Parents angry about math

■ New math lessons are not difficult enough to keep American children above average, parents contend.

By Robert Greene
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It's the kind of drill that drives math nerds crazy. And it wouldn't matter so much if these statisticians, scientists and others weren't parents as well.

The drill, as described in a California workbook for seventh-graders:

Students, in a group, must fill an imaginary recycling container with imaginary phone books. But the books and container have only two dimensions. And the kids also may use a calculator to figure out .75 times 600, part of the exercise. The text gives the answer, right next to the problem, just in case students can't get it with a calculator.

Critics like Paul Clopton, a 46-year-old statistician and angry San Diego parent, say 1992 changes in California math teaching, prompting such exercises, are creating math dummies. A state board is working on new standards this year.

And the issue has attracted angry parents' attention beyond California, because some of the teaching philosophy under fire would show up in voluntary national standards and tests that President Clinton supports.

Critics say the math curriculum reflects the handiwork of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, which in 1989 called for a national overhaul of math teaching.

The council, worried about America's math phobia and dropping test scores, hoped to make math more meaningful by changing from a dry-as-chalk focus on drills, postulates, definitions and proofs — the memorization of tables and rules — to a more real-world focus.

The council also recommended that all grades use calculators.

Midwest flood

With a record flood filling most of the city with filthy water, city officials said Monday they were considering stringing a hose up to 22 miles across the prairie to bring in clean water so people could at least wash their hands. "What people take for granted day to day, like taking a shower and washing clothes, isn't going to happen for quite a while," said National Guard Capt. Greg Bowen. "The sanitary conditions are primitive at best."

Ivie Reservoir looking sound despite drought

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING - As "fate" would have it, Midland's water supply heading into the hot summer season is in "good... shape" in wake of the mid-1990s drought.

And that is largely due to the resilience and fortune of O.H. Ivie Reservoir near Ballinger in the Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD), which supplies lake water to the Midland-Odessa area.

"With 88 percent capacity (at Lake Ivie), we are in as good a shape as we have been in a long time," said Chris Wingert, a civil engineer who is CRMWD's assistant general manager.

The two older lakes in the system, Lake J.B. Thomas near Snyder and the E.V. Spence Reservoir near Robert Lee, are dropping toward their nadir. And Lake Thomas probably would have already, had it not been for the much-larger Lake Ivie partially replenishing Lake Thomas by pumping water into it.

Lake Thomas is at 5.65 percent capacity. It contains 11,500 acre-feet of water. Its capacity is 204,000 acre-feet.

An acre-foot is the amount of water a foot deep over an acre, which contains 43,560 square feet. Therefore, an acre-foot would be 43,560 cubic feet of water.

Lake Spence, which contains more chlorides (salts) than its counterparts, is right at 25 percent capacity - 122,000 acre-feet. Capacity is 484,800 acre-feet.

"The problem with Spence, if you just let it sit there, it concentrates" in chlorides, Wingert said. "And it will concentrate to the point that it is unusable." While Lake Spence's water is still potable, it is "relatively high in chlorides compared to Ivie and Thomas," Wingert noted.

Last year, about a third of Lake Spence's water was released into Lake Ivie to "get rid of about a third of the chlorides there," Wingert said. "Whenever the rain does come, we will get better quality water once it dilutes" Lake Spence.

"If you look at the overall reserves of the district before Ivie and after Ivie, we are in a lot better shape even with

MISD trustees to weigh teacher appraisal system today

From Staff Reports

MISD school board trustees voted not to use the state's teacher appraisal plan at a recent school board meeting. This afternoon, trustees will vote on whether or not to use the Professional Development and Appraisal System (PDAS) as the base plan for the Midland Independent School District appraisal instrument for 1997-98.

Trustees will meet for a short meeting (from 4-6:30 p.m.) today. Following the meeting trustees will meet in closed executive session for a student discipline hearing.

Trustees will vote on the issue shortly after the board meeting begins at 4 p.m. About 20 minutes has been given for discussion on the item.

The PDAS has garnered controversy across the state for linking teacher performance with campus rankings, based partly on Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test scores.

On April 15, a sub-committee of the Midland public school District Education Improvement Committee met to discuss teacher appraisal options for next year.

The committee recommends MISD adopt the PDAS for the 1997-98 school year, and approve a pilot project involving five MISD schools (three elementary, one junior high and one senior high) using a local component linking teacher evaluations to student performance.

The committee said using a former appraisal or developing a new one for the entire district was not feasible because a pending September 1 deadline to have a system in place. A new system would "need to be written, field tested, refined, adopted, printed and all training completed for teachers and administrators," the committee report said.

Other items on today's agenda include a presentation from West Early Childhood Center Principal Patricia Stevens on "Week of the Young Child," considering exempting high school seniors (who transfer to MISD late in the school year) from needing an additional half credit of government to graduate, and voting on

Greenwood ISD candidates look to assist growth

Editor's Note: This is the last of a three-part series on candidates in the May 3 election.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Both candidates for Place 7 on the Greenwood Independent School District Board of Trustees say they plan to help the school district cope with growing pains.

"Rapid growth is one of the main concerns we have out there, being able to handle the rapid increase in students we're having out there because we're going to have to embark on an aggressive building program fairly quickly," said candidate Terry Johnston.

The father of two Greenwood students, Johnston said he is running because "I think it's very important for us to maintain conservative Christian representation on the school board. We have it now and I think it's important to maintain it."

His opponent, Dusty Land, stated that "The local problem that concerns me is the expansion we're having out at Greenwood. We all moved out there with a certain mindset about how we want the school to be and we all have our reasons for being there. I think if we keep a conservative board and don't give up our ideals of how the school should be run, we should be able to control any problems."

Land, who has three step-children at Greenwood, has lived in the community 11 years and sees running for the school board as his way of giving back to the community.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Indian burned to death as 'joke'

BRASILIA, Brazil — Playing what they said was "a joke," five teenagers set fire to a Brazilian Indian chief sleeping on a bench and burned him to death.

Galdino Jesus dos Santos, leader of the Pataxo tribe, died early Monday at the Asa Norte hospital with burns over 95 percent of his body.

Dos Santos was sleeping on a bus-stop bench early Sunday because he had stayed late at a party marking National Indian Day and had been locked out of his boarding house, police said.

The youths, ages 17 to 19, squirted a flammable liquid on dos Santos and set him on fire, police chief Marco Aurelio Martins said.

Marcos Euclides, a passing motorist, saw the man on fire and the teenagers speeding away in a car. He jotted down the license plate number and raced back to help douse the flames, then notified police.

Hours later, police arrested the driver, who confessed and named his companions. All were from upper-middle-class families from Brasilia, the Brazilian capital.

"They all admitted to the act. But they said they didn't intend to kill him, that it was meant just as a joke," Martins said.

The four youths over 18 were charged with murder. They are ineligible for bail and will be held in jail until they go to trial. The 17-year-old was transferred to a juvenile facility.

If found guilty, the four could receive sentences of up to 30 years in prison, although first offenders usually get lighter terms.

Local officials decreed three days of mourning and called for "the most rigorous punishment possible."

■ Longest undersea tunnel opens

TOKYO — Two shores of Tokyo Bay were linked Monday by the world's longest stretch of undersea highway.

In a nationally televised ceremony, officials celebrated the completion of drilling work on the "Aqualine" expressway.

The new highway — which isn't yet open to traffic — spans nine miles, roughly two-thirds of it below Tokyo Bay. The remainder is a three-mile bridge.

The motorway will link the cities of Kawasaki and Kisarazu, which face each other on the bay.

■ S. African bandits block highway

PIETERSBURG, South Africa — A gang of armed robbers set up a roadblock on a major highway Monday morning and forced an armored car to stop, then fled with about $1 million in cash.

About 16 men surrounded the vehicle after forcing it to halt on the N1 highway between Pietersburg and Louis Trichardt; police spokesman Capt. Frans Mojapelo said.

A shootout left one of the robbers seriously wounded. His companions dragged him into a waiting getaway car.

■ Tamil rebels kill 12 soldiers

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Separatist Tamil rebels attacked an army patrol in eastern Sri Lanka on Monday, killing 12 soldiers.

The extent of rebel casualties was not known, said Maj. I.N.K. Induruwa, a military spokesman. The attack took place near the town of Valachchenai, 130 miles east of the capital, Colombo.

The rebels are fighting for a homeland for minority Tamils, claiming they are discriminated against by majority Sinhalese who control the government and military. More than 48,000 people have been killed since the secessionist war began in 1983.

Bomb threats paralyze London's traffic

N. Y. Times Service

LONDON — A series of bomb threats that authorities said was the work of the IRA on Monday shut down five busy railroad stations, caused the evacuation of three international airports and spread rush-hour chaos on the streets and highways of the London metropolitan area.

Key sections of the London subway also were closed for several hours in what travel organizations said was the worst mass transit disruption in memory.

"Basically west London and central London are closed," said Peter Brill, spokesman for the Royal Automobile Club. Brill said the result was "some of the worst traffic chaos that we have seen in London for many, many years, if ever."

Scotland Yard said police found no bombs and that they carried out only one controlled explosion, at Heathrow Airport, 12 west of central London, of a suspicious object that did not contain any explosive material.

No one claimed responsibility for the telephone warnings, which transport police said were made before 7 a.m., London time. But police said they contained code words associated with the Irish Republican Army, which has used similar tactics in northern England in recent weeks in an effort to keep Northern Ireland on the agenda of Britain's May 1 general election.

Prime Minister John Major praised the public's "stoicism and good humor."

"It is essential to take these warnings seriously," Major said. "The IRA have murdered in the past. They will not hesitate to murder again."

Tony Blair, leader of the Labor Party and Major's chief election opponent, said the bomb threats were "a clear attempt by the IRA to disrupt the British general election."

Police evacuated mainline train stations at King's Cross, Charing Cross, Paddington and St. Pancras and the busy Baker Street underground station.

Inbound flights to Gatwick airport, 25 miles south of London, were diverted and some outbound flights were canceled. Authorities used a vacant hangar to house some of the 8,000 passengers stranded at Gatwick.

Most flights to Luton Airport, 25 miles north of London, were diverted to airports in Central London. Some passengers were left sitting in airplanes on the runway for seven hours.

Heathrow Airport, one of he world's busiest, also was affected. The British Airport Authority said there was a partial evacuation on Terminal 3 and that outbound flights were delayed.

The airports were later reopened, although many flights were still disrupted.

> 'The IRA wants to cause the maximum amount of disruption during the election campaign.'
> — Prof. Brendan O'Leary, London School of Economics

The chaos on Monday, which caused untold financial losses, was the second in England since Friday. The IRA claimed responsibility for an explosion and bomb threats in northern England on Friday which disrupted road and rail transportation, causing millions of dollars in losses.

Police and political experts believe the IRA is trying to attract public attention to its cause during the British national election campaign. The IRA is trying to apply pressure on Britain to admit its political wing, Sinn Fein, to all-party peace negotiations in Northern Ireland.

John Barnes of the government faculty at the London School of Economics said there would "probably be one more IRA spectacular before the election."

Political Science Professor Brendan O'Leary of the London School of Economics, an expert on Northern Ireland, said the IRA actions are designed to demonstrate its ability to keep the pressure on the British government.

"The IRA wants to cause the maximum amount of disruption during the election campaign," O'Leary said. But, he said, the IRA doesn't want to kill anyone because that would damage its post-election chances of getting Sinn Fein into the political talks.

Netanyahu promises new watchdog panel

JERUSALEM (AP) — Benjamin Netanyahu tried to shore up his government and his reputation Monday after escaping prosecution in an influence-peddling scandal, but opposition leaders demanded he resign and face trial.

The opposition asked Israel's Supreme Court to overrule prosecutors' decision not to charge Netanyahu for his role in a political ally's short-lived appointment as attorney general.

The prosecutors, wrapping up a three-month probe, said Sunday that Netanyahu's actions raised "bewildering questions" but that they lacked the evidence to charge him with fraud and breach of trust.

"There is no evidence because the prime minister didn't remember," Yossi Sarid, leader of the left-wing Meretz Party, said Monday after submitting one of four appeals. "I hope that once he is before the court, it will help him refresh his memory."

Sarid and the three opposition Labor Party legislators who lodged appeals said prosecutors' decision not to bring charges — despite the recommendation of police investigators — was unreasonable.

But it appeared unlikely that the high court — which is to hear the four motions in early May — would overturn the decision.

Netanyahu said he made a mistake, but did not commit a crime. He lashed out at the news media and opposition politicians, saying they had twisted facts of the case "beyond recognition" because they were unable to accept his victory in last May's election.

Netanyahu moved quickly Monday to keep his six-party coalition together, announcing that next week, after the end of the eight-day Passover holiday, he would appoint a ministerial committee to oversee future appointments to senior government posts.

The panel will be led by Finance Minister Dan Meridor and Trade Minister Natan Sharansky, two Cabinet members who reportedly had considered resigning over the scandal.

Two centrist parties, Sharansky's Israel Be'Aliya party of Russian immigrants, and the Third Way, announced Monday that they would stay in the coalition, though with some conditions.

The Third Way demanded that Netanyahu improve decision-making in his administration, and Sharansky said the justice minister, Tsachi Hanegbi, would have to be fired. Sharansky said Netanyahu promised him that changes in the government would be made.

The scandal began in January when Netanyahu appointed Jerusalem lawyer Roni Bar-On as attorney general. News media suggested that Netanyahu had made the appointment in response to threats by Arieh Deri, leader of the religious Shas Party, to withdraw his support.

Deri expected Bar-On to agree to a plea bargain that would end Deri's three-year corruption trial without a jail sentence. In exchange for the appointment, Deri would guarantee the support of two Shas ministers for an Israeli troop pullback in the West Bank town of Hebron.

In the end, prosecutors investigating the influence-peddling decided to charge only Deri. That angered Shas followers, who blamed the decision on Israeli prejudice against Sephardim — Jews of Middle Eastern and North African descent. Shas represents Sephardic Jews.

"The Sephardim are scapegoats," Rabbi David Yosef, son of the Shas spiritual leader, Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, told the Jerusalem Post.

Shas has 10 seats in Netanyahu's 66-member coalition and could deprive him of his majority in the 120-member Parliament. However, it appeared more likely that Shas will stay in the government, but threaten not to support Netanyahu in key votes.

Palestinians, meanwhile, worried that the affair would further jeopardize peace talks, already in a crisis, and make Netanyahu more beholden to the right-wing parties that supported him throughout the crisis.

Iraq set to defy U.S. controlled no-fly zones

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Saddam Hussein ordered his helicopters into the U.S.-patrolled no-fly zone on Monday, saying he intended to fly home weary Iraqi pilgrims returning from Mecca.

Any U.S. action threatening the aircraft or the pilgrims "will be met with the suitable response to deter aggression," the state-run Iraqi News Agency warned.

The United States urged Iraq to stay out of the no-fly zone or face unspecified retaliation.

"We will respond appropriately, but we're not going to shoot down civilian helicopters," presidential press secretary Mike McCurry said.

Western allies set up the no-fly zone after defeating Iraq in the 1991 Gulf War. Western forces patrol the skies over southern Iraq to protect the people there from Iraqi reprisals for a failed rebellion.

The zone was extended in September to punish Saddam for sending his army into northern Iraq to support one Kurdish faction against another. It now covers an area stretching from the southern suburbs of Baghdad down to Iraq's borders with Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

The Iraqi News Agency said the helicopters will begin ferrying "sick and exhausted" Muslim pilgrims from the Iraqi-Saudi border on Monday. It did not say how many aircraft would be involved or give the number of the pilgrims. Presumably, the flights would be on military helicopters.

By nightfall, there was no word on whether any flights had taken place.

The decision to use helicopters to ferry home the pilgrims was announced after a meeting Monday of the Revolutionary Command Council and the leadership of the ruling Baath Party — Iraq's highest bodies. Saddam chaired the meeting.

On April 9, Saddam sent an Iraqi Airways jet carrying 104 pilgrims to Saudi Arabia for the pilgrimage in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, site of the holiest shrine in Islam.

The flight defied a U.N. ban on flights in and out of Iraq — one of a broad set of sanctions imposed in 1990 for Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. The helicopter flights would violate the sanctions as well.

"If they truly are interested in the welfare of the Muslim pilgrims and if they're not just trying to score cheap political points, they will go to the (U.N.) sanctions committee and ask for an exemption," State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said in Washington.

"And we believe the United Nations exemption committee would probably give such an exemption," he added.

DUMB: Parents complain about math lessons

(From 1A)

"All of the research that we've seen shows that children learn differently," said Jack Price, professor of mathematics education at California State Polytechnic University in Pomona and past president of the national group. "For some, direct instruction in the classroom works well. For others, it doesn't.

"We have never said anywhere in any of our publications that children shouldn't know their basic skills," he added.

In an interview, though, Price questioned the need to learn the multiplication tables, or at least more than half of them. Why memorize 4 times 3 if you already know 3 times 4?

Why figure a square root without a calculator? Or long division for that matter? Why do a stack of division problems for homework?

Should standards be so specific as to say children in the first grade ought to be able to write every number up to 100?

"Some kids are not going to be able to do that," he said.

Under the council recommendations, students instead were encouraged to focus on problem solving, generally in groups, as the best way to pick up skills and prepare them for the real world.

The council also recommended that students learn geometry, probability and pre-algebra before they reach high school — a seemingly high standard.

But critics worry how well the children use classroom time, and whether the stress on group activities too often substitutes playacting for real learning.

Marianne Jennings, a 43-year-old lawyer and professor of business ethics at Arizona State University, has crusaded in newspapers and other publications against a widely used algebra textbook that talks about Maya Angelou's inaugural poem for Clinton, African tribes, pollution — striving, she suggests, more to be politically correct than educational.

"I was driven to write about this because it became very clear my daughter was becoming a math illiterate," Jennings said, talking about Sarah, now 14.

Critics also complain there's too much stress in the early grades on "manipulatives" — cubes, little figures, colored sticks and other pieces that critics call "concrete pacifiers."

In a San Marcos, Calif., classroom, for example, third- and fourth-graders mark out each others' height on the floor, then make cube "trains" for each student's height. They line up the trains side by side and derive a mean height by subtracting cubes from the longest train and adding to the shorter one.

Pupils estimate, then actually measure, the length of a train, then use that mean to measure the height of various animals in kid-sized units of 54 inches.

Teacher Eunice Hendrix-Martin, writing about her classroom in a teachers' magazine, said the project helped kids see that "measurement is never exact."

