Frisco Road Piles Up Evidence To Support Panhandle Construction Plans

SEYMOUR LINE GIVEN SUPPORT BY WITNESSES

Rock Island Asks Permit To Build Quanah-Pampa Extension

DENVER CASE WAITS

Many North Texans Heard In I. C. C. Hearing At Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, July 29. (AP)—Piling up a mass of evidence the St. Louis-San Francisco railway company today introduced 16 witnesses in its effort to obtain permission from the Interstate Commerce commission to tap fertile Texas Panhandle grain fields with a new railroad. When today's hearing recessed, the Frisco still had many witnesses to present. Indications were their case would continue through tomorrow.

The Frisco asked permission to purchase or obtain control of the Gulf, Texas and Western railway company and to construct a connecting line from Seymour, northern terminus of the G. T. and W., to Vernon. The Frisco also sought trackage rights on the Chicago, Rock Island and Gulf railway from Jacksboro to Fort Worth. Jacksboro is near the southern end of the G. T. and W., the latter line extending to Saleaville.

Quanah-Pampa Line

The Rock Island, seeking to connect with the new Vernon-Seymour line, asked permission to build a road through Quanah, thence northward via Wellington to Pampa.

Testimony on the Fort Worth and Denver City's petition for a line from Childress to Pampa via Shamrock and of the Clinton, Okla., Western for a road from Pampa to La Forge, probably will not be heard before late tomorrow.

Merchants, cattlemen, millers, bankers, farmers and chamber of commerce officials of northwest Texas towns testified today in behalf of the Frisco petition. A. M. Bourland, Vernon, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce told I. C. C. Examiner Charles Mahaffie he thought the Vernon-Seymour extension would open thousands of acres of ranch land to developments.

North Texans Heard

Other witnesses, who testified to that effect: Oliver Loving, Jermyn banker; W. N. Thompson, Jacksboro, miller; Lewis Johnson, Jacksboro, cattle breeder; Grady Shipp, secretary of the Vernon Chamber of Commerce; L. K. Johnson, Vernon, banker; W. M. Creighton, Megargel merchant; J. E. Branson, Megargel; S. E. Wallace, Seymour, rancher; G. L. Caldwell, Seymour, merchant; R. C. Clamps, Seymour, grain dealer; H. R. McDavitt, Seymour, cotton buyer; Gus Jones, Jacksboro, grain and feed dealer.

At the morning session today two witnesses testified before the I. C. C. representative and C. B. Terrell, Lon Smith and Clarence Gilmore of the Texas railroad commission, that unless the G. T. and W. is sold or leased to a through road it probably will have to suspend operation. B. E. Bach, G. T. and W. general superintendent, said that road is handling about 50 per cent of its freight capacity tonnage and 10 to 15 per cent of its passenger capacity.

Loop's 'Lone Wolf' Turns Out to Be Boy of 16

CHICAGO, July 29. (UP)—A dirty faced, undersized boy of 16 has confessed to police that he is the "lone wolf" responsible for more than 100 loop office burglaries.

The youth, who identified himself as Walter Bielawa, ran afoul the law when he went after "bigger game." He was arrested as he tried to break into a carload of government alcohol in the Illinois Central yards.

Wichita Youth of 20 Days Takes Mother, Grandmother in Plane

Being very new himself, Robert Bruce Anglin, 20-days-old, picked out the most modern means of transportation for his first trip and prevailed on his mother and grandmother to make the flight a matter of three generations. The three flew to Oklahoma City Saturday, the young man for whose benefit the trip was planned sleeping almost all the way. The baby is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Anglin. In the group picture, from left to right, are Marvin Smith, D. H. Hyler; Mrs. Sylvester Grim, grandmother of the youthful traveler, Mrs. Anglin with Robert Bruce, and Mike Anglin.

LICENSE FEE 'WAR' REOPENS

Oklahoma Resumes Arresting Commercial Cars

Citizens of Texas were reminded Monday that the Oklahoma automobile license law, providing that commercial vehicles entering from other states must bear the Oklahoma license or be subject to a fine, is being enforced in Cotton county.

The reminder came in the form of the arrest of two men, one from Wichita Falls, the other from Burkburnett. The Wichita Falls man, A. H. Mabry, truck driver for the Panhandle Refining company, was held by Cotton county authorities until an attorney for the company came from Wichita Falls and paid a fine of $50 and costs, a total of $70.45. The Burkburnett man was not fined, but was released when he bought an Oklahoma license plate.

The Oklahoma law, though on the statute books for some time, has been spasmodically enforced over a long period, the enforcement of the edict depending on whether or not the county commissioners court of the several counties wish to appoint a special deputy for this purpose.

This was learned Monday from Cotton county authorities, who said they had no direct voice in the enforcement of the law. Its enforce-

Baby Kept Alive By Inhalator Squad Is Safe

SANTA MONICA, Calif., July 29. (US)—Firemen who have been keeping 29-day-old Marie Balle alive for the last 10 days by administrations of oxygen were rewarded today when the baby was pronounced out of danger by the attending physician. The inhalator squad was called as a last resort to save Marie from death when pneumonia caused lung congestion.

Sale of Texas School Land Is Postponed

AUSTIN, July 29. (AP)—Sale of 1,500,000 acres of public school land advertised for Sept. 1 has been postponed indefinitely, J. H. Walker, chief clerk of the general land office, announced today. Walker said inability to receive lists of the property from the printer in time for distribution caused the postponement.

Clothesless Idea Of Canon Dwellers Encounters Snag

STAPP LAKE LODGE, Colo., July 29. (AP)—A group of 10 truth and health seekers from Chicago, headed by Dr. George Huntley Aron today was advised by Under Sheriff R. E. Burgener of Boulder county that no one can stay in the county without wearing clothes.

Burgener made his announcement to the Chicago cult after he had spent several hours chasing a "phantom faster" in and out among the rocks of St. Vrain canon, where seven women and three men have taken abode "for the good of the soul." The phantom, said to be Alger Solberg, was reported to the officer by a woman tourist, who complained that the man was taking a sun bath without a sun suit. The chase proved futile.

Burgener said today he had no objection to the cult worshipping and fasting in the canon, which they have named the "vale of enchantment," but that any attempt at nudity by members would result in arrests.

GRAF IS READY

FREDRICHSHAFEN, July 29. (US)—Dr. Hugo Eckener tonight announced that the Graf Zeppelin is leaving for America Thursday morning, weather permitting.

TOO LOUD

Wichita Council Places Ban on Noisy Radios

Besieged by two more urgent petitions against the clamor of radio loud speakers in pig-stands and sandwich shops, city council Monday night set about the task of silencing both the tumult of the amplifiers and the lamentations of their victims.

The city fathers began by passing on its first reading an ordinance forbidding business houses to foster any "loud noise, music, talking, singing, or other sound, from radio, phonograph, or other instrument."

They had planned to complete the job on the occasion of its beginning, but the absence of the mayor and of Alderman J. H. Patton made it impossible to enact the emergency clause which would have dispensed with the usual three readings, and put the ordinance into immediate effect.

PAIN TORTURES DOCTOR SNOOK

Withdrawal of Spinal Fluid Causes Misery

By MORRIS DE HAVEN TRACY

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 29. (UP)—Dr. James Howard Snook, on trial for the alleged murder of Theora Hix, 24-year-old medical student, spent a tortured day in court today. He suffered violent headaches and other discomforts, the result of the withdrawal of spinal fluid by Dr. H. M. Bundage on Saturday for use in making pathological tests.

At noon, Doctor Snook was feeling so badly that his lawyers asked the afternoon session be postponed. The court ordered Doctor Brundage to visit Snook during recess and, on Brundage's report that Snook's condition was painful but not serious, refused an adjournment.

Rest Allowed

But at 3 p. m., the court allowed a 20-minute rest and Doctor Snook retired to the sheriff's office where he stretched out as comfortably as he could on a table, holding his head with one hand and his back with the other. The United Press correspondent found him, however, in apparently good spirits. He explained with much detail just what had been done to him and its effects.

"I don't know what they wanted to find out," he said, "but I feel pretty tough. Every time I get up quickly my head aches and things go dim."

He was in a thoughtful mood.

"I feel the newspapers are going out of their way to dig up dirty things," he said.

"If the jury finds me not guilty and I am at liberty again, all the things that are being said about

Two Questioned In Dallas Woman's Death

DALLAS, July 29. (UP)—Two men were questioned here late today in the death at midnight Sunday of Mrs. Clarence S. Carson, Dallas. One of the men was Mrs. Carson's husband, a painter.

The second man, Will Harris, a life-long friend of Carson, told the sheriff the Carsons had quarreled immediately preceding the woman's death. He said he saw Mrs. Carson back out from the room in which the two had quarreled. She shot herself through the breast at the door, Harris alleged.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, July 29. (UP)—Aubrey Scalley, convicted at Dallas for the robbery of a grocery store there, arrived at the penitentiary here today after his tenth ride in a Huntsville-bound "one way" bus. Scalley was given a 50-year sentence for the robbery.

Little Hope Held For Girl Accident Victim

SAN ANTONIO, July 29. (UP)—Little hope was felt here tonight for Lois Boltz, 14, who has not recovered consciousness since she fell from an automobile three weeks ago. An operation performed Saturday to relieve pressure from her brain was unavailing.

Logan Placed in Charge of Muny Airport as City Takes Over Lease

Management of the Municipal airport on the Burkburnett road passed into the hands of the city government, under the direction of George D. Fairtrace, city manager, by the action of the city council in regular session Monday night. The city accepted the direction of the port from L. P. Hammond, head of the present operating company, the change to become effective Aug. 1.

Mr. Fairtrace announced that he would place C. P. Logan, former superintendent of the water department, in direct charge of the port, with an office on the grounds. Control of the field has been sought in an effort to devise ways and means of financing necessary improvements, the manager explained, and efforts to make the port not only self-sustaining but profit making will be made at once. Construction of runways, new hangars, erection of border lights, and the building of office and waiting rooms along with additional facilities are all a part of the improvement program, Mr. Fairtrace added. No work will begin until the new management has had an opportunity to study the situation and

TWO TRAGEDIES CAST SHADOWS ON MARATHON

Crash of Minnesota Plane Saddens Two Pilots Of 'Robin'

'OBIE'S' BUDDY KILLED

Booster of St. Louis Endurance Feat and Wartime Pilot Killed

ST. LOUIS, July 29. (US)—The St. Louis Robin completed 400 hours of continuous flying at 11:17 tonight. Indication that the motor was beginning to fail caused ground observers to fear that Jackson and O'Brine will not be able to attain their objective.

ST. LOUIS, July 29. (US)—Two tragedies within four hours today cast their shadows over the spectacular performance of the St. Louis-Robin, but the little endurance plane flew dauntlessly on in its seventeenth day of continuous flight.

Its record at 11:17 p. m., central standard time, was 400 hours, more than six full days ahead of the best previous endurance mark, and its pilots, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, had earned more than $20,000 in cash subscriptions.

Jones O'Brine's Buddy

Jackson and O'Brine were informed of the first tragedy, the death of Capt. P. L. Crichton, and the fatal injury of Owen Haughland, who died later, in the crash of the endurance plane Minnesota, but word of the fatal crash of an airplane at Black Jack, Mo., a few miles from where the Robin is flying, was withheld from the Robin pilots, because the pilot of the death ship was O'Brine's buddy.

George Lee Lambert, wealthy aviation enthusiast, and Harold C. Jones, a student flier from New York, were killed in the second smashup shortly after O'Brine and Jackson had sent down a message of consolation for the relatives of the Minnesota fliers.

Lambert Booster

Lambert and O'Brine were close friends and the former was "Obie's" most enthusiastic booster in the Robin's contest with time. Lambert was vice president of the Von Hoffman Aircraft corporation here and was the son of Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, pioneer airman and founder of the field where the Robin is cruising.

By some queer twist of fate, Lambert and Jones went to their

Leahy To Seek Injunction; Moody Saves Juan Flores

Convicted Rancher Plans Last Court Fight To Save His Neck

AUSTIN, July 29. (UP)—A writ of injunction to stop the execution of Harry J. Leahy, condemned to die Aug. 2, will be filed by Mack Gates, Huntsville attorney, the Austin Statesman said today.

The Statesman said it had talked with Gates over long-distance telephone. Gates did not know where he would file the writ, but it would be done before Thursday, the newspaper reported.

Should the injunction be enforced, Leahy, condemned to die for the murder of Dr. J. A. Ramsey, Mathis physician, would have his execution halted. In a sanity trial last week, he was declared sane, and the last apparent step toward saving his life was lost.

All methods of calling a halt to the execution have been used up to the present time. Twice Gov. Dan Moody has issued reprieves. An appeal to the supreme court resulted in the calling of a new trial but the decision in the second trial was "death" instead of a 50-year sentence as in the first trial.

Since the second district trial, new appeals have failed to be recognized.

Commutation Comes on Eve of Mexican's March To Death Chair

AUSTIN, July 29, (UP)—For the eleventh and last time Juan Flores was saved from the electric chair today when Gov. Dan Moody commuted his sentence to life imprisonment just eight hours before he was to have gone to his death at midnight.

Reprieves have been granted 10 previous times while officers have tried to clear up the killing of Manuel Fernandez, Mexican, who was stabbed to death during a store robbery in San Antonio, Jan. 22, 1927.

The state's chief witness against Flores was a Mexicon woman, who later executed affidavits contradicting her testimony, Gov. Dan Moody pointed out in his clemency proclamation. She had testified Flores told her he was present when Fernandez was killed.

The woman has since been convicted of dealing in narcotics, Governor Moody said. He doubts that Flores would have been given a death penalty without her testimony.

He also mentioned that Flores has a wooden leg, yet this defect was not pointed out by Fernandez' mother in describing her son's assailants after the killing.

Guinn Williams Assails Plans Of G. O. P. to Increase Tarrif Rates

Decatur Congressman Advises Against Delay of New Construction in View of Conditions

By CHARLES S. HAYDEN
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 29.—In a prepared statement issued at the instance of the Democratic national committee representative Guinn Williams of Texas today assailed the proposed tariff for the increase in living costs which will follow its adoption. He declared it will retard building operations and that it would be far better for the average consumer if congress could be induced to forget all about the tariff and let the present law stand.

Although he is himself a ranchman, Congressman Williams believes the proposed tariff on hides, coupled with the compensatory duty on shoes, will cost the farmers far more than they will get out of it. The statement of the Texas congressman is as follows:

"Prospective home builders and the farmer who may contemplate construction work of most any kind should not delay operations till next year, or after Hawley-Smoot tariff revision bill is a law. The boost of rates on essential building materials will make construction virtually prohibitive to the person of average means. For example, it is proposed to place a duty of $1.25 a thousand on bricks, a duty of 25 per cent on shingles, a duty of eight cents a hundred pounds on cement and a duty of 25 per cent on cedar lumber.

"No feature of the revised act is more injuriously discriminating than that embracing hides, boots and shoes and harness. Last year we exported over $5,000,000 worth of shoes, and 60,000 hides. The cowman who gets a 10 per cent ad valorem rate on his hides will pay 12½ per cent to 30 per cent on manufactured leather and 20 per

State Rests in Trial Of Tobacco Giant's Son

LONDON, July 29. (INS)—The prosecution today concluded its presentation of evidence in the trial of Richard J. Reynolds, son of the American tobacco magnate, who is charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Arthur Graham, who is alleged to have been struck and killed by Reynolds' automobile.

