had paid.

He checked and called us back. It was $125,000. The directors at Puebla were offering Fernando 30,000 pesos, which would be $1,400. He was just a young kid off the farm. He didn't know.

DODGER GM Al Campanis tried to help Fernando get his money, but the Puebla team claimed it spent the money. They promised to pay, but "later I found out he had to settle for $10,000 and was glad to get that. I guess he thought it was better than nothing. But that's the way some of those teams do business in Mexico."

Valenzuela is packing 'em in like Vida Blue and The Bird Fydrich did in their rookie years, but he still hasn't realized any financial gold mine from his skills. His Dodger contract is around minimum scale. All he can do is keeping pitching and hope the bubble doesn't burst before he can negotiate a big bucks contract.

SMU giveaway days are over

Bob Hitch, new SMU AD, says the days of the ticket giveaway at SMU are over. Tests conducted by three dentists at the university revealed no increase in strength in 14 Penn basketball players tested with the plastic mouthpiece, Dr. Martin S. Greenberg said. Some doctors, trainers and athletes have claimed that wearing the custom-designed plates over their back teeth enhanced their playing prowess...

Greenberg said he saw one article in which a number of professional sports figures claimed they were getting stronger because they used bite plates, sometimes customized for as much as $400. Golfers claimed they could drive a ball farther, pole vaulters were saying they could jump higher and baseball pitchers said they could throw harder. Braves leave door open and Bucs steal cat in 13th

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates haven't had much good fortune in Atlanta Stadium of late, but finally got something going their way in a lucky 13th inning Wednesday night.

The Braves opened the door for them with three walks from Tommy Boggs and then Tony Pena got two of them home with a single to provide the Pirates with a 7-5 victory.

"I don't know what the trouble has been here," said Pittsburgh third baseman Dale Berra, who slugged a three-run homer for the winners. "(But) now we know we can come in here and win — and that's going to help us."

The Pirates had lost 11 straight games to the Braves and hadn't won at Atlanta Stadium since July 15, 1979.

While the Pirates were breaking a jinx, the Montreal Expos continued to be frustrated by one at Dodger Stadium. The Dodgers stopped the Expos 8-6 for their eighth straight victory over Montreal and 18th in the last 20 games in Los Angeles.

AFTER BOGGS walked the bases loaded in the Pirate 13th, Pena delivered a bouncer over third past a drawn-up infield for the winning runs.

Boggs, 1-5, had entered the game in the 12th as a pinch-hitter after the Braves had exhausted all their non-pitcher pinch-hitters and singled to center, but Rafael Ramirez was thrown out at the plate attempting to score from second base.

Ramirez had reached base on a disputed play that resulted in the expulsion of Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner. Umpire Steve Fields ruled that Ramirez' sinking liner to left had been trapped by Lee Lacy.

Dodgers 8, Expos 6

Ron Cey hit a two-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth to cap a furious four-run rally as Los Angeles came from behind for a wild victory over Montreal.

The Expos had scored five times in the top of the ninth to overcome a 4-1 deficit and move in front 6-4. But the Dodgers tied the score when Steve Garvey got a two-run single. A two-out error by Montreal shortstop Chris Speier on Reggie Smith's grounder — his fifth error in two nights — opened the door for the Dodger rally.

Cey, who hit two home runs Tuesday night, then followed with his sixth homer of the season.

Astros 3, Cardinals 0

Don Sutton gained his first shutout in a Houston uniform with a five-hitter and Art Howe slugged his third home run of the season to lead the Astros past St. Louis.

Sutton, obtained by the Astros as a free agent before the season, raised his record to 3-4, striking out four and walking one. The former Los Angeles Dodger hurler retired 12 straight batters over one stretch en route to his first complete game as an Astro.

Howe's two-run homer in the third inning gave Houston a 2-0 lead and all the runs Sutton needed.

"They were hitting them where people were standing," Sutton said. "I have to win by changing speeds and moving the ball around. I'm not going to gas anybody like Nolan Ryan does. That's the best command I've had of my four pitches. That's about has good as I can be."

Reds 8, Cubs 3

George Foster drove in three runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly and Tom Seaver hurled a five-hitter to lead Cincinnati over Chicago. Foster slugged a two-run homer, his seventh, off Cubs starter Mike Krukow, 1-3, as the Reds waged a 15-hit assault on five Chicago pitchers.

Seaver, 4-1, gained his 249th career decision and inched within two victories of Bob Gibson, who is 30th on the all-time victory list.

Seaver continued his fine spring showing, after shoulder tendinitis put his career in doubt last season.

Giants 5, Phillies 2

Milt May slugged a two-run double in the second inning and Darrell Evans hit a three-run homer in the third to lead San Francisco past Philadelphia.

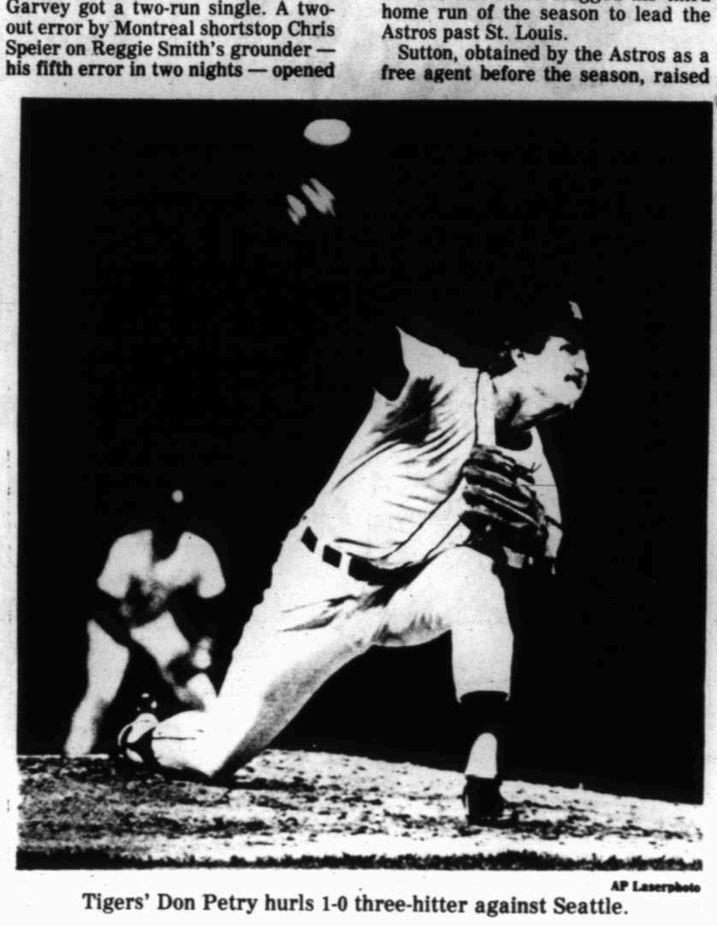

With one out in the second, Larry Herndon singled off Marty Bystrom, 2-2, and took third on a double by Joe Morgan. May then doubled for the game's first two runs.

Enos Cabell and Jack Clark got two-out singles in the third before Evans slammed his fifth homer of the season. San Francisco starter Allen Ripley, 3-3, allowed 11 hits in 7 1-3 innings, but was supported by three double plays.

Padres 5, Mets 0

Rookie Chris Welsh tossed a seven-hitter for his first major league shutout, Ruppert Jones doubled home two runs and Joe Lefebvre stroked three hits as the trio of ex-New York Yankees led San Diego over New York.

Welsh, 2-2, was acquired along with Jones and Lefebvre in a spring training trade. The 26-year-old left-hander, tossing the Padres' second consecutive shutout at the Mets, walked two and struck out one. New York loser Ed Lynch, 1-1, surrendered two runs on seven hits before leaving in the fifth inning.

Aging Yaz finally greets '81 season

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Life in the 1981 season has finally begun for 41-year-old Carl Yastrzemski.

The only player in American League history to collect 3,000 hits and 400 home runs, Yastrzemski is finally hitting his weight — barely — thanks to his first home run of the season Wednesday night, a three-run shot that powered the Boston Red Sox to a 5-2 triumph over the Minnesota Twins.

"Maybe I'm on the way to putting something together. I hope so," said Yastrzemski, who boosted his batting average from .181 to .186, one digit above his listed weight.

Yastrzemski's 420th career homer came after Jerry Remy and Dwight Evans singled with one out in the third inning off Fernando Arroyo. Jim Rice doubled and Tony Perez then singled, with Rice scoring on a grounder by Carney Lansford to give the Red Sox a 4-0 lead. In the seventh, Yastrzemski walked and scored on a double by Perez.

"THE FIRST two weeks of the season I was hitting the ball hard consistently," Yastrzemski said. "They just weren't dropping in up until about six games ago. When they stopped doing that, I made a change. I had started taking good pitches and chasing bad ones. You chase the pitcher's pitch, and when he comes in with one you should handle, you're thinking about the last one."

While Yastrzemski supplied the offense, Boston got seven-hit pitching from Mike Torrez and Mark Clear.

Angels 5, Brewers 4

Bobby Grich's two-run homer sparked a four-run fifth inning and Don Baylor drove in two runs, leading the Angels to their fourth consecutive triumph behind the eight-hit pitching of Steve Renko and and Andy Hassler.

The Angels trailed 3-2 entering the fifth but tied it on a bunt single by Rod Carew, a single by Rick Burleson and a sacrifice fly by Baylor. Grich followed with his two-run homer and a double by Bobby Clark chased loser Mike Caldwell. Baylor had an RBI single in the Angels' two-run first inning.

The Angels got hot shortly after owner Gene Autry and general manager Buzzie Bavasi expressed concern last week over the team's slow start. Manager Jim Fregosi's job was said to be in jeopardy.

"I can't worry about it," Fregosi said. "If they want to fire me, they'll fire me. I can't say, 'Don't fire me.' We've been getting good pitching all year. We're finally getting some hits when they count."

A's 5, Yankees 4

Unbeaten Matt Keough held New York to one hit over the first seven innings. Keough, 6-0, kept the Yankees hitless until Willie Randolph doubled with one out in the sixth. The Oakland right-hander was kayoed in the eighth when the Yankees scored all their runs, two on a double by Dave Winfield and two on a homer by Reggie Jackson.

"One minute I had a no-hitter, then I had a one-hitter, then they had four runs and I'm hoping to get a win," Keough said.

The A's scored in the first inning when loser Tommy John balked a run home. Mike Heath singled in the second and scored on Dave McKay's double. Fred Stanley's RBI single in the fourth made it 3-0, Johnson homered in the fifth and the A's added what turned out to be the winning run run on a bunt single by Tony Armas, a sacrifice, two walks and McKay's sacrifice fly.