Although Clopton sees value to that particular exercise, he questions whether so much time should be spent on so little arithmetic. "Do they really have to lie on the floor and spend a whole day on this?"

Critics say algebra book's modern approach trivializes subject

WASHINGTON (AP) — To steal from the car commercial, this is not your father's algebra text.

The book is "Focus on Algebra: An Integrated Approach," and critics of modern math teaching say it represents the worst of the worst. In an effort to make formulas and numbers more accessible, the publishers have filled the 843-page text with color graphics, reproductions of paintings, biographical sketches and problems that supposedly represent real-life situations — a lot dealing with food and a lot with the environment.

Youngsters, shown with smiling faces, attempt to solve problems. "Kristin thinks ..." "Esteban thinks ..."

Marianne M. Jennings, a lawyer who teaches ethics at the Arizona State University business school, has led the critics, lampooning the book in newspapers and newsletters as "MTV geometry" and "rain forest algebra."

Jennings, whose daughter Sarah used the book, says it trivializes algebra, and strays from the subject.

One problem, dealing with a chili cookoff, asks students to describe ways that organizers could raise money. Students are asked to say what is the hottest kind of pepper they have eaten, and how they would set up a hotness scale.

In another, a zoo sponsors a creative writing contest on endangered species. Students are asked what criteria would be used to judge the essay. In another problem, students are asked "what other kinds of pollution besides air pollution might threaten our planet?"

But Dan Caton, vice president and director of product development at publisher Scott Foresman Addison Wesley, defends the book.

"It's a rigorous algebra text," he said. "It contains all of the content that any math educator would want.

"The difference is that it applies it to situations that will make students want to study math."

DRINK: Water supply should be safe until 2080

(From 1A)

Thomas being almost empty and Spence being real low," Wingert figured.

"It's a big reservoir," he said of Lake Ivie, which covers 30 square miles and currently has 487,793 acre-feet. At 100 percent capacity, the lake would hold 554,340 acre-feet of water.

Lake Ivie's Freese Dam was closed in 1990. And within two years, the lake was filled, largely thanks to the rains of December 1991 and January 1992. By March of 1995, Midland was getting Lake Ivie water via a 157-mile-long pipeline.

Lake Thomas came into being with the closing of its dam in 1952, and Lake Spence was "born" in 1969.

Lake Ivie, which is in Coleman, Concho, and Runnels counties at the confluence of the Colorado and Concho rivers, "worked out pretty well," figured Wingert.

"Right now, all of it (Midland's water) is coming from Ivie," said Wingert. "Depending on what the demands are this summer, we will probably have to use some of the Spence water," which was the case in 1996.

Since "weather comes and goes in cycles," Wingert reckoned that "there may be some year in the future where Thomas has got all the water and Ivie doesn't. That's the beauty of the district's system. We are spread out in three reservoirs. If one doesn't catch water, chances are the other one will."

Lately, Wingert noted that "it seems like every time a cloud comes over," Lake Ivie gets some runoff. "We are real fortunate.

"If we hadn't had that (Lake Ivie), there is no telling (what would have happened)," Wingert said. "We would be in a serious water-rationing situation right now."

Ken Jones, who is Midland's director of utilities and a civil engineer, agreed.

"We would be rationing water if it weren't for Ivie," said Jones, who cited Midland visionaries, such as former Mayors Thane Akins of the 1980s and Hank Avery of the 1960s, for helping develop Midland's water resources. Akins was instrumental in Lake Ivie's fruition, and Avery was largely responsible for Midland's buying the T-Bar Ranch water reserves in Winkler County.

Jones noted the impact of Lake Ivie on Midland's current well-water supply - the Paul Davis Field about 25 miles north of town.

In 1994, the city got a third of if its water from the Paul Davis Field. In 1995, only 15 percent of municipal water came from the water field.

"And last year, even in the drought, 7.5 percent of our water came from wells," Jones said. The rest, 92.5 percent, came from Lake Ivie.

Midland's currently-adequate storehouse of water "has taken a lot of planning by a lot of people."

Jones recalled that during last year's drought, Midland "sold more water . . . than we ever had. Peak one-day usage was 42 million gallons.

Water-wise for the impending 1997 summer months, Midland is faring well.

"We can put about 50 percent more water into Midland than our biggest day" of 42 million gallons, Jones said. "And we can supply 65 million gallons per day" to the citizenry by blending Lake Ivie water with Lake Spence and Paul Davis water.

Based on projections, Midland's water supply is pretty well ensured through the year 2080.

"Before Lake Ivie, Paul Davis would have been run out in 2005," Jones said. With Lake Ivie on-line, the Paul Davis Field will last through 2030.

"Then, when we tap the reserves over at T-Bar Ranch, we will have water for 2080" based to the population growth rate.

Since the CRMWD has "got all the lakes that right now are feasible," Jones said that Midland and the CRMWD are studying "to find out where we should go for our next water. We looking for some more water. We don't need it. But that is the time to get it."

State executes condemned 'Mr.Whipple'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — An Oklahoma trucker was executed Monday evening for raping and strangling a Fort Worth-area woman more than 11 years ago.

Benjamin Herbert Boyle, 53, was pronounced dead at 6:21 p.m. CDT, seven minutes after a lethal dose of drugs began flowing into his arms.

Asked by the warden if he had any final words, Boyle shook his head slightly. He kept his eyes closed and made no contact with his victim's mother and sister, who stood a few feet away and watched through a window.

Boyle gasped a couple times and sighed deeply before he stopped breathing.

Boyle, sentenced to die for the 1985 slaying of Gail Lenore Smith, was the third condemned killer to be executed in Texas in eight days and the fifth this month.

Joyce Smith, the victim's mother, said the execution brought her some closure.

"It's not the end because you never stop grieving for a child but it does have a final ring to it," said Ms. Smith, of Amarillo. "I want to know he won't harm another woman's daughter.

"I'm glad to see it over with. It's been a long time coming."

The victim's sister, Margaret Smith, who lives in Fort Worth, said she enjoyed the day "more than other days in my life."

"He took my best friend," she said, wearing a black armband emblazoned with her sister's name. "He took my sister."

Boyle, known on the road by his CB radio nickname, "Mr. Whipple," was driving for a Mangum, Okla., trucking company when he was arrested in Diboll in East Texas on Oct. 17, 1985.

His arrest came two days after Gail Lenore Smith's body was found off a highway near Amarillo.

Ms. Smith, 20, was a cocktail waitress in Fort Worth who had hitched a ride with Boyle from there to Amarillo to visit her mother.

Her nude body, hogtied with duct tape, was found in a brushy area near the Canadian River bridge on U.S. Highway 287. The cloth used to strangle her was pulled so tight she nearly was decapitated.

Ms. Smith's step-brother and sister-in-law had dropped her off the afternoon of Oct. 14 at the truck stop so she could hitch a ride — something she repeatedly had done — and watched her climb in to Boyle's cherry-red tractor trailer.

When she did not arrive at her mother's house, a missing person's report was filed and authorities began looking for the truck. They found it about 500 miles away and arrested Boyle at a convenience store.

"There was enough evidence to convict anybody who had committed the crime 100 times over," said Randall County District Attorney James Farren, who then was an assistant district attorney in neighboring Potter County and accompanied Boyle from Diboll to Amarillo for trial.

"There was blood, personal belongings from the victim, hair, fingerprints. But most important was a roll of duct tape. Experts at the trial matched the torn end of the duct tape to a torn end of the duct tape on her body. And Boyle's fingerprints in the victim's blood were on the sticky side of tape attached to her body.

"If anything in this life can be known with absolute certainty, it is absolutely certain that Benjamin Herbert Boyle sexually assaulted and murdered Gail Lenore Smith," Farren added.

Farren, who remembered Boyle for his "dead shark eyes," said Boyle had a record in Colorado for attempted sexual assault.

Authorities also found a woman in St. Louis, a hitchhiker who had been raped and left for dead. She picked Boyle out of a lineup during the Smith murder investigation.

Her story, Ms. Smith's death, testimony against Boyle by his own family members and Boyle's graphic obscene drawings of nude women being violated led Farren to suspect that Boyle, who was not charged in any other death, had killed other women.

"In my opinion, if he ever were free, someone else would be a victim like Gail Lenore Smith," Farren said.

Industrial technology teachers would receive a $1,000 stipend. MISD has three junior high technology positions open for next year, and there is a statewide shortage of applicants, according to MISD human resources director Tom Holland.

The school board meets in the MISD downtown administration building, 615 W. Missouri Ave. The meeting is open to the public.

Johnston said that as a board member, he would work to maintain the discipline at Greenwood as well as the dress code, hair code and no earring code currently in place.

He added that "I'm in favor of teacher pay raises and I'm in favor of an aggressive sex education program, from a conservative point of view, that teaches abstinence."

He said he is not approaching the election with a pre-planned agenda.

Johnston, owner of Terry's Auto Sales in Odessa, said that "I'd be hard-working, studying and prepared member who knows the issues and communicates with the parents in Greenwood. There's no agenda I'd push except to deal with the issues, study issues, now where issues are coming from and be prepared to make intelligent decisions as they come up."

Land, with the Midland Police Department, said he would expect to help the board deal with new legislation making its way through the Texas Legislature on school funding.

"We're going to have a new set of ways to deal with public school funding," he said, "with the state giving the majority of funding to the local school boards. My biggest concern is that there might be some mandates that a local board wouldn't have any control over."

His work in the department's administrative division working with department budgets and personnel law, he said, equips him to deal with budget matters and personnel issues that a board member would be expected to handle.

Crude oil futures and its products rose Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange after Iraq announced it would fly its pilgrims back from the Muslim holy site of Mecca, a violation of a no-fly zone that raises the potential of a U.S. military response.

The Iraqi government announced it would use helicopters to ferry people who made the pilgrimage to Mecca, Saudi Arabica, back to Baghdad. That would violate a no-fly zone through southern Iraq established by the United Nations to punish Iraq after the Persian Gulf War and keep minority populations from persecution.

Earlier this month, Iraqi Airlines flew pilgrims to Mecca, prompting U.S. protests and speculation the violation would lead to American military retaliation.

The Clinton administration on Monday again warned Iraq not to violate the no-fly zone and said the U.S. "will respond appropriately" if it does. A spokesman said civilian flights would not be fired upon, however.

Any conflict is unlikely to seriously disrupt the flow of oil from the Persian Gulf, said analyst Gerald E. Samuels at ARB Oil Inc., but investors were taking no chances.

Crude oil for May delivery rose 47 cents to $20.38 a barrel; May unleaded gasoline rose 1.31 cents to 62.80 cents a gallon; May heating oil rose .08 cent to 55.48 cents a gallon. Natural gas fell 2.1 cents to $2.06 for each 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar retreats

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against the German mark Monday as French President Jacques Chirac dissolved the National Assembly and ordered early parliamentary elections, heightening uncertainty about the establishment of the European Monetary Union.

In New York, the dollar settled at 1.6978 marks, down from 1.7119 marks on Friday. The dollar cost 125.31 yen, down from 125.88 yen. The pound cost $1.6353, up from $1.6332.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Friday: 1.4425 Swiss francs, down from 1.4560; 5.7305 French francs, down from 5.7650; 1,691.00 Italian lire, down from 1,691.50; 1.3984 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3989.

Markets pull back

NEW YORK — Stocks pulled back Monday as another inflation warning from the Federal Reserve quickly rattled the uneasy calm behind last week's rally.

The sagging Nasdaq market suffered the worst damage again as investors continued to flee the volatile technology sector.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 43.34 to 6,660.21, bouncing back over the final minutes from an abrupt afternoon slide of 86 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by a 9-to-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled just 393.65 million shares.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock list fell 5.97 to 760.37, the NYSE composite index fell 3.24 to 399.40, and the American Stock Exchange composite index fell 4.54 to 551.47.

The Nasdaq composite index fell 18.62 to 1,203.95, weighed down by the computer-networking sector. Cisco Systems fell 1 1/16 to 47 3/16, 3Com fell 2 7/8 to 26 3/8; and U.S. Robotics fell 5 11/16 to 45 1/16.

Texas House to debate property tax bill

Sponsors say time has come to vote on the issue

■ House Speaker says delays would cause problems for Senate.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — It's tax day in the Texas House.

After weeks of work in a special committee, a plan to lower local school property taxes — and raise billions of new state dollars to pay for it — is expected to be debated by the full House Tuesday. The debate could last at least two days.

Despite calls from more than one-third of the chamber's 150 members to postpone debate on the bill, House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, on Monday said it must begin.

"Every day you wait causes problems in the Senate," said Laney, referring to the ticking legislative time clock. The session ends June 2.

Rep. John Shields, R-San Antonio, helped circulate a petition signed by 53 moderate and conservative Republicans who want the issue delayed to at least Thursday, if not later.

"This is a big bill," said Shields, who wants to wait until next Tuesday to deal with the issue, "I'd like to know what's in it."

The House Select Committee on Revenue and Public Education Funding spent nearly two months drafting the plan. The committee finished its work last Wednesday.

Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, chairman of the committee, said he understands House members have questions. But he said the time has come to vote on the bill.

"We have so many days in the session," Sadler said. "We need to have this issue decided."

Sadler spent most of Monday's House session meeting privately with members. He said most had questions about how the tax plan, which includes sweeping changes to school funding, would affect their school districts.

Sadler said he expected those kind of questions, adding that he is confident the bill and an accompanying constitutional amendment will get the votes needed to pass.

The bill would lower local school property taxes by about 50 percent. It would raise the state's share of school funding from about 47 percent to nearly 80 percent.

To pay for it, the bill would expand the state business tax, increase some taxes, add to the list of goods and services subject to the sales tax and commit about $1.3 billion in additional state funds to education.

Supporters, including Gov. George W. Bush, say it spreads the overall tax burden more evenly across the state, significantly cuts property taxes and provides a better system in which to fund the state's 1,044 school districts.

Opponents say it continues to leave much of the tax burden on the poor and middle class, would make it more difficult for some businesses to remain in Texas and amounts to few benefits.

Official analysis of the plan shows that local school property taxes would be cut by about 50 percent. But the addition of new and expanded state taxes would consume all but about 2 percent of the savings for most Texans.

The richest Texans would saving about 3 percent in the first year, the middle class would save about 1.5 percent and poorer Texans would save about 2 percent.

Southwest tops airline quality list

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Southwest Airlines widened its lead over the competition, collecting its second straight first place in an annual airline quality rating by university researchers.

"Obviously, Southwest is a clear top-quality performer," Dean Headley of Wichita State University said at a news conference Monday.

Five airlines bunched close together to form a second tier, added Brent Bowen of the University of Nebraska at Omaha. They are American, United, Delta, Continental and Northwest.

The professors praised Continental as the most improved airline, jumping from last place to fifth in this year's ratings.

Bringing up the last three spots in the rankings were US Airways, America West and TWA.

"These ratings tell you you're more likely to have a satisfactory experience in a higher-rated airline," Bowen said. "However, it doesn't mean you always will."

The researchers base their ratings on 19 criteria, including on-time arrivals and departures, safety, age of aircraft, customer complaints, financial stability, pilot deviations, number of accidents, denied boardings and mishandled baggage.

Southwest had the best on-time performance last year and was the only airline to arrive on time more than 80 percent of its flights. It also lost fewer bags than other major carriers, though it did have a relatively poor performance on bumping passengers from overbooked flights.

The overall average quality ratings for the nation's nine major carriers slipped a little last year, compared with 1995, Headley said.

The airlines are doing well financially but are cutting back on personnel and services, which can be noticed by travelers, he said.

Southwest and American have dueled for first place over the last several years and American remained in second in the rankings this year.

Continental showed dramatic gains, the report said, with the fewest denied boardings and placing second in on-time performance and lost baggage.

Clinton picks second Fed nominee

■ Formal announcement is still a week or more away.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's second pick to round out the Federal Reserve Board is financial consultant Roger Ferguson, White House officials say.

A formal announcement of Ferguson's nomination to fill one of two open seats on the board was still a week or more away, pending a final screening process, two officials said late Sunday, on condition of anonymity.

Late last week, White House officials confirmed that University of Michigan economist Edward M. Gramlich was Clinton's other nominee.

Both economists would need to be confirmed by the Senate.

If confirmed, Ferguson, 45, and a District of Columbia native, would be the only black person on the seven-member panel. He is now a partner at the McKinsey Company consulting firm, where he serves in the financial institutions group and has done considerable consulting in the banking industry.

Still, the Harvard-trained lawyer, who also holds a Harvard Ph.D. in economics, was not the banker that industry had hoped for.

The banking industry had pushed hard to get a banker on the seven-member board because of its regulatory authority over the nation's largest bank holding companies.

Gramlich, 57, a former chief of the Congressional Budget Office, holds a Ph.D. in economics from Yale and is dean of Michigan's public-policy school. He most recently headed a splintered 13-member advisory commission on Social Security. After two years of work, the commission reported in January that its members were unable to agree on one recommendation to save Social Security from bankruptcy in the next century.

Gramlich had urged privatizing the fund but leaving the government in administrative control of the mandatory, worker-owned individual savings accounts that he recommended for supplementing benefit checks.

The administration has had since the beginning of the year to make its choices for the Fed. On the heels of Janet Yellen's December resignation to head Clinton's Council of Economic Advisers, Lawrence Lindsey announced in January that he was stepping aside to join a conservative Washington think tank.

With Gramlich and Ferguson, the seven-member board would be packed with five Clinton appointees. Last year Clinton renominated Alan Greenspan for a third term as chairman and selected his then-budget director, Alice Rivlin, as vice chairman and St. Louis economist Laurence H. Meyer for a board position.

Chrysler strike impacts Indiana, Mexico

Associated Press

DETROIT — The effects of an 11-day strike at a Chrysler engine plant spread Monday to Indiana, Michigan and Mexico, where workers were told to stay home.

The latest layoffs brought the number of workers affected by the strike to 22,843, including the 1,800 strikers. Sixteen Chrysler plants in the United States, Canada and Mexico have been affected.

As contract talks continued by telephone Monday with the United Auto Workers, Chrysler refused to back down on its right to farm out 300 union-covered jobs to an independent supplier. The contract in dispute is a local one, affecting only the Detroit engine plant.

The strike has shut down North American production of Chrysler's highly profitable Dodge Ram and Dakota pickups and Jeep Grand Cherokee sport utility vehicles. It also has stopped production of the Dodge Viper sports car and Dodge Ram vans.

Pickup assembly lines in Lago Alberto and Saltillo in Mexico went down last week and workers were told Monday they were laid off indefinitely, spokesman Tony Cervone said.

