Composite Index of Leading Economic Indicators

Economy makes big jump, report shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity jumped 1.7 percent in January, its biggest advance in almost two years, the Commerce Department said Friday.

The department said the January advance in its Index of Leading Indicators came after weak performances since last June, a period when the index dropped four out of seven months.

The Reagan administration hailed the big January increase as proof the economy was rebounding strongly following a late summer slowdown, but many private economists cautioned against attributing too much significance to the unusually large gain.

Wall Street, however, took heart from the increase with the stock market advancing toward record levels on news of the report, which was much higher than most forecasters had expected.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which traded as high as the 1,304.1305 range at midsession, closed with a 15.35-point gain at a record high 1,299.36. That topped the previous closing peak of 1,297.92 reached Feb. 13, and lifted the average's gain for the week to 23.52 points.

The New York Stock Exchange's composite index gained 1.11 to 106.04, just short of its Feb. 13 record of 106.08.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the indicators "are predictive of healthy growth in the economy in the months ahead."

"The economic horizon is very bright," he said.

Lawrence Chimerine, chairman of Chase Econometrics, a private forecasting firm, said, however, that he did not "attach any great significance" to the gain since it followed seven months of sluggish activity.

"The other data we have indicates the economy is picking up, but at a pretty modest rate and certainly not as much as today's leading indicators suggest," he said.

Roger Brinner, a senior economist at Data Resources Inc., said that the leading indicators showed strength on the spending side of the economy, but he said domestic production was "vulnerable" to foreign competition spurred by the strong dollar.

Brinner forecast growth of 3.6 percent this year, far below the 6.9 percent pace set in 1984, the best showing in more than three decades.

Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, disagreed, predicting growth would top 5 percent in the first half of the year.

NASA scrubs next week's launch of Challenger

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Next week's planned launch of space shuttle Challenger with Sen. Jake Garn as a passenger has been scrubbed because of problems with two $100 million satellites, NASA announced Friday night.

The agency said it will combine some features of the mission with those of a March 22 flight, which also has been canceled. The new mission, which will require outfitting the shuttle Discovery for a Canadian communications satellite that was to have flown on next week's journey, may not get off the ground until April.

The problems are in two satellites — one already in space and one in the Challenger's cargo bay.

NASA believes there is a problem with devices aboard the tracking and data relay satellites that encode secret signals being relayed between ground stations and military shuttle flights. The space agency refused to be specific about the problems, saying that is classified information.

"The TDRS spacecraft has encryption devices installed to protect the system from interfering signals," NASA said. "It is therefore impossible to provide further technical detail regarding the problem without exposing the nature of the protection system."

NASA said it would select a launch date and name a crew for the combined flight aboard Discovery next week. NASA could not say whether Garn will be aboard that mission, but if precedent is followed, he would be on the flight.

"Obviously, I'm very disappointed that the flight has been canceled," Garn said Friday night. "However, under the circumstances, it was the only responsible decision that NASA could make. We are dealing with nearly a $100 million satellite and it would have been totally irresponsible on NASA's part to put a satellite out there into orbit without being certain it would operate properly."

Garn, a Utah Republican, was to have flown as a congressional observer in his role as chairman of an appropriations subcommittee that oversees NASA spending.

Patrick Baudry, the first French astronaut assigned to fly on an American spaceship, also was to have been part of the seven-member crew for next week's flight.

During the flight, the crew was to deploy the TDRS-B and a Canadian communications satellite, as well as conduct French and American medical experiments.

The question of whether to fly Challenger's crew headed by Karol Bobko, or Discovery's crew, commanded by Daniel Brandenstein, will have to be determined. That will decide whether Garn gets his long-sought ride into space.

Discovery's crew was to have chased down, recovered and returned to Earth a scientific satellite deposited in space by another shuttle crew last April. NASA said Friday that this will be done on a later flight, not the combined mission.

A combined shuttle flight was flown last August after Discovery's maiden flight was aborted four seconds before liftoff during a launch attempt last June.

Earlier Friday, NASA without explanation ordered a halt to work being done on the launch pad to isolate a bad battery cell in the TDRS satellite that had already forced one delay in the flight.

Reliable sources who spoke on condition they not be identified said they understood that another TDRS satellite launched two years ago, TDRS-A, had developed command problems.

Reagan names task force to study family violence

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — When President Reagan promised in his 1984 State of the Union address to do something about such "horrible crimes" as wife beating, the wives of two administration officials could take a special interest.

One was Charlotte Fedders, whose husband, John M. Fedders, was the chief enforcement officer of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Her husband had been beating her periodically throughout their 18 years of marriage, testimony in a divorce case said.

Another was Lois Herrington, an assistant attorney general and the wife of John Herrington, then the head of the White House Office of Personnel, now secretary of energy. Mrs. Herrington is playing a key role in trying to carry out Reagan's vow.

This week's disclosure of Fedders' physical abuse of his wife — a charge he acknowledged although he said it had been exaggerated by the press — called new attention to Reagan's State of the Union pledge.

The record shows that Reagan partially has made good on his promise. The administration appointed a task force on family violence and put Mrs. Herrington in charge.

The task force has focused public attention on inside-the-home crimes of violence that often get hushed up. Some call Mrs. Herrington "the Madonna of the movement."

She's traveled thousands of miles to persuade state and local authorities to change their laws and tactics on family violence. The Justice Department intends to hand out grants for local training programs.

"It's important to acknowledge the important work Lois Herrington has done in this area. She has been a real heroine, but I would not extend my glowing comments to the rest of the administration," said Nancy King, deputy director of the Center for Women Policy Studies.

Ms. King and others complain that Reagan administration budget cuts have hurt the campaign.

Fedders' quick resignation on Tuesday following the public revelations spared the administration the embarrassment of having to explain how an official could keep his job in view of Reagan's position on family violence.

In the divorce proceedings, Mrs. Fedders, 41, the mother of five sons, testified that she at different times suffered a wrenched neck, bruises and a wound that required stitches.

Fedders, in resigning, acknowledged that he had abused his wife. "On seven occasions during more than 18 years of marriage, marital disputes between us resulted in violence for which I feel and have expressed great remorse," he said.

Experts say that family violence cuts across economic lines. It happens in the richest of families, they say.

Estimates vary widely on the number of women who are the victims. Ms. King's center says studies indicate between two million and six million women are severely beaten each year and one in every four women is battered at some point in their lives.

Judge grants murder suspect new trial date

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — March 14 is the date set Friday by 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater for the new trial of 18-year-old Christopher Phillip Lopez on a charge of murder in the Aug. 4, 1984, fatal shooting of 15-year-old Irineo Barrosa Duran.

Ater previously had set March 11, but Lopez's attorney John W. Smith informed the judge he was scheduled to be in trial in Midland before County Court-at-Law Judge Willie DuBose that day.

Ater initially refused to change the Lopez trial to a later date, saying he had already set his docket and Smith had not notified him last week of the potential conflict. The judge informed Smith if he was not in court to begin the trial he would order sheriff's deputies to pick him up and bring him to court.

As Ater and Smith continued to wrangle about the impossibility of being in two places at one time, Assistant District Attorney Dennis Cadra said he would have no objection to switching the Lopez trial with another, if the judge felt it could be done.

Ater finally agreed to move Lopez's trial date to March 14, but he admonished Smith that if he was not in court next Thursday he would send sheriff's deputies to get him.

Lopez originally went on trial last December, but it ended with the jury deadlocked after about 10 hours of deliberation and Ater declared a mistrial.

The shooting of Duran occurred while he was a passenger in a vehicle driven by John Vargas on a dead-end street in South Ranchito Estates, a southeast Odessa subdivision. Testimony during the trial indicated Lopez shot at the Vargas vehicle because he believed Vargas was trying to back up and hit him.

Lopez and other witnesses testified they believed Vargas has earlier last year fired shots into the Lopez home, which wounded his mother in May 1984. Lopez's 19-year-old brother, Ronald Don, and 18-year-old John Moreno, were killed June 23 in what has been described as a continuing family feud.

Reagan won't extend restraints Japanese may increase auto exports to U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced Friday he will not interfere with the lifting of restraints on the sale of Japanese automobiles in the United States at the end of this month.

The decision is expected to result in increased sales of smaller, less-expensive Japanese models and an overall drop in auto prices for U.S. consumers. It was greeted with dismay by U.S. automakers and union officials.

In a brief written statement, Reagan said, "It is my decision not to urge the Japanese to extend their voluntary export restraints on automobiles to the United States. In taking this action, I hope that we can look forward to reciprocal treatment by Japan."

The United States and Japan recently agreed to discuss lowering Japanese trade barriers to American-made electronic and telecommunications equipment, forest products, medical equipment and pharmaceuticals.

Those talks are still in the preliminary stages, and White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan had received no assurances from the Japanese that they would agree to accept more U.S. products.

The president's decision, Fitzwater said, was based on his conclusion that it was "in the best national interest of the United States," that it would benefit American consumers and that the U.S. auto industry, having recovered from a long recession, is now "able to compete in world markets."

The action, which had been expected for several weeks, also was consistent with Reagan's free-trade philosophy and agreements signed at the last two economic summit conferences at which the industrialized democracies agreed to remove trade barriers between them.

Asked whether the Japanese had agreed to consider reimposing voluntary export limits if their sales to the United States exceed some agreed-upon figure, Fitzwater said, "There are no hidden deals."

However, one senior administration official, discussing the president's decision on condition he not be named, predicted on the basis of talks with Japanese officials that there would be no surge in auto imports.

The Japanese limited their sales in the United States to 1.85 million vehicles a year under a system of "voluntary restraints" adopted with administration support four years ago to ward off tougher congressional action aimed at protecting hard-hit domestic automakers.

The result of the sales limit was that Japanese automakers tended to export a greater share of their higher-priced models, which generally carry bigger markups and mean greater profits per car sold.

The administration expects the price of automobiles to go down as a result, but Fitzwater refused to speculate on how much, saying there have been varying estimates in a number of studies.

FAMILY

In his 1984 address to Congress, Reagan promised to "intensify our drive against...horrible crimes like sexual abuse and family violence."

In an interview, Mrs. Herrington, 46, a former Alameda County, Calif., prosecutor, said "I view it (Reagan's commitment to the issue) as absolute."

Attacking family violence squares with the administration's "pro-family" view. Mrs. Herrington said, because if "the family is not operating well together then they aren't going to be a very good family."

Women's groups dealing with battered wives praise Mrs. Herrington's effort to spotlight family violence, but say that administration budget cuts in the Departments of Health and Human Services, Labor and Housing and Urban Development undercut the cause.

A 1982 survey by the Center for Women Policy Studies showed 95 percent of the nation's domestic violence programs reported a drop in federal money in the administration's first year.

Money for the fund — up to $75 million in 1985 — will come from criminal fines and the sale of items confiscated by federal law enforcement officials.

Despite their efforts, the administration opposed as duplicative family violence legislation in Congress last fall. The measure passed and Reagan signed it.

Originally sponsored by Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., the legislation would give states money to set up shelters for abused women and children. Congress has not appropriated any money yet.

Eagle Scouts honored at banquet

From Staff Reports

The Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trail Council, recognized 21 of its 1984 area Eagle Scouts at an annual banquet Friday at Mission Dorado Country Club.

The purpose of the banquet, according to spokesman Stephen Odom, "was to honor scouts who received Eagles last year, and to name the 1984 troop in honor of an outstanding individual in the community."

This year, the 1984 Eagle Scouts named its class in honor of Midlander Gladys Abell. "She should be honored as an outstanding citizen of Midland for her volunteer work both in the past and in the present," Odom said.

Featured speaker at the banquet was Thomas Wageman, president of RepublicBank First National Midland.

Police investigating MidTran missing funds

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland Police Department of Internal Affairs is continuing its investigation into a reported $408 in missing funds from the city's public transportation service. Police say the amount missing may be substantially more than $408.

An undisclosed number of Mid-Tran employees were given polygraph, or lie detector, tests Thursday and Friday, a police department spokesman said. He refused to discuss the tests' results.

According to Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor, "We gave some polygraphs. I don't know the outcome of them, though."

McGregor revealed that $408 has been reported missing from the department since the investigation began in mid-February. "From the days we have looked at, we have discovered $408."

"Now, we have gone and looked at some additional days and we're over some (what had been reported as revenue) so it's really less than $408...It's really not a material amount of money," McGregor said.

Police, however, said the missing amount of money could exceed $10,000.

"That is not right," said McGregor. "It's $408. That's over a three-day period and then we checked four or five days after that and we were long some. I don't know who told you that, but they're wrong."

McGregor defended MidTran employees saying, "We don't know if somebody might have walked off the street and got that money. We don't even know for sure that we've got any of our people who are going to be able to really substantiate anything."

Police investigating attempted burglary of vehicle

From Staff Reports

Midland police are looking for two men in connection with an attempted burglary of a vehicle while it was parked Friday on Delmar Drive.

Lila McGowan, 1106 Delmar Drive, told police she observed the men approach the vehicle about 9:30 a.m. in a white Chevrolet pickup with yellow and orange stripes on its side. She said one man got out of the car, walked toward her vehicle, opened the driver's door and leaned down as though he was "working under the dash," according to the police report.

Ms. McGowan told police the men left the scene when they noticed her watching from her front door. The men drove west onto Bedford Drive from Delmar Drive.

In other complaints, Frederick Paul Soucy, 4303 Miller Court, reported $306 in cash was stolen Friday from an apartment located at 4828 Billingsley Blvd.

Guadalupe S. Dominguez, 403 E. Nobles, reported someone broke into a residence at 1000 N. Terrell St. between 6 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m. Friday, and destroyed a sofa, loveseat and broke the windows to her 1980 Ford two-door parked underneath the carport. Police reported the total loss has not been determined.

Joel D. Starnes, 5202 Teakwood, reported a radar detector was stolen from his vehicle Thursday while it was parked in the 700 block of W. Texas Ave. The burglary is believed to have occurred between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. The radar detector is valued at $275.

Someone broke into El Calvario United Methodist Church, 1209 Garden Lane, between Feb. 12 and 13 and stole percussion instruments which had a total value of $650, according to police reports.

Linda Kay Rogers, 209 S. Jefferson, told police someone broke into her residence between 9:30 a.m. and noon Friday and stole a cable television converter box, telephone and stereo equipment together valued at $381.

Office furniture, together valued at $1,778, was reported stolen between Feb. 21-28 from a modular facility located in the 800 block of Mineola Street, police reported.

The property, belonging to Son Corp. of Wichita, Kan., was discovered missing Friday, according to reports.

Independence Plaza opens

From Staff Reports

One day into the second 100 years of Midland's history the city's third tallest building, the 16-story Independence Plaza, located at the corner of Big Spring and Illinois was officially opened Thursday with a formal ribbon cutting ceremony.

Ground was broken for the 160,000 square foot, $18 million project in early 1982, with the Judwin Company of Houston acting as developer and general contractor.

Said Wei-Chiu, vice president of Judwin Company: "We were a parochial Houston developer that came to Midland and were quickly charmed by the energy, character and sincerity of the people. We determined that Midland was a city founded on imagination, hard work and vision, and we wanted to be a part of it."

Chiu said the project had been conceived during a boom, survived hard times and was now opening during a period of recovery. He also said it was the single largest investment in real estate of the Judwin Company.