Indians 4, White Sox 3

Jorge Orta led off the top of the 16th inning with his first home run of the season. Orta's homer off Dennis Lamp broke a scoring drought that existed since the White Sox tied the game in the bottom of the sixth on singles by Harold Baines and Jim Morrison plus Mike Squires' grounder. Cleveland's Mike Stanton, 1-0, who pitched the final five innings, was the winner. He allowed three hits. The game would have been suspended by an AL 1 a.m. curfew had it not ended in the 16th inning.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 0

Scott McGregor hurled a three-hitter with a career-high nine strikeouts and John Lowenstein drove in two runs, one with his first homer of the season. The Orioles got a run in the second inning on Eddie Murray's single, Terry Crowley's double and Lowenstein's sacrifice fly. Baltimore added a run in the fifth when Doug DeCinces doubled, moved to third on Rick Dempsey's single and scored when Bob Bonner hit into a forceout. Murray's infield hit got a run home in the eighth and Lowenstein homered in the ninth.

Tigers 1, Mariners 0

Rick Peters singled home the game's only run in the bottom of the ninth to support Dan Petry's three-hit pitching. Champ Summers worked reliever Dick Drago for a leadoff walk, pinch runner Kirk Gibson stole second and Richie Hebner was given an intentional pass. The runners advanced on Lynn Jones' sacrifice bunt and Lou Whitaker was walked intentionally to load the bases. Peters then lined a 1-1 pitch into left for the winning run. Petry pitched out of a threat in the eighth when the Mariners had runners at first and third with none out.

Failure to answer race question means trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — The failure of National Football League officials to answer questions of alleged racial discrimination could lead to congressional hearings, a member of Congress warned Wednesday.

Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House subcommittee on Education and Labor, noted that his subcommittee has the authority to subpoena witnesses.

"While Congress is always reluctant to get involved in sports, I am confident the committee would investigate if there is any evidence of violation of Title VII, the Civil Rights Act," Hawkins said.

Hawkins made his comments during a Capitol Hill press conference by members of a citizen's panel investigating an alleged pattern of discrimination by NFL owners.

League officials have refused repeated requests to participate in the panel's dscussions

In a letter to panel chairman William E. Pollard, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle questioned the partiality of the panel.

'A number of pnel members have devoted considerable time and effort in recent years to public riticism of te NFL," Rozelle wrote.

The 16-member panel, named by players association executive Ed Garvey, includes Garvey, union president Gene Upshaw and Brig Owens, assistant executive director of the players union.

The panel, based on its review of a 1980 study of NFL hiring practices Wednesday called for congressional oversight hearings.

The study, which was financed by the NFL Players Association, concluded that a pattern of racial discrimination exists in the league. The study, conducted by Dr. Jomills Braddock of Johns Hopkins University, found that of the 68 former NFL players hired as head coaches since 1960 not one was black. The study also found that of the 261 former players hired as assistant coaches only 20 were black.

Astros Ivie hospitalized with mental exhaustion

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros first baseman Mike Ivie, depressed that he has not contributed more to the team's success, has been admitted to a hospital, suffering from what General Manager Al Rosen described as mental exhaustion.

"He's concerned about his failures," Rosen said Wednesday in a carefully worded statement. "He's with the team that he wanted to be with and he's concerned that he's letting his teammates down."

Ivie asked to talk to the team chaplain Wednesday afternoon, Rosen said and the chaplain called Rosen.

"I think it was pretty obvious he needed it (hospitalization) and he was willing to go," Rosen said.

The Astros had just returned from a 14-game road trip in which Ivie, who came to the Astros from San Francisco April 21, had collected eight hits in 24 at bats. Ivie is currently batting .237 with six runs batted in.

Rosen said Ivie was not being placed on the team's disabled list and would be observed on a day-to-day basis.

MEET THE CUBS

Winning 29-4 more fun than losing in TL 34-8

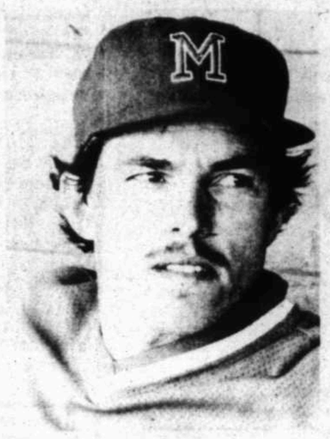

When Jack Upton was on the receiving end in that 34-8 bushwhacking earlier this season, he was just finding out how the other half of the story. Back his New York-Pa. League days in 1979, Upton came to bat eight times in a nine-inning game as Geneva beat Utica, 29-4.

It was a lot more fun than the loss here to San Antonio last month. He hit two homers and a single and knocked in six runs. Upton, who led the NYPL in homers with 10 in 1979, is still knocking 'em over the fence for the Midland Cubs. In fact, just Monday night he hit a two-run homer in the 10th for a 10-8 win over Tulsa.

Although the 6-2, 210-pound firstbaseman with the Indian heritage was born and still lives in California, he attended Colorado State University at Fort Collins, after he first gained famed as a tight end for Golden West College, helping upset highly-favored Fullerton with a 73-yard run after catching a touchdown pass, 13-12.

Jack attended CSU for three years, but didn't get around to baseball until his junior year and his bat made 'em forget all about his football. He hit .398 in 41 games with seven doubles, three triples and 12 homers for a .748 slugging percentage. Along the way his 54 rbi set a Colorado State record. He also was named to the Western Athletic Conference all-academic team.

Just to prove his junior year wasn't a fluke, Upton batted .506 with 16 homers in 46 games as a senior, which was good enough to lead all NCAA Division I players. He established CSU record for hits (82) and hit .574 with 21 rbi in conference. Honors included all-WAC Northern Division, NCAA All-Rocky Mountain and second team Sporting News All-America.

Jack Upton

Upton played varsity tight end for three years, but signed with Chicago when the Cubs made him their 14th selection in the June 1979 draft. Sent to Geneva, Upton hit .299, was second in rbi (63), third in total bases, fourth in hits and led the league's first basemen in fielding.

Last year, he batted .327 in 63 games for Quad Cities with seven homers and 48 rbi and then was calledup to Wichita where he batted .295 with 11 homers and 43 rbi. That's a year's production of 18 homers and 91 rbi.

After a season like that, it was a disappointment when he failed to stick with Iowa this spring. With Joe Hicks and Gary Krug on hand to play first base, the 24-year-old Californian deferred to seniority and was assigned to Midland on the final day of camp in Mesa, Ariz.

During the off-season, Upton is a carpenter and his hobbies are body surfing and jobbing.

Young, fiesty Stars try Islanders again

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — As much as the Minnesota North Stars tried to fight it, the aura of the Stanley Cup finals caught up with them Tuesday night in Game One, a 6-3 triumph for the defending champion New York Islanders.

But the North Stars, young and fiesty all season long, expect that stagefright to disappear tonight when they battle the Islanders again at the Nassau Coliseum.

"We didn't know what to expect," said 20-year old rookie Dino Ciccarelli. "Now we do. We've had our bad game. We'll regroup and correct ourselves."

"I'm sure Minnesota will work things out," said New York's Wayne Merrick, who scored twice in the third period to lock up the stunning first-game victory. "I don't see any panic on their side."

For the North Stars, the entire game was a nightmare from the drop of the first puck. Anders Kallur scored just 2:54 into the game and then Bryan Trottier and Kallur scored shorthanded goals 47 seconds apart while teammate Bob Bourne was serving a five-minute major penalty for spearing.

"That was the key to the game," said Minnesota center Bobby Smith, who directs the North Stars' normally effective powerplay "We were really flat on the powerplay and we should have been at a fever pitch. Maybe that's a sign of our inexperience.

"What we have to realize is that it's going to be a terribly intense series and we'll have to play it that way. I have a lot of respect for the Islanders, but I'm not in awe of them and I still think we can beat them."

The Islanders, exhibiting the poise and ability which enabled them to sweep the Rangers in the semifinals, simply outclassed the dazzled North Stars in nearly every phase of the game.

NBC, CBS to get piece of college pie?

ABC to share grid spoils

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

It now seems likely that ABC, the exclusive network of college football since 1966, will have to share its pompons with either CBS or NBC starting in 1982. It also seems likely that the NCAA will not, in the near future, lose its TV empire to the maverick College Football Association.

The CFA had urged its 62 members, comprising the best football schools, to abstain from voting on the NCAA's two-network TV package. The reasoning was that since the Notre Dames, Alabamas and Oklahomas were the main TV attractions, they deserved the bulk of the TV loot.

Earlier this week, the NCAA said only 23 CFA members, plus one conference, had abstained. The NCAA's two-network plan, designed to bring college football more money, exposure and promotion — a la the three-network National Football League — was approved by a resounding 220-6 vote of its membership.

College football ratings have declined since ABC signed a four-year, $120 million TV contract, which expires after the 1981 season. ABC attributes the tailspin to too many games — called exposures in TV parlance — but not enough first-class matchups because of the NCAA's restrictions on how many times schools can appear on TV.

The current ABC contract calls for 23 exposures. (A game televised nationally counts as one exposure, as does several regional games shown at the same time in different areas.) The contract allows a maximum of four basic appearances per school over two years. Schools can get a fifth by moving a game to one of three special dates or by being designated ABC's one wild-card game each year.

The new NCAA proposal contains plans for 24-28 exposures a year, divided between two networks. Teams could get on the air five times in two years and gain a sixth network appearance by moving to one of the three special dates — the first Saturday in September, the Friday of Thanksgiving weekend or the first Saturday in December.

ABC has a 30-day exclusive negotiating period and expects to begin bargaining by early June. Four years ago, CBS pushed for two-network participation on college football. Ratings were soaring at the time and the NCAA scemed sold on the idea. But then Roone Arledge, president of ABC News and Sports, threw his wallet on the table and paid the price to keep college football only on ABC.

CBS and NBC each have pilot plans that support a two-network package. ABC is taking a wait-and-see attitude.

The CBS Plan

In September, when more people are at the beach and not in their living rooms, the two networks will alternate weeks televising football. The fun begins in October, when the two will share doubleheaders, except for the two Saturdays of postseason baseball.

One football game starting before the playoffs or World Series makes sense; two games, with one going head-to-head against baseball, is like tackling George Rogers without a helmet.

The late game of doubleheaders is preferred because that's when more fans are home. Which network goes late and which goes early?

"They alternate week to week and whoever gets the late game has the first choice of all available games," says Beano Cook, a CBS Sports publicist and architect of the plan that almost won college football four years ago.

The NBC Plan

NBC's poposal isalong the lines of the NFL's split of the American Football Conference on NBC and the National Football Conference on CBS, with a maximum of seven appearances for any team over a two-year period. Total exposures per year would range from 28-36.

Rex Lardner, director, program planning and development for NBC Sports, is the mastermind of this plan, which gives one network the Pacific-10, Southeastern, Atlantic Coast Conference and all independents. The other network gets the Big Ten, Big Eight, Western Athletic and Southwest Conferences.

