Bush seizes the offensive

President upbeat after meeting with senators

■ Bush, GOP legislators brainstorm about campaign.

By Stewart Powell
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Buffeted by bad economic news, slumping polls, demonstrators at the White House fence and a series of campaign snafus, President Bush tried to seize the offensive Tuesday to rally GOP loyalists behind his lagging bid for re-election.

The president, with Dan Quayle at his side to squelch calls for the vice president's replacement, traveled to Capitol Hill to brainstorm with the senators for 50 minutes about the election campaign.

Bush later said the session was decidedly "upbeat," and "very, very positive, very positive. It was good unified meeting."

Bush also denied published reports that some Republican senators want Quayle dumped while others were bypassing the Republican National Convention in Houston in 13 days to avoid associating with a president trailing in the polls.

Senate Republican Whip Alan K. Simpson, of Wyoming, emerged from the session to report that the president was "ready to let her rip."

The latest Cable News Network-Gallup poll released Tuesday showed Democratic challenger Bill Clinton leading Bush 57 percent to 32 percent — the lowest showing Bush has ever recorded in that survey. The previous such poll — on July 26 — had given Clinton a 56 to 36 percent edge.

Pilot dies

BRECKENRIDGE — A pilot was killed Tuesday when his plane crashed during a pipeline inspection, officials said. Stephens County Sheriff James Cain identified the victim as Brian Lee Hailey, 29, of Breckenridge. The accident happened around 8 a.m. Tuesday about 10 miles northeast of Breckenridge on the Muleshoe Ranch. A pipeline welder spotted the plane as it was doing low altitude pipelines runs, according to Cain. But then the worker didn't see the Cessna 172 come back up. The plane belonged to Koach Gathering Systems of Dallas and Midland, said Cain. The National Transportation Safety Board and the Federal Aviation Administration will investigate the cause of the crash.

Fearing the worst

CHARLES TOWN, W.Va. — A volunteer firefighter responding to a fatal traffic accident found the victim was his son. Ellis M. Costello Sr. of the Citizens Fire Company said he was in bed about 1 a.m. Monday at his home in Ranson when he heard a call on his scanner for fire crews. As he dressed, Ellis said he began to worry that his 22-year-old son, Ellis Costello Jr., might be involved in the accident since he had been with out with friends that night and it occurred near his home in Leetown, Costello said. Driving to the scene, Costello heard a dispatcher on the scanner describe his son's car.

Fort Hood troops head for Kuwait

KILLEEN (AP) — After emotional goodbyes with their loved ones, about 300 soldiers left Tuesday for Kuwait on a war-training exercise.

Many of the troops expressed confidence that they would return home soon, but they also acknowledged that the tense region could erupt into another conflict.

"It's just a training mission," said 25-year-old Sgt. William Riggs, who left his wife and three children. But if hostilities between President Bush and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein escalate, "I feel we are ready," he said.

About 20 soldiers from Fort Hood left Monday. Within the next eight days, officials said that 1,600 more from the sprawling Central Texas facility will leave for the region where U.S.-led forces routed Iraq over a year ago.

Many of those leaving Tuesday are mechanics, and maintenance personnel.

And many served in the Persian Gulf war last year.

"I made it through one time, I can make it again," said Spc. Curtis Jones, who said goodbye to his wife Terri, and 22-month-old daughter Amanda.

Capt. Luis Vega gave his 10-year-old son, Luis, a pair of his combat shoes, telling the youngster that he was "the man of the house" while he was gone.

The young boy cried, saying he feared his father "may get hurt." Capt. Vega of Puerto Rico said he told his son, "It's a job. We have to do our job."

Delinquent child support could be a federal crime

■ Panel recommends reform for enforcement system.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Calling the nation's system of child support enforcement "a dinosaur mired in paper," a federal panel recommended Tuesday that Congress make it a federal crime for a parent to willfully fail to pay support.

The House, acting just hours after the U.S. Commission on Interstate Child Support issued its report, passed a bill that would establish for the first time federal penalties for interstate flight to avoid child support payments.

The commission, in its sweeping call for reform, also recommended making increased use of the Internal Revenue Service to enforce child-support orders.

Among other steps, it called for requiring new employees to disclose on IRS W-4 withholding forms whether they've been ordered to pay support, and requiring employers to withhold the support payments from their pay checks. It said the IRS "should be required to give high priority" to requests for collection in delinquent child support cases.

Prosecutor: Reagan's not under scrutiny in Iran-Contra scandal

■ Letter from Walsh removes ex-president from 'legal jeopardy,' lawyer says.

By David Johnston
N.Y. Times News Service

Reagan

WASHINGTON — After more than five years of work, the Iran-Contra independent prosecutor has told former President Ronald Reagan in a letter that he is not under investigation for his role in the scandal that stained the final years of his presidency.

The letter strongly suggests that the prosecutors have concluded that the evidence does not warrant criminal charges against Reagan. It was sent to the former president's lawyers last Thursday by Lawrence E. Walsh, the Iran-Contra prosecutor.

In it, Walsh said in part, "This office regards President Reagan as simply a witness and not as a subject or target."

Old tires to be used for street seal coating

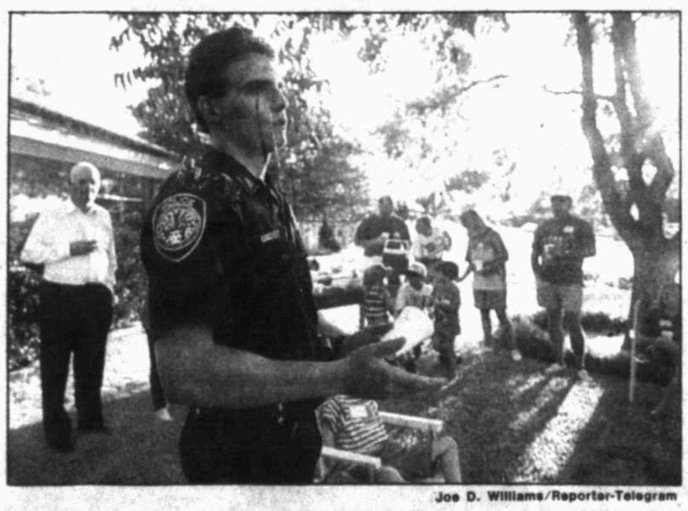

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Old tires, ground down to the consistency and appearance of coffee grounds, were expected to be spread along parts of two city streets this week in an asphalt mix that city officials are counting on to slow the deterioration of road surfaces.

The rubber asphalt seal coat, which includes twice the amount of asphalt sealant, also costs two to three times the amount of the regular crack-sealing asphalt, according to Harvey Hansen, director of engineering.

"It forms a physical bond. It's flexible and doesn't become brittle as fast," Hansen said. "It extends the life two to three

High to reach mid-90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-90s and south winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid- to upper 90s.

After an overnight low of 65, Tuesday's high reached 96 compared with the record high for Aug. 4 of 104 set in 1944. The record low for that date is 61 set in 1978.

STATE

A cold front stalled Tuesday in West Texas, stirring up Panhandle thunderstorms and dropping afternoon temperatures into the 70s.

The stationary frontal boundary hung just south of the Red River.

South Texas temperatures were mostly in the 90s with Alice, Cotulla and McAllen reaching 99 degrees.

Skies down south were clear to partly cloudy over the western two-thirds of the region. But the mid to upper coast was seeing partly to mostly cloudy skies and showers and thunderstorms in some areas.

The South Texas forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with widely scattered showers or thunderstorms through Thursday. Highs will be near 100 along the Rio Grande plains.

North Texas will see partly cloudy Wednesday with a chance of thunderstorms mainly north and east. Highs will be 93 to 99, with the lows Wednesday night down to 71 degrees.

West Texans can expect partial cloudiness through Thursday with a chance for thunderstorms over most sections.

NATION

Thunderstorms swept across the Plains to the East Coast on Tuesday. It was unseasonably cool in parts of Florida and the Midwest.

By midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over Oklahoma, Arkansas, the Tennessee Valley, the Gulf of Mexico states, the upper Ohio Valley, the lower Great Lakes, the Appalachians and across the northern half of the Atlantic Coast.

Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered over the northern half of the Plains.

Hail as big as golf balls fell with heavy rain during the afternoon near Winner, S.D., and Ord, Neb., with wind gusting to 71 mph at Ord, the National Weather Service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Officials doubt POWs' prison existed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several separate sources alleged as recently as 1988 that American prisoners of war were being held in an underground prison next to the Hanoi tomb of Vietnamese leader Ho Chi Minh, a member of a Senate investigating committee said Tuesday.

But Defense Intelligence Agency officials said there is no credible evidence such a prison ever existed. They said the water table in the Vietnamese capital is too high to permit such a facility to be built.

And, they said, some of the sources proved to be untruthful.

"The likelihood they are holding Americans in that environment is low," said DIA analyst Robert DeStatte, who recently spent 10 months in Vietnam, freely walking near the Ho Chi Minh tomb and the Vietnamese defense ministry and talking to civilian residents of the neighborhood.

But Sen. Robert C. Smith, R-N.H., said a "cluster" of individual sources reporting over a 15-year period "have filled in details concerning the construction and operation of this underground detention facility at the Citadel," the headquarters of the Vietnamese armed forces in north-central Hanoi.

"The story of American POWs in these areas long after the war sounds like something out of a Tom Clancy novel," said Smith, a member of the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs. "But these reports are not from fictitious people. They are real people telling us what they have seen and heard."

"The presence of a secret underground facility for American POWS in Hanoi at the Citadel is the only rational explanation for all of these sightings and reports over the years," Smith said.

"The majority of the ultimate sources are construction workers who worked on the prison, or people associated with senior (Army) officers who knew about the prison," he said.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., the committee chairman, said the reports must be treated with caution and restraint.

"The sheer number of live-sighting reports, more than 1,500 since the end of the war, indicates to some that Americans — perhaps hundreds — must have been left behind," Kerry said, referring to all of Southeast Asia.

"However, our failure over 20 years to locate any of those Americans has caused others to conclude that the reports must be false," he said.

"We are not going to draw conclusions until this process is complete," he said.

Smith read into the hearing record details of more than a dozen reports in which Americans are alleged to have been seen alive in the Citadel area long after 1973, the year in which all American prisoners were said to have been liberated by the Vietnamese government.

One source, interviewed in a South Korean refugee camp in 1987, said he was told by a Vietnamese Army officer that as late as 1985 there was an underground facility near the Ho Chi Minh tomb in which American war prisoners were being held.

According to documents released by the committee, the officer stated that the prison was built under tight security in 1970, as the Ho Chi Minh tomb was being constructed.

Another document contains a statement by a Vietnamese herbal doctor who said he saw Caucasians in prison uniform in 1986 when he was called to the defense ministry compound to treat an ailing general.

"The source asked the general's 30-year-old son about the prisoners," the document states. "The son stated they were American pilots who were kept confined in an underground prison in the compound and that over 30 prisoners were being held there."

Still another document quotes a former Cambodian communist official as saying that on Sept. 12, 1984, while visiting Hanoi, he was blindfolded and driven to an underground prison where he saw about 100 Americans in each of three large cells.

The DIA analysis of the latter statement said that this source failed a lie detector test and was determined to be "a fabricator."

REAGAN: Letter absolves former president

(From 1A)

For prosecutors, who began their work in late 1986, Walsh's letter amounted to a final acknowledgement that the exhaustive inquiry had unearthed no clearcut evidence directly tying Reagan to any wrongdoing.

Some lawyers who have followed the investigation said that even if Walsh had amassed evidence against Reagan, he would have been extremely reluctant to charge a former president with a criminal offense unless he had compiled an airtight case, something that failed to materialize in other public inquiries into the affair.

Moreover, even if prosecutors had obtained some evidence against Reagan, they would have been dissuaded from charging him on other grounds, most of all because of the daunting legal complexities involved in prosecuting a former president for his conduct in carrying out his duties as a chief executive.

In addition, if Walsh is troubled by Reagan's actions, he has another vehicle, a final report to Congress, that he can use to level his criticism.

That would avoid the trauma likely to be caused by the prosecution of a popular former president for acts that occurred six years ago and that have largely faded from public consciousness.

Theodore B. Olson, who is a lawyer for Reagan and who sought the letter from Walsh, said the letter meant that the former president was out from under legal jeopardy. "It has been my understanding that President Reagan is not being considered by the independent counsel's investigation as someone who is a candidate for indictment or as a potential defendant in any way," Olson said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Although the former president is not himself under scrutiny, there is no sign that Walsh has abandoned his final investigative push into whether Reagan's closest associates conspired in November 1986 to conceal his involvement in shipments of missiles to Iran a year earlier because they feared that the arms transfers might have been illegal.

In particular, the prosecutors, who have said they would complete their inquiry by summer's end, have re-examined the actions of Reagan's principal advisers, among them Edwin Meese III, the former attorney general; Donald T. Regan, the former White House chief of staff, and George P. Shultz, the former secretary of state.

None of the three have been accused of any wrongdoing, and each has long denied engaging in an effort to cover up any aspect of the affair. Last week, Regan said the prosecutors had told him that he was not under scrutiny.

But in recent days prosecutors have interviewed other senior officials like Frank C. Carlucci, a former national security adviser and defense secretary. And other Reagan administration officials like Charles Cooper, an aide to Meese, have testified to a federal grand jury. Cooper said in an interview Tuesday that he was scheduled to testify again today.

The focus of the inquiry emerged more clearly with the indictment of Caspar W. Weinberger, the former defense secretary, who was accused on June 16 of perjury and improperly concealing private notes taken during his years at the Pentagon.

CHILD: Panel recommends federal penalties

(From 1A)

To target the self-employed, for whom wage withholding is impossible, the commission would empower states to suspend professional and occupational licenses, such as a law license or carpenter's permit, for failure to make support payments.

It also would encourage states to revoke drivers' licenses and car registrations in such cases.

"The child-support system is broken," said Margaret Campbell Haynes, a Washington lawyer and chairman of the panel, created by Congress in 1988 to study the system.

"Today, millions of children in the United States fail to receive the financial support they are owed," the commission said in its bulky report.

Panel members contended that the recommendations represent a middle ground in the debate over increasing enforcement of child support payments by divorced or absent parents.

It stopped short of calling for establishment of a new federal child-support system. Instead, it recommended a modernization of the current state-based system and encouraged cooperation between the states to make it easier to enforce civil orders against delinquent parents in another state.

Geraldine Jensen of Toledo, Ohio, dissented from the report, saying it did not go far enough. She urged establishment of a new agency, akin to the IRS, to enforce support orders.

The recommendations come as Congress is considering measures to increase collection of child support payments, both for those whose lack of support has forced their children onto welfare, and for other cases as well.

The House action, on a voice vote without recorded dissent, sends the measure to the Senate. It would establish a penalty of six months in prison and $5,000 fine for crossing a state line to avoid child-support payments, with higher penalties for repeat cases.

One of the sponsors, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., complained that the commission had not gone far enough by failing to embrace a national child-support enforcement system.

"The emphasis on reforming state-run child support systems will meet with only limited success, especially in dealing with cases when the delinquent parent has fled the state to avoid paying child support," he said.

Advocates of increased enforcement contend that the present system fails to collect a third of the $15 billion ordered or promised for some 11 million children each year.

Haynes said the panel's proposals would simplify and speed up the system of establishing and collecting support, which she described now as cumbersome, outdated and "a dinosaur mired in paper."

The proposals would establish a computer network through which states could exchange information about support orders, and encourage uniformity in recognizing out-of-state orders.

"Child support needs to be enforced promptly," Haynes said. "That's why we propose requiring employers to immediately withhold support based on the W-4 information, and to comply with withholding notices (and) orders sent directly to them."

One member of the panel cautioned against the assumption that all delinquent parents were fathers, and that increased enforcement would help in all cases.

Don Chavez, a social worker with the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Albuquerque, said "more Draconian measures" may in some cases push fathers farther away from their children. He said visitation rights are often at issue, and that non-custodial parents with joint custody are more likely to make support payments.

CRIME: Neighborhood watches work, resident says

build neighborhood spirit and police-community relations and send a strong message to criminals that neighborhoods are fighting back.

Neighborhood watches "definitely work," said Charles Welch, who organized one of 30 groups meeting around Midland Tuesday. "You know who belongs in your neighborhood and who doesn't. People get out and get to know each other better."

Welch organized a group from the 3300-3700 blocks of Ohio, Michigan, Louisiana, Kansas and Storey streets at Lancaster Park. About 50 people showed up to eat, get to know each other and hear from volunteer police officer Paul Adams on how to better work with the police and better protect one's home.

Among the questions that Adams was asked were what times police paroled neighborhoods, if they really watched the neighborhoods they were patroling, how to secure their homes and if someone saw something suspicious, who to report it to.

"Always call the police first," Adams told the group. "Any time something or someone looks suspicious, contact the police. They will know what to do from there."

Adams said the neighborhood watches were helpful to police in catching criminals.

"These watches make people more aware," he said. "People become more knowledgeable about things. They can give police license numbers, descriptions, things like that."

Welch said he believed meetings such as the one Tuesday were good for teaching people how to secure their homes.

"You learn to ask for identifications from someone claiming to be the telephone man," he said. "If he is for real, he won't mind proving it."

"The main thing is to show criminals that we aren't going to take it anymore," Welch continued. "Meetings like these show that people care enough to pull together and wipe out crime."

TROOPS: Soldiers head for Kuwait

(From 1A)

Spc. Julian Gonzalez, 22, said his tour of duty in Operation Desert Storm had prepared him for another trip to the area. "The first time I was scared because I was young and going to war," the San Antonio native said.

Sgt. Victor Baker held his daughter, Emalee, who was not yet a month old. His wife, Stacie, said she was shocked at first that he was going back, but she said she grew up in a military family and is accustomed to the separations on a moment's notice.

The troops' commander, in a brief talk, advised the soldiers to be careful.

Brig. Gen. Billy Solomon said the exercises showed the country's commitment to stabilizing the Persian Gulf.

Two women were making their first overseas trip in the Army, and having to leave their children behind.

"I want to be here with him," said Sgt. Angela Thomas of San Antonio, as she held her 1-year-old son Michael. But she added that, "I want the experience and training. He knows Mommy will come back."

She was going to leave Michael with her mother.

Spc. Stephanie Bruce said she also looked forward to the experience, but would miss her 2-year-old daughter, Keoma, who was going to stay with her mother.

"I don't like leaving my daughter, but it's something that's expected of you if you're a single parent in the military," she said.

Most of the soldiers did not want to comment on the political implications of Bush's decision to resend troops. Some critics of Bush have said the decision was a ploy to boost his re-election campaign.

Gonzalez said, "He's the commander-in-chief. Whatever he says those are the rules."

The soldiers leaving Fort Hood were from the 13th Corps support command and the 1st Cavalry Division.

PRESIDENT: Bush meets with Republican business leaders of Senate Republicans, said Bush was "really perked up" by the gathering. No one proposed changes in the top echelons of the Bush administration, Cochran said.

Some Republicans have urged that Quayle be replaced and that Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Budget Director Richard Darman be dismissed to signal a new, more vigorous campaign freed from the legacy of economic decline in the first four years.

Cochran said Bush had appeared "a little disappointed about the criticism of his campaign, the fact that he was trailing in the polls, that people were complaining about one thing or another."

But support buoyed the president's spirits, Cochran said in a telephone interview.

"People are beginning to realize that the president has his own plan in mind and that maybe we should give him the benefit of the doubt," Cochran said.

Republicans gave Bush a pair of red boxing gloves, with the right glove marked "Democrat" and the left glove labeled "Congress," as well as a plaque with an oversized Olympic gold medal labeled "heavyweight champion."

"There's been a lot of frustration about our slowness to begin the campaign, about Clinton getting out front in the polls and getting away with statements that are at variance with his record," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, chairman of the GOP senatorial campaign committee. "That has created tensions very similar to those that you get in a locker room before an athletic contest. But in the final analysis, Republican senators are eager to start the campaign and they're confident the president is going to win."

As Bush returned to the White House, several hundred demonstrators staged a lunch-time rally in front of the executive mansion decrying Bush's health care proposals and carrying signs endorsing Clinton.

Bush followed his meeting on Capitol Hill with a fiery pep talk to some 50 Republican business leaders invited to the White House to hear his criticisms of Clinton's health care program and complaints that Congress has stymied Bush's economic recovery program.

Donald Kendall, chairman of the executive committee of Pepsico Inc., and the firm's former chief executive, later said the president made it clear that he is itching to go on the offensive.

"There is no question today that the president has got the fire in his belly and he's ready for the fight," said Kendall, adding that the president "wants help. That's why we're here."

Toby Malichi, president of Malichi Diversified Limited, an international marketing firm based in Indianapolis, emerged from Bush's presentation to predict Bush's political comeback.

"Sometimes the person out front isn't necessarily the person who is going to win," Malichi said. "One of my favorite philosophies is that the turtle won the race, not the rabbit."

Bush overcame a 17-point deficit in public opinion polls in 1988 to defeat Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis in a landslide.

The Bush campaign also tried to rebound from having the president's presentation on health care in Chicago on Sunday overshadowed by turmoil within the Bush-Quayle campaign.

