Nun Injured By Mugger Eager To Resume Visits

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A 62-year-old nun, mugged by a young tough on her way to visit an elderly nursing home patient, insisted on completing her afternoon's mission.

The nun's face was cut and one of her knees was bruised. Hours later, when Sister Marjorie Heltemes finally heeded urgings to have a medical examination, she learned that her pelvis had been broken.

Sister Heltemes had been knocked to the ground and her purse was stolen, but with the help of a couple of police officers, she proceeded to a nearby nursing center, where she spent an hour with 81-year-old Mary Sanderson. The woman heard about Sister Heltemes' misfortune the next day and was dumbfounded.

"She never said a thing, she never let on," the woman related. "I asked her, 'How are you, Marjorie?' and she said, 'I'm fine' — just like that."

Her visit completed, Sister Heltemes returned to the St. Mary's Friends office a mile away. The agency's director persuaded her to go to North Memorial Hospital for a checkup.

There, doctors discovered the nun's injuries. She was told she'd have to stay in the hospital for up to 10 days, but she wants to leave as soon as possible.

"I'll go back to work," the persistent church worker told a reporter from her hospital bed, her voice frail.

She said she needs to be with her "clients."

"She's the most beautiful Christian woman you'd ever want to meet," said Maribeth Jennings, director of the St. Mary's Friends office. "She's so dedicated to the elderly, she'd go through hell" to help them.

Sister Heltemes said she became a nun in 1942 because she admired nuns she saw helping others. "I felt I could do some good," she said. "There's a great need. ... There are so many lonely older people."

Despite the attack, she said she will continue her visits to Mary Sanderson and others in the neighborhood, which has a high rate of purse snatchings.

And she is concerned for the young thief.

"I feel sorry for him, and I wonder what kind of a person he is to knock down older people," she said. "For his sake, I hope the police catch him. He needs help."

Gambling Raid Nets 200 Here

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Police raided an Avenue A building about 8:30 p.m. Monday and found at least 200 persons engaged in gambling and $1,552 circulating around the tables, according to police Sgt. Doyle Nelson, who headed a group of nine officers making the surprise visit with search warrant in hand.

No arrests were made at the 4002 Ave. A location, but names were taken down and will be presented to the Criminal District Attorney's Office, Nelson said.

It was not clear this morning who owned the buidling. However, the location was most recently listed as the meeting place for the Serenity Group of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Police say it appeared the main form of gambling Monday night was the purchasing of chances which represented card hands in poker or blackjack. About 300,000 of the chances, double-layered slips resembling football game tickets which can be torn open to reveal the hands, were confiscated by police.

The blackjack chances were being sold for 25 cents apiece and could pay up to $50 on a win. The "Nevada Club" and "Play Poker" chances were going for $1 each and could pay up to $100, police said.

Also taken in the raid were a poker table, surveillance cameras, television monitors and an intercom system. The monitors and intercom system were hooked up, presumably to warn players when the place was about to be raided, Nelson said.

Blacks, whites and Mexican-Americans were intermingled in the crowd when police carried out the search warrant, Nelson said. No one tried to run when the raid occurred, but the majority of the players were definitely shocked, he said.

Nelson said one of the men apparently taking part in the gambling was equipped with a radio monitoring police activity.

"In fact," Nelson added, "he had the monitor in his hand when we walked in."

However, officers involved in the raid were not using a regular police radio channel.

Police say the raid was the result of three weeks work with a confidential informant. While it was not known who owns the suspected gambling hall, Nelson said a 72-year-old man was running the operation. No liquor was found during the search.

Assistant District Attorney Tom Parrish said promoting gambling or running a gambling hall is a third degree felony and conviction can result in from two to 10 years imprisonment and a fine of up to $5,000. Gambling is a Class C misdemeanor and can draw a fine of between $100 and $200.

Flash Floods Hit Arizona, New Mexico

A-J News Services

Steady rains pounded eastern Arizona and western New Mexico again today, adding to flooding that has washed out bridges, stranded motorists and forced evacuation of about 5,000 persons. At least five persons in Arizona were missing and feared dead.

At least five persons also have been killed in California, where three days of torrential rain, lightning and tornadic winds have spawned avalanches, rock slides and fires.

Two days of heavy snow in the Rockies triggered avalanches blocking four Colorado mountain passes today, while dense fog and ice made the mountain roads hazardous.

Flash flooding spread into southwestern New Mexico, including the Gila River watershed, and a heavy snow warning was issued for the northern and western mountains tonight. Four inches of snow are possible at elevations above 7,000 feet, according to the National Weather Service.

In contrast, a warm southwest wind set records in Lubbock and on the South Plains Monday, as the mercury climbed to 75 degrees in the Hub City. That topped the 72 degrees recorded in 1970 and 1977.

The low of 49 this morning erases the mark of 45 in 1926.

No drastic change is expected on the South Plains, with cloudy skies and gusty winds today and tonight. Colder temperatures are forecast Thursday.

In Arizona, Gov. Bruce Babbit declared a statewide emergency late Monday and ordered the National Guard into action.

A camper occupied by four persons was carried away by floodwaters early today when a bridge collapsed over the Agua Fria River on Interstate 17, about 25 miles north of Phoenix, said Sgt. Allan Schmidt of the state Department of Public Safety.

One man was swept into the Salt River at Temple, east of Phoenix, when he walked into the raging current beneath Temple Bridge today. Police Sgt. Jerry Warren said the man and his companions had walked to the bridge to watch the river.

About a dozen people were stranded in a river in the Winslow area of northeast Arizona, and helicopters could not reach them because of heavy rain which has been pounding the state since Sunday, Schmidt said.

Two persons were reported isolated with a construction vehicle in the Gila River near Kearny in south-central Arizona. A Phoenix couple has not been heard from since Sunday, when they reportedly went to the Flagstaff area to cut Christmas trees, authorities said.

"People are screaming for us," Schmidt said. "We just can't fly."

After the Interstate-17 bridge collapsed, the Agua Fria River also washed out U.S. 60 in west Phoenix, cutting off the city from main routes to Flagstaff and Las Vegas.

In Tucson, authorities reported that waters were beginning to recede early this morning, and there were no reports of injuries.

"We've been lucky," said Sgt. Bill Dudgeon of the Pima County Sheriff's Department. "People are staying put."

Widespread road closures virtually isolated some communities, and schools were closed to 37,000 students in districts west of Phoenix.

Hundreds of residents were evacuated Monday from Allenville and Holly Acres southwest of Phoenix. About 100 persons fled homes along the swollen Rillito River in northwest Tucson, and residents of Clifton and Duncan, bordering the San Francisco River in southeast Arizona, vacated homes today for the third time this year.

Huge Trade Deficit Adds To U.S. Woes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economic outlook for the United States darkened again today as the nation's trade deficit mounted and Mexico announced that it will increase crude oil prices to match those set by the OPEC bloc.

G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said the growth of the economy in the final quarter may be too strong, making it more difficult to control inflation next year. Miller also said the OPEC action will increase the risk of a recession in 1979.

The U.S. current account deficit increased $700 million in the third quarter to $3.8 billion, the Commerce Department said today, but it was close to what the government has been predicting.

Contributing to the increase was a deficit in the nation's trade accounts during the July through September period of $8 billion, up $200 million over the second quarter.

The deficits in the nation's so-called current account have been a major cause of the deterioration in the value of the dollar on world money markets, because it means U.S. dollars are leaving the country to pay for foreign goods and services.

U.S. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal estimated last week there are now between $600 billion and $700 billion in foreign-held dollars and dollar assets. As the total has increased, the value has fallen, at least during the past two years.

The third quarter payments deficit brought the total for the first nine months of the year to about $13.8 billion. The administration has estimated the deficit for the year will be about $17 billion, and the third quarter figures appeared on target with this outlook.

The payments deficit was $6.8 billion in the first quarter and $3.1 in the second. There was a full-year deficit of $15.3 billion in 1977.

The current account measures the flow of trade and services with other countries, including the return on foreign investments.

Goodfellows Filling Yule Gift Sacks

They look like elves, threading among king-sized mounds of candy, fruit and nuts and a toy store array of such items.

If you can imagine 8,600 sacks to be filled with Christmas goodies, you can see what a job there is to be done.

All this will be climaxed in the predawn hours of Christmas morning as hundreds of volunteers deliver the Goodfellows sacks to doorsteps of needy children in the city.

The volunteer Goodfellows usually knock on the door and hurry on to find another location to deliver packages.

But those who have lingered a moment say bright-eyed children come rushing to

Farm Workers Support Bargaining Rights Bill

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Members of the West Texas Support Committee of the Texas Farm Workers Union today announced plans to back legislation prefiled Monday in Austin that would give Texas farm laborers collective bargaining rights.

Bidal Aguero, a La Raza Unida candidate in the November county commissioner's race, read a prepared statement at a news conference in his office saying that TFWU members, with the help of support committees, will march from Muleshoe to Austin in support of the bill.

"Support committees will be mobilized throughout West Texas, the state and the county to get publicity and raise food for the march," said Marcial Silva, West Texas organizer for the TFWU.

Silva said the march, planned to start Jan. 27, will be financed through donations.

The legislation, entitled the Texas Agricultural Labor Relations Act, was prefiled by Reps. A.C. Garcia, D-Pharr, and Paul Moreno, D-El Paso.

Aguero said that similar legislation has been introduced in Austin, but that "it was put into the agriculture and livestock committee, so it wasn't brought to the floor. We hope it will be submitted to a better committee — the labor committee," he said.

Silva said, "We've done extensive lobbying before. We have a representative from Houston supporting the bill and we're writing legislators."

Silva said the farm workers are behind the bill. He said that last year in January during the onion harvest in the Valley, the laborers asked for the support of the TFWU.

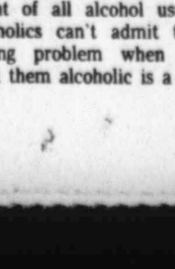

"They had no bath facilities, no water, and they asked for our support:" he said.

The organizer said that farm workers from Texas make up about 60 per cent of the country's migratory work force. "In California they're making $3.50 an hour, but here they get $1.20 or $1.80.

He said that although mostly mechanized labor is used in the harvest of such crops of cotton, "improving the conditions of hand laborers will help improve the conditions of laborers in mechanized areas.

"The only way to guarantee that growers will keep up with the cost of living is

Ex-Golfer Warns Of Liquor, Ads

By BOB WILLIAMS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Alcohol has a very sobering effect on John Hulbert.

The former golf professional readily admits he was an alcoholic, but says he has no guilt, remorse, depression or anxiety about his drinking past.

"I don't know a one of us that set out initially to become an alcoholic. We are the victims of a drug that has caused the addiction. We are the innocent addicts," he said.

Hulbert was in Lubbock Nov. 30 through Monday on a speaking engagement at several local organizations to "set the record straight on so-called problem drinkers" and to promote support for the hospital that treated him 12 years ago.

"The word alcoholism has come to imply mental illness, weak will, wanting in character in those who are afflicted," he said. He feels the alcoholic should not be "branded a psychotic social misfit, any more than a diabetic deserves to be damned for his inability to handle his sugar. Both are innocent victims."

Hulbert, 53, prefers to call an alcoholic an "alcobetic." "I retain the original meaning, though. Alcoholism, a disease; alcoholic, an addict."

Hulbert said he had a drinking problem for 14 years. He found relief in 1966 through conditioning treatment at the Schick Shadel Hospital in Seattle, Wash. Now residing in Euless, Hulbert spends all of his time lecturing and discussing the Seattle and Fort Worth treatment centers, which pay him for his lectures.

He left the PGA in 1970, admitting that "I wasn't a great player, but I was a good player, a club professional."

Hulbert said the federal government reports there are more than 10 million alcoholics in America. Six percent of the drinking population consumes almost 50 percent of all alcohol used, he said. "Alcoholics can't admit they have a drinking problem when society has taught them alcoholic is a synonym for mental weakness and a form of insanity. People don't have information that alcohol caused the problem," he added.

"Scientists declare that alcohol is a highly toxic chemical that acts on the central nervous system, producing a sensation of well-being, but at the same time impairing the centers of the brain that involve judgment, will power and control," Hulbert said.

"Alcohol has no nutritional value. It is a substance foreign to the body, and the body attempts to reject it by expelling it through the kidneys and lungs, and converting it chemically in the liver," he said. He added that alcohol produces a

Snyder Reportedly Leaving NBC

SNYDER

The magazine reported Monday that the star of NBC's "Tomorrow" show is being sought by ABC, possibly to be paired with Barbara Walters for a late evening news and talk show.

"ABC has also expressed an interest in Snyder as an anchor on 'World News Tonight.' And at CBS, at least one high-level corporate executive has made inquiries about Snyder's availability for the news division," the magazine said in its Dec. 23 issue.

Snyder is under contract to NBC until Nov. 30, 1979.

TV Guide said NBC recently tried to extend Snyder's contract by offering him regular appearances on the Segment 3 section of the network's Nightly News.

But Snyder declined the offer and is said to be waiting until his contract expires before making a move, the magazine said.

Horowitz Still Hospitalized

NEW YORK (AP) — Concert pianist Vladimir Horowitz, 74, is reported "bored but relaxed" in a New York hospital following surgery, but he plans to be home for the holidays, a spokesman for his manager says.

HOROWITZ

"He's resting comfortably and is in good shape," said John Gingrich of Harold Shaw Concerts on Monday. The renowned musician entered an undisclosed hospital Dec. 6 and underwent surgery Dec. 11. Gingrich would not disclose the nature of the operation.

Gingrich said the pianist, who had no performances scheduled in December, would postpone his January appearances and recuperate at his Manhattan home with his family.

Sakharov Threatens Hunger Strike

SAKHAROV

The Nobel prize-winning physicist claimed on Monday that Soviet authorities were deliberately holding up the visa application for his wife, Yelena Bonner. Both are prominent members of the Moscow "Helsinki" group, established to monitor Soviet compliance with the human rights portion of the Helsinki accords.

She told reporters she applied to the Soviet passport office for permission to travel to Italy in February 1977 and has been waiting 10 months for a visa, with no word on when it will be granted.

"If there is no answer by Jan. 3, I will start a hunger strike until my wife gets permission to leave," Sakharov told reporters. His wife will join him in the protest, he said.

Hearsts May Separate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's parents, blaming pressures brought on by their daughter's kidnapping, have separated after 40 years of marriage, a source close to the family says.

Randolph Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner, and his wife, Catherine, began living apart last summer, the source, who asked anonymity, said Monday.

Hearst has bought a home at Paso Robles, inland from the famed Hearst Castle at San Simeon on the California coast. Mrs. Hearst is living at the family home in Hillsborough, according to the source.

Patricia Hearst was kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army Feb. 4, 1974. She is serving a seven-year prison term for joining her SLA abductors in a bank robbery 10 weeks after the kidnapping.

She will be eligible for parole next July, by which time she will have served 28 months of her sentence.

Joseph Kennedy Plans To Marry

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joseph P. Kennedy II, son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, plans to set up house with an expert.

The 26-year-old Kennedy will marry Sheila Brewster Rauch, a housing specialist for the City of Boston, her parents announced Monday. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Rauch, 29, is the daughter of Frances and R. Stewart Rauch Jr. Her father is chairman of the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society.

Miss Rauch graduated from Wheaton College and has a master's degree in urban planning from Harvard University.

Kennedy of McLean, Va., graduated from the University of Massachusetts and works as a special assistant to the director of the Community Services Administration in Washington, D.C. He managed the 1976 re-election campaign of his uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Nazi Leader Eyes Job

CHICAGO (AP) — The man who threatened to lead a Nazi march through the heavily Jewish suburb of Skokie, Ill., has filed papers to run for a Chicago alderman's post.

Frank Collin, head of the National Socialist Party of America, gained national attention last summer when he threatened the march, which later was called off.

The 34-year-old Collin would oppose incumbent Democratic Alderman Kenneth Jaksy in the February election. Jaksy defeated Collin in the 1975 aldermanic election.

Tax Files Medium-Well Done

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Here's a new recipe for microwave cooks.

Take hundreds of inheritance, sales and income tax records — soaked by waters from the Kentucky River — and bake in microwave ovens.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

"It was an emergency situation," state Revenue Commissioner Maurice Carpenter said Monday of the inspired restoration project.

The first batch of files, waterlogged in last week's floods, was placed in an oven for 15 minutes, but the finished product was a bit well-done, said Carpenter.

Carpenter relied on trial and error to find that perfect formula.

"We found out that if you put a file folder in a microwave oven for a minute and a half, it works rather well," he said.

After the process was proven, Carpenter sent an employee to buy 10 microwave ovens, at a cost of about $200 each.

The ovens will be turned over to surplus when the revenue department finishes its marathon bake-off, Carpenter said.

Members Of Indian Parliament Vote To Jail Indira Gandhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The lower house of the Indian Parliament voted today to send former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to jail for a few days and to deprive her of the seat she won last month in a special election.

"No one can claim to be above the law," said Prime Minister Morarji Desai before the vote on his motion to punish his predecessor for breach of privilege and contempt of Parliament.

Speaker K.S. Hegde adjourned the session and issued warrants for the arrest of Mrs. Gandhi and two of her aides named in the motion.

There was momentary confusion over how Mrs. Gandhi's arrest would be made and her supporters threw a human ring around her in the lower house chamber.

She claimed the move was politically motivated.

"It is amply clear from the debate and from Mr. Desai's own statement that the conclusions reached are not based on facts of the case, but on past grivances of honorable (Janata) members," she said after the motion was adopted.

The outcome of the vote had been expected because Desai's Janata Party has a majority of 70 in the lower house. But doves within the party argued in vain that adoption of the resolution would work to Mrs. Gandhi's favor by making her a martyr in the eyes of many.

Thousands of protesting supporters of Mrs. Gandhi fought police in several cities Monday, and the violence on her behalf was expected to increase.

Mrs. Gandhi's stay in jail will be brief, lasting only until the end of the present session, which is scheduled for Friday. Her supporters also predicted that when another special election is held to fill the seat taken from her today, she would win it again by a bigger margin than the 55,000-vote edge she got last month.

In today's action the house voted 279 to 138 to pass Desai's amendment to the committee's motion setting the punishment for Mrs. Gandhi, said Hegde. The motion was then passed by a voice vote.

The ruling Janata Party, with 303 members in the 536-seat house, had the strength to push through the amended motion on its own.

During the debate, the 82-year-old prime minister said that Mrs. Gandhi always believed she was above the law and could not be judged by laws which dealt with others.

It was just this sort of thinking, Desai told the lower house, which led to excesses during the 1975-77 state of emergency. Desai and other Janata leaders were imprisoned during the 19-month emergency imposed by Mrs. Gandhi's regime.

Kaiser Wilhelm II, Germany's last monarch, died in exile in Holland in 1941.

Power Failure Cripples France

PARIS (AP) — An electric power failure hit vast areas of France and part of Switzerland today, but officials said full or partial service was restored to most of the country in 2¼ hours.

The power shutdown at 8:30 a.m. stranded tens of thousands of Parisians in blacked-out subway trains and caused huge traffic jams in the streets above.

Electricite de France, the government power monopoly, said by 10:45 a.m. half the normal output of 38,000 megawatts of electricity had been restored.

Full service was restored to the eastern portion of the nation and partial service in the north, southwest and southeast, said power company spokesman Maurice Faure.

There was no immediate word from scattered portions of Switzerland affected by the power failure because they are served by the French company under a power-sharing agreement.

Hospitals switched to emergency generators, and no deaths or serious injuries due to the failure were reported. Officials said all the stranded subway riders were safely evacuated from the Metro system's network of tunnels.

Joseph Takes Mary Of Nazareth As His Bride

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The Gospels are wanting in their narrative of the love story of Mary and Joseph which reached its climax on the first Christmas nearly 2,000 years ago. This second installment of a five-part Christmas series, "A Special Love Story," draws from respected but non-canonical sources for an account of their wedding.)

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

He had borne enough. The rabbi had examined him. The elders had taken counsel. He had been interrogated by the whole congregation of Nazareth. Even priests of the Holy City had come to inquire into his reputation.

Joseph's patience waned. Verily, they had tested him without quarter. He took a last driving swing with his mallet, the chisel biting deep into the seasoned carob timber. The questioning near made him doubt himself.

Yet, manifestly, all of it had been necessary if he was to receive the most excellent and genteel maiden, Mary Bath Joachim.

With his foot, he shoved the chips and splinters into a heap in the corner, leaving the unfinished wagon axle on his workbench. Sweat drenched his beard. The biceps of his arms stood out in great knots as he hung his implements.

Second In A Series

It was late afternoon, about the 10th hour, and he knew full well he should be preparing for the betrothal rites at the rich house of Anna and Joachim, but he needed this final exertion to quiet his agitation.

He shook his head in chagrin. Yaal, foolishness! At his mature age, he should not have been so unsettled by the matter. Yet each time his thoughts turned to the maid, his strength fled from him.

Likewise, the inquiries had tried him sorely. He had submitted humbly to them. He was not a vain man. But their precautions left him worn and ill at ease. It was as if he were a stranger in their midst.

Had he not dwelt and toiled among them these many years? Had he not walked in integrity? He had brought forth young sons and, since he was widowed two years past, he had lived circumspectly and in accord with the law.

Yet it was meet that the girl's mother, Anna, and her kinsmen, having the high rank in the priesthood, should take great care in choosing a fit mate for an only daughter, a cherished yachid.

Joseph brushed the sawdust and parings from his tunic, and strode into the house. The little ones were at the synagogue, being instructed by the chazzan, and thereafter would repair to the reception of espousal.

He poured water into a basin on the clay floor, stripped off his loincloth and bathed. Then, freshening the water, he dipped his head, scrubbing and spluttering. He toweled himself briskly and rubbed fragrant oil into his hair and beard.

Digging into his garment box, he shook out his white linen mantle and wrapped it on, buckling a leather girdle at his waist. He put on his Sabbath sandals, then fetched the gifts for Mary and her family from the shelf.

He tucked them into a pouch at his waist and set out.

It would have been easier if this had been a simple matchmaking, negotiated by the schatchen, who served regularly as go-between in arranging the terms between parents of young couples.

In Mary's case, however, great concern and attention had been lavished on finding her a rightful husband. Anna had called to her aid a learned and distinguished kinsman, the chief priest Zechariah, who also had been tutor to Mary.

A multitude of eager suitors had been considered, both widowers and young swains, wealthy and poor. Zechariah, after much prayer and consultation, had named Joseph, the plain hard-working joiner of Nazareth.

It had amazed him, and Joseph's heart had leaped. But so prolonged and scrupulous had the testimonies and proving become that at one time he had doubted his own fitness.

"I am an older man and have children," he had accused himself, "but she is young."

Zechariah had shrugged off the outburst, saying the determination was under divine guidance.

"Unto thee, Joseph, hath it fallen," he remonstrated.

Joseph's qualms arose not from any want of affection for Mary, but only from his own lowliness. He had scant possessions and only a meager abode compared to the stately house of Joachim. And the maid herself was the glory of the village.

He walked slowly up the hill, taking a path through the vineyard. She was, indeed, well-endowed, in body and comport, and his devotion burned in him. Of all her days here and in her training at the Temple, it was said:

"None ever saw her angry or heard her reviling. For her speech was full of grace... She was ever diligent in prayer and in searching the law, and was anxious not to sin by any word against her companions.

"Moreover, she feared to make any mistake in laughter or by the sound of her lovely voice, lest any insult or pride should show itself against her equals. She blessed the Lord without intermission."

Joseph approached the house. A new moon shone over the roof. The light of the moon, at mid-month, was the favored time for betrothals. From inside came merry sounds of voices.