According to Building Manager, Mark Chesson, the building is now about 50 percent rented, with 100 percent occupancy anticipated within the next six to eight months.

Major tenants in the building to date are: Texas Commerce Bank, which has leased the first and eighth floors; Estoril Production on the 16th floor and Anadarko Production on the 13th. Mabee Petroleum, another tenant, leases less than one floor with other companies.

The first seven levels of the 16 story building are parking garages.

Odessa officer Pecos' new chief

From Staff Reports

PECOS — The Pecos City Council Thursday hired an Odessa police officer to be that West Texas city's new police chief, according to city manager Bill Hopper.

Lawrence C. Holley was sworn in at 2 p.m. Friday and officially assumed command of the Pecos police department, effective immediately.

Holley, a corporal, joined the Odessa police department three years ago, spending nearly two and a half years as a detective in the armed robbery division. Most recently he has been assigned to the patrol division. He retired from the U.S. Army as a sergeant major with the military police.

Holley succeeds Chief Jim Wilson, a 20-year veteran of the Pecos department, who asked to be relieved as chief and reassigned to regular duties, according to city manager Hopper.

Holley holds a double master's degree in criminal justice and human relations, a bachelor's degree in justice administration and an associate degree in law enforcement.

Yonts named Circulation Manager

From Staff Reports

Clint Yonts has been named manager of the Circulation Department at the Midland Reporter-Telegram effective immediately.

Yonts

Yonts moved to Midland in July 1976. He formerly served as a part-time employee in the Distribution Department, worked as a district, state circulation and assistant circulation manager prior to being named circulation manager.

Yonts said the major priority in his new capacity will be to "satisfy the customer. Our main objective is to give our customers the best service available."

He and his wife, Tami, have a son, Christopher, and a daughter, Kylie.

Defense attorney Smith emphasized this string of events to jurors during the trial, trying to convince them Lopez feared Vargas and shot at the Vargas vehicle in self defense.

But prosecutor Cadra questioned why Lopez continued to shoot at the Vargas vehicle after it began to move away from him. Lopez stated he never saw a weapon or threatening gesture from Vargas, but said Vargas had smiled menacingly at him as Vargas backed toward him.

Police at the scene said they had no idea how long Burns had been there. But according to Sgt. Ed Nicks of the Midland Police Department, evidence at the scene indicated the accident had happened recently.

Burns was pronounced dead at 9:40 p.m. by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine at Midland Memorial Hospital. He was taken to the hospital on life support equipment and died of massive head injuries, according to Nicks.

The employee of El Paso Natural Gas was driving the motorcycle south when "it looked like he didn't make the curve. Possibly the wind might have caught him and pushed him to the side. It looks like he caught a pedal on the curb," said a police officer at the scene.

According to the wife of the motorcycle's owner, Burns had been interested in buying the bike from Jon Whisler. Whisler, a pilot for El Paso Natural Gas, and Burns were friends.

Mrs. Whisler said Burns was not wearing a helmet.

Mattox's lawyer: Witness lied

AUSTIN (AP) — The defense lawyer for Attorney General Jim Mattox told the judge Friday he believes a key prosecution witness has lied about the case.

"I am confident he was lying to the grand jury. I am confident he is lying to this jury," chief defense attorney Roy Q. Minton said of Thomas McDade, a lawyer with the Fulbright & Jaworski firm that Mattox is accused of threatening in 1983.

Minton's charge came during more than two hours of questioning in which he sought to attack McDade's credibility.

"He is willing to lie to this jury or any jury whenever the mood fits him," Minton told District Judge Mace Thurman, who is presiding over Mattox's commercial bribery trial.

McDade vigorously denied Minton's charge.

Mattox is accused of telling another Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer, Wiley Caldwell, that he would withhold his needed approval of public bonds handled by the firm unless McDade stopped trying to question his sister, Janice Mattox, in a South Texas oil lease case.

Minton's accusation came as he cross examined McDade, who first appeared on the witness stand a week ago.

At that time, McDade testified about the oil lease case, in which he represented Mobil Oil Corp. in a lawsuit brought by wealthy rancher Clinton Mangas and the state.

In a combative series of exchanges, Minton questioned McDade in detail about McDade's actions in that case, which included a bid to have Judge Ruben Garcia of Laredo disqualified from hearing Mangas' lawsuit.

Minton recalled that McDade testified that he couldn't remember how many oil leases were involved or other details.

Minton noted that McDade earlier

STATE

described his memory as a "bathtub" that he fills with facts, then drains when a case is over. Then Minton hammered McDade about how he seemed to remember Mattox-related facts but not other details.

"You didn't pull the plug on those (Mattox) facts, did you?" Minton asked.

"But you didn't know whether there was one lease or two. As a matter of fact, you weren't hired to do anything in the world with this lawsuit — except you were hired to dart around, fool around with these judges and take depositions, and you never knew one thing about this lawsuit, did you?" Minton asked.

McDade said he was fully involved in the Mobil case and simply can't now recall all the specifics.

Minton then began pointing out what he said are discrepancies between McDade's testimony to the Travis County grand jury which indicted Mattox and his answers to questions in later depositions and the current trial.

With the jury out of the courtroom, Minton accused McDade of not telling the truth.

"I deeply resent that," McDade fired back. "I wouldn't lie to this jury and this judge."

"You and I are going to have a discussion about this at a later time and a different place, and don't you forget it," McDade told Minton.

Minton also grilled McDade about McDade's tactics in legal work.

"Mr. McDade, do you make it a habit in litigation to jerk around the lawyers on the other side...to a point that they behave in a way that's going to help you?" Minton asked.

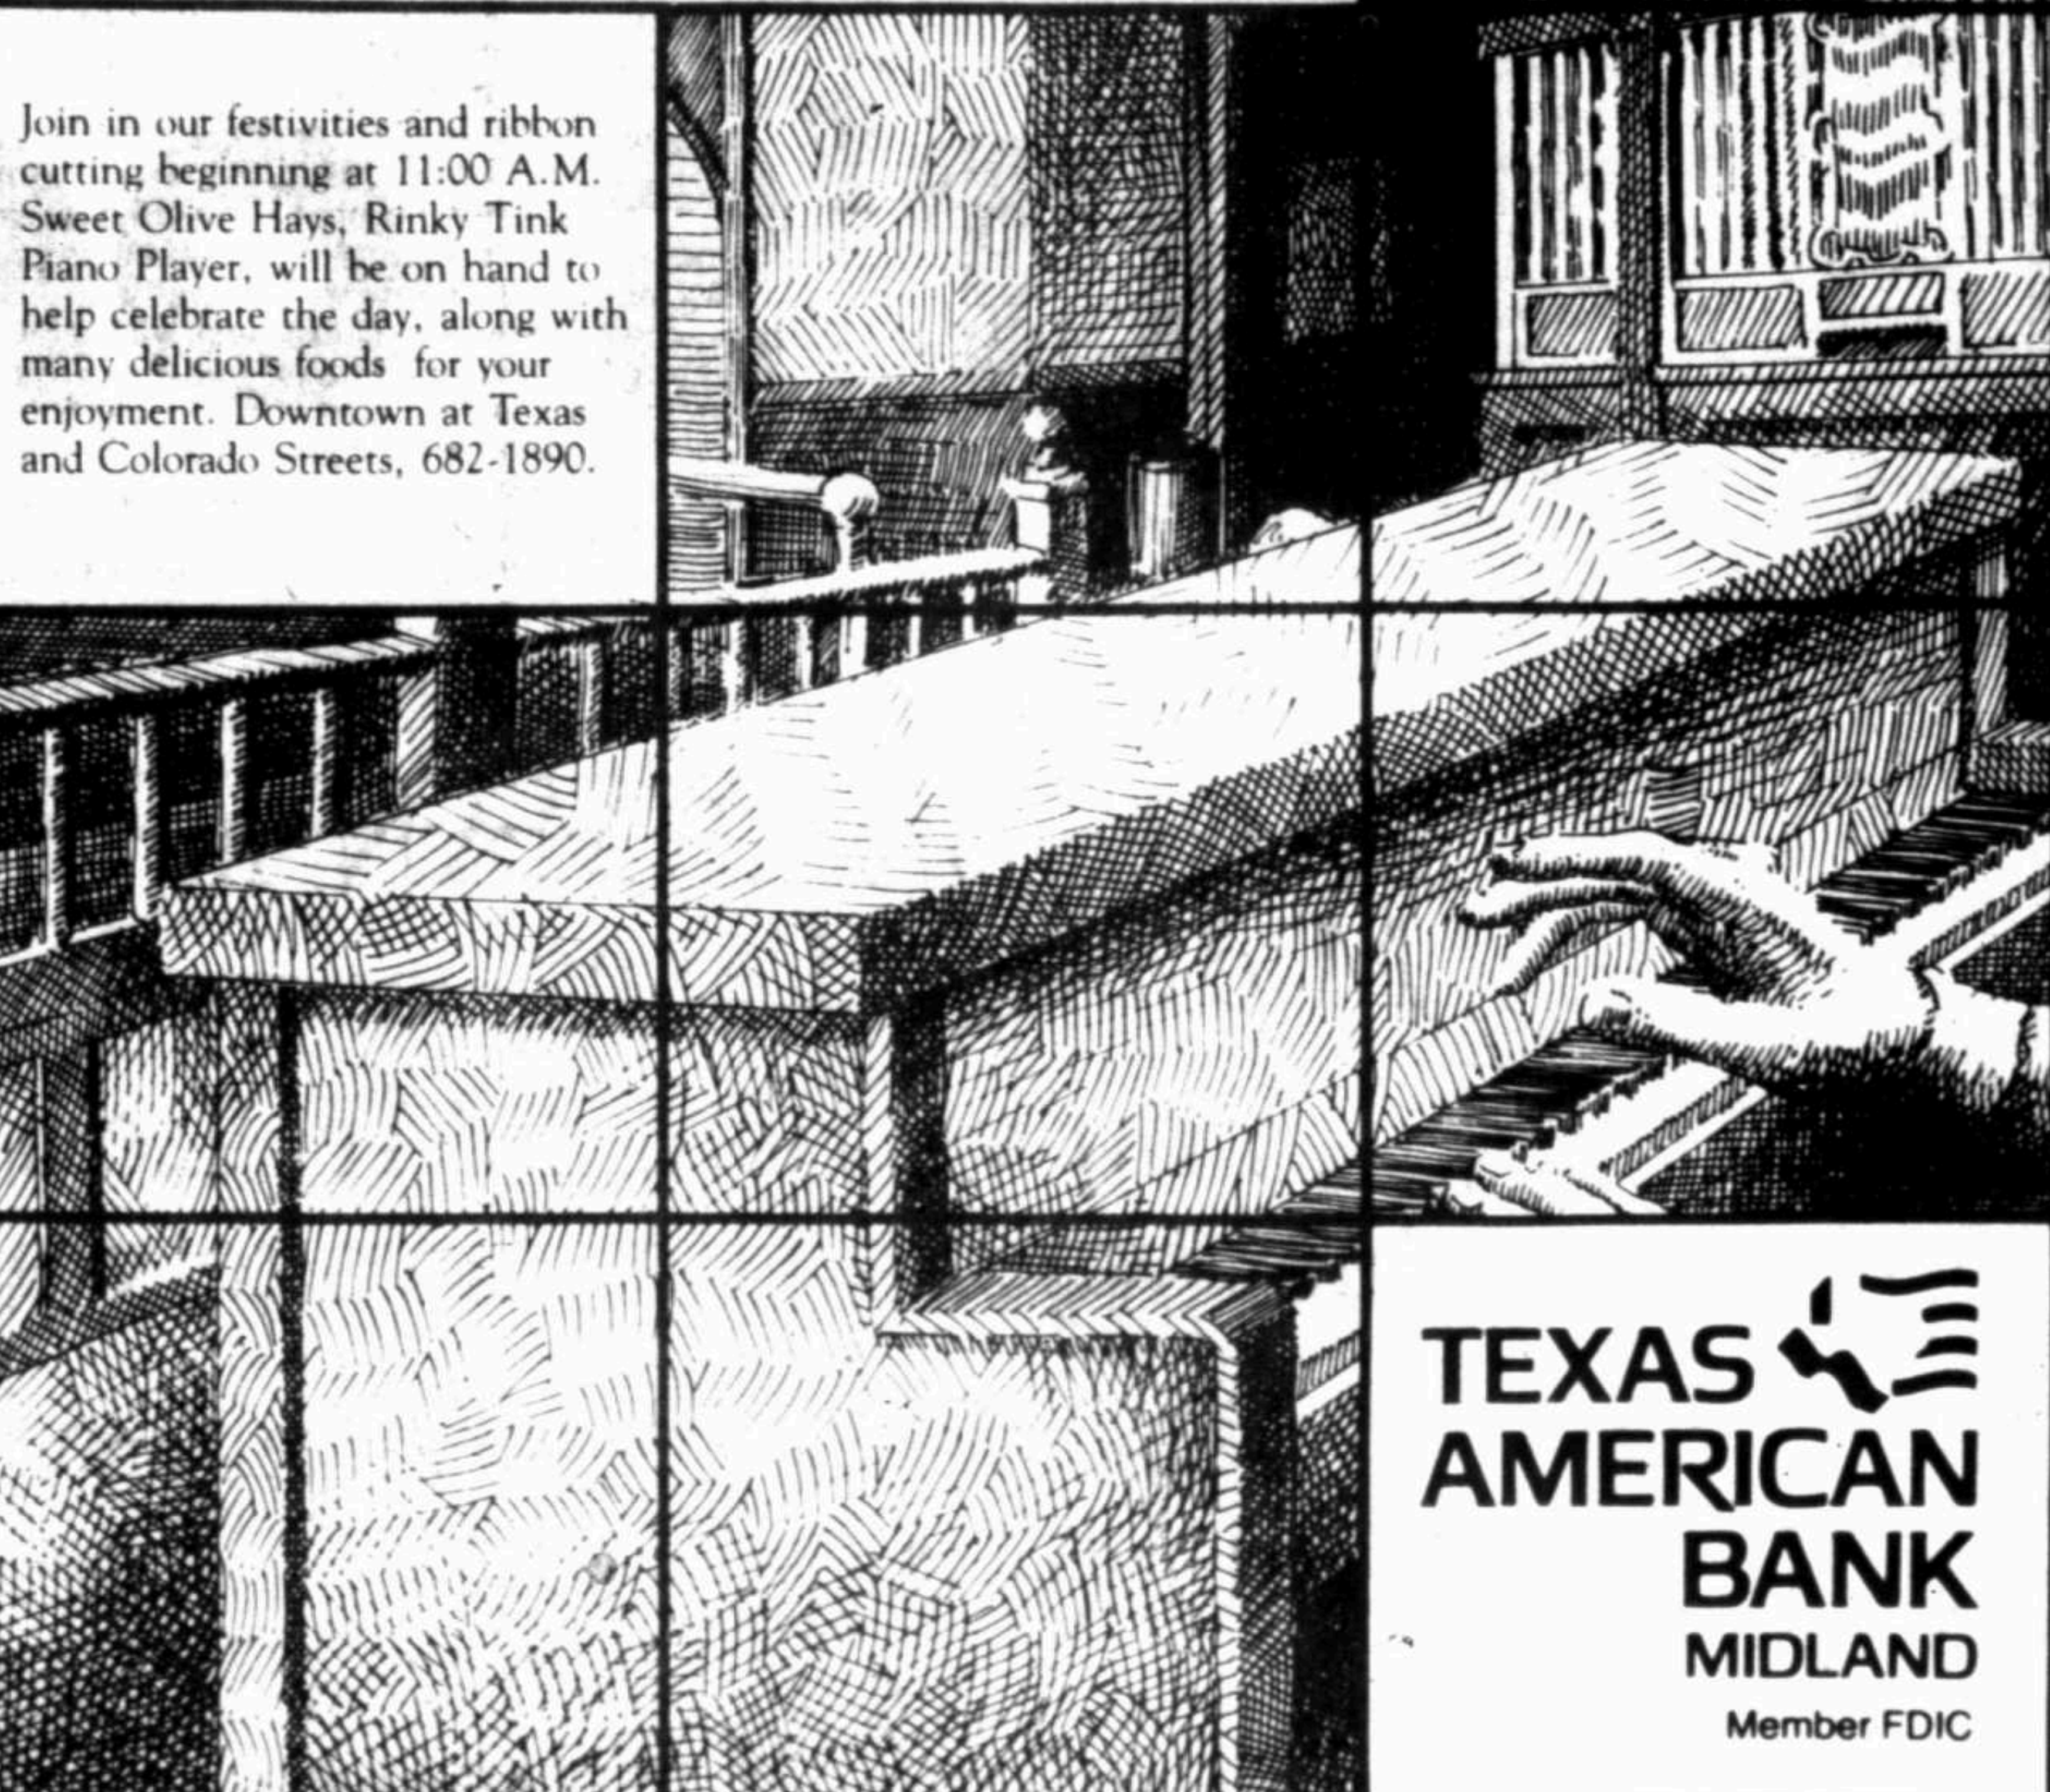

"Mr. Minton, I've been in all kinds of lawsuits, all kinds of situations, with all kinds of lawyers," McDade replied. "Yes, I have engaged in litigation in the past...where lawyers jerk each other around."