Immediately after the conclusion of the prosecution's presentation, Reynolds' attorney opened their defense by putting him on the stand after which the case was postponed until tomorrow.

Fleeing Men Escape In Sheriff's Automobile

CARTHAGE, Mo., July 29. (UP)—Nine prisoners escaped from the Jasper county jail here today and fled in Sheriff H. D. Stephens' car. The break was led by Marcel Rinker, who shoved a revolver into Jailer Loren Arthur's face as the latter entered the cell room, obtained the keys and then locked Arthur and all the prisoners except his companions in a corridor.

FREIGHT HAULS MADE SHORTER

Rock Island Connections Start August 5

Elimination of 150 miles in hauling and two days' time for freight shipments over the Wichita Falls & Southern to Oklahoma cities and points further north will be effected by use of the extension to connections with the Rock Island lines at Waurika beginning on Aug. 5, according to R. H. Schultz, traffic manager for the Southern.

Approval of the Interstate Commerce commission was announced Monday on the application filed recently by the Wichita Falls & Southern for permission to lease the old Wichita & Oklahoma railroad to Waurika.

The schedule which will be adopted for fast freight shipments north, it was said, will permit delivery of freight in Kansas City on the morning of the second day, in St. Louis the morning of the third day, and in Chicago the morning of the fourth day after shipment.

The new connections will effect much economy of time in transit for freight to and from points south of Wichita Falls, including Olney, Graham, Breckenridge, Ranger, Archer City, and Dublin. Shipments consigned to northern points formerly were routed south to Graham, where connection with the Rock Island was made.

Suspect in Rochester Robbery Held at Munday

Special to The Record News.

MUNDAY, Texas, July 29.—One man was being held here today and officers were looking for another in connection with the robbery of the Walton's Drug store of Rochester Sunday. On the man held was found $86 in cash and three diamonds, one-half of the loot taken from the store, officials said. The man admitted complicity in the robbery in a statement to County Attorney French Robinson of Haskell. His accomplice is believed by officers to have the remainder of the missing cash and diamonds.

Complete Returns Today May Tell True Result of Amendment Vote

AUSTIN, July 29. (UP)—Complete unofficial returns from all counties may be in the hands of W. A. Keeling, attorney, by tomorrow showing whether Texas voted negatively July 16 for the two proposed constitutional amendments.

Reports from 69 of the 137 counties announced by Keeling today confirmed figures issued by Former Governor James E. Ferguson showing defeat for both amendments despite first reports having shown an overwhelming victory for them. Ferguson's figures were from 82 counties.

The amendments—one increasing the state supreme court from three to nine members and the other increasing the governor's salary from $4,000 to $10,000—was practically condeded immediately following the election.

Delayed reports from the rural districts, especially the Texas Panhandle, have revealed a still larger proportion against the amendments. Keeling's figures showed 28,517 affirmative votes for the supreme court amendment and 39,855 negative votes. There were 26,220 votes for increasing the governor's salary and 37,201 against it.

Governor Dan Moody was in a quandry, not knowing what part of the judiciary appropriation bill to veto since it provides both for a nine-man and a three-man court. He must act before Aug. 10.

He indicated tonight he had his mind made up as to the six new members to be appointed in case the amendments carried.

SUPPLY TRAIN UNIT INVOLVED IN ALTERCATION

Civilian's Alleged Effort To Place Liquor on Car Brings Scrap

ONE MAN INJURED

Officer and Assistant Receive Blows From Soldiers' Fists

What seemed likely to assume the proportions of a small riot or free-for-all fight between members of a detachment of the local national guard, one or more civilians and county and city officers was quelled Monday evening shortly after 6 o'clock by the prompt intervention of civil and military authorities in an altercation in the 500 block on Ohio avenue.

As a result of the scrap, one civilian was given emergency treatment at the Wichita General hospital, two guardsmen were released on bond on charges of fighting, and various other persons carried minor bruises. Stories of the cause of the battle differed, although it was generally agreed that the original battle between a civilian and a sergeant in the detachment originated when the guardsman attempted to prevent the man from placing liquor aboard a supply train being loaded here.

Liquor Orders Issued

Captain Otis Nelson, commanding officer of the guardsmen, told The Record News the entire affair was the result of strict orders issued to the sergeant in charge to use every precaution to prevent any attempt to sell liquor to members of the troop, and over a case of mistaken identity when a guardsman struck Marvin Johnson, son of Deputy Constable W. S. Johnson, in the belief that young Johnson was attempting to aid a civilian involved in another battle with a guardsman.

Captain Nelson told The Record News that reports he had received indicated that only two members of the guard troop were actively involved in the altercation.

"The entire affair seems to have been the result of a misunderstanding between officers and guardsmen as to the cause of the original fight," Captain Nelson said.

"The men in the detachment were scheduled to leave with the supply train with thousands of dollars worth of equipment shortly after 6 o'clock, and they perhaps naturally felt that they could not submit to arrest when the original fight was caused by our strict orders to prevent any liquor reaching guardsmen.

"While the affair is to be regretted, I do feel that the men in

RUMBLE SEATERS, ATTENTION

NEW YORK, July 29. (US)—As recording secretary and financial advisor to the Rumble-Seaters of America and Points Haphazard, we wish to call attention to the weekly meeting next year.

There have been complaints about the actions of Rumble-Seaters while going through the high rent districts of Metropolitan Detour.

Our finances are in very good shape. There is no money in the treasury at present. We are in that condition where even a dime would be a present.

Applicants for non-resident memberships in the Rumble-Seaters have been received from foreign lands. We were forced to turn down three Alsatian bicycle champions.

But that is not the question before the committee on annoying entertainment.

Rumble-Seaters, we do not accuse of you imbibing too freely in bath-tub gin because we know that they're making that stuff in toolchests now. The flavor of monkey wrenches has taken the place of juniper berries.

But there is something about a rumble-seat that makes couples neck and neck.

Watch a couple in the front seat of a roadster. He is driving and is as dignified as a ghost in a castle. She is so lonely that she has to put both her own arms around her own waist.

They are about as sociable as the two lions in front of the Fifth Avenue library. And look about the same.

But the birds in the rumble got diplomas from a different college. We don't know what there is about a rumble-seat, but you ain't in there a second before you put your arms around the girl's waist.

We admit that the folks in the rumble ain't seeing much scenery. But when you have your arm around a pretty girl's waist, who wants to read furniture catalogs or admire Whistler paintings?

And the girl never gets angry. Try the same thing on the parlor sofa and she will knock you for a parachute jump.

No sir, the girl never gets angry. She puts her arm around your neck and you go into a huddle without the other 10 men.

What is this? You can go to Europe on the Leviathan. Every day you can loll back alongside of a girl in a deck chair and she will not give you any more attention than the Statue of Liberty give to Ohio.

You can take your best girl to a theater and when John Gilbert flashes on the screen you might as well be Lon Chaney.

But the minute you perch alongside your girl in a rumble-seat then conventions are thrown to the dog-catchers.

You might think the girl would say: "Oh, Oscar, wait until it gets dark." But she doesn't.

We cannot explain it. We remember an incident which illustrates the romantic influence of the rumble. We had been arrested for using profanity without a chauffeur's license. The cop sat in the rumble and we leaned over and kissed him. He reciprocated our affections with a blackjack.

HOME GUARD DRILL PRAISED

Local Units Called First Line of Defense

By JOHN R. MORRIS

WASHINGTON, July 29. (UP)—The national guard, made up largely of neighboring young men who keep up their military drill, is given a new importance in the country's national defense scheme by Maj. Gen. Andrew Hero Jr., chief of coast artillery, as the result of recent maneuvers of the New York national guard at Fort Hancock.

Because of the small size of the regular army, the national guard is visualized as the first line of defense by General Hero. He explained the significance of the recent maneuvers in an interview today upon his return from New York.

Ability Demonstrated

"The maneuvers at Fort Hancock demonstrated the ability of the 245th New York national guard to man an important position under war time conditions and successfully meet the gravest emergencies," Hero said.

"The purpose of the maneuvers was to determine the usefulness of the national guard in just such a position as they might be thrown into immediately upon the outbreak of war. Our regular army strength at present is so low as to necessitate our looking to the guardsmen as our first line of defense.

"Under the able leadership of their commanding officer, Colonel Pendry, the New York unit participating in the Hancock maneuvers came through the tests with colors flying.

Sea Problem Solved

"One phase of war conditions reproduced in these maneuvers involved an engagement between the blue American and black enemy fleets off Delaware bay. The blues found themselves in danger of a disastrous defeat and called as reinforcements several blue ships then in New York harbor. Other black ships, however, were off the harbor entrance for the purpose of preventing the blues from making their way to the open sea.

"The problem of the guardsmen at Fort Hancock was to keep the harbor open, thus permitting the blue ships to debouch therefrom and speed to the rescue of the blue vessels in trouble off Delaware bay. This they did successfuly, with high credit to both officers and men.

Communications Protected

"One of the most important problems in the maneuvers was the establishment and maintenance of communications lines with the regular army and navy units with which the guardsmen were cooperating. This they did in a most satisfactory manner."

Engaged in the Fort Hancock maneuvers, in addition to the New York guardsmen, were regular army troops from the first and second corps areas, ships of the Atlantic scouting fleet, 25 fighting and observation planes and two blimps

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 29. (INS)—Eugene Burgess and his wife, Pearl, who admit that they killed an aged widow because they believed her a witch, remained mute when they were arraigned on first degree murder charges in circuit court here today, and were held without bail for trial during the September court term.

The pair confess that they beat Mrs. Etta Fairchild, 75, to death, because they believed she had cast a spell over their daughter, Eugenie Burgess, 17.

Parents Fly to Side Of Injured Son in Denver

NEW YORK, July 29. (INS)—Bradley Martin, socially prominent banker, and Mrs. Martin left here today by airplane for Denver where their son, Bradley Martin Jr., was injured in an automobile accident. The Martins expect to reach their son's bedside in 16 hours. They were flying in a chartered plane piloted by Garland Peed. Brief stops are to be made at Cleveland and Kansas City.

North Carolina legislators claim to be farseeing. In an act regulating airports, passed this year, hunting birds and animals from an airplane is declared a misdemeanor.

NEW YORK, July 29. (INS)—Charles Sumner Ward, the man whose "drive" method of raising funds brought in more than $2,000,000 during the government's war appeal period and in other peacetime moves, is dead.

His career started as a secretary "drive" and he rose rapidly in for the Young Men's Christian association where he originated the prominence as almost phenomenal results were achieved by application of his idea.

He will be buried from his Flushing, L. I., home tomorrow. He died yesterday after an operation.

Oklahoma Resumes Arresting Commercial Cars

ment, they said, is in the hands of an officer appointed by the county commissioners, who depends on fees from his arrests, which amount to 25 per cent of each fine collected, for his subsistence.

It was also learned that enforcement of the license law in Cotton county began two weeks ago.

Since that time, Cotton county officials said, only "minor" cases were handled which involved Wichita Falls people, but one was involving a Fort Worth man and probably would have to be settled in a trial.

The arrest of the Wichita Falls driver Monday occurred about 3 p. m. as Mabry entered Oklahoma to deliver oil and gasoline for his company. He had stopped by the side of the road for a few minutes, according to Dell Brashear, wholesale manager for the refinery. Deputy Sheriff Ed Whittle of Devol, Okla., Cotton county's official enforcer of the license law, approached, and at about the same time a Burkburnett man driving a chicken truck, whose name was not learned, also stopped. The officer noticed neither car had an Oklahoma license.

The officer, Mr. Brashear related, refused to permit Marby to drive his truck into Walters, but insisted that he must go to that town and pay the fine. Therefore the chicken truck belonging to the Burkburnett man was commandeered and the three set out for Burkburnett, where the chicken truck driver secured a more commodious cad and drove the three to Walters. Meanwhile, Mr. Brashear said, the oil and gas truck was left unguarded on the highway.

Finally the attorney came from Wichita Falls and paid the fine his company's truck had incurred. The Burkburnett man was "let off," officials said, with payment of the license fee of a few dollars.

Shortly after settlement of the case two county officials, in long distance conversation with The Record News, explained that the law generally was looked upon with disfavor, even in Oklahoma. The most objectionable thing seemed to them to be the high fine of $50 assessed violators.

"It seems to me," said County Judge Thomas B. Huff, "that good feeling could be better maintained if the fine were about $10 and costs, instead of $50."

Sheriff C. O. Hooper said, "my department has nothing to do with that law, which I regard as unfair, as it seems to me that a license plate for one state ought to be good for another state. They asked me to help enforce the law, but I told them I wouldn't do it. The special deputy sheriff who does enforce it in his county doesn't hold a commission from me."

U. S. BUILDING WORK PUSHED

Construction Slump Offers Chance for Saving

WASHINGTON, July 29. (INS)—The government's huge $265,000,000 public building program is being speeded to the limit by treasury and postoffice officials with the prospect that the government will take full advantage of a slight recession in the building industry and effect a saving of millions of dollars, it was learned today.

Not only will the program be moved along steadily as a result of favorable building conditions, but it is possible that the savings made may make possible the addition of some buildings to the program.

$1,000,000 Saved

More than $1,000,000 was saved by the government in two recent contracts for huge buildings in Washington, the contracts being that much under the estimate of architects. Similar saving is expected on many other big public building contracts to be left soon.

Officials directly charged with the carrying out of the greatest public building program ever made by any government, however, declared that the government work will have little effect in changing conditions in the building industry generally.

Although many proposals have been made in congress and elsewhere for the creation of a reserve building fund, to be used to relieve unemployment, officials in charge of the program say that the government business is "but a drop in the bucket" when the nation as a whole is considered.

At the present time, according to federal reserve reports, the construction industry is running 12 per cent behind last year, chiefly due to a decline in residential building.

Many New Buildings

Contracts now in force for federal buildings under the $265,000,000 program total $32,597,508.35 and land purchases increase the total by $4,660,511.43. These contracts embrace more than 60 postoffices and courthouses in all parts of the country.

The congressional acts authorizing the building provides for the expenditure of $25,000,000 a year for eight years outside of the nation's capital, with $50,000,000 provided for buildings in the District of Columbia. In addition, the government is spending $15,000,000 to complete previously authorized postoffices, and has available $48,000,000 from the sale of old buildings and sites.

Treasury architects, it is learned, have definitely turned down all proposals to construct some buildings so that airplanes may land on them. This was urged particularly for the new Chicago postofffice, soon to be started. This postofffice, which will cost $14,250,000 and be the most expensive building of its kind in the country, will nevertheless be too small to provide a satisfactory airplane landing field.

The offer was declined and the boy taken to jail. He was fined $5 and costs today.

cent on boots and shoes. Thus the proposed tariff will cost the farmers alone millions of dollars with no fair semblance of compensatory benefit.

"The hand of tariff extortion is likewise laid heavily upon consumers generally in the matter of new tax levies on sundry articles of indispensable use. For example, it is proposed to place a duty of two cents on every 10-cent bottle of ink, 35 cents on every dollar's worth of castor oil; 40 cents to 70 cents on every dollar's worth of paint; 70 cents on every pound of starch; 60 cents on every dollar's worth of cups, saucers, plates, etc.; 65 cents on every dollar's worth of lamp chimneys, fruit jars, tumblers, goblets, etc.; 20 cents on every dollar's worth of plow points; 35 cents on every dollar's worth of wire nails; 60 cents on every dollar's worth of pans, buckets, boilers, etc., made out of aluminum; $1 on every $5 crosscut saw; $3.50 on every set of wagon harness; 160 per cent duty on a pair of pliers; 50 cents tariff on a pair of 42-cent scissors, and 50 per cent duty on gimlets, screwdrivers, wrenches, etc.