Administration experts were summoned to the White House on short notice to brief reporters on the Bush program that was submitted to Congress last February to "make affordable health insurance available to all Americans."

Bush's efforts to retake the offensive came as the Commerce Department reported the government's main forecasting gauge of future economic activity dropped for the first time in six months.

RUBBER: Tires to coat streets

times what the normal asphalt is doing."

Officials expect a 15-year lifespan from the sealant.

The $78,000 project will cover 60,000 square yards ($1.30 per square yard) on Wadley Avenue between Lamesa Road and A Street; and on A Street between Cuthbert Avenue and Wall Street.

The City Council awarded the contract to International Surfacing Inc. of Chandler, Ariz., in early July. The company guarantees the product for five years.

"They'll grind up the tires and heat them in the asphalt to 400 degrees," Hansen said. "It provides a better membrane, keeps the moisture and sunlight out."

"Water and traffic are the main causes of potholes," he said. "The elasticity of this product will slow the deterioration."

The state highway department, currently applying the rubber asphalt on Interstate 20 west of the Midland-Ector county line, will start work today on Wadley Avenue.

"We're going to evaluate it for a period of time and satisfy it is worth the extra costs," Hansen said. "Then we'll decide whether we'll do some more."

Rubber asphalt was developed in the early 1960s by an engineer in Phoenix who sought to economically extend the life of deteriorating, sun-damaged pavements.

The process has since spread throughout the south and southwest and only recently caught on in other parts of the country.

"In addition to the sealant, it's also very beneficial to use the tires this way," Hansen said. "Tires are extremely hard to dispose of and this works great."

The local project should be finished by the middle of next week, Hansen said.

U.S. planes end search for fugitive drug lord

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — U.S. reconnaissance planes have ended their participation in the search for Pablo Escobar with no indication that authorities are ready to capture the fugitive drug lord.

In a possible sign of a resurgence of drug-related violence, a car bomb exploded in the parking lot of Medellin shopping center, wounding six people, police said, and another bomb was deactivated in the southwestern city of Cali.

Escobar sent a faxed statement to radio stations denying responsiblity for the bombing, which he blamed on Gilberto Rodriguez Orejuela, leader of the rival Cali drug cartel.

The U.S. Air Force and Drug Enforcement Administration sent planes last week to help search for Escobar.

Foreign Minister Nohemi Sanin said Tuesday the operation had ended, apparently without success. He did not say specifically the U.S. aircraft had left Colombia.

The flights provoked anti-U.S. protests and complaints from Colombian congressmen, who said the use of the planes violated Colombia's sovereignty.

The planes, equipped with aerial photography equipment, night vision scopes and radio interception gear, could be heard buzzing above Medellin, Colombia's second-largest city, for several days.

News reports said authorities had intercepted a radio communication from Escobar, but Fernando Brito, Colombia's chief of intelligence services, refused to confirm the report in an interview with The Associated Press.,

Asked about reports Escobar was believed hiding in Puerto Triunfo, a jungle area 90 miles north of Bogota, he responded, "That is one of the areas where he can move about."

Brito said the government will "only accept an unconditional surrender" from Escobar, who escaped from a resort-style jail near Medellin on July 22 after troops tried to move him to a military prison. Nine cartel associates also fled.

Escobar — who reportedly managed to control his multibillion-dollar drug empire from behind bars — has offered to surrender if he returns to the same jail and receives further guarantees he will not be extradited to the United States.

Escobar and 14 close associates surrendered last year in exchange for promises of no extradition and lenient court treatment.

The government arrested 26 jail guards and fired several senior officials after the embarrassing escape, which was a severe blow to Colombia's anti-drug fight.

Authorities who visited the jail in Envigado, Escobar's hometown, reported finding a display of luxuries, including a widescreen television, a waterbed, a bar and Jacuzzi. Escobar also allegedly held trials in jail in which he sentenced rival traffickers to death.

Escobar smuggled in cordless telephones, fax machines, computers and weapons, officials said. Attorney General Gustavo de Greiff said he found pornographic movies and photographs of jail parties where inmates smuggled in women and guards in tuxedos served drinks.

Reporters have been barred from visiting the jail.

Clashes kill three

KIGALI, Rwanda (AP) — Protesters wielding sticks, knives and clubs clashed with police in Rwanda's capital Tuesday, leaving three people dead and at least six injured, Radio Rwanda reported.

The state-owned station said the dead were a policeman and two members of the Coalition for the Defense of the Republic, considered an extremist group.

The broadcast said about 500 young party members armed with sticks, knives and clubs gathered in front of the Ministry of Justice in Kigali and blocked the road with stones and logs. They were demanding the release of party members jailed on charges of participating in violent protests.

Court leaves school financing up to state

The battle over how to finance public schools in Texas continues, and as it does few are happy with the status quo.

Some taxpayers are incensed that the state will be allowed to continue to collect a tax already deemed unconstitutional, many Texans believe that the Legislature is to blame for not addressing school financing before now, and others believe that the financing fight is merely a facade for the real battle — which is all about dollars and bureaucratic control.

While many Texans no doubt found distasteful the appeals court decision in the County Education District (CED) case since it left in effect a tax already ruled unconstitutional, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' on Monday was actually positive in several regards:

■ It reaffirmed the premise that the state, not the federal government, is primarily responsible for public education.

■ It left resolution of the school financing crisis in the hands of state legislators, where it belongs.

■ It put the bee on the backs of those legislators to fine tune their financing plan. The CED property tax, although previously ruled unconstitutional since it created a state property tax without approval of the state's voters, can now be modified by the Legislature. Legislators have until June 1, 1993 to do so.

■ It bought time, again, for Texas public schools without the tumult that would ensue were the schools allowed to run out of money.

Now the ball is literally back in the Legislature's court. State officials know what they must do. They also should realize that the state's voters are not going to accept a "Robin Hood" plan or one that simply throws money at the problem. In fact, it appears that after several years of debating the matter the legislators' choices are greatly diminished. They could greatly increase state spending on education, which raises the question of how to pay for it without even guaranteeing results on student performance. They could throw the door open to school choice, an alternative which has the public education establishment running scared. Or they could do nothing — which would threaten all kinds of civil litigation.

Will the Legislature act? It must, if public education is to improve at all and the consensus appears to be that such improvement is needed.

More involvement obviously is needed by parents of schoolchildren, taxpayers who've seen their taxes escalate in past years but the educational quality of graduates go down, and teachers who've witnessed the bureaucratization of the public schools. A solution must be found to the financing dilemma and it's entirely possible that the answer is not where legislators have been searching.

If Texans are really intent on improving the quality of public education, they must look at all the variables that can affect that quality now — money or lack of it, school bureaucracy, school choice, societal pressures, regulation via the federal government.

The monetary pressures are only one facet of the equation.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 5, the 218th day of 1992. There are 148 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Thirty years ago, on Aug. 5, 1962, actress Marilyn Monroe was found dead in the bedroom of her Los Angeles home. Her death was ruled a "probable suicide" caused by an overdose of sleeping pills. Monroe was 36.

On this date:

In 1861, the federal government levied an income tax for the first time.

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union Adm. David G. Farragut is said to have given his famous order, "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead!" as he led his fleet against Mobile Bay, Ala.

In 1884, the cornerstone for the Statue of Liberty was laid on Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor.

In 1914, the first electric traffic lights were installed, in Cleveland.

In 1924, the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," by Harold Gray, made its debut.

In 1953, Operation Big Switch was under way as prisoners taken during the Korean Conflict were exchanged at Panmunjom.

In 1954, 24 boxers became the first inductees into the Boxing Hall of Fame, including Henry Armstrong, Gentleman Jim Corbett, Jack Dempsey, Jack Johnson, Joe Louis and John L. Sullivan.

In 1957, "American Bandstand," hosted by Dick Clark, made its network debut on ABC.

In 1969, the U.S. space probe Mariner Seven flew by Mars, sending back photographs and scientific data.

In 1980, Hurricane Allen battered the southern peninsula of Haiti, leaving more than 200 dead.

In 1981, the federal government began firing air traffic controllers who had gone out on strike.

In 1984, actor Richard Burton died at a hospital in Geneva at age 58.

Ten years ago: The U.S. House of Representatives narrowly rejected a call for a superpower nuclear weapons freeze, approving instead an alternative arms-reduction resolution favored by President Ronald Reagan.

Five years ago: President Reagan announced his administration had reached a "general agreement" with leaders of Congress on a new Central America peace plan. Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega offered to discuss the U.S. proposal.

One year ago: Democratic congressional leaders formally launched an investigation into whether the 1980 Reagan-Bush campaign had secretly conspired with Iran to delay release of American hostages until after the presidential election. Football coach Paul Brown died in suburban Cincinnati at age 82. Soichiro Honda, founder of Honda Motor Company, died in Tokyo at age 84.

Today's Birthdays: Former astronaut Neil A. Armstrong is 62. Actor John Saxon is 57. Actress Loni Anderson is 47. Actress Holly Palance is 42. Singer Samantha Sang is 39.

Wasted dollars can fund libraries

WASHINGTON — From the East Wing of the White House, Barbara Bush has seized the bully pulpit of first lady to crusade for reading and family literacy.

From the West Wing of the White House, George Bush — "the education president" — has presided over a wave of library closures and cutbacks that's unmatched even during the Great Depression.

Anderson

Sometimes it has appeared that the West Wing doesn't know what the East Wing is doing.

Public library systems around the nation are reeling from massive budget cuts, forced branch closings, layoffs, slashed operating hours and deep reductions in the level of new book and serial acquisitions. In the meantime, American taxpayers are shelling out $42 million a year for over 100 libraries and reading rooms around the world.

Mrs. Bush, honorary chairperson of the Barbara Bush Foundation for Family Literacy, eloquently explains that, "home is a child's first school, the parent is the child's first teacher, and reading is the child's first subject."

President Bush's proposed budget for fiscal year 1993 slashed federal library programs by 76 percent, according to the American Library Association. During a photo-op last year at the White House Conference on Libraries, Bush said: "Our libraries serve as the schoolrooms for lifetime learning and the launching pads for our future."

Under the president's budget, no funds would be provided for services to children, seniors or persons with disabilities. Nor would there be any funds for new technologies that libraries say they require to maintain public access to information.

Funds may be drying up from the federal government, but Mrs. Bush has shaken loose spare change from the Presidential Inaugural Committee, which directed the celebration that followed the 1988 election. The money has been distributed to small and medium-size libraries in amounts of $5,000 each, making Mrs. Bush a hero to scores of small communities.

"It's ridiculous for the education president to talk about forward improvement of education when we're neglecting and destroying our libraries," Rep. Major Owens, D-N.Y., told our associate Ed Henry. "Libraries are the most economic way to provide aid to education, but they get overlooked repeatedly because libraries aren't glamorous and don't have lobbyists."

Elementary and secondary education nationwide, which services 40 million young people, costs $213 billion. Another $141 billion goes for the higher education of about 13 million students. By comparison, $4 billion supports public library services nationally, which are used by 120 million adult Americans on a regular basis.

Even in these budget-strapped days, library advocates charge that there are billions of wasted dollars that can be squeezed out of other areas. For example, the General Accounting Office has identified $28 billion in excess aircraft spare parts that the Pentagon can't use for the foreseeable future.

The $28 billion from excess spare parts could have run the public library system for seven years. From another perspective, the $4 billion is the equivalent of 10 Army Apache helicopters, of which the Pentagon now possesses more than 500.

Even spare change from these programs could rescue libraries that are at the financial brink in several parts of the country. Until recently, budget cuts forced 46 of the 58 public library branches in Owens' Brooklyn, N.Y., district to stay closed up to five days a week.

In Massachusetts, 20 library branches have closed their doors during the past two years. And budget cuts have forced the Chicago Public Library System to shave hours at 80 of its branches and lay off 100 workers.

Jack Anderson's and Michael Binstein's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Candidates' foreign policy strategies differ

Bill Clinton spent considerable time in the last week trying to support George Bush's efforts on Iraq and Bosnia, the world's current flashpoints. The White House responded to these endorsements by calling the Democratic nominee "reckless" and unfit to manage America's security.

Gelb

One trembles to contemplate the adjectives the White House will hurl at the Arkansas governor when he actually takes issue with the president's foreign policy.

Sen. Al Gore brought the elevating exchanges to their logical resting place. If Bush and Dan Quayle "are such whizzes," he said, "why is it that Saddam Hussein is thumbing his nose at the entire world?"

See, foreign policy can almost be fun.

If nothing else, the high jinks clarify how both sides will handle this subject in the campaign. The Clinton strategy is to go for the clinches, hold on, counterpunch hard and concentrate on domestic issues. The Bush strategy is to keep as much distance as possible, swing from the heels, showcase the president's foreign policy skills and prefigure their good use at home.

The Clinton team has decided that it has more to lose than to gain if foreign affairs looms large. So it has tried to neutralize Bush's advantages here by embracing his policies on many big, tough issues. Since last December Clinton has stressed his appreciation of anti-Soviet Cold War policies, his backing of the Persian Gulf war and his willingness to use force to defend the nation's vital interests.

Clinton — who seems to be a genuine foreign policy moderate — acknowledges he is not about to let Republicans tag him with being "weak and soft-headed," as they did his luckless predecessors. In recent days he extended that thinking to Iraq and Bosnia.

He condemned Saddam every bit as roughly as did Bush. "If the United Nations decides to use force to insure Iraqi compliance with the cease-fire agreements," he said last week, "I will support American participation in such action." He added: "Even during an election campaign, Americans are united on this issue."

The Democratic contender pulled his punches on the questionable U.N. arrangement that defused the present crisis. He could easily have attacked Bush for agreeing to the deal that barred U.S. inspectors from entering a suspicious Iraqi building. And he could have (and probably should have) walloped Bush for doing little to challenge Saddam's past cease-fire violations. But Clinton wants to stay close to the president on Iraq.

He was rightly a bit more aggressive than Bush on Bosnia, but not much. "If the Serbs persist in violating the terms of the current cease-fire agreement," he said, "the United States should take the lead in seeking U.N. Security Council authorization for air strikes against those who are attacking the relief effort."

This is the statement that the White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, first distorted and then termed "reckless." It is also, in essence, the policy just enunciated by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. "Our commitment does go to supporting with military force, specifically naval and air assets, the efforts in the international community to provide relief supplies to the people of Yugoslavia," he told the Senate last week.

Clinton's strategy will work — as long as he also does what his aides promise. They say he will step back from Bush from time to time and develop his basic differences with the president on defense, the environment and foreign economic policy — all tied to the theme that power abroad depends on strength at home.

But Bush's strategy is ill-conceived. He looks peevish and partisan when he pushes Clinton away on Iraq or Bosnia. Rather, he should try to convince Americans that his foreign policies are so sound that even his challenger has to embrace them.

Bush will find enough grist to criticize his opponent. Americans, for example, wince every time Clinton feels it necessary to declare, as he did last Tuesday about foreign crises, that "I'm the one who can be firm and tough." But because Bush seems determined to create plainly false fights over foreign policy in order to avoid the real battle over domestic policies, round one goes to Bill Clinton.

PACs donate to support electoral system

No matter what anyone tells you, the name of the game in this presidential campaign is MONEY. You just cannot elect a leader of the free world without lots and lots of dollars.

Buchwald

Political Action Committees (PACS) are one of the main sources of money. They raise funds from their members to ensure fair treatment from Washington for their particular businesses.

There is a saying in the nation's capital that if you want to know how the current elections are going, follow the PACS.

That's the reason I went out to the warehouse where the Thumb Tack PAC is located. Dumfree, who runs it, was on the loading platform holding a clipboard. His crew was piling sacks of money into the rear doors of Brinks trucks.

Dumfree yelled to the driver, "Hold up on making that delivery to Bush headquarters. Drop it off at Clinton's instead."

The driver asked, "What's up?"

"The polls just came in. It's Clinton two to one. If we give to Bush, we're throwing good money after bad."

I said to Dumfree, "Are the Thumb Tack people going to cut off Bush altogether?"

"No, we're sending over an envelope with a bicycle messenger. But there is no sense using a truck for what we're donating to the Republican Party."

"Are they aware that your PAC will not be contributing big bucks this time?"

"Not yet, but we gave a lot to Bush in 1988 and it's only fair that we do the same for the Democrats this time."

"It doesn't sound as if it has anything to do with fairness. I suspect that it has more to do with putting your money on someone who has the best chance of winning."

"PAC people don't think like that. The reason that we donate is to support the electoral system. You see that Brinks truck over there loaded to the gills with cash and checks? That goes to the House Chairman on Thumb Tack Oversight. He's a good honest politician and we want to make sure he stays that way. We would ship it over to him whether he made life or death decisions on Thumb Tacks or not."

"What can a president do for thumb tacks to warrant your large contributions?"

"Thumb tacks are essential to a successful government. The Republicans have had their old plans tacked up on walls all over Washington ever since Reagan took office. Nobody reads them any more. The American voter wants change. Change means new thumb tacks, or as Clinton calls it, 'New Covenants.' This means that the U.S. will have to order millions of tacks. That's why we've redirected the shipment of PAC money to the Democrats."

While we were talking, a red-faced Republican fund-raiser came storming onto the dock. "Where is the money truck for the Bush-Quayle Father and Son Prayer Breakfast?"

Dumfree looked innocent. "We sent it over by postal express yesterday."

"Well, we didn't get it and we heard that you delivered a truckload of money to the Elvis Presley for Clinton Committee in Nashville. We know it came from you because there was a bumper sticker on the truck which said, 'Honk If You Think Quayle Should Keep The Baby.'"

Veterans flock in for 50th anniversary of World War II's battles

GUADALCANAL, Solomon Islands (AP) — Several hundred Guadalcanal veterans were arriving by cruise boat to dedicate a monument to their fallen comrades and celebrate the 50th anniversary of one of World War II's bloodiest battles.

The monument is to be dedicated Friday on Skyline Ridge, which overlooks the beaches and hills where American forces, supported by Australians, New Zealanders and Solomon Islanders, fought to dislodge the Japanese in battles that left more than 26,000 people dead.

The cruise ship was expected to arrive late Wednesday or Thursday. Other veterans will stay in small hotels, or in a tent city that 200 Marines from the USS Racine are building on a soccer field to accommodate the overflow.

Honiara, the capital of the Solomon Islands, has been given new street signs directing veterans to Bloody Ridge, Skyline Ridge and Red Beach, where the 1st Marine Division landed on Aug. 7, 1942.

The resulting battle was costly for both sides: the United States lost 5,000 men, 24 ships and 615 aircraft. The Japanese had 21,000 fatalities, 26 ships sunk and 680 planes shot down.

Guadalcanal is about 1,600 miles northeast of Sydney, Australia.

The monument, built for $1.3 million in donations from U.S. veterans, active military forces and private individuals, was inspired by a 1986 visit by Dr. Robert C. Muehrcke of Harwood Heights, Ill., who first landed on the island in 1942.

"We were on a cruise ship that visited here, and we went up to Mt. Austin, where there had been very heavy fighting," he said. "My infantry unit took it at great cost.

"On our visit, we saw a beautiful Japanese statue as a memorial to their dead. Initially, we were very angry about it. Why had the Japanese put it on ground we had won back?

"Then we felt guilty that the Japanese think more of their Marines than we do. So we decided we had to have an American memorial."

Muehrcke, a former rifleman, and his committee lobbied Washington for official recognition by the American Battle Monuments Commission. His group bought $320 worth of land and set up the nonprofit Guadalcanal-Solomon Islands War Memorial Foundation.

Support from other veterans organizations was initially lukewarm.

One committee member, 70-year-old Guadalcanal veteran Stanley C. Jersey, sought support in a letter to Sen. Edward Kennedy. He pointed out that late President John F. Kennedy was rescued by Solomon Islanders after his patrol boat was sunk off the western islands by the Japanese.

"I didn't even get a reply," said Jersey, of Carlsbad, Calif. "The Solomon Islands government wanted to issue a stamp with President Kennedy's head on it, but we've urged them not to."

In addition to the Guadalcanal monument on Skyline Ridge, the foundation has built a second memorial to Americans and their allies who fought elsewhere in the Solomons campaign. It features a lifesize statue of Sir Jacob Vouza, a Solomon Islander.

Vouza, a retired policeman when the campaign started, was awarded a Silver Star for heroism by the U.S. Marines. He was part of a team of islanders who became coast-watchers, reporting on Japanese ship and troop movements from behind Japanese lines.

Martin Clemens, 75, the most famous of the coast-watchers, played a major role in construction of the Guadalcanal monument.

The former British officer makes no apology that no Japanese have been invited to Friday's dedication.

"They didn't ask us to theirs, we why should we ask them?" Clemens said. "That's how this whole thing got started — they had a monument and we didn't."

Shells hit cemetery just after funeral

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Four shells thumped into a cemetery Tuesday just after mourning relatives and orphans buried two children killed by sniper fire that hit a bus carrying them away from the bombed-out capital.

The mortar attack, apparently intentional, came as U.N. officials announced they were suspending aid airlifts to Sarajevo for three days because the intensity of fighting made it unsafe for planes to land.