His blood pounded as he touched the mezuzah at the doorpost, kissing his fingers, and knocked. A maidservant brought a water basin for his hands and feet.

"Blessed be your coming, Joseph bar Jacob."

The salutations surged around him.

"God cheer your heart, Joseph."

"May your tribe increase."

"Does it go well with thee, Joseph bar Jacob?"

"It goes well."

Anna kissed his cheek and hand, and led him toward his place. When he saw the bride, his knees turned to water, and the distance across the floor stretched out formidably.

He salaamed, spreading his arms, his cheeks red as fire, and mumbled his awkward praises.

His eyes downcast and fumbling with his purse-strings, he drew out his small gifts and presented them unceremoniously, a silken sash with the colors of her tribe to Anna, a fringed prayer shawl to the old priest, Zechariah, a cruet of spices to his wife, Elizabeth, a bronze pendant to Mary.

Amid their utterances of gratitude and the murmuring of the throng, he took his seat beside the bride, with her family on either side. The servants passed more sweetmeats to the young, and the guests moved by to make flowery speeches of commendation.

At length came the time for all but the chosen witnesses and family to depart. Those remaining repaired to a low table in an adjoining chamber where the record chest, containing the ancestral register, sacred scrolls, histories and other family treasures, was opened.

Two suspended lamps glowed above the table. The old priest's beard, glistening with oil, bobbed as he read the lists of births, tracing the Davidic lineage of Mary, and also the ancestry of Joseph, son of Jacob, of the house of David, of Bethlehem.

Their names were then inscribed together on the Galilean stick, or scroll.

Terms of the mohar already had been agreed upon — it was to be the smallest dowry deemed honorable, 100 dinari to be paid to Mary's parents within a year to insure her future against divorce or abandonment.

"Wilt thou go with this man?"

"I will go."

Joseph and the parents took the quill and put their names to the legal instrument of betrothal, the kethub. Two witnesses stamped and sealed it. This was the binding covenant of marriage, with the ensuing wedding its public celebration.

Inasmuch as she was virgin, and not a widow, it would be a full year before the marriage should be fulfilled, even though thenceforth it would not be unlawful for him to know her. She now was under his authority.

"Be thou the mother of thousands of millions," the old priest told Mary. "Let thy seed possess the gate."

The company prostrated themselves, facing toward the Temple, and the old priest blessed the Lord God of Abraham, and this union of his children, Mary bath Joachim and Joseph bar Jacob.

Nativity Scenes Include Notices

CHICAGO (UPI) — The city's traditional nativity scenes today included the Three Wise Men, the baby Jesus, the manger and a government disclaimer.

U.S. District Judge Thomas R. McMillen Monday denied a temporary restraining order to remove the scenes from City Hall and Water Tower Park, but ordered signs be placed next to the scenes disavowing any government connection.

In a suit filed Friday, the American Civil Liberties Union contended the nativity scenes promote Christianity and that government officials should not be involved in any way.

"This was not a final ruling," ACLU attorney Richard Mandel said. "It could be brought into court again. We may not have time to appeal (before Christmas this year), but the case is not dismissed. The case will be heard in due course."

ACLU attorneys argued the location of the scenes on public property — and the use of public money and public employees' time in setting up the displays — violated the constitutional principle of separation of church and state.

McMillen directed city officials to place at the nativity scenes by noon today signs stating the displays are not intended to promote any religion and are not officially sponsored or owned by the government.

However, whether or not the ACLU appeals the ruling depends on what the signs say.

"What the signs will say has not been worked out," Mandel said. "The city has to disavow the nativity scene, say it is donated and they're not going to spend any money on it and, in effect, that they don't believe in it."

Carter Close To Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may be close to a decision on what to do about beef imports in 1979, and informed sources say he is giving "serious consideration" to continuing this year's quota level.

Cattle producers were angered last spring when he suspended quotas to allow 200 million pounds of additional beef into the United States this year to help cool soaring retail meat prices.

Under a 1964 law, imports of certain meat — mainly low-grade beef used for hamburger — are adjusted annually to reflect U.S. production. This year's limit was originally about 1.3 billion pounds or roughly 7 percent of U.S. consumption.

Another sore spot was Carter's veto this fall of a bill that would establish a "counter-cyclical" formula to allow larger beef imports when the domestic supply is declining. It also would have reduced imports when domestic supplies are increasing.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

No Nip In Carter Whip

ALMOST TWO years after Jimmy Carter's inauguration as President, his aides still run a political operation that lacks the professionalism and sophistication expected of the White House staff.

Their performance during the Democratic Party mini-conference in Memphis demonstrated that the White House's political influence over Carter's own party remains tenuous at best.

More than two dozen full-time White House employes—who otherwise would have been working on political, personnel, legal and other matters—were dispatched as part of an elaborate, three-tiered "whip" operation to secure and hold delegate votes on Carter's behalf.

DESPITE THAT show of strength, however, the White House capitulated to Sen. Edward Kennedy rather than risk a floor fight over whether to open the Pandora's Box issue of national health insurance.

In another display of ineptness, the White House allowed two supposedly confidential documents—the chart identifying its "whip" assignments on the convention floor and the administration's instructions to those floor leaders —to fall into the hands of both reporters and political opponents.

The widespread circulation of the instruction sheet proved to be especially embarrassing because it included false claims that two White House-opposed resolutions contained language that "would nationalize oil and gas companies."

IN FACT, the minority resolutions did not propose any such action. They called instead for establishment of a publicly funded oil and gas corporation modeled after the successful Tennessee Valley Authority.

Finally the White House purposely sought to make the conference noncontroversial but failed to take into account the impact of Kennedy's appearance. Some cynics suggested noncontroversial was too colorful a description—opting instead for dreary and/or lifeless.

As a result, the senator—a possible Carter challenger in the 1980 Democratic presidential primaries—captured the imagination of many delegates and dominated Sunday news coverage of the conference in papers throughout the country.

Yessir, Mr. Carter certainly has everything under control.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

Loss Of A Friend

LITTLE DAUGHTER was watching television Saturday night when a message crawled across the bottom of the screen.

Suddenly, she screamed and ran to her mother, crying "look at those words! Look at those words!"

Roy Bass, her friend, was dead.

Little Daughter buried her face in her mother's arms and sobbed uncontrollably for five minutes, My Sweet Wife told me later.

It was a measure of Roy Bass' character that, for all of his involvement in matters of great public concern, his death should be taken as such a personal tragedy by a child who cherished his embrace each time they met.

When I learned of his passing as I stepped out of Lubbock International Airport—which he had dedicated as mayor—Sunday night, my own first reaction after disbelief was the recollection that Roy and Anita Bass were two faces I always looked forward to seeing at events we attended.

His puns were legend.

Whether before a church group in Lubbock, at a meeting of the nation's mayors or in London on a Braniff pre-inaugural flight, Bass always was equal to the occasion.

He and Anita have been a team. They have accomplished much for the community, always unselfishly and with dedication.

I'll miss him.

IN THE SAME week that Bass died, another longtime lawyer friend—Kim Harty—also was taken from us.

Bill Moss, a member of the same firm as Harty, puts it well when he recalls that Harty always had a literary quotation to fit the situation and that he was a master at applying commonsense to the law.

Bill Gillespie's death on Sunday, also of a heart attack, made it three shockers in a row. I had not seen him so much in recent years but saw him often during his county attorney days.

AND THEN I LEARNED of the death in a Houston car wreck of George Scott III, a young man who had impressed me tremendously when he was a student at Dunbar High School.

He was a leader at the time in the Teens Aid the Retarded organization. He demonstrated a potential for an outstanding career, especially one that would have him working with people.

Scott, whose father is assistant director of student life at Texas Tech and an active civic worker, went on to earn a degree in sociology and a master's degree in economics.

At the time of his tragic accident, he was a student counselor at Texas Southern University and, I'm told, was well on his way to fulfilling the bright promise he had shown.

The world, it seems at times, is full of heartbreak.

"Do you realize," Burle Pettit asks, "that in less than two years, President Carter has given away the Panama Canal and Taiwan—and kept New York City?"

WHEN A BIG corporation reports, say, a 20 percent increase in its year-to-year profits, there's always some Big Labor baron or demagogic Big Spender in Congress cluck-clucking about it.

They may completely ignore the fact that the 20 percent increase in profits meant an increase from a 1 percent profit to a 1.2 percent net on sales.

Well, t'other day, one of the big giants—Texaco—reported a DROP of 23.3 percent in its net income compared with the same period a year ago.

Imagine the squawk you'd hear if some worker's wages were cut by 23.3 percent. Didn't hear a word from the demagogs about Texaco's lower profits—but if they go back up by 23 percent next year, you can bet you'll hear complaints about it.

Paul Scott:

New Cult Ready For ACTION

WASHINGTON—To head off a series of future "Jonestown tragedies," Congress should immediately investigate the "new cult" being set up in the Peace Corps by Sam Brown, the new left direction of Action, the agency that oversees the volunteer organization.

For the unsuspecting poor blacks and whites being recruited from the cities' streets, there are growing signs that the Sam Brown cult, as the Peace Corps is now being called inside the administration, could be as suicidal as the "Jim Jones" cult that led 911 of its members into socialism and to their death.

Warning of the new left direction that the Peace Corps is taking comes from Dr. Carolyn R. Payton, who was forced by Brown to resign as director of the volunteer organization earlier this month.

IN A LITTLE-noted speech to the conference of Eastern Association of College Deans, the first woman and black ever to head the Peace Corps accused Brown and his new left colleagues of turning the agency into an "arrogant, elitist political organization designed to meddle in the affairs of foreign governments."

Stressing that the mission of the Peace Corps has been drastically altered since Brown took over as head of Action, Dr. Payton warns:

"Those now responsible for the Peace Corps seem to wish the organization to be engaged in a kind of political activism and advocacy.

"They would be pleased to have Peace Corps volunteers demonstrate overseas against corporations that engage in practices with which they disagree, or that market products they see as harmful.

"They would see the Peace Corps as a vehicle to allow unemployed black ghetto youth, as short term volunteers, learn about life in a black socialist country."

IN OTHER words, Brown and activists of the new left, which he has strategically placed within Action, have set up a program to indoctrinate poor blacks and whites in socialism and then turn them loose within the U.S.

In Dr. Payton's view, "it is wrong to use the Peace Corps as a means of delivering a message to particular constituencies in the U.S. or to import or export a particular political ideology.

"The Peace Corps has strayed away from its mission of promoting world peace and friendship," according to Dr. Payton, "and is trying to impose U.S. intellectual fads—political and cultural—on countries where they serve."

The objective is to assist these new left policymakers to use the President's Human Rights program to support revolutionary forces in the U.S. and the Western Hemisphere.

Examples of these groups include the Midwest Academy and the so-called Youth Project which have received more than $1 million from Action.

With more than $140 million of taxpayers money to spend, the new cult that Sam Brown is building could be more deadly than that created by the late Jim Jones.

For the time being, it has the official backing of the Carter administration and is aimed at the heart and the soul of the nation.

It is good to hear a black leader like Dr. Payton sound the alarm. And Congress and the nation should listen and then act to avoid another and much bigger tragedy.

Sylvia Porter:

Low Fares To Fly In On Overseas Vacation

PLAN AHEAD, stick to your schedule, perhaps (literally) get up early in the morning to buy your ticket—and with the variety of travel rates now in effect, you can save as much as 70 percent on a week-long vacation trip to Europe or the Caribbean.

With off-season, pay-ahead fares, for instance, a seven-day tour of Britain can cost a couple as little as $1,163 for budget basics vs. a typical $4,046 at on-season, first-class prices in effect only a week earlier or later.

Or a one-week Barbados stay could cost as little as $764 for two off-season against a typical $2,522 at a plush place there in-season.

In addition, depending on what's important to you, you can pick accommodations and flights almost cafeteria-style at just about any price in between the above limits.

A ONE-WEEK junket to Britain could stack up as follows, according to Pan Am and British Airways. More than a dozen New York-London fares might be in effect, ranging from a $1,406 round-trip first-class ticket ($1,694 for the supersonic Concorde) down to $253 for off-season standby trips, mid-October to April.

In between, you might pick a traditional "economy" (coach) seat for $764 on-season, $626 off-season; an Excursion ticket from $499 to $609; an Advance Purchase Excursion from $349 to $462; a "budget" ticket from $309 to $377. Be on guard against weekend surcharges which can add $60 to a round trip for two.

The $253 standby fare, a further $56 saving, is just that: you get up early, go to the airport, wait in line to pick up your one-way ticket, maybe repeat the process for your return.

AS FOR LONDON hotels, rates this year ranged from $15 per night per person double-occupancy to as much as $80-$110 at a luxury spot. Add $7 to $10 a night at most places for on-season rates. Meals run about $25 a day per person. Package tours may save you 5-10 percent for week-long stays.

You can save still more at other British Isle places, says the British Tourist office. At typical English country inns, rooms are $17-$25 a night; food about $15 a day; rental cars $140 weekly for unlimited mileage.

In most other European lands, plan on spending more. United Nations statistics show: London living costs about the same as New York; Switzerland costs half as much again; Paris, about 30 percent more; Bonn, nearly 40 percent higher; Rome, about 10 percent less.

CURRENCY FLUCTUATIONS make overseas trips a gamble, but advance pay plans can lock in rates for you.

For a Caribbean holiday, the on-season is mid-December to mid-April. And since even the most distant of the islands (Barbados or Aruba, for instance) are only about 2,100 air miles from New York vs. 3,450 New York to London, your week will cost less overall.

Your round-trip New York-Barbados air ticket via American Airlines ranges from $698 per person first-class down to $200 for advance-purchase, off-season budget-price midweek fares—a 71 percent discount!

(For a close-in spot such as San Juan, fares are about 33 percent under those to Barbados or Aruba.)

Hotel rates range from as little as $6 per person a night double-occupancy for an off-season week-long "package" at a small Barbados hotel to $45 at a more expensive spot.

On-season costs range from $12 to $74, with food about $20 a day per person. Bridgetown, Barbados, living costs are about equal to New York's, UN figures show.

Rates for comparable Holiday Inn rooms at various islands vary from $48 a night in season at Ponce and $52 in San Juan, Puerto Rico, to $64 in Aruba, $80 at St. Thomas, $86 in Barbados, $91 in Guadaloupe. Car rental rates range from $16 a day in Aruba to $21-$22 in San Juan.

TO ACHIEVE the savings you want, you must:

Shop at various travel agents and airline tour desks;

Make toll-free (800) calls to major hotel chains;

Plan far enough in advance, pay in advance, and stick to your schedule to avoid hefty dollar penalties for last-minute changes.

You may not want to pay the price in time and inconvenience to get the full 70 percent savings. That's your decision.

But you can manage it—if you want to.

John D. Lofton:

PE Not What It Used To Be

WASHINGTON—One of the reasons I've always regretted not going to college is that I missed the privilege of being exposed to those who know why we REALLY do the things we do. Take, for example, the simple act of going to the Seven-Eleven store.

For years, usually late at night when all the other stores are closed, I have gone to the Seven-Eleven to get such things as: a box of cat or dog food; some kitty litter; a can of cleanser; a roll of toilet paper; a box of Tide or some plastic garbage bags.

And, at the age of 37, I don't mind admitting that when I went to get these things I thought I was merely getting, well: a box of cat or dog food; some kitty litter; a can of cleanser; a roll of toilet paper; a box of Tide or some plastic garbage bags.

But, obviously I have been mistaken.

AN ARTICLE in one of the local papers here says that "some social scientists link the popularity of convenience stores to America's changing mores." Dennis Gale, a professor of urban planning at George Washington University, is quoted as saying:

"The Protestant Ethic is breaking down. People no longer are postponing gratification. Seven-Eleven stores help seduce people into doing what they want to do anyway. They are becoming an integral part of our permissive society, a society of impulse and convenience, a society of wall-to-wall gratification."

Now, it goes without saying that as a conservative I found all this very upsetting. Me, a contributor to the breakdown of the Protestant Ethic? Myself, an integral part of our permissive society?

And the part about wall-to-wall gratification, I wondered: has the professor ever been to a Seven-Eleven? Has he ever seen a micro-wave pizza up close? Or a frozen corndog? Or a Big'un sandwich? Or (yechhh!) a Slurpee? This entire subject cried out for further investigation.

IN AN INTERVIEW, Prof. Gale explained that the Protestant Ethic meant that one should keep one's nose to the grindstone, work hard, and "defer gratification and save your income and resources and so on for the chaos later on."

Fine, I say, but what about the present chaos? How long, in order not to undermine the Protestant Ethic, should I wait before buying kitty litter or toilet paper or garbage bags? Well, he says, these aren't really good examples. What he had in mind is delaying the purchase of such things as clothing, beef and steak, perhaps bacon, or buying a house or a new color TV.

When I note that it really wouldn't make much sense to put off buying a house or TV since inflation is making these things more costly, Prof. Gale says: "You're right, it probably wouldn't make much sense."

He adds: "I don't particularly feel strongly that the world is going to hell in a handbasket because the Protestant Ethic is not as strong as it used to be."

BACK WHEN the Protestant Ethic was flourishing, the professor says that the supporters of this Ethic would have deferred going to the Seven-Eleven to buy cakes, pies, shaving cream; the kinds of things that could've been made at home.

In the late 18th century, when the Protestant Ethic was at its apex, Prof. Gale observes that the practitioners of this Ethic used soap to shave whereas now shaving cream costs $2 a can. Thus the instant gratification via a luxury: using shaving cream instead of mixing soap.

But, isn't the real luxury the electric razor? Yes, says the professor, who admits using one, but most of his friends use shaving cream. However, he notes, had there been electric razors in the late 18th century the Protestant Ethic would have prohibited the buying of this gadget because of its high cost.

Really getting picky, I recite the dictionary definition of "seduction" as being the persuasion to do something wrong, or to tempt to evil.

I ask: are those shopping at Seven-Eleven being so persuaded? And how exactly is it "seduction" if people are doing what they really want to do?

I fear there's no end to the insights I've been denied by not attending college.

AN ARTICLE in the Philadelphia Inquirer attacks digital watches. Prof. Miles Orvell, director of the American Studies Program at Temple University, says that because of the increasing popularity of such watches, growing numbers of Americans have lost "the need to 'tell' time, to interpret the position of the hands on the round clock face, an act which places the particular moment within a two-fold cycle:

"The minute hand in relation to the hour, the hour hand in relation to the 12-hour half-day cycle...The more automated our technology becomes the more removed we become from the work the machine is doing."

Ah, the good old days—back when a farmer had to personally plow his field rather than dehumanize his relation to the land by using a tractor. Oh, well, I can see by the old sundial on the wall that it's time to end this column. Bye.

And then there was the rich Texan who bought his son a chemistry outfit for Christmas—DuPont.

It is more blessed to give than to receive. Besides, it doesn't clutter up your attic.

Berry's World

"You should have WARNED him that this year trees are more expensive."

Wall Street Analysts Hopeful Of Reversal In Dollar's Slide

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — As a chaotic year in the foreign-exchange markets nears an end, confidence is growing on Wall Street that the dollar's long slide has at last been reversed.

The rise of these hopes dates from Nov. 1, when the government announced a series of drastic steps aimed at supporting the U.S. currency, including a strong application of upward pressure on interest rates.

The plan drew a euphoric initial response from the stock market, where the Dow Jones industrial average soared 35.34 points for its largest single-session advance ever.

After that, Wall Streeters generally turned cautious again, waiting to see how much lasting impact the rescue effort would have. But week by week, as the dollar's rally continued, it attracted more and more believers in the financial community.

And now analysts see additional forces developing in the world economic picture which they believe should work in the dollar's favor in 1979.

"The dollar, although still ailing, is at least off the critical list," Argus Research Corp. concluded in a report issued last week, noting that since Nov. 1 it had risen by about 16 percent against the Swiss franc; 13 percent against the Japanese yen, and 10 percent against the West German mark.

Reinforcing that view is the prospect of a slowing U.S. economy, while the pace of activity in other industrialized nations is on the rise.

In simplest theoretical terms, a slowing of the growth rate of the money supply in this country, while monetary growth increases elsewhere, shifts the balance of supply and demand in world currency markets. Fewer dollars and a greater supply of foreign currencies should tend to push up the dollar's worth against those currencies.

"Monetary growth rates abroad have already accelerated, in part because of earlier dollar-support measures followed by foregn central banks," Argus said. "As a result, inflation rates overseas probably will be accelerating in the next year, while the U.S. rate is slowing down. The dollar is not likely to depreciate further in such an environment; indeed, significant gains could be achieved."

Such a development would be an apparent plus for the stock market. As Argus put it, "An improved dollar will make all kinds of U.S. assets — stocks, bonds, real estate, etc. — that much more attractive to foreign investors."

But the firm nevertheless cautions against expecting any immediate surge in stock prices, citing such remaining concerns as lofty interest rates. And an economist who recently toured several Western European financial capitals suggests that foreign investors share those reservations.

Ben E. Laden, chief economist at the Baltimore investment management firm of T. Rowe Price Associates, noted that European observers were impressed with the Nov. 1 moves by the U.S. government.

But he said they also expect continuing inflation problems, and a further rise in interest rates in this country.

"They are not convinced that recession will do much to reduce wage and price trends," Laden added. "Going further, they seriously question whether the U.S. can have a strong revival following the recession they anticipate.

"They are not convinced that the investment cycle has turned much more favorable."

Nursing Home Accepts Man

AMORY, Miss. (UPI) — Chester Scott, a homeless wanderer who claims to be over 100 years old, was saved Monday from spending Christmas in the county jail when the Monroe County nursing home offered to take him in.

Scott, who claims to have been born in 1874, was jailed nearly a week ago after being arrested for starting a fire in a restroom at an Amory ballfield. A sheriff's office spokesman said the man had been scavenging in the area for several years.

Amory city judge Mike Malski had ordered Scott to jail "simply because he had no place to go" during the holidays. Malski said Scott had only a long coat and gloves to protect him from the freezing northeastern Mississippi cold.

Officials at the nusing home, a county-operated facility for the elderly and poor, said they were making space available for Scott on a permanent basis.

The nursing home spokesman said the minimal cost of providing room and board for Scott will be deducted from the elderly man's social security or welfare checks. Authorities were trying to locate where Scott receives his checks.

Malski said Scott, who had a brush with authorities about four weeks ago after hitting an elderly woman, needed a "warm place to stay" and the jail was the only available spot.

Connecticut is sometimes known as the "Gadget State." It produced the first copper coins, the first stone crusher, the first football tackling dummy, the first submarine torpedo boat, and the first American-made steel fishhook.

FmHA Loans, Grants Expected To Be Lower During 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) — Loans and grants handled by the Farmers Home Administration could decline by as much as 20 percent in the 1980 fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1, according to budget sources.

The agency, FmHA, is the top unit in the Agriculture Department for carrying out rural development programs, including loans to help low-income farmers buy and improve their farms, consolidate debts and buy homes.

In the year that ended Sept. 30, FmHA programs involved about $11.1 billion in loans and grants. Total operations in the current year are estimated at more than $13.3 billion.

According to the sources, who asked not to be identified, FmHA operations for 1979-80 are being estimated at about $10.5 billion by Office of Management and Budget planners.

FmHA makes direct loans but also relies heavily on guaranteed loans in which borrowers get money from private lending institutions with FmHA as the guarantor.

One of the largest reductions, according to the budget plan, would be in agricultural credit operations, which totaled more than $5 billion in 1977-78 and are expected to be about that level this fiscal year.

But in 1979-80 those loans are expected to drop more than 40 percent to about $2.9 billion, according to budget figures that will be sent to Congress by President Carter next month, the sources said Monday.