In Kokomo, Ind., 2,362 workers at two parts plants were laid off Monday and about 450 workers were laid off at a stamping plant in Sterling Heights, Mich., near Detroit.

The United Auto Workers members went on strike after negotiators failed to reach a new contract.

Issues include plant health and safety, workplace discrimination against minorities and Chrysler's desire to shift more rear-drive parts production to outside suppliers. In addition to V-6, V-8 and V-10 engines, the plant makes drive shafts.

The strike has shut down North American production of Chrysler's highly profitable Dodge Ram and Dakota pickups and Jeep Grand Cherokee sport utility vehicles.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Home's selling price determines what owner pockets

By Eric Tyson

Q: We are considering trading up to a more costly home. While we are excited at the prospect of living in a bigger home in a better area, we are worried that we may not have enough money to close on the purchase of our next home.

What advice do you have for us on estimating how much we'll net from selling our current home?

Tyson

A: The most important factor in determining how much money you'll pocket from selling your house is the home's sales price; unfortunately, until you actually get an offer, that number is also the hardest for you to pin down.

Your home's likely market value is best determined by examining the recent sales prices of comparable houses in the area. A good real estate agent can put together a comparable market analysis for you.

If you're selling your house yourself, you can do such an analysis, but you must personally visit and view the homes being used as comparable properties.

As you apparently realize, it's important that you not get so caught up in estimating your gross sales price that you forget to estimate your selling expenses as well. Selling a house costs a good deal of money.

Among the biggest closing costs are the real estate agent commissions. If you're selling your house through real estate agents, they typically take a commission of 5 to 6 percent of the selling price. However, remember that the commission percentage is negotiable and can be somewhat lower on higher-priced properties.

You should consider having your house inspected before listing it for sale so that you — and the buyers — don't have major repair surprises. Inspections of your property might uncover building-code violations, such as faulty electrical wiring or plumbing problems, that you must repair before you can sell.

Unless you've taken really good care of your home over the years, or you're selling in a strong local real estate market, expect to shell out some money for corrective work. In some communities, for example, you might need a pest-control and dry-rot clearance in order to sell your property.

Also know that some cities and towns whack you with a transfer tax when you sell your house. Such taxes are typically based on the property's sale price. Check with a local real estate agent or your local tax collector's office to get an idea of how much your community's transfer tax runs.

While you're at it, check to see what you owe to bring your property taxes up to date when you sell.

Itemizing and researching your individual closing costs will give you an accurate estimate of their sum total. Otherwise, for a safe, ballpark estimate, assume that 10 percent of the expected sales price of your house will go toward paying closing costs.

In addition to closing costs, another big drain on your house sales proceeds will be the amount needed to pay off your outstanding mortgage or mortgages. Check with your mortgage lender to get an up-to-date estimate of your loan payoff amount.

Also, don't forget the nontrivial costs of moving. If you're moving locally and don't have much stuff, you might be able to pay less than $1,000 to hire a couple of movers with a truck.

But the farther you move and the more weight you're moving, the more the costs escalate. Move the contents of a typical one-bedroom apartment about one-third of the way across the United States, and you can easily spend $2,500. Move the same items all the way across the country, and you probably are looking at a $5,000 bill at least.

Military presence makes us proud

All those U.S. Air Force aircraft flying into Midland International Airport this week are expected to pump about a half million dollars into the local economy.

While that in itself might be reason enough to welcome the arrival of the fliers from Grand Forks Air Force Base in North Dakota, who will be using the airport as a refueling site for a military "war game" in New Mexico, there are other reasons local residents should be glad the military chose Midland International for this week's activities.

As Paul Erdmann, military consultant for the Department of Airports, appropriately noted in addition to the economic infusion that Midland will see from the "war games," 100 hotel rooms will be rented for the week.

Of course, there are reasons other than the economic impact to welcome the military here.

For one, Midland has ties to the military that date back to the years of World War II when a bombardier school was located at Sloan Field, which is now called Midland International Airport.

The most recent connection Midland has to the military, of course, is the Confederate Air Force and its American Airpower Heritage Museum located at Midland International. The thousands of people who come to the air shows and tour the museum are visibly proud of the fine men and women who maintain our heritage of airpower.

We, too, are proud of those fine military personnel who'll be in Midland this week, carrying our maneuvers designed to maintain our military readiness. Their very presence here says that Midland is playing an important role in our national defense, and that is a role we wholeheartedly endorse.

Tiger Woods helped further integration

The grace of Tiger Woods' incredible golf swing was matched by the grace of his performance after his historic win of the Masters on Sunday (April 13). The youngest Masters winner in history took pains to thank and acknowledge the black players who had pushed through the color barrier before he was born. ...

Woods, 21, was referring to players like Lee Elder, who was in the gallery Sunday. Only a year before Woods was born, Elder became the first black invited to play in the Masters. ...

Today marks the 50th anniversary of the day Jackie Robinson broke the color line in baseball. Robinson endured horrible taunts and abuse ..., but he paved the way for blacks in other sports as well — including golf. With so few blacks in management or ownership positions today in baseball, and with very, very few blacks in the ranks of the top golfers, there's still more ground to be covered.

Shows like 'Ellen' are good case for bad TV

It should come as no surprise that ABC is providing the door through which Ellen DeGeneres can formally announce her lesbianism as a sitcom character and, it turns out, in her real life. For years the networks have used laugh tracks to hide their inability to create material that might produce laughter from real people. Now, ABC promotes lesbianism, a kind of sexual laugh track that counterfeits authentic womanhood.

Thomas

But not since "The Day After" (also on ABC) more than a decade ago has a network sought to impose a political view in such a heavy-handed manner. Just as "The Day After" was the final shot by the unilateral disarmament crowd in their efforts to get the United States to lay down its nuclear weapons in the misguided belief that the Soviet Union, seeing our 'sincerity," would reciprocate, the announcement of "Ellen's" lesbianism is a full-frontal assault by deviants on what remains of decency.

All over America, The New York Times tells us, lesbians will be partying on the night of April 30 during "Ellen's" broadcast. Some "hip" television critics are praising the network for its "daring" and "courage." Real courage would portray Ellen, oR one like her, as a heterosexual, married, stay-at-home mom, who goes to church with her husband and children, votes Republican, loves Ronald Reagan, listens to Rush Limbaugh and honors her country. Since virtually none of the broadcast executivec and most in the creative community see any of these ideas, behaviors or lifestyles as normal, how is it courageous to present a show containing ideas and behavior reflecting management's worldview?

Conservatives have again taken the bait, threatening boycotts and nationwide pushing of the "off" button. They are being used to help promote the show. Instead of making statements to the press, they should focus on boosting those few shows that actually reflect their values; shows like "Touched By An Angel" and "Promised Land," both on CBS. "Promised Land" features an ex-Marine and his wife, children and his mother. They travel around the country and encounter people and situations made better by the values they carry with them. They are seen praying together (gasp!) and talking about the high and noble things that once were regarded as normal, not the base things Now promoted by some TV executives as normal.

No wonder advertisers focus on the 18- to 49-year-old crowd. They and the networks are like the cigarette industry. Hook them early and they'll be customers, if not for life, then at least until they're 49N The tobacco companies make products that kill the body. The networks spew forth material that poisons the mind and soul.

I still believe there are only three ways to address programs like "Ellen" for those who are offended by its message: 1) Ignore it, becauSe the ratings are low and the show may vanish by next season, or the one after that; 2) Direct our energy and efforts toward watching and promoting the few really good programs, patronizing their sponsors and writing positive letters; 3) Get rid of the television set altogether and rediscover books, conversation and the radio.

When Johnny Carson left The Tonight Show, he spoke of the privilege he knew was his to be invited into people's homes every night. The networks have now abused that privilege.

Charley Reese

There is so much more to life than television

One of the warning signs of an impending decision to kick television out of your life is when you turn the sound off while watching ball games.

I like to watch ball games occasionally. I like to watch boxing on the rare occasions when two opponents are evenly matched and neither is on a weekend pass from a retirement village, demented or glass-jawed. I found myself in recent months, however, increasingly irritated by the banal and inane commentary, not only about boxing but about sports in general.

Reese

The one exception is John Madigan. He's great.

The computer database has ruined baseball commentary. It allows the compilation of statistics nobody wants to know. How many times have you heard some guy yap like this into the microphone?:

"Joe Schmoe holds the record for the most singles by a right-handed hitter against a left-handed pitcher in the third innings of games played on a grass field on a slightly overcast day."

Who cares?

And the sports interview? Ho, ho, ho. Interviewing a boxer is like asking a dairy cow to explain T. S. Eliot's poetry. Kiss truth, folks. Boxing is barbarism. People rarely go into boxing just to kill time until there is an opening in graduate school at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The longer they box the less smart they get. The human brain, anchored only fore and aft, is not designed to bounce around inside the skull. When it does bounce a lot, conversation suffers, though in fairness, most of the commentators don't seem that much smarter than the boxers.

The NBA has gone Hollywood. Basketball is the most overhyped sport with the most overpaid players. A fairly simple child's game has been turned into a Steven Spielberg production. The players even act like actors.

So, you see, when you find your enjoyment of sports, one of life's more simplistic pleasures, being soured by the banality and hype surrounding it on the glowing screen, you know you're getting close to tossing the tube.

Another symptom, especially prominent among cable subscribers, is the day you realize you've seen the "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral" (the Burt Lancaster version) 17 times each on four channels, the Henry Fonda version 18 times on three channels and the Walter Huston version at least twice on two channels.

It's pretty scary to realize you're becoming familiar with 100 percent of Hollywood's productions beginning with "Birth of a Nation." Even John Wayne, may God rest his soul, gets old with repetition.

Someone warned back in the 1950s that television would eat up its material at a voracious rate. And so it has. Television has gone beyond the rerun. It is now into the rerun-to-the-tenth-power.

Another milestone on the road to liberation from television is when you finally get enough of near-dinner-hour commercials for sanitary napkins, medicines for hemorrhoids, douches and underwear for people who suffer from incontinence. Has television no shame? Nope, it doesn't, or even taste.

The breaking point for me came on a recent short vacation. I had spent three pleasant days without television and was settling down for an afternoon nap when a family moved into the next room at the motel and turned on the TV.

I figured anybody who would turn on a TV at two o'clock in the afternoon on a beautiful spring day in the mountains would probably watch it around the clock.

Off the bed in a flash, I tossed my ditty bag into my suitcase, checked out and hit the road. If I don't wish to watch television, I certainly don't wish to listen to somebody else watching television.

Life without the tube is pleasant. I have restrung my pawnshop guitar, tuned it (a major undertaking for the tone deaf) and picked out the tune of "Amazing Grace."

I've also started reading a new translation of my favorite essayist. Michel de Montaigne, a 16th century French tough guy who is one heck of a writer. Beats TV stupor any day.

Courtroom escapades can make impression

Mike Royko is ill. In his absence, we are reprinting some old favorites. This column was originally published on May 3, 1978.

I knew one judge who tried to wake everyone up in night traffic court by occasionally issuing a surprising ruling.

One night, a man showed up who obviously had been drinking. He was charged with running a red light.

"How do you plead?" the judge asked.

The man mumbled something. The judge told him to speak up.

The man insolently said: "You don't hear too good, judge. I plead guilty."

The judge asked: "Don't you know it isn't smart to plead guilty?"

Royko

The man, still insolent, said: "So what? You wouldn't give me a break anyway."

The man's wife started to say something to him, but the man told her to shut up.

The judge said: "All right. I shall enter a plea of guilty. And here is my sentence."

"You shall be given into custody of the sheriff of this county, and on the 15th of the month, he shall cause a bolt of electricity to be passed through your body until you are dead dead dead."

The man staggered backward, his red eyes popped wide open and his jaw dropped. His wife gasped. Everyone in the courtroom sat up straight.

"Just for running a red light?" the man cried.

"No, for being dumb enough to plead guilty. Ah, but on second thought, I'll just fine you $15 and costs. You are not worth frying. Go, and sin no more."

Nobody else became insolent in the courtroom that night.

Which reminds me of the most sadistic, cruel, mean and funny thing I have ever heard done in a courtroom. An elderly policeman told me the story. He swears it is true.

It happened many years ago, before policeman began living in squad cars, talking into microphones, using computers, and taking themselves too seriously. One night, a paddy wagon brought a big, drunken steelworker into the South Chicago police station. He had been arrested for throwing several of his drinking companions through the window of a neighborhood tavern.

He was of Eastern European origin and apparently had anarchistic tendencies because he bellowed at the room full of cops: "When we haf revolution, we going to take all you red-nose Irish bastards and shoot you by wall."

The desk sergeant, who wasn't too sober himself, said: "Book this man on disorderly conduct and high treason."

While papers were quickly filled out, the rest of the cops went upstairs, where there was an empty police court.

They took the steelworker upstairs to the courtroom. A detective was pretending to be a judge. Another became the prosecutor. Others became clerks, bailiffs, and the public defender. Several more sat in the jury box. A few winos were brought from the lockup to sit in the spectators' seats.

The trial was held, evidence presented, and when it ended, the "judge" said: "I find you not guilty of disorderly conduct. But I find you guilty of high treason. I sentence you to be executed by means of electrocution as quickly as the sentence can be carried out."

They rushed the dumbfounded man out of the courtroom and to the lockup, where he was asked what he wanted for his last meal. Somebody ran out to an all-night diner and got a hamburger with fries for him.

As he ate, the lights in the cell blinked on and off several times.

"What's that?" he yelled.

"We are testing the electric chair," he was told.

When he finished the meal, they led him into the squad room, where they had rigged a large chair with wires. A detective had turned his collar around, so he looked like a clergyman. He loudly prayed over the steelworker, who began weeping.

They strapped him into the chair, and atop his head they place a bowl-like gadget they had taken off a lamp.

"Be brave, my son," the clergyman-detective intoned. "You will meet your maker any minute now." The steelworker began wailing.

At that moment, the door burst open and a cop rushed in, shouting: "Stop the execution! The governor has given him a reprieve!"

The next morning, he was taken before a real judge on the brawling charge. He immediately began babbling: "Last night I was in the electric chair...the governor saved me...high treason...a thing on my head."

The judge sent him to the state hospital to be examined. When he got out of there, he resumed drinking in the neighborhood tavern. But from then on, he always went home after two drinks.

Sanitary conditions 'primitive' in flooded city

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — With a record flood filling most of the city with filthy water, city officials said Monday they were considering stringing a hose up to 22 miles across the prairie to bring in clean water so people could at least wash their hands.

"What people take for granted day to day, like taking a shower and washing clothes, isn't going to happen for quite a while," said National Guard Capt. Greg Bowen. "The sanitary conditions are primitive at best."

The Red River that had flooded 75 percent of the city also shut down the municipal water treatment plant, and there was no water service for the estimated 10 percent of the city's 50,000 inhabitants who hadn't left yet.

"The toilet part is the worst," said Richard George. "We just flush it with melted snow. We were melting snow on the barbecue grill."

Portable bathrooms and drinking water stations were scattered throughout the city's still-dry extreme west end. In public and motel restrooms, the stench built up until crews could periodically come by with flushing water.

The city also supplied most of the water for Grand Forks Air Force Base, where more than 2,000 of the city's refugees were staying.

The base still had a reserve of clean water, was pumping some water from a nearby small town and planned to bring in 20 large tanker trucks, said a spokesman, Capt. Byron Spencer.

In the meantime, he said: "We're asking people not to use the washing machine, limit their shower usage, things like that."

President Clinton planned to fly over the flooded area and visit the Air Force base on Tuesday, the White House said.

AP Laserphoto

Members of the U.S. Coast Guard rescue Mark Olson, left, from his flooded home near downtown Grand Forks, N.D., Monday, April 21, 1997. Most of the city has been evacuated as floodwaters from the Red River continue to rise.

City officials held a meeting Monday afternoon to discuss the proposal for a long water pipeline.

The city water treatment plant and sewer system are expected to be flooded for weeks, and Bowen said the temporary hose or pipeline also could be used to speed up the process of restoring service once the flood ebbs. The city uses about 8 million gallons of water a day.

The hose, probably about 6 inches in diameter, would be made of a rubber-like material with enough flexibility to conform to the contour of the land, officials said.

However, there were no decisions yet on where the pipeline would be placed or even exactly where the water would come from.

Across the river in East Grand Forks, Minn., Mayor Lynn Stauss said her city of 9,000 was "basically covered all the way."

"Some of the homes are floating off their foundations," she said.

Upstream at Fargo, N.D., however, the water was beginning to recede.

There have been minor problems with several dikes, "but for the most part, things are holding together," said Fargo Mayor Bruce Furness.

North Dakota Gov. Ed Schafer said the cleanup alone would easily cost more than $40 million. And Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., said the cost of repairs could exceed $1 billion.

The river, moving slowly north across the extraordinarily flat terrain of the Red River Valley, was edging toward an expected crest at 54 feet, 26 feet above flood stage. By Monday afternoon, it had reached 53.9 feet, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

The flood from the melting of the winter's record snowpack was flowing slowly toward the U.S.-Canada border, where the U.S. Customs Service said its border ports of entry at Pembina and Neche would be shut down during the night. Pembina, a major crossing on Interstate 29, is right along the river and Neche, a few miles west, has flooding on low-lying roads.

Farther north, about 140 miles from Grand Forks, the flood is expected to hit Winnipeg, Manitoba, in a couple of weeks on its way to vast Lake Winnipeg and eventually to Hudson Bay.

Students whose Grand Forks schools are closed started enrolling Monday at nearby rural schools, where they confronted unfamiliar textbooks and often lacked such basics as a pen or paper.

Brown University loses female athletes' discrimination appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an action hailed as a victory for sexual equality, the Supreme Court refused to free Brown University of rulings that the Ivy League school discriminated against female athletes.

Although Monday's court action is not a decision and therefore sets no legal precedent for other universities and colleges, the practical effect may be enormous.

"I think the message that goes across the entire country today is that those who have been dragging their feet are duly warned that the time is now," said Christine Grant, athletic director for women's sports at the University of Iowa. "It's a very clear message and long, long overdue."

Lawyers for Brown had argued that lower court rulings in its case could require schools nationwide to offer varsity opportunities for women based on "a stark numerical quota."

Those courts had ruled that Brown violated a 1972 law known as Title IX.

The law, credited by many with changing the face of women's sports and influencing society's attitudes about women, bans discrimination in education based on sex. All government-run schools and private schools that receive federal money are covered by the law.

Even before learning of the high court's denial of review, Brown officials Monday submitted for a federal trial judge's approval a plan for complying with Title IX.