The bodies of Vedrana Glavas, a mentally retarded 2-year-old, and 1-year-old Roki Sulejmanovic had just been placed side by side in the earth by a battered statue of a lion, Bosnia's symbol, when three shells exploded.

About 20 of the slain children's orphanage housemates ran screaming for cover behind parked cars and a stone wall.

The grave-diggers, for whom such attacks have become a daily experience, jumped into open graves.

After a pause, a fourth shell landed in soft earth in front of adults leaving the cemetery, and Vedrana Glava's grandmother crumpled to the earth, her arm badly mangled.

"My daughter is dead, and now they've injured my mother!" cried Svetlana Glavas, who like her daughter is retarded.

A British television crew rushed the slain child's grandmother, Ruza, to the Kosevo hospital. Dr. Asim Agicic said an artery was apparently severed in the woman's arm, but it would not have to be amputated.

Vedrana, a Serb, and Roki, a Muslim, were killed late Saturday when Tomic' orphanage attempted to bus about 50 children from the orphanage out of Sarajevo so they could be flown to shelter in Germany.

Nine other children were seized Sunday by Serb police, who identified them as Serbs. The remaining 38 flew to Germany on Tuesday from the Croatian port of Split, where they arrived Monday night.

Some children have been placed in the Sarajevo orphanage, which still has about 100 children, because their families felt they could not care for them at home.

Officials said there are no plans to put the children up for adoption in Germany.

Lion Cemetery, where the two children were buried, has often been caught in heavy fighting. But the timing and location of Tuesday's shelling indicated the attack was intentional.

Big Spring officials launch petition to save park

■ A petition has been started by city officials in hopes of saving Big Spring State Park.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

BIG SPRING — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department plans to close the Big Spring State Park due to low visitation while city officials want to keep it open because of its popularity.

The 370-acre park will shut down Aug. 31 "due to low visitation and revenue and (because) the same services are offered by the city of Big Spring," said Lyndal Waldrip, spokesman for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

across the state, 11 state parks are slated to close and 18 others will be reduced or consolidated, pending a final vote by the Parks and Wildlife Commission on Aug. 27.

But some Big Spring officials hope to change that.

"We have started a petition here ... stating that we are in support of keeping the state park open," said Linda Roger, executive vice president of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

The petition drive — as a way to keep the park open — was suggested by state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, she said.

A delegation of Big Spring leaders plans to take the petition to the public hearing on the park closures on Aug. 26 in Austin, she said.

"I haven't set a number but we're looking at 18,000 (people) in the city limits, so we're looking at 8,000 signatures. We want to go with some strength," Ms. Roger said.

"We just feel like the state park is definitely a tourist attraction here and used locally," she said.

In a community of Big Spring's size, parks are widely used, Ms. Roger said.

"We think it's something the whole area needs to get behind" in light of the limited number of state parks in West Texas, she said.

If the Parks and Wildlife Commission votes to close the park, city officials hope an alternative might be found to keep it open.

"Maybe on a volunteer basis or civic groups and the city and county as a sponsor," Mayor Tim Blackshear said.

"There are a great number of people that go up there and walk in the morning or afternoon and most people would hate to see it shut down," he said.

In addition, the park possesses part of the Big Spring history, Blackshear said.

Although Blackshear wants to see the park stay open, he did not express optimism if the Parks and Wildlife Commission votes for closure.

"I don't know how it can be done since the city doesn't have the money," he said.

Closing the park will save the state $50,000 a year and eliminate two jobs, according to the parks department.

During the 1991 fiscal year, revenue from the park totaled $13,531.

There were 73,474 visitors during that time with a cost of 50 cents per visitor to operate.

In addition to the closure of the Big Spring State Park, 3,840-acre Monahans Sandhills State Park will suffer a reduc-

Students make the grade on national test

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Midland public school students outclass the competition when it comes to math, according to results of a recent national standardized test.

Local students didn't fare so well in reading, however, on the Norm-Referenced Assessment Program for Texas (NRAPT).

The test was given for the first time in April to 1.9 million public school students. The test compares the achievement of Texas students with that of students across the nation in grades three through 11.

The highest ranking grade in the state was the third-grade. Texas third-graders scored at the 61st percentile, which means they scored better than 61 percent of other students in the national sampling. The composite grade — which includes scores in reading, language, mathematics, social studies and science — for Midland third-graders district-wide also was 61 percent.

So, Midland third-graders scored above the national average and met the state average. They did even better in math, managing to score better in the math portion than almost 70 percent of students in the national sampling.

"Traditionally, our students are strong in math (on standardized tests)," said Joe Cummins, executive director of planning, evaluation and testing for Midland Independent School District.

By the fourth-grade, local students scored at the 57th percentile and at the 61st in the fifth-grade and the 60th in sixth-grade.

Midland math scores dropped below the national average (or below the 50th percentile) in the seventh- and eighth-grades, scoring a 49 and 44, respectively.

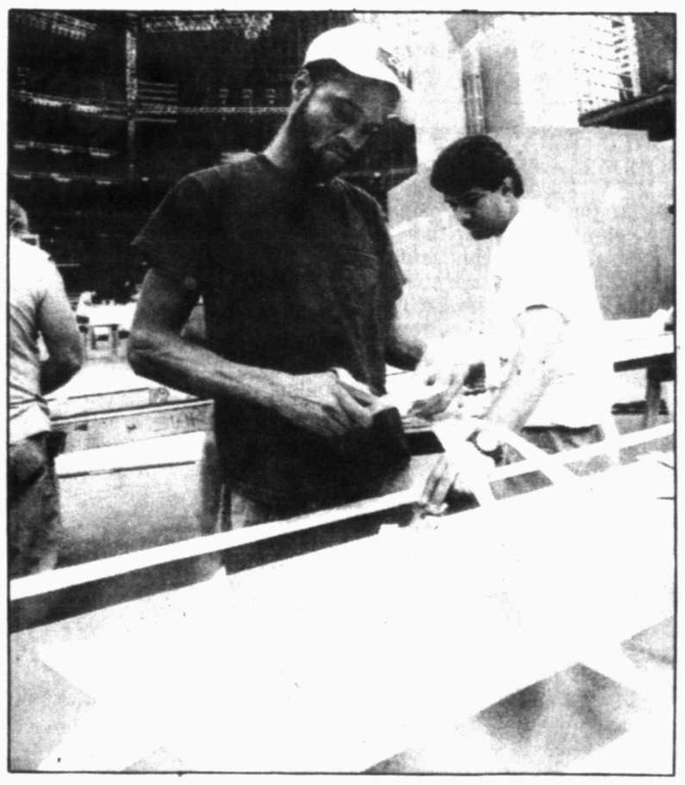

MISD is the exception to the rule in the upper grades when it comes to math. The Associated Press reported that Texas high school students did poorly in math, scoring below the national average and dipping below the 41st percentile in math.

The average profile did not fit MISD.

Midland students scored at or above the national average in grades nine, 10 and 11, scoring a 54 in math at the ninth-grade level.

MISD science scores were above or near the national average in all

GOP convention podium gets bulletproof glass

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Bulletproof glass went up on the speaker's platform Tuesday as the Houston Astrodome continued to be transformed into a convention hall for the Republican National Convention.

The panes of glass form a waist-high rail at the front and sides of the podium.

"It was deliberate to have it clear and transparent for an open effect," Mike Miller, director of operations for the convention, said.

Crews lifted the panes from a truck and slid them into place on the platform, then peeled off paper stickers that warned: "Caution: Install This Surface Toward Threat."

Other security measures outside the Astrodome neared completion as workers were installing a 9-foot-high chain-link fence between the stadium and the parking lot.

And bulldozers began clearing a vacant lot across the street from the stadium for use as the "official" demonstration

Taxpayer lawyer to appeal to court

AUSTIN (AP) — A lawyer representing Texas taxpayers said Tuesday he will go to the U.S. Supreme Court in his fight against the county education district property tax for public schools.

Lawyer Jim Keahey said he hopes to file a petition with the court Wednesday. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans Monday refused to stop collection of the tax, which has been found to violate the state constitution.

If Keahey does not succeed in having his petition heard at the U.S. Supreme Court, or if a ruling is unfavorable, he said he will go back to state court and pursue appeals to the U.S. Supreme Court again.

"Until these issues are settled in federal or state court, I suggest everyone wait to pay their 1992 CED (county education district) tax. Bills go out Oct. 1 and the last day to pay without penalty is Jan. 31, 1993," Keahey said. "Once the CEDs have your money, there's little or no chance of getting it back if we win."

But Ron Dusek, spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales, said the issue is settled, at least for now, "and the law is people have to pay their taxes."

"Responsible citizens wouldn't even consider not paying their taxes," he said.

Lawmakers created the current school finance system in an effort to meet a Texas Supreme Court mandate to equalize school funding. It was designed to shift hundreds of millions of dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within new taxing regions made up of one or several counties.

But the Texas Supreme Court in January ruled that the plan violates the Texas Constitution by imposing a statewide property tax, and by levying a property tax without voter approval.

However, the state Supreme Court gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993, to fix the system. And it delayed the ruling's effect so that it would not interfere with the collection of 1991 and 1992 property taxes in the 188 new county education districts.

Keahey then filed the class-action lawsuit in federal court, saying continued collection of the levy denies taxpayers due process, violating the U.S. Constitution.

'Until these issues are settled in federal or state court, I suggest everyone wait to pay their 1992 CED (county education district) tax. Bills go out Oct. 1 and the last day to pay without penalty is Jan. 31, 1993.'

— Lawyer Jim Keahey

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin in Austin sided with taxpayers on that point, but refused to issue an injunction stopping collection of the tax.

Keahey then appealed to the 5th Circuit, which said the federal court did not have jurisdiction.

MONAHANS — Services for Eula Easterling, 88, of Monahans, mother of a Midland woman, will be at 2:30 p.m. Thursday at the Harkey-Wilson Chapel with the Rev. David Matkins officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens with the Harkey-Wilson Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Easterling died Tuesday at a Monahans hospital.

She was born Feb. 24, 1904, in Tishamingo, Indian Territory in Oklahoma.

She married Thomas Easterling on Aug. 3, 1933, in Loving, N.M. He died in December of 1963. Mrs. Easterling was a homemaker.

Survivors include one son, W.G. Tudor of Dallas; two daughters, Rene Benham of Monahans and Tommie McDole of Midland; five grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Irene Fervoy

Services for Irene Glad Fervoy are set for 10 a.m. Monday at St. Ann's Catholic Church with the Rev. Fred Nawarskas officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Fervoy died Tuesday at her Midland home.

Austin couple heads home to South Africa

By Pamela Ward
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — They were young and idealistic then, in the 1960s when they left their home for America. Ten years at the most, they thought, and they would be returning to a free and democratically ruled South Africa.

The struggle took much longer than they imagined. Willie and Sebiletso Matabane are not so young any more, although their idealism burns brightly.

After more than 25 years, they are going home. And it is with contagious enthusiasm that they describe the challenge ahead.

They have sold their North Austin home and say they are committed to living in South Africa. They shrug off mention of continuing political warfare, including the recent massacre of blacks at Boipatong, south of Johannesburg.

The move is "a little bit scary," but only in that change always presents uncertainty. "It's more anticipation," Sebiletso said. "Boipatong notwithstanding, we want to go back."

Although they realize blacks have a long way to go before being treated as equal citizens in South Africa, reforms in the past few years have eroded aspects of the apartheid system. Under apartheid, whites, who constitute a minority of South Africa's residents, rule the country.

The release from prison of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela in 1990, reforms that reduced aspects of segregation in housing and public facilities, and the white minority government's entry into negotiations with the ANC to create a transitional government — which could usher in majority rule — are signs of change and hope for more.

Despite the recent breakdown in negotiations between the government and the ANC, the Matabanes feel compelled to return home to be part of the solution.

Sebiletso has accepted a multifaceted job that will entail training South African blacks to assume leadership roles in local governments, helping non-governmental organizations with skills development and educating people about the foreign concept of community college education.

Willie, who took early retirement from IBM, is looking for work in Johannesburg. Sebiletso will join him in a few weeks.

In the early 1960s, as political activists opposed to the white ruling regime in South Africa, they felt they had no choice but to go into exile. Activists were beginning to be arrested when Willie left for New York in 1963. "They were putting us in jail randomly. It was either leave or go to jail," Willie said.

Sebiletso left in 1965, and although they had grown up near Johannesburg, they did not meet until both were students at Syracuse University in upstate New York.

In each other they found a common cause — to fight for freedom from the outside by helping bring pressure on the minority regime through economic sanctions, boycotts and legislation from other nations. The Matabanes concluded that returning home would mean prison, "and being in jail seemed futile," Sebiletso said.

The couple moved from New York to Austin in the mid-1970s when Willie, a management employee with IBM, accepted a transfer. Sebiletso earned her doctorate and became coordinator for instructional technology at Austin Community College.

In Austin, they started an organization with university professors to educate Texans about the South African struggle for independence. The South African Liberation Action Committee became a source of information and a lobbying group.

At the University of Texas the group evolved into the Steve Biko Committee, commemorating a South African college student and activist. Detained for his political activities against apartheid, Biko died on a prison floor while in police custody in 1977.

In the Texas capital, the couple said they found compassion and understanding about the situation in South Africa and parallel concerns about struggles in other countries.

From other exiles, Sebiletso said, they learned "we are not isolated." The Austin community, she said, "taught me a lot, in that I realize that we do have more in common than differences. Borders do not quite matter. I've met people from all over the world who share our struggle."

Because the struggle has lasted so long, the Matabanes have lived more of their lives in the United States than in South Africa. Time and distance, though, have not diminished the lure of home. Although they claim dual citizenship, it is South Africa, where they were born and where so many family members remain, that always will be "home."

City trys to slow speed-trap image

MOUNT ENTERPRISE (AP) — Mount Enterprise residents are tired of their town being known as a speed trap.

And though speeding ticket fines provide the majority of income for this tiny town of about 500, the people are willing to give up the money for a better reputation.

"The town of Mount Enterprise is known all over the state as nothing but a speed trap. These people that's in authority now are trying to change that," said Frank Summers, a Baptist minister, referring to City Council.

The council voted Monday night to "redirect the mission of the city and the city marshal's office," the Henderson Daily News reported Tuesday.

Mayor Ross King is leading Mount Enterprise's transformation from speed-trap demon of East Texas to a city its residents can be proud of.

The council voted to alter the job of the town's main law enforcement officer from a full-time city marshal to a part-time patrol officer who "patrols the city more as a night watchman.

Rape victim testifies at trial for man who sought castration

HOUSTON (AP) — A teen-age girl told jurors Tuesday she was raped last year by a family friend who since tried to arrange a plea bargain on sexual assault charges by submitting to castration.

Steven Allen Butler, 28, faces up to life in prison if convicted of raping the girl, now 14. Butler already is on probation for indecent conduct with a 7-year-old girl.

The girl said when no one else was at home, Butler touched her in ways that made her uncomfortable and he told her not to tell.

A jury was selected Monday in State District Judge Jim Barr's court.

The case gained worldwide attention in February when Butler volunteered to be surgically castrated. State District Judge Mike McSpadden agreed to let allow the surgery and place Butler on probation, if he pleaded guilty.

But the plan collapsed in March when McSpadden couldn't find a physician willing to perform the operation. The case then was transferred to Barr's court.

Publicity about the case has dwindled since then, but 19 of 50 prospective jurors examined in Barr's court Monday indicated they had heard of the case.

Only a half-dozen said media accounts they read had tainted their ability to be fair. More than a dozen indicated they thought Butler's guilt already had been established.

GOP: Convention will last 4 days site.

"We're still ahead of schedule," Miller said. "Almost everything is in place except for chairs and the raised floor. Obviously, a lot of things still need to be covered and decorated."

Workers were sticking white foam plastic stars on red and blue planks that will border the platform.

Also yet to be installed are two huge video screens that will flank either side of the speaker's platform. The screens, each consisting of 49 monitors, were not expected to be put up until next week.

"There are certain things you don't want to get too far ahead with because the longer they are up there the greater the chance to get it messed up," Miller said. "We're comfortably ahead."

Spotlights were put up on the lighting grid high above the convention floor and work continued on the inside of the four television network anchor booths, stationed next to each other on one side of the stadium.

On the opposite side, smaller booths for other broadcast operations were being erected.

And workers were removing seats immediately behind the delegate seating area for private boxes for the families of President Bush and Vice President Quayle.

The four-day convention officially begins Aug. 17 although platform hearings were scheduled to start next week at the George Brown Convention Center in downtown Houston.

Local social studies scores were close to, or above the national average in all grades with the exception of the seventh-grade, where Midland students scored at the 41 percentile.

"Problems with reading may have brought some of the scores down for the seventh-graders," Cummins said. He noted that — other than in the third-grade — local students scored higher than the national average in the upper grades (grades 9 through 12).

Local students' language skills were above the national average in all grades but sixth.

"Students were not able to meet expectations for reading," Cummins said. "This shows us places where we can make additional improvements."

Cummins said he is awaiting a breakdown of district results to get a clearer picture of how Texas students fared on the test.

The NRAPT test was developed by Riverside Publishing Co., which also developed the Iowa Tests of Basic Skills.

tion of operations.

"It will go to day-use-only operation. The reduction is due to low overnight usage (camping)," Waldrip said.

The cutback will save the state $35,000 a year.

In the fiscal year 1991, revenue from the park was $35,582 with 91,920 visitors at a cost of 65 cents per visitor.

The number of overnight visitors was not available.

Of the 135 state parks in Texas, only 11 made money last year, park officials said.

VOLUNTEERING

Open your heart and become a community volunteer.

The Volunteer Center assists more than 90 local agencies with volunteer recruitment and referral. Here are just a few opportunities for you to consider:

■ If you enjoy working with young children, this is the job for you. Junior Achievement needs several volunteers to assist ninth-grade American history students with practical strategies in a fun way. Help them understand the stock market, how to use a bank, and the benefits of staying in school. Call Joy Matejek at 682-4966 to learn more.

■ Texas Department of the Health WIC office needs energetic volunteers to care for children while caseworkers help their parents. Administrative tasks such as answering telephones and filing are available as well. To offer your assistance, call Lenora Sevcik at 682-0185 today.

■ The Permian Basin AIDS Coalition needs assistance with a mailout and general clerical support. To get involved in this vital agency contact Cathryn Jackson at 550-2437 for more information.

■ By volunteering your time to help sixth-grade students understand the basic concepts of the organization and management of a business, you can fulfill your need to correct the misinterpretations students have about business.

Junior Achievement wants you to utilize its materials in a fun, activity-centered manner. Training is available, and the need is great. Contact Joy Matejek at 682-4966 today.

■ 697-HELP... The only number you need to know when you have a question or problem and do not know where to find the answer. Call Information and Referral Midland.

State in brief

■ Group gives parade permit to AIDS activists

HOUSTON — A group planning an anti-Republican protest during the GOP National Convention says it has surrendered its parade permit so AIDS activists can stage their own march.

The All Peoples Congress said it relinquished its Aug. 17 parade permit to ACT UP, an AIDS activist group.

ACT UP had applied to the city for a parade permit during the four-day convention but other groups already had acquired parade rights for each day of the convention. City law provides only one parade permit per day.

The All Peoples Congress was the only non-Republican group to be awarded a permit. The National Vietnam POW Strike Force was awarded a permit for the Sunday before the convention begins.

City officials said the permits were awarded in February.

"We feel like it (AIDS) is a very important issue that must be addressed during this convention," Gloria Rubac, spokeswoman for the All Peoples Congress, said.

■ Appeals court upholds skinheads' convictions

DALLAS — A federal appeals court has upheld the convictions of five white supremacists who vandalized a Dallas synagogue and Jewish community center in 1988.

The 14 judges in the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans were evenly divided over whether jury selection in the case was fair and the convictions should be reversed. The tie means that a 1991 decision affirming the convictions will stand.

Defense attorneys argued that they should have been allowed to question jurors about racial bias and to determine whether or not they were Jewish, Hispanic or black. It was unclear whether any Jewish jurors served on the all-white panel.

In the nine-page opinion handed down Monday, the judges who voted to uphold the convictions said jury selection was proper and that U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders adequately questioned prospective jurors to uncover biases.

■ Union uses convention as bargaining chip

HOUSTON — A contract feud involving city bus drivers could cause problems for officials who are counting on a shuttle service to transport delegates to and from the upcoming Republican National Convention at the Astrodome.

Contract talks between the Metropolitan Transit Authority and the Transport Workers Union Local 260 have halted, and the union's contract has expired.

Although it is illegal in Texas for public employees to strike, that hasn't stopped the union from making threats. And union president David Carrington is promising trouble ahead.

In addition, union sources said earlier this year they would use the prospect of a strike during the convention as a bargaining chip.

"I would hope the convention is not used for that purpose," convention spokesman Joe Fleming told the Houston Chronicle.

The shuttle system is at the heart of the convention's transportation plan, but it was not clear what effect a strike might have on the convention.

Besides city buses, the plan also involves chartered bus companies and their employees. Out of 450 buses a day, about 100 will be Metro buses driven by Metro drivers.

Metro usually has a supply of part-time workers willing to fill in for full-time employees.

But Metro officials apparently do not want to call the union's bluff.