"Do you enjoy jerking other lawyers around?" Minton asked.

"Sometimes. When they need it," McDade replied. "That's part of my game. I've played the game when a fellow invites it."

Houston woman traverses world to see total eclipse

By ERIC LAWLOR

HOUSTON (AP) — Natives stumbling through the bush of Oceania that morning were brought up short at the sight of it — a Lone Star flag snapping in the brisk New Guinea air.

Davy Crockett would have been proud — and even prouder of Eva Haverstock, the Houston woman who had raised this flag, not to assert a territorial claim, but merely to announce her presence.

Eva had come halfway around the world to see a total eclipse of the sun. True, the eclipse might have been watched in climes nearer home, but Eva, who has a taste for the exotic, is not one to skimp.

"I'm much too old to worry about saving money," she says.

She and Don, her husband, have been chasing eclipses since 1977.

"That's when I heard of a group of people flying to Columbia to see an eclipse there, and I thought, 'That's fun,'" she says. "Besides, we have friends in Columbia, and it was time we paid them a call."

In the event, the sighting was marred by some last-minute cloud — eclipse hunters are at the mercy of clouds — but it didn't matter. The Haverstocks had caught the bug and, two years later, they were off to see another eclipse — this one in Kenya. Since then, they have been to Indonesia, in 1983, and New Guinea, last year.

"It's such a spiritual feeling watching an eclipse," Eva says explaining why one would bother.

"It's unreal. Out there on the Kenya plain, there were antelope and zebra, and when it got dark, the animals became very quiet, and the birds put their heads under their wings. You could feel the hand of God move across the sky."

"And I'm not a religious person," she adds. "But it's awe-inspiring. There's no other way to describe it. It brings something out in you, you didn't know was there."

She and Don travel with a floating crew of some 20 other enthusiasts from this part of the country, "and each of us has his own job to do." (One of these people is Houston's Paul Maley, whom she describes as "a lot more serious about eclipses than we are. I would say he's the ranking amateur in this part of the country.")

Journalist sues FBI for seizing personal papers on Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Kansas City freelance journalist has filed suit against the Federal Bureau of Investigation for taking personal papers, including his diary, as he passed through customs on his way back from Nicaragua.

Edward Haase, who describes himself as a broadcast engineer and freelance journalist specializing in Nicaragua and U.S.-Nicaragua relations, complained that his constitutional rights were violated when the FBI took his personal papers Jan. 16.

Haase, who had been in Nicaragua 2½ months, said the FBI was called in after U.S. Customs agents at Miami airport went through his luggage and saw newspapers and magazines purchased or given to Haase in Nicaragua.

He quoted Special Agent Joe Miranda as telling him that the FBI and the U.S. Customs Service had the right to search for "subversive materials that advocated the violent overthrow of the United States."

The suit, filed in U.S. District

NATION

Court last week, said Miranda then went through six pieces of Haase's baggage, removed and kept the following items:

—A personal address book.
—A personal diary recording his impressions, activities and thoughts while in Nicaragua.

—Two articles written by Haase, one on the religious holiday called the "Conception of Maria" or Immaculate Conception, and the other a draft of an article on the Nicaragua elections.

—Five sheets of paper containing the names and addresses of organizations providing information and public education in the United States about Nicaragua and Central America, and —Papers concerning the work of the National Network in Solidarity with the People of Nicaragua, described as a coalition of domestic religious, professional, human rights and solidarity groups.

The suit said Haase noticed the FBI had photocopied the personal papers and documents before they were returned to him.

Michael Ratner, attorney for Haase, called the FBI actions "totally unjustifiable and totally unconstitutional."

Patients concerned transfusion might come from AIDS victims

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — William Johnstone's wife died last fall from AIDS contracted through a contaminated transfusion, one of nine victims of infected blood from the city's only blood bank. So when Johnstone undergoes hip surgery in a week, the blood he needs will come from the veins of friends.

"You want to play Russian roulette?" Johnstone said. "Even if it were an emergency — and I had some say in the matter — I wouldn't take blood out of the pool."

Mary Johnstone's tainted transfusion came from Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, the first blood bank to suggest a link between AIDS and blood transfusions after it reported the January 1983 death of a baby who had received AIDS-infected blood, according to Brian McDonough, Irwin executive director.

Growing public awareness of AIDS transfusions has people worried that the blood used in their operations came from someone who eventually developed the fatal disease, which attacks the body's immune system, leaving its victims vulnerable to rare and fatal diseases.

McDonough said Friday.

"There are some very responsible people who are afraid, and they call, and just say, 'Is there anything you can tell me?'" McDonough said. "And about all we can say is, if we knew, you would have been notified by now."

More than 3 million people get transfusions nationwide each year, and there have been 119 AIDS-transfusion deaths since 1979, medical researchers say.

As many as 162 people have been exposed to AIDS-infected blood in transfusions from Irwin, blood bank officials say. Half of those exposed have died from other causes, and of the remainder, blood bank officials anticipate as many as 30 more transfusion deaths this year.

As of Feb. 25, the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta reported a total of 8,597 AIDS cases and 4,145 deaths since the disease first was diagnosed in 1979. Of that total, 119 people — 104 adults or adolescents and 15 babies — contracted the illness through blood transfusions.

At Irwin, officials continuously check their donor records against the latest names on the lists of diagnosed AIDS cases from the county health agencies, which are coming in at a rate of two a day, McDonough said. So far, 38 donors have been confirmed as AIDS victims.

The problem of informing transfusion patients has raised some tough ethical issues for medical professionals, said Dr. James R. Allen, chief of transfusion of blood studies for the AIDS task force at the Centers for Disease Control.

Based on current statistics, the probability of receiving AIDS-infected blood in San Francisco is about one in 20,000, McDonough said. Yet despite the low risk, Irwin has seen a sudden jump in donor-designated blood, which is given by family or friends for a specific individual.

In January, there were virtually no such donations. In February, they accounted for 7 percent of all of Irwin's donated blood.

Blood banks hope a test expected to be available in the next month will virtually eliminate the risk of using AIDS-contaminated blood.

Pan Am to permanently lay off some strikers

NEW YORK (AP) — Strike-bound Pan American World Airways operated only a fraction of its flights Friday, and an executive said the long-troubled airline would permanently lay off some strikers in a cost-cutting move.

Pan Am scheduled only 16 round-trip flights out of U.S. airports Friday, the second day of the walkout by 5,753 mechanics, baggage handlers, flight dispatchers and food service workers, said airline spokeswoman Pamela Hanlon.

Most of Pan Am's 19,000 hourly employees, including pilots, have refused to cross picket lines set up by the Transport Workers Union, Ms. Hanlon said, forcing the airline to rebook about 25,000 passengers a day on other airlines.

"A handful" of flights were being operated between overseas points, she said. The only area not hit hard was Pan Am's internal German operation, where almost all of the 100 flights were operating.

Pan Am normally operates about 400 daily flights worldwide.

"Basically we have shut down our domestic service and are concentrating on international flights," Ms. Hanlon said.

The company plans to expand service gradually as it moves in some 200 management pilots, 225 non-union flight attendants, and 1,500 administrators to serve as ground personnel, she said.

There have been no negotiations since the strike was declared, and no talks have been scheduled.

Meanwhile, John Kerrigan, director of the Transport Workers' airline division, said Pan Am began dismantling its commissary operations in

New York, San Francisco and Honolulu on Friday and contracted out the work to Marriott Hotels.

"This indicates to us that they are going to permanently replace about 800 of our members," he said. "It certainly doesn't put people in the mood to sit down and negotiate."

Pan Am Vice President Jeff Krienderer confirmed the job cuts but said they had not been provoked by the strike.

"I don't think this is any surprise to them," Krienderer said. "We've told them this has been our intention all along."

The TWU struck after rejecting a 20 percent wage increase over three years plus bonuses, in return for increased productivity and reduced health and pension benefits.

The union says a 14 percent wage increase it postponed in 1982, when Pan Am faced bankruptcy, has yet to be restored.

Pan Am had a pre-tax operating loss of $106.7 million last year. It has not made a profit since 1980 and has cut more than 8,000 jobs in the past five years.

The walkout stranded Karen Irwin, who had planned to meet her son Michael, 14, in New York on Friday and fly to Saudi Arabia, where her husband works for an oil company.

Mrs. Irwin, who flew in from Dharan on Thursday, was kept standing on the landing strip at John F. Kennedy International Airport for 20 minutes because someone had sabotaged all the locks on the back doors of Pan Am's terminal.

Judge denies doctor's request for new murder trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A judge on Friday denied Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald's request for a new trial in the slayings of his pregnant wife and two young daughters, the story of which became the basis for the best-selling book and TV miniseries, "Fatal Vision."

U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree said a second jury "would again reach the almost inescapable conclusion that he was responsible for these horrible crimes."

MacDonald, a former Green Beret doctor, is serving three life sentences after being convicted in 1979 of murdering his wife, Colette, and daughters, Kimberly and Kristen, at their Fort Bragg apartment in 1970.

MacDonald has maintained that four drug-crazed intruders killed his family and attacked him. His lawyers said during a January hearing that he deserved a new trial because two "repugnant" women admitted killing his family.

But the judge dismissed the purported confessions of Helena Stoeckley and Cathy Perry Williams, the latter coming the day before last November's airing of the "Fatal Vision" miniseries.

In a 111-page order, Dupree said they "were drawn to the case and have contributed to a factual charade which has allowed it to continue for more than a decade and a half. Their 'confessions' have been shown to be unbelievable."

China still poor nation

The economy of the People's Republic of China exceeds the combined national income of all the rest of East Asia, excluding Japan. But China remains a poor country, with per capita income averaging about $300 a year.

President's inauguration ends Uruguayan dictatorship

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Nearly 12 years of right-wing military dictatorship ended in Uruguay on Friday with the inauguration of President Julio Sanguinetti for a five-year term.

The 49-year-old centrist leader pledged at once to put the military firmly under the control of the new, elected government.

"I can assure that the armed forces are going to be conducted within the guidelines of the constitution," Sanguinetti said, to prolonged applause from lawmakers and dignitaries from 72 countries who witnessed his oath-taking in the legislative palace.

"I will assume supreme command of the armed forces...and carry out that responsibility with a sense of dignity for military institutions," he said. "This dignity will be based in the lofty duty of the soldier, which is the defense of sovereignty and the defense of the constitution."

Sitting stern-faced in the audience back row was army commander

Gen. Hugo Medina, who last week said a military coup could occur if Uruguay plunged into the political and social chaos that prompted the armed forces to seize power in 1973.

With the inauguration, this small republic of 2.8 million people joined the growing number of civilian-run nations in Latin America.

Since 1980, elected civilian governments have replaced military rulers in Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Panama, El Salvador, Venezuela and Argentina, Uruguay's southern neighbor.

Brazil, on the northern border, will inaugurate Tancredo Neves, its first civilian president in 21 years, on March 15.

Thousands of Uruguayans packed Independence Plaza, across from the Presidential Palace, waving political banners and blue-and-white national flags. "Long live democracy!" they cheered. Some had camped in the plaza overnight.

Newspapers ran jubilant headlines. "At-Last, Democracy," declared the traditional daily El Dia.

Another paper, El Pais, said in an editorial: "The past is recent history that does not deserve comment. The Uruguayan decision to return to free institutions, to return to the exercise of democracy, resulted from an unstoppable force."

But Sanguinetti cautioned at his swearing-in, "We cannot ignore the great difficulty of moving from a de facto government which exercised all power to one in which it is subordinate to the legal authorities."

He said he would act as military commander-in-chief "with calmness and firmness."

His defense minister, Juan Chiarino, told reporters Friday morning military officials from now on would be prohibited from making political statements.

There were no declarations by the armed forces.

After the oath-taking, Sanguinetti received the presidential sash from Vice President Enrique Tarigo. The outgoing president by tradition presents the sash, but Sanguinetti refused to allow former military rulers any active part in his inauguration.

Army Gen. Gregorio Alvarez, the last president under military rule, resigned Dec. 12 in what appeared to be a means of avoiding a direct snub by Sanguinetti. Alvarez said it was incompatible to have a de facto president and an elected legislature in power at the same time. Under the plan for return to democracy, Congress and municipal officials were installed on Feb. 15.

Sanguinetti was a key figure in reaching agreement with the military on Nov. 25 national elections. His Colorado Party won by 120,000 votes — the largest victory margin in more than half a century.

His two chief rivals, Wilson Ferreira Aldunate of the center-left National Party and Liber Seregni of the Broad Front leftist coalition, were barred from running for office. In his speech, Sanguinetti appeared to concede that the elections were not totally free and open.

"My greatest ambition was not to arrive here," he said. "My greatest ambition is to hand over power on March 1, 1990, to a new president chosen by the people."

Under Uruguay's constitution, presidents serve for five years and cannot hold office two consecutive terms. Seregni, a retired leftist army general, served eight years in prison under the dictatorship. Ferreira was in exile for 11 years, and the regime arrested him when he returned in June and held him in jail until the elections.

Armed forces leaders seized power in June 1973 after a period of leftist terrorist activity. Labor unrest prompted by a badly slumping economy had virtually paralyzed Uruguay.