"The list might be lengthened to include hundreds of items all equally as intimate and essential in the affairs of the household as well as necessary in the upkeep of the farm.

"The contemplated tariff bill will be rewritten in conference and it is a safe prediction that the senate conferees will hold out for a bill containing as high rates as they believe the senate will pass. Owing to the overwhelming Republican majority in the house, which approved the Hawley bill reported by the ways and means committee under a gag rule which brutally precluded any amendments except those sanctioned by the Republican majority on the committee, that body may be expected to pass any exorbitant bill that may be submitted."

me now are going to make it harder."

The outstanding development of court proceedings, perhaps, was the seating of two youths, one of 23 years and the other of 22, as members of the jury, although still subject to peremptory challenge. If these two young men remain on the jury as it is finally constituted, they will have to pass on a question of life or death for a man twice their age. They are Richard E. Gutman, a grocery clerk, 22, and Donald E. Post, 23, bank clerk.

Doctor Snook seemed deeply interested in their answers to the complicated and delicate questions which were asked and in which the attitude of the modern generation of many things was brought out. The two undoubtedly brought into the defendant's mind thoughts of his classroom at Ohio State university where many youths like them listened to his lectures.

Neither Gutman nor Post had any qualms about capital punishment, even for a college professor. Both promptly answered "no" when asked if they would feel embarrassment should pointed sex discussions arise in the jury room "with perhaps women on the jury old enough to be your mother or young enough to be your sweetheart." They further showed advanced ideas when they firmly and promptly asserted that any philanderings on the part of Doctor Snook, a married man, which might be shown, would not be held against him.

Another unusual element was brought into the courtroom when a negro was examined as a possible juror. He opposed capital punishment, however, and was soon excused from service.

Doctor Snook followed every move carefully, took notes at times and at other times rubbed his head or scratched his ear with his pencil. Mostly he sat very still and seemed quite uncomfortable.

The courtroom crowd was chiefly composed of women and girls of flapper age. The court was considering barring persons under 18 years of age when evidence begins.

The progress towards completing the jury was slow. When adjournment was taken there were 11 temporary jurors in the jury box and the lawyers were at work questioning members of the second jury panel, the first having been exhausted early in the afternoon. One lone woman, Mrs. Edith Dysinger, a nurse, the first person questioned when the trial started, remained. All the other women who once had been passed had been removed by peremptory challenge, bearing out predictions that the defense would prefer to have an all-male jury.

The defense has not utilized 10 of its 16 peremptory challenges and the state two of its four. At the present rate it will require two more days to complete the jury.

deaths in a ship in which Jackson narrowly escaped death by a forced landing a few weeks ago.

The tragic end of the Minnesota's flight eliminated the Robin's only surviving competitor for world endurance honors. The Minnesota had been aloft more than 155 hours at the time of the mishap.

Engine in Trouble

Even engine trouble which developed today in the Robin's six-cylinder Challenger motor for the first time since its present flight began, has failed to dishearten its doughty pilots. Jackson told of the trouble in a note to the refueling crew.

The message said:

"Our old motor turns up just as much now as when we took off. We know we have a couple getting weak (referring to cylinders), have been that way for the last 100 hours. No. 4 and No. 6 can tell easy at night but we still fly at 1,350-1,300 (revolutions per minute) easy, not using as much gas, a little more oil.

"The gaskets on the push-rods are leaking. I was sleeping up to the time Obie threw out the note (the Robin's first message in the morning). Sure can sleep, just go up and find the temp (temperature) and saw it off. Hoping we putt-putt for another week. Regards.—Red."

Dr. Neal warns against Flies and Mosquitoes

Ohio State Director of Health says they are a menace to Summer Health and Cleanliness

CHARLES A. NEAL, M.D., Director of Health, State of Ohio, says: "The spread of certain communicable diseases by various insects has long been recognized in Public Health work. The spread of malaria fever and yellow fever by certain broods of mosquitoes, as well as the spread of typhoid fever, infantile diarrhea and other forms of intestinal disturbances by the common house fly has been definitely proven. Any efforts to exclude these pests from homes is to be encouraged."

"A little insect but a great spreader of disease," says the U. S. Public Health Service, speaking of the common house fly. "Thousands of people die every year from diseases transmitted by flies!"

There is no such thing as a clean fly. Every fly is born in filth and spreads millions of germs over everything it touches—hands, face and food. Flies are known carriers of disease. Kill flies. Kill all of them.

Do not wait until flies become annoying. Kill every single fly you see. One fly, left alive, may multiply to 1,500,000,000 flies in four months! Now that there is an easy way to get rid of all insects, there is no excuse for suffering from them.

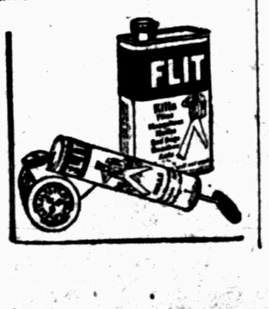

Kill flies for the babies' and children's sake. Health investigations have proved there is twice as much sickness among babies in homes where flies and dirt abound, as in clean and flyless homes. Mosquitoes, too, are winged torturers. No one is safe from the blood-sucking bite of the mosquito. Kill mosquitoes—all of them.

IMPORTANT
For best results, follow the directions for the various uses of Flit contained on every Flit can. Flit is best applied with the handy Flit sprayer.

Your comfort, cleanliness, health, sometimes life itself, depend upon a constant warfare against flies, mosquitoes and other household insects.

There is no excuse for tolerating flies and mosquitoes today, when it is so easy to kill every last one with Flit. Flit is the ideal insect-killer. Although Flit has a greater percentage of insect-killing ingredients, and is deadly to all household insects, it is perfectly harmless to people and can be freely and safely used in any home. Its vapors will not stain. Flit is guaranteed to work or money back. Flit is not made to sell at a low price, but is made to a high standard of service and uniform quality. On account of its many superior features, refuse substitutes and insist on the original, genuine Flit—the World's Largest Selling Insecticide. More for the money in the quart size.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Bernard Shaw was only whimsical when he said that news of his birthday should be suppressed. But we know numbers of both males and females who really suppress such news.

From what we have read, the new book of Ellen Glasgow's, "They Stooped to Folly" is a story of the misdemeanors of three generations—some sinners, some sinned against.

How could a spinster like Ellen Glasgow, living in a dignified old Georgian house in Richmond, have made such a change in her style of writing? It may be answered by the statement that she complains she lives among the bootleggers, but she likes her home and refuses to move.

We know one little store on the outskirts of Wichita Falls that has a lovely and a fitting name—"Shady Rest" store. There are several great trees with their branches meeting, before it.

Mesquites are graceful things. And everytime we pass the Church of the Good Shepherd, we thrill over the broad limbed old mesquite that stands between the church and the Parish house.

Early Monday morning, the ground out in the rich river bottom land was covered with yellow bloosomed love-veins. And the gentle person who was taking us for a drive, said that as a child, she used to pick a handful of it, whirl it thrice round her head and drop it, naming her sweetheart and making a wish. If it grew, he loved her.

We had no love-vine when we were a child. But we used to pluck the dandelion when the yellow flower was gone, and the stem had put on its ball of silvery fluff, name a sweetheart or make a wish, blow with all our breath three times, and if all the down was gone the sweetheart loved us or the wish would come true.

We pride ourselves that we have out grown superstition, yet just the other day, we saw a grown woman walk all around a pin to pick it up with the point to her. (The head is bad luck).

And in this almost horseless age, you may still see horse shoes hung over merchants' doors. (There are still many left for pitching).

We were side-swiped in a car the other night. We started to make a left-hand turn from Tenth into Monroe street with an arm thrust out far enough to have been knocked off, and some four or five "Young Americans" who were having too good a time to see the hand or to blow a horn, flew past us on that crossing and frightened us livid. A hub cap knocked off our car was about all the damage but we do wish the law about passing on crossings would be enforced rigidly.

We never frightened anyone with a car but once, and the memory of that time will live always in our memory. We had ferried across the Sunflower river in a Ford, way down in Mississippi. We were probably the first ones to cross that ferry in a car (?) and the land on the other side had never known a car. As we passed the cabins, people rushed to the doors to look at us. We rounded a curve and saw just a little ahead of us, a boy about eight with a long stick, driving the cow home. He stopped with his eyes stretched and mouth wide open, stood as if paralyzed for a moment, then dropped his stick and struck out across the field as if running for his life, leaving his cow to be destroyed if necessary. It was the best Marathon we have ever seen run, and we woke in the night to laugh over it, even if we were pulled out of that "highway's" mud three times before we reached our destination—a little town down on the "Yellow Dog"—a branch of the Y. & M. V. R. R. The Y. & M. V. ran a "Peavine" as well as a "Yellow Dog"—both a vegetable and an animal route. Such stuffy little trains with no comforts. The Y. & M. V., by the way, is the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley and its main line is luxurious.

Wives Unduly Alarmed Over Men's Affairs

Exploding the Theory of the Office Romance—Slim Chance of Happiness—What Can the Woman Do Who Has a Tight-Fisted Husband?

Dear Miss Dix—We hear so much about men getting fed up on their wives. Why don't they get fed up on the girl in the office whom they see every day and spend maybe eight hours with, when they really spend only about four waking hours at home with the wife? Another thing, why does a man get mad if his wife buys a new dress or coat, then admire the office girl's clothes? Men seem to be conceited things, thinking every young girl is in love and admires them; thinking they look younger than they really are. Why can't a man be a regular man and let his office girl know he is married, loves his wife, and when she hints for him to take her out just ignore her or fire her? If she is the right kind of girl she will not try to be sweet to a married man.

Do you think that two people working together day after day are bound to become more or less attached to each other? Why should a man talk confidentially with his stenographer about his business and not his wife? Why does the girl work for him for money only? How long would she work if he couldn't pay her? Not one day. But his wife works for him and scrimps and saves without pay and she would stick to him through thick and thin.—A WIFE.

Answer—You have summed up the whole situation of the man and the girl in the office, but you have got the wrong slant on it.

You seem to think, as many other jealous wives do, that because a girl works in a man's office he is bound to be in love with her and that there is inevitably a sentimental affair between them. Of course this does sometimes happen, but it also sometimes happens that a man falls in love with the girl who lives across the street, or the girl he meets at a party or the girl at the soda-water stand or the girl his wife invites to visit her or any girl whatever.

There is always a possibility of a married man's falling in love with a girl, but because of that danger you can't keep girls segregated and prevent the catastrophe's happening now and then by locking all of the pulchritudinous young maidens up in a dark closet where men can't see them. And, as a matter of fact, men are in no more danger from the girls in their office than from the girls in society, and probably no more men fall in love with their stenographers than fall in love with the girl next door, so I think wives are unduly alarmed.

Indeed, I think that a man is less inclined to fall in love with the girl who works for him and she with him than they would be with strangers. They see each other at too close range to have much illusion about each other. They get the brunt of each other's temper and nerves and little eccentricities of character and that doesn't stimulate romantic love.

Mr. Employer isn't noticing what lovely eyes his secretary has nor how beautifully the hair grows on the nape of her neck. He is noticing the words that she misspelled and how dumb she was to get that order mixed and he is bawling her out because she got in 15 minutes late. And Miss Pothook doesn't consider Mr. Employer the hero of her girlish dreams. She thinks he is a fat, funny, fussy old thing and thanks God she isn't married to him and she doesn't have to stand him excepting during office hours.

You ask why men don't get fed up on the girl in the office whom they see every day. For Heaven's sake, lady, are you under the impression that your husband and his stenographer sit up and converse for eight hours a day? Most likely they do not even speak a dozen words that are not immediately connected with the work in hand and the reason he doesn't get tired of her and want a change is because he spent time and money breaking her into her job and he doesn't want to have to go through that with another girl. If she is any good at all she has the routine of the office at her finger's end and the longer she stays the more valuable she is to him.

And as for why he knocks his wife for buying a dress and compliments the office girl's clothes, that's because he has to pay for his wife's finery and he doesn't for his stenographer's. He would bat her extravagance, too, if he had to settle the bill.

Of course the office girl works for the money she gets and she would chuck her job if she wasn't paid. Why not? That is her way of making a living. She has no claim on her employer's estate as his wife has.

Just remember this for your comfort, poor, jealous wife: A man's office is the place he goes to make money, not to keep a love tryst and during the day he is chasing dollars, not skirts.

His mind is concentrated on his business and he has no time nor inclination to philander, and he looks upon his female employes just as he does his male employes, as a means to an end. Half the time they have no personality to him.

It is only the men who are such philanderers that they would have affairs with any woman who came along and who couldn't be trusted anywhere or anyhow who make love to the girls in their office.

That sort of man isn't worth worrying about.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young woman, 27 years old, and have been engaged for two years to a young man who is a year and a half my junior. I am very much in love with him and he with me and he takes me everywhere and lavishes beautiful presents upon me. I have a splendid job and he is well off and will some day come into quite a large fortune. But here is my problem: Although this man is so dear to me and speaks of our marriage vaguely some day, he doesn't set the day and when I broach the subject he says that he is not ready to marry now and that I must trust him and that when he gets ready to marry he will tell me. Now this man has been and is my lover. Do you think he would hurry the marriage proposition if I should send him away or would I lose his love?—SANDRA.

Answer—I do not think the man has the slightest intention of marrying you. Why should he when he does not have to support you and is free to leave you without the mess of a divorce or having to pay alimony when he gets tired of you?

In your particular case there is no reason to put off the wedding, except the very excellent one that the man doesn't want to tie himself down by marriage. He finds you agreeable and charming, a delightful companion and you have a passing attraction for him, but his affection for you is not strong enough to make him want to bind himself to you for life.

How little respect this man has for you he shows when he says that when he gets ready to marry he will tell you. His idea is that perhaps some day he will throw the handkerchief to you like the grand Turk used to do to the woman who was the favorite of the hour and he knows you will scramble to get it. Not much chance for happiness for the wife when the husband adopts that attitude toward her. He will always consider that she should be grateful to him for having condescended to marry her.

The man who is really in love with a woman is eager to marry her. He is hurrying on the wedding day. He is willing to take risks to get her. So you can judge your fiance's state of affection by his apathy.

I could weep at the folly of girl's who cannot see that all the barriers that surround marriage have been built for their protection and that when they break them down they do so at their peril and that when they throw away their honor they throw away their real chance for happiness in life.

DE SAUTELLE RETURNS HERE

Popular Orchestra Again To Play at Lakeside

Announcement was made Monday by Walter Peltier, manager of Lakeside park, of the return of Charlie de Sautelle's 11-piece orchestra for a three-weeks' engagement opening Wednesday night, July 31.

The De Sautelle orchestra played a lengthy engagement at Lakeside park several weeks ago, and according the Mr. Peltier, proved to be one of the most popular musical organizations offered at the amusement center since its opening in the spring.

A novel feature has been planned for Wednesday night. The Walter Whiteman orchestra, which will leave Thursday morning, will engage the incoming De Sautelle musicians in a "battle of music." Both orchestras will be in the dance pavilion beginning at 9 p. m., one stationed in each end of the room. They will play alternately, the success of their competitive efforts to be measured by the comparative number of dancers attracted to the floor by their melodies.