The networks would swap conferences in the second year. In addition, the 10 "jewel" games — like Oklahoma-Texas, Notre Dame-Southern Cal and Michigan-Ohio State — would be split down the middle.

"There are a lot of great games that never get on-air," says an official at NBC Sports. "Amos Lawrence (of North Carolina) was only the second four-time 1,000-yard rusher and he was never on national TV.

Senate hears voters' gripes

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As so often happens, public outrage over the TV networks' handling of last November's elections was spent fast, the issue slipping into silence sometime right around Christmas. Disenfranchisement by television, being but a quadrennial problem, is as easy to forget as it is to get mad about.

But this time some of the angst of last November lingers. Enough, anyway, to warrant a U.S. Senate committee hearing into the matter. Four pieces of legislation, proposing two radically different solutions to the problem, are now before the Rules and Administration Committee.

If they become law, TV's Election Day show will never be the same. Neither will freedom of the press, the networks insist.

The four bills, Senate Bills 55, 56, 57 and 58, were introduced by California Sen. S.I. Hayakawa in response to a common feeling in California that this state's participation in last November's election was directly affected by network TV projections and President Carter's early concession.

While voter turnout in California promised to be higher than expected during the day — 80 percent or 81 percent, Secretary of State March Fong Eu thought — polling places suddenly turned into morgues at 5 p.m. By then, the election as delivered by network television was over.

CBS News President William Leonard told the Senate committee last week that "nobody knows whether in fact projections have any effect on voting patterns where the polls have not yet closed," and he, as does NBC news chief Bill Small, continues to downplay the role of TV in elections. Disenfranchisement by TV, he says, is but a "perceived problem."

Perceived? A Field poll conducted among California voters in January found that approximately 400,000 voters didn't bother to go to the polls because they'd heard network projections or Carter's concession. Indeed, the state turnout was not 80 percent or 81 percent, as Mrs. Eu had guessed at midday, but 77.24 percent, below the original prediction.

The no-shows could have affected at least one congressional race, between incumbent Democrat Jim Corman and Republican challenger Bobbi Fiedler. Mrs. Eu's guess is that if the Field poll was nearly correct, 5,900 Democrats and 1,540 Republicans stayed away from that race. Democrat Corman lost by 752 votes.

The problem clearly is real; but how to solve it?

Hayakawa takes a duel approach: Bills 55, 56 and 57 would open the polls for two days, or on Sunday, giving Westerners plenty of chance to vote before Eastern results are in. But since network projections are based largely on exit polling, this solution wouldn't stop projections, it would just allow them to be made earlier.

The most controversial solution is Hayakawa's Senate Bill 57, which would make it against federal law to make election results available to news organizations before all polls were closed.

This is what Leonard had in mind when he expressed CBS' "vehement opposition" to "any proposals which would require any news organization to suppress information in its possession, or would deny to us access to any information which would otherwise be available through the normal process of news collection."

An irrefutable point.

So, what to do? Jack Eddinger, an aide to Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., says the mood on the committee is to do something about ever-shrinking voter turnout. Whether Hayakawa's answers are the ones the Senate chooses remains to be seen.

But, as Mrs. Eu suggested to the committee, any of the above cures "would be as bad as, or worse than, the projections." It would be better, she said in a fit of outlandish optimism, if the TV networks practiced some self-restraint.

In the meantime, Mrs. Eu said, projections are something "we may have to learn to live with, just as we do the common cold ... and hope that one day those media Merlins misread their electronic crystal balls and so discredit the practice as to remove it as an influence in politics."

Moral Majority hit by CBS' president

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Moral Majority is really a "constitutionally immoral minority" which seeks to deprive television viewers of their choice of programming, the president of CBS Inc. says.

Thomas H. Wyman's attack on the conservative political and religious group brought approval from representatives of more than 200 CBS-TV network affiliates at a meeting here Tuesday.

Wyman said the boycott threat by the Moral Majority and its television watchdog, the Coalition for Better Television, was a disservice to the country. The group wants the public to boycott advertisers who sponsor programs which in it views as immoral or indecent.

"In their actions, they disenfranchised the real majority of viewers from making their own decision about what to watch," he said.

The 765 broadcasters interrupted Wyman with applause when he said the network would strive to produce "high quality programs ... but viewers will decide what to watch."

He drew another ovation when he added: "As citizens as well as broadcasters, we must speak out against this vocal but constitutionally immoral minority that dares to call itself the Moral Majority."

At stake, Wyman said, was not "the prosperity of the networks but the freedom of the airwaves."

His remarks followed a weekend symposium in Ojai, Calif., at which 55 leading television executives — producers and others associated with the industry — discussed the problem of how to deal with pressure groups.

CBS declined to participate in the symposium, saying its own position had already been stated.

At Tuesday's meeting, Wyman also called for the repeal of the Fairness Doctrine and the Equal Time law, which he called "totally inconsistent with the First Amendment," and the "reasonable" access provision of the Communications Act.

He warned that because of new technology that would soon make newspapers and magazines available on television screens, print journalists would face the same regulatory web as broadcasters.

B. Donald Grant, president of CBS Entertainment, said many CBS projects have been attacked prior to broadcast and then went on to be the most honored events of the season — after "millions of people have watched the programs and passed the only judgment that counts."

Grant said he was referring to such programs as "Playing for Time," "Guyana Tragedy: The Story of Jim Jones," "Peter and Paul," and "Scared Straight: Another Story."

Strickland to offer two acting classes

Ted Strickland, Midland Community Theatre's new assistant director, will be offering two acting classes during the summer. They will be scheduled on Monday and Tuesday beginning June 1 and running through Aug. 4.

The Monday night class is designed for the experienced actor who wishes to sharpen his skills and explore new techniques. The Tuesday night class is for the novice actor. Each will last approximately two hours, with a total of 10 classes for the summer.

These classes are available at a cost of $25 for MCT members and $30 for non-members. Enrollment is limited.

Those interested may contact Strickland at 682-4111.

Horne better than ever in new Broadway show

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Lena Horne, warm and wonderful, better than ever, had a dynamite opening of a "limited Broadway engagement" run of "Lena Horne: the Lady and her Music" on Tuesday night.

Nobody announced how limited the engagement is; one would expect audiences to pack the Nederlander Theater for a long time. On opening night, she got standing ovations at the beginning and at the end of each act and after two other songs. It wasn't just the excitement of opening night; one would expect all her audiences to do that or more.

Miss Horne, who is 63, sings as well and enunciates as carefully as ever. She's still beautiful, presents herself in gorgeous clothes, with taste, with show business knowhow. Some things have changed — for the better.

She's still sexy, still has class. Now she's also friendly, and very funny. She talks between some of the songs. She tells some stories of the "it sure wasn't funny at the time" variety. She remembers the pain and the reason, finally got over the pain and tells the story in a way that both she and her hearers, without trivializing, can laugh.

After all, MGM got Max Factor to create a "colored" makeup for her. They called it light Egyptian and put it on Ava Gardner, Hedy Lamarr and Jeanne Crain in movie roles Miss Horne coveted.

Sometimes before, in concert, Miss Horne could be a very mannered singer. That is all gone. Now, she's an actress. That doesn't mean she talks the words. She sings — low, high, soft, loud.

She slowed the tempo of "I Got a Name" and sang it quiet and proud, as if it were written for her life. She made the last lines an anthem of deep affirmation. She made "Yesterday When I Was Young" a one-act play by the way she sang it and got a standing ovation. She said, "I had to grow into this song," then poured emotion and volume into "Stormy Weather" and got another ovation.

There is real musical variety in Miss Horne's selections, far more than the change-of-pace involved in following a slow song with a fast one. She sang "I Want To Be Happy" sometimes flirty, sometimes kidding, with the ogling sideways moves of a stripper. She sang "Love (can be a joy forever)," in what one thinks of as Lena Horne style, biting off the words and ending every "er" word "ah."

She has a 15-piece band behind her, playing tasteful arrangements, but sang "Deed I Do" with just Grady Tate on drums, "I'm Glad There Is You" with conductor Coleridge T. Perkinson's electric piano and "Love Me or Leave Me" with Bob Cranshaw's jazzy bass. She sang all the verses of "Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered."

Format was chronological, from the Cotton Club dancer days through the movies to today. Clare Bathe, Tyra Ferrell and Vondie Curtis-Hall came on to be a lively Cotton Club chorus, with Miss Horne keeping up with them briefly, then walking off stage. Returning, she said, "I told those children they could shake their booteys as long as they wanted to; I've got to sing two hours."

Producers are James M. Nederlander, Michael Frazier and Fred Walker in association with Sherman Sneed and Jack Lawrence. Arthur Faria staged. Harold Wheeler is musical director and Luther Henderson, musical consultant.

Anybody thinking Miss Horne might be past her prime can forget it. She hadn't hit it before. She's in it now.

What other critics said:

Frank Rich of The New York Times called the show "an evening of generally undiluted triumph." He said Miss Horne is "an artist who is still growing, who is only now reaching the peak of her powers."

She was, Rich said, "in transcendent voice and, at age 63, as beautiful and as elegant as ever."

Douglas Watt of the Daily News said, "Lena Horne is the season's best musical, Tonys or no Tonys. As a matter of fact, they should invent a whole new category for her: something like Best of Broadway, period."

Songwriters to be honored

Saturday from 7 to 9 p.m. Channel 2 KMID-TV will present the first nationally televised salute to the songwriters of the top country hits of the year, in the special two-hour "Music City News' Top Country Hits of the Year" program.

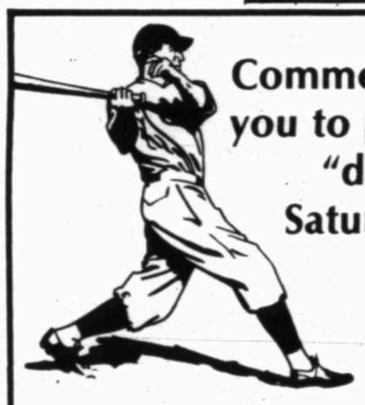

The songs selected will be performed on the program by top country singers, with many of the hits being sung by the original artists.

Tryouts planned

Tryouts are being held at 3 p.m. Sunday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., for those interested in appearing in the olios and blackouts in the Summer Mummers.

This summer marks the first performance of the Mummers in its new home, the Yucca Theatre. Opening night is set for July 3.

Lancaster, 67, to portray pope

By ROBERT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

FOSSANOVA, Italy (AP) — Burt Lancaster — in Italy to play the role of a 13th-century pope — thinks some of the romance is gone from films today. But he says actors' parts are more subtle and challenging.

"In the earlier days, characters were generally stereotyped. They were good or bad. Clark Gable, no matter how he behaved for most of the picture, regenerated at the end and was the good guy," Lancaster said.

"Nowadays, stories are being written that delve more deeply into the whole human condition, and people are many things in a film," he says. "Consequently, actors have more interesting roles to play, if not quite so romantic."