"Metro stands ready to negotiate in good faith any time the union is willing to sit down and talk to us," said Metro spokeswoman Carol Boudreaux.

Lottery officials plan to use recyclable tickets

■ More state news/2D

AUSTIN (AP) — State Comptroller John Sharp said Tuesday that Texas will try using recyclable lottery tickets because of complaints about luckless players littering with their losing tickets.

"We're committed to taking innovative steps to help keep Texas free of lottery litter," said Sharp, who oversees the lottery.

The tickets will be printed on recycled paper and also can be recycled again, said lottery spokesman Steve Levine.

Texas will be the first state to use this type of recyclable instant ticket, according to a letter to Sharp from the ticket manufacturer, Dittler Brothers Inc.

The Texas Lottery will use the recyclable tickets as a pilot project in a holiday season game in December, according to Sharp's office. They will be used in future lottery games if successful, Sharp said.

Success basically will be judged on "consumer acceptance," Levine said. The recyclable tickets, with a duller finish, are "not quite as flashy and fancy," he said.

Jerry Hendrix, executive director of the Austin group Ecology Action, called the idea "outstanding."

"I can't speak for the rest of Texas, but I know Austin has always been really environmentally oriented and they'd be thrilled to death" about such tickets, he said.

A new anti-litter public service campaign also is being developed, Sharp said. People have sent letters complaining about litter generated in conjunction with the lottery, Levine said.

"We've instructed the Lottery's advertising agency to develop a campaign that urges Texans to throw their losing tickets into the trash — or better yet, into the recycling bin," Sharp said.

The Lottery will encourage licensed retailers to provide such bins.

Retailers would have the responsibility of calling someone to recycle the tickets, Levine said. He said printing lottery tickets on recycled paper could stimulate that market.

"You can toss your losing ticket into the recycling bin, and it very well may reappear as a new Texas Lottery ticket somewhere down the line," Sharp said.

Cost of the recyclable tickets to the state is no higher than other tickets, Levine said.

Governor names new chief of staff

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards' chief of staff, Mary Beth Rogers, is leaving and will be replaced by Paul Williams, currently Richards' executive assistant.

A Tuesday statement from Richards' office said Ms. Rogers is leaving effective Aug. 31 "to pursue a writing and teaching venture." Margaret Justus, spokeswoman for Richards, would not give further details about Ms. Rogers' new effort.

"I cannot think of anyone better qualified to lecture and write about public policy than Mary Beth Rogers," Richards said. "She has been invaluable to me as chief of staff, but I understand her desire to move on."

Ms. Rogers has been chief of staff since Richards' term started in January 1991 and was her 1990 general election campaign manager.

We've lowered the price on our most popular premium channels. Something we're still pretty excited about.
Now, if you're a new customer, you'll get HBO, Showtime or The Disney Channel— any two — plus Dimension Cable for just $37.40 a month.
Look at it this way, you'll get hit movies, great concerts, family shows, original programming and more for what you'd probably spend on a couple of pizzas.
For example, coming soon is Boyz N The Hood, Terminator 2: Judgement Day and Naked Gun 2½. Plus Thelma & Louise, Inside the NFL and National Lampoon's European Vacation.
And It's not a limited-time offer.
We're also offering $9.95 connection. Which, unfortunately, is a limiated-time offer.
But you get the idea. New low prices are here to stay. Connection for $9.95 will end soon.
So there you have it. Two more terrific reasons to get Dimension Cable.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your talent for making money will stand you in good stead. Treat your colleagues with consideration; they may have significant influence over the opportunities you are offered. Make it clear to higher-ups that you can work as part of a team when necessary. A real estate deal or securities purchase could bring new wealth early in 1993. Romance flourishes. Consult your mate about a possible relocation next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Loni Anderson, astronaut Neil Armstrong, basketball star Patrick Ewing, singer Samantha Sang.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep your expenses down and your savings up. Changing circumstances may compel you to make a tough choice. Practical tasks will go well so long as you stick to what you know.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Loved ones will be in a joyous mood today. Celebrate their good fortune, but also get on with your own life. The business picture is changing. Adopt new methods and innovative ideas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be able to make an investment now that will provide a quick return. Be certain you know what you are getting into. A young person wants to confide in you. Listen!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let others take the initiative today. Good news arrives concerning friends or relatives living abroad. You meet someone very attractive under somewhat odd circumstances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A choice will not be easy; someone is bound to feel let down or left out. In time, this person will understand why you believe that you must go it alone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Joint financial matters still require an in-depth discussion. Investigative work should go well. Your partner's spending habits may be affecting your peace of mind. Take a firm stand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Find out what is going through your partner's mind — it is your key to planning for the future. Group support can be invaluable. Take the advice of an old friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Give your personal affairs a quick once-over before leaving home. Someone is anxious to talk things through. Travel dates may need changing to accommodate new priorities or personnel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The financial wheels are turning in your head. Your ability to adjust quickly to new circumstances ensures your eventual success. Compromise and tact will improve conditions on the home front.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Behind-the-scenes communications are necessary to smooth out career matters. A relationship based only on physical attraction will fizzle out in time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A new cycle begins today. Pool your resources with those of a romantic or business partner. Spending more time with a teenager will improve your relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A roundabout method works best when dealing with an opinionated person. A former employer suddenly comes to mind; there could be a place for you. Help someone less fortunate.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are highly competitive in the classroom and on the athletic field. They are eager to make their mark on the world and will be highly selective when choosing their friends. Count on these Leos to show great strength in times of crisis. Their determination helps them overcome seemingly impassable obstacles. Born romantics, these lions will date a lot before settling down with their permanent mate. Their good manners and lively conversation make them much-sought-after guests. They will forgive a friend anything except disloyalty.

When you double a slam from greed, just to rake in an extra 50 or 100 points, you may be acutely embarrassed by your avarice—justifiably so, we might add. Just look what happened to poor East on this hand from a duplicate pair championship.

South's initial action can best be described as a mystery wrapped in an enigma. We can only surmise that, because of the bonus scoring for no trump as against a suit, South made the rather strange decision to play in six no trump rather than probe for a possible grand slam in a long suit. Sure of defeating six no trump, East doubled. Suddenly South began to have second thoughts. Certain that East held two quick tricks, South removed to seven spades. If East's winners were in the club suit, seven spades could be laydown when seven no trump was doomed to failure. East's second double was more out of pique than conviction.

South's decision to run had an additional advantage—West was now on opening lead. The defender thought long and hard about the choice of opening lead, but there really was nothing to point to one suit over another. West finally decided that there was more chance of finding partner's tricks in a suit in which West was short, and chose a diamond.

When dummy hit the table, declarer breathed a sigh of relief. Trumps were drawn, the ace and king of clubs were cashed for two heart discards, and 13 tricks rolled in.

Had East passed six no trump, a heart lead would have netted the defenders the first five tricks and 400 points. The total swing on the deal was 2,870 points.

Parton donates $500,000 to schools in home county

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn. — Dolly Parton has donated $500,000 to improve public education and keep kids in school in her native Sevier County.

Parton

"This is just great," said Jack Parton, Sevier County Schools superintendent and a distant relative of the performer. "It will unlock some doors for our schoolchildren."

The contribution, announced Monday, came through the entertainer's Dollywood Foundation, which raises money from annual spring concerts at the Dollywood theme park in Pigeon Forge. Sevierville is a few miles north of Pigeon Forge in eastern Tennessee.

Parton's first donation to the schools was in 1988 for a "buddy program" in which pairs of seventh and eighth graders were organized to help each other get through high school. If both in each pair graduated, they got $1,000.

In May, the payout to the first buddies totaled $237,000. This year, Ms. Parton pledged $250,000 for the program.

The additional half-million dollar grant will go toward a special school for students at risk of dropping out; high school computer labs; and scholarships among other programs.

EDGARTOWN, Mass. — An invitation to appear as an extra in a film with Michael J. Fox brought $2,300. A sailboat ride with Walter Cronkite fetched $4,000. Golf and lunch with ex-Boston Celtic great John Havlicek raised $1,400.

The occasion was the 14th annual Possible Dreams Auction fund-raiser for Martha's Vineyard Community Services, a consortium of social agencies that serve the island's year-round residents.

The auction Monday night raised a record $80,000.

Many of the Vineyard's celebrity summer visitors traditionally contribute or bid on the items and services.

Columnist Art Buchwald auctioned off the bowler hat he was wearing, which he said was a gift from former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Other premiums offered: a behind-the-scenes visit to the set of "Sesame Street," including an audience with Big Bird; a private discussion of the Caspar Weinberger indictment with Arthur L. Liman, chief counsel of the U.S. Senate's Iran-Contra Committee; and dinner with journalist Mike Wallace and novelist William Styron.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Actor George Lindsey figures the image of him with a beanie cap on his head and a rag in his hip pocket will outlive him.

"I guess they'll bury me in that Goober costume," said Lindsey, who played the part on the 1960s TV show "Mayberry RFD."

"It's been a combination curse and blessing for people to always think of me as Goober," Lindsey told the Charleston Daily Mail in an interview published Tuesday. "It's enabled me to do a lot of things, and I'm pleased to be a part of American culture. But on the other hand, some casting people can't get beyond that Goober image."

Lindsey, who has refused to disclose his age to interviewers, now stars in the syndicated television variety show, "Hee Haw," produced in Nashville, where he lives.

LONDON — Queen Mother Elizabeth got her usual royal birthday treatment when she turned 92 on Tuesday: loving greetings and best wishes from children and adults, pipers and an Irish wolfhound.

Queen Mum

The annual festivities at her home at Clarence House in central London began when the gates swung open at 11:15 a.m.

Some of her fans camped out all night in St. James's Park for a glimpse and to offer gifts of flowers, photographs, books and cards.

The band of the Irish Guards led by Malachy, the regiment's canine mascot, marched past playing "Happy Birthday." The smiling Queen Mother, dressed in turquoise and gold, spent some minutes chatting to the throng.

The Queen Mum, as she is better known, is mother of Queen Elizabeth II and widow of George VI, who reigned from 1937 to 1952.

BRANSON, Mo. — Singer Johnny PayCheck, trying to make a comeback since he got out of prison, said Tuesday he's ready to settle down in the burgeoning country music mecca of Branson and will take over a theater here.

PayCheck said he signed a five-year deal with Vol Inc. to perform twice a day, six days a week starting next April.

PayCheck, 54, a native of Greenfield, Ohio, was convicted in 1986 of aggravated assault, tampering with evidence and using a handgun in the shooting of a man at a bar in Highland County, Ohio. The victim was wounded in the head.

Annual picnic season nearly over

By Carol Deegan

NEW YORK (AP) — Eating outdoors can be one of life's greatest pleasures — whether it's a picnic at the beach or dining in your own backyard.

The art of picnicking began in the 18th century. A "picnic" meant a meal at which each guest contributed a different course — much like today's potluck supper. However, by the late 18th century, picnics had a new meaning: people eating cold and hot dishes outside.

In the 19th century, picnics became an opportunity for respectable Victorian ladies and gentlemen to mingle with one another.

Even into the 20th century, picnics have continued to evolve as the traditional menu has been expanded to include new — and sometimes unusual — dishes.

You'll find plenty of suggestions for outdoor dining on the patio, at the park, or the beach in Louise Pickford's "Picnics: Outdoor Dining for the Patio, Park, and Beach" (Meredith Press, $19.95), and in Jeanette P. Egan's "Picnics" (HP Books, Price Stern Sloan, $8.95).

Pickford's colorful, 112-page book is divided into four sections: Picnics to Go, Food with Fire, Moveable Feasts and Dining Alfresco. It features more than 90 recipes with 60 photographs by Marie-Louise Avery.

The recipes are fairly exotic: shrimp and monkfish kebabs with coconut salsa, Thai-style shrimp eggs, gorgonzola and asparagus quiche, lemon cheesecake with summer berry sauce.

However, there are recipes for more traditional picnic dishes such as homemade lemonade, spiced apple and blueberry muffins and Southern chicken wings with spicy barbecue sauce.

Egan divides her "Picnics" into six chapters: About Picnics, Spring, Summer, Fall, Winter and All Seasons. About Picnics provides information on essential picnic equipment and food safety. The following chapters contain recipes suitable for holidays, picnicking at the beach or at the park, backyard cookouts, brunches and breakfasts.

What is her favorite time of the year for a picnic?

"I particularly love picnics in the fall," she says, "because the leaves are so many beautiful colors, the air is crisp and the leaves crunch under your feet. But I like eating outdoors anytime — even in winter. Hot, hearty soups and beverages can make winter a festive seasoning for picnicking."

"Picnics: Outdoor Dining for the Patio, Park, and Beach" by Louise Pickford contains more than 90 recipes, including the following for Homemade Lemonade and Thai-Style Shrimp Eggs.

HOMEMADE LEMONADE

6 large lemons
6 whole cloves
5 cups boiling water
2 cups sugar
Juice of 2 lemons
1 bottle still or sparking mineral water
Lemon slices
Mint leaves
Ice cubes

Wash and dry the lemons and cut into thick slices. Place in a large bowl with the cloves and pour in the boiling water. Leave to infuse for 24 hours.

Drain and discard the lemon slices and cloves. Place the infused liquid in a large pan, add the sugar and heat gently until dissolved. Bring to a boil and simmer for 10 minutes until the liquid is thick and syrupy. Remove from the heat and cool.

Add the fresh lemon juice and pour into a screw-top bottle. Chill.

To serve, put 1 to 2 tablespoons lemon syrup into each glass. Fill glass with still or sparking water. Garnish with lemon slices and mint leaves, if desired. Add ice cubes. Refrigerate remaining lemon syrup.

THAI-STYLE SHRIMP EGGS

6 small eggs
1 pound peeled shrimp
4 scallions, trimmed and chopped
¾ cup fresh white bread crumbs
1 small clove garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon chopped fresh cilantro
2 teaspoons soy sauce
1 teaspoon grated fresh gingerroot
FOR THE COATING:
All-purpose flour
1 egg, lightly beaten
½ cup to ¾ cup sesame seeds
Oil for deep-frying

Boil the eggs for 12 minutes, plunge immediately into cold water. Cool before peeling.

Puree the shrimp in a food processor. Add the scallions, bread crumbs, garlic, cilantro, soy sauce and ginger; puree until smooth.

Form the mixture into six balls. Flatten each one out to a 4-inch round. Place a hard-cooked egg in the center of each round, then press the mixture around the egg to completely enclose it. Coat lightly in a little flour, dip into the beaten egg and then into the sesame seeds, until well coated. Chill for 15 minutes.

Heat 4 inches of oil in a heavy-based pan to a temperature of 350 degrees F. Deep-fry the shrimp eggs in batches, for 2 to 3 minutes each, until lightly golden. Drain on paper towels. Cool and then chill. Makes 6 servings.

Safety tips keep picnics healthier

Associated Press

You've found an old blanket, filled the picnic basket full of tempting treats, and are ready to head off for a delicious picnic.

Don't hit the open road without properly packing and storing your picnic foods. Among the food safety tips to remember:

■ Ice coolers ensure proper temperatures and keep food out of direct sunlight. Pack one with food; the other with beverages. You can use a picnic basket or hamper for foods that don't need refrigeration.

■ Reusable plastic ice packs placed in the cooler will keep cold foods cold. If you use ice, be sure to leave the ice cooler in the shade to help keep the ice from melting so quickly.

■ Pack hot foods in a thermos and place the thermos in a separate container. To pack a hot casserole, bake it in a heavy dish and then wrap the dish in foil and several layers of newspaper. An insulated carrier will keep the food hot for several hours.

■ When packing your picnic basket, place the heaviest items on the bottom. This will reinforce your basket and protect delicate items from being crushed. Place the lightest items on top, including paper napkins, plates and cups for easy access.

■ Don't forget to pack the following: can opener, bottle opener, sharp knife with a cover, corkscrew, serving spoons, salt, pepper and dinnerware-silverware. Also take along a tablecloth, flashlight, first aid kit, a thermos of fresh water to rinse reusable utensils and plates and a trash bag for cleanup.

Picnic recipes named best

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A combination of marinated and grilled steak, tomatoes, hard-boiled eggs and capers, was selected as the grand-prize winning recipe in the Hand-Me-Down National Picnic Recipe Contest. Linda Speranza of Phoenix won the $1,000 grand prize for her recipe for Steak Salad Supreme.

The competition, sponsored by Handi-Wrap brand plastic film, called for favorite traditional picnic recipes handed down by family and friends. Category winners were:

■ Appetizer: Virginia Alton of St. Louis, Mo., Artichoke Appetizer Pie.

■ Salad: Harper Clark of Cape Coral, Fla., Aunt Emm's French-Italian Potato Salad.

■ Main Dish: Arlene Deline of Menomonie, Wis., Mini Salad Burgers.

■ Dessert: Shirley Fleming of Sacramento, Calif., Chocolate Sunshine Cake.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

If it looks like cookies, and tastes like cookies...

By Linda Anderson

Leave it to my kids to spot something new on the supermarket shelves. While cruising down the cereal/breakfast food aisle, they spotted something that looked suspiciously like itty, bitty cookies, and of course we had to try them.

Anderson

IncrediBites from Betty Crocker are actually "Bite-size Granola Sandwiches," according to the label. That means they are little sandwiches made of two layers of granola bar and a sweet middle, either vanilla creme, chocolate or peanut butter.

We bought a box of vanilla creme IncrediBites to check out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

A 7.5-ounce box of IncrediBites, containing six pouches of a dozen or so cookies, cost $1.79. I've been hearing about over-packaging being a problem because it causes so much trash, and I wonder why manufacturers still do so much of it. I guess the theory is that these little individual pouches are easier to pack in lunch boxes — but isn't that why Tupperware was born?

Anyway, back to the taste test.

According to label information, "New!" IncrediBites are "a delicious new snack your whole family will love. IncrediBites combines crispy granola and tasty, creamy fillings — all in one bite that tastes incredible! It's the perfect take-along snack for lunches or anytime!"

The nutrition label revealed that each single-serving pouch contains 170 calories, 2 grams of protein, 24 grams of carbohydrates, 7 grams of fat (that's 63 calories from fat), no cholesterol and 180 mg sodium.

The taste-testers' verdicts were almost as vanilla as the IncrediBites' filling. One of the younger testers loved IncrediBites, one didn't, and all the adults decided that while IncrediBites were pleasant enough, they probably wouldn't go out of their way to buy some.

IncrediBites are sweet, like cookies; low in nutrition, like cookies; and creme-filled, like some cookies. I still can't figure out why they were on the cereal aisle...

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Give grilled burgers Italian flavor

Associated Press

Transform plain burgers into burgers Italiano with the addition of strips of pepper and mozzarella or provolone cheese. One pound of ground beef will yield four ½-inch thick burgers. For juicy burgers, handle beef as little as possible. Flattening burgers with a spatula will make them dry.

GRILLED PEPPER BURGERS

1 pound 80 percent lean ground beef
Salt and pepper, as desired
½ cup short, thin green bell pepper strips
½ cup short, thin red or yellow bell pepper strips
1 small clove garlic
¼ teaspoon dried oregano leaves
1½ teaspoons olive oil
⅛ teaspoon salt
4 onion rolls, toasted
4 slices mozzarella or provolone cheese (1 ounce each)

Shape ground beef into four ½-inch thick patties. Place patties on grid over medium coals. Grill 10 minutes for medium (160 degrees F), or to desired doneness, turning once. Season with salt and pepper, as desired, after turning. Meanwhile, cook peppers, garlic and oregano in hot oil in a small, nonstick frying pan over medium-high heat. Stir frequently until crisp-tender, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat, stir in salt. Place burgers on roll bottoms, top each with a slice of cheese and an equal amount of pepper mixture. Cover with roll tops. Makes 4 servings.

Chef highlights ethnic diversity of Hawaiian food

'A Taste of Hawaii' recipes celebrate island's diversity

By Anne Byrn
N.Y. Times News Service

When most of us think of Hawaiian food, we envision poi, pineapple and drinks with little umbrellas.

That may be typical for tourists, but luaus are hardly what the average Hawaiian stages at dinner time, says Jean-Marie Josselin, a chef on the island of Kauai and author of "A Taste of Hawaii" (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, $35).

Josselin's fresh, multicultural approach to Hawaiian cooking is exercised daily at his restaurant, A Pacific Cafe in Kapaa, on Kauai's northern shore. Here he offers new twists on this exciting Pacific Rim cuisine — pesto sauce with macadamia nuts and cilantro, papaya and cucumber salsa with grilled fish, a salad of rice noodles and Asian seasonings with chicken. The book's 125 recipes are examples of how Josselin fuses flavors from different countries.

During the past two centuries, Hawaii has attracted the English, French, Russians, Americans, Chinese, Japanese, Koreans, Samoans, Africans, Filipinos, Puerto Ricans, Spanish, Portuguese and people of Southeastern Asia, he explains. They have left their marks on its languages, religions, art and food.

"In no state are there so many ethnic groups present in such a small area," says Josselin, 34, who was born in France and came to Hawaii five years ago with the Rosewood Hotel group.