The Charlie de Soutelle organization will play in the regular show program from 8:30 to 9 o'clock Wednesday night, Mr. Peltier said.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, July 29. (US)—Handling doorknobs is said to be a source of contagion. That isn't all. So many dogs have died this summer, it has been suggested that kissing dogs also breeds contagion.

A husband went to Sing Sing last week and did it cheerfully. He says that was because it felt so good to get away from his wife and her relatives. And the biggest thrill was being able to tell the guards, when his wife called, that he would not see her.

A girl with an obsession about diets and exercising was invited to dine with an old friend the other night. After dinner, while the two were chatting about old times, the guest suddenly lay down on her back on a big oriental rug in front of the fire place, and began to kick and do the bicycle exercise.

She called for a cigaret and an ash tray which were put down beside her, and continued to exercise, offering no explanation.

"It's perfectly all right," said the hostess, "I like to see people feel at home, but it's disconcerting when you talk to some one not to have them remain right side up."

The best way to keep cool in hot weather is to avoid irritating people. If people don't click with you, don't see them. This should include neighbors, old friends, marital partners and especially relatives. By all means relatives who invariably take special privileges. And one lady says that she and her husband have found the way to be ideally happy. He lives in New York and she in Paris, and they write each other love letters every day.

It's a big improvement on companionate marriage, because they don't see each other at all.

Wichita Asked to Enter Swimming Team in Meet

Bunnenberg, city park superintendent, in which representatives from Wichita Falls were invited to enter the contests.

This is the first time that the state meet has been held in a centrally located city, the letter stated, and it is expected that the best swimmers in the state will be entered.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

MINERVA'S MIRROR

The way to a man's heart may be through his stomach—but another way to show him you're more than platonically interested is to try to reform him.

The average man is highly flattered by such seemingly unselfish interest. This system, however, is not infallible. Occasionally it occurs to the man that the woman who is trying to reform him is in considerable need of reforming herself.

Women suffer peculiarly from gossips. I don't know why this is so but undeniably it is a fact. Perhaps it is because the world expects more of women than of men.

If this is so, then the world is unfair to both men and women.

City Mail Service Given Three Blocks

Authority to extend city delivery service of United States mail to houses in the 2100 block on Arthur street and to those in the 3000 and 3100 blocks on Ninth street was received from the postoffice department at Washington by Postmaster O. P. Maricle Monday.

The letter to Mr. Maricle was signed by Arch Coleman, first assistant postmaster general, and pointed out that the service was authorized provided that "no additional expense will be involved." The letter further stated that "delivery should not be made to any house not correctly numbered or without suitable receptacle or slot in the door for the receipt of mail." Mr. Maricle stated that delivery would begin as soon as these directions had been carried out by residents in those blocks.

Opening of Posta! Station Set Aug. 15

Due to delay in shipment of office supplies and materials from Pennsylvania, the new postal station on Monroe street will not be opened until after the middle of August, it was announced Monday by Postmaster O. P. Maricle. No attempt to open the new station will be made until the complete list of supplies and material for properly conducting the business of a postoffice have been installed, it was said. Mr. Maricle stated that there will probably be a delay of from 15 to 30 days in opening the station.

Dance Numbers Added To Vaudeville Bill

A third dance number has been added to the free vaudeville bill to be presented at Bellevue park Wednesday night, it was announced Monday by C. C. Bunnenberg, city park superintendent. Another tap dance, entitled "Thunder and Lightning," will be given by Mrs. Bonnie Pearl West, student of the Tucker School of Fine arts.

Mrs. S. C. Carr

Dallas Lady's Child Came Through Fine

Mrs. S. C. Carr's experience with her little girl is just one of the many cases which we hear about. Mrs. Carr says, "My little Nettie Virginia had something like the flu. When it left, she was puny, had no appetite, and was very cross and feverish. I had known for years that Nature's Remedy is such a dependable medicine and I decided to give her a course of the Juniors. Nobody knows how happy I am to see her eat heartily again, and laughing and playing like she used to."

Very often those simple little chocolate coated Nature's Remedy Juniors (NR Jrs) are all the system of a child needs to straighten it out. Then the wastes can't remain in it to form the acids which sour the stomach, bind the bowels and rob the blood of the red corpuscles it must have plenty of to keep children from becoming puny, feverish and pale. Any druggist will recommend NR Juniors to you for your child. Only 25 cents.

Feels Well First Time in Two Long Years

Wichita Falls Locomotive Engineer Was in Miserable Shape Until He Took Orgatone

"Yes, sir, it's a fact, I feel better today, since taking Orgatone than I have any time during the past two years," declared A. E. Dennis, a well known locomotive engineer on the F. W. D. C. railroad and residing at 1304 Fifteenth street, Wichita Falls, Texas, a few days ago.

"I suffered from indigestion and heartburn and I found that this settled in my stomach and weakened me so I've been miserable for two years," he continued. "I suffered terribly with gas after eating and it would get up around my heart and make my breathing very difficult; these spells were usually followed with severe sickening headaches. Sometimes I was so nervous I could hardly control myself and my tongue was coated all the time like I was bilious and made everything I ate taste bad. On top of all this misery I had awful heartburn and this together with the pains in my head sometimes almost drove me distracted, but nothing I took ever gave me any relief, although I tried so many different kinds of treatments and medicines my house looked like a young drug store.

"After hearing so much about Orgatone I got a bottle and started taking it without expecting any great benefit, but the first few dose seemed to improve me and I said then and there I'd stick it out if this medicine kept on helping me like that. Now that was just two months ago and I give you my word, all my troubles have now disappeared. The gas has stopped forming on my stomach, I don't suffer from shortness of breath any more and I sleep like a healthy child. My food all agrees with me and I can eat most anything I want and my tongue has cleared and is healthy looking. My general condition is great and I feel fine as split silk all over. I think Orgatone is a wonder and a boon to mankind and I cheerfully recommend it to anybody who is suffering like I was."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by Allison's Drug store, 716 Indiana Avenue.—Adv.

EXIT THE PIN-PICKER

THE merchant who recently sold his packing cases at 10 and 15 cents each, isn't pocketing that sort of pin money nowadays.

He must not only give them away, but usually stand cartage in the bargain.

Hauling costs and disposal expense practically equals the value of the boxes, and experience has shown the storekeeper that it's cheaper to purchase original containers and build his own crates than clutter precious space with odds and ends which must be reconditioned, nine times in 10, before they meet retail requirements. The more haste the more waste.

And Henry Ford's announced intention to raise his minimum scale an additional dollar per diem forecasts another general advance in overheads and a consequent increase in business chips and sawdust.

The clerks who once carefully slit used envelopes and saved 'em for memoranda, like the cash boys who endeared themselves to A. T. Stewart's canny heart by picking up pins and loose string ends, are utterly out of step with the times and theories of administration.

Observing clocks have informed the ledger that such grandstand thrifts are red-ink drops.

The super-conscious driver, halting a heavy truck to collect lumps of split coal, drops two nickels to every one he rescues from the street.

A reflection will also explain why house-wreckers have quit raising buildings in return for th. materials. Re-salable items from old structures are so few, and the price of intact removal so heavy, that it isn't worth while to salvage even elaborate carvings or faced stones.

Hard and fast figures actually convinced a contracting firm which just leveled a mid-Manhattan church, that its splendid stained glass was too inaccessible for profitable recovery, so a dozen fine leaded windows were left to smash with the walls that held them.

More sorrow and misery of the earth is indirectly chargeable to the birth of unwanted children than to any other one cause. No child should be conceived until it is desired by both parents and all other children in the home.

Speed on the Atlantic

THE BREMEN crosses the Atlantic in less time than any passenger liner ever crossed it before. As it docks announcement is made that American shipbuilders are preparing to lay the keels of two new ships that will be even faster than the Bremen.

Meanwhile, in Germany, a 100-passenger flying boat goes through its test flights and prepares for an eventual attempt to cross the Atlantic by air. And one is tempted to wonder; is that gigantic airplane the forerunner of a new type of ocean transport that will eventually make these great ocean liners as obsolete as the caravels of Columbus?

Thus far airplanes haven't exactly demonstrated their safety and dependability in trans-oceanic voyages. The flyers who have made the trip have only proved that they were very capable and brave; they haven't convinced us that the ocean liner is on its way to join the square rigged ship in the limbo of things that have been.

This, however, is an unpredictable world, and the new German seaplane is an amazing sort of device.

Imagine, if you can, an airplane with three decks, providing accommodations for 100 passengers, mounting a dozen motors and yet rising from the water as neatly and gracefully as a light scouting seaplane. To see a ferry boat take wings and sail off over the waterfront would hardly be more astounding. This new German plane, moreover, is essentially an experimental plane; what its descendants may be like is a matter for a gifted imagination.

Ever since men on the two sides of the Atlantic began to travel back and forth and ship cargoes to one another they have been obsessed by a desire for speed.

At the dawn of the last century the best ship could not get across in less than a month. Then the designers of Baltimore and Boston invented the clipper—a graceful, sharp-nosed sailing vessel that went like a race horse—and cut the time to a fortnight. Just as the clippers were being brought to perfection, the steamships elbowed them aside, cutting their time by hours and days. Before the 19th century ended the time had been brought under a week; and now the Bremen reduces it to less than five days.

But will this be low enough? Officials of the United States lines believe their porjected liners will beat the Bremen's record; and you may be sure that the British builders will have some sort of answer, too.

And, meanwhile, an unbelievable, three-decked airplane sails over Friedrichshafen—and, if you are of a speculative turn of mind, you might give it a thought or two. It may do to the Bremen just what the steamers of 1850 and 1860 did the the Sovereign of the seas.

To be sure, the chances are that it won't. But this is an era in which almost anything can happen.

Germany on the High Seas

THE GREAT new ocean liner Bremen did more than provide newspaper readers with some interesting stories when it broke all speed records for the Atlantic crossing the other day; it served notice on the shipping world that the German mercantile fleet is once more a force to be reckoned with on the ocean.

Before the war the German ship-builders were challenging British shippers in an amazing manner. They were building cargo-carriers that were cutting in on the long-distance hauls, and they were building palatial liners to rival the best that Britain could furnish for the transatlantic trade.

The war ended all of that, of course. Now, however, Germany proves that she has come back. The Bremen is a worthy rival of any ship afloat. The established British lines, as well as the youthful but thriving American lines, may as well recognize that they have a most worthy competitor.

'Emotional Insanity'

AN OLD familiar acquaintance—"emotional insanity"—is about to appear on the scene once more. This tried and true comrade of murderers is to constitute the chief defense of Dr. James H. Snook of Columbus, Ohio, who is on trial for the murder of Miss Theora Hix.

Dr. Snook, it is said, will tell the jury that he does not remember just what did happen; and his lawyers will contend that this proves he was a victim of "emotional insanity" when the girl was killed, and hence is not to be held accountable for what he did.

It happens that three alienists have already examined the former university professor and have found him sane. But will that make any difference? You know it won't. The whole question will be raised again, there will be new alienists to contradict the first three, and all of us will get additionally disgusted with the way our courts handle the whole subject of mental responsibility for crime.

Our Expensive Army

IT IS SMALL wonder that President Hoover is moved to protest by the discovery that the U. S. army budget will, by 1933, call for the largest war expenditures of any country on earth.

We have the smallest standing army of any major power. We do not have compulsory military service in any form. We have every reason to believe that our relations with our neighbors are going to continue peaceful—and, in any case, our army is not our "first line of defense," as is the case in most countries.

Why, then, should our army budget be so high?

President Hoover's determination to bring about a drastic reduction is extremely praiseworthy. Surely the job can be done without in any real way detracting from our preparedness.

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip and busybody. She loses her job in Mrs. Mayberry's hat store because she talks too much.

Her widowed mother, a dressmaker, has one wealthy customer, Mrs. Van Nuys, an old friend. Through her Chatty gets a position in the filing department of Mr. Van Nuys' bond house down town. There she meets and falls in love with David Jordan, a young bond salesman, whom she once saw buying an Easter corsage bouquet for a pretty girl in a shop near Mrs. Mayberry's millinery.

Billie Langenau, head of the files department, says that sometimes Jordan lunches with Mr. Van Nuys' secretary, Agnes Herford, and Chatty becomes jealous of her as well as the unknown girl for whom Jordan bought the flowers. However, Agnes sometimes has lunch with Mr. "Van," too. Chatty decides to tell Mrs. "Van" about it, but her mother forbids her to.

Billie Langenau and her sister, Sara, come to live across the hall from the Chattertons, and Chatty learns that Billie has been married before but that no one, including George Mayhew, a bond salesman, who's in love with Billie, knows a thing about it.

Billie is kind and sweet to Chatty, lends her little trinkets to make herself more attractive, shows her how to wear her hair becomingly, etc. One night she gives a supper party to the office force in order to help Chatty along in her effort to become friends with Jordan. That night Winnie Talcott, Mr. "Van's" stenographer, sends out to a drug store for some alcohol for the punch Billie makes, and Chatty learns that her own young brother, Pud, is selling it in Ben Tomlinson's store. She keeps the fact that he is her brother hidden from everyone.

Jordan begins to pay Chatty much attention, and on a picnic with Billie and George Mayhew he makes love to her. The next day Chatty goes out for lunch with Agnes, who tells her she had a date with a man for lunch, but that he broke it. Chatty, sure that the man was Jordan, tells Agnes that Billie has told her that she and Jordan often go to lunch together, and she teases Agnes about being in love with Jordan, and further tells her that Jordan is in love with some girl outside the office—the girl he bought the flowers for.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XII

Chatty could not eat her lunch that noon.

She knew that she had told a downright lie about Billie Langenau. And she was sick in soul and mind as she sat with Agnes at their little table in the Rose Tree restaurant on Thirteenth street.

"Well, what do you think of Billie saying a thing like that about me and Dave Jordan!" Agnes exclaimed suddenly, when the dreary meal was half over. She had been very quiet and thoughtful ever since they had sat down together. "Think of her daring to say that he and I are crazy about each other. Just because we eat lunch together once a month or so. Why, I wouldn't have believed it of Billie Langenau!"

"And don't believe it of her now!" Chatty wanted to say to her. "All she said was that you and he sometimes lunched together. I made up all the rest of it because I'm jealous of you, and I wanted to find out if you and he are crazy about each other. . . . I told you a lie about Billie!"

She knew that she ought to say it, too. She tried to screw up her courage to say it.

But she wasn't brave enough. She wasn't brave enough to take back the lie she had told. . . . And so she just sat there, trying to eat the combination sandwich that she had ordered, trying to swallow the hot weak tea in the rose-colored cup on the table before her.

"What made me say that?" she asked herself. "It just slipped out. I didn't mean to say it!"

That was always her excuse to herself, when she talked too much.

There was a mirror on the wall beside the table. Her own reflection in it seemed to mock and reproach her for what she had said about Billie . . . For on her neck lay the string of pearls that Billie had given her to wear the day before. Her hair was still "slicked" back in the stunning fashion that Billie had first shown her. And on her face was a little of the smooth, cream colored powder that Billie had taught her to use instead of the pink stuff that showed so plainly on her white skin.

"And Billie gave that party last Sunday night just so I could meet Dave Jordan outside the office and become friends with him!" she went on thinking, miserably unhappy.