Lancaster, 67, described the changes in pictures and how they're affecting his career after 35 years of film acting.

"The kinds of films we're talking about are not necessarily the most popular," he said in an interview in a camping trailer, used as a dressing room, on the grounds of a small stone monastery south of Rome.

"People still usually like the ones that offer an escape from inflation, wars, terrorism, shooting the president, all the things that sicken them. But some of them (the more serious films) have been popular, such as 'Ordinary People' or 'Kramer vs. Kramer,' because they touch a chord, touch a response, reach people emotionally," the actor said.

Lancaster was at Fossanova Abbey for filming a cameo appearance as Pope Gregory X in the six-part television series "Marco Polo," which will be broadcast in 1982 by NBC in the U.S. and Italy's RAI network. Lancaster plays the pontiff who blessed and bid farewell to the Venetian explorer who gave Europeans the best-known early descriptions of the Far East.

Lancaster relaxed in his papal robes and noted that they were "more beautiful" than the "rags" he wore as Moses in an earlier television production. He admitted that his walk-on as Gregory doesn't offer much room for creative acting: "The pope is introduced, then they take off for China and the pope goes back to Rome."

But he was happy with his most recent part as an aging, small-time gangster in "Atlantic City."

"I judge that it was a very important role in my career at this stage of my life. I'm approaching 70, and the days of playing the young leading man are gone. It offered me a whole range of acting: from human comedy to pathos and tragedy."

Lancaster received a great deal of critical acclaim for his sensitive portrayal of the minor hoodlum who desperately wants to prove that he's just as important as the bosses who run the gangs. He said the director, famed French auteur Louis Malle, chose him for the part to create a contrast with the public's perception of Lancaster as the strong-willed hero of "Birdman of Alcatraz" or "Elmer Gantry," for which he won an Oscar in 1960.

"Malle felt that it was ideal to have somebody like me because of the image that I've created over the years, someone who you would think was a big, strong tough guy, but who turns out really to be a man who's weak and frightened and insecure," he said.

Lancaster, with graying hair and beard, is getting parts as the older man who courts the younger woman. In his role in "Atlantic City," he had what he called a "flash in the pan relationship" with the character played by Susan Sarandon. This autumn he will fill the same role when filming begins in Venice of "Over the River and Through the Trees." Italian Valerio Zurlino is directing the movie, based on a story by Ernest Hemingway.

Lancaster is one of the few big-name American stars who's worked extensively in Europe. But he said he doesn't think that's why Italian director Giuliano Montaldo chose him to play the pope in "Marco Polo."

Instead, Lancaster cited the $10 million in financial backing given to the project by Procter & Gamble.

"They're putting up the money for the show, and they want Americans in it because they want to sell soap in America," Lancaster said.

Moliere production delightful

"A wretched sinner, all depraved and twisted,
The greatest villain that has ever existed.
My life's one heap of crimes, which grows each minute;
There's naught but foulness and corruption in it...
Charge me with any deed you wish to name;
I'll not defend myself, but take the blame."
— Tartuffe speaking on Tartuffe

"I gave him gifts, but in his humbleness
He'd beg me every time to give him less...
He guides our lives, and to protect my honor
Stays by my wife, and keeps an eye upon her;
He tells me whom she sees, and all she does,
And seems more jealous than I ever was!
And how austere he is! Why, he can detect
A mortal sin where you would least suspect...
— Orgon speaking on Tartuffe

Ah "Tartuffe" your clothed piety and sugar sweet tongue marks the beginning of the end of your run. In short, you're a rat.

From the opening of Act I to the close of the play, those who see Tartuffe wheel and deal his way across the stage, hope he'll get all he deserves.

And that was part of Moliere's intention in writing "Tartuffe." From the opening scene, the potential perils of Tartuffe's control over the wealthy and powerful Orgon are made eminently clear. Even though Orgon's mother supports Tartuffe, saying, among other things, "He's a fine man, and should be listened to," the audience gets the feeling he's a man of many insidious faces. And as the play progresses, it's obvious he is.

Currently showing in Theatre II at Theatre Midland, this comic masterpiece is a delightful way to spend an evening. Although the play itself has a few weak spots, the plot is as valid today as it was when Moliere first presented his work at the court of France's King Louis XIV in 1664.

It isn't necessary to be familiar with the context in which "Tartuffe" was written, but it is interesting to note that certain members of the court were so offended by the play that they kept it from being performed publicly for five years. Its first public performance was a success.

The greatest difficulty today's audience has in understanding the action on stage, is the fact that the entire play is done in rhymed couplets. It takes several minutes for the ear to adjust. But once it does, the poking humor and ironic set of circumstances becomes quite clear.

The cast of Midland Community Theatre's production do an admirable job of carrying the lines. The few times opening night that a line was lost or forgotton, another cast member picked it up. This is especially difficult to do when one is speaking in rhyme. The extra week of rehearsals that the director, Ted Strickland, scheduled seems to have been well spent.

The cast includes Mary Jo Taylor as Orgon's mother Madame Pernelle; Stephen Stine as Orgon; Beverly Roper as Orgon's wife Elmire; Jess Kozman as Orgon's son Damis; Jodi McElligott as Orgon's daughter Mariane; David Walton as Mariane's hoped-for and intended husband Valere; Darrell W. Ward as Orgon's brother-in-law Cleante; Bill Schneider as the hypocrite Tartuffe; Cheryl L. Colson as Mariane's maid Dorine; Keith Kaminsky as the bailiff M. Loyal; David Radcliff as a police officer; and Celise Cost as Madame Pernelle's maid Fliptote.

All do an admirable job with a few turning in steller performances.

Schneider is quite on target as Tartuffe. His mannerisms, particularly his hand motions and eye movements, are effective as portraying the sickly sly hypocrite. He is Tartuffe.

Ms. Colson also turns in a stellar portrayal of the maid who knows how to play all the characters as does Kozman with his role of the hot tempered, too-quick-to-react-definitely-not-dry-behind-the-ears-young man.

Ms. Taylor is quite good as the aging pompous know-it-all who wants all to believe as she does. Her darting eye movements and staccato style hand movements all help to create the character she is portraying.

Stine is believable as the blind-who-thinks-he-can-see old fool.

Ms. McElligott and Walton are charming as the too-proud lovers, although Ms. McElligott's eye direction is off at times. She appears to not be looking at the one to whom she is speaking when she should be.

Ms. Roper does a fine job of portraying the honorable wife setting the oldest of traps as does Ward in depicting the concerned brother of the fool.

Kaminsky is a bit stiff as the bailiff, but he carries his lines well.

The costumes alone are worth going to see. The play is being done in period and the costume shop outdid itself — including lace on the men's shoes — in creating the feel of 17th century France.

The play is effectively staged with an audience on all sides. The thespians do not block each other because they are playing on the diagonal and thus facing two sides of the house whenever they speak.

For an evening of rhyme and a play which, although it deals in stereotypes lends some depth to them, join the cast of "Tartuffe" at Theatre Midland.

Thomas wins third round of drilling games

Dean Thomas of Texaco was the winner of the third game of the World Series of Exploration. He drilled 28 wells during the five weeks of the game and had the uncanny ability to consistently drill the exact tops of the hills or along the ridge crests.

He drilled eight wildcats of which five or 52.5 percent were productive nd of 20 development wells, 13 produced. This represented a dramatic improvement over his first two games where he had failed to make a discovery.

Thomas finished with a net worth of $21,339,050 after paying a 25 percent capital gain tax.

Second was Victor Bell of Union Texas; third, Owen Fitzsimmons, Crown Central; fourth, John Carmony, Exxon Company, U.S.A.; fifth, Mark Vining, Exxon Company, U.S.A. All of these made a profit. Others in the top ten were sixth, Don Main, Union Texas; seventh, Mike Kulenguski, Conoco; eighth, James Johnson, Union Texas; ninth, Caroline Daniels, Texaco; and tenth, Sue Timms, Koch Exploration.

The base map of this game was the Sheffield quadrangle in Pecos County with its many sharp features resembling reef topography. Wells had pay zones of up to 300 feet thick.

The game simulated conditions present in West Texas in the early 1950's when Canyon reef exploration was in its heyday.

Dr. John Dewey points out continents racing across oceans at the 10th annual Global Tectonics symposium which opened Wednesday at the Permian Basin Graduate Center.

Dewey opens annual Tectonics Symposium

By CONNIE W. HARDING
Oil Staff

Dr. John F. Dewey, one of the foremost developers of Plate Tectonic history, opened the 10th annual Global Tectonics Symposium at the Permian Basin Graduate Center Wednesday morning with a discussion of The Tectonics of Flexural and Pull-apart Basins in Continental Systems, Particularly as Applied to the Western United States.

The Symposim will continue through Friday and has attracted worldwide attention by providing the most notable lecturers in the field of Plate Tectonics. Participants were regisistered from Denver, Houston, Tulsa and Lybia and included students and faculty from the University of Texas at El Paso, Austin and the Permian Basin, and Sul Ross University.

Dr. Walter C. Pitman, III, Lamont-Dohery Geological Obervatory of Columbia University, and Dr. Tanya Atwater, University of California at Santa Barbara, will lecture Friday and Dr. Jack G. Elam, Permian Basin Graduate Center of Midland will wind up the seminar on Friday afternoon.

Lecturing without notes and presenting visual aids of colorful tectonic maps depicting the evolutionary movement through the ages of the continents, Dr. Dewey discussed recent discoveries on the Asiatic continent which indicate that continental collisions can cause structural events far removed from the suture zones. The Appalachian-Ouachita-Marathon orogeny, the development of the Western Overthrust Belt, and the oblique collision of the North American Plate with the Pacific and other adjacent plates was covered, along with speculations as to their effect on the intervening areas, including the Permian Basin, Anadarko Basin and the Rocky Mountain foreland.

Speaking with an elegant and dignified British voice, and looking slightly boyish in a casual turtle neck pullover and slacks, Dr. Dewey created a colorful discussion of the vast hydrocarbon possibilities in basins throughout the world. Pointing to areas on the maps, he described continents as "zipping across oceans" of other ages to collide with other continents and spoke of "volcanoes popping their heads above the ocean."

During lunch at the Midland Country Club, Dewey described a boyhood as an only child in Essex, north of London and attributed his first interests in the field of geology to an instructor in school. This teacher lead the young man of about 12 "cross country cycling" to collect geological specimans. Dr. Dewey's group stayed in youth hostels as they explored the English countryside.

His bright blue eyes glinted appreciatively as he remembered his first years of guidance and noted, "I am glad that I have always known what I wanted from an early age and did not have to change fields midstream as so many young people today find themselves having to do." He explained that he entered the university with geology in mind and went on to become a graduate of Cambridge.

After living two-thirds of his life in Europe, Dewey came to the United States about 1970, and became associated with the Permian Basin Graduate Center in 1972. Dewey commented that his first interest in geology was academic. It was not until three years ago that he became involved in the challenge of the oil industry in his research and is now engaged in geological consulting on a worldwide basis.