Josselin thought that these culinary contributions were untapped. And he was dissatisfied with the quality of ingredients available. So he joined 12 other island chefs in promoting what they call "Hawaii Regional Cuisine." They worked with local farmers to grow such products as tomatoes and zucchini so they didn't have to be imported.

And they found, among other things, that the islands' volcanic soil improves the flavor and speeds up the growing time of some crops. Zucchini, for example, is ready for harvest in six weeks.

Josselin's wife, Sophronia, is a native Hawaiian, so he's careful not to overlook some of the indigenous ingredients in favor of trendier alternatives. Taro root, for example, is the basis of the bland island porridge called poi. While Hawaiians still eat it, they usually purchase it ready-made. He doesn't include a recipe for poi in the book, favoring strips of taro root stir-fried with other vegetables and served with a Chinese-style black bean sauce.

"Hawaiians are very proud of their culture. Some private schools teach the native language, so it makes sense that their food, too, is undergoing something of a revival," he says. "This is good. It keeps us aware of what Hawaii was then and what it is today."

The dazzling color photographs in Josselin's book were staged on a Kauai beach, not in a New York studio. And they were shot in a nightmarish one-day session.

But the end product is sure to be award-winning. And the recipes' workability? Most ingredients are easily obtained in mainland supermarkets, and if you can't find the Hawaiian fish, he suggests accessible substitutes, such as Gulf red snapper for onaga.

The following recipes are from Jean-Marie Josselin's "A Taste of Hawaii."

GRILLED SWORDFISH WITH ASPARAGUS-SESAME VINAIGRETTE

4 7- ounce swordfish steaks
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup olive oil, divided
32 thin asparagus spears
2 teaspoons red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon rice vinegar
¼ cup reduced-sodium soy sauce
2 teaspoons black sesame seeds (available in Oriental markets, or in Asian sections of farmers' markets)
2 teaspoons white sesame seeds
6 basil leaves, cut into julienne strips
½ teaspoon minced garlic (1 small clove)
1 tablespoon roasted sesame oil
1 cup bean sprouts
1 cup blanched snow peas, cut into julienne strips
4 basil sprigs, for garnish

Marinate swordfish in a mixture of salt, pepper and ½ cup olive oil for at least 15 minutes.

Blanch asparagus for 3 minutes in boiling water with a pinch of salt. Remove and plunge into ice water. When the asparagus is cold, drain on a paper towel.

Combine vinegars, soy sauce, sesame seeds, basil, garlic, remaining olive oil and sesame oil in a wide, shallow mixing bowl. Mix well and add asparagus, bean sprouts and snow peas to the vinaigrette. Keep refrigerated until ready to serve.

Prepare the grill. Drain swordfish. Grill fish for 3 minutes on each side or until still moist on the inside.

Divide vegetables among four plates and place a swordfish steak on top. Garnish with sprig of basil. Makes 4 servings. Preparation time: 25 minutes. Cooking time: 6 minutes.

Per serving: 632 calories, 46 grams fat, 77 milligrams cholesterol, 669 milligrams sodium.

MACADAMIA AND PINEAPPLE RICE PILAF

1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1½ cups long-grain white rice
2 teaspoons minced garlic
¼ cup diced red bell pepper
¼ cup diced yellow bell pepper
3 cups chicken stock
½ cup golden raisins
½ cup chopped roasted macadamia nuts, preferably unsalted
1 sage leaf
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup chopped fresh cilantro
1 cup diced pineapple

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

In a flameproof casserole over medium heat, melt butter and add rice. Stir until butter coats the rice. Add garlic and stir for a few seconds, but not long enough to let the rice change color. Add red and yellow peppers and cook for a few seconds, again not long enough to let the peppers change color. Add stock and bring mixture gently to a boil. Add raisins, macadamias, sage and salt. Cover, place in oven, and bake about 18 minutes.

Remove dish from oven and let rest about 10 minutes. Add cilantro and pineapple. Season if necessary and serve at once. Makes 4 servings. Preparation time: 15 minutes. Cooking time: 20 minutes.

Per serving: 510 calories, 17 grams fat, 8 milligrams cholesterol, 896 milligrams sodium.

CILANTRO PESTO

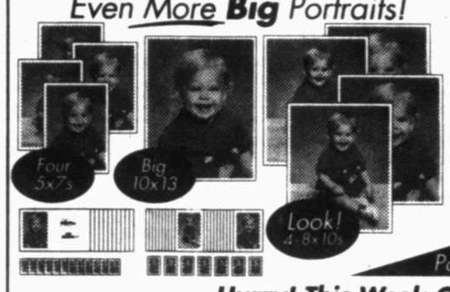

1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped macadamia nuts
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
2 tablespoons fresh cilantro leaves
2 tablespoons olive oil

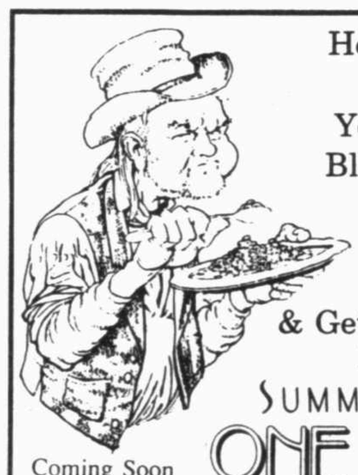

In blender, combine lemon juice and macadamia nuts and process to a light paste. Add garlic and cilantro and blend. Increase speed and add olive oil.

Add a tablespoon to the top of grilled fish or chicken. Makes 4 servings. Preparation time: 10 minutes.

Per serving: 93 calories, 10 grams fat, no cholesterol, less than 1 milligram sodium.

DEAR ABBY

'COPS' isn't robbing people of their rights

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As a recent European immigrant to the United States, I am shocked and disturbed by the television series "COPS."

Van Buren

Is there not a law within your Constitution that is supposed to protect a citizen's right to privacy? And isn't a person presumed "innocent until proven guilty"?

When police officers burst into a person's home with a television crew to arrest suspects, clearly the rights of the suspects are being violated. And not only the rights of the suspects, but the rights of their families and visitors, too. Where do we draw the line? What right do we have to intrude and expose their misfortune? And what about the children being subjected to public humiliation?

It seems to me that in a nation that claims to be in the forefront of Western democracies, it's paradoxical that a television show like "COPS" is allowed to air. Before the eyes of millions of viewers, some people who are merely suspects are shown being arrested, and denied their constitutional rights.

I would appreciate your opinion, and the opinions of your readers concerning such television programs. — CONCERNED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CONCERNED: I checked with the publicist for "COPS," which is produced by Fox Broadcasting, and was assured that the people who are on the show have signed releases. If they do not sign releases, and that segment is to be aired, then the faces are "digitalized" so that the people cannot be identified. In the case of minors, parents or legal guardians sign their releases.

I then checked with Ramona Ripston, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California, who assured me that because the production company has the signed releases, it appears that the show is doing nothing illegal or unconstitutional, and no one's rights are being violated.

DEAR ABBY: Your correspondent signed "Offended Old Maid in Lincoln, Neb.," has a bigger problem than an "offensive" limerick, which I thought was cute. To refresh your memory:

There was an old maid in Duluth
Who wept when she thought of her youth
Remembering the chances
She missed at school dances
And once in a telephone booth.

If "Old Maid's" father left home 50 years ago, her siblings were old enough to have been on their own for the last 35 years! She says she and her sister are "holding down the fort."

What fort? Their mother is dead, and "Old Maid" is in her 60s, so how can she blame her unmarried state on the fact that she raised her siblings 50 years ago? Give me a break!

Instead of apologizing for that limerick, you should have told her to get on with her life. She sounds like she's living in the past and enjoying her martyrdom.

One doesn't have to be married to be fulfilled. — C.J. IN RAINIER, ORE.

Berries star in a red, white, blue dessert

Associated Press

The following recipe for Red, White and Blueberry Shortcake features a colorful arrangement of fresh berries topped with a wheat cake and creamy cheese and strawberry sauces.

RED, WHITE AND BLUEBERRY SHORTCAKE

1 recipe Wheat Quick Mix (recipe below)
⅔ cup non-fat milk or whole milk
1 recipe Creamy Vanilla Sauce (recipe below)
1 recipe Strawberry Sauce (recipe below)
1 pint (2 cups) fresh strawberries, sliced
½ pint (1 cup) fresh blueberries

FOR THE WHEAT QUICK MIX: Sift together 1 cup unbleached flour, ⅛ cup baking powder, 2 teaspoons salt and ¼ cup sugar. Stir in 3 cups whole-wheat flour. Cut ½ cup (1 stick) butter into dry ingredients with pastry cutter until butter is the size of small peas. Use mix as needed. The mix can be refrigerated up to 2 months.

FOR THE SHORTCAKE: Combine 2 cups of the Wheat Quick Mix with the ⅔ cup milk until just blended. Roll out dough to ½-inch thickness. Using stencil, cut out six star-shaped biscuits. Place on greased baking sheet. Bake in a 400-degree oven for 15 minutes.

FOR THE CREAMY VANILLA SAUCE: In a blender, combine 2 cups ricotta or requeson cheese, ⅓ cup non-fat yogurt, ⅓ cup sugar, and 1 tablespoon vanilla. Blend until smooth. Store in the refrigerator. Makes about 2½ cups.

FOR THE STRAWBERRY SAUCE: In a blender, puree 1 cup frozen strawberries, 1 cup frozen raspberries, 1 tablespoon powdered sugar and 1 tablespoon lemon juice to make a smooth consistency. Cover and chill. Makes about 2 cups sauce.

TO ASSEMBLE: Arrange fresh sliced strawberries on six individual serving plates. Cut wheat biscuits in half; place bottom half of biscuit on top of each strawberry serving. Place generous spoonfuls (about ¼ cup each) of Creamy Vanilla and Strawberry Sauces atop each biscuit half. Top with remaining biscuit half; sprinkle with fresh blueberries. Serve with additional sauces. Makes 6 servings.

Speed up time of grilling chicken

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

If you like the charcoal flavor of barbecued chicken, but hate the wait, use your microwave oven to speed cooking along. Cook the chicken until it just starts to cook on the outside, then transfer it to the grill to bask in the glow of the coals. Remember this technique when you're cooking for a crowd.

HOT BARBECUE-STYLE CHICKEN

½ cup ketchup
¼ cup maple-flavored syrup
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon chili powder
1 clove garlic, minced
Several dashes bottled hot pepper sauce
1 2½- to 3-pound broiler-fryer chicken, cut up

For sauce, in a 2-cup glass measure combine ketchup, maple-flavored syrup, mustard, Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice, chili powder, garlic and hot pepper sauce. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 2 to 3 minutes or until bubbly, stirring once. Set aside.

Rinse chicken and pat dry. In a 12x7½x2-inch microwave-safe baking dish, arrange chicken pieces, skin side down, with the meaty portions toward the edges of the dish. Cover with waxed paper. Cook on high for 10 minutes, giving the dish a half-turn after 5 minutes.

Brush chicken with sauce. Grill on an uncovered grill over medium coals for 10 to 15 minutes or until no pink remains.

Cook any remaining sauce, uncovered, on high for 1 to 2 minutes or until heated through. Pass sauce with chicken. Makes 6 servings.

Vinaigrette dresses up salad

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

A homemade no-oil vinaigrette dresses up this easy marinated salad. To give the dressing extra body without adding fat, you stir a little flour into the vinegar mixture and cook until it thickens slightly.

To cut the salad preparation time, buy pre-cut fresh vegetables or substitute a thawed 16-ounce package of frozen broccoli, cauliflower and carrots.

MIXED VEGETABLE SALAD

2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup red wine vinegar
¼ cup water
2 cups broccoli flowerets
2 cups cauliflower flowerets
1 small onion, chopped
2 tablespoons sliced pimiento, drained

For dressing, in a small saucepan stir together sugar, all-purpose flour, dry mustard, salt and pepper. Add vinegar and water. Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir for 1 minute more. Cool.

In a medium mixing bowl combine broccoli, cauliflower, onion and pimiento. Pour dressing over vegetables; toss gently to coat. Cover and chill for 4 to 24 hours. Makes 4 servings.

Slimmer Newton moves to guard

Former Cowboy tackle sheds 70 pounds

Associated Press

AUSTIN — No need to put out an all-points bulletin for Nate Newton: he's still anchoring the Dallas Cowboys' offensive line.

Only these days, he's minus some 70 pounds and playing guard instead of tackle.

When the Cowboys played the Houston Oilers on Saturday (if you were in Japan it was Sunday), Newton was missing from his starting right tackle spot.

The Cowboys' training camp phenom Erik Williams, a 6-foot-6, 319-pounder from Central State, Ohio, has been given that job. Williams, a third-round pick in 1991, has been impressive at the position and blocked well against the Oilers.

Newton was shuttled to starting left guard in place of Kevin Gogan and that's where he turned in a creditable game against the Oilers.

The biggest stir in the 1992 Cowboys training camp has been caused by the missing 70 pounds. The missing pounds have been trimmed from Newton's body, which according to local legend once swelled to nearly 400 pounds.

Because Newton lost weight, the Cowboys were able to squeeze Williams into the lineup.

Meet the new Newton, all 290 pounds or so of him. He's faster and quicker. But he might not be as strong.

Newton doesn't want to talk much about his weight. After all, he's the guy who blew a $35,000 bonus last year because he exceeded 330 pounds when he reported to training camp.

"I like to talk about winning, not diets," Newton said. "I'll do what it takes to help the team."

Newton took the weight off by avoiding alcohol and fried foods of any kind. Unfortunately, the 30-year-old Newton didn't have an incentive in his contract for reporting under 300 pounds.

"I feel a little weak at times but I'll get my strength back," said Newton, who had been ordered to report at 310 pounds.

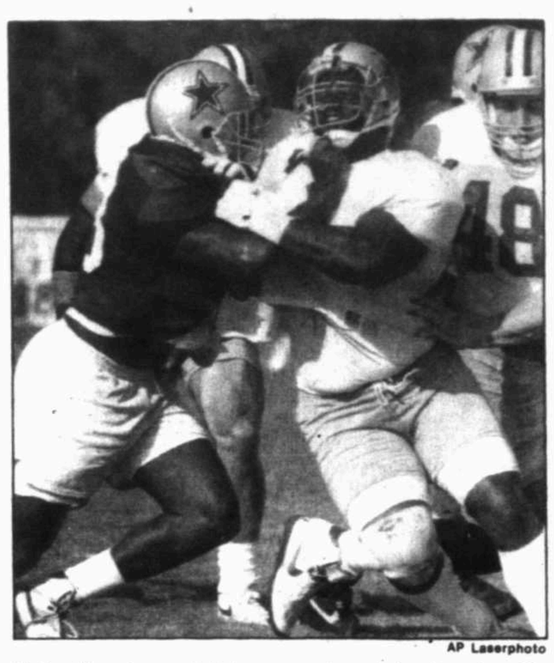

Coach Jimmy Johnson has been impressed with Newton's weight reduction.

"He's in tremendous condition and I think it will help his endurance during games later in the season," Johnson said. "I thought he got tired at times last year in December."

Offensive line coach Tony Wise said he was worried about Newton's strength, although he admitted "he looks 10 years younger. He's moving much better."

Newton is basking in his new, slim celebrity status.

"I'm an example to other fat people that they, too, can lose weight," said Newton, who no longer sneaks pizza into his room.

■ Cuba hammers out a 6-1 baseball victory of the U.S. team.

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Forget about baseball's gold medal — just give it to Cuba. The U.S. team has the better question: how can anybody ever beat these guys?

The Americans played their best game of the Olympic tournament Tuesday against mighty Cuba, and all they had to show for it were tears and another loss, knocking them out of gold-medal contention.

Victor Mesa's two-run homer broke open the game in the sixth and his two-run single put the finishing touches on a 6-1 victory that put Cuba (8-0) in the gold-medal game Wednesday against Taiwan (6-2).

The United States came closer, but still came up short of a miracle.

"To beat Cuba, you've got to play perfect and get some breaks," third baseman Phil Nevin said, sniffling as he fought back tears. "We were near-perfect and we didn't get the breaks."

The combination added up to no silver or gold for the United States (5-3), which plays Japan (5-3) for the bronze.

The Americans once again proved the Cubans' biggest challenge — Cuba's 9-6 victory over the United States in their round-robin game last Wednesday was its closest call of the tournament.

But the Cubans' power turned the game around once again.

BARCELONA, Spain — Cubans, Cubans, everywhere Cubans. Whatever happened to those good old bad guys from the Soviet Union?

It seems like every time America turns around at the Summer Olympics, it runs headlong into a Cuban.

The U.S. baseball team ran into a bunch of them Tuesday night and the result was almost inevitable, a 6-1 loss in the semifinals, and now Team USA plays Japan for the bronze medal Wednesday. Cuba meets Taiwan for the gold.

Larry Donald took an old-fashioned beating from Cuban world champion Roberto Balado in the super heavyweight division, losing 10-4 in the quarterfinals.

"It's going to get tougher," said 112-pound teammate Tim Austin, who won his bout and faces Raul Gonzalez of Cuba in the semifinals Friday.

Montell Griffin ran headlong into someone, too. A German world champion. And it cost him. A controversial 3-point penalty for butting in the final round made him a loser.

And now, America is down to just three fighters, guaranteeing its lowest medal total since 1956.

The U.S. women's volleyball team beat the Netherlands 15-11, 11-15, 15-8, 15-7, advancing to the semifinals against ... you guessed it, Cuba.

And the undefeated U.S. women's basketball team looks like it's headed for a showdown with Cuba, for the gold medal. The U.S. women meet the Unified Team, and Cuba plays China in the semifinals Wednesday night with the final scheduled for Friday.

The American women had won 42 straight games in major international competition when they were beaten by Cuba, 86-81, in the semifinals of the Pan American Games last summer in Havana.

Small cities could lose teams, Tagliabue says

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Several smaller cities would lose their NFL teams if full free agency were implemented in professional football, commissioner Paul Tagliabue testified Tuesday.

Buffalo, New Orleans and Cincinnati "would have trouble surviving" in a league with less restrictive free agency, Tagliabue said in his third day as a witness in antitrust action brought against the league by eight players.

The commissioner also said Green Bay and San Diego would have problems "to a lesser degree" if players were allowed to change teams after their contracts expired.

Another small market team, Kansas City, would not be affected as much because of the wealth of owner Lamar Hunt, Tagliabue said.

Tagliabue's statements came in response to questions from players' attorney Jim Quinn about teams in smaller markets being less successful on the field.

The players contend that teams such as Green Bay, which has struggled in recent years, could improve itself under a free-agent system by signing better players. The owners say free agency would upset the competitive balance in the league, partly because teams in larger cities would sign star players.

Quinn said data the NFL gave him shows the seven small market teams were more profitable in 1990 than the seven large market teams. Buffalo, Cincinnati, Green Bay, Indianapolis, Kansas City, New Orleans and San Diego averaged $8 million in operating profits in 1990, while the teams in Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and San Francisco made $2.5 million.

Tagliabue said 1990 was an "aberrational" year, because television revenues increased by $9 million per team, benefiting small markets more than larger ones.

Tagliabue concluded his testimony Tuesday after spending more than 18 hours on the stand.

The commissioner introduced data which showed player costs rising 444 percent from 1970 to 1989. At the same time, operating revenues rose 345 percent.

"The player costs have gone up 4½ times while revenues have gone up 3½ times," he said.

Earlier, attorneys for the players emphasized that franchise values had increased 440 percent over the same period.

New York Giants general manager George Young followed Tagliabue on the witness stand, and said the right of first refusal system is important to the continuity of a team. Under this system, a restricted player without a contract cannot move to a new team unless his old team agrees and gets compensation.

"You can't have a bus station with all players coming and going," Young said. "In order to have a good team, you have to function as a unit. If you have a bus station, players don't get to know each other."

Young said it took the Giants several years to develop good players such as Joe Morris, Phil Simms and Pepper Johnson. Young's team won two Super Bowls.

The league dropped several people from its witness list, including Toronto Blue Jays pitcher Jack Morris. Others who will not testify, according to attorneys for the players, are Miami coach Don Shula, Denver Broncos owner Pat Bowlen, Washington Redskins general manager Charlie Casserly and New York Jets president Steve Gutman.

Lee spikers set midnight workout

Volleyball starts at Midland Lee Sunday (Aug. 9) at midnight when the Lady Rebels take to the court for their first workout of the season.

Lee begins two-a-day practices on Monday (Aug. 10) with all players hitting the floor from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. each day. The varsity works out from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., then the junior varsity moves in from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Varsity players have their final practice from 3:30 p.m. until 5:30 p.m.

Physicals will be conducted on Aug. 6, and equipment is to be issued on Aug. 7. No players will be eligible to practice without a completed physical.

Midland team falls

WACO — Midland National fell out of the Senior League state baseball tournament here Tuesday with a 10-9 loss to Austin Northwest.

It was the second loss of the tournament for the Midland team, eliminating them from further competition, but they went down hard, carrying the game to nine innings before losing.

Midland National used three pitchers in the game with Lance Watters, Mark Holly and Sammy Alvarado.

The Midlanders lost both games played in the tournament, losing in the first round by a 13-5 margin to the Houston Colt .45s.