The reduction in agricultural credit would be linked primarily to expectations that farmers will see better financial times and thus make less use of FmHA aid.

It also assumes that farmers will have better weather than many endured the last year or two.

Another large item involves the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978, which included a $4 billion line of credit that enables hard-pressed farmers and ranchers to refinance debts and spread payments over a longer period of time.

The provision allows the agency to lend up to $400,000 to each borrower. Congress set May 15, 1980, as the cutoff date for the "emergency economic loan" program.

Although the program has a $4 billion limit for loans outstanding at any one time, the tentative budget figures indicate planners expect actual use to be substantialy less than that, at about $3.4 billion.

Approximately $108.3 million was loaned in less than two months of the last fiscal year after the measure was signed into law on Aug. 4.

The loans are estimated to total about $2.5 billion this fiscal year, and around $750 million more when the program ends in the 1979-80 fiscal year, according to the sources.

Another expected cut in FmHa agricultural operations is in emergency loans to farmers for losses occurring from drought and other natural disasters.

Those soared to more than $3.4 billion in the last fiscal year and are estimated at about $578 million this year and the same amount in fiscal 1980.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — An inflationary oil price hike by producing nations and formal U.S. recognition of the People's Republic of China pushed soybean and grain prices higher Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Expectations of a weaker dollar and potentially larger trade with China combined to strengthen grain and soybean bids throughout the session.

Soybean futures, driven by continued strong demand for soybean oil and meal, gained 7 to 14 cents and shattered the psychologically important $7-a-bushel level.

Prices above the $7 mark in the past have shaken loose some of the large amount of soybeans held in storage this year by farmers hoping for higher prices.

At the close, soybeans were 7 to 14 cents higher, with January contracts quoted at $7.02¼ a bushel.

Soviet Leader Celebrates 72nd Birthday

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev celebrates his 72nd birthday today looking stronger and talking tougher than he has in months.

Diplomats say the Kremlin isn't planning any special fanfare and that Brezhnev probably will spend a routine business day to show he's firmly in charge.

"For a man his age he's looking pretty good," one diplomat said. A specialist in Kremlin affairs commented, "He seems to be functioning at a fairly fast clip."

Yet Brezhnev's frequent disappearances from public view can prompt speculation on his health. Last winter a serious bout of flu knocked him out of commission for several weeks.

The list of Brezhnev's alleged ailments grows longer every year. He wears a hearing aid and is said to suffer from deafness, gout, leukemia and emphysema. His slurred speech grows noticeably worse with time, reportedly because of his medications.

Despite all this, the Soviet president has recently stepped up his public appearances, making a point of greeting visiting heads of state and personally negotiating with them.

When Afghan Premier Nur Mohammed Taraki arrived Dec. 3, a fur-hatted Brezhnev stood on the airport tarmac for at least an hour in 7-degree weather waiting for his guest.

Later in the day, Brezhnev and Taraki spent several hours in negotiations that led to announcement of an Afghan-Soviet Friendship and Cooperation treaty the following day.

On Dec. 6, Brezhnev began his day by meeting at the Kremlin with senior American statesman W. Averell Harriman. Then he received Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps. That evening, he spoke at a dinner attended by several hundred American businessmen.

"Mr. Brezhnev seemed to be in good form," a U.S. Embassy spokesman remarked, noting that the Soviet leader stayed until the dinner's end — a rare gesture of late.

When a visiting delegation of U.S. senators arrived in Moscow late last month, one member confided to reporters he was told that Brezhnev's attention span was down to 90 minutes.

But after meeting with Brezhnev and hearing him say the Soviets had tested but never put into production a neutron bomb, that same senator remarked that Brezhnev was "one hell of a tough nut."

Decorate Packages With Reindeer

By SHARI LEWIS

Speed your gift on its way by putting a reindeer on the wrapping.

Here's how: Wrap the box. Put two strips of plastic or adhesive (not see-through) tape around the box, one near the very top, the other close to the bottom. With a pencil, draw a simple reindeer with a triangle for a face and straight legs (bent at an angle but not curved). The body should curve gently and be exactly as wide as the height of cotton swabs (use a swab to measure as you draw).

Go over your pencil lines with the glue brush. Lay the swab sticks right into the glue. The antlers, face and legs are made of pieces of the cotton swabs broken to the right size. The body consists of a neat row of swabs placed next to one another.

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: By tradition, the portraits used on our dollar bills are of great Americans of the past. Some are Presidents, and some are not. Quickly now, whose picture is on a $1 bill? And on $2 bill? A five? A ten? And here's the $20 question — who's on the $20 bill?

ANSWER: Washington ($1), Jefferson ($2), Lincoln ($5), Hamilton ($10), Jackson ($20).

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Can you divide a square into six perfect squares? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Talmadge Inquiry Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee, citing "substantial credible evidence" against Sen. Herman Talmadge, will conduct a full inquiry into allegations of financial wrongdoing by the powerful 22-year Senate veteran.

The Georgia Democrat said he is confident of being cleared.

There has been no similar Senate proceeding — which roughly parallels a grand jury indictment or formal court charge — since the late Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., was censured for misconduct in 1967.

The next stage following Monday's 4-1 vote will be a Senate hearing, conducted under rules similar to those in a criminal court trial and likely to begin in mid-to late January.

The committee, which approved "a formal investigation of possible improprieties for which substantial credible evidence has been found," has been conducting a preliminary inquiry for five months.

Meanwhile, a federal grand jury also has been looking into Talmadge's finances. He has not been told, however, that he is the target of an investigation.

The major allegation against Talmadge focused on a secret account at the Riggs National Bank of Washington. Established in Talmadge's name in 1973, it contained about $26,000 in unreported campaign contributions and $13,000 in reimbursements for Senate expenditures.

A former close aide to Talmadge, Daniel Minchew, says he established and maintained the account on Talmadge's orders. Talmadge denies knowing of the account and says Minchew is an embezzler.

Sources say the committee has checks in which most of the funds were withdrawn or converted to cash, but it is not clear who benefitted.

Talmadge has also acknowledged accepting thousands of dollars in small cash gifts, clothing and services from constituents.

He has returned $37,125 in reimbursements for Senate expenses improperly claimed between 1972 and 1977. Talmadge said the repayment was made after his own audit turned up errors by his staff.

Those matters and others will be aired by the committee, whose membership may be drastically different by January, when the 96th Congress convenes.

Voting for a broadened inquiry Monday were the committee chairman, Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill.; vice-chairman Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M.; Charles Mathias, R-Md.; and Robert Morgan, D-N.C.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, would have voted with the majority were he present, Stevenson said.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the only committee member to vote against expanding the inquiry, said he opposes the existence of parallel investigations.

"The rights of all principals in the matter would be better protected if the grand jury is allowed to move ahead with its investigation," Ribicoff said.

Eventually, the committee must decide whether to clear Talmadge, vote to censure his handling of finances, or strip him of the chairmanship of the Senate Agriculture Committee and his seniority on the Senate Finance Committee.

Stevenson said after Monday's vote that a formal statement of charges and a summary of evidence would be quickly given to Talmadge, who is now in Georgia. Copies were then to be made public, perhaps today.

Collection Firm Agrees To Fine

MONTPELIER Vt. (UPI) — A New York bill collection agency, accused of illegally threatening debtors with arrest, has agreed to pay the state $1,822 in costs and fines, Attorney General M. Jerome Diamond announced.

Diamond said Monday his office received complaints in 1977 from consumers who said Ray Mar Recoveries of Guilderland, N.Y. told them they would be subject to arrest unless they paid their bills immediately.

That practice, Diamond said, violated his office's debt collection regulations.

In addition, he said Ray Mar, which handles debt collections for several food chains, failed to identify itself in communications with debtors and caused them to make unnecessary long distance telephone calls.

In a stipulation filed in Washington County Superior Court, the firm agreed to pay a $1,000 civil penalty and reimburse the state $822 it spent to investigete and prosecute the complaints.

It also agreed to refrain from threatening debtors with arrest and to otherwise abide with state regulations.

Government Readies Safe Product List

WASHINGTON (AP) — At last! A government list of the things that won't cause cancer.

However, the Generally Recongized as Safe list — GRAS for short — is under review and won't be ready for public consumption until June.

But it can be reported that one thing that will stay on the safe list is ascorbic acid. That's the substance in oranges and other citrus fruit more commonly known as vitamin C.

The GRAS list was created in 1958 and includes substances that have been in use for years and were generally regarded as safe. It is being reviewed as a result of the 1969-70 scare over cyclamates — which will not be among the estimated 600 items to be on the revised list.

"The fact is that most things do not cause cancer," said Wayne Pines, a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration. "But there have been many cancer scares in the past few years emanating from a multitude of sources.

"The FDA has been very conservative about scaring the public. We make sure our information is very solid before we label something a carcinogen (cancer-causing substance)."

In fact, he said, the only thing the FDA has moved to ban lately as a cancer-causer is saccharin. The agency is now looking into nitrites.

Here are some of the items on the safe list that have already been reviewed and what was found.

—Caffeine: added to cola and other carbonated beverages; no studies showing a danger at current levels of use. However, the committee was divided on its potential, some fearing a hazard for children exposed to daily doses. Long-term study was recommended.

—Monosodium glutamate: used as a flavor enhancer and no evidence of hazard to adults. Further study recommended, with suggestion that it no longer be added to baby food.

—Licorice: used for flavoring; no evidence of danger in normal use, although over-indulgence can cause temporary high blood pressure.

—Sugar (sucrose): no evidence of harmful effects other than tooth decay; further study suggested.

—Nutmeg and mace: no evidence of hazard; further study suggested.

Santa Claus Visit Delayed By Thief

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — Santa Claus was going to visit M.E. Pearson Elementary School Friday, but now he'll either have to cancel or borrow a suit.

A $70 Santa Claus suit purchased by the school's Parent-Teacher Association was stolen early Monday. Authorities said a burglar broke into the school and took a sealed box containing the suit.

"We were planning for Santa Claus to visit Friday," said Ruth Wentler, school principal. "Now we don't know what we're going to do.

"We hope whoever took it will have a change of heart and return it. Otherwise, we'll have to find a substitute."

Exchanges With China Will Not Be Immediate

Follow-Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recognition of communist China will open the door to broader, easier exchanges with the mainland for American businessmen, students and tourists, State Department officials say. But they add that the exchanges won't be automatic or immediate.

Americans wanting to visit China will not be able to simply make an airline reservation and go, as they might to Europe.

For one thing, direct air connections won't begin until the two governments negotiate a treaty allowing such flights.

For another, the Chinese strictly control how many foreigners can enter the country, in part because of the limited numbers of translators and hotel rooms.

A spokesman at the Chinese liaison office in Washington said that, while his government hoped the number of American tourists would increase, the rise probably would be gradual. Roughly 10,000 Americans have been admitted to China since ping-pong diplomacy began in 1971.

The tourists usually must be in a group taking guided tours, which cost more than $2,000 per person for two weeks.

Tourism is one of several exchanges with the Chinese that, despite normalization, the United States can still only encourage Peking to expand.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke said he has told Chinese leaders American understanding of their country would be enhanced if they allow U.S. news organizations to open permanent bureaus there. But normalization will not automatically allow American reporters into the country.

On the business level, Americans are already trading with China at a rate of about $1 billion annually. Until recently, the trade was largely in agricultural goods.

In the last year, however, American firms have signed deals for the construction of hotels and are dickering for the right to explore for oil and to sell such high-technology items as communications satellites.

In the future, American officials said, they expect to negotiate new trade arrangements that will allow China to finance purchases through the U.S. Export-Import Bank.

They said no decision has been made on whether to ask Congress to grant China most-favored-nation status, allowing it the most preferential tariff and trade terms offered by the United States.

As for Taiwan, Holbrooke said President Carter's announcement Friday that the United States was ending formal relations would have no discernible impact on American trade, which amounts to about $7.5 billion yearly.

The head of the private U.S.-Republic of China Economic Council, former Treasury Secretary David Kennedy, said he did not expect Peking to interfere with trade to Taiwan, the eighth largest trading partner for the United States.

U.S. officials said they expect to set up a corporation empowered by Congress to transact all the business the government now conducts with Taiwan.

Officials said they foresee the corporation issuing visas, either directly or through a mail link with Hong Kong. They also said they would instruct the U.S. Immigration Service to continue honoring Republic of China passports.

Militarily, Holbrooke said, there was a possibility the United States might make additional arms sales to Taiwan before the year's end. But other officials, speaking privately, said there was no chance for a reversal of the recent decision not to sell Taiwan F-4, F-16 or F-18 jets, which have the range to reach the mainland.

In the military sales pipeline, according to the Pentagon, Taiwan has 24 Hawk surface-to-air missiles and about 600 Sidewinder air-to-air missiles.

The administration has offered to sell an additional 48 F-5E fighters equipped with Maverick air-to-surface missiles. Taiwan has not formally accepted the offer.

Meanwhile, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Monday proposed a special congressional session to "work out guidelines which this country can follow in our future relations with Taiwan."

His move, however, stood little change of winning approval from the president or backing from Senate leadership.

Goldwater is also expected to urge the Congess to insist on the right to approve the abrogaton of the 1955 U.S.-Taiwan defense treaty.

Cleveland's Unionized Workers Have No Immediate Strike Plan

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The city's 10,000 unionized workers said today they have no immediate intention of calling a general strike to protest planned layoffs and would work to "save our city" from fiscal disaster.

The city was brought to the brink of bankruptcy Friday when it defaulted on $15.5 million in short-term notes.

The administration of Mayor Dennis Kucinich got more relatively good news earlier when the six banks holding the notes said they planned no immediate court action to collect the money owed them.

Kucinich said Monday he would be forced to lay off 2,000 city workers including 875 police officers and 450 firefighters by Jan. 2 because of the city's financial problems.

Union leaders said the layoffs would throw the nation's 17th-largest city into chaos, leaving it virtually unprotected against crime and fires.

The union leaders met today to discuss a proposal by Kucinich to increase the city's income tax by 0.5 percent and a counter proposal made by City Council to sell the debt-ridden Municipal Light System to come up with funds to bail the city out.

The council has said it would support the tax proposal if Kucinich would sell the light plant to Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., which he has refused to do, stating it would give CEI a monolopy.

"A coalition has been formed and we intend to act as a catalyst," said Jack Gannon president of the Firefighters Union. "We intend to find out the facts as much as we can on the municipal light plant and the tax hike issue. This union coalition going to work to try and save our city an our jobs."

Gannon, in a statement, said public accountants working for the unions today went over the city's books to see just how much money is available.

The union officers would not answer any questions at a news confeence following the session and all questions were fielded by their attorneys.

William Summers, attorney for the Firefighers Union, was asked about the possiblity of a general strike.

"We're not running off half-cocked," he replied. "That doesn't accomplish anything."

He was also asked about court-action to stop Kucinich's plans for the layoffs and Summers replied, "the fact that we have not gone to court does not mean that we won't file a lawsuit."

Police Arrest Kucinich Kin

CLEVELAND (AP) — While Cleveland Mayor Dennis Kucinich was at one bank withdrawing his savings in a well-publicized political protest, his youngest brother was allegedly robbing a bank elsewhere in the city, police said.

The mayor was at a Cleveland Trust Co. branch about noon Monday, and with reporters and photographers looking, closed his personal accounts, charging that the bank had sabotaged his plan to keep the city from going into default last Friday.

At 11:55 a.m. police and FBI agents said a man wearing a red knit cap and sunglasses walked into a branch of Central National Bank, another of the six banks involved in Cleveland's default. He carried a suitcase and handed a teller a Christmas card with "All your $ or die," written on its back.

When the robber fled with the suitcase filled, branch manager William Csibi followed him outside and got a description.

Plainclothes patrolmen David Woike and Donald Velardo said Perry Kucinich, 22, was reading the Christmas card and smiling as they spotted him along East 49th Street, a short distance from his home.

When they identified themselves, Perry started to run, but Woike tackled him, the officers reported.

Police said they found the cash totaling $1,396 in the suitcase.

Bail was set at $20,000 and he was taken to Cuyahoga County Jail.

Jones' Confession Prompts Charges

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — Stephan Jones, son of Peoples Temple leader Jim Jones, was charged with murder today in the throat-slashings of a cult member and three of her children in Georgetown Nov. 18, the day of the mass deaths at the Jonestown camp.

The charges stemmed from a bewildering "confession" the 19-year-old Jones made at a preliminary hearing Monday for Charles Beikman, another cult member already charged in the slayings.

The prosecutor had asked Jones whether he was part of a conspiracy to commit murder, and the young man, apparently irritated by the tough interrogation, snapped back, "Yeah, I killed them and was just trying to throw it off on Chuck (Beikman)."

Jones had just testified, however, that he was not at the house where the murders took place, testimony backed up by other cult members. At the request of both prosecutor and magistrate, he then repeated the supposed confession three times, but later Monday he told reporters he was just "mad. I'm tired of being pushed around."

When the court came back into session today, Magistrate Desmond Christian granted a prosecution motion to suspend the Beikman hearing until Jan. 10. Then the charges against Jones were read out.

Both Jones and the 43-year-old Beikman were ordered held without bail. As he was led from the prisoner's dock, Jones said, "This is absurd. I wasn't even there."

They are charged in the killing of Sharon Amos, 42, and her three children, aged 9 to 21, who were found with their throats slit at the cult's Georgetown headquarters. They also are accused of attempted murder of a 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. Amos who was slashed but survived.

They were slain the day more than 900 Temple members died at the Jonestown camp, 150 miles northwest of here, in a frenzy of suicide and murder at the command of Jones' father. Jim Jones also died.

Stephan Jones had testified earlier in the hearing that at the time of the Amos slayings he was at a hotel in Georgetown, where he had come with the Peoples Temple basketball team.

Court Refuses Probation Plea

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A Criminal Court judge has turned down a probation request from a former Texas socialite serving three years in a Tennessee prison for fraud.

In exchange for the sentence, Margaret Medders, 60, pleaded guilty Oct. 31 to defrauding three Memphis women. Her lawyer, Assistant Public Defender Ed Lenow, wanted the sentence suspended and Mrs. Medders placed on probation because she suffered from manic-depression.

"Mrs. Medders is certainly a charming lady, but I think her charm makes her a threat to herself and society," Judge James C. Beasley said Monday.

Mrs. Medders stood impassively as the judge ruled. She was then returned to the Shelby County jail where she has spent the past four months since her extradition to Memphis from Texas.

Lenow said Mrs. Medders will be returned to Texas where she faces a five-year term for not paying a $352 bill at the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas in 1976. After serving the Texas sentence, she will be sent to the Tennessee State Penitentiary in Nashville, he said.

A Shelby County grand jury accused her in 1976 of selling interests in a bogus publishing company to one woman. She was accused of selling to two other women a tract of Tennessee land which she said contained coal but did not.

Daughter Born To Judy Carter

ATLANTA (AP) — Judy Carter, President Carter's daughter-in-law, gave birth to a 7-pound, 11-ounce girl about 12:30 p.m. today, a source close to the family said.

The source described both the mother and the baby as doing fine. It is her second child.

Mrs. Carter, who had been expecting to give birth any day, had entered Crawford Long Hospital's maternity ward earlier today.

IBM's Stock Split Plans Boost Mart

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines' plans for a 4-for-1 stock split helped the stock market post a modest gain today, halting Monday's sharp decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 17.84 on Monday, recovered 1.04 to 788.55 by noon today.

Gainers outpaced losers by about a 5-3 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market had come under heavy pressure Monday after the weekend decision by oil-exporting countries to raise prices by 14.5 percent in stages next year.

But the atmosphere on Wall Street brightened a bit this morning when IBM announced plans for a 4-for-1 split next spring and an increase in its quarterly dividend from $2.88 to $3.44 a share.

The possibility of a split, which would be IBM's first since a 5-for-4 distribution in 1973, had been the subject of intense on-and-off speculation for more than a year in the financial community.

Analysts noted that favorable news involving IBM often gives the general market a lift since the company is regarded as a premier growth company, and its stock is owned by more investing institutions than any other issue.

IBM shares were up ⅞ at 271 before trading in them was halted for dissemination of the company's announcement.

The NYSE's composite index rose .17 to 52.37, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up .22 at 145.90.

Volume on the Big Board came to 12.10 million shares at noontime, down from 17.37 million at the same point Monday.

Begin Gets Labor Backing

By United Press International

The opposition Labor party swung behind Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government today in a unified Israeli stand, criticizing the United States for backing four proposals to amend the draft peace treaty with Egypt.

Begin largely reiterated Israels rejection of the proposals during a 35-minute statement that opened a Knesset (parliament) debate on the stalled treaty negotiations.

"The state of Israel will not sign a non-peace treaty with Egypt," he told the 120-member body.

Obviously alluding to U.S. support of the proposals rejected Friday, Begin said, "there is no one who can demand of us that we endanger with our own hands the security of Israel, that we sign a document that is not a peace treaty, that its main sections are emptied of their contents."

In Cairo, Egypt rejected an Israeli claim that it had submitted new last-minute proposals in their stalled peace treaty negotiations. But acting Foreign Minister Butros Ghali said Egypt is prepared to resume the negotiations.

In Cairo Ghali told envoys from east and western Europe that Egypt was prepared to resume the negotiations "and has the necessary patience. Peace, an overall peace based on justice, merits patience," he said.

But Egypt's small leftist party urged the government to break off peace negotiations with Israel and coordinate strategy with other Arab countries at a summit of chiefs of state. The call was made by the Nationalist Unionist Progressive Rally, which has only two deputies in the 360-man Parliament. The party has opposed President Anwar Sadat's peace moves consistently.

In the Israeli parliament, Begin reiterated Israel's willingness to sign the U.S.-backed draft treaty as approved by the cabinet Nov. 21.

"The interpretive papers that are supported by the government of the United States do not enable the government of Israel to do this (sign the draft treaty) and will not enable it to do this in the future," he said.

"We must be ready," Begin said, "...to reject the Egyptian demands which endanger the welfare of our people, even if they are supported by the government of the United States."

He said the United States must "recognize its mistake" that Israel "is an important factor in the free word (and) it is forbidden to weaken it but must strengthen it..."

The leader of the opposition Labor party, Shimon Peres, sided with Begin's government in criticizing the United States for its support of the four proposals which the cabinet rejected Friday.

"We honor the United States and seek its friendship," Peres said. "But friendship, yes — dependence, no. Influence, yes — dictates, no. Disagreements, yes, capitulation, no."

But although Peres joined Begin in criticizing Washington, he made it clear the Labor Party will not fully support the government's position in the treaty negotiations. Labor voted in favor of the Camp David peace accords in September.

"We are not an opposition party in opposition to peace," he said. "We are in opposition to the government's peace plan."

The Labor party opposes self-government for the Palestinians in the occupied West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip because it does not want Israel to rule over 1.1 million Arabs. It does not want to make what it terms "territorial compromise."

"We don't want territorial compromise," Peres said. "We want defensible borders."

Ghali's meeting with the ambassadors In Cairo represented the first phase of a diplomatic offensive designed to explain the Egyptian position following Israeli's rejection of Egyptian-American ideas last week. Ghali will meet with envoys of other nations during the next two days.

Ghali told the European ambassadors the "principal problem" in the negotiations was "linkage or the synchronization of the steps that are taken in Sinai with the steps that are taken in the West Bank and Gaza.

Ghali rejected the Israeli claim that the Egyptian demand was made only at the last minute, and after the Israeli cabinet had approved the text of the treaty.

"On Oct. 14, two days after the negotiations opened, we submitted a memorandum on the West Bank and Gaza to U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance," said Ghali.