The military rulers were unable to get the country financially on track and came under increasing civil pressure to give up power.

Sanguinetti reiterated his commitment to a policy of promoting economic growth as a means of solving the country's economic crisis. Uruguay suffers from 66 percent inflation, 14 percent unemployment and a foreign debt of $5 billion. Its two main exports, beef and wool, have suffered from declining values on world markets.

Extortion suspects allegedly got idea from film 'Loophole'

DALLAS (AP) — Three people accused of extorting over $48,000 from a north Dallas bank got the idea for the scheme from a 1954 movie called "Loophole," in which the robbers escaped through storm sewers, a federal indictment alleges.

Larry Paul Moore, 30; his wife, Beverly Kindie Moore; and his brother Michael Ray Moore, 32, were charged last week in a sealed indictment with conspiracy, robbery and extortion.

The charges stem from the Jan. 20, 1984, robbery of the Promenade National Bank in north Dallas. Robert J. Bigham Jr., the bank's president, said he was forced to withdraw $48,700 from the bank while three masked gunmen held his wife and daughter hostage at their home.

The money was dropped into a trash can at a north Dallas shopping center, authorities said. Police later said the trash can had a false bottom and that the robbers collected the money from below and escaped through storm sewers.

The indictment was unsealed this week after the three were arrested.

The defendants, who have been released on bond, have no prior criminal records and maintain their innocence, authorities said.

According to the indictment, the Moores and Steven Scott Nail, who was not charged in the case "discussed using storm drains to accomplish a bank extortion after watching the home video tape of 'Loophole,'" a 1954 movie starring Dorothy Malone.

During the next few weeks, the Moore brothers and Nail disguised a car with primer paint and cut a hole in the bottom of it, allowing someone to crawl into it unnoticed from a storm drain, according to the indictment.

The indictment charges that the three men went to the Bigham home and held the two family members hostage while Bigham withdrew the money.

Michael Moore owns an electric service company in the Dallas suburb of Mesquite and his brother is a supervisor at the firm, according to documents filed by their attorneys. Mrs. Moore is a homemaker, according to the filings.

Mother sues bar owners, employees

CONROE (AP) — The mother of a 19-year-old Magnolia man who drank himself to death in a Conroe night club is suing the bar, its owners and two employees.

Nelda Hines is suing Pelly's Club for unspecified damages in connection with the December drinking death of her son, Gary Pennington.

Named as defendants in the suit are: Pelly's; club owners Grace Change, Ming Teh Chang and Gary I. Tong, all of Houston; and bartenders Vic Haigh and Elizabeth Evans, both of Conroe.

The suit alleges that on Dec. 12,

Ms. Evans bet Pennington he couldn't drink two 15-ounce Kamikazes, large potent drinks. According to the suit, Pennington was unaware that Haigh made the drinks with 190-proof alcohol.

Pennington collapsed into a coma outside the bar the same night and died in a Houston hospital four days later.

Investigators said the alcohol level in Pennington's blood was 0.485 percent, well above the 0.1 percent level at which a person is considered drunk.

Cuomo not ready to appoint special prosecutor in Goetz case

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo said Friday that he won't act on requests to appoint a special prosecutor in the Bernhard Goetz case until the Manhattan district attorney decides whether to submit the case to a second grand jury.

And Mayor Edward I. Koch said he was going to "take a step back" from his outspoken pronouncements on the case, adding that Goetz had said some "flaky things" since Koch first announced his support for the subway gunman.

A spokeswoman for District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said the prosecutor had made no decision on whether to resubmit the case following the release of potentially damaging statements Goetz gave police after his arrest in Concord, N.H.

Concord police said Goetz told them he decided to shoot four young men as soon as they approached him on a subway train last Dec. 22, even before he felt threatened by them. He also said he shot at one of the youths a second time when it appeared the first shot had not hurt him.

Those statements were considered by the grand jury that heard the Goetz case last month, according to Mary de Bourbon, a spokeswoman for Morgenthau. But their release in court Wednesday prompted a renewed furor over the jury's failure to indict Goetz on attempted murder or assault charges. Instead, he was charged with possessing unregistered guns.

"There was a legally sufficient case there to warrant an indictment," Ms. de Bourbon said, responding to criticism of the district attorney's presentation of the case to the grand jury. "It's been made more clear with the discovery of this information."

She said Morgenthau had been considering resubmitting the charges ever since the original grand jury acted, but she would not say when a decision is expected.

Cuomo said at a news conference in Albany that his director of criminal justice, Lawrence Kurlander, had discussed the case with Morgenthau on Thursday. The governor said no decision would be made about hiring a special prosecutor until the district attorney had a chance to act.

However, Cuomo said the district attorney would need new evidence to resubmit the case to a new grand jury. Police have said they are seeking new evidence in the case.

Koch told reporters Friday that he is not going to comment on whether the case should be resubmitted, and is going to stop making "judgments" about Goetz.

"I'm going to take a step back, and I'm going to allow District Attorney Bob Morgenthau to make the next judgment," he said.

After the first grand jury rendered its verdict, Koch — who already had expressed sympathy for Goetz — said the jurors had acted with "the wisdom of Solomon."

"When the case was first heard, based on the information that was available...I concurred in it," he said Friday. "It may very well be (that there is) new evidence that should be submitted to a new grand jury. If the district attorney...makes that determination, I certainly support it. Nobody is interested in protecting someone who may have engaged in a criminal act."

Koch noted that in recent days Goetz "has made some statements which I have described as bizarre."

He singled out Goetz's statement that 25,000 people should be armed in New York City and trained in the use of guns.

"That was bizarre," Koch said. "He may have done other flaky things or said other flaky things. But whether you're a flake or not doesn't bear on whether you've committed a crime. That's for the criminal justice system to decide."

Apartment fire traps 4-year-old in bedroom

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A fire that apparently started in a closet trapped a 4-year-old boy in his bedroom, and he was in serious but stable condition with burns at a hospital Friday. His younger brother and his father also were hospitalized.

Matthew Peterson, 4, was taken to Duke University Medical Center's burn unit following the Thursday blaze in which flames consumed his bedroom.

Scott and Jamie Peterson, Matthew's parents, and his brother, Daniel, 3, were taken to Lexington Memorial Hospital. Peterson and Daniel were admitted, and were listed in satisfactory condition Friday.

The fire apparently started in a closet in the bedroom where Matthew slept, spreading through the room, said Eddie Mize, assistant Lexington fire chief. Officials are investigating the cause of the blaze. Peterson had returned from work Thursday morning and was asleep in the living room on the couch, Mize said.

"When he woke up, the house was full of smoke," Mize said. "So he attempted to get to the boy. He was driven back by the heat and smoke."

Peterson called to Matthew, telling him to crawl toward him on the floor, Mize said. Peterson ran outside to a window beneath a second bedroom, where Mrs. Peterson and Daniel were.

Mrs. Peterson tossed Daniel from the window to her husband before leaping to the ground from the second story window, about a 12-foot drop.

Firefighters were on the scene in two to three minutes after they were alerted, Lexington Fire Chief Tommy Williams said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Ex-official to be sentenced

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Former Attorney General Paul Douglas, convicted last year of perjury, will be sentenced March 8.

Lancaster County District Judge Jeffrey Cheuvront announced the sentencing date Friday. Douglas, 57, faces a maximum of 20 years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

He was convicted in December of perjury for lying about his business dealings with the now-insolvent Commonwealth Savings Co.

Officer to fight discharge

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — An Air Force captain recommended for discharge because she is overweight blames sex discrimination and says she will take her fight to federal court.

After a closed hearing on Thursday, a panel of three Peterson Air Force Base colonels recommended an honorable discharge for Wanda Fuller of the Space Command. The recommendation will be reviewed by the head of the Air Force Space Command and Air Force Secretary Verne Orr before a decision is made.

Cub Scout honored

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — A 9-year-old Cub Scout has been awarded the Boy Scouts' highest honor for saving the life of a 6-year-old girl trapped in a swimming pool.

Michael Beers, a fourth grade student who is too young to be a full-fledged Boy Scout, received the youth organization's Medal for Meritorious Action this week for saving the life of Stephanie Lynn Weirick, 6.

Stephanie and Michael were playing with other children in a backyard swimming pool at the Beers' home last June when an inflatable boat with Stephanie inside tipped over. As the girl sank, a line from a nearby raft wrapped around her throat, trapping her between the bottom of the pool and the water's surface.

Michael said he saw her mouth moving under water as the girl tried to scream, so he dived in, untangled the rope from her throat and brought her to the surface.

Record high temperatures expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders will have the perfect opportunity for seeking fun in the sun as near record high temperatures are expected for today, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Today will be sunny and warm with the high near 84. Winds will be from the south at 5-15 mph. Tonight will be partly cloudy with the low expected to be near 50. Sunday will be partly cloudy and cooler. The high is expected to be in the middle 70s.

Friday's high of 74 was 11 degrees below the record set in 1976. The low of 44 was 35 degrees above the record low set in 1980.

STATE

Texas basked under spring-like temperatures and mostly fair skies Friday afternoon as dry air continued to spread across West Texas and kept skies mostly dry.

The nearest area of rain in West Texas was 25 to 100 miles offshore along the middle to upper coast. Meanwhile, low clouds continued to sweep northward across the Coastal Plains into East and Southeast Texas, according to the National Weather Service.

Low clouds were still evident over the Red River Valley, stretching from Childress to Texarkana. Otherwise, skies were mostly fair except for partly cloudy skies west of the Pecos.

Temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s across the entire state Friday afternoon. The 4 p.m. extremes ranged from 58 degrees at Childress to 79 at Brownsville.

In the forecast for North Texas, skies should be partly cloudy today with highs in the low to middle 70s. Lows should be in the 50s to low 60s. Sunday should be windy with a chance of thunderstorms and highs in the middle 70s to near 80.

In West Texas, today should be mostly fair with highs in the 70s and 80s. Skies should be partly cloudy tonight and Sunday with lows in the 40s and 50s and highs in the 60s in the Panhandle and the 80s in the Big Bend.

In South Texas, it should be sunny today and partly cloudy Sunday with highs both days in the 70s and 80s. Overnight lows should fall into the 50s and 60s, the weather service said.

NATION

Winter weather moved back into the nation Friday as a storm plowed into the northern Plains and mountain regions of the West, threatening to dump up to 12 inches of snow in parts of Nevada by this evening.

Stockmen's advisories warning of snow and wind were posted Friday night from southeast Montana to the Dakotas, and a winter storm watch was issued for parts of Utah and Nevada.

Snow was expected to become heavy in the mountains of central Nevada, with 6 to 12 inches possible. Generally less than 4 inches of snow could accumulate across northern and central Nevada Friday night.

Victoria, Dallas South Oak Cliff win, gain 5A finals

AUSTIN (AP) — Victoria ended Houston Yates' undefeated season with an emotional 65-63 overtime upset in a Class 5A semifinal Friday night at the UIL girls' state high school basketball tournament.

The Stingettes moved into Saturday's final for the third time in four years. They face Dallas South Oak Cliff, a 68-47 winner over Lubbock Monterey in Friday's other semifinal matchup.

Yates overcame a 14-point third quarter deficit to tie the game with 14 seconds left at 58-58 on Teneke Foster's basket. But Victoria's Karen Gaskin sank four of four free throws in overtime to clinch the win.

Yates was 27-0 going into the game.

Victoria's Tisha Boldt led all scorers with 19 points. Evelyn Handy scored 17 and Foster 15 for Yates.

CHANDRA DISMUKH, a 4-foot-11 sophomore directed South Oak Cliff's fast-break offense in the victory over Lubbock Monterey.

Abernathy, seeking a fifth state girls' basketball championship, advanced to the 5A finals with a 48-38 victory over Honey Grove. Troy, jumped to a 16-0 lead and walloped Seymour 75-36 in the other 5A game.

Dismukh only scored three points but repeatedly broke the full-court Monterey defensive press with her dribbling and passing. SOC led by as many as 31 points before Monterey's shots began falling in the last quarter.

The Lubbock school made only seven of 30 field goal attempts in the first half.

Rhonda Bugge was high scorer for SOC with 16 points and 13 rebounds. Laura Supak scored 12 for Monterey, which also lost to SOC in the 1980 finals.

Girls State Playoffs

PHOEBE DINN, an all-around player last year when Abernathy won the 5A championship, scored 18 points, including 12 of her team's 12 first-quarter points. The 5-foot-7 junior also led the offensive effort that forced 34 Honey Grove turnovers, which Abernathy converted to 28 points.

Abernathy led after breaking a 15-15 tie midway through the second quarter. Johnnie Harrell, who had only two points at halftime, scored 12 in the second half for Abernathy, which also won titles in 1980, 1981 and 1984.

Trailing 38-18 at halftime, Honey Grove lost the ball on turnovers on its first four possessions of the second half and never threatened after that. Only once in those four possessions did the Warriors get the ball across midcourt. Lashone Johnson, with 15 points and 10 rebounds, led Honey Grove.

SEYMOUR, STARTING five juniors, had no chance against Troy, which raced to a 44-11 halftime lead and built that margin to 61 points — 71-10 — before Troy coach Janice Wallace put in her subs with 4:12 remaining in the game.

Troy, first-round losers in 1981 and 1983-84, took advantage of 42 Seymour turnovers to score 42 of its points. Jeannie Conde had 22 points and 18 rebounds for Troy, and Dana Hargrove scored 16.

All 10 players scored for Seymour, which has only one senior, led by Jana Hays with 5.

It was the first appearance in the girls' state tournament for Honey Grove and Seymour.

Division record to 35-24.

Thurl Bailey led Utah with 24 points. Rickey Green added 20 and Darrell Griffith 19 for the Jazz, who dropped their second straight game at the University of Utah Special Events Center and are now 28-32 in the Midwest.

The Jazz trailed most of the game, but with only one starter on the floor, rallied to grab the lead at 102-99 with 4:16 remaining in the game.

But Houston promptly hit four straight baskets and held on for the victory.

Lewis Lloyd aided the Rockets' cause with 24 points, including 10 in the fourth period.

Spurs 106, Pistons 98

PONTIAC, Mich. — Forward Mike Mitchell scored 16 of his 36 points in the first quarter to pace the San Antonio Spurs to a victory over the Detroit Pistons.

JIM MURRAY

Another QB escapes the 'Pennsylvania grimy'

"Has anybody here seen Kelly? K-E-double-L-Y. Kelly from the Emerald Isle." — Refrain from "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" (c) 1909, C.W. Murphy and Will Letters, William J. McKenna.

In common American football lore, it is a given that quarterbacks come from that part of the country that is equal parts bituminous coal, blast furnaces, steel rigs hauling pipe along the turnpike, Arnold Palmer and black smoke — what one writer called "Pennsylvania grimy."

Joe Namath came from here. So did John Unitas. Joe Montana. Dan Marino.

And so did Jim Kelly.

Who?

Jim Kelly, K-E-double-L-Y. He may yet be the best of them.

You know, comics come from the Lower East Side, swamis come from India, lions from Africa — and quarterbacks from where the Allegheny and the Monongahela rivers come together.

You would think the National Football League would have a permanent installation along the banks there, automatically signing contracts with every kid who came along carrying a football. But, it never seems to get the message.