The plan calls for increasing by about 60 the number of varsity team positions available to Brown female athletes so their total number mirrors the overall student population.

The school does not plan to cut any men's teams, and gives varsity status to three additional women's teams — lightweight crew, equestrian and water polo.

Speaking to reporters Monday, Brown spokesman Mark Nickel said the school "has believed all along that our program of athletics for men and women meets the requirement of Title IX."

The school's appeal had argued that "the use of Title IX to mandate adherence to preferential quotas presents an issue of exceptional importance that warrants resolution now." It added: "Universities with budgetary constraints must cut academic offerings to fund additional teams for women, cut teams for men, or risk liability for damage and loss of federal funds."

Lynette Labinger, a lawyer for the women who sued Brown, said, "It's just a relief to see an end to litigation." She said the school spent more than $1 million in defending steps it took to save $66,000.

The school's unsuccessful Supreme Court appeal had been supported by, among others, the American Council on Education, 60 universities and colleges and 49 members of Congress.

The dispute dates to 1991, when Brown imposed university-wide budget cuts.

The school, which then funded 16 varsity sports for men and 16 for women, ended funding for four teams — men's golf and water polo and women's gymnastics and volleyball. The move affected 37 men and 23 women.

Some of the affected female athletes sued, contending that Brown, located in Providence, R.I., had violated Title IX.

A federal trial judge initially ordered Brown to continue funding the women's gymnastics and volleyball teams, and later ruled that stripping those teams of university-funded varsity status violated Title IX.

When the case was at trial in 1993, 51 percent of Browns' 5,722 undergraduate students were women. Only 38 percent of the school's 897 intercollegiate varsity athletes were women.

The trial judge cited the 13 percent disparity in concluding that cutting funding for the two women's teams was discriminatory. He ordered the funding continued.

A three-judge panel of the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the judge's finding of discrimination by a 2-1 vote last November.

The appeals court interpreted the law and federal regulations to require a school to have "gender parity between its student body and its athletic lineup" unless it shows steady progress toward that goal or full accommodation for qualified women seeking athletic opportunities.

Other appeals courts have reached the same interpretation.

The 1st Circuit court set aside the trial judge's order requiring continued funding for all the women's varsity programs. Brown officials are free, the appeals court said, to fashion some other remedy — such as "cutting men's teams until substantial proportionality" is achieved.

Title IX applies to all levels of education, and high schools have been sued by parents of girls wanting equal treatment.

In other matters Monday, the Supreme Court:

- Rejected the government's effort to force Texaco to pay at least $1 billion more in taxes on Saudi Arabian oil it sold between 1978 and 1981.
- Left intact a $1 million libel award won against ABC television by an Iowa manufacturer for a news report on a Georgia county's garbage-recycling machine.
- Let stand six Branch Davidians' convictions stemming from a shootout that began the 1993 standoff at the cult's compound near Waco, Texas.
- Ruled in an Arizona case that parents seeking child-support payments from deadbeat ex-spouses cannot sue states to force overall compliance with federal efforts to help, but said some lawsuits might be allowed.

McVeigh's jury selection could end this week

DENVER (AP) — The final prospective jurors were screened Monday in the Oklahoma City bombing trial, with the judge telling them they could know within hours whether they are in the final jury pool.

"We're getting close here," U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch told a prospect, a retired Air Force man who works in retail. The judge said the man would be contacted Monday night or Tuesday morning.

The judge told another: "We'll be getting back to you soon for the selection of the jury."

These were Matsch's first public comments confirming that jury selection was winding down.

Sources have said opening statements are tentatively scheduled to begin Thursday, following the last private sessions in which jurors are dismissed for legal reasons and the exercising of peremptory challenges, in which attorneys can eliminate prospective jurors without stating a reason.

The judge, meantime, was considering empaneling an anonymous jury to hear the case against Timothy McVeigh, who faces the death penalty on murder and conspiracy charges in the April 19, 1995, bombing that killed 168 people.

Matsch was considering shuffling the numbers assigned to jury candidates who have undergone extensive questioning about their attitudes and backgrounds, sources told The Associated Press.

With the new numbers, it would be impossible to tell who actually was seated on the jury. Also, the judge has arranged for jurors to sit behind a large wall blocking them from the media — but not from the public section of the courtroom.

Juror questioning continued Monday with four people brought into court by the lunch break. A total of 96 people had undergone questioning by the judge and the attorneys since March 31.

Among those questioned was a woman who said she struggled to determine her feelings about the death penalty.

An administrative assistant with a hospital background, the woman said she always considered herself a "proponent of the death penalty" — until she got her summons in the McVeigh trial.

Combest: Bill could harm local inventors

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Debate is expected to resume Wednesday on H.R. 400, legislation restructuring the nation's patent procedures.

The bill, introduced by U.S. Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., calls for earlier publication of applications and is intended to make American patent procedures more similar to those of other countries. The bill would require each application, other than certain design patents, to be published promptly after 18 months after the earliest filing date.

But Rep. Larry Combest, whose district includes portions of West Texas, says the bill "will have tremendous ramifications on Permian Basin inventors" even if it is designed to level the playing field on an international basis.

Holding a two-page list of recent patent-holders from Midland and Odessa, Combest said the bill, if passed, would remove protections enjoyed by small businesses and independent inventors.

"I think it would remove the incentives and abilities of the small inventor to move forward with his ideas," he said.

Emissions lawsuit

AUSTIN — The state has been ordered to come up with more than $200 million for abandoning an auto emissions testing program two years ago that motorists found cumbersome. State District Judge Joseph Hart said the state had the right to change its mind about the program but couldn't leave Tejas Testing Technology with a worthless seven-year contract. In a final judgment issued Monday, Hart said Tejas was entitled to more than $200 million, which includes $139.8 million in actual damages and $28.7 in pre-judgment interest.

Morales says no to immunity in tobacco lawsuit

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Any possible settlement of Texas' $14 billion lawsuit against the tobacco industry won't grant those companies immunity in any future wrongdoing, Attorney General Dan Morales declared Monday.

"The tobacco industry has reneged on every promise it has ever made to the American people," Morales said. "If there is any industry undeserving of 'immunity' from future liability, it is the tobacco industry."

Texas is one of 22 states suing the industry, seeking to recover money spent on health care for tobacco-related illnesses.

Morales discussed the talks in a letter to members of the Senate Health and Human Services Committee and House Public Health Committee. A spokesman for the tobacco industry in Washington, Lance Morgan, declined to comment on the letter.

The state's lawsuit, filed in federal court in Texarkana, also seeks an end to what Morales charges are deceptive marketing and advertising practices.

Last week, news reports said Philip Morris and RJR Nabisco, the nation's top two cigarette makers, are negotiating a settlement with the attorneys general of eight states in hopes of winning blanket protection from lawsuits over smoking-related health problems.

Such a settlement reportedly could cost as much as $300 billion over 25 years and require the industry to restrict its advertising, including characters like Joe Camel that appeal to children.

The attorney general said he is "very encouraged" with developments so far.

"The tobacco industry — after almost 50 years — may finally be willing to admit their past wrongdoings and conform their industry's activities to the letter of the law," he wrote.

But he said granting future immunity

Police believe body found in pond is that of missing Friendswood girl

FRIENDSWOOD, Texas (AP) — Police Chief Jared Stout said Monday he believes a body found in a Pasadena retention pond is that of a 12-year-old Friendswood girl who has been missing since April 3.

Laura Kate Smither has not been seen since she left her home to go jogging more than two weeks ago. Pasadena is about 10 miles northeast of Friendswood.

Stout informed Laura's parents and volunteers, who have searched for her, before holding a news conference Monday in Friendswood.

"The evidence at the scene includes a silver ring bearing her initials, and it is apparent that the woman wore braces both on her upper teeth and lower teeth," Stout said.

Stout said Laura's parents, Gay and Bob Smither, remained in seclusion.

"They ask for your understanding, and privacy is what they wish most at this time," Stout said.

Investigators are awaiting autopsy results to determine how Laura died, Stout said.

However, J.F. Ebdon, an investigator with the Harris County Medical Examiners Office, said Monday that the body has not yet been positively identified.

"We don't do tentative, maybe (identifications)," said Ebdon, whose office expected to do an autopsy Tuesday.

The decomposed body, described as a female between the age of 7 and 15, had been in the water at least five days, police said.

Volunteers hugged and cried during Stout's news conference. A tearful Mandy Albritton, the volunteer coordinator, thanked all those who helped in the search.

"Though we didn't bring her home to live

Johnson autopsy

Preliminary autopsy results indicate that former Midland resident and Odessa teacher Helen R. Johnson, 53, died from multiple stab wounds. Autopsy results also indicate the time of death was between 5:30 and 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, according to information from Midland police reports.

Ms. Johson was found fully clothed and buried in a shallow grave in a caliche pit about three miles east of Midland on Wednesday.

Four suspects were charged with capital murder as a result of a police investigation.

The four suspects were arrested in Ms. Johnson's car when they were stopped by a sheriff's deputy.

COMBEST: Congressman says legislation necessary

(From 1B)

He pointed out that most independent inventors must find investors to help finance their inventions. "A patent is a good way to find investors and if you have to publish early, that makes it harder to find investors."

Under current patent procedures, applications are not published until the patent is issued and Combest said that while some changes may be needed, current methods offer better protection for small businesses and independent inventors.

Combest traveled to Permian Production Equipment Inc. on West County Road 128 to discuss the legislation. The business was founded by Charlie McCoy, who built the business on his patented beam gas processor, which relieves back pressure on a producing formation, thereby increasing production.

McCoy, who is in the process of obtaining two other patents, said he feared that if the legislation is passed, early publication would allow big businesses to develop the idea before he could.

Noting that Rockwell International, a major multinational corporation, supported the legislation, McCoy said "It would be excellent for them. If I worked for Rockwell, I'd probably support it too."

The procedure for obtaining a patent, McCoy said, "is by no means perfect. But it protects the small businessman and independent inventor better than H.R. 400."

He told Combest that it is impossible for a small businessman to enforce his own patent and suggested that the U.S. Patent Office be given responsibility for enforcement, a suggestion Combest liked and said he would consider.

Combest said there are still 20 amendments to the bill up for a vote before Congress, expected this week. He said it's difficult to estimate the bill's chances for passage or defeat because there is such a wide mix of people supporting and opposing the bill.

"Some changes may be needed, but we don't need to throw out the whole process," he said.

LAWSUIT: Morales says no to immunity for companies would be a deal-breaker.

"Numerous public reports have indicated ... the industry expects 'immunity' from future legal liability. If the industry insists on maintaining this position, Texas will not be a party to any settlement," Morales wrote.

"Clearly, the industry must be held accountable for past harm it has caused our citizens and the concerted efforts they have made to deceive and exploit our children.

"But it is equally important — given this industry's past history — that it be held legally accountable for any future wrongdoing as well. Under our system of justice, one may not 'buy' the right to violate the law," Morales said.

GIRL: Police believe body that of missing 12-year-old out the rest of her life, now she can rest, and we can be thankful for that," Ms. Albritton said.

Laura's disappearance had caused an extensive search that involved hundreds of volunteers and some 550 Marine reservists who scoured Friendswood, a suburban area about 20 miles south of Houston.

Police and FBI on Monday searched the area where the body was found Sunday by a man training his dog. Some investigators dug by hand through muddy silt.

"What they're searching for is anything of evidentiary value, or perhaps, even body parts," Pasadena police Capt. A.H. Corbett said. "The body was not intact. We found some body parts up inside the culvert and part of the body was at the mouth of the culvert."

He said animals and the water flow in the pond may have scattered the remains. Several bayous run into the pond.

The body was partially submerged and wearing only one tube sock, police said.

When she disappeared, the girl was wearing a black T-shirt, navy blue shorts and white sneakers. She has braces on her teeth and curly brown hair.

Friendswood Mayor Evelyn Newman had proclaimed Sunday as "Search for Laura Day" and urged people to check their property and surrounding areas for any clues to the girl's disappearance.

State faces $200 million judgment in emissions case

The Texas legislature abandoned an automobile emissions-testing program motorists considered cumbersome and costly. The company that developed the program sued, saying it was left with $250 million in worthless testing stations.

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has been ordered to come up with more than $200 million for abandoning an auto emissions testing program two years ago that motorists found cumbersome.

State District Judge Joseph Hart said the state had the right to change its mind about the program but couldn't leave Tejas Testing Technology with a worthless seven-year contract.

In a final judgment issued Monday, Hart said Tejas was entitled to more than $200 million, which includes $139.8 million in actual damages and $28.7 in prejudgment interest.

Tejas was also awarded an additional $40 million in attorneys fees and can petition the state for another $53 million as the reasonable return it could have expected on its investment over the life of its contract.

"At the level of this award, our creditors and investors will be simply breaking even," said Steve Ravel, an Austin attorney representing Tejas.

Ron Dusek, spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales, said the state would appeal.

"The judgment is excessive," Dusek said. "In regard to the actual outlays by the company and what we would think would be appropriate damages, this is way beyond."

The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission in 1993 signed deals with Tejas Testing to operate a federally mandated program to test auto emissions.

Shortly after Tejas testing stations opened in January 1995, drivers protested the tests as cumbersome and costly.

Lawmakers reacted by killing the program. Tejas officials said that left them with $250 million, including interest and attorneys' fees, in worthless testing stations.

The money to pay Tejas would likely come from an appropriation made by the Legislature.

"We hope to work with the leadership to get this matter resolved before the Legislature adjourns," Ravel said.

Dusek said settlement talks would continue. Lawmakers previously offered $112 million.

Tejas Testing is majority-owned by Systems Control, a California firm that operates emissions-testing sites in other states.

Drivers continue to get auto emissions tests along with their annual safety inspections.

Gov. George W. Bush signed legislation in 1995 that instituted new emissions tests now in effect in Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and El Paso.

Under the new law, cars are tested at two motor speeds — once at normal idle and once with the motor revved up to 2,500 revolutions per minute. If emissions are too high at either speed, the vehicle fails.

Sophomores do better on exit-level TAAS test

AUSTIN (AP) — A record 67 percent of sophomores passed on their first try at the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills, an exam they must conquer before receiving a high school diploma.

But 7 percent of seniors have yet to pass the reading, writing and math test, according to preliminary figures from the most recent exam in February. They get another chance at the TAAS beginning April 29.

Education Commissioner Mike Moses applauded the tenth-graders' performance in announcing the figures Monday. Sophomores who didn't pass have another seven tries before graduation.

"We are so proud of these tenth-grade students," said Moses. He said since the TAAS first was given to 10th-graders in 1993, the percentage of students passing all three sections has gone up 16 percentage points.

Minority students' improvement on the TAAS offers "strong proof" the gap can be closed, he said.

The percentage of black 10th-graders passing all sections of the TAAS rose from 29 percent in 1994 to 48 percent this spring, while the Hispanic passing percentage rose from 35 percent to 52 percent.

The percentage of white students passing has increased from 67 percent to 81 percent, while the percentage of economically disadvantaged students who passed went from 33 percent to 50 percent.

Moses said today's 10th graders have been in classes stressing the basics and have taken the TAAS since the 5th grade.

SCHMIDT: Interest in science began as childhood love of science fiction in science fiction as a child.

(From 1B)

"TV shows like anything from 'Lost in Space' to 'My Favorite Martian,'" Schmidt laughed.

At 16, he had the opportunity to work part time in a planetarium and "quickly became involved in other aspects of science.

"And I realized that science was becoming at least as interesting as science fiction. I didn't know what I wanted to do before that, and I started working at a planetarium and enjoyed what I was doing.

"I was getting paid for it, and people told me I was good at it. I became involved in as many aspects of the planetarium as I could. I think I was lucky to establish a career direction relatively early.

"I know a lot of people my age (32) are in careers they don't enjoy. They might be making a lot of money, but they're in jobs rather than careers."

When he was attending Arizona State University, Schmidt worked for the Mars K-12 Education Program at the NASA — Mars Global Surveyor Spectrometer Facility in Tempe (from February of 1993 to August of 1994). He also worked for the Arizona Museum of Science and Technology in Phoenix for a year beginning in September of 1993.

"Even through school took a little longer, I've been able to accumulate a tremendous amount of on the job experience," said Schmidt.

While living in Flagstaff, he worked as a program specialist at Lowell Observatory from September of 1991 to December of 1992. Prior to that, he worked at the Andrus Planetarium at the Hudson River Museum of Westchester, Yonkers, N.Y., and at the Vanderbilt Museum Historic House and Planetarium, Centerport, N.Y.

"A lot of people see science and art as being at odds with one another, but I don't see that dichotomy," said Schmidt, who has been director of the Blakemore Planetarium since December of 1994. "They can both be very creative, and they're both exploratory.

"Art is an attempt to find beauty or meaning in the world, and science is an attempt to understand or explain the universe."

Science is important to Schmidt "because it puts my own existence into a clearer and broader context. If you get right down to it, the subject matter of astronomy is pretty humbling. When you know a little bit more about a bright object in the sky — for instance, you realize it's Jupiter and find out it's a thousand times larger than the one you're standing on — that makes it all more real.

"For some people, to explain an object is to somehow take away from its beauty, whereas to a scientist, to understand more about the object helps him to appreciate it even more. I think most people are naturally curious, and science is an extension of that curiosity."

Schmidt's primary interest is in "non-traditional learning environments such as planetaria science centers and research facilities that have an education component to them."

The Midland planetarium has the variety of programming which appeals to Schmidt.

"Most of the 10,000 visitors we get here every year are students in grades K through 12 and preschool, so much of the day is spent presenting school programs," said Schmidt. "The size of a group can range anywhere from half a dozen kids to up to 100 at a time. And frequently we'll see an entire grade level or multiple grade levels. Some days are pretty busy — one show after the other."

The planetarium also presents public sky shows on weekends and evenings and, with the help of the West Texas Astronomers, offers the public the opportunity to view the sky through telescopes.

"Shows also have to be produced, and they can come from a number of sources," said Schmidt. "Larger planetaria will produce shows that smaller or medium-sized planetaria like ours can purchase and then adapt for use in this theater. So, there's quite a bit of audio-visual production that goes into any show that you would see in a planetarium."

Planetarium shows don't run with as little effort as renting videos, pushing them into the machine and turning them on.

"You might have as many as a dozen or more projectors running at any given time, so in a very real sense sky shows are performed as much as they are presented," said Schmidt. "And much of the show is operated manually. And that's also a very challenging aspect — not only producing but also performing those shows."