Asked if he could describe what was under the earth's crust at any given point in the world, Dewey replied, "Oh no! At least not on a detailed basis." But he went on to explain that he was aware of the basic geological structure of the earth almost worldwide.

Dewey's easy conversation and relaxed manner permeates his presence as he speaks of his love of tennis and good health, the Turkish custom of "thick and creamy yogurt and cucumbers, perhaps with a bit of mint" as one of his gourmet delights, and his parents and "many aunts and uncles and nieces and nephews residing in London."

Dewey's eyes twinkle as he quips that he finally has learned how to "make money" with his profession and one wonders and hesitates to guess if the wisdom and character in his expression evolved from his indeterminable age or his worldwide cultural experience.

Dewey resides with his wife and children in Albany, N.Y., where he lectures at the University of New York at Albany.

District 8 wildcat, tests announced

One wildcat, two field tests and a completion were announced in District 8 of the Texas Railroad Commission.

The McCann Corp. of Big Spring will drill the No. 1 Stewart Ranch "B" to a total depth of 9,000 feet.

Located 1,980 feet from the south line and 660 feet from the west line of section 8, block 30, T1N, T&P RR survey, the site is 5 miles northeast of Coahoma.

The project is 3,000 feet northwest of the No. 1 Hallie R. Read, a gas producer at 9,005 in the Coahoma North field and 4,000 feet southwest of the No. 1 R. Lowe Read which was plugged dry and abandoned 2-23-61 at 9,060 feet.

Gulf Oil Corporation has announced plans to drill the No. 1 Lillian Spalding et al in the Knott, W (Pennsylvanian Reef) field of Howard County.

Located 1,980 feet from the south and 1,980 feet from the west of section 7, block 33, T2N, T&P RR survey, the site is 15 miles nothwest of BS.

The project is 1,500 feet south of the No. 1 Spalding, a gas producer and 3,000 feet northeast of the No. 1 Myers oil production at 9,391 feet in the Knott West field.

WINKLER COUNTY COMPLETION

Getty Oil Co. has completed the No. 1 Universtiy 39-21 in the Little Joe (Ellenburger) field of Winkler County.

Drilled to a total depth of 20,404 feet the well topped the Ellenburger at 19,717 feet, was pluged back to a total depth of 20,365 feet from ground level elevation of 2,748 feet.

Casing was set at 9 5/8 inch at 12,000 feet and prforations were made from 19,945 feet to 20,294 feet acidized with 30,000 gallons and fractured with 20,000 gallons.

The well was calculated for an absolute open flow of 5,043,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Other tops reported were Lamar 5,008 feet, Cherry Canyon 5,929 feet, Wolfcamp 11,130 feet, Silurian 17,316 feet and the Fusselman at 17,552 feet.

More technical skills needed at nuclear project

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Company's new chief of nuclear construction at the South Texas Nuclear Project, says there is a need for more technical skills at the $2.7 billion nuclear project.

Jerome H. Goldberg, testifying Wednesday at a special hearing on an operating permit for the project, said his first concern was the ability of about 30 to 40 people in key roles at the South Texas Project.

Goldberg said he carried out a personal survey that showed a need for added experience in some jobs. Construction programs were adequate in theory, he said, but more experienced people would have made the programs work better.

Goldberg, who supervised construction of four nuclear submarines for the Navy and helped build 12 nuclear power plants, characterized problems at the South Texas Project as typical of those found in nuclear power plants begun in the early 1970s.

He said increasingly complex Nuclear Regulatory Commission regulations caught HL&P and Brown & Root short by the magnitude of the task.

Wildcats sited in Hale, Garza, Dickens counties

District 8A of the Texas Railroad Commission announced three wildcats to be drilled the Dickens, Garza and Hale counties.

The No. 1 D.E. Woodward will be drilled to a total depth of 5,400 feet by States Oil Co. and will be located 467 feet from the south line and 467 feet from the west line of RM Parish survey Abstract No. 855 7 miles southwest of Spur at a ground level elevation of 2,314 feet.

The project is 1,000 feet southeast of the No. 1 Hinson which was dry and abandoned at a total depth of 7,708 feet on 11-26-66.

MX missile program could cost over $33 billion

By SOLVEIG TORVIK
Hearst Special News Service

If President Reagan and Congress forge ahead with the controversial MX missile, it will give the go-ahead to the largest public works program in history.

The multi-billion-dollar program calls for 200 missiles to be trucked around 8,500 miles of Utah and Nevada desert among 4,600 shelters, forcing the Russians to guess which shelter holds the missile, much as operators of the old shell game challenged the player to guess which walnut shell hid the pea.

THE PROGRAM WILL MEAN MOVING more dirt than was dug for the Panama Canal and require 40 percent of the nation's cement production for three years. It will mean the relocation of an army of workers -- perhaps 65,000 by 1989, when the system is to be in place.

And the project will require 100 billion gallons of water from a desert that gets 4 to 6 inches of annual rainfall.

The initial cost is variously estimated from $33 billion by the Air Force to $100 billion by critics of the plan. Annual operating costs are estimated by the Air Force to be $425 million.

Congress so far has gone along with funding of MX missile studies under four presidents. But now it is unclear whether President Reagan, who spoke negatively of the MX basing scheme during the campaign, favors going ahead.

REAGAN'S DEFENSE ADVISERS have been quoted as saying they lean toward smaller land-based missiles. The administration has ordered a review of the program, with findings to be reported in June. Reagan is expected to make his decision on whether to continue with the MX shortly thereafter.

If the MX program proceeds, Congress will be asked to appropriate some $2.9 billion for fiscal 1982 for further reseach and development of the system.

The furor over the missile has joined ranchers, Indians, Mormons, and some former high-ranking military officers with environmentalists.

The MX is the outgrowth of 15 years of planning. Some 35 other alternatives were considered before the Air Force settled on the "shell game" approach using lands owned by the federal government in Nevada and Utah.

THE DETERRENT RESTS ON the Air Force's assumption that, because the Russians will not know in which shelters the missiles are hidden, they are unlikely to build 4,600 missiles to destroy 200 of ours.

Yet if the Russians decide to keep up in the numbers game, the Air Force admits that as many as 12,500 shelters eventually might have to be built to stay ahead.

If the Russians do build 4,600 missiles, Terrill said, "then you're in an all-out arms race. It gets very, very expensive to build warheads instead of shelters."

The MX missiles would be 71 feet long, carry 10 warheads, and could reach the Soviet Union in 30 minutes. Periodically, perhaps three times a year, they would be moved about the desert in huge Boeing-built trucks on roadways built to Boeing specifications.

sheet two MXmissile-Torvik xxx Boeing specifications.

Most of these roads would be open to the public. Cattle grazing and other normal public activities would co-exist with the MX, according to the Air Force. But the shelters themselves would be off limits, surrounded by three barbed wire fences and sophisticated security systems also designed by Boeing.

THE AIR FORCE SAYS THE MX intercontinental missile system is needed to offset the growing vulnerability of the present Minuteman ICBM to Soviet attack. The Soviets' missiles have become more powerful and accurate, leading to the fear that the 1,000 missiles the U.S. keeps in fixed silos could be destroyed.

The United States' strategic strength relies on what military planners call a TRIAD. Each leg of the TRIAD represents different means of launching a weapons system: one from land, one from submarines and the third from airplanes. The land portion of the TRIAD is most powerful because of the size of the warheads and the accuracy of the missiles. But it is also the leg that has become most vulnerable to attack, according to some of our defense experts.

The Soviets are thought to be ahead in their ability to inflict damage; they are more able to destroy missiles in hardened silos than is the United States. The United States has the additional disadvantage of having to aim at up to 500 more targets in the Soviet Union than the Soviets have to hit in this country.

BUT OPINION IS DIVIDED on the MX as the solution to this problem.

"I believe the MX project as presently conceived is a serious mistake," former CIA director and retired admiral Stansfield Turner wrote in a New York Times Magazine article last month.

The chief liability of the MX is how the Soviets would respond to it, in Turner's view. He said that contrary to the Air Force's assumptions, the Soviets "easily" could deploy the 4,600 missiles it would need to knock out all our MX missiles.

"The United States would not, of course, stand still if the Soviet Union deployed more warheads," Turner wrote. "It would probably deploy more MXs and build more shelters. Then the Soviet Union would probably build still more warheads. Where would it all stop?"

Turner says that "the more threatening a weapon is, the more nervous it makes a potential adversary and the more destabilizing it becomes."

Because the MX combines the characteristics of short flight time and ability to destroy hardened targets, Turner says, "building the MX, rather than stabilizing the strategic balance, would probably destabilize it further."

TURNER CAUTIONED THAT THE United States must not cancel the MX without building something to replace it, and he favors the idea of packaging smaller cruise missles on a variety of launching platforms, as well as small, land-mobile ICBMS deployed in remote areas of Alaska or trucked around the nation's highways in disguised vans.

Turner says that the MX is vulnerable because, even though it can move, the Russians know the location of the shelters.

The Center for Defense Information, a Washington, D.C.-based group led by a retired rear admiral and a retired brigadier general whose staff includes economists and whose board of advisers includes actor Paul Newman and philanthropist Stewart Mott, maintains that the ICBMs are obsolete and suggests that all land-based ICBMS be eliminated.

According to that line of thought, removing the ICBMs not only removes a target but also removes the "hair trigger" reponse required from a president who would have to instantly decide whether to "use or lose" the missiles.

THE SOVIETS, FRIGHTENED of our formidable weaponry, might be tempted to fire first to knock out all the missiles we have because they believe we mean to use them first. But without the land-based ICBM's, the center argues, the president could wait out any Soviet attack and respond to the actual situation.

"The destruction of U.S. cities would be matched by destruction of Soviet cities. Nuclear deterrence would be as sure as it can ever be," the center argues.

A spokesman for the MX program, Col. Mike Terrill, defends it against such criticism. "This thing has been built and designed to bring both the forces into rough equivalence," he said.

The Air Force believes the weapons would be stabilizing, Terrill said, not destabilizing as Turner suggests. "We have shown our intention of bringing the balance of power into (true) balance. We're only going to build 200 missiles. It's stabilizing in that if they come after us, they have to come after all 4,600 shelters"

IF THE RUSSIANS DO BUILD 4,600 missiles, Terrill said, "then you're in an all-out arms race. It gets very, very expensive to build warheads instead of shelters. Then they've really declared their intentions that they're going for the jugular. If that's so, I would not think the U.S. is going to stand idly by."

He said the notion of trucking the missiles around the nation's highways is unworkable, not only because the public won't stand for it, but because "you lose accuracy and you lose command control. What if you have an accident on the highway?"