Consider that Dan Marino came out of that coal belt two years ago with an arm like a hose and a release like an Arizona gunfighter's — and was not picked until the 27th round. But, that's nothing. Johnny Unitas was not picked at all. He was running a steam shovel when the Colts found him in 1955.

Jim Kelly was not exactly on a steam shovel when the Houston Gamblers of the USFL found him, but he was close to it. He was the No. 12 draft pick of the NFL. Since that pick belonged to the Buffalo Bills — "I cried," recalls Kelly — a steam shovel looked attractive by comparison. At least, a steam shovel is warm. "I hate to throw the ball in 10-degree weather," Kelly said.

Fortunately for football, Kelly was not relegated to digging holes in the ground. Or playing for Buffalo either. Not quite. The Chicago Blitz of the USFL picked him on the 14th round and then, announcing that they were going to put their franchise on hold for a year, traded him to the Houston Gamblers. Houston signed him. It was like giving Michelangelo a chisel.

What is it about the western Pennsylvania air that makes all-pro passers? Does the ball spiral better in the soot? Can't the defense see? Does the looming presence of the coal mines make a pass rush seem like a comparatively easy way to make a living? All of the above?

Dan Marino, by any yardstick, had a fabulous rookie season. He completed 173 passes in only 9 starts, throwing for 20 touchdowns and 2,210 yards, and threw only six interceptions. Kelly's first year made that look like a struggle. Kelly gained more yards throwing than any quarterback in this country ever had, 5,219. That more than doubled the number of yards any rookie had ever thrown for before.

He threw for 44 touchdowns, more than any rookie had ever thrown for, and more than any quarterback had ever thrown for till Marino's 48 last fall. Kelly had nine 300-yard games, and that was more than any one till Marino hit 13 last fall.

Kelly did all this playing in a sprint-out offense, grandly called run-and-shoot. This is a suicidal attack favored by Mouse Davis, then offensive coordinator of the Gamblers. It was a little bit like trying to shoot buffalo from under the belly of a moving horse, or trying to hit a golf ball under water.

Dutch Van Brocklin, no less, once said that a quarterback should run only out of sheer terror or to get out of a hotel fire.

Quarterbacks, you see, like to plant that rear foot, take a breath, survey their options, read a defense, check with their stockbroker and get good and ready before launching that ball to where disaster might lurk. Kelly had to shoot off the hip in a moving crowd, like a bank robber doing a crossword puzzle while fleeing a heist. Or like a batter having to tap-dance and hit the curve ball at the same time.

Of course, the purists argue that the USFL is off-Broadway. Some think it's just junior high school Gilbert and Sullivan. But gaining 5,219 yards shooting from the hip is marksmanship worthy of Sergeant York.

Look at it this way: No one else in the league found it that easy. Besides, the supporting cast didn't put anybody in mind of the Lombardi Packers or the '58 Baltimore Colts. Kelly might not have found complicated coverages out there but neither did he see Elroy Hirsch running for the ball.

A lot of people were waiting to see what this modern Machine Gun Kelly could do for an encore. They found out opening Sunday (Feb. 24) at the L. A. Coliseum. K-E-double-L-Y completed 35 of his 54 passes for 6 touchdowns and 574 yards.

One of his touchdowns won't make the record book, since it went to the wrong team.

But the five others were vintage western Pennsylvania touchdowns. Kelly got three of them in the last 9 minutes when his team was 20 points down and breathing hard. He got one of them in two plays spanning 53 seconds, and all three in an elapsed time of 2-42.

Those 574 yards were more than any American quarterback had ever thrown for, and part of the reason for it was that his coach, Jack Pardee, gave Kelly the luxury of throwing from the pocket in the second half. All of a sudden Kelly didn't have to feel like the lead guy in a prison bust-out.

Five touchdowns and 574 yards would be a pretty good season for some quarterbacks. But not for guys trying to match up with Pennsylvania legends like Namath, Unitas, Marino and Montana.

Anybody here who hasn't seen this Kelly may be missing history.

Kohl purchases Bucks

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks belong to the citizens of Wisconsin and won't be leaving town, the new owner of the National Basketball Association team says.

"The Bucks are important to this city and state, for all the psychological reasons for which we are aware," said Herbert H. Kohl, who on Friday agreed to purchase the team. "Not only people who go to the games, but men and women who feel strongly about the team because the team is part of this state."

"The Bucks have great importance economically," he added. "Many businesses need the Bucks to sustain themselves. So, for those reasons, the Bucks are an important part of this state, and it's important that they are going to stay here."

The purchase price and other terms of the contract were not disclosed at Friday's news conference, but the cost was estimated to be in the $18 million to $20 million range.

"This team belongs to the people of this state, which I feel I only own in trust for some period of time until it passes on to somebody else in this state," Kohl said. "This team stays right here, and I'm just as happy about it as you are."

Daniel Finnane, a member of the team's board of directors, said about 20 offers were received from outside Milwaukee to buy the Bucks since the team was put up for sale on Feb. 5.

"One of the reasons we had to move fast was because there was a lot of interest," he said.

Club president Jim Fitzgerald, who was not present at the news conference, told WREX-TV of Rockford, Ill., from his Palm Springs, Calif., home: "Well, we took a discount of considerable amount to leave the team in Milwaukee, which we are happy to do."

"Milwaukee's been having its troubles. They don't need to lose one of their teams right now. It would be an awful kick in the face to them."

The purchase is subject to approval of the NBA Board of Governors.

The Bucks indicated approval could be expected as early as the April 16 meeting of the board.

"It was a fair negotiation," Kohl said. "It's not extraordinarily high or low. It's healthy for a franchise in middle America."

Kohl, 50, said Don Nelson would remain as head coach and director of player personnel and that Nelson had signed a two-year contract. He also said there would be no changes in front-office personnel.

Nelson, reached in Denver by Milwaukee's WTMJ-TV, said: "I talked to Herb Kohl this afternoon and I just told him how excited I was and how thrilled I was that the team was going to stay in Milwaukee and he was going to be the new owner."

"I think we're going to have a wonderful relationship."

Kohl believes that a new arena needs to be constructed since the Bucks play in the 11,052-seat Mecca Arena, the smallest facility in the NBA.

"We're going to have to address the question of where the Bucks are going to play," Kohl said. "I don't have any doubt that this (new arena) is going to happen."

Fitzgerald said a new arena was part of the negotiating process with Kohl.

"The whole transaction is premised on the fact that there is going to be a new facility there," he said. "If there isn't, Herb would be totally justified moving the team."

Kohl was involved in an unsuccessful attempt to bring an American Basketball Association team to Milwaukee in 1967. He also tried to get an NBA franchise for the city but withdrew his application before a group headed by two Milwaukee businessmen was awarded a franchise in 1968.

McEnroe, Curren move into semis

HOUSTON (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe quickly corrected his slow-starting serve to defeat Brad Gilbert and second-seeded Kevin Curren ousted fifth-seeded Tim Mayotte Friday night in quarterfinal matches of the $375,000 World Championship Shootout.

McEnroe cruised to a routine 6-3, 6-3 victory but Curren had to struggle before edging Mayotte 7-5, 7-6 in the featured matches of the evening.

Mayotte took the match down to a 5-5 deadlock in the second set tie-breaker before Curren ended it with a pair of passing shots for a 7-5 tie-breaker score.

Gilbert, who has lost all six career matches against McEnroe, jumped on McEnroe's serve and broke the world's No. 1 ranked player in the first game of the match.

McEnroe broke back in the second game and went ahead 5-3 with another break in the eighth game of the opening set. The first set took only 28 minutes and McEnroe wrapped up the match in one hour.

Gilbert lost his serve again in the opening game of the second set with a controversial break point. McEnroe hit a cross court winner to the corner at break point. Gilbert challenged the call unsuccessfully.

Gilbert's game and equipment continued to deteriorate in the sixth game when Gilbert's racket shattered as he tried to return a serve.

Peter Fleming scored a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Lief Shiras and ShaHar Perkiss of Israel defeated Mark Dickson 7-6, 6-0 in other quarterfinal matches.

Fleming took charge in the first set with service breaks in the seventh and ninth games.

Shiras had taken a 3-2 lead in the first set when Fleming started a string of four straight games to clinch the first set.

Fleming broke Shiras in the fourth game of the second set and was in control the rest of the match, although he had to rally from a double break point to hold in the seventh game.

Dickson and Perkiss traded service breaks in the seventh and eighth games of the opening set and then duelled it out in the tie-breaker with Perkiss winning it 7-4.

Perkiss then swept the match, allowing six points in the second set.

UT women increase swim lead

AUSTIN (AP) — Debbie Risen and Kim Rhodenbaugh set conference records as the top-ranked University of Texas women's swim team, winning six of eight events, increased its lead after two days of the Southwest Conference Swim meet.

Texas has racked up 848 points to second place Texas A&M's 419 points. SMU holds down third at 411, followed by Houston with 388, Arkansas 326, TCU 249, Texas Tech 194, Rice 122.

The Longhorns, defending NCAA champion, were led by freshman Tiffany Cohen's two wins. Cohen, who won two gold medals at the summer Olympics, set an SWC meet and SWC record in the 400 individual medley with a time of 4:17.15. Cohen's second win of the evening came in the 200 freestyle, turning in a 1:48.09.

Risen set an SWC meet record in the 100 backstroke in 55.98, as did teammate Rhodenbaugh in the 100 breaststroke, 1:03.21.

The Horns started off the evening with an SWC meet record in the 200 freestyle relay, and capped off the evening with an SWC meet record time in the 400 medley relay.

Odessan posts ace at Mission

From Staff Reports

Odessa golfer Ernie Crawford scored his first-ever hole-in-one Friday, conquering the Par 3, 195-yard eighth hole at Mission Country Club. Crawford used a five-wood against a head wind to score his ace.

Witnessing the shot were Odessans Bobby Woods, Allen Harrison and Dave Cox.

Olajuwon named NBA
Rookie of the Month

BASKETBALL — Akeem Olajuwon of the Houston Rockets, who averaged 22.3 points and 12.5 rebounds during February, was named on Friday the NBA Rookie of the Month. The 7-foot-center, first player taken in last year's draft, thus continued to alternate months with Chicago's Michael Jordan. Jordan was rookie of the Month in November, Olajuwon in December and Jordan in January. Olajuwon, who combines with 7-4 Ralph Sampson to provide Houston with its "Twin Towers," shot .575 from the field and blocked 22 shots as the Rockets ran up an 8-4 record during February.

HOCKEY — Center Wayne Gretzky of the Edmonton Oilers scored 19 of his 26 points while playing on the road in February, and for the fourth consecutive time was named NHL Player of the Month. Gretzky, who scored nine goals and added 17 assists in 12 games in February, edged left wings John Tonelli of the New York Islanders and Michel Goulet of the Quebec Nordiques. Tonelli had six goals and 20 points in 12 games, while Goulet had 11 goals and 29 points in 12 contests. For winning the award, Gretzky will receive a check for $1,000 to donate to the minor hockey team of his choice and a specially designed watch.

The Pittsburgh Penguins have bought the contract of forward-defenseman Wally Weir from the Hartford Whalers. Weir, 30, who was claimed on waivers, is expected to join the Penguins in time for Saturday's home game against the New York Rangers. He will replace Troy Loney at left wing. Loney sprained his ankle Wednesday against the Winnipeg Jets.

Weir had played for Quebec before moving to Hartford in this year's waiver draft. He had two goals and three assists in 34 games for Hartford. Meanwhile, forward Gary Rissling was given a three-game suspension by league officials for his role in a bench-clearing brawl in Wednesday's game.

BOXING — WBA featherweight champion Eusebio Pedroza shot a man who was trying to steal his car, and was slightly injured in the incident Friday, his manager said. The incident occurred at about 5 a.m. after the thief broke into the garage of his home in the posh Pinos neighborhood on the outskirts of the Panama capital, according to Santiago del Rio, Pedroza's manager. Del Rio said Pedroza, armed with a pistol, surprised the thief in the act of trying to steal his car, a late model BMW.

On being discovered, the thief tried to escape, del Rio said. Pedroza then fired a warning shot into the air and shouted at him to stop, and when that failed, he shot the man in the leg, del Rio said. He said Pedroza tore a muscle in his right leg while running after the thief but was not seriously injured, his manager said. The injury shouldn't interfere with Pedroza's next defense, the 20th of his WBA title, in May against Barry McGuigan of Ireland, del Rio said.

Pinklon Thomas, the WBC heavyweight champion, must undergo a medical examination because of reports he has an eye problem. WBC president Jose Sulaiman said Friday. The examination will be held as soon as possible and will be done by Dr. James Marr of Texas. Sulaiman said by telephone from Los Angeles.

Thomas, who won the title in a 12-round decision over Tim Witherspoon last August, is supposed to make a mandatory defense in June against No. 1-ranked Mike Weaver, the former WBA champion.

Strange rallies from eight back to tie Couples

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Curtis Strange made up an eight-shot deficit with a 64 and tied Fred Couples for the lead Friday in the second round of the $500,000 Honda Golf Classic.

Couples, who had a course record 63 in the opening round, added an early 68 and was sitting on a 131, 13-under-par, when Strange went to the first tee on the Eagle Trace Club course.

At that point, Strange was eight shots back.

"On Friday, in the second round, you don't think about Fred Couples or anybody else," Strange said. "You just go out and try to do the best you can. If Fred, or somebody is going to run away with it, well, second is better than third so you've got something to shoot for."

"You just do the best you can," he said.

That attitude, and a new metal wood that enabled him to reach a par-5 green, helped him to a 30 on the back nine that came within a single shot of the course record and gave him a share of the halfway lead.

He would have had the lead alone but for a minor miracle contrived by Couples on the fifth hole, where he made birdie from the water.

"Very lucky there, a fluke," Couples said. Couples, one of the longest hitters on the tour, lashed a 2-iron second shot into the water just short of the island green on the fifth.

"I saw it splash," Couples said. "It must have skipped once or twice, run up on the bank and dribbled back in."

When he got to the ball, however, it was resting on hard sand in about one-half inch of water. "It was in the hazard, but playable," Couples said.

King takes Samaritan lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Betsy King fired a 4-under par 68 Friday to overtake Patty Sheehan and take the second round lead in the $150,000 LPGA Samaritan Turquoise Classic.

King, last year's leading money winner, emerged with a one-stroke edge following a battle with Sheehan, who tops the current money list, over the 6,246-yard, par 72 Arizona Biltmore Adobe Course.

King's two-round total was 7-under par 137. Sheehan was at 138 after faltering to a one-over 73 Friday, following a sizzling 7-under par 65 in Thursday's opening round.

Rosie Jones, a non-winner as a pro, shot a 3-under 69 and was alone in third place at 4-under 140.

Eight players were at 141, including Canadian Lynn Parker — who held second place with a 68 after the opening round — but ballooned to a 73 Friday. Parker was joined by Jane Blalock, Debbie Massey, Cindy Hill, Alice Miller, Nancy Scranton, Carole Charbonnier and Beverley Davis.

Seventy-seven players made the cut at 147 for the final 36 holes.

King carded a steady five birdies and one bogey Friday, a contrast to Thursday when she had two eagles, four birdies, one double-bogey and three bogeys for a 3-under 69.