In a planetarium, Schmidt said, "There's also a considerable amount of technical maintenance that needs to be done on the various specialized equipment in the theater. These include things like the star projector itself — slide projectors, slew projectors, panorama projectors, video projectors — among others."

He believes it is "critically important to people to keep up with the changes occurring in society, and one of the exciting things about working in a facility like this one is the opportunity to make that education exciting. We've got tools here that aren't available to the teacher in a classroom.

"Rather than telling kids about another world and requiring them to simply imagine it and maybe or maybe not get a correct impression, we can take them to the surface of Mars. We can show them the Earth as it would be seen from space. And I think it is a very important perspective for young people, especially, to have. I think the kids we are working with really are the first generation to see the moon and the other planets as worlds that we will someday explore in person."

Schmidt put his words into perspective by saying, "Two thousand years ago, many would look up at a planet or other object in the sky, and it was just that — an object in the sky. And today we know those are worlds. Some are much larger, much smaller, much hotter, much colder, but always very different from our own.

"If that sounds esoteric to some folks, hopefully they realize that knowing that only makes the environment of our own Earth worth that much more attention. It's absolutely unique as far as we know. It's the only world we know of where we can survive."

At a Glance: Steve Schmidt

Birthplace: Long Island, New York.

Hobbies: These aren't in order of importance. I'd say reading, music — live music — I very much enjoy live music, hiking, camping, exotic animals and, of course, star gazing.

Favorite Book: The most influtential one would be "The Razor's Edge" by Sommerset Maughn.

Favorite Music: I like so many different kinds of music, it's almost a shame to have to pick one piece.I think the most powerful piece of music I ever heard was Beethoven's Seventh Symphony.

Favorite Movie: "Bladerunner," directed by Ridley Scott in 1984. The director's cut.

Favorite Food: I don't know if I have a favorite food because I really enjoy eating. This is so arbritary. Chicken cordon bleu.

Favorite Vacation Spot: Northern Arizona.

If I could visit any place in the world: I would like to see the earth from space. If I had the chance to take the space shuttle in place of going to Europe or someplace else, I'd take the shuttle trip in a heartbeat. I don't think my view of the world would be affected as much by a trip to Europe or Antarctica as it would by a view of the entire Earth as a world.

If I won the lottery: I'd pay off some remaining loans, my car, and begin investing. And I'd start enjoying the money, too.

If I could change anything about me: I would learn to be a better listener.

DEAR ABBY

Confused man needs to sort out feelings

DEAR ABBY: When you told "Confused Heart," "When in doubt, don't" and, "... the sooner you set her free, the sooner she can begin healing so she can look for someone who will love her," you jumped to the conclusion that what he was experiencing was not love.

If he has not had examples of loving relationships in his life, as his letter indicates, he may need to work through his feelings with a therapist, alone or as a couple. But I'd hate to see him throw away a three-year relationship because of your advice. I have not known a single person contemplating marriage who hasn't experienced doubt, or wondered if the grass wasn't greener with another person.

My advice to "Confused" would be to find a therapist and work out his feelings about love, commitment and relationships. If his current relationship does not work out, he'll have a much clearer idea of what he is looking for in a mate the next time around. And who knows, his girlfriend may just be the "right" one after all. — NO LONGER CONFUSED THANKS TO THERAPY

DEAR NO LONGER CONFUSED: I received a bushel of well-reasoned responses to the letter from "Confused Heart in Manhattan," the majority from readers who endorsed my answer. But I agree with you; counseling could be very helpful to that doubt-ridden young man. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I read with great empathy the letter from "Confused Heart," who loved his girlfriend but wasn't sure she was "the one." He wondered if he was living in a fairy tale world, or if there is a real love out there where there are no doubts.

I am 34 years old. I'm being married for the first time in June. As an adolescent I thought I wanted to get married as soon as possible, and regarded every guy I met as a potential mate. I stayed in some bad relationships because it was better than being alone. Over time, I matured, gained some self-esteem, and my expectations about relationships changed. I had several boyfriends, one of whom I grew to care for deeply. But I chose not to marry him because I, too, was unsure of what love was "supposed" to feel like. I didn't want to make a mistake and end up divorced.

Then I met Dan. I can't explain how I knew. I just "knew" Dan was the one for me. I had no doubts. Abby, of all the guys I dated, no one made me feel the way he does. He brings out the best in me. He's my best friend. He never gives me any reason to doubt his love for me.

I'm not saying that everyone should wait as long as I did to get married, but your advice was right on. If in doubt, DON'T — and that applies to more than just marriage. When it's right, you'll know it. I hope "Confused Heart" makes the right choice. But as for me, I'm ... GLAD I WAITED

DEAR GLAD: Congratulations on your upcoming wedding. I love happy endings.

Abby shares more of her favorite, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, More Favorite Recipes, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

At Last! How to buy a new Central Air System for less than $18/week with lower electric bills ... and best of all, you choose no payment, no interest for one full year or 9.9% interest or $500 rebate.

But you must act now while the special circumstances that created this unique offer are still available.

Dear Friend,
Right now I have created a new program that will allow homeowners to buy a new central air system with no money down and less than $18 per week. Actually with this program, homeowners will probably be able to buy a new system without taking any money out of their pocket. I'll explain later. You may be thinking

"Why Would He Make This Incredible Offer?"
The answer is simple. Summer is almost here. At this time of year, my calls start to slow down because it is so early in the season. Most people, whether they are having problems with their air conditioner, or it's just an old inefficient unit, are not thinking of replacement. They would be miserable now and wait until next year to change out their system. And right now it is still too cool out for them to think about replacement of their system. This creates a problem for me and

My Problem Is Your Opportunity
Every year I have to guess how many air conditioners and furnaces to buy to meet the "Emergency Demand". Of course I'm never exactly right. These systems are brand new 1997 models. They are NOT seconds, or "blems" or standard "builder" models. They are factory fresh Amana air conditioners and furnaces and have a full factory warranty.

Here's How You Benefit From My Problem
In order to create a demand for these systems, I negotiated a plan to give me a financial program with a low interest rate and low monthly payments that would be irresistible to those who would normally wait until next year to install a new system. Right now, you can buy a new central air conditioner and furnace with NO money down and less that $18 a week.
No other company in the Permian Basin is willing to give you such an incredible offer and

There Is Another Remarkable Advantage.
If your central system is over 10 years old, the money you save on utility costs could be enough to offset the monthly payment on your new system. Image that "buy a new central heating and cooling system without taking any money out of your pocket! It's like having the electric company buy you a new air conditioner and furnace. Here's the best part

Ironclad Guarantee
I'm so confident that you will save at least 25% off your utility bills (I'm projecting more like 30% to 50%) that I will pay you Double the Difference if you don't the first year. There is no way you can lose. If these Amana systems were not among the best on the market, I couldn't afford to make such a promise.

Here's How
Just call Carol at 561-9440 anytime and she will set up an appointment for your FREE survey. A design consultant will come and measure your home (and determine the availability of the proper size) and explain this new fantastic financing plan that I have created. Don't forget, I only have match systems. When they are gone this remarkable offer ends.

No obligation
Even after we come out and explain the installation and the finance plan, there is no obligation. If you decide you don't want to take advantage of the spectacular offer - that's okay. I will give you a surprise gift worth $50 because you are kind enough to read this letter and give me a chance to solve my problem. I want you to think good of Claire's Services even if you don't buy.
Please call us now at 561-9440. Thank you for reading this rather long letter. I hope you will profit greatly because of it.

PS Six months from now, this will probably be the most appreciated opportunity ever extended to homeowners in the Permian Basin. Every one of the proud owners will have an unfair advantage over the utility company.

For the past two years, supporters of High Sky Children's Ranch have graced the Crystal Ball with not only their presence, but with their financial assistance, each time breaking the record high for funds raised. This year was no different.

"Our goal is to raise $200,000 gross," said ball chairman Frank Cremer. And funds raised from the ball did break the $200,000 mark, topping last year's all time high of $190,000.

"We were very successful this year," said Laurie Boldrick, development director for High Sky. "We have so much support from the community. We feel really blessed."

After taking out expenses, funds raised from the ball will be used to help satisfy a portion of the Ranch's $2 million annual operating budget.

As guests arrived at Midland Country Club Saturday evening, the glistening sunset set the stage for the glimmering crystal on display inside. There was even a special twinkle in a few guests' eyes as they approached the entrance to MCC at the sight of a brand new 3181 convertible BMW, a 1997 Jeep Grand Cherokee and a 1997 GTX Sea Doo and trailer which were on display as a part of the silent auction on consignment from Broncho BMW, Sun Country Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge-Jeep-Eagle and Dean's Marine respectively.

APPROXIMATELY 300 guests mingled as they viewed the 19 crystal items to be auctioned live later in the evening, and placed their bids on the 46 items in the silent auction. Hors d'oeuvres and cocktails were served by the MCC staff during the black tie affair.

"The Project" from Dallas, produced by Wemus Entertainment, played as several guests took to the dance floor. For those who preferred a quieter setting, piano music by Tino Malastina Jr. was available in The Grill.

Mistress of Ceremonies Melissa Hendrix welcomed guests and Paula Douglas, High Sky's chairman of the Board of Directors, and Jackie Carter, executive director for High Sky, announced the Rainbow Award winner was Virginia Jones.

The annual award is presented to an individual who has given of him or herself for the betterment of the Ranch.

In tribute to Ms. Jones, the announcement included "We are honoring a true angel ... She has the warmest heart and a giving spirit."

TOUCHED BY THE words said about her, Ms. Jones said, "I haven't done as much as some of the winners in the past, but I have to say, it (her work with High Sky) has been a true labor of love."

As the live auction of crystal got underway, Ms. Hendrix reminded guests, "Remember, if you spend a little more than you planned, it's for a great cause."

Auctioneer Smith Thomasson started the evening on a light note with the first piece of crystal for auction — a Waterford rearing horse: "Our first item is a rearing horse. Now I don't mean a horse down on all fours, I mean a rearing horse. Imagine how long that horse had to pose like that for this piece of crystal to be made."

THE TOP SELLING pieces in the live auction were a carved crystal bracelet with diamonds, rubies and citrenes; a Baccarat jaguar; a Baccarat shark; and a Baccarat oceanie vase. Other pieces included: from Waterford, a vase and a Labrador retriever; from Lalique, a pair of Tambwe lion cubs, a Bali va and an orchid bowl; from Steuben, an olive dis.. and flower vase; from Orrefors, a set of three candlesticks, and from Baccarat, a lion head, an angel and a golfer putting. Also in the live auction was a magnum of Cristal Champagne with two handblown and signed champagne flutes by R. Strong, and an original painting by Doug Sweet titled "Glasses."

This year, several pieces of crystal were donated to the live auction.

"The donations of crystal pieces for the live auction really helped us on our expenses," Ms. Boldrick said.

Donors included Neiman Marcus stores in the Houston Galleria and Downtown Dallas, Driscoll's Gifts, Mary Macho Precious Gems, Hoya Crystal, Jan and Ted Roden, Swartz and Cathy Eastham Fine Jewelry at Swartz.

There also were five crystal pieces donated for a raffle. Joanne's Fine Gifts donated two crystal pieces for the raffle, along with other donors Beverly Vaughan at The Ivy Cottage, Sam L. Majors Jewelers and Dillard's at Midland Park Mall.

Following the live auction, the music resumed with the tune "My Girl" from The Project as some guests took to the dance floor while others headed to the breakfast buffet served in The Grill — complete with made-to-order omelettes.

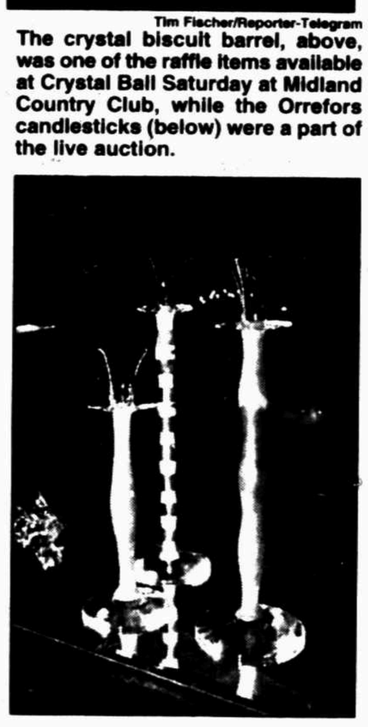
The crystal biscuit barrel, above, was one of the raffle items available at Crystal Ball Saturday at Midland Country Club, while the Orrefors candlesticks (below) were a part of the live auction.



This jaguar by Baccarat was one of the top selling pieces during the live auction of Crystal Ball to benefit High Sky Children's Ranch Saturday evening at Midland Country Club.

Tim Fischer/ Reporter-Telegram

HIGH SKY Children's Ranch is primarily known for its Residential Treatment Program, which helped over 100 children on campus last year.

However, the Ranch also supplies community-service programs such as the Therapeutic Foster Care Program, the STAY Together Preventional Program and Family Preservation Program, which serviced more than 400 families in 1996.

"Most people tend to think of us as only a residential facility, but we do a lot of work outside the campus. We worked with more than 400 families last year to help keep them together and to help prevent abuse," Ms. Boldrick said.

"We have a wonderful group of people who serve or have served on our Board of Governors and Board of Directors. They truly care about the kids," Ms Carter said. "Many of them have met our kids. They know them and they have put a face on the abuse."

Crystal Angel sponsors were George Conly and Lissa and Cy Wagner. Crystal Collector sponsors included Arco Permian, Frances and Jack Brown, H-E-B, Doyle and Margaret Hartman, Pat and Joe Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Jay B. Horton, NationsBank, Rino Equipment Inc., Larry E. Stewart, Carol Winkel, Claire and Jim Woodcock, and Mary and Henri de Compiegne/Mindy and Joseph de Compiegne.

There also were 27 Crystal Benefactors, 11 Crystal Patrons and more than 110 Crystal Sponsors.

Cremer said, "I had a great committee. I was surprised how smooth everything went. I really want to thank each one of them for all they did."

Other members of the Crystal Ball committee included Susan Horton, sponsor chairman; Carol Wagner, crystal acquisition chairman; Dan Rush, live auction chairman; Carol Winkel, silent auction chairman; Gwyn Sparks, silent co-chairman; Pat Henderson, party chairman; and Susie Burnett, invitations chairman.

'We have a wonderful group of people who serve or have served on our Board of Governors and Board of Directors. They truly care about the kids.'

— Jackie Carter,
executive director of High Sky Children's Ranch

Lady Rebels take charge at regionals

By Terry Williamson

LEE
Region I-5A Golf Tournament

LUBBOCK — The Midland Lee girls golf team had to play the role of "Mother Hen" here Monday in the first round of the Region I-5A Girls Golf Tournament, but came away bearing fangs and ready for a killing today.

The Lady Rebels, a second place team in the District 4-5A golf race, fired a season best round of 317 to take a full seven-stroke lead over the field, including 4-5A champion Abilene High, the second place team with a 324 and only one stroke ahead of Mansfield.

Lee's 317 was 13 strokes better than their previous best tournament team total for one round this year.

The top two teams earn state berths in Austin in two weeks and it looks as if Lee is already at the train station, buying tickets for the fifth time under head coach Phyllis Sutton.

Lee and Abilene High will both be paired together in today's final round, which should be an advantage for both teams.

"This is good," Sutton said after Monday's round. "We could end up going to state again. And we will be playing with Abilene High. That's exactly perfect. We enjoy playing them and we have respect for each other. The perfect ending is that we both go to state."

By virtue of finishing second, the Lady Rebels were matched with other second place district finishers Monday on the Squirrel Hollow portion of the Meadowbrook golf course. That meant, in most cases, that Lee was playing with players far below their talent level since 4-5A just happens to be one of the strongest districts overall in the state. The Lee girls, for instance, had to baby along some of their compeititors (some shooting as high as 126) while giving out rules interpretations when needed. Not only did they have to play golf, but they had to nurse along the competition like a mother hen.

"I had to play with some girls who weren't very strong," said Lee junior Krystal Mehaffey, who saved an 83 with two birdies on the last two holes. "I felt like I was a mother figure out there, telling them what to do. They were sweet girls, but one of them had a 126. I'll like it a lot better playing with a high level of talent."

Kelly Feavel, a senior, also found the first day pairings tough, but rallied for a 79.

"Playing with some of the lower players really effected my game," Feavel said. "I really started out shaky, seven-over (par), but I got my mental game back during the round and finished fine."

Lee senior Sandi Talley, who was the 4-5A runner-up to Liz Wardlaw, led the Rebel effort Monday with a 74. That score put her in third place on the medalist board after the first day while Wardlaw had a 78 and was not among the medalist leaders.

"I hoped I would be in the hunt (for the individual medalist title)," Talley said. "I felt really positive about my three-over (par). I had a double bogey on No. 5, and other than that, I was on my game all day. I'm really excited about the final round. I wanted to be in the medalist race, but the team is doing so well."

DALLAS — This was supposed to be the year the Dallas Mavericks made it back to the playoffs. Instead, they're once again back at the drawing board.

New owners, a new coach, three general managers, the biggest trade in NBA history, 18 different starters and a league-record 27 players couldn't get this wayward franchise back on track.

In fact, Dallas is farther from being a competitive team today than when the season began. By going 24-58, the Mavericks won two games less than last season to remain in search of their first winning season since 1989-90.

"What you saw this year was a conglomerate of players who were thrust into a situation that wasn't very favorable for any of us," rookie coach Jim Cleamons said. "I won't worry about it or think about it until I have time to reflect on it. Right now, it's just over."

While that would tend to suggest a tumultuous off-season looms ahead, forget about it.

Majority owner Ross Perot Jr. has gone out of his way to make sure everyone — especially general manager Don Nelson — knows Cleamons will be back for the second year of his three-year contract.

"This is one that was, in effect, done before Nellie got here," Perot said.

Nelson, meanwhile, already overhauled the roster in February by trading four starters and two top reserves and cutting another key contributor, all in a four-day span. He even fired the equipment manager.

Those moves left the Mavericks without any marquee players and put them well over the salary cap, further limiting Nelson's off-season maneuverability.

Dallas also is without its top draft pick — a likely top six selection ridiculously traded to Boston without lottery protection — although it has Minnesota's first choice.

Mercifully, Spurs' season comes to an end

SAN ANTONIO — A miserable season has ended at last for the San Antonio Spurs.

Now the team is looking ahead to something brighter — the NBA draft.

The Houston Rockets delivered the Spurs' final regular-season blow Sunday, defeating the Spurs 103-99 and ensuring San Antonio would finish with a 20-62 record, its worst in franchise history.