Billie had been all kindness and sweetness and goodness to her ever since she had known her. She had gone out of her way to be nice to her . . . and this was how she had repaid her! By telling a lie about her to Agnes Herford. A lie that might get her into trouble—that might even lose her job! For Agnes was with Mr. Van Nuys all day long, and if she went to him with the story that Billie had been gossiping about her and Dave Jordan—

"I think I'll have this out with Billie Langenau when I get back to the office!" Agnes' voice broke in upon her gloomy thoughts. "I just think I'll find out why she said a thing like that—"

"Oh, please don't!" Chatty clasped her hands, and her gray-green eyes were full of anxiety as she leaned across the table with its rose-shaded lamp and its plates of food that had scarcely been touched. "Please don't, Agnes! She probably didn't mean anything by it—and I'd hate her to know I'd told a thing like that after she'd told it to me. Please don't say a word about it! Please promise me you won't!"

But Agnes wouldn't promise.

"I'll have to think about it," she said, and that was all that she would say about the whole affair.

All afternoon Chatty worked in fear that suddenly the door would be flung open, and in she would come, to find out from Billie, herself, why she had said a thing like that about herself and David Jordan.

Every time the door squeaked Chatty broke into a cold sweat.

Once or twice she was on the verge of telling Billie the whole story from beginning to end—but she had no more courage to do that than she had had to tell Agnes that she had lied, in the first place.

In the lull to every office just before closing time, she got up and went into the outer office for a drink from the cooler.

To get to it she had to pass the door of the room where Agnes and Winnie Talcott were at work at their desks—the room that led to that holy of holies, Mr. "Van's" private office.

The door of the room stood wide open.

As Chatty passed it she saw that Dave Jordan was standing beside Agnes' typewriter stand. She was looking up at him, and suddenly Chatty saw her take a small folded piece of paper from him.

She watched while Agnes opened it and read what was written on it. She saw Agnes smile, look up at him

It turned in the lock and the drawer flew open.

once more, and give a quick nod of her smooth, brown head.

"They're making a date for tonight—that's what they're doing!" she said, bitterly, to herself. "And after her telling me this noon that there was nothing between her and Dave! She must think I was born yesterday!"

Burning with jealousy, she went back to the filing room and sat at her desk, motionless as a Tanagra statuette, for a full 10 minutes, too angry and miserable to think clearly.

Then all at once she knew what she was going to do. She was going to get hold of that note by some hook or crook, and find out what was in it. . . . She'd see just how things were between Dave and Agnes Herford, she would! He wasn't going to make a fool of her outside the office, and then pay every kind of attention to Agnes in the office—writing her notes in the middle of the afternoon, and taking her out to lunch!

She went out into the big office once more and looked into Agnes' room. . . . There on her glass-topped desk lay the little note!

At half past five it was still lying there, and Agnes was getting ready to go home.

From the doorway of the filing room Chatty watched her open her top drawer and drop it inside. She watched her lock the desk, put her keys into her brown leather hand bag, and go across the main office to the girls' cloak room.

She stood where she was a moment longer. Then she followed Agnes into the cloak room. There was no one in it but the two of them.

"Agnes, the 'phone in Mr. Van's private office is ringing. Shall I answer it?" she asked. She knew perfectly well that Agnes never would let anyone do anything for Mr. "Van" that she could do herself.

The instant the door closed after Agnes, Chatty had picked up the brown leather hand bag from the window sill where it was lying.

With her quick little pointed fingers she had Agnes' key ring out of it and into the picket of her blouse.

When Agnes came back she was washing her hands at one of the white bowls under the mirror, and she was whistling "Back in Your Own Back Yard," with all her cheerful might and main.

"I'm a thief!" she thought. But she did not care!

Chatty knew that two cleaning women always arrived at the Van Nuys company's big offices at six o'clock, to "go over" the thick carpet with vacuum cleaners, to dust the desks and empty the waste baskets.

Moreover, she knew that at any moment Agnes might discover the loss of her office keys and come back for them.

And so she worked fast. The minute that Jean Gilday, who always stayed late, had left her switchboard and vanished into the cloak room, Chatty was across the room and into Agnes' office.

There were three keys on the little metal keyring, and the first one she tried in the drawer of Agnes' desk was the right one. It turned in the lock, and the drawer flew open!

There was a big sheaf of plain white paper in the drawer and on the top of it lay the note!

Without stopping to look at it, Chatty banged the drawer shut and fairly ran back to her own room. There she read it:

"I'd like to see Mr. Van first thing in the morning if you can arrange it. It's about those Consumers' company bonds."

That was all. Just a plain little business note!

But why had Dave written it instead of just saying what he had to say to Agnes about seeing Mr. Van in the morning? . . . "I suppose he didn't want Winnie Talcott to hear him and know all his business," Chatty decided, looking at it and wishing with all her heart that she hadn't taken Agnes' keys. It had been a frightfully dishonest thing to do, hadn't it?

"But all's fair in love and war, they say," she comforted herself. "And love makes people do funny things sometimes—"

All the same, she was ashamed of herself. And as soon as she heard the office door close after Jean Gilday she carried the note and the keys straight back to Agnes Herford's desk . . . She would leave them there, and never, never, never would she do a dishonest thing like this again, she promised herself.

But as she laid the note back in the drawer she saw that a man's clean linen handkerchief lay neatly folded, just behind the stack of clean white paper!

Ninety-nine people out of a hundred would have looked at it without really seeing it. Ninety-nine people out of a hundred would not have touched it even if they had noticed it lying there.

But Chatty was the hundredth person—the born busybody.

And so she stuck her little fingers into the drawer and took out the square of clean, folded linen, almost without thinking.

It was a very fine handkerchief, with a rolled edge. In one corner three initials were worked in light blue silk—the initials "L. V. N."

"Lowell Van Nuys!" Chatty almost spoke the name aloud. "Now, then, what's this doing here, I'd like to know—hidden away in Miss Smarty's desk?"

But perhaps the handkerchief had not been hidden there . . . Perhaps Mr. "Van" had dropped it that afternoon on his way through the office to the golf club where he spent most of his afternoons these fine spring days. Perhaps Agnes had just picked it up and put it away in her drawer until she could give it back to him tomorrow morning.

"Maybe so—and maybe not," Chatty debated the thing with herself. "Anyway, I may as well take a looke-see through this interesting desk while I have the chance." Her little pink nostrils quivered like a hunting dog's when it is tracking down some helpless, frightened prey.

She felt that she was on the scent of something—somehow. Something that she could use against Agnes.

For she was afraid of Agnes. Afraid that she might go to Billie Langeneau with the lie that Chatty had told her that noon.

Besides, she was jealous of Agnes' friendship with Dave Jordan—and what is stronger than fear and jealousy?

The Day Book of a New Yorker
Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, July 29.—Charles MacArthur, formerly a Chicago newspaper reporter with Ben Hecht, the author of the very successful play, "The Front Page," and one of the authors of "Lulu Belle," told this writer the other day an amusing anecdote about his experiences in Yucatan with an aviator. To quote Mr. MacArthur with some freedom, the story runs as follows:

"I went to Merida in Yucatan last winter because Ben Hecht said it would be a good quiet place for us to work, and he would join me there. I had been in Havana but didn't figure that we could labor successfully amid the gaiety of the Cuban capital. I was in Merida for three weeks, couldn't do any work, and Hecht never showed up. There was no way for me to get out of the town. The climate was terrible. There was no one to talk to except itinerant drummers, and they all wanted to discuss their love affairs which didn't interest me. Finally a Mexican general told me that I could fly in a plane which was to be delivered in Mexico City, and it would be piloted by an American. He warned me of the danger of the flight over the mountains and said there were only four landing fields on the route. However, I was willing to take any kind of a chance to get out and accepted the offer. The night before I was to make the flight I was in a restaurant, and a loud American was there who had lived in Mexico for several years, dressed in khaki, drunk and belligerent. I tried to avoid his society, but he insisted on joining me and throwing poker dice. I threw four Queens, but he refused to admit they won and one word led to another until we had a bitter battle right there on the floor which I tried studiously to avoid. After we had been separated, the American proceeded to get drunker until he was helpless. I retired to be ready for the hardships of the flight the following day. I was out at the field the next morning and had to wait for the pilot. Much to my surprise he was my opponent in the battle of the night before still very shaky. I was to be his sole passenger. Fortunately the general decided we should not make the flight that day, because of weather conditions and he had a day to sober up and we started the following morning. He turned out to be the first rate companion and a good pilot and we are now excellent friends."

Handing It to Him

When Miss Abbie Rockefeller was contemplating marriage, the New York American sent a reporter to her house to confirm the story. The reporter was the only member of the staff available at the time, and he was a cub and a green man. Therefore, the only satisfaction he got as the result of his call was a penciled memorandum from one of the family which said:

"See Ivy Lee."

Ivy Lee is a distinguished gentlemen who is a counselor on public relations and represents the Rockefellers, Standard Oil, Pennsylvania railroad and other important people and interests in their dealings with the public and the newspapers. However the young reporter had never heard of Mr. Lee and didn't know what to do about it until he turned the piece of paper on which this message was written over and discovered it was a letter from Miss Rockefeller's father congratulating her on her engagement. He took it to the office and the story of course, was confirmed and published. This reminds the writer of a Horatio Alger anecdote. I do not know what became of the reporter however. I hope he was promptly rewarded for his success.

A Successful Man's Rule

When Mr. Munsey was alive, he owned a chain of grocery stores in New England called The Mohican stores, and he ran them on a basis which reflected his business sagacity. Every store had to make a minimum of $100 a week. In the event of failure to make a net profit of at least this amount, he got a new manager. After the new manager had had a definite trial and failed, he got another one. If the store, after these two tests, did not make money, he closed it up. Therefore, he operated a profitable company.

The Resourceful Dramatist

Louis Weitzenkorn, Sunday editor of the New York World, has written a play which has been accepted for production. One of the scenes is at a Long Island house party, and it shows the week-end guests who are complaining bitterly about the service and the dull time they are having. The owner is trying to think of a name for this country place, and he has heard his guests crabbing. Instantly he has an inspiration, and he calls it "Bellyacres."

Carbon Copies

Irving Cobb was talking about the son of a great man the other day. To prove his point that the sons of great men do not usually measure up to the standards of their fathers, the name of this man is not necessary for the anecdote, and therefore will be omitted. Cobb's comment on the son was that he was a faint carbon copy of his father about eight times removed from the original made on purple carbon paper.

An Author Views War

This is the season of military training camp activities. There is a general impression among older men, including this writer, that the hardships of the world war, cured most people of ever wanting to go again, but much to my amazement, General O'Reilly, an authority on war, told me that the enrollments in the training camps were larger than ever. I asked Charles MacArthur, the author of War Bugs as well as several successful plays, for his explanation of this, and it was so good that I repeat it.

"All men go to war to escape," he said. "They don't think of the hardships. Lots of them get married and are making $40 to $60 a week. They are fed up with the responsibility. The only relief they get in peace times is going to some lodge meetings once a week. When they go off to war, the banners fly and they are pounded on the backs as being great patriotic citizens, and they shed all responsibilities. They think it is an excursion until they have had a taste of it. Even such books as All Quiet on the Western Front which is a graphic description of the war from the German side, and the tales of the world war, do not influence them. They must find out for themselves."

In an effort to satiate the local demand for American movies, Australia has appointed a commission to see what can be done to establish the film industry there.

The Once Over

The Vacationists' Relief Fund

Today this department makes its 1929 appeal for contributions to its fund for the relief of suffering vacationists, which was so successful last summer in its campaign to rescue and succor victims of summer resort propaganda. Again July finds countless people enduring the discomforts and miseries of summer vacations when a few dollars from thoughtful readers would help bring them back to their own homes where they can enjoy good food, soft beds and a little coffee fit to drink. Won't you help? Remember that every dollar counts.

PHILLIPS

Careful investigation has revealed that this summer more people are in distress at the shore, mountain and lake resorts than ever before. Caught in stuffy rooms and at hotels where the food is, to say the least, inadequate, these vacationists are in a deplorable plight. Many of them are starving. Scores are prostrated through their efforts to find a hotel window with a good view. Hundreds have been knocked out by the music from summer hotel pianists. Not a few have been gassed by the front-porch chin and chatter brigade. If you only could look into the faces of these summer vacationists and see the yearning for city friends, good music and modern plumbing you would be the first to help.

Bear in mind these facts: $10 will bring home one adult vacationist, or two children. For this week only there will be a special rate of three adults and six children for $30. Fifty dollars will bring home, under this special offer, six adults or 12 children. A great many people go to summer resorts with their dogs. The dogs suffer worse than their owners. Two dollars will bring home a dog.

Following are some of the letters received from vacationists telling of their distressing plight:

Dear Editor—I came to — Beach with my wife for a two-weeks vacation. We wanted a change. Believe me, we got it. There is a shooting-gallery across the street and a roller-coaster in the lot next to the hotel. We can get sleep only by reading the hotel literature. Won't you help us get home to our three-room flat.—Mr. B.

Sir—I am a mother and come to this seaside resort with my two little children so they could get salt water bathing. They cut their feet so badly the first day on sardine cans left by beach picnickers that they have been unable to walk since. We have a room under a leaky roof, and a wood-pecker has his nest in one of the bed-posts. Our first week's bill took all our money. We need help badly.—A Mother.

Are you not moved by these pathetic letters? Do you not feel a tug at your heart? If you are at home in all the comforts of your own home in the city do you not feel deeply for the thousands of unfortunates who are enduring all the vicissitudes of a summer vacation? Send in your money now!

Dreams and Nightmares

Dreams are familiar to everyone. Science claims that during sleep a portion of the brain or nervous system may remain awake when other parts are asleep. Dreams are produced by a wakefulness of the higher intellectual centers, producing mental pictures or dreams by utilizing the memory and imagination. The conscious portion of the mind is asleep. That the mind is not completely asleep can be illustrated by the fact that when one sleeps during a continuous humming noise, one awakes upon the sound stopping. Many people, too, have the power of awakening after a predetermined time, and we all know that an unusual noise may cause one to awaken.

Dreams are often guided by external sensations of hearing, touch or digestive disorders, but the sensory nerves are partly asleep and the sensations are misinterpreted. For example, a full heavy meal may give the sensation of falling or sinking and being unable to walk rapidly. In many people dreams also occur as an attempt to escape from reality. People may accomplish in their minds things during sleep which they would like to do when awake but do not because of mental inhibitions.

The impressions of a dream may be so slight as not to be remembered, or so strong as to awaken the sleeper with a feeling that he has actually lived his dream. Mental unrests and anxieties undoubtedly contribute to the formation of dreams. The so-called symbolic property of dreams to foretell events of the future is now regarded as purely superstition.

Night tremors are frequently found in children. The child may awaken suddenly in great fear and not recognize anyone for several minutes. This usually follows undue exertion from digestive disturbances and sleep walking is really a form of dream, as it is an imperfect sleep in which the muscular apparatus remains wide awake, although the internal centers slumber.

Some people may sing, talk, sit up or walk during sleep. This has received the term "somnambulism." The sense organs may be partly awake so that the individual may answer questions with more or less accuracy, but forget completely upon awakening. Occasionally, but rarely, a patient may undergo the opposite condition in which the muscular system is asleep while the intellectual faculties are wide awake. This causes the patient to believe that he is paralyzed, but the condition does not last for long and slapping of the muscles will usually awaken them immediately.

The most frequent causes of an inability to sleep are excessive gas in the intestines, digestive disturbances, or toxins in the blood streams.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Eczema

Question: E. D. writes—"I have been troubled with eczema on my face and arms for some time. What diet or treatment do you advise?"