Mayotte earns tennis award

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Mayotte, who captured the inaugural Lipton International Players Championships in Delray Beach, Fla., has been voted the Nabisco Grand Prix Player of the Month for February.

In a unanimous vote of a three-member international panel of tennis journalists, the Springfield, Mass., was cited for winning his first professional title, which was worth $112,500, his biggest payday ever.

The 24-year-old Mayotte dropped just two sets over the course of the two-week tournament and won all three tiebreaker sets he played.

Exhibit encourages children to question

By CHRIS ANGELO

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In an area of rural Mexico still foreign to battery-run robots and computer games, children transform cactus into their favorite models of toy trucks, complete with moving wheels.

Homemade playthings such as those trucks were part of a recent exhibit in Mexico City at the Museum of Modern Art that ranged from the pre-Hispanic to the space age, from puppets to Pac-Man. It stretched the imagination and evoked a picture of the past, when children played with miniature horse-drawn carriages instead of cars and looked at magic lantern slides instead of television.

The exhibit of 5,000 toys — called "What Are We Playing?" — tried to make children question what they do and attempted to attract families who rarely go to museums.

'The River' just another farm film

A Review

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

"THE RIVER" makes the tornados and other travails of "Places in the Heart" and "Country" seem like a vacation.

At least tornados blow over. But in "The River," the Garveys (Sissy Spacek and Mel Gibson) live in constant fear that the next flood will wash their Tennessee farm into the next county. That's for starters. The corn crop perishes. So does the cow. Sears can't be paid. Land speculator Scott Glenn hovers about, hoping to snap up the Garveys' land and Mrs. Garvey as well.

Things get so bad that the head of the household must take a strike-breaking job at a steel mill. "Sometimes I think we'd do better somewhere else away from the river," Sissy suggests. Her husband replies: "This is our home place; our people are buried here."

It would be easier to appreciate "The River" if it hadn't followed the other two farmland films. Mark Rydell ("On Golden Pond") is always an interesting director, visually and with actors, especially children. His depiction of the flood is masterful, starting with the few ominous drops and ending with the raging onslaught of water.

At least one scene is unforgettable. While trying to repair a tractor, Miss Spacek is pinned underneath, her arm caught in the gears. Without help she would bleed to death. She incites the bull to attack the tractor and free her.

Another key scene comes when a fawn wanders into the steel mill. (It is based on an actual happening, says Rydell.) The allegorical possibilities of the innocent animal in the Dante-esque surroundings are obvious. But there is no payoff, and the scene becomes gratuitous.

"Increasing automation, now supported by electronics, has led to toys that nullify the participation of the child and supplant the pleasure of play," Francisco Reyes Palma, guest director of the museum wrote in the exhibit catalog.

"With urban growth and the refuge of television, lucid activity and pleasure tend to diminish and be replaced by the insatiable voracity for accumulating objects," he said.

He said a bundle of rags or piece of wood could occupy a child for many hours "without the batteries running out."

A 1900 German windup clown of lithographed metal, seated before a sketch pad, drew Queen Victoria or others of that age, his pencil guided by a disc.

There also were German wind-up toys of men sharpening tools, making sausage or working at other occupations, mostly from the early 1900s.

The oldest toy in the exhibit was a clay animal from the Veracruz region on the Gulf of Mexico, dating from 100 to 850 A.D. The dog-like figure has detailed molded and incised features and wheels for feet, much like wooden horses and other animals made today.

While the exhibit ran through Buck Rogers guns, space ships, a robot that lights up, makes noise and moves, a variety of dolls, guns, fire trucks, a 1982 made-in-Mexico E.T. and electronic baseball, some of the most intriguing were the simple, often homemade toys.

There was an old-style Mickey Mouse driving a brightly painted, primitive cart drawn by a jointed horse linked to the front wheels who pulled it. There also was a series of detailed miniature funeral processions on crank-driven belts or scissorhinged wooden bases.

The cactus trucks were made by children in the rural areas of San Miguel de Allende, 170 miles northwest of Mexico City.

"The exhibit didn't try to annul the validity of contemporary games and toys," said Margarita Gonzalez, a former assistant director of the museum who scouted private collections for pieces and was one of the organizers of the exhibit. But she said it did strive "at least to create the possibility of asking, 'Why are we playing with this?'"

Water tower painters receive tall orders

GRUENE, Texas (AP) — Fire hydrants aren't high enough to suit Frank Gilland, painter extraordinaire.

He'd rather shimmy up a 150-foot water tower, dangle from a railing and do his thing.

"I like the thrill of it," he said after splashing three coats of silver paint on the water tower in Gruene, a community inside New Braunfels.

"I like the height of it. There's not too many people doing it," he said.

Gilland, 39, runs Frank's Painting Service based in Calhoun, Ky. In the 18 years he has been in business, he estimates he and his employees have painted hundreds of water tanks in at least a dozen states.

"I love it," he said. "If I didn't like it I wouldn't be doing it. It's a challenge to me — every one of them."

Gilland started out as a house painter, his father teaching him the trade.

He painted schools, churches, homes and businesses for years before gradually working up to water towers, which provide steady work.

State health departments in most areas require regular inspections and painting for water towers.

"The majority of water tanks in cities are insured. And those insurance companies want them painted," Gilland said.

"The process of sandblasting, priming and painting towers can take anywhere from 10 days to seven weeks, depending on the size and the number of coats required."

Most tanks, Gilland said, have to be painted inside and out. That makes for some stifling, sweaty work inside water towers. Gilland also is slowed down when he has to roll-paint towers in populated areas, where faster spray painting might ruin cars and buildings nearby.

Gilland said he averages $30,000 per job, and he prefers working for smaller communities rather than big cities.

Have you ever noticed the effects of a powerful magnet? As metal objects are added, the size of the magnet increases. Since the magnet's power is funneled through the objects, they stick together and attract other objects to the magnet. Thus each object has a purpose.

Jesus gives purpose in life to all who will attach themselves to him. Discover with us how this can happen in your life.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Retirement seminar planned by church

The Rev. Umbau Wolf will present a "Retirement Preparation and Planning Seminar" at Midland Lutheran Church, 2711 W. Michigan, Friday through March 10.

The three-day seminar, sponsored by the church's Life Enrichment Committee, will assist couples and singles to explore the challenges of retirement, to learn how to use leisure time and to live on a budget following retirement.

A nominal fee will be charged to cover seminar expenses. For more information call the Rev. Marv Koenig or the Rev. Charles Meyer, 694-1373. The seminar is open to the public.

Weekend planned for marriage program

The Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa here will be the site for a spring marriage enrichment weekend March 15-16. The weekend is being offered by the Family Ministry of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ at Midland. It will be conducted by Dr. Gary Grady, minister to families at the Golf Course Road church.

Grady has graduate degrees in counseling from Central State University in Oklahoma and Trinity Seminary in Indiana. He has extensive experience working with couples and families in counseling and enrichment settings, having spoken in 11 states.

The marriage enrichment weekend is limited to 25 married couples in their 20s, 30s and 40s and will take place from 6 p.m. Friday evening to noon Saturday. Cost is $55 per couple.

Couples interested in participating in the weekend, which will focus on marital communication, should contact Grady at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ, 694-8836, by March 10.

Council elects Orseth

Jim Orseth recently was elected president of the Midland Lutheran Church Council.

An independent oil consultant, Orseth and his wife, Pat, have two daughters, Tamara and Heather.

Other church members elected to the 1985 council positions include Craig Knoeller, vice president; Bonnie Hanssen, secretary; Mike McBrayer, treasurer. Members elected to a three-year term are Wally Roach, Mark Rose, Terry Leflar, Bernard Lankford and Lyle Eberly.

Armond Paulson, executive director of the Lutheran Association of Southwestern Camping at Austin, presented a weekend goal-setting retreat for the outgoing and incoming council members. As a result of the retreat the 1985 members adopted the following mission statement: To serve the people of the congregation and the community through personal involvement, through gifts and to extend our mission throughout the world.

Methodists urge action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Methodist social action agency has urged congregations across the country to speak out "against the punitive actions" by the government against church workers in the sanctuary movement.

Such protests "can send a powerful message to our national leaders and to the leaders of Latin American countries" that "not all U.S. citizens support the present punitive violations of human rights," the statement said.

Sixteen Protestant and Roman Catholic church workers have been indicted on charges of smuggling Central American refugees to sanctuary in U.S. churches.

Panel to study language

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vatican has decided to form an international commission to consider "inclusive language" in texts for Roman Catholic worship, a spokesman for the U.S. bishops says.

Inclusive language avoids use of masculine nouns or pronouns in referring to people including women.

The issue has been a persistent concern of American bishops, who have proposed several changes for inclusive language in prayers of the Mass, but only one such request — in 1980 — received the necessary Vatican approval.

It provided for dropping the word "men" from a phrase, "for all men," making it simply "for all."

Dayspring, missionary meetings planned

St. Paul United Methodist Church is holding a dayspring Sunday through Wednesday and a missionary conference March 8-10.

Wesley Putnam will be leading the first dayspring, which is a time for renewal and spiritual awakening. He is a singer, composer and evangelist. An ordained United Methodist clergyman, he was appointed to Northwest Texas Conference after receiving his bachelor of music degree from Northeast Louisiana University and a master's of divinity from Asbury Theological Seminary in Kentucky.

The dayspring services start at 8:30 a.m. Sunday and include sermon and song also at 9:45 and 11 a.m. with Putnam. He will have a dinner at 5 p.m. with the youth and then a drama presentation is scheduled for 7 p.m.

On Monday at noon, the women will hold a covered dish luncheon and a "Come Alive" sermon will be preached by Putnam at 7 p.m.

"Come Alive" sermons also are planned for 7 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

The missionary conference will feature Stan Dyer, Gene and Marj Wittig, Bob Biddulph and Johnny Ray Watson.

The conference begins Friday with a 6 p.m. covered dish supper with the missionaries followed by a 7 p.m. service.

Events are planned all day Saturday and Sunday, and include a breakfast, fellowships, youth lunch, covered dish supper, evening services, Sunday school and Sunday worship service.

Dyer has been a missionary to Japan since 1955 and his work includes attempts to stir the Japanese church to evangelism, outreach and revival. He holds a doctor of missiology degree from Trinity Evangelical Divinity School.

The Wittigs have been missionaries since 1950 and have been in South America since 1970. For nine years, he has served as vice president of field ministries. His wife is a staff librarian.

Biddulph is serving in Spain, where he has been since 1978. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Asbury College and a master's degree in religion from Asbury Theological Seminary.

Watson, who began his full-time music ministry in 1972, will be leading the song services. He has worked with the Billy Graham team.

Reservation missionaries to speak at conference

Asbury United Methodist Church here is holding a Mission Conference March 9-10 with the Rev. Paul West, coordinator of the Four Corners Native American Ministry on the Navajo Reservation, speaking and showing films.

Rev. Paul West

West and his wife were United Methodist missionaries in Malaysia from 1964-1974. He worked extensively with youth and in evangelism, along with pastoring churches in Klang, Kuala Lumpur and Taiping.

He was born in Indiana, educated at Asbury College and Asbury Seminary in Wilmore, Ky.

He received his master's degree in history and literature of religions from Northwestern University during one of his missionary furloughs.

His wife, Dorcas, is from Nebraska. After graduation from high school, she was selected as an international Christian Youth Exchange.

She is a registered nurse and worked in Chihuahua, Mexico for one year in pediatrics under the Methodist Board of Missions. She now is in charge of the home for battered women and abused children at Shiprock, N.M.

The Wests met during missionary orientation in 1964 at Stony Point, N.Y. They were married on his furlough in 1969 and returned to Malaysia together.

Since 1975, they have been working in a home missionary project — the Four Corners Native American Ministry.

There will be a covered dish supper at 6 p.m. followed by a program and film lead by West.

The Sunday School classes will meet together on March 10 with West leading the service. He will bring the message at the morning worship service.

The public is invited to the church, corner of South Loraine and West Dakota avenues.

Studies series planned

The Rev. James Otterness, pastor of Odessa's Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord, and the Rev. Clark Ford, pastor of Memorial Christian Church, will present four concurrent Sunday studies beginning at 9:30 p.m. Sunday at Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway.

Otterness will be conducting an adult study of the Book of Romans beginning with a session entitled "The Power of Wrath" Sunday. The following Sunday sessions will focus on "The Power of Sin," "The Power of the Law" and "The Power of Death."

Ford will lead a four-week review of "The Basic Beliefs of the Christian Church" also March 3, 10, 17 and 24.