"I promise this won't happen again," guard Avery Johnson said after Sunday's game. "Words can't describe how I feel right now. It's real disappointing."

With star center David Robinson out almost the entire season with back and foot injuries, the Spurs lacked the power that had propelled them to the playoffs since Robinson's rookie year in 1989-90.

It didn't help that other key players, including forward Sean Elliott, were sidelined this year with assorted ailments. San Antonio ended the season with 347 games lost to injuries, another franchise record.

Spurs coach Gregg Popovich applauded his players for the way they endured the tough times.

"I'm really proud of the way these guys persevered and stuck together. They deserve to be commended," said Popovich, who hasn't announced whether he will return as coach next season.

Popovich, also the general manager, fired coach Bob Hill in December and took over the team himself the day Robinson was to return from battling back pain. Robinson's return was short-lived. Six games later he went down with a broken foot and missed the rest of the season. Robinson has said little publicly lately, but he spoke out after the season's end, praising his teammates for the way they responded to adversity.

"I've seen other bad teams that don't react as well as we did," he said. "Every one of our players had obstacles to overcome and each put out the effort every night."

Robinson, 31, predicted his back and foot would be in good shape come next season, and he said he's looking forward to the fall.

"I'm ready for training camp to start," he said. "After I had that second injury, I told myself that maybe this was just time for me to heal. I've always had such perfect health until this year. Now I know there will be a big-time reward at the other end," Robinson said.

Boston Marathon won by Kenyan

BOSTON — The second century of the Boston Marathon began the same way its first century ended — with a Kenyan the champion.

Lameck Aguta, the fourth-place finisher the previous two years, became the seventh consecutive Kenyan winner and the third different champion in three years.

The 25-year-old pulled away toward the end, finishing in 2 hours, 10 minutes, 34 seconds on Monday in the 101st running of the race, the world's oldest continuous marathon .

Among the women, Ethiopia's Fatuma Roba confirmed her Olympic victory last year was no one-race breakthrough. She became the first African woman to capture the Boston Marathon, winning in 2:26:23.

"It is magic," said Aguta, 25. "I have been waiting all my life for this."

Aguta trained with two of the world's greatest distance runners, Moses Kiptanui, the world record-holder in the 3,000-meter steeplechase and three-time world champion, and Daniel Komen, the world record-holder at 2,000 and 3,000 meters.

Roba, 26, was extremely confident despite never having run the demanding and undulating course, known for its steep hills, including the famed Heartbreak Hill.

Through a translator, she joked before the race, "I am told there is a hill, but I didn't find it."

Uta Pippig of Germany, bidding to become the first four-time women's winner, finished fourth in 2:28:51, more than 2 1/2 minutes behind Roba. She did not decide to seek a fourth consecutive title until March 7.

Pippig has been beset by physical problems. She was forced to drop out of the Olympics because of a stress fracture while leading, then developed another stress fracture four weeks later.

"I had less training than in other years," she said, with her usual gracious smile. "I'm fourth, it's OK."

Texas emphasizes defense

■ Longhorns head coach John Mackovic wants an improved defense from the 1996 campaign.

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Texas managed to win the first Big 12 football championship with a defense that finished 86th nationally against the run and 65th in total defense.

Those facts astound coach John Mackovic.

"It's an unbelievable tribute to our team because that just doesn't happen," Mackovic said. "But we found a way to win."

To remedy the situation, Texas has changed from a 3-4 to a 4-3 defense under new coordinator Bobby Jack Wright, who was promoted from special teams coach after Gary Darnell took the head coaching job at Western Michigan.

But the problem won't be up front, where strong performances by freshmen at linebacker and on the line last year gave the Longhorns reason for hope.

The problem is in the secondary, where all four starters have graduated, including cornerback Bryant Westbrook, who was taken by Detroit in the first round of the NFL draft.

Sophomore Aaron Babino and redshirt freshman Donald McCowen appear to be the favorites at the safety positions.

But the corners are up for grabs. In fact, former halfback Chris Butcher, who averaged 4.7 yards per carry, has been converted to a corner. And a starter could well emerge from a group including senior Quinton Wallace, junior Tony Holmes — both recovering from injuries — or from three freshman recruits.

"Looking ahead, our first 10 days of the training camp will be real important to see where the rookies fit in," Mackovic said. "Several of the newcomers will be counted on to contribute right away."

The front seven, however, give Mackovic reason for excitement. Defensive lineman Cedric Woodard, Will Goodloe, Casey Hampton and linebacker Aaron Humphrey — all freshmen last season — will be the heart and soul of the Texas defense next year.

"We moved Aaron Humphrey to the middle linebacker spot and he showed immediately that he could play there," Mackovic said. "I think Aaron is the best of our linebackers, so we need to position him in the position that is best for him and build around that."

With Hampton, Woodard, Goodloe, junior Gray Mosier, senior Chris Akins and the arrival of 6-foot-6, 330-pound freshman Leonard Davis, Texas will have a line filled with "big physical players who can really play with a lot of athletic ability," Mackovic said.

Tuning up the run defense and changing "the perception of satisfaction within our defense" were the top priorities in spring practice, Mackovic said.

"We had several tackles for loss in the final scrimmages and we're getting a great deal of penetration," Mackovic

Jones' decision

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Former Midland Lee Rebel and Miami Hurricane all-America K.C. Jones says that he will sign a free agent contract with the Denver Broncos this week.

The senior, who started all four years at Miami, says the deal is basically done. He was not chosen in this past weekend's NFL Draft, but was offered a contract to play with the AFC West champions soon after Sunday's selections were made. The 6-foot-3 Jones said late Monday night that he is about the opportunity.

"I am ready to play football," Jones said. "I know what to expect from their program, and I think it is a good decision for me."

Jones was not selected during the draft, something he says was due to a knee which went through four different surgeries over a period that went back to his junior year with Midland Lee Rebels.

"Before the draft, I had a feeling of what to expect based on how people reacted towards me," Jones said. "They were concerned about the knee and I can understand that."

Jones' first mini-camp with his new team begins May 2.

A related story on Jones' high school teammate Ryan Tucker going to the St. Louis Rams is on 8C.

Thomas as owner

TORONTO — Toronto Raptors owner Allan Slaight agreed to sell his 81 percent stake in the National Basketball Association franchise to a group headed by Isiah Thomas, the team's general manager.

Thomas, who already owns 9 percent of the team, and his group would pay C$244.6 million (US$175 million) under terms of the letter of intent signed today, a person familiar with the team said. Thomas's group includes Chase Manhattan Bank, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and Gordon Capital, the person said.

The pact gives Thomas, a former NBA star with the Detroit Pistons, 90 percent ownership of the club. The Bank of Nova Scotia has the other 10 percent. The NBA charged the team $125 million to join the league as an expansion franchise for the 1995-96 season. "It has been well-known for quite some time that Allan was selling and our group was buying," Thomas said in a statement. "The process was more complicated and took longer than any of us imagined it would."

Houston NFL

HOUSTON — Buffalo Bills running back Thurman Thomas said Monday that he and Houston Aeros owners Chuck Watson are already discussing plans to bring another NFL team to Houston when the Oilers leave.

Thomas, a Houston native who attended Willowridge High School, told Houston radio station KILT that he will play only one or two more years with the Bills.

Odessa High at Midland High

When: 4:30 p.m.

Where: Zachery Field.

Records: Midland High is 10-16 overall and 1-10 in District 4-5A; Odessa High is 3-22 overall, 1-9 in district.

Coaches: Midland High — Barry Russell; Odessa High — Mike Montgomery.

Opponent: Odessa High is a District 4-5A opponent.

Last Action: Midland High lost to Abilene Cooper, 9-8, Saturday in a district game.

Notes and Quotes: This game will close the season for Midland High, and a win means that the Bulldogs wouldn't finish the season all alone in the 4-5A cellar. A loss, though, means they'd have seventh place all to themselves. Things look good for Midland High today since the Bronchos are the one district team the Bulldogs claimed a win against when they hammered OHS 22-2 in a game which lasted only five innings because of the 10-run rule. Odessa High will likely remember that today. "The last time we played them we scored a bunch of runs, so they'll want to get even," Russell said. Midland High almost pulled off the biggest district upset of the season Saturday, but couldn't hold on to a four-run lead going into the bottom of the seventh against Cooper... Lee Martin will take the mound for MHS in today's finale.

Midland Lee at Odessa Permian

When: 4:30 p.m.

Where: Permian High.

Records: Lee is 12-11-1 overall and 5-4-1 in District 4-5A; Permian is 11-9-2 overall and 4-5-1 in district.

Coaches: Lee — Jesse Benavidez; Permian — Steve Coleman.

Opponent: Permian is a District 4-5A opponent.

Last Action: Lee lost to district leader Abilene High 13-12 Saturday afternoon at home.

Notes and Quotes: Lee has painted itself into a corner and the only way out of it and into the playoffs is to win — and hope San Angelo Central loses to Cooper today. Things would have been far easier for the Rebels had they held on to a 10-5 lead in the seventh inning against Abilene High. Lee collapsed, though, with two errors early in the inning opening the floodgates for an eight-run Eagles' uprising. The rally clinched a playoff spot for AHS, while Abilene Cooper, which also rallied in the seventh Saturday against Midland High, clinched a spot as well. That leaves Lee and Central to battle for that third spot, which is what it could come down to Saturday at 2 p.m. if Lee beats Permian and Cooper beats Central. Beating Permian is hardly an automatic prospect. Although officially eliminated from the playoff race, the Panthers are a streaky steam, as evidenced by their rally from an 11-run deficit to beat Cooper last week. Permian will have payboack on its mind when it faces Lee, having settled for an 8-8 tie when the two teams played in Midland. That game was suspended because of darkness after nine innings and resumed the next day when Permian scored an unearned run in the top of the 10th to apparently win, but a UIL ruling overturned the victory... Benavidez said he will most likely go with Mike Hale today even though Hale was the starting pitcher against Abilene High. The good news is that even though Hale didn't last past the second inning against the Eagles, he only threw 53 pitches.

Next Action: Lee closes its regular season at home with a district game Saturday against Central at 2 p.m.

Angels whip on Wranglers, 12-0

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — The Midland Angels won and won big.

The Angels snapped a two-game losing streak with the monster 12-0 victory over the Wichita Wranglers Monday at Lawrence-Dumont Stadium.

It is not like the Angels (7-10 for the season) needed the runs. Starting pitcher Matt Perisho pitched his second complete game of the year. This one was of the shutout variety. Perisho allowed just four hits and five walks while striking out eight. Perisho's other complete game came against El Paso when he took a no-hitter into the seventh in the 5-1 Angels win.

The Angels, however, did give the ace the needed-run support. Midland smashed 15 hits and did it in impressive fashion.

Up 1-0 in the fourth, Bret Hemphill blasted his first Double-A homer off Wichita's Phil Grundy (0-2). The bomb to right drove in Aaron Guiel, who drove in the game's first run in the first inning.

Jason Herrick got in the act in the sixth with his first Double-A homer. The Angels proceeded to blow the game open in the sixth as Danny Buxbaum singled with the bases loaded to drive in two runs. When the bases filled up again, Jamie Burke cleared them with a three-run double down the left field line. That made the score 9-0. The Angels added three runs in the ninth as Jed Dalton had a two-run triple and scored on Tim Harkrider's sacrifice fly.

It was a big night as every Angel batter scored or drove in a run. In fact, Burke was the only Angel not to score a run but he made up for that with his three RBIs.

Midland (7-10 overall) moves to within four games of El Paso, who lost to San Antonio 6-3.

ANGEL DUST: Herrick went 3-for-5 to move his hitting streak to 11. He is hitting .356 during that stretch... Frank Bolick is 15-for-40 (.375 average) with 6 homers and 16 RBI as the designated hitter. He is 2-for-20 as a third baseman.... Today's starters are Midland's Jarrod Washburn (1-2, 5.68) and Wichita's Robert Toth (first start)... Wednesday's game time is 12:15 p.m....

DALLAS: Mavs trade away best talent

(From 1C)

longtime executive Norm Sonju and general manager Keith Grant quit before the season began, leaving in charge Cleamons and minority owner Frank Zaccanelli, a sharp businessman with no basketball background.

Point guard Jason Kidd didn't like Cleamons or his system, so 25 games into the season the franchise's cornerstone player — the one picked second overall in 1994, ahead of Grant Hill — was traded to Phoenix for Michael Finley, A.C. Green and Sam Cassell.

Management took so much heat for that deal that they gave Nelson a five-year, $8 million contract to woo him out of retirement in Hawaii.

Nelson immediately looked at the roster and started making changes.

Out went Jamal Mashburn, to Miami for Sasha Danilovic, Martin Muursepp and Kurt Thomas. Next up was the historic nine-man deal with New Jersey that brought in Shawn Bradley, Robert Pack, Khalid Reeves and Ed O'Bannon for Cassell, Jim Jackson, Chris Gatling, George McCloud and Eric Montross.

Things became so crazy that Samaki Walker was the longest-tenured player, and he was drafted last summer.

The revolving door of players also caused some pretty ugly moments on the court, none worst than a 2-point quarter against Los Angeles that set an NBA futility record likely to stand forever.

Dallas also set franchise lows for points in a game (first with 66 in January, then 65 in March), points in a half (24) and field goals in a half (six). The Mavs also went 18 games without scoring 100 points, another franchise worst.

Not surprisingly, attendance dropped by 1,584 tickets per night despite Reunion Arena's expansion by 540 seats.

"We had a lot of adversity," Finley said. "Three different teams have been through this franchise, in my opinion."

The Mavericks go into the off-season with some semblance of a plan for the future. It rests on the wiry shoulders of 7-foot-6 Bradley, the fragility of point guard Pack and the hope that Finley will blossom.

"I love Dallas. I want to be here for awhile," said Bradley, seen as a savior for a third team since joining the league in 1993. "We've got people that believe in me in the organization and people who I believe in and respect a lot. Hopefully we can just go from there."

The Mavericks also have some off-court matters to address.

Their master plan for a new arena — which some say is at the root of Perot's interest in the team — remains a political volley between state and local lawmakers, not to mention a battle with Dallas Stars, their would-be tenant.

Stalled talks have pushed back hopes for groundbreaking to 1998, with fall 2000 the likeliest opening date.

And, on Sunday, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported strife within the new ownership group.

The newspaper said Perot, who owns 53 percent of the team, isn't talking to the team's chairman of the board David McDavid, a 14 percent owner who was critical of the Kidd trade.

"The relationship has worked out fine," Perot said. "David's a minority owner and I basically treat them all the same way."

only for Pippig but Kenya's Cosmas Ndeti, the Boston champion from 1993-95 and third-place finisher last year. Ndeti, never in contention, finished 27th in 2:22:56.

"My training didn't go as well as the last four years," said Ndeti, who set the course record of 2:07:15 in 1994. "The other guys still have some homework to do, though, because they didn't break the course record."

As expected, the men's race materialized into a battle between the Kenyans and the Mexicans, who never have won at Boston.

The Mexicans came with a strong contingent of three-time London Marathon champion Dionicio Ceron, two-time New York City Marathon winner German Silva and 1993 New York City champion Andres Espinoza.

As late as 25 miles, Ceron, along with Kenya's Joseph Kamau, was within two seconds of Aguta. But the rangy Aguta, trained by Pippig's coach, Dieter Hogen, then began pulling away and beat Kamau by 12 seconds.

Kamau, timed in 2:10:46, was followed by Ceron in 2:10:59 in his Boston debut. Silva, also in his first race at Boston, finished fourth at 2:11:21 and Tanui was fifth at 2:11:38.

Tanui developed bronchitis a week before the race and had little stamina.

"That's why I had a problem toward the end," he said.

Kenya's string of consecutive victories began in 1991, when Ibrahim Hussein won. Hussein won again in 1992, then Ndeti took over before Moses Tanui won last year. The last non-Kenyan winner was Italy's Gelindo Bordin in 1990.

Aguta's winning time was the slowest since Hussein's 2:11:06 in 1992, but the runners were plagued by a headwind throughout the 26 miles, 385 yards.

Aguta and Roba each earned $75,000 from the purse of $500,000. Roba's sum was more than 10 times the amount she received from the Ethiopian government after her Olympic triumph, when she received about $7,000.

As expected, no U.S. runner came close to breaking the American record and collecting the $1 million bonus.

The first American finisher was Danny Gonzalez of Rancho Santa Margarita, Calif., 19th in 2:18:30, nearly 10 minutes off the record of 2:08:47 by Bob Kempainen at Boston in 1994.

Kim Jones of Spokane, Wash., was the first U.S. women's finisher, ninth at 2:32:52, 11 1/2 minutes off Joan Benoit Samuelson's record of 2:21:21 at Chicago in 1985.

Two of the top American men failed to finish. Keith Brantly, the first U.S. finisher (28th) at the 1996 Olympics, dropped out after nine miles, and Mark Plaatjes, the 1993 world champion, dropped out after 18 miles.

Franz Nietlispach of Switzerland, the 1995 champion, regained the men's wheelchair division in 1:28:14, and Louise Sauvage of Australia ended the seven-year reign of Jean Driscoll of Champaign, Ill., winning the women's division in 1:54:29.

Driscoll and Sauvage were battling for the lead just before the 23-mile mark when Driscoll turned over after a flat tire. Driscoll wound up second at 2:01:15.

GOLF: Talley, third in medalists standings

(From 1C)

Leading Talley after 18 holes is Lisa Rameriz of El Paso Montwood at 1-over, 72, while Duncanville's Lori Sutherland stands at 73.

Lee freshman Amy Roach recorded an 81 for the other Rebel counter. Amber Meyers had the team-high of 93. Not only did the freshman produce Lee's No. 3 score, but she almost pulled off a stunner on No. 6.

"I almost had a hole-in-one on No. 6. It just lipped out," Roach said. "And that made me really happy since the par threes have been dealing me a lot of problems lately. That's been the worst part of my game and I had two birdies on the three par threes today."

Sutton added, "And it's not like we all turned in personal bests. None of them did. We just put some solid scores on the board at the same time. That is really encouraging."

Devon Day led Abilene High with a 77 while Allie Curry and Angela Armstrong produced 82s.

Meanwhile, the boys of 4-5A were also making some noise on the other side of the Meadowbrook course. San Angelo's boys fired a 297 round and was the only team in the two tournaments to break 300. The Bobcats hold a nine-stroke lead over three teams (Mansfield, Paschal and Lubbock Coronado). The Bobcats, too, look to be Austin bound as Brandon Sanders owns the medalist lead with a 71 and teammate J.C. Ramirez is tied for second at 72 with Benton Brown of Wichita Falls Rider.