Ditka likes what he sees in Spellman

Associated Press

NFL Camps

CHICAGO — Chicago Bears rookie Alonzo Spellman is just a few weeks into his NFL career and already being compared to the man he's expected to someday replace, former All-Pro defensive lineman Dan Hampton.

The comparison is high praise on any scale, but considering the source this time was Bears coach Mike Ditka, it's immense. Hampton, the consumate Bears lineman, retired in 1990 after 12 stellar seasons, most of them under Ditka.

"It feels great for Coach to say something like that about me. I just have to live up to it," said Spellman, a defensive lineman from Ohio State and the Bears' top draft pick this year.

Ditka, usually frugal with praise, almost gushes when talking about Spellman.

"I think Spellman is a similar kind of player inside as Dan was," Ditka said. "If he can ever use all that talent, boy, he's going to be a good football player. He's going to be exciting."

Physically, Spellman has everything. He's 6-foot-4 and 280 pounds with body fat under 6 percent. The speed, quickness, big hands and long arms that usually mark someone as a potential great are also all there.

Personnel director Bill Tobin thinks Spellman, who left college a as junior, would have been the first pick overall if he had stayed at Ohio State.

Ditka thinks Spellman can play tackle or end, just as Hampton did.

"He's green and he's learning, but every day you see him do something a little bit better," Ditka said.

Even Spellman envisions one day ranking among the league's best.

"My technique is nowhere near as good as theirs' right now, but I feel my physical talent is in the same category," he said. "When my technique catches my physical talents, it's going to be great and I can't wait until that day comes."

Right now, Spellman is playing behind second-year man Chris Zorich at William Perry's right defensive tackle spot. Perry, a contact holdout, has asked to be traded. The Bears are trying to find an interested club.

"Hopefully by the end of the season I will be able to break into the starting lineup," Spellman said. "I know I have to be patient. But I'm not a patient person and it's hard for me to sit back and wait for things to happen."

That impatience has Spellman jumping offside in practice.

"I'm just overanxious," he said. "You're in a game and really fired up ... you want to go ..."

Spellman is learning technique at the team's summer training camp here from coaches and players, including Pro Bowl defensive end Richard Dent.

"He said, 'That's a pretty boy stance, but that's not going to do the job,'" Spellman said of Dent. "Then he showed me how to do it and said, 'It doesn't look as good, but it works.'"

Another important factor is a lineman's first step.

"If you don't have a really good step, it hurts," Spellman said. "Some guys don't have such a good first step but their upper body strength compensates for that. For me, that first step is pretty critical. That's what I'm working on.

Spellman prefers the play end, but is willing to try tackle.

"Inside everything happens real fast," he said. "At the end position you have to slow your pace down a little bit."

Vikings

Holdout quarterback Rich Gannon is still getting support from his teammates, including receiver Cris Carter, who missed a week of camp before signing.

"My holdout was different than Rich's," said Carter. "We both had to decide what was most important. I expedited the process on my contract because I felt I was at the point where I needed to come in to help the team. I don't think Rich is at that point, in his mind. He stays in great shape and he was here for all the minicamps, so he already has a handle on the offense.

"I wouldn't call it an emergency that he needs to be here, but pretty soon, it will be."

Without Gannon, the Vikings' offense continues to be directed by Sean Salisbury, who hasn't taken a regular-season snap in two years as Minnesota's third-stringer. Rookie Brad Johnson, who didn't even start at Florida State, is Salisbury's backup.

Patriots

New England fired Joe Mendes, the team's vice president for player operations.

Patriots spokesman Pat Hanlon declined to say why the team dropped Mendes, who was responsible for finding players, signing them and negotiating trades with other teams.

The functions of the player operations department will be taken over by Charley Armey, who would serve as director of college scouting, and Tom Bass, who would continue as Patriots director of pro personnel.

Wrangler's Painter blanks Angels, 4-0

Staff report

WICHITA, Kan. — After sweeping Texas League East first half champion Shreveport in a five-game series, the Midland Angels are in danger of being swept by Texas League West first half champion Wichita.

The Angels fell 4-0 to the Wranglers here Tuesday night, losing to Wichita for the fourth consecutive time. The two teams end the current series with a rare noon game today and the Angels will be looking to get out of town in a hurry to return to Angels Stadium Thursday to face El Paso in a key series.

Wichita pitcher Lance Painter (10-4) was the most recent thorn in the Midland side, hurling a four-hit shutout. Painter didn't walk a batter and never allowed a Midland runner to reach second base in the game.

Two of Midland's singles were erased on double plays.

Offensively, Wichita got two runs in the second on a two-run double by Pedro Lopez off of Midland starter Paul Swingle (8-9) and a two-run homer by Dwayne Hosey in the seventh off of Don Vidmar. It was Hosey's seventh homer of the season.

Even with four consecutive losses under the belt, Midland still owns a three-game lead as El Paso fell again to San Antonio Tuesday, 9-8. Wichita also moved to within three games of the Angels.

Appier, Martinez AL players of July

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle's Edgar Martinez, who hit .388, and Kansas City's Kevin Appier, 4-0 with a 1.55 ERA, were named Tuesday the American League's players of the month for July.

Martinez went 38 for 98 with six doubles, three homers and 12 RBIs. He also scored 22 runs.

Appier edged out Nolan Ryan.

South intercepts Morenz 4 times, wins all-star game

Associated Press

IRVING — Maurice Henriques had the first of four interceptions thrown by highly touted Shea Morenz and returned the catch 37 yards for a touchdown, leading the South past the North 23-12 Tuesday in the McDonald's All-Star game.

The South led 14-0 less than six minutes into the game, but by midway through the third quarter the North had rolled up to 14-12.

The North comeback was fueled by Longview's Bobby Taylor, a Notre Dame recruit, who blocked a field goal attempt and returned it 69 yards for a touchdown.

But the North missed a chance to tie by failing on a 2-point conversion attempt. They gave the South two points on their next possession when the ball was snapped over punter Kirk Kennedy's head for a safety.

This was the South's first victory since 1986 in the final high school game for Texas schoolboy players. It is part of the Texas High School Coaches Association's annual coaching school.

Midland Lee center K.C. Jones, bound for the University of Miami, played on the North offense.

Taylor and South player Brandell Jackson, a Baylor signee from Brenham, were voted the defensive and offensive players of the game. Jackson rushed for 61 yards and caught three passes for 61 more.

Nathan Campbell of Alief Elsik, a Colorado signee, widened the South's lead with a 2-yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter.

The North stopped the South offense through the second and third quarters behind 6-foot-2, 300-pound defensive lineman Stonie Clark. The Texas signee from Gladewater tied Lenoy Jones for a game-high of 10 tackles.

But the key defensive play was made by Henriques, an Alief Hastings graduate joining Campbell at Colorado.

He stepped in front of a cross-field pass by Morenz, a Texas recruit from San Angelo Central, on the game's first drive and scrambled untouched into the end zone.

Morenz, one of the nation's most-sought schoolboys, was intercepted four times, including twice in the fourth quarter deep in South territory. He completed four of 14 attempts for 34 yards.

Jones, a TCU signee from Class 3A champion Groesbeck, had two interceptions.

South coach Ross Rogers, of Class 4A champion College Station A&M Consolidated, called for an onside kick. Schulenberg's Marc Tidwell dove into a pile and pulled the ball free, to begin a unique South drive.

The South moved 47 yards on eight plays, including a fake reverse, a direct snap to running back Jackson and a shuffle pass.

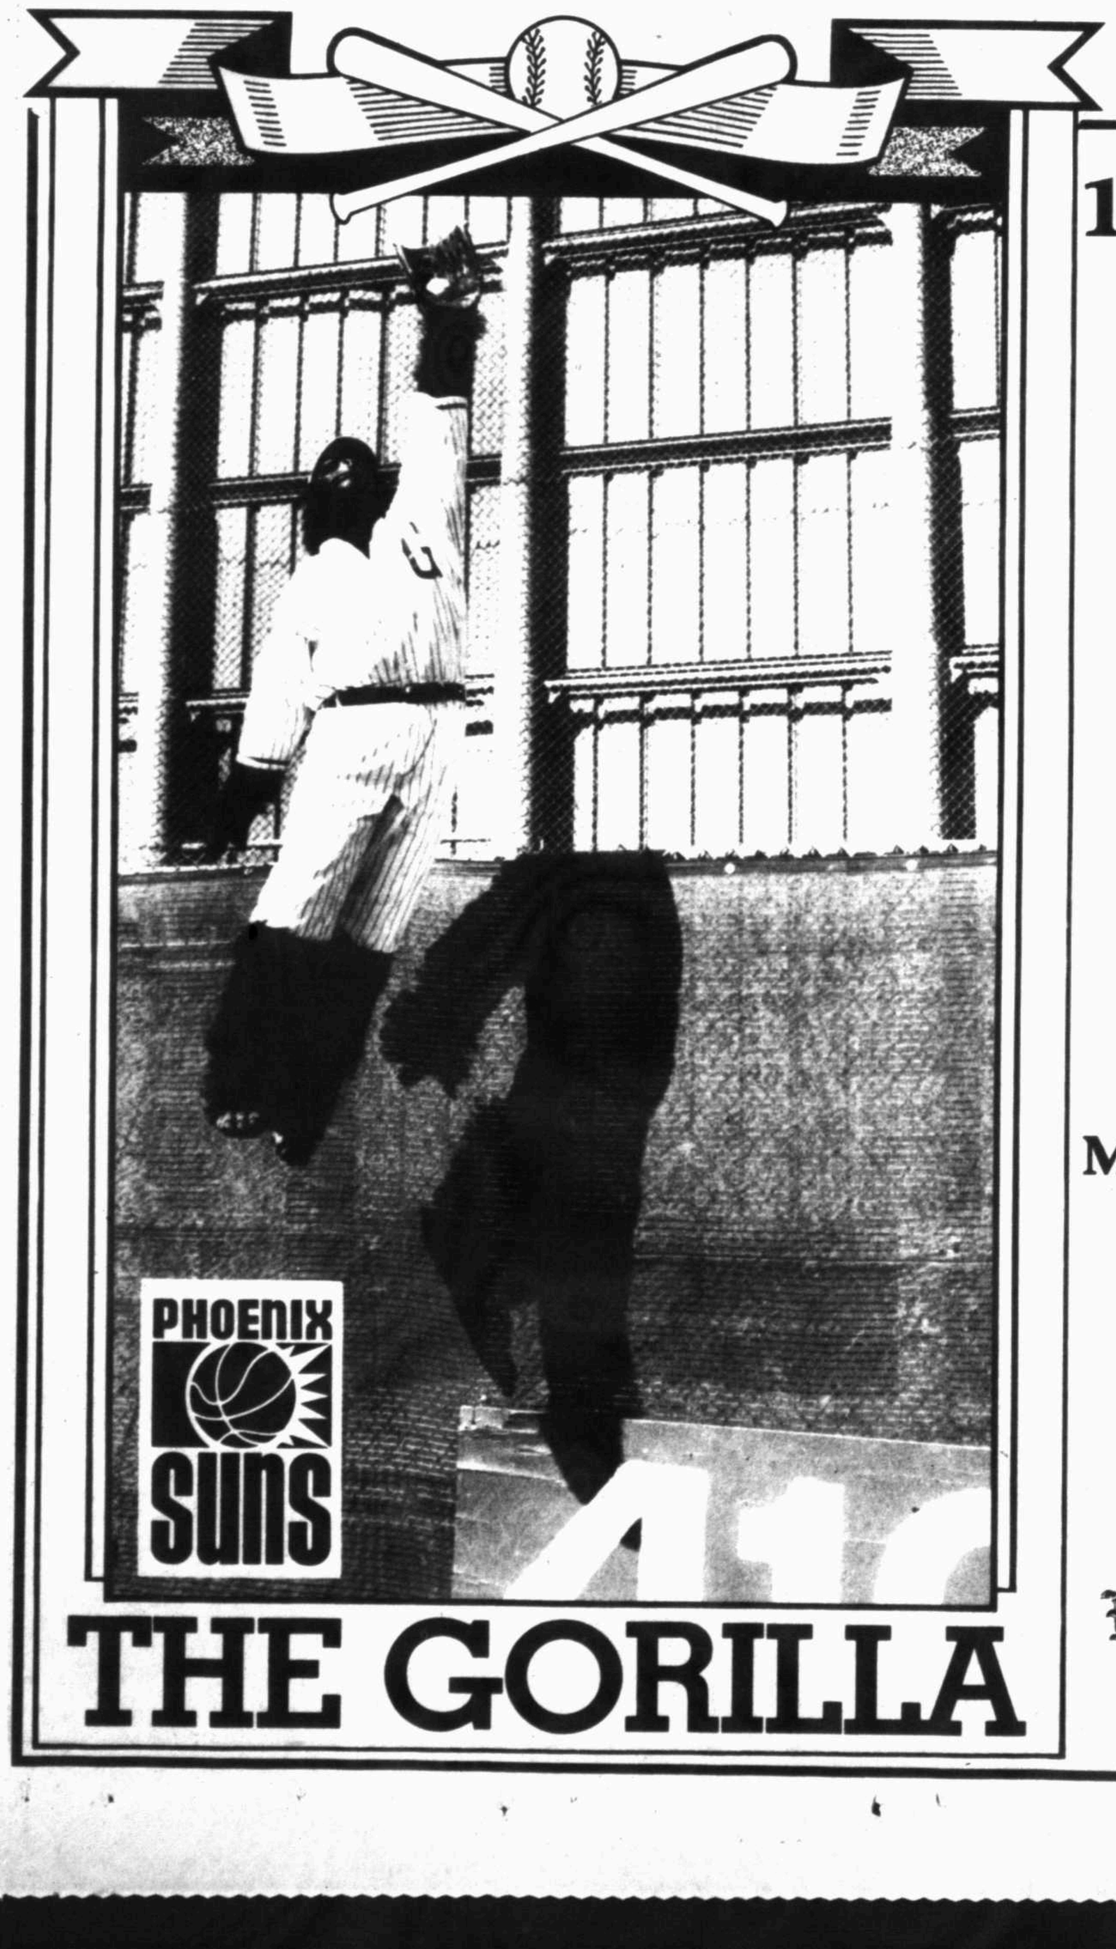

The progressive play-calling ended with Weslaco's Sone Cavazos completing a 9-yard pass to Tommy Blackmon of Rosenberg Lamar Consolidated for a 14-0 lead with 6:07 to play in the first quarter.

Cavasos, a Texas Tech recruit, was the third quarterback in Rogers' three-man rotation that included Cody Danaher of Corpus Christi Calallen, a Texas recruit slated to play defensive back, and Sugar Land Dulles' John Gillaspy.

Rogers kept the shuffle, with the players rotating every play, throughout the game.

Cavazos was the designated third- and fourth-down quarterback. He completed nine of 18 yards. Gillaspy was used primarily as a runner while Danaher threw and ran.

The North also traded quarterbacks, though less often. Morenz and Texas Christian-bound Max Knake of McKinney switched off between drives.

OTTAWA, Ontario (AP) — Dexter Manley lost another job on Tuesday.

Already benched by the Ottawa Rough Riders because of his poor play, Manley was to have worked as a television color commentator for Thursday night's game in Edmonton.

But the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., which has the CFL's television rights, invoked its exclusivity clause and nixed the Rough Riders plan to produce its own telecast for viewers in Ontario.

Cuba next for U.S. women

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — The U.S. women's volleyball team already has the second-best American Olympic record. Now is the time to make good on its promise of more.

For the first week of the Olympic tournament, the Americans have been saying they can beat any team in the world. They'll have a chance to prove it Thursday.

The victory assured the Americans of at least fourth place, which would be their best Olympic finish since winning the silver medal at the 1984 Games in Los Angeles.

"I don't think it has sunk in yet," said star opposite hitter Caren Kemner.

In the second quarterfinal, Brazil beat Japan 14-16, 15-13, 15-13, 15-9 and will meet the Unified Team in the semifinal. Cuba and the Unified Team gained byes into the semifinals by finishing first in their preliminary round groups.

Brazil overcame Japan's acrobatic defense and the loss of the first set to reach its first Olympic semifinal. Itself an athletic team, Brazil and Japan swapped spectacular rallies before Brazil prevailed.

The Dutch were making their first Olympic appearance and were a surprise quarterfinalist after upsetting China.

Volleyball

Cuba is making its first Olympic appearance after boycotting the last two Games and is eager to prove it is the best volleyball team in the world, as suggested by many experts.

"They've been waiting a long time, they'll want to prove themselves," said Kemner of Quincy, Ill.

The Americans are 1-2 against Cuba this year but the teams have played against each other many times in the past few years.

Against the Dutch, the Americans had an unconvincing start but eventually seized control of the game and breezed through.

"We started out a bit shaky, but we got steadier as the match went on," said setter Lori Endicott of Springfield., Mo. "We began to dominate and people came off the bench and did a good job."

The American women won the first set with a commanding performance. But their attack ran into trouble in the second, with hitters either making errors or unable to penetrate the Dutch block.

"We shot ourselves in the foot in that game," Kemner said.

In the third, the Dutch turned a 4-0 deficit into a 7-5 lead, only to see the Americans roll to a 13-7 lead and win the set.

The Americans breezed through the fourth set after taking a 12-2 lead as the Dutch game collapsed in a string of passing errors. Kemner clinched the victory with one of her trademark spikes.

"It was probably the most nerve-wracking match so far, because we've never been in the situation when we can make the final four," Kemner said.

"I just started swinging better in the third game, I said to myself, enough of that, and I wanted to start things going."

"The reality of knowing that we should handle the Dutch pretty well and our maturity as a team made us confident, but we were a bit nervous because it was the opening match of the medal round," Kemner said.

The volleyball tournament also gained notoriety as the first Olympic event to have a player test positive for drugs.

Wu Dang of China was banned from playing further in the tournament after strychnine was found in her urine sample following the loss to the Netherlands on Friday.

Prince Alexandre de Merode, chairman of the IOC medical commission, said Wu believed the substance was contained in powder capsules she brought from China. She did not tell her team doctor she was taking the product.

China overcame Wu's absence and beat Spain 15-1, 15-3, 15-3 in the playoff for seventh place. Spain finished the tournament eighth.

Police posted to control partying athletes

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Policemen will be posted in the Olympic village to control rowdy athletes coming home after partying on the town, officials said Tuesday.

Armando Calvo, the village director, said he was forced to reinforce security following complaints from athletes having trouble sleeping because of the noise.

"This is the first time we have to put police inside the village," he said. "It's the only way to control the situation. I'm sorry to say that."

More than half the 9,000 athletes in the village have finished their competitions. Olympic officials have repeatedly urged them to stay quiet and not bother those athletes still competing.

"There are some athletes who come back drunk," Calvo said.

'Dream Team' triumphs

Lithuania next victim as U.S. enters semifinals

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Now that the players know what to wear, the only remaining doubt about the U.S. Olympic basketball team is history.

The Dream Team disposed of Puerto Rico 115-77 in the quarterfinals Tuesday and moved within two games of regaining the gold medal.

The victory came hours after USA Basketball and the U.S. Olympic Committee agreed that all members of the American team would wear the designated Reebok warmup suit during Saturday's medal ceremonies.

The players, particularly Michael Jordan and Charles Barkley, will be allowed to zip the jackets far enough down to use the collar to cover up the Reebok logo. Jordan, Barkley and four other U.S. players had balked at the Reebok uniform because they have endorsement contracts with Nike.

All that, of course, is assuming the Americans get to the medals presentation.

Puerto Rico was no obstacle, losing by the same margin as in the Olympic qualifying tournament in Portland, Ore., last month.

Next up in Thursday's semifinals is Lithuania, featuring four starters from the Soviet team that beat the Americans in the semis in Seoul in 1988. The Lithuanians beat Brazil 114-96 behind 32 points and 13 rebounds by 7-foot-3 center Arvidas Sabonis.

The United States never trailed against Puerto Rico, and despite some sluggish moments, the outcome was never in doubt.

Playing for the first time under a single-elimination format after going 5-0 in the preliminaries, the Americans scored the first 17 points.

With their sixth straight 100-point game, the Americans are averaging 115.7, well ahead of the 1960 U.S. team's record Olympic pace of 101.9.

However, the roster of 11 NBA All-Stars and collegian Christian Laettner is lagging behind the 1956 Olympic championship team's 55.3 average victory margin. The Dream Team has won six games by an average of 44.5.

Team USA has made a habit of slow starts before routing the opposition, but the Puerto Rico game was slightly different. The United States scored the first 17 points, seven by Larry Bird.

Then the Americans saw the Puerto Ricans score the next 13 and 16 of the next 18.

Puerto Rico had an 8-0 run later but still went to halftime behind by 27.

Chris Mullin led six U.S. players in double figures with 21 points, including three of the team's dozen 3-pointers. David Robinson had 14, Magic Johnson 13 — his first double-figure game in an injury-troubled Olympics — Scottie Pippen and Karl Malone 12 and Laettner 11.

Barkley, the team's leading scorer, was whistled for a technical, which counts as a personal foul, with 7:38 left in the game when he twice slammed the ball to the court in disagreement over an official's call. It was his fifth personal and he left the game with six points.