"On Oct. 21, and following the personal intervention of Prsident Carter, we reached a compromise solution," he said. "This called for exchanging identical letters specifying the dates for elections in Gaza and the West Bank as well as the powers of the autonomous councils," he said.

"This proves that linkage was given priority from the very beginning," Ghali said.

OIL GREASES SLIDE — New York Stock Exchange brokers anxiously watch the big board Monday as selling orders sent the market on a sharp slide. The break was blamed on the oil price increases announced by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which will boost the cost of gasoline and fuel oil for Americans and hike inflation. Troops, Demonstrators Clash In Iranian Cities

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — More dead and wounded were reported in two Iranian cities after troops opened fire on demonstrators against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, but official sources said today a quick-thinking officer headed off further violence in one of the cities.

As many as 20 protesters were wounded Monday in Tabriz, 330 miles northwest of Tehran and close to the Turkish border, diplomats said. Other unconfirmed reports said several were killed, but official sources only three were wounded and that an army colonel averted further bloodshed by appealing to the protesters' sense of brotherhood.

The opposition National Front claimed scores of soldiers joined the anti-shah rallies in Tabriz. But official sources denied this, credited a colonel named Ahmadi with defusing the explosive situation, and said his men and the demonstrators marched together for an hour in a show of friendship before dispersing.

They said Ahmadi pulled up between the troops and protesters in an armored personnel carrier, shouting to the crowd of about 600 through a bullhorn. "He spoke to them in Turkish, the language most commonly used in Tabriz," a source said.

The source said Ahmadi spoke for 15 minutes of love, brotherhood and friendship, that one of the protest leaders approached him at the end of the speech and that they exchanged kisses on the cheek, a traditional sign of friendship among men in Iran, before the march of friendship got underway.

Several demonstrators also were wounded in the holy city of Qum, 75 miles south of the capital, reporters said. Unconfirmed reports said one demonstrator was killed there.

The exiled Shiite leader Ayatullah Khomaini had called for a nationwide general strike to make Monday a day of mourning for the estimated 1,300 demonstrators against the shah killed this year.

Thousands heeded the call, closing bazaars and shops. But the government said most government employees reported for work.

The strike by oil workers called by Khomaini appeared over after two weeks. Informed sources the army and the police rounded up holdouts and took them to work in armored personnel carriers, and that trials were planned for those who disrupted the oil flow on which Iran's economy is dependent.

An independent oil company source, who asked not to be identified, said production since Monday had risen to 3.4 million barrels daily, short of the 6.2 million normally produced but well up from the 1.2 million barrels being produced daily during the strike. The sharp cutback cost the government an estimated $750 million in lost exports. A 15-day strike last month cost $1.5 billion.

Finance Minister Hassan-Ali Mehran said the government was reviewing all industrial projects because the lost oil exports had left the government strapped for cash. Reliable commercial sources a multi-billion-dollar steel plant and copper storage and export terminal on the Persian Gulf coast has been cancelled.

Blanton Probed By Grand Jury

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Gov. Ray Blanton, summoned to appear before a federal grand jury investigating parole-selling charges, has been asked to bring a list of his personal bank accounts, a published report said today.

The Nashville Banner, an afternoon newspaper, reported the bank account list request but did not attribute the information. The federal prosecutor's office refused to say what the subpoena sought.

Blanton's press secretary, Jim Gilchrist, said Monday the governor has retained Nashville lawyer James F. Neal, special prosecutor in the Watergate trials, following the resignation of Blanton's legal counsel, who was one of three persons arrested on federal conspiracy and extortion charges.

Gilchrist, asked today about the Banner report, said, "I'm not going to say what all he's going take with him." Gilchrist said the subpoena was a private affair between the jury and the governor.

In another legal forum, a Nashville Chancery Court judge was asked today to halt further release of Tennessee prison inmates through executive clemency until it is determined that Blanton personally reviews and signs the papers.

Chancellor Robert S. Brandt took up the review and signature request in a lawsuit filed in the midst of the federal investigation of parole-selling charges.

Blanton's former legal counsel, T. Edward Sisk, 38, and Charles Benson, 33, state extradition officer, resigned Monday following their arrests by the FBI Friday on charges of extortion and conspiracy to sell paroles, commutations and extraditions.

Also charged in the same case was Lt. Charles Frederick Taylor, 40, a 15-year Tennessee Highway Patrol veteran. Taylor, suspended without pay, was held in lieu of $100,000 bond in Memphis. Sisk and Benson were freed Friday evening on $50,000 bond each.

FBI agent Ben Hale said "the investigation is going ahead full steam," as agents pore over voluminous records seized from Sisk's office at the capitol following his arrest.

FBI agents went to several Nashville banks to check for accounts in the names of Sisk, Benson, Taylor and others. Agents said Sisk had $1,200 and Benson $2,300 in marked bills given earlier to Taylor by an unidentified FBI informant.

Meanwhile, Gov.-elect Lamar Alexander, a Republican who succeeds Democrat Blanton Jan. 20, asked for the resignations of others "who knew about such a scheme and didn't do anything to stop it."

Blanton announced the resignations of Sisk and Benson in a 120-word statement released Monday by Gilchrist. If they are convicted, Blanton said, the matter would be "a great affront to the dignity of all Tennesseans.

"The alleged conduct is absolutely contrary to the manner in which I have directed the legal affairs of my office to be carried out," he said.

"I will not comment on the possible guilt of those involved, as the law presumes they are innocent until proven guilty. However, if they are proved to be guilty as charged, this incident will be a great affront to the dignity of all Tennesseans," he said.

The Chancery Court hearing today was sought by District Attorney Tom Shriver of Nashville and John Hooker, two-time Democratic candidate for governor.

The hearing is expected to investigate why Blanton permitted appointments secretary Kenneth Lavender to sign his name to documents allowing prisoners' releases.

Lavender has had Blanton's power of attorney to sign his name to legal documents since shortly after the governor took office on Jan. 20, 1975.

Davis May Take Stand At Trial

HOUSTON (AP) — Tight-lipped defense attorneys appeared poised today to call millionaire defendant Cullen Davis to tell his version of an alleged murder-for-hire scheme.

However, lead defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes spent this morning questioning Don Evans, an investigator with the district attorney's office in Fort Worth. Haynes asked Evans about his contacts last spring and summer with two inmates in the state prison, John and Sal Fiorio.

The Fiorios previously testified outside the presence of the jury that the district attorney's office offered them "deals" in exchange for perjured testimony against Davis.

The crack defense team refused to confirm or deny that Davis would take the stand, but prosecutors said such a move was imminent and inevitable.

"Cullen's coming," said state attorney Jack Strickland. "I didn't believe he was until now."

Snapped defense lawyer Phil Burleson: "Fortunately, we do not consult them on our strategy."

Strickland and other prosecutors said testimony by the defendant's honey blonde girlfriend Karen Master set the stage for a story only Davis can tell.

Assuming Strickland is correct, there was no indication when Davis would testify.

"I thought they might try to prove up their case through her," Strickland said of Mrs. Master, 30, Davis' girlfriend of four years.

"That's why we fought to keep her from telling about her hearsay conversations with Cullen."

Now, he said he sees no defense alternative other than Davis' own testimony.

Davis, 45, an heir to a Fort Worth oil and industrial dynasty, is accused of plotting the contract murder of a Fort Worth judge and others.

He maintains he was the target of a triangular conspiracy conceived by his estranged wife, Priscilla, and carried out by FBI informant David McCrory and karate instructor Pat Burleson.

From the outset, the defense insisted it would explain the tape-recorded conversations in which Davis ordered the judge and others killed and discussed blood money for the hired gunman.

JOHN HULBERT
Tells Drinkers Of Danger

Ex-Golfer Airs Views On Liquor

dependence that is "more dangerous to the addict and to society than occurs with opiate narcotic users."

Alcohol, he said, has been classified by scientists as belonging to the depressant group of drugs, along with barbiturates, morphine, opiate narcotics and other sedative-hypnotic drugs.

"I believe in our society that alcohol is the greatest drug problem we have. Perhaps even the greatest problem our society has. We should educate throughout our society, beginning with kindergarten, about alcohol and what it really is," he said.

According to Hulbert, three phenomena of alcohol are tolerance, psychological dependence and mental craving. Some drugs produce in their users only one or two of these components, but Hulbert said that alcohol produces all three. "But where can you find such information?" he asked.

"You'll find just the opposite. Open up any newspaper, magazine or cut on the television. Instead of informing the public of possible alcohol addiction, you'll see some athletic hero plugging his favorite new beer. We are bombarded with these commercials, and they begin to condition our young and each one of us. We are brought up thinking that drinking is part of the American way of life, that success and drinking go hand in hand."

There are no warning labels on alcoholic products, nor on any of the ads such as the government requires of cigarettes, he said.

"I only wish someone had told me the facts about alcohol before I got to the point where I couldn't live without it. One out of every 15 drinkers becomes addicted, the innocent addict. True, he took his chances with alcohol voluntarily, but the drug is legal and he drank it without the benefit of honest information warning him of the dangers of addiction. They took cigarette commercials off television for a very good reason. Now why don't they ban all advertising of alcohol from television, too," he said.

Alcoholism occurs frequently among certain peoples, he said. "The Eskimos and American Indians have the highest rate of addiction to alcohol on earth. Next highest are the people of North European backgrounds, such as the Irish, Scandinavian, French and English, in that order. Least susceptible are peoples of Jewish, Greek and Spanish ancestry."

"Alcohol abuses people, people don't abuse alcohol," he said. "Man seeks pleasure and avoids pain. Alcohol numbs the brain, the senses, the reasoning center. It reacts differently on people, the same way that certain people can't take penicillin or eat certain foods, such as chocolate. Or be near pollen. We call these allergies. Each and every one of us is individualized...And alcohol creates different reactions on individuals that we cannot predict. Some people become addicted, others don't. The possibility is always there."

Hulbert said that people are taught from childhood that the word "alcoholic" is a synonym of mental weakness. "And a form of insanity. People today still don't have the information that alcohol caused the problem. Alcohol abused them."

Hulbert said the Schick Centers have spent more than $6 million in funding to isolate the cause of the addiction to tobacco and alcohol, to find its genetic and cellular basis. "Even all diseases could be genetically inherited," he added.

The desire to drink is a conditioned reflex, he notes. "Their (the centers) treatment does not make it impossible to drink, but it does make it possible not to want to drink. They have a 62 percent ratio of success," he said.

"I only hope through my lectures I can show people that we, the alcobetics, are victims of a drug that has caused the addiction," he said.

Alcoholics must realize their drinking is physical, he added, and they must not be afraid or ashamed to discuss their problems with others. "They become withdrawn or hide behind elaborate defenses," he said. Such defenses create personality changes, and the alcoholic's family and doctor are usually ignorant of the source of the compulsive drinking, he said.

Alcoholics would have a greater chance of recovery if they would realize they are perfectly normal except for the fact that they have a low tolerance to alcohol, he added.

"We are truly the innocent addicts. But one can recover. I did," he said.

Hulbert will mail a free copy of his brochure "The Alcobetic Odyssey" to anyone writing to him at 4101 Frawley Drive, Fort Worth, Texas 76118.

Police Locate Missing Plane

TEXAS CITY (AP) — An airplane reported missing since Saturday has been found at the Texas City Airport, with a bullet hole in the roof and blood stains on the seats.

There was no sign of Melton Sims, 28, pilot of the chartered craft that left Huntsville Saturday morning.

The plane was located in a hangar Monday night.

Larry Leffingwell, owner of Seaback Aviation, called Sims "extremely reliable." Leffingwell said, "It is obvious to me the plane was hijacked and I feel sure it was drug-related.

"The plane was parked in the hanger and the identification number on the exterior had been spray-painted over with white paint. Sims would fight like a buzz saw. He would never go along with this type of deal."

by having a signed contract," said Silva. "So we're concentrating our efforts on the legislative area."

Antonio Orendain, director of the Texas Farm Workers Union said in Austin, "We feel the introduction of this bill at this time has a significant meaning for us since it comes so close to Christmas, which is universally recognized as the time of peace, justice and brotherhood."

He acknowledged that Governor-elect Bill Clements is likely to oppose any collective bargaining bill for farm workers, but told reporters at a news conference on the Capitol steps, "We're hoping with this march to gain the support of the legislators so the governor, like it or not, will have to listen to the majority of the people."

Orendain and Alfredo de Avila, assistant director of TFWU, said 15 to 30 farm workers will participate in the march.

Citizen Protection Called Risky

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration told Congress today it would be constitutionally risky to provide all innocent citizens with the same protection from surprise police searches that it proposes to give to journalists.

"Any prediction of where the Supreme Court would come out on that issue is an extremely chancy one," said Philip Heymann, assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division.

Heymann appeared before the Senate subcommittee on the Constitution, headed by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., who has introduced a bill that he says would bolter constitutional protection against unannounced police searches of homes and businesses as well as newsrooms.

The administration proposal, announced last week, would apply to journalists, scholars and others preparing material for public dissemination.

Heymann said this could be done constitutionally because the gathering of information for public release is national in scope.

"What a sheriff does in Indiana today affects what I will read tomorrow morning as I sit at my breakfast table in Arlington, Va.," Heymann testified.

Edward O. DeLaney of Indianapolis, counsel for Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc., said his organization would "not reject" protection for the press alone. But he said "such a privileged position would appear to be out of step with the mood of the populace."

"The press should seek no special status," DeLaney said.

Richard N. Gottfried, chairman of the Committee on Codes of the New York State Assembly, echoed this view.

"Perhaps every American would be well advised, under the administration's proposal, to place a sign on his door announcing that the occupant of the premises is working on his autobiography," Gottfried said.

Bayh has expressed "some concern" at the idea of limiting protection to the press.

Both the Bayh bill and the administration proposal, not yet in bill form, stem from a May 31 ruling by the Supreme Court.

In that case, the court ruled that Palo Alto, Calif., police were within their rights in searching the files of a Stanford University student newspaper for photographs of a demonstration in which nine policemen were injured. The police had a search warrant but had not obtained a subpoena, which would have given the newspaper notice of the proposed search and a chance to argue against it.

Bayh and others contend police should have to get a subpoena to search the premises of anyone not suspected of a crime.

Attorney General Griffin Bell, in his announcement last Wednesday, questioned whether the Constitution gives Congress the power to go that far.

Bell said searches of newspaper offices by state and local police could be curtailed under the constitutional power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce. But he expressed doubt that Congress could dictate to any but federal authorities in regard to searches not governed by the commerce clause.

Bayh's legislation is based on the power of Congress, under the 14th Amendment, to pass "appropriate legislation" to keep states from abridging constitutional rights.

In 1966, the Supreme Court interpreted this language as "a positive grant of legislative power authorizing Congress to exercise its discretion in determining whether and what legislation is needed to secure the guarantees" of the Bill of Rights.

Two dissenting justices said this would let Congress infringe on the power of the courts to determine the "substantive scope" of constitutional provisions.

Bayh's bill invokes the federal Civil Rights Act to prohibit the unannounced searches on grounds they violate press freedom and the constitutional protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.

County Cancels Local Jury Call

Lubbock County citizens who have been notified to report for jury service at 8:45 a.m. Wednesday are now being asked to disregard the notice.

Jess Foster, bailiff in charge of the central jury room, today said no jury panels will be needed at the county courthouse for the remainder of the week.

Firestone Reports Substantial Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., the nation's second-largest tire maker, said today it lost $127.2 million in the quarter ended Oct. 31. The company said the loss was due primarily to a nationwide recall of as many as 7.5 million Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tires.

Firestone, which is considering a $1.35 billion merger with auto parts maker Borg-Warner Corp., said the loss for the fourth quarter came after it took a pretax write-off for the recall totaling $234 million.

The write-off is equal to $147.4 milion after taxes, Firestone said. A write-off is an action charging an asset's value to an expense or loss account.

Firestone said were it not for the recall and for the phasing out of surplus tire-making facilities, it would have earned $20.2 million, or 35 cents a share, down from $25.3 million,, or 44 cents a share, a year before.

Its sales for the quarter totaled $1.37 billion, up from $1.21 billion in the fourth quarter a year ago.

The Akron, Ohio-based Firestone ranks second in the industry to Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Firestone said it tallied a net loss of $148.3 millon in its fiscal year, compared with last year's profit of $110.2 million, or $1.92 a share. Sales for the year rose to $4.88 billion from the previous year's $4.43 billion.

Before making provisions for this year's recall and phaseout losses, Firestone said it turned a profit in the year ended Oct. 31 of $72.1 million, or $1.25 a share.

Firestone's recall of up to 7.5 million radial tires was prompted by safety complaints and was begun in October, following agreement with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The recalled line has been discontinued, and Firestone has reported that its new models have been selling well.

But the company conceded the "steel-belted radial 500 controversy caused a slight drop in the sales of Firestone-brand passenger car tires in the replacement market domestically." According to one recent report, the company's share of the $4.5 billion-a-year replacement tire market has slipped from 24 percent to as small as 22 percent.

In addition to its recall woes, Firestone also has been plagued by fierce competition in Europe and by heavy expenses incurred in shutting down surplus tire-making facilities in the United States and in foreign countries.

Youth Charged With Murders

SAN ANGELO (UPI) — Police are holding an 18-year-old suspect in lieu of $100,000 bond for the slayings of his mother and brother-in-law.

Tommy Jackson Jr., 18, of San Angelo, Monday was charged with the shooting deaths of Irene Cruz Jackson, 39, and Reynaldo Guerrero Fuentes, 23, during a domestic argument at the Jackson home.

A police spokesman said late Sunday Jackson tried to make Fuentes leave at gunpoint and fired. Jackson then allegedly fired another shot that struck his mother in the head.

Police said at least one more shot was fired but it was not determined which bullet killed Fuentes. Witnesses indicated Fuentes had caused previous disturbances at the Jackson home and had been asked to leave Sunday night before the fatal shots were fired.

Justice of the Peace Richard self set bond on each of two murder counts at $50,000 and has ordered autopsies on both victims.

Flu Epidemic Hits Parts Of California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A flu epidemic sweeping most of southern and central California has put school absenteeism at 50 percent in some areas and threatens to keep thousands of children in bed for part of the holidays, health officials say.

And health officials say the epidemic may reoccur when children return to school after New Year's Day.

Some schools began Christmas recess early to prevent infection.

"I've never seen this occur before," Dr. Morton Nelson of the Orange County Health Department said recently. "Our absentee rate in a flu season is usually 5 to 10 or 12 percent. Now we're getting 40 to 50 percent."

In Los Angeles, many schools were reporting 20 to 25 percent absenteeism. Mendota School District in Fresno County shut down for Christmas four days early after about a third of its students called in sick, and a private elementary school in Long Beach also closed. Other schools cancelled Christmas programs and athletic events.

"At this point it's futile," said Dr. James Chin of the health department's infectious disease unit. "You're not isolating the kids. They've already been exposed, and they're going to see each other anyway."

Health officials had not determined the type of flu causing the illnesses, but believed it may be the A-Russian strain.

Hospital Officials Seek Charity Aid

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The city's private hospitals Monday were told not to send all their "charity" cases to the publicly-supported Health Sciences Center Hospital, because taxpayers cannot shoulder such a burden.

Officials of the Lubbock County Hospital District-operated facility made that point repeatedly during the monthly meeting of the district's board of managers.

"Some people still think this is the free hospital," said Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the district and its facility. "This is not a free hospital. This is not a depository for bad debts (non-paying patients)" from other local hospitals.

Private hospitals must continue carrying some of the charity load or the hospital district will "have trouble surviving financially," Bosworth said.

Added Jack Strong, acting chairman of the hospital district board: "We just can't afford to pick up all the bad debts from all the other hospitals."

The district was created to aid "medical indigents," persons who qualify for tax-paid care under district-approved poverty guidelines, Bosworth said. "We are doing everything we can to provide for indigency care." But he noted:

"There is a relatively fine line between medical indigents and those who are not able to pay." Some persons may not be poor enough to meet the district's criteria for indigency assistance; but at the same time, they may represent probable non-paying patients, Bosworth said.

Such "bad debt" patients must be shared by all hospitals in the community, he said. Bosworth said the hospital district will be in "extreme difficulty" if it gets stuck with an "inordinate share of bad debts" on top of the duly qualified indigents.

The matter first came up Monday during a board discussion of recommendations from the district's arbitration committee, which handles disputes arising from the medical indigency program.

One case involved an indigent served at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital. The man's hospital bills ran $11,041. Federal-government programs covered about half the total, but St. Mary's wanted the hospital district to pay the remaining $5,509.

The arbitration committee sided with St. Mary's, but the district's board of managers rejected the committee recommendation and denied St. Mary's request.

Bosworth said he felt the indigent in question was not an emergency case and could have been treated at the Health Sciences Center Hospital instead of St. Mary's. Under ordinary circumstances, he noted, the district does not reimburse private hospitals for non-emergency care rendered to indigents.

Bosworth said the hospital district should not be "backup insurance" for other hospitals' bad debts.

Before the opening of its own Health Sciences Center Hospital Feb. 1, the hospital district did not mind reimbursing private hospitals for non-emergency indigent care, said board member Joe Stan-

DA-Elect Names Staff Members

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Current prosecutor Jim Darnell will become first assistant to Criminal District Attorney-elect John Montford, while Montford campaign director Hal Hensley will assume duties as chief of administration in the DA's office.

The appointments were among several made public Monday by Montford, as he unveiled the staff he will head when he takes office Jan. 1.

The staff will include seven new prosecutors, with six assistant attorney holdovers from the current team of outgoing Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin.

Darnell, one of those holdovers, ranks now as one of the more experienced prosecutors in the office. He has handled numerous major cases and currently is serving as Griffin's chief of felony prosecution.

"We tried to be reasonable and retain a percentage of the current staff as well as bring in new ones," Montford said.

"We considered the competency of applicants as attorneys, and also went after people dedicated to being prosecutors."

Montford said he had "no apologies" in naming Hensley, his former political campaign director, to the job of chief administrator.

He said he had gained first-hand knowledge of Hensley's competence during the campaign, and that Hensley also was the applicant most skilled in computer know-

The bidding:

2 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

It is a learned man indeed who heeds the advice of the sages. But knowing which adage applies to a particular situation requires true wisdom.

South had enough values for two forward-going bids, but the second presented something of a problem. Since a reverse to two spades would have created a forcing-to-game situation, and he wasn't strong enough for that action, he decided to try two no trump because he had a stopper in every suit. North boldly pushed on to game in the hope that his diamond suit would run.

West led the top of his club sequence. Normally, correct technique would be to duck one round of clubs, but declarer couldn't afford that here—a second club lead would remove his only entry to dummy's diamonds. So declarer won the club in his hand, cashed the king of diamonds and crossed to the ace of clubs.

He cashed the ace of diamonds, but unfortunately the queen did not drop. Now dummy was dead, and there was simply no way for declarer to come to nine tricks. As a matter of fact, the only other trick declarer made was the ace of spades. Down four!

Declarer tackled the right suit, but applied the wrong saying. This was not a time to think of "waste not, want not." With two sure club tricks and a spade, declarer needed only six tricks in the diamond suit. Had he remembered "penny wise, pound foolish," he would have made his contract.

At trick two, declarer should have overtaken the king of diamonds with the ace and continued with high diamonds until the queen was driven out. True, this might have cost an overtrick had the diamond queen been doubleton, but it guaranteed the contract against all distributions of the diamond suit.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for accommodating Anna From Montana who asked for a rerun of a poem titled "Slow Me Down, Lord."

I've been reading you faithfully in the Capital Times in Madison for years and I have never seen that poem before. I think it was one of the most inspirational I've ever read.

Who was the author?

Wisconsinite

Dear Wis: "Slow Me Down, Lord" was written by Wilfred A. Peterson, the author of several fine books, including the best-selling "The Art of Living."