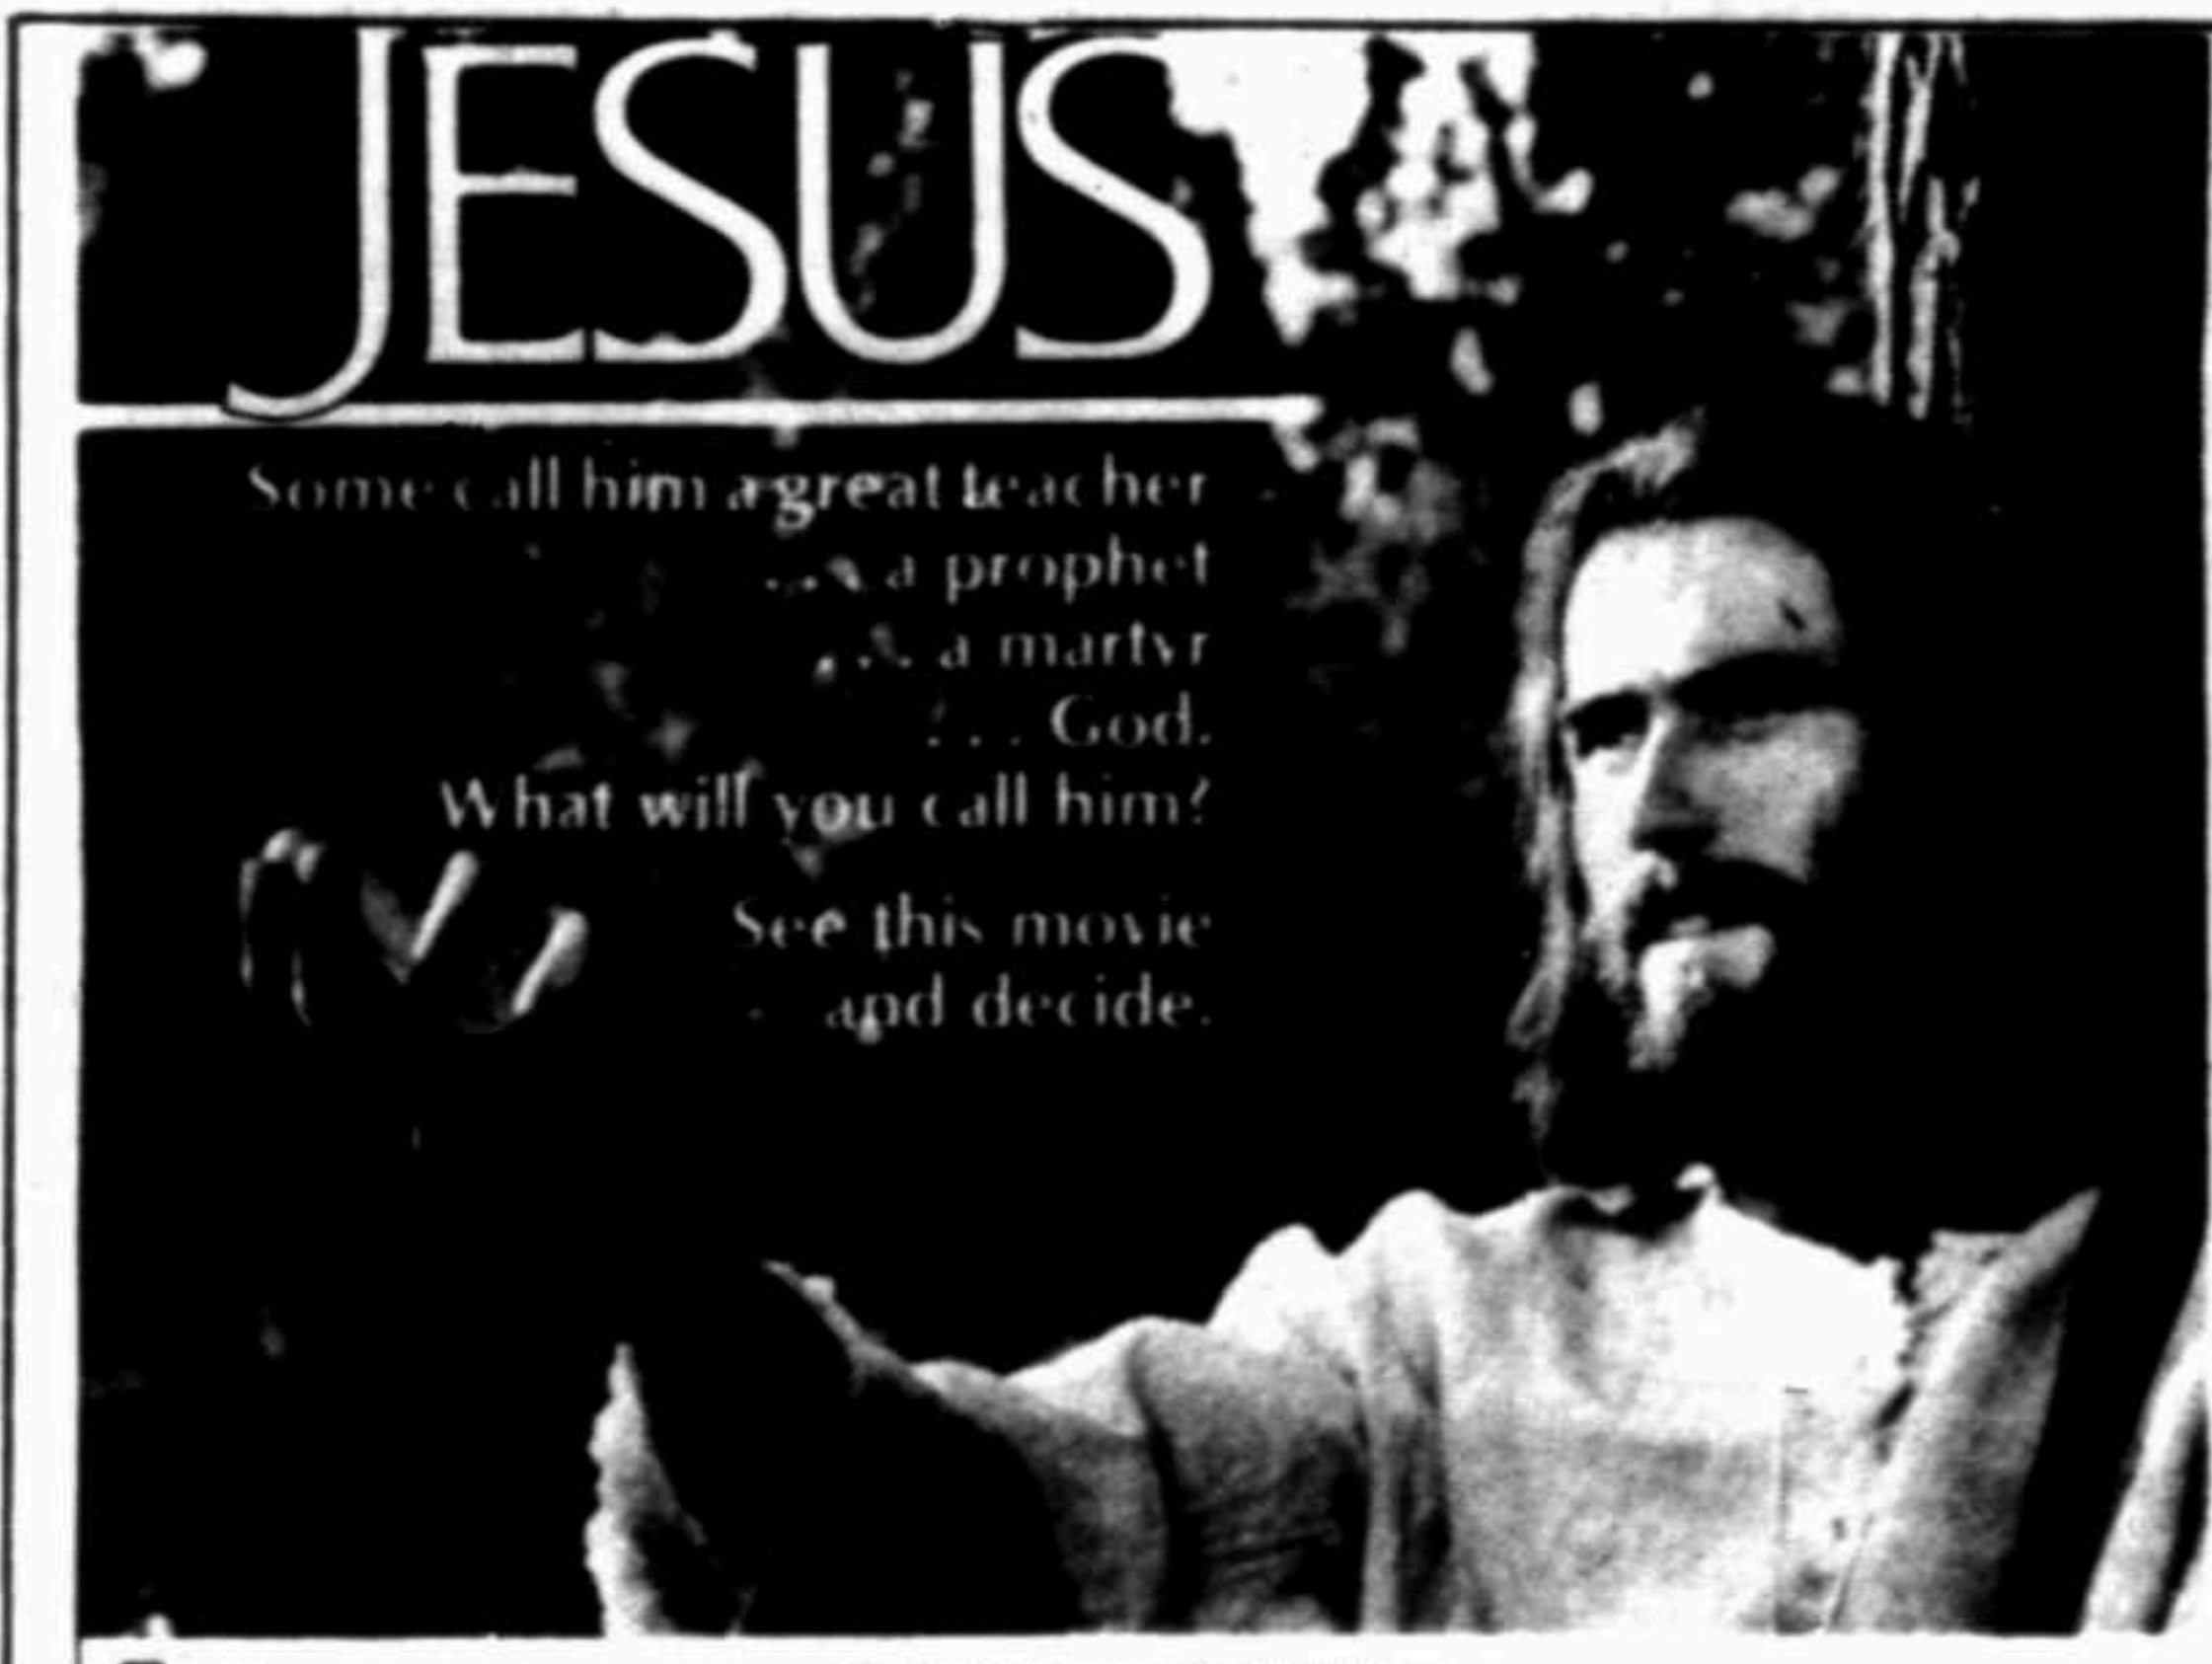

Otterness is a South Dakota native, graduate of South Dakota University and Luther Theological Seminary. He has served as pastor of the Odessa congregation since 1960. Ford is a Sweetwater native, graduate of Texas Christian University and attended seminary at Vanderbilt University.

Old and young mix in residence

The living arrangements break some time-honored rules. In semi-retirement, young students traditionally live only with young students.

But the Neumann Residence has always welcomed older men who were considering the priesthood.

"I consider Neumann a halfway house on my road to the priesthood," said Henry Jordan, 35, a former cast member of the television soap opera "The Doctors."

"The oldest man we've had was 58," said the Rev. Francis J. McAree, Neumann's associate director. Age seemed not to matter.

"Having us all together, the young guys and men, is a great idea," said Matt Fernan, 23, who sat nearby.

"What do you talk about?" he said. "Anything."

Dean Virgil, a 20-year-old native of Lincoln, Neb., nodded his head.

"It's inspiring for us to sit down and hear from men who've had successful careers and been out in the world," he said.

"The adults we meet were supposed to be happy in the business world, but they weren't."

To become a priest, one man gave up a highly successful fuel-oil business. "My mind sometimes drifts back to all of it," he said. "But it's true, you know, there is something more than money. Much more."

Sunday, March 3, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY:

The events of the next few months give marriage new meaning. Find ways to boost mate's self-esteem. Your family is your top priority this year. Look for a solution to a recurring financial problem. A budget could be more helpful than you realize. Encourage loved one to join you in self-improvement activities. Teamwork pays wonderful dividends. A young person learns to be less selfish. The sky is the limit as far as your career is concerned! CELEBRITY BIRTH-DATES: telephone inventor Alexander Graham Bell, Jean Harlow, Army Gen. Matthew Ridgeway, Lee Radziwill, the Cleveland Indians' Neal Heaton, football's Randy Gradishar.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not be embarrassed to say exactly what you mean. A close friend could help you improve a domestic situation. Spending the afternoon with relatives proves more enjoyable than expected.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Postpone getting in touch with a relative. Do not let others talk you into living beyond your means. Remember your budget. Entertaining at home provides a nice change.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Getting together with close friends is delightful. A newcomer gives you romantic ideas. Mate or partner shares a secret. Be a good listener. Do not interrupt someone's stories to tell your own.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your social plans could change at the last minute. A different lifestyle and revised budget could give you a new lease on life. Date a Leo. Contact people who share your goals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make a special effort to accept invitations to group functions. New contacts help both business and romance. Your career could change direction. Mate is supportive. Confide only in close friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Handle all financial transactions with care. Be loving when communicating with older relatives. A brother or sister asks for your advice. Speak from the heart. Your sincerity is convincing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep spending down by staying home. Your loved ones prove very cooperative. Plan creative or artistic projects the whole family will enjoy. Invite good friends over for a potluck supper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A visitor from out of town adds excitement to your day. "We" is more important than "me" when trying to solve a marital dispute. Be willing to compromise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not take either verbal sparring or flirtatious remarks too seriously. A first impression could be wrong. Singles find new romantic partners. Avoid revealing too much too soon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You and a close associate think about collaborating on a creative project. Any alliances forged today will have wonderful, long-term possibilities. Move forward with confidence. Woo a Virgo.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friends could cause unexpected complications today. Be flexible and you can prevent chaos. Distant affairs are sensitive. Avoid rushing in where angels fear to tread. Play a waiting game.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Review your past accomplishments before determining your goals for the future. What are your real strengths? A candid talk with mate or partner sheds new light on an old mystery.

SCRAM-LETS ANSWERS

'The Cosby Show' beat out 'Dallas,' 'Dynasty' in sweeps

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Cosby Show" beat "Dallas" and "Dynasty" to become the top-rated TV series for the February sweeps, proving to Bill Cosby that viewers want more families hugging each other rather than stabbing each other in the back.

"My feeling is that there's enough proof that if you put on shows that people are hinting they would like to see, shows with intelligent, loving families, they would give 'Dynasty' and 'Dallas' a run for the money in their timeslot," said Cosby.

Cosby is the star and creator of NBC's hit comedy, the subject matter of which is practically unique for TV — a respectable, upper middle-class family that includes the original mother and father, and their five children.

"There were no people on the air who were saying 'thank you.' Kids weren't being treated with love," Cosby said. "And you never saw a mother and father kissing or getting romantic unless it was sex time."

According to A.C. Nielsen Co. figures released Friday, "The Cosby Show" finished as the top-rated series with an average 26.6 rating.

CBS won the sweeps with an average rating of 17.7 to NBC's 17.1 and ABC's 16.2.

(A rating point equals 1 percent of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes watching, on average, a given minute of prime time.)

The important sweeps months of February, May and November are when audiences for local stations are measured, one of the main determining factors in establishing their future advertising rates.

Although the networks are charted on a daily basis, they schedule many of their strongest miniseries, movies and specials and limit the number of series repeats during the sweeps to hype the ratings of their affiliated stations.

But that didn't stop a February drop in network TV audiences. Only NBC's performance in February improved over a year ago, while the combined three-network rating was down 3.4 percent, from a 53.0 in February 1984 to last month's 51.2.

"It's a decline," said Dave Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research, "but the most significant amount of the difference is in the big events."

ABC's three-part "Hollywood Wives" was the highest-rated miniseries, averaging a 22.8 rating to the 22.0 for NBC's "Evergreen" and the 21.3 for CBS' "Atlanta Child Murders."

Poltrack said this year's miniseries and Grammy awards broadcast did not do as well as last year's miniseries ("Lace," "Master of the Game" and "Celebrity") and the Grammy show that featured Michael Jackson's sweep.

CBS' regular series averaged an 18.2 rating to NBC's 16.6 and ABC's 16.2. CBS' "Dallas" was No. 2 during the sweeps with a 25.5 rating, followed by a 25.1 for ABC's "Dynasty," and a 24.6 for CBS' "60 Minutes" and NBC's "Family Ties."

The strong performance of "Cosby," "Family Ties" and "Cheers" on Thursday nights helped move NBC from third place during the February sweeps for the first time since 1975.

Last season, no situation comedy finished in the top 10, but this season, "Cosby" is No. 3 and its follow-up program, "Family Ties," is No. 5. For the February sweeps, "Cosby" was No. 1 three out of four weeks.