That dropped his Olympic average from 21.6 to 19 points. No U.S. Olympian has ever averaged 20; Adrian Dantley came closest at 19.3 in 1976.

OLYMPICS: Morocco gets gold back

(From 1C)

Grentz said. "I'm ready and if I'm ready, I know the players are feeling it, too."

The U.S. men's team opened medal round play by loafing through a 115-77 victory over Puerto Rico, and they take on Lithuania in the semifinals. At last, no Cubans, although it doesn't seem to matter what the world throws at the guys from the NBA.

"I think we have no chance," Lithuania guard Rimas Kurtinaitis said. "We're ready to play for third place. It will only be a practice, maybe not even a strong practice."

It could get ugly, but not as ugly as the dive Matt Scoggins didn't pull off at the Games.

Scoggins had a chance for a platform diving medal until the seventh of his 10 dives, a backward 3½ somersault in a tuck. Problem was, he came untucked. His left leg got away from him, then he turned sideways, cartwheeling through the air. He looked like a writhing codfish as he hit the water on his back.

"I was just trying to figure out where the water was and trying to land on my head," Scoggins said. He missed.

With all of the day's 12 medal events over, what's left of the old Soviets, the Unified Team, led with 81 total medals, 33 gold. The United States had 68, 20 gold, and Germany was third with 51, 16 gold.

It's those Unified guys, those former Soviets, who used to provide such a willing foil for America. Now, they're fighting amongst themselves.

The Unified's super-heavy weightlifting champion, Alexandre Kourlovitch of Belarus, won his second straight Olympics gold medal, then blasted his coach, longtime Soviet super-heavyweight champion, Vassili Alexiev, for being a tyrant.

"Alexiev always tried to get his own way," Kourlovitch said. "That is the attitude of a dictator."

By the way, if you're still counting medals, add a gold for Morocco.

In the most bollixed episode of these Games, Khalid Skah of Morocco was once again declared the winner of the men's 10,000 meters, after being stripped of the medal the day before because of a Kenyan protest.

The Kenyans say they will protest again, although it's not certain who will listen.

It just proves the addled adage: You win some, you lose some, you win some.

The old adage goes somewhat differently for the Cuban baseball team. They win some, and they win some, and they win some.

Victor Mesa hit a two-run homer that broke open a close game in the sixth inning, then added a two-run single in the eighth for Cuba.

Austin, also of Cincinnati, was the third American to clinch a medal. He scored a 19-8 decision of Benhamin Mwangata of Tanzania to gain a semifinal match against the Cuban Gonzalez.

"He's got a powerful right hand, but I think my jab will frustrate him," Austin said. "I've got to get that gold medal around my neck."

Later, Raul Marquez, 156, of Houston, lost 16-12 to Orhan Delibas of the Netherlands, and Griffin, 178, of Chicago, was beaten 6-4 by Torsten May, who was bleeding from a nasty cut above his right eye in the final round.

Without the butting penalty, Griffin would have won a 4-3 decision.

"He didn't butt him," U.S. coach Joe Byrd said. "That's what they called, but he didn't butt him."

Griffin bolted from the ring and left the arena immediately.

Later, however, he said: "I landed a jab on top of his head and saw the blood come out of his eye. I said, 'yeah, they're going to stop it.' I couldn't believe they didn't stop it."

Joining Austin in the semifinals will be Oscar De La Hoya, 132, of Los Angeles, and the coach's son Chris, 165, of Flint, Mich.

BASEBALL: Helling takes loss again

(From 1C)

U.S. starter Rick Helling, who failed to hold a five-run lead in the teams' round-robin game, failed to make good on his second chance as well. Orestes Kindelan hit a solo homer in the fourth, German Mesa had a sacrifice fly in the fifth, and Mesa decided it with his two-out homer in the sixth that sent the Cubans into an arm-waving, on-field celebration.

While the Cubans' hitting has been the talk of the tournament, their pitching has been quietly sensational.

Osvaldo Fernandez, Cuba's top starter, gave up his first run of the tournament when Chad McConnell doubled in the top of the sixth to make it 2-1. But Omar Ajete, who shut down the Americans for 8 1-3 innings in their first game, came on to strike out Nevin in the game's pivotal at-bat and closed the game, allowing just two hits.

The atmosphere was more low-key than in the first game, when both teams made nervous errors and the cheering sections shouted each other down. The fans' animosity spilled over into a shouting match outside the ballpark after that first game.

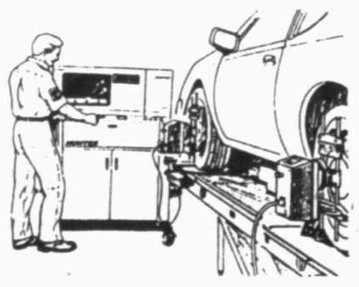

There were a few empty seats and the fans weren't as loud Tuesday, but the baseball was much better.

"I think today's game was better than the first," Cuban coach Jorge Fuentes said. "It was more spectacular."

A lot of that was due to Helling, a junior from Stanford who was the goat of the first game. This was a different Helling: calm, confident, in control. Instead of puffing his cheeks to force a breath, he puffed out his chest and blew the Cubans away with his slider.

But it came down to the same bottom line — he had to be perfect to have any chance of beating them. He missed by three pitches.

Kindelan, the Cubans' clean-up hitter, pulled a hanging slider over the left-field wall for a 1-0 lead in the second.

Sutcliffe wins 150th as O's drop Tigers, 6-3

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Rick Sutcliffe finally won his 150th game, allowing three runs in 7⅔ innings as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Detroit Tigers 6-3 Tuesday night for their fifth straight victory.

AL

Sutcliffe, 0-5 with a 6.75 ERA in his six previous starts since his last win on June 30, allowed six hits, struck out one and walked two. The 36-year-old right-hander (11-11) improved his lifetime record to 150-121. Of the 23 pitchers to win a Rookie of the Year award, only Sutcliffe and Hall of Famer Tom Seaver have won as many as 150 games.

Brewers 5, Mariners 2

MILWAUKEE — Chris Bosio allowed one run and five hits in seven innings for his third straight victory.

Bosio (9-5) struck out five and walked none in improving to 3-0 with a 1.91 ERA in four starts since the All-Star break. He has not walked a batter in his last 33 innings.

Jesse Orosco relieved to start the eighth and allowed two-out singles to Harold Reynolds and Omar Vizquel. Mike Fetters then walked Shane Turner and Ken Griffey to force in a run. Doug Henry then relieved and got the last four outs for his 21st save.

Athletics 9, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON — Carney Lansford and Terry Steinbach each drove in three runs as the Oakland Athletics beat Texas and moved into a tie for first place with Minnesota in the American League West.

Oakland won its third straight game to catch the Twins, who were beaten 19-11 in Chicago. Texas lost its fifth straight game, dropping behind the White Sox into fourth in the AL West.

Dave Stewart, who spent 24 days on the disabled list with elbow problems before being activated on July 24, allowed two hits in six innings to win for the first time since July 2.

White Sox 19, Twins 11

CHICAGO — George Bell hit a two-run homer and had five RBIs and Chicago scored nine runs in the third inning to crush Minnesota, dropping the Twins into a first-place tie in the AL West.

Esteban Beltre hit his first major-league homer and Carlton Fisk hit his 374th as Chicago won its third straight game and sixth in its last seven while snapping Minnesota's three-game winning streak. The Twins fell into a tie with Oakland, which beat Texas 9-0.

The game featured a nine-run third inning when the White Sox sent 13 batters to the plate with the first nine reaching safely.

Red Sox 9, Blue Jays 4

BOSTON — Wade Boggs, Tom Brunansky and Mo Vaughn homered as Boston used a rare power surge to beat Toronto.

Toronto's lead over Baltimore in the AL East dropped to 2½ games. The Orioles beat Detroit 6-3.

The Red Sox came into the game with only 61 homers in 104 games.

Yankees 4, Indians 3

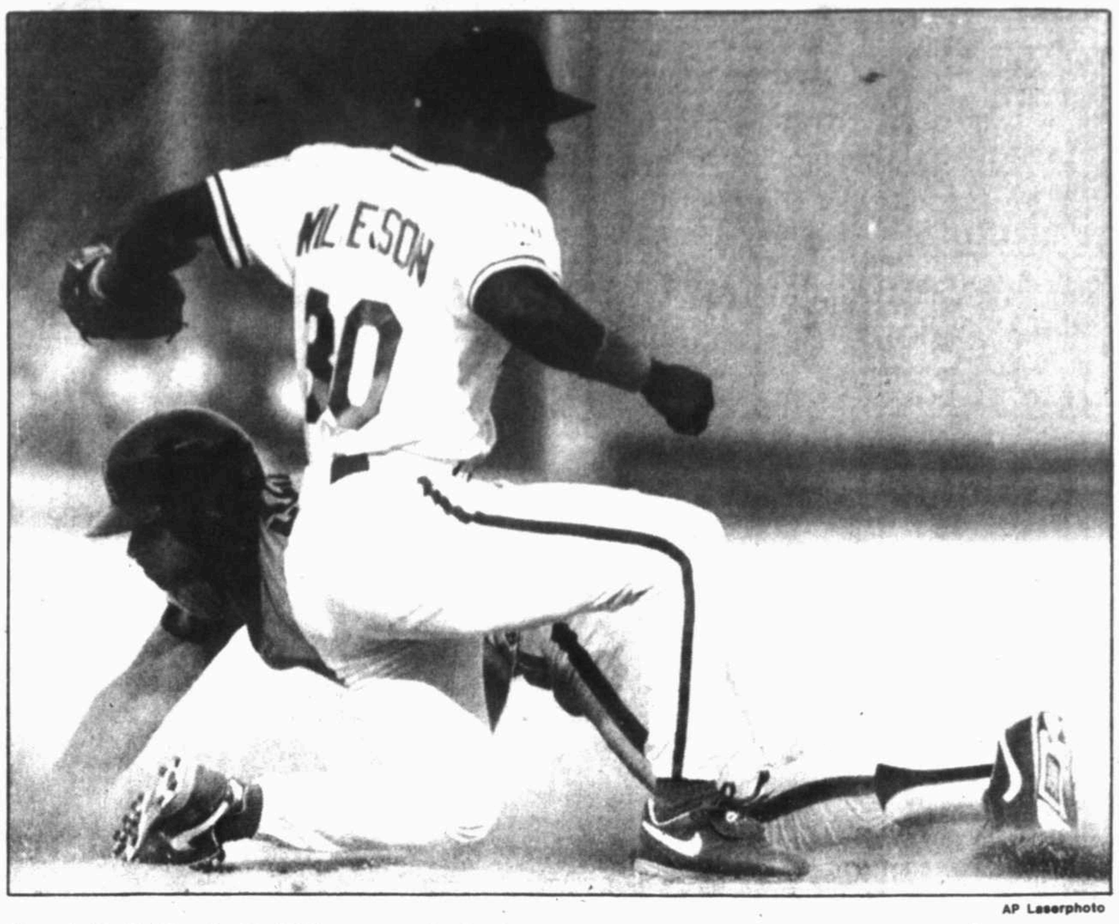

NEW YORK — Roberto Kelly hit a two-run homer and Curt Young again pitched well as New York stopped a four-game losing streak.

Young (4-2) is 3-0 since he was cut by Kansas City on June 10 and signed by the Yankees. Making his fifth start for New York, he gave up two runs on eight hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Angels 5, Royals 1
Royals 4, Angels 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — David Howard hit a three-run inside-the-park home run as Kansas City broke a nine-game losing streak against California with a victory in the nightcap of a doubleheader.

In the first game, Gary DiSarcina had three hits and a career-best four RBIs and the Angels stopped Kevin Appier's nine-game winning streak with a 5-1 victory. Bert Blyleven, the Royals' old nemesis, gave up just two hits and one run in six innings.

Pendleton's two-run homer in ninth sinks Cincinnati, 7-5

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Terry Pendleton hit a two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning to give the Atlanta Braves a 7-5 victory against the Cincinnati Reds on Tuesday night and a 1½-game lead in the National League West.

NL

Pendleton hit his 15th home run of the season following a two-out walk to Otis Nixon, who then stole second. The drive over the left-field fence came off reliever Norm Charlton (3-1). Pendleton has 10 hits in his last 13 at-bats with runners in scoring position.

Marvin Freeman (4-4) picked up the victory by pitching a scoreless ninth inning as the Braves rallied for their fourth straight victory.

Atlanta tied it at 5-all in the eighth, scoring three runs off Reds ace reliever Norm Charlton, keyed by a throwing error by third baseman Chris Sabo and capped by Greg Olson's sacrifice fly.

Pinch-hitter Lonnie Smith opened the inning with a single and reached third when Sabo threw wild to first on a grounder by Nixon. Pendleton drove in Smith with a single, with Nixon taking second.

Nixon then stole third before Charlton struck out Ron Gant, but David Justice doubled to left, scoring Nixon and sending Pendleton to third. Brian Hunter was walked intentionally to load the bases and Olson followed with a sacrifice fly to center.

Barry Larkin hit a solo homer and drove in two runs earlier as the Reds pounded Braves starter Tom Glavine, who was seeking his 17th victory. The left-hander has won 10 straight decisions and hasn't lost since May 22.

Cardinals 9, Phillies 5

ST. LOUIS — Andres Galarraga hit a two-run, tie-breaking double and Bernard Gilkey had a three-run homer in a six-run eighth inning to lead St. Louis.

The Phillies led 4-1 after Wes Chamberlain's three-run homer in the sixth, but couldn't hold it. St. Louis won consecutive games for the first time since July 23-24 and denied starter Greg Mathews his first victory in almost four seasons.

With the Cardinals trailing 4-3, Craig Wilson led off the eighth with a broken-bat single off Mitch Williams (3-4). Felix Jose doubled to put runners at second and third and Galarraga doubled to put the Cardinals ahead. Luis Alicea followed with a run-scoring single to chase Williams, who lasted only one-third of an inning.

With one out, Gilkey hit his second home run with Alicea and pinch-hitter Gerald Perry aboard, giving the Cardinals their biggest inning of the season.

Entering the game, the Cardinals had lost eight of 10 and had scored only six runs in in their previous five games.

Cubs 8, Expos 6

MONTREAL — Mark Grace hit a two-run single to snap an eighth-inning tie as the Chicago Cubs beat Montreal.

Grace, who doubled home a run earlier in the game, hit a 3-2 pitch from Bill Sampen (0-4) with two outs and runners on second and third to break a 6-6 tie.

Chuck McElroy (4-6) pitched 1⅓ innings for the win, allowing three hits and one run. Paul Assenmacher got the last three outs for his sixth save.

Sammy Sosa's three-run homer highlighted a six-run fourth inning as the Cubs overcame a 5-0 deficit.

Larry Walker's RBI single off McElroy tied the score in the seventh.

Pirates 3, Mets 2

PITTSBURGH — Alex Cole grounded a single through a drawn-in infield with one out in the 12th inning, giving Pittsburgh a victory over New York as well as a fifth straight win.

Bob Walk (5-4) worked out of jams in all three innings he pitched for the victory as five Pirates pitchers combined to limit the banged-up Mets to two runs and eight hits. The Pirates' staff has allowed four earned runs in its last 48 innings, an 0.75 ERA.

Anthony Young extended his scoreless relief appearances streak to 10 for New York with three innings of one-hit relief, but Tom Filer (0-1) allowed Don Slaught's leadoff single to start the 12th.

Giants 7, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — John Burkett gave up the longest home run in the National League this season, a 468-foot shot by Gary Sheffield, but otherwise shut down San Diego over 7⅔ innings to help San Francisco to a victory.

Sheffield connected for his 20th homer of the season in the first inning when he sent the first pitch six rows deep into the second deck in left-center field with two outs.

Dave Righetti got the final four outs in relief of Burkett (8-6) who allowed eight hits, with two strikeouts and no walks.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOT TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
* You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
* You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
* You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices slump

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell Tuesday as traders anticipated reports of higher U.S. stocks of crude oil.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in September settled at $21.35 per barrel, down 23 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Texaco Trading and Transportation and Navajo Refining lowered their posted price 25 cents to $20.00.

Analysts attributed the drop to expectations that weekly figures released after the close of trading would show an increase in crude stocks.

Anticipation of the American Petroleum Institute report also contributed to another drop in the price of home heating oil.

The API reported the supply of distillates, which includes home heating oil, rose 1.77 million barrels to 114.63 million barrels in the week ended last Friday. The increase was in line with expectations.

The API figures showed a much larger increase than expected in light sweet crude stocks, which rose 6.28 million barrels to 330.21 million barrels.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in September settling at $1.861 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 0.4 cent.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in September settled at $18.95 per barrel, down 23 cents.

Fare war

NEW YORK — Delta Air Lines Inc. announced Tuesday it would lower trans-Atlantic fares this fall and winter about 30 percent, the first carrier to cut tourist fares to Europe for the traditionally slow travel months.

Delta cut fares between 10 percent and 40 percent to all of its 33 European destinations and Israel.

American Airlines, British Airways and Continental matched the cuts. United Airlines said it planned to meet Delta's prices, but was still studying the details. Trans World Airlines spokesman Don Fleming said the airline would follow Delta's lead with a few possible exceptions.

Market retreats

NEW YORK — Stock prices finished mixed in subdued trading Tuesday with little news to extend the market's five-day rally and investors cautious ahead of key economic data.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 11.08 points to 3,384.32.

Advancing issues narrowly outnumbered declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

■ The drop in Index of Leading Indicators signals a wobbly economy through the election, analysts say.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge fell in June for the first time in six months, the Commerce Department said Tuesday, signaling a wobbly economy through the November election and beyond.

The 0.2 percent drop in the department's Index of Leading Indicators, designed to predict economic activity six to nine months in advance, was the first since it declined 0.1 percent in December and the worst since January 1991.

The drop followed gains of 0.6 percent in May and 0.3 percent in both April and March.

Analysts expected the slight decrease and said it was not a sign of renewed recession, but a symptom of the weak and erratic growth bedeviling the economy since the middle of last year.

"It's evidence we're in ... for more of the same — a lackluster, limpid, lethargic performance that goes on month after month," said economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

That's bad news for President Bush and other incumbents who would prefer that voters on Election Day feel good about the economy, or at least optimistic that hard times soon will be over.

An even more politically important statistic — the unemployment rate for July — is scheduled for release by the Labor Department on Friday. Despite five consecutive quarters of weak economic growth that economists say constitute a recovery, the nation's unemployment rate has continued to rise.

Many analysts now believe joblessness, after hitting an eight-year high of 7.8 percent in June, will improve slightly. But few are as optimistic as Bush administration prognosticators who believe it will dip below 7 percent by the end of the year.

In June, six of the 11 forward-looking indicators that comprise the leading index contributed to its decline. One was unchanged and four were positive.

The negative indicators, in order of magnitude, were: A drop in the inflation-adjusted supply of money in the economy; a decrease in the average factory worker's workweek from 41.3 hours to 41.1 hours; an increase in new claims for unemployment insurance from an average of 415,000 a week in May to 429,000 in June; a decline in stock prices; a fall in building permits; and a slump in consumer confidence.

The positive indicators were a gain in new orders and contracts for business equipment and buildings, a rise in new orders to factories for consumer goods, a slowdown in business delivery times which indicates increased demand, and an increase in the price of various raw materials.

Office reduces cost estimate of failed S&Ls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Congressional Budget Office reduced its estimate of the cost of cleaning up failed savings institutions and banks Tuesday, but warned lawmakers and the Bush administration against complacency in resolving their stalemate over S&L funding.

Budget office Director Robert D. Reischauer, in a written statement to the House Banking Committee, said handling losses in failed S&Ls will cost $135 billion from 1989 through 1998, in addition to the $60 billion spent before 1989.

That's about $20 billion less than the budget office's previous estimate. Reischauer attributed the decline to the government's earlier success in shutting down failed S&Ls and to the wide gap between deposit and loan rates, which has bolstered profits at both banks and S&Ls.

On an annual basis, Reischauer said the S&L program actually will earn the government $5 billion in the 1992 fiscal year because it has continued to sell assets inherited from failed thrifts while an election-year impasse between Congress and the administration has prevented it from spending money since April 1.

But Reischauer said that has only shifted the cost to the future and increased it by allowing money-losing institutions to remain open.

"One should not assume that leaving insolvent institutions open represents a saving to the taxpayer," Reischauer said. "We agree with the administration that delay in closing failed thrifts is only adding costs to the final tab for this crisis."

"A substantial portion of the cleanup of the thrift crisis remains to be completed. The small improvement of the thrift industry ... is hardly cause for complacency or for further delay in funding," he said.

He offered his comments in written testimony originally scheduled to be presented at a hearing today. The hearing was cancelled and the committee released the budget office statement on Tuesday.

Separately, a senior Treasury Department official complained in a letter to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who criticized the administration's record on S&Ls at last month's Democratic Convention, that "the American taxpayer is bearing the brunt of Congress' recalcitrance."

The cost of the delay, said Deputy Treasury Secretary John Robson, is the same as if "every day members of the House of Representatives appeared on the steps of the Capitol and lit a bonfire with $4 million of the taxpayers' money."

Keating's former associates agree to settle charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three former associates of convicted Lincoln Savings owner Charles Keating have settled securities charges and agreed to cooperate with authorities, officials said Tuesday.