Fifteen years ago a reader sent "Slow Me Down, Lord" to me and asked if I could help locate the author. (It had been published in a church bulletin labeled "author unknown." I ran the poem in my column and asked the author to please come forward. Within a week I received 92 letters from readers — all claiming authorship!

DEAR ABBY: Have you lived your whole life in California?

Nosy In Nashville

Dear Nosy: Not yet.

DEAR ABBY: When Steve and I were engaged, he gave me a beautiful 1½-carat diamond ring. I didn't pick it out. His mother did. In fact, she also paid for it.

We broke off the engagement and I gave the ring back to Steve. A month later the engagement was on again. So Steve gave me the same diamond with the understanding that if we ever got divorced I would have to give back the diamond.

Well, we have been married for three months now, and I feel very uncomfortable wearing this ring. I feel as though it doesn't really belong to me — I'm just wearing it on a loan.

What should I do?

Sparkling But Uneasy

Dear Sparkling: Return Mama's ring to Steve. And tell him that until HE can buy you a diamond you'll live without one.

DEAR ABBY: Since almost everyone is interested in saving money, may I make a suggestion?

Folks who go to a lot of trouble and expense sending out mimeographed "Dear Friends" Christmas newsletters should consider this: Most people can tolerate the usual bragging: "Jack is now vice president of his firm, I was elected Women's Club secretary, our daughter has the lead in her class play, our son was accepted in law school, and we all went to the Orient last year." But if the senders can't add one hand written personal line, such as, "And how is YOUR family?" they should trim their mailing list. And I hope they start with ME!

Parental Involvement Essential In Play

NEW YORK (NEA) — Parents are a child's first playmates. Children learn first from their parents and those close to them.

Careful selection and proper use of toys is important to assure children's positive play and healthful development. But the influence of the toys themselves is always secondary to the behavioral examples shown by parents and others and in the way they play with children. Toys become most significant and useful when parents establish a close companionship with their child.

According to Dr. Brian Sutton-Smith, research psychologist and specialist in children's play, "It's only when children are sure of parents' love that they can be sufficiently independent to enjoy and develop through their toys."

"Modern adults," says Sutton-Smith, "are taught to give up childish things, to be grown up and responsible. Parents who are able to keep in touch with feelings about their own childhood will be able to communicate better with their children and make a more significant contribution to their development."

Research has shown that children who play a lot often become more creative and imaginative than those whose exposure to play and toys is more limited. Children who play regularly with their parents and others are most likely to achieve the highest level of creativity as adults. Parental involvement in children's play, at the right time, is vital to the full extent of the children's emotional, intellectual, social and physical development.

Parents must be truly playful, however, to produce the greatest effect on their children. Merely imitating or even ignoring a child's play may not be enough. Through active play with their children, parents can encourage playfulness, introduce new toys and play concepts and thus assure progress of the play curriculum. They can encourage imitation by children and help them become more comfortable with new things and situations.

As partners in play with children, parents are best advised to do what they enjoy most and to introduce variety into play. This may mean physical play, like rolling on the floor with children; verbal play, such as telling stories or jokes; game play as with checkers, marbles or hide-and-seek, or play with toys and other playthings.

Dr. Sutton-Smith offers a few simple rules of play to help parents know when, and when not, to play with their children:

Observe. Determine through close observation a child's skill levels and play interests.

Play along. Enter and play at the child's level. Be careful not to impose a play level that is too sophisticated and adult, for this may cause disenchantment for both parent and child.

Play a little above. After playing for a while at the child's level, parents can then introduce a slightly newer, more complex play level. A conversation between two dolls, for example, can be demonstrated by a parent after the child has mastered playing with one doll.

Back away and observe again. After demonstrating a new concept and arousing a child's response, leave the child alone to practice and learn. After the new skill is mastered (it will take months in some instances, minutes or hours in others), the parent can playfully demonstrate another, more advanced concept.

Both parent and child must approach play sessions in a spirit of fun. While play does have serious importance in a child's development, play that is not fun is useless.

John Mitchell Gets Christmas Furlough

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Attorney General John Mitchell, who will complete a prison term next month for his role in the Watergate coverup, has been granted a five-day Christmas furlough.

C.W. Beaver Jr., superintendent of the federal minimum-security facility at Maxwell Air Force Base, said Mitchell's furlough runs from Dec. 22 to Dec. 27.

Corporations Plan Construction

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

There doesn't seem to be much doubt among most economists and businessmen that some kind of economic slowdown is coming next year, although opinions differ sharply over how severe it will be. But despite all the recession talk in the air, some American corporations are planning construction projects that carry price tags of $100 million and more.

To get a line on why companies move ahead with such ambitious and costly projects in the teeth of an impending business downturn, we spoke with John L. Tishman, a third-generation builder and the head of Tisman Realty and Construction Co. Inc., an 80-year-old company that was acquired two years ago by Rockefeller Center Inc.

There are centain consideration that transcend cyclical economic problems when companies consider embarking on a major construction project, Tishman says. Uppermost among these are the need to provide more space for a growing company and the desire to make operations more efficient by consolidating them in one place, either in an existing location or a new one.

"Like a plant," he observes, "you can't keep a growing company in the same pot too long or it won't develop properly."

"I don't think the cycle of recession affects a major corporation's plans for such projects as a new corporate headquarters," Tishman adds. "After all, the planning cycle for such a move may be three to six years. Therefore, a recession year in itself doesn't affect its decisions."

In addition, he points out, "Even when interest rates are high, the question of long-term financing is not a problem for them."

On the other hand, he notes that while such companies don't have any difficulties in finding the capital to mount a major project, they might — during a period of poor earnings or some business setback — be more concerned with the perception of their stockholders and therefore put off building an expensive new corporate home at such a time.

But poor earnings are not a problem these days, and so Tishman was able to tick off for us a number of major construction projects around the country that are in various stages of development.

They include Exxon's new research center in northern New Jersey; Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.'s corporate headquarters in the steel city; Contintental Oil in Houston; Georgia-Pacific in Atlanta; American Airlines in Dallas; Colonial Penn Insurance in Tampa, and International Business Machines and American Telegraph across the street from each other in midtown Mahattan.

The costs of several of these projects will top the $100 million mark by the time they are completed, he notes.

When it comes to his own company's activities, Tishman can be forgiven a quiet smile of satisfaction these days. After some tough sledding a few years ago, Tishman Realty has just received what he describes as the largest single construction management contract ever awarded — for the $500 million Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow — a sort of permanent world's fair — at Walt Disney World in Florida.

That contract dwarfs even the one it received to manage the construction of the massive World Trade Center in New York. And, he added, it means that this year his company has received management contracts for more than $750 million worth of construction projects, including a hotel-casino in Atlantic City, N.J., an extension of Renaissance Center in Detroit and a major office building in Los Angeles.

One area of construction that will be affected by talk of recession, Tishman concedes, is what he calls "investment building." That's where a real estate developer puts together a site and finds a major tenant or tenants to occupy it before. during or — perish the thought — after construction. (It was such a building standing empty in Manhattan during the last recession that severely hurt the then-independent Tishman organization.)

"Investment builders can actually stimulate a corporation to move to a new headquarters because the facility is available," he says. "Some people like to be able to feel the merchandise before they buy."

But the higher cost of money can have a sharp effect on such builders, Tishman notes, and investment people have become much more conservative. "They won't enter into an investment project unless they have a lead tenant already signed up to take at least half the building," he says. "There's no doubt that the investment sector will be holding back in a recession."

Still, Tishman is optimistic about the outlook for major construction projects even if there is a slowdown. A compensating factor during such a period, he points out, is that it becomes cheaper to build, since competition increases, prices tend to decline and labor productivity rises.

Clovis Man Named To S&L League Post

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (Special) — Donald R. Bonner of Clovis was elected to the board of directors of the New Mexico Savings and Loan League at a meeting of the board here recently.

Bonner, who is president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Clovis, was elected to serve a two-year term as director. He was selected to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Dyne Buckley of Las Cruces, who will be leaving New Mexico for a position in Oklahoma.

Bonner's election to the Savings and Loan League's top policy group brings to three of the number of "east side" savings and loan executives currently serving — including League President Hollis Grissom, also of Clovis, and Fred Stephens, Portales, new second vice president. The Savings and Loan League represents 30 member associations throughout New Mexico and an industry with total assets exceeding $2 billion in the state and $500 billion nationally.

Misunderstanding Noted In Death Of Area Infant

DIMMITT (UPI) — Plains Memorial Hospital changed its admission policy one day after a child who failed to be admitted died, but hospital officials say it was not their fault the seriously ill child was not treated.

A grand jury is expected today to consider whether local hospital employees are liable in the Dec. 8 death of the 11-month-old infant.

Hospital officials contend a language barrier — not negligence — created circumstances that may have led to the death of Isidro Aguinagas Jr.

Dr. B.D. Murphy, a Dimmitt physician and staff member of the hospital, examined the child in his private office Dec. 8 and recommended emergency treatment. According to Murphy's diagnosis, the child suffered from a respiratory infection, dehydration and was running a high fever.

But a hospital official brought up the fact that the medical care would cost $400 and the child's Spanish-speaking parents took Isidro and left, convinced they were being denied admission, authorities say.

From Dimmitt they drove to Tulia, another Panhandle town 30 miles to the east. The child was denied admission there since he was not a resident of the county.

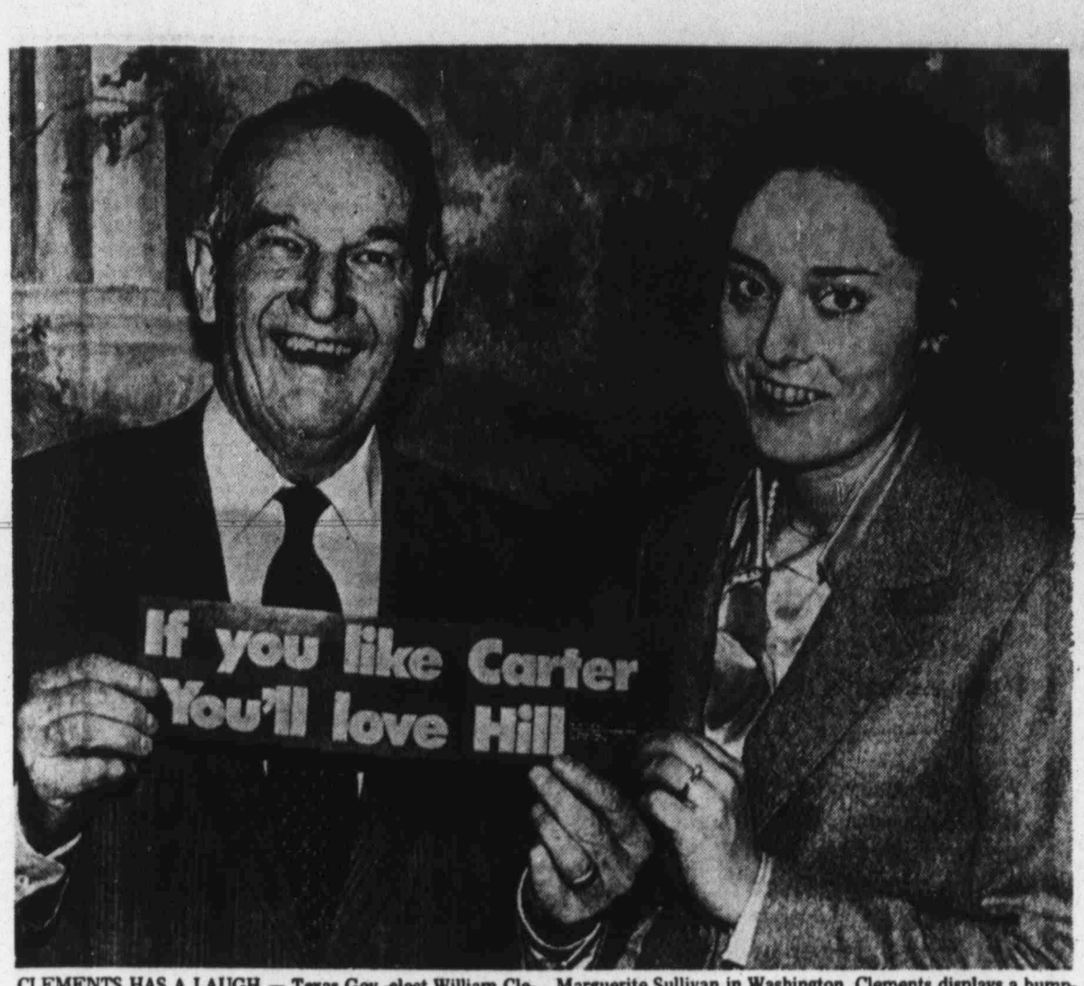

On the way home, Isidro Jr. died.

Hospital administrator Jack Newsom says he spoke with the Aguinaga family Dec. 8 as they attempted to leave Dimmitt.

"They (the Aguinagas) started to leave the hospital. I stopped them in the office. As they passed by the office, I repeated that the baby could be admitted, but that they would need about $400 to pay the bill," Newsom said recently. The Aguinagas mistakenly took payment as a prerequisite for admission, Newsom said.

Under state law, a hospital employee faces criminal charges for refusing to admit a patient for emergency care, provided the treatment has been recommended by a qualified staff member. A violation is a class C misdemeanor and carries a maximum $200 fine.

Comptroller's Estimate Allows Legislators Plenty Of Leeway

AUSTIN (AP) — The 66th Legislature can exceed current spending by $2.8 billion in 1980-81 without unbalancing the state budget, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Monday.

Bullock's estimate gives legislators more leeway than some had thought for either higher spending or a new tax relief bill.

The Legislative Budget Board's 1980-81 recommended general appropriation bill would exceed current spending by about $2.5 billion.

The $2.8 billion includes a predicted surplus of $743.2 million for 1979.

Also included in the amount is $450 million which the Legislature has promised local school districts as reimbursement for revenue losses caused by the "Tax Relief Amendment" approved by voters last month.

The budget board's spending package includes the $450 million.

Bullock predicted that revenue from existing taxes would top $21.2 billion in the 1980-81 biennium — or $2.8 billion more than the state is spending in the 1978-79 budget.

The comptroller said his forecast to the Legislature, which convenes Jan. 9, was based on an assumption that there would be a mild recession in mid-1979, followed by a gradual recovery.

Another assumption was that the inflation rate would drop to less than 6 percent by mid-1981. Failure of anti-inflationary policies would cause Bullock's revenue estimate to err on the low side because state income from sales taxes rises along with the general increase in prices.

Bullock predicted that Texas' growth rate would drop during a recession but increase during recovery.

The comptroller said his department was using a new model of the Texas economy, called the Texas Revenue Estimating Model (TREM), to make its forecasts more accurate.

Sales tax growth, for instance, is related to Texans' historical pattern of expenditures on taxable items as well as to personal income and the consumer price index.

The Texas Constitution requires the comptroller to make a revenue forecast for the coming biennium and issue it to legislators before a lawmaking session convenes.

The Legislative Budget Board recently recommended a 1980-81 spending level — including the $450 million for school district reimbursement — that exceeded the 1978-79 budget by about $2.5 billion.

At the time the board approved its bill, board staffers said it would leave only about $80 million for tax relief or added spending.

Committee Proposes State Loan Program

AUSTIN (AP) — A House-Senate committee has proposed a state program to increase private education loans to college students by guaranteeing lenders they will be repaid.

Private lending institutions are reluctant to make such loans, the committee was told Monday.

Committee recommendations will go to the 1979 Legislature, which must act in order to avoid imposition of a loan guarantee program by the federal government.

The committee proposed creation of a non-profit corporation to operate a loan guarantee program. But Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, the chairman, said he wanted to explore other alternatives on his own.

Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education, said the Texas College Coordinating Board did not want to be saddled with running a loan guarantee program.

The board already administers Hinson-Hazlewood student loans and is trying to collect some $20 million in defaulted pre-1971 loans. Loans granted since 1971 are covered by federal guarantees.

Committee recommendations also included a $1.45 million start-up fund for the guarantee program, to come from "special allowance" interest subsidies received by the coordinating board from the federal government.

Bob Campbell of the Touche-Ross accounting firm told the committee 39 or 40 states have set up loan guarantee programs.

Campbell said the federal government would reimburse all the guarantee program's losses if it covered the loans of Texas students at out-of-state schools and of students attending private trade schools.

He said the federal government also would pay an administrative cost allowance.

The penalty for not establishing a Texas-operated guarantee program, Campbell said, would be for the U.S. commissioner of education to impose a program within the state.

One way the commissioner could do this, he said, would be to charter a guarantee corporation operating in another state to come into Texas.

The DA-elect had made creation of an administrative chief position a key point in his campaign, saying an overall office administrator would free him for personal prosecution of cases in the courtroom.

Hensley, 27, has headed a management and public relations firm here for the past four years.

Another current assistant, Rick Howell, is being named felony trial division chief. Howell has been chief prosecutor in the 237th District Court.

Current assistant David Nelson will become misdemeanor chief. Other prosecutors in Griffin's office to remain are Everett Seymore, Hollis Browning and Danny Hurley.

Yvonne Faulks, an attorney with the Key, Carr, Evans and Fouts firm here, will become head of the civil division. She has been a lawyer for the firm since 1972, and worked as a legal secretary for several years before that.

Paulina Jacobo, currently an assistant regional attorney for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Dallas, will head the juvenile division.

Miss Jacobo is a former Fulbright scholar, doing academic work under that program at the University of Madrid.

Other new staff attorneys will include Clint Averitte, Goodwin Hale, Travis Ware, Mark McBride and Marvin Williams.

Averitte is a former assistant attorney general for consumer affairs here and most recently has been engaged in private practice in Dallas.

Hale, 47, served as country treasurer of Crosby County from 1959-63. He has been a practicing attorney in Crosbyton.

Ware has been associated in private practice with Montford for approximately 18 months. McBride, a Monterey High School and Texas Tech University Law School graduate, has been assistant county attorney in Wichita Falls. Williams is a recent Texas Tech law graduate.

Montford noted that, although several new assistants are from out of town, all have ties with Lubbock.

He also indicated he was pleased with the number of experienced attorneys he has hired, pointing out that only one assistant will be fresh from law school.

Lee Rice, Jack Bryant and Michael Laws will remain as investigators.

Montford also will hire four additional investigators, but said he will announce those appointments after he receives official confirmation of a federal grant which will pay for their salaries.

Local Hospital Tired Of Charity Status

"It's a different ballgame now with this hospital open," Stanley continued. "We don't have anyone to back up our debts."

The board went along with the arbitration committee in denying University Hospital's request for reimbursement on bills of $772 and $352. Bosworth said the two cases were similar to St. Mary's, and that he feels the arbitration committee was "not being consistent" in its recommendations.

There were other events at Monday's board meeting regarding the "bad debt" situation:

—Ben Robinson, chairman of the board's finance committee, said his panel next month will study and perhaps recommend revisions of the hospital district's admissions policy. He said the proposed changes will address some of the concerns voiced by Bosworth.

—The district's indigency guidelines themselves are under review, Bosworth said.

—The hospital district is trying to meet with the Lubbock-Crosby-Garza Medical Society, at the recommendation of the arbitration committee, to discuss medical indigency, Bosworth said. The meeting is to "re-emphasize the necessity for a reasonable patient mix" between paying and non-paying clients, he said.

—Bosworth reported that he and Stanley met with the Hale County judge to discuss the "problem of (indigent) residents of that county coming here" for medical-are. The district plans to contact all surrounding counties and talk about getting reimbursed for such care.

—The federal government is proposing more stringent rules requiring hospitals that receive federal loans or grants to provide charity care, Bosworth told the board.

Private hospitals assisted by the government have an "obligation...to provide a certain amount of uncompensated care," Bosworth said.

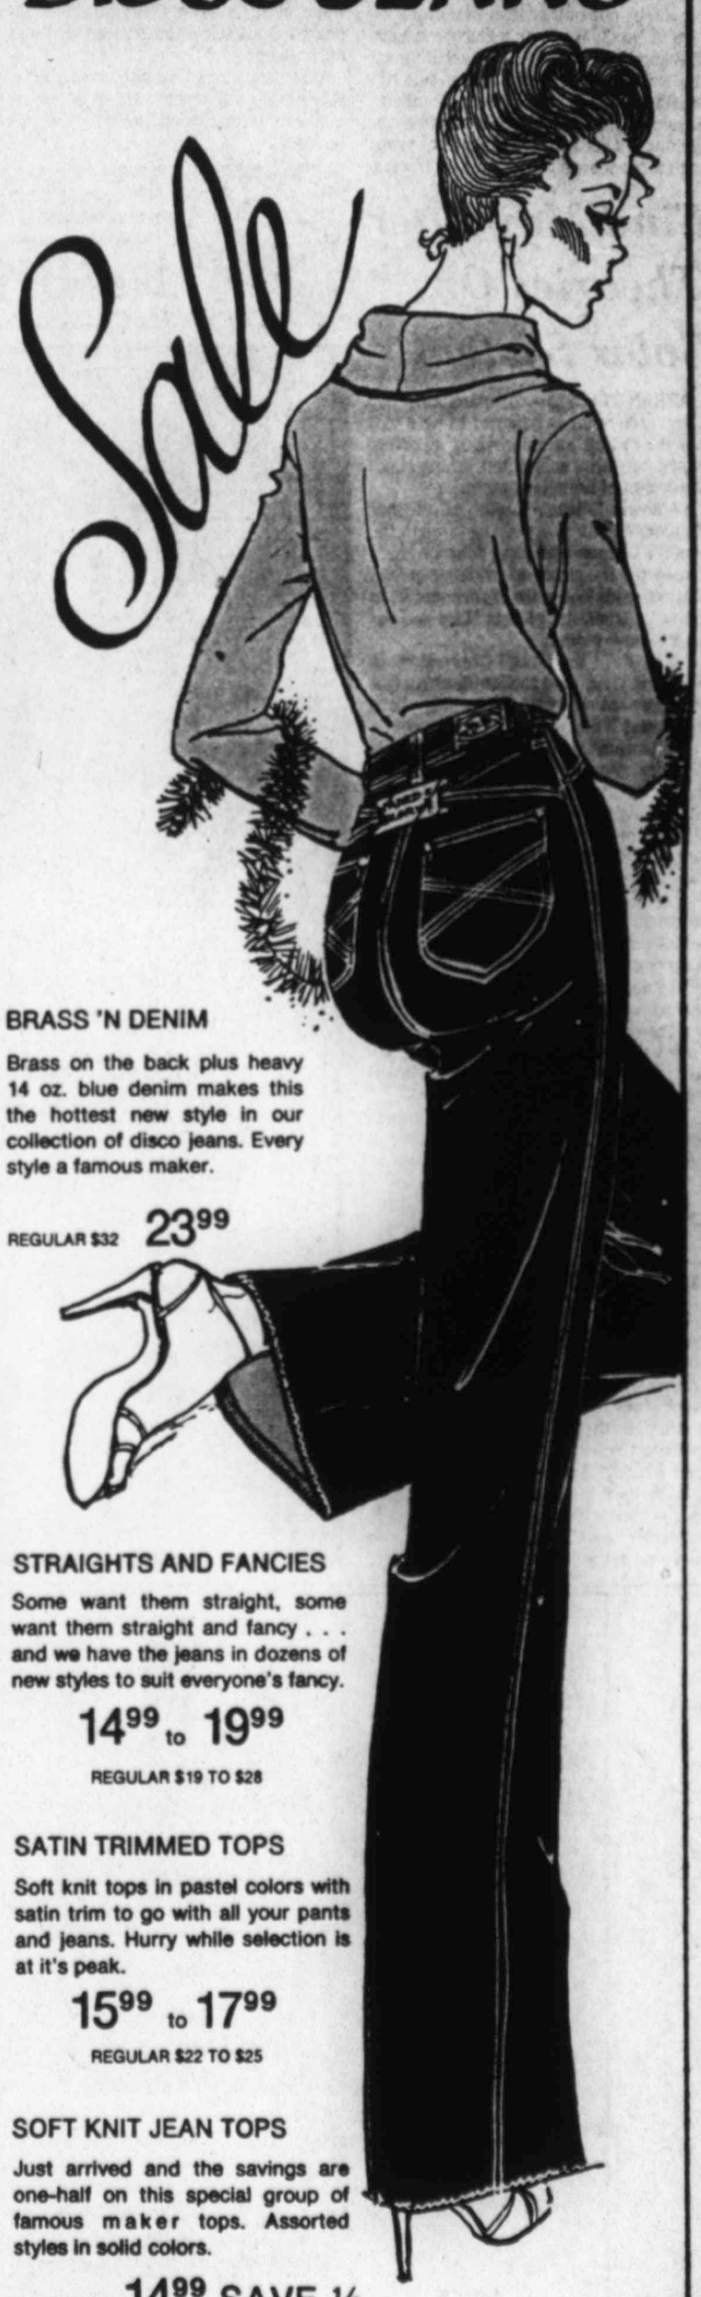

The hospital district is in no position to assume the charity load of the entire county, he said. "We have to be very judicious in our review and in our acceptance" of non-paying cases.