Odessa Permian is tied for fifth place at 310 with Flower Mound Marcus, needing only to make up four strokes for an Austin bid. The Panthers got 77s form Rocky Hutson and Brian Albright while Austin Burk and Steve Watters each turned in 78s with a consistent performance.

TEXAS: Brown returns on offense

(From 1C)

said.

"I think there were times in the past years where defensively we were satisfied to hold teams to short gains when we could have thrown them for losses."

On offense, the strengths are clearly on the line, at quarterback and running back.

Mackovic said quarterback James Brown has evolved into a well-rounded leader.

"At first, James would go back and if something was open, great, if not, he would take off," Mackovic said. "Then he went through a period where he was pushing himself to be a passer. Now, I think he's at a point where he knows he can be all of that and use it all together."

On Ricky Williams, who was converted from fullback to halfback, Mackovic said, "He has shown a great ability to run the ball and we can certainly use him as a pass receiver at the halfback spot."

The concern is at receiver. With the graduation of wideouts Mike Adams and Matt Davis as well as All-America tight end Pat Fitzgerald, there will be new faces in the starting lineup.

Wideouts Wane McGarity and Dustin Armstrong, the projected starters, missed the spring with injuries.

"After Wane McGarity, we are really young (at receiver)," Mackovic said.

Cubs win again

By The Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

NEW YORK — Capitalizing on errors by Butch Huskey and John Olerud for two unearned runs in the seventh inning, the Chicago Cubs beat the New York Mets 6-4 on Monday for their second straight victory.

The Cubs, 0-14 before winning the second game of Sunday's doubleheader, took a 3-0 lead, then fell behind 4-3 in the sixth. But the Mets, who have 15 errors in 18 games, gave Chicago three runs on three errors.

Scott Servais drove in three runs for Chicago, and Frank Castillo (1-3) allowed four runs and four hits in six innings. Terry Adams pitched 2 1-3 innings for the save. Greg McMichael (0-2) took the loss.

Phillies 10, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Mike Lieberthal homered and Philadelphia scored some early-inning runs for a change, giving Curt Schilling all the support he needed to beat Pittsburgh.

Lieberthal's three-run homer keyed a four-run first inning off Steve Cooke (1-3), who labored badly with his control before settling down to shut out the Phillies over the next six innings.

Schilling (3-1) scattered nine hits for his first career victory in six appearances in Three Rivers Stadium, the only NL stadium where he had never won before this season. The right-hander struck out eight and walked none.

Rangers blow lead

By The Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Melvin Nieves' three-run double off center fielder Damon Buford's glove capped a five-run eighth inning Monday night as the Detroit Tigers rallied for a 7-6 win over the Texas Rangers.

Travis Fryman hit his third homer of the season for the Tigers.

Pinch hitter Mike Simms hit a two-run homer for the Rangers, Texas' first pinch-hit homer since 1995.

Simms' homer in seventh inning helped the Rangers take a 5-2 lead before Detroit rallied.

Texas starter John Burkett gave up singles to Damion Easley and Travis Fryman before being lifted for Ed Vosberg (0-1). Tony Clark greeted Vosberg with a run-scoring single to make it 5-3 before Bobby Higginson's single loaded the bases.

Nieves followed with a drive to deep center that Buford ran down and got his glove on, but the ball bounced free when he made contact with the wall and three runs scored.

Curtis Pride was then hit by Vosberg and Brian Johnson doubled off Xavier Hernandez before Pride scored on Deivi Cruz's squeeze bunt to make it 7-5.

The Rangers loaded the bases in the bottom inning with none out, but were held to Marc Sagmoen's sacrifice fly by Todd Jones.

A.J. Sager (2-1) pitched two-thirds of an inning for the win, and Dan Miceli pitched the ninth for his first save.

Burkett gave up nine hits in seven innings.

Detroit starter Willie Blair allowed two runs and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Yankees 4, White Sox 3

CHICAGO — Cecil Fielder, batting just .172, hit a tie-breaking double in the eighth inning Monday night as the New York Yankees rallied to beat the Chicago White Sox 4-3.

With the Yankees trailing 3-2, Derek Jeter walked with one out in the eighth off Doug Drabek (1-2), stole second and scored the tying run on Wade Boggs' single.

After an intentional walk to Tino Martinez, Drabek was replaced by Bill Simas and Fielder drove his double off the left-field fence to score pinch runner Pat Kelly.

Fielder, homerless in 77 at-bats this season, went 1-for-4 and is now hitting .182.

David Cone (1-2) got his first victory, despite giving up a career-high eight walks and seven hits in seven innings. He also struck out eight.

Jeff Nelson pitched a perfect eighth inning before giving way to closer Mariano Rivera, who put two runners on in the ninth before striking out Chris Snopek for his fifth save in eight tries.

Red Sox 4, Orioles 2

BOSTON — Wil Cordero homered in a three-run fourth inning as Boston won the Patriots Day morning game.

Aaron Sele (3-0) allowed one run and five hits in 6 2-3 innings, walked five and struck out three. Heathcliff Slocumb pitched a hitless ninth for his third save.

Scott Erickson (2-1) gave up all four runs — three earned — and eight hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Mariners 6, Royals 5

SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Jr. tied it with a two-run triple and scored the go-ahead on Edgar Martinez's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning Monday night as the Seattle Mariners beat the Kansas City Royals 6-5.

Griffey had four RBIs, giving him a major-league high 25 this season. His 20 runs scored lead the AL.

When the horse is dead, dismount!

By Lee Thompson

Most people say there is nothing worse than "beating a dead horse," but I've found one thing that is: shooting a perfectly good one!

I'm the owner of AirCare by Lee Thompson. This summer, you've got a pretty good shot of someone looking at your air conditioner and recommending that you replace that "old thing." The fact is, they could be right; but they could also be wrong...mistakes happen. When the horse is dead, dismount; but make sure it's really dead and not just poorly cared for.

You might be asking, "What does this horse sense have to do with air conditioners?" Well, the plain fact is that your air conditioner may need a doctor, not a mortician. Midland is my home. I grew up, met and married my wife and raised my three kids here. My friends, my church, my business and my roots are here. In fact, there is no place on earth I desire to live besides Midland. Some might say too many dust storms have clouded my thinking, but I simply believe this is my home.

"Well, the plain fact is that your air conditioner may need a doctor, not a mortician."

Lee Thompson, owner
AirCare

I have been in the heating and air conditioning industry for 26 years and in business for myself since 1985. I have worked hard to develop a reputation for honesty and dependability. My aim is for everyone at AirCare by Lee Thompson to share my desires and to serve our customers in a professional, courteous and honest fashion. Many of you reading this right now are loyal customers and have recommended us to your friends and neighbors. Thank you. I want to build a business based on good will and great service...and I like to do it one customer at a time. With you in mind, I have created a Customer Assurance Program, which has a few promises:

1. AirCare promises to: 1) maintain first, 2) repair second and 3) replace only if it's "dead."
2. AirCare promises total satisfaction or your money back.
3. AirCare promises fair pricing up front with no hidden or surprise charges.
4. AirCare promises a maintenance plan to save you money and prevent problems.
5. AirCare promises on-time appointments for your convenience.
6. AirCare promises free estimates and second opinions with no strings attached.

If our philosophy of integrity and "maintain it first" makes sense to you, it will be an honor for you to call and give us an opportunity to show you what service "West Texas Style" really means. Also, please call if you simply would like a free brochure (no salesmen will call) mailed to your home. Our number at AirCare by Lee Thompson is 570-7405.

AirCare is locally owned and operated by Lee Thompson. The company sells Carrier and other units and offers complete service on all brands. The phone number is 570-7405.

Lee Thompson, owner of AirCare by Lee Thompson, believes homeowners should only have to bear the expense of replacing their air conditioning equipment if it absolutely cannot be repaired. Thompson pledges to his customers to "Maintain it first, repair it second and replace it only if it's dead."

CD Rates: The Long and Short of It

When it comes to investing in certificates of deposit, some investors tend to be shortsighted. In an effort to minimize risk, they invest in short-term CDs and simply roll their money into other CDs as their investments mature.

Al Escamilla

This seemingly sound investment strategy unfortunately often exposes investors to another risk — being forced to invest your money at a lower rate of interest. This shortsightedness can have negative effects on the long-term performance of your CD investment.

For instance, consider the following two investors.

Investor A invested $50,000 in a one-year CD in 1992. When his CD matured he simply reinvested another $50,000 into another one-year CD. He did the same the next three years.

Investor B divided $50,000 equally among five CDs, a one-year CD, a two-year CD, a three-year CD, a four-year CD and a five-year CD in 1992. When each CD matured, he invested $10,000 in a five-year CD.

Over the five years the CDs were held, Investor B earned $1,545 more in interest than Investor A. In addition, Investor B enjoyed a much steadier income stream; the difference of income between his best and worst years was $705. For Investor A, the difference was $2,125.

Of course, past performance is no guarantee of future results, but in most situations, Investor B's investment strategy will produce a more attractive return than Investor A's.

This investment strategy is called laddering maturities. By owning a portfolio of CDs that mature in successive years, you'll maximize return and minimize interest-rate risk. If interest rates rise, you'll have a CD maturing within a year to reinvest at higher rates. On the other hand, if interest rates decline, other CDs will still be locked in at the higher rate of interest, protecting part of your income.

Laddering doesn't completely eliminate the risk of interest-rate fluctuations, but it does allow you to earn dependable income over several years and still have money available when you need it. In the long run, you'll minimize risk without sacrificing return.

"Laddering (owning a portfolio of CDs that mature in successive years) allow(s) you to earn dependable income over several years and still have money available when you need it."

Doña Anita's says "Muchas Gracias"

By Jesse and Luz Reyes

A great big "Thank you" from the bottom of our hearts to all our friends who helped us celebrate our 15th anniversary of being in business in Midland. The response was overwhelming. Friends, old and new, came to wish us well and to enjoy our Mexican food and live entertainment the week of our celebration, March 24th through the 29th. Also, a big thanks to the entertainers; Michael Mendoza, Carroll Puckett and the Ochoa Brothers Trio. Their music was so enjoyed that we have made plans to bring them back again. Michael, as usual, plays on Friday nights, and we plan to have some entertainment on Saturday nights as well, so stay tuned.

Again, "Mil gracias," from Jesse and Luz, the owners, our family and staff. Your friendship and patronage make it all worthwhile.

Motta axed as Denver coach

■ Nuggets mentor is just latest of NBA coaching changes.

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

The year of the coaching change didn't end with the regular season.

The list of fired coaches grew to nine Monday when the Denver Nuggets made their second change of the season, jettisoning Dick Motta and his entire staff.

The Philadelphia 76ers fired Johnny Davis on Sunday in the first of what is expected to be a series of offseason dismissals.

M.L. Carr is expected to be replaced as coach of the Boston Celtics, Larry Brown is free to leave the Pacers if he chooses, and Rick Adelman is said to be in danger of being fired by Golden State.

There were seven firings during the regular season: Cotton Fitzsimmons in Phoenix, Bernie Bickerstaff in Denver, Jim Lynam in Washington, Brian Winters in Vancouver, Garry St. Jean in Sacramento, Brian Hill in Orlando and Bob Hill in San Antonio.

And of the 16 teams not already mentioned, seven have coaches with less than two years' experience.

Davis was fired by the 76ers along with general manager Brad Greenberg, and owner Pat Croce said he would take a shot at hiring Rick Pitino away from the University of Kentucky.

The Celtics contacted Pitino a few weeks ago to ask if he had any interest in replacing Carr, and were told Pitino wasn't looking to leave the Wildcats just yet. But Pitino has never been shy about listening to offers, and a bidding war could break out for his services.

Another prominent name that will pop up is that of Chuck Daly, the former Pistons and Nets coach who would welcome a return to the bench if the salary is big enough.

The Celtics refused to confirm a report in Monday's Boston Globe that the decision to replace Carr as coach and-or general manager had already been made.

Brown told the Pacers on Sunday that he would decide in 8-10 days whether to return to Indiana. General manager Donnie Walsh said the team was willing to let Brown out of the final two years of his contract, and Brown has publicly taken the blame for the Pacers' underachieving season.

Rumors of Adelman's demise have been circulating for months, along with speculation about the fate of general manager Dave Twardzik. The Warriors, however, have given no indication of what they will do.

Jim Cleamons' fate in Dallas was the subject of much debate, too, but owner Ross Perot Jr. went out of his way Monday to say the coach will be back for the second year of his three-year contract — even if new general manager Don Nelson would rather bring in someone else.

The Vancouver Grizzlies also will be looking for new coach. General manager Stu Jackson took over on an interim basis after firing Winters, and he plans to return exclusively to the front office.

Gregg Popovich took over the Spurs on an interim basis, but he may be back next season — reportedly because the team is having monetary problems and can have Popovich do two jobs for the price of one.

Korda survives scare on clay

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fl. (AP) — Third-seeded Petr Korda survived a first-round scare at the U.S. Men's Clay Court Championships Monday when Jeff Salzenstein pushed the Czech star to the brink of elimination before withdrawing from the match because of leg cramps. The score was 2-6, 6-4, 4-3, retired.

In other matches, Australians Jason Stoltenberg and Sandon Stolle advanced with straight-set victories, while American Vince Spadea was ousted by Germany's Oliver Gross.

Top-seeded Michael Chang will play his first match Tuesday night.

Salzenstein sailed through the first set against Korda and scored an early service break in the second set. At 4-2, the 23-year-old from Denver reached break point on Korda's serve and appeared ready to claim the biggest win of his career. But Korda held serve and promptly ran off six straight games to capture the second set and grab a 2-love lead in the third.

After rallying briefly to even the set 2-2, Salzenstein began to limp visibly between points.

With Korda serving at 3-3, 30-15, Salzenstein took a 3-minute injury timeout while a trainer worked on his legs. After Korda won the next two points for a 4-3 advantage, Salzenstein told the chair umpire he was unable to continue.

Stoltenberg, seeded fifth, needed little more than an hour to defeat Sargis Sargsian of Armenia 6-1, 7-5. The eighth-seeded Stolle had a tougher time beating Argentina's Mariano Zabaleta 6-3, 7-6 (7-4).

TUESDAY, APRIL 22, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, April 22, 1997:
This year offers many diversions, especially with relationships. You might often question how much to give, what your limits are and the best method to make what you want happen. Use care with long-distance interactions or office gossip; something could easily backfire. You will be unusually expressive, and you could make money through your communications skills or artistic talents. If you are single, romance is plentiful, though you might not feel you have what you want just yet. If attached, your relationship changes because you are changing. Keep loving communications open. SCORPIO challenges you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ One-to-one relating will manifest what you think should happen. Confusion surrounds a partner, but there will be a clearing with today's full moon. Once you have the whole story, you will make the right decision. Use caution with money. Tonight: Snuggle in.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Charge into work ASAP. The earlier you complete key tasks, the better. The full moon thrusts personal interactions into the limelight. Know that you are going to be in demand, and be prepared. Don't let the moment sweep [illegible] up. Tonight: Accept an invitat[illegible].

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Creativity takes you down a twisted path. Determine what you want your goal to be. Make work the highest priority. Still, schedule a checkup. The pace is hectic. Say yes, and don't get upset by what is happening. All will rapidly change. Tonight: Soak away stress in the tub.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Laughter goes a long way as you try to deal with what a frazzled associate dumps on you. This will change. Allow flirtation and goodwill to become part of your message. Use your creativity to find solutions. Tonight: Charge a relationship with extra sauciness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ You might be confused early in the day; by the evening, the pressure is enormous. The full moon has you juggling work and home, and you think that you might blow a fuse. Try to use humor to get past the immediate crisis. Tonight: This, too will pass.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You might be a bit off about a risk this morning, so let it sit. This afternoon, a lot is going on. You have trouble returning calls and keeping up. There is some surprising, wonderful news on the way. It's OK to socialize; don't beat yourself up. Tonight: Be wherever the action is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★ Events are chaotic, especially for a family member. You unwittingly read it incorrectly. Find a realistic friend for feedback. Be scrupulous with funds; there is a wild element loose. The full moon could wreak havoc on partnerships. Tonight: Don't rock the boat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Much is going on behind the scenes. Think through a message that seems off. Take action, and clear the decks. Partners feel as if they needed you yesterday, if not sooner! Maintain a sense of humor with others. Use your charisma. Tonight: It's your call.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★ Move quickly on a confusing money matter. Not everything falls the way you would like. The full moon could knock the wind out of you. Recognize fatigue, and go home early. That's better than being cranky and causing more problems. Tonight: Vanish.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Though easily befuddled by a boss's message in the morning, by afternoon you are on the victory trail. You find solutions with ease. Call a brainstorming session. With the full moon zaniness, you might hear some unusual, yet effective ideas. Tonight: Join friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You sense things going on around you that you cannot put your finger on. Much that is happening causes unusual stress. You aren't in the mood for it. Maintain good spirits, and let the pressure roll off you. There are no answers now. Tonight: You are a force on the scene.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You are disappointed by the way a friend handles a financial matter. Move on. Decide to take a trip or expose yourself to new information in your field. Be willing to make the first move, or take a risk. Tonight: Rent a movie.

HOPE FOR THE BEST

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

	NORTH ♠ A K ♡ A K 10 7 5 ◇ A Q J 2 ♣ A 9
WEST ♠ Q 9 8 6 4 2 ♡ Q 9 8 ◇ 4 ♣ J 10 6		EAST ♠ J 5 ♡ J 2 ◇ 10 8 7 6 5 ♣ 8 4 3 2
	SOUTH ♠ 10 7 3 ♡ 6 4 3 ◇ K 9 3 ♣ K Q 7 5

The bidding:

EAST	SOUTH	WEST	NORTH
Pass	Pass	2♠*	Dbl
Pass	3♣	Pass	6♣
Pass	Pass	Pass

*weak

Opening lead: Four of ◇

There are some bidding situations that are not covered in the textbooks and rarely experienced in actual play. For example, how often does your right-hand opponent open preemptively when you are holding 25 high-card points?

After South responded with three clubs to the takeout double over East's preemptive opening, North considered the options. The fact that East didn't raise preemptively suggested that South held some values. Since South did not respond in hearts, and did not pass two spades doubled, indicated that the club takeout was probably based on length in the suit. So for lack of anything better to do, North blasted into six clubs.