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced that the three former officers and employees of Lincoln's parent company, American Continental Corp., have settled charges of "systematically and deliberately" defrauding thousands of investors.

Without admitting or denying wrongdoing, Judy Wischer, American Contin ental's former president; Mark Sauter, the former corporate counsel; and Andrew Ligget, former chief financial officer, settled the charges brought against them late last year, the SEC said.

All three agreed to cooperate with future SEC investigations of American Continental, the commission said.

All three agreed to cooperate with future SEC investigations of American Continental, the commission said.

Wischer also consented to be barred from serving as an officer or director of any publicly traded company and Sauter agreed to an order barring him from practicing or appearing before the SEC as an attorney.

The 1989 collapse of Irvine, Calif.-based Lincoln was the costliest thrift failure in U.S. history at $2.6 billion.

Some 22,000 bondholders, many of them elderly people who invested their life savings, lost $250 million with the bankruptcy of American Continental.

The SEC's lawsuit accused Keating and co-defendants of using deliberately inflated financial statements and misleading sales practices to convince purchasers of $275 million in American Continental bonds that they were making sound, safe investments when in fact, they were buying highly risky junk bonds.

Other allegations in the 87-page civil complaint accused Keating and various other defendants of:

- Issuing a false press release to halt a drop in American Continental's stock price.
- Filing false or misleading records with the SEC about American Continental's cash flow.
- Fraud in the sale of $275 million in ACC junk bonds at Lincoln branches.

Kevin Fender describes his company's new property as a center of small warehouse units ranging from 800 to 1,000 square feet, all equipped with overhead doors, an office and restrooms.

With rents starting at $200 a month, he said the center is geared toward small or start-up companies.

The center is currently 60 percent occupied and Fender said "We're looking for tenants."

Under new ownership is CHRISTINE VALMY, located in the Plaza shopping center.

The beauty salon was recently purchased by Gloria Payne, and will hold its grand opening Thursday at 10 a.m.

Christine Valmy offers complete hair care, manicures and pedicures, facials, waxing and massages.

Hours are set by appointment, and the business is open Tuesday through Saturday.

Opening in a new location is the COLEMAN ACADEMY, which is now located in the Colonade shopping center at Garfield and Loop 250.

Owner Judy Coleman offers classes in ballet, jazz and body conditioning for ages 5 through adult.

Returning to the Permian Basin is ROTATING PRODUCTION SYSTEMS, which is now located at 4700 S. County Road 1310 in Odessa.

The company shares space with Ajax Repair & Supply, which does valve and wellhead repair.

Rotating Production rotates tubing strings in rod pumped wells to extend tubing life. By rotating the tubing, wear of the rods is distributed equally over the entire tubing and the well will produce longer and more economically.

Currently the company has offices throughout the U.S., from Denver to Dallas, from Midland-Odessa to Hobbs and at present has 100 units operating nationwide.

Police charge two-time parolee with slayings of six women

MIDDLETOWN, N.Y. (AP) — A parolee was charged Tuesday in the killings of six women. Police said he told them where to find three of the victims' bodies.

Nathaniel White, 32, of Middletown, was paroled in April after serving a year in prison for unlawful inmprisonment in the knifepoint abduction of a woman. Five of the six victims he is charged with killing died after his parole.

White also was being investigated in other slayings, said state police Maj. James D. O'Donnell.

"When you have someone who confessed — admitted — to six homicides, you're going to look at other unsolved cases," O'Donnell said.

The women all appeared to have died from stab wounds, but autopsy reports on the three latest victims were incomplete. Some of the victims were raped.

Poughkeepsie police received an anonymous tip linking White with the death of Adriane M. Hunter, 27, of Middletown. Her nude body was found Thursday in nearby woods.

Under questioning by state and local police, inconsistencies in his story led authorities to suspect him in the other cases, O'Donnell said. He faces six second-degree murder charges.

The other five victims were:

—Juliana R. Frank, 29, of Middletown, which is about 55 miles northwest of New York City. She was slain on March 25, 1991, and her body was found on an abandoned railroad bed in Middletown.

—Laurette Huggins Reviere, 34, of Middletown. She was killed July 10, 1992, and her nude body was found in her home.

—Christine M. Klebbe, 14, of nearby Goshen. She was reported missing July 1, 1992. Her body was found Tuesday.

—Brenda L. Whiteside, 20, of Elmsford. She was reported missing on July 20, 1992, and her body was found Tuesday.

—Angela Hopkins, 23, of Poughkeepsie. A cousin of Brenda Whiteside's, she was also reported missing on July 20, 1992, and her body was found Tuesday.

White apparently met all the women except Klebbe, a family friend, in bars and took them to secluded areas before their deaths, O'Donnell said.

Marilyn Quayle insists the media magnifies her husband's 'mishaps'

Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Marilyn Quayle, wife of Vice President Dan Quayle, says news reporting has magnified "six mishaps over four years" in an effort to mold a public impression that her husband is not qualified to step into the presidency.

"Let's be very honest about it," she said in a Seattle appearance Monday. "The vice president has not gotten a fair shake in the media. The good things that he's done over the last 3 1/2 years have gone regularly unreported."

Marilyn Quayle described rumors that her husband might be dropped from the Republican ticket as "carrying on" by the media in an effort to fill the "dead time" between the Democratic and Republican conventions.

"I know it's just a creation. End of discussion: The president has said he's on the ticket," she told reporters.

The vice president's wife spoke before about 110 people at a $100-a-plate luncheon for the state Republican Party, and earlier met privately with about 30 people who each donated $250.

Spousal support has been about all the Bush-Quayle campaign has offered Washington so far in the 1992 campaign. First Lady Barbara Bush spoke to a $1,000-a-head April fundraiser, and visited a Childhaven care center. Marilyn Quayle's visit was limited to fundraising.

President Bush has not been in the state since 1989. Vice President Quayle went briefly to Vancouver, Wash., last December to receive an award from the Congressional Medal of Honor Society.

Marilyn Quayle Monday had to deal with questions about whether Republicans have given up hopes of carrying Washington and Oregon in the November election. In 1988, both states were won narrowly by Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis.

"I'm sure Dan will be back," she said. "We certainly have not written off the state of Washington."

The drift and apparent lack of theme to the Bush-Quayle campaign seemed on display during Marilyn Quayle's brief stopover.

During a state GOP dinner last winter, the grand ballroom of a hotel was filled with Republican faithful and bustled with competing candidates. Monday, the crowd at the hastily scheduled luncheon was sparse.

Astronauts release satellite ,but abort experiment

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis' astronauts gently reeled out a satellite on miles of thin cord Tuesday in a risky electrical experiment never before performed in space and delayed by last-minute problems.

The white metal ball crept away from Atlantis, rising higher and higher above the shuttle. Its initial movement was so slow — less than two-hundredths of 1 mph — as to be almost imperceptible.

"Houston, we have satellite motion," said astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman, the payload commander. "Motion looks steady."

It was the astronauts' second attempt to release the satellite. The first try, 1½ hours earlier, ended moments after it began.

The satellite rocked from side to side atop a four-story tower in the shuttle cargo bay, and Hoffman slammed on the tether reel brakes. The satellite was pulled back down on the docking ring of the tower and secured.

Flight controllers tracked the problem to a motor at the tip of the tower that pulls tether from a reel and keeps it taut. The motor clutch didn't engage on the first release attempt, but later seemed to work fine.

The wire and fiber cord linking Italy's halfton satellite and NASA's 100-ton shuttle was expected to reach 12 miles at the farthest point by early Wednesday.

The satellite was released from its cradle atop the spire as Atlantis zoomed over the Pacific Ocean just off the Chile coast. That long-awaited moment came 4½ hours and three orbits late; a stuck power cable thwarted the first opportunity.

The astronauts tried 11 times to disconnect the cable from the satellite before succeeding when commander Loren Shriver fired the shuttle jets and the nudged the plug's release pin free.

Everything else in the preparations had gone well. The astronauts unlatched and turned on the 1,140-pound satellite ahead of schedule and raised the latticed tower in the cargo bay, with the satellite perched on top like a golf ball on a tee.

Scientists expected the tether — just one-tenth of an inch in diameter — to generate up to 5,000 volts of electricity when fully extended when fully extended during the 30-hour test.

Power production should be similar to the wire and magnets of a car alternator; in this case, the tether is cutting through Earth's magnetic field at 17,500 mph.

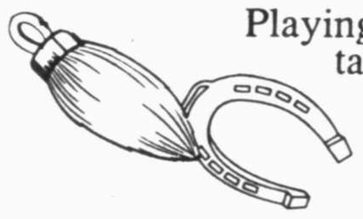

Current should flow down the tether from the satellite to the shuttle, and electron beam guns in the cargo bay would shoot the electrical charge back into the charged ionosphere and complete the electrical circuit.

NASA has tested tethered spacecraft just twice before, during the Gemini program in 1966. One-hundred-foot nylon lines linked the capsules and the orbiting Agena boosters.

The tether for this mission is made of heavy-duty fiber, Teflon, and copper serving as the conductor.

NASA and the Italian Space Agency have $379 million invested in the Tethered Satellite system. NASA provided the tether, satellite-deploying tower and some instruments on the satellite. Italy supplied the satellite.

Italian scientists have been working on the concept for 20 years, and the astronauts have trained for this mission for several years. The crew includes Franco Malerba, the Italian Space Agency's representative aboard Atlantis.

Commission: More money needed for cleanup fund

AUSTIN (AP) — A fund that pays for cleaning up after leaking fuel storage tanks needs at least four times as much money — or $240 million a year — to address the problem, the Texas Water Commission said Tuesday.

The program now receives about $60 million a year, "but needs four to six times as much for any hope of staying within the reach of the 12,000 or more sites currently undergoing cleanup," according to a statement from the commission.

Texas has about 161,000 registered storage tanks above and below the ground.

"When this program was set up by the Legislature in 1989, no one could have imagined the number of storage tanks that leak and therefore require cleanup," said commission Chairman John Hall.

The program was established to protect ground water from contamination caused by the tanks. The legislation set out limits on the fee that pays for the fund. The fee is levied on the bulk delivery of petroleum products.

The commission said industry spokesmen say they will ask the Legislature to increase the fee so the program will have adequate funding.

'When this program was set up by the Legislature in 1989, no one could have imagined the number of storage tanks that leak and therefore require cleanup.'

— John Hall

Brooks Smith, president of the Texas Oil Marketers Association, said the fee now is at six-tenths of a cent per gallon. He said his group supports an increase, although it has not determined the amount.

"It's the only way it can be cleaned up," he said.

The commission said that staff also has been working overtime to process a backlog of claims for the program. It said that in the 10 months that ended June 30, almost 4,000 reimbursement applications were processed, resulting in $133 million in payments.

Officials tout benefits of free trade

McALLEN (AP) — Agriculture officials Tuesday touted benefits they believe will accompany a free trade agreement, yet conceded that doubts remain among some produce and vegetable growers.

Officials at a two-day trade conference, which was intended to answer questions about the proposed agreement, said the pact will be structured so none of the countries involved will gain an unfair advantage over its trading partners.

"We're sitting next to one of the richest pieces of (agricultural) real estate in the world," said Wayne Showers, president of McAllen-based produce shipper Griffin and Brand. "They're sitting next to the biggest consumer nation in the world. Why shouldn't we work something out?"

Mexican agriculture official Guillermo Ramos said modernization of his country's agriculture infrastructure will eventually allow Mexican growers to compete in an international market.

This "new era" of Mexican agriculture would be due to the North American Free Trade Agreement, or NAFTA, being negotiated by Mexico, the United States and Canada.

But he said, "There is a concern in Mexico as there is in the United States."

A primary worry of Mexican growers is that they would be overwhelmed by products from their more advanced neighbors, which are able to produce more crops more easily.

However, Ramos, agriculture minister for the Mexican embassy in Washington, said NAFTA's provision for easing out duties will protect Mexico's agriculture industry.

Mexican agriculture official Guillermo Ramos said modernization of his country's agriculture infrastructure will eventually allow Mexican growers to compete in an international market.

"In the beginning, the free trade agreement will not open the doors to United States products 100 percent," he said.

The proposal would eliminate duties immediately in less sensitive markets, but more slowly on Mexico's key crops, such as corn. The intent is to keep trade fair.

Ramos said that within 15 years, Mexico should be competitive enough to stand evenly with its trade partners.

Yet he quickly pointed out that those things that are liabilities for Mexican growers now also ensure the United State won't be flooded with Mexican produce once the agreement is signed. That's a fear commonly expressed by American growers.

Showers, who's been dealing with Mexican markets for about 40 years, agreed that while some U.S. growers will be adversely affected, most will benefit.

"Nothing is going to be flooded because everything is economically driven," he said.

Nation in brief

■ Hearing denies parole for killer, Sirhan

CORCORAN, Calif. — Parole was denied Tuesday for Sirhan B. Sirhan, who is serving a life sentence for the murder of Robert F. Kennedy almost a quarter of a century ago.

"This type of crime is a great threat to the values, mores, and laws of the nation," said Jim Nielsen, chairman of the three-member board of Prison Terms panel that denied parole.

At the last minute, Sirhan refused to attend the hearing. He told guards he wouldn't wear a waist restraint as required of prisoners at parole hearings at Corcoran State Prison, said Lt. J.R. Andrews.

It was the eighth parole hearing for Sirhan, 48, convicted of shooting Kennedy as the New York senator walked through the pantry of Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel on June 5, 1968. Kennedy had just won California's Democratic presidential primary and finished thanking supporters moments before he was shot. He died the next day.

Sirhan, a Christian Arab born in Jerusalem, said later that he was mad at Kennedy for supporting shipment of jets to Israel.

Sirhan was sentenced in 1969 to die in California's gas chamber, but the state Supreme Court declared unconstitutional the death penalty law then in effect. That left Sirhan with a life sentence and the right to seek parole.

■ Drug-dealing gang shoots boy who says 'no'

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — A teen-ager shot while defending his younger brother from a gang had been harassed for a year for refusing to sell drugs, his parents said.

"Every day since they wanted him to sell drugs, be in the gang, life has been a nightmare for me," said Patsy Rembert, after spending the night at her son's hospital bedside.

"I'm tired of hiding. I'm tired of my children hiding."

Winfred Rembert, 16, was shot in the chest less than a block from his home on Sunday afternoon, shortly after returning from church with his father and four younger brothers. His condition was upgraded to fair Tuesday.

A boy was arrested late Tuesday in the shooting, said Judith Mongillo, a police spokeswoman. Because of his age, his identity was not released.

The Rembert family told police the Kensington Street International gang held a grudge against Winfred and his 14-year-old brother, Edgar, because they wouldn't sell or store drugs.

The trouble Sunday began when Edgar, on an errand for his parents, was roughed up and his bike damaged by members of a drug gang that began operating two months ago out of a house down the street from the Remberts' two-story home, Winfred Rembert Sr. said Monday.

Rembert said he got in a fight with the gang when he asked them to pay for the damage. His wife and Edgar raced to his aid, followed by Winfred.

As the scuffle continued and Winfred, a 6-foot-3 high school basketball player, tried to protect his younger brother, he was shot by a youth who had tried to recruit him into the gang, his parents said.

■ Bush wants private group to process Haitians

WASHINGTON — President Bush issued an order Tuesday clearing the way for the government to hire a private voluntary organization to process refugee applicants in Haiti. He also named his nominee for the new U.S. ambassador to the troubled island.

The White House said Bush will nominate Roland K. Kuchel, a career Foreign Service officer, to succeed Alvin P. Adams Jr. in the diplomatic post. Kuchel, 53, is a Princeton-educated senior personnel officer at the State Department.

Adams was heavily involved in U.S. efforts to promote democracy and civilian rule in Port-au-Prince.

The directive that Bush issued was intended to expand the government's capacity to handle the flood of applications from Haitians seeking to leave their troubled homeland.

Bush has ordered the Coast Guard to intercept Haitian refugee boats at sea and return them to Port-au-Prince. The Supreme Court last week stayed an appeals court ruling that struck down the policy as unconstitutional.

Meanwhile, the NAACP condemned the Bush administration Tuesday for the order, and called on blacks to "demonstrate their disgust" for the policy with a protest next month.

Campaign seeks to limit congressional terms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just off the floor of the House chamber hangs a portrait of Henry Clay, American statesman, defender of duelist Aaron Burr and, in an odd way, hero to proponents of limiting congressional terms.

Champions of the initiative barely mention Clay's stellar 50-year career in the House, Senate and executive branch, certainly an argument against term limits.

Rather, they point to a single day — Nov. 4, 1811 — when the 34-year-old Clay both took office and was chosen House speaker, unheard of in today's seniority system.

If term-limit supporters had their way, the reviled seniority system would be the first thing to go and young Turks would run the country — at least for a few years.

"We've got to get back to the butchers, bakers and candlestick makers our forefathers intended," said Jim Coyne, a former Pennsylvania congressman who heads Americans to Limit Congressional Terms.

Voters in 15 states could decide this November whether to impose term limits on their senators and congressmen.

The limits, if passed, would go into effect around the turn of the century. All would limit senators to 12 years of service. The restriction on House terms would vary from six years to 12. None would be retroactive.

As of Aug. 1, such initiatives had gained ballot position in nine states — California, Michigan, Wyoming, South Dakota, Florida, Nevada, Washington, Oregon and Montana.

Four states are awaiting certification — Arizona, Arkansas, Missouri and Nebraska. Proponents in two states — Ohio and North Dakota — are rushing to meet an Aug. 5 deadline for turning in their petitions for ballot spots.

Only one state — Colorado — has adopted limits of 12 years on House and Senate members. The initiative will not affect lawmakers until 2002.

Proponents contend that lifelong politicians, controlled by special interest groups, are responsible for the Washington legislative gridlock and only term limits will get things moving.

They dismiss suggestions that the record turnover predicted this election year — already 86 lawmakers have announced retirements, sought other offices or lost primaries — indicates that the current system works.

Paul Jacob, campaign director of U.S. Term Limits, said those leaving are either "the person caught in scandal, corruption or just a breach of trust or the very person who should be serving who's decided Washington, D.C., doesn't work and wants to get out."

Proponents also scoff at the idea that term limits are a Republican effort to gain control of the House and Senate after years in the minority.

Cleta Mitchell of the Term Limits Legal Institute said most women and minorities, who tend to be Democrats, win open seats. "The argument that it is a Republican plot is a crock," said Mitchell, a Democrat.

Opponents of term limits say the restrictions assume voters are either ignorant or incapable of identifying the rascals. They say the system would force out good people, perhaps someone with the talent of a Henry Clay.

"People know perfectly well ... what to do with incumbents they don't want," said Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., a term-limit opponent.

Voters in Washington state last year defeated an initiative, which would have been retroactive, by about 100,000 votes, 54 percent to 46 percent.

Swift found it ironic that Coyne, who served one term in Congress in the early 1980s, is leading the charge for term limits.

"He defeated an incumbent and was defeated as an incumbent," Swift said of the former Republican lawmaker. "He's living proof that it can be done."

Swift says the idea "that people need a disciplinary mechanism to do the right thing is anti-democratic."

Even if all the states pass the initiative, a final decision likely will rest with Congress and later the U.S. Supreme Court. Many legal scholars believe an amendment to the Constitution would be required.

Jacob is convinced the historic changing of the guard will help secure such an amendment.

"If we win in 15 states, with the turnover, I'm confident we'll have a very good shot at getting a constitutional amendment out of Congress in 1993," he said.

Colleges must make cuts even as enrollments rise

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — More students than ever want a college education at a time when the majority of the nation's public colleges and universities are in serious financial trouble, according to a new report.

The report by the American Council on Education, a lobbying and research group representing 1,800 schools, found that most public institutions in the past year were faced with budget reductions that led them to cut staff, reduce class offerings or raise tuition.

The financial gloom settling over many state governments is having a profound effect on public colleges, which commonly rely on state funds for up to 60 percent of their budgets.

"A majority of public institutions are in trouble," said Elaine El-Khawas, vice president for research at the council and author of the study. "If we're arguing that we need a more educated work force, we need to decide how to do it. We need a new way of financing higher education."

The annual study analyzes the results of a survey sent to 510 representative colleges and universities. Senior administrators at 81 percent of the schools responded to the questionnaires, which asked about funding, enrollment and hiring patterns.

When schools are forced to cut budgets in midyear — often the result of state legislatures and schools operating on different fiscal calendars — the results can be dramatic, the report says. Many schools this year reported bigger classes, fewer course offerings, pay freezes, a delay in fixing buildings and buying new equipment for scientific labs and reductions in library acquisitions. Others said they had to postpone beginning new programs.

Nationwide, 81 percent of public four-year schools said they had raised tuition to ease financial pressures. More than half the private schools said they had begun charging more.

In California, public four-year schools are bracing for state budget cuts of 10 to 20 percent. The state universities already have raised tuition 40 percent for next year. The University of California will charge 22 percent more in the fall, part of an 85 percent fee increase over the past three years.

State university students will find campuses with fewer classes when they start school in the fall. This past year, students complained they could not get classes they needed to graduate and, as a result, would have to stay on campus years longer than expected.