"The meager amount of tax revenues that go to operate the hospital — about $3 million — is very small in comparison to the (hospital's 1979) total operating budget" of $23 million, Bosworth said.

During Monday's meeting, Gwen Stafford and C. Wayne Smith were sworn in as new members of the board of managers of the hospital district.

Brzezinski Still Shines Among Carter Forces

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The comet Brzezinski, last seen disappearing over the Potomac in the shadow of a rising Cyrus R. Vance, is once again shining over the White House.

For those stargazers who tended to write off President Carter's national security assistant six months ago when the secretary of state seemed to be ascending, the word around the president's quarters is blunt: You were wrong.

Three recent developments lend support to those who say Zbigniew Brzezinski continues to have the president's ear in a key policy-making role while Vance devotes his time and energy to the Middle East and arms limitation diplomacy.

Item No. 1: When Carter heads to the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe next month for summit meetings, he and the leaders of France, West Germany and England will be taking one adviser each into their joint conferences. Brzezinski will be at the president's side.

Item No. 2: When the president decided he needed a special task force studying long-term options in the Persian Gulf — after criticizing sharply the work of the State Department — he named former Undersecretary of State George Ball to head the group. Ball was brought back to government service, with Carter's approval, by none other than Brzezinski.

Item No. 3: While on a European tour, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal was dispatched on a sudden side trip to Bucharest to confer with Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu after the communist leader showed signs of growing independence from Moscow. The National Security Council, directed by Brzezinski, was the guiding force behind the sudden visit.

The sudden flurry of Brzezinski's activities is coincidental, insists one of his aides seeking to make the least of any competition between his boss and the secretary of state. The activities are dictated by his role as a policy adviser rather than a diplomat.

Where does all this leave Brzezinski? It leaves him, according to his not-unbiased deputy, David Aaron, right where he was all along.

It demonstrates, Aaron said, that those "who were writing him off" were not offering "a fair interpretation" of recent events.

Those events began about six months ago. At that time, Brzezinski was granting frequent interviews.

He showed signs of eclipsing Vance as the chief administration spokesman in a number of key foreign policy areas.

Then, after Brzezinski decried in a television interview Cuban activities in Africa, Vance said in a major policy speech that the United States would move in the direction of improving relations with Angola, a Cuban ally in Africa.

Shortly afterwards, the president invited members of Congress to the White House to review his administration's foreign policy. Vance, rather than Brzezinski, conducted the seminars.

The speech and the White House conferences halted any consideration that the national security adviser was becoming the de facto secretary of state. In the wake of these events, Brzezinski disappeared from television screens. He was

Aaron argues that despite those events, Brzezinski's job never changed. It has remained "primarily on the policy side," he said.

Throughout, Vance has refused to discuss publicly any inroads Brzezinski may have made. Nor has he openly involved himself in the constant tension between the two competing bureaucracies of the State Department and the National Security Council.

But, as Vance becomes more deeply involved in what may be the final stages of the Middle East and strategic arms limitation treaty negotiations, Brzezinski remains at home.

And every day except Sunday, the first appointment on Carter's schedule is a conference with Brzezinski, who reviews the latest international developments in a tete-a-tete with the president.

Find May Alter Theories On Solar System

ATLANTA (UPI) — An astronomer has discovered what is believed to be a tiny moon orbiting an asteroid, a discovery which may alter scientific thinking about the origins of the solar system.

Fernbank Science Center astronomer Richard Williamson, peering through the center's 36-inch telescope, found what is considered the strongest evidence to date that asteroids — chunks of rock that lie in a belt between the planets Mars and Jupiter — have moons.

Scientists at the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz., and the Smithsonian Observatory at Harvard University have confirmed Williamson's findings.

Williamson said his discovery early Monday morning, combined with the new data that has been gathered about the planets Venus and Mars and the Earth's moon, may cause scientists to alter their theories on how the solar system was formed.

One scientific theory says asteroids are remnants of an exploded planet, while other theories say asteroids are space debris that never merged to form a planet. But scientists are perplexed about what forces caused a planet to explode, whether these forces were uniformly present when the solar system first formed, and if the same conditions occurred in the formation of each planet.

Some scientists believe the key to these questions lie in a better understanding of the asteroid belt, and Williamson agrees.

Ski Area Uses Bugs To Combat Thefts

SHERBURNE, Vt. (AP) — The electronic bug has found its way to the ski slopes of Vermont. Officials at the Killington ski area say that for the past three weeks they have been using the device to combat the theft of skis.

Project coordinator David Langlois said Sunday that he and his fellow employees have been installing the transmitters — about the size of quarters — inside expensive skis. Then they put the skis in racks near the lifts or against buildings.

Atlantic City's Casino Future Still Clouded

COMEBACK ON THE BOARDWALK — Steel girders of the new casino being constructed by the owner of Las Vegas' Caesars Palace rises in the foreground in Atlantic City, N.J. With one casino operating, and several others rushing to cash in on the gambling goldmine, Atlantic City is hoping that Lady Luck will deliver on her promise of prosperity. (AP Laserphoto)

Follow-Up

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The crowd at Camillo's tavern just off the Boardwalk wears tuxedos and drinks imported beer all night.

But only a few blocks from where these young casino dealers spend their time and money after hours, old black bellmen wonder when gambling will deliver on its promise of prosperity.

Two years after New Jersey voters approved casino gambling — and after the first tourist season of actual gambling — this old seashore resort is experiencing growth and some of its pains.

The one casino in town is taking in bettors' money three times faster than the biggest joints on the Las Vegas Strip. Business in general is up and unemployment is down.

But the single casino's future is clouded in uncertainty. And though falling, unemployment remains more than twice the national average.

With all this, most feel it's a sure bet that legalized gambling will save this city. Says William Downey, executive director of the new Casino Hotel Association: "We're slowly coming out of the valley of darkness. Things around here look super for a change."

Lurking behind that hope, however, are the legal problems of Resorts International Inc. following the state attorney general's filing of 17 "objections" to a permanent casino license for the firm and its hotel. Its casino has been operating on a temporary permit so far.

The state's new Division of Gaming Enforcement charged that Resorts International has had past ties to organized crime, that it associates with businessmen of questionable integrity and that it has mismanaged its casinos here and in the Bahamas.

State investigators say the summer's unexplained disappearance of $179,195 from the casino and the theft of a blackjack table tray with $14,260 in chips show the firm cannot properly manage a casino.

Resorts International officials, who admit their firm is "fighting for its life," have vehemently denied any wrongdoing. The matter will come up in January when the State Casino Control Commission decides whether to grant the permanent license.

"We're not going to give up without a fight," says company president I.G. "Jack" Davis Jr., who this week suspended key executive Seymour Alter after the state alleged in a report that he tried to bribe a New York judge in 1962 and also arranged for prostitutes for Bahamian officials visiting Las Vegas.

As the company prepares its battle, the money comes in at an average of $630,997 a day at the casino. It has taken in more than $125 million — about half of it profit — since opening May 26. The firm's third quarter earnings were 17 times better than last year.

More than 50 casino projects have been proposed here. Most are speculative, but big names like Caesars Palace, Playboy, Penthouse, Del E. Webb, Hilton, Harrah's, Bally, Golden Nugget, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Ramada Inn and Holiday Inn have promised gleaming new casinos.

On the Boardwalk, cranes and bulldozers work feverishly as a half-dozen developers scramble to tear down buildings, put up others and cash in on the gambling gold mine. Still, only two or three casinos are expected to be open by the end of 1979.

"It's the only town where you can tear down a building and increase the (tax) assessment," Gov. Brendan T. Byrne said recently.

Boardwalk property, which often didn't find a buyer two years ago, now sells for up to $125 a square foot or $5.5 million an acre, according to William Rafferty, a prominent real estate man.

On one Boardwalk block, an unidentified developer offered homeowners $100,000 each — if all agreed to sell. The offer is still out.

Rafferty said the real estate boom has spread to residential areas. Modest city row houses and well-to-do suburban homes have doubled and tripled in price as more people move in and New Yorkers and Philadelphians seek second homes close to the action, Rafferty said.

A number of elderly residents, who moved into old hotels as they were converted to apartments in the city's darker days, now are threatened with eviction as developers eye sites for casino hotels.

Leaders of the Hispanic area near the Boardwalk claim that absentee landlords, hungry to sell to developers, are forcing out the poor. Hispanic leaders say "thousands" of their people are gone, but local officials dispute the magnitude of the exodus.

The one casino is largely responsible for this year's 23 percent increase in revenues from the city's "luxury tax" on hotel room rentals, liquor, tobacco and amusements, according to local officials. The tax is the major indicator of tourist business here.

State officials say new jobs at the casino hotel are the reason behind the 4.8 percent drop in October's unemployment rate from the year before, when it stood at 17.6 percent.

Still, officials fear unemployment this winter will approach last February's peak 21.1 percent, which is dramatically higher among the blacks and Hispanics who are about half the city's 44,000 residents.

Atlantic City's winter salvation, its convention business, is also in a slump. Four and five years ago, when this winter's conventions had to be booked, this was a town without a future. Only 2,200 delegates are expected at four small conventions in all of December.

Resorts International is even finding it difficult to fill its rooms.The 1,072-room hotel complex has a 60 percent occupancy rate, and officials have regularly given away tickets to their show theater despite its big-name acts.

"It's simple," said Resorts International vice president H. Steven Norton. "The demand for gambling right now is just greater than the demand for entertainment."

ENFORCEMENT CHANGE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department is handing off to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission responsibility for enforcing federal equal pay and age discrimination laws. The July 1 change results from President Carter's reorganization plan. The two agencies announced details of the transfer Monday.

1978 Voter Turnout Hits 36-Year Low

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Neither the nationwide tax revolt nor hotly contested elections could keep the turnout from hitting a 36-year low of less than 35 percent of the eligible voters in the 1978 midterm elections.

The non-partisan Committee for the Study of the American Electorate said Monday turnout not only declined, but the number of Amerinans registering to vote dropped.

Two factors kept the turnout from dipping even lower, the study concluded. Turnout was boosted in Minnesota, Oregon and Wisconsin by Election Day registration, and six Southern states held fully competitive two-party races for the first time in a century.

"There may be a real danger that we are losing the votes of the broadly concerned citizens, leaving the field to those motivated by narrow, parochial and emotional issues," said Maurice Rosenblatt, president of the committee.

"The continuing decline in participation may affect not only the quantity of participants in the electoral process, but also the quality of American democracy."

In those states electing governors or senators, the overall turnout was 37.9 percent of the eligible electorate, a decline of 1.1 percent from the 39 percent that voted in 1974.

Final congressional figures are not in for states without statewide elections, but the committee said the total would be brought down to under 35 percent, the lowest figure since 32.5 percent turned out in 1942.

In 24 states, turnout dropped from that of the last midterm election in 1974, while 12 states reported increases and the rest showed a change of less than 1 percent.

Leading the decline was Kentucky, with the turnout down 13.3 percent, followed by Delaware, 10.7 percent, Georgia and Mississippi, 10.1 percent, and Vermont 9.1 percent.

The greatest increases came in Louisiana, 13.6 percent, Florida, 7.7 percent and Minnesota, 7.6 percent.

The highest turnout in the nation was in Minnesota, where 55.2 percent of those eligible voted. Ironically, Minnesota had Election Day registration, which is opposed by Republicans who scored their biggest coup of the year by electing two senators and a governor in the traditionally Democratic state.

The lowest turnout was in President Carter's home state of Georgia, where only 18.7 percent of those eligible went to the polls.

The study showed no discernible impact of ballot propositions such as tax cut proposals, gambling and drinking law changes. Of 19 states with major issues on the ballot, six had higher turnouts, eight were lower and five others were about the same.

'Operator' Loses Job

SAPELO ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — When the island community of Hog Hammock finally gets telephone service next year, Herman Hillary will be out of a job. But he couldn't be happier.

For years Hillary has been the community's "operator" because its only telephone — an ancient pay model — sits in a green box outside his home.

Hillary, who has lived all his 73 years in the 400-acre community, considered it a duty to answer the pay telephone and seek out a caller's party.

But Hillary draws the line at taking social calls for the community's young males.

"I don't put up with none of that," he said. "Those young girls wouldn't hardly be off the boat at the mainland when they'd start calling. At night, too. ... No sir, I won't miss it."

Hog Hammock lies south of Sapelo Island's vast state-owned wilderness area and is home to about 200 descendants of American slaves.

The Darien Telephone Co. said ground has been broken for a cable that will bring telephone service to Hog Hammock's 40 families. The island and mainland microwave stations should be completed by the end of January, said Irby Johnson of the telephone company.

"I don't know whether we're helping them or hurting them, connecting them with the rest of the world," Johnson said.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Tomorrow should be a successful day if you don't do things piecemeal. Coordinate your efforts so that your forces won't be spread too thin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Say nothing about another tomorrow that you wouldn't say directly to this person. Making unkind comments about one who isn't present doesn't become you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Make it a point tomorrow not to offer unsolicited advice to friends, particularly regarding things about which you know very little.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Other's opinions are important, but so are your own views. Don't try to please another tomorrow against your better judgment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Coworkers or helpers will draw away from you tomorrow if you're too critical. It's best to say nothing rather than risk offending them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Financially you'll keep things under control where larger expenditures are concerned tomorrow. It will be the small dollar-and-dime stuff that could do your budget in.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Tomorrow you could experience a multitude of minor frustrations and unfortunately, bring your troubles home and take them out on the family.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Using a double standard can cause you problems tomorrow. Don't tell another not to do something a certain way and then go ahead and do it yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Are you always the first to grab for the check? Tomorrow, why don't you let a freeloader you know be the one who makes the gesture.?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even though the family will be trying, you may prove to be a difficult person to please tomorrow. Should they lose patience, they may take a reverse tack.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your salesmanship will suffer tomorrow if you tend to belabor your points. Don't beat about the bush. Make your statements simple, clear and concise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Schedule your outside activities sensibly tomorrow, or they'll prove to be both time-and money-wasters. Give important matters top priority.

Death Rate Sinks To All-Time Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — If marriages, babies and long lives are signs of national health, government figures show 1977 was a positively robust year for the United States.

The death rate sank to an all-time low, while life expectancy hit an all-time high of 73.2 years.

The birth rate climbed.

And the marriage rate went up for the first time in five years, while the divorce rate leveled off for the first time in a decade.

The National Center for Health Statistics said Monday the low death rate — 8.8 per 1,000 Americans — was partly due to the absence of an influenza epidemic last year.

Experts interviewed Monday night were slow to pin down a reason for the marriage and divorce statistics — or even to acknowledge they meant much at all.

"There may be minor shifts from time to time, but there's still a lot of anxiety in society these days; I don't see anything to halt the divorce rate really," said Dr. Murray Bowen, a psychiatrist who is director of the Family Center at Georgetown University.

"I expect to see the divorce rate going higher and higher," he said.

The statistics center, a division of the Health, Education and Welfare Department, said preliminary figures show a marriage rate of 10.1 per 1,000 population compared to a rate of 10.0 in 1976. The rate had risen steadily until 1972 when it began to fall.

The divorce rate remained at 5.0 per 1,000 after gradually rising to that level from 2.5 per 1,000 in 1966.

Georgetown's Dr. Edward Beal agreed that no significant drop in America's divorce rate seems likely, and he cited the statistics on longer lives as one reason.

"We're seeing increasing numbers of people getting divorced after 30 years, often after their kids have grown and left home," he said. "At the turn of the century, in most cases one of the parents would die by the time their oldest child was getting married."

About 2.17 million marriages were reported in 1977, compared to 1.09 million divorces.

Beal pointed out that the marriage figures would be affected to an unknown extent by another modern phenomenon — the high percentage of divorced persons who marry again. He cited Census Bureau figures indicating that 83 percent of divorced men remarry as do 75 percent of divorced women. HEW counted total marriages, making no destinction among first, second or later ceremonies.

The statistics center said the death rate last year was 8.8 per 1,000 — its report called that "the lowest annual rate ever recorded in this country" — down from 8.9 the previous two years.

That contributed to the longer life expectancy of 73.2 years, almost five months longer than the previous year and three years longer than that of a baby born in 1968.

The center predicted, by sex and race, life expectancies of 77.7 years for white females, 73.8 years for non-white females, 69.9 years for white males and 65 years for non-white males born last year.

The statistics also showed infant and maternal mortality dropping — infant deaths to 14 per 1,000 live births and their mothers to 9.4 per 1,000.

The 1977 figures will remain tentative until final versions are published next year, but the numbers are not expected to change much.

The nation's birth rate rose about 3 percent, from 14.8 births per 1,000 population in 1976 to 15.3 per 1,000 in 1977.

Stabbing Victim Tells Of Fight

A 51-year-old Lubbock man suffering from stab wounds and cuts met police at an Idalou Road grocery store about 8:30 p.m. Monday and said he had just gotten into a fight with a "drinking buddy."

Ira Mondeine of 400 Idalou Road, No. 15, was taken to St. Mary's Hospital where he was listed in serious condition this morning.

Before being taken to the hospital, Mondeine led police to the apartment where he said he was injured. Reports show officers found a knife and blood stains at the apartment. They also talked to a suspect, but no arrest had been mady by this morning

An 11-year-old boy playing in an alley in the 500-block of 42nd Street about 5:45 p.m. Monday was shot twice with a pellet gun.

The boy, who was not taken to a hospital, told police two youths up the alley had shot him.

Police were called to the 1500-block of 31st Street about 7 a.m. Monday after a woman was heard screaming. There they found a 21-year-old woman who said she was confronted by an armed man who ordered her to drive him somewhere.

The woman said she was getting into her car after taking her daughter to a friend's house when the suspect appeared in the back seat of her vehicle, placed a weapon to her side and told her to "drive."

She said she drove to the end of the block, then stopped, started screaming and jumped out of the vehicle and ran to the friend's residence. The man did not follow her, reports show.

Two black men were unsuccessful about 10 p.m. Monday when they got a room at the Parkway Motel, 2600 Parkway Drive, and then tried to rob the motel manager, Tin Aweng.

Aweng told police one of the suspects threw a stack of pamphlets at him after he asked them for one night's rent. The other man tried to hit Aweng with his fist, reports show, while his companion reached for the cash register. Aweng said the suspects left after he closed the cash drawer and picked up the phone to call police.

Vicki Ball of 1820 E. Stanford St. said she came home about 9 p.m. Monday to find a man and woman pulling out of her driveway in a van containing some of her property.

Reports show the woman recovered about $300 of her property. When she asked for the rest of her items the man laughed and said he would be back "later to remove the carpet."

In other reported burglaries, Janie C. Hinojosa of 1601 28th St. said she lost $1,237 in Christmas presents, a stereo and clothes when burglars struck her home between 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. Monday.

A stereo system, valued at $1,100, was reported taken when Eliver Alonzo's home at 2217 49th St. was burglarized between noon and 5:15 p.m. Monday.

Election Trial Postponed

The trial to determine how Lubbock City Council members should be elected has been postponed until 9 a.m. on Jan. 15.

Because of the upcoming holidays and because of the deaths of former Lubbock mayor Roy Bass, attorney William J. Gillespie and the son of George Scott, assistant director of student life at Texas Tech University and one of the witnesses in the case, U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward said it would be an "exercise in futility" to proceed with the trial this week.

Woodward said he has three weeks free following Jan. 15 and said he hopes the trial can be completed during that time.

Last week the judge heard five days of testimony by witnesses for the plaintiffs who want the city's at-large method of electing city council members voided in favor of single-member districts.

The trial is expected to last another 10 days.

Jury Finds Grijalva Guilty

FORT WORTH (UPI) — The parents of a man convicted of the brutal murder of a pizza restaurant manager sat quietly outside the courtroom reading the Bible and holding hands. Inside a judge read aloud the guilty verdict against their son, who could face the death penalty.

The punishment phase of the trial for David Grijalva, 26, of Gallup, N.M., began today.

Grijalva was convicted Monday of capital murder in the stabbing of Mary Jeanette Powers, 30, during a robbery of an Amarillo Pizza Hut Jan. 11, 1977. Evidence in the five-day trial showed the woman also had her head smashed with a heavy rolling pin.

The jury, which took five weeks to select, spent slightly more than two hours considering evidence in the trial before returning the verdict.

The key witness against Grijalva was his former wife and accomplice in the crime, Kathy Jo Sutton, who divorced him, pleaded guilty and then traded her testimony for 10 years probation.

During her testimony, Miss Sutton testified Grijalva herded the restaurant employees into a food storage locker, failing to notice Miss Powers sleeping in one of the booths.

She testified he then broke open the cash register, awakening Miss Powers, who attempted to report the robbery.

Miss Sutton said she watched as Grijalva, holding a long butcher knife, took Miss Powers to a back area of the restaurant where she was stabbed. Miss Sutton said he then took a 16-pound rolling pin that he had to wield with both hands and crashed it down on her head repeatedly.

The couple then escaped to New Mexico, where Miss Sutton said she left her husband, called her mother in Amarillo and then surrendered to police.

Miss Sutton testified she and Grijalva had been separated at the time of the robbery-murder but that Grijalva had traveled to see her in an attempt to reconcile the marriage.

She conceded she was the one who recommended the two steal some money so Grijalva would have enough to buy a bus ticket home. She said, however, Grijalva recommended they rob the Pizza Hut because Miss Sutton had worked there and knew the layout.

The jury received the case at 5:26 p.m. and deliberated an hour before breaking for supper. It returned at 8:15 and at 9:20 brought its verdict into the courtroom.

During the reading of the verdict, Grijalva stood impassively. His parents, who attended much of the trial, sat quietly reading the Bible.

Bus Carrying Group Overturns

CUBA, N.M. (UPI) — Forty-two members of a Texas church group enroute to a skiing holiday escaped serious injury Monday in the crash of their chartered Continental Trailways bus on a stretch of icy highway in northwest New Mexico.

The bus, which was carrying members of the Spring Baptist Church, a suburb of Houston, was enroute to the Purgatory ski resort in southern Colorado when it hit a patch of ice on New Mexico 44 near Cuba.

The bus skidded off the highway and overturned on its side. The passengers, most of them youths, suffered minor cuts and bruises. They were treated at a nearby clinic and released.