The weather in Alaska is too severe for ICBMs there to serve the purpose, he said, and the cruise missile has to be positioned closer to the target than the land-based ICBMs. Smaller missiles from other launch points are not likely to do enough damage, he said. The Russians have hardened their silos, he added, and "they have a civil defense program that's second to none, so you need a larger warhead."

A final consideration in all this, Terrill said, is if we can't deploy the MX missile in our own country, what are the Europeans in whose countries we do deploy our other nuclear weapons going to do?

Nuclear 'gun' frightens Utah town

By SOLVEIG TORVIK
Hearst Special News Service

DELTA, Utah — This windswept, dusty central Utah farming town on the western slope of the Wasatch Range has no jail, no parking meters, no Golden Arches, no city hall and very little water.

It is a town where men carry guns as casually as city businessmen carry briefcases, but there has been only one murder in Delta's 75-year history.

But Delta may soon have the biggest nuclear "gun" in the West.

An orderly, patriotic Mormon town of 2,300 souls who practice their demanding religion with varying degrees of enthusiasm, it has two bars and an annual average income of $3,200.

DELTA IS NOT WITHOUT wealth. It has the free world's only beryllium plant, producing a metal used to make aircraft; a $6 billion state-funded, coal-fired electrical generation plant coming on line, and, thanks to its location on the western edge of the energy-rich Overthrust Belt, frenzied drilling gangs ranging over the deserts in quest of oil shale deposits.

But most important to the majority of the 8,000 citizens of Millard County is something much of the world pines for: a crime-free, peaceful way of life.

Delta is cradled in the starkly beautiful landscape of the Great Basin, which because of its sparse population has been the site of activities the federal government couldn't carry out elsewhere.

To the north some 50 miles is the Dugway Proving Ground, where the military has stored and tested nerve gas. To the southwest is the Nevada testing ground where open-air experiments were conducted on nuclear weapons.

THE REGION HAS AN inexplicably high cancer rate, attributed by some to the nuclear tests. Citizens of the area suspect that plutonium from those tests still rests on the scrubby desert floor, airborne when the winds blow.

"I happen to think that the only appropriate response is hilarious laughter." —

Ken Olson, aide to Utah's governor

Delta hasn't seen anything yet.

The Air Force wants to bring the world's biggest construction project to town — the highly controversial MX missile.

Utah Governor Scott Matheson has labeled the mobile MX missiles as "stupid and screwy," according to Ken Olson, the governor's MX missile coordinator.

"I happen to think the only appropriate response to it is hilarious laughter," Olson added.

He said a decision must be made on whether Utah's scarce water should be used for military defense or energy development. Olson said there is neither enough water nor enough manpower available in the region to build both the MX system and develop energy resources. Some estimates predict, for example, that the MX will monopolize all the cement processing west of the Mississippi for three years.

"IT'S A CLASSIC SITUATION of two government programs conflicting with each other," Olson added.

If the Air Force locates its MX base near Delta, some 22,000 people will move into the area permanently, even after the thousands of construction workers have come and gone. The MX missile construction would be going on at the same time that the power plant is to be built, and the power plant alone will triple the town's population.

"They're going to get a real jolt," says Olson.

Already every dry inch of land on both sides of the road approaching town is for sale. Ground that couldn't be sold three years ago for $300 an acre is now going at $35,000 an acre. Real-estate prices, already soaring because of the Intermountain Power Plant, will go out of sight if the MX comes to town, critics say.

CRIME, VIOLENCE, DIVORCE, mental illness, alcoholism, drug use, sexual promiscuity and racial tensions will become commonplace, opponents of the MX contend. Inflation will be uncontrollable, they say.

With the influx of non-Mormons, political control will fall into the hands of people unencumbered by Mormon moral standards, say some who fear the MX, and the unique culture imposed on the harsh desert though sheer stubborness and unbounded faith may be lost.

Cattle and sheep ranchers are incensed over the plan, which will deprive them of what the Air Force calls the marginal grazing lands they lease on federal property. The ranchers say the desert will be ruined permanently.

That is not to say everyone in Delta opposes the MX. Some members of the business community have embraced the plan. Political leaders whose first choice is not to have the MX in Utah at all say that if the system is built, their second choice is to have the permanent base here -- not just the temporary jarring effects of having the town overrun by construction crews.

THE COLLISION OF CONFLICTING realities between the technocrats of the Air Force and the farmers of Millard County was both poignant and comic during the Air Force's environmental impact hearings recently at Delta High School.

A busload of experts, whose business it is to represent reality on paper, arrived along with a slide show to explain the MX. The farmers, whose reality is framed by laying hands on the land, asked polite but probing questions in plain, everyday language. The Air Force answered in polite, tortured abstractions.

A rancher who runs 75,000 sheep over the MX rangeland rose to ask how many sheep he would lose to the missile program.

The expert in charge of sheep was summoned to the microphone. After careful studies, the technocrat told the rancher, the Air Force has concluded that "zero-point-zeven of the animal units would be lost."

THE SHEEP RANCHER SAT DOWN, looking as dumbfounded as if he had been Daniel Boone trying to make sense out of an encounter with Buck Rogers.

Conversation among the regulars over the forbidden cup of coffee at the counter of the Rancho Cafe is dominated by talk of the MX.

A handsome car salesman in a baby blue polyester suit insisted that he favors the plan, not because he would sell more cars but because government leaders whose business it is to know these things know we have fallen behind the Russians in the arms race. That, he says, means Americans have to face up to their patriotic duty and accept the MX. "We need it," he says emphatically.

Next to him a farm implement salesman with two teen-aged daughters voices a worry alluded to by many of the menfolk in town. Rowdy young construction workers with money to spend and different morals might seem attractive to his daughters. The girls are used to speaking freely to everyone they meet, but he doesn't want them to speak to strange men.

"HOW AM I GOING TO instill a fear of them in my daughters?" he asks.

The man in charge of Delta's mental health, Dr. Richard Moody, says this fear is generally unspoken but pervasive among the men in Delta. Moody's caseload at the state-funded mental health clinic has already doubled -- "the stress before the storm."

There is cocaine and marijuana in the high school, Moody says, "and we're seeing a lot more teen-age alcoholics."

Moody, father of six, adds, "The MX scares the hell out of me."

The town's mayor, Lee Roper, a tall, softspoken, crewcut man, has had a taste of what is to come. The town is already full of strangers come to make a buck --"carpetbaggers" as the locals call them--and somebody recently tried to break into his house. So for the first time in his life, the mayor says, he is carrying a house key.

But he has more on his mind than housekeys. "Why should we be the nuclear sponge?"he asks.

SUE DOTSON, THE FIESTY EDITOR of the Millar County Chronicle, leaves no doubt where she stands on the controversy. In the window of her tiny, ramshackle office is a sign that says: "The MX Missile. Shall the Farce Be with Us?"

"This is a small, very naive Mormon community," Dutson says. To those who argue that the MX will bring money to the town, she replies that the base would be built on untaxed federal lands, the workers would be housed on federal property and they would buy their groceries at the PX.

"The only thing they'd be coming to town for is rowdiness. All it will do is raise our crime rate," she contends.

"We'd better loosen up our laws on bordellos because that's the only way we're going to get any of the money," she tells those who favor the missile.

Writer's luck now changing

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A. Goff Bedford lives, loves and dies a little with each character that he creates.

He has created a lot of them over the years. There are outlines on dozens of pages of 50 novels scattered around the house, where Bedford's typewriter begins clacking shortly after 4 a.m. each morning.

"I like to work on two plots at a time," Bedford said. "If I hit a rut or a stop sign on one, I shift over to the other and keep going."

He learned long ago that anyone who writes a book and tries to get it published will be traveling a road that's littered with disappointments.

"My luck is changing now," he said. "I've got a major publisher interested in two of my stories. You can bet I'm excited."

He is already in print with a novel, "The Life and Times of a Killer," which he subsidized and distributed himself. He has also written numerous religious tracts, plus a history of Clark County, Ky.

The central character of the novel is based on a sergeant Bedford knew while serving with the paratroopers during World War II. He says little about his war experiences, but talks freely about what he's accomplished "in the 61 years I've been on this earth."

He was born in Hamilton, Mo., but claims close kinship with Winchester, Ky., and Clark County.

"I think every third person in the county is a cousin," said Bedford, who still preaches at the Bethlehem Christian Church where his grandmother was married and his great-grandfather served as deacon.

Arrests called an aid to justice

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The acting Salvadoran archbishop calls the arrest of six members of the nation's security forces in last year's execution-style slayings of four U.S. churchwomen evidence that justice is possible in this polarized country.

"I think it starts this way. Everything has a beginning and moves forward," the Roman Catholic leader, Arturo Rivas y Damas, said Sunday. Earlier, he had criticized El Salvador's civilian-military junta for not making progress in solving the killings.

In Washington, the State Department issued a statement saying the arrests showed "the firm determination of the government of El Salvador to act against wanton violence, whatever its source."

The Salvadoran junta announced Saturday that six members of an unspecified security force were placed in "provisional detention" while the search for evidence continued. Defense Minister Col. Jose Guillermo Garcia said the unnamed suspects probably would be tried in civilian courts if the investigation turns up enough evidence.

Syrians fire missiles; Israel says pilotless drone hit

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer

CHTAURA, Lebanon (AP) — Syria said it shot down "an enemy reconnaissance plane" today over eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. Israel claimed one of its pilotless drones was downed by a Syrian missile while on a scouting mission over the valley.

Lebanese witnesses said Israeli jets also crashed the sound barrier over the Lebanese capital, drawing anti-aircraft barrages from Palestinian guerrilla positions in the heavily Moslem Western sector of Beirut.

Witnesses here said Syria fired three Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles, but a Syrian military spokesman did not specify that missiles were used.

"Our forces opened fire and downed the plane," the Syrian report said, apparently referring to the Israeli drone.

The shooting occurred as President Reagan's special Middle East envoy, Philip C. Habib, was in conference with Syrian President Hafez Assad at the Mohajereen Presidential Palace in Damascus, trying to avert a Syrian-Israeli military showdown over the missile crisis.

It could not be immediately determined what impact the downing of the torpedo-shaped, clipped-wing reconnaissance drone would have on Habib's efforts to defuse the latest Mideast powder keg.

Associated Press correspondent Alex Efty, sitting on a hotel balcony in Chtaura, heard a loud explosion at 9:13 a.m. — 3:13 a.m. EDT — and watched the first missile rise vertically from a site on the western side of the valley near here.

HUNDREDS of people poured into the streets of Chtaura, a town on the Lebanese-Syrian border, after the first missile was launched.

Moments later, two more streaked into the sky from a spot near the Masnaa border checkpoint. All three exploded in quick succession.

Efty said he neither saw nor heard jets prior to the launchings, but after the first explosion, a small, white object was seen drifting slowly away from the site of the first explosion, toward snow-capped Mount Hermon without losing altitude.

The missiles exploded with big bangs and flashes of red flame turning into puffs of grey smoke, Efty said.