West led the singleton diamond, and declarer had mixed feelings about the contract. Realistically, South needed a 4-3 trump break to have any chance and, unless a defender held specifically J 10 8 of clubs, the length would have to be with East. In addition, East would have to hold four diamonds.

Although not much of a parlay, declarer played as if that distribution existed. The king of diamonds was won in hand and three rounds of clubs produced the first good news. The ace and king of spades were cashed, followed by the three high diamonds, declarer discarding a heart on the last of these. When the ace and king of hearts lived, the contract became cold.

Declarer had 11 tricks in the bank and, when a heart was led from the table, East was a goner. Whether East ruffed or not, declarer's last trump would be the fulfilling trick.

Woody Allen clarinet performances lure New Yorkers in for $45 a piece

NEW YORK — Woody Allen is going to play it again.

The moviemaker went hunting for a new clarinet gig after his Manhattan haunt, Michael's Pub, closed. He decided on the elegant Cafe Carlyle.

Allen will perform regularly at the Carlyle with the Eddy Davis New Orleans Jazz Band, beginning Monday and continuing for "as long as it feels good," his spokeswoman, Leslee Dart, said in Monday's USA Today.

Woody Allen will be performing in a New York City nightclub.

Dart concedes the $45 ticket price is "steep" but noted "you had to have dinner" at Michael's Pub. Allen played his clarinet there most Monday nights for more than 25 years.

———

NEW YORK — Thirteen letters from "Gone With the Wind" writer Margaret Mitchell to an early suitor and lifelong friend sold Monday for $32,200.

Christie's auction house didn't identify the buyer.

Mitchell wrote the letters to Henry Love Angel, who died in 1945. She died four years later. The letters and a signed manuscript of "Lost Laysen," a Mitchell novella, surfaced in 1994 at the home of Angel's son.

Bidding on the 1916 manuscript, written 20 years before "Gone With the Wind," failed to reach the minimum, Christie's said. The minimum bid wasn't disclosed.

———

HOUSTON — It's a second little tumbler for Mary Lou Retton.

The gold-winning gymnast gave birth April 15 to McKenna Lane Kelley, a 5-pound, 9-ounce girl, publicist Iana Dealey said Monday.

She's the second daughter for Retton and husband Shannon Kelley.

Retton, 29, was released from a Houston hospital Saturday while her new daughter remained until later this week. She was born three weeks early.

Retton, who won the all-around gold medal at the 1984 Olympics, now works as a motivational speaker.

"We have always wanted a large family, and we are now well on our way," Retton said in a statement. "In fact, if we keep being blessed with children, we may have an entire team for the 2012 Olympic games."

———

NEW YORK — First the Conners and now the Bundys. It's a bad month for blue-collar TV families.

Fox is retiring "Married ... With Children" after a one-hour series finale May 5. The Bundy family is held hostage by son Bud's prison pen pal and daughter Kelly falls in love with and plans to marry one of her captors.

Katey Sagal and Edward O'Neill starred as Al and Peg Bundy in the last remaining show from Fox's original lineup when the network began 10 years ago.

"I remember when Ed and I did bowling alleys to promote the show," Sagal said.

Ratings improved, even as the show's crude characters and lewd subject matter drew protests. Fox announced the show's retirement Friday.

Television's other leading blue-collar family, the Conners, are also going off the air next month after a final showing of "Roseanne."

———

NEW YORK — ABC gave "NYPD Blue" a two-year renewal Monday and ordered up another season of the succussful comedies, "The Drew Carey Show," "Spin City" and "Sabrina, The Teenage Witch."

"NYPD Blue" has settled in as ABC's most dependable drama after a splashy 1993 debut made a star of since-departed David Caruso and attracted attention for flashing some bare buttocks on the screen.

"This two-year pickup is testimony not only to our belief in Steven Bochco and the series, but our commitment to its stellar cast and top-notch production team," said Jamie Tarses, ABC Entertainment president.

The three renewed comedies are the bright spots on a prime-time schedule that has been a disappointment for ABC this year.

Freshman series "Spin City," starring Michael J. Fox, wasn't the runaway hit ABC hoped for, but has been a solid performer in the ratings. "Sabrina" was a surprise hit on the network's Friday night schedule.

"The Drew Carey Show" seemed to hit its stride in its second year. It airs Wednesday night at 9 p.m.

In May, the six broadcast networks will announce their complete schedules for the fall television season.

No surprise that Chicago Bulls are team to beat

■ As the NBA playoffs get underway this week, the defending champion Bulls are the hands-on favorites.

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

It doesn't take a genius to figure out that the Chicago Bulls are the team to beat in the NBA playoffs. They're the defending champs, they won 69 regular season games, they have Michael Jordan. Etc., etc., etc.

But who else is out there? Who is the favorite to come out of the West? Who are the sleeper teams? Who are the overrated teams? Which players are going to raise their game? Which coaches have a few tricks up their sleeves?

Those are the questions that will matter most in the first few weeks of the marathon postseason, and the answers will determine whether there's anybody good enough to take away the title that Jordan and the Bulls have won in four of the past six seasons.

"Other teams are a little more formidable and experienced this year," Miami coach Pat Riley said Monday. "Combined with the questions about the Bulls' health, the possibility is there that they could be had in a game or two. They're a little more vulnerable, but I don't think that's a news bulletin.

"They're still too good, too experienced and know how to play to win. Nothing will bother them in the playoffs," Riley said.

The best-of-5 first round begins Thursday night with four games: Charlotte at New York, Orlando at Miami, Minnesota at Houston and the Los Angeles Clippers at Utah.

The other four series begin Friday with Detroit at Atlanta, Washington at Chicago, Phoenix at Seattle and Portland at the Los Angeles Lakers.

An interesting twist to the first round is the success that the lower-seeded teams have had against their higher-seeded opponents during the regular season.

The No. 3 and 4 teams in the East both lost their season series 3-1 to their first-round opponent, Charlotte beating New York and Detroit defeating Atlanta.

In the West, the fifth-seeded Trail Blazers beat the fourth-seeded Lakers in three of four games, including the regular-season finale Sunday, and seventh-seeded Phoenix split its season series with Seattle, winning the final two games in late March.

It makes for an interesting first round, one in which at least six of the eight series figure to be very competitive.

A look at each of the best-of-5 matchups:

EASTERN CONFERENCE
CHICAGO vs. WASHINGTON

The Bullets didn't qualify for this spot until they beat Cleveland on the final day of the season, and they figure to be happy taking a three-game beating, right?

Well, wait a minute. Washington lost the season series 2-1, but their losses were by one and four points. And the Bulls couldn't stop Rod Strickland or Gheorghe Muresan in a 110-102 loss April 3.

Dennis Rodman and Toni Kukoc will be back for Chicago, which hasn't had its best lineup together and healthy for some time.

Chicago is the better team, but the Bulls won't be able to sleepwalk past a team that matches up well with them.

MIAMI vs. ORLANDO

When we last saw these two teams in the playoffs, both were looking horrid in sweeps against the Bulls last season. Both teams have made big changes since then, and each team has a drastically different personality from a year ago.

AP Laserphoto

Chicago Bulls Michael Jordan (23) moves up court with Miami Heat's Keith Askins (2) in pursuit during first half NBA action in Miami.

The Heat will have to contend with the lack of playoff experience among three of their starters: Jamal Mashburn, P.J. Brown and Voshon Lenard. And Tim Hardaway and Alonzo Mourning will have to outplay their counterparts, Penny Hardaway and Rony Seikaly.

Orlando has a history of playoff folds. The Magic have been swept from the playoffs in three straight seasons.

NEW YORK vs. CHARLOTTE

Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy admits the Hornets are the toughest first-round matchup the Knicks could have drawn.

Patrick Ewing will have to contend with being guarded by former teammate Anthony Mason, and the Knicks will have to figure out a way to stop Glen Rice, who scored 40 and 34 in the teams' final two meetings. Larry Johnson, who Charlotte sent to the Knicks last summer in the trade for Mason, was badly outplayed in three of the four games during the season series.

The Knicks have played well against tough competition and poorly against lesser teams. They've made it out of the first round in five straight years.

ATLANTA vs. DETROIT

Probably the least sexy of all the first-round matchups, this one features two teams that were heading in opposite directions over the final month of the season.

The Hawks won 13 of their final 17 games; the Pistons dropped 14 of 25 after being the surprise success story of the first four months.

Grant Hill nearly had a triple-double in all four regular-season games between the teams, and the Hawks will have to stop him in the fourth quarter when the Pistons run clearouts for Hill every time down the court.

The biggest weakness for Detroit is the lack of a good center, and Atlanta's Dikembe Mutombo could be the difference in this series.

WESTERN CONFERENCE
UTAH vs. L.A. CLIPPERS

The Jazz played the best basketball in the NBA after the All-Star break, winning 31 of their final 35 games to clinch the home-court advantage through the conference playoffs.

Utah has a history of playoff failures, but the Jazz have never gone into the postseason with the best record in the West.

They are tremendously tough to beat at home, having lost there only three times during the regular season.

The Clippers, meanwhile, are the worst of the playoff teams. Utah won three of the four games in the season series by 13, 17 and five points, their only loss coming back in December during their one slump of the season.

The only surprise here would be if the Clippers managed to keep one of the games close.

SEATTLE vs. PHOENIX

Of all the first-round pairings, this would be the one that seems to have the most potential for an upset.

Seattle has been a team on the brink of disarray over the second half of the season as Shawn Kemp's chronic lateness and uninspired play have dragged the Sonics down. They built their 57-25 record mostly on the strength of dominating lesser teams and have had trouble with the better ones.

The Suns often use a unique, four-guard lineup with two speedy point guards, Kevin Johnson and Jason Kidd, who can break down Seattle's trapping defense.

Kemp is the x-factor here. The Suns will have trouble guarding him and will try to get him in foul trouble. That assumes, of course, that he finally is ready to break out of his prolonged funk.

HOUSTON vs. MINNESOTA

The Rockets couldn't have asked for a better patsy. They swept the season series 4-0, and three of the games were blowouts.

The Timberwolves had no answer for Hakeem Olajuwon, who scored 39 against them twice. Minnesota also had a problem matching up with Clyde Drexler, who scored 37 and 34 in two of the games.

None of the Wolves' main contributors have any playoff experience, and they had only three wins against playoff teams after the All-Star break.

The biggest threat to Houston may be overconfidence.

L.A. LAKERS vs. PORTLAND

The Trail Blazers won the season series by capturing the season finale Sunday when Shaquille O'Neal missed from the free throw line with 1.2 seconds left.

That major flaw in his game remains a huge factor despite Shaq's change of address.

Portland has the added advantage of having 7-foot-3 Arvydas Sabonis, who has the bulk to match O'Neal.

Sabonis also is an outside scoring threat, so he will draw O'Neal away from the basket and open up the lane when the Blazers have the ball.

Portland gave the Lakers fits in their four regular season games, and there's no reason to expect things to change now.

Los Angeles may be the most talented team in the West, but it remains to be seen whether they will play well together in the playoffs.

Lehman golfs like champion

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

■ Golf Roundup

EATONTON, Ga. — Tom Lehman stepped on the course Monday for the first time as the No. 1 golfer in the world. Then he lived up to his ranking.

Lehman, who ascended to the top of the rankings with his fourth-place finish the day before in the MCI Classic, beat defending American champion Scott Hoch in the first round of the Andersen Consulting World Championship of Golf.

Lehman went ahead with an eagle at the par-5 12th hole, built on his lead with a birdie at 16, then holed out a 5-footer for par at 17 to defeat Hoch in the match-play event, 2-and-1.

"Actually, it gave me some confidence," Lehman said of his introduction as the top-ranked player before he teed off at the first tee. "It was pretty cool. I like the sound of that."

Other first-round winners in the American championship were Davis Love III, 5-and-3 over Corey Pavin; Phil Mickelson, 3-and-2 over Mark O'Meara; and Fred Couples, 2-and-1 over Steve Stricker.

Lehman and Love will meet in one semifinal match Tuesday morning, while Couples and Mickelson are paired in the other. The two winners advance to the 18-hole American championship in the afternoon on the 7,048-yard Great Waters course at Reynolds Plantation, about 75 miles east of Atlanta.

Tom Lehman lines up a putt during the Anderson Consulting World Championship of Golf on Monday in Eatonton, Ga. Lehman defeated Scott Hoch to advance to the next round.

Lehman, who was even with Hoch through 11 holes, went ahead for good at No. 12. He hit a 5-wood to within 5 feet of the pin on the 559-yard hole, then putted out for eagle to go one-up.

Both men parred the next two holes, then Lehman gave himself some breathing room at 16. He hit a monstrous drive and hit an 8-iron to within 12 feet for the birdie putt. Hoch settled for a par to go 2-down.

Lehman clinched the match with a par at the next hole, avenging a loss to Hoch in last year's American championship.

"I was driving the ball really well today," Lehman said, a distinct advantage on the wide-open, Jack Nicklaus-designed course. "This is one of the best driving rounds I've had all year."

Love had no trouble beating Pavin, who sprayed his shots all over the course.

Pavin hit the water twice on the front nine to go 2-down at the turn and found the sand on two of the first three holes on the back nine to fall four-down before Love clinched the match at 15 with a par. Pavin, appropriately, missed the green with a 6-iron and wound up taking another bogey.

"He did not play like Corey Pavin, that's for sure," said Love, who continued hi hot play coming off a final-round 64 at the MCI Classic. "I didn't want to worry about him too much, but clearly he was not on top of his game. I knew if I could start solid and look good, it would make it a little harder on him."

Mickelson lost the first two holes in his match against O'Meara and didn't grab his first lead until he birdied No. 12. At 13, Mickelson protected his one-up margin with a 15-footer for birdie after O'Meara popped his approach shot within a foot of the cup.

O'Meara bogeyed the last three holes to drop the match. Two long putts gave Couples his victory. He made a 40-footer for birdie at the par-3 14th to go one-up — then outdid himself by snaking in a 50-footer at the next hole for another birdie and a two-hole lead.

Rams trade up to get Tucker

■ Former Midland Lee standout taken in the fourth round by Dick Vermeil and St. Louis.

By Terrance Harris
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — Around 11 a.m. yesterday, TCU center Ryan Tucker received the phone call he had seemingly awaited for a lifetime.

The St. Louis Rams informed Tucker that they had just completed a deal to select him in the fourth round of the NFL draft. He was the 112th selection overall.

The Rams traded their own fourth-round pick and two sixth-round selections to the Miami Dolphins to move up nine spots and nab Tucker.

"Man, it feels so wonderful that it's hard for me to even put into words," Tucker said. "All I know is it's been an incredibly nerve-racking two-day process, and I'm just glad that it's over, and now I can get on with playing football and get on with my life."

Tucker's NFL stock fell when he underwent reconstructive knee surgery in January.

He also has had off-the-field problems. The most serious stems from a fight outside a bar last year in which a TCU student suffered severe head injuries. Tucker and three other TCU players could face imprisonment after being charged with second-degree felony assault.

ESPN commentators made mention of his legal troubles, and apparently was making reference to other incidents.

"I'm just so tired of them saying that stuff, and most of it is false," Tucker said. "I never hit anybody with a flashlight, and I never assaulted anyone with a deadly weapon.

"I'll admit that I've done some things which have embarrassed my family, my institution and myself, and I'm not proud of those things," he said. "But I promise that's in my past."

Saying that the Rams had Tucker listed as the 10th best player in the draft before knee surgery, Rams coach Dick Vermeil defended Tucker — though somewhat tongue-and-cheek — during an ESPN interview.

"I think he made a mistake getting into a fight," Vermeil said. "But he won the fight, so that's a good thing."

Those words of support weren't lost on Tucker.

"It really says a lot for the Rams' organization to be willing to overlook all this stuff in my past," he said. "They told me they were taking a chance on me, and I am determined that they won't regret it."

Vermeil said during the television interview he is not expecting Tucker to begin contributing until maybe around midseason.

CHANGES ARE MADE IN DETERMINATIONS OF BASE FLOOD ELEVATIONS FOR THE CITY OF MIDLAND, MIDLAND COUNTY, TEXAS, UNDER THE NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE PROGRAM

On September 27, 1991, the Federal Emergency Management Agency identified Special Flood Hazard Areas (SFHAs) in the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas, through insurance of a Flood Insurance Rate Map (FIRM). The Mitigation Directorate has determined that modification of the elevations of the flood having a 1-percent chance of being equaled or exceeded in any given year (base flood) for certain locations in this community is appropriate. The modified base flood elevations (BFEs) revise the FIRM for the community.

The changes are being made pursuant to Section 206 of the Flood Disaster protection Act of 1973 (Public Law 93-234) and are in accordance with the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, as amended (Title XIII of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, Public Law 90-448), 42 U.S.C. 4001-4128, and 44 CFR Part 65.

A hydraulic analysis was perform to incorporate an earthen channel along Midland Draw, with a 60- foot bottom width and 4:1 side slopes, from approximately 1,300 feet downstream to approximately 1,000 feet downstream of Solomon Lane, and the placement of fill along the western floodway fringe of Midland Draw from just upstream of Loop 250 to approximately 1,000 feet downstream of Solomon Lane. This analysis has resulted in a revised delineation of the regulatory floodway a reduction in SFHA, and lower BFEs for Midland Draw from approximately 100 feet downstream of Loop 250 to Approximately 500 feet downstream of Solomon Lane. The table below indicates existing and modified BFEs for selected locations along the affected lengths of the flooding source(s) cited above.

Location	Existing BFE (feet)*	Modifited BFE (feet)*
Just downstream of Loop 250	2,787	2,786
Approximately 800 feet downstream of Solomon Lane	2,791	2,790

*National Geodetic Vertical Datum, rounded to nearest whole foot

Under the above- mentioned Acts of 1968 and 1973, the Mitigation Directorate must develop criteria for floodplain management. To participate in the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP), the community must use the modified BFEs to administer the floodplain management measures of the NFIP. These modified BFEs will also be used to calculate the appropriate flood insurance premium rates for new buildings and their contents ad for the second layer of insurance on existing buildings and contents,

Upon the second publication of notice of these changes in this newspaper, any person has 90 days in which he or she can request, through the Chief Executive Officer of the community, that the Mitigation Directorate reconsider the determination. Any request for reconsideration must be based on knowledge of changed conditions or new scientific or technical data. All interested parties are on notice that until the 90 -day period elapses, the Mitigation Directorate's determination to modify the BFEs may itself be changed.

Any person having knowledge or wishing to comment on these changes should immediately notify:

The Honorable Robert E. Burns
Mayor, City of Midland
P.O. Box 1152