Donny Jones, a sponsor in the group, said the accident occurred while most of the youths were asleep.

"The road we were traveling on was dry, then we came over the hill and there was ice," said Mrs. Jones. "In the distance you could see there was a truck that had flipped."

State police said a pickup truck had overturned in the same area just moments before the bus hit the patch of ice. A companion bus, carrying students from the Champion Forest Baptist Church near Houston, was following the bus that overturned.

Mrs. Jones said the two buses had left Houston Sunday, traveled all night and had stopped in Albuquerque for breakfast early Monday.

State police said two other Continental Trailways buses were involved in weather-related accidents in the same area Sunday. One bus skidded on a curve near Bloomfield and overturned and a trailing bus went off the road on the same curve and crashed into the first vehicle.

NEAR MISS — New York Jet defensive lineman Bob Martin dives past Cowboy quarterback Danny White, catching only the sleeve of his jersey. (AP Laserphoto)

White Given Start Sunday?

DALLAS (AP) — Danny White knows his place.

"I'm paid as the backup holder for extra points," says the reserve quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys who has a first string sense of humor.

White started and finished a 30-7 victory over the New York Jets Sunday withinjured No. 1 quarterback Roger Staubach on the mend. But White has no visions of permanent first team.

"It was a great experience for me," says White. "It has been so long since I started a game I was wondering if I had lost the edge you have to have. Roger told me I played great and he told me I could start again this Sunday."

Of course, the Cowboys don't play again until Dec. 30 in the National Football League playoffs.

"My job right now is the backup quarterback for the Cowboys," said White, a former star at Arizona State who was one of the top passers in the now defunctWorld Football League. "If I wasn't on a world championship team it would be tough. But there is a big difference playing for this team. The players have a great attitude. It probably wouldn't be that way if we weren't winning.

"I can't think of another team in the league where I'd settle for a backup role. This team just has so much going for it."

"If I thought Roger might play 10 more years I'd have to go," said White. "My goal is certainly not a permanent backup."

White also is the Cowboy punter. Also, as he jests, he also is the backup holder for placekicker Rafael Septien behind Charlie Waters. White was pressed into duty recently when Waters injured a finger.

"We played Super Bowl caliber football against the Jets," said White. "This was real important to me the way the players got fired up although the game really didn't mean anything. They showed pride. I had had second thoughts over whether they would be fired up."

Asked what Staubach told him before the kickoff, White said "He told me he would do anything he could including getting me a glass of Gatorade."

NY Boss Handed Walking Papers

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants middle linebacker Harry Carson, upon learning that John McVay wouldn't be with the National Football League team next season, wondered about the principle in sports that since you can't fire the team, you fire the coach instead.

"When you're in this line of profession, you expect that," said Carson, a third-year player selected for the Pro Bowl. "Like some of the players said before, the coaches don't hand off, they don't throw the ball and they don't miss tackles. They can only get the best players they can find. If individuals don't perform, you can't blame the coaches."

McVay, who was unable to improve the inept Giants, was fired Monday, while at the same time, director of operations Andy Robustelli announced he was resigning.

"I regret to announce John will not be rehired," Robustelli said, confirming rumors that started Nov. 19 when the Giants fumbled away a game in the final seconds against Philadelphia. "We appreciate all John and his staff have done, but because of the circumstances surrounding this frustrating football season, we had to make a change."

The Giants, who have not made the NFL playoffs in 15 years, got off to a promising start this season. They were 5-3 at the halfway point in the year, before dropping six straight, including that loss to Philadelphia, when the Eagles returned a fumble for a touchdown in the final seconds for the victory.

That game touched off a wave of criticism from the loyal Giants supporters, who have followed the team to four stadiums in three states over the last decade. About 100 fans burned their tickets to the Dec. 3 game against Los Angeles, and the following week, a plane flew over the stadium trailing a banner proclaiming, "15 years of lousy football, we've had enough."

Team owner Wellington Mara said he did not feel McVay could handle all the pressure directed his way following the 6-10 season.

"The pressure would have been extreme if he came back. He couldn't have successfully handled it," Mara said. "The people are tired of losing and have less patience than they would have had under other circumstances."

first-place votes and 1,176 points. The remaining four No. 1 votes went to Notre Dame, which retained second place with 1,123 points.

Duke is 6-0 after beating Southern Cal 79-65 in its only game last week, while Notre Dame, 4-0, had the week off. The poll is based on games played through Sunday, Dec. 17.

UCLA, in fifth place last week, climbed to third with 969 points after a 97-73 pasting of San Diego State. The Bruins are now 4-1, their only loss coming at the hands of Notre Dame.

North Carolina State jumped from seventh place to fourth with 900 points. The Wolfpack beat NC-Wilmington 75-51 in its only outing to raise its record to 7-1.

Michigan State, 3-1, which had been third a week ago, dropped to fifth place with 822 points after bowing to North Carolina 70-69. That victory raised the Tar Heels' record to 5-1 and boosted them to sixth place with 744 points.

UA Board Plans Action

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A University of Arkansas football player will be disciplined today, less than a week after two other players were suspended from school, university President Charles E. Bishop said Monday night.

Bishop said that the disciplinary action planned for today stems from violations of university curfew rules and "other dormitory violations."

Another student who is not a member of the Razorback football team also faces disciplinary action today, Bishop told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

Bishop refused to identify the two students to be disciplined. However, wide receiver Bobby Duckworth told a Fayetteville reporter Monday that he was scheduled to appear before university officials today.

When asked whether he had been disciplined for dormitory rule violations, Duckworth said, "They (university officials) are going to. I'm supposed to talk with them tomorrow (today). I'm supposed to go before a board or something."

Football Coach Lou Holtz confirmed Monday that Duckworth would not travel with the Razorbacks to Tempe, Ariz., this week to play in the Fiesta Bowl against UCLA next Monday. "Duckworth is staying home with personal problems," Holtz told Butch Henry, the UA sports information director.

Last week, flanker Donny Bobo and running back Micheal Forrest were suspended from the university after a coed filed a complaint that alleged she was raped six times in a UA athletic dormitory. They were charged Monday with first-degree rape by Washington County Prosecutor Mahlon Gibson of Fayetteville.

Bobo and Forrest pleaded innocent to the rape charges late Monday.

Bishop said the third player and the student would be disciplined, but would not be suspended from school.

"We are not authorized to suspend players or anyone else unless there is a clear and present danger from their presence on the campus," Bishop said.

He said disciplinary action for the two students will come in the form of "administrative sanctions" or from a student-faculty judicial board.

Bishop said he had recommended to student affairs officials that the students appear before a judicial board.

Duckworth also told the Fayetteville reporter that he will not play in the Fiesta Bowl because of personal problems.

"I have a bunch of personal problems that have to have immediate attention. I talked with Coach Holtz about it. It's a personal problem only I can attend to," he said.

Duckworth started in Arkansas' opening game and completed the season with seven receptions for 140 yards and two touchdowns.

Duckworth practiced last week and through the weekend with the Razorbacks. But when he showed up for practice Monday, he was told that Holtz had decided he would not practice with the team, Jesse Branch, UA wide receivers coach, said.

Trial Date Set For Bobo, Forrest

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A March 1 trial date has been set for two University of Arkansas football players who were arraigned Monday on charges of first-degree rape.

Donny Bobo and Micheal Forrest pleaded innocent before Circuit Judge Maupin Cummings.

The charges were filed after a 21-year-old coed alleged she was raped between 3 a.m. and 6 a.m. last Tuesday in the UA athletic dormitory.

The players, who surrendered voluntarily, were released without bond. They appeared with their attorney, Ken Mourton of Fayetteville.

Prosecutor Mahlon Gibson of Fayetteville announced earlier Monday that charges would be filed.

"After a full and lengthy investigation of the incident in question, it is the opinion of our office that the matter should be prosecuted," Gibson said.

He said deputy prosecutor Kim Smith "has conducted an extensive investigation, has reached this conclusion, and I fully agree."

The punishment for conviction of first-degree rape is five to 50 years in prison or life imprisonment.

Bobo, a junior flanker, and Forrest, a senior running back, were suspended from school last week pending investigation of the coed's complaint.

Reeves Interested In Giant Task

DALLAS (AP) — Danny Reeves is making it no secret: if the New York Giants are interested in making him their next head football coach, he's interested in talking with them.

"I haven't heard anything from anybody, but I'm interested," Reeves said after the Giants fired John McVay Monday.

"I feel I'm ready. I've wanted to get into the right situation, and as far as I'm concerned, the Giants could be a good job. I'm definitely interested," Reeves said.

Reeves turned down the job at Atlanta two years ago after it was offered to him, and was a finalist for the Los Angeles Rams' head coaching job.

After McVay got the boot Monday, speculation centered on the 34-year-old Reeves, who was a running back for the Cowboys and became a player-coach in 1970 under Tom Landry, the dean of the NFL coaches.

Reeves was interviewed by the Rams before Los Angeles hired George Allen, who didn't last through the exhibition season.

"The Rams never offered me the job," said Reeves.

However, Reeves disclosed that Atlanta did two years ago in a job eventually taken by Leeman Bennett.

"The Falcons say they didn't offer me the job but I know they did," said Reeves.

Asked if he turned the Falcons down at the time because of poor facilities, Reeves said "Let's just say there were some things we couldn't agree on."

Reeves said that if the Giants get permission from Landry and Cowboy President Tex Schramm to talk to him then he would confer with the Giants.

Reeves dropped out of football in 1973 to take part in a real estate venture building townhouses.

"I missed football and the real estate market dropped out of sight," said Reeves. "Handling 100 townhouses was like handling 100 Duane Thomases."

Reeves became offensive coordinator in 1977 when Jim Myers was promoted to Assistant Head Coach.

Reeves was a running back for seven years under Landry but finally had to retire from an active role because of knee injuries.

He signed as a free agent from South Carolina in 1965.

Landry said when Reeves was being interviewed by Atlanta that he would make a good head coach.

Monterey Eases By Morton 61-38

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The high school basketball game in the Plainsmen gym Monday night resembled a John Wayne movie.

Craig Ehlo played the role of ol' Duke for Monterey, while Morton's nickname provided the inspiration. After all, it really doesn't matter how many Indians Wayne faces, the end result is always the same.

Ehlo scored 18 points and when he wasn't putting the ball through the hoop, he was either making diving saves or feeding teammates as the Plainsmen defeated the Morton Indians 61-38 in a nondistrict game.

Monerey, after shooting only 27 percent from the field in the first two quarters, blistered the nets in the final half to control the game.

"We stressed patience at halftime," said Plainsmen coach Joe Michalka. "In the second half, we were able to work the ball inside, and I think that made the difference."

When Indian postman James Johnson connected on a jump shot from the top of the key for the first half's final score, the two teams went to the dressing room with Monterey on top 21-14.

"Since the Estacado game (Nov. 21), we've had some seniors quit on us," said Morton mentor Tony Mauldin. "We're now a young team that is making a lot of mistakes young teams make.

"The key to the game is that Monterey was able to get into its game — going inside — and they hit just enough outside shots to keep us honest."

The Plainsmen put the first seven baskets through the hoop in the third quarter and kept the Indians off the board until only 1:46 remained in the period.

Ehlo scored three buckets and forward Kevin Kirkman sank two baskets, all from the lane, and the Plainsmen went ahead 35-14.

Monterey ended up outscoring Morton 20-6 in the period and when the quarter ended the Plainsmen had a 41-20 advantage.

However, despite a 21-point lead, not everything was going Monterey's way. With 3:55 remaining in the third quarter 6-5 postman Perry collected his fourth personal foul that gave the Indians a chance to get back in the game.

Monterey began the final quarter the same way it did the third period — scoring.

Lubbock High Hosts Dimmitt

Lubbock High basketball coach Craig Wells best exemplified the Westerners problems this season during a warmup before a game. Wells motioned for one of his players to come over for some last-minute instructions and when the cager arrived, Wells called him by another player's name.

Youth and inexperience have been the main two problems that have stifled the Westerners this season. As a result, the Lubbock High basketball team has spent most of the season learning each other's playing characteristics and are suffering with a hapless 2-10 record.

Tonight, the Westerners will find out if they have learned to play as a team when they host the Dimmitt Bobcats at the Lubbock High gym. Tipoff is slated for 8 p.m.

In other games, the Borger girls will visit Coronado, the Friona boys and girls teams will invade the Dunbar gym, the Coronado boys will visit Borger, while Estacado and Monterey will battle at the Monterey gym.

Though Lubbock High's loses have outweighed its victories, Wells has seen improvment in his club.

"We're playing better at times," said Wells. "Because we're such a young club, we've lacked overall consistency."

In regard to the Westerners depth, Wells said there isn't any.

"When I came here I planned for us to be a fast break and pressing team," said the Westerner coach. "But with only 23 kids in our entire program, you can see we don't have the depth pressing and fast break teams need to have to be successful. Heck, Coronado has 23 players on their sophomore team alone."

Bum Sick Before, After SD Game

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler Coach Bum Phillips is thankful he hasn't had that certain feeling very often. It's a queasy uneasiness that grips a coach when he realizes shortly before game time that his team is not ready to play.

It's an occupational hazard, one your neighborhood pharmacist can't solve and Phillips had it Sunday.

"We just didn't have that enthusiasm," Phillips explained Monday. "You just kind of sense it."

The Oilers proved him correct. Houston's passive pass defense, coupled with hot-handed San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts, resulted in a 45-24 loss, Houston's worst since 1974.

Phillips shunned a fiery Vince Lombardi tirade, deciding it was too late for that.

"It's got to be something that builds up all week long," Phillips said. "It can't be 'Oh God, they're down, I've got to say something.'"

Phillips pounded on his chest and added "If you don't have it in here, the first time a guy pops you on the chops, that talk the coach made in the dressing room is going right out the window."

So the Oilers must forget quickly and get ready for their first trip to the playoffs in nine seasons Sunday against the Miami Dolphins. Phillips the playoffs.

"We've been through a schedule of 10 tough games and in this league it's hard to play emotionally for three games," Phillips said.

The Oilers also could be playing without starting quarterback Dan Pastorini if he does not recover from his injuries against the Chargers.

Pastorini took a sore elbow and three broken ribs into Sunday's game and added a strained knee to the list in the fourth quarter.

"In three days it could be a lot better or he might not be able to play," Phillips said of Pastorini's knee. "It's going to take some time but right now it's extremely sore."

Profits Force High-Pressure Recruiting

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

The scene was Winford Boynes' living room in Oklahoma City. Two members of the academia were giving the young high school star a lesson in college basketball recruiting.

"Larry Gillman wanted me to stay in the living room. Denny Crum was pulled on me to go to the back porth so we could talk alone. It was a tugging war and they almost came to blows. My mother finally called a truce and threw everyone out of the house," Boynes recalled.

"Crum was supposed to come back at 9 the next morning but showed up at 7:30. The San Francisco people were at a hamburger joint across the street — it was like a stakeout — and when they saw Crum come to my house, they rushed over.

"This kind of stuff was going on for three months. At first I enjoyed it, but then I got tired of it. It's incredible what some of theese schools can do if they put their mind to it

"It was an unreal situation. Grown men fighting over an 18-year-old. It was like two kids fighting over a lollypop."

Boys will be boys, especially in college basketball where the lollypops stand 6-foot-8, can stuff a basketball full of goodies and have the potential to turn a financial situation from sour to sweet.

Boynes, who chose Gillman and San Francisco over Crum and Louisville and is now a rookie with the New Jersey Nets, was recruited by some 360 schools, and it wasn't because of his college board scores. College basketball today is less college and more basketball. The coaches will tell you there's more pressure to win and, consequently, more cheating — i.e., buying of high school talent.

First In A Series

It's all big business now and the successful teams make the most points and the most money.

Kentucky, last season's national champion, grossed $1.66 million, $225,000 of which came from making the Final Four of the NCAA. The basketball program showed profits of nearly $700,000 — more than the profits of Kentucky's 1977 football program.

"College basketball has kept me out of the fund-raising business, and I hate begging money," said J.D. Morgan, athletic director at UCLA, which has won more basketall titles than any other school. "Basketbll programs make more economic sense than football."

It's also much easier to turn a basketall program around than a football program. Only five playuers take the court at a time and it often takes just one standout 7-footer to get the fickle alums to remember their alma mater.

Little Iona College, a basketball nobody located north of New York City, hired an aggressive head coach, Jim Valvano, three years ago after a 4-19 season. Last year Valvano lured super frosh Jeff Ruland away from Kentucky and Indiana, and the Gaels went 17-10. This year, their sights are on the NCAA tournament.

"It didn't cost us very much more money to win than it was to lose," said Brother John G. Driscoll, the school president who hired Valvano and made the committment to big time basketball at Iona.

Ruland, the nation's leading freshmen scorer and rebounder, brought Iona instant respectability. That's what the new freshman-eligible rule can do for a program. Earvin Johnson, nicknamed "Magic" for what he can do with a basketball, materialized at Michigan State last year and. . .poof!. . .the Spartans won the Big-10 title for the first time in 20 years.

Coaches are almost universal in their distaste for the freshman-eligible rule. They say freshmen need a year away from the microscope so they can adjust to the rigors of college and basketball. When they don't adjust or don't make the starting lineup right away, the result is more sophomore transfers.

"Freshmen transfer so much they need a revolving door," said Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps. "There's no loyalty any more to picking a school. They enroll at one school, have an argument with the head coach and go elsewhere."

The freshmen-eligible rule and the NCAA's recent limit of 15 basketball scholarships for any four-year period have all but ended the chance for another UCLA dynasty. The Bruins won 10 out of 12 NCAA championships during 1964-75.

Phelps may not like the system, but he understands it. Last year he recruited one of those super freshmen, Kelly Tripucka, who led the Fighting Irish all the way to fourth place in the NCAA tournament.

Phelps knows if he doesn't chase down the freshmen who can play Div. I basketball right away, someone else will. And Phelps and many other coaches interviewed by The Associated Press say that lots of those chases end with the player receiving illegal inducements of cars, apartments and money.

"It's a cancer right now that's terminal," said Phelps. "There's more cheating out there. Plane rides, tickets, clothes, money. Anything somebody wants, somebody will give it to him."

Reggie Carter, who transferred to St. John's last year after being on probation for accepting cash, a car and an apartment at Hawaii, said Hawaii was like most other schools.

"In the big universities you have to win, and cheating just helps you get there," said Carter. "I think Hawaii was typical of most major colleges, only Hawaii got caught."

It is not surprising that players take money and other inducements. How many 17-year-olds can resist that kind of temptation? It is not surprising that coaches make such offers. How many 40-year-old bench jockeys want to walk the streets?

"I was fortunate to have had a way out," said Bob Cousy, former coach at Boston College, who said he joined the business world rather than become a college basketball cheat. "If not, I would have done what everyone else did.

"With today's end-justifies-the-means philsophy, it's fair to say that every level of recruiting gets into gray areas. You're allowed to maintain your principles more as you go down the ladder. It's almost impossible if you're working on the upper rungs."

How did it get that way? Money, television and greater national interest seem to be the best answers.

"You don't hear about many track and tennis coaches being fired," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "There's just not that much interest. When there's interest, there's pressure."

In the minor sports there's no pressure to fill the big fieldhouses, like Kentucky's 23,000-seat Rupp Arena. After the scandals of the early 1950s and early 1960s, basketball programs turned away from the big-city arenas and the fixers and tried to insulate their programs in newly constructed campus courts.

And only winning teams fill those arenas and are seen on television.

Penn State, for example, sold only seven season tickets for basketball last season then fired its longtime coach, John Bach. Dick Harter was brought in, and season ticket sales are over 1,000.

In the past three seasons, only 20 teams were seen on the 35 national TV games, not including the NCAA tournament games. Notre Dame and UCLA topped the charts with eight appearances, Marquette had seven, Michigan and Maryland five and Kentucky four.

Cash Income Not Halted By Probation

By The Associated Press

Kentucky, the 1978 NCAA champion, and Minnesota, the biggest winner in the Big Ten over the past two seasons, both recently got off NCAA probation for recruting violations. But the tinge of illegality didn't hurt their financial ledgers last season.

Kentucky has sold out 23,000-seat Rupp Arena for every game in its three-year history and Minnesota, playing in a 17,600-seat fieldhouse and charging the highest ticket prices in the Big Ten, led the conference in attendance the past two seasons. Minnesota, however, would have qualified for the NCAA Tournament the past two years but was ineligible because of the terms of its probation.

The expenses and debits of the two programs make clear that college basketball is indeed big business.

Morris Condition Remains Same

The situation remained the same — critical — for Michael Morris, the Texas Tech footballer who suffered two cardiac arrests during surgery more than a week ago.

Morris underwent a thyroidectomy on Dec. 11 and while in the operating room and in recovery sustained the two cardiac arrests. He has been in a comatose state since then and been on the critical list all the time.

Morris is in Methodist Hospital.

Miami Too 'Griese' For Patriots 23-3

MIAMI (AP) — The ever-cool Bob Griese and the suddenly-hot Miami Dolphins defense was a more than sufficient knockout combination for the already-reeling New England Patriots.

The Patriots, stunned by the abrupt suspension of coach Chuck Fairbanks in the afternoon, were badly outplayed by the surging Dolphins, who scored a 23-3 victory Monday night to gain the home field in their Dec. 24 wild card playoff game with Houston.

With characteristic aplomb, Griese methodically picked apart the Patriot defense. He hit 12 of 13 passes for 171 yards, including a 6-yard touchdown pass to Nat Moore and a 17-yard score to Duriel Harris.

Meanwhile, the Dolphin defense made three interceptions, recovered a fumble and three times stopped the Patriots inside the Miami 5.

"New England had nothing to gain by winning and they had all the turmoil before the game," Dolphin Coach Don Shula noted.

"The defense, what can you say? It was just an outstanding performance. The goal-line defense stopped them and the defense continued to come up with the takeaways," said Shula, whose team has 12 interceptions in the last four games.

"The problem early in the year was when a team got rolling, we couldn't stop them. But now we're coming up with the takeaways and the goal-line defense has been great," veteran safety Tim Foley said.

Griese set up his scoring pass to Moore in the first quarter with a 37-yard completion to Moore and a 17-yard pass to tight end Andre Tillman. A 38-yard pass to Harris preceded his touchdown pass to Harris, and a 40-yard toss to Harris keyed a drive that ended with Gary Davis' 1-yard scoring plunge.

"We tried to get some passing in running situations. That seemed to work well against them," Griese said.

Moore and Harris had five receptions between them and 93 on the season. Moore had 10 touchdown receptions and Harris three.

"With those two guys, you've just got to get the ball to them because something good is going to happen when you do," Griese said.

Both teams finished 11-5, but the Patriots clinched the AFC East earlier because of a better intradivision record. They will play either Houston or Denver at Foxboro, Mass., Dec. 31.

The Dolphins didn't feel New England gave a half-effort against them, although quarterback Steve Grogan was removed with a mild ankle sprain in the second quarter. He was replaced by bench-rusty backup Tom Owen.

"It helped our egos to beat New England. They had the turmoil but they still came out and played a good game. It shows how much class they have," Moore said.

Patriot nose guard Raymond Hamilton said he and his teammates felt ready to play, despite the day's distractions.

Pats Now 'Fatherless Child' After Coach Accepts New Post

MIAMI (AP) — The New England Patriots have suspended Coach Chuck Fairbanks for accepting a head coaching job at the University Colorado, leaving the Patriots shopping for a new coach only 13 days before they begin playoff action.

"We're a fatherless child," said All-Pro guard John Hannah. "We're orphans — no daddy, no leadership, nobody to turn to."

The Patriots have a first-round National Football League playoff date with either Denver or Houston at home on Dec. 31.