In Tel Aviv, a military spokesman confirmed that one of the pilotless drones the Israelis have been sending over the valley on scouting missions was shot down by a Syrian missile.

Military sources in Israel said the nation flies two types of drone reconnaisance aircraft, both U.S.-made, the more sophisticated Firebee and the Chucker. Both jet-powered craft end their flights by automatically opening a parachute to allow a helicopter to snatch them before hitting earth.

Israel's insistence that Syria's Soviet-made missiles must be removed and Syria's adamant refusal has raised fears of a new Middle East war.

Israel reportedly had not sent piloted jets over the area since Tuesday when Syria fired missiles against Israeli aircraft, the first time the missile batteries saw action since Syria brought them into Lebanon on April 29.

Syria had claimed its missiles downed a pilotless Israeli drone at that time and displayed the wreckage Tuesday night on Damascus Television. Israel denied any of its aircraft were hit Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister warned, "We don't have much time" to resolve the missile crisis through diplomacy, as Habib pursued his three-stop Middle East shuttle trying to sell a compromise plan for resolving the crisis.

Habib left Beirut Wednesday night for Syria. He declined to comment on his two-hour meeting with Lebanon's President Elias Sarkis.

A LEBANESE government statement said Sarkis spoke by telephone with Syria's president Wednesday, and he reportedly pledged Lebanese solidarity with Syria.

The daily newspaper Al-Baath, organ of Syria's ruling Arab socialist Baath Party, carried a headline Wednesday that said: "It appears very clearly that the mission of the American envoy has come to a deadlock."

The American envoy earlier was in Jerusalem, where Begin told reporters: "We don't have much time because the Syrians all the time send more missiles."

Israeli news reports said Habib was offering a compromise that would include Syrian withdrawal of the missiles and Israeli agreement to limit its flights over Lebanon.

Israel claims it needs to fly over Lebanon without restriction to monitor Palestinian guerrilla bases, and Begin denied that the compromise would force Israel to limit flights.

In Washington, administration sources said U.S. analysts believe an Israeli-Syrian conflict is all but inevitable, although it is not expected until after Habib leaves the Middle East.

BEGIN HAD promised that military means would be used if Syria refuses to withdraw the missiles.

Syria says the missiles were brought in for defensive reasons after two of its helicopters were shot down by Israeli planes, and the Syrians contend they have an "unquestionable" right to keep the missiles in Lebanon.

The Syrians arrived in Lebanon during the 1975-76 civil war between the Christians and Moslems, and 22,000 troops remained to police the armistice. The Israeli-backed Christians say the Syrians have turned into an army of occupation.

Dog virus killing pups

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Veterinarians say a new outbreak of canine parvovirus has reached epidemic proportions in the Beaumont area, prompting animal shelter officials to put to sleep 30 puppies that contracted the ailment.

"The epidemic is at least twice as bad this year as last," said Dr. W. Curtis Wilson, president of the Beaumont Veterinarians' Emergency Association.

He cited a variety of reasons for the resurgence of the often-fatal dog ailment, including the possibility that the virus is now immune to a vaccine developed last year to deal with a similar epidemic.

Officials in Houston say the disease has tapered off there.

But in Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange, the disease is more prevalent this spring than ever before, Wilson said.

The stricken dogs were housed at the Humane Educational Council of Southeast Texas and were put to sleep in late April.

"We'd get in a new puppy and immediately it would catch the virus," said Dianna Cooke, manager of the animal shelter. "The shelter's entire puppy population had either become infected or had come in contact with the virus.

"We couldn't accept any puppies for two weeks after that," she added.

The shelter has established tighter screening procedures since then in an effort to prevent new infections, she said.

Dogs infected by the virus develop diarrhea, bloody stools, and nausea. Death can follow within 48 hours after the first symptoms appear.

Wilson said medical authorities still are unsure how parvovirus is transmitted. Isolation of a pet is not always an effective preventative, he added.

Manic-depressive illness transmitted genetically

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Medical researchers who studied Old Order Amish families in southeastern Pennsylvania have concluded that manic-depressive illness is transmitted genetically at a high rate.

Based on a five-year study of 12,500 Amish, the researchers say children with one manic-depressive parent have a 38 percent chance of developing the illness.

Dr. Janice A. Egeland, an associate professor in the department of psychiatry at the University of Miami School of Medicine, said the Amish were selected because their society is virtually closed to the outside world.

Ms. Egeland, who lives in Hershey, was scheduled to make the study's findings public today in papers presented at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association in New Orleans.

Ms. Egeland, the study's director, said the focus of the research would now shift to trying to isolate a "marker" — a common denominator found in all of those with the illness, such as presence of a particular blood enzyme, so that treatment could begin at an early age, before symptoms appear.

There are two forms of manic-depressive illness. With the unipolar form the victim suffers from chronic and recurring depression. With the bipolar form he has cycles of depression and mania — periods marked by high energy levels, insomnia, irritability and irrationality.

The study found 112 cases of mental illness among the Amish studied, and approximately 65 percent of them were manic-depressive cases.

Ms. Egeland said because Amish families tend to stay together, their extended family lines provide a unique medical research opportunity.

The 12,500 Old Order Amish who live in Lancaster, York, Chester, and Berks counties are decendants of people who broke off from the Mennonite Church in Germany and migrated to Pennsylvania about 1730.

The conservative sect does not use automobiles, farm machinery, or electricity. The sect also practices "shunning," in which members who violate the sect's rules are ignored.

From ballet to baton, parks department has summer beat

Midland Parks and Recreation personnel know of a way to keep people dancing through the summer on their tiptoes. The answer is to enroll in the ballet class — the newest addition to the department's summer schedule.

Enrollment for ballet and any of the summer classes will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday in the Parks and Recreation Building, 300 Baldwin St.

The city has designed special classes for four summer sessions. The first session will be June 8-19; the second, June 22-July 3; the third, July 6-17; and the fourth, July 20-31.

Ballet will be offered the first two sessions from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Persons from age 5 through adult can take the class for a fee of $6.

Another new class this year is jazzercise, which will start at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. The class runs from May through August and is held in the city gym, 300 Baldwin St. Fee is $2 per 45-minute class.

SWIMMING LESSONS are the coolest way to sail through summer, and the city department has a wide selection which ranges from infants through senior citizens.

Alamo pool at Alamo Junior High will be the site of most classes. It will host a beginner class for children 6-years-old and over, an advanced beginner class for those who made it past the first one, an intermediate class and a swimmer course for more advanced water lovers. The basic water safety and rescue course is for persons 11 years and older and who can swim 250 yards. This is offered in the first and third sessions.

An instructor's aide course is scheduled for Alamo for persons 14 years and older. They must hold the basic water safety and swimmer certificates. This is offered during sessions two and four. Advanced lifesaving at Alamo is for swimmers 15 years and older. They must be able to swim 500 yards. This course is offered during the first and third sessions.

A course for tots and parents is scheduled for Ulmer pool from 11:35 a.m. to 12:05 p.m. during sessions three and four. This involves the parents and their children from 6 months up to 3 years old.

Introduction to water safety is designed for 4 and 5 year olds and will be held in Ulmer pool. Times are 11 to 11:30 a.m., noon to 12:30 p.m. and 12:30 to 1 p.m.

An adult evening swim class will be held from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. at Ulmer pool during the fourth session. Fee is $7.50 per person.

A new class called adult evening fitness swim is slated for Alamo pool from June 8 through Aug. 20. Fee is $8 and the times are 5 to 8 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. Lane ropes will be set up for distance swim.

The ladies swim and stay slim class is scheduled for Alamo pool from noon to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday from June 8 through Aug. 21. Fee is $11. The class includes exercises, stroke improvements, instructions for beginner or advanced swimmers, lap swimming and sun bathing.

A water safety instructor course will be held from 4 to 8 p.m. starting May 20. It is held at the Midland High School pool. Students must be 17 years old and hold a current Red Cross advanced lifesaving certificate.

TENNIS LESSONS should keep the ball bouncing throughout the summer. The city is sponsoring tennis classes during the four session. There is a limit of 20 students per class and there are two instructors.

Children from 8 to 14 years old will take lessons at 8 and 10 a.m. Adults have a choice of 9 a.m., 7 p.m. for beginners and 8 p.m. for intermediate and above.

In addition to lessons, players have a choice of courts: Lee High, Midland High or Washington Park, all of which are lighted; and Midland College, Garrett Brown Park, Hidalgo Park, Tolbert Park and Ulmer Park.

Children 6 years old and up can try gymnastics to get the summer rolling. There are two one-week sessions slated for 9 to 10 a.m. The first session will be Jun 8-12 and the second is July 27-31. Classes will be held at Midland School of Gymnastics, 2817 Industrial Ave. Fee is $6 per person.

Free golf lessons will be given by Rex Worrell June 1-5 at Hogan Park Golf Course. All equipment is furnished for the 9 to 10 a.m. class. The course will cover grip, alignment, stance, orientation to golf, rules and regulations. The 12 to 17 year olds will meet from 9 to 10 a.m., those over 18 from 10:15 to 11:15 a.m.

Baton lessons for children 5 years old and up will be June 8-19 and June 22-July 3. Fee is $6 for the 5:30 to 6:20 p.m. class that will be held in the city gym.

THE SCHEDULE for supervised playground programs include:

—Alamo Junior High, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., June 8-July 30.

—Cerebral Palsy Center, 9 to 11:30 a.m., June 8-July 30.

—Rusk, Crockett, Fannin elementary schools, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., June 8-July 3.

—Bowie, Emerson, Pease elementary schools, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., July 6-July 30. All programs will be Monday through Friday.

In addition to the scheduled summer programs, residents may rent the Hogan Park Activity Center or recreational equipment, swim in any city pool, drop in at a recreation center program at Lee Freshman, Carver High or Alamo Junior High schools, use Hogan Park picnic tables or its golf course or rent the city's game bags.

Marking up the list of summer activities sponsored by the city Parks and Recreation Department are, from left, Gena Keneipp, registrar, and Em Carnett, recreation superviser. Registration for any of the summer classes will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday in the parks building, 300 Baldwin St. Classes include ballet, swimming, tennis, golf, baton and exercise.

Danny Zock, 2, of Saratoga, Ca., and his golden retriever "Shandy", also 2, got plenty of second-looks from spectators at the prestigious Del Monta Kennel Club dog show recently, as the pair shared a cage awaiting judging. Danny has been crawling into the cage at shows since he was six months old, his father, Robert says. And he stays in the cage the entire time the dog isn't performing or for lunch. "Shandy" is a champion and won in his class again, with Danny rating moral support.

Couple's relationship not common-law

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A jury in Midland's 318th State District Court in a 10-2 verdict has ruled that a once-married, but divorced Midland couple did not enter a common-law marriage even though they lived together for 7½ months, at one time had intended to get married and at least a couple of times had represented themselves as husband and wife.