Answer—All you need to do is to combine your foods properly so that you will not have an over-acid stomach. Also, the skin may be peeled off with the sunburn produced from the use of the ultra-violet light. Or, a few days' fasting is usually enough to make any skin eruption disappear. But the steady diet of well balanced meals is necessary to a permanent cure.

Heart Trouble

Question: H. F. D. writes—"I enjoy reading the advice given by you on health and am trying to follow it. I have suffered from valvular disease of the heart since I was seven years old and am 20 now. The doctors I have had tell me there is no cure. I am in bed at the present time and have been for the past two months, and am troubled with gas around my heart. As I eat only very light food, can you tell me the cause of the trouble?"

Answer—You have named the cause of your trouble when you write that you are troubled with gas around your heart. The foods you eat may be "light" in weight, or "light" in nourishment, but they certainly are not the right foods or else you are not using them in proper combination with each other. Most valvular heart troubles are functional and can be cured by proper diet and exercise. Send for a special series of articles I have prepared on the cause and cure of heart derangements.

Milk and Lemon Juice

Question: K. L. asks—"When milk does not seem to agree with one, will the addition of a little lemon juice make it digestible? If so, is it necessary to put it in the milk if one eats along with the milk the lemon jelly made of gelatin and lemon juice?"

Answer—The lemon or gelatin should be put into the milk in order to get the best results. The addition of gelatin no doubt prepares the milk so that it is more easily assimilated, and the lemon juice breaks the milk into small curds which the digestive juices can penetrate more readily.

Acid and Alkaline Forming Foods

Question: Mrs. H. writes—"Please print a list of both acid and alkaline forming foods."

Answer—Such lists are too long to be printed in this column, but I will be glad to send you some articles giving you this information.

SPUDS HOME TODAY FOR LONG STAY; BUFFS TIE FOR LEAD

PAYNE CHUCKS 3-3 DEADLOCK

George Works 4th Day After Sports Cop Opener

Special to The Record News.

SHREVEPORT, La., July 29.—The Spudders headed home tonight, still in first place, though tied for the lead by the Houston Buffaloes, despite a disastrous day. The Wichita Falls athletes dropped the first game of a double header to the Sports, 10 to 7 and the nightcap was called at the end of the seventh inning by darkness with the count tied at 3-all.

The loss here while the Buffs were taking two from San Antonio tied the Wichita Falls and Houston teams for the lead, each with 17 victories and 11 defeats and averages of .607.

The pastimes here were marked by the flinging of George Payne and Tiny Owens, iron men of their respective clubs. Payne, working his fourth game in as many days, including his second complete contest, chucked the route in the second contest.

Owens Also Iron Man

Owens acted as relief pitcher in both games, the fourth straight day and five contests in that period, including one nine-inning tilt, that he has toiled.

Skinny C...al was batted off the hill in the second inning, as on the previous day, and Bill Goff went to the mound but was relieved by Lester White, the same Spudder chucking lineup as in Sunday's first game.

The Sports combed that trio of flingers for 13 blows, including home runs by Cashion, Cox and Langford. Holman got three hits in as many times up.

Wichita Falls pounded Tuero off the mound in the sixth in which they smashed eight consecutive blows for five runs. Owens then held the Spudders scoreless the rest of the way. Benton led the Spudder attack with three hits and Turgeon clouted a home run.

Payne Is Great Hero

The Spudders took a three-run lead in the first two innings of the second game off J. Thompson but Owens again stopped them and Shreveport tied it up in the fourth and sixth off Payne, who must be very, very weary and doubtless needs and deserves a long rest.

Payne himself shared batting honors with Red Bennett, each hammering a brace of doubles.

The Spudders hit hard and fielded brilliantly as usual but they didn't have a chance with such ineffective chucking as they had in the first game and Payne did all, and a lot more, than could be expected of him, or any man, in that second game.

A great, courageous pitcher is this George Payne and even Shreveport was singing his praises today.

The San Antonio Indians are foes of the Spudders today in the start of a three-day series at Athletic park, the opening of the stay that includes 19 games here in the next 20 days.

Waco, Shreveport and Houston follow the Tribe, each also for series of three games. The Spudders play Aug. 11 at Fort Worth and then come back home for a series with the Sports and the Cats before embarking on another long trek.

NEW YORK.—Geraldine Bessi, Gloria Bacarel, Dorothy Egbert, Julia Pturcurli and Harry Engelhausen, all under 11, took a joy ride on a raft. It started out famously until the raft blew about half a mile out into the Atlantic. Harry started swimming ashore for help but before he arrived aid reached them. The raft had blown out into the ocean three miles by the time they were rescued.

CHISOX REDUCE ATHLETIC LEAD

Hose Pound Earnshaw For 8 to 6 Victory

PHILADELPHIA, July 29. (AP)—The Chicago White Sox cut the Athletics' lead over the Yankees to nine and one-half games today by winning the final game of the series, 8 to 6.

The Sox broke the Philadelphia winning streak of four games by climbing aboard George Earnshaw, A's righthand ace, in the sixth inning, batting him from the box with a three-run rally. Score:

"SPIT" is a horrid word But it's worse on the end of your cigar

Take no chances—smoke certified Cremo Cigars

Are you sure that your cigar is sanitary? Are you sure that it wasn't made in one of those filthy cigar shops which most of us have seen . . . where the man in the window rolled the leaves with dirty fingers and spit on the ends?

Why take chances when Cremo offers you the finest cigar enjoyment plus the sanitary cleanliness of certified foods?

Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the Cremo Process which puts Cremo miles ahead in sanitary goodness. Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by U. S. Government approved methods. And this purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that fill, wrap and tip the cigars without the menace of spit!

Southwest Cigar Co., Dallas, Texas

Cremo leaves are the choicest, tenderest that the crop affords, all ripe and mellow. Each leaf goes through a slow, expensive maturing process that develops the fullest flavor and mildness.

There isn't a bit of scrap in Cremo . . . not a trace of floor sweepings. All long filler . . . all fresh, tender leaves . . . and topped off with the finest imported Sumatra wrapper that is absolutely free from even the tiniest worm-hole.

Crush-proof . . . immaculate . . . foil-wrapped . . . Cremo is the kind of cigar that the late Vice-President Marshall undoubtedly had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

PITCHER PAUL HOPKINS ACQUIRED BY SPUDDERS FROM BROWNS

NEW CHUCKER ARRIVES TODAY

Husky Young Righthander At Montreal in 1928

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

Aid for the Spudders in their drive for the second half pennant was indicated last night in the announcement by J. Alvin Gardner of the acquisition of a new pitcher. The chucker is Paul Hopkins, a righthander, and he was obtained by the St. Louis Browns on an optional purchase, the amount of which was not revealed.

Hopkins boarded a rattler at St. Louis yesterday for Wichita Falls and is due to arrive this afternoon at 2 o'clock. He will don diamond regalia immediately upon reporting and doubtless will be rushed to the hill soon, perhaps in the three-day series opening today with San Antonio.

The new Spudder hurler was acquired by the Browns on waivers from the Washington Senators and was snared by Gardner, who returned home last night following an extensive scouting expedition. Hopkins was secured by Washington from Montreal of the International league, with which team he played in 1928, and where Bud Stapleton also pastimed last year.

Paul is a husky youth, about the size of Payne, Gardner said. The young man is 24 years old.

Hopkins participated in 29 games last year with Montreal, winning seven and losing nine. He struck out 65, passed 96, hit three and uncorked two wild pitches. He had an earned run average per game of 5.41. He fielded perfectly for a mark of 1.000, including 38 assists and five putouts and participation in two double plays. As a batter, Paul evidently is an excellent and promising pitcher, as he hit for the sum of .140, with eight safe blows in 67 times at bat.

Cy Smith, big righthand pitcher for the Spudders, is recovering from an operation but it probably will be two weeks before he is able to return to work.

Hopkins is the eighteenth man on the Spudder eligible list, the number which may be carried until Aug. 15, when there is no player limit, and as Smith will not be able to work until about that time there is no likelihood of a reduction of the Spudder personnel as now constituted, Gardner said.

Mandell Defends Title This Week

Sammy Faces Canzoneri at Chicago Friday Night

NEW YORK, July 29. (AP)—The Mid West again takes the play away from the East in fistic entertainment for the coming week, offering another titular defense, this time at Chicago.

Sammy Mandell, the "Rockford sheik," will put his world's lightweight championship in jeopardy at Chicago Friday night when he tackles Tony Canzoneri of New York, one-time king of the featherweights, in a 10-round bout.

Mandell is one of the cleverest performers in the ring as metropolitan fans are ready to testify after seeing him cut Jimmy McLarnin to pieces here last year.

Chicago followers of the cauliflowers also are to have their first glimpse of Kid Chocolate, Cuban negro, who meets Steve Smith, a better-than-average 126-pounder in a 10-round bout Tuesday night.

Four Cities Considered for Site Of Max-Sharkey Go in September

NEW YORK, July 29. (UP)—The Max Schmeling-Jack Sharkey heavyweight bout will be promoted by Madison Square Garden corporation in September, William F. Carey, president, announced definitely late today.

Carey said that the contest would be held in one of four cities, preferably New York if the German heavyweight's difficulties with the New York state athletic commission were cleared up.

"I prefer to hold the fight in New York," Carey said, "but if the athletic commission prevents us from staging it here we feel perfectly in our rights to take it elsewhere."

Carey said he expected to announce the definite site this week. Detroit, Chicago and Jersey City are said to be the other three cities under consideration, with Detroit the most favorable.

The contest will be held on or about Sept. 26.

Daily Dope

By LARRY DAILEY

OUR SPUDDERS are coming home tomorrow occupying a high place in the league standing, as usual, and it behooves all the good folks of Wichita Falls and hereabouts to give them a great big hand. I do not overestimate the value of a winning ball club to a city. There are other things of as great importance and possibly more in the civic welfare of the average municipality. But Wichita Falls, at least in the matter of recreation, is what we newspaper men call a baseball town. It is distinctly absorbed in baseball, particularly the Spudders, and this applies to our neighboring territory to an extent of many miles in all directions.

The Spudders are easily the greatest attraction to be offered visitors here; the fame of the baseball club is this city's greatest bid for national recognition.

No city the size of Wichita Falls has achieved the success in baseball as has been won by the Spudders. For that due credit is given to J. Alvin Gardner, who assembles the winning nines; the managers who direct those teams on the field, and to the players themselves.

It would be a drab and dull summer without our Spudders—and we have become so accustomed to winning teams that perhaps our appreciation of the fact is dulled. Let us then, in this final and a half month of the 1929 season, make known our appreciation in a concrete way by lots of attendance at Athletic park.

Home town stuff, to be sure. But sometimes one must write in such a vein to put certain ideas across.

GOLF is a sport that vies with baseball in popularity as a pastime here and while the links game does not equal the diamond in general public appeal, it has a host of devotees. This was indicated Sunday when a gallery consistently around 150 or better saw Paul Landes and Bobby Burns play their thrilling match at Weeks park club for the all-city championship.

The excellent and brilliant play of both principals, marked by Landes' victory on the 36th green when he sunk a 25-foot chip shot, indicates that those veterans who have dominated the courses here for several years, such as Tommy Cochran, Dudley Golding, I. R. Sheldon and others, face a distant threat in the all-city finalists.

WRITING of golf, I am reminded that the second annual invitation tournament of the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club is to be held the first week of September. Bill Strachan, professional at that club, under whose direction the first affair in 1928 was such a tremendous success, has started preparations for the 1929 tournament.

Numerous leading players of West Texas and several foremost golfers of the state, including our stars here, will play in the golf and country club meet. This probably will include Dennis Lavender, the Texas champion, who has signified his intention of playing in the tournament here. Lavender played in the 1928 tourney and was eliminated in the semi-finals.

REVERTING to the Spudders, when giving those big hands, a special ovation is due George Payne. The present high place of his club is due in a great measure to the great hurling and team spirit of Payne. Not only has he won 16 games this season, practically all of which he started and finished, but the veteran right-hander has been willing at all times to work out of turn, either to open a game or in a relief role.

His superb checking and the will to win was never more strikingly exemplified than last week-end and yesterday when he worked four consecutive days.

Starting with Friday's game, when he went the route to beat Waco, George went to the rescue to hold Shreveport safely Saturday and in the first game Sunday, and pitched yesterday's final.

And last summer and this spring I received letters, and heard plaints of those who said George was through and should be sent down the river!

The Art of Hard Hitting

A longshoreman might wrap a golf club around his neck and carry 300 yards. That wouldn't be hard hitting. It would be an accident. The same thing might happen in swinging a baseball bat or landing a punch in the ring. The art of punching doesn't consist in starting one from the ankle and knocking a fellow down. There is an art in hard hitting or long hitting, no matter what the game. Ty Cobb once told Bill Tilden that Tilden could get a lot more pace on the ball if he would only hit harder. "That," remarked Tilden, "is where you get fooled. I'm hitting the ball as hard as I can, but I'm not letting the other fellow know it. There is a knack in covering up effort. It must be made to look easy. Any man can hit a tennis ball hard if he takes a full wallop. But he won't know where the ball is going. And he will tip off his intention."

I have always thought that the two longest hitters in golf were Abe Mitchell and Bobby Jones, because they hit the ball a long way and yet apparently had a lot in reserve. They stand above the fellows who put everything they have into a full swing. This latter class may hit the ball a longer way—when they happen to hit it. But figure how far Mitchell and Jones could drive if they also let themselves out, at the risk of losing direction and control. That makes another story. Dempsey was a great hitter because he never needed a wild swing, starting one from the floor. He could hook you from a foot away and make it feel like an ax. Schmeling is a good puncher because he also can jar his man with a short right hand. He doesn't need the full arc to hurt. Controlled power is the only brand worth 10 cents a ton. The other means little, except in the way of publicity, where once in a while it may come off. But for all that it does not prove the case against those who refuse to overswing.

An Example

Some years ago I recall a round with George Duncan, the British star. On a par 5 hole Duncan had a shot at the green after his drive, but he faced a long carry, somewhere around 240 yards by the air route to clear the trap. He took out an iron to play short.

"Can't you make that carry?" I asked. "Yes," Duncan said, "but I don't like to swing that hard at a ball. I can make the carry, but I can't be sure of my direction." Duncan then decided to make the try. He put everything he had in the swing and carried hole high, but off to the left of the green. "That's why a number of good golfers can't play good golf," he said. "They would always be trying to make carries of this type. They hit every drive they play with everything they have. The true art of hard hitting is to keep something in reserve. On our current trip a certain long hitter outdrove Abe Mitchell and got a lot of publicity from it. He outdrove Abe on most of the holes. Yet Abe could have passed him 10 or 15 yards any time he cared to. The difference was this—Mitchell's slugging opponent was hitting every drive as hard as he could and hitting the course about one time out of three. Abe was keeping plenty in reserve. What they seemed to forget was that Mitchell was getting all the distance he needed—and also putting the ball where he wanted it to be for the next stroke. The longer hitter, that day, nearly always had the harder shot for the green. With the same amount of effort the other fellow would not have been within 20 yards of Mitchell, because he hadn't nearly as sound and as true a swing."

This is true. In an amateur championship I saw a certain good hitter outdrive Bobby Jones on six straight holes. But when they came to a 540-yard hole, where distance counted, Jones passed him by more than 40 yards. He let himself out only where there was something to be gained beyond merely hammering the ball a mile, regardless of where it went.