Fairbanks was suspended Monday by team owner Bill Sullivan with the biblical injunction, "No man can serve two masters." In this case, the choices were the Patriots and Colorado.

Fairbanks and dozens of players sought a reprieve in separate appeals, asking Sullivan to let Fairbanks remain through the playoffs. Sullivan turned them down.

"He said we aren't in a voting partnership with him yet," Hannah said. "We just had to bow our heads and say, 'Yes, sir.'"

Colorado's interest in Fairbanks had leaked in press reports last week. Fairbanks and Sullivan met Sunday and Monday — the day of the Patriots late-night game against the Miami Dolphins on national television, a 23-3 pasting by Miami.

Even as the Patriots took final warmups, Sullivan and Fairbanks faced each other in the dressing room. Fairbanks had arrived, saying he intended to coach.

Sullivan, indignant, called Fairbanks' appearance "a great example of what the Jewish people call 'chutzpah' — unmitigated gall."

He said: "I told him to get out. He asked me if I wanted to fire him. I said, no, I didn't want to set him up for a settlement."

Four years remain on Fairbanks's reported $150,000-a-year contract. Sullivan suggested he's considering legal action against the Colorado school but sidestepped specifics.

He waited until the second quarter, then slipped out a back door at the Orange Bowl.

"I tried to make one final appeal to Mr. Sullivan," Fairbanks told the Miami Herald. "I asked him if he would let me continue coaching the team this year. But he turned me down, which is his prerogative."

A remarkably successful college coach at Oklahoma with a six-year record of 52-15-1, Fairbanks came to the Patriots in 1973. His NFL record was 46-39 but the last three years were 31-12. They made the playoffs as a wild card team in 1976 and won the American Conference East title this year.

Young Ward Of Court Among Jonestown Victims

By NADINE JOSEPH

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Vincent Lopez was a troubled boy. His mother died, his father wound up in jail and, at 11, Vincent became a ward of Alamada County.

Then, at the age of 15, he died — one of more than 200 children who died in the Peoples Temple murder-suicide ritual in Jonestown, Guyana.

But Vincent's case is different. He had been a ward of the state, and the Alameda County probation office and Superior Court were responsible for his welfare. Family members and authorities still are trying to explain how he got to Guyana and why he died.

In 1973, the county sent Vincent to a foster home run by Peoples Temple members. Three years later, county judges let a Peoples Temple member become Vincent's guardian and take him to the cult's South American jungle settlement.

That guardian, Walter Jones, left the boy behind when he defected from the cult in 1977 and returned to San Francisco. An attempt was made to get Vincent out of the settlement run by the Rev. Jim Jones. Somehow it failed.

Vincent was born in Oakland in 1963 to a Mexican-American couple. His mother had three children by a previous marriage. His father was a cabinetmaker. When Vincent was 2, his father went to prison on a burglary conviction. When he was 7, his mother died.

His mother's sister, Sarah Gonzales, took Vincent and the other children to raise them.

When his father got out of jail, remarried and refused to let the boy live with him, "Vincent was angry and hurt," his aunt said.

"He was a pudgy little boy who hoped and prayed that his father would start paying attention to him," she said.

At 10, Vincent went to a juvenile court for breaking into a building. He was arrested several times on delinquency charges. When his aunt imposed strict rules, Vincent ran away from home.

"He always got depressed around the Christmas holidays. His father would call, and he would cry," said Mrs. Gonzales. "We loved him dearly, but he had trouble accepting discipline."

At 11, Vincent was placed under the supervision of the county probation department and was sent to Hilltop Home in Redwood Valley, run by Peoples Temple members. Alameda County Probation Director Robert Shaner says the county was aware of the home's connection to the cult.

"It was a nice, comfortable home run by people with good qualifications. These people were group counselors, school teachers, one had a degree from MIT, the other was an assistant district attorney."

Mendocino County Welfare Director Dennis Denny estimates that 150 California children were sent to Peoples Temple homes. Shaner says he believes Vincent was the only one who ended up .n Guyana.

"Vincent was doing very well with Walter Jones. He seemed to straighten out," Shaner said.

But Vincent's aunt had another view. She said he was punished for raiding the refrigerator at night. And when he visited her, "he was dressed like a tramp..." Walter Jones got $200 a month from Alameda County for the boy's care. Mrs. Gonzalez said of Vincent:

"He had lost his joking, playful nature. He was a completely different boy ... as though he was forced to act that way."

In 1976, Walter Jones asked the court to name him Vincent's legal guardian. Probation officer Eugene Brown favored the guardianship, according to records, and Vincent's father didn't contest the matter. Mrs. Gonzales claims she cried and begged for custody.

Probate Court Judge John Sparrow granted Jones temporary, then permanent custody and agreed to let Jones take the boy to South America where Jones was to become a missionary.

After that, records are vague. No one knows why Walter Jones was able to leave Vincent behind. Jones could not be reached for comment. But according to published reports, he became disenchanted with Peoples Temple and left Guyana in 1977.

Private detective Joseph Mazor said Jones hired him to get the boy back. He interviewed Vincent in October. Vincent refused to come home, Mazor said.

"I think research would show that there were another 20 kids like Vincent Lopez down there, kids who shouldn't have been there," said Mazor. "For a year, I wrote letters to the district attorney and probation office, but I was basically told to drop dead. It wasn't a big enough issue."

Alamada County officials said the matter came to their attention in July, when Walter Jones' attorney asked to withdraw from the case on the grounds that he had not seen Jones in two years.

County probate investigators contacted Mrs. Gonzales for leads less than two weeks before the massacre.

"Vincent may have found a father image in Walter Jones," said Mrs. Gonzales. "But he must have felt let down and scared. I worried for two years about him.

"No one is going to tell me he was happy in Jonestown. He loved his freedom too much," she said. "My whole family is still upset. We want answers. We want to know why the county let this happen. I feel people are lying and I want to get to the bottom of it."

Russian Newspaper Hits Chinese Pact

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet military newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda said Sunday the United States, China and Japan are attempting to forge a "military-political bloc" that is anti-Soviet Union.

The commentary made no specific mention of America's decision to establish diplomatic relations with China, a move which some analysts say worries Kremlin leaders.

Soviet media has made only brief mention of the decision announced jointly in Washington and Peking last weekend. The Soviet news agency Tass reported the move without comment in a brief dispatch Saturday.

But Krasnaya Zvezda was blunt in criticizing what it called American attempts to play the "China card" against Moscow. It claimed a "treaty of peace and friendship" between Washington and Peking was now being planned.

"The present administration of the United States has worked out a new strategy for Asia and the Pacific which envisages further build-up of U.S. military might in the region and simultaneously envisages the strengthening of partnership with Japan and China," the newspaper said.

Krasnaya Zvezda said, "The idea of creating a military-political bloc consisting of the United States, Japan and China is now openly publicized in the U.S.A.

"Those who favor creation of an alliance of the NATO type for Asia are on one and the same anti-Soviet, anti-Socialist platform," the newspaper said, adding:

"The difference lies only in the fact that Washington and Tokyo describe the Soviet Union as 'the most probable adversary,' while in the Chinese Capital it (Russia) is proclaimed 'Enemy no. 1.'"

The Great Lakes are so large they hold one-fourth of all the fresh water in the world. This, according to National Geographic, is enough to cover the United States 12 feet deep.

Evicted Couple Lives In Tent

DOLLIVER, Iowa (AP) — David and Amber Tucker decided to make things simple after their landlord evicted them. They moved to a Cheyenne lodge — commonly called a tepee.

They do without modern conveniences, they say, but also without modern expenses.

Their only concession to modern times is a battery-operated radio. Even it has a practical use. It keeps the couple abreast of weather developments.

Tucker, an Indian history buff who works as a welder in nearby Armstrong, says Indians created a sensible mode of living.

"It's completely ecological," he said of the portable dwelling. "Once we leave, the grass will grow back and it'll be like we were never here."

Wright Brothers Termed 'Geniuses'

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — A Dartmouth engineering professor has labeled "bunk" the myth that Orville and Wilbur Wright were simple bicycle mechanics who tinkered their way to the first powered airplane flight 75 years ago Sunday.

Frederick Hooven, who as a boy built a full-size airplane with Orville's help, says the Wrights were "self-educated geniuses ... who were good enough engineers, designers and builders to translate their ideas into actual machinery."

Hooven, 73, a former director of research for Ford Motor Co. and an accomplished engineer-inventor himself, has studied the brothers' early notebooks.

DR. LAMB

Colds Spread By Hands

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Every winter we have lots of colds. I do my best to keep the family bundled up and keep their feet dry, but no matter how much effort I make there seems to be one cold after another. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER — There is such a thing as natural resistance. In some children there is a deficiency of gamma globulin, a blood protein, that makes them more susceptible to colds.

You need to realize that colds are contagious diseases. Children, by exposure to lots of other children at school, and their parents have more colds than the adults without school age children.

Any one who is exposed to lots of other people is more likely to get a cold. I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-2, Cold And Flu Group, Prevention And Treatment. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It will give you some useful information.

Meanwhile, I would suggest that you keep in mind that colds are often spread by your hands. Keep your hands clean, and wear gloves if you are out. A hand that picks up germs from a door knob and then touches the face may innoculate you with cold germs.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Two months ago I had a pulmonary embolism. What causes an embolism? How can I prevent it from occurring again? Will I have a good chance to live a normal life and will I be restricted from anything? Would taking Coumadin for a long period of time hurt me in any way or is it goof for me?

DEAR READER — A pulmonary embolism usually refers to a blood clot that has gone to the lungs. The blood clot commonly forms in the legs or in the deep veins in the lower body. The clot moves with the circulation to return to the right side of the heart. From here it flows through the heart to the lungs with the blood that goes there to pick up oxygen.

Because the arteries to the lung get smaller and smaller as they branch out to the tiny air sacks, the blood clot lodges and obstructs the arterial flow to a portion of the lung. If the clot is small and the area of the lung is small, the effectives are limited but if it is a very large clot and blocks a main artery, it can be more dangerous.

The actual attack resembles a heart attack and often doctors have trouble initially deciding which a patient has.

The Coumadin you asked about is to prevent formation of blood clots. You didn't say what your age is but, of course, birth control pills are sometimes suspected as a factor in forming clots. Bed rest and inactivity sometimes contribute to formation of clots, too. Sitting with the back of the thighs under pressure to the point of occluding the veins along the back of the thighs may also cause it.

Your outlook depends a lot on what caused the clot. If it was an isolated event and you take Coumadin, the chances of a normal life span are excellent. I would advise avoiding prolonged sitting and standing without movement. If you must sit, get up and move around at least every half hour to stir up your circulation.

Radio's Shakespeare Festival Promises To Be Entertaining

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — National Public Radio's Shakespeare Festival — is a fun way to spend an evening. Unless, of course, you've got some clean socks that need to be rolled.

With all that good TV silliness available to sedate the work-weary mind, radio Shakespeare seems a bit rigorous. I mean, why listen to forsooth noise when you can see Laverne and Shirley?

But Zounds! The good folk at NPR promise light entertainment, even fun and some chuckles, with their two-hour, four-part "Shakespeare — a Portrait in Sound." It's now in production and scheduled for airing on NPR stations early next year.

Of course, "Shakespeare can be fun" is a phrase not to be completely trusted. It's often uttered by craggy-faced literature professors just before they assign the tragedies and "Troilus and Cressida" for next Tuesday.

But there is reason to trust Robert Montiegel, executive producer for the "Portrait in Sound" project, when he says, "We want to be light entertainment with this project, not just get some academic to give a lecture on William Shakespeare."

For one thing, the portraits are not Shakespearian readings but little radio dramas that surmise what Shakespeare's life must have been like from childhood to the easy life of retired poet.

Modern American Man, played by Arthur Hill, is taken on a time-journey to Olde England in search of the true William Shakespeare. Hill goes first to Stratford, where Shakespeare spent his youth, then to London and the Court of Queen Elizabeth, where Shakespeare quickly learned to be a political creature.

"It's the life and times of William Shakespeare," Montiegel says, "and what we don't know about him, we conjecture. It's fleshing him out in a colorful way."

The voice of Shakespeare is heard only in recitals of some sonnets and a few key monologues from his plays; the rest is backstage stuff — a promising notion. Maybe we'll find out young Willie really wrote plays to impress the Avon lady as she passed through Stratford.

"What you'll learn is a hell of a lot of what Elizabethan life was like," Montiegel says. "The background, the milieu that Shakespeare lived in — things like the pox and how it deformed people."

The pox? Light entertainment? Well, remember, this is NPR and Shakespeare.

The "Portraits" series is designed to coincide with the public TV's productions of Shaespeare's plays early next year. To play the characters in Shakespeare's life, Public Radio has enlisted the acting skills of Hill, Charles Nelson Reilly, Joan Hackett, Marian Mercer, Peter Donat and others who don't need the money.

Officials Release Robbery Figure

NEW YORK (AP) — For days after the cash and jewel heist at Kennedy International Airport, reports on the amount of the haul fluctuated between $3 million and $8 million, but now federal officials say the firm figure is $5.8 million.

The FBI's statement, issued Monday concerning the Dec. 11 robbery, said $5 million of the total was in U.S. currency, and the remainder was in foreign currency and jewelry. The robbers have not been caught despite what FBI spokesman Frank Monserrate says is a "very active ... and wide-ranging" investigation. Police found the getaway van on a Brooklyn street last week.

Pope Gives Kids Christmas Blessing

VATICAN CITY (AP) — In an unusual pre-Yule blessing, Pope John Paul II joined thousands of children gathered in St. Peter's Square on Sunday to sing Italian and Polish Christmas carols as he blessed them and the small images of Jesus the Child they carried.

The Polish-born pope stood for 30 minutes in his studio window overlooking the square and the 40,000 people gathered to receive the blessing.

"I must be smiling today in seeing so many boys and girls gathered here for the pope's blessing of the images of Jesus the Child that you will put in your manger-cribs," the pope said in an address in Italian.

He said the tradition of installing manger-cribs to recall Jesus' birth was started by St. Francis of Assisi at Greccio, Italy, in 1223 and later spread throughout the world as a symbol of the saint's poverty, humility and simplicity.

"Unfortunately," he said, "contemporary society is not always a messenger of such virtues. Sometimes (these virtues) are considered as weakness or frustations of the human person."

PERKINS

Matt, Who?

HERSKOWITZ

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. No one expected the New York Jets to do anything when Richard Todd went down. Can you give me the background on Matt Robinson, whom I never heard of before he started winning games?

—Walt Tracewski, Independence, Kans.

A. Robinson was a ninth-round draft choice out of Georgia in 1977. Though he led the Southeastern Conference in passing as a sophomore, he played very little his last two years, when the Bulldogs used a veer offense with quarterback Ray Goff running things well enough to take the team to the Sugar Bowl. "I only came in on passing downs, or right before the half," Robinson said.

Goff, by the way, had a brief trial with Denver before returning home to Valdosta, Ga., where he runs a service station.

• • •

Q. Can you give the football background of the new Massachusetts governor, Ed King? Was he any good?

—Paul Gattuso, Brockton, Mass.

A. Ed King, as we have it, beat first the Democrats' machine candidate, Michael Dukakis, who was backed by Tip O'Neill and all the other pols, then beat the Republican — by emphasis on reducing government spending.

King came out of Boston College, where he teamed with Art Donovan and Ernie Stautner among others, and first played with the Buffalo Bills of the All-American Conference, then as a middle guard with the NFL Baltimore Colts in 1950, starting every game. That Baltimore team folded, and King was cut the next season by the New York Yankees, for the curious reason that he was a loner. (This background was provided by an old friend of King's, Baltimore columnist John Steadman.)

Q. I would like some information about a young baseball pitcher, John Polloni. His home is Allen Park, Mich.

—E.F. Wiese, Union Lake, Mich.

A. Lefthander John Polloni's claim to fame, so far, is that he was swapped almost even-up for Ferguson Jenkins, with the Texas Rangers also tossing in $25,000 to the Boston Red Sox. Polloni had a rough year with Pawtucket in the AAA International League and has been assigned for 1979 to the AA Bristol club in the Eastern League.

Polloni, who attended Arizona State for three years, now makes his off-season home in Tempe.

Q. I am enclosing a clipping of a column by Jim Murray of the Los Angeles Times, with his versions of Murphy's Law. My favorites here are. . .If you can smile when everything about you is going wrong, join the San Francisco 49ers, and The wrong Ram quarterback is the one that's in there. Has Murray been recognized as the best sportswriter in the country?

—Helen Lyerly, San Mateo, Calif.

A. On his good days, which outnumber the bad about 364 to 1, Murray is undoubtedly the funniest sportswriter in the country. He has been honored many times as the best by his peers, though there are four or five others in the same league with him. Murray, when he was the LA bureau chief of Time Magazine, once picked up big spare bucks creating one-liners for TV network comics.

ELDER TRIUMPHANT — Golfer Lee Elder raises his club and hat after shooting a birdie on the 18th green to win the 1978 Westchester Classic. Looking back, Elder says: "Winning at Westchester had to be my greatest thrill, because I beat such a great field." (AP Laserphoto)

Achievements Make Elder Unique Golfer

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Lee Elder stood over the putt as the crowd hushed. Eighteen inches away sat the cup, inviting and tantalizing. The 1978 Westchester Classic had come down to a single stroke. Do or die.

"I remember it ... oh yes, I sure do remember it," said Elder.

Buried in the rough on his second shot, Elder had recovered with a chip that he called the greatest shot of his career. Now he was 18 inches from the cup again and he could see that last putt in his mind's eye all over again, the thought of it warming him against New York's winter winds.

Elder's soft stroke sent the ball rolling toward the cup for a birdie on the par-5, 509-yard 18th hole and the tournament title.

"Winning at Westchester had to be my greatest thrill, because I beat such a great field," said Elder. "That final day, from tee to green, I played as well as I've ever played."

The win at Westchester and another at Milwaukee made 1978 Elder's most prosperous year on the tour. They also earned him another trip to Augusta, Ga., for the Masters next April.

Much was made of Elder's first appearance at the Masters in 1975 because no black man had ever played in the prestigious tournament before. Now, his return is viewed rather matter-of-factly, and that's a tribute both to the player and his sport.

"Ninety percent of the tournaments I play, I'm the only black there," said Elder. "I'd like them to look at me as just another golfer. But I'm unique — not for my blackness but for my accomplishments."

The 1979 Masters will mark Elder's third trip to Augusta and it is becoming routine both for him and the tournament. He has blended well into the carefully manicured setting.

"The first time ..." his voice drifted away for a moment. "The first time, you do anything, there's a lot of pressure involved. The second time was easier and this time will be even easier for me."

One of the factors that will affect his performance at Augusta, said Elder, will be his caddy. The Masters is the only PGA event where home course caddies are drawn by lot and golfers can not bring their own men with them. Elder would feel a lot more comfortable with Dolphus Hull, his regular caddy, at his side.

"He is 50 percent of the team," Elder said of Hull. "He plays a large part in the success of Lee Elder."

May Still 'Jinxed' Man

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bulls have been waiting three years for Scott May to show that he is the player he appeared to be when the team made him its top choice in the 1976 NBA draft.

May is waiting too.

"It seems like I'm jinxed. I've never really had a chance to get untracked. Every time I seem like I'm about ready to be ready something else happens," said May. "It's frustrating. But it's something I've learned to deal with.

"I'm not unhappy with my play when I'm playing, but I can't contribute when I'm out hurt," he added. "That's what they've got me for ... to help bring a championship to Chicago. When I'm healthy I'm confident I will do my share, but its frustrating waiting to get healthy."

He's heard the rumors that the Bulls are eager to trade him. But the 24-year-old Sandusky, Ohio, native, doesn't believe the team is in that big a hurry.

"Everybody gets traded, so if I go, I go," said May, who has appeared in only two games this season because of a right knee injury. "But they must like me here or else they would have unloaded me a long time ago.

"I've heard the talk. That I'm not the player they thought I'd be. But I don't think I'm doing that poorly.

Tabbed as the scoring forward the Bulls so desperately needed, May, college basketball's player of the year in 1976 when he led Indiana to the NCAA title, was the second player selected in the 1976 draft behind John Lucas.

May was a two-time All-American and twice voted Most Valuable Player in the Big Ten. After the draft, then Chicago Coach Ed Badger called him "a coach's dream."

But mononucleous struck the 6-foot-7 May in the preseason of his rookie year.

He missed 10 games that season and the team lost 14 of its first 16 games. Only a torrid stretch run enabled the Bulls to earn a playoff berth.

Last season, he appeared in only 55 games when he was hampered by a left knee injury which eventually required surgery. He barely recovered from surgery, when his right knee failed.

"The doctor told me the problem I'm having is something I've had since I was a kid," said May. "I've played basketball all of my life and it was just a matter of time."

Though he's fought the injuries and managed to average 14.1 points a game in two NBA seasons, May has been criticized for not scoring more. He feels that some of his critics don't understand what type of player he is or his role with the team.

Vikes Not Ashamed Of Making Playoffs

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — There are those who believe someone should shoot the downtrodden Minnesota Vikings and put them out of their misery.

But the Vikings themselves aren't miserable and they sure aren't apologizing for anything, even winning the NFC Central Division again with the lowest winning percentage of any team in NFL playoff history.

"We're not 8-7-1 anymore; we're 0-0," said Coach Bud Grant, whose team won a sixth straight division title. "We're all 0-0 and it's a new season. We're just happy to be champions again."

But many people aren't so happy, including members of the Oakland Raiders, one of three teams in the AFC which posted a better record than Minnesota but were eliminated from post-season play.

"The Vikings don't deserve to be in the playoffs," said Raider guard Gene Upshaw Sunday after Oakland topped Minnesota 27-20. The 9-7 Raiders also defeated Chicago, Green Bay and Detroit, prompting John Matuszak to quip, "I guess this makes us NFC Central Division champions by proxy."

"We're in the wrong division," added Upshaw.

At least the wrong conference. The AFC's San Diego and Seattle also whipped Minnesota during the season and finished with 9-7 records but, like Oakland, will watch the playoffs from their living rooms.

Vikings' players, however, firmly believe that they belong in the playoffs, where they have been in 10 of the last 11 years.

"We beat Dallas and Denver and they're both in the playoffs," reasoned Viking receiver Sammy White.

"We're like that watch commercial," added Ahmad Rashad. "We take a licking but keep on ticking."

The Vikings' resiliency over the past five weeks has been amazing. They managed a measly 1-3-1 record in that span and gave up 99 points in the final three games but still captured the division crown because no one else wanted it.

In fact, the Vikings became the only team in NFL playoff history which allowed more points than it scored.

Grant was asked how far his club could go.

"Well, we could win the Super Bowl. Is that far enough?" he responded "Our team has proved it can win some big games. All we have to do now is win three in a row."

The Vikings have won two playoff games in a row plenty of times, but never three. Four Super Bowl losses have seen to that.

"We won't be favorites (in the playoffs) this time, but that's not all bad," Grant said.

"The 8-7-1 record is to our advantage," claims quarterback Fran Tarkenton, who thirsts for a Super Bowl ring. "Nobody is going to believe we have a chance to win two playoff games and advance to the Super Bowl.

"But our players now believe we can do it again. The way we played in the second half, we can beat anybody."

Estacado Slips By

The Estacado Matadors slipped by the Hereford Whitefaces 25-24 using mostly the 10 points that Karen Mann dropped in and the free throw that came within the last 30 seconds of the game by Maxine Walker.

Darlene Sanders pumped in a total of 13 for the Herd to gain the high point berth. The win gave Estacado a 5-9 record for the season while the Herd went to a 2-11 ledger for the season.