The woman, a 22-year-old secretary, Jill Ann White, had sued for divorce and a property settlement in Judge Barbara Culver's court. But the man, Ronald Scott, a 25-year-old welder, had contested her allegations. Scott maintained that they were never married — ceremonially or by common law — for the second time.

Initially, the couple were married in April 1978 and were divorced in July 1979 in Midland.

Thereafter, Ms. White moved to Austin, and Scott was working in Beeville for awhile. But in February 1980, testimony indicated, Ms. White quit her job in Austin and, on her ex-spouse's insistence, returned to Midland, where they purchased a mobile home for about $30,000 home and "co-habitated."

Scott testified that they had intended to get married if their co-habitating proved that they were emotionally prepared to remarry.

Ms. White testified that her repeated efforts to set a marriage date went ignored. "He (Scott) said he wanted to wait awhile (before remarrying)."

"Did you feel like he had duped you?" Ms. White's attorney, Bob Evans, asked her.

"Yes," she replied.

Ms. White, who at one time confessed that she loved Scott "more than life," indicated her love had waned.

"I feel pity for the man; that's about it." She said that she "gave" freely of herself, but that he received and did not reciprocate.

DURING THE time they lived together in 1980, Ms. White said she worked, kept house and contributed to their living expenses.

"Did you do all the duties expected of a wife?" Evans had asked her.

"Yes," responded the blonde woman.

Earlier, under cross-examination by White's attorney, J. Michael Cunningham, Ms. White said she had wanted to remarry Scott.

"I was tired of living in sin in God's eyes," she had said.

Ms. White also testified that she "was his maid."

Testimony also reflected that the couple's joint bank account was in the names of Ron Scott and Jill White, that she kept her maiden name on her job while they were living together, that her co-workers assumed she was single, and that her driver's license and Social Security card reflected that she was single.

In his turn on the witness stand, Scott said he "most definitely" trusted his ex-wife and "rightfully so."

"We entered into a living arrangement (and not into a marriage)," Scott said. "We lived as roommates and friends and as business partners."

Scott also testified that if and when friends or anybody with whom they had dealings had assumed that he and Ms. White were married, he would hasten to correct their impression.

"I was quick to point out to anyone we were not married," Scott said.

One witness in the trial was insurance agent Jerry Enmon, who, in offering Scott an insurance policy in the fall of 1980, said he had asked Scott if his "wife," who was nearby, would be his beneficiary.

"'This is not my wife,'" Emnon said Scott replied. "'This is a friend of mine.'"

"He clearly indicated they were not married," the insurance man said.

IN HIS CLOSING arguments, Ms. White's attorney, Evans, said that Scott's stance in leading into the co-habitation was: "'I shouldn't have gotten divorced; I made a mistake.'"

"They (Scott and Ms. White) discussed the probability of marriage," Evans said.

Evans, in arguing that the couple were into a common-law marriage, outlined the three factors which, by Texas law, constitute a common-law marriage: agreeing to be married, living together as husband and wife, and representing to others that they were husband and wife.

Evans took the stance that Ms. White was the victim in the relationship.

He noted that, "Everybody thought they were married (until told otherwise)...She (Ms. White) wanted a ceremonial marriage, but they had a common-law marriage.

"This man strung this lady along until he could do it no more," Evans said.

In his counter argument, Cunningham insisted that there was no common-law marriage.

"IT TAKES TWO to tango, two to get married," Cunningham said. "Not one."

Scott's attorney said that Ms. White, by her suit for divorce, was saying, "'Punish this man. Look what the dirty old man did to Jill.' He suggested that the woman was being vindictive, and sued for divorce after Scott had declined to give her $5,000 after they had decided to part company.

Cunningham said that if the jury, which, in civil cases, must return at least at 10-2 decision to reach a verdict, ruled that the Scott-Ms. White relationship were a common-law marriage, then "It cheapens each and every one of our marriages."

In their verdict, 10 of the jurors determined that the couple were co-habitating but that they did not represent themselves to others as husband and wife.

Most on the seven-woman, five-man jury were married and ranged in ages from 29 to 59. Of the 10 who ruled that no marriage existed, four were married men, one was a 29-year-old single woman, one was a 59-year-old divorcee, and four were married women.

The two jurors who apparently felt a marriage existed between Scott and Ms. White was a 64-year-old married man and a 52-year-old divorcee.

Medicare reimbursement criticized

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's reimbursement system for providers of home health care "simply does not work" and is in part responsible for abuses in the Medicare-funded program, says a spokesman for the National Association of Home Health Agencies.

"The process is open-ended, needlessly complex and presents the wrong incentives," Hadley Dale Hall, president of the association, said in testimony prepared for delivery today before the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

The panel heard testimony Wednesday that some providers of home health care have used Medicare as a "get rich quick scheme" to defraud the nation's taxpayers and the program's elderly beneficiaries.

Under the $1 billion-a-year home health program, Medicare pays to have nursing aides and therapists treat elderly patients in their own homes rather than confining them in nursing homes and hospitals.

Most home health agencies are reimbursed by the federal Health Care Financing Administration through intermediaries such as Blue Cross. Medicare will reimburse all "reasonable costs."

"Its 'reasonable cost' basis is vague and undefined, necessitating volumes of regulations and interpretations," Hall said. "As a result, agencies find their income tenuous and unpredictable and their expectations constantly subject to retroactive adjustments. At the same time, program costs have escalated and the total number of Home Health Agency visits increased at the rate of 12 percent a year."

He recommended that, instead of reimbursing providers after the services have been provided, a "prospective reimbursement" system be developed. This could be done, he said, either by establishing a target rate based on past cost experience multiplied by units of service or through the submission of a budget by the care-providing agency.

"There may always be a need to recover inappropriate expenditures or fraudulent claims, but emphasis should be placed on limiting to the extent possible the circumstances where these activities may occur," he said.

Paul R. Willging, deputy administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, said a number of efforts are underway within his agency to control program abuses.

These include validation reviews of selected health care providers and a sanctions program to exclude providers found to have defrauded or committed abuses against the Medicare program.

In addition, he said, the administration has proposed legislation to deal with the problems, including a civil money penalty which would permit the secretary of health and human services to assess civil penalties against program abusers without resorting to full criminal prosecution.

In testimony Wednesday, J. Terrence Brunner, executive director of the Better Government Association, told the subcommittee: "We found evidence of fraud and abuse through over-billing, payroll padding and submitting fraudulent reports to the governsment."

He quoted an unidentified home health operator as saying: "Medicare bucks are falling out of the sky and the only thing is to have the biggest bucket."

Brunner, whose organization worked with subcommittee investigators to probe the workings of home health care providers, said some operators siphoned Medicare dollars from non-profit agencies they controlled through profit-making firms they also owned.

Avoid Aetna campaign now being organized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer leaders, charging that a major insurance company is trying to raise rates while making a healthy profit, are organizing a nationwide "avoid Aetna" campaign.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader and the Robert Hunter, president of the National Insurance Consumer Organization, said Wednesday that Aetna Life & Casualty Co. is using misleading figures to support a plan for higher rates. They urged a consumer boycott of the company.

Aetna, the third largest property and casualty insurer, called the statements by Nader and Hunter "inaccurate, misleading and a disservice to consumers."

Philip R. Roberts, Aetna vice president, said Aetna lost money in the first quarter of the year. "No insurance company can, over time, sell its products below cost and still be able to meet the insurance needs of consumers," he said.

Hunter, a former federal insurance administrator, charged that Aetna is telling state insurance commissioners that it 3lost $329.1 million in 1979-1980. However, this figure does not include $707.9 million in investment income, he said.

Roberts said the company lost nearly $9 million in the first quarter, a figure that he said includes investment income. The Aetna executive said the first quarter losses were "so severe that we must face up to it even if this results temporarily in a loss of business."

House OKs buying Big Bend Ranch

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House members Wednesday night cleared the way for a massive land trade with the University of Texas System that would give the state 190,000 acres of the Big Bend Ranch in far West Texas.

The resolution, which must be approved by the Senate, expresses the Legislature's intent that UT trade 190,000 acres it owns between El Paso and Dell City for 190,000 acres owned by the Diamond "A" Cattle Co.

UT would get the mineral rights to both tracts — an important advantage since mineral income from UT lands feeds the Permanent University Fund.

"I'd sure trade that way any day," said Speaker Bill Clayton, a party to negotiations for the property, who gaveled home the resolution by Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, without explanation or objection.

UT regents also would have to approve the land trade. Clayton said he had talked with regent Jess Hay of Dallas, and "I think what they (the regents) wanted was an expression of legislative intent."

The resolution expresses the Legislature's wish that the UT system lease the surface of the ranch to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, which would be expected to develop the new park "similar to the way in which Big Bend National Park has been developed."

The measure also "urges" Comptroller Bob Bullock to pay Presidio County and its school districts state funds to compensate for the taxes they would lose.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong has sought for about eight years to persuade lawmakers to buy the huge ranch for conservation and recreation purposes, but the multimillion-dollar cost got in the way.

Florence once opposed the purchase but became a convert after a trip to the ranch, which is in Presidio and Brewster Counties.

He and Florence said Gov. Bill Clements has conducted most of the negotiations for the ranch, which has 28 miles of frontage on the Rio Grande.

Florence said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby also has been involved in arranging the deal.

Florence, ecstatic yet a little disappointed he didn't get a chance to explain the resolution to the House, called the measure "a giant step toward the purchase" of the ranch.

The resolution says the ranch contains "areas of scenic splendors rivaled by few regions of Texas."

Terrorists kill two in Spain

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — Terrorists blew up a civil guard jeep today in northern Spain, killing at least two paramilitary policemen, and seriously injuring a third, police said.

The deaths raised to 27 the number slain this year in political violence in Spain.

The choice of target and method used in the attack indicated it was the work of the Basque separatist guerrilla group ETA, police said.

It came one week after anti-government terrorists killed three army soldiers and four policemen and wounded the head of King Juan Carlos' household guard.

Manager Trainees need to fill $95,000 per year position. It normally takes only 2 to 3 years to become a manager. $30,000 is your guaranteed annual salary while you learn, however for those who survive the first year average compensation is 45,000 due to additional sales commissions: 90 to 95 percent of your time will be in sales during the 2 to 3 year training period.

QUALIFICATIONS ARE TOUGH:
Please don't apply unless you meet each and every qualification:

1. Impeccable integrity and references.
2. 4 year degree from accredited college or high school diploma coupled with 2 years of heavy retail manager experience.
3. Willing to work over 60 hours per week (No Sunday or our of town work.)
4. Willing to take Polygraph test.
5. Willing and capable of taking instructions.
6. Not have any prior heavy sales experience such as real estate, automobile, mobile homes, vacuum cleaners, etc.

We have an extra ordinary benefit plan including a retirement profit sharing plan. We don't list with employment agencies and request they don't refer candidates to us.