Malfunctioning computer halts Ben Vereen's new performance

BALTIMORE (AP) — The second performance of the new musical "Grind" starring Ben Vereen came to a grinding halt when a computer that operates the show's elaborate set failed 30 minutes into the first act.

Director Harold Prince said Thursday night was the first time he had ever had to stop a performance of any of the 47 shows he has worked with.

"The machine will not work. It's going to take some time — maybe all night," Prince said in a curtain speech. "It only bears out how I feel about this new mechanized world we live in. I don't think much of it."

The elaborate set, based on a 15,000-pound, three-story steel turntable, had worked properly during dress rehearsals at the Lyric Opera House and during a benefit performance Wednesday. Thursday's audience will be permitted to turn their ticket stubs in for seats to a later performance.

The $5 million musical is set in a 1933 Chicago burlesque house and also stars Lellani Jones, Timothy Nolen and Stubby Kaye.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. will lend his name and fund-raising clout to a liver institute being established at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

The non-profit Sammy Davis Jr. National Liver Institute, incorporated Thursday, will be a transplant center and will promote education and research to fight liver ailments, said officials of the state-run school.

Davis, a singer, dancer and actor, will serve as honorary chairman of the institute's board of trustees.

"It is of tremendous importance that we learn much more about how to cure and prevent liver diseases," Davis said in a statement. "This is a challenge that I am happy to join."

University officials said celebrity fund-raising is expected to play a key role in the supporting the center.

Prospective institute board members on a list provided by Davis include comedian Bill Cosby, singers

Ben Vereen

Steve Lawrence and Lena Horne and musician Lionel Hampton.

LONDON (AP) — Charlton Heston's London stage debut received a mixed critical reception, but the actor who has played parts from Moses to Macbeth was undaunted.

"You don't do it for the critics," the rugged veteran of over 50 films said Thursday at the opening night party of "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial." Heston stars in and directs the Herman Wouk play scheduled for a 13-week run at the Queen's Theater.

The revival of the 1954 Pulitzer Prize-winning courtroom drama casts Heston as Lt. Cmdr. Queeg, the paranoid World War II skipper played memorably on-screen by Humphrey Bogart.

"If the critics like you, you think how marvelous they are. If they don't, you think, 'What do they know?'" Heston said.

"I feel I've acted," he said of his debut on the West End, London's Broadway. "I've had my passport stamped."

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Queen Beatrix and her husband, Prince Claus, will meet Pope John Paul II at the Vatican six weeks before the Roman Catholic prelate's own trip to the Protestant nation.

The royal couple, who, as members of the royal House of Orange, belong to the Dutch Reformed Church, will be received by the pontiff March 28, the last day of their three-day state visit to Italy, according to the Dutch Government Information Service.

It will be their first meeting with the pontiff. John Paul is scheduled to meet the queen and prince again here in The Hague during his five-day Dutch visit, which begins May 11.

The royal couple flies to Rome on March 26 for a visit that will include a state banquet hosted by Italian President Sandro Pertini, a call on Rome's City Council and meetings with members of the Dutch community in Rome.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Singer-songwriter Carole King, long embattled with public officials concerning a road across her ranch, will play a county assessor in her first acting role.

Miss King described the part Thursday after a court hearing in the controversy over the road that crosses her central Idaho property.

"I was acting like a county assessor," she said in characterizing the part she plays in "Murphy's Romance," starring Sally Field and James Garner.

Americans disagree on crime rate

Copley News Service

AJIJIC, Mexico — This is an unusual town. The name sounds like a hiccup. On traffic signs, four of its six letters are dotted.

But what really sets Ajijic (Ah-hee-heek) apart from the rest of Mexico is that hundreds of mostly retired Americans live here.

Thursday Ajijic was abuzz with news about how, because of rising crime, the U.S. State Department was giving serious consideration to warning Americans to keep away from the state of Jalisco, where this town is located.

Americans here disagreed Thursday when they discussed how serious crime is in this little bit of paradise.

You bet, said Norma Lysterly of La Jolla, Calif., who also owns a home in Ajijic. She has been spending several months a year here for the last 25 years.

Lysterly said Ambassador John Gavin "is completely justified" in proposing the travel warning. "Jalisco should be placed off-limits to Americans until we get the full cooperation of the Mexican government to make the place safer," she said.

Burglars hit her home seven times in a seven-month period, Lysterly said as she sat under a lawn umbrella.

However, a few blocks away, Mary Lilly, a retired nurse from Baltimore, put down the Spanish textbook she had been studying, and sharply criticized the proposed U.S. travel advisory.

"I think the problem of crime in Jalisco is overemphasized," said Lilly, who has been living here for three years. Just the other night, Lilly said, she and a woman friend dined out in downtown Guadalajara and found the city perfectly safe.

Her husband, George, a retired publisher of scientific journals, said he felt safer in Jalisco than he did in Baltimore or Washington.

"Of course, I wouldn't stop at night here in the middle of a deserted road," he said. "Then again, I wouldn't do that back in the United States either."

The so-called travel advisory would be in response to the disappearance of a U.S. narcotics agent and six other Americans since December, and other crimes in Jalisco in which Americans have been victims.

According to Jalisco Tourism Department statistics, 684,434 foreigners, the vast majority of them Americans, visited the state whose capital is Guadalajara last year.

American priest runs orphanage in war-torn El Salvador

ZARAGOZA, El Salvador (AP) — The 221 homeless boys and girls at the Rev. Ken Myers' orphanage are accustomed to violent death. But they still become uneasy at the sight of a gun.

"The kids are frightened of anyone who has a gun," says Myers, a 43-year-old Roman Catholic priest from Cleveland who came to El Salvador as a missionary in 1974, five years before civil war erupted.

"Even when the U.S. Embassy people come, vans arrive beforehand with guys carrying guns. The kids always come up and ask me if they're friends of mine. They want to know that it's OK they're here."

Most of the children are from war-torn rural areas. In a dirty war involving soldiers, leftist guerrillas and clandestine death squads, some of the children have seen their mothers or fathers murdered, and others have watched as parents were dragged from their homes, never to be seen again.

"They killed my mother. Fifteen men, I saw them do it," says 7-year-old Quique, his large brown eyes growing wet. "A nun from the school brought me here."

In August 1980, with tens of thousands of people swelling refugee camps, Myers brought 10 war-orphaned children to his parish in this hill town. He put them up at a church annex he had used for adult education classes until the streets became too dangerous for people to attend night classes.

Myers thought his role as a surrogate parent would be brief, but soon the building was overflowing, and he began seeking money to open an orphanage on the edge of town. Two years ago he moved his brood into the new facilities and has been expanding ever since.

The orphanage consists of school buildings, the best health clinic for miles around and 15 concrete-block homes. The buildings dot lush green hills outside Zaragoza, a small town of white-washed adobe houses 12 miles south of San Salvador, the capital.

The money for construction came from three $60,000 grants obtained by Myers in the United States and West Germany.

"When it comes to getting money for those kids, the guy is a real mover," an American living in San Salvador says in admiration.

With a staff of 30, the orphanage's school goes through the 10th grade and provides classes for 900 students, including children from the town of Zaragoza. It also has workshops in carpentry, welding and tailoring.

Myers believes it is important that the orphans help out at the "Children's Village," as the shelter is called, to give themselves a sense of pride.

He opposes people sponsoring individual children and says he does not want the kids to feel "they have to kneel down" before donors to show their gratitude.

The children range in age from 1 to 16. Starting as young as 6 years old, they perform chores for three to four hours a day in addition to attending classes for a half-day. The girls do housework, the smaller boys milk cows and take care of chickens, and the older boys tend to the orphanage's 100 acres of corn and beans.

Myers wants the children to grow up to be self-reliant.

"We try to give them what they can take with them in case we had to close down and everybody had to be dispersed," he says. "There are not many material things to be divided. But if we can give them a good education and certain attitudes, they can take that with them."

Although Myers runs a tight ship, the Children's Village is also a lively place, with little boys kicking balls and little girls giggling at little girl secrets.

Wherever the gray-haired priest goes, two or three children usually tag along. With his quiet, unruffled manner, he seems to provide the sense of security the children need. When he is away from the orphanage, they await his return anxiously.

Britain, Ireland pledge to get tougher on IRA

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Britain and Ireland pledged a tougher war on the IRA, whose mortar attack on a Newry police compound killed nine people and wounded 37. Militant Protestants vowed Friday to "repay this bloody debt in kind...an eye for an eye."

Northern Ireland Secretary Douglas Hurd visited the devastated scene in a bulletproof car Friday and said Britain is determined to "defeat the terrorists" who are trying to drive Britain out of the province.

Ireland's prime minister, Garret FitzGerald, promised in Dublin to spare no effort "to apprehend and put away those responsible for this atrocity if they cross the border in the (Irish) Republic." Newry is a border town, and the presumption is that they did so after the attack Thursday night. The IRA is outlawed on both sides of the border.

Margaret Thatcher, the British prime minister, said in London that she was "immensely grateful" for the Irish pledge.

A leader of Northern Ireland's Protestant extremists said, "We will repay this blood debt in kind. We're talking about an eye for an eye." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Irish Republican Army guerrillas fired nine mortar shells Thursday evening at the police station in this predominantly Roman Catholic town near the border with the Republic about 35 miles south of Belfast.

Four or five shells carrying 40-pound warheads, fired from the bed of a hijacked truck 200 yards away, crashed through the roof of the wooden canteen building about 50 police men and women were having their evening meal, Deputy Police Chief Michael McAtamney said.

The explosions demolished the building, and the dead and wounded were mutilated by jagged, flying shards of glass and wood.

One round exploded near houses around the police base, causing no damage, and the others either blew up in flight or failed to detonate, police said.

Nine officers were killed — seven men and two women — the highest toll ever in a single attack on the province's predominantly Protestant Royal Ulster Constabulary. Twenty-five civilians and 12 police officers were taken to a hospital, and all but one were released after treatment.

A few hours later, guerrillas killed a soldier of the Ulster Defense Regiment, a mostly Protestant British army unit recruited in Northern Ireland, in a booby-trap bombing at Pomeroy, 40 miles north of Newry. Two soldiers were wounded.

The IRA claimed responsibility for both attacks. "This is a major and well-planned operation, indicating our ability to strike where and when we decide," the guerrillas said in a statement issued to news organizations Friday.

"The war goes on. We realize that Britain's rule in Ireland is based not on consensus but on brute force, and we know that only armed struggle will break the political will of the British government to remain in Northern Ireland."

The Ulster Defense Association, a clandestine Protestant group that claims 10,000 members, predicted a violent backlash by pro-British extremists. It issued a statement saying IRA guerrillas "must be sought out and destroyed in their lair."

A spokesman said the outlawed UDA, reputed to have killed scores of Catholics at random in the 1970s, was "under pressure to revert back to the old ways." The spokesman would not let his name be used.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, a hardline Protestant politician, demanded an all-out offensive by security forces and restoration of the death penalty for "anyone who takes up the gun or the bomb."

Police spokesman Dave Hanna said officers raided Irish nationalist strongholds Friday and arrested "a number" of activists for questioning. He said the arrests stemmed from Thursday night's attacks, but would not elaborate.

The attacks followed a series of setbacks for the guerrillas, including the seizure in Ireland of a reputed IRA bank account containing 1.7 million Irish pounds ($1.64 million). Security forces have killed eight IRA men in recent weeks.

British army intelligence sources said the IRA was thought to be short of weapons, but would "go to great lengths to demonstrate...that they are still a potent force."

Police said the shells at Newry were fired from a makeshift weapon consisting of nine mortar tubes welded together and placed in a frame.

In the past, IRA mortar attacks have been notoriously inaccurate, with shells often hitting nearby houses.

There have been 221 IRA mortar or rocket attacks on police stations or army barracks. One at Newry in 1980 wounded 24 civilians and two officers. Thursday's killings raised the known death toll to 2,429 in the sectarian and political violence that began in August 1969.

Iranian jets attack Greek tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian warplanes attacked a Greek tanker Friday in the Persian Gulf as it headed for Kuwait to load oil, and one crewman was reported to have been "seriously wounded."

The shipping intelligence unit of the London-based Lloyds insurance firm said the 18,500-ton Athenian Xenophon was hit by four rockets that "destroyed the (crew's) accommodations on the portside."

A spokesman for the Pireaus-based Mino Kyriakou Co., the tanker's owner, said the crew continued the resulting fire.

The spokesman, who spoke with the condition he not be identified by name, said the crew included the Greek captain and chief engineer and 24 Polish seamen. He said the chief mate had received "internal injuries caused by shrapnel."

"The vessel was at first instructed to go to Doha (capital of Qatar) to land the injured man, but bad weather made it difficult and a helicopter will fly out instead to lift off the crew member," he said without elaboration.

The spokesman said he could not confirm reports that a second crewman was wounded.

Gulf shipping sources earlier said a second crewman was slightly wounded in the attack that "severely damaged the bridge of the ship and knocked down its radio room."

The company spokesman said the tanker, which flies a Cypriot flag, would head for Dubai under its own power for repairs. It had been sailing for the Kuwaiti port of Mina al-Ahmad.

The attack, about 70 miles northeast of Qatar and near Iran's Lavan Island, was in the same general area where Iranian airplanes have raided four other ships this year.

According to the shipping sources, the warplanes "were able to select their target properly this time."

On Wednesday, Iranian warplanes apparently accidentally attacked the 123,648-ton tanker Capt. John G.P. Livanos, which was heading for Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal. The ship, owned by the Pireaus-based Ceres Hellenic Enterprises Ltd., was damaged only slightly and was continuing on its way to Kharg Island on Friday, the sources said.

The raids are part of the 53-month-old Iraq-Iran war, with Iraq reporting 34 attacks on ships calling on Iranian ports this year. Gulf shipping circles have confirmed eight Iraqi attacks.

Meanwhile, Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of Iran's Parliament, said Friday his nation was observing a temporary cease-fire "to give Iran's enemies a chance to accept our demands," Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said in a report monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Rafsanjani said reports that Iran had reached a dead end in the war were "lies."

"If Iran's enemies try to exploit this chance for their own benefit, then we will do what we must do," he was quoted as saying. He did not elaborate, but Iran has threatened since last summer to launch a major offensive against Iraq. In other developments:

Amnesty International released a survey in Geneva, Switzerland, saying Iraq executed at least 580 prisoners last year, raising to 6,027 the number executed since Iran's Islamic revolution in 1979.

The agency said Friday it believes the actual figures are "considerably higher" because former prisoners and prisoners' relatives have reported "large numbers" of secret executions. It also cited fresh reports of torture, "judicially imposed floggings and amputations" and "arbitrary" trials by Iranian authorities.

Rafsanjani criticized a report last month by United Nations investigators who said both Iran and Iraq were mistreating prisoners of war. "The main issue is that they are trying to create political pressure on us so that we compromise in the war," the Iranian news agency quoted him as saying at a public prayer meeting in Tehran.

WAIT UNTIL YOU SEE THE SOFTWARE.

Before you is a shape formed with the aid of computers. Under the hood, a computer-monitored engine. At each wheel, computer-selected springs. Open the doors of the 1985 Buick Century and you will find an impressive amount of software as well: a traditionally soft, rich, comforting interior with room for as many as six. At Buick, there are some things that will always stay the same. See for yourself today.