What About Ruth?

Babe Ruth is an exception. He takes his full cut at the ball with little in reserve. There are two answers to this. One is that Ruth has a remarkably smooth, correct way of swinging. His balance is almost perfect in every detail.

The other is that with all this form and a great batting eye, Ruth has been fanned more than most good hitters ever are. There have been times when he led the league in strike-outs, as a batter and not as a pitcher. A left hander with a fast curve always had him dizzy. I recall on one spring training trip where Ferdie Schupp, of the Giants must have fanned him two times out of three on a general average through the trip. Ruth could easily have led the league at bat more than once if he had been content to hold something in reserve. But the Babe wanted those homers—and so did the crowd. It took a remarkable true swing and a pair of remarkable eyes to land as often as he has landed with the amount of effort he puts into every blow.

Bob Grove still has all the smoke left any pitcher might need, but he had to keep something in reserve before he became a winning pitcher.

A. & M. COURSE GETS STARTED

Farmers School Opened by Walton's Address

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, July 29. (AP)—Showing an estimated attendance of 5,000 for the opening day, a record figure, the twentieth annual farmers short course got under way for its week's session at the A. & M. college of Texas today.

Farmers and their wives, farm club boys and girls and others from virtually every section of the state thronged the campus.

President T. O. Walton of the college welcomed the visitors in an address that formally opened the program.

"The future of agriculture in Texas and the nation depends," he said, "upon such agricultural leaders as are here today putting into practice upon the farm the findings of science, the developments in modern farming practices."

The program for the opening day included sectional gatherings for boys and girls, women and men and a number of special meetings held in conjunction with the short course. Among the latter were the conference of county school superintendents of Texas and the State Bee Keepers Association of Texas.

City Assumes Airport Lease

work out its financial plans, he declared.

Discussion before the passage of the motion assuming control indicated that a part of the financial success of the port would be concerned with the handling of the fueling station and the development of additional facilities at the field.

Wilbur Cahoon, president of the Wichita Falls Airport corporation, from which the field was leased, assured the council that the field could pay for its own improvements and still be profit making. The corporation has agreed that the present lease, turned over to the city by the company headed by Mr. Hammond, will be indefinitely extended to the city at its expiration in September, 1930.

In the course of the meeting Monday night the council accepted the bid of the Security National bank as city depository at a 3.25 per cent interest rate, with 6 per cent on city warrants. The bid was accepted over that of the City National bank which offered 2 per cent on the daily balance and 6 per cent on warrants.

Contract for the legal advertising for the city was awarded to the Record News at a rate of 72 cents an inch.

Permits for the building of a filling station at 110 Park, sought by Lawler Smith, and for another at Tenth and Brook, opposed by a petition signed by a number of property owners in the neighborhood, were denied by the action of the council. Hearing on an application for permission to build an apartment house at Tenth and Grace, facing Grace, was set for the meeting on Monday night, Aug. 5.

The council took under advisement a letter from W. S. Curlee asking for refunds on deposits made in connection with the installation of sewers and of water lines in Indian Heights in 1926.

Semi-Pro Slugger Hits Seven Homers in Game

DEL RIO, Texas, July 29. (AP)—If Albert "Big" Moos could solve smart pitching, he probably would be in some big league lineup.

Moos, an outfielder with the Texon Oilers, whaled out seven home runs in a recent game against the Del Rio nine. His hitting has caused several Texas league clubs to seek his services, but he has been unable to hit class A pitching.

Snipe Conley, who pitched 18 consecutive victories for Dallas in 1925, is manager of the Texon club, which will defend its title in the national semi-pro meet this year.

Nocona Operators To Meet Here Tuesday

Solution of the problem of preventing the escape of natural gas through oil wells in the Nocona field will be taken up Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock by representatives of operating companies in that territory at the office of T. L. Coplin, deputy supervisor of the oil and gas division for this district, in the Perkins-Snider building.

The meeting to be held Tuesday morning was called by Mr. Coplin at the suggestion of Clarence E. Gilmore, chairman of the state railroad commission, at the conclusion of hearings conducted here by Mr. Gilmore on Monday and Tuesday of last week.

Woman Has Two Husbands After Judge Sets Aside Divorce Decree

A decree signed Monday afternoon by Judge Allan D. Montgomery, setting aside a divorce granted in June, left a young Clay county woman embarrassed by the possession of two living husbands.

Early in June Judge W. W. Cook granted to the woman a divorce from husband No. 1 on the usual grounds of "harsh and cruel treatment." To her also he awarded the custody of three young children. As the story developed here Monday, the young divorcee immediately remarried.

Lonesome for his children, husband No. 1 hired a lawyer and took a look at the divorce petition. He found in it an assertion that his former wife had lived in Wichita county for the six months immediately preceding the filing of the suit. Being possessed of information to the contrary, he himself filed suit for the setting aside of the divorce decree on the grounds of false allegations.

Judge Montgomery said Monday morning that he would postpone the hearing on the new plea until the other parties could be represented. The wife, with husband No. 2 went to the courthouse, denounced the attorney for husband No. 1, but refused to stay for the hearing. So the decree was formally set aside, the first husband testifying that he and his former wife had become reconciled and were ready to start again for the sake of the children.

The proceedings left him again a husband, but the wife, meanwhile, had left the courthouse with the second man of her choice.

Kiki's Base Running Still Is High Grade

CHICAGO, July 29. (AP)—Base stealing is not a lost art to Kiki Cuyler, the Cubs' fleet outfielder. He stole 26 bases during the first half of the campaign.

Kiki appears a safe bet to lead both leagues. In his own circuit, he has a pretty safe margin over Frankie Frisch, his closest competitor.

Cuyler, who used to team up with Max Carey to give the Pirates the fastest outfield combination in baseball, stole 68 bases for Nashville of the Southern league in 1923, his last in the minors.

In five years of big league ball, has has amassed 165 bases through his base stealing activities.

Special to The Record News.

HOLLIS, Okla., July 29.—Otto Morgan, 21, pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter today when he was arraigned in a preliminary hearing in connection with the death of William Alexander, 18, of Hollis July 21. Alexander was slain near the home of Jim Mulligan, five miles north of Gould, Okla., after a disagreement said to have arisen between him and Morgan at the Mulligan home. A fight was precipitated, it was said, over remarks Alexander made to Morgan's sister.

The affair was temporarily quieted, but later Morgan overtook Alexander while the latter was on his way home. Alexander was stabbed in the throat and stomach, and died soon after. Morgan was arrested the next day in Olustee.

About two weeks before the fight Morgan had married one of Alexander's cousins.

Passing of sentence on Morgan was delayed until the return of District Judge Frank Mathews from a vacation in Michigan.

Rescue work was difficult since the Thriller lay in 90 feet of water a half mile off shore. The Zipper, the other craft in the collision, remained afloat although badly damaged. Its passengers were rescued.

charge are to be commended for so strictly adhering to their orders against any possession of liquor."

Deputy Johnson, who said he knew nothing of what started the fight, declared that he followed an ambulance which passed down Seventh street to find a young man, severely beaten about the face and body, in a business building where he had been carried by a group of guardsmen. One of these, Mr. Johnson said, was pointed out as the person responsible for the injured youth's condition.

Efforts to place the man under arrest, the officer stated, met with stiff resistance, and he summoned his son, Marvin, to assist him in completing the arrest. At that juncture, Mr. Johnson said, other guardsmen intervened and wrenched him away from the prospective prisoner, declaring the man answerable to military law. A guardsman then struck young Johnson, precipitating another fistic duel, which was terminated by the efforts of other civilians who intervened. A moment later a riot squad from police headquarters arrived, and assisted in removing the two men to the county jail, where bond was subsequently made for their later appearance on a charge of fighting. The injured man was taken to the hospital in an Albert's ambulance, where two stitches were taken in a gash on his head. City officers called to the scene were W. E. McDonald, Tom Poe and Ellis Summers, and Motorcycle Officers Rehatch, Pogue and Lowry, who accompanied the ambulance to the hospital.

Advance Guard

The guardsmen who left Wichita Falls Monday night constituted advance guard for the summer camp held each year at Palacios. They will have charge of the extensive equipment of the five Wichita units comprising 280 men, and will make preparation for the camp which is to open next Monday and last two weeks. The guardsmen are answerable to both civil and military authorities for their actions, Captain Nelson said.

Captain Nelson explained that the original fight started when a sergeant warned a civilian against what he believed an attempt to place liquor on the train. The man became involved in an argument, with the result that the civilian was knocked down. A call for an ambulance brought Officer Johnston to the scene on the trail of the ambulance.

Hundreds of persons were attracted to the scene of the fight even before the arrival of city officers. Crowds gathered about the door of the store where the disturbance took place and cars were parked or milling about the place for several blocks as excited Wichitans attempted to push their way nearer to the scene.

CANNING PLANT URGED HERE

Houston Firm Makes Tests In Wichita Area

The possibility of a canning factory in Wichita Falls within the next two years for the handling of leading items in Wichita valley's truck produce was revived Saturday through a visit here of representatives of a large Houston concern which builds and places in operation for local ownership factories of various kinds.

According to the Houston party, sufficient quantities of highly marketable vegetables and fruit are grown in the vicinity of this city to justify the operation of a good sized canning plant here. The particular articles in which interest was expressed are okra, spinach, black-eyed peas, beets, lima beans, onions, and various kinds of fruit. All of these commodities, it was said, enjoy a very wide market constantly.

Samples of beets, okra, beans, and black-eyed peas are to be sent to the Houston concern soon for test there as to canning properties. In return, it was said, seeds will be sent here for the experimental growth of other crops, tentatively considered as a source of material for the proposed factory. The current demand for onions, it was said, is for the manufacture of onion powder, the form in which that particular kind of seasoning is now being marketed.

Under the plan followed by the company whose representatives visited Wichita Falls Saturday, a canning factory is built for local owners, and is operated for them for one year, during which period development of market outlet for all products is perfected.

COTTON NOTES

NEW YORK, July 29. (UP)—With weather conditions more or less mixed in different sections of the belt, the trade is inclined to await the government report on Aug. 8 before making any sizeable commitments in either direction.

Weevil infestation in sections of South Carolina is very heavy in early planted fields and medium to light in most late planted fields.

Co-operatives sold more cotton last crop season than they have in the last two years, says the bureau of agricultural economics, which reports that about 8 per cent or more than 1,000,000 bales of the 1928 crop was handled through 16 co-operatives.

The price trend of the New Orleans exchange last week reversed itself and practically the entire gain of more than $5 a bale was wiped out.

As a result of the breakdown Saturday of the negotiations between employes and operatives in the Lancashire cotton industry a complete stoppage of work is due today.

In spite of the prevalence of weevil in large numbers, general opinion is that a high condition will be indicated in forthcoming reports.

DRY GOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, July 29. (AP)—Cotton goods were quiet and fairly steady for the day with print cloths, sheetings, wash fabrics, and domestic moderately active. Raw silk was slightly firmer orders for silk merchandise were of moderate volume for the day, much of the business being of a cleaning up character in summer goods. Burlaps were higher. Cables stated that two additional mills at Calcutta were closed by a strike against longer working hours. Spring 1930 staple worsteds opened by the American Woolen Co., consisting of serges, French backs, cheviots, piece dyes, etc., were an average of 2½ per cent lower and were satisfactory to buyers.

There were 30,990,304 telephones in use in the world Jan. 1, 1928, according to statisticians, and 18,522,767, or 60 per cent, were in the United Stat[es]

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, July 29. (AP)—Early declines in cotton today were checked by covering and trade buying, and prices later rallied with the demand becoming a little more active in the late trading, when sentiment seemed to be influenced by unfavorable features in the day's weather news. December contracts sold up from 18.76 to 19.01, or 10 points above Saturday's closing quotation and closed at 18.99. The general market closed very steady at net advanced of 7 to 11 points.

The market opened easy at a decline of 7 to 15 points on the relatively easy cables, and reports that the labor dispute had led to a stoppage of the Lancashire mills today. There were also reports of rains in Texas which seemed to promote the selling and active months soon showed net losses of 13 to 16 points, with October declining to 18.48 and March to 18.88.

The demand was not active but there seemed to be comparatively few contracts for sale on the advance, with the market showing increased steadiness after the publication of detailed weather reports. These evidently showed less rain than anticipated by early sellers so far as Texas was concerned. Buying became a little more active in the last hour, with October selling up to 18.77, and March to 19.12, or 8 to 13 points net higher. Closing quotations were within a point or two of the best on most positions.

Texas weather conditions appeared to be coming in for a great deal of attention. Much of the day's business was attributed to further evening-up in preparation for the approaching government crop re-port.

The first of the private end-July reports was published during the morning, placing the condition of the crop at 70.3, but giving no figures on the indicated yield.

Exports today 83, making 8,212,450 so far this season. Port receipts 2,328. U. S. port stocks 539,693.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, July 29. (AP)—Reports of increasing weevil activity and crop deterioration coupled with unfavorable weather offset the influence exerted by the Lancashire strike in cotton today. After an early decline values rallied and held steady, closing with a small net advance for the day. October after easing off to 18.38 rallied to 18.63 and closed one point below the latter figure for a net gain of 5 points. The general market closed steady at net advances of 3 to 7 points.

Liverpool cables were disappearing, and the market here opened 9 to 11 points lower in sympathy. Prices continued to ease off after the start. Active positions soon showed losses of nearly $1 a bale compared with Saturday's close. December dropped to 18.55, or 16 points net down.

One private crop report was issued during the day making the condition average 70.5 per cent of normal and the indicated yield 15,500,000 bales.

Stocks Fall Lower With Liquidation Caused by Call Money Increase

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, July 29. (US)—Advance in call money from 9 to 10 per cent caused further liquidation that closed the stock market lower today. Spasmodic support was evidenced that limited the declines in the better grade stocks, but the list as a whole showed downward tendency throughout. Steel finished a point lower, General Motors lost fractionally and other Standard Industrials were from 1 to 3 points off at the close, Commercial Investment Trust with 6½ point further gain was the outstanding feature of strength. American Telephone declined 5½, Allied Chemical 5, General Electric 8⅝, Marmon Motor 4 and Public Service of New Jersey over 3 points. Anaconda held to fractional decline reflecting a little better support with other Coppers. Oils and Rails remained quiet and somewhat softer. Turnover fell off to near the 3,000,000 share level.

U. S. Steel Corporation directors meet tomorrow and the bulls are looking to them to do something that will offset the money situation and rally the market. However, the bulls are liable to be disappointed. Earnings report is likely to show new high record income for the second quarter but that has been expected for some time. The corporation would be fully warranted in declaring an extra dividend or in following the example of Bethlehem and increasing the regular dividend. However, the triumvirate that controls the management cannot be hurried. Recapitalization plan is being concluded and requires substantial payments in cash. Therefore, the directors may decide to hold off additional dividend payment until after the bonds are all in and the new stock all paid for. An increase in the dividends would be regarded as reflecting belief on the part of the management that current good business would continue for the remainder of the year.

Individual stock influences are having a decreasing influence. A few courageous pool managers continued to try for a following but did not score material success. There was further tipping of the Rails by many houses but the group as a whole has disappointed so often that little buying was attracted. Erie and Pennsylvania continued to reflect quiet accumulation as both should have favorable dividend announcements before long. The Utilities meet support of a character that indicates insiders are not through with merger plans, etc.

Truco Products, it was rumored, has closed contract with Ford that should result in further increase in earnings. The company now is making deliveries under agreement with General Motors so that earnings are running ahead of the showing for 1928. Worthington Pump remains quiet although there is expectation that directors will call both the "A" and "B" preferred for retirement before long. Eastman Kodak's outstanding strength early in the day was due to revival of report that the shares would be split up before long and a higher return made on the new stock. International Telephone & Telegraph, it is claimed, is being bought for the account of an English investment trust the controlling interests of which are closely affiliated with International Telephone group.

Now the month-end disbursements are being blamed for the tight money market. August 1 payments are not big enough to make much difference but there appears likelihood that the bankers will make use of the occasion to enhance the pressure that is influenced by the reserve board. If the first of the month dividend and interests disbursements did make any difference it would mean that very easy money would be enjoyed in a few days as the funds were returned to the banks. In past months there has been no such experience as the reserve appears determined that money rates will remain such as to compel a quiet stock market.

BOSTON WOOL MARKET

BOSTON, July 29. (AP)—Domestic wools of 56's and 48 50's grade are selling about as soon as moderate quantities are accumulated from current grading operations. This situation exists in both fleece and territory lines. Receipts of domestic wools at Boston during the week ending July 27, amounted to 10,329,500 pounds as compared with 8,457,200 pounds during the previous week.

TEXAS CASH PRICES

FORT WORTH, July 29. (AP)—Fair demand was reported for wheat on the Fort Worth cash grain market today with prices unchanged from Saturday. Corn, oats and barley were slow sale. Sorghum offerings are very light with demand ample. Estimated receipts: Wheat 615 cars; corn 11, oats 15, barley 19, sorghums 5, hay 9, and sorghum heads 1 car.

Wheat—Unchanged.

Dealers' bids and offers on coarse grains, as follows, basis delivered Texas common points:

Corn—No. 2 mixed $1.17@1.18; No. 2 white $1.21@1.22; No. 2 yellow $1.24@1.25.

Oats—No. 2 red 58@59c.

Barley—No. 2 slow, 73@74c.

Sorghums and sorghum heads nominally, unchanged.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, July 29. (AP)—Immense receipts of domestic winter wheat and a huge increase of the United States wheat visible supply tumbled wheat prices back today at the last. Reactions, however, came only after corn and oats as well as wheat kited above topmost quotations heretofore reached this season.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as Saturday's finish to 2⅞c lower, corn ¼ to 2½c gain, oats ⅝ to 1¼c up, and provisions unchanged to 12c down.

Primary arrivals of domestic wheat today amounted to nearly 10,000,000 bushels, including 1,457 cars at Chicago, against 479 cars a week ago and 108 cars in the corresponding day last year.

Oats attracted the broadest commission trade in a long time. Buying was ascribed the reports that the Canadian feed crop outlook is nearly a disaster, and that domestic production of oats northwest has been severely reduced by drought.

Provisions were somewhat easier, influenced by downturns in the value of hogs.

SUIT FOLLOWS LAKE TRAGEDY

Girl's Drowning Basis Of $90,000 Claim

SAPULPA, Okla., July 29. (AP)—A damage suit for $90,000 was filed in district court today, the aftermath of Sapulpa's only drowning so far this season.

The case was filed by Frank Peters and Mrs. Hallie Peters, superintendent of Creek county schools, parents of Frankie Peters, 14-year-old honor high school graduate, who was drowned at the city swimming pool June 26. Defendants in the suit are E. G. Fike, the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway company and the city of Sapulpa.

The girl's body was sucked into a 10-inch siphon placed in the swimming pool to lower the water for construction of piers beneath a Frisco bridge on Rock creek.

Burned Out Grain Firm Will Rebuild

FORT WORTH, July 29. (INS)—Announcement was made this morning by B. K. Smith, president of Smith Brothers Grain company, that the plant of the company, destroyed early Sunday by fire, will be rebuilt at an early date.

Origin of the fire is supposed to have been from heat combustion. Several hundred thousand bushels of grain in concrete elevator tanks was saved, but it was damaged considerably by smoke and water. Loss on the property and grain destroyed will total $300,000, a check-up this morning revealed.

Dublin's central postoffice burned in 1916 in the rebellion, has now been restored.

Gifts aggregating $6,250,000 were made to the University of Chicago last year.

A DEFINITE REASON FOR EXTRA VALUE IN OUR

USED CARS

When you buy a used car you should be sure the price is not put above the actual worth of the car, to allow the dealer to recoup an excessive trade-in allowance.

Under the Ford policy there is no incentive for this sort of practice—for the price of the new Ford car is so low, and the value so high, that unreasonable trade-in concessions are hardly possible.

We allow the buyer of a Model A just what his old car is worth—and we offer that used car for sale on the same basis. Prices for our used cars are based on the service you will get from them. Right now we are offering unusual bargains in unused transportation. Stop in today, and look over these, and others—

COUNTY LEVIES SPECIAL TAXES

Rates Fixed for School And Drainage Areas

The county commissioners court Monday morning levied a $3.50 tax on the $100 valuation of property included in drainage district No. 1 east of Wichita Falls, where a $27,500 bond issue for the disposal of seepage water was recently authorized.

The tax was levied on an estimated $106,520 valuation put on the 3,500 acres included in the district where seepage from irrigation ditches has been injuring the land. Of the total levy, $3 will be used for interest and sinking funds, and .50 for maintenance. The tax is set at a rate of approximately $1 per acre, it was explained.

Buy Bonds

The commissioners voted to buy in $8,000 worth of road bonds No. 2, due in 1930, at a rate of 99¾ cents on the dollar, saving the county in interest and principal a total of $320 during the year, T. W. McHam, county treasurer, who suggested the purchase, explained. The bonds were bought from the Prudden company at Toledo, Ohio.

Paul Barnett, county auditor, was instructed Monday to advertise for bids for the piping supplies needed in the installation of a new water system at the courthouse, bids to be opened on Sept. 26.

Constable Named

The court accepted the resignation of R. V. Everett, Iowa Park constable, and appointed J. P. Williams to fill his unexpired term. Williams' bond was approved before the adjournment of the meeting Monday. Mr. Everett is leaving Iowa Park to move to Oklahoma, according to information given the court members.

The commissioners were entertained at noon Monday at the county farm where they made their regular monthly inspection, including a survey of the remodeling of the old superintendent's home into a woman's dormitory. The court expressed satisfaction at the completion of the work and the condition of the farm.

Before adjournment Monday the commissioners accepted a schedule of the 1929 tax rates for the common school districts as suggested by Burl Bryant, county superintendent. The rates range from 25 cents on the $100 valuation at Harmony school to the maximum $1 rate in 10 districts. The complete outline of rates in all common districts is given below. Independent districts set their own rates.

Jury Refuses Plea In Insurance Suit

It took a jury in the 78th district court exactly three minutes Monday to arrive at a verdict for the defendant in a compensation suit brought by F. H. Smith against the Associated Indemnity corporation. The jurors decided that Smith had been acting in the capacity of an independent contractor on May 27, 1927 when he suffered injuries to his hand while repairing machinery for the S. and H. Drilling company. The plaintiff asked for $3700 damages.

The case was completed, from the selection of the jury to the entering of the verdict, in three hours Monday morning. The defendant was represented by John Davenport, attorney.

Osage Indian Head To Be Offered Choice

WASHINGTON, July 29. (UP)—When J. George Wright, superintendent of the Osage Indian agency at Pawhuska, Okla., reaches the retirement age of 70 years in January, 1930, he will be offered his choice of a two-year extension in office or retirement on part pay, the interior department informed the United Press today.

The status of his reappointment has not been considered officially however. His retirement would automatically follow at the end of his two-year extension should this be accepted, it was said.

MAJESTIC: "Ole Man River" keeps on flowin' along—"Show Boat," with Emily Fitzroy, Joseph Schildkraut and Laura La Plante. Paramount news.

STRAND: Drama in a remote mountain church house, with William Boyd and Carol Lombard in "High Voltage." Walt Roesner's orchestra. Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: Reginald Denny in "His Lucky Day." Comedy. Pathe news.

GEM: Rex Bell in "The Girl Shy Cowboy." Western picture. Comedy.

Sidelights gleaned from the movietone version of the "Show Boat": amazing photography of the deep waters, with twisting reflections of listless trees; Westport's social lion exclusive on the tall bicycle of 50 years ago; an honest-to-goodness steam calliope, originally used in 1880 on the "Golden Rod Floating Palace," on the Mississippi; Hamiltonian trotters stepping proudly through Chicago parks, driven by small-waisted ladies under great plumed hats; black derbies and high breasted coat of the gentlemen who voted for Grover Cleveland.

Restraining barriers against conversational rehearsals of motion pictures among those who really belong have been dropped, at least for "Show Boat" week in Wichita Falls. These reviews, numerously issued over cold sodas, in the hotels' cool lobbies, and on the church porch until the pianist arrives, point knowingly at the elements in the show which are bringing many patrons back for a second exposure.

The spell of Jules Bledsoe's pulsing "Old Man River" and "The Lonesome Road," with the wistfulness of countless generations of bewildered blacks in his voice, makes the show, according to these conversational critiques. "Show Boat" is a triumph of atmosphere, created by combining the charm of these plaintive melodies with the awesome constancy of the flowing river,—an element of realism made possible only through sound recording photography.

But those who ganged tumultuously down Main street when the blare of brass announced the arrival of the circus in the old home town will tear out the page on which little Maggie rushed defiantly from old Maggie to march in ecstasy with Capt. Andy Hawks at the head of the band. The scene is the best among many very good ones. Swarming pickaninnies, long-moustached plantationers, be-ruffled proud ladies, following wide-eyed in the wake of "the band" while the "Show Boat," a wonder world, is made fast at the dock.

Mr. Pollard, director of "Show Boat," must be put on the carpet, however, for the few times he stepped upon our sense of dramatic propriety. Those ultra-starchy gestures of filial loyalty accomplished by little Kim may be pardoned, for at that age, even under Mr. Pollard's tutelage, our own might have borne some slight appearance of being unnatural. Furthermore, impassioned weeping becomes quite convincing within, say, a five-minute period; and in fairness to Miss LaPlant's evident earnestness, we think Mr. Pollard's demands for sustained weeping were unkindly extravagant.

On another little trick, a canvass of the audience probably would reveal that a good deal of trouble and expense was involved to produce a vision which really was not necessary. As Magnolia, returned at last to the river, stands dreaming on the deck of the "Parthenia Ann," that vision of young Gaylord Ravenal projected itself roughly and unexpectedly upon the scene, just as if we didn't all know what she was thinking about.

It's so easy to stop on your way home at the Wichita Ice Company's convenient Drive In Station, Ninth and Brook.—Adv.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS MUNN

Former Wrestling Champ Gives Talk Here

Dr. Wayne Munn, former Nebraska university football star and heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, spoke before the Kiwanis club at the Kemp hotel Monday noon, drawing upon his experiences in the athletic realm for most of his remarks.

Doctor Munn emphasized the fact that every man is a champion in some child's eyes, and should conduct himself accordingly, with no necessity for offering alibis. The speaker now lives in Kansas City, and was the guest of Jouette Bonner.

Tom B. Smock, manager of the Ball Brothers Glass company factory here, discussed the history of glass-making, and with statistics refuted the proposition that bootlegging might have enhanced the success of the glass jar business.

"Glass jars to accommodate all the corn liquor in the southwest in a year would not give us 10 days' of business," Mr. Smock said.

Miss Elizabeth Wright and Mrs. J. M. Wright played a group of piano duets on the program, which was arranged by Robert McCulloch. Announcement of the tri-city Kiwanis picnic at Henrietta Thursday evening was made by Dr. Ralph Peterson.

Diving Entries Needed For Contests Here

Several more entries are needed in the diving events scheduled for the city swimming meet to be held at Westmoreland park pool Wednesday afternoon, it was announced Monday by C. C. Frazee, city recreational director. Unusual interest has been displayed in the contests and several entries in both the girls' and boys' events have been received, it was said. The diving events include four prescribed dives and four voluntary dives. The winners in the city elimination meet will be taken in automobiles to Fort Worth next Saturday to take part in the inter-city swimming meet to be held at Sycamore park pool that afternoon.

$3,385 Damages Asked Following Auto Crash

Damages totaling $3,385 are sought in a suit filed Monday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Robertson against W. K. Knight and wife, in connection with an automobile accident here on July 15. The petition alleged that the Robertson machine was struck by a Pierce Arrow driven by Mrs. Knight at the intersection of Harrison and Speedway on July 15. Damages to the plaintiff's car and injuries suffered by Mrs. Robertson by the force of the impact are alleged.

PARTY FOR BANDS

A watermelon frolic and swim will be held for the members of the Municipal and Playground bands at Westmoreland park pool Thursday evening at 7 o'clock, it was announced Monday by C. C. Bunnenberg, city park superintendent. A program is being arranged by C. C. Frazee, city recreational director, and Paul Seeds, director of the bands.

FUZZLESS PEACH

City Park Superintendent Exhibits Specimen From Greenhouse

At last, a "fuzzless" peach! It is called Amygdalus Persica, but it looks like a plum, has smooth red skin, comes from the mountains of Yunnan, China, and can and has been grown successfully in Wichita Falls at the nursery of the city park department. The seedlings were received by C. C. Bunnenberg, park superintendent, from the office of foreign seed and plant introduction, bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, about three years ago. The trees have borne fruit this year for the first time, Mr. Bunnenberg said Monday. As many as 25 or 30 of the peaches have been taken from one of the trees grown here. The fruit is of the clingstone variety and has proven excellent for canning purposes. The trees reach an average height of 10 feet.

Widely Known Novelist Dies of Heart Disease

CHICAGO, July 29. (INS)—Henry Blake Fuller, 72, novelist, was dead here today. Heart disease was the cause.

These Would Make Britain And America Equal

WASHINGTON, July 29. (AP)—The final outcome of the naval limitation discussions now advancing into a highly technical phase in London is expected by American experts to leave at least two-thirds of the 15-cruiser program intact.

As they see it, at least 10 of the contemplated 10,000-ton vessels will have to be built under any arrangements which may be reached in carrying out the agreement between the United States and Great Britain on the principle of absolute equality in the fighting strength of their navies with all kinds of craft considered.

Hoover Favors Building

In postponing the laying of the keels of three cruisers which were to have been put down in navy yards next fall, it is recalled, President Hoover himself remarked that "generally speaking, the British cruiser strength considerably exceeds American strength at the present time and the actual construction of these three cruisers would not be likely in themselves to produce inequality in the final results."

Construction of 10 of the 15 cruisers, it is reasoned, would give the United States only the 18 of this class regarded by high naval officers as essential to a balanced fighting fleet necessary to provide adequate sea defense and protect American trade lanes and prestige. The United States then would have in the cruiser category, besides the 10,000-ton vessels, 10 of the 7,500 tons classed as first line ships and 19 of varying tonnage in the second line, many of which, if present navy department studies indicate the desirability of such action, probably will be sold or otherwise disposed of.

Those considerations undoubtedly will enter into the new phase of the London discussions which, having passed the point of agreement on general British-American naval parity, were turned today to the problem of determining exactly how that is to be attained.

This was the reason for the return to London of Hugh S. Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium, who, as head of this governmnt's delegation to the League of Nations preparatory disarmament commission, proposed in April that the powers formulate a new "yardstick" for measuring the comparative strength of navies as a whole.
